Blinson Given Authority To Meet Cuts

JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night voted to give Superintendent Delma Blinson authority to take necessary steps to meet the tight budget situation created by cuts in state funds.

In a report to the board on the recently announced 2 percent cut in the State Board of Education's 1982-83 budget, Blinson pointed out that Gov. Jim Hunt "does not want any cuts in the personnel budget. Since state funds allocated to Greenville city schools has 96 percent of the amount tied up in personnel budget items, this means that all other items constitute only 4 percent of state money allocated to us."

Noting that if the 2 percent cut has to come from general expense funds, a situation could develop in which it might become necessary to replace rescinded state funds in that category.

Items allocated to the general expense budget from state funds for the current fiscal year amount to $235,595 — (Energy, $114,527; instructional supplies, $74,213; vocational supplies, $32,789, and other items, $14,066).

Overall state funds allocated to Greenville schools is $6,253,508. Two percent of that total is $125,070. By subtracting the $125,070 from the $235,595 general expense budget, that leaves $110,525 theoretically available for this category of funds.

However, as of Monday, the unappropriated fund balance in the general expense budget from state funds stands at $97,821. Technically, by subtracting the $97,821 on hand from the $110,525 figure representing the called-for 2 percent cut in this area, it can be interpreted to mean that the general expense budget is already in arrears in the amount of $12,704, with more than five months to go in the current fiscal year ending June 30.

"It is a crisis situation," Blinson commented, pointing out that there will still be a need for additional energy costs and necessary instructional and custodial supplies that normally would come from the state-allocated general expense fund.

In an effort to resolve the budget situation, board members authorized Blinson to act on his five-point recommendation to try to cope with the problems involved.

The recommendations presented by Blinson were:

(1) Freeze purchases and expenditures on state and local funds which may be necessary to replace rescinded state funds.

(2) Curtail personnel costs by any action not in violation of the State Board of Education's policy of Jan. 5. (The policy on not cutting in personnel areas).

(3) Adjust individual line items subject to current laws and regulations and subsequent approval of budget amendments; provided, no such adjustments would cause a deficit within (Please turn to Page 2)

Moving The Depot

GETTING READY FOR A MOVE — Workmen of J.W. Lander movers prepare a part of the Seaboard System's freight station in Winterville to be moved to the Eagles Homestead at the Pitt County Fairgrounds. John Landen, spokesman for the company, said only about 60 feet, starting from the front, of the station will be moved. Preparations were made today and the actual move will not take place for a two weeks. Landen said the weight of the section being moved will be about 90,000 pounds. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Pitt's Tobacco Allotment Leased By County Board

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Board of Commissioners leased the county's 38,015-pound tobacco allotment Monday for $30,492 — more than 80 cents a pound — and rented 106.3 acres of cropland for $5,952.80.

Johnny Harris was the high bidder — at $56 per acre — for the farmland, which includes 79 acres at the county farm near Bell's Fork, 6.5 acres of cleared land near Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and 20.8 acres of land near Pitt Community College.

The tobacco was leased in nine 4,000-pound lots and one 2,015-pound section.

Six of the 4,000-pound lots and the 2,015-pound offering were leased for 80 cents a pound (12,015 pounds to Glenn Loftin, and 4,000 pounds each to Alton Joyner, Roman Buck and Robert Earl James), while the remainder of the poundage was leased at 81 cents per pound (12,000 pounds to James Little).

Before the bidding began, commissioners announced that the county would pay the 7 cents per pound fee required by the no-cost tobacco program when quotas are moved off the land.

Traditionally, leasing of the county-owned tobacco quota and land serve as a guideline in the leasing of other quota and land in the county. The price of quota has increased this year as a result of the 7-cent assessment levied on allotment holders, the 10 percent cut in over-all quota and the rising support level for tobacco.

The no-cost program levies the 7-cent assessment on allotment holders only when the quota is transferred to another farm. Individual growers also pay a 7-cent assessment when the tobacco is sold.

In other business Monday, commissioners received a written report from Greenville schools indicating that between $3,000 and $5,000 worth of repairs will have to be made to the Fullilove School building on Chestnut Street if the facility is to be operated for the 1983-84 school year.

The report also said if the building is to be used as a school facility in the future, a major renovation, estimated to cost $300,000, will be needed.

The board also reappointed members to the Board of Health, the Domiciliary Home Community Advisory Committee, the Pitt County Development Commission, the SBA Certified Development Co., the Pitt County Industrial Facilities and Pollution Control Commission and the Nursing Home Advisory Committee, and named Ephraim Smith to the Pitt Community College board of Trustees.

'Thaw' In Hunt's N.C. Budget Policy Paper

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt today proposed that the General Assembly lift the freeze on state employees' and teachers' salaries, spend more for math and science instruction and expand Medicaid contributions in the 1983-85 budget.

The budget is based on predictions that the economy will begin to show signs of recovery in 1983. Budget officials say the biggest risk is if the recovery fails to begin as early as they predict.

Next year's proposed budget includes $6.182 billion in total spending, 14.5 percent more than this year's $5.91 billion. The proposed 1984-85 budget is $6.373 billion.

Special budget provisions ask the General Assembly to find money to match federal highway funds, repair and renovate state facilities and increase the travel allowance for state employees.

Hunt also recommends that private colleges and universities be allowed to submit funding requests directly to the governor, instead of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Legislators were to receive a copy of the budget and a written message from Hunt today. The governor, with advice from the 12-member Advisory Budget Commission, prepares the budget for action by the General Assembly.

The 1983-84 budget is based on estimates that general tax revenues will grow 8.8 percent, to $3.553 billion. That does not include highway funding, federal funding or other agency revenues.

No revenue predictions were made for 1984-85 and spending was set just high enough to cover continuing expenses and lift the salary freeze.

"A sustained recovery in automobiles and housing should set the stage for a general economic revival beginning in 1983," the prepared budget said. But the document stipulates that the state's economy is not expected "to show much improvement during the initial stages of the national turnaround."

Officials say two positive economic indicators — the downward trend in interest rates and the increased sales of new cars and homes — influenced the 1983-85 revenue projections.

The budget predicts that revenue growth for 1982-83 will be 5.9 percent by the year's end, far short of the predicted 8.9 percent, and there will be $900,000 left with which to begin 1983-84.

Traditionally the budget is divided in three parts — money for continuing existing programs; for expanding services, adding new services or increasing (Please turn to Page 2)

Greenville school board members Monday night approved a first reading of a policy paper covering "Reduction in Force — Certified Personnel." Personnel in the "certified" category are teachers.

The purpose of the policy is to provide guidelines "in the event of the loss of funding, declining enrollments, program changes, or revision of the school system's goals and priorities it is necessary to reduce the number of certified positions..."

All policy papers adopted by the school board require a first and second reading before a policy becomes official. The second reading of the "Reduction in Force — Certified Personnel" will be held at the second February school board meeting on Feb. 21.

On Feb. 14, the date of the first school board meeting for February (which is a change from the regular first Monday date the board normally meets), public participation by liaison committee members, members of NCAE and other interested groups or persons is being encouraged to provide input and suggestions for final formulation of the policy.

The preliminary policy position presented to school board members Monday entails four principal criteria on which reduction decisions will be based. Briefly, these criteria are ones of: seniority in the system; professional standing; training and certification, and performance. At this point, no specific priority or weight each criterion will carry has been determined. This will be established at the time of the final reading.

After adoption of the policy, a set of rules and regulations to operate the policy will be drawn up and presented to the board for action.

In other matters, the board:

- Approved four budget amendments. These are: A State Public School Fund amendment representing an increase of $16,751 in special instruction programs and business support services; Federal Fund Amendment No. 2, representing an increase of $6,449 in pupil support services; Current Expense Budget Amendment No. 3, an increase of $60,733 in regular and special instructional services and regular community services; and Capital Outlay Budget Amendment No. 3 for $3,000, to cover the previously approved outlay for band equipment.

- Approved, with appreciation expressed, a proposal from the staff of the ECU Medical School to provide identification services for medical consultations of children in the Greenville City Schools.

- Voted against sending two delegates to the National (Please turn to Page 10)

MADE UP HERE?

According to Ralph Kimmel, executive director of the N.C. Principals' Association, a bill passed in 1982 by the N.C. Legislature stated that up to five days missed due to hazardous weather or other disaster do not have to be made up by students and employees. Will the Pitt County and Greenville schools abide by this? L.H.

A spokesperson for Greenville schools said the city Board of Education voted Oct. 4, 1982, to go ahead and use any snow days already worked into the school calendar and then to look at the situation again if the need to miss more days arises. It's thought that this would be unlikely due to this area's history of minimal snowfall and other weather conditions that would warrant schools being closed, she said.

Tom Craft, associate superintendent of the Pitt County schools, said virtually the same thing: that it's believed that this will not be an issue in Pitt County since "snow days" are already incorporated in the school calendar. If it were to, however, it would have to be looked at again by the board.

It should be made clear that the legislation stated that local boards of education may excuse students and employees for up to five days used for bad weather, but not that they have to. The final decision-making was left to local boards.

Lawmakers Say Budget Posing A Big Challenge

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Gov. Jim Hunt's budget message to the General Assembly Monday poses "quite a challenge for all of us," Pitt County's Rep. Ed Warren said this morning.

Warren said the governor "showed good vision in what he is trying to do. The concept is good ... I support the things he is trying to do. There's a lot of depth in what he was saying."

But Warren, and Pitt's senior representative, Sam Bundy, said the availability of money is the key issue.

"All the proposals are good, provided we find the funds to do what he (the governor) wants," Warren said. "I haven't found anybody yet who is ready to propose any additional taxes."

"His speech was all right if we can find the money for it," Bundy said. "His speech was good, and I don't know of anything the state doesn't need, but some of it we simply will not be able to fund."

Bundy said that while Hunt received "some applause during the speech," the response from the members of the General Assembly "was not the number of times or the intensity" which the governor has received in the past.

"I agree with the fact that we should take the freeze (on state wages) if we can," Bundy said, but "some things we will not be able to fund. It all comes down to May, when we see what we've got to do with."

Rep. John Gilliam of Windsor, who represents Pitt's Bethel and Carolina townships in the House, said:

"I feel like the speech and the budget presented to us is a package for urban North Carolina. Rural North Carolina and agriculture once again have not been given a top priority."

Gilliam said Hunt's speech was "really good."

"I agree with some of the things he said," Gilliam said. "I think all North Carolinians must remember that we're dealing with an economically depressed time, and it's very difficult to do everything we want to do."

Gilliam continued, "I really believe North Carolina is fortunate to have to have a balanced budget. It's times such as this that causes deficit spending and we cannot spend more than we take in. I'm glad to be a part of a General Assembly that's (Please turn to Page 10)

Jobs, Schools Targeted In 'State Of State'

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt targeted jobs and schools in his State of the State speech Monday night as areas that will receive a lot of attention during his last two years in office.

"The people of North Carolina need good jobs," Hunt told members of the House, Senate, Council of State, cabinet, Supreme Court and Appeals Court as they crowded into the House chamber. "They need good paychecks. Their children need a good education."

He said his 1983-85 budget, which he described as "the most austere North Carolina has seen in a decade," will outline a 10-step plan for preparing public school students to work in a high-technology economy.

Hunt repeated his call for lifting the freeze on salaries for state workers and teachers but reiterated his previous statements that he opposes tax increases for granting the raise. The only tax increase he said he could support is one on alcoholic beverages to generate money for highways.

"We cannot afford to let our hard-earned tax dollars that we send to Washington go to build roads in other states," Hunt said.

The budget and a written message from the governor was to be presented to legislators this morning.

Some legislators were skeptical Monday night that Hunt could find enough money to carry out the goals he outlined.

"The numbers don't make sense," said Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba. "He wants to expand education and increase math and science courses. He can't do it all by increasing the alcohol tax."

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, a budget leader, said he doesn't know how the Legislature can lift the salary freeze. "He's putting the burden on our shoulders" to find the money, Jordan said.

It was Hunt's fourth State of the State address during his six years as governor. In the 45-minute speech which was interrupted 11 times by applause, he reported on his administration's past achievements and future ambitions.

The 10-step educational plan outlined by Hunt calls for: — Continuing a reading program in kindergarten through the third grade.

— Retraining instructors who are teaching math and science without certification in those subjects. In 1980-81, (Please turn to Page 2) about 40 percent of the math teachers in grades 7-12 were teaching "out-of-field" compared to 29 percent in science.

- Recruiting math and science teachers with a scholarship program.
- Paying some high school math and science teachers for an additional six weeks employment.
- Establishing model math and science projects in elementary or secondary schools.
- Gradually increasing minimum standards for passing the competency test and consider putting science questions on the test.
- Approving proposals to increase high school graduation requirements from 18 to 20 units.
- Implementing a North Carolina Scholars Program to give recognition to students who complete a more rigorous high school curriculum.
- Increasing the number of math and science courses required for college admission.
- Continuing to build the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics.

"All of North Carolina, led by its governor and General Assembly, must make a new commitment to excellence in education," Hunt said. "We ought to hold up good teachers and good principals and good schools as examples. We ought to recognize their accomplishments and issue a challenge for excellence."

Hunt also called for more commitment to provide jobs for North Carolinians. He said he would ask legislators to strengthen skills training in community colleges by spending more money on equipment and would sign an executive order soon setting out a job-training policy for the state.

He said he'll seek money to continue efforts to attract high-technology industries to the state, including continuing support for the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina.

He defended his past spending record despite cutbacks this year to avoid a $150 million shortfall and criticized lawmakers in Washington for failing to keep their budget in line.

He said some people "will claim that North Carolina's progress has come at too high a price, with too much spending and hiring.... The fact is that while some people in Washington talk about balancing the budget, we in North Carolina do it."

Other areas of concern mentioned by Hunt were a crackdown on drunken drivers, disposal of hazardous wastes, maintenance of strong environmental laws and more support for community mental health programs.

that fund.

(4) Call for voluntary curtailment of all non-essential expenditures by principals, teachers and staff.

(5) Monitor the fiscal status monthly and report to the board and/or County Commissioners any necessary action to comply with the 2 percent mandate.

Blinson said it may come to the point where the board "may have to say specific actions are needed, for example, (and) we may have to go to the County Commissioners to ask for supplemental funds or seek other alternatives."

Commenting on the superintendents' conference held in Raleigh last week in which State Board of Education officials discussed the 2 percent cut, Blinson said the formula adopted at the state level "does not mean necessarily that each local school unit will receive 98 percent of its allotment. Some will get less, some more. But, collectively, the 143 school systems must spend 2 percent less than budgeted."

State Budget...

employee benefits; and for construction; renovations or land purchase.

The only item in the expansion part of the budget is $95.9 million in 1983-84 and $207.1 million in 1984-85 for lifting the salary freeze.

There is no money provided for capital expenditures.

Hunt said the top priority in the budget is lifting the freeze on state employees' and teachers' salaries. The freeze was instituted July 1, 1982, as a cost-cutting measure.

If the freeze is lifted, almost all teachers would get automatic pay increments and between one-half and two-thirds of the state employees would get merit pay increases.

The greatest portion of the budget, about 58 percent, would be spent on elementary, secondary and higher education.

There is $1.8 million a year for training teachers in math and science, $11 million a year for elementary textbooks, $13 million a year for replacing school buses and $30 million over the two-year period for school and institutional utility bills.

The budget also provides increases to give the community colleges $10 million a year for equipment and $4.1 million a year for new industry training as part of Hunt's emphasis on training workers for high-technology jobs.

In addition, there is $17.3 million in 1983-85 for operating the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina and buying equipment for the facility.

