Another Encouraging Signal For Economy

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory use by U.S. manufacturers edged up last month for the first time in nearly a year, the government reported today, adding to the list of encouraging economic signs that have led President Reagan and private analysts to declare the recovery is under way.

Manufacturers operated at 67.8 percent of capacity in January, up one-half percentage point from December's 67.3 percent, which had been the lowest ever recorded, the Federal Reserve Board reported.

In a separate report, also released today, the Labor Department said initial jobless benefit claims fell 7,000 in the first week of the month. Some 510,000 Americans applied for the benefits. The drop came after two weeks of rising claims.

Factory use had risen last February, then had declined throughout 1982 except for July, when it held steady. Before the new increase, use had fallen in 15 of 17 months since the recession began in the summer of 1981.

The Federal Reserve's new report came one day after other strong economic figures had led Reagan to say in a Wednesday night news conference, "As a result of the economic program we already have in place, the recovery is beginning to flex its muscle."

The president, other officials and private economists were buoyed by government reports that showed production at the nation's factories and mines grew a solid 0.9 percent and housing starts by U.S. builders soared a record 36 percent in January.

Today's factory-use report said two important parts of U.S.

heavy industry — motor vehicles and iron and steel — increased their capacity utilization substantially in January. However, they still remained at low levels, the auto industry at under 54 percent of capacity and iron and steel at less than 40 percent.

Reflecting a continuation of the worldwide "oil glut," producers of refined petroleum products cut their use of capacity further in January, reaching a record low of 66.1 percent.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the housing report, released by his department, "adds to the accumulating evidence that the 1981-82 recession is behind us."

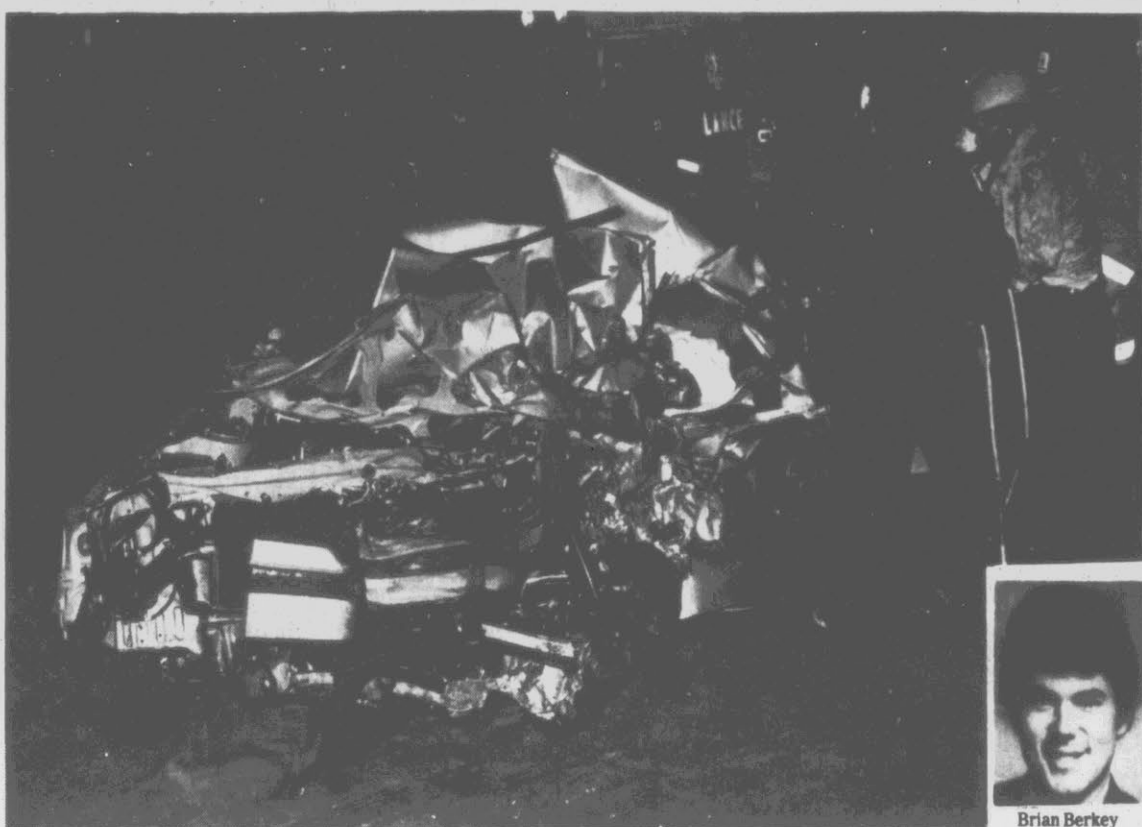

Earlier, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan hailed the gain in industrial production as "another important signal that recovery is in progress."

Private analysts went even farther and declared the end of the recession that began in July 1981.

"We are definitely in a recovery," said Robert Scott, economist for the consulting firm of Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

Added another private economist, Allen Sinai of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., "We are already in the early stages of a recovery." The recession, he said, ended in November.

And Alan Greenspan, who served as chairman of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, said he feels a "fairly strong" recovery is taking hold. But, in a speech in New York, Greenspan said he feels the odds favor a "major re-igniting" of inflation in the years ahead, probably after 1986, unless the federal government slashes budget deficits.

Brian Berkey

Pre-Dawn Victim

EARLY MORNING ACCIDENT KILLS MAN — A Winterville man identified as Brian Alan Berkey of 513 Jeanette St. was killed early this morning west of Greenville on U.S. 264. Trooper Robert Backus said Berkey was headed east on a return business trip from Raleigh when his vehicle crossed the center line and collided head-on with a van-type truck driven by Herbert Earl Godley of 500 Battle St., Greenville. The accident occurred about five miles west of Greenville. The investigator said Godley as well as a passenger, listed as Mary Ann Perry of Bell Arthur, were injured and transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment. The van was registered to Pony Express, of Raleigh. Both vehicles were listed as a total loss. Members of the Winterville and Greenville Rescue squads and the Red Oak fire department responded to the 3 a.m. call. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Reagan Says Surveillance Mission Is Only Training

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States does not plan to involve its military forces if Libya and Sudan clash, according to President Reagan, who says U.S. radar surveillance planes in the area are only on training exercises.

But Reagan, at a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, said the American forces have a right to fire back if fired upon.

"I think that anytime that our forces, wherever we have put them, are fired upon, I have said, they've got a right to defend themselves," Reagan said.

Pentagon sources said the United States has sent radar surveillance planes to Egypt and moved an aircraft carrier battle group off the Egyptian coast to counter a Libyan aircraft buildup apparently aimed at Sudan.

After conducting training exercises in the Gulf of Sidra, waters claimed by Libya but held by the United States to be international, the carrier Nimitz and its escorts moved to the north.

Two U.S. fighters conducting military exercises over that gulf in August 1981 shot down a pair of Libyan planes after being fired upon. Today, Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy said any attempt by U.S. or other foreign craft to sail into or fly over the disputed gulf would be repulsed.

"The Libyan people are ready to fight to defend their land, their water and skies," Khadafy was quoted by the state news agency as telling the Libyan legislature.

The Pentagon sources said today that the Nimitz has moved to position about 100 miles off the northwest coast of Egypt. In that position, it is within range of Libya and is expected to stay there at least several days while the U.S. assesses the situation.

The carrier, which carries 80 to 90 planes, had for a time been in the central Mediterranean, north of the gulf. Before that, it had been off the coast of Lebanon.

When asked about the exercises, Reagan said there had been no "naval movement of any kind." However, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said this morning that Reagan was referring to joint exercises being conducted with Egypt, although he had been asked about Sudan.

"I've told you the facts, and I've told you what was in his mind," Speakes said, adding that Reagan "was certainly aware" of the Nimitz movement because "he ordered it."

Speakes stressed that the movement of the Nimitz and the U.S.-Egyptian aircraft exercise were unrelated, and that the Nimitz exercise had concluded.

"Are either of these exercises related to the Libyan movement off Sudan?" he asked rhetorically. "No comment," he replied.

Pentagon sources, speaking only on the condition that they not be identified, said Khadafy had moved air units to bases in Chad, the adjacent country to the south where Libya has been supporting one faction in a civil war.

Those units appear to threaten Sudan.

Meanwhile, the sources added, Egypt deployed air force units to bases in southern Egypt to be ready to counter any Libyan move against the Sudan.

The United States sent several AWACS — airborne warnings and control system — planes to Egypt from Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma.

These planes, which see hundreds of miles by radar, can direct air battles from afar and are involved in air training exercises

More Stringent Law On Waste Disposal Is Urged

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A call for laws more stringent than federal regulations on hazardous waste disposal was made by the Governor's Waste Management Board Wednesday night in Greenville.

In a program sponsored jointly by Greenville organizations, members of the board brought residents up to date on current regulations and proposed changes during a two-hour meeting at the Willis Building. Public opinion was also solicited.

The board has two overriding concerns, according to Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, a board member and secretary of the Department of Human Resources — the type of materials allowed in landfills and the number and kinds of liners required for landfills and surface impoundments.

"Under the new EPA regulations, some volatile and liquid wastes could be allowed in landfills. We must not allow that to happen," Dr. Morrow said.

Current stipulations call for liners .030 of an inch in landfills. That is not enough, according to Dr. Morrow.

"To protect ground water, we need at least two liners and one or more leachate collectors," Dr. Morrow said.

Leachate is leakage from landfills that pass through liners and may contaminate soil or water.

North Carolina does not have any active landfills for hazardous waste disposal, but proposals before the General Assembly would allow such landfills. A board presentation expressed opposition to the use of landfills as a primary waste disposal measure. If landfills should have to be used, the board presentation indicated, regulations even more stringent than federal laws on waste disposal management should be used. Several citizens voiced displeasure that the board was even considering use of landfills.

Wes Hart of the NC-CATCH organization, a Sanford group formed to educate citizens on how to work with industry and government, said he had visited a number of landfills with experts and had found them to be unsafe even though lining systems on the fills were thought to be adequate.

"Landfills are not necessary and present only a cheap, easy way to get rid of hazardous waste. There is no (Please turn to Page 6)

Recording Industry Counsel Files Big Law Suit On Fountain Store

A lawsuit filed this week in U.S. Eastern District Court is seeking $1 million in punitive damages plus compensatory damages from a Fountain store for allegedly selling pirated and counterfeit copies of popular eight-track and cassette tape recordings.

Joel M. Schoenfield, special counsel for the Recording Industry Association of America, said today that Horton's Corner, operated by Larry Coggins, was one of 52 stores in North Carolina named in suits filed Monday following a four-month investigation by RIAA. He said the filing was the largest such group of suits ever filed.

Schoenfield said investigators made purchases of pirated and counterfeit tapes from more than 100 stores across the state during the investigation. The 52 firms named in the suits, he said, were stores which continued to sell the illegal tapes after letters were sent asking that the businesses stop trafficking in the counterfeit and pirated products.

In each case, according to Schoenfield, the record companies involved — RCA Records, MCA Records, Elektra-Asylum-Nonesuch Records, Warner Bros. Records, Atlantic Recording Corp., CBS Inc. PolyGram Records and Capitol Records — are asking $1 million in punitive damages, plus compensatory damages, from each store.

"Nothing we've done before comes close to this size effort," Schoenfield emphasized.

Schoenfield said the complaints were coordinated by RIAA's anti-piracy unit. He described counterfeit tapes as illegally reproduced tapes packaged like the originals, while pirate tapes, he said are packaged differently.

North Carolina, Schoenfield said, is "the center of illicit manufacturing and distribution of pirate tapes."

"I wish I knew why. A lot of industry people have asked me that," he said.

In addition to Pitt, other counties with stores involved in the suits include: Alamance, Burke, Caldwell, Catawba, Craven, Duplin, Granville, Guilford, Hoke, Johnston, Jones, Nash, Onslow, Richmond, Roberson, Scotland, Swain, Wake and Edgecombe.

The closest Edgecombe County store involved in the suits is Taylor Grocery, operated by Dennis Taylor, in Pinetops.

RIAA is an association of 37 recording companies which produce 90 percent of all records and tapes sold in the United States.

MD's Rudeness Cuts Patient To The Quick

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 39-year-old woman recovering from a hysterectomy. I had the operation less than a week ago and I am in a state of shock — not from the surgery, but from the behavior of my doctor.

The last day of my hospital stay, my doctor came into my room to remove my stitches just as I had picked up my telephone. It was my 18-year-old son calling from another state. He was calling me from jail! He said he was allowed only one telephone call, and Abby, before I could ask any questions or hear what else he had to say, my doctor yelled in a loud voice, "All right, hang up — have them call you at home!"

I covered the mouthpiece and said, "Please, it's my son. He's in jail!" The doctor rolled his eyes heavenward, gestured, palms up, got red-faced and ordered me to "quit tying up the hospital telephone lines."

When I tried to find out what my son was in jail for, the doctor kept shouting at me until he finally took the telephone out of my hands!

Abby, I feel so depressed and betrayed. This doctor calls his patients "my girls." Aren't we "girls" entitled to even common courtesy? Aren't the priorities of my life deserving of respect?

DOWNHEARTED IN DOWNEY, CALIF.

DEAR DOWNHEARTED: I am glad you were able to vent your anger in a letter to me. But for maximum results, and a change of behavior on the part of your doctor, let him have it with both barrels.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a saver. He saves newspapers and magazines, insisting he will read them "someday" when he has more time. Our garage and basement have this stuff stacked to the ceiling. Now he's started to clutter up our guest room.

He refuses to throw this stuff away. Some of it is 10 years old! How can I get him to get rid of this collection and break him of the saving habit?

COLLECTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You can't. It's more than a habit, it's an obsession. It's also a fire hazard. Give him a time limit, and tell him if he doesn't clean house — you will. Then do it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are stationed overseas. We've been married for eight months and I just found out I am pregnant. We are thrilled.

Now for the problem. I have never smoked cigarettes and can't stand the smell of them. If someone smokes near me, it makes me sick. I had not planned on letting people smoke in our home. I don't want the smell on my furniture, draperies, on my body or clothes. And I don't want smoke in my lungs or my unborn child's.

I have a good relationship with my in-laws, but I haven't known them long, so how do I get this point across to my mother-in-law and sister-in-law, who are both chain-smokers? They both have health problems, but they are so hooked on cigarettes they can't go for half an hour without one. I know they will want to visit us when we return to the states, but I don't want their cigarettes in my house.

I don't think it would be fair to wait until they walk off the plane to tell them how I feel, but I can't seem to put it into words without coming across as a hateful, intolerant little snip.

What should I do?

CAN'T STAND SMOKE

DEAR CAN'T: You're right. You can't wait until they walk off the plane to tell them. The solution is obvious. You or your husband should write or phone and tell them just what you've told me.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are having a difference of opinion. This is the second Christmas we received a half-dead poinsettia plant from an out-of-state sender.

The plants were sent by my husband's boss, who is known for his generosity and grand style. Of course, we don't know how much he paid for the plant, but we are almost sure he is being ripped off.

My husband says we should thank his boss for the "beautiful" plant, and let it go. I say we should let the sender know that the plant was puny, wilted and definitely third-rate. What do you say?

POST-XTMAS HASSLE

DEAR HASSLE: I vote with you. If you had been the sender, wouldn't you want to be told?

Patient Look-Alike Dolls Help Kids In Hospital

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Eleven-year-old Lisa Bryant was frightened in the strange hospital until a look-alike companion underwent every medical ordeal with her.

With two broken legs and stitches in her arm, Lisa's favorite toy became a doll bearing an uncanny resemblance to the patient. Both had brown hair, brown eyes, a cheery smile, legs in casts and stitches in one arm.

"Everything the doctors did to me, I did to her," Lisa said, "and having the doll was better than no one when I was alone."

The plain muslin dolls, given to the children in the Pediatrics Unit of Framingham Union Hospital, are so absorbing that even Raggedy Ann, Barbie, toy cars and cuddly teddy bears are ignored.

"The children turn the dolls into images of themselves," said Pediatric Patient Activity Specialist Brenda Clover, "and we use the dolls to help the youngsters understand what is happening to them."

While one young patient who had his appendix removed marked a corresponding spot on his doll and then diligently started applying bandages, another attached tiny plastic tubes to the arms simulating an intravenous injection.

Each doll, unmarked and unclothed when initially given to the child, is gradually transformed into a foot-high miniature of the patient, with yarn and buttons supplied for the hair and eyes, pipe cleaners, felt pens and crayons for the mouth, material for a hospital gown and a "doctor's kit" filled with medical equipment.

"Do whatever you want to the doll," Ms. Clover tells the surprised youngsters, who grab the stethoscope, blood pressure cuff, thermometer, tubes and bandages, often laughing for the first time since they entered the hospital.

The syringe is particularly popular among patients receiving many injections.

"They really go after the doll" with a vengeance, regardless of sex, Ms. Clover said.

That's exactly what the doctor ordered.

"Children do not have the abstract conversational skills of adults, who will talk for hours about an illness," said Dr. Joel Bass, pediatrician and director of the children's clinic.

"That's why play therapy is so important," he said. "The dolls enable the children to cope with the stress of the situation. Rather than containing their anger, they can take it out on the doll."

"The doll becomes a companion in woe and a non-threatening means of expression," Bass said. "Since the child gets to transform the doll into himself in addition to treating it, it's only natural that he starts feeling attached to it."

"They all choose to take the doll home upon release. It comes to represent a positive aspect of the hospitalization."

The doll therapy would not have been possible on such a scale without the dedication of the Framingham Camp Fire Club.

Jenny Carpenter, one of the 12-year-old Camp Fire girls, said she and her friends started sewing and stuffing the dolls last year and donated them to the hospital.

The reaction was so enthusiastic the club members have been kept hopping replacing the dolls as quickly as they are used, and have sent the pattern to other Camp Fire groups to start the program at more hospitals.

Jenny was particularly proud that the project earned the club a national award and $50 in a "Help Young America" contest.

"The best prize is making a youngster a little bit more secure about being in a hospital," Jenny said.

Ms. Clover, charged with preparing children for surgery or treatment through therapeutic play, said the most overwhelming emotion children first experience in a hospital is fear.

"They're afraid of the new environment, abandonment when their parents leave, funny sounds and strange people," Ms. Clover said. "They need to relate what they are going through."

"The introduction of the doll is often an icebreaker," Ms. Clover said. "It gets the child to begin talking about his feelings of fear, anxiety and apprehension."

