Budgetary Headache Seen By Legislators

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

When the General Assembly begins its 1983 session in Raleigh Wednesday the biggest problem facing lawmakers will be the preparation of a budget for the coming biennium, Pitt County's three legislators said today.

"I would say of the seven sessions I have been in Raleigh, this will be the most difficult one," Rep. Sam Bundy said, "brought on by the fact of the budget."

"The budget is always the most important thing the General Assembly has to consider, and with the economy such as it is, we're just not going to be able to much more than we're now doing."

He pointed out that the base budget this fiscal year, which ends June 30, was based on an 8.9 percent increase in revenue over the previous year. "It's only 5 percent now," Bundy said, "... 3.9 percent under, and the governor has cut all agencies down 6 percent, so they are spending only 94 percent of actual appropriations," to bring the budget into balance.

"It's going to be a very rough session from the standpoint of lack of money," Sen. Vernon White commented. "I'm just hoping we can hold the line without eliminating job positions. I'm sure there will be some new programs offered, but I don't see where the money will come from, unless we cut out other programs. I'm sure there will be some new programs offered," but "we'll be lucky to maintain those in force at the present time."

Rep. Ed Warren also sees the budget as "the biggest problem ... bringing it into balance," and "preparing one we can live with for the next two years."

According to Warren, "we have a $120 million shortfall right now. We have to make up that deficit and plan the next budget."

Both Bundy and Warren see efforts being made to lift the freeze on salaries for teachers and state employees.

Warren termed the effort a "priority," while Bundy said a "determined effort will be made to remove the freeze ... on increment and merit pay." He noted that the Advisory Budget Commission has made "no recommendation for any across the board increase."

White took a somewhat different stance. "There's no way to increase salaries, unless there is an upturn in revenue. At the present time, we're having more of a shortfall each month."

"I would like to see them increased, but I don't know where the money would come from."

All three legislators said they don't foresee any increase in taxes — either for the general fund or for highways.

But they agree that there is a need to match federal aid highway money for new construction.

"We just have to do that in some form ... take a hard look at it and whatever has to be done, bite the bullet and do it," White said.

"I don't plan to vote for any tax increase," for the general budget or highways, Warren said. "I hope we can work out those funds in another way."

Highway money will "just have to be worked out the best way we can," according to Bundy.

Warren sees "a lot of debate" on the question of an optional sales tax increase, and in additional taxes on alcohol, but their passage is "questionable." "They passed the House last year and did not pass the senate."

Other big issues, according to both Bundy and Warren, are proposed increases in the minimum drinking age, and in penalties for driving under the influence.

"I think the DUI recommendations will pass," Warren said.

Bundy said while there will be "determined opposition by special interests ... my general opinion is we'll raise the penalty for DUI, and the drinking age, from 18. I can't say, 19 or 20 ... at least 19 and it may go higher, depending on which age the Governor pushes."

According to Bundy, "all in all, it's going to be a very difficult session. I'll be most glad when it's over."

MacDonald Murder Conviction Stands

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact former Green Berets Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald's conviction for the 1970 murders of his pregnant wife and two young daughters.

The court, without comment, rejected arguments that the federal jury which convicted MacDonald should have heard more testimony from a woman who claimed she may have seen drug-crazed hippies commit the slayings.

MacDonald, whose 13-year legal odyssey represents one of the most publicized criminal prosecutions in recent U.S. history, has been imprisoned since last March, when the Supreme Court reinstated his conviction by a 6-3 vote.

Today's brief order marked the fourth time the nation's highest court has acted on MacDonald's case. It may mark an end to the legal struggle to clear his name.

MacDonald steadfastly has contended that his family was bludgeoned to death at its Fort Bragg, N.C., home by drug-crazed intruders who chanted "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs."

MacDonald, now 39, was a captain in the Army Medical Corps and was assigned to the Green Berets, the special forces unit, when Fort Bragg military police rushed to his home Feb. 17, 1970.

They found the bloodied bodies of the doctor's 24-year-old wife, Colette, and the couple's two children, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2. MacDonald himself had suffered numerous knife wounds.

The doctor's account of the nighttime invasion quickly fell under suspicion. He was arrested by military police and charged with murder, but late in 1970 the charges were dropped as "not true."

Federal prosecutors then picked up the case, and MacDonald was indicted by a federal grand jury in 1975.

A federal appeals court dismissed the charges after ruling that MacDonald had been denied a speedy trial, but the Supreme Court in 1978 ruled that such a decision could not be made before an actual trial.

MacDonald then stood trial, and in August 1979 was convicted and sentenced to life in prison.

After the Supreme Court in 1979 turned away arguments that his prosecution should have been barred by the protection against double jeopardy, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals again overturned MacDonald's conviction on the speedy-trial issue.

Last March 31, the Supreme Court reversed the appeals court ruling and reinstated the conviction.

MacDonald, who had been working as director of emergency medicine for the St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., was taken into custody by FBI agents that same day. He has been imprisoned since.

MacDonald's latest appeal, which sought a new trial, centered on a key witness at his trial, admitted drug use and onetime police informer Helen Stoeckley.

She had told several persons she witnessed the murders by a satanic cult that broke into the MacDonald home.

But because Ms. Stoeckley had recanted and altered much of her story, the federal judge presiding at MacDonald's trial sharply limited her testimony before the jury.

The 4th Circuit Court upheld that exclusion of testimony in upholding MacDonald's conviction last Aug. 16. MacDonald's lawyers, in appealing to the Supreme Court, argued that the trial judge had violated federal rules of evidence.

Prison Hostages Said Safe At Ossining

OSSINING, N.Y. (AP) —

Corrections officials and inmate negotiators faced each other through steel bars today in talks aimed at freeing 17 guards held hostage after a "spontaneous" uprising at the maximum-security prison once known as Sing Sing.

Face-to-face talks between five inmates and the members of a special hostage negotiation team began about 7:30 p.m. Sunday, nearly 24 hours after convicts armed with broom handles and night sticks took over the Cell Block B at the state's Ossining Correctional Facility.

All the hostages were reported safe, the rest of the prison was calm and there was only one minor injury, officials said.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, who had set up what an aide described as a "command post" at his New York City office 30 miles away, said today the inmates submitted "a list of requests" which he did not detail.

"We will make no decision or response to any of these requests until the hostages are released," he said.

The governor's statement was read by a spokesman, Peter Johnson, who said there would be no elaboration on the number or nature of the inmate requests. The prisoners' demands have never been made clear.

"We believe the hostages have not been harmed," Cuomo said. "Last night the inmates agreed to allow them to be fed."

Negotiators did their bargaining over tables separated by a barred gateway in a narrow prison corridor. The state's team, established three years ago and not tested until now, was trying to persuade convicts to free the guards taken prisoner Saturday night.

An ABC television crew also was allowed in the cellblock for a time late Sunday night in response to the inmates' demands.

State Sen. Ralph Marino said overcrowding "is one of the big gripes. They are just very uncomfortable in there." The prisoners also were asking for amnesty, he said.

"Most of the inmates locked in there really don't want any part of this," Marino said. "Eighty percent want the hostages released immediately and (inmates) returned to their cells."

State corrections spokesman Lou Ganim said one reason for the unrest was prisoner "idleness." He said inmates held in that cellblock were awaiting transfer to other facilities and "don't have a lot of activities."

Officials originally reported that 16 guards were taken hostage, with one of them later freed. But early today, a state spokesman said that two other missing guards were also hostages.

"Two guards were missing and believed to be in hiding in the cellblock," said spokesman Peter Johnson. "We did not include them in the direct number count at the time in the interest of their safety."

Round-Up

MOSCOW (AP) — Police and Communist Party officials have started raiding bars, barber shops, restaurants and stores, searching for people who slip away from their jobs during working hours, Soviet sources say.

The raids apparently are part of new party chief Yuri V. Andropov's campaign to strengthen the ailing Soviet economy by improving worker productivity.

State newspapers acknowledge the high absenteeism. But they say one reason for it is that workers are forced to go shopping during office hours if they want to obtain necessary but scarce consumer goods and services.

One Soviet source reported seeing a squad of uniformed police enter a beer bar near his apartment recently and demand the documents of all the patrons.

Consumption Of Gasoline Drops

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 1.5 percent drop in gasoline consumption in the United States last year helped drive down prices at the pump by an average 11.37 cents a gallon, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg says.

"But the wholesale price dropped by 13.54 cents, so the dealers and operators at the pumps gained more than two cents a gallon," Lundberg said Sunday in releasing his survey of gas prices at 18,000 stations in 50 states.

"It is not a price war," he said. "That's when you have a dealer giving away his shirt. What looks like a retail price war is actually a refinery price war."

Retail dealers, facing tremendous pressure as consumption continues to fall, cannot afford to pass on all their savings to consumers, Lundberg said.

Gas consumption has declined from more than 115 billion gallons in 1978 to less than 101 billion gallons last year, with a 1.5 percent drop from 1981 levels occurring last year, he said.

The average cost of a gallon of gas, weighted for all four grades, was between $1.20 and $1.21 on Jan. 7, down nearly two cents since the last survey Dec. 17. Lundberg said prices fell in each of the 75 cities he checked.

CHOCOWINITY — A Sunday morning fire that destroyed a building containing two businesses in Chocowinity township also knocked out telephone service to approximately 500 customers, officials reported.

Chocowinity fire chief George Fleming said the metal building, located a half mile south of Washington on U.S. 17, housed East Coast Marine Fiberglass Repair Inc. and Wholesale Batteries, Tires & Parts Co.

Officials estimated damages of some $108,000 to the building and equipment. The structure, owned by Charles Gaskins, was valued at $56,000. Gaskins Marina and the Country Store, adjoining businesses were saved, officials said.

Fleming told the Associated Press that the State Bureau of Investigation has been called in to investigate the fire, which was reported around 7:20 a.m. There were no injuries, he said.

"We had some things that didn't look just right," Fleming told the AP. "It looked like someone may have been there."

L.S. Blades III, New Bern division commercial supervisor for Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co., said today the customers who were without service following the fire were generally in the Chocowinity area. He said the fire burned a 400-pair cable, a 100-pair cable, and two 50-pair cables, located a just behind the metal facility.

Blades, who said no toll cables were affected since they are underground, reported that several repair crews and cable splicers worked through the night and as of 8 a.m. today, approximately 65 customers remained without service. He said it was expected that service would be restored for everyone by noon today.

"We will be working on this section, to get it back as it should be, for some time," Blades said, adding that service should not be affected. He said it is difficult to place a dollar figure on the amount of CT&T's loss as a result of the fire.

WITN radio in Washington told the AP that telephone service was interrupted to southern Beaufort County and along parts of U.S. 17. Radio station WEEW in Washington was cut off the air as a result of the fire, WITN reported.

Trooper Height Rule Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to let North Carolina limit its State Highway Patrol to troopers taller than 5-feet-6.

The justices, without comment, left intact rulings that the state's now-invalidated policy illegally discriminated against women.

U.S. District Judge Robert Merhige struck down the law after noting that, according to national statistics, the minimum-height requirement eliminated 77 percent of all women and only 9 percent of all men.

He ruled that North Carolina officials had failed to show any relationship between a person's height and job performance as a state trooper.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Judge Merhige's ruling last May 19, agreeing that the requirement violated federal law banning sex discrimination in employment.

Other federal courts throughout the nation have issued similar rulings in height-requirement cases.

The federal government sued North Carolina in 1975, charging that its State Highway Patrol discriminated against women and blacks.

All aspects of the lawsuit except the height requirement were resolved in a 1980 settlement.

