Lawmakers Assert EPA Undermined By Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has appointed environmental officials who don't believe in the laws they are supposed to administer, a pair of key congressional leaders from both parties says.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., and Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press" program Sunday, pointed to President Reagan's appointments in discussing the controversies surrounding EPA, some of its top officials and its hazardous waste cleanup program.

"Basically, we're seeing the outcome of an administration which doesn't believe in the environment, which made war on the environment and which has key people administering laws who don't believe in it," said Udall, chairman of the House Interior Committee.

"He (President Reagan) has appointed people... who simply don't believe in the laws they're appointed to administer," Udall said. "It's now coming through. It cuts very deep, and I don't think the White House can get away from it."

Chafee, chairman of the Senate environmental pollution subcommittee, said, "The president ran on a certain platform. He appointed these people who are enunciating his views."

"They aren't my views, they aren't the views of many of the Republicans in the Senate and House, and I don't think they're always the views of the American people," Chafee said.

A White House official disputed the charges. "We want to protect the environment. That's precisely where the president stands," Edwin L. Harper, Reagan's assistant for policy development, told the Washington Post.

Chafee said Rita M. Lavelle, the fired EPA official who last week defied a House subpoena for her testimony, will appear this week before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee. It is one of six congressional panels probing EPA's handling of the $1.6 billion "superfund" program to clean up abandoned toxic waste dumps.

Meanwhile, EPA Administrator Anne McGill Burford has asked the Justice Department to determine whether Ms. Lavelle acted improperly at the time of government negotiations on cleaning up hazardous waste, high agency officials told The New York Times.

Mrs. Burford was known as Anne M. Gorsuch until Sunday, when she was married. She said through a spokesman that she was taking her husband's name.

Pitt To Lease Scanner

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners this morning agreed to lease an optical scanner for the data processing center from National Computer Services.

The board earlier this month took bids for the purchase of the equipment and NCS submitted a bid of just over $49,000.

Gene Whidham, data processing manager was asked to look into the possibility of leasing the equipment, and he reported today that the monthly rental on the equipment, including maintenance, would be $1,565.

Whidham said 40 percent of the monthly rental fee would be applied to the purchase price if the board decides to buy the equipment if it is found to be satisfactory.

Commissioners today also approved the purchase of a radio for the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad at a cost of $2,658. The radio will be used on a second rescue truck to be acquired by the squad, which began operations in August, 1982.

The board also approved the lease of 12 acres of land at the landfill site on the Allen Road to Charles Stocks, who submitted a high bid of $30 per acre.

In other business, commissioners told county agricultural extension service chairman Leroy James to apply for a possible state grant of $4,100 to fund part of the cost of installing a microcomputer for the extension service office. If approved, the county share of the project would be some $2,200.

James said the computer and software would be made available for use by farmers for record keeping and other farm-related activities.

Commissioners appointed Robert Ramey to the Domiciliary Home Community Advisory Committee to replace Mrs. Martha Bullock who resigned, and appointed Larry Lewis to a three-year term on the Farmville Planning Board as an extraterritorial representative at the request of the town of Farmville.

Commissioners also reappointed Louis Singleton and Noel Lee Jr. as members of the Pitt County Hospital Board of Trustees as recommended by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Indira Gandhi Flies To View Killings In Assam

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi flew today to the state of Assam to investigate personally reports that up to 1,000 people were slaughtered in one of the latest outbreaks of violence sparked by elections she ordered.

Mrs. Gandhi arrived at Tezpur, 1,000 miles east of New Delhi, under heavy security and was to ride in a helicopter over the sites of some of the worst violence.

Her visit was prompted by reports that Hindu tribesmen wielding spears, hatchets and machetes butchered at least 600 Moslem Bengalis in 17 northeast villages Friday in the Nelli district. Witnesses said most of the victims were women and children and estimates of the killing ranged up to 1,000.

The government has sent thousands of troops to the district to help police halt nearly three weeks of violence set off by a Hindu boycott of state elections. The district lies just south of the Brahmaputra River, which Indians call "River of Sorrow."

In New Delhi, Mrs. Gandhi's government was accused by opposition leader Madhu Dandavate of "Hitlerite tactics" in imposing on Assam "a live election over dead bodies."

Reports of Friday's massacre filtered out of the hilly tea-growing region, almost completely separated from India by Bangladesh, on Sunday. Estimates of the killings varied up to 1,000 and the United News of India reported that about 6,000 survivors poured into three relief camps.

New Facility Now Operating

Greenville's new $11.5 million water treatment plant is now operating about 12 hours per day, Greenville Utilities Commission Director Charles Horne said this morning.

According to Horne, the new plant, with the capacity to produce up to 12 million gallons of water per day, will probably go into operation on a full-time basis about the first of April.

At present he said, the old plant is being operated from 8 p.m. until 8 a.m., while the new plant is being operated from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. so employees can gain experience.

Between two and three million gallons of water a day are being produced by the new facility at the present time, Horne noted.

Construction of the facility began in October 1980. The formal dedication of the water treatment plant will be held March 28.

Horne said in addition to the $11.5 million cost of construction for the plant facilities, another $1.5 million has been spent on water transmission lines to link the plant with the city's water distribution system.

Killing Of Livestock By Wild Dogs Said 'Routine' In County

From Staff and Wire Reports
Wild dogs? In Pitt County? According to Pitt County Environmental Health Director Willie Pate, there are several packs in the area, but while wild dogs killing livestock is "routine," it is not excessive, Pate said.

"It is routine for us to receive calls about young cattle, pigs and goats being killed," Pate said this morning when asked if incidents similar to the Saturday killing of nine deer at a Grandfather Mountain wildlife preserve happen in this area.

"It left us with no deer at all," said Hugh Morton, owner of Grandfather Mountain. "We're just making the best of it by dressing the meat up to go into the freezer to feed the cougars."

Pate said some killings of more than a few animals at a time have occurred in Pitt County. "In the fall of 1982, a bunch of goats were killed in Winterville by some wild dogs," he said.

Several cows were also killed in Pitt County two years ago and most recently, pigs owned by a Pitt County farmer were dinner for some wild dogs.

There is no exact figure of how many dogs go wild or are already wild in Pitt County, but there are enough for county and city dog control services to set out traps.

"We don't use poison or anything like that, we usually set traps and if we have to, we'll shoot the dogs," Pate said.

City Animal Control Supervisor Audro Barrett said cages and traps are also used within Greenville town limits.

"We only catch about one a night, but over a period of time, we'll lower the number of wild dogs in the area," Barrett said.

People are not in much danger of being attacked by wild dogs, Pate said. "However, it has been known to happen," he said. The biggest fear of animal control officers is the possibility of rabies, Pate said.

"These dogs are always a source of rabies. Although rabies are not a problem in Pitt County, it could become a problem if we did not monitor the situation," Pate said. "Wild dogs are certainly more exposed to rabies than pets and if the wild dogs get it, it will probably be passed along to pets somewhere along the line. That is why we encourage people to keep their pets vaccinated," he said.

Front-Runner Mondale Enters 1984 Demo Race

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, declaring "I am ready to be president of the United States," today entered the race for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination with all the advantages and perils of being the early front-runner.

In a speech prepared for delivery at the Minnesota State Capitol, Mondale cited his service in state and federal government and said:

"I have the experience. I know where the talent is. I know the White House. I know how to shape a government. I know how to manage. I know the Congress. I know how to defend this country. I know how to search for peace. I know who our friends are. I'm on to our enemies. I know our people. And I know myself: I am ready."

Mondale entered the race after a year of non-stop campaigning.

With a strong staff in place and a solid fundraising base, Mondale was the acknowledged front-runner in a growing Democratic field.

Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado already have announced their candidacies. Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina are expected to announce within the next two months.

Former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida will enter the race on Wednesday.

Mondale, during a three-day campaign trip through Iowa and New Hampshire, plans speeches on farm issues and arms control, but his declaration of candidacy stuck to general principles rather than specific proposals.

"I ask for your mandate to seize the American advantage — to invest in our values, our talent, our competitiveness, our strength and our survival," he said.

He added that no president can do that alone:

"Everyone must contribute; all must sacrifice. And I call for realism. There is a long haul ahead. Politicians must stop peddling quick fixes and all of us must remember that education, training, research, enterprise and all things that count take time."

He called on Congress "to chop those deficits down, scale the defense budget to reality, repeal the scheduled tax cuts for the wealthy, repeal indexing and keep our tax system progressive."

On foreign policy, he said "I enter this race not just to seek a victory, but to point toward sanity."

Mondale said the United States should ratify the SALT II treaty, stand by the ABM treaty and negotiate a comprehensive test ban agreement.

"We must have a president who masters the arms-control process, does the hard bargaining with the Soviets, negotiates a mutual and verifiable nuclear freeze and, at long last, reverses this mindless, wasteful madness," he said.

After the announcement, Mondale was launch his three-day campaign swing with a quick flight to Minnesota's Iron Range, where unemployment has reached 30 percent in some communities.

The rest of the itinerary is traditional for a presidential candidate. Iowa kicks off the delegate-selection process next February with precinct caucuses; New Hampshire is the site of the first presidential primary.

An early advocate of legislation designed to curb the adverse impact of foreign cars on the U.S. automobile industry, Mondale has strong support within organized labor, which is trying to play a decisive role in the battle for the Democratic nomination.

Mondale became the man to beat in the Democratic field when Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., announced last Dec. 1, that he wouldn't run for president in 1984.

First State Bank Stockholders Hear Reports

C.D. Langston, president of First State Bank, said at First State's 77th annual stockholders meeting this morning that the county's only locally owned bank measured its 1982 success with "significant progress."

Langston told shareholders of the state's second oldest state-chartered bank that "growth and progress were achieved and the second best year in the history of the bank was established in per share earnings, despite a narrowing rate spread situation which persisted for all of 1982."

Per share earnings for the year amounted to $8.72, he said, down from the previous record earnings of $9.13 per share established in 1981. Total resources as of Dec. 31 amounted to $41,134,470.

Langston told the shareholders, "Looking forward, with a cautious eye on the economy, we hope to continue our growth and to expand our service facilities in the near future. We believe that the basic soundness and liquid condition of your bank will permit us to take advantage of such opportunities."

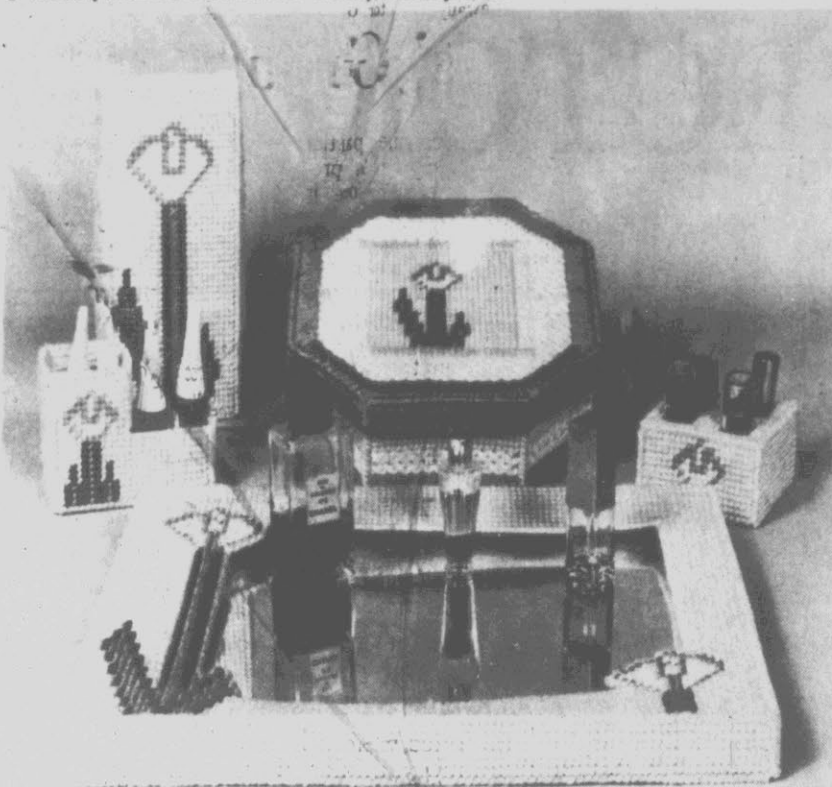

He said, "Significant contributions have been made to the community in interest paid to depositors, in salaries and employee benefits, and in other expenditures made within the community during 1982 totaling over $4 million."

First State's original office is in Winterville and three other offices are located in Greenville. Langston said an additional location to serve the eastern area of the city has been approved by regulatory authorities.

The board of directors elected for 1983 include Langston, William C. Glidewell Jr., Vernon E. White, Kenneth K. Dews Sr., John F. Minges, W.M. Scales Jr., J. Milton May, and W.A. Weatherington Sr.

Officers elected for 1983 include: Langston, president and board chairman; White, vice president; Glidewell, senior vice president; Pam Kachmer, vice president; Charles D. Burnette, vice president; Tommy Langston, cashier; Marie E. Mills, assistant cashier; and Jerry L. Jones, assistant cashier.

SPRING SET...to keep makeup even for the beginner. items in place is easy to needlepoint

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Even if the wintry winds are still howling, you'll be thinking spring as you stitch this enchanting dresser set. It's worked on 7-mesh plastic canvas with ever-so-simple needlepoint stitches. The Spring Flowers Set consists of a perfume or cosmetic tray, a cover for a hair spray can, lipstick and nail polish "caddies" and a roomy octagonal box for other necessities. Designed exclusively for this column by Susan Strange of Oak Lawn, Ill., this is an ideal project for a beginner.

To obtain directions for making the Spring Flowers Dresser Set, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-2200 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. NK-2200 by sending a check or money order for $16.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains instructions, plastic canvas and yarn sufficient for making the complete set, with shipping charges included. The optional mirror for the perfume tray is not included. Please specify your choice of the following spring pastels for the background: pink, blue, yellow or lavender.

