

Senate Ends Ordeal And Adopts Gas Tax Increase

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted today to increase the federal gasoline tax by a nickel, finally ending its ordeal over the legislation, and the 97th Congress.

After an 81-5 vote choking off the latest in a string of conservative-led filibusters — more than the 60 affirmative votes necessary — the Senate passed the measure 54-33 and sent it to President Reagan, who has pushed for the bill.

The action cleared the way for the Senate to adjourn, nearly two days after the House left town. At the White House, spokesman Peter Rousel said Reagan would not sign the bill today because it probably would not arrive there in time.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, asked whether the gasoline tax vote would complete the Senate's business for the year.

"Yea, verily I say without reservation," Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., responded enthusiastically.

Vice President George Bush, acting in his role as presiding officer of the Senate, was on hand for today's votes to indicate the administration's interest in the bill and cast a vote in case of a tie on the final tally.

Senate aides said today that at least 10 senators had returned to Washington — some via military transportation — to vote. Included among the group was Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who had been recuperating from heart surgery.

Baker, who tried throughout the lame-duck session of Congress to enact the bill, has been bedeviled by conservative members of his party who argue the tax hike is bad policy.

The latest problem cropped up Tuesday night after the House passed a compromise version of the legislation and adjourned. Senators thought they also would be able to vote and go home.

But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., mounted a last-minute filibuster, standing at his desk and objecting to requests that would allow a quick vote. Helms and Baker eventually agreed to the showdown votes today.

While Baker and Helms were at odds over the gasoline tax, they and other senators agreed that the post-election session Reagan requested to get action on money bills was not a good idea.

"It was silly as a 10-cent watch," Helms said. "The lame-duck session never ought to have been called, it was a tragic mistake and I felt that way when it was called."

"I was not for it. ... Frankly, I recommended against this session," Baker said.

"There's very little credit for anybody to take" from this lame-duck session, said Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich.

Helms, meanwhile, had no apologies for his stalling tactics.

"I think that a senator has the duty to do whatever is necessary when he is sufficiently convinced that a piece of legislation is bad," Helms said Wednesday.

Supporters of the tax measure say it will raise $5.5 billion annually to finance 170,000 jobs for highway, bridge and mass transit repair. They also claim another 150,000 jobs would be created in related industries. The administration estimates the tax hike would cost the average motorist $30 a year.

However, Helms and other opponents said the measure would cost jobs, not create them, by raising taxes during a recession. Others oppose the bill because of heavy excise taxes it would impose on the biggest trucks on the road.

The conservatives also argued that the gas tax compromised Republican principles.

"I just simply say that the Republican Party's got no future if it doesn't give the people a choice," Helms said. "The worst way to survive, let alone succeed, is to campaign on specific issues and principles and then see them watered down or washed away."

Senators from both parties said the Helms and his fellow North Carolina GOP senator, John East, went too far in blocking the tax hike.

Under the legislation, the gasoline tax would rise from 4 cents to 9 cents. Proceeds of 4 cents of the increase will go to highway construction.

Hunt Counting On Added Revenues For Pay Raises

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he's counting on a modest increase in state tax revenues next year to provide money for removing the freeze on state workers' and teachers' salaries.

Hunt, in an exclusive interview Wednesday with The Associated Press, said removing the freeze remains his top budget priority. After that, priorities will be upgrading math and science education and fighting drunken drivers, he said.

"The state's financial situation is very tight," Hunt said. "I am looking for a gradual increase in economic growth, not a certain, surging rebound."

"I think that by the beginning of the next fiscal year (July 1, 1983) we will be seeing a year that's going to have some good solid noninflationary growth that justifies removing the freeze and returning the merit pay to employees," he said.

Legislative budget leaders, including Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, and Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, also indicated optimism that the General Assembly can remove the pay freeze without raising taxes or making cuts in major programs.

Hunt, leaning forward in the red leather chair of his old Capitol office and occasionally sipping Russian tea, talked informally about the state's finances and reflected on his remaining two years in office.

Hunt said he believes he can maintain strong support among legislators for his programs because of his strong ties with the Democratic-controlled Legislature, and said he still has some major things to accomplish.

The governor will present his 1983-84 and 1984-85 budgets to the General Assembly after it convenes Jan. 12. Like his predecessors, Hunt is keeping his plans secret until the Legislature sees them.

State programs will be determined by the amount of money in the state pocketbook — the estimated revenue.

Hunt said Wednesday that he believes revenues will be between 8 percent and 9 percent, slightly above the current inflation rate of 4.5 percent. Legislative budget leaders supported that estimate.

That would make the 1983-84 budget about the same size as this year's budget, almost $6 billion. This year's budget was based on revenue estimates of 8.9 percent. Actual revenues for the first five months of the fiscal year were 5 percent, creating the possibility of a $120 million shortfall by the end of the year.

At the start of the current fiscal year, Hunt saw that revenues were slumping and ordered state agencies to spend only 94 percent of their allocations.

He said Wednesday that he believes those cutbacks are working and will be enough to balance the budget.

It would take $100 million to lift the freeze on state employee merit pay increases and automatic teacher salary steps. The General Assembly approved the freeze last spring to balance the budget.

The merit program provides between one-half and two-thirds of the state's employees with raises of 2.5 percent to 5 percent based on performance. Almost all classroom teachers get the automatic 5 percent salary step.

State employee and teacher groups have called for a raise of at least 10 percent in the next fiscal year to cover inflation.

Next to increasing the salaries of teachers and state employees, Hunt said improving education overall will be among his top priorities.

"An important part of my State of the State message in January will be to lay out the steps we need to take to substantially improve the quality of math and science education all the way through our system," Hunt said.

"I'll be proposing means to see that all of our teachers are certified in their field to teach math and science," he said, noting that 40 percent of those teachers now are teaching outside their field.

One method will require all math and science teachers in middle, junior and senior high schools to obtain qualifications to teach in those fields over a four-year period.

Hunt said more pay for teachers will be essential too, but "exactly how we do that, I haven't taken a firm position yet."

He refused to comment about proposals to offer pay incentives to math and science teachers to keep them from turning to private business.

"Right now we've got his real tight budget and we're limited in what we can do," Hunt said. "We need to pick out some things we can do at a relatively small cost initially."

Truckloads Of Food Given Away 'To Assure Big Yuletide Feasts

By GRAHAM VINK
Associated Press Writer
Northeast farmers sent onions to Pennsylvania, Wisconsin farmers offered apples to laid-off miners in Minnesota and movie stars bagged food in Los Angeles as Americans showed their Christmas spirit by helping to feed the legions of unemployed.

"A lot of people are just knocking on our door and saying, 'This is what we want to do for you,'" said Mike Cantrill, coordinator of a food giveaway program in Minnesota's Iron Range, a mining area where unemployment is near 45 percent.

The spirit was evident from coast-to-coast Wednesday as people still working lent a helping hand to those out of work in a nation where unemployment has hit 10.8 percent, the highest Christmas jobless rate since the Great Depression.

A truckload of 40,000 potatoes donated by farmers in Minnesota and North Dakota was expected to arrive in Iron Range towns today, with another due Jan. 5. Some 100 bushels of apples from Wisconsin growers are expected soon.

In Los Angeles, movie stars and volunteers, wearing brightly colored slickers or plastic garbage bags to protect them from a rainstorm, bagged 750 tons of food on Wednesday for 30,000 people and said they hoped to feed 100,000 more people. Needy people will pay $10 to receive a package of food worth $50.

"The optimism in the middle of this pouring rain is terrific," said actor Jack Lemmon, who was helped by performers Dennis Weaver and Valerie Harper in the parking lot of the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"This is the toughest Christmas I've ever seen," said Wilma Smith of the First Evergreen Missionary Baptist Church in Compton, which will distribute food to 90 families.

In Pittsburgh, laid-off steel workers lined up last Saturday for 90,000 pounds of spuds donated by Maine farmers. On Wednesday, 40,000 pounds of onions arrived from New York.

"All we've got to do is get a load of carrots in here and a side of beef and we've got the makings for a good stew," said United Steelworkers union spokesman Mike Drapkin. About 34,000 steelworkers are laid off in the Pittsburgh area.

The Mellon Bank has given $103,000 to help feed the unemployed, southwest Pennsylvania, the largest donation it has ever made to help the needy. About $5,000 was used to buy 1,000 turkeys, handed out last week at a party for unemployed steelworkers in Homestead, near Pittsburgh.

"Even some kids help us," said Linda Ezerosky, coordinator for a food bank serving 1,000 people through a Pittsburgh USW local. "A Boy Scout working on his Eagle pin donated 623 cans of food. And a girl came down and donated canned goods and potatoes out of her baby-sitting money."

In Centerville, Ill., food retailers donated enough to fill about 2,000 bags of groceries, each containing milk, chicken, cheese, potatoes, onions, canned vegetables, fresh fruit, butter, eggs and a loaf of bread. Despite temperatures in the 30s, people stood in long lines to receive the food.

"I know I need it," said George Carter, one of those waiting. "I'm qualified for a truck-driving job, but they ain't got no truck-driving jobs anywhere."

In Chicago, Mayor Jane Byrne on Wednesday announced a drive to raise $4 million to feed the hungry. She said food bins would be set up in police and fire stations and supermarkets and a fund to accept cash gifts would be set up at the United of America Bank. She said she was kicking off the drive with $270,000 from her political fund.

In Denver, workers at the Colorado food clearinghouse planned to distribute today 80,000 pounds of potatoes donated by Wyoming growers.

Although the generosity by farmers helped brighten Christmas for thousands of families, some said their actions were in part to dramatize their own problems.

Break Ground For Transit Building

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held this morning at the public works facility for the city's newly funded transit garage.

The city said that funds for construction of the transit maintenance facility have been made available through a grant by the Urban Mass Transportation Administration. The Section 18 public transportation grant provides for 80 percent cost participation by the federal government, 10 percent by the N.C. Department of Transportation, and requires a 10 percent local match. Bids totaling $362,407 have been awarded by the City Council to four contractors for the construction project. They include: J.H. Hudson Inc., general construction, $307,070; Kingston Plumbing & Heating Co. Inc., plumbing, $19,540; Pitt Mechanical Contractors, heating, ventilation, and air conditioning, $10,817; and Pitt Electric Inc., electric work, $24,990.

Stays Christmas Eve Electrocutation In Ga.

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal judge today blocked the execution of convicted killer Freddie Davis, who had been placed in a special prison cell to await his scheduled Christmas Eve electrocution.

Davis' lawyers had asked U.S. District Judge G. Ernest Tidwell here to reconsider his refusal earlier this week to stop the execution. Tidwell granted a stay of execution a little more than 24 hours before Davis, 25, was scheduled to die.

Davis' second death sentence was overturned in 1980 when the U.S. Supreme Court instructed the Georgia Supreme Court to re-examine the criteria used to impose the death penalty. The state high court then upheld the sentence in September 1980, and the U.S. Supreme Court refused in April 1981 to review the case again. Spraggins' case is still on appeal.

The execution, which would be Georgia's first in 18 years, had been scheduled between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Friday. A 36-hour death watch began late Wednesday at the Jackson prison.

Superior Court Judge Joseph Jackson said Wednesday night that "Christmas wasn't even on my mind" when he set Davis' execution date for the Jan. 30, 1977, rape and butcher-knife slaying of 56-year-old Frances Coe.

Assistant state Attorney General Mary Beth Westmoreland countered that Farmer had raised no new facts or allegations and that "fair consideration" already had been given to Davis' appeal.

There have been no executions in Georgia since 1964. Officials have said 415 people were executed in the state between 1926 and 1964.

During the death watch, Davis is having his regular meals and is permitted visits from anyone on his inmate visitor list, Mrs. Englade said, but he is not allowed to leave his cell for recreation periods.

Davis was 19 when he and Eddie Spraggins were convicted in March 1977 of the murder of Mrs. Coe, a neighbor of Spraggins. Both men got new trials in 1978 because of errors made in charging the original jury, and they were convicted and sentenced to death a second time.

Asked if he would set the same execution date if he had it to do over again, Jackson replied, "Well, you know Mrs. Frances Coe will never see another Christmas Eve. I set one for (death row inmate) Curfew Davis on Christmas Eve in 1974, but he's still got appeals. One day is just as good as another as far as I'm concerned."

Davis' lawyer, Millard Farmer, told Tidwell during a hearing Wednesday that the condemned man's previous lawyers had "botched up a number of things" in his appeals. Farmer said he needed time to prepare a comprehensive appeal for Davis, and he asked the judge "to let him live while we litigate it."

Dear Abby

Hosts Sell Guests False Bill Of Goods

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I were invited to a "little Sunday night get-together" at the home of casual friends. Assuming it was to be a social function, I asked if we could bring something and was told, "Just bring yourselves."

Upon our arrival, much to our surprise, we found it was a commercial promotion! We had absolutely no interest in any of these household products since I am retired and financially secure, and we have everything we need.

We politely endured the sales pitch and left at the earliest possible moment. It has since disturbed us to think that even casual friends would try to use us in this way. We do not want to get trapped in such a get-together again and would be interested in your response to the following questions:

1. What are your feelings relative to this practice?
2. How can one determine what type of "party" is planned?
3. Would we have been justified in leaving as soon as we knew it was a commercial affair? Sign us...

MISLED IN N.C.

DEAR MISLED: 1. It's tacky. 2. Ask. 3. Yes.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a doctor who would tell a patient that he had only three or four more months to live?

Don't you think the doctor should have told the family first, and the family should have decided whether or not the patient should have been told?

Do you think the patient would or would not give up the fight to live if he knew that he was going to die?

NEEDS YOUR OPINION

DEAR NEEDS: There are no hard and fast rules for all patients. I believe the patient has the right to know what his chances are. Nobody "knows" how long a person's life is going to be. A doctor may predict, but he doesn't "know" for certain.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a serious difference of opinion. Tom's father is very, very ill. He's been hospitalized since May and is rarely coherent.

Tom is an only child and his mother didn't stay around to raise him, so he and his father are extremely close. Tom was brought up in the country and spent many happy times hunting with his father. His father built a special cabinet for his large gun collection. Some of these guns are old and have a lot of sentimental value for Tom.

We live in the city and don't have a lot of spare room. After Tom's father dies, we will inherit those guns. Abby, I do not want guns in our house! Tom does.

What do you say?

MARRIED TO A SON OF A GUN

DEAR MARRIED: Compromise. Keep the gun collection in the cabinet, securely locked. And keep the bullets elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to express my thanks for all the kind words and support you have given to transsexuals over the years. (A transsexual is a person genetically of one sex with a psychological urge to belong to the opposite sex — an urge sometimes so overwhelming that it leads to a sex-change operation.)

While addressing a national convention of electrologists recently, I was frequently asked, "Where should we refer our transsexual clients?"

In the past, Abby, you have recommended the Janus Information Facility as an information and counseling source for transvestites and transsexuals.

It might be helpful to provide your readers with other sources, since thousands are seeking help.

DEAR CHRISTINE JORGENSEN: Because the whole subject of transsexuals has been so universally misunderstood and those who need help don't know where to get it, I am printing your letter.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I've always wondered how women get the men who outline the house at Christmas with outdoor lights. The ones who mount a bell on the chimney that swings back and forth and plays "Silent Night." Or the ones who hoist a large sleigh on the roof flooded with lights that has traffic backed up for three miles.

By the time I got married, all of them were taken.

You know what I ended up with? A man who replaces the 25-watt porch light with a 40-watt yellow bug bulb.

I don't know. Maybe it's because we have always lived next door to a woodworking teacher who has won Best Decorated House in City for 14 years in a row. But just once, I'd like to live in a house at Christmas that didn't look like it was vacant.

It must be wonderful to drag in a live tree and put lights on it without your husband "warning," "You plug that in and the house will be ashes in 15 minutes."

Or light a candle on a coffee table without having him set a bucket full of water next to it.

To tell you the truth, I would never have entered into a marriage with the man had I known he had no intentions of owning a ladder.

His father was just the opposite. He bought the biggest tree in town, loaded it with lights, and spent weeks assembling a giant train around it. There were lighted wreaths on the outside, trees draped in twinkling stars, and a ten-foot Santa Claus poised on the roof with one leg in the chimney.

Earlier this week I stood poised at our front window and watched Walt across the street. He lined the driveway with candy canes and strung lights along the eaves. Just over the garage he placed a large star and on the lawn he erected a life-size stable. Throughout the week, there appeared an assortment of elves in a workshop with little saws that buzzed back and forth. On the night of the judging, live people dressed as Mary, Joseph and the Wise Men appeared in their places along with a live camel and a real infant.

I couldn't stand it. "Would you look at Walt?" I said.

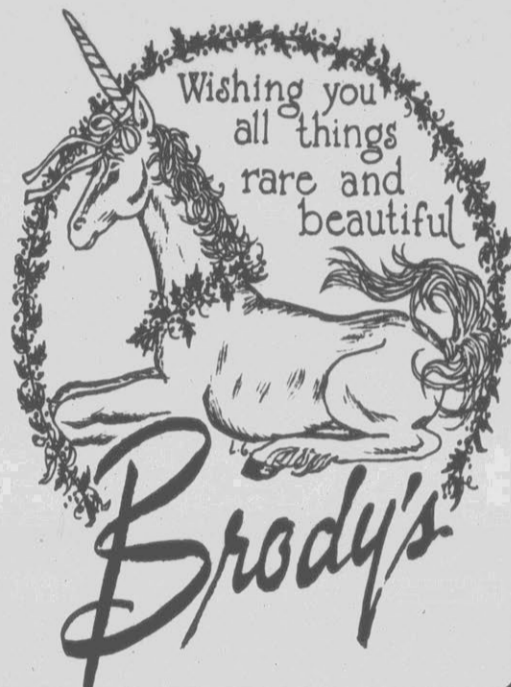

"We could have something like that if you'd just get into the spirit of things."

