Police, Looters Clash In Miami

By MIKE McQUEEN Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) - Police kept roads to a black slum sealed off today after a night of looting and violence by rock-tossing gangs angered when a Hispanic policeman critically wounded a black man at a video arcade. One looter was killed by police.

Seven people were hurt in the Tuesday night disturbance in the Overtown area, and police spokesman Mike Stewart said 29 people had been arrested by early today.

At least three police cars and two journalists' cars were burned and a group of about 20 young men was seen swarming a young white woman, who was stripped of her clothes.

It was Miami's worst disturbance since a May 1980 riot claimed 18 lives and caused $100 million in property damage.

An 84-square-block area remained sealed off, with exit ramps on a nearby highway closed, and about 50 officers equipped with riot gear were on patrol, said Stewart.

"Now it's real quiet," he said this morning. "There's only sporadic incidents of rocks and bottles being thrown."

He said "a substantial number" of officers would stay in the area all day.

The man whose shooting by police prompted the violence, Nevell Johnson Jr., 21, was in critical condition today at Jackson Memorial Hospital with a bullet wound in the head. Two witnesses claimed the shooting was unprovoked.

Community leaders warned that violence might flare again, since Overtown is near the site of the Orange Bowl Parade on New Year's Eve, and the Orange Bowl college football game on New Year's Night.

"This weekend, that neighborhood is going to be a dangerous place," said Bill Perry, president of the local chapter of People United to Save Humanity, who said he walked the streets to try to quell violence. "These people are mad. We can probably expect a lot more trouble."

Perry said he thought many rioters wanted to avenge the shooting of Johnson. After he was wounded, two or three officers investigating the shooting were trapped in the arcade by an angry mob for about an hour before they could be freed with a tear gas assault, police said.

The Rev. Theoford Johnson, who was conducting church services a few blocks from the center of the disturbance, said: "People took to the streets in resentment of the shooting. They were mad, just like in the riots a few years ago."

Miami's black neighborhoods erupted in 1980 after an all-white jury in Tampa acquitted four white policemen in the beating death of black businessman Arthur McDuffie. That riot was centered in Liberty City and also spread to Overtown, five miles away.

In Tuesday's violence, youths were seen running down a street with hams taken from a looted meat store.

"The brothers were throwing rocks and bottles like terrible," said Michael Patterson, a reporter for the black-oriented Miami Times weekly newspaper. "Every so often, a white person would drive by and they would throw at them. It must have been 500-600 people."

Up to 200 police officers descended on the area to quell the initial disturbance. One police officer was shot, but unhurt because of his bullet-proof vest, Stewart said. An unidentified 13-year-old boy was shot once in the leg.

An unidentified man who joined about 15 others in trying to loot a freezer company was shot and killed by a special-weapons police team after he allegedly pointed a gun at a two officers, Stewart said.

CROWD AT DISTURBANCE - A crowd of people, some throwing bottles, stand around a burning automobile in Miami late Tuesday night. The disturbance started after a man with a gun was reportedly shot by a policeman in a bar. Two policemen were trapped by a mob, angered by the shooting, and had to be rescued by police reinforcements. (AP Laserphoto)

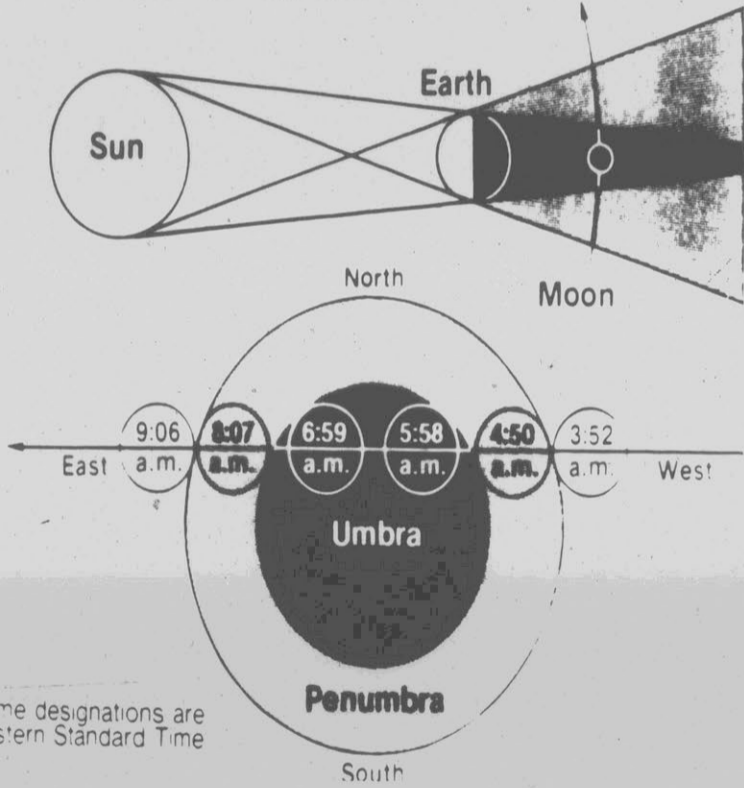

Total Lunar Eclipse

NEW YORK (AP) - The moon may turn the color of a sunset early Thursday as it enters the Earth's shadow in the last total lunar eclipse to be visible across America until 1989, astronomers say. During the half-hour eclipse, the moon could glow with a soft reddish or copper color because of light scattered from volcanic ash in the atmosphere, said William Gutsch, chairman of the Hayden Planetarium at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

The moon will enter Earth's shadow at 4:50 a.m. EST, and the total eclipse will begin at 5:58 a.m. EST and end at 6:59 a.m. EST. The eclipse, which will be visible across the country, is the third lunar eclipse this year.

The next total lunar eclipse to be visible from most of the United States will occur on (Please turn to page 18).

May Have Released Asbestos Fumes

Chemical Fire Studied

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) - State officials are investigating Tuesday's fire that destroyed a barn containing toxic farm chemicals to determine whether asbestos fumes might have contaminated people at the scene.

Firefighters had to build a dam around the barn, located on U.S. 64 between Tarboro and Rocky Mount, in order to prevent the contamination of a creek leading to the Tar River. The dam became necessary because of the runoff of water used to fight the blaze.

State officials said Tuesday the water was contained and posed no threat to the public.

However, Jim Sheppard, spokesman for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said state officials would further investigate the fire after 93 cans of roofing material containing asbestos were found in the barn. "We are concerned about that but don't know if it posed any hazard to anyone fighting the fire," he said. "We have asked the (N.C.) Department of Human Resources to investigate it." "If asbestos fumes got free and someone breathed it, we (Please turn to page 18)

Cost Of Tobacco Quota Climbing

By The Associated Press North Carolina tobacco growers are in the process of negotiating the prices they will pay to lease next year's quota, and many are finding those prices will be significantly higher.

Reasons for the increase are that the 1983 flue-cured quota is 10 percent smaller than this year's, encouraging allotment holders to ask for more.

Another reason for higher prices is that, for the first time, allotment holders who lease and transfer their allotment off their farm will pay the "no-net cost" fee that growers began paying in 1982. Allotment holders are expected to pass that cost along to growers.

Growers must also continue to pay the fee, meaning they could pay no-net cost-fees twice - once through higher leasing prices and again when they sell their crop.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture last week set the no-net-cost fee for next year's crop at 7 cents a pound, more than twice last year's 3-cent fee.

The average yield of tobacco is 2,000 pounds an acre. Most farmers this year paid about $60 per acre farmed. Most would pay about $140 under the in- (Please Turn To Page 18)

TRIBUTE TO RESCUERS

The Eastern Pine Volunteer Rescue Squad answered promptly when my 71-year-old mother suffered a painful fall that resulted in a hip fracture necessitating surgery and 13 days of hospitalization. The squad members who responded showed genuine concern and empathy and used expert professional procedures. I highly commend these young people for giving so freely and unselfishly of themselves and I suggest that every resident of the district served by this squad make a generous tax-deductible gift toward the new rescue truck and give special consideration to all these volunteers. Daytime TV Stars Head Telethon Cast

FRANK RUNYEON

The local portion of the "Weekend with the Stars Telethon for Cerebral Palsy" will be filmed before a live audience at the Moose Lodge here Jan. 22 and 23, with other portions of the programs originating in Los Angeles and New York. Two daytime drama stars will head the host list.

WNCT, Channel 9, here will broadcast the telethon and be responsible for filming the local portion. Hours will be from 11 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 22, to 7 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 23.

About 75 percent of the proceeds raised in Greenville will stay here to support the United Cerebral Palsy Developmental Center located at 1111 Greenville Blvd. (Hooker Memorial Christian Church), local telethon coordinator Nita Rasberry said.

She said the Greenville Center has for many years been subsidized through funds raised from other North Carolina telethons. "This year residents of Greenville and the surrounding area will have the opportunity to share in this fund-raising effort in a more direct way," she said, by "contributing money and donating their time and talent."

Coming here from New York to lead the hosting of the local portion of the telethon will be two stars of the CBS daytime series, "As the World Turns." They are Margaret Colin, who portrays Margo Montgomery, and Frank Runyeon, who plays Steve Andropoulos. She said the two have offered their time and effort to support cerebral palsy and that their flights here are being paid for by a business firm.

Ms. Colin is a Brooklyn native who studied drama at Hofstra University and the New York State Summer School of the Arts. She previously appeared for about six months on the daytime series, "The Edge of Night."

Runyeon is a Reading, Pa., native who attended Princeton University and has worked as a disc jockey, a standup comedian, an actor, and a clerk-typist. He has played Steve Andropoulos since May 1980. An aspiring writer for the Broadway theater, he and his wife, Annie, have a daughter, Annie, born in 1981.

Co-hosts of the local portion of the telethon will be television personalities Jim Woods, Slim Short, Susan Roberts and Allison McDuffy. Assisting will be Nancy Jenkins, Nita Rasberry and other local radio personalities. James Whitehurst of WNCT-TV is producing the show, assisted by Mack Nicholson, Macon Dail and others from the station.

National hosts are John Ritter of "Three's Company," whose brother is affected by cerebral palsy; Dennis James and Paul Anka.

Talent auditions will be held Jan. 8-9 at the Moose Auditorium. Details will be announced later.

In addition to Greenville, phone centers will be set up in Kinston, Rocky Mount, Tarboro, Kenansville, Washington, New Bern, Snow Hill, Morehead City, Williamston, Elizabeth City and Windsor.

Mrs. Rasberry said committee chairmen are as follows: VIP, Connally Branch; publicity, Joe Mule; special events, Beth Heeter; security, Mack McKenzie; volunteers, Barbara Zicherman; food, Jim Terrell; fishbowl, Carolyn Winbon; celebrity panels, Nancy Jenkins and Dick Blake; medical assistance, Craig Quick; talent, Sam Sweet; supplies, Jeff Campbell; UCP programming, Barbara Thurber; set design, East Carolina University Art Department; and photography, Dean James. Help is still needed on some of these committees, she said. Anyone wishing to serve may call 756-0183 or contact the appropriate chairman.

Nutritionist Defends White Bread, Eggs

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

"White bread is badly maligned." It is an excellent food," a roly-poly British nutrition scientist said while in the United States to receive a distinguished achievement award.

Dr. Elsie M. Widdowson said white bread is thought of mainly as carbohydrate but has significant nutritional value, including 10 percent protein.

The outspoken scientist, retired from Cambridge University, also stuck up for eggs.

"Well, I have a boiled egg every morning," she said. Isn't she worried about what an egg a day will do to her cholesterol levels?

Not at all. "Most of the body's cholesterol is made by the body," she said.

Talk of bread and eggs — and even meat and alcohol — came up when Dr. Widdowson was asked about her dietary styles.

After all, as an insider on the nutrition track, she must be doing everything right.

She eats a lot of fresh fruits and vegetables and very small portions of meat.

The size of meat servings in American restaurants frightened her. Two or three ounces is sufficient, she said. "People don't need those big servings."

She isn't much for alcoholic beverages, not even the apple wine she makes from the fruit of her orchard.

Dr. Widdowson said it is a fact that booze belts women harder than men due to the fact that a woman's liver has fewer of the enzymes used to break down alcohol.

Women, being smaller than men, also have less water in their bodies to dilute the alcohol. It hits them faster than it does men.

The natural female shortcoming when it comes to metabolizing alcohol, Dr. Widdowson said, is the reason for a sharp rise in the last decade of alcoholic livers in the female population in Britain.

Dr. Widdowson is best described as a fearless but warm grandmotherly type. By the prize, one also knows she is a first rate nutrition scientist.

"Well over 70," she answered when asked her age, claiming no dietary secret got her there. Longevity comes from the family tree, she said proudly.

"Mother lives with me, and she is 105."

The scientist was told by phone last August that she had been selected to receive the second annual $25,000 Bristol-Myers award for distinguished achievement in nutrition research.

Among other things, the honor fell to her for landmark studies of infant body composition that have been used for decades to determine babies' nutritional needs.

"Was I surprised when I heard the call came from America," she said. At the time, Dr. Widdowson was doing what she loves when she's not doing research or lecturing. She was gardening at her two-acre place in Barrington — 8 miles from Cambridge.

The prize money is tax free. Dr. Widdowson, eyes twinkling, said it will be spent where needed.

Dr. Widdowson was among the first scientists to see the need for comprehensive tables on the composition of cooked foods. These tables now allow diabetics and others with special dietary needs to calculate their intake of carbohydrates and other nutrients.

With her lifelong collaborator, Prof. R.A. McCance, she performed the chemical analyses for the tables that became "The Chemical Composition of Food." The first edition, still a major reference work, came out in 1940.

One of the first to do individual dietary surveys, Dr. Widdowson discovered an "astounding variation in the intake of energy and nutrients between one individual and another."

"Much research lies ahead before we can understand why one person can live on half the calories of another and yet remain perfectly healthy," she said.

The nutritionist was employed by the British Medical Research Council for 40 years. She now is affiliated with Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge.

Dr. Widdowson talked lovingly about what she did in Germany after World War II.

She was there to help build up German children and old people and even German prisoners of war who had returned from internment in the Soviet Union.

They suffered from severe malnutrition.

"The children were stunted in their growth and development," she said. The adults had had the bloated bellies that go with malnutrition.

White bread was 75 percent of the diet that built up the starving Germans.

Dressing In Cashmere Jersey

FASHION MESSAGE — The trend is to softness, expressed in fabrics that move and flow with the body, and cashmere, the epitome of luxurious softness, is the choice of many designers for festive fashions. At left, bare, body-hugging and seductive in a whisper-soft embrace of cashmere jersey, this satin-trimmed corselet is open-laced in front and tops a slim streak of glamorized pants. At right, one-shoulder evening dress in a slender flow of cashmere jersey, with sequined triangular hip sash, is worn with a Grecian shawl cape. (Corselet and pants by Gale for Hanky Panky; dress by Jonathan; both in cashmere jersey fabric by Amicale.)

LUNCH FARE
Clam Chowder & Crackers
Brown Betty & Coffee

CLAM CHOWDER
The way one New Yorker, Susan McQuillan, makes it.

- 2 to 3 tablespoons rendered bacon fat
- 1 medium onion, chopped medium-fine
- 1/2 of a small green pepper, chopped medium-fine
- 1 small rib celery, thinly sliced
- 1-3rd cup (generous) tomato paste (1/2 of a 6-ounce can)
- 3 cups water
- 1 medium potato, diced
- 1 medium carrot, pared and sliced
- 6 1/2-ounce can chopped clams, undrained
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon thyme
- 1 bay leaf, crushed

In a large saucepan in the hot bacon drippings, cook onion, green pepper and celery until onion is translucent. Stir in tomato paste, then water, potato, carrot, clam liquid (reserve clams) and seasonings. Bring to a boil; simmer, covered, 40 to 50 minutes. Off heat add reserved clams. Refrigerate overnight to allow flavors to develop. Reheat (but do not boil) before serving. Makes 4 1/2 cups (generous).

