

School Officials Await Budget Report

Local school officials say they won't know until after a statewide meeting of superintendents next week where cuts in school funds approved Wednesday by the State Board of Education will be made.

"We'll receive (at the meeting) firsthand information about the requested areas for decrease in funds," said Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County Schools. "Until then, it's just speculation to say what areas the cuts will be made in.

"The state, because it provides the majority of funds, also sets the rules for the expenditure of these funds," he said. Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of Greenville city schools, said this morning his office had "not received any information other than what we've heard in the media."

Blinson said he, West and other superintendents across the state will meet Sunday through Tuesday with state school officials to discuss the cuts. "Until that time there is little I can say," he noted.

In an effort to help the state balance its budget, the state Board of Education has agreed to cut 2 percent of its nearly $1.5 billion in funding for public schools for the rest of this fiscal year. That means the state school board, which traditionally retains about 1 percent of its budget in unspent funds, will return an estimated $28 million to the state treasury. The board's action followed a request earlier this week by John A. Williams, state budget director. In a memo, Williams said 2 percent of the schools' money is needed to balance the state budget by June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Budget problems arose when tax revenues failed to rise as quickly as the Legislature had predicted. (Please turn to Page 5)

Gasoline Tax Hike Signed Into Law By Pres. Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers will pay more for gasoline and bigger trucks will soon appear on the nation's major highways following President Reagan's signing today of legislation raising the gasoline tax by a nickel a gallon.

After brief remarks announcing an end to "a period of decline in (America's) vast and world-famous transportation system," Reagan sat down at a table in the State Dining Room and hastened to put his signature on the bill "before the bridges fall down."

Then he stood up and pronounced to an audience of 150 supporters of the legislation, "It is law."

The new law is expected to raise more than $5 billion a year, with 4 cents of each nickel used to repair and rebuild the country's deteriorating network of highways and bridges. The fifth penny will go to mass transit programs. The tax begins in April.

Although Reagan said in September it would take a "palace coup" to gain his support for an increase in the gasoline tax, he was persuaded by outgoing Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis to back the measure.

Reagan told reporters Wednesday night the building program financed by the new tax would create jobs for 300,000 to 350,000 workers.

However, his chief economic adviser, Martin Feldstein, told him in a memo last month that the program might actually result in increased unemployment. Feldstein explained the money taken out of consumers' pockets by the new tax would cost jobs in other areas while it would be many months before people actually go to work on the roads, bridges and transit systems that will benefit from the legislation.

Some independent truckers have threatened to stop driving if Reagan signs the bill, which they say could plunge them into bankruptcy because of the heavier taxes.

Among N.C. Leaders In Construction Permits

Greenville ranked fourth among the state's 44 cities of more than 10,000 population in the value of construction permits issued in September, according to state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

The commissioner said Greenville issued $5,042,119 in permits for the month as it trailed only Raleigh ($22,823,060), Charlotte ($12,785,622) and Winston-Salem ($5,189,113) in the amount of building activity.

Permits issued in Greenville for the first nine months of 1982 amounted to $16,231,864, Brooks reported.

Pitt County authorized permits totaling $5,119,152 for the month, including $615,800 for 18 single-family units, $131,100 for eight multifamily units, $2,719,132 for 15 non-residential units, and $1,653,120 for 56 additions and alterations.

The spokesman said construction authorized in the 44 cities in September decreased 14.1 percent from September 1981, while value, at $91,769,695, dropped 13.4 percent from $105,989,459.

During the first three quarters, activity in the cities lagged 16.7 percent behind the same period last year, Brooks said. Total units reported for the nine months, at 25,517, compared to 30,633 recorded in 1981.

He said that according to his department's research and statistics division, permits for single-family homes during the first nine months dropped 11.1 percent, from 5,051 to 4,491.

Compared to last September, the average construction cost for a single-family home increased 14.7 percent, to $44,633 from $38,915, said Brooks. The figure was $39,787 in August.

Building values for September and for the first nine months in several eastern towns included: Elizabeth City, $467,091, $4,830,150; Goldsboro, $360,285, $8,634,886; Jacksonville, $3,966,362, $17,772,313; Kinston, $178,283, $3,136,365; New Bern, $1,310,078, $8,971,849; Roanoke Rapids, $268,542, $2,123,465; Rocky Mount, $1,250,407, $9,101,532; Tarboro, $175,400, $12,504,258; and Wilson, $859,086, $9,049,843.

Nuclear Satellite To Hit Earth

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear-powered Soviet spy satellite will likely blaze back to Earth within weeks, and the Pentagon says it could spread destruction and radioactivity if its broken pieces fall in a populated area. It is too early to say where it will hit.

Cosmos 1402 is tumbling out of control in an orbit that covers mostly oceans but also goes over most of North America, most of the Soviet Union, the entire African continent, all of South America, and much of China, the Defense Department said.

On Jan. 24, 1978, another Soviet nuclear-powered spy satellite came back into the earth's atmosphere over northern Canada. Most of Cosmos 954 burned up in the atmosphere, but some intense radiation was discovered near the eastern shore of Great Slave Lake.

After the 1978 crash, President Carter proposed banning nuclear-powered satellites. The United States has none.

"We do not know where it will land, nor do we know precisely when to expect re-entry," said a Pentagon statement.

But Pentagon officials pointed out that three-quarters of the earth's surface is water and that there are wide expanses of sparsely populated land areas.

The five-ton Cosmos 1402 is powered by a nuclear reactor with about 100 pounds of enriched uranium, the same amount of fuel that was in the 1978 reactor.

Should it fall into the water, "there would be no consequential risk," said Maj. Douglas Kennett, a Pentagon spokesman. But if it hits on land, "there is a health risk from debris," he said.

Geoffrey Perry, a leading English satellite tracker, said "it could prove very dangerous" if Cosmos 1402 hits in a populated area.

In Moscow, Vladimir Kotelnikov of the Soviet Academy of Sciences said today when asked about the satellite: "Look, we are making experiments, operations which have been envisaged. There is no danger, we have no alarm about the fate of this satellite."

He was asked the question at a press conference held by two Soviet cosmonauts. Kotelnikov refused to discuss the troubled satellite further, saying it was unrelated to the press conference.

Both the Soviet Union and the United States use a variety of satellites to spy on each other.

The Soviet satellite was launched last Aug. 30 and uses the nuclear reactor to power its radar, which tracks American naval vessels. The Russians normally use the satellites for about six months before they are replaced.

SATELLITE IN TROUBLE — This is an undated file photo of one of the Cosmos series satellites. The nuclear-powered Cosmos 1402 is tumbling out of control, and according to the Defense Department, will likely blaze back to earth within weeks. (AP Laserphoto)

Carolina Tel Is Largest Taxpayer For Greenville

Carolina's Telephone's 1982 city tax payment of $115,673.84 makes the company the largest taxpayer in Greenville, according to city Tax Collector Floyd Little.

R.I. Flye, CT&T's district commercial and marketing manager here, said the company's total tax payment within Pitt County, including all city taxes, is $340,881.81.

County and municipal 1982 taxes paid by CT&T in its 50-county operating area, serving some 500,000 customers, totaled nearly $8 million, he said.

Flye said Carolina Telephone's total tax bill for the year, including all state and federal taxes, is expected to come to nearly $63.7 million. He said the figure does not include more than $2.8 million in 1 percent federal excise tax payments which were billed in 1982 to telephone users by the company.

According to Flye, Carolina Telephone has over $1 billion invested in its service area.

"In recent years, our construction programs have been costing us about $100 million annually," Flye said. He said about half of the total "goes to maintain and replace existing equipment. The remaining dollars are being used to modernize and upgrade our facilities."

CT&T has applied for a general rate increase which would up its local service revenues by $37.7 million annually. Flye said that should the state Utilities Commission approve the request, federal and state taxes would take a little more than half of the requested revenues.

New Help For Phobics

By DEBORAH BAKER
CHARLESTON, W.Va.
(UPI) — Jan Cochran was afraid to leave her house.

She hung sheets over the windows and kept the lights blazing at all hours.

At the age of 50 she was a virtual recluse.

It happened "little by little," following a long illness which kept her confined, the Charleston nurse recalled. She'd think about walking out the front door, then put it off until another day.

Jan Cochran finally did leave — to get help. Today she lives normally.

Countless people have fears of everyday situations such as taking elevators, climbing stairs, and getting into water.

Assistance for people with phobias — fears out of proportion to the circumstances — is available from private therapists and from public social service agencies.

There is some disagreement about causes, methods and treatment time, but mental health professionals seem to agree on one thing: there is help for phobics who want it.

"The prognosis is good — but the person has to really want to be better," said David Clayman, a Charleston medical psychologist in private practice. "It takes time, commitment on the part of the person, and commitment on the part of a support system."

What worked for Ms. Cochran was a program using a technique sometimes called "systematic desensitization" — a step-by-step approach to confronting the feared situation and gradually overcoming the fear.

She sought help from the Women's Counseling Center of West Virginia, a small outfit operated by psychotherapist Lynn Hartz.

Its 16-week phobia program includes weekly, 90-minute group sessions with other phobics, an hour of individual therapy a week, and time with paraprofessionals. Those workers might accompany phobics to airports, restaurants or to the local swimming pool. They can visit agoraphobics, people who are afraid to leave their homes.

"We don't offer cures," said Shawana Thompson, the program coordinator. "We help people to be in control of their phobic situation."

Ms. Cochran, who also had qualms about driving, learned relaxation techniques that divert her when she feels anxious.

"I struggled hard," said Ms. Cochran, who is training to be a paraprofessional at the center. "Now I have very few panic attacks, but I do occasionally have them."

Then it's good to know I controlled them last week — and I can control them again next week."

"There are a multiplicity of relaxation training techniques," said Clayman, including muscle relaxation, biofeedback and self-hypnosis.

His Process-Strategies Institute ran a fear-of-flying group for six weeks — "and out of six people in the group, five have flown successfully. But they were not anxiety-free."

Therapists stress that their patients may have more than one phobia, or that their fears may be part of a phobic pattern that masks other kinds of anxieties. They may require other counseling.

"They need a sense of mastery over the other areas of their lives," said Clayman.

The Women's Counseling Center considers its program, designed by a Maryland doctor, a "self-help" method.

"There's a lot of practice and a lot of homework," Ms. Thompson said.

Practice is considered key to successfully learning to cope with phobias. Without it, phobics can easily backslide and let their fears take over again.

"For agoraphobics, their practice may be just walking out the front door each morning," Ms. Thompson said.

Randy Clifford of Shawnee Hills Community Mental Health Center says an alternative to the slower, systematic desensitization method is hypnosis.

"I think it's a fantastic tool," said Clifford, who has not been trained in hypnosis but has seen it demonstrated.

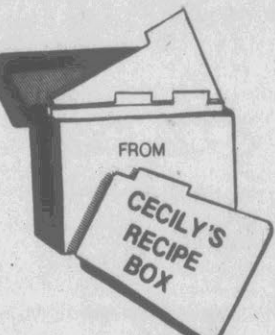

It is based on a theory — a controversial one among therapists — that the phobia was caused by a single, traumatic incident. Phobics under hypnosis can go back to that incident, and the therapist can then inject some element of comfort so that recalling the incident is not accompanied by the same feelings of fear, Clifford said.

Glaucoma is the leading cause of irreversible blindness in the United States, but can be prevented through screening and early detection. It can also be effectively treated with medication and appropriate medical supervision.

If, stowed away in your refrigerator or freezer, there's a little ham and some turkey leftover from holiday meals, you can use these to advantage for a small company supper that is easy to prepare.

NCHCA Meet Announced

GREENSBORO — The N.C. Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association meeting will be held here Feb. 5-7 at the Holiday Inn Four Season Convention Center here.

Judy and Joel McKinney of Shelby will be special guests.

Registration will start at 1 p.m. Saturday and contests will start at 6:30. Sunday and Monday registration starts at 9 a.m. and the exhibit hall opens.

The convention will include guest artists, the OHDC, private classes, dance and entertainment.

Slice and garnish the turkey and with it serve a creamy ham and grape mold plus crescent rolls. Preface this main course with hot split pea soup (made with the bone from baked ham) and top the soup with croutons.

For dessert you can heat leftover fruit cake and serve it with an eggnog sauce. Or, lacking fruitcake, dessert could be leftover holiday or other cookies plus coffee.

HAM GRAPE MOLD

- 1/2 cup green grapes, with seeds or seedless
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1 1/2 cups clear fat-free homemade or canned chicken broth
- 3/4 cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 cup diced (1/4-inch) cooked ham
- 1/2 cup diced (1/4-inch) celery
- 1 small scallion, minced

Rinse and dry grapes. Halve and, if necessary, remove seeds. If halves are large, halve again.

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over 1/2 cup of the chicken broth and let soften.

Heat remaining 1 cup broth to boiling; pour over gelatin mixture and stir to dissolve.

Whisk in mayonnaise, mustard and lemon juice until blended. Stir in grapes, ham, celery and scallion. Turn into a 1-quart mold.

At serving time, unmold. Garnish, if desired with extra green grapes.

Makes 6 servings.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Reports Given At Club Meet

A report on the family aided at Christmas was given by Laurie Charlton at the meeting of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club.

The family received gifts, toys for the children, clothes, food and furniture.

A report on clearing and cleaning lots was given. The February meeting will be a covered-dish supper followed by a sock hop. It will be held Feb. 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the club house. Husbands of members will be guests.

A program on color analysis was given by Patsy Garzik. She was introduced by Mary Scudder.

Candy Gunn and Mary Jo Nason were meeting hostesses.

Couples Are Considered One

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Over the years you've had "prayers" in your column from children, parents, mothers-in-law, secretaries, etc., so I thought you might find this prayer also worth sharing with your readers. I don't know who wrote it. Maybe one of your readers will.

