R. L. James Wins Annual JC DSA

JAYCEES HONORED ... Dr. Leo Jenkins (left) with the 1982 DSA recipient, Robert L. (Bobby) James (center), and Ricky Jackson, who was honored as the Boss of the Year by the Greenville chapter.

The Greenville Jaycees named a 34-year-old loan officer with the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association as the 1982 recipient of the chapter's highest honor, the Distinguished Service Award.

Robert Leroy (Bobby) James Jr., a vice president-branch manager with the PCA, received the award during the Jaycees' 37th annual DSA and Bosses Night banquet Thursday night at the Greenville Country Club.

Richard Alvin Jackson, 27, manager of the Piggly Wiggly on Dickinson Avenue, was honored by the chapter as the recipient of the Boss of the Year Award, given annually to a Jaycee employer who has supported the work of the organization through his employees. Jackson was nominated by Gary Danford, who works at the Piggly Wiggly store.

Dr. Leo Jenkins, former chancellor at East Carolina University, was the guest speaker for the banquet.

James, a Pitt County native, attended Plymouth High School and ECU and joined Wachovia Bank & Trust in 1970 as a collector. He was named manager of Master Card and Ready Reserve accounts for the area in 1972 and became branch manager in Ahoskie in 1973 and in Aulander in 1974. James managed the farm credit office in Swan Quarter from 1975 to 1977 when he became head of Federal Land Bank loans for Pitt County.

Since 1980, he has served as vice president-branch manager of the Pitt-Greene PCA, which provides short and intermediate term loans to farmers in Pitt and Greene counties. In his position, James is involved in the responsibility for some $30 million in short and intermediate term loans and approximately $33 million in long-term loans.

James, a former president of the Mattamuskeet Jaycees, served as vice president of the Greenville chapter during 1982 and was elected chaplain for 1982-83. James, a district director for the North Carolina Jaycees in 1978-79 and state director for the Greenville organization for 1979-80, joined the

HOST FAMILIES, EXCHANGE STUDENTS SOUGHT

Host families are being sought for 25 high school students from Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Spain, France, Italy, Colombia, Brazil, Canada, and Japan for the school year 1983-84 in a program sponsored by the American Intercultural Student Exchange (AISE), a non-profit educational organization for international understanding.

The students, aged 15-17, will arrive here in August, attend a local high school and return home in late June, 1984. All are fluent in English and will have spending money and medical insurance. Host families may deduct $50 per month for income tax purposes.

AISE is also seeking American high school students between 15 and 17 who would like to spend a high school year in Sweden, Norway, Finland, Germany, Spain or France or participate in a five-week host family stay in Sweden, Norway, Finland, Spain or Colombia.

Lynda Mann of 203 S. Meade St. here has asked for this appeal and is willing to talk with anyone interested in either aspect of the program. Her phone number is 752-1542.

Inflation Rate Sees New Low

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, restrained at the end by a big December decline, rose just 3.9 percent in 1982, the smallest gain in a decade, the government said today.

In the last month of the year, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index recorded a 0.3 percent price tumble. The monthly drop, only the second recorded since 1965, equalled last March's decline.

The advance posted for the full year, less than half the 8.9 percent of 1981, was restrained in large part by a record fall in gasoline prices. Natural gas prices, however, posted a record increase.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said today's report was "good news. It shows we have gone a long way toward winning the battle against inflation."

The department said that plunging mortgage interest rates and a further easing in energy prices were responsible for about three-fourths of the moderation in the yearly inflation measure.

In December alone, housing costs overall tumbled 0.8 percent, driven by a sharp 4.6 percent drop in home financing costs. Home prices themselves rose a tiny 0.2 percent.

Food prices also fell, off 0.1 percent.

Gasoline prices declined 0.9 percent. At year's end, such prices were 7.6 percent below their March 1981 peak.

Medical care costs, as they had all year, rose. Such expenses were up 0.7 percent last month; for the year, they shot up 11 percent.

Of all the components in the index, only medical care costs grew at a higher rate last year than in 1981.

Overall, economists attributed the inroads made last year in controlling inflation mostly to the serious recession, good crop harvests and the worldwide oil surplus.

Indeed, the Labor Department said gasoline prices for the year fell 6.6 percent, the most since the Depression year of 1935, when records were first kept.

Gasoline prices had risen 9.4 percent in 1981, 18.9 percent the year before that, and 52.2 percent in 1979, when Middle East oil producers raised their prices and gas lines appeared around the country.

Natural gas prices, however, rose 25.4 percent last year, also setting a record. For December, such prices were up 1.2 percent. Analysts generally attribute the surge to congressional decontrol of new-gas costs.

Since decontrol began in 1978, natural gas customers have seen their bills more than double, congressional investigators said earlier this winter. Gas prices rose 14.9 percent in 1981.

The full-year consumer price increase was the smallest since the 3.4 percent of 1971 and 1972, when wage and price controls were in effect.

Demos Gather Thursday To Pick Bundy Successor

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee will meet next Thursday to elect two members of a committee which will recommend a replacement for Rep. Sam Bundy, who died of a heart attack in Raleigh Wednesday.

Bundy, representing Pitt and Greene counties, had served in the General Assembly since 1971. His funeral was in Farmville today.

A four-member committee — two members from Greene County and two from Pitt — will recommend a successor. The appointment will be made by Gov. Jim Hunt, who is bound by law to follow the committee's recommendation.

George Saleeby, Pitt County Democratic Party chairman, said his executive committee will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Pitt County Court House in Greenville.

Each county has a standing State House of Representatives Executive Committee. Lionel Moore and Richard Price serve as committee members from Greene County.

Saleeby said Fredrica Jacobson and Mary Williams, both of Greenville, were selected as members from Pitt last spring before Bethel and Carolina townships were moved to another House district during redistricting. Pitt's membership on the district committee has not been updated since redistricting, Saleeby said. New members must be named before the district committee can make a recommendation.

Mrs. Williams, a librarian at East Carolina University, said today that she is not actively seeking re-election to the committee. "I'm willing to serve again, but I'm not doing anything" to seek re-election, she said. However, she added, "People are seeking me out."

Mrs. Jacobson, vice president of WOOW radio in Greenville, said she is actively seeking re-election to the committee.

"Absolutely," she said when asked if she wanted to remain on the committee. "I think the party process is important. We have to retain the process as written; retain the committee members that were duly elected. I think any system, as long as it's acceptable as written, should be maintained."

Mrs. Jacobson acknowledged that she has been contacted by a number of persons interested in the

Three Men Die In Martin Co. Airplane Crash On Thursday

ROBERSONVILLE — Three Virginia men died in a light airplane crash Thursday that left their plane "pretty much destroyed" after smashing into a frozen field in Martin County.

The scene of the crash was a short distance north of Robersonville, just off N.C. 903 adjacent to a drive-in movie site. Members of the Robersonville Rescue Squad arrived on the scene shortly after the crash.

Sherwood Alvin Eberhard, 48, of Williamsburg and Wayne C. Mitchell, 44, of Hampton were pronounced dead at the scene, according to Jerry Beach, county coroner and a sheriff's deputy.

The pilot, Martin John Vanderlinde, 24, a flight instructor from Williamsburg, died after being taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, Beach said.

The three were en route from Wilmington to Williamsburg when the single-engine Piper 140 struck a tree and crashed into a field near this town about 50 miles below the Virginia-North Carolina border in eastern North Carolina, he said.

"One witness saw the plane circling. He said it looked like it was looking for a place to land," Beach said. "He said the plane started to nose dive and he heard this loud cracking noise — that was probably when it hit the tree — then hit the frozen field."

All three men were found inside the plane, which was "torn all to pieces," Beach said. "The motor was smashed way back into the cockpit area."

Dispatcher Kathy Jones said the sheriff's department received reports of the crash at 4:26 p.m.

"The plane was pretty much destroyed," she said.

Beach said Vanderlinde was working for Colonial Aviation out of James City Airport in Williamsburg. Eberhard and Mitchell were employees of The Virginia local chapter in 1978.

He is a member of Red Oak Fire Department and formerly served as captain of the unit. He is currently secretary-treasurer for the department and chairman of the Red Oak community watch. James is a member of Red Oak Christian Church, where he served as chairman of the board of deacons in 1982.

The DSA recipient was listed in the 1981 and 1982 "Outstanding Young Men of America" publications.

James and his wife, Linda, have two children, Heather, 9, and Robert, 5.

Jackson, a Laurinburg native, joined Piggly Wiggly in Red Springs as a bag boy at the age of 16 and upon graduation from high school, received a four-year scholarship to Methodist College. He continued working full time at Piggly Wiggly and attended college. A year later at the age of 19, he was made assistant manager at the Red Springs business.

In 1978, at the age of 22, he was offered his first post as a store manager in Goldsboro and he remained there until transferring later that year to Piggly Wiggly's Greenville store. Piggly Wiggly said that Jackson is one of the youngest store managers in the company.

He was named last December as the outstanding manager of Piggly Wiggly Supermarkets of North Carolina, a network of 54 stores. Jackson has been a member of the Jaycees here since 1979 and served as assistant treasurer during 1981-82.

Jackson and his wife, Laura, reside at 426 Pittman Drive.

Jenkins was asked to speak at the annual meeting after state Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville, who had accepted the chapter's invitation, died Wednesday. "I'm not substituting for Sam tonight because I don't think anyone could," said Jenkins.

Charles Asbell, the 1981 DSA recipient, said in introducing Jenkins that two accomplishments stand out when the former ECU official's role in the development of the east is discussed. Asbell recalled Jenkins' efforts to have East Carolina attain university status and his successful fight for the establishment of a medical school for eastern North Carolina.

Jenkins, an honorary lifetime member of the Greenville Jaycees, told the gathering that the results show that things can be accomplished locally and he mentioned that the cooperation of a lot of people, particularly the Jaycees, was necessary in order to accomplish goals. He said the Jaycees "played a big role" in the medical school and university status battles.

Jenkins said all towns are divided into three types of people: minimum people, average citizens and maximum citizens. He said minimum people never vote but are the first to criticize and are "generally a dark cloud." The average citizen votes but generally follows slogans and jumps on successful bandwagons, he suggested, but prefers a "balcony view of life." The average citizen enjoys following the leader, Jenkins suggested.

Maximum people, according to Jenkins, comprise a small group and include the Jaycees. He said maximum citizens love their country and are not embarrassed to say so. The maximum citizen has a "magnificent obsession to do more than others," said Jenkins.

"North Carolina will become truly great only when more people are willing to become maximum citizens" and are "willing to take the lonely road," he contended. Being a maximum citizen requires a compromise with mediocrity, he added.

Mayor Percy Cox, who introduced the DSA recipient, said the Jaycees have proven themselves during the years and he pointed to the local chapter's role in a variety of projects that have benefitted the area.

Five charter members of the Greenville Jaycees, who attended the banquet, were asked to sign a copy of the charter issued to the chapter by the North Carolina Jaycees in 1939. Attending were Dave Mosier, the first local president; Edmond Waldrop, who served as national counselor for the chapter; Francis Worsley, a director; Tyson Bilbro and Harry Hagerty.

There were 16 former presidents of the chapter and 15 past DSA recipients at the banquet. In addition, seven JCI senators and four JC ambassadors from the Greenville club attended.

Former member Don Brady, who received the DSA in 1977, was president in 1972 and is a JCI senator, installed five new Jaycees. They are Jay Cox, Burney Fleming, Denny Purser, Shay Weir and Robert Wilkerson.