My husband said, "You provide the baby and I'll build you a manger."

Sometimes, I think about trading up.

Interdependence

One can sympathize with those voices of dismay at the generosity of Washington to foreign countries when people at home are undergoing an economic recession and are having troubles of their own.

Several wire service reports this week put the scene in a different perspective.

One described the hardship case of Mexico, which by virtue of its petroleum wealth should be immune to economic disaster ... but proved otherwise.

Another explored emergency rescue measures being forged by banking institutions to keep Brazil (a land of vast natural wealth) afloat.

Yet a third noted the nine largest banks in the United States have loaned out the equivalent of nearly nine times their combined capital to foreign countries; most of which have changed from "good risks" to uncertain.

All around the world there are governments afflicted with a shortage of money, depressed economies, and carrying huge debts raised on bright hopes that unexpectedly dimmed.

A House Banking Committee chairman wondered aloud whether the banking institutions involved have been following prudent banking practices. One might also suggest he overlooked the possibility those banks were under intense pressure by Washington itself to engage in massive overseas lending "in the national interest".

It is quite clear that American interests in economic survival are closely linked to the economic survival of many other countries — some of whom are close to being basket-cases.

The interdependence of nations and peoples cannot be better illustrated than by the economic plight manifest these days.

Through it all there is one spectre that will not go away: if the United States should ever succumb to the tide of conditions besetting those it is trying to keep afloat, who in the world could ever come to our assistance?

Snowed In, With Books

SCRABBLE, Va. — Once again, here in the Blue Ridge Mountains, we are snowed in — wonderfully snowed in — and so long as the electric power stays in operation, we are as snug as so many groundhogs. It is a great time to catch up on reading.

And this has been a good year for reading. Let me pass along recommendations on a few books I have especially enjoyed.

The first has nothing whatever to do with conservative philosophy, right-wing politics or the Reagan administration, but if I were to name one book that has given me more pleasure than any other in 1982, it would be a book the major media have never heard of: "Run With the Horsemen," by Ferrol Sams. It is the autobiographical story of a boy growing up in rural Georgia in the 1920s and 1930s.

Almost everybody, I suppose, has by this time been exposed to the delightful books of the Scottish veterinarian, James Herriot — "All Things Bright and Beautiful" and "All Things Great and Small." If he can just be discovered, Ferrol Sams may become our answer to James Herriot. He is a country doctor; he writes with skill and warmth and a great narrative talent, and he tells tales of his childhood that are both moving and hilarious. His book comes from a small house in Atlanta, Peachtree Publications, Ltd., but your bookseller should have no problem in who lusted for political power. Lyndon was in a class by himself.

Law buffs will want to read another biographical work that cuts boldly through some cherished illusions: "The Brandeis/Frankfurter Connection," by Bruce Allen Murphy. One of the myths we clutch innocently to our bosoms is that Supreme Court justices are above politics. There hasn't been any truth to that notion since George Washington made his original nominations to the court, but we cling to it anyhow. Louis Brandeis and Felix Frankfurter reveled for many years in a national adulation; they were the liberals' liberals. As Murphy makes clear, they were a pair of political manipulators also.

I haven't read all of Jimmy Carter's "Keeping Faith," though I have read enough of it to commend it to you as a cut above the average in the realm of presidential apologetics. With greater enthusiasm, let me put in a plug for Hamilton Jordan's "Crisis," an honest and straightforward piece of work. And with still greater warmth, I can recommend Lou Cannon's "Reagan." Cannon has known Reagan more closely than any other journalist and has covered him longer; his study is clear-eyed and evenhanded, and provides a wealth of background not elsewhere available.

For the corporation executives on your Christmas list — or for anyone with an active interest in the business world — ask for Allen Cox's "The Cox Report on the American Corporation." To describe the book merely as a study of 13 American cor-finding it. It is a beautiful work of the storyteller's art.

On the political side, the big book of the year is Robert A. Caro's "The Years of Lyndon Johnson: The Path to Power." This is the first in a projected three-volume biography of LBJ. The most applicable adjective is: engrossing. Caro devoted seven years to his research, and his investment pays dividends in every chapter. The young Lyndon emerges as many of us would have imagined — ambitious, power-hungry, ruthless in his treatment of persons in his sway, a man obsessed with dreams of political power and glory. In some ways the book is almost painful. Caro flays his subject, stripping away the outer skin, exposing nerves and sinews down below. As a newsman, I have spent 40 years in the company of men

Begin Seen No 'Friend'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Reagan's sense of betrayal by Israel's long procrastination over pulling its troops out of Lebanon has produced a new White House strategy treating Prime Minister Menachem Begin not as sympathetic ally, but as witting adversary.

Begin's demand that withdrawal talks with Lebanon be held in Jerusalem itself now has been resolved against Begin, but this was the issue that converted him from ally to adversary in White House eyes. Even with Begin's grudging surrender on the Jerusalem issue, a fascinating change in U.S. technique for dealing with Israel may be here to stay.

Begin, privately retorting that "the Americans" are trying to discredit Israel, is reacting with characteristic aggressiveness. Sparing Reagan himself, Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon have unleashed backstairs fire on these targets: Secretary of State George Shultz; State Department Arabists viewed by Israel as briefly outflanked during Al Haig's regime; Saudi Arabia, blamed by Begin for undue influence over the U.S.

Reagan's principal anti-Begin tactical change was to lobby Israeli press and public opinion by ordering Ambassador Sam Lewis to engage in anonymous, background briefings. This may become a stock U.S. weapon in the battle over Israeli troop withdrawal and in the tougher coming battle over Reagan's Mideast peace plan.

Begin provoked Reagan by rejecting his request, contained in a message from Shultz, not to insist or talk in Jerusalem. Just before the Israeli Nov. 28 cabinet meeting, Shultz told Begin it was inconceivable that after Lebanon had agreed on face-to-face talks with Israel, Begin would demand that the talks be held in a city that the world's nations, does not recognize as Israel's capital.

Shultz's punchline packaged a beguiling invitation: "We trust your personal leadership to make sure that this opportunity (to talk directly to Lebanon) is not missed." Reagan and Shultz were inviting Begin to separate himself from Sharon and perhaps Foreign Minister Itzhak Shamir. Begin should join Reagan, Shultz was saying, and drop his right wing. The implication: That could lead to a restored U.S.-Israeli intimacy.

Begin read Shultz's message to his Nov. 28 cabinet meeting. Most of the cabinet wanted to accommodate Reagan and Shultz, but Begin did not. He insisted on, and won, a unanimous vote against Reagan.

In Reagan's eyes, that transformed Begin into an adversary and promoted the president's decision to play, however anonymously, to Israeli public opinion. This technique, the mirror image of longtime Israeli practices here, had a quick impact on Begin. Yosef Harif, writing in Ma'ariv (one of Israel's premiere newspapers) on Dec. 10 and clearly reflecting his close friend Menachem Begin, accused the U.S. of "trying to discredit Israel with its briefings."

Begin was galled that Lewis' anonymous briefings accused him of committing his government on Oct. 14 to holding the troop withdrawal talks in Jerusalem but concealing that fact from Reagan and the Lebanese. Lewis also rubbed Begin raw with his briefing charge that Shamir had misled Reagan into thinking the troop withdrawal might be completed by year's end. Based on Shamir's assurance, Reagan virtually promised Congress that the U.S. Marines would be home by then.

Reacting to Reagan's new techniques to influence Israeli public opinion, Begin ignored the president and laid it thick on Shultz and the Arabs. U.S. diplomats report what Begin is saying: Reagan has been forced to take Lebanon's side in the Jerusalem issue by threats from Saudi Arabia (a charge denied here); "Shultz's United States," in the telling phrase of Ma'ariv's Yosef (Continued on page 5)

Army ROTC Unit Planned

East Carolina University will be moving into a new area of service with the establishment of a U.S. Army Reserve Officers Training Corps unit in cooperation with N.C. State University.

The program will operate as an extension of the N.C. State program and will be administered by the department of military sciences at NCSU.

ECU has operated an Air Force ROTC program through its department of aerospace studies for many years.

The new Army program will provide an education that will lead to U.S. Army service, and it indicates what can be done in the way of cooperation between the state's universities.

The program will begin with the fall semester of 1983 and it should prove to be valuable to students with an interest in a career as an Army officer.

To Hurt Farmers

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — If the eight-cent per pack federal cigarette tax is to hurt anyone when it goes into effect on New Year's Day, it most likely will be the farmer, the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research says in the latest issue of its magazine, N.C. Insight. Bill Finger, the magazine's editor, says the increase will do little harm to cigarette manufacturers but will add another problem to the growing list of woes the tobacco farmer faces.

cigarette manufacturers. Forbes says a four-percent consumption drop can't really hurt an industry which averages 25 percent profit. Hutton says the tax increase is about the same size as the PAUL T. O'CONNOR average price increases which the cigarette manufacturers have passed along in the past three years — and those increases didn't hurt consumption.

The manufacturers can weather the increases because of two factors. First, they have diversified. The six major North Carolina-based manufacturers now own such non-tobacco companies as Chun King foods and Seven-Up. Profits from those ventures, of course, are not affected one way or the other by the cigarette tax increase. Secondly, the manufacturers are buying increasing amounts of less expensive, but progressively better quality, foreign tobacco. The amount of foreign leaf in American cigarettes has increased threefold since 1965.

The tobacco farmer is in a far less secure position, however, and determining the impact the increase will have on him is much more difficult, Finger concedes. The problem is that the tobacco farmer faces such a bleak future, with so many problems already, that it will be difficult to fairly assign percentages of blame for his overall hardship.

Other Editors Say To Restore Faith

(Rocky Mount Telegram) Because of its lackluster record, the judicial system in North Carolina does not rate too highly with much of the public — particularly in regard to the disposition of cases involving drunken drivers.

Gov. Jim Hunt recognizes this, and he has moved to restore some respect for the system. He has written North Carolina judges, district attorneys and lawyers in a plea for support to strengthen state laws dealing with drunken drivers.

"We must restore the faith of our citizens in their judicial system," Hunt wrote. "As attorneys, you and I must face the unpleasant fact that many people in our state believe that our courts do not deal seriously and effectively with drunk-driving cases."

To restore that faith, Hunt urged the group to support recommendations which his Governor's Task Force on Drunken Drivers presented last month. The task force recommended that the General Assembly raise the legal drinking age to 19, write a new driving-while-impaired law to replace the existing driving-under-the-influence law and require prosecutors to explain publicly why they plea bargain in drunken driving cases.

Hunt doesn't expect everyone to support all 30 recommendations and he himself hasn't decided whether to support all of them. But he praised the proposals because they "not only will give us fairer and more effective tools for punishing drunk drivers, but also change our attitudes, as individuals and as a society, about drinking and driving."

Hunt is prudently appealing to the legal community for help because that is where citizens look for sound judgment and responsible leadership.

"I would be proud if the legal and judicial community of North Carolina would take the lead in protecting our families, our neighbors and all our people against the drunk driver," Hunt said.

Hunt is expected to present his plan to fight drunken driving soon after the General Assembly convenes in January. Already he has announced that he will support raising the drinking age, but has suggested no limit. He has said he supports mandatory jail sentences in aggravated cases and eliminating plea bargains.

Fortunately, with public opinion flaring against the sloppy handling of drunken-driving cases, and with Hunt putting it squarely to the legislature with his proposals, the General Assembly is going to be hard put to find an excuse for not dealing with the situation.

AMBASSADORS IN DARKNESS

The Pharisees once asked Jesus the question, "When shall the kingdom of God come?"

Jesus never answered that question, either for them or for his disciples. But just before his ascension he assured the disciples that the time of the final consummation of the kingdom was something that was locked up in the secret counsel of God (Acts 1:7).

What Jesus did do when the Pharisees asked him "when" was to tell them what they could do to hasten the coming of the kingdom. They were looking for a kingdom which would be outward, political; he assured them that the kingdom was inward and spiritual.

What they wanted was relief from the tyranny of their Roman overlords. But the children of Abraham were chosen to lead the world into the kingdom of light. Their function was not to administer but to minister. They were to act — and we are to act — as God's ambassadors in a world of darkness. — Elisha Douglass

Please, No More Forecasts

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "What I want for Christmas is for them to cut out all the nonsense and give it to us straight," said the storeowner in a small town near Flint, Mich. "Tell it like it is," he said.

He was referring to the repeated promises by government and private sector economists that recovery was just around the corner — first quarter, second quarter, third, fourth, and now at Christmas the promise of sometime next year.

"It's cruel," he said. "You shouldn't get people's hopes up like that."

Ill-informed too, a confession rarely made by those who view the economy through the statistical microscopes, and who tend to refer to discrepancies as statistical aberrations, although their statistics refer to human beings.

One of the rare ones, Albert Cox, Jr., chairman of Merrill Lynch Economics

Inc., told a meeting of business economists earlier this month that "there is no question that the administration and most others who supported Reaganomics, including me, were too optimistic regarding the early results of the program."

But all of the forecasters go on forecasting, and make good money at it.

"The signals of recovery are not really fragmentary at this point. Instead, they are pervasive and impressive ..." said Cox. In spite of, he said, "a ... gloomy (media) bias, with heavy emphasis on unemployment."

Chase Manhattan Bank's "Economic Observer," a monthly publication, offers this month the ersatz encouragement that "Yes, Virginia, there will be a recovery." It will be apparent by late winter or early spring, it says.

Meanwhile, all the forecasters say, there are signs of recovery, such as in the stock market. But as Fiorella LaGuardia, the former New York City mayor, said once: "Ticker tape ain't spaghetti." You can't eat it.

Those, at least, who are unemployed, cannot eat it, and there are more than 12 million of them. The economy in general is likely to improve, says Morgan Guaranty Trust, but the unemployment rate seems destined to worsen.

There are now close to 20 million Americans unemployed, underemployed (involuntarily working only part-time), or so discouraged they have dropped out of the labor force. And each probably represents another person as well.

The contrast of a strengthening economy, measured by abstract statistics, and a worsening employment situation, measured by human idleness, is ironic but not unique. A recession, for one thing, tends to eliminate the least productive workers and leave those who produce the most for the dollar.

But it also adds to the disillusionment of those who aren't able to participate in the recovery, and it is these, it would seem, who are most fed up with the repeated forecasts of better times. Like the Michigan proprietor.

It is difficult to blame them for their attitude, because those promises of better times, from the White House on down, were so far off the mark that economic forecasters are now a branded bunch, stigmatized by their own records.

As Business Week magazine put it this week, "forecasters really blew it in 1982." The consensus of forecasters in its survey a year ago was that real gross national product would rise 3 percent from the 1981 fourth quarter.

Even, it relates, at mid-year 1982, when the economy was sliding into probably the worst recession since the Great Depression of the 1930s, "few economic shamans were expecting a recession for the second half of the year."

Civitan Honor Jones

Harold Jones, a professor in the East Carolina University School of Music, has been cited by Civitan International for his leadership as the 1981-82 lieutenant governor for the organization's Eastern North Carolina district.

He received the leadership award at the district's fall meeting held recently in New Bern.

Under Jones' direction, the district displayed the largest membership growth in Civitan International and was identified as the first region in Civitan history to have all clubs qualify for honor level awards. In addition, several new clubs were added during his tenure including the Tryon Club of New Bern which was organized with a record chartering membership of approximately 100 members.

As past president of Greenville Civitan Club, Jones currently serves as growth and development chairman for the district Civitan organization.

porations is to describe it poorly. Cox has performed a monumental labor in getting at the real world of corporate life. His insights provide a fine antidote to most of the drive the novelists churn out.

Except for Ferrol Sams' "Run With the Horsemen," this might appear to be a heavy diet of meaty stuff, but all these political books read well. Taken as a group, the half a dozen works paint vivid portraits of powerful men in action — in politics, in jurisprudence, in business. Power is what the American game is all about. In this year's books we see some of the players, warts and all.

Harif, is deliberately courting confrontations with Israel to make the U.S. look better with the Arabs.

An affronted Begin alluded privately last week to U.S. efforts to "incite" public opinion against him in his own country. But these techniques worked in the case of Israel's demand for talks in Jerusalem with Lebanon. That suggests similar treatment of Begin during the more difficult work that will follow Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon, when the President tries to persuade Begin to carry out his Middle East peace plan.

South Korea Dissident Departs His Homeland

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP)

— Kim Dae-jung, the country's major dissident, left his homeland for the United States today amid tight security precautions and official silence, sources said.

There was no immediate official announcement or confirmation of Kim's departure, but the sources said Kim and members of his family were aboard a commercial flight that left Seoul's Kimpo International Airport at 7:30 p.m. (5:30 a.m. EST).

Star Witness Is Fatally Shot

MIAMI (AP) — The star witness in a foiled drug case has died of a gunshot wound he suffered in an unrelated quarrel at a bar.

Ricardo Morales, 42, who was shot in the head Monday night, was declared brain dead on Wednesday. With his family's permission, doctors at Mercy Hospital removed him from a respirator.

Police said a suspect in the shooting has contacted them but has not been charged. Information from Morales led to the use of wiretaps and bugs in a drug probe called Operation Tick-Talks, because of a bug in a clock. The tapes later were ruled inadmissible because of Morales' anti-Cuba terrorist background.

The 57-year-old Kim, who had been serving a 20-year sentence for sedition, was transferred one week ago from a prison in Chongju to Seoul National University Hospital.

A government announcement at that time raised the possibility that he might be allowed to go to the United States for medical treatment. Reporters at the hospital today estimated there were 200 plainclothes police on the 12th floor, where Kim's room was located, and several hundred others around the hospital at its compound at the time he was taken to the airport.

Correspondents and photographers were forced from the area prior to Kim's departure.

In recent years, Kim has been troubled by sciatica, arthritis and other ailments. He suffered a serious hip injury in an automobile accident during the 1971 presidential election campaign, when, as the candidate of the now defunct opposition New Democratic Party, he almost defeated the late President

Park Chung-hee for the presidency.