ELLIE IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ELLIE: It is:

CALORIE COUNTER'S PRAYER

The Lord is my shepherd I shall not want.
He maketh me lie down and do push-ups.
He giveth me Hollywood bread.
He restoreth my waistline.
He leadeth me past the refrigerator for mine own sake.
He maketh me to partake of the green beans instead of the potatoes.
He leadeth me past the pizzeria.
Yea, though I walk through the bakery,
I shall not falter, for thou art with me;
Thy Tab and Fresca, they comfort me.
Thou preparest a diet for me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my lettuce with low-cal oil.
My cup will not overflow.
Surely Ry Krisp and D-Zerta shall follow me all the days of my life,
And I will live with pains of hunger forever. AMEN

DEAR ABBY: Several of us are going in on a gift. There are six of us altogether — two married couples and two singles. The married couples think the cost of the gift should be divided four ways. The singles think it should be divided six ways. Which is the fairest way?

ONE OF THE SIX

DEAR ONE: Married couples are usually considered "one," so in my opinion, the cost should be divided four ways.

If this isn't agreeable to all concerned, perhaps the single ones should go together on a gift, and the married couples go together on another.

Candlelight Ceremony Performed On Friday

RALEIGH — In a candlelight ceremony Friday afternoon at five o'clock, Linda Jacqueline Newsome became the bride of Louis Edward Alexander Jr. The Rev. John White performed the ceremony in Saint James

United Methodist Church here.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. William Ralph Goins Sr. of Route 1, Fountain, and the late F.R. Newsome, and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Edward Alexander Sr. of Garner.

MRS. LOUIS EDWARD ALEXANDER SR.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Lee Newsome of Winston-Salem. Her honor attendant was her sister, Phyllis Whitley of Greenville. Bridesmaids included Eyssell Gurganus of Wake Forest and Beverly Cashwell of Raleigh.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included James Blackwell and Douglas Newsome, brother of the bride, both of Raleigh.

A program of wedding music was rendered by Gaynelle Glass, organist, and Billie Jo Cockman, both of Raleigh.

The bride wore a white qiana gown styled with a Queen Anne neckline re-embroidered with alencon lace and seed pearls, empire waistline, long slim sleeves with lace appliques with covered buttons. The skirt was A-line and extended into a wateau chapel train. The back of the gown featured a sheer yoke with appliques. She wore a brimmed hat with matching lace appliques and pearls with a veil. A tulle bow accented the back. She carried a silk cascade bouquet of white phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis, lavender sweetheart roses laced in stardust gypsophila, fern and variegated spider plant.

The honor attendant was dressed in a lavender qiana floor length gown styled with an empire waist, scoop neckline, spaghetti straps, accordin pleated skirt with a matching cocoon jacket.

She carried a silk arm bouquet of white phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis, lavender sweetheart roses accented with stardust gypsophila, lavender lilies, fern and variegated spider plant tied with white picot ribbon. She wore a cluster of lavender sweetheart roses in her hair.

The dresses of the bridesmaids were styled identical to that of the honor attendant in huckleberry. Their bouquets were identical and were tied with lavender picot ribbon. They wore clusters of lavender sweetheart roses in their hair.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length gown of mint green with a sheer overlay. The mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length gown styled with an empire waistline. Both wore

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Thursday, January 6, 1982 — 3 white phalaenopsis orchid corsages.

A champagne reception was held at 2001 VIP.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride attended Farmville High School and Pitt Technical Institute. She works at Something For The Head Haircutters in Raleigh. The bridegroom attended Garner Senior High School and is now a conductor on the Seaboard Systems Railroad.

A rehearsal dinner was held Thursday evening at the home of Percy Thornton.

Assisting hosts and hostess were Thad Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Stephenson.

Hospital Is Growing

It seems like only yesterday: When the dream of a new Pitt County Memorial Hospital was being realized, and people gaped at the vast structure, there was talk even then that "they'll always be building there."

And that was the way it turned out to be.

No sooner was one addition or improvement attained than another was on the drawing boards. The next big step apparently will be moving up to a 900-bed facility.

That does seem like an awful lot of hospital for a small city and a relatively lightly populated county; but actually, Pitt Memorial is not a "local" hospital. It serves the ill and injured from any number of nearby counties and the radius of its influence spreads further outward every year.

Size is not the criteria. Growth is attributable to the growing wealth of know-how, equipment and talents gathered into one small corner of eastern North Carolina. Physical growth goes hand in hand with the demand for services offered as a manifestation of the "magnet effect" in the healing arts.

When you think about it, the new phases of the expansion program (in three to five years) is awfully close to hand. And then?

The early planners were a far-seeing panel when they acquired a large site with potential additional space available for expansion. The regional hospital is going to need a lot of land, and it might be best if it's acquired before the march of events catches up.

We keep remembering, they don't make it (land) any more.

Spiro Agnew Pays Maryland

It is almost difficult to recall when Spiro T. Agnew was vice president of the United States, let alone governor of Maryland.

Today, however, the state of Maryland is $268,482 better off because its former governor has repaid that amount of alleged kickback funds, plus interest. Agnew was not convicted of accepting kickbacks and maintained his innocence even as he paid the money. A civil court, however, ruled that he was liable for the money.

The repayment is justice of a sort for the state of Maryland. For the nation, perhaps, it puts in the past the sorry spectacle of seeing a vice president of the United States resign under a cloud. May it never happen again.

THIS AFTERNOON

Many New Faces

By PAUL O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — This year, as every year, there'll be plenty of new faces for the legislative session that opens Wednesday. There'll be 29 freshmen legislators, a host of new secretaries and staff members and even a few new lobbyists. But of all the players in the legislative process, no group has suffered greater turnover in the past two years than has the legislative press corps.

Of the 23 full-time unofficial members of the unincorporated group that covered the 1981 session, only 11 return for the 1983 session. Of the other half-dozen reporters who regularly covered the big stories, only three are still in town. The Associated Press, the Greensboro papers, the Charlotte papers, the Durham Morning Herald and the Winston-Salem Journal have all changed their No. 1 legislative reporters.

The turnover is high even for a business notorious for its job jumping. But what does the turnover mean to the readers who rely on these two dozen reporters for most of their legislative news?

"Of course the turnover has an effect on the coverage," says Jay Jenkins, a retired 30-year newspaper veteran who spent 21 years covering the statehouse — most of those years for the Charlotte Observer. "You can cover fires, or robberies without background. But with politics, it's especially important to know what happened before ... I'm not saying we were smarter than you guys, just that we had more experience."

Gary Pearce, press aide to Gov. Jim Hunt, has quipped on many occasions that the press turnover makes his job easier — they don't catch Hunt's changes of direction.

In the "old days" North Carolina, like most states, had a corps of crusty old reporters who'd been in the Capitol as long as the spittoons.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

People like Jenkins, AP's Noel Yancey, Lynn Nesbitt who wrote this column, Arthur Johnsey of Greensboro, Roy Parker of Fayetteville and others. They knew what previous governors had proposed. They knew how previous assemblies had acted.

Today, only Dick Hatch of UNC-TV has tenure going back before the 1970s — and this year Hatch will be doing less reporting than in previous years. Next in longevity are Dan Hoover of the Raleigh News & Observer, who first covered a session in 1973, and Gene Wang of UPI, whose first session was 1974 with the Fayetteville Observer.

Russell Clay covered the statehouse for 13 years for the Durham Morning Herald and the N&O and now serves as an aide to House Speaker Liston Ramsey. Legislative coverage has slipped in quality, he says. First reason is turnover. "Background is essential," he says. Also, the Legislature has spread out and become more difficult to watch. The Capital was much smaller than the Legislative Building and its new annex. And at night, legislators did their dealing at the Sir Walter Raleigh Hotel where reporters would hang out. Reporters came away with stories full of inside stuff. Now legislators stay in apartments and hotels around town and reporters rarely get the real background, Clay says.

There's a positive side to the turnover. Some legislative reporters have returned to their home newsrooms and brought an understanding of state government with them. The

Other Editors Say Education Funds

(Transylvania Times)

Usually we don't write editorials simply filled with statistics, but we thought you might find it interesting to know where North Carolina ranks in terms of expenditures for education.

As you read the information, please note how much we spend per pupil and how our average annual salary for teachers compares with other states.

The federal government supplies 12.6 percent of North Carolina's education funding, ranking the state 11th among the states and the District of Columbia. State funding accounts for 64 percent of North Carolina's money for education, placing the state 9th in the ratings. An additional 23.5 percent of N.C. education funds comes from local and other sources, placing the state 43rd among the states.

When looking at total expenditures for public elementary and secondary education, North Carolina has the 10th largest school system in the country. Spending much more than other states were California — $11.2 billion and New York — $9.3 billion. The smallest expenditure for public elementary and secondary education were allotted by Vermont, North Dakota, Delaware and South Dakota — states with smaller public school enrollments.

North Carolina ranked 38th in annual per pupil expenditures based on average daily membership. Expenditures calculated on average daily attendance were slightly higher. North Carolina's per pupil expenditure was $1,869. The highest expenditures were Alaska ($4,669), the District of Columbia, ($3,202) and New York ($3,023). The lowest were Alabama ($1,331), Kentucky ($1,457), Mississippi ($1,464) and Arkansas ($1,490).

According to NCES, the average annual salary for teachers in North Carolina in 1980-81 was $15,858. Twenty-seven states and the District of Columbia had higher averages. Alaska paid the highest average salary of $29,000 and six states plus the District of Columbia paid an average of $20,000 — Hawaii, Michigan, New York, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Teachers receiving the lowest average salaries were from Mississippi ($13,000) followed by Arkansas, Vermont, New Hampshire, South Dakota and Maine.

Spending, of course, is not the whole answer; but there is a correlation between the rate of spending and the quality of education.

Getting the most for our money is important, and the Legislature and county governments are going to be looking harder than ever at how that money is used.

A PRETTY GOOD DEAL AT THAT!

THE WHITE HOUSE

Words Soon Forgotten

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will be, as always, a grand occasion of state. The House galleries full to capacity, the leaders of American government assembled, the floodlights blazing down.

And at the rostrum, the president of the United States, delivering his appraisal of the State of the Union.

President Reagan will appear before a joint session of Congress, and a national radio and television audience, on Jan. 25 to give his assessment and to describe his goals for the year ahead.

Despite the pomp, circumstance and ceremony that surrounds the annual presidential address to Congress, few of the speeches delivered there are truly memorable, and most are soon eclipsed by the press of daily business, and the political infighting that surrounds any president's program.

Besides, the State of the Union doesn't stand still, and the programs proposed in January often are shelved by July. Reagan's "new federalism" plan to turn federal programs back to the states, the centerpiece of his last State of the Union address, remains on the agenda, but nowhere near enactment.

The speech tradition goes back to George Washington and the year 1790. Reagan who called attention to that last Jan. 26 when he gave his own first State of the Union address, and stressed the accuracy of his report.

He quoted from Washington's reminder that the preservation of liberty is in the hands of the American people. Then the president added:

"For our friends in the press, who place a high premium on accuracy, let me say: I did not actually hear George Washington say that. But it is a matter of historic record."

But much of what he said that night didn't happen as he envisioned it.

Some did, as when Reagan said "the economy will face difficult moments in the months ahead." Then he added:

"The program for economic recovery that is in place will pull the economy out of its slump and put us on the road to prosperity and stable growth by the latter half of this year."

To no one's surprise a year ago, Reagan said that the nation's problems "are the inheritance of decades of tax and tax and spend and spend." No one will be surprised to hear him say it again this month.

Nor was there any surprise in the president's 1982 declaration of opposition to tax increases, or in his promise to decrease the federal deficit.

"The doubters would have us turn back the clock with tax increases that would offset the personal tax rate reductions already passed by this Congress. Raise present taxes to cut future deficits, they tell us. Well, I don't believe we should buy that argument," he said.

"Raising taxes will slow economic growth, reduce production, and destroy future jobs, making it more difficult for those without jobs to find them and more likely that those who now have jobs could lose them. So, I will not ask you to try to balance the budget on the backs of the American taxpayers," he said. And he followed it with this promise:

"I will seek no tax increases this year, and I have no intention of retreating from our basic program of tax relief.... I will stand by my word."

He agreed, reluctantly, to a $98 billion, three-year tax increase in August, and endorsed another increase, in the federal gasoline tax, late in the year.

"The policies we have in place will reduce the deficit steadily, surely, and in time, completely," the president said.

That was before he sub-

Texas Edge Is Mondale's

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

AUSTIN, Texas — In the wake of the broadest liberal election sweep in Texas history, liberal stalwart Walter Mondale is close to putting an early lock on this conservative state's big delegation to the 1984 Democratic national convention.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's dropout enabled Mondale to corner liberal-labor activists who dominate precincts vital to delegate selection here. But the former vice president also has made remarkable gains among centrist-to-conservative Democrats. The result is a universally-recognized lead in Texas over Sen. John Glenn that some politicians call "overwhelming."

That is bad news for Glenn, whose presidential strategy conjures a sweep of Southern, western and Border states where Democratic leaders presumably consider Mondale a sure loser against Ronald Reagan. Such feeling in Texas has been softened by Mondale's quiet years of missionary work here and reduced by the state's 1982 Republican election fiasco. Still, even some of Mondale's newfound friends privately question his general election prospects, in Texas and nationally, if there is significant economic recovery.

Their drift to Mondale is partly a commentary on Glenn. "My gut feeling would be for Glenn," a Mondale-leaning conservative told us, "but he has done no organizing in Texas, and I can see no signs he plans to do any." An example: Mondale was on the telephone to Texas on election night congratulating election winners; Glenn was not.

Glenn's sole tangible asset here is Lt. Gov. William Hobby, a moderate conservative who is one of the most powerful figures in state government but usually avoids party affairs. He sponsored a post-election Glenn fundraiser in Houston and can open doors to state legislators. "The Lobby" in Austin and big Texas money. But against Glenn's Hobby, Mondale has a dozen movers and shakers.

State AFL-CIO president Harry Hubbard, who told Kennedy to his face in Houston this summer that he could not carry Texas, sees labor unified for Mondale. Former senator Ralph Yarborough, more prestigious today than before his defeat in 1970, is aggressively pro-Mondale. Soon also may be State Controller Bob Bullock, a rough-and-tumble political operator.

