One Dead, 12 Injured From Explosion

One person died and 12 were injured in a 5:45 a.m. explosion today that demolished 11 apartments in a three-story section of Village Green Apartments at 800 Heath St.

Fire-Rescue Department officials speculated that a propane gas leak in the laundry room on the first floor of the section caused the blast.

David Martin, 21, of Raleigh, an East Carolina University student, died when he was blown from his third floor apartment to the ground. Richard Seabolt, another ECU student from Durham, was critically injured when he, too, was blown from his third floor room to the ground.

William "Buzz" Chadwick, an ECU student from Charlotte who lived in a first-floor apartment, was trapped under the debris from the floors above until about 7:30 a.m. when he was freed.

Shaken but not visibly injured, Chadwick asked for a pair of pants before he was helped from a small void in the wreckage, and complained when workers began carrying him toward a waiting ambulance. "Let me walk," Chadwick said, and they did. He was released after being treated at the hospital's emergency room, then released.

Melody Tetterton, 21, an ECU senior from Plymouth, was asleep in her second-floor apartment when she was awakened by the blast. Lying in an ambulance, she said, "The ceiling fell in on me. I stayed in the same position," she said, because she couldn't move.

She was removed from her bed at near-ground level by rescue workers. She and her roommate, Anna Dell Watts of Sanford, were both treated in the emergency room and released.

Chris Jones, 21, of Louisburg, another ECU senior, said he was asleep on the couch in his apartment about 30 feet from the demolished section. He heard a "gigantic blast" and heard "glass shatter."

"I thought I was dreaming," Jones said, until he found "a big sheet of glass on my chest. I looked out and all I could see was insulation, wood and smoke in the air." Every door in his apartment was "blown right out ... the frames and all," Jones said. "People were screaming ... calling."

Rick Murray, a university senior from Middlesex, was asleep in his room farther from the blast. "It almost blew me out of bed. I sat up and screamed 'bomb'," he said.

He said "people on the third floor (who lived on the third floor of the demolished section) were standing where people on the first floor should be standing," he said.

Others admitted to the hospital for treatment and observation, officials said, included: Michael Strother, no home address given; Alan Wilkins and Gary Elliott, both of Durham; Scott Cumby of Burlington and Hank Redicker of Raleigh. All were listed in the ECU directory as students.

Those reported treated and released include: John Felton of Edenton, a former ECU football player and a student coach this past season; Cynthia Smith, no address available, and David Teeter of Charlotte.

According to the Pitt County Tax Supervisor's office, the building that was destroyed had a tax value of between $85,000 and $95,000, and was built in 1967.

At least five automobiles parked beside the demolished group of apartments were damaged, two of them extensively. Doors and windows in several other apartments in the 60-unit complex were also blown out by the blast, but apparently no injuries occurred to residents living in other sections of Village Green.

Jay Chenier and Albert Howard, who lived in the demolished building, were not hurt. Chenier, manager of the Burger King in Washington, said he heard a "big boom" and "the windows blew in. There was a big smell of gas immediately."

Village Green owners Reggie Fountain and Sam McConkey said the apartments were all-electric. The only gas, they said, was in the laundry room.

The washers and dryers in the laundry were owned by Solon, Fountain said. He also said the gas to the dryers was supplied by Blount Petroleum Co. of Greenville.

Windows in buildings as far away as Harris Super Market on East 10th Street were reported blown out by the blast.

Thought Tornado Had Struck

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Rick Murray and Stuart Sloan, whose top floor apartment is only a few yards from the demolished units of the Village Green Apartments, awoke today to find themselves covered with glass.

Sloan said they ran down the stairs and heard a girl screaming amid the debris. "Rick grabbed her and handed her to me and I carried her down the hill," Sloan related.

Sloan said, "Her apartment just collapsed around her." He said the girl, who he did not know, had a cut on her head. "She was kind of shaky."

Sloan said he and Murray helped rescue personnel in "getting some of the people out." An East Carolina University student from Jacksonville, Sloan said he has taken first aid courses at ECU and he grabbed some bandages as he ran out of his apartment.

Murray, noting that the explosion blew out all of the windows in his apartment as well as a sliding glass door, said the force of the blast "just about blew me out of bed."

Sloan, who said he thought a tornado had struck, noted that he had the sensation of actually being sprayed with glass before hearing and feeling the explosion.

