Social Security Bailout Plan Proposed

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, a bipartisan reform panel and congressional leaders agreed Saturday night on a seven-year, $169 billion Social Security bailout plan. It calls for a speed-up in scheduled increases in the payroll tax, taxing benefits received by upper- and middle-income pensioners and a six-months delay in this July's cost-of-living increase.

It was the same deal outlined by sources during a day of negotiations between the White House and members of the special National Commission on Social Security Reform, with the addition of a ban on withdrawals from Social Security by state and local governments, a move expected to save $3 billion.

The agreement was reached on the last scheduled day of the commission's existence, a life already extended from Dec. 31 by President Reagan.

Three members of the 15-member commission dissented — Sen. William L. Armstrong, R.-Colo., Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, and former Rep. Joe Waggoner, D-La. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., was absent.

Armstrong said it amounted to a "package of tax increases" and would do nothing to restore public faith in Social Security.

The commission's chairman, Alan Greenspan, opened a news conference to describe the agreement with the comment, "All of us swallowed very hard."

Here is how the compromise package shaped up:

— Half of Social Security benefits would be taxed starting in 1984 for single retirees with adjusted gross incomes above $20,000 and for couples above $25,000. The negotiators agreed that Social Security benefits would not be counted in determining whether a person was above those thresholds. This would raise $30 billion.

— The once-only, six-month delay in this year's scheduled July cost-of-living increase would be coupled with liberalized rules for Supplemental Security Income, so that elderly people on that welfare program would not suffer any net loss. The six-month freeze would save $40 billion between now and 1990, $4 billion of that in the first year.

The 36 million Social Security beneficiaries normally would get an estimated 5 percent increase in their July 3 checks, reflecting inflation over the last year. The delay would mean that the average beneficiary, who gets about $400 a month, would lose $120.

— Some of the payroll tax increases scheduled for 1985 and 1990 would be speeded up to bring in an extra $40 billion by 1990, but workers would get an offsetting tax credit for at least five years to cushion them from actually paying more taxes overall.

— The Treasury would pay the Social Security trust funds $18 billion next year to reimburse them for military retirement credits.

— In computing cost-of-living boosts in 1988 and beyond, if Social Security reserves fell below 20 percent of the system's annual payments, retirees would get the lower of the rise in the Consumer Price Index or the average nationwide increase in wages.

— Expanding coverage to new federal employees and all employees of non-profit groups starting in 1984, to bring in about $24 billion.

— A ban on further withdrawal of state and local government employees from Social Security once the commission's recommendations become law, estimated to save about $3 billion.

— Liberalization of the way Social Security credits are computed for widows and other changes affecting women.

The panel's Republicans reportedly will recommend a gradual lowering of the relative benefit level in distant years, while Democrats will suggest that taxes can be raised if necessary.

Though the package is designed to keep Social Security solvent through 1989, it would erase only about two-thirds of the system's expected red ink over the next 75 years — estimated at about $1.6 trillion.

Already the Social Security trust fund handling pension checks has been forced to borrow money twice from the relatively more flush funds handling disability payments and Medicare.

10 Onslow Pupils Remain Hospitalized After Wreck

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Ten elementary school pupils were listed in good condition at a hospital Saturday, one day after a train hit a school bus at a road crossing.

Two of 12 students admitted Friday to Onslow County Memorial Hospital were released Saturday, said nursing supervisor Shelby Buffington.

Cindy Smith, 11, of Jacksonville, who earlier was listed in serious condition with a fractured pelvis, was upgraded to good condition and removed from intensive care, Ms. Buffington said. All the other patients, aged 11-14, had broken bones.

Twenty-nine other pupils were treated and released Friday after the train hit the bus at 20 mph, pushing it 200 feet along the track.

The bus driver, 17-year-old Marilyn Francine Mills of Jacksonville, said her brakes failed before the bus was hit by the Seaboard Coast Line engine pulling nine freight cars. She said she tried to back off the tracks before the train hit at around 3 p.m. Friday.

"I hit the brakes," a weeping Miss Mills said as she helped tend the injured children after the collision. "I pumped them. I pumped them hard, but the bus wouldn't stop. We were right over the tracks when it hit."

"We saw the train coming and we heard its horn and everyone tried to get to the other side of the bus," said Joey Pullian, a seventh-grader who was on the bus.

Another pupil, Terrance Bankhead, said Miss Mills tried to back away from the crossing on U.S. 17.

"She tried to get off the tracks by getting it in reverse, but it wouldn't shift so then she tried to go forward," he said.

No charges were filed pending further investigation, said North Carolina State Police Sgt. Donald Cumbo.

Asked if the brakes had failed, Cumbo said: "No, we don't think so. The bus had stopped and moved forward."

He said the train's engineer saw the bus stop, but just before the train entered the crossing the bus lunged forward.

Dozens of passers-by stopped to help move children into 14 ambulances from Onslow County rescue squads and the Naval Regional Medical Center at Camp Lejeune.

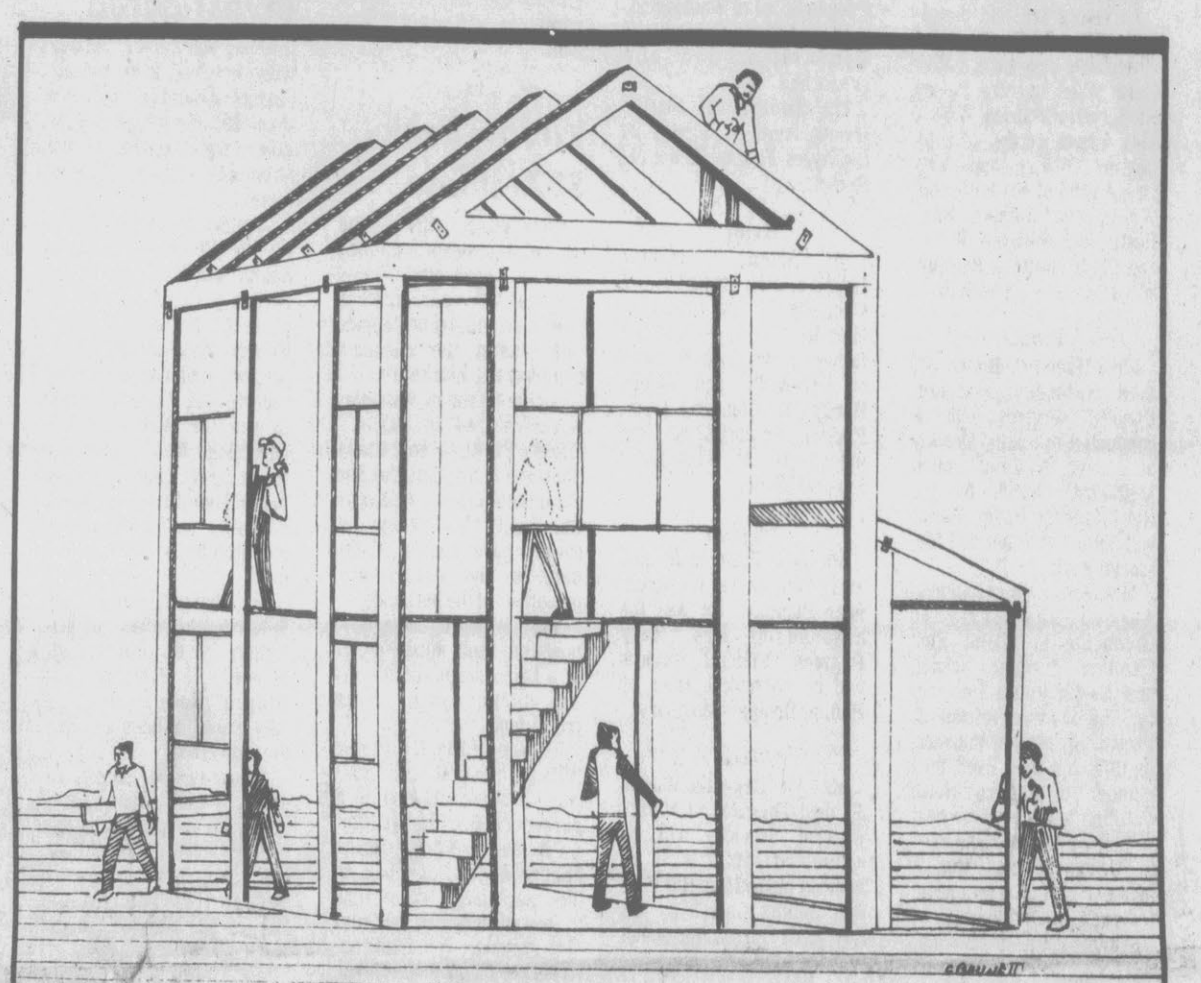

The children were among 53 in grades four through eight at Tabernacle School near Jacksonville.

Lenders, Builders Say It's Time For Housing

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"I feel this is the lowest single-family rates have been in over 15 months, and I'm optimistic that the rates will drop lower. I don't anticipate a return to the single digit mortgage rate ... Now is a good time to buy."

If the thought of buying or building a home has crossed your mind, now might be the time to give it more serious consideration, several local contractors and home mortgage lenders suggested last week.

Burney Warren of First Federal Savings & Loan Association said, "In my opinion, we're back in a period when it's the best time to buy a house. The availability is very good for mortgage money," now and interest rates "have eased down considerably."

Warren, who expects interest rates to stabilize in the next several months, said owning your own home is "becoming more and more affordable every day."

But Warren said, "I don't think customers should wait for rates to come down."

Home prices are now stable because of the economy, Warren said. But "with rates coming back down ... once again the price of housing will increase fairly rapidly" over the next few years.

In North Carolina there is no prepayment penalty. In the event rates do come significantly lower, a customer can always refinance, Warren said. "A delay in buying would be a mistake at this time. I think it's a good time to buy."

And First Federal, along with other mortgage lenders in the area, is offering firm 30-year loans now, rather than flexible or adjustable interest loans so popular in the past.

First Federal's interest rate Thursday was 13⅛.

Gwynn Tyson at First American Savings & Loan said that firm's fixed rate Thursday was 13½ percent, and said "money is available."

She also said "applications have started to pick up ... we're now taking applications, while we didn't for a few months.

"I don't know if the rates will come down. It was up around 18 percent at one time but we never made any loans at those rates. That makes a normal house not very reasonable anymore."

Larkin Little at Home Federal Savings & Loan said, "Now is a good time to buy." That firm had "money available at 12⅞" on Thursday, a fixed rate for owner-occupied homes, he said.

"I feel this is the lowest single-family rates have been in over 15 months, and I'm optimistic that the rates will drop lower.

"I don't anticipate a return to the single digit mortgage rate," Little said, but "I feel rates will settle at 11½ to 12½ in the first part of the third quarter of this year."

The fixed rate at North State Mortgage Corp. (a wholy owned subsidiary of North State Savings & Loan) Thursday was 12⅝, according to Spence Causby.

"We're processing a substantial number of loans right now," Causby said, "and perhaps half of them are first-time home buyers. That's indicative of what this market has brought on.

"Things are picking up and it's noticeable. We may be seeing a very healthy situation come about right now."

From the builders point of view, Connally Branch of Bill Clark Construction Co., predicted that in Greenville and Pitt County, "Building permits for residential construction will probably over double in 1983 what they were in 1982."

Greenville is a fortunate area, with a well rounded and relatively stable economy, compared with the Northeastern United States, Branch said. Therefore there is "a lot of demand, an unusually high demand for new construction ... more than in resale. There's a pent-up demand for new housing," because for almost three years "there's been very little new construction."

Recent sales, Branch said, have been "two to one new construction over resale properties. That's a complete reversal over what it used to be. We're projecting we'll do 85 residential units that year."

While Branch said he is "encouraged that rates will continue down," he predicts that housing loan funds will be available to a more limited degree, "and a little more expensive than in the past."

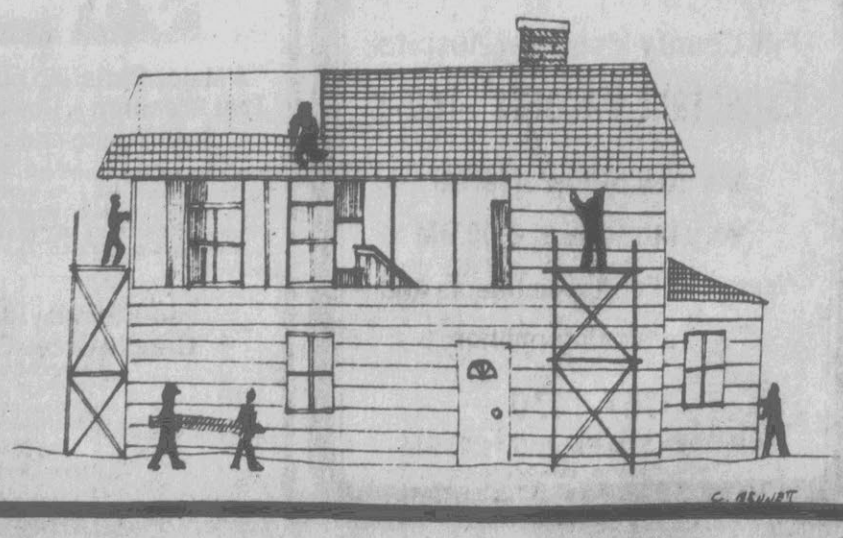

Interest rates for home loans, Branch suggested, "will be in line with the prime rate," where in the past they have been "below prime rate," because "everybody is competing for the same interest rate."

Mont Gaylord of Gaylord Construction Co., which specializes in the more expensive homes, said "interest (in larger, more costly homes) has picked up substantially since the rates have come down."

High interest rates in the past have "hurt the larger house," but not as much as it has bothered homes in the $40,000 to $50,000 range. The problem, he said, has been that "people moving up can't sell their smaller house."

He suggested that people planning to build large homes will wait for the rates

Trailways Or Sunbird

Travel Choice Is Limited

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The weather is cold and rainy in Greenville. Wouldn't it be nice to be sitting on a tropical beach under a swaying palm tree?

How can area residents get from eastern North Carolina to the Caribbean? What if you don't have a car and you want to go to Miami?

Greenville residents who need to leave town in a hurry and have no car have only two choices of alternate transportation: Trailways buses and Sunbird Airlines.

Sunbird Airlines offers commuter flights that shuttle between the Pitt-Greenville Airport and Raleigh-Durham, Charlotte and Baltimore. The 15-passenger planes will fly the traveler to a major airport where connections can be made to any city or country.

A one-way ticket from the Pitt-Greenville Airport to the Raleigh-Durham Airport costs $57.

Sunbird has a joint-fare arrangement with all major airlines. If a traveler is flying to Raleigh and then will take another airline out of that airport, the ticket to Raleigh will cost $28.

According to Sunbird's Lynn Boseman, the majority of the passengers on the flights are businessmen flying to Raleigh to connect with other airlines. But recently people have been getting joint fares to warmer climates. "Quite a few people have been going to Miami recently," she said. "I don't know what's going on down there."

The bus station in Greenville is a busy place, especially during holidays. Manager Roy Minton says that 13 Trailways buses arrive and depart from the Greenville bus station daily.

The number of passengers riding the bus varys according to the day of the week and the time of the year. "In a college town like Greenville, the biggest days are Thursday and Friday," according to Minton. "Not only are the students leaving, but people are going away for long weekends.

"Many students head west to Raleigh to connect with other buses to go west and south or to catch a plane," Minton said. The majority of the non-student passengers travel north for such spots as New York, Maryland and Connecticut, Minton said.

UNC System Short Of Goal

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina system has not obtained the 8 percent black ratio on its 11 predominantly white campuses that it had hoped to reach by this year, a system vice president says.

Raymond H. Dawson told the UNC Board of Governors on Friday that the system must integrate faster if it is to meet goals agreed to in the state's 1981 desegregation agreement with the federal government.

Under the July 1981 consent decreee, which ended a decade-long dispute between UNC and the federal government, the systemwide enrollement at white schools should be 10.6 percent black by the fall of 1986. Black schools should have an enorllment that is 15 percent white.

This fall, black enrollment on the 11 white campuses totaled 7.8 percent and white enrollment on the black campuses was about 6 percent.

"Our annual rate of change is not where it should be if we are going to meet the goals of the consent decree," Dawson said. "We had hoped to be at 8 percent this year and we are not there, so a double effort (in recruiting minority students) is even doubly important," Dawson said.

He said black enrollment was lagging on white campuses partly because the number of blacks in the UNC system has declined overall.

"That has never happened before," he said, adding that there also was a systemwide decline in firt-time black freshmen across the campus.

Dawson says the recession has made it more difficult to attract blacks to historically white shools and white to the system's five historically black schools.

Widow Seeks $37 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — The wife of a gardener who died after he apparently inhaled the weed killer paraquat has filed a $37 million negligence suit against the chemical company that markets it.

Lucille Wilson of Mahopac, N.Y., charged in the suit filed Friday in State Supreme Court that the San Fancisco-based Chevron Chemical Co. "knew or should have known of the dangers and deadly propensities" of the herbicide.

Mrs. Wilson's 25-year-old husband, Scott, died Nov. 13 at a Bronx hospital following an unsuccessful lung transplant.

Attorney Harry Lipsig said Wilson inhaled paraquat Aug. 30 while working as a gardener in Boca Raton, Fla.

Chevron spokesman Michael Marcy said labels on the packaging warn that "...one swallow can kill" and also provide "explicit instructions on protective steps to follow in order to avoid swallowing."

"We understand that Mr. Wilson did not follow those protective steps and was not wearing the protective equipment and clothing called for by the label," Marcy said.

Airline Moves Into New Office

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Four years after it pulled its headquarters out of New York City, American Airlines finally finishes moving into its new office building Monday.

The nation's second-largest airline has been using two leased buildings in Grand Prairie while awaiting completion of the new $150 million, 550,000-square-foot headquarters near the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

The building was financed with $147 million in Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport special revenue bonds. American will lease the building from the airport, which owns the 350-acre site inside the Fort Worth city limits.

American, with more than $4 billion in revenues last year, becomes Fort Worth's largest corporate citizen.

Two Accidents Investigated

Four out of-town drivers were involved in traffic accidents resulting in more than $300 of damage Friday, according to reports of the Greenville Police Department.

Vehicles driven by Roberta Marya Watts of Winston-Salem and Richard Michael Benton of Goldsboro collided at 4:35 p.m. on 10th Street Friday causing $1,100 in property damages. Police reports said Ms. Watts failed to see the Benton vehicle emerging from behind a truck. No charges were made. Damages to the Watts car were estimated at $300 and $800 to the Benton vehicle.

No charges were made following a traffic accident Friday when Jarma Jill Parker of Raleigh and Allison Rose Karam of Albemarle collided on East Seventh Street.

According to police records, Parker went left of center to make a turn and collided with the Karam vehicle. Damages were estimated at $200 for the Parker car and $500 to the Karam vehicle.

Rates ...

to bottom out. "When they hit bottom and take an upward move, then you'll really see interest in building increase."

David Evans Jr. of The Evans Co. said that, while interest rates are coming down, "they're still not low by any means. I feel 12 percent is on the high side for most consumers, and I think they will be below 12."

While "there is activity now in construction," Evans predicted that when "the unsold inventory of resale houses" is cleared away, construction of new homes will be even better.

However, Evans suggested that "anybody thinking about building should move quickly. The lumber industry is very volatile in price structure and I aanticipate the price of construction will go high. Should the demand pick up, the prices will increase rapidly. Move quickly while we still have lower prices."

Study Of Agent Orange Planned By CDC Staff

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Center for Disease Control will conduct a $3 million study to determine if Vietnam veterans were harmed by exposure more than a decade ago to the defoliant Agent Orange, it was announced Saturday.

The Atlanta-based disease control center, part of the Department of Health and Human Services, will conduct the study under an interagency agreement between the Veterans Administration and HHS, the two government agencies said.

Under the agreement, $3 million will be transferred from the VA to the center.

VA Administrator Harry Walters said, "CDC has earned the confidence of the American public many times and in many ways on scientific subjects, and I am confident that their findings will be accepted by veterans and others concerned about veterans health."

The American Legion, the nation's biggest veterans organization, hailed the action and expressed confidence it would lead to a trusted answer to fears about the herbicide.

Announcement of the study by the came less than three months after the General Accounting Office, in a report to Congress, said the VA had failed to adequately address the matter.

Nearly 16,000 veterans are seeking compensation for health problems, ranging from skin conditions to cancer, that they attribute to Agent Orange.

Thus far, the government has refused all Agent Orange compensation claims, saying there has been no evidence the herbicide has or can cause any disorders. These veterans, however, can receive VA treatment.

From 1965 to 1971, an estimated 12 million gallons of Agent Orange were sprayed by U.S. forces in Vietnam, killing jungle growth that had helped conceal enemy movement.

Travel ...

Minton said. For $99, a passenger gets a one-way ticket for travel to any point on the west coast or anywhere in the country that Trailways or Greyhound goes.

The furthest point that a bus rider can travel from Greenville without changing buses is New York City. Minton said that with one change in Raleigh, the traveler can arrive in Dallas, and with a change in Rocky Mount, a passenger can go to Miami.

"There has been a steady flow (of bus riders) since Thanksgiving and through Christmas," Minton said. "Now business is down quite a bit. The next big rush will be Easter."

Area residents have been taking many trips this Christmas season, according to Harriet Clark of Quixote Travels in Greenville. Many people have been going to Mexico and the Caribbean, she said. "They are going to Mexico because of the low value of the peso. With the value of the dollar so high, it's a really good deal," according to Ms. Clark. Travelers are going to the Caribbean because it's warm, even though the winter months here are the most expensive months to visit the islands, she said.

Greenville residents are also taking advantage of the skiing weather, Clark said, with trips to Denver and Aspen and to Wintergreen, Va.

"There is a good business for cruises year round," she said.

Clark said that there are package deals all year to anywhere, and that arrangements can be made in Greenville for travel to anywhere in the world.

According to Mary Wesley Harvey at the Greenville Travel Center, the state of the economy has had little effect on travel. "People are still traveling, but they are money conscious," she said. "People are now more cautious before they take a trip. They are shopping around and are looking for the deals."

Package deals to such locales as the Caribbean and Las Vegas can save the traveler money, she said.

Ms. Harvey said that many recent travelers have been going to Mexico, Hawaii and the Carribbean. "Those who have been to Disneyworld and Epcot Center in Florida have had good experiences," she said.

If the travel bug bites, the Greenville resident can take a bus or hop a plane and arrive anywhere in the United States, or the world.

Wallace Takes Oath

This inauguration — his fourth — promises striking contrasts to his first, when his stark and defiant stand launched a painful new epoch of racial confrontation in Alabama.

Wallace, now 63 and confined to a wheelchair since being shot more than a decade ago, is seeking to make peace with blacks.

Already Wallace has named blacks to two top posts in his administration — the most statehouse influence given blacks in Alabama this century — and he has lined up four blacks for committee chairmanships in the state House, a record number.

"Let us rise to the call of freedom-loving blood that is in us and send our answer to the tyranny that clanks its chains upon the South," Wallace said on that cold, windy inaugural day. "In the name of the greatest people that have ever trod this earth, I draw the line in the dust and toss the gauntlet before the feet of tyranny, and I say segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever."

But by the 1982 campaign, Wallace was rid of racial rhetoric and talking about something else.

Panel Calls For Prosecution Of Dumpers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House investigations subcommittee says the FBI and local police should do more to catch and jail "midnight dumpers" of toxic chemical wastes, some of whom have been linked to organized crime.

In a report on a 2½-year inquiry being released Sunday, the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee recommended that state police and the FBI turn more attention to illegal dumping, and that Congress consider giving investigators for the Environmental Protection Agency full police powers, including the right to carry weapons and make arrests.

It also recommends that federal law require a prison term after a second conviction for mishandling toxic wastes.

"The illegal dumping of hazardous substances and the involvement of organized crime ... threaten efforts of federal and state regulators to resolve the critical national problem of hazardous waste disposal," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the panel's chairman.

"In the subcommittee's judgment, the best weapon to combat improper or illicit activity in the hazardous waste industry is strong, effective law enforcement," he said.

The subcommittee cited evidence that the mob has expanded into toxic chemical disposal because high profits can be made when it is done improperly.

The subcommittee's report is critical of EPA's enforcement effort under the Reagan administration, saying it "came to a virtual halt" due to mismanagement and indifference.

In a formal dissent, however, Republican members of the panel took issue with that part of the report.

While agreeing that EPA "sent conflicting and confusing signals" as it was being reorganized early in the administration, the GOP members said, "the evidence now available demonstrates that EPA has resumed its civil enforcement case referrals to historical levels."

Robert M. Perry, EPA associate administrator, said that in the last nine months, EPA has referred 122 environmental enforcement cases to the Justice Department, "a rate which compares favorably with previous years."

He said the agency has been working with federal and local law enforcement authorities against organized crime. "For the first time in EPA's history, experienced criminal investigators are available in the agency to investigate such allegations," he said.

He called the subcommittee's report "unprincipled" and said it did not reflect the EPA's recent accomplishments, but repeated the "same, tired, old criticisms which we have answered time and time again over the last year."

The subcommittee's report was based on seven public hearings by the panel between September 1980 and April 1982. They focused on New Jersey, detailing organized crime involvement in that state's waste disposal industry and the response of state and federal officials.

Citing testimony by those officials and a former FBI informant, the subcommittee said that organized crime has long controlled the garbage disposal industry in New Jersey.

Through Local 945 of the Teamsters Union, which the subcommittee said was "dominated by organized crime," the mob enforced a rigid system of "property rights" for waste disposal contracts through threats, intimidation and violence, including murder, the report said.

The report noted that a legitimate company may pay $50 to $100 for proper disposal of a single 55-gallon drum of poisonous wastes, and thousands of dollars for single tank truck load. But a midnight dumper can simply empty the load in a ditch and pocket the money.

In 1978, New Jersey and federal officials organized a joint federal-state strike force against the problem, paid for with a $1.5 million three-year federal grant.

Educators Told To Seek Change In Budget Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading child-welfare advocate, attacking President Reagan's five-year, $1.6 trillion defense buildup, urged academic leaders Saturday to involve themselves and their students in the battle to reverse that spending plan.

"It's a battle about whether we will invest in human capital ... or in more and more arms," Marian Wright Edelman, director of the Children's Defense Fund, told the Association of American Colleges and the American Conference of Academic Deans.

While acknowledging that massive federal budget deficits must be brought under control, Ms. Edelman said the issue is whether limited funds will be spent for "more and more weapons of death rather than tools of life."

"Every citizen needs to question whether the Department of Defense can spend this amount of money efficiently over the next five years," she said.

Pointing to positive aspects of student involvement during the tumultuous 1960s, Ms. Edelman said it's up to college administrators and faculty members to find ways of again exposing students to the critical policy choices that will be made in the coming year.

Those choices involve much broader issues than the education budget, she said, and the stand taken by academic leaders will "shape the American character for decades."

Ms. Edelman listed numerous instances in which domestic programs were targeted for cuts while defense spending went untouched. She cited as one example a proposal to reduce funds for children's vaccinations while the Pentagon continued spending millions to immunize the pets of military personal.

Sunday Opinion

Project Funding Big Objective

The General Assembly convened in Raleigh Wednesday. There were 29 new faces among the legislators. More blacks were elected to serve this year. There were four in 1981 and 12 this year.

Republicans took a loss this year following the 1982 elections. There are six Republicans in the Senate compared to 10 last year and 18 Republicans are in the House compared to 24 last year.

This may also be the quietest legislative session in many years. Gov. Hunt is coming up on the end of the second of two four-year terms. He is not inclined to recommend major new programs. Even if he, or legislative leaders, were fired up on new programs there would be no money there to finance them.

The main topic of debate in this session of the Legislature will be money. The state faces a short fall this year and the outlook for increased revenues in the next two years is not hopeful. Thus the legislators will be looking for ways to maintain the programs we already have, lift the state employees and teachers' salary freeze and finance the flagging highway construction program.

Because of all that, it is predicted this will be a short session, perhaps ending in May. In the meantime there will not be a great deal for the lawmakers to do as they await late estimates of revenues for the biennium, based on the outlook for the nation's economy.

Legislative leaders should be dedicated to keeping this session short and efficient. If there is not much to do there is no point in the General Assembly hanging around Raleigh.

This session can do something significant if it has the wisdom to find funds to maintain present programs and for highway construction — and for the entire state government it might be positive to improve what we now have over the next two years rather than seeking new directions.

Road Tax Benefits Already Apparent

The direct benefits of the 5 cents per gallon federal tax increase on gas are already beginning to show in North Carolina.

The state Department of Transportation says it may speed up planning for a new bridge across the Albermarle Sound because of the additional money the road tax will provide.

Design work is starting on the $40 million 3.5-mile bridge and the new structure could be completed in 1986.

The project would replace a 45-year-old structure between Chowan and Washington counties and the need is considered crucial by state planners.

A spokesman said other bridge projects could benefit from the new money, depending, of course, on the state Legislature finding matching funds.

None of us relish the idea of paying the additional highway taxes, but the status of this project shows us there will be benefits to North Carolina. And in a state as dependent as we are on highway transportation, the road building program simply cannot be allowed to bog down.

Legislators Get A Change In Food

RALEIGH — A friend of Sen. Craig Lawing, president pro tem of the state Senate, got a sweetheart of a deal from the Legislative Services Commission this month — a deal that gives him control of the legislative cafeteria, snack bar and vending machines. In return, he'll pay no rent and the state will pay his utilities.

Ron Faison of Raleigh began operating the legislative food outlets this week. Previously, the state ran the cafeteria, snack bar and vending machines and lost an average of $11,000 a year in the process. Last year the loss was $15,000, says George Hall, acting legislative services officer. By giving Faison the contract, Hall says, the state will save itself that annual cost.

The cafeteria, which serves full meals, is open Tuesday through Friday while the Legislature is in session. The snack bar, which serves sandwiches, soups, drinks, salads and junk food, is open year round. During sessions, the two serve as many as 800 people daily. The snack bar serves an average of 150 daily at other times.

In an interview after he was awarded the contract, Faison said he was taking a risk by assuming an operation that has consistently lost money. Consider that risk, however, with two grains of salt.

First, the state won't be ridding itself of all the costs that led to those deficits. The state will continue to pay for the utilities to heat and cool the eating places and to prepare the food. The state also paid recently to move the cafeteria to new, roomier quarters in the building.

Second, Faison won't be paying state employee scale for workers. The lowest paid state food service worker was making $8,000 a year — top pay was $12,500. If Faison pays minimum wage of $3.35 an hour, as Hall says he's indicated, he'd be paying at the rate of $7,000 a year.

Employees in the building are quite upset. The cafeteria food was bad. The soup was weak, the sandwiches skimpy, the meals fattening. But the snack food bar was good. Sandwiches were small but tasty — especially the egg salad. The soups were made with real meat. And the hot dogs were, without question, among the best in Raleigh. Probably due to the chili sauce.

Faison's food is a different matter. He owns "Ron's Fast Foods" in Raleigh and he operates the cafeterias in both the Wake County Courthouse and Raleigh's City Hall — places where you wouldn't want to eat very often.

But employees in the legislative building have little choice. There are few restaurants close by — especially on busy days when they cut their lunch periods short. It'll be interesting to see what the often time-pressed legislators think of the food.

Hall says Faison was the state's only choice. He sent notices to 30 food businesses, but only five replied and only Faison submitted a bid, Hall says.

Ouster Turned Gramm Into Celebrity

WASHINGTON — The passion that led House Democrats to drive Phil Gramm from their cloakroom not only played into his secret plan to get elected as a Republican in his overwhelmingly-Democratic district but instantly transformed him from a parochial nobody into a national celebrity.

As Gramm barnstorms his sprawling Texas 6th District, there is no doubt that he will win the Feb. 12 special election for his old seat. Beyond that, he is the instant hero of a Texas Republican Party laid prostrate by the loss of the governorship last November. The party has found its next new statewide candidate — one who could close the widening gap between its populist and Tory wings.

All this would have been impossible had House Democrats heeded Br'er Gramm's plea not to throw him into the briar patch by purging him from the budget committee. The Gramm affair, therefore, tells what can happen when cool calculation collides with hot passion.

Such a triumph for Gramm seemed unlikely a few weeks ago. Mainstream Democratic congressmen salivated at the prospect of handing Ronald Reagan's favorite Democrat this choice: humiliation as a Democrat purged from the budget committee or anonymity as just one more conservative Republican, followed by certain defeat for re-election in November 1984.

Gramm's scheme for avoiding this choice was to resign from Congress and seek immediate election as a Republican — a scheme so bold that Republican political experts warned it could make a bad situation worse. White House political aide Lee Atwater, according to Gramm, "did not think it was a terribly good idea." One Reagan adviser called it "stunt flying" that would end in a crash. "Have you thought this through?" asked Peter O'Donnell, longtime Texas Republican strategist.

The national publicity also rocketed Gramm to the top of the depleted GOP ranks in Texas. He has informed Sen. John Tower he will not oppose him in the 1984 Senate Republican primary, but he would be the leading prospect in the unlikely event that Tower does not seek a fifth term. Clearly, hopes nurtured by Gramm's former Democratic ex-colleagues that he would fade away as a Republican were self-deluding.

Big Day For Religious Freedom

WASHINGTON — Bill Ball won another big one the other day, and for all those who believe in religious freedom it was cause for celebration. The sovereign state of Michigan got put in its place by an Ingham County circuit judge, Ray C. Hotchkiss.

For those who may have missed earlier installments in a continuing drama, William B. Ball of Harrisburg, Pa., is the nation's foremost constitutional lawyer in the First Amendment field of religion. He won the landmark case of Yoder vs. Wisconsin, involving Amish children. In another case he licked the state of Ohio. He whupped North Carolina. He may yet win his toughest fight, involving Bob Jones University in South Carolina.

In each of these cases, the issue is essentially the same: Ball is defending the constitutional right of non-conforming, unconventional, unoffending persons to exercise their religion free of harassment by government. The First Amendment says flatly that Congress shall make "no law" respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. That provision many years ago was extended to state legislatures as well as to the Congress.

But the sovereign state of Michigan, in patent indifference to the First Amendment, enacted a law that provides on its face for "the supervision of denominational and parochial schools." The act demands a certain "course of studies" in such schools. Under the law, all teachers at these schools must obtain state certification and must pass a state-controlled examination.

There is still more to this Michigan law. Section 4 of the act authorizes the state superintendent of public instruction to close non-complying schools and to force their students to attend public schools. One of the purposes of the act, not so explicitly stated, is to recover for the public schools the $2,000 in state aid that is lost whenever a pupil goes to a private school.

In 1979 the state began threatening the Sheridan Road Christian School and the First Baptist Church School in the small town of Bridgeport, a few miles south of Saginaw. Parents and pastors fought back with a petition for injunction. The case came on for trial in April of last year before Judge Hotchkiss. Last month the court held the key sections of Michigan's law unconstitutional.

It developed at trial that the state's own witnesses were in hopeless confusion about what "courses of study" could be required of religious schools. The act demanded that these courses, whatever they might be, must meet the "same standard" of courses in public schools, or be generally "equivalent" to the public schools. On cross-examination, Ball reduced the state's expert witnesses to the kind of babble described in that famous trial in Alice in Wonderland. Some of the witnesses said "important" and some said "unimportant."

A major issue had to do with certification of teachers. Was there any evidence, Ball inquired, to prove that state-certified teachers are better teachers than non-certified teachers? Alas, there was none.

Dr. Russell Kirk testified that as a general proposition, certification requirements "do positive harm" by demanding pedagogy at the expense of subject knowledge. On the record of achievement tests, the Sheridan Road and First Baptist pupils were doing handsomely. Judge Hotchkiss agreed: "The overwhelming weight of evidence ... shows that teacher certification does not ensure teacher competency and may even hinder teacher competency."

In the end, the judge found that the state has no "compelling" interest in prescribing curriculum or textbooks for religious schools. The state law, he said, does not ensure even a minimum degree of quality in education: "It merely requires that non-public schools be as good as, or as bad as, the public schools." The state's only legitimate interest, the court ruled, lies in enforcing certain requirements having to do with sanitation and safety — and the two schools had not objected to these.

Michigan will appeal Judge Hotchkiss' decision, and the case may wind up before the U.S. Supreme Court. Unless a string of precedents is to be overturned, the judge's unequivocal ruling, based upon an excellent record, will be affirmed. Religious freedom comes first; government's entanglement with religion comes a very poor second.

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The General Assembly's Finance Committees traditionally play second fiddle to the Appropriations Committee during legislative sessions, but lawmakers say the standings could be different this year.

The Appropriations Committee has traditionally drawn the most attention on financial matters because it is responsible for determining the state budget, now around $3 billion a year.

But legislative leaders say the budget situation is the worst they can remember, and with no money to spend, the Appropriations Committee will be looking for cuts instead of deciding how to parcel out state funds.

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, summed up the situation last week, when he referred to Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, as "an appropriations chairman with no money to spend."

Royall and other legislative leaders oppose any tax increases to balance the budget. Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. and Lt. Gov. James C. Green agree with that position.

But the temptation to raise taxes may prove irresistable to many lawmakers as an alternative to cut spending for state programs.

"I think there's going to be a lot of pressure on the Finance Committee," said Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery. Jordan is chairman of the Senate Base Budget Committee, the appropriations panel that will handle most of the cutting.

The co-chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, agreed and said he was excited by the prospect.

"The Appropriations Committee will have a tough job and will be limited in what it can do," Rauch said. "Finance will probably have requests from state employees, the highway department, the education system — in fact every department — for what they feel are justifiable needs that have to be finance through new taxes.

But Rauch said the committee must balance those needs against the impact on "the average citizen" who will have to pay those taxes in a time of "less work, less pay and widespread unemployment."

"I doubt many, if any, requests will fare well," he said, but the committee will keep an open mind as it studies them.

The budget situation facing the Appropriations Committee is caused by a sharp drop in the growth of state revenues at a time when Hunt and legislative leaders would like to lift a pay freeze enacted last year on teachers and state employees.

But it will cost $104 million to reinstate automatic increases for teachers and merit increases for other state workers beginning July 1, and, until the Appropriations Committee goes to work, no sign of where to get the needed funds.

The Legislature must also contend with Hunt's call for increased highway funding in order to meet matching requirements for increased highway funding.

Two years ago, Hunt won passage of a highway funding package that included a 3-cent per gallon increase in the state gasoline tax and increases in motor vehicles fees, but other portions of the package were not approved. They were an increase in liquor and beer taxes and a mining tax.

The need for additional highway funds has been increased by Congress' decision to raise the federal gasoline tax by 5 cents a gallon in order to give the states more money for highway construction.

Hunt does not plan to make any recommendations to the Legislature this year and wants lawmakers to resolve the matter on their own.

Legislation to raise taxes on liquor, beer and wine was introduced by Sen. George Marion, D-Surry, on the second day of the session. Marion indicated he prefers the money be used for salaries, but admitted it could be used to help the Highway Fund.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Now is the time we should reactivate The Concerned Citizens Committee of Pitt County. There are several things coming up we all should be concerned about. Namely: Drunk drivers; raising the drinking age of beer and wine to age 21; prohibiting open beer cans in passenger cars and public places, and pornography.

The courts must crack down on the drinking drivers. The first offense should be severe enough to make the drunken driver realize the courts now mean business. They should serve at least three days in jail. If there is not enough room in the jails, then they should have a shackle put around their ankle and then be chained to a post in a vacant warehouse. But keep off our highways while driving drunk.

The drinking age for beer and wine should be definitely raised to 21. Traditionally age 21 was the legal age in this country for years, and I think we should go back to it nationwide. This would make our laws uniform.

Conservatives Have Edge In Raising Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — One thing proven by the records coming in from the most expensive elections in the country's history last fall is that conservatives have a decided advantage when it comes to raising money.

And they are likely to keep that edge for years to come, barring some tidal change in American politics and giving habits.

Republicans almost always have had more money than Democrats, but the big money these days is in the non-affiliated political action committees which have proliferated in recent years. And conservative PACs have by far the best of it, without much regard for party lines.

Federal Election Commission records covering transactions through mid-October show that of the top 10 PACs in the country the first seven are sponsored by independent conservative groups or business or professional organizations.

Heading the list in money raised and spent was the National Congressional Club, an organization created by supporters of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. It raised $9.1 million and spent $9.6 million in the period between Jan. 1, 1981 and Oct. 13, 1983.

Next was the National Conservative Political Action Committee, which gained fame in 1980 by helping purge leading liberals from the U.S. Senate in 1980. It raised $8.9 million and spent $9 million.

Going down the list of top money raisers, there is the Realtors Political Action Committee, $2.8 million, followed by the Fund for a Conservative Majority, $2.5 million; American Medical Political Action Committee, $2.4 million; Citizens for the Republic, a group which grew out of President Reagan's 1976 campaign, $2.3 million; and Committee for the Survival of a Free Congess, a New Right conservative group, $2.1 million.

Number eight on the list is the National Committee for an Effective Congress, which also raised $2.1 million and is the most affluent liberal PAC.

Coming in nine and 10 were the Fund for a Democratic Majority, a PAC created to support Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's presidential aspirations, and former Vice President Walter F. Mondale's Committee for the Future of America.

Kennedy's group raised $2.1 million and Mondale's just under $2 million. Since the latest PAC rankings, Kennedy has taken himself out of the 1984 presidential race but Mondale has registered with the FEC as a presidential candidate.

There it is. The Effective Congress group was the only liberal PAC to make it into the top-10 except for two created for personal presidential purposes. No labor groups. No environmentalists. No ban-the-bombers.

The first key to this picture is the dominance of direct mail fund raising in modern politics. The top two groups on the fund raising list took in more than the rest of the top-10 combined, and both got most of their money in the mail.

Both the National Congressional Club and the National Conservative Politiical Action Committee have the services of Richard Viguerie, the wizzard of mail order fund raising. He has been in the business for 18 years and has a jump in the field that liberals may never be able to overcome.

Viguerie has in his computers 4.5 million names, regularly sorted and sifted to include those most likely to give to a conservative cause. He sends billions of letters out each year.

He has been at it so long that he is one of the few direct mail operators who actually turn a profit on a regular basis. For every dollar he spends for a client, he gets back two or three. By comparison, the Democratic Party recently boasted that one of its letters was bringing in enough money to pay for itself.

"What the left has been doing for the last year or two, we were doing eight or ten years ago," Viguerie said. "If we stood dead still, it would take them five to 10 years to catch up with us.

"They don't have the personnel. There's not the trained staff. If there are 50 political direct mail experts out there, 40 of them are conservatives," Viguerie said.

"They have some fine people, but there are a handfull of them," Viguerie said. "In the Viguerie Company we have 300 employees and we have an operation that's very experienced and out there for a long time doing this. A new, young organization can't come along and compete with us effectively."

Conservative money raisers also have the advantage, Viguerie says, of aggressive issues, the kind that make people mail in dollar bills or big checks, as their means allow.

"We are able to talk about issues that excite people and get people upset and concerned," Viguerie said, "whether it's strong national defense or taxes or busing or prayer in school, gun control, whatever it is, people are going to respond."

What's more, those billions of letters do more than raise money; they repesent one of the most powerful communications networks in the country. Each letter carries a message even if it does not elicit a contribution, and the contributions that do come back pay for more letters. It's become a self-perpetuating chain.

Failures May Help

NEW YORK (AP) — What the executive suite needs is more people who have failed along the way.

Absurd as that might at first appear, it comes from one of the country's most respected advisers to the corporate world, Professor Eugene Jennings, who believes that failure can bring out the best in a leader.

Not that it always does, he says. But those who fail and are allowed to work through their failures and overcome them, he says, usually develop an inner strength that is badly needed today.

"They have the ultimate qualification for leadership today, which is that they've gone through a fire storm of their own making and stayed to put it out."

Too often, however, the failed executive is removed from his job by short-sighted management, says Jennings, a Michigan State University professor, author and adviser to corporate chairmen and boards.

