

OPEC Fails Resolve Disputes

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC oil ministers ended an emergency meeting today after failing to resolve any of the critical issues that threaten to force oil prices down and prolong a worldwide oil glut that has undermined the cartel's price-setting power.

"It's a complete failure," said Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia.

"We couldn't agree on anything at all," said Mana Saeed Otaiba of the United Arab Emirates. "Everyone does what they want."

However, Iran's oil minister, Mohammad Gharazi, said he was not displeased with the meeting's outcome.

"Saudi Arabia has lost its major role in OPEC," Gharazi said. "This is enough for us."

The emergency meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was convened to seek a compromise on the cartel's pricing and production levels in an attempt to support crude oil prices.

The prevailing OPEC base price is $34 a barrel, but some members are undercutting that price.

Failure of the meeting left open the possibility that Saudi Arabia, OPEC's leading producer, and its Persian Gulf allies would carry out previous threats to cut their oil prices unilaterally.

That could, in turn, prompt a downward spiral of oil prices throughout the world. Mexico and some other non-OPEC oil-producing countries are fearful of a price-cutting trend, which could force them to default on their huge foreign debt and possibly undermine the international financial system.

Some oil minister said there was agreement to lower OPEC's production ceiling by 1 million barrels a day to 17.5 million barrels — which is about the cartel's present level of output.

But Yamani and other ministers allied to Saudi Arabia said there was no agreement on any issue.

Mallam Yahaya Dikko, the Nigerian oil minister and OPEC president, said 11 of the cartel's member states had agreed to hold the cartel's daily production to 17.5 million barrels, but Saudi Arabia and Kuwait "withheld their consent."

Those countries contended that any production-sharing agreement would have to be contingent on Nigeria and other African countries raising the price of their oil to make Saudi oil more competitive.

Kuwaiti oil minister Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah said that if OPEC members which offer discounts in the base price continue to do so, Kuwait "definitely" will reduce its price and raise production.

"It is only natural to protect our own interest," he said.

Asked whether he thought that the Saudis would cut their price, Humberto Calderon Berti of Venezuela told reporters, "You'll have to ask Sheikh Yamani."

Yamani made no public statements about prices.

Many members have been flouting cartel policy, and threatening its unity, by exceeding production quotas and cutting prices to make up for slumping sales created by the worldwide recession and the international oil glut that preceded it.

The Saudis, the world's largest petroleum exporters, have hitherto adopted voluntary production cuts, while maintaining that their production was an issue of national sovereignty.

Iran, Saudi Arabia's chief rival on the production issue, reportedly has agreed to hold its production to 2.5 million barrels a day if the Saudis accept an official quota.

GOP Senate Leader Complains

'Standby' Tax Plans Criticized

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker says a standby tax package that President Reagan is ready to offer "is not a very good idea" and complains the administration has not cut deeply enough in the Pentagon's budget.

Baker also said that inflation-adjusted tax cuts that Reagan is fighting to protect are a formula for "economic and political distress."

The GOP leader, who played a key role shepherding Reagan's programs through Congress over the last two years, put himself firmly at odds with the administration on key budget policies Sunday, two days after announcing he will not run for a fourth term in 1984.

The president is due to send his new budget to Capitol Hill next Monday. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said the administration will not propose new taxes for 1983 or 1984, but he refused to comment about "contingency" taxes the administration is drafting for later years.

Interviewed Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," Regan said that if huge deficits continue, as expected, "we may well have to have some type of tax" after 1984.

The Treasury secretary predicted the economy will have a "decent recovery" in 1983, beginning slowly in the first half of the year and "getting very stimulative toward the third and fourth quarters."

Regan said the prime lending rate, now at 11 percent, will fall "another couple of points at least."

Sources say the president will propose a three-year, $135-billion contingency tax increase that will take effect late in 1985, if required to keep deficits on a declining path toward $100 billion or less.

The taxes are likely to include a crude oil fee and an income tax surcharge.

"It is my personal view that is not a very good idea," Baker said Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Opposition to the idea also has been registered by the top GOP tax writers in Congress — Senate Finance Committee chairman Robert Dole of Kansas and Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee.

"We're going to do well enough to take care of this year without trying to figure too extensively on what's going to happen in the out-years (after 1984)," Baker said.

Cosmos Fell; Hunt Re-Entry Pieces

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. ships and planes with radiation detection gear are looking for signs of a Soviet spy satellite that fell from orbit, showering some pieces into the Indian Ocean while leaving its nuclear fuel core still spinning toward a mid-February burn-up.

But an alert by the Federal Emergency Management Agency is over, called off 49 minutes after the main body of the out-of-control Soviet ocean surveillance satellite hurtled into the Earth's dense atmosphere Sunday at about 5:21 p.m. EST.

In a message to officials in all 50 states, the agency said "the public should be advised that protective action in connection with Cosmos 1402 are no longer necessary and thus the alert is over."

Emergency teams ready to fly to the scene of impact, should it have fallen within the United States, were disbanded.

Dr. Richard Wagner, a top Pentagon nuclear expert, said any radiation from metal fragments surviving the burn-out of the satellite would remain in the immediate area where they landed.

Wagner, nuclear adviser to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, said it is "awfully hard to know" whether the main part of Cosmos 1402, estimated to weigh about 8,000 pounds, had burned up entirely on re-entry.

The Pentagon said, "We do not know at this time whether any portion of the satellite reached the Earth's surface intact."

Colonel Robert O'Brien, a Pentagon spokesman, said U.S. observers on the British-owned island of Diego Garcia reported seeing a 40-second "burn" in the sky about six minutes before Cosmos 1402 hit the heavy friction of the atmosphere.

Apparently, the satellite burned red hot as it dropped toward the final stages of a space voyage which lasted nearly five months.

A Pentagon official pinpointed the re-entry at about 980 nautical miles (1,127 statute miles) southeast of Diego Garcia, where the United States maintains a naval base.

The official Pentagon statement placed the impact area at about 25 degrees south latitude by 84 degrees east longitude.

Negotiators Still Talk Lebanon Troop Pullout

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — A shell slammed into an apartment building about 400 yards south of the hotel where Israeli, Lebanese and U.S. met today for another inconclusive round of troop withdrawal talks.

An Israeli soldier was slightly wounded by the blast, which occurred about a half hour before the negotiating session began.

The Israelis said the explosion was caused by a Katyusha rocket fired from an area controlled by U.S. Marine peacekeepers. But a Marine spokesman denied it. "We know of no such firing," said Capt. Dale Dye of McAllen, Texas.

At the bargaining table, Lebanese chief negotiator Antoine Fattal again rejected Israel's demand for early warning stations and normalized relations. He proposed instead a "framework for a protocol accord to regulate ties" between the two nations, Lebanese government spokesman Daoud Sayegh told reporters.

The negotiators made no public reference to the explosion outside. Neither side made concessions and no date was announced for the next plenary meeting. Instead, a joint communique issued at the end of the 3-hour meeting said new subcommittees would meet Jan. 25 or Jan. 26 in Israel about the issues in dispute.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said the blast was caused by a Katyusha rocket fired at an Israeli army position south of the hotel. A search was mounted for the attackers, the command said.

The official PLO news agency, Wafa, claimed that Lebanese leftists allied with the Palestine Liberation Organization staged the "daring operation."

"A unit of the Lebanese national resistance attacked an Israeli military post near the Lebanon beach hotel in Khalde with bazookas and submachine guns," it said in a dispatch from Nicosia, Cyprus.

Lebanon's state radio quoted police sources as saying a 120mm mortar shell struck an apartment building near the Israeli checkpoint, prompting Israeli soldiers to fire machine gun volleys into the air.

Israeli troops at the scene brought to the hotel three fragments of what they said was a 107mm Katyusha rocket used in the attack.

There was no indication who fired the projectile.

One After Another

ICE STORM DAMAGE — Morganton (N.C.) residents were still digging out from under the first major snowstorm of the winter when a second front moving through blasted the area with heavy ice and freezing rain. The freezing rain along with the snow was too much for many trees and power lines to stand, and many just collapsed under the weight like this magnolia tree on West Union Street in Morganton. According to reports, over 100,000 people were without power sometime over the weekend during the severe weather. (AP Laserphoto)

California Families Flee Storms; Northeast 'Iced'

By The Associated Press
A violent storm hit the Pacific Coast with 70-mph winds and rain today, forcing dozens of families to flee their homes, blocking highways and knocking out the power to thousands of people.

Storms were blamed for at eight deaths Sunday and a total of 23 since Thursday in the rainstorms and freezing rain that struck from Alabama and the Carolinas to Illinois and New Hampshire.

An ice storm and heavy fog in New England and parts of New York even had sand trucks skidding off the highway and many residents decided to extend their weekend today.

Up to 3 feet of fresh snow was expected today in the Sierra Nevada, and forecasters in California said the storm was the first of three expected to hit before the week is out. About 16 inches of snow fell during the night on Interstate 80 at Donner Pass and three other major roads across the Sierra were closed, including California Highway 70 through Feather River Canyon, which was blocked by a snowslide.

Surf up to 15 feet high was pounding the beaches of Southern California.

Residents of Key West, Fla., were drying out from a weekend deluge of 12 inches of rain that one police dispatcher described as "like a hurricane."

Winter storm warnings were posted in northeastern California and the Lake Tahoe basin of western Nevada. Snow also was scattered from northeast Montana across North Dakota, northern Minnesota and the upper Great Lakes region.

Al Arey, a spokesman for the Vermont highway department, said today the state's heavy highway trucks were sliding off the road even with chains on the tires.

"It's been a real merry-go-round," he said. "We get a route done and we have to start all over again."

More than 80 people evacuated their homes in Northern California today, about 50 from an apartment complex near San Jose. One vacant house tumbled down a hillside, and washouts affected about 5,000 commuters on the Southern Pacific Railroad. Power failed briefly late Sunday in about 4,100 homes and businesses in San Jose, with other scattered blackouts in Oakland, San Francisco, Pacifica and Walnut Creek, Pacific Gas & Electric spokesman Dick Davin said.

He said he could not give a total number of outages.

The heavy rain loosed a mudslide on California's scenic Highway 1 about 20 miles south of Big Sur on Sunday, closing it at least through today. Other roads were closed briefly because of flooding.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Inside a red stone bastion in Bastrop, Texas, convicted murderer Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, a haggard replica of his former self, marshals the forces of what may be his last fight for freedom.

White-haired, beset with insomnia, nightmares and approaching financial ruin, the former Long Beach emergency-room physician admits "if it doesn't happen this year it probably won't happen. I'll be out of money. And justice costs a lot of money."

He has spent nearly half a million dollars trying to clear his name and find the killers he says bludgeoned and stabbed his pregnant wife and two small daughters to death in Fort Bragg, N.C. on Feb. 17, 1970.

For nearly 13 years the onetime Green Beret doctor has ricocheted from outstanding career to captivity and chaos — arrested, cleared, indicted, freed on appeal, tried and convicted, granted an appeal that freed him on constitutional grounds, and finally re-imprisoned on March 31, 1982.

Now he is imprisoned in the federal correctional institution at Bastrop, 1,800 miles away from home and the resources he needs to make his last stand.

In his corner are professional associates, former patients, family and friends of his Long Beach life, and a battery of lawyers and private investigators. So is syndicated columnist Jack Anderson and writer Joe McGinniss ("The Selling of the President.") His book "Fatal Vision" on the MacDonald case is due in March.

The prison setting is bleak, a new, modular fortress encased within 20-foot-high barbed wire webbing punctuated with watchtowers.

"Inmates are treated fairly and I've encountered no harassment," MacDonald says. "My objection is not the prison; it's being here when I'm innocent and being so far removed from the people I need to confer with."

"I'm worn out," he admitted. "I know it. I never felt like I was near the end of my rope, never had a hopeless feeling. But I'm getting it more and more lately. I know it's the pressure and tiredness and the accumulated years of this.

"I can't sleep the way I used to," he said. "I have the same nightmares. I still hear Colette's voice and the sounds in the house ... the clanging of the prison gates behind me ... I still see the blood ... Yes, I dream in color sometimes. I still wake up in a cold sweat, exhausted."

He said he exercises, prays, reads and writes to keep up his spirits.

And there's a "gorgeous lady" back in his life, a blonde flight attendant he met and dated for six years in Huntington Harbour, where he lived in California.

"She just left after a three-day visit," he says. "Her name is Sherry, and she's a solid, strong person with a lot of soul."

Meanwhile, MacDonald faces financial ruin. His car is sold, his boat is up for sale and his Huntington Harbour waterfront condo is for sale or lease.

"Everything I made in 11 years practicing medicine is gone," he says.

Hoover Taft Is Honored

E. Hoover Taft Jr. of Greenville was among those honored during the annual Louisburg College Patrons' Banquet held Saturday at the college.

The banquet was held to express appreciation for those who contribute to the college's general fund and to the completion of the $4.2 million Third Century Campaign begun three years ago.

One of the components of the Third Century campaign is a classroom building named for Taft. It is expected to be ready for occupancy in late spring.