Beach said the bodies were sent to Greenville for an autopsy and that the Federal Aviation Administration was sending officials to investigate the cause of the crash.

House appointment — "half of the world, I think" — but she declined to identify them.

Mrs. Jacobson was a write-in candidate for the state House in the November 1982 general election when Bundy and Rep. Ed Warren were re-elected.

Asked if she would seek appointment to the House, Mrs. Jacobson said, "I'm not a candidate for the appointment. Otherwise, I would have withdrawn from the committee."

"I regret the circumstances under which we are acting," Saleeby said. "I've known Sam Bundy for 30 years as a friend and a politician. He contributed a great deal to the political, civic and church life of Pitt County. As a result of his efforts, Pitt County is a better place to live in."

Local Democratic sources indicated that speculation for a successor includes former Farmville Mayor Linwood

Mercer; Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville, son of the veteran congressman; Farmville's present Mayor Rusty Duke; Greenville real estate broker Mark Tipton; Mark Owens of Fountain, an attorney and chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education, and former East Carolina University chancellor, Dr. Leo Jenkins.

Greenville attorney Tom Taft's name has also been mentioned as a possible contender for the appointment. However, Taft said this morning that "I am not a candidate for the vacant seat in the N.C. House, as my interest is and has been in running for the North Carolina Senate in 1984." Taft is presently chairman of the State Ports Authority.

"I would think that people interested in being appointed" to the House seat "would be in contact with (party) executive committee members to influence them to vote for (House of Representatives Committee) people" who would recommend their appointment, Saleeby said.

Saleeby noted that the executive committee vote on members for the House of Representatives Executive Committee will probably be by "secret ballot."

The party chairman said he has not been contacted by anyone expressing an interest in serving on the House of Representatives Executive Committee.

The county executive committee is composed of 53 members — two from each of the county's 24 precincts, plus the party chairman, vice chairman and secretary, as well as the chairman of the Democratic Women's organization and a representative of the Young Democrats Club.

However, the executive committee members from Bethel and Carolina townships will not vote on the state House committee members.

A number of executive committee members contacted this morning said they have not been asked to support any potential appointee or committee member.

However, two party leaders, who asked not to be identified, said U.S. Rep. Walter Jones has contacted several persons on the executive committee, asking that they support his son.

Party Vice Chairman Kathryn Lewis said she has received one call "on behalf of a candidate ... Walter Jones Jr."

Asked if the call came from Rep. Jones, Mrs. Lewis said, "You can draw your own conclusions."

She added, "I have no commitment to anyone."

Dear Abby

"It's A Woman's World," Reader Asserts

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Everyone says, "It's a man's world." It isn't. If anything, it's a woman's world. Explain this:

If a woman undressed in front of a window with the shade up and a man stood outside and watched, the man would be arrested as a peeping tom.

But if a man undressed in front of a window with the shade up and a woman stood outside and watched, the man would be arrested for indecent exposure.

A MAN IN A WOMAN'S WORLD

DEAR MAN: Not necessarily. It is doubtful that a man — or a woman — who disrobed inadvertently before an unshaded window would be arrested for indecent exposure.

Nor would one caught in the act of observing someone of the opposite sex disrobing before an uncovered window necessarily be arrested as a peeping tom (or tomette, whichever the case may be). Intent is all important. Gender is not.

DEAR ABBY: For 14 years my wife and I have had a running battle over a difference of opinion that has left us both somewhat battle-scarred. Before I invite guests (including my relatives) for the weekend, I always get my wife's OK first.

When my wife invites guests for the weekend (usually her relatives), she never asks for my OK ahead of time. If I am told at all, I am simply informed that so-and-so is coming for the weekend.

When I remind my wife that I always ask for her approval before inviting guests and think she should give me the same consideration, she says, "You are eccentric." Then she reminds me that she is an adult, and she sees no reason to ask for my "permission" to invite guests to her home.

How do you view this, Abby?

MIFFED IN MARYLAND

DEAR MIFFED: Marriage is a partnership. The home is not hers — it belongs to both of you. It's not a matter of asking for permission to invite weekend guests, it's simply "clearing" with one's partner before issuing an invitation. It's the courteous and considerate thing to do.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old, average-looking male with a four-year college education who seems to have terrible luck finding a young woman. I have joined dating clubs, which cost me a lot and got me nowhere. I am not in the habit of going to bars, but I was so desperate for female companionship one night I went to a bar and picked up a young woman and she turned out to be a prostitute.

I see guys all around me with girls, and they don't appear to have any more on the ball than I have. What's wrong with me? I'm starting to worry about myself, Abby. I've even prayed to St. Jude, and I'm not even Catholic.

I consider having a companion of the opposite sex more important than a job or career. I want someone to share my life with. Without that, everything else is meaningless. Can you help me?

LONELY IN DENVER

DEAR LONELY: What are your outside interests? The theater? Music? Museums? Art? Dancing? Sports? Antique cars? There are any number of places to meet people (church included) that will bring you into contact with women whose interests are the same as yours, which is a good starting point. Enroll in some extension courses at your local university.

And let everyone at work know that you're interested in meeting someone. Everyone has a "lovely" cousin, niece, neighbor or friend who is aching to meet a nice guy who doesn't want to go to bars to meet a nice girl.

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Age Reduces One's Vision

As a person grows older, the eye begins to slow down, not adjusting as quickly to light.

"We notice a difference when we are in our 40s and by the 70s the vision is greatly reduced," says Isabelle Buckley, extension gerontology specialist at North Carolina State University.

"With the proper fitting of glasses, the aged human eye may still be as good as or better than any camera invented, but the pupil of the eyes will not open and close quickly according to the light level," the specialist says.

To make up for this, older people need more non-glare light. It takes twice as much light to do the same job at 60 as it did at 20 and three times as much light by the time a person is in his 70s.

"We need to go home and raise the shades, paint the walls light and get larger light bulbs. We may even need two lamps. Most elders drive cars only in the daytime because of the uncontrollable glare of other car lights," Miss Buckley says. It also helps to pause at the door and wait until the eye adjusts before entering a room.

CERTAIN THINGS

Homemaker's Haven

BY EVELYN SPANGLER

Building a new life through remarriage isn't easy. Men, women and children who have accepted the challenge and responsibility of rebuilding new relationships in a blended family are learning it can be done.

In adjusting to a new situation, it is very important for the children to feel the new marriage is a good one, that it comes first so they can have a good home together. Husband and wife must present a united front so children won't play against the other. Trust and feelings of being wanted and needed must be developed.

As children move into a new family, the past is brought with them. Old wounds take time to heal. Oftentimes it is better to allow a settling in period to take place before setting consistent rules, limits, rewards, punishments, and methods of directly dealing with them. Timing is the key. Each person adjusts in an individual manner. Stepparents often feel it is difficult to know if the child's behavior is due to the divorce, dislike, or his general reaction pattern. Stepparents must look at their own actions and reactions and get knowledgeable information from the biological parent about the child's previous reaction to situations. Work out problems directly with the child.

Honesty is important. Open sharing and communication must be given top priority; it must be recognized this takes time to develop. The best way to deal with these feelings is to talk about them. Children often find it difficult to express their feelings so the parents and stepparent must take this responsibility by encouraging the children to talk freely and to be aware of hidden feelings that must be brought out, discussed and dealt with in a positive manner.

The children may develop a conflict of loyalties concerning the biological parent and stepparent. Children may often have this conflict resolved when the stepparent explains they are not taking the parent's place, but want to work together to build a happy household.

Avoid competition and comparison between parent and stepparent. Help the child realize everyone has good and bad qualities so it is better to enjoy what each person is as an individual.

It is important to establish a cooperative relationship with the ex-spouse because most likely there will be many years of contact with each other regarding the children. Cooperation will make future dealings easier and everyone's life happier.

The transition to a remarriage is often not easy. Practical concerns as budgeting, schools, visits to the pediatrician must be handled immediately. Everyday conflicts and tensions that all families experience are complicated and intensified. Partners must recognize that remarriage will not solve all problems. One must have a realistic outlook and work together. It can be done!

Women are the main beneficiaries of Social Security. The Social Security Administration says that of the 32.2 million adults receiving benefits, about 3 in 5 are women. Overall, it says, some 35.2 million Americans — 3 million of them children — get Social Security benefits.

Price Bidded Upward

Pitt County put up its tobacco quota for bid Monday, and came away the apparent winner as a series of farmers offered an average of just over 80 cents a pound for the right to grow the tobacco this summer. That has to be a record — or at least very close to the record — for the lease of tobacco quota in an area noted for its high lease prices.

The county auction traditionally has served as a pacesetter for other leases in Pitt, and you now can expect those allotment holders who haven't made a commitment to boost their asking price accordingly.

There has been much talk in recent weeks about the quota owners being mercenary, greedy and unthinking in asking higher prices this year. Monday's sale pinpoints the major problem, however.

Remember, there was no asking price. No minimum was set. This was grower against grower, and the county already had announced it would pay the 7-cent assessment for the price support program if the quota is moved off county farmland. So, it was a grower push that shoved those bids above 80 cents — no one else was involved.

And, for the most part, so it has been in recent years. A grower expands, buys more equipment, commits himself to annual payments and a standard of living and then is compelled — of necessity or by choice — to at least maintain that standard by even more expansion. The result is competition at the market place. And when that happens, market prices go up. It's the old law of supply and demand — and that's more than you can say for the ever-increasing price support levels.

After Monday's bidding, Pitt County growers can only blame themselves for the high cost of quota. No one else was involved.

A Good Time To Help Others

Cold weather works a hardship on some very poor, elderly and disabled people. They often find that they do not have the funds for even such a basic need as heat.

Pitt Social Service Director Ed Garrison reported that the department's crisis intervention funds are virtually depleted. He said the department has been calling on churches to help in some situations.

It is a good cause for any church or civic group. Individuals, too, can help provide assistance for those who have critical needs during the cold weather. Most of us are fortunate to have incomes that allow us to have adequate heat and other comforts of life. There are those who do not, however, and through our churches and organizations and as individuals we should do what we can to help.

2 Kindred Spirits

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — If there's truth to the old adage that "politics breeds strange bedfellows," then there's also truth to just the opposite: Politics can divide kindred spirits.

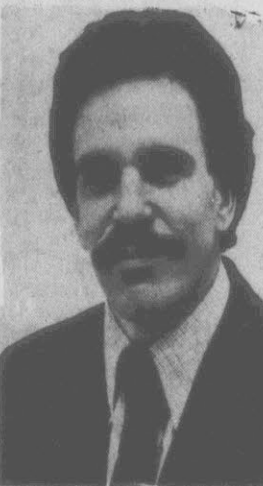

Take for example the campaigning for the 1984 Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. Sens. Bob Jordan (D-Montgomery) and Harold Hardison (D-Lenoir) are both actively seeking support in their bids to replace retiring Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green. (Former House Speaker Carl Stewart of Gaston County is also in the race.) Listed among Jordan's supporters is Sen. Kenneth Royall (D-Durham), the Senate's most powerful member and chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission.

Royall's support for Jordan is surprising because for many years Royall and Hardison have virtually ruled the Senate appropriations process by themselves — Hardison as chairman of the appropriations committee, Royall as ways and means committee chairman and unofficial czar of everything that moves in the upper chamber.

The two are close friends and close political allies. They're both tight-fisted protectors of the public dollar who do their best political work in the closed offices of the Legislative Building. They even look alike — a pair of large-framed, broad-shouldered balding men who make the building shake as they walk together from one committee meeting to another. (One female legislator recently quipped that they bear a bit of resemblance to Yuri Andropov, new leader of the Soviet Union.)