The Department of Human Resources is the next largest category in the budget, with $67.7 million the first year and $137.8 million the second year for increased medical costs under the Medicaid program.

Other social programs include about $3 million a year for "Willie M." children, youngsters who suffer from emotional or mental problems accompanied by violent behavior.

There is about $1.8 million a year for defending poor people in court and $4.5 million a year for operating new prison units.

The budget omits federal funds for highways under the assumption that the state will be unable to match them. North Carolina needs $52.5 million the first year and $54.9 million the second year to match $264.5 million in federal funds.

Hunt recommended in his State of the State speech Monday that legislators raise the alcoholic beverage tax to generate money for matching federal funds. He offered no specifics.

The governor also is urging the General Assembly to find money to fill $142 million in requests for repairing or renovating state buildings and to use continuation budget money to increase state employees' travel allowances from $35 to $42 per day for in-state travel and $45 to $52 per day for out-of-state travel.

To avoid budget confrontations, the governor is recommending that private colleges and universities appeal for more money directly to the governor. In the past the private schools have taken budget requests to the UNC Board of Governors, which has been hesitant to ask for more money for the private institutions.

Revenue for the Highway Fund is estimated to be $8.1 million higher by the end of the current fiscal year than estimated because gasoline consumption did not decline as much as anticipated. The fund is expected to drop $2.5 million or .5 percent in 1983-84 and increase $0.5 million in 1984-85.

Goldsboro Suit Gets Underway

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for Wayne County schools say evidence in a desegregation lawsuit being heard in U.S. District Court will show the board wants to "preserve the community school structure."

Testimony in the suit began Monday before U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree.

In their suit, Goldsboro schools claim the Wayne County school board has promoted a racially dual system of education in the county by refusing to merge or make boundary line changes.

The city school board says that's in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

But the Wayne County school board said it has no control over population changes which are responsible for the schools' racial makeup.

Alfred Lindseth of Atlanta, the county board's attorney, said evidence would show the county wanted to "preserve the community school structure." He said the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled "there's nothing wrong with that."

The Goldsboro city school board said the refusal by Wayne County schools to merge is discriminatory.

"The Goldsboro system's 77 percent black student population is the sole reason no merger has taken place," said James Fuller, an attorney representing the Goldsboro City Board of Education.

Goldsboro Superintendent Kenneth Brinson testified Monday that the city schools have gone from 9,051 students, 53 percent of them white, in 1965 to a system of 4,871 students with 77 percent of them black in 1983.

The Wayne County schools are 32 percent black.

The trial could take three to five weeks and involve 60 witnesses. It has already cost the Goldsboro system $90,000 and the Wayne County system $252,700 in legal expenses.

The outcome of the case could have implications for surrounding counties with predominantly black city systems and predominantly white county systems.

See No Basis For Dam Alarm

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — A report saying that a break in a debris dam at the foot of Mount St. Helens could bury towns in mud up to 40 miles away should not be cause for alarm, officials say.

"The study confirmed for us what we suspected the scenario would look like," said Hugh Fowler, state director of emergency services, after the federal report was released Monday. But he added, "The likelihood of a breakout is very, very small."

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has been pumping water out of Spirit Lake to keep its level below the rim of the dam, which was formed by the deadly eruption of Mount St. Helens on May 18, 1980.

Will Investigate Higher Prices

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis says the state will investigate whether retailers are raising prices illegally now that the state's container-deposit law has taken effect.

There were about 100 telephone calls to the state attorney general's office Monday, the day the law went into effect, most with complaints of higher prices. Some store owners also cited an increased workload.

The refundable deposit is 5 cents for cans or bottles under a quart and 10 cents for larger containers.

Ruled 'Exempt' From Lawsuits

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The government is exempt from lawsuits prompted by the Army's mock germ warfare attack off San Francisco in 1952, a federal appeals court has ruled.

In upholding a ruling by a U.S. district judge, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday dismissed a $300,000 suit filed by the family of Edward Nevin, 75, who died of heart muscle inflammation.

The suit said Nevin was killed by bacteria released in the tests conducted to determine how winds would carry poisons released off the coast. The government said the tests were harmless.

In its appeal, the Nevin family conceded that immunity covered the test, but not the choice of bacterium.

Mail Booklets On Radiation

MIAMI (AP) — More than 100,000 booklets explaining how to deal with radiation emergencies are going to post offices serving communities within 10 miles of the St. Lucie and Turkey Point nuclear power plants.

The booklet, "Emergency Measures," includes emergency telephone numbers, early warning methods and evacuation route maps for Dade, Monroe, St. Lucie and Martin counties, said Joan Geggen, secretary of the state Department of Veteran and Community Affairs.

TO THE JURY

ROME (AP) — The trial of 63 Red Brigades members charged with the kidnapping of former Premier Aldo Moro and a host of other crimes has gone to the jury. The panel of 12 men and women was expected to take a week to reach their verdicts.

Teacher 'Preaches' Writing Process Method At School

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "OK, what do you know? What are the facts? What are you trying to say?"

Donald H. Graves barks out the questions, sounding like a latter-day Hildy Johnson. But Graves doesn't operate out of the city room of "The Front Page," and his questions aren't aimed at hard-nosed reporters, but apple-cheeked first-graders.

The genial, bespectacled Graves is a college professor who has spent several years in grammar school classrooms exploring how children ages 6 to 8 learn to write.

He's a leading apostle for what is called the "writing process method" of teaching writing, which has filtered into classrooms across the United States, as well as schools in England and Australia.

It involves early, frequent practice at writing, with children spending days, perhaps weeks, writing and revising drafts of a single essay, then "publishing" it in booklet form for classmates to read and criticize. The method, he says, works with students of all ages, although it is harder to do in high schools where class time is more rigid and the "writers" may be set in their ways.

"Six-year-olds can change on a dime," says Graves, a professor of early childhood education and director of the Writing Process Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire in Durham. He is the author of a new book, "Writing: Teachers and Children At Work."

"Children want to write. They want to write the first day they attend school," Graves insists. "This is no accident. Before they went to school they marked up walls, pavements, newspapers with crayons, chalk, pens or pencils — anything that makes a mark. The child's marks say, 'I am.'"

Ninety percent of children come to school thinking they know how to write, compared with only 15 percent who think they can read, Graves told a reporter during the recent convention of the National Council of Teachers of English, which gave him its top research award.

Six-year-olds "do an enormous amount of writing. ... As soon as a kid knows six consonants he can write," says Graves. "Any six will do. For instance, a kid might write: 'I W T STR' — 'I went to the store.' They begin to write the way they begin to speak if we let them," says Graves.

He thinks teachers should keep the caps on their red pens and not underline every spelling or punctuation mistake in a child's first draft. Instead, Graves urges teachers to confer with each student and draw the child out about the topic.

"If you drive a person hard for the facts and ordering those facts toward meaning, in the long run you take care of the grammar. There's nothing more ungrammatical than a rough first draft," says Graves.

"It's the writing process approach to writing: you don't get it right the first time. Traditionally in American education, the 'dummies' had to do it twice, which really was just copying it over for neatness and correction. The bright kids who really needed to be pushed on their information and the way they say it, they got by," says Graves.

In his book, he derides this as putting "a good manicure on the corpse. Change the spelling, make the penmanship more presentable, take out any heinous punctuation mistakes. But don't change the information."

Graves, 52, has been an educator for 26 years, starting as a reading teacher in Fairhaven, Mass., where "I couldn't wait to bring Tolstoy to 13-year-olds. ... Although I loved literature, I made the children feel unworthy to read from the elite. When I taught writing, my objective was to stamp out sin and to correct every error on children's papers. I helped the children to have both literature and writing."

He became a principal, spent eight years as education director for the Hamburg, N.Y., Presbyterian Church, worked on education programs for an Indian reservation in upstate New York, and then on bilingual education before writing his doctorate in 1973 on how children write.

The National Institute of Education provided $240,000 to allow Graves and colleagues from the University of New Hampshire to spend three years in the Atkinson, N.H., Academy, a public school, observing how 16 children learned to write.

Graves believes that children suffer through some of the same blocks and dry spells that professional writers often moan about. He says teachers and parents should expect that, "Occasionally a child's work will go downhill. In the course of a year a normal writer of any age will go through four of five dry periods and one or two tailspins."

For the child, "the first struggle is the code, to get it down so someone else can read it; then he gets blocks at the point of spelling, then on how to arrange it, then on how to choose a topic."

Graves says the Atkinson pupils "are popping the cork on their reading scores."

"They become assertive, not only as readers, but as human beings. We've got to have more of that because there are too many shuffling learners out there who just think they know nothing," says Graves.

"We're always looking for what a kid can't do. ... But we've got to find out what it is that kids can do and work from there."

Dear Abby

Wife Is Not Hubby's Mother

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't believe the advice you gave "Not His Mother," who objected to being called "Mamma" by her husband. You said, "It's a loving title. Cherish it."

Abby, this is 1983! I am the mother of two little boys, ages 2 and 5, and all I hear all day long is "Mommy this" and "Mommy that." The last thing I want to hear is my 29-year-old husband calling me "Mommy." I'm too young to have a 29-year-old son.

Whatever happened to "Darling," "Sweetheart," "Honey," and whatever her name is? I'd even settle for "Toots" or "Babe."

CALL ME SANDRA

DEAR SANDRA: My mail has been running 100-to-1 against "Mamma." The consensus: The only name that's worse is "my old lady."

DEAR ABBY: I was appalled that you saw nothing wrong with a man calling his wife "Mamma." Women in our society are continually identified as somebody's wife or somebody's mother rather than as people in their own right.

When a man refers to his wife as "Mamma" instead of Jane or Margaret, etc., he is saying, "She is not a person, she is only the mother of my children."

You should have told that husband to shape up, shut up or ship out!

COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: "Not His Mother" wrote: "My husband calls me 'Mamma' and I hate it."

Your advice, Abby, was: "Change your attitude; Mamma is a loving title — one that you should cherish. Accept it as a compliment."

Abby, my dictionary says that mamma means "mother." It also says it is a term used by a child.

It may be too late for "Not His Mother," but I am a newlywed, and if my husband ever calls me "Mamma," I might just send him back to his!

next month, and David has to find a new roommate. He says he will accept either a male or a female. (The apartment has two bedrooms.)

I told him I do not want him living with a girl. He says if he does, there will not be anything between them, and I will just have to trust him.

Abby, I don't think I could handle his having a female roommate. He says he loves me and I don't want to lose him, but how can I be sure nothing will happen between him and his new roommate if she's a woman?

IN LOVE WITH DAVID

DEAR IN LOVE: Many men and women share living quarters without becoming romantically involved. In any case, his next roommate may not be a woman, so don't worry about something that may never happen.

Thoughts of a mother who is driving home from a driver's test with a daughter who just got her license.

I've had a good life. An education. Married a man I loved. Gave birth to children. Have an automatic washer. All my own teeth. Came within ¼ inch of sideswiping that patrol car. What more could I ask?

If I keep the seat belt on, I won't go through the windshield. On the other hand, if I want to get out in a hurry, I'm trapped. How can she see that dog when the radio is on so loud?

It's going to be nice having a teenager who drives. Sending her to the store for me. Picking up the boys at baseball. Taking in the cleaning. I'll have time to loll around on the phone talking to the police, checking the hospitals ... the tow trucks ... our insurance man.

Somehow, she doesn't look like the same sweet innocent who climbed into the car this morning. She looks like Bonnie speeding to meet Clyde. First the license, then it's cigars.

Detroit sits up there trying to improve their hubcaps. Why don't they put a brake on the passenger side of the car? Fifty million mothers would thank them. Are you listening, Detroit? I want to open my eyes, but I can't.

If I were a well woman, it would be different. People think I am strong, but I have fluttery innards. If we meet another car on this road I am going to spit up.

Maybe if I hummed. My throat is dry. Maybe if I tapped my feet. My legs! I can't move my legs! It's just a muscle spasm. I've got to relax.

So where's big shot when his daughter is driving his car home? He's in an air-conditioned office. He doesn't care what happens to me. Land in a ditch. Just so there's a casserole in the oven.

She's driving wide open! Or is that the gas gauge? Whatever, she's going too fast. It's all her father's fault. He's the one who gave her confidence. I said wait till she's 35. Has some responsibility, something to live for, but no ...

Those poor devils who work for the highway department. They should be making $50,000 a year. As for driver's ed teachers, they have to be pill poppers. Otherwise, how could they climb into those cars every day with

A Babble Of Tongues

The resignation of Arms Control chief Eugene V. Rostow last week created an uproar in Washington, and well it should.

Rostow was apparently forced out by some Senate conservatives and major questions were raised by respected observers of government as to whether President Reagan is really in control of the administrative processes.

Rostow resigned to vent his anger over the constant battling between some senators and his top assistants concerning the way he was conducting the nation's arms policy.

It was reportedly a very cool departure between Rostow and the White House.

The situation is a dangerous and embarrassing one for the Reagan administration. Arms negotiations are at a very sensitive stage at this point given the change in leadership in Moscow. Yet the controversy over the change is signaling the Soviets, as well as our allies, that there is confusion in the American camp. This is hardly the way to carry out negotiations.

The president and some of his supporters have made a case for a strong military as being essential to any arms negotiations. They may be right and the president is heeding the advice of a predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, who suggested carrying a big stick. President Reagan should also remember that the "big stick" words were predicated by "speak softly." On arms control the Reagan administration is now speaking with a babble of tongues.

Make Way For Fire Units

City firemen responded promptly to a major fire which destroyed a warehouse on May Street near West End Circle last week.

The local fire units were backed up by rural fire fighting units which were called in by prearranged plan.

There was a problem, however, the usual one of heavy traffic racing to the scene and hampering the fire fighting efforts.

Fire Chief Jenness Allen said

there was a major traffic problem. "We had trouble getting fire units in there where we wanted them because of the traffic."

It is natural for the public to want to see what is going on when a fire of this magnitude breaks out at midday. Everyone should bear in mind, however, that the first priority is to get fire and emergency units on the scene promptly. It means the difference in saving property or, perhaps, lives.

THIS AFTERNOON

More Difficult?

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — In 1971, the state of North Carolina adopted a new Constitution. Several years of study and a couple hundred yers of experience had gone into the document — a combination you'd have thought would guarantee that the constitution would be left alone for awhile. But since the new Constitution was adopted, the legislature has approved 19 constitutional amendments and sent them to the voters for ratification. Only four of those amendments have been defeated.

The Committee for Constitutional Integrity thinks the legislature has done enough toying with the constitution. The committee, a wide-ranging body of private citizens, former and present officeholders and academics, is an outgrowth of Tom Gilmore's "Keep the Two-Year Term Committee" which last year successfully fought four-year terms for legislators. The committee has endorsed a series of proposals that will make it more difficult to get a constitutional amendment on the ballot.

The committee has formally endorsed two proposals which Gilmore has previously advocated. If a constitutional amendment is to go to the voters, the committee feels the vote should be taken during the November statewide general elections. This way, the greatest number of voters will decide the issue. They also want the state to make a special effort to explain the amendment to the voters. The news from the committee's January meeting was a proposal to make it more difficult to get an amendment on the ballot in the first place. Now, three-fifths of each house must approve a constitutional amendment before it can go to a public vote. Under the committee's proposal, a two-thirds vote would be needed.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

Now it takes 72 representatives and 30 senators. If this proposal became law, 80 representatives and 34 senators would be needed to send an amendment along. Had that standard been in effect in 1981, the proposed constitutional amendment on longer legislative terms wouldn't have passed the assembly.

The change would bring the state into line with the federal Constitution and the constitutions of 14 other states.