Taft is a Greenville attorney who has served for 14 years as chairman of the Louisburg College Board of Trustees.

Women Realtors Choose Slogan

"You're the Key in 1983" was chosen as the slogan for the Women's Council of Realtors at its monthly meeting held recently.

Thelma Whitehurst, 1982 Member of the Year recipient, was congratulated on her recent election as vice-president of the North Carolina Women's Council of Realtors.

It was reported members Faye Adams, Jean Hopper, Ann Bass and Karen Rogers attended a Women's Council of Realtors workshop at the Hyatt House in Winston-Salem.

Program chairman Karen Rogers discussed with members the program of work for 1983 and asked for suggestions and ideas for special projects.

The next meeting is scheduled for Feb. 16.

Falling Gas Prices May Offset A Federal Tax

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Falling gasoline consumption and the worldwide oil glut could combine to make April's nickel-a-gallon federal gas tax hike almost painless to consumers, an oil industry analyst says.

Gas prices have maintained a rapid downward spiral since the first of the year and now average $1.18 a gallon for all grades, Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

He predicted prices could fall another 10 cents per gallon by April, offsetting the new 5-cent tax.

The latest figures represent a drop of 4.37 cents per gallon from Lundberg's Dec. 17 survey, when the average price was $1.23, and a decrease of almost 2 cents since his last survey, Jan. 7. The average price then was $1.205.

The average price is now 21 cents cheaper than in January 1982, when the national benchmark was $1.39, Lundberg said in a telephone interview.

Lundberg's figures are based on biweekly surveys of 18,000 stations nationwide. Many are now selling gas at self-service pumps for less than $1 a gallon.

Lundberg also noted that diesel fuel — once a low-cost incentive for motorists to buy diesel-powered cars — is now more expensive than both regular leaded and unleaded gas.

Diesel prices have bucked the trend of decreasing motor fuel costs, although they are still an average 10 cents less a gallon than premium unleaded.

Lundberg said market analysts consider the top grade diesel's true competitor.

Regular leaded gas prices decreased the most in the latest survey, averaging $1.08 per gallon over the weekend compared to $1.13 a month ago, and $1.10 two weeks ago.

Regular unleaded was $1.16, down 2 cents in the last two weeks; premium unleaded was $1.28, down almost half a cent; and premium leaded was $1.35, down 1.37 cents.

Lundberg, who publishes the weekly Lundberg Letter on oil industry trends, noted that some seasonal price decline is normal. Last year the national average price for all grades fell less than a penny in January, 2 cents in February, 5.9 cents in March and 5.7 cents in April.

He also said that for the first time in more than a year, dealers gave up some of their profit margin to contribute to the price decline.

Through most of 1981 dealers maintained an 11.37-cent markup out of which they must pay operating expenses, while pump prices dropped to reflect declining wholesale prices. But this year many dealers dropped their margins by about one-hundredth of a cent per gallon.

Lundberg suggested the change represents a bid to attract customers as demand for gasoline continues to fall.

Sen. John East, in a prepared statement, said he applauds a decision by the Reagan administration to curb textile imports from Communist China.

"Textile imports from Communist China have had an adverse impact on the economy of North Carolina and other textile producing states," East said. "The increase in such imports has had the effect of exporting jobs from our state and others to foreign countries."

In a letter sent to Secretary of State George P. Shultz, East said the curbs, imposed after a breakdown in trade negotiations, would stop the transfer of textile jobs from North Carolina to China.

East also asked Shultz to remain hard-nosed with Peking during the secretary's coming trip to China.

"I ask that you keep foremost in mind the interests of our own citizens whose livelihood depends on a health and prosperous textile industry," and "urge you to stand firm in any trade discussions with the Chinese Communists regime," East's

Five Traffic Mishaps In Greenville Saturday

An estimated $15,795 damage resulted from five traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Heaviest damage, officers said, resulted from a 6:26 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Streets, involving cars driven by John Cephes Riddle of 113 Rotary Ave., and Lori King Braxton of Route 8, Greenville.

Police said Ms. Braxton was injured in the collision, which caused an estimated $3,300 damage to the Riddle car and $4,500 damage to the Braxton auto.

Riddle was charged with failing to stop for a red light and exceeding a safe speed.

Todd Armitage Buhrman of 415 Ash St., was charged with driving under the influence and failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of an 11:15 p.m. collision on Tenth Street, 18 feet west of the Elm Street intersection.

Police said the Buhrman car collided with a vehicle driven by Jeffrey Ralph Davis of Erwin, causing an estimated $3,000 damage to the Buhrman vehicle and $300 damage to the Davis car.

Police said a 2:35 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 93 feet west of the Pine Street intersection, involved five vehicle.

Investigators reported a car driven by Viviane Yvonne Barrett of Winterville, collided with a car driven by Richard Borden Sullivan of Shady Knoll Trailer Park, pushing the Sullivan into a vehicle driven by Carolyn Little Parker of Route 4, Greenville.

Officers said then a vehicle driven by Rhonda Harrington Cox of Route 3, Greenville, collided with a car driven by Sandra Mayo Robinson of Winterville.

Police charged Ms. Barrett, who was reported injured, with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident, and charged Ms. Cox with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety. They also charged Sullivan with driving with an expired registration.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $600 to the Parker car, $1,300 to the Sullivan vehicle, $500 to the Barrett car, $200 to the Robinson car and $20 to the Cox auto.

William James Daniels of 107H Lakeview Terrace, was charged with driving under the influence, failing to stop for a stop light, driving while his license was revoked, and furnishing false information at the scene of a collision, following investigation of a 2:47 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene and Fifth Streets.

Police said the Daniels car collided with a vehicle driven by David Charles Hohns of Route 2, Macclesfield, causing $500 damage to the Daniels car and $1,000 damage to the Hohns car.

Cars driven by Anne Elizabeth Van Leith of Clarke's Trailer Park and Antonio Barnes of 115 Jarvis Dorm, collided about 10:15 p.m. at the intersection of Cotanche and Reade Streets, causing $75 damage to the Van Leith car and $500 damage to the Barnes auto.

Officers charged Ms. Van Leith with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Briefly Saw A Life Raft

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard has asked mariners to near Cape Hatteras to watch for an overturned life raft seen by a British steamer in an area where commercial aircraft have picked up an emergency distress signal.

The 15-man life raft was sighted Saturday about 130 miles east of Cape Hatteras, within 30 miles of where the Coast Guard said five high-altitude commercial aircraft picked up an Emergency Transmitter Locator signal at about 6:50 p.m. Friday.

The captain of the British steamer Ocean Thistle reported the overturned raft to the Coast Guard Saturday afternoon. Stormy seas prevented the steamer from retrieving the raft, red and black with an orange canopy.

A Coast Guard C-130 plane based in Elizabeth City returning from Bermuda searched the area visually and electronically Saturday with no results, a spokesman said.

Petty Officer T.W. Fusselman of the 5th District Coast Guard Rescue Coordination Center in Portsmouth, Va., said a raft of the size reported by the British vessel typically would be found on a fairly large vessel.

Fusselman said there were no reports of any vessels missing in the area.

Lt. Ken Elmer, duty officer at the Coast Guard Air Station in Elizabeth City, said there were no reports of the emergency signal after the commercial aircraft crews reported it Friday.

The restrictions on Chinese textile imports, East said, "reflect the type of realistic policy which we ask you to reinforce in your forthcoming trip."

WEDDINGS IN ANCIENT GREECE

Ancient Greece brings to mind classical beauty and culture. Here's how the people of that time celebrated marriage.

The average age of the bride was 15. The match was made by the girl's father, often to someone she had never met.

...

The betrothal was conducted between the bride's father and the groom (or the groom's father, if the groom too was young). Even at the betrothal ceremony, the would-be groom clasped hands not with the bride, but with her father.

...

January was the most popular wedding month, considered sacred to Hera, the goddess of marriage. Overall, the ancient Greeks preferred to marry in winter, at the full moon.

Divorce was allowed, but uncommon, since if a bride was returned to her father her dowry was returned, too. Many a young and spendthrift husband belatedly realized his "devotion" to his wife when faced with the prospect of coming up with the money.

NEEDLEPOINT OIL...sampler can be worked in tent stitch, pattern stitches or counted cross-stitch.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Here's a charming needlepoint sampler to delight the heart of any owl lover. Simple, easy-to-learn stitches are used for the owls with a tent-stitch background. It's another Ginny Ross design, exclusively for readers of this column. If you are not a fan of pattern stitchery, work it throughout in tent stitches. Or, it would be equally effective in counted cross-stitch. Whatever stitch you choose, it's sure to be a conversation piece.

Worked as shown on 10-mesh canvas with Persian yarns, the finished size is 11 by 14 inches. On 14-count cross-stitch fabric or 14-mesh canvas, the finished measurements would be approximately 7 1/2 by 10 inches.

To obtain the chart and directions for making the "Owl Tree," send your request for Leaflet No. NC-123 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order a needlepoint or cross-stitch kit by sending a check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit No. NK-123 ($17.50) for needlepoint contains instructions, 10-mesh canvas and Persian wool yarns. Kit No. CK-123 ($10) for counted cross-stitch contains instructions, 14-count fabric and embroidery floss. Designs are worked from charts and are not stamped on the fabric or canvas. Shipping charges are included in all kit prices.

Dear Pat: I would like to know if you can take any needlepoint picture and work it as counted cross-stitch. If so, how would I go about it? — Mrs. Roberts, Lancaster, S.C.

The answer is almost an unqualified "yes," Mrs. Roberts. There are a few needlepoint pattern stitches that are not suitable for cross-stitch fabric, but most of them are.

The charts for any needlepoint design that is worked in tent stitch will usually look exactly like the charts for counted cross-stitch, so that you really have no adapting to do. If there are pattern stitches used in portions of the design, these areas can be filled in with cross-stitches as well.

The primary difference will usually be in the finished size if the canvas mesh count is different from the count of the even-weave fabric used for cross-stitch. Here's a guide for figuring the finished size of any needlepoint or cross-stitch project.

To find the finished size of a charted project — information you will need to determine the amount of fabric or canvas to purchase — follow these steps.

First, count the squares of the graph chart at the widest point of the design. Divide the total number by the count of your fabric. Let's assume that there are 105 squares in the charted design. This means that your finished width would be 7 1/2 inches if your fabric count is 14 to the inch (105 divided by 14 equals 7 1/2 inches).

Do the same thing to find the vertical height of the design. In our example, there are 140 squares from top to bottom (140 divided by 14 equals 10 inches).

Just remember that each square of the chart represents one stitch and the fabric or mesh count always tells you the number of single stitches worked per inch. Before purchasing your fabric, decide on the amount of fabric to be left beyond the design itself on all edges. In addition, allow at least an inch or two of excess fabric around each edge.

Singles Increase In State

The traditional family consisting of mom, dad and two children is less common in today's society.

Use Credit Wisely

Would you regularly shop at a store which sold all of its items for 18 percent more than the identical business next door? Very few people would do so.

"But this is what you are doing if you are routinely carrying over charges on a credit card account," says Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist at North Carolina State University.

Credit card purchases are fine if you pay the entire bill off at the end of each month. Otherwise, there is 18 percent interest added to the cost of the items purchased.

"Keep credit purchases to a minimum. Consider what credit will cost and how else you might use the money," Dr. Hinson recommends.

Charity Ball Set For Feb. 11

"A Night in Never Never Land" is the theme of the 1983 Charity Ball, sponsored by the Greenville Service League.

This year's overall ball chairman is Mrs. Jack Whichard. She said the event will be held Feb. 11 at the Greenville Country Club, with dinner followed by dancing to the music of the Burt Massengale Orchestra.

A Raleigh native, Mrs. Whichard is a graduate of Flora McDonald College with a degree in music and is a past president of the Service League. She and her husband attend Memorial Baptist Church and have a son, John, and a daughter, Sally.

Assisting Mrs. Whichard are the following chairmen: Mrs. Raymond MacKenzie Jr., decorations; Jo Betts Barrett and Mrs. Edward Seykora, bandstand; Mrs. Fredric Robbins and Mrs. Kelly Barnhill, ceiling; Mrs. Anthony Giordano and Mrs. Jasper Lewis, driveway; Mrs. Robert VanVeld and Mrs. Tom Haigwood, foyer; Mrs. C.W. Harvey Jr. and Virginia Basnight, lounges; Mrs. Howard Dawkins and Mrs. Larkin Little, special effects; Mrs. Charles Carter and Mrs. Frank Steinbeck, walls; Mrs. Stephen Coggins and Mrs. John Lang, siderooms; Mrs. Charles Wilkerson and Mrs. James Carter, invitations; Mrs. Patrick Deyson and Mrs. Ed Harris, dinner; Mrs. Bernard Vick, finance; Mrs. Howard Dawkins Jr., publicity; Mrs. James Hudson, programs; Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst and Mrs. Donald McGlohon, table decorations; Mrs. Kurt Fickling, usherettes; and Mrs. A.L. Ferguson, entertainment.

Proceeds from the ball are administered through the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund, which provides assistance to patients in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Referrals are submitted for consideration by local physicians. Beneficiaries must be residents of Pitt County.