LIGHT SUPPER

Split Pea Soup & Croutons
Salmon Aspic & Rolls
Cupcakes & Coffee
SALMON ASPIC

One way to use liquid leftover from canned vegetables.

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1/2 cup juice from drained canned tomatoes
- 12-ounce can vegetable cocktail juice (1 1/2 cups)
- 7 1/4-ounce can red sockeye salmon
- 1/2 cup finely diced celery
- 2 to 4 small scallions, finely diced (1 to 2 tablespoons)
- Salad greens and mayonnaise

In a medium bowl evenly sprinkle gelatin over tomato juice to soften — about 5 minutes. In a 1-quart saucepan heat vegetable juice until boiling; pour over gelatin mixture and stir until gelatin dissolves. Drain salmon; remove skin and large bones; break salmon into fairly large pieces; add to gelatin mixture with celery and scallion. Chill until partly thickened; stir gently to distribute salmon. Turn into 6-ounce custard cups. Chill to set. Unmold at serving time. Garnish with salad greens and pass mayonnaise. Makes 4 servings.

Dear Abby

Photo Out Of Sight But Not Out Of Mind

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother died three years ago after being happily married to my father for 38 years. Four months ago my father married a lovely woman near his age (60ish), and they came from New York to spend the Thanksgiving holidays in Connecticut with my husband, children and me.

It was a wonderful three days. And although it was strange to see my father show affection to a woman other than my mother, I am honestly thrilled that he found someone so lovely.

After they left, I went into the guest room they had occupied and I noticed that my mother's picture had been turned toward the wall! At first I felt anger and resentment. Then I felt thoughtless and guilty for not having realized it was there and taken it down. In a way I feel hurt and outraged that either my father or his wife would turn my mother's picture to the wall. I can't seem to get it out of my mind, Abby. My husband says I am "over-reacting and to forget it. But I can't stop thinking about it. Should I mention this to my father or his wife? And if so, what should I say?"

MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: Don't mention it. They will probably have a few mixed emotions of their own when they realize that they left the picture turned to the wall.

If I were you, I would find another place for that picture.

DEAR ABBY: In your Thanksgiving message you suggested that the surest cure for post-holiday blues is to "call someone who lives alone and invite him (or her) over for leftovers."

What an insult! Don't forget, Abby, the poor and lonely have their pride! My advice would be: Never invite anyone who lives alone over for leftovers! If you don't want to ask the lonely person for "the real thing," finish your leftovers yourself — or feed them to your dog!

LIVING ALONE IN HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR LIVING: Sorry. I meant no offense. Most people (myself included) often find leftovers more flavorful than the initial serving.

...

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an only child and his mother is a widow, so when my mother-in-law invited us to pack up our kids (we have three — ages 2, 4½ and 6) and come for Thanksgiving we thought it would be a great idea. We drove 125 miles to get there.

Granny, you should know, is very well-to-do, has traveled all over the world and is a collector. Her home is cluttered with treasures she's collected from all over the world. It looks like a museum!

The whole time she watched the kids like a hawk for fear they'd break something. I spent most of my time policing the kids to be sure they wouldn't touch anything. They aren't deliberately destructive or careless — they are normal, curious children. Needless to say, I was a total wreck and my nerves were shot by the time we went home.

When we left, Granny said, "Promise you will come again next year!" Abby, no way will I bring those kids to her house until they're grown.

What should we say when she invites us again?
STILL TREMBLING

DEAR STILL: Thank her, and tell her it's her turn to come to visit you!

...

DEAR ABBY: How long is "always"?
DISILLUSIONED IN PETERSBURG, VA.

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: Just a little short of "forever."

Service Helps Entire Family

NEW YORK (UPI) — A pilot mediation service designed to keep cases out of Family Court may also help improve parent-child communications.

This conclusion was reached after a six-month study of a Children's Aid Society PINS Mediation Service. PINS are children who have committed acts of non-criminal misbehavior, such as chronic truancy, running away or being incorrigible or beyond parental control.

The service helps families recognize that the problem that initially brought them to court is a family problem, not just the children's, and efforts are made to help resolve it.

Margaret L. Shaw, director of the project, says services designed to help families already hard-pressed by poverty offers back-up social

Reduce The Deficit

Reports are sifting out that the Reagan administration may propose new taxes in order to reduce the stifling deficit which looms ahead for 1983.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan is said to be studying ways to raise revenues and thus reduce the projected $115 billion deficit for the upcoming year.

The reports being published indicate that the possible changes might include limiting deductions taxpayers may take for interest payments on installment loans and mortgages for second homes.

Any move to raise taxes obviously would not be the most desirable route for this, or any administration to follow. That is particularly true in light of the campaigning by President Reagan for lower taxes.

At this point, however, there is a great fear that the big deficit could send interest rates upward again. This offsets the lack of enthusiasm for tax increases. And if the president is as astute as he appears, he is surely aware that there is an understanding among the public of the dangers of large government deficits.

Thus the big push to reduce the deficit is justified. This should be done first by reducing spending and certainly the rapidly increasing military budget should not be exempt from this. Then if changes have to be made in the tax pattern, this should be done.

The number one priority should be to reduce the deficit.

The Good News, And Bad

The good news last week was that OPEC met in Vienna to discuss ways of keeping the price of oil up, and couldn't arrive at an agreement.

At least I thought it was good news until I talked to an American economist who told me it was bad news.

"Why is it bad news?" I wanted to know.

"Because the OPEC nations and the non-member producing countries will have to sell oil under the table at a much cheaper price."

"But shouldn't that be good news for the rest of the world?" I asked.

"Not necessarily. You see, the OPEC countries borrowed heavily from the western banks, and if the price of oil falls they will have a hard time honoring their loans. If they don't pay back the money the entire Western monetary system will be in jeopardy."

"Why did the banks loan them so much money if they weren't certain they could pay it back?"

"At the time the banks made the loans, they considered the oil-producing countries blue chip risks because the price was going up and they were sure the cartel would help make sure it remained high."

"So what happened?"

"There was a glut because people couldn't afford the price. So the OPEC countries started double-crossing each other by selling oil under the table at a lower price than they had agreed upon. For example, everybody vowed to sell their oil at $34 a barrel and cut back on production to preserve it. But a lot of countries, up to their ears in debt, were forced to sell it for a lot less.

"Iraq went to war with Iran and needed money to pay for arms.

Iran had to sell oil at any price it could get to repulse Iraq.

Nigeria spent more money than it had. And Kadafi of Libya sold his barrels way under price to sock it to Saudi Arabia."

"What a way to run a cartel," I said with disgust.

"The worst of it is that at the very moment OPEC was sticking it to us, the world went into a recession and demand dropped further. So instead of the countries dictating the prices, the free market took over, and with the glut the oil-producing nations found themselves fighting for the same customers."

"So aren't we all better off because OPEC decided to commit fratricide?"

"We would be except all the oil countries are in hock to the Western banks, and if the OPEC members default on their loans the banks could go under."

"Therefore the public has to root for the price of oil to stay up to keep our own banks afloat?"

"That seems to be the case."

"Why should we suffer because a bunch of stupid bankers were making a lot of stupid loans to a lot of stupid countries?"

"It was the only way we could recycle the money the oil countries were charging us for the oil. Until the oil glut the OPEC nations were our best customers."

"Wait a minute. Didn't the OPEC cartel put us in a worldwide recession in the first place?"

"They made a big contribution. But that's no reason to hold a grudge against them."

"That's easy for you to say

Trapped On Dead Center

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — As the clock ticks toward January submission of the Fiscal Year 1984 budget, House Republicans are urging President Reagan to regain the offensive, but with conflicting strategies pointing to profoundly different consequences for the nation.

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, contending that future year budget deficits forecast by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) are excessive, wants to get inside OMB director David Stockman's "black box" that spews out the melancholy economic tidings. But Kemp's usual comrade-in-arms, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, came up with a radically different approach to deficit-reduction: a multiyear freeze in all federal spending, including defense.

Both approaches arouse reflexive interest among Republicans who want to get the administration off dead-center — including the party's House leadership and the powerful White House chief of staff, James Baker III. But Gingrich's budget freeze contains a booby trap: It could be used to promote the tax increases and defense cuts pressed on Reagan by Stockman for nearly two years.

However, Kemp had no desire to go into opposition to Reagan with a counter-budget. Instead, on Dec. 14, the House Republican leadership — including Lott and House Republican Conference Chairman Kemp — conferred with Baker. Their request: to explore the in-nards of Stockman's black box to determine just where those mammoth deficits are coming from.

At that very moment, however, one of the New York 20 — thoughtful and innovative Newt Gingrich — was pondering the Republican dilemma and conferring with figures from the administration and Wall Street. "We are decaying economically and are on the edge of a depression," he wrote in a memo. His cure was contained in a letter to the president dated Dec. 17 but not actually sent: "Freezing government spending at fiscal Year 1983 levels until we achieve a balanced budget."

Gingrich circulated his letter among House Republicans, and they loved it. He quickly collected some 55 signatures, including several members of the leadership (but not Kemp). Critics of Gingrich's solution find it riddled with defects: It would halt rearmament, arbitrarily deny recession-induced growth of social welfare programs, and raise the specter of tax increases when Congress predictably failed to go along with the freeze. This so closely matches Stockman's agenda that the OMB was delighted with Gingrich's initiative.

Kemp prevailed on fellow supply-sider Gingrich to pull back the Reagan letter for now. In a Dec. 20 memo to Gingrich (which he later circulated to all the New York 20), Kemp agreed it was essential to seize the offensive. But he opposed a budget freeze that "would tie our hands by effectually institutionalizing the slogan 'Stay the Course'" and "would signal our ability ... to break the logjam is at an end."

The source of their

Stockman's deficit prophecies were discussed the weekend of Dec. 10-12 at the New York Hilton when Kemp and House Minority Leader Trent Lott sponsored an unannounced economic seminar for some 20 House Republican cosponsors of the Lott-Kemp bill to lower interest rates. Supply-side guru Jude Wanniski suggested formation of a "Team B" to forecast budget deficits more realistic than Stockman's.

Strength For Today

END OF MESSAGE

On the day of the Battle of Waterloo, a huge crowd in London came out into the streets awaiting news of the battle.

A signal system which spelled out a message was to be displayed from a large public building. As the crowd gathered in front of it two words were slowly spelled out — "Wellington defeated". But when the second word has been completed, a heavy fog descended upon the city and with it, of course, immeasurable despondency on the part of the population. At last, after some hours, the fog lifted. Then the signal spelled out the rest of the message — "Wellington defeated the enemy."

A High Tax State

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — North Carolina state and local taxes are among the lowest in the country, right? Just look at the popularly cited figures provided by the U.S. Census Bureau. On a per capita basis, North Carolina ranks 46th among the states in terms of taxes collected.

Before you rush off to chortle in the face of your cousins living in Connecticut and New York, you might want to look at an Institute of Government study completed recently by IG economist Charles D. Linder. Those statistics, he says in the most recent issue of Popular Government magazine, are "a misleading indication of the level and growth of government...taxation in this state." If you're looking for North Carolina's true taxation ranking, better to look to the top, rather than the bottom, of the list — right up there with those states where the people talk funny.

average North Carolinian pays $1,316 a year in state and local taxes while the average tax in Pacific region states is $3,343.

That looks great for us until Linder takes into account the percentage of our per capita income we're paying in taxes. Now, instead of ranking 46th in taxes, we're up to 36th. Now your cousin from Connecticut is laughing income taxes — a total of $625. That's 164 percent of the $382 national average and it ranks third highest in the country. At the $25,000 income level, we're 12th, at the $35,000 and $50,000 levels, tenth.

Now let's go back to those per capita tax levels — the ones which make us look good. Of the 15 highest tax states in those standings, only Wisconsin is tougher on the $15,000-a-year wage earner than North Carolina. At the other levels, no more than six of these "high tax" states are ahead of the Old North.

Over the past 20 years, tax collections in North Carolina have far outpaced the national average. A big reason for that is our growth. New taxpayers and new businesses. Another reason is bracket creep — the nefarious by-product of a progressive tax system that sends you into a higher tax bracket with each cost of living raise.

Liner went on to calculate, using 1980 figures, the total local and state tax burden which North Carolina families face. Now's the time to get ill.

At the $15,000 income level, the North Carolinian pays $280 in sales and $345 in

So, the next time you hear about this being a low tax state, remember these words from Linder. "Taxation of North Carolina's middle income families seems, when the states are compared, to be higher than middle income levels of taxation in all but a few states, most of them relatively wealthy northern states."

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

at you. And it gets worse.

Linder cites a survey of the tax bill for a family of four living in the largest city of each state and the District of Columbia — in our case Charlotte. If the North Carolina family earned $7,500 to $15,000 a year, their taxes would be the 22nd highest of the 51 cities surveyed. If they earned $25,000, they'd be the 18th highest and if $50,000, 17th highest.

Linder's 11-page article is complex and exhausting and beyond full explanation in the limited space available here. But, essentially, Linder is saying that we're comparing apples and oranges when we compare the per capita tax rates of a poor state like North Carolina with those of the rich New England and Pacific states. Of course we pay less in taxes, per capita, earn only about 82 percent of the national average wage. In rich states, wages are far higher than average.

A more realistic way to compare tax levels, then, is to compare the percentage of a worker's salary siphoned off by state and local taxes. On a per capita basis, the

Sen. East Lists Objections To Gasoline Tax

(Sen. John P. East below discusses his position on the federal gas tax increase which was enacted by Congress. The reply is in the form of a letter to the editor and because of the importance of the issue the usual 300 word limit is waived. — The Editors.)

To the editor:

As you know, my family and I have lived and worked in Greenville for 18 years. The Greenville Daily Reflector is my hometown newspaper, and I have the good fortune of personally knowing many of the good folks who report the news and write the editorials. I have long held in admiration the people at the Reflector who diligently work to deliver the news to eastern North Carolina. So it is with some reluctance that I write regarding your editorial found on the Sunday Opinion page of the Dec. 19, 1982 issue. However, I am obliged to respond.

The inference of the editorial is that by my having opposed the gasoline tax, I, and 33 other senators who opposed the bill, may be responsible for a future deteriorated condition of North Carolina highways. This is a wrongful interpretation, and, if not addressed, would leave your readers confused as regards to my intent in opposing yet another new federal tax.

I did oppose the bill and shall offer some reasons.

It is a regressive tax. Regardless of income level all must pay increased 5 cents per gallon gas tax. Since North Carolina already has one of the highest state gasoline taxes in the nation, the new additional federal tax will hit hardest the middle and low income families who, during this time of economic slump, are fighting to make ends meet. Gasoline is not a luxury item. Yet, this bill would take money out of the pockets of working people. They will have less to spend on other things and will have a more difficult time making ends meet on an already tight budget. I know of no school of economic thought that would impose a tax during a recession and compound its impact by making it regressive. Simply put, this is poor economic policy.

It is also objectionable, Mr. Editor, in that it breaches the basic notion of a user fee.

A user fee would come from a levy against a particular use of a system or service. In this instance, as you know, the tax would earmark about $6 billion for mass transit. This is a tax against rural states and motorists everywhere in support of urban commuter transportation systems.

If North Carolinians purchase gasoline in an equal amount to that purchased in 1981, North Carolina would contribute over $44 million due to the mass transit subsidy that is part of the bill. We would only get about $6 million in return. Not a good deal for our state. But the point is this: because of the mass transit subsidy, the new gas tax levy is far more than a user fee adjustment on vehicle operations for using the highway.

Also objectionable are the provisions in the new law that would drastically alter highway taxes on the trucking industry. There is an increased tax on tires, on trucks and trailers, and other tax impositions on the trucking industry. There is a new 50 cents per pound tax on tires over 90 pounds (now $9.75 per pound) that is more, I am informed, than the actual cost of the materials used in tire manufacturing. The heavy use tax that currently places a ceiling of $240 per vehicle per year rises to a maximum limit of $1,600 in 1983 — nearly a seven fold increase and further increases to $1,900 by 1988.

