General Assembly Opens Today

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-nine first-time legislators were to take their place alongside 141 veterans today as the 1983 General Assembly opened with ceremonies and speeches.

Families, friends and former campaign workers arrived to make pictures and see lawmakers sworn in by Secretary of State Thad Eure. Local newspapers and broadcasters filled legislators' offices for opening-day interviews.

Among the legislators this year are more minorities and fewer Republicans.

"We lost some good people but it could have been worse," said Rep. George Holmes, R-Yadkin.

Holmes noted that many issues the Legislature will face this year cut across party lines.

"Everybody has got to be concerned with money," he said. Black membership has tripled from four in 1981 to 12 this year and there will be 24 women legislators, tying the mark set in 1977 and 1979. Republican membership, on the other hand, has dropped from 10 to six in the Senate and from 24 to 18 in the House.

"I hope the presence of more blacks will help not only blacks but the entire state," said Rep. Melvin Creecy, D-Northampton. "At least it will give more awareness of the sentiments of the black community."

Another order of business today was election of a House speaker and a president pro tem in the Senate.

Democrat Liston Ramsey of Madison County was confident of winning a second term as House speaker and already some legislators are urging him to seek an unprecedented third term. Only one man before Ramsey, Carl Stewart of Gaston County, has served two terms as speaker.

In the Senate, 12-year veteran Craig Lawing of Mecklenburg County was expected to be elected president pro tem for an unprecedented third term.

Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green also were to announce some committee assignments today.

The 1983 session could end as soon as mid-May because there is little money to budget, Lawing told freshmen legislators earlier this month. But Ramsey says he isn't expecting to go home before June despite what many observers expect to be the most limited legislative agenda in years.

It has been 10 years since the Legislature adjourned before June.

The hand shaking and conversation among old political friends is likely to dissolve into work after the opening session.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, and Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, hoped to introduce the first bill before the day's end — a package to fight drunken drivers by raising the drinking age from 18 to 19 and consolidating existing driving under the influence laws into one driving while impaired statute.

Reagan Trims Defense Budget

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, insisting "we're not reversing our course," is nonetheless scaling back his record Pentagon spending buildup and seeking a government-wide pay freeze to help curb soaring federal deficits.

Reagan, under intense pressure to make cuts in his proposed fiscal 1984 spending plan, Tuesday abandoned his opposition to slowing increases in military spending.

He accepted Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's recommendation to reduce the military's spending authority by $11.3 billion, or 4 percent. That would mean a reduction in the year's cash outlays by about $8 billion since spending authority spreads over more than one year.

Reagan said the reduction "does not interfere with the production of any weapons system at all ... We are not reversing course."

Pentagon officials said part of the reduction will result from a proposed freeze on pay for the 2.1 million members of the armed forces, an action other administration sources said would be extended as well to the nation's 2 million civilian federal workers.

The federal workforce received a 4 percent across-the-board wage increase last Oct. 1. Forgoing a similar increase in 1984 would save the government about $5 billion.

The administration has less than three weeks to settle on a course for reducing record deficits threatening to grow from $200 billion in 1984 to $300 billion by 1988.

Reagan must complete his spending plan for fiscal 1984, which begins Oct. 1, by Jan. 31.

Reagan and Weinberger appeared to be the last holdouts against cuts in the defense budget. In recent weeks, the president's chief economic advisers, congressional leaders and influential members of the business community had been lobbying extensively for a slowdown in the president's five-year plan for building up the nation's defenses.

Overall, the prospective defense budget for the next fiscal year would give the Pentagon a record $273.4 billion in budget authority, up by $35.4 billion from this year.

Initial reaction in Congress to the defense cut ranged from hesitant support from a leading Republican backer of the Pentagon to complaints from a Democratic critic that the cut did not go far enough.

Sen. John Tower, Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said, "I think you can, with some degree of safety, make some nominal cuts." But he argued that deep cuts might threaten national security.

In contrast, Sen. C. Levin, D-Mich., a member of Tower's committee, said the defense cuts should have been twice as big. "The cuts should be in the big-ticket items, particularly the nuclear (weapon) items," said Levin.

Gas Appliance Service Costs To Rise

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission voted Tuesday night to increase charges for gas appliance service to a level equal or slightly higher than rates charged by local appliance dealers. The rate hike was made in an effort to encourage customers to seek service from private repairmen before GUC ends its appliance service altogether on June 30.

The commission agreed some months ago to get out of the appliance service business, and has gradually reduced the number of service customers.

The $5 per hour rate hike for service calls, which becomes effective Feb. 1, will mean residential customers having gas appliances serviced will pay $25 per hour (with a one-hour minimum charge) during weekdays from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. and $35 per hour at nights, on holidays and weekends. Commercial customers will pay $30 an hour during the normal work week and $35 per hour at other times.

According to a survey by

GUC staff members, in-city service charges by heating contractors and stores selling gas appliance range from $16 to $25 an hour, with a one-hour minimum charge.

Commissioners also adopted resolutions authorizing GUC Director Charles Horne to make application for federal and state grants to help fund a proposed new $10.4 million waste water treatment plant, and approving a water and sewer rate study.

Horne told commission members that a final decision will be made by the state Thursday on Greenville's priority standing for federal and state grants for construction of the new sewage treatment facility. If approved as proposed, Greenville will be in fifth place and be approved for funding this year.

Up until last month local officials had believed that federal and state funding for the project would not be available until at least 1984.

If given final approval Thursday by the state Department of Environmental Management, Greenville will receive 75 percent of the cost of the project from the federal government and 12½ percent from the state this year, so the plant could be ready to go to contract by the summer.

The commission already has some $2 million set aside for the project — more than enough to match the local share of the estimated cost — so none of the $4 million in bonds approved for the sewer plant project by voters in 1979 will have to be sold.

In approving the water and sewer rate study, commission members authorized Horne to sign a contract with Camp Dresser & McKee of Raleigh. The study, which will set water and sewer rates on a "cost of service" basis for each class of customer, will cost $52,382.

Horne told commissioners that GUC received a $38,000 credit from the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency — GUC's wholesale supplier of electricity — for the month of December because of GUC's purchase of the Virginia Electric and Power Co.'s substation here Dec. 10.

Greenville Utilities purchased the substation from Vepco for $2.66 million. Ultimately, local ownership of the facility is expected to save some $85,000 a month in wheeling charges for power.

Horne told commissioners that GUC received only "partial credit" for the month of December.

In other business, commissioners rejected a request from Fred Webb Elevator Inc. for a refund of a portion of some $2,500 he said he lost in interest by having his utility bill paid by bank draft, rather than by check, for the past five years.

Webb said his accountant had checked and found that because GUC had not waited until the final due date to draft his firm's utility bill, he had "lost" $2,500 in interest.

Gov. Hunt Appoints Henry Frye N.C. Justice

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has appointed former state Sen. Henry Frye to the N.C. Supreme Court as the successor to Associate Justice J. Phil Carlton, who announced his resignation on Tuesday.

Frye, the state's only black senator, will become the first black justice to sit on the state's highest court when he takes office February 1.

Sources close to Hunt told The Associated Press Tuesday that the governor hoped to appoint a black to the Supreme Court before he left office. Other leading contenders were believed to be Appeals Court judges Charles Becton and Clifton Johnson, both of whom are black.

When Frye took his seat in the N.C. House of Representatives in 1969, he became the first black in the legislature in this century. Frye served in the 1981 session of the N.C. General Assembly, but did not seek re-election.

Carlton said Tuesday that he is resigning at the end of this month after 13 years on the bench so that he can go into private law practice. Carlton will become a senior partner in the Rocky Mount law firm of Spruill, Lane, McCotter and Jolly and will open a new office for the firm in Raleigh.

Carlton said he "found the position too confining for one with varied interests in business, the legal profession and the civic life of the state."

"There are so many exciting things going on in the world around me I feel that I will miss out on something if I do not move on," Carlton said at the news conference Tuesday.

Hunt said at the news conference that he expects to move quickly to fill the vacancy but mentioned no potential successors. There is no deadline for the appointment.

Carlton said he would not talk about politics until he leaves the bench, but he said he is ready to become an advocate rather than a judge. He denied any interest in running for office in 1984 or 1986.

VOLUNTEERS WITH JUVENILES NEEDED

Volunteers are needed for the 3rd Judicial District Juvenile Court Volunteer Program to work with juveniles one-to-one.

Juvenile Court Counselor Brenda Teel said the program is an effort to help the children establish lifestyles that will keep them from becoming further involved in violation of the law and to enable them to become productive members of the community.

Volunteers are required to meet with the juveniles at least one hour per week to be a positive role model and provide support and friendship. For more information, contact Mrs. Brenda Teel, Juvenile Court Counselor, 752-1811.

Investor Group Will Buy Maxwell Furniture Chain

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A group of investors headed by Grover C. Maxwell Jr. of Greenville has reached agreement to buy the 72-store Maxwell Furniture chain from Wickes Cos. Inc.

Announcements released by Maxwell and Wickes placed the purchase price at in excess of $10 million. Wickes, based in Santa Monica, Calif., said the sale is subject to approval by its creditors and a federal bankruptcy referee.

Closing tentatively is scheduled for Jan. 29.

Maxwell, who operates Andalusia Interiors in Greenville, is the son of the founder of the retail furniture store chain, which operated until 1968 under the name of Maxwell Brothers. He has reactivated the name for the new ownership, Maxwell said, for "sentimental and other reasons."

The Maxwell stores have outlets in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. Maxwell Brothers originally was based in Augusta, Ga., but the new owners will have their headquarters in Columbia, S.C.

Maxwell, president of the new Maxwell Brothers, said he will continue to make his home in Greenville but will commute to Columbia as necessary.

He declined to identify the other investors in Maxwell Brothers.

Maxwell said their would be no immediate visible changes in the operation of the furniture stores. "Whatever will be done will be done gradually, and it will be internally, not externally," he said.

The Maxwell family sold the chain in 1968 to Family Finance, which became part of Gamble-Skogmo in 1977 and part of Wickes when Wickes acquired Gamble in 1980.

Wickes said Maxwell Furniture will record gross sales of approximately $40 million for the 1982 fiscal year ending Jan. 29.

Wickes, which has been in bankruptcy proceedings since last year, said its other furniture retailing operations, Leaths & Co. and Wickes Furniture, will not be affected by the Maxwell sale.

Designers Offer Resolutions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unclutter your thinking as well as your wardrobe for a well-dressed 1983.

Begin by "shopping" your closet. The process of analyzing what's there and still can be used costs less than a shopping spree, especially in these inflated times. Replan and if necessary remove — dispatching off to a thrift shop items you can't recycle and especially those you haven't worn recently. Let someone else get some wear out of them.

Cataloging contents of your closets will indicate that, if you're the average woman, you wear only 10 percent of your clothing 90 percent of the time.

In other words, clothing purchases are often mistakes motivated by impulse buying or glamorous images of how you wish to look, say Alice Meyer and Clara Pierre, fashion consultants, who are authors of "Clotheswise: Successful Dressing for Your Lifestyle." (E.P. Dutton).

Study yourself honestly in a mirror. In the words of Calvin Klein, designer, "Style is a very personal thing... know thyself."

Klein was one of 10 pace-setting designers who fashioned resolutions for UPI in the new year. All were pretty much in agreement that slavery to fads leads to the costliest mistakes.

"I would love to see cessation of women trying to look like the models in the fashion magazines," said Klein. "It's a mistake to follow the latest dictates. Learn what clothes are right for you, for how you live."

Mary McFadden echoed his sentiments. "Above all, be yourself," she said. "By being yourself you can create a strong personal image. Do not fall for the trends."

"Resolve not to be overpowered by fashion," said Donna Karan, designer for the Anne Klein Co. "And don't be narrow-minded... don't say, 'I can't wear this' I can't wear that."

"I'm all for the woman establishing the basics, a basic black long skirt, for instance. Once she has all the basics, then if she wishes she can go out and splurge... a new top, a scarf, a great-looking belt, a fabulous piece of jewelry, something exciting."

"Above all, determine what you want to be. And don't be flighty."

"I think the American public is getting smart in its buying habits," said Halston, the designer who numbers Liza Minnelli and Elizabeth Taylor among his clients. "They're buying to suit their lifestyle."

"I would like to see women dressing more simply, more plainly, more orderly looking."

"What annoys me are the extremes in dress... women in provocative clothes on the streets or in offices. Remember, people judge you by what you wear."

Pauline Trigere is another of the designers in the UPI survey who opposed the shopper with preconceived ideas.

"That can be treacherous," said the French-born Miss Trigere. "I hear women saying, 'Oh, I never wear blue, never green. I never wear fitted clothes.'"

"Be able to change your mind, while being sensitive to your needs."

"And for goodness sake, go to a store you have confidence in and a saleswoman you know."

"I would like to see women confident in their own fashion personality," said Adri, who won the 1982 Coty award. "Don't be led down the garden path by fads."

"I see such enormous amounts of bad taste. And I believe in being modern, not flashing back to other eras in dress. Most of all, dress must be comfortable," said the designer whose comfortable silhouettes helped win her the Coty.

"I don't relate very well to Paris," once considered the mecca of fashion influence, she said. "I don't relate to costume dressing."

"Fashion influence is well dispersed now, with so many of us all over the world. Look at what the Japanese are doing, for example."

John Weitz, German-born but a U.S. citizen since the 1940s, hoped the fashion conscious would "pay less and less attention to Europe."

"I never do retrospective clothes. They're for the museums. Clothes are interesting only if people are in them."

Joan Raines, vice-president of Adele Simpson (her mother's company), said that now was the time for women to be especially quality conscious.

"Rethink your entire wardrobe," she said. "There's such mass confusion, such overabundance... too many things to choose from. When you get home, nothing seems to fit in place."

"Buy a complete wardrobe when you can. This way you can coordinate and not be confused."

"Think pretty. I'm all for the pared down looks, clean and neat."

"I'm most annoyed by the shopper who declares, 'I never wear that color, that style. In 1983, resolve to try something new.'"

Bill Haire, who got his start in sportswear, hopes women will "become more secure in fashion. See what enhances you. Don't be a slave to what the slick magazines tell you."

Hemline vacillations don't bother the designer but he believes a woman "can look quite terrific, and then the shoes are all wrong. That's unnecessary, because there is such a variety of footwear. I don't see the stiletto heel — I call it the slave pump. With so many women working, well, you can't wear that thing."

Mollie Parnis would have women resolving to do less impulse buying and more shopping nearer the time for wearing.

"By impulse, I mean seeing something you think is good for next season," she said. "You put it in a closet and forget about it."

"But what annoys me most is the woman who wants to look like her daughter. It doesn't work and it's just a waste of time and money."

After Pink Slip, Then What?

Few things can be as upsetting as finding a pink slip in your paycheck. More and more North Carolinians are finding themselves in this situation, due to layoffs, companies going out of business and dismissals.

The first thing to do is to sit down with the family and explain what has happened. Families can be pulled closer together by adversity, and you will be needing their emotional support.

The second step is to file for unemployment benefits. Go to the unemployment office nearest you on the first day you aren't working. Payments are calculated from the day you first apply, so file promptly.

At home, inventory your income and expenses. "Cut back on spending and don't buy anything the isn't absolutely necessary," says Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist at North Carolina State University.

If you can't pay all of your bills, contact creditors and see if some arrangements can be made. Sometimes it is possible to make only interest payments on a loan.

"Look for any kind of work. You may not find exactly what you are looking for, but every little bit helps when you are unemployed," Hinson points out. You may be able to pick up odd jobs around your neighborhood.

Let everyone know you are looking for work. Research shows that the majority of jobs are found through friends, relatives and other informal leads.

Check your company's pension plan. If you have worked for the same company for many years, you may be partly or fully vested in a pension or profit-sharing plan. If you are eligible to receive a lump sum of money, you will need to decide if you want to spend it, roll it over into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) or annuity or place it in some other investment.

You may also be able to borrow money from insurance policies. Ordinary life insurance, also called straight or whole life insurance, provides protection and also builds up cash value or savings. You may borrow money at a low interest rate without losing the life insurance coverage.

Once you've checked on unemployment benefits and insurance, consider the following sources of money: interest from investments, welfare, food stamps, cash in the family, selling property or other assets for cash, financial help from family or friends, severance pay, Medicaid union assistance, workmen's compensation, child support, alimony and public assistance.

Above all else, do not give up in your job search. The economy has made it difficult to find jobs, but some people are hired each day. You cannot find work if you stop looking for work.

Homemaker's Haven BY EVELYN SPANGLER

Wallcoverings today come in a variety of types, ranging from hand-printed silks to scrubbable vinyls. They can be used to accent any room in the house, adding beauty to a formal living room and a dash of color to a kitchen, bathroom or family room. Some wallcovering materials, like felt and cork, provide insulation and serve as sound barriers while lending character to a room. Whatever type of wallcovering you install, the result will give a "finished" look to a room.

Attractiveness disappears, of course, when wallcoverings begin to show signs of soil and water. Different types of wallcoverings require different methods of cleaning. Regular care will lengthen the life and color of any material.

Wallcoverings should be dusted periodically with the dusting brush attachment of the vacuum cleaner, wall mop, or a soft cloth tied around the end of a broom. Dust the ceiling first, then work down as you gently brush the walls. Change a cloth whenever it gets dirty so it will not leave streaks on the wallpaper. Use only the dusting brush attachment to clean a flocked wallcovering. This prevents the flocking from matting or shedding.

Most wallcoverings are conveniently labeled "washable," "nonwashable" or "scrubbable." If a wall paper has no label, spot test an inconspicuous area with a damp cloth. If the wallcovering does not change in color or appearance, it can probably be safely cleaned as a washable wallpaper.

"Washable" means the wallcovering may be paper with a plastic coating or vinyl with a lightweight canvas backing. They can be cleaned with a damp cloth. Water should be always used sparingly on washable paper.

When cleaning washable paper, prevent streaks by washing the entire ceiling or a wall in one operation. Concentrate on a small area at a time, and change the wash and rinse waters frequently.

Whether it is papered or painted, clean the ceiling first, using a sponge or cloth dampened in sudsy water or with a spray cleaner. Then, working from the bottom up, wash the walls, wiping overlapping areas in a circular motion. If the wallcovering has to be washed more than once, let it dry completely between washings.

When using a foam cleaner, spray a four-foot square area, holding the can about six to eight inches from the surface. Wipe off soil and foam with a clean damp sponge. Wipe the wall with a rinsing cloth or sponge, and dry it with a clean bath towel.

Lift nap of flocked paper that has just been washed with a soft brush. "Non-washable" wallcoverings should generally not be used in well-trafficked rooms. When they do get dirty, treat them with a dough-type cleaner available in paint stores. Greasy stains can often be lifted from non-washable wallcoverings with paste spot removers. After the paste dries to a powder, brush it off. If stain is still evident, use a second application.

Some fabric wallcoverings are vinyl-coated and easy to wash. Others, like silk, burlap or grass cloth, are especially hard to clean when stained. Try lightly wiping these fabrics with a sponge dampened in suds and water. Make a patch test first to be sure the water will not stain.

Felt wallcoverings cannot be washed as they have a tendency to change color and shrink. A granular rug cleaner may be effective spot remover.

Vacuum fabric wallcoverings regularly to prevent dust accumulation.

"Scrubbable" wallcoverings are a refreshing change from delicate fabrics. Highly suitable for well-used rooms, scrubbable coverings are made of vinyl-impregnated paper or vinyl. These practical wallcoverings no longer look like oilcloth, but have soft matte finishes and tasteful designs. They can actually be scrubbed with a foam cleanser or all-purpose detergent. Steel wool or abrasive cleansers should be avoided, however, as these cleaning aids will scratch the vinyl finish.

