N. C. Jan. Revenue Estimates Soaring

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Budget leaders asked the joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee today to look for ways to trim the proposed 1983-85 budget by about 3 percent.

The action followed the release Monday of early tax revenue figures showing that January collections rose 15.5 percent above collections in January 1982. But legislators debated those figures, based on a legislative staff analysis.

Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, one of the budget leaders, told the joint committee to continue its work using 1983-85 revenue estimates made by the legislative staff, not Gov. Jim Hunt.

"The estimates of our staff in the past have been reliable and we believe this estimate from later data can be used as the best estimate available to us," Edwards said.

Hunt based his budget on estimates that revenues will grow 8.8 percent. Legislative analysts say the revenue increase will be about 7 percent, a difference of $92.7 million — almost enough money to lift the freeze on state workers' and teachers' salaries.

To make up the $92.7 million difference, Edwards said the committee has three choices — reduce proposed spending enough to lift the freeze on state salaries, avoid spending cuts by keeping the freeze or raise taxes.

He said the committee's job is not to consider raising taxes, a matter for the Finance Committee. But he said identification of cuts amounting to 3 percent could help legislators pare the budget by about $100 million to lift the salary freeze.

Edwards said the committee would wait until closer to the end of the fiscal year to see if revenue forecasts improve enough to avoid making the cuts.

At a news conference Monday, state Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch said tax collections in January were $260.6 million compared to $225.7 million during the same month in 1982, a 15.5 percent increase.

Lynch said collections for the first seven months of the fiscal year were up 6 percent compared to the same period a year ago.

But Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said legislative analysts found that adjusted growth for January was 10 percent and revenues for the first seven months of the fiscal year were up 5.4 percent.

The 1982-83 budget was based on estimates that revenues would rise 8.9 percent. Hunt has asked most state departments to reduce spending by 6 percent to avoid a $150 million shortfall. Budget officials say those cuts should be enough to balance the budget according to the figures released Monday.

Propose Tucker Bldg. Use As Area Detention Center

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

State officials told members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday afternoon that the county-owned Tucker Building, at the intersection of Third and Washington streets, might be renovated for use as a juvenile detention center.

Under state law, juveniles cannot be housed in the same jail as adult prisoners after June 30 of this year, and commissioners have been studying the possibility of providing both secure holding facilities and non-secure areas in the Tucker Building.

Wiley B. Teal, chief of juvenile detention services for the state, said the facility could be operated as a facility for Pitt County alone, for the counties in the 3rd Judicial District (Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico) or as a regional center to serve as many as 23 counties.

He said if the regional concept was adopted, a staff of about 13 would be required, and the state could contribute about $60,000 to $70,000 toward the projected $222,000 annual operating cost.

Teal suggested that another possibility would be for the Annual Report, A Check From Housing Authority

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Housing Authority, in submitting its annual report to Mayor Percy Cox and the City Council, is presenting $16,840.23 to the city as the authority's payment in lieu of taxes for fiscal year 1982.

Commissioners approved the annual report Monday night and the presentation of checks for payment in lieu of taxes amounting to $3,427.74 for the University Towers midrise for the elderly and $13,412.49 for low rent public housing.

The authority said in its report that the 1982 payment represents a 32 percent increase over the 1981 figure. "This is due primarily to the fact that while the conventional housing utility cost increased less than 1 percent, a 4 percent increase in rent receipts was realized," according to the report.

In reviewing 1982 activities, the report stated that the Department of Housing and Urban Development approved the construction of 40 new units of low rent public housing on scattered sites in West Meadowbrook. The report said that after an annual contributions contract is executed with HUD for project funding, the authority will be able to buy some 25 Community Development parcels from the city at an appraised price of about $70,000.

The report, signed by Chairman Patricia G. Rice, also mentioned that the authority, after consulting with the council, created the Greenville Housing Development Corp. to provide financing for construction of the 40 unit Greentree Section 8 development by the Westminster Co. in east Greenville. The development "will provide additional opportunity for non-minority low income families," it was pointed out.

The authority reported that it was selected recently for a $1.1 million program to modernize the Kearney Park project with interior and exterior renovation work and to accomplish energy improvements, including furnace and water heater replacement.

The city and authority were also selected to participate in a rental rehabilitation demonstration involving 20 housing units, the report stated.

Senators Like Burger Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren Burger has provided momentum to a push in Congress to create a new federal appeals court, an advocate of the idea says.

"I'm delighted," Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said of Burger's proposal that a special court be established on a five-year trial basis to help cut the Supreme Court's workload.

"It will provide an impetus to move it through Congress," said Heflin, a Judiciary Committee member who is sponsoring legislation to create a court similar to the one Burger proposed.

Under Burger's plan, judges would be borrowed from other federal courts to resolve cases involving issues that have produced conflicting decisions by the 13 U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeals.

Burger, who says such cases take up much of the Supreme Court's time, has long talked of a new appeals tribunal. But his speech Sunday to the American Bar Association represented his first specific public proposal.

The plan received a generally favorable reaction Monday on Capitol Hill.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said the proposal "is an attractive, reasonable and relatively inexpensive means of relieving some of the overload on the Supreme Court without establishing a completely new court on a permanent basis."

"The need is there," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the courts subcommittee.

Fertilizer And Fuel Company Building Destroyed By Flames

Smith Fertilizer and Fuel Co. on N.C. 43 six miles south of Greenville was destroyed Monday night by a fire that sent flames leaping 25 to 30 feet above the building.

Firemen from Black Jack, Eastern Pines, Winterville and Gardnersville fought the blaze in the metal construction building, which housed a grill, a garage for a fuel oil truck and a retail sales area for fertilizer, farm chemicals and hardware. It was brought under control in about 45 minutes.

Fireman John Bilmeyer of Winterville was injured slightly when he was overcome by smoke. He was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital by members of the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad for observation.

The business' owner, Bobby Smith, said, "I had just put my tractor in there this afternoon (Monday) ... I also had an oil truck with some kerosene and maybe a little bit of gasoline, but not much."

Smith, who lives across the highway from the business, said he and his wife heard an explosion just before 10 p.m. and saw flames coming from the top center of the steel and aluminum building.

Environmental protection officials were expected to be on hand today to see if the burning of farm chemicals constitutes any hazard for the surrounding area.

Smith could not give a dollar loss in the blaze. The building and most of the contents were completely destroyed.

Israeli Defense Minister Is Held Responsible In Killings

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — A special inquiry commission, in a report that could shatter Israel's leadership, today found Defense Minister Ariel Sharon personally responsible for the Beirut refugee camp massacre and called on him to resign.

Sharon, architect of last year's Israeli invasion of Lebanon, reportedly was balking at stepping down.

The commission said Israeli leaders should have foreseen that needless bloodshed might result when they allowed Lebanese militiamen into the two camps, where hundreds of Palestinian civilians subsequently were slaughtered.

The panel rebuked Prime Minister Menachem Begin for what it called his "indifference" during the massacre last September, but recommended no action against him.

The bombshell findings sent Begin and his Cabinet into an emergency session that lasted for more than two hours but reached no decision on whether to endorse the report. Another session was set for Wednesday.

The investigatory panel, composed of two Supreme Court justices and a retired general, accused Sharon of "blunders" and said he "bears personal responsibility. In our opinion it is fitting that the minister of defense draw the appropriate personal conclusions ..."

If Sharon refuses to step down, Begin should fire him, the panel said.

Israel radio said the defense minister was refusing to accept the commission's findings and resign, and that Begin met privately with Sharon and told him he would not dismiss him. It was not known whether he asked Sharon to voluntarily resign.

In public comments, Begin's multi-party coalition appeared split on the question.

The commission report also called for the dismissal of Israel's military intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. Yehoshua Saguy, and harshly chastised Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Brig. Gen. Amos Yaron, the Israeli commander in Beirut during the massacre.

An official Lebanese investigation to find the killers of the refugees has made little headway.

The Israeli commission's report, which is not legally binding but will have great moral weight, comes at a time when the Begin government is under increasing U.S. pressure to conclude negotiations for the withdrawal of its forces from Lebanon and to make new concessions in the search for an overall Arab-Israeli peace.

Israel radio noted one possibility: the entire Begin Cabinet might resign and set an early election.

In the past, Begin aides have said the prime minister would step down if any senior Israeli official were blamed in the massacre, but there was no immediate indication whether he stood by this position.

The state radio said the 54-year-old Sharon, a popular ex-general and hero of the 1973 Yom Kippur War, had already been offered an alternate post as minister in charge of the occupied West Bank.

Tax Collections

Net sales and use tax collections in Pitt County during December amounted to $339,077, according to state Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch.

Totals in several neighboring counties for December included: Beaufort, $131,481; Carteret, $173,736; Craven, $242,761; Edgecombe, $128,624; Greene, $15,677; Lenoir, $226,096; Martin, $77,432; Nash, $268,792; Wayne, $299,555; and Wilson, $257,460.

Net collections in the 99 participating counties during the month totaled $21,135,192, said Lynch.

She Tends Greenhouse That Made Family Name Famous

NEW BRITAIN, Pa. (UPI) — Lois Burpee walked briskly to one of the greenhouses where breeders once developed hybrid flowers and vegetables that helped her husband's seed company become one of the largest in the world.

At 70, she works almost daily in the greenhouse. It became hers alone when the W. Altee Burpee Co. was sold in 1970 and the company moved away from the Bucks County estate where it had been founded by her husband's father.

While most of the estate is used by a local college, Mrs. Burpee says she reserved this spot for herself to continue the avocation that brought her to Fordhook Farm, about 40 miles north of Philadelphia, in 1937. She was a botany major from Wellesley College at the time.

Her interest in plants followed a trip to Nantucket, Mass., she said in a recent interview.

"That was when there was a frightful blight on the pine trees. That's when I first was aware of plants getting sick."

Mrs. Burpee was born in Tiberias, Palestine, where her father founded a medical mission.

Her botany vocation ended with her marriage to David Burpee in July 1938, and her gardening hobby led to sharp interest in the seed business and the vegetable varieties bred on the family estate.

Over the years, she said, she has experimented with recipes for almost every vegetable grown in the test gardens. That led to her first book, "Lois Burpee's Gardener's Companion and Cookbook" (Harper & Row $14.95).

In it she combines common sense and a love for plants with hints for gardeners. She covers everything from how far apart to plant seeds to how to freeze or pickle excess crops for winter use.

"I'm not a fancy cook," Mrs. Burpee said. "You see, with the different varieties, we were tasting the vegetable as that vegetable, so my cooking is to bring out the flavor of that particular vegetable, not dress it up with sauces."

Occasionally the book also gives glimpses of life at Fordhook Farm and David Burpee, referred to always as Mr. Burpee.

"We always talked over what we would serve our guests," Mrs. Burpee wrote. "He loved to have fun at parties."

"One of his favorite jokes to play on his own dinner guests at his club was to pass out a menu printed with the worst combinations he could think of, such as oysters with fudge sauce."

In conversation, she describes her husband, who died 2½ years ago, as a self-taught man personally involved in his business and whose pet phrase was, "Let's have fun."

The sale of the family business, now owned by an ITT subsidiary, "just about tore Mr. Burpee apart," she recalled.

She still keeps marigolds, his favorite flowers, in her greenhouse and home.

"They're such a satisfactory flower," she said.

Her home also contains much of the same Victorian furniture it had when she first went to live there.

Glancing out a picture window to sprawling pastures and forest beyond, she describes herself as "a real bit of nature."

"Nature influences me, even the moon," she says. "I'm akin to it. I'm happy with a bug or a butterfly — just as happy as I am with a person. I sort of get a lift from looking at trees and watching the clouds."

Her theory of gardening also is in tune with nature. She urges beginners to curb their eagerness to plant their first crop.

"Starting too soon doesn't help anything, either in the garden or in the house," she says. "You're just sort of pushing them (plants) to do what they're not naturally inclined to doing."

In planting, Mrs. Burpee also advises beginners to give nature its due.

"I have this theory — you plant one seed for yourself, one for the birds and one to help (the young plants) push up through the soil."

Mrs. Burpee may not have the time she wants to spend in the garden this spring. Smithsonian Institution staff members are on the estate going through the company's papers to trace the history of horticulture in the United States.

In addition, at the urging of publishers, Mrs. Burpee is toying with the idea of writing a separate history of the family firm.

"It could be an interesting book," she said, "but I don't want it to be a company book or one full of statistics or sales of numbers of the catalogues."

Characteristically, she plans to test the soil before plunging ahead.

The book will be her next project, she said, "if I feel there's a need for it."

Dear Abby

Fake Number Causes Trouble

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: "Disgusted With Egomaniacs" wrote to say that she always gave a phony name or telephone number to strange men who came on too strong.

Thanks, Abby, for saying, "What's wrong with looking them straight in the eye and saying, 'No, you may not have my name or phone number because I really don't care to see you again?'"