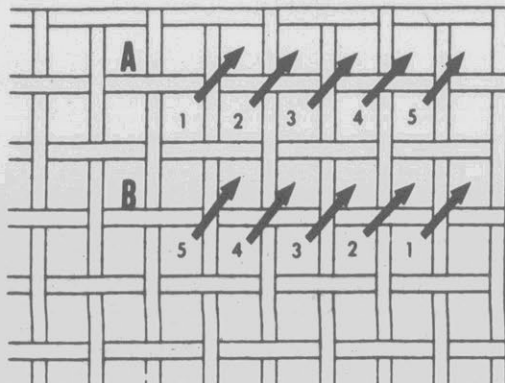

Dear Pat: As a beginning needlepointer, I have been going over several sets of directions trying to decide what to tackle. Most that I have seen do have stitch diagrams that I can usually follow. However, I have one that calls for a continental stitch with no diagrams given. From the picture, it appears to be done in the half-cross stitch, which I have done. Can you tell me what is the difference between these two stitches? — Mary H., San Diego, Calif.

The basic stitch for needlepoint is the tent stitch — which is further identified as half-cross, continental, basketweave or diagonal tent. The first two will be discussed today with the others treated in a future column.

Each looks almost identical on the front of your work, but has a different appearance on the wrong side. Any of these refers to a single stitch taken diagonally over one thread or rib of canvas.

Most beginners unknowingly work a combination of these two on a single piece, working across in one direction and then back in the other direction on the following row. This seems perfectly logical, and as you work, all of the stitches look alike.

When the piece is finished, however, it will have a ridged appearance. This is because when you work the continental stitch, your work is lightly "padded." Work a couple of rows of each stitch and then look at the wrong side of your work. You will see that the continental sample covers the back as well as the front of the canvas while the half-cross does not.

While the half-cross requires less yarn, my preference between the two stitches is the continental. On cotton canvas, the half-cross has a strong bias pull and distorts the canvas so that drastic blocking is often needed. While there is some distortion with continental, it is less pronounced.

On plastic canvas, distortion is no problem, but it is difficult to secure your yarn ends under the vertical bars that appear on the reverse side of the half-cross stitch. The padded continental stitch gives a wrong-side surface that makes this easy. Also, if your yarn is the least bit thin for the plastic mesh, the continental covers better.

The lines of the chart pictured represent the threads or ribs of canvas and the chart squares denote the holes of the canvas, while each stitch is represented by an arrow. In each case, bring the needle up at the base of an arrow and take it down at the arrow point. Follow the sequence of the numbers for the proper stitch direction.

She Offers French Cooking

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

It isn't often an author puts as much of herself in a book as has Lydie Marshall in "Cooking with Lydie Marshall" (Knopf).

Any cook who uses the book is bound to feel Lydie is enormously eager to offer, in a delightful way, every scrap of help she can give.

But then Lydie has an unusual background. Before she opened her New York City cooking school, "A La Bonne Cocotte," she taught university French and Spanish and was an exceptionally gifted teacher. When she decided that conducting cooking classes was her metier, she brought to them the teaching techniques she had previously worked out so successfully.

She writes with such enthusiasm, humor, encouragement and knowledge that "Cooking with Lydie Marshall" should aid many cooks. And they will be able to present some marvelous dishes because Lydie's recipes reflect her extraordinarily discriminating taste.

Lydie was born and raised in France until she was in her teens. Then, an orphan, she came to the United States to live with her aunt and uncle. Every year since she has returned to spend months in France — some of this time given over to professional study of French cooking.

She says in her book: "The cooking I teach is influenced by my French background; but more than French cooking, I teach good home cooking."

Her book is organized into 22 chapter-lessons that become "progressively more complex, but not all the recipes (in each lesson) necessarily get more difficult." Each chapter-lesson contains a group of menus a cook may choose from. Recipes accompany the menus, or are in preceding chapters.

Here is an easy-to-make, but captivating, dessert from her book:

LYDIE MARSHALL'S APPLE GRATIN
4 large apples, about 1 1/4 pounds
1 teaspoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup heavy cream

LYDIE MARSHALL — Famous for her French cooking classes in New York City and now author of "Cooking with Lydie Marshall"

Cream Cheese Topping (recipe follows)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Peel, core and quarter the apples. Cut each quarter into 1-3rd inch slices and sprinkle 1 teaspoon lemon juice over them.

Butter generously a 1 1/2-quart baking dish and lay overlapping slices of apples in the dish. Sprinkle with sugar and add the butter, cut into very thin slices.

Bake for 1/2-hour. Turn the oven to 500 degrees. Spread the cream over the apples and bake 5 minutes more or until the apples are slightly golden on top.

Serve hot as is or with Cream Cheese Topping on the side. Makes 4 servings.

CREAM CHEESE TOPPING
3 ounces cream cheese, at room temperature
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon brandy
In a 1-quart bowl with an electric beater, beat the cream cheese until fluffy — 30 seconds or so. Add the cream and sugar and, scraping the bowl as necessary, beat to blend. Beat in the brandy. Refrigerate until serving time. Makes about 1 cup.

Lime Fromage & Coffee

LIME FROMAGE

A fabulously good lime version of a famous Scandinavian dessert.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup milk
4 large egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar
1 pint half-and-half
Grated rind from 2 medium limes
1/4 cup lime juice
In a cup sprinkle gelatin over milk to soften. In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan beat the egg yolks slightly; gradually beat in the sugar until thickened and lemon color; add the half-and-half and beat to blend. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture coats a spoon — about 10 minutes; do not allow to boil. Off heat, stir in lime rind and gelatin mixture until gelatin dissolves; gradually stir in lime juice. Turn

1 inch). Roast uncovered in a preheated 425-degree oven until browned — about 30 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees. Discard fat in roasting pan; return ribs to pan without rack. In a medium bowl stir together mustard, Worcestershire sauce, ketchup, water, vinegar, onion and sugar; pour over ribs. Tightly cover pan with foil; bake in the 350-degree oven, turning once midway, until tender — about 2 hours. Remove ribs and keep warm in a low oven. Pour sauce into a small bowl and skim off fat; reheat sauce and pour over ribs. Makes 4 servings.

WILD WESTERN WEDDINGS

Elaborately expensive weddings can, of course, occur all over the United States, and do — and not just among the wealthiest families. But some parts of the country do have a reputation for doing things "bigger and better" — or at least more unusually — than others. For example:

At one Texas oil-money wedding, 1,000 guests were served filet mignon and a 30-foot cake. The bill for flowers alone came to $28,000.

In one California wedding, eight pink-dressed bridesmaids marched down the aisle, each leading a pink ribboned poodle on a pink leash.

For another Hollywood wedding reception, the swimming pool was emptied and then filled with a solid ton of oranges.

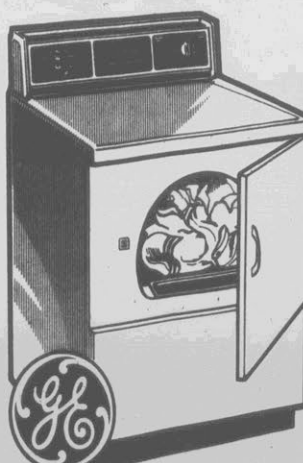

One Texas wedding, in very friendly fashion, included seven sets of "parents" for the bride and groom: the bride's mother and her second husband, the bride's father and his third wife, plus his second wife and her current husband; the groom's father and mother with their respective third spouses, plus each of their "exes" and THEIR spouses.

Dear Abby

Name Changer May Want To Change Mind

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The "Proud Orlikoffs" were upset because their son (a lawyer) married a woman named Reilly, and instead of her taking his name, Orlikoff, he changed his name to Reilly. His reason: Should he decide one day to run for public office, Orlikoff sounds too Russian; furthermore, people would be more inclined to vote for a "Reilly" than an Orlikoff.

Abby, please advise young Orlikoff to check out some of the names of people who are elected officials before giving up his family name.

From the U.S. House of Representatives: Kogovsek, Sikorski, Lipinski, Rostenkowski, Zablocki.

From the U.S. Senate: Boschwitz, Zorinsky, Inouye, Matsunaga, Murkowski.

Besides, who would vote for a man if it was found out that he was ashamed of his parents' name? Sign me . . .

PROUD WIKOFF

DEAR PROUD: Right on! And don't forget that a man named Abraham Ribicoff was twice elected governor of Connecticut, and won two consecutive terms in the U.S. House of Representatives and three terms in the U.S. Senate!

DEAR ABBY: I want to vigorously protest "The Calorie Counter's Prayer" published in your column. To degrade and make a mockery of one of the most beautiful of the Psalms is almost unforgivable.

If it's laughs from morons you want, I suppose you'll get a few, but to the vast majority of your readers it was a major indiscretion on your part, and I think an apology from you is in order.

THOMAS E. WHALEN, BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR MR. WHALEN: One of the most difficult parts of writing this column is deciding what I think my readers will appreciate, enjoy and consider of value.

Obviously I thought the "Calorie Counter's Prayer" deserved space in my column since calorie-counting has become a national obsession.

It was not my intention to degrade or make a mockery of the 23rd Psalm. And to those who were offended by my lapse of judgment, I sincerely apologize.

DEAR ABBY: I was amused to read in your column that picking one's teeth is a "dangerous" practice.

I am 75 years old and have been using a toothpick as long as I can remember. I've never been to a dentist in my life and still have all my own teeth — minus a couple of molars and wisdom teeth that I pulled myself.

FRED IN NEW YORK

DEAR FRED: Consider yourself lucky to have had no complications. If there's truth in the proverb "The physician who treats himself has a fool for a patient," I wonder what manner of man, forsooth, would risk plucking out his own tooth?

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Death Led Her To Found Widowed Peoples' Group

By JANET SHEDD
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — When Dorothy Doering's husband died seven years ago, she was left with five children to raise, financial problems and the ordeal of handling the end of a 21-year marriage.

"You don't know what a blow it is to get a phone call saying your husband is dead," she says.

"I went to bed for 109 days and wouldn't get up. You become like you're really crazy in the head. I had a stroke, back problems. Then the stress of not being able to cope with it.

"Death is so final. You have no second chances to tell them you love them, to tell them you're sorry."

Her husband's death catapulted her into the ranks of about 12 million widows and widowers in the United States.

Despite those numbers,

Mrs. Doering said she found few places she could go for advice, financial information and just plain support.

"I tried going to Parents Without Partners and other programs," she said.

"I felt embarrassed, out of place. It's a different trauma, being divorced. You just aren't in the same ballfield. They talk about their anger, but your loss is different."

She decided to hold her own meeting of widows and widowers in the Springfield area.

"I put a little ad in the paper. We expected maybe 25 people and 100 showed up. We were looking for touch, for meeting someone."

That meeting was the genesis of the National Association for Widowed People, Inc.

In 1980, with Mrs. Doering in charge, the first chapter was formed and the first issue of a magazine called "The Survivors" was published.

Now the group has more than 1,000 members in 33 chapters across the country. A national conference is scheduled for September.

The quarterly magazine has 27,000 subscribers. Newsstand distribution is scheduled to begin in April.

The association and its magazine have become a full-time job for the 47-year-old Mrs. Doering. She flies around the country to open new chapters. She does the layout and editing of the magazine and writes a column for it.

It is an act of faith, she said.

"I had a vision. I don't go into it, I don't call it that, I call it a dream," she said. "I did exactly as I was instructed and it's working. I believe with all my heart in what I'm doing."

She emphasized the philosophy of the group and the magazine is prodding widows and widowers to keep on living and not hold on to a spouse's death.

"One program I went to, they had you bring a picture of your husband and talk about him," she said. "We're going at it a different way rather than grieving all the time."

"The group is just like an Alcoholics Anonymous for widowed people. We're on call 24 hours a day. When someone dies, we'll go to be with the family. We have widows come in to help show widowers how to cook, care for children, give advice."

The magazine includes articles on cooking for one, crafts, financial and investment information, stress and health as well as inspirational and first-person stories of widowhood.

It also includes a dating and correspondence section, where widows and widowers can place personal ads.

"We try to give a little bit of everything," Mrs. Doering said. "The magazine is trying to show people how to deal with death and go on living. You can't continue grieving. You've got to meet new people, get new careers."

She believes one partial solution for coping is preparing for death before it happens.

"We've been told from the beginning that one of us has got to go, but we never face it," she said. "Many people don't even record their wishes, where they want to be buried. Death is a sure thing."

Give Cat-Napper His Due

Raleigh columnist Paul T. O'Connor reported recently that legislators are considering changes in state law that would make it illegal in North Carolina for someone to steal a cat. We're not lawyers, admittedly, but it was somewhat of a shock to hear that it wasn't already illegal to steal a cat. Or a pet rabbit. Or a pet anything else.

O'Connor wrote that, among pets, only a dog is protected — and then only if the dog is listed for taxation as personal property and then it's just a misdemeanor. On the other hand, theft of a horse, a cow or a pig is a felony.

The proposals being bandied around among legislators would help but even then there is a disproportionate emphasis: theft of an animal, pet or otherwise, valued at more than $400 would be a felony; otherwise such a theft would be a misdemeanor.

The proposal's sponsor, Sen. Julian Allsbrook of Halifax, says there would be no chance of winning passage if all animal thefts were viewed as felonies. And Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, an attorney, brushed aside complaints that a pet's value couldn't be measured in dollars and cents. Said Swain, you can't base state law on love. You have to use market value.

Maybe not, but there has to be some recourse for pet owners. Again, we're not lawyers, but history and literature has it that suitors can be sued for alienation of affection. The loss of a beloved pet is certainly that, so maybe we can at least opt for a civil suit, claiming alienation, against the pet-napper.

It's Cause For Concern

State officials last week closed all oyster and clam operations along the coast of North Carolina.

The oyster and clam industry, which was worth $7 million last year, was brought to a halt by the unusual ban.

The waters were closed because of the buildup of bacteria which could affect humans consuming the shell fish. That was due to the general flooding in the east which brought the bacteria to the sounds. It is expected that the bacteria will clear up in a few days. In the meantime local, seafood places felt they could obtain the oysters they need from Virginia.

The situation tells us we do have a problem, however. Much of the bacteria comes from inland farm water runoff, waste treatment plants and septic tanks and that is having its effect on the fishing industry and the waters along our coast. It is something that will be of increasing concern to our state.

WASHINGTON — In his annual address to the American Bar Association earlier this month, Chief Justice Warren Burger sounded an old theme with a fresh note of urgency. He wound up by making a specific recommendation that merits prompt action in Congress.

