Early Brawl Seen In New 98th Congress

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new 98th Congress, more Democratic than its predecessor, assembled today for the first time and headed toward what was shaping up as the first partisan brawl of 1983 on the House floor.

After swearing-in ceremonies scheduled for noon in both chambers, the House was scheduled to take up a package of controversial rules changes pushed by Democrats.

The changes would greatly strengthen the hand of Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and other Democratic leaders in controlling floor action. And Republicans, who are in the minority, may be powerless to stop them.

The new Congress convenes at noon today, when House members and senators elected in last November's elections will be sworn in.

This includes 81 freshman House members — 57 Democrats and 24 Republicans. There are also five new members of the Senate: Democrats Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico and Frank R. Lautenberg of New Jersey; and Republicans Chic Hecht of Nevada, Paul S. Trible of Virginia and Pete Wilson of California.

Overall, Democrats made a net gain of 26 seats in last November's congressional elections, for an expanded majority of 69-165, while Republicans retained their 54-46 edge in the Senate.

Congress is not expected to get down to legislative work until after the president's Jan. 25 State of the Union address.

The Senate just planed a one-day organizational session, but the House planned to meet through the week on the series of procedural changes Democratic leaders claim will enable them to run the chamber more efficiently.

Republicans are crying foul, saying the series of rules changes would sharply limit their legislative ability as the minority party.

One change was so controversial that Democratic leaders moved today to back away from it. It would have made it harder to bypass a committee and bring a proposed constitutional amendment — like the proposal for a balanced federal budget that surfaced last fall — directly to the floor.

Currently, 218 signatures — or a majority of the 435-member House — are required on a so-called discharge petition to make such an end-run around a hostile committee.

The proposed change would have required 290 signatures, or two-thirds, for any proposed amendments to the Constitution. But, facing opposition to the change from Democrats as well as Republicans, Democratic leaders said today they had decided against pushing for the measure at this time.

A second rules change would sharply restrict the offering of "non-germane" amendments to appropriations bills, making it harder in the future to use such bills as vehicles for social mandates — like restrictions on school busing or abortions.

Still another change would enable leaders to block time-consuming roll calls, like demands for recorded votes on routine motions, thus depriving Republicans of a commonly used stalling tactic.

"The proposed changes ... will concentrate more power in the hands of the speaker and further erode the democratic process in the House," complained House Republican Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

The changes were adopted by the House Democratic Caucus last month and go before the full House for ratification this month. Since such procedural changes usually receive party-line votes, Republican leaders were not optimistic for their chances of blocking them.

Outside conservative and church groups have also joined the battle, urging rejection of the restrictions on the constitutional amendments.

The House today was also expected to re-elect, on a party-line ballot, O'Neill as House speaker for another two-year term. O'Neill is from Massachusetts.

Tobacco Meeting

A county-wide tobacco meeting will be held Jan. 7 at 1 p.m. in the Agricultural Extension Service Office, second floor of the Pitt County office building.

Dr. Charlie Pugh, Dr. Gerald Peedin and Dr. N.T. Powell will be on the program and according to Roger Cobb, assistant agricultural extension agent, will discuss topics of interest to Pitt County farmers.

Dr. Powell is scheduled to speak on controlling disease and Dr. Pugh will speak on the tobacco program for 1983. Dr. Peedin will discuss varietal selection, sucker control and fertilization.

Warsaw Pact Is Meeting

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov and other top Kremlin officials left Moscow today for a Warsaw Pact summit in Czechoslovakia, Tass reported.

The delegation included Defense Minister Dimitri Ustinov, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Premier Nikolai Tikhonov and Konstantin Rusakov, secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee, Tass said.

Jones Avers Pay Vote A Real Saver

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Congressman Walter B. Jones, back in Washington today for the opening of a new session of Congress, explained his stand and vote on the automatic increase of pay for members of Congress and for 30,000 top government employees. There has been some confusion over whether Jones actually voted for or against the amendment.

"Under the provisions of law," Jones said, "government employees, including members of Congress, are entitled to an annual cost of year increase. For various reasons, mostly based on the general state of the economy, Congress has refused to vote in favor of the annual cost of living increase for the past four years."

Jones pointed out that members of Congress constitute only a small minority of the 30,000 "top flight" career employees in all branches of government. Our refusal to grant a cost of living increase was adversely affecting the careers of these people. Many of the best ones were leaving government.

"The first bill to come up on the cost of living increase was for a proposed 27.2 percent increase representing the four year period. I thought this was excessive and voted against it.

"A substitute bill for a 15 percent increase, I felt, was acceptable and that is the bill I voted for. There was an amendment that came up proposing that no cost of living increase be granted which I was against."

Jones added "If I had felt that voting for the 15 percent increase would have had an adverse effect on the economy, I would have been against it. However, I think it will actually cost taxpayers less in the long run as many of the top people would have retired. This would have put the government in the position of paying retirement to these people at an earlier date while at the same time hiring new people to fill their places."

The Farmville Democrat also commented on the new Congress and the issues which he feels are paramount as Congress goes into the 1983 session.

"Our most overriding problem is that of unemployment," Jones said. "When people are unemployed and receiving benefits, it's a continuing drain on government funds. I feel we must provide some strong public job services, something like the CCC in depression days, something to give people the dignity of having work."

Jones mentioned as another priority challenge that of "taking steps to make the Social Security program solvent, even if it means having to contain the cost of living increases. It's better," he said, "to have less than nothing at all. I don't want to see the government go the route of having to transfer general funds to the Social Security program."

As Chairman of the Committee of Merchant Marine and Fisheries, Jones said he's "very interested in seeing the bill on merchant marine regulatory changes passed. The House passed the bill by a vote of 380 to 22, but it's bogged down in the Senate now. There's been no changes made in the merchant marine regulations since 1916, so you can imagine that the changes are needed."

Jones noted that the 1983 Congress has a "predominantly Democratic House and a majority in the Senate, so I feel that 1983 will be a year where there will be some unusual situations coming up."

Sen. John East, Republican from Greenville, could not be reached this morning for comments on the new session of Congress.

Peace Session Still Unable To Fix Agenda

By EARLEEN F. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese, Israeli and American negotiators ended their third negotiating session today without agreement on an agenda for the talks on withdrawing foreign troops from Lebanon.

"We will continue our efforts to reach agreement on the agenda for the negotiations during our next meeting on Thursday, Jan. 6, at Kiryat Shmona, Israel," said John Reed, a spokesman for the U.S. delegation.

Lebanon's chief delegate, Antoine Fattal told reporters that "if we fail to reach such an agreement, it is possible that we might discuss the issues without an agenda. This is a possibility."

He said the main stumbling block for Lebanon was the "concentration by the Israeli side on normalization (of relations) between the two countries." However, he said he felt Israel was beginning to show "some kind of flexibility."

But Avi Pozner, spokesman for Israel's Foreign Ministry, said, "we cannot start deciding on the issues without an agenda."

Today's talks opened as police reported a sharp escalation of factional fighting that claimed 25 more lives in Syrian-controlled northern Lebanon and the Israeli-held central mountains.

he negotiating session was delayed three hours while Fattal and Israeli chief delegate David Kimche met with U.S. special envoy Morris Draper privately in the second floor conference room of this Beirut suburb's Lebanon Beach Hotel.

Some Respite In Louisiana Flood

By DEAN FOSDICK

Associated Press Writer

Skies were gray but no rain was falling today in Louisiana where President Reagan has promised aid "without delay" in the flooding that has caused $200 million in damage and forced 10,000 people from their homes.

It was cloudy across the central states, from Oklahoma to eastern Nebraska and through the upper Mississippi Valley, but no rain was forecast at least until Friday in the soggy states of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, the National Weather Service said.

It was a night of stinging cold in the southern Plains, with the mercury dipping to zero in Lubbock, Texas, and a record nine above father south in Midland, Texas. A cold front in the Northwest spread snow across eastern Washington and western Idaho and parts of Montana.

During a 1½-hour tour of the flood-stricken Monroe, La., area Sunday, Reagan promised the federal government would "provide every bit of assistance possible, and without delay."

Gov. Dave Treen, who has put 19 of the state's 64 parishes under a state of emergency, said he would make a formal request for federal disaster help once a final damage tally was made.

Reagan stopped in the northeast Louisiana city of 50,000 en route to Washington after a six-day California vacation.

The flooding began for much of northeast and central Louisiana the day after Christmas when up to 10 inches of rain fell in 36 hours. Bayous and rivers already brimming from above-average rainfall couldn't drain the surplus and waters surged onto saturated lowlands.

Heavy rain continued to fall over the Lower Mississippi Valley before the storm system finally moved out of the area Sunday. Some rivers weren't expected to crest until the middle of this week.

Flooding caused about $103 million in damage to the six hardest-hit parishes of Ouachita, Natchitoches, Catahoula, La Salle, Grant and Rapides, Treen said. The total could reach $200 million when state and federal officials complete their assessments, he said.

In comments from a sandbagged radio station, Reagan assured listeners he would approve Treen's request for a federal disaster declaration, opening the way for low-interest government loans.

Global Islam Uprising Is Called By Khomeini

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has called on Moslems to stage "a global uprising against the domination of the United States and the Soviet Union in Moslem countries," "the Iranian news agency reported today.

The first step is the acceptance that Islam "is a political-religious system of government, and not merely a religion distinct from politics," the Iranian patriarch was quoted as saying.

The leader of Iran's fundamentalist Islamic revolution was addressing participants from 40 states during Sunday's closing session of the first "world congress of Friday and prayer imams," in Tehran, the news agency IRNA reported. Imams are Islamic preachers who conduct Friday prayer meetings and deliver sermons.

Khomeini's call was adopted by the congress and incorporated in a 14-point resolution, IRNA said.

The news agency said the resolution stated that during Friday prayers "the threat of world blasphemy and Zionism should be pointed out to make Moslems aware of their duty to repel aggression against Islamic lands, especially in Palestine, Lebanon and Afghanistan."

The resolution also said that sermons should stress the indivisibility of religion and politics and prepare the ground for the creation in all countries of Islamic governments "supervised and led by committed clergemen and Islamic experts."

IRNA quoted Khomeini as saying that the world's major powers "have long preached the separation of religion from politics in the Moslim world..."

"Having realized long ago that as long as Islam is separated from its political and social dictates in any Moslim state, then they can succeed in exploiting that nation and determine its fate."

"Such questions can also be asked of the Soviet Union as well as the United States," he added.

Mixed Reaction Is Given On Proposal Of Mental Verdict

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Criminal Code Commission has decided to urge the Legislature to adopt a "guilty but mentally ill" verdict in state courts, but another commission has voted to recommend against the plea.

Supporters of the new plea argue that it would give juries an alternative to finding a mentally ill defendant innocent by reason of insanity.

"There is a feeling on behalf of those who have experienced a tragedy because of a mentally ill person that there ought to be some way to ensure that the mentally ill person be detained for treatment and that society be protected," said Allen Bailey, chairman of the Criminal Code Commission.

"We want to permit the court to have some latitude as to what happens."

But Mental Health Study

Commission members oppose the plan, saying the verdict could increase the length of trials and the dependence on specialized psychiatric evidence.

"We studied very thoroughly the legal and psychiatric aspects and feel that it is something that is not necessary nor would it be helpful to have in North Carolina," said Sen. Kenneth C. Royall Jr., D-Durham, chairman of the commission.

In a report approved last month, the mental health panel found said that to be found guilty of criminal behavior, there must be mental intent. But if a person suffered from a severe form of mental disease or defect at the time of the crime, he cannot be held accountable, the panel said.

Under the Criminal Code Commission proposal, a person who is found "guilty but mentally ill" would be sentenced as he would be on any guilty verdict, except that a person found guilty of a capital crime would be sentenced to life in prison instead of death.

If the judge determines that the defendant is suffering from a mental disease or defect, the judge must sentence him to a residential mental health treatment facility instead of prison.

Neither commission is recommending changing the state's standard for the insanity defense, in which a defendant must prove he did not know the difference between right and wrong at the time he committed a crime.

Advocates of the "guilty but mentally ill" proposal say too many people are ending up in the state's prisons when they should be in hospitals.

But the Mental Health Study Commission says the state does not have psychiatric facilities secure enough to stop convicts from escaping.

The Governor's Crime Commission has recommended delaying any such legislation pending further study.

Visine Pulled From The Shelves Due Allegation

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — A man alleging his eyes were irritated by Visine eyedrops refused to submit the medicine for analysis as the product was pulled off shelves in 39 area stores, police said.

James Smith, 47, of Youngstown, told police he was keeping the bottle of eyedrops as evidence.

"We're running into a problem area," police Sgt. Dana Childers said Sunday night. "The police officers who talked to him at the hospital — he refused to turn over the Visine. He's going to keep it for a lawsuit."

Visine eyedrops were removed from 7-Eleven stores in northeast Ohio Sunday as a precaution, store management said, while police continued to investigate Smith's complaint.

Childers did not know exactly when Smith had bought the Visine drops, although a police report indicated they may have been purchased Saturday.

"We're continuing the investigation," Childers said, adding, "The first thing I'd have to do is acquire a sample."

Stan Grossman, a lawyer for the New York-based Pfizer Co., which produces Visine, said Sunday evening that the company was not aware of the complaint but would look into it.

"The product has a seal around the top" of the bottle which would make tampering difficult, Grossman said from New York.

The decision to remove Visine from 7-Eleven store shelves in northeast Ohio, including the Youngstown and Cleveland areas, was made by John E. Brown of Cleveland, district manager of the chain of convenience stores.

He said all types of Visine eyedrops were removed from shelves "just as a precautionary measure" after he learned that Smith reportedly had bought the drops from a 7-Eleven store in Youngstown.

"We do not have any hard facts," Brown said. "Anything to be said about it now would be supposition."

Smith was treated for eye irritation Sunday morning and released from South Side Hospital, police said.

A woman who answered an emergency room telephone at the hospital said she could release no information about the case. Smith had no listed telephone number in Youngstown and could not be reached for comment.

In the most recent case involving Visine, a Reston, Va., woman was charged in November with giving a false police report after claiming she bought a tainted bottle of the eyedrops. Authorities have refused to discuss the nature of the charges.

Last October, after the deaths of seven Chicago-area residents from cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules, acid was found in Visine A.C. eyedrops in Junction, Colo.

In August, Alpha Beta stores in four southern California counties ordered Visine eyedrops pulled from their shelves after some bottles were found to be spiked with sulfuric acid. Three people from southern California were injured after using the drops.

State Publishes Careers Tabloid

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina has published a 24-page tabloid paper on selecting careers that will be distributed to employment offices, high schools and colleges, officials say.

The publication lists more than 200 occupations, with brief descriptions of salary, required training, where to get the training and how many job openings are projected in the state in a specific field.

