17 Hostages At Ossining Freed Today

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer
OSSINING, N.Y. (AP) — Rebellious inmates at Ossining Correctional Facility released their 17 hostages unharmed early today and said they received amnesty for their 53-hour takeover. But prison officials said there was no such deal.

The siege at the prison once known as Sing Sing was declared over by the inmates Monday night after local television stations broadcast 10 points of agreement that prisoners said they had reached with state correction officials.

At 12:28 a.m., the watch commander at the prison announced over guards' walkie-talkies that the last hostage had been freed. Except for some bumps and bruises, all were reported in good condition.

One by one, the hostages, some dazed and looking tired, walked out of the cellblock, greeted by applause from coworkers. One correction officer, asked how he felt, said, "Glad to be out."

Cheers were heard from the cellblock as the siege drew to a close.

"Hey, thanks a lot," one prisoner called through bars to reporters 200 yards away. Another said the prison administration deserved no credit for the bloodless end to the incident: "It's not the administration that did this (end the siege) ... It's us and you."

The inmates said they would lock themselves in their cells, and at 1:40 a.m. special state troops reoccupied the five-story cellblock.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, who took office Jan. 1, had refused to deal with the inmates until every hostage was freed. He praised prison officials for resolving the crisis without serious injury to any hostage or inmate.

"Dozens, maybe hundreds of hard decisions were made and most were made without time for reflection," Cuomo told a news conference.

Hunt Will Ask Pay Freeze End

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said today the only new spending he will recommend to the Legislature this year is $100 million to lift the freeze on salaries for state workers and teachers.

Hunt told superintendents and board chairman from the state's 143 local school units today that he will propose several smaller programs in the budget for current operations, including some money for improving writing and science and math instruction.

Hunt praised the school officials' efforts to cut spending by 2 percent. He said their attitude would be crucial in meeting their goal of saving as much as $30 million this fiscal year.

"I appreciate your attitude, your spirit in this matter and the hard work you're doing," Hunt said. "We'll work with you every way we can."

State Board of Education Chairman C.D. Spangler said the school officials are responsible for accepting the cuts "with the best spirit we can."

Hunt said he maintains his interest in public schools, although there will not be a great increase in money for them next year.

"We're beginning to see again in the depths of tough times that our real salvation lies in public schools and what we do with our people," he said.

School Systems Given Some Suggestions On Their Budget-Cutting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State School Superintendent Craig Phillips has asked local school systems to save 2 percent of their budget by freezing vacant positions outside the classroom, not awarding some contracts and withholding staff development money.

Phillips promised local superintendents Monday that he will ask the Legislature's help if schools can't find ways to make the 2 percent cuts.

To avoid an anticipated $120 million shortfall in the state's 1982-83 budget, state officials have asked the Department of Public Instruction to reduce spending by 2 percent for the rest of the fiscal year. That amounts to $13-15 million.

Gov. Jim Hunt ordered that the cuts not affect classroom teaching. He said schools could not try to save money by laying off classroom workers, reducing teachers' salaries or reducing the length of the school year.

Budget officials say the schools voluntarily saved 2 percent of their money during the first half of the fiscal year and need only hold those spending levels steady for six more months.

But Phillips said he is concerned that many bills won't come due until near the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

"The pressures will build as we come closer to the end of the year," he told the superintendents at their twice-a-year meeting. "If necessary, I'll take the issue to the Legislature because they'll be in town when the chips get down."

Almost all of the state's 143 superintendents attended the opening of the two-day leadership conference Monday. Local school board chairmen are meeting at the same time in Raleigh.

Habib Returns To Mideast Deadlock

By The Associated Press

The Lebanese government has agreed with one reservation to a U.S.-proposed "composite agenda" aimed at breaking the deadlock with Israel in two-week-old talks over withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon, Lebanese officials said today.

The report came as U.S. troubleshooter Philip C. Habib headed back to the Middle East, declaring that it is "taking too long" to get foreign troops out of Lebanese territory.

Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat wound up two days of talks with King Hussein of Jordan, who Washington hopes will take an active role in Middle East peace efforts, and PLO aides said Arafat planned to visit Moscow for "solidarity talks" with the new Soviet leadership.

However, a spokesman for the PLO diplomatic office in the Soviet Union's capital said he had no information about Arafat's travel plans.

Israeli and Lebanese negotiators will hold the sixth round of the troop withdrawal talks Thursday in the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmona.

So far, the discussions have been deadlocked by Israel's insistence that "normalization of relations" between the two countries must head the agenda, and Lebanon's demand that withdrawal of an estimated 25,000 Israeli troops come first. The Lebanese also seek the removal of about 40,000 Syrian and Palestinian troops.

ECU's Vice Chancellor Maier Quits; New Role

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Robert H. Maier resigned Monday as vice chancellor for academic affairs at East Carolina University to become a professor of experimental surgery in the ECU School of Medicine.

Chancellor John Howell said Maier, who has been vice chancellor since August 1979, has an extensive background in chemistry and in the field of trace elements in soil chemistry. He will be engaged in research in the medical school's trace elements laboratory.

"I hope his work there will be enjoyable and fruitful," Howell said, adding that the "important and promising" research projects which Maier will undertake are closely related to his past academic training and research.

Howell said an interim vice chancellor for academic affairs will be appointed until a search committee is formed to consider candidates for the position.

Other officials at the university said Dr. Angelo A. Volpe, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, was "filling in" for Maier today until an acting vice chancellor is announced.

"I'm a concerned citizen. Why don't the police patrol on foot the way they used to? A lot of crime could be averted. Greenville could have less crime if our policemen were more directly involved in the malls and shopping centers." B.R.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said officers do patrol on foot — along Evans Mall, Dickinson Avenue and at Pitt Plaza and Greenville Square shopping centers. And he said Carolina East Mall has its own security forces patrolling on foot.

Covering as much territory as local officers have to cover, "it would be almost impossible to put them on foot and cover the city," Cannon said.

"We have to use them where we can get the most advantage and the best coverage," he said.

Med Student Ratio Backed

Dr. William Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said today there is "general agreement" among medical school deans in North Carolina that "the number of individuals going into medicine through the four schools is approximately correct for the projected growth and needs" of the state.

"Our stance generally is that, although there may be on the horizon a large number of physicians nationwide, continuation of present retention of physicians in the state leaves us in a situation which is just about right," Laupus said.

"The original estimates by the GMENAC (Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee) study are considered to be very loose at this point. Reappraisal by various expert groups adjust the (projected) surplus of physicians nationwide by 1990 to be less than 5 percent," Laupus said.

"The truth of the matter is that there is no agreement on the appropriate ratio of population to the number of physicians. And in fact, it must vary considerably, depending on the economic status of the patient population."

A total of 446 students were admitted to medical schools in North Carolina last fall, Laupus said. He estimated that about 264 are North Carolina residents, suggesting that non-residents are more likely to practice outside the state when they graduate.

Hunt To Recommend Drinking Age Be Increased From 18 To 19

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said today he will recommend that the minimum legal drinking age for beer and wine in North Carolina be increased from 18 to 19.

In a statement released by his office, Hunt said he had decided to support the recommendation by the Governor's Task Force on Drunken Drivers.

"I believe that the comprehensive package submitted by the task force, including raising the drinking age to 19, will be a powerful deterrent to drinking and driving," Hunt said. "I believe we must present the Legislature with an overall package that will be enacted in full."

The governor said the "primary goal" of increasing the legal drinking age is to "get drinking out of the high schools."

Meanwhile, an aide to Hunt said the governor will outline his proposals for combating drunken driving during a television appearance later this month.

Gary Pearce, the governor's press secretary, says Hunt had considered raising the minimum the age to 21 as recommended by the Governor's Crime Commission.

But Pearce said Hunt chose 19 because increasing the age to 21 could endanger the rest of the governor's proposals.

Hunt has indicated his proposals may include a driving-while-impaired law that would make it more difficult to plea bargain for a reduced charge. Also, Hunt may endorse a new law that making jail terms mandatory for offenders.

The governor also has said he supports a "dram shop" law making tavern owners civilly liable when they serve anyone who is under age or who is already drunk.

The full extent of the governor's proposals will become public Wednesday, when the governor's bills are introduced on the first day of the 1983 session of the General Assembly.

Hunt is scheduled to appear on statewide television Jan. 24 to seek grassroots support in his fight against drunken drivers.

which also fixed 2 a.m. as the mandatory closing time for the businesses.

As originally drawn, the ordinance would have required game rooms to close at midnight on weekdays and 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

The curfew was extended at the request of Transporter Room owner Willis Manning, who said he may not always want to stay open until 2 a.m., but he wanted that option if customers were "still spending quarters."

The commissioners also authorized the town manager or chief of police to grant exemption from the curfew for special events or holidays.

According to the ordinance, a game room is any place of business that principally operates mechanical games, pay devices or tables for which charge is made directly or indirectly. Examples of game rooms are pool rooms, bowling alleys, billiard halls or amusement centers.

In order for a person to obtain a license, the ordinance states, he must not have been convicted of unlawfully selling intoxicated liquors or narcotic drugs within the last five years or be a habitual user of alcoholic beverages or narcotic drugs. An applicant must (Please turn to Page 6)

Winterville Board OKs Police-Training Plan

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — A basic agreement for training new police officers was presented to the Winterville Town Board Monday night by Police Chief Keith Knox.

The agreement says a trainee agrees to undertake a basic police training course for a period of 12 weeks, and to successfully complete the training, including attainment of a passing grade on the basic training test required by the Criminal Justice Education and Standards Commission. The board approved the agreement.

The board also approved the acceptance of an insurance check in the amount of $4,600 for a Winterville police car that was damaged in a Dec. 11 wreck. The insurance company also agreed to pay for medical bills and the transfer of equipment to another car.

Alderman Leland Tucker said it would be a good idea if spare parts were kept at the sewage lift stations in the town. He presented the board with a list of parts totaling about $900. The board approved Tucker's recommendation.

Alderman John Weathering reported that bad weather had delayed curbing on North Railroad Street.

Alderman Bobby Crawford reported that repairs to reclosers also had held up completion of the electric line project. The repairs are to be made in the near future.

Crawford also suggested that new street lights be placed in several locations. They are:

On Church Street, between Cooper and Blount; Academy Street, between Cooper and Blount; at the A.G. Cox School gym; on Blount Street, east of Railroad Street, and on Sylvania Street at Mill Street. The board approved the new lights.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles said the delivery date for the new town street sweeper will be between Jan. 20 and Jan. 30. The Elgin sweeper cost approximately $42,000.

A letter was read to the board from L.E. Wooten Co. of Raleigh in behalf of Sunnyside Egg Corp. requesting use of the Winterville sewage system. After some discussion, the board told Nobles to write a letter explaining the sewage system was operating at capacity. The request was rejected.