Jordan is in his fourth

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

term, Hardison his sixth and Royall his eighth. After serving as chairman of the base budget committee in the 1979 and 1981 sessions and co-chairing it this year, Jordan is no Senate lightweight. But no one, with the possible exception of President pro tem Craig Lawing, comes close to Royall and Hardison in power.

So why did Royall turn away from Hardison to support Jordan. The question intrigues Capitol Democrats who uniformly respond with the observation that the move is "interesting". Other than that, they can make little sense of it.

One leading House Democrat ventured two theories. One, Jordan appears to have a big lead in building the base of support he'll need for the race. Jordan's been putting his campaign together for more than a year. Hardison got off to a slow start, suffered deaths in his family, seriously injured his back, and is only now getting untracked. This theory has Royall lining up with the person considered most likely to win.

Second theory: Royall is tightfisted, but he's nowhere near as conservative as Hardison. He may say that the state has only one dollar to spend, but he'll direct a good big of that dollar to social programs. Maybe he's backing the moderate Jordan

Other Editors Say Chicanery Advised

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Wake Forest University Law School has published a manual for lawyers representing defendants in drunken driving cases.

While a Winston-Salem lawyer was quoted as saying the manual is a "legitimate, ethical tool that serves the best interests of justice," some non-lawyers among us must question the ethics of at least one suggestion in the book.

Lawyers called to represent clients who have been charged with drunken driving are advised not to shave or wear a coat and tie when making their first visit.

"Tell the keeper of the gate that you have a friend who is about to take the Breathalyzer and wants you to witness it. Do not admit you are an attorney unless you are directly asked", the manual advises.

Why would an attorney want to arrive poorly dressed and in need of a shave?

If you have dressed in the proper attire, unless the gatekeeper recognizes you (as a lawyer), he will probably deny you admission, which is precisely what you should be able to do with the Breathalyzer if it's offered in evidence," the manual explains.

It also suggests that a client should bring his pregnant wife to court with him, along with an "employer who thinks well of him and plays golf with six of the district judges..."

The booklet doesn't suggest it, but bringing a Sunday School teacher or minister along also can be helpful in casting the defendant in the best light.

All of the suggestions might be legitimate, as the Winston-Salem lawyer insisted. But is it ethical for an attorney to go to a jail masquerading as someone other than an attorney hoping to be denied admission so he can contend this is grounds for barring Breathalyzer results?

This is trickery. It is a deliberate attempt to thwart the introduction of legitimate evidence.

The State Bar and the public should reject and resent such chicanery.

To hold up such a tactic as recommended conduct suggests we have some lawyers who would place too high a value on enabling a drunk driver client to avoid paying for his misconduct. Such lawyers do so at the expense of the integrity of the judicial system and the image of their chosen profession.

Wake Forest University has not contributed to the cause of justice, the current effort to reduce drunk driving or to its own image by having such a document carry its implicit stamp of approval.

A World All Their Own

It seems every time there is bad economic news on evening television, the stock market goes up another 10 points.

The only thing I've been able to figure out is that either Wall Streeters don't watch television, or they're living in a world of their own.

I have a cousin who works for one of the large brokerage firms and I called him the other day to find out what was going on.

"I can't talk to you now," he said. "The new unemployment figures came out and I have to start buying stock."

"Why? Is unemployment going down?"

"No, but it only went up slightly compared to last month, so the bulls have gone into action again."

"Why are the bulls acting so bullish when all the indicators are bearish?"

"Because the bulls are betting the Fed is going to loosen up on tight money, and interest rates are going to come down."

"The feeling here in Washington is, even if the Fed lowers the interest rates, the $200 billion deficit will suck up any available investment money."

"The bulls aren't watching Washington."

"What are they watching?"

I asked.

"They're watching each other. When one of the big bulls starts buying, the others have to follow suit, or they'll be left back in the stampede. The word out on the street now is if you see a red flag, bid on it."

ART BUCHWALD

"Don't the bulls read the papers? They're closing manufacturing plants all over the country."

"That's why wall Street feels it's the time to buy. If the plants stayed open, stocks would not be a bargain."

"But if the plants are closed, earnings will be down and there will be no dividends for the stockholders."

"The bulls are not looking for dividends. They're looking to make a profit on their stocks. The big boys can get in and out in a few days and make millions on their investments."

"It sounds like a crap game to me."

"It is a crap game. But as long as there are enough guys rolling dice, nobody is going to close down the table."

"I thought Wall Street was supposed to reflect the economy of the country."

"It used to. But now it's a game all unto itself. We're on a roll now, and as long as everyone is making money, we're going to keep betting no matter what the rest of the country is doing. The only ones who have lost their shirts in the last year are the bears because they believed what they read in the newspapers."

"Does this mean the bulls on Wall Street don't care if the recession is on or over?"

"It's not their business. As long as they can buy low and sell high, they look like geniuses."

"But surely they must have some faith the economy is going to turn around or they wouldn't be investing their money in all the companies listed on the stock market."

"Of course they have faith in the economy. But they don't have time to wait for it to turn around. When you're sitting on $500 million of somebody else's money, you want results now."

"So the market is going up because the money managers have no choice but to buy stocks in the bull market which they made themselves, so everyone would look good?"

"It isn't that simple. When things were good most company stocks were overpriced. Now that things are lousy, most of them are underpriced. So everyone wants to get in on the fire sale."

"Well I guess if Wall Street isn't worried, I shouldn't be. After all, you guys seem to know what you're doing."

Pratfalls In Our English

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — A lady stamping the snow off her moon boots in the foyer of the post office the other day announced to one and all that she hated this wicked winter weather because "it gives me chill brains."

She thus got the new year of Obverse English off to a marvelously mixed-up start.

My mother, who was fluent in the language, could have told her it was even colder out than the thermometer on the supermarket indicated because of "the Chill Wills factor."

Obverse English, for those of you auditing one of our seminars for the first time, is the knack of rendering familiar expressions trippingly on the tongue so that they execute the most amazing pratfalls.

Former Gov. Bruce King of New Mexico, I am reliably informed, was a master of this difficult and imaginative speech form. King, who recently completed eight years as governor, livened up the old Capitol at Santa Fe with random bursts of rhetoric that turned the most immutable clichés to silly putty.

He once warned an Albuquerque legislator that loading down an administration bill with a lot of amendments — known as the Christmas tree effect in Washington — "could open up a whole box of Pandoras." Because after all, as he was fond of saying, "the best laid plans of men sometimes go aw."

As do their best laid sentences: witness King's masterful blend of the best of John Kennedy's inaugural address with Neil Armstrong's moon talk. "Ask not what you can do for yourself but take a giant step for New Mexico."

The governor, who was wont to affect "western grab" to show his pioneer origins, also liked to mimic the tumbling tumbleweed in his platform oratory. This endeared him to the common folk who could relate to a fellow saying "statues" when he meant statutes and "physical" for "fiscal." I sat next to King during his governorship one night at a banquet head table and found him a witty, delightful conversationalist, temporarily at rest from any of those fanciful flights into the obverse, which I suspect he puts on like his "western grab" to project a homey country boy image.

Earl Long, who was governor of Louisiana in my formative years as a reporter, was a master of the down home homily, delivered in the most rudimentary grammar, to point up the urbane sophistication of his opponent, invariably a big city lawyer. Old Earl never emphasized an oratorical point without a double snap of his galluses and always deliberately mispronounced his opponent's name: thus new Orleans Mayor de-Lesseps Morrison became "DeeLaSoups."

Obverse English has long been the lingua franca of the fight crowd. A leading lightweight a few evenings ago predicted in a preflight interview on TV that his game plan for dealing with a taller, rangier opponent was devastatingly simple. "I'm gonna whip his butt," he boasted, which did seem to be a bit south of the target area specified in the Marquis of Queensberry rules.

There is an Alice in Wonderland quality about the language spoken in the vicinity of Madison Square Garden, where words mean exactly what the speaker intends them to mean regardless of any buttinskis like Noah Webster or Samuel Johnson.

A story is told about fight manager Vic Marsillo, a fixture in Jersey Joe Walcott's corner who later conducted a radio talk show on sports from a table in Jack Dempsey's restaurant on Broadway, which of course is deep in Damon Runyon country. When fight announcer Harry Markson was invited to be a guest on the show on the eve of a championship bout in the Garden, he asked Marsillo what they should talk about.

"Let's just reminisce about tomorrow night's fight at the Garden," Vic suggested. Given the aura of predestination that invests some of the entertainments arranged by the fight mob.

Strength For Today

MODERN IDOLATRY

Idolatry continues in every age to be the greatest evil in the realm of the spirit. There is almost as much idolatry in civilized countries today as there is among primitive tribes in the jungle — only it is of a different form. Millions of people who would regard with derision a naked savage prostrating himself before an idol, turn around and prostrate themselves before idols that are probably more debasing than anything the savage and his idol-maker ever conceived.

For some people pride is an idol. They attach so much importance to family and social prominence that they would not, without protest, allow a son or daughter to marry outside a certain social class. For other people money or power may be the idol to which they continually make obeisance. In the same fashion still other people may make an idol of vengeance.

Unfortunately we will never become so civilized that we will completely abolish idolatry. — Elisha Douglass

Explaining, he said Social Security's future existence "depends precisely upon whether or not today's youth will support it, and this depends in turn upon whether it suits their needs and whether they believe it is fair."

There is no "correct" solution, he conceded this week. But he suggested the solution offered by the commission is really a "three-way agreement among the commission, the President and Tip O'Neill."

Such a deal would appear to omit or leave disgruntled some of the parties and individuals involved, especially those who must pay the bills, including the long-term bills that Robertson feels the commission ignored.

The Problems Yet Untouched

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The Social Security reform commission may have lessened political friction between President Reagan and House Speaker O'Neill, but it seems to have left intact some problems it set out to resolve.

Among issues remaining are the funding of Medicare, the reliance on general revenue funds that already are inadequate, the age at which benefits are to be available, and the lopsided payments-benefits ratio 30 to 50 years ahead.

So Social Security remains a controversial issue and, conceivably, it has become even more controversial.

Three dissenting members of the commission are distressed about their colleagues dealing in scratches rather than surgery. And a former Social Security chief actuary said the thorny issues were ignored.

The usual antagonisms also remain, of course, but nobody really expected them to go away, not when you have one group paying, another receiving. The American Association of Retired Persons, beneficiaries, are as displeased as the The Federation of Independent Business, made up of payers.

A. Haeworth Robertson, Social Security's chief actuary from 1975 to 1978, is concerned with more fundamental issues.

In November, when the commission held hearings, he commented that "the commission still has made no significant recommendations, and it is becoming increasingly doubtful that it will ever do so."

Asked this week, after contents of the commission's final report were publicly discussed, Robertson said his comments still held. Then, seemingly reluctantly, he relented. "I suppose it's as good as anything," he said. "You can't go around being critical of everything people do."

The commission did address the problems of the next seven years reasonably well, he said, referring to a $169 billion rescue plan, based on tax increases, slower growth of benefits and cash from general revenues.

What he meant, he said, was that the commission addressed the problems of the next seven years reasonably well. But, he asked, what did they do about Medicare, whose trust fund is likely to be depleted by 1990?

"Completely ignore it," in spite, he said, of Medicare being part of Social Security.

As matters stand, he contends, the combined cost for Old Age and Survivors Disability Insurance and Medicare health insurance programs over the next 75 years clearly shows that tax income must be increased nearly 50 percent.