Burger's theme was familiar: The high court is swamped with more litigation than it can handle judiciously. Thirty years ago, in the 1953 term of court, the court had 1,463 cases on its docket and issued 65 signed opinions. In the term that ended last July, the court had 5,311 cases on its docket and issued 141 signed opinions.

The tidal wave that has inundated the Supreme Court has flooded lower courts also. In 1953 the federal District Courts reported 99,000 filings, and the Courts of Appeals about 3,200 filings. Last year the District Courts grappled with 240,000 filings and the appellate courts with 28,000 — but there was a significant difference. Over the 30-year period, Congress more than doubled the number of federal judges, from 279 to 647. The Supreme Court's membership has remained at nine.

The causes behind this judicial explosion are well understood. The past three decades have seen more than 100 federal laws enacted that have created new causes of action — for example, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The high court is compelled to hear cases of environmental law and tax law that involve questions at once novel and complex. The court has contributed to its own problems by its dramatic expansion of the rights of an accused in a criminal proceeding.

Chief Justice Burger spoke bluntly to the bar association. Perhaps he may forgive some blunt speech in return. The strain is telling on the court. For the past several years the overall quality of opinions has not been high. Matters that should be dealt with succinctly often are dealt with verbosely. For reasons known only to themselves, individual justices constantly feel compelled to dissent in part, or to concur in part, and they do their dissenting and concurring at interminable length.

Not content with exhausting their energies in skirmishes over signed opinions, several of the justices cannot resist the temptation to sound off futilely in chambers. On Jan. 10, for example, Justice Thurgood Marshall unloaded two long opinions in which he dissented from his colleagues' refusal to review a couple of criminal cases. The intellectual labor may have gratified Justice Marshall, but it accomplished nothing else.

The court is tired, and with abundant reason, the court stays tired. There never is time for thought and reading and reflection. On the average, a hundred petitions for review arrive every week. Each of the nine justices is supposed to look carefully at each of the petitions. The task is manifestly impossible.

What can be done? For the first time, Burger got specific: "I propose that, without waiting for any further study, a special but temporary panel of the new U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit be created." The panel would be composed of two judges from each of the 13 circuits. From this pool, a smaller panel of seven or nine judges would be drawn annually. Their task would be to hear and decide all interlocutory conflicts, and possibly, in addition, to resolve certain cases of statutory interpretation. The new court would be created for a period of five years only.

The proposition makes sense. By Burger's estimate, such a panel would relieve the Supreme Court of 35 to 50 full-blown and argued cases every term. Conflicts among the circuits have to be settled somehow. It is plainly intolerable for a provision of the Tax Code to operate one way in the 5th Circuit and to operate another way in the 10th. It is important only that the issue be resolved uniformly.

Burger's plan would require virtually no additional expense or additional bureaucracy. It would avoid political infighting over the nomination of additional appellate judges. Nothing in the Constitution would prohibit such a temporary panel. If the idea works, after five years the structure could be made permanent. It clearly justifies a try.

To the editor:

The Teacher Performance Appraisal has been developed to evaluate the performance levels of the Greenville city schools teaching staff. We support this instrument. We feel it can be used to improve our effectiveness as teachers. We feel this method should be the procedure to acknowledge our professionalism and to improve or eliminate our weaknesses.

Use of this instrument by the administration should assure us of a system of competent professionals. It is the responsibility of the Administrative Team to apply this instrument in such a manner that the community can be assured that the school system is staffed by competent, qualified personnel. We support this evaluation.

We also recognize the need for developing a Reduction In Force policy. This is a separate instrument from Teacher Performance Appraisal. The Reduction In Force policy will provide guidelines in the event of the loss of funding, declining enrollments, program changes, or revision of the school system's goals and priorities making it necessary to reduce the number of certified positions.

An equitable Reduction In Force policy should be based on seniority. When performance is included in such a policy, it becomes a teacher performance appraisal instrument.

We ask the Greenville City School Board not to place us in a position of being competitive among ourselves as teachers when faced with implementing a Reduction In Force policy. A RIF-ed teacher should be able to walk away from the Greenville City Schools system with dignity and the perception that he is a qualified, competent professional having met the standards provided by the Teacher Performance Appraisal. This would not be possible if performance is an indicator within the Reduction In Force policy.

We would appreciate the school board's attention to the consideration of the separation of these two very important policies.

Reagan Keeps A Flexible Note On Arms Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least for now, President Reagan is shunning West Europe's advice that he cut a halfway deal with the Soviet Union to reduce the nuclear threat. The president says he intends to keep to the "moral high ground" and work for the elimination of all the Soviet missiles targeted on the allies.

But Reagan is also hinting that he will not turn his back on a compromise further down the road. "I said we would negotiate in good faith any legitimate proposal that might be offered," Reagan reminded reporters Wednesday night. "Well, we still say the same thing."

In time, the note of flexibility may prove more significant than Reagan's reaffirmation of his "zero-option" proposal or Secretary of State George Shultz's statement to the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the president has no intention of abandoning his plan.

But the "zero-option" plan could fade the way his once-intractable support of Taiwan and of Israel yielded to global politics and cautious diplomats.

A practical man, Reagan sought the support of China and the Arab world by reducing arms sales to Taiwan and proposing a Mideast peace plan that would freeze Israeli settlement activity.

In revising his policies, the president disappointed many of his old supporters but gratified traditionalists in the State Department bureaucracy who worry about abrupt changes in U.S. direction.

Reagan is now comfortably in line with previous administrations, wooing Peking to join an alliance against the Soviet Union, and adopting a Middle East stance it hopes will induce the Arabs into making peace with Israel.

The results are not in yet, but the early signs are not promising.

After giving Shultz a courteous reception in Peking, prompting him to claim his visit had created a new atmosphere of mutual trust, the Chinese went on the offensive after he left. They demanded Congress revoke the 1979 Taiwan Relations Act, which reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to Taiwan's security.

Reagan's pursuit of King Hussein of Jordan, Saudi Arabia and other critics of the Camp David agreement has not revived stagnant Middle East peace talks, nor persuaded the Palestine Liberation Organization to accept Israel's right to exist.

The president's third major transition in foreign policy, away from "zero-option" and toward an interim accord with the Soviet Union, is taking shape gradually.

At first, Reagan insisted he would settle for nothing less than the total elimination of all medium-range missiles in Europe — the 640 or so the Soviets have targeted on the NATO allies and the 572 new U.S. missiles to be deployed beginning in December.

But as the Soviets kept turning him down, and enticing the West Europeans with compromises that would reduce the nuclear threat, Reagan hinted there was room for compromise. He gave assurances that his negotiator, Paul Nitze, would consider any serious proposal the Soviets made in Geneva.

Then the president sent Vice President George Bush to Europe to canvass opinion, especially among West German government and opposition leaders who will square off in a critical election next month.

Bush returned home with the advice that "maybe there is a way, an intermediated way, to get from here to an objective that every thinking person, including the Soviets, should share."

In other words, to alleviate European anxieties about being a nuclear battleground, the United States should consider an interim arrangement with the Soviets, postponing the utopian dream of a complete ban on medium-range missiles to future negotiations.

U.S. strategy had been based on the theory that the Soviets would be driven to agree to "zero-option" as the scheduled December deployment neared.

Instead, it may be the United States that gives ground, permitting the Soviets to retain some of their missiles while the United States deploys only some of its Pershing II and Tomahawk cruise missiles.

"So far," Reagan said last week, "no legitimate counterproposal has been offered that would warrant negotiation or study."

Complaints May Reoccur

as master of ceremonies).

State Sen. Chet Atkins, the Massachusetts Democratic state chairman, has told the Glenn camp that failure to attend the dinner would make the senator "odd man out" in the state. Specifically, it would hurt Glenn's chances in the presidential straw vote to be held at the Democratic state convention in Springfield April 9.

The prospect that the Democrats will regain control of the Senate in the 1984 election, greatly enhanced by Majority Leader Howard Baker's decision not to seek re-election, could grow with possible retirement of another Republican veteran: Sen. Mark Hatfield, chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Hatfield has said nothing publicly, but word is spreading on Capitol Hill that he might pack it in after 18 years in the Senate. With Hatfield not running, Republicans in Oregon would have a less than even chance to elect his successor.

A footnote: Republican politicians are furious that the White House did nothing to talk a big gun into running for Baker's seat from Tennessee. In the absence of coaxing from the Oval Office, the three leading possibilities — Gov. Lamar Alexander, Trade Ambassador William Brock and ex-governor Winfield Dunn — all are saying no. That makes Democratic representative Albert Gore Jr. a prohibitive early favorite to win Baker's seat.

An inquiry to the Oval Office by White House domestic policy chief Ed Harper's secretary as to when her boss could get a new photograph taken with the president was taken as a sign he may be leaving soon — part of a widening cleanup of presidential staffers that began with senior aide Rich Williamson.

Such a photo request is often a sign that an aide is leaving and anxious to get a picture with Reagan before he goes. In fact,

Harper likely will be gone by mid-year. He has made few waves since replacing Dr. Martin Anderson as policy chief a year ago and, while a vastly more adept administrator than his predecessor, has had no more influence on policy.

A footnote: White House spokesmen David Gergen and Larry Speakes were outraged when it was announced that an outsider was being brought in to study effectiveness of communications policy. They protested to chief of staff James Baker, who mollified them by saying the study would transcend communications and extend to other White House operations. Gergen long has been a target of fellow staffers for quick removal, but has been protected by Baker until now.

Chances for the planned conservative challenge by Rep. Tom Corcoran against Sen. Charles H. Percy in next year's Illinois Republican primary look so bleak that some influential conservatives may soon privately urge Corcoran to pull out.

Not only does Percy, as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, have President Reagan's tacit support; the senator also has mended fences with Illinois party regulars once determined to purge him. "I think so valuable a conservative as Tom (Corcoran) should seriously consider whether he wants to give up a safe (House) seat," one conservative leader told us.

A tough primary contest is viewed by Democrats as necessary for a serious general election challenge of Percy. In addition, the challenger most desired by Democrats, the highly-esteemed Rep. Paul Simon, told us chances are 95 percent against his running.

Strength For Today

Sometimes we may well wonder whether or not we give enough attention and credit to the courageous pioneers to whom we owe most of the benefits we now enjoy.

Eighteenth century America must have experienced a rough period of hardship. But when our minds go back 15 to 20 centuries and we behold what our forebears did to get the Christian faith established, then we are humbled indeed.

We, with our well-cushioned pews, with few religious duties which in any way interfere with our comfort — what are we compared with those people who faced the rack and the arena with unwavering courage.

Everything of real value in life costs something. The political liberty we now enjoy costs something. The fact that we have faith, churches in which to worship, and spiritual leaders who can guide us — all this was purchased by the grim sacrifice of brave men and women.

The Forecast For Tuesday, February 22

Low Temperatures

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

By The Associated Press
North Carolina was in store for another sunny day today, thanks to high pressure south along the Eastern Seaboard, but cloudy skies are forecast for Tuesday, said the National Weather Service.

A slow moving area of low pressure along the Texas coast this morning will spread cloudiness over the state Tuesday, possibly scattering showers over the mountains.

Temperatures will continue to be rather mild across the state for the next couple of days, with temperatures reaching the 60 degree or higher in most areas. The only exceptions will be along the outer banks and the northern mountains, where temperatures will level off in the 50s.

As the low pressure area moves eastward Tuesday and Wednesday, there will be threat of rain Wednesday.

The forecast for tonight is cloudy in the mountains and fair elsewhere, with a chance of showers in the extreme southwest and lows in the 30s. Variable cloudiness Tuesday with a chance of showers in the mountains and highs around 60 except 50s in the northern mountains.

Along the coast small craft advisories were in effect mainly for rough seas from Cape Hatteras northward today. Heavy seas along the outer banks, caused by a slow-moving storm out in the Atlantic, may cause some over wash during the time of high tide early this afternoon.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts mainly warm weather across the country for Tuesday. Showers are indicated from the central Gulf into the upper Mississippi and for coastal areas of the Pacific Northwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Stables Topic Of Seminar

Stable management and design will be the topic for the final session of the horse management seminars sponsored by the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

The session will be held Wednesday from 7:30-9 p.m.

at the Pitt County Office Building, second floor. Glenn Petty of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture will present the program.

For further information contact Miriam Nance at 752-2934.

Sign-Up Time For Program Nearing End

Farmers have only a few weeks left to sign up for the payment-in-kind program, according to Stacy Evans, director of the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The sign-up period ends March 11 and will not be extended, said Evans. "Farmers will not have the opportunity to change their minds and sign up after this deadline," he said. "However, those who have already enrolled before March 11 will have the option of withdrawing without penalty provided it is done before enrollment ends."

Recent severe weather conditions may have caused some problems for farmers, noted Evans, but the deadline to be extended because of this.

The PIK program is designed to bring supplies more in line with demand, said Evans, and improve the farm economy. It encourages farmers to further reduce 1983 crops of wheat, corn, sorghum, upland cotton and rice and in return, farmers will receive an amount of the commodity as payment for reducing planted acreage.

All farmers for which a 1983 acreage base and yield has been established for wheat, feed grain, upland cotton and rice under the previously announced farm programs are eligible to participate in PIK.

"We urge farmers to sign up now and not miss the opportunity by waiting or expecting the deadline to be extended," said Evans. "The sign-up period will end at the close of business March 11."

Tobacco Issues To Be Talked

"Tobacco Issues for the 1980's" will be the topic of a conference scheduled for March 8-9 at Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The conference is sponsored by the schools of agriculture in the five flue-cured tobacco-producing states. Past legislation and its impact on future tobacco production will be discussed.

According to Roger Cobb, Pitt extension agent, the conference is designed to present objective data that will be useful to those involved in tobacco production.

Farm Scene

By MIRIAM NANCE
Agricultural Extension Agent

Spring is just around the corner and that means people will be spending more time outdoors with their pets. Animals are involved in thousands of farm injuries annually. There are precautions that can be taken to prevent possible injury. Speak gently and do not startle or abuse animals. The persons should be familiar enough with the animal to recognize changes in the animal's behavior. Keep bystanders and children at a safe distance. Wear safety shoes or boots. Instruct children on how to treat animals. Warn them not to reach into pens or through fences to pet or feed animals.