"The children have no control over what's happening to their bodies in a hospital, but they have total control over the doll."

Lisa said she was scared when an automobile accident left her hospitalized with both legs broken. But the prospect of making a "Lisa Doll" dispelled her fears.

With Ms. Clover's help, Lisa carefully soaked the plaster bandages in water and tenderly wrapped them around her doll's legs.

When the casts hardened, she inserted stitches on the doll's elbow and dressed her in a pair of shorts and a top.

To complete the resemblance, Lisa even wrote "ouch" on the bottom of the doll's leg casts, "just like my own."

Ms. Clover said the dolls are particularly helpful in revealing a youngster's unnecessary apprehensions. Occasionally she hears a patient chastising the doll, claiming the reason for the injections or other uncomfortable procedure "was because you were bad."

"That's not so," Ms. Clover interjects, explaining the treatments result from surgery or illness and have nothing to do with behavior.

One child was particularly frightened when he heard he was to be put in a "spica cast," concerned that his entire body would be encased in plaster.

Ms. Clover made the cast covering the waist and one leg on the doll, much to the relief of the youngster.

Four-year-old Joey Perrault was understandably upset from all the injections and blood tests necessary for asthma treatment until he got his hands on a doll.

"That doll sure got a lot of shots," said Jay Perrault, the boy's father. "He was acting out the whole hospital experience."

Joey drew a huge mouth, long eyebrows and pajamas on his doll. When asked the reason for the big mouth, Joey said, "That's because he's smiling."

Program On Wedding Music Is Announced

ECU News Bureau Weddings music will be discussed and demonstrated at one of the two remaining spring semester open house programs sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Music and the Friends of the ECU School of Music.

"Wedding Music," to be directed by Dr. Robert Irwin, professor of organ at the university, is set for April 8. The program is open to all interested persons and will include a discussion on planning music for marriage ceremonies and selection of suitable literature for organ, voice, chorus and other instruments. Several student and faculty performers from the School of Music will present some of the works discussed.

A March 18 program "Music Library: Community Service" will be directed by music librarian Geraldine Laudati and will include a tour of the university's music library. She will also discuss present and projected services for individuals and organizations in the community.

Each program will begin at 10:30 and end at noon.

Earlier open house programs have focused on voice pedagogy, chamber music, piano pedagogy, music therapy and opera production.

Further information is available from the School of Music, 757-6851.

My husband was talking to me about some loose exhaust thing in the car when I interrupted him and said, "I wonder where John Travolta and George Bush are?"

He said, "What are you talking about? I'm talking about the car and it's important for you to pay attention."

I told him I was paying attention, it's just that a few years ago you couldn't turn around without seeing John Travolta and George Bush everywhere. Not together, but certainly everywhere. Now it was like they had fallen off the face of the earth.

Well, one thing led to another and finally my husband accused me of losing my power of concentration. He said it was a symptom of old age.

Boy, do I resent that! I can concentrate on anything ... for any length of time ... if it's important. He doesn't know what concentration is all about until he gets a piece of meat caught in a back tooth. Now that's concentration. I don't mean your little string of meat that gets hung up on a

Tar River Has A Purpose

It has been many years since cargo vessels made use of the Tar River. So can we assume that it is a useless waterway, good only for carrying rainfall runoff to the sea?

No way. The Tar River has great potential as a recreational area and, indeed, is currently used by fishermen and boaters.

The state launching ramp is located at the old Port Terminal and some semblance of the old channel still exists from there to Washington.

Boaters also put in at the Town Common of First Street in Greenville and the possibility exists that the launching area there will be made into an adequate facility for putting in boats.

Fishing has gone on in the Tar for as long as there have been men along its banks. The river has been stocked with fish and for those who know where to find them the fish can be caught.

Most important the river has gradually been cleaned up as waste water treatment plants have been built by municipalities along its way. Greenville will soon be building a new plant which will assure that only treated water will be returned to the river from the city's sewer system.

A park is being developed by Greenville in the area on the north side of the river at the center of the city, which will give even more access to the river's banks.

Thus we see that the Tar River has virtually unlimited use as a recreational area. Boaters can make their way to the Pamlico River and Sound. Fishermen can fish at their leisure. The Tar River is a natural resource to be cherished.

A Time And Place

When the forecast says a "50 percent chance of snow" for eastern North Carolina, and Lady Luck smiles on us — deflecting the scourge from our path — there are actually in our midst people who mourn their good fortune.

All the pictures and words depicting misery and hardships of the recent weekend's storms should stir a sense of sympathy for the victims as well as thanksgiving we missed it, instead of envy.

Those who remember know too well the scores of traffic mishaps, inconveniences and discomfort a mere five-inch snowfall means in the Coastal Plain.

Wishers-for-snow have short memories.

Yearning for snow in the winter season is folly. That kind of wish in mid-August makes no sense either.

There is a time and a place for everything. Even snow. But not for us.

Love And The Recession ... Always A Delay

Recessions affect everyone, even people who are in love.

They also give some people who are in love reasons not to get married.

"I would marry right now, but where would we live?"

"What's wrong with here?"

"I wouldn't want my wife to live in this squalor."

"I've been living here for eight months."

"Yes, but it's one thing to live here because you're so in love you haven't noticed the squalor. Once we get married the romance will go out of the squalor, and you'll want to move to a place I can't afford."

"You're just using the recession as an excuse for not marrying me."

"How can you say such a thing? I told you when I met you I was a romantic supply-sider. How did I know that interest rates would go through the ceiling, the economy would stagnate, and unemployment would be at an all-time high? How can a man contemplate wedlock when nothing is trickling down from the top?"

"Men are doing it every day."

"Yes, but what kind of men? The big spenders who don't care about a balanced budget, or the viability of the Social Security system or the tight money policies that have driven down inflation to 5 percent. Are you willing to go to the altar at a time when steel production is at the lowest it has been since the depression?"

"I'm starting to think that even if we were in a boom period you wouldn't want to get married."

You're wrong. I would marry you tomorrow if the Gross National Product went up by only 10 percent, unemployment was down to 6 percent and automobile sales increased to their 1979 levels. Marriage is a very serious business and people shouldn't jump into it when they know we are going to have a $1.6 trillion defense bill by 1986."

"I don't see what all this has to do with us. We love each other and if we don't get married soon we never will."

"Of course we'll get married. President Reagan's advisers expect the economy to turn around in 1983 or '84 or '85. We could even have a mild recovery at the end of this year. The July tax cut might spur the consumer to go out and spend money again. With luck we could get married in any one of the next fiscal years."

"And if all these wonderful things don't happen?"

"Then marriage is out of the question until Reagan gets his house in order. Honey, why are you getting mad? Did I know when we started living together what the MX missile system would cost?"

"I don't care what an MX missile costs. I want a home and children and a husband who will take care of me. I'll continue my job if you're worried about the recession."

"Who said I was worried about the recession? I'm worried that I can't give you everything you deserve as a wife. I want the best for you and my children. When we live together no one cares about our lifestyle. Society accepts us now for what we are — two people living happily in sin. But once we take the marriage vows we'll be judged by much more materialistic standards. Do you think your parents would let you live like this if you were married?"

"If you don't want to get married I'm going to pack and move out."

"You can't do that. You have to stay the course. Everyone has to suffer some pain if we ever hope to right the mistakes of the past 40 years. Look, I'll tell you what I'll do. If Reagan can get the budget down by a lousy $80 billion without endangering our national security, or increasing personal income taxes, I'll go down to city hall and we'll take out a license the next day."

"You really play it safe, don't you?"

"What do you mean safe? Jack Kemp, a leading supply-sider, is very optimistic."

Clear

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. is not always, well, perfectly clear, in his daily morning news briefings with reporters.

The other day, O'Neill, D-Mass., was asked if House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., should have worded a speech about taxes differently.

"Does my brother eat onions?" was O'Neill's reply. "I don't even have a brother."

"Is that a direct answer?" O'Neill was asked by a reporter seeking clarification. O'Neill suggested moving on to another subject.

Rostenkowski's call for a tax freeze that would permit this year's tax cut to take effect — unless the administration specifically supported changing it — generated some consternation among other House Democratic leaders who, like O'Neill, would prefer to see the tax cut repealed.

The next subject was a question on a planned visit to the speaker by the president's budget director: "Is David Stockman still coming up for a visit?"

"Who?" asked O'Neill.

"David Stockman."

"Oh, Stockman," O'Neill said. He cited reports that Stockman planned to be on his honeymoon.

"He won't be thinking about Tip O'Neill on his honeymoon," O'Neill observed.

Meanwhile, making things perfectly clear was what Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said he planned to do in his luncheon speech announcing he was bowing out of contention for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination. "And I intend to take my time," Udall added.

"I know what all of you are doing here ... you pay 14 lousy dollars and expect to get the story written before you digest" the first bite, joked Udall.

Udall proceeded to treat the National Press Club audience to a barrage of one-liners and reminiscences, including a claim that the main course — Cornish game hen — was left over from his unsuccessful 1976 campaign.

He then recalled his stop at a barbershop in New Hampshire, where he walked up to a group of men, extended his hand and said, "Mo Udall — running for president."

"Yes, we know," he said one answered. "We were just laughing about it."

Strength For Today

Two centuries ago, the vast continent on which we live was almost entirely a wilderness. Impenetrable forests covered a great deal of the domain. We began making a nation when we began felling trees. The settler's clearing expanded into a stockade, and the stockade into a village, and the village into a city.

The cutting down of trees and uprooting of stumps were necessary steps in getting the nation started. But what made that nation great was what came after — the building.

So in the life of everyone a lot of things have to be uprooted before we can start to live the good life. But this is not enough. There must be seed sowing and building. There must be education, patriotism and — most important of all — there must be worship.

The glory of a nation is in its alabaster cities, its golden fields of grain and in the glad hearts of its people.

Administration Finds Right Course

their trade associations and extra dollars to overturn the law. But theirs is a wrong-headed campaign that ought to be abandoned. This time, the Reagan administration is right.

This isn't to suggest that financial institutions won't feel a pinch. American Banking Association lobbyists complain the start-up costs of figuring interest withholding on several hundred million accounts could top $1.6 billion in the first year. Trade groups add that, in the short term at least, computer software and data processing bills will take the highest toll. Warned Coleman O'Brien of the U.S. League of Savings Associations: "Costs will be ... passed along to the consumer."

By crying "Big Brother" and "Bank

Failure," financial institutions have been able to orchestrate a cascade of letters from depositors to members of Congress. Our reporter, Michael Duffy, has learned that the ABA alone has spent several hundred thousand dollars on newspaper advertisements and has arranged for the distribution of 30 million fliers in members' monthly statement mailings. So far, the campaign has made progress: A majority of House members has cosponsored at least one of the 65 bills to repeal the controversial provision.

But depositors may overestimate their stake in this affair. The 1982 law exempts low-income and elderly savers who might otherwise suffer from lost interest (anyone with less than $150 in annual interest income is eligible for exemption). The new withholding law, meanwhile, will make little difference to those Americans who already pay estimated income tax each quarter.

While congressional critics charge that the withholding provision would be a disincentive to save, its repeal would be an incentive to evade taxes. Current law allowing simple declaration of interest income is already a license to steal; the Internal Revenue Service audits less than 2 percent of individual tax returns. Any measure which improves compliance with tax laws, fights deficits and reduces chances for higher taxes benefits all — bankers and depositors alike.

Most compelling is the fact that the RALEIGH — The story the young secretary told over coffee in the Legislative Building last week was enough to break anyone's heart. Her dog, a mutt of terrier and cocker breeds, was stolen from her North Raleigh home just a week before Christmas. She hadn't paid more than a few dollars for the fellow five years ago. But of all her possessions, that mutt was her most prized.

It's unlikely the police will ever catch the thieves but even if they do, the law wouldn't be very strict with them. And, if they had stolen a cat or pet rabbit, the law wouldn't punish them at all.

By coincidence, the same day the secretary told her story, the Senate Judiciary I Committee was studying a bill introduced by Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, that would change the state's larceny laws regarding animals. As the law currently reads, you can be charged with a "class H" felony — punishable up to three years in prison — for the larceny or deliberate harming of a horse, mule or farm animal. But the theft of a dog, regardless of its value, is only a misdemeanor and for that law to apply, the dog must be registered as personal property for tax purposes. The theft of any other kind of animal is not punishable by state law.

Allsbrook has proposed, and the state Senate has passed along to the House, a bill that would make theft of all animals either a felony or misdemeanor. If the animal is worth more than $400, it would be a felony. If less, it would be a misdemeanor.

Allsbrook says he became concerned about the state's animal larceny laws after a district attorney in northeastern North Carolina told him about the dramatic rise of pet thefts. Sen. Cary Alfred, R-Alamance, told the committee that he had been approached by his county's chapter of the Humane Society for the same reason.

As the price of dogs and cats rises and, as exotic animals like boa constrictors and cockatoos become increasingly popular as pets, animal theft becomes an increasingly popular endeavor.

Current state law is based on the English common law. In olden times, most animals ran wild. The law did not protect, as personal property, anything other than farm animals.

In committee, some concern was expressed about the bill. Noting that many animals stray away from home, Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, worried that someone could get dragged into court for taking a lost pet. Committee members agreed that the courts could reasonably be expected to dismiss such cases as long as the holder of the pet gave him up.

Alfred said he thought the bill should be tougher. He didn't like the $400 demarcation line between a felony and a misdemeanor. That value is the state's standard for all larceny. Alfred said the value of a dog is established by the

Tax Cut Suffers Shrinkage

NEW YORK (AP) — If you wonder where the impact of the big 1981 tax cut went, the cut that relatively few people seemed to detect by sight or touch or pocketbook, be it known that it has shrunk.

Not magically, as if by sleight of hand, but simply because of legislation duly passed by Congress and other legally constituted bodies.

The big tax cut, approved by Congress in August 1981 as the Economic Recovery Tax Act, was supposed to have reduced income taxes by nearly $750 billion over five years. But it isn't likely to achieve its goal.

Even the Federal budget for fiscal 1984, released by the administration this year, concedes that the tax reduction might amount to only $609 billion through 1986, largely because of the recession.

And, says Kenneth Simonson, a tax economist, that is "only the beginning of the sad tale of of ERTA's demise."

Simonson, who works for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and writes for its weekly Washington Report, says Congress and the president ignored the fact that tax increases previously passed had not yet taken full effect.

When various factors — including this oversight — are considered, Simonson claims, the net tax reduction through 1986 might be only $92 billion, "a far cry from the $750 billion tax cut intended by the 97th Congress."

He begins with the effect of the so-called windfall profit tax on oil, and other tax increases approved during 1980 to go into effect later. He adds in the Social Security payroll tax increase passed in 1977, effective in 1981.

In all, he says, these tax increases

WASHINGTON — No one would have ever expected Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan to be bombarded by boos as he addressed an audience of 1,500 credit union executives. After all, Regan is a former Merrill Lynch chairman who, in his present job, has helped to steer billions of dollars in new deposits to the banks and savings associations.

Yet many can't forgive Regan for persuading Congress last summer to establish a 10 percent withholding mechanism for interest and dividends. Most banks and thrift institutions, which are to begin withholding interest July 1, believe their new duties will cost them customers and profits.

Not surprisingly, they've marshalled

Nine Complete Public Speaking Class

Most Of Australian Brushfires Reported Brought Under Control

4-H PUBLIC SPEAKING WORKSHOP ... Participants in the public speaking workshop held by Greenville Toastmasters for 4-H'ers in Pitt County receive certificates of completion,

Nine young people recently completed a four-session public speaking workshop held by Greenville Toastmasters for area 4-H'ers. Receiving certificates of completion were Wendy Mair, Adonica Smith, Lynn Worley, Tanya Carter, Amber Harris, Ann-Marie Ambert, Rosa Carr, Tristie Newton and Dionne Vines. Charlotte Flanagan of Toastmasters presented the material to the participants during the sessions.

Waste Disposal...

such thing as a safe and secure landfill. There's no way waste can be put into a landfill and not be expected to turn up again," Hart said. Dick Leach of the Pamlico-Tar River Association agreed with Hart, saying: "The cost of treatment should not be a deciding factor in neutralizing hazardous waste." He said (Continued from page 1) ch a measure. Although Pitt County has no active hazardous waste disposal sites, environmental engineer Tom Karnoski of the N.C. Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch said in a telephone interview today there are several old sites located in the county. Recorded sites include the Pitt County landfill, a site near Ayden, a tract near Farmville, the old Greenville city landfill and the Pitt County utility landfill. At the Pitt County landfill, he said, residue from a fire at an agricultural plant is buried as well as heavy metal sludges created by Union Carbide. "Neither of these is considered to be a problem," Karnoski said. "The landfill is monitored by ground water wells and none of the material has been found migrating off the site," he said. The site near Ayden has empty pesticide bags buried in a five-foot-square area and is not considered to be a problem. Karnoski pointed out that the list of disposal sites in this area was compiled in a voluntary study several years ago and is not a complete list. Burroughs Wellcome site manager John McConney told the board Wednesday night that his company believes "that all wastes, hazardous and otherwise, should be disposed of in the most responsible and safe manner possible." McConney, like others, said his company does not dispose of hazardous waste created by his company in North Carolina. "There is almost no manufacturing operation that doesn't produce some waste which is classified as hazardous as a byproduct of its processes. Those that cannot be handled through approved methods of treatment on-site are shipped to authorized landfills in other states. Gradually those sites are closing their doors to out-of-state customers. More and more states are forbidding the transporting of hazardous wastes over their highways. We are seeing our options disappear," McConney said. David Searce of Eaton Corp. told the board that his company was not in favor of disposal laws more stringent than federal regulations. "The regulations need not be more stringent than federal regulations to protect people," he said. Claude O'Shields, chairman of the state board, said the panel is in favor of recovery, reprocessing and recycling of hazardous wastes and favors the use of a landfill only if there is no other alternative. Within 30 days, he said, the board will submit recommendations to the General Assembly that the board be allowed to toughen-up EPA standards now waiting to be approved. Dr. Morrow said she hopes the board's plan will win approval during this session of the General Assembly.

officials said firemen battled flare-ups near Melbourne. The fires left an ashen trail of seven wasted towns, burned-out sheep farms and blackened skeletons of cars on the roads, authorities said. South Australian state fire officials said the charred vehicles contained the incinerated bodies of drivers and passengers, including a family of five, imprisoned by the inferno. "People are dying as they try to reach their homes," said a firefighter in Lorne, Victoria, where many of the townsfolk fled to the beach for safety. "We can't stop it ... It's just like a holocaust. We don't know where to start looking" for bodies. The firestorms encircled Adelaide, a city of 1 million in South Australia, and burned out of control near Melbourne, the state capital of neighboring Victoria and Australia's second largest city after Sydney. Huge clouds of smoke and dust forced the closure of major airports in Melbourne and Adelaide. Authorities said 12 volunteer firemen died near Cockatoo, a tiny hamlet 31 miles from Melbourne which was almost destroyed by the fire. While the men fought to stave off the blaze, Cockatoo mothers rushed 120 children ranging up to 12 years old to the local kindergarten school. "The children were wonderful, they never made a sound," said teacher Lola Tilley. "They placed wet towels over their heads and never complained despite the air being thick with smoke." "How they weren't killed by the flames or lack of air, is a miracle," said one of the fathers, David Adams, who sat on the school roof pouring water on the menacing fire. Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser suspended his election campaign today and flew over the devastated areas aboard an air force jet, promising all possible federal assistance. He has declared a state of emergency in both South Australia and Victoria and ordered 1,000 members of the armed forces to help exhausted firemen. Victorian state Premier John Cain said that more than 2,000 homes had been destroyed in Victoria alone and police estimated at least 100 more were ruined in South Australia.

