Blizzard Hits Midwest; Lights Go Out

By JUDY GIBBS
Associated Press Writer

A blizzard shut down major cities of the Midwest with a foot and a half of snow today and thousands of travelers were stranded as authorities closed miles of major highways.

The lights and heat went out in thousands of homes while the wind chill factor registered 45 degrees below zero in places.

While some cities such as Milwaukee and Ann Arbor, Mich., posted record warm temperatures for the date, blinding snow swept from eastern Nebraska and eastern Iowa to northern Minnesota and upper Michigan.

Meanwhile, more than 1,300 people remained displaced from their homes by flooding in Louisiana and neighboring states.

Violent weather since Christmas Eve has been blamed for at least 15 deaths.

In Minneapolis, where 15 inches of snow had accumulated at the airport, the state department of transportation just before rush hour banned travel in any part of the metropolitan area until further notice.

The Minneapolis-St. Paul Airport was closed and state police said all major freeways and side streets in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area were closed with stuck cars. The University of Minnesota announced it was closing for the first time since 1966.

In Lincoln, Neb., the storm knocked out the power to more than half of the city's 170,000 residents Monday night. People whose homes still had power were urged to lodge families without heat.

In South Dakota, where up to 17 inches of snow fell and blizzard conditions reduced visibility to near zero, Gov. Bill Janklow ordered Interstate 29 south of Sioux Falls closed and the National Weather Service recommended no travel in 28 counties.

"Tell the people to take a vacation," said South Dakota meteorologist Rusty Kapela. "Unless you have a snowmobile or a pretty good four-wheel drive, you'll have a tough time."

Blizzard conditions this morning paralyzed most of Nebraska, where snow was falling faster than snowplows could clear it. "You can't even see your hand in front of your face out there," said Dan McCaslin, the town marshal in Anselmo, Neb.

Cold air sweeping south from Canada collided with mild air from the Gulf of Mexico creating weather havoc from Colorado to Michigan, with heavy rain continuing for a third day in the Gulf Coast states. More rain was falling today on flood-ravaged parts of Missouri and Illinois.

"We're begging people not to travel," said Bob Munger, a spokesman for the Department of Roads in Nebraska. The state highway patrol declared Interstate 80 from Lincoln to Ogallala impassable due to snow and travel was discouraged in the rest of the state.

Frustrated state officials pulled snowplows off the roads Monday night.

In Louisiana, state police closed at least 50 roads due to flooding from a band of weekend thunderstorms that dumped as much as 16 inches on parts of the state and spawned several tornadoes in rural areas. There were no injuries from the tornadoes but severe damage was reported in some areas.

"Don't get on the highways unless it is absolutely essential," said Lt. Ronnie Jones of the Louisiana State Police.

National Guard troops were helping evacuate about 400 residents of small communities along the rain-swollen Calcasieu River in Allen Parish in Louisiana.

Flooding already had forced about 500 people out of their homes in the Alexandria area and about 800 were evacuated around Monroe.

The Red Cross in Monroe said it sheltered about 200 people Sunday night and two emergency shelters reported housing another 160. Preparations were made to shelter between 100 and 150 evacuees in Alexandria.

Negotiations On Lebanon Future Are Started Today

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli, Lebanese and U.S. negotiators opened talks at a heavily guarded hotel in a Beirut suburb today on the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon.

Israel's chief negotiator said he hoped the talks would set the stage for a full peace treaty with Israel's northern neighbor. The only other Arab country to negotiate a peace treaty with Israel is Egypt — which borders Israel on the west — and the two countries signed a peace treaty in 1979.

Israeli sources said the Israelis also sought establishment of early warning stations in Lebanon, air and naval surveillance of Lebanon and an agreement on limitation of forces in the southern part of the country bordering Israel.

The sources said in addition the Israelis sought to have the Palestine Liberation Organization withdraw its forces and free eight Israeli prisoners before a simultaneous pullout of Israeli and Syrian troops.

The Israelis also want a declaration ending the state of war Israel claims exists with Lebanon, as well as an end to hostile propaganda, according to the sources, who requested anonymity.

The delegations met publicly at a blue, triangle-shaped table on the second floor of the seven-floor Lebanon Beach Hotel, then went into private session and broke for lunch.

At the public session, Israeli Foreign Ministry Director-General David Kimche said Israel wanted an agreement that would be "a step away from the full, final, formal peace treaty we would like to see come about."

The Israeli negotiator said the agreement worked out in the talks should supersede the armistice that the two countries signed in 1949 after the first Arab-Israeli war.

Lebanon's chief delegate, Ambassador Antoine Fattal, said Lebanon considered the 1949 armistice accord as the framework for relations between the two nations.

Fattal said Lebanon was ready to negotiate a revised version or supplement to the 1949 accord that would include security guarantees for Israel.

He said "only through total and exclusive exercise of its full authority can Lebanon maintain law and order internally and guarantee security along its border."

Special U.S. envoy Morris Draper, who headed the American team, said the talks were aimed at making arrangements for a withdrawal of foreign armies from Lebanon that would guarantee Israel's "fundamental security interests."

He said the negotiators had "an historic opportunity to set the stage for a future filled with hope."

In Jerusalem, Prime

Minister Menachem Begin followed the opening session from his office, said his spokesman Uri Porat. He described Begin's outlook as "positive" despite widespread Israeli skepticism over the value of the talks. Israeli and Lebanese security guards ringed the beachfront hotel in this Beirut suburb and Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers guarded all road intersections leading to the seven-story hotel.

Lebanese Christians and Druse Moslems, feuding for the past two months, have been fighting in the Khalde area five miles south of Beirut and in nearby hills since the weekend, leaving at least 18 people dead and 27 wounded.

The fighting had threatened delays or cancellation of the opening session, so tanks and troops from Israel's invasion army moved into the hills Monday to quell the violence.

Returning To Active Service

GRAND SALUTE — A naval officer salutes the battleship New Jersey Monday during rehearsal for the vessel's recommissioning today at Long Beach, Calif. The sea-going giant is going on active duty for the fourth time. The Navy has renovated the USS New Jersey at a cost of $326 million, arming it with missiles and up-to-date electronic equipment to go with its 16-inch guns. With a cruising speed of 35.5 knots, it is the fastest warship afloat. Launched on Dec. 7, 1942, the battleship weighs in at 58,000 tons and measures 887 feet long. (AP Laserphoto)

Sec. Of Transportation Said Planning Resignation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis called a news conference today, and an administration source said Lewis would announce he is leaving the Cabinet.

The source said the secretary's immediate plans were uncertain, but Lewis is reported to have been offered the chairmanship of Warner Amex Cable Communications Inc., a major cable television company.

Lewis, who was a successful businessman before he joined the government in January 1981, would be the third member of President Reagan's Cabinet to return to private life.

Alexander M. Haig Jr. resigned as secretary of state last June 25 over policy differences with Reagan and Energy Secretary James Edwards quit effective Nov. 5 to become president of the Medical University of South Carolina.

Lewis' news conference, announced by spokesman Wilbur Martin, came less than two weeks after The Washington Post reported that the secretary had been offered the job of board chairman of Warner Amex, a joint venture of Warner Communications Inc. and the American Express Co. that is the nation's sixth largest cable television operator.

Warner Amex's chairman, Gustave M. Hauser, has announced plans to retire.

In Phoenix, Ariz., deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said he was unaware of any plans by Lewis to resign.

Office Condos Are Announced

Bill Clark Construction Company Inc. announced today plans for a $2 million office condominium community of courtyard buildings on Arlington Boulevard.

The plans are being designed by Jimmy Hite of Dudley, Shoe and Hite, P.A. Phase I will consist of approximately eight offices and will start within 60-90 days.

The plans allow the purchase of any size space from 1,100 square feet to over 12,000 square feet. Interiors are custom designed and built to meet the specific requirements of individual owners.

Buildings will feature fire protected concrete and steel construction with thick foam insulation in floors, walls and roof for energy conservation. Self-contained, energy efficient mechanical and electrical systems are provided for each condominium.

The offices will be built on a four acre site located between Bond's Sporting Goods and East Federal Savings and Loan.

Head-On Collision Fatal For One; Two Left In Critical Condition

William Major Buck, 32 of Bell Arthur, died in a head-on collision on the Stantonsburg Road just west of the Greenville city limits Monday night.

Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris said Buck died of "multiple chest injuries," after the car he was driving was involved in a "head on collision in the other person's lane."

Highway Patrolman A.G. Wright said Buck, headed west, was in the process of passing a car on a curve when his vehicle collided with an east-bound car driven by Suzanne Bailey, 21 of Hampton, Va. Passengers in the car included her father, Claude Bailey, 50, and her mother, Judy Bailey, 49, both of Hampton.

A spokesman for Pitt County Memorial Hospital said Claude Bailey was in stable condition this morning, while the two women were in critical condition.

Trooper Wright, who said it took rescue workers about 1½ hours to remove Miss Bailey from behind the wheel of the car, said the Baileys had recently moved from near Pelham, N.C. to Virginia.

Couple Weds In Farmville

FARMVILLE — The marriage of Mary Virginia Hilyard of Route 1, Farmville and Marion Christopher Peaden was solemnized Dec. 18 at three o'clock in the afternoon in Emmanuel Episcopal Church.

The Rev. William J. Hadden Jr. performed the double ring ceremony. Bryan Joyner, cousin of the bride, served as acolyte. Mrs. Michael Dixon presented a program of organ music.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Peaden of Bell Arthur.

Given in marriage by her parents, Mrs. Mary Frances Joyner of Route 1, Farmville and Donald R. Hilyard of Seattle, Wash., the bride was escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined with chantilly lace beaded with pearls and sequins. The fitted bodice was overlaid with point d'esprit and chantilly lace trimmed the full bishop sleeves which were finished in matching lace cuffs. Satin ribbon encircled the natural waistline and the full circular skirt was enhanced with a flounced hemline of lace accented with satin ribbon that extended to form an attached semi-cathedral length train. Appliques of lace embellished the skirt and train. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in lace held in place by a Juliet cap of lace beaded with pearls.

Augusta Hilyard of Riverside, Calif. was maid of honor for her sister. The bridegroom's sister, Brenda Peaden of Bell Arthur, was bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Wayne Peaden of Bell Arthur, cousin of the bridegroom, and Kenneth Baker of Bell Arthur.

For a wedding trip to the coast, the bride changed into a denim ensemble and wore her mother's corsage of yellow carnations.

The bride graduated from Farmville Central High School and attended East Carolina University. She was employed at Hardee's Foods in Farmville. The bridegroom attended Lenoir Community College and is serving in the U.S. Marines.

The couple will live in Jacksonville.

Joey Kue directed the ceremony.

After the wedding the bride's mother entertained at an informal reception at her home.

The bride's father entertained at a dinner party after the rehearsal at the Colonial Inn. The parents of the bridegroom gave a dinner party at Parker's Barbecue in Greenville for the bridal couple.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I love you, Jane Goodall. I really do. I was filled with envy when you went to East Africa in the '60s, to observe the baboons and chimpanzees.

I said, "Why not me, God? I could take the silence, the boredom, the isolation. Why was I chosen to stay behind battling smog, bickering children and aggressive left-overs?"

From time to time I would see you on a special on PBS and for days afterward I would fantasize about climbing into a pair of shorts and faded shirt, fastening my hair a ponytail (where do you get all those rubber bands?) and ascending to a solitary hill to write down what I saw.

No pantyhose riding around your hips, no gas gauge on E, no shaving your legs (just mangle), no video games, no newspaper in the spouting, no securing the house every night like Fort Knox... just blessed peace and a clean pair of shorts for the next day.

Sometimes, Jane, I'll go for months and not think too much about you, and then the week between Christmas and New Year's comes and I think about you a lot. Like when all the kids are home and two of them are pounding the first eight bars of "Heart and Soul" on the piano for three solid hours. When one of them is going through the garbage trying to find a sales slip that you burnt with the trash three days ago. When you run out of milk every six hours. When the countertop has wall-to-wall glasses. When putting Christmas stickers on the dog's tail is "something to do." When the traffic through your house makes you feel like you're living in a bus station restroom.

I want your job, Jane! I want to sit quietly while two baboons go for one another's throat and say, "That isn't my section for playground duty." To see chimpanzees running up and down a sandy beach and know that I don't have to do all the wet towels and sandy sheets.

I want to sit on a hillside and know that the moment I sit down, the phone won't ring.

The more I watch our family, the more non-threatening and civilized baboons become. Obviously you have chosen the easy way out. If you don't believe it, just watch three grown kids fight over who gets use of the car.

I'll be all right in a few weeks. I always recover. But right now, Jane, if I were you, I'd shape up. I'm willing to watch baboons and chimps the rest of my life for "scale."

Dear Abby

'Other Woman' Might Leave

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Your column on "MOMMA" (Mistresses of Married Men Anonymous) prompted me to write to you for the first time. You've had many letters from rejected women, but I've never seen anything in your column about the rejected male. I'd like to ask a few questions from the point of view of us hurting men.

My mistress and I had the late dates, stolen hours, tears, broken promises, etc. However, we were in our 60s! We'd been seeing each other for several years and planned to marry as soon as I got my freedom. But before that happened, she ended the affair suddenly, and I mean suddenly. One night she went out with a man who had just lost his wife, and they were married shortly after.

There were two big differences between him and me. He was free, and worth several million dollars more than I was.

I was left cynical and brokenhearted. My question: Do most women go to the highest bidder?

HURTING

DEAR HURTING: No. But they tend to favor the men who are free to marry.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Disgusted with Women," who claims he's not a bad-looking guy but doesn't have any "luck" with women (they keep giving him phony names and numbers): Maybe he needs to ask himself if he's trying to wing it on his looks alone.

