COUPLE BELIEVED DEAD IN PRE-DAWN BLAZE ... Pitt County firemen battle flames that

Believe Couple Died In Flames

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Two Route 1, Ayden, residents, Mack and Clara Bowen, are believed to have died early this morning when their two-story home burned to the ground.

Medical Examiner Stan Harris, said this morning at the scene of the fire that one body had been recovered but had not been identified. Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner said the fire was reported at 5 a.m. to the Bell Arthur Fire Department. Joyner said the cause of the fire had not been determined.

According to Harris the two possible victims — Mack, 75, and Clara, 68 — were thought to be sleeping in a downstairs bedroom when the fire started.

A neighbor, Ronald Hines who lives across the highway from the Bowen house, reported the fire. Bell Arthur Fire Chief Virgil O'Neal said Hines tried to "get to the Bowens, but the house was fully involved in fire and (he) could not." Hines was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of smoke inhalation.

Bell Arthur firemen were the first to arrive at the fire and were joined by the Winterville and Red Oak fire departments.

Joyner said Bell Arthur firemen reported they saw flames "leaping into the sky" as far away as Winterville. The blaze was controlled within an hour, Joyner said.

At 10 a.m. today the house was still smoking. Only charred supports and a blackened chimney remained.

Extradition Hearing For Killer Suspect Scheduled Today In N.J.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today that a hearing on the extradition of a New Jersey man being held in Newark in the shooting deaths of a Grifton minister and a Goldsboro man was expected to be conducted this morning.

Tyson said that Dwight Parker Sr., 23, charged with murder in the deaths of the Rev. Leslie L. Thorbs, 31, and Anthony Ray Herring, 27, will be returned to Pitt County "immediately" if the extradition rights are waived today.

The bodies of Thorbs, who operated flower shops in Greenville and Ayden, and Herring were pulled from the Tar River near the N.C. 222 bridge last week after authorities reportedly received an anonymous telephone call about the murders. Both bodies had been weighted with cement blocks and authorities said the men had died of gunshot wounds to the head.

Parker, who Tyson indicated knew both victims, was arrested Saturday following several days of investigation by Pitt authorities in Newark. Parker's wife and parents reside in New Jersey, Tyson said.

Pitt deputies arrested 20-year-old Carolyn Denise Pippins of Route 4, Greenville, Thursday and charged her with two counts of being an accessory after the fact of murder in the deaths of Thorbs and Herring.

Hope Based On Kidnapping

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A man convicted in the abduction of an Illinois abortion clinic operator plotted to gain his release by having the wife of a jail official kidnapped, a published report says.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch in Sunday's editions quotes St. Clair County Sheriff Mearl Justus as saying Don Benny Anderson hoped to get out of prison by having another man help him with the kidnap plot. The deal fell through, the sheriff said, after authorities got a tip.

Jody's Dream

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — A cerebral palsy victim who dreamed of lifting his basketball team to victory spent just 30 seconds on the court — but it was time enough to sink two free throws and help win the game for Wooster High School.

"I'll eventually put it away in the back of my mind," said Jody LaBant, 18, a junior who has had seven eye operations. "But I'll pull it out 20 years from now and say to myself, 'I don't believe I did that.' I'll never forget it, that's for sure."

LaBant took the floor and made two free throws with five seconds remaining in a 61-44 Wooster victory Feb. 12 over Lodi Cloverleaf.

LaBant said he began wanting to play for Wooster High 14 years ago, and he started working to make the team as a sophomore.

"He never asked for favors, never accepted any," said Coach Mark Alberts. "He'd run the auditorium steps with the others during conditioning drills. Sometimes he'd fall, but he'd never quit. He'd get up, keep going. He was an inspiration to us all."

LaBant became team manager as a sophomore and was manager again this year until near the end of the regular season.

"It occurred to me several months ago that Jody would be too old to play next year," Albert said. "So I decided to allow him to dress for the last four games of the regular season, hoped there would be some way to get him

New Warning Given OPEC

KUWAIT (AP) — A top government official warned today that Arab Persian Gulf states will act to preserve their own interests if OPEC fails to agree on price and production levels.

"The gulf oil exporters will have to act in such a fashion that enables them to retain a reasonable production level and revenues because we mainly depend on oil as a source of income," Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs Abdul Aziz Hussein said after a Cabinet meeting.

The statement came one day after another high Kuwaiti official predicted oil prices could drop to $20 a barrel unless the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries acts to reduce its $34 base price by at least $3.

The shrinking oil market and recent price cuts by Nigerian and North Sea oil producers have destroyed OPEC's grip on world petroleum prices and threaten to plunge its 13 members into a free-for-all to sell their oil.

In Paris, officials of the Kuwaiti, Algerian and Venezuelan embassies declined comment on whether oil ministers from their countries would meet in the French capital to discuss how to avert a price war. All three ministers were due in Paris later today.

On Sunday, the head of the Kuwait Parliament's Economic and Financial Affairs Committee was quoted as saying OPEC's official price for oil is "mistaken and unsound."

"If we are now hesitating to slash our prices by $3 to $4 a barrel, I am afraid a day which is not too far will come when we will be obliged to cut prices to as low as $20 per barrel," the newspaper Al-Watan quoted Jassem al-Khorafi as saying.

The newspaper quoted him as saying current prices are unrealistic because of a sharp drop in demand for oil by industrialized countries and the success of consumer nations in promoting energy conservation.

He criticized the Arab nations on the Persian Gulf for "leniency toward OPEC outlaws who have been trying to further the interests of their countries through violation of OPEC's prices and production quotas."

Al-Khorafi said the gulf states, expected to meet soon in Geneva or Vienna with other OPEC members, "will make their own moves and would not be defeated in a price war that is imposed on us."

Rose Unwilling Risk Leaf Program

BETHEL — U.S. Congressman Charlie Rose, chairman of the House Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee, told an audience at a Pepsi Break sponsored by the Bethel Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce today that Congress "didn't get out all the stumps" when it "cleared new land" in approving the present tobacco program.

He said Congress, in "wanting allotment owners to share in the burden of running the program," placed a 7 cents a pound assessment on them, as well as growers. But Rose suggested the problem is that the allotment owners "pass on the 7 cents to the growers."

He said while the House could defeat any unfavorable amendments if lawmakers try to change the program this year, legislation in the Senate "could be subjected to all kinds of amendments."

Rose said "in my estimation, Congress is very happy with the tobacco program," and while it is "my responsibility to look at the program, I'm not about to take any steps to endanger the tobacco program."

Congress has never seen a commodity program like tobacco," Rose emphasized. The corn program has cost the taxpayers $17 billion, while the wheat program has cost $11 billion.

Tobacco, he said, has cost only $200 million "the whole time" including export subsidies.

Rose suggested that both tobacco and peanut farmers have a message that "needs to be told ... get more politically involved," and conduct a well organized effort to spread the word about tobacco.

MIA-Seeker Has Given Himself Up

NAKHON PHANOM, Thailand (AP) — James "Bo" Gritz, a former Green Beret who led a raid into Laos last fall in search of U.S. prisoners of war, surrendered today and Thai police tried to learn whether he had staged a second rescue mission.

Authorities said Gritz, wearing sunglasses and a red T-shirt, walked into the police station at this Thai-Lao border town and gave himself up. Police Lt. Col. Thalerngsak Sukonthaman said Gritz would be jailed after questioning.

"I got in about 3 a.m. after a very long walk," Gritz said at the police station. "I just want to collect my thoughts," he said, refusing to say whether he had staged another foray into Laos.

Gritz told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that he was being kept under guard at the police station but that the police chief had not put him behind bars with "common criminals" out of consideration for his past record as a law-abiding man and a soldier.

In an interview broadcast on CBS radio this morning, Gritz said he was sure "more than 10" Americans still were being held captive in Southeast Asia.

"In the last 30 days, I have found that there are Americans alive and in captivity in communist Asia," said Gritz, who indicated he would return to the United States if expelled from Thailand. He did not say where he believed Americans were being held, or where he got his information.

Gritz, 44, of Westchester, Calif., was charged with illegal possession of a high-powered radio transmitter, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison. He also could be charged with illegal entry into Thailand if authorities determine that he had slipped back and forth across the frontier with Communist-ruled Laos.

The highly decorated former Special Forces lieutenant colonel made an unsuccessful raid into Laos last November to rescue Americans he believes have been held prisoner since the Vietnam War. He and his armed followers were ambushed and one Laotian was reported killed in the mission.

Hollywood actor William Shatner has said he gave Gritz $10,000 but that it was for his life story. Film star Clint Eastwood also has been cited in some newspaper reports as a backer of Gritz's expeditions, but has refused to comment on the claim.

Gritz is widely believed to have attempted a second raid into Laos earlier this month. The English-language Bangkok Post has reported that Gritz headed a 16-man unit of Americans, most of them ex-Green Berets who fought in Vietnam.

Police said today they expected Gritz to post bail, which was set at $6,500.

Two other Americans already are out on bail awaiting a court appearance on charges of illegal possession of the radio transmitter, which authorities said could pick up Thai military communications.

The two Americans have been identified as Lance Edward Trimmer and Lynn Standerwick, whose father, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, parachuted from his stricken jet into Laos in 1971. His remains have never been recovered.

Gritz arrived at the police station with Luan Na Phattalung, who heads the Lawyer's Association of Nakhon Phanom and who is representing Trimmer and Ms. Standerwick. Police said all three defendants would be included in the same legal proceedings, with a court appearance this week.

Hollywood Stars Treat Queen Like Royalty At Gala Dinner

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The royalty of England and Hollywood got together at a gala dinner honoring Queen Elizabeth II on the second night of her 10-day, first-ever visit to California.

The Queen and Prince Philip could see stars all over 20th Century-Fox's glittering Stage 9, until a few weeks ago the bleak tent city of television's "M-A-S-H."

Dinner at the studio capped a busy Sunday for the royal couple that began with services at a packed church in San Diego and included lunch at the exclusive estate of former U.S. ambassador to Britain Walter Annenberg near Palm Springs and a brief ceremony with local political leaders in Long Beach.

The queen and prince, who opened their tour of California on Saturday with a festive welcome in San Diego, braved a steady downpour on their arrival in Air Force II in Palm Springs and small-but-vocal demonstrations at several stops on their tightly scheduled itinerary.

The queen was greeted by first lady Nancy Reagan at 20th Century-Fox, where the former Nancy Davis appeared in films with now president and then actor Ronald Reagan.

Movie stars from the Reagans' film days joined British entertainers and prominent show-business Republicans such as Charlton Heston and former U.S. Sen. George Murphy on a stage converted by designer Walter Scott into a garden lighted by scores of white paper globes.

Frank Sinatra produced the show which included George Burns, Perry Como, Dionne Warwick, Les Brown's band and Sinatra himself.

The 87-year-old Burns cracked a faintly risque joke which seemed to amuse the queen.

"Acting is easy," Burns said. "If the director wants me to cry, I think of my sex life. If the director wants me to laugh, I think of my sex life."

"I'm glad I came, it was an evening to remember," Julie Andrews quoted the queen as saying.

Governors' Official Residences Often A Challenge To Occupants

By MARKS HERR

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — The nation's governors may be our hardest and most courageous citizens.

They have to put up with their official mansions. They and their families confront fire hazards, floods and pestilence; they have to put up with falling plaster and furry furniture. And they do it with a smile.

"I love it. It's the nicest place I've ever lived," says Lisa Wallace, wife of Alabama Gov. George Wallace. Though it's almost impossible to keep the white-columned, two-story mansion warm in winter.

The mansions are an eclectic lot, built in every imaginable style — Greek Revival in New Jersey, Colonial in Maryland, "Holiday Inn Modern" in Montana.

Pennsylvania's mansion boasts pre-Revolutionary antique furnishings. Oklahoma's has solar panels on its roof, and Michigan has a blushing pink bidet.

Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Vermont have no mansions at all.

Taste is subjective, and what one governor considers essential for comfortable living is not necessarily what the rest of the state considers desirable. Or vice versa.

New Jersey last year moved its official residence from a 233-year-old Princeton mansion, Morven, across the street to a 150-year-old mansion, Drumthwacket, after complaints from previous administrations that Morven was too small and run down.

The New Jersey Historical Society used private donations to furnish Drumthwacket with $300,000 worth of 19th century antiques. But Gov. Thomas Kean rejected the American Empire period furniture.

"It's not very comfortable to sit on and it's not always attractive to look at," Kean said. "It's got paws on its feet, hair on its legs and all that. We could do better."

While Kean disliked the furry furniture, he had requested a whirlpool bath for his bad back.

It cost the state $4,420 to learn that installation of a whirlpool would cost another $30,000, and the matter was dropped.

"Everybody knew about the governor's bad back even before he went to the hospital, so everyone assumed that he's got to have a Jacuzzi," Kean family friend Anthony Cicciello said.

While the study determined it was not feasible to put in the bath, the state spent another $12,000 on cabinets as part of a $125,000 renovation of the mansion's kitchen.

Then Kean announced last month his family would move into Drumthwacket. The governor, instead, will continue commuting to Trenton from his own comfortable mansion in northern New Jersey.

The incident illustrates a cardinal rule of politics: bad form can get you into trouble. Few symbols offer more tangible examples than a governor's home.

Montana's Gov. Ted Schwinden also had mansion difficulties. His wife Jean casually mentioned she would rather live in the original governor's mansion, built in 1888, than in the new mansion built in 1959. The news set off a wave of protests from people who had helped renovate the old mansion, and from others who apparently viewed such presumption as imperious.

Within 10 weeks, Schwinden dropped plans for using the old mansion and moved into the new, veneer-paneled, ranch-style mansion characterized as "Holiday Inn architecture."

In Minnesota, Gov. Rudy Perpich said that during his 1982 campaign more people asked him if his wife Lola would move into the 20-room Tudor mansion in St. Paul than about any political issue.

Mrs. Perpich, who stayed at the family home during the governor's first term, finally decided to move in with him after exacting a promise from her husband there would be no surprise dinner guests.

Some governors know their homes more intimately than others. Former California Gov. Jerry Brown grew up in the old governor's mansion, a 105-year-old Victorian Gothic house in downtown Sacramento, when his father, Edmund "Pat" Brown, was governor.

