Consultants Talk School Merger Study

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners and representatives of the county and Greenville city schools heard two consultants Monday outline their proposals for a study on the feasibility of merging the school systems. But no action was taken on hiring a consultant until a recommendation is made by the two school boards.

For several years, commissioners have urged the two school boards to work toward consolidation. In November, members of the county board of education recommended that a feasibility study be conducted by an independent agency, and the city school board endorsed the proposal. County commissioners agreed to pay for the study.

The first of the proposals reviewed Monday was from the Research Triangle Institute's Center for Educational Research and Evaluation. RTI is affiliated with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. State University and Duke University.

Dr. John N. Pyecha said RTI would examine the implications of merger in three major areas — school facilities (including existing conditions and upgrade costs), pupil assignment (transportation and attendance areas), and educational and administrative services (including such things as curricula, salaries, athletics).

"Given the importance of this issue ... and the need to digest the data thoroughly for interpretation," Pyecha said, the study would take six months. "Irrespective of cost ... it just takes more digestive time" and a "good solid data base" to conduct a study of the type local officials want, he said. "I wouldn't put my reputation on the line" in an effort to do it in less time he emphasized.

Dr. Robert Ray, another RTI spokesman, said the data needed for the study will include the geographic location, age, race and sex of all students in the two school systems. He said that information would be collected by teachers and fed into a computer, and will be available to contribute to school planning efforts in the future as well as for the present study.

With the use of computers, Ray said, the information can be used for such things as assigning pupils to schools, to "maximize the use of facilities," predict travel time to and from school and predict future costs.

Pyecha said the data will also be used to "answer 'what if' questions ... what would merger do ... the kind of interaction needed," on which to base decisions.

"We could definitely make recommendations, list the pros and cons. We want to prepare a report that has the greatest utility for the board," Pyecha emphasized.

Cost of the RTI proposal, according to Pyecha, would be $46,887. He added that "we will leave in place a process for getting student data" that can be used for future planning purposes.

The second proposal was outlined by Dr. Linton Deck of The Management Development Group, Inc. of Washington, D.C.

Deck said MDG could produce a study in five months, at a cost of $39,300.

He said a team of seven experts who are "active practitioners" in the field of education would be assigned to look at such areas as instructional, support and financial services, school attendance lines, requirements of the Office of Civil Rights, and "devise a short-term plan for merger" as well as "a long range plan" for the best utilization of school facilities.

Deck said the study would also attempt to answer questions about "how to accommodate differences and changes" if consolidation is accomplished, and offer a "very specific set of options ... what is best for the community."

Responding to a question, Deck said data to be collected by MDG would include the location of each student in the two school systems, but said he could not say whether the information would be computerized.

Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of the city school system, said the data produced by the study "will be extremely helpful in the future. We really need it right now."

He characterized the cost as "money well spent," and said it "will help the schools for a long time to come" whether the school systems consolidate or not.

Blinson also said "the time schedule is reasonable."

"It will save us money," county Superintendent Eddie West said of the data collection phase of the study. (Commissioners have already allocated funds to purchase optical scanning equipment for the county's data processing center to be used in a program to collect and process data similar to that proposed by RTI.)

Prices Barely Climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a minuscule 0.1 percent in November, the smallest gain since March, the government said today. For the year, inflation is running at a modest annual rate of 4.5 percent.

The new report, which attributed much of last month's moderation to tumbling mortgage interest rates, bolstered economists' predictions that, for all of 1982, inflation could be at its lowest in a decade.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "It's clear we have brought about a dramatic decline in the underlying rate of inflation in the two years since the president has been in office."

In a separate, somber assessment made public today, Commerce Department economists said their preliminary indications are that the economy, after six months of growth, is declining in the last three months of the year.

Sources who requested anonymity said the department's "flash" estimate of gross national product showed economic activity is falling at an annual rate of 2.2 percent in the October-December quarter.

As for consumer prices, today's Labor Department report said fuel oil and natural gas prices jumped sharply last month while food costs rose slightly, apparel prices fell and medical care costs posted fresh, substantial gains.

The report said the biggest contributor to the tiny overall increase in its Consumer Price Index was the 0.2 percent decline in housing costs.

Mortgage interest rates fell 2.5 percent, the most since August 1980, and the prices of homes themselves rose a small 0.2 percent.

Home prices had surged 1.1 percent in October and mortgage rates tumbled 2.3 percent. Overall, housing costs in October rose 0.4 percent.

Economists attribute the improved inflation picture to the poor economy, oil surplus and plentiful harvests.

If the 4.5 percent 11-month rate holds through December, the full-year gain would be the lowest since the 3.4 percent of 1971 and 1972.

Overall, last month's 0.1 percent seasonally adjusted increase was the economy's best monthly showing since the 0.3 percent decline in March.

Andropov Offers Soviet Arms Cutback Proposal

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — In what appears to be a major new arms proposal, Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov today offered to slash Soviet medium-range missiles deployed in Europe and to renounce the first use of conventional as well as nuclear forces.

In a major Kremlin address marking the 60th anniversary of the Soviet Union, Andropov, 68, said Moscow was willing to cut back medium-range weapons to the number possessed by France and Britain.

He also promised that if Britain and France were to reduce their arsenals "the number of Soviet ones would be additionally reduced by as many."

In Paris, French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson rejected Andropov's proposal as "a way of steering the conversation away from the real subject." Commenting in a television interview, Cheysson said the French nuclear force was independent of NATO and that "if we reduce this nuclear arsenal it will no longer have dissuasive power."

Andropov reissued Moscow's offer to cut strategic, long-range missiles by 25 percent if the United States agrees to cut its strategic arsenal by an equal amount.

The new Soviet leader, who succeeded Leonid I. Brezhnev in November, said "We call on the other side to accept these clear and fair terms, to take this opportunity while it still exists."

"In short," he said, "the ball is now in the court of the U.S.A."

In June, the Soviets unilaterally renounced the first use of nuclear weapons and called upon the United States to follow suit. Washington argued that the Soviet advantage in conventional weapons and troop strength would not allow the West to make a similar promise.

Seeking to blunt that argument, Andropov today offered to renounce the first use of conventional force — an offer he tied to a parallel U.S. commitment. "We are prepared to reach an agreement pledging both sides to renounce first use of both nuclear and conventional armaments," he said.

In his new offer to reduce medium-range weapons, he gave no specific figure but Soviet military analysts claim Britain has 64 ballistic missiles and France has 98.

Andropov apparently focused on the British and French nuclear medium-range missiles because the United States and its NATO allies do not plan to deploy medium-range missiles in Europe until the end of 1983.

Western military experts say the Soviet Union has deployed more than 300 SS-20 medium-range missiles targeted on Western Europe and has hundreds of older SS-4s and SS-5s also capable of hitting Western Europe.

"We are prepared, among other things, to agree that the Soviet Union should retain in Europe only as many missiles as are kept there by Britain and France and not a single one more," Andropov said.

"This means that the Soviet Union would reduce hundreds of missiles including tens of the latest missiles, known in the West as the SS-20," he said.

Western military analysts claim the Soviet Union now has about 1,500 medium-range missiles deployed on land and submarines with a range of up to 3,000 miles.

As for long-range missiles capable of hitting the United States, Andropov said "we are prepared to reduce our strategic arms by more than 25 percent. U.S. arms, too, must be reduced accordingly..."

"We also propose that the number of nuclear warheads should be substantially lowered and that improvement of nuclear weapons should be maximally restricted."

Western experts say the Soviet Union has 1,398 strategic weapons and that the United States has 1,054.

The West also says the Soviet Union has 7,000 nuclear warheads that can be delivered on strategic, long-range missiles and bombers, while the NATO countries, excluding Britain and France, have about 9,000.

Last week the Reagan administration said Soviet negotiators had indicated a month ago that the Kremlin might be willing to cut its European nuclear missile arsenal by more than half provided the United States abandoned its plan to deploy 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe starting late next year.

Arrest Is Made In Bank Robbery

GRIFTON — Authorities early today arrested a 26-year-old Route 3, Grifton, man and charged him with the Dec. 15 armed robbery at First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. here.

Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said William Alexander Wallace was arrested about 2 a.m. and charged in connection with the incident. He said Wallace was placed in Pitt County jail under $100,000 bond.

Tyson said investigation of the 4:30 p.m. robbery was continuing.

In the incident, according to Tyson, a lone gunman walked into the bank, ordered cash from three teller stations placed in a bag, and left the bank with an "undetermined amount of money." The sheriff said the money has not been recovered.

No one was hurt in the incident, he reported.

Six Are Sentenced In Local Embezzling Case

Five of six defendants charged with embezzlement of funds totaling $117,700 from the Pepsi Cola Co. in Greenville have been given suspended sentences by Superior Court Judge David Reid.

Charles Hathaway, formerly a supervisor of truck drivers at the plant, received the heaviest and only active sentence of the six. On an embezzlement charge, he was sentenced to three years, and was handed a one-year sentence on a conspiracy charge. The sentences are to run concurrently.

Hathaway was also directed to pay the Pepsi firm $23,580.

Reid, who entered the sentences Friday under a plea-bargaining arrangement, heard the cases without jury. All defendants were ordered to make restitution of the embezzled funds.

Sentences (all suspended), probation terms and amounts each of the five truck drivers were ordered to reimburse to the Pepsi firm are:

•Jimmy Allen — three years with five years probation, $26,000.

•Seber Cobb — three years with three years probation, $16,640.

•David Coburn — three years with three years probation, $19,760.

•Sammy Glisson — three years with five years probation, $16,640.

•Jim Withers — three years with three years probation, $15,080.

White House Asserts Pres. Reagan To Sign Catch-All Money Bill

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will sign a compromise catch-all money bill, replenishing the pockets of government agencies that technically went broke three days ago, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said today.

"The levels are consistent with what we sought," the White House spokesman said. He said the legislation reached the White House at 11:55 p.m. EST Monday and would be signed sometime today.

The special lame-duck congressional session, rushing toward adjournment, passed the spending measure Monday night with its $9.138 billion Christmas pay raise for House members and none of the public service jobs for the nation's unemployed that both the House and Senate had approved earlier.

Speakes sought to portray the special session as a success, because Reagan, he said, called it in to deal with appropriations measures and that is what the Congress did, although defense spending was not quite as high as the amount Reagan sought and a major immigration bill was stalled.

The president also lost the $988 million he wanted to produce the big new MX nuclear missile.

Early today, the Senate approved a nickel-a-gallon hike in the federal gasoline tax that Reagan had wanted. The measure, which must go back to the House for additional action, is designed to pay for highway and bridge repairs and create jobs.

One administration official, who asked to remain anonymous, said Reagan's early strategy was to hold off signing the spending bill when it came to his desk Monday night to keep pressure on senators to act on the gas tax.

Speakes said today Reagan would continue pushing today for passage of his Caribbean Basin Initiative to aid the nations of the Caribbean region.

Meanwhile, the Office of Management and Budget said late Monday night that some 350,000 federal employees in Washington and around the country should report to work today.

Reagan's threatened veto of the spending bill forced House-Senate negotiators to strip from the final bill both a $5.4 billion House-passed jobs bill and a similar but smaller $1.2 billion jobs package passed by the Senate.

Although Congress cut procurement money for the MX, administration sources said language in the emergency spending bill, which contains $2.4 billion in research and development funds for the nuclear weapon, would permit the Defense Department to build five research missiles that later could be deployed after Congress approves a basing plan.

Both houses of Congress have shown considerable concern about Reagan's proposal to deploy the missile in a single "dense pack" formation of 100 reinforced concrete silos outside Cheyenne, Wyo.

The spending bill cleared the House without the usual roll call vote because of widespread sensitivity about the 15 percent pay raise it contained for House members.

HOSPICE TRIBUTE

I want everyone to know how much I appreciate what the East Carolina Hospice Program did to help my boy during the time of his long sickness and death. They were always there with a helping hand and I appreciate it with all of my heart. I owe special thanks to Beverly Burnette, the director, and Mrs. Dennis. You could always see a smile on Joe's face after they had been. It was Joe who received the guitar appealed for by Hospice through Hotline. He loved it. I hope I can help someone somehow the way the Hospice people helped my son, and through him, helped me. Mrs. Erma Lassiter, Bethel.

Couple Says Vows Recently

Amanda Gray Whichard of Wilson and David Stewart Precythe were united in marriage Dec. 11 in Wesley Memorial Chapel of the First United Methodist Church. The Rev. Linwood Blackburn officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.B. Whichard of Robersonville. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Precythe of Faison are the bridegroom's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a three-piece ensemble of moire and chiffon. The chiffon blouse featured a lace ruffle and jabot at the neckline and lace ruffles at the cuffs. Juliet sleeves and peplum waist enhanced the moire jacket and the dirndl skirt flowed to the floor. She carried a bouquet of roses, carnations, fuji mums and baby's breath in her hair.

Mrs. Randy Harrison of Wilson was honor attendant and the father of the bridegroom was best man.

Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Charles Daventport, organist.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Randy Harrison entertained at a reception at their home.

Mrs. David Stewart Precythe

The couple will live in Faison.

Mr. and Mrs. Precythe are graduates of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. She taught in Nash County and he is a produce broker.

Duplicate Winners

Mrs. Barry Powers and Dave Proctor were first place North-South winners in the Saturday afternoon game played at Planters Bank. Their game percentage was .562. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Patterson with Chris Langley and Ed Yauck, tied for second.

East-West: Mrs. Effie Williams and Mrs. Harold Forbes placed first with .574 percent. Mrs. Beulah Eagles and Mrs. Robert Barnhill, second; Mary Duncan and Tom Hunt, third.

Unit tournament winners Wednesday afternoon were: Mrs. Sol Shechter and Mrs. Max Chused, first with .592 percent; Mrs. Robert Barnhill and B.A. Poindexter, second; tied for third were Mrs. Barry Powers and Lee Hastings with Flora Toler and Wesley Webb; tied for fifth were Mrs. Eli Bloom and Mrs. M.H. Bynum with Mrs. Tom Lunney and Ms. Estelle Eastwood.

Wednesday morning winners were: Forest Gray, first with .634 percent; Mrs. Sidney Skinner and Mrs. Stuart Page, second; Mrs. J.N. LeConte and Bernice Tayloe, third.

The Wednesday morning game is cancelled until Jan. 5.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When parents reach a certain age they automatically become people who "have everything."

Without even knowing how, when, or why they become a member of that elite club that is "impossible to buy for" because they have everything they will ever need to live out their lives in total comfort.

I can see how youngsters would think that. After all, to them "having everything" is to drive a car that is paid for, charge accounts that don't have to revolve, your own travel agent, a refrigerator stocked with food, and eating all the white albacore tuna you want.

Let me tell you what some of them don't have.

They don't have children who would dream of calling without reversing the charges.

They don't have a child who would spend an entire evening with them finding out what their life is all about.

They don't have a family who would arrange for all of them to go to church together.

They don't have kids to get the dinner, do the dishes, and set them down to watch home movies when the roots were darker and steps were quicker.

They don't have a written note, a poem, a picture, or anything made by young hands that says, "I made this especially for you."

Children sell themselves short. They think they have nothing of value to give. They are wrong.

"How about lunch? I'm buying" is equal to one Rolls-Royce with Ultrasuede fenders.

"I'm not going anywhere tonight. How about a game of Scrabble?" is worth a ruby pendant surrounded by a cluster of diamonds.

"I can only stay 12 hours, but I wanted to spend Christmas with you and Dad" is worth 200 acres of the Grand Canyon.

"Let's get a live tree and trim it together" is worth a private car on the Orient Express.

"I love you" doesn't even have a price. It's invaluable.

The older you get, the less you are impressed with material things. They are collectors' dustcatchers that you thought would love you back, but they don't.

These are tough times for young people who must be anguished about what to get the generation that "has it all" that does not have an exorbitant price tag.

How about a part of yourself? It'll fit without alterations. The color will be perfect. It will match any decor. They won't have it. And they won't take it back. Trust me.

Christmas In Northern Ireland

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — "I feel sorry for the families who've had people killed this year because I know how bad that first Christmas really is without their loved ones," says Marlene Wilson.

"Christmas is the worst time. You miss them most of all then. It really hits you how much you miss them."

Mrs. Wilson's brother William was shot dead in March 1972 by guerrillas of the mostly Roman Catholic IRA which is fighting to end British rule in Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland.

Ten months and one Christmas later, her husband Mervyn, a police constable, was killed in an Irish Republican Army bomb ambush.

Both men were Protestant and 23 years old.

On the other side of Londonderry, where the sectarian Troubles erupted in August 1969, Maura McConomy, a 29-year-old Catholic, prepares for her second Christmas since her 11-year-old son Stephen was killed.

He was hit in the head by an anti-riot plastic bullet fired by a British soldier on April 16, 1981.

"You have to keep going," Mrs. McConomy says. "I've still got two wee ones to look after. Mark's 11 now and Patrick's 9 and I have to give them a good Christmas. But Stephen's gone, killed by the Brits."

The grief of the two women unites them across the religious divide that has separated Northern Ireland's warring communities for centuries.

But as some Protestants and Catholics defy the extremists to come together to pray for reconciliation in the 14th Christmas of the Troubles, there's no sign that the bloodshed will end.

The outlawed Provisional IRA, who seek to reunite Ireland to end 60 years of partition, said recently: "The war for national liberation will continue until every vestige of British rule is removed."

An unknown optimist neatly painted a message of hope on a grimy wall in Belfast's Shankill Road district, cockpit of Protestant militancy. It read: "Jesus Saves."

A pessimist scrawled underneath with black humor: "What's keeping him?"

That cynical rejoinder echoed a pervasive sense of gloom that has in recent months swept the province, where nearly 2,250 people have been killed since 1969.

But David Blakely, Protestant general secretary of the Irish Council of Churches, notes: "You mustn't think it's all bad here. The Troubles are producing a backlash of Christianity that is especially prevalent at Christmas."

"Neighbors cross the so-called peace lines between the two communities in Belfast, just like the soldiers in the first Christmas of the first world war."

"It's just for one or two days at this time of joy and rebirth to defy the men of violence who are trying to drive us apart. If only we could multiply those days into a whole year."

Says Mrs. Wilson: "I won't be going out much at Christmas. All my friends are married and have children. I don't. There'll be parties, but I'm 34 now, too old for the teen-agers and too young for the old ones.

"If Mervyn had lived, we'd have had our own family by now and Christmas would have been so wonderful. Billy would probably have got married and had a family too. But there's just me now. I'll visit their graves during the holiday."

She adds: "Christmas is a time of good will and I try not to feel any bitterness towards the men who killed my husband and brother. But they'll have to answer for what they've done."

The Provos have in the past called cease-fires at Christmas. But, amid deepening polarization, sources close to the movement say the guerrillas do not plan a truce this year.

The Peace People, founded in August 1976 in the emotional aftermath of the death of three young Catholic children, is organizing Christmas parties to bring together scores of children from both sides whose fathers are among 1,600 men behind bars for terrorist crimes.