He said that at one time ednesday, at least 100 fires were burning in the state. Police said some had been set deliberately. Australia's worst bush fires occurred in 1939 when 71 people died in Victoria in what has become known as "Black Friday."

SAILOR'S BONES — A sailor's bones rest near the Scourge, an armed U.S. schooner sent to the bottom of Lake Ontario by a storm during the War of 1812. When the Scourge and its sister ship, the Hamilton, are raised — a project that may take years

AT BOTTOM OF THE LAKE — At the ready, despite 170 years on the bottom of Lake Ontario, a six-pound cannon pokes through a gunport on the Scourge, a U.S. Navy schooner that sank in a storm during the War of 1812. A cutlass is stowed

SUNKEN SCOURGE — In this artist's rendering a remotely piloted vehicle carrying its own lights and camera hovers over the starboard rail of the 60-foot-long Scourge, one of two armed U.S. schooners sent to the bottom of Lake Ontario by a storm

during the War of 1812. After poring over photographs and videotapes, artist Richard Schlecht reconstructed this view of the remarkably preserved vessel. Copyright National Geographic Society. (AP Laserphoto)

IN 300 FEET OF WATER — A female figurehead still graces the Hamilton, one of two armed U.S. schooners sent to the bottom of Lake Ontario in a sudden squall during the War of 1812. The remains of the Hamilton and the other vessel, the House Certified On Registry

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The William H. Long House, located on the corner of Cotanche and East Fourth streets in downtown Greenville, has been certified as a property included in the National Registry of Historic Places in the United States.

The Long House is the fourth property in Greenville to receive this designation. The other three are the Robert Lee Humber home, the Jones-Lee House and the old section of the Pitt County Courthouse, all in or near the downtown area of town.

Allison Harris, a survey specialist in the state Division of Archives and History, presented certification papers to members of the law firm headquartered in the house — Malcolm Howard, Robert Browning, Stanley Sams and Richard Poole. Howard accepted the certification on behalf of the firm. The official designation paper was signed by William S. Price Jr., director of the N.C. Division of Archives and History and state historic preservation officer.

The certification, read by Ms. Harris, notes that the Long House has been approved by the National Register of Historic Places,

PRESENTATION CEREMONY ... Allison Harris, left, presents the certification that the Long House has been placed on the National Registry of Historic Places to Malcolm Howard of the law firm of Howard, Browning, Sams and Poole, now headquartered in the house. Others in the photo are, left to right, Anna Long Joyner Rohrer, Robert Browning and Stanley Sams. The Long House is the fourth Greenville structure designated as a nationally listed historic place.

U.S. Department of Interior, as a property worthy of preservation as a historical place, one that has significant merit because of its historic, architectural and cultural values. Additionally, the house is also assured of protective measures in future planning in the area.

The large brick house, built in 1917-18 by Greenville attorney William H. Long, is an example of the neo-classical revival style popular at the turn of the century and in the early years of the 20th century.

Long (1866-1920) was a Greenville attorney and was a mayor of Greenville in 1901-03.

The Long home was owned by Anna Long Joyner Rohrer, until it was sold to the law firm in 1979. The house was renovated by the law firm under restrictive covenants, and was opened for business use in the spring of 1980.

Mrs. Rohrer, one of several guests present for the presentation ceremony, said she was "pleased with the manner in which the house has been renovated and is being used. It's really quite lovely."

PEKING (AP) — In its latest reunification bid, Communist China has invited Nationalist Taiwan to train and participate with mainland athletes as one China in the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

Surprised By Golden Fleece Still Investigating Big Drug Seizure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., has awarded his "Golden Fleece of the Month" to the General Services Administration, and the agency says it is surprised by the award.

Proxmire said GSA was "wasting $1.5 million — with a potential for $13 million more — trying to renovate an old train station in Nashville, Tenn." The station is not needed for federal office space and it has cost taxpayers $500,000 to clean up after pigeons that roosted in the station, he said.

"We're trying to do the same thing he wants us to do," said Herb Koster, a spokesman for the agency, which manages federal buildings. "We were surprised."

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The investigation that followed seizure of a plane in Beaufort County that carried a cargo of marijuana and cocaine is continuing, according to Sheriff Nelson Sheppard, who said the arrest total remains at 12.

Sheppard said his department and agents of the SBI, U.S. Customs office and federal Drug Enforcement Agency are continuing to look for suspects involved in the illegal drug operation.

He said probable cause hearings for the 12, most of them from Carteret County, have been scheduled for Feb. 28. Bond had been set initially at $1 million for each defendant on drug trafficking charges but Sheppard said some of the bonds have been reduced.

The four-engine DC-4 was seized after it landed Sunday morning at a dirt airstrip off N.C. 33 east of Chocowinity. Authorities found 12,000 to 15,000 pounds of marijuana and 10 to 12 pounds of cocaine, Sheppard said. Six people were arrested Sunday and the remaining six were apprehended Monday, some of them in Craven County.

Sheppard said authorities are still investigating the origin of the aircraft. He said the plane was moved Wednesday from the airstrip, located on property owned by Weyerhaeuser Co., to the local airport.

Free Butter And Cheese Going To More People

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — More people would get free butter and cheese under a federal program, and they would get it monthly instead of quarterly, under a proposal by state officials.

The officials will decide whether to approve the proposals on Feb. 25, said Lillian Gaskill, an administrator with the state Department of Human Resources.

Ms. Gaskill said about 1.6 million people in the state would qualify under the revised rules. Under the old rules, people who received or qualified for food stamps could get the cheese and butter.

She said the plan also calls for allowing agencies other than county departments of social services to distribute the commodities and for continuing to take people at their word when they say they are eligible.

Under the new proposal, civic or church groups or organizations like the Red Cross would be allowed to administer the distribution, she said.

Sonar Hunts For 'Nessie'

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The 1,400-year-old debate about the existence of the Loch Ness monster may be resolved soon by determining whether large objects detected in the lake are alive, a British scientist says.

Using sonar equipment, a team led by Adrian Shine has reported 40 contacts with objects in the Scottish lake which it believes could be the elusive Nessie and her offspring.

"If there are large creatures in Loch Ness, then they would appear on sonar just as we have recorded them," Shine said.

In the past twenty years more than 3,000 people claim to have seen a large creature in the lake, "whose waters could comfortably immerse every man, woman and child on earth three times over," Shine said.

Most often, Nessie has been described as a long-necked, dinosaur-like creature but countless other theories abound.

"We are excited," Shine said.

"If these contacts prove to be animate, then they will almost certainly be Loch Ness monsters. If not, then there are no Loch Ness monsters in the deep midwaters of Loch Ness."

Shine, in an interview Wednesday, said sonar scanning and underwater photographic techniques already available can determine whether the objects are alive and possibly end the debate on whether Nessie is fact or fiction.

"The fact is that it is technically attainable now, if only equipment can be deployed," he said, estimating the cost of the equipment at $462,000.

Shine reported details of the 40 contacts, made on two sonar scanners during a four-month stay at Loch Ness last summer, in an article in the respected weekly British magazine New Scientist.

He said the team conducted more sonar tracking than all previous monster-hunting expeditions combined and found 40 distinct signals that were far stronger than those of the fish inhabiting the murky 726-foot deep waters of the lake.

Most of the signals came from a depth greater than 198 feet, the deepest level at which fish are detectable. One signal recorded last May 16 was tracked for 68 seconds and seemed to descend from 224 feet to 376 feet, Shine said.

He said the team couldn't determine the exact size of the objects "but we're talking about something much larger than normal lake fish known at Loch Ness. It would have to be because of the strength of the sonar echo."

Shine said he expects the mystery to remain unsolved for a few more years, but he is busy recruiting 150 volunteers "wanting a cheap holiday with a difference" to work for between $75 and $110 a week on this summer's search for Nessie.

St. Columba, an Irish missionary, first reported seeing Nessiteras Rhomboptryx — popularly known as Nessie — in the loch in the year 545. In subsequent years, the 23-mile-long lake has been exhaustively analyzed, explored and photographed.

Shine said his team's biological investigations, which he called the most extensive since 1904, discount the theory that the purported monster is merely rotting vegetation lifted by gas bubbles produced by bacteria in the loch bed.

He said samples taken from the lake bed show no signs of gas "nor does an underwater television camera towed through the sediment."

He also said there was no evidence to support retired Scottish engineer Robert P. Craig's theory that Nessie is a pine log propelled from the bottom of Loch Ness to the surface by a build-up of natural gas.

Royal Couple To Tour Canada

OTTAWA (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana plan to begin a two-week Canadian tour June 14, but their infant son Prince William is staying behind.

The Royal couple will visit the four Atlantic provinces, Ottawa and Alberta, a release from Government House said Wednesday.

They will live on the Royal yacht Britannia during their tour of the Maritime Provinces, the release said.

The couple will leave Canada July 1. Further details of the itinerary will be announced later.

Renovated Latin American Church Awaiting Visit

By ISAACA LEVI
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — A renovated Latin American church, more sensitive to social issues and with a more disciplined clergy, awaits Pope John Paul II when he visits Central America next month.

The visit — the pontiff's fourth to Latin America — is expected to emphasize the church's commitment to human rights, individual liberty and spiritual freedom, a message to be repeated even more strongly when he visits his native Poland later this year.

The message will take on special significance in turbulent Central America, where civil war and factional violence plague most countries and threaten the rest. The church is almost always involved.

At least half a dozen priests are fighting alongside guerrillas in El Salvador and Guatemala and five hold public office in Nicaragua in defiance of a papal ban on such activity.

By contrast, a reawakened spirit is visible elsewhere in Latin America, where half the world's 780 million Roman Catholics live, churchmen say.

During John Paul's first Latin American pilgrimage — a 1979 trip to Mexico — he found a church deeply divided over ideological issues, experiencing growing radicalism among both priests and faithful.

At a meeting of the Latin American Bishops Conference, or CELAM, in Puebla, the pope reaffirmed the church's commitment to social justice, helping the poor and the oppressed. But he ordered clergy to stay out of politics and public office.

Only the church itself has the weight and authority to push for reforms — individual clergymen do not, he said. Priests and nuns must also stay single and chaste. Abortion and artificial contraceptives are forbidden.

John Paul's guidelines appear to have ended the crisis of the 1960s and 1970s, when dozens of priests and nuns quit to get married with or without dispensation, organized social protest movements, advocated marriage among the clergy and quick divorces and abortion for others.

Since then, church conservatives have turned more liberal and the hierarchy has been interceding in social issues it had ignored for centuries. The "Theology of Liberation" has lost its radical edge and become a fractured.

Chilean theologist Segundo Galilea in his book "Theology of Liberation after Puebla" says the movement has split at least four ways, and it persists only in a more moderate form.

"It's the law of the pendulum. After an epoch of crisis, today we have a rebirth of mystique," the Rev. Guillermo Melguizo, Secretary General of the Colombian Bishops Conference, said in an interview in Bogota.

"Maybe it is because evangelization has intensified, something the Puebla conference emphasized," said Melguizo, who keeps in close touch with the Bogota-based CELAM.

As evidence of changes in the church, Melguizo and others cite "a very notable resurgence of the priestly vocation, not only in Colombia but through Latin America" and a sharp increase in attendance at Mass.

John Paul's March 2-9 visit will include stops in Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Panama, El Salvador, Panama and Belize, followed by a visit to the impoverished Caribbean nation of Haiti to address a CELAM conference there.

Church leaders in Central America say they have gone through considerable soul-searching in defining their role in the midst of violent change. For centuries, the church in Central America was identified with the ruling classes.

Now priests have died fighting alongside rebels, and at least 30 church workers or members of the clergy have been murdered by rightist death squads in the past five years, including four American women and El Salvador's Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero. Romero was assassinated as he celebrated Mass in San Salvador in March 1980.

But a majority are preaching peace, regularly speaking out against torture, killings and other abuses and condemning violence by both rightists and leftists.

The revival appears strongest in countries like Argentina, where people widely believe the pope helped end the Falklands war with Britain when he made a quick trip there last June. His mediation also is credited with helping avoid war between Argentina and Chile.

Argentine churches, almost empty five years ago, now fill up regularly for Mass. A single priest was ordained in 1975, compared with 19 in 1982 and 23 expected this year, and the number of seminarians is growing.

In Brazil, the world's largest Roman Catholic nation,

Cardinal Paul Evaristo Arns of Sao Paulo has been helping church authorities in Argentina pressure that country's military regime to disclose the fate of 14,000 persons who "disappeared" and are feared killed.

Cardinal Eugenio Sales of Rio de Janeiro has been defending Brazilian prisoners against brutality. Fellow prelates speak out against laws banning labor strikes.

Although not very forceful in its pronouncements, the church is about the only opposition to abuses in Paraguay, ruled by Gen. Alfredo Stroessner since 1954.

In Chile, leftists accuse the church of not speaking out strongly enough for a return to democracy while conservatives accuse it of meddling in politics.

Cardinal Raul Silva

Henrique calls the criticism unjustified. The church, he says, is still "the voice of those who have no voice" under Gen. Augusto Pinochet's nine-year-old rightist dictatorship.

Don't Stare As Armadillo Dines

BY HARIHAR KRISHNAN
ATOKA, Okla. (UPI) — The local folk thought armadillos could do for Atoka what jumping frogs did for Calaveras County, Calif.

But now the easiest way to get your nose bloodied is just to mention The Great Armadillo Race of 1982 to anyone over the age of 5 in this southeastern Oklahoma town.

Atoka's entire population of 2,653, plus hundreds more from the territory, turned out for the much-bally-hooed the race that promised to make Atoka the armadillo racing capital of Oklahoma.

But the race never took place. Four of the five contestants died the night before the race. The fifth was declared the winner by default, though he was too ill to run.

The crowd went home disappointed and the cancellation of the race got more publicity than Atoka needed.

Joy Barnes, who heads the Atoka Chamber of Commerce and who organized the event, says the problem was that noone locally knew enough about armadillos. They are relative newcomers to the state, only moving up from the south in recent years.

"We had bad luck," she said. "We didn't know how to take care of the armadillos. Very few people in Atoka have seen an armadillo. In Texas, armadillos are not respected. We thought our race would be an expression of appreciation and love for the creatures."

"I thought of the race last year as a way of attracting attention to Atoka, and we needed to do something different," she said. "We gave such a buildup to the event and the response was overwhelming. Indeed it was."

But Atoka is not totally dismayed. They're planning another armadillo race to coincide with Western Heritage Week, starting July 26.

The race will be run on a 50-foot track between the Atoka County courthouse and the town's bank.

"There will be no entry fee," says Miss Barnes. "Just bring your armadillo and join the fun. We expect many more people to attend this year's race. We need something like this because this is a very quiet town."

There's nothing much else to attract one to Atoka. Miss Barnes and other townfolk feel the armadillo race, if it is run this year, might fill that vacuum.

She has been sending out flyers telling participants in the race to treat the armadillos like children.

She is also warning that armadillos need a steady diet of raw eggs, worms, insects and dog food.

And there is a special warning: "Do not stare at the armadillo when it is eating."

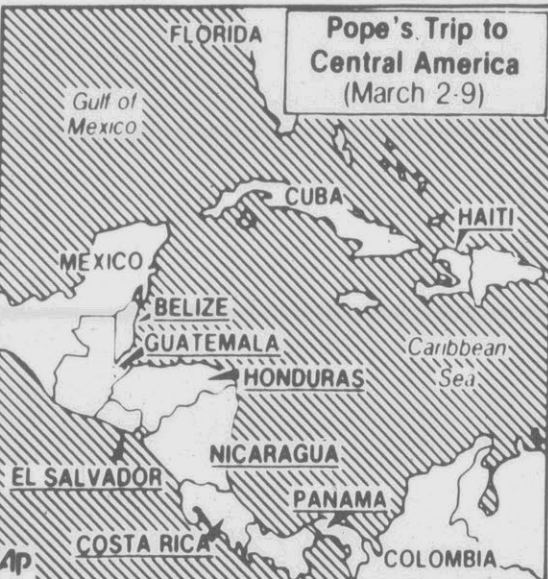

Still Discussing Namibia Dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official says the United States has "an extensive series of discussions" going on with Angola toward a settlement of the long-standing Namibia dispute.

Chester A. Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, appeared before the Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Africa to provide an update on the complex diplomatic maneuvering over Namibia and to defend the Reagan administration's policy of "constructive engagement" toward South Africa.

Critics assert that achieving independence for South African-controlled Namibia will not be possible as long as Washington directly links such a settlement to withdrawal of Cuban troops from neighboring Angola. However, Crocker said the Reagan administration intended to adhere to its current approach to Namibia.

"Despite the inherent difficulties, the administration sees no reason to shift course and every reason to persevere," he testified.

Reagan Urges Federal Workers In Social Security

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is chiding federal workers for fighting a Social Security rescue plan that would require them to pay into the troubled retirement system.

But concerns on Capitol Hill, where the rescue plan is being debated, have prompted one key supporter of Social Security reform to suggest a delay in bringing the federal work force into the system.

Reagan, at a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, said he was confident that an acceptable bailout would be enacted by Congress.

