New Jersey 'Visitor' To Be Extradited

Man Held In Murders

A New Jersey man who has been living recently near Greenville was arrested in Newark Saturday and charged with murder in the shooting deaths of a Grifton minister and a Goldsboro man whose bodies had been weighted gangster-style and dumped into the Tar River.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Dwight Parker Sr., 23, was being held in Newark, where Pitt County deputies have been conducting an investigation since early last week.

In New Jersey, Essex County Sheriff's Detective Terry Reilly told United Press International that his officers also were questioning Parker but that there was nothing to immediately indicate he was wanted for anything in Newark.

Reilly said Parker probably would appear in court Monday for an extradition hearing. Tyson said efforts would be made to have Parker returned to North Carolina if he fought extradition.

The sheriff said Parker was charged in the deaths of the Rev. Leslie L. Thorbs, 31, who operated flower shops in Greenville and Ayden, and Anthony Ray Herring, 27.

"He knew both victims," Tyson said. The sheriff said Parker had been visiting in the area and had shared a house on Route 4, Greenville, with Carolyn Denise Pippins, 20. "He just kind of took up down here," Tyson said.

Parker's wife and parents live in New Jersey, Tyson said.

Ms. Pippins was arrested Thursday and charged with two counts of accessory after the fact of murder. Warrants charged Ms. Pippin assisted in disposing of the bodies of the victims and concealed the murders.

A probable cause hearing for Ms. Pippin has been scheduled for March 18.

Tyson declined to say whether more arrests were expected. "The investigation is continuing ... in both places," he said, referring to North Carolina and New Jersey.

In the meantime, Tyson said a nationwide alert has been issued for Thorbs' car, a 1980 black and gold Cadillac. "It could be anywhere," he said.

Authorities said Thorbs and Herring died Feb. 18 of gunshot wounds to the head. Concrete blocks were tied to the legs of both men before their bodies were dumped into the river.

The bodies were found after officers reportedly received an anonymous telephone call about the murders. Dragging operations of the rain-swollen Tar led to the discovery of the bodies.

Apparently acting on the basis of the tip, Tyson sent deputies to New Jersey early last week to begin an investigation in the Newark area. He declined to say when the deputies went to Newark, but there were indications they went to New

Growers Balk At Farm Bureau

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A leaf growers' association said Saturday that the federal tobacco program may die because the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation decided to seek no change in the program this year.

"The N.C. Farm Bureau, in their decision of Thursday, Feb. 24, may have precipitated the end of tobacco programs," said a statement released by Howard D. Moye Jr., executive vice president of the United Tobacco Growers Association.

The association, which has about 200 members, wants a "lower, more competitive market-oriented" price support, Moye said. The growers also want to return control of the tobacco program to active farmers, he said.

Moye said the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. received 26 percent of the 1982 crop at 10 cents per pound above the average support price.

"Stabilization receipts of more than $500 million in 1982 and projections of $300 million receipts in 1983 have failed to impress upon the (Farm Bureau Federation) the folly of uncompetitively high U.S. price supports," he said.

The United Tobacco Growers Association fears that failure to reform the tobacco program this year will cause a default on Stabilization's obligations to the Commodity Credit Corp., the statement said.

"This will make the future possibility of maintaining any tobacco program politically impossible," Moye said in the statement.

Farm Bureau Federation president John Sledge said Thursday that any changes "could place the entire tobacco program in jeopardy and we would come out worse."

Outlook 'Good' For Interchanges On New 264

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Eastern North Carolina residents could be traveling on a fully controlled access freeway between Greenville and Wilson in the future, rather than a four-lane highway with at-grade crossings, if the General Assembly provides money to match federal highway construction grant funds this year.

Billy Rose, the Department of Transportation's highway administrator, said in an interview that "right now the outlook looks pretty good" for the interchanges to be put back in the plan to four-lane U.S. 264.

Rose said the decision is up to the Board of Transportation when the board updates the state's Transportation Improvement Plan, which will be done within the next two or three months. But Rose said, "I would guess that (the adding of the interchanges) would probably be done."

According to Rose, putting the interchanges back into the project "would add a fairly substantial amount" to the cost of building the four-lane road.

"A lot will depend on matching money," he said. "If the Legislature doesn't provide the money, then it's out." In fact, Rose said, if matching funds are not provided "we will not be able to do what we planned. We will be out of matching money this summer."

The Board of Transportation in March 1979 gave approval to a DOT professional staff report which recommended that a fully-controlled access roadway be constructed on a new location between Wilson and Greenville, to replace the present U.S. 264.

However, in December 1981, the Transportation Board approved a scaled down highway improvement program which did not include the interchanges proposed in the earlier plan. The at-grade crossings were substituted as a means of cutting costs.

Increased highway construction costs, and reduced revenues for construction and maintenance, caused the Board of Transportation to cut some $1.2 billion from the highway improvement plan — 95 projects — at the same time the proposed interchanges were deleted from the U.S. 264 project.

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox said at that time "the highway, as approved, less the interchanges, is a lot better than what we have now."

Last week, Cox said "I feel like the interchanges are very important to give us the efficiency we need in the highway. If they leave them out, it will defeat the purpose of the four-lane highway."

But Cox emphasized, "I had rather have the highway without interchanges than not have one at all."

Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissionrs, said the board would support the inclusion of the interchanges in the project.

"We have always wanted it done right, and we would certainly adopt a resolution calling for them to be put back in," Gaskins said. But "we wouldn't want to do anything to jeopardize the possibility of the road itself being built. We don't want to get in the way."

Pitt's representatives in the General Asselbly also voiced support for the interchanges, and said they feel the Legislature will provide the money needed to match federal highway construction money.

Rep. Ed Warren said "I'm supporting" both the state matching money and the construction of the interchanges. "I want to see that (the interchanges) incorporated in the total plan," he said.

"They (the DOT) are acquiring the right-of-way for the interchanges in case the money appears," Warren said. "There's nothing else to be done now 'til we see the revenue, and I feel like the General Assembly will come up with the money to match the federal money. We're committed to that end.

"I think it is good business practice for us to match these (federal) dollars."

Rep. Walter Jones Jr. said, "My understanding in talking to Billy Rose is that they plan to put the interchanges back in

Grifton Begins Centennial Celebration

GRIFTON — The 100th anniversary celebration of this southern Pitt County town known as the "The Family Town" will officially begin Monday and continue through Grifton's 13th Annual Shad Festival April 13-17.

"A History of Grifton In Celebration of Centennial" will be the theme of the annual meeting of the Grifton Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, scheduled Monday at 7 p.m. as the first official event of the centennial commemoration.

According to "Private Laws — North Carolina — 1883, Chapter 72," the town of Bell's Ferry was incorporated in 1883. Six years later on March 9, 1889, said "Private Laws," the community's name was changed to Grifton.

Bell's Ferry, according to local history, was named for Warren Bell, who operated a ferry across Contentnea Creek at the site of his chair manufacturing business.

The name was changed, Grifton historians say, to honor a landholder and merchant, Cicero Marcus Aurelius Griffin.

In honor of Grifton's 100th birthday, the Shad Festival themes are "100 Years of Progress and Growth" and "Double-Barrel Celebration." A beard contest and a centennial costume contest will be featured events.

Former mayors of the town will also be honored during the April 13-17 festival which will climax the nearly two-month-long centennial celebration.

For further information on the centennial or the 1983 Shad Festival contact Janet Haseley, festival publicity chairman, at 524-4356, or Box 928, Grifton, N.C., 28530.

Housing Proposal Calls For Minimum Standards

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Every dwelling in North Carolina would be required to meet minimum livability standards by 1987 under a comprehensive housing program that goes before the Legislature this week.

"A statewide effort to improve housing is an idea whose time has come," said state Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, chairman of the Commission to Study the Housing Programs in North Carolina.

During its 1½-year study, the 18-member commission crafted a package of 15 bills centered on development of a minimum standards code, to be implemented by a N.C. Housing Commission and enforced by local government.

Another of the commission's proposals — establishing legislative committees on housing — already has been implemented. The House Committee on Housing will begin hearings Wednesday on the series of bills.

"Having these standing committees will ensure that housing issues are put on the front burner," said Rep. Cook in an interview Friday. "And this is an ideal time.

"Up to now, much of the government attention on housing has been on the federal level. But with the budget cuts, the states are having to take a more active role. In North Carolina, the housing programs we do have are fragmented and in different departments, and there's a lack of expertise in the Legislature on the subject."

In a report summarizing its findings, the commission called for a policy that would "clearly define" the state's role in providing housing. The policy would guide government officials as they design programs to make home ownership more affordable, help the poor and elderly upgrade their dwellings, and "protect the housing industry."

The policy would be carried out by a housing commission, composed of appointees of the governor, lieutenant governor and state house speaker and several government officials. The appointed members would include builders, consumers, developers and lenders, the report said.

The commission would prepare a "state housing action plan," which would be updated every two years and submitted to the governor. He would present it to the

Tremors Hit Gulf Coast

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Mysterious tremors shook a 50-mile stretch of the Mississippi Gulf Coast on Saturday, knocking goods from store shelves and startling residents.

"The french doors, they just shook, shook, shook," said Sophie Hatten of Lyman. "I thought they were going to come off, they shook so much."

"We don't know don't know if they are earth tremors," said Richard Faul at the civil defense post in Gulfport. "We're still trying to find out what they were and where they came from."

There were unconfirmed reports that some windows shattered and that pictures fell off walls in this resort town.

Biloxi residents said they felt three distinct tremors starting around noon and preceded by a thunder-like rumbling. The tremors were felt along the coast from Bay St. Louis to Ocean Springs.

Terry Thompson at the Edgewater Shopping Mall Merchants Association in Gulfport said some shoppers became upset when merchandise began falling off the shelves, but there was no damage.

Faul said officials thought the tremors might be the result of a sonic boom from passing aircraft. But a spokesman at Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi said he did not know of any jets being out at the time.

Geophysicist Bruce Presgrave at the U.S. Geological Survey's earthquake monitoring center in Colorado said the center had received many calls about tremors, but a check of their equipment showed nothing.

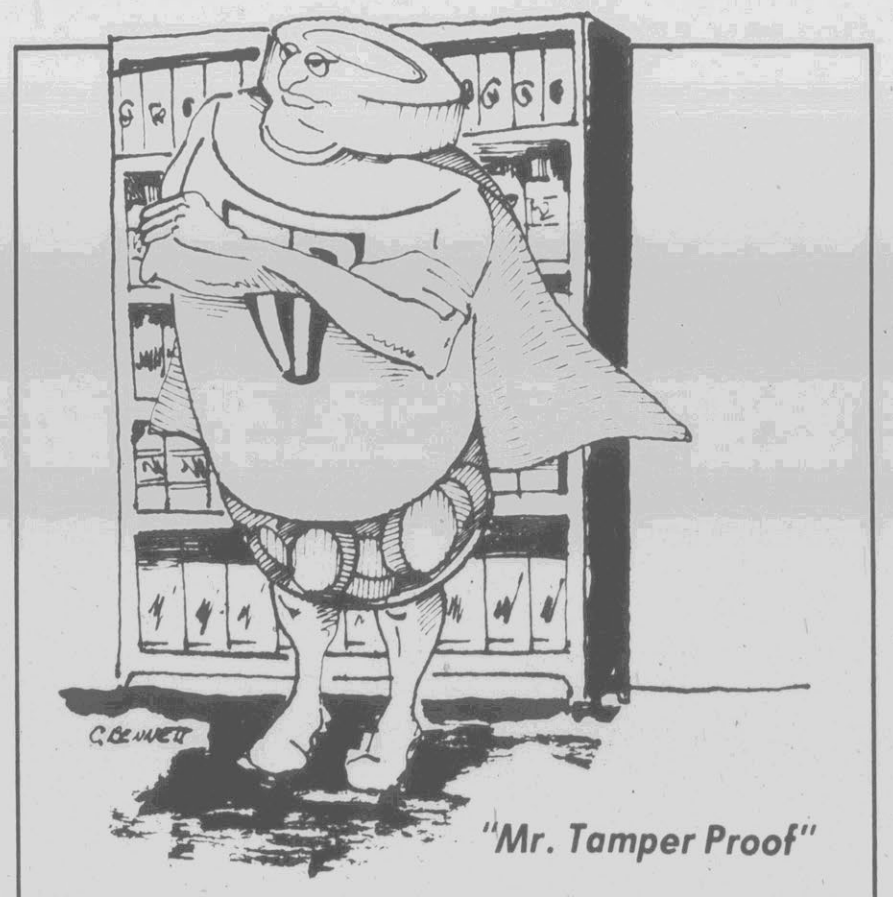

"There's a possibility it's below our threshhold, but I seriously doubt there are earthquake events in the area," he said. "There is no indication at all of these alleged events. If they really are earthquakes, they're very small."

He said any quake of a magnitude of 2.0 or above on the Richter scale of ground motion would show up on the equipment.

The Rev. Louis J. Eisele, an earthquake expert at Spring Hill College in Mobile, Ala., said his seismograph detected the disturbances, but he doubted they were caused by an earthquake.

"Normally an earthquake of sufficient magnitude to give me readings would have been recorded a longer time," he said.

He said he believed the shocks were caused by disturbances in the atmosphere that were reflected down to the earth's surface, but added, "I don't have any idea of what the origin was ..."

"Mr. Tamper Proof"

Packaging Arrives With Little Fanfare

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Tamper-proof packages for medicine sold without prescriptions are becoming a way of life, apparently hardly noticed by the consumers who demanded them after the scare of the cyanide deaths in Chicago last year.

The pharmaceutical industry, moving voluntarily even before the tamper-proof packaging was ordered by federal authorities, is still changing some of the containers in which its across-the-counter products are sold. For the most part, the changes — seals, sweatbands, stickers, etc. — are designed more to leave telltale signs if tampering occurs than they are to make it more difficult to open the packages.

John McConney, site manager for the Burroughs Wellcome plant in Greenville, said his company has fully implemented its program for consumer safety but is continuing to add safety factors to its products.

In some case, McConney said, Burroughs Wellcome has added warning stickers to packages that are still in the process of being changed.

A check with drug stores in Greenville, however, indicates that consumers — if they are noticing the new packages — aren't commenting significantly.

"The biggest concern is who's going to pay for it," pharmacist Larry Paul of Kroger's Sav-On said.

Paul said there has been little if any public response to the packaging, other than about the cost and "the extremes of it."

"Some customers have said that some products, Tylenol for example, have gone to an extreme with a seal on the box, then an inner seal and another seal on the bottle," Paul said.

Bill Brown, a pharmacist at Hollowell's,

Israel Proposes Partial Pullout

By DAVID ZENIAN
United Press International

Israel's chief negotiator at troop withdrawal talks with Lebanon said Saturday Israel would be "ready" for a partial pullout from the occupied nation if Palestinian guerrillas first left the eastern and northern regions.

David Kimche, the Israeli negotiator, said in an interview with Beirut's Central News Agency that once the Palestinians left, Israel would agree to the limited withdrawal with the Syrians.

"If Lebanon wants that, and if the other parties are willing to carry out such a withdrawal, then we are ready for a partial withdrawal," Kimche said. A full withdrawal would only come at the "appropriate time," he said.

U.S. envoy Philip Habib met with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, Foreign Minister Eli Salem and Prime Minister Chefik Wazzan on Lebanon's almost two-month-old talks with Israel to arrange a withdrawal of foreign troops from its soil.

"There are still basic and sensitive differences on these points (security arrangements and future relations) over which the Lebanese side cannot bargain," a government official said after the meeting.

Israel has demanded Israeli-manned security stations in southern Lebanon and a peace treaty with Lebanon as conditions for the withdrawal of its 30,000 troops, which have been in Lebanon since Israel's June 6 invasion.

The talks also would lead to the withdrawal of 40,000 Syrian and 10,000 Palestinian troops in Lebanon.

Habib, who has been meeting with Lebanese officials for three days, on Sunday will meet with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Israel.

"Habib is trying to work out a lowest common denominator which could serve as a possible framework for an agreement," the government official said.

In Tel Aviv, more than 2,000 peace demonstrators cradling thick red candles marched through the streets demanding that former defense minister Ariel Sharon be removed from the government immediately.

Sharon was ousted as defense minister at the recommendation of a special commission, which found Israel indirectly responsible for the massacre of Palestinians in two Beirut refugee camps last September.

But Begin retained Sharon as a minister without portfolio. Peace Now protesters and the opposition Labor Party claim the commission recommended Sharon be ousted from the government altogether.

Author Choked On Cap

NEW YORK (AP) — Playwright Tennessee Williams choked to death on a bottlecap of the type used in nasal spray or eye solution dispensers, New York City's chief medical examiner said Saturday.

Dr. Elliot Gross said an autopsy on the 71-year-old Williams showed the death appeared to be accidental.

He would not elaborate on the bottlecap.

"Why it was there, I can't say," he said.

Williams was found dead Friday morning in his room at the Hotel Elysee in Manhattan.

"There was no indication of foul play" in the death, which occured sometimes late Thursday, Gross said.

The body of Williams, who won Pulitzer Prizes for "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" and "A Streetcar Named Desire," was found Friday by his secretary.

An empty wine bottle and some pills were found in the room, according to police, but Gross refused to comment on whether drugs or alcohol were a factor in the death.

He said chemical tests would be done over the next few weeks.

Gross also would not say whether the bottle cap actually came from either an eye solution or a nasal spray dispenser. He said the cap "lodged in the upper air passage" just below the opening to the larynx, indicating Williams had swallowed it.

Gross said Williams, who has been plagued by a history of health problems, was in acceptable physical condition "for a man of his age."

Gross refused to detail any circumstances surrounding the death. "I can't conjecture on the death," he said.

Final classification of the death would come later, he said.

EPA Offered Danforth Political Advice During Race, Aide Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency told Sen. John Danforth's staff last year that he could benefit politically by announcing a "promising new technique" for destroying the dangerous chemical dioxin on the eve of a tight re-election contest, an aide to the Missouri Republican said Saturday.

Rita M. Lavelle, fired recently as assistant EPA administrator for solid waste, contacted Danforth's staff in late October to tell him the agency was planning to run laboratory tests of the technique on dioxin-contaminated soil at Timberline stables near New Bloomfield, Mo.

The agency is under investigation by Congress for charges it abused its toxic waste cleanup powers for political purposes.

Ms. Lavelle, testifying before a Senate committee last week, minimized any political aspect of her involvement in Missouri hazardous waste cases. She could not be reached for comment on Saturday.

At the time of the contacts between Ms. Lavelle and Danforth's staff, there was mounting public concern over the state's dioxin problems. Danforth was also then locked in a struggle for his political life with Democrat Harriett Woods. Polls showed the race virtually a dead heat, and there was concern among Republicans that the party might lose control of the Senate.

"She called to advise us that the EPA planned to test this technique, and that it might be politically beneficial," Steve Hilton, Danforth's press secretary, said Saturday. He said the agency offered to come to Missouri, where Danforth was campaigning, to hold a news conference to make the announcement.

After first reports of Hilton's account appeared, Hilton called to add that Danforth's staff told the senator of the offer of a Missouri announcement, but did not tell him of Ms. Lavelle's observation that there might be political benefits.

Hilton said Danforth rejected the offer of an EPA news conference in Moussouri and chose instead to put out a "routine news release" on Sunday, and stories appeared in newspapers on Monday, the day before the election.

CIA Scrubbed 1981 Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA considered plans to destabilize the leftist government of the tiny Caribbean island of Grenada but was dissauded from launching them by the Senate Intelligence Committee, The Washington Post said in Sunday editions.

An unidentified committee member was quoted as saying that the description of the 1981 plan should be "economic destabilization affecting the political viability of the government."

Details of the plan could not be learned, the newspaper said.

CIA spokesman Dale Peterson said Saturday night, "We'll stick with our regular response on that one — no comment." There was no answer at the Grenadan Embassy.

Grenada has aroused concern among U.S. officials ever since the prime minister, Maurice Bishop, took power in a coup in 1979 and aligned his government with Cuba.

Cuba has been helping Grenada build a large airport, which U.S. officials on many occasions have pointed to as a possible base for the Cuban Air Force. Grenada has said the project is an attempt to lure more tourists to the 133-square mile island of about 107,000 people.

Covert operations against Grenada were discussed in the Carter administration but Carter ruled out everything but propaganda, the newspaper said.

The Senate committee, according to the newspaper's account, opposed the 1981 Grenada plan in July of that year, six months after President Reagan took office, because of "what were perceived as unusual and unspecified components."

"You've got to be kidding," sources quoted Sen. Dale Bentsen, D-Texas, as saying after the CIA presentation.

A group of expatriate Grenadans was said to have been seeking support in Washington a year ago for action against Bishop's government, according to an unidentified official quoted by the newspaper.

the highway improvement program, based on the hope that the General Assembly will approve the matching funds."

Jones also said, "I feel like there is a good chance the General Assembly will approve the match. We're working on that now trying to come up with some ideas and plans."

"I can't forsee that the General Assembly will go home without matching the federal funds," Sen. Vernon White said. "We can't afford to lose the federal funds.

"I don't hear anyone in the General Assembly that is not in favor of matching the federal money," and "we'll do everything we can to see that matching funds are provided. I'll support whatever is necessary."

White noted that "there's a bill in the hopper right now," that would tax beer, wine and liquor for highway money. "It will be a little while before any action is taken," White said, "and I'd hate to try to predict," what might happen.

White emphasized, "I talked with Bill Roberson (the secretary of transportation) and he assured me ... 264 is on schedule. It will remain on schedule if the state is able to match federal funds."

Several weeks ago Roberson told The Daily Reflector that the U.S. 264 project is on schedule and "the only way it could be sidetracked is if the state doesn't provide matching funds." Such an occurrence, he said, would mean that "everything in the state would be held up, and I don't believe the General Assembly will let the federal money not be used."

Roberson predicted that the first 12 mile segment of the U.S. 264 project — from the N.C. 58 intersection at Wilson eastward — will be let to bid before July.

The first construction in Pitt County, he said, should be in fiscal year 1984.

The new 33.4 miles of U.S. 264, without interchanges, is estimated to cost $76.35 million, and completion of the project between Wilson and Greenville is expected in fiscal 1991.

General Assembly, along with suggested legislation.

The proposed minimum standards code attempts to rectify problems raised by the 1980 U.S. Census, Rep. Cook said. North Carolina ranked seventh in the nation in housing without adequate plumbing, while 5 percent of the state's houses were said to have insufficient kitchen facilities. The national average is 3 percent.

Under the proposed code, dwellings would have to have toilet and bathing facilities in a separate room, a clean water supply and a safe electrical system and be free of rodents and vermin.

Heating facilities must be adequate to warm each room to 68 degrees when the outside temperatures is 20 degrees. Other minimum standards are proposed for stairs, foundations, walls and floors.

All inhabited buildings would be required to comply with the code by 1987.

"We're providing some lead time because in some areas it's going to take time to do," said Rep. Cook. "But eventually we're going to have to insist on compliance because these are the absolute minimum standards. A house that doesn't measure up isn't fit for humans to live in."

The panel also called for:

— A "revolving fund" to help low- and moderate-income people buy homes and another to pay for construction of multifamily rental housing.

— Allowing the Housing Finance Agency to make loans to mortgage lenders.

— Protecting the rights of tenants in units to be converted to condominiums.

— Examining, with an eye toward changing or scrapping, regulations that tend to boost housing costs.

— Legislation to revise tax laws seen as hindering home buying.

— Extending the HFA's jurisdiction to include mobile homes and treating "mobile homes equitably in government programs as a desirable form of housing."

— Using federal block grants to "improve the quality and enlarge the supply of affordably priced housing."

— Support of a proposed federal law permitting a tax deduction of some savings for first-time home buying.

— Repeal of the income tax exemption on the first $200 of interest on savings.

Rep. Cook said the commission's recommendations reflect its members' belief that housing "is, and should remain, a function of the private sector."

Jersey before the bodies were found.

Tyson said robbery appeared to have been part of the reason for the slayings but "there may be some other things, too." He declined to elaborate but said robbery would be considered the motive "until we find something else."

Herring's wife reported him missing Feb. 18. Authorities said he was last seen when he went to visit Thorbs.

Thorbs, the pastor of Gateway to Heaven Interdenominational Church, was reported missing Feb. 19 when he failed to show up to conduct a wedding.

Thorbs' wallet was found near the Pitt-Greenville Airport and his driver's license also has been recovered. Herring's car was found at Thorbs' home in the Lenoir County section of Grifton.

said he has received no public reaction to the changes.

"I have not heard one comment either way," Brown said. "The only thing I've seen was that people were leery of buying capsules, but mostly they are over that now."

The deaths in Chicago were traced to cyanide that had been introduced to Tylenol Extra Strength capsules.

Patricia Worthington, a pharmacist for Eckerd's, said she also had noticed some reluctance to buy capsules after the Chicago deaths but most of that had passed. "I'll be glad when it's all done," she said.

Ms. Worthington said she believed the tamper-proof packages were necessary.

"In another store that I was in, a child stood right there beside its mother and opened a bottle of vitamins and took one. That's a good example of why it's necessary," she said.

Some senior citizens have expressed concern about the safety packaging, but most of their complaints apparently are directed at the child-resistant caps already being used on prescription medicines.

One senior citizen, Mary Aussant of University Towers, discounted complaints about seals on bottles — "you can always use scissors or a knife to get into them" — but was concerned about the caps on prescription medicine. Ms. Aussant said her hands were weakened by arthritis, and "I do have difficulty in opening" such bottles.

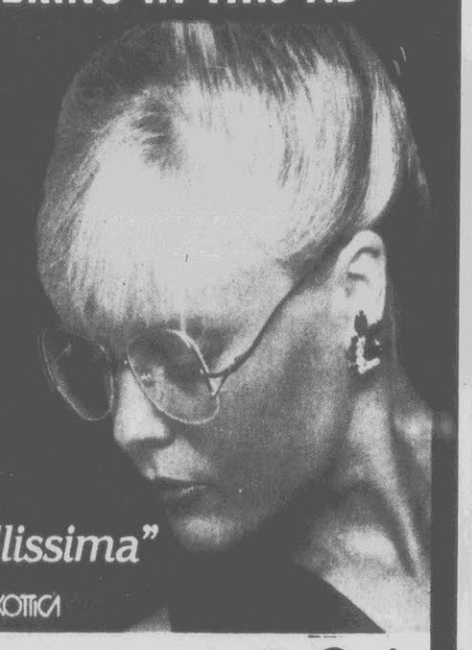

As for the safety packages on across-the-counter medicines, Ms. Aussant said she understood the need for the new measures. "I would think they ought to do anything they could do to keep idiots from tampering ... even if you have to use a blasting cap (to open the bottles)," she said.

Federal requirements for tamper-proof packages on over-the-counter medicines became effective this month, Paul noted. From now on, products shipped to drug stores must be in the new packages.

Stores, however, will be permitted to use up their existing stocks.

U.S. 264 Design Needs To Serve Future Needs

Public officials appear to be hopeful that funding may be found to restore the interchanges in the dual-laned U.S. 264 between Greenville and Wilson.

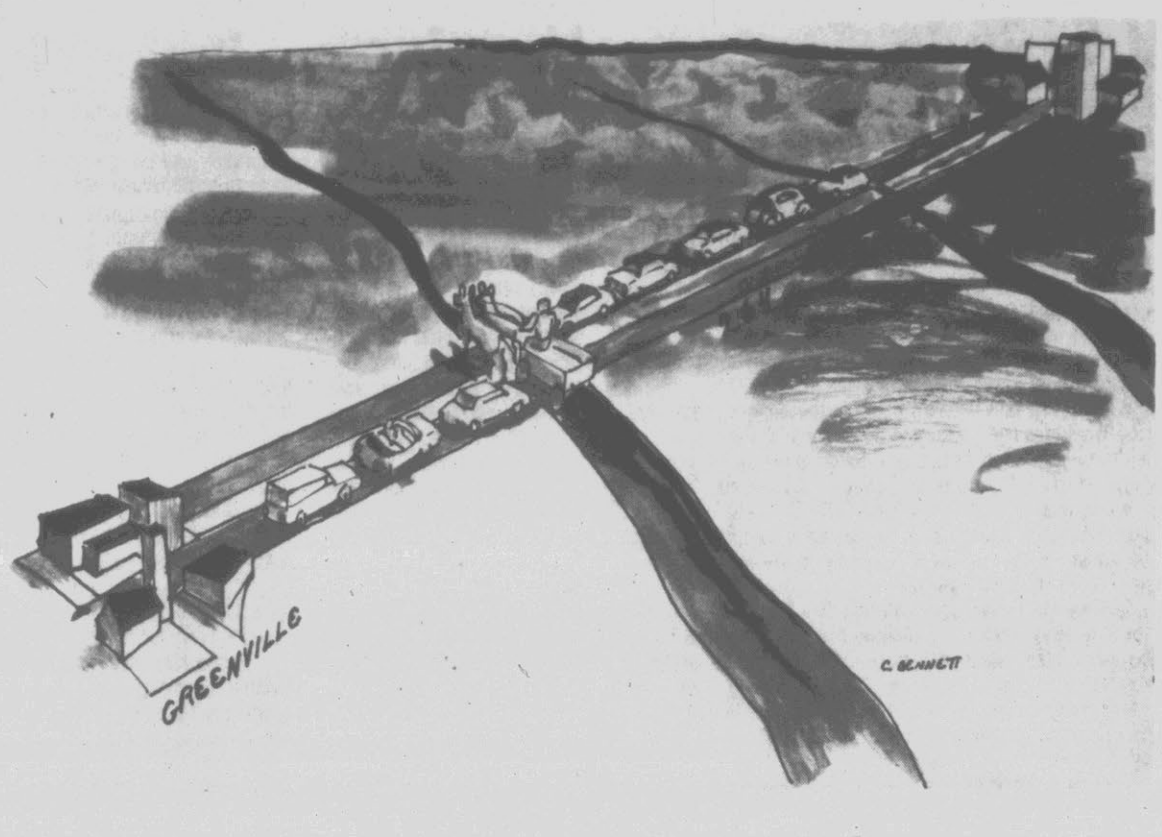

If that develops it will be good news indeed for Greenville, Pitt County and the entire area.

The improvement of U.S. 264 has been a long cherished dream for the central portion of eastern North Carolina. When an interstate-standard U.S. 64 and 264 were constructed eastward toward Wilson, hopes soared that such a highway would be continued to Greenville. Indeed, it seemed that the highway was within sight only a few years ago.

The gas crunch, soaring energy prices and world recession caused a downgrading of the planning for the road. While plans are still active for construction of a dual-lane highway mostly on a new right-of-way, the interchanges which would make the highway a freeway were eliminated. That type of highway, which is nearing the bidding stage, is what will be built at present.

Now, however, additional federal money is becoming available due to the gas tax increase and it can be had for only a relatively modest investment of state funds. It makes sense in every way to construct the Wilson-Greenville segment of U.S. 264 as it was originally envisioned and as it should be — that is, as a controlled access freeway which would adequately serve these two rapidly developing cities and other communities to the east.

Let us develop this highway so that it will fully serve present and future generations.

Paul T. O'Connor Debates

RALEIGH — The political fight that erupted over the proposed closing of Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh earlier this year may have been just the first of many such debates North Carolina will see in coming years.

Because of "mainstreaming" educational programs and deinstitutionalized mental health care, many spaces in special state schools and hospitals are empty. It can't be very long before public officials begin questioning the need to keep all these facilities open.

At a budget seminar sponsored by the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research, Ran Coble, center director, raised the question last week. Can the state afford to keep all its institutions within the Department of Human Resources open when almost all of them have seen their average daily populations drop during the past decade?

With Dix, DHR proposed closing the hospital because modern drugs have made possible the treatment of most mental health patients in local facilities. Those who could not have been treated in local facilities, DHR said, would have been transfered to other state institutions. Gov. Jim Hunt, after hearing an outcry from those who opposed the Dix closing, decided to keep it open but to share the facilities with the Department of Correction.

In his seminar presentation, Coble asked, "Should the state fund four mental hospitals, four mental retardation centers, three schools for the deaf, one school for the blind, five youth training schools, three alcoholic rehabilitation centers, one special care center and two specialty hospitals in light of the declining populations due to mainstreaming and community based programs begun in the 1970s?"

Gene Douglas, state mental health director, answered that question during the Dix debate. He said the state stood a chance to save $6 million this year by closing Dix. In the furture, he saw the opportunity to close other state mental hospitals — we have four altogether — as the institutionalized population drops from the current level of 3,000 to maybe only 500.

According to Coble's figures, other institutions have also seen dramatic decreases in population lately. The state's four mental reatrdation centers had a total population of nearly 5,000 in 1970. In 1982, that count is down to about 3,000. The population of the state's training schools has dropped from 1022 in 1973 to 722 in 1981.

These are not inexpensive places to operate. The four mental hospitals are budgeted to receive almost $91 million in the 1983-84 budget, Coble reports. The mental retardation centers are pencilled in for $35 million. Are there significant savings to be had by closing some of these facilities and making better use of the space availiable in those left open?

Coble sites two roadblocks to those closings. Both were quite apparent in the fight over Dix.

First, if state institutions are closed, more people will be shifted into community programs. County officials can be expected to make a strong case against that added burden on their budgets. In the Dix case, much was made of the degree to which Wake County depends on that hospital. But, in the end, the state put Wake on notice to beef up its own programs.

Second, local legislators will work hard to protect the jobs of people who work in these facilities. In the Dix debate, the Wake County delegation went to bat for 1,300 voting state employees who would have either been transfered or who would have lost their jobs.

North Carolina is approaching the time when the Legislature will have to decide if the state can afford a dual system of community programs and state institutions which are not being operated to their best efficiency.

Alvin Taylor Sunday Morning Notes

It was misery time for two men on a soft drink truck which had pulled into The Daily Reflector to make deliveries for the dispensing machines in the building. The deliveries had been made, the driver cranked up and made a sharp turn, headed toward the exit. There was a horrendous crash from the rear of the truck. One of the side doors had been left open and several empty crates of bottles slid out as the truck made its turn. There was a mountain of broken bottles on the asphalt parking lot and a disgusted driver got out to view it.

He and his helper went in the building and borrowed a broom and dust pan. It required the loading of several boxes of broken glass from the parking lot, but the lot was left as clean as it was before the accident occurred.

And there is an auto in the area with a personalized license plate which leaves no doubt about the owner's collegiate loyalties. "ECU and Me," it reads.

If the electricity has to go off, what better time than 1 a.m?

It was about that time last Wednesday morning that nine insulators exploded on a 115,000-volt line on E. Tenth Street interrupting power to about 20 percent of Greenville Utilities customers.

Your columnist was awake and sorting out papers in preparation for filing income tax when the electricity went off. Thus the power outage was a welcome interruption of a mournful process. We stacked the papers on a nearby table in the dark and went to sleep.

Many people in the area were already asleep and didn't know until morning that there had even been a power failure.

Unfortunately many depend on electric alarm clocks which had lost 40 minutes during the night and therefore did their buzzing 40 minutes late.

News Editor Don Sclienz noted that his wife commented the sun seemed higher in the sky than normal as they went about preparing for his going off to work.

At any rate it was a morning for some extra minutes of sleep, thanks to whatever it is that causes power lines to burn down.

Sadly, the work of preparing for income tax filing still awaits — and April 15 is only a month and a half away. Not even a power failure can totally save us from that inevitable task.

The Opportunity Exists For Pitt To Make Progress

With the resignation of Robert J. Dunn as executive director of the Pitt Development Commission, the board will be searching for a new director.

Dunn has served during the most difficult economic times of several decades. Yet, Pitt County has kept most of its industrial base intact and even managed to add some new industries.

In the years ahead Pitt County should have an unprecedented opportunity to attact new industries that will offer stable employment for our workforce.

Greenville is currently opening a new water plant and plans a new waste water treatment facility. Ayden, Grifton and Winterville have adequate waste water treatment as does Farmville. Good water treatment and supplies are available throughout the county.

Thus the development commission should be looking for the best individual it can find for the position of executive director. We need an indefatigable worker who can sell the many advantages our area offers to industry.

We can avoid the unemployment problems that plague some areas, but it will take a major selling job. Pitt County now has a unique opportunity to progress.

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer Who Remembers The Father Of This Country

WASHINGTON — George Washington doesn't strike modern-day Americans as the most dynamic fellow in their nation's heritage. He's only the most ubiquitous.

The Virginia planter's name has been given to parks, rivers, counties, colleges, towns, bridges, mountains, en entire stand and this city. His likeness has been sculpted, lithographed, frescoed and stamped.

Yet, as each year passes, the country feels less enthusiastic about the man it so conspicuously overcommemorated. Some have suggested that other famous names grace his holiday instead. Unfortunately, it is easy to forget why the nation's adopted father deserves such a tribute.

Time is only one reason. Most of us don't think about America much before say, 1920. Adding to the fog is the work of a remarkable mythmaking machine. An army of hagiographers enshrined Washington's words and deeds in the stilted language of the day and then added embellishment for good measure.

It wasn't long before the legend of General George was giving Biblical characters a run for their money.

But Washington's biggest problem nowadays is that he seems, well, too dull. Popular historians have focused more on his surveying than his Indian stalking. Wrote John Updike, in a poem entitled "February 22," "He fathered our country, we feel, without great joy."

There are also the usual complaints from hero worshipers. His teeth were less than spectacular. He fathered no children and seems hopelessly dispassionate. He had few friends, was never rich and desired only a nice estate.

Yet Washington, in time, developed an uncommon steadiness and ability of calm compatriots. These qualities, inadequately reflected by monuments, made him the right man at the right time.

To begin with, Washington was no fiery radical. His letters, of which he left an astounding 125,000, reveal that his desire for liberty was no less than that of Patrick Henry. Yet, in political debates, he appeared aloof, dignified and reluctant to lead.

As a general, he spent hors corresponding with congressmen, explaing, pleading, but always obeying; as a president, his reticence earned him the label of fairminded among men biteredly divided over the power of a central bank, relations with France and Britain, and the presidency itself. By inhabiting the middleground, Washington created the sensation that the country was on an even keel.

While it may not have reflected reality, Washington's stability soon became the preferred metaphor for a new nation. If nothing else, that fact gives Washington an edge in the never-ending debate over presidential holidays.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak Soviet Tests Violate Spirit Of SALT II

WASHINGTON — The second Soviet test of a new ICBM in four months has dropped a hot potato in the lap of a Reagan administration that has been ducking questions about Soviet violations of SALT II that even hard-liners say are difficult to prove because of treaty loopholes.

Pressure is mounting from administration arms control realists for an attack on Soviet violations of the spirit of SALT II — but more important, on the treaty itself as pathetically inadequate to protect U.S. interests. Some officials want to go further: Use the new Soviet testing as justification for renouncing the treaty which, though unratified by the U.S., both countries have said they will abide by. President Reagan is unlikely to go that far.

Soviet critics were mortified last October when the administration ignored the first new Soviet test. Skillful publicity highlighting that Oct. 26 test might have helped in the fight against nuclear-freeze resolutions on 10 state ballots Nov. 2, but the White House maintained silence. Continued silence now would look like consent.

The new test — triggered from Plesetsk range Feb. 8 — appeared to have been at least a double violation of the treaty. SALT II limits new intercontinental ballistic missiles to only one on each side but the missile fired Feb. 8 was clearly new and different from the missile tested Oct. 26. That indicates the Russians are now in the final testing stages for not one but two new missiles. There is reason to suspect that three additional ones may be on the way.

Moreover, the Feb. 8 firing appears to have been 100 percent encrypted. That means that U.S. monitoring devices, which are supposed to guarantee access to vital testing data, learned nothing.

But proving Soviet violations of the unratified SALT II treaty is no simple matter, given the porous nature of the treaty itself. That explains the advice privately given to William P. Clark, Reagan's national security adviser, from arms control specialists who fear that runaway Soviet testing may doom the U.S. to permanent inferiority. Their advice: Attack the Soviets head-on for blatant violations of the spirit of SALT II; at the same time draw a bead on SALT II itself as a virtual invitation to Russian cheating.

The reason is found in Article IV. This pernicious clause, insisted upon by Moscow, allows the testing of modernized versions of existing missiles. But what the Russians call an updated version of an existing missile may actually be a wholly new weapon. On Feb. 8, the Soviets tested a "light" mobile ICBM with four MIRved warheads; no existing "light" missile is either mobile or MIRVed in the same way.

The missile tested on Oct. 26 is known to be a medium-heavy type with 10 MIRved warheads. Although the U.S. may not be able to prove it, neither new ICBM can be honestly defined as a modernized version of older weapons.

This puts the U.S. into a dangerous bind accurately foreseen by opponents of SALT II during the Ford and Carter administrations. It makes a mockery of demands by Sen. Alan Cranston, former vice president Walter F. Mondale and other arms controllers for Senate ratification. They see SALT II as the salvation of America in the nuclear age.

Precisely the contrary is true. The Soviets are using SALT with their customary skilled eye for the loophole to get as far ahead of the U.S. as technology permits. Two years ago Reagan decided not to seek SALT II ratification. He was only half right; he should have gone further — exposing the treaty as a delusion that would lead not to real arms control but to nuclear proliferation. Precisely such proliferation is exemplified in the Oct. 26 and Feb. 8 Soviet tests.

James J. Kilpatrick Candidate Makes A Splash In Announcing

DENVER — The Candidate stood at the head of a long flight of steps, with 800 happy partisans around him, looking for all the world like a young Abe Lincoln. Behind him the pale February sun glistened on Colorado's gold-leafed capitol dome. On beyond were the mountains. The Candidate's beautiful young wife, properly corsaged for the occasion, stood modestly with their two handsome children.

"Let me introduce a truly great lady," said the Candidate, "who will make a great First Lady." Laughter; applause; a tentative wave to the crowd. Then to business:

"I am a candidate," said Sen. Gary Hart, "for president of the United States in 1984."

So the quadrennial lunacy begins. More than a year before the New Hampshire primary, we have three announced candidates in the field — Alan Cranston of California, Gary Hart of Colorado, Walter Mondale of Minnesota. Before long we will hear a formal announcement from John Glenn of Ohio. Others await the turn of events: Reubin Askew of Florida, Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, perhaps Lloyd Bentsen as a favorite son of Texas. It will not be a record field, but it will be a large field. Manifestly, the Democratic nomination in 1984 is seen as a prize worth winning.

Hart's announcement ceremony could have been produced by 20th Century-Fox, with the players sent from central casting. That is the way things are done these days. The Candidate had set up a press room in the Beethoven Room of a downtown hotel. Like every such room since our lunacies began, it had the air of a suitcase half-packed — a Danish pastry, half-eaten; a Styrofoam cup of coffee, half-consumed.

Hart's announcement speech was wrought of cotton candy, which is all the occasion requires: "Let us move this great nation into the future!" There was perhaps a touch too much of the old antithesis: "The best government money can buy is the worst government we can have ... We can be tender-hearted if we are also tough-minded ..." There were echoes of John F. Kennedy, echoes of Jimmy Carter.

At last it was done, and after a meeting with local editors, at which he declared himself "the candidate of the West," Hart took off on the long trail, first to Jackson, Miss., then to Milwaukee, then to Boston. In coming months he will work Iowa and New Hampshire. His aim is simply to do well in the early contests and to work for an upset victory in one of the half-dozen primaries on "Super Tuesday" in March 1984. He has raised about $250,000, enough to qualify for federal matching funds, but he will need another $2.5 million before the end of 1983 if he is to stay in the game.

Could Hart go all the way to his party's nomination? I would fix the odds at 1,000-to-1. He is as handsome as the young Jack Kennedy, as telegenic as John Lindsay (remember him?), but at 45 he lacks a political base and he is little known in the nation at large. He has no particular credentials in the South, and while he is "right" on issues affecting blacks and women, his foes are just as right as he is. But if he fails in '84, there could be another try in '88, and after that, who knows? Maybe '92.

To the editor:

I learned a few things today. I found out what it's like to be an "innocent victim." I felt what it is to be totally helpless. I realized again how a parent's love is best expressed. I witnessed human compassion, anger, guilt, pain, fear.

These statements come from my heart, as I was involved in a traffic accident which totally destroyed my car and threatened my life and the life of my 11-month-old son. At the speed of 45 MPH, what saved our lives? Very simply, the child's safety seat and the lap-shoulder harness which I was wearing at the time of the crash. Although the automobile turned what seemed like endless somersaults, the baby and I escaped with only minor injuries. I also learned a lot about miracles today.

Parents, drivers, take heed of this message for it is written for each one of you when you leave your carseat in the back seat and let baby stand in front; when you hold her on your lap because "We're only going to the store"; when you buckle up the baby but don't wear your seatbelt; but mostly when you don't even consider the consequences of someone else's poor judgment. Do not allow yourself or passengers in your car to become the innocent victims in a tragedy with a not-so-happy ending.

To the editor:

Pitt County is never likely to see a man like Atticus (in "To Kill A Mockingbird") shoo his children off the back porch into the safety of the house, take aim with his .22 and quickly, calmly and surely dispatch a rabid dog. Why not? Because Pitt County has been rabies-free since 1958, and as long as owners of domestic pets continue to bring their pets to veterinarians or to the annual Rabies Vaccination Clinics, Pitt County should continue to be free.

These clinics are held each spring at sites throughout the county. In the past, the majority of pets brought to the clinics have been dogs. Only a few pet owners have brought their cats to be vaccinated.

But last December the Pitt County Board of Health adopted a regulation requiring all cats, as well as dogs, to be vaccinated.

The ordinance was passed to broaden the barrier of protection between humans and the wild animal population of foxes, skunks, and raccoons, which are more likely to be rabid. An unprotected pet in its wanderings may be bitten by a rabid wild animal and transmit rabies to its human master.

Each cat owner should bring his pet to the clinics in a container or securely held in the arms. After the cat is vaccinated, the owner will receive both tag and certificate. The cat will not be required to wear the tag.

Springtime is a good time to immunize pets we want to keep and bring to the pound animals that are unwanted and roaming about from unwanted litters. Under no circumstances should citizens try to capture any animal suspected of having rabies. Health department personnel will collect these animals. The health department has traps and will assist with the capture of alley and barn cats, and dogs for vaccination or transportation to the pound.

Animal bites should be reported to the health department by persons bitten or medical providers.

Be on the lookout for notices in local newspapers and on radio and TV for rabies vaccination clinic sites near your home.

