Economic Indicators Still Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a new sign of recovery, the government said today its main economic forecasting gauge jumped 1.5 percent in December, the eighth gain in the last nine months and the biggest increase in more than two years.

The Commerce Department reported the increase in its Index of Leading Economic Indicators, a compilation of 10 separate statistics, including forward-pointing information concerning unemployment, production, prices and business conditions in general.

Commerce Undersecretary Robert Dederick said the size of the increase may later be revised downward because today's report did not include a not-yet-available 11th component — business inventories — which probably declined in December.

Still, he said, "the robust advance in December's leading indicators further strengthens the case for economic growth this quarter."

Meanwhile, the report said an accompanying Index of Coincident Indicators — designed to measure current conditions — dipped 0.1 percent in December, indicating that the long recession may well have been continuing, though at a slow pace.

In the past, gains in the leading indicators have foreshadowed recovery for the economy as a whole, though recovery usually arrived sooner than nine months after the indicators turned up. Index gains prior to past recoveries also were bigger than most recent increases, indicating to many analysts that the economy's 1983 rebound will be only moderate.

The December gain was the biggest since the 2.8 percent in September 1980 as the economy was pulling out of that year's steep but short recession. Such gains of 2 percent or more have been common at the start of previous recoveries.

In contrast, the index rose just 0.2 percent in November of last year — revised downward from the original estimate of 0.8 percent — and 0.3 percent in October, today's report said.

Since the performance of several index components was announced earlier this month, it had been widely assumed the leading indicators would be up for December. President Reagan reinforced that assumption when he told reporters Thursday night they could expect "some good news" when the report was released today.

In December, the report said, six of the 10 available leading indicators showed improvement, led by a gain in new orders for plants and equipment and a drop in initial claims for unemployment benefits — an indication that layoffs were slowing.

Dismissed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge today dismissed a suit against the Wayne County School Board over racial imbalance between city and county schools, saying he was unable to find "any purposeful violation of constitutional rights in this case."

Judge Franklin Dupree granted a motion to dismiss filed by an attorney for the county board and urged the school systems to work out their differences.

"My sympathies in this case are wholly with the plaintiff and I am unimpressed, to put it mildly, with the manner in which the defendant's board has conducted itself. My hope is that this problem will be solved and that above all the boards not lose sight of the fact that their duty is to the education and welfare of all the children."

Jim Fuller, attorney for the city, said "The real tragedy is for the children."

Al Lindseth, attorney for the county, said the city based its case "on a legal theory that had no precedent."

"My main contention has been that this is a political matter, not a court matter," he said.

In his ruling, Dupree said that the central issue in the city school system's case was their contention that the county's determination of school boundary lines directly affected the city school system's ability to maintain a desegregated, unitary school system, violating the city board's legal rights.

He said he could find no legal precedent for this claim.

"The law does not require racial balance in public schools," he said.

"The acts of the local school boards has created the belief that such is a constitutional requirement. There is no such requirement."

He said the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution requires that it be shown that an intentional violation of the plaintiff's rights resulted in racial discrimination, and that he was unable to find any purposeful violation in this case.

He said the problem should be taken up by the General Assembly.

Reid Hooper Is Selected The Outstanding Citizen

By MARY SCHULKEN

Reid Hooper was named Greenville's Outstanding Citizen of the Year by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Thursday night at the organization's annual meeting.

Hooper, a Wachovia Bank executive, has served as director of the East Carolina University Foundation and has been active in the Pirate Club and the Friends of Music.

He is past president of the Lions Club and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. He has served on the board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center, the Pitt County Boys Club and the Pitt County United Fund.

Hooper is an active member of St. Peter's Catholic Church.

"All I can say," said Hooper, "is thank you, thank you, thank you."

In his message for 1983, Chamber Chairman David Duffus said the organization intended to concentrate on the U.S. 264 improvement project, (including the northern loop) on (Please turn to Page 20)

Reaffirm Two As Members Of Demo Selection Committee

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee Thursday night reaffirmed Fredrica Jacobson and Mary Williams as members of the State House of Representatives District Committee which will select a successor to Rep. Sam Bundy, who died last week.

George Saleeby, the county party chairman, said he notified State Democratic Party Chairman Russell Walker of the action by telephone this morning.

Walker will name a chairman of the committee — composed of two representatives from Greene County and two members from Pitt. The committee will then meet and recommend a replacement. Gov. Jim Hunt will make the appointment but, according to law, he must follow the committee's recommendation.

Saleeby said Walker is expected to name the chairman today and said committee members will be notified by telephone as well as by mail.

According to Saleeby, Walker suggested that the committee meet as soon as possible to select a replacement. But Saleeby said it would be up to the chairman of the committee to schedule a meeting.

Greene County members of the committee are Lionel Moore and Richard Price.

Mrs. Jacobson and Mrs. White were named as Pitt members to the district committee last spring, before Bethel and Carolina townships were moved to another House district during redistricting. Pitt's membership on the committee had to be reaffirmed without delegates from Bethel and Carolina townships participating in the selection process.

Earlier this week, Saleeby announced that persons seeking the House appointment (Please turn to Page 10)

Storms' Blow Ruled Disaster

By The Associated Press
Four California counties were declared disaster areas after towering waves from the week's third storm washed away swank homes, battered famous piers and forced a thousand families to flee a record high tide.

Nine deaths were directly blamed on the violent storms, and six people died Thursday in a twin-engine airplane crash in Scottsdale, Ariz. that officials said could be weather-related.

The series of windy rainstorms that started Wednesday has pounded the West Coast from the Oregon border to Mexico, with high tides damaging or destroying about 1,000 homes in Southern California. The storms also wrecked more than 100 homes in Northern California, and left thousands of people without power.

Although the rain let up in Los Angeles and San Francisco overnight, another storm was forecast to crash in late today on the central and southern portions of the state, where damage estimates have already reached tens of millions of dollars.

Gale warnings were posted today for northern and central California.

Meanwhile, Thursday's harsh weather moved inland today — extending from southern Idaho to Arizona, with a foot of snow forecast for higher elevations in Colorado, said Hugh Crowther of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Budget Cuts' Impact Cited

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Federal budget cuts have forced the state Department of Human Resources to cut its staff, making current state appropriations even more crucial, Human Resources Secretary Dr. Sarah T. Morrow told legislators Thursday.

In an appearance before the Joint Appropriations Subcommittee on Human Resources, Mrs. Morrow said that federal funds for programs covered by the maternal and child health block grant and the preventive health block grant declined 18 percent in fiscal 1980-81.

"Although the state has tried to cushion the impact of federal cuts on counties, many county health departments have suffered severe cutbacks in local support due to revenue problems at the county level," Mrs. Morrow added. "This, combined with the inflationary costs all agencies face, has reduced service levels locally."

Long-term health care is the fastest growing area of the human resources budget, she said, adding that state and local agencies must try to minimize duplication of services in that area.

Secretary of State Thad Eure took his own budget before the House-Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on General Government, seeking funding for three more staff positions through 1985.

Eure said present staff restrictions have left one man supervising 812,000 corporate filings a year.

"How on Earth do you expect one man to do it?" Eure said. "I don't usually go on like this. I am catching hell."

Information filed with the subcommittee indicated the department would be able to reduce its staff by two positions once record keeping became completely automated.

William Moran, chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, added his voice to those of other UNC-system officials who predicted dire consequences if their budget requests are cut.

"It's of some concern, especially in light of reduced federal support," he told the Joint Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education.

Moran said previous state cuts had already boosted costs to students.

In other legislative action Thursday:

Drunken Driving

Gov. Jim Hunt's bill to combat drunken driving was scrutinized further by House and Senate Judiciary III committees.

Sen. James Edwards, D-Caldwell, complained that a section making it illegal for drivers to drive while impaired appeared to apply solely to drinking, not to drug use.

"It doesn't seem right that a person could blow 0.10 on the Breathalyzer and get arrested while someone else could be out of his cotton-picking mind on drugs and get nothing," Edwards said.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, sponsor of the bill, said it contained sufficient provisions to ensure punishment of people impaired by drugs.

Other senators raised objections to a provision that would limit the judges who could conduct hearings on returning revoked licenses, saying it would delay the proceedings and put too great a burden on the judges.

In the House committee meeting, legislative legal aides were asked to research a provision in the bill that would make state drunken driving laws apply to military personnel whose driving privileges had been revoked on base.

U.S. TESTING FEEDBACK

N.C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has granted a temporary restraining order against U.S. Testing Authority Inc., a Florida-based firm accused in an N.C. lawsuit of breaching a November agreement to settle North Carolina citizens' complaints about a mass-mailed television "test response" survey alleged to violate state contest laws.

Edmisten said the Bay Village, Fla., firm has failed to honor an out-of-court settlement agreement to offer written offers of full refunds to all North Carolinians who paid "shipping and handling costs for free gifts." The usual amount of this charge was $14.80. U.S. Testing placed $12,000 in an escrow account in North Carolina to back up the refund requests, but this amount is not nearly sufficient since there are requests from some 10,000 respondents in this state for refunds in this state.

The restraining order prohibits the firm from future solicitations in North Carolina that do not conform to state consumer protection laws and restrains it from removing the already-established escrow funds without permission of the court. A preliminary hearing in the original law suit is set for Wake County Superior Court Feb. 4.

Jointly Plead For Erasing Withholding Tax Law

The presidents of three local savings and loan associations have issued a joint statement opposing federal law that requires such agencies to begin withholding taxes on customers' accounts, calling the law an ill-advised "scheme to withhold income tax on interest and dividend income."

J. Larkin Little, Burney S. Warren III and William D. Reagan Jr., who head Home Federal Savings & Loan, First Federal Savings & Loan and North State Savings & Loan, respectively, said in their statement, "There could hardly be a less desirable way to increase federal tax revenues."

They contended, "This scheme is unnecessary and will result in only a minimal increase in revenues. It will also alienate and infuriate the millions of honest taxpayers who will have to put up with it."

"Yet, unless the new Congress takes immediate action, this ill-advised program will go into effect on July 1," the statement said.

"In the past, Congress has had the good sense to respond to aroused public opinion and kill similar schemes," they said. "This one got through last year because, with no warning, it was tacked onto the general tax bill — and killing it would have meant killing the overall measure."

"The Treasury itself admits that the vast majority of people report their interest and dividend income. The cheaters can be caught through more efficient use of the existing computerized system, which requires full information reporting of interest payments on the more than $250 billion outstanding U.S. Treasury and U.S. Agency Obligations, not counting E-Bonds."

"This makes a lot more sense than forcing virtually all interest and dividend-paying banks, savings institutions, corporations, mutual funds, and brokerage houses to become tax collectors."

"Perhaps worst of all is the mass confusion this scheme will create," they suggested. "Withholding will be optional with the payer if payments total less than $150 per year. For most investments, tax will be withheld from each payment, but withholding could be once a year on passbook and checkbook-type accounts."