By the time he was elected governor himself, his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, had ordered a new $1.5 million mansion built to replace the old "firetrap."

The new mansion was once described by Joan Didion as evocative of "supermarkets, and housing projects and Coca-Cola bottling plants."

Brown branded it a "Taj Mahal." He opted for a $400-a-month, two-bedroom apartment across the street from the capitol.

The California legislature then decided to sell the new mansion, but the highest bid was $1.25 million — less than it cost to build — and it was rejected.

California's newly elected governor, George Deukmejian, wants to live in the new mansion. But the state Senate wants to refurbish the old manse.

Some people are more eager than others to move into their new home.

When the Reagans moved to Washington prior to the inauguration, they stayed at Blair House, across the street from the White House.

Nancy Reagan, eager to cross the street, reportedly asked then President Carter's family to move out early. They didn't and the reports were denied.

Arizona's governor, Bruce Babbitt, decided not to move to the state mansion because he said it was no place to raise his two small boys, since schools were better near their own home. The state now has sold the mansion, using the proceeds to help fund the state university system.

New Hampshire's Republican Gov. John Sununu might practice different politics from Democrat Babbitt, but they agree on mansions. Sununu, father of seven, decided the mansion was just too small and did not move in.

Maryland's first lady, Patricia Hughes, currently renovating the official residence, said she loves it. Her predecessor, Bootsie Mandel, loved the house too, so much so she refused to leave when then Gov. Marvin Mandel announced he was divorcing her. The governor ended up in a local hotel until his ex-wife moved out.

(The Maryland attorney general's office said Mandel's fascination with the mansion continued after he left office. The state filed suit alleging he stole 57 pieces of furniture valued at $24,000. Mandel denied the accusation and has countersued.)

Louisiana First Lady Dodie Treen, wife of Gov. David Treen, said living in their plantation-style, white-columned mansion can be difficult, even though she has a well-trained staff of state prisoners who handle the cooking, cleaning, butling and bartending chores. A contingent of state troopers keeps an eye on the staff.

"It is a lot of work — kind of like a job that you didn't know you were going to get into," she said. "If I had a house, frankly, I don't know how I would manage with the cooking, cleaning and grocery shopping — something would have to go."

Governors sometimes are forced out, and not by the voters.

Pennsylvania's former Gov. Milton Shapp and his wife, Muriel, moved into the state's red-brick Georgian mansion in 1971.

One year later, Harrisburg suffered a major flood that routed the Shapps, causing $365,000 in damages to the mansion. The Shapps never returned.

Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown and his wife, Phyllis George, lived in the 68-year-old Renaissance Revival mansion in Frankfort for only three months before the state fire marshal condemned it as a firetrap. They moved to Brown's Lexington estate, forcing him to helicopter 30 miles each way to work daily.

Ms. George then embarked on a "Save the Mansion" campaign and raised $1 million. State lawmakers pointed out the cost of repairing the mansion, originally pegged at $2 million, had grown to $3.5 million.

The renovations took a year longer than expected, and the Browns are slated to move back in March 1, nine months before he leaves office.

Kentucky's problems are not unique. "The mansion is in borderline shape structurally," said Burdette Knous,

Dear Abby

Tell Friend You Don't Loan Clothes

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: How do I tell a good friend I do not want to lend her my clothes? She is leaving for a trip and has hinted that she would like to borrow two new dresses she saw in my closet. I bought them on sale last fall and they still have the tags on them!

What kind of excuse can I give her without losing her friendship? I've never borrowed anyone's clothes in my life, and I don't want to lend mine. Hurry, please. I know she'll be asking me soon.

STUCK

DEAR STUCK: Don't look for an "excuse," tell her the reason: "Sorry, I don't lend my clothes to anyone." If you lose her friendship, what have you lost? A friend with whom you can't be honest.

DEAR ABBY: We're expecting our first child, and we are thrilled. My husband is a health nut. He jogs, watches his diet, takes vitamins and gave up smoking. When "Bob" learned that I was with child, he insisted that I quit smoking. I promised I would and said I had, but I've been sneaking cigarettes whenever possible.

Bob caught me and gave me a long lecture. I told him he wasn't my father, then I asked, "What are you going to do the next time you catch me? Give me a spanking?" He said, "That's a good idea."

I thought he was kidding, but last night he caught me smoking again, so he put me across his lap and spanked me with my hairbrush. I cried.

Is smoking really harmful to the unborn child? And is spanking grounds for divorce in New Jersey?

SPANKED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SPANKED: Yes, doctors have agreed that a mother's smoking is indeed harmful to the unborn child. And a New Jersey lawyer can tell you whether spanking is grounds for divorce.

DEAR ABBY: Why don't gynecologists warn their patients that after they've had a hysterectomy they are no longer sexually desirable?

At age 47, I had a total hysterectomy. I had tumors and was told I should have my uterus removed. But had I known then what I know now, I would have put it off as long as possible, or even taken my chances and not had the operation at all!

After my surgery my husband told me that our love-making wasn't the same — that I had lost my appeal for him. Then he found someone else.

The same thing happened to a friend of mine. After her hysterectomy, her husband said she didn't "feel" the same, then he took up with a young woman in his office.

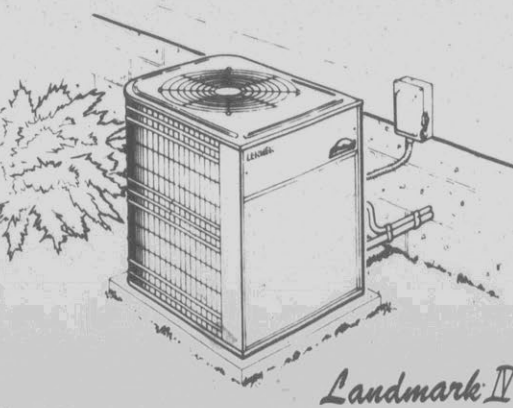

Would I be wise to forget about men? I take Premarin and I haven't lost my sex drive. I'm attractive, neat and clean, and people tell me I look about 40. I need a truthful answer, Abby. Would a man ever be sexually satisfied with me now?

REJECTED

DEAR REJECTED: Yes! In a total hysterectomy, the uterus is removed, which in no way diminishes the sexual satisfaction of lovemaking. A man cannot tell whether his partner has a uterus or not. If he claims he can "feel" the difference, he's either looking for an excuse to look elsewhere, or the problem is not in her body, but in his head!

WEDDINGS IN WHITE

The traditional "bride in white" is not really all that customary, dating back only to Victorian England. In many countries, white is not, and never has been, the traditional color for a bride's attire.

During the American revolution, brides wore red—the symbolic color of rebellion.

Modern Chinese brides also wear red—not for political reasons, but because it is their color of happiness and permanence.

Japanese brides do wear white, although white is the Japanese color of mourning. It signifies that the bride is "dead" to her parents and is now entirely devoted to her husband.

For more mysterious reasons, the wedding color of Spanish peasants is black, and the most popular bridal color in Norway is green. Historians have been unable to trace the reasons behind these traditions.

Dear Pat: I am enclosing a small sample of a design I have worked out for a needlepoint tote bag to be done on plastic canvas. Now I think I would like to make a matching knitted jacket with the same design. Since I am accustomed to working out my own designs on a basic pattern I foresaw no trouble, but the shaded squares on canvas turned out to be shaded rectangles when I knitted them on a sample swatch — also enclosed. Help! — Loretta S., Milwaukee, Wis.

When knitting in the basic stockinette stitch, you will have more rows per inch than you have stitches per inch. Needlepoint canvas will have the same mesh count vertically and horizontally, as will the graph chart. So, when you knit from a chart designed for even-mesh canvas or fabric, some adjustment will be necessary.

Therefore, I have worked out a chart that appears to be a rectangle — and would be just that worked in needlepoint — yet will appear almost perfectly square when knitted with a yarn with a five-stitches-per-inch gauge.

This chart has three more rows than the needlepoint chart to achieve almost the same effect. By the same token, if one has only this chart but wants to duplicate the design in needlepoint, three rows would have to be eliminated to create squares. The extra rows that have been added are Rows 1, 6 and 12.

Between the squares on the design are borders of Color A, which is the lightest shade. (Color B is a medium tone and Color C is the darkest color.) To make the borders as symmetrical as possible, work three Color A stitches between each square and work four rows of Color A between each row of squares. With the weight yarn you were using, I added one-fourth more rows for each 2-inch square. If you were using a bulkier yarn, about one-fifth more rows would work out best, while with finer yarn, you might need one-third more rows.

Another way to judge would be to figure on one extra row per inch with bulky yarn, one and a half extra rows per inch with medium yarn and two extra rows per inch with finer yarn.

You had the right idea, Loretta, in testing the design with sample swatches, and with these guidelines, you should have no problem in converting other designs yourself.

I hope this will encourage others to be equally creative in their stitchery projects.

secretary to Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm's wife Dottie. "If the average person came in the door they would think it's in great shape. But we've had repeated electrical and plumbing problems the past three years."

Texas has one of the older mansions, a 127-year-old Greek Revival edifice.

"We are still in awe of the majesty of the house and the rooms, the history behind the house," said Linda Gale, wife of Gov. Mark White. "Our main concern was that the children would spill something on a rug or on a chair. We've had a few friends do so, but the children have not done a thing."

The Whites of Texas no doubt will have an easier time with repairs than their Oklahoma neighbors, the Nighs.

"There are no blueprints to the mansion and grounds," said Donna, wife of Gov. George Nigh. "Every time they start to repair a minor problem they usually hit something else and it becomes a major problem."

"The first two years saw the basement flood several times because of water seeping through walls. It took forever to get that corrected."

"George always tells audiences he is the same age as the mansion (55), and I always respond, 'Yes, and I had the mansion sandblasted.'"

Once they have surmounted failed electrical systems, sundry floods and falling plaster, the governors' families must furnish their homes. It's not easy, as Nancy Reagan discovered when she spent $210,000 for a new set of red and gold china at a time her husband was cutting federal spending for tered curtains, rugs and wall paper.

South Carolina, Maryland and Mississippi have used donations of money and furniture in their renovations, and Matilda Cuomo, wife of New York's new Gov. Mario Cuomo, is asking for donations of artwork to spruce up the Albany manse, which once housed art buff Nelson Rockefeller.

Michigan, which has no antiques, received its mansion gratis from a local millionaire on condition the state pay $200,000 for its furnishings. A free house is a free house, so the state agreed.

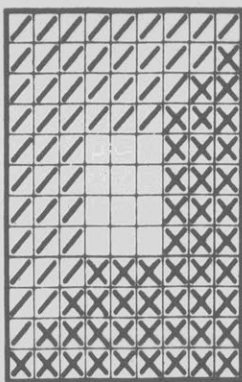

Pennsylvania's mansion is filled with expensive antiques including some pre-Revolutionary mirrors, Chippendale side chairs and a 19th century English chandelier.

Mrs. Jean Ariyoshi, wife of Hawaii's Gov. George Ariyoshi, finds being mistress of Honolulu's Washington Place, as the governor's mansion is called, is nearly a full-time job — one she clearly enjoys. She is trying to collect and preserve furnishings from the 17-room Greek Revival mansion. It was built in 1846 by an English sea captain and was the palace of Hawaii's last monarch, Queen Liliuokalani, whose furnishings were auctioned off after her death in 1893.

"I have problems like everyone else with an old house," she says, mentioning termites and leaky water pipes. But as an occupant for the past nine years with her husband, two sons and a daughter, she adds, "It's a very livable place."

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

WHY A BRIDGE?

Is it really necessary to replace an adult's missing teeth with a fixed bridge or partial denture? The answer is a definite YES! The reasons are quite simple.

When a tooth is lost, the adjacent teeth and the tooth (above or below) which acts as a biting partner, lose the support, strength and stabilizing influence which the lost tooth once provided. The remaining teeth will be subject to many problems such as drifting, abnormally exposed decay-prone areas and, worst of all, periodontal disease.

(The single largest cause of tooth loss in adults).

The loss of just one tooth, if not replaced by a fixed bridge or partial denture, will more than likely, ultimately cause the loss of more and more teeth. In many patients, it is only a matter of time until the destruction is complete.

The dental arch was designed by nature to have a complete set of teeth — one helping and protecting the other. Replacing missing teeth with a dental appliance will maintain this design as well as your smile and ability to eat properly.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Greater Things Ahead

State Sen. Harold Hardison made a point that seldom occurs to those of us who watch the daily expansion of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital complex.

Speaking at the ground breaking for the $5.2 million radiation therapy center last week, he noted that it was the last major facility slated as a part of the development of the ECU School of Medicine in conjunction with Pitt County Memorial.

"I view this facility as only the beginning of the end of what might be called 'phase one,'" Hardison said. "What I refer to as phase one is represented by all that we see around us."

Indeed, those of us in the Pitt County area who read frequently of extensive projected expansion plans for Pitt County Memorial Hospital — plans which will cost more than $50 million and expand the facility to 900 beds — have no doubt that even greater things are ahead for the medical complex.

The basics are in place for a regional medical referral center with an outstanding school of medicine affiliated with it. The future is unlimited for service to North Carolina on the part of the hospital and the medical school.

As Sen. Hardison pointed out, everything that is now at the medical complex and under construction is phase one of something much larger. The complex has only just begun to be of full service.

Already the plans for major expansion of Pitt County Memorial Hospital are shaping up. The costs for the expansions will be high and, no doubt, that money is not yet in sight. It will come, however, with the help of the many supporters the medical complex has. Now and in the future there will be a medical facility at Pitt County Memorial which will fully serve the needs of eastern North Carolinians.

Fair Study Is Needed

The current hottest political potato in Raleigh is the investigation of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green by the State Bureau of Investigation.

It came to light when Lt. Gov. Green was informed that SBI agents were requesting his telephone records as part of the federal Colcar investigation.

The SBI works under Attorney General Rufus Edmiston and both Green and Edmiston are potential candidates for governor in 1983.

The stakes of the investigation are high for Edmiston. It would take some sensational discoveries of evidence to fully justify the investigation. On the other hand, now that it has become public, to drop it would give the appearance of a less than forceful attorney general.

