Will Hire RTI For School Merger Study

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Board of Commissioners Monday afternoon agreed to hire the Research Triangle Institute to do a comprehensive study on the feasibility of merging the Pitt County and Greenville city school systems.

Commissioners also voted to hire Risk Consultants of Charlotte, to do an audit of the county's existing insurance program, develop a revised program, and prepare specifications for accepting bids for any insurance changes.

For several years, commissioners have urged the two boards of education to work toward consolidation. In November, members of the county board of education recommended that a feasibility study be conducted. The city school board endorsed the proposal and the board of commissioners agreed to pay for the study.

Five days before Christmas, commissioners and school officials met with representatives of RTI's Center for Educational Research and Evaluation, and with representatives of The Management Development Group Inc. of Washington D.C., to hear their proposals for the study.

RTI spokesman Dr. John Pyecha proposed to do the study in six months at a cost of $46,887, while Dr. Linton Deck of MDG proposed to take five months to do the study, at a cost of $39,300. However, Deck said that while MDG's program would include data on the geographic location of each student in the two school systems and other information — just as RTI's research would — he could not say whether the information would be computerized.

Last week, county and school officials agreed to award the study contract to RTI. Yesterday's formal action followed a conference between county, school and RTI officials during which RTI agreed to do the work for $41,868, if the school systems collect the pupil data needed.

Pyecha said RTI's study will examine the implications of merger in three major areas — school facilities (including existing conditions and upgrade costs), pupil assignment (transportation and attendance areas), and educational and administrative services (including such things as curricula, salaries, athletics).

Dr. Robert Ray, another RTI spokesman, said the data collected will be fed into a computer and will be available to contribute to school planning efforts in the future as well as for the present study.

He said with the use of computers, the information can be used for such things as assigning pupils to schools to "maximize the use of facilities," predict travel time to and from school and predict future costs.

The date will also be used to "answer 'what if' questions ... what would merger do ... the kind of interaction needed," on which to base decisions, Pyecha said.

Commissioners voted to hire Risk Consultants to develop a revised insurance program for the county after studying proposals from Risk Consultants and from Industrial

Townhouse Development Authorize Revenue Bonds Issue

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Resolutions have been adopted by the Housing Authority and the newly created Greenville Housing Development Corp., authorizing the issuance of revenue bonds to provide mortgage financing for a new townhouse development off East 10th Street.

The actions by the two agencies Monday night will pave the way for the sale of $1,355,000 in first lien revenue bonds to finance the 40-unit Greentree Village behind Hardee's near King's Row apartments.

The Authority agreed in December to form the Greenville Housing Development Corp. as a vehicle to provide tax-exempt bond financing for Greentree. The board, after being approached by the Westminster Co. of Greensboro and Highland Mortgage Co. of Raleigh, adopted a resolution then to apply for a charter to form the GHDC.

Under the financing arrangement, Highland Mortgage would be the mortgage servicer for the project and Westminster, as the managing general partner in a three-member partnership, would develop the new townhouses.

The sole function of the Greenville Housing Development Corp., it was pointed out, would be for providing the bond financing. The GHDC is made up of Dr. Pat Rice, authority chairman, Roscoe King, current vice chairman, and Joe Laney, the authority's executive director and secretary-treasurer.

The bonds would be payable solely out of the revenues of the project, it was explained, and neither the authority or GHDC would incur any liability.

In other business, Laney reported that the authority has received approval from Department of Housing and Urban Development appraisers for sites in the West Meadowbrook area for 40 units of new conventional housing.

Laney said the authority, which has now cleared the major hurdle in gaining site approval from HUD, is waiting for the federal agency to handle paperwork on the annual contributions contract for the new housing units.

Commissioners authorized Laney to enter into a memorandum of understanding between the authority, city of Greenville and HUD regarding a rental rehabilitation demonstration program here.

Under the program, 20 units earmarked for Greenville through the sponsorship of the N.C. Housing Finance Agency would be chosen for rehabilitation by the city's community development department. The memorandum says the city will follow rehabilitation guidelines in having the units improved and when the authority takes the units under contract, they will be operated under Section 8 procedures.

At the request of the city, the authority voted to grant a drainage easement across property in the West Meadowbrook housing area between Dudley and Martin Streets.

Ken Noland, director of operations, reported that 102 out of 133 buildings in one of the Moyewood sections have received new roofs and smoke alarm installations have been completed in Kearney Park and Meadowbrook. He said 170 units in Moyewood have received the smoke detection units so far.

According to Noland, HUD has approved the Authority's application for $1.1 million in emergency modernization funding for Kearney Park and the agency is awaiting further documentation from HUD to proceed with the program.

Rules Changes Voted By House; Curb 'Bollweevil'

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

House Democrats — strengthened by the last election — have already flexed their muscle in the new 98th Congress by winning rule changes and removing an outspoken "Boll Weevil" from a key committee post.

The House opened the new session by adopting Democratic-backed rule changes that Republicans claim will muzzle them.

A few hours later, the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee overwhelmingly denied Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas a return seat on the Budget Committee.

The rule changes and the action against Gramm could signal tough times ahead for President Reagan's policies in the new Congress.

House Democrats added 26 to their ranks in the November elections. The Senate remains in control of Republicans, though the body has become increasingly hostile to administration proposals.

The leadership committee voted 26-4 to oust Gramm from the committee responsible for drafting the annual blueprint of the government's financial operations.

"I think the leadership has decided to single me out, basically because they believe it will foster their control of conservatives in the party," said Gramm, who was back in Texas today reviewing his options before deciding whether to bolt the Democratic Party and become a Republican.

He said that decision could be announced in Texas on Wednesday before the leadership's decision received the expected rubber stamp from all House Democrats.

The Dallas Times Herald, quoting unnamed sources close to the congressman, said today that Gramm planned to resign his seat and run as a Republican in a special election which The Washington Post said could take place in about three weeks. The Times Herald quoted Gramm as saying he had made no final decision.

With Gramm's ouster, there were five vacancies on the Budget Committee. They were filled by Democrats Pat Williams of Montana, Howard Wolpe of Michigan, Geraldine Ferraro of New York, Martin Frost of Texas and George Miller of California.

Gramm, the only member to be disciplined from the conservative Democratic group known as the Coll Weevils, voted against the proposed changes in House rules. Fellow conservative Larry McDonald of Georgia joined him in bucking the party-line vote.

The Boll Weevils joined with Republicans in the last Congress to give Reagan the margin of victory for his economic program.

Another of the group, Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, retained his chairmanship on a slim 16-11 vote.

Rep. Charlie Wilson, D-Texas, a member of the leadership committee, said Gramm was just being used as an example because of the way he became a visible symbol of rebellion against the Democratic alternatives to Reagan's policies.

The rules changes include revisions to discourage members of either party from using spending bills to implement legislation like restrictions on abortion, bans against school busing or limitations on military and foreign aid expenditures.

Democrats said the House will now operate more orderly and efficiently. They said the use of so-called legislative riders on appropriations bills usurps the power of other congressional committees.

But critics said the changes were designed to choke off initiatives by conservatives.

Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, the House Republican leader, called the package an "exercise in expediency" so that Democratic leaders can "endure less dissent, less debate, less legislation."

"This is no way, in my opinion, to start a bipartisan and reasonable session ... to swallow hook, line and sinker, the dictates of the Democratic Caucus," added Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis.

Reintroduce ERA In New Congress

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A second battle over ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment has begun with reintroduction of the proposed constitutional amendment as the first piece of legislation in the new Congress.

"I am designating the Equal Rights Amendment H.R. 1," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said Monday after being re-elected speaker. The amendment and several other bills were presented as the House opened for business.

Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, told a news conference the measure has 221 co-sponsors in the House. "It is a priority item of business for the Judiciary Committee and we plan to go full-steam ahead," he said.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Colo., chairman of the Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, said he expected the House to pass the amendment by mid-summer.

"I challenge the Republican-controlled Senate to do likewise. Only in this way can the Senate show that it is truly committed to women's equality. Symbolic, piecemeal measures simply will not do," Edwards said.

The amendment would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex.

"Our biggest problem is the Senate — whether we can get the necessary two-thirds vote there," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo. But, she added, "the extreme right-wing got discredited severely (in the Senate) during the lame-duck session" so should be less of a stumbling block.

President Reagan has opposed the amendment, saying that while he favors equal rights, a constitutional amendment is unnecessary.

Supplements Approved By City School Board

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Additional supplements to the band and athletic budgets for the city schools were approved by the Greenville School Board at its information meeting Monday night.

The band supplement of $3,000, to be taken from the capital outlay fund, is to be used for the purchase of band instruments. The $3,000 supplement for the athletic budget will be taken from the unappropriated fund balance of the current expense budget.

The $3,000 supplement for the athletic budget is in addition to the $2,000 the board approved Dec. 6 to provide bonuses for coaching supplements. The new addition is needed to insure sufficient funds to cover costs of oil, gas, tires and other expenses for activity buses used in connection with athletic events travel for the remainder of the school year.

Last night's approval of these two budget supplements was a tentative measure with the board scheduled to give final approval to this action on Jan. 17 at which time a formal budget amendment will be submitted to the board.

Supt. Dr. Delma Blinson outlined a proposal to carry out repairs and renovations at Agnes Fullilove School that will cost between $3,000 and $5,000 in order to make the school operable for one more school year, 1983-84. The superintendent prefaced the proposal by saying the work will be undertaken at an early date unless the board directed otherwise. Board members concurred in the planned action.

An inspection of the Agnes Fullilove facility, requested by the school administration, was carried out by Chief Building Inspector Jim Kaufman on Dec. 16. Blinson noted that City Manager Mrs. Gail Meeks and Kaufman had been most

PCMH To Ask Expansion Program Endorsement

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital President Jack Richardson told the board of county commissioners Monday that the hospital will ask for official endorsement of a proposed $5.3 million expansion program within the next few months.