Many of today's top executives were developed in the 1960s, at a time when fewer companies lost money or otherwise experienced failure. "They learned habits of growth and expansion, of solving current problems and letting tommorrow take care of itself," he said.

If they did fail, he explained, there were various ways of covering it over in an expanding economy. The painful decisions were avoided.

Americans, he continued, "don't believe in failure any more than they believe in death, and they seldom give failures a chance to stay on the job and correct their mistakes."

As a result, many of those at the top today have unblemished records. "They look beautiful until disaster strikes," he says, "and then they panic or walk away or make a bad situation worse."

Unlike the 1960s, he said, "we live in a perverse world in which corporate plans and programs fail and jeopardize the firm."

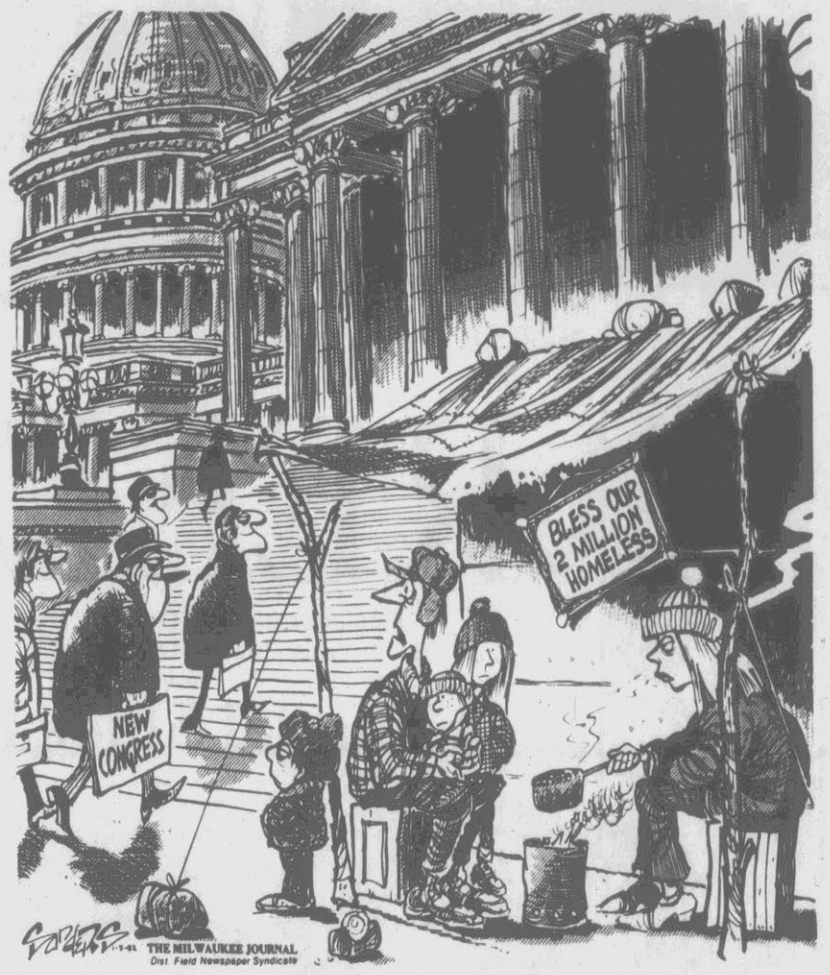

He fears that executives with "bright, unblemished records" lack essential credentials for dealing with the complex world of the 1980s. "They are not the ones who will lead America back to its previous position of world power," he asserts.

When an executive fails and is shunted aside, instead of being left on the job to work out a solution, Jennings refers to him as being a victim of the fossil fuel solution.

The term, he says, refers to the executive who is shelved because of an error, that is, given no vital job in the corporation. He is, so to speak, put on a shelf like a fossil in a museum, to gather dust rather than experience.

Jennings cites the example of a utility executive at Three Mile Island, site of a nuclear power plant accident, who was denied the opportunity to correct the ensuing damage and become an authority on the task. Instead, said Jennings, the executive was shifted into the utility's fossil fuels area.

He insists he isn't defending failure but attempting to promote the value of permitting executives to overcome failure. It is, he concedes, a tough decision for a board to make, and often a costly one too.

'Must be nice to have a house to go to!'

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Walter Mondale currently enjoys a 2-to-1 advantage over John Glenn among Democratic voters to be their party's nominee in the 1984 presidential election.

In the first Gallup test for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination since Sen. Edward Kennedy withdrew from the race in early December, former Vice President Walter Mondale receives the first-place votes of 32 percent of Democrats to 14 percent for Sen. Glenn, 6 percent for 1972 nominee George McGovern, and 5 percent for ex-California Gov. Jerry Brown. None of the others on a list of 16 gets more than 3 percent of Democrats' votes.

In earlier Gallup contests, Sen. Edward Kennedy was a strong favorite for the Democratic nomination. In a survey conducted last summer, for example, Kennedy won 43 percent of Democrats' first-place votes (from a list of 15 possible candidates) to 13 percent for Mondale and 7 percent for Glenn.

Mondale Beats Glenn
In Head-To-Head Match

When the race for the 1984 Democratic nomination is narrowed to the two front-runners, Mondale is the choice of 59 percent of Democrats to be their party's 1984 standard-bearer, while 28 percent pick Glenn and 13 percent are undecided.

The two-way nomination contest, however, is a toss-up among political Independents, with 41 percent expressing a preference for Mondale and 40 percent for Glenn. Independent voters, who may participate in primary elections in some states, constitute about one-fourth of the U.S. electorate.

Senator Glenn also leads Mondale among Independents when tested against the full line-up of Democratic candidates. The Ohio senator beats Mondale, 22 percent to 15 percent, with McGovern and Brown each getting 6 percent of votes for the Democratic nomination from voters espousing neither of the two major parties.

Reagan Loses To Each Democrat

Despite Mondale's strong lead for the Democratic nomination, Glenn does as well as Mondale when pitted against President Reagan in test elections for the presidency in 1984. As reported last week, 52 percent of registered voters nationwide say they would vote for Mondale if the election were held now, while 40 percent would choose President Reagan. In a similar contest, Sen. Glenn holds a 54 percent-to-39 percent advantage over Reagan.

These questions were asked:

"Which one of these persons (respondents were handed a card with the names and titles of 16 possible nominees) would you like to see nominated as the Democratic Party's candidate for President in 1984? And who would be your second choice?"

Here are the first choices of Democrats:

Possible Democratic Nominees
(First choices of Democrats)

Walter Mondale	32%
John Glenn	14%
George McGovern	6%
Jerry Brown	5%
All others*	17%
None, don't know	26%
Total	100%

*Others on the list, none of whom receives more than 3 percent of the votes, are (in alphabetical order): Reubin Askew, Bruce Babbit, Lloyd Bentsen, Bill Bradley, John Y, Brown, Alan Cranston, Gary Hart, Ernest Hollings, Pat Moynihan, Jay Rockefeller, Robert Strauss and Morris Udall.

Possible Democratic Nominees
(First choices of Independents)

John Glenn	22%
Walter Mondale	15%
Jerry Brown	6%
George McGovern	6%
All others	18%
None, don't know	33%
Total	100%

This question was asked in the "showdown" match between Mondale and Glenn:

Suppose the choice for President in the Democratic convention narrows down to Walter Mondale and John Glenn. Which one would you prefer to have the Democratic convention select?"

Following are the national findings for both Democrats and Independents:

Mondale vs. Glenn

	Democrats	Independents
Prefer Mondale	59%	41%
Prefer Glenn	28%	40%
Undecided	13%	19%
Total	100%	100%

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,509 adults, 18 and over, of whom 671 are Democrats and 408 Independents. The interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period. December 10-13.

For results based on the sample of Democrats, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be five percentage points in either direction. The comparable error margin for the sample of Independents could be plus or minus six percentage points.

Tactics Are Changing Over Federal Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan sends Congress his new budget late this month, he'll be proposing a course that will hold through much of the campaign for the White House in 1984.

In the process, the Democrats may come away with custody of an issue that once was Reagan's: the soaring federal deficit.

The president used to hammer at them over deficit spending back in the days when he was promising balanced budgets soon. He still blames their spending, not his tax cuts and defense budget, for much of the deficit problem. But even his allies acknowledge that tactic won't work in the next campaign.

Reagan's closest friend in Congress, Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, calls the prospective deficits terrifying. Congressional Republicans rebelled at the size of the deficit projected by the administration budget for the current budget year and helped force changes that whittled it down a bit — in theory. The compromise budget approved by Congress included a deficit projected at $104 billion. The administration now expects a $200 billion deficit when the year ends next Sept. 30.

The new budget will be for the year that begins Oct. 1, 1983, runs until Sept. 30, 1984, and so covers most of the presidential campaign season. A year ago, Republicans were struggling to get the projected deficit below $100 billion. Administration projections of the likely deficit in the new budget now range up to $220 billion.

The record deficit before Reagan came to office was $66 billion.

The numbers now in prospect are politically unacceptable, particularly for the administration of a conservative Republican who once said that accepting deficit spending was like embracing a pig.

So Reagan is pledged to do something about it. "Clearly, we're facing very big deficits unless we take action and we will take action because the deficits are unacceptably large in the out years," he said. "The federal budget must not become a roadblock on the path to long-term economic recovery."

He hasn't said what he is going to do about it. The ingredients are exactly those that have compounded his deficit dilemma even since he — and Reaganomics — took charge. He doesn't want to increase taxes, he does want to increase defense spending, and he wants to curb the cost of domestic programs.

Reagan plans to propose some $30 billion in social spending cuts. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. says that is not going to happen.

"I assume that from now on he will have nothing to say about us being responsible for the deficit since he has made it plain that he will refuse to approve any reductions in spending," Reagan said. "Now, you've got a deficit, you want to cut it down, obviously you've got to spend less, and I hope that he'll rethink his position."

But O'Neill didn't say he was against any reductions in spending. Like more than a few Republicans, he wants to curtail the defense budget. Reagan has not ruled that out entirely, but insists that there can be no cuts below the level of national safety, which leads directly to the familiar debate over how much defense is enough. The president also said he would look at the possibility of stretching his five-year, $1.5 trillion defense buildup over a longer period of time, to minimize the impact on each annual budget.

But his preferred target is domestic spending, particularly the entitlement programs, under which the government makes payments to invidiuals in line with formulas set by laws that don't have to be renewed. Reagan says that is the spending line that is rising at the steepest pitch, and "no one in government has any control unless they go back and change the basic legislation."

Reagan said his objective is a budget that meets human and defense needs, treats people fairly, and moves toward balance. The hard part is fitting all three into one package.

And this year's budget problem is likely to be a major political issue as the lines are drawn for the 1984 presidential campaign.

Joy Of Taxation Comes To Salter Path

Folks driving through the village of Salter Path, on Bogue Banks several miles west of Atlantic Beach, are sure to see the big sign that advertises the Squatters' Restaurant. The name commemorates the most notable event in the history of Salter Path, the time the inhabitants of the tiny fishing village challenged a wealthy New York woman who claimed the land on which they had lived for several generations.

Now don't get the idea that the New Yorker, Mrs. Alice Hoffman, was a wicked person bent on driving a group of law-abiding citizens from their homes. She was a cultured person who spoke several languages fluently who had fled her chateau near Paris during World War I. She had fallen in love with the unspoiled forests and beaches of Bogue Banks on first sight and bought a huge tract of it from the vicinity of Atlantic Beach westward for several miles and included the village of Salter Path.

Mrs. Hoffman was convinced that destruction of the dunes which protected the fragile island from the ocean would result ultimately in the destruction of the island itself. She cherished the trees and wildlife and gave orders that none should be cut or harmed.

Ira Guthrie, who once worked for Mrs. Hoffman as a caretaker, recalled that when he went to work for her, Mrs. Hoffman asked if he loved his children. When he assured her he did, she replied, "Well, I love every tree, every animal, every grain of sand on Bogue Banks just as much as you love your children, and I don't want to see them harmed or destroyed."

At first, Mrs. Hoffman apparently decided to deal with the Salter Pathers on a "live and let live" basis. She made friends with some of its residents and at various times she employed several of them to work in her home.

But the Salter Pathers were not the best of neighbors. Among other things, they allowed their cattle to run loose. After some problems arose, Mrs. Hoffman asked the residents of the village to pen their cattle. The request was ignored, and relations continued to worsen until one morning Mrs. Hoffman visited her strawberry patch. She found it in shambles, and the hoof prints she spotted among the few remaining strawberry plants offered eloquent testimony as to what happened. She filed suit to evict the Salter Pathers from the homes she contended were built on her land.

The villagers resolved to fight. They hired a lawyer, C.R. Wheatly, who relied on the ancient doctrine of squatters' rights when the case was heard in Carteret County Superior Court in June of 1923. Squatter's Rights held that a person who hunkers down on your land for as many as 21 years without eviction can appeal to the courts and win a clear title to the property.

Mrs. Hoffman's attorney must have advised her of all this and warned her that she stood a good chance of losing her case. At any rate she agreed to a consent judgement which said she owned the Salter Path land but gave the villagers and their heirs the right to continue to use it in perpetuity.

At first many of the Salter Pathers probably figured they had the best of all possible worlds. They had the satisfaction of using the land, which had cost them nothing, and of leaving the land to their children and thence to their children's children world without end. In addition, many also took the position that since they did not actually own the land, they were not required to pay taxes on it. They also declined to pay taxes on their cars and boats.

When Mrs. Hoffman died in 1953, whe willed her land to the heirs of President Theodore Roosevelt Jr. During all those years, Mrs. Hoffman had, of course, paid Carteret County the taxes it assessed on her property. She probably never realized it, but she also paid the county taxes on the Salter Path land since it was still in her name. When the Roosevelts inherited the property and began developing it into the new town of Pine Knoll Shores, they continued to pay taxes on the Salter Path land without realizing it.

They paid taxes without protest until 1973 when a re-evaluation caused their assessments to skyrocket. They refused to pay for the Salter Path land anymore. They took the position that although they held the legal title to the land, the folks who actually lived on the property should be responsible for the taxes.

By this time, the Carteret County commissioners, faced with the continuing loss of a substantial loss of revenue, and not relishing the idea of a group of citizens thumbing their noses at the tax collector, decided to act. They asked L. Patten Mason, the county attorney, to bring a court action that would resolve the problems growing out of that 1923 consent judgment. By that time, the Salter Pathers were not as enamoured with the situation as they had been originally. True, they had the use of the land on which they lived and many of them paid no property taxes, but since they did not hold legal title to the land, they could neither sell the land nor borrow money on it.

It took Mason four years to prepare the case. More than a year elapsed while he was tracking down all the decendents of the 36 Salter Path residents who had been defendents in the 1923 case. Accompanied by a Salter Path deputy sheriff, Mason would call on the village's senior citizens and compile a list of their decendents and their neighbor's decendents.

He came up with a list of about 300 persons, some of them living as far away as Florida and California and even in Central Prison in Raleigh.

After lengthy hearings in 1979, Superior Court Judge Robert D. Rouse Jr. of Kinston entered his findings. He voided the 1923 judgment on the ground that it placed an unreasonable restraint on the ownership of the Salter Path land. Under the new judgment, to which all parties agreed, the Roosevelts gave the Salter Pathers deeds to the land on which they had squatted so long. The Salter Pathers had to pay a $25 filing fee to the county as well as the taxes which had acrued since 1973. The Roosevelts retained title to 22 acres of oceanfront property on which they paid $5,000 in acrued taxes. They then donated the 22 acres to the state of North Carolina for a state park.

"This is one of a very few lawsuits that I've been involved in where everybody won," Mason said. "They've got Salter Path back on the tax books, and on top of that the people have deeds to their property."

Atlanta Marks King's Birthday

AWARD PRESENTATION ... Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr. presents the Nonviolent Peace Prize to Sir Richard Attenborough of England in Atlanta Saturday. The prize is presented in the name of her husband, the late civil rights leader. An award also was presented this year to King's father, the Rev. Martin L. King Sr. (AP Laserphoto)

ATLANTA (AP) — Hundreds of singing demonstrators marched to the Georgia capitol Saturday to mark the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. and to call for a national holiday in his honor.

"We want a national holiday!" the throng chanted after walking more than a mile through the windy streets on a cold winter day to commemorate the 54th anniversary of King's birth.

President Reagan devoted his weekly radio address to praise of King, but Reagan has opposed making Jan. 15 a national holiday. Reagan believes such holidays "have been reserved mainly for the Washingtons and Lincolns," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

King observances also were held in Los Angeles, New York, Baltimore and Seattle.

Coretta Scott King, the civil rights leader's widow, presented the annual Martin Luther King Jr. Nonviolent Peace Prize in Atlanta to King's father, Martin Luther King Sr., and British filmmaker Richard Attenborough, who produced and directed "Ghandi."

The SCLC held a march in Los Angeles as part of ceremonies renaming 6-mile-long Santa Barbara Avenue in a black neighborhood of south central Los Angeles to Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard.

About 100 People gathered for "A Memorial Mass for Peace" honoring King at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York and 75 people attended an obervance at Zion Baptist Church.

King Bill Passes State Legislature

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Martin Luther King's birthday may officially become a state holiday beginning next year following votes by both chambers of the North Carolina General Assembly this week.

King's birthday, Jan. 15, will join other public holidays in North Carolina such as Robert E. Lee's birthday, Greek Independence Day and Confederate Memorial Day.

The Senate voted 44-0 Friday to designate the birthdate of the slain civil rights leader as a state holiday. Similar action was taken on Thursday by the House, which passed the measure 107-3.

The two chambers must still ratify the bill when they convene again Monday night in order to make it official, says Sylvia M. Fink, principal clerk of the Senate.

Newly elected black state Sen. William N. Martin, D-Guilford, said approval of the bill was an imporant symbolic gesture.

"There have not been any public holidays that have recognized the achievements of any black members of society," he said. "I feel this would be a matter in which our state could take an important step in recognizing all members of society."

If given final approval, King's birthday would become the state's 17th date that is recognized as a public holiday. The designation does not automatically lead to the closing of state offices, banks or public schools.

Holidays such as Christmas and July 4, when schools, banks and offices close, are designated by such agencies as the state Personnel Commission, the Banking Commission and local school districts.

Court Allows '60 Minutes' Broadcast

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court ruled Saturday that CBS can broadcast on schedule a segment of "60 Minutes" about alleged brutality by New Orleans police during an investigation into an officer's death.

A federal district judge earlier ordered the segment, scheduled to be shown Sunday on the popular news show, suppressed. The network appealed to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, arguing that the district judge had overstepped constitutional bounds by censoring the segment.

"We find that CBS has shown that it will probably succeed on the merits of its appeal ... and, accordingly, we grant the stay," the three-judge panel of the appeals court said in a short, written ruling issued Saturday evening.

Attorneys for the policemen said they would ask the Supreme Court, probably through Justice Byron White, to reverse the decision.

They were not certain of the procedure needed.

CBS had filed a two-page motion and 22 pages of briefs and petitions supporting its case at 9:45 a.m., said a spokeswoman for the 5th Circuit. Copies were flown to Judge Carolyn Randall in Houston and Judge Thomas Gee in Austin, Texas. The third judge who considered the case was Judge Albert Tate Jr. of New Orleans.

The broadcast was scheduled just three weeks before the start of a trial for seven officers accused of beating black citizens during the investigation.

Defense attorneys who had won a motion to move the trial to Dallas because of extensive publicity in Louisiana said broadcasting the program before the trial began would make it impossible to find an impartial jury.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Duplantier issued a handwritten order forbidding the broadcast on Friday after CBS refused to show him a script of the program segment. There was no hearing in open court. Duplantier conferred with attorneys in his private office.

CBS said in its appeal that "the prior restraint contained in this broad injunctive order is unprecedented in the history of our nation and constitutes, with no question, a blatant violation of ... freedoms of speech and of the press."

It "raises issues of national importance and seriously imperils the freedom of expression which, heretofore, has been secured to all citizens for more than 200 years," the network said. "If not corrected immediately, and prior to Sunday, January 16, 1983, it will allow the judiciary, a branch of government, the right of unbridled censorship over the contents and timing of news programs."

"The injunctive order prohibits the broadcast anywhere and goes far beyond even the relief sought by the defendants," the petition said.

CBS also said it did not know the trial date when it scheduled the broadcast, and that it would cost tens of thousands of dollars to replace the segment about the investigation with another.

Defense lawyers argued that delaying the broadcast until the trial would result in a minimum of "inconvenience to or interference with the news media."

The program is the highest rated news show on U.S. television and each week places among the top 10 prime-time shows in the national Nielsen ratings.

Duplantier's ruling said, in its entirety:

"The following order was issued at approximately 3:00 p.m. at a conference attended by the attorney for CBS: In view of the refusal of CBS to comply with the court's previous order this date, CBS, its officers, agents and employees are hearby ordered not to broadcast in any manner whatsoever the segment at issue herein of the program scheduled for showing 6:00 p.m., CST, Sunday, Jan. 16, 1983."

Robert E. Barkley Jr., one of CBS' attorneys in New Orleans, said the order imposed a nationwide blackout of the program.

Lawyers for the policemen said it was based on interviews of people listed as victims in the indictment of the "Algiers Seven," who are accused of violating the civil rights of people they questioned by threatening and physically abusing them.

The interrogations took place during the investigation of Officer Gregory Neupert's killing in a tough section of the Algiers district across the Mississippi River from downtown New Orleans.

James Billy Jr., 26, and Reginald Miles, 28, accused in arrest warrants of killing Neupert, were killed in police raids on their homes Nov. 13 — five days after Neupert's death. Also killed in one of those raids was Sherry Lynn Singleton, Miles' girlfriend.

Police said all three tried to shoot it out.

Two days earlier, Ray Ferdinand, 40, was shot and killed when he allegedly pulled a knife when police stopped him for questioning. It developed later that he was a police informer, simply putting on an act, but the officers didn't know him.

The deaths prompted an outcry from blacks who complained of police violence and racism.

State and federal grand juries refused to return any indictments in those killings. Two state grand juries also refused to indict anyone in the alleged beatings.

Chicago Officer Shot Fatally

CHICAGO (AP) — A plainclothes police officer who went to the scene of a narcotics-related holdup was shot fatally — the sixth slaying of a city policeman on duty in less than a year.

A second plainclothesman was wounded in the arm in the encounter Friday night with two men in a building where "narcotics activities" were going on," Police Superintendent Richard J. Brzeczek said.

Lesson Number 8

Q. What is the difference between RAM and ROM and why are they considered when purchasing a computer?

A. There are two logical types of memory inside a computer defined by their accessibility. Random Access Memory (RAM) can be either read or written but is lost when the machine is turned off unless the data was stored before power was withdrawn. The operations or functions determine the amount of RAM storage needed.

Read only Memory (ROM) can only be read. It is in storage within the machine and performs machine utility functions. When the power supply is removed it remains and is still present when the machine is turned on again. It was placed there by the computer manufacturer.

Town Flags Travelers To Advertise Its Plight

TIMES BEACH, Mo. (AP) — More than 100 residents of dioxin-plagued Times Beach advertised their plight to the traveling public Saturday, waving signs and banners at cars and trucks passing on nearby Interstate 44.

"They've poisoned us," Ralph Penn shouted into the face of oncoming traffic which streamed past this riverside community devestated by flooding and discovery of hazardous waste in the soil.

Truckers honked their horns and gave demonstrators the thumbs-up signal. Some motorists slowed to read the signs and waved. No one stopped.

"Everyone's with us but the government," said Penn, a laid-off auto worker. "They poisoned us 10 years ago and left us sitting there. They let me buy a house in this town and now I can't get rid of it — I'm stuck with it."

A neighbor, Eula Waltman, agreed that the federal government should to come in and buy out the 800 homes and businesses in the virtually abandoned community.

"But they're too busy helping foreign countries to do anything for us," said Ms. Waltman, a Times Beach resident since 1964 who lost has both her home and business, a combination filling station-liquor store.

Demonstrators braving 17-degree weather and a stiff breeze lined about a one-quarter-mile section of the highway. Several wore white protective clothing but most ignored a federal recommendation that they not return to the town without respirators and equipment to protect them from dioxin sprayed on roads in the early 1970s as a dust control measure.

"The EPA has destroyed Times Beach," read part of one sign carried by Dan Hrin, who has lived in the community for the past four years and experienced no health problems.

"It destroyed the town and businesses without any proof how much dioxin was in the soil," he said. "I think that's pretty unfair."

Near the west end of the demonstration stood about 10 carloads of Warren County residents who had driven in to join the protest. Flood debris from Times Beach has been dumped at a landfull there.

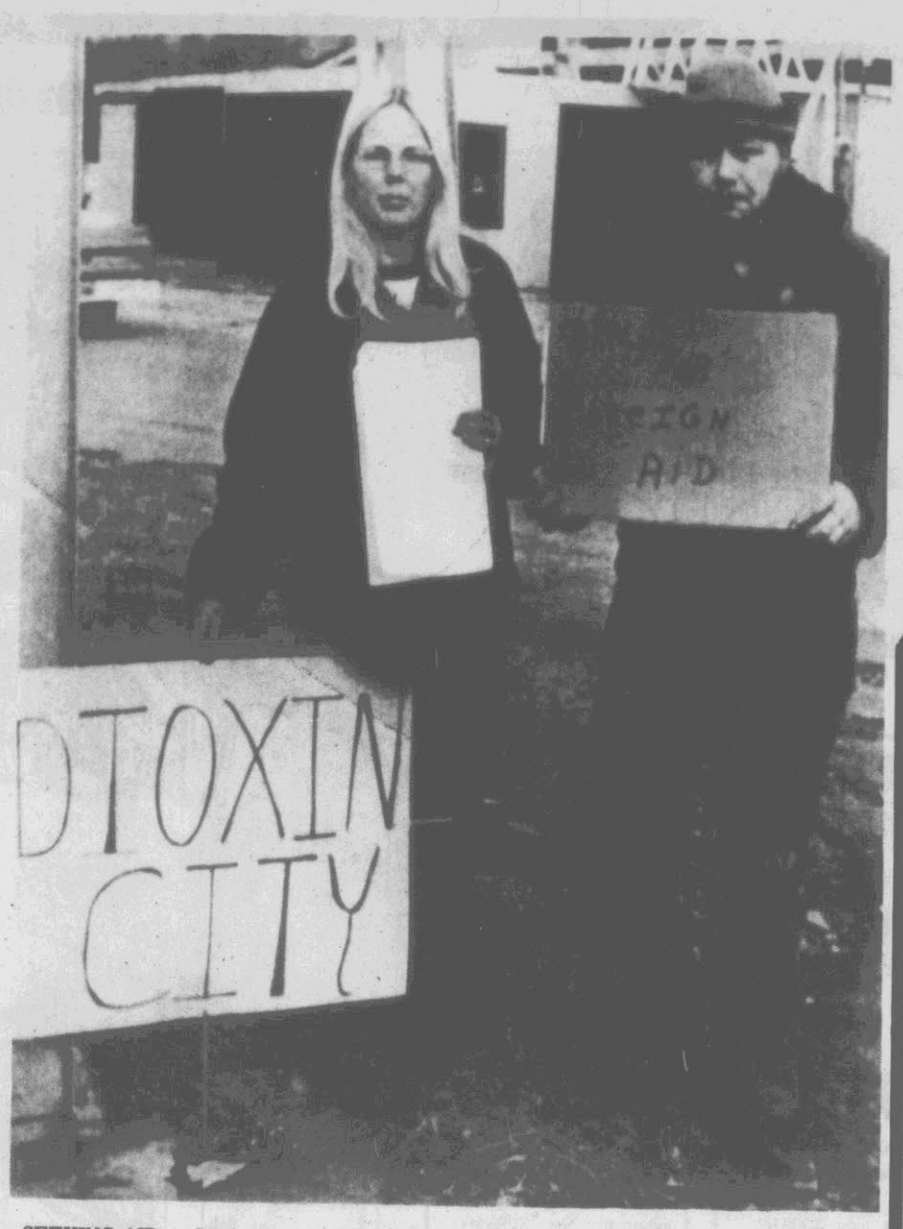

"We don't want them to dump this stuff in the state of Missouri," said Gloria Seat, of Warrenton, waving a huge black flag with a skull and crossbones on a sturdy wooden staff.

"If they dump this at Bob's Home Service, we're afraid we'll be the target for waste from all the 82 Missouri sites and ultimately from all over the Midwest," she said.

On the order of Gov. Christopher S. Bond, trucks last week began carrying silt-covered debris from Times Beach to Missouri's only licensed hazardous waste dump near Wright City. about 40 miles to the north.

"We feel the governor has stepped on all the people of this state," said Miss Seat. "His job is to ensure our welfare and he just stepped on us all."

Environmental Protection Agency tests did not detect any dioxin at levels of one part per billion or more in the debris. Test results have not yet been released on samples of soil in the town following the flood. Dioxin up to 100 parts per billion was found in pre-flood sampling of the soil.

SEEKING AID ... Carolyn and Jack McCabe of Times Beach, Mo., are asking the citizens of their troubled town to apply for foreign aid. Times Beach was overcome with floodwaters and is plagued with dioxin, a chemical byproduct. The U.S. Constitution says, however that only the government can apply for federal aid. (AP Laserphoto)

Crime Figure Lansky Dies

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Meyer Lansky, the reputed underworld patriarch who claimed that organized crime was a myth and never served a major prison term, died Saturday of cancer. He was 81.

The Russian-born Lansky died at Mount Sinai Medical Center at 6 a.m., said spokeswoman Judy Stanton. He was admitted to the hospital Dec. 31 suffering from dehydration. His physician, Dr. Howard Grumer, has refused to release any information on his patient.

Lansky began his climb upward in the underworld in the early 1920s, when he was barely out of his teens. Over the next decades he accumulated valuable properties in the United States and Cuba, including casinos and hotels, and became known as a financial genius for his lucrative investment advice to underworld figures.

Pope John Paul Speaks Against Death Penalty

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday asked the world's governments to pardon prisoners on death row, the first time a pontiff has spoken out against capital punishment.

The pope also called on the United States and the Soviet Union to disarm simultaneously and said foreign interference in Central America aggravates tensions there.

In a wide-ranging speech to the Vatican diplomatic corps, John Paul said dialogue is the only road to peace and expressed his concern for the situations in Lebanon, Central America, Afghanistan, Northern Ireland, Iran and Iraq.

"The Holy See recommends clemency, or pardon, for those who are condemned to death, especially those condemned for political reasons," the pope said in French. His remarks were translated by The Associated Press.

Vatican spokesman the Rev. Romeo Panciroli said it was the first time a pope has criticized the death penalty.

Pope Pius XII, in 1955, said the state should decide whatever punishments it deemed necessary for its citizens.

Vatican City abolished the death penalty in the tiny independent city-state in 1966. Until then, anyone convicted of attempting to kill the pope could be sentenced to death.

The Vatican legal code even at that time was moot, because the Lateran treaties of 1929 between the Vatican and Italy gave Italy the responsibility of trying anyone convicted of a crime on Vatican soil. Capital punishment is illegal in Italy.

The pope, in a white cassock and skullcap and a red shawl, called for a reduction of nuclear and conventional arms and said "peace cannot be constructed by one side without the other, unilaterally."

He said a "true internal dialogue" is necessary to resolve "the serious problem of social misery and internal tension" in Central America, where "outside interference" is widening the gap between political factions.

The pope is traveling to Central America at the end of February or the beginning of March, according to Vatican sources. The Vatican has not announced the trip officially or given a schedule.

The pope made his remarks to 200 diplomats accredited to the Holy See gathered in the Apostolic Palace's Royal Hall. Most men dressed in white tie and tails and women wore long dark dresses. Some African diplomats wore traditional dashikis, brightly colored tunics.

"The church cannot remain silent to the criminal action of making a certain number of people disappear, without trial, leaving their families in a cruel state of uncertainty," the pope said, in what Vatican observers called a reference to Argentina's military junta.

"The Church takes into its heart all those who are submitted to torture, whatever the political regime might be," John Paul said. He also condemned arbitrary arrest, concentration camps, and "various forms of oppression."

On the Middle East, the pope said there must be justice for all interested parties before there is a true and lasting peace, and called on all factions to abandon violence and terrorism.

Reagan Faces Political Problems Over Budget

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is showing he can be flexible and help get the government's wild budget deficits under control. But no matter which way he bends, he faces political trouble.

In the past two weeks, the president or his top aides have proposed to do things Reagan once said he would never do: cut the defense budget, raise general taxes, speed up Social Security tax increases and pursue an economic policy calling for unusually slow growth.

The president's shift has come in response to pleas from close personal aides and political allies that he steer away from a budget course headed for deficits of at least $200 billion a year from now and into the future.

But each change seems to provoke new problems for each one it resolves, and some items in the emerging budget plan the president must send Congress in two weeks seems sure to displease everyone, from liberal Democrats to conservative Republicans:

—The deficit. The red ink for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1 will be the largest ever proposed by a president, somewhere between $150 billion and $200 billion, the administration concedes.

Although the red ink projection will be lower than some economists had feared, its size is still worrisome and a political disappointment to Republicans who remember this was supposed to be the year Reagan would produce a balanced budget.

—The Pentagon. Reagan has agreed to trim $8 billion from his record spending plans for the Defense Department in 1984. The 3 percent cut, from an original budget of $247 billion, had been resisted up until the end by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. And it still doesn't sit well with the Pentagon's brass, which is upset that the reduction would be achieved in part by a freeze on military pay.

But many members of Congress — and even some White House budget officials — are angry because they contend Reagan didn't cut enough. The military budget still will climb 15 percent — or $30 billion — from 1983, they note.

—The Tax Increases. Reagan has refused to seek major new tax increases in 1983 or 1984, not counting Social Security, on the grounds that the economy will still be too weak from the long recession the country is trying to shrug off. However, administration officials say he is considering an income tax surcharge and energy taxes for later years if needed to keep the deficit below $100 billion. A final decision is expected this week.

The tax plan seems to please the president's top economic advisers and some fellow Republicans in the Senate. But other congressional Republicans, still upset about Reagan's support of a tax increase bill last year, are grumbling that the president is making the same tax mistake again. Congressional Democrats, meanwhile, may show little patience with Reagan's scheme, and choose instead to undo parts of the huge tax cut he pushed through in 1981.

—The Social Security Problem. The administration is now saying it would consider moving up the date of scheduled payroll tax increases if coupled with a curb on benefit growth as part of a bipartisan compromise for solving the pension system's own deficit problems. But the president may get stuck as the man in the middle between liberal Democrats who want to rely mainly on tax increases to bolster the system and conservative Republicans who insist on solving the problem by curbing benefits.

—The Economic Forecast. Despite his penchant for optimism, Reagan has agreed to accept an administration economic forecast in the budget that calls for the slowest recovery from a recession since World War II, with unemployment remaining above 10 percent by the end of 1983. The forecast, prepared by chief White House economist Martin S. Feldstein, is responsible in part for the huge deficits estimated for the late 1980s.

The unusually pessimistic forecast has surprised many private economists, who expected the economy to stage a stronger recovery from the recession this year. It angered congressional Republicans, who fear the administration is not doing enough to stimulate economic growth and lower unemployment by the 1984 elections.

—The Domestic Cuts. White House budget director David A. Stockman has prepared non-defense program changes that are expected to hold 1984 spending down by $30 billion. The cuts affect an array of programs, including food stamps, Medicaid and Medicare, housing and farm subsidies, energy projects and government salaries. The administration also is thinking about imposing a freeze on certain benefits, such as retirement programs with automatic annual cost-of-living increases.

The administration insists these cuts are essential to keep the deficit from climbing above $200 billion, but Congress is balking even before details of the cuts become clear. Democrats and Republicans have warned the White House that they will not go along with new cuts in the same domestic programs pared in 1981 and 1982. To these critics, the Pentagon is a more appealing target.

—The Disarray. A number of administration officials, speaking under the cloak of "unnamed sources," have talked about disarray within the White House as the president and his aides grope through politically unpleasant alternatives for solving the deficit problem. Until recently, some aides said, the president appeared unwilling to confront the fact that he had no choice but to trim his record defense buildup and seek new taxes to reduce the red ink.

But at an informal news conference Friday, Reagan said he has not changed economic course in any fundamental way.

Lifting Wage Freeze Would Leave Some In Cold

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to end the freeze on state employees' salaries would leave some workers out in the cold, but might prompt warm memories of Gov. Jim Hunt from the rest.

Hunt is seeking $100 million from the Legislature to restore an automatic 5 percent raise for teachers and merit pay increases for up to two-thirds of eligible state employees. The raises were frozen by the General Assembly June 30 to balance the budget.

Hunt said Friday he would not oppose an across-the-board pay raise, but said lifting the freeze should come first.

Rep. John M. Jordan, D-Alamance, chairman of the House committee on state personnel, said approval of the $100 million budget item would look good should Hunt decide to seek another political office.

"He (Hunt) would much rather see some state employees get small increases than to see this fail to go through (the Legislature)," he said.

Hunt has said he regrets that not all state employees would benefit from the measure, but he supports the merit-pay system, saying it's an important tool for managing employees.

"I feel for all state employees who might not get something, but those who are most able and are doing the best job are the ones we have the most commitment to," he said.

But Jordan said he wasn't sure how much merit was involved in merit pay.

"I think if a supervisor has three people under him, he might decide to move two up this year and next year it would be the other fellow's turn," he said. "It's really more a question of whose turn it is than a question of merit."

The pay freeze and a freeze on hiring have been good for state government, Jordan added.

"It's like those ice storms that hit every couple of years," he said. "They strip off the dead branches. Really, we (in government) have gotten along fine with the freeze."

Emmett Burden, director of the N.C. State Employees Association, said the merit-pay system rewarded superior employees and denied that department heads might tailor their judgments to the money available for raises.

Under the system, money is allocated by department, and department heads know how much is available before evaluating employees, Burden said.

Arch Laney, executive director of the N.C. State Government Employees Association, said there were some abuses in an otherwise good system.

"There is no such thing as a true merit system as long as human beings are involved," he said. "The system's been abused because people would say to an employee, 'We can't give you one this year, but we'll give you one next year.'"

Burden said a department could not give merit pay increases to all employees even if their performances warranted it, adding that there were instances in which money for raises had been returned to the state because there were not enough deserving employees.

Of the $100 million, about $16.3 million is earmarked for State Personnel Act employees, while $6 million would go to community colleges, $7 million to higher education, $56 million to public schools and about $5 million to employees under the Highway Fund, Burden said.

Laney said he expected about 30 percent of state employees would come away with nothing even if the freeze was relaxed. But he said department heads might try to spread the money around.

"In a situation like this, you could expect them to issue half-step awards to get the monkey off their backs," Laney said.

The merit increases are not regarded as a raise, he said, adding, "We have appealed to the governor to do something more to help everybody."

Before the freeze, employees in the first two of the nine salary steps received automatic raises, said John Ward, personnel analyst for the Office of State Personnel.

In fiscal 1981-82, of 62,849 state workers, 15.8 percent or 9,930 received no increase under the merit pay system, Ward said.

By December, there were 64,049 state workers in the system. Of those, 5,275 were earning top scale and 4,585 were within half a step of top scale, he said.

Blood Samples Taken In Warren

AFTON, N.C. (AP) — State health officials are taking blood samples from people living within a 3-mile radius of the PCB landfill in Warren County.

On Friday, blood samples were taken from each Afton resident aged 12 to 65. The blood will be broken down and the serum frozen, said Dr. Charles Smith of the Health Services Division of the state Department of Human Resources.

Smith said the samples will not be analyzed right away, but would serve as a base level if higher amounts of PCB are found in local wells.

The PCB, dumped along 240 miles of state roadside in 1978, has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals. State officials scraped it up last fall and placed it in the landfill over the objections of area residents.

Residents contended the state chose Warren County for the landfill because it has a high proportion of blacks. Police made more than 500 arrests of people protesting the dump last fall. State officials said they chose the area because it was the safest in the state.

Smith said the frozen samples will be kept in Raleigh until there "is some indication that PCB is getting out of the landfill."

The four wells around the landfill will be checked regularly, he said. The first test of the wells was conducted Thursday, and results showed less than one part per billion of PCB.

If higher levels in the wells are found, new blood samples will be taken.

Duke Surgeon Helps Find Way To Replace Amputated Thumbs

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — A Duke University surgeon is helping develop a way to replace amputated thumbs that the university said Saturday could be much better than the usual technique of transplanting a large toe to the hand.

Dr. James Urbaniak has successfully built a new thumb on the hand of Charlotte secretary Tina Williams. After putting a bone graft where the thumb used to be, Urbaniak then surrounded the graft with skin, nail, nerves and blood vessels from part of Ms. Williams' large toe.

"With this method, when a thumb is amputated and cannot be reattached, we can make a new thumb," said Urbaniak, head of Duke's replantation team. "The patient looks as if he still has his toe and his foot functions as if he does."

Urbaniak said surgeons traditionally have replaced the thumb with a big toe — in effect shifting the patient's problem from one part of his body to another in order to restore the hand's vital ability to grasp objects.

But with the new method, he said, "The patient looks as if he still has his toe and his foot functions as if he does."

"We have performed nine transplants of this type and so far all nine have been successful," he added. "All walk without a limp and wear regular shoes. Women can wear open-toed shoes and look fine in them."

Urbaniak learned about the procedure in Australia and is the first microsurgeon in the United States to employ it, Duke said. Doctors in Japan also use the technique, as do a few surgeons in other parts of the United States.

The procedure requires as many as three surgical teams — one to take the tissue from the toe, another to prepare the hand for the transplant and the third to put a bone graft on the hand.

Urbaniak said the best candidates are people who have lost their thumb at the point where the skin forms a webbing between the thumb and index finger. Thumb transplants on the dominant hand also are more successful, he said.

Roberson Defends Gas Tax

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Transportation Secretary William R. Roberson Jr. jumped into the partisan debate Saturday over the recent federal gasoline tax hike, arguing North Carolina will benefit greatly from the increase.

"This bill represents a good deal for North Carolina, pure and simple," Roberson said in an unusual weekend statement.

His announcement didn't mention whose criticisms prompted the response, but Transportation Department spokesman Cy Lynn said it "would be a good guess" Roberson was talking about Sens. Jesse Helms and John East, R-N.C.

Roberson was appointed secretary by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., who is considering a run against Helms in 1984.

Helms and East led an unsuccessful filibuster against the highway package, which uses a nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax increase to help fund an extra $98 million in highway aid for North Carolina. The state previously had been slated to receive $150 million in road and bridge money.

Helms and East claimed the tax would benefit Northern cities more than the Sunbelt because of the highway bill's allocation of funds for mass transit systems, which mostly are in the northeast. They also said the tax was an unfair burden on working people and truck drivers.

"In response to those who have publicly criticized the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 as being bad for North Carolina, I feel it is absolutely necessary to set the record straight on this issue," Roberson said.

He said that since the Federal Highway Trust Fund was set up in 1956, North Carolina received only about 74 cents back for every dollar it put into the fund.

"An important provision of the new act provides that no state, including ours, receives less than an 85 percent return of these funds," Roberson said. "The net result of this new legislation is that we will average 65 percent more federal highway aid during the fiscal year 1983-86 effective dates of this bill than we were apportioned in fiscal year 1982."

Driver Reports Theft From Car

Greenville police were investigating the larceny Friday of $1,040 in personal belongings from a car operated by Elizabeth Kay Stallings of Shady Knoll Trailer Park.

Police reports indicated that Ms. Stallings parked her car in the lot behind First Federal Savings and Loan. When she returned to her vehicle at 12:45 a.m., she found the driver's window smashed. She reported $75 in currency, $500 in jewelry, $350 worth of clothing and $115 in miscellaneous items missing.

MacDonald Attorneys Seek Autopsy

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for convicted murderer Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald said Saturday they want to make sure there was no foul play in the death of a witness crucial to MacDonald's attempts to get a new trial.