Preparing A Wall Surface

Proper preparation is the most important step to the successful application of a wallcovering. Be sure painted surfaces are carefully prepared to ensure good adhesion. No wallcovering can cling to a dirty or greasy surface. Before cleaning, patch any cracks or gouged areas with a patching material. Allow to dry and sand the section smooth. Dull a glossy surface by sanding with a medium grade sandpaper. Then wash the wall with a detergent solution, starting from the bottom up. Rinse and dry thoroughly. A coat of size makes wallcovering hanging and future removal easier. Check wallcovering manufacturer's directions on the type of sizing to use.

Dear Abby

Son Dropping His Name For Wife's

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old son, who is graduating from law school in a few months, is being married soon. His fiancée is a college graduate, and they are both intelligent adults.

Our son just informed us that he plans to take his fiancée's name rather than have her take his name! Needless to say, we are shocked. My husband feels that our son is disgracing our family and abandoning his heritage by doing such a thing. Our name is not difficult to spell or pronounce. It is Orlikoff. Hers is Reilly.

Our son explained that he may one day pursue a career in politics and Reilly would be better than Orlikoff because Orlikoff sounds Russian, and people would be more inclined to vote for a candidate named Reilly.

Abby, have you ever heard of a man taking his wife's name? My husband and I are so hurt over this we may not even attend the wedding. We love our son and don't want to alienate him. What should we do?

PROUD ORLIKOFFS

DEAR PROUD: Yes, I have heard of a man taking his wife's name. Please accept your son's decision with grace and attend his wedding. If you refuse, you will surely alienate him. I can understand your disappointment, but your son is an adult and free to make his own decisions.

DEAR ABBY: I have a part-time job delivering parcels to homes. Sometimes it takes a very long time to locate an address because half the houses on a street are not numbered anywhere that's visible from the street.

I keep wondering what would happen if some of these people needed the police, an ambulance or a fireman in a hurry.

I hope you think this is important enough to print.

D.H.

DEAR D.H.: I do. Readers, if your address cannot be easily read from the street, you could lose more than a parcel!

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for you! Just keep telling people that there is no excuse for failing to write a thank-you note.

I have three children, ages 5, 8 and 10. My job as a parent is to teach my children good habits. When a gift arrives, we have a rule at our house. If it's something to wear, it is not worn until a thank-you note is written. If it's a toy, it may not be played with until a thank-you note is written. If it's a check or money, it may not be banked or spent until a thank-you note is written.

My children have been writing their own thank-you notes since they were 4. (I guided their tiny hands, but they "wrote" the notes, and I addressed the envelopes.) The older ones do it by themselves now.

The writing is not always perfect and neither is the spelling, but the gratitude is theirs, and it is sincere.

Children cannot be expected to know what they have not been taught.

Apartment Livers Can Lower Costs

Items such as insulation and storm windows and doors pay for themselves in lowered energy costs. But since renters pay these energy costs, some landlords may feel it is not worth the expenditure to make the property energy efficient.

If your apartment falls into this category, there are still several low-cost things you can do which will lower your bills, says Sandra Dellinger, extension housing specialist at North Carolina State University.

One of the main sources of heat loss in any home is air infiltration. This can be reduced by weatherstripping and caulking. Since these materials are inexpensive, you may save money by installing them, especially if you plan to stay at the place for a year or two.

Cracks under doors cause a tremendous heat loss and are simple to stop. Sew up a draft stopper. This is a long, snake-like piece of fabric that has been filled with sand and is placed in front of the door. You can get instructions on how to make a draft stopper from your local agricultural extension office.

Have you noticed your curtains swaying in the breeze on windy nights? If your apartment doesn't have storm windows, you may want to put up plastic ones. You can place plastic on the inside or the outside of each window, but take care not to damage the walls or window. Use masking tape or duct tape if the plastic is being put up on the inside of the window. Tacks or nails will leave air leaks, says the extension specialist.

Sheets of acrylic can also be purchased, cut to size and held tightly in place with magnetic strips. This is a more expensive option, but the window can be taken with you to a new home or apartment. The acrylic is also clearer than plastic.

Saving Money, Or Not

When is saving state money not saving state money?

Well, apparently it is when it comes to closing down Dorothea Dix Hospital.

The question of whether the state's mental hospital is still needed came to the fore when Sarah T. Morrow, human resources secretary, recommended that the entire facility be closed down. There were other facilities adequate to handle the patient load, she said.

The recommendation impressed us. Seldom do those in charge of government facilities recommend closing any of them with a presumed savings of money to the tax payers.

The recommendation went to Gov. Hunt who immediately heard the expected protests, particularly from the Wake County area. Residents there looked on the facility as convenient and were concerned that a prison facility might be put in its place.

Finally Gov. Hunt announced the 1,053-acre campus would remain open but a part of it would be used for up to 500 prison inmates.

This the governor saw as making "better use of the hospital property."

"In tight economic and budget times, we cannot afford to squander valuable resources."

We recognize that Dorothea Dix Hospital has a reputation for excellence, but we have to wonder, if the secretary of human resources said none of it is needed a few weeks ago, why is any of it needed now?

Investment Could Bring Jobs

Soon a 54,000-foot building will stand ready for a yet unknown industry, if local investors respond to a Pitt County Development Commission project.

The commission is asking investors to put up the money to build the structure and it will be used to entice new industries to locate here.

Will it work? It has before on two occasions. Two industries are now located in the industrial area north of the river in buildings which were constructed in anticipation that they would be put to use by industries. Thus there is every reason to believe that this project will be successful, too.

Pitt County cannot wait for new jobs to come to us. We must aggressively seek desirable industries. Having an adequate building available has proven to be an excellent way to attract new industries.

THIS AFTERNOON

N.C. Perspective

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — What's a governor to do when, after staking his political reputation on economic development, an international recession comes along and sends unemployment rates into double digits? That's one problem the recession has posed for Gov. Jim Hunt. His solution has been to boast that the state, due to recent industrial development, is now better prepared to deal with bad economic times than it was just a few years ago.

Economic development is the heart of Hunt's gubernatorial agenda. He explains the need for better schools, more arts money, a microelectronic center, almost everything, in economic development terms.

North Carolina has long recruited outside industry and in 1976, the year before Hunt became governor, the state enjoyed its first billion dollar year in terms of new and expanded industrial investment. By Hunt's second year in office that figure had doubled. The state reached a record high of $2.2 billion worth of investment in 1980 and then $2.1 billion in 1981. Using industry figures, the state estimates that Hunt's administration has recruited 175,000 new jobs.

Both Hunt's political popularity at home and his growing national reputation are built to a large degree on these achievements. Here, the impression that Jim Hunt is bringing in new jobs runs deep with the voters. Nationally, recent news stories about Hunt have invariably described him as a "New South governor with a solid record of economic development."

This recession is stopping Hunt's momentum, however. Unemployment in North Carolina is bumping 10 percent and economic development figures to be announced later this month will show that new and expanding industrial development will total less than $1.4 billion, an administration source said. In 1980, 37,000 new jobs were announced; in 1981, almost 30,000. But for 1982, the source said, the job total will be around 21,000.

Last October, in a speech to the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Chamber of Commerce, Hunt began putting forth the silver lining he sees in the recession's cloud. "But for all the bad economic weather across the nation, the sun is shining in North Carolina ... It is a complete reversal of what happened in the last recession, in 1974-75. Then, unemployment never reached double digits. Today, unemployment nationally is over 10 percent. South Carolina and Tennessee are over 11 percent, but unemployment in North Carolina is under nine percent."

The figures have changed since October but the general trend continues. Hunt used an appearance on Bill Friday's public TV show this month to repeat his claim that recent development means that this recession isn't hurting North Carolina as much as the last recession.

Lauch Faircloth, state secretary of commerce, says the state's economy has been diversified. In addition to textiles and furniture, the state has large pharmaceutical, metalworking and cosmetic industries. With workers stretched over more in-

Other Editors Say Answers Needed

(Washington Daily News)

We are all familiar with the hue and cry to "hold the line". None of us likes the idea of increasing our taxes.

Yet, we say again what we have emphasized before. We just do not believe we can maintain a status quo in state and local governments this year with the same tax base used last year.

So as we view the matter, our choice on the one hand is that of cutting back so as to live within the income generated under the present tax base. Secondly, we can maintain the status quo and remain just as we are with a modest tax increase. Thirdly, we can have a general tax increase and give the teacher and state employee salary raises, add a few new services, build a few more highways, add some more state employees, and thus lifting the hiring freeze, and in general do some things we have talked about but never felt we could afford.

Whichever way we choose to go, some answers must be forthcoming soon. We cannot long continue to look at a problem and not offer solutions. We might find that the solutions offered are not popular and not acceptable. But the very fact that they are put upon the table for discussion means that we should very well come up with better answers somewhere along the way.

For the sake of argument, if you were to choose the first possibility — that of keeping the tax base exactly as it is now — just where would you make the cuts? Would you cut the number of school teachers and administrators? Would you cut down the number of state employees we have? Would you seek to cut salaries? What services local and state would you cut?

These and many more questions must be answered by those we have elected to operate our government levels. They must come face to face with the questions. They must set the budgets and they must set the tax rates which will meet those budgets. They cannot walk away or wash their hands of the responsibilities.

In government it is true that the new fiscal year does not begin until July 1. But long before that date the work of setting up the operational program must be started and finished. It takes a lot of time to accomplish the work at hand.

As to maintaining the status quo which will require some additional tax monies, just where would propose the additional money come from?

And under the third choice which would mean rather heavy tax increases, let us say this is hardly to be considered. Our people right now will not stand for it.

Let those who are shouting about a 25 percent salary increase go out and try now to find another job with the salary and benefits their state jobs offer. It would be only a short while before they would get on their knees and thank the Almighty that they have a position with a government that cares.

Just Hunting Any Job

The five-cent surcharge on gasoline is supposed to be used to repair bridges and roads and provide 360,000 jobs. I imagine the states are starting to hire people to do the work right now. The trouble, as I see it, is how will they select which ones to do the repairs?

They probably won't have any trouble finding qualified people from the construction fields, but does this mean the white-collar unemployed can't have a crack at the jobs? They need the money as badly as the blue-collar worker.

"You'd like to work?"

"Yes sir."

"What did you formerly do?"

"Vice President of an advertising agency."

"Then I don't imagine you know much about bridges."

"That was my specialty — building bridges between the advertiser and the consumer."

"I'm not talking about that kind of bridge. I'm talking about one that spans a body of water."

"I'm sure I can do it. Would you like to hear me sing

"Bridge Over Troubled Waters?"

"Do you know anything about piling?"

"What advertising man doesn't know something about piling?"

"You may have to climb

"You got the right guy. In the ad business I was known for my upward mobility."

"You don't seem to have many callouses on your hands."

"That's because I had the 'Flighto' account for the R&F Soap Company. Your hands were always smooth as a baby's skin. Look man, I need this job."

"There are thousands of people lined up for employment. We only want skilled workers who are knowledgeable about bridges."

"I thought Bonzo wanted everyone to go back to work."

"I wish you wouldn't talk that way about the President. If he hadn't signed the gas tax bill you wouldn't be here today applying for a job."

"I'm not interested in applying for work. I'm interested in getting some. I know I'm overqualified, but I'm willing to take anything to get off unemployment."

"Perhaps you ought to try for road work. I understand they're taking on college graduates as laborers. Go and speak to the man at the other counter."

"Hi there. The man in charge of bridges told me you were looking for people to repair the state highways."

"Have you ever run a bulldozer?"

"No, but I know what a pothole looks like."

"May I ask you how many degrees you have?"

"Just a B.A. from Dartmouth."

"I'm sorry we're only hiring Ph.D.'s to fill potholes."

"What about spreading tar. What kind of education do you need for that?"

"A master's in engineering, or a doctorate in geology."

"You guys are really going for the heavies to repair your roads."

"Why not? We may never have a choice like this again."

"So you have nothing for a former Vice President of an advertising agency?"

"I have one job open, but it's a backbreaker. You have to feed a concrete mixer with a shovel every ten minutes."

"I'll take it. I'm not proud."

"I'm sorry I can't give it to you."

"Why not?"

"We've taken on our quota of unemployed men, and I have to hold that position open for a woman."

Hunting For New Detente

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's press conference caution in refusing to publicly acknowledge circumstantial evidence bringing the attempted assassination of the pope to the door of Yuri Andropov was presaged six weeks earlier in secret instructions on the germ warfare issue from Secretary of State George Shultz to United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick.

The Nov. 20 telegram ordered the U.S. Mission not to bring up the barbaric record of the Soviet Union in violating the 1972 Biological Warfare Convention in a U.N. debate scheduled two days later. "We wish to avoid East-West confrontation," said the telegram.

That blunt admonition could be used to describe today's U.S. foreign policy generally. The Foreign Service establishment has triumphed over the Reaganists, pressing toward a revival of detente to be capped by a Reagan-Andropov summit this year or next.

To revive detente, the Reagan administration is being nudged by the State Department bureaucracy toward an arms control position ever closer to Jimmy Carter's. But beyond negotiating positions is the return of Foggy Bottom's practice during preceding administrations not to risk disagreement with the Soviets by offending them with recital of past transgressions.

Seldom has this been put forth so clearly as in Shultz's Nov. 20 instructions to Kirkpatrick. The J.N. debate on a Swedish-sponsored resolution for a meeting to strengthen the Biological Warfare Convention, said the telegram, should be treated "not as East-West" jockeying. The U.S. Mission was told four times in the message not to use the debate "as the occasion for bringing up allegations of (Soviet) violations" of the convention.

Without saying so specifically, that ruled out digressions by U.S. speakers about the Kremlin waging chemical war with "yellow rain" in Cambodia and Afghanistan. Specifically, the instructions told Kirkpatrick not to mention the 1979 Sverdlovsk disaster when a germ warfare laboratory exploded in that Soviet city, inflicting serious casualties. If the Soviets brought up Sverdlovsk during the debate themselves, the telegram continued, U.S. diplomats could reply "if deemed necessary" but in a "very repeat very low key"; they were to proceed "exceedingly gently."

This might be justified as sound tactics to ensure passage of the Soviet-opposed resolution were it not for the general spread of such rhetoric control by the State Department. Refusal to publicly point out Moscow's violation of SALT treaties is now followed by the official hesitation to follow the chain of evidence from the Bulgarian plot against John Paul II to the Soviet KGB to then-KGB chief Andropov.

Deputy Secretary Lawrence Eagleburger, the department's most dynamic figure under Shultz as under Alexander Haig, was described by colleagues as furious when Soviet affairs specialist Richard Pipes became the first U.S. official to publicly link Andropov with the pope (on Pipes' last day in the White House before returning to Harvard). Since then, State Department officials have been urging caution toward Italian evidence in private conversations with newsmen.

To link the new Soviet leader with attempted murder of the pope not only would freeze the new detente's tender roots but probably would end embryonic "back-channel" talks between U.S. and Soviet officials — that is, away from regular negotiations — about arms control. Assistant Secretary Richard Burt, according to his colleagues at State, has begun such contacts.

To revive detente, it is necessary for the State Department bureaucracy to dominate the various arms control negotiations. Accordingly, it is pushing two of its own for key posts: Roger Kirk as deputy director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, and Herbert S.

Strength For Today

MISCHIEF OF THE VIRTUOUS

The great English novelist, William M. Thackeray, wrote in one of his novels, "The wicked are wicked no doubt, and they go astray and they fall, and they come by their deserts; but who can tell the mischief which the very virtuous do?"

Often it was the respectable people of his day that Jesus berated rather than the gross sinners. The Pharisees were the special object of his criticism. Yet no one could deny their virtue. They attended synagogue regularly, gave alms to the poor, and were diligent in prayer.

But Jesus pointed out that people who keep themselves from gross sins sometimes do more harm by their hardness of heart, pride and carping criticism than outright sinners. Furthermore, the virtuous sinner is hard to identify and unfaithfully unrepentant. So let us be sure that our virtue is really what it seems to be and not self-interest in disguise. — Elisha Douglass

Trying To Preserve Farmland

By JOE BIGHAM

Associated Press Writer

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Preserving farm land, especially that adjoining the sprawl of urban areas, has been a major concern of farmers and environmental groups for years.

Farmers near cities often find their property taxes spiraling upward as the development potential of their farms increases, making it more difficult for them to stay in business.

The problem is a frequent one in California, the national agricultural leader, and some innovative approaches being tried here were discussed recently at a seminar on land use.

Ralph Grossi, a Marin County dairyman, outlined a land trust that tries to protect open space on the urban fringe north of San Francisco, and Joe Petrillo of the Coastal Conservancy discussed estate planning for keeping land in agriculture.

Grossi is chairman of the Marin Agriculture Land Trust, which was formed two years ago as a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation to acquire development rights in rural areas.

The landowner and trust make an agreement which "removes development rights from the land," he said. That limits the value of the land because it no longer is available for developing into housing tracts or factories.

"If the landowner is in the right position taxwise, he makes a gift of development rights to the trust," Grossi said. "He can take benefits over a number of years. However, most farmers are not in a position where they need substantial tax benefits to donate away their development rights."

Darwin Briggs, assistant state conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, said the incentive then is for a farmer to sell the development rights to the corporation.

"Sale of the development rights might allow a retired farmer to stay there and rent or sell the agriculture part," Briggs said. "The disadvantage is the liability potential for capital gains taxes, but that may be spread over several years."

A farmer who has relinquished development rights still retains the right to sell the land subject to that easement, Grossi said.

"Our purpose is to see that land is not chopped up into ranchettes," he said. "I believe there is a good chance to raise money from the public sector to buy development rights. We found tremendous support outside the agriculture and environmental communities. People are saying they're willing to put up a little bit if we can save the agriculture economy of the county."

Grossi described an effort by the trust to put three ranches together.

"The best 200 acres on one corner of one ranch will be developed," he said. "Then, the remaining 1,400 acres will have development easements and can be put into more productive agriculture units."

Grossi said land trusts should be formed at the local level because "experience indicates that if it is not done by local groups, it's not going to be successful."

Petrillo said the Coastal Conservancy has used a variety of techniques in 20 projects to preserve about 15,000 acres.

"We concentrate on what is the problem in that individual transaction," Petrillo said. "We're getting calls from people who want to farm but say the cost in the coastal zone is too high for agriculture."

The Coastal Conservancy uses estate-type planning and tries to get property owners to concentrate development "so the outside fringe can remain free of development," he said.

"With any of these techniques, you don't really need government," Petrillo said. "Non-profit organizations or a local community can do it just as long as they're conscious of estate-planning aspects."

Petrillo felt his group's methods can preserve more acreage "than heavy regulation or acquisition techniques."

Briggs said the Soil Conservation Service thinks "the best defense against lands being lost to urban development is to develop a healthy agricultural economy."

But the department also feels land use planning and zoning are necessary at the local level as a protection, he said.

Schweiker Resigns Health, Human Services Post

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard S. Schweiker today resigned as secretary of health and human services, and President Reagan named former Rep. Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts to succeed him.

Reagan made his announcement in a hurriedly arranged ceremony in the East Room after news of Schweiker's resignation leaked out Tuesday.

MARGARET HECKLER

Mrs. Heckler, who was defeated for re-election in November after eight terms in Congress, said, "All Americans are grateful to Dick Schweiker for his performance."

She called her new job "the greatest challenge of my life" and the "hardest assignment in Washington."

She is the second woman to be nominated to the Cabinet in the last week.

Reagan, Schweiker and Mrs. Heckler were applauded by government employees as they entered the East Room. Reagan's announcement was delayed 10 minutes while workers hastily put together a podium for Reagan and an audience was assembled among secretaries and others in a nearby government office building.

