House Democrats Vote Push Relief Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders vowed Tuesday to push a program of "relief, recovery and reconstruction" to combat the recession, beginning with emergency bills to create jobs and provide food and shelter for the needy.

There was no estimate of the price tag, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has spoken previously of an anti-recession effort costing $5 billion to $7 billion.

Aides suggested later that might be the amount dedicated to a program of public service jobs and soup kitchen-type relief for the nation's unemployed and homeless.

The White House has promised to submit its own jobs bill, but it is not expected to include the public service or public works employment under consideration by the Democrats.

Even so, House Democratic Whip Thomas Foley of Washington noted that some Senate Republicans are supporting a $2 billion public service jobs program and said, "We hope the president can be persuaded" to go along with the Democratic approach.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said in response that he is identifying options for a jobs bill. "I don't rule out all public service jobs, depending on the type of public service," he said.

Sources, who asked not to be identified by name, said several Republican committee chairmen were developing ideas for jobs legislation. Included is Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Appropriations Committee, who the sources said was drafting alternative plans, one costing about $1.5 billion and the other about $3 billion, for public works employment.

After meeting with party leaders in the House, O'Neill and Foley also said House and Senate Democrats would work together to develop a longer-term program to lay the foundation for "long-term economic prosperity."

"With 14 million people out of work — the highest number in history — it is time for a combined program of relief, recovery and reconstruction," O'Neill said.

In addition to the emergency jobs and relief effort, O'Neill mentioned steps to help homeowners and farmers subject to mortgage foreclosures and provide health insurance benefits to the unemployed.

Foley declined to specify what proposals were planned, and Democratic aides, speaking on condition that that remain anonynous, said plans to introduce such legislation were not certain.

Democrats announced their intention as the president's $848.5 billion budget also came under attack from Republicans. Rep. Silvio Conte, top GOP lawmaker on the House Appropriations Committee, called for a $20 billion reduction in Reagan's defense buildup and restoration of some of the president's proposed domestic cuts.

The Massachusetts congressman also was asked what the chances are for passage of the administration's standby tax increases.

"None," he responded.

Despite the criticism, the White House said overall reaction to the president's budget has been "surprisingly favorable."

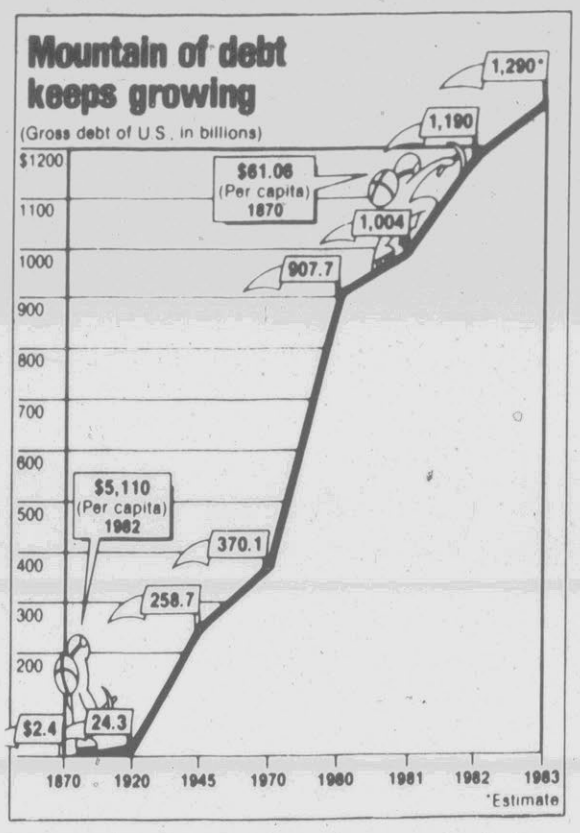

Talking to reporters aboard Air Force One as Reagan flew to St. Louis for a speech, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said there certainly will be changes made, but "it has a chance of a large percentage of it coming out intact."

The president's plan — including a deficit of $189 billion — calls for several billions of dollars in cuts in social programs through an unevenly applied freeze as well as a $30 billion hike in the defense budget.

As for jobs, Speakes said the administration would have its own legislation ready to submit to Congress within 10 days.

The administration's bill is expected to include extension of jobless benefits, a program to subsidize businesses hiring the unemployed, and money to retrain workers.

The administration will not propose any public works effort such as the one Democrats are drafting to battle the 10.8 percent unemployment rate.

School Plan To Avoid Further Hiring

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Education have approved a proposed reorganization plan for county school personnel that would switch central office staff into vacancies in schools rather than filling those positions with new employees.

At their monthly meeting Tuesday, board members voted in favor of the plan which, according to Superintendent Eddie West, will not put any employees out of a job.

In addition to the superintendent's position, the plan calls for three associate superintendents individually in charge of instructional services, financial and support services and personnel and administrative services.

Under the plan, some areas such as vocational education, media technology, finance and community schools have been placed under new supervision.

The plan, which West said would save the county school system $95,730, will go into effect July 1, 1983.

"Between now and then we'll be retooling," said Dr. West. "Staff members will be training, we'll be rewriting job descriptions and performance standards and trying to plan how to physically move departments."

Six positions are affected by the plan.

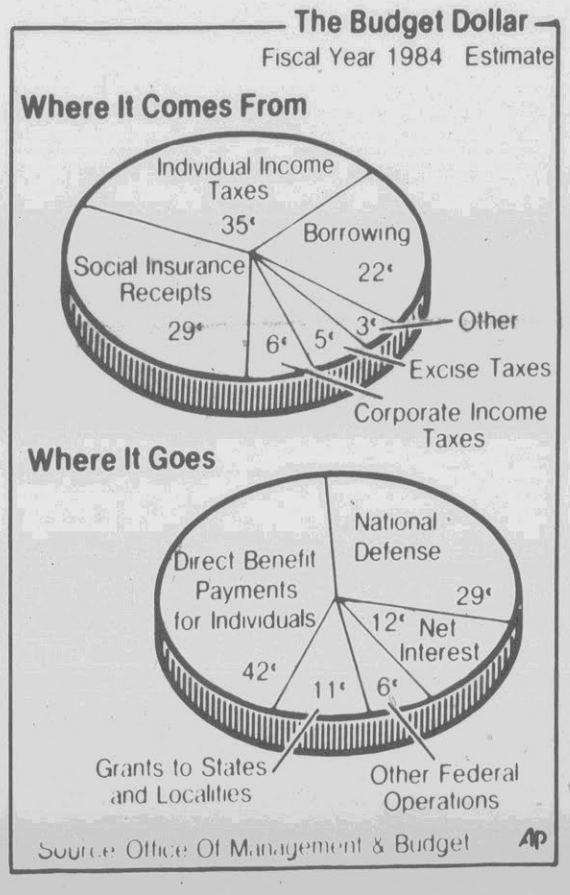

Board members also accepted the resignation of Wellcome Middle Principal Russ Cotton effective Feb. 15 and appointed Glenn Cox, former superintendent of the Greenville school system, as interim principal. Cox is not a candidate for permananent appointment.

Applications will be taken for the position from Feb. 15-March 15 and applicants will be interviewed March 15-April 15. A recommendation for a replacement will be made to the Board of Education May 2.

In other business:

•School Finance Officer Dan Thomas reported that in January the county received $17,309 from fines and forfeitures — $$1,476 above the average needed to make the monthly budget.

•Emmy Whitehead of Farmville Central reported that a billboard had been donated to Pitt County schools by an outdoor advertising company for the display of county art work. The billboard is located on U.S. 264.

Zero Option Is Rejected

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri V. Andropov on Tuesday rejected President Reagan's proposal for a summit meeting to sign a ban on medium-range nuclear missiles, calling the offer "patently unacceptable" to the Soviet Union.

Replying one day after Reagan made the proposal in an "open letter to the people of Europe," Andropov said he would never agree to a plan that he claimed would disarm the Soviet Union while permitting the United States and its NATO allies "to retain all their nuclear weapons of this category."

"First of all, I must say quite definitely that there is nothing new in president R. Reagan's proposal. What it is all about ... is the same 'zero option.' That it is patently unacceptable to the Soviet Union now is already recognized," Andropov declared in an interview distributed by the official news agency Tass.

In the letter read publicly by Vice President George Bush during a visit to West Berlin, Reagan offered to meet Andropov "wherever and whenever he wants in order to sign an agreement banning U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range, land-based nuclear missile weapons from the face of the earth."

But the Communist Party leader said this was nothing more than a restatement of Reagan's zero option which had "blocked" progress at U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva on reducing medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe. He said U.S. insistence on the plan "dooms the Geneva talks to failure."

Reagan's zero option calls for the Soviet Union to dismantle its missiles aimed at Western Europe in return for NATO's agreement to forgo deployment of 572 U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles starting late this year.

Farmville Board Votes To Give Cost-Of-Living Boost

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners voted Tuesday night to give town employees, other than police officers, a 2.5 percent cost of living increase.

Police officers recently were given a pay raise.

All the commissioners voted for the raise against the recommendation of Mayor Rusty Duke, who called it "not fiscally responsible." Commissioner John T. Walston stated that he was voting for the raise in spite of what he called threats from department heads about employees quitting if the raise were not granted. Commissioner Joe Kue said he thinks the expressions that Walston called threats were "expressions of feelings which everyone is entitled to."

Approval was given for the purchase and erection of a welcome sign at the intersection of Main and Contentnea streets on the north end of town. Permission has been given to place the sign on property owned by A.C. Monk and Co. The sign will be bought from Aesthetic Signs of Greenville for $650.

The board discussed how to best study the town code which

Dozens Of Trucks Fired Upon By Snipers; Violence Spreads

By The Associated Press

Snipers ambushed dozens of trucks with gunfire and rocks Tuesday as violence spread in a nationwide strike by independent truckers that has left one driver dead and 11 people injured, two seriously.

Police were investigating reports of attacks on at least 50 rigs in 22 states, including the slaying Monday night of a trucker who was shot in the neck while driving through North Carolina and the serious wounding of another trucker in Utah earlier in the day. A teen-ager in Pennsylvania suffered a fractured skull when a brick bounced off a truck into the family car.

The dead driver was a member of the Teamster union, which opposes the strike.

In the second day of the strike called at 12:01 a.m. Monday by the Independent Truckers Association, more local truckers organizations joined the shutdown, notably in Ohio and Massachusetts, to protest scheduled increases in the gasoline tax and highway use fees.

No shortages of goods were reported in the nation's markets. In Washington, Department of Transportation officials said that while fewer truckers appeared to be running at night, there did not appear to be a "serious disruption" of interstate commerce.

In Chicago, Teamsters President Roy Williams, who was recently convicted of bribery-conspiracy charges, called on federal and state governments to "provide protection for drivers and the motoring public."

George Franklin Capps, 33, of Clayton, N.C., was killed by a sniper about 11:30 p.m. Monday on U.S. 701 just outside Newton Grove, N.C. Six other trucks were hit by gunfire in the state Tuesday morning, and two truckers were injured.

Five were hurt when bullets or rocks hit their trucks in unrelated incidents in Alabama, Maryland, Florida, Connecticut and Oregon. Two drivers were injured Monday in Pennsylvania and Michigan.

On Tuesday, nails scattered on Interstate 65 near Lebanon, Ky., punctured tires on a dozen cars, including a police cruiser; North Dakota authorities were investigating the theft and burning of a truck, and the Tennessee Highway patrol set up a special command post to investigate reports of violence.

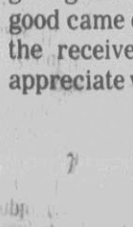

As Ohio's independents joined the strike Tuesday eight trucks were hit by gunfire and dozens had their windshields smashed.

Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, estimated Monday that as many as 70,000 of the nation's 100,000 independent owner-operators had parked their rigs. Government officials said it was probably more like 20,000.

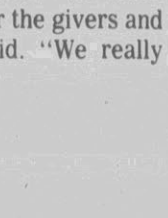

The federal truck-use tax that has angered drivers doesn't take effect until July 1985. The truckers also want a lid on state highway taxes, a rollback of the new federal levies and a reconsideration of the 55 mph speed limit. A nickel-a-gallon boost in the federal gasoline tax takes effect in April.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

WORDS TO SONGS, POEMS

I remember over the years Hotline has several times asked for help for someone in finding the words and/or music to a particular old song. I have run across an address I'd like to share with everybody. It's that of a man in Oregon who is reported to have one of the world's largest libraries of old songs and poetry. For $2 he will honor any search request. The address is Stanley Floyd Kilarr, 1402 E. Main St., Klamath Falls, Ore. 97601. N.H.

HEATER FEEDBACK

The Rev. and Mrs. James McIver of Lifeline Full Gospel Assembly say their Hotline appeal for a heater for a family in their church who had no heating source brought them two — one kerosene, one electric — and $55. In addition, the staff of the Pitt Plaza branch of Wachovia Bank donated two gas heaters, which the church is giving to other families also in need. "So much good came out of this appeal — for the givers and the receivers," Mrs. McIver said. "We really appreciate what everyone did."

Postal Service Out Of The Red

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service on Tuesday recorded a $802 million surplus for last year that likely will hold first-class postal rates steady into spring 1984, months longer than expected.

At a board meeting here, Postmaster General William F. Bolger also announced that Jackie Strange was appointed as regional postmaster general — the first woman to hold that post.

Increased revenues from a higher volume of mail and a drop in inflation were responsible for the surplus, Bolger said.

He said net income for the past fiscal year, plus a $319 million first-quarter surplus, meant that a rate increase tentatively forecast for late 1983 would not occur until March 1984 or later. The quarterly surplus was $128 million higher than postal officials anticipated.

The postal service surplus had been estimated at more than $1 billion, but the governing board on Tuesday accepted a lower figure in order to earmark payments for workers' compensation claims.

The board also approved construction of two general mail facilities for Stockton, Calif., and West Palm Beach, Fla.

No Problems In Area Truck Deliveries

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Although the nationwide truckers strike has already resulted in one fatal shooting in North Carolina and created an uneasy situation for all motorists, the strike apparently has had little effect on wholesale shipments in this area and deliveries to local grocery stores.

A spokesman at Ormond Wholesale Co. here said today that, "We have not been affected yet. Whether we will be or not, I do not know." The spokesman said the only concern he has noticed relative to the strike has been that some of his drivers want to make sure they complete their deliveries before night.

Noting that the company is a local, private carrier, the spokesman said, "We really haven't had any problems at all."

Charles Whichard of Whichard's Produce Co., a local wholesaler, said his firm had experienced "no problems yet." He said he has trucks going as far as Raleigh and one that makes night deliveries but drivers have not indicated any difficulties in meeting their schedules.

Charles Overton at Overton's Supermarket said his store has experienced no delays in grocery, meat or produce shipments. He noted, however, that some of the truck drivers handling deliveries to Overton's have related fears about being on the road, especially at night.

Overton said his main supplier works some with the trucking firm that employed the Selma driver who was shot as he drove along U.S. 701 in Newton Grove.

Ernest Willoughby, manager of the A&P Store here said so far all of the company's shipments have been on time and no problems have been experienced yet.

A spokesman at the Piggly Wiggly food store also said, "As far as I know, we haven't had any problems with meat, produce or staple products deliveries." He said at least one truck made a delivery Tuesday and it was on time.

A Big Star Stores spokesman said the company has its own delivery fleet and no shipment delays have been encountered. He said he knew of no difficulties related by any of the drivers making trips to and from Greenville.

Michael Frey at Food Lion, formerly Foodtown Supermarkets, said the strike has not affected local shipments to his store. He pointed out that the company's new warehouse in Portsmouth, Va. supplies the Greenville store and if a long term strike caused supplies at Portsmouth and at the main warehouse in Salisbury to run low, there could be some problems. He added that Food Lion has a lot of rail shipments and the only way problems could develop would be for warehouse

Dear Abby

Patient Sick Of Waiting Gets On Doctor's Case

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Why do doctors schedule six patients for the same time, keeping a roomful of patients waiting?

I had a doctor's appointment for 9 a.m. I arrived at 8:45 and was told that the doctor would be tied up "for a little while" and was asked if I would like to go get a cup of coffee.

I went for coffee, returned at 9:15 and found four more people in the waiting room. They all had 9 o'clock appointments! They were also told to get a cup of coffee, and as they walked out the door, another 9 o'clock appointment rushed in — apologizing because she was late!

Abby, I sat there until 11:20, then I heard one nurse say to the other, "He has four more proctoscopes to do, then we can start calling them in." (He has four examination rooms.)

I flipped out and said, "Who is going to pay for my extra parking? I think I'll send this problem to Dear Abby." I was taken within three minutes. (They must have told the doctor I was starting a riot in his waiting room.)

If I go to a doctor who has a first-come, first-serve policy, I will wait patiently without complaining, but I resent having to wait for 2 hours when I have an appointment. Switching doctors doesn't help.

Does this happen everywhere? Or only in Pittsburgh?

TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: It happens almost everywhere. Doctors, what's the Rx for this epidemic?

DEAR ABBY: Please don't throw this away thinking it's only a gag, because I'm serious. I'm a middle-aged man who started dating a woman (my age) a few months ago. I like everything about her but I can't bring myself to kiss her (beyond a peck on the cheek or a quick one on the lips) because she smells of garlic.

I've offered her breath mints, chewing gum, and even kiddingly remarked, "Well, I can tell you've had something with garlic for lunch." She said she usually has a corned beef sandwich or a Caesar's salad because she likes garlic. Once she suggested that I eat garlic, too, so I wouldn't notice it on her. I told her I didn't care for it.

Now what do I do? I really could care for this woman, and I know she likes me. It's not just the garlic on her breath, the smell of garlic seems to come out of her pores. Any suggestions?

TURNED OFF

DEAR TURNED OFF: Yes. Tell her that if she wants to see more of you she will have to "do something" about the garlic. And if she doesn't come up with a solution, she is giving you a message: "I've made my choice, and you're not it."

DEAR ABBY: You once had a little poem in your column about giving flowers to people while they can still smell them. Can you find it and print it again? So many people need to be reminded. Thank you.

NEGLECTED IN PALM COAST, FLA.

DEAR NEGLECTED: Is this it?

"I would rather have a little rose from the garden of a friend,
"Than flowers strewn around my casket when my days on earth must end.
"I would rather have a living smile from one I know is true,
"Than tears shed 'round my casket when this world I bid adieu.
"Bring me all the flowers today whether pink or white or red,
"I would rather have one blossom now than a truckload when I am dead." (Author Unknown)

Queen Of Hints On Road For Diet Plan

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you want to meet a real television celebrity, be alert in airlines terminals during the next six weeks.

If you see a shapely, five-foot-five brunette moving at a fast clip and wearing a backpack and walking shoes, it may be Mary Ellen Pinkham taking her own advice.

In an interview, she said she planned to wear the shoes and pack on her latest book promotion tour because "airports are a good place to walk" and walking regularly at a brisk clip is an essential part of "Mary Ellen's Help Yourself Diet Plan."

In her latest book, the Minneapolis housewife, who parlayed household hints into a lucrative television and writing career, offers no magic solutions.

"Anytime anyone claims there's magic in a diet, stay away from it," she said.

Most diets fail, she added, because "nobody takes signals from their bodies anymore.

"Fat robots" is her phrase for "books that tell you what and when to eat, and you do it.

"I don't think you need a diet cookbook, period."

Her book is mostly advice and hints. The few menus and recipes are there to illustrate points she makes, based on her own experience in shedding 70 pounds on a medically supervised regime.

She said losing weight her way isn't easy.

The book, like her conversation, is peppered with one-liners:

On why fad diets sell: "Most people don't want to be educated, they want to get thinner."

On her chubby childhood: "Talk about self-image problem. My maiden name was Higginbotham. My nickname was Higgy. It ended up being Higgy Piggy.

On adolescence: "The day I discovered boys I looked in the mirror and said, 'You are a mess.'"

She wasn't really, she added, but just one of the many girls "who won't accept that they have good figures. They're addicted to the idea of dieting they way people are addicted to drugs or alcohol."

It's a mistake to think of exercise in terms of calories you're burning, she said. Instead, remember "you're making your body more efficient."

"Walking changed my life," she said, "but it's very difficult to understand if you haven't done it yourself. You don't have to do that crazy marathon walking, just keep up a brisk pace so your pituitary gland floods your system with endorphins, nature's chemical high.

"Walking has taken care of a lot of problems for me without my realizing it. I think clearer, my concentration is wonderful, I sleep great."

Her missionary zeal is as great as any author's but what sets her apart is her obvious sincerity and the safety of the regime she worked out with the help of her family doctor, a nutritionist and a diet counselor.

It includes the foods she and her family, husband Sherman and 7-year-old son Andrew, like.

It's full of workable hints for avoiding temptation and decalorizing favorite dishes.

The feature most likely to win devotees is the gradual increase in daily calorie intake to establish a maintenance diet.

The old, familiar cycle of deprivation, breaking diet and guilt trips is out, she said.

"When you do that, you've lost your normal response to what food is supposed to be. To solve the problem, you have to understand it, have to understand why you hit a plateau (in weight loss), understand what happens to your body on a fad diet."

Having a supportive husband and child helped, she said.

Even when she was going from fad diet to fad diet, "he never got on me about the weight. Once I put the principles of two diets together thinking two would work better than one.

"I read every diet book in the world and I truly believed in the 'magic formulas,' the grapefruit diet, the egg diet," the combinations authors said would undermine weight loss.

"I got smarter as time went on," she added.

Despite the absence of "magic" solutions, Mrs. Pinkham's book seems destined for best seller lists even before its Feb. 15 publication date.

She got an advance of $775,000 for world rights at an auction that included nine or 10 American publishers, said Richard Marek, of St. Martin's-Marek. "We feel it's a very good investment."

Publishers don't shell out that kind of money and order first printings of 200,000 copies unless they expect to sell, sell, sell. The low price, $10.95, is a direct result of the large first printing. Foreign publication rights have already been bought in England, Germany, Argentina and Mexico, and first and second serial rights were sold to three United States publications and two American book clubs.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Several years ago on a visit to Houston, Texas, I enjoyed ferreting out a cookbook subtitled "A Bengali Guide to Indian Cuisine," published by a small press that recently I have not been able to track down. The cookbook was co-authored by Aravinda Chakravarti, a young man from Calcutta, India, who at the time was living in Houston. The book was strikingly illustrated by Bikash K. Das.

Because the book is now out of print, the chances are you haven't come across a delicious and practical recipe for Calcutta Cabbage in it. I found this vegetarian dish an interesting accompaniment for simply prepared fish. It's a big recipe and at my house there was some left over. I added that to cream of tomato soup, and it made a marvelous combination.

