Democrats Consider Bundy Successor

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Several names were being mentioned today as Pitt and Greene County Democrats geared up to recommend a successor to state Rep. Sam D. Bundy, who died in Raleigh Wednesday after suffering a heart attack while eating breakfast.

Bundy's successor will be recommended by a four-member committee — two members from Greene County and two from Pitt. An appointment will be made by Gov. Jim Hunt after the committee's recommendation is approved by the state party.

Local Democratic sources indicated that speculation for a successor includes former Farmville Mayor Linwood Mercer; Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville, son of the veteran congressman; Greenville attorney Tom Taft and real estate broker Mark Tipton, also of Greenville; Mark Owens of Farmville, an attorney and chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education, and Dr. Leo Jenkins, former chancellor of East Carolina University.

Members of the committee to recommend a successor from Greene County will be Lionel Moore and Richard Price. The Pitt County members will be named by the county Democratic Executive Committee.

Each county has a standing House of Representatives Executive Committee. Pitt County's committee members were selected before Bethel and Carolina townships were moved to another district during redistricting last year. Membership on the committee has not been updated since that time.

State Democratic Party Chairman Sen. Russell Walker of Randolph County will appoint the chairman. Historically the chairman is from the smallest county, in this case Greene. Each member will have one vote for each 300 population.

Consumption Tax System Studied By White House

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is studying a revamped income tax system that would exempt savings, stock and bond purchases and other forms of investment while taxing personal spending on consumer goods and services.

President Reagan's chief economist, Martin S. Feldstein, said Wednesday night the administration "is considering a major tax reform initiative," and a so-called consumption tax is "one of the approaches we have been discussing."

"The consumption tax approach is appealing in a number of ways," Feldstein said in a speech prepared for delivery to a tax conference.

Feldstein emphasized that administration discussions on a consumption tax are preliminary and "no specific or final decisions have been made."

But he said a consumption tax "removes the distortion in the present law that favors current consumption and discourages saving." Without an increase in savings and investments, the economy cannot expand, he said.

Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, did not describe in detail the consumption tax he had in mind, but economists usually apply the term consumption to food, entertainment, tobacco, clothing, rent and anything else that is not kept for its lasting value.

The idea behind a consumption tax, Feldstein said, is that individuals would pay federal taxes only on that portion of income they spend on personal consumption.

Cash savings, "purchases of stocks or other assets, and repayments of loans" would be subtracted from that part of a person's income subject to taxation, he said.

The present tax code encourages people to borrow by allowing them to deduct interest costs from their taxable income, and discourages them from saving by taxing interest, dividends and capital gains, he said.

Critics of a consumption tax approach have argued that it favors wealthy people, who are in a better position to save a large proportion of their money or invest it in stocks and bonds. Lower-income people, critics say, often have little to save after paying for housing, energy, food and other necessities.

Feldstein is the first senior White House official to discuss publicly the administration's latest thinking on tax code changes.

Other officials, speaking on condition that their names not be used, previously have said that Reagan's State of the Union message to Congress on Tuesday is to include a general call for "major tax reform," but without specifics.

Feldstein spoke at a conference sponsored by the American Council for Capital Formation, a business-oriented group. In his address, he omitted much of what he said in his prepared text about taxing consumption. But a spokesman, who asked that his own name not be used, said later that Feldstein stood by the printed text.

Legislators Hunt Money

By MARY ANNE RHYNE

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bills to increase the sales tax from 3 percent to 4 percent and to study the possibility of a statewide lottery will be considered by legislators as part of a search for new revenue sources.

The bills were introduced Wednesday, after legislators heard another gloomy economic forecast. The prediction from the legislative staff of analysts shows that Gov. Jim Hunt may have overestimated state revenues for 1983-84 by $92.7 million.

The difference in the estimates almost equals the amount needed to lift the freeze on state employees' and teachers' salaries next year.

Analyst David Crotts said more recent data accounts for the difference between the estimates.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, then introduced a bill to raise the sales tax from 3 percent to 4 percent to generate $240 million a year for general expenditures, highways and local governments.

All counties but Burke now levy an optional 1 percent additional tax.

Rep. Jeanne Fenner, D-Wilson, and Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, introduced bills calling for consideration of a statewide lottery.

Under Huskins' bill, 40 percent of the new revenues would go for general operating expenses. That's just enough to lift the salary freeze, Huskins said.

Of the rest of the money, 30 percent would go to counties for capital projects, 20 percent would go to local governments for water and clean air projects and 10 percent would match federal highway construction aid.

"It is our obligation that when times are tough like they are now to initiate projects we know we have to

Fuel Assistance Funds In Pitt Nearly Gone

By MARY SCHULKEN

Reflector Staff Writer

As the mercury drops in Pitt County this winter, so do the chances for the elderly and low income families to find help keeping warm.

Money for fuel assistance to low income persons in the county is scarce because funds for crisis intervention are nearly dry, says Ed Garrison, director of Pitt County Social Services.

Of $92,456 the county received for fiscal year 1983, Garrison estimates that $10,000 remains. But these funds, he said, are earmarked for the elderly who receive Social Security payments and are not eligible for the state-administered low income energy assistance program.

"We are in a position where the money we (Pitt County) have had is almost completely depleted," said Garrison. "Crisis intervention funds became available in October of 1982 and we've already allotted almost the entire amount."

Garrison said that although this week's sub-freezing temperatures brought the first prolonged cold snap of the season, low income families have what he called a "constant emergency situation."

"For this reason we have committed nearly all of our money," he said. "We have a small amount of county money for dire situations and we've been calling on churches for help, which they've provided."

"If February and March are severe," added Garrison, "we will have a serious problem in this county ... we will have to ask (the churches) for more help."

On Wednesday the low plunged to 15 degrees Fahrenheit, and the high barely squeaked past freezing to a frosty 34 degrees, according to Greenville Utilities Water Plant.

At 8 a.m. today, the mercury stood at 18 degrees, down from a 20-degree reading at midnight.

Garrison said the frigid weather has slowed traffic through the social service office.

"We've had a great deal of traffic through here for the last three months," he said. "This cold snap has slowed the traffic down and kept people at home by the fire, especially older people."

Garrison said low income energy assistance checks, scheduled to be mailed the first week in February, will provide some relief for heatless families. The program, he said, is funded entirely from federal funds.

Low income families applied for the funds in December, said Garrison, and were selected based on their need and eligibility.

Israel Demanding Stations In Lebanon

Funds Pledged To Road Repair

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has pledged more than $1 million in emergency relief funds for repair work to elevate, protect and widen parts of N.C. 12 that have been threatened by recent winter storms.

In a Wednesday meeting with Dare and Hyde county commissioners and several coastal legislators, Hunt also said he would recommend that the state Board of Transportation spend another $4.2 million to widen and repave the remaining 24 miles between Oregon Inlet and Avon.

N.C. 12 is the Outer Banks only highway link to the mainland. It is the state's eastern-most roadway, a popular route for summer tourists and surf fishermen.

Hunt said $200,000 would be used to dredge and replenish about 300 yards of the highway's protective dunes about two miles north of Buxton.

Another $850,000 will be spent on elevating several parts of the highway by 6-21 inches.

The 11 sections of N.C. 12 that are affected total about four miles and are located between Oregon Inlet and Avon. They are areas prone to flooding during storms, state officials said.

The two-lane road also would be widened and repaved, said Highway Administrator Billy Rose, who attended Wednesday's meeting.

Rose said the emergency work would begin as soon as the needed permits are obtained.

He said state officials would meet Friday with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which oversees some of the permits needed — including those for dredging.

"We have asked that the permit process be expedited because of the concern over new storm damage," Rose said. Sand would be dredged to rebuild beachfront in the area north of Buxton, the narrowest section of Hatteras Island.

"The No. 1 problem is the beach erosion," Rose said. "The ocean is trying to cut an inlet through N.C. 12."

The group also talked about problems with ship travel in the Oregon Inlet. Ships cannot get through the shallow inlet now to reach the Wanchese Seafood Park and the Corps of Engineers has not moved to resolve the problem.

A Hunt spokesman told the group he would consider taking legal action against the federal government to get the inlet dredged. Hunt appointed Robert Williams, executive director of the seafood park, as his representative to work on the problem.

KIRYAT SHMONA, Israel

(AP) — Israeli and Lebanese negotiators clashed today over Israel's demand to operate electronic spy stations on Lebanese territory but agreed on four new committees to discuss the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon, U.S. and Israeli sources said.

A joint statement issued after the eighth round of talks reported "good progress" toward resolving the Lebanon crisis, and said experts would meet next week in small groups.

Conference sources said Israel expanded on its demand to build early warning stations in Lebanon, but the Lebanese negotiators rejected the idea as an infringement on Lebanon's sovereignty.

Chief U.S. delegate Morris Draper telephoned presidential envoy Philip C. Habib in Jerusalem to report on the talks, and Habib arranged to meet with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Friday.

Habib reportedly offered a compromise on the early warning stations in prior meetings with the Israelis whereby Americans would run the electronic listening posts, but the sources said that compromise was not proposed in the formal talks, and the U.S. delegation had not taken a position.

Shamir said Wednesday that the stations were vital for deterring a return of hostile Syrian or Palestinian forces to Lebanon, which Israel invaded in June to smash the Palestine Liberation Organization. Thousands of guerrillas were forced to evacuate Beirut in August but thousands more remain behind Syrian lines in eastern and northern Lebanon.

The negotiators created new committees to discuss the withdrawal, the future relations between Israel and Lebanon, security arrangements in south Lebanon and possible guarantees of the final agreement, the joint communiqué said.

A separate committee was formed on Monday to formulate a declaration ending the 34-year state of war between Israel and Lebanon.

Officials involved in the talks said Israel and Lebanon laid out their positions in more detail than before but made no real attempt to negotiate differences. "The real spade work will be done in the sub-committees," said a U.S.

official who declined to be identified.

The full delegations were to reconvene Monday in the Beirut suburb of Khale. The meeting could then break into working groups, the officials said. The subcommittees will continue work Tuesday and Wednesday in Herzlia, north of Tel Aviv.

The agenda also includes talks on a framework for future relations between Israel and Lebanon.

Acting Dean Named For Arts, Sciences College

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Eugene E. Ryan,

chairman of the department of philosophy, has been appointed to serve as acting dean of the college of arts and sciences at East Carolina University.

Ryan's appointment was announced by Dr. Angelo A. Volpe, who last week was appointed vice chancellor for academic affairs. Volpe had served as dean of arts and sciences since 1979.

A veteran of more than 14 years at ECU as a professor of philosophy, Ryan chaired the Subcommittee on Academic Programs, which completed a two-year study in 1982. He has served as secretary of the ECU Faculty Senate and has been active in committee work and university academic planning.

"I am delighted that Professor Ryan will take over these duties," Volpe said. "I have worked with him on several campus-wide committees as well as during our continual interaction as dean and chairperson."

"Dr. Ryan brings a wealth of experience and ability to the position, and I am looking forward with pleasure to working with him," Volpe said.

Ryan said he "welcomes the opportunity to work with Doctor Volpe as well as with the chairmen and faculty of the departments of the college of arts and sciences." He said he looks forward "to what I think will be a valuable experience."

A native of Chicago, Ryan is an alumnus of St. Mary of the Lake College, Mundelein, Ill., and holds advanced degrees from Gregorian University in Rome. He also has studied at Oxford University and the Glenmary Theological School.

Before coming to ECU, Dr. Ryan was a tutor at Oxford University and a member of the faculty of Marshall University, Huntington, W.Va. He is the author of a book on metaphysics of Aristotle and has published numerous articles in scholarly journals. His studies in the philosophy of the Italian Renaissance and the classic works of Aristotle have been supported by grants from the National Endowment for Humanities.

Ryan was appointed chairperson of the department of philosophy in 1979.

RETURNED $500

Are there any Good Samaritans, honest people, left in this world? I can answer emphatically — Yes! While returning from vacation, I recently dropped my husband's wallet containing $500 in cash at a Greenville barbecue take-out window. A Greenville man, Jack Taylor, was the finder. He called us long-distance and made arrangements to have us pick it up and all its contents. I want him to be recognized as the wonderful person he is. J.J., Knightdale.

Joan Warren Named As Cabinet Officer

RALEIGH — Joan Warren of Greenville has been installed as recording secretary of the Sir Walter Cabinet, an organization whose members are wives of past and present members of the General Assembly.

Mrs. Warren, wife of Rep. Ed Warren, will serve with Mrs. Allen Barbee, president; Mrs. Dallas Alford, vice president; Mrs. Chris Barker, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. A.D. Guy, treasurer. Judge Naomi Morris was the installing officer.

A highlight of the luncheon meeting Tuesday was a "talk" by Gov. Jim Hunt, who told the group "that I gave a speech last night and I am going to talk today." The governor gave his state-of-the-state address Monday.

"We have to be aware of the concerns of the people in the state; where people are and what their needs are ... during tough times," Hunt said. "You look at the money you do have and do more with what you have. We have to learn to adjust."

"I really believe the future will be good for us and that things are turning. We are not going to retreat here in North Carolina because times are hard," Hunt said.

"Another thing is to protect our citizens from crime. I will go before the General Assembly in two weeks and give them my crime program for the next two years. The important thing right now is to drive on safe roads," he added.

The governor announced that he is planning a leadership conference in October on women and the economy. He invited the women present to plan to attend.

He thanked the women for helping to make North Carolina a good state.

Bess Ballentine introduced the governor and told of his interests throughout the state. Carolyn Hunt, a member of the Sir Walter Cabinet, also was present.

Mrs. Dan K. Moore accepted a check from the group amounting to $2,500 for the School of the Arts in Winston-Salem for its endowment fund. Mrs. Moore is a member of the school's board of directors.

Mrs. John Ingram introduced Jim Smith, Margaret Black and Elizabeth Magnum, all of Peace College, who provided entertainment. Smith, a native of New Bern, sang several selections accompanied by Ms. Black.

Special guests were presented by Jeanette Hux.

To Mark Anniversary

The Greenville Jay-C-Ettes held their meeting Wednesday and made plans for a dinner-dance to mark their 30th anniversary.

The dance will be held March 5 at the Greenville Country Club beginning at 6 p.m. with entertainment provided by "Sea Breeze". All past and present members and their guests are invited.

At the meeting, Fay Tripp reported on the success of the club's New Year's Eve dance and reports were also made on Christmas projects.

MANDARIN GRAPEFRUIT

Cut 3 or 4 medium-size seedless grapefruit in half crosswise. If necessary to have halves stand straight, cut a thin slice of rind from bottom of each. With a serrated grapefruit knife, cut around each section to separate from dividing membranes; cover and chill. Drain an 11-ounce can of Mandarin orange segments in light syrup — there will be about 49; chill. Shortly before serving, with a teaspoon remove each alternate section from each grapefruit half along with as much juice as possible. Replace each grapefruit section removed with an orange segment. Spoon orange-flavor liqueur over each grapefruit half. Serve at once. Makes 6 or 8 servings — 6 to 7 orange segments will be needed for each half. (The grapefruit sections removed may be chilled in the Mandarin orange syrup for use in another fruit cup.)

Garden Club Meet Set

The Lyndale Garden Club will meet next Tuesday at the home of Mrs. George Saad, 404 Martinsborough Road.

Co-hostesses will be Mrs. Richard Van Scoy and Mrs. J.B. Sures. A program on bluebirds will be presented by Dr. and Mrs. R.M. Helms. Members are reminded that, if unable to attend, they should telephone regrets by the morning of Jan. 25 to Mrs. Derek Dunn, 756-6710, or Mrs. Ray Cannon, 756-4125.

The January award for the best yard goes to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Sorocka, 114 Asbury Road.

At the January board meeting the winners of the awards for the best Christmas decorations were announced. The best novelty theme was that of the Taylor residence at 304 Martinsborough Road; the best religious theme, the Goodsons at 105 Martinsborough Road, and the best traditional theme, the Pegram home at 202 Jamestown Road. The caroling led by Dr. and Mrs. Michael Bramley and the luminarias provided under the chairmanship of Mrs. F. Spencer were acknowledged, as was the Christmas party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Perkins, with arrangements by Mrs. Mark Tipton and assistants.

Mrs. James Lewis, Mrs. William Brown and other volunteers who planted three landscapes at Rose High School Dec. 8. They have plans for adding more spring-flowering shrubs later in the year as one of the club's beautification project.