Thus, last week reports surfaced that the state Justice Department was considering requesting a special prosecutor to review the information and remove the investigation from the "arena of politics."

The independent prosecutor would have the authority to determine what legal course, if any, should be followed.

Appointment of such a prosecutor would fall to Gov. Hunt, who is considered a likely candidate for Sen. Jesse Helms' U.S. Senate seat.

It is an uncomfortable position for everyone concerned involving something that may or may not have legal implications.

As much as possible the matter should be placed above politics and policies should be followed which will be fair to the lieutenant governor, as well as protecting the public's interest. It would seem that the appointment of a special prosecutor (and even that term is a misnomer at this stage) who is free of political commitments would be the best course to follow. He could review the SBI's information and dispose of the matter in the fairest way to Lt. Gov. Green.

More Than Meets The Eye

WASHINGTON — There seems to be more than meets the eye to the Army's latest request for funds to build nerve gas shells.

In its annual report to Congress last week, the Army requested $158 million — triple the amount sought last year — to build a new generation of nerve gas shells.

Yet the Reagan administration is also involved in a classified project to develop ways to disperse chemical agents through a variety of weapons-launch systems, including the highly accurate cruise missile.

The Pentagon will acknowledge only that it's conducting "paper studies" on chemical weapons delivery. Said a top Army official involved with the project: "We would be derelict in our duty if we didn't push ahead with projects like this ... we're examining dispersal techniques and things like that." The General Accounting Office is now looking into the project as well.

Last year the House of Representatives rejected, 251-159, an Army proposal to begin the production of binary weapons in Pine Bluff, Ark. But Congress eventually approved most of President Reagan's request for chemical warfare research and defense money.

According to congressional aides, however, bipartisan interest in eliminating several larger weapons systems, such as the MX, could pave the way for a trade-off on the president's latest nerve gas proposal. (Congress has previously funded the construction of a production plant, but no chemical weapons have been built in the United States in 14 years.)

The Army's request will only complicate matters with our NATO allies, whose repeated rejection of stockpiling has helped to keep U.S. chemical weapons out of production.

Rep. James H. Scheuer's bill to make the Environmental Protection Agency a federal commission independent of the White House recalls a 1970 proposal by former senator Edmund Muskie. Though less extensive in scope, the Maine Democrat's plan would have established a multi-member governing board much like that suggested in the current legislation. Unfortunately, when President Richard Nixon saw that Muskie — then his most likely rival in the 1972 general election — was gaining momentum with the commission idea, the president established the EPA by executive decree.

Footnote: Many veteran EPA employees are of two minds about the growing schism between the agency and Congress. On one hand, many are relieved to see scrutiny applied to an administration run amok; on the other, they worry that public confidence in EPA's foot soldiers has fallen to irrevocable lows — a fear bolstered by the fact that, despite waste dump horror stories, many employees spend their days doing nothing but photocopying documents at the request of House subcommittees.

Can the elderly expect to benefit from further dips in world petroleum prices? Not necessarily, says Charles Hill of the National Consumer Law Center.

Battle Looms Over Child Care Centers

RALEIGH — The annual battle over the state's day care laws is about to begin at the General Assembly. Advocates of tougher standards for day care centers have filed a package of bills while reports have it that legislation designed to exempt church-run centers from state regulation is being prepared.

Probably no state in America is more dependent on day care services than North Carolina. The state has a greater percentage of working mothers than any other state, says the Council for Children in Charlotte. And many are single parents who, without an affordable place to leave their children during the day, would go on the welfare rolls. There are 7,600 licensed day care centers and registered day care homes operating in the state, caring for 110,000 children a day.

Advocates of tougher day care standards have filed — or plan to file — no less than a dozen bills this session. Most controversial among them would be the reduction of the over-enrollment tolerance currently permitted. Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, is scheduled to introduce that bill.

A day care license specifies the number of children a center is allowed to care for. But, under the over-enrollment tolerance, the center is allowed to increase its enrollment by 20 percent beyond that specific number.

Lawmakers have felt that the day care industry needs this over-enrollment to compensate centers for those children who are absent and who withdraw without notice.

Rep. Brennan's bill recognizes that the industry needs some tolerance. But, only 5 percent. She says the day care centers have rules which protect them against absenteeism and withdrawals. "They charge by the week and you still have to pay them even if your child is out sick all week. They're using the tolerance to stack lots of children in without increasing their staffs," she said.

Rep. Magie Keesee-Forrester, R-Guilford, has introduced legislation to raise the age limit for child supervisors at centers. To keep its license, a center must maintain a specified ration of children to staff. Her bill would prohibit the employment of anyone under 18 for purposes of meeting that ratio. The current limit is 16. Under the bill, however, anyone 16 or 17 could work at a center as an intern.

Another bill would close a legal loophole. Although state law now allows for the inspection of centers, the state does not have a statutory right to go on the premises and inspect. The bill would provide that right.

The state has only one option when it finds something wrong at a center — license revocation. That's a drastic step which is rarely taken. Legislation is in the hopper that would allow the Day Care Licensing Commission to fine centers up to $1,000 and to either suspend or revoke licenses. This bill is also designed to speed the commission's proceedings.

Not all the bills are poison. At least one is sugar. Several employers in North Carolina have begun providing their own day care facilities. Rep. Brennan says these companies have found that absenteeism and worker turnover have dropped tremendously and that productivity has increased. The results are sure to encourage other firms to take this approach, she says, and maybe the state can speed this along. She suggests allowing companies to take as a tax credit the full costs of operating day care centers for employees.

Exempting church-run day care centers from state licensing is always an emotional issue. The churches claim licensing is always an emotional issue. The churches claim licensing violates their First Amendment rights. The other side says "even Christian children need protection." An exemption almost passed in 1981. The vote should be very close this year.

Breaking Bread, EPA Style: How Does It Go?

Rita Lavelle, recently discharged as head of hazardous waste at EPA, has turned over her appointments calendar to congressional committees. Many entries indicate Ms. Lavelle had lunches and dinners with company officials of chemical companies who were under investigation for dumping toxic wastes.

According to EPA, Ms. Lavelle may have ignored a long-standing policy at EPA against meeting, much less breaking bread, with potential defendants in agency enforcement matters.

Reporters who checked the people listed on the calendars were informed, almost unanimously by Ms. Lavelle's hosts, that no business concerning hazardous waste and their companies was discussed.

Most said the dinners were only held to "get acquainted with Ms. Lavelle and to discuss chemical matters in general."

Unless someone can come up with other evidence, I believe them.

I prefer to believe a typical dinner with a chemical executive went something like this:

"That's a very attractive outfit you have, Miss Lavelle. Is it polyester or orlon?"

"Thank you. No, it happens to be acetate."

"Your hair is beautiful. What kind of spray do you use?"

"I use a non-aerosol spray that doesn't contain chlorofluorocarbons. I'm very concerned the mixture of nitrogen emissions and carbon dioxide could produce a catalytic reaction that might affect the ozone. Shall we order? I'm famished."

"Of course. What is your pleasure?"

"Perhaps some fish, providing it comes from an area that has not been polluted by methylene chloride or benzene."

"Good. I'm sure we can find something on the menu. Hmmm, the oysters sound very good."

"I don't eat oysters. They tend to bioaccumulate PCB in their tissues."

"How do oysters do that?"

"I can't discuss it any further. We have several cases pending against PCB polluters that we're trying to settle quietly."

"All right. How about a Dover sole from England?"

"That would be nice. It's out of my jurisdiction."

"How do you feel about love, Miss Lavelle?"

"That's a very personal question."

"I didn't mean love, as in love. I meant the Love Canal."

"Ugh. Do we have to talk about Love Canal while we're eating?"

"Forgive me for bringing it up. Let's talk about the weather."

"I can't talk about the weather. We're doing a study on companies responsible for acid rain, and I'm not allowed to give away their trade secrets."

"Have you seen any good movies lately?"

"I saw the 'China Syndrome,' but since we're involved with nuclear waste dumping, I'd rather not say if I liked it or not."

"I can understand that. Actually the purpose of this dinner is just to get to know you and become your friend. How's your sole?"

"Delicious. We don't have too many complaints about sole. Our biggest hazardous waste problems have to do with shellfish."

"Well, it's been a wonderful evening, Miss Lavelle, and you're a delightful dinner companion. I'd take you to a disco, but I have an early breakfast meeting tomorrow with my lawyers about our Stringfellow Acid Pit problem."

"I know."

Strength For Today

One officer under the command of Gen. Robert E. Lee, during the Civil War, often said derogatory things about the general behind his back.

One day Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, asked Lee whether he thought this man could fill a certain important post. Lee replied in terms of warmest praise for the man's ability.

When Lee's friends later expressed surprise that he had spoken well of a man who had spoken ill of him, the general replied: "I was asked not for this man's opinion of me, but for my opinion of him."

In the important matter of choosing the best man for the job, what difference does it make what those who are being considered think of us? If a good end is to be served, let us be big enough to admit that someone for whom we have little liking may serve it well — or even better than we can.

New Hampshire Politics: Eyeball To Eyeball

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — To the cheers of a crowd pumped up by a band, balloons and campaign songs, Walter F. Mondale vowed to seek out the voters of New Hampshire, wherever they might be.

"No meeting, no matter how small, is safe," he said.

That is the style of presidential campaigning in New Hampshire.

"You want to ask your questions eyeball to eyeball," said the former vice president. It's the style in Iowa as well and it's being practiced intensely by all the contenders for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

The unsettling fact is that those candidates are out running hard in February 1983, a full year before Iowans will attend the precinct caucuses that open the process of selecting national convention delegates.

Mondale and Sens. Alan Cranston, Gary Hart, John Glenn and Ernest Hollings and former Gov. Reubin Askew are showing up regularly in places like Mason City, Iowa, and Dover, N.H.

Four years ago no one had yet inflated the red, white and blue balloons. A few lonesome politicians were traveling around the country without fanfare, giving speeches to whomever would listen.

People joked about how much time George Bush was spending in Iowa. His effort paid off many months later with a surprise victory over Ronald Reagan in the precinct caucuses. But that triumph didn't last long. Reagan campaigned hard in New Hampshire and scored a landslide primary victory that set him firmly on the road to the GOP nomination and the White House.

This year is different, say many Democrats, including the people around Mondale.

The rules of the game have changed. The Democrats decided to shorten the process and succeeded in lengthening it.

In 1980 there was a month between the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire primary. This year there will be eight days. And then on March 13, the first day the new rules allow other states to start choosing delegates, at least 10 states will hold primaries or caucuses.

The compression of the schedule has potentially conflicting effects on campaign strategy.

Reagan had a month to get his act together for the New Hampshire primary. Eight days probably wouldn't be enough time for a front-runner to recover from the embarrassment of an upset loss in a state everyone thought he would carry.

On the other hand, under the 1980 schedule there was time for campaign money to start flowing to an upset victor in Iowa.

In 1984, an upset winner in the Iowa caucuses must already have his fundraising base in place because he will be forced to move right on to New Hampshire before the mail will show any surge of checks from people impressed by a win in the caucuses.

So money is a big reason why candidates are out this early.

While the cost of campaigning continues to skyrocket, the federal limit on individual contributions is $1,000.

Politics is a labor-intensive business. And when able professionals see campaigns getting organized they start getting eager to hook on with one camp or another.

As one Mondale campaign veteran put it, "Once you start raising money you have to do some political stuff, whether you need it that early or not. People expect it."

They expect to be recruited and once on board they can't be ignored.

"Once you've made that contact and recruited them," asked Les Francis, a Mondale political aide, "how do you let them know you still care?"

One way is by keeping the candidate on the road and highly visible. Another is through such devices as campaign newsletters.

But "how do you maintain the intensity?" is one of the questions being asked most frequently in this long campaign. It is directed not at the voters at large, who aren't likely to pay much attention this early, but at the campaign staffs and volunteers.

Not everyone agrees that it is essential to move this early. Glenn is waiting until April — early by 1980 standards but late for this campaign.

If an early bird wins the nomination this time, expect the 1988 campaign to begin as soon as that fact sinks in.

Perhaps what the presidential campaign process needs isn't new rules, but a candidate who jumps in at the last possible minute and then wins.

RALEIGH — Three members of the Pitt County Branch of the NAACP attended the annual leadership meeting and workshop of the North Carolina Conference of NAACP Branches Saturday.

Participating were D.D. Garrett, local branch president and chairperson of the committee on housing for the state branch; Mrs. Willie Mae Carney, vice president of the local branch and chairperson of the state political action committee; Donavan Phillips, chairperson of the local political action committee and chairperson of the Pitt County Black Assembly.

The theme of the meeting was "A Training Experience For NAACP Volunteers." Around 350 volunteers from across North Carolina attended.

The session was conducted by W.H. Penn Sr., director of branches and field services from the National NAACP office in New York.

The workshop consisted of meeting projections and internal affairs. Majority priorities were membership, economic development, the fair share program, voter education registration and get-out-the-vote techniques.

The Pitt County ABC Store on Arlington Boulevard, near the Greenville Boulevard intersection, has been converted to a self-service store.

ABC Board officials said the store began operating as a self-service facility the first of this month.

The store was converted to self-service — at a cost of between $15,000 and $16,000 — because of a number of requests, spokesmen said. Officials said the idea behind self-service ABC stores is to allow customers to browse and compare prices before buying.

The Arlington Boulevard facility is the second self-service store in Greenville. The ABC Store on Memorial Drive at West End Circle was converted to a self-service store two years ago.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain and showers Tuesday for much of the West. Rain is forecast for the middle Atlantic region and cold weather is expected for northern Plains to the Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Another coastal storm is headed toward North Carolina.

A storm centered in the northeast Gulf of Mexico early today was expected to move northeastward along the coast of the North Carolina and South Carolina later today and tonight.

Gale warnings and a coastal flood watch were in effect for the coast and sounds early today.

Rain is expected statewide tonight and may be heavy at times over the east. Rain will end from the south on Tuesday. Lows tonight will range from the mid 30s to the mid 40s. Highs on Tuesday will be mostly in the 50s except 40s in the mountains.