I wonder if it ever occurs to the person who gives a phony number that the "phony" number may actually be someone's real number?

I have had to change my phone number because apparently some woman had given it out as her own. For weeks I was pestered by the same man at all hours of the day and night. He even called me from another state — collect! I refused the call while he kept trying to convince the operator that I was the party he wanted. (This was at 6 a.m. on a Sunday morning!)

Changing numbers is an expensive procedure. It's also time-consuming and a nuisance. So, Miss Van Buren, please inform people who make up phony numbers that they may be giving someone the right to harass an innocent party.

PESTERED IN L.A.

DEAR PESTERED: Read on for another view:

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Disgusted With Egomaniacs" was totally wrong. When a man is told that he may not have a woman's phone number because she doesn't care to see him again, it only adds to the challenge and heightens his interest. And since most of these contests take place in a drinking atmosphere, the scene can get ugly.

Before I grew up, in my tomcatting days, after one such joust with a woman, I finally talked her into giving me her number and felt that I had scored a victory.

When I tried to call her the next day, I got a recorded message informing me of the weekly bus schedule! Do you think she was trying to tell me something?

BENCHED IN FLAGSTAFF

DEAR BENCHED: Yes. "Hit the road, wise guy!"

DEAR ABBY: Every year at Christmas, my in-laws give my husband and me separate gifts of money.

Depressed Children Seminar Announced

ECU News Bureau

His mother watches with a worried face as Billy, who is five, heads for a small break in the old rail fence. Lately, he had developed a strange habit of sitting there for hours at a time, dreamily withdrawn from the children who often played in the yard.

Today, she decided, something must be done. She would take him a peanut butter sandwich and talk to him — ask him what was wrong.

Billy slowly turned his head away and moved closer to the small cave-like opening in the fence. "I feel so sad," he said finally.

Luckily, Billy did not develop into a suicidal child but some do. His parents consulted their family physician who recognized the boy's need for professional and psychiatric help.

Psychiatrists are concerned about depression of any kind in young children. The causes, they feel, may be environmental stresses that initiate a reaction that could last a long time.

"We think now it may be a biochemical process. Most of the children do get better in time, but occasionally, kids get suicidal. They say that the world is too much and they get the idea they would be better off dead," said Dr. L. Jarrett Barnhill Jr., assistant professor of psychiatric medicine at East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Psychiatrists from the ECU School of Medicine have been relating and applying the latest biological theories to psychological diagnosis and treatment of children. Four faculty members will comprise a panel Wednesday at the Brody Medical Sciences Building auditorium and will discuss practical application of the latest knowledge of biological aspects of common psychiatric disorders among children.

The seminar will be held from 1:30-5 p.m. Speakers in addition to Barnhill are Dr. James L. Mathis, Dr. Jascha W. Danoff and Dr. Lesly T. Mega.

My husband gets $150 and I get $25. During the holidays I try to forget about it, but after the celebrating is over, I feel very hurt and insulted.

I'm on very good terms with my in-laws, and they know that I manage money well, so I don't know why they do this.

I feel like telling them how much it upsets me, since the same feelings linger every year. What do you suggest?

HURT

DEAR HURT: Your husband should suggest that his parents lump together their cash Christmas gifts and address a single gift to both of you. That should avoid the "hurt" without mentioning it.

Exercise Classes Aids Claire Willi, Age—91

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Fashion and fitness go hand in hand, no matter one's age. Ask Claire Willi, 91, or Olive Lieberman, 80, or Margaret Feher, 71.

Each looks much younger than her years, maintains a youthful, stylish figure, and is not at all abashed at wearing leotards and tights.

What they also have in common are the exercise and relaxation classes of Milton Feher, formerly a professional dancer and actor.

Feher is 70 and still as nimble as a Nureyev, although what started him on his current career was a case of knee joint arthritis. Doctors told him he would have to give up dancing.

"Let nature do it," the exercise class chants as it goes through stretching, twisting and turning, "walking" on the buttocks, regular walking, running or simply standing motionless.

"You have to go up to the sky to keep your feet on earth," says Feher, as the class in unison lifts its arms heavenward. Or for another series, they chant, "The stronger the lighter, the lighter the stronger." Legs stretch upward at right angles to the torso as the exercisers lie on their backs.

Mrs. Willi, a small, white-haired widow, lives near Carnegie Hall and just across the street from Feher's studio. She tries to get in at least four classes a week. Each class is for an hour.

"I used to walk like old people," she said. "You know, bent over, shuffling. Now I walk straight. You've got to get the circulation going. I started coming to these classes 21 years ago because I was having back trouble. I used a little cushion under my clothing to camouflage a swayback."

"Now, she has the best back in the class," said instructor Feher. Mrs. Willi didn't lag once, in all the routines of the class of 15 or so in the mirrored, bare-floored studio. They were all ages and were from a broad spectrum of careers — two actresses, a former Rockette, a writer about pets, a yoga teacher, a psychotherapist, an artist, a musician.

Neither was there any lagging for Mrs. Lieberman, whose husband is living, and who has two grandchildren and one great-grandchild. She's looking forward to the 60th reunion this year of her class at Smith College.

"I've been coming to these classes for more than 25 years," Mrs. Lieberman said. "Exercisers are great people. And I'm an enjoyer."

Margaret Feher started the classes 15 years ago "to get my body in shape," she said. She stayed on to marry the instructor and become the school's director. The day I sat in on a class she was in leotard and tights also doing the exercises.

The exercises were a fairly new experience for Bennett Morrison, the only man in this particular mid-day class. He's a pianist, studied at the Cleveland Conservatory of Music, and in New York is teaching piano and languages and coaching singers.

"I came in here strangely enough to strengthen my hands," he said. "Feher's theories on body alignment and relaxation affect every bone and muscle of the body."

Says Feher, "All exercise tends to relax a person and straighten the body ... anything that relaxes the muscles also relaxes the mind."

Feher preaches strongly about proper body alignment with the trunk as the key. He illustrates with an example of a bear reaching for peanuts. In doing so, the bear bends his back "and that puts an awful strain on that part of his body. But man, no longer on four legs, doesn't have to do that. Unlike the bear, he can turn his body on a dime."

"Today, there are very few back operations," Feher said he gets a lot of referrals from physicians.

Born in Cleveland, Feher was trained in acting and dance. He came to New York on a scholarship to the Neighborhood Playhouse and was on Broadway, in among other shows George M. Cohan's "I'd Rather Be Right" in 1937, "Sons of Fun" in 1941 and "Song of Norway" in 1944.

"I tried all sorts of things for my arthritis," he said. "Chiropractors, orthopedists ... then I began to study body balance, the aligning of my body. Eventually all the pain disappeared."

He established his school in 1945 and most of his students then were dancers with back problems. Through the years, he's improved and refined the program.

"Your body is the instrument for activity," he says. "Learn the ways to use it properly."

He's written a booklet, "The Art of Walking," cut a record, "Relaxing Mind and Body," and is finishing a book, "Walking Better for Health, Sports and Figure."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Everyone talks about joggers being fanatics about their sport, but beside skiers they almost seem lucid.

Skiers are really weird people. Who else would pick a pastime where you select the most inaccessible place in the country which is going through the worst weather in its history, spend two treacherous days getting there, strap two planks of slippery wood on your feet, ride to the top of a mountain and try to get down without the help of the ambulance at the bottom of the hill?

Money is exchanged for this.

Before I select a doctor, attorney or accountant, I ask them if they are skiers. I don't care if they have 15 diplomas on the wall and graduated at 16. I'm not going to entrust any part of my future to a person who thinks the ground is softer if it is covered with snow.

There may have been a time when skiing was a seasonal sport. When the snow fell, everyone strapped the two tree trunks to their feet and took off. That is no longer true. Skiing is every bit as daily and demanding as jogging.

When snow is falling nowhere in the United States, enthusiasts ski in their living rooms with warm-ups and exercises that keep their legs in shape. (Note: If you're going to marry a skier, marry tall, as you have a man or woman who will walk with knees bent 11 months out the year.)

Then they start on Vitamin A which gives them the breath of a thousand camels who have just eaten tainted sardines. This keeps them from going blind.

As soon as the furnace is turned on they start to get their equipment into shape ... waxing the skis and checking the bindings on their boots. This is followed by the vigil of the snow. Where is it falling and how can they get there when it does?

I am married to a ski person who has astounded me with his ambivalence. He will ski for eight hours until his feet are numb, his mind is confused and the hairs in his nose break off, only to come back to the lodge and complain to the manager there is no heat in his room.

I have seen them all their cars in ditches unable to move, hobbling around on crutches and sporting a cast like a Medal of Honor, and crazies getting in one last run before the blizzard closes the chair lift.

Recently in California, skiers were told there was the possibility of an active volcano under the slopes. The reply was, "Hey, we'll take our chances. Where else can you get a 55-inch base?"

I'll be honest with you. I wouldn't want my daughter to marry one.

Nuclear Prospects Grim

We suspect most people look for every candidate for the House of Representatives, the Senate and the White House to include in his or her election campaign a pledge "to work for nuclear disarmament".

It would be helpful if they included a hint as to how they would accomplish that task. Just about everybody would appreciate some new thoughts on the subject. The old ones haven't worked yet.

As things now stand, the most sincere individuals and organizations who agonize over the nuclear future have to admit theirs is a lost cause unless all governments share in a total removal of nuclear weaponry in current and future armaments. That sounds improbable these days.

Unilateral disarmament is out of the question. So too, is any omission of on-site verification. (Trust does not abound.)

All governments, ours included, are bound by an obligation to protect their citizens. Neither they nor their people can afford to take any chance of neglect, or folly.

That leaves the world with a nuclear threat hanging overhead for as long as anyone can look into the future. It's a glum prospect.

Dram Shop Compromise Best

Gov. Hunt has begun a war against drunken drivers and certainly his efforts to reduce the slaughter on the highways are commendable.

He quickly ran into a sticking point, however, on his dramshop proposals.

The governor would make operators of restaurants, groceries, convenience stores and others who sell liquor liable in civil suits for under-aged or intoxicated individuals who were served and later cause an accident.

The proposal raises all kinds of questions, since it would be difficult to show whether the intoxicated person consumed more alcohol after leaving the business establishment.

Last week the governor seemed willing to compromise on the dram shop proposals, and this is a wise course. Better to give some on this questionable plan than to risk the entire drunken driving program.

When The Evidence Isn't

WASHINGTON — On May 1, 1978, the police in Bloomington, Ill., received an anonymous letter. It read:

"This letter is to inform you that you have a couple in your town who strictly make their living on selling drugs. They are Sue and Lance Gates ... Most of their buys are done in Florida, where she leaves (their automobile) to be loaded up with drugs, then Lance flies down and drives it back. May 3 she is driving down there again. ... They brag about the fact that they never have to work and make their entire living on pushers. They are friends with some big drug dealers, who visit their house often."

Thus began the Gates case. It may well become a landmark in that field of the law which governs the admissibility of evidence in criminal trials.

So that you will know what happened: Acting on the letter, the Bloomington police immediately located a Lance and Susan Gates at an address in the community. Using elementary detective techniques, they learned that an "L. Gates" had made a reservation on an Eastern Airlines flight from Chicago to West Palm Beach on May 5. Surveillance at O'Hare Airport provided a description of "L. Gates," which was telephoned to agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration in Florida.

At West Palm Beach, agents tailed the suspect from the airport to a Holiday Inn, where he was seen to enter a room registered in the name of his wife. On the morning of May 6, Gates and his wife left the inn in a gray ing, if that is the right word, that made such palpable, evidence not legally evidence at all. One objection was that the anonymous letter failed to satisfy a "basis of knowledge" test; the author had not said that he or she acquired the information by personal observation. Secondly, the letter failed to satisfy a "veracity" test; the magistrate who issued the search warrant had no way of knowing if the author was a truthful person. People who write anonymous letters should know better; they should read Aguirre vs. Texas, 378 U.S. 108, before taking pen in hand.

The state of Illinois makes the argument that the sentence in the letter about the Gates "bragging" clearly implied personal observation. More to the point, the Gates' actions absolutely demonstrated the truthfulness of the tip. Before they obtained the warrant on May 6, the police had seen the couple doing exactly what the author of the letter said they would do. What more could be asked?

The Supreme Court has asked that next month's reargument be directed to a new area. Instead of rehearsing the two-part test of the Aguirre case, lawyers will go to another question: Did the police act in "objective good faith"? In a brief filed on behalf of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, several distinguished lawyers contend that the concept of "reasonable good-faith belief" offers a way out of the "intolerable morass" in which the law of evidence now is mired.

In the Gates case, the police surely had every reason to believe they were acting lawfully. They had Mercury sedan bearing Illinois license plates. In the meantime police had obtained a search warrant for both the car and the residence. The couple returned to their home in Bloomington at 5:15 a.m. on May 7. The cops were waiting for them.