Pitt Co. Health Director

Helen Thomas — Reagan Steps Up Courtship With Conservatives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has been wooing his wavering conservative constituency, which feels he has strayed from the fold.

In recent days he has given an interview to the conservative weekly Human Events, spoke to the Conservative Political Action Conference Dinner, attended a reception for the conservative magazine National Review and hosted a White House reception for conservative groups.

Still, there is thunder from the right, which takes issue with Reagan's recent compromises with the Democrats and which contends he has not fought hard enough for the issues that are close to their hearts — anti-abortion, anti-school busing, school prayer and tuition tax credits.

In his banquet speech to the conservatives, Reagan said: "Sometimes it's better if a president doesn't say exactly what's on his mind."

He pulled out all the stops in trying to reassure them, making frequent references to "we conservatives" and telling them that "we've devloped a whole new cadre of young conservatives in government."

"We've shown that conservatives can do more than criticize — we've shown that we can govern and move our legislation through the Congress."

Furtnermore, he predicted that conservatives will dominate American politics for decades to come. He said a new consensus has developed and during the '70s "the American people began to see misdirected, overgrown government as the source of many of our social problems — not the solution."

Reagan said that this new consensus was founded on the premise that government is created to "maintain order, to protect our nation's safety," otherwise he appeared to be following his consistent philosophy that it has no other role. Certainly not a role in terms of the social programs that have grown up since the New Deal.

"It's true we haven't brought about every change important to the conscience of a conservative ... but we conservatives can take a great deal of honest pride in what we achieve."

And Reagan told Human Events: "We can't be giving ourselves political saliva tests all the time."

Among the chief conservative critics of the president are Richard Viguerie, publisher of the Conservative Digest, and Howard Phillipps, head of the New Rights Conservative Caucus. Phillips headed the anti-poverty program in the Nixon era with a mandate from on high to dismantle it.

They feel that he has abandoned the principles of conservativism and has moved to the middle of the road.

M. Stanton Evans, one of the conservative leaders, complained to CBS-TV: "Everytime we go to the White House we are treated like old American Indians or handicapped Filipinos."

In many ways, the conservatives have been as tough on Reagan as his so-called "liberal" critics. They have called him to an accounting every few months and he has on several occasions sought to reassure them that he is in their camp although he cannot push some of the issues as fast as they would like.

The president, on the other hand, says that he has brought about "a quiet revolution' and has the liberals on the run.

Furthermore he says, "Now, I'm the first to acknowledge that there is a good deal left unfinished on the conservative agenda. Our cleanup crew will need more than two years to deal with the mess left by others over a half century."

Those remarks were widely interpreted as a hint that Reagan is seriously considering running for a second term.

Joey Ledford — Subsidies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Foreign agricultural subsidies are wrecking the overseas market for Southern farm goods, and there's a growing feeling on Capitol Hill it is time to retaliate.

Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is leading the fight, and has enlisted several Southern colleagues to help the United States regain what they consider its rightful place as farm trade leader.

"Finally, everybody seems to be singing from the same hymnbook," said Helms.

"In free trade there has to be partners," observed Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., a member of Helms' committee. "I think we're in a trade war. I think the time has come for the United States to stop retreating."

The Southern farm products hurt the most by foreign competition and unfair import duties are poultry and eggs, grains, cotton, citrus and tobacco.

In Helms' committee, and in its House counterpart, lawmakers have come up with a variety of proposals to turn the tide on decreasing farm exports.

Federal crop surpluses play an important role in several of the plans. Helms introduced a bill which would require the annual overseas sale of 150,000 tons of surplus U.S. dairy products at low, subsidized prices.

A related idea is to turn surpluses over, at no cost, to food processors who would sell their subsidized goods overseas.

Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., has introduced a bill which would give surplus federal corn at no cost to poultry producers so they could raise cheaper boilers for sale overseas.

"I believe poultry and egg exports are the next targets of the foreign competition," said Mattingly. "The most important priority is to enact means to ensure our fair share of the market. It has been taken away by unfair trading practices."

Lee Campbell, president of the Virginia-based Poultry and Egg Institute of America, said the export losses are a major factor in the industry's serious financial problems.

"Exports of U.S. broilers fell 71 percent in 1982, and shell egg volume dropped 30 percent," he said. "Virtually every other commodity we sell abroad showed losses in volume."

Brazil and some European nations are subsidizing their poultry and egg industry and taking huge chunks of the American market.

The solution, say members of Congress and industry leaders, is an export "payment-in-kind" program. Using surplus grains, domestic poultry and egg producers could compete overseas.

"It is time to fight fire with fire and send a clear signal to the European Economic Community that the artificial means of reducing the price of their products in world markets is illegal and will be opposed," said Albert Pope of Decatur, Ga., president of United Egg Producers.

Southern farm producers are also battling excessive foreign duties on American goods.

"We have difficulty understanding why Japanese duties on U.S. citrus range from 20 to 40 percent of its value," said Robert Delano, a Virginia farmer who is president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

"Japanese quotas allow only 4½ million cartons of fresh oranges to sell each year — yet we know there is demand for far greater amounts," said Delano.

"Because supplies are kept low while demand remains high, Japanese profit margins are excessive, with 250 perent profit on a carton not uncommon" he said.

American tobacco faces similar obstacles in Japan.

"We are having a great deal of difficulty with the Japanese just to get our cigarettes sold," said Helms. Duties esculate the price Japanese consumers must pay to get American tobacco, and few retailers are licensed to sell the imported goods.

Delano said the message has delivered to the Japanese that their attitudes must change.

"We have told the Japanese in our visits there that everyone is hurt by such things as a duty that doubles the price of corn or triples the price of an orange or a pound of beef or pushes the price of American cigarettes 50 percent higher than domestic brands," he said.

Walter Mears — It Usually Pays To Start Early

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any guidebook to Democratic presidential politics for 1984 would have to begin with one simple rule: it pays to start early, very early. And no matter how early that is, some other candidate almost certainly will have been there sooner.

That's why there are four declared candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination right now, staffed, hunting money and organizing the primary states a full year in advance of the first competition for delegates. The list soon will go to five, then, in all probability, to seven or more.

Candidates have come sooner to past campaigns, but singly. The two prime examples were Sen. George McGovern in 1972, and former President Jimmy Carter in 1976. Both were longshots, both won the nomination, and the architects of campaigns since then have looked to profit by those examples.

Hence the cavalry charge of Democrats for 1984, an early start that comes despite — and, ironically, in some cases because of — the efforts of reformers to compress the campaign calendar.

This campaign is more than a marathon, prompting Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona to observe that if he'd decided to start running for the 1984 nomination early in the winter of 1983, he would have been a day late and a dollar short.

The Democrats who are running, and have said so, are, in alphabetical order, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, California Sen. Aln Cranston, Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, and former Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio will join them in a month or so. Sens. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas may, too.

The early entries have had their agents at work in Iowa for as long as six months, preparing for a delegate contest that won't happen until a year from Sunday. Most every New Hampshire Democrat with know-how, or a mailing list, or access to either, already has signed up with one candidate or another. That first presidential primary of the season is scheduled on March 6, 1984.

Organized labor broke its tradition and decided to endorse a candidate for the Democratic nomination before the primaries. The AFL-CIO always had waited out the primary campaign and backed the winner. The strategy this time was to endorse a candidate no later than December 1983, in order to concentrate and accentuate the campaign clout of the labor federation. In other words, start early.

But the candidates started earlier. They're trying to get labor support well in advance of the campaign, to help them get organized and raise money this year, not next. AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland wants to keep labor neutral in the campaign buildup, so that the organization can unite behind a single candidate in the primaries.

He has asked state and regional AFL-CIO organizations to avoid involvement at this stage. That's going to be hard to manage.

Two reform rules, both Democratic, have contributed to the rush.

One is the change in the primary election system to require proportional representation in the distribution of delegates. It took partial effect in the last campaign, and is fully in force for the next one. What that means is that losing primary candidates won't be wasting their campaign money in states they otherwise might write off; a respectable showing will win at least a few delegates. That makes it more attractive, and sensible, for a candidate to run everywhere, instead of picking the most promising targets for primary campaigning. And it takes longer to organize a campaign across the board than one that is targeted to specific contests.

The other, ironically, was the Democrats' effort to compress the campaign by grouping the primaries in four months, beginning in March 1984. The result was to push the primaries and caucuses closer together, which means that the candidates will have little time next year to run in one state and prepare for the next, capitalizing on victory or regrouping in defeat. Nearly one-third of the delegates will be selected in a period of less than one month, right at the start of the competition.

Then, as always, there's the problem of money. The candidates say they have to start early in order to get the kind of money it takes to run a presidential campaign.

George Gallup — Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Vice President George Bush and Senate Majority leader Howard Baker are the early top choices of Republicans to be their party's 1984 presidential nominee if President Reagan chooses not to run.

In the latest Gallup survey, Buch received 23 percent of Republicans' first-place votes for the GOP nomination to 20 percent for Baker — a stand-off, considering the margin of error for survey samples of this size.

Sen. Baker announced last month that he would not seek reelection to the Senate seat he has held since 1967, and that he would be a candidate for the 1984 GOP presidential nomination if President Reagan decides not to run. Judging from the latest finding, Baker has given a boost to his candidacy; in a Gallup survey last August, he received only half as many Republican first-place votes as Bush, 15 percent to 32 percent.

Next most often mentioned by Republicans in the current survey are Sen. Bob Dole (6 percent), Rep. Jack Kemp (4 percent), Sen. Charles Percy (4 percent), 1982 Independent presidential candidate John Anderson (3 percent), and former Texas governor John Connally (3 percent). None of the others on a list of 17 possible contenders received more than 1 percent of Republicans' votes.

The choices of political Independents, who may participate in the party primaries in some states, generally parallel the selections of Republican voters, with one important exception: John Anderson, whose name was not included in the earlier survey, is in a three-way tie for the GOP nomination, based on the choices of Independent voters.

Possible GOP Nominees
(First choices of Republicans, Independents)

| | Republicans | Independents |
|---|---|---|
| George Bush | 23% | 15% |
| Howard Baker | 20 | 14 |
| Bob Dole | 6 | 3 |
| Jack Kemp | 4 | 3 |
| Charles Percy | 4 | 2 |
| Jo Anderson | 3 | 14 |
| John Connally | 3 | 4 |

When the list is expanded bY adding first and second choices, Bush becomes the clear choice of Republicans, followed by Baker. However, the selections of Independents are narrowly divided among Bush, Baker, and Anderson.

Republican strategists are pressing President Reagan for fear that a power struggle within the party might ensue if President Reagan puts off his decision too long.

Among the public, the feeling has steadily grown that Reagan will run again in 1984. In a December survey, 74 percent of voters said they thought Reagan would try for another four years in the White House, up from 67 percent who expressed that view in an August survey and 59 percent, last March. However, only 37 percent in the December survey said they would like to see Reagan run again.

As reported last month, former Vice President Walter Mondale enjoys a 2-to-1 advantage over Sen. John Glenn among Democratic voters to be their party's 1984 nominee.

Noel Yancey — Millionaire Got His Start At UNC

As a student at the University of North Carolina before the turn of the century, William Rand Kenan Jr. made an important discovery — a commercial application of the chemical carbide. "More or less by accident," Kenan discovered a way to produce acetylene gas from carbide waste matter.

Kenan went on to supervise the building of the first major carbide plant in the world at Niagara Falls, N.Y. Later he built similar plants elsewhere in the United States, in Europe and Australia. Before he was 26, Kenan had traveled around the world in connection with the development of the carbide and acetylene industries.

He was a founder of the giant Union Carbide Co., one of the world's largest chemical manufacturers, and went on to build a family fortune estimated at $300 million.

In 1900, Kenan became associated with Henry M. Flagler, a millionaire oilman who built the Florida East Coast Railway and a string of hotels in the Sunshine State. While he was building the Breakers Hotel at Palm Beach, Flagler consulted Kenan about a power plant.In 1903, he appointed the Wilmington native construction and consulting engineer for the Florida East Coast Hotel Co. In the meanwhile, Flagler had married Mary Lily Kenan, one of Kenan's sisters.

Kenan built Miami's first electric plant in 1904 and this grew into the giant Florida Power & Light Co. He also directed the construction of other electric plants, gas and water systems for Flagler, whose fortune grew from his partnership with John D. Rockefeller. When Flagler died in 1913, Kenan became trustee of his vast estate and subsequently president of the Florida East Coast Railway.

While a student at UNC, Kenan had captained both the football and baseball teams and had held other high campus offices. During the years that followed he did not lose interest in his alma mater. This was demonstrated in 1926 when UNC embarked on a drive to raise $365,000 for a new stadium. The plan fell through when the campaign resulted in raising less than $175,000 in cash and pledges, but Kenan stepped into the breach. He put up $275,000 for the stadium and $28,000 for a field house.

The result is Kenan Stadium, built as a memorial to Kenan's parents, William R. Kenan and Mary Hargrove Kenan. Set in a hollow in a forest of pine and other trees, it is generally acclaimed one of the most beautiful stadiums in the country. It was planned not only as a football field but as an open amphitheater for commencement exercises and other outdoor programs. Construction began in 1926, and was completed in time for dedication at the Carolina-Virginia football game in November, 1927, which the Tar Heels won.

When he died in 1965, Kenan remembered UNC again. He willed it his 700-acre Randleigh dairy farm at Lockport, N.Y., where he lived, plus $2 million. It was one of the largest bequests from his estate which was valued at $100 million. He wrote in his will that "a good education is the most cherished gift an individual can receive."

Gene Wang — Legal Funds Are Running Short

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Sometime next month, the state program providing criminal lawyers for the poor will be as broke as those it serves unless the General Assembly finds $3.1 million in emergency funds.

Franklin Freeman, the state courts administrator, said his office is monitoring the program on a daily basis and estimates it will run out of money by mid-March — 3½ months before the end of the fiscal year.

Those estimates have held firm since last fall, said Freeman, who is asking Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. to seek additional funds from the General Assembly.

"We just have to send over and request an emergency appropriation," said John A. Williams, the state budget officer and an aide to Hunt.

News of a $3.1 emergency request for the current budget year is less than welcome at a time when the Legislature is struggling to balance the next state budget in the face of a potential revenue shortfall of $92 million.

"We'll look at it," said Senate Appropriations Chairman, Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, the House Appropriations chairman, was philosophical about the problem.

"There's not a lot of options" because of constitutional requirements that states provide lawyers for criminal defendants who cannot afford them.

"Where the money's coming from, I don't know, but we'll just have to cut something else," Watkins said.

Freeman said the funding problem is not new. The program's expenses have exceeded budget allocations for the past seven or eight years.

In previous years, the Administrative Office of the Courts was able to make up the shortfalls by transferring unused funds to the program. Most of the money came from vacancies in the 3,500 judicial system jobs.

But turnover this year has been half the normal rate and there is no money to supplement the indigent fund.

"With the economy like it is, nobody's leaving their nice warm nest," said Williams.

Freeman said the program's budget is $6.4 million for the current fiscal year that ends June 30, but in the previous fiscal year, the state spent $8.2 million on legal representation for the poor.

The 1983-85 budget proposed by the governor seeks $8.2 million for each of the next two years. Freeman requested $9.3 million and $13.4 million.

Although this is the first year the court system has had to ask the Legislature to bail the program out, it has been historically underfunded, said Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg.

"It's always been a place the Legislature can find to cut a few dollars out of the budget," he said.

"There is a perception in this General Assembly the beneficiaries of that money are criminals and lawyers, and they're going to have to struggle with what the Legislature gives them," said Helms, a lawyer who also serves as chairman of the state Courts Commission.

"Who the h—wants to help the criminals and the lawyers?"

In addition to the feeling indigent defendants don't deserve legal help at state expense, Helms said the program has been hurt by a decline in public confidence in the courts.

Helms, who informed the governor about the need for emergency funds during a meeting last week, said Hunt was "disturbed" at the prospect of having to find $3.1 million.

UAR Says Will Beat All Oil Prices

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The United Arab Emirates warned oil producers around the world Saturday that the Persian Gulf Arab states "will not be beaten in any price war."

"The gulf states have the capability to succeed in a price war, as they possess financial reserves and idle (production) capacities, not to mention the fact that the cost of production in the region is much lower than in other countries," said Oil Minister Mana Saeed Oteiba.

"I think the insinuation is very clear to countries within and outside OPEC," Oteiba said in a speech.

He called on non-OPEC producers to reach an agreement with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on "pricing and production levels" to offset the glutted market situation.

"Everybody must respect these levels," the minister said.

Oteiba also said the demand for OPEC oil, which was 32 million barrels daily in 1979, has declined to 13.4 million barrels daily this month. He complained that OPEC was becoming "the last and marginal producer" compared with non-OPEC producers who he said "enjoy more flexibility."

He spoke after Britain declared Friday that it would cut its price again if OPEC slashes the cartel's $34 benchmark below $30 a barrel. Britain and Norway cut the price of North Sea crude by $3, to $30.50 a barrel, on Feb. 18.

Nigeria, whose oil minister is the current OPEC president, cut its price $5.50, to $30 a barrel, on Feb. 20 and sparked fears of an all-out price war.

Saudi Arabia, its Persian Gulf oil allies and Indonesia agreed last Wednesday to cut the benchmark price to at least $30 a barrel. They launched a round of meetings aimed at getting other OPEC members to go along in advance of a planned emergency meeting of the cartel this week in Geneva or Vienna.

The oil ministers of Venezuela, Mexico, Kuwait and Algiers met in Paris.

Costa Rica Ready For Pope

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Pope John Paul II will be welcomed here Wednesday by ringing bells and streets plastered with color pictures of himself, while up to 1 million people are expected to stream into the city for an open-air Mass.

Roman Catholics are expected to jam the streets and Masses everywhere the pontiff goes on his tour of seven Central American nations and Haiti, and his opening stop in Costa Rica will be no exception.

Officials in Costa Rica say "Catholic fervor" may draw as much as 40 percent of the country's population into the capital of San Jose for Thursday's Mass.

Costa Rica, located between Nicaragua to the north and Panama to the south, has a population of about 2.3 million.

"We expect from 750,000 to 1 million people in the Sabana on the third," said Dr. Luis Bonilla, deputy health minister.

Monsignor Roman Arrieta, archbishop of San Jose, has asked all the Roman Catholic churches in the country to ring their bells when the papal jet lands Wednesday afternoon.

"The most people we have ever had in one place in Costa Rica was maybe 100,000 for a political rally and that was considered extraordinary," said Carlos Vargas, spokesman for a press-church committee handling the pope's visit.

Queen Opens Tour Of California

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, began their first tour of California on Saturday with a festive welcome at San Diego, where thousands braved crisp winds and occasional rain for a commoner's glimpse at royalty.

The royal couple planned visits to typical tourist sights in one of America's most popular resort cities on the first of their 10-day visit to California. Forecasters called for scattered showers under dark gray skies in the usually sunny border city.

While the 56-year-old monarch lunched on board the 5,000-member aircraft carrier USS Ranger, a group of about 75 Irish-American protesters gathered for a quiet rally at nearby New Town Park.

The demonstrators, some wearing Kelly-green rain slickers, carried signs reading "England Out of Ireland" and "Human Rights for Ireland," and heard speeches by former New York state Assemblyman Sean Patrick Walsh.

"I resent President Reagan and his ilk paying homage to the queen and her kind," said Walsh, a lawyer and political science professor at Pace University in New York City. "This is a republic and we threw out the crown and all that it represented 200 years ago."

Another speaker, John McDonnell, a member of the local chapter of the Irish Rights Committee, said, "We feel it is inappropriate for the queen to visit at a time when our economy is bad as well as theirs. This is no time to spend money on something like this."

Two San Diego police officers watched the group from their patrol car, but the rally broke up without incident.

Later Saturday, Prince Philip planned a visit to the San Diego Zoo and inspection of the site for the 1984 Olympic equestrian events near San Diego. The queen was to tour the Old Globe Theater, a replica of the London playhouse where William Shakespeare staged his works.

When the royal couple arrived at midmorning Saturday, a U.S. Navy band struck up "God Save the Queen" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" and a 21-gun salute resounded over the wide harbor where fireboats sprayed streams of water into the air and pleasure craft sounded their horns.

As the Britannia's approached the pier, a 90-foot motorized yacht suddenly veered off and lurched to within 75 yards of the royal craft.

It was intercepted and nearly rammed by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Judith. The Coast Guard, which threatened to arrest anyone who came within 300 yards of the royal yacht, warned the vessel away without further incident.

Another of the small private escort boats, many flying the Union Jack, hoisted a yellow sign that read "Welcome to the Colonies," and a sailboat operated by an anti-nuclear group bore a sail reading "God Save The Queen From Nuclear Death."

Waves of cheers rang out as the queen, dressed in a white hat and dark blue and white dress, waved to an estimated 2,000 enthusiastic spectators who jammed the Broadway Pier beginning as early as 6 a.m. for a chance to greet her.

U.S.-Canadian Relations Ruffled

WASHINGTON (AP) — New disputes over free speech and cheap airline fares are ruffling an interlude of calm between the United States and Canada, but are unlikely to disrupt their traditionally close relations.

Canada, expressing "surprise and concern," has asked the United States to reverse the Justice Department's labeling of three Canadian documentary movies as "propaganda films."

The Canadian government also sought to salvage the vacations of thousands of economy-minded Canadian tourists who bought inexpensive air tickets to the United States only to be stymied by the opposition of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Canadian officials said they do not view either U.S. action as an attempt to embarrass, harass or penalize their country.

But the new irritants arose at a time when the two countries along the world's longest unarmed border have failed to agree on a common approach to another, long-simmering controversy: how to deal with acid rain pollution which many Canadians blame on U.S. industries.

Frictions are likely to intensify soon over U.S. complaints about Canadian lumber and natural gas prices, as well as attempts by Canadian anti-war militants to halt the testing of U.S. cruise missiles on Canadian soil.

Nonetheless, U.S. and Canadian leaders stress the positive aspects of the relationship. Foremost is that each country is the other's biggest trading partner.

"While we have our problems from time to time, it's a terribly important relationship and a particularly strong relationship," said Alan Romberg, a State Department spokesman.

"I think the state of U.S.-Canadian relations is good," said Canadian ambassador Allan Gotlieb, after he delivered a protest note to U.S. officials on the air fare situation.

Gotleib said Canadians are concerned about lumber exports and acid rain.

"You can't share a continent and not have problems," he said. "But the relationship is good."

The dispute over three documentaries produced by the National Film Board of Canada began when the Justice Department ruled that the movies may not be shown in the United States without carrying a disclaimer that the U.S. government does not approve of them.

The department also requires that it be furnished a list of the U.S. groups that have asked to see the films. One is an anti-war documentary nominated for an Academy Award. The other two deal with the environmental hazards of acid rain.

The decision sparked an immediate "free speech" furor in both countries.

"The United States is a democracy and ... we don't understand how films of that sort, which are, after all, produced in an equally democratic country, can be viewed as political propaganda," Gotleib said.

Los Angeles Shutting Down Police Spies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The elite intelligence unit of the Los Angeles Police Department, whose whose roots go back to the 1920s, will be dissolved at the end of the week amid accusations its officers spied on citizens, public figures and their civilian bosses.

The Police Commission, a civilian group that hires and fires police chiefs and sets department policy, ordered Chief Daryl Gates to dismantle the unit by Friday in a controversy that one newspaper columnist has dubbed "Darylgate."

"For this controversy to have reached this stage ... is purely dumb. I mean it's dumb," said Gates, who told the commission last month, "There isn't any way that we cannot on occasion trample on some people's privacy and freedom."

But Superior Court Judge Jerry Pacht, the subject of an intelligence dossier, said the unit must be disbanded because "if nothing is done, we are countenancing police-state tactics."

Five years ago political activist groups filed the first lawsuits alleging abuses by the Public Disorder Intelligence Division, which has been treated favorably on such television shows as "Dragnet" and "Adam-12."

The controversy lay dormant until late 1982, when there were new allegations that intelligence officers had compiled files on a judge, Mayor Tom Bradley, police commissioners and other officials and that the unit was keeping more than 90 boxes of files, possibly including some ordered destroyed by the commission in 1975.

The unit, which has 50 officers and an annual budget of about $2.5 million, also is being investigated by the district attorney's office, a grand jury and the police Internal Affairs Division.

Trial should start in October for six lawsuits — now consolidated into one — brought by 108 individuals and 23 political activist groups against the city, many police officers, the Police Commission, Gates and former Chief Ed Davis, said Linda Valentino, a plaintiff and spokeswoman for the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California.

The suit contends that for a decade intelligence officers improperly spied on their meetings, infiltrated their organizations and even engaged in "intimate personal relationships" with their members.

Created in 1970, the Public Disorder Intelligence Unit was a descendant of the old Red Squad of the 1920s. In 1975, the commission ordered the unit to destroy some 2 million outdated file cards on 55,000 individuals.

Gates said he was unaware that boxes of files — possibly some of those ordered destroyed — had been removed to a variety of locations, including one detective's garage. While he approved the targets of intelligence operations, Gates denied there was any improper spying.

City Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky, the subject of an intelligence file, said, "The issue is that the government should never be in the business of monitoring the lives of law-abiding citizens."

"I have never said we have always done everything exactly correct," Gates said in an interview last week, adding that any mistakes were "minor." But he reluctantly agreed to the commission's decision on Jan. 18 to disband the unit.

City Attorney Ira Reiner, who will be defending the city and police in the consolidated lawsuit, has criticized "zealot" intelligence officers who were "willing to abuse every single moral or ethical precept" in their work. Gates wants Reiner replaced on the case by a private lawyer, but the City Council has twice voted to keep him.

Council and Police Commission members, while saying Gates bears ultimate responsibility for the conduct of his officers, are awaiting the outcome of the pending investigations before determining if the chief was involved personally in any of the alleged misdeeds.

Gates says he did not authorize the keeping of the files and was not aware that dossiers — which he calls "folders" filled with "junk" like news clippings — were compiled on public officials.

Pacht, the judge whose dossier was compiled while he was hearing a case involving the unit, disagrees. "If you don't think that high-ranking personnel in the police department knew about the keeping of dossiers on non-suspect citizens, then you believe in the tooth fairy," he says.

In The World

Soviets Appeal To German Voters

MOSCOW — The Kremlin on Saturday issued a new appeal for West German voters to turn their March 6 election into a referendum on stationing new American nuclear missiles in German territory.

Pravda's new commentary virtually endorsed West Germany's opposition Social Democrats, who have questioned the need for the new U.S. missiles scheduled for deployment starting in December. It praised the left-wing party's "definite political realism" on the issue.

Italy also was criticized by the Soviet Union for its "aggressive" support of the planned deployment of new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

Section Of Great Wall Found

PEKING — China Saturday announced the discovery of a 2,700-year-old section of the Great Wall which it said added 62 more miles to the structure's known 3,600-mile length, forcing revision of ancient maps and text books.

The official Xinhua new agency said archeologists found the wall in the southern part of Shaanxi province, in northern China, during more than two years of excavations.

"The 62-mile section, made of stone and still with some discernable openings where city gates had been, was built during the Chu state in the seventh century B.C.," Xinhua said.

The discovery, during China's most comprehensive survey since the 1949 communist revolution, apparently will force changes in maps and textbooks which have the wall snaking 3,600 miles across the country.

A treasure trove of more than 3,400 relics and monuments were found during the survey, including ancient tombs, castles and stone sculptures.

Habib Ends Talks In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. troubleshooter Philip C. Habib ended four days of talks with Lebanese leaders Saturday and headed to Israel to press his efforts to expedite withdrawal of foreign armies from Lebanon.

Government spokesmen declined to discuss the outcome of Habib's talks. But one spokesman, who requested anonymity, said the U.S. special envoy was now aware of how far Lebanon will go for a troop withdrawal agreement with Israel.

Habib and his chief aide Morris Draper will brief Israeli leaders in Jerusalem on the discussions with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, Foreign Minister Elie Salem and government negotiator Antoine Fattal.

Pothole Costs City $600,000

PHILADELPHIA — A pothole has cost the city $600,000.

The amount was awarded to Betty Rogers, 28, a clerk for the Colonial Penn Insurance Co., by a Common Pleas jury.

Ms. Rogers broke her ankle May 17, 1978, when she stepped into a 3-inch-deep pothole. She sued the city for failing to repair the hole. Her attorney, Gary Green, said the ankle never healed properly and Ms. Rogers could no longer work.

The jury found the city negligent. Gabriel Bevilacqua, in charge of litigation in the city solicitor's office, called the award "outrageous" and said the verdict would be appealed.

Biblical Discovery Claimed

WASHINGTON — The Foundation Stone of the Temple of Jerusalem, on which rested the ancient Ark of the Covenant containing the tablets of the 10 Commandments, still stands on Jerusalem's Temple Mount, an Israeli scholar said Saturday.

The discovery was reported by Dr. Asher Kaufman, a professor of physics at Hebrew University who for 15 years has studied the archeological problem of the temple site, one of the holiest places in ancient Judaism.

Kaufman outlines the evidence for his theory in the forthcoming March-April issue of the Biblical Archaeology Review.

If Kaufman is correct, it means that not only will scholars have to re-examine theories involving the ancient Jewish temple, but also that one of the most significant part of the temple still exists.

El Salvador Runs Out Of Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — El Salvador's Army is about to run out of ammunition and the Reagan administration plans to seek an additional $60 million in military aid for it this year, U.S. officials say.

Two officials who spoke on condition that their names not be used said the administration still had not decided how to get the money in the face of a Congress increasingly skeptical about the U.S. committment to El Salvador.

Congress approved about $26 million in military aid for El Salvador in the current fiscal year, about $40 million less than the administration requested. Last year, the total was about $81 million, including $55 million from the emergency fund sent after guerrillas destroyed the bulk fo the country's tiny air force in February 1982.

Massacre Reported In Zimbabwe

HARARE, Zimbabwe — A highly placed official said Saturday a government investigation shows more than 2,000 civilians were massacred by North Korean-trained government troops in southwestern Zimbabwe.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the slayings occurred during the campaign the government's 5th Brigade began last month against dissidents in Zimbabwe's Matabeleland province.

He said a government investigation of the operation showed more than 2,000, and possibly up to 3,000, were killed.

Reagan Plans Phased Decontrol Of Natural Gas

"By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday he will ask Congress to remove all controls from the natural gas market over the next three years 'to ensure abundant supplies ... at reasonable prices."

At the same time, the Reagan plan would place a cap on consumer prices through Jan. 1, 1986, allowing increases based only on inflation, unless a government agency approves higher fees. On the first day of 1986, all price controls would be removed.

Long-term high price contracts between pipelines and suppliers, which many analysts blame for recent price increases, could be broken at will after Jan. 1, 1985.

"The key to cheaper, more abundant energy for all Americans is a policy that combines consumer protection, incentives to produce, and efficient economic use of our resources," the president said in his weekly radio address to the nation, broadcast from the Oval Office. "That's what our program will do."

The president said the Energy Department estimates that the plan will reduce prices 10 cents to 30 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of natural gas in the first year.

Larry Speakes, the chief deputy White House press secretary, said Reagan would send the proposal to Congress on Monday, and that Energy Secretary Donald Hodel has reported, on the basis of preliminary consultations, that congressional reaction "has been far better than expected."

"There seems to be a consensus that something has to be done," Speakes said, in reference to complaints about rapid increases in natural gas prices that have driven bills up 20 percent to 40 percent in some areas this winter.

However, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, an opponent of decontrolling natural gas prices, said he believed Reagan's proposal would be defeated in the Senate. He called the Reagan plan was "absolutely off-base" and said he thought there were 10 to 20 senators who would join him in a filibuster against it.

He said a lengthy filibuster he led on gas legislation in 1977 "will be like a Sunday school picnic" compared to the one he expects now.

Metzenbaum also said the move would raise costs to homeowners and increase unemployment by hurting small business.

"The gas industry itself has estimated that decontrol will cost $60 billion a year," he said.

And Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., giving the Democratic Party response to Reagan's address, said the president's proposal would increase natural gas prices by 67 percent over the next four years.

Supporting the president, Sen. James. McClure, R-Id., chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, said the proposed protections for the consumer would be "better than the current law."

When current legislation was passed, McClure said, "We faced a radically different energy market. Certainly nobody can be faulted for failing to foresee today's surpluses."

McClure said his committee would begin hearing's on the president's bill on March 9.

Ed Rothschild, head of the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, an advocacy group, said a Wall Street study estimated that price decontrol would raise prices by $1 to $1.50 per thousand cubic feet. He said the average home using natural gas burns 140,000 cubic feet per year, so if the estimated price increase is realized, the average yearly bill would rise by $140 to $210.

Reagan's plan was backed by the Natural Gas Supply Association, an industry group, and the Natural Gas Consumers Information Center, an organization representing industrial users of natural gas.

Under Reagan's proposal, gas companies and their suppliers could renegotiate their contracts. Beginning Jan. 1, 1985, any party to a contract could break the pact at will, to seek a better price arrangement elswhere.

But, to protect consumers from prices regulated only, in effect, by competition in the marketplace, Reagan would order a cap on price increases charged to consumers. The companies could no longer pass along to consumers higher prices charged by producers.

Veterans Finding Medical Care Short

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

MOUNTAIN HOME, Tenn. (AP) — The old veteran came heavily and slowly off the examining table. He was following orders again.

He set aside his cane, stood as erect as he could and tried to raise his right arm. Grimacing, he got it up to his shoulder before his knees buckled from the pain. The young doctor caught him and helped him back onto the table in the cramped examining room at the Veterans Administration hospital here.

"Bursitis," Hugh Smith, 72, said. "Got it real bad, doc."

Khan wanted to order X-rays and other tests and give Smith medicine for the pain. But new guidelines from VA hospital officials told him he should send Smith away.

Hugh Smith represents a problem for the U.S. government.

Under a 1970 law passed by Congress, all veterans except those with dishonorable discharges become "100 percent disabled" upon reaching age 65. As such, they are eligible for complete and free medical care at any of the Veterans Administration's 172 hospitals.

It doesn't matter how much money a veteran has, or whether insurance would cover his care elsewhere. It doesn't matter if he spent the war in a foxhole or behind a desk. It doesn't matter whether he was in the service for three months or three years. And the law doesn't distinguish between treatment for corns or coronaries, bunions or bypasses.

Today, 3.3 million veterans are eligible for complete care at VA hospitals, although only about 25 percent of them actually seek such care each year.

But with the median age of the nation's 12 million World War II veterans now at 62, the number of over-65 veterans will reach to 7.7 million by 1990.

Will every veteran who seeks free medical help actually get it? Are the VA hospitals ready?

"The answer is no," said Dr. Donald Custis, the VA's chief medical director in Washington.

In truth, many VA hospitals cannot meet the demand now.

According to the latest records at the VA headquarters in Washington, there were 4,666 patients on waiting lists to be admitted to VA hospitals and nursing homes last October.

Custis and other VA officials say that if the demand for medical care by elderly veterans doubles or triples, Congress will have to either spend billions more to keep care at current levels or change the law so that not every veteran is eligible for free care at 65.

Dr. John Mather, who oversees the VA's geriatric care, said plans are being made to channel more money for beds, equipment and staff to hospitals in Sun Belt areas with the highest concentrations of aged veterans.

A VA study of what will be needed where and what it will all cost is not due until October, but a separate VA report estimates that Florida alone will need 1,483 more in-patient beds, 5,766 more nursing beds and 600,000 more out-patient visits. The pricetag, in today's dollars: $432 million for construction and $242 million more per year for operating costs.

No one at the VA wants to guess at the nationwide costs of meeting the demand in 1990.

"Do your own math," Mather said.

The VA's proposed 1984 budget for medical care is more than $8 billion. For every 100 elderly veterans eligible for free and complete care today, 233 will be eligible in 1990. Officials say the percentage of over-65 veterans seeking care may increase to 33 percent, depending on the economy and cuts in Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security. Inflation for health costs has been running at about double the nation's overall inflation rate.

Those calculations mean that if the VA tries to keep caring for the same types of cases it cares for today, the total cost could approach $50 billion by the end of the 1980s — a fivefold increase.

When told of this reckoning, Mather said, "Your math is correct."

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, said the $50 billion figure by 1990 is "not unrealistic." He said Congress should consider changing the rules so that only veterans "who really bore the battle" are eligible for free medical care. But he also conceded that any such changes were unlikely because of the political influence of veterans groups such as the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Amvets.

Man Killed In 46-Foot Fall

TURLOCK, Calif. (AP) — A 30-year-old man plunged 46 feet to his death when scaffolding collapsed at a grain silo construction site just as his wife and teen-age daughter drove in.

Michael Deering's family did not see him fall to the concrete, but his wife became hysterical when she learned of the accident. The Yuba City man worked for Gruber's Concrete Silos Inc., which is building two 77-foot silos for Foster's Commodities.

Part of the scaffolding fell after an electrical cord became entangled in a scaffold support and lifted a pipe leg from its bracket, company supervisor Jeff Gruber said.

Test Identifies Women With Breast Cancer Risk

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A "cheap and simple technique" that measures minute temperature differences can identify women at risk of breast cancer and should allow early detection and a better chance of cure, concludes a French study of 100,000 women.

"What we have been able to demonstrate is that this is approximately 10 times more significant than a family history (of breast cancer). This is a very important result because family history is presently regarded as the most important risk factor," said Dr. Michel Gautherie of Louis Pasteur University Medical School in Strasbourg.

Breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer death among American women. The American Cancer Society estimates 114,000 new cases will be diagnosed this year and 37,000 victims will die.

The technique, developed in Europe but seldom used and often criticized in the United States, is called thermography. It involves a temperature-sensitive plate that records heat patterns in the breast.

By analyzing those patterns, high-risk patients can be identified before tumors begin growing, Gautherie said in a telephone interview before describing his research Friday at a symposium in Costa Mesa.

He said a third of women with abnormal thermography results developed breast cancer within a few years of the test and, because those high-risk patients were intensely monitored, the cancers were usually discovered in early stages.

"This technique is totally harmless ... and it is a cheap and simple technique that (can be used) by any primary care physician," he said.

Dr. Louis Keith, a gynecologist at Chicago's Northwestern University Medical School and another symposium speaker, contends, "It is a characteristic of American medicine that we are not willing to accept what the Europeans have know and done for years."

The American Cancer Society, however, considers the procedure unproven and does not recommend it.

Dr. William Fister of Pasadena, a cancer specialist who works with the society, cited the five-year Breast Cancer Detection Demonstration Project, begun by the National Cancer Institute in 1973. The project screened 280,000 women in detection centers around the country.

"By the end of the second year," Fister said, "it became evident that thermography added essentially nothing in the way of early diagnosis" and was dropped from the project.

Keith contends the failure stemmed mostly from equipment "that can only be considered crude by today's standards.'

Thermography, he said, is not a test to determine whether a patient has cancer. "It is a screening test" to identify women who should be closely followed with conventional procedures, he said.

"Breast cancer diagnosis in general is very, very difficult," Gautherie said. "The only way to increase (success) is to use not one but several techniques which complement each other: thermography, mammography (breast X-ray) and physical examination."

Gautherie said about 8 percent of 100,000 women screened over several years at his Strasbourg center had abnormal results.

AFL-CIO Says No To Reagan

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — With 11.4 million Americans unemployed, the AFL-CIO is trying to add one person — President Reagan — to the jobless rolls.

The attention of the nation's labor leaders last week was riveted on presidential politics even though the 1984 presidential primary and caucus season is a year away.

At their mid-winter meeting here, the AFL-CIO chiefs reiterated an earlier call for a massive, $68.5 billion job-creation program. They said the tab should be picked up by businesses that would have their "tax loopholes" closed by Congress.

With few murmurs of dissent, the AFL-CIO vice presidents gave a simple answer to the question of why the federation leadership spent so much time on politics instead of the economy.

The ultimate solution to economic problems, they say, will be the forced retirement of Ronald Reagan.

To the question of whether it was fitting to bemoan high unemployment and human suffering from this posh oceanside setting, they pointed to Reagan's trips to his Santa Barbara, Calif., ranch.

And when asked about individual union leaders setting up private meetings with a labor secretary who had been dealt an official snub by federation president Lane Kirkland, they noted that the dinner given in Raymond Donovan's honor in nearby Hollywood, Fla., was put on by Thomas W. "Teddy" Gleason, head of the International Longshoremen's Association and a member of the Republican Party's labor advisory committee.

The executive council united in dealing with the potentially explosive question of pre-primary-season candidate endorsments by affiliates. That would impair the leadership's quest to obtain a union consensus behind one Democratic Party candidate.

It urged the national union affiliates, which are autonomous, to refrain from making irrevocable commitments until the federation's general board sits down next December to decide if one candidate can garner the necessary two-thirds vote.

The master plan is to give big labor a major voice in determining the 1984 Democratic standardbearer who will oppose Reagan, assuming he seeks re-election.

Some labor leaders were getting edgy about the AFL-CIO's strident opposition to the incumbent.

Reagan hasn't said whether he will seek a second term. But the symbolism of his decision to help the unionized U.S. maritime industry wasn't missed by some labor officials

Gleason, who has been supportive of Reagan, ended up toasting the arrival of a half-million tons of wheat flour shipping business resulting from Reagan's decision to invoke cargo preference on the Agriculture Department sale to Egypt.

If politics is the art of rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies, one unionist said, what happens to labor if the economy rallies, Reagan runs and is re-elected?

The labor movement could end up having its influence weakened for six more years, he said.

Attempted Rape Was Not Reported

RALEIGH — A middle-school principal says he did not tell police about the attempted rape of a 13-year-old girl because he thought it was his responsibility to investigate.

"I didn't think it was a police matter," Daniels Middle School principal David W. Stipe said Friday.

The attempted rape allegedly occurred Feb. 17 in the school auditorium, and police said they learned of it when they were contacted the next day by a Wake Medical Center doctor who examined the girl.

Two students, ages 15 and 18, were charged with attempted rape last week and were being held at the Wake County juvenile detention center.

Four Hydroelectric Dams Proposed

CHARLOTTE — Boise Cascade Corp. is studying the possibility of building four small hydroelectric dams in the Carolinas and selling the electricity they generate.

Two of the earthen dams would be located on the Pee Dee River around Rockingham, one near an existing dam creating Blewett Fllas Lake and the other about 5 miles south of where Lake Tillery begins.

A third proposed dam would span the Catawba River southeast of Rock Hill, S.C., and the fourth would be located at the confluence of the Broad and Pacolet rivers south of Gaffney, S.C.

Hunt Attacked For Stand On Freeze

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt may oppose a freeze on nuclear arms, but Sen. Jesse Helms' political organization is still criticizing him by accusing the governor of boosting the freeze movement last spring.

Hunt is "playing politics with a deadly serious issue, the peace and security of the United States," National Congressional Club chairman Thomas F. Ellis said in a statement.

Hunt is expected to challenge Helms should the North Carolina Republican seek re-election in 1984.

Ellis said Hunt erred last April when he proclaimed "Ground Zero Week" in North Carolina. A non-partisan anti-nuclear arms group was sponsoring the weeklong commemoration to highlight the threat of nuclear weapons.

With that proclamation, Ellis said, Hunt "closely associated himself with the nuclear freeze activists."

Woman Charged In False Claim

GREENSBORO — A woman who said she broke the same tooth at two restaurants and attempted to collect two payments has been charged with filing a false insurance claim and obtaining property by false pretense, police said.

Patricia Dawn Simmons, 35, of Greensboro, was charged by an SBI agent and an insurance investigator, acting on a bill of indictment returned Tuesday by the Guilford County Grand Jury.

The indictments declare that in each instance the defendant knew the tooth was not broken. Simmons posted a $500 bond for her appearance March 14 in Guilford County Superior Court.

Electricity For Heat Declines

RALEIGH — The overall use of electricity for heating residential homes this winter is down 10 percent, Carolina Power & Light Company.

Reasons given for the decline were the mild winter experienced in North Carolina this year, fewer heating degree days and customer conservation.

Hunt Offers State Reward

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Friday that the state is offering a reward of up to $5,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those who murdered James Crisp Sr. of Wilson.

Crisp was found on Oct. 11, 1982, with his hands and feet tied. He had been stabbed to death. Information about the case should be reported to the Wilson Police Department or the SBI, Hunt said.

Man Convicted In Murder

CHARLOTTE — Otto Withers Jr. was convicted Friday of first-degree murder in the shooting death of 12-year-old Roberta Hartsoe last summer.

A jury of 11 women and one man deliberated one hour and 15 minutes before finding Withers guilty. Withers, 39, was also convicted of "assualt with a deadly weapon with intent to kill" for shooting and injuring the girl's mother, Kathryn Hartsoe.

On Monday, the sentencing phase of the trial will begin. The jury will decide whether Withers will be sentenced to life imprisonment or death in the gas chamber.

Ingram Rejects Company's Form

RALEIGH — State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram has turned down The National Heritage Insurance Company's certificate form that would allow a terminated state employee to convert their policy.

Ingram said that he was rejecting the conversion policy form because it limits the maximum yearly benefit to $10,000.

Flu Is Making Late Show Up This Winter

By The Associated Press

State health officials say influenza is coming to North Carolina relatively late in the winter, but there have been enough other illnesses to keep residents coughing and feverish.

"There's a lot of other crud going around that doesn't sound too much like influenza," said Dr. J. Newton MacCormack, director of the North Carolina Division of Health Service's communicable disease branch.

Children in Greensboro are coming down with a low-grade fever, cough and runny nose, and a mild respiratory syndrome has increased public school absenteeism, he said.

"Down in Kinston there is a mild rash illness," MacCormack said. "It lasts for a day or two, with low-grade or no fever."

"We've seen quite a big increase in the emergency room in the sumber of flu-like illnesses, viruses and non-specific colds," said Dr. Esperanza M. Ordonez, an emergency room physician at Wake Medical Center.

"There are two types of syndromes going around," she said. "Some patients are complaining of a sore throat, aching all over and a possible feverl. Other patients are complaining of nausea, vomiting and diarrhea."

MacCormack said true flu, bringing aches, fever and respiratory symptoms ranging from fairly mild in some people to life-threatening in high-risk groups, is caused by viruses whose presence can be confirmed only in laboratory tests.

So far, only one influenza case — a 3-year-old Greensboro girl — has been documented this season in North Carolina, state health officials say.

The virus identified as A-Bangkok, one of three types included in this year's influenza vaccine.

Results have been mixed at the nine campus infirmaries that MacCormack's office monitors for signs of flu-like illnesses.