As a single woman (divorced five years ago), I have encountered guys to whom I have given phony names and numbers because they came on too strong and refused to take "No" for an answer.

I recall the men I lied to as egotistical, unwilling to listen, insensitive and inconsiderate of my wishes not to be pawed in public (or in private). After being told "No" politely and in no uncertain terms several times, if they still persisted, I gave them a phony name or number to get rid of them. It beat screaming in public.

DISGUSTED WITH EGOMANIACS

DEAR DISGUSTED: What's wrong with looking a man straight in the eye and saying, "No, you may not have my name or phone number because I really don't care to see you again?" It would save a lot of time.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married earlier this year in a formal ceremony. We considered asking my husband's 9-year-old niece to be the flower girl, but we decided against it when we learned that another niece (age 13) felt left out.

However, we did use my husband's dog, Lady, in the ceremony as the ring bearer. Lady is 11 years old and my husband raised her from a pup. Everyone who knows us knows that my husband rarely goes anywhere without Lady. Our friends are still talking about how cute Lady looked trotting down the aisle with the ring box in her mouth.

Now, nine months later, we receive this very upsetting letter from my sister-in-law telling us how badly we hurt them by using a dog in the ceremony instead of their daughter.

Abby, we never promised that their daughter would be in the wedding — we only considered it briefly. Don't you think we had the right to plan the kind of wedding we wanted?

S. IN NOVATO, CALIF.

DEAR S.: Yes. Your relatives have no bone to pick with you since Lady did not replace their daughter in the ceremony.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from the couple who had lost their toddler in a freak accident in the bathroom, I felt very guilty for not having written to warn others of that household danger. You see, the same freak accident happened to a grandnephew of mine. Luckily, our toddler was found in time, although he was semiconscious and his lips were blue. He had just learned to walk and was fascinated with the water in the commode. He wandered into the bathroom, evidently pulled himself up and then fell in head first and was unable to get out again.

My heart goes out to the grieving parents who wrote asking you to alert others so that they might be spared the terrible tragedy those parents recently experienced.

Thank you, Abby, for recognizing the importance of their letter and selecting it for publication. And may God forgive me for not writing such a letter myself.

MRS. S., HOLLYWOOD, FLA.

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Just Need Cold For Ski Slopes

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

While poor economic conditions are freezing profits for many businesses, North Carolina's ski resort operators say colder weather is all they need to give their business a lift.

"I don't think we'll feel the impact of the recession too much," says Jim Cottrell, president of the North Carolina High Country Hosts Association.

"Recreation is one of the last things people stop doing," he said.

Warm weather dampened the start of the season, but resort operators say slope quality is rising as the mercury drops.

November's mild weather, accompanied by dismal predictions from the National Weather Service for a warmer-than-usual winter, had resort operators worried.

Sugar Mountain opened Nov. 6, its earliest opening ever, but had to shut down because of high temperatures. Ski Beech had planned its opening for Thanksgiving but had to postpone it. Appalachian's early opening got rained out.

In the past couple of weeks, the weather changed, and several inches of snow fell in mountain areas. Temperatures rose again last week, and forecasters are predicting scattered showers and temperatures in the 40s and 50s early this week.

"We're looking for record crowds (this week)," Cottrell said. "Since the weather changed, things look good."

Realtors Have New Officers

Thelma Whitehurst was installed as president of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors for 1983 at the organization's recent installation banquet and Christmas dance.

Charles Landen of Roanoke Rapids, regional vice president for the North Carolina Association of Realtors, administered to the oath to Ms. Whitehurst and the other new officers of the local group.

Taking office with Ms. Whitehurst were Blanche Forbes, vice president; Connally Branch, secretary-treasurer; and David Nichols and Les Turnage, state directors.

Also installed as local directors for 1983 were Turnage, Louise Moseley, Jack Duffus, Mavis Butts, and Mac Harris.

Ms. Moseley was named recipient of the organization's Realtor of the Year award for her "outstanding work and accomplishments during the past year."

There are more than 600,000 Realtors nationwide who are members of the national organization through state and local boards.

THELMA WHITEHURST

Comeback Drive Set By Tylenol

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The makers of Extra-Strength Tylenol are planning their first nationwide TV advertising campaign since cyanide-tainted capsules killed seven people and eroded sales of the country's No. 1 painkiller.

Johnson & Johnson announced the campaign Monday, saying it was designed to bolster Tylenol's comeback from an 87 percent sales slump.

The commercial, to be broadcast for the first time Sunday, begins with a housewife reassuring viewers that she trusts Tylenol. It concludes with a male announcer telling viewers, "You can trust our good name."

He then warns consumers to be sure all three seals on the new Tylenol containers are intact before buying the product.

Earlier this year, Tylenol was the largest selling brand of non-prescription pain reliever, including aspirin and other acetaminophen products.

Tylenol had 35 percent of the analgesic market before seven people from the Chicago area died in late September and early October after consuming cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules. Sales plummeted by 87 percent immediately after the poisonings.

But by mid-December, Tylenol had gained 24 percent of the market — mainly through sales of the product in tablet form — while sales of competing pain relievers slipped, said Lawrence T. Foster, vice president for corporate relations.

By immediately pulling all Tylenol capsules off shelves and then reintroducing the same product in new packaging this month, the company ignored marketing experts who had urged Johnson & Johnson to take a low-key approach or even drop the brand.

But some analysts, including Neil Zweig of Shearson-American Express, predicted that even if Tylenol recoups its previous share of the market, stockholders will suffer because of the extra expenditures on advertising and promotional campaigns as well as the $100 million spent on the recall and re-packaging of the capsules.

Tylenol is manufactured by a Johnson & Johnson subsidiary, McNeil Consumer Products Co. of Fort Washington, Pa.

"The story will remain incomplete beyond 1983," Zweig said Monday. "They've already accomplished what business school professors thought they could not accomplish."

New Congress Ahead

In America there always seems to be hope and the hope now is that the new 98th Congress which convenes in January will have the leadership and good sense to tackle some of the nation's problems.

There were Democratic gains in the House of Representatives, while the Senate is not much changed, but at least the members of Congress know that they will have to face re-election.

Surely by now those elected to Congress must know that the nation faces major economic problems. They must know that the government they control cannot continue to operate with huge deficits and that revenues must be found to close the financial gap. They must see that Social Security has to be overhauled to be put on a sound financial basis. There is, after all nothing wrong with Social Security that cannot be fixed if Congress is willing to take difficult but necessary actions.

The United States Congress has operated with efficiency in the past and it can work again given adequate leadership and the refraining from filibusters over the pettiest of issues.

Through these holidays every voter in this nation should be telling his or her representatives and senators that he or she wants Congress to cut out the grandstanding and get to work on the critical issues that face this nation. Congressmen work for the voters and we have every right to demand a better performance than we have seen during the past two years.

Tobacco Hearings Worth Risk

Rep. Charles Rose, III, D-N.C., who is chairman of the House Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee, says he will hold hearings next year on a proposed bill to limit tobacco allotment lease rates.

Rep. Rose expressed the concern that the high price of leasing could destroy the tobacco program.

Any legislation brought up in Congress concerning tobacco is risky at the present time. There are staunch foes of tobacco who are ready at any time to attempt to abolish the program.

Yet, as Rep. Rose says, there is a real problem that allotment leasing rates could kill the program in itself. Thus it is worth taking to risk to moderate the leasing rates.

Remedial Action

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The juvenile court system was never designed to punish people the same way our adult courts do. But the Governor's Crime Commission, aware of growing public unrest with young thugs who appear to be coddled by the system, thinks it may be time to start treating the most serious juvenile criminals like adults. They want some changes made before public displeasure brings down the whole juvenile system.

"The idea of the juvenile justice system is not to try to punish kids but to help them," says Alamance County District Court Judge J.B. Allen Jr. "But with more and more serious offenders, the public is demanding that these serious offenders be dealt with appropriately."

"There's a movement in this country to do away with juvenile courts and I'm opposed to that. But we're trying to protect society so we ought to deal with some of these juveniles as if they were adults... because they're committing adult crimes. If a 15-year-old murders someone, that person's just as dead as if someone 40 did it," Allen says.

The commission wants the legislature to make five changes in juvenile law which it hopes will remedy the system's shortcomings regarding serious offenders. The alternative says Steve Williams, Wake County court counselor and chairman of the commission's juvenile justice subcommittee, is to follow the path which New York and Maine recently took.

"I fear that we'll let it get worse. Let it get worse, let it get worse and then we'll overreact... when we have an extraordinary case which lights it all up and the legislature will be called back into session to pass a bill in two days that nobody's given any thought to." That's what happened in Maine and New York, Williams says, and now those states have extremely harsh laws for even the kid who commits only a minor crime.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

These states have loaded up their superior courts with juveniles and begun sending children to prison. But such a strategy fails to help correct the children's problems, Williams says. Better to keep a juvenile system but make it address the serious offender. The North Carolina juvenile courts work better than any part of the justice system. Court counselors have a small caseload so they can work with — and help — their kids, the court calendars work and the crime victims are kept apprised of developments on cases, he says.

Included in the commission's package are proposals to designate sex offenses as offenses which cannot be diverted out of the court system and to give judges the power to give any youngster a predetermined sentence. The commission wants to forbid the expunction of juvenile court records for several classes of very serious crimes and allow sentencing judges to inspect the juvenile record of an adult defendant.

Many serious offenders cannot now be sentenced to a predetermined term unless they are tried in adult court. The commission would prefer to keep these youngsters in the juvenile system, where educational and psychiatric help is available. But if they do so, the child can be released at almost any time.

Williams says current juvenile laws allow some adult defendants to hide from the courts a serious record of juvenile crime. He says it isn't fair to give a man with a clean record the same sentence as a man who was in training school and juvenile court all of his teen years.

Under current law, first and second degree sex offenses are diverted out of the court system by court counselors. These offenses include many acts previously considered to constitute rape and the commission wants them back in the court system.

Setback For The AMA

WASHINGTON — A nice bit of irony could be found in two stories this month involving the medical profession. Out in Utah we saw a brilliant team of doctors working with an artificial heart, and this was an occasion for admiration. Here in Washington, we saw a shameless team of doctors lobbying for one of the worst bills to be considered by the 97th Congress, and this was an occasion for contempt.

celebrated case, the FTC invented the novel doctrine of a "shared monopoly," a condition to be equated with partial virginity. These regulatory excesses have deserved all the scorn heaped upon them.

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

But the FTC has been on precisely the right track in its efforts to prevent the medical and dental professions — and other professions also — from engaging in business practices that cannot be condoned. Let me lean on that word "business." Medicine is indeed a noble profession, but it is also a business. Doctors are doctors not only for their love of humanity, but also for their affection for the almighty dollar. As businessmen, they are engaged in the same kind of competition faced by automobile manufacturers and real estate salesmen.

Yet professional societies, raising the pious banner of "ethics," have seen to it that their competition is different. It is thus "unethical" for doctors to advertise their prices, office hours and willingness to make house calls. It is "unethical" for doctors to let elderly patients know if they will accept Medicare payments. By contrast, it is quite acceptable for local medical societies to fix prices, to engage in boycotts, and to ostracize maverick doctors who refuse to go along with the local establishment.

The AMA's purpose was to obtain legislation that would exempt the learned professions from prosecution by the FTC for anti-competitive business practices. It never was entirely clear just which "state-licensed professionals" would have benefited from the House bill. As the Heritage Foundation has pointed out, "professionals" include doctors, dentists, lawyers, cosmetologists, land surveyors, portrait photographers, and even beekeepers and salesmen of lightning rods.

In any event, the idea was to prevent the FTC from bringing the doctors-as-businessmen to heel. Toward that end the AMA invested a fortune in campaign contributions. In House and Senate committee hearings, AMA spokesmen argued in favor of self-regulation and state regulation. They contended that state attorneys general and the U.S. Depart-

Maybe Dole In Cabinet

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Reagan may try to kill two birds with one stone by naming top White House female aide Elizabeth Dole, wife of Sen. Robert Dole, to replace Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis.

there will be greater effort to explain to environmentalists that deregulating environmental safety procedures does not mean wholesale surrender to anti-environmentalists.

That would satisfy insistent recommendations of Reagan's advisers that he must name a woman to a Cabinet-level department to start closing the "gender gap" before 1984. Mrs. Dole, a Federal Trade Commissioner before she married the senator, is well-regarded by feminist groups.

White House Truce
Signs of a truce the endless staff war at the White House were confirmed four days before Christmas when chief of staff James Baker informed his principal lieutenants that he would tolerate no criticism of other presidential aides in leaks to the press.

Considering the flow of adverse material from Baker, underlings, that admonition, was regarded by Baker's rivals as a little late in the game. Nevertheless, it confirmed speculation that there would be no change in Reagan's unwieldy four-headed staff for the foreseeable future.

At the same time, her elevation to the Cabinet would enable Reagan to recruit somebody more effective than Mrs. Dole in her senior White House staff position dealing with outside interest groups. Her colleagues feel she has dropped the ball in her assigned task of building coalitions for Reagan and sometimes seems more interested in furthering her ambitious husband's career than the president's.

White House insiders noted, that Baker's order came, after a spate of criticism appeared in print denigrating the abilities of national security assistant William P. Clark, who is Baker's most formidable rival. No such explicit cease-and-desist order had been issued by Baker during the months of press savaging of presidential counselor Edwin Meese. The moral: Clark is higher on the power ladder than Meese.

Reagan Loves Gorsuch
Tired from a late dinner party, President Reagan nevertheless switched on Ted Koppel's ABC "Nightline" just before midnight Dec. 9 and found himself "entranced" with the performance of Anne Gorsuch, his beleaguered director of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) who was quietly being eyed for early ouster by White House top-siders.

