Tar To Crest On Saturday

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A rain-swollen Tar River is expected to crest Saturday at two feet above flood stage, then begin a slow descent to a more normal level.

The Department of Hydrology of the National Weather Service in Raleigh predicted this morning that the Tar would crest at 15 feet about mid-day tomorrow, then fall.

"It will be its highest in Greenville tomorrow," said Allan Gustafson of the weather bureau in Raleigh. Gustafson said this morning the Tar had already crested and was beginning to fall in Louisburg and Rocky Mount but that "it's not falling as fast as we thought in Tarboro."

"Therefore, we predict that it will crest Saturday, then subside," he said.

According to Greenville Utilities weather station, the river level at 8 a.m. today measured 13.5 feet — five inches above the flood stage. February's three inches of rain pushed the Tar above flood stage about mid-day Monday and Thursday's .18 inch (recorded by GUC) kept it rising.

An average level for the Tar, said a GUC spokesman, is 4.5 feet.

Despite the wet weather, Albert Coffey of Pitt Soil and Water Conservation said conditions in the county "weren't that bad."

"We've got a lot of water standing in fields," he said. "The ground is super saturated and our major flood plains are flooded but that's really not all that unusual."

Coffey said both the county's old and new watersheds are functioning. "I don't think we've got any excavated channels full," he said. "They're all running — we haven't had a storm of the magnitude to fill them and I hope we don't."

Sunshine predicted for Saturday and part of Sunday will help dry the ground, but rain is in the forecast again for Monday, says the National Weather Service.

TAR TO CREST SATURDAY...National Weather Service officials predicted the Tar River will crest in Greenville at 15 feet — two feet above flood stage — on Saturday. The river has already crested in Louisburg and Rocky Mount, said the weather bureau, but not in Tarboro or here. (Reflector Photo By Tommy Forrest)

Shellfish Ban To Have Minor Effects Locally

From Staff and Wire Reports

The largest statewide ban on harvesting of oysters and clams in over 17 years will affect local fish markets and seafood restaurants — but not to any great degree — according to several store owners.

"The only North Carolina oysters we sell are the ones in the shells and we have enough to last about two to three days," Evans Seafood Market owner Leslie Mills said. "All our shucked oysters come from Virginia and Maryland and that supply will be fine," he said.

Pollution caused by recent heavy rains forced state officials to ban the harvesting of oysters and clams in the state's shellfish waters, Department of Human Resources officials said. Health officials in the department's Division of Shellfish Sanitation put the ban in effect at 3 p.m. Thursday, department spokesman Chuck McLendon said.

West End Circle Seafood Market manager Bill Bradley said today he did not think his supplies would be affected.

Cliff's Seafood and Oyster Bar Restaurant owner Daphne Richardson said the only effect the ban might have on the family business is to hasten closing of the oyster bar. "We usually close up the oyster bar the second week in March anyway and if we can't get oysters elsewhere and keep the prices down, we might have to close it early," she said.

"All our clams come in frozen and if we can't get oysters from North Carolina we will get them from the Chesapeake area," Mrs. Richardson said. Fresh oysters are supplied to Cliff's through Scranton, she said.

Officials said the ban was brought on by fecal coliform levels indicating poor water quality and extreme pollution, with some areas registering 10 times the allowable measurement of fecal coliform. Fecal coliform is an indicator of mammal fecal contamination and is associated with other bacteria that cause cholera, hepatitis, dysentery and less severe gastrointestinal ailments.

The ban brought the oyster-clam industry, worth more than $7 million to North Carolina fishermen last year, to a dead halt in midseason. Fish, shrimp, scallops and crabs are not affected by the ban. Coliform contamination only applies to oysters and clams because the whole animal is eaten — including the intestinal systems where fecal coliform collects.

Robert G. Benton, supervisor of the Division of Shellfish Sanitation, said the shellfish areas were closed "in order to promote the health of our citizens and persons in other states who might eat contaminated

Khadafy Says Don't Push

Threatens Military Response

By The Associated Press

Libyan strongman Col. Moammar Khadafy has threatened military action if Libya is "pushed too far" by U.S. naval maneuvers that might extend into Mediterranean waters claimed by his country.

He said the Gulf of Sidra will be turned into a "red gulf of blood" if the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz and its battle group move too far into the disputed waters in the southern Mediterranean off Libya's north coast.

"We will not permit America or any foreign state to enter the Gulf of Sidra or any other part of Libyan waters," Khadafy said Thursday in a speech to his Parliament. "The Libyan people are ready to fight to defend their land, their water and skies."

President Reagan has said there are no plans to engage U.S. forces in the region even if Libya clashes with its U.S.-backed neighbor Sudan. But Reagan did say American troops are authorized to defend themselves if fired upon.

In August 1981, two U.S. jetfighters from the Nimitz shot down a pair of Libyan planes after being fired on while conducting war games over the gulf. The Nimitz and its battle group just completed another set of maneuvers in the area.

Today, the official Soviet news agency Tass denounced the U.S. naval movements as a "dangerous provocation ... a continuation of the U.S. anti-Libyan campaign."

Tass said the Pentagon's "provocative militarist fuss" was intended to "establish undivided rule of U.S. imperialism in the region through military pressure, undisguised blackmail and diktat."

Khadafy, in his speech, said, "Entering Sidra is an invasion of Libya. Libyan people want to live as free people and won't accept foreign occupation. The Gulf of Sidra will turn into a red gulf of blood if anyone tries to sail through it by force."

Some of the waters claimed by Libya are 100 miles from its coast. The United States recognizes a three-mile limit.

Khadafy, whose speech was broadcast by Libya's official JANA news agency, said the U.S. Navy, operating north of the Gulf of Sidra "forms a challenge to the Libyan nation. The Libyan people won't stand and watch idly if pushed too far."

Pentagon sources in Washington said the United States has sent AWACS surveillance planes to Egypt and moved the Nimitz 100 miles off Egypt's northwest coast to counter a Libyan aircraft buildup possibly aimed at Sudan.

Reagan said the radar surveillance planes were in the area for an exercise, and Egypt said its pilots were receiving routine training in use of the planes.

Pentagon sources who declined to allow use of their names said they received a report that Libyan planes recently flew out above the Nimitz. Planes from the carrier were aloft at the time, but there were no incidents, the sources said.

Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of U.S. naval operations, told the House Armed Services Committee that the Nimitz sailed from the coast of Lebanon for training operations in an area of the central Mediterranean claimed by Libya.

He said the carrier's assignment was not connected with Libyan military moves.

The Pentagon sources said Khadafy had moved air units to bases in Chad, the adjacent country to the south where Libya has been supporting one faction in a civil war.

Those units appear to threaten Sudan, Chad's eastern neighbor, according to the Pentagon sources, who said Egypt deployed air force units in southern Egypt to be ready to counter any Libyan move against Sudan.

The Egyptian Foreign Ministry said current military activities in Egypt were "normal" and not part of a response to a possible Libyan attack on Sudan.

In another development Thursday, ABC News said the White House had asked it to delay for a day its exclusive report that Reagan had ordered U.S. military units moved to discourage a possible Libyan attack on Sudan.

Edward M. Fouhy, head of ABC News' Washington bureau, said he received the call Wednesday afternoon from national security adviser William P. Clark. The report was broadcast Wednesday.

In the Sudanese capital of Khartoum, Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri met separately with Chadian President Hissene Habre and U.S. presidential envoy Gen. Vernon Walters.

Sudan and Egypt backed Habre in his drive last year to oust former President Goukouni Oueddei. Habre says Libya is now supporting Goukouni's bid to regain power in Chad.

Sudan also has internal problems. Sudanese sources say insurgents in the south are being incited by Libyan-backed former Sudanese army Col. Yaacoub Ismail, who is back in Sudan after being exiled for a 1975 coup attempt.

Spokesman Says Reagan Did Not Waive His Executive Privilege

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's spokesman says the chief executive was "absolutely not" intending to waive executive privilege when he said he would not withhold Environmental Protection Agency documents subpoenaed by a House subcommittee "if there's a suspicion in the minds of the people that maybe it is being used to cover some wrongdoing."

At his press conference Wednesday, Reagan said, "I can no longer insist on executive privilege if there's a suspicion in the minds of the people that maybe it is being used to cover some wrongdoing."

But deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Thursday that the president envisioned turning documents over to the Justice Department for review of possible wrongdoing, not to Congress.

The president's statement was "absolutely not" intended to waive executive privilege, Speakes said, adding that the issue was part of on-going discussions with Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, chairman of the House Public Works subcommittee.

The refusal of the administration to turn over dozen of documents to Levitas in December led to an historic contempt of Congress citation against EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch.

The administration is now offering to let Levitas and the ranking Republican member of the committee see the documents and make excerpts available to other members of the subcommittee. Negotiations between Levitas and the administration were expected to resume today.

"We're very confident an agreement will be worked out," said Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair. "It just remains for Levitas and (Deputy Attorney General) Edward C. Schmults to get together and nail it all down."

The negotiations were taking place as two House subcommittee chairmen promised more revelations today of mismanagement at the EPA. Reps. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., and Mike Synar, D-Okla., scheduled a news conference to discuss failings in the $1.6 billion "superfund" hazardous waste clean up program.

Scheuer and Synar are heading two of the six congressional investigations of the embattled EPA into allegations the superfund was manipulated for political purposes, that "sweetheart" deals were struck with polluters and that EPA officials violated conflict-of-interest laws.

In another development, sources inside and outside EPA said Thursday that John P. Horton, the EPA assistant administrator for administration, was under investigation for allegedly using a government secretary and phone for private business.

In addition, the FBI and the Justice Department are conducting their own probes. All the activity was triggered after Reagan last week fired Rita M. Lavelle, head of the hazardous waste program.

Michael Brown, named acting assistant administrator to replace Ms. Lavelle, confirmed Thursday night that Mrs. Gorsuch has referred several items to the Justice Department to investigate.

Brown did not disclose what they were. EPA sources, who would talk only on condition that they not be named, said they dealt with allegations made against Ms. Lavelle including the handling of settlement efforts to clean up toxic wastes.

J. B. Gillam Considering '84 Bid For House Seat

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

State Rep. John B. Gillam III said today he is seriously considering the possibility of becoming a candidate in the 1984 elections for the 1st Congressional seat now held by Rep. Walter B. Jones. Both are Democrats.

Gillam, in a telephone conversation, said, "I will definitely decide by April on whether or not I will become a candidate for the seat regardless of who the other candidates may be.

"Understandably, it would be with reluctance that I would run against Representative Jones, because my family and I have been his loyal supporters all the years he has been in office, and I deeply respect him as a person and a representative.

"At the same time, I enjoy serving people, and I would like the challenge of serving constituents in Congress from our 21-county district."

Gillam, 36, member of a Windsor family in the peanut business, said, "I come from a family with an agricultural and business background. My father is a native of Windsor, and my mother, who died last summer, was a native of Martin County."

He and his wife, Bobbie, have two children, Snead, 15 and Elizabeth, 8.

On Tuesday, Gillam called together members of his large family — 114 of them — "at a meeting in Raleigh to talk about the possibility of my making a decision by April to run for the congressional seat. A large family unit like mine is a wonderful asset, not merely in terms of political areas, but in all areas of life," Gillam said.

Explaining the fact that he had 114 relatives to call on to attend the discussion session, Gillam said, "My father has six brothers and two sisters, and my mother had a brother and sister, so these aunts and

I was wondering if the solar fraction, computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, averages 50 percent year around? It seems to vary widely from day to day. B.T.

According to Alan Larkins of the physics department, the solar fraction for the past two years has, indeed, averaged more than 50 percent. In 1981, the solar fraction average was 60, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 60 percent of your hot water needs during the year. In 1982, the average was 52 percent.

The highest monthly solar fraction average last year was 78 percent for the month of May, while the average for the month of January 1983 was 26.

Britain, Norway Slash Their Crude Oil Prices

LONDON (AP) — Britain and Norway today offered 10 percent cuts in the price of their North Sea crude oil. The move was expected to put more pressure on OPEC to cut its $34 base price to stay afloat in a glutted market.

The British National Oil Corp. proposed dropping its price from $33.50 to $30.50 and the Norwegian state monopoly Statoil offered to cut its from $34.50 to $31.05 for crude loaded offshore and to $31.50 for crude loaded on shore.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, told a Saudi magazine last week, "I cannot see any way out of a price reduction."