There were substantial increases this month at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and UNC-Wilmington, but the numbers have dropped at both schools.

"We seem to be behind a lot of states," said MacCormack, who noted that influenza was documented earlier in Virginia, South Carolina and Tennessee.

"Some states have really had widespread epidemics," he said. "I don't think that is really the case here based on what we're finding. But that's not to say we won't have that before the spring. The season may yet be young."

State Asks Dismissal Of Lawsuit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Attorney General's office says a federal desegregation lawsuit against North Carolina's prison system is frivolous and should be dismissed.

The state's response to the federal lawsuit, which was brought in December, was filed last week in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

The federal suit asked for an injunction to prevent Department of Correction officials from discriminating against or segregating inmates.

North Carolina and the federal government had tried unsucessfully for years to come to an agreement on housing prisoners.

In its action, federal officials attempted to force the prison system to integrate its two- and four-man maximum security cells at the old Central Prison complex and to remove race as a factor in housing assignments.

Special Deputy Attorney General Jacob L. Safron said in the state's reply that there will no longer be any multiple cells once the old Central Prison is demolished. All inmates will be housed in one-man cells or dormitories at the new facility.

Minimum custody prisoners already have been transferred from the century-old Central Prison to the new building.

Safron said all decisions on housing inmates have "been taken in good faith to protect the inmate's most important right — i.e., his right to live without unnecessary fear of violence, injury and death in the environment of a facility housing maximum-security inmates."

The federal government, he contended, lacked jurisdiction over the suit and the suit failed to state a claim for which relief could be granted.

State officials said they were surprised by the suit's timing, which came days before the state began moving inmates to the new Central Prison.

Marijuana Tests Used Incorrectly

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — People have been fired or jailed because officials have incorrectly used certain new tests designed to show if a person has smoked marijuana, a North Carolina toxicology expert says.

Dr. Arthur J. McBay, chief toxicologist at the North Carolina Medical Examiner's office said the test has resulted in faulty evidence that has affected civilians and people in the armed forces.

McBay, who is also professor of pharmacy and pathology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, cautioned against sole reliance on immunoassay tests for marijuana use in a letter published in the Feb. 18 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

McBay said in an interview that the recently developed test can be valuable for rapid and inexpensive screening of large numbers of urine samples.

But he said the tests should never be considered proof of marijuana use without confirmation by more sensitive methods like gas chromatograph-mass spectrometry.

"We talking about people's reputations and careers that have been ruined on the basis of tests that don't prove anything even when done correctly," said McBay, who was a consultant to the Navy's drug testing program.

"In some cases where I have been called as an expert witness, the laboratory work was done by poorly trained individuals and with very suspect results."

The Navy's drug test program began after a plane crashed on the deck of the aircraft carrier Nimitz in 1981, killing 14 sailors and Marines, including six who had traces of marijuana in their systems.

McBay said it is unfair not to use the best technology available, even it it is more expensive. Navy officials could not be reached for comment Saturday.

"As a result of criticism it has been receiving recently, the Navy seems to have cleaned up its act within the past month or so," he said. "That doesn't help the people with otherwise spotless records who have been demoted or discharged already, though."

McBay said he believed the same scientific and legal safeguards that apply to alcohol abuse should apply to drugs. For example, evidence should be required showing that a defendant was impaired, he said.

"The evidence is overwhelming that alcohol kills people on the highway and impairs their job performance, but the services and other employers often bend over backwards to help the guy who drinks keep his job," he said.

"It's impossible at present to establish by urine testing methods ... that a person who was adversely affected by marijuana, and throwing them out of the service or other jobs for having traces in their urine is a double standard."

Governors May Give Policy On Deficit Budget

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Governors Association, an organization of sometimes soft-boiled positions and pallid opinions, may plunge this coming week into the rough and tumble arena of federal budget and tax policy.

The association chairman, Utah Democratic Gov. Scott Matheson, and Illinois Gov. James Thompson, the Republican who will succeed him, will spearhead an effort to adopt a set of six budget "guidelines" that would put the NGA into the thick of the brewing battle over federal deficits, defense and social program spending and taxation.

The staff of the NGA has prepared a series of budget and tax proposals designed to reduce the federal budget to no more than $90 billion in fiscal year 1988 — more than $175 billion less than now estimated.

In all, Matheson said, the plan would reduce the five-year deficit estimate by about $532 billion. This total would include $177 billion in non-defense spending, $286 in defense spending cuts or revenue increases and $69 billion saved on national debt interest.

The program would include scaling back current defense spending plans and raising new revenue that would seem to require either tax increases or abandonment of currently planned tax cuts.

Those are two areas the association has not entered in the past, and Matheson conceded there was no assurance that his colleagues would agree to do so now.

"I don't have a head count on this," Matheson told reporters on the eve of the meeting. Democrats dominate the association 34-16, but many of them are substantially more conservative than their party leadership on Capitol Hill.

But Matheson said the 15 or so governors he has talked to in developing the guidelines generally agreed it was time for them to take a part in the budget debate because it will have a tremendous effect on national economic recovery and, in turn, the resources they will have to run their states.

Matheson said Chairmen James Jones, D-Okla., of the House Budget Committee, and Pete Domenici, R-N.M., of the Senate Budget Committee, had welcomed the association leadership into the budget arena and would extend that publicly to all 50 governors at the windup session of the meeting Tuesday.

Matheson also spoke to White House Chief of Staff James Baker and other presidential aides about the proposal, but noted they had expressed opposition to some of the detailed proposals. He said he intended to present the plan to President Reagan when the governors visit the White House Monday.

Judge Says Desegregation Orders May Fail

By The Associated Press

Further college desegregation orders probably will do no good, says a federal judge whose orders in the past 12 years have reduced segregation at public colleges in a dozen states, including North Carolina.

"I have a reluctance, quite frankly, to keep on issuing orders that I know down deep just cannot under optimum situations be carried out," U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt said in Washington Friday.

But Pratt said he would order the U.S. Education Department to come up with new deadlines for the states to desegregate their public colleges and universities.

Elliot Lichtman, a lawyer for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, asked that Pratt issue strict deadlines and threaten aid cutoffs to states that don't comply. Justice Department lawyers argued for flexible deadlines.

"Without prejudging the matter, I think we're going to have some deadlines," Pratt said. "Just what they will be, I don't know." He ordered federal officials to recommend the deadlines within the next 10 days.

Pratt said it's difficult to force black and white students or faculty members to change generations of tradition of attending mostly segregated schools.

"In terms of what the law says, Mr. Lichtman is generally on solid ground," Pratt said. "My problem is, law or not, we have practical problems that are very difficult to achieve even assuming the good faith and cooperation of all the parties."

He said public universities have a hard time attracting the small number of black doctoral candidates when they are being courted by Ivy League schools.

Surrealism Marks Wier's Film

The most interesting thing about Australian Peter Wier's film, "The Year of Living Dangerously," now playing (through this week only) at Park Cinema downtown, is the captivating performance given by diminutive actress Linda Hunt as the dwarf male journalist-camerman Billy Kwan.

As in Peter Wier's earlier (and much more rewarding) films — "Gallipoli," "Breaker Morant," "Picnic at Hanging Rock," and even the curious "Cars That Eat People," there is a strong strain of surrealism just beneath the surface of reality.

Billy is an unusual character, a man of keen intelligence who has a child-like way of attaching himself to people he likes, then shrewdly insinuating himself into their lives, attempting to influence their viewpoints, their conduct.

The movie opens in June 1965, with Australian reporter Guy Hamilton (Mel Gibson) arriving in Djakarta, Indonesia on his first foreign assignment, a dream come true after ten years of waiting for such a chance. Hamilton is immediately taken over by Billy, who becomes his photographer sidekick in tracking down stories. He persuades Hamilton to look beyond the immediacy of political stories, to write about the poverty and suffering of ordinary people, much to the amusement and derision of veteran correspondents.

Wier pictures the coterie of foreign correspondents as a totally unsavory lot, a handful of scruffy men given to chasing women and drinking away the hours in a ramshackle bar — (a depiction that I must take exception to based on the dedication and intelligence of correspondents I encountered in Saigon, Tokyo, etc. in many years spent overseas).

This type of misrepresentation undoubtedly accounts for the confusion that arises from the film's account of historical events versus the actual events taking place in Indonesia at that crucial time in the nation's history. It is never clear whether the intent of the film is to give a slice of history or to use events and geography as a background to a love story.

The love affair that develops between Julie (Sigourney Weaver), an employee at the British Embassy and Hamilton is a standard screen love affair — and again it is through Billy's manipulation that the two become involved with each other.

Wier is a master of establishing moods, and in "The Year of Living Dangerously" he succeeds in using clutter effectively and creates atmosphere in scenes of dark alleys at night, puppet shadows on stained walls, the dominance of Communist red colors in banners and clothing of shouting mob scenes, and the evocation of time and nationalities through music — from the tinkle of gamelins to a shake it up rock 'n roll to strains of "White Cliffs of Dover."

"The Year of Living Dangerously" is seriously flawed by the inclusion of macho scenes that would be entirely credible in a James Bond movie, but not in this film — i.e. Hamilton crashing through a fiery barricade, and ignoring repeated warnings of guards at the presidential place.

This Wier film is a disappointment, following on the heels of "Breaker Morant" and "Gallipoli." But the obvious failures are to a great degree salvaged by the fascinating character of Billy — a man who lives his life through attempting to consign to others traits he wants them to possess, who declares "I have to give love to whoever God has placed in my life." The film belongs to Billy, and Linda Hunt triumphs it making it so.

President Resigns

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Harold C. Doster, president of Atlantic Christian College for 4½ years, has resigned effective May 31.

Doster told the college's board of trustees at its regular meeting Friday that he would not accept another contract when his current one expires at the end of May.

Doster did not specify exactly why he was resigning from the 1,500-student college, but issued this statement:

"At the conclusion of my responsibilities to Atlantic Christian College, if present plans materialize, my vocation will turn in a somewhat different direction in the cause of Christian higher education and in the fulfillment of my ordination to ministry."

The board's executive committee asked Doster to remain with the college for six months to accept a special assignment of obtaining major gifts to help launch a long-range plan submitted to the trustees Friday.

The board "accepted with regret" the resignation, according to a statement issued by the college.

REGIONAL AUTO PARTS, INC.

20 YEARS OF SERVICE TO EASTERN CAROLINA

February, 1983, marks a milestone in the history of Regional Auto Parts, Inc. Their business was organized by Maynard E. Porter in 1962. Mr. Porter is president of Regional Auto Parts, a family owned corporation. They actually began operation in February, 1963, and have had phenomenal growth since that time. They are located on a sixteen acre tract of land on Highway 264 West of Greenville at Frog Level.

Their well-equipped automotive shop is staffed by competent personnel with experience in all types of automotive repairs, and they install any part they sell.

For the past 20 years, they have built their reputation on honesty, integrity, good service and a verbal warranty which they honor. Their word is their bond. Regional Auto Parts, Inc. can boast of having made countless satisfied customers in Eastern Carolina throughout the past 20 years.

Regional Auto Parts specializes in buying and selling wrecked automobiles, trucks, and salvaged parts.

Mr. Porter would like to convey the fact that in numerous cases wrecked vehicles have very low mileage and this means practically new parts are available, such as motors, transmissions, differentials, tires, batteries, starters, alternators, power steering pumps, air compressors and radiators, as well as body parts such as doors, trunk lids, bumpers and fenders.

They are equipped with 3 regional wire services for the purpose of procuring used auto and truck parts along the entire eastern seaboard.

When you need their services, they are prepared to do the job for you and guarantee satisfaction.

Regional Auto Parts, Inc. would like to express their appreciation to those of you who have helped make their business a success.

Jobless Rate Climbs To 10

RALEIGH — Statewide total unemployment in January reached 10 percent, reppresenting 288,800 unemployed persons, according to figures released by Glenn R. Jernigan, chairman of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission.

This was an increase of 27,600 from the previous month, when the N.C. rate was 8.9 percent. The unadjusted rate nationwide for January was 11.4 percent, equating to 12,517,000 unemployed.

Jernigan said a record $56.3 million in weekly unemployment insurance benefits was paid to North Carolina jobless workers in January.

Manufacturing employment in North Carolina dropped by 4,300 from mid-December to mid-January. Textile mill products led with a decline of 1,800. Other high losers were electrical machinery, 1,200, and food and kindred products, 700.

However, in one field, apparel, a significant increase of 900 jobs for the period was reported.

Non-manufacturing employment declined by 36,500 from mid-December to mid-January. The categories of heavy decline were: trade, a loss of 16,700 jobs, mainly as the result of holiday season lay offs; government, less 8,300, mostly due to fewer students in the labor force; and construction, a loss of 6,400 jobs due in large part to adverse weather conditions.

The average hourly earnings of North Carolina's production workers in manufacturing increased, with average earnings in mid-January at $6.56, up a penny from December and up 20 cents an hour from mid-January 1981.

Jernigan said the North Carolina unemployment insurance fund is the third most solvent in the United States with a January balance of more than $340 million. In contrast, the funds in 23 states were bankrupt.

"Conservative fiscal policies have maintained North Carolina's solvency, but the unemployment insurance fund is being depleted at an average rate of $10 million each week.

Pirates Subdue Stubborn UNC-Wilmington, 70-60

By WOODY PEELE

East Carolina's Pirates, despite 75 percent shooting in the second half, had to hang on to pull out a 70-60 victory over UNC-Wilmington's stubborn Seahawks last night in Minges Coliseum.

The victory insures the Pirates of a winning season — they are now 14-12 with one game left — something most observers thought was an impossible task when the season began.

But Charlie Harrison molded together a team that has surprised not only opponents but fans alike during this, his first season as head coach at ECU.

The Pirates, who hit nine of their first ten shots in the second half, shot out to a 17-point lead with 14:11 left, then "got a little sloppy" in Harrison's words.

But Harrison was pleased with the emotion he saw last night. "I was critical of the lack of emotion after the James Madison game, but we've only had that (the lack of it) in one or two games this year. But it's something you can't have, and I never know how to predict 'em."

ECU never trailed in the game, scoring the first point on a free throw by Johnny Edwards and following that up with a short jumper by Barry Wright. The Seahawks kept it close, however, holding the lead to five or less through much of the first half. It wasn't until the final seven minutes that ECU eased out into as much as a ten-point lead, 28-18, on two free throws by Charlie Green, but free throws by Terry Shiver and Scott Prodhoe cut it back to 28-22 at the half.

The rally came when both Green and Wright were on the bench. Green was being rested and Wright had come up with three quick fouls in the contest. "They're as quick as we are normally, and with the lineup we had in there at the time, they're quicker and taller, too," Harrison said.

At any rate, after the two teams swapped baskets twice in the opening minutes of the second half, the Pirates really began to click, outscoring UNCW 15-4 over the next three and a half minutes.

Bruce Peartree got it going with a layup, and Tony Robinson followed with another. After Washington native Shawn Williams hit for the Seahawks, Edwards scored the next five points.

Peartree then hit a jumper and UNCW got its second two points in the string on a goaltending call on a shot by Prudhoe.

Wright then scored from underneath, and following a turnover at the Wilmington end of the court, Green brought the crowd screaming to its feet with an Alley Oop dunk off a long pass from near mid-court.

With 14:11 left, the Pirates were comfortably ahead, 47-30.

"We got impatient with the lead," Harrison said, "and we got sloppy. It started at the defensive end of the court. We had three free fouls (actually at that point, six) and we were playing like they were already in one-and-one. When we're generating good defense, it makes us play better on offense."

Harrison felt that the real push didn't start until after the first two minutes of the second half, however. "We got some momentum going and shot well and passed well and played defense well. They panicked a little too, and that helped us.

"But then we started getting easy shots and it caused problems later. It came too easy and they started forcing it," he added.

Denkler Keys ECU Past Pats

FAIRFAX, Va. — Mary Denkler scored a career-high 34 points — including a critical three-point play late in the second half — to lead East Carolina past George Mason, 69-65, in a women's basketball game Saturday.

The Lady Pirates led by nine at the half, but George Mason rallied to tie the game twice in the second half, the final time at 63-63 with 3:23 left. Denkler drove for a layup and was fouled. Denkler canned the foul shot to put the Lady Pirates up, 66-63.

George Mason never got closer as Sylvia Bragg hit a bucket to extend the lead to 68-63 and ECU held on to win by four.

The victory was the third straight for the Lady Pirates — the longest winning streak of the season — and left ECU at 13-11. George Mason, playing its season finale, ends up 10-12.

Denkler's 34 points marked the fifth time she has surpassed the 30-point mark this season. Denkler hit 13 of 19 field goals and eight of eight from the foul line.

"Mary Denkler was fantastic. She is definitely a money ballplayer," East Carolina coach Cathy Andruzzi said.

Caren Truske and Lisa Squirewell both added 10 points. Truske's total was a career-high.

George Mason, which never led, was topped by Valerie Douglas with 20 points and Norma Horne with 19. Tracey Martin chipped in 10 for George Mason, which was outrebounded by ECU's smaller Lady Pirates, 47-31.

The Lady Pirates were paced on the boards by Bragg with 12 rebounds and Fran Hooks with 11, both of which were career-highs.

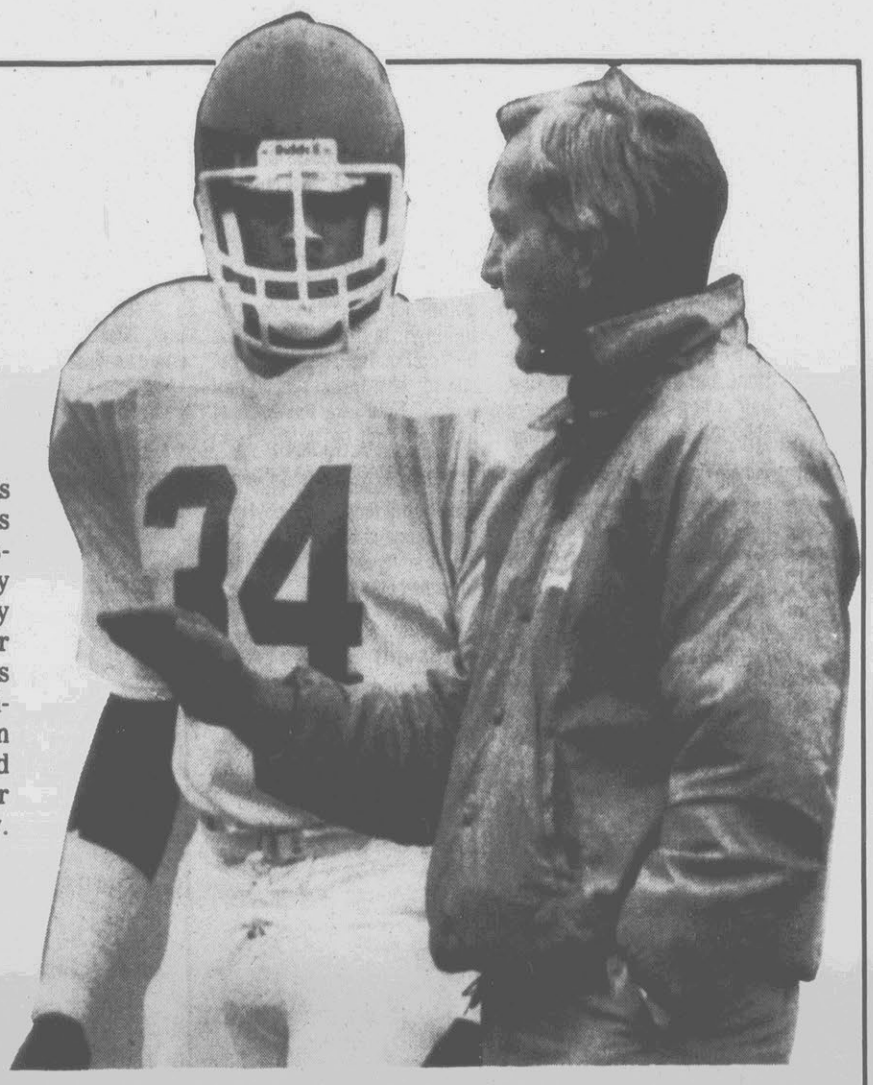

ECU hit 50% (28 of 56) from the field and 81% (13 of 16) at the foul line for the game. George Mason was 40% (29 of 73) from the field and 44% (seven of 16) from the free throw line.

"We are glad to get out of here alive," Andruzzi said afterward. "I thought our girls really kept their cool and poise in a game in which they could have lost it. I certainly did."

Andruzzi was referring to a technical she received with 5:57 remaining in the game.

"The touchy fouls that were called was unbelievable," said Andruzzi, who referred to the foul problems of Hooks and

Walker: Old 34 Gone

Related stories page B-4, B-10

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Saying he had lost his enthusiasm for college football, Herschel Walker joined the pro ranks Saturday and said he had no regrets about leaving Georgia.

"Old No. 34 is gone from Georgia," said Walker, who signed with the United States Football League's New Jersey Generals before completing his collegiate eligibility. Then he added, "I'm not going to be looking back."

The Heisman Trophy winner went through a two-hour, no-contact practice, his first as a pro, and, asked later if he was in shape for football, said:

"I really don't know. My body is healthy and I've been lifting a lot of weights."

He said it was strange to touch a football at this time of year after missing spring practices at Georgia, where he also competed in track. "I've never been to spring practice before," Walker said.

Generals Coach Chuck Fairbanks said his All-American running back would not have any contact until the season-opener next Sunday in Los Angeles.

Asked whether Walker would start, Fairbanks said: "His playing will be limited. I'll have a better feel for that later in the week. But he's a great athlete, he has very rare athletic ability and he's bright. He'll be able to pick up everything in a relatively short period of time."

On Saturday, Walker spent quite a bit of time as a pass receiver, a task he didn't do at Georgia.

"What was totally unknown for me was his feel for the passing game," Fairbanks said. "But with some practice and training, it will be an easy thing for him to do."

Earlier, Walker told reporters that he had no doubt the new USFL would be successful. "It will be comparable to and more exciting than the National Football League," he predicted. "While I'm here, I hope to show everyone that the USFL is as good as the NFL."

Walker, his fiance, Cindy DeAngelis, and Generals owner J. Walter Duncan flew via private jet and helicopter from Dublin, Ga. — near Walker's hometown of Wrightsville — to the Generals' practice facility at the University of Central Florida.

Dressed in a brown and white warmup suit, Walker accepted a red jersey bearing No. 34 — something like the one he wore for three All-American seasons at Georgia — from Duncan.

"It's nice to receive No. 34 again," he said, "but No. 34 at Georgia is over for me and I'm starting a whole new life and I'm looking forward to it."

Although he has been running sprints in track meets all winter, Walker said he thought he would be "slow to start off with."

Duke, Maryland Roll To Victories

Blue Devils End Five-Game Skid

DURHAM (AP) — Mark Alarie and Chip Engelland scored 21 points each as Duke snapped a five-game Atlantic Coast Conference basketball losing streak with an easy 106-81 victory over Georgia Tech Saturday.

Duke took command early when it broke from a 21-16 lead and scored nine straight points. Tom Emma hit a 3-pointer, Johnny Dawkins hit two straight jumpers and then blocked a Mark Price shot which Engelland converted into a 13-footer, giving Duke a 30-16 margin.

Twice, Georgia Tech kept the lead to eight points, but each time Duke responded and eventually pushed its lead to 43-28 with 2:51 left in the half and led 49-35 at intermission.

Engelland's two free throws at 4:37 gave Duke its largest lead at 91-61.

Dawkins added 18 points and Emma 12 as Duke raised its record to 11-14, 3-9 in the ACC. The Blue Devils also broke a three-game overall losing streak.

Georgia Tech, which had upset Maryland in its last start, fell to 12-13 and 4-9.

Alarie, who scored 14 points in the first half, had 11 rebounds as Duke dominated the boards 37-23. Harvey grabbed nine for Georgia Tech.

Duke hit 37 of 63 from the floor, 58.7 percent, while the Yellow Jackets hit 27 of 56, 48.2 percent. While Duke hit a respectable 28 of 37 free throws, Tech missed only one of 23 attempts.

"We made them work hard for their points," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, whose club forced Georgia Tech into 19 turnovers. "We gave up very few offensive rebounds. We played well for the whole ball game."

"I thought Duke played a fantastic game," Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "I've never seen a team so well prepared to play as Duke was."

Late Spurt Sparks Terps Past Wake

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said an NCAA tournament bid was riding on the outcome, but he wasn't ready to claim one after the Terps beat Wake Forest 83-75 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday.

"Our record speaks for itself. . .I'd rather not say," was Driesell's response as to whether Maryland belongs in the postseason playoffs.

Ben Coleman had 24 points to lead the Terps, who blew a 12-point second half lead before outscoring the Demon Deacons 12-2 in the final five minutes.

"It was a pressure game for us," said Driesell. "There was a lot riding on it — like a great year, ending up with a home win, an NCAA bid and a tie for fourth in the league."

"We had to make our foul shots at the end," said Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy. "They cashed in on those, and we didn't."

"We battled back and showed heart," Tacy said, "but we're not big enough to keep them from scoring inside. They had a number of stick-back shots and most of their shots in the first half came near the basket."

Tacy said the Deacons sorely miss Alvis Rogers, their injured 6-foot-7 senior.

"With Alvis out, we have problems inside," he said.

The victory, Maryland's 11th in its last 13 games, pulled the Terps into a fourth place tie with Wake Forest in the ACC with 7-5 records. The Terps are 18-7 overall and the Demon Deacons 17-8.

The Deacons, led by John Toms who scored a career high of 31 points, took a 62-59 lead with 11:13 remaining after running off a 20-5 streak.

Maryland trailed until four points by Len Bias, the final two on foul shots with 4:26 left, put them on top 75-73. With Wake missing four free throws in the final 2:41, Maryland was able to extend its lead and avenge a 13-point loss.

DHC's Long Second At State Meet

WINSTON-SALEM — Plymouth's Thermus Biggs defeated D.H. Conley wrestler Mike Long to win his second state title in three years in the finals of the N.C. State Wrestling tournament Saturday night.

Biggs, who had downed Long in both the sectionals and regionals, took a 13-3 victory over the defending state titlist in the state championship battle at the two-day tournament held at Parkland High School.

Raleigh Sanderson captured the team title, with 56½ points. Conley was 19th in the field of 208 teams, collecting 22½ points. It was only the second time in the past nine years the Vikings failed to make the top ten.

Farmville Central's Joel Shackleford was fourth after being pinned by Pine Forest's Rodney Dunham in the consolation finals.

DHC's Willie Greene and Paul Menichelli were both beaten in the quarterfinals while William Bridgett, who was 30-0, going into the tournament, was beaten in the first round.

None of the three placed.

"Five of the state champions (out of 13) came out of the Greenville sectional," Conley Coach Milt Sherman said. Those included Tarboro's Mike Stokes at 115, West Carteret's Roy Heaverly at 135, Plymouth's Mike Chesson at 141, and Beddingfield's Paul Smith at 148, along with Biggs.

"Overall, we've had a very successful season," Sherman said. "I just wish we could have closed out stronger in the state meet. But our fellows did a fine job throughout the season."

Up For Two

Pinone's only field goal after halftime, a 17-foot jumper with one second left in overtime, carried seventh-ranked Villanova to a 71-70 victory over No. 9 St. John's Saturday.

"I have to credit Granger with tremendous composure. He could have tried that shot himself, but he got the ball to me," Pinone said. "It was a perfect pass, chest-high. It felt really comfortable in my hands."

St. John's defenders came at him "pretty hard," Pinone said, "but I knew there couldn't be much time left. I wouldn't take a shot like that in the normal flow of the game."

The 6-foot-8 center, who had sent the game into overtime when he tied the score 58-58 on a pair of free throws with 1:07 left to play, said his game-winning jump shot was about 3 or 4 feet deeper than his range. "But I just shot, and the game was over."

Pinone said it was the first "buzzer-beater" he had ever had in his basketball career. But, he added, "I guess it's as good a time as any, since this was my last game in Philadelphia."

"Heck, we've lost before. We'll lose again," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca. "But this one burns a little more."

St. John's went ahead 60-58 at the start of the overtime on a field goal by Billy Goodwin, but Villanova scored three consecutive points to take a 63-60 advantage.

Kevin Williams then hit two free throws and followed with a steal and a field goal that sent St. John's ahead 64-63 with 3:13 left.

Goodwin made another steal and passed off to Chris Mullin, who scored a field goal and a free throw that made it 67-63 St. John's with 2:56 on the clock.

Villanova, however, refused to quit on its way to its seventh straight victory. Ed Pinckney hit a pair of free throws to reduce the deficit to two. After Williams, who scored all six of his points in the overtime period, collected two at the foul line, Villanova's Stewart Granger and Dwayne McClain hit baskets to tie the game at 69-69 with 31 seconds left.

Mullin, who led St. John's with 23 points, hit a free throw with seven seconds left that gave St. John's a 70-69 lead, setting up Pinone's shot.

Villanova led 30-25 at halftime but St. John's, led by Mullin and David Russell, who scored 17, outscored Villanova 12-4 in the first six minutes of the second half to go ahead 37-34.

St. John's led twice by six, at 42-36 and 44-38, and led until Villanova tied it at 56-56 with 1:47 left in regulation on a jumper by Granger, who led the Wildcats with 18 points. Goodwin sent St. John's ahead 58-56 with 1:26 to go, before Pinone sent it into overtime with his pair of free throws.

Villanova is now 21-4 overall and 12-2 in the Big East. St. John's is 23-4 and 11-4 in the conference.

Arkansas.....77
Texas Tech .....63

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Junior Alvin Robertson and senior Darrell Walker combined for 29 second-half points Saturday night as sixth-ranked Arkansas defeated Texas Tech 77-63 and set up a showdown with second-ranked Houston.

The Razorbacks, now 24-1 overall and 13-1 in the Southwest Conference, are to play the Cougars Thursday in Fayetteville. Houston defeated Rice Saturday night to run its league mark to 14-0. Arkansas' only loss has been to Houston.

Robertson missed much of the first half after drawing his third foul less than 12 minutes into the contest. He had only five points at the half but finished with 19 to lead all scorers. Walker, who hit only one of five shots from the field in the opening half, hit all seven of his attempts from the floor in the second half and finished with 17.

John Snively came off the bench and equaled a career high with 14 points and Joe Kleine added 11 for the Razorbacks. Ray Irvin led Tech with 11 points and Bubba Jennings had 10.

The game was tight until the final four minutes of the first half when Snively put on a shooting exhibition. Scoring the final 11 Razorback points of the opening half, Snively gave the Razorbacks a 35-26 lead at intermission.

Tech never got closer than nine points again. With Walker and Robertson inflicting most of the damage, Arkansas pulled out to a 71-47 lead before using substitutes for most of the final four minutes.

The victory was Arkansas 100th against only six defeats at Barnhill Arena in the nine years Coach Eddie Sutton has been with the Razorbacks. Tech fell to 10-17, including 7-7 in the SWC.

Houston.....86
Rice .....52

HOUSTON (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon scored 15 points and blocked five shots as second-ranked Houston rolled to an 86-52 victory over Rice Saturday night and extended its college basketball winning streak to 18 games, longest in the nation.

The victory boosted Houston to a 23-2 record overall and 14-0 in the Southwest Conference and put the Cougars in position to challenge for the top spot in The Associated Press Poll following Fullerton State's upset of No. 1-ranked University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

The Cougar victory also set up a SWC showdown Thursday in Fayetteville, Ark., against No. 6 Arkansas. Houston is 0-7 in games played at Arkansas' Barnhill Arena.

Rice, which dropped to 8-17 on the season and 2-13 in SWC play, started to wilt through the opening 10 minutes of the second half when Michael Young hit all 12 of his points.

Clyde Drexler led the Cougars with 18 points and Benny Anders came off the bench to scored 14 points. Renaldo O'Neal led the Owls with 12 points.

The Owls, who gave the Cougars an early scare in their first meeting this season, managed an 8-4 lead in the opening minutes before Olajuwon and the Cougars' powerful inside game took charge and burst to a 33-19 halftime lead.

Olajuwon hit 13 first half points while the outmanned Owls hit only 26 percent from the field.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Garris scored 15 of his 19 points in the first half as 19th-ranked Boston College breezed to a 70-52 victory over Pittsburgh in a Big East Conference basketball game Saturday night.

Boston College, 20-5, fell behind by five points early in the game, but never trailed after Jay Murphy scored six consecutive points in less than a minute to push the Eagles into a 27-23 lead.

Murphy hit a 15-foot jumper to earn the Eagles a 23-23 tie, then stole Pitt's inbounds pass and hit a layup and a free throw after being fouled. On the Eagles' next possession, he made one of two foul shots.

With the Panthers trailing 29-27, Eagles' point guard Michael Adams hit a pair of jump shots and flipped an alley-oop pass to Garris for a layup as Boston College moved into a 37-29 halftime lead.

Clyde Vaughan, the leading Big East scorer with a 21.3 average, scored 22 points for the Panthers, but was held to just four points in the second half as he sat out much of the half with leg cramps.

The Panthers, who have upset three nationally ranked Big East teams at home, never got any closer than eight points in the second half.

Murphy scored 16 points for the Eagles, who are 10-4 in Big East play, while Adams scored 14 points and reserve Stu Primus scored 10 second half points.

Arguello Decisions Fernandez

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Alexis Arguello avenged a previous loss and strengthened his drive for another championship fight by pounding out a unanimous 10-round decision over Vilomar Fernandez in a non-title junior welterweight bout Saturday.

Arguello, who has held titles in three weight classes, had to chase Fernandez for a majority of the fight.

Tigers Clinch Big 8 Tie

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — John Sundvold's 19 points allowed Missouri to defeat Nebraska 54-51 and clinch at least a share of the Big Eight Conference basketball title Saturday night.

Sundvold scored nine points during a 13-1 second-half Tiger scoring burst that erased a 48-39 Nebraska lead and put Missouri ahead 52-49 with 1:54 left.

Sundvold had 15 points in the second half, including two free throws with six seconds left that clinched the victory.

The No. 15 Tigers are now 10-2 in the conference and 22-6 overall. Despite its loss, Nebraska still was able to clinch a home-court berth in the first round of the conference basketball playoffs when Oklahoma State defeated Iowa State 78-70. Nebraska is now 7-5 in the conference and 16-8 overall.

Steve Stipanovich added 15 points for the Tigers, including eight in the second half as he and Sundvold scored all but six of Missouri's second-half points. Nebraska led 26-25 at halftime and by as much as seven points 24-17 in the first half. The Huskers opened up a nine-point lead 36-27 early in the second half and led by that count several times before the Missouri comeback.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Lancaster Gordon scored 10 of his 14 points in the second half to lead No. 5 Louisville to a 73-62 victory over an upset-minded Western Kentucky in a Saturday night college basketball game.

Louisville, 24-3, held an early 5-2 lead before the Hilltoppers capped a 10-0 scoring run on a three-point play by Tony Wilson to take a 12-5 lead with 16:42 remaining. Western, 12-15, then extended its margin to 11 at 26-15 with 8:50 to go on a layup by Percy White.

Two free throws by Louisville's Billy Thompson ignited an 8-0 run to pull the Cardinals to within four at 26-22 with 7:32 remaining.

A basket by Jeff Hall put Louisville ahead 31-30 with 3:50 left, and the lead seesawed before Gordon connected with 50 seconds remaining to give Louisville a 38-36 halftime lead.

The Cardinals jumped out in the second half behind the outside shooting of Gordon and guard Milt Wagner to take a 59-48 lead with 9:35 remaining. The Hilltoppers could come no closer than nine.

TO CUFF OR NOT TO CUFF
(Some straight talk about trousers.)
At first glance, trousers might not appear to require much discussion, but there are some not-so-obvious things that go into making them fit right and hang right and look right with their accompanying jackets. Cut is one. Brody's for men's trousers, for the most part, have a plain or pleated front, belt loops or beltless, straight legs, 19" at knee and bottom, because we feel the proportion is best with our natural shoulder jackets.
Construction includes things like the extended waistband that fits smoothly under the belt, and the inside buttoned tab that helps maintain the line at the top. Well constructed trousers will make a perceptible difference.
As for cuffs, we prefer that our summer trousers be cuffed, for a reason that has nothing to do with fashion but everything to do with style: the weight of the cuff makes the trousers hang better. There are exceptions, golf slacks for one, and those worn where a cuff could be a collection device for grass or sand or gravel. Here cuffless makes better sense.
For summer you'll find these trousers in everything from rugged cotton twill and duck to luxurious silk-linen, from lightweight wool blends, gabardines and worsteds to cotton seersucker and cool tissue cotton. And more. $22 to $110.

Spartans Hand Indiana Second Straight Defeat

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Sam Vincent pumped in 19 points to lead Michigan State to a 62-54 upset victory over fourth-ranked Indiana in Big Ten basketball Saturday night.

The defeat was the Hoosiers' second straight as they fell to 10-5 in the conference and 20-5 overall. Michigan State lifted its record to 6-8 and 13-11.

Without the services of the Big Ten's leading scorer, Ted Kitchel, Indiana was flat. Kitchel was lost for the season with a back injury suffered in the first half of Thursday night's loss at Michigan.

Randy Wittman, averaging over 19 points per game, hit only one of nine shots in the first half for Indiana. He finished the game with seven points.

The Spartans, like Indiana, started slowly on offense, hitting one of their first six shots. But Michigan State later put together a 14-2 spurt to take a 23-10 lead with seven minutes remaining in the first half. They coasted to a 29-20 lead at intermission.

Hoosier forward Jim Thomas hit for eight points in one stretch to move Indiana to within 45-42 with under 11 minutes remaining. Vincent then hit eight points to put the Spartans up, 55-51.

Michigan State went into a stall with four minutes remaining, which ran down most of the time left on the clock.

Larry Polec scored 12 points for Michigan State, as did center Kevin Willis. Scott Skiles, who hit for 35 points against Ohio State on Thursday, had 11.

Indiana center Uwe Blab had 15 points. Kitchel's replacement, Steve Bouchie, had 13 and Thomas finished with 12.

Georgia.....72

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Charles Hurt scored 14 of his 15 points in the second half Saturday and sparked foul-plagued Kentucky to an 81-72 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Georgia.

The victory raised No. 10 Kentucky's record to 19-5 overall and 11-4 in the SEC. Georgia dropped to 17-8 and 8-8.

Hurt hit a thunderous dunk shot and Jim Master contributed two long field goals in that run.

The Bulldogs, who trailed 43-33 at halftime, remained in contention through most of the second half on the scoring of Lamar Heard, who had 10 of his 16 points in the second period.

Georgia trailed just 70-65 after Terry Fair sank two free throws and Vern Fleming hit a layup with 4:33 to go.

A long jumper by Master then ignited Kentucky's decisive scoring run.

Master finished with 14 points, including 10 in the second half. Fleming led Georgia with 23 points and James Banks added 14.

Seton Hall.....60

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 16 points and had seven steals to lead 18th-ranked Georgetown to a 71-60 Big East Conference victory over Seton Hall in the second game of a college basketball doubleheader Saturday.

In the first game at the Brendan Byrne Arena, Gordon Austin scored 20 points and had 11 assists and Ed Sloane added 19 points to lead American to an 84-72 victory over Fairfield.

Ewing, a 7-foot sophomore who helped lead the Hoyas to the NCAA finals last season before losing the championship to North Carolina, scored 10 points and had five steals in the first half as Georgetown built a 16-point lead. He finished with four rebounds and two blocked shots.

The Hoyas were ahead 39-23 at halftime, outscoring the Pirates 16-6 in the final 4:40.

Seton Hall had pulled to within 23-17 on Marvin Morris' jumper, but Ewing triggered the Hoyas to their 16-point lead with five points in a 13-1 burst.

Seton Hall closed the lead to nine points twice in the second half, the last time on a jumper by Morris with eight minutes to play.

William Martin, a 6-7 sophomore then made a three-point play to give Georgetown a 52-40 lead. Martin finished with 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Freshman Horace Broadnax came off the bench to score 12 points for Georgetown, which boosted its record to 19-7 overall and 9-4 in the Big East.

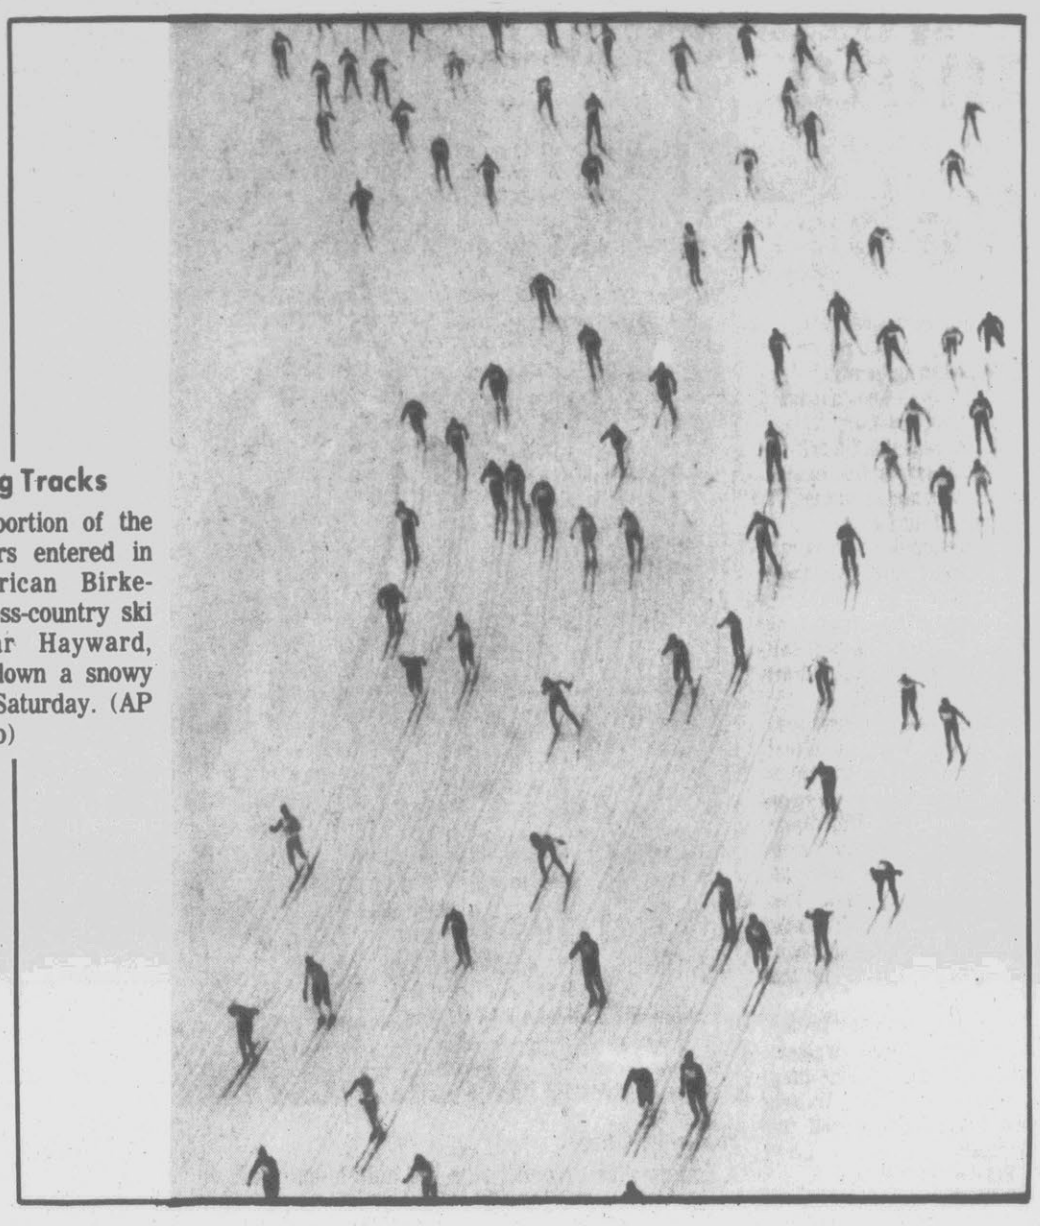

Freshman Andre McCloud, who fouled out with 3:01 left, led Seton Hall with 15 points and nine rebounds.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Rob Romaine scored 23 points to lead Navy to an 80-69 basketball victory over Army Saturday, its third triumph in three years over the rival service academy.

The Cadets, who had a game-high 29 points and 32 rebounds from Kenny Schwartz, held the lead for 11 minutes of the first half. Schwartz, who had 18 in the first half, scored 12 of his team's 23 points as Army jumped out to a seven-point lead in the game's first 12 minutes.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Freshman forward Granville Arnold rolled in a layup with two seconds remaining as Florida State, sparked by Mitchell Wiggins' 37 points, upset 14th-ranked Memphis State 74-72 Saturday in Metro Conference basketball action.

Arnold's lay-in came just 10 seconds after Memphis State's Phillip Haynes had tied the game with two free throws. The Seminoles rushed the ball down the court and point guard Tony William found Arnold on the right baseline.

Memphis State called timeout after the shot, but a 35-foot desperation shot by Haynes bounced off the rim as time ran out.

Wiggins, the conference's leading scorer, equaled a career scoring high and pulled down nine rebounds. William added 16 points.

Haynes was the leading scorer for Memphis State with 26 points. Keith Lee had 17 points and led the Tigers on the boards with eight rebounds.

Florida State didn't start a player over 6-foot-6. It was the Seminole's quickness that forced Memphis State into committing 22 turovers. Florida State had nine turnovers.

The victory moved Florida State ahead of Memphis State in the league standings. The Seminoles have a 14-10 record overall and are 5-5 in Metro play. Memphis State dipped to 19-5 and 4-5 in the conference.

Wichita St.....72
Illinois St. .....62

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Xavier McDaniel scored 17 points as 12th-ranked Wichita State posted a 72-62 victory over Illinois State to clinch the Missouri Valley Conference championship Saturday night.

The victory gave the Shockers, 15-1 in the conference and 23-3 overall, a three-game lead over second-place Illinois State with two games left. The Shockers are not eligible for the league playoffs nor NCAA tournament play because they are on probation.

Wichita State took the lead for good with 12:39 left in the first half when junior center Zarko Durisic hit a baseline jumper to put the Shockers up 14-13. Wichita State, paced by McDaniel's 12 first half points, led by as much as 13 late in the first half before Illinois State scored the last four points to close within nine at the buzzer, 38-29.