But the president criticized groups representing federal workers for trying to scuttle the plan.

"It ill behooves them when this is a compulsory program for all the rest of the people in the country, that they should somehow be exempt," Reagan said. "Then where do we start drawing the line?"

Reagan also rejected arguments that current employees would be hurt by the recommended change.

"I don't see where they can say there's any threat to the existing program for existing employees in the newcomers ... being covered by Social Security," Reagan said.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., proposed the federal workers delay Wednesday during Senate Finance Committee testimony on the package drafted by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

The committee continues its deliberations on the plan next week.

After his appearance, Pepper said organizations representing active and retired federal and postal workers "are far more firm in their opposition to the package than even the elderly groups are."

Under the reform commission plan, Social Security coverage would be extended on a mandatory basis to new federal employees beginning Jan. 1, 1984.

The employee groups have opposed joining Social Security, claiming it would wreck their current retirement system. They are pressing their message with a million-dollar advertising campaign and lobbying blitz.

Pepper, the 82-year-old advocate for the elderly and chairman of the House Rules Committee, said waiting until Jan. 1, 1985, to bring new federal employees under Social Security would give Congress time to pass a separate bill with details of a new supplementary pension plan for those workers instead of "asking them to accept it on faith."

Pepper said he has met with representatives of the federal groups to suggest the one-year delay and it "seems to meet with a favorable reaction on their part."

Social Security Administration actuaries say the expanded coverage would bring in $200 million in 1984, $3.1 billion in 1989 and a total of $9.3 billion through 1989.

In a related development, Donald J. Devine, director of the Office of Personnel Management, said his agency wants to give the 2.8 million current federal workers the option of switching to Social Security and a new staff retirement program. Lower-paid workers would be better off if they made the switch, he said.

But Devine also told a House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee that the issue is "not fully resolved" within the administration.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the committee chairman, was noncommittal about delaying the coverage of new federal employees, saying, "I don't know how much money that takes out of the pot."

However, congressional leaders have insisted that the rescue plan must be considered as a package and moves to make changes major provisions could kill it.

Also during the Senate hearing, Pepper reiterated his opposition to raising the retirement age saying, "I cannot and will not support any reduction in benefits."

After Pepper departed, Dole said his criticism "would have more credibility coming from a younger member of the Congress."

"He's the best witness we have for extending the retirement age ... Just the fact that he appears makes our case for us," Dole said, adding "I have the feeling we have a lot of support in the committee for raising the retirement age (from 65) to 66 and then indexing it to longevity."

Both Pepper and Dole served on the 15-member reform commission.

The Forecast For Friday, February 18

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers Friday for the Northwest and northern Plains. Showers are also due for the Western Gulf and northeastern coastal areas. Snow is predicted for northern New England and cold weather is expected from the northern Plains through the Great Lakes and Midwest into the Northeast. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Heavy rains soaked North Carolina Thursday, causing some rivers to run high in their banks and resulting in some flooding in southeastern portions.

The National Weather Service said the Lumber River was above flood stage early this morning with flooding occurring in some low-lying areas. Reports also said small streams along the southeastern coast were near bankfull and that more rainfall was expected, adding to the problem.

At 9:30 a.m., Wilmington reported .79 inches of rain while New River was at .69.

The weather service advised residents of Onslow, Craven and Carteret counties to be alert for local flooding of access roads, highways and small streams. Rain had tapered off in Brunswick and Columbus counties but possibilities for flooding continued since more rain was expected.

Forecasters called for fair weather tonight, with lows dipping into the 20s and 30s. It will be partly cloudy on Friday. Afternoon highs will be in the 50s with some 40s in the higher mountains.

On the coast, small craft advisories were in effect today for strong easterly winds that averaged 20 to 30 knots today. The winds will decrease to north at 15 to 25 knots tonight, and to 10 to 15 knots on Friday.

Low pressure moved northeast along the coast of Georgia and the Carolinas today. However the center of the low pressure should remain well offshore.

Ranked 29th In State Pay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The average state employee in North Carolina earned $1,295 a month as of October 1981, a national organization of state employee groups says.

The figure — amounting to $15,540 a year — gave North Carolina a rank of 29th among the 50 states in average pay for state employees, said the report by the Assembly of Governmental Employees.

State workers' salaries nationwide have been increasing at the rate of 6 percent to 7 percent in the past five years, said assembly research director Robert Pruitt.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading has been re-evaluated and declined 1 1/4 cents to 44.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too little of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is lower and the live supply is moderate for a light demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,691,000, compared to 1,713,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated today in a continuation of the decline that set in Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 5.67 Wednesday, lost another 1.59 to 1,085.84 by noon today.

Losers held an 8-5 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market drew some support from a continuing flow of statistics pointing toward a recovery from the recession.

As the trading day began, the Federal Reserve Board reported that the nation's factories operated at 67.8 percent of capacity in January, up from 67.3 percent the month before. Capacity utilization had been in an almost uninterrupted decline since mid-1981. But analysts said traders still seemed doubtful that the market was ready to make a clean break through the 1,100 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.

Beatrice Foods led the active list, up 1/4 at 24. Blocks of 200,000 and 100,000 shares of the stock changed hands at 23 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index lost .31 to 84.87. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.29 at 381.49.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 32.64 million shares at noon, against 36.45 million at the same point Wednesday.

Pirates Top Spiders In Two Overtimes

A Staff Report
East Carolina University's Pirates battled through two overtimes and finally pulled out a 79-75 victory over the University of Richmond last night in an ECAC-South basketball game.

After The Dunk
The basketball bounces off the chest of East Carolina's Johnny Edwards (33) after he had stolen the ball and raced downcourt for a slam dunk during action last night in Minges Coliseum against Richmond.

Richmond's Bill Flye (45) attempted to stop the play but failed. In the background is the Spiders' Bill Dooley. ECU won in double overtime, 79-75. (Reflector Photo by Katie Zernhelt)

Roanoke Sweeps Final Games From Chargers

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School wound up its regular season last night with a pair of basketball victories over Ayden-Grifton. The Northeastern Conference champ boys took a 54-48 decision, while the Roanoke girls, also conference champs, won, 49-33.

The victory left Roanoke with 17-3 records for both teams as they rest up now for the NEAC tournament which begins Monday.

Ayden-Grifton drops off to 12-9 for the boys and 6-15 for the girls.

In the boys' game, both teams played it evenly through the first period which ended in a 10-10 deadlock. In the second quarter, however, Roanoke began to pull away, building up a four point lead for a 26-22 edge at the half.

In the third quarter, Roanoke scored 16 more points, while holding the Chargers to just ten. That made it 42-32. Ayden-Grifton tried to rally, outscoring the Redskins, 16-12, but fell short.

Ricky Highsmith led Roanoke's scoring with 18 points while Greg Everett had 16. Ayden-Grifton was led by Calvin Peterson with 13 and Tyrone Gay with 10.

Roanoke's girls slipped into a 10-8 lead after one period, then steadily pulled away in the second quarter. The Squaws outscored A-G, 18-10, to take a 28-18 lead at the half.

In the third period, Roanoke tacked another point to the lead, 10-9, taking a 38-27 lead into the final period. In that, they outscored the Lady Chargers, 11-6.

Sheila Howell led Roanoke with 12 points while Dezela Jones had 11. No one scored in double figures for Ayden-Grifton.

The Chargers wind up their regular season on Friday, traveling to North Pitt on Friday.

Down by as many as 17 points in the first half, the Pirates battled back and did not even the score until Bruce Peartree hit a 22-foot jumper with one second left in regulation time, 69-69. Each team scored four points in the overtime, with each missing on chances to pull out the victory.

Then, in the second overtime, Charles Green tipped in a missed shot to put ECU ahead, 75-73, and after Andy Heher tied it up once more, Barry Wright hit two free throws and Peartree added two more with four seconds left to wrap up the win for the Pirates.

The game was not without controversy. An apparent scoring error left the door open for the Pirates to make their comeback.

With about six minutes left, Kelvin Johnson hit a jumper to put Richmond into a 61-52 lead and Johnny Edwards quickly cut it back to 61-54.

Meanwhile, however, the scoreboard malfunctioned, jumping Richmond's score from 61 to 71, and ECU's basket was not immediately put up. Coaches from both benches began coming to the scorer's table to ask the score. As the ECU score was being corrected, a foul was called on Barry Wright, sending Richmond's John Newman to the line.

"Things got very confusing at that time," official scorer Woody Peele said afterwards. "The scoreboard operator was still trying to make sure that the score was right, coaches from both teams were still coming to the table to ask about the correctness of the score."

According to the running play by play, kept on press row, Newman made the first of his two shots, missing the second. The official scorebook, however, had him missing both. "I didn't see it go it, and if it did, I have to blame it on all the confusion distracting me," Peele, who has kept the ECU book for over 15 years, said. "I wasn't made aware that there was an error until after the game was over."

Richmond coaches came back to the scoring table several times, asking not only about the score, but the time, but never mentioned anything about a possible error until after regulation time had been completed. The officials then checked the book and ruled it correct, sending the game into the first overtime.

Richmond did not have its bookkeeper at scorer's table to serve as a back-up.

"This game won't make that much difference in either team's season," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said later. "It's not going to affect the seeding or the conference standings. If the point was missed, it should have been talked about earlier than the end of regulation time. That's history then. But I think it was an honest mistake if it was a mistake. Anyway, our kids think they won it, and nobody's going to take that away from them."

"When it comes to the tournament, it's going to be whoever plays the best for three days. Neither East Carolina nor Richmond is going to have a bye, and neither of them is going to get an at-large bid from the NCAA," Harrison added.

The Spiders, who bulled their way out to a 17-point lead in the first half, losing ten of it by halftime, burned the nets up for a while. They shot 70.8 percent in the first half, and hit their first nine shots in the second half. After that, however, they made only four of 14 in the stretch and the two overtimes. Richmond was also perfect from the line in the first period, seven-for-seven, only to go eight of 16 in the second half and overtimes, giving them several opportunities to have put the game away.

East Carolina, in contrast, shot well in the first half, hitting 52 percent, but also cooled off in the second half, making 44.1 percent. However, thanks to 13 turnovers — many of them forced by the Pirate defense — the Pirates got 10 more shots at the basket, hitting on two more of them. They also made 15 of 23 shots at the line during the second half.

Richmond scored the first four points of the game, and in the first five minutes, built up a 12-3 lead. They continued to bang away at the Pirates, led by Newman and Tom Bethea running their lead to 33-16 with 7:35 left in the first half.

"We weren't very pretty," Harrison said. "We did some awfully unintelligent things. (Richmond) played a completely different tempo than they did (in the first game). They've been struggling and apparently decided to pick up the tempo and gosh, they did it."

"They beat us down the floor and got us in the paint on defense then they stood up and jumped it in," Harrison said.

The coach said he had not anticipated Richmond's guards being as offensive as they were, nor the team having the quickness it showed. However, since Newman replaced Bill Flye in the starting lineup, the Spiders have much more quickness.

The Pirates finally started to get back into the game in the final six minutes of the first half, trimming ten points off the Spider lead, led by Johnny Edwards, who scored six points down the stretch, making it 41-34 at intermission.

Richmond moved the lead back out to 11 early in the second half, but after that, the Pirates steadily began to chip away at the lead, inching back slowly but surely. They reduced it to four on two free throws by Green at 53-49, but Richmond pulled back out by nine, 61-52, before the Pirates again rallied to within three, 63-60, with 3:35 showing, but the Spiders ran it back to seven, 68-61 with 2:11 to play on two free throws by Bethea. Over the next minute, Richmond twice went to the line with one-and-ones, only to miss the front end each time.

Edwards then made two jumpers to cut the lead to one, 68-67, with 40 seconds left, and Jeff Pehl went to the line with 12 seconds left with a one-and-one, and the chance to seal the game for the Spiders, but he made only the first, missing the second. That opened the door for Peartree to tie it with his jumper at the horn.

Richmond moved back out by two in the first overtime, but Peartree made two free throws to tie it. Wright then put the Pirates up by one, but Johnson hit a jumper to return the lead to the Spiders, 73-72.

Edwards tied it up, hitting the first of two free throws, and Richmond missed a shot at the end that could have won it once more.

Then, in the second overtime, East Carolina moved out by two and held on for the victory, sealing it with Peartree's two free throws with four seconds left.

Edwards led the Pirate scoring with 26 points, while Green had 15, Peartree had 12 and Wright, 11. Richmond was led by Newman and Bethea with 18 each, while Johnson added 15.

Both teams pulled 31 rebounds. ECU was led by Green with ten and Edwards with nine, while Pehl had six to pace Richmond.

The Pirates return to action on Saturday, hosting Navy in another ECAC-South game.

ECU Inks Va. Star

Gary London, a 6-3, 190-pound strong safety from Hampton, Va., has signed a grant-in-aid to attend East Carolina University.

The London signing brings the total players signed by the Pirates to 27.

London, a second-team all-state choice as a tight end and defensive end, attends Bethel High School. He was a first-team all-region selection and a first team all-district choice, both offensively and defensively. He was the Most Valuable Player in the district for the offensive line.

London will also play in the Virginia State High School All-Star game.

He is the brother of Mike London, who just completed a four-year career as a defensive back at the University of Richmond.

He chose ECU over N.C. State and Clemson.

Daytona Speeds Give A Lot To Think About

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Driving a stock car at more than 190 mph on Daytona International Speedway's high-banked trioval can give you a lot to think about.

"You really can't ever relax like you would in a car cruising down an Interstate," says two-time defending Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip. "The straightaways can give you a bit of a breather, but not when there's traffic out there — especially slower cars."

"If you're running out there with somebody like Bobby (Allison) or Richard (Petty), you pretty much can anticipate what they're going to do," he added. "But, some of those guys who don't really know what they're doing... whew! That can make it real tough."

Waltrip is one of 72 drivers taking part in today's Uno Twin-125 qualifying races, which will decide positions 3-30 for Sunday's $1 million Daytona 500.

Those two 36-car fields offer a case in point. The fastest car in one of the races had a lap average more than 30 mph faster than the slowest car.

"If those (slower) guys get down out of the way, it's not so bad," says Ricky Rudd, who already has clinched the pole position for Sunday's big race. "But some of those guys back there in the pack will get to racing and forget about the leaders coming up on 'em from behind. It can get pretty hairy."

All of the entrants in the qualifying races established an official lap speed during the three days of time trials that ended Wednesday. The top two spots for the 500-mile were locked in during Monday's pole qualifying.

Cale Yarborough appeared to wrap up the pole when he drove his new Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS around the 2.5-mile, high-banked track at an average speed of 200.503 mph, a Daytona record. However, Yarborough crashed on the next lap and had to withdraw the car.

That left Rudd's 198.864 lap in another Monte Carlo as the best effort, placing him on the pole for the 500 and for the first of the twin qualifiers. Geoff Bodine, driving a Pontiac Grand Prix, took the guaranteed outside position for the big race and gained the pole for the second qualifying dash with a fast lap of 197.920.

The top 14 finishers, excluding Rudd and Bodine, in each of today's 50-lap races will gain positions in Sunday's field. The next 10 spots will be determined by previous quali-

Terrapins Whip Tar Heels, 106-94

By The Associated Press
Maryland played better than anybody expected — as far as the opposing coaches were concerned — as the Terps scored 66 points in the second half and whipped third-ranked

North Carolina 106-94 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game last night.
In other college basketball action involving ACC teams, Duke beat Stetson 89-80, Wake Forest topped Clemson 86-82.

Three Still On Prepster Poll

By The Associated Press
For the second consecutive week, The Associated Press North Carolina High School basketball poll remained virtually unchanged.

All six first-place teams remained atop their respective class polls, with Greensboro Page (4A), Brevard (3A) and West Montgomery (2A-1A) leading the boys and Gastonia Huss (4A), East Bladen (3A) and Bandys (2A-1A) leading the girls.

Four of last week's six second-place teams retained their slots.

COACHES' CORNER

By CHARLIE HARRISON
ECU Men's Basketball Coach

One of the most difficult things to identify and define is the role of each player on a team. One of the most difficult things for a basketball player is to know and accept his role on a team.

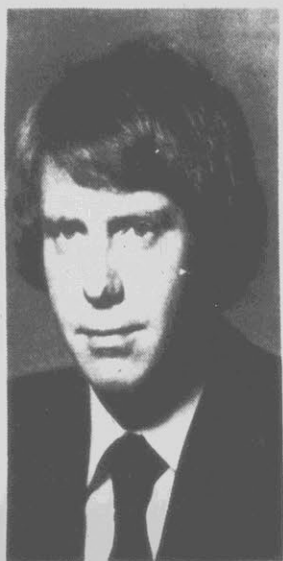

Once a program has been established, the degree of difficulty of this identification and acceptance crisis is somewhat diminished. Yet, at ECU this year because of injuries, cheating defenses, and lack of overall size, roles have often changed.

I believe it's a tribute to players who can be flexible and continue to make a positive contribution to a team. Such is the case in point when I look at certain individuals on this year's ECU Pirate team. Thom Brown has played the role of the sixth man — playing eight to 15 minutes a game — playing the role of a stabilizer. Because of an injury his role changed drastically being called on not just to become a starter, but a D.R. (Designated Rebounder) against much larger adversaries. Thom's time went from an average of 15 minutes per game to an average of almost 36 minutes a game over the past nine games. He even played 50 minutes without a substitute in the George Mason game.

Tony Robinson has had several great games at the point guard position and has sacrificed some scoring tendencies to become the on-the-floor quarterback. His best games have not been reflected in his offensive stats. Johnny Edwards continues to be the smallest post player in the area but his stats show he can be successful even against the "legit" Big Man.

Barry Wright continued to out-run and out-work most of his opponents. His role changes each game and he has been asked to play guard, small forward, big forward, and at times even found himself as a post player both offensively and defensively. Bruce "Tree" Peartree has been a scorer as a starter and as the first sub and John Williams has changed from a football quarterback to a sometimes starter and stabilizer on the hardwood. Charles Green has another role — one of playing not only against more physical opponents (which he had already proven he could do) but he must now go into the physical "paint" area again with a very uncomfortable shoulder.

So, what's this all about? It's just some isolated incidences of a team that has adjusted. Maybe they're not the biggest or quickest or most talented. They have been one of the most flexible groups I've ever been associated with and hopefully the foundation has been laid mentally for a winning program. One thing for sure, regardless of the outcome of the remaining games, those that follow this group will have to play awfully hard to top their effort and if all players on any level will look and see this team as they are and how they've played — they too will know what the word compete really means.