In the trunk of the car police found 350 pounds of marijuana. In the residence they found drug paraphernalia and a quantity of cocaine. Lance and Susan were arrested on drug charges, but before the case could get to trial their lawyer moved to quash the evidence on the grounds that it had been obtained in violation of their Fourth Amendment rights. The motion was granted; the evidence was ruled inadmissible. Now Illinois has appealed that ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court. The case was argued last October, but will be reargued next month.

It is not easy for non-lawyers to follow the reason-

Turnaround Came Later

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Dr. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, on Thursday night confirmed hints in his congressional testimony Wednesday and drafted a memorandum drastically upgrading economic growth estimates and blunting the thrust of President Reagan's budget.

The ink was scarcely dry on the president's annual economic report, released just two days earlier, which incorporated Feldstein's gloomy guess that, comparing the fourth quarters of 1982 and 1983, the economy would grow only 3.1 percent. Now, in his memorandum, Feldstein was trashing his own estimate and setting a much healthier 5 percent growth figure. He was committing to paper what he had only hinted at on Capitol Hill.

The good news for the president is that the revised estimate means markedly lower unemployment and lower budget deficits going into the 1984 election year. The bad news is that he is stuck with a budget already out of date that projects massive but meaningless future-year deficits and calls for a politically-masochistic tax increase to reduce them. Reagan's budget has become Feldstein's folly.

The chief economic adviser's swift turnaround left his colleagues in the administration reeling. Arriving here from the Harvard campus with a steely determination to fill the vacuum as Reagan's economic strongman, Feldstein suggested he would quit rather than moderate his pessimism about economic growth. Some 48 hours before his more realistic, newly optimistic, memo was drafted Feldstein was refusing to change from Dr. Gloom to Dr. Sunshine.

His transformation is explained by the syndrome that so often controls economic forecasters: fear of being wrong. Budding signs of the economic spring are leading some previously-glum administration officials to suggest 6 percent-plus growth in this year's first quarter. "The boys in Wall Street are talking about a roaring recovery," one such official told us.

Actually, government economists — in the Treasury, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and the Commerce Department — agreed on moderately-optimistic figures last fall. But Feldstein, intent on maintaining academic integrity in Washington's dismal swamp, insisted on growth figures far below the consensus.

Facing Feldstein's implied threat of a resignation that would have embarrassed the president at a moment of acute political distress, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and OMB Director David Stockman capitulated. The abnormally low growth coming out of a recession then automatically produced the extraordinary out-year deficits.

To trim those deficits, the Treasury produced the politically maladrofit 5 percent "contingency" surtax for future years and imposed it on Reagan. While stillborn on Capitol Hill, the contingency tax breathed new life into efforts by the bipartisan Washington political establishment to "restore the revenue base" by trimming back the Reagan tax cuts.

Even at the 11th hour as he was about to brief the press on the economic report, Feldstein shrugged off a discreet suggestion from the usually all-powerful White House chief of staff James Baker that he might give a little sheen to his briefing. He replied by citing his responsibilities as a professional and an academician. "What about his responsibilities as a member of this administration?" asked one irritated White House aide.

No such recognition of those responsibilities accounts for Feldstein's transformation; it was, more likely, the ultimate horror for the economic forecaster of swimming alone. Dr. Alice Rivlin's always-dour Congressional Budget Office came up with a 4 percent growth estimate (compared to Feldstein's 3.1 percent), marking the first time ever that the congressional bureau has been less pessimistic than an administration.

Feldstein's new 5 percent growth brightens the world for Ronald Reagan. Instead of double-digit unemployment leading into a 1984 election debacle, the joblessness rate could drop to 9.4 percent by year's end and 7 percent next year. Even with OMB's (Please turn to Page 5)

Strength For Today

THE OPEN DOOR

St. Paul declares (1 Cor. 15:26) that "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death".

The Bible pictures death as the most horrible thing that man can confront. Yet today, some people in effect make light of death by treating it only as the end of life which is inevitable and comes to all of us. Yet what comes after death is much more important than anything which has preceded it.

The only way we can cope realistically with death is through Jesus Christ. The greatest victory Christ won was his victory over death. Everyone will someday be judged before the divine throne. If one has Christ standing at his side, there is nothing to fear. Fallen man, unregenerate man, can only look upon death with horror and foreboding. But in Jesus Christ the experience of death is the door by which we enter into eternal life.

"I am the door," said Jesus. "By me if any man enter in he shall be saved." — Elisha Douglass

THIS AFTERNOON

Help For Seniors

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — It used to be that many elderly people lived with their children and grandchildren, or, they lived in their own homes relatively close to their offspring. When they got a little frail, younger bodies were available to do the chores. When they got a little low on money, their wage-earning children were able to help them along.

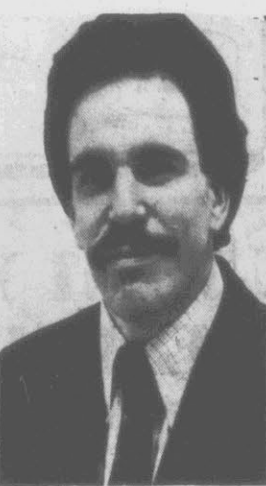

Things have changed, of course. Fewer and fewer senior citizens are living with their children. And, increasingly, the government has been given the responsibility of maintaining those senior citizens who don't have the money to support themselves.

Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, has introduced a bill in the General Assembly that is aimed at encouraging families to make a greater effort to support grandma and grandpa. The bill calls for a tax cut for those people who contribute to the upkeep of their parents in their parents' own home.

We must do something to encourage people to look after their aged parents", Gray says. "This tax cut recognizes that they're making a contribution. My idea is to maintain the parents in the parents' homes."

"Often times, just a little

bit of a contribution to the parent can keep them in their own home. Maybe a few thousand dollars for a new roof on the house or a little bit of money for some medical care. They pay this instead of the state having to pay it for their parents", she says.

The Gray bill would grant a state income tax exemption for any contributions made to the upkeep of a parent. The maximum deduction would be $3,000 — or a maximum tax cut of $210. The exemption would apply only to those senior citizens who are living in their own homes and who have an annual income of less than $9,000. Not covered are senior citizens living with their children. They can now be taken as personal exemptions.

North Carolina currently has more residents 65 or over — 850,000 — than any other state in the Southeast with the exception of Florida. Another 100,000 North Carolinians are between 60 and 65 years of age, according to the state Division of Aging. By the year 2000, the state expects to have more than one million residents 65 or older. Department of Revenue estimates suggest 185,000 would qualify for the Gray tax exemption.

Ernest Messer, director of the Division of Aging, has said that "to accommodate all those people, if they are in ill health, we would have to pave the state over with (Please turn to Page 5)

Improving the mind does not ordinarily rank in priority up there with the necessities of life. Somehow, food for the brain is thought to be less important than food for the belly or shelter for the body.

Consequently, it is one of those things that falls by the wayside when families budget for hard times. With times harder than any since the Great Depression, fewer and fewer families can afford to enroll their members in institutions of higher learning.

Just as surely as it will slow the expansion of individual and family horizons, that trend will slow national development, economically as well as intellectually.

Mars Hill College and Haywood Tech are trying to do something about it: Mars Hill has decided not to bill students in its Continuing Education program for tuition costs — basic instructional expenses such as professors' salaries — if they have been out of work for 10 weeks or longer. Thirty days after they become employed once again, students will begin paying deferred tuition at the rate of $25 monthly ... more if they can afford to.

Haywood Tech will go even further. It will provide tuition grants, not loans, for Haywood residents who lack high school diplomas. A contribution from Northwestern Bank will make that possible.

There is no question that institutions of higher learning will gain by keeping students in school. But teachers, like their students, also get hungry. That professors and colleges benefit from student retention is a fact, but it is the cynic's view. Creative collegiate financing — in the humanistic view — helps those who cannot afford to help themselves. That idea has value in both respects.

Both Mars Hill College and Haywood Tech are acting with a sensitivity worthy of the highest ideals of educators everywhere. It is the young and the under-prepared who are suffering most in this economy. Mars Hill and Haywood Tech are trying to keep alive for those people the dream of a better way of life through higher education.

Other institutions with the wherewithal should look to their own creative genius and find whether there is some similar way in which they, too, can serve.

Perry's National Dividend Plan

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — That might not have been a casual remark that President Reagan made in his reference to eliminating the corporate income tax. Many people share the view.

You might too, when you hear one version of it, that proposed by John Perry Jr., which is the basis of HR 5085, a bill before the House of Representatives.

Reagan retracted his comment, made before a meeting of New England business executives, but a lot of people such as Perry believe he didn't retract the idea behind the statement.

Under Perry's idea, the National Dividend Plan, corporate funds that would have gone to pay income taxes would be redistributed on a per capita basis to registered voters.

The advantages, as Perry and others see it, are immediate. People would tend to be more involved in the political process, for example. And they might see corporations as producers of wealth rather than ripoff artists.

Perry, 66, a man of many talents and friends, has worked on the plan for many years, and recently purchased a house in Washington, the better to meet more elected officials.

Not that he has abandoned his interests.

He also owns Perry Cable, Florida's largest cable television system, builds research submarines as part of Perry Oceanographics, and says he is close to a breakthrough in drawing energy from sea water. He once owned a newspaper group.

Perry is accustomed to winning. He says he feels even more assured about his National Dividend Plan after a recent demonstration at his Florida home for Rep. Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

The plan would freeze government spending for five years, during which time the private sector could get back on its feet and the federal deficits brought under control.

The double tax on dividends would be eliminated, and corporate taxes — or its equivalent — would be frozen at a maximum of 46 percent.

Taxes that ordinarily would flow to the Internal Revenue Service instead go into a trust fund, from which all the money would be distributed to registered voters by local banks.

Because the banks would have bookkeeping and administrative duties, they would be permitted to hold the funds for 90 days before distributing them to the public. Otherwise, they would not be reimbursed.

The final feature would prohibit the distribution of funds unless there was a government surplus.

In the opinion of Perry and others, such a plan would promote understanding of how the economic system works, involve people in the process and put them on the side of restraining federal spending.

"It's a political solution to an economic problem," said Perry last week. "Once we get the bill passed we would have the country in surplus in two or three years." Then the dividends would flow.

Perry feels the nation's economic problems have aroused renewed interest in the National Dividend Plan. In the past, he has mustered important political backers but always fell short of obtaining a national forum.

Reagan, he says, actually praised the plan as a great idea back in 1975 but then "some supply siders talked him out of it."

He doesn't believe for a minute that it was a slip of the tongue that brought the idea to the surface again when Reagan was talking last week to the New England business group.

Cite Education Strides By Black Youngsters

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A federally-funded survey of student performance during the 1970s concludes that black youngsters were the decade's educational winners, making big strides in reading ability.

At the same time, the report, a "National Report Card on Education during the 1970s," further documents a decline in math and science performance that was most severe among high achievers regardless of race.

The study by the Denver-based National Assessment of Educational Progress was released Monday. It found that students with poor academic track records — those who scored in the bottom 25 percent on standardized tests — made large reading gains.

Performance of black low achievers in the 4th grade rose 8.4 percent during the decade, and white low achievers in the same grade scored 4.6 percent better.

Likewise, black low achievers at the 4th, 8th and 11th grades — the three grade levels tested in the federal study — all showed improvement in math performance.

The report said gains by low achieving youngsters in elementary school may be due to federally-funded programs aimed at boosting basic skills of disadvantaged students. But it said the decade-long decline in performance by high achievers "could be due to overemphasis on facts and drill, with little carryover to application and problem-solving."

Scholastic performance by high achievers of both races — those who scored in the top 25 percent on standardized tests — generally worsened in the 1970s, however, especially at the high school level. High achieving white 11th graders scored 4.2 percent lower in science, 4.3 percent lower in math, and held their own in reading.

nursing homes."

The state wants to encourage senior citizens to stay in their own homes. Through choreworker services and "nursing homes without walls," the state hopes to provide senior citizens with a little of the help they need — maybe a few hours help with cleaning up or fixing a meal. It is hoped that just this little help can keep people out of rest homes.

Keeping the elderly at home does more than save the state money. Many senior citizens do well in institutions. But others don't. They stay healthier and happier if they stay in their own homes, says June Barbour, spokeswoman for the Division.

Sen. Gray's tax cut would help those marginal families who want to keep mother out of the state-subsidized rest home but who can't afford it. To get the tax exemption, they'd simply have to produce proof of the aid.

Sen. Gray tried to get this bill through the assembly in 1982 but ran into critics who said it would cost $8 million. She discounts that estimate, but admits she doesn't know how much it would cost the state.