In the second half, Illinois State twice closed within four points before the Shockers gradually built the lead to 14 when James Gibbs, a senior guard, hit two free throws to give the Shockers a 70-56 lead with one minute to play.

The Redbirds of Illinois State fell to 12-4 in the league and 20-4 overall. Senior Center Rick Lamb had 16 points to lead Illinois State.

Ohio St.....81
Michigan.....71

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Ron Stokes scored 22 points and Tony Campbell added 21 Saturday night to lead 15th-ranked Ohio State to an 81-71 Big Ten basketball victory over Michigan.

Michigan jumped out to an early 13-5 lead, but Ohio State cut the Wolverines' advantage to 32-30 at halftime.

Six minutes into the second half, the Wolverines led 45-43, but Campbell quickly brought an end to the Wolverines' upset hopes. The Buckeyes took a 53-48 lead by outscoring Michigan 10-3 during the next three minutes with Campbell scoring seven of those points.

The Wolverines tied it 54-54 with 7:54 remaining, but the Buckeyes responded with seven unanswered points, four by Campbell, to take a 61-54 lead.

Michigan cut the advantage to 63-59 before the Buckeyes ran off seven straight points to take an insurmountable 70-59 lead.

Wallace's Shots Help Roanoke Capture Title

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School's Donnie Wallace scored the final four points of the ball game and helped the Redskins hold off Plymouth, 57-56, in the finals of the Northeastern Conference tournament last night at Roanoke.

Roanoke's girls, however, fell to Plymouth, 48-41, in their championship.

The Redskins, who won the regular season title, added the tournament championship in a tough contest. The 'Skins jumped out into a 21-17 lead in the opening period, and built to that in the second period with a 15-12 margin. That left Roanoke up, 36-29, at the half.

Plymouth, seeded second in the tournament, hung tough, however, and fought back in the third period, 17-11, and trailed by only one, 47-46, going into the final eight minutes.

In that period, Plymouth eased out into the lead before Ricky Highsmith scored with 2:58 left to cut the lead to 54-53. Then, with 1:38 showing, Wallace hit to push Roanoke ahead, 55-54, with an assist from Highsmith. Roanoke got the ball back and attempted to stall, but the Vikings intercepted a pass with 1:14 to go, missing a shot with 20 seconds.

Highsmith took the rebound and got the ball to Wallace, who scored with ten seconds to go and was fouled on the play. Wallace missed the three-point attempt, however, but Roanoke still led, 57-54. Plymouth scored with three seconds left, but after calling a time out, was unable to get the ball back.

Greg Everett led Roanoke with 21 points, while Wallace and Highsmith each added 11. Plymouth was paced by Tony Brown with 20 and Myron Bell with 17.

Plymouth's girls, who had been seeded third, knocked off the regular season champs in their showdown.

Plymouth eased out into a 13-12 lead after one period and added a 13-10 margin in the second period. That made it 26-22 at the half.

Roanoke managed to cut two off that in the third period, 10-8, as it trailed 34-32, but the Squaws were unable to pull back and were outhit, 14-9, in the final quarter as Plymouth gained the upset.

Both teams will enter the District I 3-A tournament this week at Ahoskie.

Roanoke's boys face Warren County on Wednesday at 8 p.m., while the Roanoke girls face Northampton West at 6:30 p.m. the same evening. Plymouth's boys play Friday, against Northampton West, while the girls are in action on Thursday, facing Southeast Halifax.

Walker's Signing A Tangled Web

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — On Tuesday morning, Feb. 22, Steve Earhart and Jim Valek boarded a flight from New York to Atlanta. Soon, they would bring to an end one of the greatest college football careers in history.

Earhart, an attorney for the fledgling United States Football League, and Valek, general manager of its New Jersey Generals franchise, brought proof to the University of Georgia that Herschel Walker was, by the rules of the game, no longer an amateur.

Walker, who had vowed repeatedly to return for his senior season and even hold off the pros to try out for the 1984 U.S Olympic team as a sprinter, signed the richest contract in football history — twice. The first one he tore up and then denied publicly ever seeing it; the second one he signed only after giving the rival but established National Football League oe last chance to buy his services.

The USFL, still 13 days away from its first season, had abandoned one of its charter rules: Don't take players out of college before their time.

It was neither quick nor clean.

Chet Simmons, the USFL commissioner, said it began in early January, soon after Walker gained 107 yards against Penn State in the Sugar Bowl, a 27-23 loss that cost Georgia its second national championship in three years of Herschel. It was the last college game for the NCAA's No. 3 career rusher.

"We didn't go after the young man," Simmons said Wednesday (at the Generals' training camp here). "We did not recruit him or push him."

Rather, Simmons said, Jack Manton, a lawyer from Walker's native Wrightsville, Ga., had called the USFL headquarters in New York to inquire about the possibility that Walker would play in professional sports' newest league.

"They came to us," Simmons insisted. "They gave very strong indication he wanted to play in the 1983 season. His condition was that he wanted to play in the New York area."

Simmons said he proceeded cautiously, counseling that even talking about joining the USFL now could jeopardize Walker's college eligibility.

"What we wanted to do was make sure he knew what was going on," Simmons said. "We wanted to be tough.

"We were then told that Herschel was interested in continuing those conversations."

The commissioner said he appointed Earhart to talk with Walker and Manton and to outline the procedures and possible consequences.

"I was then advised that they wanted to continue," Simmons said.

There was one problem: The USFL's rule against signing undergraduates.

Simmons asked for help from two outside lawyers. In the meantime, Walker's attorney sent the USFL a legal brief contending the rule was unconstitutional and a restraint of trade.

Simmons said he considered the Walker brief and indication that the Georgia runner would go to court.

"We felt it would be fruitless to maintain our rule as it existed," he said. "We were faced with a circumstance we couldn't defend or abide. The rule would have been found invalid."

Simmons gave the Generals, the league's only New York-area team, approval to pursue the negotiations.

"It was my decision," he said. "I advised the ownership of what I was going to do."

At that point, about three weeks ago, the negotiations began. It was then, Simmons believes now, that Walker actually forfeited his college eligibility. He had retained an agent, Manton, and began contract discussions.

"After we got the go-ahead to negotiate, we talked with Herschel's agent and we were dealing with a man who was an experienced agent of prbfessional athletes," said Chuck Fairbanks, the Generals' coach, president and part owner. "Before any discussion of any kind with anybody on our ballclub, it was made very clear to us his representatives were there for the express purpose to negotiate a contract for Herschel."

It was Monday, Feb. 14, after the annual Walter Camp dinner in New Haven, that Walker made up his mind. He called J. Walter Duncan, the Generals' principal owner in New Jersey.

"He said he would like to come down and meet with me and see what my thoughts were," Walker said later.

"There was no question at that particular time of the eligibility matter," Fairbanks said.

"Herschel decided to go pro 10 days ago," Manton said Wednesday. "He told me to go get the contract and it came back, but he had a change of heart."

Duncan, who once said there was "no way I would interrupt anyone's college career," arrived Wednesday night. Earhart was with him "to see that everything was legal, that they didn't get out of line and that I didn't get out of line," Walker said.

They met that night and again the next day.

"I saw a great deal of them,' Walker said.

Simmons said, "They got along, too. I think honestly, he (Walker) was very impressed with Mr. Duncan. I think they genuinely liked each other."

On Thursday, Duncan offered Walker a contract reportedly worth $5 million over three years, by far the richest in football history.

"There was a tentative agreement reached," Simmons said. "But there was a business condition that Herschel didn't like. It was not a question of Herschel's having second thoughts about eligibility."

Duncan told Walker to think about it and if he still had misgivings the next day, the contract would be torn up. Manton said Walker came back two hours later and voided the contract.

But that he had signed a contract to begin with, escape clause or not, was enough to forfeit his college eligibility.

The next morning, reports circulated that Walker had been offered up to $16.5 million over six years to sign with the Generals. He called a news conference on the Georgia campus in Athens to stop the talk.

He admitted meeting with Duncan but said he intended to stay for his senior season at Georgia.

"Really, there was no offer made to me," he said. "Money was never mentioned."

But what about reports he had reached agreement?

"No, I don't know anything about that," Walker replied. "All I know is that I didn't see the contract and I haven't signed because I reckoned I'd be gone if I signed."

Did he consider it seriously?

"Oh, no, I never considered it seriously."

The next morning, the Boston Globe reported that Walker had signed a contract and then backed out.

"Like I said, I haven't seen a contract," Walker said that night at the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame dinner, where he was to receive the State Amateur Athlete of the Year Award. "There are no thoughts in my mind I've broken NCAA rules. I know the rules front and back, better than anyone in the books."

Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said he believed Walker. NCAA officials said they believed Dooley and Walker and planned no special investigation.

But the USFL knew.

"We obviously were aware there was much more that had taken place in the conversations last week," Simmons said.

The Generals refused to either confirm or deny that Walker had signed a contract.

Then, over the weekend, Simmons said, the USFL was contacted again for talks to continue.

Manton, meanwhile, was telling Walker not to worry.

"I guaranteed him as a lawyer he would win his appeal if he wanted to fight it and remain at Georgia," Manton said.

But the USFL was fidgety.

"We weren't very comfortable with the statements made by the university," Simmons said. "After all the things said and written over the weekend, we felt we had to respond."

On Tuesday, Earhart and Valek were dispatched to Atlanta to meet with Dooley and other Georgia officials, "to let them know exactly what was going on."

"Vince became aware last week, but not fully aware of how in depth it had become," Simmons said.

Dooley was out of town, so Earhart and Valek met with Mike Cavan, an assistant coach who had recruited Walker three years before, and Bob Newsom, a longtime Walker family friend and advisor.

"We told Mike what we were going to do and told him of the exact circumstances," Simmons said. "There for a while I started to wonder if anybody knew what was going on."

Did Walker?

"If he didn't know, he wasn't listening."

Cavan remembers it this way:

Hole-In-One Lifts Koch Atop Doral

MIAMI (AP) — Gary Koch spiced his round of 65 with a hole in one and surged into a commanding, 4-stroke lead Saturday after 54 holes of the $300,000 Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament.

Koch, who extended his PGA Tour playing career only with a late-season surge last year, compiled a three-round total of 201, 15 strokes under par on the Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

With 18 holes to go in the chase for a $54,000 first prize, Ed Fiori held second at 205. He had a third-round 67 in the cool, cloudy, windy weather.

George Burns, still weak from a case of flu, salvaged a 70 with a sand save on the last hole and was next at 206.

Tom Purtzer and Lanny Wadkins, each with a 70, followed at 207.

Ray Floyd, the current PGA title-holder and winner of this title two of the last three years, had a 69 and topped the group at 208, eight strokes under par on the difficult course but seven strokes back of Koch.

Tied with Floyd were Cal Peete, Tom Weiskopf, Clarence Rose and second-round leader Allen Miller. Peete and Weiskopf each had a 70. Kite's round of par 72 included a double bogey from the water on the final hole. Rose shot 71 and Miller surrendered the lead with a 73.

Kock, 30, scored his second and last tour victory almost five years ago in the Citrus Open. He's been struggling since then and last season was on the verge of losing his playing rights.

"I am fighting for my playing life," he said last October before he finished fifth in the La Jet Classic and secured a place in the top 125 money-winners.

"I played well the last five tournaments of the year and made some money when I needed to make some money. That got me into exempt status for this year.

"With that good finish last year, I really felt, deep down in my heart, that this was going to be the best year I've ever had on the tour," he said.

Rudd On Poll For 400

The time trials for all 30 starting positions were delayed because of rain here Friday.

Rudd's speed was slightly slower than the 93.695 track record set by 1982 Winston Cup points champion Darrell Waltrip in February 1980. Waltrip qualified for the fourth starting spot, behind Rudd, Joe Ruttman and Terry LaBonte.

He was followed by Ron Bouchard in the fifth starting spot and Bobby Allison in the sixth position.

Allison, the winner of the Wrangler 400 here last September, will be driving a new Chevrolet Monte Carlo when the green flag drops at 1 p.m. Sunday.

"I think the conditions may give us a little advantage," said Gary Nelson, Allison's crew chief. "Even though it's a new car, it's basically the same as what we ran here last year. We came with the same weights and chassis setups we used last time."

"I feel all right, but I have felt better," he said. "I'd like to say, 'Hey, get somebody else to drive this week. I'm going to rest up.' But you can't do that."

Waltrip's car hit an inside retaining wall after skidding across the track. He was kept overnight in a hospital for observation after experiencing some loss of memory.

"I don't think there's any question in my mind that if I hadn't gotten turned around and had gone into the wall head on, it would have killed me," Waltrip said.

Ard Claims Eastern 150

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Pole-winner Sam Ard of Asheboro, N.C., led from start to finish Saturday in capturing an easy victory in the Eastern 150 Late Model Sportsman race at Fairgrounds Raceway.

Ard averaged only 40.587 mph in and Oldsmobile because of eight caution flags for 56 laps. There was one red flag after Butch Lindley ran his Pontiac into the wall.

The wall had to be repaired and Lindley was taken to a hospital, but he was released and returned to the track.

Ard earned $4,500 for his victory.

The next five finishers, all in the final lap, were Tommy Houston in a Chevrolet, Pete Silva in a Pontiac, Jack Ingram in a Pontiac, Geoff Bodine in a Pontiac and Bosco Lowe in a Pontiac.

RALEIGH — Pam Wilder had 15 points and Wake Christian used a box-and-one defense en route to a 45-29 win over Greenville Christian Academy in the title game of the District IV playoffs Saturday night.

Auburn ..... 61

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Freshman Jerry Reynolds scored 22 points and Leonard Mitchell 21 as Louisiana State took control early and rolled to an easy 87-61 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Auburn Saturday.

LSU, 16-11 overall and 7-8 in the SEC, held a 39-27 advantage at halftime and still led by 12 with 16 minutes remaining. The final score provided LSU with its biggest point spread.

Carter added 19 points and Tudor 15 in the balanced LSU scoring.

Cowens Out, Erving To Play

By The Associated Press

Dave Cowens' season-long comeback struggle in the NBA received another setback Saturday when the Milwaukee Bucks said the 34-year-old center-forward would be sidelined three to five weeks and have his right knee placed in a cast.

Cowens, who has had tendinitis in the knee for several weeks, was to have the knee placed in a cast Monday, the Bucks said.

Cowens, a former All-Star who ended a two-year retirement to join the Bucks this season, was on the injured list from Nov. 16 to Dec. 11 because of a muscle tear near the right kneecap.

Then he played in 23 consecutive games until Jan. 29, when knee problems recurred. He has missed six games since then.

Meanwhile, in Philadelphia, Julius Erving, who suffered an eye injury during the Philadelphia 76ers' game with the Chicago Bulls, will play Sunday wearing protective goggles, similar to those worn by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

He was taken out of the game and later examined by an opthalmologist.

Panthers Top Cougars In ECC

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

LITTLEFIELD — Dennis Bradley poured in 15 of his 25 points in the final period of play and led North Pitt in a rally to capture the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament championship Friday night, 69-60, over SouthWest Edgecombe.

The loss snapped an eight-game winning streak by the Cougars, who had upset regular season champ Farmville Central, 60-51, in the tournament semifinals.

North Pitt, which finished second in the regular season, had to struggle to pull out the victory, trailing by as many as six points in the third period before Bradley went to work on the basket.

In the girls' championship, SouthWest Edgecombe lost its grip on the title, losing to Charles B. Aycock, 63-30, in an overtime. It marked the first time in four years that the Lady Cougars, two-time defending state champions, have not rested atop the league.

In the contest, Aycock rallied from behind in the first half to take the lead in the late stages of the third period, only to lose it and then tie it up again. A SouthWest attempt to score at the buzzer failed, however, forcing the overtime.

In that, Sherri Williams climaxed the Aycock victory by hitting two free throws with four seconds left. Janice Draughn had missed a shot at the other end of the court attempting to put SWE into the lead and Aycock had gotten the ball out of bounds on the rebound. Williams was fouled on the inbounds play.

Both SouthWest and North Pitt shot well during the game. The Cougars, taking mostly downtown shots, ended up with 54 percent (27 of 50), while North Pitt made good on 49 percent (25 of 51).

The big difference, however, came at the foul line, where the Panthers dumped through 19 of 26 tries to only six of 15 for the Cougars. North Pitt made good on 11 of 14 tries in the final quarter when it really counted.

And a pair of Cougar mistakes at the foul line cost SouthWest four key points. Twice North Pitt players missed free throws, only to have SouthWest violate the lane. On the first of those, Keith Clark made his substitute shot and the bonus shot, giving North Pitt its first four-point lead in the opening period. The second came in the final period with North Pitt up by three, 53-50. Greg Hines, attempting a three-point play, missed and SouthWest, as it did earlier, captured the rebound. But on the substitute shot, when Hines missed, Bradley was there to capture this rebound, putting it back to up the lead to 55-50.

And SouthWest never overcame that.

The first period was a tight affair as the lead changed hands on seven occasions and the score was tied five times. Each team had two point leads until Clark's free throws with 1:14 left allowed the Panthers to push out into an 18-14 lead that held the rest of the period.

SouthWest twice cut the lead back to one before finally tying it at 22-all on a jumper by Jesse Forbes. North Pitt resumed the lead, 26-22, but the Cougars rallied again, tying it at 26-all and 28-28 before Darryl Clark's jumper at the buzzer awarded SouthWest a 30-28 lead at the end of the half.

That second period turned out to be the worst for North Pitt during the evening as the Panthers hit only five of 14 shots from the floor.

After tying it again, 30-30, in the early moments of the third period, the Panthers saw SouthWest push in the next three baskets for a 36-30 lead. Lemont Johnson started things with a shot from underneath, and Forbes added two jumpers.

Over the next few minutes, the two teams exchanged points until Hines hit back-to-back baskets to cut it back to 44-42. However, Clark again hit at the buzzer to give the Cougars a 46-42 lead going into the final period.

It was then that Bradley took over.

After Greg Briley pulled the Panthers within two with two free throws, Briley hit a jumper in the lane to tie it up. SouthWest got the lead again on a drive by Forbes, but Briley came back down and scored a three-point play to put the Panthers up, 49-48.

They never trailed again.

Bradley added another basket and after two free throws by SWE, Hines and Bradley both scored around the lane violation to push the lead to five. After another Cougar basket, North Pitt ran off six straight, including two baskets by Briley, to take a 61-52 lead with 1:09 left.

After that, it was just a question of setting the margin as SouthWest was forced to foul to try and get the ball.

In addition to Bradley's 25, Briley and Hines each added 16 points for the Panthers. SouthWest was led by Forbes with 22, while Clark and Tim Walker each had 14 and Johnson had 10.

"I thought we played a good defensive game in the second half," winning coach Cobby Deans said, "especially Charles Harris.

"Bradley had a good game offensively, defensively and on the boards. That was the key."

Deans felt that in the second quarter the Panthers got out of sync on offense. "That resulted in taking us out of our defense, too," he said. The Panthers, mostly in a zone until that point, shifted to a strict man-to-man the rest of the game, and it bothered the Cougars more.

Then, after getting the lead in the final period, Deans called a time out and had the Panthers pull it out. They moved the ball well and when they got the open shot, took it. "We wanted to keep it out and get it to Bradley if he was hot, and he was.

"The key was our defense in the third quarter. It kinda transfered to the offense. It's a strange game in that one end affects the other. And too, we made a few foul shots."

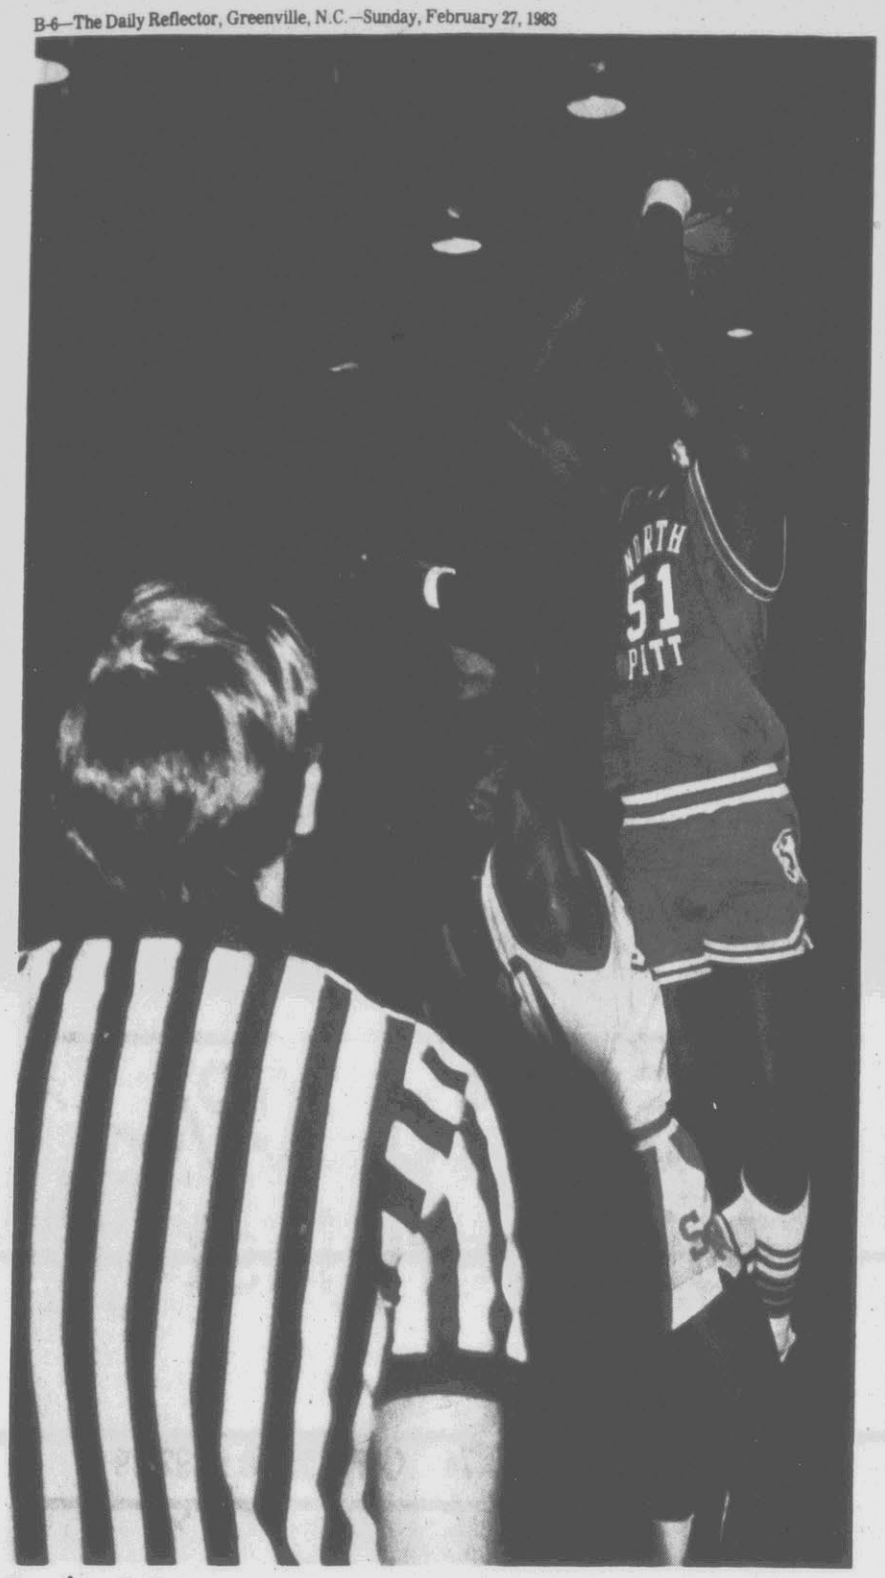

Both teams will now advance into next week's District II tournament at D.H. Conley. North Pitt, which will be seeded second for the league, will face West Craven, the third seed in the Coastal. SouthWest, seeded fourth, takes on Coastal champ Conley.

Riggins Mulling Over Offer From USFL Team

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins running back John Riggins, a free agent, is reportedly mulling over a $2.5 million, three-year guaranteed contract from the Michigan Panthers of the United States Football League.

The 33-year-old Riggins, the MVP in the Redskins' Super Bowl XVII victory over the Miami Dolphins last month, flew from Kansas City to Detroit on Friday to meet with Panthers' General Manager Jim Spavital.

The offer, which was reported in today's Washington Post, is about 2½ times more than Riggins' 1982 salary with the Washington Redskins.

According to the Post, Spavital declined to discuss exact figures in the Panthers' offer, except to say that three years for $2.5 million was high. He said Friday's offer dealt with generalities and "a lot of other things that need to be negotiated."

"I think it went real good," said Spavital, who coached Riggins to his first 1,000-yard season with the New York Jets. "We felt he was interested in the USFL and the Michigan Panthers in particular. We made him an offer and he was receptive."

Spavital said Riggins would "play where he is most comfortable."

Riggins told Spavital and Shire Rothbart, the Panthers' vice president, that he would talk to the Redskins before deciding, the Post reported.

"I think John wants to see what this new league is all about," said Redskins General Manager Bobby Beathard. "He gave us his word he'd be in here the first of next week."

Riggins is supposed to come to Redskins Park on Monday to talk to Beathard.

Bird Looking To New Deal

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird's five-year contract expires after the 1983-84 National Basketball Association season, and his attorney says the Boston Celtics' star plans to let it run out before beginning negotiations on a new one.

The attorney, Bob Woolf, also described as "ridiculous" a report that he might seek a $50 million, 10-year pact for the forward who has been in the All-Star Game in each of his NBA seasons.

"Larry's told me, 'I just want to honor our old contract and when that's finished we'll talk about a new contract,' " Woolf said in an interview Friday.

If Bird's contract, worth a reported $650,000 a year, expires and he becomes a free agent, he is likely to be bombarded by lucrative offers from other NBA clubs. But Woolf said it's too early to know what the market will be like. He also said Bird likes Boston and the Celtics.

In an article Wednesday by Steve Springer in the Orange County (Calif.) Register, Woolf was as saying, "We will ask for perhaps $3 million, $3.5 million or $4 million per season ... I am thinking in terms of a 10-year contract worth $40 million to $50 million."On Friday, Woolf denied having said that.

He said he talked with Springer during the break for the Feb. 13 NBA All-Star Game in Los Angeles."I really believe it's the height of irresponsible journalism. There's not a shred of truth to it. It's insane," he said. "I'm really outraged at this guy."

Springer was quoted Friday by the Boston Globe as saying: "I was surprised he'd talk about figures like that, but he did. I'd go to court to swear that he said it."

In rebutting the report, Woolf said: "I don't even know what the market value will be then. I think he (Bird) deserves what the market value will be."

The value of superstars took a leap when center Moses Malone signed a reported six-year, $13 million deal with the Philadelphia 76ers before this season. Woolf admitted it was possible Bird's value two years later could be $4 million a year.

However, he added, "Things may go down, too, in case they put a limit on salaries."

One issue in efforts to negotiate a new collective bargaining agreement between NBA players and management is the owners' proposal for a ceiling on team salaries.

Asked if he would seek a contract of sufficient length that it would be Bird's last in the NBA, Woolf said, "We haven't even discussed it ... There's no talk about monies or what's going to be asked or requested, so I'm hoping that it (the $50 million report) doesn't go any further than this."

Bear Grass Makes Finals

The Lady Bears continued their surge into the third period, outpointing the Lady Indians, 15-12, to take a 41-39 lead going into the final eight minutes. Bear Grass sealed the win in the fourth period with a 14-6 spurt that gave it the 10-point victory.

Vikings Hold Off Patriots For Title

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HAVELOCK — The glare of the spotlight nearly blinded top-seeded D.H. Conley to the task at hand Friday night: winning the Coastal Conference tournament title. But, the Vikings overcame a spotty performance — and a seven-point deficit — to win anyway.

Keyed by Keith Gatlin's 32 points and an 11 to 2 spurt in the last 3½ minutes, the Vikings managed to slip by fired-up West Carteret, 57-55, to capture the CC tournament title.

The win was the 11th straight for D.H. Conley, which is now 21-3 as it gets set to host the District II playoffs this week. Conley faces SouthWest Edgecombe in its district opener Wednesday at 8:30.

"We were mentally unprepared to play," D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh said. "We were more into the glamour of the tournament."

The Vikings saw an eight-point lead cut to three at halftime and West Carteret then took a 47-43 lead going into the last eight minutes. The Patriots extended their lead to 53-46 on a jumper by Donald Johnson with 3:45 remaining, but West Carteret scored just two points the rest of the game.

Arthell Ruffin turned a five-second call and a walk into two jumpers to narrow the lead to 53-50 with 2:53 left. Alvin Clemons then hit a pair of free throws and Gatlin hit a short jumper to give DHC a 54-53 lead.

West Carteret managed to regain the lead on two free throws by Rodney Collins, but Gatlin hit three of four free throws to put DHC up 57-55 with 35 seconds to go.

Cox missed the front end of a one-and-one with seven seconds left. But Johnson missed an off-balanced 15-foot jumper at the buzzer, giving the Vikings the win and their second tournament title in as many years in the league.

"The key on offense was when we put Arthell in and he hit two straight. Keith posted low and that opened it up outside for Arthell," Marsh said after seeing his team beat the Patriots in the tournament title game for the second straight year.

"We never really got into the flow of the game," he continued. "We were not moving very well and my postman almost refused to move."

The Vikings were saved, however, by an aggressive full-court press that turned into a half-court trap against the West Carteret stall in the last period. Said Marsh: "We worked on our defense against the stall this week. After they broke the press we kept after 'em. We never slacked off (in the final period). That's what saved us."

West Carteret coach Billy Widgeon agreed. "We didn't handle the pressure well at times in the fourth quarter," he said. "But I thought we played real good. We had a chance to get run out early and held in there."

The Patriots, now 17-7 heading into the districts Wednesday night at 7 o'clock against Ayden-Grifton, were also hurt by some crucial calls in the final period — nearly all of which had a usually restrained Widgeon off the bench to protest the calls.

Widgeon declined comment other than to say, "We deserved to win."

DHC hit 19 of 23 free throws compared to five of eight for West Carteret.

The Patriots were led by Johnny Potter with 16 points. David Yancey chipped in 12 and Collins 10.

The game was barely 30 seconds old when DHC's starters found themselves on the bench. "At that point I picked up that they weren't into it," Marsh said. "I told them that this was the championship and they better get into it."

The starters returned with the Patriots ahead 5-0, but two buckets by Leon Cox and two long jumpers and two free throws by Gatlin gave the Vikings a 14-9 lead going into the second period. West Carteret scored just two points in the final 5:55 of the quarter.

A layup by Gatlin with 6:40 left in the half pushed the DHC lead to 18-10, but Jeff Patten canned a jumper and converted a turnover into a three-point play to make it 18-15.

A 25-foot jumper by Gatlin from the right upped the lead to 26-19 with 3:18 to go, but the Patriots cut the gap to 30-27 as they took advantage of five Conley turnovers in the final three minutes.

West Carteret used its running game to outscore Conley, 10-5, midway the third period for a 43-39 lead. Potter maneuvered inside for four buckets in the first five minutes and both Yancey and Collins — WC's two guards — had two layups in the spurt.

"We ran real good for a while," Widgeon said. "Maybe we should have kept it up."

Said Marsh: "We relaxed on defense in the third quarter."

DHC closed within two, but Patten hit a wide-open layup the buzzer to give the Patriots a 47-43 lead which they extended to seven in the fourth quarter before the Vikings rallied.

Lady Hawks Nip Valkyries

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HAVELOCK — D.H. Conley has won many a game this season with scoring spurts in the third period, but the Valkyries lost a game and more Friday evening in the third quarter.

North Lenoir outscored DHC 15 to 4 the first five minutes of the third period and held on despite losing the lead late in the game to come away with a 51-50 victory and the Coastal Conference tournament championship.

"The third quarter was the key," DHC coach Joy James said. "I think it was the difference in the ballgame.

"They knew we've played well in the third quarter and I think they were well prepared for us."

Conley led by a point at the half, but North Lenoir scored seven straight for a 31-25 lead. The Lady Hawks extended the lead to 39-29 with 2:49 to go before the Valkyries began to chip away.

DHC cut the gap to 41-35 at the end of the third period on two Irish Barnhill jumpers and sliced it to 45-43 on a jumper by Darlene Cannon with 5:07 to left the game.

Mechio Kornegay then drove the lane for a short jumper to give Conley a 48-47 lead with 2:18 left. Two free throws by Veronica Chapman put the Lady Hawks up 49-48. After Cannon missed a jumper, Chapman hit both ends of a one-and-one to make it 51-48 with 32 seconds remaining.

A 15-foot jumper by Cannon cut the lead to one with 16 seconds to go. Chapman missed a one-ane-one with eight seconds remaining, but Cannon did likewise six seconds later — shooting an airball — as the Valkyries fell short in the third meeting between the league's co-champs.

North Lenoir, now 20-4, was led by Chapman with 23 points.

"Chapman makes the difference in their ballclub," James said. "When she is having a good game they're hard to beat."

The win gives North Lenoir the No. 1 seed from the CC going into the District II playoffs this week at Conley. North Lenoir plays North Pitt, the No. 4 seed from the Eastern Carolina Conference, Tuesday at 7 o'clock in round one of the districts.

Conley, now 22-3, is the CC's No. 2 seed. DHC meets Southern Nash, the ECC's No. 3 seed, Wednesday at 5:30 in its district opener.

The game started with both teams playing cautious and tentative. North Lenoir led 8-2 midway through the period, but a pair of buckets by Barrett inside and jumpers by Barnhill and Cannon put the Valkyries ahead 13-12 going into period two.

Cannon's jumper from the left of the lane upped DHC's bulge to 19-14 early in second period and the Valkyries extended the lead to 25-18 with 1:43 remaining in the half.

But, North Lenoir the final six points of the period to slice the lead to one (25-24) at halftime.

The Lady Hawks continued their run into the third quarter, scoring seven in a row to grab a 31-25 lead. Chapman had five of the seven points. A bucket and a pair of free throws by Dee Phillippe upped the North Lenoir lead to 39-29, but the Valkyries rallied within six at the end of the quarter and managed to take the lead in the final period before faltering at the end.

"Like I told the girls," James said afterward. "If we had to lose one this was the one to lose."

Lady Knights Gain Finals

RALEIGH — Greenville Christian's girls' basketball team advanced to the finals of the district Christian School tournament in Raleigh Friday night with a 39-35 victory over Wilson Christian.

GCA's boys, however, bowed out, losing to Wake Christian, 52-35.

In the girls' game, GCA inched out into a 9-6 lead in the first period. Both teams then warmed up and each hit 16 points in the second period. That left GCA in a slim 25-22 lead at intermission.

Wilson charged ahead in the third quarter, holding the Lady Knights to only two points, while scoring seven. That left Wilson up, 29-27, going into the final period.

In that, however, GCA rallied, outscoring Wilson, 12-6, to push ahead and claim the victory.

GCA was led by Stephanie Brown with 13 points while Kathy Vernelson added 12. Wilson was paced by Melinda Deans with 14 and Luanne Lane with 11.

Now 9-8, GCA was to face Wake Christian in the finals of the tournament Saturday night.

GCA's boys fell behind early, and were down 12-8 at the end of the first period. They stuck close, however, and after a 13-12 second period, trailed by 25-20 at the half.

Wake was able to inch a little further out with an 11-7 margin in the third quarter. That boosted the lead out to 36-27 as the final period opened. In that, Wake outhit the Knights, 16-8, to win going away.

James Buffaloe led Wake with 14 points while Joey Cockrell added 10. Dan Andrews had 11 to lead GCA.

Walker: Old 34 Gone...

The 6-foot-1 running back said the knee he bruised two weeks ago running up and down hotel stairs while in Connecticut for a banquet was fine. And he said he may be a little lighter than he was in college, where he was listed at 222 pounds.

"I'm not going to be looking back," Walker replied when asked if he had any regrets about leaving Georgia just 823 yards short of Tony Dorsett's all-time NCAA career rushing record.

"If you look back it means you're lingering, it means you're wandering and you're not going to perform at your best." He said that "if guys go out and give 110 percent, I'll give 115."

Walker said he probably would have turned pro even if he had not forfeited his final year of college eligibility by signing a Generals contract on Feb. 17 and then changing his mind a few hours later. He re-signed last Wednesday for three years at an estimated $5 million.

"I lost my enthusiasm as a sophomore," he said. "But then I broke my thumb (in preseason practice last fall) and saw the guys playing without me and my enthusiasm came back. But you get tired of certain things, and when you get tired you're not going to do your best and give it 100 percent.

"I made the decision that I need to do something else. You can get in a rut where your talents start to decrease and you have to do something new.

"The money is great to have, but I love the enjoyment of the game. I love the enjoyment of getting out there and competing and doing something in life."

He also said — perhaps facetiously, but with a straight face — that he might have been ineligible throughout his college career.

"I reckon I've been ineligible since my freshman year because a lot of pro teams talked to me before I went to school (Georgia)," he said. "When I came out of high school I talked about money, and when you talk about money you're ineligible." He did not elaborate.

Walker also hinted that he feared a possible injury could have cost him a lucrative pro contract had he returned for his senior year at Georgia.

"I'm not proud of it and I'm not going to regret it," he said of his signing. "I'm not going to live anyone else's life. If I die, it will be me who decides whether I go to heaven. I'm emotionally ready for anything if I'm willing to give it the effort and God is behind me."

Walker again apologized for the news conference in Athens, Ga., on Feb. 18 at which he denied that he had signed a pro contract.

"I've made many mistakes and I've suffered because the media has taken the approach that Herschel Walker shouldn't make mistakes," he said. "After signing, I made one big mistake that counts for 100.

"But to me, after the contract was off there was really no signing. If I called Mr. Duncan, the contract was supposed to be off. But I knew before I signed it that my NCAA eligibility was gone."

Lady Bucs Triumph...

Denkler, both of whom played almost 12 minutes of the second half with four fouls.

"Fran Hooks had four fouls with 14 minutes to go, and that's a credit to her playing the rest of the game without getting a foul," Andruzzi said. "In the second half, we played tentative because we didn't have the bench to come out. The girls kept things under control, though, and we played smart basketball. We controlled the boards and showed intensity defensively."

The game started slowly. Neither team scored until Denkler hit a jumper with 3:10 gone. Bragg's jumper made it 4-0 with 15:08 to go. George Mason did not score until Linda Jones' basket cut the lead to 4-2 with 13:55 left in the first half.

Denkler's 12 first-half points helped ECU stretch its lead to 37-28 at the half.

The Lady Pirates, behind Denkler, who scored 22 points in the second half, pushed their lead to as many as 11 in the second half before George Mason rallied to tie it late.

"We did not run our offense as we are capable of, but we did a good job of moving the ball up court," Andruzzi said. "We could have done a much better job shooting inside."

Added Andruzzi: "This brings us to 13-11 something I think is credible to our team, with the injuries and schedule we faced. It was George Mason's last game of the season and their senior's last game. It's always tough to play those kind."

Pirates Beat Seahawks...

couple of minutes later, the lead narrowed to seven, 55-48 on a jumper by Shriver, but the Pirates then scored the next four points to raise it to 11 again.

The Seahawks didn't get it back under nine again until Anderson hit with 1:17 to go, 63-56, but the Pirates outhit them the remaining minute-plus, 7-4, to wrap up their 14th victory of the season.

East Carolina was led by Edwards with 19 points, while Green picked up 17, Peartree had 14 and Wright, 12.

Williams led Wilmington with 16 points, while Shriver had 12, Prudhoe had 11 and Anderson, 10.

ECU finished the game with 61.4 percent from the field, while holding the 'Hawks to only 41.1. The Pirates also shot well from the line, 84.2 percent hitting 16 of 19 shots.

Wilmington did dominate the boards, holding a 30-25 advantage, thanks to 12 rebounds by Williams, best in the game. ECU was led by Edwards with eight.

The Pirates will close out the regular season on Thursday, hosting Penn State-Behrend. Harrison has dubbed that night as "Senior Night," honoring Green and Thom Brown, the only two seniors on the team.

"I'm happy for our kids for having a winning season," Harrison said. "Everyone counted 'em out before the season started. It just proves a lot of things can we done."

Rampants Bow In Season Finale, 76-65

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School's boys went down to defeat for the eighth straight time Friday night, bowing to Elizabeth City's Northeastern High School, 76-65.

Ironically, Northeastern was the last team the Rampants defeated, 74-62, in a meeting at Greenville. The Rampants thus went through the Big East Conference's second round without a victory.

Rose's girls, however, snapped a two-game losing streak with a 49-39 victory and finished the season tied for four place in the league standings. Rose's girls finished the year at 7-7 in the league and 9-12 overall.

The loss by the boys, however, pushed them into last place in the league standings and will send them up against Rocky Mount, which won the Big East title Friday night, in this week's conference tournament. That game will be played either Monday or Tuesday at Rocky Mount High School.

Rose, which went into the game tied with Northeastern for seventh place in the league standings, finishes up with a 3-11 Big East mark and a 4-16 overall record. Northeastern advances to seventh place all alone with a 4-10, 12-10 record.

Rose started off well enough, building up a 23-18 lead in the first period of the game. But they were unable to hold it as turnovers mounted and the Rampants were unable to get themselves in control. Northeastern outscored the Rampants, 18-12, during the second quarter, inching out to a 36-35 lead at the end of the half.

The game remained close, however, as the two battled through the third period. In that, Northeastern managed a 15-14 margin, extending its lead to 51-49 as the final period got underway. Rose then fell by the wayside in the closing minutes as the Eagles outhit them, 25-16, to post the victory and avoid last place.

Jamie Turner led Northeastern's scoring with 22 points, while Michael Barcliff added 15 and Cliff Shaw had 14. Rose was led by Tony Clemons with 18, Donnell Lee with 16 and Carlton Wilson with 15.

In contrast, the Rampettes shot away in the first period, building up a good lead throughout the first half — then held on to take the victory. By the end of the first quarter, Rose had gone ahead, 12-5. They followed that up with a 14-7 margin in the second quarter, giving the Rampettes a 26-12 lead at the half.

Northeastern proved it would not lay down, however, battling back in the second half. The Lady Eagles outscored Rose in both of the quarters, 14-12, in the third and 13-11, in the fourth. However, it wasn't enough to overcome the big Rampette lead of the half and Rose took the victory.

Alma Atkinson led Rose with 16 points, while Katrina Griffin had 13 to lead Northeastern.

Northeastern closes out the season in seventh place with a 3-11 mark and is 10-12 overall.

In a drawing held Saturday to break the three-way tie for fourth, Rose drew sixth seeding and will travel to Wilson Hunt on Tuesday.

JV Game: Northeastern 94, Rose 58.

Meet Was Family Affair

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol and Carl Lewis made it All-Family Day at the USA-Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Virtually flying away from the field, Carl Lewis set an American indoor record in winning the women's long jump at 21-5¼ at the start of Friday's activities in this prestigious day-long event at Madison Square Garden. Lewis' jump eclipsed the American record of 21-4¾ set by Martha Watson in 1973 and equalled in 1976 by Watson and Kathy McMillan.

Not to be outdone by his sister, Carl Lewis recorded a rare double victory at night, first winning the long jump and then the 60-yard dash in a breeze.

"I felt I was in charge of the race from the first step," said the 21-year-old Lewis after becoming the first athlete to win a sprint-long jump double in the USA-Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships in 38 years. "I came out of the blocks well, accelerated and just dictated this race."

Lewis' performance in the sprint — a meet-record 6.04 seconds — was all the more remarkable the way he was feeling. He had been suffering with a "a bad chest cold" and as late as Thursday, was examined by a doctor and told to use an inhalator and take antiobiotics for the rest of the day.

In the long jump, Lewis — the only athlete ever to clear 28 feet indoors — took only one jump and recorded a modest 27 feet, 4¾ inches. It was good enough to win, but it wasn't good enough to satisfy the crowd at Madison Square Garden. Some booed when it was announced that the Willingboro, N.J., resident was passing his last five tries.

"I heard the boos," Lewis said. "But I knew what I had to do. I needed all the rest I could get for the sprint. I realize the fans wanted to see me jump. But I'm sure the ones who were disappointed then were pleased later when I came back to win the sprint."

The jeers turned to cheers when Lewis whipped a field in the 60 that included James Butler, the world's top-ranked 200-meter runner, and Ron Brown, the former Arizona State University star. It was only the second such double in the meet's 95-year history. The only other athlete to do it was Barney Ewell in 1945.

Meanwhile, Stephanie Hightower set a world indoor best in the women's 60-yard high hurdles. The top-ranked American for the past three years, Hightower just clobbered a first-class field that included Candy Young and Benita Fitzgerald.

Hightower's time of 7.36 seconds clipped .01 of a second off the world indoor best of 7.37 she had shared with Young, set last year.

"I just ran it — I wasn't thinking about anything but running," said Hightower, who admitted that she had been distracted by some unspecified personal problems of late. "I wanted to make it a clear-cut victory. I put everything else out of my mind."

In the men's mile, Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan continued his mastery over American record holder Steve Scott and scored his sixth victory without a loss this season, running the mile in 3:58.50.

"I beat Scott last week in a fast race and this week I beat him in a slow race," Coghlan said. "Scott is going to have to get a computer to figure out how to beat Eamonn Coghlan. The strategy was to hold back so long that Scott would not know when I was going to go. The whole race I could tell that Scott and (Ray) Flynn were working on a plan. I was boxed in but I yelled to (Ross) Donoghue, who was a gentleman and let me through."

SPORT LINE

TO THE SPORTS EDITOR:

I am a '69 graduate of ECU and have been a proud sports fan until this past week following the ECU-Richmond game. Although I have not had the benefit of reading the Daily Reflector's account of the free throw incident, but if what happened as reported in the Richmond Times-Dispatch is true, than I am ashamed and disappointed that Coach (Charlie) Harrison or (ECU AD) Dr. Ken Karr did not immediately offer the "win" to Richmond following the game when the error was acknowledged. The Times-Dispatch report indicated Woody Peele, the official scorer, simply didn't see and record a free throw by a Richmond player, and that further, he refused to acknowledge the mistake when brought to his attention by both ECU and Richmond officials during the game.

As it has been reported, this was an unintentional error and in fact Richmond won the game in regulation. Coach Harrison was quoted as saying he and his players feel they won the game. As a former athlete in tennis, I cannot understand how anyone, in good conscious, could accept a victory when it clearly and without question belongs to the opposition.