According to the statement, "It goes without saying that a scheme as all-encompassing as this one also has many

Limitations Have Been Extended

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As a regular follower of your column, I read one of your recent replies in the San Francisco Chronicle in which you stated that the statute of limitations for the prosecution of rape in California is three years.

I thought you would be interested to know that since Jan. 1, 1982, the statute of limitations for rape has been six years, as a result of legislation which I authored in 1981.

MILTON MARKS, STATE SENATOR,
FIFTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT,
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

DEAR SENATOR MARKS: Mea culpa. The lawyer who provided me with the outdated information discovered his error shortly after my column had already gone to press. He's a prominent attorney, presently attired in sackcloth and ashes, eating crow in San Francisco.

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I have always been close. Now that we're both married and have children, we are even closer.

Just before the holidays, Sis' husband came over to borrow my floor scrubber and he tried to get fresh. I couldn't believe it, but there was no doubt of his intentions. I told my husband, and he wanted to go to my brother-in-law's house and kill him, but we decided for my sister's sake not to say anything. I did tell my parents, and my dad's reaction was the same as my husband's. (My mother just said, "That's men for you.") For Sis' sake we all decided to drop it.

My parents have completely dropped it, but my husband and I haven't. We've backed out of family gatherings. My sister keeps asking me why I'm mad at them, and I keep saying, "We have other plans," etc.

Even if I told her the truth, she'd probably say I was nuts or I must have led him on. What should I do?

KEEPING MY MOUTH SHUT

DEAR KEEPING: Join in on the family gatherings, but tell your brother-in-law that the next time he makes a move toward you, you will expose him to his wife and the entire family for the kind of person he is.

DEAR ABBY: A word to "Bill," an inmate at the Attica Correctional Facility, who wanted people to send Christmas cards and letters to inmates in prison so they would not feel "forgotten."

Abby, please assure him and others in his position that they shall never be forgotten — by their victims (if they are still alive) or their families.

FRIEND OF A VICTIM

DEAR ABBY: I was a lonely, frustrated widower after my wife passed away. Then a pretty young widow came along, and we seemed attracted to each other.

However, the only time I can see her is when I take her somewhere to spend money on her — to dinner, the theater, etc. For example, I bought tickets to a special dinner at a club. We arrived there in separate cars. After the dinner, she got into her car and I got into mine, and without even a handshake, she said good night.

This young woman is wearing my ring and says she loves me. I even loaned her money to pay off some debts.

Am I unreasonable to expect a little more personal attention? Or must I be content to see her only when there is something in it for her?

OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER

DEAR OLD: You and your fiancée (and that is what she is if she's wearing your ring) are not on the same wavelength. If you can't communicate with her now, shake hands and wave goodbye before you invest any more time or money in this relationship.

Clothing Imports Concern Of U.S. Consumers

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

A new research project finds the U.S. consumer deeply concerned about clothing imports, in part because of their impact on American jobs.

Another factor in this concern is the quality, said Dr. Kitty Dickerson, the clothing and textile expert who headed the research team at the University of Missouri-Columbia. Most respondents thought American-made products were of superior quality.

"But the job loss to Americans was the overriding concern," Mrs. Dickerson said. "Consumers indicated that what the imports were doing ... does influence their purchases."

Imports of textiles and apparel run into billions of dollars annually. The U.S. Department of Commerce said the United States has trade agreements with 26 countries.

In 1981, imports ran 5,762 billion square yards, with most coming from Hong Kong, Taiwan, South Korea and Japan in that order.

In 1982, through November, the latest total available, the yardage was 5,500 billion, with China moving up to replace Japan in the rankings.

It is difficult to put a dollar value on these imports, said Leonard Mobley, director in the Commerce Department's industry assessment division, because import value is based on foreign value.

Comparatively, U.S. exports are "minute," Mobley said.

The result is a continuing controversy involving the federal government, labor groups such as the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, and clothing and textile manufacturers and retailers.

"But amidst all of this, no one was finding out how the consumer felt," Mrs. Dickerson said. "I undertook the project without any ax to grind. It was just that in this whole international situation no one was asking consumers what they thought."

What 72.7 percent of those in the national study thought was that imports were cutting down on Americans jobs. Some 56.5 percent said they were influenced in their buying by knowing whether clothing they purchased was from other countries. And 47.3 percent said imports were not as good.

Dr. Dickerson is associate professor and chairman of the department of clothing and textiles, College of Home Economics, at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

She discussed in a telephone interview how the study was made.

"I simply took a map of the United States and selected areas heavy into the apparel industry," she said. "I tried for a broad geographic representation of major city, small town and rural areas. Then we (the graduate students working with her) got telephone directories from those areas and went to work on the telephone."

The results were opinions from 1,350 consumers in 32 states, from a cross-section of lower, middle and upper economic classes. Financing of the study, which Mrs. Dickerson said cost under $15,000, came from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the Virginia University Experiment Station. The researcher-professor formerly was on the staff of the Virginia schools.

"We would have liked to include buying views by where the imports originated, but there simply was a limit to the questions," Mrs. Dickerson said.

The study did find the American consumer, male and female, concerned about the country of origin.

For instance, some 36.1 percent of the respondents said they "noticed carefully" whether they were buying items produced in the U.S. or another country. But 34.3 percent did not, while 29.1 percent sometimes noticed.

Some 32.4 percent called it "very important" that an item was U.S. produced.

Some of the questions and answers:

Clothing manufacturers in this country say imported clothing is driving them out of business. Do you think this is true? Yes, said 63.5 percent.

Report Given On Freedoms Foundation

Suzanne Wille, president of the Anchor Club at Rose High School, reported on her week at Freedoms Foundation in Valley Forge, Pa. Monday. She spoke at the meeting of the Pilot Club of Greenville.

"The lecture 'Life Without Freedom' by a former resident of Bulgaria was the most impressive I heard. I also value the friendships I made with girls from all sections of the nation," said Miss Wille. The Pilot Club sponsored her attendance there.

Dorothy Johnson, Lib LeConte and Mary Susan Templeton were elected to serve on the nominating committee. Alternates are Blanche Jones and Margaret Nelson.

The club will co-sponsor with Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., a safety automotive conference for women Feb. 16. It will be open to the public and more information will be announced at a later date.

An announcement was made of a women's leadership seminar sponsored by the Pilot Club of Raleigh March 5 at Peace College. Topics are "Self Image, Part 1 and Part 11," "Communications, Part 1 and Part 11," "Effective Management Techniques," and "Financial Management." Persons interested in attending should contact Mary Cochran at the First Presbyterian Church. It will be open to the public.

A majority thought wages for workers were higher in this country and that stores could profit more on imports.

Fifty-five per cent said it was time for the federal government to pass stronger laws to limit the amount of apparel that might be imported.

Mrs. Dickerson said cross tabulations indicated that consumers most concerned were middle-aged and middle-income. Women seemed more concerned than men. Those least concerned were the youngest and oldest and the highest and lowest income groups.

Copies of the study are being distributed by the fiber, textile and apparel industries and labor unions. One manufacturer asked for 9,000 copies — one for each employee.

"I've been surprised at the number of consumers who say they are making a special effort to buy U.S. products. Some say they're having trouble finding them."

"One of my suggestions to the industry is, if consumers say they want American-made, let them know. Establish an easily noticed label. Like the giant M of McDonald's."

Homemaker's Haven BY EVELYN SPANGLER

A rising incidence of drug abuse, teenage pregnancies, run-aways, delinquency, mental illness and suicide gives clear proof that our children are being affected by stressful life styles. Dr. Lee Salk, professor of pediatrics and psychiatry at Cornell University Medical College, says, "If a child has the resources of coping with a stressful situation, then there isn't any danger. But if he or she feels that there is no way out, there can be a number of hazardous consequences."

An appalling number of children today live in a constant state of fear - fear of the unknown. The family breakdown, mobility of the family, economic frustrations and violence on TV (real as well as fiction) are all contributing factors in the fears that children are feeling.

Unintentionally, children are too often left out when stressful situations are being handled by the adult family members. It is done to keep the child from being upset and/or afraid, but the constant anxiety of not knowing what is happening is as damaging as is knowledge of the stressing event. However, children read adult body language and they know when things are not as usual. Children are divorced as well as the parents and they should have each step carefully explained to them in order to lessen the anxiety. They must know where they will live, who will be with them, that they did not cause the situation, and above all that they will be loved.

Moving is a terribly stressful time for a child of any age. Children need to understand that the new home will offer playmates as well as similar facilities. For example, a five-year-old told his mom that he'd starve in the new town 'cause he didn't see a grocery store. Adults might make pictures of the places the children will be involved in if they are unable to take them there prior to the move. What bothers a child should be heard and discussed, thereby lessening his or her fear of the unknown.

Children going home to empty apartments or homes need clear cut explanations of what to do if they lose their keys. A fourth grade child would not turn her key loose all day long while in school. Also, adults should alert neighbors to the time their child arrives at home.

Children need to learn how to relax and have time to do so. Little League, swimming lessons, ballet, tap and acrobatics, clubs, etc., are all important in the life of a child, but the over-organized child can also be stressed and need time for total body relaxation. A very high percentage of today's adult population cannot relax; we need to begin then with children and teach relaxation techniques to them.

With the impending economic crunch facing a large segment of our society, educators must not allow children to be victimized, intentionally or otherwise, by hurting and frustrated adults. Take time to "hear" children. Take time to listen to what they tell you, to what they ask of you, and help them to understand what is happening in their lives so they will not fantasize that bad things may happen to them...worsening their fears of the unknown.

Paris Fashions Great For Girl-Watchers

By CAROLYN LESH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Judging from this year's Paris high fashion styles, spring and summer shape up to be seasons for girl-watchers.

Plunging necklines, bared knees, snug waists, spiked heels and slits sometimes as high as the thigh have been key themes among the 23 haute couture houses participating in the week-long collections that end today.

The revealing styles on Paris runways have brought loud cheers from men in the audience and more than one sigh from women with a few pounds to hide.

Wednesday's showings were no exception. Collections by Yves Saint Laurent, Givenchy, Guy Laroche and Serge Lepage all emphasized the slim silhouette.

Saint Laurent kept his title as the king of Paris haute couture with 134 outfits stressing a well-defined feminine shape. The look was applauded repeatedly by an audience that included French actress Catherine Deneuve.

The 46-year-old bespectacled designer teamed pencil-thin skirts with double-breasted jackets that had wide shoulders and lapels.

The suits, sometimes in pin stripes with a white handkerchief for the upper pocket, were feminized with see-through blouses, cinched waists, derriere-hugging hips and skirts that showed off the leg.

Saint Laurent was fond of skirts and dresses that buttoned down the front, sometimes stopping around thigh level. He also put kangaroo-sized pockets on many of his dresses.

Another typical Saint Laurent daytime look was a long belted tunic over a straight skirt. One such outfit featured a burgundy leather skirt, turquoise jersey tunic and violet coat with accents of orange and red.