Bernard Willis challenged a $9 service charge on his electric bill, saying he had talked to the town clerk about paying the bill late. The board, after hearing the complaint, said there seemed to be a lack of communication between Willis and Nobles, and approved the reimbursement of the $9 on Willis' next bill.

A special called board meeting has been scheduled for Jan. 24 at 7 p.m. At that time the Community Development Block Grant budget will be adopted and a public information meeting held for persons living in the impact area. Dale Holland of Talbert, Cox Associates will be on hand to present the meeting.

Police Check Out Fliers

Greenville police continued their investigation today of a case brought to their attention Friday involving the distribution of fliers at several local grocery stores.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who said the Federal Trade Commission and the N.C. Attorney General's office are also looking into the matter, said the handbills were placed on cars saying several supermarket chains were associated with United Financial Incentives.

The chief said the fliers suggested that if shoppers would send their cash register receipts from the stores, along with their credit card, bank account or bank deposit slip to the firm, they would get a 1 percent rebate on the amount of their groceries.

Cannon said the grocery firms, including Winn-Dixie, Kroger, the A&P, Big Star and Safeway, are not associated with United Financial Incentives.

Possibly 7 On Missing Plane

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — As many as seven people may have been aboard a private plane that crashed into the Atlantic Ocean off the North Carolina coast Sunday after colliding with a National Guard jet fighter, authorities say.

Coast Guard and Federal Aviation Administration officials declined to identify the occupants, however, saying they are uncertain of the names. The pilot's flight plan, filed before the plane took off from Nassau in the Bahamas, listed six passengers but gave no names, said Jack Barker, a public affairs officer for the Federal Aviation Administration.

"We have seven possible people who might have been on the plane but a flight plan that said six people," a Coast Guard spokesman said Monday night. "Right now we have seven distressed families."

The parents of Jo-Al Kohl, 23, a secretary from Virginia Beach, said the Coast Guard had told them she may have been on the plane.

Albert and Joan Kohl of suburban Cleveland, Ohio, said a woman friend of their daughter, who also lived in Virginia Beach, may have been with Miss Kohl.

William Graham of Waukegan, Ill., said Monday night the friend was his daughter, Robin Ann Graham, 24, of Virginia Beach. Graham said his daughter was Miss Kohl's roommate and worked for a finance company in Virginia Beach, where her stepfather and mother live.

He said he had pretty much resigned himself to the fact his daughter was dead.

"I don't know... They were at 9,200 feet when they collided. That's a long way to drop," Graham said.

Aircraft debris, including parts of a liferaft, clothing and seat cushions, was recovered late Monday 40 miles southeast of Jacksonville, N.C., near where the plane would have crashed, said Garth Groff, a spokesman at the Coast Guard's 5th District headquarters here. No survivors were seen.

Two Marine Corps helicopters from Cherry Point, N.C., a C-130 fixed-wing Coast Guard aircraft from Elizabeth City, N.C., and the cutter Point Martin from Beaufort Inlet, N.C., searched during the day Monday. The aircraft returned to land at night, but the Point Martin remained, the Coast Guard said.

Barker said the pilot of the twin-engine Beechcraft Baron BE-55 was identified in the flight plan as H. Tiffany. Associates of

On-Campus Escort Service To Be Launched At East Carolina

The East Carolina University Student Government Association and the Student Residence Association are scheduled to begin an on-campus student escort service, called Pirate Walk, Jan. 17.

Pirate Walk director Paul Sumrell said the purpose of the escort program is "mainly to provide support for female residents; not to stop attacks. There have been no rapes on campus in the last five years," Sumrell emphasized.

There "wasn't an outcry" for the service, Sumrell said. Sumrell said the service was proposed by SGA President Eric Henderson. "It was one of his campaign promises," Sumrell said.

Sumrell said the service will be available to men or women. "It's for all the students. If men call, we'll send one," he said.

Sumrell said students wishing an escort "from the dorm to the library, dorm to dorm, student union to the dorm," can call 757-6616 between 7 p.m. and midnight on Sunday through Thursday nights, and an escort will be assigned to walk with the student wherever she or he wants to go on campus.

He emphasized that escorts will be provided only on campus and that no cars will be used. It will be "walking only." The escorts will have Pirate Walk identification cards, Sumrell explained.

The escort service will not operate Friday and Saturday nights, Sumrell said.

He said so far 32 students have volunteered to be escorts, including several women. "We need over 100," Sumrell added.

In addition to the escorts, who are scheduled to be on call only two hours each night they work, Sumrell said there are 10 volunteers assigned on a rotating schedule to answer the Pirate Walk telephone and make assignments.

Students wishing to volunteer as escorts have to fill in an application, which is reviewed and approved by Dean Jim Mallory's office, Sumrell said.

Some 2,000 fliers advertising the escort service have been distributed, and telephone stickers, listing the Pirate Walk number and the campus police number, have been printed for distribution to students.

Kites And Plastic Owls Better Than Scarecrow

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP) — Gardeners should give up their scarecrows and go fly a kite, says an agricultural expert who invented a soaring hawk and movable owl to help keep away hungry birds.

Four years of experiments showed that a hawk-shaped kite is more effective than the traditional straw man for protecting corn and blueberries, said Michael R. Conover, a wildlife ecologist for the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.

"An image of a human isn't as terrifying an experience as it used to be, say, 100 years ago," Conover said Monday. "The crows have gotten used to the presence of man. This started to happen after their bounties were lifted."

Another effective crop guardian is a plastic "attacking" owl that appears to be killing a model of a crow, Conover said.

Crop-eating birds, wary of predatory hawks and owls, appeared to be fooled by the kite and owl scarecrows in state experiments from 1978 to 1982, Conover reported in the current edition of his agency's newsletter, Frontiers of Plant Science.

Conover tested his handmade hawk kite on several blueberry and corn patches in Hamden, Glastonbury and Lyme. He suspended the kites from an airborne helium balloon so they "flew" 90 feet above the ground, with any passing breeze caused them to flutter and soar.

In cornfields, the kites reduced damage by 83 percent compared with unprotected fields, better results than achieved by some chemicals or propane-powered cannons that fire about every 15 minutes to scare off birds, he said.

The kites reduced bird damage to blueberries by about 35 percent, Conover said.

The researcher said he invented his "attack owl," by taking a plastic owl and attaching a plastic crow to its talons, "making the crow appear to be struggling to get away and the owl appear to be killing it."

The crow's wings had flexible joints and fluttered in the wind or when connected to a battery-powered motor.

The owl reduced bird damage to cantaloupes and tomatoes by more than 80 percent compared with fields where no scarecrow was used, he said.

Standing models of predators have been used in the past as scarecrows, but as with the traditional straw man, birds became used to them, Conover said. The scarecrows worked better when they were made mobile, he noted.

"These are relatively new types of methods," said Conover. "They really haven't been used, but they're certainly easy to make and can easily be obtained in any sporting goods store."

Clough, As In Tough : He Calls 'A Miracle'

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer
CLAREMONT, N.H. (AP)
— In this hard-working New Hampshire city of 12,500, ringed with mountains and lined with mills, Leslie "Red" Clough and trouble were synonyms for 40 years. Stolen cars. Cracked safes. Armed robbery. That's "Clough" as in "tough," no small irony as rhymes go. He was the sort of kid fathers warn sons about, the sort daughters are forbidden to date. By the time he'd been branded a habitual offender and thrown into prison in three states, Red's life lacked only a suitable ending. Anyone who knew him could have written one.

He could have been shot by another street punk. He could have killed himself with cheap whiskey. Or frozen to death in the city park, too drunk to come in from the cold.

Instead, at 54, Red has earned a community's respect and a governor's gratitude. He spends his days helping problem teen-agers, having undergone a transformation he calls "a miracle."

Red Clough's transformation began when a persistent parole officer helped find him a job as a street counselor. In the five years since, Red has earned an award for outstanding advocacy from the New Hampshire Federation of Youth Services, a spot on the Governor's Commission on Children and Youth, and the position of executive director of an agency called Community Youth Advocates.

He flirts with the middle-aged women he terrorized as a schoolboy, rubs elbows with the cops who once chased him around town, and hobnobs with the judges who threw him in jail.

"If a miracle was ever performed, you're looking at it," says Red, a non-filtered cigarette pinched between his nicotine-stained fingers.

"For years, nobody could do a thing with me. I was a black sheep with red hair. I was a rotten kid."

Adam Bauer, Claremont's chief of police, says Red's Community Youth Advocates "takes a heavy load off the police. When we send kids over there, we don't see them again. Red takes every case personally. He believes in these kids, and he'll go the whole mile with them."

The police chief says it's no coincidence that Claremont's vandalism rate dropped by 21 percent last year.

Says Red: "When I started this job, I said that if I kept one kid from going to reform school, it'd be worth it to me. Last year, I stopped 25 kids from going. Of those 25, only two were involved with the law again."

He says he still gets goosebumps when he hears a police siren, and while his own drinking days are over, he still slips a few bucks to the town drunks now and then. "I love old drunks," he says.

What makes him happiest is that his mother lived to see his transformation. "I had two years to make my peace with her, and for those two years, I visited her in the nursing home every day. She died at 94."

"She just refused to die until I'd made something of myself."

DEAR CECILY: A few years ago I found a recipe you published for Ginger Marmalade. I have tried it successfully several times, but I would like the result to be thicker than it is. Perhaps you can tell me how I can make it so. — GINGER FAN.

DEAR GINGER FAN: Here's a recipe that produces a thick Ginger Marmalade. I hope you have good luck with it. — C.B.

GINGER MARMALADE
(Thick Variety)

- 1 pound (about) fresh gingerroot
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 3/4-ounce package powdered fruit pectin
- 5 cups (2 1/2 pounds) sugar

With a swivel-blade peeler thinly pare gingerroot; slice about 1/2-inch thick. In a 5-to 8-quart saucepot generously cover ginger with cold water; bring to a boil; boil gently for 15 minutes; drain in a strainer. Return ginger to saucepot and generously cover with fresh cold water; boil until gingerroot is tender-crisp enough to be pierced with a fork — about 45 minutes; drain in a strainer. Return to saucepot and generously cover with fresh cold water; let stand 15 minutes; thoroughly drain in a strainer.

With an electric or hand-operated kitchen appliance chop ginger so it is the size of rice grains — do not puree; or use a sharp knife to chop finely. Turn 2 1/2 cups of the finely chopped ginger into the clean dry 6-to 8-quart saucepot; add 1 cup fresh cold water, the lemon juice and fruit pectin. Over high heat, stir until mixture comes to a full boil. Stirring constantly, immediately add all the sugar and bring to a full rolling boil; stirring constantly, boil hard for 1 minute.

