Deficit-Choked Budget Plan Is Unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today unveiled a deficit-choked $848.5 billion budget plan for 1984 in which the entire spending increase would be absorbed by the military and higher interest charges on the national debt.

As he delivered his spending blueprint to Congress, the president plunged straight into a showdown with lawmakers over his push to give more to defense and less to social programs. He said he remains "adamantly opposed" to a public jobs bill, the first order of business on Capitol Hill.

Despite a $189 billion deficit projection for fiscal 1984, the year he once pledged would show a surplus, the president declared: "The stage is set; a recovery to vigorous, sustainable, noninflationary economic growth is imminent.

"Steadily and unmistakably, our national economy is completing the transition from recession to recovery," he said.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, today said congressional action on the budget would be "extremely difficult" in view of its projected deficits and funding allocations.

But he predicted that the Senate will vote on the blueprint before Easter. He said he felt the president's budget was fair, though he is not convinced that the military increases are justified.

He said there is room for compromise.

"For those who think it's unfair, I think the test is what kind of budget they will produce," he added.

Reagan proposed to increase spending in the new fiscal year by $43.3 billion — or a modest 5.4 percent — from fiscal 1983, which ends Sept. 30.

The increase, an amount adequate only to cover the expected rate of inflation, equaled the combined rise devoted to defense and interest on the national debt. That left all domestic spending — on balance — frozen at or below this year's levels.

Programs for the poor — including food stamps, welfare and child nutrition — would be reduced. Annual cost-of-living raises for Social Security and other pension and disability programs would be delayed six months. Overall spending on farm programs, energy and the environment, education and job training would fall.

Government and military salaries and pensions would be frozen for a year.

However, the president sought an additional $1.5 million to run his White House offices and $500,000 for the residence.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon's budget for 1984 would jump $29.7 billion — or 14 percent — to $238.6 billion, even after an $8 billion cut from the 1984 defense spending envisioned in last year's budget. Nuclear weapons production by the Energy Department would rise an additional $1 billion.

Net interest payments on the national debt, now $1.2 trillion and mounting, would rise by $14.3 billion to $103.2 billion.

Reagan also called for $146 billion in standby taxes from fiscal 1986 through 1988 if needed to hold down future deficits.

The package, consisting of an crude oil excise tax equal to 12 cents per gallon of gasoline and an unspecified income tax

Three Die Due Collision

WALSTONBURG — An East Carolina University student and two Walstonburg women were killed near here this morning about 7 o'clock in a head-on automobile collision.

North Carolina highway patrolman F.L. Kearney said there were no survivors of the accident — the drivers of both cars that collided on Highway 264 about 1½ miles north of here died at the scene, as did the only passenger involved. The dead are identified as Geraldine Fields Jones, 28, driving, her sister, Barbara Fields Woods, 30, a passenger, both of Rt. 2, Walstonburg; and Diana Lynn Leonard, 19, of Knightdale.

The Leonard car traveling eastward, apparently crossed into the westbound lane striking the Jones car, Trooper Kearney said.

He said there were no skid marks and apparently no other cars involved, leading him to think that Miss Leonard went to sleep at the wheel and veered into the wrong lane.

The Walstonburg women, both employees of Allied Maintenance Company, were on their way to work at the Firestone plant in Wilson, Kearney said their family says. Miss Leonard is listed as a student at East Carolina University.

Committee Hopefully Plans To Name Bundy Successor Today

W. R. (Dick) Price, chairman of the State House of Representatives District Committee which is meeting today to select a replacement for Rep. Sam D. Bundy, said this morning that no one from Greene County had expressed an interest in filling the vacant seat. A committee decision was expected to be made today.

Bundy, who had served in the state House since 1971, died January 19.

Price said the committee — composed of two members from Pitt County and two from Greene — was meeting today at 3 p.m. at First Citizens Bank in Snow Hill.

Commenting this morning on the procedure to be followed, Price said he would "play it by ear," but indicated that persons interested in the appointment will be given "about 5 minute interviews. We're not going to make a long drawn out thing about it," he said.

However, Price said the meeting would not be open to the public. "We'll make the selection this afternoon ... hope to anyway," and the committee's recommendation would be announced following the session.

"We've got to write a letter to Gov. Hunt," giving the name of the person the committee recommends, Price said. Hunt will make the appointment, but he is bound by law to follow the committee's recommendation.

Price and Lionel Moore are Greene County's representatives on the committee, while Pitt's members include Mary Williams and Fredrica Jacobson.

A number of persons have been mentioned as possible successors to Bundy.

Five — including Farmville Mayor Rusty Duke; Greenville real estate broker Mark Tipton; former Farmville Mayor Linwood Mercer; Walter Jones Jr., son of the veteran congressman; and Mark Owens of Fountain, an attorney and chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education — made their interest known at a meeting of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee last week.

Other names mentioned for the post have included Greenville attorney Tom Taft, Winterville resident Kenneth Dews, and former East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. Leo W. Jenkins.

However, Taft said last week he was not interested in the appointment, and Dews said this morning that he is not a candidate for the post.

Owens was an unsuccessful candidate for the State House in the 1980 primary, while Tipton ran unsuccessfully for the State Senate in 1980. Mercer was an unsuccessful candidate for the State Senate in 1981.

'Air Violations' Face Sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency cited 144 counties in 31 states today for clean-air violations that could result in the loss of millions of dollars in federal highway aid.

Most of the counties listed — 111 in all — were cited for failing to meet national health standards for five pollutants by a Dec. 31 deadline set by Congress in 1977. The other 33 counties the agency is proposing sanctions against have failed to meet other requirements in the Clean Air Act, such as the passage of needed legislation to implement auto exhaust inspection programs.

The list covers many big cities, including Los Angeles, often cited as having the worst auto pollution problems in the country, and Pittsburgh. But it also covers such cities as Miami and Phoenix, Ariz., which are generally considered to have far fewer pollution problems.

The agency's action today puts the areas on notice of its intention to impose penalties called for in the law. The counties will have 45 days to contest the listing, presenting evidence on why they should not be cited for violations. The EPA will review these submissions and the first penalties are not expected to be imposed until May at the earliest.

Those counties where the EPA does invoke penalties face the loss of millions of dollars in federal highway aid and a ban on the construction of certain types of factories.

Even as EPA officials set in motion the sanction process, they criticized the procedures as unnecessary and called on Congress to change the law and extend the deadlines.

"The imposition of these sanctions will be incredibly disruptive, both economically and environmentally," said EPA administrator Anne Gorsuch. "It is a very distasteful function to me."

Assistant Administrator Kathleen Bennett said the deadlines were "arbitrary at best and have little relation to the attainment of cleaner air in the 1980s. The act's mandatory sanctions for failure to meet the deadlines would, if Congress does not amend the act, pose the threat of possible senseless economic disruption and the retardation of environmental progress."

The listing ends months of speculation over just how many counties the EPA would seek to impose penalties against.

The first sanction to take effect will be bans on the construction of major new factories. Dozens of areas of the country already have been hit with these sanctions for failing to meet a 1979 deadline to produce an acceptable plan describing how they would reduce air pollution.

Most counties have not felt much of a pinch from this sanction, primarily because it only covers the pollutant for which the county is not in compliance. Thus, if a county is violating the sulfur dioxide standard, only factories emitting more than 100 tons per year of sulfur dioxide would be banned. Construction of factories emitting other pollutants would not be halted.

Fury Of The Waves

STORM WAVE — A giant wave all but engulfed an apartment building in Malibu, California Saturday. Many Californians took advantage of sunny weather to return to flooded or sand-clogged homes today and begin the cleanup after last week's violent storms. Four counties have been declared disaster areas and officials are still counting the toll which thus far has reached 10 people known dead, 22 injured and 3,980 displaced. The week-long storms have caused an estimated $71 million in damages and emergency crews in Northern California are reinforcing levees protecting 16,800 acres of farmland. (AP Laserphoto)

Legislators Feel Pressure To Consider Sales Tax Proposals

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Mounting construction needs and slowly expanding revenue supplies are putting pressure on the General Assembly to consider raising the 3 percent sales tax.

The legislature has before it two bills to raise the sales tax and two similar proposals that have yet to be introduced.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, introduced a measure Friday to phase out the food tax, raise the sales tax and raise the tax on new cars. He outlined a plan for spending the money primarily on construction of water and sewer projects, public schools and highways.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, introduced a bill earlier to raise the sales tax from 3 percent to 4 percent. He wanted to earmark the money for school construction, water and clean air projects and highways, as well as for raising state employees' salaries and other operating costs.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips wants to raise the sales tax to get money mostly for public school buildings and the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners wants to give counties the authority to levy a tax increase to benefit them. Neither proposal has been introduced.

"Everybody feels a need to address the revenue problem," Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said last week.

"It's obvious we need more money," House Speaker Liston Ramsey has said.

There are several reasons that legislators are looking closely for money for capital projects.

Gov. Jim Hunt based his proposed 1983-84 budget on estimates that state tax revenues will increase about 8.8 percent next year. He is asking that all of that money except $95 million go for continuing operations at current levels.

The $95 million would pay for lifting the freeze on state workers' and teachers' salaries. The salaries were frozen last year as a budget-cutting measure.

But legislative analysts predict that revenues will be lower, about $95 million lower, putting the salary increase in jeopardy.

Omitted from the budget were $30 million in requests for capital projects in the University of North Carolina system and millions of dollars in requests from community colleges for upgrading facilities and training equipment.

In addition, money from 1977 highway bonds runs out at the end of this fiscal year, creating the need for money to match federal highway aid. The state needs $56.5 million in 1983-84 and $63.9 million in 1984-85 in order to avoid forfeiting $220 million the first year and $246 million the second year in federal matching funds.

Money from clean water bonds issued in 1977 also ran out last year. The 1980 General Assembly approved a bill giving Hunt authority to

TRIBUTE TO TWO

Hotline has been asked by Boys Club of Pitt County Executive Director Chet Emerson to pay tribute to Joe Branch and Greg Dennis and their employer, Ajax Magnethermic of Winterville.

The two men recently refinished and repainted the Boys Club bus. Ajax donated the paint and the use of a large paint booth at its plant. The project was planned and supervised by Ed Stanley, plant manager who is serving this year as president of the Boys Club board of directors. Branch and Dennis did the work on their own time.

Emerson expressed appreciation to the individuals and the industry, businesses and civic clubs of Pitt County who enable the Boys Club to serve more than 750 boys 6-18 with character-developing programs.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

If you can cut, press and glue, you can create these stunning seashell wall hangings — no other skills are needed. First, you cut fabric pieces from a full-size pattern, then fuse the pieces to the background fabric with Stitch Witchery and finish by gluing outlines of yarn around all the pieces. The finished measurement, including the background fabric, is a generous 24 by 34 inches.

To obtain directions for making both Fabric Art Seashells, send your request for Pattern No. LF-1303 with $3 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you can order Kit No. KF-13032, containing pattern and materials for making both Fabric Art Shells, by sending a check or money order for $33.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. If you prefer to make just one of the shells, send $18.50 and specify Seashell A (on the left in photo) or Seashell B (on the right in photo). All kits have fabrics in warm natural beige and brown tones.

Dear Pat: I am writing in regard to your column in November concerning a proposed newsletter for disabled needlecrafters. It is an excellent idea. As an activity director in a nursing home, I work with people with all types of disabilities and your newsletter would be of great help. We encourage our residents to continue lifelong hobbies and also not to be afraid to try something new. I firmly believe that "you're never too old to learn." One resident made her first "funnel cake" at the age of 100. If such a newsletter exists, please add my name. I hope this idea really takes off. — Helen Cole, Washington, Pa.

From the response to my earlier column, I have written one newsletter with excerpts from various letters from readers and these have gone out to the many people who sent their names with a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Because there does seem to be a need for this, I hope to continue writing other newsletters, with a new one about every three months. I also have had several offers of assistance from some volunteers that will make this possible. Now all I need is a continued flow of letters with helpful ideas from people who have found ways to continue their needlecraft projects in spite of their disabilities or handicaps and information on sources of supplies of adaptive aids.

The disabilities mentioned most often in the letters I've received to date are related to spinal problems. The following letter typifies the indomitable spirit of so many who suffer from painful disabilities.