Sloan said his roommate yelled at him to "get up, the place has blown up" just after the blast.

"I heard two or three people that we couldn't see calling for help," said Sloan. "That's what so bad, we couldn't see them." He said he and Murray helped moved some of the rubble "to survey and see if we could spot anyone."

Sloan said he was "pretty sure there were no children" living in the units that were affected.

The smell of gas was "stifling in some areas," Sloan said, but there was no sign of fire.

Mike Heywood, who teaches in Goldsboro, said he had awakened around 5:25 a.m. and got up to take a shower. "I had just stepped out of the shower around 20 till 6 when the thing blew up," he said he heard people screaming and added, "There is no way to describe it. I looked out and what used to be eight apartments was gone."

Heywood said he smelled gas when he first got up but since his apartment is located directly over the maintenance area he paid no attention to the odor. "I've smelled odors before from that area," he said, adding that he used to work with maintenance at Village Green during the summer. Heywood, who said he put his shorts on and ran out the apartment, said he tried to help but was told by rescuers to leave.

Stanley Corbitt, a resident of Colonial Heights across 10th Street, said he arrived at the site just before 6 a.m. and "helped move stuff to start off with." Corbitt said "there was a real strong gas smell. I couldn't believe it."

Heywood's roommate, who said he preferred not to give his name, said he had washed and dried clothes in the laundry area of the complex around 10 p.m. Monday. He said he noticed no gas smell in the area at that time.

Emergency Technicians Brought Skills To Scene

By JERRY RAYNOR

"I have never seen anything like this before first hand, a building reduced to rubble with people trapped in it," said Dr. Jack Allison, an early arrival on the Village Green Apartments blast scene.

Allison, chief of emergency medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital, is one of the first persons on the list of those to be called when a disaster situation occurs in Pitt County.

Allison, in a 10:30 a.m. press conference at the hospital, said there are no paramedics to call on in such situations, but that instead "we have ... emergency medical technicians who are qualified to do many life-saving things on the scene."

Actions such personnel can take, Allison pointed out, "include several life-support measures, such as administering IV's and providing anti-shock treatment."

The explosion at Village Green early this morning was declared a Level I condition in the Pitt County Disaster Plan by Fire Chief Jenness Allen. "That was a wise move on his part, because from the look of things there could have been a larger number of victims than what it turned out to be," Allison said.

Allison said Level I designation "is for a disaster situation where it is known or suspected that 25 persons or more are involved in some type of disaster."

"We immediately went into triage, which is a method of trying to determine at the scene how to sort out victims according to severity of injuries. Victims in Category I are those whose lives are endangered if they do not receive immediate medical attention within five minutes. Category II victims are those assessed to be critically in need of attention within a 30-minute period. Category III are victims who are slightly injured but are otherwise OK, and the final category, IV, includes those who are dead or can reasonably be considered beyond any medical help."

Allison said one of the things that most impressed him was the immediate help given by persons on the scene. "The police asked for volunteers to help remove rubble to search for victims, and they pitched in, worked (Please turn to Page 16)

Economic Indicators 'Jumped'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge took its biggest leap in nearly 33 years in January, the government said today, adding to recent evidence that the nation's recovery may be stronger than modest administration forecasts.

The 3.6 percent gain in the forward-pointing Index of Leading Economic Indicators — the fifth monthly increase in a row — was the biggest since the 4.1 percent of July 1950, the Commerce Department reported.

In addition, the accompanying Index of Coincident Indicators, designed to measure current conditions, rose 0.6 percent for the month, the second gain in three months and a new indication the recession has ended.

Most economists already assume an economic rebound has begun, and top Commerce officials said Tuesday the recovery almost surely will be stronger than the administration's forecast of a 3.1 percent overall business expansion from the fourth quarter of last year to the fourth quarter of 1983. Private analysts have been saying much the same thing.

Such a view was reinforced by Tuesday's government report that U.S. construction hit a record total in January, with increases in nearly every category of building.

As for the leading indicators, a single month's gain in itself is not considered significant. The index rose last February, for example, though the recession had nearly a year to run.

But a long string of increases — such as the present 10-month run, broken only by moderate declines last June and August — would seem to indicate a sustained upturn, based on past experience.