"They really get into the Christmas spirit," says Peace People spokeswoman Anne McCann, whose brother Gerard Duddy, 19, was shot dead in 1973, apparently by Protestant assassins, 100 yards from his home as he returned from a dance.

"They're usually a little suspicious of each other when they meet, but they wind up playing games together. Their mothers get on well, too, once they find they've all got the same problems with their men inside."

The Council of Churches has organized a series of ecumenical services and carol concerts, including one with 2,000 children from 63 choirs around the giant illuminated Christmas tree outside Belfast's Edwardian City Hall.

Some of the tension is masked by the decorations in downtown Belfast that provide a veneer of normalcy. Security authorities are allowing cars through the tightly guarded "ring of steel" around the city center over Yuletide, the first time the barriers have been opened for private vehicles in over a decade.

Belfast's main thoroughfare, Royal Avenue, is packed with shoppers. The big department stores, many of them rebuilt after IRA bomb blitzes, report their highest takings for many years.

"Having cars back in the city center may not sound much to people on the outside," says one store executive. "But in Belfast it's about as close as you can get to normalcy."

Shoppers still are frisked by store security guards looking for terrorists smuggling in bombs.

And in the bleak, battered ghettos where the extremists on both sides operate, carbine-carrying police officers in bullet-proof vests and British troops in armored carriers patrol the mean streets — even at Christmas.

Dear Abby

Couple Too Old? Abby Says Never

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A while back you recommended a "saliva substitute" for people who suffer from dry mouth. Having suffered from that condition for two years, I went immediately to the pharmacy and asked for a saliva substitute. The pharmacist said she had never heard of such a product and told me to ask my dentist what the brand name was.

I called my dentist and he had never heard of a saliva substitute either. Abby, can you tell me the name of this product and where it can be purchased?

NEEDS IT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR NEEDS: I had no idea that the problem of "dry mouth" was so widespread until I mentioned it in my column and was promptly deluged with letters from readers seeking relief from that condition.

There are at least four brands of saliva substitutes on the market today. Ask your pharmacist to check the "Annual Pharmacists' Reference Red Book," "Facts and Comparisons" or "Physicians' Desk Reference For Non-Prescription Drugs," under "Saliva Substitutes."

Readers, for your information, "xerostomia" (dry mouth) can be caused by disease, medication, radiation therapy or the normal aging process. This condition can cause acute discomfort, tooth decay, inability to eat, swallow or talk, as well as difficulty in wearing dentures.

If your pharmacist has never heard of it and doesn't know where to get it, find another pharmacist.

DEAR ABBY: Forty-seven years ago I fell in love with a young man, but his mother didn't think I was good enough for him so I gave up. I moved out of town, met another man and married him.

Last summer I went back to my old hometown and ran into my first love by accident. I could tell it was him a block away. We had coffee and talked over old times, and I knew the spark was still there. He never married. I was married twice and widowed twice.

I just turned 71 and he's 70. Do you think we're too old to get married now? Sign this...

JUNE IN JANUARY

DEAR JUNE: Too old? Never! Congratulations, good luck and God's blessings.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old boy who still wets the bed. I am embarrassed about it and would die if my friends found out. My sister (she's 10) holds this over me, and when she wants to upset me she threatens to tell my friends.

I really try not to wet my bed, but I can't help it. My mom is always complaining about the wash and I feel terrible, but I don't do it on purpose. I guess I must be a very heavy sleeper. I've been to doctors and they all say I will grow out of it. But what should I do now?

BED WETTER

DEAR BED WETTER: Ask your mother to get a Wee Alert Buzzer (it's in the Sears catalog). It's a pad that goes under the bedsheet, and when the slightest moisture hits it, the buzzer goes off and awakens you before you wet the bed. I have been recommending it to my readers for years. It's the most effective solution to bed-wetting I have ever found. In the meantime, be assured that you are not alone. Many more kids your age wet the bed than you know, and it's nothing to be ashamed of.

DEAR ABBY: Can a gynecologist tell if a woman has had a child?

I had a baby two years ago, put him up for adoption, and now want to marry and start a new life without telling anyone about my past. (I had a normal, natural birth. No surgery.)

The problem is I'm engaged to a gynecologist. Please help.

MY SECRET

DEAR SECRET: My experts tell me that there is no way a doctor can feel the difference or tell by sight or a physical examination.

P.S. A bit of unsolicited advice: Please share your secret with your fiancé. If it changes his feelings for you, he might not be the man for you. Also, such "secrets" sometimes surface later, creating much misery for all concerned.

DEAR ABBY: This is truly a story with a happy ending, which I hope you will print for others who might be suffering as much as I was.

After years of anguish and worry, wondering what was causing my son's unhappiness, nine months ago, at age 32, he confided to me that he was a transsexual and had made his decision that he must finally live the truth and become what he was mentally and psychologically intended to be — a female.

At first I suffered guilt, shame, confusion, fear, and I even went into mourning for the son I had lost. But then, the love for my child transcended these feelings, and above all, I realized that he needed my love and support more than ever. He had already sought the necessary psychological counseling and hormonal therapy, and four months ago he successfully underwent the sex-change surgery.

I now have a happy daughter, at peace with herself, and it fills me with joy to hear her laughter — something I had never heard before.

Gasohol Has A Chance

Never mind how it happened, but gasohol finally has a chance of coming into its own via a "tax break".

The Senate Finance Committee finished its work on the tax portions of the tax and highway construction measure recently, exempting gasohol from the nickel-a-gallon hike in the gasoline tax.

If the exemption is enacted, gasohol would enjoy a slim price advantage over straight gasoline. (It's price is currently somewhere between the cost of unleaded regular and unleaded premium gas.)

Thirty-four states offer their own tax incentives for gasohol, making for a "crazy patchwork" that makes marketing and industry development difficult. An industry spokesman sees a chance for most states to drop their exemptions if the federal exemptions are kept, meeting the need for a better pricing system.

Gasohol (10 percent alcohol and the rest in unleaded gasoline) was originally intended to help reduce dependency on foreign petroleum supplies. Up to now it has had little more than verbal encouragement from Washington. Now it has a chance of fulfilling its original intent.

Make Program Work

Tobacco growers have served their cause well in approving acreage-poundage marketing quotas and the assessment on tobacco sold.

Tobacco growers showed they were aware that the program is essential to their well-being and the economic health of the area with an overwhelming vote. In Pitt County 97 percent of those voting were in favor of quotas. There were 1,787 in favor and only 58 against. In an eight-county area there were 10,133 votes in favor and only 426 against. For the state the vote was 74,478 for and 4,644 against which was a tremendous 94 percent positive vote.

The program is thus voted in for three more years. They will be difficult growing and selling years, but it now is the responsibility of all connected with the tobacco industry to demonstrate that the program can work.

THIS AFTERNOON

Bars Not For All

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — During March, 1982, 219 juveniles were detained in North Carolina jails and juvenile detention centers. After studying the cases of those juveniles, the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth (GACCY) reported this month that 60 percent of those children did not need to be held behind locked doors.

GACCY is proposing a rewrite of the state's criteria for determining whether or not a child should be held in secure custody. Their proposal comes as Gov. Jim Hunt's administration argues the merits of a proposed one-year delay of the July 1, 1983, deadline for removing all children from adult jails. Supporters of the proposal say the state needs $12 million and a 12-month extension to establish alternative programs and facilities for holding children. GACCY says the extension isn't needed. If the state stopped holding children unnecessarily, it would see that current facilities and programs are pretty much adequate.

GACCY thinks many more children can be sent home to await the disposition of their cases in court. Others can be put in supervised community programs which do not require locked doors and bars on the windows.

Under current law, a child awaiting trial can be ordered detained for five days by a juvenile court judge. His case must be reviewed every five days for continued custody. The judge must first determine that there is a reasonable factual basis to believe the child committed the offense with which he's charged and then find any of a number of other conditions.

GACCY agrees with one condition — holding children accused of committing very serious crimes such as murder and rape. But they disagree with current law on other provisions. They say a court shouldn't be able to lock up a child because he looks like he'll run away. If he's got a record of running from training school or court officials, you can hold him. If not, send him home.

Out-of-state children are held because it's believed they won't return. GACCY

Nine of ten had no record of failing to appear for a court appearance and four out of five had never violated court supervision. "All of the above figures would lead one to the conclusion that a number of concerns frequently voiced as reasons for the use of secure detention simply are not problems for the majority of North Carolina's detention population," the report says.

GACCY says most of the children in the study were not a threat to the public. Two out of every five offenses were very minor — mostly running away or trespassing. Nine out of ten were not assaultive or disruptive.

The children usually had a place to go. Nine out of ten parents agreed to take them home — but a quarter of the kids didn't want to go home. That leads GACCY to suggest that family crisis intervention programs may be needed more than jail cells. Their study also found that only eight of the 291 children had escaped from training schools.

As final support for their theory that children should be sent to non-secure settings, GACCY reports that in 75 percent of the cases, the final court disposition was to a non-secure setting.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

says that isn't fair. Current law allows holding children who appear to be suicidal. If they are so inclined, GACCY says, they ought to be sent to a hospital, not jail. Current law also allows the holding of runaways until their parents come to pick them up. GACCY says these kids can be placed in non-secure facilities. They don't need to be locked up.

Of the 291 children held for some, or all, of March, only four percent were charged with very serious offenses. One-third had no previous involvement with the courts.

WHAT'S THAT ABOUT SHOEMAKER'S CHILDREN?

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Maybe Clear The Fog

WASHINGTON — It looks as if the Supreme Court may be about to do something sensible about the exclusionary rule, and if so, this will be a great and welcome novelty — for the court has done nothing sensible about the exclusionary rule in the past 68 years.

The heady aspect of a fog-clearing at the high court stems from an order entered on Nov. 29. A majority of the court asked for reargument in the case of Illinois vs. Gates, which already had been argued once on Oct. 13. The case involves a couple of suspects who were charged with trafficking in marijuana after police, acting on an informant's tip, found 350 pounds of marijuana in their possession. The seized drugs were ruled inadmissible as evidence for want of sufficient "probable cause" to justify the police search.

In its Nov. 29 order, the Supreme Court asked counsel to argue the question whether the rule should be modified, so as, for example, "not to require the exclusion of evidence obtained in the reasonable belief that the search and seizure at issue was consistent with the Fourth Amendment." Such a "reasonable belief" exception was recommended last year by the Attorney General's Task Force on Violent Crime. It makes great good sense.

A word of background: Until 1914, the issue now at hand apparently had not reached the Supreme Court, but in February of that year the court ruled on the appeal of Fremont Weeks from his conviction for possession of lottery tickets. The facts were appalling. Without the slightest effort to obtain a warrant, federal marshals broke down the door of his Missouri home, rummaged through desks and bureaus and seized every document they could lay their hands on. There was no pretense of authority, probable cause or anything else. The court, shocked by the marshals' conduct, unanimously held that evidence so seized could not be used against the defendant at trial. That was the beginning of the exclusionary rule.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Nearly 50 years later, in Mapp vs. Ohio, the court extended its rule to criminal cases tried in state courts.

Since then it has been downhill all the way. Successive courts, in a bewildering variety of cases, have so fouled up the exclusionary rule that no one — literally no one, on the bench or in the bar or in the law schools — can say with any certainty what evidence the rule excludes.

In a recent address, Attorney General William French Smith examined three cases involving the exclusion of evidence obtained by police in challenged searches. In the first case, 14 judges at various levels had passed on the matter; seven found the search lawful, seven found it unlawful. In the second, 14 judges ruled the search lawful, eight ruled it unlawful. In the third, 15 judges ruled one way, 13 judges the other way.

The situation is intolerable. In the semiannual journal "Criminal Justice Ethics," Michigan's Professor Yale Kamisar and Maryland's Attorney General Stephen H. Sachs recently argued in favor of leaving the mess as it is. U.S. Circuit Judge Malcolm Richard Wilkey contended flatly that "the time has come to abolish the exclusionary rule." Frank G. Carrington, who served as a member of the Task Force on Violent Crime, argued for the "reasonable belief" exception.

Judge Wilkey had the best of it. He made the threshold point that the guilt of the accused has nothing whatever to do with the conduct of the investigating officer. The inevitable result of some mechanistic application of (Please Turn To Page 5)

Cynicism In High Places

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The political cynicism enveloping the lame-duck Congress reached its most unseemly level on the frantic evening of Dec. 14 when agents of the House Democratic leadership informed recalcitrant congressmen they could vote for the $5.4 billion "jobs" proposal with impunity because it would either die in the Senate or be vetoed.

"I was told it's not going to be passed," one bollweevil Democrat later explained to us, "so I had a 'free' vote." He was so advised by lieutenants of Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Majority Leader Jim Wright. Other somewhat embarrassed supporters of the return to discredited federal pump-priming confided they had similar reassurances direct from O'Neill and Wright.

"Jobs" legislation was the focus of a post-election session that did the impossible: degrading even further the unsavory reputation of lame-duck Congresses. Only a small minority of lawmakers believes that what failed for the New Deal could work today, but the supposed political appeal of the "jobs" label attracted not only Democrats but also prominent Republicans (including some in the congressional leadership and some on the White House staff).

For that very reason, House Republicans were jumpy when they went to the White House a few hours before the House vote for their weekly meeting with President Reagan. What they heard from Sen. Ted Stevens, assistant Senate majority leader, only heightened their apprehension. With obvious approval, Stevens told of plans by Senate Appropriations Committee chairman Mark Hatfield (who was absent) for a big jobs bill of his own.

At that point, Rep. Silvio Conte, senior Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, summarized the attitude of his House colleagues when he declared: "Mr. President, I'm getting ready to walk the plank in the House tonight by voting against the jobs bill. What I want to know is whether you're going to saw the plank off behind me."

Reagan promised a veto, but in a way that left open the possibility he, driven into the atmosphere of maneuver prevailing on Capitol Hill, might sign a $1 billion or $1.5 billion jobs proposal in return for MX missile production money. That is precisely the deal House Democratic leaders offered privately an obsolete economic remedy in return for a mismanaged weapons system.

Its acceptance by Reagan would drive another wedge between him and his truest believers. "An administration that has no strategy and has no purpose should have no trouble making maneuvers," said a conservative Republican House member with a nearly perfect voting record supporting Reagan.

Both the lame-duck session's existence and its demeaning quality derive from the new habit of cramming all appropriations at year's end into a "continuing resolution" that becomes a grab bag for policies victimized by procrastination. Under this system, Mark Hatfield's influence matches the president's and Ronald Reagan is forced to bargain.

But the lame duck's wretched record transcends the continuing resolution disgrace. Speaker O'Neill tells Democrats to support the protectionist "domestic content" bill because it has even less chance than the jobs proposal to become law. House members unveil secret strategy to raise their salaries, offering it in trade to the Senate for unlimited outside income. An imaginative plan to buy propaganda to communist Cuba is killed by a handful of Senators lobbied by Midwestern radio stations fearful that Fidel Castro will jam them.

The rancid lame duck of '82 smells a little like the "congressional government" described almost a century ago by a young Woodrow Wilson, a malady that (Please Turn To Page 5)

Strength For Today

MORE THAN GENIUS

Queen Victoria, after hearing the great pianist Paderewski give a concert, commanded him to come to her box. "Mr. Paderewski," she said, "you are a genius." Paderewski, never inclined to underestimate his ability, did not dispute the queen's statement, but he said this: "Your majesty, before I was a genius I was a drudge, and being a drudge made me a genius. If I failed to practice one day, I noticed it; if I failed to practice two days, my friends noticed it; and if I failed to practice for a week, the world noticed it."

At the height of his fame, Paderewski did simple finger exercises on the piano, just as if he were a beginner.

Genius is a gift, but reaches fruition only as the result of drudgery. There are students with genius IQ's who are flunking out at college, and then there are other boys and girls of average abilities who are making top grades. The lesson is plain: application counts more than genius. — Elisha Douglass

Other Editors Say A Prudent Course

(Henderson Dispatch)

Too many motorists, unfortunately, from time to time trip on the law and wind up with a traffic citation. Frequently it's just a minor violation but, of course, some are more serious.

Occasionally, probably because of misunderstanding or even because the driver is miffed or suffers from bruised pride, he can find himself in deeper trouble than that involved in the original citation.

The bone of contention is the legal requirement that the cited motorist sign the citation after it is written out by the law enforcement officer. The driver simply refuses sometimes to sign.

To help clarify the problem, Col. John T. Jenkins, commander of the N.C. Highway Patrol, has offered an explanation and recommendation.

"This misunderstanding is costly in time and money and results in embarrassment to violators," says the colonel. "Law enforcement officers likewise are inconvenienced."

Many motorists are unaware that upon being issued citations they must sign a receipt located on the original copy," according to the commander. "This is a legal requirement and not an admission of guilt. The signature of the violator merely shows that a copy of the citation was received by the signer."

Jenkins suggests that motorists, upon receipt of citations, sign as instructed and argue their case in court at the appropriate time, if desired. "The violator's signature will not jeopardize his or her position in court", he emphasizes.

As the patrol leader points out, signing the receipt is by no means a plea of guilty to the charge. However, in incidents in which a motorist refuses to sign as required by law, as a rule the trooper's only recourse is to place the motorist under arrest and proceed to a magistrate's office. In most cases it involves unnecessary expense and loss of time as well as embarrassment to the violator, because bond probably will be required.

Not only is it required by law, but merely signing the receipt as requested by an officer obviously can save the alleged violator a considerable amount of time, some expense and a lot of inconvenience. It has no bearing on the decision of a court, but just the opposite could be true if the motorist has been adamant.

Sees Chance For Home-Buyers

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
Would-be homebuyers will have a better chance to turn their dreams into reality next year, but young people looking for that first house will still have a hard time finding one they can afford.

That's the forecast from James W. Christian, chief economist for the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

Christian described 1982 as "pretty bloody all the way through. Not an especially good time for homebuyers."

He said 1983 will be "a much better year for housing," but warned: "It's not going to be vintage."

Christian said there is a "strong probability that you're going to see interest rates remain down" throughout next year. He said mortgage rates generally should be about 12 percent — "a pretty significant improvement" over this year when rates have averaged about 16 percent.

The monthly payment on a $50,000, 30-year mortgage at 16 percent is $672.50; the monthly payment on the same mortgage at 12 percent is $514.50 — a savings of over $150 a month.

Christian said there is still "an enormous affordability gap for that heart of the market" — people in their late 20s and early 30s looking for a first house.

The median income for that group is expected to be about $22,000 in 1983, he said. The "affordable" house for someone in that category — assuming a 10 percent down payment and an interest rate of 12½ percent — is about $50,000, below the current median house price of over $65,000.

"Home prices didn't decline that much," Christian said. "They just stopped rising." He said unsold inventories of new homes are at their lowest level since 1971 and there is a strong pent-up demand for housing. "If builders can knock something off that housing price, then they can start to tap into that prime market of first-time homebuyers."