Dear Pat: I have ruptured discs in my back, and my spine is deteriorating. I also have muscle and nerve damage to both legs. I do go for walks daily and walk around my apartment. I am in constant pain — no matter if I am sitting, standing, walking or lying down, but my most comfortable position is lying on my side.

While in this position, I am very active doing crafts, writing letters and talking on the phone. I often make calls for friends who work and are unable or don't have the time to do so themselves. My activities include crochet, needlepoint, embroidery, quilting (small items), flower arrangements, ceramics and reading.

I am unable to hold anything up as it pulls on my back, therefore, as I work I lay everything on my chest and bed. This puts everything at an odd angle, but once one becomes accustomed to this, everything works out fine.

I am no longer able to hold up a heavy book long enough to read it, so I often get tapes and records from the local library, which has a wide range of recorded books, both fiction and nonfiction.

My best advice to others is to approach everything with a positive attitude and above all to keep your sense of humor. Some days will look dreary, but, with faith in God and faith in yourself, things have a way of working out for the best. I think your idea for a directory and newsletter will be great. — Janet Perrott, Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW FACES...Tina Bredensteiner of Carmel, Ind. before and after surgery to build up her upper and lower jaws. Cases like Tina's and the latest advances in such surgery were discussed during the joint meeting of the American Association of Orthodontists and the American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons. (AP Laserphoto)

Surgery Brings New Faces

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For most of 16-year-old Tina Bredensteiner's life, other children stared and laughed at her deformed face. But now surgery has made her so confident that she used her appearance in an award-winning science project.

"This sounds cruel, but when I was little, (my mother) would push me outside and lock the door so I would go outside and play with my friends and become closer. If she hadn't done this I would probably still be in the house hiding in the corner," she says.

The surgery ended all the stares and giggles by building her chin and upper jaw from almost nothing to normal proportions.

The doctor who performed the operations, Dr. Larry Wolford, was among 1,100 at a joint convention of the American Association of Orthodontists and the American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons this weekend in New Orleans.

The doctors talked about cases such as Tina's and developments in the surgery, which Wolford said requires teamwork not only between orthodontists and oral surgeons, but gum specialists and others.

Another oral surgeon, Dr. Tom Walsh of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, said he always works with a psychologist, and has set up a program in which patients who have undergone surgery counsel those about to do so.

"We get beyond the carpentry and mechanics and get into what's happening psychologically, emotionally and spiritually," he said. "This surgery changes a person's identity. In many cases, it's an astounding change."

Wolford said he doesn't work with a psychologist because he does so much orthognathic surgery — surgery to realign faces and jaws — about 200 operations a year. "Sometimes we put bone in, sometimes we take bone out. If we put it in, most times we'll borrow a little bit from the hip. On some deformities, sometimes we'll take a rib."

He said the lower jaw often can be made longer by cutting it horizontally and sliding part of it forward.

"The body just fills in any of the bone gap areas," he said in an interview Saturday. "Also, almost all the surgery is done from inside the mouth. So there are virtually no external scars."

Dr. Frank Hilliard, an orthodontist who works with Wolford in Fort Worth, Texas, said receding chins are one of the biggest reasons for such surgery — although only two to three percent have problems as severe as Tina's.

"I would say the major motivation is probably improved appearance," he said. He said about 60 percent want mostly to improve their looks, and the remainder want to improve their teeth and bite. He also estimated that 75 percent of the patients are women between the ages of 21 and 34.

Tina went through the surgery almost exactly two years ago, when she was 14, she said in a telephone interview Saturday from her home in Carmel, Ind. She said she had asked about it earlier, but doctors told her she had to wait because her jaw was still growing.

She had two operations. Her jaws were wired shut for six weeks after the first one and 11 weeks after the second.

"Most people, when they have their mouths wired shut, can eat watered down food. I couldn't eat anything because I had so many wires and bolts. I had to get malts morning, noon and night," she said.

Last spring she and a friend used her surgery as part of a science fair project. Tina showed pictures of herself before the operation and talked about the surgery. Her friend, who has a mentally retarded brother, talked about retardation.

"We won first place. I think it was because both of us ... were so open about our problems," she said.

"I think people hate to ask questions. But if you're willing to go ahead and tell them what happened, they feel a lot more comfortable," she said.

"Now I can help other children and adults deal with problems that they have. ... I want to work with handicapped children. Because I have been handicapped myself. I know most of the emotions that they might have."

It's Orange Marmalade Time

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
If you're interested in making orange marmalade — a thrifty pursuit many cooks find satisfying — this is the time of year when large navel oranges are plentiful and good to use in the preserves.

A man who used to be in the marmalade business in Scotland helped work out the following recipe. We figured he'd know what method to use for a fine preserve — and he did.

Part of the procedure involves removing the pulp from the shells after the orange juice has been squeezed from them; then this pulp is drained and the liquid pressed from it is added to the squeezed orange juice. Our Scottish expert advised doing this because this pressed-out liquid contains pectin — which makes for good "jellying."

ORANGE MARMALADE
3 pounds (about) navel oranges (about 5 large)

1 large lemon
2½ quarts (about) water
¾ cups sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
Rinse oranges and lemon; cut a thin slice from stem ends and discard. In a 5 or 6-quart non-corrosive saucepot, cover oranges and lemon with water — about 2½ quarts. Over-medium heat bring to a boil; boil gently until tender — about 30 minutes; drain. Rinse fruit under cold water; cover with fresh cold water and cool about 15 minutes; drain.

Halve oranges and lemon crosswise. With a juicer, extract as much juice as possible; reserve both juice and shells. Using a tablespoon, remove pulp from shells, again reserving shells. Turn pulp into a strainer and extract remaining liquid by firmly pressing down with a spoon. Discard pulp; add liquid to reserved juice; add enough water to make 2½ cups.

With the steel blade of a food processor, or with a knife, finely chop the reserved shells in 2 batches (the large pieces should be about the size of rolled oats). Into the 5-quart non-corrosive saucepot, turn the 2½ cups liquid and the chopped shells; bring to a boil; simmer 5 minutes. Add sugar and corn syrup and stir until dissolved; cool. Cover; let stand 8 hours or overnight.

Bring to a boil; stirring often, boil gently (skimming foam if necessary) until thick and light-amber colored (220 degrees on a candy or jelly thermometer) — about 25 minutes. Ladle into clean hot ½-pint jars leaving ¼-inch headspace. Wipe top edges with damp towel. Seal according to jar manufacturer's directions. Process in boiling water bath for 10 minutes. Cool jars on a wire rack or folded towel. Makes 5 to 6 one-half pint jars.

DID YOU KNOW...
by Dean's Photography SHOWERS OF SUGGESTIONS

If you're a bride-to-be, or a friend or relative, you're probably aware of what the traditional shower or wedding gift should be. Pieces of the bride's chosen china, crystal or silver patterns, small electrical appliances, kitchenware and linens are all safe and practical gifts. The following are some unique and non-traditional gift suggestions:

Plants: a hanging or standing plant is always unique, and can be both a living and a long-lasting gift. If the bride doesn't have a green thumb, the pretty pot or plant hanger can be used over and over.

Picture frames: attractive picture frames add to any home's decor. A white enamel frame, for example, could be used to hold that cherished wedding photo. Multi-picture collage-type frames can hold many memories; relatives could even include family photographs, leaving space for wedding pictures.

Baskets: woven baskets in various sizes are practical for serving bread, rolls, pastries, fruit, nuts, etc. Those with pretty patterns also make an attractive wall grouping.

NEW PRODUCTION
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)
— A two-act dramatic production tracing performances of Shakespeare's plays in the U.S. from the 17th to the 20th centuries has been created at the University of Rochester.

Undergraduates worked with Bill Homewood, a veteran actor from England's Royal Shakespeare Company and a visiting professor at Rochester. Homewood says the show will be performed by Platform Theatre in England and may also be staged at the Stratford Poetry Festival.

Among other discoveries, students learned of a 1752 performance of "Othello" in Williamsburg, Va., attended by Cherokee braves, some of whom stormed onto the stage to stop a Shakespearean sword fight.

Peele-Weston Vows Solemnized Friday

BLOUNTS CREEK — Debbie Sue Weston and Jonathan Scott Peele were united in marriage Friday evening at seven o'clock. The double ring, candlelight ceremony was performed by Kent Gurganus in Elizabeth Chapel Church of Christ here.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Phil R. Weston of Route 2, Chocowinity and Mr. and Mrs. Elwood C. Peele of Greenville.

Kathy Norman of Blounts Creek was honor attendant. Ron Northrup of Greenville was best man.

Ushers were Clint and Johnie Batchelor of Blounts Creek, cousins of the bride.

A program of wedding music was presented by Roy Lewis of Blounts Creek, cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of alencon lace over taffeta stitched with seed pearls and sequins. The gown was designed with a sabrina neckline, long lace sleeves and natural waistline. Her Juliet cap of matching lace was trimmed with pearls and was attached to a lace bordered, elbow length illusion veil. She carried a silk bouquet of mixed flowers tied with bridal satin.

The honor attendant was attired in a day dress of pink linen complemented by a self-fabric tie trimmed in lace.

A reception was held after the ceremony. Jo Ann Smith poured punch and Marie Long cut the wedding cake. Linda Whitehurst presided at the guest register.

Allen Craig was mistress of ceremonies.

After a wedding trip to the coast the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a senior at Chocowinity High School. The bridegroom graduated from J.H. Rose High School and attended Pitt Community College. He is a store manager with Fast Fare in Greenville.

Don't forget the light bulbs when dusting furniture because a dusty bulb will give off up to 50 percent less light.

Wedding Vows Are Solemnized

Raye H. Albritton and Terence C. Black were united in marriage Wednesday evening at the home of the bride in Greenville. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Richard Miller.

The bride received an associate degree in secretarial science from East Carolina University. The bridegroom received B.S. and masters degrees in mechanical engineering from the University of Kentucky at Lexington.

Both the bride and bridegroom are employed by Procter and Gamble. He is a major in the U.S. Air Force Reserve.

A skiing trip to Wintgreen, Va. is planned for the wedding trip.

The bride is the daughter of Pattie C. Hathaway of Farmville and the late G.D. Hathaway. The bridegroom is the son of Col. (USA, Ret.) and Mrs. Ganes Black of Eldorado Hills, Calif.

Dear Abby

Fancy Footwork Throws Lovers Off-Balance

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: No lectures, please. Just advice. I'm in love with a married man. (I'm also married.)

"J." and I are not teen-agers. We're two mature adults who agree that we belong together, but the timing was wrong. Had we met while we were both single, we would have been married. We are so right for each other.

We've been seeing each other for three years. My husband doesn't suspect anything and neither does his wife. In fact, we are a very friendly foursome.

I have not told my husband yet because I want to be absolutely sure that J. will leave his wife to marry me. (She has Parkinson's disease in the early stages and it may get worse with time.)

J. says he will not ask his wife for a divorce until he's sure I am leaving my husband. Who should make the first move?

DEADLOCKED

DEAR DEAD: There is more than an "Alphonse-Gaston minuet" going on here. You and J. may feel that you "belong" together, but you obviously don't trust each other.

There is also the problem of J.'s dealing with his guilt if he leaves an ailing wife. Before you try to figure out how to work your scheme into a reality, you need to get some professional help and make a decision you can both live with.

Meanwhile, unless and until you get professional help, you're asking for deep trouble if you continue to "see each other."

DEAR ABBY: The other evening at dinner I jokingly said to my husband, "I'll bet your girlfriend's name is the same as mine."

He said, "It sure is. That way I won't get you two mixed up." But, Abby, as he was saying this, he became so flustered he poured too much ketchup on his plate, and his face got as red as the ketchup he was pouring.

What are your comments? He travels a lot in his business.

LOST IN NEBRASKA

DEAR LOST: Maybe you "red" more into his words than you should have. Always assume a person is innocent until you ketchup to him.

DEAR ABBY: Exactly what are the responsibilities of a godmother? Here's the situation: I have a friend. We're close, but not that close. "Molly" has a 3-year-old child and she's expecting another any day now. She is also being divorced.

I am a professional woman, single and childless. The other night we met for dinner. (We do that once or twice a year.) During dinner Molly asked me to be her baby's godmother. I accepted on an impulse and we went on to talk about other things.