There also are articles on community colleges, vocational education, financial aid and how to conduct oneself in a job interview.

Prison Suit 'Justified'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department was justified in filing suit against North Carolina over racial segregation of maximum security inmates at Central Prison, a civil rights attorney says.

"North Carolina has been flagrantly violating the law since 1973," said Irving Joyner of Raleigh. "Obviously, (the Justice Department) felt things had gone on too long."

State officials have said the segregation, involving about 600 black and white inmates housed separately in cells holding several men, was the choice of inmates and was designed to reduce tension in the overcrowded facility.

They contend the point will become moot when the first prisoners are transferred from the old prison to an adjacent, recently completed $28 million facility with single-occupancy cells.

Joyner scoffed at correction officials' contention that segregation was necessary to prevent racial violence.

"There's no history of violence between the races," he said of the state's prison system. "That's just a fear based on wild speculation."

State officials, in a Dec. 7 letter to the Justice Department, rejected a proposed consent order that would have desegregated the cells at Central Prison immediately, citing the upcoming inmate transfer to single cells in a more secure facility.

Governor's Pay Raise Could Lift The Ceiling

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to raise the governor's salary from $57,864 to $100,000 a year could lift the ceiling on salaries for other government officials, according to John A. Williams Jr., state budget officer.

Williams said the proposal would not affect Gov. Jim Hunt, whose term ends in 1984, but could help Hunt's successor and other officials.

Williams said the salaries for the state's top elected leaders, jurist and top employees are "all out of kilter."

"The thing that holds the whole thing down is the governor's salary," he said.

While he emphasized that nothing concrete had been done to ensure the salary change, Williams said legislative leaders had been discussing it privately.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey, who earns $13,860 a year, plus $345 a month and $50 a day when the Legislature is in session, said he would support raising the governor's pay.

Council of State members earn between $53,976 and $47,928, with the lower figure applying to most of the almost as much as Hunt earns and more than the $51,312 salary of Administration Secretary Jane Patterson.

"For a lot of these specialty jobs, you have to go out and pay what the market is setting, but we don't do that with all these other salaries," Williams said.

The $58,212 salary for Chief Justice Joseph Branch should be increased along with the governor's to provide a new ceiling for top officials' pay, he said.

The salaries for members of the Council of State, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and House Speaker Liston Ramsey also need to be revised to reflect levels of salaries being paid in state government, said Williams.

council members including the lieutenant governor.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

PREVENTING SPORTS INJURIES

No one would think of playing tackle football without wearing shoulder pads and a helmet. Yet, far too many youngsters play contact sports, without wearing protection for their mouths. This results in all too many cases of split lips, broken, chipped and knocked out teeth. For example, fifty two percent of all football injuries occur in unprotected faces and mouths.

The best way to prevent all this mouth damage, is to wear a mouth protector. Bars across football helmets don't do the same job. They don't protect the teeth and jaws from an upward blow on the chin — only from a blow straight against the face. Dental injuries to football players wearing proper mouth protectors have been almost completely eliminated.

Most old-style mouthguards, such as those we see boxers using, are not very easy to wear because they are bulky. Talking is just about impossible. Many players prefer to talk and be comfortable and risk the chance of injury rather than wear one. However, a modern mouthguard, made to an accurate model of a boy's mouth doesn't interfere with mouth breathing, stays in place when the mouth is opened, allows clear speech and is comfortable.

Wedding Vows Said On Sunday Afternoon

Mary Margaret Roberts and Alan Ray Taylor were united in marriage here Sunday afternoon at four o'clock in St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Lawrence P. Houston Jr. performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by Sharon Irwin, organist, and Mary Joanna White played the flute.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. E.D. Roberts of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Lee Taylor Jr. of Hookerton.

Sarah Roberts of Greenville was honor attendant for her sister. The bridegroom's father was best man and ushers included Paul Lee Taylor of Hookerton, brother of the bridegroom, and John F. Hardy of Durham.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a tea length gown of ivory chiffon over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with Brussels lace and satin. The fitted bodice was accented with an asymmetrical insert of Brussels lace and satin ribbon accented with pearls. The long fitted sleeves were enhanced with Brussels lace and finished in matching lace ruffled cuffs. The flared skirt fell to a ruffle of Brussels lace and satin ribbon. She carried a bouquet of ivory tea roses and baby's breaths with looped satin ribbons. She wore a wreath of flowers in her hair.

The honor attendant wore a tea length gown of teal blue taffeta designed with an off-the-shoulder ruffle and gathered skirt. The fitted waist was accented by a matching cummerbund and bow. She carried a long-stemmed red rose.

Cindy M. Taylor, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the register.

A reception was held at the church after the ceremony.

The couple will live in Gaithersburg, Md. after a wedding trip to the coast.

The bride graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is a consultant for Mary Kay Cosmetics. The bridegroom is employed with IBM in Gaithersburg, Md. He graduated from UNC-CH and North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

Grocer Spices Ads With Salty Comments

By STEVEN CHRISTENSEN

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Grocer Jerry Swensen doesn't just advertise bacon and bananas in the newspapers. He advertises the opinions of Jerry Swensen, on everything from Watergate to the meting out of local justice.

For the past 12 years, the owner of Swensen's Market has included small personal editorials in his ads. Food and thought often go together.

When Evel Knievel tried his motorcycle jump over the Snake River Canyon in 1974, Swensen thought the stunt amounted to a money-grubbing, over-publicized fraud — and ran his comments along with an ad for bologna.

An editorial on Richard Nixon and the Watergate scandal ran the same week the store was offering a special on turkeys.

Ad manager Bill Blake of the Twin Falls Times-News, the paper which carries Swensen's full-page promotions every Thursday, said most of the commentaries contain little objectionable material.

On one hot local issue, however, the grocer had to be reined in.

Swensen set out to blast the jury trying trapper Claude Dallas for the killing of two game wardens last year. The jurors last month returned a verdict of voluntary manslaughter.

"The first draft (of Swensen's commentary) was something we would classify as potentially libelous," said Blake. "The second version was toned down considerably."

The edited editorial was still strong stuff — for a grocery ad.

The commentary (alongside a promotion for poached eggs) said, "If you feel as if you'd like to put a couple of bullets between the eyes of the hippie poacher who killed two game wardens in front of a witness — but you wouldn't have the gall to plead self-defense — Swensen's suggests throwing a few eggs at the judge and jury."

"Of course, when presidential assassins can get off, it's no wonder that killers of lesser folks can find a flaky way out. About all you can do is just throw eggs in rage, disgust and frustration."

Swensen was pleased with the result. Besides pushing eggs and letting off steam, his commentary stimulated sales in general, he reported.

"It got favorable comment from people who came into the store," he said. "In fact, that was one of the better weeks we had."

"We always knew that, being a small grocery business, there was no way we could be heard or seen with the small ads we could afford compared to the large food chains," said Swensen, 42. "We had to do something different to make people look at them."

He says the airing of his opinions on such subjects as "super-raunchy" X-rated movies, problems in the Social Security system and against abortion tents to even the balance.

Gratefully Yours

Weddings are a time for gifts, and a time for thank-you's. Here are some rules of thank you etiquette.

...

Wedding gifts should be acknowledged in writing even if you have thanked the giver in person. Shower gifts can be acknowledged in person. It's best to write your thank-you notes for wedding gifts as soon as you receive them (before the wedding). Etiquette dictates that no longer than three months should elapse between receiving the gift and sending a thank-you note.

...

If you're taking a very long honeymoon, or receive an overwhelming number of gifts, you can have acknowledgement cards printed that "acknowledge with thanks the receipt of your gift" and promise a personal note to follow.

...

Thank-you notes should be personal, referring to the particular gift. For gifts of money, it is thoughtful to indicate how you intend to use it—in a furniture fund, etc.

...

A fairly new and pleasant tradition is the enclosure of wallet-size pictures of your wedding with your thank-you's.

Dear Abby

Readers Respond To Grandma

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Why don't you and "New Grandma" grow up and accept the fact that giving birth is a beautiful experience — one that new mothers and fathers are eager to share with those who hold the same views?

"New Grandma" complained because pictures were taken of her daughter during a painful labor, and actually giving birth. Grandma said, "Don't tell me that an unwashed baby, still attached to its mother's umbilical cord, is a beautiful sight. I call it sickening!" (And you agreed with her.)

When "New Grandma" gave birth to her children, she was probably knocked out while her husband was pacing the floor in the waiting room. Now I call that "sickening!"

NEW MOMMA IN VAN NUYS

DEAR ABBY: I have been an obstetrical nurse for 30 years, and I'd like to add a few words to "New Grandma's" letter.

Today, parents are well-prepared for what happens in the delivery room. Fathers willingly witness the birth, and most of them take pictures. I think that's fine. But a few years ago it wasn't all that fine. We had fathers fainting and getting sick all over the place. Most of them were there only because their wives had the attitude of, "Look at what you're putting me through, you s.o.b."

Grandma should get with it and realize that times have changed since she was screaming for something to put her under.

FRANNY AT ST. MARY'S

DEAR ABBY: As a new father, I not only took pictures of my son's birth, I had a tape recorder going.

My wife and I enjoy hearing the first cries of little Donald as we look at the photographs. So do all our friends, relatives, grandparents and one great-grandmother. (The pictures are currently being used by our Lamaze instructor to help prepare new parents in the delivery of their offspring.)

Although I am not a professional photographer, the pictures were taken with taste and discretion.

For our next one I plan to use a video recorder.

JERRY IN LAWDALE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos "New Grandma's" letter: In 1966, I was one of the first babies to be photographed during birth. In fact, my parents told me they searched the country in order to find a hospital that would allow it.

I can't believe that in this day and age there are people so ignorant that they would regard the birth of a human being as "sickening."

The birth of a baby is beautiful. To this day I enjoy looking at the pictures of myself being born, and I am grateful to my parents for having taken them.

HEIDI T. IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: You and "Grandma" can go pick up your new kids, squeaky clean and antiseptically wrapped in white sacks just like McDonald's hamburgers. For me, I'll take the beautiful miracle of birth, natural, as God intended it.

PAUL IN SMITHTOWN, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: For whatever it's worth, my husband missed seeing me give birth. (Monday night football.) But a mirror was put up so I could see it. I even put my glasses on.

GLAD I WAS AWAKE

DEAR ABBY: About the "New Grandma" letter: My baby was delivered by a midwife, and although my husband did not take pictures of the actual delivery, he was allowed to cut the umbilical cord.

He later said that was the most moving experience of his life.

Take Care Of Complaints

By JO-ANNE BYRNE
BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Few fires burn more intensely in the soul of a homeowner than those lit by repeated malfunctioning of a new appliance, especially when astronomical repair charges are involved.

Many consumers whose irritation level is pushed to the limit may not be aware they have an industry source to turn to when all else fails.

The Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel is a group of independent consumer experts who receive consumer complaints and comments, study industry practices, and advise industry on ways of improving service to consumers.

The panel only sees consumer cases that are stale-mated. It reviews about 1,500 a year. About 98 percent of its recommendations are accepted.

MACAP members meeting in conjunction with the 31st annual National Home Appliance Conference recently suggested several ways consumers can deal with, or try to avoid, appliance breakdowns:

—Before you buy an appliance, compare the warranties of different brands, and be aware there are two types of warranties — full and limited.

—Insist on a receipt for all service calls and repairs, even when no charge is involved. Keep a permanent file of both in-warranty and out-of-warranty receipts as long as you own the appliance.

—To take full advantage of a warranty, try each feature and control on a new appliance soon after it is installed, since it may have a defect that will become apparent the first few times a particular feature is used.

—Don't become a martyr who lives with defective appliances. Instead, tell the dealer about the problem immediately and give him enough time to correct it. If the dealer's actions are not satisfactory, report the problem to the manufacturer.

—To protect warranty coverage, put all complaints in writing and keep a copy of each for yourself.

Cases become troublesome as an appliance ages, said MACAP chairman Jason Annis. Availability of pertinent information in such cases declines, Annis said.

Areas the panel must consider include consequential damage, such as food loss from a malfunctioning refrigerator.

"Many times by the time a problem reaches MACAP, the consumer is so angry it is hard to find a resolution," Annis said. Often this anger is fueled by a lack of good communication with the consumer, a situation MACAP is trying to change with its Silver Pen award for consumer correspondence.

A company's attitude should be that "product responsibility does not end with the sale," Annis said. Correspondence between manufacturer and consumer should be written as if the company is talking directly to the consumer.

Public awareness of MACAP is essential, Annis said, particularly because the present economy has made it necessary for many consumers to have appliances repaired instead of replacing them.

An Example Of Class

Paul "Bear" Bryant, the legendary football coach of University of Alabama, has hung it up. And after a disappointing regular season of seven wins and four losses he did it in his more accustomed way by defeating Illinois in the Liberty Bowl at Memphis.

It was not Bryant's most prestigious victory. Over the years his teams had participated in the nation's most important post season football bowl games. It was, however, the final one ... the last game he would ever participate in as a football coach. Thus the victory had to be important to him and his team.

Coach Bryant didn't need an ego trip as he retired from coaching and didn't particularly relish the praise that was being heaped upon him.

At 69 he had lasted much longer than most who enter the coaching profession, and he knew the time had come to quit. He leaves behind over 300 college football coaching victories; he retains friends that number in the thousands, and he set an example of class from which we can all profit.

A Costly Legal Action

Three former U.S. attorneys are as mystified as anyone else as to why the Justice Department has filed a suit calling for an end to segregated cells in North Carolina prisons.

The suit is particularly unusual since Central Prison inmates are soon to move in a new prison with single cells.

According to the Justice Department the suit was filed because

North Carolina has not made satisfactory progress in ending inmate segregation by race. Yet it would appear there would be no problem after the inmates are moved to single cells.

The Justice Department legal action will be costly to both the federal and state governments. It appears the problem it addresses is rapidly being resolved, so why take such an action?

A New Year - Amended

"The Senate will come to order. Will the clerk read the bill now pending on the floor?"

"A Bill H.R. 20987 which provides a replacement of 1982 with a New Year to be known as 1983, commencing on January 1st and ending on midnight, December 31, consisting of 12 months, 52 weeks and 365 days whichever is greater."

"Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed so we can all go home and watch the football bowl games on television."

"Are there any objections? The Senator from North Carolina."

"I wish to object to this bill on the grounds that it is being rushed through Congress without debate. How do we know we want a New Year, and how can we be sure what it will cost us?"

"Will the Senator from North Carolina yield?"

"Only for a minute."

"Mr. President, my subcommittee on New Years held hearings day and night, and we came to the conclusion that we need a New Year, because we were doing so lousy in the old one. We felt, as does the White House, that 1983 will be much better than 1982 for everyone. Without this bill things will only get worse."

"I would like the floor again."

"The Senator from North Carolina."