Gilmore sees "degree of difficulty" as the issue. How difficult do we want to make the amendment process? He contends that there have been far too many constitutional changes approved in the past 15 years and he wants the process slowed down.

But others see the question centering on the state's ability to adapt to a changing world. They say the process is already slow enough. Oliver Williams, a political science professor at N.C. State University, asked if slowing down the process wasn't an outdated 18th century sentiment that didn't work well in modern times. Reps. Mary Seymour of Greensboro and Bertha "B" Holt of Burlington, both veterans of the amendment process, said the process already allows for plenty of deliberation.

Mrs. Holt noted that 72 representatives voting for an amendment often represents far more than three-fifths of

Other Editors Say Man Of Ideas

(Asheboro Courier Tribune)

This is by no means an endorsement, but the more we read about Tom Gilmore, the more we like what he's saying. Mr. Gilmore's chances of winning the governorship are not the best right now, but even if he falls short, he will perform a public service if he is able to popularize some of his ideas.

In the wake of his successful fight against the four-year term for legislators, Mr. Gilmore is active in two organizations. One is designed to look into the separation of powers issue in North Carolina; the other aims to promote Mr. Gilmore all the way to the governor's mansion.

Along with most everyone else we'll consider that second one in a year or two. The first one interests us greatly.

In an interview with Jack Lail of The Courier-Tribune, Mr. Gilmore, a former legislator and former Liberty resident, explained his interest in separation of powers:

"We need to make government simple. I think we can best do that by keeping the branches separate and distinct."

Indeed, he notes that the N.C. Constitution mandates as much: The legislative, executive and supreme judicial powers of the state government shall be forever separate and distinct from each other.

Unfortunately, that is not the case. So many legislators wound up on administrative groups by legislative appointment that the courts have had to intervene. And the Advisory Budget Commission, the granddaddy of indistinct government, is still operating freely.

That simply must be changed. And Tom Gilmore has put together a group which may push the state toward constitutional compliance by its own diversity. He has managed to put David Stedman and Mickey Michaux, among others, under the same tent, no small accomplishment in itself.

Beyond the separation question, Mr. Gilmore is also pushing these ideas:

He wants the constitution amended only at November elections. This is a notion we've been promoting for some time and we are pleased it has his attention.

He would like to establish some kind of clearinghouse to determine whether proposed legislation is constitutional. The gubernatorial veto serves that function in most states, but he is not going that far.

When constitutional amendments are proposed, he wants to make someone responsible for explaining them to the public. Hear! Hear!

CENTRAL FIGURE IN ANY ARMS NEGOTIATIONS!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Watt's Side Of Story

WASHINGTON — James G. Watt, the eternally embattled secretary of the interior, turned up recently on "Meet the Press."

His purpose was to defend his stewardship, and to insist that the nation's parks and public lands are better managed than ever before.

It may be so. Then, again, it may not be so, but it is not necessary to buy every puff and boast in Watt's annual report to suggest that he is entitled to be heard. For the past two years he has been on the receiving end of an unremitting barrage of vilification from environmentalist groups. Such well-heeled outfits as the Sierra Club, Audubon Society, Friends of the Earth and the Wilderness Society retain skilled publicists; they have easy access to sympathetic media. Watt has taken a terrible beating.

Looking back over the past two years, I am inclined to the view that Watt has been drubbed more for the things he said — and the way in which he has said them — than for the things he actually has done. It is an interesting fact of life that some women (and, I suppose, some men) are just naturally sexy; they exude a certain attraction. In the same way, at least in the eyes of the professional conservationists, Watt is just naturally obnoxious; he evokes the kind of instant antagonism that produces apoplectic palpitations. Richard Nixon had the same dubious gift.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Thus, when Watt sounds off about "taking the padlock off the resources owned by all Americans," he raises apprehensions that he intends to give away the national store. When he takes a poke at "the privileged few" who want to preserve wilderness areas solely for those with money enough and time enough to hike around in their Gucci boots, he gets the saliva flowing.

Watt has been berated unmercifully, by way of example, for opening up large areas of the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) for oil and gas leasing. In one view, the allegation is absolutely true. Over the past two years the department has leased a little more than 4 million acres of OCS tracts to petroleum prospectors; it is an immense crease over preceding years. But the OCS comprises 1 billion acres, of which only 13 million acres are actually under lease. The tracts leased under Watt's administration are a tiny patch on the whole, and the leases have produced $17.5 billion in sorely needed revenues.

Recent leases of federally owned coal deposits ought similarly to be put in perspective. The past two years have seen 118,600 acres leased, more than double the acreage leased in the preceding nine years put together. But in the days of Lyndon Johnson, when Stewart Udall was secretary, the department leased 98,100 acres in 1967 and another 164,200 acres in 1968. The charge that Watt has been reckless and irresponsible is not easily sustained.

Another flap developed over Watt's decision to stop buying additional land for the national parks and to concentrate instead upon repairing and modernizing the park properties we have now. Watt concedes that his moratorium may result in higher costs for future acquisitions on down the road, but there is much to be said for a policy based on the homely precept that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Far from destroying the Wild Rivers System, says Watt, he has asked for the addition of 245 river miles. He inherited 523 National Recreation Trails; he has designated another 192 trails for inclusion. Watt's critics have blasted him for "declaring war" on the National Wilderness Preservation System; his response is that he has added 21,000 acres to it. On "Meet the Press" he pledged flatly not to approve leases in wilderness areas. Watt contends that he has strengthened the program to preserve endangered species; last week he added a caribou herd in the Pacific Northwest to the protected list.

Like most annual reports, Watt's glowing record of accomplishments is subject to critical interpretation. His

Undercut By Blank Check

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON. — Hounded by his own staff and congressional Republicans to reassert presidential leadership by focusing on the budget deficit, Ronald Reagan has handed Treasury tax experts a blank check that could further the undoing of his leadership and his presidency.

The new budget has been wrapped up for a week, except for revenue estimates for future years (the "out years"). Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan has been given a "plug" for fiscal year 1986 and subsequent years — a flat dollar amount with carte blanche on how to raise taxes to reach that figure. Barring a last-minute change, Regan will fill in that blank check with a 10 percent surtax on all income, beginning in 1986.

That remarkable proposal not only completes Reagan's transformation from tax-cutter to tax-raiser but may hasten the calamity it is intended to prevent: a runaway Congress, with the president reduced to impotence.

The prospect of Reagan being the first president since Lyndon B. Johnson to initiate a surtax — a tax on a tax and, therefore, a super-graduated form of taxation — leaves Reaganites desolate. Dr. Paul Craig Roberts, Reagan's former assistant Treasury secretary, calls it "the most harebrained scheme yet from these incompetents." Rep. Newt Gingrich, typifying the younger generation of conservative congressmen, promises it will produce "a fundamental revolt in the Republican Party this year."

But the bad reviews are not limited to the GOP's right wing. The party's two principal tax-writers — Sen. Robert Dole and Rep. Barber Conable — are appalled by an out-year surtax. Besides being an open invitation for congressional spending in anticipation of the future tax, it has the lawmakers projecting economic conditions three years hence. As for the Democrats, they are quietly licking their chops in relishing Reagan's tax folly as the threshold for their own agenda.

All this springs from the conviction of Reagan's economic team that massive deficits are the cause, not the product, of hard times. That has led to preoccupation in the president's councils for the past month with imagined deficit spending years into the future and inattention to today's massive unemployment.

The unavoidable consequence has been to enshrine austerity over growth. After breaking faith with soldiers and sailors by cutting back on their promised pay increases, the president now ponders advice from his staff for a national call to self-sacrifice (duplicating the politically destructive course of Jerry Ford and Jimmy Carter). Unlike the events preceding his $100 billion tax increase last year, the president has proceeded down this austerity path with no visible resistance and no orchestrated prodding from the bipartisan congressional establishment. Rather, Reagan has passively submitted to arguments from chief of staff James Baker and Republican congressional leaders that he would be surrendering leadership to Congress if he submitted huge out-year budget deficits to Capitol Hill.

But why such big deficits? Because of the extraordinarily slow growth estimates — 1.4 percent for 1983 — insisted on by Dr. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers. Feldstein has become the major new player in the administration's game. The force of his personality and intellect dominates the "T1" meetings between him, Regan and budget director David Stockman.

Middle-level administration economists were brushed aside by Feldstein when they pressed for more realistic growth estimates that would yield smaller deficits. Rep. Jack Kemp got nowhere in his effort to avoid policy confrontation with the president by anticipating greater revenue from economic growth.

Reagan is still enough the supply-sider to summarily reject massive excise taxes for the current year proposed by Stockman's Office of Management and Budget. But he made no resistance at all when T-1 came up with the notion for a future surtax made conditional on budget deficits. Thus, with practically no internal debate, Don Regan was handed his revenue "plug" — a blank check for future taxation.

Unless the blank check is pulled back even as the budget goes to the printer, the

Strength For Today

DANGER IN SUCCESS

The dictionary defines success as "obtaining one's desired end...succeeding fully or in accordance with one's desires."

Yet neither the dictionary nor any other book can completely define success. The Biblical dictum that to whom much is given much is required, means that the measure of success for one person is not necessarily the measure of success for another. He who starts high must go higher. And then, again, success can even amount to a catastrophe. It can puff people up with pride, ruining them with an abundance of good fortune, making them feel that the power of achievement lies only in themselves. The truth of the matter is, of course, that no one ever succeeds apart from the efforts of others. We may say that we have succeeded by the work of our own hands, but God gave us those hands.

We should all yearn for success and try to achieve it. But we should be careful when we have done so. Success can be very dangerous. — Elisha Douglass

Expecting Decade Of Recovery

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Over the past 10 years there have been three recessions and no real booms, and two of the recessions were longer and deeper than any since World War II.

In the same period, interest rates were in double digits as often as they were less than 10 percent, and the yearly increases in wholesale prices ranged as high as 18.3 percent.

No wonder the stock market was knocked to its knees, says John Wright, the Bridgeport, Conn., investor and stock market sage, who points out that the Dow Jones industrial average today is less than 3 percent higher than a decade ago.

Well, not even that. On an inflation-adjusted basis some popular averages are really only half what they were at the end of 1972, and it took an almost unprecedented surge to do that well.

Wright, who founded Wright Investors' Service, a company that advises institutional investors and handles portfolios for many bank trust departments, has always avoided the instant analysis, preferring basics instead.

Almost all of his firm's analysis relies on long-term statistical evidence, but occasionally it becomes difficult to overlook certain signs and portents, and one of these is the January forecast.

Going back through the years, Wright finds that the market's action during the month of January has correctly forecast the full-year trend seven out of every 10 years in the 20th century.

The data show also that the first five days of January have an accuracy record almost as good as the entire month in forecasting the direction of stock prices in the new year.

The records shows, he states, that the first week of trading has correctly forecast the direction of stocks for the whole year two-thirds of the time since 1900 and four-fifths of the time since 1945.

So what did the market do in the opening days?

Terrible — on the first day. In the opening session it fell more than 19 points. However, before the week was out the industrial average was up 30 points.

Wright's assessment of the market hardly relies on such forecasting tools, but he offers them as confirmation for conclusions already reached.

"While hardly conclusive," he told clients last week, the first week's activity "nevertheless provides technical support to the case for improving economic and corporate fundamentals propelling the stock market substantially higher in 1983."

The accounts his firm manages, he says, "are virtually fully invested in the expectation that stock prices will move considerably higher during 1983."

And for the decade ahead?

"To the extent that 1982's dismal economic performance has once and for all discredited the dogma of monetarism, we look forward to the decade ahead as a period of recovery and advance for the U.S. economy and capital markets."

OPEC Crisis Meeting Could Set Off Price War

BERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The decisions OPEC oil ministers make at their emergency meeting next Sunday could touch the wallets of energy users worldwide, perhaps by setting off a price war.

The traditional giants of oil trade — Saudia Arabia and its allied sheikdoms in the Persian Gulf — are angered by the tactics of Iran and other OPEC members, who are ignoring price rules in order to increase their oil exports.

The Saudis and their supporters are threatening to retaliate by unilaterally cutting their prices, even though it could lead to a price-cutting free-for-all.

The meeting Sunday in Geneva, Switzerland is seen by many analysts as a last-ditch try to avoid a price war in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. OPEC has never reduced its basic price structure in its 22-year history.

If the Saudis reduced their price, which currently is $34 a barrel, other oil exporters would be likely to adjust theirs as well, in order to hold customers. Some analysts think the Saudis are considering a cut of between $2 and $4 a barrel.

If the world average price of oil were reduced by $4 a barrel, from its current level of $33, the price of gasoline and other products made from oil would drop, too. As a rule, a $1 drop in the price of crude oil translates to a decline of about 2½ cents in the price of gasoline, although any drop would not be uniform.

Any sizable drop in world oil prices would mean significant savings in fuel prices to motorists, farmers, homeowners and many companies that use oil as a raw material or as a power source.

Lower energy prices could push down the U.S. inflation rate and give an added thrust to the economic recovery expected in 1983, economists believe.

A $4-a-barrel drop in oil prices this year would save the United States about $9 billion on its oil-import bill, based on the amount of foreign oil purchased last year. That is a savings of about $40 for every man, woman and child in the country.

It also would be a welcome relief for the oil-importing developing countries, such as Brazil, as well as industrialized countries with little domestic energy production, such as Japan and some west European countries. Those are the countries that suffered the brunt of the oil-price shocks of the 1970s.

But the cheer would not be universal.

Mexico, for example, relies heavily on oil exports and was badly hurt by the recent decline of about $1 a barrel in oil prices.

Mexico, like many other oil-exporting countries, had based its economic plan on the assumption that petroleum prices would keep rising as they did in the late 1970s.

Mexico is not an OPEC member, but it keeps its prices — currently at $32.50 a barrel for its top-grade crude — fairly closely aligned with those in OPEC.

Javier Murcio, an economist specializing in Mexican affairs at the U.S. consulting firm of Data Resources Inc., said Monday that a drop in world oil prices "would be terrible" for Mexico even though Mexico recently has increased its sales.

Murcio said Mexico could be forced into technical default on parts of its estimated $85 billion in foreign debt if its oil prices were cut more than $3 a barrel. The Mexican government currently is counting on $14 billion in 1983 oil revenues, representing about 70 percent of its projected total export income, Murcio said.

Mexico would not be the only country to suffer from a drop in oil prices. The British and U.S. governments, for example, would see their oil tax revenues fall sharply if prices declined more than a couple of dollars per barrel.

William Randol, an energy analyst at the investment firm of First Boston Corp., calculates that each dollar drop in U.S. oil prices would reduce government revenues by nearly $3 billion a year.

Randol and other analysts believe the Reagan administration would, if world oil prices fell significantly, consider imposing an oil import fee to offset the drop in tax receipts from domestic oil production.

Forgot Kids In His Locked Car

DELAND, Fla. (AP) — As temperatures in this central Florida town dipped to 30 degrees, a man locked his lightly dressed young daughters in his car while he spent time in a hotel bar, police say.

The children, ages 2 and 3, were "fine" but "tired," their mother said.

The father, Michael Gene Williams, 26, of nearby Tavares, was arrested on a child abuse charge early Monday as he drove off, apparently unaware that police had taken the girls from his car, officials said.

The children were taken to West Volusia Memorial Hospital for observation, released into the custody of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, then returned to their mother, Glenda Williams of Tavares, according to police.

"They're fine ... but they're very tired," their mother said Monday.

Police were sent to the Putnam Hotel about 1 a.m. Monday after a caller reported seeing the children locked in the car at the hotel parking lot.

Officers checked the bar but could not find the car's owner, so they forced open one of the car doors to release the girls who had been in the vehicle for an hour before police arrived, Officer James Locklear said.