Christian also said the general economic health of the nation will have an important impact on the housing market. This year, he said, "People said, 'Holy smoke. The guy down the street is unemployed. I'm not going to buy anything big right now."

"Until consumer confidence starts to pick up ... People are going to stay where they are. They're not going to make those new commitments until the future of the economy looks a little clearer."

Leonard Shane, chairman of the U.S. League and chairman of Mercury Savings of Huntington Beach, Calif., was, like Christian, cautiously optimistic. And, like Christian, he said a lot will depend on the recession and government economic policies.

He said it was "impossible to predict interest rates," but said that "whatever movement there is will be far more moderate than we've seen during the last couple years ... This means a larger number of people will be able to qualify for and afford homes in 1983 than were in 1982 ..."

"The only qualification — caveat — on that ... has to do with the national economic condition. If we continue in a deepening recessionary situation, there will be fewer people in the market for homes by virtue of their individual economic condition."

Shane said the high unemployment rate means "there will be fewer people in a position to consider any kind of major purchase. But those who are working and are in the market for a home will find it easier to acquire one."

Shane said the new types of bank accounts recently authorized by federal regulators will have an impact on mortgage loans since the new investments are tied to money-market interest rates.

In recent years, many financial institutions — particularly savings and loans — found themselves tied to long-term mortgages issued when rates were fixed at relatively low levels.

Deregulation has eliminated most interest rate ceilings, changing today's mortgages, and Shane said the change will continue. "There will continue to be some fixed-rate loans," he said, "but the prevalent thing, where you have market-rate investors, the borrowers are also going to be market-rate indexed."

Mexico Again Devalues Peso In Recession Battle

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid's government has begun this country's third peso devaluation of the year in a bid to pull Mexico out of its worst recession of the century.

New, liberalized money-exchange rules took effect Monday with peso trading opening at 148.50 to the dollar for those selling dollars and 150 for buyers. The rate for sellers slipped by midday to as low as 152, but activity was limited. Because of shortages, dollars were available only in traveler's checks or drafts at most banks.

Financial analysts said people with dollars were holding them, waiting until the peso slips even further. One U.S. banker, who asked not to be identified, predicted the peso could slip to 200 soon. There were reports it dropped as low as 180 on the black market on Monday.

There were still some restrictions and confusion in the Mexican capital about the new currency rules, authorized by de la Madrid a week ago.

Fidel Velazquez, secretary general of the Mexican Federation of Labor, said businessmen would take advantage of the new rate "to speculate" and raise prices.

He said the free market "will force us to redefine salary policy; we will not be able to seek the same increases we were; it will be necessary to demand others."

But the president of an employers' association in the border city of Reynosa called for austerity and warned against new wage demands.

"One must work more and eat a little less," Pedro Guajardo Martinez said. He said labor leaders "should adjust to reality because if they ask for high minimum wages there will be price increases and unemployment."

Already coping with a 100 percent inflation rate for the year, Mexicans are bracing for increases in personal and business income taxes, and a hike in the value added tax from 10 percent to 15 percent. On luxury items the tax will go to 20 percent.

However, the measures are directed at wealthier classes and provide for continued government subsidies on basic goods and services. The economic reform package is part of de la Madrid's program to pull the country out of its worst recession of the century and repay an estimated $81 billion foreign debt. Guajardo Martinez said the free foreign exchange market was aimed at doing away with the U.S. exchange houses "and that is good for the border area."

At some points along the border, trading was heavy Monday. In San Ysidro, Calif., lines of hundreds of people shifted from one exchange house to another seeking the best rate.

At 27 to the dollar at the beginning of the year, the peso dropped to an official rate of 70 after February and August devaluations, but was traded as low as 140 on the black market and along the Mexico-U.S. border.

The new system sets a rate of 70 to the dollar for previously-incurred dollar debts. A sliding rate, starting at 95.10 to the dollar, for essential imports, exports and some other transactions is to drop to 96.43 and 96.53 by Dec. 31.

The measures loosen the exchange controls imposed Sept. 1 by then-President Jose Lopez Portillo and blamed for shortages of raw materials and spare parts that slowed industrial production to a crawl.

Under Lopez Portillo, the peso was devalued in February and again in August. Mexicans responded by removing billions of dollars from their bank accounts and depositing them in foreign banks.

Phone Tax To Be Felt

By The Associated Press
A two percent increase in the federal excise tax will result in higher telephone bills for customers of North Carolina's 20 telephone companies starting Jan. 1.

The telephone tax increase from 1 percent to 3 percent comes about as part of the tax bill passed by Congress and signed into law by President Reagan last August, said Dennis A. Benfield of Centel Telephone Co. of Hickory.

The excise tax will remain at 3 percent from 1983 through 1985, when it is scheduled to be eliminated, said Benfield, whose company serves central North Carolina.

Alan Sykes of Carolina Telephone, a Tarboro-based company that serves most of the state east of Raleigh, said the tax increase means $1 billion will be paid by all telephone users nationally.

North Carolina's other major telephone company, Charlotte-based Southern Bell, serves most of the major cities of the state. Spokesman Don Elmore said the company did not try to fight the tax increase, but said, "We probably would be opposed to it."

All calls — local and long-distance — are subject to the tax, and any bills from the telephone companies sent after Dec. 31 must be taxed at 3 percent, regardless of the date of the call.

The tax was scheduled to be eliminated by the end of 1981, but a delay came in December 1981 when President Carter signed into law a suspension of the expected 1-percent decline.

the exclusionary rule is that demonstrably guilty criminals go free. There is no convincing evidence to prove that the rule deters law enforcement officers, but there is abundant evidence to prove that hypertechnical citations of the rule make life miserable for even the most responsible police.

Under the proposed doctrine of "reasonable belief," officers would not be set free to emulate the conduct of the Missouri marshals who grossly violated the rights of Fremont Weeks 68 years ago. Such conduct would still be punishable by disciplinary action and by damage suits against the offending cops. But at least a sensible step would be taken toward convicting the palpably guilty, which is one of those things I had supposed the law was all about.

City Holiday Schedule

City hall and all other municipal offices will be closed Friday and Monday in observance of the Christmas holidays, the city announced.

GREAT buses will operate on Christmas Eve, but the vehicles will not operate on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday. Regular bus service will resume on Dec. 28.

The sanitation division and other public works facilities will be closed Friday through Monday. Restaurants, food stores, and other businesses with dumpster containers will be served on Friday. Regular residential route pick-up will resume on Dec. 28. During the holidays, emergency calls for public works may be made to 752-3473.

All city recreation offices, gymnasiums and centers will be closed Friday, through the weekend, and on Monday.

Sunrise Service Scheduled

A sunrise service will be held Christmas Day at 5 a.m. at Morning Glory Apostolic Faith Holiness Church. Holy communion and foot washing will be held Christmas night at 7:30 p.m. at the church.

Libraries Close For Holidays

Sheppard Memorial Library and its two branches will be closed Dec. 24-27 in observance of the Christmas holiday. The library will resume its normal operating schedule on Dec. 28.

Festival Seeks Designs

Persons who want to submit a design for the cover of the Gritton Shad Festival souvenir brochure should send sketches to the festival, Box 928, Gritton, N.C., 28530, according to Janet Haseley, festival publicity chairman.

The cover design should include the words "13th Annual Gritton Shad Festival, April 13-17, 1983, Gritton, N.C.," "100 Years of Progress and Growth," and "Double-Barreled Celebration," she said.

The back should incorporate the words "The Family Town" and "On N.C. Highways 11 and 118 between Greenville and Kinston," she added.

Designs may be for the front or back and provisions for a mailing label should be made on the back.

The person who designs the cover will be identified on the inside front cover of the brochure. Five thousand copies of the brochure are printed and distributed free one month before the April 13-17 festival.

Ms. Haseley also said a festival planning meeting will be held Jan. 5 at 7:30 p.m. at the Gritton Historical Museum. She said the meeting will be open to all interested citizens.

Sugg Class Plans Reunion

The H.B. Sugg class of 1964 reunion will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Ramada Inn. Members wishing to attend may call Louvenia Ford, 753-5525, or Maxine Johnson, 753-2712, for more information.

Film Offers Safety Tips

A film aimed at informing area citizens of safe shopping tips for the Christmas season has been prepared by the city's public information office for daily airing on local cable television's channel 13, the weather channel.

A city spokesman said the seven-minute video tape, depicting several possible crime situations and suggesting ways those problems could have been prevented, is shown each day around 8 a.m., noon, 6 p.m. and 9 p.m., as well as at other times when cable has an open time slot.

The film, made with the assistance of the police department, will continue through Christmas day.

The spokesman said the film is part of the city's increased emphasis on crime prevention, especially during the Christmas shopping season.

Christmas Day Service

A Christmas Day service will be held at Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ, corner of Fifth and Hudson streets, at noon. The speaker will be Elder James Snuggs of Greenville. The service is open to the public.

PCC Holds Holiday Program

Pitt Community College held its annual Adult Basic Education Christmas Program recently with over 100 ABE students, instructors and PCC staff members attending.

Gail Wallace, PCC placement officer and coordinator of cooperative education, was the guest speaker. She encouraged students to "take one step at a time, be in charge of your own lives and have a positive mental attitude."

Christopher Deane, PCC visiting artist, performed several selections on the hammer dulcimer.

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Ten scholars have been recognized and honored by the department of history at East Carolina University for academic achievement and scholarship.

They are winners of fellowships, scholarships and awards established by present or former members of the history faculty at ECU. The department recognized the award recipients at its annual presentation program at which two historical papers were presented.

Mary Lyn Scott Jernigan of Ahoskie, a 1981 ECU graduate with the highest honors in history, won the annual Lawrence F. Brewster Fellowship for an outstanding student in the entering class at the graduate level. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guerry Goode of 507 B Main Street, Ahoskie.

Jeanne-Pierre Troadec, a graduate student majoring in European history, won the Paul Murray Scholarship for a history graduate student with a superior academic record who "demonstrates a potential for carrying on the ideals and dedication to the study of history as exemplified by Professor Paul Murray's career of teaching and scholarship." The $1,000 scholarship is presented by Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Murray.

Troadec, a native of France, is now a teacher of history at Martin Community College in Williamston, N.C., and is doing graduate study in European history at ECU.

The winner of the Joseph E. and Catherine E. Hirsch Memorial Award in History

Charles C. Ross

Jean Pierre Troadec

was Charles Christian (Chris) Ross of Greenville, a graduate of J. H. Rose High School. The Hirsch award is presented annually by Dr. Robert Gowen of the history faculty in memory of his parents to a history major considered to be the most promising junior, based on scholarship, promise and motivation. The purpose of the award is to enable the recipient to buy books related to his course of study.

Ross attended N.C. State University before becoming an ECU undergraduate. He is a member of Phi Alpha Theta, a dean's list student and a member of the History Student Advisory committee.

Edward Ashley Wingfield of Greenville and Carolyn Hunter (Lyn) Boiter of Belmont were winners of the Richard Cecil Todd Phi Alpha Theta Scholarship awarded annually to members enrolled full-time at ECU who have demonstrated "outstanding service" to Lambda Eta Chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, the history department and the university. The two scholarships are for $500 each.

Wingfield, of 3200 Memorial Drive, Greenville, is the son of Ashley Wingfield Sr. of Route 1, Mouth of Wilson, Va. Mrs. Boiter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hunter of Belmont and is a graduate of South Point High School.

The Richard C. Todd Scholarship in History

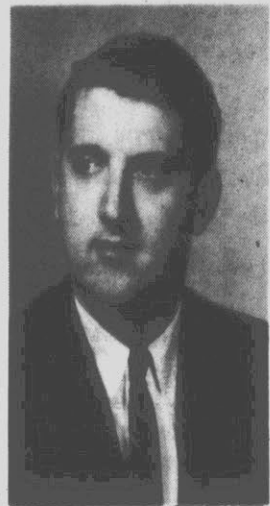

awards presented annually by Professor Emeritus Richard C. Todd to five of the most outstanding undergraduate students in the department went to Charlotte Faye Carter of Fayetteville, Harlod Dereck Collins of Durham, Michael Paul Phillips of Raleigh, Margaret Louise Sheehy of Beaufort and Michael Thomas Swaim of Asheville.

The Todd Scholarships were for $850 each.

BEGINS TOUR

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang arrived in Egypt Monday at the start of a 10-nation month-long tour of Africa aimed at strengthening ties with Third World countries.

Cheatham New Bank Chairman

JAMES T. CHEATHAM

James T. Cheatham has been elected chairman of the city board of directors for North Carolina National Bank in Greenville, according to Larry Mallard, vice president and city executive.

Cheatham, a practicing attorney with the firm of Everett & Cheatham here, will serve as board chairman during 1983.

The new chairman is a member of the American and North Carolina Bar Associations, the board of directors of the Pitt County United Way, and is a former member of the board of the N.C. Department of Conservation and Development.

Cheatham is married to the former Brenn Bunch of Statesville and they have three daughters.

Mallard succeeds Woodrow W. Wooten of Falkland as chairman of the NCNB board. Wooten is a farmer and owner of W.W. Wooten general merchandise store.

Other members of the bank's city board include Dr. M.W. Aldridge, Dr. W.S. Bost, Joseph M. Gantz, Leslie H. Garner, Charles W. Howard Jr., H. Lyman Ormond Jr., Janet M. Stoughton, James E. Sutton, Harold L. Thomas, Dr. Donald H. Tucker, J. Fred Webb, John S. Whichard and Alex J. White.

Italian Press Outraged By East Bloc Subversion

BY JOHN PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — The Italian press reacted with outrage today about what it called East-bloc subversion after the government implied publicly for the first time that Bulgarian spies helped plot the shooting of the pope.

The conservative Il Giornale Nuovo of Milan said speeches by four ministers at an extraordinary parliamentary session Monday "accentuated the impression that our country has been a theater for the worst communist espionage for far too long."

If links between the May 13, 1981, assassination attempt and Bulgarian secret services were proven, the leading Corriere Della Sera of Milan said in an editorial, "the Italian government ought to take steps: but those would concern the whole of the West."

Several newspapers focused on a speech by Socialist Defense Minister Lello Lagorio. He said the attack on the pope by Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca must be looked on as "a true act of war in peacetime."

Bulgaria's attorney-general Monday said accusations that three Bulgarians were implicated in the shooting were "ungrounded."

In what the newspapers said was the most outspoken speech, Lagorio called the shooting of Polish-born John Paul II "a protective and alternative solution to an invasion of Poland," and said concerns over a Bulgarian connection were fully warranted.

The defense minister did not say how the papal shooting precluded an invasion of Poland. He also did not elaborate on who would have invaded the East-bloc country, racked by more than a year of martial law because of labor unrest.

John Paul has repeatedly condemned the Warsaw government for the Dec. 13, 1981 crackdown on the independent Solidarity union, which was later outlawed as a subversive group seeking to overthrow the Polish communist system.

Lagorio spoke after Justice Minister Clelio Darida formally confirmed that three Bulgarians had been implicated in the papal shooting, revealed that two others were under investigation for alleged espionage and called the Bulgarian capital "a principal contact point" for arms and drug trafficking.

On Monday night the Italian state television network RAI for the first time broadcast a television documentary by NBC News that investigated possible links between the shooting of the pontiff and the KGB, the Soviet secret service.

Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo said Monday the government would impose more stringent requirements for Bulgarians seeking visas to Italy. He also said the government was considering reducing the staff of the Bulgarian embassy, which he said is larger than the Italian embassy staff in Sofia, the Bulgarian capital.

Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni said Italy needed to introduce new legislation to control the movements of foreigners.

Because of increased friction over the Italian accusations, Bulgaria and Italy recalled their ambassadors 11 days ago, though the Italian government has delayed the return of its envoy.

Although Agca before his conviction insisted he acted alone in shooting the pope, Lagorio said Italian counter-espionage agents believed all along that the the shooting was the result of an international plot.

He said the breakthrough was made when counter-espionage agents met with the Turk last December in Ascoli Piceno prison, where he is serving a life sentence.

Sergei Ivanov Antonov, Rome station chief of the Bulgarian national airline, was arrested in Rome last month on charges of complicity in the assassination attempt, and a warrant was issued for Maj. Zhelyo Vasilev, a Bulgarian Embassy employee who left Italy in June. Another former embassy employee, Todor Aivazov, is wanted for questioning though no warrant has been issued.

The justice minister said two Bulgarian Embassy employees, identified as Ivan Dartchev and Simeon Guernev, are under investigation in connection with the alleged espionage activities of Luigi Scricciolo, a labor union official arrested last February.

A Bulgarian Embassy spokesman, Vasil Dimitrov, said neither of the people named worked at the embassy either as a diplomat or as a technical employee.

Dimitrov also said an embassy representative met with Antonov on Monday for the first time since his arrest Nov. 25 and reported that Antonov was "in good health." Dimitrov also expressed hope that Italian investigators would find him innocent.

Darida charged that Scricciolo had contacts both with Bulgarian agents and the Red Brigades terrorists who kidnapped U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier last year. He said Scricciolo tried to obtain NATO military secrets and information on the position of the United States and the Western alliance regarding events in Poland.

Held Guilty Of Bilking NASA

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Three men and two companies have been convicted of charging inflated labor rates and equipment costs during construction of space shuttle support facilities from 1975 to 1980.

A 12-member U.S. District Court jury deliberated three days, beginning last Wednesday, before reaching the verdict Monday to end the five-week trial.

Capital Communication Corp. and its president, Philip Akwa of Milwaukee; New World Construction Co. and its president, Arthur Boschen of Titusville; and James White Jr. of Melbourne, a former New World engineer, were found guilty.

Prosecutors said that in one case, the firms filed for 27,000 man-hours of repair time on a project when initial estimates submitted to NASA were for 4,000 man-hours. Prosecutors also said time cards of laborers and crane operators at the sites did not match labor costs submitted by Capital and New World.

Prosecutors did not say how much money was fraudulently obtained by the defendants. But more than $500,000 in change orders — amended costs for unanticipated work on a contract — was paid to the firms.

Each man faces a maximum of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count, and the companies face up to a $10,000 fine on each count.

Attorneys for Akwa and Boschen said they would appeal.

Judge John Reed said he would hand down sentences within 35 days, and allowed the defendants to remain free on their own recognizance.

The defendants were named in a 20-count indictment last January by a federal grand jury after a four-year probe by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the FBI into contract abuses at Kennedy Space Center.

Defense attorneys argued during the trial that designs for the projects were poor and that NASA often underestimated contract costs.

Akwa was convicted of one conspiracy count and nine fraud counts. Boschen was convicted of conspiracy and eight counts of fraud. White was convicted on two fraud counts.

Ten counts, which named only Akwa and his firm, were severed from the case and may be tried later.

NSF Awaiting Key Appointees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Science Foundation, the agency sponsoring much of the country's academic research, is undergoing a management change that clears the way for unprecedented White House involvement.