Now I'm having second thoughts. If something happens to the mother, isn't the godmother supposed to adopt her child? Now I regret having accepted so hastily. To be honest, I really don't want to be her baby's godmother. How can I get out of it without putting a strain on our friendship?

SPOKE TOO SOON

DEAR SPOKE: You may not be able to. But feeling as you do, tell Molly promptly that you have had second thoughts and wish to decline the honor of being her baby's godmother.

The obligation of a godparent is essentially to see that the child is raised in the same faith as the

DENTURES - HANDLE WITH CARE

When is the most dangerous time in the life of dentures (sometimes called false teeth - but not by dentists)? The most dangerous period is when your dentures are out of your mouth!

Dentures should be handled carefully when they're out of your mouth. Dropping them even a few inches into a washbowl can break them. Hold your dentures over a towel or a basin half-filled with water. Then, should they slip from your hand, there will be a cushion to help prevent damage.

When dentures are out of your mouth for any length of time, they should be placed in water or a cleansing solution. If they become dry, they can warp. Dentures should NEVER be placed in hot water. Hot water can warp the plastic.

If your denture does break, do not try to put it together yourself. Solvents found in some glues can damage denture plastics and irritate your mouth. It is almost impossible to precisely align broken parts. If you try, the denture will fit poorly and be useless or, even worse, harmful. Go directly to your dentist for repair.

Crime Fight Difficult

Governor Jim Hunt's crime-fighting package presented to the General Assembly includes so many facets it is difficult to settle on any one as being "most important", the runners-up or even "least likely to succeed".

There are almost as many solutions as there are problems posed by such a generalized term as "crime".

Basically, the Governor's goal was (and is) to keep hardened criminals away from the society they victimize. The premise is easy to say but not nearly as simple to put into effect.

One example: existing facilities to house our anti-social elements are already crowded despite a recent multi-million dollar flurry of expansion and modernization. Dealing with still more criminals of record is bound to require more space and more facilities.

There is no money.
Other questions already raised by legislators: how to deal with the proposal allowing judges to deny bond for people who commit crimes while free on bail. It sounds reasonable; but there remains the point that the target is still legally innocent.

Or take the suggestion of allowing judges to review past records of young offenders in weighing a case. Is it a good idea? Some have doubts.

More questions are going to be raised by lawmakers as they move deeper into the proposed program.

We do like the idea that compensation of victims be given top priority by the courts rather than being at the bottom of the list; but no way does that pose a deterrent to crime or additional punishment for the wrong-doer.

The basic idea of setting up stronger deterrents and separating hardened criminals from the rest of society is fine; accomplishing it will not be easy.

THE MAN BEHIND THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN!

No Knock By Politicians

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Bipartisanship is like motherhood. Politicians do not speak ill of it.

That being so, President Reagan's pledge to seek bipartisan solutions to economic woes was hardly a breakthrough. It's what he has been saying all along.

Democrats said they're for bipartisanship, too. Everybody is. They cheered Reagan, long and loud, for his State of the Union comment that:

"We who are in government must take the lead in restoring the economy."

Taken alone, that sounded like Democratic activism, not conservative Republican philosophy. It wasn't.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. applauded, too, and said the statement marked "a historic political reversal" for Reagan. It wasn't that, either.

The president went on to say that the single most important step to economic recovery is the reduction of interest rates. No disagreement on that, from Democrats or Republicans.

He then said that fear stands in the way of lower interest, and at that point, bipartisanship ended. Indeed, even GOP unity was out the window by morning, as Republicans in Congress moved to separate themselves from some of their president's proposals by offering alternatives of their own.

"Today, interest rates are based on fear that government will resort to measures, as it has in the past, that will send inflation zooming again," Reagan said. By that, he meant the kind of expensive, interventionist, Democratic programs he blames for creating the whole economic mess.

Reagan came to office preaching bipartisanship. It was nothing unusual; that's what presidents do. A program backed by both parties has a far better chance of approval, and success, than one forced by either side upon the other. Besides, Reagan had then, and has now, to deal with a Democratic House.

When he first went before Congress as president, he urged "a new spirit of partnership." He styled his initial budget curb-tax cut package a bipartisan program, since it was co-sponsored by a conservative Democrat. Democratic leaders fought against it, so the bipartisanship was a bit thin. Reagan won.

In that initial address, and in his congressional appearances since, the operative word has been "we." As in:

"Together, we can embark on this road not to make things easy but to make things better ... We're in control here. There's nothing wrong with America that together we can't fix."

The same idea was built into his 1983 State of the Union address. He sought "bipartisan spirit," and a bipartisan effort to repair the economy. "Conquering the deficits and putting the government's house in order will require the best efforts of all of us," he said.

But behind the rhetoric is the same debate that has been going on for two years. Congress is going to have to choose between two conflicting courses.

When Reagan says government must take the lead in restoring economic health, he means what he always meant, which is that the government should get out of the way, spend less, and let the private economy heal. When Democrats say the same thing, they mean that government should intercede, to prime the economic pump, and to provide jobs and aid to victims of the recession.

To Reagan that is a quick fix that will only make things worse. He argues that current economic woes are the legacy of just such programs, born of the era when Democrats controlled the government.

And no bow to bipartisanship is going to

Some Plus Economic Signs

No one truly knows when or how far the nation will pull out of the current recession, but there are now some hopeful signs.

Last week General Motors announced that it would recall over 21,400 now idle workers over the next three months. The recall is possible because of an increase in dealer orders.

There was also a drop in new unemployment claims for the week ending Jan. 15. The claims dropped from the previous week's total of 562,000 to 491,000. It was the first drop in this statistic since September, 1981.

Such figures indicate an improving economy, although how much it will improve is anybody's guess. Any indication of upturn in the economy will do its part to restore confidence, however, and perhaps that will be enough to bring the nation out of recession.

Good Thing? Bad Thing?

There is a communications revolution going on in the world right now. New technology has made it possible for people to communicate with each other by everything from satellites to car telephones. The only problem is that although scientists have made it possible to think up ways of keeping in touch with each other, no one seems to know if it's a good thing or a bad thing.

I came to this conclusion when I was riding with a friend in his car the other day. He had one of those new telephones attached under the dashboard.

"What do you need that for?" I asked him.

"I couldn't do without it. Look, all I have to do is hit this button and I can get my office." I heard the buzzing and a voice pickup up the phone.

"Thunderbird and Thunderbird," the lady said. "This is Mr. Thunderbird. Do you have any calls for me?"

"No I don't, Mr. Thunderbird."

"No calls at all?"

"No, Mr. Thunderbird. The phone hasn't rung since you left the office."

"Well, I'll be driving in my car for another 25 minutes. If anyone calls put them through to my car telephone."

"Business must be slow," I said.

"We're hurting like everybody else," he said.

"When did your recession start?"

"Come to think of it, just about the time I put the phone in the car."

"That's tough. Just when it's possible for you to communicate by car phone with a client, there are no clients."

"You have to be ready for

"Would you stop at Wagshal's and bring home a pound of roast beef, dill pickles and a case of beer?"

"I've already Passed Wagshal's. Why can't you send Tommy?"

"He's out driving somewhere, but he doesn't have a phone in his car."

Thunderbird muttered something and turned around.

"I guess there are pluses and minuses to having a phone," I said.

"I should have never given my wife my number."

The phone buzzed again. It was Thunderbird's secretary. "Mr. Thunderbird, Father Brooke of Holy Cross just called and said he needed the $10,000 you pledged for the new science building."

"Did you tell him you couldn't find me?"

"Yes. But he said to call you in your car. I didn't tell him you had a phone in your car."

"I did," Thunderbird said. "I thought he'd be happy one of his alumni had made good."

We picked up the roast beef at Wagshal's and started back out of Bethesda. The phone rang again.

Mrs. Thunderbird again. "Darling, be a dear and pick up Johanna at Holton-Arms. She seems to have missed her car pool."

Thunderbird almost threw the phone out the window.

It buzzed once more.

Thunderbird brightened up

THIS AFTERNOON

Already Decided

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Six months ago, during a legislative reception at the state Museum of History, Rep. Robert McAlister (D-Rockingham) was asked how the 1983 General Assembly would deal with the public concern about drunk driving. Sipping from a plastic punch glass, McAlister predicted tougher sentences and reduced plea bargaining. But, if Gov. Jim Hunt tried to raise the drinking age, "That would be something I couldn't go along with."

In November before the opening of an Advisory Budget Commission meeting, Sen. Harold Hardison, (D-Lenoir), was asked the same question. same answer. "Now I'll tell you one thing, if he tries to raise the drinking age, he'll run into trouble there."

Hardison and McAlister both used the same argument. If a man is old enough to go out and get shot defending his country, he ought to be able to buy a beer.

Well, no one's been shot defending America in the last six months, but a lot of kids have gotten themselves killed driving while drunk. Public support for a drunk driving crackdown appears to be peaking and Hunt is deftly using that support to pressure the Legislature.

Hardison and McAlister, both doubters just a short time ago, were asked last week if a higher drinking age for beer and wine is likely.

No question, both said. A drinking age of 19 — up from the current 18 — is a foregone conclusion. The question now is whether it will go even higher.

Those two are joined by other legislators interviewed the same day. Sen. Henson Barnes, (D-Wayne), Rep. Billy Watkins, (D-Vance), and Sen. Kenneth Royall (D-Durham) all agreed that the legislative battle is no longer whether we'll have a higher drinking age, but how much it will be raised.

Legislators who incorrectly sniffed the political winds just months ago weren't alone in miscalculating the public drive for anti-drunk driving measures. Hunt's study commission on drunk driving considered a proposal to raise the drinking age for beer and wine to 21. (That's already the age for hard liquor.) But they retreated to 19 feeling that's all they could get. "The task force thought that going to 21 would endanger the whole bill," says Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary.

Even the Rev. Coy Privette, chairman of the Christian Act League, concedes he didn't realize how strong the public felt about moving the drinking age to 21. The day after a public hearing on the drunk driving package, Privette said he was surprised by the number of people who spoke out for 21.

The growing political support for 21 catches teetotaling Hunt in an awkward position. Crime Control Secretary Heman Clark once opined that if Hunt has his way he'd raise the drinking age to 35. But Hunt wants to stick with his package, which has other proposals aimed at cutting juvenile drinking. So, a recent press conference found Hunt uncharacteristically arguing for a lower drinking age — albeit 19.

Other Editors Say Bad For Everyone

(Wilson Daily Times)

Discount tobacco is a wolf in sheep's clothing. It's allure is in appearance only and beneath that bright exterior, it lacks the essentials for quality tobacco.

Everybody is the loser when discount tobacco is grown, for it ends up in Stabilization and too much of the weed has already gone into that program.

Discount tobacco is appealing to the eye. It cures up pretty and gives more poundage per acre than acceptable varieties; but smokers don't look at color when they smoke. The sense of smell and taste come into play when the smoker lights up. And that is where discount tobacco fails to meet the test. It has no aroma or flavor, and that is what smoking pleasure is all about. So it is more bulk than anything else as far as tobacco quality goes.

Experienced buyers can detect discount tobacco visually, and companies simply will not buy it, so it is left for Stabilization.

Federal law requires that tobacco growers certify they haven't planted discount leaf. Without that certification they are eligible for only 50 percent of normal price supports. And it isn't illegal to grow and market discount tobacco so long as the crop is price-supported at half the normal supports. However, if there is certification that discount leaf isn't grown and it is found that the certification is incorrect, then the grower is subject to fine and reduction in his allotment.

Marshall Grant, chairman of the N.C. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Committee, says that part of the reason the amount of tobacco going to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation has increased is because companies won't buy discount varieties. Grant also says there are certain communities that have developed a reputation for planting discount tobacco.

There is no logical reason why growers should plant discount varieties of tobacco, when all the facts are brought out into the open. A recent Associated Press story stated that discount leaf was adding to stabilization's load, but nothing was stated as to why growing discount varieties was harmful to the entire tobacco process.

We feel that all the deceptions in growing such tobacco should be listed in full, with equal explanations as to why such tobacco should not be grown.

the turnaround in the economy," he told me. "When it comes I'll be able to handle all my business from my car."

Just then the phone buzzed.

"There you are," said Thunderbird. "You see the importance of the phone? If I didn't have it, someone else might have gotten the business."

He picked up the receiver. "Thunderbird speaking."

"Is that you, darling?"

"Yes, dear."

"Where are you?"