Pitt County Is Design Theme

Pitt County will be the design theme of the upcoming quilt block contest being sponsored by the Greenville Quilters Guild and the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

The entry must reflect some aspect, area or life in Pitt County.

All winning quilt blocks will be retained by the Greenville Quilters Guild to be incorporated into a quilt. Winners will be announced in the newspaper and credited when the quilt is exhibited.

Further information, entry blanks or rules for entering are available by calling 752-4137, extension 250.

The Greenville Quilters Guild will be meeting Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the Community Building. Grace Karnes will do a presentation on small quilts.

Garden Club Has Meet

Parker Overton and Tim Sutton were speakers at the meeting of the Grass Roots Garden Club held at University Church of Christ recently.

Overton and Sutton showed different cuts of meat and how to get the most from the cuts.

A book will be placed in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church library in memory of Mrs. Lee Merritt.

Mrs. James Hecker, president, welcomed Mrs. John Harn as a guest. Meeting hostesses were Mrs. Marshall Tripp and Mrs. John Langley.

Reports Are Given

The Sweet Gum Grove Extension Homemakers Association held its meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Jackie Harris. Margaret Tetterton was assisting hostess.

Leader reports were given by Mrs. Harris on "Replacing Leaking Facuets" and by Mrs. Eric Whichard, clothing, who spoke on "Common Failure Problems." She discussed the treatment of silk and rayon fabrics and how to prevent seam slipping.

The program, presented by Mrs. Howard Briley, was entitled "How to Buy Used Table Lamps." Careful planning should be considered in purchasing a lamp, she said. She told of the different types of shades and how to use a diffuser.

Mrs. Sam Alexander gave the devotional.

Project Plans For Year Are Made

The Women's Committee of the Pitt County Farm Bureau held a luncheon meeting Saturday. Project plans for the coming year were made.

Immediate plans were made to distribute R. Flake Shaw Scholarship forms to all of the high schools in the county.

Monthly activities planned are: February, family picnic with a special program; March, invite Pitt County Commissioners to a meeting; April, ladies luncheon to celebrate Farm Bureau Day; May, roadside clean-up campaign; September, safety program as a special project including bicycle and school bus safety; October, participation in county annual meeting; November, observe Farm City Week and participate in R. Flake Shaw Scholarship Fall Festival and the hospitality booth at the Tobacco Trade Show; December, state convention.

The planning was made by Margie Hart, chairman of the women, Lois Briley, Rebecca Davenport, Clara Baker, Charlotte Garris, Lucille Dilda, Alma Worthington, Earline Wynne, Linda Paramore, Helen Wooten and Virginia Riggs.

Dear Abby

Starry-Eyed Daughter Can't See His Flaws

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years and finally need some advice. My 20-year-old daughter is planning to marry a man who dated her for several months before telling her he had a pregnant wife and two small children.

How do I tell her that this sorry excuse for a man will never be more than the liar he has shown himself to be?

How do I tell her she will never be able to trust him, or to look at herself in the mirror after she sees his wife and children?

How do I tell her she deserves more? She says she "loves" him. Or am I the one who's crazy?

HEARTSICK MOM

DEAR MOM: You aren't crazy. Your daughter is. ("Love" is a mental condition that renders its victims temporarily blind to that which is clearly visible to everyone else.)

You can talk from now until your voice gives out, but the more you point out his faults, the more ferociously she will defend him.

Sorry, Mom. Some people have to learn the hard way. Just stick around to pick up the pieces.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a 30-year career naval officer. Recently at a dinner party the subject of his high cost of medical care came up. I mentioned that the Navy had provided me with the best medical services free.

A woman in the group (not Navy) said, "Yes, our tax dollars go to pay your doctor bills!" Not wishing to create a scene, I said nothing at the time, but how I wanted to speak my piece. May I get it off my chest to you, Abby? Many others need to hear it:

My husband and I are grateful for the many privileges we have had because of his career in the Navy. Therefore, you will never hear us complain about the long separations; having to cope with alien customs and languages in foreign lands in unsanitary conditions, often without hot water, air conditioning or central heating; losing precious heirlooms through theft and breakage due to constant moving; leaving friends and family behind and often risking our lives — even in peacetime.

It is regrettable that some begrudge us free medical care.

Please be reminded that my husband — a kind, intelligent, patriotic officer — spent 30 of the best years of his life earning a comparatively small income, working for the American people to make their country a safer place to live!

Police Training Needed

Bringing a number of professional people together to discuss common problems and possible solutions is a proven productive idea, and the recent gathering here conducted by the N.C. Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards commission can have only good results.

In all, five such meetings are being held across the state.

The issue at hand was establishing some sort of common ground on a preservice training requirement for law men.

A variety of current practices were discussed in training of police officers, which included observations that some superiors chose to have a good look at the caliber of candidates before investing money in their training — a valid point.

To observers it appeared the balance of opinion leaned favorably to some form of preservice training for officers. One can see different circumstances might require differing procedures.

As did many others, we lean to the option of a 44-hour preservice training, with continuing basic training during the first year of employment.

This does not resolve all the doubts raised; but the thought of lawmen performing sensitive and sometimes hazardous duties during their "basic" training period, or being called upon to deal with the public when personally ill-equipped for that responsibility, does not appeal to us.

In time, perhaps we shall see an area facility from which various departments can draw carefully selected candidates who are versed in some fundamentals and prepared for necessary in-service training that only experience can provide.

Insulting N.C. Voters

North Carolina's constitution might face another amendment, this one repealing the 1977 amendment which allowed the state's governor and lieutenant governor to serve two four year consecutive terms.

It is reported that a movement is underway in the Senate to prepare an amendment which would repeal the 1977 amendment. Reportedly the bill is ready for introduction by Sen. W. Craig Lawing of Mecklenburg and Sen. Kenneth C. Royall, Jr. of Durham, both allies of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

We have to wonder why the voters should have to be subjected to another battle over this issue. The 1977 amendment was, after all submitted to the ultimate authority, the people, and it was decided. Now, rather than insinuate the voters of 1977 were stupid, the politicians should leave the matter alone.

THIS AFTERNOON

Tax Code Battle

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — President Reagan's "Economic Recovery Act of 1981" contains a tax cut for business which almost two years after the act's passage still threatens to uncork a donnybrook in the North Carolina General Assembly and possibly in state court.

Reagan's tax cut accelerated the depreciation schedule businesses can use to write off the purchase of new equipment. By speeding up the schedule, the administration hoped to make the purchase of new more productive equipment a greater temptation to businesses.

Because North Carolina law says that the state tax code must track the federal tax code in this area, the N.C. Department of Revenue shouldn't have put the federal schedule in place for state taxes. That set off a furor in the 1982 short legislative session and, since the matter wasn't settled then, promises to spark another debate this year.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, says the Department of Revenue shouldn't have put the federal schedule in place for state taxes. The change in the law, Adams says, will cost the state about $11 million a year in lost revenue. "We were adopting the Reagan trickle-down theory," Adams, a diehard partisan, says. In 1982 floor debate, he argued that the tax cut would hamper education programs while providing business with a tax break it didn't need.

"The Reagan trickle-down tax policy was already a failure and we didn't need to waste that money. The difference between them doing it on the federal level and us doing it is that they can have a $200 billion deficit and we have to balance our budget," Adams said recently in an interview. He persuaded the state House to approve a bill uncoupling the two depreciation schedules in 1982 but that bill died in the Senate.

This year, Adams says he won't be working through the Legislature to get the depreciation schedules unhooked. He expects a state court to rule the coupling unconstitutional. He says he knows a taxpayers' group which plans to file suit against the schedule soon. If they're successful, the matter would no doubt come back to the Legislature.

The Legislature regularly adjusts the state tax code to mesh with the federal tax code. Most of the changes are minor. The last time that did this, they said the state would follow the federal code in effect on Jan. 1, 1981. At that time, no one knew the depreciation schedule would be passed into law to become effective retroactive to Jan. 1, 1981.

The result is unconstitutional, Adams says. "We have delegated the power to the tax the people of North Carolina to the federal Congress. We're saying that whatever Congress passes will be the law of North Carolina and that is clearly unconstitutional." Adams, a lawyer, cites the fifth article, second section, of the state Constitution which says, "The power of taxation shall...never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away."

Gov. Jim Hunt says the depreciation schedule ought to stay where it is. He says the coupling with the federal schedule keeps the state competitive with neighboring

Other Editors Say Ham The Hero

(The Raleigh Times)

Space was an unknown frontier on Jan. 31, 1961 when America sent its first representative on a historic 5,000 miles per hour flight over the Atlantic Ocean.

The effects of weightlessness and the strain of liftoff were unproven factors when the big Redstone rocket left its launching pad at Cape Canaveral.

But the sole occupant of the craft, a five-year-old male chimpanzee, answered many of the questions with an almost flawless performance.

Every 20 seconds Ham hit a lever on his right under a red light and once every two minutes he hit a lever on his left under a blue light. The childish maneuvers had far-reaching implications.

As long as the levers were hit on schedule, scientists knew the chimp had at least one eye open, and that his brain was functioning and that he could control and use his arms.

The seemingly simple chore of lever-pulling was difficult. Tom Wolfe in his "The Right Stuff" wrote of how trainers at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio resorted to a teaching technique involving electrical shocks to assure compliance and still struggled to find a capable chimp.

But thanks to Ham, four months later America sent its first man, Alan B. Shepard, into suborbital flight.

The space program moved on, leaving Ham as a footnote in history. He was retired in 1963 to the National Zoo in Washington where he was the only chimpanzee. He came to the N.C. Zoological Park in 1980 and died there last week, apparently happy and apparently loved by the other seven chimps. Ham had adjusted well to group life after a life as a loner.

Much like Ham, man is still a loner in the universe. The heavens twinkle tantalizingly close, yet frustratingly distant above our island Earth. We have walked on the moon, have taken pictures of the planets and in our dreams have conquered space.

The heavens still beckon to the brave, and the curious. Man — and ape — have pulled a few levers, but the biggest challenges await our best.

The Washington Leaks

This is what is known as the leaky season in Washington. I'm not talking about the weather, I'm talking about all the leaks in the government to the press.

The President has been so angered by leaks in his administration that he was quoted in a leak from one of his people as saying, "I'm up to my keister with these leaks."

The Washington leak is not only a way of government officials communicating with the press and the public, but it is also used by government servants as a method of communicating with each other.

Let me give you an example.

I received a call from a Treasury official last week who said, "You don't know where you got it, but the President plans to ask for some very high tax raises for '85 if we ever hope to get the budget under control."

"Why are you telling me?"

"I want the President to know about it."

"Why don't you tell him?"

"I'd rather he read it in The Washington Post than break it to him. I have my job to think of."

I printed the story, attributing it to a very high source in the Treasury.

Sure enough, I got a call from someone in the White House who said, "Can I talk to you off the record?"

"That's what I'm paid for," I told him.

"The Treasury is all wet about tax increases in 1985. The President has no intention of asking for them."

"Why doesn't the President tell Treasury himself?"

"He's not speaking to the Treasury Department because they're always bringing him bad news. If our denial is printed as a leak the Treasury will now what White House policy really is."

ART BUCHWALD

"I got you," I said. "I'll print the leak on Thursday."

Thursday morning I received a call from the White House from another administration official. "Where did you get the leak about the President being against taxes in '85?"

"From the White House."

"Well, the person here who gave you that story is all wet. The President hasn't made up his mind about taxes for '85 and he's keeping his options open. But if you quote me I'll deny it."

"Why don't you tell the guy who leaked it to me that he's giving out bum information?"

"I can't because he's against tax hikes for '85 and he's using the press to influence the President to reject them."

"And you're using us to get the President to go along with some tax hikes?"

"Maybe. I want Treasury to push for new taxes so I can get the President's feet out of concrete."

"Why don't you just call up the Treasury and tell them that?"

"It carries much more authority if it comes as a news leak to you."

"I'll get it in on Sunday," I promised him.

Sunday morning I got a call at home from my Treasury leaker. "You had two conflicting leaks last week from the White House about taxes for '85. The Secretary wants to know which one to believe."

"It's hard to say. Both leaks came from two of the highest sources on the President's staff."

"Well, how is the Secretary supposed to set U.S. monetary policy if your leaks are so contradictory?"

"Don't get mad at me. I just print the leaks as they come in. You people have to figure out which ones to believe and which ones are red herrings. The media can do just so much to communicate messages for you people. Isn't there any other way of finding out what the government is planning to do besides leaking to the press?"

"I wish there was. But if we transmitted policy through regular channels no one in Washington would act on it."

Republicans Spur Furore

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The furor surrounding President Reagan's still-unpublished budget is different this year. Almost all of it is coming from Republicans.

GOP lawmakers are demonstrating their concern about the economy and the 1984 elections by reacting critically to every twist and turn in the decisions and trial balloons that come floating out of the White House.

That is a role normally left to Democrats in a Republican administration. But this year, the Democrats are sitting serenely on the sidelines, waiting to use their increased strength to rearrange Reagan's budget after he presents it, not before. Reagan's bitterest foe in Congress, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has had virtually nothing to say — except to embrace the bipartisan rescue plan for Social Security that the president also supports.