Undoubtedly much of the additional cost of transportation due to these provisions will reflect in higher costs in the over 90 percent of all we eat, wear and drink that is currently transported by truck for purchase at the local market. Moreover, as you know, North Carolina is ranked seventh among the 50 states in the trucking industry. The truck tax provisions will likely have a devastating effect on that important segment of the North Carolina economy.

Let us not misunderstand one another, there would have been ample time available in the next session of Congress for consideration of a roadway improvement bill that would address and bring forward an approach for repairing the highway system. I would note, however, that some $46 billion is already budgeted for the next five years for road and bridge repair and construction and that $9 billion is presently already in the Highway Trust Fund.

In short, the new $29 billion federal gas tax is not the only available alternative by any means.

The helter-skelter, three week, post-election session of Congress did not, I believe, give this matter the deliberate, thorough, and complete examination that it so much deserves. Unless the money is siphoned off for Congressional pay raises, increased pay for federal bureaucrats, and the like, states will receive more highway money from the federal government, I suppose, than they have in the past. After all, the new federal tax requirement will more than double from 4 cents to 9 cents per gallon.

However, since the beginning of the highway trust fund, North Carolina has been a donor state, contributing one dollar in taxes for every 74 cents in highway allocation in return. North Carolina and Oklahoma are the most heavily penalized states in the nation in this regard. Little will change under the new proposal, mostly because our states will receive so slight a portion of the contribution earmarked for mass transit and because the adverse highway allocation formula works greatly to our disadvantage.

Perhaps at the time your editorial was written some of these facts were not widely known. One of the benefits of careful deliberation in the Senate is that eventually the truth does come out.

Now that the new tax has been imposed on North Carolina notwithstanding our very strenuous objection, I hope that when your readers still encounter bad roads in North Carolina they will remember that the tax was not the cure-all you suggested and that when they fill up at the gas pump they will also remember that the senators from their state did everything in their power to keep them from having to pay one more burdensome federal tax.

For that effort, although unsuccessful, I have no regret whatsoever.

With warmest regards and best wishes for the New Year.

Umstead Bridge May Reopen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — People who have had to use a ferry service or take a 150-mile detour to travel between the Outer Banks and the mainland may get an early reprieve if the William B. Umstead bridge reopens this weekend.

Cy Lynn of the N.C. Department of Transportation said the bridge could reopen this weekend — weather permitting. Lynn said contractors hope to lift two spans back into place sometime this week, possibly Thursday.

"They're expecting some high winds sometime," Lynn said. "Wind will be a definite factor."

The bridge has been out of service since Nov. 6 when a barge rammed it, crippling a primary support and doing an estimated $1 million damage.

The opening would end two months of driving woes, financial troubles and logistical headaches for thousands of Outer Banks residents who have had to take make-shift ferries or drive a 150-mile detour.

Schools have been moved, garbage put in storage and fishing trips postponed as a result of the closing.

The weekend opening would come a month ahead of time as McLean Construction Co. of Baltimore's contract called for the bridge to reopen on Jan. 31.

"Built into that (contract) was the possibility of bad weather or other kinds of things," Lynn said. "The urgency of getting the job completed was a major consideration."

The company stands to earn an extra $140,000 for finishing work early. The contract offered the company $4,500 per day — the cost to the state or running the ferries between Manteo and Manns Harbor — if the company finished ahead of the Jan. 31 completion date

"That would be some of the best money we ever spent," Lynn said.

disagreement, according to Kemp: "OMB is asking us to base our decisions on its 'black box' — a single piece of paper containing its deficit projections ... (and) refuses to provide any supporting data."

Supporting data is surely needed. OMB is projecting future deficits $100 billion less than the Congressional Budget office (CBO) guesses. But supply-side economist Alan Reynolds, using real economic growth averaging 5.5 percent for the next three years, projects a $40 billion deficit for Fiscal '85 compared with CBO's $152 billion. Yet, H.C. Wainwright Co., the economics forecasting firm, is predicting growth close to 8 percent for the next two years.

Jim Baker, the supreme pragmatist, is open to all ideas. He is well aware that the present draft budget, projecting huge deficits and calling for a $25 billion domestic spending cut that everybody knows Congress will never enact, is no strategy at all and will guarantee chaos on Capitol Hill. The inevitable outcome would be another round of tax-increasing that, as in 1982, would pit Kemp, Gingrich and other conservatives against their president.

As an alternative, Baker is interested in Gingrich's freeze. But Baker, as well as Gingrich, would rather see a revision of the out-year deficits to reassure markets and make it easier for the Federal Reserve to pursue a policy of cutting interest rates. That is why he is cooperating with the House Republicans who want to gaze inside Dave Stockman's black box.

Plan Goes To Congress Next Month

Budget Path Uncertain

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is confused as it searches for ways to narrow a record $200 billion deficit estimated for 1984, presidential budget planners report.

A month before a budget plan is to be sent to Congress, administration officials cannot agree on a course because alternatives are politically unacceptable or philosophically distasteful to President Reagan, according to several sources.

Sources at the Treasury Department, Office of Management and Budget and Council of Economic Advisers, discussed the budget dilemma on the condition that their names be withheld.

Several said Reagan and his top aides seem unwilling to decide between equally unpleasant alternatives: proposing tax increases, military spending cuts and Social Security savings to narrow the deficit or asking Congress to swallow a huge deficit.

"We're all in a dilemma. You can't dispute that," conceded one budget official. Another described budget officials as "depressed and despairing."

The budget blueprint for the fiscal year beginning next October is due on Capitol Hill Jan. 31, but the administration would like to have key decisions made by Jan. 25 when Reagan is to deliver his State of the Union message.

So far, the president's only major budget decision has been to approve up to $25 billion in non-military cuts.

Democrats and Republicans in the new Congress are expected to press for additional tax increases and curbs on the Pentagon's spending. Thus, one key political decision yet to be made by Reagan is whether to start out proposing a budget compromise in these areas.

Budget Director David Stockman has argued that tax increases are unavoidable if the deficit is to be reined in during the next five years.

That view is shared by the Council of Economic Advisers and, of late, by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan. Regan, according to aides, has softened his past opposition to tax increases.

The president has not tipped his hand on whether he would go along with a tax increase.

But several budget planners say they will not try to solve the deficit problem in 1984, and are turning to ways for reducing the deficits over the following four years.

The highest deficit on record prior to Reagan's administration was $66.4 billion in 1976 under then-President Ford. It was $110.7 billion in fiscal 1982 and is projected at $185 billion or more during the current year. The 1976 deficit actually was larger in terms of the size of the economy, representing 3.9 percent of gross national product compared with 3.6 percent for the 1982 deficit.

Martin S. Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, has warned repeatedly that acceptance of such large deficits would cause interest rates to shoot up and keep the economy from a lasting recovery.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said Tuesday, on ABC's "Good Morning America" that he is very concerned about the deficits. But Baldrige offered no solutions other than a generalized call for further cuts in federal spending.

Officials at the Office of Management and Budget doubt Congress will approve significant domestic spending cuts or that Reagan will approve much of a reduction in his military build-up plans.

Administration officials say a consensus is building within the White House for making some defense cuts stemming from "management savings" and a lower-than-expected inflation rate. However, at this stage, officials are talking about trimming only a few billion dollars from the Pentagon's budget.

Stockman is readying a package of domestic program cuts expected to total between $20 billion and $25 billion, including proposals previously rejected by Congress. Even if all the reductions were approved, the government still would face a huge deficit for 1984.

The administration's problems have been compounded by a stalemate over what to do about Social Security, an area where once-anticipated budget savings now seem unlikely.

Administration officials had been hoping a bipartisan commission looking into ways to eliminate the retirement system's deficits would find a compromise solution based on a combination of payroll tax increases and benefit reductions for future retirees. But the panel is deadlocked and the administration may have to leave Social Security untouched in the 1984 budget.

The budget will be based on a forecast that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, will start growing in the first half of the year and reach a 3 percent to 4 percent rate at the end of the year.

Falling Rates May Revive Housing

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

Business borrowing costs are falling again, and some economists expect the lower interest rates also to spark a major rebound in the beleaguered housing industry.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third-largest commercial bank, cut its prime lending rate by one-half point to 11 percent Tuesday. That was the lowest level for the prime rate since August 1980.

But the move by Chase had no positive effect on Wall Street, where the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks tumbled 11.68 points Tuesday to 1,058.87, after having soared more than 25 points Monday to a record 1,070.55.

While other banks did not quickly follow Chase's lead, economists said they expected the lower rate to spread nationwide soon. Not all businesses pay precisely the prime rate quoted by a bank; some pay more, some less. But the fact that it has dropped a notch at Chase is a good signal to business executives.

The prime rate has no direct link to consumer loans, including home mortgages, but does indicate the general direction of interest rates.

Many economists expect all types of interest rates to continue dropping in the weeks ahead due to slack demand for commercial credit and a dropoff in banks' cost of acquiring money.

George A. Christie, chief economist at the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co., said he expected home mortgage rates to fall further. The result, he said, is likely to be a sustained pickup in housing activity.

F.W. Dodge reported Tuesday that the value of newly started construction jumped 16 percent in November to the highest level in 19 months. It said the catalyst was falling interest rates.

"The construction sector is finally capable of filling its traditional role of leading the rest of the economy out of recession," said Christie. He noted that mortgage rates fell to 14.5 percent last month from 17 percent in August.

Many segments of the housing industry have perked up in recent weeks as lower interest rates have spurred building and buying activity nationwide.

In other economic developments:

—The Conference Board, a business-supported research group in New York, reported that business executives' confidence in their own industries and the overall economy increased in the current quarter, marking the fourth quarterly gain. The board said the level of confidence hit 60 on its scale of 100. That reading is 17 points higher than a year ago and 5 points higher than last summer.

—The government reported that savings and loan associations committed more money for mortgages last month than at any time since the fall of 1980. And while the 3,381 federally insured S&Ls reported further losses of deposits, they said their net worth improved in November for the second straight month.

Poland's Jaruzelski Remains A National Enigma

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — For millions of Poles, the turbulent year of martial-law rule ended the way it began, with the clipped, measured language of their austere soldier-leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

It was in Jaruzelski's predawn, nationally televised speech Dec. 13, 1981, that Poles learned of the sweeping military crackdown that ended a 16-month popular challenge to Communist Party authority. They heard Jaruzelski say a "national catastrophe" had been averted by hours, that the nation hovered at the edge of "an abyss."

A year later, Dec. 12, 1982, Jaruzelski went on television to tell the nation "the worst is behind us," and to announce martial law will be formally suspended Jan. 1.

It was probably fitting that the speeches by Jaruzelski, a Soviet-trained career officer who has accumulated power unprecedented in postwar Poland, should frame the 12 months of martial-law rule.

Jaruzelski's regime broke up and ultimately abolished the independent labor movement Solidarity, which claimed 10 million members when martial law was imposed. Hundreds of Solidarity leaders were swept into internment centers. The union's clandestine remnants were pursued relentlessly, until their voice in Poland was muffled, if not ignored. Underground calls for public protests were answered with intimidating displays of force; in all, 15 Poles died in clashes with security forces.

Jaruzelski rebuffed — some Poles say humiliated — Solidarity's leader, Lech Walesa.

Walesa was seized in the first hours of the military crackdown and kept under house arrest for 11 months. He was released only after writing a letter to Jaruzelski, proposing "a serious discussion of the problems of our country."

The letter, Walesa acknowledged in mid-December, went unanswered.

More than 10,000 Solidarity members also were placed in detention after martial law was imposed. All but seven of them — those held on criminal charges — were released just before Christmas.

Jaruzelski's imprint on daily life extends far beyond his dealings with Solidarity. Many of the sternest and most restrictive features of military rule have been incorporated into criminal and civil codes. When martial law is suspended, the country will be a far more confining and restrictive place than before December 1981.

Jaruzelski also fended off mild challenges to his authority within Poland's demoralized Communist Party, of which he is first secretary. Jaruzelski, a four-star general, is also Poland's premier, defense minister and head of the ruling, 21-man Military Council of National Salvation.

Yet, for all the various ways he has invoked his power, Jaruzelski remains, for many Poles, the grim face of uniformed authority, the remote center of power more feared than hated — and understood least of all.

Jaruzelski, who shields his chronically inflamed eyes behind dark glasses, reveals little of himself in public appearances. He seems awkward to the point of embarrassment, stiff when he has to engage in small talk. During occasional visits to factories, Jaruzelski commonly asks men about their military record and women about the size of their family.

Jaruzelski is married and has a daughter but rarely appears in public with his family.

Even when the Sejm (parliament) voted in October to abolish Solidarity — which must have been a source of considerable personal satisfaction — Jaruzelski merely applauded, discreetly.

Government sources characterize Jaruzelski, who turns 60 in July, as a tireless administrator, given to working 16- to 18-hour days and sometimes sleeping in his office. He likes to hunt, ride horses and play tennis. He indulges in few vices, these sources said, and dislikes drinking. He took up cigarettes shortly after the martial law decree and is now understood to smoke heavily.

Western sources in Warsaw have expressed surprise at the physical distance Jaruzelski has managed to keep from the Soviet leadership.

"I think he has done a pretty good job of staying out of their public hands," said one diplomat, referring to the four announced trips Jaruzelski has made to the Soviet Union since imposing martial law.

Though he is from a landowning family in Kurowie, in Lublin province, Jaruzelski is no stranger to the Soviet system. According to his official biography, Jaruzelski was a laborer in the Soviet Union at the start of World War II. He joined the Soviet-sponsored 1st Polish Army in 1943, and was an infantry officer in battles in Poland and Germany. Afterward, according to his biography, he "fought the reactionary underground forces" in Poland. No details were given, however.

Jaruzelski's postwar career was untainted by scandal, and unimpeded by the changes in power in Warsaw. He was appointed defense minister in 1968 during the regime of Wladyslaw Gomulka, and a member of the Politburo in 1971 when Edward Gierk was in power.

Jaruzelski was named premier in February 1981 and party leader in October 1981 — becoming the third man to hold those posts since the August 1980 workers protests that gave rise to Solidarity.

Although his authority is unquestioned, there is scant evidence Jaruzelski has won much public confidence. And at times he seems acutely public-relations conscious. In his Dec. 12 speech, for example, Jaruzelski said, "Perhaps more was expected today. Perhaps sensational statements were expected.

"I think, however, that it is better when we solve Polish matters realistically ... when emotions give place to the desire for a calm and normal life."

More Wheat Sold Russians

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought an additional 200,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat — about 7.34 million bushels — for delivery through next Sept. 30, says the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Monday the new sales raised to nearly 5.2 million tons — 2.2 million wheat and 3 million corn — the amount of U.S. grain the Soviets have bought for 1982-83 shipment.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

The Soviet Union, under a long-term agreement with the United States, is committed to buy at least six million tons of wheat and corn each year, with an option of two million additional tons.

Teacher Says Handicapped Make The Best Drivers

DEDICATED TEACHER — Bill Ramsey teaches handicapped persons to drive. He says current technology will permit almost anyone to learn to drive an automobile. (AP Laserphoto)

By STRAT DOUTHAT Associated Press Writer INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — Deaf motorists are more observant than those who can hear, and being a genius is no advantage behind the steering wheel, says a driving instructor who specializes in teaching the handicapped. "Of course, I'm a little prejudiced," Bill Ramsey said with a laugh. "But, I should know what I'm talking about."

Ramsey, who teaches driving at the West Virginia Rehabilitation Center, is also president of the National Association of Driver Educators for the Disabled.

During nearly two decades of teaching, Ramsey has worked with hundreds of slow learners, quadriplegics, paraplegics and deaf people, among others.

"I even helped one guy get a driver's license even though he was considered to be legally blind," he said.