The girls were "scantly dressed" for the freezing temperatures, Locklear said. One girl, wearing a short-sleeved shirt and no shoes, was crying when officers freed her from the car, police said.

The Williamses are divorced, police said. Williams had the children during the weekend and was supposed to have returned them to their mother by 6 p.m. Sunday, officers said.

When the bar closed at 2 a.m., Williams drove away but was stopped a mile from the hotel.

"When he was stopped, he wasn't aware that his children weren't in the car," Police Capt. Gene Johnson said.

In addition to child abuse, Williams was charged with drunken driving, driving with a revoked license, possession of marijuana and possession of stolen property, police said. He was being held in lieu of $2,500 bail.

Although the space at the children's library will accommodate a sizeable number of children at any given event, Ms. Jones said library personnel will not be able to effectively deal with large groups reporting at one time.

Five films, suitable for children of elementary grade level, will be shown on Thursday, which is a teacher work day-student holiday.

If you make the process too difficult, the two legislators said, North Carolina won't be able to amend its constitution when the need arises. They noted that several of the amendments involved only minor changes — adjustments, for example, needed to allow the state to take advantage of the nation's changing bond markets. By slowing down the process, are we binding the state to outdated practices?

Republican rebellion on Capitol Hill will spread. Gingrich's eloquent personal plea for the president to seize the initiative with a freeze on all spending was used to justify the freeze on military pay and the out-year surtax. A bitter Gingrich is heading into rebellion.

It is inconceivable that Democrats will support the beleaguered president by drinking the surtax hemlock. Instead, they will use Reagan's call for austerity to assault what is left of the visionary tax reduction passed in 1981 — specifically, tax indexing. In following his staff's advice to avoid intransigence, Ronald Reagan has committed one of the worst follies of his career.

Vatican Convenes Meeting On Nuclear Weaponry

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Responding to a call by U.S. bishops, the Vatican today convened a two-day meeting of top Western Roman Catholic prelates to discuss the American churchmen's denunciation of the use of nuclear weapons.

The Rev. Romeo Panciroli, the Vatican spokesman, said the initial three-hour closed session was co-chaired by Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli and Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, the Holy See's top theologian as prefect of the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

The meeting took place at the old Synod Hall in the Apostolic Palace, Panciroli said.

Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said his colleagues are preparing a final version of a draft pastoral letter that condemns nuclear warfare, as well as some aspects of American strategic policy.

"We simply want the insights of our peers in Western Europe as well as the Vatican," Roach said of the gathering.

The 25,000-word disarmament document was proposed at a Catholic bishops' meeting in Washington last November and is expected to be adopted, with revisions, at another meeting in Chicago next May.

It condemned any intent or threat to use nuclear weapons and said even possessing them as a deterrent can be tolerated only if steps are being taken toward mutual disarmament by the United States and Soviet Union.

Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, who led the special committee that issued the draft letter, stressed that the closed-door meeting here was not to develop a document on nuclear arms for the entire Roman Catholic Church.

Bernardin called the meeting an "informal consultation."

He said although the original idea of consultations had come from the Americans, the preparation for the bishops' conference, including the decision on who should be invited, was made by the Vatican.

After Pope John Paul II announced Bernardin's elevation to cardinal on Jan. 5, the Chicago clergyman said he thought his selection could be interpreted as an affirmation of his stand against nuclear war.

The Vatican has made no official comment on the U.S. bishops' statement on nuclear arms. But in an interview, Bernardin and Roach said its reaction to the draft document was "basically supportive."

Asked if the Vatican conference might lead to a churchwide anti-nuclear movement, Roach said:

"We'd welcome any initiative for the cause of peace. Our purpose is simply to instruct our own people in the United States and to be a part of public policy discussion there. If that kind of thing is going to be a catalyst toward a discussion of other groups on the issue of peace, we'd be just delighted."

Bernardin said the issue is "so important — and touches on every aspect of life throughout the world — that it's not going to go away, and church leaders the world over will be addressing the issue one way or another."

Among others invited to the conference were French Bishop Jean Vilnet; West German Cardinal Joseph Höffner, British Cardinals Basil Hume and Gordon Gray, and Italian Bishop Dante Bernini.

Barney Clark Has Nosebleeds

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Dr. Barney Clark is being given reduced amounts of anti-coagulants because of persistent nosebleeds caused in part by irritation from a gastric-nasal tube, a hospital spokesman said.

Clark remained in serious but stable condition today at the University of Utah Medical Center.

"Dr. Clark's nosebleeds are considered more serious than previously stated simply because they have not stopped," said John Dwan, medical center spokesman.

Clark had been suffering from moderate to severe nosebleeds for eight days, Dwan said.

The 61-year-old retired dentist from the Seattle area has been sleeping well despite the nosebleeds, said Jan Beina, nursing supervisor.

Dr. William DeVries, the surgeon who implanted the artificial heart Dec. 2, has decreased the amount of anti-coagulants Clark is given, Dwan said.

Clark must remain on anti-coagulants the rest of his life because of the artificial heart.

Doctors remain hopeful the bleeding problem, partially caused by irritation from a gastric-nasal tube, will resolve itself, Dwan said.

The nasal passages were sealed with a balloon-like catheter and packed early Friday.

"Prior to that time he was bleeding quite heavily," the spokesman said. Even with the packing, blood still was oozing, he said.

Doctors had said earlier that Clark might be able to leave the hospital by month's end, but "this delays at least for the time being his leaving the hospital or meeting the public," Dwan said.

(AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 100 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a final weighted average of 41.45 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,781,000, compared to 1,772,000 last Tuesday.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was steady. Supplies fully adequate. Demand moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 14-15, mostly 15 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices retreated today as traders cashed in on some of the market's recent gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 6.81 to 1,078.00 by noon.

Losers held an 8-5 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was some disappointment among investors that a widely predicted cut in the Federal Reserve's discount rate hadn't yet materialized.

They also noted that since it briefly touched the 1,100 mark last week, the Dow Jones industrial average had been unable to reach that level again.

Also on many observers' worry list was the persistent problem of the federal budget deficit, and talk that it might loom larger and larger as an obstacle in the path of an economic recovery.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the most active NYSE issue, slipped 1/8 to 68 3/4. A 190,000 share block traded at that price.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .44 to 84.35. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .73 at 369.96.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 35.10 million shares at noon, against 41.57 million at the same point Monday.

One Demand By Memphis Cult

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The leader of seven religious zealots who died in a police shootout after killing a hostage officer had wanted to kill the policeman and broadcast the death on live radio, authorities said today.

Police Director John Holt told reporters that Lindberg Sanders, head of the religious sect, made only one demand during the 30-hour siege last week — that he wanted to speak with a disc jockey for a local radio station.

"The intent was to execute officer Hester and preferably publicly," Holt said.

The hostage, patrolman Robert S. Hester, was found beaten to death after police stormed the house where the cult members had held him.

Holt said an officer crept up to a window of the house shortly after the siege began and heard Sanders, 49, say he "wanted the people of Memphis to hear when he put the... officer's lights out."

Officials said all seven members of the police-hating cult were killed by gunshot wounds to the head when police stormed the house.

Dr. Jerry T. Francisco, the Shelby County medical examiner, released autopsy information on the seven men Monday. He said all seven sect members died in the police assault, but neither Sanders nor any of his six followers had powder burns on their skin. Experts said a gunshot leaves powder burns if a weapon is fired within a foot of a body.

Meanwhile, a man who escaped from the house, Tyrone Henley, 27, was being held on $250,000 bond on charges of assault to murder for allegedly striking Patrolman R.O. Schwill, partner of Hester, in a fight before the siege began.

Francisco's office announced last week that Hester, 34, had been beaten to death 12 to 24 hours before police rushed Sanders' house.

Henley was arrested Sunday and a preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 31. It was not known whether he was a member of Sanders' small, nameless sect, which taught that police are agents of the devil.

A police affidavit filed in General Sessions Court on Monday said Henley "jumped on (Schwill) and struck (him) in the face" when Schwill and Hester answered a call at the house Jan. 8.

"After being struck by Henley, other male blacks took Schwill's pistol away from him and Schwill was shot in the face and hand," the affidavit said. It did not identify the other attackers.

Gunshots were exchanged and, according to the autopsy, Sanders and at least one of his followers suffered non-fatal gunshot wounds. Schwill and Patrolman Tom Turner, who was among backup officers arriving, escaped. Hester was taken hostage and the siege began.

The standoff ended 30 hours later when police stormed the house. Police said Sanders, a former mental patient, and his followers fired first and officers returned fire, killing all seven suspects.

going to have to act fiscally responsible."

Sen. Vernon White termed Hunt's speech "very optimistic," suggesting that the governor has "high hopes of an upturn in the economy within the next few months."

"I think his recommendations to the General Assembly are based on optimism," However, White said, "If we don't have an upturn, there is going to be considerable cutting from what he recommended."

White said Hunt's proposed $6.18 billion budget for 1983-84 and $6.3 billion in 1984-85 put the "major emphasis" on operating the government "at the current level."

Summer May See Contract

Greenville Utilities Commission director Charles Horne said today a contract may be ready to let by this summer on a proposed $10.4 million waste water treatment plant.

The North Carolina Environmental Management Commission last week approved Greenville's application for state assistance in funding the treatment plant. However, Horne said this morning there will be "no firm confirmation of it until they make us a grant offer" which is expected to be in February.

Horne said the grant application is being prepared and once the grant offer is made, "the door is closed."

In accordance with the EMC approval, Greenville will receive $7.8 million in federal funds and $1.3 million in state money to help build the new plant.

The local share — $1.3 million — is already in hand, and there will be no need to sell $4 million in bonds for the project that were approved by voters in 1979.

Planning for the 10.5 million gallon a day sewage treatment plant began in 1973. Changes in regulations and federal red tape delayed the completion and final approval of preliminary plans until mid-1981, and final plans for the project were approved last year.

Until late last year, officials believed that it would be 1984 or 1985 before any federal funds would be available.

Door Is Closed On Zero Option

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko today rejected the U.S. "zero option" proposal for limiting intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe, but said the Kremlin was prepared to destroy some of its rockets as part of a deal with the West.

"The answer is no. This is impossible. We can under no circumstance accept this zero option," Gromyko told a news conference on the second day of his visit to West Germany.

However, Gromyko said the Soviet Union is willing to destroy some of its medium-range nuclear missiles aimed at Western Europe as part of an arms reduction agreement.

"We have said in the (Geneva) negotiations, some of the missiles could be destroyed, others could be transported to other parts of the Soviet Union where they could no longer reach the countries of Western Europe," Gromyko said.

He did not say how many of the missiles would be dismantled and how many moved, nor did he say specifically whether he meant SS-20 missiles or the older SS-4s and SS-5s.

The "zero option" proposal, presented at talks in Geneva, calls for the Soviet Union to dismantle about 300 SS-20 missiles targeted on Europe in exchange for United States scrapping plans to deploy 572 new Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe this fall.

About one-fifth of the U.S. missiles are slated to be deployed in West Germany, where there is growing anti-nuclear sentiment among voters who elect a new leadership in early March. The opposition Social Democratic candidate, Hans-Jochen Vogel, just returned from talks in Washington and Moscow, where he appealed for sharp reduction in nuclear arms.

Gromyko said if the Soviet Union accepted the American proposal it would give NATO twice as many missile carriers and three times as many nuclear warheads as the Warsaw Pact. He said the U.S. proposal would end a parity reached over the course of many years.

"We believe that those who proposed this variation were not led by serious considerations. I emphasize this: not led by serious consideration, because one cannot describe as serious a partner who puts such proposals on the negotiating table," Gromyko said.

Gromyko, who ends a three-day visit Wednesday, was expected in talks with officials here to press a counter proposal offered by new Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov in December.

Andropov said the Soviet Union would reduce the number of intermediate-range nuclear missiles aimed at Western Europe to 162 — the combined number of similar missiles held by Britain and France, if NATO would scrap plans to deploy new missiles.

Gromyko called the British and French missiles intermediate-range weapons but said "they also are strategic missiles because some of them are installed on submarines."

Baptist Stuns Pirates, 64-56

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Pirates did something they'd never done before last night — and something they hadn't done this season either. The stumbling Pirates lost to Baptist College of Charleston for the first time ever — and the loss was their third in a row — the longest streak of the year.

Baptist, playing inspired basketball at times, overcame the Pirates, 64-56, to snap a six-game losing streak to the Pirates. It marked the first time ever Baptist, now 8-4, had beaten the Pirates.

The loss, the eighth overall this year for the Pirates, marked the first time they had lost more than two in a row. ECU has now dropped three straight.

The chief factor in the string would appear to be the absence of senior forward Charles Green, out with a dislocated shoulder. Green was injured early in the William & Mary game — the first of the three losses.

"Granted some things have not gone our way," Coach Charlie Harrison said. "With Charles Green, out hurt, and Curt (Vanderhorst) playing hurt, and Johnny (Edwards) having cramps, we could use that as a crutch. But we can't use that as an excuse."

Harrison said that he felt the effort was there "superficially," but that he felt the biggest problem was that "I don't think they believed us when we told them how good they (Baptist) could be."

"We were a half-step late on nearly every play. We didn't play intensely enough. It's like we said, 'ho hum, here we go, and I guess that's my fault.'"

The Pirates, in the game most of the way, went from a four-point lead, 42-38, with 8:50 left, to an eight-point deficit, 50-42, with 4:04 to play. Center Jack Avent led that charge, scoring six of the 12 points on two baskets and two free throws.

After that, Baptist never lost the lead, although the Pirates did cut it back to two and had the chance to pull even. But Baptist used the foul line, hitting all but two of their final 16 points at the foul line — all in a row. Only the final basket, a slam dunk by Randall Slawson, broke that string.

"They (the Pirates) have to look to themselves, too," Harrison said. "When adversity strikes, you have to reach in and pull something out that you haven't pulled out before. And that's true not just in sports but in life also."

"We had the chance to get things going our way and never did it," he added.

The game was close until those final moments. East Carolina got an initial four-point lead, and held on until Avent hit from underneath for an 8-7 Baptist lead. East Carolina took it back but lost it again on a goaltending call, 11-9, but regained the lead on a three-point play by Edwards, 14-13.

The Pirates didn't lose the lead again the rest of the half, although Baptist managed to tie it twice, at 22-22 and 26-26. A pair of free throws by Mike Fox with 43 seconds left gave the Pirates a 28-26 lead that held the rest of the way.

Baptist, which shot 55.6 percent in the second half as compared to 40.7 for the Pirates, tied it up early on a jumper by Marcus Beasley but again fell behind by four points as Wright and Thom Brown scored, 32-28. The Pirates were unable to shake the Buccaneers, however, and they tied it again at 36-36, then took the lead on two free throws by Anthony Woods at 38-36.

East Carolina then scored six straight points, two free throws by Wright, and baskets by Edwards and Vanderhorst, to take a 42-38 lead.

It was then that the bubble burst.

"We missed some easy shots and we made some terrible, terrible judgements on the fast break," Harrison recalled. "We took some terrible shots and, too, we were without Edwards for most of that time." Edwards had gone to the bench with leg cramps just after the Pirates regained the lead and missed about five minutes of play — during which Baptist forged its lead.

During the final five minutes, Baptist played keep-away and the Pirates were forced to foul and the Buccaneers made good on 14 of 18 shots to forge as much as a ten-point lead before Wright hit at the horn to cut it back to the final eight.

East Carolina hit only 35.6 percent of its shots, as Baptist hit on 45.7 percent. Baptist also outrebounded the Pirates, 41-30, led by Jose Lara's ten. ECU was led by Edwards with ten.