Scott To Head College System

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Robert W. Scott, the new president of North Carolina's Community College System, says he will use his political influence to advance education, not his political career.

Scott, unanimously chosen Tuesday by the State Board of Community Colleges, said he expected the post to be a full-time job.

"I assured them that I would not (run for office)," he said. "I had no intention of seeking public office myself. I would not, under any circumstances, use the position to back the candidacy of anyone else."

Scott was chosen over Dr. J.F. Hockaday, president of Central Carolina Technical College, about two hours after the board convened. But L.N. Kelso, chairman of the board's search committee, said most of the deliberations concerned the policy of the board rather than the qualifications of the applicants.

Scott will replace Larry Blake, who resigned Dec. 20 to become president of the Oregon Institute of Technology in Klamath Falls, Ore. Blake defeated Scott in the 1979 balloting for the presidency amidst allegations that Gov. Jim Hunt and his staff lobbied against Scott.

Scott and board members said the Hunt administration exerted no influence in this selection process.

"The atmosphere was different this time," Scott said prior to the announcement. "It was very fair, very objective."

"The governor and lieutenant governor (a member of the board) have not involved themselves," said Kelso.

Scott, of Haw River, runs a public relations and lobbying firm in Raleigh, but said he would turn control over to his partner to begin lobbying for community colleges full-time in the legislature.

"I do understand the legislative process," he said. "I know the members of the General Assembly of both political persuasions." He will receive about $60,000 a year — the same salary afforded Blake.

Scott said he planned to continue pushing technical and vocational courses in the community colleges.

Hockaday, a Johnston

County native, has been president of Central Carolina for 14 years. The former school-teacher and principal said he would support Scott during his presidency. "The board has certainly selected a very capable president," he said.

Dr. John Tart, president of Johnston Technical College and a member of the Board of Education, will serve as interim president for the 58-institution system for about a week as Scott familiarizes himself with the office.

Pitt School Bd. Votes Calendar For 1983-84

The Pitt County Board of Education approved a 1983-84 school calendar Tuesday that sends students back to school Aug. 29.

According to the calendar, teachers return to work Aug. 22. Holidays are scheduled for Sept. 5, Nov. 24-25, Dec. 20-Jan. 3 and April 23-27. Teacher workdays are scheduled for Aug. 22-28, Sept. 2 and 23, Oct. 14, Nov. 11, Dec. 2, Jan. 26-27, Feb. 17, March 9, April 20 and June 15-17.

The calendar sets June 12 as graduation day.

The six marking periods end Oct. 31, Dec. 1, Jan. 25, March 8, April 19 and June 12.

According to Assistant Superintendent John McKnight, chairman of the calendar committee, the calendar incorporates an entire week of spring holidays in April because "every year we have surveyed the staff we have heard this request (for a week off) and we felt it would be the best for making up possible snow days also."

In other business: •School Finance Officer Dan Thomas reported the schools received $17,679 in February — $1,846 above the average budgeted for the month — from fines and forfeitures.

•McKnight reported that Burroughs Wellcome Inc. has donated $8,000 of science-related films and video tapes to Pitt County schools.

Kids Get Preview Of Child Care

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Recent visitors to Deer Valley High School might have noticed coeds carefully carrying 5-pound sacks of flour — sacks adorned with bonnets, yarn hair and booties.

The bags, swaddled in bunting of every color, were part of a program that conveyed a subtle message: don't be in a hurry to have kids.

For the 94 sophomores, juniors, and seniors learning how to be parents in Belva Barrick's three child-development classes, these sacks became children.

The students learned what it was like not only to tote around an infant while lugging purses and books, but what it takes to care for someone else constantly.

"My hidden agenda is to tell them to wait to have kids," said Mrs. Barrick, chairwoman of the home-economics department. "I hope they get the message without me coming right out and telling them."

Apparently they did, because as the infant-care experiment drew to a close, the resounding cry, when asked what they learned, was "not to have kids right now."

Most students agreed it was a fun assignment and one that their friends enjoyed when asked to "baby-sit," but as Shannon Steivers said, "I learned that you definitely don't want to have a kid until you're good and ready and have the money for him."

"I only had the money for one little outfit," the senior said about her little "Jimbo."

Miss Steivers added that after being responsible for some of the baby-sitting, "It changed my boyfriend's mind really fast." The couple has contemplated a far-off marriage, with children.