Richardson said the proposed expansion is the first phase of a two-phase expansion program contained in a recently completed long range facilities plan that outlines the orderly growth of the medical center to 750 and even 900 beds by 1995.

Ralph Hall, viced president for facilities management, showed commissioners a diagram to illustrate where surgery, radiology and a new emergency department would grow.

He said the additional space would provide the facilities needed to allow the hospital to move from its present 531 beds to 569 beds this year.

The plan calls for a new 17,940 square foot emergency department north of the present emergency room facilities, an additional 12,000 square feet of space for radiology in the present emergency department area, and an additional 10,000 square feet in surgery.

Richardson said the expansion of the surgery department coincides with the development of a cardiac surgery program which will allow "open heart surgery" to be carried out at Pitt Memorial.

Completion of the phase one expansion is expected to take two years.

For later development would be phase two of the long range plan which would contain central supply, surgery, intensive care and patient beds in a five to nine-story building north of the present cafeteria. Floors could be added to the new building to expand the hospital's capacity to 900 beds.

Cost of the phase two program, depending on the number of beds, and the related renovation of the present building, could amount to $52.7 million.

The second phase expansion could begin within three to five years, Richardson noted.

An alternate to moving from 750 beds to 900 beds, Richardson said, could be the construction of a 200 bed community hospital on an adjacent site. But he said the cost of such a facility, which would not include all services available at the present site, would be between $22 million and $29 million.

Break-In Arrest Is Made

Greenville police arrested a Route 1, Stokes, man early today and charged him with breaking into the Salvation Army facility on the Farmville Highway, according to Chief Glenn Cannon.

He said officers apprehended William Lee Davis Jr., 23, in the woods behind the Salvation Army building.

Cannon said entrance to the facility was apparently gained after breaking a window in a door on the south side of the structure. Damage was estimated at $150.

The chief said bond for Davis was set at $1,000.

The incident was reported at 2:23 a.m.

Custodians Attend Workshop

Custodians from Pitt County's 20 schools attended a one-day maintenance workshop at A.G. Cox School recently to hear discussion on topics such as fire safety, leadership responsibility, energy conservation, restroom cleaning and school sanitation.

The custodians were told by speakers they have "one of the biggest responsibilities involved in the total system" because they "control the environment the children come to school in."

"The purpose of the workshop was to provide an opportunity for our custodians to be exposed to ways of improving their present operation with increased productivity," said Thomas Craft Jr., associate superintendent of Pitt County Schools.

"We want to stress safety, cleanliness, conservation, communication and their importance to all our custodial personnel," he added.

Charges Placed In Break-In

Alfred Cornelius Alston of 800 W. Fourth St. has been charged by Greenville police with breaking, entering and larceny at a local residence, Chief Glenn Cannon said.

He said the break-in took place on the evening of Dec. 30 at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Brown, 101 Nichols Drive.

According to Cannon, the Browns reported the theft of a kerosene heater, stereo receiver and speakers, a coat and ski jacket, shotgun and camera.

Alston was placed in jail under $5,000 bond, said Cannon.

Damage from the collision was set at $400 to the Hill car and $300 to the Melvin car.

Mondale Files 1984 Candidacy Form

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE — Former Florida Governor Reubin Askew comments to the media in Tallahassee Monday after stepping off an incoming flight. Askew became a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination Monday, by establishing a campaign committee, although a formal announcement may not come until next month. (AP Laserphoto)

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale has filed a "statement of candidacy" form with the Federal Election Commission, but insists people shouldn't jump to any conclusions.

The former vice president, who is generally regarded as the early front-runner for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, filed the form Monday but accompanied it with a letter insisting his action "is not and does not imply a formal declaration of candidacy at this time."

The form asks what office is sought.

"President of the United States," replied Mondale.

The "Mondale for President Committee Inc." is identified as the committee formed to further the candidacy.

This delicate dance around the question of whether Mondale is or is not a presidential candidate is choreographed by the requirements of federal election law which requires potential candidates to file declarations of candidacy if they receive or spend more than $5,000 in their effort to decide whether or not to run.

No one expects Mondale to follow the example of Edward M. Kennedy who decided not to pursue the 1984 nomination. It was the Massachusetts senator's announcement on Dec. 1 that propelled Mondale into the front-runner's role.

Former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida also took an official step Monday toward formal candidacy. He didn't file a form, but accomplished the same thing with a letter to the FEC in which he said:

"While a formal announcement or declaration of candidacy for the Democratic nomination has not been made, I am taking this action because I anticipate receiving contributions or making expenditures in excess of $5,000 which may well fall beyond the terms of the testing the waters regulations."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., sent a similar letter to the commission last November.

Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina are expected to file with the commission later this week.

An aide to Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado said he is in no hurry to shift from his current "testing the waters" status. Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas and Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona are seriously considering joining the growing field of potential Democratic candidates.

The establishment of a campaign committee also is a necessary preliminary to qualifying for federal matching funds. To qualify for such government aid, a candidate must raise $5,000 in each of 20 states from individual contributions of no more than $250.

Once a candidate qualifies, the government matches all contributions dollar for dollar.

Orchestra Signs Pact

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Members of the Minnesota Orchestra have voted in favor of a new contract providing for a base pay raise of more than $9,000 over three years, ending the threat of a strike.

Orchestra spokeswoman Debbie Blakely said members voted Monday night to accept the new contract with the Minnesota Orchestral Association by a margin of 84-4.

The new contract will raise annual base pay from $29,588 in 1981-82 to $38,844 in 1984-85.

Contract talks began last summer and the musicians had been playing without a contract since September. On Dec. 3, the musicians voted to take a strike vote if no agreement had been reached by Monday.

Ms. Blakely said negotiators representing the association and the National Federation of Musicians completed the new agreement Monday afternoon and orchestra members voted on it Monday night.

SUMMER VISIT

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang will visit Washington this summer to confer with President Reagan, the Japanese newspaper Yominuri Shimbun reported today.

for a complete line of Marilyn Monroe cosmetics and fragrances for release in the spring, Richman said.

Richman said the "Remembering Marilyn" boutiques were not specifically timed to take advantage of publicity from the 20th anniversary of Miss Monroe's death on Aug. 5, 1962.

Nor does he expect to benefit from public discussion of how the actress died.

"Publicity like that tends to severely hamper a merchandising program," he said.

A private detective and a man who claims to have been secretly married to the actress have claimed she was murdered because she was about to release secret government information and details of an alleged relationship with then-Attorney Gen. Robert Kennedy.

However, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office reviewed the evidence and concluded last month that Miss Monroe died as a result of either suicide or an accidental overdose of barbiturates.

The shops will be located in Bloomingdale's stores in Washington, D.C., New York, Philadelphia and New Jersey, Richman said. The New York City boutique will open Jan. 7; others will open Jan. 24.

Part of the royalties will go to Hampstead Child Therapy Clinic in London, in accordance with Miss Monroe's will, said Richman.

New Boutiques Feature Marilyn Memorabilia

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associate Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Marilyn Monroe died 20 years ago, but a string of boutiques is reviving the polka-dot blouses, circle skirts and sheath dresses of her era, in hopes that the 1980s woman wants to look like the 1950s star.

The "Remembering Marilyn" boutiques opening this month at 12 Bloomingdale's department stores also will sell memorabilia, including a $6,000 doll complete with a fur coat, gold and diamonds, said Roger Richman, who represents the late actress' estate.

Richman said Monday he expects the boutiques to catch on because of Miss Monroe's enduring mystique and because the era of the 1950s is particularly appealing during economically troubled times.

"I believe that Marilyn Monroe is the embodiment of beauty, talent and sensuality. It is an image that many women strive for and which many men appreciate," he said.

Clothing will feature styles of the '50s — sheath dresses, capri pants, polka-dot blouses and circle skirts as well as copies of some gowns from Monroe films, Richman said.

The boutiques will sell a $6,000 doll manufactured by the Eugene Doll and Novelty Co. Inc. to be released Feb. 8 at the American Toy Fair in New York, Richman said.

The 22-inch-tall doll will sport a full-length sable coat and diamond and gold jewelry. A $450 and a $75 version of the doll will also be released at the same event.

Negotiations also are being concluded with Colorkit Cosmetics Inc. of New York

ARAN ISLE...fisherman vest is a classic V-neck sweater, knitted with worsted-weight yarn.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

If you're in the mood to knit, why not make something smashing, like this Aran Isle Fisherman Vest? Honeycombs and elongated cable highlight this classic, V-neck vest, sure to bring compliments whenever you wear it.

It's designed to be made of knitting worsted-weight yarn and directions are written for sizes 34 to 44, with the size referring to actual body chest measurements.

To obtain directions for making the Aran Isle Vest, send your request for Leaflet No. PT-218 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. KK-218, containing a top quality acrylic yarn and the instructions, by sending a check or money order for $12.50 for sizes 34/36; $15 for sizes 38/40; $17.50 for sizes 42/44. The designer's choice of fisherman white will be sent unless you specify one of the following alternate colors: scarlet, light blue, shannon green, purple, lavender, gray heather or honey.

Make a new year's resolution to learn at least one new pattern stitch a month and before you know it, you will be making some of the most exciting knits in town. Most knitters know now to work a basic cable stitch, but many are afraid to tackle more complex ones.

The honeycomb cable shown in the vest featured today is a striking pattern that appears more difficult than it really is. If you don't believe me, get out some needles and yarn and make a swatch to prove to yourself that you can do it.

You can cast on any multiple of 8 stitches plus 4. This means cast on any number of stitches evenly divisible by 8 and then add 4 more stitches. I suggest that you cast on 28 for your sample.

For the first row, knit 2, purl 24, knit 2. For the second row, purl 2 (cable 4 front, cable 4 back) 3 times, purl 2.