Active support from State Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple, unsuccessful candidate for governor, gives Mondale a ready-made statewide organization and entree to big money (Temple's father, tycoon Arthur Temple Sr., is vice chairman of Time, Inc.). Former state Democratic chairman Calvin Guest is a Mondaleite linked to Gov.-elect Mark White, raising speculation that White eventually will climb aboard.

White's intimates insist he will stay neutral, unless some serious presidential candidate poses a special threat to Texas — a shrouded warning that is Mondale's only cloud here. That threat, they suggest, could be a 1984 version of Adlai Stevenson's 1952 Tidelands oil stance that cost him the state. Centrist White was furious over President Jimmy Carter's "windfall profits" tax on oil and would not be happy about Mondale support for such a levy on natural gas.

Texas conservatives inclined to Mondale, consequently, are anxious to tidy up his energy posture. State Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace, an energy conservative who likes Mondale, plans to discuss natural gas with him. There is speculation about a compromise energy position leading to Mondale choosing a Texan for vice president: probably Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (considered pro-Mondale), but possibly White.

Even without such Texas trimmings, however, the only

Strength For Today

NO NEED FOR LASH

A farmer once gave his son a colt the day the animal was born and made the boy responsible for its care. The boy trained the growing colt so carefully that it never needed to be broken to saddle and harness.

The farmer had another colt which was allowed to run wild for several years. In this case the process of breaking for saddle and harness had to take place, and it was painful both for the colt and those who broke him.

This illustrates the difference between those people who have had Christian nurture from their earliest years and those who, being allowed to run wild, are at last converted. Some of the latter are young people whose parents have the very false notion that it is good for young people to sow their wild oats while they are young and get the evil out of their systems.

Happy and fortunate are those who from the beginning have been taught to walk in the pathway of light. — Elisha Douglass

Big Recall Is Facing 'X' Cars

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, convinced that repairs 18 months ago to thousands of General Motors cars failed to correct brake defects, is about to order a recall of 220,000 of the 1980 automobiles, according to government sources.

The investigation by the Transportation Department is focusing on all 1980 model X-Body cars with manual transmissions, including the Chevrolet Citation, Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega, and Buick Skylark.

The mid-sized, front-wheel drive cars were introduced with great fanfare in April 1979. But in August 1981, General Motors recalled 47,000 of them because of complaints that the rear brakes were locking prematurely, causing the cars to go into a dangerous spin.

Investigators of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration have concluded that the GM recall in 1981 focused on the wrong problem and was not broad enough, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

"We haven't made an initial finding of (a) defect.

(But) we're poised ready to," said one source. Another said a recall is expected "very soon. It could be by the end of the month."

The federal highway safety agency said only that the investigation is continuing.

"The case is still open. We are still pressing the case and if the 1981 fix had solved all the problems we would have been able to close this case much sooner," said Raymond A. Peck, the agency's administrator.

The agency said it has received 203 complaints about brakes locking prematurely in 1980 X-Body cars. At least two suits have been filed against General Motors as a result of the braking problems, including one by a family of a New York man killed when his car struck a tree.

General Motors manufactured more than 1.1 million 1980 model X-Body cars in 1979 and 1980 with about one-fifth — 220,000 — of them equipped with manual transmissions.

Investigators believe the problem is confined to the cars with manual transmissions, although some complaints were received by owners of cars with automatic transmissions as well, one source said.

In announcing the 1981 recall, General Motors said the brake problem was caused by a valve that regulates brake fluid pressure. The company at the time said the problem was confined to 47,000 of the vehicles that were built prior to July 1979.

At the same time, however, NHTSA investigators already were of the opinion that the problem was in the thickness of the rear brake lining in cars equipped with manual transmissions and not in the valves. One source said the agency was "99 percent sure" in the summer of 1981 that the brake lining was the culprit.

It is unclear why the government did not push immediately for a recall to correct the brake lining problem since the GM correction was focusing on the valve. One agency source argued that the GM recall in 1981 provided "adequate warning" to owners of the cars that there existed a brake problem which needed to be corrected.

Nevertheless, NHTSA kept the case open. Last month the agency informed General Motors it was expanding its investigation to include 1981 through 1983 model X-Body cars as well, although one source said there is no evidence yet that the problem involves cars other than the 1980 model.

Harold Jackson, a General Motors spokesman confirmed that the company is "continuing to work with the government" on the brake issue, but said, "We know nothing about any additional recalls."

Robert Stemple, a GM vice president, defended GM's 1981 actions. "Based on the data we have today and the facts we have we think we've done exactly what has been necessary," he said.

In the meantime, both the government and General Motors has come under criticism for not moving fast enough to fix the brake linings and for including more cars in the initial recall.

Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, a consumer group, suggested that economics might have been a factor, noting that it is much cheaper to fix the valves than replace the rear brake linings.

1982 Peanut Sales Figures Needed

W.F. Tyson, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, says peanut growers should complete their marketings for the 1982 peanut crop. ASC county offices need the marketing data before they can notify farmers of 1983 quotas, he said.

Peanut buyers should submit inspection certificates and sales memoranda to ASC county offices as soon as possible, Tyson said, because any delay will slow reconciliation of 1982 marketings by the Pitt County ASCS office. The 1983 quota notices will be mailed to farmers after last year's sales review is completed.

Teen-Ager Arrested In Break-In

Greenville police arrested Carlous Douglas Elliott, 18, of Pinetops on breaking, entering and larceny and auto larceny charges Wednesday in connection with a break-in at the Short Stop on Greenville Boulevard and the theft of a car from Eastbrook Apartments on Dec. 17.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Elliott allegedly broke the glass from a door at the Short Stop, then took $2 in change and a bottle of sherry, valued at $10.

Cannon said Elliott also allegedly took a car — later found abandoned near Pinetops — and a $260 pistol from the vehicle, which has also been recovered.

Elliott was placed under a $6,000 bond pending a hearing of the case.

Driver Charged In Collision

Clyde Luther Johnson of 111A Cherry Court was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 1:40 a.m. traffic collision today at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and 10th Street.

Officers said the Johnson car collided with a vehicle driven by Hubert Wayne Lewis of Greenville, causing an estimated $3,000 damage to the Johnson car and $5,000 damage to the Lewis vehicle.

Salute Helms' Tax Struggle

The executive committee of the Pitt County Republican Party has endorsed Sen. Jesse Helms' attempts last month to defeat a bill which increases the federal tax on gasoline, county GOP Chairman Henry Smith of Fountain said in a news release distributed today.

Smith's release made no mention of Sen. John East of Greenville, who joined Helms in leading the opposition to the gas tax. Neither Smith nor other members of the GOP Executive Committee could be reached today.

Smith said the executive committee, in a meeting earlier this week, "endorsed and saluted Senator Helms' efforts to defeat" the additional tax on gasoline, which was ultimately approved. Smith also said the GOP committee agreed to support the efforts of Texas Rep. Philip Gramm, a Democrat who resigned from Congress Wednesday to run in a special election as a Republican.

"In that effort, the Pitt County GOP will make an undisclosed financial contribution to Gramm upon his announcement of seeking a seat in Congress on the Republican ticket," Smith said.

Gramm resigned after House Democratic leaders ousted him from his seat on the House Budget Committee because of his support for President Ronald Reagan's economic programs.

Awaiting Report...

The General Assembly based its 1982-83 budget on revenue increases of 8.9 percent. For the first half of the fiscal year, revenues have grown by about 5 percent.

Gov. Jim Hunt has ordered other state departments to return 6 percent of their spending money to help balance the budget. He asked the schools for less because he did not want them to lay off teachers or cut salaries. The schools already have been trying to voluntarily cut back expenses.

At the recommendation of state Superintendent Craig Phillips, the board Wednesday ordered the controller to set aside enough money each month to pay salaries before sending money out to local boards. About 92 percent of the schools' budget goes for salaries and benefits for teachers and other staffers.

The board voted to give local officials flexibility to use the available money as best they could and promised to review the situation monthly.

In addition, the board barred local school systems from obligating any money for programs that have not already been approved by state officials and said the controller's office of the state Department of Public Instruction and Phillips' office will study carefully requests for funding.

Funds to local schools essentially will remain at the same level as the last three months of 1982, when spending totaled 98 percent of the amount budgeted, according to Deputy State Budget Officer Marvin K. Dorman.

"For the October, November and December quarter, they paid the payroll, moved the buses and paid the utility bills and only spent 98 percent," he said.

Dorman, who met with the board to discuss the cutback, said budget officials hope savings from the 2 percent reduction in school spending, combined with the 6 percent ordered for other state agencies, will be enough to comply with a state constitutional requirement for a balanced budget.

Expect Confirming Of Transportation Secretary

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Dole, President Reagan's choice as his new transportation secretary, is expected to breeze through Senate confirmation and become the administration's first woman to head a Cabinet department. Reagan announced Wednesday night he will nominate Mrs. Dole, a presidential assistant, to replace Drew Lewis, who leaves the administration next month to head a major cable television company. "Welcome to the Cabinet," the president said as Mrs.

Dole accompanied him at a nationally televised news conference. She later issued a statement saying she was "deeply honored" and will accept the assignment "with enthusiasm."

Mrs. Dole will become the first woman transportation secretary. She will head the government's sixth largest department with 75,000 employees. Its agencies range from the Federal Aviation Administration to the U.S. Coast Guard.

Formed in 1965, the department dispenses highway and mass transit money, regulates air transport and federal aid to airports as well as overseeing maritime issues. During the past two years the department has spearheaded the administration's drive to get users of various transportation systems to pay a greater share of operation.

In succeeding Lewis, Mrs. Dole takes over from the most visible transportation secretary since the department was formed in 1965. Lewis also was considered among the most capable members of the Reagan Cabinet.

Mrs. Dole, 46, a lawyer, former member of the Federal Trade Commission and wife of Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is the highest ranking woman at the White House as the president's assistant for public liaison.

The liaison job has been characterized as particularly difficult since much of Mrs. Dole's assignment has involved dealing with interest groups — such as minorities, women's groups and organized labor — openly critical of administration policies.

Faith Ryan Whittlesey, a long-time Reagan political activist and now the ambassador to Switzerland, will replace Mrs. Dole at the White House, Reagan said.

Although a team player, Mrs. Dole's views have at times differed from those of most other members of the Reagan inner circle. In the past she has endorsed tougher regulation of business and has supported the Equal Rights Amendment, although she also has said she agrees with Reagan's view that "there's more than one way to reach equal rights for women."

At the White House, Mrs. Dole, whose nickname is "Liddy," has been known to lobby quietly for the hiring of more women in an administration that has been criticized for not placing enough of them in high-ranking positions.

When confirmed by the Senate, Mrs. Dole will join UN Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick as the only other woman with Cabinet rank.

She is the seventh woman named to a Cabinet position in history.

Mrs. Dole is a veteran of Washington government and political circles. For nearly six years she was a member of the FTC, resigning in 1979 to help her husband in his unsuccessful presidential campaign.

Though she has no background in the transportation field, Mrs. Dole is considered to have a keen legal mind and good administrative skills. She was a Phi Beta Kappa at Duke University and is a graduate of Harvard Law School.

She and her husband, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, are one of the most powerful husband-and-wife teams in Washington.

But her two years at the White House have been marked by little fanfare. Some of her supporters have reportedly complained that she has been largely muzzled by a male-dominated cadre of presidential assistants.

"This ain't so bad," she once was quoted as saying to guests at a dinner in her honor, "First chance I've had to open my mouth in 13 months."

Hoped Avoid Poison Panic

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A Watauga County school official says the reason he waited six days before reporting to authorities that rat poison had been found in rice at an elementary school kitchen was that he feared the public might panic.

Watauga County schools superintendent Lester Propst said Wednesday that he waited until Dec. 22 to report the incident to the sheriff's department because he felt it no longer posed any danger and because of the possibility that some people could panic if they heard the report.

"There was never intent to withhold information," said Propst. "Assumptions can be dangerous."

Cafeteria workers found a clump of Talon in an open bag of rice in a storage room in the kitchen of Bethel Elementary School before the rice was prepared or served.

At a news conference Dec. 31, District Attorney Tom Rusher and Sheriff Red Lyons said an investigation began Dec. 22, when they said the incident was reported.

"We were aware of that error (about the date of the discovery), but the public release was made by the sheriff's department," Propst said.

The school board was notified of the incident before the sheriff's department, he said.

"It is my understanding that they found it on ... the 16th," Lyons said Tuesday. "It would have given us a little bit more time" if officials had reported it Dec. 16, he said.

Lyons said he still could not say whether the incident was an accident or a criminal act.

Local health department officials visited the school Monday, three days after Carl Tuttle, director of the county health department, found out about the incident on the radio.

Tuttle said he should have been notified of the event when it happened.

N.C. Education Board Approves Budget Cuts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In an effort to help the state balance its budget, the state Board of Education has agreed to cut 2 percent of its $1.5 billion in funding for public schools for the rest of this fiscal year.

The board's action Wednesday followed a request by John A. Williams, state budget director. In a memo, Williams said 2 percent of the schools money is needed to balance the state budget by June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Budget problems arose when tax revenues failed to rise as quickly as the Legislature had predicted. The General Assembly based its 1982-83 budget on revenue increases of 8.9 percent. For the first half of the fiscal year, revenues have grown by about 5 percent.

Gov. Jim Hunt has ordered other state departments to return 6 percent of their spending money to help balance the budget. He asked the schools for less because he did not want them to lay off teachers or cut salaries. The schools already have been trying to voluntarily cut back expenses.

State school Superintendent Craig Phillips commended local school boards for spending only 98 percent of the money they've received.

At Phillips' recommendation, the board ordered the controller to set aside enough money each month to pay salaries before sending the money out to local boards. About 92 percent of the schools' budget goes for salaries and benefits for teachers and other staffers.

The board voted to give local officials flexibility to use the available money as best they could and promised to review the situation monthly.

Reagan Stays Aloof From Social Security Studies

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Social Security reform panel are still hoping for a last-minute agreement on a rescue plan, but President Reagan says they'll have to do it without his help.