While it was easy for her to get baby sitters and even a grandpa to bounce Jimbo on his knee, the constant care was more of a problem.

"I'd find that I'd subconsciously set him on the car and then say, 'Oh, he might roll off' and I'd have to put him inside," Miss Steivers said.

It (the child-care experiment) was a lot of fun. What better way to find out without going through the real thing?"

Mrs. Barrick said sacks of flour were used to simulate both babies' weight and the fragility of children.

"If you drop them they burst and they squish," she said.

The 72 hours started on a Monday when Mrs. Barrick informed her students of their new status as parents.

Participants were quick to "dress up" their baby sacks with arms, legs and facial expressions.

Then started the task of caring — constantly.

"I told them to treat the sacks as if they were real babies. You wouldn't stuff a baby in your locker," Mrs. Barrick said.

Previously, the home-economics teacher had called other teachers and asked them to report any cases of "child abuse."

She had five such reports but said the most were about other students abusing the "babies" and not those participating in the experiment.

"They took my baby and played football with it," one young mother complained about her fellow students.

Teachers, Mrs. Barrick said, were seen cuddling the pretend babies while students ran to the bathroom.

For the most part, students reported that their own parents were excited about the project and took to the role of grandparents.

One mother reportedly set her daughter's alarm at 2 a.m. and when it went off, her daughter saw a note taped to it — "Albert is hungry."

As part of the project, which also was carried out last year, students kept a diary of their experiences as parents.

As Richard Gilbert started his, "Today, I became the proud father of a 4-pound, 9-ounce baby. It's the most exciting day in my sophomore year."

PCAIW Has Anniversary

The annual Bosses Night was held Friday by the Pitt County Association of Insurance Women. The women celebrated their 10th anniversary and awards were presented.

Stuart Buchanan, of Buchanan Insurance Associates, Inc., was named boss of the year. He was honored for his support to the organization. Debbie Dennis was selected by the women as woman of the year for her contribution to and work in the association during the past year. She is employed by Hooker and Buchanan.

Buchanan and Ms. Dennis were presented engraved plaques. She also received an engraved silver bowl.

Don Langston was recognized for his contribution to the club over the past 10 years and was also given a plaque.

The welcome for the evening was extended by Audrey Stillwell, president of the insurance women. The response was made by Doug Hill.

The anniversary tribute to the bosses was held at the Ramada Inn and included a social hour, dinner and dancing. The theme for the evening was the Roaring Twenties. Head band favors were given to the women and the men received hats.

DEAR ABBY: Many letters in your column have touched me, but none moved me as much as the one from "Holding Out and Proud of It."

Hooray for her! And hooray for you for printing it. More people need to know that there are still some women around who don't jump into bed with every John, Mick and Murray. I know I have lost lots of guys because I wouldn't give in, but it was better to lose them than lose my self-respect.

I, too, saved myself for marriage, and so did my husband. We've been married for 10 years and neither one of us has ever regretted our lack of premarital experience. I'll admit we didn't know much, but we learned together, and our love grows stronger every year.

Tell "Holding Out" to stick to her principles. I hope her letter will prompt more young people to do the same.

HELD OUT AND GLAD I DID

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Holding Out" that she is not alone. I'm also holding out. It hasn't been easy for me because I'm a fairly nice-looking, normal, healthy guy who enjoys an active social life.

I'm into sports and run five miles a day, rain or shine. I regard my body as my "temple," and as such I have never defiled it with tobacco or drugs of any kind. I consider sex habit-forming and choose not to risk falling into that habit until I have found the person with whom I can establish an exclusive lifelong commitment.

Please don't think I'm an oddball. I'm not. I'm just saving myself for the person I marry. And in case you're wondering — I'm straight, and I'll be 38 my next birthday.

SAVING MYSELF IN SAN ANGELO, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 27-year-old, "Holding Out and Proud of It," could have been written by me 25 years ago. Not only was I a virgin, I married one. Never in all my years of marriage was I unfaithful, and I had my chances.

After 23 years of marriage, my husband decided he wanted "out," so he left two years ago. To this day my attitude about sex outside marriage hasn't changed — but my body has! Now, at age 48 I find that I am much more passionate than I was when I was a 23-year-old virgin. I was able to exercise control back then. (I didn't know what I was missing.)