Off heat, with a metal spoon, skim off foam. Quickly ladle into clean, hot, wide-mouth 8-ounce preserving jars, filling to within 1/4-inch of top. With a clean cloth, wipe tops and threads of jars. Adjust covers (caps and screw-bands) according to jar manufacturer's directions. Process in a boiling-water bath for 5 minutes. Cool on a wire rack. Store in a cool dry place. Makes six to seven 8-ounce jars.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If I ever stage a telethon, it will be for one of the most underrated diseases of the 20th century — cabin fever.

Cabin fever has been with us for as long as there have been children, but during snowstorms the disease reaches epidemic proportions.

A minister in Iowa recently noted that city's Dial-A-Prayer number increased 125 calls a day due to the malady. "There's no doubt about it," he said. "Cabin fever is a reality and people are depressed when they're shut in and unable to get around."

Back in Ohio when the kids were little, I used to crawl out of bed every morning during the winter, fall to my knees and pray, "Please God, let there be school." For my intentions, I would offer up 18 shirts to be ironed by the end of the day, 30 pounds of hand-washables to be dunked, and a promise to return the bank's call.

Everything gets through to you when you have cabin fever. It's as if you have no control over your own actions. You find yourself sitting there watching a child force a button up his nostril and saying nothing. You see them coloring your marriage license and you mumble, "Stay in the lines." You observe the chandelier over the dining room shaking as they jump up and down on their beds above and you are numb.

You go to the window and for the life of you can't remember what color the lawn used to be . . . or what the downtown area looked like. To keep in touch with reality you count by sevens backwards . . . recite the Greek alphabet . . . or name the presidents in order.

Your mind drifts back to your youth when the most traumatic moment in your week was when you had used up all your no-shower days after phys. ed.

Bitterly, you envy nuns their social life and make plans for all the things you're going to do when the weather clears. These include training for the Boston Marathon, finishing college, and dedicating your life to Population 0.

Cabin fever is nothing to kid about. I've seen women who retreat into the house just after the New Year's Eve party as vivacious, spirited women only to emerge in April pale, heavily sedated, and nearly catatonic.

Help stamp out cabin fever by taking a mother to lunch or offering to carry her coloring book. We're making progress. Due to last year's sparse donations, we have research going on. To date, one rat has responded to a cure for cabin fever.

Now, all we have to do is cure him of his acute alcoholism.

Dear Abby

Kissing Cousin Unaware Of Ties That Bind

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I was 16, I got pregnant by my steady boyfriend. I wanted to keep the baby, but my parents wouldn't let me. Instead they sent me to another state to stay with my aunt and uncle, who took wonderful care of me. After I had my baby (I'll call her Tammy), my aunt and uncle adopted her on the condition that I would never tell her I was her real mother.

Tammy's real father, who had just turned 17 at the time, couldn't accept the responsibility, so as a favor to him, I listed Tammy's father as "unknown." (I don't even know where he is now.)

Tammy is now a beautiful, happy, well-adjusted 15-year-old. She knows she's adopted, but that is all. I am now happily married and have two fine sons who aren't aware that "Cousin" Tammy is really their half-sister. When I see Tammy, my arms ache to hold her close and tell her who I really am.

How can I fight the urge to tell her?

ACHING HEART

DEAR ACHING: Remember your promise to your aunt and uncle, and honor it. One day, when Tammy is of legal age and sufficiently mature to handle it, if she wants to know who her biological parents are, I think she has the right to know — but you shouldn't be the one to tell her.

For now, thank God she is a happy, well-adjusted child, and leave well enough alone.

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes when people call me and my line is busy, they call again and ask, "Who were you talking to?" What should I say?

I'm a respectable 41-year-old woman with nothing to hide, but I think such a question is an invasion of one's privacy. I would never presume to ask that question of anyone because it's none of my business, yet when I am asked I'm never quick enough to respond in any way other than to name the person I was talking to. Then I could kick myself. Any brilliant ideas?

PRIVACY PREFERRED

DEAR PRIVACY: Put the offender on the defensive with this response: "Why do you ask?"

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband is now seven months behind on his child support payments. I lost track of him five months ago and can't find him. I have heard that he has left the state. Is there any way I can find him? I can't afford a private detective.

NEEDS SUPPORT

DEAR NEEDS: He can be traced through the "Parent Locator System," operated by the federal government under the Uniform Reciprocal Child Support Law.

For more detailed information, call your local welfare office. You do not have to be on welfare to qualify for assistance from this office.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "His Wife," who was suspicious of her husband because it took him all day to play 18 holes of golf, reminded me of something that happened many years ago.

Our telephone number was one digit different from that of a nearby golf course. We frequently got telephone calls from people asking for reservations, and we always gave them the correct number of the golf course.

One Sunday morning I got a call from a lady who asked, "Is my husband playing a round over there?"

Needless to say, immediate steps were taken to have our number changed.

School Cuts Ahead

It seems to be official — there will be a 2 percent cut in the spending of $1.5 billion appropriated for operation of the state's public schools. The cuts will have to be made during the remainder of the fiscal year.

Local school administrators do not know where the cuts will be made. There will be a state meeting of superintendents this week which will be attended by Greenville superintendent Delma Blinson and Pitt County superintendent Edward West. Both say at present there is only speculation as to where the cuts will be made and they will receive the details at that time.

The cuts stem from an order from Gov. Hunt to reduce state spending due to the disappointing state revenues. At that, the schools are faring better than other state agencies which have been ordered to reduce spending by 6 percent.

For schools the governor has suggested that there be no layoff of teachers or reduction of salaries.

Most school units usually don't have enough funds to do the job. Now we will see even tighter times for the schools in the first 6 months of 1983. It is likely that local school units will be given some discretion in determining how the cuts will be made. We hope that there will be no reduction of teacher staffs in any schools or, for that matter, any layoff of personnel. Making the reductions is going to be difficult, but it has already been determined that it will have to be done. It should be done in a way that will cause the least disruption of the educational process.

Roads Will Be Maintained

President Reagan has formally signed the 5 cents tax increase on gas into law. It will provide $5.5 billion annually for roads and bridges and create up to 320,000 jobs.

Increasing any tax is not something that President Reagan relishes and it is to his credit that he became convinced of the need for this one and saw it through Congress.

More and more users of government services will be called upon to pay the cost of the services directly and that is what this particular tax accomplishes. We depend on our roads too much to allow them to fall apart. They must be maintained.

THIS AFTERNOON

Hunt Keeps Clout

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — It was one of those balmy March days during the 1981 session when spring fever and the thought of another Legislative Building dry white tuna sandwich sent me downtown in search of peace, quiet and real food. A legislator joined me and, as we crossed Capitol Square, he spotted Gov. Jim Hunt at work in his office.

"This is a sign of how the governor is losing his clout," the legislator said in reference to a Hunt proposal that was hung up in Committee. Legislators already saw Hunt as a lame duck, my companion said. The governor, although only two months into his second term, was on the downhill slide.

Little did the legislator know that while we chomped down our Glory Cheeseburgers, Hunt's lieutenants were chewing up the bill's roadblocks. The next day, the bill was sent to the House floor.

Ever since Hunt started his second term, political observers and reporters have been waiting for the first signs that his considerable clout is disappearing. Governor's traditionally lose their influence in the final two years of their term. "In the final two years, governors will have used up a lot of their leverage — appointments, jobs, judgeships and roads," says Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary. "It's also psychological. They (legislators) are thinking, 'I don't have to deal with this guy any longer.'"

Hunt sold the state on gubernatorial succession — ratified in 1977 — on the grounds that governors would maintain their influence for a full term. With the possibility of a second term, a governor has the power of leadership for all of his first term.

Now, as he enters his seventh year as governor, there is hardly any talk of Hunt being a lame duck. Sure, he faces some strong challenges from a legislature bent on increasing its own clout. But that move appears to be independent of Hunt's situation. In fact, some of the advocates of a stronger legislature are Hunt allies — like Rep. Al Adams.

Hunt's ability to retain his strength rests on a number of factors. Most importantly he is seen as the likely challenger to Sen. Jesse Helms in 1984. If there is any one issue on which the state's Democrats can unite, it is on the drive to retire Helms. Hunt is seen as the man who can do that. Democratic legislators see Hunt as the leader of their party, the man who in 1982 brought them back from the reverses of 1980, and they don't want to hurt the party's chances for the ultimate revenge in 1984.

Hunt also retains great personal respect in the legislature, after four years as lieutenant governor and six as governor, he's just seen as the boss, the leader. Many legislators see themselves as Hunt's allies, common spirits in pursuit of common goals.

Even though he retains much of his prestige, Hunt isn't pushing his luck in 1983. His legislative package is small. (He says he's got a big executive agenda to carry out in his last two years — putting his legislative victories of the past six years to work.) He'll propose a tight budget, and some popular non-budget items.

Hunt's crime package comes at a time when public concern about crime is extraordinarily high. His drunk driving proposals may be nipped at but Hunt is almost assured of getting the greater portion of what he puts forward. Public interest is just too high for legislators to fight Hunt here.

This March, when I again tire of watered-down Legislative cafeteria soup, I'll pass by Hunt's office on the way to a decent lunch. Most likely, he'll be at his desk, changing votes, using his clout.

Other Editors Say Secretary Dole

(Greensboro Daily News)

Whenever a North Carolinian shines in the national arena, our native pride swells too. Elizabeth Hanford Dole, a native of Salisbury and graduate of Duke University, presents us with the latest cause for regional chauvinism.

Last week President Reagan nominated Dole to join the Cabinet as secretary of transportation. "Liddy" Dole, by her own admission isn't especially knowledgeable about bridges, roads, mass transit, air traffic control and the myriad areas that fall within the purview of the transportation department.

But in her case, that's a small hindrance. Dole is a demonstrably fast and astute learner. She is currently Reagan's assistant for public liaison, an appointment for which she had no particular expertise aside from an engaging charm and a quick intelligence.

Before that, Dole served on the Federal Trade Commission, a job for which her lawyer's training did provide some help. Dole resigned that post when her husband, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan, ran for the GOP presidential nomination. He lost, of course, but Liddy Dole learned about grassroots politics in the process.

These wide-ranging experiences gave Dole a useful knowledge of how Washington works. She may not know much just yet about upgrading roads or urban subways but she definitely knows her way around the corridors of power, which can't be said of all members of Reagan's Cabinet.

Nor is Dole expected to be a cowering "yes" person in the Reagan circle. She is a woman of independent thinking. Dole is a vocal ERA booster, although the President opposes the amendment. Dole supported tighter business regulations at the FTC, although the President is a loyal friend of big business. Whether her independent mindedness can survive a White House that cherishes team players is questionable.

Liddy Dole's achievements are not merely professional. Those who know the couple well say that she has been a positive influence on her husband's career. The senator's abrasive edge of the past, for example, has been smoothed. His political rigidities have been tempered with compromise and pragmatism.