Ramsey, who uses many of the latest technological aides, said deaf people are particularly good drivers.

"They've got it all over us hearing people when it comes to driving," he said in a recent interview. "It's because they've always taken in everything with their eyes, and, as a result, they tend to see everything."

He also thinks slow learners are among the best drivers, while geniuses make the worst.

"A slow learner concentrates totally on driving," he said. "However, most people let their minds stray while they're driving and this is particularly true with the most highly intelligent people."

"Why, I know of a technical company in the Kanawha Valley where a secretary is assigned to go out into the parking lot each morning to check for cars with running motors and burning headlights. If she didn't, a lot of people wouldn't be able to get home after work."

Teaching paraplegics and quadriplegics is the most rewarding thing Ramsey's ever done, he said.

"In our society, and especially in a largely rural state like West Virginia, you've just got to be mobile to be able to live anything that resembles a normal life."

He recalled teaching a partially paralyzed young man who had been an All-America football player. "He just wasn't responding well at all until he began driving," Ramsey said. "The day he got his license he told me was the first time he had wanted to go on living since becoming paralyzed."

In preparing his students for the highway, Ramsey first makes them familiar with an automobile dashboard in one of 14 computerized driving simulators at the center. Seated at the controls, they must cope with driving situations in films projected in front of them.

"These films are so realistic that I've had students scream and duck when a car comes at them head-on," he said.

After the students master the simulators, they graduate to an off-street driving maze on the campus of adjoining West Virginia State College.

"By the time I'm through with them and before they attempt to drive on the highway, they will have experienced 99 percent of the things that can happen on the road," Ramsey said. "In fact, they'll be almost paranoid about what can happen on the highway; they'll be driving defensively and will be prepared for anything."

About 95 percent of his students pass their driving tests, he said.

"And I mean on the first try. And as for safety, their accident rate is about the same as your so-called 'normal driver,'" Ramsey added.

But he admits to the anguish of an occasional failure. "I take it as a reflection on me as a teacher," he said.

Has Trouble With Birds

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Woodpeckers are keeping John Pflueger's life interesting. Not the kind that sing peacefully from the treetops, but the kind that turn water black and smash windows.

Pflueger got the first inkling of his bird problem when woodpeckers kept ramming themselves into windows in his home. Woodpeckers, being territorial birds, seemed to be trying to chase off what they saw as intruders on their turf.

Then, the water in his home turned purple and, later, black.

"The water tank had a wooden top, but the birds drilled holes in it and stored their acorns," Pflueger said. "I pulled about a hundred pounds of acorns out of there."

Several days after the acorn caper, a power company meter reader noticed that Pflueger's living room window was smashed.

The meter reader called police. When officers responded with guns drawn, they and Pflueger entered the home looking for a possible prowler.

They found a red-tailed hawk.

Minorities Improve Scores

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Indians and blacks scores on reading and mathematics competency tests in North Carolina showed "dramatic" improvement this fall, say state education officials.

A report prepared for presentation to the State Board of Education in January shows that 83.2 percent of the 21,033 black juniors taking the reading test for the first time and 87.5 percent of the 829 American Indian juniors passed.

Statewide, 92.8 percent of the 70,958 juniors passed the reading test — slightly higher than the 91.9 percent rate for reading in 1981 and the 92.5 percent rate for 1980.

Courts Running Smoothly

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina bankruptcy courts are running smoothly despite warnings of pending disaster after Congress adjourned without resolving key jurisdictional issues, a bankruptcy judge says.

"We have no problem at all," said Judge Rufus Reynolds, who has presided over bankruptcy court in the U.S. Middle District Court in Greensboro for 30 years.

Predictions of chaos came from financial experts came after Congress failed to act on matters raised by the U.S. Supreme Court in a June opinion. The high court held that certain powers granted bankruptcy judges in the 1978 federal bankruptcy code reform were unconstitutional.

Reynolds said the issues raised by the Supreme Court "affect about 20 percent of our work. 'It's just a matter of rerouting that to District Court or just not deciding.'"

Court Backs State Choice

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal court has upheld North Carolina's right to use a controversial toxic waste dump that was at the center of protests earlier this year.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in a ruling issued here Tuesday, upheld U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt's rejection of arguments by owners of land adjacent to the Warren County, N.C., dump where the state disposed of PCBs, or polychlorinated biphenals.

Scientists have linked PCB to cancer in laboratory animals and some fear the substance may be building up in the food chain.

More than 500 demonstrators who protested the dumping of PCBs at the site were arrested when they attempted to block a convoy of trucks carrying in soil contaminated with the chemical.

Firm Sues Belk Stores

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Officials with Belk stores have denied allegations by a New Jersey-based clothing retailer that Belk has been pressuring area apparel manufacturers to stop selling to the out-of-state firm's Charlotte branch.

Burlington Coat Factory made the allegation in a suit filed this month.

Burlington officials declined to estimate the financial impact of Belk's alleged actions but said the company's plans to open a second store in North Carolina were dashed because of the situation. Burlington's Charlotte store opened in Outlet Square shopping mall last year and employs 123 people.

Belk denied Burlington's accusations in a response to Burlington's federal court complaint. Company President John M. Belk declined comment on the suit.

Train Kills Deaf Mute

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 12-year-old deaf-mute was killed Tuesday when he was struck by a train, Lexington police said.

Officer J.S. Truell identified the victim as Johnny Whitehead of Lexington.

Whitehead was walking on the railroad tracks when he was struck by a Norfolk and Southern freight train, Truell said. The boy's body was dragged about 100 feet after being hit.

Drugs Seized In Raids

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Pre-dawn raids Tuesday netted about $89,000 in illegal drugs and resulted in 15 arrests, Caldwell County Sheriff Bliff Benfield said.

Officials from the State Bureau of Investigation and agents from Burke, Alexander and Cleveland counties participated in the raids, he said.

Officers seized LSD, angel dust, marijuana and cocaine, Benfield said.

New Plan To Cut Hospital Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker says his plan to change the way Medicare pays hospital bills would give hospitals an incentive to be frugal and efficient.

Hospital spokesmen applauded the concept that Schweiker outlined in a report sent to Congress on Tuesday. But they want more details, including the price limits Schweiker will set and how those limits will be adjusted annually.

Schweiker, under orders from Congress to produce a legislative proposal by year's end, issued a 220-page blueprint for setting Medicare fees in advance based on 467 standard diagnoses.

Both Congress and the Reagan administration have been moving toward abandoning the current Medicare payment plan, which basically reimburses hospitals for whatever they spend.

Schweiker did not send Congress proposed legislation, although he said he hoped Congress would act in time to put the new payment method into effect next Oct. 1.

Dr. Robert Rubin, his assistant secretary for planning, said a bill will be submitted soon after the new Congress convenes in January. A draft bill has yet to be submitted to the White House for approval.

Michael Bromberg, executive director of the Federation of American Hospitals, said it is "very likely" that his group of 1,000 profit-making hospitals will support the plan "with a lot of suggested revisions ... because we think the present system is terrible."

Bromberg said one of his biggest concerns is the price Schweiker will choose to pay for each of the 467 diagnoses and annual updating procedures.

J. Alexander McMahon, president of the American Hospital Association, called the report "a clear step forward."

Schweiker's agency said hospital room-and-board fees are rising nearly 14 percent this year, or almost triple the overall inflation rate. From 1979 to 1982, the average cost of a day in a hospital rose 19 percent each year, it said.

Schweiker said Medicare records show that some hospitals charge $1,500 to treat heart attack patients while others charge $9,000 "with no apparent difference in quality."

The fees for the 467 diagnoses would be adjusted to reflect local labor costs, but otherwise would be basically the same for all hospitals.

 Bishop Robert Gorham will preside. The pastor, the Rev. A. L. Miller, said the service will be open to the public.

Health Systems Agency To Meet

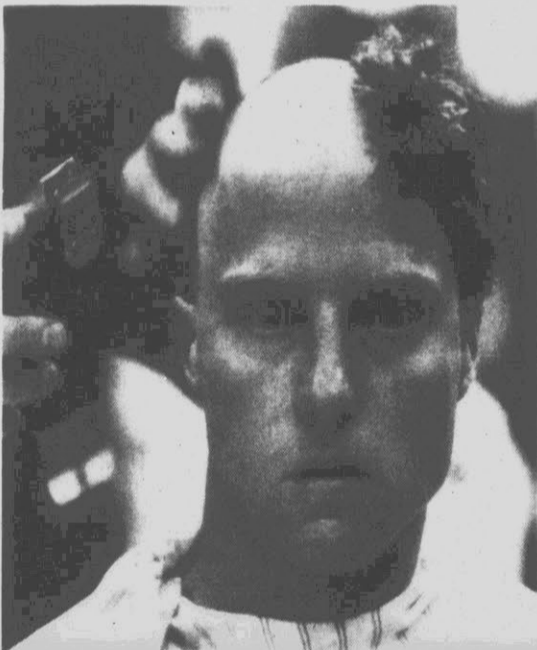

The East Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet Jan. 12 at 7:15 p.m. at the Ramada Inn. The ECHSA Project Review Committee will meet at 5:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.
 For further information on project reviews or the ECHSA meeting agenda, call 758-1372.

Conley Students Visit Firms

Clothing service students from D.H. Conley High School recently completed a series of field trips to area businesses designed to expand the students' knowledge of sewing skills.
 The class visited Prep Shirt, Calico Square, The Yardage Shop and The Scotch Bonnet. Students observed industrial sewing operations and were briefed on the job opportunities in the garment industry.
 Class members were also shown examples of sewing-related crafts such as quilting, cross-stitch, candlewicking and knitting.

Nominating Forms Available

A spokesman for the Greenville Jaycees said that nomination forms for the chapter's annual distinguished service award are still available at city hall or at the chamber of commerce offices on Greene Street.
 The deadline for submitting nominations is Dec. 31, the spokesman said.
 The recipient will be announced at the Jaycees' DSA and Bosses Night banquet on Jan. 20.

TO TOP IT OFF — Officer Candidate Randal Smith has just lost half his hair and will soon lose the rest, during the first days of a fourteen-week training program in the U.S. Navy Aviation Officers Candidate School at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla. Art For The Masses Is Near Reality

By WILLIAM GALLO
 Rocky Mountain News
 COLORADO SPRINGS,
 Colo. (AP) — He is Colonel Sanders with a chisel — a man who wants to create a Kentucky Fried Chicken empire in the art world.

Michael Garman's name isn't found in art history textbooks. Instead, the sculptor is listed in the Yellow Pages between listings for "Screws" and "Seals-Notary & Corp."

And though his work may not appear in any museum or gallery, it's on display in about 400,000 homes.

"That's where I get my ego strokes — from knowing how many thousands of people have bought my stuff," says the raw-boned, fast-talking native of Texas.

In the last 13 years, Garman has turned out a million sculptures from perhaps 50 designs, ranging from his 3-inch "Saddle Tramp" bust for $4.95 to a cast "Riverboat Pilot" for $50.

The Saddle Tramp, also available coated in bronze for $150, is by far his most popular item. About 100,000 are made each year.

Garman envisions a time when he will head up a franchised, nationwide system of 20 Michael Garman galleries that will sell his statues by the thousands to art-starved masses from Florida to California.

"It will be beautiful," he says. "I'm not interested in this 'I'll be famous when I'm dead' business. I want it now and I'm getting it."

"I may not be a very good sculptor, but I'm...smart..."

Garman's enterprise has four full-time employees in marketing, a public relations specialist and an assembly line of 30 workers to assemble vast armies of plastic cowpokes and to cast cement wins, which later wind up in gift shops and drugstores in 50 states and 17 foreign countries.

He pointedly calls it "art for the people." As Garman sees it, most artists don't understand how the world works.

"Painters and sculptors haven't lived up to their age," he says. "They've failed to use the technological and marketing methods we have available to us."

"Look, you can read John Steinbeck for $2.50, and you can see 'Star Wars' for $3.50. But you can't buy your favorite sculptor for under $10,000. I've changed that."

Though his methods aren't always popular with other artists, Paul Piazza, director of the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center, says Garman's work fills a need.

"It's a popularization, it's very sentimental and the price is very low," Piazza says. "He's been successful, obviously, and he's not trying to pull the wool over anyone's eyes."

Collectors can forget about buying a "limited edition" Garman as an investment. He doesn't believe in the notion.

"Art is not meant to be in museums, but people's homes," he says. "All I care about is getting into the guy's living room."

At 44, his Garman Productions, Inc. grosses $1 million a year.

The road to fame and fortune for Garman has taken many a colorful turn, beginning in Fort Worth, Texas, where, as a child, he first began bending pipe cleaners into human form.

He sold his first sculptures for $1 each in Santiago, Chile, to help pay his way through the tropics.

To Build Flour Mill In China

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Wheat Associates Inc. has signed a contract to help China build a modern flour mill, a $4 million cooperative venture its sponsors hope will stimulate demand for American grain.

The mill, with a production capacity of 150 tons per day, will be built in Peking for China's Bureau of Cereals and "will serve as a model of modern flour milling technology and as a training center for China's flour mill industry," the organization said.

Fusion Tests Could Start In April

PLAINSBORO, N.J. (AP) — The first U.S. test of a nuclear fusion reactor proved its superiority to other experimental fusion designs and opens the door to regular testing of the pioneering device in April, say Princeton University researchers.

The test of the $314 million Tokamak Fusion Test Reactor was called "a magical event" by scientists Tuesday. As intended, it lasted only 50 milliseconds — barely a blink of the eye.

But at a news conference, the scientists said they were pleased with the experiment at 3:06 a.m. on Dec. 24, when the machine successfully heated hydrogen gas to form what is known as a plasma, in which the electrons and the nuclei are separated — a crucial early step before fusion can occur.

"This shows superior confinement qualities than other experiments," said Harold

P. Furth, director of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory.

Fusion, which some scientists hope could power the 21st century, is the joining together of atoms to produce energy. It is the same process that makes the sun shine and is the opposite of the fission, splitting atoms apart, now used to generate nuclear power.

The Princeton scientists said fusion could be the energy source of the future because its major fuel, deuterium, can be extracted from ordinary seawater. It does not pose a major nuclear hazard and it does not burn scarce fossil fuels.

In the event of an accident in a fusion reactor, the reactions would end immediately and cooling would begin, instead of meltdown — which could occur in fission reactors.

Scientists achieved the initial fusion reaction at the odd hour because they were working around the clock, hoping for success before quitting for the Christmas weekend.

Their timetable had called for "achieving first plasma" by the end of the year.

Having proven that the machine works, scientists now hope to stick to a timetable calling for "break-even" — a point when the fusion process will produce as much energy as it uses — by 1986.

Furth said his group hopes to begin regular tests in April, slowly introducing changes such as different types of fuel, so that the amount of power required to ignite the reactor will decrease.

In 1993 or 1994, Furth said, "the energy creation becomes large," if experiments are successful. "By 2020, we could see serious commercialization start," he said.

The Tokamak is a doughnut-shaped, 35-foot-high stainless steel structure housed in a concrete building with 4-foot-thick walls. It was built on Princeton's sprawling James Forrestal Research Campus under a continuing grant from the U.S. Department of Energy.

Furth said the initial test did not produce any significant energy, but it was nonetheless "a magical event."

"The important thing is not the duration of its pulse, but that it came and we know that it happened," Furth said.

Robert H. Bauer, manager of the Chicago office of the Department of Energy, said the test used ordinary hydrogen gas as fuel. Later, scientists will use deuterium and tritium, both forms of hydrogen that are more easily fused and therefore require less energy to ignite.

The test was the first use of the Tokamak design for a nuclear fusion reactor, which was worked on in the Soviet Union in 1950 but never successfully implemented. Tokamak is the Russian acronym for the cylindrical magnetic chamber used in the process.

Other Tokamak facilities are currently under construction in Great Britain, Japan and the Soviet Union.