"Massachusetts Avenue and Western."

Personal Inflation Measure

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
How does your spending measure up?

The Consumer Price Index — the most familiar government measure of inflation — went up 3.9 percent in 1982 — the smallest increase in 10 years. But what happened to your budget?

One way to keep track of your own inflation rate is with a Personal Price Index. It takes time to figure out, but once you've done the basic arithmetic you'll be able to tell which areas of your budget are rising faster than average, and where you need to cut back.

The Personal Price Index was developed several years ago by Citibank in New York City. Here's how to calculate your PPI:

The first step is to determine your personal spending pattern. That's because the Consumer Price Index is weighted to reflect average spending; you need to weight your index to reflect your habits.

Collect your receipts for the past few months to find how much you have spent in seven basic categories: food, housing, transportation, apparel and upkeep, medical care, entertainment and miscellaneous.

The food category should include beverages. And it should cover meals you eat out as well as those at home.

Housing should include things like furnishing, appliances and utilities — everything you spend on your home. It should not include that portion of your mortgage payment which goes toward equity; that is considered savings.

Transportation covers money you spend on your car — including gasoline, plus payments for public transit.

Medical care includes insurance premiums as well as bills for which you are not reimbursed.

Count laundry, dry cleaning and shoe repair costs in the apparel and upkeep category.

Entertainment includes newspapers, magazines and books as well as things like movies. But remember: Meals in restaurants go in the food category, NOT the entertainment one.

The miscellaneous or "other" group covers things like tobacco, toilet goods, personal services like haircuts and educational fees.

Figure what you have spent in each category, as well as your total spending.

Divide the amount in each category by the total to get the percentage or weight for different items.

Suppose you spent $4,250 in the last three months of 1982 — $2,040 on housing, $950 on food, $425 on transportation, $300 on clothing, $150 on medical care, $90 on entertainment and $295 on other items.

That means 48 percent of the money you spent went for housing, 22 percent for food, 10 percent for transportation, 7 percent for clothing, 4 percent for medical care, 2 percent for entertainment and 7 percent for miscellaneous.

(The national averages for urban consumers, according to the Labor Department, are: Housing, 44 percent; food, 18 percent; transportation, 18 percent; clothing, 6 percent; medical care, 5 percent; entertainment, 4 percent; and other, 5 percent.)

For the next step, you'll need the individual indexes that make up the CPI. It is best to use the indexes for your region, since they probably are closer to your spending than the national ones. Call the nearest office of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics and ask for the latest figures. You should get eight numbers — for the seven individual categories and for the overall index.

Multiply each category index by your own spending weight. Here's how it would work using the December 1982 indexes for the Southern region. The first number is the index provided by the Atlanta office of the BLS (with December 1977 equal to 100), the second is your personal weight or percentage and the third is your personal index.

Category CPI Wt. PPI
Housing 165.8 48.79.6
Food 146.4 22.32.2
Transit 166.0 10.16.6
Apparel 122.9 07.8.6
Medical 169.2 04.6.8
Entertain 142.7 02.2.9
Other 156.0 07.10.9

Add the personal index figures. In the example given, the total is 157.6. The overall index for the Southern region was 158.6. That means you're a little better off than average.

Recalculate your personal index several times a year. Use the same percentages unless your spending changes drastically, but get updated figures from the BLS so you can keep track of how you're doing.

Led Rest Of World In Meat Consumption For '82

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans and Australians tied in the per capita amount of meat and poultry consumed last year and led the rest of the world, according to the Agriculture Department.

The USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service said that total meat and poultry consumption — based on dressed carcass weights — averaged 233.9 pounds for each person in the two countries.

That was down somewhat from 1981 in the United States and up slightly in Australia.

For beef and veal, Australia led the United States 118.1 pounds to 105.8 pounds. But American pork eaters downed the Australians 61.8 pounds to 33.

Australia came back fast in the consumption of mutton and lamb — 42 pounds to an average of 1.8 pounds for the United States.

However, U.S. poultry consumption outdistanced the Australian effort by 64.2 pounds to 40.7 pounds.

Although the United States and Australia can lay claim to the highest total per capita consumption of red meat and poultry in 1982, neither was the largest in any individual category, according to the analysis.

Uruguay, for example, led the world last year with per capita beef consumption of 184.4 pounds, followed by Argentina with 161.5 pounds. Normally, Argentina is the leader.

In pork consumption, a number of European countries ate much more pork than Americans or Australians, with Hungary the leader with an average of 174.7 pounds per capita in 1982.

The category of sheep and goat meats was topped by New Zealand's per capita average of 68.2 pounds.

Poultry consumption in 1982 was led by Israel at 82.7 pounds.

Looking at some other big consumers of meat and poultry, the report showed that Hungary — the leading pork consumer — was near the top with a total per capita rate of 223.3 pounds in 1982.

Uruguay, the largest beef eater, had a total per capita consumption of 219.1 pounds of meat and poultry, followed by Argentina at 204.8 pounds. New Zealand averaged 202.8 pounds per capita.

Comparatively, the Soviet Union consumed a total per capita average of 130.7 pounds in 1982, relatively unchanged from recent years.

In the 10-country European Common Market, per capita consumption of red meat and poultry last year averaged 168.1 pounds, with pork accounting for 75.2 pounds, and beef and veal, 53.5 pounds.

Japan, the leading foreign customer of American farmers, consumed an average of 71.7 pounds of red meat and poultry last year, with pork and poultry the leading items.

Among the world's smallest consumers of meat and poultry were Lebanon, 16.1 pounds; El Salvador, 17.4 pounds; Dominican Republic, 23.3 pounds; and Turkey, 25.3 pounds.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial catfish production in 1982 jumped to 99.4 million pounds, a 64 percent increase from 60.6 million pounds in 1981, says the Agriculture Department.

The average price paid to catfish producers ranged from 53 cents to 59 cents a pound during the year, down from a range of 56 to 70 cents in 1981, the department's Crop Reporting Board said in a year-end report.

Imports of freshwater catfish in November — the most recent month tabulated — totaled 348,000 pounds, down 26 percent from a year earlier, the report said. Nearly all the imported catfish were from Brazil.

Invaded By Poultry Disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that exotic Newcastle disease invaded the United States 13 times during 1981-82 but was halted before it could spread to the nation's poultry flocks.

John Atwell of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said that all the incidents were traced to pet-type birds which had been smuggled into California from Mexico.

Some of the cases involved single sick birds which had been taken to veterinarians by individuals who had bought them at bargain prices from strangers.

"Although the outbreaks were quickly eradicated by state and federal animal health officials, each had the potential for spreading the devastating disease and wiping out cage bird aviaries or poultry flocks," Atwell said.

Further, many potential outbreaks of exotic Newcastle were stopped before they could start when 1,384 birds were intercepted at the border, he said.

Those were seized or abandoned birds which were held in quarantine until USDA veterinarians were certain they were free of the disease. Of the total, 914 birds were sold at auction to help cover quarantine costs. The remainder died or were destroyed because of infection.

Farm Forum Set

The 1983 young Farmers Forum will be held in Greensboro Feb. 28 and March 1, according to Roger Cobb, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent.

The theme for 1983, said Cobb, is "The Future of the Family Farm" and most of the topics will be covered by young farmers.

Most of the topics deal with management and marketing, noted the farm agent. "They are topics on which farmers say they need help," he added.

The forums began four years ago and are becoming increasingly popular for both young farmers and their spouses, said Cobb.

The Young Farmers Forum is sponsored by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service and the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, Inc. Additional information on the forum, along with registration forms, is available from the Pitt County Extension Office.

The 1983 peanut growing season will be an important year for most Pitt County growers. It will be a year where peanuts appear to be the only crop that is possible to plant and be marketed with any assurance at all of a profit. Additional peanuts sold at near full quota price level ($550 per ton) last year.

The peanut poundage quota for North Carolina will be 258 million pounds for 1983, down from 265 million pounds in 1982. So with a decrease in quota pounds and a strong demand for the Virginia-type peanut that is grown in eastern North Carolina, there is temptation for the peanut farmer to plant more acres of peanuts as additional. Peanuts planted outside of poundage quotas are not supported at $550 per ton and the support rate for non-quota peanuts may or may not be $200 per ton for 1983.

Peanut growers can probably expect quota peanuts to bring a minimum of $550 as a support level in 1983. Demand for the Virginia-type peanut, as mentioned, should be strong. Growers may receive a meaningless $200 per ton for peanuts produced above and beyond their quota peanuts. Chances are good that a modest amount of additional acres can be utilized by the peanut trade. If, however, every grower plants hedgerow-to-hedgerow as some people fear, then there is likely to be another market glut and "no home anywhere" for additional peanuts during fall and winter 1983.

On the other hand, if contracts for additional peanuts can be signed at a price that covers cost of production, then a grower may consider entering this arrangement. North Carolina State University estimates the cost of production between 16 cents and 24 cents per pound for a producer who averages 300 pounds of peanuts per acre.

Opportunities may still exist to reduce the cost of peanut production. With many farmers entering set-aside programs and the payment-in-kind program, land may be available for peanuts that has not grown a peanut crop in several years. Where land has been rested for three or more years, money can be saved that normally is spent on peanut disease control.

It appears that the 1983 season will be a year which will reward growers who strive for high yields and high quality peanuts. There are still farmers in Pitt County who average less than 2,000 pounds of peanuts per acre. It would be wise for growers in this category to lease their peanut poundage quota to another farmer who is a proven peanut grower.

The average peanut yield in 1982 in Pitt County was 2,401 pounds per acre.

One good way to begin planning for 1983 is to attend the county Peanut Production Meeting scheduled for Feb. 9 at Wellcome Middle School cafeteria at 6:30 p.m.

The peanut production champion of Pitt County will be awarded a plaque at this meeting. For further information on this meeting or to confirm attendance, call 752-2934 by Feb. 3.

Some people think an IRA won't help until retirement. Nonsense. A BB&T IRA helps every April 15.

An IRA, you see, is more than a fast-growing retirement fund. It's a tax shelter.

Now, the tax-wise have been taking advantage of tax shelters for years, contributing money to charity, for example, so they can take big deductions and pay smaller income taxes.

Well, we think it's about time working people got a piece of the action. And they can with BB&T's Individual Retirement Account, a tax shelter that's yours when you make a contribution to the charity closest to your heart: you and your family.

YOU CAN DEDUCT AS MUCH AS $2,000 A YEAR FROM YOUR GROSS INCOME.

You're allowed to invest as much as $2,000 a year in your IRA ($2,250 if you're married and only one of you is a wage earner, $4,000 if you both are). And every penny is deductible. Which means big tax savings. If you're in the 25% tax bracket, for example, and you and your working spouse put $4,000 into an IRA, your refund check from Uncle Sam will be $1,000 fatter than it would be otherwise.

YOU DON'T EVEN PAY TAX ON THE INTEREST YOU EARN UNTIL YOU RETIRE.

Which is nice, because at BB&T, you'll be earning at a rate that's tied to money market rates, with a guaranteed minimum of 8%. What's more, we don't compound that interest annually or quarterly

COMPARISON OF INTEREST COMPOUNDING METHODS
Years	Amount Deposited @ $2,000/Year	Daily Compounding*	Annual Compounding	Net Gain With Daily Compounding
10	$20,000	$ 32,097	$ 31,291	$ 806
20	$40,000	$104,323	$ 98,846	$ 5,477
30	$60,000	$266,846	$244,692	$22,153
40	$80,000	$632,553	$559,562	$72,991

*Based on 8% interest rate.

terly as some banks do. We compound daily, which can make a difference of thousands of dollars in interest over the years.

And all your interest is tax-deferred. You pay no tax on it until you begin withdrawing funds between 59½ and 70½ years of age, when you'll probably be in a lower income tax bracket and, therefore, required to pay less.

YOU CAN BUILD UP ENOUGH IN YOUR IRA OVER THE YEARS TO RETIRE RICH.

If you start an IRA in your early thirties, a $2,000-a-year investment, with all the interest it earns, will turn into a really tidy sum by the time you're sixty-five. And even if you were born too soon to start that early or can't afford an investment that large, you'll still pile up a sizeable retirement fund.

Call or visit any BB&T office and get your IRA started before another day goes by. After all, how can you pass up a plan that gives you big bucks in the September of your life and a bigger refund check every April?