As the storm approaches, easterly winds should gradually increase along the coast — reaching gale force this afternoon.

Strong onshore winds associated with the approaching storm will pose the threat of beach erosion and coastal flooding especially at time of high tide this morning and again this evening.

The National Weather Service says coastal residents and other marine interests should keep in close touch with the latest conditions and monitor the progress of this storm.

Along with the threat to the coast, rains from the storm were spreading across the state today. The rains will gradually end from the south and west on Tuesday.

Clouds increased Sunday night and thickened over the state, especially over southeastern sections. Early morning temperatures were in the low 40s over the extreme east and in the 30s elsewhere.

Vanceboro Resident Followed Up On Rope-Jumping Proposal

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Many of us read the same "Reader's Digest" article Vanceboro resident Bob Wilson did in May 1974.

Written by free-lance health writer Curtis Mitchell, it touted jumping rope as "the perfect all-around exercise for people of all ages and physical conditions," a way of "improving balance, agility and coordination, and increasing endurance and energy."

Drug Test Said Incorrectly Used

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — People have been fired or jailed because officials have incorrectly used certain new tests designed to show if a person has smoked marijuana, a North Carolina toxicology expert says.

Dr. Arthur J. McBay, chief toxicologist at the North Carolina Medical Examiner's office said the test has resulted in faulty evidence that has affected civilians and people in the armed forces.

McBay, who is also professor of pharmacy and pathology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, cautioned against sole reliance on immunoassay tests for marijuana use in a letter published in the Feb. 18 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A former World War II Marine pilot and tobacco auctioneer, Wilson, 61, didn't just read it, buy himself some sash cord (size 9 or 10 was recommended in the article), try it a while, then drop it like most of us. He started then to jump every day and he's continued until now, adding new steps (he's mastered 200 different ones, he says) new rhythms, and ever-increasing skill and stamina.

Over the first few months he jumped back in 1974, he said, 30 pounds melted away, with no change in eating habits. His body became lean and hard and has stayed that way. Now, he said, jumping only five minutes a day is all that's needed to keep it that way.

He quotes a study made at Arizona State University in which 46 unfit students were put in a 30-minute daily jogging program and 46 in a 10-minute rope-jumping program. When tested, the groups were almost identically improved in cardiovascular efficiency, he says the study by Jack Baker reported in Reserach Quarterly some years ago.

Wilson was as inept as anyone, he said, when he started, but he loved rope jumping from the start and he soon had his wife, Gloria, and his daughter, Lex, jumping, too. Both have continued. Lex, now 26 and living in New Jersey, jumps five minutes each morning — in her kitchen in the winter, on her patio in the summer — to keep a size 6 figure.

Over the years Wilson said he has developed many new steps and new rhythms. He also has developed what he calls a "Champy's Exercise Gyms" course that will be franchised. He grins when he says Vanceboro will always be the world headquarters.

He also has developed a special "jump board" which he recommends as the ideal surface on which to jump. These he markets, along with other athletic supplies through a company he calls General Health and Training Institute.

Wilson has been promoting his 12-week, twice-a-week, 45-minute session rope-jumping course in Greenville for the past several weeks. Information about the program may be obtained by telephoning 752-4163 in Greenville or 244-0306, Vanceboro.

'Dangerous Storm' Bearing Down On California After Heavy Rains

By The Associated Press

A dangerous storm compared to the worst of the winter today bore down on California where weekend downpours and gale-force winds flooded neighborhoods, sent mudslides down hillsides and knocked out the power to thousands.

At least three people were killed and at least six narrowly escaped drowning Sunday as up to 5 inches of rain fell in Southern California. The roofs of at least three commercial buildings collapsed, at least two houses slid down hillsides in the San Francisco Bay area, and 40,000 homes lost electricity for a time.

A pilot was killed in a crash during a rainstorm in Florida. A storm in the northeast Gulf of Mexico which crippled an oil rig and forced the evacuation of 30 workers off the Louisiana coast on Sunday, pushed eastward today. Coastal flood warnings were posted from near New Orleans to Apalachicola, Fla., and over most of the southern Atlantic Coast. Gale warnings were posted from Cape Canaveral, Fla., to Cape Hatteras, N.C.

The National Weather Service, predicting the new storm would hit the California coast with 50-mph winds churning 25 to 30-foot waves today, said, "This major storm system should not be underestimated. Conditions along the coastline today will be as bad as any experienced so far this winter."

And more big blows were on their way, according to forecaster John Plankington. "There are more storms behind this one," he said. "A week's worth."

About the storm in the Southeast, Nolan Duke of the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City said, "We've had a jet stream pattern from the southern tip of Texas to the southern tip of Florida. This sets up a pattern of Gulf Coast storms. The energy is there."

Since Sunday, 5 inches of rain had fallen at Mount Wilson, Calif., east of Los Angeles, with nearly 3 inches measured at San Bernardino, Calif. In Miami Beach, Fla., 3½ inches had fallen and 2.33 inches was recorded at Mobile, Ala., making it that city's wettest February on record.

The rain in Northern California was expected to turn to heavy snow in the Sierra Nevada, where 15 feet of snow was already on the ground at Norden, Calif., near Lake Tahoe, as compared with only 5 feet at this time last year.

The pilot of a twin-engine cargo plane died when his craft crashed near Brooksville, Fla., 35 miles northeast of Tampa, authorities said.

"Weather conditions made it necessary (for him) to operate on instruments" as opposed to visual sightings Sunday, said Ira Furman of the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington.

In the wind-whipped Gulf of Mexico, workers aboard a floating oil rig that foundered in high seas managed to stabilize it late Sunday, but the craft was left partially submerged.

The rig, about two-thirds the size of a football field, was being towed by four tugboats about 80 miles off the coast from Galveston, Texas, when it began taking on water in one of its pontoon compartments.

A crew of six men stayed aboard to try to steady the vessel, a Coast Guard spokesman said, but was evacuated when the platform lost its derrick and began slowly to sink.

Sheppard Memorial Library has a computer-assisted reference service. For information, call 752-4177.

"It looks like they had topped the sinking or flooding in the one compartment," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Michael Marks. "They could not raise it back up so they lowered the rest of the rig to level it out."

Heavy seas and gale-force winds of 50- to 60-knots nearly sank a tugboat about 130 miles off the Louisiana coast today when the boat began taking on water, but the seven-man crew later located the leak and stabilized the boat.

The storm, which dumped 2.6 inches of rain on Miami in a 12-hour period Sunday, forced postponement of the $225,000 Budweiser Grand Prix auto race, the final round of the $300,000 Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament, the finals of the Gold Coast cup tennis match in Delray Beach, Fla., and other sporting events.

Tow trucks were busy rescuing stalled and abandoned cars along U.S. Highway 1 in Fort Lauderdale, police said, and stretches of Interstate 95 were reported under water in North Dade County.

In Hayward, Calif., two houses slid on their foundations in the rain-drenched San Francisco Bay Area. The houses were evacuated, and officials reported no injuries.

More than 13,000 Southern California Edison Co. customers in Compton lost power for about an hour and a half after lightning struck a transformer Sunday.

Travelers advisories were posted early today over the mountains of Southern California for locally heavy rain, gusty winds, local rock slides and stream flooding.

There was an 80 percent chance of rain in Los Angeles today, where Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip of England were to visit Rockwell International and the Los Angeles City Hall.

Deadlocked In Murder Trial

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mecklenburg Superior Court Judge Lacy Thornburg Saturday declared a mistrial after a jury reported it was "hopelessly deadlocked" in the murder trial of Ben Lester Quick.

Quick, 27, had been charged with the July 7, 1981, killing of Joyce Grant. Prosecutors tried to link Quick to a bank card used after the 36-year-old mother of three disappeared.

The jury deliberated 10 hours before reporting they were split 6-6 and could not reach a decision.

Governors Press For Better Management At Top

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Governors, agitated over the financial state of their states, were taking their case for better management at the top to President Reagan and Federal Reserve Board Chief Paul Volcker today.

State chief executives attending the annual winter conference of the National Governors' Association planned a breakfast meeting with Volcker and then were traveling to the White House for a private session with Reagan.

Certain to come up was the governors' effort to gain a voice in the overall design of the federal budget, including demands for less defense spending and more taxes if necessary to restrain booming deficits.

A resolution for the first time injecting governors into national budget decisions was approved by the executive committee Sunday with one dissenting vote, despite doubts expressed by all sides.

Some Republicans were concerned that the resolution might be seen as an attack on the president. But Democrats said it should be tougher. And some governors said they had no business dictating to Washington on such things as defense spending.

In the end, seven members of the executive committee voted for it with only Gov. Joseph E. Brennan, a Maine Democrat, dissenting. And even Brennan said he saw some merit in its assault on federal deficits.

The resolution, a blueprint for a national budget and national recovery, called for action to hold any deficit to 2 percent of the gross national product.

To achieve this, they would allow slight additional cuts in domestic programs cut over the past two years, and they would absorb one-fourth of the impact of inflation on their own federal grants.

But they would hold growth in defense spending to 4 to 6 percent over the next two years and 3 to 5 percent over the entire 1984-88 span. They also want some restraints on the so-called untouchable parts of the budget, including government funded pension programs.

The package goes before the full conference in the closing general business session on Tuesday, where it will require the vote of two-thirds of the governors present to carry.

Gov. Scott Matheson, a Utah Democrat and chairman of the association, predicted it would be approved, but only after some changes.

"We've got to fiddle enough with it to get some Democratic votes," Matheson said. "But I think we have a good chance of resolving it with the Democratic governors."

If Matheson's Democrats can be held in line, the measure would be assured of passage, since Democratic governors outnumber Republicans by 34 to 16 following last fall's election sweep.

But some of the most formidable supporters of the measure are Republicans who support President Reagan and who share his fear of rising deficits.

Although the Congressional Budget Office forecasts the deficit will rise to $267 billion by 1988, the White House wants it kept to $116.7 billion.

The governors' target is a $90 billion deficit by 1988.

"In my view this resolution is not an attack or a criticism of any particular administration, or any party, or any house or committee of Congress," said Republican Gov. James Thompson of Illinois.

"The difference between the president's budget proposal and this budget proposal is how you get to the bottom line," Thompson said.

Anthony S. Earl, the new Democratic governor of Wisconsin, said he couldn't support the resolution.

"We truly ought to go after the federal deficit," Earl said. "But to endorse policies which say the way for us to get well is to continue to cut social spending and to continue to increase defense spending at a level of 4 to 6 percent is not a very good prescription."

Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, a Democrat, wanted any recovery program endorsed by the governors to be based on "progressive principles to protect lower income Americans and eliminate, terminate, the process of loading budget cuts on those who can least afford to bear the burden."

Gov. Dick Riley of South Carolina, also a Democrat, wanted language saying any more taxes would "not unfairly burden middle and lower income Americans."

Republican Gov. Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania expressed misgivings about governors "without a defense department of our own and most of us lacking in any firsthand capability" meddling in national defense.

But Republican Gov. Robert Orr of Indiana said the resolution "ought to be supported in the belief that bipartisan action by the National Governors Association can indeed be of help in a very, very difficult period of time."

Ask Guidelines On Genetic Counseling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission says impending development of tests for the most common lethal genetic diseases has created an urgent need for national guidelines on ethics in genetic counseling.

The President's Commission on Medical Ethics said Sunday that plans for ethics involved in genetic screening tests and the use of their results are needed before new genetic tests and genetic counseling become widespread.

It said its basic conclusion after studying genetic testing and counseling was that they are valuable services when accompanied by sound legal and ethical guidelines.

Genetic testing involves checking blood and other body fluids, or using advanced instruments, to determine which persons are at risk of inherited diseases such as sickle cell anemia or Down's syndrome.

Genetic counseling is discussion of these results with people to help them understand and adjust to the information, and decide what they might do about it.

Guidelines such as the ones the commission suggests in its report would guard against potential abuses of genetic information, which might include violations of privacy or depriving individuals of facts they should have.

The commission recommended that state and federal governments, working with professional organizations, should establish rules or guidelines for genetic testing and counseling.

The commission said the issue could come to a head with cystic fibrosis, an inherited disease that attacks glands and the respiratory system. A screening test for the disease "is on the horizon," it said.

Cystic fibrosis is the most prevalent inherited lethal disorder in the United States, the commission noted. Among white people, one person in 20 carries the gene for cystic fibrosis and one in every 1,500-2,000 infants is born with the disease.

"If a test becomes available to identify these carriers, the demand for genetic screening and counseling could quickly become overwhelming," said the commission.

The following are further recommendations on genetic testing that the commission says should be considered in guidelines:

—To protect privacy, genetic information should not be given to unrelated third parties, such as insurers and employers, without explicit consent of the person tested.

—Confidentiality can be overridden and genetic information given to relatives only if those persons would suffer serious harm without the information and reasonable efforts to get permission for voluntary disclosure failed.

—Adoption laws should be changed to allow information about serious genetic risks to reach adoptees or their biological families while still maintaining confidentiality.

—Genetic information should be required of men donating sperm for artificial insemination, and this should be passed on to recipient women.

The congressionally established commission, which for three years has studied ethical aspects of biomedical research and medicine, is composed of lawyers, ethicists, medical professionals and laypersons. The panel, which ends its work next month, has completed reports on the definition of death, the rights of human research subjects, genetic engineering and other subjects.

Lenoir Girl Is Mauled By Pet Cougar Sunday

By JAMES GOGUEK
Associated Press Writer

A 9-year-old Lenoir girl was in serious but stable condition at a local hospital early today after being mauled by a pet cougar Sunday that had escaped from a neighbor's pen.

Karen Arney was admitted to Caldwell Memorial Hospital with deep head lacerations, a hospital spokesperson said. The girl's father, William Arney, said in a telephone interview that his daughter received about 100 stitches.

He said she was "coherent" after an hour of surgery.

Karen was playing in front of their house when his wife looked out the window and saw the girl being attacked, Arney said.

"She hollered at me and said 'Bill, there's a dog eating Karen,'" he said.

Arney said he and his wife ran to the front porch and the cat, which was the size of a large dog, turned on them.