It was announced that the book, "Southern Living Garden Guide," donated by the Garden Club in memory of Mrs. Ruby Julian, is available from Sheppard Memorial Library.

Operator's Job Always On Line

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am one of many thousands of voices on the other end of the line when you dial 411 — "Operator Assistance."

We are rated on our productivity (the number of calls we take), courtesy and accuracy. In other words, we have to be quick, courteous and correct. (In an average day, an operator takes about 250 calls every two hours.) We are paid to serve the public. Most callers are polite and pleasant, but, Abby, you wouldn't believe what I've had to put up with. Being called "a dumb broad," "stupid" and "idiot" is all in a day's work. And we can't hang up on them — we are supposed to handle the situation professionally and impersonally without raising our voices.

A telephone operator's job is ranked as the 17th most stressful job in the nation (ahead of police).

When a customer calls for a telephone number, he should give us enough information to find the phone number. I've had people ask for the number of "the little shop that sells buttons in the middle of the block in some shopping center." They aren't even sure if it's in the city or one of the suburbs!

I've also had people ask for a name they can't spell at an address they aren't sure of. If I ask for more information, they cuss me out in a foreign language.

Abby, please tell your readers that the next time they give their fingers a rest from walking through the Yellow Pages, to remember that the telephone operators are people with feelings, too. Have a nice day.

"INFORMATION, PLEASE"

DEAR INFORMATION: Thanks for a dandy letter. And you have a nice day!

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about adults ordering a child's portion in a restaurant? Many people, due to surgery or inability to eat large portions of food, must limit the amount of food they eat.

I have been told that because I am an adult I cannot order a child's portion. I think that's discrimination. My husband can eat an adult's portion but I cannot, and I just can't see all that food going to waste.

A doggie bag would work in some cases, but not at a pancake house. (My husband loves pancakes.)

We are not cheapskates, and we always leave a nice tip regardless of what we order.

SMALL EATER

DEAR SMALL: Most restaurants serve children's portions as an accommodation, but it would be economically unfeasible to serve children's portions to adults at reduced prices. If doggie bags won't do, eat what you want and leave the rest.

DEAR READERS: "True patriotism is more than getting a lump in your throat when the flag passes by. It involves determination on your part to see that America remains free. It involves your willingness to put the best interest of the nation ahead of your own self-interest."

"Single interests may be important, but the art of democracy is the ability to recognize the common good. The ability to give, not just take. Two hundred and thirty-one million people can pull our nation apart — or pull it together."

"Which way did you pull today?"

The above message was written by Harry J. Gray, chairman and chief executive officer of United Technologies, Hartford, Conn. Beautiful?

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

History Essay Contest Winners Announced

FARMVILLE — Dean Lawrence has been named a district winner in the American History Month essay contest. He represented the Major Benjamin May Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution.

Other winners in District Eight included Heather Michele Jones, Elizabeth City, Frances Sally Jester, Edenton, and Laurie Ann Walker, Halifax. The winners and all contestants will be honored by their respective chapters with certificates of award, luncheons and other gifts. The four winners will receive history medals from the district.

American History Month is one of the programs promoted by the National Society of DAR. February will be promoted as American History Month in North Carolina. The essay contest through the schools is held to encourage participants to become more involved in the historical background.

This year, the title of the contest was "Everyday Life in Early America" and was held for fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth graders. Five schools in Pitt County participated. Judges were Cathy S. Bullock, Linda S. Leighty and Cecilia M. Boklage, all of Pitt Community College.

Winners will compete on state, divisional and national levels.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

An ad in a Midwest newspaper read, "WANTED: Woman to do ironing for housewife 10 years behind in everything. Must have strong courage and sense of humor. Phone—"

Now there's a woman I could live next door to in perfect harmony. I iron "By appointment only." I learned long ago that if I ironed and hung three dresses in my daughter's closet, she would change three times during dinner.

The other day my son wanted me to iron his jeans for a class play. "Which leg faces the audience?" I asked with my iron poised in mid-air.

"Boy," he said, "you're sure not like Mrs. Breck."

I hadn't thought about Mrs. Breck in years. She was an antiseptic old woman who used to live two houses down from me. She had an annoying habit of putting her ironing board up on Tuesdays and putting it away again at the end of the day. (What can you expect from a woman who ironed belt buckles?)

One afternoon I dropped in on her as she was pressing the tongues in her son's tennis shoes.

"You know what you are, Mrs. Breck?" I asked. "A drudge."

"Oh, I enjoy ironing," she said.

"You keep talking like that and someone is going to put you in a home."

"What's so bad about ironing?" she grinned.

"No one does it," I snapped. "Did you ever see the women on soap operas iron? They're just normal, American housewives. But do you ever see them in front of an ironing board? No! They're out having abortions, committing murder, blackmailing their boss, undergoing surgery, having fun! If you weren't chained to this ironing board you, too, could be out doing all sorts of exciting things."

"Like what?" she chuckled, pressing the wrinkle out of a pair of sweat socks and folding them neatly.

"You could give Tupperware parties, learn to scuba dive, learn hotel management while sitting under a hair dryer, have an affair with the Avon lady's unemployed brother-in-law, sing along with Jack LaLanne, collect antique barbed wire, take a course in Hebrew Flower Arranging, start chain letters... I don't know, woman, use your imagination!"

I read the newspaper ad again. It intrigued me so that I dialed the number and waited.

"Hello, Mrs. Breck speaking."

"Son of a gun. It sure makes you feel good when you had a part in someone's success, doesn't it?"

Unselfish Leadership

There was shock and sadness throughout the state of North Carolina as the reports spread of Rep. Sam D. Bundy's death in Raleigh yesterday.

Nowhere was the sadness more profound than in his home district of Pitt and Greene Counties where he had lived and worked for most of his life.

It can truly be said that Sam Bundy was a man who everybody loved. Rep. Bundy gained fame as a public speaker and he had made hundreds of talks in North Carolina and elsewhere in his lifetime. He devoted most of his life to education as a teacher and principal in Farmville. Then he launched a political career which saw him elected to the state Legislature where he served from 1971 until his death. As a representative he was in a position to influence the progress of education in North Carolina in a way which was not possible as an education administrator.

Gov. Jim Hunt took note of that at his death. "His leadership in the field of education will be especially missed," the governor said. "He constantly prodded us to do a better job of educating our children and was unfailing advocate of economic growth in eastern North Carolina."

Rep. Bundy was indeed highly interested in education. He was also interested in all phases of state government and, most of all, he was interested in the people of this state. Sam Bundy served unselfishly and with high distinction. Our area and the state are better off for what he has given us.

Medical Care Improvement

The contracts for the $5.2 million radiation therapy center were awarded recently. The center will be constructed between the Brody Medical Sciences Building and Pitt County Memorial Hospital. It will provide comprehensive care for cancer patients in the eastern portion of the state. Officials say it will work with units in New Bern, Kinston and Goldsboro.

The center will include radiation equipment costing millions of dollars to provide modern radiation therapy. Completion is set for the summer of 1984.

Providing the radiation therapy center is expensive, but it will be a major addition to the medical facilities available to the people of North Carolina. Eastern residents are at last gaining the medical facilities which will provide health care equal to that available anywhere. The radiation therapy center is a major step in that direction.

No Better In '83

By PAUL O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The recession which hit farms in the Southeastern United States in 1981 caught up with North Carolina farmers in 1982. And it doesn't look like things will be getting any better in 1983. That's the opinion of Frank Bordeaux, chief economist for the N.C. Department of Agriculture's Division of Resources Planning and Development.

"To some extent, 1983 will be a repeat of 1982," Bordeaux said in a recent interview. "Low prices are putting a cramp on the cash receipts and farm income and the level of stocks available ... North Carolina and U.S. agriculture doesn't have a strong marked recovery (in store) until 1984."

In his year-end report, Bordeaux lists several factors which he says contributed to making 1982 "an unusually tough year" for the state's farmers. Most of these factors, he says, "are beyond the farmers' control and may have been generated many miles away."

This is an international recession. Other nations have severe economic problems which have led them to reduce imports. At the same time, the strength of the U.S. dollar has raised the price of American agricultural products on foreign markets. Bordeaux says this is certainly the case with tobacco. In all, he estimates American agricultural exports to have totaled only $39 billion in 1982 compared to $43 billion the year before. The domestic economy, with almost 11 percent unemployment, is also hurting the purchase of farm products. "The length of the current recession has forced many consumers to alter their consumption patterns to a greater extent than in previous recessionary periods of shorter duration." One grocery cart casualty is red meat. Most people just can't afford a steak or roast.

The good crops of previous years are also contributing to the problem. Big surpluses were available at the beginning of 1982 and then farmers brought in another big crop of wheat, corn and soybeans. When the supply went up, the price farmers got per bushel went down.

These factors meant that North Carolina's farm economy suffered significantly last year. Bordeaux estimates that farm cash receipts in 1982 will run at $3.9 billion, down from $4.2 the year before. Total farm income is estimated at $4.5 billion, down from $4.8 billion and net farm income dropped $750 million from $1.1 billion. These declines occurred despite the state's larger harvest of corn, soybeans, sweet potatoes and wheat. The unit price dropped more than enough to offset the better harvest.

North Carolina farmers don't have a much better year ahead of them, he says. "Weak trade prospects, coupled with continuing large grain and soybean stocks, will prevent any appreciable recovery in 1983." Livestock and poultry producers will benefit from lower feed grain prices but get hurt in turn by lower consumer demand. Expect prices to rise only 2 or 3 cents per pound.

Farmers can expect to see more credit available next year, and at better rates. But, for some farmers, this break comes too late. They've exhausted their borrowing capacity.

Could the year be worse than Bordeaux is predicting? He thinks not. His projections are based on average statewide and national averages. He says he's figured in that the average amount of misfortune will hit

Hit The Movie Moguls

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The Pentagon's startling decision to replace the venerable steel pot with a German-style, over-the-back-of-the-neck fiberglass helmet hits the war movie industry like a maximum charge artillery barrage.

The movie moguls may be left for dead in their bunkers.

In future flicks how will you be able to tell George S. Patton and his U.S. 3rd Army from Baron Hasso von Manteuffel and his 5th Panzer Army? If Willie and Joe wear the same head gear as Hans and Fritz, how will the war movie buff know whether he's watching "Iwo Jima" or "Watch on the Rhine"? With John Wayne and Conrad Veidt characters similarly behatted in remakes of famous war movies, film makers may have to revive the old bouncing ball in the big battle scenes to point out which is Maj. Gen. "Slim" Jim" Gavin and his 82nd Airborne Division and which is Obersturmbannführer Jochen Peiper and his Kampfgruppe Volksgrenadiers.

How could the brass in Army supply be so insensitive as to render obsolete this living legend in the military millinery line?

Granted that the new storm trooper type helmet, made of resin and a synthetic fiber called Kevlar (a name evocative of the brutish stalag kommandant in every World War II epic I ever saw), is stronger, lighter and protects a third more area, including the temples and neck, but how can it ever match the versatility and penache of the old steel pot?

Those of us who held our heads high under its three pounds of soldierly grandeur in the last great war to end all wars can recall the infinite variety of its uses and occasional abuses.

You could cook in it, wash out your socks in it, clean your rifle with it by marinating the trigger housing in kerosene. You used it to bail rain water out of your foxhole, melt snow for drinking water, even to dig your foxhole a bit deeper when the crunch of incoming shells came and there wasn't an entrenching tool handy. At night it was your pillow or, filled with hot rocks, your bed warmer (only officers rated sleeping bags in the last biggie, the rest of us were issued a woolen khaki sack that was a cross between a monk's hairshirt and a mattress cover). By day, it was by turn your desk, your PX market basket, your seat.

I can remember a chaplain saying Mass on the hood of a jeep in an open cathedral of steel pots for pews in a snowy field near St. Vith.

The pot was often the pot in a crap game, which broke up abruptly when a pot emblazoned with the letters "M.P." hove into sight. One Christmas, after the liberation of a cellar full of cognac, the pot served as our punchbowl. The motor pool used this all purpose chapeau for draining crankcases and as chocks under truck wheels. The pot was called upon to crack walnuts, drive in tentpegs, tenderize Red Cross donors, mark the spot of a parachute supply drop. On long truck convoys, it inelegantly served as a portable latrine.

The pot was also a grim reminder of what war is all about. Hanging on the butt of a rifle jammed into the earth or snow by its bayonet point, it starkly pointed out the body of a buddy for the graves registration crews to collect.

The old steel pot could be garnished and gilded to suit the scene of the war or the statue of the wearer. In the snows of the Ardennes, it came swathed in a white muslin. In the jungles of the South Pacific it was mottled with camouflage cloth. If enemy air was busy in the area, the pot was muted with mud or netting swiped from the artillery boys.

The chaplain had a small white cross on the crest of his helmet; the medics wore the Geneva red cross inside a white circle. Officers wore their stars and bars, non-coms their stripes, except in combat, when officers wore a small verticle band at the back of their pots and platoon sergeants a small horizontal band, so the men would know whom to follow, but the snipers could not pick their targets.

The flamboyant Georgie Patton flaunted a chromium pot. M.P.s in their white helmets were known as "uncle Ike's snow drops." Except in forward areas, steel pots were adorned with division insignia and regimental mottos. In Vietnam, the craze for graffiti and a more permissive command structure brought about a steel pot inscribed with obscenities and peace slogans, which must have provided curious reading for Viet Cong intelligence patrols lurking in those triple (Please turn to Page 5)

Aides Walk A Thin Line

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's aides are walking a thin line when they describe the president's role in the successful deliberations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

They are portraying the commission's success as an example of presidential leadership.

But at the same time, there has been a weeks-long effort at the White House to stress Reagan's non-involvement in the commission's work.

On Friday, when the outcome of the panel's work was less than certain, the president took issue with the idea that the panel was a presidential commission.

"Let me call your attention again, that I announced that it would be bipartisan and that there were three of us that would appoint. I appointed representatives. The majority leader of the Senate appointed some. The speaker of the House appointed some. So it is a commission appointed by both sides and both the legislature and the executive branch," the president said.

That was before the panel worked out a $169 billion compromise using payroll tax increases and benefit cuts to help shore up the financially troubled retirement program.

On Monday, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the panel's success over the weekend exemplified Reagan's leadership "because he appointed the commission."

"It was his idea of how to attack the problem," Speakes told reporters.

At the same time, the president was described as playing a spectator's role.

When a reporter said to Speakes that he seemed to be portraying Reagan strictly as a listener, the spokesman said "that's true."

By Tuesday, Speakes said that Reagan had not only been kept informed, but had also told his chief representative at the talks "what he was thinking" about a possible agreement.

For weeks, members of the commission met, and periodically top representatives of the White House, including Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, congressional liaison chief Kenneth M. Duberstein and Baker's deputy, Richard G. Darman, conferred with them.

On Saturday, when the package was hammered out, the White House group shuttled from the commission meetings in Blair House across Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House and back.

But, said Speakes, Baker did not take part in the actual negotiations. Nor, he said, did Reagan. He said the president "never imposed his viewpoint on the negotiations."

Speakes said Reagan was kept "totally abreast of what was going on but not actively involved in the negotiations."

The spokesman also avoided saying whether Reagan would become actively involved in a campaign to win support for the compromise.

He pointed out that the president had issued a written statement demonstrating his support. In it, Reagan said that House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.; Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and he had found the solution acceptable, and added:

"Each of us recognizes that this is a compromise solution. As such, it includes elements which each of us could not support if they were not part of a bipartisan compromise."

Asked whether Reagan would take a leading role in the selling of the proposal to Congress, Speakes said "the campaign has been mounted by this spirit of bipartisanship."

"You've got a commission and a commission chairman, who has the details," Speakes said, adding that the House and Senate leaders, the Republican chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the Democratic chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee have indicated their support.

This, he said, represented "a solid lineup of people who have attacked the problem."

As for the president, Speakes said, "he's already issued a statement on it."

VARIETY IN PRAYER

The Bible exhorts us to pray without ceasing. How is this possible? We have work to do. We sleep eight hours out of the twenty-four. How then can we possibly pray without ceasing?

Prayer is more an attitude than it is an utterance. Our desires are prayers, our actions are prayers, our motives are prayers. Every day there should be a specified time set aside for prayer uttered in words, but at all times the attitude of one's heart toward God and man should be such as to constitute prayer, thanksgiving, and petition to God.