Row 3 is worked the same as Row 1; and for Row 4, purl 2 (cable 4 back, cable 4 front) 3 times, purl 2. Repeat these 4 rows over and over for the pattern.

To cable 4 front, work as follows: Slip 2 stitches from the right needle to a cable nolder and hold in front of the work; knit 2 from the left needle; knit 2 from the cable holder. Cable 4 back is worked exactly the same way except that you hold the cable holder with the 2 stitches on it to the back of your work instead of in front.

When directions appear in parentheses, as they do for Rows 2 and 4, you are to repeat the steps within the parentheses the number of times specified.

You can purchase cable holders or cable nooks wherever knitting supplies are sold or you can use a double-pointed needle or even a crochet hook if you want to try out the pattern before you purchase one of these items specifically designed for cable stitching.

If you want to design your own sweater, cap, vest or other garment using a panel or two of this or any cable design, this may be easier than you think.

You can use a basic pattern designed for stockinette and add a panel or two of any pattern stitch. You only need to be aware that such pattern stitches often work to a different gauge.

The gauge is simply the number of stitches required for 1 inch of knitted fabric. In the case of cables, it will take more stitches per inch while some lacy pattern stitches will take fewer stitches per inch.

To illustrate this, let's suppose that your instructions are based on a stockinette gauge of 5 stitches per inch and you find that your cable swatch gives you a gauge of 6 stitches per inch. This means you will need 1 more stitch for each inch knitted in the pattern panel. The 28 stitches used in the above example will measure approximately 5 1/2 inches in stockinette stitch, so you should add 5 or 6 stitches to the garment piece for every pattern panel inserted.

So, if you are adding two 28-stitch honeycomb panels to the back of a sweater, you would need to cast on 11 more stitches than would be needed for the same sweater worked entirely in stockinette.

If you don't make this adjustment, your sweater would be 2 inches too small in the back and the same amount in the front — or 4 inches too small overall.

Maybe this example will serve a double purpose of encouraging you to design your own sweater and also showing you the importance of achieving the correct gauge with anything you make in knit or crochet.

The Koss Family: A Tribute

By SUZANNA ANDREWS

VATICAN CITY (UPI) —

The Kosses looked like any other happy family when they lined up to have their picture taken with Pope John Paul II. But this family of Polish emigrants is different.

Jerzy and Bogumila Koss and their two teenage children are internationally acclaimed artists whose works are in America's largest collections. Former President Jimmy Carter owns two. So does one of their greatest fans, John Paul.

Their road to stardom began in 1965 when the parents left the children, then 1 and 2 years old, with a grandmother in Gdansk before going to Paris for what was supposed to be a short sightseeing tour. It was six years before they saw the children again.

Their first glimpse of life in the West put the couple in a turmoil. Anger with the communist regime came to a head.

Even the threat of losing the children could not persuade them to return, although they began trying to get the children out of Poland.

The Kosses settled in the United States in 1967 and, like hundreds of immigrants, began pleading with the U.S. government to pressure Soviet bloc countries to allow them to be reunited with relatives.

In 1971, the Polish government finally permitted Tomira, 7, and Wlodek, 8, to join their parents in New York.

Three years later, the Koss children stunned New Yorkers with their towering abstract paintings, which critics said seemed the work of mature artists.

In Rome recently for a Vatican exhibit of 100 of the family's paintings, the Koss teenagers said the early disruption of their family and their parents' strong feelings about Poland were the chief influences on their work.

"I came to a completely new country and the first thing I saw was paint and canvas," said Tomira, now 19. "I didn't know my parents, and all we had in common at first was painting."

When Tomira and Wlodek arrived, their parents had just begun to paint. Koss had been an architect and his wife a chemist.

The children's new home was a huge studio on Manhattan's lower West Side. The family still lives there, among paints, easels and larger-than-life canvases.

The family paintings have been shown in New York, Chicago and Cairo, and the Vatican show is scheduled to go to West Germany. Their dream is to take their art to Poland.

The imposition of martial law prevented them from accepting an invitation from Archbishop Jozef Glemp, the Polish Primate, to attend the 600th anniversary of the Black Madonna in August.

More recently, a Polish bishop invited the Kosses to show their paintings in their home town of Gdansk. The visit is under "serious discussion."

The theme of their Vatican exhibit was religion and peace, Jerzy Koss said, but each of the paintings also was a commentary on Poland.

The teenagers, American citizens since 1973, do not remember much about their years in Poland, but their paintings are an eloquent tribute to that country.

"Our parents were born during the war, so the suffering of Poland is related to us through them," Tomira said.

Tomira's giant abstract madonnas bear the scars of the icon of the Black Madonna of Czestochowa, patroness of Poland.

Wlodek's oil portraits of Maximilian Kolbe, the Polish priest who recently was declared a saint, are almost life-like. "Kolbe is the symbol of what is happening in Poland today," he said of the priest who gave his life in place of another inmate at the Nazi concentration camp of Auschwitz.

Dear Abby

Hard-Working Waitresses Claim Tips Are Earned

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please tolerate one more letter on tipping: Beginning Jan. 1, 1983, federal law requires tipped employees to pay taxes on 8 percent of the company's gross sales whether they actually received the tip or not!

Tipping is not a way to "give the poor dear a gift." Waiters and waitresses are not dumb clods who aren't qualified to do anything else. They are organized, efficient people who can work the socks off the best bureau chief in Washington, D.C.

Good tippers and non-tippers alike are given good service: older couples living on a fixed income, sharing a hamburger and a baked potato, and children in high chairs who make a terrible mess are treated with the same courtesy as a high roller.

Tips are not appreciated because they can be easily pocketed and remain undeclared. Tips are earned. They put food on the table, shoes on the children, gas in the car, pay for an evening at the movies and are dropped in church envelopes.

Good and bad service should be reported to the host or hostess. Good and bad food should be reported to the person who serves it. Restaurants appreciate compliments and criticism.

Sign us, your waitress, the restaurant owners and the chef. We're all of those.

KIM, DODGE, MARY, PAULINE, KAREN, CARL, ETC., WINDOM, MINN.

DEAR KIM, DODGE, MARY, ETC.: Generalizations are dangerous. All waiters and waitresses are not efficient, organized and courteous, but most of them work hard and do the best they can and should be rewarded appropriately. Whether or not restaurant owners should pay their help enough so they wouldn't have to rely on the generosity of customers to make ends meet will not be settled here. But one thing is certain: People who work for tips need them, and the paying public should consider a tip a necessity and not a gift.

DEAR ABBY: I am allergic to you! I love reading your column — in fact, it's the first thing I turn to in my newspaper — but before I'm halfway finished, my eyes are watering, my nose is running and I begin to sneeze. Help!

ALLERGIC TO ABBY
DEAR ALLERGIC: You're not allergic to me; you must be sensitive to the fresh newspaper. Stick your newspaper in a warm oven for a few minutes, or see an allergist. I don't want to lose a reader.

DEAR ABBY: Please pass this on to "Right-Handed Mama," whose husband is trying to force their naturally left-handed child to become right-handed:

Teens Still Love Movies

What do teenagers do for entertainment these days?

No doubt they watch the television that some of us didn't have in our teen years. One thing hasn't changed, however. They still go to the movies.

Seventeen magazine in a recent survey found that the high price of theatre admission has not hurt teenage attendance at the movies.

The survey, based on 5,000 questionnaires returned, showed that 67 percent of the respondents go to the movies at least once or twice a month. Some 22 percent go once a week or more and only 11 percent said they go rarely.

Seven out of ten teenagers say they will see a movie they love a second time.

Their favorite movies? The survey showed 49 percent prefer comedies. Romances were preferred by 43 percent. Seventy one percent said they would see a movie about teens. Ninety percent of those participating in the survey thought today's movies were "pretty good."

The favorite male star is Harrison Ford, while the favorite female star is Goldie Hawn.

The movies being shown have changed a great deal in the past 30 years, but it appears that, even with television, the movies are still a favorite with teenagers.

Leasing Prices Move Upward

Prices for leasing of tobacco quotas are doing just what was expected of them this year — they are going upward.

Growers are now negotiating the prices they will pay for next year's quotas, and they are higher.

There was a ten percent reduction in the 1983 flue-cured quota which makes the quotas more valuation. But also in 1983 the holders of allotments will have to pay a part of the "no-net cost" fee which growers only paid last year. Allotment owners are expected to pass that cost along in the leasing arrangement. The fee for 1983 is 7 cents per pound.

The steadily increasing cost of leasing quotas raises new concerns about the allotment system. If the cost of leasing continues to soar the growers will soon find it impossible to make a profit. That could lead to a collapse of the entire system.

SUCH COMPANY CAN BE SO DISCONCERTING!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

1982 Bankruptcy Fiasco

WASHINGTON — It's not often that the whole machinery of our federal government performs wretchedly, but when these occasions come along one is reminded of Mayor LaGuardia's famous confession.

"When I make a mistake," said his honor, "it's a beaut." Behold, if you can bear to look at it, the great bankruptcy fiasco of 1982.

The story goes back to 1978, or, if you want to take a longer view, the story goes back to 1788. Under Article III of the Constitution, an independent federal judiciary came into being. Federal judges were to have what amounted to life tenure: "They shall hold their offices during good behavior." Judges could be removed only by impeachment on charges of "treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors." Their salaries could never be diminished.

The Constitution also provided for Congress to enact a uniform law on bankruptcies. In the course of events, U.S. district judges assumed jurisdiction over petitions in bankruptcy, out a practice developed by which the judges turned these cases over to functionaries known as "referees." These referees had authority to settle bankruptcy cases and to order a distribution of a bankrupt's assets, but their final orders always were subject to the approval of the district judge.