"We ran out the door and I jumped off the porch and grabbed her (Karen) and got back in the door as quick as I could," he said. "I was so startled. I don't know what happened to the cat. I guess he got spooked and ran off."

Arney said he then drove his daughter to the hospital. He said the cat had "come out of the shrubbery" in front of his house when it attacked his daughter.

The cougar's owner, Silvio Martinant, lives near the Arney residence. Martinant could not be reached for comment, but Major Jim Higgins of the Lenoir Police Department confirmed that Martinant owned the cougar.

Higgins said Martinant has kept "several cougars penned on his property in the past." He said the cougar had been taken to Grandfather Mountain wildlife refuge after the attack.

Higgins said that no criminal charges are pending against Martinant. But he said that there will "probably be civil charges later on." He said he knew of no previous problems with Martinant's cougars.

"PERDUE TAKES A CHICKEN SERIOUSLY"

"As Controller of the Roanoke Electric Co-Op, I've invested a lot of our members' money over the years. And I've learned that when you make an investment of any kind, you should check it out. And believe me, I checked out Perdue very carefully before building my broiler house. I called banks and exchange clubs in both Maryland and North Carolina, toured Perdue's facilities, talked to growers...I thoroughly researched the company and every report that I got was very favorable.

Perdue understands the importance of keeping up with technology. I don't think they're the only ones who do, but they are certainly more progressive than most poultry companies. So when they suggest that we growers make an improvement, you can bet it's going to pay off for us. After all, any company that's been in the business for 62 years and has made a profit every year must know what they're doing.

Besides my position with the electric co-op and my Perdue house, I also grow corn, tobacco and peanuts. And the best crop I have is my Perdue chickens. For almost eight years I've enjoyed a good steady income from my broiler house. And with uncertainties in other commodities and row crop farming, I would recommend Perdue as a basic steady income for anybody who wants to remain in a rural area and remain in farming. I know I'll spend a pleasant retirement in the country, thanks to my Perdue chickens."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing—chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarkets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Call 1-800-682-8729 or send in the coupon below, and talk chicken with a Perdue representative.

into a game."

The opportunity came in the next-to-last game against Cloverleaf after Wooster had taken a comfortable lead.

"LaBant, get in there,"

Alberts said.

The play was set so LaBant would get an open shot, but it fizzled.

Cloverleaf Coach Rick Hewitt, however, knew why LaBant was in. With 10 seconds left, he ordered one of his players to foul LaBant.

As LaBant moved to the free-throw line, a teammate put an arm around him and whispered, "You've waited a long time for this."

"Yes," LaBant said.

"Fourteen years."

LaBant's first shot slammed against the backboard, but dropped into the basket.

"The second shot hit nothing but net," LaBant said.

"My wife later told me the fans were going crazy," Alberts said.

Plan Licensing Of Counselors

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The state Personnel and Guidance Association says establishing a state board to license counselors is their top goal this year. The group, which is holding its annual convention in Asheville, has lobbied for a bill in the General Assembly to create a state board of registered, practicing counselors. The board would make sure that counselors are properly trained. The association includes both school and mental health counselors.

Pressing Probe Massacre Tale

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer
BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe is under growing pressure to allow an independent investigation of claims that his troops have killed up to 3,000 civilians in the stronghold of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo.

Nkomo, who contends that the civilian death toll is mounting, says he has been placed under "virtual house arrest" at his bungalow in Matabeleland province.

Today, police agents arrived at the house to question relatives, friends and staff, Nkomo said. "I told them to get out and they left ... They just keep harassing."

Villagers fleeing the province, home of Zimbabwe's minority Ndebele tribe, have told of massacre, rape, looting and torture by the troops — most of them members of the dominant Shona tribe.

The government says the claims are vastly exaggerated, but church leaders, relief agencies and human rights groups are calling for an independent investigation of the situation.

The refugees say the atrocities were committed by North Korean-trained soldiers of the 5,000-strong Fifth Brigade — a force formed by Mugabe to combat rebels and guard against invasion from white-ruled South Africa.

Foreign reporters have quoted sources ranging from relief workers to civil servants as estimating the death toll as high as 3,000. Other sources say the figure is about 1,200.

But Information Director Justin Nyoka, who escorted journalists on a tour of the western province last week, told The Associated Press on Sunday:

"Everyone we spoke with said there was no conceivable way of arriving at even a figure of 100. These reports are based on the wildest of speculation and not an ounce of fact."

The government concedes some civilians have been slain in Matabeleland — by crossfire during clashes between security forces and the "dissidents" they are hunting.

It says the dissidents are supporters of Nkomo, the president of the Zimbabwe African Peoples Union, and that they deserted from the army after Nkomo was fired from the coalition government a year ago for allegedly plotting against Mugabe.

Nine days ago, police barred Nkomo, 65, from leaving the Matabeleland capital of Bulawayo for a World Peace Council conference in Czechoslovakia.

They seized his passport and said he was under investigation for sedition and for trying to smuggle currency out of the country. Nkomo said today he has been ordered to notify police if he intends to leave his bungalow.

"This is an impossible order," said Nkomo in a telephone interview. "I have told my lawyers to say I'll comply for any trips out of Bulawayo, but not just to leave my house."

Police officers would not comment on Nkomo's statement.

Mugabe and Nkomo commanded separate guerrilla armies in the war that led white-ruled Rhodesia to independence as black-governed Zimbabwe in 1980.

They have headed toward a confrontation since the 58-year-old prime minister fired Nkomo from the coalition government.

Nkomo denied he was plotting a coup and was never detained by police until he tried to leave the country Feb. 19.

However, more than 400 Nkomo supporters have been detained on charges of subversion and sabotage. His two guerrilla commanders from the seven-year independence war are on trial for treason.

The government said police stopped Nkomo from leaving Zimbabwe because evidence at the treason trial linked him to a coup plot.

Last Friday, Mugabe accused Nkomo of seeking help from South Africa to overthrow the government, and today the state-controlled Harare Herald newspaper said Nkomo's "political sun had set" because he sought South African aid.

"These sort of statements are part and parcel of old-fashioned cheap politics common in this part of the world," Nkomo said. "If a politician finds he is failing then he will often link his opponents to South Africa to discredit them."

Nkomo says the sedition charges are linked to his allegations that the Fifth Brigade has been on a rampage since it was deployed in Matabeleland a month ago.

Two weeks ago, Nkomo claimed the soldiers had killed at least 95 civilians, and now he says the figure "is much, much higher."

He wants a parliamentary inquiry into the alleged atrocities, but the government refuses, arguing that dissidents are to blame for the violence.

Refugees say otherwise. Anna, 5, says soldiers bayoneted her. She has a gaping wound in her back.

Dlodlo, 61, has two bullet wounds in his thigh but fears to enter a government hospital because "the soldiers might get me again."

Martha, a middle-aged woman, says she lost two sons when soldiers raided their village. She said a dozen young men, suspected of being dissidents, were dragged from their huts and shot.

At Least Three

Dead In Blaze

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — At least three people died in a "suspicious" blaze that lit up the sky with flames belching from every window, fire officials say.

Only charred walls of the five-story brick building were left standing Sunday following what Deputy Fire Chief Kenneth F. Galligan described as a roaring inferno, the worst fire in this southeast Massachusetts city in the past 10 years.

"There were lots of people hanging out of the windows and yelling for help. The whole building was lit up — there were flames seen in every window," said Kenneth Galligan, another deputy chief who said the blaze was of suspicious origin.

Vallentine's 40 Sends Lady Bucs To 79-75 Defeat

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Guard Kelly Vallentine poured in 40 points and George Washington took advantage of 21 East Carolina University turnovers en route to a 79-75 win Sunday in a women's college basketball game.

Vallentine nailed 17 of 32 field goals and six of eight free throws as George Washington ended ECU's three-game winning streak. The loss drops ECU to 13-12. George Washington ends the season at 9-16.

"It was a typical example of a lack of intensity throughout the whole game," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We didn't expect the challenge of being fired up. That's in it a nutshell."

"Vallentine's a good scorer, but not 40 points worth," Andruzzi added. "Our defense really hurt us and we didn't take as many shots offensively. We didn't shoot a bad percentage. But we had 21 turnovers. People didn't get the ball who needed it."

Vallentine scored 25 points in the first half as George Washington stretched a five-point lead midway through the half to 39-30 at intermission. The ECU women rallied to cut the lead to 43-41 with four minutes gone in the second half, and then tied the game at 45 on a bucket by Fran Hookes with 14:18 left.

But, Patty Kinghorn's jumper put George Washington back on top, 47-45, and the Lady Pirates never got closer as GW maintained a four-to-six-point lead during the remainder of the game.

"I'm really disappointed now because we really worked hard on that game. It's like we didn't want to win," Andruzzi said.

"We did come back in the second half," Andruzzi added, "but it seems like everyone was waiting for someone else to do it. We were tentative. We went shot-for-shot with them and you can't do that trying to come back. We had chances. We don't have depth to not play with intensity."

ECU was led by senior Mary Denker with 28 points and nine rebounds. Freshman Lisa Squirewell added eight rebounds and 12 points.

Sylvia Bragg, also a freshman, scored 15 points and had seven assists. Caren Truske added 10 points for ECU.

Joining Vallentine in double figures for George Washington were Kathy Marshall with 18 and Anne Feeney with 11.

ECU out rebounded George Washington 26-19 and hit 54.7% (29 of 53) from floor, compared to 50% (31 of 62) for George Washington.

The Lady Pirates return home Saturday night (7:30) for their season finale against UNC-Charlotte.

#1 UNLV Falls To West Va.

By The Associated Press
Before taking his Nevada-Las Vegas basketball team to Morgantown to play West Virginia, Jerry Tarkanian expressed serious concern about the Mountaineers' tough court.

His fears proved valid, but it wasn't only West Virginia's home-court advantage that was the undoing of the nation's top-ranked team Sunday — rather a sharpshooting guard named Greg Jones.

"I just took what the defense gave me," Jones said after scoring 32 points to lead the Mountaineers to an 87-78 victory over the Runnin' Rebels. "I thought it was a great team effort. The coach prepared us well."

West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett called his 6-foot-1 guard "the best in the country" and while Tarkanian did not wholly endorse that statement, he certainly was impressed.

"I didn't think he was that good of a shooter," said the UNLV coach. "Jones really shot well."

Jones made five three-point shots among his field goals, as the Mountaineers, 19-6, won the game from the field, hitting an overall 53.6 per cent to Nevada-Las Vegas' 46.3.

"If we made some more free throws we could have been up 18 or 20 at halftime," Catlett said, pointing to a poor 59 per cent from the foul line.

The defeat was the second straight for the Runnin' Rebels, who were 24-0 before losing at Fullerton State last Thursday night. Part of their problem has been a rash of sickness that has hit Danny Tarkanian with bronchitis and John Copeland with the flu. On Sunday, the Rebels got another blow when Jeff Collins hit his head on the floor during the game and was believed to have suffered a concussion.

Nevada-Las Vegas' recent losses notwithstanding, West

Virginia, UNC Win To Remain Tied For First

By The Associated Press
Virginia and North Carolina recorded victories over Atlantic Coast Conference opponents Sunday to remain tied for the ACC lead going into the last week of regular season play.

The third-ranked Cavaliers took an 86-75 victory over North Carolina State, while the 11th-rated Tar Heels downed Clemson 93-80. The victories leave both teams at 10-2 with two conference battles remaining.

North Carolina has road games remaining at Georgia Tech and Duke while Virginia plays at Wake Forest and then hosts Maryland.

In Saturday's games, Maryland put in its bid for an NCAA post-season spot with an 83-75 victory over Wake Forest, whose own chances for post-season action are getting dimmer. Duke destroyed Georgia Tech 106-81 as Chip Engelland and Mark Alarie scored 21 points apiece.

N.C. State, Wake Forest and Maryland are tied for third at 7-5 coming down the home stretch with a probable NCAA tournament bid going to the third-place team. Georgia Tech is sixth at 4-9, followed by Duke at 3-9 and Clemson at 1-12.

Virginia's Rick Carlisle broke a four-game shooting slump to lead the Cavaliers in their victory. He scored 23 points on nine of 12 from the floor for his fourth 20-point game of the season.

He had scored only 25 points in his last four games, and was stuck in a 7-of-29 shooting slump going into Sunday's game.

"He hadn't been shooting the ball well," Cavaliers coach Terry Holland said. "It was only a matter of time before it started going in for him again."

Virginia's Ralph Sampson issued a warning after the game. "I don't think we've peaked," he said. "I think we're right at the time when we're going to peak and play well."

North Carolina's Jim Braddock said he wasn't sure he was ready to play his final game in Chapel Hill Sunday, but he erased any doubts right after the opening tip-off. He hit five of seven first-half field goal attempts, including four from three-point range. Braddock, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan each put in 21 points to lead the Tar Heel scoring.

Braddock, the only senior on the North Carolina squad, got a standing ovation before the game, and another when he left the lineup with 1:18 remaining. He said he wished he could have shared the ovations.

"I just wish James Worthy had been here," said Braddock of the professional rookie who would have been a Tar Heel senior. "I felt kind of funny out there by myself. Every year I've seen at least two guys on the court."

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell didn't say it aloud, but he made it obvious the he felt a victory was necessary to aid his team's case for NCAA consideration.

"I was nervous because I wanted this one bad," Driesell said. "It was a great win, a pressure game. I don't think many people expected us to win 18 games and I think our record speaks for itself."

Maryland, 18-7, built a 13-point lead in the first half but saw the Demon Deacons rally to cut the advantage to 42-36 at halftime. Wake Forest later went on a 20-5 binge and took a 62-59 lead.

The Terrapins rallied to tie the score at 73, and on Len Bias' two free throws, Maryland was in command with 4:26 left.

John Toms scored a career-high 31 points for Wake Forest, part of several positives that Coach Carl Tacy found in his second straight loss.

"I feel good about our periods of play," said Tacy, whose team is 17-8. "We've got to overcome some injuries and finish strong, but I really think we'll bounce back."

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said he could feel a victory coming on.

"In the locker room before the game, there was anticipation — the air of something good," Krzyzewski said. "We played well for the whole game. We were intense defensively and offensively."