"Mr. President, I wish to

"I amend the bill to permit the Boeing Aircraft Company to sell $600,000,000 worth of planes to Libya."

"Mr. President, may I offer my amendment?"

"The Senator from Texas."

"I cannot accept the 1983 bill unless Texas is assured a fair price for its gas, and the United States bails out all Texas banks that made loans to Mexico."

"Mr. President."

"The Senator from Illinois."

"Will the Senator from Texas permit this amendment to read, 'as well as Chicago Banks that lent money to Brazil, Argentina, and Poland'?"

"I will."

"Can we vote on the 1983 bill, Mr. President? It is now a quarter to midnight."

"Are we ready to vote?"

"Mr. President?"

"The chair recognizes the Senator from New Mexico."

"We have a maid named Donna Flora, who slipped across the border from Juarez three years ago. I would like to amend the 1983 bill to make Donna Flora an American citizen so she can work for us legally in the United States."

"Mr. President."

"The Senator from Michigan."

Looking To 1984 Races

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Democrats, who turned out two Republican congressmen and held off a third in the 1982 elections, are working toward a bigger goal — ousting Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in 1984.

Meanwhile, state Republicans have set more modest goals for 1983. They are hoping to build a grassroots organization similar to the one used by Democrats this year.

Spokesmen for both parties agree that the November elections, more than any other political event in 1982, shaped the coming year.

It was a year when Republican Bill Cobey of Chapel Hill was considered the frontrunner in the 4th District congressional race against incumbent Democrat Ike Andrews.

Andrews pleaded guilty to drunken driving and President Reagan visited Raleigh to stump for Cobey. But when the votes were counted, Andrews had captured 51 percent of the vote to win re-election.

Elsewhere, Republican freshmen Rep. Eugene Johnston of Greensboro and Rep. William Hendon of Asheville lost their re-election bids to Democrats Robin Britt of Greensboro and Jamie Clarke of Asheville.

Both Britt and Clarke had strong grassroots organizations and campaigned against Reagan's economic policies. Neither could match the fundraising ability of his GOP opponent.

State GOP Chairman David Flaherty says the Republican candidates were the best fielded for Congress but they fell victims to the national attitude about the economy.

He notes that Republicans held their own in county races and, although the party lost seats in the General Assembly, it did better than in past off-year elections.

Flaherty said that puts Republicans in "a better position than we ever were in any year prior to a general election." This year will be a time for fine tuning the organization and fundraising machines, he said.

Democratic Party Chairman state Sen. Russell Walker of Randolph County sees the election a different way.

"For us to gain back two seats we lost in 1980 and retain one of the very hotly contested ones ... was about one of the biggest events I've ever seen," he said.

Walker is hoping the party can capitalize on that progress by electing a Democratic senator in 1984. Work is already underway.

Helms is expected to run for re-election with a challenge from Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt. Neither has announced plans to seek the office.

Democrats will kick off their year Jan. 17 with a combination victory party and fundraiser at a Raleigh hotel. Organizers are inviting everyone from county party chairmen to congressmen to potential presidential candidates.

Walker said he expects about 1,500 people to pay $25 to attend the reception.

David Price, a political scientist at Duke University, will become executive director of the party in June.

The Republicans' Central Committee will meet Jan. 8 in Raleigh to fill a national committee slot and the party will hold a spring meeting to consider a plan of organization that Flaherty said would set higher standards from the precinct up.

"With higher standards, anything you do will build up grassroots support," he said.

Flaherty also wants the GOP to concentrate on fundraising and getting a computer similar to one obtained by the Democrats in April 1982. It could be used for mass mailings and keeping statistics on registered voters.

"Until we have something to offer the candidates we'll be playing second fiddle to other organizations," he said.

The National Congressional Club, Helms' fundraising organization, offers candidates extensive computer services to raise money or reach voters.

BACK SEAT RIDING

A retired business executive always rides in the back seat when his adult son drives. "I drove the car for many years and the children sat beside me," he explains. "Now they drive and I sit in the back seat. I let them make their own decisions."

"In business I find that the same thing works," he continued. "Twenty years ago I worried a lot about what would happen to the business if I passed on. Now I think the only thing the stockholders need to worry about is that I might hold on too long. So when I meet with my associates for conference on policy, I climb into the back seat. And there is a comfort to that back seat which is highly gratifying. You can stretch your legs and recline and let someone else take the responsibility."

"And what's more," he added, "I know the car is being driven better than I could drive it; and I'm glad, not sorry." — Elisha Douglass

Recession, As Mayor Sees It

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — From Skyline Parkway atop the mountain to the famous bridge at the harbor mouth, now faded in misty snow, this neat and charmingly picturesque city hardly seems desperate.

The mayor says it is. "Desperate," he said again. In part, the explanation is in the nature of people here, orderly folks, hard workers who keep up appearances and take care of each other. And so, perhaps, problems aren't as obvious as in some cities.

But there is a new emergency shelter here, and a soup kitchen where parents come with kids. Students collect money on the University of Minnesota campus.

And all day you hear of Food Shelf, which offers free groceries, no questions asked.

This city is a regional center for northeast Minnesota, northwest Wisconsin and Michigan's Upper Peninsula. "If there is serious unemployment," explained Mayor John Fedo, "they gravitate here."

There is serious unemployment all about, and in incredible percentages, more than 19 percent for all northeast Minnesota, and more than 35 percent in Lake County, just to the north in the Iron Range.

When car sales fail around the country, steelmaking follows, and that means layoffs in the great Mesabi taconite range. And fewer vessels steaming beneath the lift bridge with iron ore for the industrial heartland.

"Too many of our people are facing the coldest and bleakest Christmas since 1936," Fedo declared at a recent meeting of the National League of Cities.

"They cannot depend on rhetoric any longer."

Duluth, Fedo declares, has done its best. Last summer it had its own job program, employing 700 workers for nine weeks at $4 an hour, all take-home. "We skirted the deduction process to put money in their pockets," he said.

Before the city could spread word that no more could be hired, he said, 2,000 "strangers to unemployment" had applied. Those hired helped fix up buildings, streets and other municipal property.

"You can't tell people to wait a little longer, a little longer," said Fedo, who describes himself as a "very conservative" Democrat. He supports, even defends, President Reagan's long-range economic goals.

"But there has to be an immediate, stopgap solution so people can get by in the next six months," he said. "This winter is critical."

How quickly can the federal government act? "Given incentives, it can act immediately," he said as he sat at his desk, facing a blownup copy of a $4,700 check that city workers donated to Food Shelf.

"We'd like to think that in the totality of things he (President Reagan) might not see some of the things that we see because we deal on the local level," he continued.

"We suggest there are funding mechanisms already in existence that with little change could be directed toward areas of high unemployment," he said, suggesting that a little creativity goes a long way.

It was creativity that enabled Duluth to devise its own jobs program, using $400,000 of federal block funds, $150,000 from the McKnight Foundation, $50,000 from other local foundations, and $50,000 from businesses.

The usual charities, churches and the Salvation Army are doing their utmost. And their efforts have been augmented by new groups such as SHARE, formed by downtown workers and businesses to collect for the soup kitchen run by the Roman Catholic diocese, and the 22 Food Shelves in Duluth and the Iron Range. A coalition of churches and civic groups runs the emergency housing shelter.

But winters in the Northland are fierce, and unemployment benefits have ceased for many families.

Ordinarily, Fedo indicated, Duluth doesn't like to ask help. He said the city is solvent and even has a cash balance. He speaks proudly of several long-term efforts to spur new businesses and attract high-technology concerns.

But, he says, this recession is a national problem, "something creeping up on everyone, and if we don't stop it it will be depression all over again."

In the Duluth area, he said, "we managed to bridge cycles before by taking care of each other." But now, he continued, there's a big question of being able to do so.

THIS AFTERNOON

Clash Of Concepts

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — You're slowly driving along Main Street on a rainy evening. You can't see all that well because your windshield wiper is worn out. The light's green at Center Avenue but when you enter the intersection, you're hit by a car that's traveling 75 miles an hour. Later you learn the driver of that car was drunk.

You'd think you'd have a darn good legal suit against the driver. He was a speeding drunk who went through a red light. You were driving safely, obeying all the traffic laws. But you may not have a case at all. According to a strict interpretation of state law, you won't collect a dime. The law says you contributed to the accident through your negligence by not having a properly working windshield wiper.

This example highlights, if a bit extremely, a legal controversy that will come before the Legislature again this year. It's a battle between the concepts of comparative and contributory negligence. It sounds like a bunch of lawyers haggling over how many angels can dance on the head of a pin, but, as the example shows, it's a debate which might mean a great deal to you if your involved in any kind of negligence law suit.

North Carolina is one of only a few states which still follows the concept of contributory negligence. This principle holds that if you contribute to an accident, you pay for your negligence. You don't collect from the other fellow and, if he also contributed to the accident, he doesn't collect from you. In the case of your Main Street traffic crash, both parties were negligent so both pay their own expenses.

The N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers wants the state to abandon that legal principle and adopt, instead, the principle of comparative negligence. You were injured in an accident that was primarily the fault of the other driver. You ought to be able to collect because your negligence was minor compared to his.

Under comparative negligence, your Main Street accident case would be heard in court and then the jury would assign a portion of the blame to each driver. Maybe 90 percent to the drunk and 10 percent to you — because of the faulty wiper. The monetary award would be reduced accordingly.

The Academy of Trial Lawyers brought the issue before the 1981 session of the General Assembly and almost won. A legislative commission established by the 1979 assembly had studied it and defused some of the traditional arguments against comparative negligence. In the 1981 session, a comparative negligence bill sailed through the state House by a large margin but died on a close Senate vote.

Allen Briggs, lobbyist for the academy, says they'll reintroduce the bill this year and this time he expects to win. "I think we're probably in an improved position this year," he says. "People are more educated about comparative negligence, both the Legislature and the public. Last time, the powers that be gathered a lot of votes against it early. Some of these people, after they heard more about comparative negligence, told me later that they'd made their commitments and couldn't switch but if it came up in the future, maybe they could."

Passage of a comparative negligence law won't come easily. A number of powerful business leaders strongly oppose it. And, there are some good arguments to be made against comparative negligence. Opponents of the bill say juries already protect people like the sober driver in our Main Street accident. They claim comparative negligence is a "lawyers' bill" — designed only to provide more financial security to the practice of law — and that it will drive up the cost of automobile insurance.

Other Editors Say Clearing The Air

(Baldsboro News-Agus)

Congress and successive American presidents have long crossed swords over the doctrine of "executive privilege". Does the executive branch have the right to withhold selected information from legislators?

The Supreme Court upheld the right of executive privilege in 1974, but still ordered former President Richard Nixon to hand over tape recordings sought by Congress in the Watergate affair. The court's decision was less than definitive, however, in specifying what kind of information may legally be withheld and what may not. The Nixon case involved criminal charges, and the court decision turned upon this fact.

These uncertainties may now be diminished by the litigation stemming from the recent House vote citing Anne Gorsuch, administrator of the federal Environmental Protection Agency, for contempt of Congress.

Gorsuch, acting on specific orders from the White House, had refused to provide a House committee and a subcommittee with all of the documents they requested on enforcement of legislation requiring cleanup of toxic dump sites.

The White House and the EPA contend that release of the documents in question would compromise enforcement efforts by alerting potential defendants to weak points in the government's cases against them.

But a clear majority of House members rejected that defense and insisted on disclosure, even if doing so means that Gorsuch may be indicted by a federal grand jury, tried and convicted on a contempt charge that could send her to jail for a year.

The Justice Department promptly filed suit in U.S. District Court against the House leadership in an effort to move the dispute from a criminal to a civil status.

So, the battle is joined. Whichever way it goes, appeals are likely to carry it to the Supreme Court. That seems like the logical place to clarify the doctrine of executive privilege.

Armed with a new court ruling, future administrations and congresses may be able to resolve their disputes over information without running the risk of sending conscientious federal officials to jail.

Board Of Education Will Meet

The Pitt County Board of Education's monthly meeting will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the third floor board room of the Pitt County office building.

Items on the agenda include consideration of a Community Schools Capital Outlay project, a review of the schematic design of the Chicod lunchroom project, and a report on recently published articles by two Pitt County personnel.

For further information contact the office of the superintendent, 752-6106, ext. 200.

Two Break-Ins, Nothing Missing

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of two break-ins reported Saturday morning. However, Chief Glenn Cannon said nothing was reported missing in either incident.

He said a break-in at the Fast Fare at 425 Hooker Road, was reported at 5:09 a.m., while a break-in at Rigg's Gulf at 1201 Dickinson Ave., was reported at 7:53 a.m.

Entrance to the service station was gained by breaking out a rear window, while a front door glass was broken to gain entrance to the Fast Fare, Cannon said.

Offer Seamanship Course

A 13-lesson course in sailing and seamanship is being offered by Greenville Flotilla 16-05 of the Coast Guard Auxiliary to begin Jan. 11 at Pitt Community College.

Registration will be on that date. Lessons will be given from 7:30-9:30 p.m. on each Tuesday through April 5.

The course will cover principles of sailing, weather forecasting and heavy weather sailing, rules of the road, legal requirements, engines, trailering, piloting and radiotelephone.

Completion of the course will satisfy a large portion of the maritime knowledge required for those who may wish to join the Coast Guard Auxiliary. On completion, students will receive a graduation certificate. (All major insurance companies grant a ten percent discount on boat insurance upon presentation of the certificate).

Cost of the course is the Pitt Community College registration fee of $8. The text and workbook will be available at $6 for those who wish to purchase the materials.

For more information, interested persons are to call J. Hiecker at 756-0500 or R. Stephenson at 756-1916.

Joint Installation Tonight

Greenville Lodge No. 284 A.F. & A.M. will host the joint installation of officers for three Masonic Lodges of Greenville tonight at 7:30, according to E.H. Smith, Master.

The installing officer will be Most Worshipful A.C. Honeycutt, Grand Master of Masons in North Carolina. The three lodges are Greenville Lodge No. 284, Crown Point Lodge No. 708 and William Pitt Lodge No. 734. Supper will be served at 6:30 p.m. All Master Masons are invited, Secretary H.R. Phillips said.

Break-In At Grocery Store

An estimated $142 worth of merchandise was taken from the R.S. Pollard Grocery at 204 Wade St. in a break-in discovered by police about 3:50 a.m. Sunday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said entrance to the building was gained by breaking a front window and a quantity of meats, including sausage, bologna, boiled ham, pork loin, bacon, and chicken was taken.

Cars Collided Sunday Evening

Cars driven by Richard Thomas Duke Jr. of Route 1, Greenville, and Bobby Ray Williams of 1105 Melody Lane, collided about 5:40 p.m. Sunday on Fifth Street, 25 feet east of the Hudson Street intersection.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $700 to the Duke car and $800 to the Williams vehicle.