Robertson is disturbed also by the commissions failure to deal with what he calls the design problem, and restated the criticism he made in November in an article for the William M. Mercer Co., a large employee benefits and compensation consultant which he now serves as vice president.

Israeli Soldiers Maneuver To Disengage Warring Militia

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops moved into hilltop villages overlooking Beirut today to disengage warring Christian and Druse militiamen, following all-night artillery and rocket duels that left four people dead and seven wounded, police reported.

The action came a few hours before U.S. troubleshooter Philip C. Habib was due to arrive at Beirut airport about 2½ miles west of the battle zone, where U.S. Marines have been stationed since late last year.

Lebanese news media said Habib was bringing a compromise calling for a partial pullback of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces next month and establishment of American-manned electronic spy stations in central Lebanon.

In Israel, meanwhile, a storm of public criticism followed the announcement that PLO chief Yasser Arafat and three prominent Israeli leftists had held unprecedented political talks.

Police said Israeli armored units entered the embattled villages of Bsaba, Maroufieh and Dhour el-Shweifat at mid-morning and ordered rival militiamen to stop shooting and evacuate all combat positions.

Christian-Druse clashes have erupted sporadically for almost a week in the three villages, which overlook the airport positions of U.S. Marines serving with French and Italian paratroopers in Lebanon's multinational peacekeeping force.

The new fatalities brought to about 100 the total number of people killed in the nine-week-old war between Christian and Druse militias in central Lebanon, by official police count.

Israeli and Lebanese negotiators clashed at the bargaining table Thursday over Israel's demand for early-warning outposts in Lebanon, which would be used to monitor Syrian troop movements once Israeli troops withdraw, officials attending the talks said.

A Lebanese government

spokesman quoted by Lebanon's state-run National News Agency said Lebanon rejected the establishment of early warning stations for Israel, but is willing to set up such stations on its own and man them with Lebanese experts.

Israeli news reports said Habib was working on a compromise proposal for listening posts manned by Americans, but conference sources said the U.S. delegation did not put the idea on the table at the formal talks, held Thursday in the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmona.

Lebanon's state television said Habib, under orders from President Reagan to speed up the negotiations, also proposed a partial pullback by Israeli and Syrian forces in Lebanon's central mountains by mid-February.

State-run and privately owned radio stations in Lebanon said the Habib compromise also calls for the Lebanese army, backed by units from the U.S., French and Italian peacekeeping force, to take over control of several mountain areas promptly. They also would take control of the international highway between Beirut and Damascus, the radio reports said.

Despite the wrangle over the spy posts, a joint statement by negotiators at the U.S.-mediated talks said "good progress was made" in the eighth formal bargaining session.

That "progress" entailed creation of four committees designed to speed up the negotiations. The working groups may meet as often as four times a week, while the full delegations continue their twice-weekly sessions.

The joint communique said the committees were created "to enter into detailed examination" of four of five topics on the agenda: withdrawal, security arrangements, future Israeli-Lebanese relations and possible guarantees of the final agreement.

A fifth committee was named previously to formulate a declaration ending the 34-year-old formal state of war between Lebanon and Israel.

Meanwhile, the PLO and the Israeli leftist Sheli Party issued an historic joint announcement of political talks this week between Arafat and three Israeli doves. Neither side said exactly when or where the meeting took place.

for philosophical reasons.

Royall said he did it because Jordan is a good friend, a former roommate and he's the man who asked for support first. Royall said he committed to Jordan then learned that Hardison was running. If he had it to do over, he says, he'd probably stay out of the race.

Hardison said, "I was surprised and a lot of our mutual friends were surprised ... and they don't understand it... If we don't irritate him or agitate him, he probably will stay neutral."

Jordan said Royall has played no part in his official campaign planning to date. But he's been a big help. "He's helping simply by letting it be known that he's supporting me."

That's all the help one needs from the Senate's most powerful member.

remiscing in advance was not always an impossible assignment.

As President Eisenhower once put the elusive factor of time in context: "The future lies ahead." Unless, of course, the spokesman is Sir Boyle Roche, the famous Irish orator who worried out loud about "what our future forefathers will think."

Speaking of the Irish, and the delightfully original things they do with the Queen's English, I am reminded of the Cork publican who told me his parish priest had just delivered "one of those hailstone and brim fire sermons."

Then there was the peevish lament of a man at the back end of a long bus queue on O'Connell Street in Dublin one rainy rush hour evening: "If we all get on the next bus, half of us will be left behind."

A woman on the train to Limerick told me she didn't like Irish comedian David Allen because "he used double entendres in more ways than one, if you know what I mean."

I thought I did, at least until she admitted that "despite his X-rayed material he can be funnier than sliced bread." Wry, of course.

Tobacco Discussion Scheduled

Rep. Charlie Rose of Fayetteville, head of a House subcommittee on tobacco legislation, will attend a meeting at the American Legion Building in Greenville Monday at 7 p.m. to discuss the flue-cured tobacco program.

Representatives for Reps. Walter B. Jones and Charlie Whitley will also be at the meeting. U.S. Sens. John East and Jesse Helms will also send representatives.

Arranged by the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, the program has been designed so anyone who wishes to discuss tobacco problems may do so.

Tax Listings Due In January

Pitt County Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee said today that property owners should be reminded that the tax listing period is nearing an end.

Under North Carolina law, all property must be listed for tax purposes during the month of January.

Hardee said persons failing to list their property by Jan. 31 are subject to a mandatory 10 percent penalty for late listing.

He estimated that only about half of the 54,000 listings expected this year have been made. "I would encourage property owners to go ahead and list. They will face long lines again if they wait until the last few days," Hardee said.

The county's 15 listing places — one in each township — have been open until noon each Saturday this month for the convenience of people who work during the week, Hardee said, "but they have not had much business." He said the listing places will also be open a half day Saturday and on Jan. 29.

Professors Named To Panels

Two members of the department of family medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine have been named to committees on national and state family physician organizations.

Dr. James G. Jones, chairman of the department, was named to the Residency Review Committee for Family Practice. The committee reviews and grants approval for residency training programs in the United States.

Dr. Harold C. Kallman, professor of family medicine and chief of geriatric training, was named to the Committee on Aging and the Committee on Education for the N.C. Academy of Family Physicians.

Kallman and Jones have served on the committees at a national level.

Financial Aid Assistance Day

Ask Rate Hike On Natural Gas

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Public Service Co. of North Carolina Inc. has asked the state Utilities Commission for a 3 percent increase in natural gas rates.

Company officials said in a news release Wednesday that the increase would generate $7.1 million in additional revenues. It would add $2.91 per month to the average residential bill.

The commission is not expected to rule on the request before August 1983. In May, the commission allowed an increase of just below 5 percent.

"We regret the necessity for this filing, but almost all of our costs of doing business are increasing," said company president Charles E. Zeigler.

Union Fighting Postal Change

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The postal workers union in Winston-Salem is fighting a plan to transfer up to 110 mail sorters to Greensboro and close sorting operations in Winston-Salem.

The U.S. Postal Service regional office in Memphis, Tenn., said it would switch the sorting operation to Greensboro July 1 to help speed processing through the use of nine-digit zip codes.

Oscar Foy, general president of the Winston-Salem local of the American Postal Workers Union, said the move will not save time or money.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

ON HOLY GROUND

MANY OF THE IMPORTANT MEN IN THE BIBLE WERE VISITED BY THE SPIRIT OF GOD. MOSES, JOSHUA, ELISHA, ETC. WHEN THE PRESENCE OF GOD WAS FELT THE PARTICIPANTS WERE WARNED THAT THEY WERE TREADING ON HOLY GROUND AND WERE CAUTIONED TO TAKE OFF THEIR SHOES AS AN ACT OF REVERENCE, HUMILITY, AND OBEDIENCE. MOSES, WHEN HE VISITED THE BURNING BUSH, WAS TOLD BY THE VOICE OF GOD TO TAKE OFF HIS SANDALS. (EXODUS 3:5) JOSHUA, OUTSIDE OF JERICHO, WAS INSTRUCTED ALSO TO LAY ASIDE HIS WAR BOOTS AS HE LISTENED TO THE VOICE OF THE ANGEL. (JOSHUA 5:15) THE ESSENCE OF THIS PHYSICAL ACT CAN BE OBSERVED TODAY BY THE PETITIONER IN PRAYER TO GOD.

HADDOCK CHAPEL
Haddock Chapel Church will have Sunday school at 9:45 a.m., followed by Sunday morning worship with the Rev. Billy Ray Anderson and the young adult choir at 11 a.m.

It's shorter, simpler and stresses policy flexibility for local bishops, bigger roles for lay people and other modern reforms, say those familiar with the latest draft.
Work on it has gone on, in a broad process of sifting and cross-consultation, for about 20 years.

Pope John Paul II, who has been overseeing final refinements since last fall, has said he will issue the finished product next Tuesday.

U.S. church experts on canon law have termed it generally acceptable, and a vast improvement over the old code, although some still see shortcomings.

"A workable tool of renewal," Msgr. John A. Alexander of Rockville Centre, N.Y., says of the new code, a "valuable instrument of ecclesial reform."

In general, the code is said to incorporate into church law the reforms of the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65 and practices that have evolved in its aftermath.

"It's a solid, well-written and well-considered revision," says the Rev. Bertram Griffin, a Portland, Ore., pastor and canon law specialist.

"If nothing else, this code should shock those people who thought Vatican II would go away into realizing that what the bishops decided was real."

Developing the new code has been a drawn-out, give-and-take international procedure of proposed versions, responding criticisms, reworking, winnowing and tackling the job again.

The recurring "strong criticisms by clergy and laity shaped the new code," writes Msgr. Frederick R. McManus of the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., a consultant to the code commission.

The first draft was com-

Children from the Falcon Orphans' Home will conduct the 11 a.m. services Sunday at Hopewell Pentecostal Holiness Church. The church is near Black Jack.

BRIGHT STAR

Bright Star Chapter 313 will meet Saturday at 2 p.m. All members are urged to be present, says Worthy Matron Gertrude McCoy Worth.

pleted long ago, in 1966, seven years after the revision was ordered by the late Pope John XXIII in 1959 and a year after the 1965 conclusion of the reforming council he summoned.

But that early draft has been replaced in the long line of reworkings since then under a succession of three other popes — the late Paul VI, the short-lived John Paul I and the present John Paul II.

Over the last 17 years, the effort has involved 2,160 meetings at the Vatican totalling 6,375 hours, with 93 cardinals, 62 bishops, 109 priests and 14 lay people participating at various intervals.

That doesn't count the innumerable discussions by bishops, clergy and canon lawyers in various countries and the flow of suggestions and criticisms.

Out of that process has come the new trimmed-down, updated code. It has only 1,776 canons, or laws, Vatican officials say, in contrast to 2,414 in the old code of 1917.

For the first time, the code spells out a kind of bill of rights both for clergy and laity, including rights of free assembly, inquiry and speech in the church community, rights of due process and to choice of spiritual life style.

Rights are balanced out by a statement of duties, obligations to spread God's plan of salvation, to educate children in accordance with church teachings and support charitable works of the church.

About 100 canons of the old code listing penalties for certain actions are reported to have been cut to 35 canons and the number of reasons for automatic excommunication reduced from 15 to six.

The code, in its long-circulated form, authorized preaching by lay persons with approval of local bishops — something already common in many dioceses. Advisory councils including lay people are encouraged in dioceses and parishes, but aren't mandatory.