She does know, however, that for every senior citizen her bill kept out of a state-subsidized nursing home, the annual savings to the taxpayer could be as high as $12,000.

caution in relating economic growth to revenue, it squeezes $20 billion to $30 billion out of this year's deficit. A more expansive growth than Feldstein's 5 percent would bring the so-called budget crisis into easily-manageable proportions.

Feldstein's Folly leaves the administration in a fiscal quagmire, strewn with unanswered questions: the size of outyear deficits; what Reagan should say about the contingency tax, now shown to be as unnecessary as it is unpopular; the need for up-to-date versions of the president's budget and economic messages, whose lack of realism placed weapons in the hands of Reagan's enemies.

Scoff At Innuendo By Israeli Officer

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The wife of a U.S. Marine who pulled a gun and held off Israeli tanks in Beirut says the Israelis are "grasping at straws" in making claims that the Marine had alcohol on his breath.

Capt. Charles B. Johnson on Wednesday boarded one of three Israeli tanks, his pistol drawn and loaded, and said the commander would have to come over his "dead body" to get past an American checkpoint.

Israeli military officials, quoted anonymously in Tel Aviv's Haaretz newspaper, said Sunday that Johnson's breath smelled of liquor.

Haaretz said Sunday that the Israeli lieutenant colonel who was involved in the incident detected "a heavy smell of alcohol" on Johnson's breath when he boarded the lead tank.

Lt. Col. Rafi told a news conference last week that he was "rather amused" by the incident, but made no mention at the time of smelling liquor on Johnson's breath.

"I just kind of laughed when I heard the news report," said Janice Johnson. "It's not true. Chuck would never be drinking on the job."

"I think the Israelis are grasping at straws," said Mrs. Johnson. "When you make a comment like that, four or five days after the fact, it's getting pretty weak. It's like they're probing all the different angles for an excuse and then decide to throw this in to see what happens. I know he would not be drinking on the job."

Marine spokesman Lt. Col. Walt DeForest in Beirut said the Israeli charge was "absolutely false."

Israeli Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor said he had no official information on the alcohol story. "It was not reported to the Cabinet that this was a fact. It was not reported to the Cabinet at all," he said.

N. C. Senate Approves Study On Limited Sessions

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Senate suspended its rules Monday night to immediately adopt a resolution calling for a study on limiting the length of legislative sessions.

Few bills received consideration during the session but several measures were introduced. They included proposals to make sure drunken driving victims can claim punitive damages in court and to change the interest rates on automobile and mobile home loans.

Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, introduced the resolution asking the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations to prepare a report by March 15 on limiting the length of legislative sessions.

The resolution specifically asks the commission to consider limiting the regular session to 60 days, limiting the short session to 20 days and allowing standing committees to continue work between sessions.

There aren't any limits on the length of the legislative session now. House Speaker Liston Ramsey has opposed setting any limits but Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has said he supports studying the limits.

The resolution was approved immediately and without questions.

Hancock said 33 states have some kind of limit on the length of the legislative session and 42 states allow bills to be filed between sessions.

He said the average number of committees in other state senates is 14.3 compared to 38 in North Carolina. The average number of committees in other state houses is 19 compared to 39 in North Carolina.

"We have the largest number of committees in both House and Senate of any legislature," he said. "I think the numbers tend to indicate that we in North Carolina could be operating our General Assembly more efficiently than we are."

In other legislative action:

Loans

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, introduced a bill to change the rates on loans for things like cars and mobile homes and to allow loan companies to make larger loans.

The bill would allow the companies to make loans up to $10,000 to be repaid in at least 84 months. Currently, they can make loans up to $5,000 to be repaid in at least 60 months.

It would allow the companies to charge 30 percent interest on the unpaid principal balance up to $1,000 and 18 percent on the remainder of the unpaid principal balance.

Currently, the companies are charging interest rates tied to the U.S. Treasury bill rate.

Drunk Driving

A bill introduced by Sen. Robert Davis, D-Rowan, would make sure judges consider driving while impaired by alcohol or drugs to be gross negligence. That allows injured people to claim punitive damages from the driver.

Davis said he believed his bill was in line with the governor's plan to fight drunken driving because it "would penalize the one who does the drunken driving."

He said most judges already consider drunken driving as gross negligence but the bill would make things more uniform.

He said he offered it as a separate piece of legislation because, "I don't think the governor wanted anything tacked onto his bill."

Boundary

The House tentatively approved a bill clarifying the boundary between Tyrrell and Washington counties. The boundaries were drawn in 1799 and revised in 1801 but there has been some confusion about them in recent years.

Officials of the two counties met and agreed to the boundary as set out in the bill.

New Bills

Rep. Kenneth Spaulding, D-Durham, introduced a bill that would make it a felony to assault a judge or magistrate. Currently it is a misdemeanor to assault a judge.

Last session, the General Assembly made it a felony to assault the governor, legislators or Council of State members.

"Our judicial officials must be able to make their decisions and rulings without fear, intimidation or concern for reprisals," Spaulding said.

Won't Respond To Allegations

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — PTL President Jim Bakker told his staff Monday to get its "eyes off bathtubs and condominiums" and back to its work for Jesus Christ.

Bakker made the statement to his staff while declining to respond to a Charlotte Observer report Sunday that PTL has spent more than $440,000 since October to buy an oceanfront condominium in Florida.

The newspaper also reported that the money was used to equip studio dressing rooms with gold-plated plumbing fixtures.

"We can choose to accent the positive or we can choose to live like buzzards on dead flesh," a solemn Bakker told a studio audience of more than 400 Monday morning at Heritage USA. "I believe God has called us to higher things and better places."

The ministry raises millions of dollars through its televised broadcasts shown in most of the 200 major U.S. markets.

On Oct. 29, PTL purchased a $375,000 undecorated condominium between Palm Beach and Fort Lauderdale for use primarily by the Bakkers and their two children, the Observer reported.

At the time, Bakker's associate pastor said in a PTL publication that the Christian ministry was in a "financial crisis." In August, PTL laid off about 100 employees and Bakker warned PTL's debts might force the phasing out of "whole divisions."

Between November and January, nearly $81,000 was spent on furnishings for the condominium, including $22,000 for floor-to-ceiling mirrors, the newspaper said.

PTL board member A.T. Lawing acknowledged last week the board approved a condominium purchase so the Bakkers could "have a place in Florida where they can go and rest for a while."

Lawing said he was unaware how much had been spent.

Bakker touched on the report in the Charlotte Observer during his 30-minute off-the-air talk at PTL's 1,200-acre retreat near Fort Mill, S.C.

Bakker didn't respond last week to repeated requests for an interview, and Monday, PTL spokesman Brad Lacey said, "Comment will be withheld upon advice of our attorney," the newspaper said.

Before Monday's audience of mostly PTL staffers, Bakker said plumbing fixtures in his dressing room are not 24-karat gold.

At a planned cost of at least $27,000, PTL is currently equipping a pair of dressing rooms primarily for Bakker and his wife, Tammy, that include 24-karat gold-plated plumbing fixtures, the Observer reported Sunday.

Investigate A Fatal Shooting

Greenville police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation are investigating a shooting death that occurred at 105 Templeton Drive early this morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Donald Minges called the police department about 5:58 a.m. and told officers that he was hearing "a lot of strange noises," and thought someone was trying to break into the rear of his house.

Responding officers, the chief said, found the rear door of the home open. When they entered the house, they found Minges lying on the floor of the den.

Cannon said Minges had been shot one time in the left side of the chest. A pistol was found on the floor beside the body.

Medical Examiner Stan Harris said late this morning that an autopsy would be performed today. "I don't have any impressions right now" as to the cause of death, Dr. Harris added.

Minges, 25, lived alone. He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Ray D. Minges of 150 Longmeadow Road, and was associated with Hooker and Buchanan Inc. at 509 S. Evans St.

Vulnerable?

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Leaders of the 3,000 West German civilian guards at U.S. and British weapons depots called a strike vote Monday after the two military commands rejected their demands for a 40-hour week, extra pay for Sundays and holidays, extra leave for changing shifts and better training.

Union spokesmen said most of the depots are so short-handed and their security equipment so out of date that terrorists could "turn them into their supermarkets."

Dole Sworn For Cabinet Office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Hanford Dole has been sworn in as secretary of transportation, officially making her the first woman to head a Cabinet department in President Reagan's administration.

With the president grinning from the sidelines, Mrs. Dole took the oath of office in a ceremony Monday. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor administered the oath to Mrs. Dole, who had served as a senior White House aide.

Mrs. Dole's mother, Mary Hanford of Salisbury, N.C., held the Bible as her daughter repeated the constitutionally prescribed oath with her right hand raised and her left hand on the Bible.

After the oath of office was administered, Reagan turned to the new Cabinet officer's husband, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kansas, and told him, "Now, Robert, if she's late too often getting home, just let me know."

county to renovate the building and lease the facility to the state. In turn, Pitt would pay the state for housing local juveniles — an estimated $9,000 to $10,000 a year.

However, Teal said, the state does not have the money at this time to fund either proposal. He said the General Assembly would have to appropriate funds for the project in either event.

"There's no cheap way to do it," Teal emphasized, suggesting that it's "economically impossible on a county basis."

Bob Atkinson, chairman of the state's juvenile detention study committee, suggested that the Legislature might extend the present deadline until June 30, 1984, saying the deadline under federal legislation has been set at June 30, 1985.

Eve Rogers, chief court counselor for the 3rd Judicial District, suggested that trained adult volunteers might be used to help reduce the costs involved in operating the facility.

Commissioners took no action on the matter Monday, but indicated their desire to continue looking into the possibilities.

In other business, the board approved petitions to have Knights Court, King Arthur Road, Guinevere Lane, Lancelot Drive and Gawain Road, all in Camelot Subdivision, added to the state system; rejected a request by John F. Moye for a 30-foot easement across landfill property for an access road to a five-acre tract of land owned by Moye; re-approved plans for Gold Leaf Subdivision and adopted a revised motor vehicles policy.

Commissioners also adopted resolutions honoring Rep. Sam Bundy, who died Jan. 19, and thanking the Department of Transportation for proceeding with plans to widen U.S. 13-N.C. 11 from Greenville to Bethel.

County Manager Reginald Gray told board members that the North Carolina Association of County Officials' workmen's compensation self-insurance pool has declared a dividend and will refund 44 percent of the contributions paid in over the past year. Gray said Pitt paid some $96,111 to the pool and has received a check for $21,000. The remainder of the refund will be made later this year, Gray said.

Housing Auth. ...

The authority informed the city officials that, "The current occupancy of the 702 units of conventional public housing and the University Towers by widows, elderly and disabled families has exceeded 50 percent for the first time and this group is in dire need of housing assistance in these inflationary times." The report said another 36 percent of the residents are full-time working families who receive no public assistance and some 18 percent of the occupants receive assistance. In addition, 32 percent of the 200 Section 8 existing and moderate rehabilitation units leased from private owners are occupied by elderly and disabled families.

With the agency's oldest units approaching 20 years, the authority said it is emphasizing maintenance to renovate and preserve the units. The replacement of over 200 roofs in Kearney Park, Meadowbrook and Moyewood is nearly complete.

In other business, the director of operations, Ken Noland, reported that the architect handling the Kearney Park modernization program has viewed the units and is now back in Atlanta preparing the work plans. The authority still is waiting for word on funding of the program by HUD.

Noland said the architect has prepared a preliminary report for funding of fiscal year 1983 modernization work that will include the Meadowbrook housing units and also cover items that were omitted this year from the Kearney Park funding package.

Commissioners approved the execution of a new annual contributions contract with HUD, putting all of the authority's active projects in one package. Joe Laney, executive director, said that a regulation requires that a new contract be executed after five amendments are made to the initial document.

Youth Fails Bank Robber

HOBGOOD, N.C. (AP) — A Hobgood teen-ager foiled an apparent getaway attempt Monday when he made a flying tackle on a man Halifax County authorities said robbed a bank.

Timothy R. Hopkins, 16, was taking a break from his job at Buster's Service Station when he saw a man wearing a wig and carrying a money bag dash from People's Bank and Trust Company across the street.

Hopkins said he first realized the man had robbed the bank when the bag he was carrying started spewing red dye. That was when Hopkins, retired railroad engineer French Scott and Hobgood Oil Co. employee Phil James gave pursuit.

What Hopkins didn't realize was that the man was carrying a sawed-off, 12-gauge shotgun.

"I didn't know he had a gun," Hopkins said. "All I know is they say he had robbed a bank."

An unidentified man told the tellers to give him their money and then he turned around and ran, authorities said. No shots were fired and there were no injuries.

"When he fell, he pointed the gun at me, but Scott hollered that he had a gun," Hopkins said. "He didn't, but the man dropped his."

Breakthrough Reported In Marrow Transplant

NEW YORK (AP) — Doctors at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center have succeeded in transplanting genetically mismatched bone marrow in humans, an often deadly procedure until a new technique they developed made it safe.