Jockeying For '84
The expectation of Sen. Paul Laxalt, newly-named general chairman of the Republican Party, that he will be in charge of President Reagan's re-election plans was punctured when veteran Reagan political operative Stu Spencer came to Washington Christmas week to discuss the 1984 campaign — without Laxalt's knowledge.

Reagan's entrancement with Gorsuch's trenchant defense of her conduct as head of EPA makes any early departure out of the question. He has been praising her ever since. It does not, however, solve what White House insiders consider one of the president's two toughest non-economic re-election problems: fierce opposition from environmentalist, partly caused by ham-handed administrative techniques of Gorsuch's EPA (the other being the growing gender gap).

Los Angeles-based Spencer, met with senior White House aides James Baker and Michael Deaver. Laxalt's office did not learn of the meeting until one of the senator's aides saw a newspaper story about it.

Laxalt was prevailed upon to take the party chair

THE SIMPLE LIFE
Alexander the Great once heard of a certain Diogenes, who, turning away from the luxurious life of the times, was living in a tub and telling people about the virtues of the simple life. Curious about the man, Alexander visited him with a great retinue of nobles to ask whether he, the great and conquering king, could do anything for his humble subject.

Diogenes replied that there was indeed. "What is it?", asked Alexander, expecting it to be a gift of gold, silver or jewels from the king's grating hoard. "Please stand out of my sunlight," replied Diogenes.

It is hard for those who are addicted to the material things of the world to realize that others can be happy with little or nothing at all. Learning how to live happily without an accumulation of things is an art. Happy is the person who wants nothing more from others than that they stand out of the sunlight. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:
As a local Jaycee president, I feel compelled to respond to the recent adverse publicity regarding the "Jamsam Trials." My purpose is threefold: First I emphasize that this unfortunate incident was an isolated one that involved only a few people. I am saddened that the actions of so few people who acted out of greed have cast a shadow over a great organization. Unfortunately, all Jaycees must now bear the responsibility of these few people's actions.

Second, I stress that, while competition may have been the incentive for these few people, it certainly is not the major motivating factor for my club nor any other that I am aware of. Our main objective is to provide "service to humanity" as is mentioned in the Jaycee Creed. Jaycee clubs support various causes in their respective communities and, in addition, contribute to numerous national causes including muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis, cystic fibrosis, and cerebral palsy, to name a few. We work hard at various projects to raise money to benefit these causes. My members give many hours of their personal time to assist in such projects.

Third, I want to remind the public that the Jaycees know that community support is what makes our organization thrive. Without local community support, we would be unable to give all that we do to charitable causes. I reaffirm our sincere appreciation to the public for this support.

In closing, I quote from a recent letter from the past director of the N.C. Jaycee Memorial Burn Center, Dr. Peter Dingledein, written to Mr. Jim Cole, president of the N.C. Jaycees, regarding our continued support of the burn center: "...I cannot begin to express how impressed I am with a group of young men who have chosen to eradicate a debt not of their making. The commitment of the Jaycees to the eradication of this debt typifies a sense of honor and responsibility that is seen less and less often in our society."

'We Did It All To Ourselves'

made good money, quit in 1978 for a similar job, then "got it into my head to begin my own business."

It felt snugly warm near the fire, more so because of the snow and the north wind blowing off frozen McCaslin Lake. One week more and it would be Christmas, and a tinsel tree scraped the ceiling.

He shook his head. "I couldn't even get called there. They probably thought they'd have to pay me more than the kids." His voice was earnest, direct. "I would have worked for less."

For nine years he worked at an automotive plant in Flint. "I liked to learn things, and I learned 75 percent of the things on the line," he knew, he said, that the more work he did the more he'd get.

Things happened swiftly. He was divorced, remarried, had kids (he has sons 15 and 13 by the previous marriage). "I did OK as long as I worked out of my house," he said.

The scene wasn't what it appeared. There might be no toys for Shannon, 3, and Christine, 2, because Bob and Wanda Bridges had just moved into the rented house and the check from Social Services hadn't arrived.

What money they had went to buy the stove. Big as it was, it couldn't heat the entire house, so a blanket draped across a stairway confined the heat to the living room. You couldn't see the lake; blankets covered the windows too.

Bob, 37, a husky, mid-mannered former autoworker, tiler and salesman, motioned his guest to an easy chair with a split vinyl cushion.

"I'd take any job that would enable me to take care of my family and pay back those I owe," he began. "I even went to Burger King and McDonald's - told them I'd do anything."

He shook his head. "I couldn't even get called there. They probably thought they'd have to pay me more than the kids." His voice was earnest, direct. "I would have worked for less."

Bob Bridges is bitter at nobody, except perhaps himself, although he's critical of unions and management, who, he suggests, balanced off each other's needs at the expense of car prices and the economy.

He supports President Reagan, and absolves him from blame for unemployment. Instead, he maintains Americans "blew a good thing by expecting more and more for doing less and less."

He and Wanda, 23, hit bottom late in 1981, and since then have depended on state assistance, receiving $168 a month in food stamps and $241 in cash every two weeks, out of which they must pay $300 in rent, and bills for utilities, clothing, fuel for an old truck donated by a friend, and additional food.

Wanda bakes bread and has learned to cook with beans. Turkey is often on the menu because, the Bridges

Gradually, he said, "I began to pace myself." And he confessed, "after nine years I think I became like them," referring to workers he considered slackers.

"We're paying for our mistakes," he continued. "It isn't just Japan that created problems for the car companies. The reason prices are up is that people wanted to do less and less all the time."

He is convinced of this. "I'm not popular with a lot of people for saying this, but Reagan isn't the guy who put us in this mess. We are. We've blown it. We could have avoided it if we worked harder."

He concedes he didn't use money wisely. "I didn't have a savings account." Why? "It was ignorance. I really didn't know what to do with money. When you get plenty you spend plenty."

He left the automobile plant to sell for a brother who owned a carpet and linoleum store in nearby Holly. He relates that he

"But then," he continued, "I opened a store." Within seven months, he said, he went through bankruptcy, and owed $15,000 or $20,000. "I'm still not well liked in the area because of the debts," he said.

He moved to Alabama, found wages too low, came back. Having studied two years at Fort Wayne Bible College he opened a church in Flint, but the congregation, many of whom had lost their jobs, couldn't support the building and his apartment over it.

"There were times I said, 'What's the use. I lost confidence in myself, the economy and my ability to work anymore.'"

The mood didn't last long. "I really think there'll be a change in 1983. I'd like to get into sales — go in on a small salary and commission. That makes your opportunities unlimited, because it depends on how hard you work."

Watt Drops Wilderness Protection In The West

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt is removing wilderness protection from thousands of acres across the West in a move environmentalists say shows contempt for Congress.

The Interior Department said Monday the action would affect more than 805,000 acres of land that has been protected while the administration and Congress decide whether to add the areas to the national wilderness system.

However, environmentalists claimed the action would affect more than 2 million acres out of the 24 million being studied for possible inclusion in the wilderness system. The land is spread out in 10 Western states.

"Secretary Watt's action shows an astonishing degree of contempt for Congress," said Terry Sopher of the Wilderness Society. "Congress and the American people should be given the opportunity to decide whether they want these areas as wilderness. This decision takes that choice away."

Environmentalists claimed that Watt timed the announcement to come after Congress adjourned and made it effective immediately to keep Congress from overruling him. Interior officials, however, called the decision "rather routine," and said it merely implemented a ruling by an Interior Department appeals board.

The board, in three cases brought by Western ranching and railroad interests, said the land in question did not qualify for review as potential wilderness.

Twenty-four million acres — out of a total of 310 million acres under control of the Bureau of Land Management in the West — were designated in 1980 as wilderness study areas.

A 1976 law requires the administration to make a recommendation to Congress on adding this land to the wilderness system. Congress must make the final decision on each recommendation.

The department's action, outlined in an opinion by Interior Solicitor William Coldiron, states that these lands were improperly designated wilderness study areas and deletes them from further review by the administration or Congress.

The study areas affected include: —Areas of less than 5,000 acres. The department said this covered 341,000 acres with the largest total amount — 123,600 — in California. There are smaller amounts in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming.

—Areas where the federal government owns the land but not the underground mineral rights. The department said this covers 465,000 acres. Arizona has 299,300 acres in this category with smaller amounts in Colorado, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming.

—Areas controlled by the Bureau of Land Management which do not qualify on their own for consideration as wilderness, even though they adjoin wilderness areas or potential wilderness areas administered by other federal agencies.

The department said 70 units in the states of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon and Utah would be affected but it gave no acreage estimate. However, the Wilderness Society said this was potentially the biggest category of all, covering 1.5 million acres.

Interior officials said that while the areas will no longer be considered under the wilderness review program, the department, on a case-by-case basis, could protect them from development under other programs or might consider them for wilderness protection at some future time.

But environmentalists said the decision leaves protection to the whim of the administration while the study designation kept them protected until Congress decided their fate.

Sopher said the Wilderness Society will file suit to attempt to block Watt's decision, which is to take effect on Thursday when it is published in the Federal Register.

Watt for the past year has been involved in a variety of scraps with Congress over wilderness protection. During the lame-duck session, Congress extended for another year a ban on Watt issuing oil and gas drilling permits in wilderness areas.

However, the language adopted by Congress exempted oil companies who had rights to drill before Oct. 1, 1982. Under this language, the department announced Monday that it was granting a drilling permit to Yates Petroleum Corp. Yates officials began drilling without department approval last month in a New Mexico wilderness until ordered by a federal court to stop.

Hepatitis Vaccine Now Used By Two Hospitals In North Carolina

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

Two North Carolina hospitals are among dozens nationwide that are using a new vaccine to reduce the incidence of hepatitis B among their "high-risk" employees. About 2,000 volunteers at Duke University Medical Center and Charlotte Memorial Hospital have been given the vaccine, which was approved by the Food and Drug Administration last year and marketed this July.

At Duke, 1,600 of the 8,800 health professionals associated with the medical center are taking the vaccine, said William J. Donelan, business manager of the department of medicine.

The vaccine, which costs $100 for each participant, was offered free to volunteers whose work brings them in contact with blood, a major source of hepatitis infections. But the program was offered more for the benefit of employees than to save hospital expenses, Donelan said.

"Hepatitis has not been a major problem for us, although it is probably most acute in the hemodialysis area," he said. "I'm not sure that if we were sitting down and approaching this problem on strictly economic terms that we would have pursued the vaccine as we have. But we did feel an obligation to offer the vaccine."

Donelan said researchers at Duke were studying the program to see if it led to a decreased incidence of hepatitis B in the hospital as a whole.

In October, Charlotte Memorial gave the vaccine to 400 of its 3,000 employees, said Al Pruitt, hospital spokesman.

The second injections were expected to be completed in December with the final injections scheduled for this spring. Results of the injections will not be available for another year, Pruitt said.

Hepatitis B is the most serious form of a disease that attacks the liver and can result in death. It affects about 200,000 people in the United States, killing about 4,000 each year. Some 800,000 people unwittingly carry the disease, which is transmitted through all body fluids.

The symptoms of hepatitis B range from a run-down feeling and mild fever to large-scale liver damage leading to death. Some patients recover completely, while others become carriers of the virus.

Clinical tests of the vaccine showed it was 92 percent effective in preventing infection and may provide immunity for up to five years. However, the vaccine offers no protection against other forms of hepatitis.

The only reported side-effects of the vaccine have been muscle soreness at the site of injection and some fever. The vaccine, developed at the Merck Institute for Therapeutic Research, is made from the blood plasmas of known carriers of hepatitis B. When the virus is heated, it becomes noninfectious but still stimulates the body's natural response to the foreign organism.

The process of making the vaccine requires nearly a year and is the longest production cycle of any vaccine.

Helms's Next Target

Fresh from his defeat in the Senate over the new nickel-a-gallon gas tax, which may help him in his tough 1984 North Carolina re-election battle, Sen. Jesse Helms has picked his next target: administration arms-control policies, which he claims are damaging national security.

Helms's new weapon: his decision to become the second-ranking Republican on the Senate arms control subcommittee, headed by liberal Republican senator Larry Pressler of South Dakota. From that vantage point, the irrepressible Helms, who lost standing with some of his colleagues in his filibusters against the gas tax, will gain new clout to influence Reagan's arms-control policy.

Immediate targets are alleged Soviet cheating on SALT II in their new nuclear testing programs and U.S. agreement to abide by SALT II even though it has not been ratified by the Senate.

Cats Stolen From Med School's Lab

WASHINGTON (AP) — An animal rights group says it stole more than 30 cats from a college medical research laboratory over the Christmas holiday because students complained the animals were mistreated.

A woman identifying herself only as "Lynn" of the "Animal Liberation Front" told The Associated Press on Monday that nine members of the group took the cats. She said they entered a locked building on the Howard University Medical School campus by breaking a window.

The woman said the group acted because it opposes using live animals in medical research and because students said the cats were subjected to unnecessary pain in research projects.

She said the nine brought their own cages and removed 35 cats, one of which was found dead in its laboratory cage.

University information director Alan Hermes said that 28 cats were taken in the break-in that occurred sometime between 11:30 p.m. Dec. 24 and 8:30 a.m. Christmas Day.

He said the school had not been contacted by anyone about the missing cats.

The woman calling herself "Lynn" said that most of the cats have been taken from Washington and would not be returned to Howard University.

She said the group felt "extreme action" was necessary to call attention to research at Howard.

"We feel the university has not made the effort to seek a more sophisticated alternative," she said.

Hermes said the laboratory is certified by the American Association for Accreditation of Laboratory Animal Care and meets standards for animal research.

He said the loss of the cats and property damage was estimated at $2,640.

District of Columbia police said they were investigating the incident.

Auto Drags A Body Home

DEPEW, N.Y. (AP) — A man who told police he was unaware his car was dragging a body has been charged with driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of a fatality.