"In everything give thanks." Not for everything, but in everything. We cannot thank God for pain, sorrow or loss. Certainly we cannot thank God for the sins into which we continually fall. But in pain, sorrow, loss and sin, we can give thanks to God that he has offered us life eternal. This is perhaps the most meaningful type of prayer. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:

As a concerned citizen pertaining to the tax situation, I felt it was in very bad taste to "make fun" of the middle-class working people that pay all the taxes while the rich get richer with all their loopholes and some avoiding taxes all together. I am referring to "Hi and Lois," a cartoon in the Sunday, Jan. 16, 1983, Daily Reflector. Why rub it in?

I know I am not the only one to be disturbed whenever this issue is discussed. It's really frustrating to know so many people are concerned over this matter but that nothing can be done to prevent it happening over and over again. We seem to be unable to elect someone in high office to correct this problem. But then again, I don't know any middle-class people in high office, do you?

With the job situation the way it is today, I am thankful to have one and to be able to pay taxes, but it certainly makes me angry to think of all our tax dollars being used so frivolously, especially Social Security. The government is spending money only God knows where, because the American public certainly does not. I think we need an organization to do a quarterly review on all monies spent and that the American people are not kept in the dark so much about where our tax dollars are spent.

You may think I've no sense of humor, but I have heard too many times how the middle-class people pay most of the taxes that it's ceased to be funny to me any longer ... because it is the truth and not a joke for the funnies.

Turkey Sees New Businessmen

By EMEL ANIL

Associated Press Writer
ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Sark Tagra is a new kind of Turkish businessman.

In his eighth-floor office overlooking the Bosphorus, he stretches his arms wide, flashes a smile and declares, "I am very happy today."

He has just learned that his Enka holding company's construction division entered the lowest bid for a contract somewhere in the Middle East. Chances are the firm will get the contract.

Enka is the umbrella organization for 41 companies engaged in trading, construction research and the manufacture of textiles, flour, furniture, machine parts, tractors and scores of other products.

What sets Tara apart from Turkish tycoons of the past is his company's search for work and profits outside Turkey.

The company's total turnover was nearly $600 million last year and Tara said he expects it to reach $1 billion in 1983.

The so-called "opening up to the outside world" was as much out of necessity as of design.

In 1977, Turkey was plunged into a severe economic and financial crisis. It was unable to service its foreign debts, which totaled $20 billion.

An economic austerity program launched in 1980 along with massive Western aid saved the economy but the program was based on tight money and credit policies aimed at curbing inflation.

With the captive domestic market and easy term credits no longer available, Turkish businesses were forced to "export or perish." The result has been a 62 percent jump in exports in 1981 and an estimated 27 percent boost in the last year.

The economic crisis also ended the building boom of the last three decades. Turkish construction companies, with sufficient equipment and trained personnel, had to look elsewhere for contracts.

Currently the order books of Turkish contractors in the Middle East amounts to $13 billion. Most of the work is in Libya, estimated at over $8 billion, followed by Saudi Arabia at $3 billion, Iraq with $1 billion and the rest in Kuwait, Jordan, Egypt and Abu Dhabi.

Earlier this year, a consortium of Enka and the Kutlutas Group raised credits of $95.7 million to cover the advance payment guarantee for a $384 million contract to build houses in the Saudi Arabian city of Medina. Recently, the Tekfen holding company received a similar guarantee of $42.3 million from a consortium of Turkey's Is-Bank, the American Express Bank and the Arab Investment Co. of Saudi Arabia. The money is for a $425 million water desalination and transmission project in Saudi Arabia, which Tekfen won in joint venture with Spiem of Italy and Cat of Lebanon.

Libya has run into payment difficulties in the past.

The Turkish companies are now looking more closely to Saudi Arabia, the Persian Gulf countries and North Africa.

They want a share of the rebuilding of Beirut as well as Iran and Iraq, if and when their war, now in its third year with no prospects of peace, comes to an end.

The competition, at a time of world recession and falling oil revenues for Arab business, does not fade Tara. "We have good management and we are used to working in hardship conditions," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Enka's trading group realized the highest exports for a single Turkish concern last year at $192 million. With the addition of overseas contracting revenues, Enka brought in $250 million in hard cash, Tara says.

"We will go up to $450 million this year," Tara predicts, noting that is the equivalent of one month's export for all of Turkey in slow months, or 7 percent of annual exports.

Scandinavians Report 'ET' Not Suitable For The Young Viewer

By ROLF SODERLIND
Associated Press Writer
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—Sweden, Finland and Norway have banned youngsters from the movie "E.T." — the smash-hit fantasy tale that Swedish censors call a close encounter of the "frightening" kind.

The Swedish Board of Film Censorship, backed by child psychologists, limited audiences to those above age 11, claiming "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial" portrays adults as enemies of children.

The official age limit in Finland is 8, and in Norway 12. In the United States, the movie carries a rating of "Parental Guidance" suggested, which does not impose a strict age limit.

Danish film censors, who restricted the "Star Wars" movies and most other science fiction films to those 12 and above, gave "E.T." the green light.

The Steven Spielberg movie shows Earth-bound children giving shelter to the stranded, gawky alien, E.T. for short.

It has delighted millions in the United States, set off a Christmas-time "E.T." craze, and now is sweeping countries throughout the world.

The ban on young children from the movie here prompted some young Swedes to hit the sidewalk with protest placards to show their displeasure.

"Away with the 11-year limit," "Children's films are made for children," and "We want E.T." read some of the children's picket signs in front of a major Stockholm theater where the movie opened Dec. 10.

The movie's distributors say they doubt the bans are keeping all under-age children away from the movie.

Swedish newspapers reported many children under 11, some with their parents, were seeing the movie by pretending they were of age.

But chief censor Gunnell Arrback, in defending Sweden's ban, said moviegoers under 11 might be traumatized by a "threatening and frightening atmosphere" which she maintained prevails throughout the film.

The movie is an outstanding success in Sweden, according to the distributor, United International Pictures.

It said the movie, playing in 22 Swedish cities, has grossed $2.1 million on 570,000 tickets sold in a country of 8.3 million people.

Overall, distributors said the movie has sold 1.4 million tickets since its December premieres in Sweden, Norway, Finland and Denmark — countries with a combined population of just over 22 million.

"Sensational," United International's Swedish spokeswoman May-Britt Zohrer said of the figures. "There is no other movie that comes near E.T. in being seen by so many people in such a short time."

She predicted E.T. would score an all-time record in Sweden, surpassing the $6.8 million grossed in four years by "Foul Play," a 1970s vehicle for comedienne Goldie Hawn.

Ms. Zohrer said she does not believe the age limit has affected the number of tickets sold in Sweden.

Swedish newspapers disagreed with the censorship board. Svenska Dagbladet, a conservative morning paper, suggested that "middle-aged or over-aged" censors were more concerned with their own childhood years than with children of today.

"Seven-year-old kids in the 1940s and 50s were not as accustomed to strange and nasty things, lacking television and with a single-station radio," the Svenska Dagbladet said.

The newspaper suggested that the censorship board should seek advice from children before restricting films created with them in mind.

Assert Desegregation Effort Long Rebuffed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The former chairman of the Goldsboro City School Board says their efforts to eliminate racial segregation by merging with the Wayne County School System have been rebuffed since the early 1970s.

The city schools have filed a federal lawsuit against the Wayne County School Board, charging the county schools with intentional racial discrimination and segregation.

Charles Norwood Jr. testified in U.S. District Court this week that the city asked Wayne County schools to eliminate segregation by merging or extending city school district lines. He said the county schools agreed to a vote on merging the two systems, but later backed out.

Norwood testified he could see the county schools were headed toward resegregation in the early 70s.

"After two years, I saw what was happening," said Norwood, who was city school board chairman from 1972 to 1980. "We were headed back into resegregation. I had learned the evils of a dual school system and was convinced it was wrong."

"I could see down the road we'd have problems with losing students. I knew we had to do something about it before it got worse."

Norwood said the county school board agreed to call for a county-wide vote on merger.

"Then they decided not to and it surprised us," Norwood said. "I tried to come up with a new twist. I came up with the idea of disillusion in which we told the county to let us be part of them unconditionally."

"There would be no question about who the superintendent would be and no argument about who the board would be," he said. "We were willing to dissolve our school district and turn it over to Wayne County."

Norwood said some black members on the city school board hesitated to dissolve the board at first.

"They were concerned about the fair treatment of minorities in the county system and the future make-up of the board," he said.

The Department of Public Instruction studied the two school systems in 1973, but made no recommendations.

The city school board then requested extending the school district lines to include part of Seymour Johnson Air Force Base housing.

"When we talked about getting the base students, the county always talked about ... they would lose," Norwood said.

The steel pot, which has lasted America through three wars, even became part of the furniture in The Associated Press Saigon bureau. A row of them rested on the file cabinets, just beyond the bank of teletype machines, like bowlers in a British bank, ready to be worn by staffers commuting to the boonies.

Miss Tu, our office secretary, borrowed one as a decorative planter for some rare orchids brought back from Dalat by photographer Horst Faas. The only stranger use I can recall of this multipurpose headwear was devised by a bullnecked first sergeant I knew in the 106th Division in Germany. He half filled his helmet with salted water every night and hung it carefully by his cotside by the chinstrap — after first inserting his false teeth.

The chin-strap, by the way, was never worn in combat areas for fear of decapitation in a shell burst.

Finally, in my memories, the old steel pot formed the entire subject of conversation, a monologue, really, with the only famous general I ever met.

One day just before the war ended, a jeep suddenly screamed to a halt, as I set on my steel pot by the roadside writing a letter. Gen. Mark Clark himself came bounding out. "Soldier," he snapped, "where's your dam helmet? Don't you know there's a war on?"

Calendar On Sexy Sixties

SENIOR SKIN — Bill Baldwin, 61, shows the 1982 and 1983 editions of his "Sexy Sixties" calendar. This year's calendar differs from last year's first edition when the pin-ups were clothed. (AP Laserphoto)

By JEFF MAYERS
Associated Press Writer
EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Bill Baldwin has put a new wrinkle in the pinup calendar business — senior citizens in the buff.

"The only things I've ever seen about old people are negative," the 61-year-old Baldwin explained Wednesday. "I thought, 'Let's do something positive and see what happens.'"

Many people who first bought the calendars sent pictures of themselves for future editions, and a physician says the pinups could help combat "agism." But a Washington group that lobbies for the elderly says old people don't need to bare all to be important.

The 1983 edition of Baldwin's "Sexy Sixties" calendar is his second such effort. Last year's version featured senior citizens fully clothed, although some wore come-hither attire. With each mail-order copy of the 1982 booklet-style calendar, Baldwin sent a request for more pictures to make another edition.

"We started to get nude ones," said Baldwin, self-employed in industrial sales and training. "There must be an interest. I think we had about 40 without even asking."

So Baldwin asked for more nudes and received 187 in all, some from people in their 80s.

He said about 1,000 copies of the new, $5 poster-size calendar were sold during their first week on the market.

The calendar has 10 black-and-white photos of 10 men and women — all in their 60s — including the muscular Baldwin, although he is shown from the waist up only. The other models are in various stages of undress or the altogether. The calendar identifies them by first name only, and Baldwin said he promised them anonymity in return for free use of the pictures.

"All but one is a grandparent, and one gal has 16 grandchildren," said Baldwin, who urges the over-60 group to "stay involved — physically, economically and sexually."

"The majority (of the models) seem to feel there ought to be something, some way they can contribute more and get involved more in life," said the 6-foot-4, 214-pound former college football lineman.

Dr. Gerald Osborn, acting dean of the College of Osteopathic Medicine at nearby Michigan State University, agrees with Baldwin.

"Old people are beautiful too," he said. "Essentially what the calendar might counter is the ... 'malignant agism' myth."

Osborn, 35, said the public's idea of old people is "negative" and is akin to racism and sexism, adding that the calendar might be useful in his lectures on aging and sexuality.

The calendar drew a less enthusiastic response from Lloyd Wright, a spokesman for the American Association of Retired Persons in Washington, D.C., which lobbies for senior citizens' rights.

"Clearly, we think that older people can demonstrate (their vitality and contribution to society) without resorting to that kind of tactic," he said.

Baldwin said he has distributors for the calendar in California and in Michigan, but that most sales are mail-order.

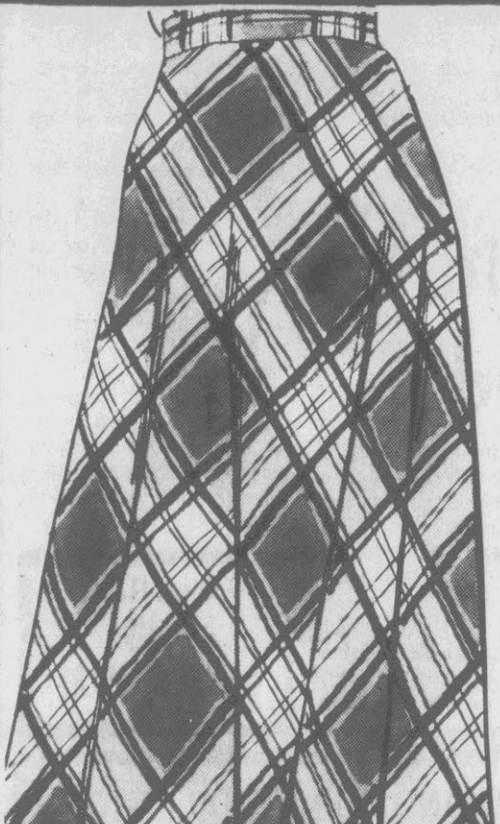

He said he made "a little bit" of money on last year's edition and needs to sell 9,000 of the current calendars to break even.

Baldwin, who has three children and four grandchildren, said his wife Barbara, also 61, wasn't very enthusiastic about the project at first but now helps with the mailings.

"All it's doing is pointing out that there are people in that age bracket who won't be found down in the church basement making potholders," he said. "It's just showing another view of old people."

See Security In Supercomputers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States must launch a major effort to develop a new generation of powerful "supercomputers" or see the national security threatened and Japan take the lead in computer technology, a high-level panel of scientists says.

In a report to the National Science Foundation and the secretary of defense, the government-backed panel said U.S. leadership in developing the super-powerful computers "is crucial for the advancement of science and technology, and therefore, for economic and national security."

Supercomputers — only about 60 of which exist worldwide — are central to the development of nuclear weapons, weather forecasting, advances in basic science, analysis of geologic information about oil deposits and the design of airplanes. They are capable of performing at least 80 million mathematical operations per second.

NO COMMENT — Erin Fleming, one-time companion of Groucho Marx, tells reporters outside a Santa Monica courtroom that she has no comments about her suit against the Bank of America. (AP Laserphoto)

Court Fight On Groucho Estate Is Escalating

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
SANTA MONICA, Calif.
(AP) — A lawyer who asked if any prospective juror "has not heard of Groucho Marx" was greeted with silence as a civil trial began to recover more than $400,000 from the late comedian's female companion.

The unusual question from Bank of America attorney J.
Brin Schulman came at the beginning of jury selection Wednesday for a trial expected to draw a cavalcade of celebrities to the witness stand.

Attorneys said they hoped to choose the final jury and begin opening statements today.

The bank, executor for Marx's estate, is suing Marx's longtime companion, Erin Fleming, 42, claiming she influenced Marx to pay for her food, liquor, furniture, car and medical bills and to buy her a house.
Marx died Aug. 19, 1977, at the age of 86.

The legal battle escalated
Wednesday when Miss Fleming filed a $1.1 billion countersuit accusing the bank of trying to drive her to poverty so she could not defend herself in the original suit.

Superior Court Judge
Jacqueline L. Weiss told 57 prospective jurors they could expect to hear testimony from a parade of celebrities including Elliot Gould, Bill Cosby, George Burns, Jack
Lemmon, Merv Griffin, Cary
Grant and Greta Garbo.

Miss Fleming, who came to court, refused comment on either suit.

"I have nothing to say, and I will say it very quickly," she told reporters outside the courtroom.

Miss Fleming sat stonefaced as Schulman and her attorney, David Sabih, spoke of her relationship with the legendary comic when he was in his 80s and she was in her early 30s.

"Would you have any problem with the fact that a man 80 years old loved someone younger and gave her gifts?" Sabih asked one juror.

"No," said the panelist, "if that's what he wanted."

Sabih, who put Miss Garbo's name on the witness list, was asked by a reporter whether he really expected the reclusive 1930s film star to testify.

"Oh yes," he said.
"Everyone we named has agreed to testify and has been personally contacted."

The bank's suit, besides demanding the money it says the estate is owed, seeks several hundred thousand dollars in punitive damages.