The situation arose when President Reagan appointed Dr. Edward A. Knapp the new NSF director on Nov. 2 — an appointment that must be confirmed by the Senate.

Two assistant director posts are also vacant.

Tracking Dog's Talent Proven

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A tracking dog's ability to distinguish one human scent from another has been challenged by a defense lawyer, in a case involving the aroma of socks.

The German shepherd, Harrass II, is so highly regarded that it wears a police badge around its neck. The dog's trainer, John Preston, says the animal has sniffed items in more than 1,000 lineups and "never been proved wrong."

But attorney Michael Santangelo argued Monday at a pre-trial hearing before U.S. District Judge Thomas Platt that there is no scientific proof that each human has a unique odor.

His client, Patrick McNiece, 21, is charged with stealing $20,000 in stamps from a Staten Island post office on Aug. 26, 1979.

Postal inspectors said the 8-year-old dog was given one of McNiece's socks to sniff and found the suspect's scent on a pair of bolt cutters recovered after the burglary.

Prosecutors also say two witnesses placed McNiece at the scene, but Santangelo said neither provided an accurate description.

He demanded proof that the dog was not confused by the scents of other people who handled the bolt cutters. He also said the smell might not have been fresh because the dog sniffed the cutters 21 months after the burglary.

But the judge was skeptical, although he made no immediate ruling.

"I've lived with dogs all my life," Platt said. "To dogs, humans do have a unique smell."

"I don't think science has told us that," Santangelo responded.

"Human observation has told us that," Platt said. "I can't think of any more scientific way."

In a letter to Platt last week, Santangelo compared the dog to a voice analyzer. The device's results were allowed in a federal trial in 1978 by a court which reviewed its reliability. A dog's reliability has not received such a review, Santangelo argued.

But the judge responded, "A dog is not a machine any more than you are."

Later, the judge reassured his belief in canine ability to differentiate between human scents, adding, "It's uncanny, but it's true."

But Platt said he was not making a legal ruling on the issue, and adjourned the hearing until today. Santangelo said he would ask the judge to allow him to test the "dog act" in court.

Santa Can Use Sign Language

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The children at the Covenant Presbyterian Church don't have to speak in order to put their requests in to this Santa Claus — he, like most of them, is deaf.

"I think if Santa can go around nationally, why not have one for the deaf?" says Eddie Holder, who dressed as Santa Claus to take request from 18 children at the church last week.

The children at Covenant Presbyterian are part of a state-sponsored pre-school program for the hearing-impaired. Holder and the children "communicate through sign language."

"They respond like any other child, Holder says. "It's amazing how some of them don't want to get off my lap. I can talk to them, and they feel the love that a Santa can give them."

"What do you want for Christmas," Holder asked each child, speaking aloud while using sign language.

Using his fingers to spell the word, 4-year-old Cameron Cope said he wanted a car.

"We always have a Christmas program and we try to have a Santa," said Phyllis Chalk, a program teacher. "Some of the kids are shy, but they're excited about seeing him, they all know who Santa is. And they're fortunate to have a Santa who cares."

Holder says he knows the feeling of being left out of holiday festivities. He has been totally deaf in one year and partially deaf in the other ear since he was 5.

"When I was a kid I wanted to part of the fun," he said. "I understand. I understand them, and they understand me. And I can talk to children who can hear."

At Covenant, Holder hugged each child, gave each a candy cane and watched the children smile.

Climbing off Santa's lap, each of the children signalled "thank you" with their hands.

Had To Restrain One Firefighter

MONROE TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Firefighters had to restrain one of their colleagues responding to a fire at his own home where two of his children were killed, officials say.

Volunteer firefighter Mark Rogers left one blaze early Monday to go to a second at his four-room home.

His 2½-year-old daughter, Tammi, and her 8-year-old stepbrother, Kevin Glaspey, died of smoke inhalation. His wife, Mary Ann, suffered a sprained ankle jumping from a window.

"He was being held back by (police) officers and other firemen," detective Eliezer Garcia said. "He was in shock. Apparently he didn't know what was going on until he got there."

Expected Okay Chrysler Pact

DETROIT (AP) — The federal Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board is expected to approve the automaker's new contract with the United Auto Workers next month, a board spokesman says.

"It's hard to imagine they (management) would go along with a plan that would send them to the bottom," Robert Levine, spokesman for the board, said Monday. UAW President Douglas Fraser agreed. The board was set up in 1979 when Chrysler got federal loan guarantees.

The contract, which went into effect Dec. 13, will cost Chrysler some $150 million. The board, part of the U.S. Treasury Department, must approve all Chrysler transactions of more than $10 million.

Piedmont Is Neutral In Air Fares War

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
When several major airlines cut their coast-to-coast fares to $99 last month to attract holiday travelers, Winston-Salem-based Piedmont Airlines decided to stay out of the price war and stick with its rates and service plan.

Officials of the rapidly growing regional carrier say the decision is part of their philosophy to avoid duplicating what other airlines are doing. It's a philosophy that has paid off with steadily rising revenues, earnings and passenger volume at a time when other airlines are suffering.

"Many of the big airlines are having a hard time staying in business, but we feel that our decisions to stick with our original plans have helped us weather the economic situation well," said Piedmont spokesman Don McGuire.

"We said before that we've tried not to duplicate what others are doing, to find our own niches," he says. "We tried to find our own ways to provide airline service where it is needed."

With airline-industry losses worldwide predicted to reach $2 billion, 1982 has been one of the worst years in airline history.

But in a year when big airlines have struggled to balance their books, Piedmont bought 12 new Boeing 737s, making it the world's largest 1982 purchaser of new airplanes. The airline plans to buy nine more 737s next year.

From 1977 through 1981, Piedmont's net income soared 335 percent, from $7.5 million to $32.6 million. Earnings per share more than tripled, from $1.23 to $4.12.

Piedmont began charting a different course from other airlines after passage of the federal Airline Deregulation Act in 1978. Before that, Piedmont had served mainly as a "feeder" airline delivering travelers to large carriers in major hubs like Atlanta and Chicago.

With the end of regulation, Piedmont began establishing a new route structure that would enable it to offer money-making long trips as well as regional ones.

As part of its plan, Piedmont picked Charlotte as its first hub city while its larger competitors set up hub operations in Atlanta to ferry passengers to points all over the Southeast. The Charlotte hub allowed Piedmont passengers to travel between cities from Miami to Boston without stopovers at the Atlanta airport.

Unlike larger airlines, Piedmont refused to abandon its daily flights out of cities like Fayetteville, Richmond, Va., and Myrtle Beach, S.C.

"We saw a need for flights in and out of some cities where no service existed, or where other airlines had pulled out," said William Howard, Piedmont president.

Piedmont turned the Charlotte decision into a success story, going from an initial 30 flights a day in and out of Charlotte to 96.

Last July 1, Piedmont opened a second hub in Dayton, Ohio.

"There were cities in the Midwest where (airline) service was desperately needed, and we went in and filled that need," McGuire said.

Merrie Has Had Enough

OCEAN SPRINGS, Miss. (AP) — Although she says she's not ready to settle down, Merrie Christmas looks forward to getting married and changing her name.

"It's irritating," she says of the constant ribbing because of her name. "I guess I haven't developed that good humor yet."

Miss Christmas' mother thought the name was "pretty" 30 years ago when her daughter was born.

"Mothers are just like that," said Elva Christmas. "We had two sons and she was a long time coming. I was looking forward to her very much. I told my doctor that if it was a girl I was going to name her Merrie."

At Ohio State University, where Miss Christmas is a graduate student in dance, she says people spot her name in the phone book and call.

"Kids will call up and tell me to have a happy New Year," she said.

Some people think her name is nice, she said. Others "manage to keep a straight face and not say anything. A few will say, 'Well, I guess you've heard enough jokes about your name.'"

Woman Left Legless In Smuggler's Car Wreck

BRAWLEY, Calif. (AP) — A young Mexican woman who came to the United States with hopes of earning money to help her family saw those dreams dashed when a smuggler's car crashed, leaving her a double amputee.

Benita Rivera Hernandez, 22, "paid a heck of a price to get here," said Dr. Norman Baron, the surgeon who operated on her at Pioneers Memorial Hospital in this desert town about 120 miles east of San Diego.

"It's a very tragic situation. If she was an American citizen, all sorts of help would be available... Because she's an illegal alien, there's absolutely nothing will aid her," Baron said.

"She's so pleasant, so spunky," Baron said. "I'd hate to see her go down the drain."

Miss Rivera was one of seven passengers in the car Nov. 29 when it was spotted by the U.S. Border Patrol on a desert highway between Salton City and Salton Sea beach. The driver tried to outrun the agents and crashed.

Four people were killed, one is hospitalized with possible brain damage and a sixth walked out of a hospital and hitched a ride back to Mexico. The driver is in custody, according to border patrol agents.

The accident destroyed the hopes of Miss Rivera's family, who had given all their money to the smuggler to take her across the border so she could get a job that paid enough to send help back home.

Instead of helping, she lies helpless in a hospital bed with both legs amputated.

Her doctors are trying to raise $3,400 to buy her two artificial legs so that when she goes home to Mexico, she won't be doomed to indigence.

So far, $1,000 has been pledged, according to Dr. Vida Baron, Baron's wife, who is spearheading the fund drive.

"We're afraid if she goes back to Mexico as she is now, she may become a beggar for the rest of her life. If we didn't get the ball rolling so to speak, nobody will," Baron said.

The doctors have provided free treatment for Miss Rivera and arranged for her mother, Erwinda, to visit her from Rancho La Muralla in the Mexican state of Guanajuato.

The Brawley doctors tried to get her into a larger medical center on the coast that would be better equipped to treat her, but "she's an illegal and no one wants to touch her with a 10-foot pole."

The doctors believe that if they have the money for the artificial limbs, some medical center would be more disposed to fit them and teach Miss Rivera how to use them.

Baron said that Pioneers Memorial Hospital often treats illegal aliens who get hurt while in this country. Usually, he said, the hospital doesn't get paid.

"We get a fair amount of this, but the hospital is so small and we have little resources," he said. "But we have an obligation. When this woman came into the hospital, we were obligated to give her care. She would have died if we hadn't done something. You can't turn away someone like that."

Miss Rivera has been processed as an illegal alien and was given 90 days to leave the country voluntarily, said Don Davis, a border patrol agent in El Centro.

"She is under doctor's release and if she isn't able to leave in 90 days, she can get an extension," he said. No attempt is being made to deport her, although that could happen in the future if she was released from the hospital and didn't leave the country, he said.

Putting Down Tennessee Roots

NORRIS, Tenn. (AP) — Author Alex Haley, seeking to put down roots while writing a book about Appalachia, has begun building a home in the mountains of northeast Tennessee.

Haley, who won a Pulitzer Prize for "Roots," a book about his African ancestry, is building a wood-and-stone retreat overlooking Buffalo Creek near Norris.

Haley said he hopes to have the home finished in April and plans to live there three or four months each year.

Haley said he hasn't decided on a name or plot for his book about Appalachia, but said it will include "the trees, the people, their music and their past in the woods of Tennessee."

Haley grew up in Henning, a west Tennessee town of about 700 people.

N.C. Building Activity Down And Prices Rise

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The average construction cost for a single-family home increased by 14.7 percent in September of this year over September 1981, state officials said.

State Labor Commissioner John Brooks also said on Monday that building activity in North Carolina's largest cities fell 16.7 percent during the first three quarters of 1982 compared to the same period last year.

Total units reported for the nine months were 25,517, compared to 30,633 for the same nine months in 1981.

Authorizations for nonresidential construction increased 13.2 percent, from 2,904 to 3,287 units. But the other three types of building in the state's 44 cities of more than 10,000 population were well below 1981 totals through September, Brooks said.

Permits for single-family homes dropped 11.1 percent to 4,491, multi-family units decreased 17.6 percent to 4,413 and permits for additions and alterations fell 23.1 percent to 13,326.

For the month of September, construction authorized in the cities decreased 14.1 percent compared to September 1981 to 2,994 units. Value dropped 13.4 percent to $91,769,695.

Compared to August, September building activity declined 9.1 percent and value fell 13.7 percent.

Raleigh, for the fifth time this year, led individual cities in September in payments for construction with $22,823,060, followed by Charlotte with $12,785,622.

Winston-Salem with $5,189,113, Greenville with $5,042,119 and Lumberton with $4,177,780.

Brooks said permits for single-family homes and nonresidential buildings increased across the state in September, but multi-family units and additions declined from the year before.

The average construction cost for a single-family home increased in from $38,915 in September 1981 to $44,633 this past September. The average was up 12.2 percent from August 1982.

Permits for single-family homes rose 7.9 percent to 562 in September 1982. Value, at $25,083,680, increased 23.7 percent.

Long Contract For Composer

BOSTON (AP) — Composer John Williams says he has made a long-term commitment to the Boston Pops Orchestra, signing a contract that will retain him as conductor through 1987.

"It seems appropriate that after three happy years of getting to know this great orchestra, and their getting to know me, that we look at this as a long-term commitment," Williams said Monday.

Williams, who joined the Pops in January 1980 succeeding the late Arthur Fiedler, has composed music for more than 65 motion pictures, including "Star Wars," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "E.T."

The Forecast For Wednesday, December 22

National Weather Service
 NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

Fronts: Cold ☐ Warm ☐ Occluded ☐ Stationary ☐

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain Wednesday for most of the Pacific coast states. Snow is predicted for the northern Rockies and the Dakotas. Mild weather is in store for most of the southern tier and eastern states. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
 Ole man winter arrives officially at 11:39 tonight amid some relatively mild temperatures in most of North Carolina.

Some morning cloudiness covered the northeast portion of the state early today as a weak area of low pressure moves eastward and offshore. High pressure moved in today to dominate our weather with mostly sunny conditions with temperatures fairly similar to those of Monday.

The center of the high pressure will drift offshore on Wednesday to allow a southerly flow of slightly milder air to overspread the region. Thus, a bit more moisture will bring some increase in cloudiness over the western half of the state during Wednesday.

Temperatures Wednesday afternoon will run a few degrees milder than today, reaching into the upper 40s and 50s Wednesday afternoon. As a storm system tracks eastward across the mid-portion of the nation, there will be a chance of showers over the west Wednesday night and across the state on Thursday.

It looks as though it will turn fair again by the end of the week with continued mild temperatures.

Along the coast, a small craft advisory remains in effect as west winds become more northwest and increase somewhat. Also, rough seas continue from a large storm system that has been over the north Atlantic for many days.

A weak area of low pressure has been moving east across the state overnight and this did produce some cloudiness at times mainly across the northern half of the state.

There was some continuing snow flurries in the northern mountains and some patchy light rain possibly mixed with some brief snow across the northern Piedmont and into the northern coastal plain early today. Otherwise it was mostly clear around the state during the night. Sunshine was rather plentiful Monday, although clouds were on the increase in advance of the weak area of low pressure as it approached from the northwest late Monday.

Temperature-wise, Monday was fairly nice. Afternoon readings ranged mostly in the 40s across the mountains except for the upper 20s to mid 30s in the higher elevations. East of the mountains, upper 40s to low 50s were commonplace. The higher value was again a 54 at the Wilmington weather office.

Early morning temperatures were fairly uniformly in the low and mid 30s across a large portion of the state.

Slight Impact In Sub Burials

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An environmental impact statement by the U.S. Navy concludes that the burial of nuclear submarines at sea would have "negligible" environmental impact and would cost at least $2 million per sub less than land disposal methods.

Navy officials are studying alternatives for permanent disposal of 100 vessels over the next 20 to 30 years at the rate of two or three a year. Three areas are being studied as potential ocean disposal sites, two of which are about 200 miles off the North Carolina coast.

If a draft environmental impact statement released Monday, the Navy said ocean disposal of decommissioned, defueled subs would cost $5.2 million apiece, while the cost for land disposal of each vessel would be $7.2 million to $13.3 million.

"It may be concluded that since both options would have negligible environmental impact, either option could be chosen," the statement said.

"However, the only distinct advantage of choosing one option over the other would be the relatively lower cost of the sea disposal option."

Edward W. Johnson, a spokesman for the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations in Washington, D.C., said Monday that a final decision on the disposal method will not be made until next year.

If ocean disposal is selected, he said, federal permits and additional study will be required.

The Navy has scheduled hearings in North Carolina, South Carolina, Washington state and California to receive public comment on the draft impact statement. After reviewing the comments, a final impact statement will be released next summer and a notice of decision filed.

The North Carolina hearing is scheduled for Feb. 14 at 9 a.m. in the state Department of Transportation building in Raleigh.

N. C. Publisher Fatally Stricken

HUDSON, N.C. (AP) — Clenard James Fox, publisher of the Granite Falls Press for 16 years, died of a heart attack at his Hudson home following a heart attack.

Fox, who was 54, died Saturday.

Also co-owner of the weekly newspaper, Fox was a member of the National Newspaper Association and the N.C. Press Association. He also was a former president of the Granite Falls Optimist Club and was a member of the Caldwell County Chamber of Commerce.

The Caldwell County native had served in both the Navy and Air Force.

Funeral services were scheduled for 2 p.m. today at Sunrise Baptist Church, Hudson, where Fox attended.

Survivors include his wife, Frances, and a son, Maurice Fox.

Stock And Market Reports

Hogs
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The trend on the North Carolina hog market today was $1 lower. Kingston closed, Clinton, Elizabethtown, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourn, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson 54.50, Wilson 54.75, Salisbury 55.00, Rowland unreported. Sows: all weights 500 pounds up; Wilson 46.00, Fayetteville closed, Whiteville unreported, Wallace 47.00, Spivey's Corner 46.00, Rowland 46.00, Durham 45.00.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Final weighted average of 41.37 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a seasonally moderate demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,530,000, compared to 1,760,000 last Tuesday.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina hen market was steady. Supplies fully adequate. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 18 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, drawing some support from a favorable report on inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 6.34 to 1,010.85 by noon.

Advances and declines ran about even in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Labor Department reported this morning that the consumer price index rose just 0.1 percent in November, putting prices 4.6 percent above where they stood a year earlier.

Otherwise, the economic news wasn't so upbeat. In a preliminary estimate, government officials said the nation's output of goods and services apparently will show a decline of 2.2 percent in the fourth quarter, after adjustment for inflation.

But the figure for the July-September quarter was revised upward by the Commerce Department from no growth to an increase of 0.7 percent.

The NYSE's composite index rose .20 to 78.74. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .08 at 326.67.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 31.88 million shares at noontime, against 27.84 million at the same point Monday.

County Board... Unemployment Is Felt In West

After hearing the proposals, commissioners asked the two superintendents to talk with members of their school boards and return as soon as possible with recommendations on which consultant would do the best job on the study.

In other business Monday, Robert Dunn, director of the Pitt County Development Commission, outlined a planned national advertising campaign for the Gold Leaf Urban Area, which includes Wayne, Lenoir, Greene, Wilson, Nash, Edgecombe, Halifax and Pitt counties.