Reagan said he accepted Schweiker's resignation "with deep regret" and called him "a trusted adviser, an able administrator and a man who's done an outstanding job as secretary."

He is the fourth member of Reagan's original Cabinet to resign.

Returning to private business as a lobbyist for life insurance companies, Schweiker gives up control of a $274-billion department that oversees Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, welfare and public health programs, including those of the Food and Drug Administration.

Reagan said he has had a strong friendship with Schweiker ever since the former Pennsylvania senator became Reagan's running mate in his unsuccessful bid for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination.

"During these last two years, as head of the biggest and most costly department of the federal government, Dick Schweiker has proven himself in a job that has ground down many lesser individuals," said Reagan.

"Many of our efforts to control the spiraling cost of government depended on our enterprise," Reagan added. "I can say without hesitation that we're proud of the job he has done."

The president credited Schweiker with giving the country "many years of outstanding public service."

Turning to Mrs. Heckler, Reagan said she "brings to the job extensive experience in the workings of government."

He said she has "proven herself a practical and compassionate public servant. I am confident she will prove an invaluable member of our team, and I am looking forward to working with her in the days and months ahead."

Schweiker thanked Reagan for letting him serve in the administration and said that, of his 22 years in Congress and the Cabinet, "the most exciting, most rewarding period of service was working with you as president."

"I'm really proud of the opportunity you gave me," he added. "When you decide to run for re-election, I want to be out there helping you."

he could have earned on the money.

Webb, who has stopped having the bill drafted from his firm's account, said "I feel I have been hooked ... that Greenville Utilities discriminated against me ..."

The commission also awarded contracts — based on law bid — for 50,445 pounds of wire to Rigby Electric Supply Co. ($34,050.37) and 148,000 pounds of 50 percent liquid caustic soda (a 6 months supply), to Suffolk Chemical Co. Inc. ($15,225.50).

Barney Clark May Go Home By End Of The Month

By BOB MIMS
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark has "clearly improved" since the new year began, can take steps with an aluminum walker and appears to have overcome his periods of mental confusion, doctors say.

Dr. Chase Peterson, University of Utah vice president for health sciences, said Tuesday that the 61-year-old retired dentist from the Seattle area could be released by month's end if his recovery continues.

"He has clearly improved during the last two weeks,"

Peterson said, adding that Clark's condition may be upgraded soon from serious to good.

"The heart is working well. He's responding to the ravages of his congestive heart failure before surgery, and the multiple surgeries since Dec. 2," Peterson said at the first formal briefing on Clark's condition since Dec. 27.

Clark has been rushed to the operating room twice since Dr. William DeVries implanted the fist-sized Jarvik-7 mechanical heart in his chest Dec. 2 — once to repair ruptured air sacs in his lungs, another time to replace the left side of the plastic pump where a faulty valve triggered a sudden drop in Clark's blood pressure.

Dr. Lyle Joyce, one of the attending physicians, was asked when Clark might be allowed to leave the University of Utah Medical Center.

"I think we're probably still talking two to three weeks at least," Joyce said, provided Clark's recovery continues to progress at its current pace.

"With respect to his neurologic status (he has) clearly improved," Peterson said. "He's taken (wheelchair) trips to the solarium, out around in the hospital. He's been recognized by family visitors of other patients, waved back to them and made comments to them."

Although Clark has taken small steps with the walker since the weekend, doctors say he must become strong enough to wheel his heart-drive unit — 375 pounds of compressors and backup equipment that power his air-driven heart through two 6-foot hoses, Joyce said.

"We are optimistic, very optimistic at this time," he said. "I've been confident right from the moment we started this operation that we were going to get Dr. Clark home ... and living a comfortable life — I still believe that."

Clark will live at least temporarily in a home in Salt Lake City after his release so doctors can closely monitor his progress. The home, yet to be selected, will have to be modified for the air compressor system.

Joyce said doctors finally have ruled out the possibility that Clark suffered brain damage from seizures Dec. 7, after which he was semi-conscious for days and later disoriented.

"Overall, his mental function has improved progressively. And if you ask me today, in the last three days or the last four days, I'd have to say that he's lucid most of the time," Joyce said.

Peterson said a respirator tube inserted in Clark's trachea Dec. 14 could be removed soon and "he is breathing deeper than he has before."

However, Peterson said, "He clearly has chronic respiratory disease. His lungs do not function well. They have not functioned well (since) before surgery. They are doing all right, but they aren't going to be as strong as normal lungs would be. They probably never will be."

Doctors also are concerned about Clark's kidneys, which "are not normal" because they lack the usual number of blood-cleansing filters. Peterson emphasized that both the lung and kidney problems were present before Clark's landmark surgery.

"These two conditions should not be limiting factors to his sense of well-being," he said.

Members of Clark's family, who have engaged a literary agent in New York City, have indicated that if Clark's story brings a financial "windfall," they would like to contribute a portion of it to the care of the next artificial heart recipient, Peterson said.

As for the $80,000 to $90,000 cost to Clark's care, Peterson said, "We are hopeful the funds will be available to pay Dr. Clark's bill entirely."

Rep. Jones Reintroduces His Offshore Revenue-Sharing Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, has reintroduced his Outer Continental Shelf revenue-sharing bill to the 98th Congress.

The legislation, HR 5, is identical to the 1982 House-passed HR 5543 of the 97th Congress.

"It's only fair that states share in a modest portion of the receipts derived from offshore oil and gas activities," Jones explained in presenting the bill. "For years, the federal government has shared with the states millions of dollars in revenue from inland mining on public lands and from timber sales in national forests. But coastal states have never received one penny of the over $50 billion in OCS receipts over the years, even though offshore oil and gas operations may impose expensive burdens on state and local governments."

Jones noted that "my bill, if enacted, could provide $9.3 million to the state of North Carolina in fiscal year 1984. This would help us preserve and manage our natural resources along the coast, as oil exploration off our state's shores intensifies."

HR 5, known as the Ocean and Coastal Resource Management and Development Block Grant Act, establishes a fund to award block grants to coastal states based on a proportion of federal OCS oil and gas revenues. The amount a state receives would be determined by a formula which takes into account actual OCS leasing, planned future lease sales, coastal related energy facilities, shoreline mileage, and coastal population. From 10 to 20 percent of the monies appropriated from the fund would be applied to the National Sea Grant College Program and the remainder would be allocated to coastal states in block grant form, to be used for coastal zone management, coastal energy impact, fishery and natural resources programs.

HR 5543 of 1982 passed the House of Representatives in the 97th Congress on Sept. 29, 1982, by a vote of 260-135, but was never acted upon by the Senate due to other pressing matters. The bill had 56 co-sponsors in the House and the endorsement of 20 coastal state governors, the National Governor's Association and many regional, local and environmental organizations.

Jones indicated that he intended to move the new bill (HR 5) through the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and to the floor of the House early in the 98th Congress.

Tax Protest Sees Charges

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a self-styled tax protester on charges of filing inaccurate reports with the Internal Revenue Service.

"He has styled himself a tax protester. He has taken the position he is not going to pay any tax," U.S. Attorney W. Hickman Ewing Jr. said Monday in asking for an arrest warrant for Deal Prince Watkins of Durham, N.C.

Judge Odell Horton issued the warrant and set bond for Watkins at $5,000.

The grand jury issued a four-count indictment against Watkins, accusing him of failing to file proper tax reports from 1976 through 1979.

North Carolina residents file their tax returns through the regional IRS office in Memphis.

Watkins is accused of not filing returns in 1976 when the IRS said his income was $28,719 and in 1979 when his income was reported at $27,281.

Talent Scouts Here On Friday

Auditions will take place in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. Performers must be at least 18 years old and should limit their audition performances to three minutes — but at the same time they should be prepared to present additional material if requested.

Voting Law Said Unfair

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court has begun hearing former congressman William M. Hendon's claim that a North Carolina election law on how straight party tickets are counted is unconstitutional and cost him the election.

The 4th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals is considering Hendon's appeal of a previous decision by U. S. District Judge Woodrow W. Jones, who dismissed Hendon's suit Dec. 6.

Hendon, a Republican who lost to Democrat James M. Clarke by 1,325 votes in the 11th District, claims that loss could have occurred because of the way straight ticket ballots are counted.

Under two of the four voting systems used in the 11th district, if a voter had designated a straight ticket vote but then voted for someone else in another party, the vote not only didn't go to that person but was automatically counted for his opponent.

Robert B. Long Jr. of Asheville, Hendon's attorney, said the failure to count a vote as cast "clearly violates a voter's intent."

"The most fundamental right is to be able to vote and have that vote count as you had intended," he said.

"To take away a vote and give it to a candidate's opponent violates fundamental fairness," he added.

Long asked the court to declare the North Carolina straight-ticket law unconstitutional as it is operated.

He also asked that the ballots in the Hendon-Clarke election be recounted, with each candidate being credited for those votes he received even if a straight party ticket had been designated.

Saxophonist In Recital Friday

Saxophonist Scott Emerson Ireland of Charlotte, a senior in the school of music, East Carolina University, will perform in recital at 9 p.m. Friday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

For his program, he has chosen a sonata by Alec Wilder; Karel Husa's "Elegie et Rondo;" Ravel's "Piece en Forme de Habanera;" Pierre Lantier's "Andante et Scherzetto;" and Jack Marshall's "Goldrush Suite."

Ireland will be assisted by his teacher, Brad Foley, and by three student instrumentalists.

There is no admission charged for the recital, which is open to the public.

Had Busy Three Months At Local ESC Office

The final three months of 1982 was the busiest quarter ever for the Greenville office of the N.C. Employment Security Commission, according to Jim Hannan, manager of the office. During this period, a total of 712 persons were placed in jobs. Of that number, 95 were veterans.

In the month of December alone, the ESC office handled 1,602 new and renewal applications, not including daily routine applicant inquiries and job searches.

Hannan said the office has two programs that can assist local employers in meeting the expense of hiring new employees in certain target areas — i.e., a Targeted Job Tax Credit (TJTC) program is available, if an eligible worker is hired for 40 hours per week. The TJTC can save an employer as much as $3,000 per year per employee for the first year of employment, and as much as $1,500 per employee per year the second year.

Paperwork for this program is minimal — all done by the local ESC staff.

Also, on the job training is available for employers that hire eligible workers. The program will pay one-half of the salary of a new employee for a specified training period. Again, very little paperwork is required.

The Greenville ESC office provides priority referral service to eligible veterans. However, other applicants are also eligible for these programs.

Hannan encouraged employers to contact the local ESC office before hiring a new employee to learn if they qualify for these programs. Call 756-2686 for full information.

Pentagon Watching Cut Impact On Reenlistments

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's decision to withhold any military pay increases next year raises the possibility the armed services may have trouble keeping their ranks filled with high-quality volunteers.

Defense officials acknowledged they are concerned about this and said they will watch enlistment and re-enlistment trends in the months ahead.

If necessary, they indicated, the administration could reverse course and ask Congress for money for pay boosts for the 2.1 million men and women in uniform.

If the administration pay freeze should stand, it would be the first year since 1962 that U.S. military personnel would have been denied a pay hike.

The military pay freeze is part of a projected government-wide lid on salaries of civilian workers as well, according to administration sources, who asked to remain anonymous.

The Washington Post said in a related report that the president's budget would ask Congress to raise the full-benefit retirement age for federal employees with 30 years of service from 55 to 65 and also would request increased government and employee contributions to the federal employees retirement fund.

Those contributions now are 7 percent of pay and would rise to 11 percent from each by 1985, the report said.

Patrick S. Korten, spokesman for the Office of Personnel

Management, said, "We're not commenting one way or the other until the budget comes out."

The possible government-wide freeze was disclosed by Pentagon and other government sources after Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger announced Tuesday that he was recommending an $11.3 billion cut in proposed military budget authority for fiscal 1984.

This would result in an actual rollback of $8 billion in spending increases next year, with the rest spread over later years.

Weinberger denied that he had agreed to cuts of this magnitude because of pressure from Budget Director David A. Stockman and other White House advisers, who have urged President Reagan to reduce defense spending in an effort stem deficits threatening to reach $200 billion in 1984.

But Weinberger's aides had insisted, as late as Monday night, that Weinberger was holding out for minimum reductions of $1 billion to $2 billion.

Weinberger told a news conference that much of the estimated savings stemmed from lower than anticipated fuel costs and other savings resulting from what he claimed was the administration's success in battling inflation.

He also listed "some personnel cost savings," as well as postponement of certain military construction projects and other planned expenses which he refused to discuss in detail.

The defense secretary stressed that cuts would not hamper major weapons programs "needed to regain our national security."

Under questioning, he refused to elaborate on the extent of the personnel cost of the savings but said he hoped they would not harm military capability.

"I would certainly hope that whatever sacrifices we are called upon to make in view of the economic realities would not adversely affect either capabilities or morale," he said.

And yet the projected freeze on military pay improvements goes against the grain of Weinberger's past assertions that the all-volunteer force has become a success over the last two years largely because of major pay increases, which he said attracted better recruits and kept veteran servicemen on duty.

The administration's decision to eliminate any pay increases next year must be considered a defeat for Weinberger, based on what his close associates have said recently about the behind-the-scenes tug-of-war over the fiscal 1984 spending plan.

According to these sources, who asked to remain anonymous, Weinberger backed a 7.6 percent pay increase to become effective next Oct. 1. However, Stockman's Office of Management and Budget sought a freeze, these sources said.

As late as Monday night, Weinberger was depicted by associates as strongly resisting the pay freeze idea.

Overall, the prospective defense budget for fiscal 1984 would give the Pentagon a record $273.4 billion in budget authority, up by $35.4 billion from this year.

Actual spending would rise by $30.2 billion to a total of $239 billion, even after the rollbacks.

Watching TV is part of the American way of life. So is leaving the room when the commercials come on. But some people take TV commercials very seriously. This weekend in Chicago, officials of the U.S. Television Commercials Festival will give awards for the best English-language commercials because they know just how important those commercials are. In 1950, when TV was new, U.S. businesses spent a total of $2 million for television advertising. A full 97 percent of their advertising budget went to other media. But by 1981, advertisers were pumping almost $13 billion into commercials to sell everything from cars to shaving cream. Apparently, someone must be staying to watch when the commercials come on.

DO YOU KNOW — How many hours does the average American spend watching TV each week?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Omar Sharif, the film actor, is a leading authority and writer on contract bridge.

IRON STATION, N.C. (AP) — Lewis Ballard's pastures on both sides of Old Plank Road off N.C. 73 once were cattle country. But when the bottom fell out of the cattle market in 1974, Ballard and his wife, Sue, moved from herds to schools — of fish.

"People took an interest in fishing in 1974," the 63-year-old Ballard said while giving a tour of his ponds recently. "So we begged, borrowed and stole everything we could to get into it."

Ballard gradually filled four irrigation ponds on his 107-acre farm with catfish, carp, bass, trout and bream.

Now Ballard's Catfish Country is one of the most prolific fishing holes around, with competitive catfishing seven days a week from daylight to dark and prize carp fishing tournaments on weekends.

At first, Ballard stocked his ponds with some bass and trout from a neighbor's private pond. But the biggest part of his fish were non-game fish, like carp and catfish, which he bought from commercial haulers.

Their size varied, so in March 1979, Ballard started hauling his own fish in a 12,000-pound-capacity truck. Ballard hauls his carp and catfish from the Potomac River separating Maryland and Virginia and from Lake Erie between Ohio and

Sent Posse

For Jurors

JOLIETTE, Quebec (AP) — The sheriff sent out a posse, but many residents in this town of 13,000 made a quick getaway after a judge tried a no-excuses way to fill a jury box for a murder trial.

Judge Jean-Guy Boilard of Quebec Superior Court told Sheriff Jeanne Matte to round up 100 candidates at random after an initial pool of 225 candidates produced only 11 jurors.

But many people heard news reports that jury duty could involve a six-week separation from family and jobs, so they quickly scurried for cover, officials said.

"It's not going too well," Matte said before completing his roundup Tuesday. "My feet are frozen, the people are afraid and they are hiding."

The sheriff was accompanied by four police officers who put prospective jurors on a school bus to be taken to court.

After the first bus was unloaded, the sheriff looked around the streets in this city 30 miles north of Montreal, saying: "It's a real ghost town now."

More candidates were pressed into service when they were rounded up at a suburban shopping center.

Ten prisoners from the Archambault Institute are to be tried on charges of murdering two prison guards during a riot last July.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thai military leaders this week are urging the chairman of the U.S. joint chiefs of staff, Gen. John Vessey, to support establishment of a U.S. "war reserve contingency pool" in the Pacific region and to speed up delivery of American weapons to Thailand.

Thailand's supreme military commander, Gen. Saiyud Kerdphal, proposed the contingency pool at a regional conference last month. It would stockpile small arms, aircraft engines, spare parts and tactical equipment for use by threatened small nations lacking the financial means to maintain their own reserves.

NOW Officially Arrested In 1965 Louisiana Murder

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leaders of the California chapter of the National Organization for Women said the arrest of their top officer for a 1965 murder in New Orleans is "clear harassment" and promised to stand by her "100 percent."

Ginny Eleanor Foat, 42, was arrested Tuesday on a murder warrant from Louisiana. Officials there said they had believed until recently that Ms. Foat was in a Nevada prison for another slaying.

The story of her arrest sent shock waves through Los Angeles' feminist and political circles, where Ms. Foat was admired by her peers as a forceful advocate for liberal causes. Some California NOW officials said they had long known of the allegations and did not believe them.

GINNY ELEANOR FOAT

Law enforcement officials said Tuesday that Ms. Foat has had a number of aliases, was once known as Virginia Galluzzo and had worked as a Bourbon Street barmaid in New Orleans.

Police said her ex-husband, John Sidote, had implicated Ms. Foat in the two 1965 killings: the New Orleans robbery-murder of a South American man and the Nevada killing of a San Francisco hotel executive. The Nevada charges were dismissed when Sidote refused to testify, authorities there said.

California NOW officials questioned the timing of the arrest. They said in a statement that Louisiana had twice tried to extradite Ms. Foat, but had dropped the proceedings because of lack of evidence.

"We consider this arrest to be clear harassment ... and we are backing Ginny 100 percent," the NOW statement said.

Ms. Foat, a Democratic Party activist, was being held without bail pending arraignment today. California NOW leaders said they would seek to have her released on her own recognizance.

Ms. Foat was arrested at suburban Hollywood-Burbank Airport as she and a friend were waiting to board a plane, said Los Angeles Police Cmdr. William Booth.

Although the arrest warrant was for Virginia Galluzzo, the name Ginny Foat also has been mentioned in documents, and "It is well established that Ginny Foat is Virginia Galluzzo," Booth said.

"I hope it's a case of mistaken identity," said state Sen. Diane Watson, D-Los Angeles. "She's been a hard worker dedicated to the cause of women's issues."

As the first full-time, paid president of California NOW, Ms. Foat is responsible for daily administration, policy and supervision of the state's 40 chapters with 30,000 members. She planned to enter law school this fall.

In Louisiana, Jefferson Parish Sheriff Harry Lee said Ms. Foat is wanted in the slaying of Moises Chayo, 62, of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Chayo's bludgeoned body was found Dec. 11, 1965, in a weedy tract in Metairie. Lee said detectives believed he was killed two or three weeks earlier, after being robbed of about $1,400.

Lee said Sidote implicated Ms. Foat in the killing in 1977, after he walked up to a New York City policeman and said he wanted to confess to some robbery-murders.

The sheriff said Sidote, 44, told officers he and Ms. Foat — then going by the name Virginia Galluzzo — had killed a man in New Orleans.

Authorities said he gave details that matched the Chayo killing.

Lee said the couple lived together for a time in New Orleans, later got married and subsequently divorced. Sidote told authorities his wife worked as a barmaid on Bourbon Street before they left town.