The Reagan administration urged the justices to reject Edmisten's appeal.

Nursery School Applications

The Lutheran Church Nursery School will start accepting applications for enrollment for the 1983-84 school term Wednesday. The school is designed to provide learning enrichment for children between the ages of three and five years.

The three year old class is held Tuesdays and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon. The four year old class meets from 9 a.m. to noon Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

According to Mary Muzzarelli, program director, interested persons may visit the school on school days between 9-10 a.m. beginning Wednesday. For further information call 756-2058 between 9 o'clock and noon weekdays and 758-5621 after 1 p.m.

The school is located at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, 1801 S. Elm St.

Attorney On Safety Commission

Kenneth E. Haigler of Greenville has been named to the Governor's Commission on Highway Safety, the Governor's office announced today.

Haigler is a partner in the law firm of Taft, Taft, and Haigler, and is a member of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers.

The 15-member commission advises the governor on all matters related to highway safety, such as the establishment of statewide safety goals and the review and support of proposed highway safety legislation.

Kenneth Dews On State Board

Kenneth K. Dews of Winterville has been reappointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to the State Goals and Policy board, the governor's office announced today.

A farmer, and chairman of the board of Home Federal Savings and Loan Association, Dews' will serve on the goals and policy board until March 31, 1986.

The 15-member board draws up goals to meet the needs of the citizens of North Carolina and sets a timetable for achieving them.

Program To Operate On Holidays

The Greenville City Schools After School Care Program, conducted at the Third Street and Elmhurst Elementary Schools, will operate on the upcoming student holidays/teacher workdays Jan. 20-21.

The program will operate from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Parents of students who are currently enrolled in the After-School Care Program will have first choice in attendance. Parents of students not enrolled in the program who need this service are asked to call either the Third Street or Elmhurst School immediately as additional students will be considered on a first come first serve basis.

The cost per day is $8. Transportation will not be provided by the school system and students should bring a bag lunch.

For further information concerning the After School Care Program call Carolyn Ferebee, Community Schools Director, Greenville City Schools, 752-4192.

Break-In Arrest Is Made

Greenville police arrested Robert Douglas Perkins of 515 West Fifth St. on breaking, entering and larceny charges before dawn Saturday after finding him hiding in the Paddock Club at 1008B Dickinson Ave.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers, responding to a 6:10 a.m. alarm, found a side door to the club had been forced open and a pinball machine inside the building had been broken into.

A search of the club, the chief said, resulted in officers finding Perkins hiding behind a door.

Cannon said $48.75 in quarters was recovered from Perkins, along with two large screwdrivers and a prybar.

Perkins was placed under $10,000 bond pending a hearing of the case in court.

Car Stolen From Parking Lot

Greenville police today are continuing their investigation of the theft of a car from The Daily Reflector parking lot on Reade Circle, about 1:15 a.m. Sunday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the vehicle, belonging to Thomas Earl Dixon of Grimesland, was recovered before dawn today on Nash Street, near the Fourth Street intersection.

He said two tires, the battery and a tape deck had been removed from the vehicle.

Martin Board Talks Cutbacks

WILLIAMSTON — Discussion on a policy to follow in the event of inclement weather causing school days to be missed was the primary item on the agenda of the January meeting of the Martin County Board of Education.

The board made a decision to maintain its current policy that if one day is missed during a particular week, that day will be made up on the Saturday of the same week. If more than one single day during a week is missed, the board will then take action deemed most suitable to make up lost days.

The board granted four-year extensions (July 1, 1983 to July 1, 1987) to the contracts of Superintendents Eugene Rogers and Associate Superintendent Comer Griffin.

In a report to the board, Griffin said all elementary schools in the county, except Jamesville, which is already full accredited, will be undergoing the two-year procedure which hopefully will lead to full accreditation.

On the matter of how the possible shortfall in revenue might affect the local school system, it was noted that any cutback in available state funds would most likely result in cutbacks in personnel. This line of reasoning was termed almost inevitable since over 90 percent of state funding to local schools is for salaries.

Flood Of Blood For Rare Illness

HUDSON, Mass. (AP) — "Don't stop fighting," John Duckworth tells his hospitalized 3½-year-old son, John III, who is afflicted with a blood disease so rare that physicians call it the "John Duckworth Disease."

"Nope," young John told his Dad from his Children's Hospital bed Sunday.

The boy has seen his photo in newspapers and on television and is aware, said his father, a 25-year-old iron mill laborer, that hundreds of people have answered an appeal to supply him with blood.

"He's seen his bedroom on television," the elder Duckworth said. "He knows something is up."

Hudson teen-agers too young to give blood raised $190 during the weekend knocking door-to-door on his behalf, said Duckworth, and plans are underway to organize a benefit skating party Jan. 18.

Duckworth has said he spoke by telephone over the weekend with donors from Florida, Indiana, New York City and Atlanta.

"I think it's great that all the people are donating," he said. "They are not just helping my son, they are helping other kids who need a lot of blood."

The blood donated in the boy's name goes into banks available for all who need it, Duckworth explained, and his family gets credit for the amount.

In addition, members of the New England Patriots football team were planning to visit the youngster at the hospital, his father said.

"He told me he wants a football helmet," Duckworth said.

The youngster was listed in critical condition after brain surgery one week ago to remove a blood clot.

"He's got a long ways to go yet," said Duckworth. "He's doing better today than he was doing yesterday. He's still got a battle to fight. He'll win it."

John was born with a defect in which some of his own body cells attack his blood platelets, the cells that allow blood to clot. His antibodies also sometimes attack his white and red blood cells, making him susceptible to infection and causing bleeding.

"They call it the 'John Duckworth Disease' because they've never seen anything like it," said his father.

To survive the emergency operation the boy needs blood platelets, or blood-clotting agents, from as many as 50 pints of blood daily.

Hudson's Amvets and Jaycees, and Marlboro Hospital have organized blood drives, and the Hudson National Bank began a fund to

Martin Co. To Discuss Plans For Emergencies

WILLIAMSTON — Consideration of measures to deal with emergencies, disposal plans for property in the county home, doctor's office space, and a method of investigating county funds were among topics taken up by Martin County Commissioners at its January meeting.

After a discussion by Martin County Emergency Management Director Don Johnson and other officials, commissioners agreed to set up a meeting to discuss plans for any unexpected emergency situation or disaster in the county. Chairman John House voiced concern over the fact that although provisions exist for emergency situations, these are little known and would be difficult, if not impossible, to implement without further work.

One suggestion offered is a possible drill to permit various agencies to get some idea of the workability of current plans and what can be done to supplement and clarify existing measures, particularly in relation to accidents or dangerous chemical spills.

Office space for doctors was once more an item on the commission's agenda. Warren Goff, administrator of Martin General Hospital, told the board of an effort to get a ruling from the attorney general on whether or not county funds can be used to build doctor's offices. It was noted that doctors to occupy the proposed additional space would be consultants to the county's rescue squad, and that one would serve as medical examiner for the county.

The board has agreed to give the matter of additional doctor's space further study after receiving the opinion of the state attorney general.

Another hospital item discussed was that of a new roof for the hospital. Specifications are being drawn up with bids to be solicited in the near future. Goff also informed the board that the lawsuit on the original roof is now under appeal after a lower court ruled that the primary contractor was responsible.

Agreement was reached to set up a sale of excess property items in the Martin County Home building, currently in the process of being closed. All patients have been transferred to other facilities, and the building is now being cleaned up with all items of property be readied for inventory and sale.

Commissioners approved a motion to allow the county's administrative staff to invest county funds with the North Carolina Cash Management Trust if significant differences exist between rates offered by local financial institutions and the Trust.

Two Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $2,800 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Friday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 3:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard, involving cars driven by Julie Annett Swanson of Apex, and Martha Lynn Decker of Route 5, Laurinburg.

Police, who charged Ms. Swanson with failing to stop for a stop light, estimated damage at $800 to the Swanson car and $1,000 to the Decker vehicle.

An estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 3:16 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive.

Police identified the drivers of the cars as James Monroe Gaskins of Route 3, Chesterfield, S.C., and Moses Lee Smith of Route 2, Scotland Neck.

REQUEST APPROVED
Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of a request by the United Revival Prayer Center to conduct a door-to-door and merchant solicitation Jan. 1 through March 31 to raise money for the building fund.

defray John's medical expenses. Boston City Hospital received 150 pints of blood Friday and another 200 Saturday.

Wednesday, the blood-mobile will be in Hudson from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.

DID YOU KNOW...

WHO'S THE BOSS?

Equality of the sexes played little role in marriage until modern times. Throughout history, in fact, the bride was usually sold, captured or given away by her family, often to a groom she'd never met. Even - mantic marriage came more into vogue, symbols of male authority we on part of the marriage ritual.

For example, in Morocco it is customary for the groom to tap the bride on her head seven times with the flat edge of a sword.

As part of the old Croatian wedding ceremony, the bride would have her e-boxed by the groom.

In Russia, the bride had to pull off her groom's boots; he would then tap t-on the head with one of the bootlegs to show his mastery.

Sometimes, however, there were symbols that could be used to the bride's advantage. In Sweden, for example, it was considered significant if the bride sat in her bridal chair before the groom could sit in his.

A Russian bride could gain the upper hand if she could manage to pour brandy from her glass into the groom's before he could stop her.

MID-EAST DISCONTINUES ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS

The Pitt County Office of the Mid-East Regional Housing Authority has stopped taking applications for the Section 8 Existing Housing Assistance Payment Program.

Ms. Sylvia Barnhill, spokeswoman for the Housing Authority said the agency ceases taking application when the number of families on the waiting list reaches the number which can reasonably be expected to be issued certificates of participation within the next 12 months.

The Section 8 program assists low-income families in paying their rent.

The Pitt Office of MERHA is allocated 203 units for lease, and currently has 202 families receiving rental assistance.

An additional 30 units has been requested for the county.

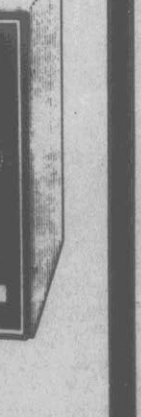

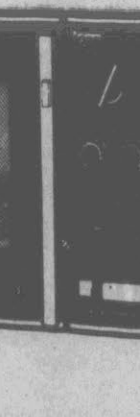

Another 15 certificate holders are presently awaiting entry into the program as soon as they find suitable housing.

A wild game cookery class will begin Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Auditorium, 1717 W. Fifth St. Rick Hamilton and Jim Kea will be instructors.

The class will cover field care of the animal, proper storage, handling and freezing of the catch, preparation of dove, venison and several mystery dishes. Wild game recipes will be distributed and participants are invited to share recipes with the class.

The class will be limited to 25 people and the fee will be $1.50 per person. Call 752-2934 to pre-register.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

An imaginative combination of multicolored nylon needlepoint yarn and easy-to-learn needlepoint stitches on plastic canvas create an eye-catching tote. It is one of Pat's "Learn-While-You-Stitch" series. Since the yarn itself shades from one color to another, no two bags will be exactly alike. Or, if you prefer a more elegant look, try it in solid white or pastels.

To obtain directions for making the Learn-a-Stitch Tote, send your request for Leaflet No. NP-1093 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. KN-1093 by sending a check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes the instruction leaflet, all materials and the shipping charges. The designer's choice of soft spring green and yellow multicolor yarn will be sent unless you specify one of the following: multi-oatmeal shades, multi-autumn shades, multi-spring shades of pale greens and yellows, or your choice of solid-color eggshell, burgundy, brown, lemon, light blue or moss green.