Make your pet or livestock area safer. Keep pastures free from wire, tin and other sharp objects. Put equipment and tools in their proper places. The buildings for livestock should be checked for stray nails, wire and tin. Keeping the livestock facility clean and picked up also discourages rats and mice.

Remember that livestock can be dangerous if not handled properly. Treat your animals with respect and it will be returned. Activities or livelihoods with livestock can be a most enjoyable experience if caution is taken.

Mental Health Perspectives

Driving/Drinking

by Substance Abuse Service Staff

While .10% blood alcohol content is evidence of driving under the influence, the body's ability to function properly is noticeably impaired at much lower levels. By the time an average sized person has consumed two drinks in one hour, there is a subtle change in his voluntary functions.

The depressant effect of alcohol, even at .05% blood alcohol content will affect the drinker's motor coordination and intelligence. These changes, though not very noticeable to the casual observer, will increase the drinking driver's risk of suffering a serious or fatal automobile accident by 2 times compared to his risk while driving sober.

There is a massive movement to increase penalties for driving under the influence. Perhaps a more immediate question for the drinker who drives would be this:

Would you be willing to turn the car keys over to a non-drinker before you drink your second one? It could be worth your life.

If you have a question you would like for us to answer through this column, please submit to Community Services, Pitt County Mental Health Center, 306 Stantonburg Road, Greenville, or call Community Services, 752-0119.

"I PUT A LOT INTO IT, AND I GET A LOT OUT OF IT."

"If I had it all to do over again, I would definitely go with Perdue broiler houses. But I would start a lot earlier.

My husband and I built our first Perdue house in 1974. I was working in a public job then. Under a lot of strain because I was on production and some days you might not make quota even though you worked hard. But when I started helping with the chicken houses, the pressures went away.

Not only did the pressures disappear, but all of a sudden I was enjoying my work. Watching those little chicks grow day after day, it's just a thrill to me because I've always liked chickens.

Perdue helped us from the very start. We've always had good servicemen who knew how to grow good chickens. By listening to them and working hard, we always had good flocks.

When my husband passed away, some folks thought I might sell my broiler houses. But with a little help from my sister-in-law and her son, I can run three broiler houses as good as the next grower. In fact I won the top broiler grower award on my route last year. I just try the best I can. You get what you put into it.

Sure I like to grow with Perdue. I've always been a farm girl anyway. I like to get outdoors, so Perdue's right down my line."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing — chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarkets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Seventy-Eight Rural Fires

During January the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 93 alarms and fought 78 fires.

There were 20 house fires, three mobile home fires, four building fires, six motor vehicle fires, eight grass and woods fires, no false alarms, 37 "others," and 15 mutual aids.

Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said there was $631,600 involved in fires; $362,500 exposed; $75,925 lost; and $918,175 saved by the rural fire departments. The Eastern Pines Fire Department had the most fires - 19.

Three Collisions Reported

An estimated $6,000 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 1:26 a.m. collision on Cotanche Street, 20 feet north of the Fifth Street intersection when a car driven by Becky Jo Hatton of 101 North Meade St. collided with a utility pole, causing an estimated $3,000 damage to the Hatton car and $500 damage to the pole.

Police, who charged Ms. Hatton with driving under the influence, said the driver and three passengers in the car were injured.

Cars driven by Perry Holland King of 603 East Ninth St. and James Edward Graham of Village Green Apartments, collided about 1:16 a.m. at the intersection of Tenth and Lawrence Streets, causing $550 damage to the King car and $750 damage to the Graham vehicle.

King was charged by police with driving under the influence and failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Cars driven by Wesley Floyd Measamer Jr. of 108 McDonald Court and Christopher Leonard James of Route 3, Wake Forest, collided about 6:04 p.m. Saturday on Cotanche Street, north of the Second Street intersection.

Police set damage from the collision at $1,000 to the Measamer car and $200 to the James vehicle.

Robert L. Martin Named To Board

Robert L. Martin of Bethel, a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, has been appointed to the N.C. Board of Public Telecommunications by Gov. Jim Hunt.

The governor named Martin to replace Lawrence E. Lilley of Williamston who resigned. Martin will serve the remainder of Lilley's term, which ends June 30.

Martin is a retired supervisory agent for Seaboard Coastline Railroad Co., and is a member of the board of directors of the National Association of County Officials.

The 27-member telecommunications board advises the governor and the state on all matters of telecommunications policy that may affect North Carolinians.

Grant Awarded To Medical School

The East Carolina University School of Medicine has been awarded a $54,321 grant by the Department of Health and Human Services, according to Congressman Walter B. Jones.

The grant will be used to conduct a detailed study of gene expression, according to Dr. Ronald S. Johnson, assistant professor of biochemistry with the medical school, who will direct the project.

The grant is for a one-year period beginning March 1, 1983.

Assault Charges Are Placed

James Jelenic, 18 of Cleveland, Ohio, was arrested by Greenville police early Saturday morning on two counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Jelenic allegedly stabbed Christopher E. Tripp, 22 of Ayden, in the back and cut John Frederick Michaelis Jr., 24 of Fayetteville, three times in a

Clark Resumes His Exercising

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark started exercising again, chuckled over Sports Illustrated's annual swimsuit issue and watched television with his wife and daughter.

Mary Dickey, a nursing supervisor at the University of Utah Medical Center, said Clark continued to mark his recovery with "slow improvement" from lung and kidney problems that forced doctors to return him to the surgical intensive care unit last week.

Clark, in his 82nd day of life on the artificial heart today, remains in fair condition.

Clark's wife, Una Loy, has been with her 62-year-old husband since his diseased and dying natural heart was replaced Dec. 2 with the plastic air-driven Utah Heart.

Their daughter, Karen Shaffer of Seattle, also spent the weekend visiting with her father.

Medical center spokesman John Dwan said the retired dentist from Des Moines, Wash., spent much of the time Saturday sitting in a straight-backed chair in his room and reading Sports Illustrated magazine.

"It was the swimming suit issue," Dwan said Sunday. "He and the nurses and Mrs. Clark went through it yesterday and they were commenting and laughing about it."

Clark also resumed his exercise routine Saturday, using an aluminum walker for the first time since Tuesday, when decreasing lung and kidney functions brought him back to intensive care. He had been spent two days in a large private room prior to the setback.

Ms. Dickey said doctors had not decided when or if Clark might be returned to his private room.

Earlier, Dwan had said he expected Dr. William DeVries, the surgeon who implanted the Utah Heart, would try to move Clark back to the room on the west side of the hospital "as soon as possible."

Clark, who has suffered from emphysema for years, requires intermittent use of a respirator. Clark also has had renal difficulties brought on by the cardiomyopathy which destroyed his heart.

Jelenic was placed under a $10,000 bond pending hearing of the cases in court.

Clemson Honors Are Announced

Clemson University officials have announced the names of 1,248 students who made the dean's list for the fall 1982 semester.

Gregory Cole Mobley of Greenville made the dean's list and is a computer science major.

The Dean's List honors students with grade point averages of at least 3.5.

Radio Guests Are Announced

City Manager Gail Meeks announced that the guests on the "City Hall Notes" radio program this week will be Jerry Cox of the personnel department and C.E. Weatherington, a police department officer.

Cox will discuss recruitment procedures for city positions and Weatherington will talk about drug abuse.

"City Hall Notes" is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

Want A Look Into Crater

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) - Earthquake-monitoring equipment in the crater of Mount St. Helens shows that the lava dome is still building, but scientists say the weather has been too cloudy for them to see for themselves.

Charlie Caughlan, a radio dispatcher at the volcano information center in Vancouver, said clouds obscured the volcano again Sunday.

Meanwhile, instruments shows the relatively quiet, dome-building eruption that began Feb. 7 is continuing, said Chris Trisler at the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle.

Since an apparent weak steam burst Wednesday, seismographs have indicated only low-level earthquakes and occasional rockfalls from the dome, which was about 700 feet high before the latest eruption, she said.

Tuesday was the last time U.S. Geological Survey crews were able to enter the crater and confirm that the eruption was continuing.

"With the numerous rockfalls, it could indicate the eruption is still going on," Ms. Trisler said Sunday.

In each eruption of Mount St. Helens, she added, seismic activity is monitored to show the total energy released by the volcano and a graph is made of the resulting figures.

In the current episode the energy release has been greater than in past dome-building eruptions, she said.

"Normally at this point it tends to level off, and it has not done that," she said.

KUWAIT (AP) - More than 50 British companies opened a three-day floating arms sales exhibition here Sunday to display the latest in land, sea and air defense systems.

The exhibition, "Floater 83", is aboard the ferry Viking Venturer, which will also visit Bahrain, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Abu Dhabi and Egypt, a British spokesman said.

Claims Publicity Cost One Life In POW Hunt

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A former Green Beret looking for U.S. prisoners of war in Laos says he has found "some POW ID" but publicity about his search has cost the life of a Laotian supporter, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

In a 12-page handwritten letter, retired Lt. Col. James G. "Bo" Gritz also said he may have to enter Vietnam during his current mission, the second raid in four months in which a member of his search team has been killed.

"I have some POW ID," Gritz said in the letter to the Los Angeles Times. "But until I can personally confirm it, it will not be reported."

The letter was delivered by runner from deep inside Laos to the newspaper's bureau in Bangkok, Thailand, the paper reported today.

In his letter, Gritz, 44, of Westchester, Calif., also contended he was acting with the knowledge of the CIA, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the FBI, but officials at those agencies either denied any knowledge of Gritz or refused any comment.

The story did not say how the newspaper authenticated Gritz's letter but said it was signed by two other Californians supposedly on the mission with him: David Scott Weekly, 35, of Encinitas and Gary Goldman, 38, of Encino.

The paper described Weekly as a U.S. Navy airman whose weaponry skills in Vietnam earned him the nickname "Dr. Death" and said Goldman was described by friends as an anti-terrorist soldier of fortune.

Gritz says he is trying to locate and free American POWs missing since the Vietnam War, but the State Department says it opposes such action because it could jeopardize POW lives, damage official rescue efforts and harm U.S.-Laotian relations. The Defense Department says most servicemen missing since the war are dead.

Gritz complained about publicity surrounding the mission and said that as a result, his search team had encountered heavy resistance and a Laotian follower was killed. He blamed former team member Charles Patterson of Dinuba, Calif., for selling a story to Soldier of Fortune magazine and publisher Robert K. Brown for printing it.

"Things got very animated when the 31 Jan. (publicity) bomb fell on us," he said. "We didn't know why at the time, but the enemy was working overtime. We had quickly and successfully infiltrated on 30 Jan. We were surrounded and engaged heavily at times. At least one of our agents keeping a target under surveillance was captured and killed eight kilometers from the objective - due, I believe, to the (unknown to us) news splash by Brown-Patterson."

Patterson said they went ahead with publication only after they learned the Bangkok Post newspaper was about to publish its own story about Gritz.

Another Laotian had been killed in Gritz's initial raid last November, he said, but no Americans have died.

Views On Dental Health

TETRACYCLINE STAINED TEETH

Tetracyclines - a group of infection-fighting antibiotics - can produce staining of children's teeth if they are given during the time when the primary teeth are forming. According to the National Institute of Health, if tetracycline is given to a woman during her last trimester of pregnancy, or to an infant during the first three months of life, discoloration of the dentin of baby's teeth could occur. The resulting stains are then visible as soon as the baby teeth erupt. The sensitive period of tetracycline-induced staining of the permanent teeth occurs between the ages of 3 months and 8 years. These stains may not become visible for several years.

Although the stains are permanent, the enamel of the teeth is seldom weakened, and, therefore, the teeth function well. It is not a health hazard and if properly cared for, teeth - stained or not - can last a lifetime.

There are some cosmetic treatments for tetracycline-stained teeth, however, the best treatment is prevention. Parents should discuss with their doctors the use of alternative drugs during late pregnancy or early childhood.

Says Nat'l JC Suit Is A Ridiculous Situation

By THOMAS MURPHY
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Jaycee chapter named best in California is being sued by the U.S. Jaycees because it admits women, a situation called "laughable" by the chapter's president because the women helped it achieve the honor.

"In Palo Alto, we have a woman mayor, half the city council is women, and about 30 percent of the police force is women," said chapter president Steve Poizner said. "We're in a city where women play an equal role with men in many situations, in business and in government."

"It's pretty funny, isn't it?" said Poizner. "I think it's laughable. We wanted to get this No. 1 ranking because it just points out why this whole situation is so ridiculous."

"For an organization that stands for leadership training and community service, we cannot justify having a men-only rule."

The California Jaycees, meeting in San Diego a little over a week ago, selected Palo Alto as the best of the state's 250 chapters for the quarter ending in February because of the excellence of its leadership training and community service.

The U.S. Jaycees filed its suit last summer, contending the chapter didn't deserve the Jaycee name because it broke a bylaw when it let women join. It found that half the members of the Palo Alto chapter were women and that two women had served as chapter president since 1976.

Carl Hall, legal counsel to the U.S. Jaycees, says the national organization's trademark infringement suit against the chapter.

"The fact is they're in violation of the bylaws, if that means anything to anyone," said Hall from the Tulsa, Okla., headquarters of 280,000 Jaycees have voted three times to exclude women.

The Palo Alto members responded to the suit by going to court themselves.

Last month, Santa Clara Superior Court Judge Barton Phelps fined the national organization $100 for each day it denies the Palo Alto chapter use of the Jaycees name. Phelps said the national unit was violating a court order barring it from cutting off chapters that admit women.

"That's a matter in litigation and it's now before the California Court of Appeal and I'm not going to comment on it," said Hall, who also declined comment on his group's trademark. That federal case is scheduled for trial in San Francisco next month.

Poizner, noting the fine against the U.S. Jaycees already exceeds $3,000, believes the national group should let local chapters decide for themselves whether women should participate.

"Ultimately," he said, "the U.S. Jaycees will change the bylaws. Each time a vote is taken, it's defeated. But it's getting closer and closer."

"Community service and leadership training is the motto of the group and that

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 44.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 100 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a final weighted average of 43.85 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a light to moderate demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 996,000, compared to 1,825,000 last Monday.

Farmers Intend Cut Production

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers will grow about 9 percent less flue-cured tobacco this year because of disappointing prices in 1982, a state agriculture survey shows.