CALCUTTA CABBAGE

- 2 to 3 pounds fresh cabbage, thinly sliced
- 2 large potatoes, peeled and diced (½-inch pieces)
- 8 to 16 ounces frozen green peas (or fresh peas if available)
- ¾ tablespoon turmeric
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- ½ teaspoon red pepper (or to taste)
- ½ teaspoon salt (or to taste)
- ⅛ teaspoon sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon each mustard seed, fennel seed, cumin seed
- 1 cup water
- 1 to 2 tablespoons vegetable oil

In a large saucepan, heat 1 to 2 tablespoons oil. Add the ⅛ teaspoon of mustard seed, fennel seed, and cumin seed. The oil is hot enough to fry when the mustard seed begins to sputter. Add the diced potatoes and fry until they are a light golden brown. Remove the potatoes from the pan, leaving as much oil as possible. Add the cabbage a little at a time and fry for about 10 minutes or until cooked down; stir often to prevent burning or sticking. Cover the pan and cook for 3 minutes more being careful not to burn the cabbage. Then add the diced potatoes, the ¾ tablespoon turmeric, 1 teaspoon allspice, ½ teaspoon red pepper, ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon sugar; mix thoroughly. Cover the pan and cook for about 2 minutes more.

Add the 1 cup water and bring to a boil. Add the peas and reduce the heat to very low. Simmer for 10 to 15 minutes or until the water has been absorbed. Serve hot.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Cranberry Mull
Cheese & Crackers
CRANBERRY MULL

Repeated by request.

- 4 cups cranberry juice cocktail
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 medium orange stuck with 8 cloves
- 3-inch stick cinnamon
- Vodka

In a medium saucepan bring cranberry juice cocktail, sugar, orange and cinnamon stick to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves; simmer, covered about 30 minutes. Pour into mugs and stir in vodka to taste. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Homemaker's Haven

BY EVELYN SPANGLER
Pitt Home Agent

This heating season we've begun to receive calls about moisture problems in houses that have not had such problems before. The only difference in activities or appliance usage that could be identified as a common link is the use of portable (unvented) kerosene heaters.

It's probable that these houses have been bordering on having condensation problems (sweating windows or walls) prior to the use of the portable heaters. And, it's a strong possibility that the use of these heaters has added enough moisture to the interior air to make the condensation problem visible. In any combustion process, moisture is given off. With appliances vented to the outside (such as furnaces, wood stoves, fireplaces and water heaters), moisture is carried outside the house with exhaust gases.

But appliances like the kerosene heaters with unvented flames produce moisture that remains in the house. In fact, for every gallon of kerosene that's burned in a heater, about 1.4 gallons of water are released into the air. This occurs over the approximate 10 hours it takes for the heater to burn a gallon of fuel. If a house is on the borderline of having a condensation problem on the inside, a continual use of the kerosene heater can make these problems evident. Increasing ventilation may reduce the moisture problems, and can be done by slightly opening a window in the room where the heater is in use. Although this method may seem inefficient, the heater produces far more BTU's of heat energy than are lost through the window opening. In fact, most heater manufacturers recommend opening a window when the heater is in use. Another measure than might help with reducing the moisture is to increase the use of exhaust fans in the house which are vented to the outside. A dehumidifier might help the situation, as well.

Also, many individuals are using the portable heaters in place of their central heating system. When areas of the house remain cool and/or unheated, this can be a condition that promotes mildew problems. Heating the entire house periodically with the central system will keep the air dryer and reduce moisture accumulation.

Proper Consideration?

We wish we could enthusiastically endorse the selection of the Democrat who will fill the legislative seat left vacant by the death of the late Rep. Sam D. Bundy.

We cannot.

The selection of Walter B. Jones Jr., son of veteran Congressman Walter B. Jones of the 1st District, smacks of political nepotism at its worst.

In selecting the younger Jones, the four-member selection committee passed over candidates who, in our judgment at least, have qualifications for the Legislature and records of public service far superior to those of the congressman's son. Unfortunately for them, they did not have the qualification of being a congressman's son.

It is no secret that the congressman made contacts in his son's behalf. The question has to arise, did the committee bend to the considerable pressures that a congressman can put on them?

We fear we have here a shoddy use of the democratic process. Committee members can say they gave all the candidates proper consideration, but the fact remains that a congressman's son was given the appointment over others with years of public service.

The public will ultimately be the judge of the propriety of the appointment. But at this point we must say that the public has no reason to be assured that the interests of the people of Pitt and Greene counties, nor of the Democratic Party, have been served.

As required by law, Gov. Hunt will appoint the candidate named by the selection committee ... while many citizens hold their collective nose.

Violence On The Highways

Independent truckers have gone on strike throughout the nation to protest increased fuel and highway user fees.

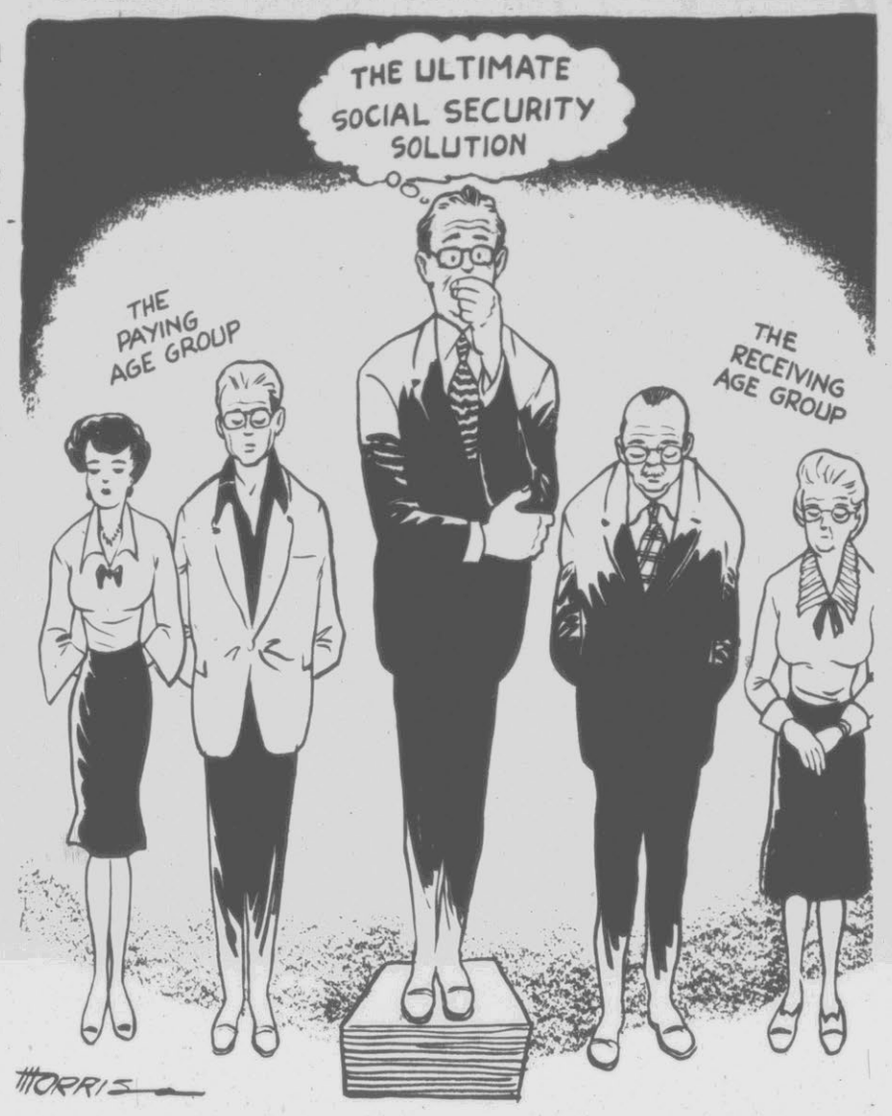

Tragically there has already been violence, much of it here in North Carolina, where one truck driver has been killed by gunfire and another injured.

Perhaps the truckers have a point to make concerning the increased cost they will bear under the road tax increases. Certainly their grievances should be considered.

There should be no toleration, however, of the violence on the highways. Law enforcement officers should spare no effort to bring to justice those guilty of the henious murder in North Carolina. Nationally the free movement of trucks should be assured even if it takes military protection to do it.

This nation must not bow to violence!

GOING TO TAKE A SOLOMON-LIKE DECISION!

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's call for government to "take the lead in restoring the economy" was as much a defeat for the administration's austerity bloc, led by budget director David Stockman, as for the supply-siders at the hands of the victorious West Wing at the White House.

Stockman's drafts for the State of the Union address were ignored. So were efforts coming out of the Treasury. "We were simply out of the flow," one senior economics policymaker told us. The document, eschewing serious discussion of the economy, was a purely political statement reflecting the strategic concepts of White House chief of staff James A. Baker III.

That explains the jubilation in Baker's West Wing in sharp contrast to long faces at Secretary Donald T. Regan's Treasury and Stockman's Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Beginning his third year in office, the de-Reaganization of the president finally is an accomplished fact. Stripped of ideology, the State of the Union was a centrist plea for bipartisanship in the manner of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It had been obvious for weeks that the supply-siders, led by Rep. Jack Kemp, had lost their fight for a growth-oriented statement to lure back blue-collar workers. But these supply-siders had assumed that the battle had been won by Stockman, their former ally but long since a high priest of austerity.

Helped by chief economic adviser Martin Feldstein's exceptionally low economic-growth estimates, Stockman did spotlight budget deficits to the exclusion of nearly all else. In Cabinet meetings preceding the State of the Union, Interior Secretary James Watt was a voice in the wilderness calling for more optimistic growth estimates.

Nevertheless, both Treasury and OMB wanted the president's speech to sound a more positive tone about economic policy of the past two years. They found themselves shut out of the speech-writing process, receiving the final version of the address Tuesday afternoon, a few hours before it was released to the press. "All we had time to do was pencil in a few critical comments," an economic policy official told us. The comments were ignored.

Treasury-OMB inability to put the president in a more upbeat posture about the economy connotes no great debate over economic philosophy with Jim Baker, who freely acknowledges ignorance about economics. Rather, the un-Reaganlike hand-wringing over hard times is the political base for the conciliation and bipartisanship that Baker long has argued is necessary for the president to survive in the second half of his term.

"Bipartisan" was the controlling word in the final draft of chief presidential speechwriter Aram Bakshian Jr. that reflected the editing touch and political philosophy of White House communcications chief David Gergen. Conservative speechwriter Tony Dolan, as usual, got nowhere near the draft. Nor did Rich williamson, Baker's most conservative deputy, who is in the bad graces of his boss and probably headed out of the White House.

The dwindling little band of faithful Reaganites inside the administration was nonplussed by the line that aroused such raucous, if sarcastic, approval from Democrats at the joint session: "We who are in government must take the lead in restoring the economy." Absent from earlier drafts, it mysteriously — and anonymously, save for the West Wing inner circle — found its way into the final version.

"I can't believe the president realized he was betraying everything he stands for with that one sentence," one distraught official told us. But except for some tightening of the foreign policy language that still ended up sounding more like Jimmy

RALEIGH — The membership of the 1983 General Assembly includes 40 lawyers — 24 percent of the state's 170 legislators. With 14 lawyers in the Senate and 26 in the House, we have four more lawyers than in the 1981 session.

Is that too many lawyers in the legislature? Ask some of the lawyer-legislators and they'll say "Certainly not. We have too few."

"In the 1961 session, there were more than 60 lawyers in the legislature," says Rep. Parks Helms (D-Mecklenburg), a lawyer. "Ever since then, the number has been dwindling perceptibly... Now, we don't have sufficient numbers of lawyers to man the judiciary committees. So much of the work that this legislature does involves the handling of bills that require legal scrutiny."

Another lawyer, Rep. George Miller, D-Durham), says "There's a distinct advantage to having those with legal training as members. It's not that they have better judgement. But they're trained in the day to day examination, interpretation and enforcement of statutes on every subject." Legal training and experience, Miller says, help lawyer-legislators spot flaws and problem areas in legislative bills.

Before you discount their arguments as mere special interest whining, remember that the legislature writes the state's laws. Former Sen. Bill Creech, now a district court judge, used to say that his biggest responsibility was not to pass legislation but to help stop some of the bad laws that were getting through the assembly. Just before Creech retired from the assembly in 1982 he fumed about the inordinate amount of unconstitutional legislation which the assembly had passed that year.

"If we send out laws that don't fit and work with other laws, we end up hurting the public", says Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne.

Miller laments that there are committees in the General Assembly which do not have a single lawyer-legislator. The fine detail of most legislation is written in committees where a lawyer-legislator can spot gaps and loopholes. For example, Sen. Tony Rand (D-Cumberland), recently found a loophole in a foreign landholdings bill that would have rendered the law meaningless.

In recent years, the assembly's hired legal staff has grown appreciably to make up for the fewer lawyers serving in the assembly. Those hired lawyers not only cost the state more than a lawyer-legislator, but they contribute far less.

First, most haven't had private law practice. They're involved in the more aca-

The Caravelle In Saigon

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Putting away the tree ornaments and light sets the other day, I came across an old Christmas card that has since haunted my dreams like nightly visits from the Ghost of Christmas Past.

On the face of the card was a color photograph of the nine-story Caravelle Hotel in downtown Saigon, where I spent more time than in some of the apartments and houses I lived in during a lifetime of roving.

Inside in gold letters was the inscription:

"Ninh Chuo Tan Nien

"Phuc Loc Tho Khang Ninh."

Presumably this means "Best Wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year," because such was the sentiment spelled out in French and English on the facing side and — for all I know — that is probably what the Chinese characters, only four of them, spelled out at the bottom.

The card was signed, in red ink (as if anticipating the denouement of that tragedy), "the management, Hotel Caravelle, Saigon-Vietnam" and dated Dec. 25, 1972. So Christmas a decade ago was calling me back. On the 10th anniversary of the Paris peace accords. I parked myself on a stack of old National Geographics in the cellar, among the scattered boxes of Christmas impediments, and let my memory traverse the years and miles.

Among my souvenirs of months — years, really, I suppose — spent in the Caravelle Hotel are a handsome baby blue ceramic ash tray ornamented with figures of full masted sailing ships (caravelles, in French), five jagged sticks of shrapnel, which my wife has inserted in a bowl of pebbles like a weird flower arrangement, and a black lacquered sign imprinted in gold with the wheel of Rotary International and the inscription:

"Rotary Club Gia-Dinh Meets Here

1st Wednesday - Lunch - 12:30

2nd Wednesdays-Tea - 19:00"

The ash tray was liberated from the Caravelle's rooftop bar, where you could sip a citron-presse or a gin and bitters and watch the war, see the slow-diving Skyraiders bombing suspected enemy supply hideouts south of the city, watch a helicopter assault on a village under attack and occasionally witness a freighter being blown up by Viet Cong sappers on its way up the winding Saigon River. One day near the end of the war saboteurs blew up a government ammo dump on the outskirts of the city. The resulting incendiary display was the best I had ever seen until the fireworks in Hyde Park on the eve of Prince Charles' wedding.

The silvery and white shrapnel shards wound up on my balcony amid a blizzard of broken glass when a .122 M Soviet rocket hit the National Assembly building just across the street, tearing an enormous hole in the roof and wall of what had been the old French opera house. The sound was deafening, and our hotel shook so much I thought it had been hit.

But the Caravelle led a charmed life, escaping the terrorists blasts that wrecked other hotels where Americans were billeted and suffering its only war damage from occasional drunken brawls among its military and journalist guests. There was a recurring rumor that the hotel was off limits to enemy attack because it was jointly owned by Air France and Catholic archdiocese. I had an office on the ground floor and the morning after the rocket attack on the assembly building broke some hotel windows a little Vietnamese priest wearing a French cure's shovel-shaped chapeau came with a clip-

To the editor:

This year is a special time in all America. The Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History joins with our counterparts in urging citizens of this great nation everywhere, to assess African and Afro-American heritage, to evaluate present status and to project for the future.

Why Afro-American (Black) History Month? The true facts of the contributions of Afro-Americans to the discovery, pioneering, development and continuance of America have not properly and adequately been presented in the textbooks, media and other communication devices in this country. Indeed, for the most part, blacks have been left out of the written record about America. The fact that some changes have been made in recent years points succinctly to the need for a fuller report about Afro-American contribution.

The designating of the month of February each year is an attempt by the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History to remedy this neglect and to provide for all Americans the information needed for creative and empathetic understanding about the Afro-American in the nation.

The association dreams of the day when the sharing and contribution of all Americans in America will be so appreciated and so accepted and so understood that there will be no longer a need in any ethnic group to call attention to its contribution and its exploits for the good of the country. That day has not arrived, as all will agree, and until it does we shall continue to provide the information needed about Agro-American citizens in the United States and abroad.

This year's theme is "The United States and the Black American.'

To the editor:

I was very proud of the response of the people of Greenville to the United Cerebral Palsy telethon held last weekend.

This was the first local effort in this regard and many people responded to this call for assistance generously and compassionately.

I also am proud of the role the people of Hooker Memorial Christian Church have played in the battle against cerebral palsy by providing the local develomental center facilities rent- and utility-free for more than 10 years.

During this time the center has grown considerably. Presently there are 19 children enrolled in the school, most of whom required one-to-one care. Five rooms of the church are used daily from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.. throughout the entire year. Other rooms of the church, including our fellowship hall, are used ocassionally by the center.

It gives me a great deal of personal satisfaction to see the children growing and learning to overcome their limitations with the help of the dedicated staff of the center. I wish to express gratitude to the staff and to the people of the church I serve for making all this possible.

Strength For Today

A GOOD RULE

At a college commencement a short time ago, the major speaker made the statement, "When I am in doubt, I do the first good thing that enters my mind."

Just as we hear things which go into our ears, through our minds, and then apparently out into the air again, so we encounter good impulses every day which we recognize, assent to, but never put into practice.

There are many evil, tempting situations lining the pathway of life and beckoning us to evil. But for every tempting situation there are a dozen good impulses that would like to come to our hearts, establish themselves, and lead us to good and kindly actions.

But we have too much to do. Or we have previous commitments. Or we have desires much stronger than these good impulses. Then is the time to follow the rule to do the next kindly generous thing that suggests itself to us. We can never go wrong doing that. — Elisha Douglass

It's Easier To Run Up The Debt

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Along with the annual bustle and bluster of budgets there arises anew the question of President Reagan's ability to slow the pace of spending in social programs, and in fact spending in general.

The good intentions are there, the rhetoric too, and even a plan. Whether Congress and the public goes along is another matter, because cuts are easier made on paper than implemented in the real world.

It is much easier, as the nation has learned, to run up big debts for future generations rather than bite the bullet and pay the bills now.

The president proposes "workfare" for certain welfare recipients, a six-month delay in raises for food-stamp and Social Security recipients, and a one-year freeze on federal pay and retirement benefits increases.

Reagan has lots of ammunition to defend such moves, including evidence that Social Security expenditures this year might be nearly six times and Civil Service retirement eight times what they were in 1970.

But, with the constituent strength of the elderly growing, can he make such moves stick? And can he demand work from some welfare recipients who have grown accustomed to no more work than just signing up for benefits?

In short, can the clock be stopped and even, perhaps, moved back a bit?

That problem is not unique to the U.S. budget either, and it isn't just elected officials who find it difficult to deal with. It arises whenever human expectations are raised, and then threatened. And in unlikely places.

The U.S. financial community, an outspoken critic of domestic social spending, finds that having lent money to lift poor-nation living standards, it cannot now foreclose in spite of delinqencies. Its solution: Lend more.

That too is the "solution" often offered by Congress in dealing with restraints on spending of any sort that might displease its constituents, a weakness exploited by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

If Congress really wants to cut defense spending, he suggested, perhaps they might start with port-barrel items that benefit mainly their own constituency and that the Defense Department feels are unnecessary.

But the biggest constituency of all might be that for social spending programs, the very programs in which the administration sees the possibility of holding the line. And biggest of these is Social Security.

When first developed, Social Security was meant as a supplemental retirement insurance program. Now it is a so-called entitlement, and for many people it is the major source of retirement income.

Medicare, Medicade and food stamps have developed along similar routes.

Begun as aids, they are now widely considered necessities. According to the Center for the Study of American Business, headed by President Reagan's former White House economist, Murray Weidenbaum, such items cost $12.1 billion in 1970, and $106 billion in 1982.

Such increases no longer can be supported, either logically or financially, according to the Reagan administration. To pay for them, they argue, forces the country to borrow and pay huge interest payments.

Perhaps more damaging as the supply-siders see it, is that borrowing by the federal government leaves that much less for private-sector companies to grow and create jobs that would take people off welfare.

In the past, the issue of desire versus the ability to finance the desire often was dodged. Bills were passed that in effect borrowed money from future generations for their financing. Some say Social Security fits that category.

Now, the administration says, that option is closed, or must be closed very soon. Its legacy, the Reagan people say, was unrealizable expectations, ruinous inflation, recession, and an economy on a treadmill.

Can the administration and Congress change American habits? And still get re-elected?

demic legal work of research and bill-drafting. Second, because they're staff, they're limited in what they can say in committee meetings. They can't speak on the floor, at all.

Some legislators, of course, say we've got enough lawyers in the assembly. Rep. Howard Coble (R-Guilford), a lawyer, says he wouldn't want the number to get any smaller, but 40 is enough to insure a lawyer input on legislation. Rep. Howard Brubaker (R-Randolph), a financial analyst, says we could do with a few less. "I don't think any one profession should have a large dominant hold on the General Assembly. A lot of times, the average person in the General Assembly can come up with a better, more reasonable approach than an attorney looking at all the legal ramifications."

Coble and Brubaker need not worry. With all the time legislators spend in Raleigh now, fewer lawyers are likely to run for the assembly, lawyer-legislators say. They just can't afford to be away from their practices that long.

board and inspected the damages.

The Rotary sign was slipped into my luggage by some colleague-prankster on the morning of my final departure from Saigon. When I found it upon arrival in London, I knew it wasn't a farewell gift from the hotel management.

Although the Caravelle had a marvelously efficient housekeeper, a no-nonsense French matron from Normandy who kept the room boys on their toes by lining them up for uniform inspection like a drill sergeant. The hotel was not distinguished for its service. One night a bat flew into my room and I called down to the front desk.

"That is not part of my job," the Indian night manager informed me in the clipped accents of his native Bengal.

I raced down to the lobby and insisted that I had booked a single room and was not prepared to share it with Dracula's younger brother. Finally, he dispatched an elderly Vietnamese cleanup lady who attacked the visitor with a broom, caught up with it in the draperies and slipped the carcass into her shopping bag.