The Soviets already have cut the price of the oil they sell to European customers to about $29 a barrel, and some members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are reported selling below that price on the spot market.

Britain is the world's fifth largest oil producer, with 2.2 million barrels a day coming from the North Sea.

The new price, a cut of $3 from $33.50 a barrel, was proposed in telex messages sent to oil companies and customers. The change, retroactive to Feb. 1, will become effective once the companies accept the recommendation.

In the United States, meanwhile, more oil companies — including industry leaders Exxon Corp. and Mobil Corp. — joined other refiners in cutting by $1 a barrel the price they will pay for domestic crude oil.

In London, British Energy Department spokesman Stephen Chantrell confirmed the national corporation's price cut. He said crude oil is selling for around $30 a barrel elsewhere and said it was "nonsense" to suggest Britain was leading the market's downward move.

Industry sources had said they expected about $2 to be trimmed from the current British oil benchmark price of $33.50 a barrel, but other reports had predicted a $3 cut per barrel. A barrel is about 42 gallons.

The cut by British National Oil is the most significant price cut by a foreign oil producer since OPEC failed to agree on pricing and production at its emergency meeting in late January.

That would put added pressure on OPEC producers to officially cut their prices.

Besides Exxon and Mobil, Gulf Oil Corp., Sun Co. Inc., Chevron, a unit of Standard Oil Co. of California, Atlantic Richfield Co. and Amoco, a unit of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), matched the $1-a-barrel cut in the price they will pay for U.S. crude that was initiated by Texaco Inc. earlier this week.

It is the second time in less than a month that domestic refiners trimmed their buying prices by $1 per barrel.

The new prices for crude depends on its quality and where it is produced, but prices for basic crudes generally now range between $29 and $30.50 a barrel.

Letter Worth Passing On

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently read a verse in the letters to the editor column in the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator. I don't know whether it's original, but I think it's worth passing on. I hope you agree.

NEWCASTLE READER

DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

IT ISN'T THE CAR, IT'S THE DRIVER

"Sir: It isn't the car that begins to whine when forced to stop for an old stop sign — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that takes a drink, then quickly loses its power to think — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that fails to heed the dangers of reckless, discourteous speed — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that steps on the gas and causes an accident trying to pass — it's the driver.

"A car may be bent and twisted awry, but it isn't the car that will have to die — it's the driver."

JOSEPH D. VRABLE,
CAMPBELL, OHIO

...

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago my husband and I lost a very good friend and neighbor. Naturally we offered our condolences and help to this man's widow, who happens to be a very attractive woman about my age (middle 60s). Now my husband gets calls quite often. Her faucet is dripping, her furnace is making a noise, her storm window needs fixing, etc.

His last visit to her house lasted 44 minutes. And there's always a freshly baked apple pie waiting for him over there. (His favorite.)

Tomorrow he is taking her to the dentist! That's where I put my foot down. But he said he had already promised to take her, so off they went. Of course, this is only the first of three appointments. Another neighbor made a little joke about how attentive my husband has been to this widow. I laughed it off, but I was burning up inside.

What now? I feel better just putting this down on paper.

GOOD OLD JANE

DEAR JANE: Don't be too "good" or you'll be old before your time, Jane. Tell your helpful hubby that the neighbors are talking and enough is enough already. Then go along for the ride. And while you're sitting between them, get Jane's recipe for the apple pie. Three may be a crowd, but there's safety in numbers.

...

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but here goes: I am dating a younger man I'll call Jimmy. I am deeply in love with him. The problem is that there is this girl at work who is after him. (Let's call her Shirley.) Shirley is married, but she wants to have Jimmy's baby. She says she isn't in love with him, but her husband has a low sperm count and they can't seem to have a baby, which they want very much.

Jimmy tells me that he doesn't want to lose me but he would like to accommodate Shirley. He says he doesn't love her the way he loves me, but they have necked in his car a few times.

This hurts me, Abby, because Jimmy and I have talked about marriage and I was counting on maybe having a spring wedding.

Please tell me what to do.

JUST ABOUT HAD IT

DEAR JUST: You don't say how "young" Jimmy is, but he sounds immature and naive. A man who would consider fathering a child as an accommodation is not ready for marriage. And the fact that he and Shirley have necked in his car a few times indicates that he has more than a casual interest in her. Wise up, and say goodbye to Jimmy.

DEAR ABBY: We were invited to a wedding and reception. The affair took place at a restaurant that was owned by the daughter of the groom.

After the ceremony, champagne was served, but no food of any kind was offered. The daughter (who owned the restaurant) asked if we would like something to eat, and we said yes. She brought us menus, and we ordered what we wanted.

After the food was served, we each received a check for our meal. Well, we ate the food, drank the champagne, wished the newlyweds well and departed, leaving the food checks on the table.

Since we were invited guests, we felt insulted to be asked to pay for anything.

This was a new one for us. Did we act properly?

PERPLEXED IN FLORIDA

DEAR PERPLEXED: Since you assumed when you ordered the refreshments that they were on the house, I think you acted properly. (This is a new one for me, too.)

...

DEAR ABBY: You often receive letters from young girls asking, "Should I or should I not go all the way before marriage?"

I was given a beautiful reason why I should not, and I never forgot it. There were no heavy warnings or confusing explanations. It was simply this: "Intimacy between man and woman is God's wedding gift to the newlyweds, and his gift is not to be opened early."

Designs Bring Back That Bygone Glamour

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — James Galanos, the California designer, shapes a silhouette for the new season that spells room at the top.
He manages this wide-shouldered look through shaping of fabric without seaming, with gathered sleeves, use of the deeply set dolman sleeve and cape tops over slim-looking skirts, even though they are tiered. Galanos even copies the exaggerated look at the shoulders that is used in the butterfly sleeve traditional of Philippine dress.
Withall, however, he manages old-time glamour that Hollywood used to represent, in lush fabrics and some sleek, clinging silhouettes.
At $1,000 and up in prices, Galanos gives such customers as Nancy Reagan their money's worth. The designer made the first lady's inaugural ball gown as well as many other costumes the public sees her in.

The inaugural gown, jeweled all over, bared one shoulder, a style Mrs. Reagan has made her trademark. But that style appeared in only one evening dress — pale, patterned, long, formal and formhugging — in the Galanos show for press and buyers at the Plaza Hotel recently.
Galanos, with his own business in Los Angeles for 30 years, traditionally brings each new collection to New York for the first show.
Mrs. Reagan, not at the show, played a major part in it anyway. You would frequently hear a reporter or buyer saying, "That looks like a Nancy Reagan."
Mrs. Reagan is known for her preference for reds in her wardrobe. But unless Galamos runs things up especially for her, she's out of luck for spring and summer.
The emphasis is on black, black and more black, both for daytime and evening. One observer commented,

"This is in mourning for the economy."
Galanos did relieve the black with flashes of white collars or other white trim.
There were a lot of other subdued-looking costumes with gray on gray, polka dots on gray background for instance, and taupes.
The occasional flashes of bold color came in both daytime and evening wear — a wide-shouldered coat in fire engine red over a sleek black cocktail dress, or a clear green print silk under a solid green coat, a coat in solid gold worn with a red floral print, or a sleek, halter-top coral sheath with coin dot pattern for a clingy, long formal.
Galanos used many wide (3-and 4-inch) belts in patent with his prints. He did cummerbund effects in black with others. He also used jeweled belts on black.
In some of his evening apparel, he combined see-through sheer nets for waistband, seen again in black and also in pale beige. The dress that closed the show was a white crepe sheath formal with the top all net except for beading in strategic places.

Another Galanos signature, the bloused back, showed throughout the new collection. This usually was neckline to waistline and in featherweight chiffon in the same print as the dress itself.
Other highlights of the Galanos spring-summer collection:
—Abbreviated hemlines. Many of the slim daytime coat dresses exposed 2 to 4 inches of the kneecap area.
—Leg show. Galanos' models with few exceptions wore white hosiery and spike heeled sandals that laced around the ankles. Laces kept coming untied as the mannequins walked the runway.
—Apron fronts. The most glamorized treatment yet seen of a utility item.

DESIGNER...James Galanos uses black, white and red silk with black border for one of his "room at the top" silhouettes for spring-summer. Note the hemline length which is well above the kneecap and is featured in his daytime and cocktail dresses. The hat is a Galanos-designed straw. (UPI telephoto)

Chapter President Nina Redditt said the meeting would be changed from Monday to Tuesday, Feb. 22, at 7:15 due to the Monday holiday. The meeting will be held at Shoney's Restaurant. Women in the business world in this area interested in attending should call 752-6410.

Creosote Build-Up Can Create Chimney Fire

As North Carolinians have installed wood and coal heaters and efficient prefabricated fireplaces in their homes the number of chimney and house fires has grown.

The main causes of home fires related to chimneys are improper installation and creosote build-up. Fires are just as likely to occur in metal as in masonry chimneys, reports the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Once the stove or fireplace has been properly installed, check the stovepipe or chimney monthly for creosote build-up. Creosote is a dark, sticky, tar-like substance that collects in the flue and chimney. If it catches fire while a hot fire is burning in the stove, it can create a violent chimney fire which sometimes starts a house fire, say extension specialists at North Carolina State University.

Burning seasoned wood produces less creosote, but some of this by-product of the burning will still accumulate. The chimney chemicals sold to prevent creosote build-up won't eliminate the danger either, although they may slow the process in an already clean chimney.

Creosote is an unavoidable product of wood burning. More is formed from fires in wood-burning stoves and fireplace inserts, the more efficient sources of heat.

The only way to get rid of a creosote build-up is to scrape it off. This is what a chimney sweep does. Anyone cleaning the chimney himself needs the right tools and proper methods. Clean the chimney or call a chimney sweep when the creosote accumulates 1/8 to 1/4 of an inch.

There are several techniques which will help keep a clean chimney from accumulating creosote so quickly: When lighting a stove, make a hot fire for roughly 30 minutes. This brings all of the surfaces up to operating temperature.

—Always make small, hot fires as opposed to large smokey ones. Take the time to load the stove more frequently.

—When inserting a fresh load of fuel, burn it hotter at first to warm it up to better combustion temperatures.

Everyone in the house should be aware of warning signs of a chimney fire. They are sucking sounds, a loud roar and shaking pipes. If anyone thinks he has a chimney fire, call the fire department immediately, before doing anything else. Get everyone out of the house.

Then cut off the fire's air supply by closing any air intake vents of the house or surroundings catching on fire, you may want to discharge the contents of a class ABC dry chemical fire extinguisher into the stove.

Chimney fires must be put out from the bottom. If you close off all sources of air by shutting the vents and damper, you may be able to suffocate the flames. This is not possible with a system that isn't airtight or that is double vented (has another fireplace or stove on the same chimney). In this case, there is nothing to do but hope that the fire burns itself out without taking the house with it.

It is not advisable to use water to put out a chimney fire. The extra hot pipes could buckle or shake themselves apart when the water hits them.

Salt was once used to stop fires, but it can chemically react with creosote and other products to form a chemical similar to lye. This corrodes pipes quickly.

Daily Diet Should Include Fiber

Food plays a role in the development and treatment of certain types of heart disease, high blood pressure, cancer, diabetes and other chronic illnesses, researchers say.

Although the picture is not yet crystal clear, fat, sugar and dietary fiber are major concerns. All three have their place in a well-balanced diet. Fat and sugar should be eaten in moderation, and special care should be taken to include fiber in the daily diet, says Sarah Hinson, extension nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University.

Fat is not found just in fat cells. It is in all of the cells of the body, and we couldn't exist without it. But it is possible to get too much of a good thing, and this is the case with fats. Americans now get 40 to 50 percent of their calories from fat; 30 is the recommended allowance.

Another 15 to 20 percent of the typical North Carolinian's calories come from sugar. People eat 100 to 125 pounds a year.

The combination of too much fat and too much sugar leads to obesity. Obesity is probably the most common nutritional problem affecting North Carolinians today, Mrs. Hinson says.

Researchers have found that obesity is a risk factor for developing cardiovascular diseases, high blood pressure, arteriosclerosis, gall bladder disease, diabetes mellitus and liver diseases.