Some of the sharper criticism has been directed at canon 767, requiring the teachers of Catholic theology have approval of local bishops, which is seen by many Catholic educators as a crippling academic freedom. But whether that provision was retained, following the protests, was uncertain.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today as interest rates rose in the credit markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.97 to 1,064.85 in the first half hour.

Declines slightly outnumbered advances in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that the consumer price index fell 0.3 percent in December, finishing the year with its smallest rise in a decade.

But that favorable inflation news apparently was overshadowed by concern about upward pressure on interest rates. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, dropped as much as $10 for every $1,000 in face value in early trading today.

One reason for the bond market's weakness has been disappointment that the federal reserve hasn't lowered its discount rate, which has stood at 8 percent for more than a month.

In a speech Thursday night, Chairman Paul Volcker of the Fed said large federal budget deficits, by keeping interest rates high, could sidetrack any recovery from the recession.

Today's early prices included American Telephone & Telegraph, down 1/4 at 67 3/4; Warner Communications, down 1/4 at 29 1/4, and Prime Computer, down 1/4 at 40 1/2.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 2.76 to 1,070.82.

Advances nosed out declines by a small margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 82.79 million shares, against 80.90 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .52 to 84.51.

Pirates Looking For Second Over Camels

East Carolina University's men return to action Saturday night, hosting Campbell University.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The game is the second meeting of the two teams this year. Two weeks ago, the two met in Fayetteville, with East Carolina gaining a 67-54 victory — and the game was not really that close. The Pirates, who "put on a clinic in the first half" in the words of Coach Charlie Harrison, eased out to as much as a 20 point lead before clearing the bench.

In that game, the Pirates shot nearly 75 percent from the floor, establishing a new school record.

However, in the three games that followed, the Bucs were unable to come close to that percentage, hitting closer to 40 percent as they lost three straight contests, to William & Mary and Richmond in ECAC-South contests, and to Baptist College in a non-conference meeting.

In the first of those three losses, the Pirates lost number two rebounder and number three scorer Charles Green to a dislocated shoulder. Green was expected to miss at least three weeks of playing time, and has already missed over a week of play.

The Pirates did snap back on Wednesday night, taking a 58-48 home court victory over the University of South Carolina, as Johnny Edwards pushed through 25 points. They also got 11 points each from Tony Robinson and Bruce Peartree.

The key to the victory was the stiff Pirate defense, which held South Carolina in check most of the way. Against Campbell, too, the Pirates played outstanding defense, but combined that with hot shooting in both halves, although their ball handling and floor play turned sloppy in the second half when the outcome had become obvious.

Edwards led the scoring in the first Campbell game with 17, while Barry Wright added 15 and John Williams had a career high of 10.

Campbell comes into the game with a 5-9 record, having lost four of their last five outings. Their last outing was Monday when they lost, 80-67, to UNC-Charlotte in Fayetteville.

The Camels are led by Harvey Smith, 6-1 junior guard, hitting 10.4 points a game. Smith scored 19 points in the first meeting of the two teams. Larry Cannady, a 6-4, junior forward with a 12.3 scoring average and 8.6 rebound average, is the overall leader, but he got only six point and four rebounds when he last met the Pirates.

Ron Williams, a 6-4 senior forward, has a 9.9 average.

East Carolina will return to the road on Monday, traveling to meet the UNC-Wilmington Seahawks. That game, originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m., is now the second game of a doubleheader, the first starting at 7 p.m. between New Hanover and Hoggard High Schools of Wilmington. The collegiate game is expected to start around 8:45 p.m.

Cowboys, Redskins Collide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Their rivalry is one of the fiercest in the National Football League, one that even led to a television commercial by Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who warns ominously that, "You never know when you're gonna be surrounded by Redskins."

That will be the Cowboys' condition Saturday when Dallas and Washington collide for the National Football Conference championship.

"We're the teams with the two best records, playing for the championship," said Joe Gibbs, coach of the Redskins. "That's the way it should be."

Washington's only loss this season came seven weeks ago when Landry's visiting Cowboys ambushed them 24-10. "They made us look worse than we were," said Gibbs. "They beat us."

And Dallas did a thorough job of it, sacking Washington quarterback Joe Theismann seven times and intercepting three of his passes. Gibbs remembers.

"They blitzed two or three times with things we had not seen before, and we missed picking them up," he said. "Our quarterback held the ball too long a couple of times. Our line was beat on stunts a couple of times. We missed big plays downfield a couple of times."

Theismann remembers, too.

"Our inability to execute and their ability to execute, that was the difference. Put it this way. Our execution wasn't what it could be, should be, shall be."

Theismann says the Redskin team Dallas will face Saturday has matured a great deal since their paths crossed back in December.

"I feel we are a better team now," he said. "The last game, it was as if we were saying 'Let's use Dallas as a barometer to see how good we are.' Now we feel we're good enough to win against anyone, anytime."

Much of that feeling, of course, is due to the development of Theismann, who finished the season as the NFC's top-ranked passer, throwing for 2,033 yards and 13 touchdowns.

"Joe started playing well five or six weeks after I got here," said Gibbs, whose first Washington team lost its opening five games last season but has won 18 of 22 since then.

"Until then, there was a period of adjustment. A lot of the people around him were injured and there was some inconsistency and a period of transition."

But once Theismann settled into Gibbs' system, the Redskins have maintained the hottest pace of any team in the NFL.

"This offense is designed to use the abilities of 15 or 16 different people with varied receivers. Joe devised it to suit the people in it. To be able to accomplish what we have accomplished in just his second year is a credit to the intelligence of the people involved."

Landry the Cowboys ride into Washington today. Gibbs and Redskins hope to surround them again a day later, just like in the commercial.

Dolphins Seek AFC Title In Third Meeting With New York Jets

MIAMI (AP) — Good things come in threes. So do bad things. It all depends on which end of the score you're on.

Coach Don Shula and the Miami Dolphins have a chance to carve out a small niche in the National Football League record book Sunday against the New York Jets in the American Conference championship game, the final stepping stone to the Super Bowl.

Miami already has beaten New York twice, 45-28 and 20-19 during the regular season. Only a half dozen times in NFL history, and not since the 1970 merger with the American Football League created the existing alignment, has one team beaten another three times in the same season.

That prospect — along with the Dolphins' concern over the lower back injury bothering Miami place-kicker Uwe von Schamann — is a principal subject of discussion as the game approaches.

"If we lose to them three times, we don't deserve to be in the Super Bowl," said Jet quarterback Richard Todd. Other New York players spoke of "revenge" for the losses, the first of which — on opening day in 1962 — ended the Jets' eight-game unbeaten streak against Miami.

But Shula doesn't see it quite that way. "I don't look at it as having to beat the Jets three times in a season," he said. "I look at it as beating them for the first time in 1983."

Shula would, of course, love nothing more than to be on the winning side of three in a row this time. In 1965, when he was Baltimore's head coach, the Colts lost three in a row to Green Bay.

Since the merger, two teams have met three times in one season on nine occasions. In each instance, the teams split the regular-season games. In 1971 the Dolphins beat Baltimore, then lost to the Colts but won the third meeting 21-0 in the AFC title game. Last season Buffalo beat New York, the Jets rebounded in the second game, then the Bills outlasted the Jets 31-27 in a wild-card playoff.

The series between Miami and New York is virtually even, the Jets having won 17 games, lost 16 and tied one. It has been a history of streaks. New York won the first eight meetings and Miami won 14 of the next 16 before the Jets' most recent domination.

Sunday's game is the first playoff meeting between the teams.

The Jets, who traveled to Los Angeles last weekend and knocked off the Raiders, the AFC's winningest club, have spent this week back in New York, working out in sub-freezing temperatures. It hasn't been received all that well.

"The more we practice out in the cold," said Tom Newton, a running back, "the madder we get just thinking about Miami down there in all that sunshine."

On Thursday, though, his weather report was a bit off. It poured most of the day in Miami, the Dolphins slogging through their workout.

Von Schamann, whose 47-yard field goal with three seconds remaining beat the Jets in the teams' second meeting of 1982, suffered a hairline fracture of the transverse process — a part of the lower vertebrae — while recovering one of San Diego's two kickoff fumbles during Miami's 34-13 playoff romp last Sunday. He kicked two extra points and two field goals against the Chargers after being injured.

"If I was able to kick them then, I can't see why I shouldn't be able to kick after a week of rest and treatment," he said. "It will hurt, but I'll have to bite the bullet. The AFC championship game is the biggest game of my career. I will do anything to be ready for this game."

"I've been taking a lot of Vitamin C, which is supposed to help the healing process," von Schamann added. "I've also applied heat and ice and have been taking whirlpool treatment."

While von Schamann insists he will play against the Jets, punter Tom Orosz has been practicing place-kicks, with limited success.

Hot Stadler Running Away With Hope Event

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Craig Stadler, already setting a blistering pace in the $375,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic, says he'll need more of the same to win the tournament.

"I've got to keep going. I can't relax. I can't look back to see who's there. I've got to shoot 8-10 under, at the very least, the next three days," Stadler said after he'd completed two rounds of this marathon event with a spectacular 129 total, 15 strokes under par.

"He may be hard to catch," admitted Gil Morgan, seeking a rare, third consecutive victory. The unique format, however, could work to his advantage, Morgan said.

"You never know," said Morgan, who trails by seven strokes in the five-day, 90-hole event. "With a tournament this length, you may have a chance to make up a little slack."

And Stadler, who followed an opening 63 with a 6-under-par 66 at Tamarisk in Thursday's second round, agreed.

"It's much too early, in this tournament, to tell. The courses are in such good condition, the weather is so good, there are a lot of birdies to be made out there. I've got to keep going," said Stadler, who has a 6-shot lead over PGA winner Ray Floyd, Bob Murphy and Hal Sutton, tied at 135.

Sutton had a second round 67 at Indian Wells. Murphy and Floyd each shot 67 at Tamarisk.

Morgan, with a 65 at La Quinta, was tied at 136 with Dan Pohl, Mark Lye, Chip Beck, John Cook, Rex Caldwell, Mike Sullivan and Payne Stewart.

Pohl had a 68 and Beck 66 at La Quinta. Cook shot 67, Lye 69 and Stewart 70 at Tamarisk. Caldwell had 69 and Sullivan 70 at Indian Wells.

Jack Nicklaus, with former President Gerald Ford and House Speaker Tip O'Neill in his amateur team, made eagle-3 on his first hole at Tamarisk and shot 68. He had a 140 total for his first two rounds of the year. Arnold Palmer, also playing at Tamarisk, slipped to a 74 and was at 145.

Stadler, who took the Masters and three other American titles and topped the season's money-winners with $446,462 last year, hasn't made a bogey yet and his total is only three strokes off the all-time Tour record for the first 36 holes of a tournament. He played the front nine in 31 Thursday.

Stadler holed a bunker shot for a birdie on the third hole, scored from 30 feet on the next one, then converted on wedge shots from the 10-12 foot range on the sixth and seventh. He made it from 20 feet on the eighth, then played the next nine holes in par before closing with a 12-foot birdie putt.

Ayden-Grifton Tops Farmville, Stands Alone Atop ECC Standings

By ALAN WOOTEN
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central renewed a 40-year-old rivalry Thursday night and when it was over, the Chargers had escaped with a 50-44 victory.

Earlier, the Farmville Central girls made it two in a row, whipping Ayden-Grifton, 54-39.

"Our guys were really up for the challenge," A-G coach Bob Murphrey said afterwards. "They put forth a great effort on defense. We were happy to win here because Farmville is a very good ball club."