"She will have that for her soup tomorrow," the desk clerk told me.

Another night Bob Considine was hosting a cocktail party for his visiting boss, William Randolph Hearst Jr., and was having trouble getting ice for the drinks. The roomboy kept bringing a saucer with two or three cubes.

Exasperated, Considine got in the phone to room service, shouting, "I need a large bowl of ice, a LARGE BOWL OF ICE." He was informed the kitchen was closed, but they would see what could be done. Presently a waiter arrived with a large bowl of steaming rice.

A friend at Pan Am called me one day and told me if I went down to the lobby I might find someone interesting. There was Charles Lindbergh, the elusive lone eagle traveling with the Pan Am board of directors, and I cornered him for a rare interview. Not that celebrities were all that rare at the Caravelle. John Steinbeck had the room upstairs from me and used to drop by regularly for a wee drop at a time when his wife was trying to keep him on the wagon. James Jones, who really had sworn off, sometimes came by for a can of PX orange juice. I had dinner with Bernard Fall in the Caravelle the night before he was killed by a booby trap along Route 1, which he made famous as "The Street Without Joy."

Mostly I remember Wednesdays at the Caravelle Hotel, when all those Vietnamese and Chinese businessmen, along with a few Indian money changers, showed up in jackets and ties for the weekly Rotary Club meeting.

Now that peace and the North Vietnamese have come to Saigon I wonder who sits in the rooftop bar these days and what has become of the Gia-Dinh Rotary Club.

Draft Resister Looking For 'Another Vietnam'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"I think the Selective Service registration at this point is part of a preparation for this country to return to the draft for another Vietnamese-type of war," Russell Ford, a 19-year-old draft resister said in an interview Tuesday.

"In my opinion, it's the first step toward the U.S. being involved in another war of intervention, perhaps in Central America or in the Middle East."

Ford, who is facing trial "sometime this spring" as a draft resister, is in Greenville as a guest of members of the Greenville Peace Committee. He will speak at a coffeehouse meeting in Mendenhall Center at 7:30 tonight.

Citing figures that estimate "at least half a million men who have reached their 18th birthday have not registered for Selective Service," Ford said "this figure is higher than the number of men who failed to register at the peak of the Vietnam war. I don't think this represents a large number of people like myself who have deliberately not registered. I feel that for most, it's a matter that they have forgotten about it or not gotten around to it."

Ford reached his 18th birthday on July 4, 1981. "At that point I decided it was my own personal patriotic duty not to register. Shortly after, I went a step further by writing a letter to Selective Service and another to President Reagan informing them I had not registered, and would not do so."

On July 31, 1982, Ford was indicted, charged under the Military Selective Service Act with knowingly and willfully failing to register for Selective Service. "I was arraigned on August 10, 1982. At that time, conditions for my release were not worked out and I spent five weeks in the Danbury Federal Prison in Connecticut."

Later, he was released on a personal bond and given permission to travel outside Connecticut. He has taken leave from attending Wesleyan College in Middletown, Conn., "in order to pursue political activities in connection with my views."

He has talked to groups and individuals in Maryland, New Jersey, New York and New England states. This is his first appearance in North Carolina.

Speaking of possible influences that led him to take a resister stand, Ford said "people my age grew up through childhood during the end of the Vietnam war and Watergate. As I see it, Presidents Kennedy and Johnson were able to set draft quotas, to call up as many men as they needed to send into Southeast Asia without Americans really knowing what was happening, or without Congress having an opportunity to do more than debate the issue."

Russell says he's convinced that "registration today is a trial balloon to test public reaction. If the government and the military establishment are successful in a Selective Service registration program, the next logical step is a draft, and after that it would be easy to get into another war of intervention.

"I think one of the hopeful signs in an overall peace movement is that today more and more third-power nations are refusing to align themselves with any superpower nation. There's also a growing number of independent movements for peace," Ford said.

"What is most encouraging," he said, "is that people and organizations are beginning to realize that any war, no matter how much it may seem to be justified, is a terrible waste of human lives and resources. People end up suffering. This is what we need to keep in mind."

Disallows Tapes Under Hypnosis

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Appeals Court has ruled that a video tape of a witness under hypnosis is not admissable in court until the accuracy and authenticity of statements made under hypnosis are cleared up.

Also on Tuesday, the court reversed a lower court ruling in a suit brought by a rural electric cooperative against the city of Fayetteville.

The ruling on statements made while under hypnosis came in the case of Elmer Leroy Peoples, a Cumberland County man convicted in December 1981 of armed robbery.

Although the appeals court ruled that the prosecutor should not have been allowed to play the video tape in front of the jury, the court said other evidence in the case was "overwhelming" and refused to overturn the conviction.

The state Supreme Court ruled in 1978 that a witness may testify after having been hypnotized to refresh his memory. But Appeals Court Judge Gerald S. Arnold wrote in the Peoples' case that "no North Carolina decision has resolved the legal issues surrounding video tapes of hypnotic sessions."

In the unanimous opinion, Arnold wrote that the prosecutor hadn't proved that statements made under the influence of hypnosis are reliable and accurate.

The appeals court ruled that the prosecutor could have used one of two of Peoples' accomplices to testify about what he recalled during the hypnosis sessin. But it said the prosecutor should not have played the tape.

In its ruling, the court noted that the use of tapes or video tapes is increasingly being used by police, causing considerable controversy in the legal community. The court noted that the overwhelming majority of courts have excluded out-of-court statements and tape-recorded testimony from hypnosis sessions.

Bankers Plan Seek Credit Card Fees

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina residents soon may join shoppers in 30 other states who pay annual fees for their credit cards.

The North Carolina Bankers Association will be asking the General Assembly for permission to charge the fee and raise the interest rate on revolving credit, lawmakers learned Tuesday at a reception hosted by the group.

C.C. Hope, vice chairman of First Union National Bank in Charlotte, said the bankers would like to deregulate credit cards completely and allow banks to charge whatever interest rates or fees the market would allow.

But Hope told lawmakers attending the economic seminar and reception that a compromise may be needed to set fees and interest rates at a specific level. In an interview, he said $24 annual fees and 18 percent to 24 percent interest rates might be considered.

There has been no change in the 18 percent revolving credit rate since 1958, Hope told the group of about 160 legislators and government officials.

He said that an independent study last year commissioned by the bankers showed that 58 percent of the money outstanding on credit card accounts was repaid within 25 days without interest payments.

"Instead of an effective rate of 18 percent it was more like 8 percent," Hope said.

Banks in other states charge fees ranging from $12-24 and as much as $50 for an American Express Gold Card, Hope said.

He said the bankers association already has filed a lawsuit in North Carolina to get a ruling on whether it is legal to charge a fee for credit cards.

Ben Craig, president of the bankers association and chairman of Northwestern Bank in North Wilkesboro, said the changes in credit cards are the only item on the group's legislative agenda.

"We felt we might have warn our welcome out (last session) and we wouldn't go to them at this point" with anything else, Craig said.

Extend Inquiry Of Bid-Rigging

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Authorities are investigating some North Carolina electrical contractors already indicted on state charges involving bid rigging or who have been granted immunity in exchange for cooperation.

Federal prosecutors have subpoenaed the records of several companies for consideration by an investigative grand jury reviewing bid rigging, according to H. Al Cole, the special state deputy attorney general who has headed highway, water and electrical bid-rigging investigations for the state Department of Justice.

The investigation is being conducted by officials in the U.S. Department of Justice's Antitrust Division regional office in Atlanta.

Cole said in an interview that federal authorities had provided the state with "very little information."

Cannot Provide Needed Service

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rex Hospital does not offer the psychiatric services needed for a 13-year-old junior high school student who took an overdose of hallucinogenic drugs, and she is to be moved to a psychiatric hospital.

The student's doctor, James M. Poole, said the transfer "is for possible, long-term psychiatric help. She needs in-hospital psychiatric care, which Rex does not provide, and she still needs round-the-clock protection from herself."

The girl was taken to Rex on Dec. 13 after she boarded the wrong bus after school and was incoherent. Police and school officials are investigating how she obtained the drugs.

Poole said she took PCP, or angel dust, laced with LSD.

Maintenance Said To Blame

CASTLE AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Dirt and a "noticeable absence of lubrication" on a skid detector caused the fire that destroyed a $13 million B-52 bomber, the Air Force says.

The poorly maintained detector allowed a brake to lock during a Nov. 29 landing, which triggered a chain reaction in which hydraulic fluid was ignited. Eight crewmen escaped before the plane was consumed by fire.

A report released Monday also cited a poor maintenance record for four of the plane's eight engines. The incident was the first of three accidents involving B-52s in the last two months that have killed 14 people.

Barney Enjoys First Shower

By DONNA ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark "very much" enjoyed his first shower since receiving an artificial heart more than two months ago — even though he found the wet-down tiring, a hospital spokesman says.

The world's first permanent artificial heart patient was taken in a wheelchair to a separate nursing station Tuesday and seated in a chair for the shower bath, said John Dwan, spokesman for the University of Utah Medical Center.

Dwan also said that Clark's nosebleed has returned, although it is now much less serious than the persistent bleeding that required him to undergo surgery on Jan. 18.

The 62-year-old retired dentist remained in serious but stable condition today, his 63rd day on the Jarvik-7 artificial heart.

"Mrs. Clark said he enjoyed the shower very much," Dwan said, adding that Clark's wife, Una Loy, washed his hair twice. Clark had been receiving daily sponge baths.

But Clark "is still very weak, and he was very tired after the shower and went back to bed to take a nap," Dwan said.

While Clark was placed in the shower stall, the 375-pound air compressor unit that drives his heart was placed on the other side of a four-foot tile wall, Dwan said. The 6-foot plastic hoses connecting the unit to the heart were placed over the wall, Dwan said.

"The drive system was kept dry," he said.

The units can run several hours after being unplugged from electrical outlets and have been hosed down in animal experiments without shorting out. But doctors say they are not completely waterproof and should be kept from getting wet.

Clark was assisted by his wife and nurses in going to the shower area, about 100 yards from his room, Dwan said.

As part of a mild exercise program, Clark had been getting out of bed "as much as he can tolerate," Dwan said.

has been reworked over the past few years and has never been approved. It was decided to do it by committee and to set April as the tentative month to consider approval of the recodification conducted mostly by Jack Lewis when he was town attorney.

Also approved were the following:

•Designation of Patricia Thigpen as deputy town clerk with renumeration of $50 a month;

•Transfer of $3,050 from the electric contingency fund to pay Hampton's Home Improvement Co. for repairs to the roof of the water plant. Hampton was low bidder.

•Purchase of a 112½ KVA transformer for the proposed community center. Half of the $2,800 cost will come from the town, half from community development funds.

•A budget ordinance for water system improvements for use in providing a well on Ghost Hollow Road near here. The total cost of the project will be $102,000, with $6,000 coming from electric funds, $17,848 from state grants, and $78,152 from the town's capital reserve for water system improvements.

•Authorization of contract extensions with L.A. Reynolds Co. and M.C. New and Son for the Walnut Street storm sewer project now underway. Reynolds' contract will be extended by 45 days; New's by 26. The extension was granted due to the great number of days of inclement weather the contractors have had since the project was begun.

•Payment of a one-time processing fee of $765 to Southern Railway System and agreement to remove improvements being made by the town on Railroad Street if the railroad were ever to decide to install a second track. This is not anticipated, it was pointed out.

•Designation of June 13 as the date for the sale of liens on 1982 real property tax.

Rate Request

RALEIGH, N.C. (LAP) — Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. Tuesday asked for a 14 percent rate increase that would boost annual revenues by $34 million, company officials said.

The rate increase, if approved by the state Utilities Commission, would raise the average residential bill by about $5 a month.

The public staff of the commission, which represents consumers in rate increase requests, believes CT&T needs a rate increase of only about $1.27 million, said staff member Toni Wike.

But CT&T spokesman Dwight Allen said the firm is already running at full capacity and needs to expand.

CT&T also wants a 17 percent return for its stockholders, he said, but the public staff said the return should be only 14.5 percent.

Still Waits

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt's office said today that the appointment of Walter B. Jones Jr. to the N.C. House of Representatives will be made as soon as the governor receives the official recommendation from the Pitt-Greene County State House of Representatives District Committee.

Lynn Garrison, an assistant in Hunt's press office, said the governor had not received the recommendation at mid-morning today. However, she said the appointment will be made "as soon as we get the recommendation."

The committee met Monday and recommended that Jones be appointed to replace Rep. Sam D. Bundy, who died Jan. 19. Bundy had served in the House since 1971.

By law, the governor must abide by the committee's recommendation in making the appointment.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Tuesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 24. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 24 percent of your hot water needs.

SERVICE FOR FUND

The Rev. Jack Richardson and the Edwards Sisters will be in a service at the Revival Center in Meadowbrook at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The collection taken at the service will be used for the building fund, according to Eldress Betty J. Austin, pastor.

Eastern District Band Clinic Here Saturday

More than 40 high schools and a comparable number of junior high schools from eastern North Carolina will be represented Friday and Saturday in the Eastern All-District Senior and Junior High Schools Band Clinic in Greenville.

The senior high clinic will be held at the East Carolina University School of Music, and the junior high clinic will be held at Rose High School and at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School.

On Friday evening, students will attend the ECU Chancellor's Installation Concert at 8:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. The program will be presented by the ECU Symphonic Wind Ensemble, with Herbert Carter conducting, and the University Jazz Ensemble, conducted by George Broussard.

On Saturday, the four student clinic bands will give a concert in Wright Auditorium at 7 p.m.

Band conductors for the student concert will be the featured clinicians — Al Ascersion, Norfolk retired Navy Band conductor; Otis Strother, band director at John A. Holmes High School, Edenton; Harold Jones, ECU School of Music faculty member, and John Davis, Henderson Junior High School, Henderson.

The concert is the culmination of two full days of rehearsals by the students with the clinicians, as well as sectional rehearsals conducted by Terry Mizesko of the N.C. Symphony, brass; Beatrice Chauncey, ECU School of Music professor of flute, for woodwinds; and Bill Freeman, ECU School of Music teaching assistant in percussion.

The concerts Friday and Saturday evenings are open to the public with no admission fee.

In conjunction with the band clinic, the 1983 North Carolina Bandmasters Association Workshop (Eastern Division) will be held for band directors under the sponsorship of the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

In addition to persons named above, other musicians to be assisting in the two-day clinic are: Rosemary Fisher, ECU faculty member, music therapy; David Hawkins, ECU faculty member, oboe clinic; Earl Taylor, Onslow County Schools, chairman of the High School Band Directors; Guyte Cotton, New Bern High School, counting system, and Brad Foley, ECU faculty member, woodwind doubling.

Traditional Signal Fires Are Lighted By Swiss

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press Writer

ROTHENTHURM, Switzerland (AP) — As they did in medieval times, signal fires are burning again on the mountainsides here — a traditional Swiss warning of approaching danger.

They are being set by farmers and ecologists who perceive the danger in these modern times as coming not from abroad but from Switzerland's army.

As so often in the past when signal fires burned, the struggle is over land — 435 acres used for farming and part of a nature sanctuary; the army wants to turn it into a training ground.

The signal fires, first seen in early January, are being lit by the army's opponents, who include the Swiss chapter of the World Wildlife Fund.

The land is in the cantons of Schwyz and Zug, sites of several ancient battles over land in the stormy history of Swiss independence.

Farmer Adolf Besmer spearheads the opposition. While not setting a time limit, the army — seeking to expropriate what it cannot buy — has announced that Besmer, his pregnant wife and their two children must leave the leased land worked by his family for the last 150 years.

"They'll have to drag me off by force, along with my animals," vows Besmer. "I've refused to negotiate with the army and intend to continue doing so."

The committee and the Wildlife Fund seek a national referendum on the issue and are trying to gather the 100,000 signatures needed to call one.

Mayor Josef Beeler of Rothenthurm is another opponent. His community of 2,000, bordering on the disputed land, voted 375-238 in a 1980 general assembly to oppose the army plan.

Beeler said a farmer wants "to farm where his roots are," not on land offered elsewhere by the army in compensation.

While the army has succeeded in purchasing about 120 acres so far, most landowners are holding out, despite the threat of expropriation.

Members of the Korporation Oberaegeri, a cooperative founded in the 16th century and which owns about 170 acres of the land, voted 496-354 against selling last December. Another old cooperative here voted 104-0 against selling its 32 acres.

About 40 other individuals with title to a total of about 100 acres also are refusing to sell, including 13 who farm on the land sought by the army.

But the proposed project also has its advocates, who insist it will bring increased prosperity to Rothenthurm.

They argue that the army has pledged to favor local contractors when it starts to build and that local shopkeepers will see the long-term benefits of extra business from the 1,000 recruits who will be living nearby.

The issue has driven "a wedge into some families and friendships," says Mayor Beeler, causing wounds "so deep that it might take them generations to heal."

Spokesmen for Schwyz and Zug say their cantons back the proposed training area.

Originally a regional dispute, it has spilled over into the letters sections of many Swiss newspapers, assuming a strident political tone in the process.

"Why do we elect (our politicians) when our wishes remain ignored," demanded a reader in a Lucerne newspaper.

A letter to Zurich's Tages-Anzeiger asked whether government reluctance to oppose the army was a sign that the Swiss are living "in a much-vaunted democracy that doesn't really exist."

Another reader sees those opposing the training area as "part of a centrally elected and financed" conspiracy against the armed forces in which all Swiss able-bodied men 20 to 50 years old must do some yearly service.

This conspiracy "has set itself the goal of undermining the determination of the Swiss to defend themselves ... and of ultimately liquidating our army," the reader charged.

Such fears are bred by the sporadic violence which has accompanied the dispute. On Jan.12., arsonists set fire to two trucks in a military motorpool about 40 miles northeast of Rothenthurm.

Last Oct. 7, vandals set fire to army property in Rothenthurm, causing significant damage to several buildings.

Police in Bern, the national capital, defused a pipe bomb in the doorway of a Defense Ministry building Jan. 24.

While distancing themselves from such attacks, even some peaceful opponents have pointed to the dispute's potential for violence.

"You can tease the tamest dog until it bites," says Mayor Beeler. "Some people's patience is stretched to the limit."

Accommodate The Bluebirds

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) — A special class of transients will have plenty of new accommodations along South Carolina interstate highways by the end of February.

The travelers are eastern bluebirds, and their new facilities will be boxes installed along highways near the wooded areas where bluebirds like to nest and feed.

They used to nest in abandoned holes in fence posts that had been hollowed out by woodpeckers. But creosote and other preservatives made the posts useless to the woodpeckers, leaving the bluebirds with a housing shortage and dwindling numbers.

Pioneers of the Telephone Industry, a civic group of telephone company employees, will do the building and installing between now and the end of the month — 556 boxes in all.

"We got the idea from Georgia, where the telephone Pioneers had built and installed more than 600 bluebird nesting boxes," says Sankey Moody, a Southern Bell engineer from Florence.

Mushers Race At Anchorage

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Mushers from throughout North America will compete here Feb. 11-20 for the World Championship Sled Dog Championships.

Conducted as part of the 48th Annual Fur Rendezvous, the races will take place over a three-day period with the men and their dogs racing a total of 75 miles.

Ten-time champion George Attla will defend his crown against all comers including Dr. Roland Lombard of Wayland, Mass., who has won the crown eight times.

Fur Rendezvous is an annual celebration of the return of spring to Alaska. It was started by fur trappers many years ago.

Farm Commodity Prices Saw Advance In January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The farm price of some important commodities rose in January, enough to push up the government's overall index up for the first time in four months.

The Agriculture Department said Monday that overall prices averaged 0.8 percent higher than they did in December. But the January index still was 3 percent below a year ago.

Further, the January increase failed to budge the historic "parity" ratio from its lowest reading since the Depression years of the early 1930s.

According to USDA records, the monthly price index has been below year-earlier levels in 17 of the last 18 months.

Commodity prices generally have been depressed because of huge grain harvests the past two years, along with lagging consumer demand for meat, poultry and dairy products.

In a related development Monday, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block told Congress he plans to reduce wheat and corn price support loan rates in 1984 to put the supports in line with reduced inflation and to make sure U.S. grain will move easily on the market.

Block has been urging farmers to sign up in the administration's new payment-in-kind program to reduce 1983 acreages of wheat, corn, sorghum, cotton and rice. Under PIK, an eligible farmer would get free surplus commodities for cutting back acreages.

Looking at the current situation, the price report said that higher prices for cattle, hogs, corn, broilers and calves were mostly responsible for the January price index increase.

However, lower prices for strawberries, eggs, apples, tomatoes and sweet corn partially offset the gains for the other commodities.

Prices paid by farmers to meet expenses, meanwhile, rose 0.6 percent during the month and averaged 1.9 percent more than a year ago.

Weaker commodity prices have helped dampen consumer food prices, which rose 4 percent in 1982, the smallest annual increase in six years. Department economists say the 1983 gain may also be held to about 4 percent.

The overall increase in the price index was the first rise since last September. In 1982, the monthly average rose in five months, declined in four and held steady in three, the latest report showed.

According to the preliminary figures for January, which are based mostly on midmonth averages, the index for meat animals was up 3.4 percent from December, averaging 8.6 percent above a year earlier.

Fruit prices were down 10 percent from December, with lower prices for strawberries and apples accounting for most of the drop. The index was down 6.3 percent from January 1982.

Vegetable prices dropped 5.2 percent from December, with tomatoes and sweet corn leading the way. The index was 40 percent below a year ago.

Farm prices in January averaged 128 percent of a 1977 base-price average used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures. The December index was 127 percent.

The January parity ratio was 54 percent, the same as in December. According to USDA records, that was the lowest since the indicator also averaged 54 percent in April 1933, one of the worst years of the Depression. It sagged to 57 percent last winter and has hovered near that mark since.

At 100 percent, the indicator would theoretically mean that farmers have the same buying power they had in 1910-14. For example, the average actual price of corn in January was $2.32 a bushel, according to the preliminary figures. Although up 6 cents from December, it still was only 46 percent of the December parity price of $5.04 a bushel.

The report also said:

—Cattle averaged $54.70 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally compared to $52.50 in December and $53.60 a year earlier. These are averages for all types of cattle sold as beef.

—Hogs averaged $54.90 per 100 pounds compared to $53.60 in December and $43.40 a year ago.

—Corn, at $2.32 a bushel, compared to $2.26 in December and $2.54 a bushel a year ago.

—Wheat prices at the farm, according to the preliminary figures, averaged $3.54 a bushel, compared to $3.51 in December and $3.78 year ago.