Tucker Chosen For Program

Ralph C. (Chap) Tucker of Route 1, Greenville, is one of 25 young farmers from five southern states selected for a pilot two-year leadership development program at North Carolina State University.

The program will be conducted by NCSU's Agricultural Extension Service with the aid of a $250,000 grant from Philip Morris U.S.A.

Tucker is scheduled to attend 11 three-day seminars at NCSU and make study tours to Richmond, Va., Washington and Brazil.

His first seminar will be Feb. 21-24. Topics will include meeting procedures, problem-solving, group interaction, critical thinking, principles of speech and southern literature.

Tucker will also examine population changes in rural communities and simulate situations in which he has to allocate limited tax dollars to a variety of community needs.

Dr. W.D. Toussaint, director of the program, said its purpose is to give emerging rural leaders in the South an opportunity to broaden their knowledge of government, economics, sociology, world affairs and the arts.

Tucker's farm operation includes the production of tobacco, corn, soybeans, wheat and peanuts.

He is director of the Farmville Chamber of Commerce and the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina. He is a member of the N.C. Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers and is a teacher at Immanuel Baptist Church.

He is a graduate of N.C. State University.

Fraternity Marks Founder's Day

Beta Kappa Sigma Chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity Inc. celebrated its Founder's Day at the Barbeque Lodge in Kinston recently.

President LeRoy Redden of Farmville presided. The history of the local society was presented by Chester Stocks of Kinston. A.L. Mills and W.N. Payton, both of Kinston, were recognized as founders.

The main address was delivered by Dr. Clinton R. Downing, associate professor of education at East Carolina University. He was introduced by William Lawson of Kinston.

Music was provided by Paul Koonce and Patricia Griffin. Entertainment was also provided by "The Crescents," members of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity of ECU.

Fraternity guests from the Jacksonville, Kinston and New Bern chapters were present.

Republican Party To Meet

The Pitt County Republican Party will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the basement of Planters National Bank at the intersection of Third and Washington Streets.

Gilbert Boger, a candidate for the state party chairmanship will speak at the meeting.

Cars Damaged In Collision

Cars driven by Joanne Beth Young of Murfreesboro, and Lillian Crandell Whichard of Ayden, collided about 3 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of 14th and Chestnut Streets.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $1,000 to the Young car and $350 to the Whichard vehicle.

Breaking And Entering Arrest Made

Greenville police arrested Joseph Teel, 17 of 900 Ward St., about 3:42 a.m. Sunday on breaking and entering (auto) charges, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

Cannon said Teel entered a car owned by Kenneth Todd Evans of 700 East Tenth St. and was subdued by several of Evans' friends and held until police arrived.

Teel was placed under a $500 bond pending a hearing of the case in court.

Break-In Is Being Investigated

Police are continuing their investigation of a break-in at the Goodyear Tire Center at 729 Dickinson Ave. about 1:58 a.m. Sunday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said someone broke a window from the building with a brick and took a television set valued at $400.

False Pretense Arrest Made

Greenville police have arrested Thomas Earl Harris, 37 of Quail Hollow Trailer Park on 13 counts of false pretenses, Chief Glenn Cannon reported today.

Cannon said Harris allegedly purchased merchandise from Just Pants, Endicott Shoes, Carlyle & Co., Kinney's Shoes, Wynn Dixie, and other stores with checks drawn on a bank account he knew to be closed.

The chief noted that about $4,000 worth of merchandise purchased by Harris has been recovered.

Marijuana, Lottery Ticket Charges Made

Leverne Little and Elvira Harris Little of 1230 Battle St., were arrested by Greenville police on charges of possession of marijuana and possession of lottery tickets following a search of their house about 3:30 p.m. Friday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers found four pounds of marijuana valued at $1,400, some $83,000 worth of lottery tickets, and $4,000 in cash during the search.

Both were placed under $5,000 bond each pending a court hearing of the case, the chief said.

Additional Break-Ins Charged

Two teenagers arrested last week after breaking into Wainwright's Amoco Station at the intersection of 14th and Chestnut Streets, and been charged charged with two previous break-ins at the service station.

Chief Glenn Cannon said James Lee Stokes, 17, and Felix Cardel Nobles, 17, both of 206B Paris Ave., have been charged with breaking into the station on Jan. 11 and Jan. 15, as well as with the break-in on Jan. 24.

Local Student District Winner

GOLDSBORO — Sharon Dixon, a student at Greenville Christian Academy, won first place in the Veterans of Foreign Wars District No. 2 Voice of Democracy Contest held Sunday.

The district is composed of local units from Greenville, Washington, Kinston, Farmville, Pink Hill, Mount Olive, Swanquarter, Belhaven, Aurora and Goldsboro. Eleven local auxiliary members attended.

The Greenville Auxiliary met Thursday and welcomed Bet Hayes as a new member.

Doris Harris, chairman of the rehabilitation committee, reported that $100 was given to the United Cerebral Palsy drive and $100 was given to assist a local family of a veteran.

Raye Brewer noted that $302 was made from the sale of cakes and Buddy Poppy tree donations during the month. These funds are donated to the Cancer Aid and Research Fund.

Rosa Lee Boyd and Raye Brewer will represent the local auxiliary at the State Council meeting Feb. 11-13 in Winston-Salem.

Lillian Bradshaw reported that two residents of the O'Berry Center sponsored by the auxiliary for the year had been furnished clothing and money for personal needs.

More Blacks Seen Moving Back South

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

— The trend of blacks migrating to the South is continuing to grow — especially in North Carolina — according to U.S. Census Bureau statistics.

Between 1970 and 1980, 16 southern states ranging from Delaware to Texas and including the District of Columbia gained more than 200,000 blacks.

But before that period, blacks were moving out of the South. The migration to the North began before the Civil War, when blacks fled secretly to the North, bureau experts say. Between 1870 and 1880, 60,000 blacks left the South, a census showed.

After that, the total rose during each census period, ending with a net loss of 1,380,000 blacks from 1960 to 1970.

North Carolina had a net loss of 213,663 blacks from 1960 to 1970 and an estimated net gain of 107,952 from 1970 to 1980, preliminary figures indicate. But in South Carolina, there was a net gain of 63,800 blacks in the 1970s, compared to a loss of 193,000 in the 1960s.

The new class of migrants include older blacks moving back home, the unemployed looking for better jobs and the highly paid and highly educated, said migration expert Dr. Bill O'Hair of the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington.

William Greene, a Charlotte native who moved to Michigan and Massachusetts 17 years ago,

Dr. Mathis Speaks At Local Meeting

Dr. James L. Mathis was the speaker for the Greenville Support Group of the National PMS Society which met Thursday night at the Regional Rehabilitation Center here.

Dr. Mathis, who said he has worked with PMS sufferers for more than 30 years, reported he has never seen two sufferers alike. The only commonalities he said are that all are "doers, semi-perfectionists and of above-average intelligence." Most physicians who treat PMS believe a hormonal imbalance is responsible — either too much estrogen, too little progesterone, or an imbalance of the hormone-like chemicals called prostaglandins. Another possibility is that PMS sufferers may actually become allergic to hormones produced in their own bodies, he said.

Vitamin and mineral deficiencies, he said, are another possible cause — low levels of pyridoxine (vitamin B6) and magnesium. Whatever the cause, PMS can be aggravated by fatigue, stress, and poor diet.

He suggested that a woman who believes herself to be a PMS sufferer keep a chart of her symptoms each month. Only if these symptoms occur between ovulation (mid-cycle) and the onset of menstrual flow is PMS responsible. Low-salt, low-sugar, no-caffeine diets are recommended.

The treatment most in demand now for severe PMS is natural progesterone, he said. Although this hormone has not been approved by the FDA specifically for the treatment of PMS (Physicians are researching at the 200 mg. level), it has been approved for other uses and a physician may prescribe it for PMS if he or she feels its use is justified.

It is important, he stressed, to remember that the same treatments do not work for everyone.

The group will meet again Wednesday, Feb. 9, and Thursday, Feb. 24, at 7 p.m. Their meetings are open to the public.

"A GOOD FARMER IS ALSO A GOOD BUSINESSMAN"

"I always do my homework before I make an investment. That's why I've got several business enterprises that are successful. And one of those is my Perdue broiler operation. Sure, I got into chickens before Perdue was in this area. So when they bought out the company I was with and offered me a contract, I wasn't sure what to do. I wasn't very familiar with Perdue, but I had heard that they were different. I soon realized that they really want a quality chicken. That means the company hopefully makes more money. And at the same time, the grower benefits too."

"A quality-conscious company that makes poultry its only business. That's who I'm growing for now. That's a good thing to have going for you when retirement comes. Good cash flow, a good tax situation, including the investment tax credit which is a tremendous savings, and depreciation of houses and equipment. From that point of view, a farmer or businessman, either one, would do well to consider Perdue."

When I retire, my Perdue broiler houses will be my only business, and I look forward to it. There are some very nice things about it you can't find in other jobs. It's not back-breaking work and doesn't take a lot of time. A person could have a couple of Perdue houses and still be involved in other things."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing — chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarket. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Call 1-800-682-8729 or send in the coupon below and talk chicken with a Perdue representative.

Hogs, Riggins Are Super

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Hail to the Hogs, Washington's fun-loving offensive line, and their partner, running back John Riggins, who set a Super Bowl rushing record and led the Redskins to the National Football League championship.

"They were magnificent," said Riggins, who kept following the Hog-made holes for a record 166 yards on 38 carries in the Redskins' 27-17 victory over the Miami Dolphins Sunday.

Riggins wasn't exactly shabby either in this pulsating come-from-behind triumph, played before 103,667 fans in the cavernous Rose Bowl. It was the second largest crowd in Super Bowl history and the excitement of the game had to erase any lingering bad taste of this strange strike-interrupted season.

It was a big-play game between two teams that had been struggling for respect all season and they earned it in the season's finale with Washington's victory constructed around the churning legs of its pile-driving fullback.

President Ronald Reagan noticed, saying in a phone call to the Washington locker room, "I was going to ask Riggins to change the spelling of his name."

The Redskins used their Riggins-nomics attack to wear down Miami. Running behind the proud Hogs — center Jeff Bostic, guards Russ Grimm and Fred Dean, tackles Joe Jacoby and George Starke, and tight ends Rick Walker and Don Warren — Riggins kept finding huge holes in the Dolphins' Killer Bee's defense, best in the NFL.

"He's our bread and butter," said Coach Joe Gibbs. "We give it to him and make people take it away from him."

So, when the Redskins, trailing 17-13 early in the fourth quarter and facing a fourth-and-one at the Miami 43, lined up to go for it, there was no great mystery about who would get the ball.

"The play is called 70-Chip," said Riggins. "It's a play we've been running all season."

The Dolphins called a time out before the play. When they returned to the line of scrimmage, they had shifted from their basic 3-4 defensive set to one with six down linemen.

"It's easier to make a first down against the 3-4 defense," said Grimm. "It's harder against the 60, but if you do make it, you usually make it big."

That's just what Riggins did, sliding off the left side and shuffling off cornerback Don McNeal to race into the end zone for the touchdown that put Washington in front for the first time in the game.

Once armed with the lead, the Redskins kept Riggins banging into the Dolphins, chewing up chunks of yardage that eventually led to a wrap-up touchdown from Joe Theismann to Charlie Brown.

"The game started with a 50-gut (Riggins' basic call), and ended with a 50-gut," said Starke. "We ran the same plays all day. Our plan to run the basic plays was there all day. We never had to go to Plan B."

Theismann played his part, tossing a pair of touchdowns and breaking up an almost-certain interception with a deft defensive play. But ask him about the game and he just grinned and said, "We just turned our Hogs loose today."

As the Redskins approached Super Bowl XVII, Riggins and the Hogs were happy because the Dolphins, a team which uses a 3-4 defense, were waiting for them.

"I look forward to playing against a 3-4 team," he said. "So does our line. They do such a great job getting into those linebackers."

Riggins kept taking handoffs from Theismann and thumping into the Dolphin defenders. Before the playoffs began, Riggins, concerned that he might be overlooked in the Washington attack, had asked Gibbs for the ball. The coach delivered it, perhaps more frequently than the fullback had anticipated.

"How many times did I carry? Thirty-eight? That's on the verge of too many," he said.