At Odds Over Financing Plans

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — State officials and the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Hospital Authority are at odds over the type of bond needed to finance the planned Northeast Hospital.

North Carolina favors general obligation bonds, backed by taxes, while the hospital authority and Assistant County Manager Nathan Alberty support revenue bonds, backed by money raised during the course of operations.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Agricultural Extension Agent

One trait that all good vegetable farmers have is that they learn from their mistakes. They also learn from past experiences, different planting methods, different varieties and different cultural practices.

Anyone who is a vegetable gardener might do better this year by making a few New Year's gardening resolutions. If these resolutions actually become a set of written plans, then anyone can keep a yardstick of gardening progress from year to year.

Here are a few possible resolutions or possible ideas that may improve any garden in eastern North Carolina:

- Take a soil sample and follow the recommendations for adding lime especially. Unless the entire garden is low in phosphorus and potash, sidedressed fertilizer (8-8-8 or 10-10-10) will provide sufficient nutrition for the garden.

- Keep the soil pH between 5.6 and 6.4. Soil pH is a relative measure of the acidity of the soil. Most vegetables will grow well in this range.

- Provide for adequate water. There is seldom a year that goes by that doesn't require supplemental irrigation. A good gardener knows that water is the cheapest fertilizer.

- Control weeds. Most weeds that plague the summer garden sprout during May and early June. By controlling weeds during these months and while they are small, labor can be reduced. In late summer prevent the weeds from going to seed.

- Control pests. Most insects of the garden can be controlled with two chemicals, Sevin and malathion. Use these and other chemicals only when necessary.

- Control disease. The home gardener's best defense against plant disease is prevention. It is important not to plant the same vegetable (or its relatives) in the same spot in the garden for two years in a row. Also destroy vegetables as soon as they become less productive. This procedure will keep insects, diseases and nematodes from building up to high populations and causing big problems later.

- A written gardening log can help prevent making mistakes twice. Also it can be a record of weather conditions, disease problems, soils sample information and a host of other things that can help the gardener.

"There's no substitute for experience" is an old saying that applies to gardening. It does help to read about gardening and it may be of help to talk to other people, but the best teaching tool is the actual planting of the garden and tending of it. More and more people each year find gardening to be beneficial to them as a recreational outlet and as a source of high quality, fresh produce.

For further information contact your local Agricultural Extension office and ask for a free copy of the "Quick Reference Home Gardening Guide." It is helpful in determining what vegetables to plant, what varieties do best in this area and when to plant them. In Pitt County call 752-2934 or visit the office, located on the second floor of the Pitt County Office Building.

Arrest 4 On Rape Charges

Four people have been arrested by Pitt County deputies on charges of first degree rape following investigation of a Christmas morning incident at Fountain, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said that deputies arrested Alvin Earl Lindsay, 17, of Route 1, Box 567, Macesfield; Timothy Ray Edwards, 16, of Route 1, Box 527, Fountain; Ivey Wayne Barrett, 17, of 28-A Deerfield Subdivision, Fountain; and Walter Leon Taylor, 26, of 311 N. Railroad St., Fountain.

Tyson said a 33-year-old Horton's Corner woman told deputies the incident took place on Lynch Street in Fountain. She reported several black males approached her and her boyfriend as they walked along the street and demanded money. Tyson said the woman reported she was threatened with a gun and raped beside the road.

According to Tyson, the woman told officers she walked to a nearby residence following the assault and authorities were notified. She was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, he said.

The sheriff, who said the incident was reported at 3:24 a.m., said all four men are being held without privilege of bond. First appearance hearings were scheduled for today in District Court here.

Investigation is continuing, said Tyson.

Arraignment Is Waived

Billy Braswell, a former Pitt County sheriff's deputy who has been indicted for the murder of his wife, waived his arraignment appearance today in Pitt County Superior Court.

Braswell, in waiving his arraignment appearance, entered a plea of not guilty through his attorneys.

District Attorney Tom Haigwood said today that he will confer with the state attorney general's office, which is involved in the prosecution of the case, and defense counsel, in setting a trial date for Braswell.

The former deputy was indicted Dec. 13 by the grand jury following a probable cause hearing in District Court here. Braswell is charged with first degree murder in the Sept. 27 shooting death of Lillie Braswell near Farmville.

Braswell, who was released on $100,000 bond on Nov. 1, was discharged that day from Pitt County Memorial Hospital where he had undergone treatment for over two months for gunshot wounds to his chest. Braswell was found wounded at his Farmville home on Sept. 27, following the discovery of his wife's body near the intersection of Chiquapin Road and U.S. 264 Alternate.

Succession Hopes Dim

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 1977 change in the state constitution letting the governor and lieutenant governor run for consecutive four-year terms may put those offices out of the reach of some politically ambitious state legislators.

Power, in the form of top jobs, used to change hands every two or four years, but in recent years has been concentrated on a relatively small group close to House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison, and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who presides over the state Senate.

H. Park Helms, a Charlotte lawyer and state lawmaker, now says his goal of becoming Speaker of the House is out of reach.

"I would have liked to have been speaker," Helms said. "I would like to be governor, but how long can I stay in the House?"

When the Legislative session begins Jan. 12, it is expected that Ramsey will be elected to a second two-year term, with a third term likely in 1985. W. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, will likely become the Senate's first three-term president pro tem.

Ramsey, who chooses the House committees, is expected to install the same leadership team he picked during the 1981 session.

Green has hinted there may be some leadership changes in the Senate, but the major power positions will remain much the same.

Helms supported the succession amendment in 1977, but said he didn't think too many in favor of the amendment realized its affect on the Legislature.

There Is Still Time To Benefit From IRA Plans

by LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Nineteen eighty-two is over, but there's still a way to trim your 1982 tax bill. It's called an Individual Retirement Account.

Contributions to a qualified IRA — and the interest earned by those contributions — are exempt from federal income tax until you start withdrawals.

And you can establish an account any time until the due date for your 1982 return, counting extensions, and still claim a deduction against last year's income.

Here's an example of what an IRA can mean:

Suppose you're married, filing a joint return and have a taxable income of $30,000. Your 1982 federal income tax bill is $5,607; your marginal tax bracket — the maximum rate you pay — is 33 percent.

Assume you put $1,000 into an IRA. Your taxable income is $29,000. Your 1982 federal tax bill is $5,313; your marginal bracket drops to 29 percent. You have saved $294. (State and local taxes on IRA contributions and earnings also are deferred as a general rule; check authorities in your area for details.)

The due date for your 1982 return is April 15, 1983. If you get an extension of the deadline for filing your return, however, you also get an extension of the deadline for opening an IRA. You do not have to itemize deductions in order to claim credit for an IRA contribution.

Anyone who has earned income and is under 70½ can open an IRA. It doesn't matter if you are already covered by a pension plan. You can contribute up to $2,000 or 100 percent of your income each year, whichever is less. If both husband and wife work, each spouse can contribute up to $2,000 to his or her own account. A married individual with a non-working spouse can set up a separate IRA for that spouse; contributions to the worker's IRA and the spouse's IRA together cannot exceed $2,250.

It is important to remember that you will have to pay taxes on your money eventually; the tax is NOT eliminated, only deferred until withdrawals begin.

An IRA also ties up your money. You are not allowed to start withdrawals until you reach 59½. If you make a withdrawal before that, you pay not only the tax due on the amount withdrawn, but also a penalty of 10 percent. You cannot borrow from an IRA or use it as collateral for a loan.

The money you put in an IRA can be invested in dozens of ways. Banks, thrift institutions, brokerage houses and insurance companies all offer IRAs, and you have to compare terms to find the one that meets your needs.

The size of an IRA can mount quickly. The accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. calculated, for example, that someone who contributes $2,000 a year every year from age 35 to age 65 and earns 8 percent interest will have nearly $245,000 in exchange for a total investment of only $60,000.

But the accounting firm also offers some words of caution: "If inflation continues, amounts accumulated will not have the same purchasing power as today's dollars."

You must begin withdrawals by the end of the year you become 70½, and you must make a minimum withdrawal every year after that. If you don't, you must pay a 50 percent federal tax on the difference between the required minimum and the actual withdrawal.

You do not have to contribute to an IRA according to any fixed schedule. You can, for example, skip a year if you want to or have to. If you contribute more than the maximum allowed for any year, you will be subject to an excise tax of 6 percent of the excess amount.

You can have as many IRAs as you want as long as contributions to all of them do not exceed the maximum. You can transfer your IRA from one institution to another if you want by withdrawing money and reinvesting it within 60 days. You can do this once every 12 months without incurring the penalty that normally accompanies withdrawals before age 59½.

Astronomers Estimate Universe To Be About 12 Billion Years Old

BOSTON (AP) — Astronomers have long disagreed over the age of the universe, but two new studies using different measuring techniques have calculated its age at about 12 billion years.

Some scientists argue that the universe is as young as 7 billion years, others as old as 20 billion years, but according to professors Kenneth Janes of Boston University and Pierre DeMarque of Yale, the universe's age is closer to 12 billion.

Their theory is being published in the January issue of The Astrophysical Journal.

Janes and DeMarque recalculated the age of stars that lie in groups called globular clusters located near the center of the Earth's galaxy. Using a formula based on physics and the life cycle of stars, they concluded that these stars are about 16 billion years old and that the universe is more than 18 billion years old.

But Janes says that if possible errors in star observations and theoretical assumptions are taken into account, it's possible "to squeeze the age down" to about 12 billion years.

John P. Huchra of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge is one of another group of astronomers who base their estimate on the velocity that the stars are moving away from the earth. Their still unpublished data shows that the universe is 12 billion or 13 billion years old.

Among these scientists' basic measuring tools is a phenomenon known as the red shift. As stars move rapidly away from the Earth, the light they give off shifts toward the red end of the spectrum.

Once scientists know the speed of a star, they can calculate its distance. The most distant stars are believed to be those that are moving away from the Earth the fastest because the universe is thought to have begun as one enormous fireball that exploded, scattering pieces in every direction. The most distant stars are also believed to be the oldest.

Huchra and his associates have come up with a new value for a ratio known as the Hubble constant that gives the distance of a star once its speed is known.

"If you look at the outer limits over which you could accept a value of the age derived from either globular clusters or from the determination of the Hubble constant, they all seem to agree on the 12 to 14 billion range," Huchra said. "They overlap."

Janes, too, thinks the two theories eventually will agree.

"Very often in these situations, it ends up that there are small errors on both sides of things, and we end up splitting the difference," Janes said. "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if it came out a few years from now that everyone agreed that the universe was 12 or 13 billion years old. It's a very likely possibility."

Alan P. Lightman, another Harvard-Smithsonian astronomer, noted that people using radioactive dating estimate that the universe is 10 billion years old.

"These methods all use very different kinds of physics," he said. "I think that the fact that these three different ways of dating the universe all give ages within a few billion years of each other is remarkable."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today, opening a new year of trading on a hesitant note.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up about 5 points in early trading, showed a 1.93 gain at 1,048.47 by noon.

Advancing issues held a slight lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Hopes for an economic recovery and sharp declines in interest rates helped propel the stock market to an all-time high in 1982. The Dow Jones industrials finished the year with a Net gain of 171.54 points, or 19.6 percent.

At year's end, the Commerce Department predicted a modest economic recovery would begin in the first quarter, but that the steel industry faced "further permanent contraction" this year.

The department projected a 3.7 percent economic growth rate for the year as a whole.

Gainers on the active list today included American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1 at 60 1/2; Warner Communications, up 1 at 34 1/2; and Citicorp, up 1/2 at 33.

The NYSE's composite index rose .05 to 81.08. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.41 at 342.01.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 24.63 million shares at noon, against 18.19 million at the same point Friday.

Meeting On MX-Basing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is meeting with defense specialists to set up a commission that will advise him on a basing system for the MX nuclear-tipped missile.

Today's session is the organizational meeting for the group, known as the bipartisan commission on strategic forces.

It will be headed by Brent Scowcroft, former national security affairs adviser to President Ford. Other members reportedly will include former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, President Carter's former defense secretary Harold Brown, and White House national security consultant Thomas C. Reed.

The commission will have 60 days to recommend an MX basing plan to the president. Reagan decided to establish the panel after his proposal for a basing scheme — known as "dense pack" — ran into stiff opposition in Congress.

The "dense pack" plan called for clustering the intercontinental nuclear weapons close together, on the theory that enemy missiles would destroy each other with their own blast and radiation as they attacked the U.S. arsenal.

Area Had Rain And More Rain

Pitt County had a rainy New Year's weekend, with a short-lived and overcast reprieve New Year's Eve and Sunday.

From 8 a.m. Thursday to 8 a.m. Friday .59 of an inch of rain fell; from 8 a.m. Friday to 8 a.m. Saturday .06 of an inch; from 8 a.m. Saturday to 8 a.m. Sunday .02 inch; and from 8 a.m. Sunday to 8 a.m. today, .78 inches.

Temperatures throughout the whole time — Thursday 8 a.m. through today at 8 a.m. — ranged from 36 to 44 degrees.

The Forecast For Tuesday, January 4

•Low Temperatures

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts mostly sunny weather across the nation for Tuesday. Most areas will be colder. Rain is forecast for the Northwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A high pressure system moving into North Carolina tonight will clear skies in the wake of the low pressure that dropped up to 2.36 inches of rain and some snow across the state, the National Weather Service reported today.

Light snow fell across the higher mountains and in the northern mountains of western North Carolina during the night. The state Highway Patrol reported this morning that U.S. 441 across Newfoundland Gap into Tennessee is covered with ice and remains closed.

In the northern mountains the main roads were open this morning, with icy spots on just some secondary roads.

In Alleghany County nearly an inch of snow made driving slippery this morning, while Cherry Point reported 1 1/4 inches of rain in 24 hours and Wilmington was the wet spot with 2.36 inches.

Forecasters predicted partly cloudy skies tonight with mostly cloudy conditions on the coast. Temperatures should be in the 20s and 30s. By Tuesday another low pressure system should begin forming off the North Carolina coast, bringing a chance of showers in the east with highs expected to be in the 40s with some 30s in the higher mountains.

Tonight and Tuesday coastal winds gill be northeast at 15 to 25 knots and gusty over the dntre area.

They Thrive On Carbon Dioxide

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Carbon dioxide released in increasing quantities by the burning of fossil fuels may help produce larger and more fruitful soybeans, according to researchers at Duke University.

All green plants use carbon dioxide to grow, but scientists are concerned about the effect high concentrations of the waste gas might have, said Dr. Nasser Sinoit of Duke's botany department.

Some researchers believe the normal carbon dioxide level of 350 parts per million in the atmosphere may double in the next 50 years because of the burning of gasoline, coal and other fossil fuels.

Experimental plants grown in carbon dioxide concentrations of 675 and 1,000 ppm were larger and had more abundant pods than control plants, Sinoit said.