In the Nevada case, court records show Sidote implicated himself and Ms. Foat in the 1965 Lake Tahoe murder of Donald Fitting, a San Francisco hotel executive.

Ms. Foat was extradited to Nevada in 1977 to face murder charges in the that case. Sidote had agreed to plead guilty to voluntary manslaughter and robbery in exchange for his testimony, Douglas County District Attorney Brent Kolvik said Tuesday.

But after Sidote was sentenced to 25 years in prison, where he is still serving time, he refused to testify and a judge dismissed the murder charge against her, Kolvik said.

Lee said his office had assumed that Ms. Foat had been convicted along with Sidote, and Louisiana authorities forgot about her. Kolvik said he did not know why she wasn't returned to Louisiana.

It was only about 10 days ago that Louisiana authorities learned of her whereabouts and asked California officials to arrest her, Lee said.

Ms. Foat was elected as California NOW coordinator — the equivalent of president — in July 1981. Last year, she was defeated by a handful of votes in a bid for a national NOW vice presidency. She is a delegate to the state Democratic convention in Sacramento this weekend.

In 1980, Ms. Foat was elected as a delegate to the Democratic national convention.

"Many in the leadership of NOW knew of these charges before electing Ginny to office and knew the charges were false," the NOW statement said.

Kay Tsenin, vice president of California NOW, said she and some of the senior members of the feminist group also knew Ms. Foat had been implicated in a second murder.

"She was gaining in political influence and they are trying to discredit her," Ms. Tsenin said. "She hasn't been on the run or hiding. She's been highly visible, on TV and everything. Why now?"

ALLEGED BIGAMIST — Giovanni Vigliotto listens to testimony in his trial in Phoenix. Vigliotto allegedly has married more than 100 women and is charged with bigamy and fraud. (AP Laserphoto)

Married Despite 'Crime Disclosures'

By STEPHEN J. HATTLEY
Associated Press Writer
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A woman who says she was swindled and abandoned by an admitted bigamist says she married him despite his assertions that he was involved in organized crime and was wanted for questioning in gangland slayings.

Giovanni Vigliotto, 53, who admits he has been married 82 times, is being tried on one count each of bigamy and fraud for allegedly bilking Patricia Gardiner out of $36,500 in cash and property when he disappeared two weeks after their marriage on Nov. 16, 1981.

On the witness stand a second day Tuesday, Ms. Gardiner, 42, a real estate agent and part-time bar employee in suburban Mesa, acknowledged under cross-examination that Vigliotto had told her that his family was involved in gambling interests in Nevada and elsewhere, that he had dealings with the Cosa Nostra in Blythe, Calif., and that he was being sought on a federal warrant involving 68 murders in New Jersey.

Ms. Gardiner also said Vigliotto revealed during their eight-day courtship that he was being sought on a New Jersey subpoena requiring him to testify against members of his family in a gambling case.

Asked how she felt about the disclosures, Ms. Gardiner said, "It didn't alarm me to any great extent."

She testified that Vigliotto told her of his purported involvement in underworld crime and killings after they sold her house and were driving to California, en route to what she believed was his home in Hawaii, complete with servants and bodyguards.

After Vigliotto abandoned her in San Diego, Ms. Gardiner testified, she considered suicide, but only concern about who would take care of her dog kept her from leaping to her death from a hotel window.

When Vigliotto failed to show up for a midnight meeting at the hotel, Ms. Gardiner realized what had happened and she thought, "How easy it would be to jump."

But she glanced over at her dog asleep on the bed, and wondered, "Who's going to take care of Mindy?"

Ms. Gardiner also testified that after their marriage, Vigliotto discussed plans to operate a fraudulent scheme in Apache Junction, a Phoenix suburb where the couple had met at a flea market.

He was considering the scam "just for kicks, because he liked to play with people," she said, explaining that the plan called for selling prepaid items made from brass and then failing to deliver them.

Under direct examination earlier Tuesday, Ms. Gardiner testified how Vigliotto's whirlwind courtship quickly turned into a hectic marriage of pressure for money, new credit cards and vanishing personal goods.

She said he talked her into disconnecting the telephones at home so they could be alone, and he pushed her to get more credit cards and extend existing lines of credit.

"Many times he would wake me up to tell me endearments or to say that he was hungry," Ms. Gardiner testified. "He kept me up half the night. He was short with me. He just wanted me to hurry up all the time."

Some N.C. Banks Join In Cutting Prime Rate

By The Associated Press
Several North Carolina banks followed the lead of the nation's major banks Tuesday by lowering the prime rate from 11.5 percent to 11 percent — its lowest level in 2½ years.

Spokesmen for Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., First Union National Bank and the Northwestern Bank said they were lowering their prime rates to 11 percent.

Some analysts said they expected continued declines because of sharp drops in banks' costs of obtaining funds and of weak demand for business credit in the lingering recession. They disagreed about whether the prime would fall below 10 percent.

The prime rate has not been in single digits since October 1978, when it rose from 9.75 percent to 10 percent, heading for a record high of 21.5 percent in December 1980.

Otto Eckstein, president of Data Resources Inc., a research firm in Lexington, Mass., predicted the prime would "bottom" at an average 10.85 percent in the first quarter of this year and rise to just over 12 percent by year's end.

David Jones, economist with the Wall Street firm Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., predicted the prime would drop below 10 percent by late March. It would come sooner, he said, except banks want to maintain a "cushion" between their cost of funds and the yield they receive from making loans.

Jeffrey Leeds, money market economist with Chase Manhattan Bank, which had been alone at an 11 percent prime rate since Dec. 28, said he expected further cuts in the prime. But he said they hinged on decreases in other interest rates, including the federal funds rate that banks charge on overnight loans among themselves, the Federal Reserve's discount rate on loans to banks and what market forces dictate banks have to pay on long-term certificates of deposit, a source of considerable bank funds.

"I do expect market rates of interest are likely to decline further, but I don't know where the bottom is," he said.

The prime rate has dropped from 16.5 percent in mid-July, while the Fed's discount rate has been trimmed from 12 percent to 8.5 percent and the federal funds rate has fallen from about 15 percent to about 8 percent.

The prime is the base on which banks figure interest charges on loans to corporate customers. Companies with top credit ratings can negoti-

Lebanon Rebuilding Army After Years Of Neglect

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — With the help of the United States, President Amin Gemayel has launched a crash program to rebuild and enlarge the 21,600-man Lebanese army so it can restore order in his bitterly divided nation.

Years of neglect and the division of the country into Christian and Moslem enclaves ruled by private militias have left the army demoralized and unable to extend state authority beyond the edges of the capital.

But Lebanese officials and western diplomats say the rebuilding program may take years and for now the army remains militarily weak and politically suspect.

"We cannot expect the operation to modernize and rebuild the army to be complete in a day, a month or a year," Defense Minister Issam Khoury said in an interview.

Khoury said the 4,000-man multinational peacekeeping force that includes 1,200 U.S. Marines should be tripled in size and stay in Lebanon "at least a year" to support the army's deployment elsewhere in the 4,015-square-mile country.

Using emergency powers, Gemayel has decreed a law of national conscription to enlarge the army to 60,000 men, and Khoury said $1 billion in arms and training is needed to strengthen the armed forces.

The 40-year-old Christian president has also sought to remove deadwood in the army's upper ranks, enticing generals and colonels into early retirement and sharply reducing the number of soldiers who chauffeur, cook and clean for the senior staff.

"There is a class system in the military here," said one western European analyst. "Enlisted men are treated badly while officers tend to be wealthy and have privileges such as beach clubs and cars."

The problem is compounded by the fact that the 2,200-man officer corps is 60 percent Christian while the percentage is reversed in the ranks where most of the soldiers are Shiite Moslems from rural areas, western analysts say.

The delicate sectarian balance fell apart during the 1975-76 civil war and continues to be an obstacle to rebuilding.

"Christian officers are reluctant sometimes to give orders to Moslem troops for fear they won't be carried out and as a result nothing gets done and there is little hard training," said one NATO country military man with long experience in Lebanon. "It is not a matter of equipment but command structure."

The Gemayel government's use of the army has also been controversial politically, especially after more than 2,000 people were arrested when the army swept through Palestinian refugee camps and the Moslem sector of Beirut last year.

Moslem politicians, including Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, protested that the army was not using the same vigor to purge Christian East Beirut of militiamen belonging to Gemayel's Phalange Party, which has 4,000 men under arms. Moslem politicians threatened to form their own militia unless the Christian Phalangists were disbanded.

Officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, who declined to be identified for fear of reprisals, accused the government of using the army as a tool to force Palestinian civilians to flee the country.

The PLO also claimed that five Palestinian activists died while in detention.

Khoury rejected the accusations of torture and said: "The army cannot possibly deal with terrorist cells wearing a silk glove. The army will have to be an army and we don't seek to win the approval or gratitude of terrorists or those who harmed the nation."

Khoury said the army was holding "less than 1,000" prisoners at year's end.

Militarily, Lebanon is counting heavily on the United States to help re-equip and train the fledgling army. The U.S. government is currently in the process of delivering $85 million in hardware, including 34 M-48 tanks, 130 M-113 armored personnel carriers, artillery pieces, trucks, jeeps and communication equipment.

Some 194 Lebanese officers were trained last year in the United States and a similar number is expected this year. On the ground, U.S. Army experts are training Lebanese soldiers in the use of new weaponry and American Marines are helping build a helicopter-borne assault unit.

By March, the Lebanese army hopes to have four brigades up to minimum strength and Gemayel has launched an intensive media campaign to recruit more soldiers. It is expected to attract 4,000 to 5,000 men this year.

"They are currently in striking distance of being able to keep order in areas they are deployed in, but there is a shortage of personnel and equipment that hampers that ability," said one western diplomat.

Also impeding the army's deployment is the presence of more than 80,000 other armed men in Lebanon. These include a dozen leftist and rightist Lebanese militias with about 15,000 men, 10,000 Palestinian guerrillas, 30,000 Syrian soldiers, 25,000 or more Israeli troops and 1,000 Iranian revolutionary guards.

Sending Seeds To Outer Space

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A mail-order company is shipping watermelon, tomato, sesame and violet seeds into outer space on the space shuttle Challenger's maiden voyage.

George B. Park Jr., spokesman for Geo. W. Park Seed Co. Inc. of Greenwood, S.C., said the experiment is designed to find out "how can we ship seed into space in such a manner that it will survive the journey and produce a viable crop in a manned space station."

A cylinder containing 46 different plant species will be attached to a wall of the shuttle's payload bay during Challenger's first mission, planned late in February.

Tiny Company Town Example Of Dying Institution

By JANE SEAGRAVE
Associated Press Writer
GILCHRIST, Ore. (AP) — Life here is suspended in time. A two-bedroom house rents for $75 a month, a crime wave is three reports of siphoned gasoline and, by definition, unemployment doesn't exist.

From the gingerbread-house style of the movie theater to the winding roads lined with chocolate-brown houses, this central Oregon town has a fairy tale quality.

Wholly owned by the Gilchrist Timber Co., this is a thriving example of a dying American institution, the company town. It is believed to be only the second such town left in Oregon, where they once were common. The other is Valsey.

The town, population 500, runs under the stewardship of Frank R. Gilchrist, 58, son of the town's founder and president of the company that bears his name.

Until injuries from an automobile accident last year forced him to turn over some duties to Vice President Charlie Shotts, Frank — as he's known around town — ruled with unquestioned authority over both sawmill and town.

"It's a kind of paternal relationship between Frank and the town, and it was even more with Frank's father," said Jeanne Edgar, who moved here in 1941 to marry. "There was a time if there was trash in your yard or your lawn wasn't mowed, you heard about it."

Rents range from $35 to $90 a month. The company patches the roads, fixes the plumbing, pays the property taxes and paints the houses of most of the company's 210 workers who choose to live here.

"They really seem to care about their personnel, whether you are happy or not," said Jody Herndon, a night foreman at the mill. "It's nice to know if the light fixture doesn't work, you can just call and somebody will fix it."

The company has been a stable employer during the recession in the timber industry. Gilchrist attributes that to modernizations made in 1979, just before the recession hit, and to loyal customers.

But, added Shotts, "a lot of it is due to the present president, Frank. He's the kind of person that people just enjoy being around."

Frank was 14 years old in 1938 when his family pulled up stakes in Laurel, Miss., and boarded a train to Oregon. A hint of his Southern heritage lingers in his speech.

With jobs scarce in the South, other Laurel residents followed the Gilchrists. Within a year, the company had built a railroad, a dam across the lower Deschutes River, a sawmill, a community center and more than 130 houses among the Ponderosa pines for its mostly imported workers. Gilchrist became a little bit of Dixie in the isolation of the north woods.

"We owned something like 85,000 acres, and we built the town right in the middle of it," Gilchrist recalled.

At its heart is the Gilchrist Mall, a long wooden building housing the post office, library, soda fountain and other businesses, along with a bowling alley — arguably the most popular spot in town.

The mall is painted brown, like most other buildings, a nod to economy that gives the town the look of a Boy Scout camp. A few buildings sport brightly colored floral trim, the inspiration of the Swiss architect who designed the town, that looks oddly gaudy.

Isolation is almost complete. "Our backdoor neighbor is about 200 miles away," said Marion Edgar, Jeanne's husband and a mill supervisor. "It's isolated, but if you're an outdoorsman, you might say it's paradise."

Life-long residents find plenty to do, even in winter when snow blankets the rugged country for most of six months. Central Oregon Community College offers courses, and there are movies, social events at the three churches, bowling leagues and high school ball games.

"Like anywhere, you have to get out of town once in a while, but people don't that often," said Norman Hallyburton, owner of Gilchrist's only grocery store.

There are drawbacks. The closest hospital is 50 miles away in Bend; the doctor 18 miles away. And privacy can be hard to come by. "You know everything about everyone and everyone knows everything about you," said Frances Steer, town librarian and resident since 1956.

Gilchrist's isolation is being nibbled at, however, by better roads, a growing population in central Oregon and a more mobile workforce.

"There was a time when if you lived here, well, chances were what you would end up doing is grow up and work for the company. That's changing," said Shotts, who has lived in Gilchrist since its founding.

"When our children went to school, we knew nearly everyone — what kind of car they had, when they got a new one," added Mrs. Edgar. "It used to be that we would never lock the door. We do now."

Okay Exclusive Arms License

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has approved an exclusive manufacturing licence granted to a Massachusetts company to help produce an armor-piercing projectile the Pentagon may decide to buy.

The license was granted to Avco Corp. of Wilmington, Mass. by a West German company that developed the weapon, known as STABO. The Defense Department said it would not purchase the weapon unless there was a U.S. manufacturer.

Approval of the license came in a letter from Assistant Attorney General William F. Baxter, head of the antitrust division, to counsel for Avco. He said that based on the department's knowledge of the deal it had no present intention to go to court to stop it under federal antitrust laws.

The Defense Department is now selecting an armor-piercing weapon to be added to its medium-range air-to-surface missile for use against tanks and other military vehicles.

Competition For

Apple Exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. apple exports in 1982-83 are facing "formidable competition" from subsidized sales by the European Community to the Middle East and some Asian countries, says the Agriculture Department.

"This year's French crop is 26 percent larger than last year's, and reduced French prices, coupled with the sizable subsidy, indicate that a loss in U.S. market shares in these countries may be inevitable," said the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Last season, the agency said in a weekly report, U.S. apple exports to the countries involved were worth about $44 million, representing 28 percent of all U.S. apple exports.

"FOR AN HONEST SECOND OPINION, ASK PERDUE'S FIRST GROWER."

"When Perdue started looking for broiler growers in North Carolina, they called on me. They liked the Bertie County area and knew that I was familiar with most of the folks here through my work with the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service. They wanted me to give them some leads on potential broiler growers. Perdue did a good job of convincing me it was a good investment, because I became the state's first grower!

That was eight years ago, and since then, they've really put a lot of money into this area. It's helped our economy a lot, and it's helped many individuals make a profit each year out of their farming operations. With all the changes I've seen in the other crop programs, it's nice to see a company like Perdue providing a good steady income. You can count on Perdue year after year.

With tobacco, peanuts and corn, the expenses keep growing faster than the market prices, and that's cutting the net incomes of a lot of farmers. With a Perdue house as a supplemental income, you've got something that doesn't require a major investment every year. And once you've paid off the house, as I did three years ago, profits start looking even better.

If anyone has second thoughts about getting with a poultry company, they shouldn't worry about Perdue. The way they have expanded in Bertie, Hertford, Halifax and surrounding counties, there's no doubt in my mind Perdue will be here for a long time to come."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing — chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarkets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Call 1-800-682-8729 or send in the coupon below, and talk chicken with a Perdue representative.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, rebounding from Tuesday's setback.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.57 to 1,085.36 in the first half hour.

Advancing issues took a 6-5 lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there had been no striking developments in the economic news of late to prompt much change in investors' hopes for a broadening economic recovery.

The market showed little response Tuesday when most large banks across the country lowered their prime lending rates from 11 1/2 to 11 percent.

Brokers pointed out that the banks' action was merely a response to previous declines in other interest rates that determine their cost of money.

First Charter Financial and Financial Corp. of America were delayed in opening the two savings and loan holding companies announced plans to merge.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 8.56 to 1,083.79.

Losers led gainers 8 to 7 on the NYSE, and the Big Board's composite index fell 51 to 84.11.

NYSE volume was 98.25 million shares, compared with 101.89 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped 1.12 at 368.35.

State and county dignitaries in attendance included U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, Rep. state Sam Bundy, state Rep. Ed Warren, state Sen. Vernon White, state Rep. John Gilliam, County Commissioners Kelly Barnhill, Burney Tucker, Chales Gaskins, Bruce Strickland, Bob Martin and Charles McLawhorn, and County Manager Reginald Gray.

Pepsi Plants Planning To Consolidate Bottling

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Pepsi-Cola bottlers in Greenville and five other North Carolina cities will consolidate their bottling operations in Goldsboro early this year in a move intended to cut down on their individual operating expenses, according to Greenville bottler John F. (Jack) Minges.

Minges, whose father began bottling Pepsi-Colas in Greenville nearly a half-century ago, said the bottling segment of his plant would close Friday.

Until the consolidated Goldsboro plant begins operation in mid-March, Minges said, Pepsi-Colas delivered in the Greenville area "probably will be pulled from Kinston."

Minges said Pepsi-Cola bottlers in Greenville, New Bern, Kinston, Goldsboro, Selma, Roxboro and possibly Littleton will participate in the consolidated Goldsboro facility, which will be operated by a new corporation, Carolina Beverage Suppliers. Joint operation of a centralized bottling plant will remove the necessity for replacement of equipment by the individual companies, he said.

The Greenville facility will become a storage and distribution center for this area, Minges said.

"This will involve re-scheduling work for 10 or 12 people in a different area," Minges said. "There may be three or five that I possibly could not place somewhere else, but we will try to utilize the people we have."

"We will operate as usual

Pleads Guilty To Wire Fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former Federal Reserve System analyst faces a possible maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine after pleading guilty to illegally retrieving sensitive information from the Fed's computer.

Theodore Charles Langevin, 34, of Laurel, Md., pleaded to one count of wire fraud on Tuesday. U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant set a Feb. 11 sentencing date.

Langevin retrieved information about the nation's money supply last November from a computer terminal at E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc. in New York, where he had gone to work as a money supply analyst shortly after leaving his government job.

Prosecutors said no one else was involved in the scheme.

Senior Citizens Install Officers

Town and Country Senior Citizens recently installed Sarah Ashton as president.

Other officers are Beatrice Weilenmann, vice president; Edith Williams, secretary; Ann Joyner, treasurer, and Dr. Lawrence Brewster, assistant treasurer.