It was just right for the Redskins, who overcame two stunning long-yardage plays which had built a 17-10 halftime lead for Miami.

The Dolphins had seized the early lead when David Woodley and Jimmy Cefalo combined for a 76-yard touchdown pass on Miami's fifth play from scrimmage. It was the second longest TD pass in Super Bowl history.

On their next possession, Woodley had Miami moving again with a first down at the Washington 37. But he was sacked by Dexter Manley, who jolted the ball loose. Dave Butz recovered for the Redskins.

Riggins carried five straight times for 21 yards in the ensuing drive and with fourth and two at the 14-yard line, Mark Moseley kicked a 31-yard field goal. It came on the second play of the second quarter and touched off some scoring pyrotechnics.

Miami came right back, spinning off four first downs on an impressive drive to the Washington 3-yard line. But the Redskins stiffened there and Uwe von Schamann kicked a 20-yard field goal.

That made it 10-3 and Theismann came back throwing. He hit Rick Walker for 27 yards on the first play after the kickoff and later found Riggins — yes, he can catch the ball, too — for 15 more. The drive ended with Theismann passing to Alvin Garrett for a 4-yard TD.

That tied the score, but not for long. Fulton Walker, whose 42-yard return had set up von Schamann's field goal, dashed 98 yards with the next one, the first time in Super Bowl history that a kickoff has been returned for a touchdown.

"We had a wedge left return," said Walker. "I baited them into thinking I was going to the right, but cut it back. All I had (to beat) was the kicker. I threw a move on him and hit the open field."

That made it 17-10 with just 94 seconds left in the first half, but the Redskins weren't done. A 30-yard pass interference call and a 26-yard completion to Charlie Brown had Washington on the move. With 14 seconds left, Theismann hit Garrett for 9 yards to the Miami 8. But Washington had no timeouts left and the seconds ticked off before the Redskins could get another play.

"I knew I made a stupid play," said Theismann. "I thought with 14 seconds left, we could get the plays off in time to try a field goal."

But the Redskins came up empty and went into the dressing room dragging just a bit.

"At the half, I told them we have been down by more than this," said Gibbs. "All of us felt we had a good shot at it."

Speaking for the Hogs, Bostic said, "We realized (at halftime) we played pretty good (Please Turn To Page 10)

Lady Pirates Top ASU, 68-53

BOONE — East Carolina's Lady Pirates, after suffering a tough loss to East Tennessee State on Saturday night, bounced back Sunday afternoon to take a 68-53 victory over Appalachian State.

The Lady Pirates, led by Darlene Chaney, scored the first 20 points of the game to put it on ice, and coasted through the remainder of the game.

"I'm very pleased with our win," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "Our players took the loss to East Tennessee badly, but we came back against a team that had won its last couple of games (after losing 14 in a row)."

"We had some performances from people who had not been performing," Andruzzi continued, citing the play of Chaney and Sylvia Bragg. "They contributed 41 points, which is 41 points we've never seen before. For them to come off the bench (following injuries to two starters earlier) and fill our needs, it certainly looks bright at this time. We need that. Both have extreme potential, and it's just a matter of their playing all out."

Chaney scored a career high of 24 points, and pulled a career high 14 rebounds. She hit on 12 of 13 shots from the floor during the contest. "She had an excellent game," Andruzzi said. "It's something I'm not surprised about. She's certainly capable of it. We needed it from another big person. She played her smartest game."

Bragg meanwhile, scored 17 points, tying her career high, set just the day before at ETSU. "I'm pleased with her play the past couple of games," the coach said. "I don't think she knows what she's capable of. She gives us depth on the perimeter."

After the Lady Pirates rushed out to a 20-0 lead, ASU finally broke the ice with a pair of free throws by Theresa Smith with 13:37 left. But it was over a minute later before the Lady Mountaineers got their first basket, scored by Rhett Culclasure with 12:19 remaining.

ASU did struggle back to a 36-24 deficit at the half.

"We did an extremely good job of controlling the tempo," Andruzzi said, "and playing the type of game we need to play at this time. We had only nine turnovers (as compared to 18 in their first meeting). We prevented their inside game. We played very smart basketball. ASU played hard. They are a very intense defensive team and are very smart offensively. We're usually slow starting, but we exploded out there in the first half."

In addition to the points of Chaney and Bragg, Mary Denkler added 19. "Mary's been double, triple, and quadrupled out there, and she still comes up with a great shooting percentage," Andruzzi noted.

Betsy McLelland led ASU's scoring with 14, while Carolyn Cameron added 12. She also pulled 10 rebounds as ASU outrebounded the Lady Pirates, 46-32.

East Carolina is now 8-8 on the year, and returns home for the first time since early December to host Old Dominion on Wednesday.

Art Baker Is Named As Offensive Coordinator

Art Baker, former head football coach at both The Citadel and Furman University, has been named offensive coordinator and associate head football coach at East Carolina University, head coach Ed Emory announced this morning.

Baker, 53, was fired at the end of the season as the head coach at The Citadel, a move that left many observers wondering what The Citadel had in mind for its football program.

A native of Sumter, S.C., Baker is a 1953 graduate of Presbyterian College, where he majored in history. He played both as a quarterback and halfback at the school, also participating in wrestling and track.

Following two years service in the U.S. Army, Baker became a high school football coach in South Carolina, serving two years at McColl, two years at Newberry and six years at Eau Claire in Columbia. At the latter, he compiled a 47-13 record.

In 1965, he joined the Clemson University staff as freshman coach, leading the team to a 4-0-1 record. The following year, he moved to the varsity staff, coaching the offensive backfield. In 1970, he went to Texas Tech as offensive backfield coach and running game coordinator. Texas Tech was twice in the Sun Bowl during his tenure there.

In 1973, he became head coach of Furman University, guiding the Paladins to the nation's top turnaround that year. The Paladins went from 1-10 to 7-4 his first year and he was named Southern Conference Coach of the Year, as well as National Churchman Hall of Fame National Coach of the Year. During his five year tenure at Furman, the Paladins were 27-23-2, and in one season, he recorded wins over both N.C. State and East Carolina.

Baker went to The Citadel in 1978, leading that team to a 30-24-1 record for the past five years, the most successful coaching record there. However, after going 5-6 this past year, he was fired.

Baker's teams have produced such Southern Conference stars as Larry Robinson of Furman, who broke ECU's Carlester Crumpler's league rushing record, and Stump Mitchell of The Citadel, who in turn broke Robinson's mark. Mitchell is currently with the St. Louis Cardinals of the NFL. Two other former Baker players are in the pros also, David Whitehurst, now with Green Bay, and Byron Walker, currently with Seattle.

"I'm excited about being here," Baker said. "I am certainly aware of the challenge of our schedule next year and there are people here who have worked real hard. I'm looking forward to getting back to coaching."

Baker said he was impressed with the quality of the players on offense and with the quality of coaches on the ECU staff. Baker is also very active with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and said he looks forward to working in that area also.

"I have known Art for over 25 years," Emory said, "since he was a successful high school coach. He's been extremely successful at Clemson and Texas Tech and then as a head coach at Furman and The Citadel. He's always been one of the premier coaches in the country. We're just fortunate that he will pursue his career here at ECU to lead our offense against one of the most challenging schedules in the country. We feel like our current staff is one of the strongest assembled in the state of North Carolina."

Baker is married to the former Edith Edens, and they have four children, Artie, a high school coach in Sumter; Kim Kirkman, a high school teacher in Goose Creek, S.C.; Ryan, a freshman in college, and Curtis, a senior in high school.

Baker's duties, in addition to handing the offense, will be to act in Emory's absence, work with academics, work with fundraising through the Pirate Club, evaluation of staff, and liaison between community, faculty and public relations.

There remain two vacancies on the ECU staff, one each on offense and defense.

Pirates Visit Charlotte Looking For Reversal

East Carolina's Pirates attempt to get back on track tonight following their heart-breaking loss to the U.S. Naval Academy Saturday night, 60-58.

The Pirates travel to Charlotte to meet the UNC Charlotte 49ers in the game scheduled for 7:35 p.m. in the Charlotte Coliseum.

East Carolina brings a 9-9 record into the game. The Pirates hold a 2-0 advantage in the series with UNCC, having won their first meeting in Charlotte, 65-64, and winning, 71-68, at Greenville last year.

Charlotte comes into the game with a 5-12 mark, losing to Virginia Commonwealth in a Sun Belt Conference game on Saturday night, 90-76.

Thursday night, UNCC downed South Alabama, 77-75, in another league game.

The two teams have played two common opponents, George Mason and Campbell. The Pirates fell to Mason, 69-68, on the Patriots' home court, while UNCC lost 71-60 in Charlotte. East Carolina holds two wins over Campbell, 67-54, and 73-55, while Charlotte topped the Camels, 80-67.

The latest UNCC stats show 6-3 junior forward John Gullickson as the team leader in scoring with a 16.6 average. A transfer from Davidson, Gullickson became eligible five games into the season and has been the team leader ever since.

Three other 49ers are also in double figures. They include 6-9 junior center Melvin Johnson at 15.9, 6-1 junior guard Randy Davis, 12.1, and 6-5 junior forward Emery Atkinson, 11.3.

Johnson and Atkinson are both pulling in 7.1 rebounds a game.

The game will be a homecoming for East Carolina center Johnny Edwards, who played high school ball at Charlotte South Mecklenburg. The 6-6 freshman center has been the Pirate leader, both in scoring and rebounding. He holds a 17.6 average in scoring and is pulling 7.9 rebounds — not counting the 15 he jerked against Navy.

The Pirates take much of the week off — at least from game play — hosting George Mason in an ECAC-South game on Saturday at Minges Coliseum.

Victory Sweet After Long Wait

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Defensive tackles David Butz and Darryl Grant sat quietly amidst the crush of reporters and glaring lights of television in the Washington Redskins locker room, reflecting on a victory won in the trenches.

Slowly, they peeled their sweaty, grass-stained clothes over the bumps and bruises that marked their hard fought, 27-17 victory over the Miami Dolphins Sunday in Super Bowl XVII.

"I have waited 10 years for this moment," said Butz, who came into the NFL in 1973 with the St. Louis Cardinals. "You play in the trenches that long without reaching the Super Bowl and you figure maybe it just isn't meant to happen. Then you are there and you say, 'God don't let me come this far just to walk away without it.'"

Butz and Grant, the giants of the Redskins defense, were credited with nine tackles as Washington stopped Miami's inside running game.

"We knew their favorite plays were inside the tackles, and we worked hard to stop them all week," Grant said.

While the Redskins were putting the clamps on the running game, Miami quarterback David Woodley went to the air for a 76-yard scoring strike to Jimmy Cefalo midway through the first period.

"Woodley read our coverage and pump faked," said safety Tony Peters, who was beaten on the play. "I was just too anxious and jumped at the fake."

The two teams exchanged field goals before Washington drew even, at 10-10, on a Joe Theismann to Alvin Garrett 4-yard touchdown pass.

The momentum, sliding Washington's way, quickly reversed field, Fulton Walker, the Dolphins kick-return specialist, returned the ensuing kickoff 98 yards for a touchdown and a 17-10 Miami lead at the half.

"I almost swallowed my tongue when I saw Walkers' run," said linebacker Larry Kubin. "When you see a play like that, sometimes you wonder if fate isn't smiling on the other side of the field."

The Redskins, beating the Dolphins every place but on the scoreboard, were confident coming out after intermission.

"Nobody panicked. We knew what had to be done, and we were ready to do it," said guard Russ Grimm, a member of the Redskins offensive line nicknamed the "Hogs."

"We made some minor adjustments along the line of scrimmage at halftime, but outside of the Cefalo pass, I thought we had done a pretty good job against them in the first half," said Redskin defensive coordinator Richie Petitbon.

Sticking to their game plan, the Redskins continued to give the ball to the man they call the "diesel," John Riggins. The 238-pound fullback, who had carried the ball 98 times for 444 yards in three previous playoff victories, provided the spark again, carrying 38 times against the Miami 3-4 defense for a Super Bowl record 166 yards.

"I like to run against the 3-4," Riggins said. "There are two natural cavities you can run in... we thought we could run the ball on them today."

It was Riggins who put the Redskins ahead for the first time with a 43-yard touchdown run with the Dolphins bunched at the line on a fourth-and-one five minutes into the fourth quarter.