"This is pretty well what we expected," Robert Griffith, assistant director of the N.C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, said Saturday. "Farmers took a beating with some low prices last year and the only way to get them back up is to have cuts in production. They're definitely doing that."

The State Department of Agriculture survey of nearly 3,000 growers was conducted late last month and early this month. However, officials say it is subject to change because of a new federal program encouraging further production cutbacks.

Growers indicated in the survey they plan to set 285,000 acres of flue-cured tobacco this year, dipping 9 percent below the 312,000 acres harvested in 1982.

Burley tobacco farmers said they would set 11,000 acres, the same amount as last year.

The only crops expected to see production increases this year are hay, up 5 percent at 415,000 acres, and oats, up 6 percent at 165,000 acres.

William Parham, state deputy agriculture commissioner, said he hadn't seen the survey but wasn't surprised to learn it projected cutbacks.

"When you have supplies on most commodities at as high levels as they are now, decreases are needed to help boost prices," he said. "Reducing these stocks will help the farmers."

Improving Williamston-Plymouth Highway Stretch Could Be Soon

WILLIAMSTON — Two State Board of Transportation members of the eastern North Carolina area, T.G. (Sonny Boy) Joyner and Marc Basnight, have said that long awaited improvements of U.S. 64 between Williamston and Plymouth may come sooner than expected.

The proposed improvement project being considered in overall state plans, for the 22 miles of road, is one that will cost an estimated $12.1 million to complete.

Citing the "landfall" of $100 million from the federal gasoline tax soon to go into effect, the two spokesmen state their belief this may lead to an earlier date for the improvements if matching state funds, which are required, become available.

The two say chances are good the board will consider the improvement plan perhaps as early as March. If this occurs, a public hearing could be held in July or earlier, with actual construction work to begin by fiscal year 1984-85.

Cameron Lee, a State Department of Transportation official in Raleigh, commented that at this time nothing has been finalized for the project.

The initial phase of the improvement project would consist of widening the present road to 24 feet with four-foot paved shoulders and curb and gutter work. This would be done near the western end of the highway in Williamston in the vicinity of Martin Plaza Shopping Center and for a short distance eastward; and in the Trowbridge Road community just west of Plymouth. Additionally, bypasses would be constructed around the towns of Jamesville and Dardens.

Other objectives in the improvement plan include straightening alignments, eliminating slight hills and widening small bridges that span Sweet Water and Gardner Creeks.

Lee noted that the board of transportation will consider the project as part of its updating of transportation program plans. He said early implementation of the improvements would not negate four-laning of the highway at a future date. Four-laning of the Williamston-Plymouth stretch is estimated to cost an additional $27.2 million. Lee added, however, that in the event of future four-laning, that would be done to the existing road, and not as a complete new location for a four-lane, which has been suggested. A new location, he said, would be out of the question due to financial considerations.

Two Springlike Days For Area

By SUE HINSON
 Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville had a reprieve from rains and mud this weekend as spring-like weather dried out puddles and encouraged daffodils to open their faces to the sun.

The warm, dry days also caused the swollen Tar River to recede two-and-a-half inches over the weekend, leaving the river only two inches over the flood-level of 13 feet.

The Department of Hydrology of the National Weather Service in Raleigh had predicted the Tar would crest Saturday, but the river did not reach its peak until Sunday. Department Hydrologist Ms. R. Aiken said the river rose to 15.7 feet Sunday but had dropped to 13.2 by this morning. She said said the Tar would fall below the 13-foot flood level by Wednesday. The average level of the Tar is 4-5 feet.

Ms. Aiken said she could not predict what river conditions would be later in the week. Rain is expected to fall on North Carolina Wednesday, according to weather reports the department has received.

Warm weather is expected to continue through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service, with highs reaching 60 and above. This morning, the Greenville Utilities weather station reported cool weather with a temperature reading of 38 degrees Fahrenheit.

Clouds are expected to move in over the state Tuesday because of a low pressure front that originated along the Texas coast.

Sunny weather currently covering most of North Carolina is due to a high pressure front extending out of eastern Canada and down the eastern Seaboard.

Council Favors Amtrak Service

The City Council has adopted a resolution endorsing and supporting the Carolina Association of Passenger Train Advocates "in a combined effort to promote and secure Amtrak service from Greenville to Raleigh and Charlotte."

Mayor Percy Cox said that, according to the state Department of Transportation, Amtrak has agreed to run a test train from Raleigh to Charlotte. "Since the test run has been announced," Cox said, "we feel that the City Council would be justified to support CAPTA in requesting that the train begin in Greenville or Washington and go to Raleigh and Charlotte."

The resolution, adopted at the recent council session, states that "citizens and businesses are vitally interested in improving and increasing travel via railroad from Greenville to the western section of North Carolina."

The council resolved that, "It is the desire of the citizens in eastern North Carolina and particularly of Greenville" for Amtrak to begin here or Washington and proceed to Raleigh and Charlotte "to satisfy the community needs developed from past, present and future growth."

W.C. Cobb of Route 6, Greenville, is president of CAPTA, which involves a North Carolina-South Carolina effort to improve and increase rail passenger service within the two states. The organization currently has some 70 members.

Outpaced All In Free Mailing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., sent out 15 million pieces of mail at an estimated cost to taxpayers of $2.25 million in 1982, a year in which he sought and won re-election, a Senate Rules Committee study says.

Overall, the 100 senators sent a record 234 million pieces of mail, most of it newsletters, at a cost to taxpayers of $48 million in postage and paper, the study said. Ten senators accounted for almost half the Senate's mail.

Heinz outpaced his colleagues in the mailings. Behind him were Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., 14.4 million pieces; Charles Percy, R-Ill., 13.5 million; Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., 11.8 million; and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

The next five highest-ranking mailers for the year were Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., 10.9 million pieces; John East, R-N.C., 8.5 million; Carl Levin, D-Mich., 6.9 million; Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., 6.4 million; and Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, 5.8 million.

Bldg. Permits Sharply Dipped

After issuing over $2 million in building permits during October, Greenville's permit total for November slipped to less than half that figure, according to state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

He said the $999,626 in permits issued in November compared with $2,023,321 recorded the previous month and was off significantly from September's $5,042,119 figure that placed Greenville fourth among 44 cities of more than 10,000 population.

In the first 11 months of 1982, permits issued here amounted to $19,254,811, Brooks said.

Pitt County issued permits totaling $2,254,326 in November, including $547,150 for 10 single-family units, $1,499,650 for 62 multifamily units; $34,697 for 12 non-residential units, and $172,829 for 48 additions and alterations. The overall total compared with October's $2,049,821.

Brooks said a 97 percent increase in permits issued for single-family homes in the state's largest cities in November helped boost overall building activity 24.4 percent from November 1981.

Compared to the previous November, the average construction cost for a single-family home increased 8 percent, to $43,350 from $40,135, with the average up 9.2 percent from October's $39,689.

Building values for November and for the first 11 months in several eastern towns included: Elizabeth City, $529,850, $5,496,150; Goldsboro, $596,200, $9,579,961; Jacksonville, $2,353,277, $22,090,840; Kinston, $394,646, $3,603,011;

New Bern, $1,195,466, $12,010,135; Roanoke Rapids, $2,181,593, $4,766,983; Rocky Mount, $1,386,171, $11,706,681; Tarboro, $282,100, $13,191,358; and Wilson, $639,320, $10,464,665.

Escapees Riding In Taxi

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Two inmates who cut their way through an inner fence and then scaled an outer one to escape from the New Mexico State Penitentiary were recaptured 2½ hours later after police recognized them as they drove by in a taxicab.

Louis Velasquez, 28, and Robert McDonald, 22, were apprehended about 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Will Attempt To Halt Seal Hunt

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — The Sea Shepherd, a 200-foot converted trawler, will remain in Portland most of this week before heading to Newfoundland in an attempt to block Canada's baby seal hunt, the ship's captain says.

While the annual killing of hundreds of white-coated seal pups may be coming to end after about a century, nearly 180,000 pelts will be taken this spring in the Maritime Provinces, according to the founder of the Sea Shepherd Society.

"Our goal is to prevent the sealing fleet from leaving St. John's and going to the nursery floes," Paul Watson, the Sea Shepherd's 32-year-old captain, said Saturday.

Watson said the European market for the glistening pelts has vanished as more environmental groups have protested the annual hunt. But the Canadian government plans to stockpile the pelts this year while it searches for new markets, he said.

Canada has defended the hunt, saying it controls the seal population and provides income for fishermen.

Watson, however, said the lack of demand for the pelts may signal an end to the hunt in the next few years.

The international society uses the Sea Shepherd to protect all species of marine mammals that are in danger of being killed, he said. Since 1979, Watson and his 20-member volunteer crew have rammed and sunk three ships off Portugal and Spain, he said, adding that no one was injured.

The Sea Shepherd docked Saturday in Portland, and will remain there while Watson monitors plans for the upcoming hunt. Watson said his crew is prepared to string barbed wire around the boat and repel any attempted boardings with a deck-mounted water cannon.

Parade Asks A Tax Break

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The city's Doo Dah Parade, which has put the Sounds of Silence Marching Band and the Synchronized Briefcase Drillteam onto city streets, is looking for its own form of legitimacy.

Doo Dah organizer Peter Apanel wants the Board of City Directors to change the municipal code to give his 6-year-old brainchild the same cost exemption, tax status and organized timetable as the venerable Rose Parade.

"There needs to be more of a set procedure" for the Doo Dah Parade, Apanel said at a recent board hearing.

But that hardly seems in step with the free-wheeling silliness of the march. Already, some reins have been pulled in on the wacky walk. Last year, for the first time, the number of parade entries was limited and motorized entries were banned.

Apanel noted an estimated 40,000 people turned out for the parade Nov. 28, and he argued that the city shouldn't charge Doo Dah organizers for services because the march produces revenue.

Apanel contended that last year's parade brought $980,000 into city coffers. The city says it spent $6,536 for police monitors, barricades, portable restrooms and clean-up.

The board told Apanel to better document attendance and revenue figures, then referred his proposals to city staff for a report in two months.

$40,000 Bond In Tax Evasion

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Eugene Tafoya, convicted of wounding a Libyan student in Colorado, thanked a U.S. magistrate for trusting him and allowing him to post a $40,000 bond on tax evasion charges.

Tafoya, who posted bail Friday, had been held on a $1.5 million bond. It was lowered after prosecutors failed to prove he was likely to leave the country before Thursday's hearing on the charges.

Tafoya, 46, a former U.S. Army Green Beret who was decorated in the Korean and Vietnam wars, also has posted a $10,000 bond releasing him pending an appeal of his conviction for shooting a Libyan student.

George Wallace Is Hospitalized

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George Wallace was hospitalized early today after complaining of stomach pains and a virus, a hospital spokesman said.

Wallace, 63, checked into Jackson Hospital after midnight and would undergo some tests today, hospital night supervisor Charles Wiley said.

Wiley said Wallace had a "real restful night" and was in good condition.

The governor had had the virus for two or three days, Wiley said. He said he was not sure when Wallace would be released.

In November, Wallace was re-elected to an unprecedented fourth term as governor of Alabama.

Right Moves Give Yarborough 500 Win

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It hadn't been Cale Yarborough's week, and when he saw what remained of Darrell Waltrip's car sliding across the track he couldn't help but wonder if his dream of another Daytona 500 victory was about to go up in smoke.

"I came very close to hitting him and I made a decision to go by him on the high side," Yarborough said. "I didn't know if it was the right one, but I made the move and that was it."

As it turned out Yarborough made all the right moves Sunday, including one on the final lap that propelled him past Buddy Baker and into Victory Circle as a winner for the third time of stock car racing's most coveted prize.

"It was the only real problem I had all day," Yarborough said of the accident that took Waltrip from the race as he was attempting to unlap himself on the 64th of 200 laps over the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway.

Waltrip lost control of his Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS when race leader Dick Brooks slowed to avoid Lake Speed, who had cut in front of Brooks in a similar attempt to unlap himself. Waltrip's car left the track, hit an infield retaining wall, ricocheted across the racing surface, struck the outside wall and came down just far enough for Yarborough to get by.

Waltrip, the two-time defending NASCAR Grand National champion, who has failed in 11 attempts to win this race, was hospitalized for observation. Doctors planned to release him today.

The accident was the only mishap of any consequence in the culmination of a week that began with Yarborough turning the fastest qualifying lap in the history of stock car racing, 200.503 mph. But he lost control of his Monte Carlo while traveling more than 203 mph on his second lap, demolishing the car.

On Thursday, journeyman driver Bruce Jacoby crashed in a qualifying race. He remains in critical condition with a brain injury.

"You just can't think about those things," Yarborough said when asked if the horrifying crash that cost him the pole position for the $1-million event was on his mind Sunday. He eventually qualified eighth in a Pontiac LeMans he drove skillfully to pick up the winner's prize of $119,600.

"We weren't even going to bring that car down here," Yarborough explained. "We knew the other one was better. But we never gave up."

The 42-year-old driver from Sardis, S.C., who is third on the all-time NASCAR list with 75 career victories, used his experience to overtake Baker and hold off hard-charging Bill Elliott and Joe Ruttman.

Yarborough, who led nine times for 23 laps, surrendered the lead to Baker with 11 laps remaining. He was content to ride in second position until a half lap remained and then put his car underneath Baker's Ford Thunderbird as the leaders entered the third turn.

"I had to go when I did," said Yarborough, who noted that Elliott and Ruttman could have drafted by had he waited too long to make his move. "I knew if I could get them to racing each other I could hold them off."

That he did, exiting the final turn with the others racing three abreast.

"When I saw that, I knew I had it won," said Yarborough, who finished about four car-lengths in front of the trio. He averaged 155.979 mph in a race slowed for 36 laps by six caution flags.

Elliott, driving a Thunderbird, went to the high side in the final yards to beat Baker and Ruttman in a blanket finish.

Ruttman, who wound up fourth in his Monte Carlo after leading 16 times for 58 laps, was disgusted with his performance in the final lap. "I think I'm going to have to go to school to learn something about drafting," he said.

Richard Petty and Neil Bonnett also ran strong, and at times were the dominant cars on the track. But Petty's engine blew after he led for several laps early in the race, and Bonnett fell off the pace in the late stages when his engine began throwing oil on his windshield.

Petty, seeking his eighth victory in the race, led eight times for 34 laps before his engine went on the 48th lap.