Authorities say the body of Thomas O. Foust, 21, of Buffalo, had been dragged five to seven miles before it was disengaged from under the rear axle, tires and wheel well of a car driven by Robert K. Woods, 48, of Depew in upstate New York.

A witness spotted the body beneath Woods' car as it was driving on a local expressway and attempted to get the driver's attention, Ziembra said.

The witness then followed Woods to the driveway of a home and authorities were alerted, Ziembra said.

When police arrived, they found the black male's body wedged under the car.

Woods' wife, who was in the home, told Officer Harry Sutton her husband had just parked the car and gone to the bathroom, Ziembra said.

Woods admitted driving the car from downtown Buffalo.

Innocent Plea In Arson Deaths

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 19-year-old Mexican has pleaded innocent to charges that he set fire to an apartment building, killing 24 people, including several of his relatives.

Humberto Diaz De La Torre, being held without bail, is to return Jan. 7 to Los Angeles Municipal Court to set a date for a preliminary hearing, district attorney's spokesman Al Albergate said Monday.

De La Torre was arrested in Mexico last week for investigation of setting the Sept. 4 fire that left hallways and a rear stairwell at the Dorothy Mae apartments filled with charred bodies. Eighteen people died at the scene and six died later of their injuries.

Protests On Anniversary Of Afghanistan Invasion

By The Associated Press
While Afghan rebels carried their war against Soviet troops into a fourth year, protesters from Tehran to Washington burned hammer-and-sickle flags and denounced the Kremlin to mark the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

"Long live Afghan freedom fighters!" 250 marchers in Washington screamed on Monday as they converged on the Soviet Embassy. Some carried signs reading "Stop Yellow Rain" — a reference to U.S. allegations that Soviet forces have used chemical warfare in Afghanistan.

Soviet tanks rumbled into Afghanistan Dec. 27, 1979 to crush a Moslem insurrection against the Moscow-backed government. Shortly afterward Babrak Karmal was installed as Afghan president in a Soviet-backed coup. He vowed to crush the insurrection.

Three years later, the rebels still dominate at least 75 percent of the country, and the Soviets and Afghan government troops control only the major cities, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The Kremlin calls its Afghan force a "limited contingent" that will be withdrawn only when "outside interference" ceases. It says the Afghan government invited the troops in to help smash the insurgency.

U.S. officials estimate Soviet troops have increased from 90,000 to 105,000 in the war that neither side seems to be winning, though the rebels appear better equipped and organized than before.

In the Iranian capital Tehran, the Soviet news agency Tass said "riotous elements" ripped the Soviet flag from its staff Monday and tried to force their way into the embassy grounds. It said the Soviet Union filed a "strong protest."

Tehran radio said in a broadcast monitored in London that Afghans in Tehran and five other Iranian cities marched against the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan. It said protesters in Tehran "marched in front of the Soviet Embassy," but made no mention of them ripping down the flag or trying to enter the grounds.

Two men, a woman and a child tried to hand a declaration demanding Soviet troops leave Afghanistan to an official who answered the door at the Soviet Embassy in Washington. He refused to accept it, and the declaration was left on the doorstep.

President Reagan marked the anniversary in a statement Sunday praising Afghan "freedom fighters" and promising "Afghanistan is a struggle we will not forget."

Tass denounced Reagan's comments Monday, charging he "left no doubt that the United States will continue doing its utmost to attain the overthrow of the legitimate government of the sovereign democratic republic of Afghanistan."

In Rome, Afghanistan's deposed king, Mohammad Zaher Shah, issued a statement saying, "In these days of torment, I wish to reaffirm my wholehearted solidarity with the Afghan resistance."

Zaher, who was in Italy taking a rheumatism cure when his cousin Mohammad Daud seized power in a July 1973, coup, saluted what he called "three years of heroic struggle by an entire nation (that) ... fights on day after day for its Islamic faith, its freedom and dignity."

In New Delhi, hundreds of Afghan men, women and children gathered outside the Soviet Embassy, raised clenched fists and shouted: "down with the KGB!" "down with Communism!"

and "long live Islam!" The population of Afghanistan is overwhelmingly Moslem.

Huge green banners — the symbolic color of Islam — proclaimed: "Soviet Union is the enemy of Islam" and the 90-minute protest ended with the ritual burning of Soviet flags.

About 500 protesters gathered at the central marketplace in Bonn, West

Germany, and with green-and-white banners, marched on the Soviet Embassy.

At a New York protest, about 400 Afghans rallied near the Soviet Union's U.N. mission for an anti-Kremlin rally. Several children wore gas masks bearing the hammer-and-sickle emblem, another reference to allegations of Soviet chemical warfare in Afghanistan.

N.C. Harvests Up But Prices Down; No Early Relief Seen

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — High production costs and low prices that sapped North Carolina farm profits this year will keep plaguing growers until the nationwide recession ends, a state official says.

"We really can't expect to do well when the whole country's suffering," said A. Frank Bordeaux, chief economist with the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

"It's been a rough year in terms of farm income, and it's been this way all over the country. The prospects for dramatic recovery next year aren't very good."

Many of the state's crops were of record size and quality in 1982, but farmers had little to show for it, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said in a statement.

Cash receipts for North Carolina farms, which totaled a record $4.2 billion in 1981, are expected to slump to $3.9 billion this year.

Net or disposable income was $1.1 billion last year but probably won't rise above $750 million this year, Graham said.

The relatively successful year North Carolina enjoyed in 1981 ran against the national trend, largely because of large tobacco sales, Bordeaux said. This year, leaf sales were down and the state's farm economy slipped.

Flue-cured tobacco growers sold 658 million pounds of leaf, down from 740 million pounds in 1981. The gross return to farmers was $1.1 billion, which Graham indicated was a good figure in light of bad weather and uncertainties on Congress over the future of the federal tobacco program. The average price per pound of $1.78 was a record.

However, 30 percent of the crop failed to bring a price of at least one cent over the federal support price and thus was sent to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation. Only 9 percent of last year's crop went unsold.

Burley tobacco sales are expected to bring $50 million for 29 million pounds, up from 27.5 million pounds the previous year. But this year's crop brought an average price of only $1.73 per pound, compared with $1.79 in 1981.

Also, 25 percent of this year's burley leaf is expected to go to the stabilization corporation, while last year only 1 percent wasn't sold at auction.

Bordeaux said in an interview last week the 100 percent increase in the federal cigarette tax, from 8 cents to 16 cents per pack, might have made tobacco buyers leery about purchasing too much leaf.

"The tax had what I'd call an anticipatory effect this year," he said. "It could have a more direct effect, could trace back to the North Carolina farmer, in the future if cigarette sales decline."

Another problem for the state's growers is cigarette manufacturers' growing reliance on foreign leaf, which is cheaper than domestic tobacco because it generally costs less to produce.

North Carolina's agricultural exports totaled $1.1 billion this year, down six percent from 1981. Graham attributed the decline to "the world economic slump and the strength of the U.S. dollar in comparison with foreign currencies."

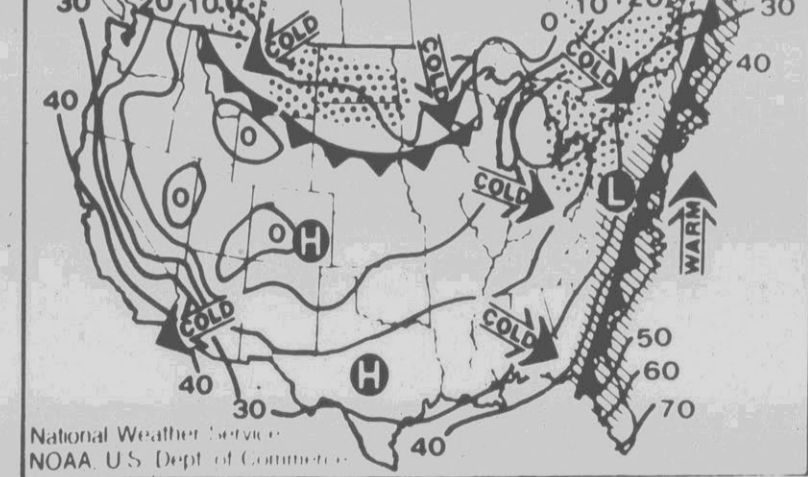

The state's agricultural economy could be improved if fruit and vegetable markets could be expanded, said A.A. De Hertogh, head of N.C. State University's Horticultural Science Department.

North Carolina's holiday of spring weather will come to an end within the next 48 hours as cold, dry air is on its way from Tennessee.

A cold front now moving through central Tennessee will reach North Carolina by sunset. Showers and thundershowers will accompany the front as it crosses the state. Clouds persisted over North Carolina on Monday, keeping temperatures slightly below their recent unseasonable levels. Nonetheless, Cape Hatteras and Jacksonville reached 71, while Greensboro managed 59.

Mostly cloudy skies will persist over most of the state today. Highs will be in the 60s in the west and 70s in the east. Showers will end in the west tonight but continue in eastern portions. Lows tonight will drop into the 40s in the mountains and 50s elsewhere.

Skies will clear on Wednesday with cooler air taking over. Highs will range from the 40s in the mountains to near 70 along the coast.

A Symbolic Value Seen In Tariff Cuts By Japan

PREPARATIONS — Volunteers labor over the 25-foot tall Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream float entry "Strawberry" Monday in preparation for the 94th annual Tournament of Roses parade on New Year's Day. When completed, the float will be adorned with over 60,000 orchids, roses, tulips, carnations, walnuts, almonds and pecans, and will house a camouflaged CBS-TV camera. (AP Laserphoto)

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — U.S. officials say Japan's latest package of tariff cuts has some symbolic value in easing trade tensions, but will have little real impact on the country's huge market surpluses with the United States and Europe.

"Japan acted independently, on its own initiative," a U.S. Embassy official who requested anonymity said of the measures approved last Friday by the Japanese Cabinet. "Real actions like this deserve some credit."

But the third trade-reform package announced by Japan in a year is expected to have minimal effect on the nation's burgeoning trade surpluses with its major trading partners, and could serve as little more than a diversion against rising anti-Japan protectionist moves in other countries.

The latest package of 78 items did not incorporate any action on the key issue of quotas on U.S. beef and citrus products, which are being handled in bilateral talks.

Also, it left for further study the question of remaining non-tariff barriers which have effectively kept a wide variety of foreign products out of Japan.

Analyzing the Japanese plan, the U.S. official said even a sizable cut in tobacco tariffs, from 35 percent to 20 percent, may not necessarily mean an increase in foreign sales in the huge Japanese market for cigarettes because "there are so many other variables."

The U.S. share of Japan's government-controlled tobacco market is only 1.4 percent, and "an awful lot depends on the rules" in determining whether U.S. sales improve, the U.S. official said. The "rules" include quotas on the percentage of foreign products retail distributors may sell.

He said the package's provision for slashing duties on chocolate from 31.9 percent to 20 percent was "quite important" to the United States and Europe, but the significance of other elements cannot be assessed without careful study.

Japanese officials are concerned with whether the measures will blunt criticisms of Japan's trading policies during Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's mid-January visit to Washington.

U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield told Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe on Monday that the measures would be a major factor in the battle against rising protectionism in the United States and Europe.

But with unemployment soaring in the rest of the industrialized world, and Japan's 1981 trade surpluses of $16 billion with the United States and $12 billion with the European Common Market expected to rise this year, pressures to shut out Japanese goods are likely to persist.

By a 2-1 margin, Americans favor limiting Japanese imports in order to protect U.S. industry, according to an Associated Press-NBC News poll last January.

Fear of anti-Japanese protectionism here is widespread. The media has given headline coverage to U.S. congressional debate on a bill which would require some foreign products such as cars to have domestically built contents. This would devastate Japan's auto sales in the United States, the Japanese say. Industrial officials are also concerned over France's moves to impede imports of Japanese video tape recorders.

When Nakasone took over as head of Japan's conservative government on Nov. 27 he ordered swift steps to ease trade friction, which has met extreme resistance in his rural-constituency-based Liberal Democratic Party.

In what could have been a major embarrassment for Nakasone, LDP lawmakers from rural districts succeeded in delaying government action to cut tariffs on tobacco, chocolate and biscuits when the package was approved last Friday.

But the rural lawmakers dropped their opposition to tariffs on the three items the next day after they obtained guarantees that the nation's 100,000 tobacco farmers would be protected and domestic sugar taxes would be cut for the benefit of the Japanese confectionery industry.

The tariff measures go into effect April 1 after Parliament, which is controlled by the LDP, approves them. Approval is considered a foregone conclusion.

Japanese analysts said the farm-bloc protest was largely symbolic, a means for politicians to show their constituencies they had held the fort until surrender was unavoidable.

Foreign Minister Abe, in briefing U.S. and European ambassadors on the tariff cuts, said they had been made at "great sacrifice," and were the "maximum efforts" Japan can make now to relieve trade friction.

Japanese officials emphasize other measures taken in the past year to cut tariffs, simplify customs and testing procedures and assist foreign makers interested in the Japanese market.

On Jan. 13 the government will decide formally on further non-tariff steps, such as relaxing testing procedures, to demonstrate what it calls the openness of Japan's markets.

Survivor Of Apollo 13 Flight Dies Of Cancer

DENVER (AP) — Rep.-elect Jack Swigert died Monday night of cancer at the Lombardi Cancer Institute of Washington's Georgetown University, a spokeswoman for his Washington office announced. He was 51.

Swigert, a former Apollo 13 astronaut, was a Republican

Ms. Weiss said Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., was with Swigert when he died at 10:10 p.m.

A Colorado native, Swigert was the pilot of the ill-fated Apollo 13 moon mission that was struck by an explosion on April 13, 1970, cutting off the command capsule's electrical power, water and oxygen supplies. It threatened to maroon Swigert and the other two astronauts in space.