Dr. Richard O'Reilly, chief of the Bone Marrow Transplant Service at the research hospital, called the technique "a first step" to the wider use of bone marrow transplants to cure leukemia, some blood diseases, immune deficiencies and some congenital defects that together afflict about 14,000 people a year.

Jeffrey Grabelsky, whose 17-month-old daughter Shira was among the first to undergo such a transplant, said the year-long ordeal showed him "the best and worst of Western medicine."

The "best" was his daughter's survival after a severe attack of pneumonia almost killed her. Shira — the name means "Song" in Hebrew — suffered from severe combined immune deficiency, a rare blood disease in which the victim has no immunity to disease. It strikes about 60 people a year. To such children, who are hospitalized in sterile plastic bubbles, a common cold can be deadly.

The "worst," Grabelsky said, was not being able to touch his daughter without wearing a mask and sterile gloves for the 11 months she was in the hospital, and the insensitivity of doctors involved in experimental surgery.

"They've got big things on their minds — how to reconstitute one's immunological system," Grabelsky said. "To think about how you feel about it, or how your child feels, that is secondary to them. I'm not faulting them for that."

The "big things" Grabelsky talked about was the procedure in which bone marrow was successfully transplanted into recipients, despite genetic differences between the patient and the donor. Bone marrow is transplanted in blood disorders because it is where new blood cells are made.

Grabelsky, 31, and his wife, Karen Leitson, 32, of Syracuse, N.Y., brought their daughter to New York in March 1982, after Shira contracted pneumonia.

Pirates Seek Revenge Against Indians

In their first meeting of the season several weeks ago, East Carolina suffered its second worst loss of the year at the hands of William & Mary — and another loss that's hasn't healed yet.

Early in that contest, Charles Green, at that time the second leading scorer and rebounder for the Pirates, went down after being undercut and landed hard on his right shoulder, dislocating it.

Only in the past week has the arm been removed from a sling and rehabilitation begun. At any rate, Green will not be playing again Wednesday night when the two clubs meet again in Williamsburg, Va., at 7:30 p.m. in William & Mary Hall.

Green could play on Saturday, however, when the Pirates go after revenge against Baptist College, but if so, it is likely to be only a brief trip to the floor.

William & Mary came away from that game with a 72-51 victory over the Pirates. The only team which beat the Pirates worse was Southwest Louisiana, which took an 83-55 win on its own home court in the opening round of the Bayou Classic back in December.

With the injury to Green, the Pirates had to go through a readjustment period that resulted in three straight losses, the longest losing streak of the year.

The Indians generally play a game that makes its foe grab a lead and hold it if it is to win.

Once the Indians get command in a game, it becomes tough to get back in against them.

W&M held ECU's Johnny Edwards to only five points in the contest — only the second time this year he's failed to score in double figures — the other being Duke in the opening game. It also marked his low of the year.

Edwards is averaging 18.0 points a game and 8.3 rebounds and was the ECAC-South's Rookie of the Week for the fourth time last week.

William & Mary, meanwhile, presents a very balanced offense on a team that is currently 10-5 overall and leads the ECAC-South with a 4-0 record.

Keith Cieplicki, a 6-4, sophomore guard, is the leading scorer with a 14.5 average, while 6-9 senior center Bradt Weidner is hitting 11.5 and pulling 6.5 rebounds. Rounding out those in double figures is 6-2 sophomore guard Tony Traver at 10.9, while 6-5 sophomore Kevin Richardson (8.5) and 6-4 senior Mike Strayhorn (7.3) round out the probable starting lineup for the Indians.

In the first meeting of the two, Traver led the way with 13, while Richardson and Weidner each had 12. Cieplicki had 11 and Strayhorn, 10 — emphasizing their balanced attack.

ECU shot only 35.6 percent from the floor — its lowest of the season, while William & Mary hit 52.8 percent in the first meeting.

East Carolina's scoring in that opening game was led by Barry Wright with 18, while Bruce Peartree had 10.

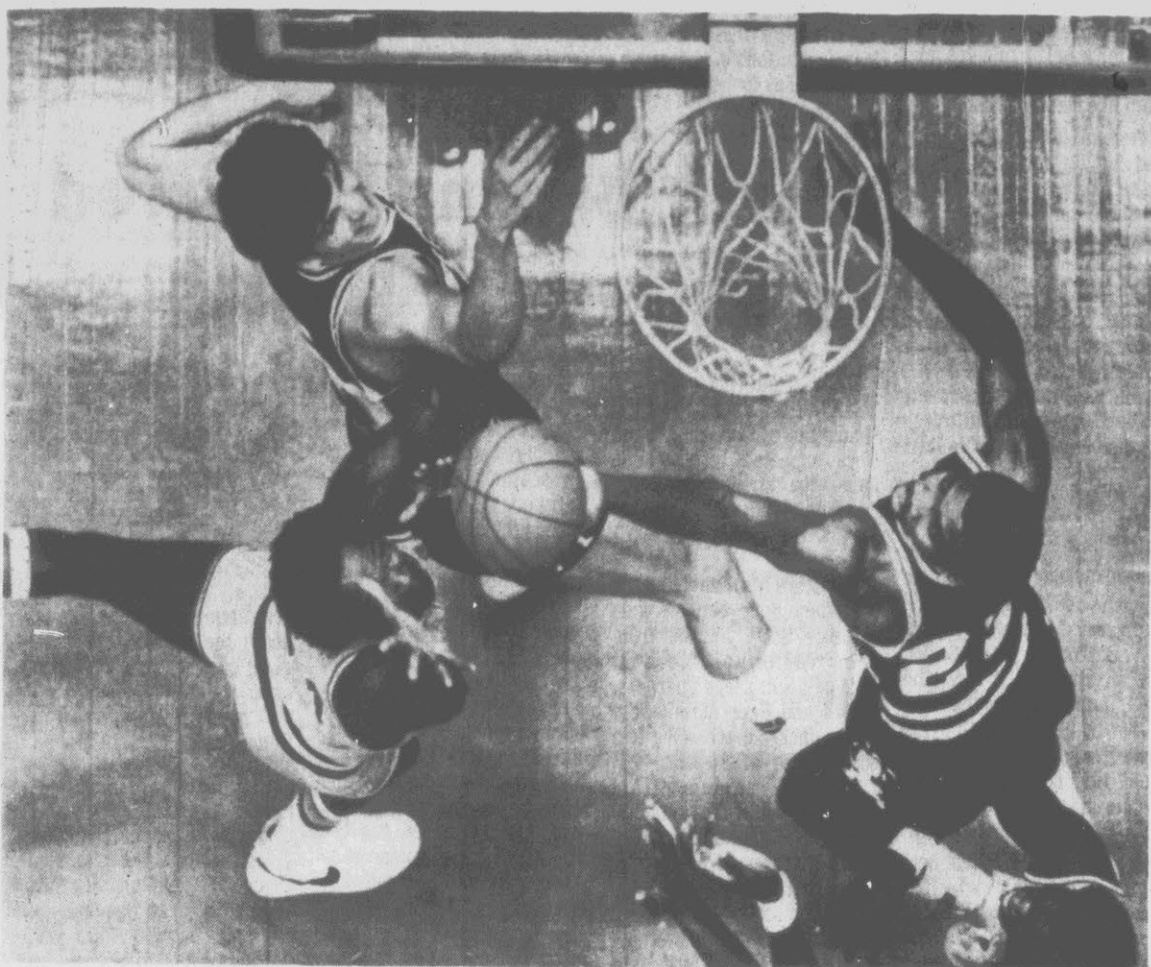

Wright is currently the second leading scorer for the Pirates with an 11.9 average, while Peartree is hitting 10.1.

Of late, Thom Brown has come on strong, especially on the boards, being either the leading or second-leading rebounder for the team in each of the last four games.

Obviously, the first game was not a true test of how the two stack up, with Greene sidelined and the team having to make a quick adjustment to that loss. Coach Charlie Harrison is hopeful that this meeting will be a better test of the Pirates ability.

East Carolina enters the game with a 10-10 overall mark and a 1-5 ECAC-South record, following a heart-breaking 59-58 double overtime loss to George Mason.

The Pirates, following their game Saturday at Charleston against Baptist, return to action next Wednesday, hosting the University of Richmond.

North Pitt Goes For Title Share Against Farmville Five Tonight

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt would just as soon forget the night of January 14. It was a Did-you-get-the-license-number-of-that-truck? night for the Panthers. They'd like to forget, but they can't.

The night ended with North Pitt on the light side of a 57-41 score. Farmville Central was holding down the other side and gaining votes all the while as the team most likely to win the ECC title.

That was nearly a month ago, however. Things have changed. North Pitt has won six straight since that defeat — its most lopsided loss of the season — and is now in position to clinch a tie for the Eastern Carolina Conference crown with a win tonight at Farmville.

The Panthers, who have won nine of their last 10, are 15-4 overall and 8-1 in the league, a game and a half ahead of Farmville (12-6, 6-2). Ayden-Grifton is two games back in third with at 6-3.

"We're hoping for a little miracle," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said with a laugh.

Deans was not laughing, however, when last the two squads played. "We didn't play well that night. We didn't play our worst, but we didn't play well. I was really upset with our defense that night. It's the only time this year we have really went sour on defense."

"But Farmville's got a good ballclub and they're the type of team that we've have trouble matching up against," Deans added. "We let their guards dictate a lot of things."

"Their guards impressed me. They did a lot more things than I thought they'd do. And you know their front line is impressive."

The Jaguars are led by what many consider the best front line in the league in forwards Tony Hargrove and Terrence Pettway and center Andrew Edwards. Pettway leads the Jaguars in scoring with a 14.2 average. Edwards is averaging 10.9 an outing.

Both Pettway and Edwards are averaging around six rebounds a game.

Farmville coach Mike Terrell will start Gary Hobgood and Reggie Gorham at the guards, with Bobby Carraway also slated to see action.

The Panthers counter with senior Dennis Bradley, who is averaging 14.3 points and 8.8 rebounds — second best in the ECC. Forward Charles Harris is averaging 9.8 points and guard Greg Hines 9.0 for the Panthers.

Starting at the other forward for the Panthers is Ken Whitehurst while at the point guard is Greg Briley.

"We're going to have to have a better defensive game tonight (to win) and we are also going to have to do a better job on the boards — both offensively and defensively," Deans said.

"Hopefully, (the earlier loss to Farmville) will give us some incentive, but I don't really think it's going to have a lot of bearing on it," Deans added. "We're just ready to play."

The game is the only one this week for the Panthers, who close out the season next week at home against SouthWest Edgecombe and Ayden-Grifton.

A win tonight by the Jaguars would bring them within a 1/2-game of first — tied in the loss column — and would enable them, by winning their last three games, to do no worse than tie the Panthers for the title.

If that happened, Farmville would get the No. 1 seed in the league tournament, having beaten North Pitt twice.

Farmville has had a week off since having its three-game winning streak halted last Tuesday by SouthWest Edgecombe, 67-56. The Jaguars have three games to go after tonight — all on the road.

Farmville travels to Ayden-Grifton Friday, is at C.B. Aycock Tuesday and ends the season at Southern Nash.

On Friday, Rose faces host to Wilson Beddingfield and Greene Central is at Charles B. Aycock.

Also Friday, Williamston is at Roanoke, Jamesville is at Mattamuskeet, Bear Grass travels to Chocowinity and GCA entertains Springfield.

Ayden-Grifton, the only other team in the chase for the regular-season, plays at Greene Central (3-5, 11-7) tonight and then, after facing Farmville Friday, is at Roanoke for a nonconference game Tuesday before ending the year at North Pitt.

In the Coastal Conference tonight, league-leading D.H. Conley (6-0, 15-3) is at home against White Oak (0-6, 4-14).

In the Northeastern Conference, Roanoke (11-2, 13-3) entertains Tarboro (8-4, 9-7) looking to remain even with Plymouth atop the league. Williamston (2-10, 4-12) plays host to Roanoke Rapids (7-6, 7-8) in another NEAC game.

In the Big East, Greenville Rose (3-5, 4-10) goes to Rocky Mount (5-3, 10-4), one of three teams tied for the league lead.

In the Tobacco Belt, Belhaven (8-5, 9-8) is at Bear Grass (5-7, 6-9). Winless Jamesville (0-13, 0-16) goes outside the league to tackle tough Plymouth (11-2, 15-3) at home.

Also Tuesday, Greenville Christian is at Wilson Christian.

D.H. Conley faces North Lenoir in Hollywood in the lone Thursday game. Game time has been moved up one hour so as not to conflict with the UNC-Virginia game. The junior varsity game will begin at 4 p.m. followed by the girls' and boys' game.

On Friday, Rose plays host to Wilson Beddingfield and Greene Central is at Charles B. Aycock. Also Friday, Williamston is at Roanoke, Jamesville is at Mattamuskeet, Bear Grass travels to Chocowinity and GCA entertains Springfield.