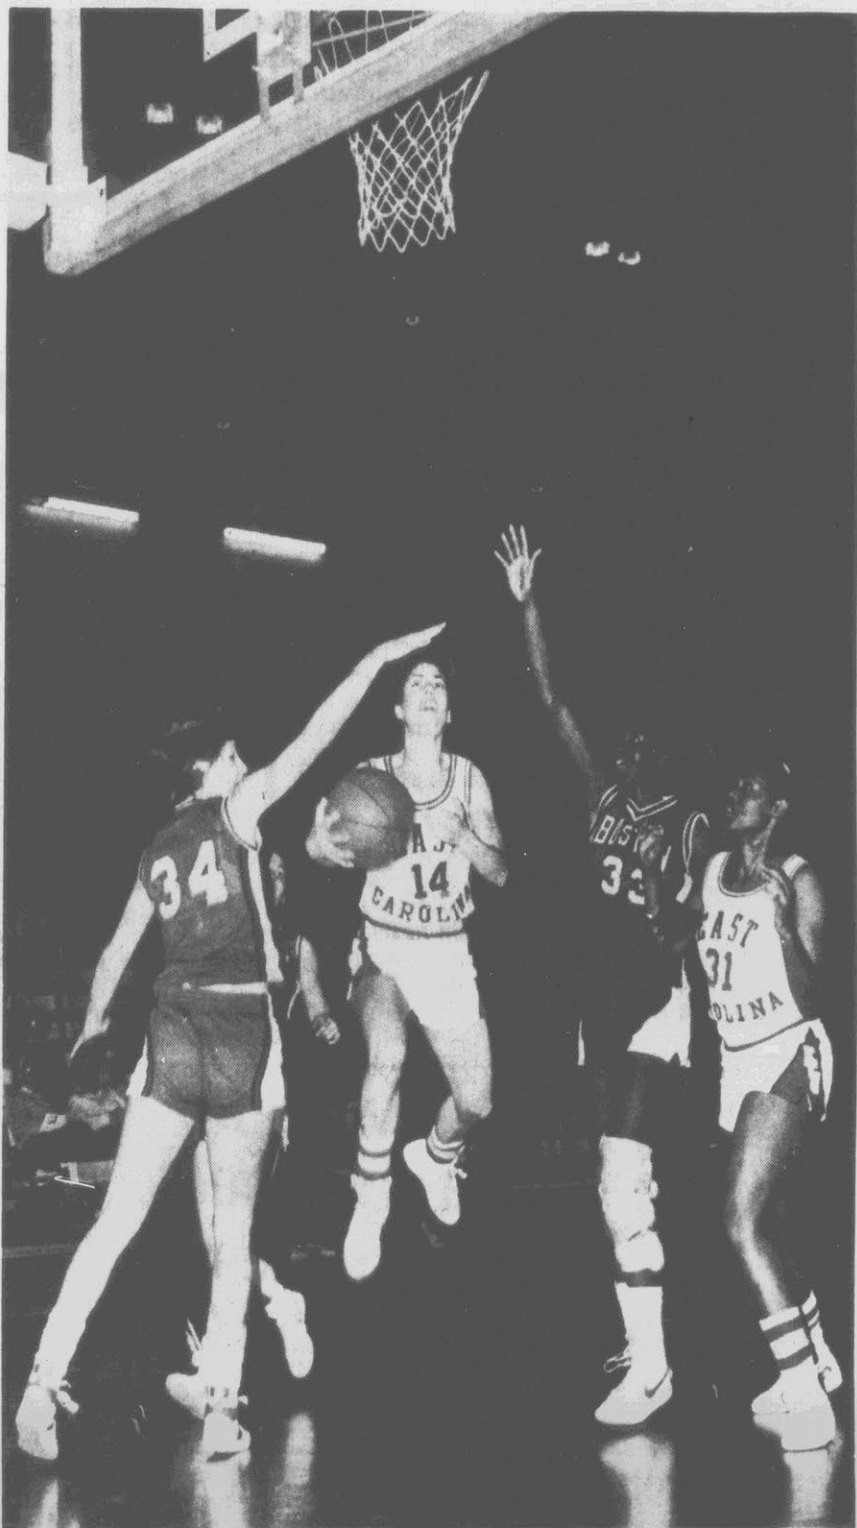

"I was able to run wide open in the corners and the rest of them couldn't," he said. "I was gaining a little each lap and finally got far enough ahead that they couldn't pick the draft up back on the straightaways."

Bonnett cut a fire at one point and lost a lap. But his Monte Carlo was the fastest car on the track and he was able to get back on the lead lap and climb into contention until the oil line let go.

There was one close call in the race, when Bosco Lowe lost control entering pit road and skidded into the wall. A pit crew member and a spectator were slightly injured, but a possible catastrophe was avoided because no other cars were in the pits at the time.

A crowd estimated at about 115,000 people, including honorary starter Vice President George Bush, and a national television audience watched the race.

Yarborough, who had previously won the race in 1968 and 1974, said he was "pleasantly surprised" by the safety of the race.

Lady Pirates Whip BU, 82-62

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Mary Denker and Sylvia Bragg each scored 23 points in leading East Carolina's Lady Pirates to an 82-62 victory over Boston University Sunday afternoon.

The win evened the Lady Pirate mark at 11-11 for the season and helped keep their hopes for a winning season alive. Boston slipped to 7-16 on the year.

Except for the initial basket and one other time early in the game, East Carolina was in charge of the contest, but never seemed to be able to break it wide open. ECU would charge out into a 19-point lead, but the Lady Terriers were able to rally time and again as the two teams exchanged streaks of scoring throughout the afternoon.

And while it never fully appeared that the Lady Pirates were in trouble, Boston proved as tenacious as its nickname, constantly harrassing East Carolina as it tried to pull away.

Nevertheless, it was a game that delighted Coach Cathy Andruzzi. Andruzzi had been very critical of the Lady Pirates following their loss to Morehead State on Thursday night, 75-59. But this time, she was well pleased.

"It was a good game for us. I'm very, very pleased with the way the girls played after Thursday's performance," Andruzzi said. "That, you call a comeback. Thursday was not what I would call a typical Lady Pirate basketball game. And I was very tough on them afterwards. It was the worst game in terms of intensity since I've been here."

"But we came out having (intensity) in this game and knowing that this game could even our record. It was our next-to-last home game and the girls themselves were not pleased with Thursday and wanted to make up for it."

"This was a very critical game for us," she added.

If there was an area that displeased Andruzzi it was the free throw shooting, where the Lady Pirates made 22 of 34, 64.7 percent. Only Fran Hooks and Darlene Chaney were perfect from the line, making four-of-four each, while Hooks had 11 of 16 and Denker made just one of five.

"I don't want to talk about it. I'm just going to be back in here tonight practicing," a disappointed Denker said.

Andruzzi was pleased with the job Denker did otherwise, hitting 11 of 16 shots from the floor and pulling a game-high tying 11 rebounds. Much of the time, Denker the object of a box-and-one defense, covered by 6-1 Stephanie Rahming, who at 27, may be the oldest active female collegian in the country.

"Denk did a good job in covering Rahming, too," Andruzzi said. Rahming made 11 points, "but she had to work for every one of them," the coach continued.

She also praised the play of Hooks, Bragg and Caren Truske in keeping Boston's guards from penetrating much of the game. "I can't say enough about the play of Fran Hooks," Andruzzi said. "Look at her stats: four of eight from the floor, four of four from the line, nine rebounds and 12 points with six assists. That's a great game."

"And Truske held her girl down real good, too."

"I was pleased with Syl's job, too. She played good defense, but she's still a little hesitant on her shots."

Lisa Catlin put BU into the lead after nearly a minute, but ECU tied it up on a jumper by Denker, then took the lead on a shot by Lisa Squirewell, 4-2. Rahming scored a three-point play to put BU back up, 5-4, but it was for the last time.

Hooks put ECU back into the lead and Denker added a jumper. After Boston scored again, ECU ran off eight straight points, six of them by Denker to move out to a nine-point lead.

Boston cut it back to six before the Pirates raised it to 12 at 26-14 with 8:07 left on a jumper by Bragg. Boston again cut it back to eight, but the Pirates then scored 11 straight points, keyed by Bragg and Denker, running the lead out to 37-18.

East Carolina then led at halftime, 39-22.

In the second half, the Pirates constantly flirted with a 20-point lead, but never were able to grasp it until the final seconds of play when Denker hit to tally the game's final points.

Back up by 19 early, the Pirates saw their lead dwindle to 12, 44-32, before pulling back out by 18 on a couple of occasions.

Boston then rallied once

Charlie Elmquist has been named a full-time assistant coach at East Carolina University, head coach Ed Emory announced this morning.

Elmquist has been a volunteer coach at ECU the past two seasons.

He will work with tight ends. "We are pleased to complete our staff with the naming of Charlie," Emory said. "Over the past two years, Charlie has been a valuable member of our staff in a part-time roll. Now we get his full services as an assistant coach."

Elmquist is a graduate of Eastern Michigan University and served as an assistant coach at the University of Minnesota, Eastern Michigan and was also head coach at two high schools in Michigan.

With the selection Emory completes his staff for the upcoming season and also defined the coaching areas for all his assistants.

Art Baker will be offensive coordinator and associate head coach under Emory. John Zernhelt will coach the offensive line and Ken Matous the receivers.

Tom Throckmorton is defensive coordinator while the defensive line coach is Rex Kipps. Phil Elmassian will coach the defensive secondary and Bob Sanders will coach outside linebackers.

Connors Cruises To U.S. Indoor Crown

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Three-year-old Brett Connors will have a lot of reading to do about his day when he grows up.

"Jimmy Connors: U.S. Open champion 1974, 1976, 1978, 1982; Wimbledon champion 1974, 1982; Australian Open champion 1974; Masters champion 1977; U.S. Open champion 1977, 1980; Wimbledon doubles champion 1973; U.S. Open doubles champion 1975; NCAA singles champion 1971; winner of seven U.S. national junior titles; U.S. National Indoor champion 1973, 1974, 1975, 1978, 1982, 1983."

The last title, a record sixth U.S. National Indoor crown, came Sunday when Connors crushed Gene Mayer 7-5, 6-0. And it was gratifying for Connors since it broke the mark of six victories he shared with Pete C. Grant.

"I want my name on the plaque so that my kid some day will know what his old man did and know that he wasn't just out messing around all his life," Connors said.

Sunday's victory in the $315,000 tournament at the Racquet Club of Memphis was Connors' 96th career triumph, a record. Last year he became the first man to go over $4 million in career-prize money.

For Connors, the victories are the diary he's leaving for his son. But he knows the records are not necessarily forever.

"Maybe some young punk will come along in a couple of years and beat my records," he said Sunday, "but my name will still be on the plaques."

Connors' most recent victory started slowly as his lost his service in the seventh game at 30, giving Mayer a 4-3 lead.

Then the tide changed suddenly.

"From 4-3, I didn't miss a ball," Connors said.

ACC Race Heats Up

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Third-ranked North Carolina has made the race close for the regular-season Atlantic Coast Conference basketball championship — primarily because the Tar Heels are stuck in reverse.

Coasting toward an undefeated conference record and a long winning streak, North Carolina has now dropped three games in succession, including two conference games which have placed them in a tie with fifth-ranked Virginia at 8-2.

Latest in the slump was North Carolina State's 70-63 victory over the Tar Heels, coach Jim Valvano's first over Dean Smith in seven tries and the first for Wolfpack seniors Sidney Lowe and Thurl Bailey since their freshman seasons.

No. 5 Virginia defeated 12th-ranked Missouri Sunday in The Meadowlands, 68-53. Ralph Sampson sank 11 of 12 foul shots in the second half, finishing with 21 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots in the nationally televised game.

Wake Forest, 17-6 and 7-3, pulled to within one game of the Tar Heels and the Cavaliers by claiming a 110-104 victory over Duke, 10-12 and 2-7. It was the first game under the conference's experimental three-point field goal and 30-second shot clock in which both teams have scored 100 points.

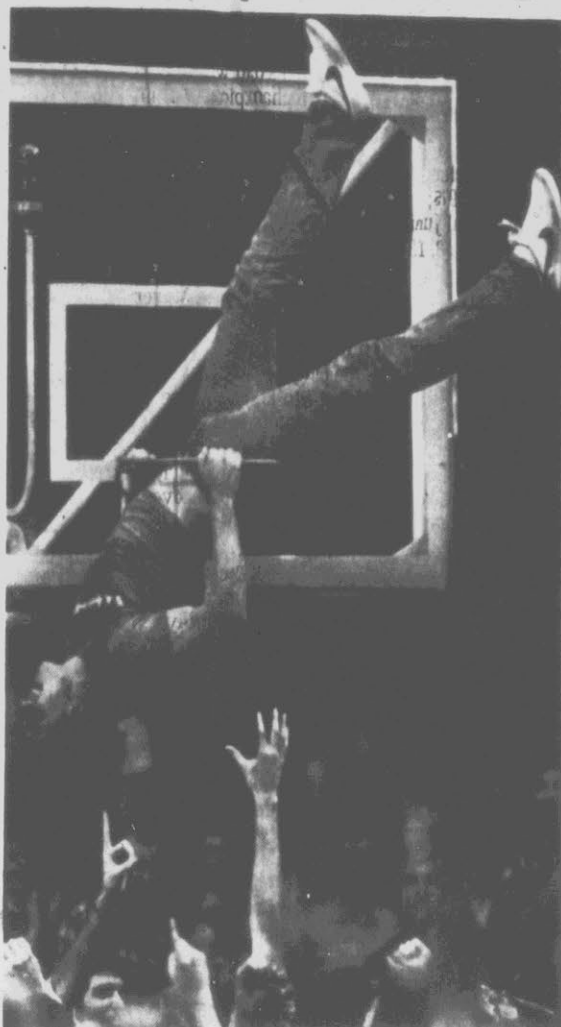

Maryland is in fifth place at 5-4 and 16-6 overall. After Saturday's 92-88 victory over last-place Clemson, the Terapins can pull into a tie with N.C. State by beating the Blue Devils tonight.

The Maryland-Duke game is a makeup for the Feb. 12 game cancelled because of a blizzard which kept the Terapins from departing College Park.