Liddy Dole's nomination will probably sail through the Senate's confirmation process. It should.

UNTIL SOMEONE RELEASES THE SHACKLES!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Smoot-Hawley's Ghost

WASHINGTON — Before the opportunity passes, one kind word should be said for last month's lame duck session of Congress: The Senate quietly killed the "domestic content" bill that the House had passed on Dec. 10. Hooray for the Senate.

Only in legislative halls is death a temporary condition. The bill will be born again in the new 98th Congress, and such is the liberal shift in the House that the House almost certainly will pass this miserable measure once more. Raspberries for the House.

The domestic content bill is a reversion to protectionism, pure, simple and untainted by the slightest trace of statesmanship or common sense. The idea is to protect the domestic automobile industry by requiring foreign manufacturers to meet certain "content" requirements for cars sold in the United States. Toyota and Nissan, for example, by 1985 would have to have 70 percent to 75 percent of their cars assembled from American-made components.

In theory this would create new jobs for American workers — as many as 1 million new jobs, in the warped view of the United Auto Workers. The theory is bogus. For every job that might be created in the domestic parts industry, another job would be lost in industries that rely upon export trade. In the course of the House debate, Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., put the matter bluntly: "This is not a jobs bill; this is going to destroy jobs."

Kemp comes from Buffalo,

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

were the depressed steel and auto industries presumably would benefit from the bill. It was an act of high political courage on Kemp's part to oppose the measure. This was also true of J. William Stanton, R-Ohio, who comes from the very heart of UAW country. He refused to head "down the protectionist route." Joel Pritchard of Seattle was another who stood on principle against the bill.

The bill passed the House 215-188, but not before a dozen amendments had been debated. Sam Gibbons of Florida compared the amendments to "putting a Band-Aid on a rattlesnake." There's not much you can do to improve a rattlesnake, he said, "and there is no way you can improve this bill."

One proposed amendment, however, would have been a distinct improvement. It was offered in scorn and derision by William E. Dannemeyer of California. He wanted to provide a substitute title and a new statement of purpose: "This Act may be cited as the Smoot-Hawley Trade Barriers Act of 1982. The purpose of this Act is to reduce competition in the automobile industry, protect jobs in one industry to the detriment of jobs in other industries, and to increase the price of automobiles to consumers."

The Dannemeyer amendment had the perfection of good cast irony. It precisely stated the case. The infamous Smoot-Hawley Act of 1930 was intended to protect Midwestern agriculture and Northeastern industry by drastic increases in the tariffs charged to imported commodities and manufactures. The act immediately provoked retaliatory measures by our trading partners. Over a 10-year period, the value of world trade dropped in half and U.S. trade dropped by two-thirds. Smoot-Hawley was a calamity.

Protectionism was not the answer in 1930, and it is not the answer 50 years later. Indeed, protectionism is a much poorer answer now than it was then, for the volume and the complexity of world trade are much greater today. If the domestic content bill ever becomes law, the ghost of Smoot-Hawley will be snickering around the world. The legitimate grievances of American manufacturers will not be relieved; they will only be compounded.

Behind The Tax Schemes

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although President Reagan seemed at last week's press conference to leave open the door for more tax increases, he had referred that very morning to the revenueboosting schemes drafted at the Treasury as "foolish."

Reagan's remarks were prompted when Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan sought to take a step away from published reports about new tax increases to reduce the budget deficit. Such reports during the Christmas holidays, putting the secretary behind Treasury plans to limit tax deductions on mortgage and other loan interest payments, angered the president.

Consequently, when budget discussions resumed at the white House last week, Regan said he hoped the president did not believe newspaper stories about his tax-increase plans. Reagan responded that he hoped the secretary did not believe subsequent news accounts of his anger, because he knew Don Regan would not be "foolish" enough to take such a position.

Conservative Disarmer

The effort to put a conservative at the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) has now concentrated on former representative David Emery of Maine, defeated for the Senate last year, as the prospective new deputy director.

Two other conservative Republicans defeated Nov. 2 — former representatives Robert Daniel of Virginia and Robin Beard of Tennessee — have been mentioned for the post since Foreign Service officer Robert T. Grey Jr. failed to win Senate confirmation and will not be renominated by President Reagan. But key Republicans in Congress have united behind Emery as their choice.

ACDA Director Eugene Rostow has forwarded to the White House the name of Foreign Service officer Roger Kirk as his selection. Rostow, a moderate Democrat who was under secretary of state in the Johnson administration, has hinted he would quit if he did not get the deputy of his choice — a prospect that might please the White House.

Help For Glenn?

Promise of badly-needed help for Sen. John Glenn's slow-starting presidential campaign organization could be on the way with astute political strategist Greg Schneiders ready to sign on as press secretary.

Schneiders, who currently handles public relations for Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, would fill Glenn's gaping hole in press operations. But beyond that, he could provide a badly-needed strategic overview.

He believes that Glenn should leave bidding for Democratic special-interest groups to his principal rivals, former vice president Walter F. Mondale and Sen. Gary Hart, and instead concentrate on his astronaut-hero's appeal to the whole population. Schneiders cut his political teeth as aide and constant traveling companion to Jimmy Carter during his 1980 presidential campaign and later served as an aide in the Carter White House.

Tip To The Rescue

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill was so concerned that rank-and-file House Democratic militancy for discipline would get out of hand and purge well-liked Rep. Sonny Montgomery of Mississippi as chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee that he personally lobbied congressmen in Montgomery's behalf.

After the House Democratic Steering and Policy Committee kicked Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas off the Budget Committee for partisan disloyalty, it came within five votes of ousting Montgomery as Veterans Affairs chairman. O'Neill, not wanting the punishment of Gramm to trigger mob action against all conservative Democrats, intervened for Montgomery in the full caucus.

A footnote: Gramm's fellow conservative Boll-Weevil Democrats are not happy with him. They grumble that while they were toiling to save his committee seats, he was making secret plans for his Republican conversion with Sen. Paul Laxalt, the GOP's general chairman, and White House (Please turn to Page 5)

Strength For Today

FRANKLIN'S RELIGION

Benjamin Franklin was by reputation an agnostic. Actually, although his beliefs were unorthodox, they were well-formulated and can even be helpful today. For example, on one occasion he wrote, "I think vital religion has always suffered when orthodoxy is more regarded than virtue; and the scriptures assure me that at the last day we shall be examined not for what we thought, but for what we did; and our recommendation will not be that we said Lord, Lord, but that we did good to our fellow creatures."

Urging that the Constitutional Convention of 1797 be opened with prayer, he remarked, "The longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without his notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without his aid?"

A good question, Mr. Franklin, which deserves to be asked more often. — Elisha Douglass

Clean, Safe Food Has A Price

By JOE BIGHAM

Associated Press Writer VISALIA, Calif. (AP) — Everybody wants clean and safe food, but how much are we willing to pay for it?

That was a question discussed recently at a forum here on food safety.

Tim Wallace, an agriculture economist with the University of California, noted that rats and mice nibble on grain stored in the Midwest, and he said people would be "surprised at the number of insect parts" in ketchup.

Yet people who regularly eat bread or spread ketchup on their food stay healthy, he said.

"If we say we don't want anything in the food we eat — animals, rodents, pesticides — the cost of processing food could become quite high," Wallace said. "If it doesn't hurt us, do we really want to eliminate it?"

Wallace said the issue of cost is important because Americans are spending a greater share of their income to feed themselves. The average U.S. consumer now pays 20 percent of his or her income for food compared to 16 percent a few years ago, he said.

About a third of the retail cost of food represents the gross price paid to farmers, and more than half the remainder covers labor costs for processing, transportation and marketing, he said.

"Maybe there is no bad guy," Wallace said. "Maybe the way we are evolving, we are coming to a place where food is going to have to assume a higher cost in our society."

That is where the question of safety and cost come in. Much of the discussion at the forum centered on reaching a balance in using pesticides to produce bountiful crops while preventing harm to people and the environment.

California has the nation's toughest pesticide regulations, said Lori Johnston, assistant pest management chief for the state Department of Food and Agriculture, and Pamela Jones, director of the Council for the Alliance of Food and Fiber.

Ms. Johnston said the number of state employees involved in pesticide enforcement has more than tripled in the past decade. The 7,000 to 9,000 food samples they test each year for pesticide residues represent up to 20 percent of the samples taken by all 50 states and is nearly as many samples as the Food and Drug Administration tests, she said.

Ms. Jones said 79 percent of the food the state tests shows "no detectable level of pesticide. One percent of the time, (the department) finds residue levels in excess of tolerances that have been established."

She said field workers "face the greatest risk" in food production. She said there were 253 reports of pesticide-related illness last year among 300,000 farm workers in California, 75 percent of them skin rashes.

Ms. Jones said people who "fear that something is wrong with their food should study how long pesticides used on crops take to degrade and how likely the consumer is to be exposed to the chemicals."

"Without question, pesticides are poison chemicals man uses to control pests," she said. "They are poisonous to intended victims and sometimes to unintended victims."

But, she contended, "with most chemicals termed carcinogenic there is little likelihood that they will cause cancer unless there is high exposure or (exposure) over a relatively long time, which is not the case with pesticides in food."

Mickey George, a Tulare County fruit grower and packer, questioned whether scientific ability to detect chemical residue levels of less than one part per billion had brought an equal ability to understand what those levels mean.

"Are those compounds really a threat at those levels?" he asked. "Has our ability to test for chemical residues outgrown our ability to understand the answers?"

George defended "judicious use of agricultural chemicals" to provide plentiful crops, but at the same time, he said, "farmers must take every reasonable precaution to protect workers, consumers and the environment."

Police said no damage resulted to the Eastwood car, while damage to the Plueddeman vehicle was set at $1,000. Damage to the Hill vehicle was estimated at $700.

Paula Lee Cobb of Kings Row was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 7:29 p.m. collision on Verdant Street, 200 feet north of the 10th Street intersection.

Police said the Cobb car collided with a vehicle driven by Wanda Gay Hart of Cherry Court, causing $800 damage to the Hart car and $200 damage to the Cobb auto.

Cars driven by Estelia Jackson Barnes of 116D Riverbluff and Jacqueline Midge Williams of Belhaven collided about 4:36 p.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Greene Street.

Officers, who charged Ms. Williams with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $200 to the Barnes car and $700 to the Williams car.

Police charged Linda Diane Little of Route 3, Washington, with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:25 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 175 feet south of the Airport Road intersection.

Damage from the collision, which involved a car driven by Mildred Lowinda Brady of Route 4, Tarboro, was estimated at $200 to the Little car and $400 to the Brady vehicle.

Kelly Lenora Butler of 107 Dellwood Drive was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety after her vehicle collided with a utility pole on 14th Street, 100 feet east of the West Rocksprings Road intersection about 3:35 p.m.