The body of a woman tentatively identified as Helena Stoeckley Davis, 30, was found Friday in Seneca, S.C. The woman had said that a group of "hippies" killed MacDonald's pregnant wife and two daughters at Fort Bragg in 1970.

The Supreme Court refused Monday to hear MacDonald's appeal of his conviction for the murders. But lawyers said they were planning to seek a new trial in U.S. District Court in Raleigh based on new evidence involving Mrs. Davis.

"We have been making every effort to assure that the autopsy is very thorough," said attorney Wade Smith of Raleigh. "We are asking for a complete investigation by the FBI ... so we can be confident that nothing violent happened.

"We hope there was no foul play of any kind and that she died peacefully," Smith said. "There's no reason to believe ... someone else was involved; she's just been a prominent figure throughout the proceedings."

Officials at the Medical University of South Carolina at Charleston said they would perform an autopsy Saturday, but no results were available by Saturday evening.

Smith said the sudden death had an undetermined impact on MacDonald's case.

"This requires us to get together and think this thing through after the dust settles," he said.

Another attorney for MacDonald, Brian O'Neill, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles that lawyers would still continue to "dig up new evidence."

But he said he did not know when lawyers would press for a new trial. "We've been counting on a witness who is no longer available," he said.

Before Mrs. Davis' death, O'Neill had said that lawyers were hoping to move for a new trial by March or April.

Paddling Brings Assault Charge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A teacher at West Millbrook Middle School was charged with assault after the father of a student complained that his son received a paddling that amounted to a beating.

Irmis Estes was released without bond after Alfred L. Inscore filed a formal complaint with authorities.

Inscore charged that Estes paddled his son, Clarence, on Tuesday for fighting in school. He said three blows were administered with a 2-foot-long paddle.

The father said he decided to file charges after he took his son to a pediatrician for treatment of welts. He said his son had to remain out of school Wednesday because of the paddling.

Inscore said he does not disagree with the state law allowing teachers to paddle students.

"There's a law that you can spank a child, and spanking is fine. But this was a beating," he said.

Estes declined to comment Friday.

Riley Reiner, principal at West Millbrook, said the family had contacted him to express concern about the paddling.

"It wasn't a physical beating," Reiner said.

According to Wake County school system guidelines, paddling can be administered only when another teacher or principal is present. The teacher or principal must give the parent a written explanation of the punishment and the name of the witness if the parent requests that information.

Corporal punishment should not be administered unless "other lesser punishments have been tried first and unless the child has been warned that corporal punishment may be the result of further misbehavior," the guidelines say.

The guidelines say an exception to the rule is allowed when a child's behavior is so antisocial or disruptive "as to shock the conscience."

Estes is to appear in Wake County District Court Jan. 26 for a hearing on the charges.

The Housing Authority operates with the goal of building, maintaining, and operating safe and sanitary public housing for low-income families. For information, call 752-3118.

UNC's Sam Perkins

Perkins Scores Career-High 36 Points

UNC Surprises Cavs, 101-95

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — "Sam Perkins was just unbelievable. Not only in scoring, but he was also very active on defense."

Those words came from Dean Smith, coach of the 11th-ranked North Carolina Tar Heels, who hung on for a 101-95 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over No. 2 Virginia Saturday.

Perkins, a 6-foot-9 junior, scored a career-high 36 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and did a good job tying up Virginia's 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson. Hitting mostly from the outside, Perkins tossed in 12 of 17 field goal tries, including a perfect 4-for-4 from three-point range, and made all eight of his free throw attempts.

"We tried a bit of everything against Perkins," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "He had a great day. It's tough when a guy that big can go outside that way. They did a good job on Ralph without giving up things to other people. They kept us out of our offensive rhythm."

It was the ninth straight triumph for the defending NCAA champions, who are 12-3 overall and 2-0 in ACC play.

In having its 34-game, home-court winning streak snapped, Virginia dropped to 12-2 overall and 3-1 in the ACC.

North Carolina led by its biggest margin, 85-62, with 9:41 remaining, but Virginia rallied to close the gap to 97-95 with 50 seconds left. A 23-7 spurt by the Cavaliers had brought them within 92-85 with 3:24 remaining.

After Jim Miller's off-balance jumper cut the lead to 97-95, Jim Braddock and Michael Jordan each connected on a pair of free throws to clinch the victory.

Perkins, a 6-foot-9 junior, scored 25 of his points in the first half, when the Tar Heels took a 56-44 lead. Perkins hit 12 of 17 field goals, including 4-for-4 from three-point range, and made all eight free throws attempts.

Other Tar Heels in double figures were Jordan with 16, Buzz Peterson with 14 and Braddock with 13.

Ralph Sampson, Virginia's 7-foot-4 All-American center, was held to six points in the first half by North Carolina's zone defense, but got more opportunities in the second half and wound up with 17 points and 12 rebounds. Othell Wilson paced the Cavaliers with 25 points, while Rick Carlisle had 22. North Carolina, which beat Virginia two out of three times last season and shared the ACC title with the Cavaliers, shot 60 percent from the field and made 30 of 35 free throws. Virginia hit on 42 percent of its field goal tries and made 21 of 22 from the free throw line.

Wolfpack Rolls By Ga. Tech

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH — Ernie Myers may not have the physical talents of a Dereck Whittenburg, but against Georgia Tech, the North Carolina State freshman more than made up for the shortcoming in the statistics.

Myers, a replacement for the injured Whittenburg, tied a school freshman record with 27 points as the 20th-ranked Wolfpack took an 81-61 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over the Yellow Jackets.

Myers' heroics enabled N.C. State to snap a two-game losing streak and raise its record to 8-3, 2-1 in the ACC.

Clyde Austin scored 27 points against Maryland in 1977.

Whittenburg suffered a broken foot in last Wednesday's Virginia game, giving Myers the responsibility of providing offensive punch. The Bronx, N.Y., native said his was a hard role to fill.

"I don't think I'm the player he is," said Myers. "It was a great loss."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
SUNDAY MORNING

Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said it isn't fair to compare Myers with Whittenburg because of their styles, but he was pleased with the performance.

"Ernie Myers is a scorer, not a shooter," he said. "You don't think he's getting as many points as he does. He's a very active player. It's nice to see a freshman do that."

Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins, who also recruited Myers, said he was not surprised at what he saw.

"If he continues to play this way, North Carolina State will not suffer with the loss of Whittenburg," said Cremins. "I thought we might have an advantage without Dereck in there."

The Wolfpack, taking advantage of poor Georgia Tech shooting, built a 36-24 halftime lead. The Yellow Jackets rallied with eight straight points in the first four minutes of the second half and narrowed the gap to 36-33 at the 16:58 mark.

A Thurl Bailey jumper at 16:48 broke the drought, and with a three-point play by Cozell McQueen, the Wolfpack took a 41-33 edge with 16:09 remaining.

Myers then took over the offense, scoring the next 12 Wolfpack points for a 53-45 advantage with 8:59 left.

Georgia Tech, 6-5 and 1-2, got 18 points from freshman John Salley. Price scored 11 points and Maurice Bradford had 10.

Spiders Down Pirates, 68-56

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RICHMOND, Va. — Richmond's Spiders hit their first five shots from the floor and eight of their first 11 to run out to a 16-10 lead over East Carolina University Saturday on the way to a 68-56 ECAC-South victory over the Pirates.

But ECU Coach Charlie Harrison was disappointed only in the fact that the Pirates came up short on the end of the scoreboard.

"We had to play this one without Charlie (Green — out with a shoulder separation for at least three weeks). There's no question that that hurt us both in our scoring and our rebounding. I said that we'd have to scrap without him.

"It's going to take two or three games for us to get back into the flow of things with a new lineup, but I saw some positive things out there this afternoon," the coach continued. "I'm not at all discouraged."

The Pirates trailed by as much as nine points in the first half — never leading at any time in the game — but fought back to within five at the end of the period. In the second half, Richmond built up as much as as 14 point lead, 53-39, only to see the Pirates again rally, this time within four, 57-53.

But the Bucs seemed to run out of gas there, and the Spiders were able to claim their second straight ECAC victory — both coming on their home court of Robins Center on the UR campus.

The Spiders are 7-7 overall, while ECU drops now to 1-3 in the league and 6-7 overall.

The biggest problem the Pirates had to face was one they could not overcome — the big height difference between them and the Spiders. Richmond started a veteran club that included 6-10 Jeff Pehl, 6-9 Bill Flye and 6-6 Bill Dooley in the front court. ECU went with 6-6 Johnny Edwards against Pehl, 6-6 Tom Brown against Flye and 6-5 Barry Wright against Dooley.

As a result, the Spiders were able to pick up a number of second shots as they outrebounded the Pirates, 32-19 behind a 12-rebound effort by Pehl to towered above everyone else on the court except for teammate Flye. Dooley finished with six rebounds and Flye, five.

East Carolina's leading rebounder was Edwards with six.

Richmond stayed with a zone defense the entire afternoon, packing it it against Edwards, who still scored 18 points — all from the floor. The rest of the scoring came almost entirely on outside shooting — and because of that, the Pirates hit only 47.2 percent of their shots.

Richmond, hitting much better than the Pirates from the outside, canned 59.1 percent, but still got a healthy number of inside shots from Pehl, Dooley and Flye.

"They (Richmond) started out jamming the inside but once we got them to open up a little, we missed a few from the outside and they jammed it up again," Harrison said.

And when the ball got inside, Harrison felt that the officials were letting a lot of things get by, too. "Edwards is a strong guy and the ball was flying all over everywhere. You tell me, was he getting fouled?"

Oddly enough, the officials seemed to be calling touch fouls outside on both teams and letting much of the contact inside go. ECU shot only seven free throws — just two in the second half. Richmond made good on 16 of 19, but nearly all of those came from the guards. Twelves fouls were called against the Spiders and 20 against the Pirates.

"The thing that really burns me up," Harrison continued, "is that they are letting everybody get away with the moving screen. Not just here, but everywhere we've played. I teach my kids good defense and they play good defense, but they get taken out by these illegal screens and the officials don't even look at them. They (Richmond) got several jump shots off it today.

"We've got our problems, though, sure. But none of these kids quit. They hustled, they played good defense and they did the things we wanted them to. They played their hearts out. I just hope people realize this and don't give up on them."

Riggins Keys 'Skins By Minnesota, 21-7

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Two weeks ago," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said of fullback John Riggins, "he came to me and said he was excited about the playoffs. He said, 'Give me the ball.'"

Saturday, the Redskins gave Riggins the ball — 37 times, one shy of the National Football League playoff record. And he rumbled through Minnesota's defense for a Redskins' playoff-record 185 yards and a touchdown as Washington beat the Vikings 21-7 and advanced to the National Conference championship game.

"He says he doesn't have too many years left. He's convinced me otherwise," Gibbs said of the 33-year-old Riggins, an 11-year veteran whose contract expires at the end of this season. "He was stupendous."

Washington General Manager Bobby Beathard said of Riggins: "John's getting better each week. I just hope we can stay around in the playoffs long enough for him to reach his peak. I don't even want to think about having to sign him after the year."

Doug Martin, Minnesota's left defensive end, described Riggins as "a tank; that's my impression of him. All the Redskins used were basics and he ran through the cracks. No, make that holes."

The Washington offensive line calls itself the "Hogs." Some of the Minnesota defensive players took to calling themselves the "Butchers" as this game approached.

"The line wanted to block for John because of some of the things the Minnesota players had said earlier in the week," said Redskins guard Russ

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Richard Todd-to-Wesley Walker combination proved to be too much for the Los Angeles Raiders Saturday — and just enough for the New York Jets.

Todd's 45-yard pass to Walker set up a 1-yard plunge by Scott Dierking with 3:45 remaining to give the Jets a 17-14 triumph over the Raiders in a second-round National Football League playoff game.

The upset victory means the Jets will face the winner of Sunday's San Diego-Miami contest for the American Football Conference championship on Jan. 23. The winner of that game will represent the AFC in Super Bowl XVII at Pasadena on Jan. 30.

"It was a simple play; he just sprinted by everybody," Todd said of Walker on the game's biggest play. "He was getting a lot of bump and run. They were challenging us to throw on them and with receivers like Wesley Walker, you have to take a chance and go for the end zone.

"Wesley is an All-Pro, he just did a great job. I'll challenge anybody who wants to bump and run with Wesley."

While happy about his team's victory, New York Coach Walt Michaels was angry about a telephone call he said he received at halftime.

"Whoever called is one sick individual," said Michaels, who was told by a security guard that the call was from Jets' owner Leon Hess. "His initials are A.D. and I don't care if he knows about it. It's a rotten way to try to disturb a football team. All it did was fire us up. Thank you, Al Davis."

Beckish, Bustle Quit At ECU To Join Wranglers

A Staff Report

East Carolina University offensive coordinator Larry Beckish and receiver coach Ricky Bustle have resigned to join the Phoenix Wranglers of the new United States Football League.

Beckish has just completed his first year on the ECU football staff, having installed the new Pirate I offense last spring. Behind that offense, the Pirates were able to put together a 7-4 season, their first winning season in three years.

Beckish came to East Carolina from Wichita State, where he had put together an outstanding offense for the Wheatshockers, making them one of the top offenses in the country.

He had also served as an assistant at Clemson, at Miami of Florida and at Tampa. During his collegiate days, he was an offensive end at Wichita State, and captain of the 7-2 1963 team that won the Missouri Valley Championship.

The 40-year old Beckish will serve as offensive coordinator for the Wranglers in their inagural season this spring.

Bustle, who was one of the original members of the Ed Emory staff at ECU, has completed three years on the Pirate staff. A former assistant at Clemson and Garner-Webb, he played his prep ball at Summerville, South Carolina, and was a wide receiver and quarterback at Clemson.

Bustle, 29, will serve as receiver coach with the Wranglers.

The two resignations bring to seven the number of Pirate coaches who have left this year. Defensive coordinator Norm Parker has taken a job at Michigan State as linebacker coach, Spencer Prescott left to coach the running backs at Temple, graduate assistant Tom Mingey has become defensive coordinator at Miami of Ohio, and Jim Holland (defensive ends) and Jim Bengala (defensive backs) both left the ECU staff but have not announced their plans for the future.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Johnny Dawkins, one of four freshman in the Duke starting line-up, scored 31 points and led the Blue Devils to an 86-67 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Maryland Saturday night.

Duke, 7-6, evened its ACC record at 1-1, while Maryland lost its third straight in the conference and dropped to 7-5 overall.

Dawkins sank four shots from the three-point range and four times in the second half scored key baskets when the Terps threatened to rally.

After Maryland took a 44-43 lead, its first advantage since being ahead 12-11, Dawkins quickly regained the lead for the Blue Devils and sank another field goal with the score tied at 51-51.

A Dawkins three-pointer launched a six-point Duke streak for a 63-56 lead, and he scored five more points during a nine-point string to make it 72-58 with 3:44 left.

Freshman Jay Bilas scored 16 points and senior Tom Emma added 14 points for Duke. Maryland was led by Adrian Branch with 16.

GREENSBORO (AP) — Wake Forest guard Danny Young knows that when he's in 3-point range, he's got Coach Carl Tacy's blessing to fire away.

"He told me to just take in naturally, not to look for it. Their defense was laying off me and I just took the open shots," Young said after his five 3-point field goals and 24 points paced the Demon Deacons to an 89-76 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Clemson Saturday.

"Danny has the green light to shoot whenever he feels he's open," said Tacy, whose team won its 11th game in 12 outings and raised its conference record to 2-0.

Wake Forest, which trailed only once, rode the shooting of Young, Delaney Rudd and Alvis Rogers.

Rogers scored 16 points while Rudd added 15 and made four steals.

"I thought our guards really carried us in the early part of the game, especially in the first half," said Tacy. "They have consistently done a good job on defense."

Clemson coach Bill Foster, whose team outrebounded Wake Forest 42-29, bemoaned his team's scoring problems.

"During the course of the game, our inability to put the ball down when we got it in the paint really hurt us," said Foster, whose team dropped to 6-9 and 0-3. "It's difficult to play 40 minutes and count on everything you're going to get from the perimeter."

With Young scoring 13 points in the first 12 minutes, Wake jumped to a 10-point lead. But Clemson scored the final 6 points of the first half and trailed only 42-38 at halftime.

The Deacons, keyed by a steal and layup by Young, scored 7 straight points early in the second half to break the game open. Wake Forest led by as many as 19 points at 82-63 before Clemson narrowed the final margin to 13.

NFL PLAYOFFS

Miami 'D' On Spot Vs. Chargers

MIAMI (UPI) — It was a week Bill Arnsparger really earned his paycheck.

Miami's defensive coordinator has molded the Dolphins into the league's stingiest defensive unit, but it will take all of his skills to carry out an effective game plan for today's AFC semifinal playoff game against San Diego in the Orange Bowl at 12:30 p.m. EST.

The Chargers' offensive engine has been revved ever since the players' strike ended and one of the most devastating attacks in NFL history will be seeking to place San Diego in the conference title game for the third straight year.

Today's matchup pitting the league's No. 1 offense against the NFL's No. 1 defense also marks the rematch of last year's memorable divisional playoff game in Miami. After jumping to a 24-0 lead in the first quarter only to fall behind 38-31, the Chargers tied the game late in regulation and staggered to a 41-38 triumph on Rolf Benirschke's 29-yard field goal just 68 seconds before the first overtime period was to expire.

"I was absolutely numb," recalls Miami defensive tackle Bob Baumhower. "Our training room looked like a combat zone. It's something anyone who played in will never forget."

Led by the cool hand of Pro Bowl starting quarterback Dan Fouts, the Chargers, 7-3, averaged 450.8 yards per game during the regular season, the third-highest figure in league history. San Diego's average of 324.7 passing yards per game set an NFL record and the Chargers have not been held under 30 points since the third week of the season.

Fouts, who set NFL playoff records for most pass attempts (53), most completions (33) and most yards (433) in the overtime thriller against Miami, threw for 333 yards and three touchdowns in Pittsburgh last week as San Diego rallied in the final minute for a 31-28 playoff triumph.

Tight end Kellen Winslow — the hero of last year's game with a playoff-record 13 catches — led the AFC in receiving for the third straight season and fellow All-Pro Wes Chandler was the only receiver in the league to reach the 1,000-yard mark. Even more discouraging for Charger opponents, Fouts is nearly impossible to sack as All-Pros Doug Wilkerson and Russ Washington key a big, mobile offensive line.

With the Pittsburgh defense primed for a Fouts' air raid during the Chargers' game-winning drive, San Diego instead handed the ball to Chuck Muncie, who enters Sunday's matchup with three straight 100-yard games.

But the Chargers, slight favorites despite playing in the Orange Bowl, aren't underestimating the intelligence of these Dolphins.

"We had our first meeting Monday," says San Diego safety Tim Fox, "and the first thing coach (Don) Coryell told us was that we had to be prepared to play six or seven quarters. We all know it's gonna be a dogfight."

The Dolphins, 8-2, posted their first post-season triumph since Super Bowl VIII by whipping New England 28-13 last week. Coach Don Shula — who received an electrifying 403-yard performance from backup quarterback Don Strock against the Chargers last year — is buoyed by David Woodley's showing against the Patriots. Woodley hit on 16-of-19 passes for 246 yards and two TDs as Miami craftily mixed the bullish runs of Andra Franklin with the passing game.

"We're so much more mature than we were a year ago," says Baumhower. "Last year, we were supposed to be an 8-8 team and we went into that Chargers' game with very little confidence.

"We kept coming back in that game and the feeling has carried over. We know now we can play with any team in the NFL ... we're as good or better than anyone."

While San Diego's offense offers the craftsmanship of fine crystal, the Chargers' defense — even under new coordinator Tom Bass — has embraced a "bend-and-break" philosophy; in the last five weeks, the Chargers have yielded an average of 33 points per game.

Those numbers are enough to make Arnsparger order two-a-day practices, yet Shula tries to keep a straight face while praising the Chargers' defense.

"They are more of a contain-type club under Bass," he says, referring to the former architect of Tampa Bay's swarming defense. "They'll give you a lot of stuff underneath, but they'll basically stop the long pass and the long run.

"They don't gamble as much as they used to and their defense is definitely improved."

Tim Fox, obtained from the Patriots in the off-season, remembers watching last year's Chargers-Dolphins classic on television and he offers a stern warning to the weak of heart.

"I kept thinking how incredible the game was and how it kept going and going," says Fox. "Now that I'm on this team, I know why we won. I can see how it happened and I think the rematch is going to be a very similar game."

Green Bay, Dallas Old Rivals

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — Two rivals from long ago and far away meet again Sunday for the right to proceed to the NFC championship game and the main principals involved would like to get on with the business at hand and forget about the distant past.

The fourth and final NFL playoff game of the weekend will send the Dallas Cowboys against the Green Bay Packers Sunday afternoon at Texas Stadium with a 4 p.m. EST kickoff.

Dallas will be trying to advance to the NFC title game for the third straight season and for the 10th time in the last 13 years. Green Bay, meanwhile, is hoping to re-create its glory days under coach Vince Lombardi by reaching the conference championship matchup for the first time since 1967.

In the Cowboys' early days as a force in the NFL, they ran into the Packers two straight years and on both occasions the teams produced memorable struggles.

In 1966 the Packers and Cowboys met for the NFL championship and a berth in the first Super Bowl. Dallas fell behind by 14 points before it had ever run a play, battled back to tie the game and then saw the Packers open another 14-point advantage.

But Dallas scored on a 68-yard pass from Don Meredith to Frank Clarke and then drove to the Green Bay 2-yard line in the final seconds only to have a Meredith fourth-down pass intercepted in the end zone by Tom Brown, leaving the Packers a 34-27 winner.

The next year, in temperatures that cascaded to 20-below zero, Green Bay drove 68 yards in the final five minutes and quarterback Bart Starr scored on a 1-yard, fourth-down sneak that brought the Packers a 21-17 decision.

Dallas and Green Bay have played six times since, but never in the playoffs.

"I don't reminisce about that," said Starr, who in his seventh year as Packers coach finally has pushed Green Bay into contender status. "I don't think it is appropriate to become engrossed in that kind of conversation.

"This is 1983. We are very proud of our past and our tradition, as the Cowboys are with their's. They want to maintain their tradition as they should.

"But this is a group here that is building something. We haven't done anything like the Cowboys have in recent years. They have been in the playoffs for 16 of the last 17 years. That is a remarkable record and an enviable one.

"We haven't even bugun to approach that. We are pleased our people have earned this right this year and we hope to grow from here."

"I'm like Bart," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "I don't look in the past much anyway. We had some great games. But this is a different era today. We're just looking forward to this game."

Sunday's game is expected to be decided chiefly by how well the Cowboys young but talented secondary can handle the Packers' passing attack which features wide receivers James Lofton and John Jefferson.

Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey completed 260 yards worth of passes and threw for four touchdowns last Saturday in the Packers' 41-16 romp over St. Louis.

Dallas' Danny White, meanwhile, threw for 312 yards and two scores against Tampa Bay on Sunday despite the fact he was suffering from a sore thumb and an infected wisdom tooth. .

"It will be a scoring game," said Landry. "You don't stop their receivers. All you can try to do is outscore them."

'Expert' Picks Jets, Cowboys In Super Bowl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At least one expert predicts that the New York Jets and Dallas Cowboys will qualify for Super Bowl XVII at the Rose Bowl on Jan. 30.

Those who disagree shouldn't bother trying to explain why either the Jets, Cowboys or both will fall by the wayside.

That's because the expert is a computer, Bud Goode's Univac Computer, and communication might be a problem.

While the computer isn't always right, it's done pretty well in recent years.

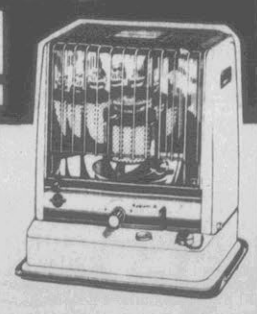

"Statistics don't win for you, people do," said Goode in an interview Monday. "But what they do on the field can be measured. The numbers are right more than they're wrong."

Goode said his computer predicted that the Jets and Cowboys would qualify for the Super Bowl before the National Football League playoffs began. He continues to stand by those forecasts.

"Before the season, the computer tabbed the Philadelphia Eagles and Cincinnati Bengals to go to the Super Bowl," said Goode. "But that changed during the season. Now, we'll see."

NEWTON, Mass (AP) — Michael Adams scored a career-high 27 points, made eight steals and added five assists to ignite Boston College to a 68-64 upset over third-ranked St. John's in college basketball Saturday night.

Unranked Boston College, which reached the Final Eight of last year's NCAA tournament, improved its record to 11-2 overall and 2-1 in the Big East. St. John's lost for the first time, as its record fell to 14-1 overall and 4-1 in conference play.

The Redmen led only once, 37-36, after Chris Mullin hit the first basket of the second half. But they stayed close and trailed 57-54 before Adams, a sophomore guard, took charge.

He sank two free throws with 2:53 left, assisted on Jay Murphy's layup and added two more foul shots as the Eagles charged into a 63-54 lead with 1:59 to play.

With the score 64-56, Adams stole the ball at midcourt and drove all the way for a basket on a goal-tending call against Kevin Williams, with 1:19 remaining.

Adams made two more free throws with 31 seconds left to give the Eagles a 68-60 bulge.

Boston College took a 10-2 lead in the first two minutes of the game, but could make only one field goal in the final five minutes of the first half, which ended with the Eagles on top 36-35.

Murphy added 19 points for the Eagles, and John Garris added 11. Mullin led St. John's with 22 points, and Billy Goodwin and Williams scored 12 each. David Russell, who went into the game with a 16.4-point scoring average, was held to 4.

Cincinnati cut Memphis State's lead to three points shortly before the half and trailed 36-29 at the intermission. However, Cincinnati managed just two of 13 field goal attempts and two of 11 free throws to start the second half and fell behind 55-35 at the 11:50 mark. Memphis State stretched the lead to 27 points at one point.

Purdue.....78

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Randy Wittman and Ted Kitchel scored 23 points apiece Saturday, including 10 of Indiana's final 14 points from the free throw line, as the No.4-ranked Hoosiers turned back a second-half rally to beat Purdue 81-78 in a Big Ten Conference basketball game.

The Hoosiers, taking control with a 20-2 burst midway through the first half, held a 20-point lead before the Boilermakers' comeback. Purdue cut the margin to 15 at halftime and steadily closed the gap in the second half.

Purdue center Russell Cross, held to one point in the first half, pulled the Boilermakers within 73-67 on a three-point play with two minutes to go. Indiana's Jim Thomas then hit two free throws but Dan Palombizio countered with a three-point goal for Purdue.

Kitchel added two more foul shots, but Curt Clawson scored another three-pointer, and Cross banked in a short shot to pull Purdue within 77-75 with 31 seconds remaining.

Two more free throws apiece by Kitchel and Wittman pushed the Hoosiers' lead back to six points before Steve Reid hit Purdue's final three-pointer just ahead of the buzzer.

The victory, Indiana's first at Purdue since 1976, lifted the Hoosiers to 2-1 in the Big Ten and 12-1 for the season. Purdue, topped by Ricky Hall with 21 points and Palombizio with 19, fell to 2-2 and 11-3.

Minnesota.....69
Michigan St. 67

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Substitute forward Barry Wohler stole the ball from Michgian State's Scott Skiles and sank the winning basket with four seconds remaining to lift 17th-ranked Minnesota to a 69-67 victory over the Spartans in Big Ten basketball Saturday night.

Minnesota's 7-foot-3 center Randy Breuer, who finished with 25 points, hit 11 of the Golden Gophers' opening 13 points while holding Spartans center Kevin Willis scoreless until the 6:48 mark of the first half. From that point, Willis hit 10 points in a three-minute span to cut an eight-point Minnesota lead to 31-27.

Michigan State later hit six straight points to take a 36-35 lead at the half.

Minnesota outscored the Spartans 9-2 early in the second half before Michigan State hit three straight buckets to tie it at 44-44. The game was tied eight times in the final 20 minutes.

Minnesota's Marc Wilson chipped in with 12 points before leaving with an injury with eight minutes remaining. Tommy Davis and Roland Brooks had 10 each for Minnesota.

Willis hit for 19 points for the Spartans, Skiles hit for 13, Sam Vincent and Pat Ford each had 10.

Minnesota lifted its record to 3-1 in the Big Ten and 11-2 overall while Michigan State fell to 2-2 and 9-5.

Illinois 63

CHAMPAIGN Ill. (AP) — Guard Derek Harper scored 21 points, 15 in the second half, to lead Illinois to a 63-55 Big Ten Basketball win over 20th-ranked Ohio State Saturday.

Forward Anthony Welch added 16 to the Illini effort.

Harper's output tied his season-high set earlier in the season against Illinois State.

Illinois led 30-27 at the end of an error-filled first half. Early in the game the Buckeyes went four minutes without a basket. Illinois followed that by going more than eight minutes without scoring a point.

Illinois came out firing at the start of the second half, building its three-point halftime lead to 44-35 with 12:21 to go, but the Buckeyes scored three baskets in less than a minute to pull to within three points.

The Illini, 12-5 overall and 2-2 in the Big Ten, managed to maintain the lead, and send Ohio State to its second defeat in three Big Ten contests. The Buckeyes are 9-4 overall.

The leading scorer for Ohio State was guard Troy Taylor with 15 points. Tony Campbell added 14 and Larry Huggins had 13 points for the Buckeyes.

Arkansas.....63
SMU 56

DALLAS (AP) - Guard Darrell Walker scored 13 of his 17 points in the second half to lift seventh-ranked Arkansas to a 63-56 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Southern Methodist Saturday night and present Eddie Sutton with his 200th victory as Razorback coach.

The unbeaten Razorbacks stretched their record to 13-0 and 3-0 in the SWC. SMU dropped to 10-5 and 2-2 with the loss, the Mustangs' fifth in a row to Arkansas.

The Mustangs have lost 16 of 18 games played since Sutton has been the Arkansas coach.

Arkansas led 32-31 at halftime but SMU went ahead by as many as four points in the second half before hitting a cold streak.

Walker, who had two steals in the last 10 minutes, helped Arkansas breakaway with his free throws and driving layups.

The Mustangs were paced by freshman guard Butch Moore, who scored 16 points, and forward Larry Davis who added 15.

SMU's 7-foot center Jon Koncak had four blocked shots and nine rebounds before he fouled out with 6:56 to play.

Arkansas shot 39 percent from the field and SMU shot 37 percent. The Mustangs outrebounded Arkansas 42-41 but shot poorly from the free throw line, hitting only 12 of 20 for 60 per cent.

The Hogs cashed 72 percent of their free throws on 13 of 18 shooting.

Tennessee.....74

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jeff Malone scored 35 points, including nine in overtime, as Mississippi State upset No.18 Tennessee 75-74 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

Tennessee's Willie Burton missed the second of a one-and-one with seven seconds left in a foul-plagued second half to send the game into overtime at 64-64.

Malone drilled in six of his overtime points in the first 3:39, giving the Bulldogs a 70-66 lead.

Tennessee's Tyrone Beaman missed the second shot of a one-and-one with 19 seconds left. Vol Michael Brooks fouled Malone with eight seconds remaining, allowing the 6-foot-4 guard to make his final point.

Beaman contributed six points in the final minute, including a bucket with two seconds remaining, to pull the Volunteers within one.

Mississippi State and Tennessee swapped free throws before Brooks scored on a layup with 2:34 left in overtime. But Brooks was called for a foul at 1:05, allowing Malone two more free throws and the Bulldogs a 73-69 lead.

Beaman responded 11 seconds later with a field goal, and 40 seconds later with a free throw, trimming Mississippi State's lead to 73-72.

But Tennessee's Dan Federmann fouled reserve Chauncey Robinson three seconds later and Mississippi State pulled ahead by two.

Tennessee, now 10-3 overall and 2-2 in the SEC, led by as much as nine points in the first half. But the Bulldogs, 10-4 overall and 3-2 in the league, had trimmed the Volunteers' lead 37-36 at halftime.

Brooks led his teammates with 20 points, Beaman added 16, Dale Ellis scored 15 points and Kevin Woods added 12.

Iona 77
Army 66

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Steve Burtt scored 31 points and keyed two game-breaking streaks to lead Iona to a 77-66 basketball victory over Army in a Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference game Saturday.

Gary Springer aided the Iona cause with 14 points and 14 rebounds as the Gaels improved their overall record to 11-3 in their first MAAC game this season.

Dennis Schlitt scored a season-high 24 points and Kenny Schwartz added 15 for Army, 4-8 and 0-3. It was the Cadets' fifth straight loss.

Georgia Trims No. 10 Alabama

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Freshman Donald Hartry's 20-footer from the left of the key with 12 seconds remaining broke a deadlock and Vern Fleming added a clinching free throw with one second to go as Georgia trimmed 10th-ranked Alabama 67-64 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

It was the fourth SEC setback in five games for the Crimson Tide, which had rolled through their preconference schedule with eight consecutive victories.

The Tide, trailing 56-49 with 6:04 remaining, fought back for two ties in the final 91 seconds, the first on a pair of free throws by Bobby Lee Hurt that knotted the score at 62.

Then, after Fleming hit a driving layup, Hurt came back to score from inside with 53 seconds to play to tied it at 64.

Georgia called a time out with 30 seconds left and set the stage for Hartry's go-ahead bucket.

Alabama took a time out after getting the ball past midcourt with seven seconds remaining, but Fleming virtually sealed the victory when he stole Ennis Whatley's lob pass for Hurt. Fleming was fouled and added the final point one second from the finish.

Fleming led Georgia, 11-2 and 2-2, with 21 points, Terry Fair had 15 and Hartry 14, including five long shots over the Tide zone in the second half.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Jimmy Foster scored 30 points and got 10 rebounds to lead South Carolina to a 91-79 victory over Georgia State here Saturday night.

It was the second 30-point game this week for the 6-8 junior forward and the fifth straight win for the Gamecocks, 9-3.

Jimmy Hawthorne came off the bench to add 18 points and Brad Jergenson had 12 points.

Joe Brown, with 25 points, and Chavelot Holmes with 21, paced the Panthers, whose record dropped to 6-11.

The Gamecocks got off to an early lead and stretched it to 47-38 at halftime. After leading by as many as 12 points in the second period, the Gamecocks had their lead cut to 62-56 with 11:16 left to play.

But Kenny Holmes hit a jumper, Hawthorne banked in a field goal and Foster had two baskets to rebuild the South Carolina lead to 71-58.

"They hurt us on the offensive boards," Panther coach Jim Jarrett said. "South Carolina had at least 12 offensive rebounds they put back in on us and that was the key to the ball game."

Interim Gamecock coach Steve Steinwedel said, "We played one of our better games offensively. Foster played another great game and Hawthorne shot well against the zone defense."

Va. Tech 70
Florida St. 69

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Freshman Dell Curry's jumper with a minute left sent Virginia Tech ahead and the Hokies survived two missed shots by Florida State in the closing seconds Saturday for a 70-69 Metro Conference basketball decision over the Seminoles.

It was the seventh straight victory for Tech, including a 69-56 triumph last Monday night over top-ranked Memphis State, and upped the Hokies' overall record to 14-1. Tech is 3-0 in the conference.

After Curry's shot, Tech got the ball back, but Reggie Steppe missed the front end of a one-and-one with 26 seconds left. Tony William missed a push shot from the corner for the Seminoles and Mitchell Wiggins, who led all scorers with 32 points, missed an off-balance jumper with two seconds left.

The Hokies led 68-64 with 4:02 remaining, but Wiggins hit three free throws in the next 1:20 to cut it to 68-67 and Maurice Myrick hit from inside to send the Seminoles in front 69-68 before Curry got the winner.

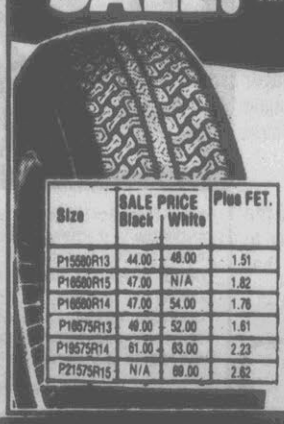

Perry Young finished with 22 points, Curry with 14 and Steppe with 10 for the Hokies. Freshman Bobby Beecher grabbed a game-high eight rebounds, but Wiggins — who was 14 of 15 from the foul line — had seven rebounds for the Seminoles, who had a 24-22 edge off the boards.

The Hokies led 18-17 after 10 minutes, but the Seminoles — 7-7 overall and 1-2 in the conference — came back behind Wiggins to go in front 37-33 at intermission.

Faith Slips Past Knights, 50-47

GOLDSBORO — Kenneth Mills poured in 17 points and Faith Christian rallied in the final period to defeat Greenville Christian, 50-47, last night in a high school basketball game.

There was no girls' game.

Mills led all scorers as Faith handed Greenville Christian its seventh loss in 11 games. The Knights have now dropped four consecutive games and five of their last six.

The Knights were minus two starters and a top reserve because of injuries, but GCA played well despite their absence.

"I felt really fortunate we were as close as we were, what with the personnel losses we've had," Greenville Christian coach Dale Thatcher said. "The guys played up to par and we were in it down to the wire."

Greenville Christian trailed, 14-12, after the first period. Faith managed to hold its lead in the second period and built it to 28-24 at the half.

The Knights came back to close the gap to 43-40 after three periods and took the lead early in the final period before making some crucial errors late and allow Faith to win.

"We had the lead and the ball but we just haven't learned to put the game away," Thatcher said. "We've just got to learn that extra that it takes to win. We just don't have that yet."

Greenville Christian was led by Dan Andrews with 16 points. Brian House added 10 points for the Knights.

GCA's junior varsity and girls return to action Friday when they travel to Mount Calvary.

BOONE (AP) — Winfred King scored 22 points, grabbed 14 rebounds and blocked four shots to spark East Tennessee State to a 78-58 Southern Conference basketball victory over Appalachian State Saturday night.

The Buccaneers built a 37-31 lead to 53-41 with 10 minutes remaining and received no serious threats thereafter.

King received scoring support from Andre Motley and Marcus Reese with 17 points each and Marc Quisenberry, whose 11 points included four of five from three-point range.

East Captures Hula Bowl

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Illinois quarterback Tony Eason opened the 58th annual Shrine East-West Game with a record 78-yard touchdown bomb and closed it with a 6-yard scoring pass to Oliver Williams with 14 seconds left to give the East a 26-25 triumph Saturday.

North Carolina's Kelvin Bryant put the East within striking distance when he scampered 12-yards for a touchdown with 8:18 left to bring the East back to 25-20. A two-point conversion failed.

Stanford's John Elway completed 21 of 34 passes for 202 yards before he was shaken up late in the game. He was named the offensive player of the game, but the balloting was held before Eason's game-winning toss to his Illinois teammate.

The East offense got possession of the ball with 41 seconds left in the game after the West was forced to punt from its end zone. Eason hit Williams, an Illinois teammate, on a 29-yard completion in the winning drive.

Eason, who set nine NCAA passing records in his career, gave the East the lead at the start when he launched a pass to Tennessee's Mike Miller on the first play from scrimmage. He finished with 207 yards on 10 completions in 20 attempts.

Eason flung the ball 50 yards as Miller outleaped Arizona cornerback Al Gross and jogged into the end zone just 19 seconds into the game.

Elway then marched the West 71 yards in 11 plays, capped by a 14-yard touchdown run by Tim Harris of Washington State, to close the gap to 7-6. Chuck Nelson of Washington, the most accurate field goal kicker in NCAA history, missed the extra point when his low line drive was deflected, and he missed another conversion attempt later.

Nelson kicked a 29-yard field goal late in the first period to give the West a 9-7 lead. Elway, who completed 12 of 19 passes for 95 yards in the first quarter, drilled a low 7-yard touchdown pass to San Jose State's Tim Kearse early in the second period after LSU's James Britt fumbled away a punt return on the West 34-yard line.

San Jose State quarterback Steve Clarkson took over for Elway in the second period and combined with Stanford's Vincent White to give the West a 22-7 lead.

White bobbled but held onto a Clarkson pass for 25 yards and two plays later rammed into the end zone from five yards out. Indiana quarterback Babe Laufenberg brought the East back to 22-14 with a 14-play, 78-yard drive capped by a 9-yard touchdown pass to Miller with 1:28 left in the half.

Nelson gave the West a 25-14 lead with a 22-yard field goal at 6:05 of the third period.

Morgan Hits Hole-In-One To Forge Tie In L.A. Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gil Morgan, a winner last week, used a hole-in-one as the spark that ignited an 8-under-par 63 and a gave him a share of the third round lead Saturday in the $300,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

Morgan's ace, the second of his career, came with a 5-iron shot on the 173-yard seventh hole at the Rancho Park Municipal course. It opened a string of four holes that he played five under par.

But that was only a small portion of the heroics scored by a varied cast on this mild, cloudy day. Among the others:

Veteran George Archer, who scored consecutive eagles en route to a 10-under-par 61 that brought him from the cut figure to within a single stroke of the lead.

Arnold Palmer, who is seeking to break a 10-year victory drought, shot a 68 and was a single stroke back with 18 holes to play.

Gene Littler, 52, who one-putted 10 times with a new, strange putter that has the brand name "Basakwerd" and looks the part. He shot a 66 and was tied for the lead at 202 with Morgan, Mark McCumber and Lanny Wadkins. Wadkins, a playoff loser to Morgan last week, had a 67 and McCumber shot 65, finishing it off with a 31 on the back.

Tied with Archer and Palmer at 203, 10 under par and one off the pace, were Fuzzy Zoeller and second-round leader Gibby Gilbert. Zoeller had a 69, Gilbert 71.

Tom Watson, the current U.S. and British Open titleholder and the defending champion here, missed the green and bogeyed the final hole and dropped back to 204. He had a third-round 69.

J.C. Snead, with a 66, Lon Hinkle, with a 65, Keith Fergus, with a 69 and Andy North, with a 68, were at 205.

That places 13 men within three strokes of each other at the top of standings going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $54,000 first prize.

"That just shows the caliber of the pros out here. They're learning the course and you can see what's happening," Watson said.

With the field so closely bunched, the chances of a playoff are great, Wadkins said. "The odds of ending up with a tie are pretty good, except that with the experience and caliber of the players at the top," Wadkins said. "One of them may get hot and keep it cooking."

Littler had little confidence he'd be able to — except for the magic of his peculiar, prototype putter. "I'd like to feel more confident than I do," the soft-spoken veteran said.

"But if the putter keeps going like it did today, it doesn't really matter how I play. I had an absolutely fantastic day on the greens."

He made three from about 15 feet and closed out the day with an 18-footer from the fringe for a last-hole birdie that gave him a share of the lead.

Littler used the new, strange putter, developed by a friend of his, last week. The shaft joins the clubhead at what normally would be the toe with the blade extending backwards toward the player.

"It's the best thing I've hit a putt with in a long time, maybe ever," said Littler.

Morgan's hole in one came on a shot that hit about 20 feet short of the flag, but ran to the cup, breaking to the left before dropping into the hole. He followed with three consecutive birdies, then moved into the four-way tie for the top with a 45-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

ECU Women Win Meet

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — East Carolina's women won the final relay of the day to pull out a 77-72 victory over the U.S. Naval Academy yesterday, highlighting a meet between the Pirates and Midshipmen, and the Lady Pirates and Villanova.

The ECU men were left in the Navy's wake, 87-26, winning only three events. But the Lady Pirates topped Navy while losing to Villanova, 101-48.

The ECU men won 400 medley relay, as Kevin Richards, Eric Sebnick, Doug McMillan, and Chris Pittelli swam home in 3:59.5.

The only individual winners for the men were Gregor Wray in the 200-yard butterfly in 2:12.6, and Richards in the 200 backstroke in 2:17.6.

The Lady Pirates had two double winners. Joanne McCulley won the 50 breaststroke in 1:35.9, with Jessica Fineberg second in 1:37.2. McCulley also took the 200 breaststroke in 1:52.