Reagan Travels To Palm Springs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan has completed his business in the West and plans several days of relaxation in Palm Springs, highlighted by a New Year's Eve party with friends from the business and entertainment worlds.

The president was flying late this afternoon to Palm Springs, after a 27-hour visit to Los Angeles for the recommissioning of the battleship USS New Jersey and a quiet evening at a hotel.

One of the few remaining pieces of business the traveling White House may conduct while Reagan is in the West will be the announcement of a presidential commission, appointed at the urging of Congress, to study possible basing modes for the MX missile.

Reagan's proposal to place 100 missiles in silos near Cheyenne, Wyo., in a closely spaced "dense pack" pattern met with strong objections in the House and Senate, forcing the president to agree to name a panel to give the issue further study.

An administration official, requesting anonymity, said that former Defense Secretaries Harold Brown, who served in the Carter administration, and James Schlesinger, a veteran of the Ford administration, were "highly likely" to join the commission.

The president was unlikely to play any part in the announcement of the commission's makeup.

Roman Bones Sent To U.S.

ONE OF THE VICTIMS — This is one of 80 skeletons unearthed in volcanic ash and rock in the ancient city of Herculaneum, Italy by a team of Italians and Americans. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOHN PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer
HERCULANEUM, Italy (AP) — The skeleton of a Roman legionnaire who perished in the eruption of Mount Vesuvius 1,903 years ago has been taken to the United States where specialists will try to determine the nature of his diet and what his health was like when he died.

The skeleton, with a sword in a scabbard still on its side, was unearthed here along with 80 others so far in the volcanic ash and rock in this ancient city by a team of Italians and Americans. It is the largest collection of Roman skeletons in existence.

The skeletons — as many as 300 may be recovered — are being treated with chemicals to preserve them at this neighbor city of Pompeii. Vesuvius' eruption buried them under 75 feet of volcanic matter.

The legionnaire's skeleton has been taken by a U.S. archaeologist to Washington for display at the Explorers Hall of the National Geographic Society. The skeleton was found on what was Herculaneum's beach.

The archaeologist, Dr. Sara Biesel, later will take the skeleton to the Mayo Clinic in Minneapolis, Minn., where experts will examine the bones in an effort to establish what kinds of foods the Roman ate regularly and the state of his health when he died in 79 A.D.

Dr. Biesel and other U.S. experts have been working on the dig in this coastal site five miles from Naples with a grant provided by the National Geographic Society.

"The Romans normally cremated their dead," said Walter Silva, the U.S. consul in Naples, explaining the significance of the skeletons. He enlisted the help of the National Geographic Society at the request of local officials.

Vittorio Beglioramo, an engineer working on the site, said the remains of as many as 300 people could be uncovered at Herculaneum as excavations progress.

The discoveries surprised many archaeologists because only 10 skeletons had been found at Herculaneum since the first explorations there by Austrian pioneer E.M. D'Elboeuf began in 1709.

Noted 20th century archaeologists such as Amedeo Maiuri assumed that virtually all of Herculaneum's population of 4,000 must have escaped Vesuvius' eruption.

However, Giuseppe Maggi, the Italian government archaeologist directing the dig, said he was always skeptical of that theory.

"Vesuvius rained down with the violence of an avalanche. This city is closer to Vesuvius than Pompeii. How could the inhabitants have been spared?" he said in an interview.

Maggi said the unescapable force of the downpour was clear from other evidence found on site.

A pair of heavy bronze equestrian statues, for example, snapped off their base at the horses' hooves and were carried several yards by the deluge.

The head of a statue of a proconsul, Marco Monio Balbo, was severed from its torso and rolled 20 yards. According to a reconstruction by Haraldur Sigurdsson, an Icelandic volcanologist who recently studied the Herculaneum site, Vesuvius sent a tower of ash and pumice 12 miles into the sky on Aug. 24, 79 A.D. For 18 hours Pompeii was covered with ash to a level of nine feet.

Next day a blazing hot mixture of pumice, ash and gas pulled down by gravity cascaded on Herculaneum.

Maggi's suspicions were confirmed when his team began scooping the earth out of a Roman public bath on the edge of Herculaneum near what was then the sea shore.

A temple and another religious building are attached to the bath with two terraces supported at the former beach level by arches.

In the spring of 1980 workmen came across what Maggi termed "a huge funeral bas-relief, a masterpiece of pathos" — the skeletons of six adults and six children clutched together just as they had died.

Later, on the beach itself, archaeologists uncovered a fishing boat that was apparently intended as a means of escape from the molten lava. Near it was another skeleton of a man who Maggi speculates may have died while trying to reach the craft.

Some 20 victims and the bones of a horse lie together in contorted positions under another arch.

The city was a prosperous port in Roman times but today the modern town of Ercolano is about 500 yards from the sea.

Two thirds of the city has been uncovered from the mud, lava and rocks which Vesuvius sent down — revealing spacious houses decorated with mosaics and surrounded by ample gardens.

Gold rings, bronze and silver coins, and a money box have been found with the skeletons — apparently the only possessions that the victims had time to grab before they died.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market pushed ahead today, resuming the year-end rally it began last week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 33.57 points in last week's four trading days, rose 4.97 to 1,050.04 in the first half hour today.

Advancing issues took a 5-4 lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said hopes for lower interest rates were contributing to the market's strength.

There has been widespread conjecture in recent days about further reductions in the Federal Reserve's discount rate, which has been lowered from 12 percent last summer to 8 1/2 percent now.

Although signs of a recovery from the recession have been scarce to date, many participants in the stock appear seem to be optimistic that lower rates will foster an improvement in business activity in 1983.

Today's early volume leaders included Dow Chemical, up 3/4 at 24; Global Marine, up 1/8 at 9, and Chrysler, up 1/4 at 17 1/2.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 10.03 to 1,045.07.

Advances outpaced declines by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 62.88 million shares, against 83.47 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained 52 to 80.39. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.43 at 331.39.

State Jobless Rate Increases

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - North Carolina's unemployment rate increased in 60 counties in November, according to figures released today by the state Employment Security Commission.

Fifty-seven counties had double-digit unemployment rates, including Graham County, where the rate soared to 32.7 percent.

Glenn R. Jernigan, chairman of the ESC, said the unemployment rate was up because of more employment losses in agriculture, manufacturing and among the self-employed.

Other counties with high unemployment rates included Swain, 29.2 percent, Ashe, 21.7 percent, Richmond, 18.4 percent, Clay 18.3 percent, and Tyrrell, 17.7 percent.

Counties with low unemployment rates included Orange, 3.9 percent; Wake 5.7 percent, Durham 4.8 percent, Gates 5 percent, Watauga 5.4 percent and Chowan, 6 percent.

Statewide, the total unemployment rate was 9.5 percent in November, compared with 9.3 percent for October. The national unadjusted rate in November was 10.4 percent.

State Textile Leaders Expect Slow Recovery

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A mild economic recovery should benefit textiles in 1983, but imports and unfair overseas trade barriers will continue to plague the domestic industry, textile officials say.

Clyde J. Rhyne, president of the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association, said Tuesday that 1982 ended on an optimistic note despite sales declines that caused plant closings and thousands of worker layoffs.

Rhyne cited declining interest rates and inflation rates along with increasing housing starts and automobile sales as harbinger of improvement.

"There will be moderate but steady growth in the North Carolina textile industry throughout 1983," Rhyne said in a prepared statement.

Unemployment in the industry was estimated at 222,200 in October. Consumption of domestic textiles was estimated at 11 billion pounds, compared with 13.2 billion pounds four years ago.

American shipments are estimated at $49.5 billion this year compared with $52.3 billion in 1981, an indication of the difficulty of selling domestic textiles overseas, said Charles Dunn, textile association vice president.

The U.S. textile and apparel trade deficit is expected to be $7.3 billion, 29 percent higher than last year, Dunn said. Rhyne said it would be the first textile trade deficit since 1973.

"The twin problems of recession and imports have hurt us this year," Dunn said in a telephone interview.

Moon ...

August 16, 1989. A lunar eclipse will be visible from California on April 24, 1986.

Although no one can be positive that the moon will be colored during the eclipse, Gutsch explained in a telephone interview Tuesday that the atmosphere "tends to scatter out the blue and the violet and allow the reds and yellows and oranges to get through."

"We see this commonly in the sunset, the reason being that we're seeing the sun through more and more atmosphere as it sets," he said.

During the last total lunar eclipse in July, the moon's north pole appeared darker than its south pole, Gutsch said, probably because of the eruption of Mexico's El Chichon volcano in April.

Most of the ash released by that volcano is circulating in the Northern Hemisphere, Gutsch said, and the ash apparently blocked most scattered light that could have illuminated the moon's northern portion.

No special precautions are needed to watch the eclipse, which will occur in the western sky. It is safe to stare at a lunar eclipse, unlike a solar eclipse where it is possible to permanently damage the eyes by watching without special protective glasses.

The Hayden Planetarium advises eclipse watchers to take along a pair of binoculars.

Two Injured In Accident

Two people were reported injured and an estimated $5,200 damage done in two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said cars driven by Joseph Irving Cherry of 6 Quail Ridge, Lori Ann Rapoza of Green Mill Run Apartments, and Dalton Earl Foreman of 709B Mills St. were involved in a 3:42 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Fifth Street.

The collision, which injured Cherry and Ms. Rapoza, caused an estimated $3,000 damage to the Cherry car, $1,200 damage to the Rapoza car and $500 damage to the Foreman vehicle, investigators said.

Cherry was charged with failing to stop for a red light in connection with the mishap.

An estimated $250 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 10:50 a.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenville Boulevard.

Police identified the drivers of the vehicles as Homer Brown Louya Jr. of Route 2, Greenville, and DeLores Ann Elks of Route 4, Greenville.

creased fee - or $280 an acre if they are required to absorb the cost twice.

"Last year, I paid about 60 cents a pound (to lease) on the average," said Harold Allen, a Harnett County tobacco farmer.

"They (the allotment holders) already are facing a 10 percent cut in quota. So, if I paid 10 percent more, they'd just get the same amount they did last year just for that. Then they'll have this fee to pay, and they'll tack that on."

John H. Cyrus, head of tobacco affairs in the N.C. Department of Agriculture, says many farmers are just beginning to realize that the allotment holders are adding on the no-net-cost fee to the lease price.

Lady Pirates Begin Road Trip Versus Notre Dame

A Staff Report
East Carolina University's women's basketball team opens a long road trip Thursday afternoon, visiting Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind.

The current trip includes three other stops before the Pirates get a chance to come back to Greenville — and even then, it's only for a rest stop before hitting the road for six more games before finally coming home on February 2 against nationally ranked Old Dominion.

East Carolina and Notre Dame clash at 4 p.m. Thursday. Their next game will be on Monday at Western Kentucky, followed by a Tuesday date at Belmont in Nashville, Tenn. They wind up the trip next Thursday, Jan. 6, at Cincinnati.

The Lady Pirates take a 4-2 record into the road trip, having won their last two against St. Peter's and Appalachian State, both home games. On the road, the Lady Pirates are 1-2.

"We're coming to a very, very challenging portion of our schedule," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "Now the big test comes for our players on the road. We are playing highly competitive teams."

"We are excited about

ECU Beats Wildcats

East Carolina withstood a late rally by the University of New Hampshire and pulled out a 72-64 victory over the Wildcats last night in its first home game in nearly a month and only its second of the season.

A Youth Night crowd of 3,500 watched the Pirates build up a 12-point lead three-quarters of the way through the second half, only to lose ten of that to the Wildcat rally. But the Pirates pulled away again to lead by the final eight-point margin before it was over.

The Pirates, playing for the first time in ten days, boosted their record to 4-3 with the victory, winning their second game in a row.

New Hampshire, which faces Duke University tonight, falls to 2-4 on the year.

The Wildcats went with a zone defense throughout most of the ball game before the Pirates finally held the ball out and forced them to go to a man-to-man defense.

Ironically, it was only then that the Wildcats got back into the game, outscoring the Pirates, 13-3, before ECU finally got going again.

"The zone they played made us look rusty (in the first half)," Coach Charlie Harrison said afterwards. "We've been awfully tentative against zones before."

Harrison had some mixed emotions about how his defense played, noting that the Pirates took New Hampshire out of its offense, forcing it to go one-on-one with ECU. But, during that play, the Wildcats were able to get second shots.

Eventually, the Pirates held a rebounding edge against the 'Cats, 37-35, outrebounding them, 22-19, in the second half. Freshman center Johnny Edwards led the Pirates with 11 rebounds, while forward Dan Nolan had an equal number for the Wildcats. Charles Green added eight and Barry Wright picked off six for the Pirates.

East Carolina suffered from some off-target shooting in the first half, hitting only 47.1 percent — 16 of 34, while New Hampshire banged through 14 of 25 for 56 percent. That, at times, caused the Pirates to trail by as many as five points through the first half of the opening period. Many of the shots taken by the Pirates in the half were outside shots as the zone kept them from getting it in much of the time.

"I considered bringing them out of the zone earlier," Harrison said, "but as long as we were up... We were getting good shots, we just weren't hitting. People play you a zone and give you the outside shot gambling that you won't make that shot."

For a while there, the Pirates didn't.

Two free throws by Nolan gave the Wildcats the first lead over two points at 8-5 with 16:06 left in the half. Then, after four exchanges of baskets, Karl Hicks hit from underneath and Nolan followed with a dunk to run the lead to 18-13 with 11:12 showing. He had the opportunity to up it to six, getting fouled on the dunk, but he missed from the stripe.

A 20-foot jumper by Robin Dixon made it five, 22-17, for the last time with 9:27 left.

Tom Brown then hit from 15 feet out and Bruce Peartree dropped in a layup to cut the gap to one. Barry Wright scored to put the Pirates ahead for good, 23-22 with 7:35 remaining.

Wright scored again from underneath and Green hit the second of two free throws to run the lead to 26-22 before New Hampshire finally broke the ice with a tip-in by Hicks.

East Carolina ran the lead out to six, 32-26, before the Wildcats rallied to cut it back to 36-34 at the half.

In the second half, the Pirates looked a little more like their old selves, quickly moving out to a seven point lead, and eventually running that to 12.

"I told them they'd have to start making some offense and after Peartree made the first of two free throws, Rodney Johnson hit two at the line and Dixon scored off the fast break to cut the lead back to just two points, 63-61, with 2:17 remaining to be played.

But Tony Robinson made two free throws and Vanderhorst added two more with 59 seconds to go to put the Pirates back up by six. The Pirates added five of six more down the line to wrap up the win holding New Hampshire to just one basket and one free throw in the final minute of play.

"New Hampshire is a good team, not a great one, but a good one," Harrison said.

Chargers Rally To Edge North Lenoir

WHEAT SWAMP — Ayden-Grifton rallied with a fourth-quarter spurt to defeat North Lenoir, 59-56, in the opening round of the Tri-County Holiday Basketball Tournament Tuesday night.

The Chargers will face South Lenoir in the championship game Thursday night at 8:30. South Lenoir (5-2) rallied from a 10-point halftime deficit to nip Greene Central, 55-53.

The Rams (0-8) will play North Lenoir (2-5) for third place tonight at 8:30.

The girls' finals, scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday, will pit Ayden-Grifton (3-4) against Greene Central (6-1). A-G downed South Lenoir, 65-35, and the Lady Rams edged North Lenoir, 48-47.

South Lenoir (3-3) plays North Lenoir (5-2) tonight at 7 o'clock in the girls' consolation game.

Ayden-Grifton, now 4-3, raced to a 17-11 lead after the first period only to have North Lenoir outscore the Chargers,

Final Hurrah For 'Bama's Bear Tonight

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The lined face grew even more wrinkled and his gaze seemed to drift off to some faraway time and some long-ago place as Bear Bryant, barely 24 hours away from his last hurrah, tried to recall where it all began.