"It's a play we ran all season... if we can get through the line we can make a big play... I told Joe (Theismann) that we were close to breaking it several times."

For Theismann, who capped his finest season in nine years in the NFL with a 15-of-23 passing performance for 143 yards and two touchdowns, the victory held special meaning.

"This is everything I have ever wanted. Today, I'm part of the best team in the world," he said.

For two other Redskins it was a chance to come home a winner.

Rookie cornerback Vernon Dean, who was credited with deflecting three passes on Sunday and played his high school ball in Los Angeles, had dozens of friends and family members cheering him on.

"This is the sweetest homecoming anyone could ask for," he said.

Linebacker Mel Kaufman, who also grew up in Los Angeles and played his college ball at Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, played his first game ever in the Rose Bowl.

"I have waited all my life to play on this field before my friends and family," Kaufman said. "I don't know about the rest, but for me there will never be another game like this."

Gilder Wins On 8th Extra Hole

PHOENIX (AP) — Bob Gilder found satisfaction but very little joy in his victory in a sudden-death playoff that matched the second longest in PGA Tour history.

"I'm happy I won one, but I'm glad it's over," Gilder said after he'd struggled through eight extra holes, with the title in the Phoenix Open and a $63,000 first place check riding on every one of his 30 playoff strokes.

"It was a battle all the way. It wasn't any fun."

And, he was quick to point out, it was even less fun for Rex Caldwell, the man he finally beat with a 6-foot birdie putt on the 26th hole of the day.

"He's lost two in a row," Gilder said. "I'm sure Rex isn't feeling very good. I remember when I lost to Bob Wynn. It felt like somebody had stuck a knife in my stomach."

The Tour's longest playoff was at the Motor City Open of 1949. After 11 sudden death holes, Cary Middlecoff and Lloyd Mangrum were declared co-winners by mutual agreement.

This time, there was to be no mutual agreement between Gilder and Caldwell, who only one week earlier had lost in a playoff in the Bob Hope Classic. Caldwell seemed to have clinched the first victory of his Tour career, but Keith Fergus dropped a 20-footer on the last hole to tie him, then beat him in sudden death to win the Hope title.

This time, Caldwell performed the last-hole magic. Needing a birdie to have any chance at all, the man who had battled back so gamely from his earlier disappointment sent a 35-foot putt rattling into the cup. He joined Mark O'Meara, Johnny Miller and Gilder as the leaders after the regulation 72 holes, which they completed in 13-under-par 271.

Miller and O'Meara dropped out on the second extra hole. They'd played three shots when Caldwell and Gilder scored their birdies, Gilder on a putt of about 10-12 feet, Caldwell with one a little longer.

But Miller and O'Meara weren't the only casualties. The national television cameras fell victim to the demands of network time and regularly-scheduled programming. They dropped off after five holes.

Gilder and Caldwell struggled on, matching pars for five holes before. On their third trip of the day to the par-5 18th, Caldwell's chip to the green stopped dead and failed to run to the hole. "I think he had some mud on the ball," Gilder said.

Gilder chipped close and, after Rex's putt had lipped out, he knocked it in for the winner. Caldwell, now 32, nine years on the Tour and still a non-winner, left the green without speaking to Gilder. He did not attend the presentation ceremony. He fled the course without a word to anyone.

"He'll win one some day," Gilder said. "But sometimes the downs are hard to recover from."

He had a couple of "downs" himself. He had a chance to win it outright with a 6-foot putt on the 72nd hole. But he missed it and set up the third playoff in four tournaments this year. He had another opportunity on the first extra hole, this time missing from four feet. "I feel like I gave it away twice," he said.

Caldwell, who played the final round in 70, now has had 13 consecutive rounds at par or better. Gilder played the last round in 69, Miller in 68 and O'Meara in 5-under-par 66.

At least a dozen men were in title contention at one time or another over the last nine holes of regulation play. At one point, seven men shared the lead.

Ed Snead, Tim Simpson, Hal Sutton, Cal Peete and Scott Hoch, at 272, missed the playoff by one shot. Snead had a last-round 66 and Hoch 68. Simpson, Sutton and Peete had 67s.

Fuzzy Zoeller, Dan Pohl, Jack Renner and defending champion Lanny Wadkins missed by two at 273. Zoeller had a closing 64, Pohl 66, Renner 68 and Wadkins 70.

Three other tournaments have gone to eight playoff holes.

Arkansas Nips Deacs

GREENSBORO (AP) — Arkansas junior Rick Norton would prefer not to run laps in Coach Eddie Sutton's practices, so he makes sure to hit his free throws in all situations.

Norton came up with five free throws in the last 23 seconds Sunday as the 12th-ranked Razorbacks escaped with a 68-65 victory over No. 19 Wake Forest.

"We stress free throws in practice," said Norton, an 85 percent foul shooter. "The losing team has to run. I don't like running, so I really concentrate on my free throws."

concentrate on my free throws."

The closing moments boiled down to who could make their free throws, and Arkansas held the advantage. After center Joe Kleine was called for traveling, Leroy Sutton fouled Wake Forest's Alvis Rogers. With a chance to tie the game, Rogers missed the front end of the bonus.

"After it left my hand, I knew it was off and I just hoped for a lucky bounce," said Rogers, who was 3 of 7 from the line.

Delaney Rudd then fouled

Norton, who didn't expect to find himself in that situation.

"I was surprised they did foul me," he said. "Maybe it was a mistake on the player's part. He fouled me and I was lucky enough to hit my free throws."

With Wake Forest down 65-62, Demon Deacon center Anthony Teachey hit one of two free throws, while Norton was fouled again and connected both times. He hit one of two with two seconds left to counter a Rudd dunk to account for the final margin.

"Foul shots cost us in the second half and that could have won the game for us," said Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy, whose team hit 9 of 17 free throws. "Our free throw shooting for the second straight game was less than what we'd like it to be."

Tacy said his team was not a sharp as he wanted, which he blamed on last Thursday's narrow loss to third-ranked North Carolina.

"It is difficult to come back after a disappointing loss," he added. "The most disappointing thing of all is the fact that we were a little off our game. Yet I'm sure after a day or two of rest that we'll be back."

Alvin Robertson led the Razorbacks, 17-1, with 23 points. Kleine had 20 and Darrell Walker was held to 14 points, something he didn't seem to mind.

"I'm not worried about my average," Walker said. "My team is first. Joe Kleine took up the slack and Alvin Robertson took up the slack."

John Toms scored 19 points, 17 in the first half. Rudd had 14 and Danny Young added 13 as Wake Forest dropped to 13-4.

football in the first half. Miami didn't really outplay us. They had the long kickoff return and the long pass play, but other than that, we felt we were in the game. We knew we were going to win it at halftime."

For a fleeting moment, at least, you could have fooled Theismann. Moseley's second field goal, this one a 20-yarder, had narrowed Miami's lead to 17-13. With 2:42 left in the period, Mark Murphy intercepted a pass and Washington started from its 5-yard line. Riggins carried twice for 13 yards and then Theismann tried a pass. It was almost a disaster.

"It was a short pass to Charlie Brown in the left flat," the quarterback recalled. Kim Bokamper, with a heavy rush, deflected the ball and it popped into the air. As it came down, it looked like Bokamper could grab it and head for the end zone. But there was Theismann, playing defensive back.

"I just tried to get in the middle of it," he said. "I hit the ball out of his hands."

"I had my heart in my mouth when I saw the ball come out," said Gibbs. Had Bokamper caught the ball and taken it in, Miami would have had a 24-13 lead going into the fourth quarter. Instead, it was still 17-13.

Washington retained possession and drove to the Dolphins' 43 before Theismann, throwing for the end zone, was intercepted by Lyle Blackwood at the 1-yard line. It amounted to a long punt and when the Redskins contained Miami, the Dolphins were forced to punt the ball back.

Washington took over at midfield and faced a fourth-and-one at the Dolphins' 43 with 9:01 to play. Gibbs decided to go for it with his bread and butter man. "I was thinking about the play on third down," the coach said. "We knew if we didn't make it on third down, it would be a risky field goal. We felt we would take our best play and go at them."

So the Redskins went for Riggins.

"The play was a fake zoom," Gibbs continued. "I think they thought we were slanting one way and got caught when we went the other way. John made a great run."

The play was designed to provide blocks on just about all the Dolphin defenders. Only the cornerback was free. That was McNeal, but he slipped when the play began and by the time he recovered, Riggins was rumbling and ran right through his arm tackle and after that it was daylight to the end zone.

Miami could not move the ball on its next possession and when Washington got the ball back, Gibbs went back to basics. Riggins carried on eight of the next 11 plays, a drive that ended with Theismann's second touchdown pass of the game, this one a 6-yarder to Brown.

After that, it was just a matter of running out the final two minutes of the game clock. Riggins and the Hogs had done their damage.

What did the Dolphins think of the running back who had destroyed their Super Bowl dream?

"John Riggins was Mr. Universe, Mr. All-World," said defensive end Doug Betters. "Their offense was no secret. Give it to John."

"He's been one of the great fullbacks over the past decade," said guard Bob Kuechenberg. "He carried the Washington offense on his back much of the year and he did it today."

And how about the Hogs?

"They had a big, strong offensive line," said linebacker A.J. Duhe. "They were knocking us off the ball. They challenged us and we challenged them. They won the challenge."

And the ball game.

Journers Still Flock To Grave

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — All weekend they came — some shedding tears, others leaving flowers, others just quietly paying their final respects to college football's winningest coach.

Paul "Bear" Bryant's grave here was bedecked with flowers, not from the funeral — the family asked that they be omitted — but from fans and admirers to whom he was more than just a football coach.

One young woman in a crimson-and-white University of Alabama sweater made her way slowly around the crowd that gathered near the grave Saturday morning.

She clutched two red roses in her hand, and shyly asked the policeman standing nearby to place them among others near the grave.

"I just felt like it was the least I could do," said Dianne Stewart, 23. "He did so much for me. He just cared about everybody."

She was one of thousands who braved weekend rain to pay last respects to Bryant, who died Wednesday of a massive heart attack.

"Reverent is the way I'd put it," Birmingham patrolman Mancil Scogin said Saturday.

He had watched over the grave since early that morning.

A small crowd was already waiting outside Elmwood Cemetery when the gates cracked open at 7 a.m., he said.

By about 9 a.m., 50-60 people had gathered around the grave, where Bryant was buried on Friday. The crowd stayed about that size all day.

Among the mourners was Paul Brashier, who brought his wife and son and three teen-age friends.

"They're big sports fans and followed Bear's career, enjoying Alabama's triumphs," Brashier said. "They look up to him."

Howard Rasco, 67, had been ill, but still managed to come with his family to see the grave.

"I just wanted to pay my last respects to him," he said. "He's always been a very honorable man."

Mrs. B.C. Kendrick, 65, who was standing nearby, said, "The most beautiful sight I've ever seen was an old man, old enough to be my grandfather, and his wife walking away from the grave, holding hands and tears streaming down their faces."

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — So close, yet so far away.

Such was the sentiment expressed in the Miami Dolphins' locker room following the club's 27-17 loss Sunday to the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVII.

"Words can't express the disappointment," said second-year cornerback Fulton Walker, whose 98-yard kickoff return for a touchdown boosted Miami into a 17-10 halftime lead.

"It felt good at the time, putting us ahead... into what I thought was a good spot," Walker added. "I felt like we would go on to win it, but then things came apart."

Coach Don Shula, seeking his third National Football League title and first in nine years, agreed.

"I thought we were in pretty good shape at halftime," he said. "I thought if we could come out and continue to do the things we had been that we'd win the game."

"Washington has been the best team in the National Football League since the middle of last season, and they showed it today," Shula added. "Still, I'm proud of this (Miami) football team and the accomplishments and progress it's made."

Safety Mike Kozlowski shared the feeling of many Miami players — that it was a game the Dolphins very well could have won, but didn't deserve.

"It just makes you sick to think about how close we were only to come up short... What it boils down to is that a lot of the things we did to get here, we just didn't do today," said Kozlowski.

"What can you say? They played well enough to be the world champions and we didn't," said veteran guard Bob Kuechenberg, one of two players remaining from the Miami teams that won Super Bowls VII and VIII.

"It's been a long time getting back and it would have been sweet to win," Kuechenberg added. "But Washington dominated and was the better team today."