He said the Gold Leaf area, which ranks fourth among nine metropolitan areas in the state, plans to spend $20,000 in a campaign to promote the region's assets in hopes of attracting industries.

Pitt's share of the ad money, Dunn said, amounts to $3,580, which will come from development commission funds.

Commissioners endorsed efforts by the Greenville Foundation to establish a trust fund to help support Sheppard Memorial Library; adopted a resolution supporting participation by local area farmers in the 1982 Agricultural Census to be conducted by the U.S. Commerce Department's Census Bureau, and approved a request by Pitt County Tax Collector Bill Smith that his office remain open on Dec. 31, normally a holiday, to give property owners a final opportunity to pay their taxes before year-end.

Commissioners also held a joint public hearing with the Greenville City Council on whether or not to dissolve the Tar River Port Commission.

After no one appeared at the hearing to voice any opinion, the City Council voted to dissolve the port body. County commissioners are expected to take similar action at their next meeting, then ask Pitt's representatives in the General Assembly to introduce legislation that will do away with the port commission and divide its assets between the city and county governments.

Jerry Lewis In Heart Surgery

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comic actor Jerry Lewis underwent emergency open heart surgery in a Las Vegas hospital early today and his condition was "unstable," a hospital spokeswoman said.

Joe Stabile, manager for the 56-year-old entertainer, said a double-bypass operation was performed after tests found blockage in arteries feeding the heart.

Hospital spokeswoman Barbara Scarantino said Lewis has "good chances" of recovery.

Stabile said famed heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey of Houston was coming to Las Vegas to consult with doctors in the case. DeBakey has long been involved with Lewis in the comedian's Muscular Dystrophy telethons.

Lewis, who is known to work 20 hours a day on his film projects and travels extensively for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, had been "going heavy at it," according to Stabile.

"He had just returned from Germany where he was doing a tour to publicize his new film 'Smorgasbord,' and was working very hard on that project," Stabile said.

HOLIDAY PROGRAM

The Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Ayden, will present a Christmas program Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. The youth are in charge of the service.

MASONIC NOTICE

Queen of the South Lodge No. 77 of Ayden will have a communication Thursday at 8 p.m. All Master Masons are invited to attend.

Willie Stallworth, master. Jessie Lee Wilson, secretary.

ELECTED

CHARLOTTE — Bill Tripp of Hollyridge Farms, Greenville, was named vice president of the North Carolina Thoroughbred Breeders at its annual meeting here on Dec. 11.

The comedy, written, directed and featuring Lewis, is scheduled for release in May.

Stabile said Lewis was at home Monday when he experienced chest pains.

"It seemed minimal, but we took him to the hospital and put him through a lot of tests. He just slowly got worse," Stabile said.

Lewis was admitted to the Desert Springs Hospital emergency room Monday and a test known as a heart catheterization was performed at about 4:30 a.m. today.

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Permanent layoffs caused by the recession and declining tourism in western North Carolina have state employment officials worried.

The mountain counties, unlike North Carolina's more urbanized areas, traditionally have had high jobless rates. "But because of permanent layoffs caused by the recession, the normal increase in employment you'd look for at the start of the tourist season didn't happen in some counties this spring," said H. Lee Ausley, a labor market analyst with the N.C. Employment Security Commission.

In Ashe County, residents say some of the plants have laid off all but the 25- and 30-year employees. And even part-time jobs are scarce because they're grabbed up by laid-off full-time workers.

"Some of the people who were laid off in 1980 are still looking for work," said Sharon Hart, a claims supervisor at the Jefferson employment office.

When Heritage Quilts Inc. folded last spring, it left about 350 employees out of work in Swain County and about 200 in neighboring Jackson County. Swain, with a population of 10,360, was left with only four small factories operating in the county.

"If one plant closes, that'll shoot the rate sky high," said Ausley.

The latest unemployment figures showed six of the state's eight counties with rates higher than 15 percent in October were in the west, including Ashe County, with the highest rate of 21.5 percent.

In the fiscal year ending in October, nearly 3,400 or about 4 percent of the state's apparel industry jobs were eliminated. Also, 3,200 or 3.8 percent of the state's furniture workers lost jobs.

Many of the western counties fall back on tourism each summer. The World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn., drew a record number of tourists to the mountains, but it didn't provide relief for some counties, said an ESC spokeswoman.

"We were looking forward to this last spring, hoping things would improve at the start of tourist season," said ESC interviewer Virginia Gribble, in Bry seven team records fell during the onslaught that produced 1,102 total yards in offense. Consider some of the numbers: •Fouts, with 435 yards through the air, became the first NFL quarterback to pass for more than 400 yards in two consecutive games.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Dan Fouts says the San Diego Chargers spent the last 11 months doing a slow burn after a bitter loss to Cincinnati in the "Ice Bowl."

41-37 shootout won by the Chargers. •San Diego wide receiver Wes Chandler broke Lance Alworth's club record with 260 yards in receptions and running back James Brooks scored three touchdowns and recorded his first 100-yard rushing day.

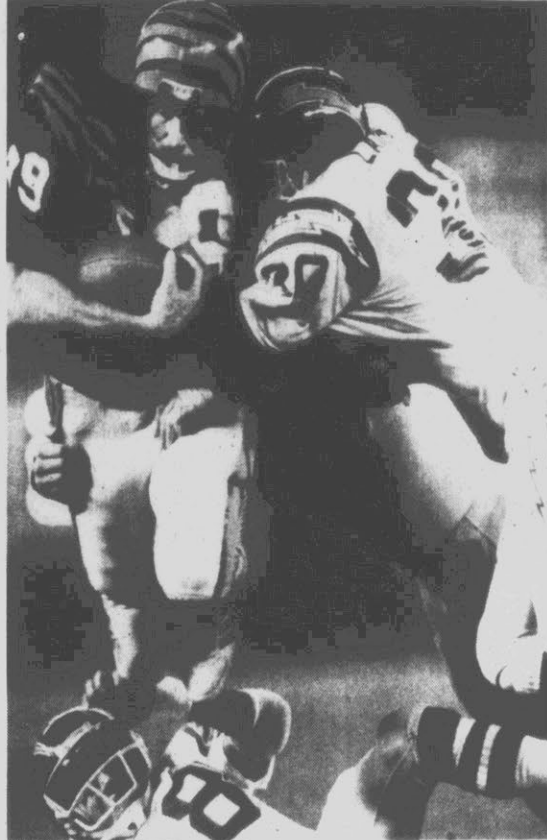

season, by a 40-17 score during the regular season and 27-7 in the American Conference championship at Cincinnati, when the wind-chill factor skidded to 59 degrees below zero. This time, Fouts and the Chargers were ready for the strategy. "They blitzed real effectively to begin the game, but then we hurt them real badly twice in a row," said Fouts, who completed a modest 11 of 21 passes in the first half for 166 yards. He finished 25 of 40 as the Chargers upped their record to 5-2 with their fourth victory in a row. Cincinnati, now 5-2, had a four-game winning streak snapped. Trailing 24-14 with 1:39 remaining in the second quarter, the Chargers gave a glimpse of what was to come in the second half.

After Fouts put San Diego in range with gains of 27, 15 and 14 yards during a four-play drive, Rolf Benirschke booted a 43-yard field goal with no time remaining to trim the Bengal lead to seven points. "That was a big lift," said Fouts. But the biggest lift came when the Chargers erupted for 16 points in the first five minutes of the third quarter. An 82-yard drive, capped by Chuck Muncie's 1-yard run, tied the game at 24-24. Twenty two seconds later, defensive end Gary "Big Hands" Johnson sacked Cincinnati quarterback Ken Anderson for a safety. Twelve seconds later, Fouts hit Chandler on a 38-yard scoring play, increasing the lead to 33-24. "If there was a turning point in the game, it was probably the safety," said Gregg Brooks, who finished with 105 yards on 12 carries, had TD runs covering 17, 48 and one yard. Anderson, who had 257 yards passing at halftime on 27 of 35 attempts, ended up with 416 yards on 40 of 56 attempts.

Carter Still In The Running

RALEIGH (AP) — Holy Cross football coach Rick Carter has not ruled out the head coaching job at N.C. State despite statements by Holy Cross officials that Carter still is under contract to the school, a Raleigh newspaper reports.

was not at his West Boylston, Mass., home. "Any clearance would have to come from Father Brooks," Perry said.

Meanwhile, University of Tennessee-Chattanooga coach Bill Oliver may be in the running for the Wolfpack post again after Miami Dolphins assistant Wally English was named head coach at Tulane Monday. Oliver had been reported to be one of the top candidates for the Tulane job. Carter met Monday with Holy Cross president, the Rev. John E. Brooks and Ron Perry, Holy Cross athletic director. The Raleigh Times reported that Carter was expected to ask that he be released from his contract, while the Worcester, Mass., Telegram said Brooks told Carter he expected him to fulfill the contract.

"I really don't know what the outcome will be," Perry said. "The question here is one of contract...I don't think he can become coach at N.C. State unless he gets a release from his contract here." Carter became a leading candidate after Tulsa coach John Cooper rejected an offer last week. Furman coach Dick Sheridan and Boise State coach John Criner also removed themselves from consideration. The position has been vacant since Dec. 1, when Kiffin resigned under pressure. Carter directed this year's Holy Cross team to an 8-3 record, giving him an overall coaching record of 116-47-5 at four schools. Others reportedly interested include Missouri assistant Jim Donnan, and Florida State assistants Chuck Amato and Jack Stanton.

Rose also had five thirds: Tom Michaelson at 112, Hardy Jones at 132, Frank Coney at 167, Gregg Davis at 185, and Marvin Fleming at 195. Amos Edwards at 138 took a fourth place finish. Rose returns to action on January 4 at home against Kingston.

Parker Joins Spartan Staff

Norm Parker, for the past three years defensive coordinator at East Carolina, has accepted a position with the new coaching staff of Michigan State University, it was announced yesterday afternoon. The Michigan State University Sports Information Office said that Parker would join the new staff being assembled by new Spartan coach George Perlas. Parker will serve as linebacker coach for MSU. Parker was one of three new assistants named by MSU yesterday afternoon after Perlas took over for the fired Muddy Waters last month. Parker's defense finished 48th this year in NCAA Division I overall this year, and in a tie for 32nd in rushing defense. He also coached All-America defensive end Jody Schulz for two years, and honorable mention Clint Harris for three years. ECU coach Ed Emory said he would begin interviews this morning to seek a replacement for Parker in the defensive coordinator post. Parker, a graduate of Eastern Michigan University, holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from that school. From 1965-67, he served as head football coach at Ypsilanti St. Johns High School in Michigan, then served in 1968 as offensive line coach at his alma mater. In 1969, he became receiver coach at Wake Forest University, returning to the north in 1969 where he became defensive line coach at the University of Minnesota. He then moved to Illinois in 1977 as defensive end coach. Parker and his wife Linda, have five children.

Heels Missing From New Poll

By The Associated Press Coach Dean Smith said his defending national champion North Carolina basketball team would miss James Worthy and Jimmy Black this season. That became evident when the Tar Heels dropped their first two games of the season and were forced into triple overtime before winning their first game. Ranked No. 1 in the final regular-season poll last season and pegged No. 3 in this season's preseason ratings, North Carolina dropped from the Associated Press' Top Twenty Monday. With Worthy, the team's leading scorer and No. 2 rebounder, jumping to the Los Angeles Lakers after his junior season, and point guard Black graduating, North Carolina steadily dropped in the rankings. The Tar Heels were No. 17 last week, but lost to Tulsa 84-74 in the Oil Capital Classic before beating Pan American 106-50 to make their record 4-3.

now 7-0 after a victory over Kansas, dropped a notch to fourth place with 920 points. Indiana, tied for fifth place last week with Georgetown, took over sole possession of that spot after edging Kansas State. The 7-0 Hoosiers, who host Kentucky Wednesday night, landed 857 points. Missouri, St. John's, Alabama and Tennessee — all unbeaten — held the sixth through ninth spots. Each moved up two notches, while Iowa dropped from No. 7 to 10th. Georgetown, the NCAA runner-up last season, was upset by American University last week to drop to a 6-2 record. The Hoyas now stand No. 11. Others in the Second Ten, in order, are Arkansas, Syracuse, Louisville, North Carolina State, West Virginia, Nevada-Las Vegas, Villanova, Houston and newcomer Tulsa.

Rogers Sparks Deacs To Win

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Alvis Rogers scored 22 points and Danny Young added 20 as Wake Forest raced past Drexel 89-60 in a non-conference college basketball game Monday night. The Deacons jumped to a 15-0 lead, using a variety of defenses to force eight turnovers in the first eight minutes. In the second half, Rogers and Young helped Wake Forest extend its lead as high as 32 points. The Drexel, 5-3, didn't arrive in Winston-Salem until 4 p.m. and appeared sluggish and tired. They were led by Charles Hickman with 13 points.

Wake Forest, 5-0, was coming off a 10-day exam break. Prior to the game, Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy announced that freshman forward Kenny Green had left the squad for personal reasons. Tacy would not elaborate. "I hope an early solution can be found to Kenny Green's problems and that he will be able to rejoin the team as soon as possible," said Tacy.

The Tar Heels were hurt by preseason injuries and are still searching for the right chemistry this season. "But we'll continue to go with the small lineup for four minutes at the start of every game," Smith says, "until one of the young post players improves enough defensively to earn the honor of starting." Meanwhile, Virginia, which shared the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season crown last season with North Carolina, kept a strong hold on the No. 1 spot by landing 49 of the 54 first-place votes for 1,075 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Cavaliers, No. 1 in the preseason poll, boosted their record to 8-0 by winning the Sunbury Ball tournament in Tokyo, beating then-No. 14 Houston and Utah. Ralph Sampson, the Cavaliers' 7-foot-4 center, missed the Houston game because of the flu but came back with a strong effort against Utah. Kentucky held onto the No. 2 spot by attracting five first-place votes for 1,010 points. Victories over Duquesne and Tulane in their own invitational tourney during the weekend increased the Wildcats' record to 7-0. UCLA, 5-0, climbed one notch to No. 3 with 932 points by beating previously unbeaten Iowa. Memphis State,

Chargers May Have Found Themselves

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey says his Chargers found the route he wants them to take their last two games. Now, Murphrey just hopes they don't get sidetracked.

After losing three of their first four games, the Chargers have come on to win their last two to even their record at 3-3. "I think the last two games we've started in the direction I want them to go. We've played with patience and we have run what I would consider a disciplined offense," Murphrey said. "That's made a big difference."

Murphrey was at a loss to explain his squad's sudden turn-around. "It's hard to say. I think we had trouble getting together early," Murphrey said. "Some of them didn't see things my way but I think I got through to them."

"I think," he said, "this team naturally likes to run and be undisciplined and be free spirits on the court. That is not the way I want to play. I believe they're going to do it my way."

Murphrey's way is the way of patience and passing, something he admits A-G did not give him last year. "The main thing I want," Murphrey said, "is the group to play together and play hard. That's what I want in a nutshell."

And that is what he has gotten — at least in the last two games. A-G defeated North Lenoir, 64-60, in two overtimes and whipped Havelock, 60-53, to push its record to 5-0.

"I don't think we could have played better," he said. "I just hope it is a starting point for us."

The Chargers, who take this week off before returning to action against North Lenoir next Tuesday in the Tri-County Tournament, are led in scoring by Thomas Anderson, who has moved from forward to center, and forward Tyrone Gay.

Anderson (6-1, senior) is averaging 20.0 a game. Gay (6-0, senior) is scoring at a 12.5 clip.

Joining Anderson and Gay as returning starters on this season's team is guard Calvin Peterson (5-11, junior). Peterson is averaging 11.3 points a game. Also starting for A-G are forward Mike Woods (5-11, junior 3.3 ppg.) and guard Jeff Dixon (5-11, senior, 6.5 ppg.).

Gone from this year's team are all-conference guard Jesse Anderson and center Jonathon Woods.

The Chargers biggest problem this year is height. They do not have any. Their tallest player is 6-3 reserve Billy Wiggins, a junior. Three other reserves — Lucian Anderson, Marvin Smith and Greg Connor — are all 6-2.

Connor is a senior, Smith a freshman and Anderson a sophomore.

Filling out the A-G roster are guards Melvin Peterson (5-10, junior) and Rob Congleton (5-10, junior) and forward Gerald Newton (6-0, junior).

"We do lack size. That's a big drawback. But, except for our opener against Roanoke we haven't been beat that bad on the boards. We have good quickness — not great quickness, but good quickness," Murphrey said.

"That has helped us force turnovers," he said. "and, therefore, there are not as many rebounds to be had. It's definitely a problem. Even when we play well, it's tough. There won't be an easy victory for us but I think we can accept that."

Murphrey pointed to two factors that he believes will help the Chargers win this season: free throw shooting and ballhandling. A-G is hitting about 70% at the line, led by Dixon, who is has hit 21 of 24 FTs.

"I believe this may be the best free throw shooting team

I've ever had," he said. "And we're getting a lot of free throws. The reason is that I think we are passing the ball more."

"If you come down and put it up after the first or second pass you are not going to get fouled too often," he said. "But, if you pass it around for a good percentage shot you're more likely to get fouled."

And A-G's better foul shooters are also good ballhandlers. "We can put five good ballhandlers and five good free throw shooters on the floor," he said. "Those two things will win you some games. If we can stay close, we've got a chance to win."

"Last year, we lost a lot of close games. But this year I think we're going to win a lot of those games."

A-G will need to if the Chargers hope to be among the top four teams in the Eastern Carolina Conference and earn a berth in the districts. Murphrey picked North Pitt as his choice in the ECC but added that Farmville Central was nearly as good. "I feel like North Pitt has got the best team," he said. "They've got three players back and, more importantly, they've been through the wars."

"Farmville Central may have the second best team and possibly the best team in the league," he said. "But, I'm rating North Pitt ahead of them because they're tournament-tough."

Murphrey tabbed SouthWest Edgecombe for third, but was quick to add that he felt his team had a shot at third — or even higher. "Our goal is to finish in the top four," Murphrey said. "We'd like to win it, but realistically we'd like to finish in the top three or four. Right now North Pitt and Farmville (are the best), but I feel we can play with those ballclubs."

Minnesota Romps By Marquette, UCLA, Missouri, Alabama Win

By The Associated Press
Seven-footer Randy Breuer was a big problem for the Marquette Warriors, but he wasn't the only problem.

"They came in thinking about Breuer," said Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher, "then some other people took over." Breuer did wind up scoring 23 points for Minnesota, but four other players also hit double figures as the Gophers buried the Warriors 100-66 in college basketball Monday night. It was the worst defeat for Marquette since 1964, when the Warriors were beaten 100-63 by Wichita State.

"Basketball games can get away from you," said Dutcher, "and this one got away from Marquette."

The reason it did was Minnesota's height advantage. "They (Marquette) didn't have anybody who could compete with us inside," Breuer said. "When you live by the jump shot and can't get it, it hurts you."