Terry Gannon and Sidney Lowe sparked the second-half surge that carried the Wolfpack to the victory, but it was center Cozell McQueen's two free throws with 17 seconds left that helped put the game away. Thurl Bailey, who led the Wolfpack with 20 points, ended any Tar Heel hopes with a dunk on a pass from Lowe.

"This game meant so much to us, was so different from the game earlier in Chapel Hill," said a joyfully tearful Bailey. "We have our confidence up now and if we can go into a game knowing we have a chance to win, we can spill our guts out there like we did today."

Smith said his Tar Heels, 21-6 and 8-2, are in a bit of a bind if they want to claim an ACC crown.

"I'm disappointed for our players," said Smith, who hasn't suffered a three-game losing streak since the 1969-70 season. "This puts us in a difficult position for the regular-season championship."

Just as N.C. State, the Demon Deacons are hoping for an NCAA berth and they believe their performance against the Blue Devils may have helped.

"It's too early to start saying we're close," said Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy, who must face North Carolina in Chapel Hill on Thursday. "I certainly think we're good enough — no question about that."

Anthony Teachey scored 22 points despite missing almost one week of practice due to a hamstring injury. Alvis Rogers didn't suit up because of a recurring knee injury and Tacy calls his situation "a day-to-day thing."

Clemson pulled to within 88-85 on Marc Campbell's seventh straight three-point basket, but two free throws by Branch with 17 seconds left secured the victory for Maryland.

No. 5 Cavs Down No. 12 Tigers

By The Associated Press

Ralph Sampson may some day be in a class with Wilt Chamberlain, but not when it comes to shooting free throws.

Chamberlain, the National Basketball Association's all-time leading scorer, was futile from the foul line, admittedly psyched out by the task.

No such problem for Virginia's 7-foot-4 Sampson.

"I've been working on (foul shots) for a period of years now," Sampson said Sunday after leading the Cavaliers, the nation's fifth-ranked college basketball team, to a 68-53 victory over No. 12 Missouri at the Brendan Byrne Arena in East Rutherford, N.J.

Sampson sank 11 of 12 foul shots in the second half and finished with 21 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots as Virginia raised its record to 21-3.

"It just came down to them fouling me once I was in the lane and I just put them in," said the Virginia senior All-American. The Cavaliers outscored Missouri 18-4 in the final eight minutes, handing the Tigers the second loss of the weekend. Host Oklahoma State beat Missouri 79-93 Saturday.

Steve Stipanovich, Missouri's 6-11 center, hitting mostly from the outside, scored 27 points, had 12 rebounds and five blocked shots.

In another Sunday game, No. 6 St. John's, led by Chris Mullin's 19 points and Kevin Williams' all-around play, defeated DePaul 64-52 at Madison Square Garden. The Redmen are 22-3, DePaul 14-9.

Mullin was held to two field goals the first half which was tied at 31-31. But the 6-6 sophomore hit nine of 10 free throws as the Redmen overcame a 47-46 deficit with seven minutes remaining. Bernard Randolph's 15 points paced the Blue Demons.

Meanwhile, top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas clinched the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title with a 111-78 rout over visiting Utah State Saturday night. Sidney Green scored 23 points and grabbed 21 rebounds.

Grit, Putter Give Hallberg Title

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Gary Hallberg, so skinny as a kid that he played ice hockey to build up his strength, would like to think he's come of age on the pro golf tour.

"I know what it takes to win now and the practice it took to get where I'm at," said the 24-year-old Chicago native after claiming his first Tour victory Sunday.

Relying on grit and a 50-year-old putter, Hallberg fired a final round 6-under-par 66 to win the $300,000 Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open.

His eight-foot birdie putt on No. 18 gave him the lead for the first time and a 1-stroke victory over Tom Kite, who lost a 4-stroke lead to the charging Hallberg.

Three strokes back were Ben Crenshaw and John Cook at 274.

One of the most publicized amateurs to come out of college, Hallberg joined the Tour about the same time as Ohio State's Cook and Bobby Clampett of Brigham Young.

Hallberg's rise began when he attended an Arnold Palmer golf academy when he was about 10. "He gave me a few pointers, wished me well and that's all I needed (for incentive)," said the 5-foot-10, 155-pound native of Barrington, Ill.

While attending Wake Forest on a Palmer-sponsored scholarship, he was the first four-time, first-team All-America in history and winner of the 1979 NCAA championship.

He ranked Sunday's triumph as the crowning achievement in his career.

On the 18th, as he sized up his putt, he said his heart was "pounding like never before."

"I was real shaky. I stood there looking down the putter and saw it shimmy a little. I just said to myself, 'Get it back and let the momentum carry it through,'" he said.

His duel with Kite, the second and third-round leader, stood, even at No. 13 when Hallberg rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt.

With the match still tied at 18, Hallberg ripped his drive into a fairway bunker. Kite, down the fairway in good shape, then elected to lay up in front of the pond that protects the 18th hole.

Hallberg then purposely hit short, laying up behind Kite's ball.

"I wanted to make sure I had the first shot at the green to put pressure on him," said Hallberg.

Using a sand wedge from 103 yards, he put his chip shot close enough for the birdie while Kite's approach shot ended up 25 feet from the flag.

Kite's putt just missed the edge of the cup, leaving a tap-in.

East Carolina ended up hitting 44.8 percent of its shots from the floor, while holding BU to just 32.9 percent. The Lady Pirates also held a 54-41 rebounding edge over the taller Terriers, led by 11 each by Denkler and Chaney and nine by Squirewell. Rahming led BU with eight.

In addition to the 23 by Denkler and Bragg, Hooks added 12 and Chaney had 10.

Val DePaolo led Boston with 18 points, 14 on them in the second half on long jumpers, while Rahming added 11.

East Carolina travels for its next three games, visiting

UNC-Wilmington on Wednesday, George Mason on Saturday and George Washington on Sunday. The Lady Pirates close out the year with a home game against UNC Charlotte on March 5.

'Grace' Plays Love Boat

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Love Boat Goes to Monaco" is one way of describing "Grace Kelly," ABC's pretty but mostly meaningless snoop into the early life of the glamorous movie star who forsook Hollywood to marry a real-life prince.

Just like ABC's "Love Boat," "Grace Kelly" tonight deals superficially with people's lives and affairs of the heart, while, at the same time, it's packaged in a glossy wrapper that offers audiences fantasy glimpses of faraway places and long-ago stars.

The faraway places, in this case, are in the south of France. The ancient idols are actors cast as Gary Cooper, Clark Gable and Bing Crosby, all of whom are seen acting opposite Miss Kelly in big movies from the '50s.

The whole exercise has an awe-struck quality. It's played as a flat-out fairy tale, ignoring the unromantic suggestions of some members of the Kelly family that Grace didn't marry for love, but eventually grew into it.

That sentimental tone is magnified by a gushy soundtrack better suited for a daytime serial. When a scene washes out, the music covers up with a dramatic crescendo. When a scene is supposed to play softer — Prince Rainier's marriage proposal, for example — the accompaniment is a tinkletinkle on the piano.

Cheryl Ladd, whose husband is one of the project's executive producers, is an elegant Grace. She's capable of recreating the famed actress' refinement and outward composure, but there's never a hint of the fire inside. Her most notable emotional reaction is an overused kittenish laugh.

Grace, from a wealthy, Catholic family in Philadelphia, is seen during the opening credits as a pampered child. When the action begins, it's 1947 and she has made her decision to try an acting career, against the wishes of her old-school father, Jack (Lloyd Bridges).

Jack is a back-slapping type who measures people by their athletic ability. Grace doesn't seem to measure up. Ever. After her first Broadway show, the not-proud-enough papa says the play was a "little heavy."

The need to win her father over is her biggest problem in life, not counting the fact that she didn't have a date for Sammy Cahn's big party.

Her acting career starts slowly. "When I look into my face I see absolutely nothing," she says in one of the film's major moments of honest introspection. "I feel all these things but they don't come out."

The transparency of Grace's romance with designer Oleg Cassini is more typical of the movie's content. He woos her with long-stem roses sent great distances. But their marriage plans are nixed by her mother (Margaret Ladd, no relation), who tells off the twice-married Cassini (Alejandro Rey) at lunch.

That's one bizarre scene. Not only is it strange that Grace easily accepts the motherly interference, but Mrs. Kelly graciously thanks Cassini for the lunch. He then politely kisses her hand.

The movie traces Grace's fast-rising Hollywood career through "High Noon" and "Country Girl," for which she wins an Oscar as best actress. "Country Girl" is an important film for the young actress, who had become dissatisfied over being stereotyped in dignified, ladylike roles.

Liza Takes Part In Salute To Minelli

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Liza Minelli decided to break her lifelong custom by performing two Judy Garland standards in an 80th-birthday tribute to her father, director Vincente Minelli.

At a $1,000-a-plate benefit dinner show Saturday night at the Palm Springs Desert Museum, Miss Minelli sang "The Boys Next Door" and the trolley song from "Meet Me in St. Louis" — two pieces popularized by Miss

The rest, to coin a phrase, is Hollywood history. Grace meets Prince Rainier of Monaco (Ian McShane) and they have a whirlwind courtship, culminating in a ballyhooed wedding in 1956 that the MGM Newsreel calls a "20th century fairy tale."

The movie ends with the prince and princess on the palace balcony, a scene reminiscent of the way two networks ended dramatizations of the romance of Prince Charles and Lady Diana.

Following the movie, the producers express thanks to Grace Kelly. They say she lent assistance to the film before she died in a car accident last fall. However, when the project was first announced, her immediate reaction was to label it "tasteless."

A Review

'Gandhi' Among The Film Epics

Every few years a movie comes along that truly deserves to be called epic — a film that succeeds in capturing both the life of a remarkable individual and a significant segment of history. Instances that come to mind are "Gone With The Wind" and "Lawrence of Arabia."

The Richard Attenborough film "Gandhi," which opened Friday at the Buccaneer Theater, earns the right to join the ranks of a select few great films. It is no surprise that it has received 11 nominations for the upcoming Academy Awards, more than any other film this year.

The sustained impact of this powerful film rests squarely on the shoulders of actor Ben Kingsley. His portrayal of Mahatma Gandhi, from years of early manhood and first actions against injustice in South Africa to his assassination in India in 1948, is stunning. It is almost as if we were seeing a reincarnation of the man rather than watching a performance on film.

It's an astonishing experience to watch Gandhi the man grow in character and strength as he searches for, finds, and applies to his life the deeper truths that can, but seldom, guide men, whatever their station in life. In scene after scene, Kingsley's performance transcends outer manifestations to reveal the innermost soul of this fascinating man.

Much of this achievement is possible thanks to John Briley's illuminating script. He has incorporated numerous quotes from Gandhi's writings that reveal Gandhi's shrewdness, inquisitive intelligence, and quick wit. These passages clearly show that Gandhi was a much more complex man than the popular image of him as an overly-humble, half-naked creature obsessed with his philosophy for peace through non-violence and his quest for Indian independence.

Among memorable Gandhi words in the film are: "An eye for an eye ends up making the whole world blind;" "Poverty is the worst form of violence;" and a typical flash of wit, "many of my best friends complain about how much it costs to keep me in poverty."

The scope of the film (which runs a little over three hours) affords time to develop a needed framework of reference to world history and a specific framework of the love-hate relationship that existed between Great Britain and India in Gandhi's lifetime. India was indisputably the major jewel in the crown of the British Empire, and many well-meaning Englishmen simply could not fathom why a sprawling country of millions beset with a multitude of problems would want to get out from under the British umbrella.

The complexity of this relationship is established without destroying the focus on the man Gandhi.

British involvement in India runs the gamut from the warm, early and influential friendship of a young English minister, Charlie Andrews, played to perfection by Ian Charleson, (remembered as the young, religious Scottish runner in "Chariots of Fire"), to the incredible bloodbath of the infamous Amritsar massacre at the hands of a British general, portrayed by Edward Fox.

The massacre, which understandably sparked rioting throughout India, certainly must rank as one of the most dramatic demonstrations of uncaring cruelty ever filmed.

This and several other scenes of mass violence undoubtedly account for the film's PG rating. This should not deter anyone, young or old, from seeing "Gandhi," as the violence is historically true and needed in the context of the film. Fortunately, scenes of violence constitute only a small segment of the film's time.

The seriousness of "Gandhi" is leavened with generous touches of wit and humanity, and the color and romance of Oriental India is captured in a number of marvelous crowd scenes. It is also rich in authenticity, with Indians and Englishmen sharing major and minor roles.

Rohini Hattangady as Gandhi's wife gives a consistently fine performance, from lovely young mother to ailing old woman on her deathbed. Roshan Seth gives a memorable performance as Pandit Nehru, heightened by an astonishing resemblance to the character he portrays.

It's unfortunate, for whatever reason, that the seemingly entrenched compulsion to throw in a few "star" names for window-dressing was acquiesced to in this film. As a result, Candice Bergen's role as the American photographer Margaret Bourke-White, though a cameo role, is extended far more than it should have been. Martin Sheen, in the role of a reporter for The New York Times who interviews Gandhi early and late in life, carries a bit more validity. But these roles, as well as brief ones played by John Gielgud, Trevor Howard and John Mills would have been more in keeping with the unity of casting had they been assigned to lesser known actors.

A small quibble in the face of so many good things, but it did distract.

Other definite assets in "Gandhi" are Ravi Shankar's excellent musical score, the strikingly beautiful cinematography by Billy Williams and Ronnie Taylor, and the telling contrast of extreme luxury and poverty among the Indian people. Appalling poverty is shown, but not excessively dwelt upon.

"Gandhi" the film is a fine tribute to a man who in our own time proved that peace, love, and understanding can be used to influence and change for the better the course of history. It also proves that the talents of filmmakers and actors can be used to create an outstanding document of history, biography, art, and philosophy in film.

HBO May Sell Partnerships

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's largest cable-TV service, Home Box Office, has proposed selling limited partnerships in a theatrical company to raise as much as $125 million to finance its own movies.

The proposed venture, Silver Screen Partners, would assign pay-TV rights of all its films to HBO.

"We're looking to ensure production of motion pictures and make sure that HBO has a supply in the future," Kevin Senie, HBO's senior vice president for finance, said Friday.

John Belushi Tribute Aired

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Almost a year after the death of John Belushi, a tribute to the comedian was broadcast during the weekend on the television program that made him famous, "Saturday Night Live."