Not so the Republicans. Most are frightened by the situation they are in, with deficits of $300 billion or more in 1987 unless taxes are increased or spending is cut, and the prospect that they will be held accountable in two years.

Some are angry that Reagan's solutions don't go far enough in some directions. Others are angry that they go too far in others.

All seem ready, willing and able to reject proposals from the man with whom they marched two years ago to smashing tax and spending victories.

Social Security is a good example.

The White House hailed the agreement with the Democrats as proof positive that Reagan is still capable of exercising strong leadership on a difficult problem.

But no sooner had the president embraced the compromise bailout plan than two Republican conservatives, Sens. William Armstrong of Colorado and William Archer of Texas, began organizing opposition. Armstrong is chairman of the Social Security subcommittee, and his and Archer's actions probably assure a major struggle as Reagan and the congressional leadership try to win passage for the plan. But at least Reagan has the leadership's backing on this one.

Not so on defense. Under pressure for months to reduce the deficit by trimming back on his defense buildup, Reagan finally did so earlier this month. He agreed to a cut of $8 billion — the same $8 billion he agreed to cut last year and then took back, incidentally.

But that seemed to satisfy few, if any, of the top Republicans in the Senate.

Sen. John Tower of Texas, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, acceded to "nominal cuts" but warned against the threat to national security if the defense budget becomes a target for deficit cutters.

But Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole of Kansas and Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico promptly let it be known $8 billion was not enough. All said defense would have to be cut deeper.

Next came taxes.

Reagan's aides put out the word he was considering conditional tax increases that would go into effect beginning in 1986 if the deficit hadn't declined below a certain level. That seemed a neat compromise for a man under pressure to reduce deficits yet determined to hold down taxes.

The reaction from two Republicans whose opinions matter was swift. And negative.

"I would not look favorably on a standby tax increase. ... I don't think Congress would look kindly on that," said Dole, whose Finance Committee drafts tax legislation.

Added Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., the top Republican on the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, "I do not support such a thing. Government should be a place of judgment, not automatic re-

Strength For Today

QUESTION THOSE CONVICTIONS

Most of us have some very strong convictions about certain matters — political, religious, social, economic. But how can we be sure that some of these convictions are not in reality prejudices?

One way to reveal the difference is to take some conviction about which we feel absolutely sure, imagine its opposite, and then ask if perchance that thing might be true. Such an exercise may promote doubt in some instances, but at the same time it should strengthen every right conviction which we have. And the doubt may well perform a useful function. Some false aspects of a right conviction will fall away, and a few convictions may be revealed as prejudices.

Some people think that broad-mindedness means thinking like everyone else and never criticizing. But true broad-mindedness consists in being willing to face the consequences of questioning the deep-seated convictions of our lives. — Elisha Douglass

Flying The Complicated Skies

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Flying today can be cheaper than ever, but it's also more complicated, and consumers have to learn the right questions to ask if they want to get the best deal for their money.

Deregulation has left airlines free to set their own fares and the conditions attached to those fares. The airlines also have more leeway to decide things like who to bump or what they will offer to passengers who are delayed. There are changes in the rules on bumping and baggage liability.

"You get more choices on how to fly," said Alan M. Pollock, director of the office of public affairs of the Civil Aeronautics Board. "But the consumer takes over more of the burden of having to know more about the system."

It is important to read the fine print on your airline ticket, and Pollock said there should be more of it than there used to be.

That's because the tariff filing system — under which each carrier filed a tariff with the CAB setting out the conditions of its fares — disappeared with the restrictions on pricing. Now, the airlines have to provide more information to the consumer directly and they're using tickets to do it.

"Read it. That is your contract," said Pollock, referring to the ticket. "Just because one airline does something one way doesn't mean they all do."

What happens, for example, if there is a delay and you are stranded away from home overnight? In the past, most airlines automatically put you up for the night and paid for meals. Today, many have cut back on the amenities.

What type of ticket are you buying? The discount fares have extra restrictions. And the number of seats available at the low rate may be sharply limited. You may have to trade convenience for money.

If you are traveling with children, ask whether there are special facilities for them. Can you board first? What about special meals?

The CAB is scheduled to go out of business on Jan. 1, 1985, and Congress has not decided which agency will take over its functions, including the administration of consumer rules.

Among those rules are the regulations covering bumping and baggage, and both have changed slightly.

When a flight is overbooked, an airline is still required to ask for volunteers who are willing to take a later flight in exchange for some compensation to be negotiated by the individual and the carrier. If it cannot get enough volunteers, it is allowed to bump passengers against their will.

Under the old rules, the airlines had to pay compensation to anyone who was bumped involuntarily. Under the new rules, no payment is required if the airline gets you to your destination within one hour of the time your original flight was scheduled to arrive. If you get to your destination within two hours (four hours for international flights), you are entitled to a payment equal to your one-way fare up to a maximum of $200. If you get to your destination later than that, you get double your one-way fare to a maximum of $400.

The new rule on baggage liability raises the amount you can collect from $750 to $1,000 per person. Pollock said the rule takes effect Feb. 22, although some airlines may already be operating under the higher limit. Remember: The liability limit is per person, not per piece of baggage. If your luggage is worth more than $1,000, buy extra insurance when you check in for your flight.

The CAB no longer requires airlines to guarantee that you will not be charged more for a flight once you have actually bought your ticket. But if the fare is NOT guaranteed, the airline must clearly notify the passenger, including the information in the fine print isn't good enough.

Pollock said the carriers generally will do their best to solve problems and handle complaints. "Most reputable airlines do not want to anger their revenue," he said.

If you can't get satisfaction from the airline, you may want to call the CAB's consumer affairs office. The telephone number is 202-673-6047.

Junior Achievement Trade Fair

The Junior Achievement business sponsored by Eaton Corporation won first place for the best decorated table at the third annual Greenville Junior Achievement Trade Fair held Saturday at Carolina East Mall.

Second place winner was the business sponsored by Empire Brush, Inc.

A poster contest held in conjunction with the Trade Fair was sponsored by Carolina East Mall. First place winner was Debbie Paxton (Eaton), second place winner was Thomas Taft (Procter and Gamble), and third place winner was Alton Brown (Burroughs Wellcome). The winners were presented with gift certificates redeemable at the Mall.

Junior Achievement is the nation's oldest youth economic education program. It teaches high school students the principles of the private enterprise system by helping them run their own miniature businesses.

According to Naomi Levy, public relations director for Junior Achievement, the purpose of the Trade Fair is to acquaint the community with Junior Achievement and give the students a chance to sell the products they have manufactured during the year.

"I would say sales went pretty well," said Levy.

Join Critics Of Recertification

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Protesters against the recertification of El Salvador's eligibility for U.S. military aid included more than 60 North Carolinians Sunday.

Harvey C. Jenkins Jr., a Fayetteville sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said he would march "to show my personal outrage and opposition against the Reagan administration and to show the people of Central America that they have our support."

Boyd, Deborah Paxton, Glenda Johnson, Lynn Boyd, and Alana Tinkham. The group, sponsored by Eaton Corporation, received a plaque.

"considering the rainy weather we experienced Saturday. We also had alot of parents inquire as to how their children can become involved with Junior Achievement. I think that was one of the most successful outcomes of the Trade Fair".

Losing Home

BERNARDS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Valentine's Day will be a "bummer" for William and Margaret Kienast: their home will be sold at auction nine days before their quintuplets turn 13.

Their six-bedroom home will be sold Feb. 14 because of a foreclosure by Crestmont Federal Savings & Loan Association, which holds an $84,303 mortgage on the property.

"I think it's a bummer to sell out from under us," Mrs. Kienast said. "I knew we owed them money, but I didn't know they were going to do this."

The Kienasts have failed to make a mortgage payment in four years, according to James Baumgartner, executive vice president of the bank.

states in the race to lure industry here. And, with those states which refused to along with the federal schedule, North Carolina has an advantage.

Hunt's budget office doesn't buy Adams' figures. According to Jim Piner, assistant state budget officer, "It's not the kind of thing you can really prove." An estimate of the cost to the state is highly elusive, he says, and is just as likely to be $2 to $5 million as $11 million.

Adams promises fireworks on the depreciation schedule very soon. And, if the court rules in favor of the taxpayers' group, he says, businesses which used the new schedule will most likely have to refund their savings to the state.

WAVERLY, Ohio (AP) — William Gullion has spent $20,000 for treatments in the Soviet Union of his deteriorating eye condition. Now, he says he'll go to Japan if necessary for medication if he can't get it at home.

Gullion, 59, who returned from the Soviet Union on Saturday night, said doctors there now believe a Japanese eye medication could improve his eyesight. The medication, katalin, may not be available in the United States.

"Doctors over there think these special eyedrops can help," said the retired furniture store owner. "I don't know if I can get it here, but if I can't, I'll do whatever it takes to get it."

Gullion said American doctors know of no cure for his eye ailment — retinitis pigmentosa — a degenerative disease of the eye that first hits peripheral and night vision and usually leads to blindness.

The treatments have not improved his sight, he said, but they have prevented further degeneration.

"I sincerely believe the treatment has aided me in keeping some of my vision," Gullion said.

over a two-week period. He said he will continue his annual trips to Moscow if the Japanese treatment doesn't work.

"If I didn't think the treatments would do any good, I wouldn't be spending the money," he said.

Gullion is one of three Americans treated recently in Moscow for the disease. The others are Todd Cantrell, 13, of Dalton, Ga., and Roger Buchanan, 27, of Canton, N.C.

sponse."

The immediate effect of the Republican reaction is to further the impression of a president whose leadership is under strong attack, something Reagan seemed to acknowledge at a brief news conference last week.

"I have to say you must be doing something right when you're getting rocks thrown at you from both sides," he said with a smile.

Except that on the budget, at least, the rocks are coming from one side — the Republican side.

The Forecast For Tuesday, January 25

Low Temperatures

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts mild weather today for the West Coast and across most of the South. Cold weather is expected for the northern Plains to New England. Snow is due in the northern Plains and part of the Northeast; showers in the Midwest. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Clearing skies and warming temperatures today helped Duke Power Co. workers restore service to Western North Carolina homes after thousands lost power in the ice storms that ravaged the state over the weekend.

"The weather has moderated a little bit and that's allowed us to catch up," said Duke spokesman Alex Coffin. "We've got about 1,100 in the field and several in the office working." He said power would be returned to most homes later today.

Coffin said about 1,300 residents in North Wilkesboro and 1,000 in Shelby were without power Sunday night. About 1,200 homes in Rutherfordton had their power restored, he said.

Cloudy and dreary across most of the state Sunday, most of the rains were confined to the east with high temperatures generally in the 40s and 50s.

But across the northern Piedmont west into the northern mountains afternoon readings failed to climb out of the 30s, while temperatures on the Outer Banks reached the 60s.

The National Weather Service said a high pressure along the Gulf coast states will dominate the weather scene across North Carolina into Tuesday, bringing partly cloudy skies and a chance for some snow flurries to the northern mountains tonight.

Gov. Hunt Will Address State

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Changes in laws governing juvenile offenders and drunken drivers will be the main topics of Gov. Jim Hunt's statewide television address tonight from the Governor's Mansion.

Hunt spokesman Gary Pearce said the governor would explain the drunken driving problem and a lengthy crime package before the General Assembly aimed at getting drunken drivers off the road in the 7:30 p.m. speech.

The 30-minute speech, broadcast by University of North Carolina television crews, will be carried live on most television and many radio stations.

Crime Control and Public Safety Secretary Heman Clark said he expects the governor to talk about juvenile criminals as well as adult convicts.

"We want to find a way to deal with the tough kid," Clark said. "He has been laughing at the whole system."

The Governor's Crime Commission has recommended giving judges the choice of ordering a specific length of sentence to be served by juveniles in training school. Current laws require an indeterminate sentence in training school or trial as an adult with a possible prison sentence.

For adults, the Commission recommends giving judges discretion to release people charged with committing crimes like rape, arson or heroin trafficking while free on bond. Hunt is expected to endorse this or stiffer measures.

Hunt also is expected to endorse a commission recommendation to provide that court clerks pay restitution to victims before disbursing money for attorneys' fees and other items. Currently money collected in a case goes to other things first, sometimes leaving less money for restitution.

The drunken driving bill would raise the drinking age from 18 to 19, consolidate existing drunken driving laws into one driving while impaired law and make tavern owners civilly liable for selling alcohol to underage or drunken customers who later cause an accident because of the alcohol they consumed in the tavern.

Other parts of the bill would allow magistrates to hold drunken drivers up to 24 hours or until someone picks them up, extend the length of time a driver's license is suspended for refusing to take a Breathalyzer test and allow an immediate 10-day revocation of a driver's license for having a blood alcohol content of more than .10 percent.

The House and Senate judiciary committees working on the bill held a public hearing last week and continue work on the proposal this week. Most of the speakers at the hearing spoke in support of the package but others, including representatives of North Carolina Businesses for Responsible ABC Laws, raised questions about it.