Nan George won the 50 freestyle in 27.6, a new Navy pool record, and also won the 100 freestyle in 1:01.3. Nancy James finished second in the latter event in 1:02.4.

East Carolina swept the 50 butterfly, with James first in 31.4, Kaky Wilson second in 31.5 and Sharon Holt third in 32.5.

The Lady Pirates also made seven national cut times (NCAA Division I) during the meet.

"We had worked real hard on our Florida training trip," Coach Rick Kobe said, "and we looked tired and heavy in the water. But the women made a good comeback against Navy, rallying from 20 points down to win."

East Carolina returns to action on Thursday, traveling to Chapel Hill to meet the Univeristy of North Carolina.

Redskins In NFC Title Game...

Grabs Pass

Grimm. "They said we were big and slow. We took that as a challenge."

Quarterback Joe Theismann said the Redskins wanted to be able to run the ball against Minnesota. "We knew with their explosive offense, we couldn't match Tommy Kramer pass for pass."

When Riggins wasn't running the ball — and gaining 106 yards more than the Vikings did on the ground — Theismann was more than matching Kramer's passing.

He hit 17 of 23 pass attempts for 213 yards and two touchdowns — 3 yards to tight end Don Warren and 18 yards to wide receiver Alvin Garrett.

"I have no complaints about that kind of day," Theismann said. "With Riggins running the way he was, there were 37 or 38 guys (on the Vikings) who never knew what we were going to do. That made it easy for me."

Kramer, repeatedly pressured and victimized by a half-dozen dropped passes, completed only 18 of 39 attempts for 252 yards.

"Things happen in a football game," Kramer said. "The dropped balls begin to wear on you. But we had the opportunities. We just didn't get it in the end zone."

The Redskins, whose only loss during the strike-shortened nine-game season was to Dallas, will play either the Cowboys or Green Bay in next Saturday's conference championship game. The Packers play in Dallas Sunday in the NFC's other second-round playoff game.

Riggins, who had rolled up a Washington playoff-record 119 yards on 25 carries a week ago, when the Redskins opened their pursuit of the Super Bowl with a 31-7 romp over Detroit, was virtually unstoppable in the first half against the Vikings. He gained 75 yards on 19 rushes as the Redskins opened a 21-7 lead.

Two of the yards came on a scoring plunge on fourth-and-inches situation for Washington's second touchdown and a 14-0 lead with one minute remaining in the opening period.

The Vikings, who had the ball for barely 1½ minutes to that time, then scored when Ted Brown swept around left end for 18 yards and a touchdown. It was Brown who last Sunday had run 5 yards on a similar sweep with less than two minutes remaining to beat Atlanta 30-24 in Minnesota's playoff opener.

Theismann, who had hit Warren with a scoring strike to cap a 66-yard drive with the opening kickoff, followed Minnesota's TD 1:57 into the second quarter by driving the Redskins 70 yards in eight plays for their third touchdown.

He began it with an 11-yard pass to Garrett and completed it with the 18-yarder to the 5-foot-7, 178-pound wide receiver. Last week, Garrett, who had caught only one pass during the regular season, replaced injured Art Monk and caught three TD passes against the Lions.

For the second straight week, all of the 55,045 seats in RFK Stadium were sold. This time, though, there were 452 no-shows, fans possibly deterred by the threat of a snowstorm that never materialized.

By the middle of the third quarter, still trailing 21-7, the Vikings resorted to trying to maintain possession on fourth-down plays. On a fourth-and-6 at the Washington 29, Tommy Kramer's pass to Sam McCullum in the end zone was batted away by leaping cornerback Joe Lavender.

Washington took over and methodically pushed deep into Minnesota territory, stalling at the 12-yard line. Mark Moseley, the record-setting placekicker who had missed wide to the left on a 47-yard field goal just befor halftime, kicked an apparent 29-yarder.

But Rich Milot of the Redskins was called for illegal use of the hands, the field goal was nullified, Washington was penalized 10 yards and Moseley missed again, wide to the right from 39 yards as the third quarter ended.

And with 10:23 to play and the Vikings still down by two touchdowns and facing a fourth-and 7 on the Washington 15, Kramer, passing out of a shotgun formation, was sacked by defensive end Tony McGee, killing Minnesota's final serious threat.

Riggins and Theismann were the entire Washington offense on its first possession. The lumbering 235-pound fullback carried seven times for 34 yards and the quarterback completed all three of his passes — 17 yards to running back Nick Giaquinto, 12 yards to Charlie Brown and the 3-yarder for a touchdown on a rollout to the right to Warren, wide open on the far edge of the end zone 5:57 into the game.

Riggins Indescribable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The only difficult thing about describing Washington running back John Riggins is finding the right words.

The only one not talking about his performance Saturday was Riggins, who maintained his two-year silence after the Redskins beat the Minnesota Vikings 21-7 in the second round of the National Football League playoffs.

"The man's a machine," Redskins' quarterback, Joe Theismann said after Riggins ran for 185 yards and one touchdown on 37 carries.

The Vikings were just as descriptive.

"A tank, that's my impression of him," said Vikings defensive end Doug Martin.

"He's like a Mack truck or a bulldozer coming at you," Vikings wide receiver Sammy White said.

The 235-pound Redskins' running back continually ran over and through the Vikings.

"He's sure-handed," Theismann said. "He's good in pressure situations and he's incredibly quick for his size ...

"If there isn't a hole, John makes one."

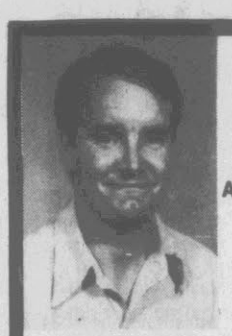

How tough was he to get down, Martin was asked. "He can turn a 3-yard loss into a 15-yard gain," said Martin. "We just couldn't wrap him up.

"The Redskins were using basic blocking. He was just reading the blocks very well. He was running through cracks. No, make that holes."

The Vikings, who did not win a game outdoors game this season after moving into their domed stadium, were hurt by several dropped passes, particularly by White. Usually the Vikings' most reliable receiver, he dropped three balls.

"Things happen in a football game. Those dropped balls begin to wear on you," Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer said.

"It's really demoralizing when they control the ball early and don't let you touch it," Kramer said.

"Three straight times down the court, Denkler had pushed (Donovan) out of bounds and when I got up, it was because she (Denkler) had her elbow in Ann's throat.

—ODU Coach Marianne Stanley

ODU Cries Foul Over ECU Tactics

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

NORFOLK, Va. — Old Dominion's Lady Monarchs rocketed to a 92-52 victory over East Carolina women Friday night, but the post-game fireworks turned out to be the biggest noisemakers of the evening.

ODU Coach Marianne Stanley came into the post-game press conference claiming that ECU had used hatchet tactics against her Lady Monarchs, in particular 6-8 All-American center Anne Donovan.

"We expected East Carolina to play with a lot of intensity," Stanley said, "but not with the sort of tactics they used tonight. I'm very disappointed in that.

"I'm sick and tired of people beating on my kids, particularly the way Anne is getting beaten up."

Stanley said that she didn't blame East Carolina's players for this, but the ECU coaching staff.

"They had a player (she later singled out Mary Denkler) assigned to push (Donovan) out of bounds on every play. And I felt it necessary to point this out to the officials."

Stanley drew a technical foul with 16:18 left in the game when the dashed out onto the court to protest a call of official Dan Woolridge. Even then, it was several seconds before the official finally assessed the technical.

Meanwhile, ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi, who had drawn one technical in the first half, and later got another, protested Stanley's coming on the court, and it was then that the tech was signaled.

"Three straight times down the court, Denkler had pushed (Donovan) out of bounds and when I got up, it was because she (Denkler) had her elbow in Ann's throat.

"That's nothing but trash out there," she said of the alleged play of the Lady Pirates. "I asked the officials why they (ECU) just didn't get out their switchblades."

Donovan, asked when it went from just being physical to being dirty, said, 'When the contact got to be intentional."

Andruzzi, when she got her chance in front of a smaller group of reporters, not only denied that her players had been 'dirty," but accused the ODU players of similar tactics.

"If Marianne said anything like that I'm surprised," Andruzzi said. "Denkler is about the cleanest player around. She gets killed inside and they are complaining. Mary took 15 shots tonight and only hit three of them. And she only went to the line once. You know that's not normal. I could say a lot of stuff about them. We were absolutely killed out there, so if she (Stanley) said that stuff, then I have no respect for her.

"East Carolina will bow to no one — period."

Andruzzi did agree with Stanley in that the officials let the game get out of hand. "They let them get away with a lot of stuff. They beat the — out of Denkler and we got nothing from it."

Denkler, questioned about the charges, ridiculed them. "That's so ridiculous, I wouldn't even comment on it," she said.

"My kids did a super job," Andruzzi said. "But they (ODU) were on our backs on every rebound and they didn't call it. That's not the first time, everytime you come up here you get it. You just don't win here.

"But no one can accuse us of playing dirty. We don't play dirty."

As for the game, it wasn't much of a contest. After the first ten minutes, it was only a question of how much ODU would win by.

The number four-ranked team spotted the Lady Pirates a 2-0 lead on a Loraine Foster jumper, then proceeded to hit 11 of its first 14 shots, including 24 straight points to take a 24-2 lead with 12:20 showing.

Denkler was held to only nine points in the game, breaking a string of 37 games she had scored in double figures. Ironically, the last time she was held under ten was at the same Old Dominion Field House in 1980-81 during the AIAW Tournament's first round.

Foster had 17 points to be the only ECU player besides Chaney in double figures.

ODU placed five in double figures, led by Medina Dixon's 16. Alphelia Jenkins picked up 14, Helen Malone and Beth Wilkerson each had 12 and Regina Miller had 10.

ODU outrebounded ECU, 53-22, led by Donovan's 18 and Dawn Cullen's 14.

Old Dominion is now 10-3 on the year, while ECU falls to 5-6. The Lady Pirates travel to UNC Charlotte on Wednesday, but look forward to February 2 when they return home for the first time in two months — to face Old Dominion.

Tacy Happy To Have May

RALEIGH (AP) — Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy never thought he'd have a second shot at 6-foot-8, 190-pound Todd May after he'd spurned a scholarship with the Demon Deacons in favor of attending Kentucky.

But, when Todd's father called Tacy, asking if Wake Forest was still interested in the former Kentucky high school "Mr. Basketball," Tacy said it was "one of the most pleasant phone calls that I've received in a while."

Tacy's interest grew every time he watched May play for Virgie, where he averaged 28.2 points and 17.6 rebounds while leading his team to a 33-3 record and berth in the state tournament semifinals.

May narrowed his collegiate choices to three, including Kentucky and his father's alma mater, Wake Forest. He liked Wake Forest, but basketball is serious business in Kentucky and the pressure on "Mr. Basketball" to stay close to home is great. He chose Kentucky.

"Once I got there, I found out if was a little too big," May said. "That was a real hard thing to adjust to. It's a great place and a great university, but it was just so much bigger than what I was used to. I just decided it wasn't what I wanted."

May quit the Wildcats on Dec. 17 amid reports that he left because he wasn't getting enough playing time. He averaged 8.2 minutes per game while seeing action in four of the Wildcats first five games.

May won't be eligible to play for the Demon Deacons until the second semester next year.

Farmville Routs Panthers, 57-41

By ALAN WOOTEN
Special To Reflector

BETHEL — Farmville Central took command early in the second half and rode clutch free throw shooting to a surprising 57-41 romp over eighth-ranked North Pitt Friday night.

Earlier, the Lady Jaguars upset North Pitt 57-49 in the girls contest.

"It was our night," said Farmville coach Mike Terrell. "We executed our defense well and played well overall. North Pitt was a much better ball club than they showed."

North Pitt coach Cobby Deans agreed. "They beat us in every way possible," jhe said. "They have an outstanding team."

The Jaguars took a 23-20 lead at the half. They quickly expanded that to 31-20 early in the second half. Bobby Carraway drove down for a layup to start things for Farmville. A foul after the shot gave the Jaguars the ball and Terrance Pettway hit a jumper to make it 27-20.

The Panthers could not find the range and Carraway hit a pair of foul shots to send FC ahead, 29-20. Pettway hit a layup on a feed from Carraway and the visitors were off to a 31-20 lead with 6:23 left in the third quarter.

"We came out and missed a few assignments and it went from a three-point game to a (11-point) game just like that," Deans said afterwards. "It just got worse after that."

North Pitt cut it back to seven on only one occasion. That came when Greg Hines, who was questionable before the game, made a steal near midcourt and drove for a layup at the 5:08 mark in the third period. The Jaguars outscored the Panthers 6-2 to finish off the quarter and take a 40-28 lead into the fourth quarter.

Andrew Edwards hit two free throws to open the fourth and the Jaguars were quickly out to a 42-28 margin. Greg Briley sandwiched two long-range jump shots from the top of the key around a Reggie Gorham follow shot to keep the Panthers within striking distance. However, Farmville Central made good on 15 of 18 free throws from there on out to make sure of a victory.

The Jaguars' patient fourth-period offense made the big difference. Carraway made two free throws with 5:14 showing and North Pitt missed a shot on the ensuing trip down floor.

With Gorham and Carraway running the offense, the Jaguars ran off over two minutes while the Panthers chased the ball, waiting for Farmville to take a shot. Gorham was finally fouled with 3:33 left. Gorham, a 78% foul shooter, made good on both ends of the one-and-one for a 48-32 lead.

North Pitt could only fire long-range jumpers as the game slowly dwindled down. Tony Hargrove made three of four free throws and Pettway made a pair to give Farmville its biggest lead, 53-34, with 1:05 left. From there, Terrell emptied the bench as the Jaguars cruised to their fifth straight win.

Farmville is 3-0 in the Eastern Carolina Conference, a half-game behind Ayden-Grifton, whom they play in Farmville Thursday night. The Jaguars are 9-4 overall.

Farmville was led in scoring by Edwards with 12 and Pettway with 10. For North Pitt, Bradley was tops with 13.

Hargrove led the rebounding with nine. Edwards, Gorham, and Pettway had six each as the Jaguars owned a 32-20 edge.

In the girls game, the Jaguars used a running game and clutch foul shooting to escape with the win. Joy Peaden tossed in a career-high 17 points to lead the Lady Jaguars, now 1-2 in conference play and 2-11 overall. The Pant-HERS are now 1-3 and 6-8.

Farmville Central trailed 8-4 after one period. Peaden began her scoring spree in the second period by making seven staight free throws and adding a field goal as the Lady Jaguars rallied for a 17-15 lead at intermission.

In the third period, North Pitt made a rally of their own. Trailing 20-19 with just over six minutes remaining, they scored six straight to take a 25-20 lead with 4:37 left.

But the Lady Jags weren't about to give up. Harris made good on a three-point play with 2:24 left and Christy Smith and Peaden scored a pair of two-pointers to end the quarter with North Pitt up 33-29.

The rally continued in the fourth period. Stephanie Newton hit a jumper from the lane and Peaden added two more field goals to send FC to a 35-33 lead with 7:07 left.

The teams alternated baskets until Newton and Harris scored back-to back jump shots with 2:40 remaining. When Kim Smith added a free throw seconds later, the Lady Jaguars had a 48-45 lead.

Regina Cox hit a long-range shot to cut it back to 48-47 but Farmville Central would not be denied of their first conference win. The Lady Jaguars made good on nine of 12 free throws in the final 1:36 to take the win.

Joining Peadeon in double figures for Farmville was Harris with 11. Linda Harrell had 17 points to pace North Pitt and Sherri Bradley tossed in 12.

Rose Surprises Bruins

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILSON — Greenville Rose, with only one victory its first eight games, may not have solved all its problems here Friday night, but the Rampants came away with a morale-boosting win.

Senior guard Donnell Lee scored 19 points — 11 in the final quarter — and Rose used its own version of a 1-3-1 zone to stymie Wilson Beddingfield's top scorer en route to a 52-39 victory.

Rose, down by five after the first eight minutes, rallied to go up by three at the half and held that lead after three periods. The Rampants sealed the win in the last period when Lee scored seven points to key a 10-4 surge that gave Rose an 11-point lead.

Beddingfield never got closer than nine the rest of the way as Rose upped its record to 2-7 overall and 1-2 in the league. Beddingfield falls to 5-6 and 1-2.

"The kids needed this win," Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "It's like I've said, they've been playing well, it's just that we put it all together tonight. We got some players who came through tonight who had not been playing that well for us."

The difference in the game, however, was the Rose defense. Brewington employed a 1-3-1 zone minus the one — a 3-1 with the fifth player playing Beddingfield's Baron Burks man-to-man.

Burks, the Bruins' No. 1 scorer with a 15-plus average, was shadowed all night by either Tony Clemmons or Albert Brown. The pair held Burks, a 6-5 center, to eight points — four of which came in the last 30 seconds, after the outcome was decided.

Asked about the zone, Brewington said: "(Burks) is one of the best centers in the league and we knew he'd kill us if we let him on the boards."

Without Burks inside punch, the Bruins had their problems. Beddingfield failed to score more than two straight buckets all night and hit just 29.7% (11 of 37) from the floor.

Rose ended up hitting 41.4% (17 of 41) from the field. Joining Lee in double figures was Mac Walston with 11.

Rose also won the rebound battle, 34-26, led by center Jeff Hopkins with eight and forward Alan Dickens with seven. Burks grabbed 10 rebounds and forward Eric Batts seven to lead Beddingfield.

Batts led Beddingfield in scoring with 12 points.

The first period was sloppy. The two squads combined for eight turnovers and a combined four for 20 effort from the floor. Reserve Marcus Parker helped Wilson to a 9-4 lead after the first eight minutes with a tip-in and two free throws — his only points of the game.

Burks lone bucket of the first half and two free throws by Kenneth Battle gave Beddingfield a 16-10 lead with three minutes left in the half. But, Dickens hit a short jumper and two foul shots to pull Rose even with 2:10 left.

Lee then hit one of two free throws and Hopkins tapped the second miss in with six seconds left to send Rose into the dressing room with a 21-18 lead.

Three free throws — two by Walston and one by Lee — helped extend Rose's lead to 26-21 with 3:33 left in the third period. But, Batt's two free throws and a baseline drive by reserve Mike Ward cut the lead to 28-23 going into the final eight minutes.

Beddingfield narrowed the deficit to three (29-26) early in the final period, but Lee ignited a 10-2 run that gave Rose a 44-32 lead. Beddingfield never got closer than nine the rest of the way.

In the girls' game, Greenville Rose ran off a 10-0 spurt to open up the fourth quarter and rally from a two-point deficit and edge Wilson Beddingfield.

The win was Coach Dennis Gibson's first against Beddingfield in his five years at Rose. The Rampettes are now 4-6 overall and 2-1 in the conference this year. Beddingfield falls to 5-6 and 1-2.

"This is a good, emotional win for us," Gibson said. "We've been trying to beat Beddingfield since I've been here."

Rose led by six at the half, but Beddingfield rallied to go ahead, 40-38, on a baseline layup by Jackie Thompson at the buzzer to end the third quarter. Rose, behind for the first time since early in the first period, wasted litte time in regaining the lead.

"I told them at the end of the third quarter they should be whipped," Gibson said. "I embarrassed them, and they don't like being embarrassed."

Rose scored 10 straight points to go up, 48-40, with three minutes gone in the final period. Francis Barnhill led the surge with a jumper and two free throws. The Lady Bruins, who did not score in the final period until 2:21 was left, did not get closer the rest of the game.

"I thought the thing that helped us tonight was we used just two defenses. We kept it simple," Gibson said. "Overall, I'm pleased with the way they played. Right now, we're right in the middle of the (conference race)."

Alma Atkinson led Rose in scoring with 16 points. Barnhill chipped in 14 while Linda Winstead added 10.

Rose trailed, 4-2, with 6:35 left in the first period but took the lead later in the period on a four-point play by Atkinson. Atkinson drove for a layup and was fouled intentionally. She hit both foul shots for an 8-6 lead.

Rose stretched the lead to 16-8 on two layups by Winstead and one by Barnhill. But, Beddingfield rallied on four free throws and a 25-foot jumper by Thompson at the buzzer to trail, 18-14.

The Rampettes extended their lead to 23-14 early in the second period only to have Beddingfield score seven straight to cut the lead to 23-21. However, two consecutive buckets by Barnhill and a follow shot by Neansa Outlaw late in the period gave Rose a 33-27 lead at the half.

Beddingfield cut the Rose lead to 33-32 with 5:23 to go in the third quarter and took the lead late in the period before the Rampettes came on in the last period to rally for the win.

A-G Wins, Leads ECC

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton is sitting alone atop the Eastern Carolina Conference standings — thanks to some good defense and a lopsided victory by Farmville Central.

Thomas Anderson and Tyrone Gay each scored 18 points and Ayden-Grifton held off a late charge by Greene Central en route to a 66-59 win Friday in an ECC game.

The Chargers win left them at 3-0 in the league, one half-game ahead of the Jaguars, who whipped North Pitt, 57-41, Friday. Ayden-Grifton is 9-3 overall and travels to Farmville Central Thursday.

"I thought we played real good defense," Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey said, "especially the last five minutes."

Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin saw hs team fall to 0-3 and 1-11 with the loss. "We can't get it together," he said. "We can't put four quarters of good basketball together."

Theodore Edwards led the Rams with 18 points and James Thompson added 16.

Ayden-Grifton inched out to a 14-12 lead after the first period, but Greene Central came back with a 16-12 second-quarter advantage to take a 28-26 lead after two periods.

The Chargers may have won the game in the third quarter. A-G outscored the Rams, 21-12, to go up, 47-40, after three periods.

Greene Central closed the gap to three in the final period, but A-G used a tough man-to-man, which forced the Rams into 23 turnovers, to spark a surge that enabled A-G to hold on for the win.

In the girls' game, Cynthia Jones scored four points in the second OT to key the Lady Rams to the win.

Greene Central's Cindi Hicks sent the game into overtime on a bucket with five seconds left. A-G appeared to have won the game in the second OT, but Melody Bowen hit a jumper at the buzzer, forcing a second overtime.

Jones, who scored 10 points, hit for four in the OT and Bowen added two as GC outscored A-G, 6-3, to win.

Bald Eagle Release Planned at Mattamuskeet — Tar Heels may once again thrill to the sight of a bald eagle hunting fish along the coast. A special project sponsored by several state and federal agencies and private conservation organizations plans to introduce bald eagles to the Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County this summer.

"We plan to introduce bald eagles to the refuge through a hacking program," said Stuart Cricher, head of the Habitat Conservation Section of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "Hacking is a means of introducing young raptors to the wild without their growing dependent upon man. The young birds are kept in cages and are monitored and fed by workers and volunteers, but the birds never see who feeds them. This keeps the eagles from learning to associate food with man."

Agencies and organizations involved in the program include the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Tennessee Valley Authority, N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, N.C. State University and East Carolina University. The North Carolind Wildlife Federation has also contributred a $2,000 grant to fund the project, while refuge workers from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will build the towers and provice protection for the birds. The Fish and Wildlife Service's Endangered Species Office in Asheville will provide technical guidance.

The eaglets used in the project will probably be obtained from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's captive breeding program for raptors in Patuxent, Maryland. Adult birds used in this breeding program have been rehabilitated from injuries — many have been shot — but have handicaps that would make it impossible for them to survive in the wild. Young birds obtained from this program are used in hacking programs nationwide. Eventually, biologists hope to establish a breeding population of bald eagles on the North Carolina coast.

"We plan to begin this program by releasing two eaglets this summer," said Dr. Don Hammer, a raptor specialist with the Tennessee Valley Authority who has been active in programs reestablishing populations of birds of prey throughout the Southeast. "The birds will be held in the cages on the hacking towers for about six weeks. Then, they are released to fend for themselves. Once free, their movements are monitored by tiny radio transmitters that are attached to the birds.

"Often, the young birds will leave the hacking area soon after release and may not return until they are mature — four or five years later. These young birds may wander over the whole country, wherever the wind takes them. However, they usually return to the area where they were fledged to nest. This is why young birds must be used to reestablish eagle populations — older birds would simply leave the area and never return."

Hammer adds that the refuge and adjacent sounds offer three things that eagles need — good habitat for fishing (the bald eagle's diet is 90 percent fish), large trees for nesting, and remoteness from man. Improvements in environmental quality in recent years have also helped make a recovery possible.

"The situation with pesticides has improved considerably in the past decade," said Hammer. "The presistent organo-chlorine pesticides like DDT which caused eggshell thinning and reproductive problems for eagles, hawks, owls and many other birds are no longer in use, and concentrations in the environment are not causing serious problems. This has allowed raptors to stage a comeback throughout their range."

One danger still exists to eagles, however. This is illegal shooting. Despite strict penalties under the Endangered Species Act, the birds are still often illegally shot.

"This shooting is often just malicious vandalism," said Hammer. "Bald eagles do not harm other birds, wildlife, livestock, and certainly pose no threat to humans. We urge anyone who knows of a raptor being killed illegally to report the crime to wildlife officials."

Tar Heels shouldn't expect to see bald eagles on the coast overnight — a long-term program will be needed to establish a population. The birds mature at a relatively late age, have low reproductive rates, and a natural mortatlity rate of about 50 percent before reaching maturity.

"It will probably take five to ten years to introduce enough birds to establish a nesting population of bald eagles around Lake Mattamuskeet," said Hammer. "If this first year goes well, we may expand the program by building additional hacking towers and releasing more birds in the future."

Bald eagles were once common on the North Carolina coast, but declined in the 1950's and 1960's as the use of pesticides and the destruction of habitat became common. In recent years, a handful of eagles have been spotted in the state. Several birds have nested in coastal areas, although no young have been hatched in the past decade.

ROBERSONVILLE — Greg Everett and Ricky Highsmith combined for 21 points to help key Roanoke past Roanoke Rapids, 31-25, Friday night in a slowed-down Northeastern Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Roanoke whipped Roanoke Rapids, 61-33.

Roanoke Rapids used a slowed-down game plan to stay close to Roanoke, but it was an 11-5 second-quarter surge that carried the Redskins to their ninth win in 11 outings.

Roanoke is 7-1 in the league — tops in the conference. Roanoke Rapids is now 3-4 and 3-6.

The first quarter ended tied, 4-4, and the second quarter was even slower as the two teams scored just two points each for a 6-6 tie at the half. Roanoke, however, put together an 11-5 third period to go up, 17-11.

Both teams scored 14 points in the final quarter as the Redskins held on for the win.

Everett led Roanoke with 11 points and Highsmith chipped in 10. Keith Sledge of Roanoke Rapids led all scorers with 15 points.

In the girls' game, Roanoke rolled to an 18-5 lead after the first period. A 14-10 second-quarter spurt by Roanoke Rapids closed the gap to 28-24 at half, but the Lady-Redskins scored 33 points — to 14 for Roanoke Rapids — to coast home with the win.

Roanoke outscored the Lady Yellow Jackets, 12-8, in the third period and put together a 21-6 fourth quarter to win by 28.

Shelia Howell led Roanoke with 18 points. Cheryl Randolph added 12 points for Roanoke, now 8-3 overall and 7-1 in the league.

Laura Patton led Roanoke Rapids with 12 points. The Lady Yellow Jackets are now 0-9 and 0-7.

Wilmington Spoils GCA Homecoming By 52-41

The Knights, already without one starter, lost two more players to injury and ended up falling to Wilmington Christian, 52-41, Friday night in a high school basketball game.

GCA, which has now lost two straight and four of its last five to drop to 4-6 overall, came into the game without starting guard Chris Harris, who injured a wrist Tuesday against Wake Christian.

Then, in the junior varsity game, No. 3 forward Daren O'Brien hurt his ankle. There was still more to come, though. Starting forward Jerry Butts injured his knee early in the varsity game and did not return.

"We played the second team plus one or two regulars. They're not really that good, but they're not that bad that you're going to get away with that," Coach Dale Thatcher said.

The Knights inched out to a 10-8 lead in the first quarter. Wilmington wasted no time in erasing the lead, outscoring GCA, 15-7, in the second quarter for a 23-17 halftime lead.

Wilmington upped its lead to 31-19 after three quarters and then coasted home the winner in the final period.

Kenny Inman led Wilmington with 13 points. Bishop Creech and Tim Reagan added 10 points each for the visitors.

In the girls' game, a fourth-quarter rally fell short for the Lady Knights as the dropped to 4-4 this season.

Wilmington led, 4-3, after the first quarter and upped its lead to 9-6 at the end of a slow, low-scoring half.

Jets Down Raiders, Advance To Title Game...

phone call, saying, "I don't know what you're talking about and I have no further comment on this."

The Jets, 8-3 and seeded sixth among AFC teams, will have to win on the road a third consecutive time in the playoffs to reach the Super Bowl. They beat Cincinnati 44-17 in the first round of the playoffs last Sunday and will be on the road again next weekend because San Diego and Miami are both seeded higher than they are.

Walker finished the day with seven receptions for 169 yards. Todd completed 15 of his 24 throws for 277 yards.

"I went straight out and just outran them," said Walker of his big play. "Our defense is the main reason that we are here."

One member of that defense who played a key role was linebacker Lance Mehl, who had two crucial interceptions in the final minutes.

"This is one game that I'll remember," said Mehl. "They (the interceptions) were simple plays. There was nothing spectacular. I was just in the right place."

The setback ended the season on a disheartening note for the Raiders, who were the AFC's top-seeded playoff team.

"We knew we were up against one of the better teams in the league and one of the best teams we've faced this year, if not the best team," said Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores. "We knew we had to play our best football and not have any turnovers. We just didn't get it done."

The Jets drove 67 yards on six plays for the winning touchdown following a Los Angeles punt. Walker got open deep down the middle for his key reception, with Dierking scoring on the next play.

New York led 10-0 at halftime, but seemed on the ropes when the Raiders scored a pair of third-period touchdowns to take their first lead. Los Angeles threatened to extend its advantage early in the fourth quarter, but New York defensive end Joe Klecko recovered a fumble by the Raiders' Marcus Allen at the the Jets' 14.

The Jets then moved into Los Angeles territory, but Burgess Owens stopped the threat with an interception in the Raiders' end zone.

The Jets had a chance to lock up the victory when Mehl intercepted a Jim Plunkett pass and returned it 8 yards to the Los Angeles 27-yard line with 2:49 left. But 23 seconds later, the Raiders had the ball back when Ted Hendricks recovered a fumble by Freeman McNeil and returned it 8 yards to the Los Angeles 33.

The Raiders moved to the New York 42-yard line, but Mehl picked off another Plunkett pass with 1:37 to go to wrap up the victory.

The Jets took a 7-0 lead on a 20-yard scoring pass from Todd to Walker with 3:52 remaining in the first period to climax an 80-yard, 10-play drive.

The Jets made it 10-0 with 2:55 left before halftime on a 30-yard field goal by Pat Leahy. The three-pointer was set up by a 37-yard Todd-to-Walker pass.

The Riders drove 77 yards with the second half kickoff to make it 10-7. Allen got the touchdown on a 4-yard run. Los Angeles took its 14-10 lead on a 57-yard pass from Plunkett to Malcolm Barnwell with 1:14 left in the period.

The game, played under ideal weather conditions, was attended by a crowd of 90,037. There were 90,688 tickets issued. The contest was blacked out on local television because the L.A. Coliseum's listed capacity for Raider games of about 73,000 was not reached by Thursday.

The Jets' McNeil, the NFL's leading rusher, picked up 105 yards on 23 carries. The Raiders' Allen, the NFL's Offensive Rookie of the Year, was held to only 36 yards on 15 carries to lead the Los Angeles ground game. He also caught six passes for 37 yards.

Plunkett completed 21 of 33 passes for 266 yards. He was sacked twice and intercepted three times. Todd was sacked on four occasions and was intercepted twice.

The Raiders moved into New York territory four times in the first half but came up empty on each occasion.

Less than five minutes into the game, Hendricks recovered a loose ball created by a poor Todd-to-McNeil exchange on an attempted handoff at the New York 34-yard line. But a couple of minutes later, Chris Bahr hit the right upright on a 34-yard field goal attempt.

Los Angeles got to the New York 27 early in the second quarter but Bobby Jackson intercepted a pass by Plunkett and returned it 10 yards to the New York 22-yard line.

The Jets then moved to the Los Angeles 29, but Leahy missed badly on a 47-yard field goal attempt.

With 15 seconds to go, the Raiders out of timeouts and the ball at the New York 34, Plunkett hit Branch at the Jets' 18. It seemed Branch would be able to get out of bounds, stopping the clock for a field goal attempt, but Kirk Springs belted the Los Angeles receiver and the ball popped into the air. New York's Jerry Holmes grabbed it near the sideline to end the threat.

Spiders (7-7) Down ECU...

Flye hit an early jumper to put Richmond into the initial lead but Wright hit from the corner to tie it up. It was the only tie of the game.

Richmond then hit three straight backets, two of them by Bethea and he added two free throws for a 10-2 lead before the Pirates hit again on a jumper by Brown.

The Pirates cut it back to two at 12-10, then again at 18-16, each time having the chance to tie it up, but they failed, and Richmond pulled away again as Pehl hit twice from underneath and Greg Beckwith hit on a jumper for a 24-16 lead.

Late in the half, the lead reached 36-27 — a nine point spread — before baskets by Edwards and Wright cut it back to 36-31 at intermission.

With 10:00 left, Kelvin Johnson hit off a fast break to give the Spiders their biggest lead, 53-39.

Over the next few minutes, however, Edwards sparked a rally that saw ECU outscore Richmond, 14-4. That cut the lead back to 57-53 with 5:08 remaining.

Again, they had a chance to cut it to two, but turned it over.

Bethea scored from underneath and Dooley made a free throw when Bruce Peartree was handed a technical for backboard vibration. Johnson added two more free throws before Pehl hit from underneath. Beatha added four more free throws for a 68-53 lead with 42 seconds left, with the Pirates getting the final three points of the game.

Pehl and Bethea led the Spider scoring with 14 points each while Dooley added 11. East Carolina was led by Edwards' 18, with Wright hitting 13 and Robinson, 11.

East Carolina returns to action on Monday, hosting Baptist in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges Coliseum. It is the first of three home games during the week. The Pirates entertain South Carolina on Wednesday and Campbell on Saturday.

Aminoil Sells Resource Land

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Aminoil USA Inc., a subsidiary of Winston-Salem-based R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc., Friday sold its 50 percent interest in about 60,000 acres of geothermal resource properties in Northern California.

Aminoil sold the acreage to Geothermal Resources International, which also holds the other 50 percent interest.

J.B. Coffman, president and chief operating officer of the Houston-based Aminoil, said Aminoil received about $26 million plus a two percent overriding royalty on the geothermal properties.

The properties in Lake, Sonoma and Mendocina counties included both exploratory acreage and land on which at least six wells capable of commercial production have been drilled.

OPEC Seeking Way To Avert Oil Price War

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The chairman of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries met with oil ministers from the Persian Gulf and Indonesia Saturday in search of a formula to avert a price war within the cartel.

The Manama meeting was reported by the Gulf News Agency, which said the Arab side was represented by the oil minister of Iraq and a number of ministers from the six-nation, Saudi-led Gulf Cooperation Council.

It did not say whether Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani attended the meeting, the first in what a Bahrain government spokesman called a series of open-ended "bilateral, trilateral, and multilateral OPEC consultations."

Yamani, whose country appears headed toward a collision with Iran that may split OPEC down the middle, told reporters he expected the informal consultations to continue for a few days but declined to elaborate.

Among those at the meetings were Iraqi Oil Minister Qasim Taki, Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto and Yehia Diko of Nigeria, the current chairman of OPEC.

The United Arab Emirates news agency, which distributed the first public statement about their arrival, quoted official sources as saying Libyan Oil Minister Kamal Hassan al-Maksoud was expected to arrive Sunday to join the discussions in Manama'a Regency Hotel.

Members of the Gulf Cooperation Council — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain and Oman — began meeting here Saturday for what was to have been a formal two-day session. The meeting adjourned abruptly, however, with no announcement as to what was achieved.

At stake in the negotiations are the future of Gulf price structures and possibly OPEC's very existence, with conservative Saudi Arabia and revolutionary Iran locked in a power struggle within the cartel.

Iran announced earlier this week that it has increased its daily production to 3.2 million barrels daily, 2 million barrels per day above its previous OPEC allotment. The move was described by the official Saudi press agency as a "defiance of OPEC."

A Kuwaiti newspaper with close links to Saudi Arabia, the daily Al-Seyassah, published a frontpage report that price and production cuts were being considered at the Manama meetings to "deter" dissident oil producers within and outside OPEC.

It was said, however, that there was a fear any price cut could result in an uncontrolled chain reaction.

Businesses Use Coding To Combat Theft

By FRANK COOK

DALLAS (UPI) — Datotek Inc. operates in a cloak-and-dagger environment of secret codes and sensitive messages, its customers largely governments but increasingly multinational mega-companies trying to keep information away from competitors.

Datotek manufactures and sells coding devices that allow secret information to pass from diplomat to government — or businessman to home office — via unsecured telephone lines or easily interceptible satellite signals.

The company's latest entry in the clandestine information field is a portable case that passes for a stylish briefcase, but actually contains a small encoder with a typewriter keyboard, a miniature printer and telephone cups.

The $4,000, battery-operated case allows its owner to type up to 25,000 characters, put them into a computer-generated random code, connect the machine to a telephone and transmit the scrambled message to a receiving unit connected to another phone anywhere in the world.

Although the signal can be intercepted and fed into any similar Datotek machine, unless the thief has the right 45-letter "password" the message cannot be translated.

The odds of the interceptor figuring out the password is one versus the number 10 followed by 56 zeros.

The 15-year-old, $10 million company does 85 percent of its business with governments friendly to the United States, but, according to spokesman John Gindling, the other 15 percent is from private industry and that share is growing.

"The reason governments need to protect information is pretty obvious, but the reason companies need to is much less so," Gindling said. "Until fairly recently, there hasn't been the risk there is today, and the stakes haven't been as high.

"There's always been industrial espionage, but it's never been so easy to steal secrets before."

What makes it easier than ever to steal secrets is that so much information is transmitted by phone lines, microwave and satellite signal.

For competing industries intent on stealing an idea, both the technology and the technicians are readily available to do it — and at a price that is miniscule compared to the millions of dollars that can be made by pre-empting another corporation's plans.

Gindling said to the best of his knowledge no company officially sanctions the theft of another corporation's communiques. He said, however, that some Datotek customers had contacted it specifically because they had reason to believe uncoded information fell into a competitor's hands.

Gindling firmly believes there is corporate theft going on globally, sometimes encouraged and even financed by governments.

"Worldwide competition has become so intense that economic stability of entire countries could be based on (a home company's) leadership in a specific field," he said. "The stakes are very high — for both financial success and political stability in some parts of the world."

A few years ago some financial researchers predicted corporate coding would mushroom into a hundred-million dollar business, and although those predictions have proved way too extravagant, Gindling says the future remains good.

He believes coding and scrambling devices may someday be as fundamental to corporations as the sprinkler systems and burglar alarms they use to protect their buildings.

Braniff Announces Plan Aimed At Avoiding Liquidation

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Braniff International said Saturday that it has reached agreements with its major creditors and local airport officials to award Pacific Southwest Airlines half of its terminal gates as part of the airlines' proposed joint venture.

The agreements were announced at a bankruptcy court hearing where Braniff attempted to win support for its plans to avoid liquidation.

The creditors' agreement was reached after late-night meetings Friday between creditors and officials of Braniff and PSA.

A tentative agreement was also reached allowing cash payments for back pay owed to former Braniff employees.

"We have resolved the issues that were remaining among the unsecured creditors," Braniff attorney Michael Crames told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers. "It is a most significant step forward."

Representatives of Braniff's secured creditors and lawyers for the airline's unions added their assent to the agreement.

Braniff chairman Howard Putnam said the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport board had agreed to drop all litigation against the airline, enabling PSA to "carve out their piece of the facilities" at the airport.

Quality Of Lives Said Enhanced By est

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"You and I possess within ourselves at every moment of our lives, under all circumstances, the power to transform the quality of our lives," Werner Erhard, founder of the Erhard Seminar Training (est), has said.

This statement is the premise of est — est is a trademark written in the lower case — training, a program that has influenced the lives of several Greenville-area residents who have participated in one or more of the monthly 60-hour sessions in Washington, D.C., during the past year.

Participants — including the author of this article — say the program has shifted personal perceptions of their lives and vocations. The result, they say, is that those who have participated in the est program are now able to contribute more to themselves and to others.

Interest in est locally was aroused a little over a year ago when Greenville resident Dee Morris pulled a previously unnoticed book belonging to her husband, Abbott, from the bookshelf.

It was the biography of Werner Erhard by W.W. Bartley III.

"I got the effect of the (est) training while I was reading that book," Mrs. Morris said. "It was what I'd spent a lifetime looking for — a way to really transform my life, to make it work. I called the est center in Washington, D.C., and signed up for the January course. Then I shared the book with my friend, Linda Warner, and after reading it, she agreed to join me in doing the training. I'd have gone by myself, but it was nice that Linda and I could share the experience."

The est training is designed to offer participants experiences that allow them to see how they can recreate their lives. Sitting in hard chairs in a hotel ballroom, having agreed not to speak directly to each other and taking only infrequent bathroom and meal breaks, trainees say they experience first-hand how est can provide a shift in perception — practicing integrity, taking responsibility, learning one's self. Tell the truth. Say what you'll do and do what you say. Your body, your mind, your circumstances: many participants say all take on new meaning.

'Not About Change'

Changing oneself is not the goal of the training, yet each of the local participants interviewed said positive change did occur. But most of them find it difficult to explain why 60 hours in a room have transformed their lives.

"Trying to tell what the est training is about is really hard," East Carolina University student Debbie Cannon said. "Explaining how it works is impossible. Sometimes I try to explain it to my friends and sometimes I just give up. It's an experience like eating a certain flavor of ice cream is an experience. It's just impossible to put it into words."

Est was created by Erhard in 1971 and was first offered only in San Francisco. Gradually other cities have been added until it's now offered in 24 American cities, plus London, Bombay, Tel Aviv, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. Now some 800,000 persons nationwide have taken the training and thousands are enrolled in 10 different 10-session Education for Living graduate seminars all over the world. Six-day and seven-day residential courses are also offered May through October at a location in New York state and one in California. Dee Morris is the only person from here who has, so far, participated in the six-day program.

A Synthesis

"It's not that Werner Erhard discovered any new truth," Jennifer Baughan, a Greenville graduate student-housewife and mother, said. "It's that he synthesized from a great already-existing body of knowledge about how to experience one's own integrity and relatedness to one's fellow man. Werner drew from his knowledge of many disciplines and put it to work consistently in his own life.

"He transformed himself through the renewing of himself and found within himself abilities he'd never before known existed. He lost weight, gave up sugar and cigarettes, and straightened out personal relationships that had been badly strained for years. Then, drawing on his work experience as a trainer of salespeople and his willingness to share it with other people, within a month after he'd found it for himself, he began the est training in the living room of his home."

"It's a lot more," Greenville Assistant City Attorney Mac MacCarley said, "but, if nothing else, the est training is the greatest time management course I could ever have taken. I know now how to set my priorities and I don't agree to do anything that I know I cannot do, yet I find I have time for a lot more than I ever did before."

"I'm making better grades and participating more in sports," 10-year-old Sara Morris, the youngest Greenville resident to go through the training, said. Kerri Warner, a Greenville student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said: "I get a lot more done in much less time than I ever have before. And I do it without feeling half the pressure I used to."

"Since taking the training last May, I have changed careers (from farming to selling) and have none of the stress that might have gone with it," Ruel Tyer said. "Also, I've been able to spend meaningful time with relatives and friends and really feel I made some difference. And I looked at for the first time and got rid of a lot of stress that had started for me in Vietnam 13 years ago."