Sources said Kim was accompanied on the flight to the United States by his wife, American-educated Lee Hee-ho, and the two younger of his three sons. Their ultimate destination was believed to be Washington, D.C., where Kim's brother-in-law lives.

Since Kim was moved from the prison in Chongju, 60 miles south of Seoul, he was kept under heavy guard and only immediate family members were permitted to see him.

While there was no official announcement concerning his departure, the remainder of his 20-year prison sentence apparently was suspended to permit him to leave.

foreign tobacco poses a serious threat — as does the trend to low-tar cigarettes which use less tobacco altogether. Next year, the tobacco farmer will suffer from the cut in tobacco quotas that was brought on by the huge pile of tobacco that went into stabilization this year. This year he didn't get much for the leaf he sold. Add to that the cigarette tax increase which some analysts say has already contributed to the decreased demand for tobacco this year. When you're getting hit with that many bullets, who is to say which shot killed you?

Throughout his article, Finger refuses to make an outright calculation concerning the effect the tax increase will have on the state's tobacco economy. Such a calculation, he says, could be made only after more detailed research. In 1981, an attempt to raise the state cigarette tax was defeated in the General Assembly. Another such attempt could be made in the 1983 session. And, in 1985, the Congress will have to reconsider the eight-cent increase it passed this year.

Now is the time, he says, to get the researchers to work on assessing the impact cigarette tax increases have on consumption. Then the information would be ready for the coming debates.

Israel, Lebanon Set Negotiation On Withdrawal

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel and Lebanon will open negotiations early next week aimed at withdrawing Israel's invasion army from Lebanon and normalizing relations between the two Middle East neighbors, the Israeli government said today.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's spokesman Uri Porat said the talks would be held alternately in the Beirut suburb of Khalde and Kiryat Shmona, on Israel's northern border. He did not say which day the talks would open, or in which country the first session would be held.

Israeli officials briefing reporters said the talks probably would open in Khalde on Monday or Tuesday, and then shift to Kiryat Shmona.

"The negotiations on normalization of relations, security arrangements and the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon will open at the beginning of next week," Porat said.

The Israeli announcement again emphasized that normal relations will be on the agenda though Lebanese officials say Lebanon does not want to go beyond the rest of the Arab world in building normal ties with the Jewish state before there is an overall settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said Wednesday that normalization was a "central issue" along with security arrangements that would ensure that Israel never be threatened by terrorist attackers from Lebanon. In Washington, The New York Times quoted Israeli Ambassador Moshe Arens as saying Israel and Lebanon had already reached tentative agreement on "the security arrangements in southern Lebanon ... normalization of relations between Israel and Lebanon, and synchronization of the withdrawal of Israeli and Syrian troops to take place after the withdrawal of PLO forces."

Porat said the Israeli delegation would be headed by David Kimche, director-general of the Foreign Ministry. Other members would be Maj. Gen. Avraham Tamir, head of the army's planning division, Eliyahu Rubinstein, the Foreign Ministry's legal adviser, Yitzhak Lior, the Foreign Ministry's representative in Beirut, and two brigadier generals, Uri Saguy and Amos Gilboa.

Sharon said Wednesday that the United States would be invited to play a role "not as mediators but as participants" in the talks. But he insisted Israel and Lebanon would bargain directly.

"If they (the Americans) would like to sign the agreement as witnesses of course we will be satisfied, and if they would like to give any guarantees to this agreement which I'm sure will be achieved, of course Israel will be glad, as well as Lebanon, I'm sure," Sharon told reporters during a tour of the Egyptian border in the Gaza Strip.

He projected a "major role" for the Americans in bringing about the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon because "they are the only ones who can talk to the Syrians and, through emissaries, to the PLO, but when it comes to normalization and security arrangements in Lebanon, the talks must be direct talks, and the agreement to be signed will be an agreement between the Lebanese and Israeli government. That is a must, because we have to live together."

In addition to the Israeli troops who invaded Lebanon on June 6 to drive Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas away from the border, there are more than 30,000 Syrian troops who have been in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76

Lebanese civil war, and thousands of PLO guerrillas who took refuge in Syrian-run areas following the guerrilla evacuation from Beirut in August.

There was no immediate word on who would represent the United States. The State Department said Tuesday in Washington it would not rule out the return of presidential envoy Philip C. Habib.

Israel removed the final stumbling block to negotiations on Sunday when it lifted its demand that the talks be held alternatively in Jerusalem and Beirut. Lebanon had balked at meeting in Jerusalem because it might imply recognition of Israel's annexation of predominantly Arab East Jerusalem.

While the venue and timing appear to be set, a question remains, at least in public, over what will be discussed.

Lebanon has said repeatedly it will only talk about a withdrawal of Israeli forces. But Israeli officials stressed that the working paper negotiated secretly with Lebanon was a package deal, and there would be no final withdrawal without normalization and security arrangements in southern Lebanon.

"The central issue under discussion is the security arrangements and normalization between Israel and Lebanon," Sharon told reporters during the border tour.

The talks should culminate in a non-belligerency agreement between Lebanon and Israel, he said, adding, it "is the first step towards peace, and I personally believe Lebanon will be the second Arab country which will have a peace agreement with Israel."

Egypt was the first Arab nation to make peace with the Jewish state as a result of the 1978 U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace formula.

Holidays Bring '82 Tax Forms

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as regularly as Christmas brings bills, the holidays bring a parcel of greetings from your government.

The 1982 federal income tax forms will be in the mailboxes of millions of Americans before New Year's Day.

"Traditionally they arrive days after Christmas, between Christmas and New Year's," said Internal Revenue Service spokesman Scott D. Waffle.

More than 89 million forms are being mailed this year, and more than half — 47 million — are the traditional 1040 long forms.

The rest are the 1040A short forms. And this year, taxpayers who get the short form will also receive the government's latest attempt at simplifying tax paying — the 1040EZ.

The new form is less than half the size of the older short one. It has just 11 lines, and one of them — the $1,000 personal deduction — is already filled in. Waffle says it's designed for the "simple filer" — people with no dependents or tax credits, with income only from wages, salaries and tips and no more than $400 in interest.

"We want the taxpayer to decide which filing benefits them," Waffle said.

The individual income tax forms have been printed at 65 locations around the country and are being mailed from post offices in those areas.

Printing and mailing all those forms cost the government $17 million, the IRS said, and the cost of printing and mailing all IRS forms and publications is $58 million.

Americans who haven't filed income taxes before probably won't be mailed a form. They can pick one up at post offices, libraries and other locations.

The IRS expects 95.6 million individual returns to be filed for the 1982 tax year, and it expects about 75 million people will receive refunds — about the same as last year.

The workers at IRS have some other little-known facts about this year's tax forms:

— If you stacked all the tax packages sent by mail one on top of the other they would reach 210 miles into the sky.

— If bunched together, the individual tax-form packages would fill 625 tractor-trailer trucks or three 110-car freight trains.

— Those 1-inch by 4-inch gummed labels on the tax forms together would weigh 105,000 pounds.

And how does the IRS know all this? "We get a slack time, we start looking for trivia," said Waffle.

Guru Is Denied Residency

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, an Indian guru, has been denied permanent residency status in the United States because a previous visa application falsely stated he needed medical treatment here.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service on Wednesday also rejected his petition seeking status as a religious leader or teacher, saying the guru has been observing a period of silence at his commune near Antler, Ore., and therefore is not teaching.

The INS said if he does not renew the application by Jan. 21, deportation proceedings will be instituted.

Bit Deputy, Fined $1000

HOUSTON (AP) — A 24-year-old construction worker who bit a deputy sheriff in a fight must pay the official $782 for his medical expenses, lost wages and torn uniform, a judge says.

State District Judge Doug Shaver also sentenced Johnny Herron of League City to six years probation and fined him $1,000 for the Nov. 14 scuffle at a Seabrook restaurant.

The sentence was part of a plea bargain agreement, Harris County assistant district attorney Ken Mingleddorf said.

He said Deputy J.A. Johnson suffered severe swelling, bruises and scratches on the arm that was bitten.

Johnson was sent to investigate a disturbance at the restaurant, where the officer found Herron celebrating his birthday with friends and acting in an disorderly manner, Mingleddorf said.

Herron argued with Johnson and when the deputy tried to subdue Herron, he was bitten on the arm, according to a police report.

"He just lit on like a bulldog," Mingleddorf said. "He just wouldn't let go."

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Wednesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 46. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 46 percent of your hot water needs.

Afghan War Enters 4th Year; Fighting Continues

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Afghanistan's poorly armed Moslem rebels, out-gunned by thousands of Soviet soldiers, say they eagerly await another winter of war because they can hide by day and attack during the long nights.

"The daylight hours will be shorter so we won't be so exposed," said a spokesman for the fundamentalist Hezbi Islamic group, believed the largest of 24 insurgent groups which have been fighting Soviet forces for three years.

"The shorter hours also give the Soviets less time to attack us," said the rebel spokesman, Mohammed Sharafat. "If we had more foreign weapons we could do a lot more than we are doing."

Since the Soviets intervened on Dec. 27, 1979, the guerrillas have put up stiffer resistance than expected in a war that seemingly drags on with no end in sight. Neither side has made appreciable gains and civilians have borne the brunt of fighting, which rages in nearly all 29 provinces.

U.S. officials estimate the Soviets have increased their troop commitment from 90,000 to 105,000. They also charge the Soviets have used chemical weapons and intensified their efforts in 1982 to smash the insurgency against the Moscow-backed regime they helped install.

An estimated 5,000 Soviet soldiers have died in the conflict and an additional 5,000 to 10,000 either have been wounded or fallen ill with diseases such as hepatitis, U.S. officials say.

As for the Afghan government forces, the State Department in Washington says based on its information the army has no more than 30,000 to 40,000 troops and loses about 10,000 annually through desertions and 5,000 through casualties.

The State Department estimates the rebels dominate 75 percent to 80 percent of the country.

"It seems the Soviets grossly miscalculated," said a Western diplomatic source who monitors Afghan affairs. "There are no indications that the Soviets are prepared to pull out. I think we're in for a long haul."

Most of the rebel groups operate from this dusty frontier town 50 miles from the Afghan border and 250 east of Kabul.

The Afghan and Soviet authorities rarely allow Western journalists to cover the war. Most information is obtained through diplomatic dispatches from Kabul, rebel interviews and accounts from refugees fleeing the fighting.

Afghan President Babrak Karmal, installed in a Soviet-backed coup after the 1979 intervention, has said Soviet troops would not be withdrawn from his landlocked central Asian nation until the insurgency is crushed.

The president's latest remarks, made Monday in Moscow at celebrations marking the Soviet Union's 60th anniversary, dampened speculation the Kremlin may be rethinking its involvement in Afghanistan since Yuri V. Andropov took over as Soviet leader following the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev Nov. 10.

However, international pressure is expected to intensify next year to get Moscow to withdraw troops from Afghanistan, so the 2.7 million refugees who fled to Pakistan and the 1 million others in Iran can return home.

This year, for the first time, Soviet troops have conducted several massive military operations to dampen resistance.

Two major guerrilla strongholds — Panjsher Valley and Paghman, both north of Kabul — were the scenes of the bitterest fighting since Soviet troops rolled across the border.

Both attacks were repulsed by guerrillas, but devastation to agricultural land and livestock almost certainly will cause hunger for the bulk of the civilian population.

The Mujahideen, or Islamic holy warriors, as the guerrillas call themselves, retaliated with bombing attacks on Kabul. As 1982 draws to a close such tactics have become almost a daily occurrence, according to diplomatic dispatches from the city.

This year the guerrillas also have better weapons than the vintage World War I rifles they once used to fend off the Soviet and Afghan government forces, though rebel leaders decline to say where the new arms come from.

They also are better organized, despite their bitter complaints about what they call the lack of outside help.

Seldom a day passes when there is not at least one story of a bloody clash. Independent confirmation is rarely available, and the only other mirror on the war is a weekly briefing given by diplomats and military intelligence sources in Islamabad, Pakistan's capital.

The stalemate is unlikely to change in the coming year despite repeated condemnation by Western nations of continuing Soviet presence in Afghanistan.

"We want a solution to this war, but there's only so much we can do," said a U.S. source, who did not want to be named. "Until Moscow reverses its policy, the war will continue to drag on. We could be looking at another two or three more years."

Producer Wants Start TV Show For Suicides

LOS ANGELES (AP) — People considering suicide would be the stars of a TV series proposed by a man who contends that the program, "Second Chance," would save lives.

"We'll set up a suicide hot line, and when a call comes in, we'll send out a psychiatrist or counselor to talk to that person, and we'll also send out a camera," Laurence Schwab said. "The purpose is to talk the person out of suicide."

He said he is trying to recruit investors and make a pilot of the program.

The Suicide Prevention Center in Los Angeles has denounced the proposal as "potentially dangerous for suicidal persons seeking help."

The center issued a statement saying it could "provoke some individuals, who might have been helped, into actually killing themselves, and might attract others to act suicidally because of the publicity involved."

Schwab, who described himself as a 60-year-old writer, teacher and former television staff director in New York, said in a recent interview that a former Air Force psychiatrist, whom he did not identify, has agreed to be his roving suicide counselor.

Asked if the program amounted to exploiting the miseries of would-be suicide victims, Schwab replied, "I'll get some money out of it, but not much. What I'm getting out of it is a fantastic sense of accomplishment and a chance to save lives."

"But certainly it's exploitation," he added. "Everything is exploitation."

'Captain Kangaroo' is exploitation. 'Laverne and Shirley' is exploitation. But this is not another one of those comedies or game shows. This is important."

Asked why someone contemplating suicide would want to confide to a psychiatrist in front of a television camera, Schwab said, "The people who really want to commit suicide won't. But for others, there's a little twinge, a little voice saying, 'Am I doing the right thing?' This is a cry. These people are reaching out."

Schwab said viewers would be warned not to watch the show if they are "squeamish."

He said it is "unlikely" that he would ever televise an actual suicide because "we want to stop suicides." But he added, "Well, we would (televise a suicide) as long as we're not the ones to instigate it, if we weren't part of it. That's what the press likes, you know, drama."

Television columnist Howard Rosenberg of the Los Angeles Times wrote in Monday's editions that Schwab's proposal is perhaps "merely the logical, insane extension" of news programs focusing on human misery and of television programs such as the old "Queen for a Day," which he said "was notorious for encouraging woe-filled contestants to out-blubber each other in pursuit of a big payday."

Rosenberg also said Schwab's proposal is an outgrowth of current "reality" television programs such as "People's Court" and the syndicated "Couples," on which real people appear before a real judge and real psychiatrist to discuss their legal and personal problems.

Urge Negotiations In Central America

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats have urged President Reagan to seek negotiated solutions to the political turmoil in Central America rather than take sides in conflicts there.

"The time has come to stop the killing and start the talking in Central America," 17 Democrats said Wednesday in a statement billed as "a Democratic alternative" to Reagan's policies in the region.

The Democrats, including Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Latin America, said Reagan's approach fosters polarization and radical political stands.

They group said that since Reagan took office in 1981, civil wars in El Salvador and Guatemala have grown worse, the threat of war between Nicaragua and Honduras has increased, and democratic forces in leftist Nicaragua have lost influence.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said there would be no White House comment on the Democrats' statement.

On El Salvador, the administration has opposed any negotiations with leftist guerrillas that would give them a role in the government. This would amount to giving the guerrillas at the negotiating table what they have not been able to win on the battlefield, officials have said.

They also point to the U.S.-backed March 28 elections in El Salvador as an example of that country's democratic development.

On the tensions between Nicaragua and Honduras, the administration is supporting a Costa Rican-led initiative aimed in part at achieving an accommodation between those countries.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market gained more ground in a quiet preholiday session today, continuing its advance of the past two days.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 30 points Tuesday and Wednesday, rose 5.98 to 1,041.02 by noon.

Gainers held a 5-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The markets will be closed Friday in observance of Christmas.

Henry Kaufman, economist at Salomon Brothers, said he expected the Federal Reserve, mindful of weakness in the economy and the slowing of inflation, to continue its recent policy of encouraging rates to decline.

Kaufman forecast more reductions in the Fed's discount rate, which has been lowered from 12 percent last summer to 8 1/2 percent now.

Amax led the active list, up 1/2 at 19 3/4. A 1.95 million-share block of the metals and energy company's stock traded at 19 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index gained .39 to 80.26. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .86 at 330.82.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 30.87 million shares at noon, against 42.75 million at the same point Wednesday.

Flaherty Drops A Fund-Raiser

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Plans for a major post-holiday fund-raiser have been abandoned by David T. Flaherty, chairman of the N.C. Republican Party.

Instead, top GOP brass will get a talk by Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., and a hotly contested fight over a vacant Republican National Committee seat.

That will come at the bargain-basement rate of $5 per person, the registration fee for the Jan. 8 meeting of the state party's 350-member central committee.

Flaherty said plans were abandoned because of a potential conflict with another party event and not because the state GOP couldn't attract a nationally-prominent speaker as the star attraction.

The conflict involves the party's "Hall of Fame" presentations, which are scheduled for Jan. 29 in Greensboro to honor Republican leaders.

DIES - Jack Webb, who starred as the stone-faced detective of television's "Dragnet" series, died early today in his west Hollywood home of an apparent heart attack, police said. He was 62. (AP Laserphoto)

Identified His Sister's Body

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) - A homicide detective sent to investigate a killing inspected the victim's driver's license, then looked at the body and identified his sister, police said.

By the time detective Charles "Buddy" San Marco had arrived Monday night, the suspect in the case, Steven A. Craig, had been led away, police said. San Marco left as soon as he learned the victim was his sister, Charlene San Marco Leone, 37, police said.

Craig was charged with second-degree murder because there was no evidence of premeditation in the shooting death at his apartment, police said. No motive had been established in the case.