Sugar also contributes greatly to tooth decay, and poor dental health is one of the most widespread, costly preventable diseases directly related to nutrition in the United States. Over 98 percent of the people in this country have decayed teeth, says the extension specialist.

Consumers need to reduce the total amount of fat they eat by selecting foods lower in fat. Choose more poultry and fish than fatty red meat. Trim visible fat from meat and reduce the amount of fat used in food preparation by roasting, broiling or steaming meats and vegetables. Substitute nonfat milk for whole milk.

Distinguish between carbohydrates, such as starch and fiber, which are put to good use in the body, and concentrated sugars. The naturally occurring sugars like those in fruit and other plants are better for someone worried about his weight than sugar or honey.

People who choose more complex carbohydrates over fats and pure sugars will also get enough dietary fiber and roughage in their diets. Fiber is the part of plants not broken down in the digestive tract. It aids the movement of waste products through the intestine by absorbing and holding water. This makes the waste soft and less compact, so it will move more easily.

Fiber can be useful in treating constipation and diverticular disease, but there is conflicting evidence as to whether it prevents these disorders.

To be sure you are getting enough fiber each day, eat whole grain breads and cereals, fresh fruits and raw vegetables.

Decorating? Try Unusual

Do you have a hang up when it comes to putting things up on your walls?

If so, remember, anything that will lie flat can be used on a wall. With this in mind, let your imagination go. You can come up with some interesting and unusual wall arrangements.

It is easier to move things around until you have found the right arrangement if you place them on the floor first.

Try colorful hot pads, cutting boards or wicker placemats to make an interesting arrangement for the kitchen. Decorative towel racks and tissue holders can dress up the bathroom and a grouping of several small mirrors interspersed with pictures can add interest to a drab hallway.

If the accessories are going to hang on a plaster wall, place adhesive tape over the spot where the hook or nail will go, and drive the nail at an angle. This will help prevent the cracking of the wall.

A very heavy or large picture may have to be hung from the molding along the ceiling. Place the wires parallel to each other and paint them the color of the wall.

Experiment Offers Hope

The North Carolina Housing Finance Agency, in cooperation with 10 towns and two business companies, has launched an experimental program that will serve as a prototype for low-interest home improvement loans. If it succeeds, and there is no reason now to doubt it will, the program will be a welcome addition to the alternatives now available for homeowners.

In its first year, the program will provide 15-year home improvement loans with interest rates ranging from 1 percent to a maximum of 11.9 percent. The lower rates will be possible through Community Development Block grants administered by the towns, which are providing $480,000 of the seed money needed for the experiment. The housing agency has issued a $2.34 million tax-exempt security to First Union National Bank of Charlotte for the remainder. With that base, the program will provide about $2.8 million for 300 home improvement loans initially.

Local governments will administer their own programs, allowing them to place the loans in areas where they will do the most good. The housing agency will serve as a central bank, allocating funds to the various cities, underwriting the loans and monitoring the local programs.

On paper, it sounds like an excellent example of cooperation between government and private enterprise. Home improvement loans in the commercial market now carry interest rates ranging up to 18 percent. This plan will bring those rates into a reasonable range. And by putting the day-to-day responsibility for the loans at the local level, it hopefully will avoid much of the red tape built into other programs involving governments.

Tarboro and Washington are among the first 10 cities to try the plan. If it succeeds this year, other cities will be invited to join next year.

We wish it success. Other cities, including Greenville, could benefit by such a cooperative effort.

Positive Approach Taken

The City Council recently approved an ordinance which establishes the Small Cities/South Evans grant project budget for 1982-83.

The $999,500 budget provides $381,505 for acquisition, $202,000 for rehabilitation of privately owned housing and $192,972 for relocation assistance.

The project marks a continued improvement of the area along Evans Street which has been going on for a number of years. The results should be positive for the city as a whole.

Image Of White House Manipulation Grows

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's quick about-face in endorsing a $4.3 billion "jobs" bill produced disbelief within his Cabinet and even the White House staff, widening a growing perception inside the administration that the president is manipulated for the sake of a public relations image.

President Reagan swallowing public works spending just as economic recovery beckoned was no more surprising to a bemused Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill than to most of the administration's economic policymakers. White House chief of staff James Baker and budget director David Stockman carved out the unReaganlike serving of pork without the knowledge, much less concurrence, of their colleagues.

"How in the world they (Baker and Stockman) sold the president on that astounds me," confided one mid-level administration official not previously given to criticism of West wing maneuvers. His comment reflects rising indignation by such officials over a conscious publicity campaign which attempts to show the president as reasonable and practical but which in fact makes him seem the puppet of his aides.

The spread of "Let Reagan be Reagan!" cries from frustrated conservative ideologues to non-ideological administration officials was furthered by the Baker-Stockman jobs bill coup. When a Treasury official asked White House deputy policy director Roger Porter about it, Porter could only shrug. Their bosses — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and presidential counselor Edwin Meese — also were in the dark.

That fact gave substance to the spate of newspaper stories, encouraged by the White House public relations apparatus, suggesting that the old man in the Oval Office has been deflected from doctrinaire folly by a handful of undisciplined aides.

Administration officials were particularly angered by glowing accounts of how Stockman, once seemingly ruined by infidelity, had patiently instructed Reagan in reality. The same critics were angered when the White House staff disavowed Reagan's intuitive call for repeal of corporate taxes. "Why couldn't they just say this was the president's view and let it go at that?" asked a Treasury official.

Anti-manipulation resentment boiled up at a White House senior staff meeting following a page one account in the Sunday New York Times telling how Reagan had been pushed into "a significant reversal of policy" on increasing future-year taxes that "was a triumph for his aides." David Gergen, Baker's deputy in charge of communications, praised his colleagues "for all getting our stories straight" in the Times account.

That was more than national security director William P. Clark, Reagan's longtime friend and servitor, could take. Clark said the quotes from aides making their chief appear to be a puppet were "outrageous." There was no response from Gergen or anybody else, and Clark's admonition seemed to have little effect. Soon thereafter, Gergen was recommending the Times story to other reporters.

Nevertheless, the notion of triumphant aides manipulating the president is no longer merely an obsession of the right-wing fringe but also worries administration officials. If Ronald Reagan could embrace pump-priming public works and even use Democratic terminology in calling it a "jobs" bill, what's next?

The answer is easy: tax indexing. The clue came after Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, called for repeal of indexing (which will end inflationary windfall revenue for the government), and the Treasury mildly took issue with him. Ken Duberstein, the Baker lieutenant in charge of congressional liaison, complained privately that the Treasury language was "strident." That is interpreted inside the administration as another policy reversal in the making.

All key officials of this administration, the president included, are firmly on record to retain indexing as Reagan's most enduring tax reform. But they were just as firmly opposed to a "jobs" bill. Such are the doubts sown when a president is manipulated.

It's A Total Turnabout For Rita Lavelle

WASHINGTON — Until last week, her work for and commitment to the Republican Party had been what Rita Marie Lavelle's life was all about.

"Since she first went to work in (then) Gov. Reagan's research office as a college intern, Rita has been a loyalist and principled believer in Ronald Reagan," recalled a friend in Sacramento.

But Lavelle's career has now hit an uncertain turn. Reagan has fired the 35-year-old Californian as the Environmental Protection Agency's chief administrator for hazardous-waste programs; Edwin Meese, whom she once called a "godfather," has publicly disowned her. How she survives the mire matters less than the serious questions her rise and fall pose for democratic government and environmental protection.

By Reagan administration standards, Lavelle was "right" for the hazardous-waste job. In addition to service under Meese in Reagan's California administration, she had handled public relations for two subsidiaries of Aerojet-General Corp., one of the nation's worst chemical-waste dumpers.

In practice, Lavelle admits proudly, her administrative philosophy at the EPA was one of non-confrontation with alleged industrial polluters. To wit, she religiously leaned toward negotiated settlements with dumpers instead of taking them to court; she allowed implicated companies to review cases being prepared to force waste site cleanup and arranged for firms to "buy out" future liability claims with up-front payments. "The whole country's productivity has been cut down because we all sit there and fight," she explained in an interview with us last Monday.

Such pro-industrial bias has seemed the rule of thumb for environmentalism under Reagan. "Obviously, I thought all of my policies and approaches were consistent with those of the administration," Lavelle added. "Indeed, they were cited by the administration as outstanding accomplishments."

But even good foot soldiers trip up. In Lavelle's case, her sin was to elicit charges of perjury before a House subcommittee last December. At a hearing then, she denied having ordered an investigation of the EPA's in-house critic, hazardous-waste specialist Hugh B. Kaufman, but two agency officials claimed that she had approved surveillance and other measures to discredit him.

For EPA administrator Anne Gorsuch, Rep. James Scheuer's (D-N.Y.) move to investigate Lavelle only made a bad situation worse: A separate contempt of Congress charge against Gorsuch had already focused too much attention on the agency's hazardous-waste program. The last thing she needed was to have the program's chief under criminal investigation.

Then came the clincher: the leak of a Lavelle memo highly critical of EPA general counsel Robert M. Perry. Lavelle's "talking notes," which accused Perry of "systematically alienating the primary constituents of this administration, the business community," would force Gorsuch to deny publicly what many Americans have suspected all along: that, in fact, the administration's environmental policies have favored private industry. Lavelle, whose White House ties never made her one of Gorsuch's personal favorites, was ripe for elimination.

It remains unclear why Lavelle, with her supposedly cozy ties to Meese, was unable to win at least administrative leave or interagency transfer. Indeed, Lavelle's unceremonious dumping continues to perplex the young ideologue herself. After all, this and previous administrations have often stuck with their own to the bitter end.

Yet, if Lavelle remains silent, she'll have provided the White House with a handy scapegoat for environmental policies run a-muck.

For many Americans, the irksome revelations of the last week may call for a wholesale housecleaning at EPA. That, however, would smack too much of responsive government for this administration. Better to dump an old friend than to correct past mistakes.

Strength For Today

St. Theresa once set about to found a much-needed orphanage. She had only three pence in her pocket. People laughed at her and told her she was crazy. Her answer was, "Theresa and three pence in her pocket can do nothing but God and three half-pence can do all things."

This reminds us of the statement often made that God and one righteous man constitute a majority. An incident from the life of Abraham Lincoln might serve as an example. After a proposal of Lincoln's, subsequently proved to be entirely justified, was voted down by his cabinet, Lincoln responded, "I vote yes, and so the motion is unanimously adopted."

St. Theresa and her three pence; Lincoln and his single vote — all these are overwhelming majorities and triumphs. That is, according to cosmic reckoning and standards.

So get on the side of the angels and you will have nothing to fear. The angels will be delighted to have you on their side.

Lending Carries A Two-Way Responsibility

NEW YORK (AP) — As an unemployed, heavily mortgaged homeowner, you may have a relationship with your lender similar to that of the less developed nation that cannot meet its repayment schedule.

That is, you may be sufficiently in debt to the lender that, in a sense, the lender might be indebted to you, and grateful for the opportunity to sit down and renegotiate less stressful repayment terms.

Earlier this month, the U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose members hold about 16 million home mortgages, advised homeowners with recession-related difficulties to come in and talk things over.

The league's strategy is designed to keep problems small. So far, the league's membership, numbering about 4,000 associations, has experienced surprisingly little trouble from late payments.

In December, only 1.26 percent of accounts were categorized as delinquent, or overdue by two months or more. Even in healthier times the rate ranges between 0.85 and 0.95 percent.

Delinquency figures kept by the Mortgage Bankers Association of America even showed an improvement in December, to 5.48 percent from 5.56 percent. The association uses one month rather than two in determining delinquency.

Rates on actual foreclosures badly lag the actual experience, but even old figures give some relative indication. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported a 1982 first-half rate of 0.274, or about one-quarter of 1 percent.

But as William B. O'Connell, league president, puts it, "Most forecasters expect unemployment to stay high, and many Americans are discovering that their unemployment benefits will stretch just so far."

If a borrower has a good credit rating, said O'Connell in an interview, "the S&Ls will break their backs to take care of them."

The best approach, he advises, is for the borrower to take the initiative and talk with the lender at the first sign of trouble. "They'll be on your side nine times out of 10," he said.

Lenders don't want your house at any time, if they can help it, and in bad times they abhor the idea. It means an end to any possibility of obtaining cash flow from the property. It means owning a house when it can't easily be resold.