Pearce said the governor wanted to use the time tonight to answer some of those questions.

Sheriffs, chiefs of police and district attorneys from across the state have been invited to hear Hunt's crime message to the General Assembly to meet for a reception at the Governor's Mansion later.

Hunt is expected to review the accomplishments of his administration, talk more about drunken driving and make a few other recommendations.

IRS To Focus On Drug Dealers, Major Crime

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service plans to resume undercover operations in major tax cheating investigations, especially involving drug dealers, the leader of a special intelligence unit says.

"We intend to tax the profitability of narcotics trafficking," said Richard C. Wassenaar, the new head of the Criminal Investigation Division. "Billions of dollars are generated from it, and large amounts are moved, or laundered, through banks in (Caribbean) tax haven countries."

But Wassenaar also said in a Washington interview that appeared in today's Los Angeles Times that the civil rights of citizens will not be violated.

The IRS came under intense criticism in 1975 when Congress learned that some agents had spied on the sex and drinking habits of prominent Miami residents under a secret operation that was code-named Leprechaun.

Later, when IRS agents had secretly photographed records from a Bahama banker's briefcase, then-IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander suspended a major investigation because the agents had overstepped their bounds.

"We will not be collecting and storing data on any taxpayers and holding onto that information for any period of time," Wassenaar said. "We will not be a repository of information on any taxpayer."

"I just don't think it's right for IRS or most other federal law enforcement agencies to collect large data bases relative to the citizens of this country. We only intend to receive information that is current and involves tax evasion. We will keep nothing that is unnecessary or irrelevant."

In an effort to crack down on major illegal tax shelter schemes or narcotics violations, among other crimes, he said, investigators will be encouraged to report what they find to Andy Flodin, the man Wassenaar put in charge of a central intelligence-gathering office.

The reporting will alert the IRS to suspects who may be operating in another region of the country and the pooling of information might lead to more widespread prosecutions, Wassenaar said.

"Before, we might be chopping off just one tentacle of the octopus," he said. "Now we can get a picture of the whole creature and take appropriate action at an early date."

Farm Conference

Farmers worried about the future of agriculture will want to attend a farm conference in Raleigh February 8.

The conference is the result of studies by a task force from the Agricultural Extension Service of North Carolina State University. During the session, the task force will offer alternatives for improving farming efficiency.

The conference will be held at McKimmon Center beginning at 8 p.m. and will feature speakers from the fields of horticulture, crop science, animal science, poultry science and forest resources.

The main subject of the conference will be expanding the North Carolina farm income base and a special feature will be a talk by Dr. W.D. Toussaint, professor of economics and business in the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at NCSU. Dr. Toussaint will touch on important milestones in the history of farming.

Additional information about the conference and reservation forms can be obtained by contacting your county extension agents at 752-2934.

Sees A Year Of Recovery

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Consumer purchasing power will increase and the employment outlook should brighten in 1983 — in short, recovery is on its way, a North Carolina State University economist said.

Dr. Michael L. Walden, a consumer economist with the Agricultural Extension Service of NCSU, said consumer interest rates, such as those paid on home mortgages, should continue to decline in 1983 as long as the Federal Reserve does not rapidly increase the nation's money supply.

Walden said the nation has taken some bitter medicine to cure inflation, but that medicine has worked.

"A recession can be viewed as the short-run cost to reducing inflation," he said. "Recession is painful, particularly for the unemployed. But future improvement in the economy will more than compensate the nation overall for the pain resulting from the recession."

Walden said the only way inflation can be brought under control is to slow down the growth in the money supply and bring it into balance with economic growth.

A reduction in monetary growth leads to higher interest rates and a corresponding slowdown in the economy, or recession.

"Slower monetary growth eventually results in lower inflation and lower interest rates," Walden said. "These things also have occurred in 1982. Lower interest rates will stimulate an economic recovery."

New Officers Are Introduced

New officers of the Phoenix organization were introduced at the first meeting of the year held recently at the Pre-release and After Care Center in Greenville.

New officers include Jayne Silliman, president; Rufus Huggins, vice-president; Russell J. Hemby, treasurer; Kay Sutton, secretary; and Evonne D. Pearce, assistant secretary.

During the meeting, organization members voted to work on community attitude toward crime and working with exoffenders and their families as projects for the year. Setting up a clearing house of volunteer information to link volunteers to programs was also set as a goal for 1983.

The next meeting will be held at 12 p.m. Feb. 10 at the Western Steer on 10th Street. The speaker will be Associate Professor Robert Webber from the ECU Department of Social Work and Corrections. He will discuss the public's concept of crime.

The Phoenix Organization is dedicated to the community's involvement in criminal justice and mobilizing organizations and individuals to coordinate activities furthering understanding of the criminal system.

For more information, contact Russell Hemby at 757-3153 or Jayne Silliman at 756-9737.

Views On Dental Health

FLUORIDE TOOTH PASTE

If you watch television, you've probably seen the commercials selling fluoride toothpaste ("Mommy, Mommy, my group had fewer cavities!"). The best part about these commercials is that, hopefully, they may induce children to brush their teeth. It's the brushing, flossing and rinsing after eating that is the most effective preventer of tooth decay and gum disease. Toothpaste can help, but it's only a part of effective oral hygiene.

The mere presence of fluoride in a toothpaste does not give it therapeutic qualities. There are, however, several brands of toothpaste on the market which contain fluoride in an effective combination with other ingredients. They definitely possess therapeutic value and have been recommended by the American Dental Association's Council on Dental Therapeutics.

It should be emphasized, so there is no misunderstanding, that fluoride toothpastes are not a substitute for the combination of fluoridation of community drinking water and professional fluoride treatment, which have been shown to reduce dental decay by as much as 65 percent.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Promise 'Special Care' On Payment-In-Kind Plan

Farm Scene

By MIRIAM NANCE

Agricultural Extension Agent

Baby pig disease is a problem facing all swine producers. Rota virus is a virus that is present in the body of all sows. Antibodies are found in the sows body and colostrum. Under normal conditions enough antibodies are present to cut the virus. The next question may be "Why do some pigs get rota virus?"

There are four major reasons why pigs succumb to the virus. Lower milk production by the sow places stress on the baby pig. Sows should be fed for maximum production — the larger the litter the more nutrition is necessary.

Mastitis, milk fever or any other disease following farrowing lowers the pigs resistance to virus infection. The farrowing house environment plays an important role in virus infection. Filth or wet houses create a good environment for any disease.

Producers should check the heat and ventilation in the farrowing house. Constant monitoring of the environment often prevents rota virus infection. Management of the farrowing house is of utmost importance in preventing any disease. An all-in-all-out system will create the best surroundings for baby pigs.

For further information concerning baby pig diseases or livestock-related questions contact Miriam Nance, 752-2934.

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the most part, there has been an initial acceptance of the administration's payment-in-kind program to reduce crop surpluses — so long as it doesn't go too far and hurt local businesses.

But the Agriculture Department says special care will be taken so that the adverse impact of farmers planting smaller acres for the 1983 harvest will be held to a minimum.

The fear is that if too many farmers don't plant crops — or reduce them sharply — they won't need to buy supplies such as seed, fertilizer and equipment.

Nationally, the problem is not expected to be all that great. The PIK program, as it's called, will give farmers surplus commodities in return for reducing their acreages of designated crops.

The crops eligible for PIK this year are wheat, corn, sorghum, upland cotton and rice.

To be eligible for PIK, a farmer will have to participate in the government's regular 1983 acreage reduction program — which calls for 20 percent acreage cutbacks as a condition for getting price supports and related benefits.

The PIK reduction could add 10 to 30 percent of a farmer's cropland to the idled acreage. In some cases, under a bidding arrangement, a producer's entire farm could be taken from crop production.

A decision not to take part in PIK, however, will not penalize a farmer so far as his price support eligibility is concerned.

When the administration announced the PIK program on Jan. 11, officials said it would result in about 23 million acres taken from crop production this year. That would be in addition to an estimated 8.5 million acres idled under the regular acreage-reduction program — making a total of more than 31 million acres.

The Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute, which is headquartered in Chicago, Ill., has been among the agribusiness interests which has expressed concern about PIK's impact.

Emmett Barker, president of the industry group, wrote Agriculture Secretary John R. Block about the effects of PIK if there is "an unprecedented sign-up by farmers."

Barker suggested that this could lead to more than 35 percent of the acreage being taken from production in some counties and that this "would be undesirable." He urged Block to put brakes on the program to keep the idled land at less than 35 percent.

The PIK program, however, has a 50 percent limit on the amount of acreage in a single county's crop base which can be taken out of production.

If the total land taken from production under the 1983 program — including the regular acreage reduction and PIK — is held to around 30 million acres or so nationally, it would be only a fraction of the land idled under federal programs in many of the past years.

According to USDA records, there are about 490 million acres of cropland in the United States, although it has varied over the years.

Since 1954, land idled under various federal programs has ranged up to 64.7 million acres in 1962, with 40-60 million acres taken from production in most years of the 1960s and early 1970s.

The USDA records show that in 1962 farmers had a national crop base of 450 million acres. They actually planted crops on 299.9 million acres. They had 38.9 million acres idled under commodity programs and 25.8 million acres under "conservation reserve" programs — a total of 64.7 million acres diverted from production.

Nearly all of the remainder was cropland in fallow, left idle by farmers as part of their normal production operation.

A decade later, the 1972 figures showed that 427 million acres were in cropland, with 307 million acres planted to crops. An additional 61.5 million acres were idled under various government programs, and fallowed land accounted for 58.5 million acres.

Under the 1972 feed grains program alone, farmers idled 36.5 million acres, followed by wheat, 20.3 million; and cotton, 1.9 million. Conservation programs accounted for the remainder of the idled land.

Beginning in 1972, spurred by huge sales to the Soviet Union, grain exports began an unprecedented surge. The total value of U.S. farm exports would increase annually before turning down a decade later.

Consequently, annual programs to control crop acreages for the most part declined or were eliminated altogether until 1978 and 1979, when 18.2 million and 13 million acres, respectively, were taken from production.

In 1977, U.S. cropland had increased to 470.7 million acres. Farmers planted 345.2 million acres to crops that year, with only one million acres set aside under long-term contracts. Fallow and minor crops accounted for 124.5 million acres.

Looking at the effects of idling land under the PIK program in 1983, the USDA says the cutback will probably reduce the total use of fertilizer, seed and fuel slightly. Total expenditures, according to analysts, may decline 3 to 4 percent from levels expected without the PIK program.

But that is on a national scale. The effect locally of taking large acreages from production will depend, to a large degree, on how the program is administered at the state and county level.

Waterways Permits Issued

WILMINGTON — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in December, issued a number of permits for work near or in waterways after determining there would be no adverse impact to the environment.

Included in the permits were ones to: Ronald Sewell, director of engineering/inspections for the City of Greenville, to place fill material below the ordinary high water of the Tar River; the town manager of Belhaven, to construct, repair and backfill a bulkhead, construct a launching pier, and maintain a boat access area on Pantego Creek and Wynne's Gut at public boat ramp facilities at Belhaven; and one to John M. Doughty of Weyerhaeuser Real Estate, New Bern, to construct marina facilities on Broad Creek near Washington.

Other permits issued included: one to Texasgulf Chemicals Company, Aurora, authorizing reconstruction of a bulkhead at the confluence of the Pamlico River in Bath Creek, which was built in 1973; and one to J. Edward Whitley of Wilson, extending the completion date from December 20, 1982 to June 30, 1983, for the construction of a pier, boat ramp, two breakwater structures and bulkheading with backfill on the Pamlico River near Bath.

Certification Class Set

A certification class for private applicators will be held Wednesday from 1:45-3:30 p.m. in room 201 of the Pitt County Office Building.

Private applicator certification enables the license holder to purchase restricted use pesticides. In addition, the individual can then use these pesticides or directly supervise workers applying the pesticides.

Farmers, gardeners and others who need to apply restricted use pesticides on a non-commercial basis are eligible to attend this session at no charge.

"PERDUE TAKES A CHICKEN SERIOUSLY"

"As Controller of the Roanoke Electric Co-Op, I've invested a lot of our members money over the years. And I've learned that when you make an investment of any kind, you should check it out. And believe me, I checked out Perdue very carefully before building my broiler house. I called banks and exchange clubs in both Maryland and North Carolina, toured Perdue's facilities, talked to growers. I thoroughly researched the company and every report that I got was very favorable.

Perdue understands the importance of keeping up with technology. I don't think they're the only ones who do, but they are certainly more progressive than most poultry companies. So when they suggest that we growers make an improvement, you can bet it's going to pay off for us. After all, any company that's been in the business for 62 years and has made a profit every year must know what they're doing.