The win left Ayden-Grifton at 5-0 in the conference, a game-and-a-half ahead of Farmville Central. Ayden-Grifton, which has now won nine straight, is 10-4 overall.

Vikes Are Still Fourth

KANNAPOLIS — The D.H. Conley wrestling team held on to its No. 4 ranking in the state in the latest poll by Mat News.

The top four squads remained the same in the poll. Cary is No. 1 followed by Brevard and Thomasville. Sanderson of Raleigh moved from sixth to fifth followed by South Rowan at No. 6, Southern Guilford, Northern Durham, Tuscola and Statesville.

The second twenty included: West Carteret at No. 11, followed by Cape Fear, Hickory, Morganton Freedom, Westover, Wilson Beddingfield, Durham Jordan, Pine Forest and Havelock.

Three teams were tied for 20th: Davie County, Plymouth and Trinity. The Coastal Conference had three teams in the top 20: Conley, West Carteret, which dropped from seventh to 11th, and Havelock, which moved down from 16th to 19th.

Conley plays host to Havelock Wednesday night and entertains West Carteret Thursday.

D.H. Conley takes part in a tri-meet Saturday at Farmville Central.

The Jaguars, who saw their five-game winning streak ended, dropped to 3-1 and 9-5.

The Jaguars got the early advantage, taking an 11-9 first quarter lead. The Chargers used a rally in the second quarter, 17-10, to go up by 26-21 at the half. The Jaguars closed to within 34-30 after three periods, but the Chargers held on for the win with solid free throw shooting.

"We got outplayed," Farmville coach Mike Terrell said. "We did not execute on offense or defense. We had too many opportunities to win. We were not mentally ready to play."

The game was nearly five minutes old before the Chargers could find the range for their first field goal. Calvin Peterson hit it from the left side of the free throw lane with 3:02 left.

The Jaguars were not fairing much better. They took over two minutes to get their first points and were unable to take advantage of Ayden-Grifton's poor shooting. Still, they led 11-9 after eight minutes.

The Jaguars maintained their advantage early in the second quarter, leading 13-11 on a 15-footer by Terrence Pettway. The Chargers then scored five straight to take their first lead at 16-13 with 4:46 left.

The teams alternated baskets before the Chargers made another run. An 8-2 sprunt pushed the lead up to 26-19 with :31 left. The Jaguars did get a final basket from Pettway to cut the lead to 26-21 at intermission.

Neither team could gain much headway in the third quarter. The Chargers never led by more than four and the Jaguars could never get closer than two as the Chargers took a 34-30 lead into the final period.

A slam dunk by Thomas Anderson with 7:10 sent the Chargers to their biggest lead of the night, 38-30. The hosts failed to give up. Pettway hit a layup on an assist from Bobby Caraway to get the Jaguars back to within 40-38 with 3:50 remaining.

Tyrone Gay hit a long jumper with 3:23 left for Ayden-Grifton. Andrew Edwards answered with a 15-footer to make it 42-40. Gerald Newton then made one of two free throws to give A-G a 43-40 lead with 2:33 left.

Then neither team could find the mark. Turnovers and a few missed shots plagued both teams, as well as fouls. Anderson picked up his fifth foul with 1:51 to go and Edwards got his fifth with 1:26 left.

"We came down when it was 43-40 and made three mistakes in a row. We were just not mentally ready," Terrell repeated.

Unable to hit field goals, the Jaguars found themselves having to foul in the last minute. The Chargers were near perfect, hitting on seven of eight. Senior Jeff Dixon hit four, including the clincher with :18 left, giving A-G a 48-42 lead. Both teams got two more points to make the final, 50-44.

Anderson led the Chargers with 18 points. Freshman Marvin Smith added 11. The Jaguars were led by Pettway's 18. Tony Hargrove added 10.

"It wasn't a pretty win. But with the emotional aspect of the game, that can be expected," Murphrey said. "I'm sure we'll have to fight for our lives when we play at Ayden-Grifton. We'll have to fight for our lives every time we play a good team like this."

Terrell praised the

Foster Out Two Weeks

COLUMBIA, S.C. — East Carolina University's Lady Pirates will be without the services of point guard Loraine Foster for at least two weeks after suffering a knee injury against UNC Charlotte on Wednesday night.

The Lady Pirates, in Columbia, for the South Carolina Invitational Tournament, face the University of Georgia, ranked ninth in the country, tonight at 6 p.m. in the first round. South Carolina and Mercer play in the other game.

Foster, going downcourt on a fast break against Charlotte, was undercut, crashed into the Charlotte cheerleaders, and slipped on a pompon early in the Wednesday night contest. Although she did play for a few minutes more in the game, she was unable to continue.

A doctor later diagnosed the injury as a sprained ligament in the knee, and said she would be sidelined for at least two weeks.

Foster, in addition to being the floor leader, was the second leading scorer on the team for the Pirates.

Mercury Now Runs From Daylight

MIAMI (AP) — His new number is 82-81067 and Mercury Morris now runs away from daylight.

"The lights have been on since I got here," says Morris, an inmate at the Dade County Jail. "They're never off. Never. When you're on drugs, you run from the light. You spend your time taping newspapers and tinfoil to your windows."

"When I get on another floor, when I get the chance to go into a private bathroom, I turn off the lights. I say to myself, 'ah, darkness.' And I'll just sit there."

The former Miami Dolphins' running back, convicted last fall of trying to sell cocaine and related charges, was sentenced Thursday to 20 years in prison, 15 before he's eligible for parole.

During a two-hour interview this week with The San Diego Tribune, Morris, 36, discussed how his inability to shake "the demons" of cocaine led to his fall from grace.

"You're up every night, smoking your brains out until six in the morning," Morris told sportswriter Bud Poliquin. "Once you get into that, the word 'enough' is taken out of your vocabulary. You can't get enough. It's impossible. I wanted to get away from it, but the demons wouldn't let me."

The introduction to cocaine came in 1973, with social use of the drug, he said.

Morris, a member of the Dolphins' 1972, 1973, and 1974 Super Bowl teams, was traded to the San Diego Chargers in 1975 after demanding a trade. After one season in San Diego, he retired.

By 1977, he began free-basing — a process of reducing cocaine to its strongest form and inhaling it through a pipe. A year earlier he walked away from the National Football League and a two-year contract with the Chargers worth $270,000.

"I was advised not to play anymore by three or four doctors. I was told that I could take a shot on becoming like Darryle Stingley if I played," he said, referring to the New England Patriots' wide receiver who is paralyzed from a football collision.

"Who the hell wants to roll the dice against those kind of odds?" said Morris.

But, on August 18, 1982, Morris took the gamble of his life. He lost.

His third marriage in shambles, his mother dying of cancer, five months behind in mortgage payments and in debt to drug dealers, Morris acted as the middleman in a drug deal.

"Split-second insanity," said Morris, who was a T-shirt salesman at the time of his arrest. "Split second made me do it. It's like you're driving your car and you're coming to an intersection and the light is yellow. Do you stop? Do you drive through? Do you gamble? Will it stay yellow? Will it turn red? I decided to drive through, and the light turned red on me," he said.

Morris said he was set up by man he owed $160 to.

"I didn't have a choice. I didn't do it for the money. I did it because I needed the money. I needed it to live."

According to Morris, he had a standing offer from Florida authorities that he could get off with a light sentence if he provided information on other NFL players who were involved with drugs.

"The prosecution said I could walk out at any time if I talked, but I won't."

Meantime, football still lives in his dreams.

"I was thinking that if I could get out of here I could play in the USFL (the new United States Football League). That is, if I could get somebody else's neck, a new wrist and two new knees."

Bradley, Harris Lead North Pitt By Conley

HOLLYWOOD — Dennis Bradley and Charles Harris combined for 37 points and North Pitt got some much-needed help off the bench as the Panthers held on to down D.H. Conley, 54-53, last night in a nonconference basketball game.

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley downed North Pitt, 47-36.

North Pitt, which earlier downed Conley, 53-39, on the Panther court, eased out into an 18-17 lead in the first quarter of the contest. The Panthers were able to hold onto the lead, 30-27, with a 12-10 margin in the second quarter.

Conley came back and was able to move ahead briefly in the third quarter, but North Pitt came back to outthit the Panthers, 12-11, and hold a 42-38 edge going into the final quarter.

In that fateful period, the Panthers were able to build up as much as a five point lead, but then both Greg Hines and Harris went out with ankle injuries, and that helped Conley rally to within one point.

The Vikes got the ball back with 15 seconds left, trailing 54-53, but North Pitt's defenses foiled them when they tried to get the ball inside to star Keith Gatlin, and the ball had to be brought back outside where a desperation shot was off target.

Bradley finished the game with 19 points while Harris had 18 and Keith Clark added 10. Conley was led by Gatlin with 17 points, while Alvin Clemons had 12 and Reggie Smith had 10.

"We played a real good team game," North Pitt Coach Cobby Deans said. "Quinton Yarrell and Ronnie Howard came in off the bench to provide us with some good play to go with the all-around play of Bradley, Harris and Clark."

Deans was worried, however, that both Hines and Harris could be out for tonight's game at South West Edgecombe due to their injuries.

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley raced to a 15-7 lead in the first period only to have North Pitt rally to cut the lead to 25-22 at the break. The Pant-HERS, now 6-9, cut the lead to 33-32 going into the final period, but the Valkyries, now 13-1, outscored North Pitt, 14-4, to seal the win.

Mechio Kornegay led DHC with 14 points and Karen Barrett added 10. North Pitt was led by Sherri Brady with 12 points and Linda Harrell with 11.

North Pitt played without starting sophomore center Sudie Sharpe, who was out sick, according to North Pitt officials.

North Pitt entertains South West Edgecombe tonight while D.H. Conley travels to Ayden-Grifton.

Kuchen In Error; UCLA In Romp

By The Associated Press
California Coach Dick Kuchen obviously was mistaken.

"We felt we could lighten up a little on Jackson in the beginning," he said.

Responding to the challenge, Ralph Jackson scored 15 of his career-high 17 points in the first half and helped top-ranked UCLA rally to beat Pacific 10 Conference opponent California, 68-63.

"Obviously, we made some adjustments at halftime," the Cal coach said.

UCLA trailed by six points twice in the first half but bounced back for a 38-35 halftime lead. California pulled within one, 56-55, with 6:45 remaining, but UCLA scored 10 of the next 12 points — assisted on two buckets by Jackson — to pull away.

"Thank goodness for Ralph Jackson," UCLA Coach Larry Farmer said.

Forward Kenny Fields scored a team-high 19 points for the Bruins, 12-1 and 5-0 in the Pac 10. Center Michael Pitts scored a game-high 22 points for Cal, which lose to UCLA for the 47th consecutive time dating back 22 years.

Three other ranked teams — all in the Big Ten — saw action Thursday night. Second-ranked Indiana defeated Michigan State 89-85, and No. 10 Iowa clobbered 18th-ranked Minnesota 68-52.

Top Ten

Ted Kitchel scored a season-high 32 points to boost Indiana over Michigan State, but Coach Bobby Knight was not satisfied.

"We allowed them to make a seven-point run at us," Knight said. "This disap-

Chargers' efforts. "They played well. They outscrapped us and everything," Terrell said. "When you are a champ, you have to be ready to play like a champ everytime. We didn't and Ayden-Grifton did. They are the best team we've seen thus far."