Reagan, speaking at a nationally televised news conference Wednesday night, said if the commission members can't agree on a comprehensive plan for saving Social Security by Jan. 15, they should present him with a list of alternatives.

"And then I think that is the time we should join together and seek to work out a compromise," he said.

But he firmly rejected suggestions from some commission members that he become directly involved in the talks now.

"I believe that for me to impose myself, I don't care how much they ask for it, for me to impose myself on the commission and say, 'Hey fellows, this is the way I want you to go,' I would then stand back, cock my ear, and wait for the loud outcry from Capitol Hill, and the same old political football would be seen going up in the air like a punt on third down," Reagan said.

But Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said after the news conference that he was "kind of disappointed the president didn't take a stand" on Social Security. He said he intends to send Reagan a letter today urging him to come up with more specific proposals.

Reagan spoke after several commission members, including chairman Alan Greenspan, reportedly conferred with administration officials. "The fact that we're talking obviously suggests that we still have something to talk about," Greenspan said. But there was no report of progress.

Reagan established the commission last year after proposing changes in Social Security that drew a hostile reaction in Congress, particularly from Democrats.

When Reagan set up the commission, he said he wanted to remove it from politics, a point he made again Wednesday night.

He also said he would reject any proposal that reduces benefits for Social Security recipients. "I think those people have been scared enough by demagoguery," he said.

The Greenspan panel will go out of business on Jan. 15. The 15 members agree the system needs to save $150 billion to $200 billion over the next seven years, but they have been unable to agree on a precise mix of payroll tax hikes and a slowdown in the growth of benefits to generate the savings.

Greenspan met with Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, on Wednesday. Also attending the meeting were former Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., two Democratic members, and Rep. Barber Conable of New York, the top Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee.

Greenspan and other members have said repeatedly that the panel will be unable to reach a compromise unless Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., agree, too.

Although Reagan said he did not want to get involved in the panel's deliberations, some administration officials have privately expressed a desire to use the commission as the vehicle to make a deal with congressional Democrats on Social Security.

The old age fund has borrowed $17.5 billion to pay its benefits on time through June and congressional action is needed to keep the benefits flowing on time beyond that.

The commission favors bringing new federal workers and those hired in the past five years into the system, along with all employees of non-profit organizations. That would bring in $30 billion by 1990.

In November, Ball, Moynihan and three other liberal Democrats proposed speeding up payroll tax hikes to solve most of the short-term financing problem.

But the Democrats also offered to back a three-month delay in next July's cost-of-living hike and they suggested a new tax treatment of Social Security that would entail gradually phasing in a tax on benefits, coupled with a new tax credit or deduction for workers.

The Democrats have complained repeatedly that no Republicans on the panel or in the White House ever made a counter-offer.

Will Teach And Study In Japan

DR. ROBERT GOWEN

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Robert J. Gowen of the East Carolina University history faculty, a specialist in the history of the Far East and Asian diplomacy, has been selected for a fellowship providing five months of study, teaching and research in Japan.

As an N.C.-Japan Center Fellow, Gowen will go to Japan in August to teach and study at Doshisha University in Kyoto and to conduct research into patterns of Japanese emigration to the United States and Canada.

During previous studies in Japan, China and Hawaii,

Gowen said he realized that documents pertaining to Japanese emigration "have been virtually untouched by American scholars" and are a fertile field for research. He hopes this year to gain access to new Japanese foreign office documents and other hitherto unexamined source materials.

"A prime project I also intend to pursue is to continue making contacts with specialists in this field of historical research," Gowen said. He predicted that such contacts could stimulate "a further flow of scholarship back and forth across the Pacific."

Gowen earlier compiled a definitive bibliography of more than 18,000 entries of historical materials about the international relations of east Asia and the Pacific Islands.

In preparation for the fellowship tour in Japan, Gowen will spend six to seven weeks this summer in intensive study of the Japanese language at the N.C.-Japan Center in Raleigh.

The N.C.-Japan Center is a state government agency created by Gov. Jim Hunt to build relations between specialists of the two countries. The center's three-year-old fellowship program was extended this year to the entire University of North Carolina system and to private business and private colleges.

'Biggest Draw' For U.S. Savers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new money market accounts have become the biggest money-draw for federally insured savings and loans since the government began keeping records in the 1930s, federal officials say.

The new savings account, designed to help banks and savings and loans compete with money market mutual funds, attracted an estimated $21.8 billion to S&Ls in the first week they were offered, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board says. They are paying interest in the range of 10 percent to 11 percent.

Based on a sampling of some 230 large S&Ls, the bank board estimated that 58 percent of the money deposited in the new accounts, which were introduced Dec. 14 and carry a $2,500-minimum deposit, was shifted from other deposit accounts at savings associations.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light will make a $50,000 initial contribution to the state Division of Social Services in the Carolinas for use in aiding the needy in the company's service area pay their bills.

In addition, company President Sherwood H. Smith Jr. said the company will match contributions from customers and employees dollar for dollar up to an additional $150,000.

Smith said CP&L contributions will come from shareholder funds, and will not be paid for by customers.

Lebanon Paid Heavy Price In Last Summer's War

By EARLEEN F. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — The twinkling lights of crowded pastry shops, the boutiques full of colorful fashions, the bustle of the streets are beginning to obscure the memories of June in Sidon, of invasion, death and devastation.

The resilient Lebanese people, credited by President Amin Gemayel with an ability to rise "phoenix-like from the ashes," are rebuilding. And throughout Lebanon, just as in this Mediterranean port, the reality of last summer's war is fading.

But with it the task of assessing just what happened in Israel's swift and stunning invasion is growing more difficult.

No one will probably ever know for sure how many people died in the 10-week war, which was mounted to oust the Palestine Liberation Organization from Lebanon. The number of homeless, the amount of destruction, the damage to the country's already decrepit infrastructure remain in dispute.

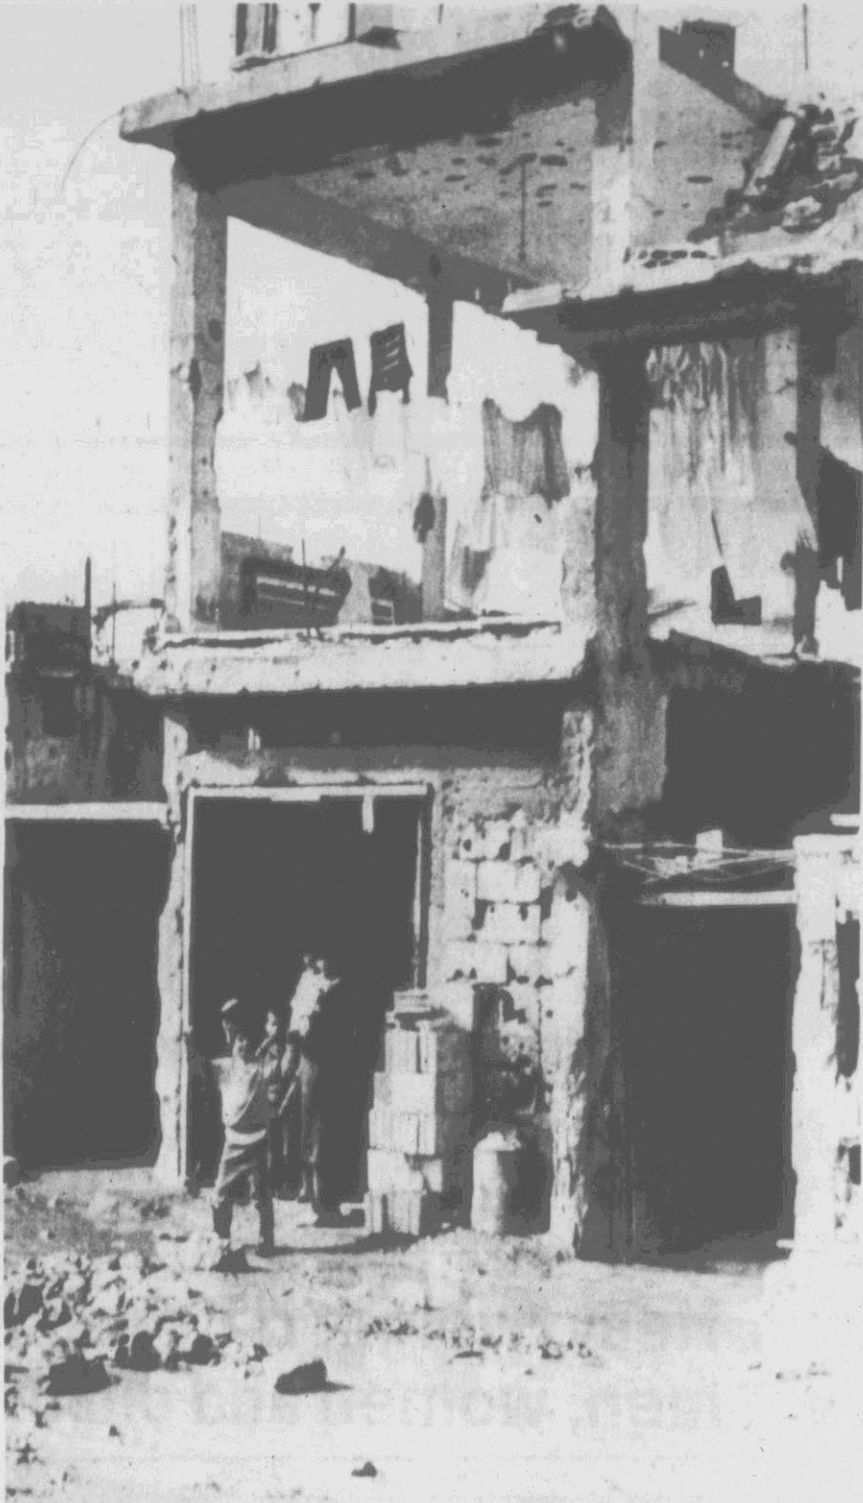

Here in Sidon alone, the casualty figures from June's days of fire and fury remain hazy. By Israeli count, 265 Lebanese died here, but by Lebanese count possibly more than 1,000 were killed.

When it came to statistics, there was no reliable source for reporters covering the war. The perception of what happened varied when described by the Israeli military, the PLO and Lebanese officials.

The misperceptions were perhaps best exemplified by a young Israeli soldier encountered by a reporter in west Beirut after the last Palestinian guerrillas had sailed out of Beirut port.

"You must have been a fighter," he insisted to the journalist. "We were told the civilians had gone." In the face of obvious evidence to the contrary, Israeli military officers had claimed that most civilians left west Beirut during the siege.

Here is a look back at major areas of disagreement and dispute — and, in some cases, later clarifications — in a war that stirred confusion, controversy and invective far beyond Lebanon's borders.

CASUALTIES

In the war's first weeks, the Israelis said the number of Lebanese and Palestinian dead stood in the hundreds, Lebanese sources placed it in the several thousands, and the PLO was claiming 35,000. Various PLO officials later put it at 50,000 or more.

On Nov. 30, Lebanese police working on a detailed casualty report said a total of 19,085 people were killed and 30,302 wounded between June 4 — the day Israeli planes bombed Beirut in preparation for the June 6 invasion — and Aug. 31, when the PLO evacuation from west Beirut was nearing completion.

The police conceded their statistics were not entirely reliable but contended they were close to the actual number.

They said 6,775 of the deaths were in Beirut and the rest in the old PLO-controlled territory south of the capital.

The Israeli army said Nov. 28 it had no casualty reports for Beirut but in the rest of Lebanon the death toll was 331 Lebanese and "over 1,000" Palestinians. Those were the same figures reported by Israel July 7.

Israeli officials accused the foreign news media of relying on the Palestinian Red Crescent, the PLO's equivalent of the Red Cross, for casualty figures. But correspondents of major news organizations had dismissed the PLO estimates as inflated.

International relief organizations generally avoided making casualty estimates, but on June 12 Francesco Nosedà, head of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Lebanon, told a news conference the Lebanese Red Cross estimated 1,000 to 1,500 civilians had been killed in Sidon, a figure dismissed by the Israelis as exaggerated.

In one case in Sidon, the Israelis reported 48 people died in a school basement during an air strike. But a reporter visiting the scene counted 50 men, women and children in what was clearly only the top layer of a decomposing heap of bodies in the basement. Lebanese residents claimed 300 were killed.

THE HOMELESS

Many people who fled from south Lebanon to Beirut in the first few days of the invasion became refugees for a second time as the Israeli juggernaut approached the capital. Some headed farther north or east, and others were seen making their way back south.

In mid-June, Lebanese government officials and International Red Cross workers estimated as many as 600,000 people were living at least temporarily away from their homes. By late August, U.N. relief officials estimated there were 50,000 to 60,000 homeless in south Lebanon alone, although Israel put the figure at 20,000.

Now that winter is nearing, U.N. and Red Cross workers say they have found no one without some kind of shelter. Many of the homeless have crowded in with relatives, and others live in schools and other public buildings.

BEIRUT REFUGEES

The Israeli army insisted at the height of the siege that "most" civilians had fled west Beirut and those who remained were PLO sympathizers. At the other extreme, former Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam claimed the Israelis were "holding 600,000 to 700,000 Lebanese civilians hostage" in west Beirut — despite the fact that the district's population was estimated at only 600,000 before the war and tens of thousands fled during it.

Correspondents who knew Beirut well estimated between 250,000 and 400,000 people, almost all civilians, weathered the siege.

These civilians became hostages, in effect, in the PLO's propaganda war and in the real war as well. As the Israelis tightened their noose, the PLO retreated deeper and deeper into residential neighborhoods, and military and civilian targets became more indistinguishable.

MILITARY OPERATIONS
Both sides suffered "credibility gaps."

At a news conference July 2, Mahmoud Labadi, spokesman for PLO chief Yasser Arafat, displayed a Mickey Mouse balloon he claimed was full of "poison gas" and was one of "many" the Israelis had dropped on west Beirut so "the children would die when they blew it up."

But the alleged "poison" balloon was the pre-inflated, completely sealed type commonly sold by Beirut toy vendors, and Labadi admitted he did not know where or when the balloon was found, or what kind of gas it contained.