Dr. Connie Tindel, assistant professor in the adult education program of the East Carolina University School of Education said that, since her training, she has experienced greater success in counseling with the graduate students with whom she works. "I'm able to assist them in looking at their own responsibility in their own educations and personal lives," she said. "And this way, I feel I really contribute to them in a lasting way."

World For Everyone

"A World that Works for Everyone" is an ideal held in est circles. "The world does work and will work for everyone, not so much through institutions and governments and public policy and plan, as through communication and action based on individual intention and integrity," Jennifer Baughan said.

She and her husband, Dr. David Baughan, and Grayson Morris, a 15-year-old Greenville resident and est graduate who's now a student at the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics in Durham, are among more than 2 million persons who've dedicated themselves to the end of starvation on the planet by the year 1997. Ms. Morris started the Hunger Project effort, an est-inspired activity, here last spring.

David Baughan is a family physician associated with the East Carolina University School of Medicine. He and another ECU Medical School faculty member, Dr. Linda Nieman, have written memos to their colleagues about their experiences after undergoing est training. Dr. Nieman calls est "a creative professional experience."

Some Greenville area residents who've participated in the training hold est guest seminars here almost every month, with volunteers from the Washington-Baltimore area leading the sessions. These three-hour sessions, usually held on Sunday afternoons, give guests a chance to hear in some detail about the training and see if it's something they'd like to do.

A guest seminar will be held today from 2 to 5 p.m. at Hooker Memorial Christian Church, 1111 Greenville Blvd.

Full-Time Father Couldn't Be Happier

By PATRICIA WALSH

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — When Don Stevenson goes shopping, women stop to ogle the 3-month-old infant he's pushing in the cart and remark, "What a cute baby. Your day off?"

"Nope."

Stevenson's new status interests women more than men, he says.

"When it's brought up at a cocktail party or whatever, most men ignore the subject," he says. "A 100 percent of the women said it's about time."

Stevenson took over as a fulltime father at first for a month, then it stretched to three and now he's considering more.

"We're both 30 and we've been married 9½ years," Stevenson said. "We finally decided it was time to start a family. Once we found out we were pregnant, the idea came to me to stay home."

Before the baby was born, Stevenson did as much freelance photography as he could to augment his salary as fulltime picture editor at the Mesa Tribune. Every extra month's pay earned in his spare time enabled him to spend one more month at home while his wife worked as a registered nurse.

His wife never doubted he would follow through.

"The whole time during the pregnancy, he reinforced the idea he would stay home to see what it was like," she said.

The next issue was "paternity leave."

"There is no formal policy," Stevenson said. "When I approached my boss, he was very agreeable to the idea, but he wasn't sure if there was any such thing as paternity leave. We agreed I could take up to six months."

What helped was the fact Stevenson's boss himself once stayed home with a son.

After the Sept. 19 birth, Mrs. Stevenson stayed home six weeks. Then Stevenson took over the house. Luckily he already knew the basics of housekeeping.

"I had a mother who raised six boys on a farm, and we learned to do everything," he said. "We not only baled hay and harvested corn; she taught all six boys to cook, do laundry, clean house."

But his wife has found it hard not to criticize.

"I'll come home and I'll think, 'Why didn't you dust, why didn't you sweep' because I feel my role as wife and mother is threatened. When he's done I want to find something wrong."

But Mrs. Stevenson reminds herself of her friends' envy.

"They say I should be thankful Don's doing what he's doing," she said. "A lot of times I assume every man would do this — until I get into a discussion with another woman."

Mrs. Stevenson said her husband has been angered by one coworker who has repeatedly asked, "Are you still on vacation?"

"I told him a mother would never say that," she said.

Mothering in Stevenson's case has meant rewinding the clock to when he was 14 and diapering his youngest brother.

"It's been 16 years since I've done it," Stevenson noted. "I still nick my finger with the pin or get sprayed if I don't watch out."

One of the hardest things was getting up for feedings every two hours.

"Every time I heard him cry in the middle of the night, I just moaned. Now I'm used to it."

He also found his habitual desire for organization did not work with a baby.

"The first week I stayed home, I had everything planned out," he said. "Not one of those things ever happened. Now I meet his needs first, then I meet my needs."

An unexpected result of the growing relationship between father and son has been Mrs. Stevenson's reaction.

"The only real conflict is there is a little jealousy," Stevenson said. "That surprised both of us. She'd come home from work and I'd tell her what Ryan did. I think she's a little jealous."

His wife agreed and said they have discussed her feelings.

"I can see where Ryan tends to respond a little bit more to Don," she said. "I think the more this goes on, the more I'd feel left out."

When both parents go back to work, a babysitter will take over.

But Stevenson is not looking forward to that.

"I think staying with Ryan has made me more of a man by making me more of a father," he said. "My priorities have changed.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday Afternoon

MRS. RANDALL CHARLES TOMSIC

SWANSBORO — Teresa Lea Shook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin George Shook, and Randall Charles Tomsic, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hudson of Jacksonville, were married Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

The double ring ceremony was performed in St. Mildred's Catholic Church by Father Keeney.

Laura LeBlanc was organist and Lynn Adams, grandfather of the bridegroom, sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Debbie Blackwell of Durham was honor of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids included Linda Brophy of Fayetteville, Tami Tomsic of Jacksonville, sister of the bridegroom, Jane Hipps of Shelby and Allison Carmichal of Virginia Beach, Va.

The flower girl was Kristin Blackwell of Durham, niece of the bride. Dustin Schultcee of Chicago, Ill., cousin of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Ushers included Chip Moore of Greenville, Mitch Barnes of Winston-Salem, Bob Blackwell of Durham, brother-in-law of the bride, Ron Adams of Elliott, Iowa, uncle of the bridegroom, and John Olson of Hubert.

The bride wore a gown of white chantilly lace with a bodice of satin. The Victorian neckline was accented with silk Venise lace and a flounce of Wedgewood lace. The long full satin sleeves ended in a satin cuff. The full skirt of chantilly lace had matching lace trim. Her train was semi-cathedral in length. Her veil of bridal illusion was attached to a white two-tier flower ring of silk flowers accented with seed pearls. She carried three white silk orchids and greenery in a cascading bouquet.

The attendants wore gowns of floor length burgundy taffeta styled with pouf sleeves, brushed hemline, full skirt and schiffli lace trimmed the Victorian neckline. They each carried a silk orchid with greenery. The flower girl wore a floor length gown of burgundy taffeta with an overlay of wedgewood lace. She carried a basket of white silk flowers.

A reception was held at the Jacksonville Country Club in Jacksonville. A rehearsal dinner was held at the country club.

After a Bahama cruise the couple will be living in Greenville.

The bride and bridegroom attended East Carolina University. She will work at Caswell Center in Kinston as an occupational therapist. He works for Wachovia Bank in Greenville.

Pitt Teachers To See Center

Teachers working with emotionally, mentally or physically handicapped children have been invited to take part in the tour.

"The tour, plus information received, will assist the teacher in making referrals for those students that are aging out of programs in their school," said Charles Alford, vocational rehabilitation counselor for Pitt County schools.

"We anticipate more students referred to the facility in an effort to better prepare them for the world of work," he added. "Teachers observing programs in turn better prepare students still in public schools for the transition."

Alford noted that teachers will be able to see former students participating in work programs that closely resemble private industry as an example of the type of services available at the center.

For further information contact Alford at 752-6106 or at the ECVC at 758-4188.

A Look Back At Convent Life By Nun Who Left

By PATRICIA Mc CORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Fourteen years ago, Mary Gilligan stepped out of the convent where she had trained to become a nun.

The training or formation, as it is called, commenced in 1961 at the headquarters of a 1,600-member order in a Midwest state.

In 1961 Mary Gilligan had stars in her eyes and visions of wings on her back in the hereafter — a reward for sacrificing her life.

In 1968 she had wings on her feet, questions in her heart, and different ideas in her head. She also had a bachelor's degree the order paid for.

She quit the convent.

She had taken temporary vows of poverty, chastity and obedience between 1961 and 1968 as she moved through various exercises forming her into a nun.

Much of the training, the former nun recalled the other day, was not unlike the strict kind of indoctrination West Pointers must go through. It was not easy but there was camaraderie and lots of laughter.

She allowed that customs of the oldtime formation — vastly changed today — now seem extremely harsh. Kissing the floor after publicly confessing faults, for example. Having one's mail censored. No visits home.

It was a lifestyle based on rules that had well served in the formation of nuns in America for a century or more.

When she left, Miss Gilligan, who had taught in Chicago and St. Louis, was six months from taking permanent vows that would mark her a fully-professed nun.

Today the former sister is Mary Gilligan Wong of Encinitas, Calif. She is edging toward 40 and is somewhat representative of about 40,000 former nuns, many young and in the formation stage, who left women's religious orders in the United States during the 1960s and '70s.

This happened, many authorities say, because Pope John XXIII during Vatican II recommended that religious orders get back to the original spirit of their founders and, at the same time, update their customs, rules and dress.

Some experts say the orders did not change fast enough to halt the exodus. Others feel change itself was responsible for some oldtime nuns leaving. Accustomed to a life dictated by rules, they could not deal with new freedoms.

Mrs. Wong, now a wife, mother of two sons and a clinical psychologist with a Ph.D., has written about past convent events and the transition to a new lifestyle.

Her memoir, "The Nun" (Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, $16.95) comes out this month. It is a look at past happenings and bears no resemblance to convent life today, Mrs. Wong said.

She said she is not in touch with the current lifestyle of nuns — except to know that for the most part they are liberated from customs and practices that demeaned them and suppressed their individualism.

"They are feisty and very assertive," she said. "And doing wonderful things. I am very proud of them."

About the book, she said, "This is not an expose, not a criticism, not an indictment. It is a record of something that happened. It is the past. It cannot be repeated."

She talked about oldtime nun life much the way a soldier might recall his basic training decades later.

"We had clothes and shelter and a banquet three times a day," she said. "We didn't worry about any of those things.

"Damn. I do miss that.

"We had china, crystal, silver and linen. There were laundresses and cooks. It was a queenlike life, actually.

"We would come out of church and parishoners would bow. We had chauffeurs. The men of the parish would drive us."

Mrs. Wong says she misses the singing and praying together, too. The same for the solitude.

The book, she prays, will not hurt any of the 130,000 Roman Catholic nuns who have remained with their orders or any who have since joined.

"The nuns have changed so much, so fast. The orders spent much time and money to make the change into a new-time nun easier. What other institutions could change so fast and so remarkably?

"Today's nuns are miles ahead of the Catholics in the street when it comes to understanding what Vatican II was all about."

What went wrong with Mary Gilligan's religious commitment and that of other future nuns of her era? One explanation was given by a former mother general of the order not identified in the book. The mother general, now in the motherhouse infirmary, told Mrs. Wong:

"I think your group and the other groups who entered in the early '60s suffered the most from all the turmoil of the time, all the confusion.

"We just didn't know what to do with you. We knew we wanted you to be as happy in the community as we had always been, but we didn't really understand your generation, didn't really understand how to deal with you..."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Women who work outside the home spend an average of two to three percent of their take-home pay on cosmetics, and it is the 25-to-35 year old woman who buys the most.

At Wit's End

Angie Michel and Rogers Warner have been nominated to represent the Rose High Haskett Chapter of the National Honor Society in a nationwide competition for 250 scholarships of $1,000 each.

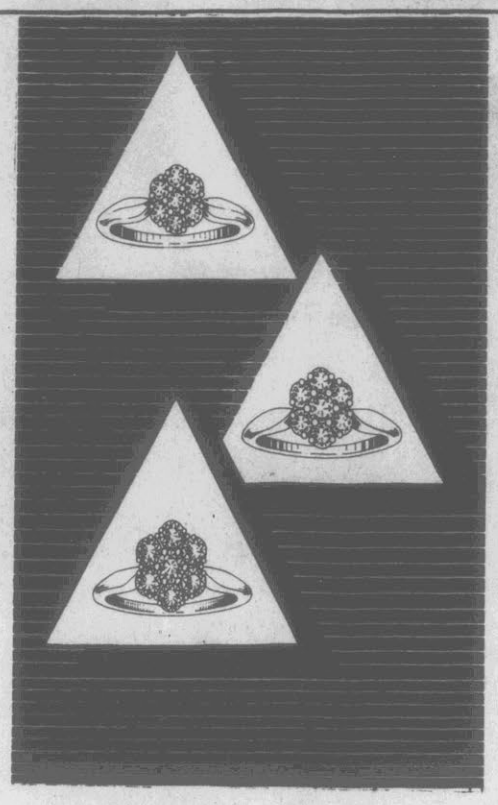

In its 34th year, the National Honor Society Scholarship Awards Program is conducted by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

The two seniors were chosed by members of the chapter on the bases of the four NHS principles of leadership, scholarship, character and service. Angie and Rogers must each submit scholarship selection questionnaires which will help the scholarship board to assess their participation and service in clubs and athletics, achievements in the arts and sciences, employment experience and academic record. The board will also consider size and type of school when selecting winners.

"Carnival," to be performed April 15-17, has been selected as this year's spring musical. Auditions for roles will be made Jan. 31-Feb. 6 before the Drama Club Executive Board and Betty Topper. Any student is eligible to try out and will be required to read a part from the script and to sing and dance.

For the third year, Elaine Tschetter's food service classes were awarded $50 by the N.C. Pork Producers Association. The association hopes to aid classes statewide in their study of pork cookery and to encourage classes to establish projects and study units on the subject.

Baby Sitter Tunes In, Drops Out

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently had an experience I hope you will share with your readers. Our daughter (14) was baby-sitting two children (5 and 7) on a military base about two blocks from where we live. We felt she was reasonably safe, and, of course, she had access to a telephone if she wanted to contact us.

She was supposed to have been through baby-sitting around midnight, so when she wasn't home at 12:30 we called her. No answer. We called again and again and nobody answered, so my wife and I became alarmed and went to the home where she was baby-sitting.

We kept ringing the doorbell. No response. By this time we were frantic, so we called the police. Two officers were sent to the house, and they started pounding on the doors and windows until finally our daughter came to the door, wondering what all the commotion was about!

We were notified that out daughter was all right — the reason she didn't hear the telephone or doorbell was because she had been listening to music with headphones on, which completely shut her off from everything around her, including, of course, the two children for whom she was responsible!

Abby, I sincerely hope that you will print this letter warning your readers that headphones should never be worn when a person is alone in the house, and certainly never by anyone who is responsible for the safety and welfare of others.

BEN C.

DEAR BEN: Thank you for a very valuable message.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Would you please tell me if it's all right to enclose money in a sympathy card?

I know people who have done it. I think it's OK myself, but I don't want the people I send money to to think that I think they need it. I'd just rather send money than flowers — especially when I know there are going to be more than enough flowers.

Answer in the paper if you think it's important enough.

RATHER SEND CASH

DEAR RATHER: If you think the family could use the money instead of flowers, by all means send money. It will be deeply appreciated — by everyone except the florist.

MRS. ROGER DAN BROWN JR.

Brown-Sprinkle Vows Said

KINSTON — Cheryl Lynn Sprinkle and Roger Dan Brown Jr. were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church here. The ceremony was conducted the Rev. Huw Christopher.

A program of wedding music was presented by Buford Goodman, organist, and Hope Shackleford, soloist.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Sprinkle of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Dan Brown Sr. of Kinston.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory chiffon over organza. The sheer Victorian neckline was bordered with lace and seed pearls. Venise lace enhanced the fitted bodice and cuffs of the full chiffon Victorian sleeves. The back of the gown was open as a cameo effect and lined with satin buttons. The flowing skirt was of double chiffon which extended into a semi-cathedral train. She wore an ivory cathedral length mantilla of imported silk illusion trimmed with pencil edging and scattered appliques of Venise lace draped over a Camelot cap accented in the back with ivory silk roses. She carried a silk bouquet of ivory miniature carnations, gardenias and pink sweetheart roses.

Sharon Vandiford of Greenville was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Linda Brown of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, Debra Wall of Greenville and Debbie Brown of Jacksonville.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included David Drach of Greenville, David Sawyer of Washington and Thumper Swann of Kinston.

The maid of honor wore a formal gown of daphne rose taffeta designed with an open neckline, miniature rolled shoulder straps and fitted bodice overlaid with point d'esprit and Brussels lace. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a taffeta jacket fashioned with a ruffled collar, three-quarter length puff sleeves. The gown had a gathered skirt. She carried a silk bouquet of burgundy and dasphne rose colored flowers with burgundy streamers.

The attendants' gowns were styled identical to that of the honor attendant in constrasting shades of burgundy. Their identical bouquets were tied with daphne rose streamers.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip.

The bride graduated from Rose High School and Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy. She is employed by Servomation. The bridegroom graduated from Kinston High School and attends East Carolina University. He is assistant manager at the Plaza Theater.

Women To Hear Speaker

"From Round to Flat" by Theresa Holley of Body Shoppe will be a special feature. Music will be presented by Millie Tripp. The meeting will be held at the Greenville Country Club from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

A free nursery will be provided by reservations at the Arlington Baptist Church. For reservations for luncheon and nursery call Milly Smith at 758-8171 or Faye Barber at 756-3610.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

As I drove into Mother's driveway I saw it atop a heap of trash. The high chair. As shiny as the day it came from the store.

Well, it was about time. I mean, how long can you hang onto a baby chair and wait for a 42-year-old daughter to make medical history? Besides, all we ever did with it now was get our hips stuck!

(I remember when she got it. The baby was just old enough to sit alone. To get her at table height took a four-man precision drill team. Mother brought in the kitchen chair, Granddad got three World Book Encyclopedias and five Life magazines, my husband got the pillow from the spare bed and I contributed a piece of plastic 4 by 6 feet. Then one day just before Christmas, Grandma flashed the new high chair. "We'll keep it here at Grandma's," she said, flashing her Jeane Dixon smile. "You never know when it will come in handy.")

It makes good sense to get rid of it. Parked right in the middle of Mother's Mediterranean, it looks as out of place as a dentist's chair. Sentiment never won you a center spread in Better Homes and Gardens.

(She was right. It was one refill after another. No sooner did one outgrow the chair than there was another. Before King Kong . . . that's what we called the first boy . . . there used to be a restraining belt and a feeding tray, and paint. Oh well.)

It's the thing to do. It will certainly give Grandma a lot more room in her kitchen now that the chair is gone. Besides, you shouldn't hang onto things that someone else can use. Right?

(If that chair could only talk. How many birthday smiles have been illuminated by candles from that seat? Including the lousy cake I broiled. And Mother said why didn't you make three layers and I cried and said I did. And by that time the kid had fed half of it to the dog.)

It's just a chair. A lousy piece of furniture that existed before lipstick, car keys, deep voices, big feet, dates and a plaintive, "Gosh' Mom, there's nothing to do at Grandma's. Can we leave after dinner?"

It was a symbol of an era of diaper bags and potty seats and strained liver and blankets that shed all over Grandma's sofa. It was a Sunday at Grandma's where youth held forth and no one thought it would ever end.

I ran my fingers along the rungs stripped of paint by little feet. How do you say goodbye to an era?

With a lump in your throat and tears in your eyes. How else?

Without Kids Mothers, Too Need Support

EDITOR'S NOTE — Most of the time, after a divorce, the mother gets custody of the offspring. But what about the cases where the father gets custody? How do these mothers feel, living apart from their children — and contrary to society's conventions?

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — You wouldn't think twice if you saw them at the park or the zoo on a Sunday, kissing away a scrape, tightening a scarf or wiping a runny nose. After all, that's what mothers are supposed to do.

But more than a half-million women in this country get a chance to cuddle and console their offspring only once a week, once a month or not at all. Sometimes it's by their own choice.

They are women who, by emotional or economic necessity, have given custody of their children to their husbands and, by doing so, often face society's label of "bad mothers."

"There's a double standard even in divorce," says Kathleen Cunningham of Deerfield, Fla., whose three children live with their father nearby. "Fathers who pay child support are heroes. Women who give up custody, even if it's in the best interest of the child, are labeled unfit."

"I didn't talk about it much," says Dorian Yeager who moved to New York alone four years ago. When people learned her son, Jeremy, lives in New Hampshire with his father, "they shot you that look," she says.

"I would say I have a son in school in New England. If you ship your kid off to a boarding school without anyone, no one criticizes you. But if you leave him with his father, then they criticize."

"There's no reason why a man can't take care of his own kids," says Ellen Kimball, founder of Mothers Without Custody. "It's just that society says women should do it."

Of the more than one million couples granted divorces in this country annually, two-thirds have a child under 14.

Ninety percent of the time the mother is granted custody and the father is portrayed as the "Weekend Daddy" who appears periodically to take the kids to the zoo or a movie and to lavish extravagant gifts to retain the love of his offspring.

But a "Weekend Mother," many of them feel, is often looked at askance, as a person who's abandoned her children from self-indulgence, and they take it hard, to the point of depression and nervous breakdowns.

"People thought I wanted to go out dancing every night, that I was totally selfish," recalls Rachel Budman of Denver, who left her husband and three sons in Florida nine years ago.

"Everyone thought I was crazy and probably promiscuous," says Patricia Paskowicz, mother of three. "I found it easier to agree that I had left my husband for another man than try to explain."

Ellen Kimball, who founded Mothers Without Custody in 1981 in Sudbury, Mass., had had custody of her two children until a serious medical problem forced her to ask her ex-husband for help. He agreed only on the condition that he be granted full custody and she pay child support.

She agreed, believing "I wasn't going to lose position of mother."

While her situation was and is working well, she realized that other women were not so lucky.

So she founded the group, which now numbers 700 nationwide, mostly as a support system for women who, after giving up their children, faced hostility and misunderstanding all alone.

The need to talk to someone like herself led Peg Dhont to found Mothers Apart from Their Children in London in 1979 after she split with her husband and her two children stayed with him because he was "more fit financially."

Omaha attorney David Perlman, formerly of Boston, has handled divorce and custody cases nationwide. He says that while "women often wrongly assess their husbands" in matters such as visitation, they realize that the man is better off financially to raise the kids.

"We came to the conclusion we cared about the kids," says Mary Lou Branson, who has a masters degree in marriage therapy. "I was making $11,000. He was making $50,000. We really wanted the kids to survive so they stayed with my husband. Their lives continued relatively the same."

But more than money, some women recognize the inability to cope not only with the children, but with themselves as changing individuals.

Patricia Paskowicz, whose survey of 100 women such as herself has been published as "Absentee Mothers," says, "I knew something terrible would happen if I didn't get some time to myself."

Peg Dhont, now a certified psychotherapist in Illinois, notes that some women give up custody "under duress. She wants to move away from the marriage. She's confused and near a breakdown."

Sheila Brayman wanted to move from Long Island to Maryland and decided to leave her two young children with her husband because, "Who was I to take them away from the rest of their family?"

Her husband was at first surprised when she offered him custody, she says. But then he got used to it, and has had bench warrants issued when she was late returning them. He has also won child support.

Doris Jonas Freed, the chairman of the American Bar Association's Custody Committee, advises her clients never to give up their children completely, even if they think their mental state makes them incapable of handling a child.

"The trend is away from sole custody," she says, noting that 28 states now have joint or co-parenting statutes, but that some judges are not always as compassionate as one would like.

Still, she emphasizes, "No custody order is final. If it can be shown that a change of custody is better for a child, it can be done."

Despite the strong fronts and survivor instinct, the pain is always there.

"I dread the phone calls at the same time I enjoy them," says Peg Dhont, whose children now live in Pennsylvania. "If I get too involved in their day-to-day life, it's too painful. I handle the pain better by being far away. Yet it's difficult. They tell you the things they're doing without you and you realize how separate they are from you, that you're not part of their lives."

"I cried for two days when I heard my son lost his first tooth," says Sheila Brayman. "He lost his tooth and I wasn't there."

"It occurred to me I didn't know how he looked when he went to school in the morning," says Dorian Yeager, "so I spent all the money I made in summer stock on clothes for Jeremy. I figured this way I could wake up in the morning and think" — and here the 33-year-old woman starts crying — "maybe he's wearing the rust corduroys."

MUD MOTORING

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — To be a successful motorcross racer, a motorcyclist must be able to lift a 250-pound bike out of mud, negotiate sharp turns at break-neck speeds and enjoy flying off six-foot jumps at 50 mph, according to Reggie Angel, who frequently competes in this test of a rider's ability on hilly, natural terrain.

Making Documentary Films Can Be Controversial

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Documentary filmmaking for television can be a risky business.

"We've already had a suit against us, and we haven't had a program on the air yet," says David Fanning, executive producer of "Frontline," a Public Broadcasting Service documentary series scheduled to be launched Monday night with a sure-to-be-controversial film on gambling and professional football.

Jessica Savitch, on temporary leave from NBC News, is anchor for "Frontline," which will include, in its first season, 26 hour-long productions.

"Our goal is to make challenging documentaries, based on hard, tough reporting," Fanning says, "and we have to be especially careful, because we are up against such a litigious society these days."

The TV networks routinely face lawsuits seeking millions of dollars in damages. One recent example is Gen. William Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against CBS News stemming from a documentary broadcast in January, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception."

"We are being very careful," Fanning says, "trying to work with people who know the business and understand the responsibilities of good journalism. I spend a good part of my time with lawyers, going over every script, line by line."

The premiere program in the "Frontline" series is called "An Unauthorized History of the NFL," and though Fanning says the lawsuit was filed in connection with another documentary still in production, publicity for the first show promises to reveal "a history of hushed-up scandal" in the National Football League.

"An Unauthorized History of the NFL" was not available for preview, and Fanning would not discuss the lawsuit, which he said was an attempt to hamper "Frontline" reporters in their efforts to obtain certain information.

Fanning, a South African by birth who has produced public TV's "World" documentary series since 1977, is no stranger to controversy. He co-wrote and co-produced "Death of a Princess," a docudrama broadcast as a "World" special in 1980 that enraged Saudi Arabia's royal family and irked the Mobil Corp., one of PBS' most generous supporters.

"Frontline" is an ambitious project modeled after public TV's "American Playhouse" series introduced a year ago. Like "Playhouse," "Frontline" is administered by a consortion of five PBS stations.

At least two other documentaries have been scheduled, "88 Seconds in Greensboro," from Jan. 24, on the 1979 killing of five Communist Workers party members in North Carolina, and "In the Shadow of the Capitol," from Jan. 31, on hard times in Washington, D.C. A number of others are in various stages of production.

Footnote: "American Playhouse" begins its second season Tuesday night with a live broadcast of Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth" from the Old Globe Theater in San Diego.

N.C. Arts Council Applications

RALEIGH — The N.C. Arts Council is now accepting applications for summer internships in arts administration. Deadline for applications is March 1.

Internships will be awarded to three people, each of whom will spend a total of three months at two community arts councils of different sizes and four days at the N.C. Arts Council in Raleigh.

Now in its 10th year, the intern program is designed to advance arts administration professionalism in North Carolina through instruction and work experience, and to help prepare participants for permanent employment in the field.

Qualifications for interns include a four-year college degree, strong administration and business abilities and wide knowledge and appreciation of the arts.

The ability to accept employment in September, if positions should become available, is desirable. However, people still attending graduate school are invited to apply if they have committed themselves to a career in arts administration.

Applications are available from: Summer Intern Program, N.C. Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N.C., 27611.

MUSIC AND MOVIES

A professor at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music, he leads a special orchestra accompanying silent films. For each film, a score is assembled with music matching each scene — whether it's passionate, funny, despairing, or heroic — and Hunsberger must cue the students every time the mood changes. The 1924 version of "Peter Pan," for example, lasts 100 minutes and calls for 98 separate musical cues.

The Eastman orchestra was formed in connection with Rochester's International Museum of Photography, and has performed at Wolf Trap and the Chicago International Film Festival.

Don't let anyone mislead you about what is considered exercise—aerobic-type exercise that is. Recreation is not exercise nor is laboring at home or elsewhere exercise. To be of real value to your heart and lungs, an exercise must: •Be rhythmic. •Be continuous. •Involve the entire body. •Be of adequate duration. Jumping Rope is the world's best known way of fulfilling all of these requirements.

SPEAKING OF INFLATION — Seaside, Calif., policeman Bernie Mraz eyes a phony $22 bill that a motorist used to buy $20 worth of gas for a Cadillac with stolen plates. Police say the motorist handed the bill to station attendant Charles Mariar, 22, and then drove off. Mariar got the license plate number and called police. Mariar said he hopes the station has insurance to cover the $20 loss. (AP Laserphoto by Clay Peterson)

Naughty 'Oh! Calcutta!' Is Still Around

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The show's authors include the late John Lennon, Jules Feiffer, Robert Benton, the Oscar-winning writer of "Kramer Vs. Kramer," and Sam Shepard, actor and Pulitzer-winning author of "Buried Child."

The show employs five actors and five actresses. They appear both clothed and in their birthday suits. They spoof sex, simulate it here and there, kid mate-swapping and such, sing and even commit ballet while stark naked.

The show opened off-Broadway in June 1969 amid much publicity, controversy and critical grumbling. One carper even sniffed that it "gives pornography a bad name." It ran until 1973, then was revived on Broadway in 1976.

The show is "Oh! Calcutta!"

A lot of fuss about it way back when. Mention it now and the local reaction usually is, "Is that still around?"

Yes, says beaming producer Norman Kean. It's still around, a $250,000 investment that to date, by his reckoning, has grossed $300 million from performances here, in 150 other cities and in 15 countries.

Still at the 500-seat Edison Theater he owns, it recently logged its 4,000th New York performance. It's had, he says, about 28 cast changes — approximately 100 actors and actresses doffing their duds in the cause of art — in the 13½ years since it opened.

"Oh! Calcutta!" was born in the era of anything-goes permissiveness. All that is said to be over, the revolutionaries now into corporations, suburbia and mortgages.

So what keeps the show — once thought so wicked it was raided by the vice squad in San Francisco — going in these sedate times?

"I think it's partly because of my marketing," he says, referring to his aggressive promotion campaign here and abroad, a campaign that includes a playbill printed in nine foreign languages, including Russian.

"Another big thing is word-of-mouth. When you see this show, whatever you may think of it, the next day or that evening you have a comment to make about it.

"But it's also my passion for the show. It's one of a kind, it never will happen again."

"Oh! Calcutta!" was devised by the late Kenneth Tynan, the British drama critic and writer. In a 1976 interview, four years before his death, Tynan explained his battle plan this way:

"You know, what we wanted to do then was provide a show that would bridge the gap between the Ziegfeld Follies and a raunchy exhibition in a bordello — something that was about sex, for intelligent people, with no holds barred, but without trying to shock people.

"That was the aim: To fill the gap between the raunchy and the ridiculous."

An Odd-Ball Approach

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Caryl Churchill is one of the most imaginative of British playwrights, with an odd-ball approach to intra-family relationships and to society, recalling that of Sam Shepard.

Both writers have things to say, but put them in comic or fantasy frameworks which may confuse at first encounter.

In "Cloud 9," Miss Churchill reversed sexual roles to show how the sexual revolution has only changed the problems of woman-man relationships rather than solving them. "Cloud 9" has been an off-Broadway hit for more than 18 months.

Now her "Top Girls," in a production brought over intact from London's Royal Court Theater, has opened Dec. 28 at the Public Theater of the New York Shakespeare Festival, in a new exchange program between the two theaters.

In "Top Girls," Miss Churchill starts off with a scene in which famous women of history and art ("Top Girls" might be considered a sexist title in a male playwright) gather improbably for lunch in a modern London restaurant — La Prima Donna.

The diners include a 9th century woman pope, a 13th century Japanese courtesan, a 19th century Scottish traveler and diarist, and Chaucer's Patient Griselda. The lunch is given to celebrate the appointment of Marlene as managing director of the Top Girls employment agency. The very disparate women talk to and past each other in a jumble of voices in which first one, then another can be discerned by the audience. All their stories involve sacrifices they made in the name of ambition. For most it was a mate or a child forsaken.

After this scene-setter, author Churchill abandons the historical figures and concentrates on Marlene and her women co-workers, showing what each has given up for a career — and how they adopt less admirable masculine traits in trying to compete in a man's world. None has a full-time husband or lover. Most of the scenes are stylized and very funny, until a final confrontation between Marlene and her stay-at-home sister shows just what Marlene's ambition has cost her in the way of decency and humanity.

The performances — Gwen Taylor as Marlene and six other women doubling roles — are both perfect in themselves and perfectly in tune with each other. The direction by Max Stafford-Clark, artistic director of the Royal Court, is a masterpiece of theatrical counterpoint, particularly noticeable in the surges and silences of the final scene.

"Top Girls" doesn't work 100 percent, but it provides a provocative evening in the theater. You can't ask for much more.

Actress Says Motion Pictures Illuminate The Generation Gap

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Few areas of American life illuminate the generation gap as starkly as motion pictures and the people who make them — Phoebe Cates, for instance.

Phoebe is an exotic 19-year-old New York actress of Russian and Chinese extraction who lives in Greenwich Village, makes movies in Hollywood, and loves youth oriented films — as actress and audience.

Phoebe dropped out of high school two months before graduation and has lived with her boyfriend, four years her senior, for more than two years.

A generation ago, perhaps two generations back, 19-year-olds did not live together outside the bonds of marriage. Mores required teenage girls to blush at four-letter words and to forego provocative movies.

Phoebe, a member in good standing of the liberated generation, not only enjoys raunchy movies, she stars in them: "Paradise," "Fast Times At Ridgemont High" and the new "Private School."

Along with such other young actresses as Brooke Shields, Kristy McNichol and Jody Foster, Phoebe leads an unorthodox life even by today's standards. But she thinks she is typical of 1980s teenagers.

She is a pretty, diminutive brunette, cognizant of the widening generation gap, who tries to be patient and respectful with older people, but not to the extent that it affects her tastes or lifestyle.

"The generation gap has existed for thousands of years," said Phoebe, who began a modeling career at 14, "and it will continue for thousands more. It's just more obvious these days.

"My father is a TV producer. He thinks he's really hip, and he is. But I'm growing up with different values that Dad has to adjust to.

"We live in different worlds, which I think is true of all parents and kids. Movie producers understand the gap. They make different pictures for kids than they do for adults.

"I loved 'Porky's' because it represents some of the things I'm going through now. I thought it was hilarious. Dad thought it was only mildly funny.

"I skip movies my parents would like and they aren't all that thrilled with the pictures that I think are terrific."

Phoebe said her own films, while not necessarily anti-establishment, are definitely tailored for kids.

The central themes of all three of her movies are teenage jobs, sex and putting something over on adults. Youngsters, she says, like nothing better than to foil parental authority.

"Kids today are much more independent than their parents were," she said. "We're really into getting jobs and we mature sexually much earlier than a generation ago. Or, at least, we are involved in sex earlier.

"Sex, language and nudity aren't the social barriers they used to be. The words that shock our parents are meaningless to us. In our grandparents' time the word 'damn' was shocking but not to our parents.

"So when I say (bleep) today, it doesn't mean any more to me or my friends than 'damn' meant to my parents.

"Young people are more sophisticated today, thanks to magazines and movies and even porno cable television. As a New Yorker I think I've matured faster than other young people. I'm street smart."

Although her career is still young, Phoebe has appeared nude, unperturbed, on screen.

"Nudity for the sake of comedy doesn't make you squirm," she explained. "There's a scene in 'Private School' where we all moon. It might shock our elders, but a bunch of nude backsides is funny, not sexy.

"I think kids, especially girls, have much healthier attitudes about our bodies these days. We accept them now without a lot of giggling.

"I was only 17 when I did my nude scenes in 'Paradise.' They were serious and more difficult because they were not easily justified. But the topless scene in 'Fast Times at Ridgemont High' was funny, which made it easy.

"I'm probably a little more advanced than some teenagers because I'm an actress, but most of the time I'm pretty typical of girls my age. I'm just more visible."

Grande Ole' Opry Has Now Gone Into Stereo

By MARK SCHWED

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The radio station that carries the world's longest running radio show, the Grand Ole Opry, has gone stereo.

You can't hear it yet on WSM-AM. You can't even buy a stereo receiver for AM. But it's stereo, take Roy Acuff's word for it.

"The Opry's come a long way since I joined in 1939," Acuff said. "I remember when just having a radio was really something, but now our listeners will be able to hear us in stereo.

"The only thing better would be for them to come see us in person," said Acuff, 79, the Opry's top politician.

WSM officially became one of the first 20 stations in the United States to go stereo on Dec. 6, 1982, when WSM Inc. President E. W. "Bud" Wendell flipped a switch from the stage of the Grand Ole Opry House.

The stereo broadcast was heard only over two receivers at WSM, one in the office of General Manager Tom Cassetty and the other in the control room.

The war between FM and AM is on.

"Stereo transmission for AM stations is an important advance, and I am proud that WSM-AM is one of the first stations in the country to convert. It will be exciting to listen to the Grand Ole Opry in stereo, and I know the Opry's listeners all over the country will enjoy the new sound," Wendell said.

WSM wasn't the first to go stereo and it won't be the last.

Financially, it wasn't much of a gamble for the Nashville radio station which plays an "urban country" format.

"About $12,000 for the equipment," Cassetty said.

Currently, there are five systems available to radio stations thinking about going stereo. Manufacturers have not made receivers to pick up the stereo AM signal because they are waiting to see which of the five systems becomes the standard, Cassetty said. Most stations have been taking a wait-and-see approach to find out what system will emerge as the victor. But WSM decided not to wait any longer and went with the Harris system.

"We're trying to show listeners that AM stereo is not a gimmick and is as good, if not better, than FM," Cassetty said.

Slowly, stations across the country are making the switch. When enough of them choose a particular system, AM stereo will become as commonplace as FM stereo.

"It's coming," Cassetty said. "One (system) is going to survive."

And when will truckers be able to pick up Acuff singing "Wabash Cannonball" in stereo?

"We're hoping by spring," Cassetty said.

When will car manufacturers get into the AM stereo business?

"We think they could do it by 1984," he said.

AM broadcasters believe stereo will enable them to recapture thousands of listeners (and advertisers) who switched to FM stereo years ago.

As an example, Cassetty said a 100,000 watt FM station can be heard in a range of about 65 miles day and night. In contrast, a 50,000 watt AM station, like WSM, has a range of about 200 miles.

"If you start on a trip you won't have to worry about the radio fading in and out," Cassetty said.

Some of the biggest fans of AM stereo are record companies, who haven't made mono records for years.

"The record companies are tickled," Cassetty said.

BARRELING ALONG

COGNAC, France (AP) — The oak trees in the nearby forest of Limousin are as important to the making of cognac here as the regions' grapevines, according to the head of a cognac firm.

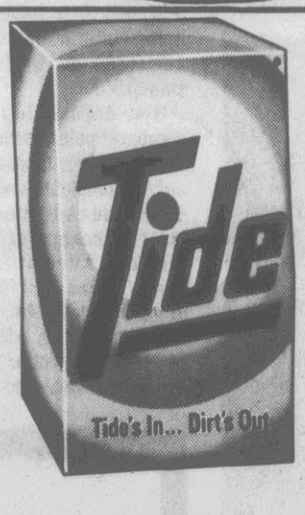

Unlike wine, which matures in its bottle, cognac only can age and reach its bouquet and flavor peak in oak barrels, says Jacques Martell.

The oaks now used to make the barrels were originally planted to provide material for France's Royal Navy in the days of wooden warships, he explains. But, it was discovered this oak is structured by nature to permit cognac to expel excess alcohol into the air, and to take from the atmosphere and the barrel, elements that ensure smoothness and subtleness in the liquor.

In 1929, Pandit Nehru organized the Independence of India League.

90-Year Old Man Makes Harps

By PAT REMICK

CORSICANA, Texas (UPI) — Earl Burkhart never saw, heard or played a folk harp until he felt compelled at 82 to begin making them. He says he believes his inspiration comes from God.

Today, seven of his folk harps decorate his living room. An eighth is on the roof above the front door of his house — an 18-sided structure that the 90-year-old Burkhart built 3½ years ago for himself and his wife of 63 years, Bridget.

Burkhart, whose spunk and spirit defies his age, says the multi-sided home is a result of his longtime desire to live in a round house,

Another longtime desire was to build a musical instrument. He first made a harpsichord in his cluttered, tool-strewn workshop alongside the railroad tracks on the edge of downtown Corsicana, but now he builds harps.

"It's a heavenly instrument," Burkhart said. "It's the oldest musical instrument on record. We're reminded in the scriptures to praise God with the harp."

Harps have been traced as far back as 5,000 B.C. Most versions of the folk or Irish harp are only about 54 inches tall and have fewer strings and lack the foot pedals of concert harps.

"The folk harp craze in America is outstanding," he said. "I think it's a return to the old, original instrument of music."

At 5-foot-3, Burkhart is not much taller than the instruments he makes, but he stands tall in the art of making them. People from throughout the country have asked Burkhart to make them folk harps.

Although Burkhart has fashioned about 25 of the instruments out of various woods, the impish man with a ready laugh still is not an accomplished harpist.

He took about six lessons from the nearest teacher, in Dallas. It was almost a 100-mile roundtrip from Corsicana, a central Texas town of 20,000, and his doctor told him he was too old to go alone so he quit.

Burkhart, a member of a local choir for more than 60 years, always has been a lover of church music.

"There isn't anything to me more beautiful than a beautiful hymn in its simplicity," Burkhart said. "It's food for the soul."

So when Burkhart finally retired at 80 after more than 60 years in the construction business — including work on the Alaska Highway and oil pipelines in Canada — he turned to music.

"For a long time I had been interested, somewhere in the back of my subconscious mind, in making some kind of musical instrument," he said. "Then I got my first issue of a magazine called 'Workbench,' a do-it-yourself kind of thing, and saw a picture of a harpsichord."

Burkhart was so excited about it he called the magazine's editor in Kansas City, Mo., and found out how to get the plans for the instrument. He built it within six months and today it is one of two in his home.

"In the same magazine there was a picture of a harp," he said. "I thought, 'Well dadgum, I'll just call that same editor and get those plans.'"

Burkhart says he has given relatives most of his harps

Notes On Oil Rich Arabian Royalty

"Saudi Arabia and its Royal Family," by William Powell (Lyle Stuart, $14.95)

William Powell, who taught for two years at the University of Riyadh in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, devotes considerable time in "Saudi Arabia and its Royal Family" to the influence of that indescribably rich Middle Eastern nation has on the political leadership in the United States.

Powell establishes the importance of Saudi oil by quoting U.S. officials' as saying this country will be dependent on that source of petroleum for many years to come. Specifically, the United States will continue to depend on Arabian Gulf sources for fully a third of its supply.

He concludes that it would be "Apocolyptic" if the U.S. were cut off from this source.

With that preamble, Powell pinpoints the degree of influence the Saudis exercised and still exercise over both eh administration of former President Jimmy Carter and President Reagan.

Powell says it can be readily understood why Carter and Reagan Budget took a more balanced viewof the Middle East than their predecessors.

The author repeats published assertions that both Carter and his onetime budget director, Bert Lance, received favorable treatment from Saudi interests while at the same time the U.S. was considering selling military hardware to the kingdom.

Specifically, the author notes that Carter agreed to a plan — which he kept secret from Congress for a while — to pay the Saudis interest on their pre-payments for military equipment.

Powell said critics of the arrangement argued that it was tantamount to subsidizing the Saudi royal family.

Powell's manuscript, which was smuggled out of the kingdom, underscores the pitfalls created by the problem of such wealth, such as the necessity to import foreign labor because Saudis will not perform menial tasks.

The author privides a useful tool in understanding the kingdom.

A Review

A Witty Cookbook

"American Taste," by James Villas (Arbor House, $15.00)

From the glories of braised pheasant to the meaty goodness of Texas chili, culinary writer James Villas demands long-overdue respect for North American cuisine in his witty, refreshing volume, "American Taste — A Celebration of Gastronomy Coast-to-Coast."

Incorporated in his tome are more than 200 recipes, preceded by chapters outlining cultural and historical influences on food in the United States.