Boeing Seeks Sale To Libya

SEATTLE (AP) - The Boeing Co. is asking the federal government for permission to sell up to 12 jetliners to Libya for that country's state airline, company spokesmen say.

"I'll confirm the essence of it, not the details," said Pete Bush, Boeing's director of public relations and advertising.

In 1980, the State Department blocked a similar proposed Boeing sale to Libya on grounds that other Boeing jets had been used to ferry troops to Uganda to support Idi Amin.

"This is a new submission," Jim Boynton, a spokesman for the Boeing Commercial Airplane Co., said Wednesday. "Times change and perhaps the State Department has a different attitude. That's why we submitted an application."

Boynton said a consideration in the application is the possibility that Libya will go airplane shopping elsewhere.

"That's a distinct possibility," Boynton said. "If Libyan Air can't get the equipment it needs then it will certainly turn to somebody that will sell it to them."

"They're looking for the best equipment to meet their requirements. If the State Department says no, they'll take their business to the next guy."

Boynton said the airplanes would be sold for commercial use and converting them for military use would be difficult.

If approved, the deal would be worth $600 million, The Washington Post reported in today's editions. The application was submitted to the Commerce Department on Nov. 30, the paper said.

Bonnie Whyte, a spokeswoman for the International Trade Administration, a branch of the Commerce Department, said she could not comment on the application.

But she said federal law requires that any proposed sale to Libya involving more than $7 million be reviewed by the Commerce and State departments and reported to Congress.

Boeing has been suffering from reduced plane sales because of the depressed airline industry. It reduced its Puget Sound-area workforce by 8,900 employees this year and recently announced it would cut an additional 8,900 jobs in 1983.

Four Collisions Here Wednesday

An estimated $7,400 damage resulted Wednesday from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police.

Damage was heaviest, police said, in a 12:12 p.m. collision on 14th Street, 100 feet south of the Dickinson Avenue intersection, involving a truck driven by George Donald Best of 307 Circle Drive and Bradford Marshall Brown of 316 Rutledge Road.

No charges were made by investigators who estimated damage at $1,200 to the Best truck and $1,500 to the Brown car.

Cars driven by Willie Woodrow Daniels of 206 Stutz St. and Deborah Sue Lorezetti of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 4:35 p.m. at the intersection of Washington and Ninth streets, causing an estimated $700 damage to the Daniels car and $1,600 damage to the Lorezetti vehicle.

Police charged Daniels with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety in connection with the mishap.

Officers said cars driven by Ruth Page Allen of 61 Quail Ridge and Charles Edward Long of Route 13, Greenville, collided about 4:45 p.m. at the intersection of Ridgeway and Broad streets, resulting in an estimated $1,100 damage to the Allen car and $800 damage to the Long car.

Long was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign. A car driven by Donald Tenetha Roberson of Bethel and a truck driven by Tony Ray Peaden of Route 3, Greenville, collided about 11:53 a.m. at the intersection of Washington and Ninth streets, resulting in an estimated $800 damage to the Roberson car and $200 damage to the truck.

Officers charged a third driver, whose vehicle was not directly involved in the mishap, with parking too close to a stop sign.

Eugene Tyson is a professor in our books. For about 14 years he's been teaching new employees and retraining existing employees in the arts of batching and dyeing fabrics.

Batching, which involves preparing fabric for dyeing is a critical part of the manufacturing process.

That same care must be followed throughout our operations, which is why training by people like Eugene Tyson is so important.

That's why we credit his pupils for his success as a trainer. "I've gotten great support from management and our employees. With that kind of help you can't fail."

The job's fulfilling. I'm part of a team that has direct bearing on the future of our plant and everyone who works here. So when you set up a fabric style and it performs like we want it to, there's a satisfaction that very few jobs can match.

Predict Conditions To Worsen Before Improving

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina business and government leaders say 1982 was a dismal year for the state's economy, and predict the situation may get worse before it gets better.

The state's small businesses and top industries — textiles, agriculture, furniture and tourism — have been hit hard as consumers have kept a tight grip on their pocketbooks.

According to the state Employment Security Commission, the number of people unemployed in North Carolina increased by 94,500 from November 1981 to November 1982 — a 51.3 percent increase. That brought the total number of people without jobs to 278,700 through November.

State government was forced to cut spending as revenue collections lagged and industrial expansion fell by one-third.

"In terms of the numbers of people affected, this is the worst year since World War II," said Dave Garrison, state ESC assistant director for research.

But business and government observers say North Carolina fared better than most states and is in a better position than most states to move forward once the long-awaited recovery begins.

"There's no question that 1982 in our state reflected what was happening nationally, and it wasn't good," said Steve Meehan, assistant secretary of the N.C. Department of Commerce.

"But looking to the future, we're laying the foundation for long-term growth. What happens next year depends largely on the national economy, but we're going to get our share of new industry and the industry we already have is modernizing."

According to data compiled by the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and First Union National Bank, 35 percent of the state's goods and services are related to manufacturing. Thus, manufacturing layoffs contributed heavily to the increase in North Carolina's joblessness rate from 6.3 percent for 1981 to 9.5 percent in November. The nationwide rate is 10.4 percent.

Employment decreased by 17,300 in textiles, 5,800 in electrical machinery, 4,400 in furniture and fixtures, 2,100 in rubber and plastics, 2,700 in apparel and related industries, 2,700 in fabricated metals, 11,100 in construction and 4,100 in retail trade during the same period. Agricultural employment fell by 4,200.

"I think we'll probably get up to 10 percent or higher in January, then start some slow improvement," said Garrison.

The only area with a significant increase in employment was services, a broad category including amusements, automobile service, restaurants, hotels and motels, private legal and medical aid, and related businesses.

Services employment was up by 2.3 percent, or 8,300 jobs.

Garrison said if auto sales and construction pick up, and there is good weather for farmers and other outdoor workers, 1983 may be a good year.

"But that's a lot of ifs," he cautioned.

William R. Hackney of First Union National Bank said 1982 was one of the worst years since the end of World War II for the North Carolina economy, equalled only by the 1974-75 recession. Nationally, the situation is worse this year than it was seven years ago.

"The years 1974 and 1975 were a very bad period for the North Carolina economy. I think the current condition of the state's economy is about as bad as it was then," he said.

Statistics compiled by Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., which issues a monthly North Carolina business index, show declines in key sectors of the economy.

New car sales in the first 10 months of 1982 fell by 27,113 from the same period the previous year, according to Carol Pope of Wachovia. Construction permits for single- and multi-family housing and commercial structures, plus additions to existing buildings, fell by $381.3 million.

Retail sales through September were down $28.3 million from the same period in 1981.

Farm prices languished as cash receipts for North Carolina farm products fell to $3.9 billion from $4.2 billion last year, said Frank Bordeaux, chief economist with the state Department of Agriculture.

Following the nationwide trend, the state's inflation rate fell to 5.1 percent, a sharp drop from 10.2 percent in 1981.

Richard B. Roberts, group vice president in charge of Wachovia's Funds Management Department, labeled 1982 North Carolina business activity "flat."

"Consumers and businesses ... have adopted a 'wait-and-see' attitude," said Roberts. "Businesses will not increase spending for current or future production until they see consumer demand increasing. Consumers will not accelerate their buying until they have greater confidence in the future."

Roberts said prospects for 1983 are mixed.

"However, the state has solidly established itself as a home for future development in the microelectronics field," Roberts said. "The benefits of this new emphasis will be realized over the coming years."

Meehan said North Carolina has brought $11 billion in investment since 1977 and remains attractive to industries seeking to relocate. The new N.C. Microelectronics Center helps make the state a haven for high technology, he added.

Additionally, longstanding industrial stalwarts such as textiles are trying to be more competitive with out-of-state and foreign manufacturers.

While complaining that unfair trade barriers have kept North Carolina textiles from selling well abroad, Dave French of Burlington Industries acknowledged that the domestic textile industry needs to be more productive.

"We've made a commitment to modernize our equipment and use more innovative marketing techniques," said French. "Our sales and earnings were down 11 percent in fiscal 1982, but we're getting ready to take advantage of any economic upturn."

Say 'Koo' Invited Join Family Party

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew has invited American erotic movie actress Koo Stark to join the royal family for New Year's Eve, the Daily Express reported today.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman refused to confirm or deny the tabloid newspaper's report, saying it never identifies private guests of Queen Elizabeth II. He confirmed, however, that Prince Andrew would be among the members of the royal family staying at the queen's Sandringham estate in Norfolk.

Under the headline "Koo Goes Too," the paper said Andrew, 22, had asked Miss Stark to join his family to see in the New Year at the queen's estate.

The paper said Miss Stark, 26, had been invited to join the royal party towards the end of next week and will be given a huge guest suite at the 274-room estate.

"She will be expected to join the royals for dinner each night," the tabloid said, adding she also has been invited to go pheasant-shooting with Andrew, his older brother Prince Charles and his father Prince Philip.

The paper said all the queen's closest relatives would be at Sandringham except Princess Margaret and Andrew's other brother, Prince Edward.

The Daily Express report was the latest in a series of accounts linking Andrew romantically with the actress.

Finding New Ways To Steal Gas And Electricity

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — As utility prices soar, so do losses at the hands of energy thieves, who are finding increasingly sophisticated ways to "steal" gas and electricity.

And industry representatives say the problem is not confined to those who cannot pay.

"We're getting hit in middle America. People have a lot of debts and they consider their electric bills a nuisance," said Roger Krenkler, energy theft coordinator for Southern California Edison.

Theft losses nationwide were placed by energy officials at more than $3 billion in 1981.

"Right now anti-utility sentiment runs pretty high," Krenkler said. "We used to be the good guys when our product was dirt-cheap, but conditions change."

The doctoring of electric meters focuses on slowing, stopping or even reversing the spinning discs, which control the kilowatt-hour dials. Gas meters can also be adjusted, and offenders have on occasion toyed with underground gas pipes in order to try to restore disconnected service.

"I guess I've got about 400 slides of illegal theft restarts and you wouldn't believe what people will do — anything that won't leak gas," said William Oland of Philadelphia Gas Works.

"We find a lot of very exotic theft techniques," said Krenkler, who did not want to name them for fear they could be copied. "Let's just say they involve rather sophisticated switching processes that circumvent detection."

The utilities are fighting back with special meter locks, bonuses for meter-readers who detect theft and computer checks for erratic energy consumption.

Philadelphia Gas Works has instituted an around-the-clock telephone service for people to report tampering.

During a "typical" call Oct. 22, a woman began urgently describing her neighbor's efforts to reconnect the gas, which had been shut off for non-payment.

"I want to know if he's got gas on or what," she shouted. "I don't want to get blown up in the street!"

A check showed that the gas had been illegally restored. It was turned back off.

As in most cases, no charges were filed. Utilities say the main objective is to stop illegal activity and try to recoup lost charges, if possible.

When they do go to court, law enforcement officials say they are often hindered by judges who don't take such cases seriously.

"The courts have been singularly unsympathetic to it," said Joseph Casey, chief of the economic crime unit of the Philadelphia district attorney's office.

"Judges have said, 'This should be a civil case. Why are you tying up our courts,'" Casey said.

Krenkler said about 50 successful prosecutions have been obtained this year based on theft cases involving Southern California Edison.

"Normally they'll pay the court costs and restitution. We've had very little jail time," he said.

Duquesne Light Co. of Pittsburgh is still trying to recover $27,086 it says physician William Polan owes for electricity he used between 1971 and 1981. Polan has contested the charges.

Last month, a Duquesne crew arrived at Polan's 19-room home in an effort to increasingly, the larger utilities say they are facing not just individual energy cheats, but professionals who will doctor a meter for a fee.

"People will pay $100," Krenkler said. "He (the professional) may use a network of agents. He may never negotiate personally and is not necessarily ever known to the customer."

It took Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. of Allentown seven months to catch up with Raymond Raimondi, who is now serving a 3-to-6 year prison term after pleading guilty to theft of service in 1981.

Raimondi had a hand in meter-tampering schemes at at least four businesses in the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre area, the utility charged.

After he was caught, PP&L received $60,000 restitution from several of the businesses involved. But it may not have been enough.

"I must have taken $20,000 for (a commercial meter-tampering client) and the power company got $1,900 restitution," Raimondi was quoted as saying.

People regard energy theft as victimless crime, but it really isn't, say utilities.

Consolidated Edison Co. of New York has been active in fighting the theft "because in effect the loss is made up in higher rates to good-paying customers," said spokesman Martin Gitten.

Con Ed uncovered 12,000 instances of service theft in 1981 that resulted in $7 million lost, Gitten said.

"Most people are really trying to conserve," Oland said. "But then you get these deadbeats who drive up rates for everybody."

Hopes To Bar Inmate Release

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt has demanded that the state Parole Commission conduct a public hearing on parole granted a Lumberton official whose sentence was commuted by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Gerald Hill had been scheduled for pre-Christmas parole. Hill was sentenced in May 1981 to seven to 10 years on 19 counts of false pretense, bribery, conspiracy and corporate malfeasance charges stemming from his activities as director of the Lumberton Housing Authority.

Gov. Hunt reduced Hill's sentence on Dec. 15 to one to 10 years, making him eligible for parole immediately.

Britt, district attorney for Robeson and Scotland counties, said the parole commission must adhere to state law governing the early release of felons.

He wants a public hearing on the matter. Officials say it would be the commission's first public hearing on a parole issue.

The law requires that the district attorney be given 30 days notice before a parole hearing for prisoners who have served less than half their maximum sentences.

"I just made up my mind that I would follow a certain course of action if the parole commission ever failed to notify me of an early release again," Britt said. "I believe this sort of thing destroys the credibility of our court system."

After Britt said he would oppose Hill's early release, the parole commission sent Britt written notification that Hill is being considered for parole.

The letter said a pre-parole investigation had been started into Hill's case in order to determine his suitability for parole.

Hopeful News in Medicine

A new drug, diflunisal, has recently been approved for the treatment of osteoarthritis. This new drug does not contain steroids (or cortisone) and is not a narcotic agent. Yet it is said to bring relief from pain within an hour. In some instances the pain relieving activity lasts for almost 12 hours.

The new drug is a derivative of salicylic acid yet it differs from aspirin by its chemical structure.

The new clinical studies suggest that diflunisal is superior to aspirin because it has fewer distressing effects on the stomach and intestine. The early trials have been sufficiently exciting as to make this drug potentially important in the treatment of rheumatic arthritis. It will be watched carefully by doctors everywhere.

A new artificial knee for victims of arthritis seems to be stronger and more effective than most of the previous prosthetic appliances.

Dr. David Hungerford and his co-workers at the Johns Hopkins Hospital and Good Samaritan Hospital in Baltimore developed this artificial knee. It is said to be the first prosthesis that allows the patient's own bone cells to grow into the device itself.

Twenty-two patients have been followed for an average of 15 months with this new device and X-rays positively show that the growth of the bone cells actually took place.

It is said that the "cementless" device, called the Porous-Coated Anatomic Knee, is expected to grow stronger as the patient's own bone cells get a grip on the new joint.

The doctors believe that one half of the 40,000 Americans who undergo surgery for knee replacement will be candidates for this new artificial knee.

It is hoped that the benefits will be translated to other joints before long.

A group of scientists at the University of Virginia have produced a synthetic form of a natural anti-cancer agent. Dr. Sidney M. Hecht and his colleagues have created an anti-tumor drug that shows some potential against cancer.

The new drug is derived from a group known as bleomycins. At the present time, the cost is enormous. Dr. Hecht believes that soon they will be able to synthesize this new drug and make it available for general distribution.

Active research continues in an effort to gain a better understanding of how it works as an anti-cancer drug.

Though such work is highly speculative and is not yet available for practical treatment of cancer, it demonstrated the hope that lies within the framework of modern science and medicine. Dedicated scientists must eventually find the answer to this devastating disease of modern mankind.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Gatlin Leads Conley Past Panthers

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A 40-minute delay in the start of the championship game might have taken a little out of the two contenders in the Pitt Holiday Classic last night, but at any rate neither team shot well as D.H. Conley's Vikings downed North Pitt, 57-42.

Both coaches said it was the other's defense that made the shooting percentages low, but nevertheless, the long wait did have to dull the intensity of the two.

The wait came about when, during the warmup period prior to the game, a bolt holding the breakaway basket on the Conley end of the court snapped and the basket tumbled to the floor. The bolt had apparently been damaged by an earlier slam and the combined banging of a number of balls during the warmups finished the job.

It took about 40 minutes for the basket to be reinstalled — and even then, it had to be remounted directly to the backboard instead of the breakaway bracket.

And all the while the two teams just lounged around waiting.

When the game finally got underway, it was close only for the first 12 minutes. Midway through the second period, Conley broke out to a six-point lead, and pulled steadily away after that.

Conley ended up with a 47.8 percentage — but it took a six-for-nine final period to bring it up from the 43.2 it had coming into the period. North Pitt made good on only 35.1 percent of its shots.

Another big difference was the foul line, where Conley hit on 13 of 14 attempts while North Pitt had only two of five.

Rebounding was almost even, North Pitt holding a 33-32 edge, and turnovers were not that great a difference either, 14 by the Panthers to nine by the Vikings.

North Pitt's Cobby Deans felt the big difference was the absence of two of his regulars, Greg Hines and David Keel. Hines went down with an ankle injury in Tuesday night's game with Rose, while Keel has missed several games with illness.

"He (Conley coach Shelly Marsh) put a box and one on Dennis (Bradley) and we never adjusted to it," Deans said. "The other fellows just stood around."

As a result, North Pitt got the ball inside for shots only twice during the evening. The rest of the time, they either shot from the outside or depended on rebounding for inside shots.

While Deans said that the wait for the game to start wasn't enjoyable, he really didn't feel that it contributed to the lack of good shooting.

Marsh also joined in those feelings, saying he felt the reason neither team shot that well was the tough defense put up by the other.