As immature as this may sound, I'm not so sure that I will be able to exercise that control now, so I just refuse to date until my divorce is final and I can marry again.

I feel very corny writing this, but it's a real dilemma because I am a Christian, and the Scriptures are very clear concerning sex outside marriage. However, my sex drive is at odds with those Scriptures! I am not sure how I am going to whip this one. Help me.

HOPING THE DEVIL WON'T MAKE ME DO IT

DEAR HOPING: The devil won't make you do it, but the first man you find irresistible might. Pray for strength and avoid temptation.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Holding Out and Proud of It," I am only 12 but I have decided to save myself for the man I marry.

There are some my age that have already tried it and are sorry. Not me! Sign me ...

Homemaker's Haven BY EVELYN SPANGLER

The average expenditure per new car in 1981 was $8,710, up 15.8 percent from 1980 and nearly 2.5 times the 1970 expenditure of $3,542.

Wallpaper adds beauty to any home, but like other decorative treatments it needs occasional cleaning.

To remove dust accumulation, Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, extension home economics agent, Pitt County, suggests using either a vacuum cleaner attachment, a long-handled soft brush or a broom covered with a clean cloth. Additional cleaning methods should be determined by the type of wallpaper.

Wallpaper can be divided into three groups: water sensitive papers, water-resistant or vinyl-coated papers and vinyls.

Today, families often choose vinyl or vinyl-coated papers for easy care, adds Mrs. Spangler.

To clean these wallpapers, use a mild solution of detergent and water. A few precautions to remember when cleaning vinyl-coated papers include: use as little water as possible; scrub with as little pressure as possible, and work for the bottom of the wall to the top.

It's a good idea to test an out-of-the-way place to make certain the wallpaper is water-resistant, Mrs. Spangler points out.

There are fewer water sensitive papers on the market today, but they are still seen in many homes. Water sensitive papers are non-washable, but they can be cleaned with a dough-type cleaner which you can buy commercially.

Dough cleaners can be rolled in a large ball, then used much like an eraser. As it is rubbed over the surface, the dough picks up soil.

A clean, dry cloth dipped in dry borax may also be used for cleaning non-washable wallpaper.

Many flocked wallpapers are washable, but one should work gently to avoid rubbing off the flocking. Flocked wallpapers that are not washable can be cleaned with the dough cleaner or borax method.

For information on how to treat specific spots and stains on wallpaper, contact Mrs. Spangler at the County Extension Office at 1717 W. Fifth Street, Greenville, NC 27834 or telephone 752-2934, extension 365.

East And His 'Free' Mail

There's a familiar reaction of dismay over a publicized extravagance by members of Congress.

Take that story of the senators' free mailing privileges — Sen. John East, for example, who sent out around six million "newsletters" free of charge just before the November elections. It really wasn't "free", because somebody had to pay the estimated cost of $961,000.

(Election results suggest the mailings had little or no impact.)

The story came to light during a survey by the Senate Rules Committee which is considering changes in the franking rules members of that exclusive club are free to use or abuse any way they wish.

The real surprise came with identification of the senators who were the greatest users of the franking privilege. Sen. East was No. 7 in their ranks in 1982.

Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania (another Republican) was the franking champion that year, sending 15 million pieces of franked mail. He was followed by Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato (N.Y.), again, a Republican, with 14.4 million pieces. Sen. Charles Percy (R — Ill.) was No. 3 with 13.5 million. Sen. Lloyd Bensten (a Texas Democrat) with 11.8 million pieces followed; Sen. Daniel Moynihan (D-N.Y.) followed Bensten with 11.6 million; and Sen. Donald Riegle, a Michigan Democrat with 10.9 million ranked sixth; and he was followed by our own John East who had 8.5 million free mailings in 1982.

That makes four of the top seven users of franking privileges in the Senate belonging to the political party whose battle-cry has long been for economizing, belt-tightening and less spending. It suggests that battle cry was applicable to others, not to themselves or the Congress.

For what it's worth, Sen. Jesse Helms is a known critic of mass-mailing as a waste of tax dollars, and last year mailed only 33,977 pieces.

One would think frugality in government would be uppermost in the minds of all members of Congress during a year of hard times for millions of their constituents; but then, one is often wrong.