Miss Fleming's countersuit seeks $1.1 billion in general damages plus punitive damages of $101 million, and also demands an accounting of royalties collected by the bank since Marx's death.

She said she is entitled to a share of those sums because as his companion and personal manager for seven years, she "totally devoted her entire life to Groucho."

The lawsuit alleges that Marx's son Arthur conspired with the bank to "browbeat"
Miss Fleming into giving up her rights to royalties and other properties Marx left her in his will. Miss Fleming says that since Marx died she has never received any money from the properties.

The lawsuit contends that Arthur Marx, who had long been estranged from his father, was using the bank in "a subterfuge and a sham" to circumvent a provision of the will which said that any heir who contested the document would receive only $1.

Schulman denied the allegations of conspiracy with Arthur Marx, terming them "foolish, unfortunate and inappropriate."

Miss Fleming's suit also said she "has been living in dire poverty," and has had telephone, water and power service shut off to the home Marx gave her because of nonpayment of bills.

It says she is unable to sell the house because it has been encumbered by the bank.

Miss Fleming "had to borrow $20 from her friends and her attorneys in order to be able to buy the cheapest possible food to sustain herself," the suit said.

Winter Wheat Condition Good

WASHINGTON (AP) —
Despite the absence of protective snow cover, winter wheat was "generally in fair to good condition" throughout the major production areas as of mid-month, says the government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility.

The report, issued Tuesday, covered the week of Jan. 10-16. It said the mild weather, which eliminated
the remaining snow cover, left wheat fields vulnerable to winterkill.

Meanwhile, it said, frozen fields in Indiana permitted farmers to complete the corn harvests, although "some scattered fields remain standing across the Corn Belt."

Wetness delayed the wind-up of the soybean harvest across the South, the report said. Cotton farmers also were bogged down at times in Texas, Oklahoma and California.

'Golden Fleece' Is Awarded To Agency Reagan Would Abolish

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire has given his monthly "Golden Fleece" award to the Economic Development Administration, an agency the Reagan Administration would like Congress to put out of business.

Proxmire, who hands out the award for projects he claims are a waste of taxpayers' money, said the EDA deserved the prize "for allowing U.S. cities and non-profit organizations to misuse a $198 million federal loan fund dedicated to creating local jobs."

"This misuse ranged from allowing cities to invest federal dollars in high interest securities to permitting a borrower to pay off delinquent tax bills," the Wisconsin Democrat said in making the January award today.

"Instead of creating jobs the EDA did a job on the American taxpayer," he said.

Christy Bakaly, an EDA spokeswoman, said

Commerce assistant secretary Carlos C. Campbell, consistent with the Reagan administration's policy, has continued his efforts to phase out the Economic Development Administration.

She said Campbell has recommended placing greater emphasis on the private sector and transferring responsibility for administering EDA programs to the state and local level.

Under Campbell, she said, the Reagan administration has found many projects involving revolving loan grants, such as those referred to by Proxmire, as lacking merit and has closed them out. They were, she said, awarded by the Carter administration and many were mandated by Congress.

The EDA spokeswoman said the Reagan Administration, in addition to revising guidelines, saved $138 million in fiscal year 1982 by preventing new loan guarantees.

"We are hoping that Sen. Proxmire will support us in our effort to phase out the so-called pork barrel agency, the EDA," said the spokeswoman.

In giving his award to the EDA, Proxmire said the Congress created a revolving loan fund in 1978 under EDA to provide money to businesses whose success would help maintain or improve the economic health of the community.

However, he said, a series of recent internal reports by the Commerce Department reveals that EDA mismanagement resulted in dismal failures and misuses of federal funds over the last four years.

Agree Israeli Blocking Peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has voiced its approval of a magazine article written by former presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter in which they denounced Israeli policy on settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Department spokesman John Hughes said President Reagan also has recognized that Israeli settlements in the occupied territory are an obstacle to peace.

Ford and Carter say in an article in the February edition of Reader's Digest that they had come to the "painful conclusion" that Israel was not living up to some of its commitments under the Camp David agreements.

Upholstery Seen Deadly Hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fires involving upholstered furniture claimed 14,000 lives in the United States during 1981, with a majority of them caused by cigarettes, the Consumer Product Safety Commission has been told.

James Hoeber, of the commission's staff, told the panel there were 35,000 fires that year involving upholstered furniture, making it the "biggest killer" of all the products under jurisdiction of the agency.

Sixty-four percent of the fires and 86 percent of the deaths occurred as a result of a cigarette igniting the furniture, he said. Another 930 deaths occurred in 62,000 fires involving bedding, again with most caused by cigarettes, he said.

Seek Funding For Community Mental Health Care Efforts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Many mental health patients now in community treatment programs may get sent to mental institutions if money can't be found to fund the local programs, mental health officials say.

Jack Williams, a member of the North Carolina Mental Health Association board, called on North Carolinians to urge the Legislature to fund community mental health programs.

Williams said community mental health programs are expected to lose $7 million by June. Without money to sustain the programs, Williams said many mental health patients will have to be sent back to institutions.

Prepare For Cosmos Fall

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The government is putting its disaster agencies on alert to cope with the 2 percent chance that a nuclear-powered Soviet satellite will hit Australia when it returns to Earth, perhaps next week.

National Disaster Organization Director-General Maj. Gen. Kevin Latchford, briefing reporters today on the government's contingency plans, acknowledged there was a "very slight" chance that Cosmos 1402 will hit Australia. But he said his government was covering all bets.

Latchford recalled that parts of the U.S. solar-powered Skylab space station fell across the wilderness of Western Australia two years ago, and the nuclear powerpack from Cosmos 954 scattered radioactive debris over sparsely populated northern Canada four years ago.

Latchford said federal and state disaster agencies were bracing to deal with a 60,000-square-mile path of radioactive debris if the satellite breaks up over Australia.

The disaster teams will be going on two-hour standby as of Monday, the day when trackers believe the satellite will hit the atmosphere, plus or minus 36 hours, Latchford said.

The Kremlin says the satellite's radioactive fuel core is expected to burn up in the atmosphere or be dispersed into fine particles that will pose little threat to life.

The association and Dr. Eugene Douglas, state mental health director, supported Gov. Jim Hunt's proposal to close Dorothea Dix mental hospital, saying that some $6 million could be channeled into community programs.

But Douglas said the proposed consolidation of programs at Dix probably would not have provided the needed money.

"We felt comfortable with the $6.5 million," Williams said. "But with Gov. Hunt's new plan — on top of federal cutbacks that will hit hard in July — there won't be any money unless the Legislature appropriates it."

The association objects to putting people into institutions. Officials cite state laws that say mental patients are to be treated in the least restrictive environment possible.

Association officials say few patients would pose a danger to the community. If they don't receive adequate professional supervision, their families may have to assume the responsibility. But some families are not equipped to give medication and in some cases aggravate a patient's behavior.

Williams said the association is also urging legislators to approve two new bills that could affect the welfare of the mentally ill.

The first is aimed at chronically ill patients who are repeatedly admitted and released from hospitals. The bill proposes changes in criteria for outpatient treatment. A judge could order a patient to comply with treatment outside the hospital if a doctor said he could survive safely with supervision.

The bill could help the state "realize a tremendous savings" since the average short-term hospital stay costs about $18,000, Williams said.

The second bill, calling for a "single portal of entry," would allow patients to enter and leave the state's mental health system through community mental health centers. It would reduce paperwork and allow staffers to keep better track of patients, Williams said.

Mayor Tells Michigan Town Residents Get Guns

By MICHAEL McKESSON
Associated Press Writer

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Mayor Wilce Cooke started 1983 with an unusual New Year's message for his constituents, residents of the state's poorest community. He issued a call to arms, urging citizens to buy guns.

"If you are a homeowner, arm yourself against intruders," the 43-year-old mayor said at a city commission meeting earlier this month. "That is your constitutional right."

The commissioners then declared a "war on crime," pledging support for the local police department.

"It's a great city ... we have great people," Cooke said recently as he drove along avenues lined with abandoned homes and boarded-up businesses.

"We have a ready work force, we have vacant buildings, we have land and we offer tax abatements," he said. Benton Harbor is a prime spot for new business to locate and the publicity about the city's gun controversy lets investors know what is available, Cooke believes.

"Now that it's (Benton Harbor) at its nadir, it's time to bounce back," he said.

Benton Harbor, about 50 miles across Lake Michigan from Chicago and 180 miles west of Detroit, is Michigan's poorest community, according to a new "need index ranking" by the State Commerce Department.

Urban renewal in the 1960s forced the city's black residents to relocate in white areas. The white population reacted by fleeing to adjacent St. Joseph. And the recessions of the 1970s wiped out jobs, many of them related to the auto industry. The city of 16,000 people now is about 86 percent black.

The unemployment rate in November was 29.5 percent. City officials estimate that 55 percent of the residents receive some sort of government aid.

The city is virtually broke. Cooke said its finances had been in "a state of chaos" in the 10 years prior to his election in 1981. During the last three years, the town has had four city managers and is preparing to hire a fifth. A shopper would have difficulty finding an open business in many blocks on Main Street.

And some of the people are afraid.

With 10 homicides in 1982, Benton Harbor is believed to have one of the highest murder rates in the country for a city its size. There were about 700 burglaries last year.

It's into this climate that Cooke, convicted in 1966 of illegally carrying a concealed weapon, injected his call to arms.

Cooke, a part-time mayor who works full time as a hospital emergency room nurse, later said he did not own a gun, but that he planned to buy a pistol and obtain a permit to carry it. An armed populace is an effective deterrent to crime, he said.

"I see a lot of people who come into the emergency room after home invasions," the mayor said.

Some of Cooke's constituents believe his statements were on target.

"I feel like I need a gun," said 60-year-old Susie Lee Terry, who has worked 21 years at the 5th Wheel Cafe on Main Street and lived most of her life in the city. "They broke in my house — if I'd had a gun I'd have shot 'em."

Marilyn Allkins, a postal employee who lives in nearby Benton Township, works in the city and rejects the mayor's notion.

"You don't curb violence with violence," she said.

Sam Watson, chief of the city's 21-officer police force, said he appreciates the commission's concern about crime, but still has reservations about the commission's suggestions.

"When you start to ask a community to arm itself, you're asking for trouble," Watson says. And of Cooke's call to arms, the chief says only: "He got himself into this, he can get himself out."

Cooke said his statement prompted dozens of letters of support from around the country and mostly positive reaction in the community.

Local gun shops reported no increase in traffic during the two weeks following Cooke's call to arms. The mayor, who last month lost a television set and other possessions in a burglary at his home, was not surprised.

"There are a lot of guns out there. I think many people already have them," he said.

Cooke said his aim was not to boost gun sales, but to tell people that Benton Harbor is aware of its problems and is working to overcome them.

"You learn from your mistakes," he said, noting that the maxim also applies to his own life.

Cooke was fined and sentenced to two years probation in 1966 after pleading guilty to a weapons charge. He was involved in a shootout on a city street after a dispute at a bar. Cooke suffered 50 pellet wounds in the back from a shotgun blast during the incident.

"I have shown that people can rise above their circumstances," he said. Cooke believes the city can do the same.

China's Ban To Affect Farmers

PEKING (AP) — China's move to bar any new contracts to buy American cotton, chemical fibers and soybeans will have a "trickle-down effect" on North Carolina farmers, says state Agriculture Commissioner James Graham.

"In our state the effect will likely be a price reduction in the already depressed cotton and soybean market," Graham said in an interview Wednesday.

China's move was in retaliation against new U.S. import restrictions on Chinese textiles.

The U.S. Embassy refused comment on the Chinese action, which is expected to complicate Secretary of State George P. Shultz's talks with officials in Peking beginning Feb. 2.

Shultz already faced Chinese complaints over the Reagan administration's arms sales to Taiwan, slowness in providing U.S. technology to China and acceptance of political defectors from China.

On its side, the United States is reportedly concerned about recent Chinese diplomatic overtures towards the Soviet Union.

Since trade contracts are negotiated in advance, it was not clear how quickly the Chinese embargo would affect U.S. trade.

Sales of American cotton, soybeans and chemical fibers already had been slumping in 1982. China has sharply expanded its own cotton production and shifted most of its purchases away from the United States.

However, the two-paragraph announcement by the official Xinhua news agency said China also planned to reduce imports of other American agricultural products.

It did not specify which ones. Wheat is the largest single agricultural trade item between the United States and China, which has agreed to buy at least 6 million tons of the grain annually.

Last week the Reagan administration announced it would limit Chinese textile imports to their current $700 million level after a fourth round of talks failed to produce a new trade agreement to replace one that expired on Dec. 31, 1982.

Textile industry sources said Chinese negotiators had asked for a 6 percent annual growth in its sales to the United States while Washington had offered only 1.5 percent to 2 percent.

The Chinese Communist Party newspaper, People's Daily, charged the United States had a "rude and unreasonable attitude" on the textile issue.

"The United States demanded that China make substantial concessions, while at the same time it does not want to make any substantial concessions," it said.

U.S. figures show China bought $176.2 million worth of U.S. cotton in January-November 1982, down from $464 million for all of 1981 and $701.3 million in 1980.

Soybean sales totaled $63.2 million in January-November 1982, down from $129.7 million for all of 1981 and $155.2 million in 1980.

U.S. yarn and fabric sales to China totaled $124.5 million in the first 11 months of 1982, down from $283.5 million for all of 1981 and $133.6 million in 1980.

Seen A Threat To Health Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one of his final comments as secretary of health and human services, Richard S. Schweiker says health care costs are growing so fast they may threaten the quality and availability of health care.

Speaking to the National Conference Board, a business group, Schweiker said hospitals will be given an incentive to hold down costs under a Reagan administration plan to tell hospitals in advance what Medicare will pay for specific treatments.

"At current rates of inflation, health care costs threaten to become ... insupportable," said Schweiker, who resigned last week. "At some level — and not far in the future at these inflation rates — the quality of medical care and the access Americans have to that care could be jeopardized by the cost of the care."

State Skate Set Feb. 5

The 1983 Cystic Fibrosis "State Skate," sponsored by the Winterville Jaycees, will be held at SportsWorld of Greenville Feb. 5.

Laura Langley, chairman of the event, notes that radio station WRQR of Farmville is participating, with Kirk Williams, afternoon DJ on the station, to provide music for skaters. SportsWorld has reduced the rate for skaters from $2.75 to $1.50 for this benefit campaign.

Sponsor sheets, required for all participants, will be available at SportsWorld. Skaters will seek donations from businesses, groups and friends for the cystic fibrosis fund prior to the Saturday "State Skate."

Mrs. Langley urges all who plan to take part to get sponsor sheets early in order to begin recruiting sponsors.

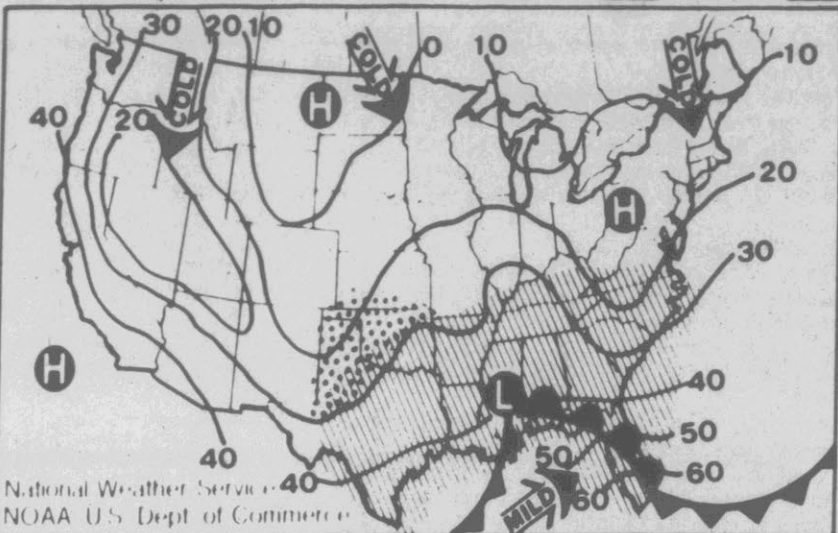

Prizes will be given to participants raising the greatest amount of funds.

Cystic fibrosis is a fatal lung disease that takes the lives of half its victims before they reach their 20s. Funds raised through projects like the "State Skate" help support the foundation's research, treatment and education programs in North Carolina and nationwide.