He said soybeans grown at 675 ppm produce average leaf surfaces 20 percent to 30 percent larger than plants grown under normal atmospheric conditions.

"But the real productivity gain is the number of seed pods," Sinoit said. "Generally, there are about 120 pods per plant at 675 ppm and 240 pods at 1,000 ppm."

The gain in total grain yield is about 40 percent at 675 ppm, the carbon dioxide level closest to what scientists expect in the next century.

Sinoit said the more rapid growth rate and higher grain production at high carbon dioxide levels "presumably bring about a need for more available nutrients."

But, he added that even on reduced nutrients, "the soybeans overcome the limiting effects we place on them."

Another researcher said several questions remain about the quality of carbon-dioxide-enriched soybeans.

"One big question is what will happen to the quality of the protein and oils obtained from such soybeans," said R. Boyd Strain. "At this point, we don't know."

ECU Continues Road Trip Vs. Virginia Tech

A Staff Report

East Carolina University's Pirates close out their current road trip by traveling to Blacksburg, Va., on Tuesday to face the strong but young Gobblers of Virginia Tech.

Tech, coming back from last week's Rainbow Classic in Hawaii, finished fifth in that tournament, bowing for the first time this season in the opening round of that event. The Hokies carried a 7-0 record into the strong eight-team field.

Tech opened the season with an 85-60 win over Augusta, then rolled over College of Charleston, 105-50. They topped Maryland-Eastern Shore, 88-62, and Liberty Baptist 71-53. Richmond fell, 86-66, awarding VPI coach Charlie Moir with his 300th career victory. That was followed by a 122-73 rout of South Carolina State and a 92-56 run past Appalachian State.

The Hokies lost their first game of the year in Honolulu to Oklahoma, 88-86, in overtime, but came back to bomb Providence, 70-57, and nip Texas Tech, 53-49, to finish fifth in the Rainbow field.

Virginia Tech features four players in double figures, giving them outstanding balance. Sophomore forward Perry Young, a 6-5, 205-pounder, leads the team in scoring with a 16.8 average and is the top rebounder with 8.3 per game (figures prior to the Rainbow are the latest available). Perry is hitting 56.3 percent from the floor.

Next comes Dell Curry, a 6-4, 189-pound freshman guard. He's scoring 15.7 points a game and has handed out 30 assists through six games. He's made 62.1 percent of his field goal attempts.

Center Bobby Beecher, a 6-9, 220-pound freshman, is scoring 13.3 points a game, while yet another freshman, 6-6, 190-pound forward Keith Colbert rounds out these in double figures with an 11.0 average.

The fifth starter is sophomore guard Al Young, a 6-0, 190-pounder with a 7.2 average.

East Carolina comes into the game with a 4-4 record, having lost a heartbreaker to George Mason, 69-68, in its opening ECAC-South game last Thursday night. The Pirates, down by 13 just into the second half, rallied to pull even, but were never able to take the lead, despite outshooting GMU by 18 points from the floor for the evening.

The Pirates have defeated VPI but once during their nine previous meetings. That came back during the tenure of Tom Quinn, when the Pirates topped the then nationally ranked Hokies, 43-33, in only one of two games played by the VPI team in Greenville.

Following the trip to VPI, the Pirates return home to host last year's ECAC-South regular season title winner James Madison, which for the past three years has been an NCAA participant, pulling off two big upsets in the last two seasons, and nearly knocking off North Carolina, last year's champ. That game will be played Saturday in Minges at 7:30 p.m.

Pats In Playoffs; Redskins Roll

By The Associated Press

After finishing in a tie for the worst record in the National Football League last year, New England didn't stand pat.

The Patriots kicked out Ron Erhardt and brought in Ron Meyer from Southern Methodist University as the head coach. It was a savvy move, as it turned out.

Despite season-long turmoil because of Meyer's college-style discipline and what some players consider the coach's aloofness, the Patriots have made a dramatic turnaround.

On Sunday, the revitalized New England team joined the NFL's playoff ranks with a 30-19 victory over the Buffalo Bills that gave the Pats a 5-4 record in this strike-shortened season. Last year, they were 2-14.

"I think it's always tough to come out of a situation like that," said New England's Mike Haynes, who made a key interception in Sunday's game. "It also takes a tremendous effort on everyone's part to get rid of the negative things that come out of that kind of season."

The Patriots were one of the last four teams to make the 16-team playoffs. The Cleveland Browns, Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Detroit Lions filled the remaining berths.

Along with New England, Cleveland qualified as one of the eight teams from the American Conference despite a 37-21 loss to playoff-bound Pittsburgh. Tampa Bay beat Chicago 26-23 in overtime and Detroit edged Green Bay 27-24 to gain the last two National Conference spots.

The day's results set up the alignment for next weekend's opening round of the playoffs.

In the AFC, it will be Cleveland at the Los Angeles Raiders, New England at Miami, the New York Jets at Cincinnati and San Diego at Pitt. The NFC alignment depends on who wins tonight's Dallas and Minnesota game. If Dallas wins or ties, it will be Detroit at Washington, Minnesota at Dallas, Tampa Bay at Green Bay and St. Louis at Atlanta. If Minnesota wins, it will be Detroit at Washington, Tampa Bay at Dallas, St. Louis at Green Bay and Atlanta at Minnesota.

Defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco, meanwhile, was bounced out of playoff contention by a 21-20 loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

Haynes' interception set up Tony Collins' tie-breaking touchdown run in the fourth quarter, then Steve Grogan threw his third scoring pass of the game to lead New England past Buffalo.

The Bills, buried at their own 1-yard line following a punt, pushed out to the 24 before Haynes stepped in front of Roosevelt Leaks, intercepted Joe Ferguson's pass and returned the ball 25 yards to the Bills' 13 with 31 seconds remaining in the third quarter. On the third play of the fourth period, Collins burst through the right side to break a 16-16 tie.

The Bills closed the gap to 23-19 on Elfen Herrera's 25-yard field goal. But Grogan drove New England 74 yards in nine plays, the last one a 2-yard toss to tight end Don Hasselbeck with 6:49 to play.

"In spite of what was going on, I think we reacted positively and said 'Let's go win this thing,' " said Hasselbeck. "People might find it hard to believe, but we weren't upset if we didn't make the playoffs. Everyone wants to be in them, but if we had to come in here Monday and turn in our things, there wouldn't have been too many guys upset. So everyone was just relaxed going out there."

Meyer shrugged off his part in the Patriots' turnaround. "The accomplishment is all the players'. With the talent on this football team and the leadership shown by the veterans, I said secretly to myself in training camp I felt we had a good run at the playoffs."

But Haynes pointed out: "It's easy to say that we should get all the credit. But the coaches are the ones who called the plays and called the

Penn St. Ranked No. 1 In Both Polls

By The Associated Press

"Unaccustomed as I am to being in this situation ..." Joe Paterno began.

That was the Penn State coach's little needle Sunday at the voters who kept him and his Nittany Lions from the throne on three earlier occasions despite unbeaten and untied seasons.

Paterno had just been informed that Penn State, which began playing football back in 1887, had captured its first national championship thanks to Saturday night's exciting 27-23 Sugar Bowl victory over top-rated, previously unbeaten Georgia.

This time, it wasn't the one-man Paterno Poll, which he conducted in 1968, 1969 and 1973, when records of 11-0, 11-0 and 12-0 were only good enough for finishes of second, second and fifth.

This time, it was The Associated Press poll in which Penn State was voted the national champion for 1982. The 11-1 Nittany Lions rebounded from a 42-21 October loss to Alabama and won their last seven games, capped by Saturday night's sweet-as-Sugar triumph.

However, Penn State's triumph in the final rankings evoked a storm of protest from Southern Methodist Coach Bobby Collins, whose Mustangs defeated Pitt 7-3 in the Cotton Bowl. They wound up as the nation's only unbeaten team with an 11-0-1 mark, but had to settle for second place, while Penn State vaulted from the runner-up position to the top.

"We did what the so-called experts asked, and the experts failed to follow through," Collins said. "We're the only unbeaten team; doesn't that mean anything?"

"We were voted in the Top Ten at the start of the season, we moved up to No. 2, then we tied Arkansas and two idle teams moved ahead of us. We played as tough a schedule as Penn State and we didn't lose to a team that lost four games."

"We finished the schedule as the only undefeated team, we played as a member of the top four the last half of the season and somehow the voting sentiment goes to Penn State. How come?"

Penn State received 44 of 55 first-place votes and 1,089 of a possible 1,100 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The Nittany Lions were either first or second on every ballot.

SMU, which was fourth in the final regular-season poll, received nine first-place votes and 1,023 points.

The other two first-place votes went to Nebraska, which held onto third place by edging LSU 21-20 in the Orange Bowl. The Cornhuskers, who lost only to Penn State, polled 978 points.

Georgia dropped from first to fourth with 953 points, while UCLA remained No. 5 with 894 points by defeating Michigan 24-14 in the Rose Bowl.

"Obviously, we're all thrilled at Penn State," Paterno said. "This kind of makes up for the times when we didn't get it. Well, it doesn't really make up for it, but it makes you forget those other years."

Arizona State, a 32-21 winner over Oklahoma in the Fiesta Bowl, shot from 11th place to sixth with 729 points, while Pitt, the preseason choice for No. 1, fell from sixth to 10th. Washington, which edged Maryland 21-20 in the Aloha Bowl, climbed from ninth to seventh with 679 points.

Clemson, last year's national champion, was ineligible for a bowl game this time and slipped from seventh to eighth with 656 points. The Tigers were followed by Arkansas with 611 points and Pitt with 593. Arkansas, 14th in the final regular-season rankings, moved up following a 28-24 victory over Florida in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Texas and West Virginia, No. 8 and No. 10, respectively, in the last regular-season poll, skidded from the Top Ten to the Second Ten. Texas lost to North Carolina 26-10 in the Sun Bowl, while West Virginia was trounced 31-12 by Florida State in the Gator Bowl.

In the UPI vote, six coaches from each of the seven geographical areas of the nation comprise the ratings board. Each week they vote on the top 15 teams and points are awarded on a 15, 14, 13, etc. basis for votes from first through 15th.

Here, by sections, are the coaches who comprise the rating board:

EAST — Wayne Hardin, Temple; Frank Burns, Rutgers; Ed Cavanaugh, Army; Don Nehlen, West Virginia; Gerald "Fog" Fazio, Pittsburgh; Dick MacPherson, Syracuse.

MIDWEST — Earle Bruce, Ohio State; Frank "Muddy" Waters, Michigan State; Gerry Faust, Notre Dame; Mike White, Illinois; Hayden Fry, Iowa; Dan Simrell, Toledo.

SOUTH — Paul "Bear" Bryant, Alabama; Vince Dooley, Georgia; Dick Crum, North Carolina; Charley Pell, Florida; Danny Ford, Clemson; Bobby Bowden, Florida State.

MIDLANDS — Tom Osborne, Nebraska; Barry Switzer, Oklahoma; Jim Dickey, Kansas State; Warren Powers, Missouri; John Cooper, Tulsa; Donnie Duncan, Iowa State.

SOUTHWEST — Fred Akers, Texas; Lou Holtz, Arkansas; Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M; Sam Robertson, Southwest Louisiana; Grant Teaff, Baylor; Ray Alborn, Rice.

MOUNTAINS — LaVell Edwards, Brigham Young; Ken Hatfield, Air Force; Larry Smith, Arizona; Joe Morrison, New Mexico; Chuck Stobart, Utah; Al Kincaid, Wyoming.

PACIFIC — John Robinson, Southern California; Rich Brooks, Oregon; Dave Curry, Long Beach State; Jack Elway, San Jose State; Don James, Washington; Terry Donahue, UCLA.

Cowboys, Vikes Could Meet In Opener

Dallas-Minnesota Game Preview Of NFL Playoffs?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A victory by Dallas over Minnesota in tonight's National Football League regular-season finale would have no bearing on the Cowboys' playoff itinerary, but it would give them a good look at their first-round opponent — the Vikings.

"It never hurts to beat a team in this league," Cowboy Coach Tom Landry said Sunday night. "But it's difficult to beat the same team twice in one season, much less twice in one week."

Indeed, but the Vikings could make that a moot point by winning the nationally televised game. A victory would make them 5-4 and give them a home game against Atlanta in the first round of the playoffs. A tie or a loss would leave the Vikings as the seventh seed in the National Conference and send them to Dallas on Sunday.

The Cowboys, 6-2, would host Tampa Bay should they lose to the Vikings.

"It'd be kind of strange if we had to play Dallas again," admitted Minnesota quarterback Tommy Kramer.

Regardless, Viking Coach Bud Grant is taking his usual business-as-usual approach.

"We're pretty well prepared for everything Dallas does over the years and it's the same for them," he said. "Both coaching staffs have gone against one another for about 16 years."

"But the question is not what but when. You don't know exactly what they will run, even if the games are a week apart."

Tonight's home-field advantage nearly went out the window. But the roof at the Metrodome, punctured Thursday during a snow-clearing operation, was repaired. An alternate plan had been made to play the game in New Orleans.

"We're playing Dallas, it's Monday night and it's in the dome," Grant said, adding that Crazy George and signs should increase the excitement.

The Vikings hired Crazy George, the drum-beating cheerleader from Houston, to stir up the crowd and are allowing signs and posters for the first time in years. Grant also said there is something about Monday night games that is almost "frightening" at times.

"It's like an excuse for mass hysteria," Grant said, adding, "At the opening kickoff there will be a lot of noise. What happens from there is up to us."

Injuries may play a factor. Minnesota lost retiring wide receiver Ahmad Rashad with some cracked bones in his back and wide receiver Sammy White, who has missed two games, is questionable with a knee injury. Linebacker Scott Studwell hurt his knee last week and will be replaced by Jeff Siemon. The Vikings also placed tight end Bob Bruer on injured reserve and picked up 36-year-old wide receiver Harold Jackson.

Dallas may go without its regular starting offensive guards. Howard Richards, who sprained his ankle, will be replaced by Herb Scott at left guard and right guard Kurt Petersen has a bruised knee and may be replaced by Steve Wright.

Collins Maintains Mustangs Top Team In Nation

By The Associated Press

Bobby Collins knew it was coming. But he still can't understand why Penn State, with one loss, was voted national champion over his unbeaten but tied Southern Methodist team.

"We were the only unbeaten team," he cried plaintively Sunday after the final poll results were announced, which left SMU No. 2. "Doesn't that mean anything?"

SMU's demise was set up on Nov. 20, when the Mustangs tied Arkansas 17-17. The next week they dropped from second to fourth, behind unbeaten Georgia and two once-beaten teams, Penn State and Nebraska.

Moreover, the bowl matchups made their championship hopes extremely dim. With No. 2 Penn State playing top-ranked Georgia in the Sugar Bowl, it meant that a tie in that game was the only possible way for SMU to move up to the top unless it totally overwhelmed Pitt in the Cotton Bowl.