Saint Laurent also used vivid yellows, greens, purples and pinks in flowered prints for ruffled satin crepe afternoon dresses that hugged the derriere. Three-inch high heels in the same flowered pattern accompanied the dresses. Rhinestone ankle bracelets were de rigueur with all outfits.

Those low pinky heels that have been so popular in recent years seem to be on their way out along with romantic full-skirted evening gowns.

The general trend for the twilight hours has been short, sexy black cocktail dresses and glimmering slinky long gowns showing a lot of skin.

Like many designers this week, Saint Laurent showed that classic Parisian spring color combination of black and white. One of his cocktail styles that brought a loud round of applause was a criss-cross white blouse tied at the waist and a black crepe tulip skirt exposing the thigh.

At Givenchy, the waist was again slim and tight. Suits were classic or fitted in mannish materials such as hounds tooth check or plaid.

Givenchy's prints of flowers and palm trees were inspired by the paintings of Matisse and Duffy and seen in blue, turquoise, yellow, fuchsia and bright green dresses with cuffed sleeves.

Guy Laroche was one of the few designers to stress pale pastel colors in his spring-summer line. But he also had the wide shoulders and short skirts so popular this week. Some of Laroche's skimpy skirts were shown in suede American Indian styles with short boots.

Dresses chez Laroche had loose bodices, wide sleeves and skirts that were straight pleated, wrapped or asymmetrically tied.

For a finishing touch, Laroche had his renaissance-style bridal gown modeled by Alessandra Mussolini, the granddaughter of Italian dictator Benito Mussolini.

The collections end today with shows by Japanese-born designer Hanae Mori, Norwegian-born designer Per Spook and the houses of Carven and Gres. The "Golden Thimble" award also will be handed out today to the designer whose line has been judged the most creative.

Time To Act Is Now

Recently a Soviet nuclear-powered satellite re-entered the atmosphere and spread its lethal material across Canada.

It was an embarrassing incident for the Soviets and a dangerous one for Canada.

Now another Soviet spy satellite has gone awry and the larger portion came down in the Indian Ocean where it would do no harm. The nuclear fuel core in a separate section was expected to burn up in the atmosphere without reaching Earth.

It has to be clear, however, that there is plenty of danger in putting nuclear reactors in space orbit. They can go out of control and descend into the atmosphere. Then the deadly nuclear fuel may fall to Earth almost anywhere. While it may be an ocean, or a desolate area, it might just as well be a heavily populated area.

It tells us that something should be done about the launching of nuclear reactors with their deadly fuel into space. The risk of the contamination that goes with the space vehicle going out of control and crashing to Earth is too large for mankind to accept.

It is time now for the nations of the world to negotiate bans on the use of nuclear materials in space orbit. We can wait for a devastating accident to marshal world opinion, or we can act now.

Bear Bryant: Sports Legend

Former Alabama football coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, who died Wednesday of a heart attack, was the nation's winningest coach.

Bryant won his 315th victory in 1981 and then went on to complete a 325-85-17 record as he retired at the end of the 1982 football season.

Coach Bryant, however, did more than win at football. He instilled character in his coaches and players and he challenged them to excel at whatever they decided to do once they left his teams.

Through television Bear Bryant became known to everyone who followed sports, and there was virtually no one who did not like and admire him.

At his retirement he received honors as few have in the sports world. He accepted them all with humility.

Bear Bryant was to live only a few weeks following his retirement from active football coaching, but he has already become an American sports legend.

Incentive Is There

By PAULT O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — No legislature in recent times has come to Raleigh with more incentive to cut the state budget than the 1983 General Assembly. State tax collections are lagging some $120 million behind projections, unemployment is high and state workers want their increment pay raises reinstated.

But before legislators can start cutting the state budget, they must decide which set of figures they'll call the state budget. Do they cut from the budget they passed two years ago? Or do they cut Gov. Jim Hunt's current year spending allocations?

This is no trivial question. The difference between the two sets of figures could amount to $150 million, says Marvin Dorman, deputy state budget officer. Hunt, who saw the tax shortfall coming, cut allocations to state agencies almost immediately after the assembly left Raleigh last June. State agencies are now receiving only 94 percent of the monthly appropriation the legislature's 1982-83 budget assigned to them.

The fact that state agencies are getting by on only 94 percent of the money budgeted them raises a question in the minds of some legislators. "Why in hard times should we fully fund their programs when they've shown they can do with less?" Why budget $100 million to a department when it is operating right now on $94 million?

That question came before the chairman of the base budget committees early this session. It would be a lot easier to find room for the salary increase, some said, if the legislature worked from Hunt's actual allocations rather than the 1981-83 budget.

PAULT T. O'CONNOR

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, chairman of the House Base Budget Committee, told them they might very well want to do that. "If a department got along on 94 percent, you might want to ask them how they did it."

But Adams and Dorman were quick to note that calls for a simplistic slash of all departments down to their current spending levels would be unwise. Such a move, Adams said, could punish the agencies which have been most efficient while rewarding those which have had fat budgets.

Adams also noted that some agencies made cuts which legislators can't expect them to make again. He noted that community colleges had cancelled classes, increased classloads and given teaching assignments to administrators. At one school, teachers agreed to work for free for a month. "Those aren't situations we can assume to continue."

Dorman warns that drafting a budget too close to past spending records can be dangerous. Much of the six percent savings has come from people taking short unpaid leaves and from job turnover. There is no guarantee that same amount of money can be saved next year.

Also, a budget tied closely to last year's spending leaves the state without needed flexibility to deal with shortfalls. He notes that in the last fiscal year, the state spent $170 million less than the legislature appropriated and (Please turn to Page 5)

FASCINATION

The word "fascination" comes from a Latin word which means "a spell". It is related to what people in former times called witchcraft. The fascinated person is so completely taken in by a certain appeal that he can be said to be under a spell.

There is a fascination about evil which the wise have always noted. If the first time we came upon evil we saw it in all its grossness, we should probably turn away in disgust. But what we see is something which fairly bewitches us. The most devastating evils of life clothe themselves in beauty and appeal. For some people liquor and opportunities for sensual indulgence seem greatly to be desired. Others see the main object of life in money and possessions. Position fascinates many people. Power is the great object for still others. When such temptations beckon us, we should be aware that we are in danger of being fascinated — put under a spell, rendered helpless. — Elisha Douglass

The Family Tigershark

The Northrop Corporation is now using newspapers and consumer magazines to advertise its new fighter plane, the "F-20 Tigershark." There was a four-color spread in Newsweek just last week.

From the ad it looks like one heck of a plane, but I'm not certain if they want me to buy one or just admire it.

According to the advertising copy the Tigershark is a new Mach 2-class tactical air defense fighter designed to deter or defeat the enemy. It can operate around the clock in all sorts of weather. It was financed by Northrop without government funding "in response to a U.S. government call for private development of a tactical fighter specially suited to fulfill U.S. mutual security policy objectives."

It so happens I'm in the market for a new 1983 tactical fighter, and the looks of the Tigershark really appealed to me.

But my wife announced last Christmas that I couldn't buy a new Plane until we paid for the children's orthodontist work.

ART BUCHWALD

I agreed with her, but I was so impressed with the ad that I showed it to her.

"It's a beautiful aircraft," she admitted, "but I think we should make do with the old F-5 we have now until the economy improves."

"But the F-5 can't do half the things the Tigershark can," I protested. "I'll be the laughing stock of the neighborhood if I'm tooling around in an F-5 while everyone else is doing Mach 2 at 60,000 feet."

"I don't understand why every time you see a new fighter plane in a magazine, you have to buy it."

"I don't want to buy every fighter plane I see in a magazine. But the Tigershark appeals to me. You can put an air-to-ground missile under each wing, flip it over on its back in a dogfight and drive off anything twice its size in the sky. If people like myself don't buy one we'll never get the economy on its feet."

"Where do I and the children sit?" she wanted to know.

"It's not a family airplane. It's a one-seater, aimed at the type of person who reads Playboy."

"I thought as much. All you want is a new toy for yourself now that you're tired of playing with your Apple computer."

"That's not fair. I can defend our home, and the homes of everyone in the neighborhood with the Tigershark. It says right here that it's the best deterrent that money can buy."

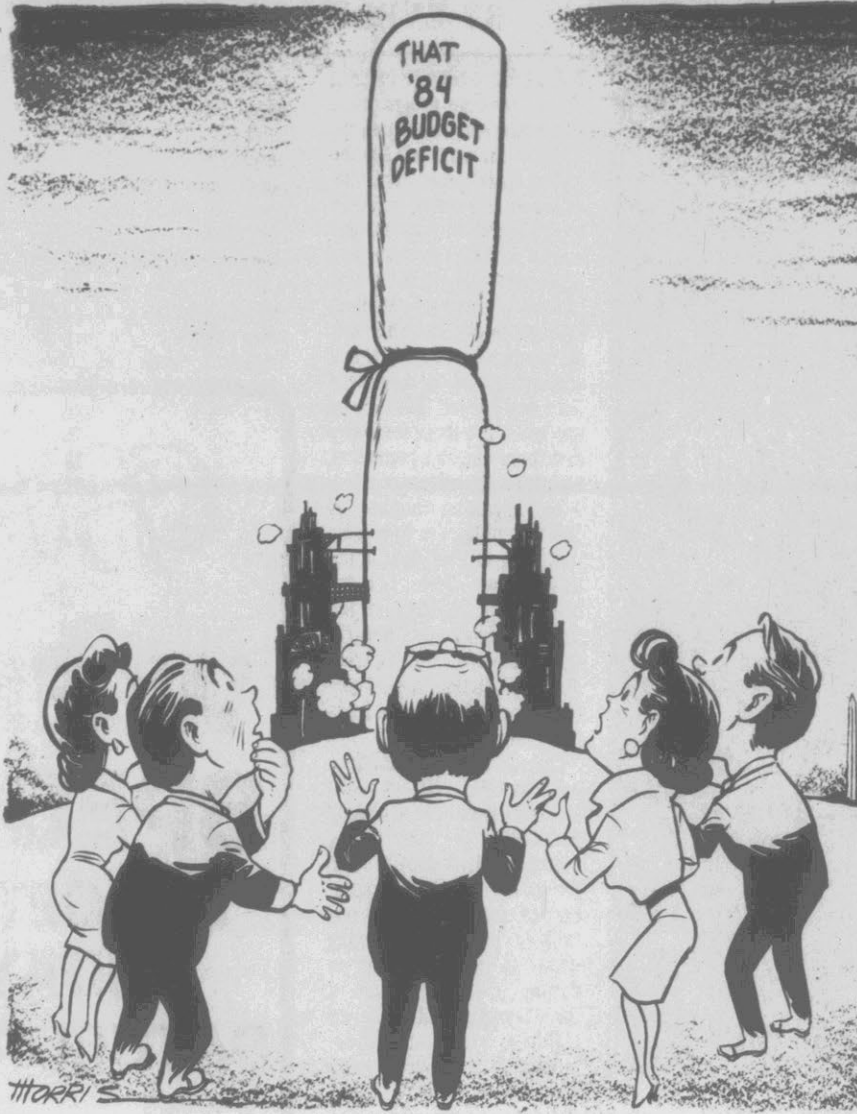

"Even if you wanted an F-20 how do you know Northrop would let you buy it?"