In the segment, prepared by his widow, Judith Jacklin Belushi, the comedian was seen in photographs riding a horse, clowning with pal Dan Aykroyd, riding a bicycle, leaping into a swimming pool and laughing with children. Several beach photographs were shown, one of Belushi with his arms outstretched to a sunset over the ocean.

Belushi was 33 when he was found dead from a drug overdose in a Hollywood hotel bungalow last March 5.

Newspaper in Education Week

"The careful reader of a few good newspapers can learn more than most scholars do in their great libraries." This quote by F.B. Sanborn points out the value of one of our nation's most important resources — our free press. This is National Newspaper in Education Week, a time to consider the newspaper as an educational tool. Each week, millions of students use newspapers as textbooks to learn about current events, geography, history, and the arts. Some teachers even use grocery ads to teach math lessons. More than half the nation's daily newspapers — including this one — support such educational programs to encourage the newspaper reading habit among students.

Textile Woes Close To Home

HOOKERTON, N.C. (AP) — Textile workers at two U.S. Industries Co. plants in North Carolina say they had expected long layoffs, but not the permanent job losses they'll face next month.

"We were expecting to be laid off, but we didn't know until the day that we were told that (the plant) would be closed," said Eunice Dearman, an 11-year employee of the company's Mount Olive plant.

Company officials blame the shutdowns generally on poor economic conditions and specifically on imports that compete with U.S. products.

Smithy Walker, who had heard about the impact of foreign imports, believed her Greene County mill was safe from those woes.

"I didn't give it a thought that it would hit us one day," she said.

Mrs. Walker is one of 700 workers who will be unemployed when the firm closes down its Hookerton and Mount Olive plants next month.

The apparel plants are part of the slumping national textile industry that suffered its worst year in 1982 in nearly a decade. The number of textile workers in North Carolina fell from about 233,000 in 1981 to about 220,000 last year.

The jobless rate in apparel in January was 13.3 percent compared with 6.1 percent for textiles, according to the N.C. Employment Security Commission. About 11,728 workers filed for unemployment benefits each week.

The unemployment rate for last month has not been released, but the level reached 9 percent last December.

Textile industry officials said the apparel industry was affected by consumer buying power, interest rates and styles. But they said imports were the biggest influence.

In 1982, apparel imports were valued at $7.5 billion, up 11.5 percent from 1981, while exports dropped to $778.3 million, a 24.6 percent decline. The apparel trade deficit rose to $6.8 billion, an increase of about 18 percent over the 1981 deficit.

"There's no question that imports and the recession have had a definite effect on textiles and apparels," said Charles J. Dunn, executive vice president of the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association.

He said that for the first time in eight years, there was a trade deficit in textile mill products, such as yarn and cloth. In 1982, there was a $23 million deficit compared to a surplus of $573 million the previous year.

Besides the problems with imports, the international trade situation worsened because the worldwide recession hit traditional export markets, said Dunn.

However, industry analysts give reasons for hope. Asia has steadily increased its share of U.S. exports, especially yarn for its growing textile industries. And encouraging signs domestically include improvements in housing, construction and the auto industry, which uses textile products.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦762 ♥K9862 ♦6 ♠8543
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♥ Dble ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Not only do you not have very much, but what little you do have is likely to detract from partner's defensive potential. For all that, however, your hand, with its singleton and five trumps, could be quite useful offensively. Jump to three hearts. Over a takeout double, a jump raise of opener's suit is preemptive.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AK73 ♥832 ♦953 ♠742
The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—In terms of point count, you have a minimum one-over-one response and flat distribution, so it would seem that you should pass. However, you do have three-card support for partner and your ace-king in spades, undervalued in the point count, should be two sure tricks. We would raise to four hearts.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AQ63 ♥J982 ♦85 ♠742
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Your useful hand and four-card support for partner suggest that you should raise hearts. But bear in mind that partner has made a simple overall, so his strength must be limited. In addition, your queen of spades is a doubtful asset. We don't think your combined holding can stretch to game, and even the three-level could prove hazardous. Pass.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦84 ♥Q6 ♦75 ♠KQ108763
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ 2 ♦ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Certainly you are unlikely to come to much grief at three clubs, but that is not the point. Partner probably has a minimum opening bid and you don't have much, so it is quite possible that the opponents have misjudged the situation. Don't give them another chance. Pass.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦J86 ♥954 ♦K632 ♠Q74
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1 ♦ Dble Pass
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—You have flat distribution and not too many high cards, but partner has shown a very powerful hand by first doubling and then jumping in a new suit. We feel that you owe partner one move, and the logical choice is two no trump. Game probably depends on whether partner decides that your club feature is of value.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦AJ92 ♥43 ♦AKQ5 ♠KQ7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass 4 NT Pass
5 ♥ Pass 5 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—This is a problem similar to one we ran a few weeks ago. You have a very powerful hand, and you have shown it. The Blackwood bidder is captain of the hand, and partner has, in effect, said that you don't have sufficient aces to contract for slam. Since partner knows how many aces your side holds and you don't, why should you presume to contradict him.

'Anti-Coddling' Bills Pushed
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative agenda backed by the Governor's Crime Commission seeks to stop "coddling" of juveniles who commit felonies, says a state senator pushing the proposals.

Sen. William Staton, D-Lee, last week introduced two bills suggested by the commission in its "Agenda in the Pursuit of Justice," a September 1982 report on crime in North Carolina.

Staton said either he or Sen. Robert Swain, D-Buncombe, will introduce the rest of the commission's program within the next two weeks.

The two bills introduced would make it harder for a juvenile's criminal record to be cleared when he reaches age 16. Also, sexual offenses would be included in a list of crimes for which juvenile offenders' cases may not be handled by counselors out of court.

Dispute Center Eases A Burden

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Some North Carolina residents are avoiding a session in court by taking their arguments to the Dispute Settlement Center in Chapel Hill.

The program, which is operating or being developed in 11 North Carolina cities, aims at getting parties in a dispute to talk out their differences rather than tying up the courts.

It has the support of Orange County District Attorney Wade Barber, who has referred cases to the center to see if they can be worked out without a judge, jury or lawyers.

In one case, Barber referred a charge of first-degree burglary to the center since it involved two UNC students in a dispute over a refrigerator.

Barber predicted the students could decide at the dispute center who would keep the refrigerator — and perhaps solve other differences that might have arisen in the relationship broken by a falling-out over a female friend.

Barber uses that case to describe the concept of the dispute settlement center, where both sides agree to work through their problems together, each represented by a trained, volunteer mediator.

He credits the mediators and their training for the success of the Orange County program, which has 24 unpaid mediators.

Ranging in age from late 20s to 80, there are blacks and whites, men and women, said Smith. They include a mechanic, a head waiter, an epidemiologist, a professor of black studies, a professor of public health, a retired dentist and a retired office manager.

The disputants themselves agree on any settlement; no decision is imposed upon them. Participation is voluntary, and there is no fee.

Barber has only praise for the work of the settlement center, created 4 1/2 years ago with his blessing. If a case he refers to the center is settled, he dismisses the underlying criminal charge. If a case is not settled, it returns to the court system for prosecution.

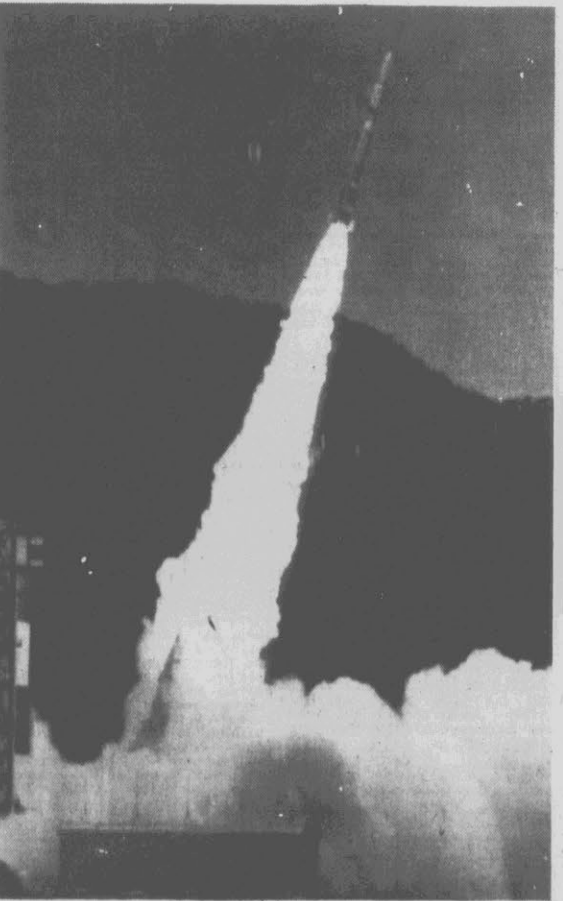

The spats involve neighbors, roommates, spouses, and landlords and tenants, he said.

"They vent a lot of anger at each other there in public," Barber said. "That aggravates the relationship. And when they get through, it's pretty obvious to everyone involved that the problem is not a criminal problem, but something that shouldn't be dealt with in a fault-finding situation. Criminal court is not a place to deal with interpersonal problems."

Compromise is the method of mediation.

"Each person who comes has to give something; it's not win for one and lose for the other. They both have to give to make an agreement," said Charlotte Adams, the driving force in the creation of the center.

Communication is the foundation of the process, said the settlement center's director, Lil Smith. "Lots of times the problems we have, regardless if it's a simple assault or a trespass, it's people not talking to one another or people not listening to one another."

Seven People Died In Weekend Traffic

By The Associated Press
Seven people, including a 5-year-old Washington boy, died in traffic accidents on North Carolina highways during the weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported Monday.

Charlie Lee Godley, 5, was killed at 7:30 p.m. Saturday as he walked into the path of a car on U.S. 264 in Beaufort County near Washington.

Margaret Cropps Waugh, 58, of North Wilkesboro, died about 12:30 p.m. Sunday on N.C. 268 in Wilkes County, just outside her hometown. Troopers said she was driving at high speed when her car ran off the road and down an embankment.

Neil Archie Blue, 46, of Elm City, was lying on N.C. 58 when he was run over by a car and killed Saturday night in Nash County south of Nashville.

Also Saturday night, Charles Henry Bridges, 19, of Shelby, died when the car he was driving left the road in Cleveland County, struck a ditch, exploded and burned.

An Allentown, Pa., couple died earlier Saturday when their car ran off Interstate 95 north of St. Pauls and hit a road sign. The victims were identified as Charles F. Turner, 61, and Katherine B. Turner, 64.

Pedestrian James Henry Helms, 29, of Concord died Friday night when he was hit by a car on U.S. 29 in Kannapolis.

The deaths raised the yearly traffic fatality toll to 125, compared to 135 deaths at the same time last year.

Crash Ended Auto-Chase

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Law enforcement officers chased a Sten man through four counties late Saturday night before he crashed into a Highway Patrol car in northern Durham County.

The chase began in Granville County when deputies answered a disturbance call involving Elvin Riley, 50, of Stem.

Deputy Mike Beaver said when the deputies approached Riley, he got into his pickup truck and sped out of Granville County, into Durham County and then into Orange County. He returned to Durham County, crossed into Person County and then came back into Durham County on U.S. 501, Beaver said.

By the time Riley returned to Durham County the second time, several patrol cars from the Granville and Durham County sheriff's departments and the N.C. Highway Patrol had joined the chase.

Sgt. Raymond Evans of the Highway Patrol said that when he attempted to stop Riley, the man sideswiped his patrol car. No serious injuries were reported.

Riley is charged with driving 85 mph in a 55 mph zone, careless and reckless driving, failure to stop for blue lights and siren and eluding a law enforcement officer. Riley was released from the Granville County Jail on $1,000 bond. File Stored As: File Name Already Exists ... File Not Stored

Boy's Body Recovered

ELON COLLEGE, N.C. (AP) — Rescue workers Sunday found the body of an Alamance County teenager who drowned in the Haw River Tuesday morning.

The body of 16-year-old Ricky Sutton of Burlington was found about 2 miles from where a car in which he was riding Tuesday crashed into the river.

Hold 'Day' For Loretta

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) — Her hometown is so hot for "Hot Lips" Houlihan that Feb. 28, the day of the last "M-A-S-H" episode on television, has been proclaimed Loretta Swit Day.

"She's probably the most famous person from Passaic," says Councilman James Shoop, an admitted "M-A-S-H" addict. He and other council members decided to honor the 33-year-old actress because, says Shoop, "She's our favorite daughter."

Miss Swit grew up in the predominantly Polish section of the city's East side, where she attended Holy Rosary Roman Catholic Church, worked part-time at the city library and went to Pope Pius VI High School.

Shoop said Miss Swit, who has played Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan in the show during its 11-year run, probably won't be at the council meeting Thursday when the proclamation is issued. But he said her parents, Lester and Nellie Swit, who live in the city, will be on hand for the ceremony.

"People don't always think highly of Passaic," the councilman said. "But when you tell people Loretta Swit is from here, they say, 'Oh, yeah?' They sound impressed and you can tell that they walk away with a different view."

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An unusually good day and evening to obtain information you require that can lead to advancement in your line of endeavor. Take time to plan the future wisely.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Find a better way of handling your responsibilities and they are soon behind you. Meet the expectations of loved one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Discuss future plans with associates. Good organizational work is the key to success

now. Express happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can gain your aims now if you schedule your time and activities well. Relax and be contented in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take no risks where your health is concerned at this time. Put a special talent you have to work.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study new interests that could prove profitable for you in the future. Take treatments to improve your appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Set up a better system so you can make more progress in the future. Be sure to spend your money wisely at all times today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study every phase of your monetary affairs and find a better way of handling your finances. Be more self-assured.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more enthused in regular routines and make more progress. Take no risks with your reputation at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Contact a trusted adviser who can give you good ideas so that you can advance in career activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good day to concentrate on getting ahead in your line of endeavor. Strive for increased happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Keep busy and accomplish a great deal. Delve into civic work and gain more prestige. Be wary of newcomers.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Go to the right sources for important data you need. A new project needs more study before going ahead with it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those delightful young persons who will profit from discipline early in life. The talents here will start to express themselves gradually. Teach to be objective and give the benefit of ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