On Aug. 1, one of the worst days of the siege, a PLO spokesman claimed the Israelis fired 150,000 shells on west Beirut in a nine-hour period — a seemingly impossible average of five shells per second.

The Israelis strained credibility as well.

In July, they denied they were responsible for the cut-off of electricity and water to west Beirut. But a reporter who went to an east Beirut relay station found three Israeli soldiers guarding the control room where a flick of the switch could have restored power.

DAMAGE

During the height of the siege, Israel's critics claimed that terror bombardments were destroying Beirut. The Israelis dismissed these assertions and insisted they were striking military targets, with only some inadvertent damage to other buildings. Neither was correct.

The capital is far from destroyed, but the Lebanese government's reconstruction council says 25 percent of west Beirut's buildings were damaged. Most of the damage was south of Corniche Mazraa, the broad boulevard that marked the northern boundary of the area where most Palestinians lived and PLO offices and arms were concentrated. That part of west Beirut is still a shambles, but the rest of the city again hums with activity.

According to the council's preliminary estimate, at least $1.9 billion in physical damage was done throughout Lebanon during the Israeli invasion.

Hoping 'Guilt' Brings Revenue

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Hoping guilt will raise revenues, city officials have asked suburban residents who work in Pittsburgh to pay $30 a year as a "voluntary tax."

"People generally don't give without being asked," City Councilwoman Michelle Madoff said Tuesday.

City officials have no authority to raise a $10-a-year occupational tax, so they asked suburban residents who benefit from city services but pay no city taxes to tax themselves $30.

"I feel there are a lot of people out there who feel guilty and feel they should give more than $10," Ms. Madoff said.

Panel Problem: Finding Quorum

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Community Colleges has had difficulty assembling a quorum recently because of resignations and business conflicts among the 19-member panel.

A quorum of 10 members present is required by law for the board to conduct business.

The board is requesting the 1983 General Assembly to amend the quorum requirement to say that a majority of the "qualified members" holding board seats would constitute a quorum.

Naming Soviet Cardinal Baffles Some Observers

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Pope John Paul II, locked in a bitter war of words with the Kremlin, has chosen the first Roman Catholic cardinal living in the Soviet Union, along with three other princes of the church from the Eastern bloc.

The pontiff, accused by the Kremlin last week of "subversion," stopped short of publicly naming a cardinal from the most heavily Catholic Soviet republic, Lithuania, and chose instead a prelate from the small and passive community of Latvia.

"This guy was definitely not named without the Soviets knowing about it in advance," said a Western diplomat, who declined to be identified. "If it testifies to anything, it is that the Vatican ost-politik is going along apace despite the war of words. Here you have two organizations which are great believers in quiet diplomacy."

Monsignor Julian Vaivods, the apostolic administrator in Riga, Latvia, was among 18 prelates from 15 countries named by the pontiff Wednesday to receive the red hat of cardinal and serve in the College of Cardinals, which eventually would choose John Paul's successor.

Also chosen by the pontiff were the Most Rev. Jozef Glomp, the archbishop of Warsaw and primate of the Roman Catholic Church in John Paul's native Poland; the Most Rev. Franjo Kuharic, archbishop of Zagreb, Yugoslavia and the Most Rev. Joachim Meisner, archbishop of Berlin, representing the Eastern and Western halves of the divided city.

Little is known about the new Latvian cardinal. But the fact that he was allowed to attend the 1978 funeral of Pope John Paul I at the Vatican appears to signify that he was in official favor, at least at that time.

Nor was it known whether Vaivods would be allowed to travel to the Vatican for the cardinals' installation, scheduled for Feb. 2.

The choice of Vaivods baffled some Western sources who follow religious issues in this officially atheist, Communist state.

"The interesting question is why not a Lithuanian cardinal," said a Western diplomat who asked not to be identified by name or embassy. "After Lutheranism, Catholicism is the most important church in Latvia, but Latvia as a Roman Catholic center pales in comparison to Lithuania."

There was speculation that the pontiff dared not name a cardinal living in the Lithuanian republic because of possible repercussions against the clergy and the faithful there.

About 60 percent of the 2 million Lithuanians are believed to be practicing Roman Catholics and the church there has firm roots at the officially sanctioned level, as well as a flourishing underground that has come under repeated attack from the Kremlin. Latvia, with an estimated 265,000 Catholics, is believed to be much less active.

Another suggestion was that the pope had earlier secretly named the Most Rev. Julijonas Steponavicius, the exiled archbishop of Vilnius, capital of Lithuania, as a cardinal

"in pectore," or "in the heart," and was thus free to choose a Latvian. Steponavicius has been sent into internal exile and is believed living in a small town near the Latvian border.

Several past popes have named Soviet cardinals, but all have chosen prelates living in exile.

"The naming of Vaivods is a significant development in that he is the first, that he can publicly operate as a cardinal," the diplomat said.

It was not clear how the elevation of Vaivods, or the other three East Bloc prelates, might impact on the war of words being waged between the Kremlin and the Vatican.

Last week, in an unusual personal attack on the head of the Catholic church, Moscow accused the pope of using the cover of religion to engage in anti-Communist propaganda and to carry out subversion in Poland and other East Bloc countries.

In an equally unusual reprisal, the Vatican issued a statement saying that the Kremlin criticism "is in contrast to the real facts and situations which are well known."

Neither side mentioned the so-called "Bulgarian connection" although it is believed to have kindled the recent escalation of tensions between Moscow and the Vatican.

The connection theory, unearthed by Italian investigators, alleges that Bulgaria, a close Kremlin ally, had a hand in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul in 1981.

Theory has it that the would-be papal assassin was aided by Bulgarian agents, presumably operating under Soviet control or at least with Soviet knowledge, in an effort to silence papal support for the independent Solidarity labor movement in Poland. Moscow and Bulgaria have denied any links with the attempt on the pontiff's life.

Papal support for the church in Poland got a boost with the elevation of Glomp, who was earlier chosen by John Paul to succeed the late Polish Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, who died of cancer in May 1981.

Many Poles compared Glomp unfavorably to Wyszynski, claiming he was too moderate in his dealings with the martial law regime.

But his elevation to the rank of cardinal was a clear signal of papal support.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed to report prices. The market is barely steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate demand. Weights desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,797,000, compared to 1,581,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices staged a strong advance today in buying attributed to hopes for a recovery from the recession.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 11.95 to 1,056.84 by noon.

Gainers outpaced losers by almost 3 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In his news conference Wednesday night, President Reagan acknowledged the need to reduce the widening federal budget deficit. He repeated his belief, however, that any tax increases would be a mistake at a time when the economy is depressed.

Evidence of investors' hopes for an end to the long recession was provided by strength in many stocks considered highly sensitive to the economic cycle — for example, chemical and metals issues.

In the chemical group, DuPont rose 1 1/2 to 38 1/2; Dow Chemical 1 1/2 to 28 1/2, and Union Carbide 1 1/2 to 54 1/2.

Among metals stocks, Alcoa, up 1 to 30 1/2; Kaiser Aluminum, up 1/2 to 16 1/2, and Inco, up 1/2 to 12 1/2, all made the active list.

The NYSE's composite index rose .88 to 82.64. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 6.08 at 353.78.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 42.62 million shares at noon, against 39.97 million at the same point Wednesday.

Greenville Woman Is Injured In Fire

JEFFERSONVILLE, Vt. — A Greenville, N.C., woman, Anita Rogers, was injured in a fire which destroyed most of an eight-condominium complex at the Village at Smugglers Notch ski resort Wednesday shortly before 8 a.m.

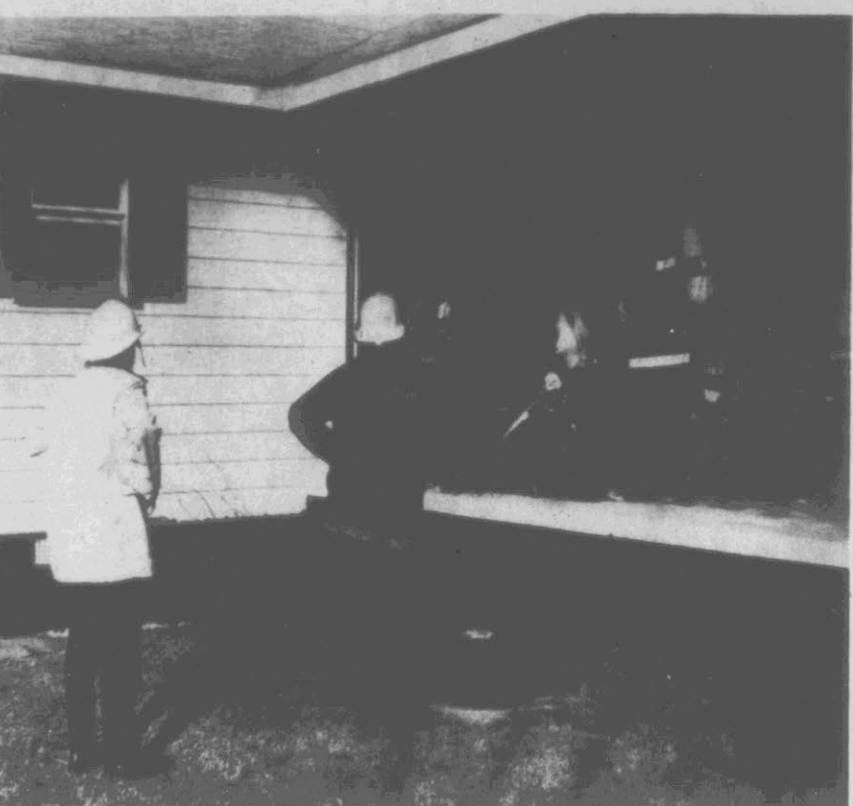

Miss Rogers, 21, suffered first-degree burns on her legs and second-degree burns on both feet. She was treated and released from the Copley Hospital in nearby Morrisville. No other injuries were reported among the approximately 100 persons evacuated during the fire.

Her mother, Mrs. Charles L. Rogers, said in Greenville that Anita and her sister, Melanie, 18, were vacationing with other college students at the ski resort. She said her daughters told her they were awakened by a smoke alarm almost simultaneously with someone knocking on their door and yelling fire. Anita's burns were reportedly sustained during her escape down a blazing stairwell.

The condominiums — privately owned but managed by the ski area — were quickly evacuated. Each had been rented to 12 students, the spokeswoman said. Several units were destroyed and the rest heavily damaged in the wind-whipped fire.

Mrs. Rogers said her daughters assured her that they were fine, though everything they had along was destroyed and they're wearing loaned clothes. Anita, a senior at East Carolina University, was flying to Norfolk and driving home from there today, while her sister was returning to Dana Hall, a school in Wellsley, Mass.

MORNING HOUSE FIRE — Greenville fire-rescue members battled a blaze at a 1205 Meadowbrook Drive residence north of Greenville shortly after 10 a.m. this morning. According to witnesses at the scene, the occupant of the house was the Charlie Heath family and they were not home at the time of the fire. Heavy smoke was seen coming from the dwelling when the first fire units arrived. Firemen quickly had the blaze under control and were in the process of investigating the cause of the fire this morning. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Cable TV Says Costs Forced Cut 2 Stations

By JERRY RAYNOR
 Reflector Staff Writer

"We regret that we had to cut two stations from our cable lineup," Janet Cooke, general manager of Greenville Cable TV Inc., said today in reference to the recent removal of WOR-TV and WPTF-TV from the local cable TV lineup, "but it was that or having to charge our customers a much higher rate, which we certainly don't want to do."

The two stations were dropped from Greenville Cable TV as of Dec. 31 as the result of a ruling by the Copyright Royalty Tribunal to the effect that beginning Jan. 1, 1983, "a cable system carrying more distant signals than had formerly been permitted by Federal Communications Commission rules prior to the deregulation rule in 1981 will be charged 3.75 percent of basic revenues for each additional independent signal."

The copyright ruling also requires the payment of one-fourth of 3.75 percent of basic revenues for each additional network distant signal carried.

Both WOR-TV from New York and WPTF-TV from Raleigh-Durham fell into the category of stations for which the Greenville Cable TV would have been required to pay the 3.75 percent if they remained on the air. "That percentage is for each individual station," Ms. Cooke remarked. "That made the cost of carrying these stations prohibitive."

"If we had decided to keep these two, it would have been necessary to go up on our rates tremendously, and we simply could not see that as being a feasible move."

Ms. Cooke notes "this is the first time since we began operations that we've had to take channels off the air."

"We were dismayed by the Copyright Royalty Tribunal ruling," Ms. Cooke added. "It was completely unexpected. It was in 1981 that the FCC eliminated the distant-signal rules which enabled cable TV systems to import an unlimited number of distant TV signals. It was under this 1981 rule that WOR and WPTF were added to cable

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — American Tony Lush, 33, trying to sail around the world, said Wednesday he had one thought as his yacht began sinking in the Indian Ocean: "I can't swim."

The occupants who haven't left the resort were being housed temporarily in a building called The Meeting House.

Some of the vacationers said the fire was not going to ruin their time at the resort. "We're not going to let this dampen our spirits," Rusty Carrier, 18, of Concord, N.C., said as he headed to the Smugglers Notch ski slope even as firefighters rolled up their hoses.

Heels, Terps, Deacs All Win; Unheralded Wagner Trips Duke

By The Associated Press
No. 18 North Carolina offered a preview of the Atlantic Coast Conference's new rules Wednesday night as the Tar Heels hit 50 percent of their three-point field goal attempts to beat Rutgers 86-69.

Jim Braddock was six for seven from the 19-foot circle, scoring a career-high 20 points in North Carolina's first experiment with the three-pointer and 30-second shot clock.

"If they'd have been for two points, we wouldn't have taken them," said coach Dean Smith, whose team improved to 9-3.

In other action involving ACC teams, Wake Forest beat Buffalo 121-56, Maryland eased past William & Mary 56-51 and Duke was stunned by Wagner, losing 84-77.