Area District Tournaments Set

A Staff Report

District Tournament play will open on Monday on one front with two 3-A districts beginning play on Tuesday.

District 1-A play will also begin on Monday with the first of two possible playoff games.

The Big East Conference, a district unto itself, holds its championships starting Monday at four sites, with boys teams in action. However, number one Rocky Mount will play host to number eight Rose High School in an 7:30 p.m. game on Monday.

Other games, on Monday, will pit Northern Nash in a home game against Northeastern, while Fike travels to Hunt. The other game sends Kinston to Beddingfield.

Tuesday night, the girls take over, with Rose visiting Hunt. Other games have Rocky Mount entertaining Northern Nash; Fike hosting Northeastern; and Kinston at Beddingfield. (Note: the above playing times are tentative. Schools may play doubleheaders, where possible. Those games could either be played on Monday or Tuesday.)

The tourney then continues on Wednesday with the upper bracket winners playing at 7 (girls) and 9 (boys) at the site of the highest remaining boys' team. Play there continues on Thursday with the lower bracket games, and the finals will be Friday.

The tournament winners advance to the first round of the State Playoffs, facing the Cap-Eight runners up.

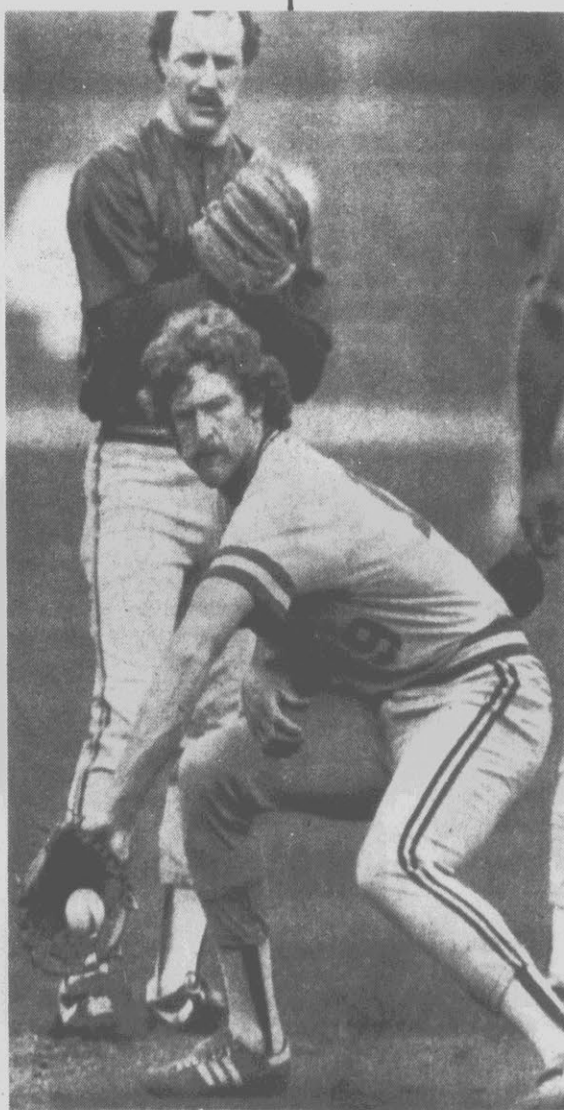

The 3-A District II tournaments gets underway at D.H. Conley on Tuesday.

The top four teams from the Eastern Carolina Conference meet the top four from the Coastal Conference.

In games Tuesday, action begins at 5:30 p.m. with Charles B. Aycock (ECC #1) meeting West Carteret (CC #4) in a girls' game. That will be followed at 7 p.m. by another girls' game, pitting North Lenoir (CC #1) against North Pitt (ECC #4). The evening ends at 8:30 p.m. with Farmville Central's boys (ECC #1) taking on North Lenoir (CC #4).

Wednesday at 5:30, SouthWest Edgecombe (ECC #2) faces Havelock (CC #3) in a girls' game. The 7 p.m. game sends West Carteret (CC #2) against SouthWest Edgecombe (ECC #3) while at 8:30 Conley (CC #1) meets Ayden-Grifton (ECC #4) at

ECU's Brooks In Nationals

FAIRFAX, Va. — East Carolina University's Christopher Brooks qualified for the nationals in the long jump and two other Pirates took home firsts at the Tri-Meet Track Meet here at George Mason this weekend.

Brooks leaped 25 feet, 3/4-inch was good enough for first and also to qualify him for the nationals.

Two other ECU runners also took firsts. Craig White won the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 7.36 and Ray Dickerson was first in the 800-meters with a time of 1:54.0.

Walter Southerland was second in the 55-meter hurdles (7.60) and in the long jump Chris McLawhorn was second with a leap of 24-7 1/2. The ECU mile relay team was also second with a time of 3:19.0.

In other ECU results:
55 meters — 3. Nathan McCorkle, 6.39; 5. Henry Williams, 6.41.

400 — 3. Ruben Pierce, 49.24; 4. Eddie Bradley, 49.5.

Long jump — 3. Donnell Sheppard, 23-3/4; 4. Clifton King, 22-10 1/2.

Triple jump — 3. Arthur Burkes, 47-9 1/2; 4. Clifton King, 46.7.

Allison Holds Off Earnhardt

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt, who finished three car lengths back of Bobby Allison in the Richmond 400 Grand National stock car race, says "I wish I'd had a couple more laps. I could have caught him."

But Allison, who picked up a $23,725 paycheck Sunday, disagreed.

"It would've taken about three more," Allison said with a smile. "I might've had just a little bit left."

At the end, it was a duel between the two, although third-place finisher Neil Bonnett also was in the final lap.

Allison, winning for the sixth time on the .542-mile Fairgrounds Raceway track, went ahead for good with 71 laps left and took a calculated risk with less than eight miles to go, making a pit stop of less than 10 seconds for gas and nothing else.

"Our car had been doing best (of the contenders) on used tires, so we knew we just needed a little gas," Allison said.

Allison had gained a lap's advantage when Earnhardt pitted for left-side tires 64 laps from the end and was able to hold him off after his short stop for gas.

Geoff Bodine salvaged fourth when Harry Gant ran out of gas and barely was able to limp across the finish line in fifth place. Both were a lap down.

There were five caution flags for 28 laps, but the last 305 were run under the green flag and Allison, who averaged 79.583 mph in his Chevrolet, figured that was an advantage for him.

"We knew how our car was performing, and early, everybody seemed to be slipping and sliding," he said. "At this track, you're better off if you can get through that early stuff. And we felt it was to our advantage the longer we ran under the green."

There were 14 lead changes among seven drivers, and 26

Work Pays Off For Stephenson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — While most of the other women golfers were fast asleep, Jan Stephenson says she was busy practicing her putting on her hotel room carpet.

And it paid off Sunday when Stephenson carded birdies on five of the last six holes to win the 54-hole, $150,000 Tucson Conquistadores LPGA Open by five strokes.

"The putter won it for me," she said. "I worked on my putting in my hotel room last night and this morning ... It's typical. If you have patience and confidence, things will work out."

The 31-year-old Stephenson, who entered the final round tied for the lead with Patty Sheehan, fired a 5-under-par 67 to finish with a 207 total en route to her 10th career victory on the Ladies Professional Golfers Association tour.

Amy Alcott finished second at 212 after a round of 69. Sheehan was third at 213 after ballooning to a 73 on the par-72, 6,248-yard Randolph North Golf Course.

Sheehan, who was tied with Stephenson at 140 after firing a 69 Saturday, suffered bogeys on the second, fifth and ninth holes

District Tourneys Set...

8:30. Both of the late games are boys' games.

First round play winds up on Thursday with two games, plus one semifinal game. At 5:30 p.m., Conley's girls (CC #2) face Southern Nash (ECC #3). That will be followed by North Pitt (ECC #2) against West Craven (CC #3) in a 7 p.m. boys' game.

The evening winds up with a girls' semifinal at 8:30 p.m.

The remainder of the semifinals will be played on Friday, girls at 5:30 and boys at 7 and 8:30 p.m.

The finals are scheduled for Tuesday, March 8 at 7 and 8:30 p.m.

Pairings for Ayden-Grifton and SouthWest Edgecombe in the boys' bracket are tentative and based on seedings going into the ECC tournament last week. A dispute arose as to which team should be seeded higher in the district and was unresolved on Saturday. A meeting was scheduled for today to unravel the dispute and set the final seedings.

Roanoke High School's boys and girls, champions of the Northeastern Conference, will be in action in the District I 3-A tournament at Ahoskie, which gets underway on Tuesday.

The top four teams from the Northeastern take on the top four from the Roanoke River league. Two games will be played nightly, with the girls at 6:30 p.m. and the boys at 8 p.m.

Tuesday's games send Warren County's girls (RR #1) against Edenon (NE #4) and North Edgecombe's boys (RR #1) against Tarboro (NE #4). On Wednesday, Roanoke's girls (NE #1) face Northampton West (RR #4) while the Roanoke boys (NE #1) take on Warren County (RR #4).

Thursday, Southeast Halifax' girls (RR #2) face Plymouth (NE #3) and the Northwest Halifax boys (RR #2) meet Bertie (NE #3). Friday winds up the first round with Tarboro's girls (NE #2) meeting Northampton East (RR #3) and the Plymouth boys (NE #2) facing Northampton West (RR #3).

Semifinal games will be played on Saturday and Monday, and the finals will be on Wednesday, March 9.

Winners in both the District I and II tournaments will advance to regionals Maarch 17-19 at Wilson Beddingfield.

The Distict I 1-A tournament will involve only four teams for each the boys and girls, all from the Tobacco Belt Conference.

However, depending on the results of the tournament finals: last night, one or two playoff games will be scheduled. Monday night, Creswell's boys travel to Belhaven for a preliminary game, regardless of how the tournament comes out.

If Mattamuskeet topped Chocowinity in the boys' tourney finals, then the winner of the Creswell-Belhaven game is the number three seed. The loser of that game then plays host to Chocowinity with the winner taking the fourth seed and the loser out. The playoff was brought about by the three tying for third place in the regular season standings.

Should Chocowinity have won the tourney finals, it would take the second seed, Aurora would then drop from second to third, and the Monday winner would be the fourth seed.

District play then begins on Thursday, with Chocowinity's girls facing Bear Grass at 7 p.m. Mattamuskeet's boys face the fourth seeded team in an 8:30 p.m. game.

Friday night, the other semifinal games send the Bath girls against Belhaven at 7 p.m., with the number two and three boys' seeds in the second game.

The finals will be played Tuesday, March 8, and all games in the actual district play will be at Bath High School.

The boys' and girls' winners advance to the regionals, March 17-19 at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson.

Virginia players still showed great respect for Tarkanian's team.

"They deserve to be No. 1," Jones said. "They have a great fastbreak and great power forwards. I guess we just played a better team ball today."

Another ranked team was upset Sunday when No. 17 Iowa was beaten 71-69 by Minnesota. In other action Sunday, No. 3 Virginia beat North Carolina State 86-75; No. 10 Kentucky beat No. 20 Tennessee 69-61 and No. 11

North Carolina outscored Clemson 93-80.

On Saturday, No. 2 Houston stopped Rice 86-52; Michigan State shocked No. 4 Indiana 62-54; No. 5 Louisville beat Western Kentucky 73-62; No. 6 Arkansas routed Texas Tech 77-63; No. 7 Villanova nipped No. 9 St. John's 71-70 in overtime; No. 8 UCLA defeated Southern Cal 71-64; Kentucky beat Georgia 81-72; No. 12 Wichita State whipped Illinois State 72-62; No. 14 Memphis State was upset by Florida State 74-72; No. 15 Ohio State clobbered Michigan 81-71; co-No.15 Missouri tripped Nebraska 54-51; No. 18 Georgetown beat Seton Hall 71-60 and No. 19 Boston College walloped Pitt 70-52.

Tommy Davis' three-point basket with five seconds left boosted Minnesota over Iowa.

Iowa Coach Lute Olson felt the game was decided on the boards: "When we give up 16 offensive rebounds, that's going to be a great deal of trouble." Still, Olson thought the Hawkeyes could have sent the game into overtime on the last-second inbounds pass from guard Bob Hansen to Greg Stokes.

"Stokes was wide open," Olson said. "If the pass is on the money, it's a slam."

Rick Carlisle scored 23 points and four other players hit double figures as Virginia whipped North Carolina State. "He hadn't been shooting the ball well," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said of Carlisle, a transfer from Maine who sat out last season. "It was only a matter of time before it started going in for him again. He's such a hard worker."

Kenny Walker scored 19 points as Kentucky beat Tennessee. With the victory, the Wildcats clinched at least a tie for their 34th Southeastern Conference championship.

"This is the best Kentucky team I've seen since I have been at UT," Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe said. "It has quality and also quantity."

DeVoe credited the Vols for a "great comeback" after falling behind by 10 points in the first half. In the late going, however, "we let the tempo of the game get away from us."

Jim Braddock, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan scored 21 points each as North Carolina beat Clemson. Perkins also collected 13 rebounds and helped thwart a Clemson comeback attempt in the second half.

In Saturday's action, Akeem Olajuwon scored 15 points and blocked five shots as Houston swamped Rice and extended its winning streak to 18 games, longest in the nation.

Sam Vincent scored 19 points to lead Michigan State's upset of Indiana, the second straight defeat for the Hoosiers. Lancaster Gordon's 14 points led Louisville over Western Kentucky. Alvin Robertson and Darrell Walker combined for 29 second-half points as Arkansas defeated Texas Tech.

John Pinone's jumper with one second left in overtime carried Villanova over St. John's. Kenny Fields scored 23 points as UCLA held off a late rally by Southern Cal. Charles Hurt scored 14 of his 15 points in the second half, sparking Kentucky's Saturday victory over Georgia.

Xavier McDaniel scored 17 points as Wichita State beat Illinois State to clinch the Missouri Valley Conference title.

For New Indoor Mile World Mark

Coghlan Breaks 3:50

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — After he crossed the finish line, Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan focused his eyes on the unofficial scoreboard clock high above his head. It told him what he already knew — that he had become the first runner to break the 3-minute, 50-second barrier in the indoor mile.