In 1978, after almost 10

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

years of study, Congress abolished the referee system altogether. In its place, Congress created more than 200 new United States Bankruptcy Courts, but the former referees, now elevated to judges, were not to be like other judges. They were to serve for terms of 14 years; they could be removed by the judicial council of their circuit for "incompetence, misconduct, neglect of duty or physical or mental disability." Their salaries were to be subject to adjustment under the Federal Salary Act. Moreover, they were given much broader authority than they ever had enjoyed as referees.

At the time the act was passed in 1978, grave reservations were voiced in Congress that these provisions violated Article III. That was when the fiasco began. Congress ducked the issue and passed the law. Sure enough, when a case known as the Marathon Pipeline case finally matured last summer, the Supreme Court held that the authority given to the bankruptcy judges was too broad.

The court's opinion of June 28 in Marathon was hardly a model of jurisprudence. Justice Brennan wrote an opinion holding the 1978 act unconstitutional, but he could sell his reasoning only to Marshall, Blackmun and Stevens. Justices Rehnquist and O'Connor concurred, however, in the judgment. Justices White and Powell and Chief Justice Burger dissented. In order to avoid "substantial injustice and hardship," the court stayed its judgment until Oct. 4 so as to afford Congress "an opportunity to reconstitute the bankruptcy courts or to adopt other valid means of adjudication."

Instead of acting promptly to correct the situation, Congress collectively sat on its hands. The summer passed with no action. The Supreme Court again extended its deadline, this time to Dec. 24. The issue bogged down in partisan politics. Democrats, who three years ago had seen nothing wrong in authorizing Jimmy Carter to nominate 220 new Article III judges for district courts, were horrified at the prospect of Ronald Reagan's nominating 220 new Article III judges for reconstituted bankruptcy courts. Some members were willing to go along with a minor change suggested by Chief Justice Burger, simply eliminating some of the authority provided in the 1978 act, but these members got nowhere. The lame duck session did nothing, and time ran out.

Risky Jump For Gramm

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Rep. Phil Gramm, nearly certain to switch from the Democratic to the Republican Party with President Reagan's personal blessing, is pondering a risky course this week following his certain punishment by House Democrats for pro-Reagan apostasy: resignation of his Texas congressional seat to seek public vindication of his party switch in a special election.

Some GOP political operatives are pleading with Gramm to reconsider that gamble, contending he will be far better off running for the first time as a Republican in 1984 when Ronald Reagan, presumably, will be on the ballot to help him. Gramm's mainly rural district, though conservative, is overwhelmingly Democratic.

A footnote: In a Dec. 30 letter that reads as though the president wrote it himself, Reagan prematurely welcomed Gramm into the Republican Party and praised him for having "exhibited the kind of courage and leadership that, as children, we all read about in history books."

Go-Slow Glenn
Important backers of Sen. John Glenn's presidential ambitions are pleading with him to accelerate his slow-moving organizational efforts by hiring a political director as soon as possible.

The need for a recognized political pro in the Glenn operation is heightened by the senator's decision to name his trusted chief of staff, Bill White, as campaign manager. Since White is a neophyte in national politics, the nuts-and-bolts of the campaign will be handled largely by the second-in-command.

The outside advisers who want Glenn to move quickly would like him to name political organizer David Doak, a former operative for front-runner Walter F. Mondale who broke with the former vice president last year. Doak's national reputation soared with his expert management of Gov. Charles Robb's 1981 campaign in Virginia and the upset 1982 victory in Texas by Gov. elect Mark White.

More MX Follies
Senior White House aides,

presumably nursing grievances over James Schlesinger's rough treatment of Reaganomics, have vetoed the former secretary of defense as a member of the new blue-ribbon panel on the MX missile.

Press spokesman Larry Speakes specifically named Schlesinger as a probable member of the commission designed to bail the Reagan administration out of its MX misery by finding a new basing system acceptable to Congress. One senior aide privately expressed exuberance that Schlesinger, a Cabinet member in the Nixon, Ford and Carter administrations, would be on the panel.

But other aides vetoed Schlesinger. That not only deprives the panel of Schlesinger's expertise but again advertises the administration's MX follies.

Texas Rerun
A rerun of the 1978 Senate cliff-hanger in Texas when Republican John Tower edged out Democrat Bob Krueger is all but set for 1984, thanks to the decision of liberal Democrats that they do not yet have quite enough muscle to get rid of middle-roading Krueger in the primary.

Former governor Dolph Briscoe has announced his intention to run, but would be given little chance against former representative Krueger. The liberal-labor coalition, biding its time until it can get one of its own in the Senate, will back Krueger.

A footnote: Conservative Democratic representative Kent Hance, House cosponsor of the Reagan tax cut, has undisguised Senate ambitions and probably would pursue them next year if Sen. Tower were not seeking a fifth term.

Stuffing The Staff
A private letter circulating among the score of conservative Republican senators who call themselves the Steering Committee proposes that all staffers be barred from future lunch meetings because of embarrassing leaks.

The proposal to stuff the staff outside future lunches has support from the White House, which wants to open friendlier relations with conservative hairshirts in the Boon For Whom?

By PAUL O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — Comparative negligence: Is it a boon to the legal profession — a form of insurance against cases they'd lose and therefore not get paid for? Or, is it protection for innocent victims of someone else's overriding negligence?

The General Assembly will face another debate this year over the concept of comparative negligence. In tort liability law, North Carolina follows the principle of contributory negligence. Under current law, you can be injured in an accident and receive nothing from the other party even though he was primarily responsible for your injury. If you're even partly to blame for the accident, you get nothing from the other guy.

The N. C. Academy of Trial Lawyers thinks comparative negligence, the legal principal in more than 30 other states, ought to be brought to North Carolina. Under this principle, a jury would assign a portion of the blame for an accident to the people involved. Then the jury award would be split up accordingly.

The trial lawyers say it is only fair. Don't deny an injured person all damages if he played only a small part in an accident — maybe driving a few miles an hour too fast when he was hit by a drunk driver who was doing twice the speed limit.

But opponents of the bill say it is and unnecessary change that will increase insurance premiums. Rep. George Miller of Durham, a lawyer who handles many liability suits, says the law already protects people in extremem cases. A jury must first decide on the "proximate causes" of an accident. That is, the jurors must decide what they think caused the accident. Miller says juries use their common sense. They know that the drunk was responsible for our hypothetical wreck and that the man going 30 in a 25 mile-an-hour zone wasn't responsible.

Sen. Joe Johnson of Raleigh, another lawyer, further criticizes the concept of comparative negligence saying it will drive up insurance premiums. When someone sues in a liability case, lawyers get paid a percentage of the money they win for their client — either through a settlement before trial or a jury's award after. If they don't get any money for their client, the lawyers go home hungry. Johnson says comparative negligence helps lawyers by almost eliminating the cases where lawyers get shut out. They'll get paid for almost every case they take. That will drive up the costs of insurance companies which in turn will drive up premiums.

Both legislators therefore label it a "lawyers bill" — a help only to attorneys. Allen Briggs, lobbyist for the trial lawyers, says the question is if it helps the public.

Briggs says the principle of "proximate cause" doesn't protect the person who is responsible for an accident in only a small way. "The fallacy of their argument is that a jury, in order to do justice, must ignore the law (of contributory negligence)... And, if they do, you may have a judge who will not allow them to make that ruling."

As for insurance costs, Briggs says a 1979 state study commission found that of about 30 states polled, only one or two had experienced an increase in rates due to a switch from the principle of contributory negligence to one of comparative negligence.

Briggs says many lawyers now refuse to take cases if they feel the prospective client was in any way responsible. They can't afford to spend time on a case when they might not get paid anything. If the law is changed, people will find it easier to get a lawyer so they can try to recover for part of their loss, he says.

Other Editors Say Good First Step

(Forest City Daily Courier)

Most law enforcement officers in North Carolina go to work without receiving any training, a state commission says, and it has a proposal to change that.

A series of public hearings will outline the proposal calling for mandatory pre-service training for all lawmen which is now before the Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission, which certifies all the state's 17,292 sworn officers.

On the face of it, the proposal sounds sensible. As it now stands, about two-thirds of the 1,371 officers hired in 1981 were "sworn in, given a badge and issued a weapon without any training at all," said Commission chairman Wade Barber, Jr. of Pittsboro.

Some of the larger cities have their own training academies and require their officers to pass up to 700 hours of training before being sworn in. Smaller towns and counties have no such provisions and many places are lucky to meet minimum standards.

Rutherford County is fortunate in that respect. Local departments put a premium on training and are fortunate in having community colleges nearby that provide the needed courses, and in having certified instructors within their own ranks.

But many areas, judging from Barber's comments, don't have that emphasis on training or the resources to provide it. Some officers, he and his commission charge, don't even finish the required minimum of 240 hours during their 12-month probationary period and some don't even start until they've been on the job six to 12 months.

Imposing the proposed 40-hour pre-service training requirements and providing resources for that training makes good sense if it will upgrade the standards in those departments; but it probably would have little effect on operation of departments here.

Because police officials have pushed training programs, most law enforcement officers hired here have pre-service training, with candidates sponsored by the various departments at Isothermal Community College or Western Piedmont in Morganton. The need here, officers say, is for more available advanced training.

The state is correct in taking steps to see basic training is provided and required for law enforcement officers. We, and local officers, would hope the push for training doesn't stop there.

Goals Are Less Understandable

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It began with goals crystal clear and sharply enunciated, but after two years in office President Reagan's economic program seems much less understandable.

Whether this is a consequence of his administration deviating from original goals or simply because of the complexity of programs is debatable. But the result is the same.

One of the biggest areas of confusion involves taxes, which the president promised to lower and did, only to turn around and agree to raise other taxes to replace the lost revenue.

The big transfer of power from the public to private sector has not occurred to any significant degree. In fact, the ratio might even have tilted the other way, largely because of the recession.

By many measures, the private sector is now in worse shape than at any time since the Great Depression. Unemployment is at its highest since the early 1940s. Business failures are near a 50-year high.

While the administration sticks to the course, the course no longer is clear.