Can I challenge you today to learn a fascinating needlepoint stitch? With any needlepoint canvas and yarn you may have handy, try your hand at the waffle stitch, which is one of the main design elements of the tote bag shown today. If by any chance you do find it too difficult or don't care for it, there are alternate pattern stitches included on the leaflet.

But if you can work this stitch, it should encourage you to try any number of decorative stitches, many of them much simpler. In this—and in most pattern stitch charts—each square of the graph represents one hole in the canvas and each chart line represents a thread or rib of canvas.

To begin, run the end of your yarn through a few empty holes about 3 inches to the left of the point where you will begin your first waffle stitch.

Then bring your needle up in one hole. This will correspond to the "1" on the chart. Now cross over 7 canvas threads diagonally up and to the right and take the needle down in that hole that corresponds to the number "2" on the chart. The easiest way to do this accurately is to "walk" the needle tip straight up over 7 threads and then over 7 threads to the right. This two-step method is not necessary if you can accurately count threads in a straight diagonal line.

Now, go straight down 7 threads and bring your needle up in that hole ("3" on chart). This hole is easier to find because it is directly below "2" and directly to the right of "1," so counting is actually unnecessary. Your next step is to take the needle down at "4" (7 threads to the left of "2" and 7 threads above "1").

By now, I am sure that you see that you are simply following the sequence of the numbers, so I will take you through just a couple more steps. Notice that number "5" is one hole above "1." Bring your needle up through the hole above your starting stitch. Then take the needle down through hole "6," which is just to the left of "2"; then up in "7" and down in "8."

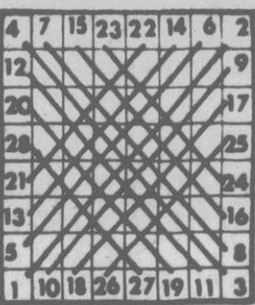

As you continue to follow the numbers on the chart, you will see this fascinating stitch take shape. There is one little refinement that takes place in the last step. It is not absolutely necessary but it does add to the perfect symmetry of the stitch. Bring the needle up in hole "27" as you have done in all other odd numbers. But before taking it down in "28," pass it under the strand of yarn running from "21" to "22."

You may find this stitch a little slow at first, as you will—it is you are like most beginners—find it necessary to consult the chart with each new step. With a little practice, though, you will find that the steps follow a very logical progression and you will be able to work the stitch with no chart at all.

The waffle stitch can be made in various sizes, over differing numbers of threads. The one illustrated and described here is a 7-thread waffle. The waffle is more often worked over 8 threads in each direction. The only rule is that there should always be the same number of horizontal and vertical threads covered.

You will notice that the yarn does not cover the center of the stitch on the back side of your work. It is therefore sometimes tricky to secure your yarn when starting or finishing with a strand of yarn. Whenever possible, I usually work a surrounding border of some other pattern stitch first and then use these stitches to secure the yarns.

MULTICOLORED...tote bag is on a plastic canvas, made with nylon needlepoint yarn

When I occasionally give teaching seminars, I like to start beginners with this stitch. It may seem like a backward approach, but I find that if the beginner can master this stitch, then almost all others seem like "duck soup" to them and they never again fear trying a new pattern stitch.

Reader Responds To Lefty Letter

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Right-Handed Mama," whose husband was forcing their naturally left-handed child into right-handedness because he believed "left-handed people are clumsy and stupid."

If they're clumsy, how would he like to have boxed heavyweight champion Gentleman Jim Corbett, played tennis with Jimmy Connors, baseball with Babe Ruth, Reggie Jackson, Sandy Koufax or Lou Gehrig, golf with Ben Hogan or basketball with Willis Reed?

As for being stupid, he is obviously no match for Alexander the Great, Clarence Darrow, Julius Caesar, Napoleon or Queen Victoria, not to mention American Presidents Truman, Ford, Garfield and Reagan.

As far as creativity, what about Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Pablo Picasso or Bach?

This is only a sampling. Oh, one last name to drop—can her husband match brains with Albert Einstein?

DEAR ABBY: I have this problem and really don't know whom to ask, so I'm turning to you.

I used to be what you would call a lesbian, but that is all in the past. I have never had a love affair with a male, but I have had a few affairs with females.

I have met this guy whom I really love, and we plan on getting married. He thinks he is marrying a virgin. I told him I was one, and I think I am, but now I wonder. Am I?

Another problem: Should I tell him about my past? We plan on getting married in June after I graduate from the University of Minnesota.

DEAR QUESTIONS: Technically you are a virgin. The Human Sexuality Program at the University of Minnesota offers expert counseling. Go there. You need to learn more about your own sexuality. Eye Bank at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Because of your column of Nov. 30, 1982, urging your readers to donate their organs after death, we received a pair of eyes the very next morning! Following a car accident in our state in which a young man was killed, his parents contacted us and donated their son's eyes. They said they would not have thought of it had it not been for your column.

Another mother told me after donating the eyes of her 23-year-old daughter: "Just think, part of our daughter is alive and well and seeing in Seattle!"

There is little one can do or say to comfort someone who has lost a loved one, but knowing that a part of him or her lives on helps to ease the pain of that loss. As a matter of fact, Abby, we hear more from families of donors thanking us for helping them make this special gift possible than we do from the people who have received corneal transplants!

People hear about donating organs, and they say, "Isn't that nice," but they never take the time to find out how to make the arrangements to carry it out. Thank you for spreading the word that all they have to do is pick up the phone and call any Lions Club. The club will do the rest.

Make Defense Cuts

The year 1983 begins with an increasingly independent 97th Congress in session. Its members are fresh from political campaigns or personal contact with the people at home, although, granted, they had precious little time there between the two sessions of Congress.

President Reagan is hearing from them and from his own economic advisors and the message is to find additional revenues or cut defense spending to avoid awesome deficits that could reach $300 billion by 1988.

So far the president seems adamant in not asking for new taxes or cutting the defense budget. The only proposals that have leaked out of the budget making process so far is to make further cuts in food stamps and other social programs.

Many Congressional leaders, however, feel social programs have been cut as far as is possible, and that any further cuts made won't make much of a dent in the deficits. Further reducing programs for the poor could even mean reduced federal revenues in the long run.

That leaves reversing some of the poorly conceived tax reductions already scheduled or selective increases in taxes. The final choice is some moderation of the huge defense spending increases proposed by the president. Reagan does not seem receptive to any of these; yet Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., describes the budget estimates for the next five years as "terrifying."

If the answer to this nightmare is not clear to the president it is to us. There should be reductions in the proposed defense spending. If that does not do it we will have to look at selective tax increases. The first priority in Washington now should be to bring revenues in line with government spending.

Pride In A Tar Heel

True Tar Heels always feel a sense of pride when anyone from our state makes good.

Thus the people of North Carolina should be pleased that Elizabeth Hanford Dole was chosen by President Reagan to be secretary of transportation. Mrs. Dole is a lawyer who attended Harvard University. She was born in Salisbury, N.C. and is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Duke University, where she was a political science major. She also did study at Oxford University in England.

While working in Washington she married Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas. While her husband has gained fame as a senator, Mrs. Dole has carved her own governmental career with a success that has led to a cabinet appointment.

Mrs. Dole seems a good choice to administer the department of transportation. We would feel that way even if she did not have North Carolina roots, but the fact that she does, makes it an exceptional appointment to those of us back home.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Quiet Assembly

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — In many of the forecasts concerning the 1983 legislative session which opens this week, legislators are predicting a quiet session. Relatively speaking, it will be. The redistricting puzzle which required the assembly to return to Raleigh for three extra sessions in 1981 and 1982 isn't scheduled to come up again for another eight years. The equal rights amendment is in congressional limbo. There's no 3-cent a gallon gasoline tax increase to be fought out. And Gov. Jim Hunt, who has presented large legislative packages in his three previous sessions, says his agenda this year is much shorter.

Some legislators have said that the budget is about all the assembly will spend much time on. That sentiment led one prominent senator to suggest that the assembly convene in January, as required by the state Constitution, but then adjourn until the spring when the budget picture becomes clearer. No need to hang around in Raleigh wasting time, nothing else to do.

But the lack of fractious issues doesn't mean a lack of important issues. The outcome of many proposals will have a direct bearing on the daily lives of North Carolinians.

The budget may be a maze of numbers to most of us but included in its formulation are decisions regarding the life or death of social and educational programs. As the legislature looks for budget cuts, social programs that help the needy, the elderly and the sick may be made. With education taking about three-fifths of the state's budget, educational programs are a prime target for trimming. For many teachers, the outcome of the salary freeze will determine whether or not they stay in teaching. That might mean whether or not your child gets an experienced teacher next year.

Much has already been made of Hunt's push for tougher drunk driving laws. It appears that a combination of a poor economy, statewide news about Hunt's proposals and nationwide interest in drunk driving have already taken some drinking drivers off the road. The new wave of concern about drunk driving is already affecting the way some of us entertain ourselves — maybe drinking less at parties, at the local bar or in restaurants. If the laws get tougher, no doubt more people will cut down on their away-from-home drinking.

No doubt, the General Assembly will be asked to change the state's credit card laws. Banks would like to be able to charge more interest for the use of that magic piece of plastic, or to charge you an annual fee for the card. The legislature can cost you money without raising your taxes.

The utilities got the amps beat out of them in the 1982 short legislative session. But this is a new season, and they'll be back. At the top of their hit list is Construction Work in Progress (CWIP). Last year, the legislature heard public discontent with the utilities and eliminated the automatic provisions of CWIP. That said all construction costs for capital projects went into the rate base immediately. Now the Utilities Commission is given

An Improbable Scenario

If there were a prize for the worst TV commercials, the Prudential Life Insurance Company has to be a contender. In the past, Prudential simply asked you to "buy a piece of the Rock" — the rock being the "Rock of Gibraltar," which has been a symbol for as long as I can remember of a very solid institution.

But lately, either because the Rock of Gibraltar isn't as strong as it used to be, or someone decided just owning a "piece of the Rock" wasn't selling enough life insurance policies, Prudential is using hard sell in its commercials by scaring the wits out of you.

They have two men dressed completely in white picking up people off the streets and taking them away on an escalator, presumably to heaven.

I probably wouldn't object if they took away people whose time had come, but the advertising people at Prudential have their two "agents" snatching people in the prime of their lives.

The other night I was watching one of the bowl games and during a time out, the two white-suited men picked a meter maid who was writing out a traffic ticket. She couldn't have been more than thirty, and seemed in the best of health.

One of the men, if I recall, had a clipboard and apparently the meter maid's name was on it. They gently escorted her away from the car, and in the next scene she was riding on the escalator above studio-made clouds; happy as a lark that her time had come.

The idea had obviously been stolen from the movie "Heaven Can Wait." I believe what I objected to most of all was that the meter maid did not protest when these two strangers came along and dragged her away. She seemed quite content riding on the escalator.

It was not only in bad taste, but smacked of false advertising. I have known many meter maids in my time, and I've yet to run into one of them who would be taken in by two wacky guys in white suits who told them to stop writing parking tickets and come with them. Meter maids have heard every story in the book.

The first thing the meter maid would say to the two guys is, "Is this your car?"

The men would deny it and then she would say, "Well then, don't bother me when I'm writing out a ticket."

"We're sorry, you have to come with us."

"In a pig's eye I'm coming with you. I have 12 more cars to ticket on this block."

"Your name is on the list and you have to go now."

"What list is that?"

FINDING AND LOSING OUR LIVES

A well-known figure whose career had been followed by many and who was flattered by multitudes once said, despairingly, "The great purpose of my life has been to get away from myself."