—Rice averaged $8.09 per 100 pounds, compared to $8.06 in December and $9.34 in January of last year.

—Soybeans were $5.56 a bushel against $5.46 a bushel in December and $6.13 a bushel a year ago.

—Upland cotton was 56.6 cents a pound on a national average compared to 57.3 cents in December and 50.3 cents a year ago.

—Eggs were 52.6 cents a dozen compared to 55.4 in December and 63.5 a year ago.

Here is a comparison of January parity values with the preliminary average prices received by farmers in January and the final figures for December for some commodities. Prices in wheat, corn, oats and soybeans are dollars per bushel. Rice, sorghum grain, beef cattle, hogs and lambs are dollars per 100 pounds. Wholesale milk, live broilers and upland cotton are dollars per pound. Baled hay is dollars per ton and oranges are dollars per box.

Pope Elevates Eighteen To Cardinal Today

By JOHN WINN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II elevated 18 men to cardinal today, adding to his circle of close advisers the primate of his native Poland, the leader of the U.S. church's anti-nuclear campaign and, for the first time, a Soviet resident.

The consistory, combining traditions of ancient Rome with solemn Roman Catholic rituals, also put a converted Jew into the College of Cardinals for the first time in modern history — Archbishop Jean-Marie Lustiger of Paris, who converted as a boy during the Nazi occupation of France.

The day's pageantry began with a private ceremony in the Consistory Hall of the Apostolic Palace, where 48 of the 120 incumbent cardinals were present.

While the 18 cardinals-designate waited outside dressed in new scarlet robes, the pontiff announced their names and asked in Latin, "What do you say to these?"

The cardinals then took off off their red zucchetti, or skullcaps, and nodded their approval. At that point, the waiting men became princes of the church.

The ceremonies then moved into the modern Paul VI Audience Hall where 10,000 people were expected to watch John Paul bestow on each of the new cardinals a red skullcap and traditional biretta or three-corner hat.

The consistory, like many church ceremonies, has its roots in the Roman empire. From the Latin consortium, consistory once meant a meeting between a Roman emperor and his advisers.

Cardinals elect the pope and serve as his "senate," although they only advise and cannot legislate. Their power comes chiefly from their proximity to the pontiff and their position in the church.

Archbishop Jozef Glemp of Warsaw, for example, will take home solid evidence of papal support that is expected to help him in his dealings with Poland's Communist military government.

Similar prestige goes to Archbishop Julijans Vaivods of Soviet Latvia, a noted author once imprisoned in a labor camp, and to Archbishop Alexandre do Nascimento of Lubango in the Marxist-ruled African nation of Angola.

For 54-year-old Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, head of the largest archdiocese in the United States, the elevation is seen in part as a gesture of support by John Paul for Bernardin's commitment to secular issues, especially his leadership of the U.S. clerical campaign against nuclear weapons.

Bernardin headed the special committee of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops that drafted a pastoral letter condemning the use or threatened use of nuclear weapons. The document was proposed at a bishops' meeting last November and is expected to be adopted, with minimal revisions, in May.

The new cardinals come from 16 countries and five continents and range in age from 47 to 87. They raise the number of cardinals to 138, but only 120 are under the age of 80 and thus eligible to vote for pope.

John Paul, the first non-Italian pope in more than 450 years, called his last consistory in 1979, when he named 14 new cardinals. He has continued a trend begun by Pope John XXIII to internationalize the church.

His appointments increase Third World representation in the College of Cardinals, put Europe in the minority in the college for the first time, and raise the number of Eastern European cardinals from five to nine.

Another Plot On Pope Seen By Italian Police

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Police today arrested a Turkish national they said was suspected of plotting to murder Pope John Paul II during his scheduled trip to Milan next May 6.

Police did not say whether they believed there was any connection between the purported plot and the shooting of John Paul on May 13, 1981, by Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca, who is serving a life sentence for seriously wounding the pontiff.

Police said the Turk, Mustafa Savak, was arrested in Milan today by the carabinieri, Italy's paramilitary police force, but has not yet been formally charged.

Savak was picked up on an arrest warrant issued by an Italian court alleging that he and another person, who was not named, tried to organize an attack on the pope, police said.

Police provided no details on the alleged plot, and no information was immediately available here on Savak's background. Turkish Interpol officials in Akara said they had no record of anyone named Mustafa Isavak.

The Italian news agency ANSA quoted police sources as saying Savak was picked up following accusations by an Italian who was arrested recently in an unrelated case.

ANSA quoted the sources as saying Savak had tried to hire the Italian to kill the pope during the planned visit to Milan. However, ANSA said the investigators were skeptical about the accusation because the money allegedly offered was "very modest" for such a job.

For a year, Agca insisted that he acted alone in shooting John Paul in St. Peter's Square. But last May, he told Italian magistrates that he had accomplices, court officials have said.

Based on Agca's testimony, Italian police arrested three Turks and a Bulgarian and have implicated two other Turks and two other Bulgarians in the attack.

The arrest Nov. 25 of Sergei Ivanov Antonov, an official of the Bulgarian state airline, sparked an international debate about whether the Bulgarian secret police, and by implication the Soviet KGB, might have been behind the shooting of the pope.

Some Western journalists have speculated that the KGB, the Soviet Union's secret police and intelligence agency, might have wanted to kill the pontiff because of his vocal support for the now-outlawed independent Polish trade union Solidarity.

Ingram And Partner Sue

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram and former law partner Ottoway Burton have filed suit against each other in a dispute over a building owned by Ingram.

Ingram, president of the Law Building of Asheboro Inc., is seeking to have Burton ejected from the building and is asking $1,000 to cover back rent, according to documents filed with the Randolph County clerk of court.

Burton claims a breach of contract by the company caused him damages of $1,500. Ingram is listed as sole stockholder of the company.

A hearing is scheduled Feb. 25.

The complaint filed by Ingram's attorney says Burton owes rent for the office for five months. The complaint said Burton's lease expired Dec. 31, 1981.

In a counterclaim filed Jan. 27, Burton denied that Ingram's firm is due any back rent and said the building owner "refused to provide decent facilities."

According to Burton's complaint, rain fell into records and files, and the air conditioner was broken. He said the building was condemned by the city and he moved out Dec. 31, 1981.

Burton said Ingram changed the locks on the building and he was unable to get a file for a client. He also said Ingram cut off the power to the building in October 1981 and he had to pay the power bill.

Burton asked for a jury trial.

TMI Cleanup Time Extended

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Cleanup from the 1979 accident that crippled the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor may take two years longer than expected because of new information turned up by inspections, officials say.

But Robert C. Arnold, president of the plant's operating company, GPU Nuclear, said Tuesday he was "encouraged" by the progress so far, adding that the repairs will cost only about $975 million, instead of the $1.03 billion estimated in July 1981.

The reactor's Unit 2 was crippled when a series of malfunctions and operator errors permitted the radioactive core to lose its water covering in the worst accident in the history of U.S. commercial nuclear power.

Volunteers In Fuel Project

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Wake County residents will benefit from the efforts of almost 400 volunteers who worked in three shifts chopping and stacking wood and bagging coal for needy people.

Tracy Freeman, the student who came up with the idea, said the volunteers had an original goal of 40 cords of wood. When the Jan. 29 project was completed, 80 cords had been completed. He said the wood would have cost $7,000 if purchased.

The Wake Opportunities Center will distribute the wood and coal through its "Warmth for Wake" program.

Suing To Close 11 Businesses

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mecklenburg District Attorney Peter Gilchrist is trying to close 11 Charlotte massage parlors as public nuisances.

Lawsuits filed on Gilchrist's behalf Monday in Mecklenburg Superior Court contend that the massage parlors are prostitution houses. If the businesses are determined to be public nuisances, they can be closed permanently.

The suits were filed against both the owners and operators of the businesses, and the owners of the properties on which the businesses operate.

The actions are civil lawsuits and not criminal prosecutions, said lawyer Paul Whitfield, who filed the suits on Gilchrist's behalf. He said the advantage of criminal proceedings is the permanent injunctions preventing the operation of illegal businesses in the future.

Waitress Complaining Over $0 Paycheck

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Waitress Margaret DeRycke knew that times were tough, but she wasn't expecting a paycheck of zero dollars for a week's work. Now she's complaining — not about her employer, but the federal government.

The 52-year-old waitress owed more in deductions and income tax withholding than she earned in wages last week. She is starting a petition drive against the new federal law that created her problem.

The law that took effect Jan. 1 requires waiters and waitresses to pay withholding taxes as though they were earning tips of at least 8 percent of sales.

Mrs. DeRycke, a waitress for 37 years, said she worked 29½ hours in her most recent pay period at a wage of $2.45 an hour and earned $73.75 — waiters and waitresses are permitted to earn less than the minimum wage. Her entire paycheck was consumed by withholding taxes along with Social Security, pension, insurance, meals and disability.

Under the new law, it is theoretically possible for a waiter or waitress to bring home zero dollars in paychecks all year and still owe the IRS money — because of high tip income.

Mrs. DeRycke said she is renting a post office box, placing ads and printing 1,000 forms of a petition to "the president of the United States and all government officials."

"I feel like I have to beg these customers to give me a tip now," said Mrs. DeRycke, a waitress at a Denny's Restaurant. "Why am I working if at the end of the week I have nothing to show for it?"

The Internal Revenue Service says the 8 percent tip estimate is "conservative," but Mrs. DeRycke thinks she is losing money on it.

"I had 17 people the other night. They left a $1 tip and one woman walked out without paying," Mrs. DeRycke said Tuesday. "I would say 90 percent of the time I'm coming out short."

In Washington, National Restaurant Association spokesman Jeffrey Prince said the new tip-reporting rule is causing dissension between employers and waiters in "even the most harmonious" restaurants.

The association's board of directors will meet Sunday to discuss how to fight the rule, Prince said.

William Gorman, a Buffalo-based spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service, said the reporting rule "doesn't seem at all callous to me. She's acting as though she got paid no money."

Mrs. DeRycke concedes she took home $120 in cash tips for the week. With that, she is supporting a family of five, including her unemployed truck driver husband.

The IRS found in a study that only 16 percent of all waiters and waitresses were reporting their full tip income, Gorman said. The IRS estimates the new law will bring in an extra $1.3 billion in the next three years.

It requires restaurants to report at least 8 percent of their gross sales as estimated tips. Those figures, matched against employees' claims on their tax forms, allow the government to catch workers who pocket tips without reporting them.

The law provides the IRS with discretion to lower a restaurant's estimated tip income to 5 percent of sales if management can demonstrate that tips really were that low, Gorman said.

Meanwhile, employees are still required to report all tip income over the 8 percent minimum, he said.

Restaurant lobbyists object to a provision requiring owners to "allocate" tip income — to tell IRS auditors how much they think a particular employee pocketed if he or she reports less than the 8 percent.

ZERO PAYCHECK — Margaret DeRycke holds her paycheck for last week. The paycheck was for zero dollars because of a new IRS regulation requiring withholding based on estimated tips. (AP Laserphoto)

Freed Through 'Error'

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A lawyer for Gov. Jim Hunt says a Waxhaw man serving time for drunken driving should not have been released from jail along with other prisoners freed by Hunt in the traditional Christmas commutation of sentences.

Leroy Funderburk, 55, was released from the Union County jail after serving only 17 days of a conviction for driving under the influence and failure to reduce speed. Funderburk was charged after being involved in an accident in which he drove his car into the rear of a group of people on a hayride last Halloween in Mineral Springs.

Union County Sheriff Frank McGuirt says he believes Funderburk should finish his sentence, and is awaiting written notice from the governor's office before re-arresting Funderburk.

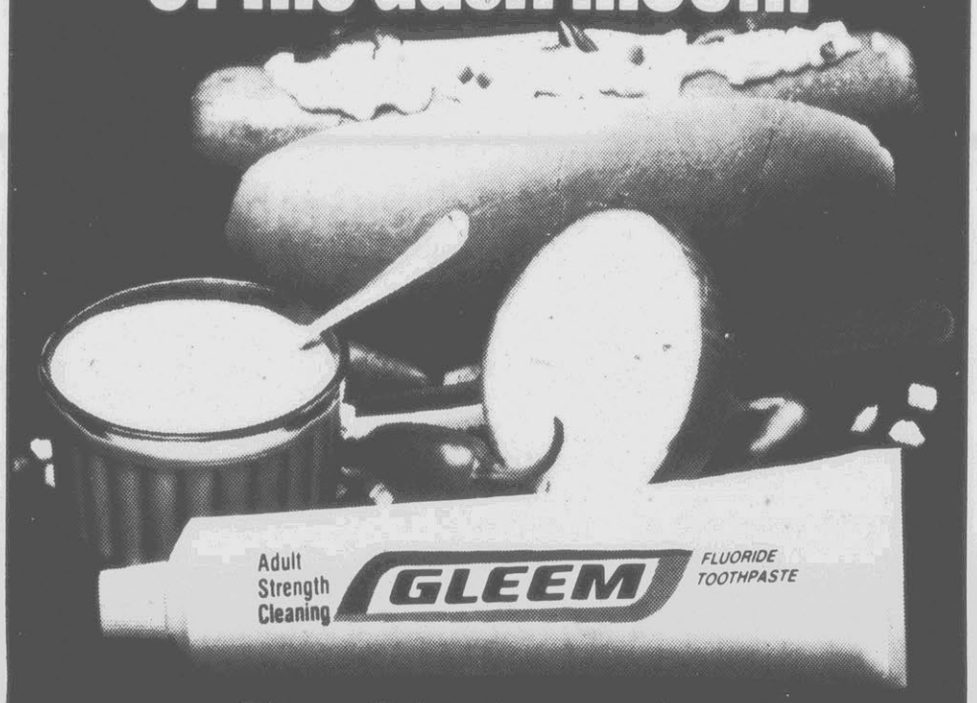

Funderburk, whose blood alchohol content was measured at .21 after the accident (a .10 reading is considered legally drunk in North Carolina), was sentenced to six months on Nov. 15, according to court records. He appealed his case to Superior Court, but it was sent back to District Court. The court imposed the sentence, and Funderburk began serving time on Nov. 29.

Court records also show a notation on Funderburk's file entered Dec. 15, saying "Gov. Hunt release."

Chuck White, deputy legal counsel for Hunt, said Tuesday that a mistake either by McGuirt or by the N.C. Parole Commission allowed Funderburk to be freed, even though he didn't fit criteria.

Judge In Bribery Trial Loses His Attempt For A Mistrial

MIAMI (AP) — U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings, frustrated in his effort to add a last shred of defense evidence, accused the presiding judge in his bribery-conspiracy trial of being unfair but lost his bid for a mistrial.

Closing arguments in the 2-week-old trial were scheduled to begin today.

U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux refused to declare a mistrial Tuesday after defense attorney Patricia Williams claimed Gignoux's rulings have favored the prosecution throughout Hastings' trial. Hastings is charged with conspiracy to solicit a bribe and obstruction of justice.

"The picture was painted that the government is right when it makes a move and the defense is wrong when it makes a move," Miss Williams said.

Hastings also lost a bid for a directed verdict of acquittal. Gignoux said the evidence was sufficient to send the case to the jury.

Prosecutors Reid Weingarten and Robert Richter have asked jurors to conclude from their admittedly circumstantial case that Hastings, 46, conspired with an attorney friend to grant sentencing favors for a $150,000 bribe.

The friend, William A. Borders Jr. of Washington, D.C., was convicted in March 1982 and sentenced to five years in prison in the case. He collected the "bribe" from an undercover FBI agent posing as a man convicted of racketeering in front of Hastings.

On Tuesday, Gignoux refused to admit as evidence three letters that Hastings claims he wrote Oct. 5, 1981. Weingarten charged that Hastings fabricated the letters.

Hastings wanted his former defense attorney, Joel Hirschhorn, to verify the letters existed when he handled the case early last year.

The prosecution claims that Hastings wrote the letters after learning of important government evidence — an Oct. 5, 1981, telephone call to Borders that was wiretapped.

In the call, Hastings said he had written some letters and would mail them to "Columbia" the next day. Weingarten contends the two were talking in code about the bribe and Hastings' decision to return $845,000 the very next day to the racketeering convicts. Hastings says he was referring to letters for a mutual friend in Columbia, S.C.

Hastings put Hirschhorn on the witness stand outside the jury's presence Tuesday, then ordered him off when Gignoux cautioned that the government might be able to ask about all their discussions in preparation for trial. Those discussions are confidential unless the client waives his attorney-client privilege.

"We brought him in here with a clear understanding that we were talking about these letters and nothing else. It's absolutely absurd to think we would do anything different," Hastings said.

Without Hirschhorn's testimony to authenticate several memos he had written to Hastings in January 1982, Gignoux refused to let jurors see the documents.

Outside the courtroom, Hastings insisted he was not afraid that Hirschhorn's testimony would damage his defense.

"There's not a damn thing that Joel Hirschhorn was going to say that I'm afraid of," Hastings said. "But rather than violate the attorney-client privilege, I chose to rest on it, no matter what happens to me."

Hirschhorn resigned from the Hastings case last March after another attorney representing the judge filed motions without Hirschhorn's knowledge. Hastings, the first federal judge ever tried for crimes allegedly committed from the bench, has since directed his own defense.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, extending the drop that set in on Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 7.45 to 1,052.34 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 2-1 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said many investors were convinced that a recovery from the recession was at hand, if not already under way. But they said some recent developments had raised concern that the upswing might run into some difficult obstacles in its early days.

One source of doubt was the recent rise of interest rates in the credit markets, where the federal budget deficit is a particularly touchy question.

Another is fresh downward pressure on oil prices, and talk in some quarters that financial troubles in countries dependent on oil revenue might cause new problems for the international banking system.

Among today's early volume leaders, Digital Equipment dropped 1⅞ to 117; K mart ⅜ to 25¾; Wendy's International ⅛ to 13⅜, and American Telephone & Telegraph ⅜ to 67½.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average tumbled 15.91 to 1,059.58.

Five stocks fell in price for every three that rose on the NYSE.

Big Board volume increased to 82.75 million shares from 67.14 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slumped 1.14 to 82.61. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.61 to 359.78.

Pupil Avers Hit By Pipe

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Dudley High School teacher faces charges of striking a student with a metal pipe, according to documents on file at the Guilford County magistrates' office.

James Williams, a vocational education teacher, was charged Monday with assault with a deadly weapon.

Greensboro police officer D.C. Long said Meagall Yancey, 18, came into the department's staff duty office Monday afternoon to report the incident.

Yancey told police that Williams was trying to put him out of the classroom when the incident occurred.

As the student tried to re-enter the classroom to retrieve his books, Williams allegedly struck him on the left arm with a two-foot length of steel pipe, Yancey told police.

Long said Yancey had no visible injuries, although reports indicate he was treated at a hospital and released.

Greensboro school Superintendent Kenneth Newbold said preliminary indications show Williams was not trying to adminster corporal punishment.

"The matter is under investigation and I do not wish to comment until the investigation is completed," Newbold said.

Williams could not be reached for comment. His trial was set for Feb. 24 in District Criminal Court.

ESC Analyses Top Producers

RALEIGH — Janis G. Ritchie of the Greenville Employment Security Commission office was among 18 interviewers chosen to take part in a Job Placement Pacesetters Conference held recently in Raleigh.

The objective of the conference was to analyze the techniques of the agency's more productive interviewers statewide in order to develop methods for increasing the effectiveness of interviewers.

Ms. Ritchie and the other 17 interviewers placed a combined total of more than 6,600 North Carolinians in income-producing jobs during fiscal year 1982.

Conservative calculations show that the 6,600 workers placed by these 18 interviewers result in an income for the workers of over $40 million in one year.

Falwell Thinks Geo. Bush Has Improved

DALLAS (AP) — Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell says George Bush "will make an excellent president" in the future, but he does not think the vice president will seek President Reagan's job in 1984.

"I think Mr. Reagan will run again," Falwell said Tuesday. "Overtures from the White House have been very nice lately."

During the 1980 campaign, Falwell said he feared that Bush might be a liberal and pushed for a vice presidential candidate in the mold of conservative U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina.

But Falwell told The Dallas Morning News that he has had a change of heart towards Bush.

"I think at some point and time, George Bush will make an excellent president," Falwell said. "I think he has improved in his performance and philosophy.

"I believe his association with President Reagan on a close day-by-day basis has been very helpful, and I think he would be the first one to say that," said Falwell.

Falwell, a Lynchburg, Va., evangelist, was in Dallas Tuesday during a statewide visit to touch base with conservative religious leaders and fulfill some speaking engagements.

Predicting an economic recovery, Falwell said Reagan will run for re-election and "he'll win."

Falwell said that by 1983 unemployment "will not be the hot bug it is today.

"With interest rates down, and still falling, the stock market straight up, with inflation down at an almost record post-war low and (Paul) Laxalt as top man in the party, the president is in a wonderful position," Falwell said.

$300,000 Given UNC-G

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Jefferson-Pilot Corporation of Greensboro has pledged a gift of $300,000 to the University of North Carolina at Greensboro toward its $12 million Prospectus III campaign.

UNCG Chancellor William E. Moran announced the pledge Tuesday, calling it "a splendid gift."

School officials noted that the money pledged by Jefferson-Pilot represents the single largest gift by a corporation thus far in the campaign. The largest was the $12 million given by the late Benjamin Cone Sr. in October 1981.

Kinston Slips Past Rose, 73-63

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

KINSTON — Derrick Sheffield came off the bench in the first quarter, and Rose High School's Rampants would just as soon he'd have stayed there.

The senior guard pushed through a game high 22 points in leading the Vikings away from the Rampants in the final quarter on the way to a 73-63 Big East basketball victory.

Earlier in the evening, Rose High School's girls had held off Kinston to take a 45-44 win behind the play of Doris Richardson.

Sheffield, who has shown from time to time he can do it, could do little wrong as he canned outside jumpers, drove the lane and dished off when the Rose defense started collapsing around him.

"There's no question he was the difference in the game," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "But we were hampered by having Alan Dickens on the bench most of the time."

Dickens got only four points in the game, spending most of the time on the bench in foul trouble. He drew three quick fouls in the first period, got another one early in the third period, and shortly after returning to the court in the final period, picked up his fifth, leaving the game with Rose down by four, 58-54.

After that, Rose managed to pull within two, 58-56, but Kinston then ran off 11 straight points to take a 69-56 lead, blowing the game open.

"This was a tough one to lose," Brewington said. "I thought we played well. We fought back and fought back and fought back until they wouldn't let us fight back any more."

The "they" Brewington referred to may not have been so much the Vikings as he may have felt it was the officials. "They didn't give Alan a chance to play. They took him out of the game early."