Coach Harrison and his players have done a fine job this year and have several good wins. However, the Richmond game was not won the court by ECU, and Coach Harrison and ECU officials have committed a serious error in judgment if they do not step forward and award the victory to Richmond before Commissioner Ben Carnevale does.

ECU stood to gain a lot of publicity out of this unfortunate incident and so far all of it has been bad. This can only serve to hurt the school and athletic program. ECU should show integrity and class by refusing the win.

Bob Vick
Richmond, Va.

(Editor's note: Mr. Vick's comments contain two errors. Despite what was written in the Times-Dispatch, the fact that the free throw was missed was not pointed out to Mr. Peele until the end of regulation time. NCAA rules provide for a certain time period — until the second following dead ball — for a correctable error, such as this, to be corrected, after that the officials may declare the book — in error or not — official. This was what occurred at the end of regulation time. Mr. Carnavale has noted this and has therefore, no jurisdiction in the outcome. It is up to ECU officials to decide whether they will do the "moral" thing (forfeit) or the "legal" (leave things as they are). It appears a "Catch 22" situation: ECU officials feel they will anger one group or the other no matter their decision — due sometime this week.

Michigan's Carter Signs With USFL

BLOOMFIED HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Michigan wide receiver Anthony Carter signed a contract Saturday to play with the Michigan Panthers of the United States Football League.

Carter, a 5-foot-11, 160-pounder who was a three-time All-American, signed a contract believed to be worth about $2 million over four years.

It also was believed that the first year of Carter's contract was guaranteed.

"It was my duty to secure Anthony's future and Anthony's future is secure," said Bob Woolf, the sport attorney who is Carter's agent. "The first check is in his pocket."

Carter said that he chose to cast his lot with the USFL rather than wait for the National Football League draft of college players in April mainly because he wanted to remain in Michigan.

"People here have been very good to me," Carter, a native of Riviera Beach, Fla., said at a news conference. "The Panthers also impressed me. They gave me all the time I needed to sign."

Carter said the signing of Georgia tailback Herschel Walker earlier this week had no bearing on his decision to join the fledgling league.

"I'd planned on signing on Tuesday," Carter said. "However, Herschel's signing opened the door for a lot of guys to sign with the USFL."

Jim Spavital, the Panthers' general manager, said Carter would not begin practicing with the team until next week. The Panthers are scheduled to break camp in Daytona Beach, Fla., on Feb. 28, and Carter will attend a team meeting back in Michigan the evening of March 2, Spavital said.

Carter's first appearance on the practice field in a Panthers' uniform will be the following day, March 3, either in the Pontiac Silverdome or at a outdoor practice field adjacent to the Silverdome.

BOONE (AP) — Appalachian State University Coach Jim Morris' baseball players say they like working out to the tune of actress Jane Fonda's aerobics record.

"I thought it might flop, but I really didn't know," said Morris, who exercises along with the players two times a week. "We thought we'd give it a try."

Morris' wife, Beth, leads the group through the exercises to the sound of Ms. Fonda's sultry voice.

"I was a little bit concerned," she said. "I wasn't sure if it was something I would have to sell them on or not. But I was real suprised with their receptiveness right from the first day."

"Everybody thinks it's something that girls mostly do," said third baseman Fred Davis. "And we wondered about it when we started. But it's really a lot of fun. It works you harder than any other kind of exercise. It has really helped my endurance and flexibility."

"I think it's really good, especially since we can't get outside (because of bad weather)," sophomore Richard Bosley said. "It helps us with flexibility and endurance and that's real good, especially for pitchers. It has helped me lose weight."

Bosley said exercising as a group has helped team unity, especially since the club hasn't been able to get outside workouts.

"We don't get to work together as a team much, and this helps you to get to know each other," he said. "We have a lot of new guys this year and it helps you to be together."

"It's a combination of a couple of things," Morris said. "We're conditioning and we're all together. I think it has really helped us. It's a better way to condition. It really helps the arms and legs and I hope we won't have as many pulled muscles and sore arms. Beth really dos a good job with it."

Pitcher Kent Alexander says the only complaint he has is with the teacher's ability.

"She sort of makes you feel bad because she's so good," he said.

Says Walker Broke Pact

ATLANTA (AP) — J. Walter Duncan Jr., speaking out "to clear up a few things" about his employment of Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker, said Friday that Walker initiated discussions with the USFL's New Jersey Generals, and signed — then broke — a contract to play.

Duncan, the owner of the Generals, added that no other United States Football League team contributed to signing Walker, and said he doesn't know why Walker made conflicting statements to the press.

"It's too bad there's been so much hesitation to this," Duncan said in an interview detailed in today's editions of The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal. "I think he was just confused."

Duncan said that shortly before Walker ran in the Millrose Games track meet on Jan. 28, his attorney-adviser, Jack Manton, approached the USFL and said Walker wanted to play in the New York area. Word was relayed to Duncan and the negotiations began.

"Herschel seemed to be relying heavily on Mr. Manton," the Oklahoma oil millionaire said. "I never even considered Walker as a possibility until I heard this. It had never entered my mind."

Several college coaches have reacted angrily at the Generals for signing an undergraduate — after the league said no team would — but Duncan adamantly maintained that the first acts by Walker and Manton were against National Collegiate Athletic Association rules, and stripped the Georgia tailback of his collegiate eligibility.

"His eligibility was not a matter for me to decide," Duncan said. "Apparently he had little feelings that this had an effect, because the actions of Herschel and his attorney were prima facie NCAA violations.

"I can only say he (Walker) should have known it. He didn't make any direct statements to me."

Walker ultimately signed with the Generals last Wednesday, after the University of Georgia, confirming that he had negotiated with the team, stripped him of his eligibility.

Published estimates of the value of Walker's three-year contract have ranged as high as $16.5 million, but "that is grossly exaggerated," Duncan said.

He said estimates of a $1.5 million signing bonus and $3.9 million for three seasons are much closer to the truth.

The contract is fully guaranteed, he said, and Walker also has a partnership in a yet-to-be-drilled oil well in Oklahoma.

46th NATIONAL WILDLIFE FEEK — As an American citizen, you are a part owner of 740 million acres of this country's public lands — about one-third of the United States.

This year, National Wildlife Week will focus on the importance of these public lands. "This Is Your Land — Public Lands Belong to All of Us" is the theme for wildlife week, scheduled for March 20-26. It is the 46th such annual educational effort by the National Wildlife Federation.

Country singer Loretta Lynn is 1983's wildlife week chairperson. She has donated time to making radio and television public service announcements, singing Woody Guthrie's song, "This Land Is Your Land," and talking about the need for protecting the public estate.

By focusing on public lands, this year's wildlife week promotes an understanding of the importance of public lands to the nation's wildlife, and the enjoyment these lands provide for hunters, hikers, boaters, campers and outdoor enthusiasts.

BARRIER ISLANDS BILL PASSED — Good environmental news from Washington is rare these days, but the recent passage of the Coastal Barrier Resources Act is a sterling exception. This landmark legislation prohibits federal expenditures which encourage development on barrier islands and beaches. Over 600 miles of beach in 15 Atlantic and Gulf Coast states are included on the legislation.

In these designated areas, federal flood insurance will not be issued after July 1, 1983, and home mortgages and business loans will not be available for the construction of new roads, bridges, water and sewer lines, and other structures.

"Spending on the barrier islands is now prohibited by the culprit that has been most responsible for their foolhardy development — the federal government," said Jay Hair, executive vice-president of the National Wildlife Federation, and a former professor of zoology at N.C. State University. "Each year, the government has spent almost a quarter-billion dollars to support construction of facilities that encourage development of these fragile areas. The federal government has also spent more than $43 million in the last three years on 6,400 flood-insurance claims for storm damage to property in 90 barrier communities.

"Barrier islands and beaches are in a constant state of flux to withstand the immense power of ocean storms. Development of these areas make little sense — human life may be endangered, and damage to property is inevitable. In fact, attempts to reduce beach erosion in these areas — usually to save a handful of expensive homes that never should have been built on the beach — often worsen erosion problems. However, barrier islands, beaches, and associated wetlands offer valuable habitat for fish and shellfish, animals, waterfowl and shore birds. These areas should be left in a natural state."

Eight areas in North Carolina — encompassing 52 miles of beach — are included in the act. These areas include portions of Currituck Banks (8 miles), Onslow Beach complex (10.25 miles), Topsail Beach (6.25 miels), Lea Island (5 miles), Wrightsville Beach (1 mile), and Masonboro Beach (9.5 miles).

ANOTHER RECORD-BREAKING YEAR — Ducks Umlimited, the world's largest waterfowl conservation organization, has just completed another record fund-raising year with more than $35.7 million raised.

"A lot of people say that, considering the economy, our dollar growth was rather remarkable," says Dale E. Whitesell, DU executive vice-president. "But we don't make excuses because excuses don't raise any ducks. We expect to exceed $40 million this year."

FISHING TOURNAMENT SET — The 7th Annual Carolina Croaker and Marlin Club Small Boat Offshore fishing tournament will be held July 3-6 out of Hatteras. The tournament is open to any boat 26'6" overall of smaller. Last year's tournament was a tremendous success, with a 180 lb. blue marlin taking top honors in the billfish category. Interested fisherman should contact Orman Whichard, 756-7779, Dennis Alexander, 756-7358, or Gene Rackley, 756-9145.

LOCAL NEWS — George Sugg of Grifton reported the first hickory shad was caught on hook-and-line the end of last week. It's time to go fishing!

Darrin Nelson of Stanford set an NCAA record in career all-purpose yardage with 6,885 yards.

Compulsory routines will be performed by all gymnasts on Saturday during two sessions. Class II will perform from 10:45 a.m. until 1:30 p.m., with Class I performances at 3:45 to 6:30 p.m. Sunday, optional routines will be performed in two sessions: Class II from 9:45 a.m. until 12 noon, and Class I, 2 until 4 p.m.

She has placed first in all-around competition in three of the four previous sectionals, placing second in the other. Kerri Moreno, 13, is a Goldsboro resident in her third year with the Rosettes and her fourth year in the sport. She has consistantly placed in the top finishers in floor exercises and beam, finishing first in both events at the last sectional at Carrboro. Her highest all-around score is 62.75, and she placed third in the past two sectionals in all-around.

Johnson, 14, is in her sixth year with the sport, her fourth with the Rosettes. Her top events are the uneven bars and the vault.

Sumrell's Homemade Sausage

Makin' Breakfast Taste Good The Country Way

Cranking

Even though Sumrell uses modern techniques when making his country sausage, his stuffer still has to be turned by hand.

Ever since the discovery of grits, good Southern folk have known that no morning is complete without the sizzlin' aroma of homemade country sausage or ham frying in the pan. And no one knows that any better than Joe Sumrell of Ayden.

Sumrell, a life-long resident of Pitt County, began making his mouth-watering sausage six years ago as a side line that turned into a very lucrative full-time job.

But he says he doesn't really consider it a job, in fact almost any time you catch a glimpse of him working around his shop he has a smile on his face.

"We have people come in here from all over the United States that deal with us. Everytime they come through this way they buy 20 to 25 pounds of slab bacon, hams and sausage and carry it back with them," he said.

Several kinds of sausage roll out of Sumrell's press, including stuffed, patties, German, Italian, Polish and tom thumbs — all come in a variety of smoked, air dried and fresh.

Sumrell said the recipe he uses was handed down to him by his parents who used to make home-made sausage every winter. "I can remember when I was a little boy, Mother and Dad grinding that old sausage. I used to help them and I remember that machine almost broke our arms and necks when we tried to turn the handle. But things have improved so much since that time," he said.

Today, he uses a three-foot high press to fill his sausage casings and although the machine still has to be hand cranked, Sumrell said he can fill twice as many skins in less time than ever before.

The ingredients that go into Sumrell's Country Sausage aren't a secret in the strictest sense of the word, but his wife, Loys, says no one can really make it taste right except Joe.

"Oh, he has it written down on a piece of paper right down under the counter, but when he makes it he adds in a handful more of this or that or less, until it comes out tasting just right," Mrs. Sumrell said.

Sumrell will admit to using two kinds of pepper in his sausage, however. "We use black and red, the flaked kind, to make the sausage taste just right," he said.

Sumrell is particularly proud of his country hams, even though his store is named after his sausage. Without any encouragement he will take you into his smoke house where rows and rows of gorgeous golden brown hams hang from the ceiling.

"You see the hickory smoke turns the hams just the right shade, and it sure does make them taste good," he says.

According to Sumrell, his is the only sausage and ham store in this area that makes sausage and cures hams the old way. "As far as I know I'm the only one in Pitt County, but I wouldn't want to say for sure, because someone else might be doing it," he said.

None of the Sumrell family sausage is sold to local grocery stores. "No, I don't sell it to anyone else except customers," he said, "but people keep coming back for our product so I guess we are doing it right."

"We just love to hear people come in and say it's the best sausage they've ever eaten and come back again," Mrs. Sumrell added.

Sumrell's brother, Ray Brooks Sumrell, also helps make sausage and once supplied pigs for the business. "When we first got started that was a big bonus, having Ray and my other brother raising the pigs, but they both got out of the business so we buy our hogs from local farmers now," Sumrell said.

Horror stories about the ingredients of sausage just don't apply to his product, Sumrell says. "We only use the parts we would eat ourselves. We don't use organs, the kernels (poison-removing knobs in a hog's neck), the bones or skin. We do use hams, shoulders, sides, but not the feet or intestines nor stomach," he said.

Sumrell said he doen't know if any of his children will carry on the 100-year-old tradition of Sumrell sausage, but that doesn't bother him too much. "You see, the recipe is written down and if they ever want it, they can read it right off the paper," he said.

The Products

Joe Sumrell takes a break from cranking the sausage stuffer to explain the variety of products he offers. Hanging in the background are hickory-smoked country hams, slab bacon and smoked country sausage.

Customers

Loys Sumrell waits by the counter as customers decide what they will buy. In the far left corner is one of the Sumrell's "best customers," former state legislator Ned Delmar of Oriental. "He drives up every few weeks or so and stocks up," Mrs. Sumrell said.

Debbie's Dancing Lights Fire

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Debbie Allen, the dynamic star of TV's "Fame" series, has America dancing and prancing again to the driving beat of her volatile choreography.

And now she's caught the British up in a terpsichorean frenzy, shopping for leg warmers and leotards.

Debbie recently returned from a brief tour of England with cast members and dancers from the series in "Fame Live in Concert," a dazzling hour-and-a-half stage show that tore to tatters traditional British reserve.

The American dance troupe was given roaring ovations at 10 performances in Brighton, London and Birmingham, turning away 55,000 disappointed fans during the holiday visit.

"You would have thought we were a big rock group or something," said the effervescent Debbie, her pitch-black eyes alive with electricity.

"'Fame' is the number one show in England right now. And our album is at the top of their charts. I wish we were doing as well in this country. I don't know what our ratings problems are over here."

It was suggested perhaps "Fame's" time slot, opposite the popular "Magnum, P.I." series, was a factor.

Debbie gave the matter only a moment's reflection before replying, "Of course that's the reason. It's that raggedy old ugly, mean Tom Selleck!

"I saw Tom at the Emmy awards last year and I let him know how I felt. I told him, 'Tom, I'm over here throshing, spinning, kicking and sweating to make our show go. And all you do is walk out of the Hawaiian ocean in a little wet bathing suit and the viewers go "click" and switch to your show.'

"Tom just laughed and told me 'Fame' is a great show and that he watches us regularly. I asked him how he could do that and see his show at the same time. He said 'Fame' is on Fridays instead of Thursdays in Hawaii so he sees both."

Debbie is the hyperkinetic force behind her series, just as it was Debbie who organized the London troupe.

She produced, directed, choreographed and starred in the show, which co-starred Carlo Imperato, Erica Gimpel, Gene Anthony Ray, Lee Curren and Lori Singer from "Fame's" cast along with 10 of its regular 15 dancers.

It's been truly said Debbie has put the passion back in dancing. Resting between rehearsals on an MGM sound stage, Debbie brought to mind the harnessed energy of an Indianapolis race car idling on the track.

She is convinced both the movie and TV version of "Fame" have made vital contributions to the resurgence of popular dance in the United States.

"Make no mistake, there's a big dance revival in this country," she said. "I've been told dance school enrollment and classes are up 20 to 40 percent in most places — in the middle of the recession.

"There's a new respect for dancing. And there should be. Rhythmic stomping was man's first form of artistic expression, his stamp on planet Earth."

Not since the great tap dance craze of the 20s and 30s, inspired by movie musicals, has dancing been so popular. Nor have there been as many stars since the heyday of Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly.

"Stars are the key," Debbie said. "Dancing always does well when the public can see stars up there on the stage or screen hoofing it up.

"'Fame' has made a big contribution to bringing back the dance. The stars today are Baryshnikov, Nureyev, Twyla Tharp, Ben Vereen, Gregory Hines and movies like 'All That Jazz' and 'The Turning Point.'

"Broadway has done its part with shows like '42nd Street,' 'A Chorus Line' and 'Evita.' But even so, Broadway isn't as visible to the public as a weekly TV show. 'Fame' is seen by 20 million people or more every week."

Debbie said today's dance is more earthy, energetic and acrobatic than the old movie musical offerings.

"We sweat," Debbie said mischievously. "We let out all the stops. We're full of energy, drive and self-expression. It makes us feel free and it has the same effect on the audiences.

"Most dancers are in better condition and better trained than they used to be in the old days. The competition is much greater, so we have to really get out there and pour it on."

Farm Bureau Has Picnic

The Pitt County Farm Bureau held a family picnic for members and guests Thursday night. The program for the evening was given by Curtis Alls.

Guests were received by Charles and Margie Hart. The welcome was extended by Alma Worthington and the invocation was given by Kirkland. James Galloway gave a brief welcome.

Members of the planning committee were Mamie Smith, Lucille Dilda, Christine Bell, Annette Corbett, Clara Baker, Erline Wynne and Lois Briley.

Understanding Love Is Important

By MEL REISNER
Associated Press Writer

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Too many couples don't understand the meaning of romance, says a researcher who thinks that people who know why they fall in love are more likely to stay that way.

A clear understanding of what constitutes mature love may be the ticket to marital longevity, according to Dr. Sol Gordon of Syracuse University.

"So few marriages are successful these days, partly because people haven't thought through the meaning of love," he says. "You hear these things like 'love is blind,' 'love at first sight.'

"The news media, especially television, give the impression everything about love is spontaneous and quick, and there is the failure to realize that people who fall easily into love also fall easily out of it," he added.

For example, he said, the most important element of a good marriage is sensitivity and respect for the other.

The 59-year-old director of Syracuse's Institute for Family Research and Education said he and his six-person staff strive to simplify the definitions of love.

There are two kinds, but only one leads to happiness, he said. The other drains energy and creates jealousy.

"If you have an immature relationship, it's exhausting; if mature, it's energizing," he said. "A lot of people are saying that violence in a marriage shows love — that love and hate are the flip sides of the same coin. That is nonsense. Violence is a part of hate; it has nothing to do with love."

The best time to learn lessons about love is adolescence, when people first start to think seriously about relating to others, and when confusion between sex and love first arises, he said.

The tendency to "confuse chemistry with maturing" and to overemphasize the importance of sex led to 1.3 million teen-age pregnancies last year, he said.

"I have teen-agers asking me if it's normal not to have sex before marriage. That's how much pressure is being put on them. I tell them it's normal to wait if they want to wait," he said.

Sex ranks ninth of 10 criteria Gordon uses to evaluate the strength and maturity of a relationship.

After sensitivity and respect, others are, in order: a sense of humor and playfulness, communication without violating private thoughts, doing meaningful and purposeful things together, having friends, not forcing a compromise on "who you are or want to be," tolerance for vulnerable aspects of each personality, acceptance of likes, dislikes and varying levels of energy, sexual intercourse, and sharing household tasks.

On the list of least important elements of marriage: having identical interests, having perfect children, keeping up with the Joneses, having only the same friends, having Home Box Office, full disclosure (especially of events before marriage), lots of money, a microwave oven and a home computer, and simultaneous orgasms.

Gordon and Dr. Kathleen Everly published the "least important" list, based on surveys about attitudes of more than 2,000 students over the past five years.

TUNA TOMATOES

Easy to prepare ahead and worthwhile.

3-ounce package cream cheese
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1 tablespoon chili sauce
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
7-ounce can tuna in olive oil, thoroughly drained
1 pint (about 1 pound) cherry tomatoes, 30 to 36
Tiny parsley sprigs

With an electric beater, beat together cream cheese, parsley, onion, mayonnaise, chili sauce, Worcestershire and Tabasco. Add tuna, beating until thoroughly blended. Makes 1¼ cups. Trim stem ends of tomatoes; with a melon ball cutter, remove pulp. Thoroughly drain upside down on paper towels. Fill tomatoes with tuna mixture; cover and chill. Before serving, garnish each with a parsley sprig. Makes 30 to 36.

MAMIE'S FUDGE

Readers are still asking for this large-size recipe.

4½ cups sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
13-ounce can evaporated milk, undiluted
2 cups semi-sweet chocolate pieces
12 ounce sweet baking chocolate, cut up
Two 7-ounce jars marshmallow cream
2 cups chopped nuts

In a 4-quart heavy saucepan over medium-high heat, stirring constantly, bring the sugar, salt, butter and milk to a full boil. Boil 6 minutes, stirring constantly. Off heat, add the chocolate and marshmallow cream; stir vigorously and speedily until chocolate is melted and mixture is a uniform color. At once stir in the nuts and pour into a buttered 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan. Refrigerate until firm enough to cut into large squares or bars; wrap each individually. Keep stored in refrigerator. Makes about 5 pounds.

NEVER ON SUNDAE

WASHINGTON (AP) — How did the ice cream sundae get its name?

As the story goes, the concoction was invented in the 1890s to replace the ice-cream soda.

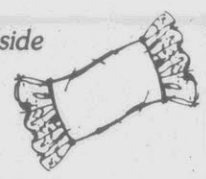

It seems some clergymen, upset at the sight of young people whiling away the Sabbath drinking ice-cream sodas, persuaded some communities to pass laws against drinking the fizzy specialty on Sundays.

According to the Smithsonian Institute, confectioners got even by creating the soda-less "Sunday" — but later changed the spelling to "sundae" to keep the peace with the clergymen.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

On the eye of the last episode of "M*A*S*H," which is a monument to how good television can be, it's interesting to speculate on what is down the road.

I saw a promo the other night for a new show, hosted by attorney F. Lee Bailey. It seems a guest who has some real important reasons not to tell the truth (the one I saw featured the man who claimed Howard Hughes bequeathed him a fortune), but swears he is not lying, is given a lie detector test.

A great part of the program is watching a needle zig back and forth on a polygraph test. You could die from the excitement.

What do I know? Maybe an electronic series starring a machine is the wave of the future. Nothing else has "worked."

It's possible the human element no longer amuses or titillates us.

I know this. If this show has any kind of rating at all, indicating a trend, you can look forward next season to the following lineup:

Celebrity Heartbeat! An exciting new game show where celebrities are given an electrocardiogram and contestants chosen from the audience are pitted against one another to see which one has the best score. (The audience is divided into red, blue, and green teams and can also share in the fun.)

"And The Winner Is . . ." A weekly series on how the votes are tabulated for such exciting shows as the Oscars, Emmys, Tonys, Grammys, Country Western, etc. A behind-the-scenes look at Price and Waterhouse pushing buttons and discussing how many rented tuxedos are soiled when they're returned. A family bonanza.

"Feeding Your Computer." A computer nutritionist discusses how to keep your computer healthy. With guest appearances by H. and R. Block, E.F. Hutton and I., B. and M.

CANCER WEAPON

Developed at the University of Rochester Cancer Center by Dr. Craig McCune, the vaccines stimulate the patient's immune system to destroy malignant cells.

In research involving kidney cancer patients, McCune found that a vaccine — made of irradiated liver tumor cells and dead bacteria — caused five of 16 patients to go into remission, one lasting longer than two years.

The vaccines are not a cure, but an immunological approach expected to soon join chemotherapy and radiation as a cancer treatment.

Celeste placed in the top rank of the flute section while Christ did well in the trombone section. Evan was selected for his performance on percussions. Students from various geographical, cultural, socio-economic and religious backgrounds who all share a common interest in government have been meeting in Washington, D.C. to participate in the Presidential Classroom for Young Americans. Conducted in consecutive one-week sessions, the program provides a concentrated study of U.S. government through direct exposure and personal contact with the institutions and leaders of the nation.

Students who attended the classroom in February were Susan Corbett, Brian Hill, Angie Michel, Tim Shank and Carl White. Stephen Bath, Marjorie Jones, Cissy Taft and Sammy Wynne will be participating in March. The classroom is open to juniors and seniors.

Each session offers an intensive curriculum which includes numerous formal seminars focusing on the three branches of the federal government, major independent agencies, the media, diplomatic community, labor and private sectors. The siminars center on current issues such as abortion, capital punishment and national defense and many are on-site briefings including visits to Capitol Hill.

During the week students are taken on sightseeing trips around the nation's capital. Also they visit privately the offices of senators and representatives from their state district. In addition to meeting other young Americans from all over the country, participants from Rose come in contact with students from such faraway places as Kuwait, Germany, Saudi Arabia and Haiti.

Laura Scharf has just begun to spend her junior year in Chile, South America as an exchange student with the American Field Service program. Laura, who applied with the service this fall, recently left to live with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ortega in Puerto Varas, a small town located in the province of Llanquihue. Her host father is a farmer and constructor. There are three brothers and a sister in the family. While in Chile Laura will attend a private Catholic school of about 600 students. Her family, who has previously hosted AFS students, enjoys going to the beach, participating in rodeo events, skiing and playing other sports. Laura will return to Greenville in December.

Dear Abby

Hubby's Hobby Is Symptom Of Sick Mind

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband, who is in his 40s, has a new hobby. He makes obscene phone calls. He dials numbers at random, and from time to time he gets a woman to listen to him, and he has an "affair" with her on the phone.

I have caught him at it several times. He says he isn't really doing anything wrong, it's just a harmless pastime. Then he begs me to forgive him.

I hate to leave the house because I know the minute I do he will start making these calls. When I'm away and call our house, the line is always busy. I think there's something wrong with him.

What should I do?

WORRIED IN MAINE

DEAR WORRIED: Your hubby's hobby is a symptom of a sick mind. It could also bring him trouble with the law.

I urge you to get him to a doctor before he finds himself in serious trouble. He needs to be examined by a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: My sister's shower is coming up soon, and I was just informed that the girls she works with have hired a male stripper to come in and do his act.

They said he doesn't take off all his clothes, and it's nothing really dirty, but it is rather suggestive.

My question: How are the older women at the shower going to react? The grandmothers of the bride and groom (both past 65) will be there. On one hand they might get a kick out of it, but on the other hand, I'm not sure.

I really need your opinion, and possibly the opinions of your female readers who have been through this.

CONCERNED SISTER

DEAR CONCERNED: When in doubt, don't. To embarrass or offend even one person could spoil the occasion.

And by the way, age is not necessarily the criterion — some older women are more broad-minded than the younger ones.

DEAR ABBY: My husband works for a cable TV service. Every day he comes home and tells me about parents who leave their kids at home to let the serviceman in. Today he told me about a sweet little 8-year-old girl who was left home alone to let him in!

What are parents thinking of? Why don't they try to protect their children? These kids could be opening the door for a thief, murderer or rapist.

I think all service companies should require that a person 18 years or older be home to receive services of all kinds.

MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR MOBILE: So do I.

OVEN EGGS

This method insures scrambling eggs with ease.

2 tablespoons butter, cut small
6 large eggs
1-3rd cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper

In an 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking pan, in a preheated 350-degree oven, melt butter; shake pan to distribute butter evenly; leave oven control at 350 degrees. Beat together eggs, milk, salt and pepper until foamy; pour over butter in pan. Bake in the 350-degree oven until thickened throughout but still moist — 10 to 12 minutes. As mixture begins to set, after about 7 minutes of baking, gently draw a wide metal spatula completely across bottom of pan; as eggs continue to set, repeat this process once or twice so large soft curds are formed. Makes 3 servings.

Mrs. Crounse Gives Talk

The Greenville Garden Club held its meeting Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James Keel. Mrs. Robert Crounse gave the program on "Some Poisonous and Useful Plants of the Composite Family."

"The composite family flowers have petals radiating from the center as in the daisy," she said. Mrs. Crounse told of several plants and their uses including dog fennel which was used by the Indians as a tonic for colds and rheumatism, chamomile — for healing wounds and a poltice from bone set was used to help mend bones.

Other flowers and their uses are: sunflower for oil and seed; yarrow for tonic; golden rod for dyes and dandoline for spring salads and wine.

The horticultural exhibit was given by Donna Whitley, who showed bamboo and gave several uses for it.

Mrs. J.C. Galloway, first vice president, presented life membership cards and pins to Mrs. J.R. Carrington and Mrs. R.M. Helms.

Nrs. Carrington, Charlotte Evans, Mrs. George Fleming and Thelma Harris were assisting meeting hostesses.

Students Hope To Recreate Hospital Shows

By TIM PETTIT
Associated Press Writer

SELINSGROVE, Pa. (AP) — The United Service Organizations doesn't have enough money to entertain hospitalized veterans, and neither do the eight college students who make up "Re-Creation."

But the singers and dancers from Susquehanna University here feel their faith in the Lord and their fellow men will provide the $77,000 they need to fund a 220-show tour of veterans' hospitals.

"I really don't know how we'll do it," said Hugh Brooks, Re-Creation's director and founder. "The only way is through donations."

They've collected $6,000 so far, and a major motel chain and fast food chain have agreed to provide free lodging and some meals for the troupe and groups it books for the hospital tour, Brooks said.

"When Mr. Brooks told us about it, my first reaction was 'Fantastic!' " said sophomore Jim Worthing, 20, a communications major from Altoona.

"It's a great opportunity to do more service and that's what our group is all about," he said.

The USO had provided professional entertainment at the 172 veterans hospitals until last summer.

"We just don't have the money anymore," said Kevin McCarthy, USO's director of entertainment.

The Veterans' Administration then turned to Re-Creation, which had done shows at hospitals in the past. Re-Creation hopes to do 40 to 50 veterans shows itself and serve as a booking agent for the remainder.

Re-Creation will receive $250 per show from the VA, which estimates that just food, lodging and transportation costs for each show is $600.

"Our prime reason for doing it is to serve the Lord," said Brooks, whose group already provides free shows at the state's prisons and mental institutions.

"We ain't doing it for the bucks," laughed Brook's daughter Katie, 24, whose four-member professional group will tour the hospitals from Jan. 30 to March 31, doing up to five shows a week.

"This is no sacrifice for me. It's the greatest opportunity I've had," said Miss Brooks, who also works as Re-Creation's choreographer.

"All of these veterans at some point were willing to put everything they had on the line, so it's not much for us to give up a little time or money. I wanted to go on a diet anyway."

If Re-Creation hadn't agreed to handle the veterans' entertainment through 1983, "I would expect there might have been some difficulty in continuing (hospital) shows. It would have been a problem trying to find another quality show for $250," said Wallace Lynch, director of recreation services for the VA.

Re-Creation sings both secular and Christian music, but in its association with the Veterans Administration the group will perform strictly secular programs at the hospitals.

"We have a strong patriotic portion in every program," Brooks said as his singers rehearsed one song and dance routine that uses small American flags. "Our music is geared to be popular with all ages.

"We'll sing older songs from the '40s and the '50s, and we have some more modern music but no hard rock. And we'll do a country section," said Brooks, who founded Re-Creation in 1976.

The Re-Creation singers come from a variety of backgrounds, majoring in geology, liberal arts and business as well as music.

"Maybe it's hard to understand why we do what we do," Worthing said. "But if you could see the eyes of a crippled child light up in an institution or an elderly person in a nursing home, then you'd understand."

Engagements Announced

GAIL MARIE STANFIELD...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.M. Stanfield of Murfreesboro, who announce her engagement to Donald A. Wallace, son of M.H. Wallace of Rochester, Mich. and the late Dorothy Wallace. The wedding is planned for May 14.

TAMMY LYNN GLISSON...is the daughter of Mrs. Hazel E. Oglesby of Greenville, who announces her engagement to Kevin Wayne Odham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Billy E. Odham of Ayden. The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Lawrence Clifford Glisson. An April 17 wedding is planned.

DOWN UNDER

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A mine located 110 feet below the campus of the University of Minnesota houses the university's new mineral engineering laboratories.

The 48,000-square-foot space, connected by elevator to an above-ground classroom building, was built underground to conserve energy. The space, sheltered by the earth, requires less energy to heat and cool.

BLANC MANGE

An old-fashioned dessert that is worth reviving.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
2 cups milk
1-3rd cup sugar
1 teaspon vanilla
10-ounce package frozen sweetened strawberries, thawed

Sprinkle gelatin over ½ cup of the milk and let soften — 5 to 10 minutes. Heat the remaining milk until it is scalding hot — bubbles will appear around the edge; pour over gelatin mixture and stir vigorously until gelatin dissolves. Stir in sugar and vanilla until sugar dissolves. Turn into individual molds; chill to set. At serving time, unmold; spoon strawberries over desserts. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

½ pound mushrooms, thinly sliced
4½-pound chicken, cut in 12 pieces
Salt, pepper and paprika

In a 3-quart baking dish (13½ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches) mix together onion and mushrooms. Sprinkle both sides of chicken pieces with salt and pepper; sprinkle skin sides with a generous amount of paprika; arrange, skin side up, over onions and mushrooms. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 400-degree oven until juices from breast portions, when pricked with a fork, are free of pink color — 35 to 40 minutes. Remove breast portions and keep warm. Continue baking remaining chicken until tender — 5 or 10 minutes longer. Pan juices will be thin. Makes 6 servings.

Better For Children?

By MARK D. FRANK

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — Parents concerned about their youngsters spending hour upon hour playing "Pac Man," "Defender," "Tron," or some other popular video game should relax.

Children are better off playing video games than they are watching television, according to Syracuse University communications expert George Comstock.

"There's more to be concerned about violence on television and in films than there is about video games," says Professor Comstock, author of "Television and Human Behavior." "In video games, you're dealing with socially accepted conflict and rules, learning how to play games better, which is not such a bad thing.

"Granted there are some other aspects, such as that kids might play them too much and that they might develop eye problems or something like that, but you develop problems when you do too much of anything."

Comstock said he believed video games would be more beneficial if they encouraged greater cooperation between team players rather than one-on-one play. But he added, "It's hard to believe that zapping people will transfer over to everyday behavior."

"Little creatures blipping around, getting gobbled up by Pac Man, that's not really a strong lesson compared to a television drama, for instance, in which someone takes revenge on someone else," Comstock said. "Television is teaching lessons that may be more transferable.

"Televison is much more influential than any video game."

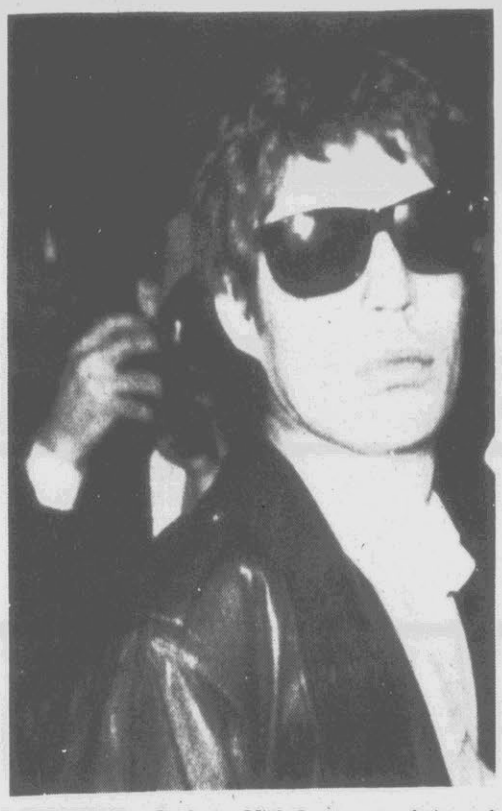

Comstock said he believes video games are helpful in teaching children about strategy and the use of computers, and help develop keener hand-eye coordination.

He conceded, however, that there are "certain things in bad taste" in video games.

"For example, the video game in which the object is to start as many fires as possible might not be the best thing. And the emphasis on war games is somewhat objectionable," he said. "Those games sort of give the impression that war is fun, but that's more in bad taste than anything else, although if you give the impression that it's socially acceptable, that's the way people will behave.

"War games put an approval on high-level violence. In a sense, it's not the healthiest thing but it doesn't give me that much concern except to shake my head."

Texas Man Devotee Of Japanese Art, Culture

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent

TOKYO (AP) — For 31 years Meredith Weatherby has devoted himself to making the art and culture of Asia — in particular those of Japan — familiar to Americans.

During that time he has been a widely known publisher, book designer, translator and art collector.

Now, at 67, this jack-of-all-arts from Waco, Texas, has embarked on a new career: the creation of collages from old Japanese books. His works have sold out in four recent exhibitions here.

He first came to Japan as a diplomat in the years just before World War II. During a subsequent stint in the U.S. Army he mastered Japanese, returned to Japan with the Occupation as a consul, then moved to Seoul as first secretary of the American embassy in time to take part in the 1950 retreat before advancing communist forces.

He quit the foreign service to join Vermonter Charles Tuttle in establishing the publishing firm of that name here in 1951. Ten years later, he struck out on his own, setting up John Weatherhill Inc. With ties to Harper and Row in the United States, it soon became known to book connoisseurs for its carefully crafted, handsome editions of works on Asian and Japanese art, customs and religion.

It illuminated the new, and hitherto little known, worlds of Zen Buddhism, Chinese painting, Asian folklore, Japanese cloisonne, netsuke and Chinese snuff bottles, Japanese architecture, furniture, flower arrangement and tea ceremony.

Through Weatherhill, many Americans — and Asians — learned for the first time of the intriguing complexities of wrapping five eggs, among other things. They also read about the endless uses and beauty of bamboo, the traditional Japanese kabuki and noh dramas, the story behind Sumo, an ancient form of wrestling, and the joys of the piping-hot Japanese bath.

The English-speaking world first read the Japanese novelist, Yukio Mishima, in 1951 through one of Weatherby's translations. The work was "Confessions of a Mask," the troubled writer's autobiography which Weatherby considers his best. Later, he translated "The Sound of Waves," a charming but less revealing book.

When Mishima committed hara-kiri suicide at 45 in 1971, after vainly exhorting the army to rise up and overthrow the government, Weatherby was not surprised.

"He realized his best work had been done. He was primarily a dramatist and he had to make the grand gesture," he said.

Since he was so steeped in things Japanese it was inevitable, perhaps, that Weatherby should choose to live in a 120-year-old Japanese farmhouse. He acquired it 30 years ago, had it restored, and improved by a Japanese architect bored with putting up endless bank buildings.

Winner Of Poetry Award

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Ida Wooten Tripp of near Pactolus is winner of the second best place overall in the Beaufort County Arts Council Poetry Competition. As second place winner she received $50.

The poem tells the sad tale of Fannie Bell, a goat beloved by housewife Maude Mizell — until the day the goat had a horned encounter of the wrong kind with her broad mistress, and as a consequence, met her just (or unjust?) fate.

Mrs. Tripp is a member of the Greenville Writers Club and is enrolled in the Pitt Community College's creative writing class.

Tran, Marilyn Gordley Show On View At GMA

A joint exhibition of drawings and paintings by husband and wife artists Tran and Marilyn Chasse Gordley is the current show at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St. In addition to being artists, the two have been faculty members of the school of art, East Carolina University, for more than 20 years.

Marilyn's paintings, exhibited in the museum's south galleries, includes her latest works based on the sea and seashore as well as examples of what she says is an entirely new field for her, computer art. In the computer pieces, she demonstrates the evolvement from first computer print to multiple images on to use of computer design as the basis for a couple of small, colorful paintings. Despite their vivid color, she achieves an effect in the paintings that has a contemporary kinship to traditional Chinese art.

Three of her paintings, large ones, constitute a variation on a sea theme, progressing from a first painting, "Sea Party," on to "Song of the Sea" and concluding with "Timeless Sea." In each, the locale is where the sea meets the shoreline, breaking into foamy fragments on the sand. The fragments, she explains, becomes shapes in themselves, suggestive of forms that lead her to further exploration. In the final of the trio, Marilyn has added a group of women in the lower corner, and interspersed zinnias (one of her longtime subjects in paintings) in the center section of the painting. These are active, color-filled paintings.

Other paintings and drawings she shows include figure studies, a photograph and painting of sea shells, a painting of zinnias with shells, and a landscape or two.

Tran Gordley has his paintings and drawings exhibited in the museum's north gallery.

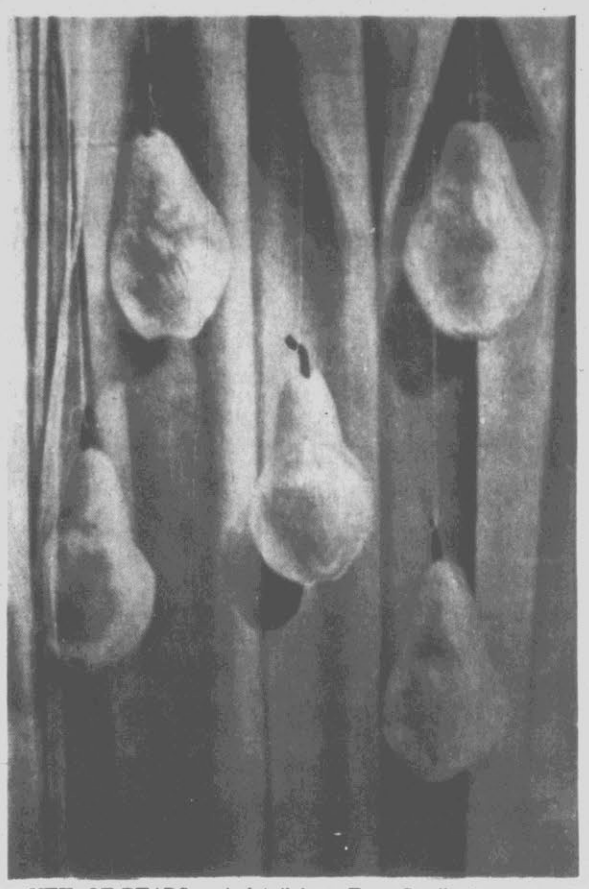

Tran continues his love affair with food as the subject matter for his works, in particular studies of the strawberry. "The strawberry is a favorite of Marilyn's," Tran commented. "Maybe that's the reason I keep painting them."

Several of the works are small scale drawings — precise, finely detailed studies in black and white. Most of his work are paintings of berries, nuts, and fruits. One painting and its companion smaller study, "Runny Baked Alaska," is confectionary rich in chocolates, whites, and reds. Another painting, "Veil of Pears," is a formal arrangement of golden pear globes placed against golden drapes.

Tran, in the catalogue that accompanies the show, notes, "For several years, the subject matter of my work has revolved around food and our daily preoccupation with it. While food is a necessity to sustain life, often its exotic preparation is emphasized delighting us visually as well as by taste."

And it is the visual depiction of food in paintings that continues to preoccupy Trans Gordley in his art.

Jerry Raynor

VEIL OF PEARS ... A detail from Tran Gordley's painting, "Veil of Pears," has pears hanging by a string against the folds of a golden drapery.

TIMELESS SEA ... is the title given by Marilyn Gordley to the concluding work of three paintings on the theme of the sea breaking against the sand. Paintings and drawings by Marilyn and her husband, Tran Gordley, are now on exhibit at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street.

Closing For Spring Break

Gray Art Gallery in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the East Carolina University campus will be closed a week during the university's spring break.

The gallery will be closed from March 6 through 13.

Karyn Drum Show

An exhibition of working drawings and paintings by ECU graduate student Karyn Drum opened Thursday at the Gray Art Gallery on the East Carolina University campus and will remain on view through March 10.

Ms. Drum, a native of Texas, is experimenting with concepts involving the use of line and linear shapes, as in the linear effects of stratified layers she has seen in geologic formations in the landscape of her native Southwest — and in the linear shapes created by graphic transcriptions of bird songs.

Accompanying the show is a videotape of her work in progress as well as a record of bird songs. Some of the drawings incorporate graphic images of bird songs which were transcribed with the use of an oscillograph obtained from the ECU biology department.

The installation of her show is interdisciplinary in nature and makes use of information and equipment obtained with the help of faculty and students in the departments of biology and science.

There is no admission charged. Hours at Gray Gallery are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, and from 1 to 4 on Sundays.

Puppet Show On Saturday

The Greenville Musuem of Art Puppet Theater will present a performance at noon Saturday. The performance, designed for young children, is open to the public at no charge.

Puppeteer Grian Saloman will present an original puppet show in a portable theater designed and constructed by Mrs. Saloman.

The project is supported by the Greenville Museum of Art and the Grassroots Arts Program of the North Carolina Arts Council, a state agency.

Van Wyk Show At EEii's

BELHAVEN — An exhibition of lithographs, drawings and pottery by Jacob Van Wyk is on view at EEii's little KORNERS of the world, downtown Belhaven.

Now a resident of Woodstock Point near Belhaven, Van Wyck formerly lived in Chicago where he was a college art professor.

He holds the MFA degree in printmaking from Western Michigan University, and has completed studies in numerous other schools, including Trinity Christian College in Chicago.

Van Wyck has exhibited his work widely and has acted as art workshop leader in several states and in Canada.

Women's History Month

FAYETTEVILLE — Arsenal House Gallery in Fayetteville is celebrating March as Women's History Month with events that focus on work by women artists in the Cumberland County area. The art show, which runs through March 30, will feature paintings, drawings, sculpture, prints, photography, ceramics and fiber arts by 23 women.

A reception for the art show will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. today at the museum.