Compensation Is Proper

One of the black marks against American justice was the interning of 120,000 people of Japanese descent living in the United States at the beginning of World War II.

The crime of these people was nothing more than having the same ethnic background as the enemy which had attacked Pearl Harbor. Yet they they were removed from their homes, jobs and businesses and taken to detention camps for indeterminate periods. It was a treatment which was not extended to persons of German or Italian descent.

Forty years later the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians has found the action to be a "grave injustice" and placed some blame on President Franklin D. Roosevelt for ordering it.

The commission did not decide on compensation but certainly there should be some compensation for those who are still living and who suffered financial losses because of the disruption of their lives.

Assistance Proposed

RALEIGH — Two years ago, as Rep. Gus Ecomos prepared to close his Charlotte restaurant, he learned about armed robbery the way 4,700 North Carolinians learn about it every year. A gunman smashed him across the face with a shotgun and then held the shotgun to the back of his neck while an accomplice raided the cash register.

In addition to the money his business lost, Ecomos had to pay almost $500 for the medical bills arising from the injury he suffered.

Spurred on by his personal experience, Ecomos has filed a bill in the General Assembly this year which aims at helping the victims of armed robberies. He would expand the state's current Rape Victim Assistance Program to cover the medical expenses of people injured in armed robberies. Victims would be eligible for up to $500 in state-paid medical assistance if they reported the robbery to police within 72 hours.

Over the past several sessions, the assembly has taken several steps to help crime victims. Some paroles have been tied to a defendant's payment of restitution and victim restitution has been given a higher priority for money the state collects from guilty defendants. In 1981, the assembly OK'd the payment of up to $500 for the medical expenses of rape victims. In its 20 months of operation, 818 rape victims have been paid a total of $64,000.

But the Ecomos bill, no matter how well-intentioned, points out the difficulty the assembly faces in this area. When it came before the House Judiciary II Committee, it found no support and was soundly criticized. The committee has sent the bill to a subcommittee where its fate is uncertain.

First problem. How do you assure that this bruised person who is filing a claim with the state is really the victim of a robbery? Maybe he was robbed yesterday and walked into a door today, said Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, committee chairman. Medical tests can prove that there's been a rape and certain injuries can be reasonably assumed to have been the result of rape, Wright said. There is no such high degree of certainty with injuries growing out of a robbery.

Second problem. Rep. Ken Spaulding, D-Durham, sponsor of the rape bill two years ago, says the Ecomos bill would be widely abused for just the reasons Wright mentioned. And he's worried that the inevitable failure would harm the rape program.

Third problem. Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, asked why the state would cover armed robbery and not other crimes. The answer is simple. It would cost too much.

Fourth and probably the most central problem. "I'm not sure that that is a function of the government," Wright said, "to rush in (and pay medical expenses) for everyone fate makes the victim of armed robbery."

If the Ecomos bill ever gets out of the Judiciary Committee, it'll have to go to the Appropriations Committee for funding. Jim Scarcella, director of the state's victim assistance program, estimated that a $90,000 appropriation would be needed in the program's first year. He estimated that 261 claims would be filed with the state.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate may be headed for a season of filibusters, with one nominee and one natural gas bill already targeted for talk by liberal Democrats. There may be more, because nowadays, everybody gets into the act that used to be the primary weapon of Southern conservatives bent on blocking civil rights bills.

Everybody includes even some senators who say they dislike the tactic.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., is one of them, and he is threatening to organize a filibuster against Kenneth Adelman's nomination to be arms control director.

"I have never in my life filibustered," Tsongas said. "I have a disdain for the process. But I am not sure I have a choice."

Tsongas and other foes of the nomination say Adelman is not qualified for the top arms control job. President Reagan says he is, and promises a fight.

The nomination is due for Senate action beginning in mid-March. It may take a while.

The Foreign Relations Committee sent it to the floor for a vote with a formal recommendation that it be rejected. Supporters didn't have the votes to recommend approval, and opponents lacked the strength to keep the nomination on the committee shelf. So they compromised and agreed to send it to the full Senate.

Reagan probably can win approval there. Even opponents acknowledge that. "The president will probably get his nominee," said Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D. Pressler said he wouldn't vote to end a filibuster, but didn't know whether he would join one. He said that "depends on the creativity of the filibuster and how it's formed."