Wake Forest's Sylvester Charles scored 26 points and grabbed 14 rebounds as the Demon Deacons fell one point short of their all-time scoring record in beating the Division III team.

Like North Carolina, Wake Forest took advantage of the ACC rules in extending its record to 9-1. But coach Carl Tacy said his team still needed some polishing before starting conference play Saturday.

"I'm glad we're starting the conference race at home," he said. "Georgia Tech will be a difficult team to play. We'll have to be ready."

Maryland needed some last minute free throws from Adrian Branch, who led all scorers with 26 points, as they held off a William & Mary charge. The Terrapins, 7-3, will take a five-game winning streak into their ACC opener against No. 4 Virginia, 10-1, on Saturday.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski offered no alibis for the Blue Devils, who fell to 5-5 after their hot-shooting opponents from Staten Island, N.Y., ran away in the last eight minutes.

"Wagner played an excellent game," he said. "Nothing they did all night was negative. They deserved to beat us, as much as I don't like to say that."

For Wagner, 3-7, it was an exhilarating victory.

"This was the biggest win of my career," said guard Bob Mahala, who scored 25 points to lead the Seahawks.

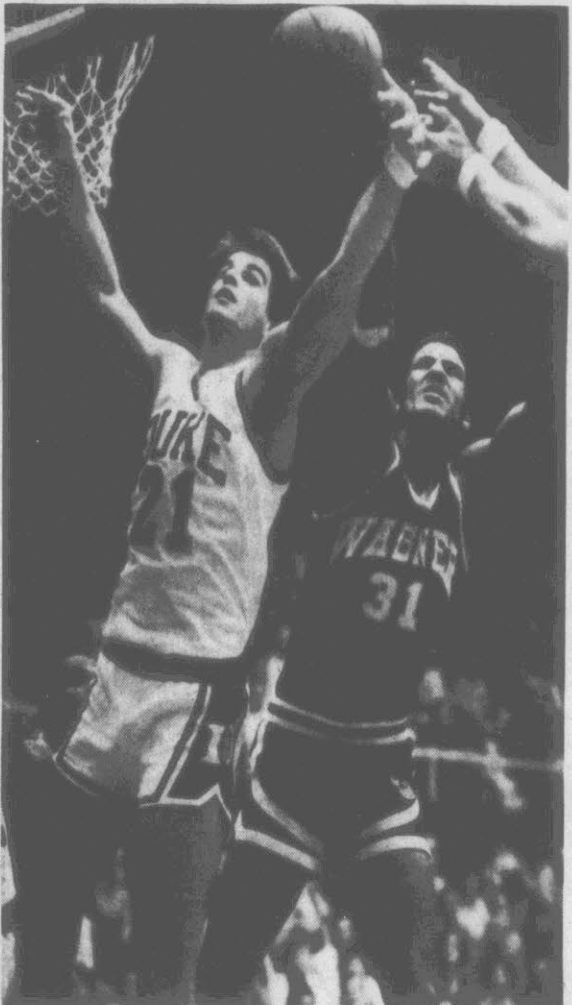

Duke plays LaSalle in a non-conference game Saturday before entering league play.

On Friday, No. 16 North Carolina State, 5-1, takes on Clemson, 6-6, in the second ACC game of the season. Virginia beat Duke in the league opener.

Saturday, in addition to the Virginia-Maryland and Georgia Tech-Wake Forest conferences clashes, North Carolina meets No. 9 Syracuse at Charlotte, N.C.

Sunday, N.C. State visits No. 15 Missouri.

Wichita State Football Draws NCAA Fire; Given Two Years

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA has levied another probation against its most penalized member, Wichita State University, this time for violations in the school's football program.

Wichita State, which now has been cited seven times by the NCAA since it began its enforcement program in 1952, was slapped Wednesday with a two-year probation.

The Shockers basketball program already is on a three-year probation, handed down less than a year ago for recruiting violations.

Under the terms of the football probation, the Shockers are restricted from appearing in bowl games and on television during the 1983 and 1984 seasons.

The Missouri Valley Conference school also will be allowed to award only 25 scholarships, instead of the normal 30, during each of the 1983-1984 and 1984-1985 school years.

Head football coach Willie "Jeff" Jeffries and assistant coach Fayne Henson will be prohibited by the school from recruiting off-campus for a specific period of time, according to a report by The Wichita Eagle-Beacon. Jeffries has been head coach since 1978.

The university was charged with five violations of NCAA rules, three of which the NCAA said occurred on Aug. 12, 1982. The violations were committed by the head coach, an assistant coach and a graduate assistant, none of whom was identified in the NCAA report.

It had been widely reported that the school was under investigation for the recruitment of Dennis "Tex" Allen, a junior college prospect who did not enroll at Wichita State.

Allen had been quoted as saying he was met by an NCAA investigator shortly after he was driven to Wichita by a Shockers assistant coach.

The NCAA charged the two coaches and the graduate assistant with knowingly providing false and misleading information to the NCAA at an unspecified time. In addition, the head coach was accused of instructing a recruit and his mother to lie to the NCAA.

The head coach also was accused of giving a recruit cash in the office of an assistant. The money was to be used to pay the recruit's transportation costs home, the NCAA said.

The NCAA further charged that the assistant coach and the graduate assistant provided transportation for a recruit between his home and the university so the recruit could enroll in WSU and participate in preseason practice.

The assistant coach also purchased a meal for the recruit, the NCAA said.

The assistant coach and the graduate assistant contacted a recruit on August 12, 1982 at a time prohibited by the NCAA, the infractions committee reported.

The NCAA said the assistant coach and the graduate assistant lied when they told WSU President Clark Ahlberg in August 1982 that they had reported their knowledge of violations of NCAA rules to the infractions committee. (Please Turn To Page 12)

ECU Volleyball Coach To Quit

Lynn Davidson, for two years the head volleyball coach at East Carolina University, has resigned her post, it has been learned.

Davidson's resignation would become effective at the end of the current school year, sources said. Davidson, when contacted, confirmed that she has turned in her resignation.

An all-state player at N.C.

State, Davidson was a four-year player in that sport and also lettered in softball for two years. She was a co-captain of the junior varsity basketball team while at State.

She also coached at Cardinal Gibbons High School in Raleigh and worked with the Raleigh Parks and Recreation Department as a coach and organizer prior to coming to ECU as an assistant coach three seasons ago. After one year as an assistant, she took over the head post when Alita Dillon resigned. Her first season, Davidson's team posted an 11-23 record. This year, however, the Pirate team finished with a 26-15 mark, best ever for an ECU team.

Dr. Ken Karr, Director of Athletics, was unavailable for comment on Davidson's resignation or prospects for a new coach, having already left Greenville for next week's NCAA Convention on the West Coast.

Emory Confirms Aides Leaving

East Carolina University head football coach Ed Emory confirmed the resignation of two of his assistants yesterday afternoon. Word of the resignations was unofficially published yesterday prior to Emory's announcement.

"Both Jim Holland and Jim Bengala have done an outstanding job for our program," Emory said. "We wish both the best as they leave us for other professional interests. Holland helped develop a virtually non-existent strength program to the fine one we have today, while Bengala helped recruit outstanding players like Jeff Heath and Ricky Nichols."

Both coaches were three-year veterans of the ECU staff, coming to the school with Emory when he took over as head coach. Holland coached the defensive ends this past year after having worked with the defensive line for two years. Bengala was the defensive secondary coach after having worked with both running backs and quarterbacks in his first two years.

The resignations brought to three the number leaving the ECU staff this year. Defensive coordinator Norm Parker earlier announced he would leave ECU to join the new Michigan State staff.

Emory has been looking for a new defensive coordinator and reportedly is near to making his selection. He has also begun a hunt for replacements for the other two former staff members.

Tyson Named Junior Coach

Debbie Tyson, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Dewey Tyson of Greenville, has been named as the head coach of the Nebraska Junior National team (Junior Olympics) in volleyball.

Tyson, who attended Louisville and graduated from Guilford College, holds a master's from East Carolina University. While at Louisville and Guilford, she played both volleyball and basketball, garnering all-State honors at the former and both all-State and all-conference at the latter. She was chosen Most Valuable Player in volleyball at Louisville her sophomore year and at Guilford her junior year. At Guilford she won the Best Defensive Player award twice.

Since earning her post-graduate degree at ECU, where she served as a graduate assistant in volleyball, Tyson has been coaching at Platte Community College in Columbia, Nebraska. In her four years there, she has a combined 124-61 record, having won one conference title and finished second three times. She captured one regional NJCAA title, qualifying her team for the nationals, where she finished 11th. She has two other third and one fourth place regional finish.

She was selected as Coach of the Year in her conference her first year at Platte.

For the past two years, Tyson served as assistant coach of the Nebraska volleyball team in volleyball, moving up to the head coaching position this year. She has recently completed auditions for the team, which includes girls ages 16-18, and will begin training and play later this month. Play continues through April.

Michigan State Upsets Iowa, 61-59

By The Associated Press
There's no place like away-from-home for Michigan State, which just closed another successful road show on its "meat grinder" tour.

The Spartans visited No.8 Iowa Wednesday night, and spoiled their hosts' debut in the new Carver-Hawkeye Sports Arena with a 61-59 upset victory.

Kevin Willis and Sam Vincent scored 18 points apiece for Michigan State in the Big Ten opener for both teams. Vincent hit a free throw in the final seconds and Iowa lost a chance to tie on a turnover with two seconds left.

TOP TWENTY
In other games involving Top Twenty teams, Auburn bounced fifth-ranked Alabama 91-80, third-ranked Kentucky got past Louisiana State 52-50, No.9 Syracuse trimmed Providence 83-58, No.10 Arkansas topped Mercer 83-62, 13th-ranked Louisville defeated Kentucky Wesleyan 79-58, No.17 Georgetown stopped Monmouth 82-59, and No.18 North Carolina beat Rutgers 86-69.

"We enjoy breaking in new arenas," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote, whose Spartans dampened Boise State's debut at its new complex earlier this season.

"In all honesty, we caught Iowa on a cold night in their shooting and we are very fortunate to win," Heathcote said. "The Big Ten will be a meat grinder all year. We had been struggling and it's great to get a victory in the opener."

Iowa Coach Lute Olson said his Hawkeyes, 8-2, had all the comforts of home but just didn't win.

"No, I don't think the new arena had anything to do with it," Olson said. "We even moved the same rims from the old fieldhouse so there would be psychological effect from that."

The two coaches disagreed, however, on the effect of the Hawkeyes' new home.

"I'm very pleased with the new arena from the standpoint of fan involvement," Olson said. "The noise level was certainly equal to, if not louder, than the old fieldhouse."

Differed Heathcote: "It was like a neutral court for Iowa. The crowd was an influence for Iowa but seemingly less intimidating than in their other building."

Alabama, which moved up a notch to No.5 this week, lost its second consecutive Southeastern Conference game. Charles Barkley scored 27 points, including 20 in the second half, as Auburn pulled away in the final seven minutes.

Ennis Whatley had 31 points for Alabama, 8-2, which lost its SEC opener to Florida on Monday night.

"I am really disappointed for our kids," said Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson. "We certainly have our work cut out for us this weekend with Kentucky."

Kentucky, meanwhile, had to hold on to overcome LSU in another SEC game. Melvin Turpin blocked Leonard Mitchell's field goal attempt with two seconds left to give the Wildcats their 10th victory in 11 games. Jim Master of Kentucky led all scorers with 14 points.

Erich Santifer tallied 18 points for unbeaten Syracuse in its rout of Providence in a Big East matchup. The Orangemen, 11-0, scored the last four points of the first half and first six points of the second half to put the game away.

Junior guard Alvin Robertson tied his career-high with 23 points — on nine-of-13 shooting from the field — to pace Arkansas, now 10-0. The Razorbacks hit 19 of 28 shots, including 13 layups and dunks, in racing to a 46-28 halftime lead against Mercer.

Louisville, sparked by brothers Rodney and Scooter McCray, exploded to start the second half in routing Kentucky Wesleyan, a Division II team. Louisville, 9-2, scored 19 consecutive points early in the second half to take a 62-34 lead. Scooter had 10 points, eight rebounds and nine assists while Rodney had 14 points, six rebounds and four assists.

Center Patrick Ewing scored 15 points and Michael Jackson and David Wingate each added 14 as Georgetown easily defeated Monmouth. The victorious Hoyas, 9-3, took a 23-8 lead and were never threatened.

North Carolina played its first game under the new Atlantic Coast Conference rules — including a 19-foot three-point field goal and 30-second shot clock — and Jim Braddock made the most of it against Rutgers. He scored 20 points as he hit 5-of-5 three-point attempts in the first half and made 1-of-2 in the second half. Sam Perkins added 18 for the Tar Heels, 9-3, who have won six straight.

Clack Charged In Coke Bust

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Pittsburgh Steeler and New York Giant offensive lineman Jim Clack was released on $10,000 bond Wednesday following his arrest on drug-related charges, police said.

Clack, a guard and center for the National Football League Steelers from 1971 to 1977 and a member of the team's 1974 and 1975 Super Bowl champions, was charged with conspiracy to deliver cocaine and delivery of cocaine.

"He should be scheduled for trial in the next 60 days," Nags Head Police Chief Charles Dail said in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

Clack, 35, of Rocky Mount, and four Dare County residents were named in sealed indictments Monday. The indictments were sealed until Wednesday to avoid hampering an ongoing drug investigation in Suffolk, Va., Dail said.

The indictments followed an investigation by the Nags Head Police Department, the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation and Suffolk undercover police, Dail said.

The investigation was launched when Dail asked the SBI and Suffolk police for assistance "some time back," he said. "We didn't know what we were going to find when we started."

Dail would not release details of the investigation.

"We can't try the case in the press," Dail said. "To be honest the investigation is still continuing."

Clack, a Wake Forest University graduate, finished his professional football career as a member of the New York Giants from 1978 until 1981.

Clack currently owns a sporting goods store in Rocky Mount and has several business ventures in the Nags Head area, including owning some condominiums, Dail said.