Even if they have to accept diminished payments for a few months or even a year or so, said James Kendall, a league official, that procedure represents an alternative more acceptable than foreclosure.

There is a condition, however, that would make a lender more willing to foreclose.

That is, if interest on the loan is at a rate so low it represents little profit — or even a loss — the lender might decide to conclude business, a possibility that would be strengthened by a poor repayment record.

But if your credit standing is good, lenders generally are willing to talk. While each lending agency has its own policy, O'Connell suggests three positive solutions that might be offered by the lender:

— Allowing a borrower to temporarily defer the principal portion of the monthly mortgage payments.

— Restructuring the loan so that monthly payments temporarily are lower than before.

— Making a new loan to the borrower, secured by the equity built up in the home.

While the customer's credit record already is the major factor, it is likely to play an even bigger role if the recession and high unemployment continues.

The longer the recession the more difficult it is likely to be for lenders. In areas of long-term structural unemployment there is the possibility of "serious dislocations," a cloudy cliché used in the industry.

The precise nature of the dislocations, and the actions that might be taken, aren't discussed in any detail by industry officials. "We haven't reached that point," said Kendall.

Gramm's Election Marks Only The Beginning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas is back in the House, duly elected as a Republican and claiming his strongest mandate ever to keep doing what he did as a Democrat.

He'll be a less remarkable figure now, no longer the Democrat at President Reagan's side in budget confrontations. A loyal Republican makes fewer waves than a Democrat working for the programs of a GOP administration.

Gramm, elected three times as a Democrat, resigned his seat and won it back after the Democratic caucus ousted him from the House Budget Committee because of his liaison with the Republican White House.

"With this kind of mandate and this kind of support, I'm going back to Washington with greater confidence than I ever had," Gramm said after winning 55 percent of the vote in an 11-way special election Saturday.

Political martyrdom may not be so persuasive a campaign issue in another election. Texas Democrats say that, with time to organize and raise money and with a conservative candidate, they think they can unseat Gramm in 1984.

Maybe they can, but it won't be easy. The precedents in conservative, Southern congressional districts point the other way. The cases in point are two: Albert Watson of South Carolina and John Bell Williams of Mississippi.

They were stripped of seniority by the Democratic caucus for publicly endorsing Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater in 1964. Both made an issue of their punishment by liberal Northerners, alien to their districts, and both used it to win.

Two Democrats switched to run as Republicans in the 1982 elections. One, Rep. Robert Stump of Arizona, won. The other, Rep. Eugene Atkinson of Pennsylvania, lost.

Gramm is the first Republican ever to represent his congressional district, which runs from Dallas to the northern suburbs of Houston. It is conservative Democratic territory, and his long-term future may depend on whether he can keep his constituents aware that he'd be a Democrat yet, if the party leadership hadn't punished him for supporting Reagan. So long as it's the congressman against the liberal Yankees, the issue lives. The district voted for Reagan in the 1980 presidential election.

Urge Retaining Of '82 Leaf Supports

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. (AP) — The recently organized Virginia Tobacco Growers Association Inc. has called on Congress to maintain tobacco support prices during the next two years at the same level as 1982.

More than 350 tobacco growers and industry representatives met here Thursday at the first annual meeting of the association.

The group also asked Congress to eliminate the carryover tobacco program, which allows farmers who produce above quota to carry over the excess to next season's sales, and to require non-farmer tobacco allotment holders who lease their allotment to share with the producer in the risk of growing the crop.

A slack demand for domestic tobacco last year has many growers worried that high-quality U.S. tobacco may be pricing itself out of the world market.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., a grower-owned organization that administers the price-support program, bought 259 million pounds of tobacco last year, or 26 percent of the crop put on the market.

The coop buys the leaf when it does not draw the federal support price from private buyers at auction.

Farmers are seeking to keep the support price at its present level to make domestic tobacco more competitive in world markets.

"All segments of the industry share in the blame for the situation we are in," said S.T. Moore, president of the Virginia Farm Bureau. "One of our major troubles in price. It is very apparent that we have priced ourselves out of the market."

Jim Starkey of the Universal Leaf Tobacco Co. said the only place that leaf sales are expanding is in the export market.

"Higher support prices are encouraging production in foreign countries while quota reductions are reducing domestic production... The United States has not shared in this growth. (It) has gone to our competition."

Last year, the average support price was $1.699 per pound.

"There is nothing that we can do except test the water for contamination," Benton said. "We'll just have to wait until the water clears up and then the shellfish will begin cleaning themselves out."

Amendments To DUI Bill Defeated In Committee

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's proposal to raise the minimum drinking age for beer and wine to 19 survived a challenge Thursday as a House committee defeated three amendments, including one to increase the age to 21. Meanwhile, Lt. Gov.

Jimmy Green said the version of the Hunt drunken driving package passed by the Senate Judiciary III Committee could reach the Senate floor late next week.

The Senate Finance Committee is expected to get the bill next Wednesday for a study of its monetary impact, especially the fees it imposes. If the committee finishes its review in one day, the bill could be on next Friday's Senate calendar, Green said.

"We'll let everybody have their say, and I expect some good debate," he said. "Everybody wants to get going on this."

Sen. Robert Warren, D-Johnston, chose not to introduce an amendment to raise the minimum drinking age for beer and unfortified wine from 18 to 21 instead of 19 as the bill proposes. Warren had said he'd do so only if convinced the committee would accept his amendment, and that otherwise he would introduce it when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

But in a meeting of the House Judiciary III Committee, Rep. David Bumgardner, D-Gaston, went forward with the 21-year-old proposal and was soundly defeated.

Suffering a similar fate was an amendment by Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, to have two minimum ages for drinking all alcoholic beverages — 19 for alcohol to be consumed at the place it's bought or served and 21 for off-premises consumption.

The amendment that came closest to passage was introduced by Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake. It called for keeping the liquor drinking age at 21 and the on-premises beer and wine drinking age at 18, but raising the age for off-premises beer and wine drinking to 19.

Blue and Al Adams, D-Wake, argued that the amendment would satisfy Hunt's principal concern regarding the drinking age — getting alcohol out of high schools — without imposing unrealistic restraints on college students and high school graduates entering the work force.

"We're blowing in the wind to pass a law saying an 18-year-old cannot drink beer and to think we'll keep them from drinking beer," said Adams. "I'd lots rather have my kids drinking ... where there's some supervision than in a car where they can kill themselves and their friends."

But Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, committee chairman and bill sponsor, said the amendment wouldn't deal with the problem of the 18-year-old who becomes drunk at a tavern and drives home.

The amendment failed by an 8-6 vote.

Prior to passing its substitute bill, the Senate committee approved wording suggested by Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, changing the definition of "impaired driving" as it applies to the bill.

A new driving while impaired offense is the centerpiece of the legislation, designed to curb drunken driving by making it easier to convict defendants. It requires tougher sentences and some mandatory jail terms, imposes civil liability on firms that negligently sell alcohol to the underaged or already drunk, eliminates plea bargains and requires immediate suspension of drivers' licenses.

Heman Clark, secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, warned that the adjustment — striking a provision making a person guilty of driving while impaired if he drives with any amount of alcohol in his blood — would weaken the bill.

"The task force had in mind easing the burden of proof on the state," said Clark. "This will replace the definition that has been on the books for 20 or 30 years. You'll see a lot more court fights over guilt or innocence now."

In other action, the House committee adopted an amendment creating a new crime: felony death by vehicle involving impaired driving. Presently, death by vehicle is a misdemeanor.

Blue said the amendment would give prosecutors and juries a choice other than misdemeanor death by vehicle, which they might consider too weak in cases involving impaired driving, and manslaughter or murder, which might be too strong.

The committee also: — Approved an amendment by Adams allowing law enforcement officers to set up roadblocks to check for drunken drivers. — Approved an amendment by Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, effectively barring enforcement of the law on private property.

There was no indication how much longer the House committee would debate the bill. Presently, four subcommittees are examining various sections, one of which is studying the substitute dram shop statute approved by the Senate this week.

Lancaster has asked the subcommittees to report to the full committee next week.

Angry Jimmy Green Questions Why SBI Checking Phone Calls

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An angry Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green summoned Attorney General Rufus Edmisten Thursday to find out why the State Bureau of Investigation is examining telephone records of calls made from Green's office.

Green was informed about the SBI activity in a memorandum Wednesday from Jane S. Patterson, state secretary of administration. Mrs. Patterson's office maintains records of all calls made on state telephones. The records are opened to the public.

Mrs. Patterson has confirmed the SBI activity.

The records requested by the SBI were for telephone calls made between January and April 1982. Although the period corresponds with other investigations in which Green's name has been mentioned, Justice Department officials refused to say whether Green is under investigation.

"I can't comment," said Senior Deputy Attorney General Andrew Vanore.

Senate leaders were watching when Edmisten came to Green's office. The meeting was held in Green's Legislative Building office following Thursday's Senate session. Green is the presiding officer of the Senate.

"Jimmy (Green) was trying to find out why they are looking at the records," said Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, president pro tem of the Senate.

Asked why Green called virtually the entire Senate leadership to the meeting, Lawing said, "He just wanted to let Rufus know that all of us were interested."

Lawing said, "He (Edmisten) didn't know anything about the investigation and said he would check it out. I think Rufus was sincere and honest that he did not know."

Neither Green nor Edmisten would discuss the meeting.

"I can't talk about it. I'm a gentleman and hopefully I will continue to be a gentleman," Green was quoted as saying in a story in the News and Observer.

Although neither Edmisten nor other Justice Department officials would comment for the record about the episode, one source close to Edmisten described him as "appalled, livid and extremely upset with the lieutenant governor's conduct and Jane Patterson's conduct, and he called the governor."

Mrs. Patterson said that Edmisten called her Thursday afternoon to ask her about the department's procedures.

"I told him if we were requested to withhold information on behalf of any investigative agency, we would honor that," she said. Otherwise, she said, "It is the policy of the department that, when a request is made, we notify the head of the department whose records are being requested."

Asked whether she had previously notified agencies under investigation by the SBI in similar situations, Patterson said, "I just don't know, but we've notified folks that their records are being subpoenaed."

Green and Edmisten are considered likely opponents for governor in 1984.

Citizens Urged Assist Effort

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The chairman of the Governor's Task Force on Drunk Driving Thursday called on citizens to "contribute to the efforts now going on to attack drunken driving."

"There is truly more awareness of the (drunken driving) problem and more being done about it than at anytime in our state's history," John S. Stevens of Asheville said.

Asks Re-Study Office Space

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The $8.5 million spent for a new building to house some legislators' offices is not turning out to be such a bargain, says state Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

Miller says it's taking too much time to commute between the buildings, which are separated by a street, and it's making it harder for lawmakers to exchange ideas.

"I have observed a decrease in communication between the membership," Miller said. "There is a lack of opportunity to exchange ideas."

Miller introduced a resolution Thursday calling for a study of the feasibility of remodeling the old Legislative Building so all the General Assembly's business can be conducted there and renting space in the new Legislative Office Building to other state agencies.

He said $2.6 million a year is being spent to lease office space in Wake County for 31 state agencies.

The special study committee, to be appointed by House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, would report back to the General Assembly in 1985.

Ramsey praised the idea but Lawing said he didn't believe lawmakers would like the plan.

"He is probably on the right track," Ramsey said. "There are a lot of man hours consumed (walking back and forth) that could go to something else."

"I don't believe the rank and file would go back to the old way of doing things," Lawing said. He said two buildings are less convenient but they give legislators more room.

The new building, occupied in 1982, has allowed legislators to have their own room with an adjoining room for their secretaries. In the old building, legislators shared one room with their secretaries.

The Legislative Office Building houses the offices of 22 of the 50 senators and 52 of the 120 House members. Fourteen of the 42 House committees and 11 of the 23 Senate committees meet in the building, Miller said.

The Legislative Office Building also houses three state agencies.

Ramsey said the only problem with the old building was the lack of enough room for the budget committee. He said the basement of the old building might be renovated to make new space for the committee.

"Having us all in one building is part of the grand design," Miller said. "It worked well. Our experience has shown we've lost an opportunity of exchange of viewpoints and ideas with fellow legislators."