North Carolina State whipped UNC-Wilmington 90-69 and South Carolina downed Georgia Tech 61-53.

"Maryland played well in the first half," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "but I never dreamed they would play better in the second half."

The Terps, trailing 46-40 at halftime, outscored the Tar Heels 29-8 in the first 10 minutes after the intermission to take a 69-54 lead and later extended their advantage to 83-60.

They padded their 12-point lead to 23 even after Adrian Branch, the team scoring leader, went to the bench with 12:26 left after picking up his fourth foul.

Branch, who had 17 of his 24 points at halftime, pumped in two three-pointers to launch a 13-point streak soon after the second half started to put Maryland ahead 55-48.

Jeff Adkins scored a career high 25 points for the Terps, 18 in the second half, and Ben Coleman had 22 while hitting his last nine field goal attempts.

Michael Jordan led North Carolina with 25 points, but after scoring 15 in the first half he was held in check by Herman Veal until Maryland was ahead 83-62. Matt Doherty scored 21 for the Tar Heels and Sam Perkins 20.

It was the second loss in a row for the Tar Heels, 21-5, and their first in the ACC, where their 8-1 record tops Virginia's 8-2. Maryland is 15-6 overall, with a 4-4 mark in league play.

Clemson freshman Anthony Jenkins came off the bench to hit five three-point goals down the stretch to lead the Tiger's comeback try which failed as Wake Forest held on 86-82.

Kenny Green, starting in only his second game, led all scorers with 26 points. Green entered the contest last night in Clemson averaging just 5.4 points per game. He scored seven points in the first meeting between the two teams last month.

Wake Forest extended a 47-40 halftime lead to 14 points, 68-54, with nine minutes to play. But Clemson cut that to within three, 68-65 by scoring 11 straight points over a three-minute stretch.

Center Murray Jarman, who led Clemson in scoring with 19 points, had six points during the Clemson rally. And Jenkins scored a deep corner bucket to keep Clemson within three points, 82-79, with 22 seconds to play.

Russians Seek To Find Potential Greats Early

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is conducting genetics tests on infants to see if athletic ability can be forecast, perhaps even going so far as identifying potential gold medalists in Olympic events dominated by young athletes.

Studies of blood groups and skin types are part of the sports research program at Moscow's State Physical Culture Institute, the country's leading school for athletes and coaches. Sports morphology — the selection of young athletes on the basis of biological maturity rather than age — is a major area of research at the institute.

Soviet scientists are trying to identify children who could benefit the most from early training at elite schools by studying inherited physical traits, X-rays of body parts and typing of muscle fibres.

"We are working out a method for very early forecasting of athletic ability, even in the first year of life, on the basis of genetic markers," said Prof. Boris Nikityuk, a leading researcher.

He said more than 20 blood types are being studied as one indicator of athletic ability.

"We have already proved a correlation between certain skin textures on children's hands and their motor ability," Nikityuk said. "Our objective is to direct kids into sports they are physically best suited for and avoid sports that would not be good for them."

Swimming and gymnastics for women are prime examples of sports that require extensive training from childhood in order to excel on the international level.

Although Soviet sports morphology research dates back to the early 1970s, Nikityuk said the research on genetic markers is something new.

"We are still in the experimental stage," he said, adding that the results will be released at an international symposium on sports morphology scheduled in Poland next June.

The institute's 2,000 fulltime students are taught by a faculty of 460 at the modern campus in northern Moscow. The plant includes 19 gymnasiums, a stadium, ice rink, indoor running tracks and shooting ranges, classrooms and laboratories.

Students can specialize in one of 17 sports disciplines, including gymnastics, track and field, boxing, wrestling, basketball, soccer and ice hockey.

Myers contributed 24. The taller Wolfpack blocked a total of 15 shots, with LThurl Bailey batting five away and seven other State players blocking at least one.

State shot a weak 45.2 percent, but the Seahawks were able to connect on only 35.2 percent. The Pack also had a 53-36 margin in rebounding, with Bailey and Cozell McQueen grabbing 12 apiece.

Brad Jergenson scored 17 points and South Carolina led all the way to beat Georgia Tech 61-53 in Columbia, S.C.

The Gamecocks scored the game's first three buckets and later built a 15-point lead in the second half in coasting to their 16th win against seven losses.

Georgia Tech dropped to 10-12 with the loss.

The Gamecocks collected 14 points from Jimmy Hawthorne and 10 from Kenny Holmes. The games leading scorer was Mark Price of the Yellow Jackets who had 20.

Iowa Hawkeyes Slip By Indiana In Big Ten

By The Associated Press

As far as the North Carolina basketball team was concerned, the Maryland Terapins picked the wrong time to find the three-point range.

Relatively ineffective for most of the season with their long-range bonus shots, the Terps suddenly couldn't miss Wednesday night as they bombarded the nation's third-ranked team 106-94.

"The shot was there, so I took it," said Adrian Branch, who sank two of the long-range baskets to launch a 29-8 Maryland streak at the start of the second half. "Only this time, I made them."

All told, the Terps hit half of their 18 attempts from beyond the three-point line after coming into the game with a .297 average. Branch, who had been 4-for-27 from the three-point range, hit 5-of-10 this time.

"We owed them one," said Branch, referring to North Carolina's six straight victories over the Terps. "I guess the law of averages caught up with them."

North Carolina Dean Smith tipped his hat to Maryland.

"Maryland deserved to win. They outthrust us and quicked us to the loose balls during their stretch run. They were well prepared. They knew what they had to do, and did it."

It was the second consecutive loss for the Tar Heels, 21-5, and their first defeat in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season after eight victories.

Maryland, 15-6 overall and 4-4 in the ACC, trailed 46-40 at halftime but took the lead for keeps with a 13-point string to go up 55-48. A three-point by North Carolina's Matt Doherty broke the string, but the Terps added another eight in a row to make it 63-51 and they extended their lead to 69-54 with 10 minutes remaining.

Maryland's staggering 66-point second half helped the Terps run up their highest point total ever against a Tar Heel team. The previous high was 105 in an ACC tournament game in 1974.

Meanwhile, second-ranked Indiana was upset by No. 16 Iowa 58-57. In other action involving the nation's Top Twenty, No. 8 Villanova stopped Providence 64-58; No. 17 Syracuse tripped Seton Hall 96-68 and No. 19 Oklahoma edged Oklahoma State 64-63.

Top Ten
Greg Stokes scored 22 points and Bob Hansen snapped a tie late in the game and then protected Iowa's slim lead with two free throws in the closing minute as the Hawkeyes edged the Hoosiers.

Randy Wittman, who scored a game-high 33 points for the Hoosiers on 16 of 21 shooting, hit a three-point field goal with six seconds left and the Hoosiers had one more chance to win after Hansen missed the first of a one-and-one free throw opportunity. However, Iowa stole a Winston Morgan pass to protect its second triumph over the Hoosiers this year.

"Both teams played really hard," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "The basketball is not nearly as good as the hustle. Iowa took advantage of more things than we did and those three straight baskets by Hansen down the stretch, that kind of broke our back."

Indiana led 50-46 when Hansen went on his tear, with his final basket giving Iowa a lead it never gave up.

"It was a great win for our guys," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "We've got three pressure games down the road and this really helps."

John Pinone and Stewart Granger had four free throws apiece in the final minutes night as Villanova held on to beat Providence.

Villanova led 51-45 with 6:58 remaining and then was given a scare as Providence pulled within one point on two free throws by Carl Hill and a three-point play by Keith Lomax with 5:42 to go. However, the Wildcats slowed the pace and went into a stall, forcing Providence to foul.

"Down the stretch our experience really told," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino. "When we have enough of a lead, we can go into a stall and force fouls because we have good foul shooters."

Second Ten
Erich Santifer scored 15 points in the first five minutes of the second half to lead Syracuse over Seton Hall.

Santifer's second-half spurt, combined with accurate long-range jump shooting by teammate Leo Rautins, proved to be too much for the Pirates. Rautins drilled five long-range jump shots over a sluggish Seton Hall zone defense to lead the Orangemen to a 45-35 halftime advantage.

David Little hit a 20-foot jump shot with two seconds left as Oklahoma turned back Oklahoma State. Little took a pass from freshman center Wayman Tisdale and fired home the game-winner.

Others

Elsewhere, Keith Cleplicki scored 20 points as William & Mary rolled past VMI 77-65; Brad Jergenson scored 17 points to lead South Carolina to a 61-53 victory over Georgia Tech; Kenny Green had 26 as Wake Forest withstood a Clemson rally to gain an 86-82 win; Johnny Dawkins and Chip Engelland broke open a close game late in the first half and Duke held on for an 89-80 victory over Stetson; Ernie Myers collected 24 points to lead North Carolina State past North Carolina-Wilmington 90-69; Russel Todd scored 29 points as West Virginia beat Penn State 101-84 and Dave Hoppen scored 14 of his 16 points in the second half as Nebraska beat Kansas State 56-45.

Also, Billy Varner's 21 points led Notre Dame over Pittsburgh 60-54; Marc Wilson scored Minnesota's final four points to lead the Gophers to a 49-46 victory over Cincinnati; Claude Riley had 19 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to pace Texas A&M to a 74-62 victory over Baylor and Kevin Black had 19 points as Rutgers defeated Temple 79-73.

GCA Jr.'s Take Pair

TARBORO — Greenville Christian Academy's junior high school team won a pair of games yesterday in a tournament being played at Tarboro-Edgcombe Academy.

The girls downed TEA by a 20-18 score. Jackie Rollins led GCA with six points, while Stephanie Baker had six to pace TEA.

In the boys' game, Greenville Christian downed Nash-Edgcombe-Wilson Academy, 45-28. Greenville was led by Paul Hollingsworth with 13, while Thomas Taylor and Robin House each had 11. NEW was led by Robin Hendricks with 14.

The two Greenville teams play in the tournament finals today.

Charlotte, N.C. He turned in a fast lap of 192.304 mph only about six hours after the team's short track car was rolled off the truck.

NASCAR took at least a temporary step Wednesday toward making the races safer by giving the teams running the new Monte Carlos — as well as those running the Pontiac LeMans — an extra half-inch of rear spoiler height.

The rear spoiler is a rigid aluminum strip that deflects air flowing over the back of the car, providing downforce on the rear tires of the car.

In The Area

Merger Plans Are Reached

William D. Reagan Jr., president of North State Savings & Loan Corp. of Greenville, and F. Webb Williams Jr., chief executive officer of Martin County Savings & Loan Association of Williamston, jointly announced that an agreement in principle has been reached to merge the two associations.

The officials said that in order to effect such a merger, the Martin County firm will be required to convert from a mutual to a stock association. The conversion action, as well as entering into a definitive agreement with North State, has been authorized by the firm's board.

The conversion and merger is subject to regulatory approval as well as Martin County Savings' members approval to convert to a stock association, the officials stated. Terms of the conversion and exchange of shares in the merger are to be determined after an independent appraisal is conducted of Martin County Savings and the two boards agree upon final merger terms.

When the merger becomes effective, the resulting association will have offices in Greenville, Ahoskie, Windsor and Williamston. Additionally, the merger of Wilson Savings & Loan and North State is presently pending and should be completed in the near future, said Reagan. Total assets of the combined three institutions equal $141 million as of Feb. 1, he reported.

Community Corporation Formed

The West Greenville Community Development Corp. as an affiliate of the Pitt County NAACP and other service-oriented organizations.

Spokesman Ashley A. Fenner said the stated purposes of the non-profit, tax-exempt corporation are to respond to the economic, social, cultural and educational needs of the black community with respect to growth and stabilization in Greenville and Pitt County.

He said the group will plan for the development of a community center and will seek funding and volunteer assistance from local, state and federal sources. The organization's address is Box 1605, Greenville.

Gospel Singers To Perform

Gospel recording artists F.C. Barnes and Janice Brown will be presented in concert Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Holy Trinity United Holy Church. They will perform songs they have written and recorded.

The singing group, Praises of Holy Trinity, will also appear on the program which is being sponsored by the Men's Auxiliary of the church.

Two Injured In Collision

Stevie Rudell Jones of Route 2, Plymouth, was charged with driving under the influence and failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 7:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Third and Ford streets Wednesday.

Police said the Jones car collided with a vehicle driven by Lauraetta Teel Gatlin of 1104 Colonial Ave., causing an estimated $1,000 damage to the Gatlin car and $800 damage to the Jones vehicle.

Officers said both Jones and Ms. Gatlin were injured in the collision.

Stored Furniture Is Stolen

Greenville police today were investigating the theft of an estimated $6,770 worth of property from Star Planters Warehouse on Memorial Drive.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who said the theft was reported Wednesday, said the merchandise included 22 tables, 100 chairs, six bar stools, 3 sinks. Cannon said the furniture had been stored in the warehouse.

Tag Enforcement To Begin

Residents of Simpson must now display 1983 town tags or face a citation for violation of the town ordinance, a spokesman said today.

The deadline for purchase of town tags was Tuesday. Enforcement of the ordinance will begin immediately.

Council Calls Special Meeting

The City Council has scheduled a special call meeting for Monday at 5:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers at city hall.

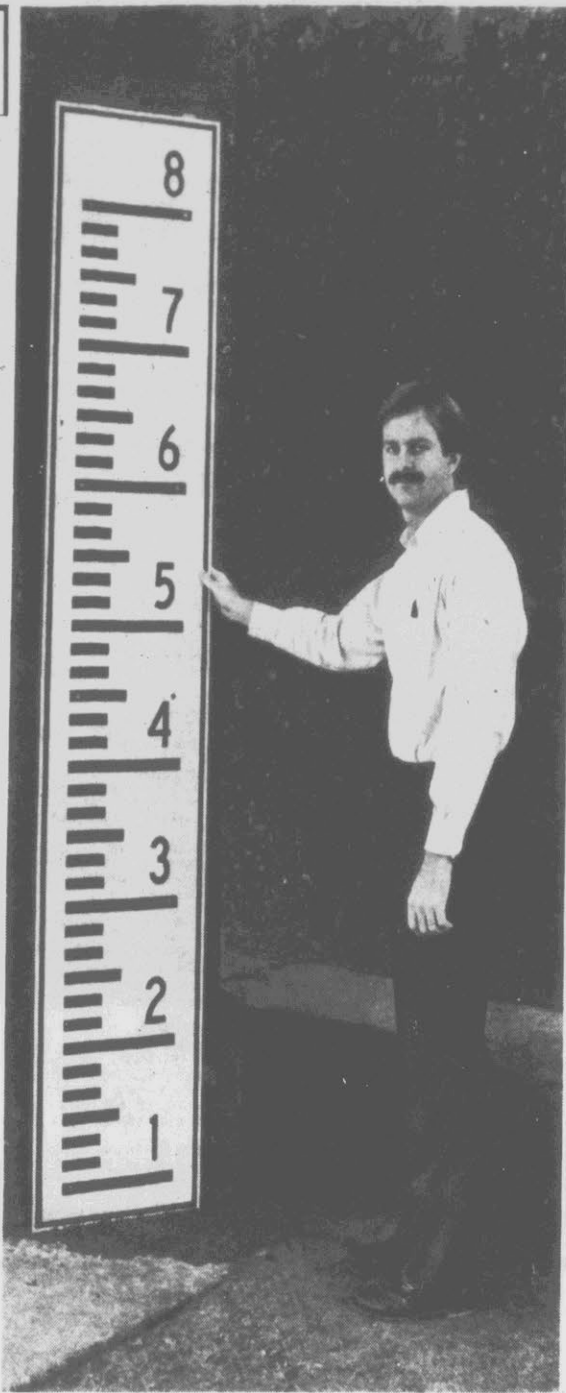

The council will consider resolutions approving the sale of disposal parcels and also annexation feasibility reports for the Heritage Village-14th Street area, North Greene Street-Memorial Drive area, Clifton Wilson property, and the Mumford Road-Country Squire-Shady Knoll areas.

A workshop in the first floor conference room will follow the call meeting.

Students Served As Pages

Nancy Sneed and Jody Martiel Ross of Greenville served as pages in the office of Gov. Jim Hunt during the week of Feb. 14-18.

Miss Sneed is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.T. Sneed, 209 Churchill Drive, and is a sophomore at J.H. Rose High School. Miss Ross is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ledyard Ross, 217 Churchill Drive, and is also a sophomore at Rose.

HIGH WATER INDICATOR INSTALLED — Lee Murphey of the city of Greenville engineering department poses with one of the two water depth indicators installed in the underpass on Dickinson Avenue. Murphey said the signs will let motorists read the depth of water under the underpass during heavy rains. The signs were installed with the cooperation of the state highway department and the railroad, Murphey said. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Two Seek Abandon Rail Lines In N. C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two railroad companies plan to seek permission to abandon over 270 miles of North Carolina rail lines, saying business on the lines doesn't justify continued service.

State and local officials say the proposed move by Seaboard Coast Line Railroad Co. and Norfolk-Southern Railroad would stifle development and boost shipping costs in some areas.

The lines targeted for abandonment by the two railroads are:

— an 89-mile segment of track owned by SCL from Wilmington to New Bern, which serves about 30 major industries and Camp Lejeune.

— 51 miles of Norfolk-Southern track between Marion and West Shelby.

— 24.6 miles of SCL track between Henderson and Creedmoor.

— 12.7 miles of the Fairmont Branch line, owned by SCL.

— 23 miles of SCL track between Lumberton, St. Pauls and Duart.

— 11 miles of SCL track between Pittsboro and Moncure.

— 19 miles of SCL track between Halifax and Scotland Neck.

— 29.7 miles of SCL track between Norlina and Roanoke Rapids.

Nuke Freeze Resolution Put Before Legislators

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to add North Carolina to the list of states supporting a nuclear weapons freeze had support from several cities in the state even before it was introduced in the Legislature Wednesday.

Meanwhile, other lawmakers sought backing for a resolution opposing the Reagan administration's plan to give tuition tax credits to parents of private school pupils.

Thirty-three of the state's 50 senators and 54 of 120 state representatives have signed the nuclear freeze resolution.

Sponsored by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, and Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, the resolution urges President Reagan and Congress to seek an immediate halt to the nuclear arms race, to negotiate a mutual and verifiable freeze with the Soviet Union and to seek a mutual reduction in nuclear arms.