Investigators estimated damage to the car at $500 and set damage to the pole at $50.

An estimated $250 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 12:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of 10th and Maple streets.

Police identified the drivers of the vehicles involved as Robert Otto Horst of Elizabeth City and Terry John Jones of 305C Tobacco Road.

Trucks driven by William G. Cornell of Hubbard, Ohio, and Roger B. Smith of Ayden collided about 9:51 a.m. on Memorial Drive, 75 feet north of the Trade Street intersection.

Officers said no damage resulted to the Cornell vehicle, while damage to the Smith truck was set at $500.

Shuttle Launch Test Goes Well

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A simulated countdown for the space shuttle Challenger got off to a "great" start after being delayed for a day by a power system failure, officials said.

"The report I get tonight is that everything is great," NASA spokesman Jim Ball said shortly after the 14-hour simulation began at 9:40 p.m. Monday.

The rehearsal was to culminate with a make-believe liftoff shortly before noon today, and should prepare the astronauts and ground crews for Challenger's first flight, a five-day mission now scheduled to start in late February.

The countdown simulation was delayed one day by the failure of a power inverter unit aboard the reusable spaceship during the start of a similar run-through on Sunday night. The unit was replaced early Monday, but officials scrubbed the rehearsal and started over from the beginning Monday night.

The latest difficulty was not expected to have any effect on the newest launch schedule set last Friday.

Astronauts Paul Weitz, Karol Bobko, Story Musgrave and Donald Peterson were to go through the routine of an early wake-up, weather briefing, suiting up and entry into the spacecraft on the launch pad for the last 2½ hours of today's practice run.

The new shuttle has had technicians puzzling over a hydrogen leak into its main engine compartment for several weeks. That problem has shoved back Challenger's launch date about a month.

Kennedy Space Center spokesman Hugh Harris said the problem on Sunday night involved a power supply inverter which converts direct current to alternating current and is used to operate fans and pumps aboard the spacecraft.

Harris said the problem with the inverter unit would not have delayed a real launch because of built-in "hold" times in the countdown, during which it would have been replaced.

There are also two backup units, but "we don't like to use backup units on a test," Harris added.

Experts of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on Friday bowed to the danger of an undetected hydrogen leak and decided to do what they wanted to avoid — test fire Challenger's main engines a second time.

The engine test has been scheduled for the end of this month, forcing a launch delay until at least the end of February.

The source of the hydrogen leak into the engine compartment has gone undetected since the engines were initially tested with Challenger on its launch pad Dec. 18.

Technicians feel the second test firing will permit them to trace the leak to its source. They will fit Challenger's engines with special sensors for that test.

Officials fear an accumulation of hydrogen could ignite into a flash fire if oxygen mixes with it in the engine compartment.

Budget Moves Left

The middle-roading Democratic chairman of the House Budget Committee, Rep. James Jones of Oklahoma, will have his hands full with a committee moved well to the left by the nature of its eight new Democratic members.

Rep. Martin Frost of Texas is the most "conservative" of the newcomers with a 50 percent liberal voting record as measured by the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA). The other seven include such liberal stalwarts as Michigan's Howard Wolpe (94 percent liberal), California's George Miller (94 percent) and California's Vic Fazio (89 percent).

With rambunctious Phil Gramm kicked off the committee and switched to the Republicans, the only Boll-Weevil Democrat left on Budget is cautious Bill Nelson of Florida. But other Boll Weevils are warning the Democratic leadership they will join ranks with Republicans on the House floor if the budget resolution coming out of committee calls for too much domestic spending.

deed legitimate. Our industries must compete on world markets where an overvalued dollar tends to price our goods out of the market. Not only Japan but European nations also impose serious obstacles to American competition. Foreign governments subsidize their industries in ways that we do not. Wage levels are vastly disproportionate here and abroad. Our domestic producers have plenty to complain about, but the "Smoot-Hawley Trade Barriers Act of 1930" would make bad matters worse.

No simple answer is in sight. It would be pleasant to wave a wand and devalue the dollar against the yen; incantations work no magic here. Only by patient adherence to sound principles will we work our way out of the monstrous trade imbalance that now afflicts us. A fair balance won't be easy, and it won't come soon.

ECU Professor Guest Lecturer

RALEIGH — Dr. David S. Phelps, professor of anthropology at East Carolina University, will be guest lecturer at 7 p.m. Wednesday in room 211 of the Archives and History Building, 109 E. Jones Street, downtown Raleigh.

There is no admission charged for the lecture/slide, and the public is invited to attend.

Dr. Phelps will summarize the archaeology that has been completed on the Algonkian Indians in north-eastern North Carolina from the Neuse River north to the Virginia border. He will show slides on the type of people, their culture, where they lived and their villages at the time of first English contact from 1584 to about 1650.

Phelps will also offer a brief overview of archaeology in the future in his lecture entitled "Advances in Algonkian Archaeology."

Another lecture in archaeology is being offered to the public at the same place on Jan. 26, with Dr. David S. Weaver of Wake Forest University to lecture on "Human Skeletal Analysis: How It's Done and What it Reveals."

For more details on the lectures, interested persons are to contact Margaret Lane Peterson at 733-7342.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 91 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a final weighted average of 41.49 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights mostly desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,772,000, compared to 1,726,000 last Tuesday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices opened mixed but then moved mostly higher in heavy trading today as major banks nationwide cut their prime lending rates to 11 percent from 11.5 percent.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had trouble climbing above its record high reached Monday, and was off 4.05 points at 1,088.30 after two hours of trading today.

The market's best-known measure rose 16.28 points Monday to 1,092.35, its third straight gain to a new peak.

Nearly seven stocks rose for each five falling on the New York Stock Exchange today.

Big Board volume swelled to 47.20 million shares at noon EST from 40.00 million at that hour Monday, when the day's volume exceeded 100 million shares.

Many analysts expected a cut in banks' prime, or base, lending rates following reductions Monday in some open-market rates and in some banks' broker loan rates, which apply to loans to investment brokers using securities as collateral.

Among the banks cutting their primes today were Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., Citibank and Chemical Bank, all in New York, First National Bank of Chicago and industry leader Bank of America, based in San Francisco.

Chase Manhattan Bank already had cut its prime to 11 percent on Dec. 28.

Among the NYSE-listed gainers today were Xerox 1 to 40%, International Business Machines 1/8 to 98% and Westinghouse Electric 3/8 to 42%.

The NYSE's composite index slipped 0.35 to 84.27.

Free Surplus Grain Is Assured For Farmers

by TERENCE HUNT
 Associated Press Writer
 DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan, promising farmers that "help is on the way," today announced the government will give them free surplus grain for idling up to half their fields.

The program, which Reagan called a "crop swap," is designed to pump up sagging farm prices by whittling massive government commodity stockpiles.

Agriculture Secretary John Block predicted the program will have little impact on grocery prices, increasing the cost of bread less than a penny a loaf.

Reagan, speaking to the 64th annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said, "Because these are unusual and critical times on American farms, we don't have time to stand around chewing our cud."

He had asked the lame-duck session of Congress to authorize the payment-in-kind, or PIK, program, but put it in place on his own.

also be a resident of North Carolina.

The town manager, after giving an operator of a game room adequate notice and an opportunity to be heard, may revoke the license of any game room operator who is convicted of unlawfully selling alcoholic beverages or narcotic drugs.

The revocation may be appealed to the Board of Commissioners, but must be submitted within 10 working days after the license has been revoked.

In other business:

A hearing was held on the assessment rolls for improvements made on Cedar Lane, Willow Drive and Pinewood Drive. Several residents of the streets complained to the board about ditches filled with water that were left in their yards after excavation. Some complaints were also made about not being able to mow yards because of damage caused by street improvements.

The board resolved to correct the problems. "I live over there in that area and I'll see to it that something is done. If nothing's done, call me," added Commissioner Marvin Baldree.

The commissioners voted that the town refund $10.50 per 1,000 kilowatt hours on bills sent out in February.

The board adopted an increase in utility deposits.

Commissioners agreed to enter into a 12-month contract with the Ayden Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce to promote industrial development through visits, brochures and mailing. Cost for the services is $1,500. Monies appropriated in this year's budget for such is $2,000.

The board agreed to form a task force for a utilization study of the Ayden Middle School. Town Manager Don Russell mentioned that East Carolina University Pro-today because the measure did not pass the Senate.

The administration has now concluded it does not need congressional approval to go ahead, but is inviting Congress to endorse the program anyway.

The plan will be used on top of existing production control programs, under which eligible farmers will receive cash and continued price support protection for idling 20 percent of their land this year.

Under the program announced today, farmers will be eligible to take an additional 30 percent of their fields out of production.

In exchange, they will receive surplus wheat, corn, sorghum, cotton and rice, which they could sell or use for livestock feed.

The government hopes 23 million acres of land will be idled by the PIK program. That would reduce wheat, corn and sorghum production by 10 percent, cut cotton production by 20 percent and reduce rice production by 15 percent, the Agriculture Department estimates.

Reagan said the program is designed to reduce this year's harvest so that price-depressing government stockpiles can be depleted. Farmers' buying power now is the lowest ever recorded.

"Let's face it; let's not fool anybody," he told the farmers. "Until farm prices go up, you will be hurting."

Reagan said the plan is aimed "at bringing supply more in line with demand and strengthening farm income in future years. It makes our problem the solution."

Reagan said the surplus commodities "are sitting useless in bins and are overflowing in warehouses."

"Let's put those surpluses to work to help the American farmer. Those surpluses hanging over the market can't help but have an effect on prices."

The president also noted dairy farmers' unhappiness with the 50-cent-per-hundredweight fee recently imposed on milk they sell. Block imposed the fee, which is to double in April, after authorized to do so by Congress as a means of reducing the nation's enormous milk surplus and to shift approximately half of the cost of the $2.2 billion dairy price-support program to farmers.

Reagan told the farmers that taxpayers aren't happy about the cost of the price supports, "you're not happy about the new 50 cents-per-hundredweight assessment, and I'm not happy about any of it. ... If the assessment doesn't cut production, we must work together to develop a better plan for the dairy industry, a plan that is fair to the farmer and as free as possible from government's heavy hand."

On Monday, a federal judge in South Carolina

fessor Harry Baxley may be interested in doing the study as a class project.

A resolution was adopted to repair the metal shell building on old N.C. 11. Some of the work to be performed on the building included cleaning the exterior and interior of the building, repairing holes in the roof and the sides, replacing damaged panels, painting, sandblasting some exterior parts of the building before painting and other repairs.

Annexation of Juanita Street from the housing project to North Hills was approved.