"Any tournament win is a good win, though," he added. "And I thought we did play good defense tonight."

Marsh said that the Vikings borrowed a defense from the Rampants for the game. "I thought they did a good job on North Pitt. So we took what they did, modified it and extended it." What they did, he explained, was to contain Bradley in the lane, and also prevent him from getting the ball on the baseline.

"He did start to do more after we got the lead," Marsh said. "but we were trying to keep the clock moving by then. We wanted their guards to shoot more and to keep them outside. To beat them, you have to keep the ball away from Bradley."

Not that Bradley still didn't get it. He finished with 16 points, the only Panther in double figures.

And while Bradley was being somewhat shut down, Conley's Keith Gatlin was having a few problems himself. While he finished with a game-high 23 points, including nine of ten at the line, he missed on a number of early field goal attempts before heating up for much of the second half. Donald Wilson added ten points for the Vikes, mainly on low set shots.

Conley took the initial lead on baskets by Wilson and Gatlin before Greg Briley and Bradley tied it up at 4-4. The Vikings went back by four again, 8-4, before Charles Harris, Keith Clark and Briley all hit, putting North Pitt ahead for the only time in the game, 10-8.

Alvin Clemons hit with 37 seconds left to tie it up, 10-10.

Clemons then hit again almost a minute into the second quarter for a 12-10 Conley lead. Bradley hit to knot it once more, but it was for the last time.

Gatlin then hit two in a row and after Harris scored again, another basket by Gatlin followed by one by Leon Cox ran the lead to 20-14.

Bradley and Briley both scored to cut it back to two, 20-18, with 2:25 left, but two free throws by Otis Payton, a basket by Gatlin and another by Payton ran the Vikings out to a 26-20 lead at intermission.

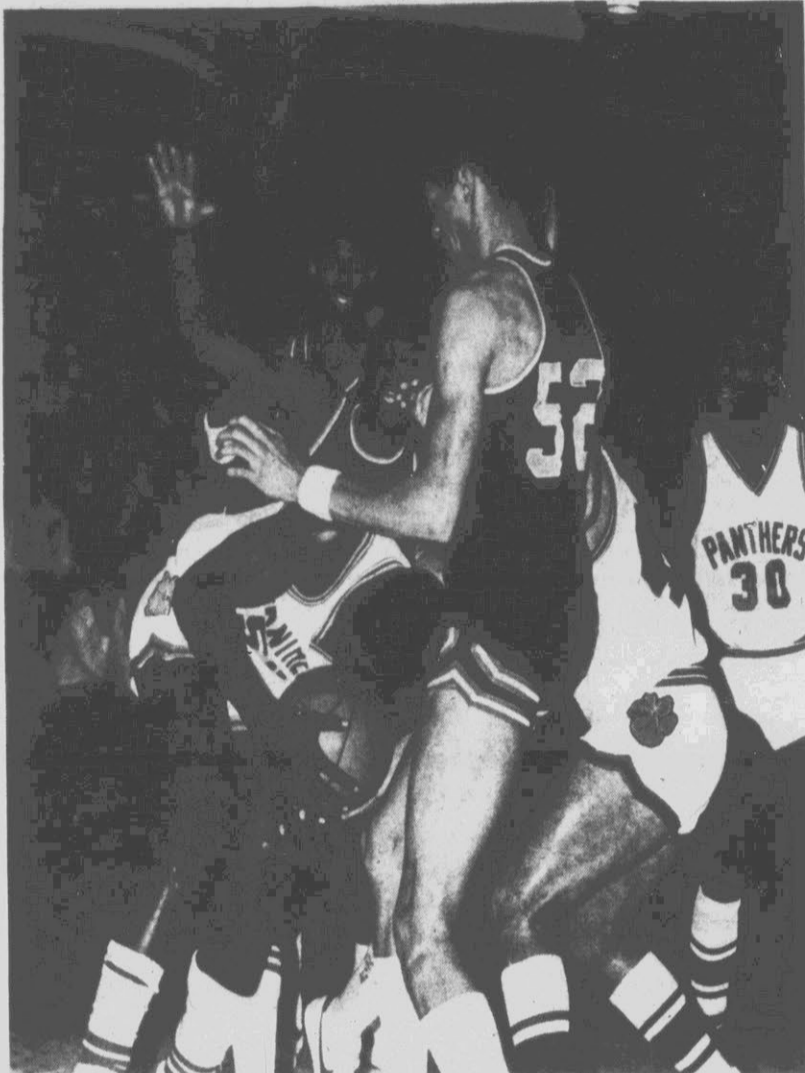

North Pitt managed only six points during the third period, hitting on just three of 11 shots. Conley, meanwhile was four of 11, but also added two free throws to push out to as much as a 12-point lead during the period at 34-22. Two late Panther baskets, followed by a basket from underneath by Gatlin with eight seconds left, gave Conley a 36-26 lead as the last quarter got underway.

Conley quickly opened up a 14-point ledge, 44-30, during the early minutes, as Payton got two baskets.

But Bradley ignited one last rally by the Panthers, as North Pitt scored eight in a row to trim the lead to 44-38. That was the last gasp, however, as Gatlin helped Conley to outscore North Pitt, 13-4, in the final two minutes, scoring seven of those 13 himself.

The win boosted the Conley record to 7-1 and avenged the only loss the Vikings have had this year. North Pitt dropped to 6-3.

The Vikings travel to Farmville Central on January 4, while North Pitt plays host to Charles B. Aycock in its Eastern Carolina Conference opener.

Rough Going

North Pitt's Dennis Bradley (50) finds his path to the basket blocked by D.H. Conley's Reggie Smith (52) after he came up with a rebound during last night's Pitt Holiday Classic championship game. Other players include North Pitt's Ken Whitehurst (42) and Charles Harris (30), along with Conley's Keith Gatlin (center rear). Conley won, 57-42. (Reflector Photo by Katie Zernhelt)

Foster Released From Hospital

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — University of South Carolina basketball Coach Bill Foster, just released from the hospital after suffering a heart attack, says he plans to go Christmas shopping Friday.

But Foster, who underwent coronary by-pass surgery a week ago, said he does not know when he will return to work.

"That's going to be up to my doctors," he said. "I may know something after I see them in about three weeks."

Foster underwent coronary by-pass surgery last week after suffering a heart attack during the South Carolina-Purdue basketball game.

Foster's wife Shirley picked him up at the hospital and then drove him by the basketball office on the way home. The coach said he wanted to thank the people who had sent flowers, fruit, cards and other messages during his hospitalization.

The coach said he feels good.

"I just can't do too much. I don't have much strength," he said.

Foster said he did not know if he would return to coaching this season.

"I have to really take it in stages and the next stage is a physical in three weeks. It will be an important one and will see if I've followed things religiously, which I'm sure I will because I'm just grateful to just be able to be sitting here and feeling as good as I do."

South Carolina assistant Steven Steinwedel is handling the coaching duties until Foster returns.

All-Tourney Selections

Three players each from the Pitt Holiday Classic finalists were named to the All-Tournament team as selected by the four participating coaches last night.

Champion D.H. Conley and runner-up North Pitt each placed three players on the ten-player team, while consolation winner Farmville Central, and Rose each landed two.

Selected to the team from Conley were Keith Gatlin, Otis Payton and Leon Cox. Gatlin averaged 23.5 points for the two games, while Payton scored 11.5 and Cox had an 8.5 average.

Named from North Pitt were Dennis Bradley, Charles Harris and Greg Briley. Bradley scored 22 points a game for the twin-bill, while Harris had an 11.5 mark. Briley, who got only six points in the tournament, sparked North Pitt with his floor play.

Farmville Central landed Andrew Edwards and Tony Hargrove on the unit. Edwards scored at a 15.0 clip, while Hargrove added 13 points during the tournament.

Rose placed Allen Dickens and Mac Walston on the team. Walston led Rose with a 13.5 average, while Dickens hit at a 7.0 clip.

Deacons Romp, 100-69, Past Robert Morris Club

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — John Toms scored 18 points and Danny Young, cashing in on the 3-point line, added 16 as Wake Forest romped to a 100-69 non-conference college basketball victory over Robert Morris Wednesday night.

Wake Forest threw in 8-of-18 from 3-point range in its first exposure to the Atlantic Coast Conference's experimental rules and coasted to its sixth victory without a loss. With Young leading the way, the Demon Deacons canned seven of 10 attempts for 3 points in the first half.

The Demon Deacons scored the game's first 11 points and raced to a 55-28 halftime lead.

Young hit four of five 3-pointers on the way to 14 points in the first half, including eight points in one minute, as Wake Forest expanded its lead to 27-9 midway through the first half.

Wake Forest led by as many as 34 points in the second half after the Colonials scored the first eight points of the period.

Four different Demon Deacons hit 3-pointers. Although shooting 41 percent from the field, Wake Forest hit 38 of 50 free throws.

Jaguars Claw Past Rampants

Farmville Central, embarrassed in its 66-45 defeat at the hands of D.H. Conley Tuesday night, regained a little respect Wednesday night with a 52-49 victory over Rose High School in the consolation of the Pitt Holiday Classic at Rose.

Second half turnovers proved to be too big a problem for the Rampants, now 1-5, to overcome, as the Jaguars pulled past them, taking the lead early in the third quarter and building up as much as a nine-point lead early in the final period.

"We needed that," Coach Mike Terrell said afterwards. "It was a good win for us. We played much better on offense and defense, and our rebounding was good."

The Jaguars, now 5-4, did play well, hitting on 23 of 50 shots, 46 percent, while Rose made good on only 17 of 47, 36.2 percent. Rose did manage to outbounce Farmville, 36-32, but the slim margin came about only in the final period. Both teams had been dead even in rebounding until that point.

Rose committed 20 turnovers in the game, as compared to 16 for Farmville, but seven of those came in the third period when the Rampants got off only four shots at the basket, hitting on just one of them.

For a while, however, it looked like free throw shooting would do in the Jaguars. Leading by five, 48-43, with just under three minutes to play, the Jags missed five straight free throws, and Rose took advantage to cut the lead back to two, 48-46.

But with 29 seconds left, Reggie Gorham tossed in two, then, with 13 seconds remaining added two more to run the lead back to 52-47 before Allen Dickens hit a basket for the Rampants with two seconds left for the final margin.

"We did a good job of getting the ball inside," Terrell said. "We tried to get it inside as much as we could." That, however, did produce a number of turnovers for Farmville as Rose picked off a number of those inside passes.

"I thought we had a real good first half, but the second half was ragged for both teams," the Farmville coach continued. "We missed all those free throws there at the end. If we had made them, it wouldn't have been close. I'm glad they fouled Gorham though. He's a good free throw shooter and that's the reason we had him in there."

Rose coach Jim Brewington felt that the second half turnovers told the tale. "We were in the game without them," he said. "We were throwing it away, traveling and dropping too many passes."

"I think we've been playing pretty good defense," Brewington added. "If these guys ever find out what basketball is all about, they'll be a good ball club. But I think what a lot of people don't realize is that these clubs we've been playing are pretty good teams, too."

It was late in the first period before either team established any sort of lead over the other. Farmville never led during those early minutes, but tied the game three times — at 2-2, 6-6, and 8-8. Jeff Hopkins hit two free throws and Mac Walston scored off a fast break to run Rose out to a six-point lead, 16-10 with 1:32 left, but baskets by Tony Hargrove and Troy Hopkins cut it back to 16-14 before Dickens hit with five seconds left for an 18-14 lead.

Rose scored first to open a six-point edge again, but Farmville inched back slowly to finally pull within one on a jumper in the lane by Andrew Edwards, 25-24, with 2:38 left.

Half a minute later, Edwards hit an underhanded layup to put Farmville ahead for the first time, 26-25, but Dickens tapped back a missed shot to return the lead to Rose. Hopkins scored off the fast break with 42 seconds left in the half to stake the Jaguars to a 28-27 halftime lead.

In the third period, the turnovers killed the Rampant chances. After Walston returned Rose to the lead, 29-28 on two free throws, Edwards put Farmville back ahead — this time to stay.

Terrance Pettway added two jumpers for a 34-29 lead before Jay Mahoney hit two free throws for Rose. Gary Hobgood added two baskets for the Jags, making it 38-31. Hopkins hit for Rose at the end for a 38-33 Farmville lead.

Gorham and Hargrove both scored early baskets for a 42-33 lead for the Jaguars before Rose rallied on two free throws by Walston and a three-point play by Donnell Lee, cutting it to 42-38.

Then, after the lead climbed to 48-42, Walston hit a free throw and Hopkins followed with two more. Lee made the first of a one-and-one, cutting it back to 48-46 while Farmville was missing five chances at the line.

But Gorham's free throws slammed the door on the Rampants, ending their chances.

Edwards led Farmville's scoring with 16 points, while Hargrove added 12. Hopkins had 13 for Rose, with Lee adding 11.

Farmville returns to action on January 4, hosting D.H. Conley, while Rose opens Big East play at Northern Nash on January 7.

World B. Free Leads Cavaliers Past Pacers

By The Associated Press
Although World Free scored 23 points in the second half, it was the shot he didn't take in the final seconds that made Cleveland Cavaliers Coach Tom Nissalke happy.

Free scored 27 points as the Cavaliers defeated the Indiana Pacers 100-98 Wednesday night, and for good measure he passed to Cliff Robinson for a 15-foot, game-winning basket at the buzzer.

"We wanted to go to World and get the shot with no time left on the clock. Then we'd have overtime at worst," Nissalke said. "Cliff made a great play coming to get the ball because the play didn't quite work as planned, since they defended it well."

The victory was only the fourth in 26 games for the Cavaliers and broke their seven-game losing streak.

"The guys really went out of their way to get me the basketball. Once I hit a shot and get my rhythm, then I can be unstoppable," said Free, who was playing only his third National Basketball Association game with the Cavaliers.

In other NBA games Wednesday night, Boston outscored Chicago 140-131, Kansas City bombed Denver 146-102 and Los Angeles routed Utah 124-100.

Indiana led 95-85 with 6:40 remaining. Then Robinson and Steve Hayes then scored for the Cavaliers before Free alone outscored Indiana 9-2 for a 98-97 Cleveland lead with 29 seconds remaining.

"We were trying to protect a lead rather than play the same type of game that got us the lead. We kind of sat back and weren't aggressive on defense," Pacers guard Jerry Sichting said. Indiana was held to three points, all on free throws, in the last six minutes.

"It seems like we find a different way to lose a game every time," Indiana Coach Jack McKinney said. "We lost this one at the foul line."

The Pacers, who have lost five games in a row and are 9-17 overall, hit 16 of 30 foul shots.

Indiana center Herb Williams connected on one of two free throws to tie the game 98-98 with eight seconds to go, setting up Free's final pass to Robinson, who finished with 23 points for the Cavaliers.

Indiana was led by Butch Carter with 23 points and George Johnson with 17.

Celtics 140, Bulls 131
Larry Bird scored 18 of his 26 points in the first quarter as Boston raced to a 20-point lead in the third quarter en route to victory over Cleveland.

The Celtics, who lost three of six games during an eight-game stretch, led 100-80 with four minutes left in the third period. But the Bulls, with Reggie Theus scoring 21 of his career-high 46 points in the final quarter, got as close as six points before the rally fizzled.

Danny Ainge hit nine of 13 shots and scored 21 points for the Celtics, while Orlando Woolridge added 24 for Chicago.

Kings 146, Nuggets 102
Guard Kevin Loder scored a career-high 25 points to join six other Kansas City players in double figures in the easy triumph over Denver.

The Kings registered their highest point total since the club moved the franchise from Cincinnati to Kansas City 11 years ago. They outscored the Nuggets 16-3 in the first 3½ minutes of the game and then had a 22-5 spurt to close out the first quarter after Denver cut the deficit to 22-18.

"We were trying to win every quarter, that was our goal," Kansas City Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "Denver is a team we have a hard time with. This was the first time in a long time we beat them by this much. We just had their number tonight."

Kiki Vandeweghe paced the Nuggets with 28 points, while Eddie Johnson added 22 for Kansas City. Rookie LaSalle Thompson had 16 points on 8-of-10 shooting for the Kings.

Lakers 124, Jazz 100
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 21 points for Los Angeles and became the sixth NBA player to collect 14,000 rebounds in his career.

Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson both had 16 points at halftime as the Lakers led Utah 60-43. The Jazz, playing without injured forward Adrian Dantley, the NBA's leading scorer, never seriously threatened in the second half.

Terps Hosting No. 3 Bruins

By The Associated Press
Maryland, once proclaimed by Coach Lefty Driesell as the UCLA of the East, will get the chance to defeat the Bruins when third-ranked UCLA travels east to play the Terrapins tonight.

This year's Maryland club has logged a 4-2 record and is paced by the sophomore forward Adrian Branch, who leads the Atlantic Coast Conference in scoring — averaging 22 points per contest.

But Driesell and his Terrapins may have trouble conquering the Bruins. UCLA is 5-0, and is coming off a big 75-66 victory over nationally ranked Iowa.

The game is scheduled for 8 p.m. and will be televised by the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network.

In the only game involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams Wednesday night, Wake Forest rolled to its sixth consecutive win of the season with a 100-69 pasting of Robert Morris.

John Toms led the way with 18 points while Danny Young, cashing in on the 3-point line, adding 16.

Wake Forest hit on 8-of-18 from 3-point range in its first exposure to the conference's experimental rules.

The Demon Deacons scored the game's first 11 points and raced to a 55-28 halftime lead. Young hit four of five 3-pointers on the way to 14 points in the first half, including eight points in one minute, as Wake Forest expanded its lead to 27-9 midway through the first half.

Wake Forest led by as many as 34 points in the second half after the Colonials scored the first eight points of the period.

Four different Demon Deacons hit 3-pointers. Although shooting 41 percent from the field, Wake Forest hit 38 of 50 free throws.