"When I looked up and saw 3:49 I knew I was going very, very, very fast," Coghlan said after he broke the world record Sunday with a 3:49.78 clocking in the U.S. Olympic Invitational track meet at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

Coghlan threw his arms in the air after erasing the world indoor best of 3:50.6 he had run at San Diego in 1981. Then, taking a victory lap on the track he helped design, he blew a kiss to the cheering crowd and jumped in the air, a leap for joy.

"What I accomplished today can't be taken away. I was the first to go below 3:50," he said. "It compares to Roger Bannister breaking the four-minute barrier (outdoors in 1954) and (John) Walker breaking 3:50 (also outdoors in 1975)." England's Sebastian Coe now holds the outdoor record of 3:47.33.

"I'm psyched," said the 30-year-old Coghlan, a former star at Villanova University. "I wanted to break the record and become the first to go under 3:50."

Coghlan said he began mapping his plan to break the record in his hotel room Sunday morning, writing down split times for each quarter mile.

"They were exactly the same as I wrote down," said Coghlan.

Coghlan needed someone to set a quick pace for his splits to be exact. That's where Ross Donoghue came in.

Donoghue, a one-time standout at St. John's University and Villanova, led the field through a fast-paced quarter-mile in the unofficial time of 56.6 seconds. Coghlan and American record holder Steve Smith were close behind.

It was the same order at the half-mile mark of the 10-laps-to-the-mile track, with the unofficial time of 1:55.7.

When Donoghue didn't continue at a swift pace, Coghlan moved in front for his race for the record.

"I thought taking the lead when I did was the factor that gave me the record," Coghlan said. "When I took the lead I had one purpose, one purpose only — to run below 3:50."

It was the crowning moment of an undefeated indoor season for Coghlan, who has won seven races after being sidelined all last year. He missed the entire 1982 indoor campaign because of a stress fracture of the shin and missed the outdoor season because of an Achilles' tendon injury.

Last year also was one of personal agony for Coghlan. Both his father and longtime coach in Ireland died.

"I drew inspiration from them," Coghlan said. "I did it for them. I forgot about all the pain."

Ray Flynn finished second in 3:51.20, making him the No. 2 indoor performer in the history of the mile.

Scott was third in 3:52.28, followed by Jose Abascal of Spain in 3:52.56, Jay Woods of Brigham Young University with a collegiate record of 3:54.40 and Todd Harbour in 3:56.48.

"The track was the fastest I've ever run on," said Flynn, who still holds the Irish national record of 3:49.77, set outdoors. "The bends are beautiful on that track."

Coghlan's ideas were used in designing the track. Sunday morning, while checking it, he noticed some boards were loose. They were tightened before the meet began.

"I have a little pride about that track," he said.

Coghlan's world mark overshadowed several outstanding performances, including Houston McTear's upset victory over Carl Lewis in the men's 55-meter dash, a meet-record 6.07 seconds. Lewis had been trying to capture his second sprint-long jump double in three days.

Lewis, second to McTear in 6.09, won the long jump at 27 feet, 8¾ inches.

McTear won the dash after two apparent false starts by Lewis, who protested to the referee after his second early start. Lewis' appeal was upheld on the grounds that the sounds from a camera caused his false start.

Diane Dixon, an 18-year-old Ohio State University freshman, broke the American record in the women's 400 meters with a 53.17 clocking. She had set the world indoor mark of 53.52 in the 440-yard race on Friday night.

Patty Plummer, a sophomore at Stanford University, broke the collegiate record in the women's 3,000 meters with a 8:53.54 finish.

Doug Padilla, unbeaten in eight races over a mile this year and the American indoor record holder at 5,000 meters, pulled an upset when he beat Alberto Salazar with a 13:26.65 clocking in the 5,000-meter run.

Indoor record holder Billy Olson captured the pole vault with a winning height of 18-6¾ and Greg Foster, the world's top-ranked high hurdler, remained undefeated this season, taking the 55-meter hurdles in a hand-timed 6.9 seconds.

Other men's winners included Tony Darden in the 400 in a meet record 47.29; Eugene Sanders in the 500 in 1:01.65; James Robinson in the 800 in 1:48.66; Mark Belger in the 1,000 in 2:21.08; Tyke Peacock in the high jump at 7-4½, and Tom Edwards in the 1,500-meter walk in 5:31.98. Ray Sharp finished first in the walk, but was disqualified for bending his knees.

Among the women, Chandra Cheeseborough upset Evelyn Ashford in the 55-meter dash in a meet-record 6.71; Stephanie Hightower took the 55-meter hurdles in a meet-record 7.47; Delisa Walton Floyd won the 800 in a meet-record 2:03.24; Darlene Beckford captured the 1,500 meters in 4:17.04, and Carol Lewis, Carl's sister, took the long jump at 21-0½.

Col. Potter Going Out On Top In Tonight's Final

FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Col. Sherman Potter, whose by-the-book rule over the 4077 Mobile Army Surgical Hospital contained an addendum full of good-sense exceptions, was going through a middle-age crisis.

He was worried that he had hobbled past the prime of his life, both as a man and a doctor. In surgery, one of his mistakes nearly killed a patient, who was saved only by the quick work of a younger doctor. Potter was contemplating early retirement.

"If I strike out, this could cost a kid his life," said Potter. "Joe DiMaggio went out with his batting average and head held high."

It turned out that Potter, played by Harry Morgan, was just having a bad day. Maybe he had mixed the green glop and the brown gunk in the mess tent.

So, like the rest of the troops at the 4077th, Potter gets to go out on top tonight, when the 3-year-long Korean War ends its 11-season run in the final episode of "M*A*S*H" on CBS.

It's rare when a program quits at an artistic and popular peak. "All in the Family" reruns are a nostalgic reminder of what "Archie Bunker's Place" once was. But today's "M*A*S*H," with its highly developed characters and scalpel's edge, remains as valued a treasure of wit and wisdom as it ever was.

The 2½-hour grand finale will cost advertisers an unprecedented $450,000 for a 30-second commercial, $50,000 more than the going rate for last month's Super Bowl.

"M*A*S*H" got more popular with age. This season's third-place ranking in the ratings is its best ever. And tonight's farewell performance could set TV history. The "Who Shot J.R.?" episode of "Dallas" attracted 53.3 percent of the nation's TV homes, and 76 percent of those watching at that hour.

But, in 11 years, nearly every viewer has been touched by "M*A*S*H," and that means tonight's episode could have broader appeal.

Alistair Cooke doesn't watch much commercial TV, but he's hooked on "M*A*S*H" reruns.

Henry Kissinger is a fan. "I'm relieved to learn peace is at hand," he wired when the show wrapped up shooting last month.

"M*A*S*H" cuts across all political and philosophical lines. Laughter has a way of doing that. "It's not anti-military," said Jamie Farr, who will join Morgan and Bill Christopher (Father Mulcahy) in "Aftermath," the CBS sequel next season. "It's anti-stupidity and anti-authority, particularly senseless authority."

Oh, what a lovely anti-war it's been. It's been the anti-war show to end all anti-war shows. What military comedy is possible now after the black humor of "M*A*S*H" exposed the lunacy of surgeons fighting to keep their sanity while struggling to save soldiers' lives. For what? So they could be blown apart again, of course.

The brilliant core of "M*A*S*H" is skillful, compassionate writing — the kind that mixes pathos and humor without forcing either. When Alan Alda (Hawkeye) listed his favorite episodes in TV Guide recently, he made a point to include an overlooked credit: the writer.

Some personal favorites here — episodes that gambled and stretched the sitcom's tired format:

— In "The Interview" (1976), shot in black-and-white documentary style, the cast explained their attitudes and rationales about the war to a visiting correspondent.

— In "Sometimes You Hear the Bullet" (1973), Hawkeye loses an old friend on the operating table, and death becomes a little less faceless and even harder to accept.

— In "Point of View" (1978), life in the 4077 was seen entirely from the perspective of a soldier who was wounded in the throat.

Thad Mumford, a longtime writer-producer on the show, said his "M*A*S*H" time capsule would include a "typewriter key to symbolize the dedication that's put into the scripts."

Last week's episode did involve a time capsule, and one memento placed in it was Radar O'Reilly's Teddy Bear "for all the soldiers who came over here as boys and went home as men," said Hawkeye. Likewise, television grew up with "M*A*S*H." In reruns for years to come, the 251 episodes of "M*A*S*H" will be prods and reminders of TV at its B-E-S-T.

English Prof Says Puns Kept The 4077 Rolling

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — "M*A*S*H," the long-running Korean War chronicle that airs its 251st and final episode tonight, had all the ingredients of a successful TV show: jokes, war, doctors, sex — and oh, yes, astetism. Great astetism.

An English professor at Clemson University says astetism, a classical literary term that means a deliberate or accidental misunderstanding of words, is what kept the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital rolling for 11 years.

"They frequently use straight puns, substituting one word for another. But 'M*A*S*H's' real trademark is a specialty called astetism," says Corinne Sawyer, who has been a "M*A*S*H" scholar for three years and a fan since the first show in 1972.

For example, Col. Flagg, a slightly cracked military intelligence officer, says "I'm off." Col. Sherman Potter, the 4077th's commanding officer, replies, "I couldn't have said it better myself."

Or Hawkeye Pierce, a surgeon, seeing a frightened young soldier crouched in a corner with a kitten, asks, "What's his name?" Father Mulcahy answers, "Fluffy."

Then there's the type of pun where the speaker establishes and then abruptly changes the meaning of the word halfway through a sentence. Writers of "M*A*S*H" have used hundreds, such as Hawkeye's musing, "I loved a girl from San Francisco once. No, twice."

"That's Shakespeare's kind of humor," Ms. Sawyer says. "Being a poet, he loved to twist the meaning of words with layers of meaning. 'M*A*S*H' is one of the wittiest word-play vehicles of our time."

Ms. Sawyer has studied the show and keeps transcripts of each episode. Every joke is categorized and every character has a biography written on a three-by-five index card.

Ms. Sawyer says her research offers clues about why the critically acclaimed program has won viewers' hearts.

"M*A*S*H" is probably television's finest half-hour, a legitimate masterpiece, she says. And if Shakespeare were alive today, he'd probably write for "M*A*S*H," not Broadway, she says.

"Shakespeare and the writers of 'M*A*S*H' are remarkably alike in their blending of humor and tragedy, and their type of humor," Ms. Sawyer says.

"Even the creative output is remarkably similar," Sawyer says. "Added up, Shakespeare's 37 plays would run 94.5 hours on the stage." When "M*A*S*H" broadcasts its final new episode, discounting time for credits and commercials, there will be 94.9 hours of dramatic programming.

In the long run, Ms. Sawyer hopes her research will help scholars understand why a 30-minute television comedy had so much impact on a generation of Americans.

Ms. Sawyer says "M*A*S*H" may have been more about the Vietnam War than the Korean War, which would explain why its irreverent treatment of the war, but not the people who get caught up in it, kept people glued to the tube.

The show's appeal to viewers means an immense appeal to advertisers, the trade press reports, especially for tonight's special — and final — 2½ hour episode.

Jerome H. Dominus, vice president-sales at CBS-TV, follows network tradition in refusing to divulge the advertisers or the cost of advertising for the special broadcast.

But ad industry observers say the asking price for a half-minute of commercial time tonight is $450,000. That tops by $50,000 the previous 30-second high asked of advertisers by NBC for air time during the Super Bowl.

FEIGNING ILLNESS: I HAVE SPRING FEVER.

Today's Cryptquip clue: C equals U.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Little Flu But Other Ailments

By The Associated Press
Only one case of influenza has been reported in North Carolina this year, but state health officials say there have been enough other illnesses to keep residents coughing and feverish.

Exercising Is Routine

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark is weak but continues to make progress, one of his physicians says.

The 62-year-old retired dentist remained in fair condition today in his private room at the University of Utah Medical Center. It was his 89th day on the permanent plastic heart.

Spokeswoman Pam Fogle said Dr. Lyle Joyce "told me he (Clark) is still weak, but he is making modest progress every day."

Joyce and Dr. William DeVries, the surgeon who implanted the mechanical heart in the landmark operation Dec. 2, helped Clark walk a short distance to a reclining chair Sunday, Ms. Fogle said.

Clark also used a hand grip and pedaled an exercise cycle to help him regain his strength.

"He's just having what's becoming a routine day for him," Ms. Fogle said.

He also took a shower with the assistance of nurses and his wife, Una Loy.

Clark, who has suffered for years from emphysema, still uses a respirator occasionally.

"Dr. Joyce said he is on the respirator intermittently, so much that he needs it but just to give him a rest in the evening, so that he won't become tired the following day," Ms. Fogle said. "It gives him the opportunity to rest."

Clark was returned to a private room Thursday after spending the nine previous days in the intensive care unit because of persistent lung and kidney problems.

nesses to keep residents coughing and feverish.

"There's a lot of other crud going around that doesn't sound too much like influenza," said Dr. J. Newton MacCormack, director of the North Carolina Division of Health Service's communicable disease branch.

Children in Greensboro are coming down with a low-grade fever, cough and runny nose, and a mild respiratory syndrome has increased public school absenteeism, he said.

"Down in Kinston there is a mild rash illness," MacCormack said. "It lasts for a day or two, with low-grade or no fever."

"We've seen quite a big increase in the emergency room in the number of flu-like illnesses, viruses and non-specific colds," said Dr. Esperanza M. Ordonez, an emergency room physician at Wake Medical Center.

"There are two types of syndromes going around," she said. "Some patients are complaining of a sore throat, aching all over and a possible fever. Other patients are complaining of nausea, vomiting and diarrhea."

MacCormack said true flu, bringing aches, fever and

Scholarships Available

The North Carolina program of scholarships for children of certain veterans saw nearly 500 awards made last year, and it is estimated that 1,600 young people are currently enrolled each year at 117 institutions in North Carolina.

Scholarships may be used at state-owned institutions of higher education, community colleges and technical institutes, or at privately-owned non-profit colleges and universities.