One of the most frequent economic questions asked in professional publications is how the transfer of energy to the public sector can occur when government deficits are at record-high levels and not likely to recede soon.

The worry echoes through professional analyses — by banks, investment houses and academic institutions — that interest rates, now falling, might resume climbing at the first signs of an upturn.

As the argument is stated, government borrowing can be accommodated for the time being because the private sector economy is deep in recession and thus making no great demands on credit markets.

But what happens when business seeks modernization and expansion loans? Will interest rates resume rising? Will the private sector be "crowded out" of money markets? Will recovery be aborted?

Public concern about federal spending and budget deficits, and the extraordinary level of unemployment, could lead to additional policy changes that might further blur administration goals.

On Jan. 7, for example, the jobless figures for December will be made public, and it is no secret that Democrats intend to use the bad news as ammunition for job programs.

In the past, the president has opposed make-work programs as unproductive, arguing that it would be far better for the unemployed and the long-term health of the economy to await a correction by market forces.

To the 12 million unemployed, a growing number of them without jobs for a year and many of them with little prospect of regaining old jobs, the president's view is really no alternative.

It is no secret that Democrats, and some Republicans too, intend to make the most of the situation, feeling that public opinion will support them in their quest for ways to stimulate the economy.

If their efforts are successful they will have struck the president at the very base of his philosophy, and denied him one of his most widely publicized and most cherished goals — getting the government out of business.

The president has worked at that goal, but also, according to his critics in the economic fraternity, made that goal less attainable because of his rigidity on defense spending.

They give him credit, often grudgingly, for bringing down inflation and interest rates, and for trying at least to chop away at bureaucratic monuments.

But they fault him for not completing the other part of the vision — rebuilding the private sector, which continues to grow weaker.

Warsaw Pact Nations Unite In Criticizing U.S.

By LARRY GERBER
Associated Press Writer
PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The Warsaw Pact opened its first meeting under the leadership of new Kremlin chief Yuri V. Andropov today with the Soviet Communist Party proclaiming the members "unanimously support" his proposal for reducing nuclear weapons in Europe. The party newspaper Pravda and other East bloc Communist papers issued a barrage of criticism against the United States on the first day of the conference, which is expected to endorse Andropov's nuclear arms proposal formally. "The U.S. armed forces are getting ready to wage an aggressive war," Czechoslovakia's Rude Pravo charged.

The Warsaw Pact meeting had been delayed from its December opening date because of the death of Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev. The conference is Andropov's first trip abroad since he replaced Brezhnev as Soviet Communist Party general secretary on Nov. 12.

"The fraternal countries unanimously support the far-reaching proposals made by the Soviet Union," Pravda said in a dispatch from Prague.

Echoing Andropov's contention that the United States is trying to gain a nuclear edge over Moscow, Pravda said, "The policy of gaining military superiority over the Soviet Union has no future."

"Let NATO commanders not hope that someone will be able to put at risk with impunity the life of the peoples in the socialist community. Those over the ocean should not take our peacefulness for lack of vigilance. Let them not try to deceive the masses in the West by fabrications about the alleged 'Soviet threat.'"

Pravda did not mention President Reagan or his proposals for nuclear arms reduction specifically. But it clearly was referring to his "zero option" plan and U.S. arguments that NATO must go ahead with its planned missile deployment to force the Soviets to bargain at nuclear arms talks in Geneva.

Reagan's proposals call for NATO to abandon its planned deployment of 572 U.S. nuclear missiles in Western Europe in exchange for removal of all Soviet SS-20 missiles targeted on NATO nations.

The Warsaw Pact consultative committee did not publicize its agenda, but Communist sources said it would formally approve Andropov's proposal to reduce Soviet medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe to 162, the current level of British and French arsenals.

In exchange, Andropov demanded NATO cancel its missile deployment plans.

The Western allies already have rejected the proposal, announced Dec. 21, on ground the Soviet SS-20 missiles have triple warheads, giving them a 3-to-1 firepower advantage over the British and French missiles. The consultative committee, composed of heads of seven national Communist parties, government leaders and other officials, is the coordinating political body for the Warsaw Pact alliance and usually meets every two years.

Besides Andropov and President Gustav Husak of Czechoslovakia, the leaders participating are Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski of Poland, President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania, Janos Kadar of Hungary, Todor Zhivkov of Bulgaria and Erich Honecker of East Germany.

"At the present time the international coordination of the foreign policy of the Warsaw Pact countries has reached such a level that essentially there exists a single foreign policy strategy and level of these countries," the Slovak youth newspaper Smena said.

Smena reported the meeting also would focus on deteriorating relations with the West, including American restrictions on trade and technology exports, and the economic problems of the Soviet bloc.

The East bloc, hard hit by the worldwide recession and huge debts owed the West, is trying to tighten economic cooperation. But shortages of food, consumer goods, electrical power and exports persist.

Polis' sources in Warsaw said the committee probably would give special attention to Poland's debt to the six other members of the alliance. They contributed funds over the last two years of social and political upheaval, when Western aid dried up.

Western diplomats and East European sources said they expected few new initiatives but cautioned against discounting the meeting's importance.

"The leadership change in Moscow came at a time of economic crisis, at a time when a lot of this is coming to a head," said one Westerner. "These people are bound to be thinking, 'What is my role? What is my status?'"

Flooded Areas Receive Respite

By The Associated Press
Dry weather is giving four flood-weary Southern states a much-needed breather, but volunteers patrolled sandbag dikes today where some waters are still rising and officials began adding up damage that may reach $200 million in Louisiana alone.

Up to 18 inches of rain fell on portions of Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas during a two-week period beginning at Christmas. The ensuing floods inundated well over a million acres of lowlands, forcing about 10,000 people to flee their homes and causing at least three deaths and 250 injuries, officials said.

Gov. Dave Treen declared 19 of 64 Louisiana parishes disaster areas while Gov. William Winter put nine Mississippi counties on the list.

President Reagan, during a 1½ hour tour of the Monroe, La., area Sunday, promised he would respond favorably — and quickly — to any requests for federal aid.

Inspectors from the Federal Emergency Management Agency arrived Monday in Monroe to begin totaling damage claims that will determine the extent of federal assistance. The total may not be known for several weeks, officials said.

Damage in Ouachita Parish, which includes Monroe, was estimated at $81 million, Treen said. Statewide damage could reach $200 million, the governor said.

Harry Borah, with the agency's National Flood Insurance Division, said 300 household flood claims have been filed through a temporary office in Monroe.

"Because of the depth of the water in these homes, and the amount of time the water has remained in the homes, and the high cost to repair them," damage claims in the Monroe area probably will be higher than the national average, Borah said.

The average flood claim has been close to $3,000 for contents and $3,000 per building where the agency underwrote flood insurance, he said.

Although forecasters said rain could return to the region about Friday, officials said they were holding their own against the floodwaters.

Monroe Mayor Robert E. Powell said Monday that waters remained steady around that northeast Louisiana city of 60,000.

"We've all got that optimistic view that maybe we can survive it," Powell said. "But if we have bad weather, it could all come back."

The Ouachita River, which runs through the center of Monroe, and the Red River, which flows from Arkansas through Alexandria in Rapides Parish in central Louisiana, were not expected to crest until Thursday or Friday — well above flood stage.

Majority Vote Improves ESP

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina psychology students reading hidden information beat the performances of people considered gifted in extrasensory perception, a psychotherapist says.

By a "majority vote" the 40 average college students got a perfect score on a special extrasensory perception test administered by Dr. James C. Carpenter of Chapel Hill.

Carpenter said as a group, the students correctly guessed the order of 12 signs — circles and plus marks — which he had written on a piece of paper and placed in his desk drawer

The pluses and circles translated into the Morse code symbols for the word "peaca."

Similar group exercises could be used to receive messages over long distances, Carpenter said.

"You would be using the cooperation of a group of subjects as a kind of human transmitting device," he said.

Last month Carpenter described his study at a meeting on parapsychology in Durham. Investigators there complained of the low accuracy rates that have hindered their controversial research into the mind's possible abilities to "see" hidden information, predict events of make objects move.

The most gifted psychics on their best days are correct only 60 percent to 70 percent of the time in their guesses

ON DEAN'S LIST

Rose Virginia Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.N. Jackson of Greenville, has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at Peace College. To be eligible for the dean's list, a student must maintain a grade point average of 3.0 out of a possible 4.0, receive passing grades in all subjects and carry at least 12 hours of course work.

or predictions, investigators said.

Carpenter said the logic behind the study is based on the principle behind public-opinion polls — the more people involved in a survey, the more accurate it is likely to be.

Senate. White House chief of staff James Baker believes that one source of trouble are leaks from staffers following freewheeling lunches at which the president and his aides — particularly Jim Baker — often are criticized.

The move to limit future attendance to senators themselves was started by Sens. Orrin Hatch and Steve Symms, deputies of Steering Committee chairman Jesse Helms. Most of the 20-odd members of the committee have given their consent, but some top staffers are upset at the implication that White House pressure is influencing a purely housekeeping decision by Republican senators.

The effect of this wholly irresponsible performance is to create clouds of confusion over 700,00 pending bankruptcy cases. The bankruptcy judges are in limbo. Can they draw orders? Can they even draw salaries? It seems apparent that months or years of litigation will ensue. Meanwhile businesses large and small are trapped in the mess. It will be February or March before the incoming 98th Congress looks at the situation. You wouldn't think that 535 grown men and women could act with such total ineptitude, but on Capitol Hill they sometimes do.

Forty Goals Set By Chamber

Forty goals — including early completion of the U.S. 264 project and increasing job opportunities within Pitt County — are part of the 1983 Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Program of Work, recently adopted by the Chamber's Board of Directors.