Baptist had balanced scoring, getting 11 from Slawson and 10 each from Avent and Beasley. Two others, Lara and John Battle each had nine.

East Carolina's scoring was led by Edwards with 18 while Wright had 17. Brown added eight but was the only other Pirate to contribute as much as five points.

Bruce Peartree, who has seen limited action in recent games, did not dress for the game — it was said he was injured.

"We're very shallow. We don't have a lot of depth," Harrison said. "You can't tap someone on the shoulder and make them get the job done."

"One game doesn't make a season. I don't feel good because we lost; I feel like hell. But I'm just worried about how we'll do afterwards. I'm upset with the way they played, but I'm not worried about what the fans think. I do want them to support these kids."

"Unfortunately, the same people who were patting them on the back after the James Madison game are nowhere to be found tonight."

East Carolina, now 6-8, returns to action on Wednesday, hosting the University of South Carolina at 7:30 p.m. in Minges.

Lady Pirates Visit Charlotte

A Staff Report
East Carolina's Lady Pirates hit the road again to face UNC Charlotte Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

The Lady Pirates take a 5-6 mark into the contest, the first meeting ever between the two schools.

ECU has lost its last two in a row, the latest last Friday night at Old Dominion, 92-52. In that contest, the biggest fireworks came afterwards when ODU Coach Marianne Stanley accused the Pirates of dirty play and of assigning Mary Denkler to "get" all-American Ann Donovan.

ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi was conservative with her post-game comments at the time, but fired off a few barrels at Stanley after viewing the films.

"Old Dominion coach Stanley accused our players of playing to hurt them and that hurts me, especially the accusation that Mary Denkler roughed up Ann Donovan," Andruzzi said. "Mary Denkler would not know how to hurt anyone."

"Mary did a good job on Donovan in holding her to seven points. I'm surprised at the comments made by supposedly a professional person. Mary kept down an all-American and they couldn't face that fact. It was a case of sour grapes."

"As is customary of our teams, we are very aggressive and hard working. That comment really hurt me very badly as a coach."

"If winning by 40 points isn't enough, then what else does she want? You have Ann Donovan at 6-8 playing on the inside and (she) has only two fouls. That shows what happens when you go up there. The officials let the game get out of hand. It was a situation which took back basketball several steps."

This week, the Lady Pirates, in addition to Charlotte, plays in the South Carolina Invitational Friday and Saturday.

"We're playing against the same type of schedule we've played in the past with this young team and we still have problems in height. But we need those games to keep the consistency in our program."

Charlotte "has a good team. We have to stop Candy Lucas (former NCS player — 22.5 ppg), and Sylvia Akers (14.0 rebounds). Coach Anne Payne is doing a good job." Payne is the wife of ex-ECU men's aide Eddie Payne, now head coach at Belmont Abbey.

UNC comes into the game following a 62-57 win over UNC-Wilmington last night. The Lady 49'ers are now 5-5 on the year.

Friday, in the first round of the South Carolina Invitational, ECU will face Georgia, currently 12-2, and ranked ninth in the country.

That game will be broadcast over the Pirate Sports Network at 5:50 p.m. Friday. South Carolina plays Mercer in the other first round game, with the consolation and championships set Saturday.

UCLA Climbs To Top Of Poll, Tar Heels Third

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA basketball, the most successful program in college sports history, had been in a relative decline since Coach John Wooden retired in 1975.

But the Bruins are back.

With an 11-1 record under second-year coach Larry Farmer, UCLA jumped from fifth to first in The Associated Press Top Twenty college basketball poll this week. It marks the first time since February of 1979 that the Bruins, who won 10 NCAA championships in a 12-year span during the 1960s and '70s, have been ranked No. 1.

UCLA became the fourth team to hold the top spot this season and the rapid move up the rankings came on the heels of losses by last week's top three teams — Memphis State, Virginia and St. John's.

The Bruins received 22

first-place votes and a total of 1,099 points in the weekly balloting by a 57-member national panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

In the extremely close balloting, UCLA finished only eight points ahead of runner-up Indiana, fourth last week after being No. 1 earlier in the season. The Hoosiers, 12-1, collected 29 first-place votes — seven more than UCLA — but only 1,091 points.

UCLA replaced Memphis State as the No. 1 team after the Tigers were upended by Virginia Tech 69-56 last Monday night. Memphis State, 12-1, bounced back with an 80-63 victory over Cincinnati, but still slipped to sixth in this week's poll with 810 points, including one first-place vote.

Rounding out the top five this week are No. 3 North Carolina, which is 12-3 and was No. 11 last week; No. 4 Arkansas, 13-0; and No. 5 Nevada-Las Vegas, 13-0.

If the 1983 Bruins resemble the Wooden-guided teams who dominated college basketball for more than a decade, it's no mistake.

Farmer, 31, played under Wooden at UCLA during 1970-73, a period when the Bruins went 89-1. He still calls Wooden simply "Coach."

The school's fourth head basketball coach since Wooden retired, Farmer said his coaching philosophy is solidly grounded in on what he learned under his old coach.

"Our program now is pretty much the same as it was back then," Farmer said. "We do a lot of the same drills. Our basic philosophy is that, while we do try to prepare for each opponent, we believe it's most important to do what we do well to do. We spend a lot of time on what we want to do, not what we expect the other team to do."

Farmer laughed and added, "I would imagine if you went to a Louisville practice, or a BYU practice, they would look about the same as ours. After all, it worked pretty well for Coach."

Louisville is coached by Denny Crum and BYU by Frank Arnold, both of whom served under Wooden at UCLA.

While the Bruins are back in their once-acquainted spot atop the basketball poll, Farmer said he's well aware they won't necessarily stay there.

"I read where people say this team or that team was upset, and I don't think upset is the right word," he said. "At this time of the season, people are still jockeying their teams around; teams are going to lose one here or there, then not lose one for a long time."

NFL To Investigate PBS Allegations Of Fixing

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League will study the allegations of fixed games and ties to illegal gambling raised by a Public Broadcasting Service television documentary, says a league spokesman.

"Any comment from this office will come after our staff has had a chance to study the show's allegations," Joe Browne, the NFL's director of information, said Monday night, just after the PBS broadcast aired. He said he expected the league to review the show in "the next couple of days."

The broadcast, titled "An Unauthorized History of the NFL," was the opening program in PBS' "Frontline" series. The show presented a history of the league's gambling problems and detailed alleged associations of owners and players with alleged gamblers and people with ties to organized crime.

One of those interviewed was a gambler identified as John Piazza, who claimed a coach, quarterback and defensive captain of an unidentified team were paid to fix four games each year during the 1968, 1969 and 1970 seasons. Piazza did not identify the players.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle was interviewed on camera, but was not asked about Piazza's charges. The show's moderator, Jessica Savitch, said she later asked Rozelle on the telephone about Piazza's allegations and that Rozelle said he had never heard of Piazza and knew of no fix attempt.

The NFL had asked to see to show in advance but was refused by the show's producers. The show was previewed for the press last Thursday.

The broadcast also suggested that Carroll Rosenbloom, then owner of the Los Angeles Rams, may have been murdered by a wet-suit clad swimmer who pulled him under water while he was swimming off Golden Beach, Fla., in April, 1979. The cause of Rosenbloom's death was listed as accidental drowning.

Raymond Tanquay, a Canadian tourist who was a witness to the drowning, was interviewed on the show and said he saw "a black object about five feet long and about 20 inches wide," about 30 yards from Rosenbloom at the time.

"It might have been a man, it might have been a fish or a boat," Tanquay said. "I saw the object only briefly and then it entered a wave in a plunging motion."

Tanquay, who was on vacation in Florida at the time, said he was interviewed by two private detectives last month who suggested the possibility Rosenbloom was drowned intentionally.

"I said it was possible," Tanquay added. "I don't know."

There was no mention on the show that Tanquay said last weekend in Montreal that he was skeptical of the theory that Rosenbloom was murdered.

Thurman said he could sleep only a few hours before Sunday's game with the Packers. He kept seeing Lofton in his sleep.

"A defensive back can lose the game quicker than any other individual on the field other than the quarterback," Thurman said.

On his interception return for a touchdown, Thurman's experience paid off.

"I read his move because he pushed off a little," said Thurman. "He turned and I went inside. I was just in the right place at the right time. They had completed one like that earlier."

Dallas travels to Washington for Saturday's National Conference championship game and Thurman figures the Redskins will test him.

"I'm not worried," Thurman said. "The pressure is on Washington. The Redskins have to feel a lot of anxiety."

"They've played well this year, but they haven't beaten Dallas in a while. Their fans were yelling for us, but the team has to have a little doubt."

Walls said he was disappointed Green Bay didn't throw more in his direction.

"If they want to go right just because I'm on the left, I think it hurts their offense," he said. "I think they ought to go to their strength and not let someone dictate what they will do."

Thurman: I'd Attack Me, Too

DALLAS (AP) — Dennis Thurman has been in a lot of game plans lately — the opponent's.

Teams keep attacking his right cornerback position and finding the results sweet and sour.

Thurman was burned twice by the Green Bay Packers in the Dallas Cowboys' 37-26 National Football League playoff victory Sunday on passes to James Lofton — but he returned the favor with three interceptions. He dashed 39 yards for a touchdown on one of them.

"In this league, you have a different challenge every week," said Thurman. "One week it's James Lofton. The next week it's somebody else. You can't let them psych you out, get you back on your heels."

"You just have to believe you are going to get as many as they do," he said.

Thurman said one reason he is such a popular bombing target is that teams are afraid to take on the left cornerback, Everson Walls, the National Football League's leading interceptor.

"I'd probably attack me, too," Thurman said. "I think I will be a part of the other team's attack the rest of this year."

Thurman's three interceptions tied a club record held by Charlie Waters.

"Any time you can tie Charlie Waters, you're in good company," Thurman said.

Weidner Leads Indians To Stunner Over Deacs

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Brant Weidner scored 18 points and pulled down 16 rebounds Monday night as William & Mary's Indians burst to a 19-point lead in the first half and went on to a surprisingly easy 80-63 basketball victory over Wake Forest's Deacons.

It was the fourth triumph in a row for the Indians, 7-4, and only the second defeat in 13 starts for the Deacons.

William & Mary led by 19 points several times in the first half, but the Deacons rallied at the end to cut the gap to 40-27 at intermission.

The Indians, who also got 18 points from Tony Traver, upped the advantage to 19 points again at the start of the second half, and the Deacons never got closer than 10 down the stretch.

Kevin Richardson added 14 points and Keith Cleplicki 11 for the Indians, who shot 71.4 percent from the floor in the second half and 56.5 percent for the game. The Indians also were 28 of 32 at the foul line with Scot Coval converting nine of 10.

The Deacons, who shot 34.2 percent in the first half and 41.5 percent for the game, were led by John Toms with 19 points and Alvis Rogers with 10.

"It's a great, great win for us. I don't know if we can play much better than that," said Indian Coach Bruce Parkhill. "Wake Forest is an exceptional basketball team clearly a Top 20 squad."

"Everybody contributed and our effort defensively is what a coach hopes for and we sure got it tonight. A big key was rebounding (W&M won off the boards 40-32), and Brant really asserted himself."

Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy said "in a game like this, our defensive effort had to be good. It's a part of the game that has gotten us this far this season."

Tacy said the Deacons "played too tentatively early in the game. I thought we needed to get our early and get a lead, but we never did. You've got to give it to William & Mary. They were ready to play and we weren't."

Long Rivalry Set For Renewal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The way the Dallas Cowboys and the Washington Redskins are talking, somebody's going to be awfully surprised Saturday afternoon when the final score goes up at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

"We won't be denied a third time," says Dallas linebacker Bob Bruening of the Cowboys' third straight appearance in the National Conference championship game.

Redskins' quarterback Joe Theismann's answer: "There's no doubt in my mind we can beat them."

The Cowboys and the Redskins renew their long-standing rivalry at 12:30 p.m. EST Saturday. At stake, a trip to Pasadena, Calif., for Super Bowl XVII.

The Redskins are 10-1 this season and 13-1 over the last two years. Their only setback, a 24-10 defeat here came on Dec. 5 as Dallas Coach Tom Landry celebrated his 200th National Football League victory.

"I think the Cowboys will find we are a different football team this time around," said Theismann. "We have a lot more confidence in our capabilities."

The Cowboys, with victories over Tampa Bay and Green Bay in the playoffs, are 8-3 on the year.

"You know it's still Dallas but there is something missing this year," says Redskins linebacker Rich Milot. "They are losing a little more often and even in victory they appear vulnerable at times. They still win their share but they don't scare people the way they once did."

"The one thing we definitely have in our favor is the fans," Theismann said. "We have had trouble in Dallas although it has happened there. But this is the place where the Redskins have traditionally been tough on the Cowboys. If a home-field advantage ever really exists in this league I would say it's when the Cowboys meet the Redskins."

As loud as the fans will be, they still won't be on the field trying to stop Tony Dorsett from running through the Redskin defense or trying to keep Dallas defenders off Theismann's back.

"I'm not going to look back at and try and figure why we haven't done well, what I have to do is look ahead," Theismann said. "I know we will have to score more than 10 points for us to have a chance to win on Saturday."

Except for some light exercise, the Redskin players enjoyed a second day off on Monday. The team's coaches, busy since Sunday night reviewing Dallas game films, gave the team its game plan this morning.

Good news at Redskin Park came from injured All-pro kick return specialist Mike Nelms, who reports he expects to be "100 percent" for the Cowboys.

Auburn Is Upset By Vanderbilt

By The Associated Press

The Auburn basketball team was playing Vanderbilt, but thinking "Kentucky," according to Coach Sonny Smith. "We left our game in Kentucky in the first half," Smith said, referring to Saturday's upset of the Wildcats.

The poor first-half play Monday night put the Tigers into a hole from which they never recovered and the new Top Twenty team lost a 64-62 decision to Vanderbilt as a result of it.

"It was a case of us getting too far down in the first half and overextending ourselves to catch up," said Smith, whose 20th-ranked Tigers trailed 43-28 at intermission.

The Auburn comeback fell short, however, when Vanderbilt's Ted Young sank a 15-footer with 57 seconds left. Auburn actually led, at 58-55 with about seven minutes remaining on a field goal by Odell Mosteller.

The Commodores battled back to tie the contest at 60 on a basket by James Williams and a three-point play by Phil Cox with 3:20 remaining. The teams traded baskets before Young put in his game-winning shot.

Cox led four Commodores in double figures with 17 points. Darrell Lockhart, Charles Barkley and Mosteller each had 16 points for Auburn.

"I was scared to death down the final few minutes," said Vanderbilt Coach C.M.

Newton, "but I'm glad our players weren't. Our guys didn't panic down the stretch and really executed our delay game to perfection in the last minute."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 7 Virginia tripped Georgia Tech 66-52, No. 11 Kentucky stopped Florida 70-63, No. 14 Houston walloped Texas Tech 98-73 and 15th-ranked Syracuse rolled past Boston College 102-85.

Ricky Stokes scored five points during a 13-0 spurt that erased a six-point, second-half deficit and helped carry Virginia over Georgia Tech. Georgia Tech, riding a 20-point flurry from Mark Price, held a 40-34 lead with 15:12 remaining before the heavily favored Cavaliers made their move.

Othell Wilson sank two free throws and Craig Robinson scored off the baseline before Stokes converted a three-point play on a driving layup with 11:51 remaining to give Virginia the lead for good at 41-40.

Ralph Sampson, who led the Cavaliers with 18 points, drilled in six free throws after that, and Rick Carlisle also added six points as the Cavaliers won handily.

"I think in the second half we played great defense," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "I don't know what the final was, but they couldn't have had much more than 22 points in the half."