Red-Hot Pirates Dump Campbell, 67-54

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
FAYETTEVILLE — East Carolina's Pirates shot a blazing 74.3 percent from the field — a new school record — and had little trouble in downing the Campbell University Camels in Fayetteville's Cumberland County Arena last night, 67-54.

The Pirates, paced by Johnny Edwards and Barry Wright, rolled out to a 20-point lead with two minutes left in the contest before Coach Charlie Harrison emptied his bench and the Camels were able to cut seven points off that lead.

The Pirates canned 26 of 35 field goal attempts during the game, 14 of 19 in the first half and 12 of 16 in the second for the new mark. The old record was 72.7 percent set against VMI in January, 1969.

But despite it all, it was not a totally happy evening for Harrison, who felt his team got too "cute" in the second half.

"We put on a clinic at both ends of the court in the first half," Harrison said afterwards. "When we executed in the first half — and in the second half — we did anything we wanted to."

"But we weren't sharp in the second half, and I don't want us to play like that. We got too cute out there. We were almost too unselfish in the second half. I like for them to look for a second option when the defense is playing it hard, but when you've got an open shot, you should take it."

In the second half, the Pirates who thoroughly dominated the first half, found things coming too easily and blew a number of scoring opportunities simply by trying to pass off when they had the good shot. Many of those times, the pass turned into a turnover. ECU was charged with eight turnovers during the period, most of them from errant passes.

At least twice, too, the Pirates blew dunks, as both Charles Green and Edwards slammed the ball into the rim rather than through it. Edwards did slam two others, however.

"I really don't care how they get it into the hole as long as it goes it," Harrison said. "But I've told them that a basket is too important for them and to the team for them to be putting on a show for the fans."

For the fourth night in a row, Harrison started a different lineup. This time he had Green, Edwards and Thom Brown in the front-court and Tony Robinson and Wright in the backcourt.

"The lineup may change ten more times before the year is over," Harrison said. "But guys like Thom Brown and John Williams and Curt Vanderhorst don't care if they don't start. Who starts will depend on the makeup of the other team. And we did get a good effort from our bench in the first half."

East Carolina scored the first five points of the game as Edwards tossed back a missed shot in the first 20 seconds and Wright got a three point play a minute later.

Campbell finally scored on a drive by Kim Griffin with 17:13 left, and baskets by Harvey Smith helped the Camels to tie it up at 6-6 and 8-8 before the Pirates ran off six more points in a row.

Green got it started with two free throws and Wright followed with a dunk off a steal. Wright then added two more free throws with 11:32 left.

At that point, the scoreboard clock jumped to 10:00 as it was turned back on, but the gap was unnoticed by the officials and when it was finally called to their attention, no adjustment was made.

Finally, at 9:20, Ron Whitted made one of two free throws, but that was followed by three more ECU baskets, a jumper by Bruce Peartree, a steal and dunk by Edwards and another jumper by Edwards. That made it 20-9 with 7:51 left in the half.

Williams hit a jumper with 4:13 left for a 13-point edge, 28-15, and after two more Campbell baskets, Edwards made a three-pointer, Williams hit again, followed by two more baskets, one each by Edwards and Williams for a 37-21 lead at the half.

Early on in the second half, Green upped the lead to 18, 43-25, but the Pirates "got cute" at that point, and although Campbell was unable to dent the lead more than four points, never really turned the game into the rout it could have been.

Finally, with 2:26 left, Edwards slammed through another dunk for a 65-45 lead and at 2:02, ECU sent in its bench.

"I was really disappointed in the way that last group played," Harrison said after Campbell outscored ECU, nine to two, in that stretch. "I don't want people to think that they're the meat squad — that they only go in to wipe up the floor. They're better than that. They've worked their butts off in practice and deserve the playing time, and I'm disappointed that they didn't play better."

For Campbell Coach Danny Roberts, it was a case of too much defense — both in the first and second halves. "The difference in the game was their pressure defense," he said. "I've never played a team that was any more aggressive on defense. They jumped on us when we came out of the dressing room door, and I had to tell a couple of them that the game was over when they tried to take us back to the dressing room afterwards."

Edwards Top Rookie

CENTERVILLE, Mass. — East Carolina freshman Johnny Edwards was named Rookie of the Week in the ECAC-South for the second time this year, it was announced Monday.

Edwards, a 6-6, 225-pounder from Charlotte, scored 37 points and added 12 rebounds in two games this week.

Edwards pumped in 27 points and pulled off 11 rebounds in a 84-72 loss to Virginia Tech. Edwards scored 10 points and one rebound in East Carolina's 43-41 upset win over James Madison Saturday.

Edwards leads ECU in scoring (17.9 points per game), rebounding (7.1) and shooting percentage (58.0%). He also leads ECU in steals with 15.

Edwards finished the game with 17 points while Wright had 15 and Williams had a career high 10. Smith was the only Camel in double figures with 19.

The Pirates, now 6-5, return home on Wednesday to face William & Mary in a key ECAC-South game.

Hokies Upset No. One Tigers

By The Associated Press
While voters in The Associated Press college basketball poll were moving Memphis State up a notch, the Tigers were being taken down a peg by the Virginia Tech Hokies.

"I give Virginia Tech credit," Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk said after the 69-56 upset Monday night by his team's Metro Conference opponent. "They made things happen tonight at both ends of the floor."

The defeat was the first of the year after 11 victories by the Tigers, who were ranked No. 2 behind Indiana when they took the court Monday night against the Hokies, but were pushed up to No. 1 in the latest rankings as a result of Indiana's loss Saturday night to Ohio State.

"Virginia Tech played exceptionally well," said Kirk. "We didn't handle the ball like we have been. We really sputtered in the spread of offense (which the Tigers went to when star Keith Lee got into foul trouble). If you don't execute in the spread, it can really hurt you, and it did tonight."

According to Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir, "I've had teams play better, but I've never had one play harder than this team did."

Perry Young's tipin with 7:59 left sent Virginia Tech, 13-1, ahead for good and the Hokies used a foul-line parade down the stretch to hold on. Reggie Stepp came off the bench to score 21 points for the winners and Keith Colbert pulled down 10 rebounds and held Lee to six points.

"I thought Keith Colbert did a magnificent job on Lee," Moir said. "He's giving away a lot of height, but he really stayed with him and did the job."

Elsewhere in the Top Twenty, No. 5 UCLA beat Arizona State 87-86, No. 6 Kentucky defeated Mississippi State 58-53 in overtime, Georgetown stopped No. 13 Syracuse 97-92, No. 16 Houston edged Southwestern Louisiana 79-78 and No. 18 Tennessee turned back Louisiana State 59-58.

Top Ten
Rod Foster's long jumper

with 15 seconds remaining lifted UCLA over Arizona State in a see-saw game. Foster finished with a game-high 30 points, with 14 coming in the second half.

Paul Williams' jumper with 47 seconds left had given the Sun Devils an 86-85 lead before Foster drilled home his game-winning shot.

After a timeout, Arizona State tried to work the ball to Byron Scott, but he was heavily guarded and Shawn Holiday's missed a desperation shot at the buzzer.

Kentucky used the free throw in overtime to turn back Mississippi State. Derrick Hord and Melvin Turpin each hit two free throws in a run of four straight Wildcat points. After Terry Lewis hit a layup for Mississippi State, Dickie Beal hit two more free throws to give Kentucky a 53-49 lead.

Butch Pierre hit an 18-footer with 35 seconds remaining in overtime to pull the Bulldogs within two, but Beal answered with two more free throws. Overall, the Wildcats hit 19-of-19 from the line.

"It was nice to get a break, especially on the road, and we did tonight," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall of the foul shots. "We didn't play well against Mississippi State."

Second Ten
Michael Jackson scored 31 points, including four in the final 68 seconds, as Georgetown withstood a furious second-half rally by Syracuse for a Big East victory before a record crowd of 31,327 at the Carrier Dome.

It was the largest on-campus crowd in NCAA basketball history, surpassing the 27,318 that watched the St. John's-Syracuse game in Syracuse last year.

Georgetown blew a 21-point lead early in the second half before coming back to win. The loss was the second straight for Syracuse, which opened the season with 11 consecutive victories.

"We never totally lost our composure," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "During a timeout, I told them they were playing Syracuse, not the crowd."

"We played only 15 minutes of defense, and that was almost enough to win," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boheim.

North Pitt Faces Big Week In Eastern Carolina League Race

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
BETHEL — North Pitt enters the second week of action in the Eastern Carolina Conference facing two critical ECC games that could help decide the Panthers' fortunes in 1983.

North Pitt battles Greene Central tonight and Farmville Central Friday. Both games are in Bethel.

The Panthers are 8-3 overall and 2-0 in the ECC, tied with Ayden-Grifton and Farmville for the top spot. The Rams, who tied the Panthers for the ECC title last year, are 1-9 and 0-1.

Two wins would help cement North Pitt's hold on first. Two defeats, however, and the Panthers would have little room left for any more losses if they hope to win the ECC crown.

"This is a crucial week," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans added. "I don't think it would knock you out of it but you put yourself in a position where you must win your remaining games in order to win the title."

"If you lose both," Deans added, "I don't think it would knock you out of it but you put yourself in a position where you must win your remaining games in order to win the title."

"If you win, that's two giant steps forward toward your goal."

While many are anticipating the early-season showdown between North Pitt and Farmville, Deans said the Panthers cannot — will not — overlook the Rams, who Deans said are better than their record.

"I think the kids know who they've got to play. Greene Central is good, but they've played some tough competition," Deans insisted. "We're not going to go into this blind."

Greene Central, which lost its first nine before defeating North Lenoir last Friday, is led by James Thompson with a 13.0 scoring average.

"They've got a good shooting team. They do a good job getting the ball to their perimeter shooters," Deans said.

North Pitt goes into the game without senior guard Greg Hines, who hurt his ankle in the Pitt County Christmas Tournament. Hines, the team's No. 2 scorer at 11.6, practiced last night but is not expected to play tonight.

Tigers Lack Experience As They Struggle Through Early Season

Memphis State Moves To Top For What May Be Brief Stay

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
WILLIAMSTON — Williamston, a returning letterman, has had its troubles this year. After splitting their first four games, the Tigers have dropped five straight.

Williamston could be headed for a long year, but first-year coach Vann Pennell refuses to give up.

"We're getting better every game," Pennell said. "I really feel like we can win. Honest."

Williamston will try to do just that tonight when the Tigers face Northeastern Conference leader Roanoke tonight at home. Williamston comes into the game with just one win in six league outings.

"I feel like we can compete," Pennell said, "if we can just keep improving on the small things.

"The key to it is playing time," he said. "We don't have one letterman this year. It's just taking some time for the kids to feel comfortable on the court. We've lost a lot of close games but I think the kids can see that we're getting better."

Having to adjust to a new coach put the Tigers behind at the start.