Four different Robert Morris players fouled out, leaving the Colonials with just five eligible players in the final minutes. The Colonials, who fell to 4-5, got 14 points apiece from Forrest Grant and Roy Dudley.

Chuck Kempley had 12 points and Lee Garber had 10 more for the Deacons.

Indiana Rally Stops Kentucky, 62-59

By The Associated Press
Leave it to Bobby Knight's defense-minded Indiana team to stop Kentucky's hot-shooting Wildcats.

Kentucky, ranked No. 2, had been shooting 61 percent from the field with a 7-0 record before running into the fifth-ranked Hoosiers Wednesday night at Bloomington, Ind.

Indiana, which led 32-27 at halftime, rallied from seven points back in the second half to score a 62-59 college basketball victory behind Randy Wittman's 17 points and Ted Kitchel's 16. The Hoosiers, with a man-to-man defense, held Kentucky to 20 percentage points below its average and hit 18 of 23 free throws—all the second half—in running its record to 8-0.

Knight, in his 12th season at Indiana, said, "It's the best Kentucky team I've seen since I've been here."

"It's the best defense we've played against all year," said Kentucky coach Joe B. Hall, whose Wildcats had beaten Indiana in their three previous meetings. "Indiana was pressuring us all over the court. They break you down."

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 9 Tennessee routed Oklahoma State 99-56; No. 11 Georgetown snapped a two-game losing streak with an 80-65 romp over Southern of Baton Rouge 80-65; No. 17 Nevada-Las Vegas captured the Rebel Roundup with a 77-65 victory over Baylor, and 18-ranked Villanova downed Seton Hall 87-68.

"We played with hard with a good level of intensity," said Knight, who has guided Indiana to two NCCA championships (1976, 1981), "and Kentucky did, too. It was a game of streaks."

Wittman, a 6-foot-6 senior and the Hoosiers' leading scorer, scored four of Indiana's six field goals in the second half, and three clutch free throws. He also grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds.

Kitchel, a 6-8 senior, collected six of Indiana's free throws late in the game, including two that gave the Hoosiers a 60-55 lead with 46 seconds left. Kentucky reduced its deficit to two points with four seconds left, but Kitchel added another free throw with two seconds to go.

Jim Thomas added 16 points for Indiana, while Melvin Turpin scored 17 points and Charles Hurt 15 for Kentucky.

Dale Ellis' 39 points powered Tennessee, 7-0, over visiting Oklahoma State, 2-5. Tyrone Beaman added 12 points apiece for the Volunteers who led by as much as 26 points in the first half.

"It's not like we were pressing or trying to run up the score," said Tennessee coach Dan DeVoe, "they just weren't playing the inside defense."

Sophomore Pat Ewing scored a career-high 35 points and grabbed 15 rebounds as Georgetown made its record 7-2 over Southern, 4-5, at Landover, Md. The game also marked the first extended action of the season for point guard Fred Brown, who had been sidelined after knee surgery.

"It was good to have Fred back," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "He didn't score much (seven points) but he had an effect on what was going on."

Sidney Green's 27 points and 10 rebounds earned him the most valuable player award in UNLV's triumph, its seventh without a loss, over Baylor, 7-3. Danny Tarkanian, son of Jerry, the Runnin' Rebels' coach, contributed 20 assists for the winners, who also got 15 points apiece from Eric Booker and Larry Anderson.

Long Island University, led by Robert Cole's 25 points, won the Rebel Roundup consolation game with an 81-79 victory over Morehead State.

Villanova, paced by reserve Mike Mulquin's 15 points, boosted its record to 4-2 with a Big East Conference triumph over Seton Hall. John Pinone and Stewart Granger each added 14 in the nightcap of a Philadelphia Palestra doubleheader.

LaSalle won the opener, 82-65, behind Steve Black's 19 points.

Notre Dame's John Paxson scored a career-high 30 points and Ken Barlow added 25 in powering the Irish past Valparaiso 108-78, and Russell Cross erupted from a scoreless first half to hit 13 points, including the go-ahead basket, in Purdue's 65-63 win over DePaul.

In other games, Marquette got 19 points from Dwayne Johnson and 16 from Glenn Rivers in a 61-51 victory over Kansas State; Keith Armstrong's only point of the night, coming with 20 seconds left, earned Pittsburgh a 75-74 victory over Florida State, and Vanderbilt, behind 14 points each from Phil Cox and Ted Young, downed Middle Tennessee 64-53.

Southern California, with Wayne Carlander scoring 20 points, topped Colorado State 72-65; John Toms' 18 points led Wake Forest over Robert Morris 100-69; Georgia edged Georgia Southern 57-55 on Terry Fair's late basket; 100-67 behind Mike Jackson's 28 points.

Howard Carter's 21 points and Leonard Mitchell's clutch free throws earned Louisiana State a 51-49 victory over Texas-El Paso and Wyoming crushed Southern Colorado 100-67 behind Mike Jackson's 28 points.

Old Dominion past North Carolina-Charlotte 78-58; Minnesota defeated Jacksonville 62-48 as freshman Marc Wilson hit 21 points, and Xavier of Ohio got clutch shooting from Anthony Hicks and Eddie Johnson in beating Miami of Ohio 54-50.

Howard Carter's 21 points and Leonard Mitchell's clutch free throws earned Louisiana State a 51-49 victory over Texas-El Paso and Wyoming crushed Southern Colorado 100-67 behind Mike Jackson's 28 points.

COACHES' CORNER

By RICK KOBE
East Carolina Swim Coach

At East Carolina, one of the main goals of the swimming team is to qualify individuals for the National Championships and ultimately have them score. Our women who compete in the NCAA Division II championships have done extremely well over the last few years. Last year the Lady Pirates were 16th at the Nationals. We had seven women receive All-America honors. We have sent over 40 men to the NCAA Division I championships in the past ten years.

For our swimmers to achieve these goals they must go through tremendous sacrifices. Besides the sacrifice of a normal day in the life of a swimmer (6-7:30 a.m. workout, 8-2 classes, 2:30-3:30 weight work, 3:30-6 p.m. workout, 6:30 dinner, 7:30 to 9:30 study hall) they go through the ultimate sacrifice at the end of the year.

Our male swimmers, in order to do their best times and perhaps make the NCAA time standards, shave their bodies including the hair on their heads. The reasoning behind this is the mind-body relationship in the sport. By shaving down and removing the hair and dead skin cells, the swimmer is better able to achieve a true awareness of the water. Some swimmers will even take a small piece of sandpaper and paper parts of their arms and legs. What this does is to expose their nerve endings even more to the water.

The shaving of the head is a mental psych and does not have any physiological advantage. But when it comes to the big meet, swimmers are looking for all the added psych they can find. Last year, 14 out of 17 male swimmers we took to the Eastern Championships shaved their heads. They made the ultimate commitment.

It is also very interesting to associate with 14 bald athletes.

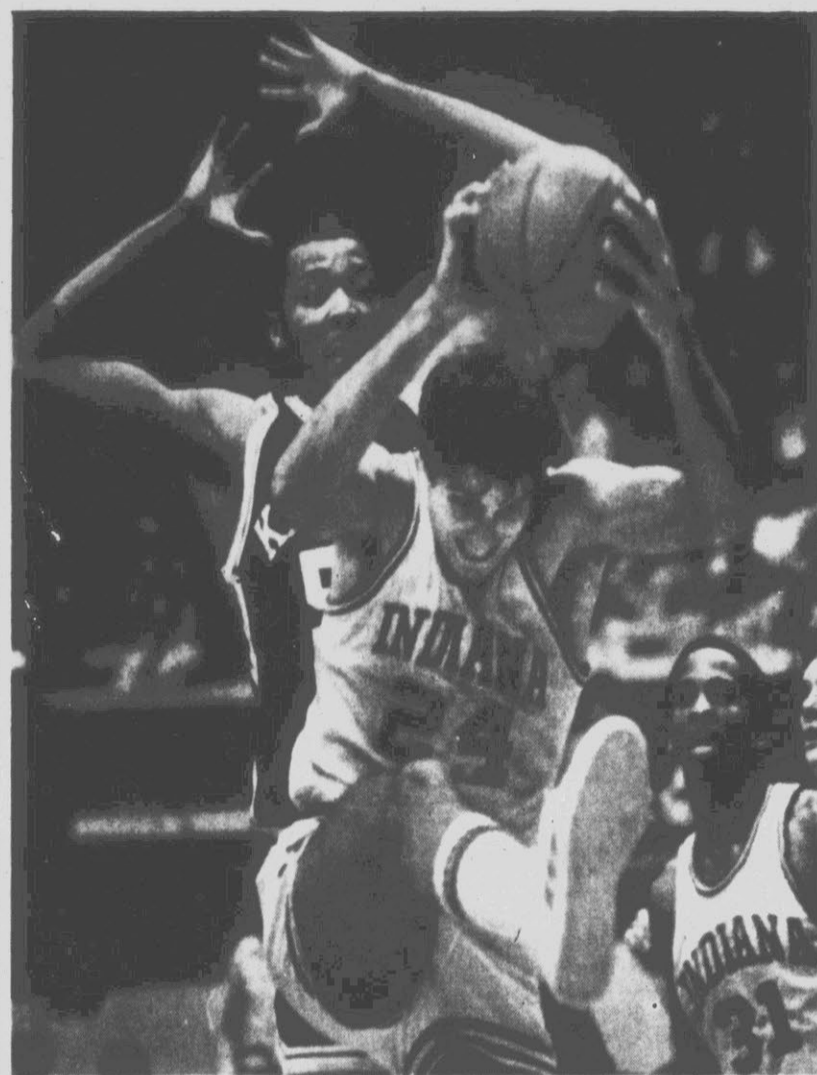

"We played with hard with a good level of intensity," said Knight, who has guided Indiana to two NCCA championships (1976, 1981), "and Kentucky did, too. It was a game of streaks."

Wittman, a 6-foot-6 senior and the Hoosiers' leading scorer, scored four of Indiana's six field goals in the second half, and three clutch free throws. He also grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds.

Kitchel, a 6-8 senior, collected six of Indiana's free throws late in the game, including two that gave the Hoosiers a 60-55 lead with 46 seconds left. Kentucky reduced its deficit to two points with four seconds left, but Kitchel added another free throw with two seconds to go.

Jim Thomas added 16 points for Indiana, while Melvin Turpin scored 17 points and Charles Hurt 15 for Kentucky.

Fresno State On Probation

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Fresno State loses two scholarships next year and its basketball program has been placed on immediate probation for one year by the Pacific Coast Athletic Conference for recruiting violations.

The probation, announced Wednesday will have little practical effect on the Bulldogs, because they will remain eligible for the conference championship, post-season play and television appearances. The school must, however, report to the PCAA's Compliance Committee next summer on steps taken to bring the program into line with NCAA rules.

Fresno State, the conference's basketball champions the past two years, advanced as far as the Western Regional semifinals in last season's NCAA tournament, losing 58-40 to Georgetown.

The violations cited by the PCAA included: —Members of the coaching staff being involved in the entertainment of two high school counselors and an assistant high school basketball coach on three different occasions. —Improper contact was made with a junior college athlete at the site of the California State Community College Championship.

Soviet Missile Offer Is 'Unacceptable' To U.S.

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union's offer to reduce the number of SS-20 mobile missiles is unacceptable, say U.S. officials who want Moscow's most potent medium-range nuclear weapon — those aimed at Western Europe — eliminated altogether.

Key U.S. arms control officials contend the proposal made Tuesday by Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov to reduce the number of SS-20s to the level of French and British nuclear forces would in fact give the Soviets an enduring military monopoly in such weapons in exchange for "a big fat zero" for the United States.

There are no U.S. medium-range missiles in Europe and John Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, said, "The Soviet proposal contained in Mr. Andropov's speech is unacceptable because it would leave the Soviets with several hundred warheads on SS-20's, while denying us the means to deter that threat."

"We cannot accept that the United States should agree to allow the Soviets superiority over us because the British and French maintain their own national deterrent force," he said.

Hughes said it is not enough for the Soviets to promise to reduce the SS-20s to the level of the 162 medium-range missiles maintained by France and Britain while the Soviets maintain about 100 of the mobile weapons in Soviet Asia.

"This would leave the Soviets free to threaten our Asian friends as well as to maintain a highly mobile missile force that can be moved at any time into position to threaten NATO," Hughes said.

"In sum, we hope the Soviets will now come to realize that we cannot give up the means to counter the nuclear threat they pose to NATO unless the threat is eliminated altogether," Hughes said.

A Pentagon official, who spoke with reporters on the condition he not be quoted by name, said the intent of the Soviet proposal appears to be to move the negotiations on curbing the SS-20 missile from the conference room in Geneva "to the editorial pages of newspapers in Europe and the United States."

A State Department official, who spoke on the same understanding, said the Andropov plan would leave the Soviet Union with 260 SS-20's, each of them armed with three warheads.

These officials said even if the weapons remain in Asia, their warheads could still strike targets in such NATO nations as Turkey and Norway.

The officials contended there is "total support" in European capitals for President Reagan's plan to move ahead with the deployment of a new force of 572 U.S. Pershing II and cruise missiles while seeking Soviet agreement in Geneva to eliminate the SS-20 force entirely.

Talks in the Swiss city on reducing U.S. and Soviet missiles are due to resume in early February.

Reagan has promised to cancel deployment of the U.S. missiles if the SS-20s are dismantled and destroyed.

The senior Pentagon official said the Andropov proposal is "very misleading" because even if the Soviets were to reduce their SS-20 force as they propose, they would still have 10 more missiles than they had when the arms talks began last spring.

Andropov's proposal came in an hour-long speech at a Kremlin celebration Tuesday, marking the 60th anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet state.

Andropov also proposed a mutual U.S.-Soviet pledge not to be the first to use either conventional or nuclear weapons.

"Clearly it's purely a rhetorical statement," the State Department official said, adding that such a promise is worthless because it cannot be enforced.

However, U.S. arms negotiator Edward Rowny said the proposal "gives me confidence in the future."

He said another suggestion by Andropov — that strategic, long-range nuclear arms be reduced by 25 percent — "in itself shows they are moving in the direction of reductions."

The United States has proposed a one-third cut, focused on land-based nuclear weapons which the United States holds are the most destabilizing missile systems. One State Department official said the reductions the Soviets are talking about will not solve the problem. Nevertheless, Rowny said on a Cable News Network interview that the 25 percent reduction offer "sounds good and we hope they will lead to good results" in Geneva. Rowny called Andropov's proposal a "trial balloon." He said the Soviets "know how to play on our anticipations. They do this very well."

Artificial Heart Patient Is Reported Returning To Normal

By DONNA ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark, taking his first steps but having difficulty speaking, is gradually returning to normal along with the staff at the Utah Medical Center, hospital officials say.

Clark, 61, surprised the staff Wednesday by announcing, "I want to get up," then struggling unassisted to his feet. With doctors rushing to help him, he took "short, pivotal steps" to the reclining chair near his bed, hospital spokesman John Dwan said.

They were Clark's first steps since the plastic heart was implanted Dec. 2, and they were little more than a shuffle. But Dwan said they marked a stride in his "slow, steady" path to recovery.

Clark also was learning to speak audibly by placing a finger over the tracheostomy tube in his neck to prevent air from escaping. The tube, which eventually will be removed, is attached to a respirator for short periods of time.

Since surgery Dec. 14 to replace a valve in his plastic heart, Clark, a retired dentist from suburban Seattle, had been mostly mouthing his words or communicating with gestures.

"He's not doing very well yet" in talking or walking, said Dwan. "He's not striding down the hall."

As for the hospital staff, Dwan said he could recall as many as 11 doctors in Clark's room at one time after the Jarvik-7 heart was implanted. But recently he saw Clark "sitting in a chair looking out the window and a nurse was sitting outside at a desk doing paperwork and there was no one else around."

Clark's room is decorated with holiday cards and he can see poinsettias and a Christmas tree from his bed.

"What we have seen in the last two or three days is what we should phrase as a return to normalcy, both on the part of Dr. Clark, his family and the hospital staff," Dwan said.

Dwan said that while Clark is improving, "he still suffers short periods of confusion," but doctors don't consider them serious or unusual in a post-operative heart patient.

And although there has been no indication when Clark might be well enough to leave the hospital, hospital officials are making progress in finding him a temporary home here where doctors can monitor his convalescence.

Margaret Miller, a social worker, said a Salt Lake-area man had offered Clark use of his home rent-free, and she was checking to make sure there would be no problems with his estate.

"There is a possibility, and I think we'll get this settled sometime this week," Mrs. Miller said. She said the home was not adapted for a wheelchair, but that was not a major problem because it is a one-story house.

"We expect that he'll be more independent than someone in a wheelchair," Mrs. Miller said. Clark's plastic heart is connected by a pair of 6-foot hoses to a 375-pound compressed-air drive system on wheels.

Clark's wife, Una Loy, still lives at the hospital and receives a 6-inch stack of mail each day from well-wishers, Dwan said. She has decorated a live Christmas tree sent her by friends from Seattle.

Poinsettias, other flowers and a "perfectly beautiful" wreath sent to Clark have been arranged in a nearby sitting room where he can see them, Mrs. Miller said.

"Neither Christmas Eve nor Christmas Day will be any different than any other day" for Clark, Dwan said. "We don't plan any special activity."

The Clarks' daughter, Karen Shaffer, and her husband, Tim, will stay in Salt Lake City through Christmas, Mrs. Miller said.

Shot 11 In Restaurant

NEW YORK (AP) — Gunmen raked the inside of a crowded Chinatown restaurant with automatic weapons fire today, killing two men and wounding nine others in an apparently gang-related shooting, police said.

The shooting occurred at about 2:35 a.m. at the Golden Star restaurant, located in the Chinatown section of lower Manhattan, police reported.

Police said there have been several shootings at the restaurant, including one incident last year in which the owner was wounded.