"Five or 50, what's the difference? We got our butts kicked," said Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds.

"Breuer is really a great player. I think he's the most consistent player in the country," said Raymonds. "He just doesn't get the publicity of some of the name centers."

The Gophers decided the game in the first half, building a 25-point lead behind steals and their inside game. The smaller Warriors couldn't stay with Minnesota in either half.

Freshman guard Marc Wilson, who scored 16 points, led the Gophers' first-half charge, scoring 12 points as Minnesota outscored the Warriors 17-2 at one point. The Gophers used that to build a 19-point lead midway through the first period. The Big Ten team led 45-32 at the half.

Also in double figures for Minnesota were Tommy Davis and Jim Petersen with 14 points each, and Zebedee Howell with 10. Terrell Schlunt led Marquette with 13 points.

In action involving the nation's Top Twenty, third-ranked UCLA walloped Louisiana State 82-68, No. 6 Missouri whipped Tennessee-Martin 71-58 and No. 8 Alabama trimmed Texas Southern 88-58.

Kenny Fields equaled his career high with 27 points to lead UCLA to a relatively easy victory over Louisiana State. The Bruins were sluggish in the early going but picked up steam at the start of the second half and never lost the lead.

The Bruins ran off a 17-4 spurt opening the second half, moving ahead 55-43. The closest LSU came afterward was 62-55 with seven minutes to play.

"LSU is a very physical club and their strength gave us a lot of problems in the first half," said UCLA Coach Larry Farmer. "They are more of a one-on-one team than anyone we've faced and they were able to go to the post on us for a lot of layups."

"It just seemed like LSU wanted the game more than we did in the first half. I reminded the players at halftime that LSU was not impressed with our victory over Iowa (73-66 on Saturday), and that we would have to work harder if we expected to win. We needed Kenny Fields' scoring and rebounding (a game-high 14 rebounds)."

Steve Stipanovich scored 25 points to lead four Missouri players in double figures and spark the Tigers over a stubborn Tennessee-Martin team.

Missouri led at halftime 38-33. Four field goals in the first eight minutes of the second half by the Pacers' Gus Rudolph closed Missouri's lead to 48-47 with 12:00 left.

But Missouri kept hitting clutch baskets and did not allow the visitors to get closer than three points thereafter. Leading 56-53 with 4:35 remaining, Missouri scored 11 of the next 14 points to post a 67-56 lead with 1:29 remaining.

"I thought they were very well coached and had excellent personnel," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart.

Year Hasn't Started As Expected For Ayden-Grifton's Cage Girls

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Ayden-Grifton has won just two of six games so far and coach Kathy Frazier was expecting better. Frazier — and many others — felt '82 could be the Lady Chargers' year.

Frazier has not given up her goal, only down-graded it a bit.

"I was definitely surprised (over our start)," Frazier said. "I expected we would do a little better because of what we had returning. Maybe I expected too much."

The Lady Chargers return three starters from a team that was 11-14 and stunned Charles B. Aycock in the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament semifinals and a district berth.

Gone from that team are Lisa Ward, who graduated, and Angela Griffin, who quit last week.

Heading the list of returnees is 6-0 junior center Cora Faison, who led A-G in scoring (17.1) and rebounds (12.2) last season and was selected all-conference. Back also as starters are forward Danita McCotter (5-9, junior) and guard Linda Brown (5-7, senior).

Completing the A-G starting lineup are 5-8 sophomore forward Cynthia Hicks and 5-5 freshman guard Stelena Roundtree.

Top reserves are guard Pat Chamberlain (5-3, senior) and forwards Tracie Moore (5-7, junior) and Josie Braxton (5-9, sophomore).

Also on the team are sophomores Tonya Malone (5-4) and Joyce Artis (5-4) along with freshman Belinda Dixon (5-6) and Stephanie Mort (5-10).

A-G opened the year defeating Roanoke but then managed just one victory in its next five games. The Lady Chargers return to action on December 28 in the Tri-County Holiday Tournament at North Lenoir.

"We started out playing real well and then we had some injuries," Frazier said. "That's hurt us."

Faison has missed the better parts of two games this year. Without Faison, who leads A-G in scoring (14.2) this year, A-G is not the same.

Injuries aside, however, Frazier said defense has been her team's problem main problem.

"I think we're too inconsistent on defense right now," she said. "It is not that they can't play it, but they're inconsistent."

A-G's rebounding has also been inconsistent. "We had one quarter where we had eleven rebounds and then in the second quarter we had three," Frazier said.

Offensively, Frazier said the Lady Chargers started well but not sustained the effort.

"I was very pleased when we played Roanoke," Frazier said. "When we played that game, though, I think we said that, 'Hey, this is our year.' Now, I think they've come down to the realization it's going to take some hard work."

Especially if A-G hopes to challenge for the ECC title.

Frazier picked defending ECC and state champ SouthWest Edgecombe as the team to beat, but felt the Lady Cougars would not run away with the championship as they have done in the past.

Said Frazier: "I think SouthWest is the team to beat simply because they haven't been beaten. However, I think North Pitt and C.B. Aycock will have good teams."

"I think we can finish in the top four, possibly higher, if mine keep working to improve."

North Carolina State faces its toughest challenge of the season when the 15th-ranked Wolfpack goes against No. 14 Louisville tonight, while North Carolina will try to heal its wounded pride against Ten-nesse-Chattanooga.

In the Cardinals, N.C. State will be taking on a team that still has several players from its 1980 squad that captured the NCAA title. Louisville, 7-1, is led by the McCray brothers — 6-foot-7 Rodney and 6-foot-8

Scotter — who are among the Metro Conference leaders in rebounding and blocked shots.
Louisville, 7-1 recently won the Great Alaskan Shootout. Its only loss has come at the hands of Purdue.

State's unbeaten club will counter with a quick backcourt led by senior guards Dereck Whittenburg and Sidney Lowe.

The game is set for 8 p.m. at Freedom Hall in Louisville. Meanwhile, North Carolina will try to begin its climb back into the top 20 with a victory over a Moccasin team that defeated N.C. State in last year's NCAA playoffs.

The Tar Heels are 4-3 after splitting a pair of games in the Oil Capital Classic in Tulsa last week. The losses have dropped UNC from the Associated Press top 20 rankings for the first time in quite a while.

But UT-Chattanooga coach Murray Arnold says he is still very impressed with this year's UNC club.
"You want a cliché, I'll give you one. They are absolutely the finest basketball team with three losses anywhere in the universe," he said.

In the only action involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams Monday night, Wake Forest jumped off to a 15-0 lead and coasted home with an 89-60 victory over Drexel.

Alvis Rogers scored 22 points and Danny Young added 20 to lead the Demon Deacons to their fifth consecutive win of the season.

CHICOD — Grifton and Chicod split a pair of junior high school games yesterday.

Grifton took a 31-14 victory in the boys game. Grifton was led by Todd Sparrow with 12 points, while Jerome Carter had five to pace Chicod. Chicod is now 0-4 while Grifton is 2-1.

In the girls' game, Chicod won, 17-9. Teresa Stancill led Chicod with nine points, while no one had more than two points for Grifton. Chicod is now 3-1 while Grifton is 1-2.

Consider Tenure Law Changes

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
School teachers and superintendents disagreed Monday about the state's tenure law, pushing a legislative panel to consider making few substantial changes in the statute.

The Teacher Tenure Law Study Committee voted to consider technical changes suggested by the North Carolina Bar Association and N.C. Council of School Board Attorneys to clarify provisions of the law.

Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, recommended the panel consider technical rather than substantial changes after hearing differing views on the law by teachers and superintendents.

Representatives of teachers and principals argued that the tenure law should be changed little because it is fair to everyone involved. Superintendents argued, however, that major revisions in the law could save the state time and money.

A teacher earns career status, or tenure, after serving at least three consecutive years in North Carolina schools. Tenure means the teacher can be dismissed only under one of 14 circumstances, including neglect of duties, conviction of a felony or insubordination.

The Fair Employment and Dismissal Act of 1971 — the tenure law — guarantees teachers and principals a series of hearings and reviews before they can be dismissed.

Gov. Jim Hunt wants to keep the intent and purpose of the law alive, spokesman Larry Poore told the legislative panel.

"The procedures in the Fair Employment and Dismissal Act are weighted heavily on evaluation," said Loretta Martin, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators. "Those who claim that it is impossible to terminate an incompetent teacher are admitting that they lack competence in administering an evaluation system."

Joe Bost, past president of the N.C. Principals-Assistant Principals Association, agreed that incompetent teachers can be dismissed under the existing law "with the proper backing of the local board of education and superintendent."

But he said some principals lack the support of local administrators. Bost cited cases where principals have paid more than $4,000 to hire their own attorneys when trying to dismiss a teacher.

But W.O. Fields, Wilson County superintendent and spokesman for the superintendents of the Association of School Administrators, said the law "in its present form has not served the best interests of public education and has placed a cumbersome, burdensome requirement on local school personnel."

He recommended eliminating provisions for a dismissal review committee and endorsed a multi-year contract for teachers.

The state School Boards Association has recommended an automatic review of teacher contracts every five years, a move opposed by teachers and principals.

Jim Fuller, a Charlotte attorney who represents the NCAE, said few cases go before the review committee and most of them involve one day for a hearing and about $800 for attorney's fees.

"It would be a tragic mistake for educators, particularly black educators, particularly women educators, to change the tenure act," Fuller said.

Michael Priddy of the supervisors' division of the state Association of School Administrators recommended extending the tenure law to cover assistant principals and non-instructional supervisors, such as those in school system offices.

Require Studies Of Peat Mining

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Peat Methanol Associates must resolve a "number of environmental issues" before they will be allowed to mine peat and convert it to methanol in northeastern North Carolina, a state official says.

"We have determined that, prior to any mining for this project, this permit will be thoroughly reviewed and modified to ensure that the mining does not harm our fisheries, wildlife, parks, water or air," said Joseph Grimsley, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development.

The company wants to build a conversion plant in Washington County and mine about 15,000 acres of peat to fuel the facility.

Grimsley said permits to mine peat in northeastern North Carolina won't be issued until environmental impact of the proposed operation can be assessed.

Grimsley said in a news release Monday that his agency had issued an air quality permit, along with temporary water use and sedimentation control permits to allow excavation and preparation of the plant site beginning Jan. 1.

Permits needed before the plant may begin operating include those for water use, well construction, water discharge and solid waste disposal.

For the peat mining operation, permits for water use, water discharge and a modified mining permit are needed.

First Colony Farms already has a state mining permit for the 15,000 acres of peat lands that will fuel the plant.

Peat Methanol Associates, which will formally request transfer and modification of the existing mining permit, has agreed to submit detailed analyses of the environmental impact of the mine and plant operation, Grimsley said.

"This will include data not only on the water and air impacts, but will also address broader concerns, such as wildlife and transportation impacts," he said.

After the company supplies the material and its permit applications, the state will conduct a public meeting in the Washington County area to explain the proposed project and the review process and hear public reaction.

The state then will conduct its own review, including a formal public hearing, before issuing a ruling.

Speaking of Your Health...

Student May Have 'Sleeping Epilepsy'

I am a teacher at a high school. One of my students is 15 years old. He is a hard worker and is very popular in the class. On three occasions I noticed that suddenly his head begins to nod and he falls asleep. It is almost impossible to arouse him. I pointed this out to his family. They have noticed that he does the same thing at home. They assure me that the doctor who takes care of the family doesn't believe he has any special illness. I am told that he gets enough sleep. Is there any special place where the family can take him to study this unusual situation? — Mr. J.B.R., N.J.
Dear Mr. R.:

Sudden, uncontrollable episodes of sleep suggest that your student may be a victim of a condition known as narcolepsy. This neurological disorder has been seen often and many neurologists consider it to be a form of epilepsy. In fact, narcolepsy is sometimes referred to by the name of "sleep epilepsy."

It is most unusual for simple fatigue to cause someone to fall into a sudden sound sleep. Patients with narcolepsy have absolutely no control over the experience.

I have always pointed out that teachers play a remarkable role as part of the health team. Often by their interest in their students, they recognize signs and symptoms that might be missed at home. It is interesting that some families naively resent a teacher's observation. In fact, parents sometimes become annoyed because they believe their child is being "picked on."

Teachers can very often be persuasive with parents to make them seek guidance in unusual situations. In this instance you are making an enormous contribution to the child's health especially if you can induce the child's parents to seek the advice of their doctor, and especially to consult a neurologist.

Neurological studies, electroencephalographic studies, and a variety of tests are now able to determine if this is indeed the picture of narcolepsy.

So common is this condition that a number of excellent organizations have arisen to study the cause and patterns of narcolepsy. The American Narcolepsy Association is one of them. With proper treatment these attacks of sleepiness can be controlled and the youngster will again be able to function as a productive member of the school community.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... When driving for long stretches, stop the car occasionally, get out and walk around long enough to stimulate the blood circulation. All passengers, too, should do the same thing.

Only in this way can the stagnation of blood be avoided. Blood clots very often happen to people who have a predisposition to clots when their legs and feet are kept in one position for a long period of time.

Says Bergman Became Myth

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Swedish actress Ingrid Bergman was as much a myth as her reclusive countrywoman, Greta Garbo, "whose entire life is surrounded by secrets," Liv Ullmann says.

"Ingrid became a myth exactly because she dared to live. Openly," the Norwegian actress wrote in a tribute to Miss Bergman published Monday in Life magazine.

Miss Ullmann wrote that one of her fondest memories of Miss Bergman, who died Aug. 29, occurred five years ago when they were filming "Autumn Sonata." Miss Bergman played Miss Ullmann's mother in the film.

"I remember Ingrid on her knees washing — no, scrubbing — the floor of her dressing room," Miss Ullmann said. "I love to make it shine around me," Miss Bergman laughingly told her.

U.S. Lists 418 Dangerous Chemical Waste Dumps

WASTE SITES — Environmental Protection Agency head Ann Gorsuch holds a Washington news conference where she released a list of the most dangerous hazardous waste sites in the United States, which makes them eligible for $1.6 billion in cleanup money. The map shows the number of sites in each state. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Love Canal may have grabbed the headlines, but the government's final ranking of the worst chemical dumps in the country lists 115 that are considered more dangerous.

In all, the Environmental Protection Agency on Monday listed 418 dumps as serious threats, making them eligible for cleanup money under the $1.6 billion Superfund program.

New York's Love Canal, which ranked 116th on the list, is the infamous Niagara Falls dump where hundreds of people were forced to move from their homes because of chemical contamination.

The Superfund was passed by Congress in December 1980 to correct decades of improper chemical disposal that left America dotted with thousands of abandoned waste dumps leaking poisons into the environment.

Congress directed the EPA to establish a list of at least 400 top priority sites which will be eligible for money being raised by a tax on the chemical and petroleum industries.

Dumps on the list were located in 45 states and five territories, with the largest concentration occurring in the industrial areas of the East and Midwest. New Jersey had the most dumps, 65, in part because the state has been aggressive in locating abandoned dumps for listing, EPA officials said. Michigan was second with 46 sites followed by Pennsylvania with 30, New York with 26 and Florida, which has a high ground water table, with 25.

A dump in the small Minnesota town of Fridley was ranked as the worst in the country. Officials said it had a score of 74.16 out of a possible 100 on a computer model designed to evaluate relative risks to public health and the environment from each site.

Officials said it ranked high because of severe underground water contamination which was flowing into the Mississippi River near where Minneapolis gets its water supplies.

After Fridley, the other top-rated dumps were in New Castle County, Del.; Butler County, Penn.; Woburn, Mass., and Pittman, N.J.

"We have now defined the nation's first five-year agenda for ending decades of neglect of our hazardous waste problem," said EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch in announcing the list.

While the EPA is not bound to clean up the dumps in the exact order they are listed, the ranking will serve as a guideline in deciding how the money is spent, officials said. Other factors playing a part will be the willingness of private parties to come up with cleanup funds and the states to provide the 10 percent in matching money they must furnish.

The $1.6 billion fund is expected to provide enough money to clean up only about half the sites. The EPA says it plans to get the rest of the money by forcing private companies to pay up. The law allows the government to get triple damages from companies who refuse to cooperate in the cleanup.

EPA officials say companies have contributed about 40 percent of the $310 million spent so far on cleanup activities. But critics have charged that the EPA is being too lenient with the companies, allowing them to pay for minimal surface removal and exempting them from any liability for the much more expensive costs of cleaning contaminated underground aquifers.

But Mrs. Gorsuch said her agency had a good record both in forcing companies to pay and in spending the money appropriated, despite charges by critics that the agency has been slow to spend appropriated funds.

The list of 418 sites replaces an interim list of 160 sites announced earlier.

Only five states do not have any sites on the list. Wisconsin did not nominate any sites, a Georgia site which made the first list has already been cleaned up and Nevada's site did not score high enough to be ranked, officials said. Alaska and Hawaii nominated sites on federal property, which EPA officials say is not covered by the Superfund law.

That claim was disputed by critics, however, who said the Reagan administration had simply made a decision not to use Superfund to deal with some 650 federal sites, many of which are located on military bases.

"Many of the federal sites are worse than the ones that were listed, but they just don't want to force the Defense Department to clean them up," said Hugh Kaufman, a civil service employee at the EPA who has been a frequent critic of the administration.

Brazil Seeking New Loans And Refinancing For Its Older Ones

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — International bankers agreed to begin work today on $4.4 billion in new long-term loans to Brazil and a refinancing package for $15.8 billion in existing loans due next year.

Brazilian officials met Monday with agents of 110 international banks holding 90 percent of the loans to Brazil, the most indebted of the world's developing nations. The Brazilians and the bankers set up committees to study Brazil's proposals and to work out agreements.

"What we expect from you, the commercial banks, is a voluntary commitment to help us meet financial needs in 1983," Carlos Geraldo Langoni, president of the South American nation's central bank, told the bankers at the meeting at the Plaza Hotel.

Brazil is estimated to owe about $90 billion to foreigners, and Langoni said it had been virtually shut out of traditional international borrowing markets after Mexico had trouble meeting its foreign debts last summer.

Langoni asked for four commitments for Brazil from the banks that hold 90 percent of its foreign debt:

—New long-term loans totaling $4.4 billion for 1983.

—Refinancing of $4 billion in loans due in 1983 over eight years, with Brazil making only interest payments for the first 2½ years.

—Short-term loans to help pay off $3 billion in emergency loans negotiated earlier this fall and to refinance $8.8 billion in projected short-term borrowing to finance Brazil's foreign trade. The emergency loans included $1 billion from the U.S. government and $2 billion from commercial banks.

—Reopening lines of credit totaling $3 billion for the foreign branches of Brazilian banks.

He said if the banks agree to the plan by Dec. 31, Brazil could begin receiving the new loans by late January, he said.