The greater part of this man's life had been spent in the course of fashionable dissipation. Absorbed in self-contemplation, standing out as the hero of many an hour and conspicuous for the abandon with which he sought pleasure for its own sake, he came at last to a tragic end — he became the pitiful object of his own hatred and scorn.

It is hard to endure the hatred of others, but worse to be engulfed in the realization that one has ignored the needs of others and has lived only for self-gratification and self-advancement.

The person who lives only for himself bows daily beneath the blows of a hard taskmaster. It is only when we lose our lives that we really find them. — Elisha Douglass

Oil Bank Still Behind 'Target'

By BILL CRIDER

Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) —

After a slow start, near starvation during the oil shortage following the Iranian revolution and efforts by President Reagan to slow the project, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve is beginning to fill up.

The storage holes in Louisiana and Texas held 291 million barrels of oil for emergency use at the end of 1982. A barrel, the common oilfield measure, is 42 gallons.

With the United States importing crude oil at the rate of 4.5 million barrels a day, the emergency pool could fill in for 65 days if all imports were cut off for some reason. It probably would last much longer, though, because of conservation measures.

Plans call for the reserve eventually to hold 750 million barrels of oil.

The latest hurdle for the project was Reagan's attempt to reduce the fill rate to 90,000 barrels a day from 220,000 barrels due to the cost involved. The project has cost about $12 billion so far, for the oil and to hollow out salt domes for storage space.

However, Congress voted last spring to set a minimum of 220,000 barrels a day and a maximum of 300,000.

Reagan then decreed that 300,000 barrels a day was not in the national interest, and the fill rate was held at the minimum.

"Congress mandated that we maintain a fill rate of 220,000 barrels a day and we are going to make it," says C. Curtis Johnson, a one-time physics professor who is project manager.

Although the reserve is beginning to fill up, the project is still far behind the original targets. First plans called for the reserve to have 500 million barrels by 1982 — enough to cover a six-month interruption in imports.

It turned out to be harder than it looked, and more expensive. The government estimated, for example, that the reserve would cost between $7.5 billion and $8 billion "to design, construct, fill and maintain through 1982."

Budget Will Pose Crisis

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — A becalmed Ronald Reagan is sitting on a draft budget that, if it to Congress unchanged, could emasculate him politically and transfer effective power to a Senate Republican cabal.

His own advisers are well aware that the proposed Fiscal Year 1984 budget's $35 billion in domestic spending cuts and $200 billion deficit would meet instant rejection on Capitol Hill. That would hand the initiative to the Republican "College of Cardinals" in the Senate, collaborating with the Democratic-controlled House. "I don't think it's going too far to say that will end the effectiveness of the Reagan presidency," a senior White House aide told us.

When Reagan returned from New Year's in Palm Springs to harsh reality in the Oval Office Jan. 3, House Republicans were waiting with attempted crisis-breakers. They urged him to regain the governmental initiative by substituting more buoyant numbers for the absurdly-pessimistic growth forecasts from his economic advisers and by proposing a blanket budget freeze. Although the president is personally responsive to such a strategy, he does not seem a forceful enough executive to push it through his staff's budget process.

Indeed, the 12-man budget sessions at the White House have been exercises in circular futility. Nearing the deadline for sending a budget to the printer, nothing has been decided under the four-headed White House system that founders when there is no consensus. In the new year's first week, the West Wing of the White House was drenched with melancholy not previously seen in the Reagan administration.

The only break in this gloom came late on the afternoon of Jan. 3 when House Republican leaders, augmented by conservative rank-and-file members, met with the president. Third-term representative Newt Gingrich of Georgia began by presenting his proposal to freeze all spending, domestic and defense. It is imperative, Gingrich told the president, that he take the offensive.

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York urged caution on freezes but pleaded with Reagan to revise the low-growth forecast by the president's chief economic adviser, Dr. Martin Feldstein — a forecast yielding massive budget deficits. Rep. Robert Walker of Pennsylvania proposed an amalgam of Gingrich's freeze and Kemp's growth.

Reagan seemed receptive. But Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, at his side, rejected any military spending freeze as ruinous for rearmament. That left the growth option. Reagan had interrupted Walker's presentation to say that he too was for growth, and the next morning for the first time challenged Feldstein's bleak official forecast of 2 percent growth in 1983. But nobody moved a pencil to brighten that forecast.

Consequently, the leaderless budgeteers drifted through the week with those two ominous numbers: $35 billion in domestic spending cuts sure to be rejected by both houses of Congress; $200 billion in deficit spending certain to be branded unacceptable by lawmakers of both parties.

That would enable the Senate Republican triumvirate called the College of Cardinals — Majority Leader Howard Baker, Finance Chairman Robert Dole and Budget Chairman Pete Domenici — to replay last summer's game. Once again, they will propose paper budget reductions by enacting massive tax increases

To the editor:

I wish to express my strong opposition to your editorials recently criticizing Senators Helms and East for their stand on the gas tax increase. I greatly admire their courage and they are right in resisting this new tax.

This tax will hit very hard in rural areas, and, of course, North Carolina is a rural state. North Carolina under this tax will not get a dollar back on a dollar invested. It will be substantially less than that. It is worth pointing out that one-fifth of this tax will be sent for use on mass transit. That means that only 80 percent is left for spending on the repair of bridges, roads, and highways. To put it simply, North Carolina does not fare well under this bill and agricultural areas will be subsidizing mass transit in large urban areas. East and Helms are right. This is not good legislation. To increase taxes in times of recession is never good economics.

What the working people of this country need are not more senators to vote high taxes. This country needs more senators like Helms and East who are willing to stand up and be counted and to say no when something is proposed that is not in the best interest of our state and our nation! I applaud them and I think a lot of other people in North Carolina do, too.

Other Editors Say Impractical Dream

(Mt. Airy News)

While many governmental officials seem to be putting forth an effort to get our economic house back in order — locally, statewide and nationally — we believe it would be poor timing to ask the N.C. General Assembly to double the salary for governor, as recently suggested.

The reasoning is simple: Where will the money come from? Administrative officials of Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., who have proposed asking the state legislature to do this in their 1983 session, therefore need to take a different look at the situation. They say they may request a pay raise of from $57,864 a year to $100,000 — not that much money, until one considers that state taxpayers would be footing the bill for the increase for years to come.

Hunt is not expected to consider the raise for himself, for obvious political reasons. His term as governor ends in 1984 and he is expected to make a bid for Jesse Helms' Senate seat. Any campaign of Hunt's would be hurt if the public thought he was instrumental in having his own salary increased while still in office.

The same administrative officials who think the governor is underpaid also have identified other state employees — specialists in various fields — who they do not think are paid in keeping with the job market. Teachers, another group of state employees, have also long been in pursuit of higher salaries.

And so the story goes.

It is only human nature for a majority of people to believe they should be making more than they are.

But there are some cold hard facts of life: one of the most basic is that you can't have more money going out than you have coming in.

We do not take issue with the notion that salary adjustments are in order. But again, where is the money to come from? The governor has clearly stated that he does not support layoffs to gain resources for salary increases. And since state revenues are below projections and since salary increases are a permanent expense, we wonder how salary adjustments can be accomplished.

Critics Rap Position On The Mentally Disabled

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's position on defending the rights of mentally disabled people in state institutions has been attacked as too narrow by a coalition of public interest, civil rights and professional groups.

The Mental Health Law Project organized the protest by the 22 groups. Its executive director, Norman S. Rosenberg, said Sunday that, for the first time in a 10-year-old case, the Justice Department will not be in court today in Alabama supporting plaintiffs who want to keep the state's mental health facilities under standards set by U.S. District Judge Frank Johnson in 1972.

The groups sent a letter to Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, critical of his guidelines for enforcing the Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act

Police Chief In Lock-Up

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Police Chief William Hegarty has been in his jail plenty of times, but after a night behind bars he says he likes the view from outside a lot better.

Hegarty had himself locked up for a one-night charity stunt — and he said that was plenty.

"The bed was made for someone with a frame of 4-foot-6," the 6-foot-plus chief complained. He also turned down an offer of the standard jail breakfast Sunday morning.

"I asked if I could pass" because it was more important he go home and get some sleep, he said.

Hegarty checked into the jailhouse at 10 p.m. Saturday and did paperwork until about 4 a.m. He stayed up drinking coffee until it was time to leave at 7 a.m.

Grand Rapids police had promised their boss would get no special treatment, made one concession, said Police Lt. Victor Gillis. "He did get a sheet on his bed. No one else gets one."

Hegarty's night in jail netted the King-Kennedy Day Care Center $3,700, said Thomas Appel, president of the center's board of directors.

Hegarty had volunteered to go to jail if enough people voted to put him in, but the catch was that each ballot cost a dollar. The proceeds were turned over to the day care center, which serves children of low-income parents in Grand Rapids.

of 1980. They asked to meet with him.

In an interview Sunday, Reynolds said he would "welcome a chance to meet with them, because there is understandable confusion here. My memo on the act, without the context of what we are doing, suggests a more limited activity than is actually taking place."

"This is one of our priorities," Reynolds said. "There are a lot of atrocious mental institutions out there. Everyone recognizes the desperate need for strong federal involvement to protect these people who cannot protect themselves."

The letter said Reynolds' June 24, 1982, memo took an "unreasonably restrictive" enforcement position, based on a misreading of the Supreme Court's 1982 ruling in the Youngberg case.

In that case, involving a man kept in shackles nearly two years, the court affirmed the constitutional right of confined mentally disabled persons to food, shelter, hygiene, medical attention, freedom from physical restraint and enough training to protect those rights themselves.

The groups noted that the court explicitly did not consider whether the Constitution conferred additional rights to education, training and psychiatric care.

But Reynolds' memo said Justice's investigations under the act should "be examining a state's 'treatment' of its institutionalized persons in terms of the Youngberg criterion that look to physical safety and freedom from unreasonable restraints, not to psychiatric care, psychological treatment, or individualized therapeutic efforts designed to enhance capacity, capability and competence."

Objecting to this language, the groups said, "There is nothing in the language of the Youngberg decision that justifies the department's abandonment of its statutory obligation to ensure that mentally retarded and other institutionalized persons receive minimally adequate care, treatment and training."

Rosenberg said Reynolds' memo "is a dramatic departure from 10 years of Justice Department policy. He is saying that the Youngberg decision sets a maximum level of treatment that should be sought."

Reynolds said, "I don't disagree there was a lot left unsaid in Youngberg. I do not believe the court rejected any rights it didn't address."

Reynolds responded, "My memo told our lawyers to go with Youngberg, but to be careful not to overreach, because sometimes you find courts cutting back more than they would have if you hadn't overreached."

Reynolds added, "We've been even more vigorous than our predecessors."

The department has gone to court on behalf of mentally ill or retarded patients in Connecticut, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio and the District of Columbia. It also has opened 33 investigations under the act, half involving the mentally disabled as opposed to prisoners or others covered by the act.

Rosenberg, however, criticized Reynolds' support for Alabama's effort to use other national standards for its mental facilities rather than those set by Judge Johnson.

Reynolds said he felt the federal government had to concentrate on enforcing standards in the Youngberg decision and other national standards. He said Johnson's rulings were also based on state codes and that states should enforce those.

Among other signers of the letter were the American Civil Liberties Union, American Orthopsychiatric Association, Association for Retarded Citizens of the United States, Children's Defense Fund, Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, National Education Association, National Association of Social Workers, and the National Mental Health Association.

list. It was made up by our advertising agency."

"You have to be joking. My policy is with Metropolitan Life. Now beat it before I give you both tickets for loitering around an expired parking meter."