"It was a big adjustment for the kids and me," Pennell said. "I've played basketball all my life, but coaching is a big difference."

"I guess I can say I've blown a few games but they know I'm trying to learn. They've been patient with me and we're getting better."

Pennell said the Tigers' prime problem is that they are falling behind too far behind too early.

Said Pennell: "We're falling behind by 15 or 16 points; then we come back and get within four or five, but we always end up falling short. They're hanging in there, though, and they believe they can win."

Under Pennell, Williamston has 10 players who are considered starters, four of whom form the nucleus for Williamston. Those four are: senior forwards Maurice Carter (6-0) and Roosevelt Everett (5-11), sophomore center David Little (6-2) and junior guard Donnell Griffin (5-10).

Little leads Williamston in scoring with a 14.0 average.

Forward/guard Larry Brown, a 6-0 junior, is just behind those four. Others who have started or seen extensive playing time include: guards Mike Peele, (5-10, junior) and Tony Speller (5-9, senior) and junior forwards James Ward (6-0) and Craig Brown (6-1).

Others on the team are: forwards Quinton Hudgins (6-0, senior), Rodney Connor (6-1, junior) and Keith Perry (5-10, junior), guard Eric Daniels (5-7, senior) and center Joe Williams (6-2½, senior).

"We can go at least 10 deep

By The Associated Press
For the third time this season, there's a new No. 1 team in college basketball: Memphis State.

The Tigers, No. 2 last week, supplanted Indiana today in the nationwide voting by sports writers and broadcasters after the Hoosiers were upset over the weekend by Ohio State 70-67.

Memphis State received 42 of the 60 first-place ballots and 1,164 points from the voters, who made their selection based on last week's results when the Tigers routed the and really don't lose a lot," Pennell said. "I think this has been good. Everybody's playing and they're all contributing. We don't have any one dominate player."

"The thing that is hurting us is our height," Pennell added. "It's killing us. We aren't getting beat that bad on the boards but we're falling behind and getting into foul trouble."

On offense, Williamston is running a "controlled fast break" on offense and both a man-to-man and zone (2-3 and 1-3-1) on defense.

Both have taken time to learn. Said Pennell: "(On offense) we've had to find out what style we could play. We try to be patient and very controlled. We don't have any pure shooters."

Defensively, Pennell said: "One of our advantages is our quickness. That has helped our defense. Our strongest defense is our man-to-man, but we've gotten into foul trouble had to go to the zone."

University of Baltimore 103-57 and St. Louis University 78-64 to improve their record to 11-0. Monday night's 69-56 upset by Virginia Tech was not taken into consideration.

The Tigers held a 54-point margin for first place over Virginia, No. 2 this week with 13 first-place votes and 1,110 points. The Cavaliers, No. 1 until they were upset by tiny Chaminade of Hawaii last month, moved up two spots in this week's voting.

Virginia, 11-1, whipped Maryland 83-64 last week, but has a tough week ahead with games against two other Top Twenty teams — No. 11 North Carolina and No. 19 North Carolina State.

St. John's, 13-0, holds down

No. 3 this week — the highest ranking in the school's history. The New York school was awarded three votes for first place and 1,028 points.

Williamston Girls Are Lacking In Talent

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
WILLIAMSTON — Williamston is short on talent this year, but coach Peggy Taylor said her Lady Tigers won't be caught short on desire or hustle — not if she has anything to say about it.

"We're just trying to hold our own, but we are not going to give up," Taylor said. "We're going to out there and fight."

The Lady Tigers lost their first three games but have since won three of their last six and are 3-6 overall and 3-3 in the Northeastern Conference going into tonight's game against Roanoke.

"We don't have the super talent this year," Taylor said. "They're good kids but we just don't have the talent it takes. We're just struggling and trying to rebuild."

Williamston returns two senior starters — the only seniors on a squad that has three freshman and two sophomores.

Back are 5-7 forward/guard Lynne Sanders and 5-6 forward Lynn Mills, who leads the squad in scoring with an 8.0 average. Also starting are 5-7 sophomore Sonya Purvis, 5-9 junior forward Timberly Rodgers and 5-9 junior center Kim Floyd, a transfer from Plymouth.

The starting unit is small — no player is over 5-9 — and the four reserves are even smaller — and they are all first-year players, three of whom are freshman. Sophomore Regina Rodgers (5-3, guard) heads the group. The three freshman are 5-8 forward/center Lisa Little, 5-3 guard Beth Gardner and 5-4 guard Jan Mills, sister of starter Lynn Mills.

"We're mighty small and if we get into foul trouble we don't have any depth, which has made some of the see playing time before they're ready," she said. "Bertie (a 47-41 victory) was our best game. The rest of the games we haven't shown much."

Taylor said the problem isn't in her team not working hard. They do.

"They go get it," Taylor said. "It's just that on the floor we sometimes forget our fundamentals. They tend to forget what to do and don't execute at all."

Particularly on defense. "Defense is one of our most inconsistent things. It really has been pitiful."

As for the conference race, Taylor said Tarboro is the best by far. "Tarboro should be the league winner this year," she said. "Right now, I think they should take anybody we have."

"Plymouth's got some speed and they could give them some problems."

Two players from the Washington D.C. area, Kit Woolsey and Ed Manfield, distinguished themselves on the team that finished second at the recent World Olympiad held in Biarritz, France. Here's your chance to savor the technique of Woolsey, author of an excellent book on partnership defense.

West's no trump overall showed a two-suited hand, and East's two clubs was an attempt to locate a suit fit. North-South might have doubled profitably at the two-level, but at this vulnerability it is not surprising that South preferred to look for game.

West led his fourth-best diamond against South's three no trump contract. East won the ace and returned the suit, and West made a good defensive play when he allowed dummy's queen to win the second trick. It now seemed that declarer would either have to bring in the whole club suit or else score three heart tricks to land his game. Since he could not afford to lose a trick without having the defenders cash enough diamond tricks to defeat him, the percentage play for declarer is to take the heart finesse. If you look at the diagram, you can see that the finesse is due to fail.

Woolsey tackled the hand in a different, and most elegant way. At trick three he finessed the jack of clubs and then exited with a spade, won by the queen in the closed hand. Declarer cashed the ace of clubs, followed by dummy's top spades.

East had to hold onto his king of clubs, so he was forced to pitch two hearts. However, declarer had a

Ex-Charlie's Angel In Convincing Role

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Miner's lamp and grimy overalls might seem unlikely garb for Cheryl Ladd, but the former star of "Charlie's Angels" is convincing nonetheless as Maggie Telford, who takes a job digging coal when her ailing father is forced out of work.

"Kentucky Woman," tonight on CBS, is sensitive and appealing drama that pays tribute in the process to those noble men and women who spend their working lives deep underground.

Walter Doniger, who researched, wrote, produced and directed the two-hour, made-for-TV movie that was shot on location in eastern Kentucky, has captured a mountain ambience that is refreshingly devoid of cliché.

"Guv'ment?" Maggie's father, played by Ned Beatty, asks in obvious wonder when Ward Elkins shows up from the federal Labor Department to help his daughter get a job in the mines. "Women's movement?"

Luke Telford is 53, two years away from his $126-a-month pension, when Doc Bartholomew tells him what the company physician wouldn't. "The only way you're gonna get the company doctor to say you got the black lung," Luke tells Maggie, "is when he does an autopsy on you."

Maggie's got a job, at Charlie's Chicken in town, but what she makes there, including the nickel tips, won't be enough to support herself, Luke, and her fatherless son, Andy. She'll take Luke's place in the mines.

Luke and Andy aren't the only ones against that plan. Varney, the mine superintendent, already has one woman, Lorna Whateley, on the job, and he's not about to hire another. He's got all sorts of reasons.

"You're too pretty to work in a mine," he protests. "You'd be takin' a man's job. ... What you need is a husband. ... Miners are superstitious about a woman in a mine."

It looks hopeless until Elkins puts the squeeze on the reluctant Varney and Maggie is hired. "Not my lunch bucket," Luke complains as his daughter is about to leave for work. "I worked with those men for years. I can hear 'em laughin'."

Maggie is harassed inside the mine and out. She's attacked one day by Spinner Lynbaugh, the one truly evil character in the film, and is bumped from the church choir by the perspiring, weak-kneed Rev. Palkstater, who's been pressured by Varney's wife.

"What'd I ever do to them?" she asks Luke one day after work.

"Stole somethin' from 'em, I guess," Luke replies. "... What makes 'em go down in that mine every day. ... Then you, ordinary woman, goes down there with 'em."

But her real troubles start when she accuses Spinner of smoking in the mine, and is fired when she can't prove her charge.

"Kentucky Woman" is not without flaws. The story develops in fits and starts, and Miss Ladd, who grew up in Huron, S.D., often seems to force her Kentucky drawl.

But Beatty is near-perfect in his seemingly effortless portrayal of Luke Telford, and the rest of the cast is good — Philip Levine as Elkins, Sandy McPeak as Varney, Lewis Smith as Spinner and Peter Weller as Maggie's boss down below, Dekker Culliver.

And writer-producer-director Doniger has included scenes that appear to add little more than humanity to the film. In one, Maggie invites Elkins to Sunday dinner at her Uncle Billy's, and the "guv'ment" man offers to help Aunt Minnie serve the meal. He's told that the men will eat first, and the women later. Indeed, there are only enough seats at the table for the men.

Billy: "Sit down, Mr. Ward. Women don't need no help. They do it every Sunday."

Luke: "He ain't from these parts, Billy."

Ward: "Boston."

Billy: "Boston? How do they do it there?"

Ward: "On Sundays, we would all eat together."

Billy (after some thought): "Well, let's get them other chairs."

Grammy Contenders Will Get Word Tonight

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Preparations for Grammy's silver anniversary celebration get into high gear today with the announcement of contenders for 62 National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences awards.

While record sales are slumping, Grammy presentations continue a tradition of expanding. There are more than twice as many categories as in 1958, when the first Grammy awards were given to 28 winners.

This year there is only one new addition: the best traditional blues recording category. Previously such records were including in the best ethnic and traditional category, but blues recordings so dominated the classification that it was separated this year.

Winners will be announced Feb. 23 in a gala 25th anniversary telecast on CBS.

This year's Grammy awards show will be longer than ever — a full three prime-time hours. But only about a dozen winners will be announced on camera during the telecast, which will feature John Denver as host and tributes to Grammy winners of the past as well as clips from previous awards telecasts.

The rest of the awards will be presented in pre-telecast ceremonies at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles.

Behind Wheel Of General Lee

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Not every 10-year-old gets a chance to sit behind the wheel of the car featured in "Dukes of Hazzard," but it helps to be the son of a Saudi prince, Hazlul Bin Abdulaziz.