Brazil recently received a commitment for a $5.9 billion loan from the International Monetary Fund, and the Bank of International Settlements said Monday it is putting together a loan of between $1 billion and $1.5 billion.

With those commitments and the emergency loans "we have, let's say, a safe cushion, or a liquidity cushion, to go on in the weeks ahead in the same way that we have done in the recent past — meeting our obligations in due time," Langoni told reporters after the meeting.

Bankers leaving the meeting were reluctant to discuss whether they would make the commitments sought, saying they needed time to study Brazil's proposal.

Frederick Seeley, an official at J. Henry Schroeder Bank and Trust in New York, said, "I think most people are prepared to cooperate." He said 12 banks would coordinate the loan arrangements, beginning with meetings today. Langoni said the committees would begin work on the financing plan today.

John Morris, a spokesman at Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, said it is in the interest of the banking community that Brazil's financial needs continue to be met in the marketplace rather than becoming a constant "financial basket case where no re-entry into a formal market is foreseen."

Banks Deep In Foreign Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nine largest banks in the United States have loaned out the equivalent of nearly nine times their combined capital to foreign countries, according to a House Banking Committee study.

The committee released the report Monday as it prepared to examine the issue of overseas lending. The panel's chairman, Rep. Ferdinand J. St Germain, D-R.I., announced that Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan would testify Tuesday on the international involvement of American banks.

"This level of activity raises questions about the decision making within these U.S. institutions and whether prudent banking practices have been followed in this massive overseas lending," St Germain said.

"The degree to which prudent practices were followed should be a major factor in Congress' ultimate decision on whether to participate further in international bailouts of these institutions through the International Monetary Fund."

The committee study showed that the nine largest banks had capital of $22.767 billion as of last June, and their outstanding loans were 897.7 percent of that amount.

Loans to developing and communist bloc countries represented nearly 350 percent of the banks' capital structure, while those to developed nations accounted for almost 500 percent. Loans to offshore banking centers and international organizations accounted for the rest.

The institutions studied were Bank of America, Citibank, Chase Manhattan, Manufacturers Hanover, Morgan Guaranty, Continental Illinois, Chemical Bank, Bankers Trust and First National Bank of Chicago.

St Germain said he was concerned that the high volume of foreign lending raises "the possibility that the U.S. economy was being shortchanged and productive investments in the domestic economy limited."

"Market forces undoubtedly account for some of the increases in foreign loans, but we need to look beyond this conventional answer," he added.

Says UN Often Hinders Peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Nations often does more to hinder world peace than promote it, Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick has said in an interview in U.S. News & World Report.

"The U.N. can't — or doesn't — do much in the way of promoting international peace," Mrs. Kirkpatrick said in an interview in the Dec. 27 edition of the magazine.

"Rather frequently, what goes on in the U.N. actually exacerbates conflicts rather than tending to resolve them. That is certainly true in the case of the Arab-Israeli conflict. It's probably true with regard to southern Africa," she was quoted as saying.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said that most successful negotiations occur outside the United Nations, according to the article.

Delay Restart Of TMI Plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, concerned about reports that the undamaged Three Mile Island reactor might not withstand an earthquake, has delayed action that would lead to a restart of the plant.

The panel decided to postpone a vote on the restart until next year.

Judge Strikes Law On Naming Infants

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A state law requiring a child born in wedlock to be given the father's last name is unconstitutional, a federal judge has ruled.

The decision was a victory for Dean Skylar and Chris Ledbetter of Delray Beach, who combined their surnames to name their infant son Sydney Anthony Skybeter.

The two are married, and Ms. Ledbetter uses her maiden name.

"We didn't feel the state had much to stand on," Skylar said after the ruling last week by U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez. "We didn't feel tradition was worth maintaining in this case. Why should a woman, when she gets married, give up her identity?"

The couple filed suit after the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services refused to accept the name of the infant, who was born June 6 in Boynton Beach.

Their lawyer, James K. Green, said the state was wrong to tell people what names to give their children.

"I've indicated all along it was a pretty stupid statute," Green said. "It's a family decision, but here's Big Brother telling families what to name their kids."

LOST THE BATTLE — Lauren Kalis, a seven-month-old infant shown in this recent photo with her mother Jacqueline, died Monday in Oak Lawn, Ill. after battling for life with a defective liver. Although Jacqueline and Richard Kalis had been advised that a liver transplant was necessary for their daughter's survival, the infant was recently judged too small for the operation. By virtue of an execution issued to the undersigned Sheriff on the 22nd day of October, 1982, from the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County, in the above-entitled action, I will on the 6th day of January 1983, at 11:00 o'clock a.m., at the door of the Pitt County Courthouse in Greenville, North Carolina, offer for sale at a public auction to the highest bidder for cash all right, title, and interest that Kelly Adams and Rena Adams now have or at any time at or after the docketing of the judgment in the action had in the following property, lying and being situate in the City of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, and more particularly described as follows:

On the north side of Howell Street (formerly Williams Street) between Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and Pitt Street, and BEGINNING at an iron stake in the northern property line of Howell Street at the old J. F. Arthur southwest corner, and running thence North 80.40 West and along the northern property line of Howell Street 59.83 feet to a stake; thence North 10-12 East 115.31 feet to an iron stake; thence South 80.40 East 67 feet, more or less, to a stake in the west line of the Leroy Station lot; thence South 14-22 West and along the west line of the Station lot and the Arthur lot, 115.78 feet to the point of BEGINNING, and being the southern half of that certain property described in deed dated March 24, 1975, from Welton Ferebee and wife, Deloris Garrett Ferebee, to Ernest L. Adams and wife, Alabama N. Adams, which appears of record in Book K-43, page 655 of the Pitt County Registry, reference to which is hereby directed.

This property is being sold subject to all prior liens and encumbrances, if any, pending against the property. The highest bidder at the sale will be required to make a cash deposit in the amount of Ten Percent (10%) of his bid, with the remaining amount due on tender of the deed.

This 22nd day of November, 1982.

Clark's Operation Research Success

By DONNA ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Although artificial heart recipient Barney Clark is still on the road to recovery, the pioneering operation has already been a success from a research standpoint, his surgeon says.

"We've learned a tremendous amount that will help the next patient," Dr. William DeVries said Monday, adding that he does not want to perform another heart implant until the information from Clark's experience can be analyzed.

DeVries replaced the 61-year-old retired dentist's diseased heart with the air-driven Jarvik-7 on Dec. 2 during a seven-hour operation. Clark is the first recipient of a permanent artificial heart.

Asked at a news briefing if he believed the implant had been a success, the 39-year-old surgeon said it already is from the research standpoint. He said doctors won't really consider it successful until Clark's life is better than before the operation, but "I believe deep down in the bottom of my heart, that it will be."

The implant has forced doctors to determine the maximum blood pressure, pulse and oxygen level in the blood that a person can tolerate, DeVries said.

"These are questions that have always been dictated by how the heart is functioning. Suddenly, now we can make the heart function any way we want it to. And how the body reacts to that is totally amazing," DeVries said.

When Clark suffered kidney failure a few days after the implant, routine methods of restoring kidney function did not work, DeVries said. If the kidneys had continued to deteriorate, doctors normally would have put Clark on dialysis.

"Instead, we turned the heart dial up and literally cleaned out the kidney," he said.

A broken heart valve such as the one Clark suffered Dec. 14 would have killed any other patient. But with Clark's mechanical substitute, doctors were able to turn down the pressure until they could replace the defective ventricle, DeVries said.

"One time we pumped the heart not hard enough and he went into mild heart failure so we realized that that was the wrong thing to do and we pumped harder," he said. "Many times we've overpumped and we've gone back again. In our zeal to increase cardiac output, we can never lose sight of the fact that overpumping is dangerous, too."

DeVries said overpumping causes problems with the blood and puts stress on the valves. Doctors have been more careful about pumping since breaking the valve, he said, although the break was so complex, they cannot be sure why it occurred.

DeVries said the experience has been "wonderful" for him personally, although "it's just as difficult now as when we put it in. Our job is continuing every single day, every single minute."

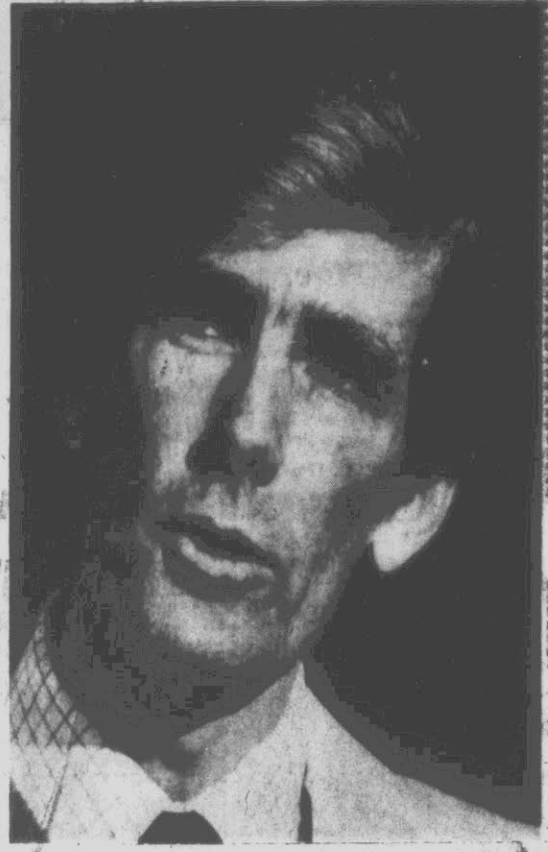

Clark suffered from cardiomyopathy, an inoperable degenerative disease of the heart muscle and had "incredibly sick lungs and sick kidneys before surgery," DeVries said.

If he had continued to have a sick heart as well, "he wouldn't have made it," DeVries said.

"I had some very deep and personal feelings" Dec. 7 when a series of seizures sent Clark into temporary stupor-like semi-consciousness, DeVries said.

"The heart was working beautifully, the kidneys were working beautifully, the lungs were working beautifully but the head wasn't working at all," he said. "That was the hardest time for me and I think it was the hardest time for the family."

"We really don't want this to be a prolongation of death," he said. "I don't think we're anywhere near the point where it would be a prolongation of death."

Every Christmas Since 1938 She Gets Letter From Reagan

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — Every Christmas since 1938, Lydia MacArthur has received a handwritten greeting from a man named "Dutch." For the past two years, the return address has been the White House.

President Reagan has never forgotten Mrs. MacArthur's late husband, Peter, who hired him as a sportscaster at WHO radio in Des Moines, Iowa, in 1936, giving him his start as a public figure.

"I could never call him Ron or Ronnie," said Mrs. MacArthur. "It was always Dutch."

The cards began coming yearly after Reagan left Iowa in 1938 for an acting career in Hollywood. He has never forgotten to send a Christmas greeting, even though Mrs. MacArthur hasn't seen him since 1951, when one of his films premiered in Miami.

"He was in London one year and I didn't think we would get one. I think he was shooting a picture. But sure enough, it came," says Mrs. MacArthur, 89. This Christmas was no exception, the recent pressures of the presidency notwithstanding.

"A lot of things have happened in this past year, and I'm still trying to get used to our present address," the president wrote in the 1982 message.

"I must say, there is a little excitement in the job — not all of it pleasant. But right now, the important thing is that day of days and 'Silent Night!'"

The letter was signed, "Love, Dutch."

When Mrs. MacArthur's husband hired Reagan, the future president was right out of college. "My husband said there wasn't anything available, but when Dutch mentioned sportscasting, Pete said he'd give him a try."

The men later became "the best of friends. He spent days and days at the house," she said.

The widow keeps memorabilia of Reagan's acting and political careers in a silver-colored box with a Reagan bumper sticker on the lid.

Amid the magazine cover stories and autographed pictures are Reagan's letters and December greetings.

Eight ornate Christmas cards from Reagan's days as California governor are bound with a rubber band. Scattered around Mrs. MacArthur's apartment are official pictures of Reagan, new and old.

In some notes, Reagan seems almost surprised by his progress since his days at the radio station.

"This is always the time for warm and happy memories of holidays past," he wrote two years ago. "I remember those in Des Moines and they grow more pleasant and treasured. I don't think in those days we could have predicted what I'd be doing now. Maybe it's good that we couldn't. It would have spoiled the fun."

"Merry Christmas, 'Love, Dutch'"

Citizen-Of-Year

Nominations for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Citizen of the Year Award are currently being sought, Ed Walker, chamber president, announced today.

Walker encouraged citizens of Greenville and chamber members to send their nominees' names, resumes and reasons for nomination to the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 894, Greenville, 27834 before Jan. 10.

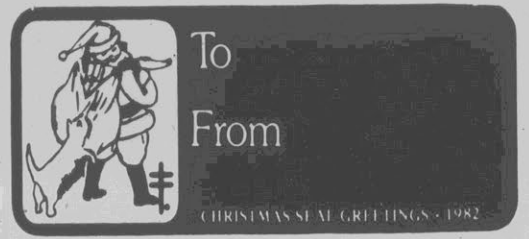

"The citizen of the year should be someone who has made significant contributions to the Greenville-Pitt County area," Walker explained. "The nominee should meet the following qualifications: be involved in civic activities that enhance the livability and profitability of the area and have business involvements that are for the good of the community, create new jobs and work toward better economics."

Walker said consideration is also given to a nominee's general reputation and contribution to the community over a period of years.

Former recipients of the award include Dr. Leo Jenkins, Joe Pou, Walley Howard, Eugene West, Horton Rountree, Bill Speight, Bruce Sugg, Janice Buck, Les Garner, "Booger" Scales, John Minges, Charles Gaskins, Jerry Powell and David Wichard.

For further information about the award, contact the Chamber of Commerce at 752-4101.

Matching Gift Tag For Familiar Seal

Christmas Seals have become American Christmas tradition during the past 75 years. This year the American Lung Association is adding to that tradition matching gift tags.

The first Christmas Seal was created by Emily Bissell, a social worker, to keep open a small tuberculosis hospital in Delaware. She designed and produced the seal herself, hoping to raise $300. Her drive netted $3,000.

For several years the American Red Cross helped the fledgling Tuberculosis Association sponsor a nationwide Christmas Seal Campaign. By 1920 the new agency that was the forerunner of the American Lung Association was able to carry on alone.

The Christmas Seal People (a registered trademark) now work to control emphysema, asthma, chronic bronchitis and other lung diseases while continuing their efforts to eliminate TB from those areas where it is still a threat.

About 75 percent of the association's operating funds for next year are expected to be raised through the sale of Christmas seals and gift tags bearing the red double-barred cross that has been the association's symbol since 1920. For more information on Christmas Seals, contact the American Lung Association, 752-5093.

97th Congress Today Is A Disillusioned Assembly

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 97th Congress convened Jan. 5, 1981, eager to do the bidding of President Reagan. It is limping into history, disillusioned and indicating to the president that the 98th Congress will have a will of its own.

The Republican tidal wave of 1980 made the Democratic majority in the House a majority in name only. The Senate convened with a Republican majority for the first time since January 1955.

In his inaugural address, Reagan promised a "new beginning."

"It is time to reawaken this industrial giant, to get government back within its means and lighten our punitive tax burden," Reagan told the crowd. "These will be our first priorities, and on these principles, there will be no compromise."

Reaganomics was on its way with the president's congressional allies embracing the promise of a balanced federal budget, lower taxes, less government and a revitalized economy.

But the Congress that is fading away leaves behind a nation suffering with its highest jobless rate since the Great Depression, skyrocketing budget deficits and a foundering economy.

Two days shy of a month after the inauguration, Reagan sent Congress his economic plan titled "America's New Beginning: A Program for Economic Recovery."

By summer, the Democratic-controlled House was dancing to a Republican tune.

Now, even Republican leaders say that the budget Reagan will send Congress in January 1983 likely will be "dead on arrival."

Reagan epply-side economics — return taxes to workers and business, restrict the groio government and the public will have more incentive to worker harder and save more. That would spark the economy and defeat inflation.

To do this, the administration proposed to cut billions from fiscal 1982 spending and reduce taxes by billions more.

He won from Congress $35.2 billion in budget cuts for fiscal 1982 and a total of $130.6 billion over four years.

Reagan used his popularity and political muscle to push through the unprecedented package of cuts across the breadth of government. The administration ballyhooed support for the program as affirmation of the mandate of Reagan's presidential election.

The same scenario held as the Reagan and his supporters pushed through a package containing a three-step personal income tax rate cut, tying future personal income tax rates to the rate of inflation and a major tax relief for business and industry. In all, about $749 billion in tax cuts over five years.

Republicans hailed the achievement and talked even of taking control of the House in the next election on the strength of the economic recovery that was about to come.

Democratic leaders called the Republicans — and some conservative Democrats — "robots" who were marching in lockstep with Reagan.

But by autumn 1981, the nation was hit with its second recession in two years. Interest rates remained high and unemployment was on the way up. Financial markets were shaken. Deficit projections were ballooning.

The 97th Congress' confidence in Reaganomics began to waver.

The administration responded Sept. 24, 1981 with a package of another $13 billion in budget cuts and $3 billion in "revenue enhancements" — tax increases.

Congress balked. Senate Republicans, growing into their role as the majority, said no to the president. House Republicans also said no. The package died.

And House Democrats, especially Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., sensed a shift.

In 1982, the second session of the 97th Congress gave virtually no support to the budget Reagan submitted in February.

Election-year pressure and a worsening economic outlook, though, produced a budget stalemate between Reagan and Congress.

O'Neill and Reagan held a face-to-face meeting in the Capitol in a last-ditch attempt to fashion a compromise that would meet the crisis and dampen the political fallout from the hard choices that had to be made. The meeting ended with no agreement.

Meanwhile, the GOP-controlled Senate Budget Committee unanimously rejected Reagan's February submission. The House voted down budget after budget.

Finally, congressional Republicans and administration officials drafted a spending blueprint that Reagan also endorsed. Congress completed action on the measure six weeks after the statutory May 15 deadline.

Meanwhile, projections of 12-digit deficits persisted. More revenues were needed.

This time Congress, Democrats and Republicans alike, pushed and Reagan had to reluctantly agree to an election-year package of $98.3 billion in tax increases over three years.

At the same time, Congress gave Reagan his first major budget defeat when it overrode his veto of a $14.2 billion supplemental appropriations bill the president had called a "budget buster."

The president managed to keep his military build-up on track through the 97th Congress and fended off efforts to seriously dismantle his earlier economic victories, but among the programs he supported that Congress defeated were:

- Social bills to limit court-ordered school busing, and allow voluntary prayer in public schools.
- Recommendations to abolish the departments of Energy and Education.
- Calls to revise clean air and water laws.
- Most of the "new federalism" plan to reduce the size of government.
- A call for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget.
- Administration plans to reform the regulatory process.
- Financing to buy the first series of MX missiles.