"Houston, we've got a problem," Swigert radioed back to earth. Three and a half days later, Swigert and other crew members brought the crippled space ship home to a heroes' welcome.

Swigert had surgery for nose cancer and underwent radiation treatment during the early months of his campaign.

After his last chemotherapy treatment, which followed the general election, Swigert developed a fever and severe nosebleeds and was hospitalized at Denver's Presbyterian Hospital. That fueled speculation that he might not be able to attend swearing-in ceremonies and that his congressional work would be curtailed.

Swigert, however, vowed not to allow his medical problems to affect his work and said he would be at the ceremonies. He had missed a series of orientation sessions for new congressmen earlier this month. An aide attended in his place.

Swigert had a degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Colorado. He entered the Air Force after graduation, worked as a test pilot in private industry for 10 years and then joined the NASA space program in 1966.

He served with the support crews of the Apollo 7 and 11 missions as well as pilot of Apollo 13.

Governors In Bowl Wager

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — When the Gator Bowl kicks off Thursday, West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller and his Florida counterpart, Bob Graham, will have more than a passing interest in the outcome.

Rockefeller has accepted Graham's wager on the college football game pitting Florida State against West Virginia.

Rockefeller said Monday he will offer a fringed mountaineer's jacket if West Virginia loses. Graham bet a Seminole Indian jacket that his state's team will triumph.

Both Democratic governors plan to attend the game in Jacksonville.

Graham is an avid sports fan, but his interstate betting record needs a boost.

He lost a bet on the 1981 Orange Bowl that pitted Florida State against the Oklahoma Sooners, and ended up working a day in an Oklahoma oil field to settle that one.

Last fall, Graham bet a box of Florida mangoes on the Miami-Mississippi State game. After Mississippi State won 14-10, Graham discovered that mangoes were out of season and sent oranges instead.

Indict More In Drug Case

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A federal grand jury returned indictments Monday in a multimillion-dollar cocaine seizure, bringing the number of people charged in the case to six.

Four men, all natives of Colombia, were arrested Dec. 16. State and federal agents confiscated about 11 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of more than $2 million.

The grand jury indicted those four and two others on charges of conspiring to distribute the drug.

Jaime William Mejia-Gonzalez, 37, of Miami Lakes, Fla.; Jose Agobardo Galviz-Marulanda, 29, of Queens, N.Y.; Alvaro Melendez-Cifuentes, 35, of Colombia; and his brother, Antonio Ricuarte Melendez-Cifuentes, 27, of Union City, N.J., also are charged with possession of cocaine and with illegal interstate commerce.

Mejia, who was convicted of conspiracy to distribute heroin and cocaine in New Jersey in 1978, is under a $1.2 million bond. Bond was set at $800,000 for the other three in the case.

Also indicted Monday were Jose Luis Naranjo-Sierra and Juan Camilo Jaramillo-Gomez. It could not be learned Monday whether these men were in federal custody. Additional details concerning their identities also were not available.

elected to represent Colorado's new 6th Congressional District Nov. 2. He was to have been sworn in Jan. 3.

Before the November election, Swigert announced that his doctors had diagnosed his condition as bone marrow cancer. The cancer later spread to Swigert's lungs, his doctors said.

June Weiss, his press secretary, said the immediate cause of Swigert's death was respiratory failure.

Swigert had been hospitalized in Washington since Dec. 19, when he was airlifted to the Georgetown University hospital from his home in Littleton. He was under treatment for bone marrow cancer and complications from chemotherapy treatments.

Child Dies Of Accidental Shot

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A 3-year-old boy died Monday of gunshot wounds he received two days earlier when his mother accidentally fired a shotgun a friend received for Christmas.

Michael Shawn Case died of wounds to the head, neck and back Monday afternoon, said a spokesman for Duke University Medical Center.

Carllet Ann Case fired the gun by accident Saturday, according to the report of F.J. Borden, the public safety officer who investigated.

Borden said Ms. Case, 19, was showing a 12-gauge shotgun to an acquaintance when it went off, expelling a load of shot thought a sheet-rock wall into the living room. Three others in the family gathering were injured.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Lingering Pain of Shingles

It's been about four months since I came down with a case of shingles. I had it over my chest. The pain I now have is not as bad as it was, but I definitely know that I have something yet. Is there anything I can do to speed up my recovery? — Mr. L.B., Mo.

Dear Mr. B.: Anyone who has ever had an attack of shingles sympathizes with you and recalls vividly the weeks and sometimes months of annoying pain.

All of us in the practice of medicine share with you the distress you have. We so often have a feeling of total inadequacy in making an attack of shingles disappear.

Shingles, sometimes known as zona, or herpes zoster, is an acute infection of the central nervous system. A virus is the culprit that attacks the nerves that reach out from some portions of the spinal cord.

The elderly, the infirm, people who have been undernourished, and those who are devitalized by other diseases are particularly prone to this painful affliction.

The virus that causes it is said to be related in character to the one that causes chicken pox.

A painful eruption may occur on the abdominal wall, the chest, the neck, the face, or the legs. Tiny dots are seen early in this condition. These run in a special line and are quickly identified by their appearance and the pain associated with them.

In the early stages cortisone and sometimes ACTH are used to reduce the initial discomfort. Some doctors occasionally use large doses of vitamin B12 even though its efficacy has not been truly established. Soothing lotions and powders may be helpful in reducing the itching (a form of pain) associated with shingles that are healing. Pain relievers during the healing period are beneficial.

Patience and more patience are necessary during this healing period. Other than a good nutritious diet, there are very few, if any, ways that you can stimulate more rapid healing. It may be a source of comfort to you to know that almost always, one attack of herpes zoster confers a permanent immunity.

When I complain of numbness in my hand, my doctor told me I have a tunnel disease. No one else has ever heard of this. What is it? — Mr. M.J., N.J.

Dear Mr. J.: Your doctor made an astute observation. The condition is known as a carpal tunnel syndrome. It is relatively common and is recognized by the numbness and tingling in the fingers.

The median nerve runs through a rigid tunnel in the wrist. Sometimes, because of injury or inflammation, this nerve becomes compressed in the narrow tunnel. The result is a pins and needles sensation, sometimes associated with numbness and swelling and an impairment of movement of some of the fingers.

Drugs and cortisone are sometimes used to reduce the inflammation around the nerve. If this is unsuccessful and there is marked interference with the functioning of the hand, a safe operation can be performed to liberate the nerve and to modify the symptoms.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, pausing after the rally that lifted the Dow Jones industrial average to a record high on Monday.

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange was interrupted from about 10:20 a.m. to 11 a.m. EST by a small, smoky fire that forced evacuation of the trading floor.

The exchange said the fire, which resulted from welding outside the exchange, was quickly extinguished, with no injuries or damage on the trading floor.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 25.48 to a new closing peak of 1,070.55 Monday, dropped back 2.03 to 1,068.52 by noon.

Advancing issues led declines by about 4 to 3 among NYSE-listed issues.

Before the market opened New York's Chase Manhattan Bank lowered its prime lending rate from 11 1/2 to 11 percent. Analysts said the move came as no great surprise, however, given recent reductions in the Federal Reserve's discount rate.

Among actively traded blue chips, Exxon rose 1/4 to 29 3/4, but American Telephone & Telegraph dropped 1/8 to 60 1/4, and General Motors lost 1/4 to 64.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .11 to 81.52. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .51 at 334.34.

Holiday Sales Brighten Spirits Of Retailers

By The Associated Press
 The nation's shopowners are hanging out post-Christmas "sale" signs after a holiday selling season that retailers said was brightened by last-minute shoppers.

"We had a strong finish," said Henry Quinto, president of Levy's in Tucson, Ariz. "It started slowly, but the final week was a strong week."

Quinto said practical gifts and E.T. dolls were the most popular. "It would seem the customers were looking for solid value," he said.

John Chavis, manager of a Target Store in Nashville, Tenn., said the discount outlet planned to boost advertising by about 40 percent this month to keep sales going.

"We'll have more ads every week," he said. "This year we'll have a sale every week in January. Last year, that wasn't the case."

At another Nashville store, Cain Sloan, bargain-hunters found discounts. "This year the discounts are running just a little higher than last year," said Terry McDonald, vice president for sales promotion. "The price break this year is 25 percent to 40 percent off. It's jumped over the last few years. The times are demanding that. It's something you need to do to stimulate people to buy."

The sales began Sunday, the day after Christmas.

Elizabeth Krogh, director of public relations for Macy's California in San Francisco, said the store had a "record-breaking day" on Dec. 26. She also said pre-Christmas sales showed a "substantial increase" over last year, with "all kinds of better merchandise" doing well.

"It tells me one thing," said Ms. Krogh. "If anyone is going to spend money this year, it's going to be on something that's functional and is going to last."

Christine Steck, spokeswoman for Hahne's stores in New Jersey, agreed. "People were looking for good values," she said. "They went for basic investment items."

Ms. Steck said the sales "figures this year are better than last year. But they were very last-minute increases which made up for a very slow beginning."

Allen Questrom, chairman of the board of Rich's department stores in Atlanta, said the week before Christmas was the strongest of the year. "The people rush out to shop," he said, buying electronic games, home computers, better sportswear and E.T. dolls.

Store Robbed

WINTERVILLE — A lone robber held up the Stop-N-Go on South Mills Street here about 3:30 a.m. today.

Police Chief Keith Knox said the robber, armed with a knife, entered the store and demanded the money.

Knox said that in addition to about $53 in cash taken from the register, the robber took about $13 from the clerk, then left walking north behind the Dixie Queen Restaurant.

Knox said there is a seven-year mandatory sentence if convicted on armed robbery charges. He reported investigation of the incident is continuing.

Bank Trims Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third largest commercial bank, today lowered its prime lending rate a half point to 11 percent, the lowest level for the key borrowing charge since August 1980.

It was the first reduction in the prime rate since major banks adopted an 11.5 percent rate on Nov. 22.

The prime is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans. It has been falling since mid-July, when it stood at 16 percent.

A weak economy has reduced loan demand from businesses and has prompted the Federal Reserve Board to foster lower interest rates, economists say.

As a result, the cost of funds for banks has fallen sharply in recent months.

The discount rate, the interest on Fed loans to banking institutions, is 8.5 percent, down from 12 percent in July.

The interest on three-month certificates of deposit in minimum denominations of $100,000, an important source of funds for banks, is 8.7 percent, down from 15.25 percent in late June.

The prime rate reached a record 21.5 percent in December 1980.

Looted 2 Night Depositories

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Police investigating the theft of $300,000 from night depositories torn from the walls at two banks have 50 to 60 empty money bags recovered from a shopping center trash bin.

An FBI spokesman said Monday that police were checking 15 to 20 leads in the robberies, believed to be related.

The outside night depository boxes at two branches of the Colonial Bank were removed by vehicles pulling with chains, police said. A Waterbury branch was robbed of about $200,000 early Friday. Thieves got about $100,000 from a branch at the Southbury Shopping Plaza early Saturday.

Radioactive Spill Now Cleaned Up

DENVER (AP) — Radioactive liquid sodium iodide that fell from a van's back door, spilling onto Interstate 70, has been cleaned up and "there's no hazard now," State Patrol Lt. Robert Montgomery said.

The spill was discovered early Monday and a section of highway was closed. Three of six packages of the chemical, used to treat thyroid cancer, broke open. Much of the liquid was soaked up by sand on the snow-packed road.

Two packages were picked up by a motorist, who called police when he realized the substance was radioactive.

More Evidence Arthur Existed

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — There may really have been a King Arthur behind the legend of the Round Table knights — seekers of the Holy Grail and symbols of chivalry for more than a thousand years.

Documents discovered by an American historian are said to support the theory that the noble Arthur was more man than myth.

Arthur is mentioned in three early French chronicles "that nobody noticed before," said Geoffrey Ashe, a British writer, lecturer and specialist on the Arthurian legend.

"The research by Professor Barbara Moorman of the University of Southern Mississippi confirms my long-held feeling that Arthur was more than a legend," Ashe told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Some historians believe Arthur led British — Celtic — warriors against the invading Saxons in the fifth century, after the Romans left Britain in A.D. 410.

"It's a very obscure period after the Romans left Britain, as there was a lot of destruction and looting of records by the invading Saxons," Ashe said. "But we seem now to have a British king in the fifth century as the original of the Arthurian Legend."

Modern historians think there probably was a British ruler named Arthur, who fought the Saxon invaders coming in from what is now the Netherlands and the north German coast.

The shadowy figure was embellished by storytellers into a chivalrous hero, leader of the knights of the Round Table and seeker of the Holy Grail — which legend says was the chalice of Christ's Last Supper. According to the myth, the cup was endowed with miraculous powers and would be revealed only to the purest knight.

Ashe and Mrs. Moorman are members of a committee of genealogists and historians investigating the legend for a book to be published by Debrett's Peerage Ltd. in French historian of Brittany, is working on the French records and is on the Debrett's committee.

Bills Have No Fun In Florida

MIAMI (AP) — The Buffalo Bills didn't find Florida very hospitable. Two losses in eight days have dampened their hopes for a National Football League playoff berth.

"It's frustrating. We've lost two tough games and when you look back, you realize we should be undefeated. We've got a much better team than we've shown," quarterback Joe Ferguson said Monday night after the Miami Dolphins crushed the Bills 27-10 in a nationally televised game.

The loss dropped Buffalo's record to 4-4 and completed an unsuccessful two-game road trip to the Sunshine State. The Tampa Bay Buccaneers nipped the Bills 24-23 on Dec. 19.

"All we can do is try to put these two weeks behind us, go back home and regroup," said Ferguson. "It'll be a real test for us to come back."

Buffalo closes the season next Sunday at New England. A victory over the Patriots would put the Bills in the playoffs.

"We just have to pull it together and get ready for New England," said Bills Coach Chuck Knox. "We tried hard in this game, but made too many mistakes."