The men shot, thought to be mostly members of the Free Masons and the White Tigers street gangs, were taken to four city hospitals, authorities said. At least one man was reported in critical condition at St. Vincent's Hospital.

No weapons were recovered, but police said the floor was littered with shells from a Browning automatic rifle, a U.S. Army weapon that was used in the Korean war.

The restaurant was doing a brisk business at the time the shooting began, police said.

It was not immediately determined whether any of the shooting victims were innocent bystanders uninvolved in gang activity.

Disc Jockeys Are Frustrated

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Three disc jockeys took over WDBO-FM's control room for three hours to protest losing their jobs because their station is switching from "easy listening" to country music.

Station managers and the disc jockeys — Gary Schaffer, Ron Kocher and Lon Wagner — said Wednesday's action was not a publicity stunt. "We're just frustrated," Schaffer said.

First Big Winter Storm Halted Power Systems

By GRAHAM VINK
Associated Press Writer
Amusement rides at Disneyland stopped in their tracks and San Francisco commuters were robbed as they left stalled electric trolleys when the first big storm of winter knocked out power to 2 million customers in three states.

Heavy snow blocked highways Wednesday in California and Oregon, including the main north-south route serving the Pacific states, and gale-force winds flipped cars and closed the Golden Gate bridge as it swayed up to five feet.

The blackouts began Wednesday when a transmission tower at Altamont Pass, 50 miles northeast of San Francisco, blew over at 4:30 p.m., downing six lines carrying a total of nearly 2 million volts.

The Rancho Seco nuclear power plant and two units at a Pacific Gas & Electric Co. oil-fired plant near Monterey shut down automatically to protect themselves from overload, said utility spokesman Greg Pruett.

The interruptions lasted up to 2½ hours as utilities intentionally shut off power to prevent further blackouts, with outages reported in scattered but often densely populated locations from San Francisco to San Diego, ranging as far east as Las Vegas, Nev., and Yuma, Ariz.

A 38-year-old man in Contra Costa County died when he picked up a fallen 20,000-volt power line and a city gardener was killed in San Francisco when a eucalyptus tree blew down on him. Four men were killed and six injured in the Sierra Nevada when a rocket blew up inside a launcher used to control avalanches. Two women in Washington state were killed Tuesday night by storm-toppled trees.

In the San Francisco area, winds up to 92 mph tore boats from their moorings, and the Coast Guard said a pier was still floating free late Wednesday in the city's storm-tossed bay, carrying as many as 30 boats with it.

The Golden Gate bridge was closed for two hours after 70 mph winds pushed cars together, overturning one vehicle. It was believed to be the first wind-caused closure of the landmark structure since 1951.

Although the worst of the storm rolled through northern California by late Wednesday, Colorado residents were bracing for it today.

"It looks like the whole state will get the possibility of heavy snow," said National Weather Service forecaster Dough Baugh.

Interstate 5 remained closed early today for 63 miles at the California-Oregon border, and state police said motels were full.

In San Francisco, commuters stranded by the city's stalled electric trolleys were set upon by robbers.

"We've had reports of at least 20 to 30 strong-armed robberies in the Western Addition," said Sgt. Dennis Schardt, referring to a low-income area near the civic center.

A billboard along U.S. 101 blew apart near Belmont, scattering debris in front of a car which spun out of control, injuring its two occupants. A car flipped over on the San Mateo Bridge south of San Francisco, where trees blew down on rooftops and roadways. Many traffic lights failed in San Francisco, where meter maids used flares to guide commuters, although some motorists took advantage of special discounts offered by hotels.

Holiday travelers aboard Amtrak's San Francisco Zephyr, heading from Chicago to Oakland, were halted by high water on tracks 15 miles northeast of San Francisco, eventually completing their trip by bus.

More than a foot of rain fell in the coastal mountains where many hillside homes slid off their foundations in January and a mudslide killed 10 people at Ben Lomond last winter, but there were no immediate reports of slides.

In Las Vegas, most residents had to break out candles, but gambling continued on the glittery Strip after emergency generators kicked in at major casinos.

At Disneyland, 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles, roller coasters ground to a halt and about 7,700 people were escorted from the darkened amusement park by flashlight in the first evacuation in its 27-year history.

"In a lot of cases, we had people stranded. We had to walk people off Space Mountain, the Matterhorn, Big Thunder Mountain Railroad," said Disneyland spokesman Al Flores.

In Riverside, 55 miles east of Los Angeles, a Superior Court hearing was conducted by flashlight. Cars were backed up for miles trying to get onto a darkened freeway near Riverside with visibility also reduced because of rain and fog. Most of San Diego had no power for some time and major parts of Redding, Sacramento and San Jose were darkened. In Los Angeles, little more than a momentary dip in power, although scattered outages were reported and darkened traffic lights snarled rush-hour traffic.

Norman Nichols, chief engineer for the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, said the outage was complicated when, simultaneously, a link to coal-fired power plants in Arizona and New Mexico also went out.

"At our system in Los Angeles, we were suddenly deficient about 1,000 megawatts," roughly the equivalent of a major nuclear power plant, Nichols said. "So it was necessary to immediately disconnect a similar amount of load."

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Few subjects are touchier on Capitol Hill than the pay and benefits members of Congress receive.

A number of congressmen in recent years have retired because they say they can earn more, with less scrutiny, in private industry.

Though many congressmen say privately they should be paid more, they are cognizant of the way increases look to constituents who are out of work or hit hard by the recession.

Nevertheless, the lame-duck session brought a pay raise for the House and some other increases for members of Congress. Here's a look at the money and benefits the 535 senators and representatives receive:

The House voted itself a $9,138 raise, increasing the annual salaries of its 435 members to $69,800 a year. Money from speeches and writing is limited to 15 percent of the salary.

Senators kept their pay at $60,662 a year but can earn an unlimited amount in honorariums.

Members of both houses are allowed earnings from businesses that do not conflict with their responsibilities to Congress.

Congressmen have free parking and office space in the Capitol and six nearby office buildings — three each for the House and Senate. Their local telephone service is free. They also get free parking at National Airport and Dulles International Airport, as do Supreme Court justices and diplomats.

Congressmen can eat — as can the press and general public — at cost in the House and Senate dining rooms. They can use the gymnasiums in the basement of congressional office buildings.

They also are loaned up to five plants a year for their office from the National Botanical Gardens across the street from the Capitol.

One of the best known congressional benefits is the franking privilege, which permits unlimited free mailings. A recent study by Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., said the 100 senators sent constituents more than 245 million pieces of mail this year.

Each House member gets $366,648 for a maximum 22 staff members to work in the Washington and district offices. There's a separate allowance of $47,300 for expenses such as telephones and desks, a figure that is a 10 percent increase over the past office expense account.

Senators from the 17 states with less than two million people get an office staff budget of at least $645,896. The budgets increase to $1,297,794 for California, the nation's most populous state. Staff sizes are unlimited, as long as senators stay within their budgets.

Senators' home state offices are financed by a separate account covering the entire Senate.

House travel expenses are based on a sliding scale that provides each member with at least $5,700 a year for trips to his or her district. The complicated formula considers the distance from the District of Columbia to the furthest point the district.

Plans Hearing On Lease Rates

By The Associated Press
Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., says the 70 cents per pound that tobacco farmers are paying to lease tobacco allotments for their 1983 crop is a figure that's getting "very far out of hand."

For that reason, Rose announced on Wednesday that he will hold hearings next year on legislation that could put a cap on lease rates for tobacco allotments.

"I am just appalled at what some of these lease rates are appearing to be this year," Rose said in a Washington interview. "If that continues and we don't solve that problem we are going to kill the program."

Rose said he planned to hold a series of congressional hearings in February on the cost of leasing, and other problems with the federal tobacco program. Among the issues to be discussed would be a possible freeze on price support levels, he said.

He says the cost of renting allotments has been cutting into farmers' profits, while providing a windfall for allotment owners. Rose said a cap on lease costs not only would help farmers, but would make the program less vulnerable in Congress.

The Fayetteville Democrat says he has not yet drafted a proposal for capping rates. But he said he is considering a plan requiring persons leasing allotments to put the poundage in a county pool.

The county Agriculture Stabilization Service committee would have the flexibility of designating a maximum lease rate for that county.

Rose said the bill would have to have "some teeth in it" to prevent allotment holders from accepting under-the-table payments from growers.

There are more than 116,000 flue-cured tobacco allotments in North Carolina.

70th Birthday For Lady Bird

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — In celebration of her 70th birthday, Lady Bird Johnson has dedicated a 60-acre tract of land and donated $125,000 to start a National Wildlife Research Center devoted to the study of wildflowers.

"There's so darned little known about (wildflowers)," the former first lady said after scattering the first seeds on the land Wednesday. "They are capricious and frustrating."

Mrs. Johnson, widow of former President Lyndon Johnson, spent many years working toward highway beautification. She said she started the center partly because the "dear days" of her life were spent among wildflowers in Texas, which boasts 5,000 of the 25,000 species found in the United States.

She also said the nation must look for new ways to cover public lands, such as roadsides and parks, and she said the flowers could provide food and medicinal benefits.

Helms Sees No Damage To His Senatorial Role

By The Associated Press
U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., facing stinging criticism from his Washington colleagues and from Democratic officials in North Carolina, says the storm of controversy over his filibuster will pass.

Helms was labeled a "vituperative pariah" by one Washington newspaper, and state Democratic Party Chairman Russell Walker said Wednesday that the extensive filibuster actions by Helms and fellow U.S. Sen. John East were creating "a disgrace to this nation and a disaster for the interests of North Carolina."

The result of the filibuster has been to delay a final vote on the gas tax until today. The bill would provide an estimated $5.5 billion a year for highway and mass transit repair by increasing the gas tax a nickel to 9 cents per gallon.

Helms angered many of his Senate colleagues by continuing his filibuster against the bill until 1 a.m. Wednesday, and delaying a vote on it again later in the day. His actions have prevented the Senate from adjourning for the Christmas holidays.

Helms, in a news conference in Washington on Wednesday, says his ability to protect the state's interests has not been damaged by his filibuster.

"It is not unheard of for a senator to be the subject of wrath," Helms said. "The Senate, when all is said and done, is a family. There are spats. I admit it was a heated one last night."

Helms has said his opposition was not designed to personally inconvenience anyone, but is because the tax increase is bad legislation that would cost more jobs than it would create and would unfairly tax lower income persons.

In addition to receiving criticism from fellow Senators, including other Republicans, Helms was labeled a "vituperative pariah" in an article in The Washington Post.

In North Carolina, Walker joined in on the attacks on Helms and East.

"Because of Jesse Helms and John East, programs important to North Carolina will be in jeopardy on the Senate floor — tobacco, peanuts, our textile industry, our university system," he said.

However, Helms dismissed Walker's charge, calling it "poppycock." Helms says he does not believe senators will retaliate against him by trying to kill the federal tobacco program.

"I can't believe a temporary disagreement would cause senators to take action that would seriously or adversely affect the lives of 300,000 or 400,000 people," he said.

Dave Flaherty, state chairman of the state GOP, responded by saying that Democrats are "willing to sacrifice the best interests of North Carolina," rejecting the gas tax increase, in an effort to discredit Helms.

Quentin Crommelin, administrative assistant to East, said that instead of creating enemies, the filibuster was generating respect for the two conservatives.

"The admiration for Sen. East and Sen. Helms for taking a stand on principals is sky high," Crommelin said in a telephone interview.

Calls For Early Announcement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., has urged U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block to use his authority to implement a payment-in-kind program for 1983 crops and to announce it immediately.

Helms said in a prepared statement that the program is necessary because farmers need to know the details as soon as possible to plan their marketing and production strategies.

"Without immediate action to stop building government stocks and start reducing these large surpluses," Helms said, "farmers cannot expect to see farm prices that will cover their costs of production and allow them to earn a fair profit."

Helms said he was disappointed that the Senate did not take action on a PIK bill. That action was delayed, according to Helms, when several senators objected to its presentation.

Dallas Still Convention Choice Of Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Republicans meet in Dallas in August 1984, the state's Democratic governor will welcome them, which was not how Ronald Reagan and William Clements expected things would go.

But the choice to hold the Republican National Convention in the Texas city was made when Clements was supremely confident he'd win a second term as governor.

The Nov. 2 election changed all that. Mark White upset Clements and when the senior staff at the Republican National Committee held a post-election meeting they decided they had better move quickly to assure the Texans that the convention was still headed for Dallas.

"We reaffirmed our commitment," said William Greener III, director of communications for the party.

He added that despite returns from other parts of Texas where Democrats turned out in record numbers, "Dallas was very, very good to Republican candidates."

"Dallas went against the tide," said Texas GOP chairman Chester Upham Jr.

Upham said he never was concerned the convention might be moved to a state that had been more sympathetic to the Republicans in 1982.

Ironically, the leading prospect as the site for the 1984 Democratic National Convention is San Francisco despite the fact the Democrats lost the governorship of California.

Often mentioned as the second choice for the Democratic convention is Chicago. Republican Gov. James Thompson of Illinois was re-elected despite a strong challenge by Democrat Adlai Stevenson III. Stevenson has refused to concede defeat and has asked for a recount.

But when party officials choose convention sites they are more interested in the results of the next election than the last one.

There may be a few red faces in the Texas delegation when White appears on the podium to welcome the GOP, but the state remains very important to the Republicans.

During his re-election campaign, Clements liked to tell partisan audiences that if he won it would assure Reagan's re-election in 1984 because no Democrat has been elected president in this century without carrying Texas.

Clements claimed that as governor he could assure that the Republican Party would be strong enough to defeat the Democratic nominee.

His theory sounded plausible to Republicans until Nov. 2.

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Energy Minister Piet du Plessis says bombing of the nuclear plant site in Koeberg may delay opening of the unfinished facility, and that security squads have been intensified.

Raleigh Signs New Fire Chief

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Louisville, Ky., fire chief Thomas T. Kuster has been hired as Raleigh's new fire chief, the third time the city has hired a major department head from outside the state.

Raleigh City Manager Lawrence P. Zachary Jr. announced that Kuster will begin work on Feb. 1, succeeding the retiring Rufus E. Keith.

"I feel we are indeed fortunate to have a man of Tom Kuster's background and experience to rely on in the future," said Zachary in a written statement. "He will be a real asset to the Raleigh Fire Department and to the community."

Kuster, 45, was selected from a field of 130 applicants. Raleigh Police Chief Frederick Heinemann came from The Bronx, N.Y., while city planning director George Chapman was hired from West Palm Beach, Fla.

Inherent Conflict In TV Studied By 'CBS Report'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — On tonight's "CBS Reports: Don't Touch That Dial," correspondent Morley Safer tries to get the head of CBS Entertainment to admit that his programs are trash.

Bud Grant won't bite. After all, Grant knocking "The Dukes of Hazzard" or "Dallas" would be tantamount to a used car salesman saying he sells lemons. A good businessman doesn't criticize his product, and television is without doubt big business.

The conflict between television as cultural medium and television as corporate entity is a major theme of "Don't Touch That Dial," a behind-the-scenes examination of an industry that measures itself primarily by ratings success, i.e. money.

Quality seems a mere afterthought.

With the grin of a Cheshire cat, Grant says the show he's proudest of is "Dallas" because "it's the highest rated television series in the history of television. ... It has provided so much entertainment for so many people."

As if for emphasis, he points to a plaque that says "53.3," the rating earned by the "Who Shot J.R." episode.

With the same smile, Grant says that nothing on CBS is trash and that the network doesn't cancel shows. "We just don't renew them," he explains.

It all seems like a big inside joke. Nobody admits mistakes on television, even though few new shows are successful and the network audience is shrinking, with dire projections for the future.

In tonight's documentary, Safer and producer-director Julian Krainin focus on the evolution of two shows: NBC's "Family Ties" and CBS' "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers." ABC would not cooperate on the project, Safer says.

One fascinating segment involves the rites of spring, a week in which the producers of "Family Ties," "Seven Brides" and other would-be programs nervously wait to see whether their shows will make the network fall prime-time schedules.

The CBS News cameras capture David Gerber, producer of "Seven Brides," receiving the magical phone call telling him he's part of the CBS family, at least for a while. In his moment of glee, Gerber asks whether another producer, Lee Rich, got anything on CBS' schedule. The answer is no, and the irony is that Rich is executive producer of "Dallas" — as in 53.3.

Producers who make the programs are bound to clash with the networks that put them on. Gary David Goldberg, producer of "Family Ties," rails at network interference. He says his discussions with NBC programmers are always about research and never "about the writing, about character development and motivation and reality."

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, explains that only the network can look at the big picture and ponder such things as audience flow between programs. For example, NBC might insist that "Family Ties," which follows the youthful "Facts of Life," needs story lines that focus on the kids more than on parental conflicts.

Actually, the creative community considers NBC to be the network that gives its producers the most breathing room, thanks to the attitudes of NBC President Grant Tinker, a former producer. NBC also won more Emmy awards than the other two networks last season, which would be one measure of TV quality.

Yet, NBC is No. 3 and CBS is top-rated. Ah, 53.3. It's clear from "Don't Touch That Dial" that television is at home on Wall Street, not in an art museum. Its goal is success, not excellence.

Bars Town Censor Role

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Citing the First Amendment, a federal judge has struck down a small town's ordinance barring "pornographic or indecent" material from being shown on cable television.

"No police power or censorship power can be a substitute for the moral function of the parent and the family," U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins said in his decision Wednesday.

He issued the ruling in a lawsuit by Community Television of Utah Inc. challenging an ordinance in Roy, Utah, a small town in the northern part of the state.

The judge called the ordinance an abusive exercise of the city's power that violated First Amendment guarantees of free speech.

"The First Amendment has worked well these 191 years," Jenkins wrote in the 16-page decision. "We need to keep it in good working conditions for those who follow."

Roy officials had indicated they would appeal such a ruling.