THE CRECHE STAYS — U.S. District Court Judge Raymond J. Pettine refused Monday to grant an injunction that would have removed a Knights of Columbus Nativity scene from the steps of Providence City Hall. He said that since no taxpayer money was used in erecting the creche, he would not issue a restraining order as requested by the American Civil Liberties Union. (AP Laserphoto)

N. C. Gas Prices Dip On Holidays

By The Associated Press

Some gasoline stations in North Carolina are offering gifts to their customers during the Christmas holiday, but the reason has little to do with season's greetings.

A glut on the oil market has resulted in a decline in gasoline prices in North Carolina as well as in most of the rest of the country.

Industry officials say oil companies usually pass along increases over the holidays when consumers travel more, but the market glut this year is leading to stiff competition and lower prices.

Some stations have resorted to offering incentives in order to attract customers.

Some full-service Sunoco stations in Charlotte are offering free gifts to customers who fill up at self-service or at the higher full service prices. With each fill up of eight gallons or more, Providence Sunoco is offering free disposable twin-blade razors stamped with the Sunoco logo.

A Sunoco salesman sold the program to about 20 stations in the area to promote gas sales, said station manager Ted Bost Jr., who is also president-elect of the Charlotte chapter of the N.C. Service Station Association.

"I think it works less than anticipated, but it's a goodwill gesture," Bost said. His station is selling self-service regular leaded gas for $1.19 and regular unleaded gas at $1.329.

Bob Dugan, president of the North Carolina Service Station Association, said service stations all over the state are cutting their prices.

"They usually bring the increases on around a holiday," he said. But this year, he added, "the economy is down, people aren't driving much, and they are using fuel-efficient cars."

The Tops Service Station in Raleigh has reduced prices four times in about a week for a total drop of 8 cents.

"We could go down again this week," said manager Roger Barbour, whose prices are $1.099 a gallon for self-service regular and $1.169 for unleaded.

"It seems like the Gulf and Exxon stations are getting more competitive with the independent stations," he said. "We've got to stay competitive, too."

Direct Oil Corp. of Charlotte has cut prices at its self-service station to $1.069 for regular leaded gas. Regular unleaded is selling for $1.149 a gallon and premium unleaded is priced at $1.249.

"I went down on all three of mine mainly because of the competition," said station manager Ron Reaves. "Our price has been gradually going down the last month or two."

Three weeks ago, Reaves said, he was charging $1.139 for regular leaded gas.

No Complaints Over Voting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — No officials complaints were filed about last week's vote on retaining the federal tobacco program, despite reports of irregularities in some areas, an official said.

One complaint of an irregularity in Harnett County was made by telephone to the state ASCS office, said John J. Cooper, state director of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The deadline for filing complaints was 5 p.m. Monday.

County ASCS directors in five major tobacco-producing counties — Wake, Durham, Wilson, Johnston and Pitt — said that by midafternoon Monday they had received no complaints.

Flue-cured tobacco farmers in North Carolina voted overwhelmingly to keep the program intact, with 94.1 percent favoring continuation for three years.

Anyone with a financial interest in this year's or next year's crop, or any allotment holder who leased his crop for a percentage of the return and not a fixed fee, was eligible to cast a ballot.

Some growers complained that some allotment holders who were ineligible voted and that some farmers with allotments in two counties had voted more than once. But state and ASCS officials said such instances were rare.

Congress Blocks Sale Of Leases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has approved a $7.8 billion Interior Department appropriations bill that blocks a scheduled oil and gas lease sale off the California coast.

The bill, which also provides funds for the Energy Department and other agencies, now goes to President Reagan.

The legislation bars Interior Secretary James Watt through September 1983 from offering oil or gas leases on some 9 million underwater acres stretching north from Morro Bay, in central California to the Oregon state line. Watt is also barred from approving new oil and gas leases in federal wilderness preserves and areas being studied for wilderness designation.

Pianist Arthur Rubinstein Dies Quietly In Sleep

PLAYING BEETHOVEN — Pianist Arthur Rubinstein plays Beethoven's Emperor Concerto with the Cleveland Orchestra in March 1976. Rubinstein died Monday after a brief illness at his Geneva home. He would have been 96 on January 28. (AP Laserphoto)

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Arthur Rubinstein, one of this century's greatest pianists whose dazzling work on world concert stages brought breathless silence from admiring fans, has died. He would have been 96 on Jan. 28.

Rubinstein died in bed Monday afternoon at his home after months of failing health following prostate gland surgery in 1980. His companion for the past three years, Annabelle Whitestone, said his morale in the last days "could not have been better."

She said Rubinstein, one of the last of the great Romantic virtuosos, had not been feeling well since developing a slight fever Saturday and was semi-conscious when he died "very peacefully."

His wife, Aniela, from whom he separated in 1980 after 48 years of marriage, lives in Paris and was expected in Geneva today, Miss Whitestone said. They have two sons and two daughters in the United States.

Miss Whitestone said funeral plans were incomplete. But Rubinstein did not believe in God and specified he did not want a religious ceremony.

The Polish-born pianist retired in 1976 — 70 years after his U.S. debut — when an attack of shingles left him nearly blind. After his retirement, he completed a second volume of his autobiography, visited his children and listened to records at his Geneva retirement home.

After he retired, Rubinstein once said, "I think I can say no man has lived his life more fully than I have. I think it's late enough in the day for me to have the right to say it: My life is made. If I die today, still I had it. Nobody can say I've been deprived of anything."

Musical colleagues and admirers reacted with shock and sadness to Rubinstein's death.

"I shall always miss Arthur," said composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein, reached for comment in New York. He said Rubinstein was "my perfect playmate whether playing music or being a joyous companion in the scherzo we call 'civilized living.'"

New York Philharmonic musical director Zubin Mehta, reached in his native Bombay, India, where he was visiting, was stunned at the news.

"Oh my God," he said. "I was with him just two weeks ago. At this moment I have photos in my hand and I am looking at pictures of us together," he continued in a choked voice.

He said Rubinstein's death was "the passing of a giant." Rubinstein made his debut at age 5 at a charity concert in his native Poland and first played professionally at age 11 in Berlin. But it was not until 1937 when he was 50 that he settled down and his artistry matured.

In subsequent years he became a world favorite, acclaimed on both sides of the Atlantic for his matchless tone, intense yet aristocratic romanticism, virtuosity, depth of understanding and warm and ebullient stage personality.

When he strode out on the concert stage, the music hall stilled. An electric charge seemed to flow to the audience from the stocky, broad-shouldered pianist with the strongly hewn face, gleaming eyes and massive head.

The love affair between Rubinstein and American audiences continued until he retired. He and his wife became American citizens and lived in California during World War II; afterward they lived in Paris and New York.

His favorite composer was Chopin, but he also was known for his Brahms, Schumann, Schubert, Beethoven, Liszt, Ravel and Debussy, Falla and Albeniz and his Polish compatriot, Szymanowski.

Rubinstein thrived by infusing what he called a "drop of fresh blood" in every performance.

"I must have the unexpected, the unforeseen," he once said. "I want to risk, to dare... that way the music can bloom anew. It's like making love. The act is always the same, but each time it's different."

Rubinstein played more concerts before more people, grossed more money and attracted a wider following than any other classical musician in history.

He commanded 70 percent of the gross of any concert or a flat minimum fee of $6,000. But the money seemed to be secondary.

"Music is not a hobby, not even a passion with me; music is me," he said. "I feel what people get out of me is this outlook on life, which comes out in my music. My music is the last expression of all that."

In 1976, nearly blind and his hearing gone in his right ear, Rubinstein gave one of his last concerts at New York's Carnegie Hall. The following month, President Ford presented him with the Medal of Freedom, the highest U.S. civilian award, at a White House ceremony.

CBS Big Movie-Maker And Does Them Better

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The "C" in CBS doesn't stand for cinema; it only seems that way. CBS broadcasts so many movies that the network is becoming television's Cecil B. DeMille. Home Box Office and Showtime run the same recent movies. Ted Turner's WTBS superstation and local independents run the same ancient movies. CBS is the real cinema king, running original movies — more of them, in fact, than NBC and ABC combined.

Best gauged the changes in the movie world. Although theatrical movies, used selectively, can still bolster a network's prime-time lineup, they're no longer assured ratings blockbusters.

Rights to theatrical films are expensive. The films themselves are sometimes choppily edited to meet network TV's more conservative standards, and oftentimes, the growing cable audience has already seen them. All these things diminish their attractiveness to the networks.

Last year, ABC showed "Superman" after it had been exhausted by the pay-TV channels. In Chicago, which is not heavily cabled, the film drew a 45 rating on the local ABC station, meaning 45 percent of Chicago's TV homes were watching. Nationally, only 29 percent of the TV homes tuned in.

"Five years ago, that film would have done a 45 rating nationwide," said David Poltrack, CBS' vice president of research. Last month, "Kramer vs. Kramer" on ABC had a 20.4 rating in non-cable homes and a 7.5 rating in pay-cable homes.

"TV movies are more cost effective than major theatricals," Poltrack added. "They're a major resource for us, a major alternative to series television." A typical TV movie costs close to $2 million; the price tag for major theatricals is $3 million and more.

In November, a sweeps month when ratings establish future advertising rates, CBS averaged an 18.9 rating, beating second-place ABC by a relatively wide 1.5 points. (Last year, they tied.) Over the course of a TV season, 1.5 rating points in prime time would amount to $75 million. Among the network, only CBS survived without a ratings drop from November 1981, and some credit belongs to its movies.

Last month, CBS showed 23 hours of TV movies, including the eight-hour "The Blue and the Gray." The movies pulled in a 19.4 rating. CBS did 6½ hours of theatrical films, including "Private Benjamin" and a repeat of Clint Eastwood's "Every Which Way But Loose," drawing a 17.8 rating.

ABC and NBC also did well with their TV movies, but there weren't enough of them. NBC did 5½ hours, four taken up by "The Executioner's Song," and had a 21.2 rating. ABC had four hours of TV films for an 18.2 rating.

Because of the failure of CBS' series "Filthy Rich" and "Tucker's Witch," the CBS Wednesday Night Movie last month became the network's third movie night, along with Tuesday and Saturday.

On the past four Wednesdays, CBS had three fine movies: "Memories Don't Die," "Missing Children" and "In Love with an Older Woman," starring John Ritter and Karen Carlson.

"We have a very good inventory of movies," said Poltrack, whose network will broadcast almost 60 TV films in 1982-83. "We had problems with Wednesday night before, so we were ready with movies."

Hunt Mechanic In Electronic Theft

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Mark Timothy Huffman's job at Bank One was to replenish cash supplies of electronic tellers but the FBI says he did just the opposite, taking more than $400,000 in a single day.

The FBI issued an arrest warrant Monday for Huffman on one count of embezzlement. Agents said Huffman disappeared Saturday, the day bank officials believe the money was stolen.

Edwin Billman, vice president for security at Bank One, said the theft was discovered Sunday, when several electronic tellers in the Columbus area began to run out of cash. Such depletions are unusual, he said, and an audit was ordered.

Billman said six technicians, including Huffman, are the only people who normally have access to the machines on Saturdays. Using a set of keys that must be signed for, the technicians replenish cash in the machines, he said.

Billman said Huffman, 25, of Columbus, was "a trusted employee" who had worked at the bank about a year.

According to an affidavit filed in U.S. District Court, Huffman signed for the only set of keys that were checked out between 8 a.m. and 11 p.m. Saturday. He did not report for work Sunday.

Billman said the loss is insured and will not affect customers.

FBI spokesman David Cassens said the agency had issued an all-points bulletin describing Huffman and a car he rented Wednesday. Billman said Huffman's brother, Richard, also has disappeared.

"I don't recall in recent years where any one person in a single day has stolen that amount of money from a (Columbus) bank," Cassens said.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY DEC. 22, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

The time for gift-giving is nigh, and we always have a problem about what to give to our bridge playing friends. A combined cook and bridge book is an idea, and it just so happens that one has arrived at our desk — "Cook and Deal," by D.J. Cook (Wimmer Bros., paperback, 220 pp., $10.95 plus $1.25 postage and handling. Available from the author, P.O. Box 3238, Beach Station, Vero Beach, Fla. 32960). We cannot vouch for the recipes, though they read well enough, but the bridge hands are sound and instructional. Consider this example.

North-South arrived at a four spade contract after a normal auction. Note North's decision to raise to two spades despite his balanced hand. The quality of his trumps was too good to suppress, and partner tends to have a five-card suit when he opens one spade.

West led the nine of clubs, and declarer was looking at three sure losers in hearts and clubs. If the contract were going to succeed, declarer would have to find the king of spades with East and hold his losers in hearts to one trick. And he would need the heart suit to furnish an entry to dummy for the trump finesse.

The heart play might seem like a guess — lead to the king or finesse the jack. Actually, there is no guess involved.

East, a passed hand, is marked with K-Q-J in clubs by the opening lead, and he must have the king of spades if the contract is to succeed. Therefore, he cannot hold the ace of hearts. So declarer won the ace of clubs and led a heart, rising with the king when West played low. A successful trump finesse assured the contract.

Strange Light May Have Been Contrail

ROSSELL, N.M. (AP) — A football-shaped bright light in the night sky that prompted calls to the fire department might have been the contrail of a jet, authorities say.

"It was kind of weird looking," said Garland Everett, a state police communications operator. "I imagine it was a jet. It looked like a jet's stream would look in the daytime."

The Roswell Fire Department received reports of an explosion Monday night, but city police and fire units sent to the area, six miles west of the city, could not find anything, a department official said.

"The jet's stream looked like an arc about the shape of a football. It was quite large," Everett said. "It's clear as a bell here and pretty cold. You could see lights ahead of the thing. It probably lasted about five minutes."

There was no explosion, he said.

The Federal Aviation Administration was contacted "and they didn't have anything at all," Everett said.

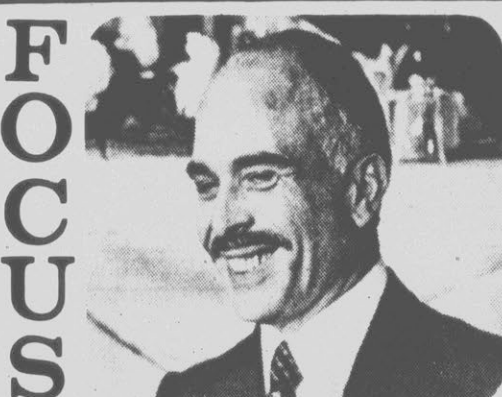

Jim Lovelady, a spokesman for White Sands Missile Range, said the range has been closed since Friday afternoon for maintenance.

At a landing strip about 150 miles to the west, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is working with high-intensity xenon lights, but they would not be visible in Roswell because of the distance, Lovelady said.

Hussein and Palestine

Today's scheduled meeting in Washington, D.C. between King Hussein of Jordan and President Reagan could be an important step toward a lasting peace in the Middle East. It marks the first conference between these two leaders since President Reagan issued his own plan for peace in the Middle East last September. At that time, he proposed an "association" between Jordan and a self-governing Palestinian nation to be founded on lands that Israel currently occupies. In fact, Hussein made a similar proposal ten years ago, and, though he expelled the Palestine Liberation Organization from Jordan in 1970, he has been a long-time advocate of a Palestinian state.

DO YOU KNOW — When did King Hussein take over the Jordanian throne?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Napoleon sold the Louisiana Territory to the U.S.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY/INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

NOTICE OF PUBLIC AUCTION SALE
Under the authority in Internal Revenue Code section 6331, the property described below has been seized for nonpayment of internal revenue taxes due from Greenville and Cabintery, Inc. 656 Arlington Blvd., Greenville, N.C. 27834. The property will be sold at public auction as provided by Internal Revenue Code section 6335 and related regulations.
Date of Sale: January 4, 1983
Time of Sale: 10:00 a.m.

PUBLIC NOTICES

Place of sale: Internal Revenue Service Office, 211 Evans St., Greenville, N.C. 27834.
Title Offered: Only the right, title, and interest of Greenville Kitchens & Cabinetry, Inc. in and to the property will be offered for sale. If requested, the Internal Revenue Service will furnish information about possible encumbrances, which may affect the determining the value of the interest being sold.
Description of Property:
Lot #1. Approximately 5 rolls of carpet backing.
Lot #2. Assorted cabinet doors.
Lot #3. Cabinet set, ivory, consisting of about 6 units which include built-in garbage can, pull out shelves, wine rack, "Lazy Susans", and a spice rack.
Lot #4. Cabinet set, white, consisting of about 9 pieces, including a wine rack, sandwich bar, "Lazy Susans", and a spice rack.
Lot #5. Double sink, yellow, and faucets.
Lot #6. Cabinet set, yellow, consisting of about 5 pieces.
Lot #7. Cabinet set, blue, consisting of about 5 pieces, includes 2 "Lazy Susans".
Lot #8. Desk, chair, file cabinet, and 2 small cabinets to be offered in the aggregate only.
Property may be inspected by appointment only.
Payment:
Term X. Full payment required on acceptance of highest bid.
Form of Payment: All payments must be by cash, certified check, cashier's or Federal Reserve check, or by United States postal bank, express, or telegraph money order. Make check or money order payable to the Internal Revenue Service.
Nature of Title: The right, title, and interest of the taxpayer in and to the property is offered for sale subject to any prior valid outstanding mortgage, encumbrances, or other liens in favor of third parties against the taxpayer that are superior to the lien of the United States. All property is offered for sale "where is" and "as is" without recourse against the United States. No guaranty or warranty, express or implied, is made as to the validity of the title, quality, quantity, weight, size, or condition of any of the property, or its fitness for any use or purpose. No claim will be considered for allowance or adjustment or for rescission of the sale based on failure of the property to conform with any expressed or implied representation.
Redemption:
Rights: The rights of redemption, as specified in Internal Revenue Code section 6337, are quoted as follows:
Sec. 6337. Redemption of Property.
(a) Before Sale.—Any person whose property has been levied upon shall have the right to pay the amount due, together with the expenses of the proceeding, if any, the Secretary at any time prior to the sale thereof, and upon such payment the Secretary shall restore such property to him, and all further proceedings in connection with the levy on such property shall cease from the time of such payment.
(b) Redemption of Real Estate After Sale.
(1) Period.—The owners of any real property sold as provided in section 6335, their heirs, executor, or administrators, or any person having an interest therein, or a lien thereon, or any person in whose behalf shall be permitted to redeem the property sold, or any particular tract of such property at any time within 120 days after the sale thereof.
(2) Price.—Such property or tract of property shall be permitted to be redeemed upon payment to the purchaser, or in case he cannot be found in the county in which the property to be redeemed is situated, to the Secretary, for the use of the purchaser, his heirs, or assigns, the amount paid by such purchaser and interest thereon at the rate of 20 per cent per annum.
Effect of Junior Encumbrances.
Sec. 6339(c). Effect of Junior Encumbrances.
A certificate of sale of personal property given or a deed to real property executed pursuant to section 6338 shall discharge such property from all liens, encumbrances, and titles over which the lien of the United States with respect to which the levy was made had priority.