Actually it was only 20 as the Cavs took advantage of a 6:06 scoreless drought by the Yellow Jackets.

"I think in the first half we were either a little flat or a little uptight, but let's give Georgia Tech credit for creating those problems," Holland said.

"We got tired late in the game," said Coach Bobby Cremins of Tech. "They really wore us down. Virginia is a great team. They played their game and we didn't maintain our composure when it counted. This team is learning."

Mel Turpin scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half as Kentucky came from behind to defeat Florida. Turpin had four points during an 11-0 scoring run that gave Kentucky a 61-56 lead with 5:02 remaining.

"I really can't explain how we did it, except for just going to Melvin, and he did an exceptionally fine job for us," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall.

Turpin: "I needed to post up more and get meaner. We wanted this game and we couldn't afford another loss. I posted up in the second half, bending down and making a big post, and they couldn't get around me."

Clyde Drexler and Michael Young scored 18 points each and Akeem Abdul-Jabbar had 13 points and 12 rebounds to lead Houston to a runaway victory over Texas Tech. Making 60 percent of their field goal shots in the game, the Cougars were in command virtually all the way.

Erich Santifer scored a career-high 30 points, and Tony Bruin added 29 as Syracuse built an 11-point halftime lead and rolled past Boston College. Winning 37-26 at halftime, the Orangemen scored the first two baskets of the second half and led heads of between 13 to 24 points the rest of the way.

Others

Elsewhere, Brant Weidner scored 18 points and pulled down 16 rebounds as William & Mary burst to a 19-point lead in the first half and went on to a surprisingly easy 80-63 victory over Wake Forest.

Also, James Banks scored 21 points as Georgia took the lead in the first half and held on for a 75-59 victory over Mississippi State; Dave Brooks scored a career-high 28 points to pace Navy to a 69-57 victory over Lehigh; Troy Lee Mikell scored 18 points, including a game-winning layup with 11 seconds left, to lead East Tennessee State past Davidson 67-66 and John Paxson scored a game-high 19 points as Notre Dame downed Lafayette 51-40.

Virginia Romps Past Georgia Tech By 66-52

ATLANTA (AP) — With its offense sputtering, seventh-ranked Virginia turned to intense defensive pressure in the second half and rolled to a 66-52 comeback victory over Georgia Tech in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Monday night.

"I think in the second half we played great defense," said Coach Terry Holland of the Cavaliers. "I don't know what the final was, but they couldn't have had much more than 22 points in the half."

Actually it was only 20 as the Cavs took advantage of a 6:06 scoreless drought by the Yellow Jackets to reel off 13 consecutive points, five from Ricky Stokes, to turn a 40-34 deficit into a 47-40 lead.

"I think in the first half we were either a little flat or a little uptight, but let's give Georgia Tech credit for creating those problems," Holland said.

"We got tired late in the game," said Coach Bobby Cremins of Tech. "They really wore us down."

"Virginia is a great team," he added. "They played their game and we didn't maintain our composure when it counted. This team is learning."

Tech, riding a 20-point flurry from freshman Mark Price, held a 40-34 lead with 15:12 remaining before the heavily favored Cavaliers made their move.

Othell Wilson sank two free throws and Craig Robinson scored off the baseline before Stokes converted a three-point play on a driving layup with 11:51 remaining to give Virginia the lead for good 41-40.

Ralph Sampson, who led the Cavaliers with 18 points, drilled in six free throws after that, and Rick Carlisle also added six points as the Cavaliers won handily.

The victory lifted Virginia to 13-2 overall and 4-1 in the ACC.

Price, who had four three-point goals in the game, finished with 23 points for game scoring honors. He had 20 of those, however, after less than a minute of the second half had elapsed.

The setback dropped Tech to 6-6 for the year and 1-3 in the conference.

SENIORS PROSPER

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — The Senior PGA Tour is growing every year.

When it began three years ago, it had only two tournaments. In 1983 it will have 18 with total purses expected to jump over the $3 million mark.

"Interest in the Senior Tour has grown by leaps and bounds over the past couple of years," Commissioner Deane R. Berman of the PGA said. "In 1983 we are delighted to find ourselves going into several cities that have not enjoyed tour competition previously."

Coryell Looks To Build Up San Diego's Defense

Flyers, 76ers Just Zip Along

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Chargers, owners of the National Football League's most productive offense, have reached the playoffs four years in a row. But each time, their Super Bowl hopes have been short-circuited by teams taking advantage of their porous defense.

Help may be on the way, however, for San Diego's beleaguered defenders, rated 25th overall among 28 teams in 1982, and last against the pass.

Shoring up the defense that was repeatedly dismantled by Miami in the Dolphins' 34-13 playoff victory Sunday "has to be a major priority," San Diego Coach Don Coryell said Monday.

A year ago, after losing to the Cincinnati Bengals 27-7 in the frozen American Conference finale, the Chargers made some drastic moves on defense. Four veteran defenders — Tim Fox, Dewey Selmon, David Lewis and Bruce Laird — were acquired and Tom Bass, defensive coordinator at Tampa Bay, was hired.

Nevertheless, the distinct lack of balance between the capabilities of the Chargers' offense and the Chargers' defense remained.

After Sunday's defeat, tight end Kellen Winslow suggested the offense must have more help from the defense.

"It's kind of hard for us to go out and score 35 to 40 points per game," he said.

Coryell, whose club finished 7-4, partially blames the strike-shortened season for the lack of improvement.

"I can't speak for the other teams, but I think it really hurt our defense," said Coryell. "When the season started, our defense was really coming on." He was referring to San Diego's 23-3 season-opening victory at Denver and a 19-12 loss at Kansas City.

Then came the eight-week strike.

"The things we really worked on during training camp were lost when we came back," said Bass. "There were a lot of tools we'd like to have used that we never really got in a position to use after the strike because we weren't comfortable enough with them."

While another major overhaul is not likely, Bass acknowledged Sunday that "we have to make some changes." He indicated the Chargers need more speed in the secondary — and more time to jell.

"We have to go back to what we were doing during training camp that was successful in the first two games," Bass said. "When you look at the teams left in the playoffs, you see balanced teams. That's what we have to strive for. We have a tremendous offense. We have to get our defense up there, too."

Prior to the strike, Coryell was quoted as saying that Chargers' owner Gene Klein "made it very clear" he wanted the club in the Super Bowl this season.

Coryell recalled the remark Monday, but noted: "Remember that was before the strike, and as the strike went on he said, 'Forget the season. The only thing that's important is 1983.'"

"We start now," said Coryell. "We start preparing for next year."

He said the Chargers, with two first-round draft choices and two second-round picks, are in good position to improve themselves.

"But that doesn't mean the first two choices will be defensive players," he said. "It's going to depend on who is available."

Because of the Fred Dean trade with San Francisco, San Diego has the 49ers' first pick this year — the fifth selection.

Coryell makes no bones about who his preference would be if San Diego had the first pick in the draft.

Clearly, he covets John Elway, Stanford's outstanding quarterback.

"Never pass up a great quarterback. You'd have to be some kind of a nut to do that. He's one of the best potentially, certainly," he said.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — While the city's pro football teams have been playing "musical coaches," the Philadelphia Flyers and 76ers have, almost unnoticed, been playing at record paces.

Dick Vermeil quit as head coach of the Eagles in a tear-stained farewell last week and defensive coordinator Marion Campbell was named his replacement.

The Philadelphia Stars of the new United States Football League lost coach George Perles to Michigan State, but last Friday signed New England assistant Jim Mora as his replacement.

The football news tended to obscure somewhat the playing deeds of the National Hockey League Flyers and the National Basketball Association 76ers.

Prior to a tie Saturday night against Chicago, the Flyers had won nine straight, tying a club record. They are in the midst of an eight-game winning streak on the road, equalling a league record managed by only five teams in NHL history.

They have an opportunity to break that mark tonight in Washington against the Capitals.

In all, the Flyers are unbeaten in 12 games.

But, as usual, the players are low-key about the streaks, almost to a man claiming the only thing that counts is winning the Stanley Cup.

Coach Bob McCammon describes it as exciting, "but not that exciting," while captain Bill Barber says, "First place is the only thing that matters."

But you can tell in talking with the players that they're proud, and want to carry the streak as far as possible.

Veteran Bobby Clarke just smiles and insists it means nothing, but to the contrary it means that the Flyers have opened a seven-point lead in the Patrick Division over the defending Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders.

The Flyers are known for streaks, especially when they were unbeaten in 35 games (29-0-6) in 1979-80, a mark unprecedented in all of sports.

They're not thinking of another 35-game binge, but until somebody beats them, the possibility remains.

Then, there are the 76ers.

Moses Malone, Julius Erving, Andrew Toney, Maurice Cheeks and company have won 11 straight. One more ties the club record in 1980-81. And since that next game is tonight against the 6-30 Cleveland Cavaliers, the chances are bright they'll reach that plateau.

The string has enabled the them to open a 3½-game lead over the second-place Boston Celtics in the Atlantic Division, but the 76ers know that no lead is too great against the Celtics.

Both the Flyers and Sixers have been winning despite vital injuries. The Flyers, for example, have lost goalie Pelle Lindbergh, who has a severely sprained wrist and will be out another week. Barber, Ron Flockhart and Brad Marsh have been out with injuries at various times.

The Sixers lost Erving and backup forward Earl Cureton for two games. Toney has played with aches and bruises. Coach Billy Cunningham is fortunate that his bench has reacted positively to the situation. He's gotten a performance beyond what was expected from rookie starter Marc Iavaroni.

And there always is Malone, who leads the NBA in rebounds, averaging better than 16 per game. He's had 30 games of 20 points or more, and six of 30 or more.

His 219 offensive rebounds is just one less than team-leader Erving had for the entire 1981-82 season.

Malone, however, just plays. Erving sets the tone. "Streaks aren't a team goal," he says.

Erving says a team tries to win as many as it can, and when it loses it starts all over again. The first NBA title in his fabled career is Erving's goal.

Trio Helps Spark Knicks, As King Is On Sidelines

NEW YORK (AP) — With meal ticket Bernard King on the sidelines with an ankle injury, the New York Knicks needed a big scorer.

Bill Cartwright came through for them. So did Truck Robinson. Ditto Paul Westphal.

The three veterans, each of whom has averaged more than 20 points per game at least twice in his career, have rarely reached that total this season. But all three players exceeded their season highs in scoring Monday night to lead New York to a 119-109 National Basketball Association victory over the Chicago Bulls.

Cartwright led the Knicks with 28 points, one more than his season best, while Robinson had 26 points and scored more than 16 for the first time since he reached his previous high this season of 21 on Nov. 3.

Westphal's 25 points were six more than he has had for the Knicks in any game since they signed him last March 13.

"Truck, Cartwright and I have historically been scorers," Westphal said. "We have been running plays for Bernard this year, but with him injured we had to pick up the slack. Usually, we want to have balanced scoring, but we got in a rut and have been going to King."

King was injured Friday night after leading New York in scoring for 18 straight games. He is averaging 22.6 points per game, while Cartwright, Westphal and Robinson have combined for an average of only 28.9.

"Only getting eight or so shots a game is kind of hard for me to take when I used to get 20 a game," said Robinson, who leads the team in rebounding but is averaging only 7.5 points. "But we have a system that calls for King to shoot. I'm not washed up at 31. I need to be in the flow of the game."

Robinson said he realized that when King recovers, "we'll go back to Bernard King. But my confidence will be better. It'll also help Paul, who also has been an offensive player all his life."

Reggie Theus, who had only six points at halftime, led Chicago with 31, while Dave Corzine had 18 and Orlando Woolridge 17 for the Bulls.

Theus had 10 Chicago points in a row, including two three-point plays, early in the third quarter to reverse an 11-point deficit. But a 9-0 streak by the Knicks gave them an 81-73 lead.

New York then scored the first eight points of the fourth period for a 93-79 edge, the first of three occasions on which the Knicks led by 14.

The Bulls rallied to narrow the deficit to 102-99, but a free throw by Marvin Webster, a three-point play by Westphal, two free throws by Robinson and another basket by Westphal put the game out of reach.

Cartwright, Robinson and Westphal together were 31 for 37 from the free throw line as New York outscored the Bulls 39-20 in free throws, offsetting a 44-40 deficit from the field.

Hawks 102, Nets 96
Eddie Johnson had 28 points and 11 assists to lead Atlanta over New Jersey, which lost for only the second time in 14 games.

Hawk center Tree Rollins added 13 points, nine rebounds and 10 blocked shots, the most a player has ever had in a game against the Nets.

New Jersey led 96-95 with 1:41 left on a basket by Otis Birdsong, who scored 20 points. But Atlanta scored the last seven points of the game.

The Hawks led 81-71 with 10 minutes to go, but New Jersey outscored them 19-10 to cut the deficit to one. Then the Nets took their first lead 94-93 on a jump shot by Albert King, who had 21 points.

The Southwest Conference had the highest number of draft picks on the first round of the 1982 NBA draft. Four players from that conference were taken on the initial round.

Lebanon Insists On Early Israeli Troop Pull-Out

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The government is demanding that Israel withdraw all of its troops from Lebanese territory before Lebanon will agree to a formal end to the 35-year-old state of war with Israel, a government spokesman said today.

The announcement came as police reported a new round of sectarian fighting, with Christian and Druse militiamen trading artillery and rocket fire in the hills overlooking U.S. Marine positions south of Beirut. None of the shells came close to the Marine positions.

Christians and Druse also fought gun battles farther up in Lebanon's central mountains, near the towns of Aley and Bhamdoun, police said. Israel's state radio said Israeli forces in the area were put on alert.

An Israeli patrol approached the Marine position Monday night and asked to cross the Marine lines to get to a village near the airport, but the Marines refused and briefly went on alert. The U.S. Embassy said today it expressed "concern" over the incident to the Israeli government, which "indicated it will not happen again."

Antoine Fattal, Lebanon's chief delegate to the troop withdrawal talks, stated the Lebanese position on peace with Israel during Monday's session of the negotiations, the Lebanese government spokesman said.

"Agreement on terminating the state of war cannot be concluded before a total withdrawal is completed," the spokesman, who declined to be named, quoted Fattal as telling negotiators during the seventh round of talks.

Israel and Lebanon agreed to an armistice in 1949, after the first Arab-Israeli war in 1948. Lebanon did not enter later Middle East wars, but there has been disagreement over the status of the 1949 agreement and a technical state of war therefore exists.

At their first meeting four weeks ago, the negotiators to the withdrawal talks clashed openly over the 1949 armistice, with Lebanon claiming it still is in force and Israel arguing that it was nullified during the 1967 Mideast war.

U.S. delegation spokesman Christopher Ross said the next round of talks set for Thursday in the Israeli town of Kiryat Shmona will deal with the operation of the plenary sessions and subcommittees.

"I'm sure we will be intensifying their work," Ross added.

Ross said a subcommittee formed to discuss an end to the state of war between Israel and Lebanon "made good progress" during Monday's session in the Beirut suburb of Khalde.

U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib and his assistant, Morris Draper, have been pressing for a quicker pace in the talks, whose ultimate aim is the removal of more than 60,000 Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian troops from Lebanon.

In Jerusalem today, Habib and Draper met for 2½ hours with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and David Kimche, the chief Israeli negotiator. No details of the meeting were available.

Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem said the troop withdrawal talks were expected to produce a "protocol accord" to regulate future relations between the neighboring nations, "but a peace treaty is out of the question. It is impossible."

Lebanon is opposed to a treaty with Israel, fearing the wrath of its Arab neighbors.

Israeli troops invaded Lebanon last June 6 to rout Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from its neighbor to the north.