For sure, it was more than a half-century ago when the game of football and Paul William Bryant began to work their wonders together at Fordyce High School in the Arkansas bottomland.

"I'm not sure, but I think I played two games in one week," the great Alabama coach said Tuesday as he lounged in his hotel suite and tried to dismiss tonight's Liberty Bowl game against Illinois, his final bow, from his mind.

One thing of which he is certain is that the first game in which Bear Bryant played was the first one he ever saw.

"I had never seen a full football game, but I slipped in and saw part of one," he reminisced. "I played guard, but I didn't really know what position I was playing."

"But I remember my first practice before I played in a game. I wore street clothes and my only pair of shoes.

LIBERTY BOWL

Bryant Writes Last Chapter Of Finest Coaching Career Ever Against Illinois

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The final chapter will be written tonight to the most successful coaching career in the history of college football.

At the age of 69, Paul "Bear" Bryant is calling it quits after a 38-year head coaching odyssey that took him from Maryland to Kentucky to Texas A&M and finally back to his beloved alma mater, the University of Alabama, a quarter-century ago.

Whether Bryant bows out with 323 victories or the 322 he now owns — he passed Amos Alonzo Stagg's mark of 314 last season — is immaterial. And whether Alabama defeats Illinois in tonight's 24th annual Liberty Bowl game or suffers a fourth consecutive defeat for the first time in Bryant's reign, the Bear will leave a standard for success which many will strive for but few, if any, will reach.

From 1971 until this season, Alabama lost as many as three games only once. This year, the Crimson Tide lost four times and Bryant decided to pack it in. A 7-4 record might be utopia to some coaches; not Bear Bryant.

"If we were winning, I'd still be coaching," he said Tuesday, shortly before his last practice at the helm of the Crimson Tide, followed by an emotional farewell speech to the troops during which the crusty old Bear reportedly broke down and bawled a couple of times.

"I've been saying for 10 years that I wanted to coach as long as we were doing well," Bryant went on. "I didn't want the program to run down and then get out. I wanted to leave someone else good personnel, and that's what I did. I think I did what was best for the university."

"If there was ever a time to do right by the university after it's done so much for me, this was it. There's no doubt in my mind I did the right thing."

With Alabama's poorest record since 1970, this is not a typical Bear Bryant team. Nor was last year's squad, despite a 9-2-1 mark.

"My teams have always gone cheek-to-cheek and jaw-to-jaw, and we didn't have a lot of that this year," Bryant said. "But when it happened was not this year, but last year. If last year was 15 years earlier, I'd have gotten rid of six or seven guys right quick."

"Last year, two ordinary teams beat us, and that hadn't happened but one time in 15 years. I thought this year's personnel would be around the top fighting for the national championship. I thought it would be a great team late in

UNC Whips Tech, Looks To Sooners

HONOLULU (AP) — North Carolina had no sooner defeated Texas Tech than Tar Heels Coach Dean Smith began worrying about how to beat the Oklahoma Sooners in the semi-finals of the Rainbow Classic.

"What we've got to work on," Smith said, "is finding some way between now and 6:40 p.m. (Wednesday) to stop Oklahoma. They're an excellent team and we're going to have trouble with them."

The Tar Heels easily downed Texas Tech 79-47 Tuesday night, while the Sooners had to fight off a persistent Virginia Tech team on the way to a 88-86 overtime victory.

Smith gave his Tar Heels good grades for defense, saying, "I thought we played very aggressive defense and we played well. Offensively, we

North Carolina was led by Brad Dougherty and Matt Doherty, who each scored 15 points.

"Brad Dougherty and a couple of others got some points for us, and I think we managed to get a good game out of it," he said.

Oklahoma Coach Bill Tubbs

During the five-minute overtime period, the Sooners relied on the shooting of forward David Little. It was his four free throws in the last 35 seconds that sealed the victory.

NCSU Rally Fells West Virginia

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano says he wasn't worried when the Wolfpack trailed West Virginia by 11 points in the first half, but he added he wouldn't have minded being somewhere else.

"I looked at my brother and said, 'Get Mom and Dad and let's go get a pizza,'" Valvano said, smiling.

He was able to smile after the 17th-ranked Wolfpack beat No. 20 West Virginia 67-59 Tuesday night to boost their record to 5-1, but there were some tense moments during the game.

No. 11 Arkansas outlasted unheralded St. Peter's 52-48 in the first game of a doubleheader at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

Valvano said he wasn't at all surprised to see the Mountaineers race to an 11-point lead.

"There's a tendency to say we played poorly, but they played great. I thought they were outstanding. They were quicker than we thought they were. We needed some type of run," he said.

The Wolfpack got two runs, one in each half.

North Carolina State, which scored 16 straight points in the first half to rally from the 11-point deficit, ran off 10 straight points early in the second half to take a 50-37 lead. After leading 27-16 in the first half, West Virginia went 6:43 without a point and went scoreless for 3:18 in the second half.

Guard Derek Whittenburg scored 19 points and Thurl Bailey, a 6-foot-11 senior who shifted between center and forward, added 18 points, 12 rebounds and nine blocked shots to key the Wolfpack.

Whittenburg was outstanding in the second half, scoring 13 of the Wolfpack's first 18 points, including a trio of three-point field goals.

"That shot's almost normal for me," said Whittenburg, referring to the three-point field goal range from 19 feet, 9 inches and beyond. "I'm normally a 21-22 foot shooter. I love those threes."

"When Whittenburg gets revved up he can fire. He can put it in," Valvano said.

Forward Lester Rowe scored 20 points and guard Greg Jones added 18 as West Virginia fell to 8-2.

St. Peter's put a scare into Arkansas in the first game, which wasn't decided until Alvin Robertson's three-point play in the final 10 seconds.

Robertson scored 15 points and center Joe Kleine, who at 6-foot-11 was at least five inches taller than all the St. Peter's players, led the Razorbacks with 16.

Robertson was fouled after pulling down a rebound of

Kansas State Beats Tigers

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Kansas State Coach Jack Hartman is pleased with the victory that put his team in tonight's championship game of the Sun Carnival basketball tournament, but he isn't necessarily bragging about it.

Les Craft scored 18 points and Fred Marshall had 14 as the Wildcats beat the Clemson Tigers 60-54 Tuesday night to earn the right to play Southern Methodist at 9 p.m. in tonight's tournament finale.

SMU came from behind to beat Texas-El Paso 74-66.

"We just played a better basketball game than they did," Hartman said of the Tigers. "It wasn't a collector's item. But we played well enough to win."

Kansas State, 5-4, took a 30-23 lead at the half, but Clemson pulled to within a point in the first five minutes of the second half.

Craft, who reeled off four consecutive baskets as the Wildcats pulled away, had 15 of his 18 points in the second half. Marshall scored 12 of his 14 points in the first half.

"Marshall was a spark plug for us on offense in the first half, and Craft began to assert himself well in the second," Hartman said.

Clemson Coach Bill Foster was disappointed in his team's shooting.

UCLA 'Dunks' Louisville; Hoyas Roll

By The Associated Press

Louisville basketball Coach Denny Crum admits he's a bit of a gambling man — a couple of bucks on a golf game or a quarter in a slot machine — but he says he didn't bet on the Cardinals' game against UCLA.

With 2:35 to play and the score tied 72-72, he called a timeout, and it appeared he would wager that his Cardinals could either hold the ball for the last shot or draw a foul.

Instead, UCLA forward Darrin Daye stole the ball from Rodney McCray, and center Stuart Gray hit a slam-dunk that gave the No. 5 Bruins a 76-72 victory over the 13th-ranked Cardinals Tuesday night.

"At the end, we were looking for an inside play and not just the last shot," Crum said. "We were trying to score."

Twice, UCLA rallied from 10-point deficits in the second half. Gray, a 7-foot sophomore, scored all of his career-high 14 points in the second half, hitting each of his seven field goal attempts while playing with four fouls.

"The coach stuck with me and the team stuck with me," said Gray, who spent most of his freshman year on the bench. "I know when I had four fouls they tried to foul me out, but I didn't change my style."

"At halftime I said to myself, 'You're a big slow center.' I don't mind it when other people say it or write it, but when I say it to myself I get mad."

The Cardinals, 8-2, led 44-34 at the half and 64-54 with 11 minutes to play before the Bruins, now 7-1, surged ahead.

Rod Foster scored 16 points for UCLA, while center Charles Jones topped Louisville with 18.

Ranked teams were involved in three tournaments. Sixth-ranked Alabama defeated Southern Cal 74-61, and 10th-ranked Georgetown clobbered Wisconsin 71-43 in the first round of the Winston Tire Classic at Los Angeles. No. 8 Tennessee downed San Jose State 50-42, and 15th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas walloped Wagner 120-70 in the opening round of the Las Vegas Holiday tournament.

In a doubleheader in the New Jersey Meadowlands, No. 11 Arkansas edged St. Peter's 52-48, and 17th-rated North Carolina State beat No. 20 West Virginia 67-59.

Top Ten
Ennis Whatley scored 20 points as Alabama, 7-0, earned the right to meet Georgetown for the title in the Winston Classic. The score was tied 28-28 at halftime, but Alabama outscored Southern Cal 10-2 to open the second half. Bill Martin scored 14 points as Georgetown breezed to a 26-point halftime advantage over Wisconsin.

Tennessee will meet Nevada-Las Vegas for the title of the Las Vegas Classic. The 8-0 Volunteers got 24 points from junior guard Michael Brooks to beat San Jose State. In his first game, transfer Jeff Collins scored 25 points to pace Nevada-Las Vegas to its one-sided victory over Wagner.

Iowa, 7-1, takes on Seton Hall in Wednesday's final of the Rochester Classic. Michael Payne hit two free throws late in the game to help the Hawkeyes hold off James Madison. Seton Hall upset St. Bonaventure 76-74 in overtime in the opener.

Tournaments
Les Craft scored 18 points to lead Kansas State over Clemson, 60-54, in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas. Kansas State meets Southern Methodist, a 74-66 victor over Texas-El Paso, in the tournament final. Chuck Anderson had 17 points for SMU.

Terry Lewis scored nine of his game-high 19 points in the final eight minutes to help Mississippi State beat Tulane 51-47 in the first round of the Sugar Bowl Classic at New Orleans. Graylin Warner scored 22 points to give Southwestern Louisiana a 71-66 victory over Michigan State in the other game.

Cliff Pruitt and Jerome Mincy scored 19 points apiece as Alabama-Birmingham clobbered Alaska-Anchorage 102-60 in the UAB Classic at Birmingham, Ala. Birmingham meets Murray State, a 93-63 victor over Fordham, in Wednesday night's final.

Maurice Davis and Linwood Davis scored 21 points apiece to lead Jacksonville over Iowa State, 78-60, in the first round of the Gator Bowl tournament at Jacksonville, Fla. Jacksonville will meet rival Florida in the title game Wednesday night. Florida got 19 points from Eugene McDowell to clobber Penn State 82-60, giving Coach Norm Sloan his 49th career victory.

Reserve Michael Johnson scored 15 points to help New Mexico over Butler, 72-61, in the first round of the Lobo Invitational at Albuquerque, N.M. Princeton, led by freshman John Smyth's 20 points, won the other game, 67-39, over Weber State.

Oregon State won the right to meet Idaho for the title of the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore. The Beavers beat Lamar 76-61, and Idaho defeated Oregon 56-53. In the two consolation semifinals, Tennessee State downed Drake 66-63, and Portland defeated Montana State 66-44.

Four tournament champions were crowned Tuesday night. South Alabama beat Northeastern 87-61 in the title game of the Senior Bowl at Mobile, Ala., and Marquette downed Cincinnati 69-52 to win the Milwaukee Classic. Vanderbilt captured the Music City tournament at Nashville, Tenn., with an 85-71 victory over Manhattan, and McNeese State beat Austin Peay 66-60 for the crown of the Cowboy Classic at Abilene, Texas.

Bear's Final Hurrah...

Before the game, I went and had cleats put on those shoes. They were nailed on and I couldn't take them off. I was so proud of those cleats. You could hear them clomp when I was walking. I had to wear them all the time, either that or go barefoot."

Since the Alabama team arrived here Sunday, the 69-year-old Bryant has been Memphis' main attraction. Cameras and gawkers are everywhere and everyone wants to cast their eyes on the winningest, most famous coach in history. The final tally sheet will show either 322 or 323 victories for the old man, who announced his retirement two weeks ago after 38 years as a head coach, the last quarter-century at Alabama, his alma mater.

Bryant played there in 1933-34-35 and then served as an assistant under Frank Thomas for four years.

His first head coaching job was at Maryland in 1945 and his first game was against Guilford at College Park, Md.

"I remember that well. The Green Bay Packers were in town to play the Washington Redskins and George Marshall, who owned the Redskins, was a good friend of mine. He got me the Maryland job. He invited Don Hutson (a Packer star and Alabama teammate of Bryant) and me to dinner the night before."

"I heard Guilford had a bunch of ringers from the service, but Hutson said, 'If you have to worry about beating this team, you better get out of this profession.'"

"I had 19 servicemen with me from North Carolina Pre-Flight and they probably knew more football than me." "But who knows more football nowadays than the Bear? Lordy, he has seen just about everything there is to see and coached just about every place there is to coach and won just about everything there is to win. The record as a college player, assistant coach and head coach is 383-100-25 and 45 of 'Bear's Boys' have gone on to become college or professional head coaches themselves."

"So many years and so many teams," Bryant said. "The 1950 Kentucky team, you couldn't hardly score on them, but I don't know how they'd do now. I thought the team I played on was the best then, but I couldn't make anybody's team now. The 1956 Texas A&M team (9-0-1) was just awesome. I tied the one game, they didn't do it. The 1961 Alabama team, nobody could score on us (25 points in 11 games). The 1966 team might be the best I've ever had; they had such speed and great balance. We had a heck of a team in 1979 and great teams when Marty Lyons and all those guys were playing (1977-78)."

"I always said Pat Trammell was my favorite player because he died so young, but I have so many favorites I couldn't point out who they all were. Little Pat is in school at Alabama now on an all-around scholarship and he made the dean's list this semester." Memories are made of this. Memories.

"Heck, I don't know. Everybody asks me that. This might surprise you, but the first team I had at Texas A&M that won only one game, I'm awful fond of them. So many times they could have quit, but they hung in there and lost some games by only one or two points. When you've been in it as long as I have, it's really hard to pick out things. If you do, you forget something and hurt people's feelings."

DHC Girls Advance In Tourney

HOLLYWOOD — Hosting D.H. Conley, defending State 4-A champ Goldsboro, defending tournament champ C.B. Aycock, and Rose High School came away with first round victories last night in the Conley Holiday Girls Tournament.

Mechio Konegay led Conley with 23 points while Irish Barnhill had 13 and Karen Barrett had 10. Kim Hull led Southern Wayne with 15.

Rose had little trouble with Farmville Central in the opening game of the event, rolling up its 40-point victory. The Ramettes enjoyed a 44-23 rebounding edge in the game, and while having 27 turnovers of its own, forced 41 by the Lady Jaguars.

Rose eased out into a 13-8 lead in the first period of the game, then shot away in the second quarter. Rose outfit Farmville, 23-5, in that frame to run out to a 36-13 lead by halftime.

In the third period, Rose continued to pull away, out-hitting the Jags, 18-11, to up the lead to 54-24. They polished off Farmville, 19-9, in the last quarter to wind up it.

Alma Atkinson led Rose with 23 points while Linda Winstead added 19. Stephanie Newton led Farmville with 15.

Conley, playing the final game of the day, jumped away to a big 16-1 lead after one period and was never in danger after that. The Valkyries came back with a 13-8 margin in the second period, building up a 29-9 lead at the half.

Southern Wayne rallied in the third period, outscoring Conley, 19-11, trimming the lead back to 40-28. But Conley regained command in the final period with a 20-13 margin.

The Valkyries downed Southern Wayne, 60-41, while Rose beat Farmville Central, 73-33. Aycock took West Craven, 78-48, and Goldsboro edged past North Pitt, 32-30.