Mrs. Ashton said members and guests planning to go on the trip to Disneyworld and Epcot should make reservations as soon as possible by calling 752-2912. She also said that material for the 1983 yearbook is needed as soon as possible.

New members welcomed at the meeting included Janice Barbee, Louise Small and Gladys Worthington.

The club will host the "Pre-Release Graduation Luncheon" April 20, it was reported.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Tuesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 36. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 36 percent of your hot water needs.

Booster Club

The North Pitt Booster Club will hold a reorganization meeting Jan. 17 in the school auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting is open to individuals who are interested in active participation for the school.

Old Salts Want Battleship Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 3,700 retired sailors and reservists have volunteered to return to sea duty aboard the Iowa when the battleship is returned to the fleet two years from now.

The old salts, whose average age will be 48 then, responded to a Navy call last year for veterans with certain skills to return to duty aboard the 60,000-ton ship, which was commissioned during World War II and mothballed after the Korean War.

The Navy says it will select 249 of the applicants by April and later will fill 329 additional enlisted slots in the Iowa's prospective crew. First priority will be given to former gunner's mates familiar with 16-inch guns, and fire control technicians experienced with the big guns also will be needed. The Navy is also looking for men with more than two dozen other specialties.

The Housing Authority operates with the goal of building, maintaining, and operating safe and sanitary public housing for low-income families. For information, call 752-3118.

Arson Scare At Hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Security patrols have been tripled at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, the posh "hospital to the stars," where six suspicious fires have broken out in the last three weeks, officials said.

Three small fires broke out at the hospital Tuesday, causing some patients to be temporarily moved. One firefighter was treated for smoke inhalation and released, said Fire Department spokesman Jim Wells.

Fire officials said they were looking for an arsonist. "We don't know who it is ... or if it is a grudge or whatever," Fire Inspector Ed Green said. "Once we catch the guy — and we will — we'll know the motive."

The first blaze Tuesday broke out about 9:30 a.m. in a seventh-floor laundry room of one of Cedars-Sinai's two high-rise towers. Eight fire companies were dispatched, and the fire, which caused about $1,000 damage, was quickly extinguished, Wells said.

"We moved a few people on the seventh floor so they wouldn't inhale smoke," said Tess Griffin, spokeswoman for hospital, which has 5,000 employees and a medical staff of 1,800.

Tuesday's second fire, which flared about 11:40 a.m. in an eighth-floor locker room, was doused by automatic sprinklers before five companies of firefighters arrived. Wells said the blaze caused about $200 in damage, mostly to several articles of clothing.

Martin Back For Round III As Yankee Manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Alfred Manuel "Billy" Martin and George M. Steinbrenner III, two of baseball's most celebrated antagonists, are friends — again.

And that can mean only one thing. Billy Martin is manager of the New York Yankees — again.

Rumored for months, the announcement that Martin would manage the Yankees for a third time came Tuesday at a news conference during which both men promised to lay aside their Punch & Judy act.

"The line of communications is open, and I really feel it will be different this time," Steinbrenner said.

"I've been mad at my mother, too, but I still love her," Martin said.

With that, Bulldog Billy became only the fourth man to manage the same major league team more than twice and Steinbrenner had made his 10th managerial change since buying the club 10 years ago this month.

It also was Steinbrenner's fourth change of leadership in a year. Bob Lemon started the 1982 season for New York but was replaced by Gene Michael in April. Michael, in turn, was replaced by Clyde King in early August.

King will stay with the club as a top adviser to Steinbrenner. Contacted at his Goldsboro, N.C., home, King said the Yankee boss "wants me to be upstairs with him to make decisions and evaluations. Not ordinary scouting, but special work where I'll be close to him."

Martin's Career

Martin as managed of Minnesota in 1963, Detroit in 1973, Texas in 1975, New York in 1978 and Oakland in 1981. (AP Laserphoto)

Under terms of his contract, Martin will receive about $500,000 per year for five years, making him the highest paid manager in major league history, sources close to both the Yankees and Martin said.

"It's a tremendous contract — longterm and a lot of dollars," Martin said. "It's a regular contract. No ifs, ands or buts, I will get paid."

Which prompted another question. Considering Martin's track record — seven jobs in 14 years of managing, and one scuffle after another with boss George — how long will he have to work for that money?

"I want to go on a positive note," Steinbrenner said. "I'm not going to let this become a negative note. Let the proof of the pudding be what the Yankees do in the next two or three years."

Martin's two earlier hitches with the Yankees came from Aug. 1, 1975-July 24, 1978 and June 18, 1979-Oct. 29, 1979. He was forced to resign the first time when he said of outfielder Reggie Jackson and Steinbrenner: "One's a born liar; the other's convicted."

Four days after the resignation, Steinbrenner stunned baseball by announcing on Old Timers' Day at Yankee Stadium that Martin would return as manager in 1980. Steinbrenner's timetable was stepped up, however, when the Yankees got off to a bad start in 1979, and Martin returned in June. The second time Martin left, he was fired outright after his now-infamous fight in a Bloomington, Minn., hotel bar with marshmallow salesman Joe Cooper of Lincolnshire, Ill.

The 54-year-old Martin said part of the problem in both those earlier occasions resulted from misunderstandings.

"It was always somebody else calling me," Martin said. "Now it will be different. George and I are going to work very closely together. He's going to be calling me, and I'll be calling him."

Steinbrenner said a misunderstanding had helped precipitate Martin's resignation in '79. Several weeks before Martin made the "liar" statement, Steinbrenner said American League

Rocky Mount Pounds Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The inability to find the basket cost Rose High School dearly last night — in both the boys' and the girls' basketball games as Rocky Mount swept through the Rampants in Big East Conference action.

Rocky Mount's boys romped to a 73-59 victory, while the girls ripped off Rose, 64-43.

The result left both Gryphon teams with 2-0 Big East records, while the Rose boys are 0-2 and the girls are now 1-1 in the league.

Rose started off cold and never warmed up in the boys' contest, shooting only 38.6 percent for the contest. That was in contrast with Rocky Mount firing through 59.2 percent of its shots. The Gryphons took eight fewer shots, but hit on seven more than did the Rampants.

Both teams made 15 free throws, with Rocky Mount attempting 27 and Rose 23. Rose, although outrebounded in the first and final quarters, held a 39-36 edge in that department, and also had two fewer turnovers.

But it was the cold shooting — and the slow defense — that did the trick as far as Rocky Mount was concerned. The Gryphons were able to get the ball inside as they constantly passed the ball into the lane to the open man — and the Rampants seemed to be able to do little about it.

Rocky Mount was also much quicker with the transition, getting back off defense to score a number of baskets off the fast break.

"We didn't play very good defense," Coach Jim Brewington admitted. "And we're not shooting well now at all. I thought that Rocky Mount would be a good ball club, but I thought we'd do better too."

Brewington said that the defensive job done of Rocky Mount's Darrell Powell was especially poor. That was evident as Powell poured in a game high 26 points.

"We didn't do a good job of boxing out either, especially on the defensive boards. We're playing in spurts. I think if we can ever put together as many as three good quarters we might do something."

"But this is a good group of kids; they're just making little mistakes that hurt us — turnovers at crucial times, things like that. We've been in every game we've played until late in the game."

And that was true last night, despite the fact that Rocky Mount held as much as a 14-point lead early in the second half. Rose rallied to pull within six and had the

Vikings Hold On, 61-58

Gatlin Keys DHC By Pats

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley guard Keith Gatlin gave his future coach a hint of that future last night while helping his present coach and teammates escape an upset bid by pesky West Carteret.

With Maryland coach Lefty Driesell looking on, Gatlin poured in 30 points — 20 in the second half — and grabbed 13 rebounds as the Vikings held on to down the Patriots, 61-58.

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley whipped West Carteret, 66-36.

The game was the Coastal Conference opener for both teams. The Vikings are now 9-2 overall. West Carteret falls to 4-4, but not before rallying from 13 points to one before losing.

"This is about as bad as we can play. But we had our chances," West Carteret coach Billy Widgeon said.

The Vikings scored the first nine points of the second half to stretch a 22-20 halftime lead to 31-20 with six minutes left. The Patriots, taking advantage of some poor shot selection by DHC, narrowed the gap to 39-32 going into the final period.

West Carteret guard Rodney Collins then keyed a 10-4 run that brought the Pats within one. Collins, who led West Carteret with 12 points, stole the ball twice and both times converted the thefts into four free throws. He also hit a MOREHEAD CITY — D.H. Conley's fourth ranked Vikings spotted #7 West Carteret a 23-13 lead after seven matches, then roared back with five wins — four of them pins — and a draw to take a 42-25 victory in the Coastal Conference match.

It was the first loss of the year for the Patriots, and left Conley with a 9-1 overall record and a 3-0 league mark.

The Vikings gained a draw in the opening match after having gained a 5-1 lead in the match. Following a forfeit loss, Conley added a superior decision and a pin to take a 13-6 edge. But West Carteret won the next three matches, two of them on pins, to forge its 23-13 lead.

Conley came back with a decision and a pin before West Carteret got another tie. After that Conley recorded three straight pins to wrap up the victory.

Conley plays host to White Oak on Thursday.

D.H. Conley Rallies Past West Carteret

Enter Gatlin and the Conley four-corners. After a turnover by both teams and a miss by the Patriots, the Vikings whittled nearly a minute off the clock before Gatlin was fouled with 26 seconds left.

Gatlin, who will play for Driesell at Maryland next year, swished both ends of the one-and-one to make it 57-54. The Patriots closed the deficit to one on two free throws by Johnny Potter with 19 seconds to go and had a chance to take the lead when sophomore David Yancey leaped high to pick off an almost floor-length pass by Donald Wilson.

After a timeout by both teams and a second one by the Patriots when they could not get the ball inbound, sophomore Bruce Murray stepped out of bounds to give the ball back to DHC with 11 seconds left.

DHC guard Mitchell Cox hit a one-and-one to up the lead to 59-56 at :08. Then, after a bucket by the Patriots with two seconds left, Gatlin was fouled and hit both foul shots to seal the win.

"We did not play one of our better games," Conley coach Shetley Marsh said. "The main thing is they didn't concentrate tonight. Until we concentrate and get some defensive rebounds, we're going to struggle."

The Vikings outrebounded West Carteret, 39-24, led by Gatlin and Otis Payton, who had eight. Jeff Patten led West Carteret with eight. Conley also had fewer turnovers (25 to 18). But DHC had a terrible shooting night, hitting 40.4 percent (23 of 57).

West Carteret, meantime, hit 59.5 (25 of 42), including 10 of 12 in the final period.

"We got the ball inside but we were not able to convert," Marsh said. "And when we got fouled we were missing our free throws."

Conley hit 15 of 24 free throws. But, take away Gatlin's eight for eight from the line and the rest of the Vikings hit just seven of 16.

Marsh admitted he felt his team should have won by more, but added: "When we start making our free throws we'll win by bigger (scores). But if you can play bad and still win it can be a pretty good sign."

Along with 30 points and 13 rebounds — both game highs — Gatlin dished off six assists and had just two turnovers. Payton added 12 points for the Vikings. Joining Collins in double figures for West Carteret was Eddie Louis with 10.

Two jumpers by Gatlin and a bucket and two foul shots by Payton gave Conley an 8-3 lead midway through the first period. But a 12-foot jumper and a power move inside by Donald Johnson sparked a 8-2 run that gave the Patriots an 11-10 lead after the first period.

The Patriots went up by three at 17-14 — their biggest lead of the game — on a follow shot by Murray with four minutes left in the half. But, Payton drove for two layups and Gatlin followed in a miss to put the Vikings up, 22-20, at the half.

Conley appeared ready to blow the game open in the early moments of the second half. Gatlin put in a missed foul shot and then passed to Leon Cox for a bucket and hit three buckets in a row to spark a spurt that upped the Vikings' lead to 33-22 with 5:23 left.

"I thought we would probably break it open," Marsh said, "but they settled down." Conley extended its lead to 33 (37-24) on a follow shot by Gatlin, but a pair of jumpers by Louis helped bring the Patriots within seven going into the last period.

Two goaltending calls — one on Conley's Reggie Smith and the other on Gatlin — helped West Carteret cut the lead to 45-42 with 6:05 left. Collins then helped bring the Patriots within a point, but the Vikings managed to hold on for the victory.

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley outscored West Carteret, 20 to 6, in the final five minutes of the second quarter en route to its 11th win in 12 games. It was the conference opener for both teams.

DHC scored the first seven points of the game and led, 14-8, at the end of the first quarter. The Valkyries stretched their advantage to 22-11 with 5:23 to go on three buckets by Mechio Kornegay.

The game was all but over five minutes later. Over the final 3½ minutes Conley scored on nine consecutive possessions to build its bulge to 42-17 at the half. Darlene Cannon scored eight points during the run, which helped Conley score 28 points in the second period.

The Valkyries led, 48-21, after three quarters and the Lady Patriots never got closer than 21 in the final period.

WILLIAMSTON — James Ward's three-point play with eight seconds remaining lifted Williamston to a stunning 39-35 upset win over Roanoke Tuesday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

In the girls' game, Roanoke whipped Williamston, 67-54.

Williamston rallied from a three-point deficit after three quarters to go up, 36-35. Ward, a 6-0 junior forward, then hit a bucket and was fouled. He canned the free throw with eight seconds left to seal the win.

The victory was the first loss in seven conference games for Roanoke and only its second loss in 10 games this season. Williamston, with its biggest victory of the season, is now 3-7 overall and 2-5 in the league.

The win also ended the Tigers' five-game losing streak.

Roanoke, which has now lost two of its last four after winning its first six, inched out to a 12-9 lead after the first eight minutes. But, Williamston came back, outscoring the Redskins, 9-2, in the second period to take an 18-14 lead at the half.

Roanoke regained the lead, 25-22, in the third period with an 11-4 spurt, but the Tigers roared back on top in the final period and escaped with the victory in the final minute.

Roanoke forward Greg Everett led all scorers with 11 points and was the only player in double figures.

Williamston was led by guard Donnell Griffin with 11 points.

The Redskins finished with two more field goals than the Tigers but lost the game at the foul line, where they hit just seven of 13. Williamston hit 15 of 25.

In the girls' game, Roanoke rolled to an early lead, saw the Lady Tigers cut it to one at intermission before putting the game away in the second half — despite having four starters foul out.

The Lady Redskins, who have now won seven of their last eight after dropping their first two, jumped out to a 19-13 lead after the first period only to be outscored, 13-8, in the second period and lead by just a point (27-26) at the half.

Roanoke used a 16-8 third period to build its lead to 43-34 and then coasted home with the win in the final period, outscoring the Lady Tigers, 24-20, in the final eight minutes.

Roanoke, now 7-3 overall and 6-1 in the conference, was led by Gloria Duggins with 18 points and Dezella Jones with 15. Shelia Jones and Ginya Smith each had 10 points for Roanoke.

Williamston was led by Timberly Rodgers with 16 points and Lynn Mills with 13 points. Both Sonya Purvis and Lynne Sanders had 10 points for Williamston, now 3-7 overall and 3-4 in the league.

Williamston travels to Washington and Roanoke plays host to Roanoke Rapids on Friday.

chance to cut the lead to four before the Gryphons pulled away again to build up as much as a 19-point lead late in the contest.

Rocky Mount got the initial basket, but Rose came back on two free throws by Alan Dickens and a steal by Donnell Lee to take a 4-2 lead. Rose held the lead until Powell hit a baseline jumper for a 14-8 lead. Rose tied it once more, but Chuck Robbins tossed back a missed shot and Tony Joyner hit on a drive to put the lead to 14-10.

After two more Rose free throws, Rocky Mount ran off seven straight points to take a 21-12 lead at the end of the quarter.

Rocky Mount extended the lead to ten early on, 24-14, but Rose fought back and cut the lead back to as little as four, 30-26, before another spurt at the end of the period ran the lead back to 12, 42-30.

Early in the third period, the Gryphons built their lead to 14, 48-34, on two baskets by Brian Hunter, but once again Rose rallied. Two baskets each by Jeff Hopkins and Lee cut the lead back to six, 52-46, but once again, Rocky Mount hit at the end, getting baskets from Joyner and Bryon Bellamy to ease back out by ten, 55-46.

Rose cut it back to eight, 60-52, with 5:46 left, but Rocky Mount took command once again, outscoring the Rampettes, 13-2, over the next five minutes, allowing Rose the final five points in the game. By then, however, the lead was out to 73-54 with just 58 seconds left to play.

In addition to Powell's 26 points, Hunter added 13 and Bellamy had 12. Rose was led by Lee with 16 and Mac Walston with 12, while Dickens added 10.

Rocky Mount's girls — tabbed in preseason as one of the better teams around — suffered through their pre-conference game as 6-1 Kim Taylor sat out games with a separated shoulder, having undergone surgery prior to the season.

But Taylor returned to play in her first game last Friday night, and last night, she gave Rose a lesson in how the game is played.

Taylor sparked Rocky Mount to a 10-for-11 show in the third period, hitting the first 12 points of the period and getting 15 in all during the quarter.

Overall, Rocky Mount shot 62.0 percent, 31 of 50, and made good on 78.3 percent (18 of 23) in the second half. Rose's girls — like the boys who followed them — could not find the range, making just 16 of 68 shots for 23.5 percent. The Rampettes were also outrebounded 45-35, and stayed as close as they did only through Rocky Mount's having 14 more turnovers.

Rose held the early lead, but Rocky Mount took it for good with 2:13 left in the period, 6-5, on a basket by Sharon Pratt. Taylor followed with her first basket of the evening — coming off the bench — and after Rose scored, both Pratt and Taylor hit again for a 12-7 lead before Rose scored once more before the period ended.

In the third period, Rose stayed close, but could come no closer than one, 14-13 before Beulah Battle led a string that opened up a 22-15 lead. Rose trailed, 27-21, at intermission.

Taylor took command of the game in the third period, as the Gryphons hit their first nine shots from the floor and missed just once in 11 tries. That opened up a 48-32 lead by the end of the period.

In the final quarter, Rocky Mount was out by 21 midway through the period and held that edge the rest of the way.

Taylor finished with 28 points, while Pratt had 14. Rose was led by Frances Barnhill with 11 and Linda Winstead with 10.

Rose's boys fall to 1-7 overall, while the girls are 3-6. Rocky Mount's boys are 7-1 while the girls are now 3-5.

The Rampants travel to Wilson Beddingfield on Friday.

President Lee MacPhail had called him to suggest a switch with Chicago White Sox owner Bill Veeck.

"A switch of what?" I asked him," Steinbrenner said. "He said, 'A switch of managers.' I said, 'Forget it.'"

However, Martin said that the night before he made the "liar" remark, the Yankees were in Chicago, where Veeck had told him that Steinbrenner initiated the talk of a swap.

"We were on our way to the airport to fly to Kansas City, and the more I thought about what Veeck had told me, the angrier I got," Martin said in his book, "Number 1."

Black Presidents Charge Racism Over Proposal

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The presidents of two predominantly black universities say a controversial measure upgrading academic requirements for athletes makes it tougher for black players to attend large, predominantly white institutions.

The measure, known as proposal 48, was passed Tuesday on a show of hands at the annual convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association following a sometimes heated, three-hour debate.

"I hope this message goes out to black athletes at all institutions," said Dr. Joseph Johnson, president of Grambling State. "They don't want you at white institutions."

"They're saying to black athletes, 'If you want to play basketball or football, stay out of white institutions,'" said Dr. Jesse Stone, president of Southern University.

Asked if he was surprised No. 48 passed, Stone said, "I'm not surprised by anything White America does."