According to 1983 Board Chairman David Duffus, other priority goals in the program of work include endorsement of the northern loop into the U.S. 264 plan, education of all students in Pitt County, continuation of a tobacco program and continued development of the County Chamber through interaction between the Ayden, Bethel, Grifton and Greenville chapters.

The chamber's budget, said Duffus, calls for $220,000 for the 1983 program of work.

"Over 900 members of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce have had an outstanding year under the leadership of Larkin Little as chairman and the extended leadership of our other council chairman — Dr. Elliott Dixon, Bob Bowers and Ray Wooten," said Duffus.

"In order to effectively carry out the program of work we will need our members to serve on committees and task forces and give of their time, knowledge and resources to have a good year in 1983," he added.

Duffus said task forces and committees will begin work immediately.

Four Charged With Break-In

Four persons have been arrested by Pitt County deputies on charges stemming from the investigation of a Dec. 29 break-in at the Flamingo Club on Route 5, Greenville, Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported.

He said that Celester Myrchison, 22, of Route 11, Greenville, Jesse Ray Little, 22, of Route 5, Greenville, and Melvin Simmons, 22, of Route 11, Greenville, were charged with breaking, entering and larceny. Johnny Ray Manning, 21, of Route 5, Greenville, was charged with possession of stolen property, said Tyson.

The sheriff, who said Little is also wanted for burglary in New Jersey, is being held without privilege of bond, while $10,000 bonds were set for Murchison and Simmons and $5,000 for Manning.

Tyson said the club owners reported the theft of property and merchandise valued at $4,700, including overhead lights, push button controls, a turntable, stereo equipment, and quantities of beer and cigarettes. He said officers recovered approximately $4,300 worth of equipment and merchandise.

Tyson, who said entrance to the facility was gained through the roof, reported that investigation is continuing.

Insurance Management Corp. of Charlotte, which were presented to the board last week.

Assistant County Manager Don Davenport told the board that for all practical purposes the two proposals were alike except in price. Risk Consultants set a cost of $3,900 for a contract term of one year, while IIMC's price was $7,000 per year for a three-year period.

Davenport noted that Risk Consultants has agreed to a $500 reduction in its price if part of the work is done by county employees.

Richard Canavia, Risk Consultants' president told commissioners last week that he would "guarantee" to produce annual premium savings of at least $3,000 (the cost of preparing specifications, marketing and analysis of the new policies), "or our fee will be reduced to an amount no greater than the savings."

In other business yesterday, the board gave tentative approval to a request from Pitt County Fair officials for $7,616 to move and preserve the Seaboard Coast Line depot in Winterville. The depot would be relocated at the Village of Yesteryear at the fairgrounds and serve as an historic site and museum.

Commissioners also approved the hanging of a portrait of former county attorney W.W. Speight in the superior court room, at the request of the Pitt County Bar Association. The portrait is being given to the county by members of Speight's family.

The board also agreed to lease the county's tobacco allotment at public auction this year as in the past. The allotment will be offered for lease in 4,000 pound lots, the commissioners will determine later, when regulations have been established, whether or not to sell the county-owned tobacco quota.

The county-owned farmland will also be leased by public bidding, which is expected to take place toward the last of the month.

Rats Damaged By Saccharin

GLASSBORO, N.J. (AP) — Research shows that even in small doses, saccharin can cause health problems in laboratory animals, a scientists says.

The artificial sweetener shrank the bladders of laboratory rats and may have caused them to develop less than normal brain capacity, said Dr. Richard Meagher of Glassboro State College.

Meagher gave his rats a saccharin solution one-fifth as large as amounts given in Canadian studies that linked the sweetener to cancer. He did not detect evidence of cancer in his animals.

Meagher, who has spent four years investigating the effects of the sweetener, said he would not speculate on any parallel problems humans might encounter.

"Basically, any research you are going to do may or may not have similar like effects in humans," Meagher said. "But I can't say for sure ... primarily because I don't believe humans imbibe nearly as much saccharin as our animals were imbibing."

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration tried to ban saccharin in 1977 after a study by the Canadian National Cancer Institutes and several Canadian universities found a higher incidence of bladder cancer in rats given the artificial sweetener.

But Congress in 1977 approved legislation stopping the agency from imposing the ban for four years, and President Reagan in August 1981 signed a bill extending for two years the time during which the FDA may not ban the artificial sweetener.

Support Loans Interest Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Price support loans taken out by farmers in January will carry an interest rate of 9 percent, the Agriculture Department says.

Officials said Monday the January rate is down one-eighth of 1 percent from December and reflects lower charges for money borrowed from the U.S. Treasury by the Commodity Credit Corp.

The lower rate also will apply to loans made this month to farmers to build storage facilities.

A CCC official, Everett Rank, said that the interest rate on outstanding 1981 and 1982-crop commodity loans and farm facility loans which were made since April 1, 1981, were "automatically adjusted" to the 9 percent rate as of Jan. 1.

Proposals for Greenville City Schools' bank accounts have been sent to all banks who responded to proposals sent out last year on possible contracts for the city school funds. Finance Officer Mrs. Naomi Edwards said the proposals will be evaluated when they are returned. Jan. 28 is the date for proposals to be in hand at the central office, with bids to be reviewed by the school board on Feb. 7.

The National School Board Convention will be held April 22-26 in San Francisco. Board members were asked to give thought to the possibility of one or two board members attending, keeping in mind the expense of the trip (about $1,000 per person) excluding meals. Two current members who have previously attended national conventions said they feel the knowledge gained at national meetings makes it worthwhile despite the cost involved.

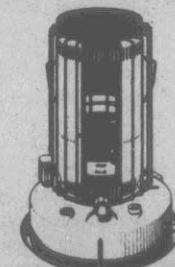

In executive session, the board approved one maternity leave, one resignation, and the election of two new personnel.

Vikings Defeat Dallas

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings came up with more big plays than did Dallas, and thus avoided another meeting with the Cowboys next week in the opening round of the National Football League playoffs.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said the Cowboys, who with the 31-27 loss finished second in the National Conference and play host to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the playoffs Sunday, had nothing to gain by winning.

"You have to give the Vikings a lot of credit, they fought to stay here and they deserved it," Landry said after Minnesota's nationally televised Monday night victory. "We just wanted to play hard. We really had no incentive except the prestige of winning."

The Vikings earned the home-field advantage against Atlanta in the first round of the playoffs Sunday.

In a game that featured big plays, the biggest was a 99-yard scoring dash by Dallas' Tony Dorsett, the longest in NFL history.

It came just after Minnesota cornerback John Turner ran back an intercepted pass 33 yards for a touchdown to give the Vikings a 24-13 lead. On the ensuing kickoff, Timmy Newsome fumbled the ball out of bounds on the Cowboy one.

On the next play, Dorsett went off right tackle for his history-making run.

"There wasn't a thing wrong about the (defensive) play," Minnesota Coach Bud Grant said of Dorsett's run, which broke the record of 97 yards set by Andy Uram of the Chicago Cardinals in 1939 and tied by Bob Gage of Pittsburgh in 1949. "He saw a crack and exploited it. I was in awe of the play myself."

"I just saw a lot of green," said Dorsett, who finished the game with 153 yards and wound up second to Freeman McNeil of the New York Jets for the NFL rushing title. "I'll hold on to this one a long time."

"Nothing happened," nose tackle Charlie Johnson said of the effect of Dorsett's touchdown. "There was no emotion change. A lot of teams would have folded after that, but not us. That's what made the difference."

Later, Ron Springs' two-yard dash gave Dallas a 27-24 lead, but the Vikings came right back and drove 80 yards.

The Vikings went to running back Ted Brown for one of the big plays of the series. Brown, who scored twice and rushed for 100 yards and caught passes for 50 more, caught a 29-yarder in the drive to get into Cowboy territory. A little later, quarterback Tommy Kramer, who completed 18 of 34 passes for 242 yards and two touchdowns, hit Rickey Young with a 14-yard touchdown pass.

Young caught the ball as he slid to the ground, regained his feet and ran it the remaining 10 yards. Young said his first thought was to hang onto the ball and not get up.

"But I heard Teddy (Brown) yelling at me to get up," he said. "I finally figured out I had time to get up and get in."

With the lead, the Minnesota defense, which played inspired ball all night, held Dallas in the final two minutes.

"They've taken a lot of abuse over the years," Grant said of the defense. "Maybe they'll get some credit now."

The defense sacked White three times and, except for Dorsett's one spurt, limited the running game to 98 yards.

WKU Bombs ECU Women, 76-44

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — East Carolina's Lady Pirates are finding being the road anything but pleasant this year.

Western Kentucky used its superior inside power and a lackluster performance en route to an easy 76-44 victory Monday night.

The loss was ECU's fourth in five games on the road and left ECU to 4-4. WKU is now 5-3.

"We don't have the desire to win right now," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said after seeing her Lady Pirates lose to a team they whipped, 108-54, a year ago in the Converse Lady Pirate Classic. "Our teams in the past have won on their pride," she said. "It's something you can't instill in a player. They've got to have it. I think right now three players want to win."

"Mary (Denkler), Caren (Truske) and Fran (Hooks) are doing a heck of a job, but they need help elsewhere," Andruzzi added. "There is only so much Mary can do. She's got to get support from our inside people."

The support was not there last night. Western Kentucky, which starts a front line of 6-2, 6-2 and 6-1 and has another starter at 5-11, outrebounded

ECU by 19 (43-24).

"We were outrebounded because of poor positioning," Andruzzi said.

The Lady Pirates' tallest player is Darlene Chaney at 6-2. Denkler is 6-0.

"We went into the game knowing their strength and we just didn't do it. Very often this year we're going to come up against bigger teams," Andruzzi said. "We must face that fact."

Diane Depp (6-1) led WKU off the board with 11 rebounds. Sharon Ottens (6-2) grabbed nine rebounds and Lillie Mason (6-2) pulled down eight. Mason led all scorers with 18 points. Depp and Ottens each had 15.