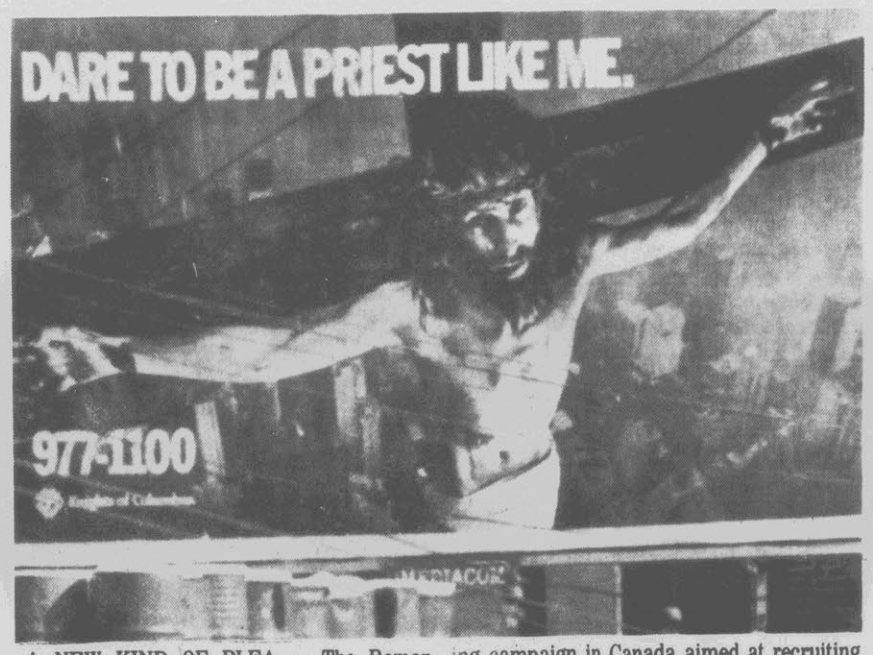

Additionally, a quilt group exhibition of work by seven quilters will be featured.

In March, four Thursday "lunch specials" featuring the performance arts will be held March 3, 10, 17 and 24, with patrons bringing their own lunches or ordering one from the Arts Council.

Another event is to be a reading by four women poets - Kate Blackburn, Agnes McDonald, Shirley Moody and Mary Snotherly — from their recently published book, "Four N.C. Women Poets." The reading will take place at 4 p.m. March 13.

A creative basketry workshop conducted by Bryant Holsenbeck and limited to 20 participants, is planned from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. March 5.

All events will take place at Arsenal House Gallery, 822 Arsenal Ave., in Fayetteville. For more details, write to that address or telephone the Arts Council at 323-1776.

To Perform In Greenville Wednesday

N.C. Symphony Duo Comment On Their Roles In Orchestra

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Jackson Parkhurt, assistant conductor of the North Carolina Symphony and Thomas H. McGuire, executive director of the symphony, were in Greenville Wednesday on a whirlwind visit. The two met with chapter officers of the newly established Greenville chapter of the North Carolina Symphony.

The N.C. Symphony will be in concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Wright Auditorium in an all-Tchaikovsky program, with East Carolina University faculty member cellist Selma Gokcen the featured soloist artist. The concert will be conducted by Gerhardt Zimmerman, the orchestra's conductor.

Tickets for the symphony performance are priced at $7 and will be available at the door prior to the concert hour.

Earlier on Wednesday, at 11 a.m., a free educational concert will be given at Aycock Junior High School for students in Greenville City schools.

Parkhurst, who has been assistant conductor and director of education since 1980, smiled when he was asked about his favorite music. "Anything, as long as it's by Mozart. Seriously," he said, "in planning children's concerts I try to put myself back to that age. I generally go for presenting a program with music, some loud, some soft, some slow, some fast, that appeals to children.

"At the same time," he added, "I make an effort to select pieces with real musical character, pieces that are familiar and that they will hear again. Beethoven's 'Fifth Symphony' is an example."

Parkhurst pointed out that since most children's concerts are limited in time, usually about an hour, "we try to give them a balanced, varied program."

Parkhurst founded the Brevard Chamber Orchestra in 1976 and the Lexington Park String Ensemble (Asheville) in 1979. During 1979-80 he was director of choral music at UNC-Asheville and has guest-conducted orchestras in North Carolina, Iowa, New York and Massachusetts. Currently, he conducts the Repertory Training Orchestra in Brevard in summer programs.

McGuire, who also was executive director of the Arkansas Symphony in Little Rock before being named to his current N.C. Symphony position in 1982, commented that "a year ago, we had a lot of unsolved issues facing the orchestra."

"We faced financial setbacks and leadership problems. Now, a great deal has been done to resolve many of these issues, so I feel we've gotten off to a good start for a second year in working with people in many areas to improve the situation," McGuire said.

McGuire has worked in Texas and taught undergraduate courses in music theory and piano at the University of North Carolina.

Cheryl Taft, one of the officers of the Greenville chapter of the N.C. Symphony who accompanied the two on their Greenville visit, said she was "really impressed by how much the N.C. Symphony offers the people of North Carolina, all across the state. Locally, besides the two events in Greenville next week, the orchestra's brass ensemble will be performing here in April.

"Greenville and area people can show their support for our state orchestra by buying a ticket for the concert. At the same time they will enjoy an evening of fine music. We're certainly glad to have the orchestra coming here to play for our students and at the concert."

Bob Seger Happy -Back On The Road

By BRUCE MEYER

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bob Seger, relaxed as always after the trauma of the recording studio, leans back, takes a long drag on his cigarette, and remembers how it was, that December night in Los Angeles.

Seger and his producer, Jimmy Iovine, had finally finished taping their new album, "The Distance."

They thought they were happy with it. But, numbed by the tedium of mixing and re-mixing the songs, deadened by listening and listening and listening again, they wanted some reassurance.

"We needed an outside opinion," Seger said with a grin. "We needed some totally fresh ears."

So they called up an old friend.

Bruce Springsteen picked them up driving a '69 Ford housing an expensive tape deck. "I don't know what it was, but it was unbelievably loud," said Seger.

They drove around for a while, pulled into a deserted shopping center parking lot until the neighbors complained of the noise, then cruised some more, down Sunset Strip through Hollywood, playing the tape over and over.

Finally, Springsteen looked over at Seger.

"Not to worry, guys," he said. "Sounds good."

Apparently, the nation's record buyers agree. Since it was released, "The Distance" has pushed steadily toward the top of the charts. Almost certainly, it will become Bob Seger's sixth consecutive million-selling LP.

Now, for Seger, comes the fun part.

After the best part of a year at home near Detroit writing, and months in the studio struggling to satisfy his producer, his manager and himself, Seger is back on the road, playing and singing for his fans. Anyone who likes his records but has not seen his show is in for a treat — Bob Seger is as dynamic a performer as rock has ever produced.

"The Distance" used a number of the best session players in Los Angeles and Muscle Shoals, Ala.

Eagles Glen Frey and Don Felder both helped out, Frey singing behind Seger on the album's first single, "Shame on the Moon," a tune by Nashville producer Rodney Crowell and the only song on the LP not penned by Seger. Bonnie Raitt sings backup on "Makin' Thunderbirds," a hard-driving rocker that recalls the glory days when Detroit was truly the car capital of the world.

"The Distance" is a collection of musical essays on the American way of life, in which Seger is a trueblue believer, and on the human experience, for which he has a delicate touch uncommon in rock 'n' roll.

Seger said the album's title and theme were suggested by "Annie Hall," the Woody Allen film of several years back. It didn't quite work out the way he'd planned.

"I had this idea of making a record all about relationships — about people, men, women, love. The title was supposed to suggest the distance, short or long, between people. So four of the nine songs are about that kind of thing.

"But working within that framework got real cramped, after a while, and some of the songs have nothing to do with that original theme. So," he laughed, "it's a real half-baked thing in a way. But everybody liked the title, so we stuck with it."

The first song on the album, however, defines Seger's original concept perfectly.

"Even Now" is dedicated to Jan, Seger's companion of 11 years — whose name he prefers not to reveal because she dislikes the hassles of celebrity. Even for a lyricist of Seger's proven talents, "Even Now" is a remarkable testament to romantic love, written from the heart and sung with a wide-open, tear-in-the-eye sensitivity.

Parkers Restaurant, Where Barbecue Reigns Supreme

Text By LaRona Murray
Photographs By Jerry Raynor

ATTENTIVE SERVICE ... is stressed at Parkers Barbecue Restaurant in the training of waiters. Here, waiter Joseph Sasser checks to see if two diners have need of anything else. The two are Margo Manning, left, and Suzette McKeathin.

FATHER-SON PARTNERS ... J.C. Parker, left, and his son, Doug, are co-partners of Parker's Barbecue Resaurant on Memorial Drive, which each week serves about 10,000 pounds of barbecue plus larg quantities of other food items.

LINE-UP FOR TAKE-OUT ... Customers at one of two take-out order counters wait for their orders to be filled. This part of the service, says Doug Parker, accounts for more than half of their total business.

It was in the mid '40s that Richard Parker of Belvoir, a village and farming community northwest of Greenville, sold a tract of timber that bordered the Tar River.

The lumber company rejected some of the trees that leaned over the river, thinking it would be too difficult to remove them. "So my grandfather, Richard Parker, gave them to my two uncles, Ralph and Graham," said Doug Parker, half-owner with his father J.C. Parker of Greenville's Parkers Barbecue Restaurant.

The Parker brothers snaked the logs down the river to Conetoe Creek, had them sawed into lumber and drew up plans for the first Parkers restaurant specializing in barbecue.

With help from their father supplemented by money saved from their Army tours, Ralph and Graham Parker opened their restaurant in Wilson in 1946 in partnership with Henry Brewer, a friend from Belvoir.

Wilson First Site

"My uncles and Mr. Brewer" chose Wilson as the site for their restaurant, explained Doug Parker, "because Greenville already had two barbecue places, so they decided it would be more practical to go to another town."

All the Parker brothers acquired their barbecue skills in the early 1940s when they worked for Alton Respess, owner of a barbecue restaurant on Greene Street, where Abrams now stands.

"That experience proved to be very beneficial," J.C. Parker recalls. "We did just about everything, from janitor work to pig cooking."

The Parkers opened on a small scale at their Wilson restaurant. Over the years, however, it has been enlarged from its original 100 seating capacity.

When Doug and his father in the late 1960s made a decision to open their own barbecue restaurant, they chose Greenville as the site of a new Parker barbecue house, which has now developed into the present building seating 300, located on Memorial Drive.

Excelled Expectations

The Parkers' reputation for making barbecue had preceded them and the opening in Greenville, in March 1970, far exceeded their expectations.

"I'll never forget that day," Doug Parker laughed. "Customers had formed a long line. It was as if everyone in town wanted some barbecue and our poor inexperienced waiters were rushing around, trying to meet the demands of customers, ignoring many in the process."

One particular customer, on that opening day, stands out in Doug's memory. The waiter asked one man if he had placed his order. "No, but I'll take the one you have there," the impatient customer said as he grabbed the plate from the startled waiter.

A good indication of the close business relationship between the Parkers in Greenville and in Wilson is the readiness with which Ralph and Graham Parker and Henry Brewer in the Wilson restaurant provided the new Greenville facility with additional waiters and supplies of barbecue on opening day. "We kept the Wilson waiters here for about two weeks," J.C. said, "to give our waiters ample time for training."

Dedication Is Factor

But since then, things have been running much more smoothly for the Parker food operation in Greenville. "However," J.C. said, "some days when there's a larger flow of customers than usual, we phone each other for assistance. We meet about halfway from Wilson at the ABC store near Walstonburg, with whatever is needed, which usually is barbecue."

The Parker family is firmly convinced that their success in the food business has been due to dedication, hard work and cooperation on the part of all family members. "I can't stress that enough," J.C. commented.

"We work long hours, side by side, without discord, and it's very rewarding," Doug remarked.

In addition to the two restaurants, the Parkers in 1975 purchased the Goldsboro Packing Co. J.C. Parker said, "We find that by owning a packing company we can be more selective in choosing premium meats at a more reasonable price."

24-Hour Schedule

Food preparation and cleaning goes on at Parkers for 24 hours a day. Doug's uncle, Burke Parker, manages the kitchen.

The Greenville restaurant employs about 95 workers to prepare and serve the 10,000 pounds of barbecue, several thousand pounds of chicken and about 5,000 pounds each of slaw, potatoes and brunswick stew that is consumed by customers each week.

"More than half of our business is done at the back of the restaurant," Doug noted. "That's where barbecue is sold by the plate or the pound, or in the case of slaw and stew, by the pint or quart, for take-out service."

Additionally, the Parkers are engaged in a catering service, using three vans and three cookers for that purpose.

"Many people have pig pickings," Doug said, "and we partially cook the pigs here, transport them and the cookers to the party site and finish them there where they will be nice and hot."

Largest Party

The largest party that either of the two restaurants have catered to was in Wilson a few years ago at the opening of Purina Feed Mills. On that occasion, they served about 17,000 people, including Loretta Lynn and Minnie Pearl of Grand Ole Opry fame.

Asked if he would divulge his brunswick stew recipe, J.C. laughed. "Never. I can't give away my secrets."

Looking back over his career in the barbecue business, J.C. said, "It has been very demanding. I just love to fish, but have had only two free weekends in 12 years, so I just can't go very often. But despite the hard work, being in the barbecue business has been very rewarding."

A BUSY PLACE ... The large kitchen at Parker's is the scene of constant activity, with waiters for the seated section of the restaurant and waitresses serving the take-out section constantly filling orders from tables of freshly prepared food.

Redoing Bathroom Is Difficult

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Decorating most rooms in the home is a challenge because of the many options which are possible. Even a room's dimensions can be changed through the removal or addition of walls.

But decorating the bathroom is different.

"It's one room where you usually have to keep what is already there, short of ripping the whole thing out and starting over," says Fred Palatinus, a designer in New York. If there are pink tile walls with flamingoes on some of the tiles or aqua bath fixtures, that's what you have to work with.

Over the years, however, interior decorators have devised a variety of techniques to deal with liabilities they cannot change, said Palatinus, who was recently hired by a bath fixture manufacturer and Bell Telephone Co. to design some luxurious baths using their products.

As he showed a visitor around the bathrooms he had created on the New York showroom floor for American-Standard, Palatinus said working with odd-or unpleasant-colored tile or fixtures is easier than most people realize. Though many consumers consider it their biggest insoluable problem, it doesn't have to be.

A color's hue can be changed in intensity and effect depending on what other colors are placed next to it, so, it is possible to change the effect of pink tile walls from saccharine to sophisticated by painting the area above the tile pale gray or black, hanging the same color towels and introducing some art deco elements in cabinetry, mirrors and lighting fixtures.

Palatinus updated the bathrooms displayed in the showroom by employing large doses of currently fashionable colors, patterned fabric and unusual accessories such as antique furniture and containers, flowering plants and scented soaps. Though his designs were costly, many of the ideas could be carried out less expensively.

He suggested the following be considered by those who are redecorating the bathroom:

—Bring an unexpected element into the room, an accessory not normally found in the bath. Perhaps, it could be a whatnot or some antique shelves set against a wall to hold towels or toiletries, or a small painting or print.

—When choosing a shower curtain, take one of two courses. Either do something minimal and tailored, creating your major effects elsewhere, or make the shower curtain a focal point in the room by constructing a wood valence covered with fabric and hanging an overcurtain and undercurtain. A shower-curtain liner and the use of sturdy, water-resistant fabrics will keep the arrangement attractive.

—To make a small bath look larger, mirror the walls and ceiling or cover them with a scrubbable, small-patterned wallpaper that can be matched to a fabric in the same print for a shower curtain and window covering.

—Make the room smell good by placing scented soaps or potpourri in an open container and buying bath salts in the same fragrance.

If these ideas are more than you had in mind, consider an alternative proposed by Evan Janovic of Janovic Plaza, a New York paint and decorative products retailer.

His shopping cart contained: a quart of low luster latex paint; a shower curtain, liner and rod cover; new shower hooks in a matching color; a 2-by-3-foot bathmat; coordinated towels; a waste basket; a tissue box and a shell soap dish with three colored soaps.

Interested in still more ideas to convert your bath? Bell and American-Standard are taking their bath show on the road during the rest of 1983.

An exhibit similar to the one in New York will be at American-Standard's Los Angeles showroom March 17-26 and is lanned for Chicago and Atlanta later in the ye!r.

17 states to show consumers how to redo their baths with a telephone in the room. She will be giving out a booklet with tips on safe installation and use of phones in the bathroom.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There are two major advantages to using a screw rather than a nail to hold together two pieces of wood. It provides greater holding power, and it can be removed with very little trouble.

The assets of this fastener get added value if the proper types and sizes are used in the proper manner. All of us are familiar with the flathead screw that has a straight-across slot, and the Phillips screw that has crossed slots in the head. The latter requires a Phillips screwdriver, the head of which fits neatly into the crossed slots.

There are many varieties of the flathead and Phillips screws. Each can be obtained with several different kinds of heads, the most common of which are oval and round. All types come in many lengths and diameters, known as gauges. It is well to know the length because you often want the screw to be driven into the second piece of wood as far as it will go without coming out the other side. The gauge or diameter determines the toughness of the fastener. A screw with a gauge of 8, for instance, is tougher or stronger than one with a gauge of 3 and weaker than one with a gauge of 12.

To get the best results, a pilot hole should be made in the wood to receive the screw.

This can be done with an awl in softwood or when using a small screw. The hole should be drilled when using a large screw in softwood and always when working with hardwood. When using a large screw in hardwood, professionals drill a clearance hole for the shank, the fat part under the head and a pilot hole for the threaded portion.

If the screwhead is to be driven slightly below the surface or even with it, a countersink bit will perform this operation and make the holes as well.

When starting a screw in a hole, place the tip of the screwdriver bit in the slot, then hold the blade with one hand while you turn it with the other. Two things can cause difficulties. One is not holding the screwdriver straight. The other is if the tip of the blade is too small or too large for the slot. In either case, you may wind up damaging the surface of the wood.

Besides being used when stronger holding power is needed or because they are easy to remove, screws sometimes are utilized for decorative purposes. Most hardware stores, lumber yards and home center establishments carry many different types of screws with special heads designed to look well on certain pieces of furniture. They cost more, but are well worth it if appearance is important.

Sometimes, when a dealer does not stock the kind of decorative screw you need, he can order it for you. This might be the case, for instance, if you are trying to match the screw heads on furniture you already own. In that event, you should bring one of the screws with you so the proper match can be made.

It is wise to keep an offset screwdriver in the house. Every so often you will want to drive a screw into a awkward spot where an ordinary screwdriver won't fit. This may not happen very often, but the one time you need such a screwdriver, nothing else will do.

If you have to replace a screw, the hole may have become enlarged so a screw of the same size will not grip securely. You can either use a longer or thicker screw or fill up the hole so the same size screw will do the job. In the latter case, you can use a piece of dowel, some wood putty or plastic wood or even a little steel wool.

Q. - We have some metal outdoor furniture we expect to use in a couple of months, but whikh we would like to get ready now. The paint on it is in good condition, but we want to change the color. Can we paint right over it or do we have to remove the old paint?

A. - No need to remove the old paint if it is in such good condition. However, if it has a glossy finish, which much outdoor metal furniture has, you will have to dull the finish so the new coat can hold properly. This can be done by sanding or steel wooling the old finish very lightly or using a liquid that accomplishes the same thing; that is, dulling the surface. If you decide on the second course, your hardware or paint dealer will sell you the correct product if you explain to him what you intend to do with it. It must be emphasized that, in all such cases, the life of the new coat will depend on the life of the old coat, so be certain the old paint is in as good condition as you say. If a close inspection reveals it is not, then some paint remover is in order.

Q. — I will be doing considerable gluing soon. Can you tell me the difference between contact cement and plastic resin? Can they both be used for wood? I assume contact cement, judging by the name, does not require clamps to harden properly. Is the same thing true for plastic resin?

A. — You are correct about contact cement. It requires no clamping. It can be used to bond almost anything, but generally is used for attaching laminated plastic or some other veneer to a wooden surface. The fact that it bonds instantly means no attachment must be made until the parts are lined up precisely. Plastic resin glue is for wood mainly. It is resistant to moisture and is very strong, but needs clamps while the glue is drying.

Q. - We will be finishing our basement into two rooms and a workshop soon. We want to put a small bathroom down there, but we don't relish the idea of digging up the concrete basement floor in order to install pipes. Is there a way of doing this without disturbing the floor?

A. - Yes. There are special toilets and equipment that can be used in such situations. Such toilets are an upward flushing mechanism. If you decide to have one installed, make certain you hire a plumber who knows the procedure.

Q. - A house we own in a very rural area has no system for disposing of waste. Is a septic tank permitted, and can we install it without professional help?

A. Your local plumbing codes will tell you whether or not a septic tank is allowed. In a rural area, it usually is. You will have to find out, however, whether a do-it-yourself installation is permitted. Even if it is allowed, don't attempt it unless you know exactly what you are doing.

Design Features Six Sides

The Waterville

By Jerry Bishop

Simple lines flow from this six-sided design, affordable scaled, but sizable enough for a growing family. In the Waterville, active living areas are snuggled centrally between two quieter bedrooms and bath areas. A small hallway, accessing two bedrooms and a full bath on the right side, may be completely shut off from the living room, providing seclusion. Another bath lies behind a third bedroom on the left side, complete with washer/dryer facilities and close enough to a stoop and rear entrance to serve as a mud room.

Highlighting the living room are vaulted ceilings. An optional fireplace may be placed between the kitchen/living room wall, instead of a breakfast bar, or on the living room/master bedroom wall, as desired. Four sets of sliding glass doors accent the design's front and access the wing shaped deck from the two front bedrooms and the living room. A carport and storage, instead of enclosed garage, are shown.

Q.—We have a player in our game who makes it unpleasant for all of us. Because he thinks he is better than anyone else, he constantly criticizes our bidding and play in an overbearing manner. Would you mind telling us what it takes to be a good partner so that we can post your reply in a place where he is sure to see it.—J.L.C., San Antonio, Texas

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Each one of us believes he is the best player in the game. And all the other players in the game know that that is not the case. To be a good partner, we have to control our natural instincts—no easy task.

The first thing to realize is that most of our partners don't want to be taught—at any rate, certainly not by us. Whether they be overbidders or underbidders, good players or bad, they like the way they are.

Learn to recognize their faults and adapt to them. For example, suppose that you cut a player who insists in bidding no trump whenever he has a singleton in your suit. Even if you can convince him that that is wrong, you will only confuse him. Sometimes he will remember what you taught him and other times he will follow his inclination. As a result, you will never know what he holds. Leave him alone. At least then you know that, when he bids no trump, he probably has a singleton in your suit, and you can bid accordingly.

Don't try to make your partner bid your way. If he is an overbidder or an underbidder, leave him be—just be aware of his foibles. But it can be fatal to try to allow for his penchant by going the other way yourself. For instance, if you try to offset partner's overbidding by drastic underbidding on your part, he is quite likely to overbid even more to offset your conservative actions.

Lastly, don't berate partner for what you perceive to be an error on his part—even if you are right! A "Tough luck, partner," or "Well done" if he makes the contract, or even no comment at all, goes a lot further than criticism, no matter how well intentioned it is or how softly it is delivered.

Trimming Fat In Government

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Gov. Ricardo Bordallo is planning to trim the fat from the government of Guam — and he's not talking about the budget.

Bordallo this week ordered government department heads to design a physical fitness program for their employees and have workers join a weight reducing program sponsored by the government.

The governor says the programs, which he wants prepared by March 15, should include a plan for intramural sports competition between employees of the government, the largest employer on this Western Pacific island of 100,000 people.

The weight reducing program, run by the Department of Public Health and Social Services, consists of nine one-hour sessions for groups of 10 to 20 workers.

Studies have shown that employees are more productive when they are in top physical shape, Bordallo said.

Vet Doesn't Spend Time On 'Ifs'

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — If William K. Conard had not written a letter asking to join the Army, volunteered for Vietnam, gone on a search and destroy mission when he was scheduled to stay in camp, aided a wounded man whom he has not heard from since, he would not be blind and crippled.

But Conard does not waste his time on "ifs." He considers himself a lucky man. "Seventy men stumbled onto a Viet Cong base camp, and only 21 came out. If it had not been for the American artillery strike the captain called in, none of us would have survived."

One of those shells exploded 12 feet from Conard as he tended a soldier's head wound. Shrapnel destroyed both his eyes, left his face otherwise untouched, lacerated his body from shoulder to knees and broke seven bones. He was 20 years old at the time. He was awarded the Bronze Star for valor and two Purple Hearts.

Ten years after the signing of the Paris peace accords, Conard needs no memorial to remind him of the Vietnam war. Circumstances of his life remind him daily. He is 37 years old and counts his age in the years since he was blinded, plus 20.

The "ifs" in William Conard's life might have made him bitter and isolated — and for a brief time they did. Now he operates his own firewood and swap-and-trade businesses and is widely known as "Wild Willie," a nickname that belies his settled family life. He married his former roller skating partner, and they now have two sons and live on four acres near town.

"It's how you look at the picture of life," says Conard, whose words paint scenes he cannot see. "Now I look at it a different way. I didn't realize I had so many friends until I got hurt. I came home still bandaged up, and, one Sunday, there were over 100 people at my house."

Before he left the Veterans Administration Hospital near Chicago, where he underwent mobility training to cope with his handicap, his growing bitterness was evident. A doctor called him into a room, closed the door and gave him a talking to that changed the course of his life. "He said, 'Now Bill, you are in a prison. You are going to be in that prison the rest of your life. You've got to come out of it. Only you can do it.' We talked, I guess, an hour. He made me have a whole lot better outlook. When I left that room, I knew I was going to make a go of it."

He came home alone to his mother's house in Canton on the Continental Trailways bus. There were no bands playing, but there were plenty of friendly people on hand to help.

He remembered his love for swapping and trading during his boyhood days, and began trading furniture and appliances, dealing at area flea markets and operating a firewood business. With the help of his father-in-law, James Holt, who holds the wood, he uses a chain saw to cut firewood. "Back when I could see, I used a chain saw a lot. I know it's dangerous, but not the way we do it."

When Conard called a Canton radio station swap show with a set of drums and some chickens to trade, announcer Cliff Hannah dubbed the veteran "Wild Willie and his Chicken Band." The affectionate nickname stuck and Conard uses it in his flea market dealings.

"A lot of people don't know I'm blind," said Conard. A dealer in an adjoining booth has twice asked him to "keep an eye on" her booth while she went to the snack bar. "That woman doesn't know yet that I'm blind," he said.

Conard said religion helped him make it through the tough times.

"Now, when I open my eyes in the morning, the first thing I do is thank the Lord for letting me live another day. When I leave here, I'm going to see again. In the meantime, my handicap is not going to hold me back."

Fishing Offers Economic Base

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Long before the heyday of offshore oil and gas, Louisiana had its shrimp and oysters and fish — a bountiful resource which has been shared openly with fishermen from other Gulf Coast states.

But as the state's economy grows tighter with the drop in oil and gas revenues, fisheries are being considered again as the possible answer for a new economic base.

"Newcomers to the state are amazed to find that a portion of Louisiana-harvested blue crabs are routinely trucked to Maryland and Virginia for processing," said a report prepared at Louisiana State University.

"Plaquemines Parish oysters are shipped to Alabama for shucking, and shrimp landed in Delcambre are hauled to Mississippi for packing."

The report, issued less than two months ago, noted that state fisheries provide 42,000 jobs and economic benefits estimated at $750 million.

Until that report came out, said Sam Nunez, acting president of the state Senate, no one in state government knew how many jobs were related to the industry, partly because many of the jobs are seasonal.

"It is hard to keep up with," he said. "Many of these people are trapping for furs when they're not fishing."

The dockside value of shrimp, oysters, crawfish and finfish harvested in Louisiana in 1980 was estimated at over $615 million.

Louisiana fishermen led the way, coming in at $193.5 million, followed by Florida with $172.7 million, Texas at $174.8 million, Alabama at $44.1 million and Mississippi at $30.2 million.

The report said, "With secondary sales and employment, the value of Louisiana fisheries could exceed $1 billion."

That does not include the benefits from sports fishermen, who buy licenses, tackle and gasoline. However, sports fishermen offer some underhanded competition to commercial fishermen by selling their offshore catches.

In addition, the report noted Louisiana doesn't take advantage of finfish for processing, while the other states do.

"You can go to Tampa and along a five-mile stretch there's nothing but giant processing plants," Nunez said. "Where are ours.?"

In 1980, Louisiana had 117 processing plants while the west coast of Florida alone had 176 and the east coast, another 58.

"In general, particularly in Florida and Texas, they invest money university-wise and in promotion of seafood," he said. "You have to have venture capital to attract the big processing plants."

LSU, a seagrant university with experts in the field, admitted in its lengthy, technical report that the university hasn't done what it should.

"The university has several programs that deal with fisheries problems, but they are administered autonomously, they address problems in a piecemeal fashion, and they are neither coherent nor coordinated," said the report.

It asked for another $1.4 million to provide a complete report on the industry — a hard request when the governor, facing a deficit, wants to cut out half of the $600,000 the university gets for various programs involving fisheries.

Two nationally known economists addressed the Louisiana Legislature in January, saying that one way to supplement oil and gas with other industries is to have "venture capital."

However, Louisiana law prohibits statewide banking that would allow several banks to merge and pool assets to offer big money for such speculative enterprise.

Cyanide Theft

BILSTON, England (AP) — Police are investigating the theft of 390 pounds of cyanide — enough to kill half a million people — from a local electroplating factory. The police said they had no idea what the thieves' motive was.

They said three large drums, each containing 130 pounds of matchbox-size tablets of the poison, were stolen from the factory last weekend. The drums were marked with skull and crossbones.

Shopping Carts Are Herded Up

Landeros travels all over Tucson in a dented pickup truck, trying to round up herds of shopping carts.

He is president and sole employee of Maverick Cart Co. and he lassoes stolen or strayed shopping carts for nine grocery and department stores.

The carts are worth $60 to $130 each. Landeros gets about $3 per cart returned.

Losses in parts of Arizona that Landeros does not patrol amounted to more than $500,000 last year, according to a spokesman for the Retail Grocers Association of Arizona.

"Those little carts are like calves, you know," he says. "They don't get far away from me."

He got into the business by chance.

"One day I accidentally ran over one, and it made me so mad I said, 'One of these days I'll retire and pick them all up,'" he said.

The day came sooner than he reckoned, when a forklift he was driving overturned two years ago. He fractured three vertebrae, broke an arm and tore cartilage on both knees.

He can't lift his right arm and still suffers headaches, but a year of recovery was all it took for Landeros, 62, to begin his new career. To remain eligible for a pension, he limits his earnings to $5,500 a year.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Last weekend I left Phillip and the kids. I was gone only for three days, but the guilt I felt at abandoning them was as profound as if I had purchased a one-way ticket to Tanzania.

And guilt was not the only emotion I experienced. Also plaguing me was a deep concern over what the extent of the damage to my home would be. After all, I had indulged in such foolishness once before, only to return to a house that required major excavation before any signs of civilization could be discovered.

The living room floor was covered with old newspapers, magazines, old snacks, new ants, toys, shoes and dirty socks. The rest of the dirty clothes were on the floors of the bedrooms. The kitchen counters sported a complete set of everyday china covered with all sorts of developing flora and fauna. None of the food had been put up, including the milk and the mayonnaise. The linoleum looked like a dry lakebed.

Meg, who was a mere toddler at the time, had been vegetating in the same diaper for many hours. She was furious because my first act after I changed her was to dismantle the make-shift blanket tents in the dining room. She made it all too clear that she did not consider me a fun person like her father.

If Phillip and Meg had that much fun as a twosome, I could just imagine what the two of them plus Zachary would do when left to their own devices. I considered having the locks changed, swallowing the new keys and renting a camper for them, but that solution seemed a bit drastic. Instead, I bought paper plates.

Overcoming my characteristic lethargy, I fixed casseroles and placed them in the refrigerator. I taped the instructions to the oven door. I placed trash cans prominently in each room. I threw away the back issues of all the magazines and newspapers.

I placed two changes of clothing in each child's room and made it plain with various undisguised threats that no other clothes were to be touched.

I farmed out the kids to friends who had nothing better to do with their Friday afternoon. I packed for myself. I took most of Phillip's shoes with me.

By Friday morning I was organized. I followed Phillip around the house giving him last minute instructions. "You will remember, won't you, to pick Meg up from the Brownie sleep-over tomorrow at 8:45 precisely. She has to be at the school at 9 sharp to practice being a tree for the spring festival. Zachary will be at Bev's when you get home tonight. Try to get home early. Now are you really sure you can handle all this?"

"I can manage just as well as you can."

"That does not comfort me."

"Come on now. For the last time, don't worry about us. We'll have a great time."

"That's what I'm afraid of."

"We will not wreck the hosue, OK? Now you just go on a have a good time."

I sank down in a chair. "I think I'm too tired to."

Secretary Is Also 'Voice Of Justice'

ATLANTA (AP) — For Cuban refugees seeking freedom in Atlanta or foreign nationals facing drug charges on the Georgia coast, the voice of American justice frequently belongs to Alba Calhoun.

Ms. Calhoun is one of two Georgians certified to translate federal court proceedings for Spanish-speaking defendants. The other has been out of the country lately, increasing the work Ms. Calhoun fits around her full-time duties as a senior secretary at the Coca-Cola Co.

"The phone is ringing constantly," she said, praising her company for allowing her to "run off for an hour" to hearings in the middle of the workday.

The laws of supply and demand have not filled the legal system's need for interpreters. The demand is sporadic, so Ms. Calhoun cannot turn her interpreting sideline into a full-time job.

Supply also is sharply limited by the stringent requirements for federal certification. Twenty-six of 1,200 people passed the last round of examinations, Ms. Calhoun said.

So scheduling proceedings before federal judges for Spanish-speaking defendants frequently depends on Ms. Calhoun's availability, said John Woodyard, court clerk for U.S. District Judge Dorinda Evans.

"She gets around and gets as many of us as she can," Woodyard said.

The need for translation jumped when Cubans incarcerated after the 1980 "boatlift" arrived at the Atlanta federal penitentiary, Woodyard said.

Ms. Calhoun also was called to Brunswick for the recent proceedings for foreign nationals arrested in the seizure of a drug-laden freighter off the Georgia coast.

"I had a call last night from an attorney in Miami to see if I may work for him in April," she said.

She frequently spends nights and weekends translating depositions for defense lawyers.

"I work about 70 hours a week," she said. The money helped put her elder son through college and now finances her younger son's education.

Of the tales of crime she hears, she said, "You get to a point where it goes in one ear and out the other."

"I did some transcribing of a tape where a murderer was describing his crimes, and I would say that was probably the most disturbing."

Ms. Calhoun, 39, grew up at her parent's hotel in Puerto Rico playing with the English-speaking children of Air Force officers.

"When I started kindergarten, I spoke English and found out I was bilingual," she said.

'Cat Burglar' Takes Up New Job—As A Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — When Columbia psychiatrist and cat burglar Ian Gale went to prison, he was stripped of his medical license and barred from ever using his law degree. But he has pursued another career — writing.

Gale has devoted much of his time in prison to writing a book about his life and his decision to lead a double life, to create a person out of thin air who existed on government computers and to slink through the shadows of rainy nights to steal.

When he began burglarizing the homes of wealthy Columbians, he had an established psychiatric practice, was a consultant to the state Department of Social Services and had, as sort of a hobby, graduated from the University of South Carolina Law School.

Gale has been in prison since December 1979, when he was sentenced to 15 years for a series of housebreakings and thefts that puzzled local police for months and stunned the medical and legal communities when Gale was arrested.

"My principal interest in the publication of this work," Gale writes in the preface, "has been stimulated by innumerable queries which have arisen from old friends and new acquaintances alike, all of whom ask basically the same question: 'How in the world did you become involved in the type of criminal activity you did?'"

He is seeking a publisher for his manuscript, titled "In From The Rain," which offers a detailed examination of his decision to become a thief and an unusual self-portrait of this modern day Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

The book is "co-written" by Jean-Baptiste Cambrioleur, which may hint at the author's personality. Cambrioleur is the French word for burglar.

Gale, 45, credits his mother with inspiring him academically and training him in the social graces. However, he also recounts early in the book that she once placed him atop a pile of furniture and threatened to ignite it if his stepfather failed to comply with some demand she made.

Other memories included the time his mother burned his right hand to teach him not to play with matches and when she threatened to throw him down a flight of stairs during one of her numerous arguments with her husband.

Yet, he also writes of his mother's "deep affection and conscientious parenting."

"She was constantly at my side," he says. "I recall her teaching me to plant flowers and playing childhood games with me and we often watched natural phenomena together, such as aurora borealis, with shared interest.

"Once we watched a death struggle between a large caterpillar and a single red ant. ... This struggle lasted about an hour before the caterpillar's demise."

Gale writes that he decided to become a psychiatrist after reading about Sigmund Freud in his mother's library. He also writes that his need for thrills led him into auto racing and a brief encounter with Cuban revolutionaries.

Cambrioleur says, "The thirteen years from 1960 until 1973 were a period of marked development for Ian in other areas of which most people who knew him were completely unaware," including a 12-year membership in the John Birch Society.

By 1973, Gale had come to Columbia via his Army service and, upon discharge, had opened a private practice, which he operated alone without a nurse or receptionist.

In May 1974, he said a patient who had become his mistress complained of serious financial problems.

"God, if only I'd get robbed," he quoted her. "I've got a lot of silverware and jewelry, and I'd collect a bunch of insurance."

"My first 'burglary' therefore was performed not for my personal gain but to help someone else," Gale wrote.

After breaking into her apartment and stealing her family silver and jewelry, which he packed in a suitcase and later returned, he faked a ransacking to make the break-in appear authentic.

"When I finished I left throught the back sliding glass door, locked it and made a forced entry by breaking the lock with a tire iron. Walking briskly to my car, feeling alert and excited, I thought, 'Good God, I could enjoy this line of work.'"

And he did for the next five years. As part of his after-dark profession, Gale said he rented an apartment for a non-existent person for whom he obtained a Social Security number and a driver's license.

He scouted carefully, wore surgical or kidskin gloves to avoid fingerprints and called the homes he planned to rob shortly before he arrived to make sure no one was there.

Figuring out security systems was a game. Scaling a high wall topped with broken glass and barbed wire required only using a rope and hook and a rubber door mat to protect himself.

He described the easiest and the most difficult doors and windows to break into as well as the most common mistakes homeowners make. "On five occasions I have been able to find keys to disarm a burglar alarm," he said in admonishing homeowners against leaving house or alarm keys where burglars can find them.

His story also has a bit of humor. Gale described his unexpected meeting with another burglar and told of a woman who viciously beat her dog for barking at him while he was breaking into a neighbor's house.

By March 1979, Gale knew police investigators were on his trail.

They had traced the non-existent person to his former mistress who, unknown to him, agreed to cooperate and received immunity from prosecution.

In July, he was arrested. By December, he was in jail, having pleaded guilty to eight break-ins.

Portrait On Loan

RALEIGH — A likeness of Thomas Blount has come home to Tarboro. On Friday a delegation representing Tarboro's historic Blount-Bridgers House traveled to Raleigh to accept on loan from the N.C. Museum of History a portrait of Blount, the soldier-statesman who built the house in the early 19th century.

The portrait, a profile done in pastel on rose-tinted paper, was painted about 1810 by Saint-Memin.

Thomas Blount, known as a military leader, politician and successful merchant, was one of three prominent North Carolinians to live in the Blount-Bridgers House during its early history. Louis D. Wilson, former speaker of the N.C. Senate and commander of the Edgecombe Guards during the Mexican War, acquired the house in 1831.

In 1849 the house became the property of Luther Bridgers, an attorney and member of the N.C. General Assembly.

Springfest '83

"Springfest '83," sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, East Carolina University, the Greenville Recreation and Parks association and the Downtown Association, will be held April 9 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The second annual Springfest is a one-day celebration and a preliminary to the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival, which follows in April.

Artists and craftsmen wanting to exhibit their work should contact the Springfest Committee immediately. Organizations wishing to sponsor a food booth should also contact the committee.

Springfest, which will be located at the intersection of Fifth and Evans streets, will feature an exhibition of arts and crafts for sale, music, dancing and drama.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Follow your intuitive hunches now since they can be helpful in your dealings with others. Flash that winning smile more.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Contacting influential persons today can be the best means through which you can advance in career matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Your intuitive perception is keen now, so put it to good use and gain your objectives. Plan the coming week's activity.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study contracts you have made and if any revisions are necessary, get at them early. An expert can give excellent advice.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study new ways to cut down on expenses. Listen carefully to what a family member has to say and follow the advice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Engage in recreational activities with congenials. Carry through with ideas of a creative nature in your spare time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your surroundings and make improvements where needed. Make plans to have more abundance in the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good day to visit places where you can gain a better appreciation of life. Think kindly of others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to make your possessions more valuable. Ideal day for meditating and searching for the truth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Visit good friends and show that you value the relationship. A day when you can easily make a good impression on others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Engage in confidential work that could make the future loom brighter for you. Express happiness with close ties.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be interested in the latest trends and inventions. Be sure to give the right spiritual and ethical training to keep this mind working along constructive channels. Give the finest education you can afford.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, FEB. 28, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to expect nothing of other persons. Avoid negative thinking and gain in career activities. Be sure to be kind and gentle in your approach to others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) There is so much to do as the new week opens that it would be wise not to delve into any new interests at the present time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Although you may have been hurt by a close tie, don't lose control but find out the true reason for it. Be more cheerful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be sure to carry through with promises you have made to family members. Be alert to conditions that are unfavorable.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep busy at the routines at hand and curtail long discussions with intimates that could slow you down.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your monetary position and don't spend more than you can afford. Important you use self-control during day and evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) This is not the day to kick up your heels as you may feel like doing, since you could run into more trouble than you can handle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't let your temper flare up with another, since this will not improve the situation. Take no chances with your reputation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A new plan needs further study to be successful. Don't confide in outsiders what your personal wishes are. Engage in new hobby.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen to the complains of others and try to be helpful. Don't neglect regular routines at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Not a good day for putting new ideas in operation since problems could crop up that are difficult to handle.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You could be in a mood to quarrel with others, so use that energy on constructive matters instead. Be logical.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Situations arise that are not to your liking, so be on the alert and make the right decisions. Show others you are wise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those interesting young persons who should be taught to curb temper and to use reason to maintain harmony with others. Teach to have more empathy for others instead of thinking of own feelings exclusively.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

4077th Ends Tour Of Duty

The Korean War ends this week.

Actually, the conflict ends for the second time — as many loyal TV viewers already know. It's no secret that the comedy-drama hit "M*A*S*H" is ending its 11th and final season with an episode that will also conclude the war (which has lasted three times longer on the show than it did in reality) and send the Mobile Army Surgical Hospital home. That last two-and-a-half-hour installment, directed and co-written by series star Alan Alda, will air on CBS Monday, Feb. 28.

Hawkeye, B.J., "Hot Lips," Col. Potter, Maj. Winchester, Klinger and Father Mulcahy will live on in syndicated repeats; in fact, the program is now the top ratings winner available to local stations. A deal to continue the stories of several characters in a new series, tentatively titled "After M*A*S*H" has been all but finalized. Still, the conclusion of the original is a bittersweet occasion for everyone, production staff and audience alike.

Larry Gelbart, the skilled writer who adapted the story for TV, was directly involved for only the first four seasons. Since then, he's worked on screenplays for movies, the current smash "Tootsie" being one, but the end of "M-A-S-H" is still a milestone for him.

"I'm among the people who have been with it from day one," he says, "but I've had this nice, six-year airlock to get used to the idea of the show being off. For me, the day-to-day passion ceased long ago, but seeing the reruns of those early shows still makes it an ongoing thing."

Mike Farrell, alias B.J., also prepared himself for the series climax long before it was filmed. "When we had our initial discussion about whether or not to end the show," he says, "I made my feelings very clear. Harry Morgan (Potter), Jamie Farr (Klinger) and Bill Christopher (Mulcahy) continued to discuss various possibilities of going on, and they finally arrived at one that struck a spark. I love all three of them, and I'm pleased to see them doing something they want to do. However, they knew I wasn't interested in reprising B.J."

EDITORS' NOTE: The final episode of "M-A-S-H" will air the same evening in the United States on CBS.

Dual Acting Duty

Along with his role as unorthodox attorney Tom Hughes on "As the World Turns," actor Justin Deas has accepted an additional challenge. He's begun rehearsing for the lead role in the new off-Broadway play "Buck," by Ronald Ribman, which will be the first joint production of two of New York's most innovative theater companies, Playwrights Horizons and the American Place Theatre. Deas will continue with his "As the World Turns" role during the run of "Buck."

There Are Two

Laura Malone was surprised when a viewer named a daughter after her character, Blaine, on "Another World." Said Laura: "Blaine is really a man's name, so it's good to know there's another female Blaine around."

Black Comedy Lightens As Series

Jane Fonda, Lily Tomlin and Dolly Parton

Office workers tend to have gripes, but they became even more a part of the American consciousness after the release of the 1980 movie hit "9 to 5," a film that proved popular enough to inspire the current weekly series. Though still humorous, the original story is somewhat darker in its nature; it makes its network TV debut on CBS Sunday, Feb. 27.

As executive producer and star, Jane Fonda — along with screenwriter-director Colin Higgins — fashioned one of the toughest type of movie to pull off successfully: the black comedy, which gives an irreverent yet fairly accurate view of an accepted institution. (Such Paddy Chayefsky works as "The Hospital" and "Network" are among the other films that qualify.) By spoofing the spoken and unspoken rules of the office, the movie became the perfect escape for any employee who's ever felt maligned by his or her boss.

In "9 to 5," the despised overlord is Franklin Hart Jr. (Dabney Coleman), the ultimate in chauvinistic users. Three female subordinates have good reason to hate him: Violet Newstead (Lily Tomlin), his right-hand "girl," is passed over for a long-awaited promotion, and Hart also steals one of her brightest ideas for company efficiency and claims it as his own; Doralee Rhodes (Dolly Parton, in her film debut) is rumored to be his mistress, with Hart himself fueling the gossip; and newcomer Judy Bernly (Miss Fonda) is generally at odds with his demeaning manner.

Through comic complications that find the ladies thinking they've accidentally poisoned Hart, they end up imprisoning him and running the office themselves, while everyone else thinks the boss is merely too busy to see anyone. That includes his nosey assistant Roz (Elizabeth Wilson), who goes so far as to hide in bathroom stalls to pick up on juicy chit-chat.

A lot of the humor of "9 to 5" stems from identification with the situation. It's hard not to sympathize with the heroines, especially in a riotous fantasy sequence detailing how each would like to dispose of Hart.