Turnovers set up second-half touchdown runs of 2 and 6 yards by Andra Franklin and Uwe von Schamann added a pair of field goals as the Dolphins came back from a 10-7 halftime deficit.

Miami, already assured of a playoff berth, improved its record to 6-2 with Coach Don Shula's 200th regular-season career victory. A triumph next week at Baltimore would assure the team the home field in the first round of the playoffs.

The Dolphins victory also guaranteed the idle Pittsburgh Steelers a playoff spot and virtually locked one up for the Cleveland Browns as well.

Buffalo rolled to a 10-0 first-quarter lead on the strength of Joe Cribbs' 62-yard touchdown sprint on the Bills' first play from scrimmage and Efren Herrera's 33-yard field goal.

Miami, however, didn't push the panic button.

Von Schamann's 35-yard field goal with 10:37 left in the third period lifted the Dolphins into a 10-10 tie, and the game shifted dramatically four minutes later.

Miami's Tom Orosz booted a 61-yard punt that sent Buffalo's Robert Holt racing back toward the Buffalo end zone. He got his hands on the ball, but failed to hold it.

Ron Hester of the Dolphins pounced on the loose ball in the end zone, but Miami was given possession on the 2-yard line because the play was ruled a muff — not a fumble — which according to NFL rules cannot be advanced.

Two plays later, Franklin smashed through the right side to give Miami a 17-10 lead.

"I would say the turning point of the game, the point where the momentum shifted was on the muff ..." said Knox. "When you're inside the 10 (yard line) and can't catch the ball, you should let it go over your head."

Turnovers also set up Miami's next 10 points. Safety Lyle Blackwood intercepted a Ferguson pass to set up von Schamann's 30-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter and Glenn Blackwood's recovery of a Ferguson fumble at the Bills' 6-yard line set up Franklin's second touchdown run.

"For two weeks in a row, the manner of winning has meant an awful lot to us," said Shula, also reflecting on a 20-19 triumph over the New York Jets. "The way we got the job done against the Jets and then tonight, after falling behind like we did."

Cleveland, like Buffalo and

New England, will take a 4-4 record into its final game Sunday against Pittsburgh. The only way the Browns can be kept out of the playoffs is if they lose — to finish at 4-5 — and the Bills and Patriots tie to complete 4-1 campaigns.

Miami, meanwhile, will be looking for some help in its pursuit of the home field for the playoffs. If Miami beats Baltimore and San Diego defeats the Los Angeles Raiders next Sunday, the Dolphins will be assured the home field through the first three rounds.

Missouri Early Rainbow Victor; Heels Face Tech

HONOLULU (AP) — Missouri basketball Coach Norm Stewart thinks his 12th-ranked Tigers played monstrously even though they managed to win their first-round game in the Rainbow Classic college basketball tournament.

"It looked like we were Frankensteins out there," Stewart said. "Our knees looked like they were soldered together. I don't think we played well at all."

But the knees of 6-foot-4 guard Michael Walker worked well enough, despite knee surgery in November. Walker gave Missouri the winning edge over Arizona State, 48-47, when he hit a jumper with 10 seconds left.

In the second game, host Hawaii cruised to a 54-43 victory over Providence.

First-round play continues tonight with Oklahoma meeting Virginia Tech and North Carolina playing Texas Tech. "It's the first time I ever hit a winning field goal," said Walker. "I don't know if I should have shot it, because I had missed a similar shot before."

Walker wasn't supposed to take the shot.

Arizona State had gone into a slowdown after Paul Williams' basket put the Sun Devils ahead 47-46 with 2:24 remaining.

With 35 seconds left, Missouri intentionally fouled Phil McKenney and rebounded the ball when he missed his free throw attempt.

The plan called for guard Jon Sundvold to try for the winning shot, but Walker got the ball and the glory when the man defending him came off his pick to cover Sundvold.

Following a timeout, Arizona State called on guard Byron Scott to pull out for a victory. Scott, the Sun Devils' leading scorer and who had a game-high 25 points, got off a corner shot with 10 seconds left. It hit the rim and bounced away.

Scott was guarded by Missouri's 6-4 forward Ron Jones, who said Scott jostled him all the way down to the corner.

"I thought he gave me an elbow, and after we bumped I backed off a little," Jones said. "I think the bumping kind of confused him a little, and he didn't take the kind of shot he was looking for."

Jones also agreed with Stewart's assessment of Missouri's poor play.

"We're just not executing," he said.

Jones said the game provided an important lesson, "because we have to know how to win the close ones."

Steve Stipanovich, who had 13 rebounds for the Tigers, led the Missouri attack with 14 points. He was followed by Jones with 11.

Missouri, 8-1, grabbed a 28-18 lead at the half and seemed well on its way with a 12-point lead, 38-26, with 14:52 left to play. But Scott and Williams managed a comeback that saw the Sun Devils, 5-4, outscore the Tigers 16-6 to cut the lead to 44-42 with 7:53 to go. Missouri then went a slowdown of its own.

The Tigers meet Hawaii in the semifinals Wednesday night.

The Rainbows were led by Tony Webster, who scored a game-high 22 points and proved an effective ballhawk.

In the nightcap, Webster, who had five steals, scored 18 of his 22 points in the first half. He accounted for Hawaii's first 10 points from the field before Hawaii forward Greg Hicks scored twice.

Wake Meets St. John's In Holiday Festival Final

By The Associated Press
North Carolina, N.C. State, and Clemson return to the hardwood tonight, while undefeated Wake Forest rests up for a Wednesday clash against St. John's in the finals of the Holiday Festival basketball tournament in New York.

In the only game involving an Atlantic Coast Conference team Monday, Delaney Rudd scored 20 points to lead a well-balanced Wake Forest attack as the Demon Deacons' took an easy 88-65 victory over St. Joseph's in the opening game of the holiday tournament.

Wake Forest broke open the game midway through the first half, capitalizing on St. Joe's turnovers. The Deacons went on a 21-2 sprint, including 15 straight points, to move from a 17-9 deficit to a 29-19 lead.

St. Joe's, kept in the game by the shooting of Bob Lojewski, trailed at halftime 42-32 and cut the margin to 44-37 early in the second half. But Danny Young and Rudd paced Wake Forest, which built up a 64-43 lead midway through the second period. They were never challenged thereafter.

Young finished with 14 points, while Lojewski led St. Joe's with 20 and teammate Lonnie McFarlan had 17. Seventh-ranked St. John's defeated Brigham Young University in the nightcap of the Madison Square Garden doubleheader.

Wake's victory was its seventh this season, but the Demon Deacons will face a St. John's team Wednesday that defeated defending national champion North Carolina earlier this year.

In tonight's action, N.C. State will be attempting to rebound from last week's loss at Louisville, but Coach Jim Valvano's club has another tough assignment against West Virginia.

The Mountaineers just had their eight-game winning streak snapped by Stetson last week.

North Carolina takes a 5-3 record into its game with

Texas Tech in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu. Tech is only 2-7, but the Rainbow field includes once-beaten Missouri, undefeated Virginia Tech and other strong teams such as Oklahoma, Hawaii and Arizona State.

Clemson, 5-4, takes on Kansas State in an opening round game of the Sun Bowl Carnival in El Paso, Texas. The Wildcats are 4-4, including a loss to Indiana.

UCLA Believes It Has Receivers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michigan wide receiver Anthony Carter is a first-team All-American who strikes terror into opposing defenses. UCLA might not possess a player with the speed or explosiveness of Carter, but the Bruins are plenty satisfied with their group of receivers.

"Our receiving corps very well could be the best in the nation," said UCLA tight end Paul Bergmann, who caught 35 passes for 529 yards this year.

"I think we're the best group of receivers I've ever seen at the collegiate level," said wide receiver Cormac Carney of the Bruins, who had 44 receptions for 746 yards this fall.

"Anthony deserved all the attention he's received, but we've got several quality receivers of our own," said UCLA wide receiver Jojo Townsell, who caught 37 passes for 673 yards in 1982.

The Bruin receivers made their observations Monday following practice as UCLA continued its preparations for the 69th Rose Bowl game against Michigan this Saturday.

UCLA quarterback Tom Ramsey was a second-team All-American choice this season, passing for more than 2,800 yards. He's the first to give credit to his receiving corps.

"I've been blessed with such great receivers," he said. "We have some of the best in the nation at that position."

It figured the Carney and Townsell, who caught 29 and 26 passes, respectively, in 1981, would have productive senior seasons, but Bergmann came out of nowhere.

Bergmann, a 6-foot-2, 225-pound junior, was without a pass reception in his UCLA career before this year. Of course, he didn't have much of an opportunity to play earlier because of the presence of All-American Tim Wrightman at tight end.

"It's been a long wait for me, but it was well worth it," said Bergmann. "I've always had confidence I could catch the ball, I just never had the opportunity. It was very discouraging. But that's all behind me now."

Ten of Townsell's receptions this year went for touchdowns. The 5-8, 180-pounder has a school-record 20 touchdown catches in his career.

"We're working together to try and win games," he said of the UCLA receiving corps. "We're here (going to the Rose Bowl) and that's what counts. It all came together for us this year. Tom (Ramsey) has a lot of confidence in us and we know he can get us the ball."

The fifth-ranked Bruins and 19th-ranked Wolverines will be meeting for the third time in less than a year Saturday. Michigan rolled to a 33-14 victory in the Bluebonnet Bowl last Dec. 31 and UCLA rallied for a 31-27 triumph at Ann Arbor, Mich., last September.

"If our running game is effective that'll open things up," said Townsell. "Anthony Carter has shown us how great he is, but I think we've shown Michigan that we're pretty good, too."

St. John's, Syracuse Make Noise From The Big East Conference

By The Associated Press
There's just no figuring the Big East Conference this year. Georgetown and Villanova are supposed to be the big shots there, but St. John's and Syracuse are making all the noise so far.

Two of the Big East's darkhorse teams continued merrily on their undefeated way Monday night — seventh-ranked St. John's with a 75-64 rout of Brigham Young in the Holiday Festival basketball tournament at Madison Square Garden in New York and No. 14 Syracuse with an 87-66 "laugher" over Pitt.

"We're 10-and-0," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca, "and I'm enjoying it."
Chris Mullin scored 22 points to pace the St. John's offense and Billy Goodwin paced the defense with a fine performance against BYU's Devin Durrant. The Cougars' high scorer had 19 points, but also had his pocket picked on several occasions by the exciting St. John's forward.
"I thought Goodwin did an excellent job on Durrant," said Carnesecca. "He was stripped of the ball six times."
St. John's, the defending champion, will be gunning for its sixth Festival title Wednesday night against Wake Forest, an 88-65 victor over St. Joseph's of Philadelphia in the opening game Monday night behind Delaney Rudd's 20 points.
"We have yet to play 40 minutes this year," said BYU Coach Frank Arnold. "Tonight we played only 35 minutes. You can't play 35 minutes against the likes of St. John's and expect to win."
Freshman Rafael Addison ignited a sluggish Syracuse offense in the first half, triggering the Orangemen over Pitt for their ninth victory. It is the Orangemen's second-best start in seven years for Coach Jim Boehm. They won 14 in a row to start the 1979-80 season.

Eric Santifer led Syracuse with 20 points, Tony Bruin had 19, Addison 15 and Leo Rautins 11. With the help of Addison's four baskets midway through the first half, the Orangemen shook off a frigid 2-for-11 start from the field and grabbed a 44-28 halftime lead, despite Clyde Vaughan's 17 points before intermission.
"It's tough playing on the home court of another team in front of 23,000 fans," said Vaughan, whose 26 points stood out in an otherwise-dismal night for the Panthers. "There aren't too many teams that are going to beat Syracuse at home."

In the only other action involving Top Twenty teams Monday night, No. 12 Missouri nipped Arizona State 48-47 in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu and No. 18 Houston edged Pepperdine 93-92.
Michael Walker hit a short jump shot with 10 seconds left to boost Missouri over Arizona State in the 19th Rainbow Classic. After Walker hit the go-ahead basket for the Tigers, Arizona State set up a shot from the corner by Byron Scott, but it hit the front end of the rim as the buzzer sounded.
Forward Michael Young scored on a three-point play with 28 seconds remaining to snap a 90-90 tie and give Houston a tight victory over Pepperdine.

Pepperdine had tied the game with 1:08 to go when freshman guard Grant Gondrezick hit a 17-footer, and the Waves regained possession of the ball when Young missed a short jumper with 50 seconds remaining.
Pepperdine went into a delay offense, but Clyde Drexler stole a pass and dribbled downcourt, setting up Young for a layup. Pepperdine's Mark Wilson fouled Young on the play and he made the free throw to give the Cougars just enough of a cushion.
In other tournament action, center Jeff Turner and forward James Williams tossed in 14 points apiece as Vanderbilt defeated Eastern Kentucky 82-71 in the first round of the Music City Invitational in Nashville. In the night's opening game, Tim Cain scored six points in the final three minutes, including a go-ahead basket with 22 seconds remaining, to give surprising Manhattan, 8-0, a 74-73 victory over Pennsylvania.

Glenn Rivers and Mandy Johnson sparked a second-half surge, leading host Marquette to a 57-47 first-round victory over Wisconsin-Green Bay in the annual Milwaukee Classic tournament. Cincinnati defeated La Salle 76-73 in the other semifinal game behind 23 points by Mike Williams.

Indiana Climbs To Top Of Poll; Virginia Tumbles To Fourth Spot

By The Associated Press
A trip to Hawaii cost the Virginia basketball team plenty — in fact, three places in the Top Twenty rankings.
The Cavaliers' stunning 77-72 upset at the hands of little-known Chaminade in Honolulu last week resulted in their fall today from first to fourth in The Associated Press's weekly poll.
The Cavaliers, 8-1, out of the No. 1 spot for the first time this season, dropped behind Indiana, Memphis State and Kentucky in the rankings.