Truck Hit In Gun Ambush

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A tractor-trailer rig belonging to a Kernersville company was hit by gunfire while passing through Greensboro Wednesday night, authorities said.

According to police, the incident took place about 8 p.m. on U.S. 29 near the East Bessemer Avenue interchange. An unknown number of shots punctured two tires on the right side of the 55-foot long flatbed truck, owned by Varco-Pruden Metal Supplies.

The driver, Conley Winfred Wolfe of Winston-Salem, was not injured and was able to bring the truck to a safe stop.

Wolfe said he heard a noise and realized a rear tire was going flat. He said because he saw no cars, he believes someone hiding along the highway shot at his rig.

Bev Armstrong, a spokesman for Varco-Pruden, said the company probably would not have a statement about the shooting.

"We just don't have enough details to say anything," she said.

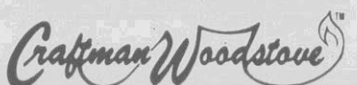

Armstrong said her company is not having labor problems. She said she could not think of a reason why anyone would want to fire at one of its trucks.

A police report on the shooting didn't indicate from where the shots were fired or what type of weapon was used. Detectives who are working on a follow-up investigation were not available for comment this morning.

Investigators charged Tripp with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of the collision.

Cars driven by Carol Jeanne Walker of Columbus and Paul Coleman Temple of College Park Trailer Park collided about 6:18 p.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Jarvis streets, causing an estimated $500 damage to the Walker car and $2,000 damage to the Temple vehicle.

Police charged Temple with failing to stop for a stop sign in connection with the mishap.

An 11:35 a.m. collision at the intersection of McClellan and Elks streets involved cars operated by Evelyn June Harris of Garner and Roy Douglas Savage of 613 Greenville Blvd.

Savage was charged with improper passing in connection with the incident, which

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

A TIME FOR WAR

GENERALLY WITH THE FIRST WARM BREEZES OF SPRING CAME THE CLOUDS OF WAR. THE WINTER RAINS AND SNOWS HAD TO BE OVER WITH BEFORE ARMIES COULD MOVE. THERE WAS NO DECLARATION OF THE INTENTION OF WAR BY ONE NATION TO ANOTHER. AN INVADERS COUNTRY KNEW IT WAS AT WAR ONLY WHEN ITS PEOPLE SAW THE FIRST TROOPS OF THE MARAUDING INVADERS. THE ISRAELITES WERE STRATEGISTS OF NOTE. THEY DID NOT HAVE THE EQUIPMENT THAT OTHER ARMIES HAD SUCH AS CHARIOTS AND WAR MACHINES. SO THEIR BATTLE PLANS HAD TO BE OUTSTANDINGLY ORIGINAL. HISTORY SHOWS THAT WITHOUT EXCEPTION THE LEADERSHIP OF THE ISRAELITES WAS PAR EXCELLENCE. IN ALMOST EVERY BATTLE THEY FOUGHT THEY WERE NUMERICALLY WEAKER BUT THEIR DARING TACTICS AND THEIR FAITH IN GOD, AS THE POTENT FORCE BEHIND THEM, BROUGHT THEM VICTORY.

Church Giving Has Seen Growth During A Period Of Hard Times

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the economic slump, giving to churches is going up, and doing so ahead of the inflation rate.

That's the finding of a survey by the National Council of Churches of 10 major Protestant denominations, and it squares with the theory that religious involvement increases in hard times.

Average per capita giving rose 13.2 percent in those church bodies in the latest year of available statistics, 1981, and total giving increased 12.5 percent, both well ahead of that year's inflation rate of 8.9 percent.

Members averaged giving $230.51 apiece, compared to $203.70 the year before.

In this country, overall religious giving amounts to about $22.1 billion annually, according to the latest 1980 figure, and its growth for several years has lagged considerably behind the inflation rate.

That de facto sag in religious budgets came at a time when greater pressure is being put on churches to step up welfare programs to fill the gap left by government cutbacks.

While leaders insist churches won't be able to take up all the slack, the new figures indicate they're making some financial headway in a shaky economic climate.

Even though total membership in the 10 studied denominations was down slightly, less than a percent, they showed a "real increase in giving," says the council's researcher, Constant H. Jaquet Jr.

He says the somewhat fewer members simply gave more and beyond the inflation rate.

Denominations in the survey were:

American Baptist Churches, American Lutheran Church, Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), Episcopal Church, Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (Southern), United Church of Christ, United Methodist Church, Lutheran Church in America, Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod and United Presbyterian Church.

All 10 registered increased giving, the Episcopal Church the most, up 37.5 percent, mainly because of a special Venture in Mission fund drive, and the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. the least, up 5.8 percent.

The figures were given in a booklet on church finances, which also shows total giving for 45 denominations totaling $9.9 billion, but previous comparative figures for them all were not available.

Jaquet notes that the total represents about 40 percent of all religious giving.

The statistics offer a rough picture of the financial growth of the larger group, however, with per capita giving in 40 denominations averaging $213.41 in 1980 and averaging $239.71 in 45 denominations in 1981, up 12.3 percent.

The study also reports that 52 percent of Americans volunteered their time free in the year for religious and welfare work.

The "dollar value" of that volunteer work was put at $64.5 billion.

Interestingly, the study found that 91 percent of those who volunteer time also contribute money, compared to only 66 percent of those who do not volunteer their time.

The implication was that generosity, if it shows up in one way, also does so in other ways, as does the lack of it.

Revival Service

Revival will be held at the Oak Grove F.W. Baptist Church in Bonner Lane Feb. 21 thru 25, 1983. Guest Speaker will be Rev. W.J. Best. The following choirs will participate: Mon. Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed no clear trend today, continuing the neutral pattern of the past few sessions.

Trading was fairly quiet on the eve of a three-day holiday weekend.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 3.34 to 1,085.57 by noon.

But gainers held a slight lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market has had no shortage of positive news going for it of late. Government reports showed a big jump in housing starts, and improvements in industrial production and factory use, last month.

But stock prices have been stalled since the major indicators reached record highs early this week and then backed away.

Analysts said there still seemed to be considerable doubts among traders about the market's ability to break through the 1,100 level in the Dow in the immediate future.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines rose 3/4 to 99 3/4, and Allied Corp. gained 1/2 to 36 1/2, but American Telephone & Telegraph slipped 1/4 to 67 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index lost .05 to 85.08. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .18 at 382.36.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 31.39 million shares at noon, against 32.64 million at the same point Thursday.

Official Suspended For Plan In Memo

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's minority affairs director has been placed on a 10-day leave while officials investigate his memo proposing a reversal of civil rights enforcement policies, according to published reports.

The Washington Post reported in its Friday editions that Isidoro Rodriguez was suspended for urging that the department take the lead in stripping federal regulations of civil rights guidelines that include minority hiring and quota goals.

The newspaper said Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng approved an order putting Rodriguez on leave. Rodriguez' memo, addressed to Secretary John Block, was sidetracked by aides before it could reach him.

Although the memo said the department was receiving support and guidance for the revisions from the Justice Department, Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds was quoted as saying he was unaware of the plan.

Wickes Sells Furniture Div.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Wickes Companies Inc. has completed the sale of its Maxwell Furniture Division to the group's previous owner, Maxwell Brothers Inc., for about $10 million in cash, Wickes officials said Thursday.

Maxwell Furniture operates 72 stores in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, and had sales of more than $40 million for the fiscal year ended Jan. 29, Wickes said in a press release.

The Maxwell group of stores was formerly owned and operated by the Maxwell family. In 1968, the chain was sold to Family Finance, which became part of Gamble-Skogmo in 1977 and part of Wickes in 1980.

Escaped With 'Guns' Of Soap

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Two federal prisoners used bars of soap carved to look like guns to escape Wednesday night from the Granville County jail, authorities said.

The two locked a jailer, a deputy, a bondsman and a county magistrate in a cell before fleeing in a patrol car, police said.

The prisoners, identified as Randall F. Mercer, 27, of North Carolina, and Robert Bernard Wolfe, 34, of New York, were awaiting trials on charges of bank robbery.

Helms Offers Own Remedy

By CLIFF HAAS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Capitol Hill critics of a Social Security bailout plan are mounting an uphill battle to change the package endorsed by President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

The latest to join the fray is Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who led an unsuccessful filibuster in December to block Senate passage of a nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax increase. That plan also had the backing of the White House and congressional leaders.

Helms was announcing a Social Security package of his own today.

Helms joins a group of critics from both parties and both ends of the philosophical spectrum. They all agree, however, that it will be difficult to force major changes in the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Speaking Thursday to the 20-member legislative council of the American Association of Retired Persons, Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., criticized the reform commission's proposal for a six-month delay in this year's cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits.

Frank also said he cannot support a provision for taxing retirees' benefits unless the income limits on who is taxed are raised each year.

He added: "I was confronted by one member of the leadership who said, 'You're rocking the boat on Social Security.'"

"I said, 'I'm trying to, but it's the damned Queen Mary. I'm jumping up and down on the railing and it's not moving,'" Frank said.

But in a separate address to the retirees' group — which claims a national membership of 14 million — Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., appealed to them to drop their opposition.

Moynihan warned that if the nation misses this opportunity, "I just don't know when again... we're going to have the chance to put Social Security on a dependable, permanently reliable basis."

"Your help will be very, very important. It could be critical," he said.

But the group was unmoved.

Another Chance To Challenge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Environmentalists have been given another chance to challenge Los Angeles' right to divert water from the million-year-old Mono Lake Basin.

The state Supreme Court told a lower court Thursday to reconsider the impact on the public trust of diverting the water.

Environmentalists estimate that since the Los Angeles Water and Power Department began diverting the water in 1940, the lake's volume has been reduced by half and more than 14,000 acres of previously submerged land has been exposed.

The Mono Lake Basin is the second largest breeding area, next to the Great Salt Lake, for the California gull.

Indict Eight In Voting Inquiry

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. attorney has promised more indictments in a vote fraud investigation that has already resulted in the indictment of eight people.

U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb on Thursday also announced "an unprecedented effort" by federal authorities to monitor Tuesday's mayoral primary that could result in "one of the most honest elections we've ever had in this city."

The eight, who were indicted by a federal grand jury, allegedly ran ballots through vote tabulators hundreds of times, forged the names of dead voters or falsely registered to vote.

Morehead State Topples Lady Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"We didn't come out to play tonight," an angry coach Cathy Andruzzi said last night after watching her Lady Pirate basketball team fall to Morehead State, 75-59.

"We had people out there tonight who didn't care whether they won or lost, and we can't have that."

The Lady Pirates trailed the entire contest, but were within range until late in the game when the Lady Eagles pulled away to their final 16-point margin.

The contest was played before one of the smallest crowds (400) in several years for the women, but Andruzzi didn't feel that the lack of fans hurt her team. "There was nothing for them (the fans) to cheer about in this one. I would have left to," she added about some leaving early.

"Mary (Denkler), Fran (Hooks) and Caren (Truske) gave all they had," the coach continued. "Fran played the whole game on a bloated ankle (sprained last Saturday during the Lady Pirate Classic) and turned in a great game. And I'm embarrassed for them (the three mentioned above)."

"But this game is a reflection of people not having heart. And our teams in the past always had heart."

Andruzzi said that she felt that Lisa Squirewell worked hard in a relief role, but that neither Sylvia Bragg nor Darlene Chaney played with any desire to win.

"If we had had the intensity, we could have come back. We had the chance. But you can't teach kids who don't have the want to win and we have some who don't have this. It's tough to say, but it's the truth."

East Carolina fell behind early as Morehead State ripped off the first five points of the game. Point guard Rita Berry hit a jumper and scored on a layup, and Priscilla Blackford added a free throw for a 5-0 lead before ECU finally got on the scoreboard on two free throws by Bragg. She then added a three-point play to knot it at 5-5 with 16:44 left.

But Blackford and Melissa Ireton each added baskets and Teresa Ruby hit another to push the Eagles back out to a six-point lead, 11-5. East Carolina pulled back within four on a jumper by Hooks, but MSU ran off the next six points to take an 11-point edge, 18-9, and ECU never closed within five after that.

After holding an 11-point advantage for several exchange, MSU began to lose ground, as Hooks hit a jumper, added two free throws and Squirewell scored a basket to trim it to 24-19 with 5:08 left in the half. However, the Pirates could come no closer and trailed, 34-27 at intermission.