"They're advertising it in Newsweek. They're not going to waste money on a four-color spread if they're not prepared to sell you one."

"Maybe they're aiming the advertisements at Third World countries who can't afford a more expensive fighter plane."

"That's ridiculous. If they were doing that they would take space in Third World publications. This particular ad is directed at people like myself who can't afford a new Mercedes-Benz, but still (Please turn to Page 5)

Flexibility Is The Game

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Flexibility is the new name of the game in Washington.

In a city where "MAD" had its day, "detente" flourished and "shuttle diplomacy" is out of style, "flexibility" is getting a rush.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger says U.S. nuclear policy must be based on it.

U.S. arms negotiator Paul H. Nitze says it will guide his negotiations with the Soviet Union to curb nuclear weapons in Europe.

It's getting hard to talk of war or of peace without dropping flexibility into the conversation.

Although some Germans yearn for detente and Yuri Andropov trotted it out in his debut as the Soviet leader, detente seems dead — confined to the ashcan of history.

While mediator Philip Habib occasionally tries shuttle diplomacy to free Lebanon of foreign forces, he lacks Henry Kissinger's panache and touch for publicity. Habib's Mideast travels fall colorlessly under the heading of traditional diplomacy.

MAD also has had it. The notion that the best insurance against Soviet nuclear attack is Mutual Assured Destruction — making sure the Soviets know they would be wiped out — is passe.

The idea now is to deter war by having a flexible nuclear force: a variety of missiles, bombers and submarines. That gives the president the option of an all-out response to Soviet attack or a more limited one.

Weinberger explained the strategy last month to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee:

"Of paramount importance to the flexible response strategy is the requirement for flexibility — for our nuclear forces and plans for their use to be designed and developed in such a way that that our response is appropriate to the circumstances against us."

In other words, the United States must be capable of fighting a limited nuclear war or a global one.

Kenneth Adelman, the new U.S. disarmament director, is inclined to the same flexible strategy.

"U.S. strategic forces do not exist solely to deter a Soviet nuclear attack or an attack against the United States itself," he said in a 1981 magazine article.

"Rather, they are intended to support a range of U.S. foreign policy goals, including the commitment to preserve Western Europe and even parts of the Persian Gulf against over aggression."

If it's wise to be flexible in averting war, it's also the smart way to pursue peace.

Before flying to Europe for a new round of talks, U.S. negotiator Nitze hinted he would show flexibility if the Soviets demonstrated some new "give" in their proposals.

Nitze said he was "confident that if it becomes wise for the United States government to change its position" in the missile reduction talks "it will in fact do so."

Only time will tell, of course, but flexibility may have a longer shelf life than the once-voguish MAD, detente and shuttle diplomacy.

MAD had a Dr. Strangelove ring to it. It conjured up depressing images of nuclear destruction.

Detente, on the other hand, sounded wishy-washy, being too cozy to the Soviets while they persisted in their adventures around the world.

And shuttle diplomacy became synonymous with one man, Kissinger.

Flexibility probably has a brighter future. In service of both a policy to build up weapons and to tear them down, it can be all things to all men. It is, well, flexible.

To the editor:

The Congress of the United States is an excellent — the best — friend of Communist Red China and the enemy of all textile workers and tobacco farmers.

Why?

Textiles — Imports of textiles from Red China have already eliminated more than 350,000 jobs in North Carolina. Textiles leaders predict there may not be a textile industry in the U.S.A. by the year 2000 if imports are allowed to keep growing. Not only does Red China get the best possible deal on trade tariffs, plus we loan them money at rates greatly below what our industry pays. Red China's rate is 20 cents per hour.

If we stop buying "Made in China," we can stop Red Chinese imports. By mistake, I purchased an article made in Red China at J.C. Penney's. I returned it and wrote Mr. Seibert, chairman of the board, stating I would not buy anything from J.C. Penney as long as they sold Communist-made products. The reply stated they are doing what the government wants them to do to improve relations. I personally think they are primarily interested in the increase in profits on slave labor merchandise.

Tobacco — Red China is the world's largest tobacco producer. They are making active efforts to improve the quality of their tobacco, including using American technology. They have a cost advantage, since they use slave labor.

Just this week Red China said they would cancel all orders of grain because we are proposing limited textile quotas.

What are you going to do?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Even those at the extremes of domestic political thinking can endorse President Reagan's exhortation that "we who are in government must take the lead in restoring the economy."

But in doing so they will be endorsing different concepts. Democrats stood, applauded and cheered when the president made his remark in his State of the Union Message on Tuesday evening.

But as he spoke, the president quickly dispelled any ideas that he believed government should subsidize the recovery.

As the applause faded, Reagan explained that "the single thing" needed to restart the economy is lower interest rates, and he promised to do his best to produce conditions for such lower rates.

Rates are higher than they should be, he said, because of fear the administration won't stay the course. It will, said Reagan, promising:

"We who serve here in this capital must erase that fear by making it absolutely clear that we will not stop fighting inflation; that, together, we will do only those things that will lead to lasting economic growth."

So much for a major change of course for the Reagan administration. So much for the hopes of the Democrats that he would see their viewpoint and involve the administration more directly in individual affairs.

While creating the impression of change — and, of course, of an economy on the mend — the president actually reiterated, reaffirmed, and even reinforced many of his basic commitments.

He stated again, clearly and firmly, that true economic recovery can come only through fundamental shifts of economic power to the private from the public sector. Federal spending must be cut; the deficit must be lowered.

He sympathized with the plight of "farmers, steel and auto workers, lumbermen, black teen-agers, working mothers." But he warned against "the cost of food stamps, welfare, Medicaid and other individual benefit programs that are given out on the basis of automatic formulas."

The suggestion was that the latter were expedients, not solutions.

He went further, saying he would seek specific measures to control the growth of the so-called "uncontrollable" spending programs, such as food stamps, that in total "have grown by over 400 percent since 1970."

But he relented some on unemployment, promising to seek extension of jobless benefits and special incentives to employers who hire the long-term unemployed, some of whom must abandon their old trades.

In one reference or another, Reagan seemed to mention all the disadvantages in today's economy, and his list of things to do was equally long: aid to students, education savings programs, equity for women, adjustment of inequities in pensions, fair housing, better criminal justice, better health care, protection against catastrophic health care bills among the elderly.

The list touches many issues dear to the hearts of those who believe government must step in where private enterprise fears or fails to tread. The Reagan list differs however in the extent and type of assistance.

In some instances, the president offered more long-term hope than short-term help, which again is consistent with his approach to recovery.

"It has fallen to us, in our time, to undo damage that was a long time in the making, and to begin the hard but necessary task of building a better future for ourselves and our children," he said.

He made it clear he views this challenge as one that requires "courage, patience and strength" on the part of Americans. And at various times in his speech he suggested that his solution to rebuild private-sector strength — might require pain too, before the rewards can be enjoyed.

His essentially long-term approach, he suggested, would make "tomorrow's America happy and prosperous at home, strong and respected abroad, and at peace in the world."

But for the present, it seems, more challenges are in order.

Longest Tunnel

TOKYO (AP) — After 19 years of labor that claimed 33 lives, crews working in opposite directions have connected the first part of what will eventually be the world's longest undersea tunnel.

With a dynamite blast, a barrel of sake and shouts of "banzai!", the two crews on Thursday completed an auxiliary tunnel several yards below the main shaft of the Seikan railway line 787 feet beneath the sea bed of the Tsugaru Straits.

When it's finally completed, the railway tunnel will link the main island of Honshu with one of Japan's last undeveloped regions, the northern island of Hokkaido.

Construction of the 33½-mile-long tunnel began in 1964. The main tunnel will be fully bored in the spring of 1984 and the entire project is slated for completion in 1985.

Researched Nurse's Role

ECU News Bureau
Dr. Mohammed A. Ahad, a professor in the East Carolina University School of Nursing, has returned from a five-month trip abroad during which he did research for a cross-national study of the nurse's role in health care.

During his travels, Ahad visited Hong Kong, Manila, Singapore, India and England.

In Singapore, he spoke to the First Asian and Pacific Nurses' Convention on "Networking for Nursing Research and Theory Development: A Focus on the Future" and "University (Graduate) Education: An Imperative for the Professionalization of Nursing." Representatives from 17 nations attended the convention.

Ahad also spoke on the future of primary care and nursing at a two-day workshop in Singapore sponsored by the Commonwealth Nurses' Federation.

In India, he helped plan and spoke at the nurses' conferences in Kerala, Bangalore, Hyderabad and Kanpur and collected research data in Delhi and Bombay.

In addition, he assisted in planning a rural health promotion project for a small fishing community in his home state, Andhra Pradesh, and initiated an international nursing information library which will temporarily be located at the Bangalore College of Nursing.

He also visited nurses' groups in Hong Kong and the Philippines.

collected $66 million less than expected in revenue. "If someone had taken that $170 million in revenue out of the budget for July 1, then agencies would have had no vacancies to deal with their immediate problems and no place to put people coming back from leave and no way to deal with this year's shortfall."

In the 1981 session, the base budget committees set a goal of cutting six percent out of the base budget. This year, they could set that goal and meet it in one fell swoop. They'd simply tell state agencies to make do as they've been doing this year. Consensus of the chairmen, however, is that such a move would be very shortsighted.

It's Harder To 'Adapt' Across The State Line

By GAIL MICHAELS
If my experience is a reliable indicator, two of the more common causes of depression are moving and receiving one's alumni magazine.

I got my annual high school alumni magazine last week. Among the girls graduating with me were a magazine editor in New York, a professor at Boston College, a fashion designer and an architect who is helping her English husband restore their flat in London and a "ruin" on the Riviera.

I was listed as lost. I have no intention of revealing in that publication that a girl who was touted in her high school annual as willing to try anything once has made wiping noses her life's ambition.

Besides, in many ways, "lost" is an accurate description of me at the moment. I've been feeling kind of lost ever since we moved from North Carolina to Tennessee in May.

An eight-month depression is not really so long when all ramifications of a move are considered. Adjusting to a move is much like adjusting to the loss of a loved one. All the emotional supports are forsaken, and everyday life becomes a series of small traumas from finding an honest auto mechanic to locating a hairdresser who didn't receive his training in a logging camp.

As I get older, I find it more and more difficult to be resilient under such circumstances. I balk at getting a new driver's license. And I don't want to go to Bible study to meet people.