Farmville Central girls placed three players in double figures in rolling to their second straight conference win, 54-39. The Lady Jaguars stand 2-2 in the ECC and 3-12 overall. The Lady Chargers fell to 2-3, 5-8.

The Lady Jaguars outscored Ayden-Grifton 10-2 in the second period to go up by a 26-22 count at intermission. They added a point to their lead, 37-32, in the third period. They cruised home with the win, 54-39, on an 11-7 fourth-quarter advantage.

The Lady Jaguars trailed, 16-14, with 6:01 left in the first half before going on their spree. Kim Smith hit a pair of free throws at 5:06 and Debra Joyner hit a 22-footer with 4:40 left to give the Lady Jags their first lead at 18-16. Two quick buckets by Harris and Joy Peaden upped the lead to 24-18 with 2:21 left. The Lady

Talk Shows Emerging As Everyman's Forum

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Talk shows are not just for celebrities. Every year, about 2 million people — most of them quite uncelebrated — show up somewhere on the tube to push their personal passions, so it was only natural that Richard and Deanne Mincer should write a book telling them how to go about it.

The Mincers, who have co-authored a volume most candidly called "The Talk Show Book," are in an excellent position to address the subject. He is a professional by career, she by marriage.

Mincer, now a vice president at Multimedia Productions, which owns the Phil Donahue Show, has been with Donahue in one capacity or another ever since he went on the air in 1967.

Wife Deanne is a writer who met her husband-to-be when she appeared several years ago as a guest on the Donahue show.

For the aspiring talk show guest — and that includes just about anyone with a cause to sell or a product to peddle — "The Talk Show Book" is the Bluejacket's Manual, the Boy Scout handbook and a roadmap all rolled into one.

To the Mincers, talk shows are a very serious business, and when they warm to the subject, they talk in tandem, never missing a beat.

"One of the nice things about the talk show is that it's part of Americana," Mincer said. "It's an extension of the Town Hall."

"We interviewed Wayne

Dyer, Erma Bombeck — a lot of people who have been on a lot of talk shows — and they told us they wished they had had such a book when they started," said Deanne. "Then they proceeded to tell us stories of all the terrible things that happened to them along the way."

The Mincers relay the horror stories right along with the posies and pitfalls of the business in "The Talk Show Book," which should be a lively seller with a built-in audience if the statistics are valid.

"In looking over some 4,000 radio and television talk shows across the country, almost 2 million bookings will take place in the next 12 months, of which only about 10 per cent will be celebrities," Mincer said.

"You hear people say, 'On talk shows, you see the same faces, year in and year out.' Nationally, in terms of network programming and syndication, I think that's true, but it's the local talk show that is the real underbelly of the circuit."

And why would anyone want to be on a talk show, facing the camera with the sinister little red light and knowing that millions are watching and listening?

"You may have been elected program chairman of your club and you're going to have a gala event," said Mincer. "You have to get out and promote that."

"Maybe you're thinking of running for local office and they're thinking of putting up street lights on your block and you don't want street lights. You may want to go on a talk show and discuss your point of view."

"Or," said Deanne, "you may be against the nuclear freeze or have the best collection of duck decoys in your state."

Whatever the motive, a lot of people want passionately to be on talk shows, and the Mincers have drawn up a formidable list of things one should not do in order to get there.

"Some people will call and demand to talk to the producer, or say it's an emergency phone call," Mincer said. "Some even call collect, believe it or not."

"Another thing we say is a sure turn-off is sitting in the lobby waiting to accost the producer or host. Meeting them in a social situation and pitching them is bad too."

Lily The Host Brings Her Characters To SNL

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Lily Tomlin created Purvis Hawkins, her sexy soul singer, for a television special last May, and she and Purvis will be back Saturday night — as host and musical guest — on NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

"Now I'm going to do Purvis again. ... I PLAN to do Purvis again," the entertainer says. "And I'm scared. What if I'm not dressed in time? We're live, and I've got to be out there, whether I'm ready or not."

"Sometimes you get lucky," she says with a big smile, "and things go easy."

The "Saturday Night Live" appearance will be Miss Tomlin's third — she was host of the show Nov. 22, 1975, and Sept. 18, 1976. Her return comes with the once enormously popular program seemingly on the road to recovery.

The audience for "SNL," which was rumored to be close to cancellation not long ago, has grown impressively since the new season began Sept. 25. The Jan. 8 show, a repeat from October with Ron Howard as host, reached more than 7 million homes.

"SNL" underwent radical change with the departure of cast members like Chevy Chase, John Belushi, Dan Aykroyd, Gilda Radner and Bill Murray. Their ultimate replacements, notably Eddie Murphy and Joe Piscopo, appear to be building the same kind of following for the program.

It's been a long time — 20 years? — since Lily Tomlin invented her first character, the pretentious Grosse Pointe matron, on the stage at Wayne State U.

"They were doing this variety show," she remembers, "and when I saw what they had, I could tell they needed material. I told them, 'I think I've got something you could use.'"

"I would be the old, tasteless lady, you know, and a friend would interview me. She would stand up at the end, like this," and Miss Tomlin demonstrates, her back arched, knees spread. "It would be a joke about Grosse Pointe, and that social situation."

"It was a big success. ... Everybody just screamed."

With the exception, perhaps, of one movie, the critical flop, "Moment By Moment" with John Travolta, Lily Tomlin has been a "big success" ever since: on NBC's "Laugh-In," as the star of three Emmy-winning TV specials, in movies such as "Nashville" and "The Late Show," and on the Broadway stage, in her one-woman show, "Appearing Nightly," in 1977.

Many of the characters she has created over the years are considered classics — Ernestine the telephone operator, Mrs. Judith Beasley, Tess the Bag Lady.

"You get a feeling for the type you want to do," she says, trying to explain the process. Purvis, Agnes Angst, the punker, and Holly Oneness, a protest-singer from the '60s, were invented for "Lily the President," broadcast last year on CBS.

"I'm going to physicalize the character," she says, "but creating the material is the thing. I usually get real excited about it: 'I WANT to do Purvis.' And sometimes, I add to the character as I go. ... It depends on how well you're sailing, how confident you are.

"It's exciting," she adds, "but I want to do it just so. I'm not cavalier about it, but I'm not afraid to do something in an embryonic stage. I trust myself, and I trust my fans."

Miss Tomlin says she's planning another one-woman Broadway show, perhaps for the fall. But for now, "Saturday Night Live" is on her mind.

"It's fun, but it's a lot of work. I'm old friends with Dick," she says, speaking of Dick Ebersol, the program's executive producer. "He asked me whether I'd like to do it again, and sometimes the whim just hits you."

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain on Friday for the Southeast, lower Midwest and mid-Atlantic states. Most of the country is expected to be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A winter storm warning remained in effect for most of North Carolina early today after the storm dumped six inches of snow in some mountain areas and lesser amounts of sleet and freezing rain in other parts of the state.

The National Weather Service said conditions may get worse before they get better. Snow was expected to change to sleet and freezing rain late today and tonight, making roads more slippery and causing ice to form on power lines which could cause power outages.

The weather service called for additional accumulations of up to 4 inches in mountain areas of the state today, with snow gradually changing to sleet and freezing rain tonight and then into rain over most areas Saturday.

"They might get as much as 12 inches (total) of snow at spots in the higher elevations," said Bob Muller, a meteorologist at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

Snow fell across most of the Piedmont, foothills and mountains Thursday night. Accumulations through early this morning ranged from 2 to 6 inches over the central and southern mountains to an inch or less over the most of the Piedmont.

Snow was expected to accumulate another 2 to 4 inches over the mountains and northern sections of the Piedmont and coastal plain today. Amounts will be more spotty in the southern part of the state but from 1 to 3 inches of snow are possible over central and southern portions of the coastal plain and the Sandhills.

Brisk, icy winds made for hazardous driving conditions as travelers' advisories were in effect in most of the state.

"Snow tires and chains are a must," said a dispatcher with the N.C. Highway Patrol's western district in Asheville, who added that it would be better if motorists didn't venture out on the highways.

No traffic deaths were reported because of the snow and ice this morning.

Accumulations of 6 inches were reported in Haywood and Transylvania counties and 5 inches in Buncombe County this morning, where it was still snowing heavily early today.

In Asheville, where reports of snow ranged from 2 to 8 inches, a number of factories and most of the schools in the area were closed. The Asheville airport remained open today, although customers were asked to call first to check on reservations.

Five inches were reported in Macon and Henderson counties, while Jackson, Rutherford and McDowell, Cleveland counties had 4 inches. Three inches were reported in Swain, Cherokee, Caldwell, Burke and Catawba, Lincoln and Gaston counties.

Less than an inch of snow was reported in Mecklenburg, Cabarrus, Union, Stanly, Anson, Richmond and Montgomery counties.

Despite the heavy snowfall, no major power outages were reported early today in the Asheville area, said a spokesman for Carolina Power & Light Co. A Duke Power Co. spokesman GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 50-year-old florist leaped to his death from the eighth floor of the Greensboro Hilton Thursday, police said.

William Joel Venable of Greensboro died around 10 a.m. after checking into the hotel on Wednesday. Police said a suicide note was found in Venable's room.

Nuke Plant To Be Idled

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Duke Power Co. will shut down its McGuire Nuclear Plant for up to three months beginning today, but a spokeswoman for the utility says no power shortages are anticipated while the plant is out of commission.

The shutdown is to fix a generator flaw which has kept the McGuire plant running at half power since going into operation 16 months ago.

The move would be at the time of year when power demand is highest, Duke spokeswoman Mary Cartwright said, but she said no shortages are expected.

Word of the expected shutdown of the 1,180-megawatt unit came Thursday at a hearing on Duke's Catawba Nuclear Plant in Rock Hill, S.C.

Warren Owen, a Duke executive vice president testifying at the hearing, said the modifications at McGuire would enable it to run at full capacity.

The issue arose when opponents of the Catawba plant asked if generators there had a flaw like the units at McGuire. Owen said they do not.

in Charlotte said the only power outage in that area had been caused by a driver who had run into a utility pole.

In Charlotte, where freezing rain was reported, Douglas Airport was open with some flight delays due to icy runways this morning. School closings were reported in various parts of the state, while some businesses were shut down today.

Winter storm warnings were in effect everywhere except the Outer Banks.

U.S. Raps 'Alarmist Language' In Russian Threat

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The United States today accused the Soviet Union of using "alarmist language" in an effort to intimidate Japan and prevent its pursuit of

"legitimate defense requirements."
The statement by State Department spokesman John

Hughes came after the Soviets warned Japan that it faces the possibility of becoming the target of a retaliatory nuclear strike if it allows U.S. fighter bombers and other new armaments to be deployed on its territory.
The official Soviet news agency Tass carried the warning in a dispatch late Wednesday that criticized statements made by Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone during his U.S. visit, winding up today.

Tass quoted Nakasone as telling The Washington Post that the entire Japanese archipelago must be like "an unsinkable aircraft-carrier."

The Post published a partial transcript Wednesday of its Nakasone interview, which included this statement by the Japanese official on his country's willingness to accept its responsibilities to defend its own territories:

"My own view of defense is that the whole Japanese archipelago or the Japanese islands should be like an unsinkable aircraft carrier putting up a tremendous bulwark of defense against infiltration of the (Soviet) backfire bomber. To prevent backfires from penetrating through this wall should be our first goal."

"The Tass statement belies the Soviet Union's professed desire for peace and arms control," Hughes said.

The United States and Japan want peace in the region and are not threatening the Soviet Union in any way, he said.