Persons wanting more information on the skate event may call Mrs. Langley at 756-7953.

The Forecast For Friday, January 21

•Low Temperatures

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain for Friday from Texas to the southern Atlantic coast. Snow is expected for the Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma. Cold weather is anticipated for most of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Snow, sleet and rain may be on the way to North Carolina this weekend, beginning with some snow flurries which may hit mountain areas tonight.

The snow flurries will spread eastward and northward over most of the state on Friday. As a rather complex weather system develops and moves northeastward from the Gulf of Mexico this weekend, a combination of snow possibly mixed with sleet and changing to rain near the coast may hinder outdoor activities.

A low pressure area over the northern Gulf of Mexico will feed moisture northward over the Southeastern states during the next couple of days. This will bring an end to our prolonged period of clear skies.

Precipitation in the form of snow possibly mixed with sleet or rain near the coast will begin this weekend but it is too soon to tell just how heavy or widespread it will be.

Highs today and Friday will be in the 30s to around 40. It will be cold again tonight with lows in the 20s.

Skies were mostly clear Wednesday night. Early morning temperatures were generally in the upper teens and low twenties east of the mountains.

Fire Damages Pitt Home

Pitt County firemen from two rural departments battled a blaze Wednesday morning that caused heavy damage to a Route 1, Grimesland, home.

According to firemen on the scene, the house was occupied by Mitchell Brown, and was owned by Linwood Clark. Firemen arriving on the scene said there was a fire in the attic and around the chimney. The blaze caused heavy damage to the wood frame dwelling, estimated by firemen at $18,000.

Departments from Grimesland and Black Jack responded to the 10:49 a.m. call. There were no injuries reported.

Jones Wins Growers' Award

Dick Jones, host of the agribusiness informational "Almanac" morning program on WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington, is the recipient of the 1982 Outstanding Media Services Award of the Corn Growers Association of North Carolina.

The award was presented to Jones by Edwin H. Hammill, a Rowan County corn grower and chairman of the association's awards committee, at the association's annual meeting held in McKimmon Center on the campus of N.C. State University in Raleigh.

Walesa Assails Union Arrests

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and 13 other leaders of the banned union today demanded amnesty for jailed dissidents, an end to government repression and protection of workers' rights. The demands were contained in a letter to Parliament handed to Western correspondents by Solidarity supporters. The letter also protested the formal arrest last month of seven colleagues charged with sedition.

"Charging them means charging the union, and their trial would be the union's trial," the letter said, noting that the seven had been interned since the declaration of martial law on Dec. 13, 1981. Martial law was suspended last month, but severe controls remain.

"Imprisoning seven internees violates the basic principles of justice, and deprives all the promises and announcements of the authorities of their values," the letter said.

The Solidarity leaders also cited reports of "secret forms of internment" used against former union activists, but gave no details.

The letter demanded amnesty for jailed Solidarity supporters and called for a "stop to all kinds of repressions" and "protection of the union rights of the working people."

Walesa, reached by telephone at his apartment in Gdansk, confirmed that he signed the letter.

In addition to Walesa, those signing the letter included Janusz Onyszkiewicz, the former Solidarity spokesman; Bronislaw Geremek Walesa's adviser, and Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the former editor of a Solidarity weekly. Most of the signers, including Walesa, were released from martial law internment within the last two months.

Informed Polish sources have said they do not believe authorities will allow Walesa back into the yard, but will offer him work at a smaller plant in Gdansk.

Hospital Board In Craven Signs Order

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Trustees of Craven County Hospital signed a consent order saying they would notify The New Bern Sun Journal of any meetings in which hospital business is conducted.

The consent ordered settled a dispute between the hospital and the newspaper concerning a trustees' retreat held at Emerald Isle in October. The trustees did not inform the public or the media of the meeting.

The newspaper claimed the meeting was a legal session of the hospital board and that notice should have been given to comply with the state Open Meetings Act.

Hunt Baxter, attorney for the newspaper, and hospital attorney Fred Carmichael drew and agreed to the consent order as a way to avoid the legal expenses of a suit the paper had filed against the hospital. In its suit, the paper sought notification of all future meetings.

Hospital Administrator John McDaniel and board Chairman Larry Hodgson said today they still believe the hospital did nothing wrong in holding the meeting. But, McDaniel said the hospital board made a gesture of cooperation by signing the order.

The boards decision was made in a spirit of cooperation with the media, he said.

"We have no problems whatsoever with the press being there," McDaniel said, "whether its a formal meeting or an informal session."

Sun Journal Editor Robert A. Stephens said that the trustees made a wise decision. "That's the way it ought to be," he said.

Stephens said the public should be given notice of any meeting affecting publicly owned property. The hospital facility is owned by Craven County.

No Answer To His Response

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — When Wade Darsey got a notice from Uncle Sam demanding to know why he hadn't signed up with Selective Service, he couldn't believe it.

"I wondered what to do. I didn't want them to throw me in jail for not registering for the draft," said the 79-year-old former civil service employee, who has been retired for almost 14 years.

He checked with a county judge, and sent the questionnaire back to Selective Service along with a copy of his birth certificate.

"I was just trying protect myself. I got the thing two weeks ago and they only gave me 15 days to answer," Darsey said Wednesday.

So far he hasn't heard any more about it.

Rep. Bundy...

There has been no indication when Bundy's successor will be named.

Bundy collapsed about 8:30 a.m. Wednesday while having breakfast at the Hilton Inn. He was taken to Rex Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 9:55 a.m.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p.m. at the First Christian Church, by the Rev. Lee Parker. Burial will follow in Forest Hills Cemetery.

The family will be at the Farmville Funeral Home from 7-9 p.m. today.

Bundy is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bettie Spencer Bundy; two sons, James Henry Bundy and Sam D. Bundy Jr., both of Raleigh, and three grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Ramp Fund at the First Christian Church of Farmville.

Both the House and Senate were adjourned Wednesday in Bundy's memory.

House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey said Bundy was "one of the most able and dedicated public servants it has ever been my privilege to know. I have lost a good friend, a man of wit and charm who endeared himself to all who knew him."

"His passing is a tremendous loss, not only to the people of Pitt and Greene counties, but to the General Assembly and the entire state of North Carolina."

Representing Pitt and Greene counties, Bundy was first elected to the House in 1970. He was known as an advocate of public education and economic growth in eastern North Carolina, and for his stand against liberalization of state liquor laws.

A member of the Advisory Budget Commission, Bundy was vice chairman of the State Personnel, Finance, Pensions and Retirement committees. He was also a member of the Local Government II, Election Laws, University Board of Governors Nominating, and Education committees.

Gov. Jim Hunt termed Bundy's death a "tremendous loss to North Carolina."

Hunt said "his leadership in the field of education will be especially missed. He constantly prodded us to do a better job of educating our children and was an unfailing advocate of economic growth in eastern North Carolina."

Rep. Ed Warren, who was at the hospital Wednesday with Bundy's family, said "he was a fine Christian man. He was indeed a leader in our state as well as a respected legislator."

Warren said Bundy "brought happiness to those he was associated with through the years," and "was concerned for the welfare of others."

"He has been a great asset to me in the General Assembly and in my district. We worked very closely, not only in the Legislature, but, during the years we worked together in education, he was like a father to me and I will miss him immensely," Warren said.

Bundy was a public school educator for 48 years before his retirement in 1970, when he was principal of the Sam D. Bundy Elementary School in Farmville. He had also served as a principal in Duplin, Edgecombe and Martin counties.

Pitt County Democratic Party Chairman George Saleeby of Grifton said Bundy "has been a magnificent individual who has served the people of Pitt County for more than 30 years."

Rep. John Gilliam, who represents Bethel and Carolina townships, said, "Sam Bundy was a very generous man with his time to his friends and to Pitt and Greene counties. Not only have we lost a friend, but we have lost one of eastern North Carolina's most distinguished citizens."

Gilliam said, "I think Sam's ability to take very difficult situations and put them in proper perspective made him very unique. On the floor of the House he could take a situation causing much debate and, by using his wit, be able to get things back in perspective, make us all look at situations as they should have been. The North Carolina General Assembly has absolutely no one who can take his place."

A Farmville native, Bundy had served as a member of the Board of Trustees of Mount Olive College since 1972. He received his undergraduate degree from Duke University in 1927, and his master's degree from East Carolina University in 1948.

do now rather than wait until later," Huskins said.

Barnes said he is seeking a study on a state lottery because the "tight fiscal situation requires the exploration of new sources of public funds." He said he doesn't think the state can rely any longer on taxes to provide all its revenue needs.

He said 15 states now have lotteries to raise money, with net profits ranging from $500,000 in Vermont to $222 million in Michigan.

In his presentation Wednesday to the joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee, Crofts predicted state tax revenues will grow by 7 percent in 1983-84. He said he based that prediction on real economic growth of 1.4 percent and inflation of about 5 percent.

He set general revenues for 1983-84 at $3,602 billion.

In the budget which legislators received Tuesday, Hunt projected 8.8 percent revenue growth for 1983-84 based on real economic growth of about 3 percent and inflation of about 5 percent.

He estimated general revenues for 1983-84 at $3,695 billion.

Crofts also predicted the state will end the current fiscal year in worse shape than Hunt predicted. The fiscal staff projects revenue growth will amount to 5.2 percent compared to 5.9 percent suggested by the governor, a difference of $27.2 million.

In other legislative action:

Separation of Power

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, and several other legislative leaders introduced a bill to realign the responsibilities of the executive and legislative branches of government.

The bill contains most of the 96 recommendations of a study committee formed after the state Supreme Court ruled last year that legislators could not sit on boards and agencies that administer laws enacted by the General Assembly.

Most of the bill focuses on who should set salaries — the governor with the Advisory Budget Commission's help or the General Assembly.

Under the bill, the legislature would set the salaries of Alcohol Beverage Control Commission chairman, the commissioner of banks, commissioner of motor vehicles, Employment Security Commission chairman, Industrial Commission chairman and others.

The governor would set the salaries of the Highway Patrol officers assigned to his office and the Wildlife Resources Commission director.

The governor also would have limited authority to adjust salaries of some new appointees and decrease the cost of capital projects.

Chaplain

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, introduced then withdrew a motion that would have continued the Senate's practice of having a paid chaplain who opens each session with a prayer.

The motion specified that the arrangement was subject to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a Nebraska case where the legislature's practice of using state money to pay a chaplain is being challenged.

In North Carolina, the House and Senate have paid about $100 a week for the chaplain's services.

Barnes, saying he had researched the matter at the request of the Senate leadership, withdrew the motion after Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, objected. Allsbrook had introduced a resolution Tuesday that the Senate employ a chaplain, who would be appointed by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

The House has elected not to replace its chaplain, the Rev. Albert Edwards of Raleigh.

Lady Pirates, Without Leaders, Rally To Top Charlotte, 59-48

CHARLOTTE — East Carolina's Lady Pirates, despite having one starter on the sideline with an injury and another handicapped by fouls, got help where it needed it and came away with a 59-48 victory over UNC Charlotte last night.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak by the Lady Pirates and evened the team's record at 6-6 on the season.

The Lady Pirates played much of the game without the services of point guard and second leading scorer Loraine Foster. Foster pulled a ligament in a knee when she drove in on a fast break, was undercut, crashed into the UNCC cheerleaders and slipped on a pompon. She played only nine minutes of the contest and scored only two points.

At the same time, center Mary Denkler failed to score in double figures for only the second time this season, as she was held to only eight points for the evening and played much of the second half with foul problems.

In the meantime, starter Fran Hooks came through with a career high of 17 points to pace the Lady Pirate scoring, and reserve Sylvia Bragg came off the bench to score 13 points, tying her career high.

"It went well even though Loraine was injured," a pleased Coach Cathy Andruzzi said afterwards. "It was a tough game. Charlotte has a good inside game, but our kids played a heck of a game."

East Carolina, after shooting only 37 percent in the first half, responded with a 70.6 percent performance in the second half.

"We worked the ball the best we have all season," Andruzzi said of the second half play. "They were running a box-and-one on Denkler but we countered that by being very patient and working for the good shot. Most of the time, we let the shot clock run down under ten seconds before we shot the ball."

East Carolina used full court defensive pressure on the Lady 49ers to wear them down. At the same time, the Lady Pirates used the foul line to great advantage, hitting 13 of 20 shots as compared to just eight of 11 for the 49ers.

Charlotte moved out by as much as six points during the first half, but East Carolina fought back and finally took Hold those obituary notices! Those who were ready to bury the East Carolina Pirates a couple of days ago just might have found that the Bucs have a little life left in them after all.

Last night, the Pirates found new breath in a stunning 58-48 upset victory over the University of South Carolina, snapping a three-game losing streak, their longest of the season.

The win brought joy to the Pirate locker room and a big smile to the face of Coach Charlie Harrison. "I told the guys that they've done two good things this year. They've beaten the defending conference champion (James Madison) and they've beaten South Carolina, a team with national prominence with a good program going. I'm happy for them."

The contest was a close one until the final eight minutes of the contest, when Johnny Edwards, who scored 25 points, helped open up a ten-point, 46-36 lead. South Carolina was never able to cut it below eight after that as the Pirates matched them the rest of the way to gain their seventh win against eight losses.

The defeat snapped a six-game winning streak by the Gamecocks, who fall to 10-4 on the year. But it kept alive a winning streak by the Pirates over the South Carolina school, which has now lost three in a row to ECU.

"We knew there were two things we had to do on defense," Harrison explained afterwards. "We found some places we could cheat on them and we had to slow up their fast break."

Harrison explained the first part of that statement by saying he felt the Pirates could play South Carolina's point guard, Scott Sanderson, loosely. "Tony (Robinson) never came out of the paint to get him," Harrison said. Sanderson, as it turned out, was 0-for-7 in the game. "They run the flex just like about everybody else, but not as well as James Madison or William & Mary. But they've still got a nice club. Anytime you beat South Carolina, it's a heck of a win."

Harrison said that since the Pirates are not a good shooting team beyond 15 feet, the Bucs must be patient, especially against a zone, something South Carolina played little of. "I think that's the first time in 160 minutes of basketball that we haven't seen a zone," Harrison said. "And it surprised me. We were going to pull 'em out of it if we ever got the chance, and when they did drop into one, we did."

South Carolina got the first two baskets of the game as turnovers kept the Pirates from even getting off a shot on their first three possessions. Jimmy Hawthorne made both of the USC shots for the 4-0 lead.

But Edwards and Barry Wright tied it up a 4-4, only to see a three-point play by Jimmy Foster put South Carolina back up, 9-6.

East Carolina pulled back even at 9-9, and finally took the lead for the first time at 12-11 on a three-point play by Edwards with 9:20 left in the half. South Carolina got it back at 13-12 on a layup by Kenny Holmes, but Edwards made a three-point play to return the lead to the Pirates, and although there were three more ties, the Pirates didn't fall behind again the rest of the half.

Edwards drew his third foul with 7:12 left, and for most of the remaining minutes of the half, the Pirates played a very deliberate, slow game. "We were going to do that to shorten the game," Harrison said, "and to protect anyone who got into foul trouble. We thought we could take advantage of our quickness against them, and as it turned out we could. We knew that they'd pound us if we let them get us into an inside game."

East Carolina went up by four, 24-20, before Hawthorne hit an 18-footer with 42 seconds left to cut the lead to 24-22 at intermission.

The Pirates held the lead until the 13:08 mark when Holmes hit a jumper to put South Carolina back ahead, 33-32.

East Carolina, however, scored six straight points after that, a jumper by Bruce Peartree, another by Edwards and two free throws by Peartree, for a 38-33 lead with 9:36 left.

East Carolina slowly built that up to eight, 43-53, on a third three-point play by Edwards, who played throughout most of the final eight minutes with four fouls — although David Harris came in for him as often as possible on defense.

Nevertheless, Edwards hit a fourth three-pointer with 5:55 left to make it 46-36.

COACHES' CORNER

By CHARLIE HARRISON
ECU Men's Basketball Coach

I have previously said as I took over the coaching duties at ECU that I would apologize for nothing for being a part of ECU except the way my (our) team may play. I do this now — as regardless of injuries and etc., etc., the way we played against Baptist was disastrous; yet, this game is over and hopefully no more performances will dip to that low level of intensity.