Carolina, Virginia Hold Spots; NLV Loses Votes

By The Associated Press

North Carolina and Virginia, who meet Thursday in an Atlantic Coast Conference showdown, held the first and third spots today in The Associated Press college basketball Top Twenty, while second-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas lost voter support although it remained the only unbeaten team in the nation.

The top-ranked Tar Heels got 44 of 58 first-place votes and 1,116 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. A week ago, North Carolina, now 20-3, was listed No. 1 by 34 of 56 first-place pollsters.

UNLV, 20-0, had 13 first-place votes a week ago and 10 in the poll released today, with 1,042 points.

Virginia was third again with two first-place votes and 1,039 points. Houston, eighth last week, got the other two No. 1 listings and climbed to sixth place with 820 points, behind No. 4 Indiana with 954 and fifth-ranked UCLA with 898.

Indiana and UCLA, like Houston, jumped two places in today's poll compared to last week as St. John's fell from fifth to seventh after a 72-71 loss to Pittsburgh and Memphis State slipped from fourth to ninth because of a 58-56 defeat against Tulane.

Arkansas moved from ninth to eighth this week, while Missouri maintained its 10th position.

Two teams — Washington State and Georgia — fell out of the Top 20 and they were replaced by Wichita State and Purdue.

Washington State, 18th a week ago, lost to UCLA 89-87 in overtime and 56-49 to Southern Cal. Georgia, No. 19 in the previous poll, lost to Louisiana State 70-59 and 76-59 to Mississippi on Monday night in a game that was played after the votes were gathered.

The new Second Ten consists of Louisville, Villanova, Kentucky, Georgetown, Syracuse, Wichita State, Illinois State, Purdue, Minnesota and Iowa.

Last week, it was Villanova, Louisville, Iowa, Georgetown, Kentucky, Illinois State, Minnesota, Washington State, Georgia and Syracuse.

Louisville moved up one spot with victories over Cincinnati and Lamar. Villanova dropped a position after a loss to Boston College. Kentucky gained two notches despite a loss to Tennessee, and Syracuse leaped to 15th from 20th but may fall back again because of Monday's

AP Poll

Shockers May Have Short Visit To List

By The Associated Press
The Wichita State Shockers have cracked college basketball's Top Twenty for the first time this season, but they may be in for a rude shock when next week's rankings come out.

The Shockers climbed into 16th place in today's Associated Press, but the votes were tabulated before they dropped an 85-73 decision Monday night to ninth-ranked Memphis State.

"The turning point came when it was 69 each and we made three turnovers," said Wichita State Coach Gene Smithson. "Then that little Turner did the rest."

Smithson was referring to Memphis State's "Little General," 5-foot-10, 150-pound freshman Andre Turner, who scored 10 of his 22 points in the final three minutes. Turner made two layups and six free throws down the stretch as Memphis State notched its 18th victory in 20 games. Wichita State is 17-3.

Only three other games involved a member of the Top Twenty and one of them, No. 15 Syracuse, was upset by Pitt 85-74. Meanwhile, eighth-ranked Arkansas trounced Baylor 81-66 and No. 11 Louisville thrashed Florida State 89-63.

Top Ten
Wichita State actually outscored Memphis State from the floor by five baskets, but the winners hit 33 of 37 free throws to Wichita's 11 of 20.

"The free throw line has been our friend this season, but tonight it was our enemy at both ends," Smithson said. "We just put them on the line too much and we did not shoot as well as we should have from the line."

Memphis roared to a 22-8 lead, but Wichita cut the deficit to 45-42 at halftime and tied it 69-69 on Xavier McDaniel's driving layup with 3:45 left. That's when Turner went to work.

"We played well in spurts, but that's not enough," Smithson said. "We didn't play for a full 40 minutes, and that's needed to win against a team like Memphis State."

Memphis Coach Dana Kirk said his Tigers "beat a good basketball team. I thought we did some things real well. We started out shooting the ball. We weren't standing."

Like Turner, Bobby Parks had 22 points for Memphis. Aubrey Sherrod led Wichita with 18, but Antoine Carr, the Shockers' leading scorer, played only 26 minutes because of foul trouble and managed just 11 points.

At Waco, Texas, sophomore center Joe Kleine scored a career-high 25 points and Darrell Walker added 20 as Arkansas rolled to a Southwest Conference victory over Baylor. The Razorbacks, 19-1 overall and 8-1 in the SWC, jumped to a 7-0 lead and never trailed. Kleine hit his first five shots and Baylor could find no answer to his muscle underneath the basket.

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton called it "one of our best games of the year" after the Razorbacks shot a sizzling 63 percent. "It's a tough place to play and we're happy to win here. We played very well. We beat them worse than the final score."

"I know Baylor is struggling, but rarely have we come here and played this well. I wish we could bottle tonight's performance and have this type of game every night."

Second Ten
At Louisville, Scooter McCray pumped in 20 points and brother Rodney added 11 points and 14 rebounds to pace Louisville to a Metro Conference victory over Florida State. The Cardinals trailed most of the first half until Scooter put them on top for good at 24-22. The victory boosted the Cardinals to 7-0 in the conference and 19-3 overall, two games ahead of second-place Memphis State.

At Pittsburgh, Clyde Vaughan's 24 points helped Pitt record its second upset of a nationally ranked Big East Conference team in a week. The Panthers, who defeated St. John's last week, made 35 of 53 foul shots as five Syracuse players fouled out. They also got 17 points from Billy Culbertson and 14 from George Allen, overcoming 24 by Syracuse's Leo Rautins, who also committed 10 of the losers' 25 turnovers.

"Pitt played very well and very aggressively," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boehm. "We just had too many turnovers to win on the road in this league. This is a tough place to play and we made ourselves look bad."

Elsewhere, the wacky Southeastern Conference race shrank from a six-team tie to just three when Mississippi, Tennessee and Vanderbilt all won.

Carlos Clark scored 23 points and Ole Miss sank 15 free throws in the final three minutes to hand Georgia its second consecutive home floor setback, 76-59, in three days. Brad Pierce's 20-foot shot with 11:20 remaining gave the Rebels the lead for good at 47-45.

At Knoxville, Tenn., Tennessee squandered a 13-point second-half lead, but junior Michael Brooks hit five free throws in the final minute to lift the Volunteers past LSU 66-63, depriving LSU Coach Dale Brown of his 400th coaching victory. Tennessee's Dan Federmann led all scorers with 20 points.

At Nashville, Vanderbilt's Jeff Turner canned a 12-foot jump shot with seven seconds remaining to lift the Commodores to a 61-60 victory over Alabama.

USFL—Can It Survive?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
The new U.S. Football League wears a pinstripe suit and holds forth in a lavish skyscraper suite with a mahogany desk loaded down with TV schedules and open checkbooks.

It's a combination of Madison Avenue, Rockefeller Center, Wall Street and the sunshine belts — California and Florida versions. It has collared a group of wealthy owners and hired a smart commissioner, Chet Simmons, an old TV hand who knows all the subtleties of producing and marketing.

It has made exhaustive studies of the perils. It goes forward unafraid.

That's one way the fledgling league looks to an outsider. But, like beauty, it's all in the eye of the beholder.

Another might see it as a new-born babe on a raft, neck deep in money and with provisions to last a lifetime, floating on uncharted waters, searching for the security of the shore.

Can a new pro football league make it?

That's the quandary as the USFL moves closer to the launching of a new football season out of season March 6.

Is the appetite of the football fan insatiable?

The new league is staking its life on it.

Can football, a traditionally autumn sport, invade the provinces of the fading basketball and hockey seasons and the blooming of such spring and summer endeavors as baseball, golf, tennis and family holidays and survive?

"We've made exhaustive surveys," says Simmons, one-time chief of NBC Sports and cable ESPN, "and they are encouraging. We found people anxious to watch football, whatever the season."

ABC Sports, which signed a $20 million contract to air games of the new circuit, held a press conference Monday to acquaint fans with its plans for coverage of 18 regular season games (17 Sunday afternoons and one weeknight) plus two playoff games and the championship game Sunday, July 17.

It wasn't at McDonald's. It was in the Hunt Room at 21, all class.

The USFL will play an 18-game regular season schedule involving 12 teams, broken up into three divisions: Atlantic — Boston, New Jersey, Philadelphia, Washington; Central — Birmingham, Chicago, Michigan, Tampa Bay; Pacific — Arizona, Denver, Los Angeles, Oakland.

While they're playing football, the old pappy of pro football — the NFL — will be taking a breather. There is no conflict on the calendar.

The USFL becomes the fourth league to challenge the NFL, fathered by men such as Chicago's George Halas and Green Bay's Curly Lambeau more than half a century ago, and nourished over the years by the exploits from Red Grange and Bronko Nagurski to Dan Fouts and Billy Sims.

The old All-America Conference struggled a while and died peacefully. The American Football League, bulwarked by Texas oil money and other riches, put up such a fight that the NFL had no choice but to adopt it.

Some people may say it was a case of the whale swallowing the shark, since the AFL had to pay reparations. But the AFL teams survived, almost founding the NFL with 23 total teams. Then came the World Football League, a ragtag operation quickly eliminated.

The USFL presents a different challenge. It isn't going head-to-head with the NFL. It hopes to serve as an appetizer. Its 12 franchises are backed by solid money. It is reaching out for established coaches and whatever players are available — the NFL's disenfranchised, a few over-the-hill gang and aspiring rookies just out of college.

In Chet Simmons, the new league has an imaginative, vigorous administrator. He adds substance to the venture. There are plenty of good players. They won't match those of the established NFL but they will have their proportion of stars. And, besides, everything is relative.

The financial base looks solid.

"I was the richest owner in the World Football League," says Canadian John Bassett, who joins actor Burt Reynolds in the Tampa Bay Bandits venture. "In the USFL, I am the poorest."

Knicks Outlast Pacers, 105-99

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks Coach Hubie Brown knew that the Indiana Pacers, despite their 15-33 record, have one of the best offensive rebounding teams in the National Basketball Association.

Led by young stars Clark Kellogg and Herb Williams, the Pacers have outrebounded the opposition 751-685, including a 19-6 advantage Monday night against New York. But 58 percent shooting, balanced scoring and a 19-4 second-half streak by the Knicks enabled them to outlast Indiana 105-99 in the only NBA game on the schedule Monday night.

"They hurt us in the three previous games with offensive rebounding and they hurt us again tonight," Brown said. "But in the second half our bench came in and helped build our lead to double figures. In that stretch, they were hitting shots, forcing Indiana to just one shot, causing turnovers and converting them."

Neither team had led by more than six points for the first 2½ quarters of the game, and Indiana led by one point with 3:55 to go in the third period. That was when New York's streak, during which seven players scored, gave the Knicks an 86-72 lead.

"We stuffed them on defense in the third quarter," said Bill Cartwright, who led six Knicks in double figures with 22 points. "They had been giving us — and everyone — trouble with their quick front line."

Louis Orr added 20 points as New York beat the Pacers for the first time in four meetings this season. Cartwright was 10 for 12 from the field and Orr 8-10.

Paul Westphal had 15 points, Sly Williams 14, Trent Tucker 12 and Truck Robinson 11 for the Knicks, who have won eight of their last nine games after a 14-26 start.

"Having that many in double figures is outstanding," Brown said. "It shows you're getting help from everybody. We hope to get that balance."

Indiana got 24 points and 14 rebounds from Williams and 20 points and 20 rebounds from Kellogg.

The first half ended with the Knicks ahead 48-47 after they fell behind 33-27 when Indiana's Butch Carter hit seven straight points early in the second period. But Cartwright scored eight points and Orr seven in the next 7:40 as New York outscored the Pacers 21-10 for a 48-43 advantage.

The Pacers got the last four points of the second period to cut the deficit to one at intermission.

Kelvin Bryant Expected To Sign With USFL Stars

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Stars of the United States Football League were expected to announce today the signing of North Carolina running back Kelvin Bryant and UCLA tackle Irv Eatman.

The Stars also may disclose that they have enticed wide receiver Scott Fitzkee from the National Football League's San Diego Chargers, and signed Penn State safety Roger Jackson, according to a source close to the team.

Stars president Carl Peterson returned Monday from the team's Deland, Fla., training camp, to participate in a noon news conference originally scheduled by ABC to discuss plans for broadcasting games of the new league.

The Stars asked ABC if they could use the conference to make some personnel announcements, according to a network source. The network obliged.

Bryant, a 1,000-yard-or-better rusher the last three seasons, and Eatman, a 270-pound tackle from UCLA, would be major acquisitions for the fledgling Stars.

Fitzkee, a one-time Penn State star who began his pro career with the Philadelphia Eagles, apparently is unhappy with his playing time at San Diego.