Brewington felt that Jeff Hopkins picked up some of the load, however, playing his best game of the year.

But, the Rampants, without both Dickens and Hopkins to clog up the lane, couldn't stop the drives of Sheffield. "When we had both of them in there, one could come over and help while the other guarded the off-man, but we missed that when he wasn't in there."

Rose was hurt in the final period by its poor shooting and its lack of board power — again marked by the absence of Dickens. Rose shot only 30 percent for the period (six of 20) and was outrebounded 16-10. It turned what had been a one-basket ball game into a rout.

Kinston scored the first two baskets of the game, and after a free throw by Hopkins, ran out to an 8-1 lead before Rose finally got cranked up. The Rampants fell behind, 16-7, on two baskets by Roy Lee Sutton, but four straight baskets, two of them by Donnell Lee, cut the lead back to 16-15 with 1:35 left in the period. Kinston, however, pulled back out by five, 22-17 at the end of the frame.

Rose finally tied it up, as Tony Clemons fed Hopkins for

A-G Tops Winless Aycock

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton remained one game off the pace of the leaders in the Eastern Carolina Conference last night with a 64-50 victory over last place Charles B. Aycock.

Aycock's girls, tied with SouthWest Edgecombe for the lead in their division, downed Ayden-Grifton, 62-34.

Aycock jumped out into an 18-10 lead in the first period of the boys' game, and for a while it looked like the Falcons might be finally going to claim a win — and hand Ayden-Grifton its second straight upset loss in a row. But the Chargers rallied, holding CBA to only seven points in the second frame, scoring 16 of their own, to take a 26-25 halftime lead.

Ayden-Grifton then charged away in the second half. They outhit the Falcons, 25-12, in the third period to take a 51-37 lead. Aycock was allowed to cut two off that in the final period.

Thomas Anderson led Ayden-Grifton with 17 points, while Mike Woods had 13, Tyrone Gay had 12 and Calvin Peterson hit 11. CBA was led by Mark Radford with 16 and Jesse Woodard with 12.

Ayden-Grifton is now 6-2 in ECC play and 11-6 overall. CBA drops to 0-8 in the league and 0-16 overall.

Aycock's girls jumped out into an 18-6 lead in the first period of their game and were never headed. They outhit the Lady Chargers, 14-6, in the second quarter to boost the lead to 32-12. Ayden-Grifton cut a few off that in the third period, trailing 44-28. But the Lady Falcons outdistanced them at the end, 18-6, to wrap up the win.

Sherri Williams led Aycock with 20 points while Zina Jones had 14 and Lisa Bunn had 10. Cora Faison led Ayden-Grifton with 15.

The Ayden-Grifton girls drop to 2-6 and 5-12, while Aycock is now 7-1, 14-3.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Southern Nash on Friday.

Bradley Keys North Pitt Rally

Panthers Down Firebirds

By ALAN WOOTEN
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt survived a slower than usual pace by pesky Southern Nash to take a 41-31 Eastern Carolina Conference victory Tuesday night.

The win, coupled with SouthWest Edgecombe's 67-56 upset of Farmville Central, left North Pitt alone atop the ECC with a 7-1 mark. Farmville and Ayden-Grifton are tied for second t 6-2.

Earlier, Southern Nash took a 44-43 overtime win over North Pitt on a basket by Rhonda Lamm with 10 seconds remaining.

"We played a lot better in the second half," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said afterwards. "Southern Nash did a good job, too."

"We're like Jeckyll and Hyde," Southern coach Stan Lewter said. "We play great one half and bad the next. We played about as well as we could against North Pitt."

Southern Nash kept the tempo slow in the first quarter and eased into a 10-8 lead. The Firebirds expanded that to 19-15 by half.

In the third quarter, Dennis Bradley and Co. went to work and moved out into a 29-23 lead. They held on to take the win with crucial free throws in the final quarter.

"We played their game," Deans said. "We didn't rebound all that well on either end. We got out-hustled on the boards. We rushed a lot of easy shots, too."

David Spivey had the hot hand early for the Firebirds. Two quick buckets gave Southern Nash the lead at 4-2. The Panthers surged back and took an 8-4 lead on buckets by Greg Hines and Charles Harris. Southern got the last three baskets of the first quarter for a 10-8 lead.

The teams traded baskets during the early going of the second quarter. A 5-1 rally over a three-minute stretch gave Southern Nash a 19-13 lead with :25 left in the half. Bradley hit two free throws with 14 seconds remaining to pull North Pitt within four at intermission.

"We were not good offensively in the first half," Deans said. "We did do a little better in the second half."

Ken Whitehurst got North Pitt started in the third period with a three-point play. After a follow shot by Terry Battle, Hines made good on the second of two free throws. Harris followed that with an inside move to tie the game at 21.

Spivey connected from 20 feet on the baseline to send Southern back up, 23-21, with 4:30 left. Bradley then reeled off the final eight points of the period.

Bradley missed on a three-point play opportunity with 2:58 left. However, he came right back with three power moves inside to give North Pitt a six-point edge going into the final period.

Jimmy Pulley hit two buckets from beyond 18 feet to bring Southern within four, 31-27, with 4:30 left. Keith Clark made good on four free throws, the last two with 2:44 left to give the Panthers 35-27 lead. Then came the play that may have nailed the coffin shut for the Firebirds.

Spivey made a steal near midcourt and raced towards the goal. He went up for the dunk but missed, sending Panther fans into a mad craze.

Following missed free throws by both teams, Bradley followed a shot inside to send North Pitt up 37-27. From there, the Panthers scored on a field goal and two free throws to give North Pitt the win.

"They missed a few shots in the third quarter that caused them to have to come away from (their game)," Deans said. "We got on the right side of the won-loss column."

Bradley was the only North Pitt player in double figures with 16 points. Spivey had 11 and Battle had 10 to lead Southern Nash, now 2-5 and 3-12.

"You can't score unless you put the ball in, that's for sure."

Those were the words of Randy Avery, North Pitt girls' coach.

"This was the toughest one to lose all year," Avery said. "We had to struggle all the way to catch up. I was happy they could come back. They chewed little by little and got the points off."

Southern Nash appeared ready to run away early, gaining a 10-4 lead after one quarter. The Panthers rallied in the second period and eventually tied it at 21-21.

North Pitt came out of a see-saw battle in the third period with a 31-30 advantage. The Ladybirds came back and had a chance to put it away late in the fourth quarter. Costly turnovers kept the Pant-HERS in it and the game went into overtime knotted at 39.

In the overtime, Melissa Morgan hit a free throw with 2:33 left to give Southern a 40-39 advantage. North Pitt's Delores Pittman hit one to tie it at 40-40 with 2:17 left.

Cynthia Brown connected from inside the lane to give the Ladybirds a 42-40 lead with 1:33 left. Another free throw by Pittman cut the margin to 42-41 with 1:03 remaining.

Southern Nash came down but an attempted shot from the right wing wouldn't fall. The Pant-HERS controlled the rebound and worked the ball into Linda Harrell for a shot. She was fouled and made both ends of the one-and-one with :34 left.

The Ladybirds then set up for a shot. They worked the ball around to Lamm, who put in the winning shot with 10 seconds left. North Pitt called timeout and then got the ball to Sherri Bradley close to the goal, but the shot wouldn't fall and the Ladybirds escaped with the win.

"We wanted to get a good shot," Southern Nash coach Rosalie Ellis said of the winning points scored by Lamm. "It was good to be able to win with (Melissa) Morgan not on the floor. It gives the younger players more confidence."

Morgan picked up her fifth foul with 1:03 remaining in the overtime period and Southern Nash up 42-41.

Southern Nash scored the last six points of the first period to take a 10-4 lead after eight minutes. Two buckets by Scarlett Jones at the start of the second period pushed the lead to 14-6.

The Pant-HERS retaliated with a 7-1 spurt over the next two minutes to close within 15-13 at the 4:26 mark. North Pitt continued to chip away at the lead and tied it at 21 on a baseline jumper by Bradley.

Neither team led by more than two during the third period and the Pant-HERS led 31-30 entering the fourth quarter.

In that, North Pitt scored first on a bucket by Regina Cox to take a 33-30 lead. Southern Nash came back and outscored the Pant-HERS 8-0 over the next six minutes to take a 38-33 lead with 1:50 left.

But the Pant-HERS rallied again. Harrell hit from inside and Patricia Daniels came up with a steal and layup to cut the deficit to 39-37 with :57 left. Harrell then made a steal and North Pitt was forced to set up the offense before scoring. Harrell got the basket from 15 feet to tie the game, 39-39, with :30 left.

Neither team could get off a final shot and the game went into overtime.

Ellis felt her team should have won in regulation. "We had some turnovers at the end. They were 'senior' turnovers which gave them four points," Ellis said.

Morgan led Southern Nash, now 4-3 and 10-5, with 14 points. Brown added 10.

For North Pitt, 2-6 and 7-12, Harrell had 16 and Pittman netted 15.

Fox Quits Basketball Team

Fox, a junior from Raleigh, had played only 41 minutes in nine games this year and was averaging 2.3 points and 0.1 rebounds a game.

"Mike decided basketball is of secondary importance to his grades," Harrison said. "Mike has elected to remove himself from the basketball team effective yesterday to concentrate on his studies."

Fox, a 6-3, 180-pounder, was accepted on early-acceptance to the ECU Business School and had planned to attend ECU regardless of whether he played basketball or not, ECU officials said.

Ahoskie, now 2-11 in the league and 4-12 overall, closed to 42-33, after three periods but the Redskins outscored the Cougars, 14-12, in the fourth quarter to seal the win.

Joining Highsmith in double digits for the Redskins were Garrett Baker with 12 and Spencer Bryant with 11. Roanoke leading-scorer Greg Everett was held to but nine points. Everett is averaging nearly 17 points a game.

No. 5 St. John's Beaten

By The Associated Press

Since joining the powerful Big East Conference for the first time this season, the Pitt Panthers have been trying to prove they belong there.

It has taken them some time to do it — but Tuesday night's 72-71 basketball victory over fifth-ranked St. John's should give their status a lift.

"You have to prove it on the court and they proved it tonight," St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said after his Redmen squandered an eight-point first-half lead, then lost when Pitt guard Billy Culbertson sank six free throws in the final 1:57.

Pitt, 10-8, had won only twice in seven previous Big East games, and had been blown out in its only other contests against nationally-ranked teams, Villanova and Syracuse.

"The victory certainly meant more than any game since I've been at Pitt," said Panther Coach Roy Chipman. "We beat a great team and a great coach in the toughest league in the country.

"We proved tonight that we can beat one of the great teams in the country in our place. Our fans were great. They were worth eight or nine points to us. We had a Big East crowd tonight."

A sellout crowd of 6,180 attended the game at the Pitt Field House.

Clyde Vaughan, the Big East's top scorer, and sophomore Andre Williams each scored 24 points to lead the Panthers, who sank 28 of 35 free throws to 11 of 15 for St. John's. Williams was 10 for 10 and Vaughan was 10 for 11 from the foul line.

Williams had scored only one point in 44 minutes of playing time in Pitt's 59-53, double-overtime victory over Providence last Saturday night.

"We wanted to get him (Williams) involved in the offense more," Chipman said.

Culbertson clinched the victory by sinking the front end of a 1-and-1 with seven seconds to go to lift the Panthers to a 72-69 lead. St. John's, 18-2 overall, lost for the second time in nine Big East games.

Elsewhere, Terry Teachout scored 16 points and Duquesne hit 20 of 30 foul shots to beat Dayton 58-55. While Dayton outscored Duquesne from the floor 24-19, the Flyers only had nine foul shots, hitting seven of them.

"Our kids kept their poise down the stretch," said Duquesne Coach Jim Satalin. "Dayton shot terribly. If they had shot better, you would see a different story."

Dayton Coach Don Donoher: "At the end we tried to go after them but they hit the crucial foul shots."

Karl Racine sank two free throws with two seconds remaining to give Penn a 41-39 victory over Princeton. The Quakers held the ball the final two minutes until Princeton forward Craig Robinson fouled Racine.

SMU's Jon Koncak and Carl Wright accounted for nine points in a four-minute stretch, paving the way for the Mustangs' 73-64 victory over Texas. The Mustangs, who trailed Texas for most of the first half, led 34-30 with 16:32 left in the game. With 12:11 left, SMU was up by 17, 49-32.

Leonard Mitchell blocked two shots, stole three passes and scored seven points in a 17-4 scoring spurt that sent Louisiana State on its way to a 78-69 victory over Florida.

The third period saw the Wildcats added a couple of more points to the lead, stretching it to 37-23. They outhit the Bullets, 25-17, in the dash to the wire.

Harold Hill led Columbia with 23 points while Brian Rowson had 21. Kenneth Moore led Jamesville with 17.

Jamesville's girls eased into an 11-8 lead after one period, but couldn't hold it. Columbia came back with a 12-9 advantage in the second period, leaving it tied at 20-20 at the half.

Columbia then eased out into the lead, 6-3, in the third period, and held off Jamesville in the final period to take the win, as the Bullets missed out on a chance in the final seconds to pull it out.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Bear Grass beat Bath, 52-45, behind Angie Mizelle's 38 points.

Bath, now 4-6 overall and in the league, outscored the Bears, 12 to 8, in the final period to tie the game at 39 and send it into overtime. Timmy Williams scored three of his 10 points in the OT for the Bears and Gardner hit a pair of free throws to seal the win.

Bear Grass, now 5-7 and 6-8, led, 13-12, after the first period, but trailed at the half, 23-20. The Bears rallied with an 11-4 third period to go up, 31-27, after three periods before Bath sent the game into OT.

Phillip Peele led Bear Grass with 11 points. Kevin Cutler led Bath with 16 and Galen Braddy with 10.

Kinston Tops Rampants...

a layup with 5:58 left in the first half, 25-25. Kenneth Walters put Kinston back out, 26-25, but a lane violation on the second shot of his one-and-one wiped out the second point and gave Rose a chance to take the lead for the first time.

The Rampants failed, however, on a couple of chances, and then Sheffield really went to work, scoring the next eight points for the Vikings as they ran back out to a 36-32 halftime lead.

Hopkins and Dickens hit early in the third period to knot it again, 36-36, and Clemons scored off the fast break to put Rose ahead for the first time, 38-36 with 6:29 left. Kinston came right back to regain the lead, but Rose took it back again before losing it once more, 44-42. The Rampants then tied it up one more time on a jumper by Albert Brown at 3:06, 44-44, but it was for the last time.

Charles Shackleford returned the Vikings to the lead with 2:55 left, off an assist by Sheffield, and another basket by Walters and two by Travis Freeman ran the lead back to eight, 52-44, before Rose scored the final three baskets of the period, two of them by Hopkins, to trim it to 52-50, as the final period started.

But Rose missed its first five shots of the final quarter, while Kinston was rushing through six points of its own, making it 58-50. Rose again rallied, cutting it to 58-56, but again Sheffield took over, scoring seven of the next 11 points for the Vikes as they ran their lead out to 13, 69-56 with 1:21 left.

Kinston ended up shooting 57.1 percent for the night, while Rose made just 44.4 percent. Another big factor was the free throw line. Kinston hit on seven of 13 in the second half, while Rose was one of one.

In addition to the 22 by Sheffield, Sutton hit 16 and Shackleford added 13.

Rose was led by Lee and Hopkins, each with 16, while Clemons had 12.

"I really think we'll have a chance to beat them at our place," Brewington said.

The girls' game was tight all the way, with Rose not being assured of victory until the horn went off.

The Rampettes took an early 6-1 lead, and held as 12-9 margin after one period. Kinston rallied, however, to take a 13-12 lead early in the second period and the lead changed hands five more times during the frame, with the Valkyries leading by as much as three once, 19-16, but two baskets by Alma Atkinson put Rose back ahead 20-19, before two free throws and a technical foul on Frances Barnhill gave Kinston a 22-20 lead. Atkinson then hit two at the stripe with 38 seconds left to knot it at 22-22 at intermission.

The lead again bounced back and fourth in the third period, changing hands four times. Finally, Cynthia Williams hit off a rebound to give Kinston a 34-32 lead that held for the final 30 seconds of the period.

Atkinson tied it up early in the final period and then Richardson took over. Scoring ten points in the final 6:20 of the game, she put Rose into the lead and helped the Rampettes build up a six-point lead.

Rose, however, squandered it away, and the lead changed hands three more times before Richardson hit with 1:44 to put Rose ahead for good, 44-43. Shelia Carmon added a basket from underneath to make it 46-45 with 45 seconds left, but Kim Williams scored for Kinston to trim it to one with 21 seconds left.

Rose sent Linda Winstead to the line with eight seconds to go, but she stepped on the stripe for a violation and Kinston got it back with the chance to take the lead, but after calling for time with five seconds left at midcourt, the Valkyries had to take an outside shot and it was short, giving Rose the win.

Richardson finished with 18 points, while Atkinson had 12. Kim Williams had 15, Terry Sims had 14 and Cynthia Williams had 12 for Kinston.

"I've got to give a lot of credit to Richardson," Coach Dennis Gibson said. "She came off the bench and gave us a great game. She began to move inside for us, and the girls began to hit her with their passes. If we can get continued play like this from her and don't freeze up outside, we've got a chance to win some more games."

Gibson was disappointed with his defense around the lane during the first half, but felt it was shored up with some halftime adjustments. "What hurt us most was having Frances on the bench with three fouls for so long.

"But we needed a win like this. It's got to help us mentally to have stuck in there and pulled it out."

The Rampant boys are now 3-4 in Big East play, and 4-9 overall. The girls climb to 4-3 and 6-8. Kinston's boys are 4-3 in the league and 12-4 overall. The girls are 2-5 and 6-7.

Rose plays host to Northern Nash on Friday as the league begins its second leg.

Developers Plan Big Ski Resort In Sierra Nevada

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

TRUCKEE, Calif. (AP) — Hoping to succeed where Walt Disney failed, a group of California and Nevada developers is quietly planning what could be the nation's largest ski resort — a $1 billion complex in the Sierra Nevada.

When finished, the proposed Sunstream ski area, nearly twice the size of Vail, Colo., would cater to 25,000 or more skiers a day.

"I really believe a place like this would do twice the gross they do in Vail now," said Alain Lazard, a former coach of the French national ski team and a partner in the proposed resort a few miles from Lake Tahoe. He estimated the cost could top $1 billion with construction lasting as long as 20 years.

It has been more than a decade since a major ski resort was built in the Sierra Nevada. Environmental protests in the mid-1970s helped stop two resorts proposed by Walt Disney Productions, one at Mineral King in the southern Sierra and one at Independence Lake, 13 miles from Truckee.

But developers and conservationists say the Sunstream proposal is different, partly because its location is not as unspoiled as Mineral King or Independence Lake.

The land, located in Coldstream Valley, southwest of Truckee, is mostly owned by developers, although there are some U.S. Forest Serviceand other private land holdings on the site.

Sunstream's slopes would be sandwiched between two other well-established ski areas, Squaw Valley and Sugar Bowl, and the area has been targeted for ski development in government planning reports.

"The area is not as environmentally sensitive or pristine as some of the other areas that have been proposed," said Ted Cobb, chairman of the Mother Lode chapter of the Sierra Club.

"If they are very careful and are really concerned about making a good project, I seriously doubt if we will oppose it."

Cobb's view is not universally shared, and the developers expect some opposition, but not from government officials.

"The state of California under the Brown administration was unalterably opposed to any use of ... the Sierra Nevada," said Don Steinmeyer, chairman of Sunstone International Ltd., Sunstream's parent company.

"I think the new administration, both nationally and in California, has a different view of how those kinds of resources should be used for human beings," said Steinmeyer, 51, a Nevada land developer.

Planning consultant Roy Brewer said it would be several months before the earliest proposals are submitted to local planning authorities. Steinmeyer said skiing at Sunstream could begin no earlier than the winter of 1984-85.

As part of the planning process, Lazard, an expert skier, spent nearly two months last year skiing and studying the Sunstream site.

"It's just perfect," he said. "As far as the trails, it is very diversified. There are some very steep chutes, and some nice level areas for beginners. You can accommodate a lot of different types of skiers."

The Lake Tahoe region already includes more than a dozen ski resorts, the greatest concentration in the Sierra Nevada. Lazard said Sunstream would be different than the others because it would be a "destination" resort with everything needed for a lengthy stay.

"It's self-contained," he said. "You have hotels, you have restaurants, you have have condos, you have shopping, you have everything. You park your car and you don't go anywhere for a week."

Lazard said the 16-square-mile site has about 4,200 acres of terrain suitable for skiing. He envisions 25 "major" ski lifts, as well as smaller lifts and rope tows on beginner slopes.

By comparison, nearby Heavenly Valley, now considered the nation's largest ski resort, boasts 26 lifts and over 20 square miles of terrain. Lazard said Sunstream's "skiable" acreage would be larger, and its capacity of between 25,000 and 28,000 skiers would be far greater.

Lodging developments alone at Sunstream could run $700 million, Lazard said, with an additional $75 million for ski trails, lifts and lodges.

Brewer said Sunstream's developers hope to blunt environmental opposition by preparing meticulous planning reports and working to safeguard the area's natural beauty.

"We're trying to do our homework up front," he said.

But the plans already are stirring up old fears in Truckee, a former logging town where considerable opposition arose to the Disney project. Residents are worried that the new resort might threaten their way of life.

"I think people are concerned about what it would do to the area," said Bob Herhusky, a downtown merchant. "The concern is that we have a lovely little mountain community. Is this going to wipe it out?"

Some competitors believe Sunstream may not be up to the huge development task..

"Our perception is that there's a lot of noise being made and not a lot of action," said Marshall Lewis, a spokesman for the nearby Alpine Meadows ski resort.

"They've got some mighty big plans," Lewis said, "but they've got some equally large hurdles to jump before they can pull it off."

Rare Syndrome Is Medical Nightmare

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The Danish Medical Association has warned hospitals in the Copenhagen area and doctors on overnight house call duty about a man who is fit as a fiddle, but a master at simulating serious diseases.

Over the past three years, the 41-year-old man has been hospitalized 27 times, the association said. He has been taken to emergency wards 20 times and has been driving his family doctor to distraction by turning up almost daily with the "symptoms" of a new and serious illness.

This week's edition of the medical association's Weekly Journal carried the official warning. It said the man, who was not named in the report, was suffering from the Muenchausen syndrome — a combination of compulsive, persuasive lying, a sense of drama and, possibly, hypochondria.

The syndrome was named after Baron Karl Friedrich von Muenchausen, an 18th century soldier and adventurer known for giving exaggerated accounts of his exploits.