Jenkins granted a motion by Community Television of Utah Inc. asking that Roy be barred from enforcing the ordinance enacted on Aug. 24. Community Television is challenging a similar ordinance in North Ogden.

A growing number of Utah towns has enacted or are studying ordinances to regulate cable television because of an outcry by groups objecting to the showing of R-rated movies.

Roy City Attorney Roger Dutton said Jenkins was "disfranchising thousands and thousands of people who would like to subscribe to cable television."

How Tar Heels Cast Votes In House And Senate

ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Dec. 9-15.

PAY HIKE
By a tie vote of 208-208, the House defeated an amendment to keep salaries of members of Congress at the present $60,662 annual level. The effect of the vote was to permit a raise of 15 percent to $69,800. The amendment was offered to a fiscal 1983 funding measure (HJ Res 631) that later was sent to the Senate. Some 30,000 high-level executive branch officials also would get pay raises as a result of this vote.

Supporter Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., said "I remind my colleagues that our country is in a very serious depression, only surpassed by the Great Depression."

Opponent Richard Bolling, D-Mo., said members deserve a raise, and he asked: "If we have not the courage to deal with our own pay, what makes anybody think we have the courage to deal with the great issues of the world?"

Members voting no favored a 15 percent pay hike for members of Congress.

Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-3; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; James Broyhill, R-10; and William Hendon, R-11 voted "yea."

Walter Jones, D-3; L.H. Fountain, D-2; Ike Andrews, D-4; Eugene Johnston, R-6; and James Martin, R-9 voted "nay."

PROTECTIONISM — The House passed, 215 for and 188 against, a bill to require that foreign automakers selling more than 100,000 units annually in the United States include high levels of "domestic content" in their product. American parts, labor and services such as advertising would qualify as domestic content. Largely authored by the United Autoworkers, the bill (HR 5133) was aimed at Japan. It was sent to the Senate.

Supporter John Seiberling, D-Ohio, said the key issue was America's survival as an industrial leader. "It is inconceivable to me that we can be a major industrial or military power if we allow our automobile industry to go down the drain."

Opponent Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., called it "a mean-spirited protectionist bill" that would cause retaliation against farmers and other major exporters and, in the long run, cost more jobs than it would create.

Members voting "yea" wanted to protect the U.S. automakers.

Reps. Jones and Rose voted "yea."

Reps. Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

AUTO BILL — The House adopted, 195 for and 194 against, an amendment that softened the domestic content bill (HR 5133, see preceding vote) by stipulating that nothing in it could undo existing trade agreements between the United States and countries such as Japan. The administration, which opposed the domestic content measure, supported this amendment.

Supporter Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., said "we should not be known as 'Uncle Welsher' in the world," and he added that the overall bill was "narrow, selfish legislation" that deserved defeat.

Opponent Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., said it was time for the United States to join countries such as England and Italy that limit imports of Japanese autos. "Really, we are Uncle Sucker," he added.

Members voting "yea" wanted to take some of the starch out of the domestic content legislation.

Reps. Fountain, Neal, Johnston, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Reps. Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Rose and Hefner voted "nay."

Senate

OUTSIDE INCOME — The Senate voted, 94 for and 87 against, to permit senators to earn unlimited outside income from activities such as speaking to private groups. The resolution (S Res 512) adopted by this vote repeals a rule limiting outside "earned income" to 15 percent of a senator's salary. House concurrence was not required and the measure took effect immediately.

Supporter Jake Garn, R-Utah, said "this is not taxpayers' money. In fact, taxes are paid. I would assume that most of it, or 50 percent of what we earn (on the outside), is returned to the general fund of the Treasury."

No senator spoke against the repeal.

Senators voting "yea" favored unlimited outside income for senators.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

BUY AMERICAN — By a vote of 51 for and 47 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed an amendment requiring that all federally financed highway and bridge construction be done with American steel, cement and workers. The measure was proposed to HR 6211, a bill raising the federal gasoline tax by a nickel per gallon to finance road improvements and create jobs. HR 6211 was headed for final passage and conference with the House.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., a supporter of killing the amendment, said steelworkers receive $23 to $26 per hour and insist on supplying all U.S. highway projects. "Listen to those hogs moving up to the trough — slurp, slurp, slurp," he said.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, countered that Chafee should visit Cleveland and Youngstown to "see the real plight of the unemployed steelworkers."

Senators voting "nay" supported the "Buy American" requirement.

East and Helms voted "yea."

JOBLESS PAY — By a vote of 47 for and 50 against, the Senate failed to table and thus kill an amendment providing an additional two to five weeks of unemployment benefits. Depending on the state, the jobless are now entitled to a maximum of from 39 to 42 weeks worth of unemployment checks. The extra weeks provided by this measure would cost $980 million, according to the Labor Department. The vote came during debate on HR 6211 (see preceding vote).

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., who wanted to table the amendment, said "there are fiscal restraints on any good program..."

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., who voted against tabling, said people in his state who have run out of benefits "are selling their blood in record numbers in order to put food on the table."

Senators voting "Nay" favored more weeks of jobless pay in all states.

East and Helms voted "yea."

Merbold of West Germany, Dutchman Hubbo Ockles, and West Germans Ernst Messerschmid and Reinhard Furrer, will be part of the week-long European spacelab mission. (AP Laserphoto)

Pediatric Soc. Urging Safety Seats And Belts

The North Carolina Pediatric Society is urging parents to use safety seats and seat belts in all travel with children this holiday season.

"Make it a practice now, and continue with it into the new year," said Dr. Michael R. Lawless, a member of the society and a pediatrician in Winston-Salem. "Children adapt to safety seats with ease as long as the parents make them a regular, matter-of-fact part of riding in an automobile."

Lawless praised North Carolina's child passenger safety law that went into effect July 1, 1982, but said, "The Highway Safety Research Center says we've gone from 30 to 50 percent compliance with the law; that says to me we're only halfway home."

"Clearly," Dr. Lawless continued, "the use of child safety seats is one of the areas of preventive medicine that is extremely effective in reaching its objective of preventing injuries and death."

In a recent release, the Highway Safety Research Center said that preliminary data indicated that none of the 700 safety-restrained children under age 2 involved in auto accidents since the law went into effect have died. Seven of the approximately 1,000 children who were not restrained suffered fatal injuries.

Safety seats and restraints are equally valuable in non-crash situations, both pediatricians and highway safety experts agree.

"If a parent has to brake suddenly, a safety seat will keep many a child from being injured," said Dr. Lawless. "If buckled in properly, it's unlikely the child will be thrown against the dashboard, bumped by another child or pitched out of an open door."

Adding that the back seat is the safest place of all to place a child in his safety seat, Dr. Lawless pointed out there's more than the protective aspect to be considered. Reduction of the distraction that comes when a child jumps up and down, climbs over seats and crawls under feet must be considered an important safety plus, he said.

A list of approved safety seats can be obtained by writing the University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27514, or calling toll-free 1-800-672-4527. "Tot Line" can also provide information on the over 80 "loaner" programs that are available throughout the state for persons who need aid in obtaining a seat.

According to pediatricians there are several seats at varying prices which are equally beneficial. Some are for use as infant carriers only, while others convert to toddler seats as the child grows.

"It's important to make sure the information on the seats says 'crash tested,'" Lawless said. "With smaller cars and different seat belt arrangement, it's also wise to make sure the seat you chose fits the intended car."

Could Be Wheeze In Christmas Tree

Can Christmas trees produce a wheeze?

They can, according to Susan Roberts, Christmas Seals chairperson for eastern North Carolina. For the 2 million children under 17 who have asthma, the Christmas season harbors a number of triggers that can bring on an asthma episode, she said.

First is the seemingly harmless Christmas tree. Mold often begins to accumulate on the branches, especially if the tree has been cut several weeks before. When the tree begins to dry out, the mold spores are released. The spores are a trigger for many people with asthma, Ms. Roberts said.

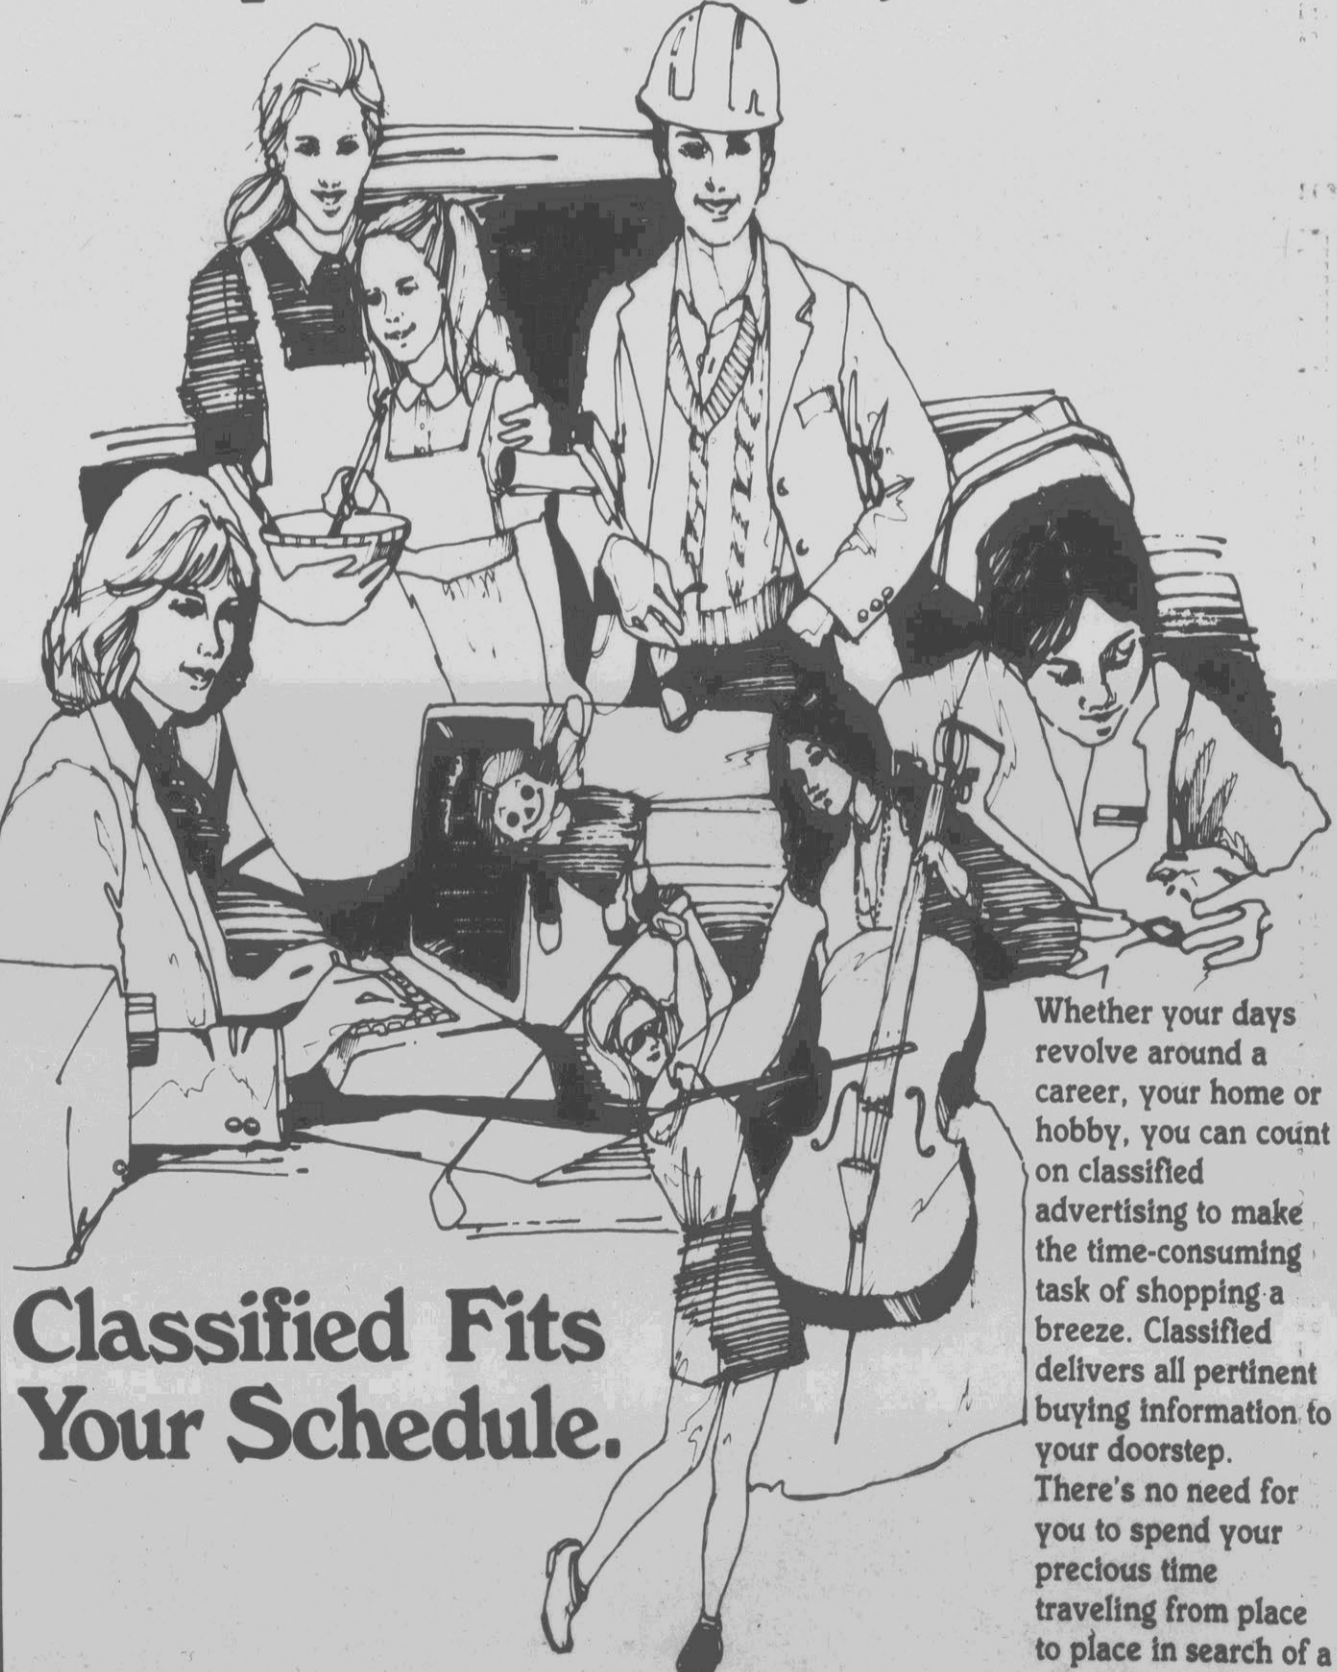

"Be sure to pick your gifts for the child with asthma carefully," she said. "Pets often are poor gifts because of their dander; stuffed toy animals, too, can be a problem. They retain dust and can become a home for the house dust mite."

The American Lung Association of North Carolina-Eastern Region warns that all clothing should be washed or dry cleaned before it is put on for the first time to remove the finishing materials used by the manufacturer to which many children with asthma are allergic.

"Even colognes, perfumes, scented soap and other such products can produce an allergic reaction in the child," says Ms. Roberts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Avoid friends during the daytime and go after your practical affairs wisely. Know better what your goals are.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Don't give others an opportunity for criticism.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your true financial status and know how to invest wisely in the future. Join in activities that are to your liking.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use your best judgment during the day, since your hunches could be wrong. Express happiness with others tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A friend could have some ideas that are radical, so listen but do not commit yourself. Show generosity of spirit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Complete your work early and be sure to wish co-workers a happy holiday. Get into the spirit of things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Accept invitations that come up unexpectedly since they could be just right for you. Be happy, contented.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take time for any last-minute shopping you have to do. Analyze your life and plan how to improve it while having a good time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care you are not too extravagant today. Discuss with close ties how to become more successful in the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she should be given little duties to perform early in life and taught to complete them in order to form the good work habit. Direct education along lines of research for best results. Don't neglect spiritual training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Fall Potatoes Inventories Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — As of Dec. 1, potato stocks were estimated at 201.8 million hundredweight — 100 pounds each. That was up 5 percent from a year ago and 17 percent more than in the U.S. stockpile two years ago.

FOCUS

Law and Disorder

Amid cries for law and order, it's good to know there are laws designed to protect citizens from the ravages of crime. For example, in Maine, it is against the law to walk down the street with your shoelaces untied. In Florida, it is a punishable offense to doze off under a hair dryer or to break more than three dishes a day in your own home. The agents of the law in Missouri will get you if you try to play hopscotch on a Sunday. And in Chicago the law strictly prohibits the serving of alcoholic beverages to dogs — perhaps one reason for the remarkably low rate of canine alcoholism in that city.

DO YOU KNOW — Which state has the lowest crime rate in the U.S.?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Before 1972, Sri Lanka was known as Ceylon.

Some defenders are eager to adversely affect your financial well-being. The prudent course is to give them a wide berth.

North-South reached their optimum contract in straightforward fashion. When his Stayman inquiry elicited the information that South did not have a four-card major suit, North briefly considered probing for an alternative contract in one of his minors. However, since this course risked a possible partnership misunderstanding, North decided to settle for the no trump game.

That was no snap after West led a spade honor. Declarer had only six fast tricks, and the enemy held the aces in the suits declarer would have to develop for his contract. In addition, declarer would have to strive to keep East off lead until he had developed three tricks, because he could not stand a lead through his spade tenace.

However, careful technique prevailed. Declarer won the ace of spades, cashed the ace of clubs and overtook the queen of clubs with the king. Now he led a low heart from dummy. If West held the ace and won the trick, he would not be able to continue the spade attack without yielding declarer his ninth trick.

As the cards lie, East has the ace of hearts, but he could not afford to rise with that card — that would have given declarer three heart tricks and his contract. When