Jackson, a member of the 1982 Penn State national champions, has been described by Penn State Coach Joe Paterno as the best safety in college football last season.

Peterson also has been talking with Greg Hill, Oklahoma State defensive back, who is considering signing with the USFL team.

Bryant, who recently visited Philadelphia with his agent, Perry Deering of Dallas, reportedly would earn $350,000 per season over three years. Eatman's terms are believed to be in the area of $150,000 for each of four seasons. The Stars got the right to negotiate with Bryant as a territorial choice, while Eatman was their No. 1 pick in the first USFL draft.

Bryant amassed close to 3,500 yards at North Carolina, and, along with Eatman, has been projected as a first-round selection in the spring NFL draft. It is believed the two decided to become pioneers in the new league because they can command more money and be assured of starting jobs.

Peterson's main selling points in negotiations with top players has been that they have the opportunity to make more money now, start instead of being an NFL backup, and participate in the challenge of starting a new league.

The Stars received negotiating rights to Bryant under the league format that gives each team certain territorial rights. Philadelphia has the rights to players from Penn State, North Carolina, Temple, Delaware and Lehigh.

The Stars apparently have given up on trying to sign Penn State running back Curt Warner. Warner's demands are too high for the Stars, and Warner wants to play in the NFL.

Fibak Upset At Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Wojtek Fibak of Poland says the first round of a tennis tournament is "very often a key for a lot of players, especially the seeds. After you get to the second and third rounds, you feel much better."

But Fibak, the No. 3 seed in the $300,000 United Virginia Bank Tennis Classic, won't know the feeling of reaching the second round here. He was upset by unheralded Mike Bauer, 7-5, 6-4, Monday night on the opening day of the 18th annual tournament.

Bauer, a former All-American at the University of California, survived a set point on Fibak's serve in 10th game of the first set and came back from a service break in the second to beat the world's seventh-ranked player.

"I thought I had the advantage on this court," said Bauer, who had to win three qualifying matches to get into the main draw. "I think playing the qualifying ... I gained confidence. I beat (Harold) Solomon last week in Philadelphia and came close to Tim Mayotte."

"I took the mistakes I made there and turned them around ... worked them out in the qualifying here."

Fibak, who double-faulted twice in that key 10th game of the first set, felt he helped beat himself. He also needed a point to go ahead 4-1 in the second set, but allowed Bauer to scramble back to 3-2.

"Part of my game is not double-faulting," said Fibak. "I don't have a big serve, but I don't double-fault. It's very unusual. I don't understand it at all. But that's why tennis is such a beautiful game. Anything can happen."

Fibak was one of only two seeded players in action Monday. The other one, No. 7 Paul McNamee of Australia, advanced without much difficulty over Drew Gitlin, 6-3, 6-4.

Sarajevo Isn't Ready For Olympics Yet

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Construction work on facilities for the 1984 Winter Olympics is 90 percent complete, but officials apparently are a long way from providing the required services.

Many journalists and competitors, who came to this central Yugoslav city of a half-million people this winter for a series of pre-Olympic events, feel the organizers have yet to understand what it will take to put on the biggest sports event ever held in this Communist country.

A feeling of euphoria, which has been prevalent since the 14th Winter Games were awarded to Sarajevo in 1978, is slowly giving way to one of apprehension as officials tackle the numerous unforeseen problems.

The Games officially are due to open at the renovated 50,000-seat Kosevo soccer stadium when the Olympic flame is lit next Feb. 8, although some competition will start on Feb. 7.

Economically troubled Yugoslavia views the Olympics as a major propaganda exercise and hopes the Games will serve as a springboard to make Sarajevo a popular winter sports resort, attracting Western tourists and badly needed currency.

The city faced its first major test of organization when a series of pre-Olympic events was staged this winter to try out nearly all the facilities a year in advance. The organizers, however, apparently failed to anticipate the large number of newsmen, athletes and other guests who swarmed to the city.

According to official estimates, at least 600 journalists passed through Sarajevo at one time or another for either the Alpine or Nordic events.

Accommodations were a nightmare. Official booklets say Sarajevo has 12 hotels with 2,675 beds, but only four are up to international standards. Bookings made either through the official Olympic travel agency or through the organizing committee, confirmed and even reconfirmed, proved to be just worthless paper. Visitors often had to wait a full day while officials tried to secure a hotel room. Officials were unable to explain what had happened to the "confirmed" bookings.

During the Olympics, officials expect about 30,000 visitors daily. With only one new hotel to be completed this fall with 714 beds, the organizers are hoping to house most of the guests in private homes.

An Olympic village is due to be finished this fall for the 2,000 athletes and their coaches, but some teams have been told the coaches may have to stay in downtown hotels instead of being with the teams. Journalists should be housed at another newly built complex of 2,000 apartments.

While the events this winter were meant to be a major test in advance of the Olympics, most of the facilities set up were temporary, so results were inconclusive.

Newsmen worked out of a temporary press center at which the accreditation officials did not work between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m., and telex operators usually turned up around 1 p.m.

Only a single bus departure time was provided for those covering the Alpine events at Mount Jahorina and Mount Bjelasnica, and even that proved a hazardous trip for one group of unlucky newsmen. Their bus skidded off the road, overturned and ended up in a ravine. No one was seriously hurt.

The finish line at the women's downhill was accessible only after a 15-minute ride on a ski-lift, and the area was crowded with fewer than 100 people.

An official of the U.S. ski team said, "Usually, for the Olympics, everything should be in place one year before so you can get an idea of how things will work out during the Games. But here, we could not get any clear idea. The preparation of the courses is very poor and the people here appear inexperienced in what to do for a World Cup event, let alone an Olympic race."

Nordic teams arriving this week for World Cup events found there were no maps available of the course — a standard requirement for any major competition.

Sarajevo officials usually responded to requests and questions with "nema problema." That means no problems. The Latin "hasta manana" would have been as appropriate.

Wiggins Says Metro As Tough As ACC

KINSTON (AP) — Florida State's Mitchell Wiggins, who has been one of the top scorers in the Metro Conference the past two years after transferring from Clemson, says the Metro is as tough as the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"The ACC is a tough conference," Wiggins said. "But the Metro is young and we have some pretty good players, like Keith Lee (of Memphis State). It has been tougher than I had expected. I didn't think any conference was as good as the ACC, but the Metro is equally as tough."

Wiggins, a Griton native who played high school basketball at North Lenoir, led the Metro Conference in scoring last year with a 23.8 point average. As a senior he's averaging 22 points, 8.1 rebounds and shooting 81.4 percent from the foul line.

In his two seasons at Florida State, the 6-foot-4 guard has never scored under double figures in a game and is closing in on the school's 1,000 points club.

Wiggins has his sights set for a career in professional basketball after he graduates from Florida State, and says his teammates will play a big part in his cage future.

"I feel I have the talent to play in the NBA," Wiggins said. "But that depends on how the team does. If the team doesn't do well, then you really don't do your job. You worry about the team first."

"Through people I've talked to, I have a good chance to go early (in the National Basketball Association draft)," Wiggins said. "But they probably tell a lot of people that. I would like to go early. I am anticipating an early draft. I just want to go to a place where they want me and where I can contribute to the team."

"There are a lot of good players out there," Wiggins said. "When you are reaching for something big, there will be a lot of competition. Good competition makes you play harder. You learn from playing with good players."

North Lenoir coach Jerry Walton played an instrumental part in Wiggins becoming a major college player.

"He (Walton) helped me out a lot," Wiggins said. "He is a good coach. He taught me the basics. He told me the sky's the limit."

"Once you are a good high school player, you can't stop there," Wiggins said. "You just have to continue to work and keep learning."

A Review

Film Fell Short Of 'Memorable'

One of the nicest things about going to movies is that now and then a surprise of the most delightful kind comes along unheralded by pre-release ads. A point in case is the Australian Cambridge Films production, "The Man From Snowy River" (released by 20th Century Fox), now playing at Plaza Cinema.

(Suggestion: Moviegoers who enjoy a first-rate adventure-human interest film, and who missed seeing "Snowy River" during the two weeks it played at Plitt Theater, should not delay seeing it now, as it's uncertain at this point if it will be carried over for another week at Plaza Cinema.)

Any movie that can include in a romantic dialogue one of the most time-worn of all clichés — "I feel as if we're the only two people in all the world" — and make it seem fresh and fitting, is deserving of our attention.

That's only a minor gem in this movie with many laudable things going for it. It's rated PG, but how it was assigned anything more restrictive than a general family (G) rating is a puzzle. The old-fashioned romance is as pure as Ivory soap. One brief fast-paced fist fight in a bunkhouse (which is entirely justified in the context of the film) ends in nothing more serious than bruises and hurt feelings; and the language would pass any moral majority muster.

In short, this is a rousing adventure-entertainment chuck full of cattle, horses, majestic scenery, an appealing love story — a suitable viewing choice for any age.

"The Man From Snowy River" hopefully will become a pace-setter in a new wave of grand style Western movies updated by today's technology. Set in Australia's rugged mountain country and the fertile plains just below the mountains, the beauty and grandeur of the locale has been caught in some of the most unforgettable photography ever put on celluloid. (A dawn scene in cobalts, grays, silvers and pale greens, with awakening chickens chorusing with the plaintive final night calls of whip-poor-wills is alone sufficient to justify the time and expense of seeing the film.)

Veteran American actor Kirk Douglas ably portrays two entirely different characters — Harrison, the domineering, hard-driving magnet of the range country who came far west to Australia to fulfill the American dream of making it; and as the scruffy dreamer, one-legged Spur, Harrison's outcast brother living in the hill country.

As the young love interests, Tom Burlinson in the role of the mountain boy, Jim Craig, and Sigrid Thornton, a beautiful brunette who plays Jessica, Harrison's headstrong daughter, are near perfect. Both are gifted in making a glance, a gesture tell volumes. Jack Thompson as Clancy, the legendary vagabond of many achievements, is superb. The cast of ranch hands, several with substantial roles, could hardly be bettered.

"The Man From Snowy River," like "Breaking Away" and "Chariots of Fire," is essentially a screen story about the coming of age of a likeable, gifted young hero (Jim Craig), the dominant figure in the film.

One major flaw in "Snowy River" keeps the film from being memorable. Every challenge the mountain boy confronts becomes a victory too easily won, robbing the story of a needed measure of suspense, of balance. Not once does fate consign a failure or setback to Jim Craig's journey to victory. This leaves a haunting suspicion that screenplay writers John Dixon and Fred Cullen somewhere along the script lost sight of contrasts as a necessary ingredient in any good drama form.

On all other counts, "The Man From Snowy River" comes off as a movie that leaves the viewer with a pleasant glow of satisfaction.

The breathtaking scene near the end of the film when Jim Craig daredevil rides his horse down a steep incline of jagged slate to corral a herd of brumbies (wild horses) is one that will long stick in the memory.

Imaginative humor is another fine touch in "Snowy River" — i.e. Spur telling Jessica to set the table with his best tea mugs, "They're a matched pair, both broken;" and ...when Clancy comments to Spur that his wallaby stew is "a miracle cure for appetites," are typical of the fresh humor that abounds.

Music lovers will welcome Bruce Rowland's score, which though at times borders on being too lush, has fine muted passages and includes welcome favorites such as Beethoven's "Für Elise" and Australia's own "Waltzing Matilda."

If you've been waiting for a movie that's suitable and exciting for both young and old, this is it.

Danny Thomas Stole A Quorum

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Although he was 100 miles away, comedian Danny Thomas stole the show — and the quorum — in the Missouri Senate.

Thomas was in St. Louis on Monday to do a benefit performance at the Fox Theater for hospitals in Lebanon that have been damaged during recent fighting. Simultaneously, the state Senate was scheduled to take up a flood insurance bill but had to adjourn when only about 15 of the state's 34 senators showed up.

Most of the missing senators were in St. Louis to meet Thomas, explained Senate Majority Leader Harry Wiggins.

Wiggins said the full Senate would be back in session on Tuesday, again to consider the flood insurance measure.

Fees Forcing Cable Company Cutbacks

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — By the time a scheduled increase in copyright fees occurs next month, an estimated 6.2 million cable TV subscribers will have lost access to one or more TV channels from distant cities, a cable trade group said.

Roughly 2.5 million of that total have already lost some service because cable operators can't afford the new fees, added Thomas E. Wheeler, the president of the National Cable Television Association.

"It's going to happen, no question," Wheeler said. "We really see no other alternatives at this point. It's a sad situation."

Wheeler disclosed the cable association's estimates Monday in acknowledging there is little chance of delaying the scheduled copyright fee increases beyond March 15.

On that date, cable operators will have to pay sharply higher copyright fees if they want to continue retransmitting the signals of independent TV stations located outside their cities.

Most operators maintain the fee hikes are so large — ranging as high as 1,500 percent — they have no choice but to drop the distant signals.