It's impossible not to compare notes with Villas, and nearly impossible to agree completely on ingredients and skills needed for the mastery of chili, barbecue or stew.

He not only explains how to prepare perfect fried chicken, he outlines the reasons for each step and utensil, from heavy iron skillet to fire extinguisher.

Villas decries the losses of the once-plentiful Maine lobster, and predicts American caviar, now in the infant stages of development, will compete in quality with imported caviar in just a decade.

The editor of "Town and Country" magazine, Villas makes mouth-watering suggestions for soup, wild game, vegetables, roasts and desserts.

Postcript chapters include tips on how to dine alone in lush restaurants and command the respect of staid waiters and captains as well as how to avoid hidden costs.

Prolific Author Has Written Under 94 Names

230 BOOKS UNDER 94 NAMES . . . Prolific author Con Sellers is shown in his study with some of the 230 books he has written under a total of 94 pen names. Summers has authored tales of lust, tragedy, greed and happiness; and his latest 'publisher' advance for a forthcoming book is $85,000. (AP Laserphoto)

By JANE SEAGRAVE
Associated Press Writer

WILDERVILLE, Ore. (AP) — His books are more popular in supermarket checkout lines than literary cireles, and that suits Con Sellers just fine.

The author of 230 novels, mostly historical romances and steamy love stories, Sellers is motivated by a simple passion: to sell more books.

"If that sounds mercenary, it sure as hell is," says the 60-year-old Shubuta, Miss., native.

"I know people say, 'You write for nothing but money.' No, I write to be heard, but nobody's going to hear me if they don't read my books."

A large, strong-bodied man with graying hair and a weatherbeaten face, Sellers looks more at home outdoors on his 60-acre southern Oregon ranch where he lives with his wife, Mary, than inside his dark and cluttered office.

For 27 years, Sellers has penned tales of lust, tragedy, greed and happiness. He now writes only if a publisher has agreed to buy the completed book. His latest advance, for an account of three generations of prostitutes in Virginia City, Nev., was $85,000.

His novels have appeared under 94 names, both female and male, including his own.

As Robert Crane, he wrote seven suspense thrillers about the adventures of a fictional Sergeant Corbin during the Korean War. As Lee Raintree, he wrote the novel "Dallas" to capitalize on the popularity of the television series of the same name.

Sellers began his career in fiction by writing "hairy-chested shoot-'em-ups" for men's magazines, he said in an interview last week. From there, he moved into "soft" pornography — books with titles like "The Business of Wife Swapping" and "Alcoholic Nympho Ward." Sellers says the books contained lots of description, but no four-letter words.

"I can look back and improve on any of them. But I'm not ashamed of anything I wrote," he said. "If there was a choice between sticking up a grocery store and (not) eating, I'd stick up a grocery store. I had a family to feed."

For the past six years, Sellers has taught that philosophy to would-be writers who sign up for his class at Rogue Community College in nearby Grants Pass.

"I tell them, 'If you want to be heard, you have to write what people are reading,'" he said.

"I like poetry. But (Rod) McKuen is the only rich poet. In most cases, you can't give it away, let alone sell it. I tell them, if you want to write poetry, get out of my class, we can use the chairs. But if you want to put poetry in your writing, then you're off and running."

His message pays off, he says. Several of his students have published novels, some receiving advances ranging from $750 to $40,000, Sellers said.

Sellers is making a healthy living from his writing, grossing over $100,000 in some years, he said.

But it wasn't always true. "We've lived on beans and we've done pretty well on caviar once in a while," he said. "I write for money, of course. I'm a professional."

Book Exhibition On The Road

By ROSEMARY ARMAO

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — When the Columbus public library mounted a special exhibit for art lovers, autograph hounds and readers of every age, it expected the show to run only during Children's Book Week in mid-November.

Instead, it ran six weeks, and now is traveling to branches in Columbus and to other Ohio cities.

It was organized by Henry Taylor, a librarian in the Center For Discovery. Taylor asked each of 160 authors and illustrators with at least two books each to their credit to contribute their photo and a writing tool.

A total of 92 mailed in an assortment of sketches, pens, paint brushes and self-portraits with their dogs.

Taylor said he had expected maybe 40 responses.

As delighted as he was with the contributions, he said he was was disappointed not to have heard from such superstars as Dr. Seuss, Maurice Sendak and Judy Blume.

Ursula Leguin, who writes for 6th graders and up, responded:

"This pen wrote four novels, and several stories and a mess of poems for me and although it's very old and leaky and cranky, may I have it back."

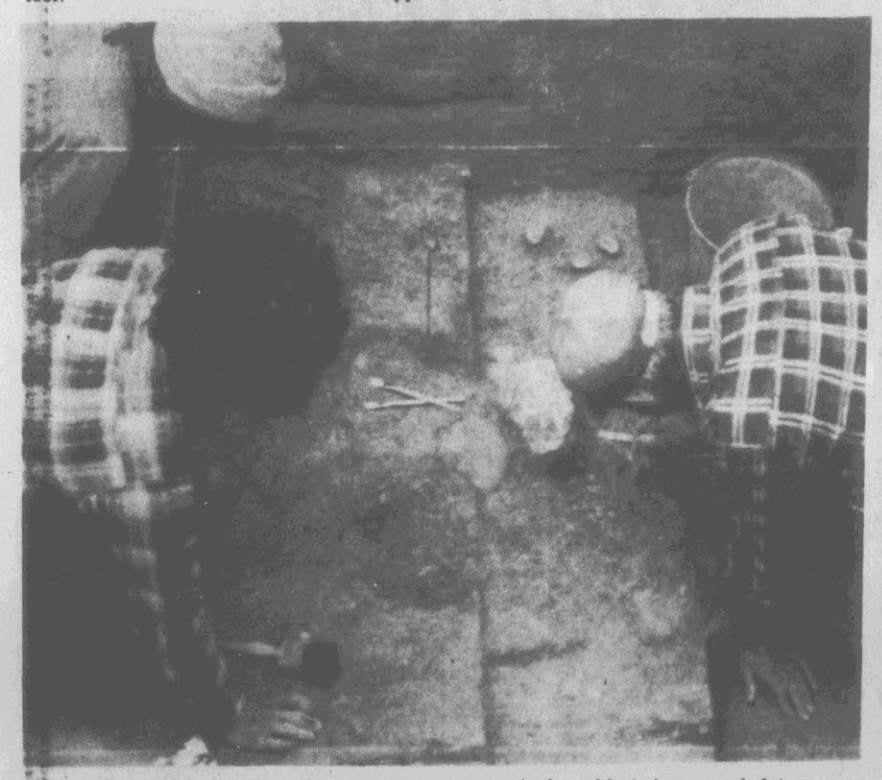

Jack Prelutsky gave up a pen, and said it had just run out of ink anyway.

Evaline Ness was more reluctant: "All things I use, including my fingernails, when I write and illustrate books are indispensable. Sorry."

Many authors don't use pencils at all, judging from the number of typewriter ribbons and correction ribbons mailed in.

ANCIENT BURIAL SITE — State Highway Department workers near Austin, Texas, delicately dig around the remains of a human skeleton believed to be 9,000 years old. If confirmed by radio-carbon testing, it would be one of the oldest human skeletons ever unearthed in North America. The discovery was made during excavation for a highway project north of Austin.

Seeking Agent

RALEIGH — The American Quadricentennial Corp., the non-profit fundraising arm of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, is seeking a licensing agent to handle the sale of merchandise using the logo of the 400th anniversary.

The 400th anniverary is the commemoration of Sir Walter Raleigh's efforts to establish colonies on the coast of North Carolina between 1584 and 1587, and is sponsored by the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources. The celebration will begin in the summer of 1984 and last until the summer of 1987.

The ccrporation wants to insure the good taste, quality and appropriateness of the use of the logo, to take action to disseminate widely the materials using the logo, and through royalties received to raise additional funds for the programs of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee.

Companies interested in making a proposal to the corporation should get in touch with John D. Neville, secretary-treasurer, The American Quadricentennial Corp., 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C., 27611, by Jan. 31.

Covering 8 to 30 horsepower tractors since 1960, it is a valuable new addition to the Chilton library of repair guides.

Both foreign and domestic tractors are included, with detailed instructions for each model. Adjustments, specifications, tune-up, and step-by-step parts replacement aids are presented in clear concise terms. There are thousands of descriptive illustrations highlighting the cross-referenced text. Time saving tips, informative notes and necessary cautions round out the work.

Everyone who owns or works on tractors, from the beginner to the most experienced mechanic will find this a vital resource.

Tad Burness's "American Car Spotter's Guide, 1920-1939" will be a joy for the nostalgia buff and a must for the serious antique car buyer. American-made autos from the 1920 Ace to the 1936 Yellow Cab will be found in this delightful book.

Illustration of all models, including interior as well as exterior views are provided to help the potential buyer become better informed. Specifications for each model, including engine size, horsepower rating, and wheel base displacement, is offered.

To Americans familiar with the few present-day manufacturers, the number of auto producers during the period will be a genuine shock. This book includes models from no less than 217 auto manufacturers, A helpful appendix also gives information on another 350 makes. In all, over 2600 illustrations are presented.

The "American Car Spotter's Guide 1920-1939" will provide many moments of enjoyable reading and viewing for public library patrons mildly interested in older automobiles. For the patron interested in purchasing a vehicle of this era, the book can serve as a useful buyer's guide.

Five Films To Be Shown By The Cinema Society Of Greenville

A SCENE FROM "THE WORLD OF APU" . . . an Indian film opening the five-film Cinema Society of Greenville series beginning Jan. 23 and continuing through April 25. "Apu" will be screened Sunday, Jan. 23 in Hendrix Theater.

Tickets for the series is priced at $10 and are now available for purchase. Films from India, Japan, Russia, France and the U.S. will be shown.

After a temporary lull in the autumn of 1982, the Cinema Society of Greenville is once more bringing rarely-shown classic American and foreign films of the past to East Carolina University for audiences in Greenville and eastern North Carolina.

The January through April lineup of films include comedy, drama, and romance from five nations, dating from 1923 through 1962.

Due to arrangements with distributors, tickets for the five Sundays of films can be by membership only. Membership for admittance to all five films is $10. These can be purchased at the door at the first showing, or subscription can be made by mail by sending a check or money order, with a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Cinema Society of Greenville, English Department, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834. Persons wanting more information on the films can call Glen Brewster or Alex Albright at the English Department, 757-6412 or 757-6041.

The films will be shown in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Union Center on Sundays beginning at 7 p.m.

• January 23 — "The World of Apu." This 1959 film from India is directed by Satyajit Ray, the most celebrated of Indian directors. "The World of Apu" concludes the trilogy describing the life of Apu. After achieving manhood, he decides to become a writer, but his life takes an unexpected turn when he is invited to the wedding of a friend's cousin and finds himself taking the place of the bridegroom — who has had a nervous breakdown just before the ceremony. The film has a score composed and played by Ravi Shankar.

• February 6 — "Ugetsu," a 1953 Japanese film directed by Kenji Mizoguchi. In dream-like images, Mizoguchi retells the 16th century legend of two men, a potter and a farmer, who leave their families and journey to the city to fulfill their greatest desires. The potter dreams of wealth, while the farmer wants to become a samurai and attain military glory. Both achieve their goals, only to find that their lives have changed in unforeseen ways.

• March 27 — An American double feature of Harold Lloyd films. "Safety Last," made in 1923 shows Lloyd going to the big city to make his fortune. He runs into a number of precarious and hilarious misadventures, including the famous scene of hanging from a clock. In a 1924 film, "Hot Water," Lloyd takes a live turkey on a trolley ride, then takes his in-laws for an equally hysterical ride in his new car. For years, films featuring the premiere silent film comedian were not easily available, but in recent years they have been gathered and released for distribution. In addition to the two films, the last interview granted by the noted star, made in 1962, will be shown.

• April 25 — Serege Bourguigon's French film, "Sundays and Cybele" is the final feature of this Greenville Cinema season. Mardy Kruger and Patricia Gozzi are the stars of this widely acclaimed 1962 film that won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Film. The story involves a pilot during the Indo-China war burdened with guilt over the death of a little girl due to his plane crash. He makes little progress, despite the efforts of Madeline, a nurse who cares for him, until he makes friends with a young girl whose father is going to leave the child at a girl's school without ever returning for her.

RALEIGH — A project of gathering 250 photographs of Victorian buildings from about 20 counties in North Carolina has been funded with an $8,000 grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation to the North Carolina Chapter of the Victorian Society in America. The chapter's long-range ambition is to preserve the photos in book form.

Working on the project will be JoAnn Sieburg-Baker, an architectural photographer from Charlotte; Daphne O'Brien of Raleigh, who will work in the picture collection of the Division of Archives and History in Raleigh; Davyd Foard Hood, architectural historian of Raleigh, consultant; and Marguerite Schumann, Chapel Hill, who will serve as project coordinator.

Victorian architecture has experienced a renaissance that is related to the national preservation effort. It is the most prevalent of styles in America, and an important part of the American tradition that is now being revitalized and interpreted to a new generation.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, established in 1936, has made 1,456 grants totaling more than $110,000,000 to more than 750 recipients in all of North Carolina's 100 counties over the years.

A Review

Mid-East Fiction

"Munich 10." By Lewis Orde. Arbor House. $14.50

North Carolinian Lewis Orde's Munich 10 is a piece of fiction purporting to show a possible scenario of events that could have led to Israel's invasion and occupation of Lebanon last year.

Samantha Sutcliffe, an English movie actress, appears to be an outspoken apologist for the Palestinian Liberation Organization although her latest film depicted the plight of a Jewish girl during the Nazi regime in Germany.

The reader quickly discovers that in reality, Miss Sutcliffe is an Israeli agent and her pro-PLO stance is designed to aid her infiltration of the group in Lebanon.

She ingratiates herself with the Palestinians by using a news conference — called to discuss her film role — to blast the Israelis. The Palestinians then invite her to do a documentary on the plight of the refugees in Lebanon.

The actress' controllers have information that the dreaded Black September group was being re-activated and they want to know what the terrorists are up to.

Miss Sutcliffe, who is not Jewish, had a lover who was on the Israeli Olympic team that was attacked by Black September a decade before. She is out for revenge.

Black September, it turns out, wants to hold hostage a secret Arab-Israeli-American peace confernce in West Germany.

A Story Of Hope For An Alcoholic

Text By Bette Elliott, President
Bill Kiser News Service, Raleigh

It started when he was 13.

"Me and my buddies, we'd get together every Saturday and we'd drink," he said, remembering, his eyes closed tight. "Get the liquor from somewhere. Well, when I was 16, I got my first DUI (driving under the influence conviction)." He opened his eyes slightly, squinting at a visitor to the place where he was drying out. "I lost my license, but went ahead and drove anyways."

Six DUI's and two wives later, he landed in prison. "By that time," he said with a look of a man who couldn't believe what he was saying, "by that time, I was putting away a fifth, fifth and a half of Vodka. I'd mix it with Dr. Pepper to kill the taste. Sat around watching TV all day. I'd dropped out of school. My second wife was leaving me. I drove drunk, got a 90 day sentence. I guess it saved my life."

He is a burly man of 30, bearded, long-haired, frank in his admission that he is an alcoholic. He spent 28 days at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center here; 28 days of new and old therapy to get him back to the land of the living, as he put it.

In many ways, he's lots better off than most of the wretches who come here, ill, trembling, jobless, without home or family. He recognizes his drinking problems, he takes the drug antabuse, a substance that makes even thinking about drinking a nightmare. He knows that unless he lays off booze forever, he cannot have too many more chances for that land of the living.

Best of all, his attitude is positive toward the world of work. In a small suite of offices in the heart of the center, he went through many sessions with Johanna Roebuck, vocational rehabilitation counselor and in some ways, surrogate parent.

Mrs. Roebuck, a motherly woman who went back to school for a degree in counseling after her children grew up, said of her client: "My job is not to give him a lot of sympathy. I've had them in here say, 'I'd rather die than go back to work!' so I have to find out why they're so bitter. I don't coddle a client. I try to understand him."

"We think he'll make it . . . He's really motivated." . . . We're convinced of his eventual success . . .

She and head counselor Bob Hunt determined that the bearded young man was one of the lucky 20 percent of the alcoholics who go through the center's program who could be productive, even though his work record as a mechanic was spotty.

"We think he'll make it," Hunt said. "He's really motivated."

The Vocational Rehabilitation staffers admit that working with alcoholics is no bed of roses. Hunt's fiancee, an occupational therapist, quit her job at the center recently. "It was just burn-out," Hunt said. "She'd work so hard with the patients, and hours after they were released, they'd head for the nearest bar. It was tough for her to take."

Hunt, who lost his eyesight in an automobile wreck eight years ago, has a real empathy for alcoholics as handicapped people. "Their bodies are different from those of normal people," he explained. "Their bodies crave liquor. And it's all coupled with a mental problem. Alcoholics are on a big ego trip. If somebody tells an alcoholic he can't drink, the first thing he wants to do is go out and drink. He's a type. If he weren't a compulsive drinker, he'd be a compulsive gambler, or a religious fanatic."

Hunt uses the male gender when discussing alcoholics, because 70 percent of all known alcoholics are men. Fewer women drink in public, and the woman alcoholic usually has a family to protect her while men are expected to hack it in the world out there.

The bearded young man profited, not only by the traditional treatments for alcoholism (tranquilizers during the initial withdrawal phase, vitamins and the drug, antabuse), but also by the new approach to mental health, "reality therapy," in which he was confronted head on with the fact that he was a drunk, someone who had wrecked lives including his own, and that he and he alone could make the decision about his future.

Talking about "reality therapy," the young man grinned sheepishly. "Yeah, it worked." He confronted himself with honesty, and both the psychiatric staff and his vocational rehabilittion counselor are convinced of his eventual success.

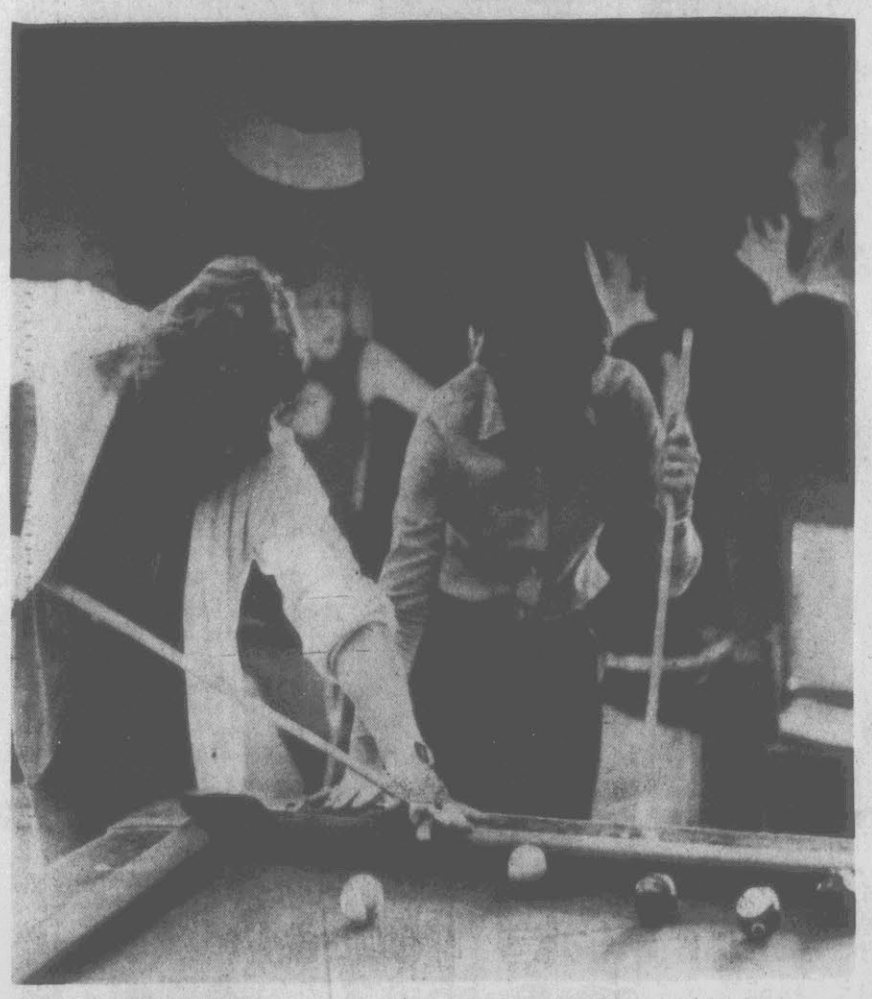

Mrs. Roebuck's sessions with him brought out the fact that he preferred to return to his old job as a mechanic. His former boss, a man with liberal views, has agreed to give him his job back. "This is a new trend," Mrs. Roebuck said. "Instead of firing an alcoholic outright, lots of employers will suggest that he come here for treatment. The larger firms even have AA chapters."

If a former boss is not so liberal, the counselors and their client will take it from there, guiding the client through job-hunting steps and following him up if he's successful. The young man of this story will also have a field counselor to go to if need be, just to rap with if he needs a friend.

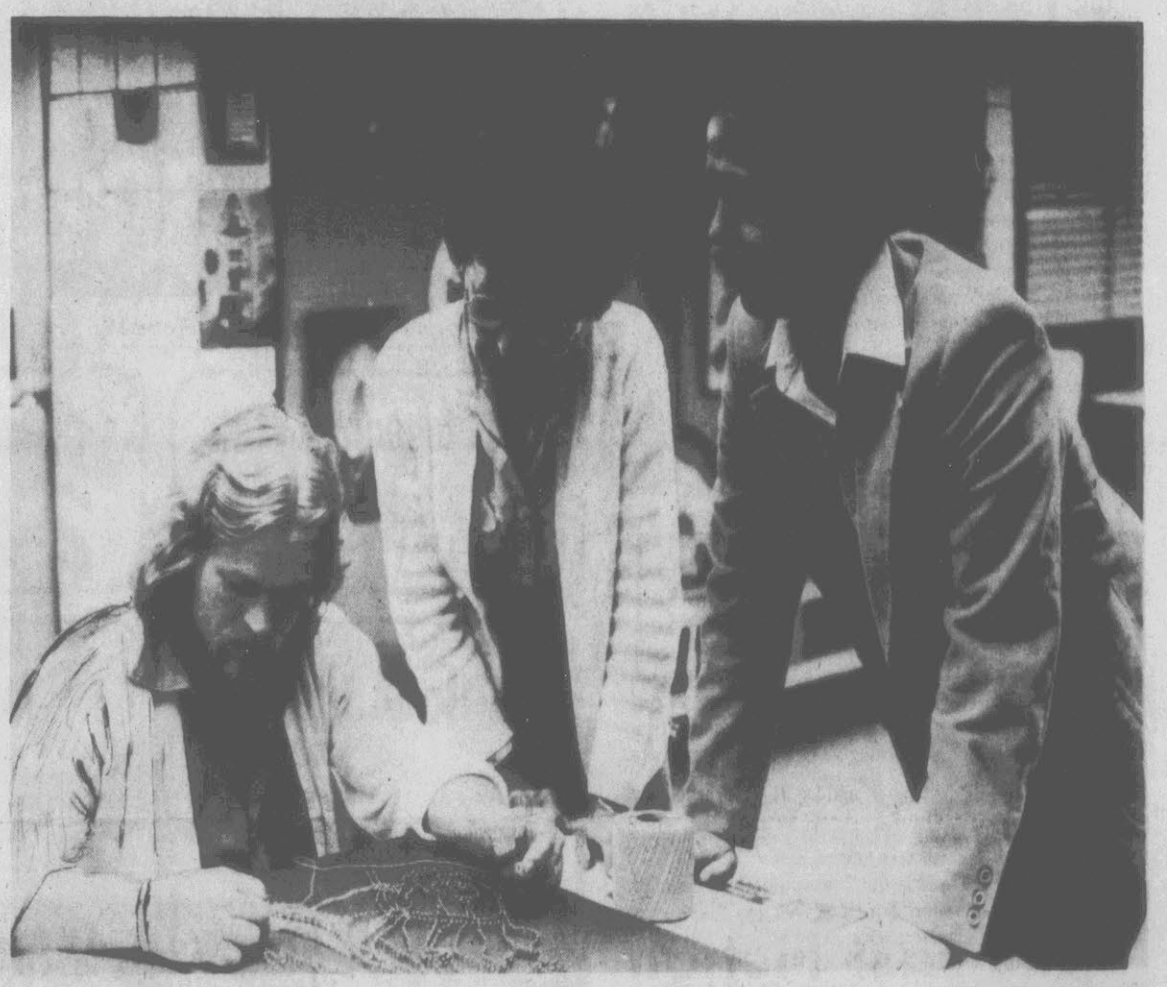

At the end of the 28 days, the young man left the center with a jaunty wave. Mrs. Roebuck and Hunt crossed their fingers. They know that a third of the patients who go through the center's program will be back someday, perhaps two or more times. This one, they pray, will have learned a strong lesson. He said he had. Now comes the proving.

STAFFERS ... Johanna Roebuck and Bob Hunt of the Walter B. Jones Vocational Rehabilitation Center say only 20 percent of their clients return to work successfully, but that 20 percent might not be able to make it without proper counseling.

ENCOURAGES RELAXATION ... Lisa Heller of the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Center Staff encourages the client to relax by playing pool in the center's well-equipped game room.

Calico Couple Has 102 Descendants

Text By LaRona Murray

If you are a grandparent, do you get a little excited when your offspring pays you a visit? How would you react, if you, like Amos and Decie Jane Pollard of Calico, had 102 grandchildren and great-grandchildren to delight you with their presence?

Amos Pollard, his face reflecting years of hard work, looks you straight in the eye and tells you what it was like 60 years ago, when at the age of 22, he embarked upon the serious business of marrying, settling down and raising the family that has produced 15 children, two foster children, 67 grandchildren and 35 great-grandchildren.

Amos Pollard has vivid memories of the depression that crippled the nation's economy during the 1930s and early '40s.

"Life was more simple then," he admits, "even if there never was enough money."

The Pollards, who have lived in and around the eastern Pitt County community of Calico all their lives, are an example of a large family's survival of difficult times, by utilizing what was available.

"There was no such thing as waste. We had to save everything there was to save in order to live," Amos recalls. "So we always had plenty of food and a decent place to live in."

Each winter the Pollards butchered and salt-cured enough pork to last until butchering time the next winter. "We saved all parts of the pig," Decie Jane said. "The excess fat was saved for making soap."

She still makes most of her soap by boiling fat and lye together in a big iron pot until it forms a jell. She lets it cool, cuts it into squares and shares it with her friends and neighbors.

Aside from raising pigs, the family had a cow, ducks and guineas. "The animals attracted the neighborhood children," Decie Jane recalled. "Sometimes there was as many as 24 children living under our roof in those days and on Sundays it was a treat for the children in the neighborhood to join ours and play with the animals. After all, there was no television to keep them inside."

Decie Jane Pollard taught her 12 daughters to can meat, vegetables and fruit. She showed them how to use scraps of cloth, left over from dress making, to put together quilts. "In the winter, when there was little farm work to do, we would make eight or 10 quilts."

According to Mrs. Pollard, the children were always getting their toenails caught in the threads of the quilts. "They wore them out about as fast we could make them," she laughed.

The Pollard girls learned to make brooms from dogwood boughs to sweep the yard, and mops from corn shucks fastened by nails and strings to a wooden board.

The farming, done primarily by mule and plow, was tedious and laborious, Amos avows. "There was so many things to do there was no time for mischief. For instance, we had no potato curing barns, like farmers have today, so we piled our sweet potatoes in a heap, covered them with straw and dirt and hoped they would stay firm and sweet until the spring."

They made their own syrup by raising cane, having it crushed in a mill that was turned by a mule. The juice was then cooked into a syrup — molasses.

"We usually had a very good breakfast. There was ham, eggs, syrup and butter," Amos said. "Most of it was raised by our own hands."

The Pollard family had very few disciplinary problems. "I tried to put the fear of God in them and their daddy put the fear of punishment in them," Decie Jane declared.

Typical of many large families, a strong bond of love and respect exists between the family members. "I'm not saying we have had no problems," Amos said, noting he believes in work and responsibilitiy as a major factor in raising children. "But it scares me to think how much worse it could have been if we hadn't really tried."

Life styles have changed in many respects since the Pollard children were small. Amos, who has never owned a car, commented that, "Today people go to town just about every day. But when I was young we went only once a month."

That monthly trip was made to acquire food staples such as sugar, flour and meal. About once or twice a year they went to town to buy clothing.

Prices were much lower than prices today. "Corn meal was 40 cents a bushel, and flour was about $3 a hundred pounds," Amos recollects.

When she was a younger woman with her children around her, a typical summer weekday for Decie Jane began early in the morning, when she partially cooked her noonday meal. She worked side by side in the fields with the children until about 11 o'clock, when she went home and finished fixing the meal. "I always had it ready and on the table when the dinner bell rang," she said. "Sometimes I wonder how I did so much work. I couldn't do it now."

Decie Jane's children were born at home, 11 of them delivered by a midwife, Polly Mills. The other four were delivered by Dr. Grady Dixon from Ayden.

Aunt Polly, as they called the midwife, stayed busy. "It was so much cheaper to use a midwife," Decie Jane said. "She charged only four dollars for each childbirth."

Amos and Decie Jane have enjoyed good health throughout the years. Amos has never been admitted to the hospital and Decie Jane has spent only eight days there.

"When my children were little," Decie Jane said, "we depended on herbs, many of them from the woods, to cure sickness."

The Pollard descendents span more than half a century. The oldest child is in the mid-50s. The youngest descendant, a great-grandchild, is 1-year old.

"It's almost impossible to get them all together at one time," Amos said. "But on the occasions that we do meet together, we gather at the church for the main meal."

The Pollards, married in 1925, have maintained an atmosphere of integrity and devotion as an example for their children. "I can truthfully say," Amos remarked, "that to my knowledge, I've never owed a man that I didn't pay. But sometimes I had to work overtime to do it."

According to Amos, it required cooperation on the part of all family members, but they managed to put two of their children through college. One is a now a minister in a local church, the other is a teacher in Philadelphia.

Decie Jane has assisted in housework when many of her granchildren were born. "There have been times that she would be gone for months," Amos declared. "She would leave one child that just had a baby and go to another one."

Pollard says that for him, happiness has been corn in the crib, chickens in the yard, meat in the smokehouse, fire wood in the woodpile and children around the table.

He has seen farming methods advance from the mule-drawn method to automation. He has seen great strides in labor and management, and has witnessed the transition of small tenant farms to larger farms, of 40 cents a pound for tobacco to almost $2 a pound, and big price increases in soy beans and corn.

"But life was more simple then," Amos reflects. "Today there is an urgency about day to day living and I doubt, even if I were younger, that I could raise so many children and grandchilden these days."

Asked what advice she would give to young parents of large families, Decie Jane said: "I would tell them to love one another, to try and keep them together, and as much as possible, to keep them away from bad influences."

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Zachery's participation in family mealtimes merely reinforces a conclusion I reached long ago: the only way to make a meal a rewarding experience is to feed the kids separately.

Phillip is a vigorous subscriber to this theory. Once a true afficionado of dining out, he now insists that any restaurant without a drive-in window should require not only shirts and shoes of its clientele, but also driver's licenses. If I don't feel like cooking, I had better feel like finding a babysitter.

"Why," he asks, "should I pay $20 for a case of indigestion when I can get one for almost free right here?"

I have to admit that he has a point. And what makes the validity of his objections to dining out with the kids all the more upsetting is that our children's behavior is little better or worse than average. They are not demons. No one except Phillip and me wants to yank them up by their ears and deposit them in the outdoor refuse container. They don't scream or sob uncontrollably unless steak is on the menu and they've been forbidden to order it. They just have their little quirks, that's all.

Zachary, for instance, gets claustrophobic when confined to a chair. He prefers to walk around the table or wriggle under it. Booths are even better. He can flirt with the people behind him or, if necessary, stroke their hair with his greasy hand to get their attention.

Meg, on the other hand, thinks that to have an effective conversation in a public place, she must speak loudly enough for the cashier to follow the gist of her monologue. She is also effusive in her praise of a good meal. The last time she was particularly appreciative of her food, she grabbed the waiter's arm and kissed it.

This incident bothered Phillip more than it bothered me. I would dearly love to have my arm grabbed in gratitude during the course of a meal at home. It never is though. Both of the children's normal reaction to the food I cook is to poke it hesitantly with a fork as if it were some mutant biological specimen and then to ask, "Yech, what is it?"

"Crab cake," I told Meg the last time she inquired.

Zachary, who remains convinced that he will eventually bring me around to his view that Cheerios and cookies will maintain him admirably, peered into his dish and declared, "It will make me sick."

"It will not make you sick," Phillip sighed. "Try it. It's delicious."

Zachary looked skeptical. "OK. But not the broccoli. I cannot eat broccoli."

He took a tentative bite, then firmly put down his fork and leaned toward Meg to draw attention from himself. "Eat your sweet potatoes, Meg," he ordered. "They're gulicious. They have mushroom-mellows on top."

Meg made a hideous face. "Leave me alone, Zachary! You worry about your own food."

He pursed his lips. "Don't you tell me!"

"I'm telling you both," Phillip growled. "Eat!"

Meg turned to me. "Do I have to eat it all, Mommy?"

"Yes."

"Every bit? Even the sweet potatoes, which I hate like poison? And this crab stuff makes my tongue burn."

"Eat!" Phillip repeated.

"Can't I just take two bites of each thing or half of something?"

"Eat!" Phillip roared.

Meg quickly stuffed her mouth but couldn't resist adding, "If I eat it all, is there dessert?"

Phillip moaned. "Hopefully Pepto-Bismol."

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
©1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—Almost all the questions you are asked about bidding never take into account the fact that one side or the other might have a part-score. That surely must affect the way you bid. Can you give me some pointers about how to go about the auction when your side has a partial?—R. Thompson, Ft. Lee, N.J.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Naturally, bidding with a partscore requires that you modify your methods somewhat. But there is one thing that does not change—a demand opening bid of two in a suit is still forcing, but now it is forcing only for one round and not till game has been reached. That is to enable your side to get to the best spot on those hands where opener has a two-suiter and responder does not have a fit for opener's first suit.

Under normal circumstances, a new suit by responder requires opener to bid again. However, if you have a partial and responder's bid is enough for game, opener is not compelled to speak again. For example, suppose that you have a partscore of 40 and you open one spade. Partner responds two hearts. Normally, you would have to bid again, but since two hearts completes the game, you may pass.

You may also take some liberties with the minimum needed to respond to partner's opening bid, especially if you have a 60 partial. Now, one no trump is enough to give you game, so you should strive to keep the auction open if partner opens one of a suit. And you can shade your one no trump response to about 5 points.

Your opening bids can develop a certain amount of elasticity. With a 60 partial, for example, your one no trump opening bid could have range of some 15-19 points.

Even suit bids acquire a degree of flexibility because you don't have to worry about preparing a rebid. Suppose you pick up:
♠AQx ♡AQJx ◇xxx ♣xxx

If you have no partscore, this hand probably is not an opening bid, because it poses insurmountable rebid problems and you won't be missing a game if partner can't open the bidding. But with a partscore of 60 or more, you can afford to open one heart, because the auction won't get out of hand. Should partner respond one spade, you raise; should he respond two of a minor, you pass.

On defense, we would tend to open hands that, with a clear score, we would pass. That is an attempt to prepare a defense as much as to try to steal the hand. For example:
♠AKxx ♡Axx ◇xxxx ♣xx

If neither side had a partscore, I would pass this hand. But give the enemy 40 or better and I would open one spade. That has preemptive value and a raise from partner might allow us to steal the hand. Also, if partner is on lead, I certainly want him to start a spade, which might be the only lead to defeat an enemy contract.

Pitt Teachers To See Center

Teachers working with emotionally, mentally or physically handicapped children have been invited to take part in the tour.

"The tour, plus information received, will assist the teacher in making referrals for those students that are aging out of programs in their school," said Charles Alford, vocational rehabilitation counselor for Pitt County schools.

"We anticipate more students referred to the facility in an effort to better prepare them for the world of work," he added. "Teachers observing programs in turn better prepare students still in public schools for the transition."

For further information contact Alford at 752-6106 or at the ECVC at 758-4188.

Victims Of Minor Head Injuries Require More Time To Recover

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Almost by accident, Dr. Charles Long found that victims of minor head injuries often have more trouble returning to normal life than those who suffer major trauma.

Now the clinical psychologist is convinced he knows why so many victims of relatively minor head injuries have so many headaches, vision problems, dizziness and emotional stress and he's trying to do something about it.

And if Long is correct, the rehabilitation program he and other Memphis State University psychologists have designed could benefit as many as 4 million people a year.

"We have fantastic acute care programs for people who have major head injuries," Long said in a recent interview at his cluttered MSU office. "And when the doctors are through with them, they have wonderful rehabilitation programs ...

"But people who have minor to moderate trauma don't have anywhere to go ... When they they go home and try to return to work, they have problems," Long said.

Long has discovered that even though an accident victim may show no medical evidence of his injury, standard psychological tests indicate that the healing may take far longer than physicians have thought.

And that means, he said, that an accident victim's return to normal life may be delayed or even blocked by frustration-based emotional problems that result from an inability to solve problems or perform work at pre-accident levels.

Long, who is also a member of the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences faculty at Memphis, has a background in physiology and neuropsychology.

It was while he was using a computer in connection with another research project almost two years ago that he discovered 50 percent of a group of head injury patients revealed no abnormal medical tests several months after their accidents.

Yet a high percentage of the supposedly recovered patients were still showing some psychological impairment long after their medical treatment had ended.

"Thirty-eight percent of the head injury patients fail to make a good recovery, not because of their injury, but because of emotional problems," Long said.

Long and a colleague, Dr. William D. Gouvier, began testing head trauma victims using a standard battery of psychological examinations.

Their tests revealed that victims of minor to moderate head injury, such as concussion received in an automobile accident, invariably had impaired cognitive function — trouble solving problems — long after medical testing indicated healing was complete.

"Their EEG (electro encephalograph) and CAT (computerized axial tomography) scans showed no lesions," Long said. He said those medical tests indicated that the patients were ready to return to home, work and study.

"But they weren't ready to go back," Long said.

Further research showed those patients suffered more headaches, dizziness, memory loss, fatigue and vision problems than individuals who were recovering from severe head injuries.

Long said the research indicates that the brain often requires more time to recover from an injury than had been thought. Furthermore, he said, when a patient attempts to return to school or work before the brain has fully healed, recovery is complicated by frustration.

One such patient, he said, had been a skilled worker before his injury. But when he returned to his job, he was unable to work at his previous pace, and he had difficulty solving simple problems.

The patient began complaining of headaches and he couldn't get along with his family and fellow workers. Finally, Long said, he tossed a tool box through an office window and had to be subdued.

"He simply had impaired cognitive function," Long said. "It doesn't mean that he's going to be an invalid, it means he's going to take some time to recover completely ... That's an extreme case, but it didn't have to happen."

The new MSU clinic which is staffed by psychology faculty and graduate students, offers testing, counseling and education for head injury patients.

"We think we've found a way to work this out," Long said. "We tell them there's a high probability that they're going to recover, but it's going to take time ... We tell them that the combination of impairment and stress puts more demands on them.

"We convince them that they can do the work — it may take a little longer at first, and give them enough time, they'll do the job as well as anyone."

Long's staff emphasizes stress management and activities such as reading or playing games that offer challenge.

"Watching the paint peel isn't going to get it," he said.

"Until now, these people were just sitting out there alone," he said. "There was nobody to tell them that they just needed time."

Artistry In Shoes

Blacksmith Curtis Hamilton has been shoeing horses for more than 20 years, traveling throughout the Carolinas, Georgia and Tennessee. He starts with a rod of steel that he cuts to size, shapes and fits to the individual foot much in the fashion of an artist putting his final brush strokes on canvas. The lights burned at THE DAILY REFLECTOR office on Christmas night, 1982.

That's because a group of employees reported to work to publish the Sunday morning, December 26, 1982, edition of THE DAILY REFLECTOR.

News personnel were on hand to assemble general and sports news of the Christmas weekend.

Production employees were there to set the type and put together the pages for the Sunday paper.

Pressmen started up the printing press for the hour and a half press run.

Study Shows Office Design Affects Efficiency

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

If you have suspected that your physical surroundings affect both your mood and efficiency, modern science has just proven you're right.

A recent study conducted by researchers at the State University of New York's School of Architecture in Buffalo showed that a good physical environment at work improves the worker's performance and satisfaction.

According to Michael Brill, president of the Buffalo Organization of Social and Technological Innovation (or BOSTI), a good environment is worth from 4 to 5 percent of an employee's annual salary to an employer in terms of increased productivity.

After submitting questionnaires to more than 4,000 workers and studying the office environment in about 50 organizations, BOSTI researchers found that some aspects of the office are more important than others.

In an interview recently, Brill noted that among the most potent factors are lighting, privacy and inclusion in the original design decision process. As a rule, workers prefer a more homelike environment than most offices provide. If given a choice, they would select pastel colors, soft homelike fabrics and traditional furnishings, rather than the neutrals and hard-edge furnishings that designers tend to specify for offices.

Brill, an architect who teaches at the SUNY School of Architecture, said that the high degree of cooperation of those who took part in the survey indicates that they regard their working environment as vitally important to them. About 77 percent took the time to answer the 500-item questionnaire with no reward other than the chance to offer their own opinion.

The researchers found that the most environmentally deprived workers are clerical, technical and professional employees who tend to have less space than they need to do their jobs and to be consulted rarely, if at all, when decisions on the office environment are made.

On the other hand, managers and supervisors tend to have more space than they need and to be consulted more often than other workers in preliminary stages of office design and redesign.

Participation in the design process is worthwhile even if the worker does not get what he wanted. Participation indicates to the worker that he is important enough to be consulted. This in itself raises self-esteem and identification with the company, resulting in higher job performance and satisfaction, said Brill.

The study indicated that workers do better in more homelike surroundings. The energy crunch "did something wonderful in the office. It led to extensive delamping with absolutely no loss of performance," according to Brill. In fact, turning off about half the overhead lights in the office to save money actually improved the lighting, since it led to installation of individually controlled task lighting where it is needed.

Brill added that many workers would opt for more privacy than they have. They are not necessarily seeking absolute privacy, however. Instead, they want to minimize interruptions by limiting access of those with whom they do not work on a day-to-day basis. Many would opt to share an office with at least one other person in their own department.

Other important positive factors in employee satisfaction include adequate equipment to do the job. Is the chair comfortable? Is the desk adequate for the task? Is there enough filing or storage space?

As far as temperature goes, the most important guarantee of satisfaction is evenness. If it is too hot or too cold, an employee can dress to take care of the situation. But if the temperature fluctuates between too hot and too cold, job performance is likely to suffer.

Another ingredient in a good office is some form of noise control. Too much noise — whether it is the noise of telephones ringing, talking, or machines going — "makes people crazy," said Brill.

However, researchers found that the introduction of computers and other high-technology equipment does not necessarily upset workers. "People accept rapid change as long as they can have some form of compensating tactile gratification," said Brill. In other words, if a company puts in a new computer system, the employer would be well-advised to also add soft draperies or perhaps a rug.

According to Brill, the best way to improve the worker's lot in the office is by providing some options over which the individual has control. In showing that an improved office environment has bottom-line relevance by leading to more productive employees, less absenteeism and less turnover, the BOSTI research may go some of the way toward making such options possible.

Q. — We have a washing machine that is connected to our regular electrical circuit, which is 120 volts. We now plan to buy a dryer, but have been told that it must be connected to a 240-volt circuit. Can I put one in myself or do I have to hire an electrician?

A. — Most local codes will not permit you to install such a circuit, but even if they did, the fact that you ask such a question indicates a lack of knowledge about the subject. Electricity is nothing to fool around with unless you know precisely what you are doing. Get an electrician. If you do not know or have one, ask the dryer dealer to recommend one. Some stores have regular electricians with whom they do business.