So there was no big surprise in Dallas Sunday when Penn State was voted the top team in the nation by virtue of its 27-23 win in the Sugar Bowl over previously unbeaten and top-ranked Georgia. SMU, which stumbled its way through rain and sleet at the Cotton Bowl to beat Pitt 7-3, moved up to No. 2 despite an 11-0-1 record compared to 11-1 for Penn State.

Why did the vote come out that way? As Collins said: "We did what the so called experts asked. Then the experts failed to follow through."

As it turned out, there were a few things they didn't do. Their games outside the Southwest Conference were against three teams that didn't impress many voters — Tulane, North Texas State and the University of Texas at El Paso. Within the conference, they had narrow escapes against the likes of Texas Tech, Baylor and Houston. And the tie with Arkansas came on national television in SMU's last regular season game.

Penn State, on the other hand, handed Georgia and third-ranked Nebraska their only losses. They also beat three other Top 20 teams — No. 10 Pitt, No. 19 West Virginia and No. 20 Maryland — as well as Notre Dame. Their only loss, to Alabama, came in mid-October, early enough to not kill their title hopes.

Collins, however, doesn't buy that, pointing out that Alabama had four losses.

"We played as tough a schedule as Penn State and we didn't lose to a team that lost four games," he said. "I saw that game on television and Alabama wasn't very good this year."

There were also any number of intangibles working against the Mustangs.

Many voters may have felt that Penn State and Coach Joe Paterno deserved a title after three narrow misses — they went undefeated three times without winning a national championship.

In contrast to that is SMU's relatively recent revival as a national power. The Mustangs finished 10-1 last season and won the Southwest Conference title, but were on NCAA probation and neither went to the Cotton Bowl nor appeared on television.

"All that national television exposure helped Penn State," said Collins. "There's no telling how many voters ever saw us play."

There is also the momentum that built up over the Georgia-Penn State game. Featuring the two top-rated teams, it was billed all over as a battle for the national championship.

Some SMU people blame what they feel is anti-Southwest bias. "The voters favor the big schools from the two coasts," All-American tailback Eric Dickerson said last week. "They don't know anything about the Southwest Conference."

"We played as a member of the top four the last half of the season and somehow the voting sentiment goes to Penn State," Collins said. "How come?"

It's an interesting question. It's a question that Joe Paterno, claiming anti-Eastern bias, asked over and over the last time a Southwest Conference team won the national title. The team was Texas, the year was 1969 and the runner-up was Penn State, which also finished undefeated.

How come?

18th-Ranked Houston Routs Pacific, 112-58

By The Associated Press

The 18th-ranked Houston Cougars, who had traveled 13,000 miles over the Christmas holidays, got the good outing they needed to prepare for Southwest Conference play, says guard David Rose.

ACC Gets Tune-Up For Conference

By The Associated Press

With most of the gearing up completed, Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams have one more week of non-conference play before plunging into intra-league combat.

No. 17 North Carolina State, 5-1, took a 67-59 victory over 20th-ranked West Virginia last Tuesday in the Meadowslands. The Wolfpack starts the new year with Fairleigh Dickinson tonight in Raleigh.

The Wolfpack opens league play Friday night with a trip to Clemson before meeting Missouri Sunday afternoon.

North Carolina won five straight games, including their three contests in the Rainbow Classic at Honolulu. Now 8-3, the Tar Heels meet Rutgers on Wednesday in Greensboro and Syracuse in Charlotte next Saturday.

The Syracuse battle will mark North Carolina's first exposure to the ACC's experimental 3-point field goal and 30-second clock.

Duke, 4-4 following a post-Christmas blowout of New Hampshire, meets George Mason in Durham tonight, then hosts Wagner on Wednesday night.

On Saturday, Duke meets LaSalle in Philadelphia's Palestra in the second game of a double-header that also matches Pennsylvania and Brown.

Wake Forest, 7-1, completes its New York swing as it meets Siena tonight and SUNY-Buffalo Wednesday. The Demon Deacons, losers to No. 7 St. John's in the finals of the Holiday Festival in New York, begin conference play against Georgia Tech, 4-2, on Saturday.

Georgia Tech's only other game this week is a Tuesday night meeting with Iona at the Meadowslands.

Maryland, 5-2, hasn't played since its pre-Christmas upset of then third-ranked UCLA, but the Terrapins have three home dates this week. They face American tonight, and William & Mary on Wednesday. Fourth-ranked Virginia invades College Park on Saturday.

The Cavaliers, knocked from atop The Associated Press college basketball poll by little-known Chaminade, is now 10-1. The Maryland game is their only action this week.

Aside from the N.C. State game, Clemson meets Furman on Tuesday night. The Tigers are 5-6 following losses in the Sun Bowl Classic to Kansas State and Texas-El Paso.

Michael Young poured in 29 points as the Cougars warmed up for Tuesday's SWC opener with a 112-58 thrashing Sunday of the University of the Pacific.

"We needed a game like this," said Rose, one of four Cougars to score in double figures. "We've just come off a long road trip, and we needed a morale boost. This will get us fired up for conference play."

The Cougars, 8-2, played in the Santury Ball tournament in Tokyo before Christmas, losing to Virginia and beating Utah, then beat Pepperdine in California last Monday. Houston plays Texas A&M Tuesday.

Houston was the only ranked team in action Sunday. Coach Guy Lewis was especially pleased with the performance of Young, who was celebrating his 22nd birthday. "Didn't he have a super first half? What did he have, 20 points at the half?" Lewis asked.

Houston used Young's shooting to open a 52-24 halftime lead.

"I had been shooting a real, real bad percentage," Young said. "I felt a little more comfortable today (Sunday), though. I worked harder on moving without the ball and going straight up with it, instead of shooting on the run."

Akeem Abdul-Olajuwon, Houston's 7-foot center, had 12 rebounds and added 18 points, many on fast breaks after Pacific's 29 turnovers.

"We didn't give ourselves a chance because we made so many mistakes. And every mistake you make against this team is punctuated by a slam dunk," said Pacific Coach Tom O'Neill.

"Houston is awful good. Since I've been at Pacific (four years), this is the best team, we've ever played. They're outstanding, but it's too bad we played so poorly."

Pacific, which has lost four in a row, dropped to 3-7 on the year.

Rich Anema led the Tiger scoring with 17 points. Andy Franklin and Graham Taylor each had 10.

Clyde Drexler, Larry Micheaux and Rose each added 13 points for Houston.

In other action Sunday, Dwayne Johnson and Marc Marotta scored 16 points each and Marquette went on a 10-2 burst in the final minute to beat Creighton 64-52. Terry Reason added 10 points for Marquette, 8-2, while Richard Bates had 13 for Creighton, 4-5.

Mitchel Wiggins scored 27 points and paced Florida State to a 74-71 victory over New Mexico. The Seminoles snapped a 39-39 halftime tie by outscoring New Mexico 10-4 in the first four minutes of the second half.

Ron Stokes hit a three-point play with 11 seconds left to help boost Ohio State over Kansas 64-61. Stokes' layup tied the game 61-61, and his foul shot gave the Buckeyes the lead.

Goes Up For Two Points

Houston center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon (34) slams home two points between Pacific center Dave Karkenny (left) and Rich Anema (43) during their game Sunday. Olajuwon scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as Houston won, 112-58. (AP Laserphoto)

Macy Keys Suns To Romp

By The Associated Press

Phoenix effectively replaced Walter Davis with Kyle Macy, while Seattle couldn't handle the absence of Jack Sikma, so the result of the game was predictable.

Macy, making only his second start in 33 games because Davis suffered a bruised thigh on Saturday, had a season-high 25 points and nine assists to lead the Suns to an easy 116-99 triumph over the SuperSonics in a National Basketball Association game Sunday night.

"This kind of reminded me a little of last year when I filled in for Walt for a month or so when he had that fractured elbow. He's our leading scorer (18 points per game), but I don't think we lose that much with me in there," Macy said. "Even though I'm not used to starting and it felt kind of funny out there for a while, I settled down eventually."

Seattle, which lost by 20 points to Los Angeles on Thursday, again played poorly as Sikma sat on the sidelines with a sprained ankle.

Without the 6-foot-11 Sikma in the middle, Phoenix enjoyed a 34-21 rebounding edge in the first half, when they jumped ahead 57-40. But Sikma wasn't all the SuperSonics were missing, according to Coach Lenny Wilkens.

"I am not a psychologist, but our thinking approach to this game was not what we're used to," Wilkens said. "Guys are forgetting what they are doing out there. They are not moving the ball. I keep hearing too many times, 'I forget.' That is no excuse."

Lakers 127, Pistons 112

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 28 points and Jamaal Wilkes added 27 as Los Angeles used a torrid-shooting first quarter as a springboard to its seventh straight victory.

The Lakers shot 79.2 percent in the first quarter as they jumped to a 42-28 lead. They increased the margin to as many as 19 in the second period, and when Detroit cut the deficit to six in the second half, Los Angeles scored 16 of the next 20 points to regain a comfortable edge.

The Pistons were led by center Bill Laimbeer, who tied his career high of 30 points.

Kings 108, Hawks 104

Kansas City overcame a 15-point deficit with a 15-0 run in the fourth quarter against Atlanta.

Larry Drew, who led the Kings with 19 points, finished the rally from an 88-73 score with a jumper that tied it 88-88. But they didn't take the lead for good until Eddie Johnson scored with seven seconds left to make it 106-104.

The Hawks' Eddie Johnson led all scorers with 21 points.

Trail Blazers 122, Nuggets 104

Jim Paxson scored 31 points and backcourt teammate Darnell Valentine added 22 to lead Portland over Denver.

The Blazers never trailed as they won their 12th straight home game.

Denver, which got 30 points from Kiki Vandeweghe, cut a 60-42 deficit to two points twice in the third quarter, but eight consecutive points by Portland, four of them by Paxson, built its edge to 87-75.

Bucks 103, Rockets 82

Sidney Moncrief scored 24 points and Marques Johnson 22 as Milwaukee handed Houston its seventh loss in a row.

The Bucks led by 17 points midway through the second quarter, but 11 straight points by the Rockets helped them cut the margin to 48-41 at halftime.

Spurs 103, Cavaliers 95

Mike Mitchell scored 14 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter as San Antonio outlasted Cleveland.

Mitchell hit his first six shots from the field in the period and the Spurs connected on 11 of their first 12 attempts to turn a 73-73 tie into a 96-84 lead with 5:29 remaining. The Cavaliers, who got 23 points from Cliff Robinson, couldn't get closer than five points after that.

Warriors 114, Pacers 105

Joe Barry Carroll scored 29 points as Golden State snapped a four-game losing streak by beating Indiana.

The Warriors, who lost by 28 points to Portland on Saturday, shook off a 13-1 burst by the Pacers that cut a 13-point lead to 39-38 by taking a 55-46 halftime edge with a 13-4 spurt. Carroll then scored 14 points in the third quarter as Golden State maintained its margin.

PSU's Blackledge A 'Sleeper' Who Led Lions To Top

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW ORLEANS — Okay, you're owner of a big pro football team and you're looking for a quarterback good enough to turn the franchise around.

If you're a dreamer, you lay out all sorts of outlandish qualifications.

First of all, he should have a live arm, a wing that can whistle a ball 50 yards with almost a flick of the wrist — not only far but deadly on target.

It would be nice if he were big and strong — let's say, 6 feet, 4 inches tall and 219 pounds for starters. Built like a lean tackle but with the agility of a tailback.

He ought to have a Phi Beta Kappa head on his shoulders, be both gutsy and poised. School education is good but it would help if he had "football smarts."

Let's make him the son of a football coach — a kid who has been handling footballs ever since he wore rompers.

He should have proved himself on a championship team in pressure situations — tough, heady, modest, unselfish, a team man, down-right good.

Quit fantasizing, you say?

No fantasy. We've got just the guy for you — a kid who is a sleeper in the college ranks, who will be up for grabs in the pro football drafts.

His name: Todd Blackledge. Fits every criteria.

Trouble is, he's not much of a secret any more. He's the guy who stole the thunder of Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker on New Year's Night by leading Penn State to a 27-23 victory over then top-ranked, previously unbeaten Georgia in the Sugar Bowl.

Where was Blackledge when they were voting on the Heisman Trophy? He was around, but performing in the shadow of guys such as Stanford's John Elway, Pittsburgh's Dan Marino and Illinois' Tony Eason.

After all, Penn State has always been known as a running — not an air-minded team — and a school which doesn't go in for ballyhooing its star players.

Blackledge even played the Sugar Bowl in high-top black shoes like those worn by Red Grange and Jim Thorpe in the dark ages.

"I wanted to wear sneakers for better traction and all I could get were these old basketball shoes," he said. "I had to paint them black. Coach wouldn't want anybody wearing white shoes."

The game was supposed to have been a one-man show featuring Georgia's Herschel Walker. At most, heralded ground-gaining duel between Walker and Penn State's elusive Curt Warner.

Instead, this strapping young quarterback changed the script and made it into a drama called "Blackledge's Bombing Bonanza." He completed 13 of 23 passes for 228 yards, including bombs of 48, 36 and 33 yards to such acrobatic, sure-handed receivers as Gregg Garrity and Mike McCloskey.

"He's the guy that made it all happen," said Coach Joe Paterno, who finally won an official national championship after being passed over five times — three of them perfect seasons — when he had sound title claims.

Blackledge is a big, strong kid, smart and icy cool — tall enough to look over the heads of onrushing defenders, a powerful enough body to take punishment and a right arm that is a siege gun.

"He's a gutsy fellow," said Paterno. "He gets knocked around and takes a lot of licks but he is a fighter and is always struggling. He makes the big play."

Blackledge was named MVP of the game, beating out his roommate, Warner, who rushed for 117 yards and caught passes for 23 more, and the great Walker, who amassed 107 yard but never really broke loose.

As Paterno left the interview stand, with Blackledge still under inquisition, he yelled out:

"He'll be back next year and win the Heisman."

Not if the pros have a grain of sense.

defenses."

Terry Bradshaw threw two touchdown passes, Franco Harris ran for 120 yards and Johnny Rodgers blocked a punt for a touchdown as the Steelers held off the Browns.

Cleveland, trailing 27-7 after a 38-yard touchdown pass from Bradshaw to Jim Smith, closed to 27-21 on a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown passes by Paul McDonald, an 8-yarder to Dave Logan and a 12-yard strike to Ricky Feacher. But Bradshaw found Lynn Swann on a 60-yard pass play to set up a 34-yard field goal by Gary Anderson with 2:39 left.

Bill Capece booted a 33-yard field goal 3:14 into overtime to lift Tampa Bay over Chicago. Capece, who kicked a 40-yarder to force, the extra period with 26 seconds left in regulation, kicked his fourth field goal of the game two plays after James Wilder bolted 47 yards to the Chicago 13-yard line.