"You have to come immediately. Our TV commercial goes on in a minute."

"I've heard some nutty stories in my time, but this takes the cake. Now buzz off before I dump sand on your pretty white suits."

"But you're dead. The person who didn't put two quarters in this meter is dead. And if he doesn't come back in 15 minutes I'm going to call the tow truck."

"You'll never get to heaven if you don't come with us now."

"Where are you weirdos parked?"

"Our escalator is over there."

"I might have known it. You're right in front of a fire hydrant. That will cost you each $25."

(on top of big defense cuts that are inevitable whatever else happens). Once again, the president would acquiesce in the fait accompli prepared by the cardinals, though this time there would be no remaining doubt about who runs the government.

Baker, Dole and Domenici are lionized by the permanent Washington governing class because they so resemble the conventional political wisdom that Reagan's election meant to replace. What is at stake, then, is not just another budget fight but perhaps a final chance for the president to cut through his own apathy and his staff's incompetence to save his revolution.

discretion on whether or not to grant those costs. The change meant a slower increase in your utility bill this year. But the utilities have spent the past six months lobbying and distributing campaign contributions, so don't be surprised if the anti-utilities momentum of 1982 disappears in 1983.

New proposals will come before the assembly to toughen collection procedures for fathers who fail to pay court-ordered child support, to write a statewide minimal housing code, to de-criminalize minor traffic offenses, to bolster science and math education in our schools and to improve the criminal justice system. There'll be plenty going on.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

SMOKING AND ORAL CANCER

You already know that smoking can be instrumental in the cause of bronchitis, lung cancer, emphysema and heart disease. But what does smoking have to do with oral health? It affects your whole mouth in many ways - none of which are beneficial.

By far, the most serious risk is the development of oral cancer. Smokers have a four times greater risk of oral cancer than nonsmokers.

Tobacco in any form can cause cancer of the mouth and throat. So don't think you can avoid cancer by switching from cigarettes to a pipe or cigars.

This year an estimated 24,000 people will be stricken by oral cancer. Within five years many of these people will be dead. Each year, approximately 8,000 people die from oral cancer. One of the reasons for this high death rate is that oral cancer victims do not recognize the need to see their dentist or physician until it becomes too late for treatment to be successful. Yet, ironically, mouth cancer is one of the few varieties that can be easily recognized by a visual diagnosis in its early stages.

Farm Scene

By ROGER COBB
Agricultural Extension Agent

A good 1983 tobacco crop will need to start with a good plant bed. Last year plant bed failures made it necessary for a few growers to import plants or go to their neighbors for plants. Both of these incidents can cause you to be late setting out or possibly bring in a disease that you did not have on your farm.

It is very important to grow good healthy plants on your own farm. A successful plant bed helps you to get off to a good start. Some of the common problems faced by growers in 1982 were fertilizer sals injury, inadequate ventilation and strong whipping winds that beat the tender plants to death. Some nutrient problems were also encountered.

Training Hearing Set

A public hearing will be held at 10:30 Wednesday morning in the Municipal Building on Third Floor on a proposal for requiring pre-service training for law enforcement officers.

The hearing is being held by the N.C. Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission.

Wade Barber, chairman, will preside. Barber is also district attorney for Orange and Chatham Counties.

Sen. White Is Again Chairman

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green plans to appoint Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, as chairman of the Senate Committee on the Economy when the North Carolina Legislature convenes Wednesday.

"Sen. Tison is an experienced and able legislator who will make an excellent chairman of this valuable committee," Green said Friday.

Tison, a vice president of North Carolina National Bank, was a representative from 1973 to 1982. He was elected to the Senate in November.

Green also said he would appoint Sen. Vernon E.

White, D-Pitt, as chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture. White held the post during the 1977, 1979 and 1981 sessions.

Green termed White "an excellent legislator whose commitment to and hard work on behalf of our No. 1 industry makes him the best man for this job."

Also Friday, Green announced that he was appointing Sen. Conrad R. Duncan Jr., D-Rockingham, and Sen. Marshall A. Rauch, D-Gaston, as co-chairmen of the Senate Committee on Finance.

Pele Says He May Wed Model

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Brazilian soccer hero Pele says he may marry 19-year-old Xuxa, one of his nation's top fashion models, "but not now."

"We have a very great friendship," he said in a television interview Sunday night. "And when this friendship gets to the point where I should marry her, I will."

Pele, 40, has retired from professional sports and spends most of his time in the United States making films and promoting soccer.

Investigation

Price Tag High

CHICAGO (AP) — The investigation of seven Chicago-area killings with cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules has cost federal, state and local agencies at least $3 million, officials say.

But they added that cost was no consideration in investigating the killings and protecting against other deaths.

Most of the problems can be overcome by following this plant bed recipe:

•Plan on seeding 80-100 square yards for each acre of tobacco to be transplanted.

•Prepare a good seed bed. A warm, well-drained site can be very important in getting and keeping a good stand.

•Apply no more than 50 pounds of 12-6-6 tobacco plant bed fertilizer per 100 square yards and incorporate into the top two-three inches of soil. Rates higher than this may cause fertilizer injury and reduce plant stands.

•Fumigate with methyl bromide when soil moisture is good and air temperature is 55 degrees Fahrenheit.

•Perforate plastic with one-quarter inch holes two inches apart. Additional holes are needed when temperature gets warmer.

•Seed 65 days before desired transplanting date using one-sixth to one-eighth ounce of seed per 100 square yards. Enide may be used to help control against weeds methyl bromide might not control.

•Protect against blue mold and damping-off. Ridomil may be used to control both of these diseases.

•Apply a layer of fumigated wheat or clean pine straw for cover support.

•Thoroughly irrigate the soil immediately after seeding and before covering with plastic.

•Cover bed with plastic after seeding.

•Check beds often.

•If air temperature reaches 75 degrees F. for two consecutive days, remove the plastic to avoid heat damage but replace it if the temperature is expected to drop below 45 degrees F. Generally temperatures under plastic should not be allowed to exceed 100 degrees F. until the plants reach the size of a quarter. If soil temperature is adequate, larger plants can tolerate slightly higher temperatures but should not be exposed to temperatures higher than 110-115 degrees F.

A series of horse management seminars will begin Wednesday at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office according to Miriam Nance, extension livestock agent for the county.

The seminars will meet on Wednesdays from 7:30-9 p.m. and are open to all ages.

This week's topic, said Ms. Nance, will be pasture management and the program will cover soil testing, fertilization, renovation and pasture type.

For further information contact Ms. Nance at 752-2934.

One-Year-Old Is Killed By Fire

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A house fire early Saturday killed a 1-year-old boy, Durham County and city officials reported.

Benjamin Andrew Puckett died after public safety officers and sheriff's deputies, fighting intense heat and smoke, carried the child out of his bedroom, said Durham public safety officer J.E.

Lynch.

The baby was pronounced dead on arrival at North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 91 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a final weighted average of 41.49 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights mostly desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,784,000, compared to 1,711,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, hesitating after a strong first week of 1983.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 29.53 points last week, dropped 1.38 to 1,074.69 by noontime.

Advancing issues held a 7-6 lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph dropped ½ to 64½; Sears Roebuck lost ½ to 29½, and International Business Machines was unchanged at 96½.

The NYSE's composite index rose .09 to 83.76. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.28 at 365.79.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 40 million shares at noontime, against 61.30 million at the same point Friday.

Palace Silent On Whereabouts

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana may be skiing today in Switzerland, but palace officials are keeping their exact whereabouts a secret.

The royal couple are vacationing without their 6-month-old son, Prince William.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace in England said only that the royal couple "are going on holiday" and "may well be skiing."

At Zurich's international airport, a spokesman confirmed that Charles and Diana arrived here Sunday aboard a twin-engine royal jet flown by the heir to the British throne.

British and Swiss newspapers had reported that the couple would be staying with former Olympic skier Charlie Palmer-Tompkinson, a friend with a five-room chalet at Klosters in the Swiss Alps, but the airport spokesman dismissed the reports as "speculation."

OSTOMY MEETING

The United Ostomy Association, Inc. Greenville Chapter will be meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Pitt County Mental Health Center here.

Jets, Chargers, Cowboys, Vikings Win Openers

Safety Blitz

By The Associated Press
The New York Jets fired their cannon, the San Diego Chargers attacked by air, the Dallas Cowboys struck from all fronts and the Minnesota Vikings refused to fold in the first weekend of play of the National Football League playoffs.

The NFL's revised and expanded 16-team playoff format, necessitated by the 57-day players' strike that wiped out seven weeks of the season, also produced a few surprises and guaranteed new finalists for Super Bowl XVII on Jan. 30.

The Jets, behind Freeman McNeil's record-breaking 211 rushing yards, crushed Cincinnati 44-17 Sunday afternoon, eliminating the defending American Conference champion Bengals from a return trip to the championship game. Last year's Super Bowl winners, the San Francisco 49ers, didn't reach the playoffs.

In Sunday's other playoff games, San Diego edged Pittsburgh 31-28 in the AFC and Dallas trimmed Tampa Bay 30-17 and Minnesota eliminated Atlanta 30-24 in the National Conference.

In Saturday's first-round matchups, the Los Angeles Raiders ousted Cleveland 27-10 and Miami eliminated New England 28-13 in the AFC and Washington blasted Detroit 30-7 and Green Bay whipped St. Louis 41-16 in the NFC.

Next weekend's games will have New York at Los Angeles and Minnesota at Washington on Saturday and San Diego at Miami and Green Bay at Dallas on Sunday.

One of the surprises was the fans, who nearly filled the stadiums after staying away from the games following the strike. In the playoffs, there were a total of 6,183 no-shows, an average of 773 per game, compared with an average of 8,169 in post-strike games.

Jets 44, Bengals 17
"When you've got a cannon, you're supposed to shoot it," New York Coach Walt Michaels said. "Today, he (McNeil) was our cannon."

McNeil, who also rushed and passed for two touchdowns, gave the Jets their first playoff victory since Joe Namath led New York to victory in Super Bowl III.

"I was blessed," McNeil said of his performance. "I was in the right time place at the right time."

New York, now 7-3, also got a playoff-record interception return from Darrol Ray. He sparked a three-touchdown outburst in the last period by picking off a Ken Anderson pass and streaking 98 yards for the touchdown. The Jets also got three field goals from Pat Leahy.

"We turned the ball over too many times; but I think the final blow was the interception that went for a touchdown," said Cincinnati Coach Forrest Gregg, whose club finished 7-3.

The Jets' Richard Todd completed 20 of 28 passes for 269 yards, which included eight receptions by Wesley Walker for a career-high 145 yards.

Anderson, who had two first-quarter touchdown passes to stake the Bengals to a 14-3 lead, finished with 26 completions in 35 attempts for 354 yards.

Chargers 31, Steelers 28
Dan Fouts' third touchdown toss didn't come a minute too late in leading San Diego over Pittsburgh. He hit Kellen Winslow on a 12-yard flare pass with one minute to play to rally the Chargers.

"I watched him before on TV," said Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw of Fouts. "I just watched him go up and down the field. I saw them do it on TV, then I saw them do it to us today."

Fouts, who completed 27 of 42 passes for 333 yards, also hit reserve tight end Eric Sievers on a 10-yard strike and Winslow with an 8-yarder to overshadow Bradshaw's 28 of 39 for 325 yards.

Chuck Muncie rushed for 126 yards as San Diego improved its record to 7-3. The Steelers finished 6-4.

Cowboys 30, Buccaneers 17
Danny White overcame physical ailments — an in-fectured tooth and swollen thumb — to lead Dallas over Tampa Bay. He completed 27 of 45 passes for 312 yards and two touchdowns.