"If the Soviet government shares this desire for peace, it should stop using alarmist language and attempting to excite exaggerated fears," Hughes said.

He said the Tass statement is "the latest example of a clear Soviet campaign to employ such public statements in an attempt to intimidate our allies and friends and prevent them from pursuing their legitimate defense requirements."

"We have seen such statements used recently in Europe as well as Asia, and we can expect more of it," Hughes said. "We and our allies recognize these tactics for what they are."

Tass said that "the head of the Japanese Cabinet makes no secret of the intention to spearhead the aircraft-carrier against the Soviet Union." It added: "In the present nuclear age, there can be no unsinkable aircraft-carrier, and by de-playing ... arsenals of armaments, including American, the authors of such plans make Japan a likely target for a response strike."

The agency did not specify what new U.S. arms the Soviet Union considers a threat. But Soviet officials and the state-run press have in the past lashed out against the planned deployment of U.S. F-16 fighter-bombers at the U.S. Air Force base at Misawa in northern Honshu, Japan's main island.

In an obvious reference to the detonation of two nuclear bombs over Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945, Tass said that a response strike "for such a densely populated,
insular country as Japan,
could spell a national disaster more serious than the one that befell it 37 years ago."

The agency repeated earlier claims that the "real aim" behind Japan's "noisy propaganda campaign" involving territorial claims against the Soviet Union was "to cover up the stepped up military preparations and a further build-up of U.S. and Japanese armed forces near the Soviet border."

deployment in Siberia of some of their SS-20 medium-range nuclear missiles
now aimed at targets in Western Europe "to counter a new military base in Japan."

The warning was believed to refer to the planned deployment of F-16 fighter-bombers at Misawa.

Soviet Communist Party
chief Yuri V. Andropov reportedly told a visiting West German politician earlier this month that the Soviets

Heavy Outlays For Space Field

WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Soviet Union's massive space program may be costing the Kremlin up to $30 billion a year, about double current U.S. spending, according to a congressional study.

The Soviet military establishment "plays a large, possibly dominant, role in the space program," said the Library of Congress study released by the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee.

At the same time, it forecast that mounting economic problems in coming years may prompt the Kremlin leadership to trim some areas of space spending — particularly scientific space-exploration programs which do not contribute directly to Soviet military strength.

Release of the Congressional Research Service report came as the impending plunge from orbit of Cosmos 1402 focused worldwide attention on the potential danger of Moscow's use of nuclear reactors to power military reconnaissance satellites.

Pentagon spokesman
Henry Catto said Thursday
it was expected that re-entry of the crippled ocean surveillance satellite, which carries a 1,000-pound reactor, will occur sometime between 1 a.m. EST Sunday and 3 p.m. EST Monday.

Specialists estimated a 2 percent chance that debris from Cosmos 1402 will hit the United States, Catto said.

The congressional study, analyzing development of the Soviet space program in 1976-80, said: "U.S. intelligence estimates suggest that Soviet military and civilian space spending could be as much as 1 to 2 percent of Soviet gross national product."

"If correct, this estimate implies a space budget of $7 to $14 billion in 1974, and $14 to $28 billion in 1980 — a level of expenditure that is considerably larger than the present U.S. program and probably approximates ... the U.S. space effort at its peak in the 1960s," the report said.

It said the U.S. military space programs accounted for 30 to 40 percent of total U.S. space spending in the 1970s. But, a "comparison of the ratios of military to civilian satellite launchings suggests that the Soviet Union devotes a much larger proportion of its space budget to military applications than the United States."

The congressional study's upper-limit estimate of $28 billion for overall Soviet space spending ranged substantially higher than figures contained in a Defense Department statement issued last year.

That statement said Pentagon analysts had estimated Soviet space outlays at approximately $18 billion a year — about 70 percent of it earmarked for the military.

The U.S. space budget in fiscal 1982 was $14.7 billion.

NOT ALLOWED — Youngsters outside a movie theater in Stockholm hold signs saying "Let us see E.T.", "Away with the age limit", and "Films for kids should be seen by kids", following a decision by the Swedish Board of Film Censorship to restrict the film's audience to those over 11 years old. The censors claim the Steven Spielberg film portrays adults as a threat to children. Finland and Norway have also imposed age restrictions on "E.T.", the movie about a visitor from space who finds refuge among children. (AP Laserphoto)

The Smart Kooks Have An Unpredictable Trait

By GAIL MICHAELS
Meg is a kook.
Her teacher happens to think she's a fairly intelligent kook, so she recommended Meg for an enrichment program at school.

But smart kooks are like smart skunks: they share the same basic markings with the rest of their species. Meg, for instance, is appallingly unpredictable, a trait that caused my diaphragm to constrict with apprehension at the same time that my heart was swelling with maternal pride at her teacher's recommendation. I couldn't help speculating about which, if any, of Meg's quirks would surface during the first enrichment hour.

I soon found out. Meg came home bursting to tell me about her experience. She had been allowed to choose from among several areas of interest which were to be explored comprehensively during three one-hour-long sessions. Meg had chosen creative writing. I was relieved that she hadn't, as her close friend had, chosen Swedish.

"Oh, and the lady in charge asked me some other questions, too," Meg added in an offhand manner.

"Like what?"
"Well, she asked me what I wanted to be when I grew up."

"And what did you tell her?" I said, wondering if Meg had run the gamut from astronaut to prima ballerina or if she had merely chosen one of the new occupations on her interminable list.

"I told her I wanted to be a fairy."

"My mouth dropped open."

"A what?"

"A fairy."

I tried to remain calm.

"Why in heaven's name did you tell her something idiotic like that?"

Meg was unrepentant.

"You adults just don't understand fairies. Fairies go about doing good."

"Well, if that's all you want to do, you want to be a philanthropist, not a fairy."

Her eyes twinkled. "No, I also want to live in a tree."

I was so exasperated, I could barely breathe. "Was that the only question she asked you?"

"No, she wanted to know what famous person I would most like to meet. I told her G.I. Joe."

I groaned. "Please God, let this be a nightmare. Do you mean, Meg, do you mean that with all the wonderful books you've heard about, all you could think of was G.I. Joe?"

She nodded smugly.

I accused her of trying to be cute, but she continued to insist that she was quite serious until Phillip came home. By that time I was approaching hysteria.

"Do something with her! She wants to be a fairy who meets G.I. Joe!"

After acquiring the necessary background information, he gave her a stern look. "Now, Meg, don't argue with me. You were trying to be cute, and that may turn out to be unfortunate for you. That lady was trying to find out about you and your interests, and you've misled her. Now she may ask you to write stories about the Army. Frankly, I hope that she does."

Meg was aghast. "I suppose I should have said Laura Ingalls Wilder."

"I suppose you should have," Phillip said quietly.

"And what about this fairy business?"

She threw up her arms. "I was in a difficult position. Being an astronaut no longer interests me. I'm sort of in between desires."

"Then you should have been honest. There is nothing wrong with not knowing what you want to be when you grow up. Your mother still doesn't know."

I made an ugly face at him, but I was envious.

"Why can't I communicate with her like that?" I said after she left the room.

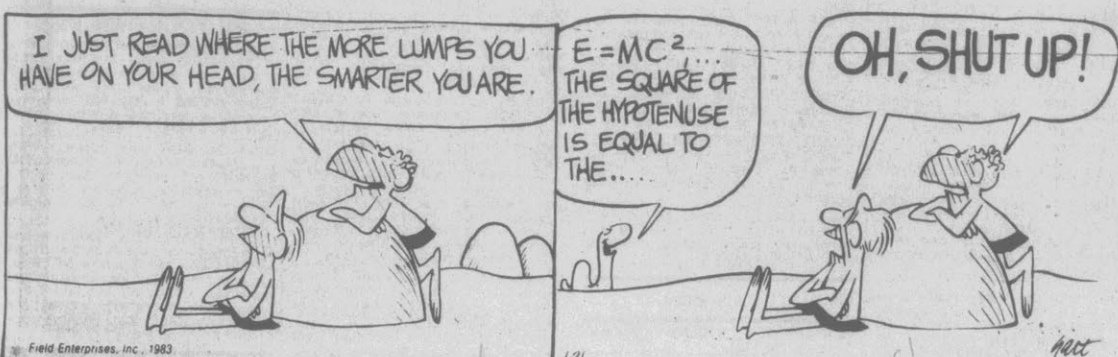

Phillip grinned. "You think too much alike."

What he meant was that Meg thinks I'm a kook, too, but not a particularly bright one.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: U equals I.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JAN. 22, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when you may want to change present plans for an illusory new appeal, but it would be wise not to discard carefully laid plans of the past. Maintain a good outlook.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Establish a new system for your regular work so that it is easier to perform. Be more optimistic about the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) State your aims to good friends and gain their support in a new project you have in mind. Express happiness with congenials.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go to influential persons for the help you need to carry through with your plans. See that your personal life is well organized.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can now put in motion a project that was impossible to do in the past. Take treatments to improve appearance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Concentrate on how to improve your environment. Discuss practical matters with friends and get their advice.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make sure to improve conditions at home. Not a good day to ask an influential person for a favor. Engage in favorite hobby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Make new contacts that will be helpful in your enterprise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Ideal day to enjoy yourself at recreations in the company of congenials. A talent you have can be expressed at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It may be difficult to gain your aims in the morning but things will improve later in the day. Spend your money wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take time to consult influential persons who can help you in your career. Be more willing to cooperate with others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your monetary affairs well and know how best to improve them. Contact a financial expert and get excellent advice.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Good day to further personal relationships and make big headway. Discuss personal plans with trusted friends.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who can comprehend both sides of a situation and can whittle any project down to a practical level, so be sure to give as fine an education as possible, and then there can be much success during lifetime.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 4 ♥ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♦.

Study the play of this hand. Then decide whether declarer was playing rubber bridge or duplicate.

The bidding was noteworthy only for its brevity. Once his partner opened the bidding, South was interested in playing at least game, but in one suit only. His jump to four hearts conveyed his sentiments to a tee.

West led his fourth-best diamond. East won the first trick with the jack of diamonds and tried to cash the ace. Declarer ruffed, crossed to the ace of clubs and took the trump finesse. West won the queen and shifted to a spade.

Declarer rose with the ace, crossed to his hand with a diamond ruff and tried to draw trumps. He was dismayed to learn that he had another trump loser, but he still had a play for his contract. He tried to get two spade discards on clubs. Unfortunately, West ruffed the third club and the defenders cashed a spade for down one. Which form of bridge were they playing?

Declarer either had to be playing duplicate or else he had little idea of rubber bridge technique. At trick three the contract is safe if declarer can hold his losers to one diamond and two trumps.

After ruffing the second diamond, declarer should cash the ace-king of trumps. When East shows out on the second trump, declarer leaves West with the two master trumps and starts on clubs.

West can ruff the third club and shift to a spade, but it is too late. Declarer rises with dummy's ace of spades and discards his last spade on the fourth club as West ruffs with the master trump. Making four-odd.

FOCUS

One Step From Immortality

When the new members of the Baseball Hall of Fame are announced later this month, a few more immortals will join that select company. But will Gil Hodges be among them? This is the last year of regular eligibility for the former star who played for the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Mets from 1943 to 1963. For the past seven years, Hodges has polled more than 200 votes from members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, but he has never gained the 75 percent needed to join the immortals. And yet Hodges was one of the strongest hitters in baseball, with 370 career home runs, including four in a single game in 1950.

DO YOU KNOW — Who holds the Major League record for most hits in his career?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — James Garfield was the last President to die before completing half of his first term in office.