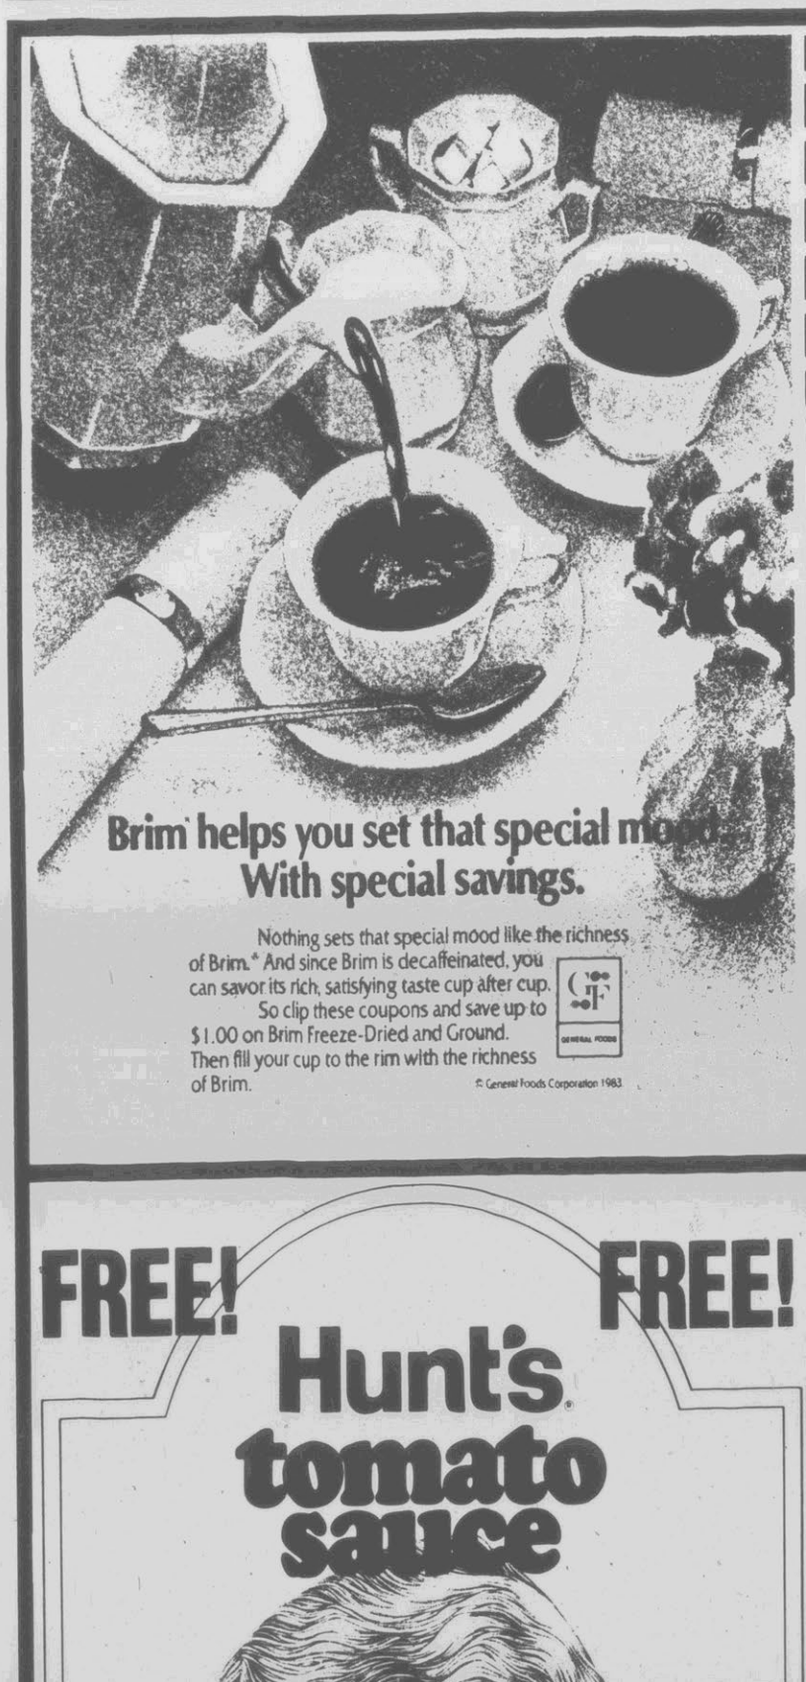

An attempt to have the man treated by a psychiatrist failed because the doctor gave up after one session of tall tales, the journal's report said.

It said the man's favorite ruse was to simulate a heart attack. But he also was described as being uncommonly familiar with the symptoms of a multitude of diseases, and an expert at moaning and groaning at the right times.

He also was described as keenly enjoying the whole show, which the journal said is expensive for a social welfare system that provides free hospital and medical care.

TWIN FLYERS — Large multi-body transport aircraft concept studied jointly by the Lockheed-Georgia Co. and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Langley Research Center would offer potential weight, performance and cost benefits over conventional body aircraft, according to researchers. They estimated that direct operating costs would be about 11 percent less than a single-body aircraft of equivalent payload capacity, while the flyaway cost would be from 9 to 15 percent less. The design is also said to be more fuel efficient. (AP Laserphoto)

Hong Kong Trying Confiscate Wealth Of The Drug Dealers

By KHARK SINGH
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — The Customs Department here has set up a five-member task force to track down the "laundered assets" of drug dealers and confiscate them.

Acting Customs Superintendent David Tong maintains the confiscation of the assets would serve as a greater deterrent than jail sentences or heavy fines — since trafficking syndicates have large amounts of money for use by its members.

At present, the maximum penalty for drug offenses is life imprisonment and a fine of 10 million Hong Kong dollars (about $1.7 million).

Tong said the task force is sorting out the legal problems involved in proving that wealth was procured from drug activities.

He gave no details on how drug traffickers laundered their dirty money, but other officials have said in the past they believe an underground banking system is being used to transfer millions of dollars in narcotics money around the world.

They said the system is very complex and reportedly can transfer up to $5 million (U.S) from one country to another in a matter of hours.

The officials claimed the system operates out of gold shops, trading companies or money dealers and uses "chits," telephone calls, coded telex messages and clandestine radio transmissions to transfer money around Southeast Asia and to Europe and North America.

They have estimated that tens of millions of dollars are transferred illegally every week through the underground banking system.

The officials said they believe the corporate, financial brains of the drug trade are centered in Hong Kong and that the bulk of Southeast Asian drug money passes through this British colony.

During a conference of drug experts from the United States, Canada, the Netherlands, Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand and Malaysia here in 1979, drug enforcement administration officials tried to encourage Hong Kong and Southeast Asian governments to seize the assets of drug traffickers as a means of stopping them.

The authorities' decision to take this kind of action in Hong Kong followed a marked increase in the flow of narcotics into the colony last year.

Customs and police officers in 1982 seized 560 kilograms (1,234 pounds) of drugs, of which 40 percent was heroin. The total represented a 75 percent increase from 1981.

While drug addiction has long been a problem in Hong Kong — there are an estimated 31,000 addicts, mostly heroin users — some of the drugs were destined for the United States and European countries, officials say.

Tong Kang-sing, assistant commissioner of Customs, attributed the rise to two successive bumper poppy harvests in the Golden Triangle — an opium-growing region where the borders of Thailand, Laos and Burma come together.

The authorities also have expressed concern about what they called an increased flow of drugs from the so-called Golden Crescent — Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iran.

Tong Kang-sing said that in the past only a small amount of opium and marijuana came from that area, but last year, the shipments not only increased but also included heroin.

According to Customs intelligence, there will be another bumper poppy harvest in Southeast Asia's Golden Triangle this year.

"Our resources will be stretched to the limit," the assistant commission said.

New Acceptance For Glass Fiber

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Glass fiber insulation, traditionally known for its use in residential and commercial building, is gaining acceptance in the automotive market, according to a manufacturer.

"We see shipment of glass fiber insulating material for the transportation markets growing from 20 million pounds in 1982 to 50 million pounds by 1990, an increase of 250 percent," says Peter Machin of Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp.

Machin sees vehicle size and weight reduction programs, the move toward smaller engines, and diesel power plants as factors in the grovth of glass fiber insulatior.

One In 11,000 Reach Market

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — For every new pest-control product brought to market, as many as 11,000 new chemical compounds may have been created and evaluated, according to Monte Edlund, director of agronomy for Phillips Chemical.

Laboratory work, field testing and safety evaluation of a new pesticide can take as many as 10 years and costs an average of $13 million, he says.

Careerists In Teaching Face Stricter Standards

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Students in the University of North Carolina system soon will face stricter standards if they want to pursue a teaching career, the state Board of Education chairman says.

"The state Board of Education has the right and the responsibility to tell the university system the quality of students they can bring into the system to become teachers," C.D. Spangler told the House Education Committee on Tuesday. "We're going to exercise that right very shortly."

Spangler said in an interview that he hopes to catch qualified students before they decide to major in education, possibly by requiring higher Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

"We want to put an early stop to anybody heading into education who's not going to be qualified to be in public education," he said. "What we haven't decided yet is how to do it so it's fair."

Spangler admitted that producing better qualified teachers would make it even more important to increase teachers' salaries.

"That's another reason that the number one priority is that we want our teachers' salaries increased," he said. "It just makes good sense."

Involuntary Commitment

The House Mental Health Committee is considering a controversial proposal under which mental health outpatients could be committed without benefit of an attorney for refusing to take prescribed medications.

Lynn Gunn, staff director for the state Mental Health Study Commission, said the bill would let a judge commit someone without meeting current requirements if it can be proved the patients are dangerous to themselves or to society.

Instead, mental health workers would need only to prove the patient was likely to become dangerous given his case history and his refusal to take medication, she said.

"The bill will address the problem of revolving-door psychiatric patients who are not complying with treatment," Ms. Gunn said.

The bill would make North Carolina the first state to employ different standards to commit patients outside the hospital.

Opponents object to the provision that would let a patient be committed without representation by a lawyer.

Midwifery

The rewriting of state health statutes to be considered in the House Health Committee will include new rules governing midwives, said state Health Director Dr. Ronald Levine.

"Many of our younger people are turning to home deliveries and birthing centers," he told the committee. "It is our hope that we can ... devise a solution that can help to meet the needs as expressed while mandating quality care. We certainly don't want to go back 100 years in health care."

He said final recommendations had not been completed.

Food Service

The House unanimously approved a bill introduced by Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash, to let legislative food service continue operating when the General Assembly is not in session.

Finance

The House Finance Committee approved and sent to the full House a bill to tax the interest, rent and dividends earned by tax-exempt corporations if the profits are unrelated to the exemption.

The committee also approved a bill to allow corporations to recover their full investment in certain property through federal and state taxes and a complex depreciation schedule. Under the present law, the companies can recover only 95 percent of their costs.

Exemptions

Several bills were sent by the House Finance Committee to subcommittees for more study.

One bill would have updated the list of medical equipment that is exempt from sales taxes. Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, objected to the bill because he said it would spend about $60,000 to reimburse insurance companies rather than taxpayers.

Another bill referred to subcommittee would have excluded tuition and medical payments from the gift tax, which covers gifts of more than $3,000.

"Some parents would be shocked to find out that after paying $8,000 to send their child to Davidson, they owe a gift tax on $5,000," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, the bill's sponsor.

Gift Tax

Consideration of two other bills in House Finance Committee was postponed until the state's revenue forecast is clearer. The bills together would cost the state more than $1 million a year.

One bill would raise the lifetime exemption under the gift tax from $30,000 to $100,000. The other would raise the yearly gift tax exemption from $3,000 to $10,000.

Rep. Marvin Musselwhite, D-Wake, said he did not believe the bills would be received favorably until legislators know if they can afford them.

"North Carolina, with a $12.5 billion budget surely can afford these little crumbs we want to give the taxpayer," said Lilley, sponsor of the bills.

Separation Of Powers

The House Judiciary I Committee began work on a lengthy bill to designate what powers are judicial, executive or legislative.

The bill was prompted by a state Supreme Court ruling last year that said allowing lawmakers to sit on boards that administer laws violates the constitution.

Gerry Cohen, legal counsel to the House committee, said legislators have four constitutional choices for making decisions in budget matters — give authority to the legislature, the governor, the governor with the advice of the Advisory Budget Commission or eliminate the part of the budget in question.

He said the bill makes use of all four choices.

Education Funding

Chancellors of N.C. State University, UNC-Asheville and Fayetteville State University asked the Joint House-Senate Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education again not to cut their funding.

Bruce Poulton, N.C. State chancellor, said his school has achieved the highest levels of excellence in areas crucial to the state's economy — agriculture, textiles and advanced technology.

"We have a special obligation to the state ... we need to attack this whole question of how to meet competition from other states and other nations as we enter this new technological age," Poulton said.

To accomplish those goals, Poulton said the school needs money.

Lottery

The Senate Rules Committee set up a subcommittee to study the feasibility of a statewide lottery and report to the General Assembly by April 1.

The committee acted after Sen. Robert Swain, D-Buncombe, said he preferred debating a bill to establish a lottery instead of a bill to set up a committee to study the lottery question as recommended by Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth.

"We no longer can rely totally on the present tax structure to fill revenue needs," Barnes said. "We need to be more creative ... a number of states are starting lotteries."

Senate Slow On Dram Shop Bill

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Strong Senate opposition to the "dram shop" proposal may have convinced Gov. Jim Hunt to set his sights on quick House passage of his anti-drunken driving package, lawmakers say.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, chairman of the House Judiciary III committee considering Hunt's Safe Roads Act, said Tuesday the panel was moving too slowly and would meet an extra hour each week.

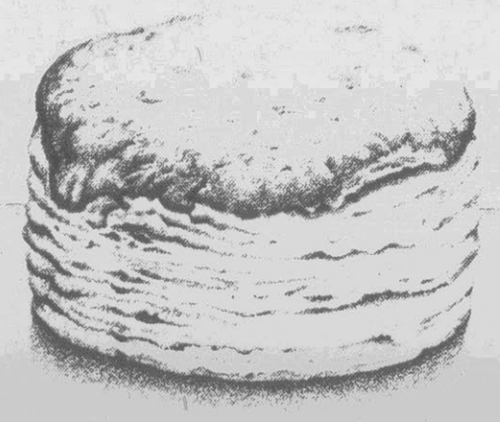

Lancaster's announcement came after he and other legislators dined with Hunt Monday night. Sources said Hunt made a strong pitch for approving the legislation without major change.

"There was a lot of brow beating going on," said one senator, who asked not to be named.

Lancaster denied that his announcement had any connection with the Hunt get-together. But some legislators speculated that Hunt is hoping the House will act on the bill first and bring pressure on the Senate, where opposition to the dram shop statute appears stronger.

"I just want things to move more quickly," said Lancaster. "At the rate we're moving it will take another 14 weeks to get through the bill."

Sources said Hunt's concern with the Senate stemmed largely from the actions of a subcommittee considering the dram shop statute, which would make bar owners and convenience store operators civilly liable if they sell alcohol to underage or drunken customers who later are involved in an accident.

Storms That Killed 13 Are Marching To Midwest

By The Associated Press

A blinding snowstorm drove toward the Great Lakes today after leaving shoulder-high drifts in Texas, darkening thousands of homes in Kansas, closing almost all highways in western Oklahoma and causing 13 deaths, including two men killed in a fiery truck-train collision.

Tornadoes and thunderstorms also whipped across the Deep South on Tuesday, sending a boat sailing through the air in Florida and flooding streets in Mobile, Ala.

Snowdrifts piled 10 feet high in Amarillo, Tex., and the Oklahoma highway patrol said it had to stop "all traffic" into the Panhandle. "We've got a mess," said patrol spokesman Kevin McLain.

It was same story to the north.

"Mother Nature is still dumping on us," said Rich Kistern, police chief in Liberal, Kan., after a foot of snow forced him to order all streets closed and ask for a shutdown of all businesses.

"In addition to the heavy snow there are strong northerly winds, and that's what's causing problems with high drifts," said Hugh Crowther, of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

The weather service said the snow would spread from Nebraska to Illinois, Indiana and Michigan today, with rain and freezing rain falling from Indiana to southern New England.

In the West, another Pacific storm was blowing into California today — but without the intensity of the string of gales that tore into the West Coast last week.

The storm system, which spread west from Arizona and north to Illinois, has claimed at least 13 lives since Monday.

A propane delivery truck unable to stop at an icy railroad crossing slammed into an 18-car freight train and burst into flames in Nortonville, Kan., on Tuesday, killing two men and critically injuring a third. All three were passengers in the truck.

Two men died of heart attacks while shoveling snow in Wichita, Kan., and two people died Tuesday in Iowa and Alabama in weather-related traffic accidents.

In addition, the storms on Monday claimed seven lives — five on Texas highways and two in Louisiana tornadoes.

"Because the freezing drizzle is still falling, the lines ice up and fall down as soon as we put them back up," said Kenny Lunt, a spokesman for the utility. Officials said 3,300 people were without power for part of the day.

Snow depths around Kansas included 14 inches in Concordia and Salina, 13 inches at Russell and 9 inches in Topeka, where Gov. John Carlin sent state workers home before noon and the Legislature halted work.

In Wichita, 9 inches of snow fell, and the transit authority suspended bus service after 28 of its 43 buses got stuck. Three major aircraft plants told workers to stay home, and mail delivery was canceled. Several colleges called off classes.

Schools were closed in many communities across Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Nebraska and Texas.

The storms made highway conditions hazardous throughout the region.

"It's just real bad," said Lynne Holt of the Dalhart Police Department in the Texas Panhandle. "People's cattle have been walking over fences and getting out, and several were killed by the train before snow shut it down."

Amarillo International Airport was closed because of the storm, and there was no mail delivery scheduled in the city of 150,000. Pantex, the nuclear weapons assembly plant near Amarillo, was shut down for the first time in nine years because of the weather.

"You could definitely ski Amarillo if you wanted to," said Potter County Sheriff T.L. Baker. An auto supply dealer said findng tire chains in the town was next to impossible, and estimated he could sell tire chaines Tuesday for $250 a set.

Volunteers used four-wheel-drive vehicles to take nurses and other workers to hospitals through the high drifts.

Two tornadoes, high winds and heavy rain whipped through northwestern Florida.

"We heard the roar and then all of a sudden we saw roofs and sheds and buildings flying," said Douglas Long of Pensacola. "Somebody's boat came flying through the air from I don't know where and went through the side of my barn."

In the Florida Panhandle, a twister picked up Mark Earley's house trailer, flipped it over and smashed it to bits — with Earley still inside.

"When I came to, my legs were under the refrigerator and I was pinned down so I couldn't move," said Earley, who was hospitalized for head and neck injuries.

In Mobile, Ala., officials said a tornado touched down several times along a 5-mile path early Tuesday, damaging several homes and businesses and briefly knocking out power to 3,500 customers. More than 4 inches of rain fell, causing minor street flooding.

Tons of food, fuel and other commodities were being delivered with four-wheel-drive vehicles Tuesday to Navajo Indians trapped in their rural homes in western New Mexico. Up to 900 families have been stranded by thick mud left from a string of winter storms.

Honor Young Life-Saver

At the recommendation of the Scouts' National Court of Honor, he will receive on Feb. 11 the Medal of Merit, the highest award in lifesaving.

Michael, then 9, his mother, Nancy, and his 2-year-old brother, Scott, were sailing on Lake Wylie when a gust of wind capsized their boat about 600 yards offshore. Mrs. Jones became tangled in rope and had to fight to stay above water because she wasn't wearing a life vest.

Without instructions, Michael, who was wearing a life jacket, untangled himself, turned the boat upright and pulled his brother inside, she said. He then tugged his mother to the side of the boat until she was able to pull herself in.

"As parents, the one thing we try to do is prevent our children from making dumb mistakes, and we try to protect them. Then in a minute's time, one of my children gave me my life and my youngest child his life. In a minute's time the table was turned. I'll never forget it. I will always be touched by it," she said.

Interest Rates Cut Bond Needs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Because of falling interest rates, Raleigh-Durham Airport officials say they'll need only $30 million of the $50 million bond issue approved by voters last year for a new 9,000-foot runway.

Airport Director John C. Brantley III said only $30 million will be needed because airport officials, who originally thought they would have to pay 12 percent interest on the general obligation bonds, now will have to pay less than 9 percent.

Brantley also said the airport has received unexpected state and federal aid, airport revenues are greater than expected and the economy has caused competition among contractors that is expected to result in lower prices for the runway work.

Board Denies Appeal Of 38 N.C. Air Controllers

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board has denied the appeals of 38 North Carolina air traffic controllers who were fired from their jobs during a nationwide strike in the summer of 1981.

Board hearing officer Margaret Cunningham on Tuesday denied the appeals of 21 controllers from Fayetteville, 16 from Raleigh and one from Charlotte. She first heard the appeals in Fayetteville last September.

"Nobody presented a reasonable case to rebut the agency's finding that they were participating in a strike," Ms. Cunningham said of those appeals she denied.

Ms. Cunningham said she reversed just one firing — that of a Wilmington man who she said had made a "reasonable attempt" to return to work during the strike.

The Wilmington controller, Robert Springle, is entitled to back pay and reinstatement as a result of the ruling, Ms. Cunningham said.

She also said she found that the controllers were not denied their rights to due process under federal law.

The Federal Aviation Administration fired about 11,400 U.S. controllers when they failed to show up for work during the strike. Approximately 11,200 appealed their dismissals to the board.

She said the FAA can appeal her decision to reverse the Springle firing. The 38 other controllers can in turn appeal her decision not to return them to work, Ms. Cunningham said.

Doug Canders, the Fayetteville attorney who represented the 39 controllers, declined to comment on the opinion because he said he hadn't received it.

However, he said Ms. Cunningham had apparently disregarded a prior ruling by the full board that workers are entitled to reinstatement when allowed less than seven days to respond to their dismissal notices.

Canders said the local controllers were given less than seven days to respond.

Terry Kaiser, one of the fired Fayetteville controllers, said he was not surprised by the decisions. He said he planned to appeal Ms. Cunningham's decision to the board's office of appeals.

"I personally believe they don't want us back under any circumstances. It's not a personal thing. It's a political thing," Kaiser said.

"If not unjustly fired, we were wrongfully fired and denied our due process rights," he said. "I'm not fighting for my job back anymore. I'm fighting for vindication and justice. If they can do it to me, they can do it to everyone."