Q. — I have an old wooden chair which I decided to paint white to use in my son's room. I sprayed it with an enamel from an aerosol can after sanding down the gloss of the old finish, which I presume was varnish although I am not sure. It seemed to be all right, but within a day or two, the enamel had wrinkled the old finish in a few places, resulting in an all-around mess. Is there some way to correct this condition and what did I do that was so wrong?

A. — It seems probable that you used a lacquer-type enamel, as the thinning ingredient in the enamel acted somewhat like a varnish remover. You now will have to use a regular varnish remover. When you get off both the old and new finishes, you then can use almost any kind of finish you wish. But be sure you do not use a lacquer or any lacquer-based finish over paint or varnish, although sometimes the old finish will not be damaged if you give it a couple coats of a sealer before applying the lacquer.

Q. — A couple of years ago, I remember reading in your column about how to change a faucet washer on a faucet that goes into the wall over the bathtub. Recently, I tried to fix a leak in that kind of faucet, the one over our tub in the downstairs bathroom. After I took off the metal plate or cover against the wall, I could not figure out how to remove the faucet stem to get at the washer and I could not remember what you wrote that time. Is it possible for you to let me know how to handle this puzzling situation?

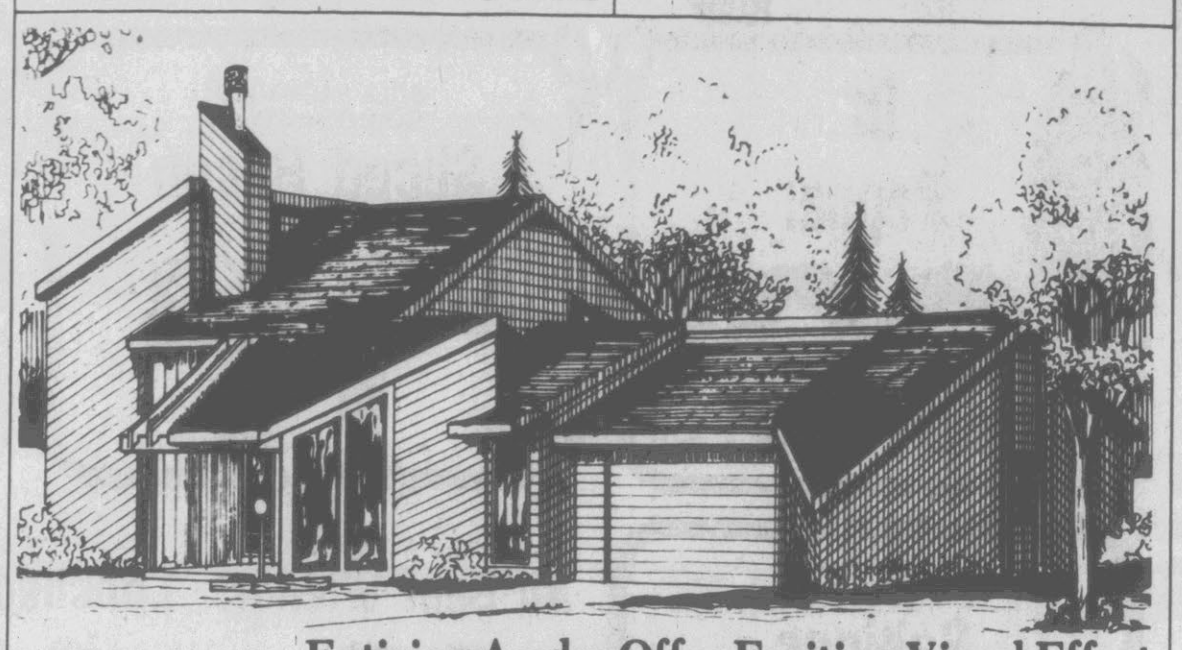

A. — The washer is changed exactly as in any ordinary faucet of that type. The only difference is that you must use a special socket wrench to get at the faucet. Sometimes when you take off the cover you find that the wrench, which can be purchased at a hardware store or home center dealer, will not fit into the opening. In that event, carefully chip out small pieces of the plaster or whatever the material is until you get an opening large enough. After you complete the repair job, the cover may or may not hide the enlarged opening. If it doesn't, use a little patching plaster to make everything look smooth again. When the patch has hardened, replace the cover.

Q. — I have a teak table which was brought over from China many years ago. One of the legs has come loose and I want to reglue it, but I have been told that teak will not "take" ordinary glue. Is there a special kind I should use?

A. — Yes. Use a casein glue and follow the directions on the label of the container to the letter.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents AND a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. What plants should I choose for a dish garden? (E.D., Edenton)

A. Select plants that have the same general light temperature, water and fertilizer requirements. Avoid combining flowering plants which do best in full sunlight with foliage plants which prefer shady conditions. Desert and tropical dish gardens are the two most popular types. Water dish gardens sparingly. When using containers without drainage holes, it is advisable to tilt the container on one side after watering and allow the excess water to drain out the top of the container.

Q. How can I control mealybugs on my coleus and jade plants? (D.F., Lowell)

A. For small infestations apply a cotton swab dipped in rubbing alcohol to the bugs and wash them off the plant. If your problem seems too large for this type treatment, spray the plants with amlathion according to the instructions on the label.

Q. Many of the hyacinths I planted in November have sprouted and are about four to six inches high. If I cut them back to the ground will they come up again and bloom in the spring? (M.W., Bladenboro)

A. Do not cut the tops off your bulbs. Bulbs form their blooms and leaves over the summer and they will not form any more before the spring. By cutting away this year's leaves, you deprive the bulb of food manufactured there and stored in the bulb. So, besides cutting away this year's flowers, you also damage the bulbs and their ability to produce blooms next year. Leaves of bulbs should not be cut until they have yellowed. The best thing to do now is to add a layer of mulch to protect the plants from te cold.

The unusually warm weather this fall and winter caused many plants to start growth early. This is probably the main reason for your bulbs sprouting early. The problem of warm weather too early would be compounded if you did not plant your bulbs deep enough. Bulbs one inch or less in height should be planted about four inches deep. Larger bulbs such as hyacinths, tulips and daffodils should be planted eight inches deep or, if there is only a shallow layer of topsoil, four or five inches deep.

Q. How can I tell when to re-pot houseplants? (H.U., Asheville)

A. One of the first signs that a plant should be re-potted into a larger container is frequent wilting of the plant due to rapid drying of the soil. In order to determine if a plant needs re-potting, turn the plant out of the pot and check the soil ball. If a heavy mat of roots is present on th outside of the soil ball, the plant usually benefits from re-potting. Re-potting can be done at any time, preferably before new growth starts.

It isn't always that something pops up completely different from your conception of it. Usually, it's just that you uncover a fact astonishing mostly because you never gave the subject even a moment's thought.

One of these findings takes place when you begin to use lumber in your projects. You buy a 2 by 4 and get a 1½-inch by 3½-inch piece of wood. You buy lumber for shelving, ask for 1 by 6s and get boards that are ¾ths of an inch by 5½ inches. Why these differences between the nominal sizes and the actual sizes you get? Because the wood originally had those larger dimensions, which were changed when it was prepared for the market. Shrinkage and milling accounted for the loss of wood in thickness and width.

Once you learn this, you take it into account when you make measurements and decide on the sizes of lumber that will fill your requirements. You also learn that these dimensional differences do not occur in plywood, hardboard or similar processed materials. Thus, a piece of plywood said to be half-an-inch thick and 4 feet by 8 feet is exactly that.

Most of the time you will be working with softwoods rather than hardwoods such as mahogany, oak and walnut, although the latter will be preferable for specialized jobs. Softwoods are softer than hardwoods — but not always. Hardwoods are harder than softwoods — but not always. Actually, softwoods come from evergreens that keep their foliage all year. Hardwoods come from trees that have leaves which generally shed sometime during the year.

Whatever trick there is to buying lumber consists of buying a kind that will serve your purpose. You are wasting money when you buy wood that is too good for the job at hand. The least expensive kind and grade should be bought whenever possible. Find out what is available in your area at your local lumberyard. Ask questions of your dealer. If he gives you a helpful answer, thank him and then stay with him from that time on whenever you need more lumber. You can learn a lot from him — or her, since one of the most knowledgeable lumber experts I know is a woman.

The best lumber to buy for outdoor use is the pressure-treated type or one that naturally resists decay and insects, such as redwood and cedar. If you buy regular lumber that does not fit into either of those categories, apply a wood preservative to it if it is being used outdoors. Soaking the wood in the preservative is better than brushing, but brushing is better than doing nothing.

When a lumber dealer doesn't have the specific kind of wood you want, he can order it for you. In that case, it usually will cost more. Most of the time, there is an acceptable substitute. That's why a helpful dealer is worth his weight in gold. He can advise you on what to choose. But, please, save your questions for a time when he isn't busy. It isn't fair to be off from work all week and then do your lumber shopping on a Saturday, the only day most other persons have to buy their lumber.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Special Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Grizzlies Are Vanishing Breed

By TOM HARVEY

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Exploration crews probing the Rocky Mountains for oil and gas are dislodging the mighty grizzly from one of its few remaining natural habitats in the lower 48 states, some experts say.

The numbers of the great beast with its silver-tipped coat and massive humped back — symbol of the untamed western frontier — are consequently dwindling, from shrinking habitats and from poachers killing them for pelts.

Excluding Alaska, major grizzly bear populations in the United States are clustered around Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks. Estimates of the grizzly population throughout the Rockies range from 700 to 950, with most of the bears in the two parks.

"In both these (park) areas the populations are in trouble and are in need of firm policy guidelines acceptable to the numerous resource agencies responsible for protecting them," says John Craighead, director of the Wildlife-Wildlands Institute near Missoula.

Dr. Charles Jonkel, a University of Montana professor and director of the Border Grizzly Project, said the accelerated search for oil and gas in the Rocky Mountains is intruding into the large, wild areas crucial to the survival of the grizzly.

"They're a very expensive animal to keep around," Jonkel said. "They automatically get in the way of people who want to rip things off."

The poachers are of particular concern. The Audubon Society has offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of hunters bagging grizzlies in game preserves.

"Frankly, the intelligent thing to do now is to let the grizzly alone, protect its habitat and cut down mortality," he said.

But Bob Gilbert of the Montana Woolgrowers Association said conservation groups from the eastern United States such as the Audubon do not understand the livestock raisers' problems.

Montana rancher Dick Christy saw bears kill up to 84 of his sheep last summer in a leased grazing area near Glacier Park. He says the public is being "duped" by the government and researchers into believing grizzlies must be protected at all costs.

Christy said this summer bears constantly were in his camp. After they had killed many of his sheep, he loaded his animals into trucks and retreated. He estimates his loss at $10,000.

In fear of his life, he says he finally shot a bear. Now he fears legal action for killing an animal considered "threatened" by the federal government.

Jonkel says some attacks on people, livestock and property by the bears are inevitable. He calls for compensation to victims.

Bear maulings began to attract attention in 1967 when two hikers were killed in different parts of Glacier Park on the same day. A novel was written, "The Night of the Grizzly," detailing both incidents.

A Park Service plan now calls for increasing public awareness of the hazard of entering grizzly country, control of food and refuse, and restrictions on visitors in areas where bears are a hazard.

GRIZZLY ... Exploration crews probing the Rocky Mountains for oil and gas are dislodging the mighty grizzly from one of its few remaining natural habits in the lower 48 states. This bear, a male estimated to be about 3 years old, was photagraphed last spring in Montana. (UPI Photo)

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals P.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

12,500-Acre Lake Forming

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials lowered the gate Thursday morning at the Falls Lake Dam to begin transforming part of the Neuse River into a 12,500-acre lake stretching 22 miles. The lake's primary purposes are to control floods and to provide Raleigh and Wake County towns with a dependable supply of drinking water.

Little Schoolhouse Carries On Cajun Tradition

KRAEMER, La. (AP) — A tradition spanning four generations lives on in this small Cajun community within the sturdy cypress walls of a little red schoolhouse.

Every time they climb the big wooden steps to teacher Penny Martinez's classroom, kindergarten students at Bayou Boeuf Elementary School retrace the steps of their parents, grandparents and great-grandparents who learned reading, writing and arithmetic there.

Modern buildings and a cafeteria hide the old one-room schoolhouse from Louisiana 307, Kraemer's main street — a two-lane road that winds through cattle pastures and swamp to link the community to other highways near Raceland and Chackbay.

"We've come a long way," former Bayou Boeuf Elementary student, teacher and principal Denise Borne said after a recent ceremony in which Louisiana Superintendent of Education Kelly Nix dedicated the cherry-red wood-frame structure as the state's oldest one-room schoolhouse in continuous use.

"Just about everyone in this community who went to school came through here," Ms. Borne, 69, said. "I've seen just about all of them in one capacity or another — as a student or a teacher or a principal — all of them except the very old ones."

Bayou Boeuf was separate from Kraemer when the school was built 79 years ago. Situated on the banks of Bayou Boeuf, which flows between Lac Des Allemands and Lake Boeuf, it developed in the 1800s as a fishing and trapping village. It gradually lost its identity after the Kraemer post office was moved there, but residents still call the area closest to the bayou Bayou Boeuf.

The Lafourche Parish School Board established the first Bayou Boeuf School in 1897 in an old house along the bayou, Borne said. Her grandfather donated land in 1903 for a new school, which opened the next year with an enrollment of 39 boys and 39 girls, she said.

Borne began her studies in the little red schoolhouse in 1919. She remembers drinking water from a cistern in the schoolyard, bringing lunch in a pail, having pigtails dipped in inkwells, keeping warm near the pot-bellied stove in the center of the room, riding to school in a pirogue when the bayou flooded the community.

"We had seven grades," she recalled. "I was one of the fortunate few able to continue my education in New Orleans. The others had nowhere else to go once they finished here. There was no high school for them until the buses began coming in the 1940s."

She taught first, second and third grades from 1932 to 1938, then served as principal from 1945 to 1973.

Most of her early students spoke only French, she said. Unlike many of her contemporaries in Cajun communities across south Louisiana, she did not insist that her students speak English in the classroom and at play.

"Some teachers punished students who spoke French," she said, "but I felt that made the children feel inferior. I asked them to practice their English, and many of them learned to speak through reading English. I'll say this — it was difficult to teach poor little children who couldn't understand what you were saying."

Today, Bayou Boeuf Elementary School has several buildings and boasts and enrollment of 250 in kindergarten through fourth grade.

From 1904 to 1951, the little red building was the olny school int he area. It recently was designated as the state's oldest one-room schoolhouse in continuous use. (AP Laserphoto)

Murray Takes Special Out To Sea

Anne Murray's last prime-time special on CBS, "A Special Anne Murray Christmas," did so well in ratings that not only was she nominated for a People's Choice award but she was asked by CBS to do another musical-variety program this winter.

But a Christmas extravaganza, it won't be.

"I didn't want to do another Christmas special," says Miss Murray, in a phone interview from her native Canada. "I don't want people looking at the TV set and saying 'Oh, look, there's Anne Murray. It must be Christmas.'"

So there'll be no sleigh bells and red-faced Santas on Miss Murray's newest special, airing Wednesday, Jan. 19 (8-9 p.m.), on CBS. Quite the contrary — palm trees and sailor suits will be the most common sights.

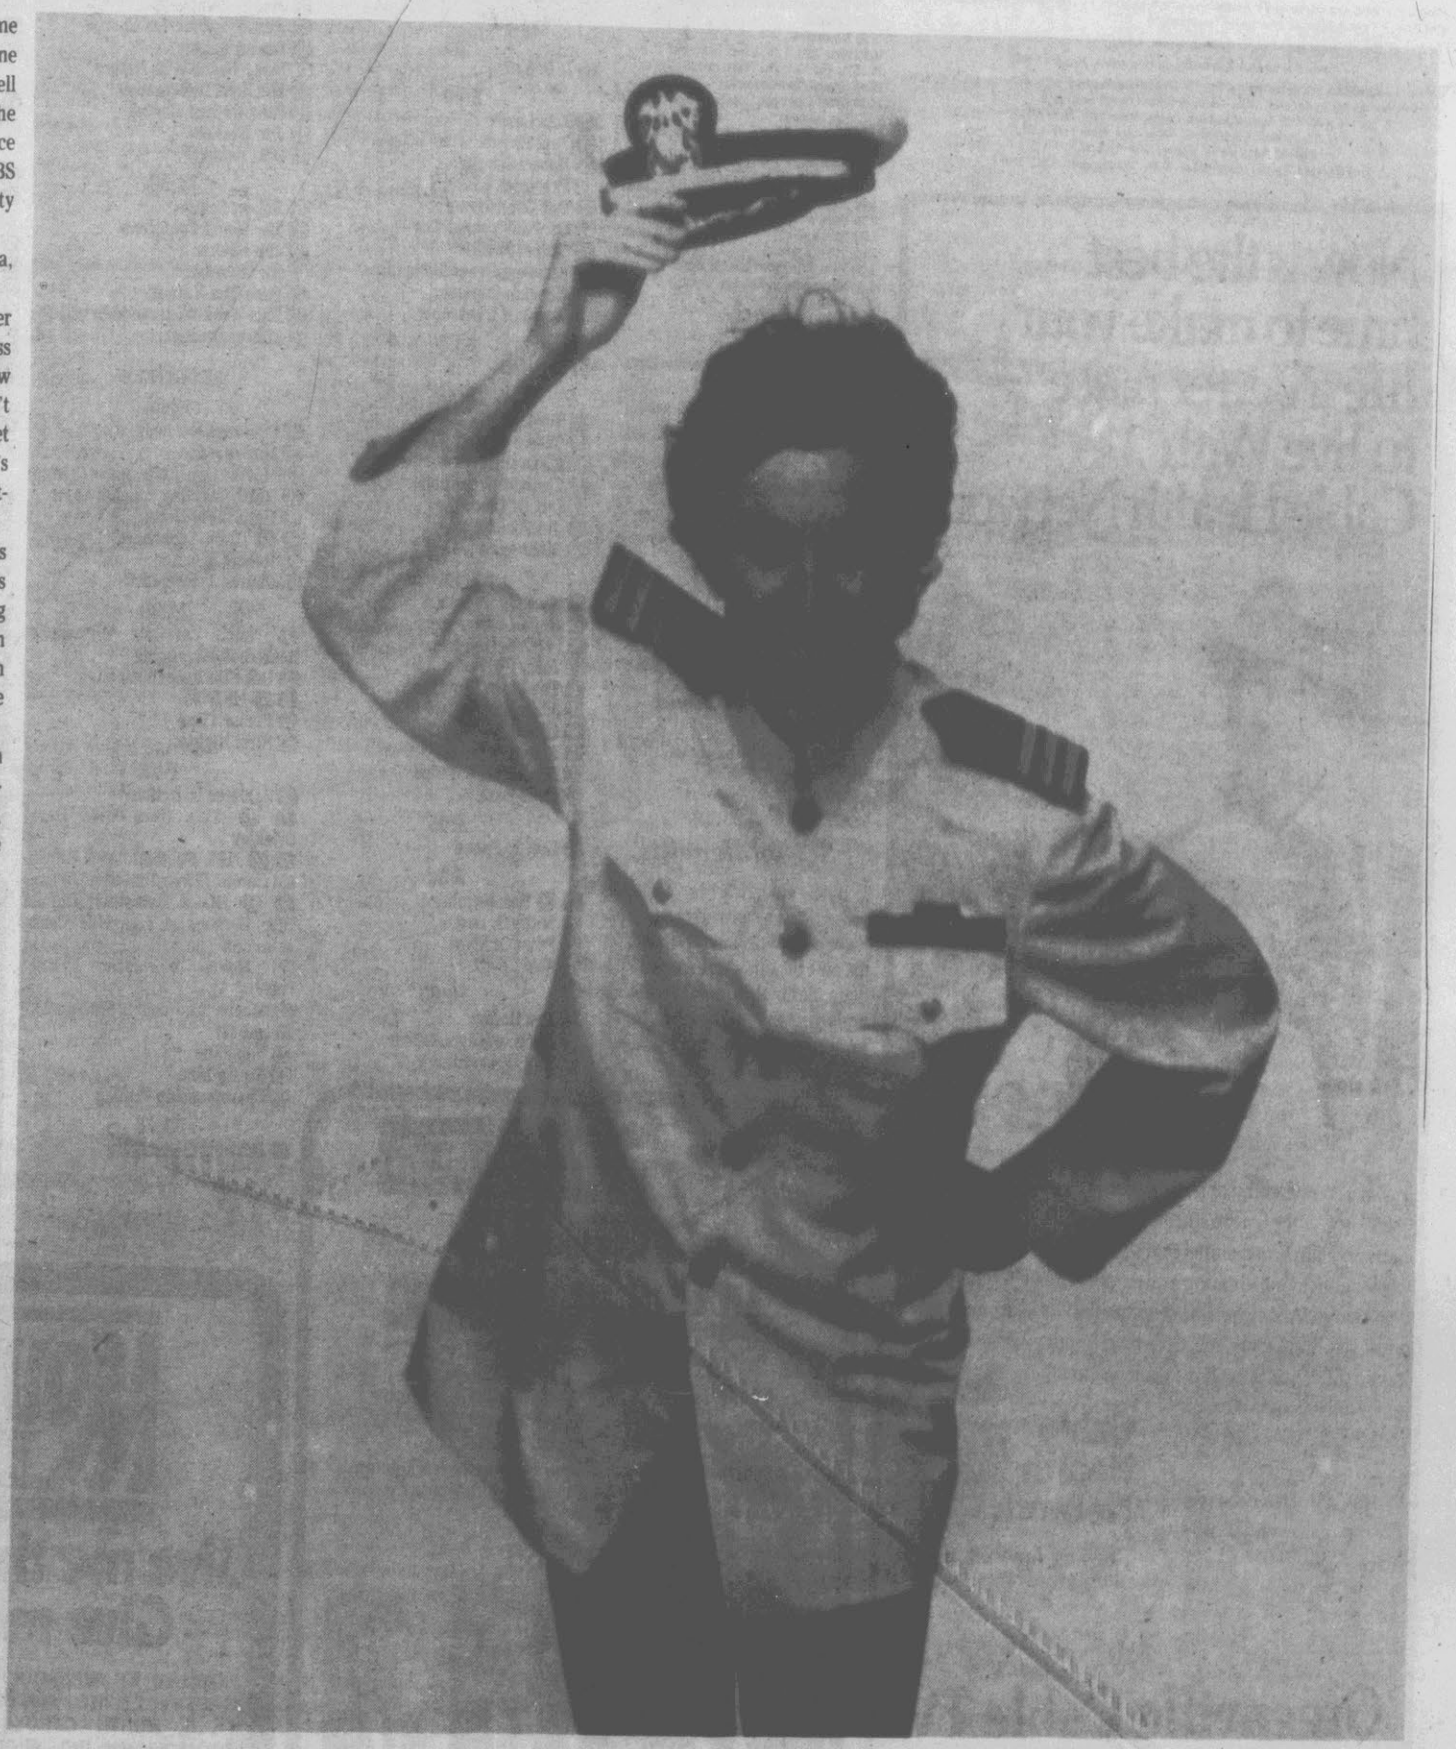

"Anne Murray — Caribbean Cruise" features the award-winning singer and her co-stars, singers Eddie Rabbitt and Jose Luis Rodriguez and diet-expert/comedian Richard Simmons, aboard the S.S. Norway for a musical journey around the hot, lush Caribbean islands.

"I've always wanted to go on a cruise," says Miss Murray, who's earned 3 Grammy awards, six gold albums, two platinum albums, and 18 Juno awards. "Ever since I was a little girl, that's been a dream of mine. I've always thought I'd like to get on a boat and sing for a couple of weeks."

And that's what she does. Both the ship itself and the island of St. Thomas are backdrops for the steel bands and musical numbers — from rock to reggae — of the special. Songs from Miss Murray's latest album, "Hottest Night of the Year," will be included.

If this special does nothing else for Miss Murray — which is doubtful — it will have, at the very least, warmed the bones of the Nova Scotia native. And that's nothing to make light of.

Fancy Driving

Chicago Bulls center Dwight Jones not only drives to the basket, he does some fancy driving on the road, too! The Illinois native collects antique automobiles as a hobby.

TEN OF HOLLYWOOD'S most lovely women are about to cover up those lovely smiles with crash helmets to participate in "Celebrity Daredevils," a special featuring some of Hollywood's top personalities, Sunday, Jan. 16 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC.

Stars Powered By Excitement

Burt Reynolds and Jim Nabors in a barroom brawl, LeVar Burton in a spectacular crash through a wall of fire, Elke Sommer driving a jet-powered truck, Christopher Reeve performing breathtaking aerobatics in a glider, a bone-crunching demolition derby with ten of Hollywood's most glamorous personalities, and Anthony Geary in a high-speed desert car chase highlight an incredible array of fearless exploits, in "Celebrity Daredevils," airing Sunday, Jan. 16 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC.

LeVar Burton is an adventurous sort, as evidenced last year in "The American Sportsman," when he participated in the first-ever rafting expedition down the Zambezi River in Africa. The Zambezi begins at the bottom of Victoria Falls, and flows 85 miles through narrow gorges, with 200 major rapids to encounter.

"I love adventure and excitement," Burton says, explaining his eagerness to undertake challenges. "There are very few new vistas left to conquer and I like to live on the edge. I'm proud to say that I was in the first party ever to go down the Zambezi and I'm equally proud to say that I'm among an elite handful of people who've gone through the fire wall."

Despite his verve, Burton is not frivolous. He studiously prepared for the rafting expedition, and devotedly did his homework for the stunt in "Celebrity Daredevils."

Burton later described the stunt as "an absolutely thrilling experience." And, as to why nearly 30 other major celebrities would undertake such daring feats, he responded: "Because these are things we never get to do in our work, and it's exciting."

Producing Has Appeal

Which noted actress, who also showed a flair for sound business decisions, was known as "the iron butterfly"? And another question: Has the women's movement succeeded to the point where executive-minded actresses are no longer targets for such name-calling?

First, a recap of the "Who was the real iron butterfly" quiz, The respondent who threw in the name of Loretta Young, in connection with her television series, gets a "wrong." The other two names go way back to Lillian Gish, in her silent movie phase, and Mary Pickford. Mary Pickford gets the decision, in the absence of documentation, because she was one of the founders of United Artists along with then-husband Douglas Fairbanks Sr. and Charlie Chaplain (and nobody cast aspersions at them for their shrewdness, by the way).

There is now a new breed of "production company" to protect the take-home pay of in-demand actors. Some exist merely to hire out the talents of the performer. Others are closer to the earlier image. Several actresses are involved in the old sense, searching out potential television (and movie) properties in which they might, but also might not, appear.

Susan Flannery — a regular two seasons ago on "Dallas" — has a company that develops properties in which she may choose not to appear. (She also runs a thriving real-estate business). Donna Mills told us she had optioned a script that interested her as a producer, but in which she would not act, "unless it's the only way I can sell it."

Most intriguing of all is the interest that Melissa Gilbert, from NBC's "Little House: A New Beginning" (Mondays, 8-9 p.m.), takes in her company. Her dual competence parallels the Pickford story.

Both learned the business as children. Melissa, 18, says she is going to take some courses in finance. Right now she's grateful that "my mother is such a good adviser, but I do know who's good at what. I'm there for the casting and I can hire and fire."

"Splendor in the Grass" was the most recent TV movie from her company. She won't say yet what's next.

Interest In Teens

Adrian Zmed, co-star on "T.J. Hooker," was too innvolved in acting and studying to drink as a teenager. However, he is interested in teenage alcoholism and is trying to help by currently serving on the National Council on Teenage Alcoholism.

'Still The Beaver'

It's Mayfield 20 years later but Jerry Mathers is "Still the Beaver," in the new motion picture-for-television currently in production in and around the Los Angeles area for future broadcst on CBS.

Dramatic Debut

Two-time Oscar nominee Ann-Margret will make her dramatic television debut in "Who Will Love My Children?," a sensitive two-hour motion picture which will be telecast Monday, Feb. 21 (9-11 p.m.) on "The ABC Monday Night Movie."

Inspired by a true incident, "Who Will Love My Children?" tells the story of Lucille Fray, an Iowa farm wife with ten children who, in 1952, learned that she was suffering from a terminal illness. Realizing that her husband would be unable to care for the children after she was gone, Lucille began a state-wide search to find adoptive homes for each of her kids. Her love and courage became an inspiration to all who came in contact with her.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: Can you please tell me to whom Liza Minnelli has been married? A. STRICKLAND, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO A. STRICKLAND IN FAYETTEVILLE: Miss Minnelli has been married to entertainer Peter Allen, 20th Century Fox magnate Jack Haley, Jr. and most recently Mark Gew.

DEAR MICHELE: I shall be most grateful for information you have about the woman who plays Julia on "Falcon Crest." Is she the same woman that started when the show began? If so, has she had dental work done? MYRTLE IN LUMBERTON, N.C.

TO MYRTLE IN LUMBERTON: Abby Dalton has starred as Julia Cumson since the series' inception. Abby has had guest-starring roles on many television shows, and was a regular on "Hollywood Squares" and "Storybook Squares." She has also made the dinner theatre circuit, performing in "Plaza Suite" and "Lovers and Other Strangers." Miss Dalton enjoys cooking and skiing with her husband, Jack Smith, who has his own business selling computers. They have three children who live with them in North Hollywood, California. With exception of perhaps a few fillings — we are unaware of any major dental work done on Abby's rather visible set of 'pearlies.'

DEAR MICHELE: On the TV show "The Powers of Matthew Star," does the actress who portrays Pam portray Dee on "As The World Turns"? TANYA BRAGG, GREENVILLE, N.C.

TO TANYA IN GREENVILLE: There may be a resemblance, however, Amy Steele appears as Pam — Jacqueline Shultz was the actress who starred as Dee Stewart Dixon in the daytime serial.

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know about the death of Fernando Lamas. I read a small mention about it and am anxious to know more. JAN LEE, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

TO JAN IN ROANOKE RAPIDS: Lamas had been complaining of a backache. Several weeks later he was dead from cancer. His body was cremated.

DEAR MICHELE: What is the address of the Miami Dolphins? CHRIS PETTY, DURHAM, N.C.

TO CHRIS IN DURHAM: Write to the Miami Dolphins at 16400-D NW 32nd Avenue, Miami, Fla., 33054.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

Husband's Past Knocks On Door

A happily married but childless woman must act as a stepmother to the daughter her husband secretly fathered years earlier through an illicit affair, in "Another Woman's Child," to air on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Jan. 19 (9-11 p.m.).

In the film, Terry and Mike DeBray (Linda Lavin and Tony LoBianco) are an upwardly mobile couple who have found great contentment in their marriage without children, until Mike returns from an emergency trip to New York accompanied by Lisa (Tracey Gold), a young girl who he fathered out of wedlock. Lisa's actual mother has died, he explains, and despite his reservations, he had decided to bring her into his own family.

Initially shocked and hurt by the revelation of the mere existence of the child, Terry reluctantly decides to make a home for her. Terry quickly discovers that both she and Lisa share a mutual resentment of each other, leading to a conflict that threatens the entire family.

"Another Woman's Child" was produced by Asa Maynor, who was one of Hollywood's most popular young actresses in the early 1960s. However, when she became pregnant by then-husband Edd Byrnes (Kookie on "77 Sunset Strip"), Ms. Maynor gave up show business to devote herself to her family.

"It wasn't a traumatic decision to give up my career," she reflects. "I thought it was important for a mother to stay with her children when they're young, so I decided to stay home with my son."

She says she first got the idea to produce films while living in Italy for a year, where her husband was making "spaghetti westerns."

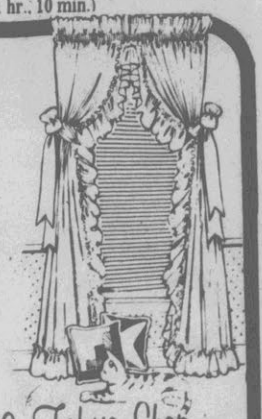

"I kept finding properties that I urged him to produce, but he wasn't really interested, so I finally decided I would do it myself," she added.

Chance Meeting Led To Role

One of Hollywood's most enduring myths is that Lana Turner was "discovered" while sipping a soda at a drug store on the Sunset Strip.

David Hasselhoff was not the totally unknown and untested actor Miss Turner was, but his "discovery" has the same elements of coincidence and chance. He had come off six years as Snapper Foster in CBS's daytime drama, "The Young and the Restless," when elderly ladies recognized him at a slot machine in Las Vegas. They surrounded him, squealing and seeking his autograph.

As it happens, Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, noticed the commotion and went to investigate. The next day, both Tartikoff and Hasselhoff were on the same plane returning to Los Angeles. They didn't speak, but Hasselhoff recalls that Tartikoff kept looking at him.

"I knew who he was," Hasselhoff remembers, "and I was eager to meet and talk to him. But we had bad weather on the short flight to L.A., and had to remain in our seats with the seat belts on."

But Tartikoff did not forget the man at the slot machine. He had a specific role in mind. NBC was preparing a new action-adventure series, "Knight Rider" (Fridays, 9-10 p.m.). The NBC executive called Hasselhoff the following day and asked him to test for the role.

He plays Michael Knight and his co-star is a sleek, highly computerized Trans-Am Pontiac. Edward Mulhare is a series regular, playing the urbane Devon Shire, Knight's mentor and advisor.

The show's time slot (against CBS's "Dallas" on Friday night) might have disheartened Knight, but there is some evidence that "Knight Rider" has cut into the competition's margin, if only minimally. Hasselhoff has his own theories: "We're attracting all those husbands, and probably some wives and kids who aren't interested in J.R. Ewing."

Television Drama

Jack Dempsey's life and achievements embody the American dream of putting together one talent, hard work and sheer determination to attain the sought-for-prize. Few public figures have ever captured the popular imagination as Dempsey has, and fewer still held on to that popularity for the rest of their lives, as he has done.

"Dempsey" traces his life and career from his young manhood as the son of a poor farmer to his reign as world heavyweight boxing champion from 1919 to 1926. The drama focuses not only on his ring achievements, but on his personal life as well.

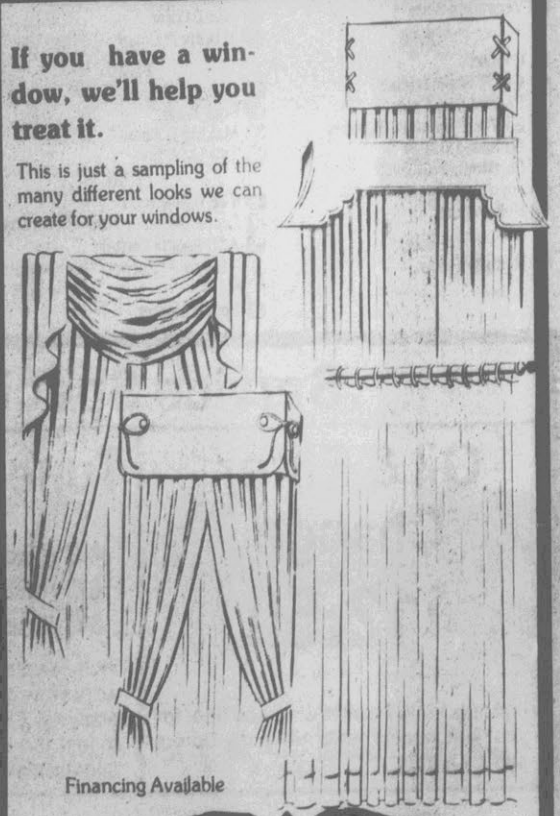

He scoffs at suggestions the show is not for highbrows. "It's a fun show. We don't have much violence," or not at least much "since my face got shot away in the opening scene of the premiere." (In that episode a dying millionaire pays for the plastic surgery that rebuilds Knight's face in return for his promise to dedicate his life to fighting crime. So the foundation was created for the series.)

Simpson In ABC Line-up

While NBC and CBS are busy broadcasting the NFL playoffs, with Round Two airing Sunday, Jan. 16, ABC is planning for next season. To help bolster its ratings, the network has signed O.J. Simpson, one of the greatest runners in the history of football, as a sportscaster.

After an illustrious college football career at the University of Southern California, it was ABC Sports that gave Simpson his first job — covering a track meet. Simpson still holds many fond memories from ABC, including the work he did at the 1972 summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

He's happy to return to the place where he was first payed for work other than football. "I'm looking forward to getting back there," says Simpson. "I don't know what all my duties are going to be, but 'Monday Night Football' is obviously something I want to be a part of."

Mostly remembered for his years as a member of the Buffalo Bills NFL franchise, Simpson truly was a new breed of running back. Never before had football fans seen anyone who possessed Simpson's keen instinct for running with the football. His quickness, combined with an ability to leave potential tacklers far behind, were what made Simpson the toast of snowy Buffalo.

Some of his career highlights: He was Buffalo's No. 1 draft-choice in 1969; while with the Bills, he was the AFC's leading rusher four times, and in 1973, he set an all-time NFL rushing record for having gained 3,003 yards in a single season. That record still stands, and, because of the strike-shortened season, it wasn't in danger of being broken this year.

Simpson's feelings on the recent strike are not at all vague — in his mind, the players gained little. He believes the players lost because of shabby leadership within the ranks of the players' union.

Simpson confessed that he never was a big fan of Ed Garvey, the man who spoke for the players throughout the long negotiating sessions with management. He later added:

"I'm glad it's over now, but I don't think that the players really gained anything. As for the future, I just hope that the one thing they consider at this point is their leadership."

Staying Power

Sidney Lowe, North Carolina State's point guard, apparently can't be stopped. Despite coming down with the flu 12 hours prior to a game against Michigan, he insisted on playing and went the entire game. "I told Sidney that I'd rest him, but he played 40 minutes," said coach Jim Valvano. "He's a great kid...a great player."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Two of America's superstars have signed agreements to appear on the Home Box Office network during 1983. DOLLY PARTON will tape her first special for them in London, March 28 and 29, at the Old Dominion Theatre. Grammy Award-winning rock star PAT BENATAR will headline her first tv concert ever. The concert will be taped during her current 50-city American tour.

Funny lady, JOAN RIVERS, will not be joking when she heads south to scout acreage in North Carolina and Tennessee for a multimillion — dollar complex. The complex, to include a film studio — 300 condos and a golf course, among other things, is a project she has been wanting to do with her husband — and the lady is dead serious about it.

Three of the screen's "super heroes" — CHRISTOPHER REEVE, ADAM WEST and SAM JONES, will enhance their reputations by performing spectacular stunts on "Celebrity Daredevils," a two-hour ABC special airing Jan. 16. "Superman" Reeve will perform a series of breathtaking aerobatics, "Batman" West will drive a car off a ramp into a parked semi-trailer and "Flash Gordon" Jones will attempt to T-Bone car crash into a row of parked automobiles.

MORGAN FAIRCHILD can forget about playing Lana Turner in the Warner Brothers tv movie of her autobiography. Lana claims to have "artistic control" of the project and she is all for having an unknown play her — "after all," she says, "I was an unknown."

"AS THE WORLD TURNS" will not be turning from New York to Hollywood after all. After a lot of discussion about moving the CBS daytime soaper to the coast it was decided to keep the show in New York. Most of the cast, when polled, was willing to make the move West.

Making her first dramatic tv appearance, since her automobile accident in September, MARY MARTIN will guest on "The Love Boat." The remarkable Mary, with the spirit of Peter Pan, is starring in the "So Help Me, Hannah" segement of the series. Meanwhile, JANET GAYNOR (who was also involved in the accident) faces at least another eight weeks in the hospital.

I admired John Wayne — Sands of Iwo Jima was my favorite film. As a kid, I remember saying, "Let's go to the movies. But make sure there are no girls in it — we don't want to see any of that kissing stuff." I also admired athletes because I was into sports. Radio was fun until we got a TV in 1951. Then I'd rush home to watch wrestling.

LOS ANGELES — Current "must" reading on the Hollywood advance-galley circuit is Raymond Strait's extremely unauthorized biography, tentatively titled AKA Alan Alda, due from St. Martin's this summer. Here's how Strait summarizes his conclusions about the most loved star on American television: "Alda's a manipulator; he doesn't practice what he preaches as a feminist when it comes to hiring women behind the camera, or in front of it. He's a spoiled mama's boy — the Liberace of the 80's — who every mother wrongly thinks is a darling."... Douglas Trumbull, director of Natalie Wood's final movie, Brainstorm, says the film should be released by the end of this year. He's currently doing $3.5 million worth of post-production work involving an additional day's filming with co-star Christopher Walken. One of Wood's two unmade scenes has been dropped and the other rearranged so no double will be needed.... Julie Andrews, with no movie to follow up the success of Victor/Victoria, has gone off to Nashville to record with longtime Kenny Rogers record producer, Larry Butler. NEW YORK — Farrah Fawcett, report show biz sources, has been seeing her ex, Lee Majors. The six-million dollar question is: "Will she and the bionic man rewed?"... A bio of Aristotle Onassis is in the works. When the late shipping tycoon first discussed the project, he told writer Peter Evans, "My life is a novel. It must read like a fascinating drama." Evans then asked if Onassis wanted to be portrayed as a hero. Came the reply, followed by a shudder: "No, I want to be the villain. Villains always get the best parts."...And Sir Alec Guinness, who's working on his life story, won't call it his autobiography. He prefers "reminiscence."... Bette Midler, blasted by Jinxed co-star Ken Wahl for being bossy on the set (he also said that to get through their love scenes he had to think of his dog), returned the compliment by lashing out at Wahl. WASHINGTON — Edward Kennedy's recent Aegean Sea yacht trip with a mysterious woman was not the first time since separating from wife Joan that he has vacationed with a blonde. A week before his 50th birthday last February, Kennedy flew to Paradise Island, Nassau, with Helga Wagner, a Miami jewelry designer who has been romantically linked to the Senator. In fact, a few years ago it was revealed that hours after Kennedy drove off the bridge at Chappaquiddick — but before he telephoned the police — Kennedy called the tawny, Austrian-born blonde. On the Paradise Island trip, they were houseguests of Kevin McClory, producer of the James Bond film Thunderball.... The chilly climate between the Soviet Union and the United States isn't confined to accusations of warmongering by rival heads of state. Now Moscow and Washington are playing chess over new offices. The Russians want to move into their new embassy atop a hill in northwest Washington, but Soviet construction crews are reportedly two years away from completing a similar American facility in Moscow. Until the Americans get their new offices, the State Department is saying "nyet" to any such move by Soviet diplomats in Washington. —Kathleen Maxa and Jane Ottenberg

THE REAL STAR WARS

WHO'S WINNING THE ARMS RACE IN SPACE?

BY ERNEST VOLKMAN

Karl Kofoed

It was bitterly cold in the hour just before dawn, January 24, 1978, in the small Canadian town of Yellowknife. Only a handful of people were awake to see a sight none of them will ever forget. The sky suddenly lit up with what seemed to be a giant fire. In seconds a large, red ball of fire began falling to earth, followed by debris and a long, blue vapor trail. Pyrotechnic sparks of different colors flew from the flaming ball, and then it struck the snow-covered ground with a thud.

The residents of Yellowknife considered themselves lucky, for there was no damage to homes or stores. Though they assumed at first that the fireball was a meteor, it turned out to be the remains of a Soviet spy satellite, Cosmos 954, which had entered the atmosphere after malfunctioning in orbit.

Also extremely lucky that week were residents of Detroit and Miami — because U.S. Government officials had feared the Soviet satellite would crash into one of these locations. The Government actually considered alerting the inhabitants of those cities, but ultimately decided against it on the grounds that such an announcement would create a panic. In fact, as Cosmos 954 began to tumble lower and lower in orbit, at one point it just grazed the top of the atmosphere above Miami, then just barely missed hitting into Detroit only 24 hours before it smashed into Canada.