Phillip's inability to understand my failure to adapt doesn't help any. Phillip doesn't relate to depression. He's a problem solver. A problem solver goes to Bible study, and to Newcomers, and to whatever else is available. A problem solver considers a poor sense of direction a feeble excuse for failing to locate the public library, even though it stands in the middle of a maze that makes streets in downtown Durham look positively linear.

In short, Phillip has more in common with the Tennesseans who can't understand why anyone who has exchanged Jesse and John for Howard Baker doesn't count his blessings than he does with the small group of North Carolina expatriates in our neighborhood who meet occasionally to bemoan their fate. One couple, High Tiders originally, have not yet convinced their daughter's teacher that she doesn't have a speech defect. I especially miss North Carolina's peculiar adaptation of cosmopolitan values to small town life.

A Chapel Hill sports enthusiast means that no one here likes Carolina. The rest of us haven't had the heart to tell him that not many people in North Carolina like North Carolina either once one exits the Chapel Hill-Carrboro city limits. Even Zachary is now aware of this. On a recent trip home he made the mistake of informing a predominantly Duke audience in a Durham restaurant that he was "a Tar Heel born and a Tar Heel bred."

That didn't prevent us from singing this rousing chorus just before we crossed back over the Tennessee line and before I burst into tears.

Phillip glowered. "I really don't understand you. This trip was supposed to make you happy."

It would have — had we stayed.

Non-Refrigerated Milk Is Marketed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Operators of major grocery chains in North Carolina say it's too soon to determine if their new product — milk that doesn't need to be refrigerated — will be a commercial success.

"There's a lot of curiosity and talk about the new milk, but I think it's too soon to tell how well it's selling," said K.A. Honeycutt, manager of a Big Star food store in Raleigh.

"We put it on the shelves last Thursday, but I haven't really seen it move that much," said Kenneth Goodwin, co-manager of a Raleigh A&P store.

Big Star and other major chains in the Raleigh and Charlotte areas began selling the Ultra High Temperature milk, according to marketing specialists for Dairymen Inc. of Louisville, Ky., which makes it.

UHT milk was developed during the 1970s at N.C. State's Food Science Department. W.M. Roberts, former department chairman who led the research, resigned in December 1980 to join Dairymen Inc.

The milk is packaged in quart-size soft cartons of plain and low-fat chocolate. It also comes in a half-pint size in flavors, including vanilla, strawberry, banana and fruit punch.

"It's a great day," Roberts said in an interview Thursday after being told that the milk was being sold in Raleigh.

"It's the first time that we've really been able to disconnect milk from the refrigerator — and that's a heavy thing to have to carry around with you," he said. "I just think it's going to permit milk to go where the people are. It makes milk much more mobile to our lifestyles and it provides a nutritious alternative to the soft drink."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

SHIPS OF THE DESERT

THE USE OF CAMELS IS RECORDED THROUGHOUT THE SCRIPTURES. THESE "SHIPS OF THE DESERT" HAVE PLAYED THEIR PART IN THE PAGEANTRY OF THE BIBLE. THE PATRIARCHS TOTALED MUCH OF THEIR WEALTH IN THE NUMBER OF CAMELS THEY OWNED. WHEREVER THE NOMADIC TRIBES OF ISRAEL WANTED TO WANDER CAMELS ALWAYS DID THE LEG WORK. FOR ONE WEALTHY PATRIARCH TO SEND A PRESENT OF A DOZEN OR SO CAMELS TO ANOTHER WAS NOT UNUSUAL. AND CONSIDERING THE AMOUNT OF LUGGAGE EACH CAMEL COULD CARRY (WEIGHT OF 500 POUNDS) A FEW OF THESE LONG LEGGED BEAUTIES MEANT THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN BRINGING NOT ONLY THE BEST TENT AND FURNISHINGS BUT ALSO THE NEEDFUL PARAPHERNALIA. THE CAMEL WAS STUPID, ILL-TEMPERED, AND SOMETIMES VINDICTIVE, BUT OH HOW NECESSARY TO THE DAILY LIFE OF THE WANDERER OF THE DESERT.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina hen market was steady. Supplies adequate. Demand moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter, too few.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground today, extending Thursday's strong rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 25.66 Thursday for its best gain in three weeks, climbed 7.45 to 1,071.10 by noon-time today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was benefiting from spreading hopes for a recovery from the recession.

The government reported this morning that its index of leading economic indicators rose 1.5 percent in December. It was the eighth increase in the last nine months for the index, which is designed to function as a barometer of economic trends.

General Electric was a standout gainer, up 4½ at 99½ on word that the company planned to sell most of its Utah International mining subsidiary to an Australian concern. GE, which is a component of the Dow Jones industrial average, said it intended to concentrate on high-growth technology and services businesses.

Sperry rose ¾ to 38½. Late Tuesday the company's Sperry Univac division was awarded a $476.2 million Air Force contract for computers.

The NYSE's composite index gained 51 to 83.68. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.09 at 361.58.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 44.71 million shares at noon, against 34.30 million at the same point Thursday.

N.C. Bishop Is Invested

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Episcopal Church held ceremonies Thursday night for the investiture of Robert Whitridge Estill as their ninth bishop.

Officials of the church referred to Middle Ages tradition during the service, but Estill added humor to the moment. During his sermon, Estill said he had hoped to make the occasion broadly ecumenical, with leaders from many other denominations.

"I should have made an effort to round out all of them," he said. "But I assume my Baptist brothers had their hands full."

Wake Forest University, a Baptist institution, played the University of North Carolina in a basketball game at the time of the services.

About 1,800 people attended the service. More than 400 Episcopalians will remain in Durham today and Saturday for the church's 167th annual convention.

Estill quoted a T.S. Eliot poem that concludes: "And the church does not seem to be wanted in the country or the suburbs; and in the town only for important weddings."

And he said, "We must be about the work of preaching the good news, not only with our lips but in our lives."

Sales Tax Bill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Kenneth Royall of Durham today introduced a bill to boost the state sales tax to 4 percent, and phase out the sales tax on food.

Presently, the state sales tax is 3 percent. All counties but one take advantage of a local option tax that allows them to add another 1 percent to the tax.

Royall estimated that his bill would generate an additional $230 million in the next fiscal year.

Under his proposal, some money would be used for construction in public schools and for local wastewater treatment systems.

Some of the money also would be used to match federal highway funds.

The bill would phase out the tax on food between 1983 and 1987. It also would increase the sales tax ceiling on new car sales from the current $120 to $300.

Selection....

 ment were "invited to be at the meeting."

Five persons who had been mentioned as possible successors — including Farmville Mayor Rusty Duke; Greenville real estate broker Mark Tipton; Farmville Mayor Linwood Mercer; Walter Jones Jr., son of the veteran congressman, and Mark Owens of Fountain, an attorney and chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education — were introduced.

Both Mrs. Jacobson and Mrs. White said they have been contacted by supporters of each of the five men.

Other party officials said the elder Jones has contacted a number of people asking that they support his son for the appointment.

Mrs. Jacobson said she did not know if the House district committee would interview the potential appointees before making its selection. However, she said she feels all potential appointees should be given fair consideration.

Owens and Tipton have been unsuccessful candidates for the House of Representatives in past elections, while Mercer made an unsuccessful bid for the Democratic nomination to the state Senate in last year's primary.

Mrs. Jacobson was a write-in candidate for the House in the November 1982 general election when Bundy and Rep. Ed Warren were re-elected.

The executive committee Thursday also adopted a "Resolution of Respect" in Bundy's memory.

The resolution said in part that Bundy, first elected to the House in 1970, "devoted a long and inspiring career to the cause of public education in Pitt County" and served "with great wisdom and integrity" in the House of Representatives.

The resolution also said Bundy "enjoyed the love, respect and admiration of all those lives he touched."

LOCAL FARMER IN RUNNING TO WIN FREE USE OF TRACTOR

Martin McLawhorn, of Winterville, N.C., has won the chance to compete with other farmers within this Allis-Chalmers sales district for the free use of an Allis-Chalmers tractor.

McLawhorn was invited, along with 100 other farmers, to participate in V.I.P. Tractor Day January 19, 1983 at Hendrix-Barnhill, Inc. After a program reviewing the Allis-Chalmers tractor line-up, the drawing was held in which McLawhorn won a toy Allis-Chalmers tractor (being presented by Connie Baynor) as a token of his right to participate in the final drawing. If he wins there, he'll win the free use, through June 30, 1983, of an Allis-Chalmers tractor up to 107 PTO horsepower.

The drawing will be held in mid February at the Town & Country Restaurant in Williamston, N.C. Throughout the country, more than 100 farmers will win the free use of a tractor, according to Norman Worthington, Vice President of Hendrix-Barnhill. If McLawhorn wins in the district competition, his tractor will be provided by Allis-Chalmers and Hendrix-Barnhill. V.I.P.—the name of this national promotion of Allis-Chalmers tractors—alludes, says Worthington, both to Allis-Chalmers tractors and to the persons who use them: "Value, Innovation, Performance for Very Important Persons."

Pirates Attack Navy In ECAC Battle

East Carolina University's men's basketball team returns to the hardwood Saturday night, traveling to meet the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. Following that game, the Pirates travel on to Charlotte where they'll face the UNCC 49ers on Monday night.

The action is the first since Monday night for the Pirates, who had come off an eight-game-in-15-days streak, and coach Charlie Harrison said following Monday's 50-47 overtime win over UNC-Wilmington that the Pirates might be mentally tired.

The Navy game returns the Pirates to ECAC-South action for the first time in five games. The Pirates stand 1-3 in the league, while Navy is 1-1 following a 63-53 loss at James Madison earlier this week. The surprise team of the league so far, Navy, downed Virginia Military on Thursday, 57-53.

"They are a team very much like William & Mary," Harrison said. "They'll be very patient and very smart and hard to beat."

The Midshipmen are off to their best start in over 20 years, with a 10-5 mark at this time. Coach Paul Evans has apparently turned the corner in his three-year-old rebuilding program at the Academy.

The Midshipmen are led by 6-1 senior guard Dave Brooks with an 18.5 average, but the key man may very well be center Cliff Maurer, a junior. Maurer entered the academy at 6-8 — the very limit for height for cadets and only then for special wavers. But in the last year, Maurer has stretched to 6-10 and is now averaging 11.7 points and 6.8 rebounds. Vernon Butler, a 6-7 freshman, has a 10.7 average and is pulling 8.5 rebounds.

Perhaps the man most remembered by the Pirates from last season, however, is 6-2 junior guard Rob Romaine, whose 19 of 20 free throws led the Middies to an 88-76 victory over the Bucs last season.

Butler has twice been voted Rookie of the Week in the ECAC-South, sharing the honor this past week with ECU freshman Johnny Edwards, who's won the honor three times now. The two are 1-2 in rebounding in the league, with Edwards averaging 7.8.

Edwards leads the Pirate scoring — third in the league — with a 17.6 average. He's followed by Barry Wright at 12.5 and Bruce Peartree at 10.4.