He's Only Human

Armand Assante has worked with such glamorous actresses as Sophia Loren, Jaclyn Smith, Dyan Cannon, Anne Archer and Goldie Hawn. When asked if their beauty disturbed his concentration or acting, he replied: "Of course, I'm aware of their beauty. I'm only human."

JAMES MACARTHUR stars as a bridge engineer who tries to reassure two women (Char Fontane, center, and Barbara Rush) who, along with others, are trapped on a collapsing bridge caused by a shift in a nearby fault, in "The Night the Bridge Fell Down," to air on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, Feb. 28 (8-11 p.m.).

Troubled Bridge Traps Motorists

A number of motorists are trapped on a collapsing bridge and are further terrorized when they discover that a fleeing bank robber is among them in Irwin Allen's "The Night the Bridge Fell Down," airing on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, Feb. 28 (8-11 p.m.).

In the suspense drama, shifting sands near the pylons weaken the bridge, and Cal (James MacArthur), an engineer, tries to cut through the red tape to close the span. Problems mount when Johnny (Desi Arnaz Jr.), a bank robber fleeing with his fiancee, Dee (Char Fontane), crashes into a stalled truck, triggering the actual collapse.

In another car, Paul Warren (Leslie Nielsen), an equally desperate businessman, who has stolen bonds in an embezzlement scheme, waits with his office aide and lover, Elaine (Barbara Rush). But Paul's primary concern, at that moment, is for an ill child he is rushing to the hospital.

Johnny is frantic as he attempts to keep the upper hand, despite the presence of wounded police officer Harvey (Richard Gilliland), who had pursued him onto the bridge.

When Cal, aided by the Coast Guard, initiates a rescue scheme, he is hampered by Johnny, who attempts to thwart the efforts to rig up a boatswain's chair to rescue the imperiled travelers. Precious time is lost when Cal is forced to contend with Johnny's menacing activity. Finally, he receives aid from an unexpected source.

"The Night the Bridge Fell Down," which also stars Gregory Sierra as Diego, was directed by Georg Fenady.

'Special Bulletin'

"Special Bulletin," a film dramatizing the world-wide impact and fear created by anti-nuclear terrorists who vow to destroy Charleston, S.C., with their nuclear bomb unless the 968 missiles ringing the city are deactivated, will be presented later this season on NBC-TV.

The drama unfolds to the world on television when regular programming is interrupted by a special bulletin as a network news team, played by Ed Flanders and Gail Strickland, reports the action.

"This will be presented as it might happen with television cameras on the scene," said Don Ohlmeyer, the film's executive producer. "The entire movie will be produced on tape, rather than on film, so it will look like an actual news broadcast."

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please give me some information on Jameson Parker, who plays on "Simon & Simon"? Also, where could I write to him? WYNONA MOSS, HENDERSON, N.C.

TO WYNONA IN HENDERSON: Jameson Parker was born in Baltimore, Maryland, on November 18. His father was a career foreign service officer and Jameson spent most of his childhood overseas. "We lived two years in Belgium, four years in Germany and two years in Switzerland, and we often wouldn't come home between assignments," he recalls. "I attended 10 different schools in 12 years." His father eventually left the state department to become the curator of the museum at Mount Vernon, Virginia, and Jameson divided his time between there and Vermont, where his mother lived. In 1972, Jameson moved to New York, where he eventually obtained work in television commercials, off-Broadway productions, and was later cast as Dale Robinson in the daytime series "Somerset," followed by the role of Brad Vernon on "One Life to Live." As a means of self-protection while living in New York, Jameson took up karate. It is his principal hobby, and he works out five days a week as he goes for his second degree black belt. He and his wife, Bonnie, an actress and photographer, live in Los Angeles with their three-year-old son, Jamie. Fans may write to Jameson Parker in c/o "Simon & Simon," CBS Entertainment, Television City, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, California, 90036.

DEAR MICHELE: How do I get in touch with Larry Rhine, the writer of "Diff'rent Strokes"? WALTER SETTLEMYRE, HICKORY, N.C.

TO WALTER IN HICKORY: Write to "Diff'rent Strokes," in c/o NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, California, 91523.

DEAR MICHELE: Would you please give me some information on John Travolta? Where does he live, how old is he and does he have any brothers and sisters? TRINA SKAGGS, FORT BRAGG, N.C.

TO TRINA IN FORT BRAGG: Born February 18, 1954 in Englewood, New Jersey, John is the baby of a family of six children, all in show business. You may remember his sister Ellen in the recently canceled "Joanie Loves Chachi" series. John maintains residences in both West Hollywood and a large avocado ranch outside Los Angeles.

'Perfect' Lovers' Meeting Delayed

"Your Place or Mine," a contemporary romantic comedy about the difficulties mature single persons encounter meeting suitable partners, will be broadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, March 2 (9-11 p.m.).

In the story, Alexandra (Bonnie Franklin), a San Francisco psychiatrist who is deserted by her lover fears that she is becoming like many of her patients — desperate to relieve the loneliness in her life. The well-meaning matchmaking of her best friends, Karen and Phil Tanton (Tyne Daly, Peter Bonerz), fails to pair her up with a suitable partner.

The Tantons' efforts to get Alexandra together with their first choice, Nick (Robert Klein), meet with particularly frustrating complications. Nick is a former advertising executive turned landscape designer, who is experiencing his own disappointments in romance.

Despite Nick and Alexandra's obvious suitability for one another, it begins to look as if the made-in-heaven couple may never meet.

"Your Place or Mine" was directed by Robert Day from a script by Terry Louise Fisher and Steve Brown.

Miss Franklin is perhaps best known for her portrayal of the divorced Ann Romano in the series "One Day at a Time." Her other television credits include the features "Broadway," "The Law," "Portrait of a Rebel: Margaret Sanger" and the musical-variety special "Bonnie and the Franklins." For her performance in "Applause" on Broadway, Miss Franklin won the Theater World Award, an Outer Critics Circle Award, an Aegis Theater Award and a Tony Award nomination.

Klein, who is known primarily as a comedian, has recorded two albums, "Child of the Fifties" and "Mind Over Matter," which were both nominated for Grammy Awards. On Broadway, he appeared in "Morning, Noon and Night" and "New Faces of 1968" and was nominated for a Tony for the musical "They're Playing Our Song."

Dawber Stars

Pam Dawber and James Naughton star in "Last of the Great Survivors," a romantic comedy now in production for CBS on Los Angeles locations.

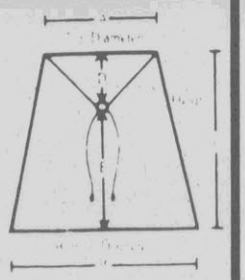

Miss Dawber portrays a social worker who tries to help a group of senior citizens living in a decrepit old apartment building that has been condemned by a county building inspector, played by Naughton.

Novel Extended

"The Thorn Birds," the "ABC Novel for Television" originally announced as a nine-hour program, has been extended by one hour. The 10-hour motion picture will premiere Sunday, March 27, on ABC-TV.

ABC executives and the film's creators, executive producer David L. Wolper, producer Stan Margulies, and director Daryl Duke, decided the additional hour should be added to the final episode of the drama in order not to lose key story elements that already had been filmed. The film is based on Colleen McCullough's best-selling novel about an Australian family's triumph and tragedy.

The Real Truth

An ankle injury forced "Search for Tomorrow's" Marcus Smythe (Dane Taylor) to trim his daily four-mile jogging habit for awhile, but not his skydiving. Says Smythe: "It's sheer, utter terror, and anyone who tells you otherwise is a liar."

Collins Committed To Series

Like Jake Cutter, the expatriate American pilot he plays in "Tales of the Gold Monkey," the ABC adventure series set in the remote South Pacific in 1938, Stephen Collins has the makings of an old-fashioned matinee idol — an engaging smile, blond hair, blue eyes, a trim frame and a quick wit.

Add his versatility as an actor — established by his roles in "Star Trek — The Motion Picture," "Loving Couples" and "All the President's Men" — and it becomes clear why Collins was cast in the series.

Why would Collins choose to undertake the demanding pace of a weekly television series?

"Starring in a series is like a marriage. It's a tremendous commitment," he said. "I had turned down series for a long time and for a lot of reasons, and when I decided that this might be the time, I knew I had to find something I really loved and could live with for several years. When I read the script for 'Tales of the Gold Monkey' I just flipped."

"We're doing an old-fashioned show," series creator and executive producer Don Bellisario told Daily Variety. "I see nothing wrong with that. I set it in the 1930s because the times then were simple, not complicated as they are today. The audience yearns for those days of simplicity."

It was that clarity that most attracted Collins. "Don has a wonderful idea that you can really tell stories about 'good guys' and 'bad guys' in a time when that point of view wasn't Pollyanna-like," he said.

Early reports comparing the series to "Raiders of the Lost Ark," miss the mark, says Bellisario, explaining that "Gold Monkey" had been in development for several years when the success of "Raiders" created a favorable climate for a period show.

The style of the series is purposefully derivative of the action-adventure films of its period — a period when elaborate soundstage and backlot sets evoked far-away places, while providing infinitely more control of lighting, atmosphere or environment.

Collins shares Bellisario's love of the period. "In movies like 'Only Angels Have Wings,' 'To Have and Have Not' or 'Casablanca,' the good people had all sorts of colors and warts, but they were good," Collins said. "And the bad people were interesting. They had an ethic system all their own. The 'Sidney Greenstreets' could be counted on to be evil, but you knew what their parameters were. There's grey in the character, but not in who the character is."

Sax Appeal

Actor, songwriter, musician Tom Nielsen, known to daytime viewers as Floyd Parker on "Guiding Light," has organized a new band to display his musical talents (viewers have been treated to several performances by his band. Tom Nielsen and the Parker Brothers, in past episodes of "Guiding Light"). The new band, known as the Sax Maniacs, will be appearing at the Diplomat Hotel in Miami, Fla., March 28-April 3. Nielsen, who has played his sax at several New York City night clubs, heads the six-man band.

O'Neil High On Anthologies

Terry O'Neil, the subject of this interview, joined CBS two years ago as executive producer of the network's NFL broadcasts and "CBS Sports Saturday/Sunday."

Q: Do sports anthologies reveal the persona of the networks?

A: I think the appeal of an anthology series lies in its "free form"; it's an absolutely blank canvas on which we may paint anything we choose. On most of our programming we work within a very tight framework and most of our decisions are made for us. On a series like NFL Football, game coverage has become so standardized among the networks that we're virtually indistinguishable from each other.

The anthology series is different. We're handed 90 minutes and our only absolute is that we must get in 12 commercials and two station breaks. Beyond that, we can name the series as we want, pick a host and broadcast it from wherever we want, program any of a hundred different sports events and produce any of a number of sports reports.

Q: How has "CBS Sports Saturday/Sunday" been doing compared to "Wide World of Sports" and "SportsWorld"?

A: The 1982 performance story can be summed up in one sentence: CBS is at an all-time high, ABC is at an all-time low and NBC is now running third.

A: We have what we think is a pretty strong lineup of winter sports events which includes the World Figure Skating Championships and all three world championships in the sport of speed skating. Our viewers will see the most comprehensive coverage of World Cup Skiing ever produced by an American television network. Almost every weekend we'll have highlights of current races and full event coverage of two giant slalom races and a downhill.

Championship boxing will be important for us and long-distance running, perhaps the fastest growing spectator and participant sport in America, will be represented. We'll have live coverage from Brisbane, Australia, for a marathon in April.

Q: You keep stressing live coverage — why is it so important?

A: Immediacy, impact and unpredictability are the virtues that attract us to live coverage. We decided that there was a certain incompatibility in having Brent Musburger conclude a live interview in the studio with, say, a Billie Jean King, and then cut to a taped event that had been "in the can" since last summer. Only the live and same-day events look appropriate sitting side-by-side with our live news and features in the studio. Live programming is more expensive and frought with potential disasters, but we think it's worth it because viewers appreciate seeing an event as it happens.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

There will be one clown that might be just a bit happier than any of the other clowns on this year's edition of the "Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus," airing Tuesday on CBS.

Nineteen-year-old Nic Berry, a fellow Virginian, watched last year's TV circus special and decided he wanted to be a clown. His chance to audition came at an open call for circus performers while working at Busch Gardens in Williamsburg. Much to his surprise, Berry was one of the 60 — out of 6,000 who applied — to be accepted for Clown College. From that small graduating class only 21 got jobs with this year's circus. If you have trouble spotting Nic — he will be the clown with the newest, brightest and happiest smile.

This is the week we bid farewell to "M*A*S*H." The two-and-a-half hour movie will air on Monday. There is talk (getting louder all the time) that there will be a spinoff starring Harry Morgan, Jamie Farr and William Christopher. The proposed series, to be called "After M*A*S*H," would be set in a veteran's hospital after the war.

Are you curious about what type of girl our handsome "Knight Rider," David Hasselhoff, prefers? Tune in Friday night — David's real-life girlfriend, Catherine Hickland, will guest star on the series as a young lawyer who was his fiance in his former life as Michael Long.

Incidentally — if you think David is one of the chosen few who has everything — you're right! In fact, he even has a couple of things he would rather keep hidden. He admits to having the skinniest and longest legs in Hollywood and refuses to bare them in public.

Why you need this Extra Protection Hospital Plan

It's a well-known fact that the cost of hospital care continues to climb at an alarming rate. That's why most of us carry some form of health insurance—whether it be a group policy, major medical coverage or even Medicare—to share in the cost of a hospital stay.

But have you stopped to consider that as hospital charges go up, so does your share of the bill?

Most health policies pay only 80% of your hospital bill—and in years past, that may have been enough. But today, with the average cost of a trip to the hospital reaching over $1,900.00*, your share could be difficult to handle.

If you were just returning home from the hospital, would you be able to write a check for your share of the bill? If not, would you have to take money out of your savings? Or worse yet, would you have to look for help?

These questions point out just how important it is to have this Extra Protection Hospital Plan. The cash benefits you collect could mean the difference between getting through a financial crisis and having to look to your savings or elsewhere for help.

That's why we say:
We're here when you need us.

* American Hospital Association

I want to share with you this touching letter that we received recently from one of our policyowners.

Robert A Reed
President

Physicians Mutual Insurance Company
Attn: Claims Department

Gentlemen:

It certainly was a fortunate day for me when I received your brochure and decided immediately to enroll in your company for insurance protection. My insurance became effective November 1st, then, on December 23, I had the misfortune of falling and as a result of that fall, I was hospitalized four different times -- up to April 26.

I was very dubious that you would even consider a claim from me because of the short time since enrollment, but after calling your office (toll-free!) and being advised that "yes, your insurance is good -- just send in your claim form," I was very pleased to know I had the insurance to fall back on and could count on your company as being trustworthy.

I am now in receipt of your four checks covering my four periods of hospital confinement. Thank you very much for this payment and for the prompt and efficient manner in processing my complicated claim.

I certainly will always remain a satisfied policyholder -- and will recommend Physicians Mutual highly to anyone in need of a good reliable insurance company.

Thank you again.

Neoma E. Hannum

Here's how your Extra Protection Hospital Plan helps you beat the rising cost of hospital care!

Pays you $50.00 a day $1,500.00 a month!

You'll collect these cash benefits whenever you are hospitalized for covered sickness or accident. In fact, you'll collect when your doctor places you in the hospital for any reason—even a simple check-up.

Pays you $75.00 a day, $2,250.00 a month for Cancer, Heart Attack

Your daily benefits are increased 50% if you or any covered member of your family is hospitalized for cancer (including leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction).

Pays you double benefits $200.00 a day, $6,000.00 a month for you and your spouse

Under the Husband-Wife or All-Family Plans, you'll collect double your regular benefits during the time you and your spouse are both in the hospital—due to the same or different accidents.

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance

You'll collect benefits over and above any other insurance—including group policies, major medical coverage, workers' compensation—even Medicare.

That's what makes your Extra Protection Hospital Plan so important—because many health policies pay only 80% of your hospital bill. This is the ideal way to get the cash you need to help cover the remaining costs without having to dig into your savings or look for help.

Pays benefits directly to you

Your benefit check will go directly to you unless you tell us otherwise. The money is yours to spend as you wish—to help pay the hospital bill, the doctor's bill, or even household expenses.

Furthermore, your benefits are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

You get lifetime coverage and benefits

There is no limit to the number of days you can collect benefits. That means you'll be protected even if you're hospitalized for the rest of your life!

Pays maternity benefits, too

You're covered for normal childbirth when pregnancy occurs anytime after your policy is issued. And there's no added cost for this coverage!

We can't cancel your protection or raise your rates individually

No matter how old you become or how many claims you have, we GUARANTEE never to cancel or refuse to renew your Extra Protection Hospital Plan. Only you can cancel your coverage.

What's more, you can never be singled out for a rate increase. In fact, the only way we can raise your rates is if we do so for all policies like yours in the entire state. Your rate will not change when you move from one age group to another . . . even if your health changes.

Pays from the very first day in any hospital

You'll collect cash benefits the FIRST DAY and EVERY day you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

You're covered in any hospital in the world, and now that includes federal and VA hospitals as well. However, nursing homes and convalescent, extended-care or self-care units of hospitals do not qualify.

Pre-existing conditions are not covered for the first year

Old health problems (those that became evident or were treated before the effective date of your policy) are not covered for the first year of your policy. But once that year is up, these pre-existing conditions are covered!

If you are 65 or over you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

Reduced benefits for mental illness

Half benefits are paid for up to 30 days' confinement due to mental illness.

Pays full benefits for all ages

Now you can protect your entire family with $50 a day benefits for all, regardless of age.

Even though hospitals charge the same rates for all ages, you'll find that many similar plans have reduced benefits for children and people 65 and over. But this Extra Protection Hospital Plan has no reductions for anyone, at any age.

You can't be turned down!

We guarantee to issue your Extra Protection Hospital Plan (P370 Series) regardless of your age, health or size of family. As soon as we receive your completed application, we will issue your policy and put it in force.

If you're age 65 or over, you'll also receive copies of the North Carolina Buyer's Guides with your policy. If you wish to have the Guides before you apply, you may request them from the company.

Once your policy is issued, your coverage begins immediately—even before your policy arrives in the mail. There's no waiting period. Of course, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis.

If you're already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about additional coverage available, please write for details.

Enroll today! No salesman will call

Simply fill out the brief application and mail it back to Physicians Mutual along with $1.00 for your first month's coverage. There is no medical exam required, no health questions to answer.

It's important to note that you'll be dealing directly with the Company—by mail or by phone—from the time you enroll right up to the time you need us for claim service.

There are no salesmen, no "middlemen" involved. That means fast, direct service.

So don't hesitate—mail your application and $1.00 today!

THREE IMPORTANT GUARANTEES

1. We guarantee to issue this insurance regardless of your age, health or family size.
2. For as long as you live and keep your policy in force, we guarantee never to cancel or refuse to renew your policy.
3. We guarantee to refund your money if, for any reason, you decide you do not want this protection, and you return your policy within 30 days.

A Special Note to People 65 and Over . . .

Too many people 65 and over have seen a serious accident or illness wipe out their life savings almost overnight. Our Extra Protection Hospital Plan can help prevent that from happening to you.

You cannot be turned down for this coverage no matter what your age. And your premiums won't increase when you turn 65.

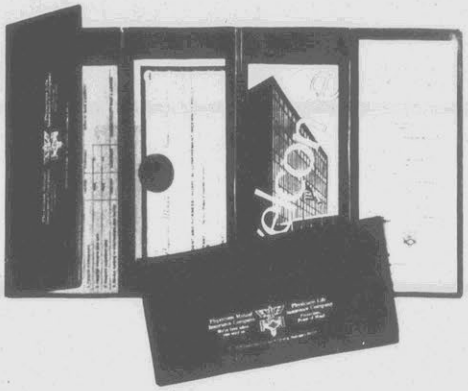

You receive full cash benefits in addition to any other insurance you have, including Medicare—no matter how long you are in the hospital.

Does a film have to be R-rated and cost millions to be a hit? — B.K., Elkhart, Ind.

I think ticket buyers are willing to see movies that aren't loaded with sex and violence. The public wants movies about ordinary people — not bands of Indians scalping settlers or a teen-age maniac knocking off coeds. My next film, Harry and Son, will be a small, intimate movie about a family and relationships. As for the money issue, when I directed Rachel, Rachel starring my wife, Joanne [Woodward], everyone said it would flop. Well, we made it for $800,000, and it's still making money. The amount of money spent doesn't guarantee a box-office hit. Sometimes when millions are invested, taste goes out the window.

How do you react when you see someone reading one of your books? — F.D., Easton, Pa.

Occasionally I'll introduce myself, but normally I don't. It's not that I lack courage, but simply that I feel I'd be intruding. In bookstores, however, if I see somebody with one of my books in hand wondering whether to buy it, I do introduce myself — and say, "You'll love it."

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — Juicier than any Richard Dawson kiss planted on a Family Feud female contestant is the behind-the-scenes story of the two-family feud over the show's production company, Goodson-Todman. Mark Goodson, 67, and the late William Todman were partnered — not all that amicably, it seems — in the company that produced such memorable TV game shows as To Tell the Truth, What's My Line? and The Price Is Right. Now Goodson wants to buy out Todman's estate, saying the Todman share of the partnership is worth $25.5 million. The Todmans claim their stock is worth $56 million, and a so-far-unsuccessful mediation effort puts it at $37.5 million. The two sides are so far apart that legal fees alone will amount to seven figures....Rolling Stone Mick Jagger will receive $2 million for his memoirs, the highest advance ever paid by a British publisher. And Jagger swears, "I'm going to write it meself until I'm not half sure I can't."...Marlon Brando, now living on the island of Tetiaroa north of Tahiti, is writing a screenplay called Fan Tan to be produced by George Englund in Hong Kong. Brando will direct and star in the original story. He and Englund will also collaborate on a one-hour Home Box Office special about Marlon's life in Tetiaroa, to which he escaped from Hollywood a dozen years ago.

NEW YORK — Jeremy Irons, star of TV's Brideshead Revisted, compared media interest on both sides of the Atlantic: "Americans want information on my next film; the British want to know with whom I'm sleeping."...She may have been dressed to kill, but at a recent party with Gregory and Veronique Peck, Angie Dickinson seemed bored to death — or maybe just sleepy. WASHINGTON — Now that she's hit the big time at NBC, anchorwoman Jessica Savitch seems to have forgotten the Philadelphia viewers who helped launch her career in TV news. When the Cosmopolitan Club, a suburban Philadelphia community service group, asked Savitch to be a guest of honor at their fund-raiser, she reportedly told them she receives $10,000 for public appearances — without exception....Since the assassination attempt, President Reagan has kept his speechmaking to a minimum. But more groups than ever are having the President appear as a keynote speaker — on videotape. Reagan has "spoken" recently to such groups as the National Association of Home Builders and the National Radio Broadcasters Association. A White House source says, "He emits such effervescence on the screen that people clap. Some people don't even request the President in person. They request the tape."...Bob Thompson, Washington bureau chief for the Hearst papers, missed his big chance recently. At a televised press conference, the President, using his seating chart, called out Thompson's name. The East Room was quiet. After an awkward moment, the President called on someone else. Thompson, who says he told the press office he wouldn't be there, was as surprised as anyone. "I've been to more than half of his press conferences and he's never called on me. Suddenly, I'm sitting at home and he calls on me," he says, laughing. "I stood up anyway." — Kathleen Maxa and Jane Ottenberg

Why Marriages Fail

By Anne Roiphe

These days so many marriages end in divorce that our most sacred vows no longer ring with truth. "Happily ever after" and "Till death do us part" are expressions that seem on the way to becoming obsolete. Why has it become so hard for couples to stay together? What goes wrong? What has happened to us that close to one-half of all marriages are destined for the divorce courts? How could we have created a society in which 42 percent of our children will grow up in single-parent homes? If statistics could only measure loneliness, regret, pain, loss of self-confidence and fear of the future, the numbers would be beyond quantifying.

Even though each broken marriage is unique, we can still find the common perils, the common causes for marital despair. Each marriage has crisis points and each marriage tests endurance, the capacity for both intimacy and change.

Recent statistics indicate that close to one-half of all marriages are destined for the divorce courts. What is the cause of so much marital despair? Anne Roiphe, celebrated author of Up the Sandbox!, offers her observations on where we've gone wrong — and how to make it right.

Outside pressures such as job loss, illness, infertility, trouble with a child, care of aging parents and all the other plagues of life hit marriage the way hurricanes blast our shores. Some marriages survive these storms and others don't. Marriages fail, however, not simply because of the outside weather but because the inner climate becomes too hot or too cold, too turbulent or too stupefying.

When we look at how we choose our partners and what expectations exist at the tender beginnings of romance, some of the reasons for disaster become quite clear. We all select with unconscious accuracy a mate who will recreate with us the emotional patterns of our first homes. Dr. Carl A. Whitaker, a marital therapist and emeritus professor of psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin explains, "From early childhood on, each of us carries models for marriage, femininity, masculinity, motherhood, fatherhood and all the other family roles." Each of us falls in love with a mate who has qualities of our parents, who will help us rediscover both the psychological happiness and miseries of our past lives. We may think we have found a man unlike Dad, but then he turns to drink or drugs, or loses his job over and over again or sits silently in front of the T.V. just the way Dad did. A man may choose a woman who doesn't like kids just like his mother or who gambles away the family savings just like his mother. Or he may choose a slender wife who seems unlike his obese mother but then turns out to have other addictions that destroy their mutual happiness.

A man and a woman bring to their marriage bed a blended concoction of conscious and unconscious memories of their parents' lives together. The human way is to compulsively repeat and recreate the patterns of the past. Sigmund Freud so well described the unhappy design that many of us get trapped in: the unmet needs of childhood, the angry feelings left over from frustrations of long ago, the limits of trust and the reoccurrence of old fears. Once an individual senses this entrapment, there may follow a yearning to escape, and the result could be a broken, splintered marriage.

Of course people can overcome the habits and attitudes that developed in childhood. We all have hidden strengths and amazing capacities for growth and creative change. Change, however, requires work — observing your part in a rotten pattern, bringing difficulties out into the open — and work runs counter to the basic myth of marriage: "When I wed this person all my problems will be over. I will have achieved success and I will become the center of life for this other person and this person will be my center, and we will mean everything to each other forever." This myth, which every marriage relies on, is soon exposed. The coming of children, the pulls and tugs of their demands on affection and time, place a considerable strain on that basic myth of meaning everything to each other, of merging together and solving all of life's problems.

Concern and tension about money take each partner away from the other. Obligations to demanding parents or still-depended-upon parents create further strain. Couples today must also deal with all the cultural changes brought on in recent years by the women's movement and the sexual revolution. The altering of roles and

These and other realities of life erode the visions of marital bliss the way sandstorms eat at rock and the ocean nibbles away at the dunes. Those euphoric, grand feelings that accompany romantic love are really self-delusions, self-hypnotic dreams that enable us to forge a relationship. Real life, failure at work, disappointments, exhaustion, bad smells, bad colds and hard times all puncture the dream and leave us stranded with our mate, with our childhood patterns pushing us this way and that, with our unfulfilled expectations.

The struggle to survive in marriage requires adaptability, flexibility, genuine love and kindness and an imagination strong enough to feel what the other is feeling. Many marriages fall apart because either partner cannot imagine what the other wants or cannot communicate what he or she needs or feels. Anger builds until it erupts into a volcanic burst that buries the marriage in ash.

It is not hard to see, therefore, how essential communication is for a good marriage. A man and a woman must be able to tell each other how they feel and why they feel the way they do; otherwise they will impose on each other roles and actions that lead to further unhappiness. In some cases, the communication patterns of childhood — of not talking, of talking too much, of not listening, of distrust and anger, of withdrawal — spill into the marriage and prevent a healthy exchange of thoughts and feelings. The answer is to set up new patterns of communication and intimacy.

At the same time, however, we must see each other as individuals. "To achieve a balance between separateness and closeness is one of the major psychological tasks of all human beings at every stage of life," says Dr. Stuart Bartle, a psychiatrist at the New York University Medical Center.

If we sense from our mate a need for too much intimacy, we tend to push him or her away, fearing that we may lose our identities in the merging of marriage. One partner may suffocate the other partner in a childlike dependency.

A good marriage means growing as a couple but also growing as individuals. This isn't easy. Richard gives up his interest in carpentry because his wife, Helen, is jealous of the time he spends away from her. Karen quits her choir group because her husband dislikes the friends she makes there. Each pair clings to each other and are angry with each other as life closes in on them. This kind of marital balance is easily thrown as one or the other pulls away and divorce follows.

Sometimes people pretend that a new partner will solve the old problems. Most often extramarital sex destroys a marriage because it allows an artificial split between the good and the bad — the good is projected on the new partner and the bad is dumped on the head of the old. Dishonesty, hiding and cheating create walls between men and women. Infidelity is just a symptom of trouble. It is a symbolic complaint, a weapon of revenge, as well as an unraveler of closeness. Infidelity is often that proverbial last straw that sinks the camel to the ground.

All right — marriage has always been difficult. Why then are we seeing so many divorces at this time? Yes, our modern social fabric is thin, and yes the permissiveness of society has created unrealistic expectations and thrown the family into chaos. But divorce is so common because people today are unwilling to exercise the self-discipline that marriage requires. They expect easy joy, like the entertainment on TV, the thrill of a good party.

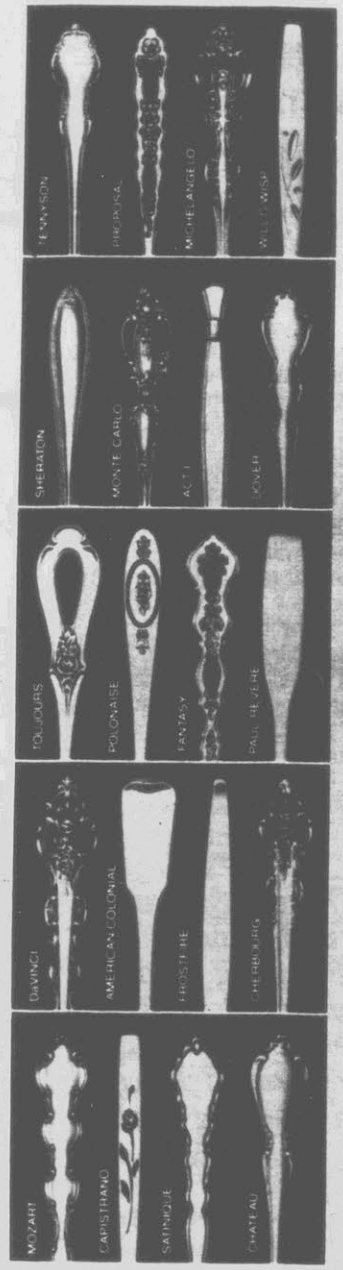

Marriage takes some kind of sacrifice, not dreadful self-sacrifice of the soul, but some level of compromise: Some of one's fantasies, some of one's legitimate desires have to be given up for the value of the marriage itself. "While all marital partners feel shackled at times, it is they who really choose to make the marital ties into confining chains or supporting bonds, says Dr. Whitaker. Marriage requires sexual, financial and emotional discipline. A man and a woman cannot follow every impulse, cannot allow themselves to stop growing or changing.

Divorce is not an evil act. Sometimes it provides salvation for people who have grown hopelessly apart or were frozen in patterns of pain or mutual unhappiness. Divorce can be, despite its initial devastation, like the first cut of the surgeon's knife, a step toward new health and a good life. On the other hand, if the partners can stay past the breaking up of the romantic myths into the development of real love and intimacy, they have achieved a work as amazing as the greatest cathedrals of the world. Marriages that do not fail but improve, that persist despite imperfections, are not only rare these days but offer a wondrous shelter in which the face of our mutual humanity can safely show itself. FW

YOUR BEST POLICY FOR CUTTING INSURANCE COSTS

By Kate Kelly

Bob Scott

Because insurance coverage can be so important, we often purchase it automatically — without considering the price tag. But insurance policies vary significantly in cost, depending on the type and the company you're dealing with. Always comparison shop among agencies before buying; and from time to time it's a good idea to check with your representative to see if a change in the industry or your own situation could mean savings for you. Here are some specific suggestions on cutting the cost of automobile and life insurance.

Car Insurance

A clean driving record is vital to assuring lower auto premiums, says Paul Majka, author of You Can Save a Bundle on Your Car Insurance (St. Martin's Press). Many insurance companies offer good-driver discounts or accident-free rates, so if you (and any family members also covered under the policy) have maintained a good driving record for the past three to five years, let your agent know. You won't automatically be given such a discount.

You should also notify your insurance representative about any change in personal status, because this can affect what you pay. Females who either get married or turn 25 can qualify for a lower rate (based on risk factors). The same is true for males who either marry or turn 30. Parents whose teen-ager moves out may also realize substantial savings.

Another way to save is to raise your deductible. Though lower deductibles have been common for many years, today's consumers may find that inflation has made a higher deductible (i.e. $500) satisfactory. The money you have on a lower annual premium would offset the slightly higher cost should you suffer a loss.

Author Majka also recommends putting all your passenger vehicles on one policy in order to realize additional savings of approximately 20 percent.

If your car is completely paid for and more than four years old, you can also consider dropping your collision and comprehensive (theft, fire, vandalism, etc.) coverage since they become less important as the worth of your car depreciates.

If you're buying a new car, check with your insurance representative first. Insurance rates are sometimes based on the historic loss experience of various automobile models.

Life Insurance

The first question to ask about life insurance is, "Do I need it?" If you're single with no dependents, then life insurance needn't be a priority. And people insured under a group policy offered by their employer or professional organization may already be adequately covered.

What's adequate? In How Life Insurance Companies Rob You and What You Can Do About It (Random House), Walter S. Kenton Jr. writes that for the family that does not yet have a substantial estate, the "six-times-salary" formula is an effective one. Multiply your family income by six and then subtract the value of any coverage you already have (i.e. group insurance). That tells you how much coverage you still need to buy. For example, if your family income is $20,000 and you have $40,000 worth of coverage through work, you'll need an additional $80,000 worth of coverage.

The cost of life insurance will also depend on the type you obtain. "The average family can do much better buying term life insurance rather than whole life," advises Diana Salter Doherty, president of Salter Investment Company in Tampa, Fla.

Whole life or permanent insurance offers a fixed rate for as long as you carry the policy, but in the long run it is more expensive for the amount of protection you receive. Whole life was at one time very popular because the rates are set for life, it offers enforced savings (it takes on a cash value), you can borrow against it and it can be cashed in for an annuity.

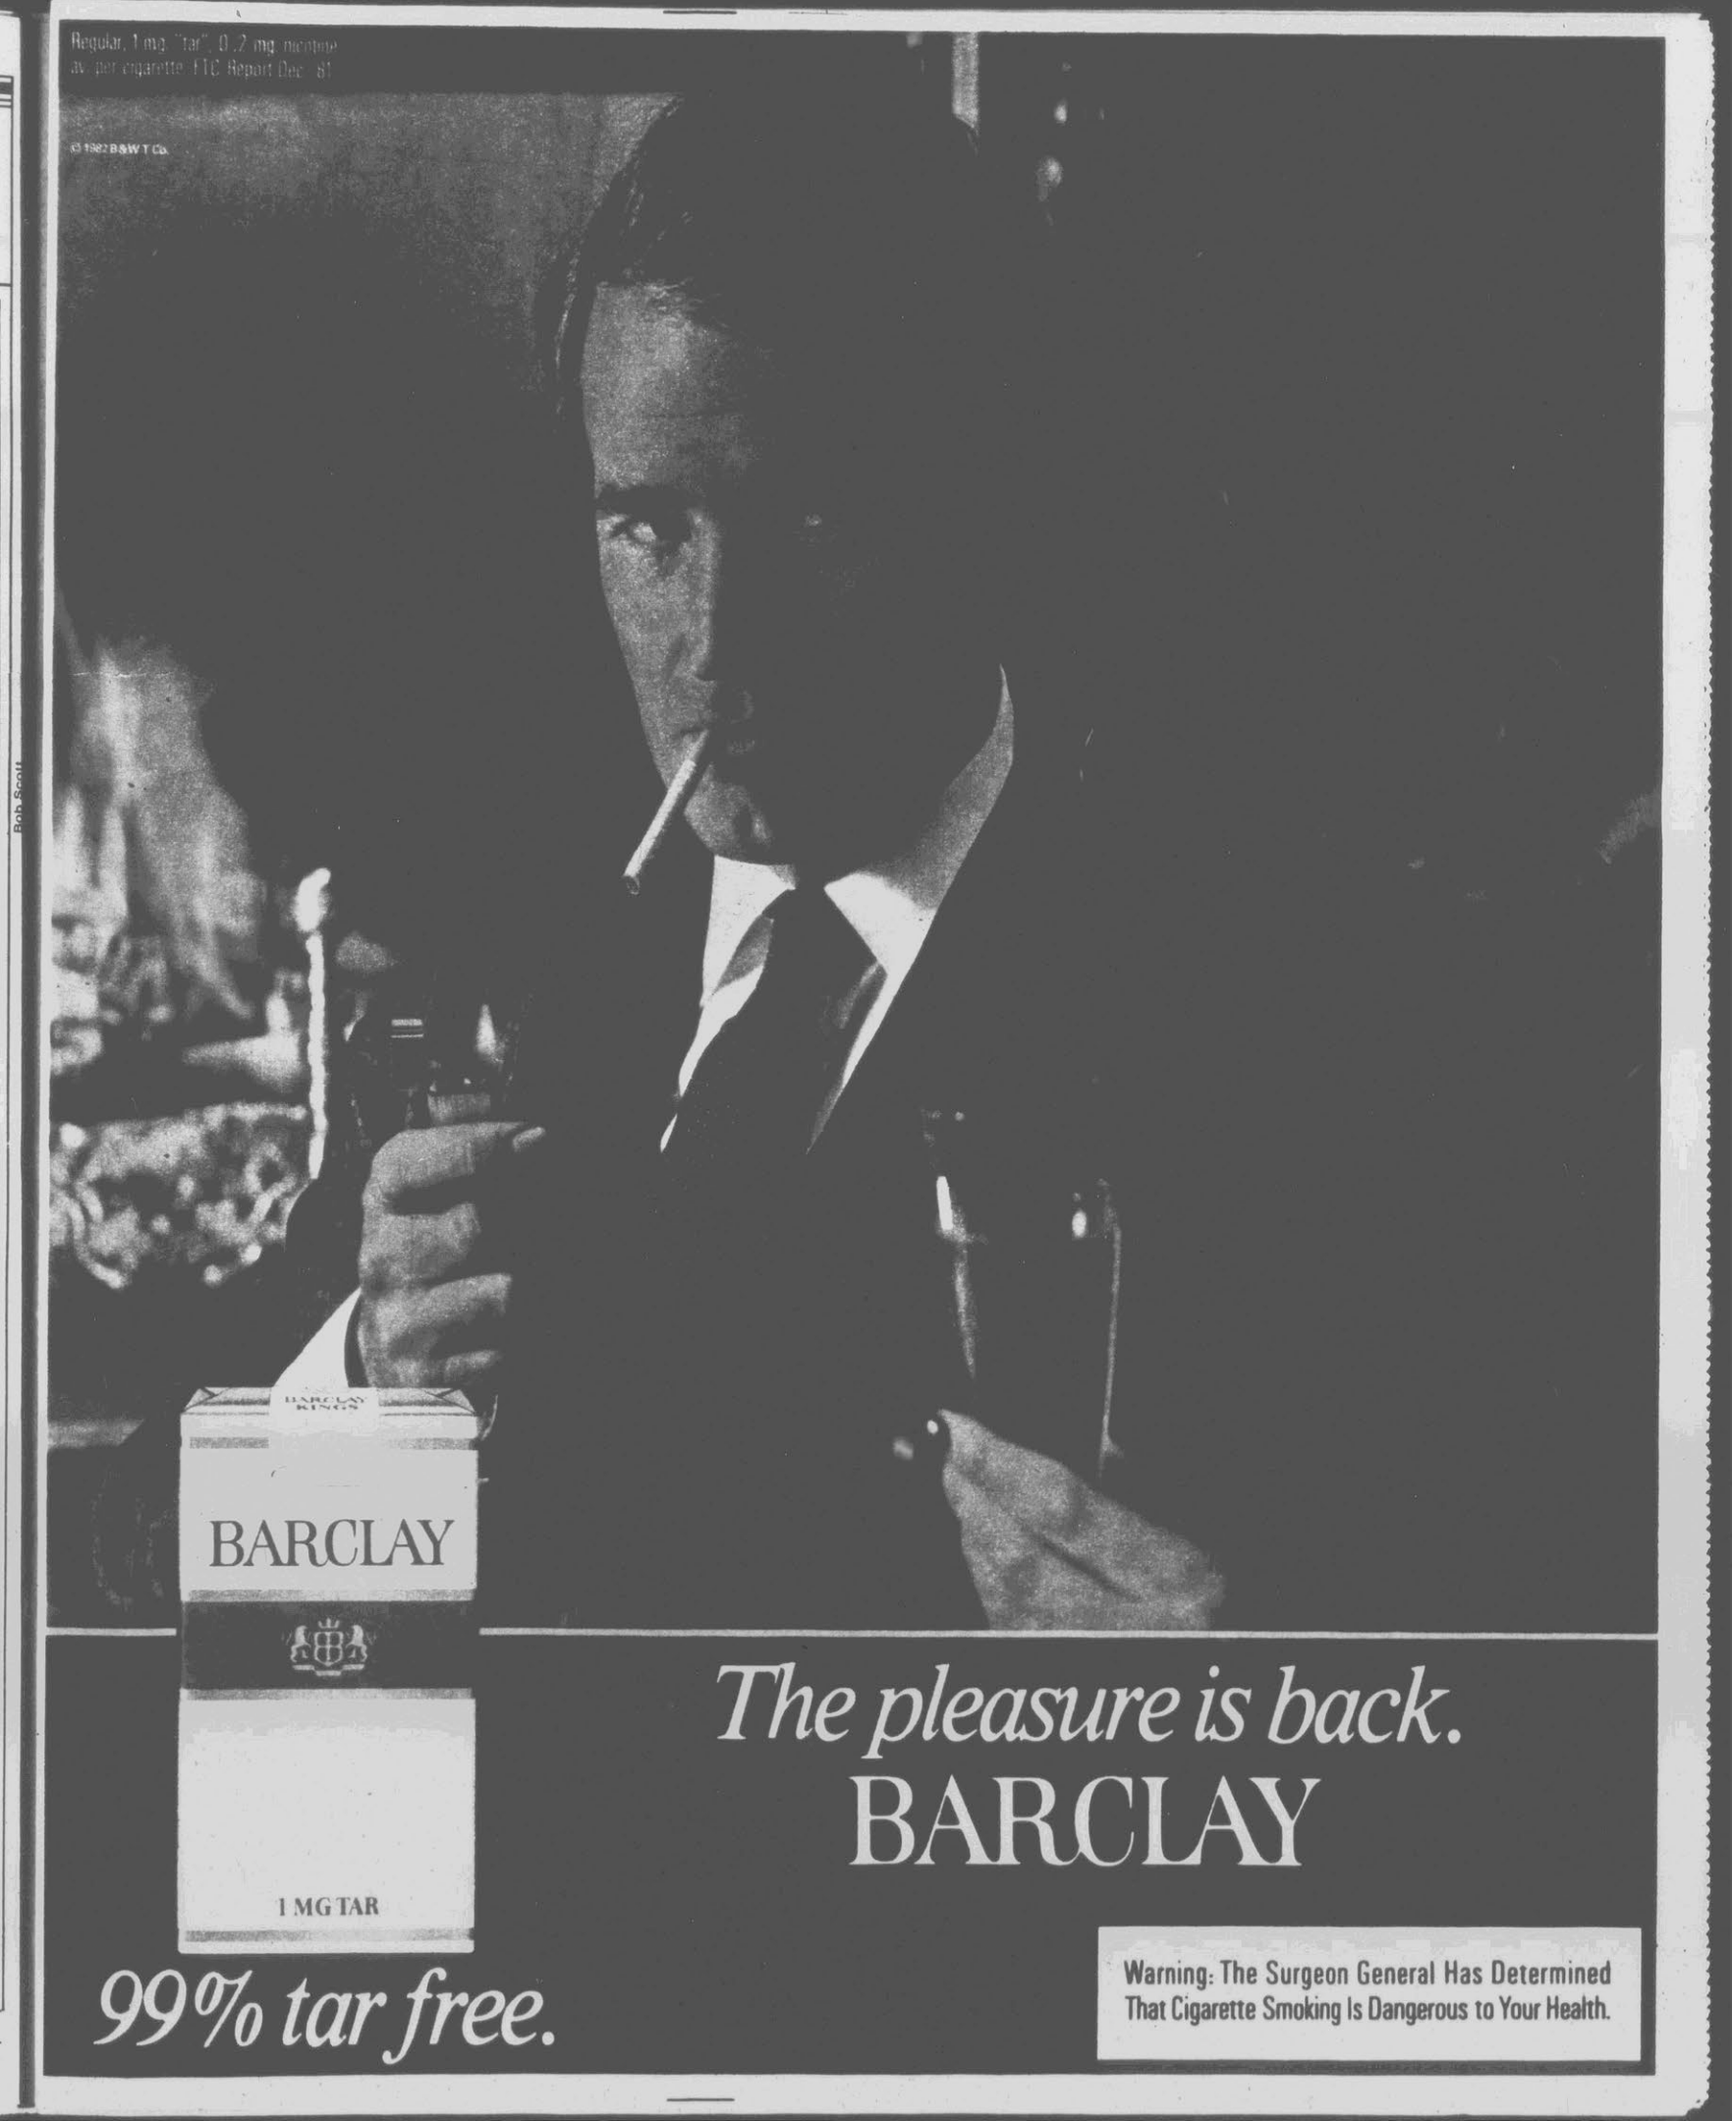

Term insurance offers maximum protection at minimum cost for a specified period of time. As an example, renewable term insurance can be purchased for a five or 10-year period. Term policies, however, cannot be borrowed against or cashed in. If you die during the coverage period, the amount paid to your beneficiaries would be greater than what they would receive if you had paid similar premiums on whole life (this is because whole life offers the additional benefits mentioned above). If you die after the specified length of time and have not arranged for renewal, then no death benefit is paid.