Others charged in the case included Kenneth Zane Smith, 34, a Nags Head real estate broker, arrested Monday on charges of conspiracy to deliver cocaine and delivery of cocaine. He was released on $25,000 bond, police said.

Kill Devil Hills residents — Richard Kenneth Ostlund, 33, a tennis pro, and Sharon Cross Metzger, 24, who worked for a realtor — were each indicted on charges of conspiracy to deliver cocaine and delivery of cocaine, conspiracy to sell and deliver cocaine and sale and delivery of cocaine.

George Michael Paul, 21, of Wanchese, was charged with felonious possession of LSD and sale and delivery of LSD, according to Dail.

COACHES' CORNER

By CHARLIE HARRISON
ECU Men's Basketball Coach

As a new year begins and the old year ends, the ECU basketball team "hits" the road again and again and again but we will return to the friendly confines of Minges Coliseum against none other than the league champions of a year ago, James Madison, on January 8.

As I reflect on the past three months as the new head basketball coach, I see some improvement and I see a great deal of room for more. Still "on the road," we have time to wish for a few things in the new year and as the bus rolls along on its six-hour trip to Virginia Tech, I thought I'd jot down a few New Year's wishes, not resolutions mind you, but wishes for our 1983 team. Truthfully, besides wanting the roof in Minges repaired, all I truly want are a few wins and more consistent play from our team.

The life style of a basketball team during the Holidays is one most people cannot relate to. We, and I say "we" as coaches are included, are not part of the chestnuts roasting by an open fire, not really involved with most Holiday festivities. We must practice. We must prepare for upcoming games and league play. Since my sophomore year in college, I have been with my family only once at Christmas time. Not that I'm complaining but if I'm not home for Christmas neither are my players. Scrooge! Huh?

Basketball players don't have the life of leisure. Surely they have media exposure yet I think that all of you should be aware of the time — leisure time that the average student and person enjoys during Christmas and New Year's is not a luxury for ECU basketball players.

As the "mean ole coach" that some of my friends have labeled me, I must defend myself as I did not lock the players up in their rooms for the entire duration of the Holiday season, yet Christmas night we were hard at work and continued to do so throughout the normal Holiday time for the other students. This is a sacrifice by these people. They stay in their dorm room, eat at the Crow's Nest, and practice twice a day when not playing.

I relay this to you here in Coach's Corner only in an effort to make you aware and maybe more appreciative of a group of students that besides the luxury of having an athletic scholarship are giving up a great deal of time — time usually taken for granted by others unless they were the families of those who represent ECU's men's (and women's) basketball teams and were away for the Holidays.

I hope that this leisure time sacrificed will be beneficial to us later. I hope that their time will be appreciated by others as time well spent by being in attendance at games. I hope that this time spent in the hopes of having a representative and competitive basketball team will not go unnoticed....

And the "mean ole coach" makes out the practice play for the Virginia Tech game as the six hour bus ride almost has ended. "We won't go long. A short practice," says the "mean ole coach."

"Yeah," says one of the players under his breath. "Only two or three hours."

Michael Spinks Is Arrested

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — World Boxing Association light heavyweight champion Michael Spinks says a stolen gun that police found in his car was a "keepsake" he received in Canada following the 1976 Olympics.

Spinks, who was charged Wednesday with possession of a gun without a permit, denied police reports that he had led officers on a 25-block high-speed chase.

The 26-year-old younger brother of former heavyweight champion Leon Spinks was arrested early Wednesday after police stopped his car and noticed a .45-caliber revolver on the floor. Michael Spinks' 20-year-old brother, Leland, also was in the car but was not arrested.

Michael Spinks was released on his own recognizance after an arraignment before Municipal Judge Lynwood Blount via closed-circuit television.

Detective Capt. William Bergman said two officers began pursuing Spinks' car after it went through a red light at the outskirts of the city about 1:45 a.m. After they stopped the car, they noticed a gun lying at Spinks' feet. The gun contained six spent shells, police said.

Police said Canadian authorities had been notified of the pistol, which was reported stolen in Toronto in 1975.

Spinks, who won a gold medal during the 1976 Olympics at Montreal, told reporters he had used the gun to fire shots into an open field to celebrate "making it to the New Year."

"I don't carry guns, no weapons at all," said the fighter. He said he forgot the weapon was in his car.

Spinks also said there was no high-speed chase.

Investigate Oregon Cyanide Poisoning

By DAVID STAATS
Associated Press Writer
HILLSBORO, Ore. (AP) — The cyanide poisoning of a woman who died after taking Anacin-3, in the first death from a tainted drug since the Tylenol killings, was probably an "isolated tragedy," says the state medical examiner. An autopsy and toxicology examination revealed cyanide and bits of an unidentified capsule in the stomach of 31-year-old Patricia F. Bennett, a college security guard, Medical Examiner William Brady announced Wednesday in Portland.

Mrs. Bennett died at about 4 a.m. Tuesday in the intensive care unit of Tuality Community Hospital about 5½ hours after she was driven to the hospital by her husband Norman, 45, a self-employed carpenter.

Family members reported Mrs. Bennett took Anacin-3 a couple of hours before she became ill, said Washington County Sheriff's Capt. Harold Kleve said Wednesday.

Tests were planned today to learn whether capsule fragments found in the victim's stomach were from Anacin-3 or another medication, Brady said. Trace amounts of cyanide were found in the air of an Anacin-3 bottle taken from her home, he said, and tests of the remaining capsules and other drugs in the home also were to be conducted today.

Brady did not release the lot number for the Anacin-3 bottle, and said he was not advising a recall of the pain reliever.

"We don't want to create an inappropriate attitude of public concern," Brady said. "I think this is most likely — and my office is treating it as — a single isolated tragedy at this time."

Seven people in the Chicago area died last year between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1 after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules laced with cyanide. The deaths set off a nationwide wave of product tampering incidents, but Mrs. Bennett's death was the first confirmed fatal poisoning.

The maker of Anacin-3, American Whitehall, was sending Dr. Barry Nash of its staff to assist in the Hillsboro investigation, Brady said.

"We're working as fast and furious as we can to isolate the source" of the contamination, said Scott Upham, Washington County district attorney.

Kleve and Brady said Mrs. Bennett showed no sign of mouth or throat burns, indicating that the cyanide was taken in capsule form. Brady said she probably swallowed one or two capsules.

"We're certain the capsules contained cyanide," Brady said. "This lady ingested cyanide-filled capsules."

Upham advised people to check all over-the-counter medications for tampering, "the same precautions they have been advised to utilize since the Tylenol matter."

"We're investigating it as a homicide because we want a thorough investigation," said Deputy John Armstrong. "It could be it was taken by her in a suicidal-type situation. We don't know."

Brady said the district attorney was investigating three possibilities — that it was a suicide, that someone set out to murder her, or that she was the victim of a random killing.

Mrs. Bennett had been a campus security officer at Portland Community College's Sylvania Campus since August 1981. Besides her husband, her household consisted of her mother, Golden Mitchell, and a 14-year-old daughter by a previous marriage.

Meanwhile, in San Jose, Calif., a judge on Wednesday refused bail to a man accused of trying to murder his wife with cyanide after making it appear the poison was placed in a capsule of Maximum Strength Anacin-3.

Richard Bowen, 29, pleaded innocent to poisoning his wife Susan, 30. Mrs. Bowen, who nearly died from swallowing cyanide Nov. 26, said in a statement she supported her husband's request for bail.

No arrests have been made in the Chicago-area Tylenol killings. On Wednesday, Illinois investigators pleaded for a person who turned in a bottle of cyanide-poisoned Extra-Strength Tylenol a few days after the poisonings to come forward and identify himself.

Investigators want to find out where the bottle was bought, said Mort Friedman, a spokesman for the task force investigating the deaths.

N.C. Fourth In UFO Sightings

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina ranks fourth in the nation for the number of UFO sightings in the last 30 years, says a field investigator for the Mutual UFO Network Inc.

George D. Fawcett says unidentified flying objects were reported in 12 cities in the state in 1982, many accompanied by "swishing" and "whirring" sounds.

Fawcett said a high school student in Kernersville suffered burning eyes, extreme thirst and red arms after a domed UFO hovered above him as he played basketball on his family basketball court in March.

Larry Walker reported the court lights went out while the object was in the area, but came on when the UFO left. Fawcett said Walker also reported seeing a figure moving behind the windows of the object.

Ten members of the Preston Woods family in Hillsborough reported seeing a 50-foot object with a "row of windows" maneuver above their home on Jan. 4. They said the UFO made a "whirring sound."

Two postmasters, Robert McRee of Maiden and Jack Bolick of Conover, reported an object that "looked like a large window of rectangular light" over Maiden in March.

On April 13, J.P. Stevens Co. employee Slade Hicks said he watched a chrome-topped UFO rise from behind the reservoir at Stanley, trailing sticks and dirt from its bottom.

On April 19, members of the Roland Lowry family in Monroe said a UFO with red, blue, amber and white lights appeared, causing dogs, cows and chickens to become extremely agitated.

On June 8, Ginger Harris, a Pineville housewife, reported an object with "lights attached to it" hovering near her home and making "whirring sounds."

Larry DeArmond, an Eastern Airlines employee, said he saw three UFOs making wide sweeps, right-angle turns and rapid ascents near Charlotte on July 6.

A long black cigar-shaped UFO with a light on it was reported on Sept. 10 hovering over Belmont. Fawcett said police received more than 20 phone calls before the object moved toward Mount Holly.

A UFO swept the ground with a "searchlight beam" later in September, according to Willara Griffith of Belmont.

Sgt. Frank Olszewski, a guard at the Timken Plant in Lincolnton, and Security Officer Patricia Chapman observed three brightly lit object maneuvering above the plant. After the objects left, the pair reported six to eight airplanes appeared in the area, as if searching for the UFOs.

In a similar incident near the McGuire Nuclear Plant on Lake Norman, plant employees Gary Fortenberry and Jimmy Bumgarner said a disc-shaped object with four "landing legs" flew about 250 feet above the ground in the early daylight hours in October.

Wrecks Cause Light Damage

An estimated $2,600 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said the heaviest damage occurred when cars driven by Sheila Deanne Bullock of Mocksville and Michael Kachmer of Greenville collided about 4:02 p.m. on 14th Street, 35 feet east of the Charles Street intersection.

Police, who charged Ms. Bullock with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $350 to the Bullock car and $1,000 to the Kachmer vehicle.

An estimated $400 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6:43 p.m. collision at the intersection of Third and Ash Streets.

Drivers of the cars involved were identified as Marcus Joseph Hepburn of 102 Ash St. and David Jon Lowe of 302 Oak St.

Cars driven by Susan Hulbert Respass of Washington and Joey Ray Burroughs of 2001 E. Greenville Blvd. collided about 1:36 p.m. on 10th Street, 100 feet east of the Rocksprings Road intersection, according to investigators.

Damage was set at $150 to the Respass car and $300 to the Burroughs vehicle.

Couple ESCAPE HITZACKER, West Germany (AP) — A 21-year-old East German laborer and his 19-year-old girlfriend escaped across the Elbe River into West Germany on Wednesday, border police said.

Cable Introducing Rock Groups

HOUSTON (UPI) — Every diehard rock 'n' roller has heard of the Rolling Stones, The Who, Frank Zappa and Fleetwood Mac. But who, or what, are the Waitresses, Squeeze and Joe "King" Carrasco?

How about the Police or the Boomtown Rats? All are rock groups that have been introduced to millions of cable television viewers through MTV, or Music Television.

MTV is the only 24-hour-a-day, all stereo, video music channel available. Since August 1981, Warner Amex Satellite Entertainment Co. has been bringing its viewers music and interviews with rock stars, along with bizarre, surrealistic video clips of the groups acting out the words of their songs.

"There was an audience out there that was being underserved," Les Garland, vice president of programming for MTV, said. "No one was reaching the 12 to 34 group."

The record companies were spending between $25,000 and $75,000 to produce a 3½-minute clip and there was no place to put them except in clubs or as fillers. It was an instant success."

MTV is piped daily to almost 8 million homes where basic cable service is available at no extra charge to viewers, Garland said.

The concept of bringing rock music to television viewers is not new. Dick Clark started "American Bandstand" in 1957, bringing the idols of their day to American teens. It gave the fans a chance to put faces with the names and voices they heard.

Other shows — "Shin-Dig," "Hootennanny," "Soul Train" and "Solid Gold" — also gave viewers a chance to see who was singing what.

In the past, only well-known groups were featured on television. Now, under the MTV logo, many groups known only as opening acts for more established groups in large cities, are making names for themselves.

People who live in small towns off the usual concert circuit never got a chance to see the group "Men at Work," but at least two separate cuts from a recent album have been conceptualized in a corny but clever videotape that plays regularly on MTV.

"It has been a real shot of new life for the record business," Garland said. Record company buyers agree.

"MTV sells records for us," said Charles Pennington, a record buyer for Peaches in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Record store owner Dennis Douvanis in Allentown, Pa., said he has opened a new section to accommodate requests for New Wave records, which did not sell before MTV was introduced in the area.

"MTV has created an audience for groups that get no airplay whatsoever in this area," Douvanis said. "MTV has created overnight a market for New Wave music in Allentown."

Mike Duncan of Cactus Records in Houston said, "Within a certain age group, people will come in and ask for off-the-wall stuff, and we know that MTV is the only place they could have been turned on to that. It exposes a product that isn't being exposed anywhere else."

Victor Mickunas of the Music Circuit in Des Moines, Iowa, said, "Anybody who's on MTV sells in my store."

Bill Still of the Record Theater in Buffalo, N.Y., said, "MTV seems to spur sales of obscure groups, and it helps because radio stations won't play new artists. We show MTV in-store and it's had a direct effect on sales, both how much and what they buy."

Artists do not pay for their airtime on Music Television, said executive producer Julian Goldberg, who compared the concept to radio, where records are sent to stations by the record companies for airtime. Goldberg said the unsolicited videos are screened by MTV officials, who decide what will go on the air.