ECU twice cut it back to five in the early minutes of the second half, but again, was unable to dent the lead further. Morehead State instead, inched back out to a ten-point lead, holding that for the majority of the second half. With about six minutes to go, Lynn Mile made a three-point play that upped the lead to 14, 61-47. The Pirates pulled it back to nine with 1:38 left, but didn't score again as Morehead added seven more points to its total to wrap it up.

Blackford led the Lady Eagles with 17 points and a game-high 18 rebounds, as MSU held a slim 41-39 edge in the board department. Berry and Mile each added 15 while Ireton had ten.

Denker and Hooks each had 14 for the Lady Pirates. Denker led the rebounding with 11.

MSU shot 51.9 percent from the floor for the game, while ECU was only 36.9 percent, including a 32.4 percent performance in the first half.

"Morehead State is a very tough team, a very good team, but we should have played better," Andruzzi said. "And there's no reason we shouldn't have been up for the game with just six to play."

And Andruzzi promised better things for Sunday's game with Boston University. "They're going to be playing and working so hard they're going to realize what it's all about. You have to go out with the intention of having intensity. But you can't motivate people who are without wants and needs."

ECU faces Boston at 3 p.m.

Sunday in Minges.

Bridgett, Shackelford Lead Group To Sections

A Staff Report

Sectional champions William Bridgett of D.H. Conley and Joel Shackelford of Farmville Central highlight a group of nine area wrestlers who will compete in the Eastern Regional Saturday.

The tournament is set to begin at Goldsboro High School at 10 a.m. with round one. The first consolation round will begin immediately after, followed by the semifinals at 2:30. The consolation semifinals will follow.

The consolation finals are scheduled for 6 p.m. The finals are set for around 7 p.m.

The top four wrestlers from the regional advance to the state meet which will be held at Parkland High School in Winston-Salem on Feb. 25-26.

D.H. Conley, which won the Sectional Tournament at Conley last weekend, sends seven wrestlers into the regionals and Farmville will take a pair of wrestlers to the one-day tournament.

An eighth DHC wrestler, Todd Cochran, qualified for the tournament but cannot compete because of a sprained ankle he suffered in last week's tournament. He is 17-7-1 this season at 101 pounds.

Bridgett, 27-0 on the season, takes on Curtis Washington of E.E. Smith in his first round match at 158 pounds.

Shackelford, 19-1 this year, battles Dennis Martin, 15-5-1, of Southern Wayne at 122 pounds in his first round match.

Four area wrestlers enter the tournament having finished second in the Conley sectional: DHC's Reginald Moore, Willie Greene, Stacy McCarter and Farmville's Jerry Foreman.

Foreman was injured prior to the championship match and was forced to forfeit the final match to West Carteret's Roy Heverly.

In their first round matches: Moore (22-5) battles Gartha Ingram of Fayetteville 71st at 115 pounds, Greene (17-5-1) faces William Daniels of Westover at 170, McCarter (18-5) meets Greg Rhom of E.E. Smith at heavyweight and Foreman (19-1) battles Jeff Harmond (17-1) at 135.

In other area first round matchups: Andy Majette (22-5) faces Gregg Killens of Lumberton at 141, Mike Long (23-1) faces Chris Moore of Cape Fear at 188 and Paul Menichelli (19-9) battles Robert Moody of Hoke County at 198.

Majette and Long finished third in the sectional last week and Menichelli was fourth. All three are from Conley.

D.H. Conley edged Coastal Conference foe West Carteret, 146 to 138½, to win its sectional last week, but Sherman said he does not consider his team as the favorite going into the regional.

"All the guys we're taking are capable of winning if they wrestle well," DHC coach Milt Sherman said.

"(But) West Carteret has an excellent chance (to win it)," Sherman added. "They would be my pre-tournament favorite. They've got three champions and we've got one."

"They proved they can win (it all) and what we've got are a group of scrappy guys."

Pine Forest won the Fayetteville sectional with 119½ points. Cape Fear was second with 108 and Westover was third with 106 points. Sherman said all three have a chance to win the team title this weekend.

Cummings Paces San Diego Past Warriors

By The Associated Press

As Terry Cummings gets better and better, so do the San Diego Clippers.

The brilliant rookie scored 37 points, his National Basketball Association high, and added 15 rebounds as the Clippers rolled to a 112-102 victory over the Golden State Warriors Thursday night.

The triumph improved San Diego's record since Christmas Day to 14-13 after a 4-23 start. In that same span, Cummings was named NBA Rookie of the Month in January with a 23.5-point average and has been even more impressive in February with a 27.7 norm.

"In basketball, for me, it's not enough to be one of the best," Cummings said. "I want to be the best."

San Diego Coach Paul Silas says that one secret to Cummings' success is that the Clippers' other starting forward, 6-foot-9 Tom Chambers, forces other teams to use their small forwards to guard Cummings.

Silas said Cummings, also 6-9, "can score on anybody, and he works so hard. He's quick, so he can go around bigger guys and he can out-muscle the smaller guys. He's almost impossible to stop."

"I guess I'm the biggest 'small forward' in the league," Cummings said. "The bigger forwards usually have to guard Tom Chambers, and that puts smaller guys on me. We have an awfully big front line. We give a lot of teams a lot of trouble now."

Chambers scored 16 points and center Bill Walton had 12 points and eight assists to complement Cummings, who scored 13 points in the final period to establish his season high. Previously, he had 34 points on two occasions.

The Clippers led 80-74 after three quarters and built a 13-point lead late in the game, although Golden State pulled to within six points in the final minute.

The Warriors were led in scoring by center Joe Barry Carroll, with 30 points, and guard Ron Brewer, who had 27.

Lakers 127, Mavericks 110
Los Angeles had lost twice in Dallas this season on last-second Mavericks' shots, but the Lakers left no doubt about the outcome this time as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and Norm Nixon and Earvin "Magic" Johnson added 25 each.

Los Angeles, which outscored the Mavericks 55-39, outscored Dallas 27-17 in the fourth period by hitting 12 of 14 shots in the quarter. The Mavericks managed only six baskets in 19 shots in the period.

"The Lakers were upset about losing to us and they were out to get us," said Mark Aguirre, who led Dallas with 22 points.

Nuggets 117, Nets 108
Alex English hit 15 of 17 free throws and had 33 points and 14 rebounds to lift Denver over New Jersey.

Kiki Vandeweghe added 28 points for the Nuggets, who came back to beat the Nets one night after they had trailed Philadelphia by 32 points at halftime and lost by 21.

"We seem more capable of winning after a poor effort," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We'll be in the hunt for the playoffs if we play like this every night. If we could only respond to wins this way. Unless adversity gets bad enough, we're too nice."

Trail Blazers 121, Celtics 114
Kenny Carr scored 26 points, 10 of them in the final period, as Portland handed Boston its first loss to a Pacific Division team this season.

Jim Paxson, who added 25 points for the Blazers, had eight during a 12-0 run that gave Portland its biggest lead, 84-66, with 7:47 left in the third period. The Celtics, who got 36 points from center Robert Parish, got within one point twice in the fourth quarter, but never were able to pull even.

Pistons 113, Rockets 110
John Long and Terry Tyler each had three baskets as Detroit outscored Houston 28-16 down the stretch to overcome a 10-point deficit in the final minutes.

The Pistons' run included 10 straight points after Houston led 103-99 with four minutes remaining.

Tyler finished with 25 points to lead Detroit, while Elvin Hayes paced the Rockets with 24.

Knicks 108, Cavaliers 92
New York defeated Cleveland for the 18th straight time in the last three years as Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 25 points.

Bernard King, who had not played since Jan. 14 because of an ankle injury, added 19 for the Knicks, who snapped the Cavaliers' four-game winning streak.

After leading 50-37 at halftime, the Knicks had 10 of the first 12 points of the third quarter and then scored eight in a row later in the period to take a commanding 74-47 lead.

Chaffee Gets San Diego Lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jon Chaffee, a tour longshot who spent last year as an assistant golf pro in Minnesota, was at a career crossroads when he returned for another try last month.

"This is my fifth year," said Chaffee, 27, who lost his qualifying card in 1982. "I had better make the top 125 this year or find something else to do."

Chaffee, currently ranked 150th in money earnings with $827, got the spurt of the confidence he needed Thursday. A 7-under-par 65, one shy of the course record, gave him a one-stroke lead going into today's second round of the $300,000 Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open.

"I did what everyone hopes to do on the North Course — and that's play the par 5s well," said Chaffee, who eagled two of the par 5s and birdied the other two during a bogey-free round.

His first eagle came on the 499-yard 18th hole, where he put a 1-iron within three feet. On the final hole, No. 9, he belted a 3-iron to within 15 feet and sank the putt.

Three months ago, Chaffee was among six golfers who tied for 45th and earned a qualifying card by one stroke after a six-round qualifying tournament in Ponte Vedra, Fla.

Fifteen golfers were within three strokes of the Austin, Minn., native after Thursday's opening round. Among the quartet was Ben Crenshaw, who is attempting a comeback after a 1982 collapse.

Crenshaw, 31, said his problems last year — he finished 83rd with $54,227 — forced him to make changes.

"It was time for rebuilding," he said. "I was hitting the ball too stiff legged and my body took over at the top."

Since making modifications, he has rediscovered the form that propelled him to fifth place on the money list in 1979 and 1980. He had six birdies Thursday.

Currently 12th with $37,963, Crenshaw was third in the Hawaiian Open last week, his best finish since winning the Anheuser Busch Classic in 1980.

Tied with Crenshaw at 66 were Tom Jenkins, Scott Simpson and Bruce Fleisher.

At 5-under 67 were Bob Gilder, Barry Jaeckel and Gary McCord. Eight players were three shots off the lead, including Tom Kite.

Wrecks Cast Pall Over Daytona Races

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A week of spectacular and horrifying crashes, the worst of which has left journeyman driver Bruce Jacobi in critical condition with a brain injury, has cast a pall over the preliminaries to Sunday's Daytona 500 stock car race.

Jacobi, a 47-year-old driver from Speedway, Ind., was injured Thursday when his car became airborne as it exited the troublesome second turn at the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway. His Pontiac Grand Prix flew off the racing surface, turned over several times and dug into the rain-soaked infield turf.

The auto's roof was ripped off when it made contact with the ground just five laps into the first of two 125-mile qualifying races for the $1-million Daytona 500.

The accident overshadowed last-lap maneuvers which made winners of Dale Earnhardt and Neil Bonnett in the two 50-lap qualifiers.

Swirling winds, which have played havoc all week with cars entering or exiting the 31-degree banked turns, were a factor in both races and appeared to be a major factor in Thursday's two worst accidents.

"Something was tearing up on Rusty Wallace's car," said Slick Johnson of his involvement in an accident in the second race at virtually the same spot where Jacobi crashed. "His hood blew off and he hit the wall and he came down into me."

The 26-year-old Wallace was hospitalized for observation, but his injuries were limited to a mild concussion and a strained neck.

The gusty winds seemed to be the most common thread for the rash of accidents this week, although there have been the usual mechanical problems and a controversy over the size of the rear spoilers that help stabilize the car.

The problems began Monday with Cale Yarborough wrecking his Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS moments after setting an all-time Daytona lap record of 200.503 mph in time trials. The car had to be withdrawn and that cost him the pole position for Sunday's race.

Later that day in the Busch Clash, defending 500 champion Bobby Allison wrecked his Monte Carlo, and Terry Labonte also crashed in a Chevy, taking the Fords of Earnhardt and Buddy Baker with him. On Tuesday, Allison wrecked his backup car, the Buick Regal in which he won last year's 500.

Yarborough said gusty winds definitely played a part in his crash, although Allison attributed both of his accidents to oil on the track and Labonte's was apparently caused by a tight racing situation.

The controversy over the height of the rear spoilers involves NASCAR legislating shorter deflectors for the quick new Monte Carlos and the older, highly-aerodynamic Pontiac LeMans. The problem, according to Yarborough, defending Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, Bonnett and others, is that the shorter spoilers fail to deflect air flowing over the car, thereby leaving the racers with less downforce and less stability.

That is particularly true in traffic, a fact that had a lot of people worried before Thursday's races.

"Everybody's gotta have more spoiler," Allison said. "I hope NASCAR gives us more before Sunday, but we gotta make whatever they give us work."