Besides my position with the electric co-op and my Perdue house, I also grow corn, tobacco and peanuts. And the best crop I have is my Perdue chickens. For almost eight years I've enjoyed a good steady income from my broiler house. And with uncertainties in other commodities and now crop farming, I would recommend Perdue as a basic steady income for anybody who wants to remain in a rural area and remain in farming. I know I'll spend a pleasant retirement in the country, thanks to my Perdue chickens."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing — chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarkets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a pounding today following word that OPEC oil ministers had ended an emergency meeting without settling their pricing disputes.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials plunged 29.52 points to 1,023.45 by noon. The average's biggest daily drop in recent times was a 36.33-point loss last Oct. 25.

Declines outnumbered advances by more than 15 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Among actively traded energy issues, Schlumberger fell 3 1/4 to 47; Halliburton 2 1/4 to 35 1/2; Union Oil of California 2 1/4 to 31; Mobil 1 1/2 to 25 1/4, and Exxon 3/4 to 30.

Banking issues generally showed smaller losses. Citicorp dropped 1 1/4 to 33 1/4; Chase Manhattan 1 to 47 1/2, and BankAmerica 1/4 to 19 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index tumbled 2.55 to 80.63. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 14.45 to 351.11.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 44.55 million shares at noon, against 35.82 million at the same point Friday.

Priority Given Confidentiality

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — To preserve teen-agers' confidentiality, Oregon's Health Division said it will forgo federal funds and use state money to provide birth control services to girls under 18.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services recently announced regulations requiring parents to be notified if minor children receive certain federally financed family planning services.

Separating state from federal money will be "an accountant's nightmare," Health Division Administrator Kristine Gebbie said Saturday, but she said confidentiality is more important.

Town Approves VEPCO Suit

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — The town board of Kill Devil Hills has voted to take legal action against Virginia Electric & Power Co. to halt the power company from putting up 85-foot-high power poles along Albemarle Sound.

Veeco said it needs the 115,000-volt transmission line to meet the need for increased power in Dare County.

The town board had asked Veeco to move the poles away from the sound for aesthetic and safety reasons, but Veeco officials said that would be too costly and the delay could lead to brownouts in some areas of the county this summer.

High Condos Opposed By Mountain Dwellers

BANNER ELK, N.C. (AP) — Developers of a Little Sugar Mountain condominium chose its location because of the view, but the view it offers residents of the surrounding area has led to attempts to outlaw such developments.

"It's just tragic that our law permits people to come in here and scalp those mountains like this. It just breaks my heart," said state Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell.

Kincaid, whose district includes Avery County and the 10-story, $22 million condominium, said he hopes the General Assembly will pass a "ridge law" that would limit the height buildings could rise above mountain ridges. Such legislation would limit building heights to no more than three stories above surrounding ridges.

Weather Grounded Parachuting Pigs

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Low clouds kept three parachuting pigs named Ralph, Betty and Mabel grounded and put a damper on "The Great American Pig Out" festival, its promoter said.

"It's all off," Walter Sill of Nashville, Tenn., promoter of the event, said Sunday. "This is the first time we've ever had weather problems. We've had SPCA problems, but never weather problems."

As part of the festival, the three pigs — attired in goggles and hats — were to drop into the Central Florida Fairgrounds from an altitude of 4,000 feet while strapped to three conventional parachutists.

But Sill said the jump was canceled because of the cloud cover. The Federal Aviation Administration requires a cloud cover of at least 2,000 feet for human, or porcine, skydivers. The clouds were at 900 feet.

In a "Pig Out" last week in St. Petersburg, the parachuting pigs were omitted from the act after officials of the Pinellas County chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals objected. The skydivers jumped by themselves.

The Florida Federation of Humane Societies on Saturday unanimously passed a resolution in Orlando deploring "the needless exploitation of animals for public amusement."

The group said the jump could expose the baby hogs to "physical injuries or unjustified harassment, fear or stress."

Fire Blacked Out State Dept.

WASHINGTON (AP) Several State Department offices were evacuated and parts of the building temporarily blacked out this morning after a basement transformer caught fire.

District of Columbia authorities said the fire, which was quickly brought under control with the use of fire extinguishers, caused an estimated $50,000 in damage.

No injuries were reported. City fire department Battalion Chief Charles Culver said the fire broke out in an electrical panel about 8:30 a.m. and was extinguished within 25 minutes.

ECU Goes For Third Straight Vs. UNC-W

East Carolina University's Pirates go on the road tonight to try and accomplish something they haven't been able to do all season — win three games in a row.

East Carolina will be in Wilmington tonight to face the UNC-W Seahawks in a game scheduled for approximately 8:30 p.m. UNC-W is hosting a high school game between Wilmington's Hoggard and New Hanover High Schools, starting at 7 p.m. in Trask Coliseum.

Four times this year, counting the current streak, the Pirates have put together two back-to-back wins. But each time they've gone for a third, they've been brought up short. However, if there is any pattern to the Pirate year, a victory should be forthcoming. ECU, 8-8, has — after its opening game loss — won two, lost two, won two, lost two, won two, lost three, and now won two again.

The latest Pirate victory was a 73-55 win over Campbell University on Saturday night. That game brought to an end the current home stand, and ECU will not be back in Minges Coliseum until Saturday, Feb. 5, when they host George Mason in an ECAC-South game. Following to-night's contest with Wilmington, they travel to Navy for a league game on Saturday, then to UNC-Charlotte next Monday.

Wilmington comes into the game with a 7-9 record, having lost to A&T in their last outing.

Washington native Shawn Williams, a 6-4 senior guard, leads the Wilmington scoring with a 16.4 average, while 6-0 junior guard Tony Anderson is

Dolphins Blank New York, Face 'Skins In Super Bowl

MIAMI (AP) — It's been nearly six months since Miami whipped the Washington Redskins in a "meaningless" National Football League preseason game, and none of the Dolphins are looking back.

The two teams will meet in Super Bowl XVII next Sunday, and that's all that matters now.

"What happened back then doesn't mean anything. It's meaningless at this stage," linebacker A.J. Duhe said Sunday after the Dolphins stopped the New York Jets 14-0 to win the American Conference championship and a Super Bowl berth.

"This time, everything will be on the line," added Duhe, who intercepted three Richard Todd passes and returned one of them 35 yards for a touchdown to key the victory. "This time, it's for what we've all dreamed of."

The Dolphins and Redskins will tangle for the NFL crown in Pasadena, Calif., 169 days after Miami launched the exhibition season with a 24-7 pounding of the NFC champions.

"We're packing our bags, going to Pasadena," said Duhe. "Redskins, we're going to meet you there on the 50 (yard-line) and I hope it's a helluva game and we're going to be the world champions — hopefully."

The trip to the title game is the first for Miami since Coach Don Shula's team defeated Minnesota 24-7 in Super Bowl VIII. Washington's last appearance was in Super Bowl VII, when the Redskins, then coached by George Allen, dropped a 14-7 decision to the Dolphins.

"We're the Rodney Dangerfield of the AFC and they are the Rodney Dangerfield of the NFC," said Shula, whose team limited San Diego to only 247 total yards in the AFC semifinals. "Today was the greatest day, though. The defense was just overwhelming."

Miami limited the Jets to 139 total yards — lowest in an AFC title game since Pittsburgh held Houston to 142 in 1978 — and literally stopped Freeman McNeil, the NFL's rushing king, in his tracks.

McNeil, clearly bothered by the soggy turf, gained just 46 yards on 17 carries after gaining 202 in a first-round playoff victory over Cincinnati and 101 in the Jets' semifinal triumph over the Los Angeles Raiders.

Todd, meanwhile, completed only 15 of 37 passes for 103 yards. He was sacked four times for losses totaling 26 yards.

"I've got two things to say," said Todd. "They played better than us. We did not play

It's Official — Borg To Retire

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Bjorn Borg, who reached the top of the tennis world at age 23 and dominated Wimbledon as nobody ever has, says the game is too much work and too little fun for him to go on playing in world-class competition.

So, Borg says, he's retiring at age 26 after ten years on the tour in which he earned an estimated $75 million in prize money and endorsements.

Borg as he left his hotel en route to the airport Monday confirmed the retirement reports that had been appearing in recent days, and added, "My last tournament will be in Monte Carlo," at a tournament which begins March 28 and runs through April 3.

He said he would continue his involvement in the game, a remark Lennart Bergelin, who discovered Borg at 14 in a junior tournament in Sweden and coached him to the heights, explained meant that the Swedish star would play some exhibition matches. He is scheduled to play in the Suntory Tennis exhibition April 9-10 in Tokyo.

Borg made it clear, though, that he would not be playing again at Wimbledon or in the U.S. Open.

The reason was explained in a report in Kvalsposten, a Malmö, Sweden tabloid by Arne Reimer, a Swedish reporter close to Borg.

Reimer quoted Borg as saying: "I haven't got the right motivation. I can't give 100 percent and if I can't do that, it wouldn't be fair to myself to go on. Tennis has to be fun if you want to get to the top and I don't feel that way any more."

Borg told Reimer that the year off had made him realize "how nice and fun life can be even without tennis, how there are so many other life values."

"But that," he added, "was not good for my tennis."

Borg's announcement "half-surprised" Jimmy Connors, the reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion. "I thought he was working harder at his game and trying to come back and start playing some good tennis again," said Connors at the Volvo Masters in New York.

For Redskins, Future Is Now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Gibbs was just hoping to "build and work toward the future" when he took over a losing Washington Redskins team in 1981.

But for the Redskins, the future is now — once again.

While Gibbs never promised it, as George Allen did so boldly when he was the Washington coach, and while Gibbs may have used different means, the end is the same: Washington is in the Super Bowl.

And the present future bears no small similarity to the past future.

Gibbs, like Allen, turned around a losing team in one year and went to the Super Bowl the next. Even the opponents are the same — the Dallas Cowboys to get to the Super Bowl, the Miami Dolphins in it.

"It'll be a replay of 11 years ago and the game is at L.A., the same place we played," Allen said Sunday from his home in Redskins...

Chicago, quickly adding that he wasn't predicting the result will be the same.

Allen's team lost Super Bowl VII, 14-7, just down the freeway from Pasadena, where Super Bowl XVII will be played Sunday.

Allen's Redskins won the NFC championship by beating the Cowboys 26-3 at Washington's Robert F. Kennedy Stadium. Gibbs' Redskins won it Saturday by beating the Cowboys 31-17 at RFK.

Allen watched the first one on the sidelines, the second one on television.

"I don't think there's much doubt that the better team won," Allen said. "They played better on offense and defense. But I think the big difference was their special teams. They scored two touchdowns. The Redskins were clearly the superior team."

"They played with a lot more emotion than Dallas. It reminded me of when we beat Dallas 26-3 and held them to about 170 yards in total offense."

The Cowboys had exactly twice that much in total offense Saturday.

Gibbs said before the game that playing at RFK was worth five points to the Redskins, an advantage Allen traced to his years as coach.

"It means a lot to play at RFK Stadium," Allen said. "We only lost about 10 games there in seven years and won 40 and tied one. I don't know what it was before 1971, but I bet they didn't win 50 percent."

Allen, now coach of the United States Football League's Chicago Blitz, compiled a 67-30-1 record in seven winning seasons at Washington, five ending in the playoffs. He was fired in 1978 when club president Edward Bennett Williams said the team was being paralyzed by the uncertainty of whether Allen would sign a new contract or leave to coach the Los Angeles Rams for a second time.

In 1970, the year before Allen took over, the Redskins were 6-10; in 1971, they were 9-5-1.

In 1980, the year before Gibbs took over, the Redskins were 6-10; in 1981, they were 8-8.

The current Redskins, who have won 11 of 12 games this season and 19 of 23 since an 0-5 start last season, are a mixture of the Allen era and the Gibbs era.

"There are quite a few players there that I brought in," Allen said. "I sent Theismann a congratulatory wire — to Joe and his teammates. Of course, I brought in Theismann, John Riggins, Dave Butz, Mark Moseley, Joe Lavender and quite a few others."

Theismann is having his finest season as the Redskins' quarterback. Riggins set an NFL record Saturday with his third straight 100-yard playoff game, a 140-yard effort that wrecked the Cowboys. Moseley kicked a record 23 straight field goals over the past two years and finished the 1982 regular season with 20 of 21, a league record for accuracy. Butz is an anchor on the defensive line and Lavender a reserve cornerback.

Starting safety Mark Murphy, reserve running back Clarence Harmon and reserve defensive tackle Perry Brooks also are left over from the Allen years. Tackle George Starke is the only holdover from the first Super Bowl team, although he was injured that year.

All of them came to the Redskins either by trade or free agency as part of Allen's "the future is now" approach that stripped the team of top-line draft choices.

Beyond them now are a new breed of Redskins — from rookies to veterans no other team wanted — brought in by Gibbs and Bobby Beathard, who replaced Allen as general manager.

Fan Takes Swing At White

DALLAS (AP) — Police in Washington, D.C., say that Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White could press charges against a Redskin fan who took a swing at him in the waning moments of Dallas' bitter 31-17 trouncing.

But that could do little to erase some sad memories of the championship game Saturday which dashed the Cowboys' hope of representing the National Conference in Super Bowl XVII.

For White, who on Saturday suffered his third straight loss in an NFC title game as starting quarterback, and Coach Tom Landry the game had its own unique disappointments.