If enacted, a copy of the resolution would go to Reagan, the North Carolina congressional delegation and Gov. Jim Hunt.

"Renewed vigor in the search for peace is an obligation we owe not only to ourselves and our constituents but to our children and to generations yet unborn," Hancock said at a news conference.

"I think there is broad support across North Carolina," Helms said. "It is not a Democrats-Republicans issue or liberals-conservatives."

Marse Grant, editor emeritus of the Baptist publication Biblical Recorder, agreed.

"We who are deeply concerned about this issue ... are not 'pinks' and we're not KGB agents hired by the Kremlin," Grant said. "We're loyal, dedicated Americans."

The resolution cites the growing nuclear capability and threat of annihilating civilization and says "the further stockpiling and developing of nuclear weapons adds nothing to our defense and in fact makes us less secure."

Several North Carolina cities and towns including Charlotte, Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Boone, have passed freeze resolutions, as have the Baptist State Convention and the North Carolina Association of Educators.

Nuclear freeze resolutions have been approved by at least one chamber in 17 state legislatures. Freeze referendums were on ballots in 10 states in November and passed in nine.

Representatives of 11 educational and labor groups appeared at a news conference to support a resolution opposing the Reagan tuition tax credit plan.

The resolution, sponsored by Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, and Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, warns the administration plan would "lead to an educational caste system" and segregation of social and economic classes.

It says the plan would violate the principles of equality of opportunity and separation of church and state and "virtually would destroy public education ..."

"I am appalled that President Reagan has proposed a system ... which would in effect dismantle one of the most successful, democratic educational systems that the world has ever known," said Martha Pritchard, president of N.C. Association of Educational Office Personnel.

Toni Fink of the N.C.

Congress of Parents and Teachers said all 11 of the state's congressional representatives oppose the tax credit plan while Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and John East favor it.

Diamont said quick passage of the resolution by the Legislature would put pressure on Helms and East. "The 1984 election is coming up," he said.

Attribute Fatal Fire To Wrapping Paper Igniting

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Christmas wrapping paper piled on a built-in electric heater in an apartment atop the Solomon Towers housing project for the elderly ignited Tuesday's fire that led to three deaths and left at least 160 temporarily with a home, fire officials said. Wilmington Fire Inspector Ed Benton said Wednesday that the red and green wrapping paper ignited the bed of an 11th floor apartment and then spread to a closet and then a chair. The intense heat shattered the window over the bed, feeding oxygen to the fire and turning the tiny room into an inferno with temperatures of almost 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit, Benton said. Hallways on the 11th floor were quickly filled with smoke.

"Anytime you get a fire building up like this and you suddenly get a lot of oxygen it's going to get hot quick," Benton said.

Sylvia Barnes, 49, and Thelma Brittain, 68, died of smoke inhalation and Mitchell D. Kannan, 72, of heart failure, according to Benton. Kannan was pronounced dead at 2 a.m. Wednesday at the hospital.

Medical Examiner Dr. Leon Andrews would not give an opinion on the cause of the deaths.

One other person was in critical condition at New Hanover Memorial Hospital Wednesday. The hospital declined to release the person's name. At least 18 people were treated at the hospital following the fire.

The fire broke out in Mrs. Barnes' room. Benton said it probably smoldered for an hour before two passersby, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Powell of Maco, spotted flames coming from the building and called firemen at 10:44 p.m.

Firemen found Mrs. Barnes' body lying in the hallway outside her room, number 1103, and Mrs. Brittain's lying in her room, number 1102, near the door to a balcony overlooking Castle Street. Neither body was burned, Benton said.

The heat was not the most deadly menace to the 168 residents of the building, however. It was the poisonous gases from the fiery furnishings — the mattress, bedding, carpet and chair — that emitted thick black smoke.

"The building is fire-resistant and people say the building won't burn, but the things inside burn — that's what kills people," Benton said.

The architect Leslie N. Boney Jr., who designed Solomon Towers 10 years ago, was out of town Wednesday and could not be reached for comment. His partner Charles H. Boney, who was fielding questions about the building, was hesitant to discuss the fire and referred most questions to the Wilmington Fire Department.

Boney said the building had no sprinklers because sprinklers were not required by the state building code at the time it was designed.

Boney said several special safety features were incorporated in the building because it was intended as a residence for the elderly. These include multiple fire alarms, smoke detectors and panic alarms.

Each floor has manually activated fire alarms in the hall, Boney said. Manual fire alarms must be pulled to notify the fire department of a fire, while automatic alarms are triggered by the presence of smoke or heat.

Smoke detectors in each apartment would be triggered by the presence of a fire, Boney said. Officials of the Wilmington Fire Department said the smoke alarms appear to have functioned properly.

Each apartment also was equipped with a special distress alarm that would allow residents to call for help if they were ill or needed assistance, Boney said. Jones said those alarms ring in the building manager's office and in a security guard's apartment. The security guard responded to alarms on the system Tuesday night, Jones said.

About 2 p.m. Wednesday, officials began allowing residents to go up to their rooms, accompanied by housing authority workers, to get necessary belongings. Meanwhile, architects and engineers worked on the upper floors assessing damage and trying to determine how long it will take to repair.

Officials said they could not say how long it would be before the residents may return to their apartments.

Consider Screening For Birth Defects

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Neural tube defects, which kill or cripple one in every 500 children born in North Carolina, could be detected by a screening program being considered in the General Assembly.

A bill filed last week by Rep. Margaret Tennille, D-Forsyth, with the help of Dr. Barbara Burton of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, seeks $1.8 million over two years to start the program. But Ms. Burton says it would be worth the expense.

"It could reduce the number of children who must be institutionalized," she said Wednesday in a telephone interview, adding that hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent each year caring for children with the defects and their mothers.

The abnormalities in the nervous system of a developing embryo can lead to stillbirth, infant death, paralysis and mental retardation, Ms. Burton said. Among the more severe outcomes are anencephaly, in which the brain is not normally formed, and spina bifida, which can cause paralysis and retardation.

Anencephaly always results in death, she said.

"There are also often obstetrical complications," Ms. Burton said. "Many obstetricians feel it's not good to go through with it from the mothers viewpoint."

North Carolina has the highest incidence of neural tube defects in the nation, an incidence that is even higher in western parts of the state, she said.

"The highest risk for neural tube defects is in Appalachia, cutting across North Carolina," she added. "Evidence suggests the environment there may contribute to the problem and nutrition is suggested to have some role. In addition, we know that in the geographic isolation in the mountains people tend to intermarry more."

A simple blood test can detect the defect in 85 percent of pregnant women by the 20th week, Ms. Burton said. If two successive tests show the presence of an abnormal amount of alpha fetal protein, which is produced by the embryo, further tests would be indicated. All of the tests would be sent to Bowman Gray or the University of North Carolina School of Medicine in Chapel Hill for analysis.

If tests of the amniotic fluid surrounding the fetus and "pictures" made by reflecting sound waves off the embryo confirm the defect, the mother can be virtually certain of the diagnosis, she said.

Counselors would explain the situation to the mother, but the decision about continuing the pregnancy would be left to her, Ms. Burton said.

"At least one patient chose to continue her pregnancy to term," she said, adding that child did not survive. "Certainly most would choose to terminate."

State funds, if approved, would pay administrative costs of the program as well as screening costs for those who could not afford the process.

"That's important, because it tends to occur more commonly in lower socio-economic status women," Ms. Burton said. And, while whites are much more likely to have neural tube defects than blacks, it is virtually impossible to predict who might have it.

"It occurs 95 percent of the time in families with no history of the defect," she said.

Innocent Pleas By 4 In Colcor Cases

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Four defendants pleaded innocent Wednesday during arraignment proceedings in U.S. District Court to charges related to the FBI's Colcor probe.

Henry James Brice Jr. and Hallie Moscoe LaNeave pleaded innocent to mail fraud and aiding and abetting mail fraud. Brice, who also pleaded innocent to conspiracy to defraud, faces seven counts while LaNeave faces three.

Each could receive a $1,000 fine, five years in jail or both for each count. Brice was free on $15,000 bond and LaNeave on $10,000 bond. Their trials are scheduled for April 25 in Raleigh.

Ronald D. McKeithan and Danny Paul Price each pleaded innocent to two counts of interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle and face possible $5,000 fines, five years in jail or both for each count, police said. The two were free on $3,500 bond each.

Benny Joe Ward and Ronald D. Ward pleaded innocent to interstate transportation of a stolen motor vehicle and aiding and abetting that crime. Each was free on $3,500 bond each and faces a $5,000 fine and five years in jail.

The men were among more than 20 arrested last year following an 18-month FBI investigation into corruption in Columbus County.

Trials for McKeithan, Price and the Wards, all arrested Jan. 20, are scheduled for March 28 in Wilmington.

Few Science Fraud Safeguards

By PAUL RAEUBURN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The severe penalties given to a former Harvard doctor for falsifying research results may not be enough to stop scientific fraud, say some authorities, who urge laboratory directors be more aggressive in supervising the work done in their labs.

On Tuesday, the National Institutes of Health moved to withhold federal research funds for 10 years from Dr. John Darsee, 34, formerly of the Harvard-affiliated Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, and now at a hospital in Schenectady, N.Y.

Dr. William Raub, associate director for extramural research and training at the National Institutes of Health, says closer supervision by laboratory directors is essential to the prevention of scientific fraud.

"The closer the involvement of the senior lab chief, the less likely there will be misunderstanding," Raub said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Senior researchers "bear a significant responsibility" for the work done under them, Raub said. "They are role models for the younger scientists and they set the tone in terms of discipline, objectivity, intellectual vigor."

Darsee's research was conducted in the laboratory of Dr. Eugene Braunwald and financed by a $122,371 contract between the Brigham and Women's Hospital and the National Heart Lung and Blood Institute, a part of the National Institutes of Health.

In addition to proposing that Darsee be barred from additional funds, the institutes have asked for the repayment of the money.

"The fact that the study results were irrevocably compromised meant that the heart, lung and blood institute did not get what it paid for," Raub said.

Darsee, who has admitted falsifying data, has not returned telephone calls by reporters seeking comment on the action by the National Institutes of Health. Braunwald has denied in writing to the NIH that he was not careful enough in supervising Darsee's research.

Raub currently has nine cases of suspected fraud under investigation, but he quickly adds that those nine are drawn from some 30,000 researchers supported by NIH grants and contracts.

Half a dozen cases of fraud have been uncovered in the last several years, involving such distinguished institutions as Yale and Cornell universities, among others.

Most of these incidents have occurred in large laboratories, where the typical arrangement is for a distinguished scientist with a record of fruitful research to supervise the work of perhaps dozens of graduate students, young professors and research fellows.

Dr. Philip Majerus, a biologist at Washington University in St. Louis and past president of the American Society for Clinical Investigation, said in a telephone interview that the size of these laboratories makes it extremely difficult to monitor the laboratory's researchers.

"If you have 20 people working on 20 different research projects, there's no way to keep up with that," he said. "In many of the instances (of fraud) in the past few years, that's been the problem."

"That's not to say that big laboratories are not good," he continued. "Some of these big laboratories are very good because they get very good people."

Dr. Howard Morgan, dean of research at Pennsylvania State University, chaired an NIH panel that examined the Darsee case at Harvard. "The panel's point of view is that some senior person should be looking at the raw data," Morgan said in an interview.

By "raw data" he said he means the handwritten notebooks kept by researchers to record the results of their experiments.

Many senior researchers even list themselves as authors of research reports from their laboratories without ever examining the raw data, said Majerus. "Most of the time people don't get caught, because most of the time (the report) is not false," he said.

Army Reports Drug Use Off

DARMSTADT, West Germany (AP) — American soldiers in Europe have cut down their use of heroin but still drink heavily and smoke even more marijuana since the Army began warring against drugs four years ago, according to a military survey.

The use of hashish and cocaine also was increased during that period, says the latest quarterly report on the drug-assault by the Army.

A "dramatic drop in the use of heroin, amphetamines and Quaaludes" was also reported on Wednesday.

Twice as many soldiers sought help for alcohol problems than for drugs during the last three months of 1982, Col. Larry Lewis was reported as saying in Stars and Stripes, the daily armed forces newspaper based here.

Lewis, chief of the Drug and Alcohol Assistance Branch for the estimated 300,000 U.S. soldiers in Europe, said there was an average of 5,400 people per month who were in alcohol rehabilitation programs.

A summary of the Army's full scale battle against drugs and alcohol was given to Gen. Frederick J.

Kroesen, the U.S. Army commander in Europe, on Monday, the newspaper said.

"Most of the soldiers abusing alcohol are young enlisted soldiers," the report quoted Lt. Col. Mike Farmer, chief of the U.S. Army in Europe's Research and Evaluation Branch, as saying.

The survey found that 26 percent of the younger soldiers "smoke pot frequently, drink heavily, or both," the report said.

The report said that when the U.S. Army in Europe began taking urine samples for evidence of marijuana, "the number of smokers caught and sent for treatment jumped dramatically."

"During the last three months of 1982, the Army found fewer narcotics users (down 44 percent) and fewer dangerous drug users (down 25 percent). But, despite those drops, the number of soldiers enrolled in drug-rehabilitation programs was still "the highest number ... since 1979," it quoted Lewis as saying.

"Drug and alcohol rehabilitation had a success rate of 71 percent in 1982, the report said. In 1979, when the Army's campaign against drugs and alcohol began, it was 58.

Offer Revisions On Annexations

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A revision of annexation laws that would repeal all local laws on the subject was introduced Wednesday in the state Senate.

It is sponsored by Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, and Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie. Plyler was co-chairman of a study committee that came up with the bill.

The bill would require cities to identify areas being considered for annexation at least one year before they begin proceedings to annex the area.

The annexation process would be lengthened by making annexation reports available for 30 days instead of 14 before a public hearing and the hearing would be held within 45 to 90 days instead of 30 to 60 days.

Cities with populations of 5,000 or more would have to let water and sewer contracts and begin construction within 12 months after annexation, under the bill.

If the construction does not begin on time, property owners could petition for deannexation and eventually could get a refund of any city taxes plus 8 percent interest.

The bill would require annexation plans to show the impact on volunteer fire departments and tax districts. It also attempts to protect long-time rural fire department employees from losing their jobs after annexation and the departments from losing revenue sources.

Plyler said existing annexation laws were written in 1959, before many services like water and sewer were involved.

"Any law that is 23 years old should be looked at," he said.

He said he expected efforts to allow residents in areas being considered for annexation to vote on the matter and to prohibit cities from crossing county lines to annex an area.

HUNG OVER — An emergency towing squad worker climbs onto the cab of a tractor-trailer truck which came to a precarious halt above a traffic lane on Philadelphia's Schuylkill Expressway Wednesday after crushing a passenger car and plunging through a guard rail. Four people were injured, one seriously, in the collision which halted traffic in both directions on the Expressway for several hours. (AP Laserphoto)

Probe Cross-Burning At Home Of Minister

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Wilson Lee says his letters to the editor protesting recent Ku Klux Klan activity may be the reason a cross was found burning in his yard and shots were fired at his home earlier this week.

Statesville police and the FBI are investigating the cross-burning and shooting in Lee's front yard shortly after midnight Tuesday.

Lee and his wife Alice were awakened after midnight by two young men who live in their neighborhood. Their neighbors had heard a gunshot and then saw light from the burning cross.

"I have come through about 25 years of the (civil rights) struggle," Lee said. "All through the '60s. The whole time I have had threats as to what would be done. This is the first time they have come this near."

Lee, 65, said he had written a letter to the editor that was published last month in The Statesville Record & Landmark in which he chided city, county and state officials for not taking action after a band of Ku Klux Klansmen showed up at the Iredell County Jail and tried to post bail for a black man accused of raping a white woman.

The sheriff's department said the Jan. 29 incident at the jail wouldn't be investigated because the group of Klansmen had done nothing illegal.

Lee contends that police should have been called in to at least search the cars of the Klansmen, who he says "presumably were armed."

"If it had been just the reverse; if it had been four carloads of blacks, they would have had every policeman called on duty that they had — maybe highway patrolmen notified and so on," he said.

"They would have found some way to search their cars. If they'd been black they would have held them up under any pretense until they could have gotten warrants to search their cars," Lee said.

The FBI is involved in the probe in an attempt to determine whether Lee's civil rights were violated, Robert Pence, head of the FBI in North Carolina, said Wednesday.

Pence said the results of the probe will be sent to the U.S. Justice Department or investigated further if violations are found.

"A full-scale investigation would depend on whether there had been any threats or letters or calls that would indicate there had been any harassment, or if their rights to live a free and unprejudiced life were violated," Pence said.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Preventing Ear Infections in Children

My 4-year-old daughter has been taking antibiotics for almost a whole year. She goes to a play group and almost every two weeks, she comes down with another infection. I was sent to an ear specialist because her hearing isn't good. Now after all this time, he wants to put tubes in her ears. I hear so many bad things about this that I don't know where to turn. I hope you can help. — Mrs. C.R., N.J.

Dear Mrs. R.: Years ago, when young children developed ear infections, it was common for them to have a thick discharge of pus from their outer ear canal. This was due almost always to an infection of the tonsils, and particularly of the adenoids. When the adenoids were removed, there was a marked drop in the frequency of attacks of ear infections, or otitis media.

Since the advent of the antibiotics, many children like yours have been bombarded for long periods of time with antibiotics. A new and strange phenomenon is thus created. The thick pus that formerly broke through the eardrum and into the outer ear canal is now sterilized by the antibiotics. The fluid now becomes thick, gelatinous, and has the consistency of honey.

This fluid stagnates behind the eardrum and does not readily disappear. The thick fluid now impairs the mobility of the eardrum and is responsible for a distinct loss of hearing.

It now becomes essential to liberate that thick, motionless fluid. This is done by opening the eardrum through the outer canal. This is known as a myringotomy. By this technique, done under general anesthesia, the fluid is extracted. Almost always the procedure is performed under a microscope for better visualization.

Nature's mechanism tends to close the surgical opening made in the drum and often fluid will reaccumulate. To avoid this, a tiny polyethylene tube is placed into the myringotomy opening to keep it open and aerate it. These tubes are often left in place for many months. Usually they are pushed out into the ear canal when their function has been completed.

This is the procedure that is being contemplated for your child. It is an excellent procedure and is well accepted by ear surgeons everywhere. Almost always the adenoids and sometimes the tonsils are removed at the same time that the eardrums are opened. This is most essential if repeated episodes of this type of ear infection are to be avoided.