ARMED DRIVER — Trucker Al Pendergraft of Dalton, Ga., shows the pistol and a shotgun he is carrying during the independent truckers' strike. Pendergraft was photographed at a truck stop at Interstate 76 and 71 in Medina County, 25 miles west of Akron, O. Pendergraft, 39, a former independent who now works for a carrier based in Dalton, Ga., said this is the first time he is carrying weapons in his 16 years on the road. (AP Laserphoto)

Convict Three In Jailbreak

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Three people have been found guilty of a total of 23 felony and misdemeanor charges in connection with a Watauga County jailbreak and a 67-hour manhunt that followed.

The seven-woman, five-man jury was bused in from Caldwell County because of pre-trial publicity in Watauga County. It deliberated about 90 minutes before returning its verdict Monday afternoon.

Jimmy Dean Wheeler, 25, of Triplett; Sherman Van Hammett, 27, of Shelby; and Caryn Monique Rutherford, 17, of Texas were found guilty. The three escaped from the jail on Sept. 15 along with a juvenile girl. They were captured two days later in Tennessee.

Morality Rivets Eyes On 3-Hour Film

ROLE CHANGE — John Houseman, a dominant, controlling personality in most of his roles, finds himself a naive scholar overwhelmed by events when he portrays Dr. Aaron Jastrow in ABC's upcoming 18-hour, seven-part series "The Winds of War" — based on the novel by Herman Wouk. (AP Laserphoto)

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If a dramatic character ever stood for morality, it's Monsignor Hugh O'Flaherty in "The Scarlet and the Black," a riveting three-hour movie on CBS tonight.

And who better to play righteousness than Gregory Peck, who won an Academy award as Attica Finch, the Southern lawyer in "To Kill a Mockingbird," and played Abraham Lincoln in the TV movie, "The Blue and the Gray."

"The Scarlet and the Black" is based on a true story, which is chronicled in J.P. Gallagher's book, "The Scarlet Pimpernel of the Vatican."

The 18th century Scarlet Pimpernel saved French nobility from the guillotine during the Reign of Terror. O'Flaherty, in the scarlet robes of the Vatican, courageously harbored 4,000 allied POW escapees in Nazi-occupied Rome during World War II.

As a Vatican official, O'Flaherty, an Irish priest, enjoyed diplomatic immunity at a time when the Nazis elected to honor the neutrality of the Roman Catholic Church. But O'Flaherty shed that protection by taking to the streets, disguised as a street sweeper, a postman, even a nun, to continue his life-saving work — even after the Nazis targeted him for death.

It's a movie of narrow escapes and mounting tension. In one delectable scene, O'Flaherty flaunts the painted white line separating papal sanctity and Nazi rule. While the jaunty monsignor does an Irish jig along the line, German guns are trained on him, looking for the slightest misstep.

"Is it ever right to see innocent people in danger and turn your back on them?" asks O'Flaherty, who puts people above religion. O'Flaherty places one limit on his virtue, choosing not to aid resistance fighters, saying his job is not "to add to the killing."

Besides being a thoroughly engrossing TV thriller, which could easily be mistaken for a big-budget theatrical film, "The Scarlet and the Black" ponders the much-debated question whether Pope Pius XII was remiss in not speaking out against Nazi terrorism.

Sir John Gielgud gives Pope Pius an impassive exterior, but still manages to convey the Catholic leader's inner turmoil. To some critics who thought the pope was morally negligent in looking the other way, the treatment here may be too sympathetic.

At first the pope is defiant, when he icily looks through a German officer's Nazi salute. He also does nothing to stop O'Flaherty's underground movement, merely warning him of the dangers. But, in the end, the pope wraps his rationalizations in the ancient robes of the church.

"Conquerors must come and go, but the eternal church must remain," he says, explaining why he wouldn't risk Nazi wrath. Later, though, he says: "Perhaps I could have done more."

The various shadings of morality are further played out in the character of Herbert Kappler (Christopher Plummer), a colonel in the Gestapo.

Great pains are taken to show Kappler being the perfect parent with his children. But on the job, Kappler is part of a conspiracy to exterminate Jews. When Italian soldiers won't execute a gun-running countryman, who happens to be a priest, Kappler himself pulls the trigger. Meanwhile, his commanders are applying pressure on him to tighten the noose around Rome.

And, ultimately, his success is equated with stopping O'Flaherty. It becomes Kappler's obsession to capture "that damn priest," and the movie becomes a test of wills between these two men, made even more dynamic by potent performances by the proper Plummer and the impeccable Peck, still a dashing figure at age 65.

Filmed entirely in Rome, "The Scarlet and the Black" is "escapist" entertainment in the best sense of the term — a suspense-filled, true-life story that ennobles somebody worthy of glorification.

For more proof of the capacity of one man to do good, don't miss the postcript that crawls on the screen following the movie.

Super Bowl Helped NBC Pace Ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Washington Redskins weren't the only Super Bowl winners, as NBC drew a record audience for the televised game to hit the top of the ratings for the week ending Jan. 30.

The National Football League championship game was seen in 40,480,000 homes, the biggest audience in the game's 17-year history, NBC said. The Redskins beat the Miami Dolphins 27-17 in the game played Sunday in Pasadena.

For the week, NBC finished ahead of CBS by more than three ratings points. ABC was third.

The game had a rating of 48.6 and a share of 69 percent, according to NBC and ABC. CBS listed the rating as 49.5 and the share as 68 percent.

The audience was the biggest ever, but last year's game had a higher rating of 49.1 and share of 73 percent. The audience was higher in 1983, however, because the number of television homes has increased.

NBC had a rating of 20.7 in the weekly ratings provided by the A.C. Nielsen Co. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 20.7 percent of the homes with television were tuned to NBC. CBS was second with 17.3 and ABC was third with 16.4.

NBC won the weekly ratings twice before this season, both times because of the World Series.

The second-highest rated show of the week was the Super Bowl post-game show. CBS' "Dallas" was third.

Some of the football audience stayed with NBC after the game, giving fourth place to a preview of a new series "The A-Team." The humorous action-adventure show placed fifth last week for the premiere of the two-hour pilot movie. The series begins its regular run on Tuesday, Feb. 8.

ABC's "Dynasty," getting its highest rating ever, was in fifth place. Others in the Top 10 were "Magnum, P.I.," "Simon & Simon" and "Falcon Crest," all CBS, ABC's "The Love Boat" and CBS' "M-A-S-H."

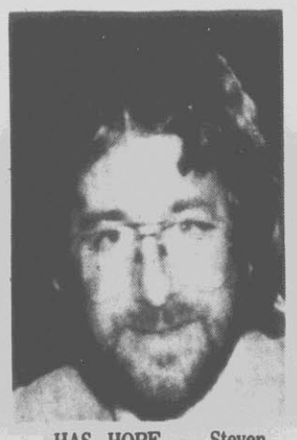

CBS' "60 Minutes," often the top-rated show, was shoved down to 50th place because it was aired opposite the Super Bowl.

"Taxi," the critically acclaimed show NBC picked up after ABC canceled it last year, came in fourth from the bottom and had its lowest rating of the year. NBC said it is temporarily replacing "Taxi" with "Teachers Only," starring Lynn Redgrave and Norman Fell," on Feb. 12. "Taxi" is expected to return later.

Here are the Top 10: Super Bowl XVII, a rating of 48.6 or 40.4 million households, NBC; Super Bowl post-game, 34.0 or 28.3 million, NBC; "Dallas," 26.8 or 22.3 million, CBS; "The A-Team," special, 26.4 or 22.0 million, NBC; "Dynasty," 26.3 or 21.9 million, ABC; "Magnum, P.I.," 24.1 or 20.0 million, CBS; "Simon & Simon," 24.0 or 19.9 million, CBS; "Falcon Crest," 23.8 or 19.8 million, CBS; "The Love Boat," 23.7 or 19.7 million, ABC; "M-A-S-H," 23.0 or 19.1 million, CBS.

DROPS OUT — Actress Eve Arden has withdrawn from "Moose Murders", her first Broadway show in 42 years, a week before it was to open. The 70-year-old actress attributed her action to artistic differences. (AP Laserphoto)

HAS HOPE — Steven Spielberg, nominated three times previously for a Directors Guild of America Award, hopes to make it this year for "E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial". The annual event is considered a preview to Academy Awards presentation, and winners will be named March 12. (AP Laserphoto)

FOCUS

A New Polish Cardinal

Today Pope John Paul II is scheduled to elevate Archbishop Jozef Glemp to the position of cardinal in the Roman Catholic Church. As Archbishop of Gniezno and Warsaw and primate of Poland, Monsignore Glemp has been an active force in that nation's recent struggles. Time and again, he has spoken out in favor of the Polish labor movement and of the outlawed union, Solidarity. And he has condemned the military government that kept Poland under martial law for a year. Many analysts see the Pope's decision to elevate Glemp along with 17 other primates as a political statement against the communist government of John Paul's native land.

DO YOU KNOW — What are the responsibilities of the College of Cardinals?

See No Soviet Policy Shifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff says he sees no indication the Soviet Union's leadership plans any major policy changes now that Yuri Andropov is in command.

Gen. John Vessey, in his first formal report to Congress, noted that the recent leadership change in the Kremlin "raised hopes that a less aggressive foreign policy might be forthcoming."

"Despite the attractiveness of these options, however, there is as yet no indication that the leadership plans any such major shifts in policy," he said.

Vessey also said reduced Soviet investment in military strength is considered unlikely "given the fundamental power base of the Communist Party and its internal commitments, the underlying stability of the Soviet economy, and bureaucratic inertia."

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

Don't play by rote. You must be alert at every stage of the play if you want to capitalize on your chances.

This hand is from the Swiss Team event at the recent North American Championships in Minneapolis. Once South opened the bidding, North was determined to press on to slam. His wealth of controls made his hand worth considerably more than the 18 points it counted in high cards.

West led the ace of spades and lazily continued with another spade. Declarer, John Herrmann of Franklin, Tenn., made no mistake with the rest of the play. He ruffed and led the jack of hearts. He was dismayed when West sluffed a spade, but he did not give up.

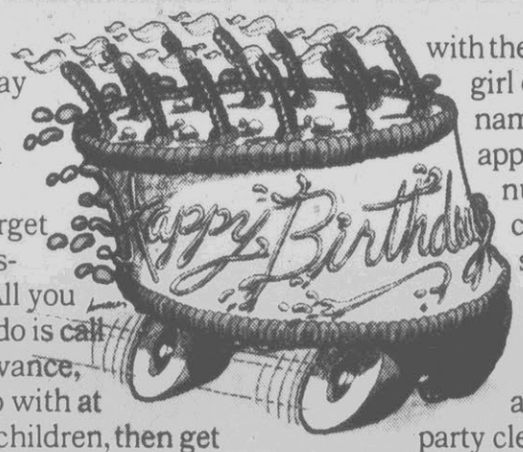

He won the king of trumps, cashed the king of spades and ruffed a spade as East sluffed a diamond. He re-entered dummy with the king of diamonds and led a trump. East followed with the seven, declarer won the eight and crossed back to dummy with a diamond, as East still had to follow suit.

Declarer ruffed a diamond to reduce his trump length to that of East. East shed a club, but it was not enough. Declarer cashed the ace of clubs and entered dummy with a club to the king. He could now lead any card from the table. East had to ruff, but whether he chose to ruff with the nine or the queen was immaterial. Declarer sat behind him with the A-10, and had to make both of his trumps for a well-played slam.

At the other table West did not go out of his way to help declarer at trick two. After cashing the ace of spades, he shifted to a diamond. Now declarer was an entry short for the trump coup, and East eventually scored the queen of hearts.

Is The Ozone Going? Scientists Still Don't Know

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one knows if the ban on aerosol propellants is saving the protective ozone layer around Earth, but it has sharply reduced the use of the chemicals, say scientists who are still debating the extent of the hazard.

The ozone layer, 20 miles above Earth, screens out hazardous ultraviolet radiation from the sun. That radiation could lead to an increase in skin cancer if it got through, scientists warned in the late 1970s.

Imposed between 1977 and 1979, the ban eliminated fluorocarbons from use as propellants, such as in hair spray and deodorant. But the chemicals are still used in some applications, notably as refrigerants, in dry cleaning and in plastic foam cushions.

Released into the air, fluorocarbons can damage or destroy ozone, according to a National Academy of Science study. The Academy projected in late 1977 that 15 percent to 18 percent of the layer could be depleted.

"At that time there were essentially few, if any, measurements that had actually been taken, and people really were scared," recalled Edward A. Klein, director of the chemical control division of the Environmental Protection Agency's office of toxic substances.

Dr. Lester Machta, director of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's air resources laboratories, said studies since the ban have shown a "tremendous drop" in the amount of fluorocarbons being released into the air.

Machta said figures from the Chemical Manufacturers Association show 580 million pounds of one of the chemicals, Freon 11, released into the atmosphere in 1981. That's down from 715 million pounds released in 1976, he said.

As to whether the drop has saved the ozone layer, Machta says, "I wonder if we'll ever know."

Klein said various agencies have conducted studies of ozone depletion, and "we haven't been able to measure any significant changes."

"The monitoring hasn't borne any real fruit up to now," he said.

Dr. James Angell of NOAA said that "it looks as though in the middle and upper stratospheres ... there may be a 2 percent decrease in ozone over the last 10 years, but you just can't be sure of something like that."

That, he said, is because of counterbalancing factors, including an increase in carbon dioxide in the air, which could result in an actual increase in ozone.

"What hurts people is (a drop in) the total amount of ozone, and Jim finds no change in that," said Machta.

But Donald Heath of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported in a 1981 study that he had found the first evidence that a change is occurring in the ozone layer, a finding that he said "represents a partial validation of the theory that (fluorocarbons) will destroy ozone."

His studies, based on information collected from satellites, showed a 4 percent ozone decline at 24 miles above the Earth. "It's small, but we feel it's significant," he said at the time.

Heath declined to detail his work recently, saying it will be published in a scientific journal. But he said further research has not changed his 1981 conclusions.

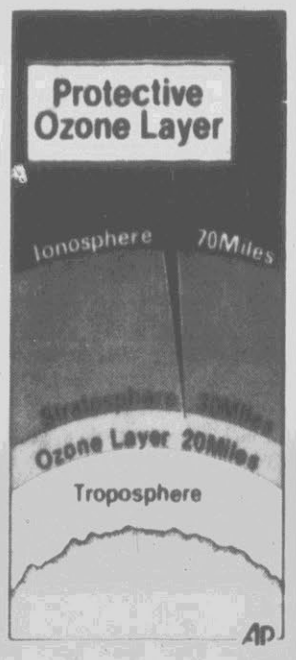

"We've extended our analysis over a considerably longer period of time. We're still left with the same conclusion: that there is an effect and the most likely candidate is fluorocarbon."

It's not yet proved, he cautioned, but "that theory seems to fit the observation best of all."

A National Academy of Science report, issued last March, cut in half its prediction of the expected reduction in the ozone layer. The new estimate calls for a decline of between 5 percent and 9 percent by late in the next century, the academy said, based on the same assumptions used in its 1977 study.

But at the same time, the academy said evidence is increasing that depletion of the layer will add to the number of skin cancer cases.

The council estimated that for each 1 percent decrease in the ozone layer, basal cell skin cancer will increase 2 percent to 5 percent and there will be a 4 percent to 10 percent increase in squamous cell skin cancer. These two types of skin cancer are common, but rarely fatal.

270 Verdicts

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A military court in the southern city of Antalya has reached verdicts in the cases of 270 leftist defendants accused of illegal assembly and resisting state security forces, the Anatolia news agency reports.

The court sentenced 185 to jail terms ranging from two months to 15 years, acquitted 74 defendants, and said 11 were outside the jurisdiction of the court and will be retried elsewhere.

Chinese Lepers Cured, Choose To Stay In Colony

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

SIAN ISLAND, China (AP) — Chen Huajing, his clothes in patches, his crutches nearby, sits on a grimy cot and stares out the window here on the Banana Palm Island of outcasts where he has lived for 13 years.

"I think I will live here forever," says the 47-year-old leper matter-of-factly. "I am worthless and my family doesn't want me. They are too poor to send money and they never visit me."

In a gray, impoverished room, a few ragged lepers keep him company, listening to shrill Cantonese opera and giggling sadly at questions about the compassion of the outside world. The answers, they say, are obvious.

"Some people understand us," says Chen, a man with a sunken face and ruined legs. "But in remote villages, many people shun us and are afraid. Some throw stones and sticks to drive lepers, even cured ones, away."

The leper chorus nods. Because of years of physical decay and years of treatment ahead they wear the air of inmates and say things like, "I am useless," "I live day by day," "I wait for my next meal."

Chen, who is almost cured, receives $6 a month to buy food and raises a few chickens for eggs. He lives in a room with three other lepers, off an unlighted corridor.

"I am one of the poorest lepers because I cannot work," he said in an interview.

Chen is one of 310 patients at the Sian Island Leper Hospital. More than 100 others have been cured but have decided to stay at the hospital in Guangdong province's only leper colony.

Some stay because they are too disabled to earn a living outside, some because they can earn at least $30 a month growing cash crops like bananas, tangerines and sugar cane. Many also remain because they are rejected by their families and villages.

In China's vast countryside many peasants do not realize that leprosy, or Hansen's disease, is curable and not easily communicable.

Most of the lepers here are old or middle-aged. A few are teen-agers, the youngest a 15-year-old boy, and they seem out of place on the geriatric island.

The hospital is a huddle of concrete buildings on an island in the Pearl River, 60 miles from Canton. It opened in 1965, taking new patients and older, more pathetic cases from the former French, British and German leprosy hospitals in surrounding Duguan County.

Many received inadequate treatment with a single drug before doctors realized that a combination of drugs worked best. Patients also are treated with acupuncture and traditional Chinese medicine to relieve pain and other problems.

For more than 2,000 years, China was plagued by leprosy, but it has an impressive record of cure and steady eradication since 1949.

The drug treatment is like that of other countries, says Dr. Liu Nuchu, the hospital director who has devoted 30 years to treating lepers. But China is advanced in training rural health workers, "barefoot doctors," to spot symptoms at an early stage. Most new cases are light.

In the 1950s, China had 500,000 known lepers. Today it has 150,000, most in the southern coastal region. Guangdong province had 70,000 lepers in the late 1950s but now has 6,000. This is the only one of four leprosy hospitals that remains.

In comparison, India has 3.2 million lepers and the United States has 5,000.

For patients here who are active or interested, there is television, pingpong and an occasional film. They pay a few cents for food in a dark, cavernous dining room and rush to eat in their rooms, or they cook over their own stoves.

They can receive visitors twice a year, but not many come. Those whose cases are controlled can pay occasional visits home, but not many make the long river trip.

Dr. Liu concedes it was a mistake to build the hospital on this desolate island, since leprosy is not very communicable. The state spends $150,000 a year to run the hospital.

Young women lepers, symptoms hidden to a casual observer, are afraid that no man will marry them, even after they are cured and present their certificate to his parents.

A 24-year-old woman, Miss Lin, arrived three months ago and expects to stay at least three years.

A peasant from Zhangjiang region, 300 miles north of Canton, she felt shooting pains in her feet and noticed numb, white spots last June. She went to a clinic; she had leprosy.

"I was so unhappy I couldn't sleep," Miss Lin said. "I just hope someday I can find a kind man with a tender family who will accept me when I am cured."

Somehow, 48-year-old electrician Li's secret was safe.

He was only 14 and living with an uncle in Canton when he contracted the disease.

He was sent to the French hospital in Duguan County. Only his sister knew and she alone visited him in secret. She never told her husband.

Finally Li was pronounced cured in 1967 but decided to stay, since he had learned the electrician's trade and since he rarely had left the world of leprosariums.

"We've never told my sister's husband because he might divorce her," Li said.

In 1981, Li married a cured patient who works as a superintendent of women. They have a cottage, some chickens and together make about $40 a month.

"Sometimes I want to move away and live on the outside," he said. "But ever since I've been a leper, I have been very pessimistic about life."

Contracts For B-1 Awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rockwell International Corp. has been awarded more than $1.7 billion in contracts for production of B-1 bombers for the Air Force.

One contract totaling nearly $1.5 billion is earmarked for production of seven of the new bombers and for engineering and tooling.

A second contract for just under $257 million is intended to pay for items to be used in production of 46 B-1s and for engineering changes. A third contract, totaling $5.5 million, was described as covering preparations for multi-year production of B-1 bombers.

The Air Force also announced it plans to station the first operational B-1B bombers at Dyess Air Force Base. It said the Texas base will receive 26 of the advanced bombers beginning in late 1985.

Hopes To Melt Freeze On Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, saying a pay freeze would have a "devastating" effect on morale, is sponsoring a bill that would give most military personnel a 4 percent pay increase in April 1984.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, introduced the legislation. If enacted, it would partially negate a decision by President Reagan to freeze military pay in fiscal 1984, which begins Oct. 1.

Reagan proposed the freeze to reduce his defense budget. But Tower, in a statement, said a freeze would not only hurt morale but also cause the services to lose trained personnel to civilian jobs.

"A small pay raise, even if delayed, would send a positive signal of our continued concern and commitment," Tower said.

Expect Rise In Sale Of Parts

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — An increase in sales of most automobile replacement parts is expected in 1983.

This forecast is made because the average car age is at the highest level in the past 30 years, says Alfred M. Rives, president of Fram Automotive Division.

Research shows that the average car on the road today is 6.6 years old, compared to 5.5 years in 1970.

"We expect motorists will continue doing regularly scheduled maintenance to keep these cars running efficiently, he says.

Use 'Baghouse' To Clean Air

At the RJR Archer aluminum melting furnace here, a baghouse captures 99 percent of the particulates in the air it processes to help meet federal clean air standards.

Electrical Engineer Designed Transmitter For Implanting

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer

WESTLAKE, Ohio (AP) — Carl Enger's latest contribution to medical science is smaller than the tip of his little finger, but it may revolutionize the way physicians diagnose disease.

Enger, a 53-year-old electrical engineer, has developed a microminiature transmitter that he says can be implanted anywhere in the body and monitored with a standard FM radio from as far away as 20 feet.

Its size is what makes it special. The transmitter measures ⅛-by-⅛-by-1 inch, weighs one-half gram and can operate up to eight months on a battery.

"Radio transmitters for the body are nothing new," Enger said during an interview at Biotelemetrics Inc., a company he owns. "About the only thing I did in adding to the art is to make it smaller and give it greater range.

"Its primary use is diagnostic. You can transmit information without wires or penetrating the skin," Enger said. "That's really the purpose of this. A lot of validity of experiments is lost when you have continual surgical intervention."

The transmitter is handmade under a microscope from hybrid electronic circuits and a collection of miniature components.