Rookie tight end Rob Rubick scored his first NFL touchdown on a 2-yard reverse with 5:47 left to play as Detroit edged Green Bay to qualify for the playoffs for the first time since 1970.

"I was playing for everything I hold sacred," said Detroit's veteran defensive tackle Doug English. "This game meant my meal ticket, my pride, the team and making the playoffs. We're trying to abolish the defeatist attitude (toward football) in Detroit and making the playoffs could do that."

Ivory Sully blocked a 24-yard field goal attempt by San Francisco's Ray Wersching with 1:53 remaining to give the Los Angeles Rams a 21-20 victory over the 49ers. The defending Super Bowl champs finished the season with a 3-6 record.

Bill Kenney's three touchdown passes triggered Kansas City's upset of the playoff-bound New York Jets before the second-smallest crowd in modern NFL history. Only 11,902 fans showed up to see the Chiefs end the season at home with their finest game of the year.

Joe Danelo kicked his fourth field goal with two seconds left to lift the New York Giants over Philadelphia. The game marked the last NFL contest for New York head coach Ray Perkins, who will replace Paul "Bear" Bryant at the University of Alabama next season.

Washington combined three touchdown passes by Joe Theismann and an aggressive defense to beat St. Louis. With the victory, the Redskins finished the regular season atop the NFC with an 8-1 record and their best record since a 10-1 finish in 1942.

Cincinnati quarterback Ken Anderson hit an NFL-record 20 straight passes, including touchdowns to Dan Ross and Isaac Curtis, as the Bengals rolled into the playoffs with a victory over Houston.

David Woodley tossed three touchdown passes, one more than he had in eight previous games, as Miami swamped Baltimore and completed the first winless season in the history of the Colts. The Colts finished the season at 0-7-1.

Ken Stabler passed for 271 yards and Wayne Wilson ran for three touchdowns to lead New Orleans. It was the first victory over Atlanta for New Orleans since Bum Phillips took over as Saints coach two years ago and the first since 1979.

Rookie Marcus Allen scored two touchdowns in the last six minutes and cornerback James Davis returned a pass interception 52 yards for the go-ahead touchdown with 2:41 remaining to boost the Los Angeles Raiders over the Chargers.

Dave Krieg drilled a 19-yard pass to veteran Roger Carr with 47 seconds left to give Seattle a come-from-behind victory over Denver. Krieg, who replaced starting quarterback Jim Zorn in the second half, found Carr on the 2-yard line behind Broncos' free safety Aaron Kyle and Carr went into the end zone standing up.

Penn State No. 1; In Reflector Poll; Georgia Second

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The 1982 football season has come to an end — at last — and all the votes are in. Elsewhere in today's sports section are the final Associated Press and United Press International football polls, by which the national champion is proclaimed.

This season, we've also been bringing you the results of a computer readout, based on strength of schedule. This ranking, based on a program designed by this writer and programed and run by Barry Adams of Greenville, is like any other, not totally perfect. But, we believe that it comes close to being an accurate judgement of how teams stand on the basis of who they have played and who they have beaten.

Simply, the program works like this. If team A beats team B, it receives six points. Then, for each game team B wins, team A receives an additional four points. Team C, those who have lost to team B, awards third level points, two each for each game it wins, to team A. A win over a Division I-AA school does not award points on the third level, and a victory over a non Division I-A or I-AA school awards only first level points.

Where ties occur, the points are equally divided between the two schools.

For much of the late part of the season, our top team was Penn State, while the polls had Georgia atop the heap. That was settled Saturday night in the Sugar Bowl, where Penn State triumphed.

And, because of that, Penn State, with 1,170 points is the top team on the Computer Rankings. Georgia, which finished with 882 points, nosed out UCLA, with 842 and Nebraska with 840, for second place. Washington, the team that opened the season in #1 on the wire service polls, ended up fifth with 820 points.

The second five consists of Florida State, Alabama, Pittsburgh, Southern Methodist and Florida.

Some may claim that SMU should be higher ranked, especially since it beat Pittsburgh in the Cotton Bowl.

The computer, however, shows that Pittsburgh played the much stronger schedule.

Of the 12 schools played by SMU, only three of them finished in the top 48 schools — out of 96 Division I-A schools. Those three schools, Pittsburgh (#8), Arkansas (#11) and Texas (#25) produced two close wins and a tie for SMU. Their other nine wins came against much lower ranked teams. The next team on the list they beat — after Texas — is Baylor, ranked #59. One win was over Rice, ranked #96 — dead last.

Perhaps they are a better team than #9, but their schedule doesn't show it.

It also might be of note that, following the final regular season game, the teams ranked higher in the 16 bowl games, won in 14 of those contests. Only in the Cotton, where SMU beat Pittsburgh (ranked #19 and #5 at the time, respectively) and in the Holiday Bowl, where #26 Ohio State topped #10 Brigham Young, did the lower ranked team win.

Following are the listing of the Top Twenty teams ranked by the computer, followed by the remaining 76 teams in their order of finish.

The Making Of 'Nicholas Nickleby' Is Good TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It had drama, tension and honest-to-goodness conflict. The making of "Nicholas Nickleby" could have made a great television program. Actually, it did. The program, which explored the preparations and motivations of the epic London and Broadway stage productions, was seen in Britain. It couldn't find a buyer in the United States. Too bad. It would have been an informative, useful lead-in to the "Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby," the nine-hour TV presentation that will be broadcast on the syndicated Mobil Showcase Network on Jan. 10-13. The Mobil Corp. was the main backer of the television production, although the Broadway play, which generated considerable interest in "Nickleby" in this country, was financed by the Shubert Organization. The high drama behind the scenes included anxiety over whether the show would be ready for its opening, financial problems and casting bitterness that led to several members of the Royal Shakespeare Company leaving the repertory group.

Early in 1980, eight weeks into rehearsals for the stage production of "Nicholas Nickleby," the actors didn't know which parts they'd be playing. Hammering out ideas and script changes in improvisational workshops, the 40 members of the RSC swapped parts every day. Then the actors listed their role preferences. Egos being what they are in the acting business, most asked for the leading parts. Ten felt they were right for Nicholas Nickleby, Charles Dickens' Dudley Doughty star and the focal point for the play's frenzied action and strident morality. Roger Rees got it, and he said he was surprised, thinking his age, 38, disqualified him for the part of the young man with the spirited idealism. "The Making of Nicholas Nickleby" captures the tense moments on the day the roles were announced. No one made a sound. The winners were too professional to cheer and the losers were good enough actors to maintain their poker faces. When the cameras were turned off, it might have been more emotional. Six company members were angry enough to defect. From the beginning, Dickens' 900-page "Nicholas Nickleby" was an unconventional choice for the prestigious RSC. Trevor Nunn, the company's artistic director, discovered that the Soviet Union routinely adapted Dicken's novels to the stage. He felt Dickens' own country could do better. Nunn was determined to do Dickens, and financial woes for the RSC made his decision easy and logical — tight money at the British Arts Council meant the company could do only one production in 1980, rather than the usual five. Dickens' novels are full of colorful characters, enough to parcel out to all the company's members. In fact, in "Nicholas Nickleby," 39 actors played 150 parts and went through 315 costumes. One actor played 17 parts. Only Rees had a solo role. Economizing was the order of the day. David Edgar, who rewrote "Nickleby" for the stage, had to turn 900 pages of mood, action and dialogue into two nights at the theater, and, with another rewrite, nine hours on TV. He didn't do it at the expense of nuance. "The magic of Dickens is the detail, often the irrelevant detail," Edgar said. The storytelling became another problem. As Nunn tells it, he wanted the serious Dickens to come through, not the playful renditions of such productions as the musical "Oliver." To provide the darker strains, Dickens' narration, in which he rails against social injustice, had to be included. But Nunn didn't want a narrator named Dickens addressing the audience, nor did he want a joyous musical. A collective narrative, with the story being moved by one character and then another, evolved in the rehearsals. So did the music. It tells the story. It doesn't stop the story to belt out a song. And it all works, beautifully. Next week you can see for yourself.

'Annie' Closes On Broadway, But There's Already Talk Of A Sequel

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — As the lights were dimming on "Annie," ending its Broadway run after 2,377 performances, backers already were talking about a sequel to the show. "Annie," the musical, closed Sunday afternoon at the Uris Theater after becoming the seventh longest-running show on Broadway. Current and former cast members of Broadway's "Annie" and its touring companies crowded the stage for a final bow. Then came the surprise for the audience: Director-lyricist Martin Charnin introduced each member of the cast and told Daddy Warbucks' butler to close the house. Edwin Bordo, who'd been with "Annie" from the beginning, turned off the Christmas tree lights and the room lights. Snow could be seen falling behind a backdrop window. Charnin sat, dejectedly, on the stairs. Suddenly he called, "Tom!" Thomas Meehan, who wrote the book for "Annie," came on stage, looked quizzical and sat down. "Tom!" exclaimed Charnin again, "What if we wrote 'Annie II'?" The audience applauded. Meehan and Charnin already have started work on the new show. Charles Strouse, who wrote the music for "Annie" and wasn't at the Broadway closing, will write the music. "The first scene is the same as the last scene in 'Annie' only from a different perspective, a 'Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern' approach," said Charnin.

"It tells the story of Mrs. Hannigan's revenge on Annie and kind of ties up the personal affairs between the secretary and Oliver Warbucks. It will be much more of an adventure story, with a lot more scenes. And more orphans." It is hoped that rehearsals for the sequel, to be called "Part II," will begin next fall, Charnin said. "Annie" started losing its audience last year, hurt by the number of people who'd seen the movie or touring company versions. Broadway musicals which have run for more performances are "Grease," 3,388; "Fiddler on the Roof," 3,244; "A Chorus Line," 3,064; "Hello, Dolly!," 2,844; "My Fair Lady," 2,717, and "Oh! Calcutta!," 2,609. In profit, a gross of more than $225 million, Charnin says, "Annie" is No. 1. On hand for the final performance were the little orphans of the April 21, 1977, Broadway opening, now grown into young women. Also present were the original Annie, Daddy Warbucks and Miss Hannigan — Andrea McArdle, Reid Shelton and Dorothy Loudon. Along with Miss McArdle, the title character was played by Shelley Bruce, Sarah Jessica Parker, Allison Smith and Alyson Kirk.

Water Wheel Is Providing Power

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Although the Howard's Knob windmill is being scrapped and Watauga County has abandoned its energy office, alternative energy sources haven't disappeared from the area.

A 2-foot-tall dam and small water wheel have quietly produced nearly 51,000 kilowatt hours of electricity since April.

Harvard G. Ayers directed construction of the microhydroelectric plant on Laurel Creek. The plant feeds Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp.'s power lines.

The co-op pays 3 cents per kilowatt hour for the power. The plant produces enough for 10 to 12 homes, according to Ayers.

"What I was trying to show was the environmental soundness of the method," said Ayers. "The idea is that you can produce power without screwing up the environment."

Snapped Cable
WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A ship's anchor snapped an underwater cable in the Cape Fear River, leaving thousands of residents in Bladen, Brunswick and Columbus counties without telephone service Sunday. Service was expected to be restored by Monday afternoon, officials said. A new cable less susceptible to such accidents has been ordered as a permanent repair, said Royce Angel, district manager for Southern Bell. Crews have worked constantly splicing wires in the damaged cable since the incident occurred around 11 p.m. Saturday. The boat that did the damage hasn't been identified. With telephones inoperative in much of Brunswick County, law enforcement agencies relied on radios to communicate with each other.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — LIBRARY STOCK DISAPPEARS: BOOKKEEPER DULY SUSPECTED.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: G equals F.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K10952 ♥95 ♦AQ10 ♠764
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—After partner raises your suit, your hand reveals to 11 points. In addition, your holding in partner's suit increases the trick-taking potential of your hand. You are worth one move toward game, and the obvious choice is a game-try of three diamonds. This bid is forcing, but only to three spades.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KJ9872 ♥J54 ♦86 ♠AK
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand is semi-balanced, and the fact that your long suit is broken makes your hand not quite good enough for a jump to game. We suggest you jump to three spades. We would be happy with any decision partner made—this hand should play well in either three no trump or four spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A865 ♥K732 ♦AQK6 ♠A
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—With 20 points in high cards, you certainly want to be in game—the question is which game? Even though you are unbalanced, you have overlooked a basic bidding principle if you opted to introduce one of your major suits. When partner bypassed both major suits to respond one no trump, he denied holding four cards in either major. Therefore, you are wasting time and risking a bidding misunderstanding if you do anything but jump

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision that would "change the world," Thomas J. Casey called the settlement of the antitrust case requiring the breakup of the giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

With the new year the results of that settlement are taking hold, and it's becoming apparent that the judgment of Casey, a former Federal Communications Commission overseer of AT&T, was not much of an overstatement.

The breakup of AT&T is changing, if not the world, at least the way every American deals with the telephone that are — for most people — as much a part of life at home and office as running water or the weekly paycheck.

To begin with, as of Jan. 1, most Americans ordering telephone service will no longer lease their phones but will buy them. Rates for long distance and local service will change. Billing will change. And eventually the telephone will be like any other appliance, something the user buys, pays for repairs on if it breaks, and throws out when it's worn out.

All this will be confusing to telephone customers used to arranging for a telephone through one of AT&T's Bell companies or some independent phone company, then letting the company worry about fixing or replacing the phone.

But the federal government believes that competition — which is bringing about the changes — will be better for customers. It also recognizes, however, that it's tinkering with the most reliable telephone system ever built.

"We're pushing in a slow and measured way toward competition, and that's going to change the entire system," says Gary Epstein, chief of the Federal Communications Commission's common carrier bureau.

From a business point of view, the antitrust settlement approved last August by U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene requires AT&T to give up its 22 wholly owned Bell System companies no later than Feb. 24, 1984.

That amounts to the largest corporate reorganization in history, an undoing of more than 100 years of consolidation that made "Ma Bell" a one-stop shopping center for communications. AT&T didn't market its services; it filled orders.

To understand how the federal government moved to this point, one must go back to the late 1960s. That was when the FCC set the stage for telephone deregulation by authorizing customers to connect their own phone equipment to the nationwide network and slowly began opening the door to long-distance competition.

The commission reasoned that by setting technical standards for equipment, it could protect the network and still allow competitors to develop new types of phones with options that AT&T had ignored. And if other companies wanted to build their own long-distance networks, the FCC eventually asked, why should they be denied the right to connect with the national network?

In 1980, the agency took a much bigger step, concluding that technology meant there was no longer a sharp line between regulated communication services and unregulated computer services that allowed non-voice communications to be sent over the network.

Its response was to completely deregulate the equipment market and to retain regulation only for basic local and long-distance voice service.