About 25,000 Israeli troops hold the south of Lebanon. An estimated 30,000 Syrian soldiers, sent by the Arab League as peacekeepers at the end of the 1975-76 civil war, now hold the east and north. At least 6,000 PLO guerrillas are believed entrenched behind Syrian lines.

In today's fighting, police said night-long duels between Christians and Druse south of Beirut flared into midmorning in the areas of Shweifat and Basaba, about five miles south of the capital. No casualty report was available.

Associated Press correspondent Terry A. Anderson, watching the duels from Beirut's international airport, said shells and rockets flew within 1.5 miles of the positions held by 1,200 U.S. Marine who are part of the international peacekeeping force in Beirut.

In other Middle East developments:

— Jordan's King Hussein returned home Monday from Saudi Arabia, where he discussed peace initiatives with King Fahd.

— PLO chief Yasser Arafat, in an interview published in Cairo, was quoted as saying Egypt should "return to its position of leadership" of the Arab world and stop demanding that the PLO recognize Israel. The interview was published in the economic weekly Al Ahram al Iktisady.

— Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon arrived in Zaire to discuss military, economic, political and agricultural cooperation with President Mobutu Sese Seko, the Israeli army radio reported in a broadcast from Kinshasa.

INCREASING WEIGHT — This week-old Lori, a Lemur born at the Skansen Aquarium in Stockholm, is getting an unusual start in life. Its mother couldn't feed it enough milk and the baby started losing weight. The alarmed keepers then placed it in an incubator and fed it with a breast-milk compensator and crickets. On the picture, taken recently, the scales show that the weight is increasing and soon the baby Lori will be united again with mother Hulda and father Kaut-Holger, both originally from the University of Vienna in Austria. In the meanwhile, a toy panda, in background, will have to do as a mother-substitute. (AP Laserphoto)

Driver Charged In School Bus Wreck

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The driver of the school bus that was struck by a train last Friday has been charged with a misdemeanor traffic violation that requires a school bus driver to remain stopped at a railroad crossing until it is safe to proceed, the N.C. Highway Patrol says.

Sgt. Douglas Deacon of the state Highway Patrol also says the transmission and braking system of the bus have been inspected by Onslow County school officials and the National Safety Council and were found to be "OK."

The driver, Marilyn Francine Mills, 17, of Jacksonville, had told observers at the scene of the accident that she hit the brakes as the bus moved forward onto the railroad tracks, but she said the brakes failed.

Miss Mills was formally charged with "failing to operate a school bus within 50 feet but not less than 10 feet from the nearest rail of such railroad and remain stopped upon the approach of a train before proceeding until being able to do so safely," authorities said.

If found guilty, she faces a maximum penalty of a $100 fine and 60 days in jail.

The bus, which was nearly filled with 55 students as it was carrying students on their way home from the Tabernacle Middle School, pulled too close to the tracks after Miss Mills stopped on Spring Hill Road, the patrol said.

The bus was halfway over the tracks when the north-bound Seaboard Systems Railroad train struck, investigators said after the accident. The bus was pushed 218 feet away from the intersection.

Passengers said the driver attempted to put the bus in reverse, when instead the bus remained in forward gear and lunged forward. The train hit its emergency brakes, but not in time, and struck the bus at about 20 mph.

Meanwhile, the last of the 12 students hospitalized as a result of the collision is expected to be released from the hospital today. Kevin Brown, 13, was treated for pelvic injuries at Onslow Memorial Hospital.

A total of 42 students aboard the bus were injured. Most serious injuries were pelvic fractures, although some students also had broken collar bones.

At Seminar On Tobacco

FARMVILLE — Jackie and Hardy Moye believe tobacco growers need to take two steps to safeguard the future of the crop — develop a positive working relationship between growers and exporting companies and grow a competitively priced, quality product.

The Route 1, Farmville, couple recently completed the executive development seminar for tobacco growers and tobacco farm women conducted by North Carolina State University and say the seminar influenced their thinking on tobacco production.

As a result of the seminar, the Moyes say they plan to improve their accounting methods in 1983 by keeping abreast of costs and expenses and making more accurate projections.

Participants attended four days of classes at N.C. State University and made a two-day visit to R.J. Reynolds World Headquarters in Winston-Salem.

Dr. Chester Black, director of the Agricultural Extension Service, said the seminar is for innovative tobacco farmers who want to broaden their knowledge of tobacco production and marketing.

"It is one of the first statewide educational programs to recognize the role women play in modern agriculture," he said.

Sucker control and descriptions of tobacco grades were ranked by the Moyes as the most interesting topics of the seminar.

The Moyes have been farming 12 years. They raise 310 acres of corn, soybeans, wheat, oats and cucumbers in addition to 50 acres of tobacco.

Dutch Prince In Hospital Care

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Prince Claus, who had been under treatment in a Swiss psychiatric clinic for depression, has transferred to a Dutch hospital.

"Because the condition of the Prince requires a long clinical treatment, the Prince prefers that further treatment should be in a Dutch hospital," said a government statement discussing the transfer Monday.

Since October the German-born prince, 56, husband to Queen Beatrix, has been under treatment for what the government describes as "complaints of a depressive nature."

He accompanied the queen on her state visit to Britain in November, but appeared to be tired.

Four Charged With Smuggling Aliens Into U.S.

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) —
Four men have been charged with stuffing 53 aliens from

El Salvador into a truck
"like sardines" and smuggling them into the Southwest for a fee of about $55,000.

Two dozen men, 26 women and three Salvadoran children were apprehended
Sunday near Lordsburg, N.M., after sneaking into the United States from El Paso, authorities said.

The group had been packed into a 2½-ton truck for a 750-mile trip to Los Angeles, said Joe Aubin, chief intelligence agent of the U.S.
Border Patrol in El Paso.
"The Salvadorans were literally standing packed like sardines in a refrigerated truck," Aubin said Monday.
"They were locked in back of the truck with air but nothing else. That's a rough way to go to Los Angeles."
The aliens told authorities they paid $1,000 to $1,200 each to be taken to California, and were headed for cities in California's farm belt, New Jersey and New York, he said.

The four men arrested included Victor Rivera Gutierrez, an El Salvadoran, and Mexican nationals
Rafael Urena-Paredes, Miguel Angel Zuniga-
Alegria, and Javier
Castaneda Najera, said Alan Eliason, chief of the border patrol's El Paso sector.
The four were taken before a U.S. magistrate in Las Cruces, N.M., on multiple federal counts of smuggling aliens into the U.S., he said. Each was being held in the Dona Ana County Jail on $50,000 bond.

Authorities believe the Salvadorans, fleeing their war-torn Central American country, tricked across the border to gather in El Paso for the final portion of their trip to Los Angeles.
Each Salvadoran faces Immigration and Naturalization Service deportation proceedings which probably will return them to their homeland, officials said.
The smugglers were picked up on Interstate 10 near the Arizona border

Sunday when patrolmen saw the truck stop near a temporary border inspection station and the suspects run away.
"This was a pretty good-sized ring. And to have 53 stuffed standing in a truck that's not very big could have been dangerous in the end," Aubin said.
There were no toilet facilities or water in the truck, he said.
Last October, four Salvadorans died in Edinburg in South Texas after suffocating in a tractor-trailer. Another Salvadoran was found dead in a nearby canal, and several others smuggled into this country were hospitalized.

Authorities report apprehensions of illegal aliens along the 1,760-mile U.S.-Mexico border are up about 30 percent this month from the same period last year. Data shows about 99 percent of those apprehended are Mexicans fleeing economic hardship.
The majority of the others are Salvadorans who usually enter the U.S. through the Lower Rio Grande Valley, officials say.

The Forecast For Wednesday, January 19

WEATHER OUTLOOK — The National Weather Service predicts showers Wednesday for most of the northeast with rain predicted for Texas and the Mississippi River delta region. Snow is indicated for the Rocky Mountain States as far south as Utah and Colorado with Kansas and Oklahoma also predicted to receive snow in parts. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Tonight will probably be the coldest night of the season in North Carolina with lows ranging from 5 below to 5 above in the northern mountains to the teens and 20s near the coast.
Temperatures tonight will probably be even colder than the low readings the state experienced Monday night.
Wednesday will be fair but still cold with highs once more in the 30s.

Snow flurries in the northern and central mountains were expected to taper off today, and skies were sunny over most of the state today.
Although the sun was out for most of the day, it was cold — and brisk northerly winds made it seem even colder.
Highs reached only into the 30s, except in the northern mountains where reading will be no higher than the 20s.

Brisk northerly winds ushered in a fresh supply of cold air over the state Monday night.
Early morning temperatures were mostly in the low 20s in the foothills but the clouds over the northeast held readings in the low to mid 30s near the northeast coastal sections.

Mild Weather Allows Reduction In Fuels-Use

By The Associated Press
With temperatures averaging 25 percent higher this winter than last, North Carolinians have cut their use of electricity, oil and natural gas to the dismay of suppliers.
Carolina Power and Light
Co. sold 501,283,711 kilowatt hours of electricity to 555,045 residential customers in North Carolina in December, said spokeswoman Kay Young. By comparison, the company sold 563,678,418 kwh in December 1981, a decrease of about 7.38 percent, she said.
Duke Power Company, the state's largest utility, had a similar decline — from 707,663,277 kwh in December 1981 to 701,465,725 the same month the previous year, said spokeswoman Mary Boyd.
Heating oil sales have dropped by 20-30 percent, according to the N.C. Oil Jobbers Association.
"It's hurting our business," said Larry Elmore, vice president and manager of Randolph Oil Co. in Asheboro. "Our deliveries are way down."

Clarence Owens, vice president of Vanstory Oil Co. in Greensboro, says other oil dealers throughout North Carolina — except in the western mountains — have reported similar sales slumps.
Twice in recent months, natural gas suppliers won N.C. Utilities Commission approval of rate increases.
The weather has been so warm that they've hardly been noticed, but an official of the commission's Public
Staff says they soon will be.
"I would say some (customers) are beginning to get (higher bills) now," said Ray Nery, director of the Public Staff's natural gas division. "This winter customers will begin to feel the effect of all those increases."
The use of natural gas is measured in "therms," said Steve Conner, spokesman for Piedmont Natural Gas Co. in Charlotte. One therm equals approximately 100,000 British thermal units — BTUs — or 100 cubic feet of gas.

In December 1981, the average year-round customer used 152 therms of gas and paid a bill of $77.50, Conner said. In December 1982, the same average customer used 110.2 therms and was billed $72.10. Even the use of wood, an increasingly popular heating source, is down from last year,
experts say.
William Smith of Greensboro, who has been in the firewood business for over six years, says two years ago he was delivering as many as five cords of wood per day. A cord is a 4-by-4-by-8-ft. stack of wood.
"The only time we're selling now is on really cold days," Smith said.

Rare Chaplin Films Being Aired On British TV

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — British television is broadcasting three hours of out-takes, rushes and other film shot by Charlie Chaplin but kept hidden in a vault by the secretive comic genius, some of it for six decades.

Kevin Brownlow — one of two British movie buffs who culled the program from 300,000 feet of film — called the discovery of the collection at Chaplin's Swiss home "the equivalent of finding Rembrandt's long-lost sketch books."

Chaplin's widow, Oona, allowed Brownlow and David Gill to produce three one-hour programs as a tribute to one of cinema's masters of comedy. The series, entitled "Unknown Chaplin," is being shown by Thames Television on Britain's commercial network and marks the first public screening of the footage.
Much of the film dates from 1916-17, when Chaplin directed and starred in 12 of his "Little Tramp" two-reelers in 16 months. There also is illuminating footage of the later Chaplin, by that time a star, working on such classic features as "Gold Rush" and "City Lights."

The footage provides a unique insight into how the actor-director honed his art, usually improvising as he worked, sometimes shaping his inspiration only at the end of a movie and then shooting the whole thing again.
"He was a dervish," recalled a colleague from the early days. "He did everything. He was like a god."

Chaplin, who died on Christmas Day 1977 at the age of 88, was secretive about how he worked and often said that if people saw how it was done, the magic would be spoiled.
But the two movie buffs argued, and Chaplin's widow agreed, that he would have recognized that the raw materials of his art belonged to posterity.
Brownlow believes the trilogy will reestablish Chaplin's reputation as a cinematic master.

"His reputation has suffered," he said, "particularly in Britain, partly due to sort of revisionism which selected Buster Keaton as the supreme comedian, partly because Chaplin's films were hardly seen."
He and Gill lucked into the film through Chaplin's business manager, Rachel Ford, while doing research for a TV series on early Hollywood. Describing the first time they viewed it in the projection room at the Chaplin home on Lake Geneva, Brownlow recalled:

"We found ourselves watching superlative quality prints of Chaplin footage never before seen in public. We reeled with the impact of it all, suppressing the desire to run for the street with the cans under our arms."
"There was a complete edited sequence from 'City Lights,' as simple and brilliant as anything Chaplin ever did, a scene from 'Modern Times,' rushes from three unused sequences for 'The Circus,' and fragments for a film about his studio," he recalled.
"We'd never been exposed to such complete rushes of silent films before and ones that showed so clearly how Chaplin worked. It took us months to view them, and our original idea for one 52-minute documentary soon was expanded into a trilogy."
The films show Chaplin inventing gags while the cameras roll, refining them in take after take, frequently rejecting them and even deciding when he finished a movie to reshoot the whole thing with different actors.

There are shots of Chaplin as the baggy-pants tramp, cracking up with laughter in front of the cameras and wrecking the scene. In others, he rebukes actors and acts out their parts for them.
He is seen agonizing over the classic scene from "City Lights" in which the blind flower girl sells Charlie, the tramp, a flower, believing him to be a tycoon.
It took him 534 days to make the movie, including 368 days during which he shot nothing while he tried to figure out how to show why the girl, who couldn't see, thought the tramp, who never spoke, was a rich man.
Chaplin shot 342 takes to get the scene he wanted.

RARE CHAPLIN — Charlie Chaplin assumes the role of the blind girl in the movie "City Lights," in a scene which is part of three hours of Chaplin film never seen by the public being broadcast on British TV. (AP Laserphoto)

Familiar Faces Are Repeaters Among Music Awards Winners

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kenny Rogers, Willie Nelson and Lionel Richie headed a list of familiar faces who were repeat winners on the 10th annual presentation of the American Music Awards voted by 30,000 record buyers nationwide.

The exceptions were Daryl Hall & John Oates, named favorite pop group; John Cougar, favorite male pop vocalist; Alabama, favorite country group, and Marvin Gaye, favorite soul single winner for "Sexual Healing."
Rogers won as favorite male country vocalist and for the favorite country single "Love Will Turn You Around" at Monday night's nationally telecast ceremonies. He also was presented a special Award of Merit for his contribution to the entertainment of the American public.

The bearded singer, whose country hits have also enjoyed tremendous success on pop charts, lent a homey note to the ceremonies by bringing his wife, Marianne, and their 13-month-old son, Christopher Cody, with him as he accepted the merit award.

He also was the subject of a singing and spoken tribute by several artists, including Richie and show co-hosts Melissa Manchester and Mac Davis.

Not including the special merit award, which is given by a committee of music industry figures, Rogers' 10-year total now stands at 12 American Music Awards.

The winners are determined by a poll of 30,000 record buyers selected to reflect the age, sex, ethnic background and geographic locations of record buyers nationwide. Nominees are drawn from year-end charts of music industry trade publications.

Richie increased his total to six by taking favorite male soul vocalist and favorite pop single for "Truly." He said he was surprised to win the award over Survivor's "Eye of the Tiger" and "Ebony and Ivory" — the Paul McCartney-Stevie Wonder duet.

"I like surprises," Richie added.