The Pirates are still without senior forward Charles Green, sidelined with a dislocated shoulder. He has a medical check coming on Thursday and will learn then whether he will be returning in the near future.

Charlotte comes into the game with a 5-11 record — but it is a deceptive one. The 49ers have been steadily improving and downed South Alabama in a Sun Belt Conference battle in Charlotte on Thursday, 77-75.

The Pirates return home following the two-game trip to face George Mason in an ECAC-South game in Minges on February 5.

Doherty's Free Throws Let Heels Nip Deacons

GREENSBORO (AP) — Third-ranked North Carolina's Brad Daugherty didn't want to risk a foul by blocking a shot in the closing moments, but No. 19 Wake Forest's Danny Young gave him no choice.

Daugherty blocked Young's shot with eight seconds left Thursday to set up Matt Doherty's drive — and eventually his two free throws — that clinched the Tar Heels' 80-78 victory.

Doherty raced goalward with the loose ball, drawing a foul with three seconds left, and his two free throws put the 16-3 Tar Heels atop the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball chase with a 5-0 mark.

"He shot and I was just standing there," the 6-foot-11 Daugherty said. "I was trying to go up and mess with him and he just pushed the ball into my hand. I was just trying to throw his vision off. I don't think he ever saw me."

With 3:43 remaining, Wake Forest went into a delay, looking for back-door layups. One came at the 1:31 mark when Delaney Rudd took a pass from Young to make it 78-75.

With 1:08 left and North Carolina coach Dean Smith attempting to call a timeout, the Tar Heels' 6-10 forward Sam Perkins sank a 3-point field goal to tie the score.

"I wasn't really looking for it," Perkins said after his 9th basket in 13 attempts beyond the 19-foot line this season. "I just shot the ball. I didn't really want a 3-pointer, but time had run down on the (30-second) shot clock."

Wake Forest then returned to its delay game in search of a last-second winner. After Doherty's free throws, Young bounced a last-second 3-point attempt off the rim, igniting the Tar Heels' celebration.

Demon Deacon coach Carl Tacy questioned two offensive basket interference calls which went against his club, one in the late going.

"I thought we did a good job in doing what we wanted to do and we really needed to post up the right people and go for a little bit different type shot," Tacy said. "I thought we played well enough to win. I would be anxious to see how many goals were taken away and whether they were good calls or not."

Perkins finished with game-high totals of 24 points and 11 rebounds.

HOLLYWOOD — Coach Gordan Patrick has indicated this may be his last year as West Carteret wrestling coach, and Thursday night the Patriots gave Patrick perhaps his last regular-season victory.

Game Site Switched

East Carolina University's women's basketball game, scheduled for the University of Richmond on Sunday, Feb. 6, at 3 p.m., has been switched to Greenville the same day at 6 p.m.

The move was made necessary by a tennis tournament also being scheduled into the Robins Center the same afternoon.

All season ticket holders will be admitted by showing their books at no extra cost.

The game, also one of six Lady Pirates games to be aired over the Pirate Sports Network, will still be broadcast, but with air time changed from 2:50 to 5:50 p.m.

This brings to 10 the number of home games the Lady Pirates have this year. Their next scheduled home game is Wednesday against nationally ranked Old Dominion.

TAPED BASKETBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — You can now get a videocassette which will teach you how to play basketball.

It was conceived by the former coach of the Boston Celtics, Red Auerbach.

Produced by RCA, the disc runs for 109 minutes. It illustrates ball handling, dribbling, shot-making and coaching.

the game.

ECU head coach Cathy Andruzzi termed the charges ridiculous.

The Lady Pirates go into the two weekend games minus two starters, expected to be out for the rest of the season.

Both Loraine Foster and Delphine Mabry underwent surgery yesterday, the former for a knee injury and the latter for a hand injury. Foster was averaging 14.5 points a game, second best on the team, when she slipped on a pompon after being knocked out of bounds at UNC-Charlotte. Mabry suffered her injury in the Old Dominion game.

The net result is that the Lady Pirates are down to only seven players, leading scorer Mary Denkler (22.6 points, 7.0 rebounds), Darlene Chaney (7.1, 5.7), Sylvia Bragg (6.0), Fran Hooks (5.4), Lisa Squirewell (4.3), Caren Truske (2.8) and Rita Simmons (1.5).

"We're going to pray a lot," Andruzzi said. "It's a situation in which we're extremely disappointed, but you can't prevent injuries, so there's nothing we can do about it."

"We did play without Loraine for three games and the kids did a good job, but with Delphine out, we have to buckle up again.

"What we're going to have to do is play smart basketball. The players are going to have to work hard, and execute. We'll always try and play as hard as we can, but we can't afford to get people in foul trouble," Andruzzi said.

"But you can't quit playing either. You just have to play smart."

Andruzzi said she wasn't sure who she would start on Saturday. "We're going up against some big kids (at ETSU), so it'll depend on how we match up."

East Tennessee was 5-8 earlier in the week, after having won two in a row over James Madison and Western Carolina. The Lady Buccaneers are led by 5-10 senior guard Marsha Cowart, averaging 23.8 points a game. Sophomore guard Lori Hines is hitting 11.9 point, while 6-0 center Punkie Mills has a 9.6 average.

Appalachian State snapped a 14-game losing streak with a 71-69 victory over Marshall — its first win of the year — last week. The Mountaineers are always tough on the Pirates in Boone, Andruzzi pointed out.

ASU is led by 5-11 forward Meana Cusinano with an 11.8 average, the only Lady Mountaineer in double figures.

Bear Knew His Career Over

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Former Alabama coach Paul "Bear" Bryant knew that he "could no longer carry on the rigors of coaching" when he announced his retirement last month, his physician said.

Dr. William A. Hill said Bryant had suffered heart trouble since 1980, but he had a "tremendous strength" that allowed him to keep coaching past his 69th birthday.

Bryant's death Wednesday — attributed to "massive coronary arrest" — came six weeks after he announced he was retiring as head coach, after a quarter century at Alabama.

"I was relieved when he announced his retirement," Hill said Thursday. "He did know that he could no longer carry on the rigors of head coaching."

Hill said Bryant's death was brought on by arterial disease common among people his age.

"It is a disease that 50 percent of the American people have," he said. "I don't think that the pressures of the job contributed to it."

But Hill added that, while many people outside of football suffer the same coronary problems, the stress of coaching year after year was a factor "to some degree" in Bryant's illness. Bryant's death, said Hill, was caused by a "coronary occlusion," or blockage, brought on by hardening of the arteries. He said it was a disease that had built up "through the years" and was part of the aging process.

"Coach Bryant was a full 69 years old," the physician said. "He's lived a hard and trying life. He's been such a tower of strength to so many people, including me, that we seem to forget that he really was an old man."

"But an old man with tremendous strength."

As an example of that strength, Hill said Bryant was suffering from heart ailments during the past three years — a period in which Bryant was the focus of intense national interest as he broke the record for most college football victories.

Hill said Bryant was hospitalized in 1980 "with heart failure, where the heart muscle was weakened." But he was placed on heart medication and returned to coaching in about a week, said Hill.

A year later, the doctor said, Bryant suffered a "small stroke," which paralyzed the right side of his body for about a day.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The common thread that ran through the multitude of tributes to Paul W. "Bear" Bryant was loyalty.

It came from those who played for him, praising more the man than the coach who logged the most victories in college football history.

"He gave us something very few people can give," said former Alabama quarterback Steadman Shealy during a memorial service Thursday. "He gave us a part of himself."

The funeral for Bryant, who carved a 323-87 record during a 38-year career, was scheduled for 10 a.m. CST today at the First United Methodist Church with graveside services at Elmwood Cemetery in Birmingham at 12:30.

The 69-year-old coach died of a heart attack in a Tuscaloosa hospital Wednesday, six weeks to the day after he announced his retirement as head football coach at Alabama, the alma mater he served for 25 seasons.

Two neighboring churches, the Baptist and Presbyterian, were opened to hold some of the overflow crowd expected to pay final respects.

Police said more than 10,000 people were expected in the area of the services and along the route the 300-car funeral caravan will take to Birmingham.

All of Bryant's former players at Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&M and Alabama were to serve as honorary pallbearers with eight members of the 1982 team carrying his casket to its final resting place — Tommy Wilcox, Mike McQueen, Paul Fields, Jerry Sprinkle, Darrel White, Walter Lewis, Eddie Lowe and Jeremiah Castille.

Among the coaches, retired and active, arriving for the services were Woody Hayes of Ohio State, Darrell Royal of Texas, Frank Broyles and Lou Holtz of Arkansas, John McKay of the Tampa Bay Bucs, Jackie Sherrill of Texas A&M, Pat Dye of Auburn and Bryant's successor, Ray Perkins, the former Crimson Tide star and New York Giants coach.

George Allen, coach of the Chicago Blitz of the U.S. Football League, was to represent President Reagan, who had said upon learning of Bryant's death that "we Americans lost a hero who always seemed larger than life."

Scores of his former players talked of Bryant's concern for others, how he had helped people through the years.

The old coach extended that help in death. An official of the eye bank in New York said Thursday night that Bryant agreed three months ago to donate his eyes to the eye bank in Tuscaloosa when he died.

Bryant's last hurrah came in the Liberty Bowl at Memphis four weeks before his death, when his struggling final 7-4 team sent him into retirement with a 21-15 victory over Illinois.

Bryant was admitted to the hospital Tuesday night after complaining of chest pains.

Dr. William A. Hill, his personal physician, said Bryant died of "massive coronary arrest."

Hill said the coach had arterial disease that had built up through the years.

"He did know he could no longer carry on the rigors of coaching," Hill said, adding that the stress of coaching year after year was a factor in his heart problems "to some degree."

Thursday's memorial service drew a somber crowd of 4,000 into Memorial Coliseum.

Shealy called Bryant "a winner here on earth and I am convinced now that he's a winner with God."

The crowd stood in silence as Bryant's widow, Mary

Harmon, and her family entered the coliseum.

Perkins cut short a recruiting trip to North Carolina to return for the services.

He said he had talked with Mrs. Bryant and that she was holding up well.

Perkins said she told him to go on recruiting, saying, "if you've got a player out there, go get him. I'm not going to, of course," said Perkins. "There's plenty of time for that."

At the request of the family, the funeral caravan will pass slowly two Bryant landmarks as it rolls through Tuscaloosa — Bryant-Denny Stadium where Alabama lost only two games during his era and Memorial Coliseum, which housed Bryant's office.

Among the tributes to Bryant was one from a cross-state rival, former Auburn Coach Doug Barfield.

"We're losing more than just a great football coach," Barfield said. "We're losing a man who brought ideals and values to athletics. I'll always respect the man."

Gamecocks Drill Clemson

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina, in its 125th basketball encounter with archrival Clemson since 1912, left the Tigers in the dust here Thursday night. When the buzzer sounded, the Gamecocks were the 94-77 victors.

"We got off to a great start," said interim Gamecock coach Steve Steinwedel.