The proposal was written by an all-white committee from the American Council on Education. It demands a minimum number of math, English and science courses before a high school graduate can get an athletic scholarship. It also requires minimum scores of 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT college entrance exams, which black educators say are racially and regionally discriminatory.

Moments after adopting proposal 48, delegates approved what could be viewed as a loophole measure. It specifies that athletes who don't meet No. 48's requirements can receive athletic scholarships. But they cannot play or practice their sport for one year, and will have three years of eligibility only if they meet academic requirements of all freshmen athletes.

Speaking in support of the plan were the presidents and faculty representatives of some of the nation's largest universities, many of whom expressed concern over the awarding of scholarships to athletes who are not academically qualified.

Also arguing in favor of the measure was Penn State's Joe Paterno, coach of the nation's top-ranked football team. Paterno said the system had "raped" black athletes for the last 15 years.

"We can't afford to do that to another generation. I'm really surprised that so many black educators have gotten up and sold their students down the river. I think you're underestimating their pride and competitiveness," said Paterno.

"Joe Paterno insulted all blacks," said Johnson. "He does not know anything about black athletes."

"Paterno's statement showed an ignorance of what is happening in this country," said Frederick Humphries, president of Tennessee State. "To say, as he seemed to say, that he cared more about black athletes than blacks do is ridiculous. As of the moment, we're still in the NCAA. I'd be afraid to predict that we'll stay."

Paterno said the talents "of such black stars as Magic Johnson and Herschel Walker are what has made our teams so exciting. But I don't want to bring kids into our programs and tell 'em they can do something they can't do."

"More and more of our black athletes are frustrated later in life because they never got what they should have out of college. If No. 48 is passed, they'll take up the challenge."

Dr. James Zumbege, president of Southern California University, called passage of the measure a first step "toward re-establishing the integrity of our institutions of higher education."

"Unfortunately, the student no longer applies in the term 'student-athlete' in many cases," he said. "This could not only restore credibility to our academic institutions, but it could also restore integrity to the high school diploma."

Edward Fort, chancellor of predominantly black North Carolina A&T, said the argument was "over a moral issue."

"Try as we might to avoid it, this unfortunately has become a black and white issue," he said. "Black and rural isolated white youths would be hurt by this. There is evidence that students from upper-income families sometimes score 100 points higher on these tests than those from disadvantaged backgrounds. And it has nothing to do with academic potential."

Dr. Charles Young, chancellor of UCLA and a member of the ACE committee, said he was "surprised" at the charges of racism.

"I'm very surprised that they would say those things," he said. "I can't believe they mean it. Those of us who supported No. 48 probably have more black athletes than they do."

"This was done to protect academically marginal athletes, black, white or whatever," he said.

In another vote, the convention rejected an attempt to reduce an estimated 40 or more schools to second-class status and eliminate them from the NCAA basketball tournament. The delegates overwhelmingly turned down legislation that would have had a drastic effect on major basketball colleges without similar football programs by relegating them to a lesser division.

Prior to its rejection, the measure was denounced as punitive by its opponents.

NCAA Rejects Try To Reduce Division I Roll

Convention Overwhelmingly Votes Down 'Punitive' Measure

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association's annual convention has thrown out an attempt to reduce an estimated 40 or more schools to second-class status and eliminate them from the NCAA Basketball Tournament.

The convention delegates overwhelmingly rejected legislation that would have a drastic effect on major basketball colleges without similar football programs by relegating them to a lesser division.

Prior to its rejection, the measure was denounced as "punitive and discriminatory" by Jesse C. Fletcher, president of Hardin-Simmons University. The Rev. Charles L. Currie, president of Xavier University in Cincinnati, said it would have brought about "a pay-up-or-quit-playing attitude."

Basically, the proposal would have established new criteria and refined existing criteria for Division I membership. The proposal, sponsored by the policy-making NCAA Council, included a minimum financial aid requirement for Division I members, a requirement that football or basketball be among at least eight sports sponsored for men, a minimum attendance requirement in Division I-AA football and a minimum attendance requirement in basketball for those schools which do not have football or do not meet Division I football requirements.

Besides Currie, seven other chief executive officers of Division I schools spoke against the legislation.

Howard White, president of Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., said that if adopted, the legislation would have pushed the entire West Coast Athletic Conference out of Division I.

Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten, said his conference supported the legislation, along with the Atlantic Coast, Big Eight, Pacific-10, Southeastern, Southern, Southland, Southwest and Western Athletic conferences.

Critics of the proposal had

Charge Racism

Southern University's Dr. Jesse Stone (left) and Grambling's Dr. Joseph B. Johnson met the press after a heated debate at the NCAA Convention yesterday. The convention voted Tuesday to toughen academic standards for athletes despite strong opposition from black schools. Stone called the move an "act of racism." (AP Laserphoto) said the NCAA has no right to tell its members how much money they should spend on athletics. Others saw it as an attempt by big-time football schools to obtain a larger share of the financial pie, a suggestion denied "steadfastly and unequivocally" by Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association.

Falls Road Edges Greenville, 59-58

ROCKY MOUNT — Falls Road held off Greenville Christian Academy last night to pull out a 59-58 basketball victory. Falls Road also won the girls' game, 32-23.

Falls Road moved out into a 14-8 lead in the first quarter of the contest, only to see Greenville Christian rally in the second frame. The Knights outthrust Falls Road, 23-13, in that frame to take a 32-27 edge at the half.

In the third period, Falls Road stuck close, outthrusting the Knights, 14-10, to close the gap to 42-41. Then, in the final quarter, Falls Road took the lead and held out, building a three-point lead just before the end, when GCA hit at the horn to cut the lead to one.

GCA lost the game at the foul line, hitting just eight of 14 shots, while Falls Road made 13 of 21 attempts.

Bubba Hamrick led Falls Road with 23 points, while Dan Griffin added 12 and Tim Medlin had 10. GCA was paced by Mike Bragg and Jerry Butts, each with 14.

"We were hurt a lot when we lost Chris Harris," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "He had to leave the game in the first period with a possible broken wrist. Then, we lost Butts in the middle of the fourth period on fouls. We had him with only four fouls, but their book had him with five."

Both teams scored six points each in the first period of the girls' game and each added five in the second for an 11-11 deadlock at the half.

In the third period, however, Falls Road began to pull away, outscoring Greenville, 11-4, for a 22-20 lead. Then, in the final quarter, Falls Road enjoyed a 10-3 advantage to claim the win.

Beth Wells led Falls Road with 14 points, while no one hit double figures for Greenville.

The GCA boys are now 4-5 while the girls are 4-3. GCA returns home on Friday to host Wilmington Christian.

Ex-USC Coach Goes To Duke

DURHAM (AP) — Richard Bell, former head football coach at the University of South Carolina, has been named defensive coordinator at Duke University, Coach Steve Sloan announced Tuesday.

Bell is the seventh coach selected by Sloan. He was defensive coordinator for seven years at South Carolina before he succeeded Jim Carlen as head coach. Bell was fired at the end of the 1982 season after the Gamecocks struggled to a 4-7 record.

"My opinion is that Richard Bell is one of the finest coaches in college football," said Sloan in a prepared statement. "I feel he will be a great addition to our staff. He will bring experience and stability to our defense."

Manteo Defeats Winless Bullets

JAMESVILLE — Winless Jamesville High School stayed with non-conference visitor Manteo most of the way last night, but finally bowed, 62-50.

Manteo's girls also came away with a victory, downing the Lady Bullets, 45-42.

Manteo jumped out into a 13-6 lead in the opening quarter of the game, then outscored Jamesville, 15-10, in the second period. That left Manteo ahead, 28-16, at the half.

Jamesville rallied, however, in the third period, outthrusting Manteo, 21-13. That cut the lead back to 41-37 going into the final quarter. In that, however, Manteo again outpointed the Bullets, 21-13, to win going away.

Manfred Gore led Manteo with 19 points while John Burke had 13 and Gary Klein had 10. Jamesville was led by Rex Bell with 21 and Richie Ange with 10.

The Jamesville girls pushed out into a 10-6 lead in the first period of their game, and matched points with Manteo in the second frame. That left the Lady Bullets in command, 22-18, at intermission.

But in the third period, Manteo outscored Jamesville, 15-7, and charged into a 33-29 lead. Jamesville was able to cut but one point off that in the final quarter.

Wilhelmena McCrease led Manteo with 20 points. Jamesville was paced by Kim Floyd with 23.

Rocky Mt. 'Pins' Rose

ROCKY MOUNT — As has been the case all season long, Rose High School's wrestling team suffered in the lower weights — but this time, the higher classes were not enough to pull out a win over Rocky Mount last night, as the Gryphons took a 44-30 victory over the Rampants.

Rose won the final three matches, gaining 18 points during that period, but the match had already been decided by then. Rose managed but one victory, by Mark Brewington, in the first ten weights, having to give up two on forfeits.

The loss left Rose at 6-2 overall and 2-1 in Big East matches. The Rampants play host to highly regarded Wilson Beddingfield on Friday.

Kuhn Fines Trio

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, along with Chicago White Sox owners Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf, have been fined by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for exchanging insults last month.

Steinbrenner was fined $5,000 and Reinsdorf and Einhorn were given a $2,500 penalty, Kuhn said Tuesday. Kuhn also said he had criticized Edward Bennett Williams, owner of the Baltimore Orioles, for remarks regarding Steinbrenner's signing of free-agent outfielder Steve Kemp.

Andruzzi Says Costs May Force Scheduling Changes

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina women's basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi said that there is a possibility that the Lady Pirates may have to schedule down in the future if continuing belt tightening at the school takes it toll.

But it won't come in the immediate future, she added.

"We may have to limit our schedule to fewer of the top teams," Andruzzi told the Greenville Sports Club yesterday, "if we cannot come up with the funds to be able to compete with these teams on their level." By that Andruzzi means staying up with the N.C. States, South Carolinas, Old Dominions, and the like in the recruiting wars — which are causing the Lady Pirates to look further and further from home.

"This year, we're recruiting only three players from North Carolina, two in junior college at Louisburg and one high school player from Fayetteville. The rest of our recruits are likely to come from out of state.

Andruzzi spoke on the heels of a four-game long road trip which saw the Pirates win but one game. "It was a very challenging trip — a good learning experience for us," Andruzzi said that she felt that the Lady Pirates played well against Notre Dame, but couldn't quite pull it out, losing by two. Against Western Kentucky, a team the Pirates beat last year by 12, it was a case of revenge, Andruzzi said of the loss. Belmont was a "good win for us," and against Cincinnati, Andruzzi said the Pirates had no chance due to a "hose job" by the officials.

Andruzzi pointed out that Mary Denkler is currently tied for fourth place among women scorers in the country. "Our problem is that she's only one one we're getting stuff from inside," she added.

The only other constant scorer is Loraine Foster, but both Fran Hooks and Caren Truske are playing well. Freshman Sylvia Bragg and Rita Simmons are "coming along" with Bragg ahead. Another freshman, Lisa Squirewell, has been sidelined with a stress fracture, but played well earlier.

Freshman Delphine Mabry has been the biggest surprise, but Andruzzi would like to get a little more scoring from her.

"We haven't gotten the play from (Darlene) Chaney that we'd hoped to get. She can do better and she will," Andruzzi said.

The Lady Pirates' next outing will be Friday in Norfolk, Va., when they take on highly ranked Old Dominion, which has lost but three times, two of them to the number one and two teams.

While the Lady Pirates have but nine games at home this year, Andruzzi said that next year's schedule will be improved since several of the schools will be making "pay backs." These include Notre Dame, N.C. State and Louisiana State.

While Andruzzi said that it's tough to get a good schedule as an independent, she is hopeful that something will come out of the ECAC South. Currently two of the six members are Division II in women's play, William & Mary and Navy. "Many of the ACC teams are taking the approach now that they have nothing to gain by playing us, so we're having to go further from home to get games now," she said.

As to recruiting, Andruzzi said the Lady Pirates lose four seniors this year, and she is looking for good athletes who are also good students. "Anybody who comes will have to work hard," she said.

The next meeting of the Sports Club will be January 25, with Rich Brenner, Raleigh sportscaster as the speaker.

It's hard
insured money market account more convenient than this.

Unless it's this.

BB&T's new Money Rate Savings Account has just about everything you want in an investment.

To begin with, it pays market rates. But unlike traditional money market funds, it's insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for up to $100,000. To top it all off, it's convenient. You can withdraw your money anytime, without penalty, at any BB&T office or 24-hour teller machine. What could be more convenient than that?

BB&T's new Money Rate Checking Account also pays market rates, is insured and lets you make withdrawals any time. But with this account, you can also write checks whenever you want.

How do you decide which account is right for you? Well, a lot of investors keep their checking and savings money separate. So like them, you might want both. And you can open both with minimum deposits of $2500 each at any BB&T office. What could be more convenient than that?

TRAVELING BILLBOARD — Trucker Cliff Ham of Bozeman swings down from the cab of what may be the most beautiful truck on the highway. Owner V.K. Putman and the state are splitting the $3,000 cost of painting the Glacier

National Park mural on the truck's sides, and the toll-free number for getting Montana tourist information. And, Ham will hand out tourist brochures as he drives between the East and West coasts. (AP Laserphoto)

Hopes Stunt Means Jobs

LAPORTE, Ind. (AP) — A local businessman hopes to smack a pie in the face of record-high unemployment in LaPorte County, with a stunt that he also hopes will cook up a few jobs.

Randall A. Weiss, president of a home entertainment store here, said Monday he hopes to raise at least $33,500 with a President's Pie Eating Contest on Feb. 21 — George Washington's birthday — to benefit people whose unemployment benefits have expired. He's formed a volunteer group called People Involved in Employment — PIE.

Proceeds will be used to pay the unemployed to work for people who need household jobs done but cannot afford to pay. "If we reach our goal, it will pay for 10,000 hours of work," he said.

LaPorte County had a 16.5 percent jobless rate in November.

Weiss said the pies will be donated by a local supermarket, the contestants will be employers in the county and the paying spectators will be their employees.

"I figure there are a lot of employees who will pay a dollar or more to see their employer look silly by eating a pie with his hands tied behind him," Weiss said.

"We're going to use mainly cream pies: They are the messiest," Weiss said. And "since it is Washington's birthday, we'll see that there's a good supply of cherry pies."

Some Shoppers Plan Hold Back

NEW YORK (UPI) — Six out of 10 consumers questioned in a national survey said they do not plan to increase post-Christmas shopping this year, and 26 percent said they expect to shop less than last year.

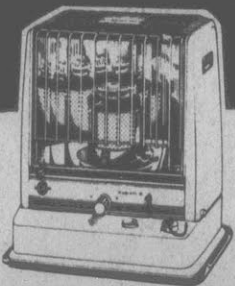

Shoppers may be planning to hold back because of general confusion about prices, says John Pollock, president of the company that conducted the survey.

Asked what they expected prices to do in January, 33 percent anticipated increases, 36 percent, decreases, and 32 percent, stay the same.

Pollock says the barrage of sales that started in November and held through holiday shopping created the confusion.

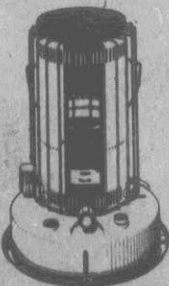

Still, 21 percent of the respondents said they planned to wait until after the holiday to buy at least a few of their 1982 gifts.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals T.

Costs Eating Up Defense Sum

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservative group that has supported President Reagan's military buildup says the increased defense spending won't buy as many new weapons as expected.

The Heritage Foundation said much of the added money will be eaten up by rising costs of existing weapon programs. It recommended the Pentagon scrap some proposed high-technology weapons and concentrate on adding more troops and bolstering stocks of current weapons.

"Official cost projections are typically drastically below the levels needed to achieve stated goals," the study said.

Reagan has proposed a five-year, $1.6 trillion defense budget that provides money for a number of new weapons system. But the study said Pentagon buying practices are so poor that existing programs will "soak up even sizable funding increases with negligible results."

Don't be lulled into a false sense of security. Even simple hands need a modicum of care.

The auction was straightforward. North had only one tale to tell, and it was not until he learned that his partner had a five-card club suit that he was prepared to consider anything but a diamond contract.

West elected to attack with a low spade. East took his two top spades and shifted to a heart. Declarer rose with the ace and, oblivious to any danger, he drew trumps in three rounds and started on diamonds. Unfortunately, when that suit broke 4-1, declarer could take only two sluffs on the high diamonds and he ended up down two.

There are two possible bad breaks that declarer might have to contend with—besides the 4-1 diamond break, trumps also might not behave well. Declarer cannot decide how to play the hand until he knows about the trump situation.

After winning the ace of hearts, declarer should cross to the king of clubs (in case trumps are 5-0) then lead dummy's low trump to his ace. If either defender shows out on this round, declarer has no alternative but to draw trumps and hope that the diamonds are 3-2.

But when both defenders follow to two rounds of trumps, declarer can afford to protect against the possibility of a 4-1 diamond split. He cashes the ace of diamonds and ruffs a diamond with the queen of trumps. Now declarer can get back to the table with the jack of trumps, drawing the last outstanding trump in the process, and dummy is high. Not very difficult, was it?

Fighter Jets Told Break Off Pursuit Before Plane Collision

By The Associated Press
Two jet fighters that intercepted an unidentified private plane off the North Carolina coast Sunday had been told to break off their pursuit moments before one of them collided with the smaller craft, Air Force officials say.

The order came after Federal Aviation Administration personnel contacted the twin-engine Beechcraft Baron and confirmed that it was not a hostile aircraft.

The Beechcraft crashed into the Atlantic 40 miles southeast of Jacksonville, N.C., taking with it six or seven occupants, five of them believed to be from Virginia Beach, Va.

The F-4C Phantom jet landed safely with a damaged wing. Capt. John Weller, the pilot, and Lt. Col. Les Williams, the weapons systems officer, were not injured.

The light plane was believed piloted by Henry H. Tiffany, a Waynesboro, Va., lawyer who was ferrying friends back from a holiday cruise to the Bahamas. The aircraft contained only six seats, and the Coast Guard has been unable to confirm exactly who was aboard.

Tiffany, 47, was a veteran private pilot with at least six years of experience flying throughout the Caribbean area, according to Federal Aviation Administration records.

In 1978, he and another man were jailed for two months in Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, on charges of smuggling marijuana into that Caribbean country. A Haitian court declared both men innocent of the charges after a three-day trial.

The Coast Guard said the Virginia Beach residents whose families had been told they were missing included Edward Furniss, 20; Richard Schlimgen, 20; Jo-Al Kohl, 23; Miss Kohl's roommate, identified as Robin Ann Graham, 24; and James Slacke, 18.

The National Guard fighter that collided with Tiffany's plane was one of two Phantoms ordered to scramble and intercept an unidentified aircraft approaching the North Carolina coast, officials at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro, N.C., said Tuesday.

Spokesmen said the fighters left the base about 4 p.m. and the collision occurred at 4:40 p.m.

An Air Force board of inquiry has convened to investigate the collision. The National Transportation Safety Board said it also will investigate.

Lt. Col. Jerry Hix, a spokesman for the 20th North American Aerospace Defense Command at Tyndall

Air Force Base, Fla., said the defense command center at Fort Lee, Va., was initially notified about the unidentified aircraft about 4 p.m. as it flew northward from the Bahamas.

The two Phantoms took off to intercept, Hix said.

"We classify them as an unknown if it fails to match a prefiled flight plan and we can't identify it by any other means," Hix said.

Tiffany had filed a flight plan in Nassau before he left about 1:50 p.m. Sunday but had not activated the plan, according to Fred Farrar, a spokesman for the FAA in Washington.

"Usually a pilot will file a flight plan but won't activate it right away," Farrar said. "He activates it by calling FAA and saying, 'Here I am.'" activated when his plane was spotted on Air Defense Identification Zone radar, Hix said. The air defense zone generally extends 250 to 300 miles from the coast.