"I think White did great considering his thumb was hurt," said Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson. "It's a good thing you don't pass with your teeth."

Rookie reserve safety Monty Hunter returned an interception 19 yards to give the Cowboys the go-ahead touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Tampa Bay quarterback Doug Williams completed only eight of 28 passes for 113 yards as the Bucs finished 5-5.

"I'm delighted to be playing my friend Bart Starr," Dallas coach Tom Landry said. "They are well coached."

Asked why he thought the normally blasé Cowboy fans were so enthusiastic, Dorsett said, "There were 20,000 tickets left on Thursday. Maybe we got some of the real fans this time — some of those who can't get season tickets."

Williams, who had a 49-yard scoring pass to Gordon Jones, also had three interceptions and completed only eight of 28 passes for 113 yards.

"I didn't have the mobility I usually have," said Williams.

Vikings 30, Falcons 24
Trailing 24-23 with 6:45 to go, Minnesota drove 72 yards with Ted Brown following a Rickey Young block to go in from the 5 with 1:44 left for the winning points.

"Rickey made a dynamic block," said Brown, who rushed for 82 yards despite being knocked out of the game in the first half with a shoulder injury.

"You have to distinguish pain from injury," said Brown, who was hurt running for a first down in the first period. "They really did a good number on me, but they can't hold me down when I really want to go."

The Vikings' defense yielded only 115 yards passing and did not allow the Atlanta offense a touchdown. Cornerback John Turner intercepted two of Steve Bartkowski passes.

Minnesota improved to 6-4 while Atlanta finished 5-5.

Pirates Add New Coach To 'D' Staff

A Staff Report

East Carolina University football coach Ed Emory has hired Phil Elmassian as a defensive coach, filling one gap left by the resignation of four defensive coaches.

It was not known this morning where on defense Elmassian would coach.

Elmassian comes to East Carolina from Ferrum Junior College, where he was the defensive coordinator since 1979.

Elmassian has also had coaching stints at the University of Richmond (1976-79) and William & Mary (1973-75). At both Richmond and William & Mary, he was the offensive backfield coach.

In 1973, he was a graduate assistant and was in charge of the junior varsity defensive secondary.

Elmassian, who was born April 28, 1951, in Cambridge, Mass., is a '69 graduate of Wellesley High School and attended both Ferrum and William & Mary.

Elmassian played defensive back at Ferrum in 1969 and played quarterback in 1970. He also threw the javelin at Ferrum.

He transferred to William & Mary in 1971 and played defensive back there for two years, the first year under former N.C. State and present Arkansas coach Lou Holtz.

Elmassian has a B.A. in Physical Education from William & Mary.

Elmassian figures to fill one of four gaps left by the resignation of four ECU defensive coaches.

Gone are East Carolina defensive coordinator Norm Parker, defensive back coach Jim Bengala and defensive end coach Jim Holland.

Parker moved on to take a job as linebacker coach at Michigan State University while neither Bengala nor Holland have yet to announce what their intentions as far as coaching are.

The Pirates lost a fourth defensive coach this weekend when graduate assistant Tim Mingey was named defensive coordinator at Miami of Ohio by new head coach Tim Rose.

Mingey had just completed his first year as a graduate assistant at ECU after being an assistant coach at Western Michigan (1975-81). Before that, in 1974, he was defensive coordinator for the Chicago Catholic League.

Pirates To Face Camels Tonight

A Staff Report

East Carolina's Pirates play the first of three games this week when they travel to Fayetteville tonight to face the Camels of Campbell University.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. in the Cumberland County Auditorium.

East Carolina comes into the game following a stunning 43-41 upset of ECAC-South favorite James Madison Saturday night in Minges Coliseum. The victory boosted the Pirate record to 5-5 on the season.

Campbell, meanwhile, was bowing to The Citadel, 68-50, Saturday night, and is now 4-6 on the year. The Camels have lost to Richmond, Towson State, Clemson, Western Carolina and Wisconsin-Green Bay, in addition to the Bulldogs. They hold victories over Baltimore, Pembroke, Liberty Baptist and Maryland-Eastern Shore.

Campbell is led by Larry Cannady, a 6-4, 190-pound junior forward, who has been the leading scorer and rebounder after transferring from Chowan.

East Carolina leads the series between the two schools, 15-10. The two split last year, ECU winning, 66-61, in Greenville, while Campbell took a 62-60 win in Raleigh at the Civic Center.

ECU returns home on Wednesday to face William & Mary in a 7:30 p.m. game, then travels to Richmond on Saturday for a 1 p.m. contest.

Fists, Elbows Fly From Both Centers

Ewing, Sampson Blow Their Cool

By The Associated Press
Ralph Sampson and Pat Ewing, the nation's premier big men, blew their cool. Indiana blew the ball game and likely its No. 1 ranking in college basketball.

"I could have composed myself a little better," the 7-foot-4 Sampson conceded after drawing two technical fouls in fourth-ranked Virginia's 83-64 victory Saturday night over Maryland at College Park, Md. He argued vociferously with a referee, then bounced the ball some 40 feet into the air.

Virginia Coach Terry Holland was so angry at the officiating that he had threatened to pull his team off the court.

At New York's Madison Square Garden, Georgetown Coach John Thompson didn't like how his center, the 7-foot Ewing, was treated by the officials and said he would tell his sophomore center to turn pro if officiating didn't improve.

Ewing drew a technical foul for fighting with 6-3 Kevin Williams of St. John's — one of the two scuffles they had before seventh-ranked St. John's made it record 13-0 with a 76-67 Big East Conference win.

"I will tell him to go hardship (turn pro) if he's continued to be grabbed," said Thompson. "I'm sick of the double standards on defense."

Indiana, 10-1, fell from ranks of the unbeaten in a Big Ten contest at Columbus, Ohio when Ohio State upset the Hoosiers 70-67 behind Ron Stokes' two clinching free throws. The Buckeyes is 9-2 and winner of their last seven games.

Indiana Coach Bobby Knight's only complaints were for his team. "I thought there was no point in the game where we played for any length of time," said Knight, whose Hoosiers outrebounded the Buckeyes 35-18. "The team that did what it was trying to do most won the game."

No. 9 Syracuse, 11-1 also suffered its first setback, 87-64 to No. 18 North Carolina at Charlotte. Michael Jordan scored 18 points as the Tar Heels, 10-3, won its seventh straight, while Erich Santifer scored 24 for the Orangemen.

In other games involving the Top Twenty Saturday, No. 5 Alabama snapped a two-game losing streak by winning at home, 74-67 over No. 3 Kentucky; No. 6 UCLA won on the road, 92-87 over Arizona; No. 8 Iowa tripped visiting Michigan 79-72, and unbeaten Arkansas, No. 10, scored a 65-60 home victory over Baylor.

No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas won at California-Irvine 68-63; host Mississippi upset No. 12 Tennessee 56-55 in overtime; No. 13 Louisville won on the road, 96-69 over Florida State, No. 19 Houston

Woody
Peele

Come just a week or so and we've been in Greenville for 19 years.

But Saturday night, we saw something we haven't seen the like of before.

East Carolina's game — and subsequent victory over James Madison, 43-41, was the most-emotion packed one that's been played on an ECU playing court during those 19 years.

At no time can we remember the emotions shown by the players, the coaches, and the fans. Everyone was totally involved in the game — and unlike so many ECU games of the past — nobody left early.

It was a tribute to the fans — 5,700 of them, the eighth largest crowd in the history of Minges Coliseum — that they were even there. The game was scheduled for 7:30 p.m., but one of the officials was sent to Greenville, S.C., by mistake and arrived several hours late. It was 9 p.m. before the game got started, but the fans — including a number who went away when it was first announced that there would be an hour and half delay — came anyway. Many of them waited patiently in their seats.

JMU Coach Lou Campanelli was unwilling to play with one — or a substitute official, so they waited for the other ref to show.

And the show the Pirates put on for them was well worth the wait. While the offensive show might not have been that great, they did get to see two teams play outstanding defense. East Carolina, as it were, beat Madison at its own game. The Pirates not only played great defense, they controlled the tempo of the game for the most part.

Charlie Harrison promised to make East Carolina an exciting team to watch. He is fulfilling that promise.

He's also talked about the sixth man — the crowd — and Saturday night the sixth man was there — screaming and cheering as JMU attempting to pull even at the end.

"I've contended that if we can get this place hopping, we'll have a great sixth man," Harrison said after the game. "You play harder if someone is pulling for you." That support was there Saturday night, and it should be there again on Wednesday, when the Pirates host William & Mary, which beat George Mason Saturday night to take over first place in the ECAC-South.

Maybe you don't have to have a shot clock and three-point plays to have exciting basketball after all.

Morgan Gains First Victory Since 1979

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Gil Morgan had one small complaint about his playoff victory in the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open.

"It's nice," the non-practicing optometrist said after a spectacular birdie on the second extra hole had subdued Lanny Wadkins and Curtis Strange and provided Morgan with a $54,000 prize in the kickoff event on the 10-month Professional Golfers Association tour.

"I just wish I hadn't had to wait so long," Morgan said after his triumph Sunday in the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, his first victory since the summer of 1979.

"This one was long overdue. I'd had numerous opportunities in the last 3½ years. But something always happened. I was in position a number of times. But something always happened. Either I didn't play very well or somebody else played better.

"In the end, I guess I just didn't play well enough."

Morgan shot 67 over the last 18 holes of regulation. His 271 total was matched by Wadkins, who had a 68 despite some very uncertain putting, and Strange, who came from well off the pace with a 65 that included 31 and four consecutive birdies on the back nine.

The first playoff hole was parred by all three. Morgan, however, had to one-putt from four feet to save and Wadkins, a three-time winner last season and usually one of the game's most aggressive players, left an 8-foot winning putt short of the hole.

"I thought Lanny had it won right there," Morgan said. When he missed, however, they went to No. 2.

Morgan drove into the rough, but hit a 7 iron some 22 feet from the cup. Wadkins and Strange got theirs about 20 feet out.

Wadkins ran his putt over the hole and Strange, who has collected more than $465,000 in the last two years without scoring a victory, lipped out.

Rosettes 2nd At Meet

RALEIGH — The Greenville Rosettes finished second in a Class 2 gymnastics meet but failed to place in a Class 1 meet, both of which were held this past weekend at the Raleigh School of Gymnastics.

The Charlotte YWCA won the Class 2 meet with 188.65 points. The Rosettes ended up with 179.40 points. Raleigh was third in the 12-team field with 176.65.

Leading the Rosettes in the Class 2 meet were Kerri Moreno and Debbie Sigler, both of whom competed in the 12-14 age group.

Sigler finished second all-around with a score of 63.80 and Moreno was third all-around with 62.35 points.

Sigler took first on the uneven bars with a combined compulsory and optional score of 17.30. She was third on the vault (16.65) and fourth on floor exercise (15.50).

Moreno was first on floor exercise (16.65), second on the balance beam (15.95) and fifth on the vault (16.20).

Nancy Johnson did not place but had an all-around score of 53.60 to help the Rosettes finish second.

In the Class 1 results, Peggy Becker, in the 12-14 age group, finished second on the floor exercise (16.15) and Jenny Johnsrude, in the 15-and-over age group, was fifth on the vault (16.75).

Defense Leads Missouri Past Wolfpack, 49-42

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri guard Jon Sundvold took scoring honors in the No. 15 Tigers' 49-42 basketball victory Sunday over 16th-ranked North Carolina State. But he agreed with just about everybody else that defense was the key to the triumph.