Enger, who invented one of the first pacemakers to run on the body's energy, has tested his transmitter in humans and animals. He is working on a modified transmitter that can be powered with the same body energy that runs the pacemaker.

One of the transmitters, which cost $375 apiece, was designed three years ago for use by the University of Minnesota Dental School in an experiment to trace the cause of cavities. It was implanted in place of a missing molar and transmitted information that helped determine the effect of sugar on tooth decay.

"Right now, we're not using the transmitter. We're using wires attached to a replacement crown to look at acid formation," said Dr. Mark Jensen, an assistant professor of operative dentistry at the university.

"We'd like to eliminate the use of the wire and (use the transmitter to) look at responses over long periods of time. The patient could be eating normally, and that would allow the recordings to be more realistic."

The Dow Corning Corp., of Midland, Mich., which makes surgical-grade silicone, wants to put a transmitter in a breast implant. It would seek information on why an implant changes shape over time.

"Basically, what we'd like to do is make an assessment how the body interacts with the implant," said Eldon Frisch, a Dow scientist.

"In the mammary implant area, we want to look at what would cause changes and how to control them," he said.

Frisch said the jelly-like silicone is often treated as a foreign substance by the body.

"We're not highly knowledgeable in the area of electronics, but we hope to do some work with the transmitter soon," he said.

Enger began advertising the transmitter for sale two months ago.

"I've had over 400 letters asking about the transmitter," he said. "Just about every medical school in the country has written."

Piezoelectricity, an electrical property of certain natural crystals, was discovered by Pierre and Jacques Curie in 1880. When the crystals are pressed, they give off an electrical charge.

Enger worked with heart specialist Dr. Willem Kolff on an early design of a piezoelectric artificial heart.

"I joined Dr. Kolff's team at Cleveland Clinic to see if it would be practical to build a heart using a piezoelectric pump. We determined at the time that the materials were not available for such a pump, and they still aren't," Enger said.

If his transmitter catches on, Enger hopes to spend more time working to improve the pacemaker. Though each of his transmitters are made by hand, the work space can be small.

"I can store enough components for 10,000 transmitters in one of my desk drawers," he said. "All the stuff I work on is so small, I can throw it in the trunk of my car and go where I want."

Terror Gang Said Beaten

By JOHN PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Government leaders say they have won important victories against terrorism during the year since the dramatic rescue of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier from a Red Brigades hideout, but police warn that the war is not yet over.

A recent, unsigned document attributed to the Red Brigades admits defeat and says the group's campaign of terror — born in the political upheaval of the early 1970s — has ended.

Although there have been hit-and-run attacks — most recently gunmen killed a guard at Rome's Rebibbia Prison — there has not been an operation against a prominent target since Dozier was abducted from his Verona apartment in December, 1981.

Authorities have arrested hundreds of left- and right-wing terrorist suspects in the campaign against political violence, and last weekend revoked a law under which suspected terrorists sought reduced sentences in exchange for turning state's evidence.

"The successes against the Red Brigades, little by little, have been consolidated," Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni said a week ago after a jury sent 32 Red Brigades terrorists to prison for life in the 1978 kidnapping and murder of former Premier Aldo Moro and other crimes.

Four Red Brigades members were found innocent and 27 others received sentences ranging from four months to 30 years.

Among those sentenced to life in jail were Mario Moretti, 36, one of the group's founders; Valerio Morucci, 34, a top leader of the gang's Rome branch; and Prospero Gallinari, 33, accused of killing Moro with a pistol shot followed by a burst of submachine gun fire.

Ciriaco de Mita, head of Italy's dominant Christian Democrat Party, said earlier this month that terrorism in Italy was defeated even if it roots have not been completedly destroyed.

In a speech during a visit to the United States, De Mita said terrorism as a political weapon failed because it did not penetrate factories, because the government refused to yield and because all political forces were solidly opposed to it.

Italian police commandos freed Dozier from a Red Brigades "people's prison" in Padua on Jan. 28, 1982.

In addition to Red Brigades members, the terrorist suspects arrested since then have included major figures like Sergio Segio, the head of the Marxist Front Line group who was captured Jan. 14, and Diego Forastieri,. one of Segio's chief lieutenants, who was seized last Friday.

Forastieri, who is charged with four murders, escaped from prison in October, 1980. His Front Line was Italy's largest leftist terror gang after the Red Brigades.

The government also has arrested dozens of right-wing terrorist suspects, including those blamed for the 1980 Bologna train station bombing that killed 85 people.

On Thursday, the Rome daily La Repubblica published a document attributed to the Red Brigades declaring that the gang's revolutionary struggle against the state was over.

The unsigned document, reportedly mailed to the newspaper, said that armed struggle had "short-circuited."

"The cycle of armed revolutionary struggle that began in the early 1970s on the wave of vast radical student and worker movements is now substantially finished," the statement said.

Crime experts on the newspaper said the material appeared to be authentic and was probably sent by a group of Red Brigades prisoners at the Palmi maximum security prison who call themselves "The Collective."

Hours after a left-wing group calling itself Armed Proletarian Power claimed responsibility for killing prison guard Germana Stefanini, 57, last Friday, the Justice Ministry announced it was abolishing a regulation granting repentant terrorists leniency in return for their testimony against other terrorists.

Officials said there was no connection between the guard's death and removal of the law from the statute book on Saturday night.

Judicial sources said 389 terrorist suspects had asked to be considered under the law and 53 convicted terrorists so far had sentences reduced under its provisions. Authorities said the rest still will be eligible for reduced sentences depending on how much they cooperate with police.

Anti-terrorist police say they are encouraged by the blows against terrorism, but warn that the struggle is not over yet. The Red Brigades claimed responsibility for nine murders in 1982, the same number as in 1981.

Police say that the situation in Italian prisons, where hundreds of terrorists are being held, is explosive and that gangs can sometimes continue to operate within the prison walls.

In the past year, police say they have uncovered and foiled plots by the Red Brigades to attack prisons and free their jailed comrades. Several terrorists have been murdered by their rivals in prison.

New Orleans To Stage Big Fair

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Bolstered by the success of the 1982 Knoxville World's Fair, this city on the banks of the Mississippi River has a fair in the works.

Construction is under way for the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition, a $350 million project celebrating New Orlean's contribution to river culture. The fair will combine new exhibits and pavilions with renovation of 25 turn-of-the-century riverfront warehouses.

Next in line is Chicago, which is planning a 1992 World's Fair to commemorate the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus.

Laughter Is Never A Joke At Workshop

By JAMES CARBONE

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (UPI) — For Dr. Joel Goodman, humor is serious business.

Goodman, founder of the Humor Project in Saratoga Springs, insists that laughing matters; he conducts workshops where he tries to improve people's "laugh lives."

More than 30,000 people in the United States, Central America and Canada have attended his workshops since the Humor Project began in 1978 as part of the Sagamore Institute — a non-profit educational training and resource center.

Goodman, 34, says humor is important for good health.

"If people could laugh 15 times a day, there would be fewer doctor bills," he says.

"Future doctors, instead of saying 'Take two aspirins, go to bed and call me in the morning,' will say 'Watch a Lily Tomlin special, go to bed and call me in the morning.'"

Goodman, who holds a doctorate in education, says humor can reduce stress.

"Stress is not an event, but a perception of an event and humor can be used to alter our perceptions, our attitudes and how we approach a situation," he said.

The key, Goodman says, is knowing how to use humor in a particular situation. One way is based on the concept of "Aikido," a Japanese martial art in which a person goes with the flow of his opponent's attack and uses the attack against him.

Miss Arden was on stage when the phone on the set began to ring, although the script did not call for it. Looking at the face of the leading man, Miss Arden could tell that he was responsible for the gag. Rather than confront the leading man with the trick in front of the audience, Miss Arden used aikido.

She casually picked up the phone, said hello, turned to the leading man and said: "It's for you."

Goodman says aikido can be learned by practicing responses to certain situations. By making a list of potential stressful situations and preparing humorous responses, a person can maximize his ability to use humor at the appropriate time, he said.

At his workshops, which he has conducted for the New York State Department of Mental Health, the United Methodist Church, and the U.S. Army among other organizations, Goodman offers other practical ways on how people can bring humor into their lives:

—Listen to a record or tape of your favorite comedian and determine what is the key to his style of humor.

—Play with a young child for an hour and observe what delights the young person and how you might translate the child's sense of humor to an adult level.

—Write a humorous autobiography.

—Read the comic strips every day for a week. Make note next to each strip on which comic made you laugh or smile or which ones weren't funny at all. Then try to determine common themes in the comics that made you laugh.

—Clip out a cartoon from a newspaper that you think will make someone laugh, and send it to him.

—Start a humor chain letter.

But the simplest way for people to bring humor in their lives is just by being aware ot it, Goodman says. Humor is everywhere, he says, even in newspaper headlines such as "Escaped Leopard Believed Spotted and "Supply of Ducks Down; Outlook for Hunters Fowl."

Humor is in a poster on the optometrist's office that reads, "If you don't see what you're looking for, you're in the right place."

It's in a men's room graffiti: "To be is to do — Sartre. To do is to be — Voltaire. Do be, do be, do — Sinatra."

"Humor is all around us," Goodman says. "We just need to remember that it's in the eye of the beholder."

Red China's Military A Frail Crutch

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — China's armed forces, handicapped by obsolete weapons and strained by internal conflicts, are in no position to counter the Soviet Union's growing military strength in Asia, a privately funded study says.

The report also said any attempt by the United States to build up China's military power might well prompt Moscow to order a preemptive strike, the report maintains.

The report was done by the Asian Studies Center, a newly founded branch of the Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based policy research center that often champions conservative causes.

The report was released several weeks before Secretary of State George P. Shultz' scheduled visit to China.

According to the report, American hopes for a strong and close relationship with China — as a counterweight to the Soviet Union — are based on untenable "myths," including the hope that China's armies can offset Soviet military might.

While it is true that China currently ties down an estimated 46 Soviet divisions along the Sino-Soviet border, it does not follow that the United States should supply weapons to Peking to force an even greater allocation of Soviet forces to the region, the report said.

It said such a move might prompt the Soviets to decide the U.S. move has "ominous" consequences, "and thus launch a strike against China."

Even though China has 3.5 million men in uniform, the world's second largest navy and the third largest air force, it remains "a weak organization that is patently vulnerable to Soviet military operations," the report said.

In addition, the report contends that the combat capability of Chinese forces is reduced by "internal conflicts, uncertain military doctrine and poor strategic and tactical communication."

"There appzars to be considerable tension between the military, the political leadership and the civilian population," the report said.

"The military is already suffering from a lack of funds, and a low modernization priority that greatly reduces its training and effectiveness," it said.

The report described China's nuclear forces as posing "only a minimum deterrent" because its missiles require several hours to erect fuel and aim.

China's early-warning radar network "suffers from huge gaps at medium and high altitudes and has 'virtually no coverage' at 'altitudes below 5,000 feet, the report said.

Although an estimated 200 surface-to-air missiles protect major industrial and political centers they are copies of obsolete Soviet systems, according to the report.

"Thus, China's cities have little air defense," the report said.

In addition, it said the Chinese air force, though larger than the Soviet's "is severely handicapped by obsolescent avionics and has limited all-weather, night-fighting capability."

"Overall, Soviet combat aircraft in the region is much superior in performance, in weapons systems and in electronic and air defense capabilities," it said.

The report dismissed the Chinese navy as dependent on obsolete equipment and weapons and said it is "no match for the Soviet Pacific fleet."

It said that in contrast to the Soviet navy, the Chinese have few long-range submarines, only one missile submarine, and no surface warships larger than a destroyer.

"It's main strength lies with its medium-range torpedo attack submarines, a large number of ... coastal patrol craft, fighter aircraft and ... guns and torpedoes," it said. However, many of those weapons are "copies or variants of Soviet systems turned over to the Chinese more than 20 years ago," the report said.

Coalmining Technique Troubles Ohio Coal Country

By DALE LEACH
Associated Press Writer

WILKESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Its exterior walls are twisted, many of its floors have buckled and the well on the back porch has gone dry. Lavern and Mary Jordan's 100-year-old farmhouse is the victim, its owners say, of a coal-mining process called longwalling.

Longwalling has divided residents of southeastern Ohio's coal country, pitting them against coal companies that for years brought jobs and sometimes prosperity to a part of the state where both have often been in short supply.

Caught in the middle is the United Mine Workers union, which says the dispute is threatening jobs in an industry already decimated by layoffs.

For the Jordans it has meant sleeping in a mobile home, a few yards from their farmhouse.

"We were afraid of fire," Mrs. Jordan said. "We were afraid of it pulling apart the electrical wires."

In longwalling, a huge shearing machine removes coal from the face of a wall as much as 500 feet wide in about 22 minutes. The machine then advances into the coal face and repeats the process.

Industry officials say it is one of the safest methods for mining coal because the machine provides its own ceiling, a canopy of steel, within the mine.

It also provides a more efficient means of removing coal. In traditional room-and-pillar mines, only about 55 percent of the coal in a vein can be mined. Longwalling allows for recovery rates of up to 90 percent, mining officials say.

But the Jordans and other residents are worried about another aspect of longwalling — rapid collapse of the earth above.

In traditional mining, pillars of coal are left behind after the mining is done, and they support the ceiling so that subsidence is so gradual it often goes unnoticed. In longwall mines, the ceiling behind the machine collapses almost immediately as the machine moves forward.

The effects above ground, according to some residents of Meigs County, are just as immediate — and costly.

Three years ago, Mark Spezza purchased a 57-acre farm with its own woods, a pond and a barn he could use for his business, pottery making.

Today, the brick foundation of Spezza's barn splits along a mortar joint, and a yard-wide concrete slab in the middle of the barn floor sinks into a three-feet crater. A six-inch crack runs the length of the floor. The building's walls, which Spezza says were once plumb, now bend.

"You know, I'm not even motivated to do things around here any more," Spezza said during a walk around his property. "I used to come down here and try to clean things up. But anymore, it just doesn't seem worth the trouble."

The Southern Ohio Coal Co., which has owned much of the coal beneath Meigs County land for a quarter-century, began mining beneath Spezza's property last year. Before operations began, the company shored up the barn with cables and braces.

Spezza says he noticed changes within days.

"I walked in the barn, and I noticed there was a crack in the floor about an inch wide ... and then I looked at the wall and there was a crack there about an inch wide," he said. "I went to sleep, and I got up in the morning and it was two inches wide."

Residents of Meigs County, where longwalling is being used in two mines, have form a protest group, Citizens Organized Against Longwalling (COAL), to fight the new mining method. The UMW says they should be aware of the consequences.

"We want to make fully sure that people know what the impact would be if longwalling were not allowed," said Tony Bumbico, a UMW District 6 official. "The effort to stop it jeopardizes 2,000 jobs at a time when the area can ill afford any more layoffs."

"Our position has been: If we're going to mine, we'll cause some damage. And if we cause damage, we'll pay for it," said Robert Rine, an official of the American Electric Power Service Corp. which includes Southern Ohio Coal.

"Whatever's going to happen, happens ... in a fairly compact time span," he said. "It's observable and can be fixed.

Rine said "98 percent" of the cracks that appear in the earth eventually close up, "and most water supplies come back."

But there are problems that can't be fixed, such as the Jordan house. AEP officials admit the house is damaged beyond repair and are negotiating to replace it.

In Spezza's case, AEP officials believe the barn can be saved, although a settlement with him has not yet been reached.

State officials must decide by May whether to allow Southern Ohio Coal to continue longwalling in Meigs County.

Bob Rothwell, an official with the state's Division of Reclamation, said there may be little the state can do.

"We're sort of caught in an area where our jurisdiction might be questionable," he explained.

Current state law governing subsidence requires companies to control it "to the extent technically and economically feasible." But Rothwell pointed out that language in the law does not govern planned subsidence.

Because the subsidence effects of longwall mining are predictable, he said, some companies contend these effects are planned and consequently not covered by state law.

Exotic Fish Spell Profit

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Twenty successful years for the Blue Ridge Fish Hatchery have put it in line with others in the U.S., while other Piedmont operations are making profits breeding exotic fish.

Each week, Wyatt LeFever sells about 400,000 of the average everyday goldfish — known as comets in the breeding business. But the exotic fish have put his hatchery in competition with top producers in Missouri, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Maryland and California.

Bob Irving of Stoneville, who raises comets, sells about 4 million goldfish each year to the Kernersville hatchery, and Fred Biles of Kernersville breeds fancy goldfish for Blue Ridge.

The interaction has pumped more than $1 million a year in gross sales into the region's goldfish industry. Irving and LeFever wouldn't discuss profits, but they admit the fish business is healthy.

"I'll put it this way," said Irving. "We can do a lot better with it than the tobacco business."

The LeFever family buys 50 tons of fish food a year. A half-million fish are packaged each week in Kernersville and shipped to dealers, some across the Atlantic, from the Regional Airport near Greensboro.

Winter has left sheets of ice over the ponds near Kernersville, but the work goes on.

"There isn't much difference between sales in the summer or the winter," LeFever said. "Traditionally, this business is a little better in the cold weather because people are confined inside."

CLOSED-DOOR MEET

ROME (AP) — Eighteen bishops of the Ukrainian Catholic Church who are living in the West began a two-week closed-door synod at the Vatican this week. They were expected to discuss the situation of their church in the Soviet Ukraine, where it was suppressed by Joseph Stalin in the 1940s, and in Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Fame Fading One Year After Suburb's Anti-Handgun Stand

MORTON GROVE, Ill. (AP) — A year ago today, this sedate Chicago suburb put itself on the map with the nation's strictest gun law, drawing plenty of attention but eventually disappointing handgun opponents who hoped the idea would sweep the country.

Some crime is down, police say, but no one seems to think the nation's first ban on citizen possession of handguns is responsible.

The law exempts only police, on-duty military and law enforcement personnel and licensed antique gun collectors, and the debate over its constitutionality is still going on with the U.S. Supreme Court likely to make the final decision.

"I have to admit, it's been a little disappointing," said Paul Lavrakas, spokesman for the National Coalition to Ban Handguns. "After Morton Grove, we had a dream that this would spark a movement across the country, but in fact it didn't. The reality is that it will be a slow, painful process. It will take time."

There have been only two arrests for violations of the Morton Grove ordinance, with the second just last week. In the first case, the offender was fined $90 and placed on probation, said police spokesman Bob Davis. The second case is still pending.

The number of burglaries in Morton Grove was down 24 percent last year, Davis said, although assault and battery was up 29 percent, mostly because of increases in domestic violence complaints.

The penalty for possessing a handgun in Morton Grove is a fine ranging from $50 to $500 for the first offense, $100 to $500 and six months in jail for subsequent violations.

Morton Grove's moment in history faded fast. ABC television has not picked up an option to tell the story of the town that said no to handguns, according to village attorney Martin Ashman.

"How's it going to sell on television?" trustee Neil Cashman asked. "There was no sex — and no violence."

But the waning notoriety is just fine with some residents.

"We have a very nice town here and I very greatly dislike the attention that has been placed on Morton Grove," said Joan Dechart. "You know, three or four years ago, you'd have to explain to people where Morton Grove was. Now the whole world knows where it is."

Mrs. Dechart is one of two village trustees who voted against the ordinance. She argued the town of 24,000 has more important problems that never are resolved, "like flooding and taxes."

The law that took effect on Feb. 1, 1982, began as an attempt to block a business-license application for a gun shop. The trustees first banned handgun sales, then went a step further by passing a proposal to ban possession.

"I've always been against guns, particularly handguns," said Cashman, the proposal's author. "They're responsible for 10,000 deaths a year."

Handgun-related deaths are rare in Morton Grove. The last was a suicide in 1981. In 1979, two teen-age girls were shot and killed in a forest preserve.

The ordinance was upheld last month by a three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, where opponents have filed petition for a rehearing before the full court, according to attorney Gene Wedoff, who represents the village.

If that fails, they will appeal to the Supreme Court, spokesmen for the National Rifle Association and the Second Amendment Foundation said.

The NRA is prepared to spend "whatever it takes" to overturn the law, said spokesman John Aquilino. The powerful gun lobby views the law as a violation of the Second Amendment right to bear arms.

In the past year, neighboring Evanston has enacted a similar law. Chicago followed with an ordinance banning registration of new handguns, although citizens who already own handguns can keep them.

And Broward County, Fla., recently passed laws requiring a stiffer licensing permit system.

However, San Francisco's law making it a misdemeanor for anyone to possess a handgun was tossed out last Thursday when the state Supreme Court refused to review a lower court ruling against the ban.

On Nov. 2, voters in California overwhelmingly rejected the gun-control Proposition 15, which had been billed by both sides as a true test of the will of the people regarding the handgun issue. On the same day, voters in Nevada and New Hampshire approved referendums supporting the right to bear arms.

A few municipalities, such as Kennesaw, Ga., responded to Morton Grove's action with an ordinance requiring each household to own a gun and ammunition.

Cheese Tips...

Provolone is a cows milk cheese considered to be Italian, but much of it is made in the U.S. primarily in Michigan and Wisconsin. There are two types of Provolone "dolce" is milder with a delicate flavor, "picante" is stronger and sharper. Provolone keeps well if refrigerated up to several months if well wrapped. Provolone is good with Italian Bread and sausages and is good at the end of meals with pears. Serve it with Chianti or other wines.

What is a Generic Drug....

A generic drug is a pharmaceutical product, manufactured and sold under its "common" or chemical name, instead of a trademarked brand or proprietary name.

Generics can be Good News!

- Is There a Difference Between Generic and Brand-Name Drugs? The same active ingredients that go in a brand-name drug go into the generic drugs. Both are carefully tested and government-controlled.
- Why Do Generic Drugs Cost Less? Once the 17-year patent expires on a trademarked drug, then it can be manufactured and sold under its common chemical or "generic" name. When many companies make it, competition lowers the cost.
- How Much Will You Save With a Generic Prescription? Your savings can be as much as 50% and even more, depending upon the drug involved! In most cases, when the brand-name drug is replaced by a generic, the savings are substantial!
- Can All Prescriptions Be Filled With Generics? Many, but not all, prescriptions could be filled with generic drugs. Your Kroger Pharmacist will be glad to tell you if a generic equivalent is available for your particular medication.
- How Can You Be Assured the Quality of a Generic Drug? By the dependability and integrity of the professional pharmacist and the store where you shop. We at Kroger are dedicated to serving you with dependable products — at the lowest-possible prices consistent with the highest-quality drugs.
- How Can You Benefit From Generic-Drug Savings? Talk it over with your doctor. Ask him about using generic drugs in your prescription. With a generically-written prescription, you could start saving today!