ECU was led by Denkler with 15 points and Lorraine Foster added 12. Hooks led ECU off the boards with six.

ECU had one of its worst shooting nights from the field all season, hitting just 17 of 55 (30.9%). Foster was five of 17 and Truske one of six as ECU scored on just 13 of 73 possessions.

WKU hit 31 of 55 from the floor (56.3%), led by Ottens (seven of eight) and Mason (eight of 14).

Western Kentucky scored the first six points of the game and rolled to a 22-8 lead midway through the first half. ECU closed to within 10 (28-18) but got no closer the rest of the game.

The Lady Pirates trailed at the half, 38-22, and Western Kentucky coasted home with the win in the second half.

Western Kentucky is virtually the same team ECU beat last year except for one person — first-year head coach Paul Sanderford, who came to WKU after leading Louisville to the Junior College National Championships last season.

"Western Kentucky is a very good team, a very organized and disciplined team. Their game plan is very well thought out," Andruzzi said.

Even with that, however, Andruzzi was upset at the numerous opportunities the Lady Pirates missed inside.

"We missed chip shots inside," Andruzzi said. "We should have capitalized inside for 30 points. They scored 40 points inside, we scored 10."

ECU continues on its road trip tonight when the Lady Pirates battle Belmont College.

GCA Turning To Defense

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer

The pressure is rising at Greenville Christian Academy — defensive pressure. GCA has historically fielded high-powered, offensive teams, but of necessity the Knights have found a new love this year: defense.

"We've traditionally been offensive-minded, but with the quickness we have and the lack of experience I knew we had to go to pressure defense. In the past, we would have hurt ourselves doing that," GCA coach Dale Thatcher said.

The Knights entered the '82 season with just one returning starter from a 23-3 team that lost to eventual state champion Kerwin Christian in the quarterfinals of the state tournament.

Thatcher figured the best way to overcome the losses was to emphasize defense, full-time, full-court defense.

"We spent the first two weeks working on defense," Thatcher said. "I think they realize that if we're going to win its going to be with our defense. It's going to be our strong point this year."

The Knights have used a variety of defenses — the mainstay being man-to-man — en route to a 3-2 record going into tonight's game at Bethel Christian. GCA is 1-0 in the East Carolina Christian Conference.

Thatcher said this week — which includes games at home Friday (against Wilson) and Saturday (against Wake) — will tell a lot about his team. "Right now, it's hard to tell (how good we are)," Thatcher said. "But this week should tell us a lot. We've got some key games."

"We know we can play with these teams. We've got the talent, but we just need to learn how to put a game away."

Added Thatcher: "A lot of our success this year will depend on how quickly we mature. If we can mature and learn how to handle the pressure, that will be the difference between a real good year and not a good year."

GCA is led by 6-3 senior forward Jerry Butts, the lone returning starter back. Butts leads GCA in scoring with a 14.0 average. Joining Butts at forward is Dan Andrews, a 6-2 sophomore.

Guard Chris Harris, a 5-9 junior, is the Knights' No. 2 scorer, averaging 10.0 points a game. Mike Bragg, a 5-9 junior, is the other starting guard.

Starting at center is Mike Griner, a 6-2 junior. Griner, Harris and Bragg were all on last year's team but did not start.

"I guess we're in what you can call a rebuilding year. We're not expected to do as well as we did last year," Thatcher said. "But, I like the attitude this year. They're very unselfish and very team-oriented and that might be able to make up for our lack of experience."

The Knights are also deeper this year. "We've got a strong bench this year," Thatcher said.

Among the top reserves this year are guard Chris Stox (5-8, junior) and Brian House (6-0, junior). Others on the team include: forwards Bobby LeNeave (5-11, junior), Daren O'Brien (5-10, sophomore) and Tate Corney (5-11, junior).

Thatcher said the Knights' weakest area is offense.

"We aren't confident. We don't have the poise yet. We need to learn how to control a game," Thatcher added. "We've forced our opponents into a lot of turnovers but we haven't been able to take advantage of them."

As for the conference race, Thatcher picked Faith Christian as the top team. "Faith is the team to beat, although it's hard to tell. They did a good job against us last year, though, and they've got just about everybody back this year."

As for the Knights, Thatcher said: "We got some goals. We want to win the conference and earn a bid to the state tournament. Like I said, we know we can play with these people, but it's (a question) of if we can come out ahead in the end."

UNC Back In Top 20

AP, UPI Polls On Page 8
By The Associated Press

The North Carolina Tar Heels are back in the Top Twenty basketball rankings, thanks to a strong showing in a holiday tournament.

Bounced out of the Top Twenty two weeks ago after a slow start, the defending NCAA champions moved into the No. 18 spot Monday with an impressive performance in the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii last week.

The Tar Heels, 8-3, who won the tourney with a 15-point rout of Missouri, avenging an earlier loss to the Tigers, are one of two new teams in this week's rankings. Purdue, 9-1, squeezed into the last spot, nosing out Minnesota, Tulsa, Oklahoma State and Fresno State in the voting by sports writers and broadcasters around the country.

Indiana, meanwhile, maintained the No. 1 position for the second straight week, gaining 52 of a possible 60 first-place votes. The 10-0 Hoosiers received 1,191 points in the poll, which saw the top four teams maintain their positions.

Wolfpack SCOREBOARD

Rolls By Knights

Boxes In Scoreboard
By The Associated Press
North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano insisted before Monday night's game that Fairleigh Dickinson was no pushover, but the Wolfpack's upcoming schedule may have him wishing for as "tough" an opponent.

Even as 16th-ranked N.C. State was mauling Fairleigh Dickinson 111-76, the most lopsided victory for a Wolfpack team since the 1975-76 season, Valvano was looking ahead to Friday's Atlantic Coast Conference visit at Clemson.

Sunday, N.C. State plays 15th-ranked Missouri and the following Wednesday faces 4th-ranked Virginia. Games with Georgia Tech and North Carolina follow.

"We've got a tough road ahead of us," Valvano said. "I think it's a very demanding schedule. I don't know when's the last time we've won at Clemson. I know I've never won down there."

In other non-conference games involving ACC teams Monday, Maryland nipped American University 73-71, Duke defeated George Mason 90-79, and Wake Forest stopped Siena 70-55.

The Wolfpack continued to tune up for ACC play by pouring in 19-foot, 3-point goals. Fairleigh-Dickinson agreed to use new ACC rules allowing the 3-point shot and a 30-second shot clock, a decision Knights coach J. Donald Feeley later regretted.

"I guess it was a mistake," Feeley said. "They've been practicing."

Guards Derek Whittenburg, who along with teammate Thurl Bailey topped the 1,000-point career plateau, and Terry Gannon hit five 3-pointers apiece. But the leading Wolfpack scorer was freshman swingman Ernie Myers, who scored 22 points in just 15 minutes.

Whittenburg added 21, Gannon 17, Bailey 16, and Lorenzo Charles 10 for N.C. State, 6-1. Fairleigh Dickinson, 3-5, was led by Marcus Gaither with 21.

The hot-shooting Demon Deacons overcame slowdown Siena's slowdown tactics to post their eighth victory against only one defeat. John Toms, who hit 13 of 16 shots from the floor, scored a career-high 27 points.

Toms contributed 17 points in a second-half surge that moved Wake Forest from a 35-33 deficit to a 43-38 lead. Toms and Danny Young then led another 12-point spurt that put the game out of reach.

Famed Playhouse Revived After Long Intermission

By T.W. McGARRY
PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The kid was a looker, and appeared to have some talent, but green? Suffering Seizicks, J.B., green as the corn in Iowa, where she caught the train last Tuesday with a high school diploma, a new pair of shoes and an ambitious streak longer than Sunset Boulevard.

There were several solutions to the movie moguls' problems with inexperienced but promising young talent back in the 1930s and 1940s, some of them ethical.

A dynamite discovery with a powerful backer might get the studio to spring for private acting lessons. For many others, it was:

"Send him to Pasadena and let's see who comes back in a year or two."

The Pasadena Playhouse, a theater-cum-college out in a suburb, was a training ground for the silver screen dream factories, a place where the cute little blonde from Boise and the apprentice leading man from Little Rock learned to walk and talk and breathe like actors.

Dance Classes Are Planned

Dance Slimnastics Ltd, in conjunction with the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, invites area residents to join members in a new series of aerobic dance classes scheduled to begin the week of Jan. 10 at Elm Street Center.

The new session will run four, six and eight weeks in duration. Persons of all ages are welcome, and no previous experience is necessary. For more information, call 756-5219 (day hours) and 752-1492 (evening hours).

The Playhouse went broke 12 years ago, but the legend of those days still inspires Stephen Rothman, an energetic ex-New Yorker who has devoted three years to reviving it, with some success.

"In a real sense, it was a farm system for the movie studios," Rothman recalled.

"They not only sent them out here to knock off the rough edges, you'd also have agents hanging around looking for new talent to sell. There was a kid from Texas who got discovered that way — Dana Andrews.

"One of the studios sent out a young man who still talks about staying up so late at rehearsals that he'd sleep in the bathroom at his job in a bank. His Robert Young. Andrews and Young were here with a bunch that also included Robert Preston, Lloyd Nolan, John Carradine and William Holden.

"In a later generation, Sally Struthers came down from Portland to work here. Dustin Hoffman and Charles Bronson trained here.

"So did Gene Hackman. Hackman got an 'F' in an acting class here and has it framed next to his Academy Award."

Other Playhouse alumni include Randolph Scott, Tyrone Power, Eleanor Parker, Carolyn Jones, Ruth Buzzi, Martha Hyer, Paul Muni and Gig Young. Cecile B. deMille was on the board of trustees.

The Playhouse had three theaters of different sizes and types, where students sometimes appeared with well known movie actors, who had a chance to brush up on their stage skills away from the glare of Broadway.