South Carolina, now 13-4 and 75-50 in its series with the Tigers, took an early lead in the two rivals' first encounter this season, which was played before a sellout crowd of 12,401 and on statewide television.

Kevin Darmody scored eight of the first 12 South Carolina points as the Gamecocks moved out to a 12-2 lead. Despite a hard-fought game, the Tigers never caught up.

The margin widened to 11 points, but Clemson trimmed the deficit to seven on a basket by David Shaffer to make it 27-20 with 7:55 remaining in the half.

At halftime, South Carolina had the lead, 44-31.

The Gamecocks moved out front again as the second half opened. Mike Brittain scored six points and Jimmy Foster chipped in four to give South Carolina a 60-37 advantage with 14:48 remaining in the game.

Clemson once more closed to within seven points, 72-65, but got no closer.

The loss left the Tigers 7-12 on the year. Clemson will get its chance for revenge Feb. 12, when the Gamecocks fly to Tigertown.

Steinwedel called Thursday's clash "a heck of a battle."

There were 62 fouls called and five players fouled out. South Carolina went to the line 51 times and sank 38 free throws.

"We heard the whistle more than usual down here," said Clemson coach Bill Foster. "Usually it's a war, and they don't call anything inside three stitches." The Tigers were called for 36 fouls.

Foster was the game's high scorer with 19 points, while Darmody had 17. Shaffer, who came on as a substitute, led the Tigers with 14 points, and freshman Anthony Jenkins scored 12.

Losing Built Character For Both Teams

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Losing builds character. That is what football coaches tell their teams suffering through hard times.

The Washington Redskins and Miami Dolphins, who meet Sunday in Super Bowl XVII, both subscribe to that theory. They got here, they say, thanks in large measure to past hardships, including character-building losses suffered a year ago.

For the Dolphins, the test came in the 1981 divisional playoffs against the San Diego Chargers, a memorable game Miami lost 41-38 in overtime. Trailing 24-0 in the first quarter, they climbed off the deck to first tie the score, then take the lead, only to have the Chargers come back and tie it in the last minute. Then Uwe von Schamann had two field goal tries blocked before Rolf Benirschke kicked a 29-yarder to win it.

"That loss built a little character," said guard Bob Kuechenberg. "You're down 24-0 in the first quarter. We did a little fast calculating on the sidelines and it projected to 96-0 for the game. That would be a little embarrassing on national television and all."

It was time for a gut check. We came of age a little that day."

The victory sent the Chargers to the AFC championship game against Cincinnati the next week and finished Miami's season. The following Sunday, with San Diego playing for the conference title, Dolphin teammates A.J. Duhe and Doug Betters were on a skiing trip.

"We got up early, just like we were still playing," Duhe said. "We said, 'Let's ski all day,' and that's what we did."

And we did it with the same emotion and intensity of a game. It was as if we were still playing football."

"I remember standing in the locker room after the game," said defensive end Kim Bokamper. "I was thinking we had worked so hard and now we were going home with nothing. It was as tough as any game I had ever been in and I realized that we had to play even tougher than that."

"Everyone remembered that this year. We talked about it and what it felt like."

We gained a lot of maturity that day."

Charger tight end Kellen Winslow was a dramatic figure that day, helped off the field, at the end of the game, totally exhausted. Miami linebacker Earnest Rhone laughed at the memory of that.

"You think he was exhausted," he said. "Imagine how we felt chasing him all day. I couldn't have played much longer. I would have passed out. The next day I couldn't eat."

"We should have won and we could have won. There was a carryover from that game to this year."

The Redskins experienced the same kind of carryover, but their turnaround occurred somewhat earlier than Miami's.

At the start of 1981, Joe Gibbs was hired as Washington's new coach. His regime started in reverse with five consecutive losses, none of them closer than 10 points. The team was spinning its wheels.

"We were losing, but the team was staying together," said defensive tackle Dave Butz. "Nobody was pointing fingers, blaming other guys. We believed in the coach and in the system."

"There was a growing attitude rather than an instant awareness. We were convinced when Coach Gibbs said this was only temporary. The veterans had never lost that often. He told us to hold on, to keep on trying, that things would change around."

The next week, the Redskins went into Chicago and defeated the Bears 24-7 for Gibbs' first victory. John Riggins rushed for 126 yards and two touchdowns that day and it was a recipe the Redskins would follow straight to Pasadena a year later.

"That first win after the five losses — that was our turning point," Gibbs said. "They were so hungry and we stuck with them. From that time on, we were never beaten badly."

They almost were never beaten at all. Washington won eight of its final 11 games last season and is 11-1 this year, including the three playoff victories leading up to the Super Bowl. That is a 19-4 pace that is the best in pro football over that stretch.

"The foundation for this was built in that 0-5 start," said safety Mark Murphy. "All along, we felt we had a good coach and a good team and we could win. But we didn't until that game in Chicago. Then things fell into place and from then on, our record has been phenomenal."

Huskies Get Slap

SEATTLE (AP) — Violations of recruiting regulations by the University of Washington were unintentional, UW's athletic director said after a public reprimand from the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions on Thursday said Washington was responsible for three rules violations in its summer 1980 recruitment of a basketball player who later decided against attending the university.

The player involved was Greg Wiltjer, who eventually opted to play at Oregon State. He spent one year there, and now plays for Brewster Packing in the Northwest AAU league.

Violations included gifts of a travel bag and two pairs of basketball shoes for the recruit, and free lodging for him at the home of a person representing the "university's athletic interests," NCAA officials said in Mission, Kan.

"The violations reported by the NCAA committee on infractions in our men's basketball program are a matter of serious concern to me, to coach (Marv) Harshman and to the others involved," Washington Athletic Director Mike Lude said in a prepared statement Thursday night. "We regret very much if these violations occurred."

"During the NCAA inquiry and an earlier one by the Pac-10 Conference, the University of Washington cooperated to the fullest extent possible," Lude said.

The NCAA reprimand does not include sanctions against the Washington basketball program.

'Super Sunday' And The Week Claimed By NBC

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The banks will be closed and the nation is already heady with expectation. The only thing missing is a Hallmark Card telling us to have a "Happy Super Sunday." Without doubt, the Super Bowl is America's No. 1 undeclared national holiday.

It's also our top-rated one. According to NBC, five of the 10 most-watched shows ever are Super Bowls, and Sunday's match-up between Washington and Miami on NBC is bound to give the No. 3 network a big boost in viewers, advertising revenues (a 30-second commercial costs $400,000) and promotional messages for future programs.

The last time NBC won a week in prime time was in October, when it televised another sports classic, the World Series. But Super Bowl XVII is such a phenomenon that even mighty "60 Minutes" will be knocked off as a weekly ratings winner.

NBC projects more than 100 million viewers will watch the game, which means this will be the first Sunday of the season in which CBS' super successful lineup (beginning with "60 Minutes" and ending with "Trapper John, M.D.") won't take the night.

The fact that this game transcends sports is not lost on NBC's announcing team of Dick Enberg and Merlin Olsen. "This is a social event," said Enberg, "so early on, we'll develop stories for fans who don't necessarily watch football. That way, they can get involved and care."

The beneficiary of the Super Bowl's audience will be "The A Team," which is scheduled after the 30-minute post-game show, around 10 p.m. EST. NBC has high hopes for "A Team," a campy spoof of "Mission Impossible," about a bizarre band of soldiers of fortune.

Last Sunday's two-hour premiere was heavily promoted by Mr. T, who was Sylvester Stallone's punching bag in "Rocky III" and, before that, the bodyguard for real-life heavyweight boxer Leon Spinks.

Mr. T looks like the kind of dude who would dot your eyes if you crossed him. And his semiaudible promotion seems to have gotten the message across, that "The A Team" is action-adventure, pure escapism entertainment, a commodity much in demand in these hard economic times. "The A Team" was last week's fifth-rated program.

"We're not going to get 20 Emmy Award nominations with 'A Team,'" said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment. "But you can't program an entire schedule of 'Cheers,' 'St. Elsewhere,' 'Hill Street Blues' and 'Fame.' We're in the circulation business, and this show has good general appeal."

"The A Team" was created by Stephen J. Cannell, who succeeded with a non-conformist and non-violent private investigator in "The Rockford Files." His imagination also spawned "The Greatest American Hero" and "The Quest," two offbeat programs that fell flat on ABC Friday nights against CBS' "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest."

Cannell seems to be on a different wave length, or maybe a different planet, yet his characters in "The A Team" do have wacky charm. George Peppard plays the group's leader, Hannibal Smith, who was wearing a dragon suit and smoking a cigar with his paw during an amusing chase sequence last week.

After receiving a heavy viewer sampling for two weeks, "The A Team" will move to 8 p.m. EST on Tuesday nights, starting Feb. 8. "We hope it will do for us on Tuesday night what 'Magnum' does for CBS on Thursday," said Tartikoff.

Lust, power and revenge — the ingredients for any number of prime-time soap operas — are the major elements in "Phantom of the Opera" on CBS Saturday night. It's the fourth version of this classic tale of a man gone berserk with anger after his wife's suicide.

"He's a madman. His love kills," is the description of the phantom, played by Maximilian Schell. Although it lacks fire and passion, the CBS version is a respectable remake, boasting a top-flight cast, including Jane Seymour as the phantom's former and future love interests, and Michael York.

Veteran Quartet Is Performing Tonight

Arrogance, a veteran quartet from Raleigh, will perform tonight at Pappa Katz night club, where it will introduce two of the band's latest singles, "Southside Girl" and "Where Are You?"

The band, which plays only original music, consists of Robert Kirkland, guitarist; Don Dixon, bassist; Marty Stout, keyboardist; and Scott Davison, drummer. All members are vocalists.

Although the band has been classified as a "rock band," the single "Where Are You?" sounds more like a mix between beach music and new wave. The song begins with short, choppy chords, like those of some popular punk rock groups, then switches quickly into a more even rhythm of beach music.

"Southside Girl," written by Don Dixon, could possibly be classified into the "rock" category, but not like the more modern rock music. The song is more '60s-style rock music.

Arrogance has gained some favorable criticism. Robert Palmer of the New York Times said of the band,

"...a first class rock band ... evidences considerable originality," while Billboard noted that the band played "... punchy guitar-oriented rock." Trouser commented that the group was "a guaranteed get-downer, and good enough, bro!"

Arrogance, which has been together for 12 years, plays mainly in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia, along with some work in radio and TV commercials.

After performing for 12 years and producing five original albums and several singles, Arrogance should be complimented for sticking to its original music and not being persuaded into imitating old songs by more widely known bands.

A Review

Plaudits Due Evening Of Dance

First, the things wrong about East Carolina Dance Theater's "An Evening of Dance" which opened for a three-night run at McGinnis Theater Thursday night.