The Hoosiers, 8-0, received 40 ballots for first place of the 61 votes cast by sports writers and broadcasters around the country and racked up a total of 1,196 points. Indiana was No. 5 last week, but bounced into first place with a 62-59 victory over Kentucky, which was ranked No. 2 last week.
Second-ranked Memphis State, 8-0, collected 14 first-place ballots and 1,118 points.

The Tigers were No. 4 last week and beat Southern Mississippi 81-60 in their only game.
Third-ranked Kentucky, 7-1, only had two first-place ballots but still managed to pile up 1,037 points with a strong overall showing in the voting.
Despite the loss to little Chaminade, Virginia still picked up three first-place ballots and collected 992 points.

UCLA, No. 3 last week, dropped to No. 5 as the result of an 80-79 overtime loss to Maryland. The Bruins received one of the first-place ballots and 879 points.
Alabama moved up two spots to No. 6 after an 88-58 victory over Texas Southern; St. John's remained No. 7 after an idle week; Tennessee moved up one notch to No. 8 after beating Oklahoma City 99-56; Iowa was inactive last week, but still gained a place to No. 9 and Georgetown jumped one spot to No. 10 after beating Southern U. 80-65.

The Second Ten was, Arkansas, Missouri, Louisville, the only other team to gain a first-place ballot: Syracuse, Nevada-Las Vegas, Villanova, North Carolina State, Houston, Tulsa and West Virginia.

All the teams who were in the rankings last week are in this week.

Bear 'Out-Poormouthed' By Illinois' Mike White

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bear Bryant must be getting old after all. The 69-year-old Bear, who has won more games than any other coach in the history of college football, was out-poormouthed, of all things, by Illinois' Mike White Monday.
"I'm the other guy, right?" was the way White, the party of the second part this week, began a news conference two days before Bryant's last hurrah when his Alabama team meets Illinois in the Liberty Bowl Wednesday night.
The two coaches met once before, in 1973 when White was head man at the University of California.
"The final score was 66-0 and our 'l'il' boys came out on the short end," White recalled. "It was a humbling experience, one you put in the memory bank. But it has nothing to do with this game at all."
"But the thing I remember most is when Coach Bryant came over to me after the game in the middle of the field with his eight policemen — I had this one 'l'il' ol' Boy Scout — and that's when he told me the statement about the players playing the game."

This 24th annual Liberty Bowl — Bryant and Alabama helped inaugurate the event, losing 7-0 to Penn State in Philadelphia in 1959 — has become a happening with Bryant's retirement after 38 years as a head coach overshadowing a rather meaningless game between two 7-4, unranked teams trying to end the season on a winning note.
And even though Bryant pooh-poohed it as "just another game," White noted that "with the circumstances surrounding it, it's turned into a national event and the whole story is Coach Bryant, and justifiably so. I feel honored to be chosen to share even this podium with him, grateful for the opportunity, no matter the outcome, to shake his hand after the game and be a part of history."

But White noted that in the final accounting, it will be the players who decide whether the old man goes out a winner or a loser.
"Coach Bryant has said many, many times that it's the kids who play the game, and we both want that honored," White said. "But with the atmosphere created by this game, Coach Bryant's retirement has become an overriding issue and both teams will have to act fairly maturely in the next few days."
Bryant attempted to recoup the poormouthed crown by allowing as how Alabama's record "is not too sporty and we hope to prove we're worthy of being here. Because of exams and the holidays, we haven't had the kind of practices and preparation you normally have for a bowl game."
Bryant said he had "no emotion at this time whatsoever" about his swan song and hoped his players wouldn't, either.
"I'll probably have some at this time next week," he said. "But I've had very little input in the planning. I'm just going to go out and watch the game. It may be a lot different next year, and I'm trying to prepare myself for that."
"But I'd rather the players be prepared and confident than emotional. I'm concerned with who we're playing and what we're trying to do, rather than emotion."
"I've seen games where the players came out crying because they were so emotional, and after they got knocked on their backs a few times the tears really started. I don't there's any chance of that."

Eagles Still Have A Chance

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dick Vermeil, preparing his Philadelphia Eagles for Sunday's finale against the New York Giants, is anxious only to end a dismal National Football League season with a victory.
"We lost to the Giants (23-7 earlier) in what was our worst game of the season," Vermeil told a new conference Monday in a post-mortem of the upset of the Dallas Cowboys.
"Defensively the Giants are as talented as anybody we play, but they've been sporadic and, like us, have had good games and bad games. But they can be beat."
Vermeil said he was proud of his club, now 3-5, for knocking off the Cowboys on their home turf.
"It was a good, solid football game played by a good, solid football team, and it's about time," Vermeil said of a season that is just about gone but hardly forgotten.
And, mathematically, the Eagles can still sneak into the NFL playoffs in this strike-shortened season if, and the emphasis is on "if," four things happen:

—If they beat the New York Giants.
—If Atlanta beats New Orleans.
—If Green Bay beats Detroit.
—If Los Angeles beats San Francisco.
Vermeil said he isn't pulling for anybody to lose — he's only concerned now about taking on New York, and is anxious to wind up with a victory.
"The only thing that gets you into the playoffs is performance and we haven't demonstrated that very much except we played like a playoff team against Dallas (winning 24-20 Sunday)," he said.

Denver Survives Fourth Quarter

By The Associated Press
The Denver Nuggets, despite being the highest-scoring team in the National Basketball Association, have been somewhat of a bust in the fourth quarter this season.

On Monday night, however, Denver won for the first time after trailing in the final period when center Dan Issel hit a 20-foot jump shot at the buzzer to give the Nuggets a 130-128 victory over the Golden State Warriors.

"We finally made a last-second shot," said Coach Doug Moe. "We really needed to win one like that. It does great things for your confidence."

The Nuggets, normally a tough team to beat at Denver, also have been struggling at home. The victory over the Warriors was only their sixth in 13 home outings this season.

"Losing at home has made us very tentative," Issel said. "We've let too many people back in games when we should have blown them out. Now we're starting to get our confidence back."

"This is the kind of game we need to get the monkey off our back."

In other NBA games, New Jersey outlasted Cleveland 94-82 and Washington edged Chicago 89-87.

Forwards Alex English and Kiki Vandeweghe had 41 and 29 points, respectively, and Issel added 20 as Denver got its usual outstanding production from its starting front line. But at guard, the team's weakness, rookie Rob Williams pitched in with 12 points and the game-winning assist on a pass to Issel.

Michael Ray Richardson, who led the Warriors with 31 points, tied the score at 128-128 by hitting a free throw with 13 seconds left. After a Denver timeout, Issel got the pass from Williams at the left side of the free throw line.

The ball went through the basket as the buzzer sounded.

"Rob made some nice passes and he also made a couple of jumpers," Moe said. "He had a nice play at the end — he saw he couldn't get the shot off and he found the open man (Issel). That was a good effort."

Issel said the plan on the last play was "to post up Alex. When we couldn't get the ball to Billy (McKinney) in the corner we just went into the passing game and I happened to get the ball for the shot we needed to win."

"When you lose a game by two points you can always go back and point to various things you could have done differently," Golden State Coach Al Attles said. "But I don't think there's any one particular thing that caused us to lose. We scored 128 points and that's enough to win against just about anyone except Denver."

Nets 94, Cavaliers 82
Albert King scored 24 points and Buck Williams had 13 points and 19 rebounds to lead New Jersey over Cleveland, which had only nine players because of injuries.

The Cavaliers led most of the game, but were outscored 30-19 in the fourth quarter as Geoff Huston played the entire game, and World Free and Cliff Robinson played 40 minutes.

"We played good basketball, but we just ran out of gas in the fourth quarter," said Cavaliers Coach Tom Nissalke, whose team is now 4-23. "You can't win when guys are playing 40 or more minutes."

An 11-2 spurt in the final minutes of the third quarter rallied the Nets from a 61-53 deficit into a 64-63 lead entering the fourth quarter.

Free and Robinson led Cleveland with 20 points apiece.

Bullets 89, Bulls 87

Greg Ballard's jumper as time expired gave Washington its victory over Chicago.

Ballard scored 10 of his 14 points in the final period, when the Bullets overcame an eight-point deficit to hand the Bulls their 14th defeat in 15 road games.

Kevin Grevey, 1-for-17 in his previous two games, led Washington with 22 points, while Dave Corzine and Reggie Theus both had 18 for Chicago. Corzine added 22 rebounds for the Bulls.

Rozelle Defends Playoff Problem

By The Associated Press
There will be a great hue and cry and gnashing of teeth next week when, for the first time in the history of the National Football League, a team with a losing record is officially accorded playoff status.

Some folks have suggested that the NFL had cast itself in the image of the National Hockey League or the National Basketball Association since their playoffs, too, seem to involve every team in the standings.

But what, after all, are playoffs for?

To decide which teams deserve to contest for the right to be called the best in the league — and to pump a lot of money into the teams' and players' bank accounts in the process.

"This is a one-season aberration," Commissioner Pete Rozelle said of the expanded 16-team playoff field, of the conference (rather than division) standings deciding the qualifiers and of the certainty that at least one team will qualify with no better than a 4-5 record.

"In a shortened season like this, we realized that this was a distinct possibility," Rozelle said. "You just can't avoid it. But I think we made the right step in having eight teams qualify in each conference, because a team getting off to a slow start wouldn't have had much of a chance. That was the primary reason we made it a 16-team field rather than eight or 10, to give everybody a chance."

And to keep the folks coming to the parks on the premise that they were watching prospective champions, not just players going through the motions.

And to keep the players happy, too, with the prospect of extra game checks for six teams which normally would not advance to the playoffs, which this year have been dubbed the Super Bowl Tournament by the league.

If it had wanted to, the NFL could simply have assembled all 28 of its teams in order of victories and proclaimed the winningest team the best. That's how the league did it in its first dozen years, 1921-32.

Of course, back then, when the Green Bay Packers, the New York Giants and the Chicago Bears were winning titles (along with the Canton Bulldogs, the Frankfort Yellowjackets and the Providence Steamroller), the Kansas City Cowboys' fans and the Minneapolis Marines' fans — not to mention the followers of the Duluth Kelleys, the Rochester Jeffersons and the Louisville Bresks — lost interest halfway through the season when it became clear their teams wouldn't finish first.

Back then, first was all that mattered. Second meant thank you very much, drive home safely and come back next year.

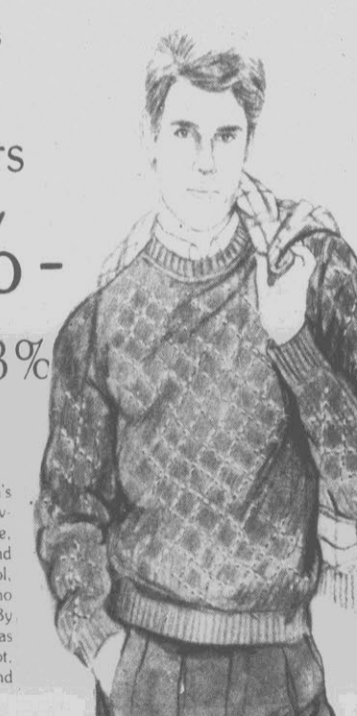

It wasn't until 1933 that the late George Preston Marshall, the owner of the Boston Redskins, suggested that two divisions and a playoff game might be more enriching. It was then that the word "division" became part of the NFL lexicon. It was changed to "conference" in 1950, then divisions within conferences became the thing in 1967, when the league was re-drawn and quartered. And who can ever forget the inception of "wild card," when the merger brought about in 1970 the league's present six-division alignment?

And once the playoff format took hold, nearly half a century ago, the best was no longer necessarily first.

Four years ago, when the NFL expanded its regular-season schedule from 14 to 16 games, the Minnesota Vikings became the symbol of either parity or mediocrity, depending on the point of view, when they won the National Conference's Central Division title, and thus a playoff berth, with an 8-7-1 record. That was the year Oakland, Seattle and San Diego had better records than Minnesota's but failed to make the playoffs.

The Vikings were anything but a trend-setter, though.

TV Movie Underlines Tradition Of Excesses

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — College is traditionally a time of excess. Free from parental influence, some students exhibit a reflex response that takes various forms of overdoing: from goldfish to protests to drugs.

More recent campus obsessions, video and fantasy games, now serve to keep reality at a distance. Dungeons and Dragons, one popular game, allows players to create their own characters and let their imaginations run wild.

"Mazes and Monsters," tonight's suspenseful CBS movie, shows how an addiction to these flights of fancy can get out of hand, particularly when the players don't have a firm grasp on reality.

The movie is based on the best-selling book, "Mazes and Monsters" by Rona Jaffe, who also served as the film's associate producer.

The idea for the book came from a newspaper report about a college student believed to have disappeared while acting out a game of Dungeons and Dragons. The student eventually turned up, but Miss Jaffe's research indicated that students were taking the game beyond the board into tunnels, caves and forests.

It's an intriguing premise, but an incredible one for those unfamiliar with fantasy games. So the movie's first scene attempts to build belief. A tragedy seems to have occurred, and a reporter says it involves college kids and a game, in which the participants "deal with problems in their lives by acting them out."

With that established, the story jumps back six months, when we meet the players. They're all bright, clean-cut, financially secure — showing, of course, that this story could happen to anybody.

All have plausible motivations for their compulsion for a game that enables them to create their individual fantasy worlds and latch on to something special in their lives.

Jay Jay, played by Chris Makepeace of "My Bodyguard," is the boy genius who entered college early. His mother (Louise Sorel) is a kooky socialite who constantly changes his room decor. "You obliterate me, you wipe me out," he says.