"A chance to work at the Playhouse was like getting a ticket into the movie business," Robert Young later recalled.

It operated a complete four-year college for 250 students, including dormitories.

Designated the California State Theater in 1937, it was the scene of more than 3,000 productions between 1917 and 1969, including more than 130 world premieres, which the management says is a record equalled only by the 300-year-old Comedie Francaise in Paris.

The Playhouse collapsed financially after its founder, Shakespearean actor Gilmor Brown, died in 1960. An unpaid mortgage and running troubles with the IRS did it in. Its rambling Spanish style building, already suffering from age, stood almost abandoned for 10 years. The neglect showed.

Then came a $1.3 million federal loan and backing from the city government and the large and wealthy Hollywood community — a 1979 benefit party chaired by Ed Asner and Sally Struthers raised more than $40,000. In 1980 it was announced that the theater would reopen.

It has been opening — by stages, so to say — ever since.

"We've restored two of the three theaters and are in the middle of restoring the 700-seat main stage theater, the most important one," Rothman said.

"We're just at the halfway point (of the physical restoration) and aiming for May completion, with a fund raiser in June. We're going to open in October, with four productions for the main stage, six in the Balcony Theater, and one show in the small Interim Theater.

The theaters have been opened sporadically for two years, beginning with "Echoes" in the 53-seat Interim Theater, followed by the world premiere of "Robert Frost, Fire and Ice," "The Gin Game" and "El Grande de Coca Cola" both sold out and were held over.

"There are no other complexes in California where you'll find three plays going on the same night. I'm hoping we get to the point where people can pull up to the theater on a whim, and if they can't get tickets for one show, just go to another."

The school for actors is also returning, Rothman said, but not on the scale of the past.

"We aren't going to have dormitories and a full B.A. program but we will have a graduate student conservatory awarding a masters degree. Actors Equity has agreed to allow student actors to take small roles in Equity productions and thus qualify for their union card."

What about the kid from Indiana with the big dreams? "We're planning to have regional auditions at colleges around the country" to recruit promising young talent, he said. "We're aren't going to just sit around and wait for the next Meryl Streep to walk through the door — although if we waited long enough, she would."

Most Of What You'll Hear Is Just Small Talk

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — One problem with "Listen to Your Heart" on CBS tonight is that most of what you hear is small talk.

The two-hour, made-for-TV movie starring Kate Jackson and Tim Matheson was shot on location in Chicago, and the background scenery — including a glimpse of columnist Ann Landers, who lives and works in that estimable place — is a plus.

But how much can you expect from a movie in which everyone, or so it seems, owns a telephone answering machine, eats sushi and uses trendy expressions like "capisce"?

Miss Jackson plays Frannie Greene, who's a bit touchy after an unfulfilling affair with her boss. She's just taken a job as art director for a big publishing company, but before her first day at work, she meets Josh Stern at Houlihan's.

Josh (Matheson) takes Frannie home that night, and they chat. "Are you trying to get me drunk?" Frannie asks. "Then I wouldn't be a nice guy, would I?" Josh replies.

But nothing happens — remember, Frannie doesn't want to get involved.

Coincidence No. 1: Josh works at Graham Publishing, too. He's an editor, and Coincidence No. 2, he needs a cover for his latest book, "Encounter with Japan," and he needs it now.

Frannie agrees to read the book that night — not over dinner with Josh — but she's persuaded by her roommate, Stacey, to spend the evening with Rick and Steve, a couple of characters facing time for indecent exposure. Stacey, played by Cassie Yates, is their lawyer.

Coincidence No. 3: Josh happens to be in the same sleazy neighborhood with Frannie and the others.

Josh and Frannie spot each other but before he can catch up to her, the foursome ducks into an adult bookstore. "Say, Fran," Rick, or Steve, says as they all emerge from the store, having eluded Josh, "I never thought you'd be into the kinky stuff."

Another one of those witty remarks.

So what happens? Frannie finishes the sketches for Josh's cover and asks the guy to dinner. They eat in one of those rooftop restaurants, then take off for a night of dancing aboard a paddle-wheel boat. Then comes the inevitable:

Frannie: "Can I ask you a professional question?"

Josh: "Shoot."

Frannie: "Would you kiss me?"

The remainder of the movie — there's still about an hour left — is more or less predictable. At one point, something like this happens:

Josh: "Frannie, I just need some time."

Frannie: "Take the time, Joshua, take all you need. But don't give up."

So what makes "Listen to Your Heart" entertaining television, even mildly amusing at times? It may be Miss Jackson, an original star of "Charlie's Angels" who played in "The Rookies" before then. She can be endearing, especially when she's upset.

"I'm not mad ... I'm not mad," she tells Josh after he picks up a floozy at Houlihan's. "I'm sad."

Critics Tap Top Roles

NEW YORK (AP) — Dustin Hoffman and Meryl Streep, already greeted by glowing reviews for their latest films, took the National Society of Film Critics' awards for best actor and best actress of 1982.

The society, composed of 42 film critics from national publications, honored Hoffman for portraying an actor who wins a woman's role in a soap opera in "Tootsie." Ms. Streep was chosen for her portrayal of a young Polish woman who survived a Nazi concentration camp in the movie "Sophie's Choice."

Ben Kingsley came in second for best actor for his title role in the movie "Gandhi" and Peter O'Toole came in third for "My Favorite Year."

Jessica Lange was second in the best actress category for her roles in "Frances" and "Tootsie." Diane Keaton placed third for "Shoot the Moon."

The society, voting Sunday at the Algonquin Hotel here, selected "Tootsie" best picture of the year. "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial," was second.

Paraquat On Foreign Marijuana Resuming

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, in a move officials claim could cut marijuana imports by 70 percent, is going back into the business of helping foreign producers spray their pot plants with the weed-killer paraquat. But marijuana smokers won't have to worry if they inhale smoke from contaminated marijuana because the risk of lung damage is "virtually nonexistent," according to a government statement. Imported marijuana accounts for about 90 percent of the U.S. supply. Congress banned the government from getting involved in foreign paraquat operations from 1978 until the end of 1981 because of concern that paraquat could harm a smoker's lungs. At the time the ban was imposed, the government was helping Mexico kill its marijuana crops with paraquat. But the ban was lifted 13 months ago after congressmen considered evidence that paraquat was not harmful. Before formally deciding to proceed, the State Department prepared an environmental impact statement. "The department concluded that the overall benefits of using paraquat would significantly outweigh the potential problems of the herbicide," the State Department said in a statement.

summer, the department said. "As time goes by, more and more people realize that paraquat, if properly used — which you would say with all herbicides — is very very safe ... The information seems to be reasonably conclusive," the statement said.

"We estimate that marijuana supplies from foreign countries may be permanently reduced by as much as 60 to 70 percent if herbicide eradication is conducted," it said. The statement added: "As with any commodity, reduced supplies result in higher prices. This would be particularly important with regard to school age children who would be less likely to afford a drug price increase."

The department estimated it would cost about $19 million to provide training and equipment for the spraying of about 75,000 acres.

It said the Centers for Disease Control was unable to confirm a single case of lung damage due to paraquat. Notice that the State Department has decided to support the anti-marijuana efforts of other nations through aerial spraying of paraquat appeared in the Federal Register on Dec. 21.

Colombia, which now supplies an estimated 80 percent of U.S. marijuana imports, is considered a prime target for paraquat operations. State Department officials are expected to take up the issue soon with the Colombian government. John Thomas, a deputy assistant secretary of state, said in an interview Monday, "The best data that we have been able to obtain indicates that paraquat is really not a significant health problem whatsoever for people who might be worried about the potential lung damage if they smoked marijuana treated with paraquat."

He said paraquat has been used in the United States for years as a weed-killer or herbicide, and an estimated four million pounds are used each year to control weeds on such crops as potatoes, corn and cotton.

"The object of paraquat as a general herbicide is to control broadleaf weeds," he said. "Marijuana happens to be a broadleaf weed." He said one reason paraquat is preferred over other herbicides is that "it is very fast-acting."

Because of its speed in killing plants, he said it is unlikely that much of the contaminated marijuana would find its way into the market place.

Thomas said about 80 percent of all marijuana imported into the United States now comes from Colombia, with another 8 to 10 percent from Jamaica. Lesser amounts come from Belize and Costa Rica, he said.

Paraquat has been used very effectively in Mexico, he said. The U.S. government was assisting Mexico with a paraquat spraying program until the Congress banned U.S. involvement in 1978. But Thomas said the Mexican government has continued with its own program. The result has been that Mexico now provides less than 10 percent of U.S. imports, down from 40 percent previously.

Thomas indicated the State Department expects little opposition to U.S. involvement in foreign eradication programs. In the United States, Georgia has used paraquat on marijuana, and Florida initiated a program in Broward County last

There was only one women's pair competing in the Open Pair championship at the recent World Bridge Olympiad in Biarritz—Diana Gordon of Toronto, and Sharyn Kokish of Montreal. Canadians can be proud of their performance in this event. Witness this hand.

We do not think that, with a good six-card major and an unstoppable suit, South should boast about his two no trump opening bid. North transferred to spades and then raised to game.

It is easy to see that this contract should fail by two tricks. But this was a pair championship, and to earn a really good score it was essential that the defenders should collect a three-trick set. Dianna, who earlier in the tournament had won the Mixed Pairs title, got her side off to a good start by leading a diamond, and the defenders raked in the first two tricks. Then Sharyn shifted to club, and a losing finesse allowed the defenders to complete their book.

Now West found the killing defense—she continued with a diamond, presenting declarer with a ruff-suff. Declarer ruffed in dummy and led trump to the king and ace. West won and gave declarer another ruff-suff. This time declarer ruffed in hand. He crossed to dummy with a heart and led a trump. Dianna performed won the queen and now completed declarer's misery by leading her last diamond. No matter what declarer did, East had to score her ten of trumps for the third undertrick and an excellent result.