"I had some baskets at key points," said Sundvold, who finished with 17 points. "But I think what really was the key to our win was our defense. The whole team played well defensively."

"Our defense was the thing that stopped them," added center Steve Stipanovich, who scored 10 points. "We weren't shooting well, so we had to play good defense."

The Tigers shot just 30 percent from the field in the first half, but stayed with North Carolina State at 21-21 as the Wolfpack was only slightly better at 32 percent.

Both teams improved in the final 20 minutes, but North Carolina State was hurt throughout the game by fouls and Missouri's strength on the boards.

The Wolfpack were whistled for 26 fouls — twice as many as the Tigers — and were outrebounded, 31-23.

The foul situation not only allowed Missouri to hit 19 of 30 free throws — North Carolina State was six of 10 — but also permitted Tiger Coach Norm Stewart to play just six players. If Barry Laurie had not substituted for Mark Dressler for two minutes, all five Tiger starters would have gone all the way.

"We did what we wanted by not letting Sundvold and Stipanovich dominate the game," said North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano. "But the credit has to go to Missouri's defense. They did what they had to to win."

The Tigers took their first lead of the game, 23-21, with 18:11 left in the second half on a jumper by Sundvold.

Missouri held a 31-27 advantage with 13:52 to play, but the North Carolina State reeled off eight unanswered points to overtake the Tigers, 35-31, with 10 minutes left.

Sundvold then went on a rampage, hitting three straight field goals to spur a 10-0 Missouri spurt. That gave Missouri a 41-35 lead with 2:25 left, and North Carolina State never recovered.

Lorenzo Charles led the Wolfpack attack with 10 points.

Missouri is now 10-2, while North Carolina State fell to 7-2.

North Carolina, Wake Forest, Virginia and Duke all won this weekend. Wake Forest stopped Georgia Tech 60-53 in league play this weekend while Virginia overwhelmed ACC foe Maryland 83-64 and Duke squeaked past LaSalle 61-60.

In this week's ACC action, Clemson visits Georgia Tech Tuesday, while Wednesday finds Maryland at North Carolina, Virginia at N.C. State and Louisville at Duke.

It's hard to imagine an insured
money market account
more convenient than this.

Unless it's this.

BB&T's new Money Rate Savings Account has just about everything you want in an investment.

To begin with, it pays market rates. But unlike traditional money market funds, it's insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for up to $100,000. To top it all off, it's convenient. You can withdraw your money anytime, without penalty, at any BB&T office or 24-hour teller machine. What could be more convenient than that?

BB&T's new Money Rate Checking Account also pays market rates, is insured and lets you make withdrawals any time. But with this account, you can also write checks whenever you want.

How do you decide which account is right for you? Well, a lot of investors keep their checking and savings money separate. So, like them, you might want both. And you can open both with minimum deposits of $2500 each at any BB&T office. What could be more convenient than that?

'Nicholas Nickleby' On TV Is Given Edge On Stage Offering

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Nothing can replace the intimacy and excitement of a rousing stage performance. But, in some ways, the television version of "The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby" is better than the Broadway show.

The nine-hour TV production is convenient, spread over four nights. It is also free — the theater ticket cost $100.

But TV's biggest edge comes in the camera close-ups of the faces of the oppressed and downtrodden. These expressions powerfully raise to even higher emotional levels the social consciousness and empathy that Charles Dickens stimulates.

The Royal Shakespeare Company's "Nicholas Nickleby" will run on four consecutive nights, beginning tonight, on the ad hoc Mobil Showcase Network, a syndicate of 61 stations covering 70 percent of the nation.

The lineup includes 22 independents, 14 Public Broadcasting Service stations, 10 NBC affiliates, nine from ABC and six from CBS. The networks are unhappy about the affiliate defections, but ABC, CBS and NBC all were offered "Nicholas Nickleby."

They turned it down, apparently because they anticipated poor ratings. One network executive also said the story wasn't that comprehensible, which might well be true for someone whose cultural reference point is "Joanie Loves Chachi."

The Mobil Corp., whose TV credits include "Masterpiece Theater" and "Mystery!" on PBS, was largely responsible for financing the television production. The Shubert Organization brought the play to Broadway.

"Nicholas Nickleby" is a morality play about social injustice in 19th-century England. As always, Dickens is as subtle as the plague.

His heroes are saintly and virtuous, his villains despicable and unredeemable, his poor brutalized and sickly, although never lacking spirit or faith. Good battles evil and eventually wins out.

Dickens' literary asides, through which he offers judgments and propels the story, are effectively presented by cast members who pass along the narration one to another, as if it were a baton. The fusing of imagination and reality is handled neatly in the staging. Characters turn into props, and light and sound manage to convey the presence of doors and other invisible scenery.

The most heroic character is Nickleby himself (Roger Rees), a compassionate, righteous innocent who takes responsibility for his mother (Jane Downs) and sister, Kate (Emily Richard), after the death of his father.

The story covers Nicholas' travails as he works in a school for abandoned children, becomes an actor, battles his nasty Uncle Ralph (John Woodvine), and, throughout, attempts to right every wrong he sees.

And there's plenty wrong in Dickens' England, where children are sadistically mistreated and the poor are robbed of everything except, perhaps, their dignity. This is never clearer than in the character of Smike. David Threlfall brings a warm spirit of optimism to the retarded cripple who is befriended by Nicholas and whose fight for self-worth is most touching.

Act I ends with Smike telling Nicholas "You are my home," and the audience cheers enthusiastically. The passions and preferences of the theatergoers, who seemingly become part of the cast, gives TVviewers a sense of involvement in the production.

When things are in danger of getting too bleak, the show is not above some broad farce. In one scene, Nicholas is involved in a hilarious "Romeo and Juliet." This Shakespearean tragedy becomes classic situation comedy, with the dead lovers given a second chance at life.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as

South you hold:

♠AK6 ♥AQ9652 ♦J5 ♣73

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have excellent

three-card support for partner, and it is tempting to raise to two spades. However,

bear in mind that partner

may have a weakish four-card spade suit, while you are looking at a reasonably good six-card suit in your hand. Therefore we prefer a rebid of two hearts. In this sequence, two hearts has the added advantage of virtually guaranteeing a six-card suit.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as

South you hold:

♠AJ5 ♥AQ872 ♦AK6 ♣83

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Once partner has raised hearts, your hand revalues to 20 points. Add to this the 6 or so he has shown with his raise, and you have enough for game. To do anything other than bid four hearts is asking partner to do your job.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable,

you hold:

♠A93 ♥83 ♦KQ652 ♣AJ7

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Obviously, only two bids

come into consideration—a raise to two spades or a rebid of one no trump. While your distribution is balanced, we don't like bidding no trump without a stopper in the unbid major, especially when we have decent three-card support for partner and a ruf-ing value. Our strong preference is for the raise to two spades. If you chose to rebid your diamonds, you need to brush up on your basics.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as

South you hold:

♠AJ1095 ♥KQ763 ♦92 ♣5

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♥ Dble Pass 2 NT

What action do you take?

A.—Partner has denied

holding four spades, so rule out a game in your major suit. And an 11-trick contract might be beyond your combined resources. Raise to three no trump. If partner knows what he is doing, he should have 11-12 points and a double stopper in the enemy suit.

Telethon Offers Stars

NEW YORK — Joan Collins, Ann Jillian, Robert Guillaume, Hal Linden, Nancy Dussault, Henry Winkler, Gavin MacLeod and Telma Hopkins will join veteran co-hosts John Ritter, Paul Anka and Dennis James for the fifth annual "Weekend With the Stars" Telethon for cerebral palsy.

January 22-23, UCFA's national office announced.

The growing Telethon network includes stations coast-to-coast and in Canada. The Telethon will be broadcast live from Los Angeles and New York with special segments from Las Vegas and Hawaii, featuring the "Ambassador of Hawaiian Music," Don Ho. More than $16 million was raised via the Telethon last year, $2 million more than the year before, UCFA noted.

John Ritter's brother, Tom, who has cerebral palsy and is a lawyer/music publisher will be an integral part of Telethon '83 as he goes on location to talk with other people who are overcoming cerebral palsy handicaps. This year's telecast will include footage of Linda Down, covering the 26-mile-365-yard New York City Marathon course in 11 hours with the use of special crutches.

In addition to the newly-added talent, viewers will be entertained for 21 straight hours by a star-studded cast including Susan Anton, Anthony Geary, Rosemary Clooney, Dan Travanti, Helen Reddy, Patty Duke Astin, Charo, McLean Stevenson, Robert Culp, Priscilla Barnes, Danielle Brisebois, Don Knotts and The Rockettes plus many more stage, screen, television and sports personalities.

Money raised from viewer pledges and sponsor contributions fund research and services related to the disabling condition that affects 700,000 Americans today.

Jerry Lewis Is His Old Self

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis, who underwent emergency heart surgery three weeks ago, appears to be his old joking self and says he feels "in great shape."

Lewis arrived at Desert Springs Hospital on Sunday for an hour-long checkup, and, pointing to his chest, told reporters doctors wanted to "see this thing is holding together."

The 56-year-old comedian underwent double-bypass surgery Dec. 21 and was released Jan. 1. His doctors say he will be able to lead a normal life, but must give up smoking.

Six Fatalities For Highways

By The Associated Press
Six people died on North Carolina highways this weekend, including two killed Sunday when their car hit a tree and exploded near Charlotte.

Charlotte police said the bodies in the crash off Interstate 85 were burned beyond recognition and the names of the victims were not released. Those deaths were not included in the official tally kept by the state Highway Patrol.

Also not counted by the patrol was the death of Paul Vincent McEnroe Jr., 14, who died Sunday when he was struck while riding a dirt bike by his father's car. The accident took place on private property in Raleigh.

In traffic accidents officially reported by the Highway Patrol, Michael Kevin Keck, 17, of Rockingham County died Friday at about 9:50 p.m. when the car he was riding at high speed ran off a rural road 3.5 miles west of Reidsville.

Leon Earl Holt, 36, of Timberlake, died when the car he was driving ran off a rural road in Person County Friday night near Roxboro and struck a tree.

Glenn McNeill, 20, of Lillington was killed at 1:05 a.m. Sunday when the car he was driving ran off a rural road south of his hometown, overturned, threw him out and rolled over him.

Charles Ray Basen, 20, of Supply was killed at 4:30 p.m. Sunday when the car he was driving at high speed ran off N.C. 130 east of Shalotte, hit a tree, bounced back onto the road, hit another car and burst into flames.

The deaths reported by the Highway Patrol brought the official traffic death toll for the year to 15, compared to 18 on the same date in 1982.

Sunbelt Has Top Growth

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The quest for jobs, milder weather, lower taxes, lower energy costs and year-round recreation has helped the Sunbelt outgain Northeastern and North Central states in population growth, an urban studies specialist says.

The entire Sunbelt, 15 warm-weather states from Virginia to California, grew 21.4 percent between 1970 and 1980, said Carl Abbott of Portland State University in Oregon. Northeastern and North Central states grew only 2 percent.

Abbott, author of a book on migration to Sunbelt cities, says between 1975 and 1980, 209,000 people from Northeastern and North Central states moved to North Carolina. Census figures show that 538,400 people moved to North Carolina during that period.

Moore Is 'Fine' After Surgery

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Dan K. Moore is recovering from an operation at Duke Medical Center. Moore was listed in satisfactory condition Saturday. Nurses declined to release his condition Sunday.

Moore, who declined in an interview to disclose what type of operation he had Thursday, said he was doing fine.