On the other hand, I do feel that people should be aware that basketball programs, athletic programs, businesses, etc., that are truly programs and successful are not put together overnight. (Reflector Sports Editor Woody) Peele asked me after the Baptist game how much the loss to Baptist would set my program back. I replied that I don't have a program yet. I have been at East Carolina only six short and hectic months. We have surprised some teams with the way these kids have played and have experienced some "spotty" moments of success. This shows me hope for the future but an open path or even a narrow one to the promised land is definitely not cleared.

Everyone, including me, wants immediate success, happiness and prosperity but only stable programs bring repetitive success. The ECAC South is a good league with good basketball programs. Lou Campanelli has been at James Madison for 12 years. Bruce Parkhill has been at William & Mary for nine. Dick Tarrant has been with Richmond for five with four recruiting classes with him. Joe Harrington at George Mason has had four recruiting classes, and the Navel Academy recruits the same each year — Paul Evans does a very good job of systemizing his recruits into a fine team. The ECAC South's success over Wake Forest, Old Dominion, Lafayette and others this year shows the quality of teams that the league has an reflects even more on the programs that have been established.

The league has been a road league. If you will look at ECU's schedule and who we have played on the road — so goes it for everyone in the ECAC South but everyone has been competitive. The true programs have been stable and built but ECU's program has just begun and if all of us (the ole coach included) will have patience and not let one win or one loss create an air for a season we too can eliminate the revolving door syndrome and label ECU basketball has had attached.

As Hubie Brown of the New York Knicks says, "First the baby must crawl, then the baby must creep and then the baby must walk before the baby can run." The Dallas Cowboys had four losing seasons and one .500 season under the same ole coach and staff before making the playoffs for 11 consecutive years. I feel that I don't need to insult the reader's intelligence by naming this distinguished man. I in no way can compare to him but in building a program the attitude of its public must be as positive as the coaches. A program is not one team in one season. A true program is a result of hard work towards a common goal of repetitive successes not spotty ones.

The baby must....

Teachey Sparks Deacs By Duke

DURHAM (AP) — Anthony Teachey's 18 second-half points guided Wake Forest to an 88-84 come-from-behind victory over Duke in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Wednesday night.

Teachey, the game's high scorer with 24 points, and forward Alvis Rogers lifted the Demon Deacons from a 12-point deficit seven minutes into the second half. Rogers finished with 17 points as the Demon Deacons climbed to 12-2, 3-0 in conference play.

Duke had jumped to a 66-54 lead at the 13:04 mark on a Bill Jackman jumper and when Rogers incurred his fourth foul 90 seconds later, it appeared Wake Forest was in serious trouble.

Instead, Rogers proceeded to score five unanswered points to spark a 17-6 spurt capped by a John Toms jumper that tied the score at 73 with 5:17 left.

The Blue Devils responded with five straight points only to see the Demon Deacons rally with a 7-0 spree behind Teachey and a 3-point field goal by guard Danny Young.

Teachey's two free throws with 2:43 left gave the Demon Deacons an 80-78 margin, the first time they led since the opening minutes. Duke center Mark Alarie tied the score at 80, but Teachey's follow-up recaptured the lead, 82-80, with 1:47 to play.

After Duke's Johnny Dawkins missed a 3-point attempt, Lee Garber scored off the spread offense to increase the lead to 84-80. A Dawkins jumper again cut the margin to 2, but Garber and Teachey cashed in at the foul line to settle the issue.

Young scored 11 points, while Toms and freshman

Kenny Green had 10 points apiece.

Dawkins led Duke, 7-7 and 1-2, with 21 points. Jay Bilas scored 16 points, Dan Meagher chipped in 14 points, while Alarie and Tom Emma scored 10 points apiece.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said neither the Blue Devils nor the Demon Deacons played very well defensively, and added that poor shooting led to the defeat.

"Wake played a fine game. I just thought we lost the game by missing shots," said Krzyzewski. "I'm not taking anything away from Wake, but if we execute, we win the game."

Wake Forest was able to rebound from a loss to William & Mary due to determination, said Coach Carl Tacy.

"This game was similar to last year's, especially in the first half," said Tacy. "We knew we weren't out of it. We just had to continue working."

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Being in the spotlight was nothing new for North Carolina's Matt Doherty, but for reserve center Warren Martin, it was a new experience.

Doherty and Martin teamed up Wednesday to seal the No. 3-ranked Tar Heels' 99-81 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over North Carolina State for UNC's 10th consecutive triumph.

Ahead 55-46 with 16:33 left, Martin and Doherty scored 13 of their club's next 14 points to make it 69-53 with 11:11 remaining, ending Wolfpack upset hopes.

"I was struggling a little bit with the jumper," said Doherty, who had a game-high

Terps Rolls Over Tigers; Lefty Calls It Best Game

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Maryland coach Lefty Driesell says his Terrapins had their best game of the season in defeating Clemson, 80-61, in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Wednesday night.

"It seems we play better on the road," Driesell said. "Overall, we played very well. We stopped their leading scorers and we had a balanced scoring attack."

Clemson coach Bill Foster buried his father earlier Wednesday, and Driesell said that probably had something to do with the Tigers' defeat.

"The team was probably down because of coach Foster's father's death," Driesell said. "You have to give them a lot of credit, though, because they stayed in and scrapped."

A 15-point scoring blitz in the stretch helped Maryland notch its first win in four ACC outings and gave Clemson its fourth league loss in as many conference contests. The Terrapins are 8-5 overall, while Clemson is 6-10.

Foster downplayed the importance of the 15-point attack

"We lost the game in the first 34 minutes, not in the final six minutes," he said.

"Maryland went through a lot of gimmick defenses, including the triangle-and-two, in ECU Feathers...

Over the remaining minutes, South Carolina was able to cut the lead back to eight — but never more as the Pirates came right back with the points to hold the lead, going out by 11 at 50-39, before finally settling in on the 8-10 exchange.

"I thought Johnny (Edwards) played very well. There have been games when he hasn't played well."

"Tony Robinson was just out of sight, though. He was just as good as he was bad on Monday. He is able to see himself in the films and recognize where he makes his mistakes."

Harrison took umbrage to those who said the program had been set back by a loss to Baptist on Monday. "A program is build to succeed constantly. One great game or one bad performance doesn't make a season. These kids have played one of the toughest schedules around — just not against the name teams. They've worked hard, and hard work gets a lot of things done — talking doesn't."

"All the people who are shaking their hands tonight — where were they Monday? The people who really care were there. These kids deserve good things. They've worked hard for them."

In addition to Edwards' 25 points, Peartree and Robinson each scored 11. South Carolina was led by Hawthorne with 19 and Foster with 14.

The Pirates shot 46.2 percent for the game, but overcame a 36.4 performance in the first half with a 58.9 percent showing in the second. South Carolina hit 38.6 percent for the game against the rugged Pirate defense.

ECU also held a 31-30 rebounding edge over the taller Gamecocks, led by Edwards' seven and Wright's six. Kevin Darmody and Foster each had eight for South Carolina.

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday, hosting Campbell University in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges.

drilled a 20-footer in transition.

"Once I got defensively into the game, I got my shooting touch," he said.

In that five-minute span,

Martin, a 6-foot-11 sophomore, savored his starring role by hitting a hook shot, two dunks, grabbing two rebounds and blocking a shot.

"I feel like it was my best offensive game," Martin said. "On defense, I still need some work. I guess I just got a little more aggressive."

"Martin played well," Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said after his team's 10th straight victory. "He'll get attention for his scoring, but he was also active defensively."

North Carolina, 13-3 and 3-0 in the ACC, received 18 points from Jim Braddock while Michael Jordan added 15. Sam Perkins contributed 13 points and a game-high 15 rebounds and Brad Daugherty scored 10 points.

The Wolfpack had constant foul problems, with forward Thurl Bailey getting three in the opening five minutes and center Cozell McQueen getting four before intermission.

"I think Dean (Smith) may have said it best when we were coming off the court when he said, 'I think we may have had too many people for you,'" Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said. "They are the best team we've faced this year by far. I know they are a hot team right now, but the scary thing is that they are going to get better."

Terry Gannon's 18 points led N.C. State, 8-4 and 2-2 in the ACC, while Sidney Lowe added 12 and McQueen and George McClain scored 11 each.

Miller Leads Virginia To Win Over Hokies

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Reserve forward Jimmy Miller scored 18 points as Virginia's 7th-ranked Cavaliers opened up a 10-point lead midway through the first half and coasted to a 74-64 basketball victory over Virginia Tech's 17th-ranked Hokies Wednesday night.

Beating Tech for the eighth straight time, the Cavaliers improved their record to 14-2. The Hokies, who brought a seven game win streak into the contest, suffered only their second loss in 16 starts.

Miller, who scored 15 of his points in the second half, was backed by Ralph Sampson with 12 points, Rick Carlisle with 11 and Ricky Stokes with 10.

Freshman Del Curry paced

Tech with 17 points with Perry Young adding 15 and Bobby Beecher 14.

After a seesaw opening 10 minutes of play that featured seven lead changes and four ties, Virginia ran off 12 unanswered points to take control of the game.

A steal and layup by Al Young gave Tech a 20-18 lead with 9:52 remaining in the opening half, but the Hokies did not score again until Curry popped in a 16 footer at the 4:16 mark.

Meanwhile, led by Stokes, Virginia went on its 12-point tear. The 5-10 junior guard scored on a drive and followed that with a pair of free throws to give the Cavaliers the lead for good, 22-20.

Gatlin, Mizelle Lead Scoring

D.H. Conley's Keith Gatlin and Bear Grass' Angie Mizelle have taken wide leads in the Pitt-Martin-Greene area scoring races this winter.

Gatlin, who has already signed a grant-in-aid with the University of Maryland, is well ahead of his nearest competition with a 24.9 average so far this year.

In second place among the boys is Ayden-Grifton's Thomas Anderson with an 18.7 mark, well ahead of third place Greg Everett of Roanoke at 15.0.

Mizelle paces the girls with a 19.0 average for Bear Grass, while second place Cora Faison of Ayden-Grifton holds down a 15.9 mark, just ahead of Greenville Christian's Kathy Vernelson, third at 15.4.

Ayden-Grifton leads the boys' team in total offense with a 63.1 average, while Roanoke tops the defense, allowing 40.2 points a game. Conley has the biggest winning margin, topping opponents by 7.3 points a game.

Among the girls, Conley has the best offense, 56.0, while Greenville Christian is leading in defense allowing 26.6. Conley has the best margin at 19.8.

Razorbaks Stay Unbeaten

By The Associated Press
Coach Eddie Sutton of Arkansas wasn't in a mood for freebies.

That's why he felt the Razorbaks' game against Texas Christian Wednesday night was so important.

"This game was bigger than the one at Houston Saturday," Sutton said after Arkansas won down a top-flight TCU squad, 69-55. "We needed a victory to keep the pressure on: Houston. If we lose, Houston has a free game."

The fourth-ranked Razorbaks, one of two major undefeated teams, got 15 points and some big plays late in the game from guard Darrell Walker to beat the Horned Frogs.

The victory, at Arkansas' Barnhill Arena, gave the Razorbaks a record of 14-0, 4-0 in the Southwest Conference. Houston, ranked 15th nationally, is 5-0 in the SWC, while TCU dropped to 3-2 in the league and 12-4 overall. Fifth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas is the nation's other unbeaten major college team with a 15-0 record after beating Long Beach State 95-83.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 7 Virginia defeated 17th-rated Virginia Tech 74-64. No. 3 North Carolina clobbered North Carolina State 99-81, sixth-ranked Memphis State whipped Delta State 100-62. No. 12 Missouri defeated 18th-ranked Oklahoma State 84-63. No. 13 Villanova romped over Seton Hall 75-59 and 19th-ranked Georgetown beat Pittsburgh 62-54.

Texas Christian trailed by five, 58-53, with less than four minutes left, but a steal by Walker led to a layup by Alvin Roberts, and Walker followed with a dunk to get Arkansas out of trouble.

Horned Frogs Coach Jim Killingsworth said he felt poor officiating helped ruin his team's effort. TCU went to the line just five times, compared to 20 for Arkansas.

"It's hard to play with one referee," Killingsworth said. "Denny Bishop was good, but the other two should be selling insurance. I'd love to be able to play karate defense and have my opponents shoot 12 free throws to our two in the first half."

Top Ten

Jeff Collins and Sidney Green spearheaded a strong second-half effort to lead Nevada-Las Vegas over Long Beach State in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association game.

Pacing the Rebels, who led only 42-41 at the half, was Collins, who scored 27 points and added seven rebounds, while Green had 23 points and 12 rebounds. Larry Anderson added 21 points for UNLV, which increased its PCAA record to 5-0 and is now 15-0 overall.

Virginia opened a 10-point lead midway through the first half and had little trouble beating Virginia Tech. The Cavaliers, 14-2, were led by Jim Miller, who scored 12 of his 18 points in the second half.

With Tech ahead 20-18, Virginia ran off 12 straight points. Ralph Sampson added 12 points for Virginia, and Del Curry paced Tech, 14-2, with 17 in the non-conference game.

Matt Doherty paced North Carolina over N.C. State with 21 points, and he and Warren Martin helped the Tar Heels abort a Wolfpack rally in the second half of their Atlantic Coast Conference matchup. N.C. State pulled within 55-46 before North Carolina went on an 8-2 burst — getting four points each by Doherty and Martin — to lead 63-48 with 15 minutes to play.

Jim Braddock added 18 points for the Tar Heels, 13-3 and winners of 10 in a row, while Terry Gannon had 18 for State. The Tar Heels are 3-0 in conference.

Keith Lee poured in 29 points as Memphis State beat up on Division II Delta State. The 6-foot-10 Lee, three inches taller than any of the Delta State players, also had 13 rebounds for the 13-1 Tigers.

Seven-footer Steve

Stipanovich scored a career-high 32 points to boost Missouri over Oklahoma

State in Big Eight Conference action. Leading by only six points, Missouri scored 13 in a row, eight of them by Stipanovich, to take a 42-23 lead with 2:58 left in the first half. Missouri, 13-2 and 1-0 in the Big Eight, also got 12 points from Jon Sundvold, while Raymond Crenshaw had 19 for Oklahoma State, 12-2 and 0-1.

Ed Pinckney scored 15 points and John Pinone had 13 to lead Villanova over Seton Hall. Villanova led Seton Hall 24-8 in the early going and 48-32 at the half. Pinone sat out about half the game in foul trouble but was a key in the Wildcats' early lead. Villanova is 11-2 and 5-0 in the Big East.

Patrick Ewing scored 22 points, and Michael Jackson led Georgetown on a 10-2 spurt that helped the Hoyas defeat Pitt in a Big East game. Jackson had eight points in the run, which gave Georgetown a 42-32 lead with 13 minutes left. Georgetown has won three in a row in the conference for a 3-1 record, 12-4 overall. Clyde Vaughan had 21 points for Pitt.

Unranked Teams

In the Big Ten, Dan Palombizio hit a 15-footer with four seconds left to boost Purdue over Illinois, 63-62.

DHC, Roanoke Pitt Are Ranked

By The Associated Press

Greensboro Page has replaced Rocky Mount as the top boys' 4A basketball team in North Carolina in this week's Associated Press prep poll, while Gastonia Huss edged out Raleigh Broughton for the No. 1 in the 4A girls poll.

Page drew seven first-place votes and a total 98 votes from a statewide panel of prep sportswriters. Rocky Mount was a distance second at 77 votes, while Fayetteville Pine Forest was third, Gastonia Ashbrook fourth and Chapel Hill fifth.

Pine Forest and Ashbrook got one first-place each, as did Elizabeth City Northeastern and Gastonia Huss in the 4A poll.

Both the Huss and Broughton girls drew four first-place votes apiece, but Gastonia Huss gained 88 votes while Broughton managed 85. Just as their males counterparts, Fayetteville Pine Forest was third in this week's balloting.

Brevard is tops in the 3A boys poll, while Burlington Cummings is No. 1 in the girls' poll for the division.

In the 2A-1A polls, West Montgomery and Bandys are at the top of the list.

Here are the latest Associated Press boys' and girls' high school basketball polls as voted on by a statewide panel of prep writers. First-place votes are in parenthesis with records and total votes following. The rankings do not reflect games played last Tuesday night.

Emory Adds To Offensive Staff

East Carolina University head football coach Ed Emory announced today the hiring of Ken Matous as an offensive assistant for the Pirate staff.

Matous, 26, comes to ECU from Wichita State University, having served four years there as an assistant working primarily with receivers and some with quarterbacks. He served under Larry Beckish, last year's Pirate offensive coordinator, for three seasons.