The benefit of term policies is in the savings they offer. Annual premiums for term do increase when the policy is renewed, but the total amount you pay will generally be much less than with whole — though factors such as a serious health condition could cause the rates to rise significantly. For the family that needs protection for a limited period of time (i.e., while there are still dependent children), term insurance can be an excellent buy.

The cost of term life insurance has been dropping over the last few years, so even if you already have such coverage, you may want to check competitive rates. If you find a better deal, cancel the old policy only after the new policy is paid for and in effect.

One other option is convertible term insurance. You benefit from the high protection and low rates of term, knowing that you can convert part or all of that policy into whole life as the family grows and the need for protection decreases. The policy should be converted by about age 45 (check the optimum time with your insurance representative). FW

HIDDEN HAZARDS OF BREATHING AT HOME

By Ellen Kurtis

You've weatherstripped and insulated your home, sealing it up tightly to make it more energy efficient. But in doing so, you could produce a health hazard that you thought only happened outdoors — air pollution.

Polluted home air could be one of our greatest emerging health worries, according to James Repace, an environmental policy analyst for the Environmental Protection Agency. "Recent studies have shown that the concentration of air pollutants is generally higher indoors than it is on the outside. Because we spend so much time indoors [90 percent of our lives]," Repace continues, "we're exposed to this bad air for extended amounts of time."

S.S. Kravis

Indoor air becomes polluted by the fumes from gas ovens, household cleaners, insecticides, insulation foam, tobacco smoke, carpeting, particle and fiberboard and a number of other products commonly found in the home. Studies have shown that, if produced in high enough concentrations, these pollutants can cause a variety of physical ailments ranging from eye irritations and allergies to headaches, nausea, fatigue, dizziness, colds and respiratory infections. Some pollutants, such as radon, have even been linked to certain forms of cancer.

Household chemical products. Some cleansers, paints, insect sprays and glues emit potentially dangerous fumes. A U.S. Department of Energy study shows that more than 40 chemical vapors pollute indoor air. Prolonged exposure to these chemicals can cause eye and skin irritations, headaches, nausea, allergic reactions and a number of respiratory problems. To prevent these ills, open one or two windows when working with these products, or use them outdoors.

Gas ovens. Researchers suspect that homes with gas stoves could have higher levels of nitrogen dioxide and carbon monoxide in the air, and that these fumes could increase the incidence of respiratory problems, especially in young children. This doesn't mean you have to get rid of your gas cooking stove. You can cut down on the fumes by keeping it properly maintained and by using the stove's exhaust system.

Formaldehyde. Found in building materials such as particle and fiberboard, carpeting, drapes, glues, some kinds of insulation and foam and in tobacco smoke, this pollutant may cause nausea, skin and eye irritations and sore throats. One study shows it promotes cancer in laboratory animals. In fact, urea-formaldehyde foam insulation sales were banned in the U.S. last August. A local building inspector can measure the formaldehyde level in your home's air.

Improving ventilation can sometimes cure this problem. Also avoid buying plywood or particle board.

Radon. An odorless and colorless radioactive gas occurring naturally in soil, water and some masonry, radon has been linked with lung cancer when it's found in high concentrations. (Some areas, including parts of Pennsylvania, Florida and Maine, have high amounts of radon.) It's been estimated that 10 percent of all lung cancers now are caused by indoor radon. By writing to your regional E.P.A. office, you can obtain instructions on finding the radon levels in your home. Remedies include installing suction blowers or air-to-air heat exchangers and increasing your home's ventilation.

Ventilation techniques. Proper ventilation is important to your family's health. One method is to "spot ventilate," using exhaust fans for short periods of time in rooms where you generate the most pollutants.

If you have a serious air pollution problem, consider installing an air-to-air heat exchanger. This newly-available device exhausts pollutants while bringing in fresh, heated air. The cost of installing a heat exchanger varies, but expect to spend at least $250 for a good system.

MUSTARD

THE SPICE WITH THE SLOW BURN

By Marilyn Hansen

Today Americans have gone well beyond the yellow ribbon of mustard on their ball-park hot dog to explore with fervor the wide, pungent world of this spice. In that spirit, we've assembled an array of easy-to-prepare recipes, all utilizing mustard's unique flavor.

Mustard is one of the most popular spices in the world. In fact, more mustard seed is sold on the international market than any other spice, including pepper.

In its essential form, mustard is a blend of ground mustard seed, a wine or vinegar and seasonings. The specific mustard seeds used, along with the selected wines or vinegars and the particular spice blends, are what make up the art of mustard making.

The best part about this king of spices is that it's economical (a little goes a long way), and it's also great for calorie-counters, since most mustards total only 15 calories per tablespoon.

DIJON MUSTARD VINAIGRETTE

2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
4 tablespoons olive oil
Salt to taste
Few twists freshly ground black pepper

1. In a small bowl, whisk together the vinegar and mustard. Add olive oil, a few drops at a time, while you are whisking.
2. When the mixture thickens, as it will after whisking, add the salt and pepper and serve immediately. This mustard can be stored in a covered jar; shake well before using. Excellent for tossed salads or for drizzling over vegetable, seafood or meat salads. Makes ½ cup dressing

MUSTARD MAYONNAISE

1 pint mayonnaise, preferably homemade
2 tablespoons chopped chives
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon dry mustard powder
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt to taste
Ground white pepper to taste

1. In a medium bowl, combine ingredients and mix well. Cover, refrigerate and serve cold. This sauce is excellent for seafood salads. Makes 2 cups

Note: This recipe is from The "21" Club.

HOT MUSTARD SAUCE

1 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons steak sauce
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon prepared brown mustard
½ tablespoon chopped chives

1. In a medium bowl, combine all ingredients. Pour into saucepan and heat just to the boiling point; reduce heat and simmer a few minutes. Serve hot with steaks, roast beef or roast pork. Makes 1¼ cups sauce

FRENCH MUSTARD CHICKEN

1 3½ lb. broiler-fryer chicken, split
1 tablespoon olive oil
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup Dijon mustard
¼ cup dry white wine
¼ cup fine, soft, fresh bread crumbs

1. Preheat broiler. Rub both sides of chicken with olive oil, place on broiler rack and sprinkle with salt and pepper.
2. Broil chicken 5 to 6 inches from heating element, 15 minutes on each side, broiling skin side first.
3. In a small bowl, combine Dijon mustard and white wine. Brush mixture over cut side of chicken, coating well. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons bread crumbs. Broil 5 to 7 minutes longer, until crumbs are browned but not burned. Turn chicken, brush with mustard mixture and sprinkle with crumbs. Broil 5 to 7 minutes, or until crumbs are browned and chicken is cooked through.
4. Place chicken on warm serving platter, garnish with a small bouquet of parsley, watercress or celery leaves. Pour sauce from broiler drip pan into small sauceboat and serve with the chicken. Makes 2 servings

SWEET AND HOT MUSTARD

1 cup white vinegar
1 cup dry mustard powder
2 eggs, beaten
¼ teaspoon salt, or to taste
1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoons unsalted butter or margarine

1. Start preparing this recipe the day before you plan to use. In a small bowl, use a portable mixer or wire whisk to beat together the vinegar and dry mustard. Allow to stand overnight to permit flavor to develop.
3. In a medium saucepan, melt butter, add the mustard mixture; stir to blend. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture comes to a slow boil and coats a spoon. Let cool and refrigerate.
4. This mustard is excellent served with cold meat and cheese sandwiches. It also makes an imaginative gift when spooned into a pretty jar and gussied up with a label and ribbon. Makes 1 pint

MUSTARD TIPS

- Keep all mustards in a cool place. Once opened, store in refrigerator to preserve the strength.
- Keep mustard capped so it doesn't dry out. After using, smooth the surface with a small amount of oil before refrigerating. Pour or scrape off oil when using again.
- Mustard added to a salad dressing will help hold the oil and vinegar together.
- For more pungency, add mustard at the end of cooking period, keeping heat down to a simmer — never boil. For less bite, add it at the beginning, as in flavoring a pot roast or stew, which cooks for several hours.
- Dry or powdered mustard can be used as is, or mixed with water or oil, depending on what the recipe calls for.
- Prepared mustard means it has been prepared or blended in some manner before it is sold.
- Mustard seed is used most often to flavor pickling liquids. FW

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

KATE NELLIGAN

A NEW STAR WITH PLENTY OF SOMETHIN'

Martha Swope

It may come as a surprise to Kate Nelligan's growing fan club that about a year ago the strikingly lovely star of the new film Without a Trace and the Broadway hit Plenty felt so discouraged that she was planning to abandon her career. But then, when one is approaching a subject as elusive as Kate Nelligan, surprises are plentiful. For instance, although Nelligan, 31, had a very successful eight-year career on the British stage, she is not British. Her birthplace was Ontario, Canada, and she left home in her late teens to study acting in England. In recent years, she has resided in the United States and has been channeling her talent into such productions as public television's steamy Therèse Racquin and the 1981 movie thriller Eye of the Needle. On screen she projects a charismatic combination of sensual beauty and outspoken intelligence. But the off-screen Kate, as she explained to FAMILY WEEKLY*'s Mary Ellin Bruns, has never thought of herself as beautiful, is embarrassed by nude love scenes and shares her very quiet private life with a man whose name she shyly declines to reveal.*

Q: The character you play in Without a Trace is fighting to find her lost son. Do you think you have anything in common with her?

Nelligan: The fighting's the same. I mean, I will fight to the death for things. But I don't have that kind of life. I don't have children. I don't have a husband. I don't have a job you get up at 7:15 for. I mean, I became an actress so I wouldn't have to get up at 7:15 and go to work. You know, the whole business of having a routine life, having neighbors, of being a housewife has nothing to do with me.

Q: What have you had to fight hardest for in your life?

Nelligan: I think trying to be myself in the face of a lot of people who have told me that life would be easier or better if I were somebody else. If you lose that bout, you're really in terrible trouble.

Q: Would you like to be more settled down someday?

Nelligan: Yes. I mean I do lead a very, very quiet life. Very quiet. My life is not that of a swinging single at all. But I don't lead the life that is built over many, many years — you find the house, you restore the house, you live in the house, you have the family — because I've never been anywhere long enough for anything like that. But yes, it has great appeal.

Q: Do you like kids?

Nelligan: Yeah, I do. I like nice ones. I hate horrible ones. You don't like them all.

Q: Why did you want to leave Canada?

Nelligan: Well, I grew up on a little street with little houses where people became managers of restaurants. It was very small. I always knew that I would move to places where I wouldn't feel that. I think if you aren't meant to marry the guy in high school and move two blocks away and start a family, then you're probably feeling uncomfortable for a lot of your upbringing. I always wanted to get out.

Nelligan: There's no time left. You've got an hour and a half until the time you have to be fast asleep. You can't digest your food. You just learn to sleep on a full stomach. I mean it's unthinkable. There is no such thing as life on a most basic level. Nothing functions, nothing. You hire someone to take over your life, to pick your clothes up off the floor because you can't do it.

Q: Doesn't that get in the way of your relationships?

Nelligan: If you're involved with a man, I think it's better to go away to make a picture, because then at least you can go home at the end of the day and fall into bed and not have to feel bad or worried or guilty about the fact that you've got nothing to give. Anyone who knows you realizes that from the day you clock in to the day you clock out they are very cruel if they call you.

Q: When you do have free time, how do you like to spend it?

Nelligan: I just sleep and I sit on the porch. If I can find a porch, I'll sit on it.

KATE NELLIGAN

I just sit on the porch in a chair and look at people go by, or look at the street or look at the trees.

Q: You've said that doing love scenes is easier when you're not attracted to the other person involved. Why is that?

Nelligan: It makes it much easier to rehearse because if you do fancy somebody you put off playing a love scene forever. I do. I will get sick, I'll go to the washroom, I'll talk about the scene. I'll put off forever the technical aspects of where are your hands going to be, where are his hands going to be, all that stuff.

Q: You said your love scenes in Eye of the Needle were extremely painful.

Nelligan: Oh yeah, because you're stark naked in front of two or three men who don't like to be there. Nobody likes it. It's very embarrassing, deeply embarrassing for everybody there. It's just terrible, it's just terrible. The camera people, the technical people are always deeply sensitive. They'll always do anything but look at you. Everyone's paralyzed.

Q: Are you a shy person?

Nelligan: Oh, terribly, totally. Oh yes!

Q: People have often talked about you as beautiful and sexy. Have you ever gone through a period when you felt unattractive?

Nelligan: I've never felt anything else. I've never, ever thought of myself as beautiful, ever, in my life. No, no. It's not something I know how to do.

Q: Do you remember your first romances?

Nelligan: Oh yeah. I had a lot of boyfriends, a lot of heavy emotional activity as a teen-ager. I was falling in love every 10 minutes. I was always worried because I seemed to fall in love so much, and all my sisters would find a boy when they were 13 years old and ended up marrying them, you know? And I was always falling in love all over the place.

Q: Are you in love at the moment?

Nelligan: I don't know why, but it's disruptive to my personal life to talk about it. And since it is important to me, I want to have it disrupted as little as possible.

Q: Having lived in so many places, do you ever have any confusion about where home is?

Nelligan: I don't have a home. I don't. And that's the result of having left home very young, you know. I've just moved around too much and been too many different people. I don't live anywhere. I always sublet from other people, you know, I just go on living with other people's shoes in the back of their closets. There are places I like to be more than anywhere else, but there isn't any place that can be home.

Q: What's your favorite place?

Nelligan: A village in Spain which I go back and back to, a little fishing village just south of the French border and it's very beautiful. That's the kind of life I like best. I just love spending time in little places by the sea. I always think when I've made enough money and I've had enough of this nonsense, those are the places I'll go. Just eat well and look at the sea and live among people who have been there for a few thousand years. FW

THE SPECIAL PASSAGES OF ADOPTED CHILDREN

By Roberta Plutzik

Adoptees in the United States now number in the millions, and a recent spate of publicity about adoption has made many Americans feel more at home with the subject. Still, plenty of parents who adopt — and the children who come to live with them — continue to experience problems for which they feel unprepared.

Some five million Americans are currently registered as having been adopted, according to recent rough estimates from the Government. Though adoption is no longer viewed with the curiosity it used to arouse, for the people who adopt and the children who are adopted there are still many issues that need to be addressed. "Even if the adoption is years in the making, the parent will be troubled with questions of being a good parent or being able to love the child," states Ellen Clore, director of the nurse practitioner program at the University of Virginia, who began studying the complex needs of adopted children and their parents before she adopted a child herself. She believes that better awareness about potential pitfalls among people who are going to adopt can better prepare them for the experience of parenthood.

Like all new parents, individuals who adopt experience feelings of stress and inadequacy in their new maternal and paternal roles, as well as hurdles more particular to their situations.

One of the most troublesome issues for parents during the child's early years is how and when to tell the child he is adopted, and afterward, how to cope with his possible feelings of confusion and anger. "I tell parents that before they can answer a young child's questions they must come to terms with their own feelings," Clore says. "Do they feel threatened by being adoptive parents? Do they feel jealousy, disapproval or superiority toward the birth mother and father?"

Clore also advises not to wait until a child asks where he came from before breaking the news. "Bring up the word adoption so the child can never remember not hearing it," she states. "Before the age of 5, address the issue, because a child needs to hear it from parents — not teachers or friends. Trust must be preserved." Kids who hear it from outsiders could be devastated.

In response to a preschooler's question, "Did I come from your tummy?" Clore's suggested answer is: "You came from a mother's tummy, but I didn't become your mother until afterward." Research has proven, she adds, that "it's not always what parents say that's most important in the early years but rather the emotional environment and tone in which they say it."

After a young child knows he's adopted and is struggling to understand why, it's not uncommon for him to rebel against his adoptive parents. "Most children, birth and adopted, at some point say they hate their parents and are going to run away," Clore explains. Adds Laurie Flynn, director of the North American Council on Adoptable Children, "It's very upsetting but parents must not overreact. Instead, get at what's making the child fearful.

In an effort to make the adopted child feel wanted, some parents become overprotective.

Usually the child wants reassurance. The parents can say, 'You are my child, I am your parent. Let's work out the problem.'"

As childhood progresses, other hurdles remain for parents and child. In an effort to make the adopted child feel wanted — especially in a family where there are also birth children — some parents can become overprotective of the adopted family member. Doing so will make him feel that much more different, Clore says.

In the teen years, most parents fortify themselves against the adopted child's request for concrete information about birth parents. While Clore believes the child should be encouraged to wait until after the general turmoil of adolescence to find his birth parents, withholding information even before this stage can undermine the long-term adoptive relationship. "More than ever the parents need to be honest with their child and give information if they know it; if they don't know, they must say so. The parent at this point is feeling very threatened," says Clore, "and needs to be reminded that the chances the child will leave are extremely slim, that adoptive parents are the true psychological parents." Flynn advises adoptive parents to be "very supportive of the need for information. Hostility reinforces the child's feeling that he doesn't belong." FW

Phony Investment Deals

DIAL S FOR SCAM

S.S. Kravis

By Andrea Pawlyna

If someone telephones and offers you an investment opportunity that sounds too good to be true, be wary: You could become a victim of one of the latest con-artist scams.

Phony investment deals offered over the phone — everything from real-estate swindles to schemes involving precious stones to sales of fraudulent securities — are increasingly prevalent, according to the Federal Trade Commission (F.T.C.). Very often, unwitting victims look upon these investments as the way to become big winners in the financial game, but frequently they end up losing whatever money they invest.

Fraudulent "boiler room" operations, as these enterprises are informally called, are run by fast-talking, high-pressure salespeople purporting to offer you the "deal of a lifetime."

"Some of these people are very good at what they do. They can sound very knowledgeable," warns Michael McCarey, associate director in the F.T.C.'s service industry practices division.

The boiler room nickname dates back to the days when these types of operators rented cheap office space in the basements (usually near the boiler rooms) of buildings.

Many modern-day operators, however, occupy offices with impressive-sounding addresses (such as Wall Street), using them as a base from which to telephone thousands of unsuspecting individuals in the hope of persuading them to invest their hard-earned cash.

Typically, the investment amounts requested by these con artists range from $1,000 to $10,000, but some are as low as $500.

Their technique is deceptively simple: Using lists of names and phone numbers (which can be bought from credit card companies, magazines or investment firms), they make cold calls to prospective investors, exaggerating claims of profits that can be made. To fool their victims, they may give themselves an aura of authenticity by dropping such lines as, "I was just down on the trading floor. . . ." Sometimes they print slick, professional-looking prospectuses or worthless stock certificates and mail these to intended victims.

But as with any scam, their chief concern is gaining immediate access to your money. They may ask you to wire your investment right away or offer to send over a messenger to pick up the cash. By the time the victim catches on, the boiler room operator is usually long gone — and your money is gone with him.

"I don't think it's only gullible people who get trapped like this," says Daniel Taub, an assistant attorney general in the investor protection and securities bureau of the New York State Attorney General's office. "Some of the brightest people are some of the easiest targets."

Although many legitimate investment houses also routinely employ telephone selling as a marketing tool — there's nothing illegal about it — there are ways to differentiate between the honest investment solicitations and the hucksters.

- Be skeptical when a stranger calls with an investment offer. Ask him or her to repeat the name of the firm, which you can investigate later. You can run the name by the Better Business Bureau and also check with the Securities and Exchange Commission (S.E.C.) to determine if the dealer is registered.
- Catch phrases such as "This is guaranteed to double your money" or "You're getting the chance of a lifetime" should arouse suspicion. Remember that bona fide investments will always carry some degree of risk.

"If the deal is so good, the first thing that someone should start thinking is, 'Why is this person calling me and offering me such a great deal?' If it is that good, you'd think the caller would be investing in it himself," points out Jeffrey S. Chernow, an assistant attorney general in the securities division of the Maryland Attorney General's office.

- You must also be wary of anyone who tries to pressure you to send money right away. A legitimate dealer will always give you time to consider an investment.
- Demand that all investment offers be in writing, and insist that dealers supply you with financial statements and background on the company. Carefully scrutinize the literature you receive, and always seek advice from a lawyer or accountant.
- If the worst has happened and you feel you've been taken in, contact your state's attorney general or securities regulatory agency. FW

New UDS Computer Telephones To Be Sold For Only $10 Apiece In Mammoth Publicity Drive

All who wish to apply for a new Computer Telephone should write to the company address below before Midnight, March 28, 1983

NEW YORK—One million new UDS Computer Telephones with electronic memory and pushbutton dialing will be sold as part of a publicity campaign for only $10 apiece to the first one million persons who write to the company address before Midnight, March 28, 1983.

These are the same famous UDS Computer Telephones to be nationally publicized in The New York Times, TV Guide and other leading magazines, with electronic re-dial (which automatically keeps re-dialing busy or unanswered numbers till they answer) and electronic "mute" (which lets you talk "confidentially" without putting your hand over the mouthpiece.)

Only half the size (and half the weight) of standard phones, they also have adjustable electronic ringers, which means you can turn them "off"—for complete silence—whenever you don't want to be disturbed. And when you finish your call, you don't have to bother hanging up—simply put the unit down (anywhere you please) and it will hang itself up, automatically.

These new UDS Computer Telephones are FCC-approved and require no installation. Simply plug them into the same modular outlets as your present rotary dial or pushbutton phones. You can then legally return your present phones to the phone company, saving yourself up to $8 a month (or over $90 a year) for each phone you return.

These new UDS Computer Telephones will not be sold at this price by the company in any store. To obtain one at this price, apply in writing to the company address no later than Midnight, March 28, 1983.

Each phone carries a full one-year money-back guarantee, and the company will replace it, free of charge, if it ever fails to function. There is a limit of two (2) phones per address at this price, but requests which are mailed early enough (before March 20) are permitted to order up to 5 phones.

Answers to Your Aching Belly and Other Gut Reactions

GASTRO GAME

By Diane Cole

Stanley Vleklelgh

The next time you find yourself clutching your stomach after a helping of tuna surprise or racing to the bathroom after having a spat with your boss, know that you're not alone. Up to 100 million Americans — almost half the country's population — suffer at least occasionally from some form of digestive illness, according to the National Digestive Diseases Advisory Board, and about 20 million of those affected suffer from chronic disorders. Further, today digestive diseases represent the leading causes for hospitalization and major surgery in this country, accounting for 15 percent of all hospitalizations, 25 percent of all operations other than tonsillectomies, $17 billion in medical bills, and when lost wages, lost tax revenues and disability payments are added in, the total annual loss to the economy is $50 billion.

What are digestive diseases and why do they afflict so many Americans? Surely they stem from more sources than just the foods we eat — and the stresses that eat us. While the term digestive disease encompasses a wide range of disorders, diseases, infections and cancers affecting organs of the digestive tract, the few discussed below are among the most common.

Irritable Bowel Syndrome

Irritable bowel syndrome (I.B.S.) is a problem which causes the stomach and small and large intestinal tracts to overreact to foods, beverages and stress, says Dr. Arnold Levy, gastroenterologist, vice president for education at the American Digestive Disease Society and associate clinical professor of medicine at the George Washington University Medical School. Although many individuals are sensitive to a certain food — to garlic, or coffee, say — or find that the thought of speaking in public puts butterflies in their stomachs, those things in isolation don't necessarily mean they suffer from I.B.S.

Rather, I.B.S. is a chronic and recurrent disorder whose symptoms — including abdominal pain, cramps, diarrhea and constipation caused by erratic contractions of the bowel — can be set off without eating offending foods or experiencing stress. Although physicians in the past have dubbed the disorder as spastic colon or mucous colitis, irritable bowel syndrome is the more accurate term: irritable because the bowel is susceptible to stress; bowel because any part of the bowel can be affected; and syndrome because the person who suffers from I.B.S. will not show any detectable organic disease. Usually I.B.S. is diagnosed by excluding other diseases as the possible source of problems.

No one knows what causes I.B.S. to occur — some physicians believe it derives from an underlying motor-control disturbance in the brain. Heredity can also be a factor. But few people dispute that it's related to stress.

"Since antiquity, the gut has been recognized as an organ that is exquisitely sensitive to emotional expression," says Dr. Marvin Schuster, professor of medicine with a joint appointment in psychiatry at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and director of the division of digestive diseases at Baltimore City Hospital. Dr. Schuster and his associate Dr. William Whitehead, a clinical psychologist and associate professor of psychiatry at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, theorize that early childhood conditioning could play a role in I.B.S. "The child who has a bellyache and gets rewarded with toys, attention and missing school is more prone to become an adult bellyacher," Dr. Schuster says.

In spite of I.B.S.'s associations with stress, however, the disease is not simply "in your head." Not only are the symptoms very real and discomforting, but up to 70 percent of these patients also suffer from a lactose intolerance. They lack the intestinal chemical or enzyme (lactase) needed to break down and digest lactose, the sugar present in milk products. These patients should avoid lactose in their diets.

Although Dr. Schuster rarely recommends psychotherapy as a form of treatment, he tries to determine how the patient responds to the different stresses he faces each day. He then helps the patient develop better means of managing those stresses. Medications to relax the muscle in the bowel wall — such as Donnatal — or, if necessary, antidepressant drugs (such as Sinequan, generic name: doxepin hydrochloride), can also be prescribed.

Finally, some doctors advise biofeedback, in which the patient receives — via an electronic device — biological information about the way his body behaves and is then taught to control that behavior. For I.B.S. patients, this means learning to suppress bowel spasms internally.

DIGESTIVE DISEASES

from ulcers — sores that develop along the lining of the gastrointestinal (GI) tract. It's no secret that, like I.B.S., ulcers generally are thought to be related to stress. But many other factors, including family history, can also contribute to ulcers. Duodenal ulcers, which occur in the duodenum (the first part of the small intestine), are far more common than gastric ulcers, which occur in the stomach itself. Both types are caused by acid, Dr. Levy says. While everyone's stomach produces acid, some people produce more acid than others; the person born with a large number of acid-secreting cells will be more likely to develop ulcers than the person born with a small number.

But not everyone born with a larger number of these cells necessarily will develop ulcers. This is where stress and diet come in.

If you are prone to ulcers (clues to this could be a family history of the ailment and an acidic stomach) and your daily diet includes large amounts of acid-containing foods such as citrus fruits and juices, acid-producing foods such as caffeine and alcohol and, finally, aspirin, which irritates the stomach's lining, you could be asking for trouble, Dr. Levy says. This might come in the form of typical ulcer symptoms: a severe burning, gnawing or gripping pain in the upper part of the abdomen just below the breastbone. Frequently, eating relieves the pain somewhat only to increase the intensity about an hour later.

The effects of stress can be more complicated, Dr. Schuster says. Just because a person has a large number of acid-secreting cells doesn't mean he'll develop ulcers when he's under stress. Why? Because one man's meat is another man's poison, he reminds us, and stress means different things to different people (the intense competitive stresses that the athlete thrives on, for instance, would certainly be intolerable to many other people). But because so many experiments have proved that restraint, crowding and other stresses cause ulcers in rats, one has to wonder at the toll these stresses take on anyone who competes in the human rat race.

The test for ulcers, called an upper GI series, involves the patient swallowing barium and then a technician taking X-rays of the stomach regions. If a patient is diagnosed as having ulcers, Dr. Levy recommends that the individual first eliminate the foods that aggravate symptoms — caffeine, alcohol, acid-bearing foods and aspirin. Next, he suggests taking antacids, which help relieve pain by reducing irritation. Doctors also frequently prescribe Tagamet (generic name: cimetidine). While antacids neutralize acid in the stomach, this drug blocks the stomach's ability to produce acid. Tagamet has a new competitor on the horizon: Zantac (generic name: ranitidine), a drug more potent and with fewer side effects than Tagamet, according to Dr. Levy. Already on the market in Europe, the Food and Drug Administration (F.D.A.) could approve Zantac's use in America within the next few months.

One final word on ulcers: While duodenal ulcers are almost never cancerous, a few gastric ulcers do turn out to be malignant. These should be checked and treated promptly.

Diverticulosis

Diverticulosis affects about half of all Americans over age 50. Because this condition in itself is asymptomatic, though, don't sit and fret about it if your doctor says you have it. Even if this condition shows up on X-rays, it does not have to be treated unless abdominal pain and other symptoms begin.

You should know, however, what the condition is, what causes it and what complications it can lead to. Diverticuli are tiny pouches that form along the wall of the large intestine. Many experts believe that low-fiber diets — common in the western, industrialized countries — cause these pouches. Researchers cite evidence that the condition is virtually unknown in underdeveloped countries where the diet is high in roughage and unrefined grains. Because fiber both softens and adds bulk to the stool, it lowers the amount of pressure needed within the colon to move the digestive process forward and expel waste materials. Increased pressure, Dr. Levy believes, causes the diverticuli, which he likens to "little blow-outs like tire blow-outs," to form. A high-fiber diet can prevent this from happening.

While diverticulosis refers to the condition of having these pouches,

DIGESTIVE DISEASES

diverticulitis refers to this condition's most common complication — the inflammation of one or more diverticulum. Severe abdominal pain can signal diverticulitis. This inflammation can usually be treated with antibiotics. Other complications can include bleeding and — even more serious — perforation of the intestine.

In order to help prevent diverticulosis and its complications, increase your fiber intake, Dr. Levy advises. "And if you can't eat enough bran or high-fiber foods," he says, "take a fiber supplement."

Heartburn

We've all had heartburn — what doctors call reflux esophagitis — that burning sensation behind the breastbone. A reflux, or back flow, of acid from the stomach into the esophagus causes this problem, which is sometimes so severe it can mimic the crushing pains of a heart attack. Gravity affects this back flow, so lying down or stooping over often intensifies the pain.

Gravity affects heartburn, so lying down can intensify the pain.

A weakened valve (known as the lower esophageal sphincter) at the lower end of the esophagus can cause heartburn to occur. As long as the valve works well and remains tightly shut, it keeps acid from washing up into the esophagus, Dr. Levy points out. But when the valve weakens and remains open, the acid can easily flow backward.

A hiatal hernia, where part of the stomach bulges into the esophagus, can also produce heartburn. (Like diverticulosis, hiatal hernias are often asymptomatic and require no treatment unless complications such as repeated heartburn occur.)

Anything that increases the acid in the stomach will increase the chances of someone with a weak valve suffering from heartburn. Anything that decreases the acid, such as avoiding caffeine, alcohol and citrus fruits, might also help relieve the problem. Take antacids to neutralize the acid or — if it is prescribed by your physician — Tagamet, to block it. A new drug called Reglan (generic name: metoclopramide) actually helps increase the strength of the valve, Dr. Levy reports.

Stay away, too, from foods that cause the valve to remain open — notoriously, mint and chocolate. If you are overweight, losing a few pounds will also help. Wear loose clothing rather than tight-fitting pants, skirts, girdles or belts. Finally, to help gravity, try elevating the head of the bed three to six inches.

Inflammatory Bowel Disease

Ulcerative colitis and Crohn's disease — known collectively as inflammatory bowel disease — occur far less frequently than irritable bowel syndrome. But they can be far more serious in consequences and, in some cases, can be life threatening. Neither has an identifiable cause or a cure — and they have nothing to do with irritable bowel syndrome.

Ulcerative colitis (some people refer to this simply as "colitis") is characterized by an inflamed, ulcerated colon, and its symptoms include abdominal cramps and pain, diarrhea and the passage of blood and mucous from the rectum. While the onset of the disease is not linked to emotional factors, individual flare-ups can be affected by stress, Dr. Schuster says. Acute attacks or flare-ups of the disease often alternate with remissions, and in its severest complications the disease can lead to perforation of the colon. While in many cases drugs such as prednisone or Azulfidine can control colitis, people who have had the disorder for 10 years or more run a highly increased risk of developing cancer of the colon, so these patients must be monitored closely.

Removing the inflamed colon itself not only rids the patient of the disease but also, obviously, eliminates the chance of cancer of the colon. The operation — called an ileostomy — leaves the patient with an artificial waste opening in the abdominal wall which connects to a disposable pouch. Two new but more complicated surgical procedures — the ileo-anal pull-through and the Koch-continent ileostomy — do not require the use of an exterior bag. Right now, only a few surgeons are experienced in performing this surgery. The most extensive work is being done at Mt. Sinai Medical Center in New York and Johns Hopkins in Baltimore.

Crohn's disease — also known as regional enteritis or ileitis — can affect Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

DIGESTIVE DISEASES

any part of the intestinal tract from the mouth to the anus, but it is usually confined to the latter part of the small intestine. Because the affected area is often close to the appendix, the symptoms — severe abdominal pain and tenderness in the right lower quadrant of the abdomen — can be confused at first with appendicitis, Dr. Levy says. Again, doctors prescribe prednisone and Azulfidine to treat the inflammation, but various complications can require surgery. Patients who have Crohn's disease also run a slightly higher risk of developing cancer of the colon. Both Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis are detected with a proctoscope, a lighted tube inserted into the patient's rectum.

Gallbladder Disease

The most common cause of abdominal surgery in America today is gallbladder disease. Its symptoms — usually associated with the formation and movement of a tiny gallstone within the bladder, which shows up on an X-ray — can imitate pain of a heart attack and can also include fever, vomiting and nausea. Although emergency surgery to remove the gallbladder is necessary in some cases, more frequently it will be removed electively, once the patient has recovered from an initial attack and before another one begins. While a pill is in use in Italy to dissolve smaller-sized gallstones, it has not yet been approved for general prescription use in the U.S. Approximately 15 million Americans have silent gallstones — ones that don't cause pain or other problems — and that need not be removed.

What Your Stomach Is Telling You

If you find yourself burping or passing gas excessively, quite possibly you suffer from nothing more serious than the effects of swallowing too much air, Dr. Levy says. When you chew gum, suck on hard candy, sip hot coffee, drink carbonated beverages or eat foods like whipped cream or soufflés, you're swallowing large amounts of air which are most easily expelled through burping. Eating large amounts of gas-producing foods — cabbage, onions, beans, garlic and so on — can also produce excess gas.

But any persistent, painful or unusual symptoms should be checked by your physician. Acute chest or abdominal pains, frequent heartburn, chronic constipation alternating with diarrhea or any change in your bowel habits can signal more serious problems. In particular, any sign of blood — whether it's bright red blood passing from the rectum or blood in a tarlike black stool — requires prompt medical attention. Blood in the stool can be the first sign of cancer of the colon, the third most common cancer in the U.S., and it's a good idea to ask your physician about a simple Gauaic slide test used to detect hidden blood in the stool.

Adding fiber to your diet can help prevent many digestive disorders. But remember that a gradual shift will allow you to adjust better to the possible side effects of increased gas or bloating. While high-fiber diets are not recommended for everyone, many experts now believe that fiber not only helps prevent diverticular disease but also cancer of the colon.

Fiber or other specialized diets should not be confused with a cure or a panacea. "Proper nutrition may delay the emergence of certain diseases, rather than prevent them entirely, if you have a genetic tendency toward them," says Dr. Richard S. Rivlin, chief of nutrition service at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center and The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. Nevertheless, he says, "It is important to realize what nutrition can do — and what it can't."

"It's also important to realize that these symptoms and diseases aren't just laughing matters or cause for embarrassment," concludes Miriam Ratner, associate director of the American Digestive Disease Society in Bethesda, Md. "But help is available." Help which, in some cases, can even save your life — reason enough to ask a question or two, however embarrassing they might seem. For pamphlets on specific digestive disorders cited in this article, write to the American Digestive Disease Society, 7720 Wisconsin Avenue, Bethesda, Md. 20814, or the National Digestive Diseases Education and Information Clearing House, 1555 Wilson Blvd., Suite 600, Rosslyn, Va. 22209. "I thought my fat and flab was with me for life ... SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days."

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS
You already know about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics. Millions of people use one or the other in their daily exercises. One day I accidentally discovered that if I used BOTH methods together in one single exercise, I automatically speeded up the results tremendously and I reduced my daily exercise hour down to only 7 short minutes.

THE SCIENCE OF SYNOMETRICS
I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is: a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now build yourself a "fantastic looking body with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

IRON CLAD MONEY BACK GUARANTEE
In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable, real results or your money back promptly and without any question.

Amazoy withstands active kids and cookouts. Gives you time to relax, since it needs little water and cuts mowing two-thirds.

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS—DROUGHT & WEAR RESISTANT!

Lady Plugs In Zoysia Grass Saves Time, Work & Money

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow ... until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn"...is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in...Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

LAWN WATERED ONLY ONCE

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn —nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious, established Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long.

FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS—PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Goes off its green color after killing frosts. Begins regaining its green color at the time when the temperature in the spring is consistently warm. This, of course, varies with climate. Easy planting instructions with order.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed: like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills. Save time, work, money. Plug in Amazoy.

TWO GROWN MEN CAN'T PULL IT APART

So deep-rooted is Amazoy . . . it grows into practically indestructible turf. Amazoy thrives in porous, sandy soil, "builder's soil"—even salty beach areas! Beauty is but one advantage of Zoysia Grass. It's also so vigorous and rich it thrives in soils where lesser grasses have failed you repeatedly. Start your Amazoy lawn this Spring, and never re-seed your lawn again!

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffling, the Zoysia (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 300 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement...ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ⅓.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Govt., released in cooperation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

DON'T THROW THOSE BOXES AWAY

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Inspired by the popular bandboxes of the 1800's, our boutique boxes are new and practical craft items to make — all you need are some cardboard, wallpaper, glue and tape.

There are instructions for creating the boxes in any size or form — oval, round, square or heart shaped. They're then lined and decked out with ribbon closures for a hint of nostalgia. Smaller boxes are designed to hold tissues, soap, potpourri, jewelry. They add distinctive touches to any room and make perfect gifts.

You can also convert ordinary sugar or detergent boxes into handsome writing kits, folders and note pads, which will go nicely on any desk, especially if you cover them in suede or velvet.

Instant-soup boxes and toothpaste cartons make ideal containers. Hang them on the wall near the telephone for easy message-taking. Put notepaper in one, pencils in another and that elusive pair of eyeglasses in another. You can also stick a box on the refrigerator to keep recipes handy.

In all, these boutique boxes make useful items for the home, fabulous gifts and bounty for your favorite charity bazaar.

Detailed instructions, along with illustrations and photos, are all included in the booklet "Old Fashioned Boxes" (#363). To receive your copy, send $1.75 plus 25 cents for postage and handling to:

PEOPLE QUIZ

SHOULD PARENTS AND KIDS BE SECRET SHARERS?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

2. Children worry most about their parents being upset with each other.

3. How much fun you have playing with a small child is likely to determine the quality of his behavior as he grows older.

5. Most children would rather stay young and never grow old.

6. If your child has high blood pressure, it could be your fault.

7. The daughters of working mothers have two strikes against them when they seek achievement in the marketplace.

ANSWERS

1. False. Psychological studies at Purdue University on parent-child relationships indicate that parents should avoid using children as confidants in dealing with personal problems. We all need someone to confide in, and especially in single-parent families there is a temptation to discuss emotional distress with children. Children want to be in on decision-making, but they don't want to be involved with emotional problems. According to the studies, such confidences tend to be stressful to the offspring: "When you tell your child that you can't cope with your life, that child wonders how you can cope with him. Children want to be reassured that their parents can cope."

2. False. Experts at Gannon University (Pennsylvania) studying children's anxieties interviewed children of both sexes randomly selected from five school districts. The data indicate that failing a test was the most frequent worry of all the children, followed by doing something wrong, being blamed for "something I didn't do" and a death in the family.

3. True. The quality of parents' play with an infant is the most powerful determinant of the child's later form of behavior, reports Dorothy G. Singer, director of the school psychology program at the University of Bridgeport, and Jerome Singer, professor of psychology at Yale University, in their treatise Partners in Play. They conclude from their research that: "It follows that the mother or father who can get 'in touch' with her or his own playfulness, imaginative resources and childhood joys is much more likely to offer the child richer opportunities for development than the adult who merely provides good physical care and love for the child without exposing him to the whimsy and joy of make-believe. Love, however deeply felt, needs playful actions and words, which engage the child's attention and encourage imitation."

4. True. Harvard Medical School studies of the differences between children's and adults' dreams show that those of adults are more likely to be expressed in symbols, making interpretation more difficult. Children's dreams, on the other hand, are more straightforward and direct, with no subtleties. They are more obviously related to current issues in the child's life and are structured in accordance with his knowledge and understanding. There is a gradual tendency to censor inner feelings as a child grows older. Encourage your child to tell you his dreams while he is growing up. This can provide you with a better insight into his needs, feelings and deep-seated desires.

5. True. A University of Missouri study of young children's attitudes and perceptions of older adults indicates that most youngsters, specifically those in the earlier stages of childhood, think life is better for them now than it will be later and regret that there isn't much they can do about growing old. The subjects, 102 children ages 4 to 7, characterized older adults as sad and lonely. Although most expressed positive views of the activities they shared with their grandparents, two-thirds of the children thought the rewards of being a grandmother or grandfather didn't seem intriguing enough to make the trip through middle-age worthwhile.

6. True. A National Institutes of Health study shows a significant correlation between a family's emphasis on ambitiousness and competitive attitudes and high blood pressure in children. A family life style that places pressure on the child to achieve or enforces strict behavior patterns was found to be associated with hypertension in children.

7. False. A psychological study of both working and nonworking mothers and their daughters, conducted by a team of Loyola College (Louisiana) investigators, shows that daughters of working women tend to have a more positive outlook and have less fear of success than the daughters of nonworking mothers. The study also indicates that mothers who work influence their daughters to achieve greater personal satisfaction and productivity. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

MAKE-BELIEVE SEX

Is it true that art imitates life? When it comes to art and sex, the answer is yes and no.

Psychologist Paul R. Abramson of U.C.L.A. and researcher Mindy Mechanic recently completed an analysis of sexual goings-on in the best-selling novels (from Dr. Zhivago to Scruples) and top-grossing films (Some Like It Hot to Superman) of 1959, 1969 and 1979. In the later films and books they found that men and women spent less time getting acquainted before having relations; there was much less romantic love; men were more likely to be divorced or single; sexual partners did not communicate much during or after sex; and women initiated sex more often than in the earlier films and books. Then again, not everything portrayed recently was realistic. "We found that the sex shown was invariably between partners who were young, single, attractive and physically healthy," Abramson told us.

Movie Still Archives

Surprisingly, he says, cinema's "most realistic portrayal of human sexuality" was 1979's Amityville Horror. It showed an over-30 married couple of average looks, who had sexual problems during the film's horrific events.

SWEET STUFF

Did you know that Frank Sinatra won't perform without a supply of Tootsie Rolls nearby? That Goo Goo Clusters appeared in the film Nashville and are said to be the world's first combination candy bar? That Admiral Richard Byrd took Butterfingers with him to the South Pole in 1928? These tasty morsels are all from Ray Broekel's The Great American Candy Bar Book, chock-full of candy lore, but not to be read before dinner.

You can also chew on these candy facts: The Reggie! bar may have been named for a famous home-run hitter, but Baby Ruth wasn't (it was named for Grover Cleveland's daughter). Charleston Chew, launched in 1922, was named after the dance craze. The 3 Musketeers, named in 1932 after Alexandre Dumas's novel, originally had three bars in one wrapper for just a nickel. Mary Jane, still going strong at 68, was named after a favorite aunt.

By the way, the biggest cavity producer ever made was a 15-foot-long, 20-inch-thick Clark bar, weighing in at 3,100 pounds. And America's favorite candy bar is Snickers, followed by M&M's, Hershey's with almonds, Reese's Peanut Butter Cups and 3 Musketeers.

GETTING THAT RAISE

Even in these hard times, you can get yourself a raise — if you know the art of negotiating. Gerard Nierenberg, attorney, author and founder of New York's Negotiation Institute, says you must first realize, "Everyone wins in a negotiation." Remember that you're not out to manipulate your boss, he says, but to give him objective facts he can use in deciding on your raise. Such facts should include how your salary range compares to the competition's and what it might cost to replace you. You win because you get the raise. Your boss wins because, objectively, he can justify the pay raise in his own mind.

Nierenberg says the technique even works on him. While asking for a raise, a member of his law firm noted how much higher salaries were at other firms. He warned Nierenberg about keeping salaries competitive to attract the right caliber of people. "Well, needless to say, he got his raise," says Nierenberg, "and he's still with me."

PLUGGED IN

How would you ever have passed social studies or biology without the trusty encyclopedia? Now, as the world has gotten more complex, so has the encyclopedia. It's gone electronic, fed into the home via a TV cable system or hooked up to your home computer. If you want to look up "dinosaur" or "xylophone," simply dial a phone number, place your phone receiver in a converter attached to the computer and punch up the data you want.

According to Frank Farrell, president of Grolier Electronic Publishing, which produces the electronic edition of the 21-volume Academic American, "In the time it would take to walk to your bookshelf, you can have a readout of the subject you're researching." The cost of fingertip access to the 28,000-article, 9-million-word text varies — it can be as low as $30 per month.

Farrell predicts that by 1990, 70 percent of U.S. homes will have a personal computer, with many families using the electronic encyclopedia. Grolier is even looking into a videodisc version. Then a person could hear Beethoven's "ninth symphony" and watch a "hydrofoil" skim across the water.

BYPASS SURGERY EXTENDS LIFE

For men under 65 with angina, bypass surgery can significantly increase their chances of survival and is preferable to nonsurgical treatment, says a new study.

Angina, a painful circulatory problem of the heart, affects over two million Americans. Often the ailment is treated with medication rather than surgery. But the new study, involving some 800 men in several European countries, shows that among those in the bypass group, the death rate after five years was 53 percent lower than in the nonsurgical group.

Our Story: AS ALETA BEFRIENDS HER SON, ENVY OF JUDITH DIMS. ON THE QUESTION OF A NAME, THE QUEEN GRACEFULLY WITHDRAWS. "NATHAN WAS A GREAT PROPHET," SHE TELLS JUDITH. "EGIL WAS MERELY THE UNCLE OF A HUSBAND WHO HAS LEFT ME IN MY HOUR OF NEED." THEIR EYES MEET, AND THE WOMEN COLLAPSE IN LAUGHTER.

AMID ALL THE POMP KING ZOG OF DALMATIA CAN MUSTER, THE TOURNAMENT BEGINS. THE LISTS ARE QUICKLY THINNED...

BUT THE HAND-TO-HAND CONTEST PROVES EMBARRASSING. THE MASKED TEAM OF OLD MAN AND YOUNG ARE WITHOUT PEER. ALP ARSLAN IS THROWN AND PINNED AT ONCE BY "GRANDFATHER" WHILE VAL MANAGES ONLY A DRAW WITH A LAD YOUNG ENOUGH TO BE HIS SON.