"Man, I was really disappointed," Tom Landry said. "I was really hoping he (White) could have a good game. And the fact he couldn't play was even worse..."

White suffered a concussion in the game before the half in a jarring sack by Dexter Manley. And White was attacked off the playing field as well as on.

A Washington policeman said he witnessed the Redskin fan's attack on White at RFK Stadium. The attack occurred during the chaos of the last 12 seconds of the NFC championship contest, after Joe Theismann went to one knee on a fourth-down play with 12 seconds left and ran off the field with the ball.

Afterward, most players then went to their locker rooms and fans began streaming out of the stands. The attack injected a

Little Geography Helps Fergus Win Classic In Playoff

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A little knowledge of geography helped Keith Fergus to his dramatic victory in the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

He came to the 18th hole of the day Sunday, the 90th of this five-day marathon, needing a birdie to tie Rex Caldwell and force a sudden death playoff.

He faced a 20-foot make-or-break putt, with the ball resting in desert sunshine and the hole in a shadow.

"It's sometimes pretty hard to read the putt when you're going from sunshine to shadow," observed Lee Trevino, making his debut as a television commentator.

Fergus had no trouble at all.

"They say that everything here breaks toward Indio (a nearby town). I know where Indio is. I just read that into it," Fergus said.

"I'd been putting pretty good all day. I just wanted to make sure I put a good stroke on it."

He did. The ball broke left to right into the cup, finishing off Fergus' third consecutive round of 7-under-par 65, lifting him into a tie for the top spot and setting up the playoff that was something of an anticlimax.

Caldwell, who had come from two shots back with three to play, had taken the lead and seemed to have his first professional victory in his pocket, was a picture of dejection when Fergus' ball found the hole on the 18th. His face was drawn, his features tight. He dropped his head. His shoulders slumped.

"We were going in different directions," Fergus said. "I was excited, happy. I had to get myself calmed down before the playoff. And Rex, well, that putt took the wind out of him. While I was trying to calm down, he had to try to get himself pumped up again."

And he didn't quite make it. On the playoff hole, the par-3 15th, Caldwell hit first and sent his shot so far to the right that, in effect, it was all over then. He had to play his second stroke left-handed with a putter from under a tree. He got it on the fringe and then missed a putt, his third shot. He marked the ball and watched in helpless dejection as Fergus calmly two-putted for a routine par that won it.

Fergus' third career victory — one a year starting with his Memorial triumph in 1981 — was worth $67,500 from the total purse of $375,000 and put him in the No. 2 money-winning spot for the young season at $81,300.

Caldwell, a breezy, chipper character who has yet to win in nine years of PGA Tour activity, also had a closing 65 and, like Fergus, finished 90 holes at 335, 25 shots under par and matching the tournament record. He won $40,500.

Masters champ Craig Stadler was a distant third at 339 after a closing 69. Chip Beck, with a 68, and John Fought, with a 71, followed at 340. Doug Tewell was next at 342.

Ray Floyd, who briefly shared the lead when he birdied the third hole, slipped to a 73 and was tied at 343 with Tze-Chung Chen.

It's hard to imagine an insured money market account
more convenient than this.

Unless it's this.

BB&T's new Money Rate Savings Account has just about everything you want in an investment. To begin with, it pays market rates. But unlike traditional money market funds, it's insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for up to $100,000. To top it all off, it's convenient. You can withdraw your money anytime, without penalty, at any BB&T office or 24-hour teller machine. What could be more convenient than that?

BB&T's new Money Rate Checking Account also pays market rates, is insured and lets you make withdrawals any time. But with this account, you can also write checks whenever you want. How do you decide which account is right for you? Well, a lot of investors keep their checking and savings money separate. So, like them, you might want both. And you can open both with minimum deposits of $2500 each at any BB&T office. What could be more convenient than that?

READY TO ACT — Estelle Winwood, whose 85-year acting career spans the era of George Bernard Shaw to television's "Quincy", turns 100 today, and she says she's still ready to accept a good role. Despite a hearing impairment and a hip injury, she learns her lines well, a companion said. "Do I still act?" Ms. Winwood asked. "I think I do. If I get an offer I'll take it." (AP Laserphoto)

PBS Offering Spicy New Miniseries

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A spicy new miniseries is coming to public television tonight, brimming with incest, adultery, murder, suicide and more dirty dealing than J.R. Ewing ever dreamed of.

In the first episode, one character renounces love to build a vast fortune, only to have it all stolen. In the final installment, the hero suffers a bout of drug-induced amnesia and kidnaps his own wife so his best friend can marry her.

Sounds like the stuff of soap opera, but this is opera of a different kind. It's Richard Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelung," the four-part, 17-hour-long musical drama to end all musical drama that plunges viewers into a legendary world of Rhinemaidens, dwarfs, giants, dragons and gods.

And it's reaching television for the first time in an extraordinary production that is likely to win new converts to the high priest of German romanticism, as well as please those who already worship at his shrine.

The first and shortest of the operas, "Das Rheingold," will be broadcast tonight.

Much of the credit for the high quality of the series belongs to director Patrice Chereau, a young French genius who had never even seen the Ring cycle when he was invited to stage the 100th anniversary production at Bayreuth, the opera house in West Germany that Wagner built.

Chereau has stripped away most of the fat-soprano-in-a-helmet tradition and set the action in Wagner's own lifetime, turning it into a commentary on the Industrial Revolution.

"I don't know anything about the gods and the cosmos or the beginning of the world," Chereau has said. "I'm interested in staging human life, not Wagner's idea of grandeur."

The giants and dragon are still around, but they are surrounded by modern trappings. Wotan, Fricka and their fellow gods are decked out in Victorian costume — in fact Wotan, in a silk dressing gown, looks suspiciously like the composer himself.

The Rhinemaidens are prostitutes who ply their trade atop a giant hydroelectric dam. Alberich, the dwarf who steals their gold and turns it into the coveted magic ring that bestows unlimited power on its possessor, presides over a coal mine.

So revolutionary was Chereau's concept that the premiere in 1976 was assailed by many critics as a desecration. Outraged traditionalists in the audience booed and hissed; some protesters picketed the opera house.

Adding to the furor, members of the orchestra, alarmed at the quiet, chamber-music effect conductor Pierre Boulez wanted from them, threatened to strike.

But by 1980, when the operas in the cycle will be television version was made, just about everyone acknowledged that the production was a masterpiece — not the final word on how to interpret the Ring cycle, but a novel and fascinating work.

"Our basic approach," Boulez said, "is that there is no basic approach. You cannot reduce a work as complex as the Ring to one single vision."

In "Rheingold," Chereau's skill as a director comes through in the superb acting performances of the singers. Watch especially Hermann Becht, who as the betrayed Alberich reaches frightening heights of frenzy, and Heinz Zednik as the mercurial, cynical demigod Loge.

The one disappointment is in some of the special effects. When Alberich puts on a magic helmet to turn himself into first a dragon and then a toad, the camera moves away for a moment, spoiling the illusion that the transformation is taking place before our eyes.

Each of the remaining shown in two parts, as follows: "Die Walkure," Feb. 21 and 28; "Siegfried," April 11 and 18; and "Die Goetterdaemmerung," on June 6 and 13.

The cycle was filmed on the stage at Bayreuth, a production of UNITEL-Munich, the West German network. The performances are in German, with English subtitles.

Afghan Mission

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) Diego Cordovez, the senior U.N. negotiator on Afghanistan, says he is "optimistic" a political solution to the Afghan crisis can be found.

Cordovez, continuing a U.N. initiative started last year, says he is carrying a "good package of proposals" to put before the leaders of Pakistan and Afghanistan.

"Ever since my last visit to Pakistan there seems to be a growing and unanimous approach for the idea of a negotiated settlement of the problem", Cordovez said in a statement when he arrived here Sunday from Iran.

Pakistan and Iran are considered crucial parties to the Afghan problem.

Peace Poll Sought By Lennon's Widow

NEW YORK (AP) — Yoko Ono, the widow of singer John Lennon, called for world unity "despite the seemingly unconquerable differences" and urged a "Nationwide Peace Poll" today in a full-page advertisement in The New York Times.

"We as the human race have a history of losing our emotional equilibrium when we discover different thought patterns in others," Ms. Ono said in the ad, headlined "Surrender to Peace."

"Many wars have been fought as a result. It's about time to recognize that it is all right to be wearing different hats as our heartbeat is always one."

Ms. Ono proposed a "Nationwide Peace Poll to vote for peace versus nuclear holocaust of any size."

"The poll should be authorized by the Congress as a national undertaking for the sake of expedience alone, with the balloting through the media to minimize administrative expense," Ms. Ono said.

Ms. Ono added she "prayed that in the end gun control will cease to be an issue, as today's misuse of guns may be due to world tension for fear calls fear."

"It is time for you to rise," Ms. Ono said. "It is you who will raise the flag. I feel John and I, as a unit, have done our share."

Lennon was gunned down Dec. 8, 1980, outside his Manhattan apartment.

Mark David Chapman, who called himself a Lennon fan, pleaded guilty to the shooting and was sentenced to 20 years to life in prison.

E.T. THE CHAMP — This last week Steven Spielberg's film "E.T." overtook George Lucas' film "Star Wars" as the new all-time box office champion. To mark the event, this trade-paper ad was produced showing Han

Solo and Luke Skywalker of "Star Wars" bearing E.T. on their shoulders before a banner which reads, "E.T. is #1". The ad was addressed to Steven Spielberg from George Lucas. (AP Laserphoto)

May Be Late To Change Careers

CONCORDIA, Kan. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Frank Carlson says he never intended to "fool with" politics, but it may be too late to change careers. He just turned 90.

Carlson was honored on his birthday Sunday by several hundred friends who paid tribute to a career that included a term in the Kansas Legislature, two as governor, and service in both branches of the U.S. Congress.

Carlson, who retired in 1968, recalled the start of his political career in the late 1920s.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: C equals M.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

'Custody Battle' Over A Painting

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Anthony S. Earl is such an admirer of former Gov. George Wilbur Peck, creator of "Peck's Bad Boy," that he purloined Peck's portrait from a legislator's office so he could hang it in his own quarters.

Rep. James Rooney, left with a bare spot on his wall, said Earl called to ask if he could have the portrait of Peck. Rooney said he replied through his secretary, "Everything is negotiable."

When found the picture gone, he said, he told the governor, "That's a hell of a way to negotiate." He said Earl replied, "Don't worry, Roons, we'll take good care of you."

Peck, a newspaper man in Madison and La Crosse before he served as governor from 1891-95, is best known for a series of humorous sketches called Peck's Bad Boy, about a prankish youngster.

The state historical society owns the painting, but is allowing the two politicians to solve the custody battle themselves.

State of the Union

When President Reagan speaks before Congress tomorrow, he will continue a tradition established by George Washington and followed by most American Presidents. The Constitution requires the President to report to Congress "from time to time" on "the State of the Union," and Presidents from Washington on have submitted State of the Union messages almost every year. Woodrow Wilson began the practice of delivering the State of the Union message as a speech to a joint session of Congress. Before that, Presidents usually just sent written messages. Two Presidents, William Henry Harrison and James A. Garfield, died in office before they could deliver State of the Union messages.

DO YOU KNOW — Which President delivered the most State of the Union messages?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Ty Cobb holds the record for the most career hits — 4,191.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A63 ♥J10432 ♦5 ♣Q1093

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Don't worry about the fact that you have a singleton diamond—that is partner's suit. You have enough to bid three no trump. The only other bid that merits consideration is three clubs, in the hope that you will get a heart preference from partner. But what will you do if, instead, partner raises clubs?

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦K1073 ♥K65 ♦K82 ♣763

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ 2 ♣ 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Kings are undervalued in the point count, so there is a temptation to go on to four spades in the face of partner's invitation. However, your 4-3-3-3 distribution is unappealing, so we would be inclined to pass. Remember, a 90 part-score is not to be sneezed at.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♥KQJ732 ♦KJ654 ♣A8

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♣ 1 ♦ ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Obviously, you have the values to insist on game, but we don't think that this is the hand either for a cue-bid of two spades or a jump to three hearts. You might need a lot of room to probe for the best spot. A quiet two hearts is forcing and should leave you all the bidding space you need to explore for the best strain.

Q.4—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦Q1065 ♥K984 ♦6 ♣J92

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♦ 4 ♦ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Don't let the enemy talk you out of your slam! East is taking advantage of the vulnerability to deny you room to maneuver. Partner has shown a powerhouse, and you have a superb supporting hand. Tell him about it by cue-bidding five diamonds, which has the additional advantage of letting him show his best suit.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦Q984 ♥105 ♦93 ♣K9862

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Dble Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—If you bid some number of clubs, you don't understand the situation. Had partner wanted to hear from you, he could have doubled one heart for takeout. Since he did not do so, his double must be for penalties. You have some useful cards for him defensively, so you should be delighted to accept the double.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦AJ954 ♥K8763 ♦6 ♣A6

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—We would be inclined to insist on game with our hand. If partner doesn't have three-card support for one of our major suits, he must have long clubs. However, we must make sure that partner doesn't drop us in the middle of our investigation. Therefore we must start with a cue-bid of two diamonds.