A graduate of Wichita State, Matous actually played college football at Hutchinson Community College in Kansas, where his father John was head coach, and at Western State College in Colorado.

Prior to the four years at Wichita State, Matous coached one year at Hutchinson Community College.

In addition to his undergraduate degree, Matous has a master's degree in sports administration from Wichita State.

"I feel Ken is one of the bright young minds in college football," Emory said. "It's great to get a coach who served under Larry Beckish and knows our offense. He's a great addition to our staff and one who worked for a solid ball coach, Jeff Jeffries."

Two more offensive assistant positions remain open on the Pirate staff as well as one defensive position.

High Interest In Public Hearing On DUI Measure

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A House committee is slated to begin "line by line" scrutiny today of Gov. Jim Hunt's program to combat drunken driving, after the proposals received ringing praise and sharp criticism during a public hearing Wednesday.

Thirty-six people, including ministers, lobbyists, law enforcement officers and members of anti-drunken driving groups, spoke during the 2 1/2 hour hearing before a joint session of state House and Senate Judiciary III committees considering the proposals.

The legislation would create a new "driving while impaired" offense, raise the minimum drinking age to 19, make dealers who sell alcohol liable for damages in accidents caused by drunken drivers, and provide for revocation of driver's licenses.

Most speakers praised the legislation, and virtually everyone supported getting drunken drivers off the road. But some advocated raising the drinking age from 21 instead of 19, as a presidential commission and the Governor's Crime Commission recommend.

Increasing the age just to 19 "would send mixed signals to young people ... would indicate to them that some alcoholic beverages somehow are safer than others. That is not true," said Dr. Joe Nicastro, a Winston-Salem physician and member of North Carolinians Against Intoxicated Drivers.

But Jerry Williams, executive vice president of the North Carolina Restaurant Association, voiced the sentiments of several speakers who said any change in the drinking age would discriminate against the young while doing nothing to stop drunken driving.

"To do so would make the law the laughing stock of the state, not just among those 18 years or less, but adults, too, who know it can't be enforced," said Williams.

Also vigorously debated was the "dram shop statute," which would make establishments that sell alcohol to the underaged or already drunk civilly liable for damages the drinkers cause in accidents.

"Our 'dram shop' law is sound public policy," said Wade Barbour, a district attorney from Pittsboro and member of the Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving.

"Who is to blame for (accidents involving drunken drivers)?" added the Rev. Coy Privette, executive director of the Christian Action League of North Carolina. "What about the one who sold the product? If that patron were a minor or a visibly intoxicated adult ... should not the driver be liable for damages due to his negligence?"

William Potter of North Carolina Businesses for Responsible ABC Laws responded that the statute would put an unfair burden on establishments selling alcohol. Bill Rustin, president of the N.C. Merchants Association, said it would "hold liable a grocery store clerk who may have seen the (buyer of alcohol) for just five minutes."

"It is the consumption, not the sale, that leads to the DUI offense," added Williams. "If a restaurant should be subject to third party liquor liability, so should ... the individual who serves liquor to a guest in his ... home."

Some speakers urged that provisions allowing for confiscation of driver's licenses be strengthened, while others complained that the legal definition of intoxication was too lenient and called for tougher punishment.

But Jack Stevens, chairman of the 27-member Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving, urged that the package be approved without revision.

"It's good legislation for a terrible problem at the proper time," said Stevens.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, chairman of the House Judiciary III Committee, said the committee today would begin studying "line by line" the bill he sponsored. He has said it would take at least a month and probably longer to finish the job.

The Senate Judiciary III Committee also is expected to begin work on the bill shortly.

N.C. Securities Ass'n Sets Up A Consumer Alert

By JAMES GOGUEK
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A private association of state securities administrators has set up a program in North Carolina to inform the public about investment fraud, says the deputy of the State Securities division.

F. Daniel Bell III on Wednesday said the program, established by the North American Securities Administrators Inc., will be especially helpful in stemming "the rampant amount of commodity fraud across the country." He said state securities officials have little power to take legal steps in cases that involve commodities.

Securities involve financial documents such as stocks or bonds. Commodities involve products, such as grain or soybeans, and are highly speculative.

The Investor Alert gives ten guides to investors covering various investment fraud, including commodities. The association says the alerts are intended to expose frauds before they cause widespread harm. The association says that in the past, the public has not been aware of schemes until they are taken to court, and by then the financial damage has already been done.

Local Better Business Bureaus also will be kept informed of alerts, the association said.

Among the warnings issued by the agency:

- Avoid high-pressure sales.
- Demand written information.
- Be wary of promises of "inside information."
- Consult with established brokers.

Bell said that perhaps the only deterrent to commodities fraud is for the customer to be wary. While state securities officers can investigate, build cases and file restraining orders in securities fraud cases, they have no power in commodities fraud, he said.

Bell said that the NASAA is pushing for Congress to amend the Commodities Exchange Act to lift the present pre-emption so that state officials could enforce the act.

He said the bill to increase states' jurisdiction was "essentially defeated" when a congressional commission on the Commodity Futures Trading Commission accepted a compromise where states would have virtually no power to criminally prosecute perpetrators of commodities fraud.

"The states can only enforce federal commodities laws. But my office doesn't have the time or the expertise to do that. We could enforce state commodities laws, but Congress won't let us."

Bell said that if a victim of commodities fraud comes to his office, "we would be glad to offer information and, if there is a case, we'd advise them to get an attorney. Then all we can do is refer them to the CFTC."

Bell said the CFTC is understaffed and ineffective in prosecuting perpetrators in commodities fraud.

For that reason, fraud can be committed without a very serious threat of criminal prosecution, Bell said. He said victims of commodities fraud can take little other redress than to sue in civil court for damages.

"If that pre-emption was lifted against states," Bell said, "every state would go after commodities fraud. Quite a few states are chomping at the bit to go after this activity."

He said the bill giving states power to fight commodities fraud was defeated because "industry waged a strong lobby in Washington against our cause." He said industry was concerned that giving the states power to fight commodities fraud would cause overlapping regulations.

"We made it clear we were not interested in bootstrapping exchange markets with regulations or licensing commodities brokers or anything like that," Bell said. "We're just interested in getting investors complaints."

Attorneys Plan Appeal Jury's Verdict In Sterilization Suit

Expect Another Dip In N.C. Gas Prices

By The Associated Press
Gasoline prices may drop as low as 95 cents-a-gallon at some North Carolina stations soon, but they could go back up this spring when a 5-cents-a-gallon tax hike goes into effect and if OPEC nations raise their prices, officials say.

Prices have already fallen below $1 at some stations in the state and several stations are predicting prices in the mid-90s soon. However, some station operators are saying such decreases may be short-lived.

"The oil companies still have a glut of products and consumers aren't responding to the lower prices," he said. "I think it has a lot to do with the economy and the smaller cars. The consumption of gasoline is just not there, and I don't see it leveling off. It will continue to go down."

As things stand now, Dugan said dealers are barely breaking even on gasoline sales and in some cases are losing money. He said he makes only 3 cent per gallon at his station, where regular at the self-service pump costs $1.039.

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for a New York woman who sued North Carolina officials claiming she was sterilized without her knowledge 14 years ago say they will appeal a jury's decision against her.

The U.S. District Court jury of six men and six women deliberated less than 45 minutes Wednesday before ruling against Delores Elaine Riddick. Ms. Riddick had filed suit for $1 million against former members of the now-defunct Eugenics Board of North Carolina.

Her attorney said the board's procedures deprived her of a fundamental right to bear children and that the jury's verdict would be appealed.

In Wednesday's testimony, Ms. Riddick told the jury she did not realize in 1968 that North Carolina officials had sterilized her.

Speaking in a clear voice and pausing to wipe away tears, Ms. Riddick said she awakened in a hospital after giving birth at the age of 13 to discover bandages on her abdomen.

Plan Pro-Life March Sunday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A coalition of pro-life groups has scheduled a march Sunday to express opposition to legalized abortion, the day after the 10th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

Pro-life and pro-choice groups are planning demonstrations throughout the country to commemorate the decision. The march is being held for North Carolinians who cannot attend the nationwide Right-to-Life march in Washington on Saturday, a spokesman said.

Drop Charge Of Fox-Trapping

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fox-trapping charges against a Smith Grove man were dismissed Tuesday because of insufficient evidence to substantiate them.

However, Clyde J. Leonard has filed a civil suit against two state wildlife officers, the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission and the state, claiming the officers tried to entrap him by putting a dead, gray fox in a trap he set on Dec. 15.

'Aged' Self To Learn What It's Like To Be Old

YES, THIS IS ME — Pat Moore, a 30-year-old industrial designer, holds a photo of herself disguised as an old lady. For three years, once a week, Ms. Moore disguised herself, learning what it is like to be old in America and has been writing a book about her experiences. (AP Laserphoto)

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Moore has lived four lives. Three of them were 80-year-old women — a shopping-bag lady, a middle-class matron and a dowager.

The fourth, the real Ms. Moore, is a 30-year-old industrial designer who masqueraded as elderly women for three years, one day a week, to learn about what it is like to be old in America.

She found out. She says she was mugged twice, insulted by cashiers and stymied by caps that befuddled arthritic fingers. But she also found kindness and camaraderie with her aged friends.

She last aged herself in November. She has been writing a book on her experiences, and an appearance on NBC's "Today" show resulted in a deluge of callers interested in making films of her story.

"I wanted to know how people treated me and how I responded to the way they treated me," says Ms. Moore.

As a designer, she wanted to find out about the "age issues" of everyday life — soup cans with print too small for weak eyes to read, the buses that require strong legs for boarding.

Three years ago, Ms. Moore submitted herself to a makeup artist who took a master cast of her face and then built plastic pieces she could attach to imitate folds and wrinkles. Each time she transformed herself into an old woman, she spent four hours before a mirror.

She also wore a gray wig; clouded her eyes with baby oil; plugged her ears and wore a hearing aid so others would think she was hard of hearing; wrapped her fingers in tape and wore gloves, to imitate arthritic symptoms; enshrouded her torso and legs in bandages to curve her posture and slow her movements.

Her clothes and her grooming depended on which woman she was playing. The rich woman wore furs, the bag lady wore dirty, tattered rags and the middle-income woman wore conservative clothing.

The disguise worked everywhere she went. She says she aroused suspicions only once, when a Hare Krishna follower saw her in the airport in Columbus, Ohio, and asked: "Are you for real?"

She walked slowly, with a walker or cane, through stores, restaurants, airports and every type of neighborhood.

Twice, she says, she was attacked while walking in Harlem. Each time, a gang robbed her of her purse and then beat her — never suspecting that a 30-year-old woman was encased in that 80-year-old shell.

"I remember the first thing that went through my mind was 'Why am I doing this?' I really expected not to survive," she said.

She was bruised, but otherwise unharmed.

"The lasting effect is one of understanding why the elderly become homebound — why you can look up and see them staring out of apartment windows at the street," she said.

There were other bad moments. The counterwoman at a drugstore responded to her polite request for assistance with "flippant remarks.... He was basically dismissing my presence." The next day, she returned to the store as a woman in her late 20s, and was treated courteously.

Every week, Ms. Moore spent one day as an old woman, financing that activity by spending six days as a young woman at her regular job.

Then the line began to blur. Mostly, Ms. Moore says, it happened because her life was not going well at the time; her marriage had been annulled, and she began to find it "easier to go through the role (of an elderly woman) than to be a single 26-year-old in Manhattan."

Her friends noticed that she began to shut herself up in her apartment and wear "very conservative, very dotty clothes."

"I began to revel in my character and look forward to becoming her again," she says.

After nine months, on the advice of a psychiatrist, she took a three-month vacation from the charade. When she resumed it, she maintained a distance from her characters.

She has some fond memories. Cab drivers, she says, were especially nice, often climbing out of their taxis to help her to her door or taking the time to talk to her. More than once, a cabbie returning her change gave her a $10 bill instead of a $1 bill, she says.

"It's so touching, I get a lump in my throat to this day," she says.

could save the cost of paying affiliates for airing their programs, Sharp said.

He estimated networks now pay about 7 percent of their revenues to local affiliates for carrying their programs. If the networks find the new combination more attractive financially, local affiliate stations could find themselves without network programs.

The result, Sharp said, is likely to be a major shift in the role of all local TV stations.

As happened in the 1950's when networks abandoned radio for television, independent stations, which are already filling their broadcast hours with local or recorded programs, stand to benefit the most, he said.

For local stations to survive, they must concentrate on providing more local events and news, he said. They may turn to another new technology, laser optical video discs, to build a library of TV programming and to automate their operations.

EPIDEMIC VICTIMS
DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — More than 100 people died of dysentery during an epidemic in the Tunduru district of southern Tanzania between April and December of last year, the government newspaper Daily News says.

Often, when she dressed as the bag woman, customers at a coffee shop ordered extra food for her.

And while younger people sometimes slighted her, she always found allies among the old: "I found as an old person, I could go into any situation and I'd have half a dozen elderly friends immediately."

One such friend was a man in his 70s she met one day while sitting on a Central Park bench. The man introduced himself, and they talked. The next week, the man brought a picnic lunch, and they continued to meet at the same spot.

Ms. Moore found that she was attracted to the elderly man. But he did not appear for the fourth week, or for the fifth week. She never saw him again, and does not know what happened to him.

"He was a lovely man," she says.

Sees Future In Independent TV

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine a day when the only way you can watch network television is with a satellite antenna, and your local TV stations offer programming from video discs just as radio stations play records.

The newest member of the Federal Communications Commission doesn't find that scenario so far-fetched. And he's suggesting the biggest beneficiaries of such a future will be the independent local stations that are already operating without a network's protective umbrella.

"Like all future scenarios, this one lacks a guarantee," said Commissioner Stephen A. Sharp. "But what I present is one way the marketplace may go in the next decade. And I think independent TV stations can prosper well beyond your current situation."

Sharp's remarks were offered Tuesday during the 10th annual convention of the Association of Independent Television Stations in Los Angeles. A text of his speech was also released by his office in Washington.

Sharp, 35, is a former FCC general counsel who became a commissioner last October.

He based his predictions on the emergence of a new technology known as Direct Broadcast Satellites, or satellite-to-home broadcasting.

A satellite-to-home system employs a special kind of high-powered satellite that allows direct reception of TV programs by consumers with a small, roof-top antenna. The FCC has authorized creation of the service, and the first satellite-to-home systems should begin operating around 1986.

As such systems grow, cable operators may begin relaying the signals to their subscribers while other consumers erect small antennas for direct reception.

The networks will have a special economic incentive to follow suit, Sharp said.

The strength of ABC, CBS and NBC lies in their ability to distribute programming nationwide through local affiliates, but that's not necessarily the cheapest way to distribute programs nationally.

With a combination of satellite-to-home systems, cable and the stations they own directly, networks could reach more than 80 percent of the nation's homes. While that is less than the near total coverage the networks now enjoy, the networks

Watt Says His Remarks Targeted Govm't Policy

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt says his remarks describing the "terrible socialism" on Indian reservations are being misinterpreted and he is not advocating the abolition of the reservations.

But New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya, a Democrat, said Wednesday that Watt should be fired, and an Indian leader said Watt's statements were the greatest threat to the Indians' "God-given culture since smallpox."

On an interview program broadcast by the Satellite Program Network, Watt said, "If you want an example of the failures of socialism, don't go to Russia. Come to America and see the Indian reservations."

Watt said government policy toward the 735,000 Indians living on reservations had led to the "highest divorce rate, highest drug rate, highest alcoholism rate, highest unemployment rate, highest social diseases" in the country.

The interior secretary called for the Indians to be given their freedom instead of being treated as "incompetent wards" of the state. He used the phrase "terrible socialism" to describe the reservations.

Many Indian leaders saw Watt's comments as a veiled threat to renew attempts to abolish the reservations and sell off the 50 million acres of reservation lands.

"All of this is part of a pattern going on for the last year and a half calling for termination of the Indian tribes," said Elmer Savilla, former chairman of the Quechan tribe of California and executive director of the National Tribal Chairmen's Association.

Savilla said his organization, which represents 154 Indian tribes, would hold an emergency meeting Monday to vote on whether to seek Watt's ouster. He predicted the majority of the tribal representatives would support such a resolution.

Anaya asked President Reagan to fire Watt because of his "ignorance and insensitivity to the environment and cultures of our country. His idea of Indian rights is to integrate them into the American society ... and open them up to exploiters."