There was a time years ago when tonsils and adenoids were routinely removed at the age of 4, 5 or 6. The pendulum has swung toward conservatism. Far too many pediatricians arbitrarily and dogmatically deny the efficacy of the T & A (tonsillectomy and adenoidectomy). Often this does a great injustice to the child who is kept on antibiotics for months and months when the removal of the tonsils and adenoids would reduce the frequency and severity of these infections.

Rigid, fixed attitudes in medicine must be avoided. The past experience of ear, nose and throat doctors suggests that the pendulum has swung over too far and is doing some children a great injustice.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Archeological Digs Prove Vikings 'Not So Crude'

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

YORK, England (AP) — A wool sock, a toilet seat, Oriental silk — out of a millennium of mud comes proof that the globe-traveling Vikings weren't the ravaging rovers historians made them to be.

"The old English image of the Vikings as simply blood-thirsty bands of pillagers vanished with these finds," says Richard Hall, an archaeologist.

"We dug down and found a cocoon of waterlogging, a time capsule of everyday life," said Hall, who led a tour Wednesday through a muddy concrete hall fashioned out of the hole left from the excavation.

Hall was one of some 400 people who, for five years, dug up the leftovers of the lives of an estimated 30,000 Vikings. Workers discovered the sophisticated settlement when a central district of York was leveled for rebuilding.

Starting April 14, 1984, electric cars will carry tourists through a tunnel of time that goes back to 866 A.D., when the Vikings came to York, 188 miles northwest of London.

Archaeologists are eager to display what they found in a $3.9 million reconstruction of Jorvik, the Anglo-Saxon name for the settlement.

"We have skeletons, 15,000 objects, a quarter-of-a-million pieces of pottery, some of the best preserved Viking-age buildings ever discovered and five tons of animal bones," Hall said.

The digs revealed intimate details of Vikings life. There is a toilet seat, keys, tools, games counters, the seeds in the blackberries they picked and a knitted woolen sock.

"They were a great trading nation with a sophisticated monetary system," Hall said.

"We will show the range of products in which they traded — silk from the Far East, amber from the Baltic, pottery from the Rhineland, cowrie shells from the Indian Ocean.

"We will display the workshops where they operated wood-turning lathes and made coins."

More than 500,000 people visited the hole during excavations, from May 1976 to 1981. Visitors coming to see the exposed ruins, as well as the cathedral of York Minister, museums and art galleries have made tourism the third-largest industry here. Candy and cookies-making are the two top industries.

The Vikings surged out of what is now Denmark and Norway at the end of the eighth century A.D. Their first recorded raid in Britain was in 793, on Lindisfarne monastery on the northeast England coast.

York, founded by Romans in the first century as a base for the Ninth Legion, was the second largest English city by the time the Vikings seized it from Anglo-Saxon kings.

The Scandinavians lost York when King Erik Bloodaxe was expelled in 954, but kept their influence under the rule of Anglo-Saxon earls in the newly created kingdom of England, until the Norman conquest in 1066.

York, or "Jorvik," was a trading center for Viking routes across the North Sea and around Britain to Dublin in Ireland.

Inhabitants who followed the Vikings built their homes on top of Jorvik. The Viking remains were preserved in mud kept moist by seepage from the rivers Foss and Ouse. The lower timber walls of houses and workshops, and a river wharf where Viking traders tied up, still stand.

Hall says 400 people including American, Hungarian and Polish students, as well as prisoners from the local jail and professional archaeologists dug down 30 feet to get "archaeological deposits unparalleled in England."

Excavators found "a lot of rotting wood, decaying vegetation and putrefying organic waste, contrasting with the prosperity reflected in the metalworking, silver pennies, jewelry and other luxury goods."

Archaeologists say the people of Jorvik had cattle, pigs, sheep, chickens and geese for food. The Vikings also ate fresh and salt-water fish, oysters, cockles and whelks, a kind of large sea snail. They also had carrots, celery, beans, apples and nuts and made herbal medicines.

Physically, the Anglo-Scandinavians looked much like the present inhabitants of York, judging from their skeletons, Hall said.

Claim U. S. Intelligence Agencies Behind MIA Mission Arrests

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A participant in a failed raid to rescue servicemen missing in Laos says U.S. intelligence agencies masterminded the arrests of two people in Thailand who worked on the mission.

Charles Patterson blamed the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency for the failure of the November mission, led by former U.S. Army Green Beret Lt. Col. James "Bo" Gritz.

"The CIA and the DIA are behind stopping this operation," Patterson, an ex-Green Beret Sgt., said from his father's home in Dinuba, Calif.

"I know they are," he said. "Not the U.S. government, but the CIA and the DIA. I believe President Reagan's a good man — he'll stand by his word. If they can find one prisoner he'll get the rest."

U.S. government officials have maintained that private rescue missions are interfering with official attempts to learn about prisoners of war or servicemen still missing in action in Southeast Asia.

Patterson said he knows Lance Trimmer, 43, and Lynn Standerwick, 25, who were arrested Sunday in the Thai-Laos frontier town of Nakhon Phanom, about 450 miles northeast of Bangkok.

Police there said the pair, who were released pending a Friday court appearance, are accused of possessing a high-powered radio transmitter, an offense punishable by five years' imprisonment under Thai law. Thai police said other "spy" equipment, including scuba gear and jungle fatigues, were found in the home where Trimmer and Ms. Standerwick were arrested, which reportedly previously had been inhabited by Gritz.

Although Trimmer told a Los Angeles Times reporter he was not connected with Gritz, Patterson said Trimmer and Ms. Standerwick had worked on the November mission, which ended with an ambush that forced the raiding party to flee for their lives.

"Lance was radio operator on the last operation and Lynn was a POW daughter who was helping on communications in the last operation," Patterson said.

He said that Ms. Standerwick worked on the operation "in the United States — she wasn't over there."

Patterson said he believes the military establishment does not want to find soldiers that have been declared dead.

"Why dig up a can of worms and have to pay all these families money that's owed them? It's easier to declare the man dead, pay the $10,000 (death benefit), forget about him," Patterson said.

As to Trimmer's denial of involvement with Gritz, Patterson said: "He's facing 28 years in a Thai prison. I don't blame him."

Patterson said Trimmer, now a registered private detective in Sonoma, was a communications officer with the Green Berets and that they served together under Gritz for about two years in the late 1960s.

Ms. Standerwick is the daughter of U.S. Air Force Col. Robert L. Standerwick, who was shot down over the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos on Feb. 7, 1971. His remains never were found.

She moved from

Lawrence, Kan., to the Orange County community of Garden Grove over a year ago to try to learn more about the whereabouts of her father and other missing servicemen, her mother, Carolyn Standerwick, said from Bellevue, Neb.

Patterson said he met Ms. Standerwick about a year ago and that she was a member of "Angels East," a group of POW-MIA daughters who worked with Gritz and which apparently was named after the TV series "Charlie's Angels."

The whereabouts of Gritz, who reportedly was planning another rescue mission, are unknown.

Policy On Vendors Termed Violation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's program allowing blind people to operate snack bars in government buildings is violating federal guidelines by making them state employees for retirement purposes.

State officials have drafted proposed legislation that would allow vendors to have optional retirement and health benefits from the state, in an effort to satisfy federal objections.

State officials have decided against a bill that would refund an estimated $900,000 that more than 200 blind vendors have put into the system since they were made eligible for retirement in 1970.

Under the federal Randolph-Sheppard Act of 1935, the state Division of Services for the Blind licenses the vendors and administers the program, which has 74 snack bars statewide in federal, state and local government buildings, and in some private buildings.

However, the Act envisioned the vendors as independent contractors with the state rather than state employees, officials said.

The state government puts no money into the program, which is supported by federal aid and 20 percent of the profits.

Stephen J. Cornett, regional commissioner for the U.S. Office of Rehabilitation Services, said a year ago that because the vendors had been designated state employees, the program has been put "into an awkward, possibly illegal, administrative posture."

Academy Award Television Focuses On Police Stress Awaits Mickey

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Actor Mickey Rooney, a four-time Academy Award nominee who has never won, says he "nearly flipped out" when he learned he was chosen to receive an honorary Oscar at the annual awards presentation this spring.

"I just fell out of my chair. I pretty nearly flipped out," Rooney said before going on stage Wednesday night for a performance of the play "Sugar Babies."

"There are so many awards given today ... one for the best beard, another for who gets up in the morning. But the Oscar shines in gold. If someone says they're aren't thrilled to get one, they're ready for the funny farm. To me, it's like winning the Heisman trophy," Rooney said from his dressing room at the Stanley Theater, where his show runs through Feb. 27.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced Tuesday that Rooney will receive an honorary Oscar at the 55th Academy Awards on April 11. In making the award, the academy cited Rooney's 60 years in show business.

Rooney, 62, has made more than 200 films, but, he said, "I never made a great motion picture in my life. Only memorable ones."

Rooney was nominated for Oscars for the films "Babes in Arms" in 1939, "The Human Comedy" in 1943, "The Bold and the Brave" in 1956 and "The Black Stallion" in 1979.

Previous recipients of the honorary Oscar include Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Alec Guinness and Lawrence Olivier.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — ABC News' "20-20" tonight takes a page from its time-slot competition, "Hill Street Blues," with a sobering examination of police stress — the malady that turns some cops into victims of America's violent streak.

This "20-20" segment is part of ABC News' ambitious two-week examination of "Crime in America."

Traditional TV has put its macho cops beyond the reach of stress. In self-defense, a cop kills a man. Fade to commercial. In the next 60 seconds, the cop puts his emotional house in order, just in time for the final credits and next week's continuing assault on crime.

NBC's "Hill Street Blues" is an exception to emotionless crime-fighting. The characters' black humor, eccentric behavior and violent reactions are honest-to-goodness manifestations of police stress.

When the normally temperate Detective Neal Washington (Taurean Blaque) accidentally killed an innocent man, the emotional scars lasted for weeks in the form of nightmares, insomnia and bouts of guilty conscience. He even tried to make amends with the widow, but she wouldn't let him off the hook.

Detective Washington's kind of stress is identified on "20-20" as "post-shooting trauma." It comes with the territory. Self-defense killings may be legitimized by internal police investigations. But the human feelings aren't dismissed as easily.

"20-20" talks to cops about coping with the bloodstains. In some cases, it has driven them to alcohol, wrecked their marriages and even caused suicide.

Cops talking about their feelings can help. "We do the kinds of jobs that nobody else wants to do," says one officer, "and society as a whole doesn't want to hear about it. I've got to talk about it."

The Miami Police Department offers a stress counseling service, but ABC says 80 percent of the nation's police forces provide no programs for psychological assistance.

ABC's report is important, but it is diminished by unnecessarily sensational recreations of several violent incidents.

It's one thing for ABC to replay a real killing to illustrate the split-second, life-or-death decisions cops must make. But when that point is made, what's the value of having one cop re-enact shootings, or to show twice how one officer was almost run over by an assailant's car?

In the past, "20-20" has used re-enactments wisely to reconstruct and better illuminate stories ("Saving the Life of the President" and "The Killing of Sadat"). But tonight's re-creations seem gratuitous.

News organizations shouldn't be in the business of staging events. Let Hollywood handle illusion. "Hill Street Blues" does it better anyway.

"The Fighter," CBS' Saturday night movie, is as simple-minded as its title.

Gregory Harrison, the heartthrob Dr. Gonzo Gates from CBS' "Trapper John, M.D.," is laid-off millworker Merle Banks, who takes up boxing because he needs the money and wants to win his father's respect.

No cliché is left unturned as Merle becomes successful in amateur brawlers' competitions. Meanwhile, his wife (Glynis O'Connor), the film's conscience, disapproves of the sport.

This anti-boxing film is not artfully done, neither in the heavyhanded haymakers it throws at the sport or in the staging of the fight scenes. Because "Rocky I-II-III" has elevated the art of boxing choreography, CBS seems to hide its inferior work in fuzzy filming and over-the-shoulder shots that obscure the punching. Harrison is CBS' in-house hunk, just as NBC has Erik Estrada, who was a boxer from the barrio in "Honey Boy" earlier this season. By comparison, Harrison is a heavyweight actor, exhibiting a gentle, amiable nature.

But his acting isn't good enough for him to forsake his marketable physique. In his last movie, Harrison disrobed as a male stripper. Maybe next time he could play a lifeguard. How about "Beach Blanket Gonzo"?

Storm Damage In 22 Counties

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Twenty-two counties sustained $96.2 million in damage from the fierce Pacific storms that raked California beginning Jan. 21 — with an estimated $22.4 million damage to Los Angeles County alone, according to newly released estimates.

The survey of damage to homes, businesses and public property, was issued by federal and state emergency officials Wednesday.

Johnny Cash Is Recuperating

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Johnny Cash, hospitalized for pneumonia, has been responding well to treatment with antibiotics and should be released soon.

Cash, 51, was admitted to Baptist Hospital on Monday and was placed in a room next to his wife, singer June Carter Cash, who underwent abdominal surgery Feb. 2, hospital spokesman Paul Moore said Wednesday. Cash was in satisfactory condition today.

Doctors gave a "very positive" prognosis for both, according to Moore. He did not know how long Mrs. Cash would remain hospitalized.

Black Vote Could Be Key To Chicago Mayor Race

By JOHN DOWLING
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Eddie R. Williams, pastor of the South Park Baptist Church, clears his throat and proceeds to hammer home the gospel that is sweeping Chicago's black community.

"We will vote," Williams intones as two dozen residents of the Pioneer Court old folks home listen in respectful silence. "We will vote because it is our duty to vote. Pass the message on that we are going to vote."

The message is repeated endlessly in senior citizens centers, churches and mass transit stations on Chicago's predominantly black South and West sides as blacks gear up for Tuesday's Democratic mayoral primary.

For the first time, a black is rated as a serious contender.

"I have the votes," two-term U.S. Rep. Harold Washington repeats at every campaign stop. "Now all I have to do is get them out."

That claim is open to dispute.

But in the last eight months, blacks have swarmed large numbers onto Chicago's voter rolls as a result of an impressive registration drive. Latest estimates of black ballot-box strength range from 600,000 to 670,000 of the city's 1.6 million voters.

Whites, who make up 60 percent of Chicago's population of 3 million, are mainly split between Mayor Jane M. Byrne and Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, son of the city's late mayor.

If Mrs. Byrne and Daley divide the bulk of the white vote evenly and blacks turn out in big numbers, Washington might sneak in.

For the last dozen years, blacks have had enough votes to oust white officeholders here if they found them irksome. Mrs. Byrne defeated former Mayor Michael A. Bilandic with votes from black wards in 1979. One of Daley's predecessors as Cook County state's attorney, Edward V. Hanrahan, also lost after antagonizing blacks.

After Mrs. Byrne's election, some South Side politicians started talking about supplanting her with a black in 1983. A Chicago Urban League study published in 1981 suggested "Blacks might more effectively determine the outcome" of this year's mayoral race with a voter participation increase of 5 percent to 10 percent.

The voter registration drive was launched last summer — in churches, at welfare offices and on street corners. One black pastor told his flock not to show up on Sunday without a voters card.

The first effects were felt in the Nov. 2 election. Republican Gov. James R. Thompson was expected to win easily over Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson. Instead, he barely squeaked through with a 5,074-vote edge, in part because of a large turnout in the black community.

Washington is hoping for a repeat in the turnout Tuesday. And he may get it.

"People simply feel good," Alderman Danny Davis says. "Not only about Harold Washington and the campaign. They feel good about themselves. I hear people saying, 'I wouldn't miss this election for anything in the world.'"

"It's turning into a crusade," William Grimshaw, an Illinois Institute of Technology political scientist, says. "I think blacks now have a much better sense of political power."

But Washington's prospects are iffy.

A Chicago Sun-Times poll shows him getting 49 percent of the black vote — far from enough to win — with 29 percent going to Mrs. Byrne and 11 percent to Daley. "That's a telephone poll," Washington scoffs. "You can't poll the black community by telephone. They aren't going to tell you anything."

Washington clearly is popular. At a mass transit stop he is besieged by autograph seekers. As his campaign car crisscrosses the city, blacks on street corners call out: "Good luck, Harold."

Back when Daley's father was in his heyday, blacks were among his strongest backers. But few of them were cut in on City Hall decision-making power. Grimshaw says this situation spawned "a tradition of puppetry" in South Side politics.

The civil rights movement, however, changed that. It spawned anti-City Hall candidates for minor South Side offices. The first breakthrough came in 1970 when blacks voted Republican and against Hanrahan, who had ordered a police raid in which two Black Panthers were killed.

Two years later, anti-City Hall blacks struck again when Daley tried to unseat U.S. Rep. Ralph H. Metcalfe, popular on the South Side. The mayor's candidate was buried.

In 1978, the popular Metcalfe died just before the congressional election but after the primary. That enabled ward leaders to insert in the congressional seat, Bennett Stewart, an easy-going black alderman and proven City Hall loyalist who, among other things, accidentally voted in favor of a tax break for segregated private schools.

Washington, a veteran of 12 years in the state legislature, easily won the seat two years later. Immediately, he began dropping hints about a mayoral run. Meanwhile, his candidacy has created in its wake numerous fights for seats in the City Council. There is a contest in every black ward.

"Elections in this city," Renault Robinson, a local housing official and avid Washington backer says, "will never be the same again."

MAN IN THE MIDDLE — For the first time a black is rated as a serious contender in Chicago's Democratic mayoralty primary. Two-term U.S. Rep. Harold Washington, center, is backed by growing ranks of black voters in a race against Mayor Jane M. Byrne, and Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley. (AP Laserphoto)

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Even the Young May Suffer Strokes

A girl who worked in my office with me is 30 years old. She was in perfect health. I know because I went to lunch with her the day before she suddenly had a stroke. Isn't it unusual for a person that young to have a stroke? Could it be that the family is not telling us the truth? — Mr. N.D., Ore.

Dear Mr. D.: It is indeed possible for a young person to have a stroke. It is rare but does happen because of a very special condition. It is known as a subarachnoid hemorrhage that results from a rupture of a blood vessel in the brain.

This is different from the hemorrhage that occurs in the elderly due to arteriosclerosis or high blood pressure.

This particular type of hemorrhage does occur in young people with a congenital defect of the blood vessels of the brain.

I have a smoker's cough. When I catch cold, the cough gets worse. I never know what kind of cough medicine to buy. — Mr. A.D., Ill.