In today's games, Farmville Central plays West Craven at 4 p.m., while North Pitt and Southern Wayne meet at 5:30. Rose and Aycock meet at 7 p.m. with Conley and Goldsboro colliding at 7:30 p.m. Games to decide first through eighth will be held on Thursday.

Conley, playing the final game of the day, jumped away to a big 16-1 lead after one period and was never in danger after that. The Valkyries came back with a 13-8 margin in the second period, building up a 29-9 lead at the half.

Southern Wayne rallied in North Pitt played the defending state 4-A champs to the wire before finally bowing when the Pant-HERS missed the final shot of the game.

The Pant-HERS had jumped out to a 6-4 lead in the first quarter, but couldn't hold it. Goldsboro came back with a 15-10 margin to take a 19-16 edge at the half. The Lady Cougars stretched that out to 27-22 during the third frame.

North Pitt then rallied and finally tied it up at 30-30, and had the chance to take the lead with about 15 seconds left in the game. Peggy Purvis was fouled, but missed on the first shot of a one-and-one.

Goldsboro's Toni Smith grabbed the rebound, but was fouled. She hit both ends of her one-and-one, providing the Cougars with the game winners. North Pitt came down and got off the final shot of the game, but missed.

Jennifer Dixon led Goldsboro with 10 points, while Delores Pittman had 12 for North Pitt.

16-8, in the second period to take a 27-25 lead at the half.

A-G, led by Tyrone Gay, who scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half, cut the North Lenoir lead to one (24-20). The Lady Rams cut the deficit to three (34-31) after three periods and then surged to a six-point lead midway through the final period and held on to win.

"We played pretty well," A-G coach Bob Murphrey said. "We were spotty on offense at times, but I thought we did what we had to do to win. Tyrone really came on in the second half."

Thomas Anderson led A-G with 17 points. Calvin Peterson added 13. North Lenoir was led by Maurice Thorbes with 22 points. Larry Johnson added 12 and James Fisher 10 for the Hawks.

In the other boys' game, Greene Central inched out to a 12-10 lead over South Lenoir after the opening period and then outscored the Blue Devils, 22-14, to take a 34-24 lead at the half.

South Lenoir closed the gap to 43-38 after three periods and still trailed by five with four minutes to go when the Rams made four straight turnovers and saw their lead evaporate.

"We just don't know how to win," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "We played really well last night but when it got tight we just didn't know how to win it."

The Rams placed three players in double figures, led by Theodore Edwards with 19 points. James Thompson added 12 and Clifton Joyner 10.

South Lenoir was led by Donald Ingram with 10 points.

In the girls' games, Greene Central used a follow shot by Cindi Hicks with three seconds left to nip North Lenoir.

Greene Central's Melody Bowen was fouled with five seconds left but missed the front end of a one-and-one. However, Hicks, who led all scorers with 19 points, grabbed the rebound and put it in to give the Lady Rams the win.

North Lenoir, which led for most of the game, jumped out to a 10-6 lead after the first period and maintained that four-point lead at the half (24-20). The Lady Rams cut the deficit to three (34-31) after three periods but could not take the lead until Hicks' follow shot.

Cynthia Jones added 14 points for Greene Central. North Lenoir was led by Helen Wooten with 13 points and Veronica Chapman with 10.

In the other girls' game, A-G led, 12-9, at the end of the first period and then blistered South Lenoir in the second period, outscoring the Lady Blue Devils, 22-6, to take a 34-15 lead at the half.

The Lady Chargers then coasted home with the win in the second half.

A-G was led by Cora Faison with 23 points and Linda Brown with 18. Danita McCotter added 12 for A-G. South Lenoir was led by Jimi Hill with 12 points.

Pirates Hit Road — Again

East Carolina's Pirates strike up their Willie Nelson tune again Thursday, on the road again to face George Mason in the first ECAC-South game of the year for the league.

The Pirates face GMU and high scoring Carlos Yates at 7 p.m. on the Patriots' home court in Fairfax, Va. Thursday night.

Yates is the conference's leading scorer, hitting approximately 25 points a game. East Carolina's Johnny Edwards, at 18 a game, was second in the league's last listing.

"I would rather finish our pre-season games first and then go into our conference schedule," East Carolina Coach Charlie Harrison said. "But it doesn't work like that. Playing a game here on Tuesday, then at George Mason on Thursday, with Virginia Tech (on the road) and James Madison (at home) next week is not what I'd like."

"But that's the deal of the cards and you'll have to play 'em."

Following the GMU game, the Pirates travel to Virginia Tech for a game on Tuesday, then host the Dukes of James Madison, last year's regular season ECAC-South winner and an NCAA participant, here on Saturday, Jan. 8.

spending some time with our players away from school. A big part of athletics is meeting people, seeing the country and learning. Our mind will be on basketball, but we also want them to grow socially. Our academic responsibilities will not be present (due to the semester break) and we'll concentrate on basketball."

Mary Denkler currently leads the Pirates in scoring with a 27.3 average, fifth best in the nation. She's also the leading ECU rebounder with a 9.5 average.

Guard Loraine Foster is the only other player in double figures, hitting 16.8, but freshmen Delphine Mabry is coming on strong, having worked into the starting lineup with an 8.8 average.

"They're on a two-game trip down here and this was the game they wanted to win to get a split. And I'm sure that they felt they had a chance to get us."

East Carolina, which shot 50 percent in the second half to UNH's 38.7 percent, finished the game with four players in double figures. Edwards and Peartree both finished with 18, while Green had 14 and Wright had 10.

Dixon had 21 and Nolan, 20, to lead the Wildcats.

East Carolina returns to action on Thursday at Fairfax, Va., meeting George Mason in the first ECAC-South game of the year.

The Potato Is Pleasing New Palates

By JOHN KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer
BOISE, Idaho (AP) — U.S. producers and growers say the potato, a staple of the American diet, is winning converts among foreign palates as well.

Although U.S. potato exports are only a fraction of the total market, producers say they are making inroads abroad with the help of fast-food hamburger stands that serve french fries. The greatest potential seems to be the Far East, where rice long has been the traditional food staple.

Processed potato products, the U.S. producers say, have been their major success overseas.

The Agriculture Department, meanwhile, recently reported the potato "now ranks as a favorite vegetable that's low in calories and high in nutrition with both U.S. shoppers and with consumers as diverse as those in Japan, Hong Kong, Western Europe and Latin America."

Roger Jones, a potato processor and member of the Idaho Potato Commission, said that 10 years ago, none of his crop was exported. Now, about 40 percent — eight million or nine million pounds — is sold outside the United States.

Japan grows nearly as many potatoes as Idaho, which produces more than one-fourth of the total U.S. crop. China grows more potatoes than the United States, officials say, but Asians traditionally have used potatoes as animal feed and to make paper.

However, the Japanese now are eating more beef than ever, and potato growers are pushing spuds to go with the steaks and hamburgers. The Japanese now are the leading importers of U.S. potato products.

"The Far East is our major market today," Jones said. "That will grow because of Westernization."

Although foreign markets are expanding, U.S. producers face some obstacles. Japan, for instance, imposes import restrictions on processed potato products, and European nations grow potatoes that compete with imported spuds.

Arab countries show some promise as potato consumers, Jones said, but sales to South America are in question because of the political instability of some countries there.

J.R. Simplot Co., which supplies McDonald's with french fries, says its marketing program abroad is in its infancy.

Harold Butler of Simplot International said that in past years, the company has struggled just to keep up with the domestic demand. But with domestic demand leveling out, a small staff has been assigned to cultivate foreign markets, he said.

Joe French of Ore-Ida Foods Inc., another potato products giant, said fast-food restaurants in the Far East buy french fries for their customers. "They are extremely eager to adopt Western, fast-food lifestyle, if you will," he said.

Bill Webster, president of the National Potato Promotion Board, said exported potato products accounts for only 4 percent of the annual potato production of about 300 million hundredweight. (A hundredweight is 100 pounds).

"I think we can increase that," he said.

The promotion board, which funds potato promotions, is administered through the Department of Agriculture. Most of the money goes for domestic promotions, but Webster said the board can do more for the spud in foreign countries. "It's coming, it's a tremendous export market," he said.

Supports Rise For Shorn Wool

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government supports for shorn wool marketed in 1983 will be $1.53 per pound, up from $1.37 for wool sold this year, says the Agriculture Department.

Mohair supports will be about $4.63 cents a pound, compared to $3.98 for mohair marketed in 1982.

Endangered By Eating Plastic

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Discarded plastic bags eaten by endangered leatherback sea turtles are killing the giant reptiles who mistake the floating debris for jellyfish, their favorite food, according to scientists.

"Autopsies of leatherbacks have revealed stomachs and intestines blocked by plastic sandwich bags, potato chip bags, trash bags and other plastic items," said Robert C. Schoelkopf, director of the Marine Mammal Stranding Center in Atlantic City, N.J.

The International Center for Endangered Species has asked plastic manufacturers to cooperate in publicizing the problem.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members were recorded on major roll call votes in the closing days of the lame-duck session of the 97th Congress.

HOUSE
CRUISE SHIPS — The House passed, 227 for and 172 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 3191) allowing persons attending a convention on a cruise ship to claim the voyage as a business tax deduction. The bill applies to conventions on U.S. flag ships that stop only at "North American area" ports of call during the con-fab.

Sponsor Fortney Stark, D-Calif., said the bill would make U.S. cruise ships "competitive with U.S. hotel facilities and create jobs in the cruise ship industry," at a "negligible" cost to the Treasury.

Opponent Don Pease, D-Ohio, called the bill "a tax loophole for well-off Americans" and said "try to tell the average citizen that a convention held aboard a cruise ship is not a vacation in disguise."

Members voting yes wanted cruise ship conventions to be tax deductible.

Reps. Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Eugene Johnston, R-6, and Charles Rose, D-7, voted yes.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2; Ike Andrews, D-4; W.G. Hefner, D-8; James Martin, R-9; James Broyles, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted no.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-1, did not vote.

'CONTEMPT' — The House voted, 259 for and 105 against, to cite Anne Gorsuch for contempt of Congress for her refusal to provide a House committee with Environmental Protection Agency "Superfund" documents the panel had subpoenaed.

EPA Administrator Gorsuch said that with President Reagan's backing she would withhold the documents under the "executive privilege" doctrine. The criminal citation now rests with the U.S. attorney, although the Justice Department is seeking to change it to a civil proceeding.

Supporter James Howard, D-N.J., said the proceeding was necessary "to assure that this Congress may meet its responsibilities under the Constitution to the people we represent."

Opponent Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said the contempt action "won't solve any real environmental problems" and that the House could have averted it through additional negotiations with the EPA.

Members voting yes wanted to cite Gorsuch for contempt of Congress.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal and Hefner voted yes.

Johnston, Martin, Broyles and Hendon voted no.

Jones and Rose did not vote.

CARIBBEAN BASIN — The House passed, 260 for and 142 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 7397) to give Caribbean nations greater access to U.S. markets, stimulate U.S. investment in the Caribbean, and provide direct financial aid to non-Marxist governments of the region. President Reagan backs the legislation as needed to assure political stability and economic growth in the Caribbean, while organized labor and other foes say the program will damage U.S. industries and take away U.S. jobs.

Supporter Clay Shaw, R-Fla., said "these countries right now are ripe for pickings off by the Communists."

Opponent John Burton, D-Calif., said "we could do a lot more for the Caribbean Basin if we could do something for the economy of this country."

Members voting yes favored the president's Caribbean Basin initiative.

Jones, Andrews, Rose, Martin, Broyles and Hendon voted yes.

Fountain, Whitley, Neal and Hefner voted no.

Johnston did not vote.

GAS TAX — By a vote of 36 for and 34 against, the Senate passed and sent to conference with the House a bill (HR 6211) to raise the federal gasoline tax from four cents per gallon to nine cents, effective next April 1. The bill, which is aimed mainly to raise money to repair highways and create jobs in the process, also permits larger trucks to use federal roads.

Supporter Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., said the bill was necessary to halt "the deterioration of the roads and bridges in this country."

Opponent Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said "I will not give the citizens a tax increase for Christmas."

Senators voting yes favored the higher federal gasoline tax.

John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

Despite this vote, conservatives later delayed adoption of the conference report on the bill — the final step before the measure went to the White House. The filibuster, which developed largely into a question of whether the GOP White House could continue its two-year-long control of the GOP Senate, eventually was broken on an 81-5 cloture vote.

Voting against cloture — to continue the talkathon — were GOP Sens. Jesse Helms and John East.

STOPGAP FUNDING — The Senate adopted, 55 for and 41 against, and sent to the president the conference report on HJ Res 631, which funds much of the government through next Sept. 30. The measure is a "stopgap" substitute for eight regular appropriations bills Congress has been unable to pass. It funds a pay hike for House members, scores of "pork barrel" and special interest projects, and basic operating budgets of several departments and agencies.

Supporter Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said "the sooner we adjourn and go home, the better off the Republic will be..."

Opponent Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., said his no vote was to protest "the shipshod, slapdash" condition of the appropriations process.

Senators voting yes supported the stopgap funding measure.

East and Helms voted no.

DOCTORS — By a vote of 59 for and 37 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to virtually prohibit Federal Trade Commission regulation of state-licensed professions. This was an attempt to go beyond pending language that banned FTC regulation of professional matters but allowed the FTC to regulate the business practices of doctors and other professionals. The vote occurred during debate on HJ Res 631 (see preceding vote).

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., who voted to kill the amendment, said the FTC should not meddle in professional matters regulated by states but "let us regulate anti-competitive practices" by doctors, lawyers and others.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, who sponsored the amendment, said it would stop the FTC's notorious fishing expeditions and disruptions into professions.

Senators voting no wanted the strongest possible restraint on FTC regulation of state-licensed professions, including a ban on regulated business practices.

East and Helms voted no.

See Decline In Fertilizer-Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year-end report by the Agriculture Department says that fertilizer use will probably decline in the 1982-83 season because of record crop output and weak commodity prices.

Fertilizer use "could be down at least 3 to 5 percent from 1981-82's depressed 21.5 million short tons (of 2,000 pounds each)," the report said.

Shipments in the fall were below a year ago, and "if the spring season lags behind last year, consumption could be down even more," it said.

Fertilizer prices at the farm next spring could average 1 to 2 percent lower than last spring. Stable or reduced demand, continued imports of nitrogen fertilizer and above-normal potash inventories will dampen price increases.

NEW ASSIGNMENT

MOSCOW (AP) — The former chief of the Communist Party propaganda department, relieved of his duties a month ago, has been named ambassador to Romania, the official Tass news agency says.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

The Lone Star Republic

On this day in 1845, Texas became the 28th state in the Union. But from 1836 until 1845, Texas was an independent nation. Originally, Texas was a province of Mexico, but Americans began to settle there in the 1820s. At first Mexico was eager to have Americans develop its territory, but, as more and more settlers arrived, Mexican President Santa Anna became afraid that the United States would try to take over the province. He closed Texas to further settlement and put the territory under martial law. In protest, a band of Texan patriots seized San Antonio in 1835, and on March 2, 1836, the Republic of Texas declared its independence from Mexico.

Some years ago in the bridge clubs of New York, there was a kibitzer who became known as the Rabbi — not because of his religion, but because he was inclined to pontificate on all aspects of the game. Although delivered with great seriousness, the validity of his observations was open to question on a practical basis. One of his favorite sayings was: "When the king is singleton, play the ace." Obviously, today's declarer had never heard of the Rabbi.

The auction was normal, even though three no trump was an absolute laydown. When North's Stayman inquiry elicited the information that South had a spade suit, it was natural for North to select the suit contract because of his ruffing value in clubs.