Scholarships, with one exception, provide free tuition, certain fees, and a room and board allowance in state-owned institutions and $1,2100 per academic year in private institutions. The one exception being that awards under the 100% service-connected disability provision provide only free tuition and certain fees in state-owned institutions and $444 per academic year in private institutions. All awards are four academic years in duration.

Interested persons may obtain more detailed information from N.C. Veterans Service Officer Walter Tucker, or Oscar Moore, at 232 Greenville Blvd., Phone 756-4617.

Applications should be made between September 1 and May 1 of senior year in high school.

They All Were

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Both Chancellor Helmut Kohl and his election challenger Hans-Jochen Vogel belonged to the Hitler Youth, their parties acknowledge.

"Everyone had to be," said Walter von Tiesenhausen, a spokesman for the ruling Christian Democrats who face a challenge from Vogel in the March 6 elections.

The Social Democrats in a statement released Sunday, acknowledged Vogel had been a member of the Hitler Youth in 1941 and 1942 "as were all those of the same age."

Delay Removal Shuttle Engine

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA technicians got an unexpected day off so they would be "fresh and alert" when they start removing a defective engine from the delay-plagued space shuttle Challenger, a space agency spokesman says.

NASA officials gave technicians Sunday off, pushing back the removal of a second defective engine from the spacecraft.

"They (technicians) have been working very hard for quite awhile in finding the engine problem and to ensure that they're fresh and alert we thought they should have some rest," said Hugh Harris, a Kennedy Space Center spokesman.

"We should have it off and in the Vehicle Assembly Building sometime after noon (Monday)," Harris said.

The latest problem is a leak in a cracked hydrogen line leading to a component called an augmented spark igniter. The igniter triggers the burning of oxygen and hydrogen propellants during launch.

With one engine already off the three-engine shuttle, the newest problem could mean a launch postponement beyond March 20, a date already two months behind schedule.

But the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it could not immediately determine how long the Challenger might be grounded.

"We really don't know what effect it'll have on the launch date," Harris said late Sunday. "That's because we haven't decided what procedure we'll use to fix the cracked tube."

The discovery of the leak Friday came three weeks after Challenger's No. 1 engine was removed because of a hairline crack that permitted gaseous hydrogen to escape into the tail-section engine compartment.

That difficulty was compounded by a faulty replacement engine. Another leak was discovered in its heat exchanger before the engine could be mounted on the spacecraft.

Engineers are still waiting for another engine as a replacement for the No. 1 engine, and it is expected to arrive at Kennedy Space Center by Tuesday.

A Royal Visit
Perhaps because Americans do not have a royal family, we always seem to welcome visits from foreign monarchs. This week, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain is scheduled to pay her first visit to California at the invitation of President Reagan. Her Majesty is part of an ancient and expensive tradition. As the symbol of the nation, the Queen has no voice in government. Even so, her annual allowance is $5,843,145, and another $1,000,000 or so goes for the personal expenses of the family—all tax free. Some Britons wonder whether their nation can afford this luxury. But the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana showed that the world can still be moved by royal pageantry.

DO YOU KNOW — Whom did Queen Elizabeth II succeed as monarch of Britain?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Michelangelo painted the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK873 ♠AJ96 ♠A8 ♠72
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You are in slam territory, but it won't help you to ask for aces. If partner has no ace, you can still be laydown for slam, but you don't know whether to bid it or not. The solution is to make a cue-bid of five diamonds. That will make it clear to partner that he needs first- or second-round control in clubs to move beyond five hearts.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ65 ♠AQ963 ♠5 ♠Q2
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You might rebid your hearts in the hope that partner has three-card support, but that is unlikely in the light of partner's bidding. He has shown a good, long club suit and a sub-minimum two-over-one response. Still, we feel your hand rates one move toward game because of your queen of clubs, and the bid we like is four clubs.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ5 ♠K7 ♠AK106 ♠A98
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—It might seem that the value bid is a jump to four spades, but that does not take into account that aces and kings are undervalued in the point count and that you have a hand rich in controls. You should encourage partner to look for slam, and the way to do so is with a jump shift. We suggest three clubs. If given the opportunity, you should jump to four spades at your next turn to show your excellent trumps.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ854 ♠K5 ♠AQ9652
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You have given partner a complete picture of your hand, and he has chosen to simply settle for game. Your void in partner's suit can hardly be called an asset, so there is no reason why you should bid on. Pass.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

Shocked By Collapse Of Tenn. Bank

By The Associated Press
Banking officials in North Carolina say they do not believe state banks could collapse the way United American Bank of Knoxville, Tenn., did earlier this month.

"Our banks, particularly the large ones, are very diversified," said James S. Currie, state banking commissioner. "They all are not of equal quality, but they are all solvent."

Currie noted that because of the economy, banks nationwide are carrying more bad loans on their books.

"All over the nation, it's my understanding that the number of non-income producing loans has increased and the charge-off of loans has increased," said Currie.

Banks classify loans as non-income producing when they expect to be repaid all or most of the principal but not the interest on the loan. Bad loans are charged off—written off as a loss on the bank's books and tax filings—when the banks don't expect to be repaid principal or interest.

Currie said state banking regulations would not allow him to reveal the number or amount of problem loans his examiners have discovered at state banks.

The Northwestern Bank, fourth-largest bank in the state, weeded its loan portfolio last year and wrote off $13.3 million in bad loans—1.1 percent of its $1.2 billion portfolio, according to a spokesman.

North Carolina National Bank, largest bank in the Southeast with a loan portfolio of $5.8 billion at the end of 1982, wrote off 0.56 percent of its loans last year, up from 0.4 percent in 1981.

Branch Banking & Trust Co. of Wilson, the state's sixth largest bank, wrote off 0.35 percent of its $860 million loan portfolio last year.

Banking experts said that bad loans themselves are a part of the business and are not the only cause of bank failures.

"In Tennessee, it wasn't bad loans that caused the bank to fail, it was bad management," said Robert A. Eisenbeis, professor of banking at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "Those loans were bad when they were made."

Regulators have said a majority of the bad loans discovered at United American bank were added to the bank's books in the last year of its existence and were classified as "doubtful" when the bank acquired them from other banks.

Bad loans are a fact of life for bankers and "most of the time, they just don't amount to much," Eisenbeis said.

"You have to strike the right posture between never taking any risks and taking excessive risks," Mitchell said.

Changing Lifestyle Said Affecting Food Industry

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department analyst says a basic shift in how Americans earn their living is having an effect on the nation's food industry.

Paul Prentice of the department's Economic Research Service said the shift is toward an economy based on service and high technology — away from the smoke stacks and factories which dominated an earlier America.

"Although this shift has been evolving for several years, the current recession has concentrated dramatically in those basic industries in relative decline, while largely sparing those with strong growth potential," he said.

"The shift implies that traditional blue-collar workers' lives and economic behavior likely will not return to normal as the economy recovers."

Prentice's report was included in the latest issue of Agricultural Outlook issued by the agency.

Jobs in manufacturing of durable goods — cars, refrigerators and other items that are expected to last for some time — peaked in the mid-1960s at about 19 percent of the total U.S. employment. By last year those jobs dropped to 13 percent of the total.

"As the economy emerges from the current recession, employment in durable manufacturing will grow more slowly than the rest of the economy," Prentice said. "As a result many unemployed workers in steel, automobile and related industries will not regain their previous jobs."

In contrast, service industries continued to grow despite the recession, now accounting for nearly 30 percent of total employment, compared to 20 percent in the mid-1960s.

Those industries, which include housing services, insurance, finance and medical services, are expected to continue growing faster than the general economy during the 1980s, he said.

"Although food and beverage consumption has increased over time, it has grown more slowly than consumer incomes," Prentice said. "As a result, the share of disposable personal income spent on food has fallen from about 20 percent to about 16 percent in 1982."

"As the total economy expands, demand for agricultural products also grows, but it's driven mainly by population growth, rather than by income growth."

Prentice said that the shift toward a service-oriented economy also shows up in food consumption patterns.

For example, he said, the share of family budgets spent on food eaten in restaurants, fast-food places and other away-from-home sources rose from about 20 percent in 1960 to 26 percent in 1982.

"Again, the major growth in demand is for processing and marketing services performed on food, rather than for raw agricultural products," Prentice said. WASHINGTON (AP) — China says its 1982 grain production set a record at 344.3 million metric tons, up 6 percent from 1981.

The Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said China's record output came as a result of bumper yields which offset a 3 percent cut in crop acreage.

In Peking's tabulation, grain production includes wheat, rice, coarse grains such as corn, soybeans, tubers and pulses, the agency said.

Rice production, which comprises about 45 percent of China's total grain, was reported at a record 153 million metric tons, up almost 7 percent from 1981. The wheat harvest also was a record 63 million tons, up nearly 8 percent, and corn output rose 7 percent to a record 63.5 million tons.

Comparatively, U.S. total grain output last year — which includes only wheat, coarse grains and rice — was also a record of 337 million metric tons, according to USDA figures.

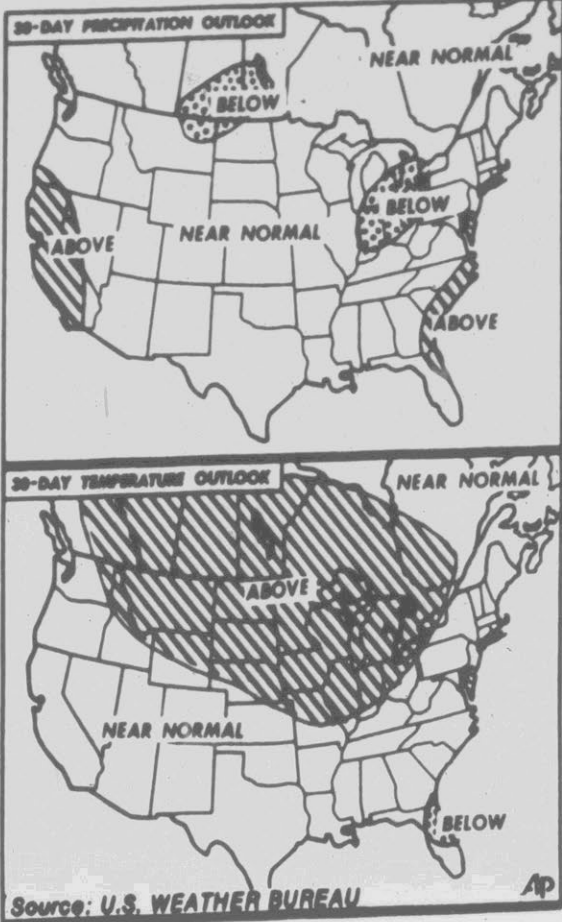

That would be less than China's grain output, but when soybeans are added the total 1982 U.S. production would be larger at about 400 million metric tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pound and is equal to 36.7

bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn, as examples.

U.S. corn production last year was 213.3 million tons, compared to China's 63.5 million, and U.S. wheat output was 76.4 million tons against China's 63 million.

But China's record 153 million tons of rice far outdistanced the U.S. harvest of about 7 million tons.

Farm Scene

Agricultural Extension Agent

Questions arise each spring concerning lawns and lawn care, especially as the weather begins to improve. As weather gets better increasing soil and air temperatures cause weeds to become more visible. The month of March is the worst month of the year as far as warm-season grasses are concerned.

During March the warm season grasses such as Bermudagrass, centipedegrass, St. Augustine and zoysia are still sleeping through their dormant period. Winter weeds, however, such as dandelion, chickweed, henbit, wild garlic (also known as wild onion) and annual lespedeza are reaching maturity and are in full clumpy glory.

The cool-season grasses, notably tall fescue (Kentucky 31), annual ryegrass and fine fescues are growing well during March and compete better against springtime weeds. However during the summer, the cool-season grasses will be overshadowed by summer annual weeds.

But for the time at hand, the weeds visible in the lawn now can be controlled with proper use of the proper herbicide or weed killer. There are no grassy weeds at present except for annual bluegrass or Poa Annua. Most of the weeds are broadleaved plants and can be controlled with one or more applications of a broadleaf killer. Many of the weeds can be controlled by using a "chickweed killer." Herbicides are sold under a variety of names and labels and they contain various amounts of one, two or three chemicals.

Some weeds can be controlled with one chemical but other weeds are immune and require another chemical. Still other weeds require a third chemical because the first two do not give effective results. An example of this situation is that dandelion and wild onion are easily controlled with 2,4-D. Chickweed is not affected by 2,4-D but will be killed by dicamba, another herbicide. Often the third herbicide, MCPP or mecoprop, is added to the 2,4-D and dicamba to give broad spectrum control.

It is very important for the herbicide user to realize two things about using 2,4-D and dicamba. Dicamba must not be applied over or near the rooting zone of trees or shrubs. The roots of these plants may take up the dicamba which will cause injury or death. The 2,4-D can be applied near the root zones of trees or shrubs but must not be sprayed onto the leaves.

In using any lawn weeds killer the user must be sure to read the label on the pesticide and know that the herbicide will or will not control the particular weed. It is equally important that the weed be properly identified before purchasing the chemical. If questions of weed identification or choice of herbicide come up, contact the local Agricultural Extension Office.

Teaching Survival Secret

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Former prisoner of war James Stockdale has a new mission — telling others how he survived 2,714 days in captivity during the Vietnam War.

Ten years after he and 115 other American POWs walked out of a Hanoi prison, the Navy's most decorated Vietnam veteran conducts a seminar twice weekly at Stanford University called "Combating Coercion and Manipulation."

It deals with "the power of the human spirit and the human mind under deprived and hazardous conditions," Stockdale, 59, says in this week's issue of People magazine.

Captured after his plane was shot down over North Vietnam, Stockdale tells students how he and other prisoners dealt with their captors. "You had to be able to say, 'No,'" he says. "You did not have to be nasty, but aloof and enigmatic."

21 For Each Child

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has completed buying hamburger for donation to school lunch programs this season — enough for about 21 quarter pounders per child, according to Agriculture Department figures.

Purchases by the department's Agricultural Marketing Service for the 1982-83 school year totaled 120.1 million pounds at a cost of $131.2 million — about $1.09 per pound.

About 23 million children participate in school lunch and other federally subsidized nutrition programs.

The purchases are made under a regular bid system in which supplier compete for the USDA business.