What worked for both

Earnhardt and Bonnett Thursday was the familiar Daytona slingshot, a maneuver in which a driver uses a vacuum created by the car he is trailing to pass on the final lap.

"I was in exactly the place I wanted to be," said Earnhardt, who overtook A.J. Foyt and then held off Baker to collect $18,000 in the $75,000 purse in his event.

"I couldn't have led the race and won it," said Bonnett, who drove his Monte Carlo under Richard Petty and held on over the final mile to win by less than a car-length. "I just hope to be there on the last lap (Sunday) and do it one more time." Bonnett, who won $50,000 for winning the Clash, also picked up an additional $18,000 in the qualifier. Sunday's race will pay more than $100,000 to the winner.

Mechanical troubles plagued Allison, Labonte and Waltrip.

Waltrip had a distributor problem that cost him two laps in the first race. He will start in 31st position Sunday, four spots ahead of Allison, who cut a tire early in the second race and never regained a lost lap.

Labonte, who will start 41st in Sunday's field of 42, never got on the track because of an ignition problem.

The first two positions for the 500 were clinched Monday by pole-sitter Ricky Rudd and Geoff Bodine during the session of time trials. The top 14 finishers in each of the qualifying races, excluding Rudd and Bodine — who both finished seventh in their respective races Thursday — also earned starting spots in the 42-car field.

The next 10 places were determined by time trials speeds among the cars that failed to qualify Thursday, with the final two spots going to Labonte and Jimmy Means by virtue of last season's point standings.

Kelly Paces St. John's Victory Over Huskies

By The Associated Press
Leave it up to Lou Carnesecca to put a basketball game in perspective.

"Their Kelley was out — and our Kelly was in," said St. John's colorful coach.

With Connecticut's leading scorer, Earl Kelley, out of action with a sprained right ankle, Bob Kelly of St. John's scored 20 points, dished out seven assists and made seven steals to lead the sixth-ranked Redmen to a 98-78 victory over the Huskies in a Big East game Thursday night.

Kelly had been averaging less than three shots a game this season. But Thursday night, he took nine. He was also having problems with his free throws. But Thursday night, he was 10-for-10 from the foul line.

"All along, Lou's been telling me, 'You have to shoot more,'" Kelly said. "Tonight I got the ball in a lot of great situations. It was easy for me to score."

The Redmen rebounded from a 17-point loss to Boston College Tuesday night.

"It was important for us to win this game, after having such a bad game against BC," Carnesecca said. "You want to bounce back and we did. There was still one part of the game I wasn't happy about, however — turnovers."

The Redmen endured 22 turnovers.

Chris Mullin was the high scorer for St. John's with 27 points. The Redmen never trailed, leading by as much as 24 points at one stage, to boost their record to 21-3. Bruce Kuczenski led Connecticut with 17 points, followed by Vernon Gishcombe with 15.

In other action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 10 UCLA whipped Stanford 99-86; No. 12 Missouri held off Kansas 74-69 and No. 20 Ohio State walloped Northwestern 71-55.

Top Twenty

Darren Daye scored 18 points and Brad Wright added 15 to lead UCLA to an easy victory over Stanford.

The Bruins, 18-3, displayed a balanced attack with seven players scoring in double figures. Kenny Fields and Rod Foster had 14 points apiece and Ralph Jackson, Michael Holton and Gary Maloncon scored 10 each.

Greg Cavener scored 21 points and grabbed nine rebounds to help Missouri beat Kansas. Missouri broke open a close game in the last three minutes as Cavener scored nine of his points.

Cavener had been shooting only 58 percent from the free throw line this year. But he hit five key free throws in the late stages for the Tigers.

"He made them when we had to have them," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "We thought about taking him out of the game when we went to the half-court offense late in the game, but he hung tough and he was the one who made them when we needed them."

Tony Campbell scored 21 points and Ohio State pulled away from Northwestern in the second half. Campbell hit seven of 15 field goal attempts, seven straight free throws and collected eight rebounds before leaving the game with more than five minutes to play and the Buckeyes owning a 62-42 cushion.

Jim Stack, whose three-point play at the buzzer beat Ohio State in their first game this season, led the Wildcats with 21 points.

"Defense, especially by our guards, was the difference in the second half," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "We cut down their penetration. We just thought about defense in the first half."

Others

In other action, Derek Harper scored 25 points to lead Illinois to a 91-71 victory over Michigan; Russell Cross scored 31 points and outscored Michigan State 7-1 during a stretch in the closing four minutes as Purdue defeated the Spartans 61-55; Virginia Commonwealth, led by Calvin Duncan and Randy Corker, hit 20 consecutive free throws in the second half and rallied to defeat Alabama-Birmingham 80-68; Glenn Rivers scored 11 of his 19 points in the second half as Marquette squeaked out a 68-62 decision over Wisconsin and James Jackson scored 19 points and West Texas State withstood a trio of Southern Illinois charges for a 89-81 triumph.

Also, Felipe de las Pozas scored a career-high 30 points to lead The Citadel to an 83-80 overtime victory over Western Carolina; Steve Taylor's field goal with 2:46 left gave Tennessee Tech its first lead of the game and its winning basket in a 66-65 win over Austin Peay; Voise Winters scored 20 points and dished out 10 assists to lead Bradley to an 82-56 win over Indiana State; Troy Lee Mikell scored 22 points as East Tennessee State tripped Marshall 86-82;

Mike O'Reilly hit two free throws after time had expired in the second overtime as George Washington defeated Rhode Island 84-82 and Steve Harris' 20 points led Tulsa over Creighton 67-65.

Brett Applegate and Devin Durrant scored 22 and 21 points, respectively, as Brigham Young beat Colorado State 69-58; Derrick Pope's 15 points and 10 rebounds drove Montana past Idaho State 69-55; Charlie Smith hit a 20-foot shot at the buzzer to boost Old Dominion to a 77-76 victory over South Alabama; Anthony Martin and Mike Jackson each scored 17 points to pace Wyoming to a 65-47 romp over Utah; Greg Grant scored 21 points to lift Utah State to a 67-59 triumph over Fullerton State; Vince Hinchey scored 22 points for Boise State, boosting the Broncos to a 68-62 victory over Northern Arizona; Danny Evans sank six free throws in the final three minutes as Oregon State defeated Washington 60-50 and Randy Worster scored 19 points to lead Weber State to a 71-54 win over Montana State.

Walker Considers Offer

CHICAGO (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker is considering an offer to give up his final season of eligibility at Georgia and sign with New Jersey of the new United States Football League, it was reported today.

Walker met with New Jersey Generals owner J. Walter Duncan on Thursday in Athens, Ga., at the request of Walker's lawyer, the Chicago Tribune said, then met with Georgia Coach Vince Dooley and told the coach he thought he would finish school.

"In my heart and soul, I want to finish college and get my degree, and I think that's what I'm going to do," Walker told the Tribune on Thursday night.

No figures were discussed with Duncan, he said. "He said he heard I was interested in playing pro ball, and he wanted me to play for his team," Walker told the Tribune.

Walker's price was estimated to be $1 million a year, the Tribune said.

Efforts by the Associated Press in Atlanta to reach Walker and Dooley were unsuccessful.

"We are aware something is about to happen, but what ever happens would come from Herschel," George McFadden, USFL public relations director, told the newspaper.

Dooley told the Tribune he would be "floored" if Walker signed now with the USFL, which opens its season March 6.

"He made the statement when he accepted the Heisman Trophy that he would return for his senior year," Dooley said. "I haven't seen him for two days, but I absolutely expect Herschel would talk to me regarding any decision to play in the USFL."

"So far, the USFL has conducted itself with great propriety in dealing with draftees. If they take Herschel, every football coach in the country would turn against them."

The Tribune said the USFL would be risking the wrath of the National Collegiate Athletic Association for signing an undergraduate if they signed Walker. It pointed out that the rival National Football League has declined for sign undergraduates, more as a matter of courtesy than legality.

Walker gained 5,259 yards in three years at Georgia, only 823 short of Tony Dorsett's four-year NCAA record. He chalked up 1,752 yards during the 1982 season and scored 17 touchdowns.

By passing up his senior year of eligibility to turn pro, Walker, a national class sprinter, also would forfeit his chance to compete in the Olympics. He has expressed hope to try out for the U.S. Olympic team in 1984.

Best-Of-Seven Playoff Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — After 13 years of best-of-five league championships, major league baseball might be going to a best-of-seven format like that of the World Series.

Subject to approval by the players' union, the new setup was announced Thursday by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn after baseball's Executive Council voted to expand the playoffs.

Since 1969, the league championships have been a best-of-five, with one division winner hosting the first two games, then the series switching sites for the last three contests. Under the new format, the sixth and seventh games would be in the city where the first two games are held.

"It is the feeling of the Council that the time has arrived to take this step," Kuhn said in a statement. "It is not an overnight decision. There has been a great deal of sentiment for some time and that feeling continues to grow."

"One reason that seems to stand out is that after playing 162 games to determine division championships, a best four-of-seven series would be a fairer way to decide league championships. It is a better test of team strength, especially the pitching."

Arthur Schack, administrator for the Players Association, said, "It's the first we've heard of it. We'll have to study it."

If the new setup is approved, the league series would start on the Tuesday following the end of the season in at least one league, Kuhn said. The World Series would return to a Saturday start with Game 7 eight days later.

The Executive Council is chaired by Kuhn and made up of American League president Lee MacPhail, National League president Chub Feeney and club executives Dan Galbreath of Pittsburgh, Bob Lurie of San Francisco, Peter O'Malley of Los Angeles, Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox, Bud Selig of Milwaukee, Ballard Smith of San Diego, Haywood Sullivan of Boston and Edward Bennett Williams of Baltimore.

Dream Mile Scheduled At K Of C Track Meet

CLEVELAND (AP) — With Eamonn Coghlan atop the list, the best indoor milers in the world will be on the same track for the premier mile run of the indoor track season Saturday, says former world-class runner Marty Liquori.

Billed as the "dream mile" by organizers of the 43rd Knights of Columbus track meet, the event will be the strongest in the meet's recent history.

Challenging Ireland's Coghlan, who holds the world indoor mark of 3:50.6, will be Steve Scott, John Walker of New Zealand, Sydney Maree of South Africa and Ray Flynn of Ireland.

"I don't think anybody's missing," said Liquori, who will comment on the race for ABC-TV's Wide World of Sports. "Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett were both injured last year, and they don't really get in shape for the indoor season."

Scott owns the second-fastest indoor mile at 3:51.8. Maree has run the third-fastest outdoor mile, 3:48.3. Walker won an Olympic silver medal in 1976, and Flynn holds the Cleveland meet record at 3:59.53.

Coghlan, undefeated in his first four races this year, and Scott will be taking on one another on the heels of a race Friday night in San Diego.

"I've done it many times, and it seems I often have run some of my fastest times the second night when I was tired and relaxed," Scott said. "That's the key, to be relaxed. I'm strong. I've trained hard."

Liquori, whose mark of 3:55 in 1975 represented the second-fastest indoor mile at the time, said Coghlan's indoor success can be attributed to his intelligence and acceleration.

"Tactically, you have to be smarter indoors," Liquori said. "You can't make many mistakes indoors. Outdoors, the last straightaway is 150 yards — you can always run somebody down. You can't do that indoors."

"Eamonn usually will follow as long as he possibly can. He has the best acceleration of anybody in the field. He can be up to full speed in about five or six steps. He can pass somebody before they even know what happens."

Scott is probably a bit faster than Coghlan outdoors, Liquori said, adding, "If he (Scott) is going to win, he'll have to take the lead with two or three laps to go."

Maree and Walker are both better outdoors, but Flynn is strong indoors because he is "a lightweight guy," Liquori said.

In other events, sprinter Stanley Floyd, who ran the 55-meter dash in a world record 6.15 seconds last year, will return to defend his title, while defending champion Larry Jesse leads a field of five pole vaulters who have cleared 18 feet or higher.

'Ghandi' Leads Academy Award Nomination List

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sex changes are popular this year with Oscar voters, who heaped a total of 19 Academy Award nominations on movies that feature men playing women or women playing men. It can get a little confusing. One of those movies,

"Tootsie," drew 10 nominations Thursday, including best picture, actor, supporting actress and supporting actor — a total topped only by the 11 nominations for "Gandhi," which had no sex changes at all. "Tootsie" will vie for best picture of 1982 along with "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" (nine nominations).