"Everything went lovely," he said about the surgery. Moore, 76, said he hoped to be released from the hospital this week.

Romance Lives

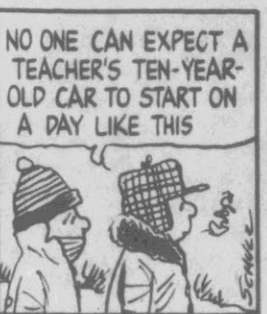

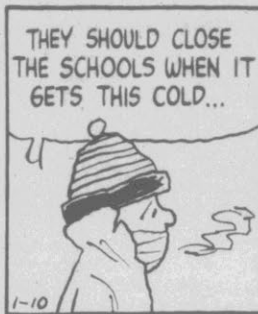

LONDON (AP) — Romance is not dead for British wives, according to a survey published in a magazine today.

A majority of 500 wives replying to a questionnaire in Options magazine said they married for love, are still in love with their husbands and would marry the same man again.

According to the survey, 60 percent of the women said they did not believe romance inevitably goes out of marriage and two out of three said they intend to stay married, whatever the problems.

Half the women thought children help a marriage to survive, although 20 percent said they are a hindrance.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JAN. 11, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to handle whatever applies to home, family, property and possessions in a confident manner and can gain added prestige. Remove obstacles in your path.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact an influential person who can give you support for a fine project you have in mind. Take time for fun later in the day.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your ideas are working like magic early in the day so be more aggressive than in the past. Relax at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you carry through with promises to others. Loved one becomes more affectionate as the day passes.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to learn what is expected of you by associates and try to please them for possible advancement in career.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy at work ahead of you and gain fine benefits by being cooperative with others. Organizational work is the key to success now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A time to concentrate on getting ahead in your line of endeavor. Know what will please loved one the most whatever the cost.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to confer with family members and maintain harmony in the home. Sidelstep one who is a troublemaker.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to go after the information you need for a personal project. Fine also for communicating with outsiders.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are thinking in a most practical vein and can easily handle a difficult problem now. Express happiness with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Morning may be depressing but later you can go after personal goals and gain them. Be careful of your money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget the frivolous for now and get busy on practical matters that could give you a greater income in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good friend who is wise can tell you how to solve certain problems, so listen carefully. Relax and be contented in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one with much organizational ability and should be given a chance to express this quality early in life. Give complicated chores and teach to use reason in dealing with others. Don't neglect religious training.

Industrial Robots Spur Educational Programs

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The growing use of industrial robots has spawned new educational programs designed to help displaced assembly-line workers repair and program their robotic replacements.

"The use of robotics will cause a rather significant problem in displaced workers," said Dr. Phail Wynn Jr., president of Durham Tech, which has ordered robots to help train students. "We're anticipating an increasing need for robotics technicians ..., although it may be four or five years away."

Industrial robots are not the cute contraptions popularized by films. Often they consist only of hydraulic arms with special tools and sensors attached, but unlike many humans, they are uniquely suited to boring, repetitive tasks.

"Using robots for spray painting and welding in the auto industry reduced employment 10 to 15 percent," Wynn said. "In Japan, one plant reduced its work force by 50 percent while increasing production by 20 percent."

Statistics like those created a need for more technical training programs, he added.

"The key here is that as we look at the whole field of microelectronics, there will be a displacement of workers, but as the economy expands, there will be new jobs created," Wynn said. "North Carolina's major industries — tobacco, textiles and furniture — are all becoming more automated. We will be equipped to train the people for newly created jobs."

Jerry Owens, dean of Piedmont Technical College in Greenwood, S.C., said the Southeast may be taking the lead in robotic instruction.

Piedmont already boasts a Regional Robotics Center and plans to offer a two-year associate degree in robotics in September, Owens said.

"I don't think any schools with the exception of one in Chicago have a robotics curriculum," he said. "We have more than any other school in the Southeast as far as robotics."

"The whole Southeast is a growth area," Owens added. "Cincinnati Milacron built a big robotics manufacturing center in our town. Since then about 60 miles away a Japanese firm opened that manufactures other robots."

In March, Piedmont will host one of the largest automated manufacturing shows ever planned, with up to 20,000 people expected to attend, Owens said.

As the nation's unsteady economy accelerates the use of industrial robots, educators must keep pace with a growing demand for technically trained workers, officials said.

Owens agreed that training the work force will be one of the most important things in staving off rampant unemployment.

"It's going to require people to be smarter and better educated in order to get the jobs there are."

A Day for World Peace

Today marks the 37th anniversary of the United Nations. It is also the 63rd anniversary of the League of Nations which first met in 1920. President Woodrow Wilson, the chief planner of the League, believed that future wars were inevitable without cooperation among countries. He persuaded 42 nations to join the League, but he could not convince the U.S. Senate to ratify the treaty that would have made the U.S. a member. The League failed to prevent World War Two and disbanded in 1946. But that same year, on the 26th anniversary of the League's first meeting, delegates from 51 nations gathered for the first meeting of the new U.N. This time, a delegate from the U.S. was among them.

DO YOU KNOW — Where was the first meeting of the U.N. held in 1946?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The word "Islam" means "submission."

N.C. Recession Said To Rival That Of Mid-1970s

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Changes in North Carolina's economy since the 1974-75 recession may have kept the current slump from being as deep, but state officials say its long duration may end up hurting people just as much.

"On the whole, 1974-75 probably affected more people, but I think the people who were affected in 1982 have been affected for a longer time," said Dave Garrison, assistant director of research for the N.C. Employment Security Commission's labor market information division.

"I don't know which is worse: to have a higher number of people unemployed for a short time, or to have fewer people unemployed for a longer time."

In the mid-70s recession, the state jobless rate matched or exceeded the national rate in seven months. In the present downturn, the North Carolina rate has equaled or exceeded the national rate only in March and July of 1982.

While the state unemployment rate peaked at 11.9 percent in March 1975, it has gone no higher this time than the 9.8 percent recorded in July 1982.

The rate in November 1982, the latest month for which statistics are available, was 9.5 percent.

In 1975, the worst year of that recession for North Carolina, the unemployment rate was more than 9 percent for four months, Garrison said. In 1982, the rate was higher than 9 percent for seven months, and the number is likely to reach eight months when the December figure is reported at the end of this month.

Changes in the state economy and lessons learned in the earlier downturn by business and industry executives may have softened the blow, economists say.

John S. Heckman, associate professor of business administration at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, says the primary change in the state's economy has been an influx of new industry.

Since 1974-75, North Carolina's dependence on the textile, apparel and furniture industries has declined slightly, he said. New industries such as fabricated metals, transportation equipment, rubber, plastics and electronics have been growing much faster.

"Based just on that, we would be more recession-proof than we were before," Heckman said.

T. Michael Kiltie, economist with the state budget office, said business and industry leaders caught almost entirely by surprise by the earlier recession were ready this time.

In the mid-1970s manufacturers had warehouses full of goods that weren't being sold. But when the current downturn hit, manufacturers held down their inventories and avoided some of the sudden, widespread layoffs that characterized the 1974-75 recession, analysts said.

State Officials Say Changes In Legislature Rule Out Poor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Increasingly long sessions and low pay may be pushing the average worker out of the General Assembly, leaving it dominated by those who can afford the job, state officials say.

"Not many poor people get elected to the General Assembly," said Appeals court Judge Willis Whichard, who cited finances as one reason for leaving the legislature after five terms. "The average person can't go. The factory person, the textile worker couldn't get time off from work."

Christopher Scott, secretary-treasurer of the state AFL-CIO, agreed.

"The traditional model is the big fish in the small pond," said Scott. "The big insurance agent, the big lawyer, the big real estate guy back home gets elected."

Legislators receive a total of about $20,000 a year — most of which pays for housing and food in Raleigh, where sessions take up an average of six months of every two years. Their base pay is $6,936 annually and they receive $50 a day for living expenses during sessions and committee meetings.

Lawmakers also can use a $172 monthly stipend for hiring secretaries or other staffers.

"The salary is more or less a token," said Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake. "I don't know anyone who does not lose money by coming to the Legislature. My (law) firm loses about $50,000 a year... by my being in the Legislature."

"The average company is not going to pay for somebody to be up there," added Craig Lawing, Senate president pro tem.

Only four senators hold down full-time jobs. For example, Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, draws his full salary as a North Carolina National Bank vice president while serving as a legislator.

The Legislative Committee on Agency Review has recommended sessions be shortened to allow more people to serve and that the number of committees be reduced.

The extra sessions the General Assembly has called in the last two years "generally tried the patience of its own members and their constituents," said the committee's draft report.

Some lawmakers say the legislative system should be examined and that changes are needed.

"It's hard for members on the General Assembly to empathize with sharecroppers and migrants," said Rep. Tim McDowell, D-Alamance. "I'm not saying we don't address the issues of the poor. It's just easier to empathize with the rich."

If all lawmakers come from one socioeconomic group, it will be over-represented while the rest of society will be under-represented, he said.

"What we need is more competition among qualified people to serve in the General Assembly rather than less, and the economic test is restricting the number of people who can seek office," said Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham.

Superintendent Will Step Down

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Greensboro schools superintendent Kenneth R. Newbold says he will ask the school board not to renew his contract when it expires in 1986.

Newbold said Saturday that his duties as a new general in the North Carolina National Guard will require too much of his time.

Newbold, now a colonel in the guard, has been recommended by Gov. Jim Hunt for a promotion to brigadier general, one of only four such ranks in the state. The U.S. Senate is expected to confirm the promotion.

Supplies Parts For Human Body

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Biological Supply Co., billed by its founder as one of the largest laboratory suppliers in the country, stocks virtually every part of the human anatomy and will order what it lacks.

NASA, for instance, uses the compounds luciferin and luciferase in analyzing moon rocks. The compounds are found in the tail-light of the lightning bug. Thus, the company buys 30,000 fireflies a year at 2 cents apiece.

The firm is a 15-building assemblage of animal, marine and vegetable life, said Thomas Powell Jr., 83, who started the business in 1927.

Half a human brain costs $114.50, while a whole one costs $154.50. A human heart also costs $154.50, but a kit of parts to build a plastic imitation costs $9. An authentic, unassembled skeletal costs $187.75, while a plastic skeleton sells for $334.55.

Many parts of assembled specimens can be ordered — live or in skeletal or encased form modeled in plastic. Creatures in stock include rattlesnakes, scorpions, tarantulas and sharks.

The store also stocks microscopes, funnels, beakers and other laboratory equipment, along with its mineral, flora and fauna specimens and its selection of scientific books.

"We don't know how many titles we carry," said advertising manager Harry Shoffer. "But we make or process about half of them. Last time we counted up, the total was over 20,000, and that was three years ago."

Power Lost Due Faulty Switch

BUTNER, N.C. (AP) — A faulty switch at the Murdock Center for the retarded left 900 patients and staff without electricity for about 23 hours Sunday, although the National Guard used emergency generators to provide temporary power.

Andrew Wheeler, director of psychology at Murdock, said the power outage had left the facility without heat and hot water, but gas stoves used to cook meals remained in operation. Patients were supplied with extra blankets and staffers constantly checked to make sure everyone was dressed warmly, he said.

The power went off at 2 p.m. Saturday and was restored at about 1 p.m. Sunday, said Duke Power Co. spokesman Norman Lockamy.

Emmett Perry, a Duke official, said the switch malfunctioned as workers installed an electrical hookup for a new chapel.

HELD FOR BOMBING
AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Police have arrested a 25-year-old man and a 16-year-old youth in connection with the explosion of two shrapnel-filled bombs that injured nine fans, one of them seriously, during a soccer match here.