When the tapes are aired, information about the group, song, album and recording company is flashed on the screen for eight seconds.

An added attraction are interviews by one of the five video jockeys with rock stars, and concert clips from international shows.

Garland said about 40 percent of the videos on MTV are concert clips. The remainder are creative performances dubbed to the music.

Short, in-studio interviews with such notables as The Who's Pete Townshend, the Rolling Stones' Mick Jagger, Keith Richard and Ron Wood and the father-daughter act of Frank and Moon Zappa are quite popular because they give viewers a chance to see the rock 'n' rollers in relaxed conversations.

The success of MTV also is measured in dollars.

Garland said Warner Amex spent about $20 million to start MTV, but national and local advertising dollars already have generated almost that much in revenues. There are only 6 minutes of national advertising per hour and 2 minutes of local ads.

Garland said because of the popularity of music on television, an organization in Nashville plans a country music version of MTV, and an investor in New York is planning around-the-clock rhythm and blues on television.

CHiPs Actor Has Trial Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "CHiPs" co-star Thomas Reilly has pleaded innocent to three misdemeanor charges stemming from his arrest last month while driving near downtown Los Angeles.

Attorney David Leland King, appearing Wednesday on Reilly's behalf before Municipal Court Commissioner John Goddard, entered innocent pleas to charges of driving under the influence of a drug, driving without a valid California driver's license and possession of a controlled substance.

Misdemeanor defendants are not required to appear at court proceedings in California.

Goddard set a Feb. 9 trial date for the 23-year-old actor, who plays California Highway Patrol Officer Bobby "Hot Dog" Nelson on the popular NBC TV series.

DOCUMENTARIES

LONDON (AP) — British television is screening three documentaries showing previously unseen footage of movie star Charlie Chaplin, including out-takes, abandoned projects, rushes and rehearsals.

Listeners Will Vote On Radio Station's Music

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The last "easy listening" radio station in Syracuse is giving listeners a vote on whether to keep the soothing string music or switch to rock 'n' roll.

Dennis Israel, president of station WEZG FM-AM, proposed the two-week balloting in order to "give the people what they want."

"We are putting the vote to the people," Israel said. "We're always talking about the airwaves belonging to the people. Yet when programming decisions are made, how many times do we ask the public what they want? The answer is, not very often."

The campaign, which started Tuesday evening, includes radio announcements asking people to call in and cast their votes, newspaper ads with ballots to clip and mail, and spots on the three local television stations.

"It's one of my crazy ideas," said Israel, who teaches a television and film course part-time at New York University.

The usual way of soliciting public opinion on a format change is to hire a company to poll a few hundred households, Israel said.

"I don't think that's really fair," he said. "We hope to get responses in the tens of thousands. You just can't get that through statistical research."

The idea of a format change at WEZG, which has offered "beautiful music" for 11 years, came up a week ago when the top radio station in Syracuse — WSYR-FM — announced a switch from album rock to an "adult contemporary" format.

Israel said a change to album rock, which appeals to teenagers and people in their early 20's, could bring his station up from its place as number five in the 13-station marketplace.

The cost of such a change would be "well into six figures," Israel said. The station's operations would undergo "an almost 100 percent change," he said, and staff would increase from 14 to between 25 and 30.

If the station sticks with its present format, "I don't see us ever being number one or two," Israel said.

"But if the people come out and say 'Don't change,' yes, we would stay."

New Daughter For Chevy Chase

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Chevy Chase and his wife, Jayni, are the parents of a newborn daughter, Cydney Cathlene.

The 7-pound, 7-ounce baby was born at 8:35 a.m. Tuesday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, Heidi Schaffer of PMK Public Relations said.

Chase and his wife met during the 1981 filming of "Under the Rainbow," where she was a production assistant. They were married early last year and this is their first child.

Chase, 39, who rose to stardom on the "Saturday Night Live" television series, has starred in the movies "Foul Play" and "Seems Like Old Times."

Dale Evans

Has Eye Surgery

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Former cowboy movie star Dale Evans has been released from a hospital where she had cataract surgery.

Miss Evans, 70, who is married to her cinema sidekick, Roy Rogers, was admitted Monday to Western Medical Center and had the operation Tuesday, said her secretary, Francie Williams. She was released Wednesday.

Rogers, also 70, had been out of town on business and planned to return to Southern California on Wednesday to meet his wife, said his secretary.

Rogers and Miss Evans made 35 films together and co-starred — along with Trigger the horse, Bullet the dog and Nellie Bell the jeep — in the "Roy Rogers" cowboy series that ran on television for 12½ years.

Name Prexy For CNN

ATLANTA (AP) — Burt Reinhardt, who had been named president of Cable News Network, Turner Broadcasting System Inc. Chairman Ted Turner announced Wednesday.

Reinhardt, who had been CNN's executive vice president, succeeds Reese Schonfeld, who resigned from the news organization, which is owned by Turner Broadcasting.

"Burt's career in the news business is a long and very distinguished one, and the job he's done for us has been tremendous," Turner said in a statement. "We're lucky to have him."

Reinhardt began his career as a World War II combat photographer and later became managing editor of Fox Movietone News.

As executive vice president of UPI Television News, he supervised the establishment of the agency's worldwide television operations. Before joining CNN, he served as executive vice president of the non-theatrical and educational division of Paramount Pictures.

Pavarotti In Big Benefit

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Opera tenor Luciano Pavarotti joked his way into Oklahoma with praise for its ladies and a ribbing for the women in his own life.

Pavarotti, arriving here Wednesday for a benefit concert Friday night, told fans and reporters who greeted him at the airport that he was most impressed with the beautiful women he saw.

The 37-year-old singer also said he developed his own powerful voice because he had to speak loudly during a life surrounded by women — first his mother and aunts and later his wife and three daughters.

Pavarotti, who played an opera singer in the 1982 movie "Yes, Giorgio," said: "I am an opera singer. I will always be an opera singer. I'm trying to give back what the world of opera has given me ... I want to use everything God has given me like a gift."

The Silent Epidemic: Brain Injuries

By JOHN C. GUSTAVSEN
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A young man's severe brain injuries left him partially paralyzed, blind, speechless and unable to function without constant supervision.

Another man appeared normal but can no longer withstand the rigors of academic life and has abandoned a career as a college professor.

Both suffer from the effects of traumatic brain injury, a "silent epidemic" that experts say may afflict more people than the total number of victims of cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis and spinal cord injury combined.

Nationally, 500,000 people survive severe traumatic brain injury each year. Between 30,000 and 50,000 never return to normal life, according to the National Institutes of Health.

Most TBI victims are male, between the ages of 15 and 30, says the Traumatic Brain Injury Support Group, Inc., a private, non-profit organization, based in Norwich. Sixty percent are injured in motor vehicle crashes and another 14 percent are hurt in falls or sports. The rest are victims of assaults, gunshot wounds, swimming and bicycle accidents, and child abuse.

Their injuries range from a bump on the head to severe blows.

For many, like the former college professor who bears no outward sign of injury, life is filled with misunderstanding, frustration and withdrawal.

"I have a young woman who was a respiratory therapist and now she is unemployed because she's so fatigued she can no longer work a full day," said Jean Harkens, director of the Traumatic Brain Injury Support Group.

Often TBI victims are misdiagnosed as mentally retarded, she said. They usually cannot hold a job because employers cannot cope with their special needs for repeated and explicit instructions.

Because of their dependence they place financial and emotional burdens on their families. "People who formerly lived in a better way, they must now accept doles in order to get by," Ms. Harkens said.

The injuries frequently result in a rebounding of the brain within the skull, leading to damage far from the initial injury location.

Since specific areas of the brain control various intellectual and physical functions, each injury usually produces a unique set of problems. They can include temporary or permanent disability in concentration, memory, learning, abstract thinking, social adjustment, oral and written communication and physical coordination.

Because of the complexity of brain injury, complicated and individualized rehabilitation programs are needed. But until recently, treatment consisted mainly of neurosurgery and convalescence.

"Many ... hospitals have established separate head injury units in recognition of the fact that very special therapeutic approaches are required," said Dr. Martin L. Spivack, president of the National Brain Injury Foundation based in Framingham, Mass.

"Even in these units, however, there are rarely personnel trained to treat the cognitive and behavioral" problems that arise in the patients, he said.

Still, the medical profession is convinced that the condition of the traumatic brain injured can be improved, although treatment and rehabilitation require long periods of time and can be difficult to ascertain.

In Connecticut, Gov. William O'Neill has appointed a task force to study existing services, possible alternative programs, and the need for financial and other forms of assistance to families of victims.

This Traumatic Brain Injury Task Force — composed of medical experts, representatives of seven state agencies, private groups and relatives of TBI sufferers — "will have to focus its work on the need for acute care when injury ... first strikes, as well as short-term and longer-term rehabilitation," the governor said.

Barbara Del Buono of Waterbury was among the speakers at a recent task force hearing in Stamford. Her 31-year-old son suffered serious brain damage when he was assaulted five years ago. He was in a coma for eight months.

Although Del Buono was left blind, unable to speak and paralyzed on his right side, he has learned to communicate through a specially designed, one-handed sign language consisting of 150 gestures.

"He is fully conscious and alert. He understands everything that you say to him," said Mrs. Del Buono, a member of the governor's task force and a director of the Traumatic Brain Injury Support Group.

"There is a life there," she added. "He doesn't have to change, walk, see to have real value."

Dr. Clair Callan, medical director of the state Department of Income Maintenance, said only two hospitals in the state — Gaylord Hospital in Wallingford and New Britain Memorial Hospital — can rehabilitate TBI victims. Only at the New Britain facility is anything beyond short-term care available.

TBI victims need three years to five years of intensive rehabilitation.

The Department of Income Maintenance — Connecticut's welfare department — has paid an average of $45 a day for Del Buono's care in the five years since his injury. However, Mrs. Del Buono says the amount is inadequate, not enough to pay for the specialized therapy her son and other TBI victims need.

Ms. Callan says one of the task force's important goals will be to help prevent traumatic brain injury. Education about brain injury and its incidence among drunk-driving accident victims and motorcyclists who don't wear helmets could help reduce its occurrence, she said.

"I think we're really beginning to see what the needs are," Ms. Callan added.

Poses Trucking Shutdown Call

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of an independent truckers group says it might call for a trucking shutdown if President Reagan signs a bill, passed by Congress, that would increase truck taxes.

Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, said if the tax goes through, "I think the truckers will be so frustrated we will be forced to endorse a shutdown."

Parkhurst said he hoped to visit the White House and added, "I hope we can persuade the president not to sign it."

Yesterday's Cryptquip -- ALARM IN DELI COUNTER HELPED POLICE GRAB THE HAMBURGLER.

Today's Cryptquip clue: B equals P.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

N. C. Water Table Is Now Replenished

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Increased rainfall in most parts of North Carolina in 1982 has replenished water tables that had shrunk to critically low levels in 1981, officials say.

"Overall, the water supply across the state is in the most favorable position it has been in many months," says Hugh B. Wilder, assistant district chief of the U.S. Hydrological Survey.

Rainfall rates at National Weather Service stations across the state, with the exception of Charlotte, were uniformly above normal.

Wilder said surveys taken in December, a particularly rainy month in most areas, showed that water tables were 1.5 feet to 3 feet above normal in most areas.

Those water tables were a full 3 feet to 6 feet higher than in December 1981, when experts began saying that a real problem existed in the water table levels following an extended drought in 1981.

Conditions were so bad in Christmas 1981 that winter sportsmen near the mountain town of Canton were skiing while town residents were catching water in buckets to wash their cars.

Polk and Rutherford counties were granted emergency drought loans for their crops. Chapel Hill's groundwater as 2.5 feet below normal, while Elizabeth City's was 2.15 feet below normal.

Those statistics could have been devastating, since each foot of water represents between 50 million and 100 million gallons of water per square mile of stored groundwater.

But the drought began to end by last summer, when rainfall amounts reached record levels in some areas.

In stark contrast to December 1981, stream flows for December averaged from 125 percent to 150 percent above normal, Wilder said. Water tables in some low-lying coastal areas even rose above land surfaces, causing other problems.

And the extra rainfall proved to be welcome relief for the most of the state's crops.

Dear Charlie:
Well, Biarritz is over and I am back home. I did not do as well as I had hoped, but as someone said before me: "I shall return."

My partner, Paul Chemia has a complaint. He claims that, despite the fact that I co-author a bridge column, no one ever writes about him. Now we both know that that is a vile canard—as a matter of fact, I sent you one of our hands a few weeks ago. But Paul did produce one of the best defended hands of the tournament, in a match between his team and Poland.

After Paul opened the bidding with one club, the Poles reached an aggressive contract of three no trump. The only point of interest in the auction was South's one no trump response to his partner's takeout double. Since that showed reasonable values, North had no qualms about inviting game. Paul led a heart. Declarer won in hand, led a diamond to the ace and a diamond back to the jack. Paul won the king and, quick as a flash, shifted to the jack of spades. That card assured the contract's defeat, because it removed any possibility of an end play. Had declarer ducked, Paul would have abandoned spades and shifted to clubs, and declarer would have lost two tricks in each black suit and the king of diamonds.

But winning the king proved to be no better. Declarer had only eight tricks. As soon as the defenders gained the lead, they could take three spade tricks and the ace of clubs to go with the king of diamonds.

Remind me to send a clipping of this to Paul.

Best regards,
Omar

FOCUS

On the Campaign Trail

Why is this man so happy? For one thing, today is his 55th birthday. And, for another, Walter "Fritz" Mondale is considered by many to be the front-runner for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination. Mondale's political experience goes back to 1948 when, at the age of 20, he managed Hubert Humphrey's successful campaign for the U.S. Senate. At 38, Mondale became a Senator himself when Governor Orville Freeman named him to fill the vacancy when Humphrey became Vice President under Lyndon Johnson. Minnesota elected Mondale to the Senate for two more terms before he followed in the footsteps of Hubert Humphrey once again to become Vice President under Jimmy Carter.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the last President who had been an elected vice president?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — "Trivium" refers to the three arts of language: grammar, logic, and rhetoric.