Miami's drive to the American Conference championship was spearheaded by what Shula has described as "productive ball control," and a proud defense that shutdown two of the NFL's most potent offenses during the playoffs.

Productive-ball control — scoring after long, time-consuming drives — was a missing ingredient against the Redskins.

Only Uwe von Schamann's field goal of 20 yards came after a lengthy drive — a 14-play, 50-yard march that consumed 8:32 of the second quarter.

Dolphins quarterback David Woodley struggled thereafter, missing all eight of his pass attempts in the second half as Miami managed only one first down.

"I felt frustrated..." said Woodley, who teamed with Jimmy Cefalo on a 76-yard touchdown play in the first quarter. "You want to do something to help the club, but I couldn't complete a pass and we couldn't get the running game going either."

Meanwhile, Washington's John Riggins plowed through Miami's defense for a Super Bowl-record 166 yards and the Redskins avenged their 14-7 loss to the Dolphins in Super Bowl VII 10 years ago.

Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann also passed for 143 yards and two touchdowns, and kept the Killer Bees — the nickname for the Miami defense — off balance with Washington's motion offense.

"They had so much movement that sometimes we got confused," said linebacker A.J. Duhe, who had one interception after picking off three in the AFC title game against the New York Jets.

"They had a good mixture of snap counts and formations," Duhe added. "They executed better and did some things to our defense."

The turning point in the game was Riggins' 43-yard touchdown burst — longest scoring romp in Super Bowl history — that gave the Redskins a 20-17 lead with 10:01 remaining to play.

But Dolphins cornerback Don McNeal, who got his arms around Riggins only to have the 235-pound running back break away from his grasp — said he was confident Miami would bounce back until Theismann tossed a 6-yard scoring pass to Charlie Brown eight minutes later.

"They got the momentum on the Riggins touchdown but that didn't break our back," said McNeal. "It gave them a big lift, but we were only three points down and thought we'd come back and get the job done."

The Dolphins' loss was reminiscent of the club's disappointing 24-3 setback to Dallas in Super Bowl VI, the first of three straight title-game appearances in the early 1970s.

But nose tackle Bob Baumhower rejected suggestions that the Dolphins are a young team who needed this Super Bowl appearance for seasoning.

"There's no comparison. This is a completely different team," said Baumhower. "We beat two of the best teams in the NFL (San Diego and New York) to get here."

Ridgcroft Tops Knights By 58-51

AHOSKIE — Ridgcroft Academy took charge at the half and rallied to gain a 58-51 victory over Greenville Christian Academy Saturday night.

Ridgcroft also won the girls' contest, taking a 38-18 win.

Greenville jumped into the lead early, building an 18-10 lead during the first period of play. The Knights continued to be in command, 12-10, in the second quarter, running the lead out to 30-20.

But in the third period, Ridgcroft took over. The host team outscored Greenville, 21-12, during the frame to pull back to trail by only one, 42-41. Ridgcroft then outscored Greenville, 17-9, in the final quarter to sew up the victory.

David Evans led Ridgcroft with 19 points, while Billy Variable had 17 and Stokes Suter had 14. Brian House had 21 to lead Greenville while Mike Bragg added 14.

Ridgcroft's girls eased out into an 8-2 lead in the first period and held that margin in the second as both teams scored six points. That made it 14-8 at the half.

Ridgcroft then blew Greenville away in the third period, 16-2, building the lead to 30-10. Both scored eight points again in the final period.

Becky Hawkins led Ridgcroft with 11 points, while Kathy Vernelson had 13 for Greenville.

The Knights play host to Falls Road on Tuesday.

WINNING CIRCLE — Actors Ben Kingsley, left, and Dustin Hoffman, right, give Laurence Olivier a congratulatory kiss after Hoffman presented him with the Cecil B. DeMille Award in Hollywood Saturday at the 40th Annual Golden Globe Awards. Hoffman was named best actor in a comedy or musical and Kingsley both best actor in a drama and new star of the year. Two Films Dominated Awards

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Films about the peaceful alien E.T. and an historic man of peace, "Gandhi," dominated the contestants for this year's Golden Globe awards.

Richard Attenborough's film on the life of Indian spiritual leader Mahatma Gandhi won five Golden Globes Saturday night at the Hollywood Foreign Press Association's 40th annual ceremonies.

It was named best foreign picture of 1982. It also won for Attenborough's direction and John Briley's screenplay, and star Ben Kingsley took double awards as new star of the year and best actor in a drama.

"E.T.," also nominated in five categories, won as best dramatic motion picture and for John Williams' score.

"Gandhi" now has been named best picture by the New York Film Critics and the National Board of Review. "E.T." has been dubbed best of 1982 by the Los Angeles Film Critics Association, which joined the National Society of Film Critics in naming Steven Spielberg best director for "E.T."

"I can't tell you how extraordinarily rejuvenating it is to be called a new star at the age of 39," Kingsley, an English-Indian actor, remarked at the Golden Globe ceremonies, which attracted an all-star audience to the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

Most of the major Academy Award contenders were present along with a contingent of television stars, since honors also were presented in that field. The Golden Globes show will be seen nationally in a delayed telecast.

"Tootsie" was chosen best comedy-musical of 1982 and also won awards for Jessica Lange as best supporting actress and for Dustin Hoffman as best actor in a comedy or musical.

Meryl Streep, who already has been named best actress by the New York Film Critics Circle, National Society of Film Critics, Los Angeles Film Critics Association and the National Board of Review for her work in "Sophie's Choice," added a best dramatic actress Golden Globe to the list.

Julie Andrews won the Golden Globe for best actress in a comedy or musical in "Victor-Victoria," in which she played both man and woman.

Laurence Olivier drew long and heartfelt applause when Dustin Hoffman introduced him for the Cecil B. DeMille award, honoring his contributions to film art. Olivier also drew the biggest laugh of the evening when he made a sweeping gesture and knocked the top of his statuette onto the stage.

Lou Gossett Jr., the ramrod drill master of "An Officer and a Gentleman," scored as supporting actor. The film garnered another award for best song, "Up Where We Belong."

The association named Sandahl Bergman of "Conan the Barbarian" the new female star of 1982.

"Fame" was named best television comedy or musical series, while Alan Alda

("M.A.S.H.") and Debbie Allen ("Fame") won best acting awards in the comedy or musical category.

John Forsythe and Joan Collins of "Dynasty" won the acting awards in the TV drama category, but "Hill Street Blues" was named best dramatic series.

"Brideshead Revisited" was named best miniseries, while its star, Anthony Andrews, won the best TV actor honors. Ingrid Bergman took the actress award for her portrayal of the late Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir in "A Woman Called Golda."

Supporting actor-actress awards went to Lionel Stander for "Hart to Hart" and to Shelley Long for "Cheers."

husband in ABC's overbearing "Confessions of a Married Man."

Conrad is one tough, unemotional cookie crumb here. His character is never likable. He neither grows up nor grows on you. And you know this is a Conrad film because he gets to knock somebody on his rump with one punch.

The key confession, which occurs early on, is that Walter Price is bored with his life and wife, and tired of doing what everybody else expects of him. He says his marriage's stagnation is the reason he prefers his mistress.

His wife, Pat, played by Jennifer Warren (who sounds and looks like Jane Fonda), assumes it's her fault. It's not. At 45, Walter is going through a midlife crisis, only he blames everybody else. It turns out that he doesn't hate marriage as much as he does rules and commitments.

This movie needs lessons in subtlety. It makes the point that Walter is not just GETTING EXPOSURE — By the end of 1983, actress Ellen Barkin will have starred in four new movie releases — not bad for a young New Yorker whose previous credits were mostly limited to "Diner", a few television movies and a soap opera. (AP Laserphoto) leaving Pat, he's divorcing himself from his son and daughter. So the son, Arthur (Lance Guest), shows his hurt by getting into a fight in football practice and the daughter, Ellen (Mary Crosby), won't talk to her boyfriend.

Perhaps that heavy-handed style works in daytime soap operas, the TV form mastered by the movie's executive producer, Gloria Monty. But prime time requires a little more delicacy.

It also demands a higher level of dialogue and awareness. But the only well-developed, feeling character is Arthur, who understands himself and learns to turn his limitations into his strengths. He's really the star of this movie.

Updating A Kiddie Role

NEW YORK (AP) — "Beaver" is coming back to television this spring, with Jerry Mathers updating the kiddie role he played two decades ago.

Mathers, 34, star of "Leave It to Beaver" a situation comedy that vanished from prime-time TV in 1963 after a six-year run, joined the original cast recently for a taping and homecoming.

The sequel, "Still the Beaver," picks up the family saga 20 years later in the idyllic suburb of Mayfield, where the Cleaver family grew up.

In the CBS special, Mathers plays a father forced to raise his two sons alone after being deserted by his wife.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — SKIDDING BUS DRIVER TO HIS AUTO MECHANIC: "GIVE ME A BRAKE."
Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals W.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Seven Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
A Clayton couple was among seven people killed on North Carolina highways this weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported Sunday.

Deborah Wall, 30, and Eddie Wall, 33, died instantly when their car ran off rural paved road 2542 in Wake County about 2:15 a.m. Sunday, police said. One of their two children in the car was seriously injured.

In New Hanover County, Linda Jean Mitchell Serino, 32, of Wilmington, was killed in an accident near her hometown early Sunday. Troopers said she was a passenger in a car that ran a stop sign on N.C. 132 and struck another car.

Janet Young Hudson, 42, of Durham, died Friday night when she fell in front of an oncoming vehicle on U.S. 70 west of Raleigh.

Early Saturday morning, Brian Alex Maxwell, 21, of Camp Lejeune died when he ran into the path of a vehicle on N.C. 132, 300 feet north of the Wilmington city limits.

Ervin Ray Smith, 35, of Candor was killed Saturday night when he stepped into the path of a car traveling along N.C. 24 west of Biscoe in Montgomery County.

Clyde Franklin Avery Jr., 37, of Lincolnton, died Friday night a mile north of Dallas in Gaston County. He was a passenger in a vehicle which sped off the road and struck a house.

The deaths raised this year's traffic toll to 61, compared to 70 this time a year ago.

FLED TO WEST HANOVER, WEST GERMANY (AP) — A 38-year-old East German truck driver escaped across the heavily fortified communist border into the West German State of Lower Saxony Saturday night, border guards said Sunday.

FOCUS

A Pretty Penny

Today President Reagan is scheduled to present his recommendations to Congress for the federal budget for fiscal 1984. When he does, he is sure to talk about sums of money that most of us can't even begin to imagine. But it might help if we looked at the budget as just so much small change. For example, the budget for fiscal 1983, $757 billion, came to about 75,700,000,000 pennies. If we were to stack those pennies, we'd have a pile high enough to reach to the planet Venus and back to Earth, then back to Venus again. Or look at it this way. The 1983 budget — again in pennies — would weigh about 947,000,000 pounds. That equals the weight of the entire population of Boston!

DO YOU KNOW — When does fiscal 1984 begin?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The Pittsburgh Steelers have won four Super Bowls — more than any other team.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Engage in social activities that are character building and can bring advancement in your career. Improve your budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure to keep promises you have made. Use your ability for investigating wisely and coming up with the right answers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listen to what a good friend has to say so that you can gain a personal goal more readily. Strive for increased happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Put more effort into your work and gain more benefits. Consult an expert for ideas to improve your financial position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study whatever has been puzzling you in the past and come up with the right answers. Be logical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study your monetary status and find the right way to gain more security. Come to a better understanding with loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Attend to outside tasks early in the day for best results. Avoid a temptation to spend more money than you can afford.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put a new plan to work that could give you added income in the days ahead. Be more willing to do extra work.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be a magnetic person and will be able to solve problems that are difficult for others. Direct education along lines of investigation for best results. Don't neglect ethical and religious training early in life.

Back To Sudan After Check-Up

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — President Gaafar Nimeiri, in excellent health, has returned to Sudan after a private visit to the United States for medical tests, Sudanese authorities said.

The Sudanese news agency said Sunday that Nimeiri was pronounced in excellent health by doctors at the U.S. Army's Walter Reed Hospital.

The 53-year-old Nimeiri has a history of high blood pressure, and embassy officials in Washington indicated he had suffered some side effects from anti-hypertension drugs.

He arrived in the United States on Jan. 1.