No. 1 — The disappointing brevity of Patricia Pertalion's "Dimensions of Time and Space," which uses magnificent bamboo sculptures by Tom Grubb. There's hardly time to see the beginning of an intriguing correlation between the vigorous, athletic dance of the five male dancers and the revolving over-the-audience sculpture before the dance ends. Granted, Ms. Pertalion set the piece to a fanfare, by nature a short piece of music. But there's no reason she can't tape the music, for say, three repetitions in order to expand this promising piece.

Actor Told 'Stay Away'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former "CHiPs" star Larry Wilcox has been found innocent of contempt of court for an altercation with his estranged wife, but was ordered to stay away from her except when visiting their child.

Superior Court Judge Kenneth Black said Thursday he was convinced there had been some "mutual combat" between the 35-year-old actor and Johanna Wilcox, but there was "a small reasonable doubt." Wilcox had willfully struck her during a Jan. 3 argument.

Black granted Mrs. Wilcox's request for a restraining order barring her husband from coming within 100 yards of her except when exercising his visitation rights to their 20-month-old daughter, Wendy.

Mrs. Wilcox, 34, had accused Wilcox of contempt of court for allegedly disobeying a May court order barring him from striking, restraining or harassing her.

She testified Wednesday that he struck her about the upper body when she refused to discuss a financial settlement in their divorce when he visited her Woodland Hills home. Her attorney, Robert V. Madden, said she suffered bruises but was not seriously injured.

No. 2 — The unfortunate fact that the program was sold out in advance, thus denying this exciting entertainment to a larger eastern North Carolina audience. (How about four or five evenings on the next round?)

No. 3 — The excessive length of the program. True, every dance had real merit, but right at three hours is simply too long — There's enough material in this program to provide two satisfying evenings of dance.

Now — for mention of a few of the dozens of plaudits the program richly deserves.

•The overall excellence of the dancers, mostly students, along with several community dancers. Particular praise to dancers in solo numbers — Thomas Bell, Elizabeth Pope, Anna Maria Sistare, Timothy White, Gregory Smith, Greg Phillips, Susu Corbitt, Lyn Beal, Jenny Houtz and Aubrey Barnes. Also to Paul Baker and Ralph Bass as the duo in the Russian Dance of "The Nutcracker." Several others also turned in excellent shorter solo bits — and the guest dancers, children from local dance studios, proved to be charming young troopers.

•The stunning visual effects realized by the imaginative lighting provided by David F. Downing, complemented by the wide array of gorgeous costumes created by Patrice Alexander. In several instances,

Drops Charge On Lou Rawls

ELLCOTT CITY, Md. (AP) — An assault charge filed against rhythm and blues singer Lou Rawls has been dropped, after the plaintiff said she no longer wanted to pursue the case.

The charge stemmed from a dispute following a concert by Rawls last July at the Merriweather Post Pavilion in nearby Columbia.

Sally C. Carroll, identified in court papers as Rawls' personal assistant, said the singer "struck me with his fist on the right cheek, eye and nose, causing fractures."

Rawls' lawyer said the 49-year-old singer was innocent of the charge. After Ms. Carroll decided to drop charges.

one wished it was possible to hold for a much longer viewing time scenes such as the silhouettes of dancers framed against a lavender backdrop in Patricia Weeks' "Floor Play," or the golden glow of light on sculpturally grouped figures in the concluding portion of Ms. Weeks' absorbing dramatic work, "Now I Lay Me Down To Sleep ..."

•The truly satisfying variety of dances created by the four choreographers — from the saucy, first-love stirrings in Patricia Pertalion's "Pastiche," to the many facets of movements in Patricia Weeks' "ARP Dances," the strong story lines in "Now I Lay ... " and "Paula Johnson's "Streetcar," and the classical offerings in Petrus van Muyden's pas de deux from "Le Corsair" and the divertissement from Act III of "The Nutcracker," with its familiar showcase pieces.

•Paula Johnson's entertaining dance set to traditional Oriental folk music for "The Tale of the Tongue-Cut Sparrow" is a delightful invention. Hopefully, means will be found to present this piece to local and area children. Youngsters would enjoy it as much as the mostly adult audience did on opening night.

•The rewards of electronic music for dance. Otto Henry's composition for "Now I Lay Me Down To Sleep" effectively synthesize emotions as varied as half-remembered nightmares, isolation and loneliness, and the joyful celebration of hope and consolation. In the same manner, Roger Hannay's music, combined with Don Evans' film projected on the backdrop, resulted in a perfect accompaniment for the interesting progression of pace in "ARP Dances."

Last, but certainly not least, bouquets to Johnson, Pertalion, van Muyden, and Weeks for the dedication of their talents in creating dances that stimulate and challenge an audience.

East Carolina Dance Theater's current "An Evening of Dance" is a triumphant confirmation that an evening of brilliant dance entertainment can be offered local dance patrons with university and community talent and resources.

Fund-Raising Drive By Lawmen's Ass'n

The Pitt County Law Enforcement Officers Association is trying to raise money to support the continued operation of its educational building off Port Terminal Road east of Greenville and to finance the construction of a firearms training range.

Bill Godley, chairman of the association's ways and means committee, said that in the past, the group has relied on fund-raising projects such as country and western shows. While the response to such projects has been good, Godley said, the biggest portion of the money raised goes out of the county and does not benefit the association.

"We're trying a different approach this year," said Godley, a State Bureau of Investigation agent.

Godley said letters have been sent to a number of local area businesses and individuals asking for contributions.

"We've raised about $2,500 so far," he said, "but we need at least that much more in order to operate during the coming year."

Godley said donations to the association are tax deductible. Persons or firms donating $100 or more will be recognized by having their names engraved on an appreciation plaque in the training building, he noted.

Godley said donations may be sent to treasurer G. L. Beppard at P.O. Box 3075, Greenville.

The county law enforcement officers association, with 60 members, is open to all local, state and federal law enforcement officers in the county, and is designed to increase inter-agency communication and understanding.

Highway Patrol Lt. A.S. Butler is president.

Bob Hamman of Dallas is the top-ranked American on the World Bridge Federation's master point list. He will get a chance to close in on the leaders at this year's World Team Championship, where the U.S. No. 1 team will probably start as favorites to win the Bermuda Bowl. Here's an example of his skill from the Spingold Championship last summer.

In competitive situations with distributional hands, it is usually wiser to bid one more than to elect to defend. Even though it seems that both six clubs and five spades must go down a trick, it is by no means easy for the defenders to collect their tricks against a spade contract, as Hamman demonstrated.

West led the king of clubs against five spades and continued with the ace. Hamman discarded his heart. Now the defenders missed their last chance when West shifted to a heart. Declarer played dummy's nine and ruffed East's queen. He then ran his trumps, coming down to this position:

When Hamman led his last trump and discarded the low heart from dummy, East had to retain the ace of hearts to guard against the knave in dummy. Therefore, he was forced to part with a diamond. Hamman now scored three diamond tricks for his contract.

To break the squeeze, the defenders must play a diamond. Obvious, isn't it?

It's Almost ... Super Bowl Sunday!!!

The team that wins the Super Bowl on Sunday will receive the Super Bowl XVII version of the Vince Lombardi Trophy, named for the late coach of the Green Bay Packers who led his team to the first Super Bowl victory. On January 15, 1967, the Lombardi Packers met the Kansas City Chiefs at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum before 62,000 fans. Led by quarterback Bart Starr, Green Bay took a half-time lead of 14-10, though the Chiefs led on the statistics charts. Then, early in the third quarter, Packer Willie Wood intercepted a pass from Kansas City's quarterback Len Dawson. Green Bay scored again and ran away with the second half for a 35-10 victory.

DO YOU KNOW — What team has won the most Super Bowls?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — President Truman first sent military advisors to Vietnam.

C-of-C Meeting...

retiring the debt on the Fleming House, the tobacco program, education in the area and industrial development.

"These are the issues we need to emphasize in 1983," Duffus said.

"We need to get some industry into the county," he said. "There's no reason anyone in Pitt County should be without a job."

Education, said Duffus, is a benefit to the county, and he said the chamber's aim is "to make this benefit the highest quality it can be."

"In addition, we cannot afford to let the livelihood of our farmers be undermined," said the chairman. "I am asking the membership to focus on the tobacco program, the farmers and their livelihood."

Duffus said another goal for 1983 was "getting the $50,000 debt for the Fleming House paid off."

"I do not want this debt to be on the chamber's head," he said.

Larkin Little, 1982 chamber chairman, said the year was one of "challenge and success" for the organization.

"The biggest accomplishment," he said, "was moving into the Fleming House, our new headquarters."

"None of the things (that were accomplished) could have been done by our board of directors," Little said. "They were done by our many hard-working volunteers."

Little listed several other chamber accomplishments in 1982, including:

- Hosting six Pepsi breaks on current issues.
- Organizing leadership institute for young executives
- Held out-of-town planning conference in Williamsburg, Va.
- Published and distributed 4,200 copies of "Student Treasure Guide to Greenville."
- Conducted feasibility study for a regional center.
- Sponsored meetings with Rep. Walter Jones and Sen. John East.
- Sponsored inter-city community visit to Columbia, Mo.

In addition, Little said, the Ayden, Bethel and Grifton councils had accomplishments of their own, including:

•In Ayden, the first annual meeting was held, the Citizen of the Year Award was presented, three Pepsi Breaks were sponsored, Ayden Beautification Week was held and the town received the Governor's Community of Excellence Award.

•In Grifton, the council was formed with 49 members, "Clean Up, Fix Up and Paint Up" week was sponsored, one Pepsi Break was held, an appreciation dinner for the fire department and rescue squad was held and the town received the Governor's Community of Excellence Award.

•In Bethel, a survey was conducted for day care center need and ground was broken in the fall of 1982, two Pepsi Breaks were held, a Progress Report Banquet was sponsored, the Citizen of the Year Award was given and the town received the Governor's Community of Excellence Award.

Withholding...

built-in inequities, and that they will fall hardest on those who can least afford them. There is certain to be a lot of over-withholding — and in some cases, people entitled to refunds may neglect to file for them.

"An exemption system is provided for people 65 and older who did not pay more than $1,500 in taxes in the previous year ($2,500 for joint returns) and for anyone who paid $600 or less ($1,000 for joint returns). But to get exemptions, people would have to file with each interest and dividend-paying source, disclosing private details about their incomes and, for senior citizens, their age.

"Because it is based on the previous year's tax, the exemption system is also unfair to people whose incomes drop in the current year — people who have retired, for instance, or who have lost their jobs or other sources of income."

The officials said, "There's still time for Congress to give this incredibly ill-advised scheme a quick, decent burial. Those who agree that saddling millions of honest taxpayers with this complicated, cumbersome system is the worst possible way to boost tax revenues, should let their U.S. senators and representatives in Congress know — and do it now!"

REVIVAL

Revival services will be held today and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Holy Mission Church, 905 Dickinson Ave. The Anointed One Evangelistic Prayer Team with Evy Peterson and Evy Williams will be featured. The services are open to the public.