The hand was soon over. Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and led a trump to his queen and West's king. No matter what declarer did then, he could not avoid losing two more trump tricks and the ace of hearts for down one.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Princess Grace's Brother Wounded

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — John B. Kelly Jr., elder brother of the late Princess Grace of Monaco, was reported resting comfortably today in a hospital after he was shot resisting a robber.

The 55-year-old vice president of the U.S. Olympic Committee and a former Philadelphia city councilman was shot in the groin with a small-caliber pistol after he stopped at a service station to make a phone call, police said.

He apparently became lost on his way and called June Krauser, the woman hosting the party, for directions, Ms. Krauser said.

"I had just given him directions to my house," said Ms. Krauser. "He was repeating the directions back to me, then I said something and then he said nothing."

"Jack, are you there?" I said. I thought we'd been cut off, then I heard a commotion."

Station attendant Ann Lavelle, 21, was talking to her boyfriend on another telephone a few feet away when the shooting occurred.

"I saw him and his wife pull up to the phone and didn't think anything about it," she said. "Then I heard a thump, like he'd run into the booth or something and his wife came out of the car screaming."

He was taken to the Fort Lauderdale hospital, where he underwent surgery to repair damage from the bullet, which police said passed through his hip.

Monroe Death Wasn't Murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A claim by a private detective and writer that actress Marilyn Monroe was murdered 20 years ago is probably "a fabrication," officials have concluded after a 3½-month investigation.

The death of the platinum-haired starlet, an international sex symbol, was either suicide or caused by an accidental overdose of barbiturates, according to a 29-page document released Tuesday by the district attorney's office.

"The facts, as we have found them, do not support a finding of foul play," said District Attorney John Van de Kamp, adding no further investigation is planned.

Miss Monroe was found sprawled nude on a bed in her home Aug. 5, 1962. The county coroner at the time ruled her death a suicide by drug overdose.

Milo Speriglio, a private detective who claimed that the actress was murdered, promptly labeled the report "a cover-up."

"We know some of the witnesses lied to the district attorney's office," said Speriglio, whose agency has been investigating Miss Monroe's death for 10 years.

"The fact that I have a book on Marilyn out now has nothing to do with it," said Speriglio.

The district attorney's report said a murder would have required a "massive, in-place conspiracy" of everyone at the death scene, including "the actual killer or killers; the chief medical examiner-coroner; the autopsy surgeon... and most of all the police officers assigned to the case as well as their superiors."

The report added, "All known existing evidence causes us to believe that the (murder) story is a fabrication."

Van de Kamp said it was possible that while Miss Monroe's "ingestion of a lethal quantity of barbiturates was voluntary, she may have been in such a state of emotional confusion that she, herself, lacked a clearly formed purpose."

Speriglio said he intends to file suit in January seeking a grand jury investigation where witnesses would have to testify under oath.

"I'm very disappointed," he said. "I provided the district attorney with hard facts and evidence indicating that Marilyn Monroe was murdered. I gave him the identity of her killers."

Speriglio declined to reveal the identities to the press, describing them only as "a very famous political government appointee," "a prominent movie actor 20 years ago who is still alive today" and a doctor or person with medical knowledge.

Speriglio and Robert Slatzer, who contends he was secretly married to the actress on Oct. 4, 1952, in Tijuana, Mexico, claim Miss Monroe was killed shortly after the end of a romance with then-U.S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy.

CBS Film Offers Behind-The-Scene Look At Pageants

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — CBS wipes some of the rouge off America's wholesome beauty pageants and finds a few blemishes in tonight's "Miss All-American Beauty."

Although the movie is standard entertainment fluff, there are moments of mild discovery, when this slice of Americana is revealed to be more plastic than apple pie. It's nice to see that every contestant isn't Miss Congeniality, and all the girls aren't fast friends.

Sally Butterfield (Diane Lane, who was in "Six Pack" with Kenny Rogers) is a classical pianist who enters a beauty pageant only for the scholarship money. She's a good girl from a small Texas town and a loving, supportive family. The message is that even someone straight like Sally can be easily seduced by a pageant winner's glamorous lifestyle.

The behind-the-scenes look at the pageant provides the film's sharpest edge. "The higher the brow, the lower the score," advises Sally's coach, Agatha, a good-hearted woman played with daffy charm by Cloris Leachman. So Sally opts to perform a catchy commercial number rather than Beethoven.

To the chagrin of pageant officials, who would have preferred a more malleable and less intelligent winner, Sally bests the contestant who raises puppies as a hobby "in preparation for motherhood."

Sally's victory, it turns out, is her last independent act. She's now the property of the pageant and her public. Her time is everyone else's. A pageant official says she now symbolizes "the ideal American woman."

As such, she's coached to tailor her opinions to the middle of the road and middle-America. Her hobby, yoga, is deemed too foreign and becomes "aerobics." The existence of a boyfriend counters her image as the available girl-next-door, so she must say she hasn't "met the right man yet."

When a photographer catches Sally kissing her boyfriend Michael (Lance Kerwin), a pageant bigwig (Jayne Meadows) ruins the film.

"Miss All-American Beauty" doesn't strive for the satirical sophistication of the theatrical film "Smile" with Bruce Dern and Barbara Feldon. Morality points in the CBS movie are made more bluntly, as when a television newswoman corners the pageant winner in an elevator.

"Beauty is the measurement American women feel they must live up to," the reporter says. "Our viewers want to know, are you proud of propagating the myth of the perfect female, or do you realize you're simply a pawn in a male-dominated game? After all, Miss Butterfield, you must realize you're nothing more than a piece of meat."

That awareness doesn't come until later, when Sally sees a line of All-American Beauty Dolls — in bed clothes and cutesie outfits — modeled after her.

Meanwhile, Sally and Michael drift apart. She stops practicing her piano. And her mother (Alice Hirson), who once pushed her daughter into the pageants so Sally could acquire the finer things in life, does an about-face and rues her daughter's altered personality and outlook.

Sally also has a mystifying relationship with a slimy vice president of public relations for the pageant (David Dukes). Perhaps because this film anticipates an audience of impressionable young girls, all relationships are neutered. The result, however, is confusion about what really happened.

The real Miss America and Miss Universe pageants annually attract large TV audiences, selling romance and fantasy. Tonight's movie doesn't dig deep enough under the make-up, but at least it strips off a layer or two of gloss.

Patrons Give Works To National Gallery

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Gallery of Art has received paintings by eight major American and French artists, gifts that a curator called a

"spectacular addition to the collection."

"What a Christmas for the National Gallery," said director J. Carter Brown in announcing the gifts that come from the collections of two wealthy benefactors.

The paintings are by Americans George Bellows, Thomas Eakins, James Abbott McNeill Whistler and Edward Hopper, and French artists Henri Rousseau, Edouard Manet, Andre Derain, and Henri-Edmond Cross.

At a special meeting of the gallery's trustees Tuesday, the paintings were accepted. Brown called them "enormously welcome."

The gallery declined to estimate their value. Elizabeth Shaw, a vice president of Christie's, a New York art auctioneer, said it was impossible to put a price on them because "nothing comparable has come on the market for some time."

"It is an extremely generous gift," she said, "undoubtedly worth in the millions."

"It is a spectacular addition to the collection," said

John Wilmerding, the gallery's curator of American art. "These obviously are valuable paintings by very, very major artists. Each would be considered a major work by each of the artists."

Eight of the paintings come from the collection of the late newspaper publisher John Hay Whitney.

A ninth painting, Manet's "Ball at the Opera," which had been on exhibit at the gallery since 1976 as an anonymous loan, was given to the gallery, the bequest of Mrs. Horace Havemeyer. Painted in 1873, it depicts a carnival ball at the Paris opera house.

Whitney, who died last Feb. 9, had been the publisher of the now-defunct New York Herald Tribune, and the International Herald Tribune, and a National Gallery trustee from 1961 to 1979.

The Whitney trust also gave $2 million for future acquisitions.

The paintings from the Whitney collection are: "Club Night" by Bellows; "Baby at Play" by Eakins; "Wapping on Thames" by Whistler; "Cape Cod Evening" by Hopper; "Coast Near Antibes" by Cross; "Charing Cross Bridge, London" and "Mountains at Collioure" by Derain; and "Tropical Forest with Monkeys" by Rousseau.

Hopper and Cross were not previously represented in the gallery's collection, while the Bellows, Whistler and Eakins paintings enhance its holdings of those artists, Wilmerding said.

"They add to existing strength and don't simply repeat, but bring something new from these artists' works," he said.

The gallery called the Rousseau "one of his masterpieces from his late and best period." It depicts exotic scenes based on his observations in the Paris zoo.

The Bellows painting, done in 1907, was the first of six he did on the sport of prize fighting.

The Whistler painting is his only oil combining elements of portrait and landscape in a single work. Painted from an inn on the Thames river looking toward the warehouses of Wapping, it depicts the artist's red-haired mistress, Joanna Heffernan.

Hooper's painting conveys his typical introspective mood.

The two Derain paintings are examples of the "Les Fauves" movement, which was so-named because a critic identified its colorful works of its participants as "wild beasts."

The Cross painting is done with brilliant dots of pigment and is in the neo-impressionist style.

Truck Exhaust Standards Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Stricter federal pollution control standards for gasoline-powered heavy trucks will be delayed for a year to clear up questions about the rules, the Environmental Protection Agency says.

While the EPA wouldn't specify what those questions were, the immediate impact of its action is to give manufacturers until the 1985 model year to meet tougher standards for hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions.

After the announcement was made Tuesday, environmentalists accused the agency of breaking under pressure from the auto industry. They said the delay would condemn many cities to dirtier air.

Under current regulations, heavy trucks are required to reduce carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions by 90 percent - the same level currently met by cars using catalytic converters - starting with 1984 models.

The auto industry has fought this requirement, and a year ago the Reagan administration proposed repealing the standard for trucks as part of the president's regulatory reform package for the ailing auto industry.

The EPA said Tuesday it was considering several options to outright repeal of the standard.

David Doniger of the Natural Resources Defense Council said the EPA action would put more trucks on the road without proper pollution controls and make it harder for cities already battling to get vehicle pollution levels down.

USS New Jersey Rejoins Fleet After Long Layoff

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) - Guns boomed above hundreds of sailors and marines standing stiffly to attention as the renovated battleship USS New Jersey rejoined the Navy, almost 40 years after first sailing for war.

"Captain, the ship is manned," Cmdr. Richard B. McKenna, New Jersey's executive officer, reported at 1:36 p.m. Tuesday after nearly 1,500 sailors trotted aboard and lined the rails of the seagoing fortress draped with red-white-and-blue bunting.

"Admiral Watkins, the United States Ship New Jersey reports for duty," Capt. William M. Fogarty told Chief of Naval Operations James D. Watkins.

The patriotic ceremony to recommission the dreadnaught, which first saw duty in 1943 is rooted in traditions that were old when seamen fought with cutlasses amid black-powder clouds.

"Ship's company, atten-HUT." The command roared over some 10,000 guests and hundreds of white-hatted sailors snapped to attention as a squad of marines, scarcely a trace of hair showing beneath dress uniform hats, brought bayoneted rifles to present arms.

A ship's bell clanged to announce each arriving dignitary, most sporting sleeves and hats brimming with gold braid, and a battery of 44mm guns on the ship's portside fired booming, smoky 21-gun salutes to welcome President Reagan, who used the occasion to defend his defense policies.

"She's gray. She's had her face lifted. But she's still in the prime of life. A gallant lady, the New Jersey," Reagan said.

"This beautiful lady ... is everything any commanding officer could ask for if called upon to venture into harm's way," Fogarty said. The ship is "just plain tough."

Reagan officially accepted the nation's 514th warship.

DEVASTATING WEATHER — The dotted area on the map indicates the portion of the United States experiencing extreme weather conditions. A blizzard shut down major cities of the Midwest with one and a half feet of snow Tuesday and thousands of travelers were stranded as authorities closed miles of major highways. Cold air sweeping south from Canada collided with mild air from the Gulf of Mexico created weather havoc from Colorado to Michigan, with heavy rain continuing for a third day in the Gulf Coast states. More rain fell Tuesday on flood-ravaged parts of Missouri and Illinois. (AP Laserphoto)

Midwest Storm Moves Northward As East Basks

By The Associated Press
A fast-moving storm that dumped up to 18 inches of snow in the Midwest moved into Canada today, trailing gale-force winds that buffeted parts of Michigan and Illinois. Eastern cities enjoyed unseasonably warm temperatures — into the 70s as far north as Pittsburgh.

Storm warnings were still in effect in Michigan and western New York State today. Clouds hung from the Atlantic Coast to the mid-Mississippi Valley and southern Plains. Travelers advisories remained in effect for the east central Plains and the eastern slopes of the Sangre De Christo Mountains in New Mexico, the southern Panhandle and far western mountains of Texas.

Rain was predicted for tonight along the Gulf Coast and from the south Atlantic states to the Virginias and southern New England.

Snow was expected over the Great Lakes, spreading across Pennsylvania, New York and the interior sections of New England.

There was a slight chance of rain in central and southern California.

Sunshine was forecast from the Pacific Northwest to the southern Plateau and from the southern Plains to the upper Mississippi Valley.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 13 below zero in Butte, Mont., to 74 in Fort Lauderdale and Key West, Fla.

Here are other reports from key cities around the nation:

—East: Atlanta 49 fair; Boston 63 windy; Buffalo 34 windy; Charleston, S.C., 66 cloudy; Cincinnati 33 cloudy; Cleveland 34 cloudy; Detroit 31 cloudy; Miami 72 partly cloudy; New York 52 cloudy; Philadelphia 60 cloudy; Pittsburgh 36 fair; Washington 64 partly cloudy.

—Central: Bismarck 16 snow; Chicago 20 cloudy; Dallas-Fort Worth 31 partly cloudy; Denver 3 partly cloudy; Des Moines 12 snow; Indianapolis 30 cloudy; Kansas City 12 fair; Minneapolis-St. Paul 3 fair; Nashville 37 cloudy; New Orleans 54 rain; St. Louis 26 cloudy.

—West: Albuquerque 12 fair; Anchorage 41 cloudy; Las Vegas 33 cloudy; Los Angeles 54 cloudy; Phoenix 41 partly cloudy; Salt Lake City 18 cloudy; San Diego 55 partly cloudy; San Francisco 44 cloudy; Seattle 35 fair.

—Canada: Montreal 41 windy; Toronto 34 windy.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 30, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Adverse planetary aspects could cause delays early in the day but conditions improve later. Make sure your holiday activities are well planned. Make your New Year Resolutions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Fine time for going after your personal aims. Don't take risks of any kind today. Make long-range plans for the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Being with congenials and getting them to cooperate with you in your plans can bring excellent results at this time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't neglect work awaiting your attention instead of wasting time on less important matters. Strive for happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have good ideas now that should be put in operation without delay for best results. Handle business matters wisely.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Talk over business matters with close ties and come to a fine accord. Follow your true hunches and get excellent results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get together with associates and plan how to be more productive in the days ahead. Express true happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Do whatever you can to improve your environment today. Figure out a practical way to have more abundance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get busy and perfect your skills so that you can have greater benefits in the days ahead. Celebrating now is fine.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be practical in handling a civic affair and gain added prestige. Keep busy at important activities.

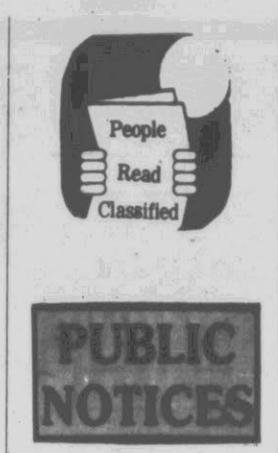

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Ideal day to obtain the information you will need later so that you can be more efficient at your regular work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be logical and rid yourself of financial worries early in the day. Take needed exercise. Strive for true happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can accomplish a great deal at this time, so get an early start. Allow time to engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those delightful young persons who will know how to gain the cooperation of others. Plan for a good education now and direct it along lines of business for best results. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