Concern was not related to the potential damage the two-ton piece of machinery could have caused when it hit, but the fact that it carried 110 pounds of enriched U-235 isotopes (processed uranium similar to that used in an atomic bomb), for powering its reactor — large satellites require nuclear juice to get the power they need to carry out their missions. Fortunately, the nuclear material and some of the reactor burned up on re-entry.

It was a close call, and there may be many more close calls before this century is over. Both the United States and the Soviet Union have embarked on major programs to turn space into the next battlefield. The plans sound like something out of Star Wars: "killer lasers" beamed from orbiting satellites to destroy other satellites; nuclear mines and laser battle stations to destroy missile warheads; manned space stations to wreck satellites; and, most frightening of all, charged-particle beam weapons that could incinerate millions of square acres on earth in one blast.

Not one of these Buck Rogers-type weapons is a pipe dream; each is now either currently under development or on the drawing boards, and their deployment is only a matter of time. The military race in space, largely invisible to the general public, has already overshadowed peaceful exploration of outer space, the original stated goal of Soviet and American space programs. Instead, both sides are spending billions to get an advantage in what the military experts insist is the future's major battlefield.

The consequences of this race could be enormous. For one thing, it is believed that the nation which gains control of outer space will dominate the world by the beginning of the next century. There also looms the horrifying possibility of a war in space, involving deadly lasers, new "death ray" weapons and nuclear weapons.

An argument is growing, much of it carried on behind closed doors, about this escalating arms race in space. It has been touched off largely by the Reagan Administration, which has asked Congress for a 37 percent increase — to over $10 billion — in the amount of money earmarked for research and development of space-based weapons systems. Opponents of the plan, including members of Congress, leading scientists and arms-control experts, argue that the Administration's plan is a mistake, and that efforts should be underway to work out a comprehensive arms-control agreement with Moscow to ban all space-based weapons systems. Without such an agreement, they say, both sides will carry out an expensive race in space that at best will simply end up as a stalemate and at worst will kill everybody on earth.

The Reagan Administration's chief justification for a strong U.S. effort to develop space-based weapons is that this country is now behind the Soviet Union in such development and is in great danger of losing the new space race even before it has begun. "By next year," says Richard DeLauer, Under Secretary of Defense for research and engineering, "the Soviet Union may be ready to put into orbit laser weapons capable of destroying U.S. spy and communications satellites. By 1990 the Soviets can be expected to have a large, permanent, manned, orbital space complex capable of effectively attacking ground, sea and air targets from space."

Some defense experts say DeLauer's assertions are alarmist and claim the Russians are nowhere near capable of deploying such weapons. "By and large," says Harold Brown, Secretary of Defense under President Carter, "the United States is ahead of the Soviet Union in these military support uses for space." The Center for Defense Information, a Washington-based think tank on defense issues, also derides DeLauer's views, claiming that the U.S. is far ahead of the Russians in space technology, and that a major American effort to develop space-based weapons systems will only stir the Russians to match it.

Among the exotic weapons the U.S. is researching: a charged-particle beam that could incinerate millions of square acres on earth.

There has been an American effort to explore the possibility of space weapons since at least 1964, but it was barely funded, mostly because of scientific conclusions that weapons such as large-scale lasers and charged-particle beams (a beam weapon that focuses and projects atomic particles at the speed of light) would not be scientifically feasible in the forseeable future.

That attitude began to change after an odd occurrence took place 500 miles up in space on the morning of October 20, 1968. As American trackers watched, Cosmos 249, a Russian spy satellite, suddenly jumped out of its predicted orbit, moved near another Russian satellite called Cosmos 248 in a neighboring orbit, and then exploded. It was no accident: As American experts deduced, the Russians had tested the world's first "killer satellite."

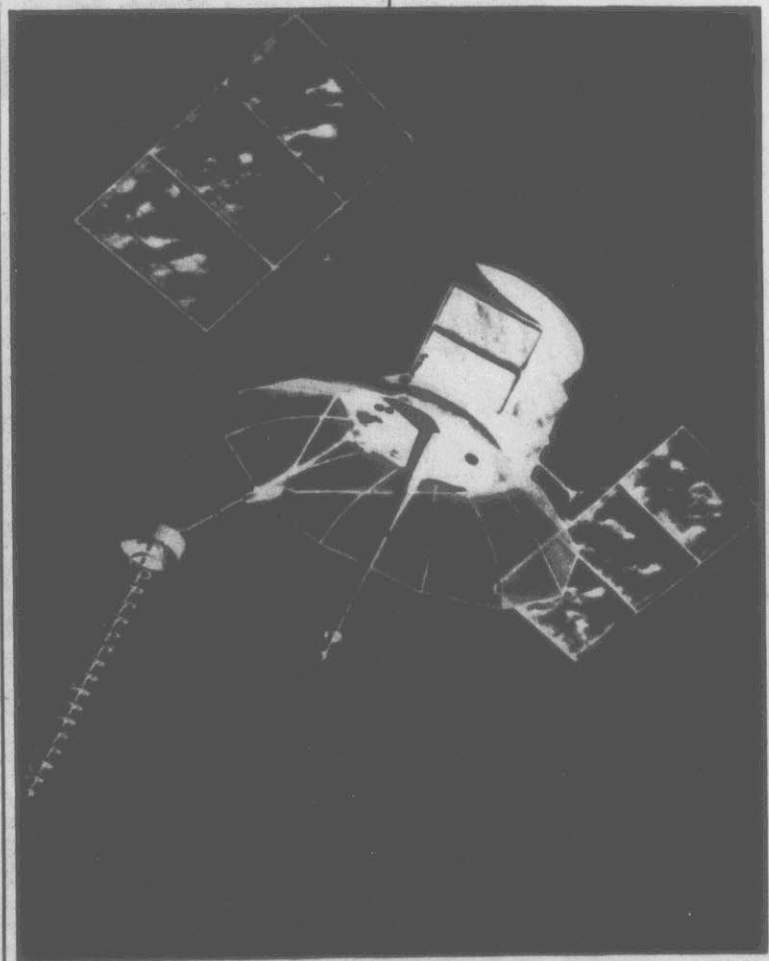

For the first time, America's huge network of more than 1,000 reconnaissance, navigation and spy satellites — all of them critical to our national security — were at risk. In the event of war, the Russians could destroy all these satellites, thus rendering the U.S. militarily blind and deaf.

The Cosmos 249 incident set off a renewed American effort to develop our own space-based weapons systems as a means of countering what was perceived as a burgeoning Soviet effort. (Congress appropriated $50 million for research and development soon afterward.) Action was spurred by other disturbing incidents. One was the discovery by U.S. spy satellites during the 1970's that the Russians were attempting to develop a charged-particle beam weapon. The level of research indicated the Russians were probably far ahead of this country in such development. Another was the 1975 incident in which an American spy satellite was blinded by a brilliant flash of light just as it flew over an especially sensitive Soviet military installation. Although there is still some argument to this day about exactly what happened, many American intelligence officials believe the Russians were able to blind the satellite by using a powerful new laser weapon based on the ground.

As of 1979, there has been a strong, new American program for developing space-based weapons, mainly on the argument that to allow a Russian lead in this area would be unthinkable. Thus far, the Air Force has developed something called M.H.V. (miniature homing vehicle), a small rocket launched from a fighter plane that can soar into space and blow up Soviet satellites. It has also developed a practical, working laser weapon that has already shot down a drone (an unmanned aircraft) in at least one test. The other military services are setting high priority on developing similar weapons, as well as endeavors to "harden" satellites and communications systems against Soviet "killer weapons." At the same time, there is a highly classified research effort to develop truly exotic new systems, including a "satellite melter" (liquid metal capable of blinding Russian satellites), space-based laser weapons using large mirrors to focus beams against incoming missile warheads and charged-particle beams to be fired from a "space bus" (a spaceship in constant orbit) which would use a nuclear generator to direct the beams against ground or space targets.

To arms-control advocates, these developments are alarming, for they indicate that the arms race in space is outrunning attempts to bring it under control. In 1968 the U.S. and the Soviet Union signed the Outer Space Treaty banning the stationing of nuclear weapons in outer space, but the treaty says nothing about lasers, charged-particle beams and other exotic weapons now being developed. The treaty also says nothing about the increasing practice of using nuclear power generators on large satellites. These are not technically nuclear weapons, but they use the same materials that atom bombs use, and there are growing fears about what will happen if such fissionable material gets into the atmosphere or hits a populated area.

An actual crash has happened only once so far — the Cosmos 954 incident mentioned earlier in this article. But intelligence sources say that in the past decade there have been at least three other incidents involving errant nuclear-powered satellites, all of them unpublicized because the nuclear material burned up on re-entry. (Most of Cosmos's reactor that survived re-entry fell into a lake, where it was later recovered; other material was picked up by Eskimos, many of whom suffered severe radiation burns.)

Clearly, say the arms-control advocates, the space race is out of control. "There is no question in my mind," says Paul Warnke, former director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, "that we could have war in space within a decade unless we devise a treaty to stop it." George B. Kistiakowsky, the science adviser to President Eisenhower who died in December, believed the central justification for the American program to develop space weapons — that the Russians are ahead — is not scientifically supportable. "Such claims," he stated last November, "are totally unsupported by technological reality and are science fiction best left to Hollywood. They seem to reflect the shortsighted desire of some military planners to extend the arms race into outer space."

The arms-control advocates are disturbed not only about the pace of space weapons development, but also about the nearly total lack of attempts to control them. Talks in Switzerland between the U.S. and the Soviet Union on a possible treaty banning all offensive weapons in space have been going on intermittently without result for nearly 10 years and there is no prospect of any conclusion in the near future.

That has tended to shift the focus of attention to Congress, where opinion is divided over whether the Reagan Administration is right in advocating a major U.S. effort for developing space weapons as the best way of forestalling Soviet advances. In effect, the Administration is arguing that without a strong American lead in space, there is no motive for the Russians to negotiate limits.

A leading Congressional supporter of rapid development of space weapons, Senator Malcolm Wallop (R.-Wyo.), is heading a drive to get more money for immediate development and deployment of a space-based laser weapons system. Wallop argues that it is essential for this country to take the lead in such a system. "There is no doubt," he says, "that a chemical laser weapon in space is capable of defeating the current inventory of Soviet weapons systems — ballistic missiles, hostile spacecraft and bombers at high altitude." Senator Harrison Schmitt (R.-N.M.), until his recent defeat for re-election, advocated a stronger overall effort by this country to gain leadership in space, including military applications. "We simply cannot afford to lose our historical position," says the former astronaut, "as world leader in space sciences and space activities, both in the civilian and military sectors."

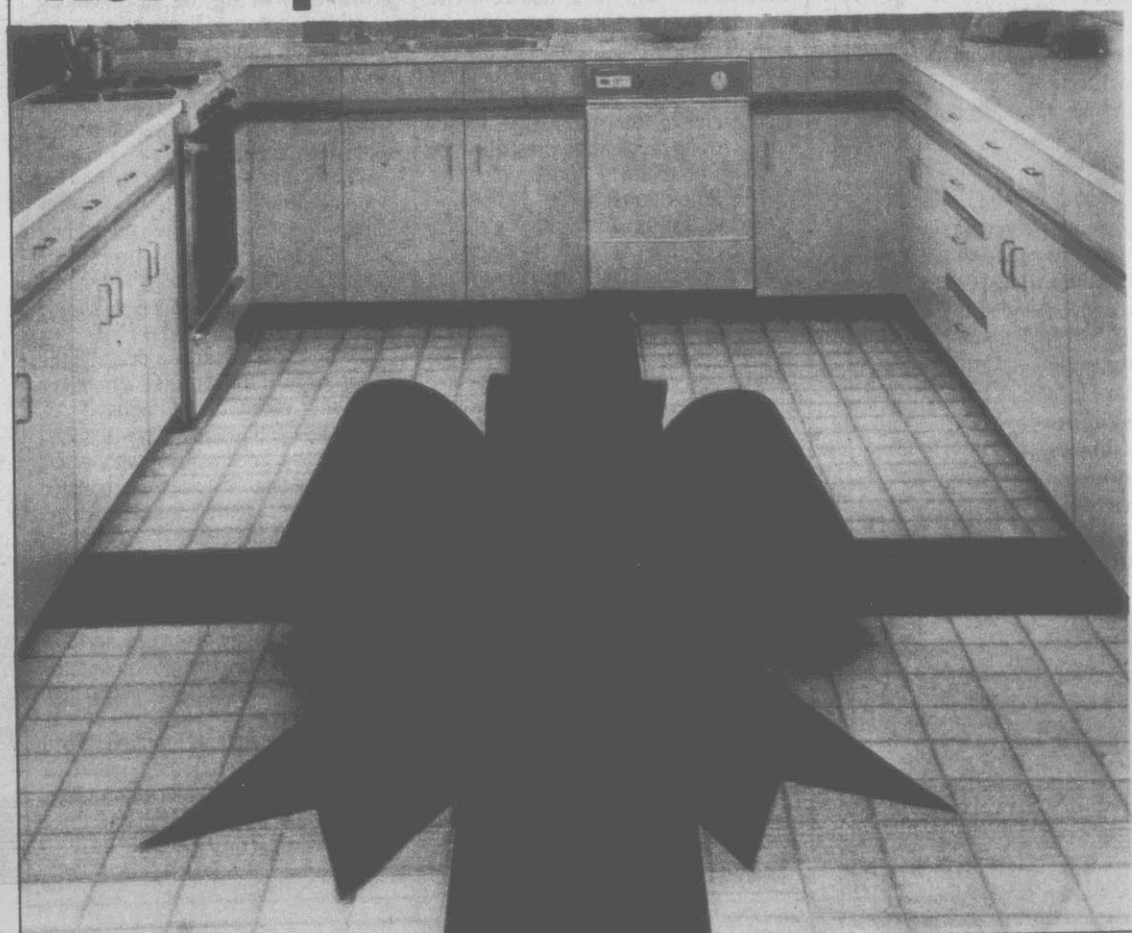

This view is supported by a loose coalition of space experts and former military officers who argue that space is the "higher frontier" of American military technology, and that if the Russians begin to dominate space, then the U.S. would be subject to immediate defeat in the event of war. This group, led by Gen. Daniel O. Graham, former director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, wants a major crash program to develop American space weapons as the only means available of guaranteeing U.S. military superiority over the Russians.

Thus far, this view has carried the day and Congress has generally given the Administration what it wants for space weapons development. But that may be changing in view of November's elections, which seem to presage some attempt to cut military spending, notably expensive space weapons. A resolution calling on President Reagan to immediately open negotiations with the Russians on banning space weapons has been signed by 43 Democrats and Republicans in the House. Representative John J. Moakley (D.-Mass.), the prime sponsor of the legislation, says, "While we are in the early stages of developing and deploying these weapons, it makes sense for us to negotiate a complete and verifiable prohibition of weapons of any kind in space."

Ultimately, it may all come down to a factor having little to do with science or arms control, a factor summed up perfectly by President Kennedy when asked the difference between a rocket that took John Glenn into space orbit and the rocket that could destroy Moscow:

"Attitude," he replied. PW

Observations

"Good intentions." That, as the saying goes, is what Hell is paved with... and an old Roman writer explained why: "'He means well' is useless unless he does well." Unfortunately, in well-meaning America one out of seven people still lives in poverty–despite years of social-welfare programs costing billions. Then what will help the disadvantaged millions? "The essential ingredient... most authorities agree, is a healthy economy," notes U.S. News & World Report. That would provide jobs, helping the able-bodied poor lift themselves by their own bootstraps, while generating more tax dollars to care for those who cannot work.

Nothing beats prosperity. "The time is always ripe to do right," wrote the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and we'd recommend this weekend of his birthday to think about how up-from-poverty dreams can come true for all Americans. Consider that the poor shrank from 22 percent of the population in 1960 to 12 percent in 1970, though federal aid was limited and relatively cheap. But then, despite huge government programs, the proportion edged up to 13 percent by 1980. What made the big difference? Economic prosperity in the '60s... versus the stagnant economy and high inflation of the '70s.

"First time, Mac?"

What went wrong? Although "the plight of the poor is... used as justification for massive government programs," says George Mason University Economics Professor Walter E. Williams, most of the money "goes to non-poor people, bureaucrats and professionals...." Take the now-dead Comprehensive Employment and Training Act that many hoped would aid the jobless, especially black teenagers. CETA poured out as much as $9.4 billion a year–yet, says Dr. Williams, the jobless rate for black youth in particular is still "no less than a national scandal."

Facing up to the pie. "A declining economy," President Reagan told the NAACP's 1981 convention, "is a poisonous gas that claims its first victims in poor neighborhoods." Hence his plan "to make the American economic pie bigger instead of just cutting a smaller pie into... smaller slices." Vernon E. Jordan Jr., then president of the National Urban League, sounded the same theme just weeks later: "When others were talking of 'an era of limits,' 'less is more,' and 'small is beautiful,' we were saying 'bake a bigger pie.' We want economic growth." The NAACP, too, sees the need "to expedite economic growth." That's the only way to fund vital programs for the aged, the disabled, and others who simply must have help–because most everything government spends comes from taxing economic activity. Even back in the New Deal days, President Roosevelt hailed "private enterprise as the backbone of economic well-being in the U.S." It still is.

It's a fact: Besides providing paychecks for tens of millions of workers, America's businesses last year contributed over $3 billion to health and welfare, community, and other good causes.

RX ALERT: FOODS AND DRUGS YOU SHOULDN'T MIX

By Alan D. Haas

Although Americans swallow more than 45 billion doses of prescription medications each year, many know little about the way these drugs interact with certain foods and beverages. This lack of information can have serious consequences: One young housewife being treated with an antidepressant died after attending a party where she had a large amount of beer, cheese and sausage. The drug, combined with tyramine — a chemical found in these foods — caused a lethal reaction.

In an effort to prevent problems, many doctors have now begun to distribute printed information on the drugs they prescribe to their patients. Most of the time, the effects of an adverse food and drug mixture aren't life threatening, but they can be serious. Those people most at risk include individuals who take a lot of over-the-counter medications, those who decide to treat themselves for an illness (using medication prescribed for a friend or relative) and people who have bad nutritional habits. Patients required to stay on medication for long periods of time or who take several drugs simultaneously may also run into problems.

"Some foods conflict directly with specific drugs, and the mere presence of any food can delay the therapeutic activity of many widely used medications, such as major antibiotics," says Prof. Peter G. Welling of the University of Wisconsin School of Pharmacy.

Some pharmacists will place a sticker warning patients of potentially dangerous mixes on the label of prescribed medication. But because this isn't always the case, it's important to know about these food and drug interactions:

- People taking diurectics for long periods of time could suffer a loss of potassium. They should eat foods high in potassium, like figs, tomatoes, oranges, prunes and potatoes.
- Patients receiving thyroid medications should eat only a limited amount of turnips, kale, cabbage and brussels sprouts, because these vegetables inhibit production of the thyroid hormone and can produce goiter.
- High blood pressure patients should restrict candy containing licorice, as licorice aggravates this condition.
- Taking an antibiotic with milk, yogurt or any other dairy product will sharply reduce its effectiveness.
- Penicillin's potency is diminished when it's taken with fruit juices or carbonated beverages.
- The strength of anticoagulants (prescribed for phlebitis) can be decreased by eating a large amount of foods high in Vitamin K, such as liver and leafy green vegetables.
- People on medication that's very fat-soluble, such as Valium or Librium, should avoid eating too many fatty foods. These could cause the drugs to be poorly absorbed.

Even more dangerous than some food and drug combinations is alcohol and drugs. Alcohol does not mix well with antibiotics, anticoagulants, antidiabetic drugs, high blood pressure medications or sedatives.

Most of the time, you can prevent food and drug reactions from occuring. It helps to follow these five guidelines:

1) Ask your doctor whether the medication should be taken with meals or between meals, and if you should avoid any particular foods.

2) When you're taking a drug, let the doctor know if any unusual symptoms occur after eating certain foods.

3) Unless you're told otherwise, don't swallow any medications with acidic fruit or vegetable juices, carbonated beverages or caffeine drinks. Take a full glass of water instead.

4) As a rule of thumb, don't mix any drugs with alcohol.

5) When taking any medication for a long period of time, ask your doctor if you should add a vitamin or mineral supplement to your diet, or change your diet.

"CLINICALLY DEAD" PATIENTS REVEAL THE PEACEFULNESS OF DYING

©Peter Angelo Simon/Phototake

By Dr. Michael Sabom

The patient, a 43-year-old New Jersey man, suffers a heart attack following open-heart surgery. A medical team revives him, but for a few brief moments, he is "clinically dead." Later he will relate a vivid remembrance of those moments.

"I came to some place and there were all my [deceased] relatives: my grandmother, my grandfather, my father, my uncle. They all came toward me and greeted me. And all of a sudden they turned their backs on me and walked away, and my grandmother looked over her shoulder and she said, 'We'll see you later, but not this time.'"

With improvement in medical techniques, more and more people are being brought back from this point of near death and are beginning to reveal what they saw and heard. Such occurrences have become known as near-death experiences (N.D.E.'s). In fact, pollster George Gallup Jr. recently found that an estimated eight million Americans have experienced some sort of mystical encounter in conjunction with a near-death experience.

Up until seven years ago, I had never heard of N.D.E.'s even though, as a resident in cardiology, I was caring daily for resuscitated cardiac patients. I then read Dr. Raymond Moody's noted book, Life After Life, which describes the N.D.E.'s of 150 people. My initial impression: "Utterly ridiculous!" To confirm my skepticism I, along with psychiatric social worker Sarah Kreutziger, began talking with patients of our own who had been "brought back." Much to my surprise, some told me of near-death experiences, which they had not shared before for fear of ridicule. Intrigued, Sarah and I began to systematically study the N.D.E., and over the next five years we talked to 116 patients who had suffered near-fatal medical crises.

What we found astonished me. Almost half — 43 percent — of patients resuscitated from a near-death crisis reported an N.D.E. Moreover, the group reporting the N.D.E. was no different in age, sex, race, area of residence, education, occupation, religion or frequency of church attendance than the group that could recall nothing from the period of unconsciousness.

Of the patients who reported a near-death experience, about half of the group, including the New Jersey man who saw his relatives, experienced what we call a transcendental N.D.E. Here, the patient feels himself thrust in-

The most famous silversmiths throughout the world are represented in this unique limited edition collection. During that period, representatives of the mint have traveled to every continent, contacting the most important silversmiths and persuading each of them to be a part of this historic issue.

Original collector's spoons in precious solid sterling silver

Each of the participating silversmiths has created a special miniature spoon exclusively for this collection. A sterling silver spoon of original design, by its own artists, portraying in a unique and imaginative way the theme or style of that silversmith. In addition, each spoon will bear the name and identifying mark of its creator.

Individually the spoons will be intriguing. Because each is completely different—both in shape and design. In fact, the 25 spoons that make up the collection have such variety that, when you show them to friends, they may think you acquired them on a trip around the world. Yet the full set will form a beautiful and harmonious collection.

These miniature silver spoons are available only as a collection, only for a limited period of time and only from The Franklin Mint. to a dark tunnel, eventually encountering a bright light and sometimes familiar faces.

Another one-third described an autoscopic or "out-of-body" sensation. It was as if the patient's spirit had separated from his unconscious physical body and was floating above it, allowing him to look down on the doctors working to save him. As a 37-year-old housewife described it, "I was looking down and could see myself going into convulsions. I was starting to fall out of bed and the girl in the next bed screamed for the nurses.... It was like being up in a balcony looking down and watching all this.... Everything was clearly seen, like watching television."

Said one Georgia man, "That was the most beautiful instant in the whole world."

While listening to these accounts, I was struck by the profound calm and peace and, at times, pure ecstasy that accompanied the experiences. After a transcendental N.D.E., one 65-year-old Georgia man put it this way: "That was the most beautiful instant in the whole world. Even the most beautiful moments of life would not compare!"

How did such an experience affect these people? Over 80 percent suddenly feared death far less than they had before. Many sick and dying patients said the experience had made them feel more peaceful about living out their remaining days. And for many, human love and compassion became paramount after the N.D.E., along with a deepened religious conviction. Said one man who had suffered a massive heart attack shortly after his 33rd birthday, "It [the N.D.E.] just changed my whole life like a flip-flop.... I used to worry about trying to get ahead and working harder to make more money. I don't do that anymore.... I just live from day to day.... I know where I'm headed to, so that I don't have to worry about dying anymore."

Can a near-death experience be scientifically explained? Is it a vivid drug-induced dream, hallucination or fantasy, or a dying person's desperate psychological attempt to "survive" his own physical death? A fulfillment of our romanticized expectations of death? Perhaps a lack of oxygen to the brain, or a temporal-lobe seizure? Dr. Lewis Thomas, author of Lives of a Cell, has suggested that N.D.E.'s may be caused by beta-endorphin, the body's naturally occurring opiate, being released at the moment of death.

But none of these explanations can account for the incredible accuracy of my patients' "visual" descriptions of what actually transpired during their own resuscitation. By examining medical records and interviewing other persons present at the time, we can verify many of the details of their accounts. Amazingly, the clinically dead victims accurately recalled such minute details as the exact positions of doctors and nurses (who often were located behind where the patients lay on the operating table), readings on various machines, the number of electric shocks administered and even dialogue among doctors (once, about golf). Was such medical knowledge perhaps gained from television or personal experience? To test, I asked a group of longtime heart patients to describe similar cardiac procedures — 20 of the 23 made major errors in their descriptions.

My personal hypothesis — which is a long way from being proven — is that during the process of dying a "split" may occur between the patient's nonphysical "mind" and physical brain. I don't know how this occurs, but perhaps it accounts for the "out-of-body" sensations described by many.

Finally, a patient may have an N.D.E. that is so calm, peaceful and ecstatic he later admits he didn't want to "come back" to the pain and suffering in his physical body. Yet, no matter how inviting "the great beyond," some people don't give in. There is much to suggest that one's will to live may be an important psychological component in sustaining physical life. I can do everything medically possible in certain situations and the patient will die, even though I would have expected the opposite outcome. Conversely, some patients who I thought would never have had a chance are revived. The more I practice medicine, the less I feel we really do control the final results.

The idea of near-death experience has caused me and many of my patients who have been "brought back" to become humble about the ways of the universe. As one Florida man put it: "I think once you've penetrated the big secret just a bit like I did, it's enough to convince you, enough to convince me, that I'm going to have no fear.... I don't think God wanted me to die... if He wanted me, He would have kept me.... He wanted me to get a peek into this big secret and shove me right back again."

It's possible that the N.D.E. is giving us all "a peek into this big secret." FW

CHILDREN

TEACHING YOUR CHILD THE ART OF KINDNESS

By Anne Mayer

Although teaching your offspring to be affable instead of awful can be frustrating at first, children whose parents set a good example will eventually respond in kind, report child-care experts.

If children never learn to be kind, they may have difficulty making friends and developing feelings of self-esteem. "Children who haven't learned by age 10 to share, play by the rules or put themselves in another person's shoes usually are very troubled kids and not very well accepted by their peers," reports Leo Kron, M.D., assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at Columbia University in New York City.

The first step is realizing the importance of proper instruction, explains Fitzhugh Dodson, psychologist and co-author of the forthcoming book Your Child: From Pregnancy Through Pre-School (Simon and Schuster). "Sharing and thinking about other people's feelings" do not come naturally to children, Dr. Dodson observes. "They need to learn these traits from their parents. When the family goes to a restaurant and Father pushes the chair in for Mother, she can say to their child, 'See, isn't that nice what Daddy did?'"

"A parent's attitude regarding kindness is very significant," agrees Peter Kalellis, a marriage and family therapist in Westfield, N.J. "If a parent shares in a joyful, loving manner, children are going to imitate that."

Another technique Dr. Dodson advocates is reinforcing positive behavior. Instead of always forcing children to share, which may cause feelings of resentment, wait for them to demonstrate generosity on their own, and then reward them for it.

Many parents find that the hardest part about teaching children to be goodhearted is getting them to understand other people's feelings. In some cases this may have more to do with the parents than with the children, says Suzanne Krogh, Ph.D., an assistant professor of early childhood studies at the University of Florida and co-author of the forthcoming book Helping Children Choose: Resources, Strategies and Activities for Teachers of Young Children (Scott, Foresman Co.).

"In helping children to understand, one mistake parents make often is lecturing to their children instead of helping them to discover for themselves why they should be kind," asserts Dr. Krogh. In her studies of first, second and third graders, she discovered that children as young as 6 are capable of empathy. She found that with instruction and encouragement children can learn how to put themselves in someone else's shoes and realize how their actions may affect others. And kindness generally follows.

Dr. Krogh advises approaching the child gently with insightful questions that will enable him or her to consider the feelings of other people: "Get the child to talk to you. Ask him: 'What do you think the consequences of that action will be? Do you know how it feels to be that other person?'"

If you allow the child to express his opinions, then you'll get a better idea of what he does and does not understand, she explains. "If his opinions are socially unacceptable, then you can help him reason through the problem. But listen to what he has to say rather than trying to impose your adult point of view on him. That way you'll learn if he's grasping the idea of kindness, and you'll help him grow in his social understanding." FW

THE SEXES

HELPING COUPLES TALK ABOUT SEX

By Stephani Cook

Dr. Barbach

Up to 60 percent of all couples have sexual problems, estimates Lonnie Barbach, Ph.D., a psychologist on the clinical faculty of the University of California, San Francisco, and author of For Each Other (Doubleday). The first step in working out these kinds of problems is communicating with each other, but that can be difficult for both men and women. We asked Dr. Barbach to discuss with us some of the thoughts she explores in her book about communicating effectively and solving sexual difficulties.

Q: In your book, you talk about the differences between real sexual problems and problems of expectation. What do you mean?

A: Relationships aren't perfect because people are different, and differences are often a point of conflict. It's important not to try to get rid of differences, but rather to try to see that these differences are not saying something. In other words, if I want less sex than my husband, that doesn't mean that he is undesirable or unlovable, and it doesn't mean that I am inadequate. It means that we're different in this and have to figure out a way to accommodate that difference.

Q: And how do you do that?

A: Compromise. And communication. People have to be careful, by the way, about creating secondary problems to an initial sexual difficulty by not touching and by a lack of intimacy in general because of the fear of its leading to sex . . . and disappointment.

Q: What is the best way to broach the subject?

A: The partner with the concerns should wait until the couple can talk somewhere where it's really going to be quiet and there will be no interruptions — a long car drive, a romantic dinner where they can just talk . . . .

Q: How about in bed?

Q: How do you do that?

A: By focusing on your own feelings rather than your partner's behavior, and saying something like, "I really love you, and I'm concerned that sex is not as good for us as it used to be," or ". . . sex is causing a problem in our relationship," or ". . . the problems we're having might cause us to break up, and I don't know what to do. Here's how I feel about it, and then maybe you can tell me how you feel about it."

You can actually use the sexual difficulty as a way of enhancing the intimacy of the relationship if you talk about it and work on it together. Talking about it is always the first step and often solves the problem altogether. FW

BEEF A LA STROGANOFF

By Marilyn Hansen

It's what every cook needs — an elegant menu that can be made in no time with ingredients you already have on hand or can easily buy. This menu, featuring Beef a la Stroganoff, is one that can be embellished or simplified at will, depending on the specific dining situation. And with a little advance planning, it's a dish that can be made ahead and gently reheated to serve at a buffet.

MENU

Cranberry Consommé
Beef a la Stroganoff
Hot Parsleyed Rice
Steamed Broccoli with Lemon
Mixed Greens Salad
Cheese: Chèvre, l'Explorateur, Baby Swiss
French Bread
Cabernet Sauvignon
Coffee

BEEF A LA STROGANOFF

1½ lbs. flank steak or boneless sirloin
¼ cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons oil
1 cup sliced green onions
4 cups (12 oz.) quartered mushrooms
½ cup dry red wine
2 cups sour cream
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup snipped dill or 1 tablespoon dry dill weed

1. Have meat partially frozen to make it easier to cut across the grain (direction of the muscle fiber) into ¼-inch-wide strips. Cut down the center of each strip into approximately ½-inch-wide pieces. Toss meat with flour.

2. In large skillet or sauté pan, heat half of butter and half of oil until hot, but not smoking. Brown about one-third of the meat strips over high heat; remove from pan. Add remaining butter and oil to pan and brown remaining meat, successively in thirds, removing from pan as it is browned. Add green onions and mushrooms, sauté until wilted and remove.

3. Add wine to pan and heat, stirring to deglaze and scrape up all browned bits from pan bottom. Boil uncovered, 2 to 3 minutes.

4. Reduce heat to low, add sour cream, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, salt, pepper and dill. Heat, stirring until sauce is well-blended. Add meat, green onions and mushrooms and mix; heat just until heated throughout and sauce is piping hot. Taste and season accordingly. Freshly ground black pepper is a good choice here. Serve over buttered noodles, parsleyed rice or wild rice.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

Note: If making the dish ahead of time, put Beef a la Stroganoff into a casserole and cover. Place casserole in a pan filled with 1 inch of hot water. Heat in 350° oven for 1 hour, stirring now and then until piping hot.

Cranberry Consommé: In a saucepan, combine 1 can (10½ oz.) beef consommé, ½ cup water, ¾ cup cranberry juice, 3 peppercorns, 3 juniper berries and ¼ teaspoon rosemary leaves. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer uncovered about 15 minutes. Serve in heated cups, mugs or bowls with a thin slice of lemon floating on the surface.

Makes 4 servings

PEOPLE QUIZ

THE PESSIMIST'S PALATE: FOOD FOR THOUGHT?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most people are unrealistically optimistic about their own future, but pessimistic about the future of others.

2. Most people — whether they're optimists or pessimists — prefer hearing good news before bad news.

3. Optimists and pessimists tend to have different food preferences.

4. The struggles and disappointments in life can turn optimists into pessimists.

5. Pessimism can be hazardous to your health.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a Rutgers University study, more than 300 male and female undergraduates were asked to estimate their own chances of achieving success and happiness compared with what they thought were the chances of their classmates. Overall, subjects seemed to think their own chances of success were significantly greater than the chances of their colleagues.

2. False. A team of behavior scientists at Boston University conducted an experiment on undergraduates in which the students were asked to indicate their preference for hearing good or bad news first. Subjects were told they would be receiving good and bad information about themselves from a personality, social sensitivity or intelligence test. Results showed that both optimists and pessimists overwhelmingly preferred to hear the bad news first, regardless of how bad the news, or how wonderful the good news.

3. True. This was indicated by a study correlating personality traits and food preferences, conducted by a team of psychologists at the University of Exeter (England). Personality characteristics were measured by a specially designed 20-item questionnaire, and a 50-item inventory was used to assess food preferences. It was found that those with pessimistic tendencies "related to a preference for hot pickles and a dislike of raw carrots, watercress and celery. Optimists preferred bland milk foods, fruit puddings, honey, tapioca, bananas and cream."

4. False. Behavioral studies at the University of Chicago have shown that the psychological reaction that occurs when one fails in controlling the outcome of certain events or has one's values undermined by events can have a positive effect in which "confrontation with problems and crises spurs development of a positive philosophy of life that lends meaning and direction to activities, rather than dread and a negative philosophy of life."

Does preference for pickles reveal personality?

5. True. Pessimism breeds defeatism. If you're subject to some form of physical ailment, coping with it will be much more difficult if either you or your doctor takes a negative view of your chances of recovery. In a study conducted by the Nevada Division of Mental Hygiene, "a series of surveys gave 370 psychiatrists, psychologists and physicians (randomly selected from directories) the opportunity to submit samples of 'incurable' disorders. Despite the scientific, logical and practical absurdity of identifying anything as 'incurable,' the majority of the respondents did exactly that — often listing disorders from their own specialization as hopeless." And other studies leave no doubt that if either you or your doctor is pessimistic about the outcome of a health problem, the chances of recovery are definitely limited. FW

MARRY NOW. PAY LATER?

In this mad, mad world, marriages on our continent are breaking up at a frightening rate. One analyst states that out of every ten marriages in the U.S. today, four will end in divorce. No need here to get into a religious debate on divorce. We are all agreed that it is at very least a human tragedy. Even when the separated put on a brave front, there remains a certain anguish over "what might have been."

Getting married is not like buying a car. One can get rid of one car and get another without suffering any soul scars. Not so when one leaves one spouse and goes it alone or takes up with another. Often too, there are children whose suffering at the separation of their parents can affect their whole lives.

Surely, if we have any feeling for the good of society and the happiness of individuals, we ought to do what we can to prevent unwise and premature marriages, and to help prepare those who are planning to marry. As a step in this direction, we are pleased to offer a new pamphlet: "Are You Fit to be Tied?" It has a light touch but a serious message in easy language. Write for your free copy today. No one will call on you.

HOW'S YOUR EYE-Q?

Sure you know carrots can help your vision, but take a look at these eye–openers, provided by the American Optometric Association.

If you know your friend's vision is similar to yours, can you use his glasses in a pinch? Not if you want to see clearly. Your eyes are as individual as your fingerprints, and there's only a one-in-four-trillion chance of two different people having the exact same glasses.

Which creature sees best — a cat, bird, bee or elephant? Birds have just about the best vision of all. If we had the eyesight of a hawk, we could read a newspaper headline a quarter of a mile away.

Why did John Hancock sign his name in large letters on the bottom of the Declaration of Independence? Why else! So aging King George could read it without his glasses.

ONCE AND FUTURE KINGS

Ever wonder how accurate those high school and college yearbook forecasts turn out to be? Did the homecoming queen go to Hollywood. . . or go to seed? Is the Best Athlete a major leaguer or an overweight insurance salesman? According to Dan Carlinsky's new Celebrity Yearbook, featuring school photos and write-ups of the famous, many predictions prove prophetic.

Shirley MacLaine and Bonnie Franklin were judged Most Talented; James Dean was Best Thespian, Best Athlete and Best Artist; John F. Kennedy was chosen Most Likely to Succeed; Pat Boone was Most Popular. Best Looking were Farrah Fawcett, John Davidson and Catfish Hunter; Meryl Streep was Homecoming Queen of her class, John Belushi King of his; and Jack Nicholson was flying over the cuckoo's nest at an early age, being voted Best Actor and Class Clown. Warren Beatty, who had the high school chippies swooning even then, was Best All Around.

WALKING NATURALLY

Infant walkers not only don't help a baby learn how to walk at a younger age, but they can also be dangerous. So reports Marci Ridenour, a senior researcher in Temple University's biokinetics research laboratory.

More than 17,000 infants suffered walker-related injuries in 1981, according to the U.S. Product Safety Commission. Some of the injuries occurred when children fell down the stairs while using the walker, which is typically a four-wheeled framed enclosure with a cloth support, with cutouts for legs.

Ridenour studied 15 sets of twins before they could walk, with one twin in each set using a walker. She found that the onset of walking differed between the two groups by only one day.

Ridenour's advice: "Infants will let you know soon enough when they want help in walking, and a parental assist is preferable, and safer, than a mechanical aid."

VINE NEWS FOR TOMATO LOVERS

Having trouble finding red, ripe and juicy tomatoes? Well, hang on for just a bit, because an exotic tomato strain from Brazil promises to enhance the flavor and improve the storage life of American tomatoes, according to Martha Mutschler, plant-breeding specialist at Cornell.

The new kind of tomato remains fresh for up to 40 days at room temperature, compared to an average tomato, which stays fresh for about nine days.

Unlike its American cousin, the Brazilian tomato refuses to ripen if picked while still green, reports Mutschler. It doesn't produce normal levels of the hormone that enhances ripening of fruits.

Don't look for these tomatoes in your store just yet, though — it'll be at least four years before they're available commercially.

BITING BACK

The bark is not always worse than the bite. Just ask U.S. mail carriers. They suffer more than 6,000 dog bites annually. One postman even died as a result last year.

Bites and related injuries cost the Postal Service about $1.3 million a year in medical expenses and lost work hours. "These costs are passed on in higher postal rates," says Jim van Loozen, a spokesman for the U.S. Postal Service.

Now the service is fighting back with a program that has some teeth in it. Dog warning cards to alert postal workers about homes with potentially dangerous dogs are going out to all post offices.

A letter carrier will note on the card the name (if known) of any "dangerous dog" on his mail route, along with a description and personality characteristics (such as a "sneak-attack type" or "chronic barker"). The card, which will remain in the post office's sorting area, will be a boon to substitute carriers and remind all carriers they legally don't have to deliver the mail if they feel endangered.

Dog owners who refuse to restrain their pets face having to pick up their own mail — in rain, sleet or snow.

YEARS POSE A PROBLEM!

Think you're getting cleverer with years? Here's a test: Abbreviations for four consecutive years beginning with '83 are inserted in the number square above. You are asked to fill 12 empty spaces with the numbers 1 through 12 so that each row, column and corner-to-corner diagonal will total exactly 104.

Remember, the numbers to be inserted are 1-12. No number is repeated. And the sum of four squares across, down and diagonally is exactly 104.

Across: 10, 8, 1, 85. Next: 3, 83, 12, 6. Next: 86, 2, 7, 9. Next: 5, 11, 84, 4.

● IN GENERAL! "All universal judgments are weak, loose, and dangerous." — Montaigne. "All generalizations are _____, including this one." — Alexander Chase. What five-letter word is missing? P.S.: It rhymes with waltz.

● Alley Oop! Four persons decide to go bowling. If each person bowls singly against each of the others just once, how many games will be played?

Six games in all.

● Name Game! Identify famous composers by unscrambling letters: 1. CHAB. 2. DIVER. 3. PINCHO. 4. ZOMART. 5. SATRUSS. 6. CUSHBERT.

1. Bach 2. Verdi 3. Chopin 4. Mozart 5. Strauss 6. Schubert

● Riddle-Me-This! Which exercises are hard-hearted? Callous-thenics. What do you call a police department doctor? A P.D.-atrician. How do you send a message to the north side of a tree? Via moss code.

COVER CHARGE! Add the following colors neatly to enhance the winter scene above: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh tones. 6—Dk. green. 7—Dk. brown. 8—Dk. blue.

THE LAST LEG IS THE PASSAGE OVER OPEN SEA, BUT EVEN FISHING BOATS HAVE BEEN PRESSED INTO SERVICE BY THE ADMIRALS. ARN IS UNDAUNTED. BY A LONELY COVE NEAR ANTIOCH HE FINDS WHAT HE IS LOOKING FOR: SMUGGLERS.

"WHY SHOULD I BRING YOU TO THE MISTY ISLES," THE RINGLEADER ASKS EVILLY, "WHEN I CAN HOLD YOU ALL FOR RANSOM?" ARN RETURNS THE SMILE. "BECAUSE," HE SAYS,

"YOU DO NOT WANT YOUR ARM BROKEN IN FIVE PLACES. AND WHEN WE ARRIVE, I WILL LET YOU SELL YOUR SMUGGLED GOODS AT MARKET WITHOUT TAX."

UPON LEARNING THAT ARN'S MOTHER IS THE QUEEN, THE CAPTAIN AGREES. AND SO IT HAPPENS THAT A STRAY SHIP APPEARS BEYOND THE MOLE. BY THE SAIL ALETA'S COMMANDERS KNOW IT IS A CORSAIR SHIP AND MOVE OUT TO INTERCEPT. MOMENTS AFTER CONTACT THE SWIFTEST VESSEL RACES BACK TO PORT WITH JOYOUS NEWS.

ARN IS IGNORED BY EVERYONE. THE FAMILY HAS EYES ONLY FOR THE RED-HAIRED BUNDLE IN JUDITH'S ARMS. NERVOUSLY QUEEN ALETA REACHES FOR THE BOY, BUT HE CLINGS TO JUDITH. "HIS NAME IS NATHAN," ARN SAYS. "FOR THE MOMENT," IS ALETA'S CURT REPLY. JUDITH AND THE QUEEN FIX EACH OTHER WITH ICY STARES. THEY ARE GIRDING FOR BATTLE.