The Justice Department, meantime, had been growing concerned over AT&T's continued domination of the telephone industry and its responses to the new competition. It filed an antitrust suit in 1974, asking that the Bell System be completely broken up.

The department alleged that AT&T — with its control over the majority of local switches; its well-established long-distance system; the manufacturing facilities of the Western Electric Co., and its Bell Labs research facilities — was using its power to stifle competition.

AT&T fought the charges. But then, as it looked forward to years of appeals, it came to terms with the Justice Department on Jan. 8, 1982, agreeing to give up the Bell companies in exchange for dismissal of the suit and the right to enter competitive businesses, free of regulation.

So what happens now? "There's a consensus emerging in the United States that competition is the best stimulus for innovative technology and improved efficiency," asserts FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler.

"That means the regulatory framework has to change."

If that shift away from regulation produces the wrenching changes outlined above, that is the price we must pay to usher our telephone network into the 21st century, say Fowler and others, among them AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown.

Ultimate In Cable TV Tested

By D.J. ROSENBAUM
FAIR LAWN N.J. (UPI) — Two communications giants are joining forces in northern New Jersey in their drive to get computer terminals into everyone's home.

CBS and the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. have entered into a joint venture they hope will show them what people do with an electronic data bank in their living rooms.

The system is called "videotex," and if predictions prove accurate it will revolutionize the way we view the world.

About 200 families in

Ridgewood have been given a special computer terminal — some with a color television monitor attached — hooked up by telephone lines to a facility in neighboring Fair Lawn. There, graphic artists, technicians, computer programmers, news writers and market analysts all work to find out what the users think of the whole procedure.

"We're trying to find out how much they like videotex, how much they'll use it and how much they'll pay for it," says Harry Smith, a CBS vice president.

AT&T provides all the technical support for the Ridgewood test — the terminals, the computer programming, the lines. CBS is responsible for all the content: the pictures, the text and the advertising.

"No two people would use it the same way," said Smith. "I guess the ability it has to respond to each person's individual information need and desires is probably its single greatest single attribute."

It works like this: a user turns on his television set, then punches a button on the computer terminal that automatically dials the main computer.

A greeting picture — called a "frame" — appears on the screen with information for everyone on the system, and the user enters his password, giving him access to his own electronic files.

The user is then presented with a list of nine main categories to select from: a community bulletin board, electronic shopping, several news services, kids' activities and the like.

"You type the number associated with the choice and type the 'send' key," explained the system's senior editor, David Schneider.

A new list, called a "menu," then appears, and another choice can be made, and so on down the line until the desired information is displayed.

Videotex, as practiced by AT&T and CBS, is only one of a number of ways textual material can be displayed on a television screen. Another method is the "closed captioning" some television programs display for the hearing-disabled, and a third is a similar system but carried over interactive cable TV. Yet another is the European "Prestel" standard, now being tested in Britain and France.

"We're in the videotex field because we've been in the communications field for 100 years," said Len Young, an assistant manager for AT&T. "Videotex is an adjunct to existing means of communications. It's the use of a TV screen to transmit information."

Young said there is no technical reason why home computers could not be used on a videotex system instead of specially designed terminals, although industry-wide standards have yet to be set.

With videotex, it is possible to order products from a JC Penney or Eddie Bauer catalog or buy merchandise from listings put out by a number of area stores, including a supermarket.

There also is a list of restaurants cross-indexed by location, type of food and price range.

Most of the ads are two lines of text long and entice you to press a key for more information.

This fall there will be a market test in the Miami area, signing up users and charging them for the service, which will be provided via cable by AT&T and the Knight-Ridder newspaper group.

CBS's Smith, who put the price of commercial service at about $20 per month, says it would be 1984 at the earliest before videotex is a full-fledged commercial reality.

"I think we all feel we're on to something exciting," he said, "that videotex may be a very basic new information medium with some things allied to print and some things allied to broadcasting, but one that like any new medium will find its own place."

Milk Program Failure Seen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal effort to impose an assessment to curb overproduction and help pay for the government's milk price-support program will fail, according to a state Milk Commission official.

"We have very little milk, if any, that goes into the price-support program," said Grady Cooper Jr., executive secretary for the commission which sets prices dairy farmers receive from dairy plants. "The general feeling is the Southeast is not the one contributing to the national surplus and that they are being assessed to take care of a problem that is not a Southeast problem."

The assessment would equal about 50 cents for every 100 pounds of milk farmers sell and add about four cents per gallon to the price dairies pay farmers, officials said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture stopped collection efforts after a temporary restraining order was issued in U.S. District Court in Columbia, S.C., on Dec. 21.

Archbishop Dies At 105

BEAVERTON, Ore. (AP) — Retired Archbishop Edward Howard, the world's oldest Roman Catholic prelate, died Sunday night at the age of 105.

Howard, who headed the Roman Catholic Church in western Oregon for 40 years, died at a Maryville Nursing Home, where he had lived the past several years.

He served as head of the Portland archdiocese from 1926 to 1966, and since 1924 had met privately with every pope except for John Paul I and John Paul II.

When John Paul II visited the United States in 1979, he telephoned Howard.

"He wished me a happy birthday and congratulated me on being the oldest living Catholic prelate in the world," Howard said. "It was a very great thrill for me."

Howard said he told the pope that he felt exiled by old age, "but you accept it as God's will."

Howard was born Nov. 5, 1877, in Cresco, Iowa. He was ordained in 1906 and was appointed auxiliary bishop of the diocese of Davenport, Iowa, in 1923. He was consecrated a bishop the following year.

Ponder Extent Of Computer Course

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Faculty members at Guilford College this month are debating the extent to which the Quaker school should teach students to operate computers.

Computer technology is evolving so quickly that "nobody really knows where we're going," said Carter Delafield, associate professor of English, who cautioned that moral and ethical implications of computers should be taken into account.

"There are so many things that we take for granted now that are going to be changed very radically or threatened," she said. "Many jobs are going to be handled from home using computers. In what kinds of ways is that going to affect family life?"

Most teachers generally support the idea of a "computer literacy" prerequisite to graduate, said academic dean Dr. Sam Schuman.

But while some want to teach students to write class papers and solve scientific problems on a computer terminal, others also want to ensure that students learn the impact of the technology on daily life.

Dr. Marvin Keiser, professor of religious studies, said he wants Guilford to adopt a computer-use program that is relatively advanced.

But Keiser said he fears a campus-wide approach that ignores morals and ethics will make students and teachers "come to think of ourselves as machines, which is to think of ourselves in an external way, which can threaten our sense of responsibility."

Schuman disagreed.

"We should not allow students to graduate from our school ... afraid of the unspecified and misunderstood possibilities of a computerized world," he said.

Growing Pains Giving Miami A Split Personality

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Tourism in Miami is off 10 percent, refugees have washed ashore by the thousands, drug trafficking is rampant, ethnic groups are polarized and poor black neighborhoods have been wracked by bloody riots in 1980 and again last week.

Yet the long shadows appearing on Biscayne Bay signal prosperity: the first new skyscrapers in a decade rise among the palm trees downtown. Nearly 20 construction projects are under way and the number of international bank offices here surpassed New York this year.

America's youngest big city has a split personality. Once a balmy community dependent on tourism, it has in less than a decade become a center of international finance and trade. But along with the new identity came drug running, a soaring crime rate and a volatile ethnic mix.

City officials lay the blame for Miami's problem on growing pains.

"Miami is now experiencing what New York experienced in the 1940s — it is becoming an international city, with international people," says City Manager Howard Gary. "With growth there comes pain."

The growth as an international city has shielded Miami from the harsher effects of recession that might have resulted from a tourist-dependent economy. But in the midst of the boom, Miami "forgot to bring along the black community," says Gary, the first black city manager here and a product of the Liberty City slums.

"People have got to realize that to keep our big economic pie intact, you've got to give some of it away to those who are less fortunate."

About 16,000 of those left behind live a few blocks from downtown, underneath a new superhighway, in a neighborhood of rat-and roach-infested tenements and vacant lots called Overtown.

Last week a Hispanic police officer shot and killed a young black man in a video arcade there, spawning two days of sporadic looting, rock throwing and car burning. There was one other death, as well as 26 injuries and 43 arrests as police sealed off Overtown.

The barricades are gone, but the poor housing, lack of jobs and feeling of isolation remain. "It's like a puddle of kerosene, just waiting for a match," says Barbara Carey, a Metro-Dade commissioner.

Overtown's melee was an extension of the tension that has existed since Liberty City exploded into riots in 1980. The toll then: 18 dead, $100 million in property damage and 250 business destroyed.

Despite an infusion of $7 million from the business community, Liberty City hasn't changed much, Mayor Maurice Ferre concedes. Joblessness is higher than before the riots and many businesses never returned.

"We live in a community that divides itself on ethnic lines in a stronger way than just about any other community in America," Ferre said Saturday. "With cutbacks in federal funds, there's no question that the most affected party in the whole process is the black community."

Dade County, which includes Miami, is 47 percent white, 36 percent Hispanic and 17 percent black. Among the Hispanics are Cubans, Nicaraguans, Colombians and Haitians. Some refugees without skills or education have displaced blacks in service-related jobs, many of which require bilingual skills.

One reason racial harmony hasn't come easily is that few of the 1.5 million residents of the metropolitan area have roots here, the mayor says. Miami is young even by U.S. standards. It was incorporated 86 years ago, when financier Henry Flagler extended his railroad south from West Palm Beach.

Miami's proximity to Latin America and its huge bilingual population have contributed to the recent economic growth. Five years ago, Florida law prohibited international banks. But the law was changed and now 43 foreign banks, from Banco De Bilbao to the Royal Bank of Canada, are incorporated here.

Now the city is trying to improve its position as an international commerce center. It is also trying to re-establish itself as a tourist destination with new luxury hotels and a convention-conference center.

A phalanx of cranes is reinventing the skyline. Some 50 building projects worth more than $2 billion are under way, including a World Trade Center, a new Dade County Courthouse, condominiums and banks. A 20-mile elevated railway system for commuters, with a pricetag of $1 billion, is set for completion next year.

"There's all kinds of growth, dynamism and money being made," says Seth Gordon, of the Greater Miami Chamber of Commerce.

Crime is still a problem, but there has been progress. The city dubbed America's murder capital in 1981 recorded 197 slayings in 1982, down 12.5 percent. And a federal task force headed by Vice President George Bush launched a war on drug smuggling in 1981; officials say they are beginning to win some battles.

But Overtown and Liberty City need more. Gary, the city manager, says local and federal government should help. But, he adds, "the establishment, the Chamber of Commerce types, have to allow the black community to get in the good old boy system and benefit from the economic well-being of this city."

JEKYL-AND-HYDE CITY — Residents of Overtown, a small section of Miami, start out the new year routinely after Miami police removed barricades leading into their city. The community was the scene of violence last week. Downtown Miami can be seen in the background. (AP Laserphoto—

Believe Pisa's Leaning Tower Doomed To Someday Collapse

By JOHN PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — The Leaning Tower of Pisa leaned another .05 inches last year and Pisa city fathers say it's doomed to collapse unless a way is found to halt the ever-increasing tilt.

The Italian government is spending $10.5 million to stabilize the 180-foot-tall marble monument, but the cause of its slant remains a mystery and Pisa officials are skeptical whether the rescue effort will succeed.

"It's bound to fall some time if we can't find a way to control it, though we don't know when it's going to happen," said Giuseppe Toniolo, chairman of the city committee responsible for the tower.

"It could take a hundred years to fall or it might be much sooner," he said in a telephone interview.

The tower is 16 feet off the perpendicular, giving some visitors vertigo as they walk up the 293 spiral stairs of the campanile or bell tower.

Scientists observing the tower's movements said the increase in its famous lean last year was .05 inches, compared with .03 inches in 1981 — the smallest increase in tilt for 15 years.

Toniolo said the angle of slant may be affected by water lying 50 yards underground beneath the tower. Scientists have noted that the tower tilts faster when the water pressure below is weak and remains steady when pressure is high.

"Last year it rained less than the previous year and that may be the answer," Toniolo said. But he said no one is sure and the movement of the tower is "simply a mystery."

In February, Parliament approved $10.5 million for a four-year project to stabilize the 12th century structure, including an electric pump to maintain the pressure of water in the underground pools.

Money also will be spent to reimburse the city for entrance fees it will lose when the tower is closed to the public while work is under way.

However, Toniolo said he and other experts fear the effort will fail.

"The last major intervention in 1934 caused a very large increase in the lean, nobody can say what will happen this time," he said.

In that year, 900 tons of concrete were pumped into holes dug under the low side of the tower in an effort to stop the increasing lean.

Construction of the tower in this north central Italian commercial center about 150 miles northwest of Rome began in 1173 and the monument had already started to lean after 35 feet had been completed.

The last three stories and a belfry were added in 1350, when the tower was already 10 feet off the perpendicular. Efforts to straighten higher stories during construction failed.

STILL TILTING — The Leaning Tower of Pisa leaned another .05 of an inch last year and is doomed to collapse unless a way can be found to stop the tilt, city officials say. (AP Laserphoto)

Competition On Car Loans Seen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Banks may drop their interest rates on car loans to help them compete with the rates being offered by the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp., analysts say.

"The banks will continue to reduce their rates," said Gerry Gunn, vice president and consumer loans manager for Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco. "I doubt very much they will come down to the level the (auto industry) finance companies are going."

Gunn was quoted Saturday in the Los Angeles Times.

The new-car rate at Bank of America, the nation's largest bank, dropped last week from 16.25 percent to as low as 15 percent. For used cars, the maximum rate fell from 25 percent to 21 percent.

David Eisenberg, auto industry analyst for the New York investment firm of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., predicted bank rates for new cars will drop to 13 percent or lower.

"I don't see any reason why they wouldn't fall to 10 percent or 11 percent," he said. Eisenberg noted that car loans generally ran at 12 percent or less until late 1979.

Bank officials were cautious, however. Most said banks can't afford to lend money at the automakers' rates, because they are paying 9 percent or more in interest for money-fund deposits.

GM announced Friday that it would offer 11.9 percent interest rates through March, and Ford announced Saturday that it would match the rate. That's higher than the 10.9 percent of late 1982, but well below the 15 to 17 percent charged for new-car loans at most banks.

Chrysler Corp.'s 10.9 percent loan program expired Friday. A spokesman for the company said Saturday he had no immediate announcement to make on a financing program.

Holiday Layoffs End This Week

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Many North Carolina textile workers will be returning to work this week after traditional holiday layoffs.

About 350,000 of the state's 2.28 million workers are employed by textile and apparel firms that usually shut down during July 4th and Christmas holidays, said David Pearce, a labor market analyst with the state Employment Security Commission.

Many firms give employees a week's pay, and workers then apply for unemployment compensation for any additional time off.