Dear Mr. D.: A cough is a wonderful and remarkable mechanism that protects the body in health and disease. A cough is an explosive method by which the airway and the bronchial tubes are cleared of any irritation. The cough, a reflex action, protects the entire respiratory tree from foreign substances, polluted air, the accumulation of mucus, offending allergic inhalants, and the products of infection.

When there is the slightest irritant in the windpipe or an infection or inflammation in the bronchial tubes, a signal is sent to the cough center in the brain. This message is then relayed to the muscles of the chest and to the diaphragm. Then an explosive cough clears the passageway of the irritant.

There are two basic kinds of cough. The first is a dry one which is hacking and may be the result of irritation by tobacco, smoke or other pollutants in the inhaled air. The second is a productive cough that brings up the accumulated mucus, or pus that results from infection.

The treatment of a cough therefore depends on establishing the underlying cause. Once this is done, the doctor makes a decision as to whether to try to suppress a cough or to encourage it. Often a doctor will change the drug after a few days if there is any indication of an alteration in the nature of the cough.

There are many excellent over-the-counter cough medicines. Many doctors suggest them without writing prescriptions for complicated, compounded cough medicines. This formerly was time-consuming and expensive. As the advertisements say, "Ask your doctor or your pharmacist."

Over 60 Brokers Want Your Business. So We Have To Offer You A Better Deal.

For years, Americans have been taking rates of commission for granted when they went to Wall Street to trade stocks, bonds and other securities.

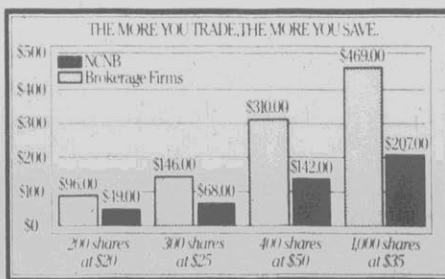

But that's all over now. At least, it is for people making their own decisions on the market.

Save 40%, Even 50% On Commissions.

Now NCNB introduces its new Brokerage Service, through an arrangement with Fidelity Brokerage Services, a member of the NYSE, ASE and other principal exchanges.

And we don't think you can find a better deal for your money anywhere in the neighborhood.

Here's why.

In the first place, you can save up to 50%, or even more, on the commissions you pay.

What's more, we negotiate commissions on trades that are over $50,000.

Second, while you save money, you can still get the fast service you expect.

NCNB's Brokerage Service: It's like having America's financial district right in the neighborhood.

After you've opened your account with us, you can call our toll-free number, place an order and get written confirmation the next business day.

Up-To-The-Minute Quotations: 1-800-438-1111.

Third, you can also get all the latest stock quotations. Just call anytime from 9 to 5.

Finally, you can also get the flexibility of dealing through 1) a Checking or 2) a Money Market Account at NCNB and/or 3) a margin account with Fidelity.

Plus The Best Banking In The Neighborhood.

Now, if you're going to do business with NCNB's Discount Brokerage Service, you'll also probably want to get in on our DeLuxe Banking service.

With a $2,500 balance in NCNB Regular Savings, or $10,000 in a Certificate you can get all the services you're likely to need at special rates or no charge.

Ask for the details. Nobody else offers anything quite like it.

Which, after all, is the way that you have to operate when you want to offer the best bank service — and the best brokerage service — in the neighborhood.

WALKING — Bonaparte, the sandhill crane who lost its lower legs in a coyote trap earlier this year, gets help with its first steps on his new longer man-made legs, made of plastic pipe and suction cups, from the man who made them — San Antonio bird expert John Karger, and the bird-lady Debbie McClellan, who takes care of Bonaparte. Later the legs will be made more permanent. Now that the bird is three-fourths his natural stature, the hopes are that he will do his mating dance and breed. (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, FEB. 18, 1983

YOUR DAILY

Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day and evening for you to rely more upon your prophetic insight. Advancement can now be gained by looking into activities that have not been part of your life.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Your success can be increased if you seek the guidance of experience persons. Exercise extreme caution in travel.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You know exactly how to make a better impression on the one you love, so follow through on such. Don't neglect duties.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Formulate a plan whereby you can ascertain what your true position is with associates. Cooperate more with co-workers.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of routine tasks that need doing instead of procrastinating. Take time to improve your appearance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you study the details concerning entertainment plans you have, you can be successful with them later. Use common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Gain the views of family members and then make your home more comfortable. Happiness can be yours for the asking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are able to entertain friends today after your work is done and have a delightful time. Plan your activities wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are in need of more income now and will be inspired just how to get it. Consult an expert before making any decisions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan for tomorrow's activity during spare time today. Attending a social affair tonight can be beneficial.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Coordinate new ideas with the plans you have in mind. Help good friends who in turn can be of service to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you show good friends that you value the alliance, you will gain their loyalty. Show increased devotion to loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put aside personal matters and handle civic affairs in a most efficient way. A quiet and restful evening is best for you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have many good ideas developing early in life. It is wise to plan a fine education that will include the study of foreign language and philosophy. There is likely to be much travel in foreign countries in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Fraternity Has ECU Chapter

A chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity has been organized at East Carolina University.
LeRoy Redden of Farmville, president of Beta Kappa Sigma, the graduate chapter which is sponsoring the new group, said the purpose of this fraternity is "to develop the ideals of brotherhood, service and scholarship among its members and promote the well-being of the university community."
Professor Clinton Dowling of the ECU School of Education is the chapter adviser. A reception was held in Mendenhall Student Center recently for the charter pledge group.

FOCUS
An American Legend
Today marks the anniversary of the death of Geronimo, the leader of the last major war between Native Americans and whites. He was the chief of the southern Chiricahua Apaches in 1876 when the U.S. government put the Apaches on a reservation in Arizona. Geronimo and his people escaped into Mexico, and from there he conducted a hit-and-run war against the U.S. for more than ten years. He surrendered in March, 1886, but escaped two days later, triggering one of the biggest man-hunts in U.S. history. Later, he was confined at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, where he died in 1909. Today he is remembered as one of the greatest Native American leaders of his time.
DO YOU KNOW -- Which tribe can boast of leaders like Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse?
WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER -- In 1900, one-third of America's labor force worked on farms.

There is no doubt that established partnerships have an advantage. You know what partner will do, or not do, in certain circumstances, and that can be a tremendous edge. Watch Californians Mike Passell and Fred Hamilton at work during the World Open Paris in Biarritz.
When you are interested only in game, it often pays to bid it while concealing as much about your distribution as possible. But if slam is under consideration, partners should exchange as much information as possible.
Even though his partner could do no more than raise to two spades, Passell was interested in slam. He showed his second suit and, when Hamilton raised that as well, Passell launched straight into a variation of Key-Card Blackwood.
North's response of five clubs showed either two aces or one ace and the king of hearts. Passell was sure that his partner held the ace of spades and king of hearts. Why? Because Hamilton had had an opportunity to cue-bid the ace of clubs at the four-level, yet he had not done so.
It was now only a question of in which suit to bid the grand slam. The problem was a possible diamond loser. Passell opted for the heart slam, since the spade suit was likely to provide two discards in partner's hand.
Passell's analysis was dead right—he needed two diamond discards to come to thirteen tricks. At a spade slam, there was no way to avoid a diamond loser.
This hand was played at almost 200 tables. Of these, 16 reached a grand slam, but the other 15 bid it in spades, down one.

Computers Now 'Invade' Britain

By WILLIAM S. COWLES
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The computer has invaded the British classroom, a learning revolution that eventually will affect every student in the country's 33,000 elementary and high schools.

"Every secondary school in the United Kingdom now has at least one microcomputer," said Michael Page of the Department of Education. "and in two years, every primary school will have one."

The aim is to make students and teachers "computer competent" — able to use computers — and to provide a versatile new teaching tool while boosting the country's burgeoning microcomputer industry.

The state Industry Department has partially funded one microcomputer for nearly every one of Britain's 6,000 secondary schools, Page said. Each school is sending two teachers to be trained at information centers under a Microelectronics Education Program.

The program was extended to primary schools last July, and so far, 7,000 of Britain's 27,000 elementary schools have applied for computers, Page said.

He estimated the 2-year-old program will cost about $38 million by 1984.

"It's a bright, new development in education — computers bring variety and novelty into what can be dull," he said.

Charles Bake's class at Woodside Junior School in Croydon, a suburb 10 miles south of London, agrees.

"You can really be creative," said 9-year-old Robert Morrison, as he typed instructions for the computer to play back a tune he and four friends had composed on the screen.

"I like pushing the buttons and telling it what to do," said Helen Beckensale, 9. "A computer can only do things logically, one simple step at a time. If you make a mistake, it won't understand you."

At another keyboard, a group discussed how to have its computer draw an octagon using as few commands as possible.

Nine-year-old Brett Mickelburgh tried telling the machine to move its pen forward and turn 45 degrees to the left eight times. A few taps on the keyboard and the octagon took shape.

"The octagon problem teaches the children geometric concepts and logic almost without them knowing it," said Bake. "Just in attempting the problem, they have become fluent in handling computer commands and a keyboard."

Programs teach a variety of skills, he said, not all of them easily tested. For the class's once-a-week session with the machine, Bake chooses from about 30 programs including:

—A math drill that adds cars onto a train for right answers and takes them away for wrong ones;

—A game where children identify an unknown animal by asking questions about its characteristics, and —"Adventure," a popular game among computer buffs, where players search for treasure through a simulated maze of tunnels and rooms, using special devices to escape monsters and traps.

"The games provide a basis for class discussion," said Bake, "not only about how to solve the puzzles but also about making decisions in real situations."

"The computer doesn't provide a substitute for traditional teaching, but serves as a valuable teaching tool," he said.

For older students the microcomputer can be a research tool and a simulator for experiments physically impractical to conduct, said Michael Doran, director of London region computer information centers.

For example, he said, "micros can take raw census data, do boring statistical number crunching and build charts tracing the demographic development of any village in England — all in a few seconds."

In physics, students can use a computer model to explore what happens atomically in a nuclear explosion, Doran said. "There are applications in every field," he said.

A typical school package developed by government researchers in conjunction with computer manufacturers consists of a $1,900 microcomputer with 32,000 bytes of random access memory, a color screen, floppy disc drive or cassette player and up to 30 programs, according to Doran.

"Depending on how much the local authorities pitch in, schools can get a complete system, for $390 to $950," he said.

Success has been demonstrated by the more than 12,000 teachers like Bake who have caught the computer bug and started their own computer education programs, according to Doran.

"It's been very successful," he said. "Our future generations of school-leavers will be well prepared to meet an increasingly computerized world."

INSPECTOR JAILED
OXFORD, England (AP) — Automobile inspector Norman Thompson has been jailed for seven months and barred from driving for five years for causing the death of a woman friend by driving his car into a telegraph pole because she danced with a 90-year-old man.

LEGAL NOTICE

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will file an application with the Public Telecommunications Facilities Program and the Federal Communications Commission to construct a new, noncommercial, educational FM radio station. The application will be filed on February 25th, 1983, a copy of which may be examined by the public at WUNC Radio in Swain Hall at Chapel Hill, North Carolina during regular business hours.

The application will request an assignment of 88.3 MHz, with an effective radiated power of 31.6 Kw. The antenna will be located two (2) miles south of Farmville, North Carolina on US 258 at height of five hundred fifty (550) feet above average terrain.

The transmitter will broadcast programming originating from the Chapel Hill studios of WUNC Radio. A request for the call letters WENC will be made.

Commenting parties should send their comments to: Public Telecommunications Facilities Program, NTIA/DOC, Room 4625, Washington, DC 20230. February 17, 24, 1983

N. C. House May Defer State Lottery Bill Action

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While the state Senate steams toward consideration of a lottery bill as early as March, the House appears content to hold off on the controversial issue until 1984.

"We're moving down the road," said Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, who introduced the Senate bill to study a state lottery. "We just decided in the Senate that we don't want to waste time on the study when 85-percent of the people in the state are in favor of it."

"I'm confident at this point that you'll see a bill passed in this session to begin a lottery," he added. "We're either going to go get that lottery in this session or we're going to forget it."

A Senate subcommittee has already appointed staffers to look into the question, with a report expected in March.

Meanwhile, the Committee on Rules and Operations of the House decided Wednesday to seek a full Legislative Research Commission study of the idea. That report would be returned in 1984 if funding for it is approved.

Rep. John J. Hunt, D-Cleveland, who chairs the rules committee, said the LRC resolution could have a "cooling effect" on House consideration of any Senate bill designed to start a lottery.

"It was not the intention of this committee to use it (the resolution) as an obstacle for a possible Senate bill," he said.

"But I would have to say that this would not lend any support to the Senate bill."

"I would think a lot of people would like to see a little more time spent on this," Hunt added. "This is supposed to be a deliberative body."

In other legislative action:

Auto Insurance

Compulsory automobile insurance laws in North Carolina have created "unwilling buyers and unwilling sellers," the head of the Reinsurance Facility told the House Insurance Committee.

"There is a high number of people in this state who are not insured because of the recoupment (surcharge)," said Bernard H. Parker, chairman of the facility's board of governors. He estimated that as many as 25 percent of the drivers are uninsured.

The Reinsurance Facility, established in 1973, is a method of insuring all drivers, especially those whose companies didn't want to insure them voluntarily. Drivers placed in the facility are those considered to be the highest risk.

But losses and expenses of the reinsurance pool have exceeded premiums earned since the start of the facility. In 1977, the General Assembly enacted legislation authorizing the facility to levy surcharges to make its operation break even.

Parker said facility prices are too high for some of the worst drivers and urged all drivers to get underinsured and uninsured motorist coverage.

Donald Zimmerman, chairman of the governing committee of the state Rate Bureau, said insurance premiums in North Carolina generally are lower than those in Virginia and South Carolina.

He said the reason is the rural, less populous nature of the state. That makes it less expensive to do business here. He said regulations have not brought the cost down.

Licenses

The Senate Finance Committee approved and sent to the full Senate a bill giving variety stores, including drugstores and hardware stores, the option of buying one privilege license for $100 instead of six licenses for as much as $116.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said he introduced the bill to reduce the time and paperwork required of variety stores.

Drunken Driving

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, told the Senate Finance Committee it may be reviewing Gov. Jim Hunt's package to fight drunken driving next Wednesday.

The Senate Judiciary III Committee is expected to approve an amended version of the package Thursday after studying the proposal for almost a month. The bill must go to Finance because of the fees included.

"I hope this committee will look at the fees and financing aspects of the bill only," said Rauch, committee co-chairman.

Conservation

John Monroe, a Carolina Power and Light Co. executive in charge of load management, told the House Public Utilities and Energy committees that conservation could save the utility $3.6 billion by avoiding the need for two additional nuclear units.

But Monroe called on lawmakers for help publicizing programs aimed at reducing needs for electricity. "The awareness is out there about conservation but there is not much understanding... or commitment," Monroe said.

But Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, argued that the more energy consumers save, the higher the cost of that energy goes.

State Government

Sen. William G. Hancock Jr., D-Durham, chairman of the Senate State Government Committee, appointed subcommittees to study two senate bills that might otherwise require study commissions.

"If this experiment is successful, we may end up saving the taxpayers some money," he said. "And we'll get the studies finished sooner."

One bill called for continued study of state computers by the Legislative Research Commission, while the other sought a similar study of the use of volunteers in government.

Amendments

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee debated, but took no action on, a bill requiring constitutional amendments go before voters only during major, biennial elections.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, drew support from unannounced gubernatorial candidate Tom Gilmore, chairman of the Committee for Constitutional Integrity.

Gilmore said only 26 percent of the state's registered voters cast ballots during last summer's primary on a proposed amendment to extend lawmakers' terms from two to four years.

But some legislators said it might be better for amendments to be decided in off-years because people tend to devote most of their attention to major races in general election years.

Privilege

Rep. W. Paul Pulley Jr., D-Durham, filed a bill that would allow more judges to order doctors to release medical information in suits for damages due to injuries.

Pulley said current law allows only Superior Court judges to make such rulings and because such judges serve on a rotating basis, lawyers may be unable to obtain information needed for their cases.

"An example would be someone who files suit for a back injury suffered in an automobile accident," Pulley said. "Most judges would rule the defense has a right to information about previous back injuries, but the doctor-patient privilege would get in the way."

Budget

their review of Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed 1983-85 budget.

The committee on education budgeting examined recommended increases for the University of North Carolina system and studied individual campuses' personnel, utility and auxiliary service costs.

Bruce Harrington, a state budget office analyst, said half of the system's campuses will run short of utility funds this year. He said energy, office furniture and equipment, new facilities coming "on line," and personnel costs accounted for 75 percent of requested increases in funding.

The state Department of Human Resources drew criticism from the base budget committee reviewing its budget for failing to come up with suggestions for possible cuts.

Committees have been instructed to prepare for cutting 3 percent across the board in case revenue collections don't measure up to Hunt administration estimates. Human resources committee members said they preferred having state officials select cuttable items, but indicated they were losing patience with the delay.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow complained to the Base Budget Committee on General Government that the Advisory Budget Commission hadn't heeded any of his requests. He said the quality of audits by his department could be hurt because his staff was overworked and rushed.

Pregnant Defendants

Rep. Charles Woodward, D-Wayne, introduced a bill that would require judges to defer imprisonment of expectant mothers convicted of nonviolent crimes.

Woodward said the bill could save North Carolina up to $150,000 a year in funds currently being spent on delivering babies in prison and providing nurseries for them.

"There were 67 women who delivered babies in prison last year in North Carolina," he said. "Basically it's a moral issue because you shouldn't be incarcerating babies who haven't done anything wrong. But there's cost savings too."

Thieves Also Took Away 'Guard Dog'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Six burglaries in two months prompted John Scaward to buy a guard dog for his used car lot. The seventh time thieves hit, they made off with the pedigreed Doberman pinscher.

Scaward, remembering how Max the dog snarled at anyone who came close to his lot, can't figure out how the thieves got him away. Pawprints near the gate where the burglars got in indicate that Max walked out, he said.

The thieves also made off Tuesday night with the dog's chain, $38 collar, food dish and a 25-pound bag of food, Scaward said.

"I have over $400 tied up in that dog," he said Wednesday. "I don't see how... they got the dog. I just got him where I could control him."

He said he paid $350 for the registered 9-month-old Doberman, and the accessories accounted for the rest of the loss.