The new fees had been scheduled to take effect Jan. 1, but the cable industry successfully lobbied Congress to approve a 2½-month extension. The reprieve was supposed to afford the association time to pursue a challenge before the U.S. Court of Appeals here.

But the appellate court has refused to grant a stay or schedule arguments before March 15, meaning there will be no court ruling and Congress' extension will expire.

"Quite frankly, time is against us," says Wheeler.

Wheeler said a recently completed survey of the nation's 28 largest cable operators found they plan to drop 518 of 709 distant signals rather than pay the higher fees.

The operators will follow through on their plans, he adds, because most can't raise subscriber rates without the permission of local governments and can't afford to absorb the higher fees.

Those arguments don't hold much water with broadcasters, professional sports interests and program producers, who maintain the higher fees are long overdue.

"They should go up, plain and simple," says Jack Valenti, the president of the Motion Picture Association of America. "The cable industry is doing all this yelling out of sheer greed because they've been getting a free ride for so long."

Cable copyright fees are set by a federal agency known as the Copyright Royalty Tribunal. Every six months, operators must pay a special "compulsory license fee" — based on a percentage of their gross revenue — for the right to carry the signals of distant TV stations.

The best known "distant signals" are the so-called super stations distributed nationally via satellite. Besides sportsman Ted Turner's WTBS-TV in Atlanta, they include WOR-TV in New York and WGN-TV in Chicago. But the fees also apply to stations that may be only 35-to-40 miles from a cable system.

The copyright fees are paid out to broadcasters, producers and sports interests because distant signals frequently duplicate programs that have been syndicated to local TV stations in the cable operator's city. When a cable subscriber can watch the same program on two different channels, the audience for the local station may be reduced along with the value of the program that a producer is trying to syndicate.

Broadcasters and producers have always maintained the fees are too low, but they put up with the system because the Federal Communications Commission used to limit the number of distant signals a cable operator could import and allowed local broadcasters to demand cable blackouts.

When those rules were repealed in 1981, the producers and broadcasters began pressing the copyright tribunal to compensate with fee increases. Last October, the tribunal agreed.

The fee increases vary widely, because the rate depends on how many distant signals a cable operator is using and when he first started carrying them. But to use a common example, a cable system that is now paying .503 of one percent of its gross revenue for a signal will have to pay 3.75 percent under the new fee schedule.

"A rate of 3.75 percent of gross is about 40 percent of net income for cable operators," said Wheeler. "That's a lot of money."

"If you've had a free lunch for five years and then someone says you have to pay 25 cents, you start screaming," said Valenti. "That's all they're doing. Cable is big business now, and all we're saying is we shouldn't be forced to subsidize them."

Hospitalize Jerry Lewis

HOUSTON (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis has been admitted to Methodist Hospital, six weeks after undergoing double bypass heart surgery, a hospital spokeswoman says.

Lewis, 56, checked into the hospital Monday as a patient of noted surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey, but hospital spokeswoman Nan Bush refused to disclose why the entertainer was admitted or how long he would be hospitalized.

Lewis underwent open heart surgery Dec. 21 at Las Vegas Desert Springs Hospital after experiencing chest pains caused by blockage in one of four arteries pumping blood to the heart.

Doctors determined one of Lewis' arteries contained a lesion, which was blocking the flow of blood to an area of the heart. A section of vein was lifted from Lewis' thigh and spliced around the blocked artery to form a new blood pipeline into the heart.

DeBakey, who traveled to Nevada after the operation and reviewed Lewis' case with the surgical team, said recently that Lewis was "doing fine and already started to resume his normal lifestyle — minus cigarettes."

Lewis, national chairman for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, has hosted the annual Labor Day telethon for the past 17 years, helping raise more than $300 million for scientific research, patient care and public health education programs.

'Something Ought To Be Done', But Aged Widow Refuses Help

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Cora Lefler has been raped twice, beaten, left for dead and robbed numerous times, but efforts to help her have been unsuccessful.

The 74-year-old widow's home has been condemned, and she carries her clothes and belongings in a white pillowcase.

When she has 50 cents, she rides the city bus to the Mecklenburg County jail, where she has slept for four years. When she doesn't, she walks while merchants, restaurateurs and neighbors watch for her safety.

"I can take care of myself," Mrs. Lefler said. She refuses to consider a nursing home or moving to Florida to live with her only daughter.

"The psychiatrists say she's eccentric but not dangerous," said the daughter, who asked to remain anonymous because she doesn't want her children embarrassed.

Mrs. Lefler spends her day helping clean the Belvedere Laundry, taking out the trash, sweeping the floors. She isn't paid, but the manager pays her bus fare occasionally.

Mecklenburg County Jail head nurse Sandy Carter, who has tried many times to get Mrs. Lefler help, reluctantly approves of her nightly presence on the wooden bench in the lobby.

"Something's definitely wrong somewhere," Ms. Carter said. "I was just working to get her off the streets. Some night she's going to die down here, and then people are going to ask why wasn't something done."

One of Mrs. Lefler's neighbors, Nona Ford, said: "It's a wonder she hasn't been murdered. She's been beaten up several times. We try to keep an eye on her, but it's just impossible to do it all the time. Something ought to be done."

Contacted by telephone at her Riverview, Fla., home, Lefler's 42-year-old daughter said she has tried to do all she can.

"They tell me there's nothing I can do because she's not dangerous," the daughter said. "She can't take care of herself and won't let anybody else take care of herself. She runs them off. It's a shame nobody can do anything for her."

Mrs. Lefler still owns and visits the house she and her husband built more than 40 years ago in west Charlotte. She has a city water-sewer bill averaging more than $100 a month because of burst pipes in the house, which was condemned in 1978.

She receives about $300 a month in Social Security benefits. But in January she had to pay $115.26 for her city water-sewer bill and $87 in city-county property taxes for her house and lot.

Every time she turns on the water at her two-bedroom frame house covered with red-brick tar paper, torrents of water pour into the basement from broken pipes under the house. More than a foot of water always stands under the house. There is no heat.

City utility department officials say they are not informed when the housing inspection department condemns a house, so water-sewer services have been continued at a cost to Lefler of more than $4,600 over the past 4½ years.

Mecklenburg County court records show two attempts to have Mrs. Lefler declared incompetent and two other attempts to have her held temporarily for needed medical attention.

Until she decides to ask for help or it can be shown that she is dangerous, nothing can be done about her plight, according to Steven Shaber, an assistant state attorney general.

"If you're not incompetent, you can live under the bridge or on the street or anywhere else," he said.

Woman Dies Of Bullet Wounds

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Wilkes County woman shot Jan. 2 while driving her car died Saturday of her wounds, Wilkes County Sheriff Kyle Gentry said.

Gentry said Donna Jean Combs was shot twice in the back as she drove home from a nightclub. She drove into the yard of a nearby home and got to a doorway, where she said, "I've been shot." She then lost consciousness, and never awoke, Gentry said.

She was taken to Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, where she died.

Her parents put up a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and convictions of the people responsible.

Gentry said a resident saw a white car following Ms. Combs and heard shots fired.

A New Year In Toys, Pac-Man Squirt Gun, Valley Girl, ET

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Pac-Man has a new life as a squirt gun. The Valley Girl is a thing like "Barf me" to total strangers. The Shields has a new life. And E.T. simply re-fro home. Welcome to the world of 1983.

The 80th American Toy trade show, opened today with the usual bears, soccer balls and train sets. And with the wildly popular last year, in every shape and size.

There's a talking E.T. with a six-sentence vocabulary: "Be good," "Elliott," "Home," "Thank you," "E.T., E.T., E.T." and, of course, "E.T. phone home."

E.T. has his own stickers, the Sniff-Ums, which come in a variety of fragrances. There's an E.T. & Elliott Bicycle, an E.T. Spaceship Launcher and, for $25, an E.T. Spaceship playset with secret storage compartments, a moving walkway, a botanical laboratory and handles on the back so kids can pretend it's flying.

E.T. will collide on toy shelves with some familiar and some unknown film characters. Buttons, jewelry, wallets and other baubles show characters from "Return of the Jedi," the latest in the "Star Wars" series opening this spring.

The Valley Girl Talking Doll is "totally awesome," a salesman explained. When you pull its string, it says things like: "I'm a Val," "Grody to the max," and "Gag me with a spoon."

The Brooke Shields Doll, one million of which sold last year, has a new smile, a new wardrobe and longer hair.

"We've added glamour to her," says Harry Moorhouse, director of marketing for L.J.N. Toys Ltd. Prom Party Brooke comes with a rose-scented corsage.

Pac-Man, the popular video game, has spawned Pac-Man sunglasses, a Pac-Man-shaped Squirt-Um squirt gun and Pac-Man Putty, which glows in the dark.

The toy industry posted about $9 billion in sales in 1982, according to Richard Grey, chairman of the Toy Manufacturers of America Inc., a trade group. Licensing of popular names and characters, a dominant factor in last year's increase, may rival the influence of video games this year, he added.

Most of the buyers at Monday's opening relied on their instincts to guess what American kids will want next Christmas. But Ronald Walton, of Mammoth Mills in Manchester, N.H., had his grinning, red-haired, 8-year-old daughter Julie.

"People her age are not easily fooled," Walton said. "I listen to her."

Julie liked the Advanced Dungeons and Dragons fighters, monsters and dragons, and the dungeon playset. Among the new games is "Opportunist," with Ronald Reagan's picture on the cover. The game carries an endorsement from the president: "I will play this game at the first opportunity."

"We think this will be big in 1984," during the presidential campaign, said William E. Hill Jr., president of the company that will stock the British-made Invicta toys.

National Lampoon has a new board game, "Sell Out," that pokes fun at traditional games' obsession with acquisitions, money and property. Land on the Underworld Connection square in "Sell Out" and you "proceed to the fast lane, get $250,000 in cash and two 'political influence' cards."

Land on another square, In Litigation, and you get a choice: pay $100,000 or miss three turns.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP

2-8

WTMF DMHDTJ MJVLE MILLRTFYE:
YKMYE M IWVET EKMJT.

Yesterday's Cryptokuip — OLD, MONEYLESS SUBWAY SYSTEM BARELY WENT UNDER.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: M equals A.

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 2 NT Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: King of ♠.

Former world champion Mike Lawrence is rapidly becoming one of our most prolific authors. And that is welcome, because he has a lot of interesting things to say. His new book, Dynamic Defense (Devyn Press, 226 pp., paperback, $9.95. Available from Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025, $9.50 postpaid) is sure to be a winner.

You follow the bidding and play as if you were at the table, seeing first your hand only and then dummy, and you have to defend 65 deals of varying difficulty. But each hand also has an extra point of interest. For example, this is the first hand in the book. To appreciate it to the full, cover the West and South hands and decide how you would defend after partner leads the king of spades and continues with the queen. Do you overtake the ace to unblock the suit?

If you did, you gave declarer a present of a spade trick and his contract, so let's assume you made the correct play of a low spade. Partner leads a third spade and you win the ace. What now?

You should know that declarer has the jack of spades, but even so he might not have nine tricks. It is vital to exit safely, and the only suit in which you can accomplish that for certain is in diamonds. Declarer wins in dummy and leads a heart to his king and partner's ace. Later, you score the jack of hearts for the setting trick.

How did you know not to overtake the queen of spades? You'll have to buy the book to find out the answer to that one. It will be $10 well spent.

Hospital Chain Is Eyeing Area

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A national hospital chain says it's interested in coming into fast-growing south Mecklenburg County, heating up the battle for hospital beds in the area.

Humana Inc., a hospital corporation based in Louisville, Ky., has studied the area and asked for copies of documents filed by Charlotte's Mercy and Presbyterian hospitals.

Mercy Hospital announced last week it has plans to build an 85-bed satellite hospital in Pineville in the southern part of the county. Last month, Presbyterian said it wants to establish a 150-bed hospital in south Mecklenburg.

Humana, owner of Charlotte Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, sent representatives to scout the Charlotte area a year ago and considers the area a prime target for development, said Bob Bailey, director of new hospital development for Humana.

VEPCO Is Asking Large Rate Boost

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — Virginia Electric and Power Co. asked Monday for an increase of at least 15.5 percent in its electric rates to North Carolina retail customers.

The request would increase the monthly bill for 1,000 kilowatt-hours from $70.89 to $81.91 in winter, up 15.5 percent, and from $73.73 to $85.41 in summer, a rise of 15.8 percent.

If the $18.7 million request is approved by the North Carolina Utilities Commission effective Sept. 9, the average monthly residential bill for 1983 will be about 5.2 percent higher than if the current rate was in effect for the entire year, officials said.

Vepco president William W. Berry told the commission that the rate increase was based on three factors:

— Continuing increases in costs and the addition of new facilities that have reduced earnings to below the level authorized by the commission.

— Increasing Vepco's return on stockholders' investment from 15.5 percent to 16 percent to finance construction.