Willie Nelson's hit LP "Always on My Mind" won in two categories, favorite country album and favorite pop album. The country singer, who accepted via satellite from San Diego, said simply, "All of you who voted for me, thank you. That's all I can say."

Olivia Newton-John brought her total to nine by winning as this year's favorite female pop vocalist. She accepted via a satellite transmission from Hawaii.

Barbara Mandrell took her fourth award by being named favorite female country vocalist for the third straight year.

Another repeat winner was Diana Ross, voted favorite female soul vocalist for a second time. Last year she had won two awards for "Endless Love," her duet with Richie, and in 1981 she won a favorite soul single award for "Upside Down." Miss Ross was not present this year.

Kool & The Gang were declared favorite soul group for the second year in a row. "It is always good to know, through perseverance, that your work is appreciated," said Robert (Kool) Bell, who brought only one member of his nine-man gang with him to the awards show.

Aretha Franklin, another co-hostess of the ABC telecast, got her third American Music Award, winning favorite soul album for "Jump To It." She had won female soul vocalist honors in 1976 and 1977.

Other highlights of the show were Stray Cats' performance of "Rock This Town," Miss Manchester's "You Should Hear How She Talks About You" and Hall & Oates' "Maneater."

U.S. Says Soviet Ignoring American Arms Pleas

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says the Soviet Union is insisting on preserving its massive nuclear weapons advantage in Europe while ignoring American appeals for the elimination of such armaments.

The White House and the State Department issued identical statements on the subject Monday in response to reports that U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva had reached an informal arms agreement last summer that later was rejected by Washington and Moscow.

According to the reports, Paul H. Nitze, the chief U.S. negotiator to the talks on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles, had worked out the tentative agreement in discussions with his Soviet counterpart, Yuri Kvitsinsky.

There were contradictory reports about the nature of the agreement, with some officials saying it would have preserved the Soviet advantage and others saying it would have ensured Soviet-American parity.

In either case, the proposed accord negotiated by Nitze represented a departure from the administration's position that the Soviets dismantle all of their nuclear weapons targeted at Western Europe. In return, NATO countries would cancel their proposed plan to install 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles starting in December 1983.

Nitze apparently conducted the discussions away from the negotiating site during informal exchanges with Kvitsinsky. The administration statements Monday suggested that tactic does not violate Nitze's instructions.

"Ambassador Nitze has always been authorized to explore flexibility in the Soviet position," the statements said.

And White House Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said President Reagan does not feel Nitze "had done anything out of the ordinary."

But supporters of Eugene V. Rostow, the ousted director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, believe Rostow was fired because of his role in recommending the informal accord to the White House.

One such aide was reported to be mystified as to why Nitze appears to have escaped from the episode without criticism while Rostow's role in it cost him his job.

One possible explanation offered here is that both Rostow and Nitze are conservative Democrats and the dismissal of both could cost Reagan badly needed political support from that group.

Whatever hopes Rostow and Nitze may have had for the tentative agreement were quickly dashed when Washington and Moscow disassociated themselves from it.

The administration refused comment on the nature of Nitze's informal discussions, beyond saying that the Soviets have proved unwilling "to accept any outcome other than one which would preserve its massive advantage and monopoly in intermediate nuclear force systems."

The question remains whether the administration will bow to European pressure and abandon its 14-month old policy in support of the total elimination of all intermediate range nuclear forces from Europe.

On Monday, the White House and the State Department insisted that this was the "best solution" without saying whether the administration would settle for less.

Many in Europe believe the White House proposal is unrealistic, and that it should show more flexibility in the interest of reaching an agreement that would preclude the American deployment of missiles in allied countries.

Soviet leader Yuri Andropov has offered to reduce the present Soviet arsenal to 162 missiles — the same number deployed by Britain and France.

The United States has termed that offer "unacceptable," but the two sides will reconvene their discussions in Geneva on Jan. 27.

CHALLENGER ON PAD — The Space Shuttle Challenger rests on the pad at Kennedy Space Center awaiting the second test-firing of the orbiter's engines. Hardee's Today Is 3rd Largest CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Hardee's Food Systems Inc., which began expansion from a single outlet in Rocky Mount in the 1960s, has vaulted past Wendy's into third place in sales by nationwide hamburger restaurant groups, says a retail food publication.

Hardee's 1982 sales totaled $1.7 billion — putting it behind McDonald's, the industry leader with $7.8 billion, and Burger King, with $2.4 billion in sales. Wendy's, which had held third place, had sales of $1.6 billion, according to figures listed in Restaurants and Institutions, of Des Plaines, Ill.

The company's move up was made after it purchased two fast-food chains last year.

Industry analysts say Hardee's growth is the result of a step-by-step expansion that will shore up thinly covered midwestern markets and lay the groundwork for a push in the West.

"This strategy is a nice geographical extension of the company," said Bill Chisholm, a retail analyst at Loewen Undera McCutcheon & Co., a Toronto brokerage.

Hardee's appears to be carefully planning its moves much more adeptly than it did in the 1960s, when it began expansion from a single outlet in Rocky Mount, Chisholm added.

Pushed by declining market share and increasing competition in the fast-food industry, Hardee's bought two established hamburger chains last year. The addition of about 680 restaurants gave Hardee's a total of 2,170 outlets.

In March, Hardee's acquired Burger Chef Systems Inc., an Indianapolis-based hamburger chain. Burger Chef added about 656 restaurants and two new states — Ohio and Indiana — to the Hardee's system.

"Their immediate priority is to get the Burger Chef units open and going as Hardee's, then to expand into other markets," Chisholm said.

Jack Laughery, chairman and chief operating officer at Hardee's, said the company has been gaining strength in North Carolina and South Carolina but has lost market share in the Midwest, where its restaurants are scattered.

"We're very concentrated in some states," he said. "Most of our stores are located in the Southeast, with about 300 of them in the Carolinas."

In November, Hardee's made its westernmost move by purchasing Dee's Inc., a chain of 28 Utah restaurants. Though Dee's is smaller and removed from Hardee's operations, Laughery says the stores eventually will fit with Hardee's isolated restaurants in Arizona and New Mexico.

The acquisitions were backed financially and organizationally by Imasco Ltd., a Montreal-based conglomerate that purchased Hardee's in 1981.

Imasco also owns a bakery and cigarette manufacturing plant in Canada.

Imasco officials say Hardee's is the company's second-largest revenue producer, behind the tobacco division, and they say they intend to finance further expansion.

FOCUS

A Legal Slip

If you're wearing skates, ice is nice, but if not, walk with care during these winter months. Of course, even the most careful pedestrians slip now and then. Let's say you're entering a store and you fall on ice at the entrance. Can you sue the store and win? Probably so, according to Joseph A. Page, Professor of Law at Georgetown University. He says the store is responsible for injuries caused by conditions on the premises, even if those conditions are the result of the weather. Signs warning customers of danger are not enough to satisfy the courts. So, store-owners, please salt those walkways. And, customers, please be careful. Even a successful lawsuit won't make up for a serious injury.

After trials held in Minneapolis, two strong teams emerged as the American Contract Bridge League's representatives for the 1983 World Team Championship for the Bermuda Bowl, to be held in Stockholm, Sweden, at the end of September. By winning the event, Bobby Wolff, Bob Hamman, Peter Weichsel, Alan Sontag, Ron Rubin and Mike Becker earned a place in the semifinals. The beaten finalists, Dr. George Rosenkranz, Eddie Wold, Mike Passell, Jim Jacoby, Jeff Meckstroth and Eric Rodwell, will have to play through the qualifying rounds to earn a place among the last four. The winners of the European Championship will also be seeded through to the semifinals.

Slams played an important part in the result. The eventual winners took an early lead that looked as if it might assume runaway proportions. On this hand, Rubin-Becker were doubled in four hearts and made an overtrick for a score of 990. At the other table, Hamman opened one spade and Meckstroth's jump to three hearts was strong, according to their system! There was no holding Rodwell. He launched into Key-Card Blackwood and, when his partner showed either two aces or one ace and the king of trumps, he bid the slam.

Had Wolff led a diamond, he would have won the match there and then. But he made the normal lead of his partner's suit and, thanks to the lucky distribution, Meckstroth never looked back.

He ruffed in hand with a high trump and led a club. It made no difference what the defenders did. Two ruffs would bring down the outstanding club honors, setting up the ten as a trick. And there were just enough entries to dummy to set up the fifth spade and take two diamond discards on spades. Declarer lost only one club trick to score 1430 points and pick up 10 International Match Points.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Bolivia Purging Military Chiefs

By CARLOS ARCE

Associated Press Writer
LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) —

The new civilian government is purging key officers who served in military regimes that ruled Bolivia after a 1980 coup.

The purges have been placed in the hands of newly appointed "institutionalist" military commanders who supported Bolivia's return to civilian rule in October and who now seek to restore the military's fallen prestige.

In the past 2½ months, military honor tribunals have discharged 23 army officers including Gen. Luis Garcia Meza, leader of the 1980 coup, and the navy and air force commanders who governed with him on a military junta.

Garcia Meza, who has fled Bolivia, is under military investigation on narcotics-trafficking charges. Bolivia is a major source of cocaine.

Two hundred more officers are being tried by the honor courts, and scores of others promoted by Garcia Meza in exchange for political favors were relegated recently to the reserves or stripped of important commands.

The purge is the biggest within the 35,000-man armed forces in three decades.

The elected government of President Hernan Siles Zuazo has been able to confront a severe economic recession without the military power policking that plagued most of his predecessors.

"The armed forces are determined to work within the constitution," said Gen. Simon Sejas, the new army commander, who has been close to Siles Zuazo since their exile in Chile a decade ago. "The time has come to achieve a re-encounter with the people."

Garcia Meza seized power in July 1980 to prevent the election of Siles Zuazo, the leftist presidential candidate, by a Congress that had been chosen by the voters the month before. The general's 13-month presidency, ended by another military coup, was marked by death-squad killings of dissidents, a boom in the military-protected cocaine trade and a near collapse of Bolivia's legitimate economy.

Faced by nationwide labor strikes in September and unwilling to impose the austerity measures needed to obtain international financial aid, the generals decided to recognize the 1980 election results and withdrew to the barracks.

At least seven officers, including Garcia Meza and his interior minister, Col. Luis Arce Gomez, fled the country in the waning days of military rule.

Both the Congress and a military court are investigating charges that Garcia Meza, Gen. Waldo Bernal of the air force and the former navy commander, Rear Adm. Ramiro Terrazas, received kickbacks from an Argentine company, Rummy Ltd., to which they awarded exclusive mineral rights near the Brazilian border while serving on the junta.

According to testimony published in Bolivian newspapers, Garcia Meza allegedly accumulated about $20 million in monthly payments from the mining company.

Others discharged from the army included Gen. Hugo Echeverria Tardio, former commander in Santa Cruz, center of the cocaine trade; Capt. Luis Cossio Viruez, former operations chief of the military-run National Council against Narcotics Trafficking, and Col. Freddy Quiroga Regue, former chief of the Special Security Service, a death squad set up by Arce Gomez.

The army announcement of their dismissals said they had committed "crimes against the public order" but the charges were not specified.

Three recent former military presidents, Gens. Alberto Natusch Busch, Celso Torrello and Guido Viloso, were assigned to the reserves, a step toward early retirement.

Some Conservatives Seek Alternative To Reagan

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Frustrated conservatives, describing President Reagan as displaying a "lack of interest" in running the country, are threatening to challenge his re-election unless he fires several top aides and veers his administration to the right.

"I would think the conservative cause and the Republican Party would be better served if the president doesn't run for re-election," Richard Viguerie, a conservative publisher and fund-raiser, said in an interview.

"It would have been unthinkable a year ago to oppose Reagan," added Viguerie. "I think there's a strong chance that if he does run, he would be opposed by a strong conservative."

"I think there will be an all-out effort to persuade him not to run in 1984," said Howard Phillips, chairman of the Conservative Caucus, in a separate interview.

Reagan has said he has not yet decided whether to seek a second term in 1984.

While Viguerie and Phillips have been persistent conservative critics of the Reagan presidency from its outset, this marked the first time they openly discussed challenging the president for the 1984 Republican presidential nomination.

John T. Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, said he saw little chance such a challenge could succeed.

When told some fellow conservatives were talking about finding an alternative to Reagan in 1984, Dolan commented: "Good luck."

"I obviously share their frustration, but I really don't know what we can do about it," said Dolan.

The latest administration decisions to anger and frustrate the conservatives were the president's endorsement of the compromise agreement on Social Security, which will result in accelerating increases in payroll taxes, and his appointment of former Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., to be secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Phillips said he still hoped the president would fire White House aides James A. Baker III, Michael Deaver, David Gergen and Richard Darman. Those four are often described by conservatives as leading Reagan away from the principles on which he ran in 1980.

"There is no way in which conservatives are going to get elected in 1984, running on a record of the biggest tax increases and the biggest deficits in the history of the country," said Phillips.

Viguerie referred to the "continual lack of interest by the president in running the country and letting Jim Baker and Howard Baker (the Senate majority leader) run the operation."

Talking about the prospects for a campaign against Reagan, Viguerie said, "It would be very easy to put together a significant campaign based on the Reagan campaign of 1980.

"In other words, reduce taxes, balance the budget, stop busing, bring school prayer back, you name it. Abolish the Department of Education, the Department of Energy."

"He's done so very little that it would be very easy to put together his campaign pledges and promises and for a major conservative to run on that."

Neither Viguerie nor Phillips would talk about possible challengers to Reagan.

But among the Republicans often praised by Viguerie's magazine "Conservative Digest," are Sens. Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Orrin Hatch of Utah and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

Viguerie said he believes Reagan will decide against running in 1984.

"He may indicate sometime this year that he will run for re-election," said Viguerie, "But I think that before the primaries start in 1984, that he will withdraw."

Judge Again Is Indicted

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — District Court Judge J. Wilton Hunt, who already faces federal bribery charges in the COLCOR probe, was indicted by a state grand jury Monday on conspiracy and bribery charges.

Hunt, who has pleaded innocent to similar federal charges in the FBI's COLCOR probe, was charged with conspiracy, conspiracy to receive and receiving bribes in an eight-count indictment handed down Monday by a Columbus County grand jury.

"This is basically the same as what he's charged with in the federal investigation," said SBI agent Bill Dowdy. "There is an additional count that he wasn't charged with by the feds."

Hunt was arrested by federal agents July 29 and is scheduled to face trial in U.S. District Court in Raleigh Jan. 24 on charges of accepting bribes from undercover FBI agents.

District Attorney Michael Easley said the indictment Monday resulted from an investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation and the N.C. Attorney General's office. The probe was initiated based on information that surfaced during the federal government's investigation of corruption in the county, nicknamed COLCOR by the FBI.

Hunt was arrested at the county courthouse by two agents of the SBI.

Hunt was taken before magistrate Ralph Edwards and was released on a $10,000 property bond posted by his father, Donald Hunt.

Just Call It Space Tech

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scientists at the Research Triangle Institute working under a million-dollar federal contract are putting space technology to biomedical uses.

The contract directs scientists of RTI's Biomedical Applications Team to make three transfers of aeronautical technology into biomedical and commercial uses each year.

One of these transfers is a cooling vest for quadriplegics, said Doris Rouse, BAT director. Since people with spinal cord injuries cannot perspire below the level of injury, they risk heat stroke in even moderate heat. The cooling vest can help cool their bodies and reduce heat stroke risk.

This technology was developed as water-cooled vests to control temperatures within astronauts' space suits. It's now being evaluated for use by quadriplegics by the Veterans Administration Hospital in Palo Alto, Calif.

Another BAT-coordinated project based on space technology is a blanket to prevent infants from losing heat during surgery.