The plan had not yet

Hix said it would not have been possible for the fighter pilots to talk to the private plane by radio because civilian aircraft normally operate on VHF frequencies and military aircraft on UHF frequencies.

Farrar said that the FAA had not established contact with the Beechcraft before it entered the air defense zone. Earlier reports that Tiffany had radioed the FAA in New York to say he was changing course because of inclement weather could not be verified, Farrar said.

During the past 12 months, Hix said, fighters have scrambled against 166 unknown aircraft in NORAD's 20th region, which stretches from Maryland to Florida and across the south coast to Laredo, Texas. Of those, 11 were identified before being intercepted and 55 were usually identified by fighter jets, he said.

Style Added An Assuring Touch

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The subject is rape, but "An Invasion of Privacy," tonight on CBS, is a curiously assuring film — a result of style perhaps as much as story.

There is nothing frantic, nothing sensational, in director Mel Damski's treatment of the touchy subject, and the players — especially Valerie Harper and Carol Kane — embody their characters with genuine passion.

Miss Harper is Kate Bianchi, an aspiring artist from Manhattan, recently divorced, who rents a cottage on an island off the coast of Maine to finish some illustrations for a textbook. She and her young daughter, Jennifer, encounter little more than icy New England reserve in their relations with townspeople — until Jennifer complains of a toothache.

Miss Kane plays "Ilene Cohen, the Bronx," who has settled on the island because her husband, Harvey, a dentist, likes it there. "The nightlife won't exactly wear you out, I can tell you that," Ilene tells her new friend.

Then Kate meets Carl Slater, the local police chief. She and Slater enjoy a toddy or two, then dinner, and end up at Kate's for one last drink. They spend the night together.

Slater, played by Cliff DeYoung, wants to see Kate again the next evening, but she hesitates, not sure she wants to get involved with another man so soon after her divorce. Besides, she says, sleeping with a man she barely knows is not her custom.

Grammy Nominations Reflect Variety

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.
(AP) — This year's top Grammy nominees, ranging from mellow rock stars Toto and rhythm-and-blues giant Stevie Wonder to country singer Willie Nelson, reflect growing diversity in the hit record charts.

No longer does one type of popular music dominate — as rock did in previous years. Instead, nominations announced Tuesday for top categories of the 25th annual National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences awards went to an assortment of artists, most middle-of-the-roadsers in their fields.

Winners of 62 silver anniversary Grammys will be announced Feb. 23. About a dozen will be presented during a three-hour CBS telecast hosted by John Denver, and the rest awarded in pre-show ceremonies at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles.

Winners are chosen by secret balloting among the recording academy's 5,000 members in seven chapter cities nationwide.

For record of the year, Toto's melodic "Rosanna" is up against Wonder's optimistic duet with Paul McCartney, "Ebony & Ivory"; Nelson's wistful "Always on My Mind"; Vangelis' moving piano and synthesizer theme to "Chariots of Fire"; and British new wave star Joe Jackson's nightclubby "Steppin' Out."

"Toto IV" takes on John Cougar's back-to-basics rock on "American Fool," McCartney's eclectic "Tug of War," Steely Dan co-founder Donald Fagen's "The Nightfly" and pop balladeer Billy Joel's "Nylon Curtain" in the album of the year contest.

The song of the year category pits "Always on My Mind," "Ebony & Ivory" and "Rosanna" against Fagen's cheery "I.G.Y. (What a Beautiful World)," and "Eye of the Tiger," Survivor's upbeat rock theme song for the film "Rocky III."

Nominees for best new artist, the last of four major categories announced Tuesday by singer Dionne Warwick at a Beverly Hills news conference, run the gamut from the rockability trio Stray Cats and Australian new wave chart-toppers Men at Work to rhythm & blues vocalist Jennifer Holliday, power rockers Asia and Britain's synthesizer sensations The Human League.

The youthful Los Angeles musicians who formed Toto five years ago got nine nominations in all. Besides appearing in the three major categories, Toto recordings are up for best group pop performance, instrumental arrangement for vocals, vocal arrangement and best engineered record.

The group also was nominated as producer of the year, and band member Steve Lukather could earn a best rhythm & blues song Grammy for co-writing "Turn Your Love Around."

Wonder, who already has 15 Grammys, got eight nominations, half of them for duets with former Beatle McCartney on "Tug of War."

"Ebony & Ivory" is up for best pop group vocal as well as record and song of the year, and "What's That You're Doing" was nominated as best rhythm & blues group vocal.

Wonder scored another three nominations for his single "Do I Do" and a fourth for "That Girl."

Film score composer-conductor John Williams, who has won 11 Grammys, could add five more for music to "E.T. The Extra-terrestrial."

Fagen also picked up five nominations for his debut solo effort. Aside from album and song of the year, he appeared in the best male pop vocal and two arranging categories.

Nelson's recording of "Always on My Mind" earned a total of four nominations: record and song of the year, best country male vocal and best country song. In addition, Nelson could get a best country group vocal for "Sittin' On The Dock of the Bay," a duet with Waylon Jennings.

Cougar, whose "American Fool" LP was one of the top sellers of 1982, got three other nominations besides album of the year. The LP is also up for best engineered recording, the single "Hurts So Good" was nominated for best male rock vocal and Cougar — along with co-producer Don Gehman — was nominated producer of the year.

AT THE PODIUM — Singer Dionne Warwick, four-time Grammy winner, smiles at podium as she announces nominees for the 25th annual Grammy Awards. Winners will be announced Feb. 23. (AP Laserphoto)

Paper Chase To Boost Economy

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Budget-cutters at the 10-nation European Common Market are sharpening their axes on paper, in a drive to curb a mania for publishing, printing and copying that costs $70 million a year.

By the organization's own estimates, 13,000 trees a year are chopped down to make all the paper its institutions use for printed matter.

That pulp could end up as a copy of the thousand-page official journal or the plain black-and-white card with the word, "France" in front of President Francois Mitterrand at a summit meeting.

The Common Market in 1982 churned out printed matter ranging from a magazine published in Washington to keep Americans abreast of the latest twists and turns in the fight for a unified Europe to 50 copies of a speech Common Market chief executive Gaston Thorn gave in Zimbabwe.

There is the weekly bulletin of oil prices printed in all seven official languages and hot off the presses is a report summarizing the work of "The third information seminar on the radiation protection dosimeter intercomparison program." All 208 pages of it.

The Common Market Commission, secretariat for the bloc, the European Parliament, Council of Ministers, Court of Justice and a host of smaller agencies, put out 2 billion pages of printed material in 1982, according to commission figures. That's eight pages for every person in the 10 member countries and 10,000 pages for every Common Market employee.

Most of it was created in internal print shops or by private firms under contract.

But 60 million of the 2 billion pages were photocopies, spawned by hundreds of the humming, clicking, machines that have become the first target of a European Parliament fight against paper proliferation.

Leading the fight is Edward T. Kellett-Bowman, a British conservative member of the parliament's influential budgetary control committee.

The committee is one of the watchdogs of Common Market spending and according to the parliament's official handbook (413 pages) Kellett-Bowman is a management consultant.

He estimated in a widely disseminated committee report (15 pages) that it costs about 20 cents to photocopy 1,000 pages, but only about 8 cents to have 1,000 pages of material produced by outside contractors.

"In view of this high cost, it is difficult to accept that it is necessary to make 60 million photocopies a year," Kellett-Bowman said.

He saluted the practice of pricing most publications for sale, but lamented, "the fact is that the great bulk of publications is distributed free of charge."

For example, the latest monthly bulletin of foreign trade (133 pages) is sold for $6 a copy but hundreds of them are distributed free to people who ask for them.

He found that mailing lists, totalling 297,000 names, "are not reviewed on a regular basis so as to weed out addresses that have changed or addressees who have lost interest in the documents."

Kellett-Bowman also discovered it cost three times as much to have literature printed internally than it did by private firms under contract. The Common Market could save about $4 million a year if it went out of the printing business," he said.

Ease Some Buyer Risks

CHICAGO (UPI) —

Service agreements that pay to fix things like water heaters and air conditioning systems are removing some of the risks buyers face when they buy a home that isn't new.

It can be devastating to a family's budget to find a faulty electrical system, leaking plumbing or major appliances that must be repaired or replaced at great expense, says Ron Frye. Frye is an executive of a Chicago firm that offers on-year service agreements on many of the homes bought by a relocation company from people who are being transferred.

He says the agreements cover repair or replacement of central heating systems, central electrical air conditioning, plumbing fixtures and interior plumbing, water heaters and water softeners, interior electrical systems and built-in appliances for one year after the new buyer receives ownership.

Frye says similar agreements are offered by some general real estate brokerage franchise operations and other real estate firms, but buyers are not always aware of this option.

Frye is customer service director for the ETC Service Network, a joint venture of Guaranteed Home Inc. and Employee Transfer Corp., a national relocation company.

Told Must Win Home State Poll

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston's campaign manager says he must top other 1984 Democratic presidential contenders in a party straw poll in his home state of California this weekend if he is to dispel the idea that he can't win the nomination.

Six other would-be presidential nominees will attend the California Democratic Party convention in Sacramento, and before the meeting ends the 1,700 delegates will be asked whom they prefer as the 1984 nominee.

Sergio Bendixen, manager of the Cranston campaign, said a defeat on Cranston's own turf could "knock us out." But he said Cranston is now "in a comfortable position" in California.

Scholarship Search Firms Sprout Across Country

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Even if your child has never mastered anything more complicated than the game of Tiddlywinks," the letter to several thousand parents and students begins, "somewhere, sometime, someone has set up a scholarship fund for Tiddlywinks players."

Scores of scholarship search firms have grown up across the country in the past couple of years to help students find out what scholarships or grants they may qualify for, as government sources of student aid have dried up.

The author of the Tiddlywinks letter is George C. Jordan III, president of one of those firms, Scholarship Research of America, Lenox, Mass.

Jordan admitted in an interview that there really wasn't a "Tiddlywinks scholarship." But he and others in the burgeoning scholarship search business say that, armed with enough information about a student's background and career and education plans, they can use computers to match students with little-known scholarships they might qualify for.

The firms charge fees ranging from around $30 to $80. Jordan charges $60. And many, including Jordan, offer a money-back guarantee to supply students with a minimum number of scholarships they can apply for.

For $45, Julius Brodback, president of Scholarship

Resources of Columbus, Ohio says, for example, that he might match a particular sort of student with the "Golden Plate Award," a $600 scholarship from the food service industry for students interested in food service careers.

Brodback says there are even scholarships for people who can prove descent from either Union or Confederate Civil War veterans.

But some educators and at least one state agency have questioned the value of the service.

The central message: many of these firms are reputable, and can be of real help to some students. But some firms have been found to supply students with misinformation, information readily available for free elsewhere, or information about scholarships that a student couldn't possibly qualify for.

Donald Chenelle, Case Western Reserve University's director of financial aid and undergraduate admissions, gathered materials from a number of scholarship search firms and concluded they were, at best, identical to information available for free from guidance counselors or financial aid officers.

He said that in some cases, the scholarship sources provided by the firms were either out of date or inaccurate.

"My major concern is they're really ripping people off. Why should you pay for something readily available at a good library?" he said, adding that such common references as the "College Blue Book," "Scholarships, Fellowships and Loans" and the "Directory of Financial Aid to Higher Education" provide details about available financial aid.

"I'm not castigating all search firms," said Joe Russo, director of financial aid at the University of Notre Dame, "but with the onslaught of the home computer, basically anyone can set up shop as a scholarship service."

Leaf collection services are provided by the City's Public Works Department. For information, call 752-4137.

For their part, search firms insist that critics misunderstand their mission.

"We are a service company," said Andy Guidman, assistant to the president of Academic Guidance Service of Marlton, N.J., which sells its computerized scholarship data base to more than 100 licensees around the country. "Nobody says students can't do it themselves, or that guidance counselors can't help. But we provide a service, like H&R Block does taxes."

Still, some say that search firms entice students and parents with the long-shot chance that somewhere there might be an obscure source of financial aid that only special types of students can qualify for. In reality, the chances of actually getting such a scholarship might be about as good as winning a state lottery.

"Very often," Russo said, "the scholarship dollars are so restrictive that, for example, you have to be a history major from a particular part of a state to qualify for it."

A study of more than 40 student aid computer search organizations around the country released in December by the California Student Aid Commission concluded there "appears to be little matching of students and aid resources. For example, one student who applied to an organization was not eligible for 11 of the 18 sources listed."

The study also cited an experiment by California Lutheran College in 1981-82, in which the school contracted with National Scholarship Research Service of San Rafael, Calif., to give scholarship information to 90 students with B averages or better. Of those 90 students, only one received a scholarship—worth $2,000.

But the study also indicated that financial aid officers may not be totally fair in their criticisms of scholarship search firms.

"It has been common for financial aid administrators to say, 'students can find out the same information from libraries.' While that may be true for students who have

Concerned Over Israeli Tactics

Look To Larger Meat Exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. meat industry is hopeful that a new inspection facility at London's Gatwick Airport will lead to larger sales to the British market.

According to the U.S. Meat Export Federation, the new facility enables fresh meat to be shipped directly by air to the United Kingdom.

Almost a dozen shipments of fresh meat were cleared through Gatwick in November, the first month of the facility's operation, the federation said in a recent newsletter. Three shipments originated in the United States.

Prior to the Gatwick opening, fresh meat had to be airlifted into continental Europe and then transhipped into the United Kingdom.

Concerned Over Israeli Tactics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says it has expressed concern to Israel about recent attempts by Israeli soldiers to pass U.S. Marine checkpoints near Beirut airport in Lebanon.

Spokesman John Hughes said U.S. officials have made clear that the zone of deployment of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon is closed to all military troops other than those of Lebanon and the force, which is composed of American, French and Italian soldiers.

Hughes said he was unaware of the Israeli response.

He said there were more than two attempts by Israeli soldiers in recent days. He said the action "underscores the urgent necessity to ... negotiate the prompt withdrawal from Lebanon of Israeli and other forces."

"CHARGE IT"

New No. 2 At Pentagon Is Tough Corporate Chief

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — W. Paul Thayer, chairman of the LTV Corp., is a World War II ace who relaxes by flying an old Corsair fighter plane. This week he takes over day-to-day operations at the Pentagon — and he already has his eye on his new employer's equipment.

He'd like to fly the B1 bomber, the F-14 fighter, the F-15...

W. PAUL THAYER

A hard-charging corporate chief, Thayer knows volumes about military contracts after years of business with the Department of Defense. He has resigned from LTV, the Dallas-based concern that produces, among many products, the Navy's A-7 attack plane and the Army's Multiple Launch Rocket System.

Thayer raised eyebrows in November — when his name was being circulated as a successor to the retiring deputy defense secretary, Frank Carlucci — by saying defense spending should be scrutinized.

In a speech delivered in Youngstown, Ohio, Thayer said, "The time has come for Congress to get serious about controlling federal spending. The business community must pull together on this issue and urge Congress to leave no area of the budget untouched. That includes defense, the big entitlement programs and Social Security."

But he is a firm supporter of the administration. As chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, he split the organization's top ranks last summer by supporting Reagan's $100 billion package of tax increases and other revenue-raising measures. Other chamber leaders opposed any substantial rise in taxes.

Associates describe Thayer as a man who likes to be presented with a set of facts, make a decision and quickly move on to the next item.

A near-par golfer who also likes to ride motorcycles, Thayer is best known as a pilot.

He enlisted in the Navy before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and spent much of the war flying carrier-based fighters. He is credited with shooting down six Japanese planes in the Pacific and says he got another enemy plane over North Africa "that I was never given credit for."

Thayer and his wife, Margery, have a daughter, Brynn, who is an actress on the daytime television soap opera "One Life To Live."

Thayer, as deputy secretary of defense, will be the No. 2 man at the Pentagon. "I believe I'll be running it on a day-to-day basis," Thayer said in a telephone interview from Dallas. "... I expect to act much as a (corporate) chief executive officer," while Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger serves as "chairman of the board."

Weinberger spends much of his time testifying on Capitol Hill, meeting at the White House to discuss policy and traveling to seek public support for defense spending. The deputy secretary generally makes the day-to-day operating decisions.

Aside from the chance to "cap my career in a pretty important post," the new job offers a few perks that seem tailor-made for Thayer.

"I'm looking forward to getting into the new stable of planes," he said.

In the past few years, Thayer has spent some of his free time piloting a World War II-vintage Corsair fighter at air shows. Since it's owned by LTV, Thayer won't be able to use it anymore.

"I'll get some new planes at the Pentagon," he said, explaining that he wanted to fly the F-14, the Navy's main fighter, along with the F-15 and F-16, the top Air Force fighters, and the B-1 bomber.

Thayer also likes to pilot his company's jets, and once surprised LTV colleagues returning from a meeting by taking the controls of the company plane and putting it into a quick roll.

As head of a major aerospace contractor,

Thayer is widely known and respected in Washington. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, called Thayer an "excellent choice" to join the administration.

Thayer, a native of Henryetta, Okla., is the son of an oilfield contractor.

After World War II, he tested planes for Chance Vought, LTV's predecessor, and later for Northrop. Eventually, he returned to Chance Vought.

In 1970, with LTV in financial difficulties, he took over as president. Within four years, the corporation had set sales and earnings records.

Thayer won't be the first businessman to try to take hold of the Pentagon, and he realizes the job is too vast to try to tackle it all of a piece.

"I'd like to pick four or five chief things to work on," he said. "If anyone really tries to get their arms around the Pentagon in a short period, it's almost impossible."

Productivity On Farm Has Had Its Price

AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)

One of the most significant industrial booms of the century has been in the manufacture and marketing of products farmers need to produce crops and livestock.

But that also helped move farmers farther away from the legendary independence they once enjoyed. As in any other business, farmers must spend money if they are to make money. And, with greater costs, they have less to spend when prices for things they produce fail to keep pace.

The Agriculture Department says that gains in agricultural productivity in the last 40 years were largely due to farmers' use of purchased items — fertilizer, pesticides, improved seeds, better equipment. Those purchases increased nearly seven times, in dollar value.

Since 1940, crop output per acre has doubled. Output per man-hour of farm labor has increased 10-fold, while the amount of land used is almost unchanged.

"Once largely self-sufficient, U.S. farmers now spend nearly two-thirds of their cash receipts to purchase and finance things used in the production process," says a report in USDA's new yearbook.

"Between 1940 and 1980 purchased inputs — including credit — increased from 44 percent to 61 percent of cash farm receipts. Anticipated increased demands on the limited land and water resources of U.S. agriculture assure that purchased inputs will become even more critical in the future."

The report, a chapter in the book, was written by Paul Andrienas and Ted Eichers of USDA's Economic Research Service.

Fertilizer use in 1980-81 totaled 23.5 million tons. That was an increase of 478 percent from 1940. And by 1980 farmers' fertilizer bills totaled more than $9 billion.

Pesticides — chemicals to control crop and livestock pests — cost farmers $3.6 billion in 1981, a 10-fold increase in only 20 years.

"While much of this jump was a result of price rises, purchases more than quadrupled during the 21-year period after accounting for inflation," the report said.

Other big cost items for farmers include:

—Fuel, nearly $11 billion in 1981, seven times the cost in 1950, with most of the increase coming in the 1970s.

—Purchased feed for livestock, $19 billion, which accounts for about 15 percent of all farm production expenses. Feed costs were up 463 percent in the 30-year period, 1950-80.

—Machinery repair and operation $6.3 billion, up 473 percent from $1.1 billion 1950. In the meantime, according to the report, crop production gained steadily, along with productivity.