Three Dead In State's Traffic

By The Associated Press
Three people died on North Carolina highways this weekend, including a bicyclist struck by a hit-and-run driver and an Asheboro man whose car struck a tree, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

Eugene Tyler, 24, of Fayetteville died at 12:30 Sunday morning when his bicycle was hit from behind on a rural road just south of his hometown, troopers said. Romie James Haga, 36, died Saturday when the car he was driving left the road in Randolph County and struck a tree.

Stuart Whitley, 25, of Spring Hope, died Saturday

Milder temperatures returned to the area this weekend but cloudy skies and drizzle dominated the weather picture until early today, when sunshine returned.

According to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant, .54 inch of rain fell over the weekend — .24 inch on Saturday and .30 inch on Sunday.

Temperatures Sunday ranged from a high of 53 degrees Fahrenheit to a low of 42 degrees, according to GUC. Saturday's high temperature was one degree milder — 54 degrees — and the low one degree cooler — 41 degrees.

At 8 a.m. today, the mercury stood at 44 degrees under sunny skies. A high in the low 50's was expected by this afternoon.

when the car he was driving on U.S. 64 in Nash County struck the rear of another vehicle, spun around and hit a third car head-on.

The deaths brought the state traffic deaths to 41 for 1982, compared to 49 at the same time last year.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JAN. 25, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early day finds a possible difficulty where a romantic matter is concerned but the rest of the day is excellent for organizing your career activities. Plan the future wisely.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact an influential person who can give you support for a fine project you have in mind. Take time for fun later in the day.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your ideas are working like magic early in the day so be more aggressive than in the past. Relax at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you carry through with promises to others. Loved one becomes more affectionate as the day passes.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to learn what is expected of you by associates and try to please them for possible advancement in career.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy at work ahead of you and gain fine benefits by being cooperative with others. Organizational work is the key to success now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A time to concentrate on getting ahead in your line of endeavor. Know what will please loved one the most whatever the cost.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to confer with family members and maintain harmony in the home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to go after the information you need for a personal project. Fine also for communicating with outsiders.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are thinking in a most practical vein and can easily handle a difficult problem now. Express happiness with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Morning may be depressing but later you can go after personal goals and gain them. Be careful of your money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget the frivolous for now and get busy on practical matters that could give you a greater income in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good friend who is wise can tell you how to solve certain problems, so listen carefully. Relax and be contented in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one with much organizational ability and should be given a chance to express this quality early in life. Give complicated chores and teach to use reason in dealing with others. Don't neglect religious training.

Big Drought Grips Africa

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Wide swaths of the vast African continent are gripped by a drought that has withered crops, killed livestock, shrunk rivers and reservoirs and threatened millions of people with hunger.

The Food and Agriculture Organization, a United Nations agency based in Rome, said recently that 15 African countries face severe food shortages because of the lack of rain. Some southern African nations are in their second year of drought and are running out of food reserves, the FAO said.

The stricken countries of southern Africa, according to the FAO, are South Africa and Zimbabwe — both major grain producers for the region — Angola, Zambia, Mozambique, Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland. In east Africa, portions of Ethiopia and Tanzania have been hit by drought.

In the Sahel — an arc of countries stretching eastward from the Atlantic along the southern edge of the Sahara Desert — the Cape Verde Islands, Senegal, Mauritania, Mali and Upper Volta are in the throes of a dry spell.

A severe drought in the Sahel a decade ago killed 50,000 to 100,000 people. But the FAO said reports from the region so far indicate the current drought is much less serious than the one which lasted from 1968 to 1974.

In some parts of southern Africa, however, the drought appears to be the worst this century.

South Africa, the bread basket for the region, normally harvests about 40 percent of the continent's corn — maize, as it is called here. This year, says the South African National Association of Maize Producers Organization, the drought has stunted 60 percent of the season's corn, the nation's main farm export.

South Africa harvested a record crop of 14.66 million metric tons in 1980-81. But last season's crop, also hit by severe drought, amounted to 8.32 million metric tons and this season's is not likely to be much better.

The mountainous kingdom of Lesotho, surrounded by South African territory, is suffering its worst drought in a decade. The government says if rain does not come soon, the maize crop could be destroyed and whole herds of cattle will perish.

Two years of drought in Zimbabwe have dimmed hopes of black African countries in southern Africa that Zimbabwe would replace white-ruled South Africa as the region's chief food supplier.

The country was a corn and beef exporter when it was the British colony of Rhodesia. The first season after independence in April 1980, Zimbabwe produced a record corn crop of around 3 million metric tons.

Last year drought reduced the maize harvest to around a million metric tons, and there is expected to be a bigger shortfall this year. In hard-hit Matabeleland, in southwestern Zimbabwe, drought and slaughter for lack of fodder have cut cattle herds from around 600,000 to 400,000 head.

In neighboring Mozambique, drought has affected seven of 10 provinces — mostly in the south and central regions — and is causing hardship to 4 million of the country's 11 million people, Internal Trade Minister Manuel da Silva told diplomats recently.

The minister said the lack of rain has cost the former Portuguese colony 100,000 tons of grain and added that only international aid can avert deaths by starvation.

Zambia, also in its second year of severe drought, produced slightly more than 5 million 200-pound bags of maize last year, compared with 11 million bags the previous harvest.

Tar Heel Demos For Mondale; GOP Backs Reagan

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer

GOP National Committee members in North Carolina are eyeing President Reagan for the Republican nomination in 1984, while their Democratic counterparts favor former Vice President Walter Mondale.

Mondale would be a top candidate for the Democratic presidential bid and would garner much support in North Carolina, said Democratic National Committee member Clarence Lightner of Raleigh.

The former Raleigh mayor said possible Democratic candidates, including Mondale, California Sen. Alan Cranston and Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, were well received during recent visits to North Carolina.

"Former Vice President Mondale seems to be out in front just a bit at this point," Lightner said. "I believe that Mondale will have a slight edge (in North Carolina)."

But North Carolina representatives on the Republican National Committee say President Reagan will try for another four-year term and they think he should.

U.S. Sen. John East, R-N.C., would support Reagan if he chooses to run in 1984, said East spokesman Jerry Woodruff in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., Friday.

Mary Alice Warren of Winston-Salem, also a GOP committee member, said she was optimistic Reagan would be re-elected.

"I support the President fully and I expect him to run again," said Mrs. Warren, the newest North Carolina committee member. "President Reagan has always had strong support in North Carolina and I have not seen any erosion."

A third committee member, state GOP Chairman David Flaherty, was unavailable for comment.

In past years, party nominations have often been decided before delegates attend the national conventions, but the Democratic Party is trying to change that trend, said Lightner.

Betty R. McCain of Wilson, another North Carolina Democratic committee member, said the party's rules have been changed to make the convention more open to party members who don't have to declare their choices ahead of time.

The Democratic National Committee plans to meet in Washington, D.C., Feb. 3 to discuss plans for the convention, while the GOP committee will meet Jan. 26.

Democratic committee representative Wallace Hyde of Asheville, who serves on Mondale's steering committee, said he thinks Mondale's chances of being nominated in 1984 were very good.

"There's just not time to turn this mess around in the next two years," Hyde said. "I think the Reagan administration people see that we're entering the next two years with a large deficit and high unemployment. People are going to do what they normally do when they're unhappy and change it."

Linda Ashendorf of Charlotte, the fourth North Carolina committee member, could not be reached.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

The North Carolina chapter of the National Organization for Women is getting behind a legislative package focusing on women's needs.

NOW leaders, who failed to push the Equal Rights Amendment through the Legislature last summer, say ERA supporters will lobby for the legislation.

"There's a basic sense of fairness, especially in the House, that I think will prevail in getting many of these items through," Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, said in an interview Friday.

State NOW President Johanna Ettin said without the ERA, the need for such measures is urgent.

The Legislative Study Commission on Women's Needs last December submitted a report, which the platform is based on. The study warned poverty in North Carolina "is becoming increasingly feminized" and 50 percent of North Carolina homes below the poverty level are headed by women, many of whom have been hurt by federal aid cuts.

The platform calls for:

— Changes in property laws, making the 1982 Tenancy by the Entirety Act retroactive and making pensions marital property under the Equitable Distribution of Property Act of 1981.

— Revision of child support laws by making the clerk of court, not the former spouse, collect payments and by limiting judges' authority to forgive delinquent payments.

— Permanent funding for the Domestic Violence Program.

— Continuing state funding of abortions for poor women.

— Equitable treatment and training opportunities for female prison inmates.

— A state Fair Employment Practices Act to be modeled after title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act.

— Elimination of alleged discrimination against women by the insurance industry.

The Tenancy by the Entirety Act gives men and women who jointly own property equal rights to the rent it produces. Previously, the husband automatically controlled the profits.

Although the law took effect this month, it wasn't retroactive and supporters hope to change that.

"We're going to push it," said Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the study commission.

Ms. Brennan said including pensions among property to be divided in the event of divorce would especially help women who haven't held jobs.

"Even if the wife hasn't worked, she's supported her husband and helped advance his career," she said. "It's only right that she share in that protection."

A bill requiring that child support be paid even if a ruling is appealed was introduced by Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham.

That bill, along with a measure taking away the burden of collecting from the spouse, would be "an excellent way to help children who are frequently the innocent victims in divorce cases," said Ms. Brennan.

Gov. Jim Hunt upset some lawmakers when he didn't include funds for spouse abuse centers in his 1983-85 budget.

But Ms. Brennan has introduced a bill allocating $250,000 for the centers — an increase from $210,000 last year.

Although in 1982 the money was distributed to the 53 centers throughout the state, only about half requesting funding got it.

"The centers need about $5 in private donations for every $1 they get from the state," Ms. Brennan said. "What we're able to give is a pitiful amount, but some centers are in poor counties and they're able to get little else."

The commission's report also recommended a study of what Ms. Brennan called "across-the-board" insurance industry sex discrimination. Such legislation has not yet been introduced.

Ski Park Sees Big Popularity

The ease and economy of cross-country skiing has helped draw customers to a cross-country park at Roan Mountain despite competition from surrounding downhill ski resorts.

"Cross country is easier to learn than downhill," said Jeep Barrett of High South Nordic Guides in Boone. "It takes less time to feel comfortable on cross country skis than it does on downhill skis. Most people are able to really enjoy cross country after only one day."

Barrett said Roan Mountain is attracting hundreds of people from as far away as Florida, especially since the big snowfall last week.

A spokeswoman for High Country Hosts, a service operated by the Boone Chamber of Commerce, says she has been answering dozens of inquiries a day about guided tours at the park.

The cross-country ski park, located just across the North Carolina border in Tennessee's Roan Mountain State Resort Park, is the only one of its kind in the South. The 6,285 Roan Mountain summit, 16 miles from Boone, receives the deepest snow in the Southeast.

The park is operated by the Tennessee State Park Department and opened to the public for the first time this winter.

In the nearby Banner Elk-Blowing Rock area, about a dozen resorts offer downhill skiing.

The six guides at High South provide tours seven days a week along the eight miles of Roan Mountain trails.

Cross-country enthusiasts who come to the park can stay in one of 20 modern log cabins. A restaurant near the cabins offers three meals a day four days a week.

High South operates a cross-country center in the park, with ski rentals, lessons and tours available.

It is the only cross-country ski school south of West Virginia certified by the Professional Ski Instructors of America, a national organization that trains cross country and downhill instructors.

"Our day tours are set up to be fun and informative," Barrett said. "We ski for two or three hours in the morning, break for lunch, then ski two or three more hours. We have people from 10 to 65, so we have to go at a pace everyone can enjoy."

Moses Cone Memorial Park, about a mile northwest of Blowing Rock, also offers consistently deep snow.

Trying Hike Wilson Tax

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Officials in Wilson County are moving ahead with an attempt to raise the county sales tax by 1 percent despite predictions that it will encounter opposition and probably would not pass the General Assembly.

There has been talk that the Legislature is considering raising the state sales tax.

Wilson County commissioners recently voted to seek approval from the General Assembly to make the increase or hold a referendum. The increase would raise about $1.6 million a year, which would be used for county school construction.

County Manager Garry C. Mercer said the board thought the sales tax was preferable to a bond issue or a property tax increase. He said commissioners would decide later whether a referendum would be held.

The sales tax consists of 3 cents for the state and 1 cent for the county — the same as in every county except Burke, where only the state's 3 cents is collected.

Some Wilson County merchants have expressed concerns that a higher local tax could cost them sales to surrounding counties. David L. Hacker, manager of Wilson's JC Penney store, said a tax increase would hurt retail sales. He said retailers would prefer a statewide increase.

Claims Easing Counties' Cost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, said his plan to raise the state sales tax for public school construction would relieve counties of building costs.

Phillips, who introduced his proposal to state superintendents at a recent legislative conference in Raleigh, said he would talk with administration and legislative leaders before preparing a bill.

His plan would boost the sales tax a penny per dollar and earmark the money for renovation and new public schools. Phillips said that would free about $100 million a year in the economically strapped General Fund.