The 10-year-old boy, who has the same name as his father, sat in the "General Lee" on Monday after watching the filming of a scene with a fight between Boss Hogg and Sheriff Roscoe. Later, the boss, Sorrell Booke, gave the boy his hat and a cigar. The sheriff, Jimmy Best, also gave him a cigar.

Publicist Mike Casey said there were two reasons why the boy wanted to accompany his father to the United States: to see the television series being made and to visit Disneyland.

The prince, who is in this country on business, was accompanied by bodyguards, an interpreter, a teacher, two other businessmen and six of his 12 wives, Casey said.

CORPORATE GIFTS TO OPERA COMPANIES
NEW YORK (AP) — Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. will help to underwrite the Metropolitan Opera's spring tour with a gift of $300,000. This is the second year in which the financial services firm has made this gift.

Exxon Corp. has contributed $60,000 to the Washington Opera to underwrite performances of the company's production of "The Turn of the Screw." The gift is part of the opera's three-year, fund-raising campaign, "The Challenge to Greatness."

Nominations for most categories are determined by balloting of the record academy's 5,000 members in seven chapter cities. Categories are divided into 14 fields, but each member can only vote in up to nine fields in which they consider themselves qualified.

In certain craft categories the nominees are voted on by national committees of experts in the craft.

Winners all are determined by voting of academy members. In both the nominating and final balloting, all members vote in the top four categories of album, record and song of the year and best new artist.

The rest of the categories — including the crafts — are divided in 22 fields, and individual members are allowed to cast ballots for categories in up to 10 of those fields.

Peace Prize To Attenborough

ATLANTA (AP) — Producer-director Richard Attenborough, who brought "Gandhi" to the movie screen, has been named co-winner of the 1983 Martin Luther King Jr. Nonviolent Peace Prize.

Coretta Scott King, widow of the slain civil rights leader, said Attenborough "demonstrated determination and courage in his 20-year struggle to bring to the screen the life of Mahatma Gandhi, the man whose philosophy probably was the single most influential element in shaping my husband's belief in non-violence."

The co-winner of the prize, announced Monday, is King's father, the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr.

The annual prize for "outstanding work and commitment to the ideals of peace and non-violence" is the highest award given by the Martin Luther King Center for Nonviolent Social Change, of which Mrs. King is president. It will be presented to the two men on Saturday.

Attenborough is the first European and first filmmaker to receive the award.

Offshore Hunt Will Resume In Spring

By ROBERT WADE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Drilling for oil and natural gas in the Atlantic Ocean resumes this spring with plans to explore previously untouched ocean bottom in deep waters off the Continental Shelf, including an area off of Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Oil company officials say they are optimistic that deep water drilling will uncover profitable amounts of fossil fuels. More than two dozen wells have been drilled so far, without a commercial discovery.

"All the drilling to date has been back on the shelf and it has been very discouraging," said Burton Shullaw, exploration manager for Chevron U.S.A. Inc., which is based in New Orleans.

Chevron U.S.A. Inc. is scheduled to start an exploratory well in April off Cape Hatteras, N.C., and Shell Oil Co. will move a drill ship into position off New Jersey in July, spokesmen said.
"Anything that's going to be found along the Atlantic Coast is going to be found a long way from shore in fairly deep water," Shullaw predicted Monday.

Chevron's proposed well will be in 2,100 feet of water, while Shell will explore land at a world record depth of 6,800 feet beneath the surface.

Officials said the wells would be the first in deep water exploration off the East Coast. Previously, the deepest Atlantic Ocean well off the United States was in water about 650 feet deep.

It would be the first drilling since October 1981, when Mobil capped its last exploratory well in the Baltimore Canyon Trough, an area that stretches to 125 miles off the coast and extends from Long Island, N.Y., to the coast of North Carolina.

The first mid-Atlantic exploration well was started by Exxon in March 1978. By the time Mobil's effort failed, there were 28 exploratory wells. Five produced natural gas strikes, but none in commercial quantities.

"When there was nothing commercial after drilling all those holes, you're obviously disappointed," said Normal Altschuler, a spokesman for Shell, which has leased the drillship Discoverer Seven Seas from Sonat Offshore Drilling for its well.

The U.S. Department of the Interior's minerals management service estimates there are 9 billion barrels of oil and 26 trillion cubic feet of natural gas beneath the Baltimore Canyon. Company officials said the trouble is in finding it.

Sedco 472 will drill in 2,100 feet of water, said Shullaw. He added that the $25 million to $30 million operation would take about 90 days.

Conoco, Union Gas Co., Mobil Oil Co., Marathon Oil Co. and Amerada Hess also are partners in the Chevron project, Shullaw said.

Discoverer Seven Seas will begin operations in Wilmington Canyon about 110 miles southeast of here in an area that is part of the larger Baltimore Canyon Trough, said Altschuler.

Meanwhile, the Interior Department will offer 22.7 million additional acres of underwater land for lease to oil companies during an offshore lease sale scheduled for April 26.

The land is located in coastal waters of 10 states from Massachusetts and North Carolina.

Interior Department spokeswoman Barbara Karlen said it would be the largest area-wide lease sale to date by the Interior Department.

Unaffected By Doctor Surplus

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — While there may be a nationwide surplus of doctors by 1990, there is no immediate need to increase or decrease the class size of medical schools in the state, a Duke University Medical Center official says.

The national doctor surplus was foreseen in a study by the Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee, a group chartered to advise the federal government on physician manpower planning. The study predicts a glut of doctors throughout the country by 1990, and an even greater surplus by 2000.

But Dr. William Anyan, vice president of health affairs, said the anticipated surplus won't seriously affect North Carolina.

He says when he became Duke medical school dean 20 years ago, "everyone was asking why we weren't producing more physicians. At Duke, we responded by increasing class size from 72 to 84."

Now, he says there is a "pretty good state of balance" in the number of M.D.'s in North Carolina.

States such as Illinois and Michigan are producing too many doctors, Anyan said. Those states "over-represented" to a physician shortage 20 years ago, he said.

While there will be a surplus of doctors of certain specialties, there will be shortages in others, Anyan said. The medical education advisory committee predicted shortages in 1990 of doctors in general psychiatry, child psychiatry and emergency medicine.

In 1969, President Richard M. Nixon announced that the physician shortage had become a crisis and asked medical schools to increase their class size by 10 percent.

But in 1973 Caspar Weinberger, then secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, announced that there were too many physicians and began phasing out federal aid for medical education.

If there is a boon in doctors might make it more difficult for M.D.'s to find a good living wherever they choose, resulting competition could be a boon for consumers, Anyan said.

Forestry Meeting Set

A meeting of the Pitt County Forestry Association will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office on the second floor of the county office building.

According to Sam Uzzell, county agricultural extension agent, the meeting is open to anyone interested in forestry and woodland management.

The Pitt County Forestry Association is a group of woodland owners that meets several times each year.

For further information contact Uzzell at 752-2934.

FOCUS

Let the Cards Fall ...
Teams of bridge experts from all over the world are converging on the Palace Hotel in St. Moritz, Switzerland, for the International Bridge Tournament that opens there this week. Contract bridge, a variation of the 19th-century game of whist, is the most widely-played card game in the world today, and yet it was almost unknown before 1930. In that year, Ely Culbertson, publisher of Bridge World, decided to promote his magazine by staging an international challenge match between the best players of this little-known game. The U.S. team won the "bridge battle of the century," and the contest received so much publicity that contract bridge became an overnight sensation throughout the world.

DO YOU KNOW — What film actor is also a leading authority and writer on contract bridge?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — The first meeting of the U.N. was held in London.

To Offer Social Security Plans

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Monday he plans to offer his own proposals for re-financing of the nation's Social Security system in the next few weeks.

Helms, speaking to the Raleigh Rotary Club, gave no details of the proposal he will make by the end of this month or in early February, but said it would probably be viewed as controversial.

Discount Leaf Boosts Program Costs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Farmers should refrain from growing discount varieties of flue-cured leaf because it has boosted the cost of the federal tobacco program, a state official says.

Marshall Grant, chairman of the North Carolina Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service Committee, says part of the reason the amount of leaf going to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation has increased is because companies won't buy discount varieties.

Grant, one of several tobacco officials who met in Raleigh last week to discuss leaf quality, said the ASCS is discussing ways to encourage farmers to plant only acceptable seed varieties when sowing their plant beds in the next two months.

"We feel like it has grown to the proportion that something needs to be done about it," Grant says.

"There are particular communities that have developed a reputation for planting discount varieties," Grant added in a telephone interview. He declined to name the communities.

Grant said buyers have been asked to tell the state where the discount tobacco is found, but they refuse to do so because they say divulging the information may jeopardize their firms.

Jim Graham, state

agriculture commissioner, recently urged farmers not to grow discount varieties.

Federal law requires a grower to certify that he has not planted any discount tobacco. If a farmer does not provide that certification, he is eligible for only 50 percent of the normal price support level, Grant said.

A grower found guilty of falsifying the certificate is subject to fine and reduction of his allotment.

The state agriculture department will give the ASCS any evidence it finds of a grower planting discount tobacco, say George E. Spain, head of the department's seed division, and William G. Parham Jr., deputy commissioner.

Charles King, secretary-treasurer of Tobacco Associates in Raleigh, said rules governing tobacco quality should be more strictly enforced.

He said the issue would concern Tobacco Associates, the flue-cured growers worldwide promotional organization, if tobacco does not meet the chemical make-up foreign buyers expect from quality U.S. tobacco.

Nicotine content is lower and sugar content is higher in discount varieties, causing them to lack in flavor, King said.

Some discount varieties are popular among farmers since they are high-yielding and relatively easy to produce and cure.

Farmers meeting last week asked the stabilization cooperative, which tests leaf for chemical residues, to consider analyzing the leaf's chemical composition as well.

Fred Bond, stabilization general manager, said the cooperative would consider the request.

Growers also asked the ASCS to consider spot checks of fields.

Pain-Killer?

LONDON (AP) — Eight of 10 women who tried electric shock treatment to reduce pain during childbirth said the new method was successful, the Sunday Times reports.

Doctors at Ham-mersmith Hospital who are developing the technique hope it will enable them to use fewer drugs during childbirth.

In the new technique, weak current is applied through four pads fixed on either side of the spine above and below the waist, causing endorphins — natural painkillers — to be released by the woman's body, the newspaper said.

Developers of the treatment say there is no danger involved.

Says Economic Recovery Begun

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Economic recovery has begun and will accelerate in the next four months as interest rates continue to decline, said Dr. James W. Christian, chief economist for the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

Christian made his remarks Monday at a press conference held by the North Carolina Savings and Loan League.

Christian predicted that mortgage loan rates would drop to about 12 percent before mid-year and that the prime rate would fall to about 10 1/2 percent. The strength of the recovery will depend on sales of new cars and houses, he said.