Farmers harvested 341 million acres in 1940 and got only 67 percent of the production they did 30 years later from 268 million acres. They spent 652 million man-hours to collect the 1940 harvest, compared to 179 million man-hours in 1970.

Moreover, in 1980 crops were harvested from 353 million acres, with total production 31 percent greater than in 1970. Only 141 million man-hours were needed.

"Modern machinery has been one of the major factors in reducing labor requirements in agriculture," the report said. "Although the total number of farm tractors remained almost unchanged between 1960 and 1981 at about 4.7 million units, total tractor horsepower available on farms nearly doubled."

The larger tractors and equipment have enabled one person to perform nearly all the tillage, planting, harvesting and other operations on several hundred acres of land.

Rising prices have contributed greatly to the gain in input costs. In the last 10 years, prices paid by farmers for purchased items needed to produce crops and livestock rose half again as fast as prices they got for what they produced.

Urge Voting Rights For Aliens, Too

By ROLF SODERLIND
Associated Press Writer
STOCKHOLM, Sweden
(AP) — Prime Minister Olof Palme's Social Democratic government wants to let non-Swedish residents vote in national elections while stripping some Swedes abroad of the same right.

The plan raises the possibility that non-citizen foreigners might even be elected to the Riksdag, Sweden's parliament. Under the Scandinavian kingdom's constitution, anyone eligible to vote in parliamentary elections also can run in them.

The government maintains that immigrant aliens should have voting rights because national political decisions affect them.

Additionally, it said in a recent announcement that Swedes without "significant ties" to their country — subjects with permanent residence abroad — should be denied their vote.

News of the plans, which would necessitate changes in the Swedish constitution, caused an uproar among the non-socialist opposition.

Opposition spokesmen contended the Social Democrats were trying to win votes. They referred to election analysts who say most non-citizen immigrants are left-leaning, while most expatriate Swedes are non-socialists.

Absentee ballots from abroad kept Palme from returning to power in the 1979 parliamentary election, a cliffhanger in which the non-socialists squeaked by with a margin of 8,000 votes.

On election night, a coalition of Social Democrats and Communists held a one-seat majority in the 349-seat parliament. Absentee ballots, counted three days later, gave the mandate to a three-party non-socialist bloc.

The Social Democrats swept back to power in the 1982 general elections, after a six-year absence.

Immigration Minister Anita Gradin, explaining the proposed moves, said immigration has made voting rights no longer just a matter of citizenship.

People affected by political decisions also should be able to influence them, she said. She noted that non-Swedish immigrants who live in Sweden for three years won the right to vote in municipal and regional elections in 1975.

There are about 240,000 eligible non-citizen immigrants in Sweden, mainly Finns, Turks, Yugoslavs and other nationals, or roughly 4 percent of the 6.3 million entitled to vote in local elections last September.

Some Americans are among them — chiefly servicemen who deserted in protest of the Vietnam War or youths who came here to evade the draft during the war. About 800 of them came to Sweden at the height of the war protest. The U.S. Embassy estimates that 100 to 300 remain. Neither it nor the Swedish Immigration Board has exact figures.

The Immigration Boards says many of those who remain have become Swedish citizens; those who have not would be eligible to vote if the government's plan is accepted.

Immigrants can vote in local elections in Denmark. Norway gives that right to citizens of other Scandinavian countries and plans to extend it to other immigrants this year. The Netherlands also is pushing for it, but a similar movement in Belgium failed.

As for the other proposed voting change, Justice Minister Ove Rainer said Swedes who settle permanently somewhere else should no longer have a right to vote unless, for instance, they work for a Swedish company.

"Only Swedes who have significant ties with Sweden in addition to their Swedish citizenship should be allowed to vote here," he said in presenting guidelines for a parliamentary committee to look into voting rights.

Nearly 17,000 Swedish citizens abroad were entitled to cast absentee ballots in the 1982 parliamentary election.

The Riksdag committee, chaired by a Social Democrat, is to complete its investigation before the 1985 general elections so a government proposal can be sent to the present parliament.

Cereal King Also Wrote Sex Manual

CHICAGO (AP) — A century ago, when reaching out to touch someone usually brought a slap, a prominent doctor went on a six-week honeymoon and fashioned a book on sex that touched all bases.

It's a far cry from the explicit sex stories and pictures commonplace today, but it served a purpose and apparently was an instant success.

Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, who founded the flaked cereal industry in Battle Creek, Mich., managed to bare sex and keep clothes on it at the same time. In this way, his "Plain Facts" of 504 pages wound up in many a home, where it was viewed as a clinical discourse instead of a sex trip.

"It is hoped that the reader will bear in mind that the language of science is always chaste in itself, and that it is only through a corrupt imagination that it becomes vested with impurity," Kellogg said in the preface.

A leather-bound third edition of "Plain Facts," published in 1882, was recently picked up by a book store browser for $3. Kellogg originally had worked on it with his bride, Ella Eaton, during their six-week honeymoon in New England in 1879.

The couple had no children, but reared and educated 42 orphans. Kellogg, who came from a family of 16 children, died in 1943 at age 91.

One of Kellogg's beliefs was that fashionable dress "leads to unchastity ... by its abuse of the body."

A century ago this passage could be taken as an erotic spasm: "Fashion requires a woman to compress her waist with bands or corsets. In consequence, the circulation of the blood toward the heart is obstructed. The venous blood is crowded back into the delicate organs of generation.

"Congestion ensues, and with it, through reflex action, the unnatural excitement of the animal propensities..."

Kellogg also thought the waltz had a direct influence "in stimulating the passions and provoking unchaste desires, too often leading to unchaste acts."

He set up what then was a sensual scene, quoting a woman who found pleasure in waltzing with a gentleman:

"The mere anticipation fluttered my pulse, and when my partner approached to claim my promised hand for the dance, I felt my cheeks glow a little sometimes, and I could not look him in the eyes with the same frank gayety as heretofore.

"But the climax of my confusion was reached when, folded in his warm embrace, and giddy with the whirl, a strange, sweet thrill would shake me from head to foot, leaving me weak and almost powerless, and really almost obliged to depend for support upon the arm which encircled me."

Kellogg, for years director of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, wrote 50 books on various subjects with a combined circulation of 1 million. He also was involved in scores of other endeavors, including putting a wheat batter through steel rollers from which he scraped off flakes to feed a patient with dental plate problems. It was the beginning of the flake breakfast food industry.

Kellogg had other convictions in his tome, including:

"Illicit intercourse has been a foul blot upon humanity from the earliest periods of history. At the present moment, it is a loathsome ulcer eating at the heart of civilization, a malignant leprosy which shows its hideous deformities among the fairest results of modern culture."

"Though he (a man) may never have committed an overt act of unchastity, if he cannot pass a handsome female in the street without, in imagination, approaching the secrets of her person, he is but one grade above the open libertine, and is as truly unchaste as the veriest debauchee."

"We have not the slightest hesitation in pronouncing flirtation as pernicious in the extreme. It exerts a malign influence alike upon the mental, the moral and the physical constitution of those who indulge in it."

Premature Baby Today Doing Great

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A tiny premature baby who survived a long, desperate search for a suitable intensive care unit is now a thriving, talking 1½-year-old who is "doing great" despite vision problems, her mother says.

Stephanie Marie McElrath weighed only 1 pound, 11 ounces when she was born three months prematurely in North Miami Beach, Fla., on June 27, 1981.

She suffered some eye damage during her fight for life and may never be able to read normally, but she tips the scales at 21 pounds, measures 30 inches long, and is learning to talk and walk.

"She's got about a 20-word vocabulary," says her mother, Carleen McElrath.

Stephanie got a doll for Christmas and will sit for hours chatting with it. "I taped her It's so cute," Mrs. McElrath told the Augusta Chronicle in a recent interview.

Stephanie, whose tenacious battle for life attracted national attention, was rushed by military aircraft to Augusta's Talmadge Memorial Hospital after her parents found that the only Florida hospitals with neonatal intensive care units equipped to handle her treatment had no space available.

After spending 69 days at Talmadge, Stephanie had developed sufficiently that she could be transferred to a less specialized facility in Florida.

But enthusiasm over her recovery slipped several months later when it was learned she suffered from retrolental fibroplasia, an eye disorder that frequently afflicts premature infants and is apparently caused by too much oxygen reaching her eyes.

The disease causes tiny blood vessels around the retina to constrict and then begin rapid branching. The resulting damage is imperceptible in some people but can cause blindness in others.

The extent of the damage to Stephanie's eyes probably won't be known for another year or more, her mother said, but it's unlikely she ever will be able to see well enough to read.

"We don't really know too much yet," Mrs. McElrath said, adding that Stephanie twice has undergone surgery in Memphis, Tenn., to repair detached retinas.

While waiting for a final assessment of Stephanie's eye damage, her parents, who have moved to Charleroi, Pa., have sought the aid of a Pennsylvania program for the visually impaired. It provides a variety of activities in meeting the social and physical needs of children like Stephanie.

Because the child cannot see to mimic the actions of others, like sitting and chewing, Mrs. McElrath is having to learn the special skills of teaching such tasks to her daughter.

Stephanie has started trying to walk, but her mother said she "really hasn't gotten the hang of it yet. She stands in her crib and kind of walks sideways."

Fast Action In Living Cells

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — In the living cells of plants and animals, important events can happen astonishingly fast.

For example, a green plant takes only a few trillionths of a second to capture the light energy it needs in order to turn carbon dioxide into sugar in the process known as photosynthesis.

At the University of Rochester, physics Professor Robert S. Knox is investigating photosynthesis, using ultra-short bursts of laser light developed at the university's Laboratory for Laser Energetics. As the powerful light pulses trigger a response in a green plant cell, Knox's research group uses specially designed electronic instruments to measure and analyze the cell's response.

One Building Ties Up Two Cities And Two States

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer
TEXARKANA, Texas
(AP) — It was supposed to be completed in 1979, but won't be finished for at least two more years.

It was supposed to save money by consolidating operations, but officials say they don't know where they'll get the funds to run it. And as soon as it opens, authorities expect to get sued.

The Bi-State Criminal Justice Project, a four-story shell of a building on State Line Avenue, has generated controversy since it was first proposed six years ago.

When completed, the structure is to serve citizens of Texarkana, Texas, and Texarkana, Ark., as well as residents of Miller County, Arkansas, and Bowie County, Texas.

The original cost was $7 million. Now the price is up to $11 million, and officials say they need $7 million more to finish the project.

"It never should have been built. It's a monstrosity," said lifelong Texarkana, Texas, resident John Quincy Mahaffey, editor of the Texarkana Gazette for 23 years. "And every time you get involved with Arkansas you run into trouble."

"Texas has always had more money than Arkansas, and they've managed it better, too," said Lantz Lurry, Miller County tax assessor for 24 years. "We don't have 2 cents over the budget.

There's nothing left to go nowhere. They went ahead and obligated themselves, but if you don't have it you just can't pay it."

All four city and county jails are substandard, and the new facilities on the top story of the building would solve that problem. The center on State Line Avenue also would house both cities' and counties' courts — the Texas judges would sit in Arkansas — and a joint communications center for the sheriffs' offices and police departments.

Texas had already planned to build new jails when Texarkana, Ark., Mayor Bobby Ferguson proposed in 1976 that all four entities throw in together and put the structure on the state line.

Originally, officials hoped to get the federal government to pay two-thirds of the cost. The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration committed $5 million in 1976, said Raymond Braswell, coordinator of the Bi-State Criminal Justice Project.

By the time officials got state and federal approval of the jail plans, acquired the land, and broke ground, the money was gone and so was the LEAA, which had been cut from the federal budget.

After searching unsuccessfully for other federal money, the two sides agreed that Texas would pay 60 percent of the completion cost and Arkansas 40 percent. The Texas side would own the building.

Texas readily came up with the money; Arkansas didn't.

By a 4-3 vote in October, the Miller County Quorum Court passed a 4 percent tax on utilities. Officials said they didn't plan to collect the tax — just use it as collateral on bonds to finance the rest of the project.

"Miller County is more hostile to it," said Braswell. "It seems to me that instead of looking for options, people are just thinking negatively."

"They (Arkansas residents) just seem to always vote 'no,'" said Bowie County Judge Ed Miller. "But we don't want to stress that state line much. They're very sensitive about it."

"Texas is bigger, and people in Arkansas just resent the Texas attitude," said Braswell. "You know: everything's bigger, everything's better in Texas."

The federal courthouse is on the state line because bad feeling ran so high in 1933 that the Arkansas Bar Association passed a resolution that no Arkansas lawyer would practice in a building on land that had ever belonged to the state of Texas, said lifelong resident 80-year-old Wilbur Smith.

He said that when he was a boy, he stood with other Texas residents — and the Texas fire department — and watched a house in Arkansas burn to the ground.

This old rivalry, which once produced annual riots when the two high schools played their Thanksgiving Day football games, isn't the only problem with the new cooperative effort.

There is also a legal question. Where are the prisoners when they are in the new jail?

It's not a new problem here. At one time Texarkana was best known as a "place to get away from," Mahaffey said. The federal building had a wall in the courtroom to keep prisoners awaiting trial from taking a one-step flight to another jurisdiction.

"You could break the law in Arkansas and then step across the line and spit on the police," said Smith.

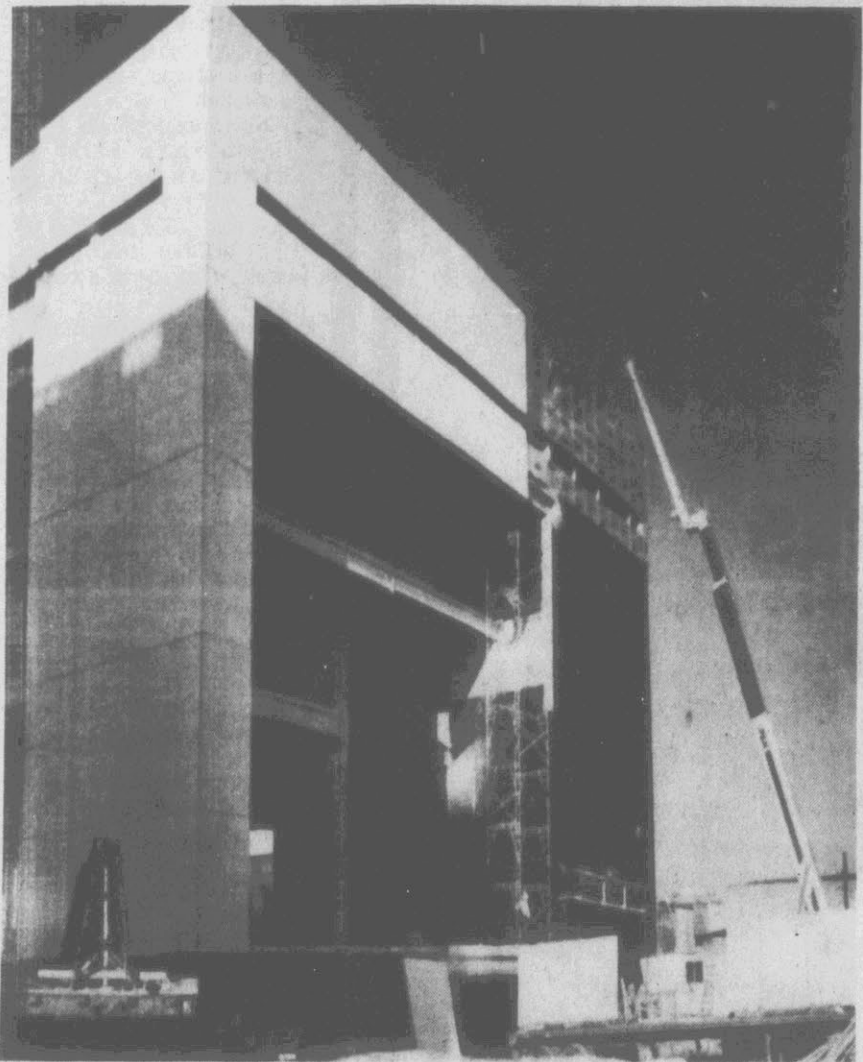

The free flight of criminals ended with the passage of "hot pursuit" laws enabling officers to chase people into other states and arrest them there.

The problem of prisoners in the new jail was solved in 1978 when both states passed special legislation making the prisoners "belong to the law enforcement agency that arrested them," said Miller.

But the question isn't completely settled.

"We expect when the building opens to have jurisdiction suits immediately," Braswell said. "But all the attorney general staffs have researched it so we feel we're safe. We're ready to get it over with."

Old Yugoslav Town Draws The Tourist

By PRUDENCE HELLER
Associated Press Writer
DUBROVNIK, Yugoslavia (AP) — The word "argosy" was born here, the language experts say, from the name it had in the Middle Ages, Arragosa, stemming from its ancient name, Ragusium. For Dubrovnik was a major trading and cultural center on the Adriatic. The laden merchant ships that moved in and out of port were known as argosies.

Today, tourists stream in and out of Dubrovnik. Of a morning, sitting in the outdoor cafe at the entrance to the gates of the walled "Old Town," you hear the tramp of tourist feet. You see the tourists, getting off the buses and out of the taxis, walking down the slope into a world of history and culture. For the old town is the heart and soul of Dubrovnik.

A "city of two cultures, Italian Renaissance and Byzantine Slav," H.M. Denham calls it in his book, "The Adriatic." However, as he points out, Dubrovnik's buildings are also "essentially her own," most of them dating from after a shattering earthquake in the 17th century.

The reference books tell you that Dubrovnik was originally built in the seventh century by Greeks moving up the coast from Epidaurus (now Cavtat), which had been destroyed by invaders. Then the Romans came; then it became part of the Byzantine Empire. It fought Venice, and later came under the nominal rule of Venice, Hungary, and Austria.

In the old town, there are no cars. The streets are blocks of stone so polished by feet and history that they shine at night as if they were wet. You may choose to stay in the old town, in a small pension or bed-and-breakfast up one of the stair-streets.

Or you may find a b-and-b just outside the walls, on the back harbor where Yugoslav children play on the pier and a restaurant called the "Mad Maison" sells T-shirts as well as good food.

There's also the possibility, of course, that you'll stay in one of the big hotels in Dubrovnik's new town or outlying regions.

But the old town is what you'll want to explore.

Walking atop the walls, you see sea, sky, and mountains, the Citadel across the back harbor, and the cable car taking tourists up a mountain where Napoleon had a fortress. You'll glimpse the back yards of the old town, too.

Take the ferry in the old port to the "swimming island" of Lokrum, where King Richard I is said to have been shipwrecked in 1190. The island also has a botanical garden with a seemingly endless variety of eucalyptus trees. Don't look for beaches on Lokrum. There are none to speak of. Little ladders lead down to the water from platforms. Or you just jump off the rocks into the clear, blue-green water.

Back in the old town, you'll explore the streets. Churches and museums galore. The Franciscan Church and monastery, Dominican Church and monastery, Jesuit church and monastery, a synagogue, a mosque. In Sponza Palace, someone is tuning a piano for an evening concert. You'll want to browse among the archives, including a 15th-century warrant for the arrest of a debtor.

There are eating places everywhere. Most of them have outdoor as well as indoor seating.

In the evening — concert time, or disco if you prefer. In Sponza Palace, in the open loggia under the sky, Vladimir Krpan may play. Another evening, in the Dominican church, there's the Dubrovnik Symphony Orchestra.

But perhaps your most memorable musical experience will come on Sunday morning, if you venture into the Serbian Orthodox Church. Unless you're familiar with the rites, you won't understand much of what's going on. But you won't care, either, for the unaccompanied music of those three women singing the service is heaven enough. Occasionally, the priest will join in.

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be used in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy

If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all items. But every item shown can be ordered for you.