Watt, interviewed in Miami after a speech, said,

"I have had people calling for my resignation for a long time. That's nothing new."

But he said his remarks are being misinterpreted.

"I am criticizing the management of the reservations by Washington and think that we ought to let the Indians do it," he said. "The reservations are theirs and they should manage them."

"Nobody is trying to eliminate the reservations. This can be a great system."

Watt received support from the White House, where presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said Watt's remarks had been "improperly reported."

"What he actually said was he was concerned about the fact that Indians do not own land, that they cannot go to regular public schools, they cannot go to jobs, they have a high percentage of social problems. He's been working very hard to increase the budget for this purpose to improve those situations."

However, many Indian leaders said they saw the greatest threats from Reagan administration budget cuts. They said the administration has already made cuts in poverty programs which help Indians, and Watt has tried to close Indian boarding schools.

Watt, in the interview, said some tribal leaders were keeping Indians on reservations in a "desert environment, where there are no jobs, no agricultural potential, no water" as a way of

Remains Of 22 More WWII Dead Identified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The remains of 22 U.S. soldiers whose B-24 Liberator bomber crashed deep in a New Guinea jungle 39 years ago have been identified and will be buried, the Army says.

The wreckage of the lost plane was discovered last April 30, and specialists from the Army's identification laboratory in Hawaii had been working since then to identify the remains.

The Army said that the relatives of all but one soldier, 2nd Lt. Raymond J. Geis Jr. of Chicago, have been notified and that burial will be according to the wishes of those relatives.

Geis and the other 21 passengers and crewmen were aboard a B-24 on what was described as a non-combat flight between Port Moresby and Nadzab, New Guinea, on March 22, 1944.

"For unknown reasons, the airplane crashed in dense jungle," the Army said.

The wreckage is not the first to be discovered on the island, which figured in major battles with Japanese forces during World War II, long after that war ended. In 1974, the remains of 10 bomber crewmen were found and returned for burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Bruce Hoy, curator of a war museum in Papua, New Guinea, estimated last year that there were about 200 American and Australian warplanes still unaccounted for in the jungles and ravines of the island.

The Army identified the other 21 men as: 2nd Lt. Robert E. Allred, Des Moines, Iowa; 1st Sgt. Harold Atkins, Gallatin Gateway, Mont.; Capt. Charles R. Barnard, Wadsworth, Ohio; Sgt. Clint P. Butler, Little Rock, Ark.;

Staff Sgt. Thomas J. Carpenter Jr., Georgiana, Ala.; 1st Sgt. Weldon W. Frazier, Palestine, Tex.; Staff Sgt. Frank Ginter, Buffalo, N.Y.

Also, 2nd Lt. Stanley G. Gross, Chicago; 2nd Lt. Keith T. Holm, Bellevue, Wash.; Technician 4th Class Joseph E. Kaczorek Jr., Milwaukee; 2nd Lt. Harvey E. Landrum, Gladewater, Tex.; Sgt. Stanley C. Lawrence, Eau Claire, Wis.; Pfc. Carlin E. Loop, Salina, Kan.

Also, Cpl. Joseph B. Mettam, Solana Beach, Calif.; Sgt. Charles Samples Jr., Smithers, W. Va.; Staff Sgt. William M. Shrake, Mooresville, Ind.; Staff Sgt. John J. Staseowski, Holyoke, Mass.; 2nd Lt. Charles R. Steiner, Navarre, Ohio; Staff Sgt. Robert C. Thompson, Anniston, Ala.; 2nd Lt. Melvin F. Walker, Racine, Wis.; and 2nd Lt. Emory C. Young, Good Hope, Ill.

GM Fighting $50,000 Award To Rapist, Killer

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — A man who killed his wife and is serving 27 years in prison for the rape and stabbing of another woman will receive $50,000 in workers' compensation and $74 a week for life unless General Motors Corp. wins a court appeal.

However, the attorney for James Earl Gibbs says the crime and prison term should not free the automaker from compensating Gibbs for lung disease he contracted after working at GM's Chevrolet foundry in Saginaw in the 1970s.

"His lungs have rotted out," attorney Bernard Freid said Wednesday.

Marissa Batt, deputy district attorney in Los Angeles who prosecuted the 38-year-old Gibbs for the Nov. 20, 1980, attack on the woman, said the award "assounds" her.

"He is an incredibly vicious person. It's a miracle she (the victim) is alive," Ms. Batt said.

Ms. Batt said she saw Gibbs almost daily during court proceedings last year and never saw "any evidence" of a lung problem which a doctor said causes dizziness, shortness of breath and a cough.

The Michigan Workers Compensation Appeals Board ruled in 1980 that Gibbs' lung ailment was job-related. This month, GM filed a petition for reconsideration of the award with the Michigan Supreme Court, which had previously refused to review it.

The $50,000 stems from the $74 a week GM was ordered to pay retroactive to the last day Gibbs worked for the automaker, plus interest.

Gibbs, who also served a prison sentence for murdering his wife, raped the 26-year-old woman, stabbed her 21 times and left her for dead in woods at Hollywood, Ms. Batt said.

He was convicted of rape and attempted murder and sentenced last May to 27 years and eight months at San Quentin State Penitentiary. He will be eligible for parole after he serves two-thirds of his sentence, Ms. Batt said.

"It is a horrendous crime, it's a tragedy," Freid admitted, but said GM is trying to use it to circumvent responsibility for Gibbs' ailment, that he claims was due to smoke, dust and fumes at the foundry.

"Their petition to the state Supreme Court said nothing about his illness," he said. "They lost that case (on Gibbs' health) seven years ago."

GM spokesman Duane Poole said GM does not comment on cases in litigation, and would not discuss Gibbs' job history.

Gibbs worked at GM's Chevrolet foundry until Sept. 21, 1971, when he left because of the lung illness. That same day, the body of his wife, Lena Mae Gibbs, was found just outside Saginaw. She had been stabbed to death.

FOCUS

Mid-Term Exam

Today Ronald Reagan enters his third year as President — a time in the cycle of "Presidencies" that many historians believe to be especially decisive. In 1971, Richard Nixon began his third year with the public perception that he was a weak leader. One year later he had altered that — cutting the dollar loose from the backing of gold and silver and undertaking the China initiative. At President Carter's mid-term, the public saw that he was in political trouble. The hostage crisis in Iran compounded his difficulties, contributing to his defeat in 1980. At mid-term, most polls show that President Reagan has lost public support. The next 365 days will determine how he enters the 1984 election year.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the last President to die before completing half of his first term in office?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — In Poe's "The Raven," the bird repeats the word "Nevermore."

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to sit back and observe the progress you have made, and to make plans to have even greater progress in the days ahead. You have good opportunity to express your talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Analyze your position with friends and know which to retain and which to let go out of your life for best results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Conditions in the business world may appear strange now, but later can turn to your benefit. Be more self-assured.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't rush into a new interest before making a careful study. Take no risks with your reputation at this time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Come to a better understanding with the one you love. A new contact can bring many benefits your way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Resolve a problem you have with an associate and cement better relations with this person. Be wary of newcomers.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure to finish regular routines before engaging in amusements. An argument with a friend is not serious, so forget it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't try to be forceful with others, or you could regret it later. Don't neglect a worthy friend of long standing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to keep promises made to family members. A new project needs more study before going ahead with it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more objective in dealing with others and get better results. Use extreme caution in motion and avoid possible accident.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to save more money instead of spending more than you can afford. Show others you have wisdom.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A time to be calm and serene while going after a personal aim. Be sure to use your money wisely at all times today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Taking on a martyr complex will gain you nothing at this time. Quietly get things done in a sure and positive manner.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who has much ability in scientific matters, so send to right schools where your progeny can learn modern methods and gain good background for life's work. A most unusual profession could emerge here.

Town Pays $17,570 Fine For Violation

CLARKTON, N.C. (AP) — Faced with property loss because it couldn't pay a fine, Clarkton paid $17,570.21 in fines for violating the federal Fair Housing Act by terminating low-income housing plans.

The fines will be used to pay legal expenses dating back to 1968.

When Clarkton was ordered to pay the bill, Mayor Dwight Fort said the town might have to sell its police car and trucks, but instead amended its budget and took the money from a contingency fund.

In 1968, town commissioners applied for federal public housing funds. A year later, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and various state agencies approved construction of a 50-unit project, but residents voted against the plan and town commissioners cancelled the project.

A black Bladen County resident, James Smith, sued Clarkton, charging violation of the federal Fair Housing Act. Judge Albert Bryan Jr. ruled that the commissioners had terminated the project because of racial prejudice.

Bryan ordered Clarkton to accept the public housing and pay legal fees to Legal Services of the Lower Cape Fear in Wilmington.

A federal appeals court upheld the decision in July, and ordered Clarkton officials to see that the units were built.

North-South reached a good four spade contract, despite the fact that East opened the bidding with a strong no trump. The hand looked like a shoo-in, but watch how the play developed.

West led a low heart. Declarer, reigning world team champion John Solodar of New York City, won in dummy and led a diamond to the king. He crossed back to the table with the ace of hearts and led another diamond.

East, Kit Woolsey of Washington D.C., perforce took the ace and shifted to a trump. Declarer's seven won the trick, and he made the normal play of going after his diamond ruff. Even though he took the precaution of ruffing with the ten in dummy, it was not quite good enough.

Woolsey overruffed with the ace and returned a low club! West was able to win the trick with the queen and lead another diamond. The spots were just right for the defenders. Woolsey overruffed dummy's five of trumps with the six for down one.

'Talking Heads' Can Make Good TV

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Who says talking heads make lousy television? "The Constitution: That Delicate Balance" buries that fragment of conventional wisdom, temporarily at least.

The public TV program is lively, dramatic, provocative, amusing at times — and composed entirely of people arguing issues. The last of four shows in the

RULED ACCIDENT — The 1977 death of TV star Freddie Prinze, above, was an accident, a Superior Court jury in Los Angeles ruled Wednesday. The jury said the death was not suicide since Prinze had taken too many drugs to comprehend his actions when he fatally shot himself. (AP Laserphoto) limited series — to be extended eventually to 13 — examines affirmative action and reverse discrimination.

In that program, scheduled for broadcast Feb. 3, mythical Dalton State University must choose one of three candidates for a tenured position on the faculty. One is black, one a woman, and third is white.

Washington attorney Tyrone Brown, a former member of the Federal Communications Commission, moderates the spirited discussion involving a panel of current and former government officials, jurists, journalists and others.

The series is produced by the Media and Society Seminars of the Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia University, along with public television stations WTTW in Chicago and WNET in New York.

"Portrait of America," a planned five-year, 60-part series of hour-long specials introduced this month by WTBS, the cable-TV SuperStation, is good public relations and not likely to stir much controversy. But it's also terrific photography mixed with interesting conversation, slightly reminiscent of Charles Kuralt's "On the Road" segment for CBS News.

Hal Holbrook is host for the series, which will examine in turn every state, commonwealth and territory in an effort, Holbrook says, "to explain what it is that has made this nation a model for the world, how we are different from one another, yet parts of a whole."

The first show was on Virginia and the second, to be shown in February, is about Nevada, with Georgia to follow in March.

"Discover: The World of Science," the third program in Time Inc.'s series of hour-long TV specials, is now in syndication on 57 stations, with a program featuring segments on the human eye, man-powered vehicles, a robot arm for quadriplegics, the importance of sleep and the "recovery" of Mount St. Helens.

Looking Ahead:
Paramount's syndicated "Entertainment Tonight" program begins a 25-part retrospective on television Monday, Jan. 31, with a look at "The Twilight Zone." Subsequent programs will feature actual footage plus interviews with writers, producers and stars of series like "I Love Lucy," "You Show of Shows," "The $64,000 Question," "David Crockett," "Batman" and many others. ...

ABC News will devote two weeks of programming starting Feb. 13 on "This Week with David Brinkley," to the subject of crime in America. Other ABC News shows, including "World News Tonight," "Nightline," "The Last Word," "20-20," "World News This Morning" and "Viewpoint" will examine topics related to crime, law enforcement, criminal justice and the prison system...

WNET in New York, public TV's primary producing station, and KTEH in San Jose, Calif., will collaborate on a new weekly program on science and technology, called "Tomorrow-Today." Peter Baker, whose background includes a dozen years writing and producing a program for the British Broadcasting Corp., will be executive producer of the planned 13-week series, which so far has not been scheduled for broadcast.

And finally, some famous faces to look for on television: Cheryl Ladd as Grace Kelly, on CBS Feb. 21 ... Albert Finney as Pope John Paul II, on CBS at a date to be determined ... Roy Scheider as the outspoken Argentinian editor and publisher Jacobo Timerman, with Liv Ullmann portraying his wife, on NBC sometime in the future.

Others In Family To Be On Program

When Greenville's 8-year-old Robin Allen appears on the PM Magazine program airing at 7:30 tonight over WRAL-TV, Raleigh, he will be joined by three other members of his family.

Two of Robin's sisters and a niece will be seen in the segment featuring Robin as winner of a turkey-drawing competition.

Seek Crop Price Target Freeze

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration reportedly has not given up on an earlier bid to freeze target prices for major crops as a way of holding down federal spending.

According to sources who asked not to be named, the administration is considering asking Congress for legislation to freeze target prices at their 1983 levels.

The legislative request could be included in President Reagan's budget proposals for 1983-84, which will be sent to Congress at the end of the month.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block raised the possibility late last year when he described the proposed payment-in-kind program then under consideration by the lame-duck Congress. When PIK failed to be approved, the administration earlier this month moved on its own to put the program in place for 1983. It includes giving farmers surplus grain in return for reducing 1983 plantings of wheat, corn, sorghum, cotton and rice. Target prices are book-keeping figures used to compute any direct federal "deficiency" payments, or subsidies due farmers.

When market prices fall below the targets — as they currently are — payments make up the difference between the target and the market price or the loan level, whichever is larger.

Block on Dec. 9 told the Senate Agriculture Committee that current law requires target prices to be increased each year and that those boosts "provide incentive for production increases at a time when moderation is needed."

Thus, he said, the secretary of agriculture should have the authority "to determine the appropriate target level" through the 1985 crop season. In no case, however, would the targets be lower than the 1983 levels.

Target prices for the PIK crops and the regular loan rates for 1983 include: Wheat, a target of $4.30 per bushel and a regular loan of $3.65; corn, $2.86 per bushel and $2.65; sorghum, $2.72 per bushel and $2.52; upland cotton, 76 cents per pound and 55 cents; and rice, $11.40 per 100 pounds and $8.14.

Market prices in mid-December, comparatively, were reported by USDA at: wheat, $3.50; corn, $2.27; sorghum, $2.26; cotton, 58.6 cents; and rice, $8.05.

If Reagan's budget recommends a freeze in target prices, questions from congressional farm leaders won't be long in coming.

Block is scheduled to appear before the House Agriculture Committee on Feb. 9 for a review of economic conditions on the nation's farms and to go over the administration's budget proposals for the fiscal year which will begin next Oct. 1.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the committee, said the meeting was scheduled early in the new session because members "want to hear any proposals Block may have for new actions" to improve farm income.

"American farmers are facing critical strains this year," De la Garza said. "Market prices may continue low even if the payment-in-kind program works as well as the administration hopes it will."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers and feedlot operators continue to pour cattle into the beef pipeline at a fast clip, according to the latest Agriculture Department survey.

The number of cattle being fed for the slaughter market in 13 major beef states on Jan. 1 totaled 10.3 million head, up 14 percent from a year ago and 4 percent above the inventory of two years ago, the department said Tuesday.

According to the quarterly inventory report, 7.23 million cattle were placed in feeding pens during the October-December period, 16 percent more than a year earlier and 9 percent more than in the same fourth quarter of 1981.

Feedlot cattle — those which are fattened on grain-based rations prior to slaughter — provide most of the more-expensive beef cuts on sale in supermarkets. Much of the hamburger and some other cheaper cuts comes from slaughtered cows and other "non-fed" beef.

The report said that marketings of fed cattle during the quarter totaled 5.38 million head, up 6 percent from a year earlier and 2 percent more than in the last quarter of 1981.

Looking at prospects in the first quarter of 1983, the report said an estimated 6.07 million head are expected to be marketed from feedlots, up 11 percent from a year ago and 9 percent above 1981.

Total beef output is expected to decline slightly this year, according to USDA projections.

The 13 states included in the quarterly report account for about 5 percent of the nation's beef production. Traditionally, the report covered 23 states, but 10 were dropped last year as part of the administration's budget cutting.