Kate (Canadian actress Wendy Crewson) wants to be a writer. She's experiencing writer's block, and says she lacks enough life experiences to work through it. Her mother (Susan Strasberg) suggests using her imagination.

The athletic Daniel (David Wallace) could have done better than Grant University in Pequot, Pa., but he says he's not that competitive and would rather make up games than play organized sports.

It's a new semester, and this threesome needs a fourth for Mazes and Monsters, someone "who doesn't flunk out or freak out." It becomes Robbie (Tom Hanks of "Bosom Buddies"), who arrives as a transfer from Tufts.

Pressured by his bickering parents to achieve, Robbie also carries some guilt in his baggage, having given his brother money to leave home several years ago. The family hadn't heard from the boy since. That psychological burden surfaces in Robbie's frequent nightmares.

Hanks captures this complex psychological role with a brooding intensity. The dress he had to wear for "Bosom Buddies" is a distant memory.

The movie works well on several levels. It's an intelligent thriller that doesn't get outlandish or heavy-handed. The camaraderie of the four players offers an authentic portrait of close-knit college friendships that, removed from the adult world, fulfill a variety of roles and needs.

"Mazes and Monsters" also explores that thin line between reality and illusion, which, at any time, can be perforated by the monsters of the mind — often the scariest kind.

Liz Is Playing Diplomacy Role

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Film star Elizabeth Taylor has played many roles in her career, but unofficial diplomat may prove the most challenging.

Miss Taylor flew into Israel on Monday for a 10-day stay. She was scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kolek.

Miss Taylor avoided reporters and photographers waiting at Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion airport. But the organizer of her trip, publisher Phil Blazer, said the actress' visit was to "bring focus to the fact that Israel has returned to a state of 'normalcy' after the fighting in Lebanon.

During her stay, she will also meet the wife of State President Yitzhak Navon, and attend a New Year's Eve party with U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis.

The actress also planned to visit hospitalized Israeli soldiers and tour areas of Lebanon occupied by Israeli troops.

"Tootsie" averaged $7,748 per screen in 984 theaters nationwide for the Christmas weekend, bringing the 10-day total for the Columbia Pictures' release to $18,109,741.

Another Columbia comedy also scored big as "The Toy" ranked second by attracting $4,205,969 on 1,542 screens, bringing its 17-day receipts to $20,340,892.

Other top draws, as reported by film companies Monday, including three-day totals, number of theaters, total to date and days in release, were: "48 Hours" $3.8 million, 850, $16 million, 19 days.

"Best Friends," $3.6 million, 1,080, $10 million, 10 days.

"Dark Crystal," $3.4 million, 927, $10.8 million, 10 days.

"The Verdict," $3 million, 615, $7.4 million, 10 days.

"Airplane II: The Sequel," $2.4 million, 1,300, $14 million, 17 days.

The durable "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," which has been in release for 29 weeks, attracted a weekend total of $2.8 million in 911 movie houses for a total of $313 million.

The film's three-day gross was larger than totals for "Kiss Me Goodbye," "Honkytonk Man," "Still of the Night," "Six Weeks," and "The Trail of the Pink Panther," all Christmas releases.

Showed Pal TV Hanging

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 10-year-old boy remained on a life support system today after accidentally hanging himself while showing a playmate how hangings were done in television Westerns, authorities said.

Jared Stockham, described by an older brother as "really into cowboys and Indians," was playing in his backyard Sunday when he decided to demonstrate a hanging, according to Carlsbad Police Sgt. Don Metcalf.

As his friend Eric Burton, 10, watched, the rope snarled and Stockham was unable to free himself, said Metcalf.

"The boy told Jared to 'quit fooling around' and when the victim failed to respond, ran home and told his parents," Metcalf said.

Burton's mother ran to the aid of the unconscious boy, but was unable to remove the noose. After Burton's father was summoned, the noose was removed and the mother administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation while paramedics were called.

A spokeswoman for Children's Hospital, who refused to give her name, said the youngster was in critical condition today and remained on a life support system.

Mobile Missiles Ready For Test

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new solid-fueled mobile missile that could be in violation of the SALT II treaty appears to be ready for flight testing in the Soviet Union, The Washington Post has quoted unidentified sources as saying.

The missile's range would determine whether it would violate provisions of the unratified, but honored, treaty.

In today's editions of the Post, the sources were quoted as saying that the test preparations had been observed at the Soviet missile center near Plesetsk, 600 miles northeast of Moscow.

Published reports have said the Soviets were readying two new missiles, one to replace the intermediate-range SS-20. That replacement would not violate SALT II.

The 333 SS-20 missiles targeted on Western Europe are the subject of negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union at Geneva, Switzerland.

The other reported new missile would replace the SS-16, which was never deployed, but banned under the provisions of SALT II.

In October, the Soviet Union tested yet another large missile, and the Soviets reportedly have told the United States it would be the one new missile permitted under SALT II.

A second large missile would violate SALT II, which has yet to be ratified by the U.S. Senate, but it honored by the Reagan administration.

A mobile intercontinental missile would complicate an adversary's targeting, and Sometimes a bridge hand will enable you to test your level of skill. Here's a hand from "The Bridge World: Best of the Early Sixties" that will give you a chance to rate your game.

The bidding is aggressive but not unreasonable. North's jump to three hearts is a limit raise showing a hand of 9-11 points with good trumps; however, he should have four trumps for this bid or compensating high-card values. No one can quibble with South's leap to slam.

Against the heart slam West leads the queen of diamonds. You win and lead a trump. West takes the ace and shifts to a low spade. You capture East's queen with the ace. How do you continue?

If you are an average player, you know that the odds favor a 3-2 club split. So you draw trumps and start on the clubs. By the time you learn of the 5-0 club division, it is too late and you must go down two tricks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? LACKAWANNA, N.Y. (AP) — A reorganization plan by Bethlehem Steel Corp. that eliminates 10,000 jobs in two states caught some workers by surprise and raised fears of a two-percentage-point jump in unemployment here.

The nation's No. 2 steelmaker announced Monday it was eliminating the jobs at its mills in Lackawanna and Johnstown, Pa., to counteract losses of $209 million for the third quarter of 1982 and predicted major losses for the year.

"If there was another steel plant, I'd go out and get another job," said one Lackawanna worker who identified himself as a foreman but declined to give his name. "There's not. I'm done."

The cutbacks came as a surprise to many workers. "I haven't heard a thing about it," said James Matthews. But he added, "I wouldn't doubt it. The last couple of years, guys have been on one week and off the next."

Under a plan to consolidate operations, Bethlehem is closing integrated steelmaking at Lackawanna, eliminating 7,300 jobs and a $200 million payroll in this city of 23,000. Only a galvanizing line and a 13-inch bar mill would be kept, that 7,300 workers will permanently lose their jobs in a shutdown of basic steel-making operations. (AP Laserphoto) employing only 1,300 of the current 8,600 workers — 5,200 on the job and 3,400 on layoff.

"I've got 28 years here. What am I going to do?" asked worker Sal Mesi. "My only regret is that I didn't stay in the Army."

In Johnstown, there are now 5,300 employees; 3,200 on layoffs and 2,100 on the job. Under the reorganization, 2,600-3,000 people would be employed and the other positions eliminated. Also, some of the 1,900 workers laid off at Johnstown's freight car shop would be called back to work.

Chuck Molnar, president of the United Steel Workers union local 2635, said the reorganization plan meant a net gain in the number of people actually working in Johnstown.

"It's a sad day for Lackawanna, but it's a happy day for Johnstown," he said.

In Lackawanna, Bethlehem this year paid $6.1 million in local taxes, or about 66 percent of the city's property tax revenue, said City Council President Thomas E. Radich. "The only thing we can do is cut back," Radich said. "Lackawanna is going to suffer a lot."

George Smyntek, a Buffalo-based associate economist for the state Labor Department, estimated 8,000 people who supply goods and services to the plant and its workers also could lose jobs.

That eventually could raise the jobless rate 2 percentage points in the Buffalo metropolitan area, he said. Currently, the rate is 13.6 percent.

"That's very bad news at a very bad time," Smyntek said.

Because many of Bethlehem's workers and suppliers live outside this city, the cutbacks will have a ripple effect through western New York, where county social services departments already are stretched to the limit.

"Every worker who is laid off affects six others in the area," said Theodore Zollendeck, executive director of the Lackawanna Community Development Corp.

Bethlehem officials blamed the cutback on high property taxes, foreign steel imports and plant losses stemming from high labor costs and outdated equipment.

Mayor Edward Kuwik doubted that high property taxes were at fault.

"They're talking about losses in the millions, so it would seem that if they were completely tax-free, they would still have a problem," he said.

Immediately after the announcement, Governor-elect Mario Cuomo appointed an emergency task force to learn whether Bethlehem's decision is reversible, and what may be done to aid workers.

"We do not plan to change our minds," Trautlein said.

Amendment Is A Big Surprise

By The Associated Press

In a move that apparently caught the Navy off guard, a measure attached to the federal gas tax bill would place a two-year moratorium on the dumping of low-level radioactive material in the ocean.

The amendment would kill a Navy proposal to sink obsolete nuclear submarines off the coasts of North Carolina and California.

If the measure goes unchanged, it will make it virtually impossible to get a permit for ocean dumping, said a Navy officer who asked not to be identified.

After the two-year period, ocean dumping permits can be issued — but only after the House and Senate pass joint resolutions and the president agrees. If Congress fails to act in 90 days, no permit can be issued.

During the moratorium, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency must study the question of dumping nuclear wastes into the ocean.

The amendment, which becomes law when President Reagan signs the gas tax bill, apparently passed so quietly last week that the Navy didn't hear about it.

"If it's in there, it's news to us," said Navy spokesman Lt. Tom Burgess in Washington.

Last January, the Navy tentatively selected two sites off the California and North Carolina coasts for dumping outdated nuclear submarines. The Navy has about 100 submarines it wants to dispose of over the next 30 years.

One site is about 230 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras.

Congressional approval of the moratorium came four days after the Navy released a draft environmental impact statement that says ocean dumping is cheaper than land disposal and less dangerous to people.

The statement says either land or sea disposal of the submarines would have "negligible environmental impact, with the sea disposal option having significantly lower cost."

But Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., who sponsored the moratorium measure, said past Navy methods of disposing of radioactive material were unacceptable. He said the EPA had examined some radioactive drums the Navy had dumped off the San Francisco coast.

Some 25 of the drums, he said, "were found to be crushed and broken open. There is evidence that Navy disposal practices included shooting at floating drums to make them sink."

Experts, Critics Argue Education Centers Idea

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Supporters of the state's regional education centers say they are an attempt to move government closer to the people, but critics see it as another level of red-tape in the bureaucracy.

Critics also claim the schools serve as political outposts for state School Superintendent Craig Phillips, but Phillips says they are his line of communication to local superintendents.

"This is the clearest, cleanest activity you can find," said Phillips, whose job is decided by statewide election. "There's not a one of these people (involved with the centers) who had a thing to do with a campaign of mine."

Phillips said the centers are an economical way to place experts on educational programs closer to the school systems that administer them.

State Sen. Sam R. Noble, D-Robeson, isn't convinced they're needed.

"My basic problem is that teachers in my area would say they didn't even know it existed," Noble said of the regional center in Carthage. "And knowing there is such a need in the classroom, this concerned me."

"What they say they're trying to do is put government closer to the people. I would agree with that. But what they're doing is putting in another level of bureaucracy."

As of last Dec. 31, the centers and their 208 employees had an annual budget of $5,554,953, of which $3.8 million came from the state, according to the Legislature's fiscal research staff. The state pays the salaries of 138, or almost two thirds, of their employees.

Last year, Noble persuaded the Appropriations Committee to cut the centers' funding. But the next day, money was restored after Phillips told key legislators the centers could be funded with money in the 1982-83 budget for textbooks that wouldn't be needed until the next year.

A study committee was appointed to look at the regional offices and report to the Legislature next year. The 10-member committee has recommended that the State Board of Education examine the centers' organization.

Noble said he was disappointed that the committee report still doesn't like the centers.

"I haven't seen anything yet to change my opinion," he said.

The controversy has left Sam Shugart, director of the Knightdale center, puzzled.

"We are nothing but an extension of the State Department of Public Instruction assigned within a region," said Shugart. "When you hear people say do away with regional centers, what they're saying is do away with the Department of Public Instruction."

The idea of regional education centers dates back to 1968, the brainchild of recommendations by the Governor's Study Commission on the Public School System chaired by Gov. Dan K. Moore.

The eight educational regions were established to assure equal representation on the State Board of Education. Besides Carthage, the centers are located in Knightdale, North Wilkesboro, Greensboro, Williamston, Jacksonville, Albemarle and Canton.

A Poll on Nuclear Weapons

About 57 percent of students and adults polled in a recent national survey said they favored a U.S.-Soviet agreement to halt production of nuclear weapons. More than 60,000 people participated in the poll conducted by Visual Education Consultants through this newspaper and more than 300 others that sponsor the VEC Newspaper In Education Program in their area schools and senior citizen centers. A 13-year-old in Michigan spoke for many who favor a freeze when she wrote: "I don't want our country to be weak, but I don't want it blown to smithereens either." Most who opposed the freeze agreed with a senior citizen who said: "We cannot trust the Soviets." How would you have voted?

PEKING (AP) — About 40 million Chinese live in cave dwellings, and this housing has many good points despite calls in some places to get rid of it. China's leading newspaper says.

The People's Daily said Monday that the cave dwellings along the middle and upper reaches of the Yellow River are cool in summer and warm in winter, save energy and building materials, are cheap and do not take up precious farm land.

With new agricultural policies boosting incomes of China's peasants and a building boom going on in the countryside, some areas are calling for placing all the cave dwellings because they are too rustic, the paper said.

But it instead urged architects and other specialists to devise ways to improve the cave dwellings.