"Gandhi," "The Verdict" (both with five nominations) and "Missing" (four nominations). In all, 34 movies will be competing in 24 Oscar categories on April 11 in ceremonies broadcast live by ABC-TV from Los Angeles. Before the nominations were announced by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, movie industry punsters had suggested tongue-in-cheek that Academy voters would not know in which category — male or female — to place Julie Andrews, who played a female posing as a male cabaret artist performing in drag in "Victor-Victoria," and Dustin Hoffman, who was a female soap opera star in "Tootsie."

man," James Mason, "The Verdict," and Robert Preston, "Victor-Victoria." Richard Attenborough, who for 20 years tried to make the movie Hollywood wouldn't, "Gandhi," was rewarded with a best director nomination for his efforts. After he made the film with English and Indian financing, Columbia Pictures agreed to release it.

A Review

Many Rewards, Some Drawbacks In 'Custer'

Director Edgar Loessin and the cast of "Custer" have made admirable efforts to bring Robert Ingham's "Custer" to life — a formidable challenge in light of some serious weaknesses in the play's structure. ("Custer," which is having its premiere performance in North Carolina, opened Thursday night at McGinnis on the ECU campus. The play will be performed nightly through Tuesday with curtain time each evening at 8:15 p.m.)

The most disconcerting shortcoming in "Custer" is the lack of focus, of a central intent in what the playwright is trying to tell his audience. Much of this could be corrected with substantial cuts, and a greater degree of cohesiveness of the play's material.

A particular noticeable instance of several "asides" that constitute nagging distractions and impedes the flow of action is when soldier George Yates (Gregory Brown) delivers an aimless, confused tribute to his wife. The intrusions serve also to stretch the play out too long (more than two hours).

On the other side of the ledger, there are numerous rewards. Ingham uses the device of having the audience judge from the standpoint of "here and now" evidence voiced by the long-dead characters themselves. This evidence we are to evaluate in drawing our own conclusion of whether Custer was hero or flamboyant scoundrel, and more importantly, if the disaster of Little Big Horn could have been prevented.

The evidence is unmistakably weighted in favor of Custer having been a reckless, publicity-seeking figure, basically incompetent militarily, but gifted in the area of self-glorification. In contrast, officer Frederick Benteen is presented as a perceptive leader, loved and respected by his men, but doomed, as a subordinate to Custer, to suffer cruel out-

Gregory Watkins, as the pompous Custer, and Gary Weathersbee as Benteen, give excellent accounts of themselves in their roles.

Weathersbee has the good fortune of having the best role in the play, one rich in strikingly succinct expressions of one man's philosophy.

Ingham has assigned to Custer's wife, Elizabeth Bacon Custer (Donna Lynn Cooper) characteristics both of a woman endowed with graciousness and femininity, and a darker vein of unalloyed ambition that blinds her to the possibility that her husband-hero is in essence a strutting peacock. Ms. Cooper probes each facet of the character with assurance.

Robert John Willie as the weak Marcus A. Reno; Jeffrey Benninghofen in the role of guitar-playing Lt. Harrington; Christopher Watson as the Boston Irishman who bounces back after each failure; and Timothy White in the role of a country soldier each provide fine interpretations in smaller roles.

John Mark Mueller is impressive as the Indian who muses on the fact he's always being told "don't worry, which always worries me when it's said by a white man."

Others in the cast are Robert Ruffin as Wooden Leg and Lt. Scott; Kurt Fortmeyer as one of the men, and Denise Miller, Karen Gunther and Linda Woolard as first, second and third woman.

"Custer" succeeds in revealing the age-old ups and downs of a military career (depending on the presence or lack of wars to be fought), and it is enhanced by the inclusion of a number of fine old songs, including the famous tear-jerker, "Just Before the Battle, Mother."

Gregory Buch's simplified, multilevel scenery, David Downing's lighting, and costumes provided by Patrice Alexander are all, as usual in ECU productions, first rate and add immeasurably to the effectiveness of this production.

The basic premise of "Custer" is an interesting one, full of promise, but playwright Ingham has not quite succeeded in endowing good material with the elusive ingredients of cohesiveness and excitement that makes the difference between a totally rewarding theater experience and one that leaves the viewer wishing it had been more satisfying.

Soviet Diplomat Raps Film As Unflattering

By CAROL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Ending unflattering stereotypes of Soviet people — like those in the television miniseries "The Winds of War" — would improve relations between the Soviet Union and the United States, a Soviet diplomat says.

A scene in last week's ABC presentation showed a drunken Soviet army officer being carried out of an elegant dinner at the Kremlin, and nothing like that has ever happened, said Valentin M. Berezkhov of the Soviet embassy in Washington, D.C.

"The only person who was ever carried out of a Kremlin dinner was a bodyguard to (Winston) Churchill," Berezkhov said Thursday before a news conference here to discuss the arms race.

In an off-hand exchange about the movie portraying events leading up to World War II, Berezkhov said he thought the film version of Herman Wouk's epic novel didn't do justice to the original story.

"The book was somehow more balanced," Berezkhov said. "Many things (in the movie) were quite distorted, as if they were trying to show the whole second world war was fought by America. We are shown there by chance."

The 18-hour series "didn't show the real significance of the contributions of the Soviet Union," Berezkhov said.

After fielding a few questions on how a nuclear arms agreement should be approached, the former Soviet Navy officer and journalist chastised the U.S.

news media for what he says is "sensational" and "irresponsible" reporting on the subject of arms control.

Editors and reporters publish whatever information they gain from confidential sources without regard to its effect on delicate political negotiations, he said.

"I don't say you have to support your government at all times when you know the government is wrong, but there are certain situations where a responsible editor would think twice" before going to press, said Berezkhov, the representative in Washington of the Institute on USA and Canadian Studies of the USSR Academy of Sciences.

Helen Hayes An Honored Guest

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Actress Helen Hayes will be the honored guest at the Madonna Foundation's annual "Angels of Madonna" fund-raising dinner here.

Proceeds from the April 18 event will go to the Madonna Professional Care Center, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year.

The Madonna Foundation runs nursing homes for the elderly.

Miss Hayes, 82, began acting at the age of 6. She has won two Oscars for her roles in movies, has appeared in 70 Broadway plays and has written two books.

She has been active in advocating the rights of elderly and disabled people.

Hospital Tests Andy Williams

ENCINITAS, Calif. (AP) — Singer Andy Williams has been resting comfortably after a series of tests to determine the cause of chest pains and indigestion, hospital officials say.

Williams, 52, entered Scripps Memorial Hospital on Wednesday after withdrawing from the pro-am event of the Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego

Open, a golf tournament he has helped sponsor since 1968.

Hospital spokeswoman Mary Jane Halsey said Thursday it was not known when Williams will be released.

Top $3 Billion In N. C. Travel

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has announced that travel expenditures in North Carolina last year exceeded $3 billion for the first time.

According to preliminary estimates, 1982 travel expenditures are expected to surpass the $2.7 billion recorded the previous year by almost $400 million, Hunt said.

The North Carolina Travel Survey shows that approximately one out of every six travel dollars ends up as revenue to the state. This is expected to total almost $500 million for 1982.

FOCUS

An American in Orbit

Today, as a Senator from Ohio and a likely candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, John Glenn has both feet firmly on the ground. But twenty-one years ago this weekend, as astronaut John Glenn, he flew farther and faster than any American before him. The space age began in 1957 with the Soviet satellite Sputnik, and by April of 1961, Yuri Gagarin had made the first manned orbital flight. But it was not until February 20, 1962 that John Glenn became the first American to travel into Earth orbit. His spacecraft, the Friendship 7, circled the Earth three times in less than five hours while millions watched the flight on TV. By the time he splashed down again, he had become an American hero.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the first American to go into space?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse were leaders of the Sioux.

There is a little larceny in all of us. And at the bridge admiration for the artist who can convince another that the tricks he is looking at are a mirage. A galaxy of deceptive plays has been collected by

Scottish author Hugh

of the hands and situations will be familiar to readers of this column, but this book will provide several hours of pleasant reading and could help you to be less obvious in your play of the cards.

This example features two of the great pairs of yesteryear. Sitting North-

South were Eric Jannersten

and Jan Wohlin of Sweden,

while East-West were Boris

Schapiro and Terence Reese

of Great Britain. The contract was normal, and Reese

made his natural lead of the queen of hearts.

The unthinking play by declarer at trick two is to start on diamonds. But watch what would happen. East would win and continue with a heart, and declarer would be able to take only eight tricks before he had to start on clubs. West would then make the rest of the tricks

with the ace of clubs and three hearts.

Wohlin saw that he would get no more than eight tricks

if he went after diamonds, so at trick two he boldly led the king of clubs! West had no idea that it was his partner who held the queen — he was afraid that, by winning the ace of clubs, he would set up up.

With a club trick in the

to the king of diamonds. Now

he could run nine tricks

before the defenders could get the hearts going.

At Least Job Knew Patience

By GAIL MICHAELS
During the past week I have been reading the Book of Job in an attempt to reconcile myself with God's bestowal of a maid upon my childless nextdoor neighbor and a temperamental washing machine upon me.

So far I haven't been successful. Job had the advantage of being a patient man from the very beginning. But I am cursed with the disposition of Wonderland's Queen of Hearts. I have trouble maintaining my equanimity at the best of times. And to be the subject to such a personality and my family and appliances is simply too much for a mere human to endure.

I have been trying though. I have told myself over and over that my washing machine's breakdown during Zachary's potty training was a fluke and not the design of a malevolent universe. I told myself that when the Sears repairman informed me that he needed a week to repair this maddening but indispensable appliance. Meanwhile, my dirty laundry was multiplying like rats in a grain elevator, and Zachary's evident affinity for moist clothing only exacerbated the problem.

One would think that between handwashing training pants and following Zachary's bottom across the carpet with a trail of Glory I would have had no time for joyriding and thus would have gladly loaned Phillip my car when his required extensive repair.

But I had promised the Brownie Scout leader that I would accompany her troop on a tour of a bakery on Wednesday afternoon. I was supposed to meet her at the school at 3 p.m. Phillip solemnly promised to be home by 1 p.m. Naturally, he pulled into the driveway at 1:55. "I lost track of the time," he explained without a trace of remorse.

I was left with an hour and five minutes to pack the car with Zachary and the potty and the dwindling supply of dry clothing and to drive Phillip across town and into the hills to pick his own car up in a "prestige subdivision with many dignitarious homes," according to the sign out front. Then I had to get back by myself.

Luckily, I did, and in all the rush I had forgotten only two items: Zachary's shoes. I had to carry him and a complimentary bag of smashed brown-and-serve rolls throughout the bakery. The only time I put him down was when Meg dropped her Brownie Scout pin into the dough machine.

Of course, the lack of transportation during the first of the week had given rise to a ridiculously long list of errands. There was no way to put them off any longer. That's why it rained on Thursday. That's why my umbrella broke and kept closing over my head as I attempted to hurry Zachary, who picked this day to insist upon walking. We were both drenched, but that didn't bother him. We had to ride up and down the escalators six times before I managed to drag him homeward.

On Friday I awoke with a cold. But when my neighbor (not the childless one) called me to ask if I'd keep her little boy, I figured why not. One more bull in a stampede couldn't matter. For awhile, he and Zachary occupied themselves by snatching puzzle pieces from one another. Then they started to discuss their mothers.

"I didn't go to preschool yesterday," Andy said. "I was sick. My mama said she was sick, too."

Zachary, who had spent all week listening to my diatribes on the human condition and mine in particular, looked over at me. "My mommy says she sick and tired. But she says that all the time."

Cycle Collides With School Bus

Kevin Patrick Woods of 1109 West Wright Road was injured Wednesday afternoon when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a school bus, according to police.

Officers said the 2:41 p.m. accident occurred at the intersection of 10th Street and Forest Hill Circle, and identified the driver of the bus as Tonya Ann Bolton of 213 Fleming Dorm.

Investigators, who charged Miss Bolton with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage to the motorcycle at $1,000. They said no damage resulted to the bus and none of the 33 children on the bus were injured.