That is a novel guideline. Filibusters are not creative; they are the last Senate weapon available to a minority seeking to block action that otherwise seems assured. What they create is delay.

It takes 60 votes to stop one, whereas a majority of the senators on hand for a vote is enough to pass on legislation or nominations.

There also is a filibuster threat pending against Reagan's proposal to remove all price controls on natural gas by 1986, a step he said would assure abundant supplies at reasonable prices.

That issue has been around the filibuster track before. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said he'd take it there again. Metzenbaum said at least 10 and perhaps 20 colleagues would join him in trying to talk the gas decontrol proposal to death.

When President Carter proposed decontrol in 1977, Metzenbaum led a filibuster to block it. He said that one "will be like a Sunday school picnic" compared with the one he envisions against Reagan.

Metzenbaum does a lot of that. With adroit use of Senate rules and a determination to delay, he has mastered the lonely art of blocking — or stalling action on bills he considers to be special interest measures.

Near the end of the last session of Congress, he wound up on the other side of the filibuster tactic. He proposed an amendment to require that steel and cement used in federal highway projects be American-made. Sen. John Chaffee, R-R.I., called it a supreme irony, for he said the amendment was "the ultimate in special-interest legislation." He launched a filibuster, but it didn't last long. Before the day was out the amendment was rejected.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is another master of the rule book and hence the filibuster. He waged one against the administration's gasoline tax increase and tied up the Senate almost until Christmas.

Now he is hinting he might filibuster against the proposed Social Security financial overhaul that is supposed to keep the system solvent. He calls it a monstrosity, and says Social Security should gradually be replaced with individual pension accounts.

Helms said he did not have "a calculated desire" to filibuster against the Social Security plan. But he also said "I'm not adverse to a filibuster." It's unlikely that one would stand up for long, given the urgency of the Social Security situation. But the prospect of defeat is not always a deterrent.

Stalling doesn't always take the form of a standard filibuster. When the Senate dealt with the Panama Canal treaties, opponents delayed their approval by producing reams of amendments and forcing roll-call votes, about 80 of them.

The Senate has changed its rules repeatedly in order to cut down on filibustering. It takes the votes of 60 senators to order an end to debate, but it doesn't come immediately. After such a vote, every member is entitled to another hour on the floor, which adds up to 100 hours. The rule also limits amendments, to avoid end-run stalling through that device.

The rules make filibusters easier to stop than in the days of the civil rights bill battles, when it took two-thirds of the Senate to cut off the talk. But they're also easy to start.

Governors Plunge Into Budget Debate; Hunt, Too

AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The nation's governors, in a strong bipartisan showing, are plunging into the national budget debate with their demand for reductions in defense spending and increased taxes down the road to stem federal deficits.

The National Governors' Association voted 30-10 Tuesday to support a resolution that calls for holding deficits to 2 percent of the gross national product — or no more than $90 billion by 1988.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat, was one of the 10 state leaders voting against the resolution. Spokesman Brent Hackney said Hunt agreed the nation's deficit must be cut.

"But he thinks it's probably unreasonable for the governors to sit down and write the defense budget for the President," Hackney said. "They just don't have enough information to do that."

Hunt also showed opposition last week to a nuclear freeze resolution pending before the state Legislature.

In the past, the governors have debated budgets and lobbied in Washington, but only in areas of direct concern to their states. This year, the governors said the national economy is the No. 1 issue that affects their states.

The resolution, passed on the final day of the governors' mid-winter annual conference, was backed by top congressional Republicans, including Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

President Reagan opposed any scaling back of his Pentagon spending plan or changes in his tax program.

"I believe it was absolutely critical that we did what we did here today," said Republican Gov. James Thompson of Illinois, vice chairman of the association.

"Unless this nation's fiscal policy is brought under control and some sense of balance is maintained, we were truly headed not only for a short period of recovery from recession but the very real danger of almost permanent recession gripping this nation," he said.

And Democratic Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia said: "I think it is important that the nation's governors join the debate on national revenues and expenditures if we are to have an impact on those decisions so critical to our states, our localities and our citizens."

The governors' resolution wants increases in defense spending held to between 4 percent and 6 percent for the next two years and to 3 percent to 5 percent over 1984-1988. The Reagan administration wants an increase of 10 percent over the next two years.

The governors also endorsed the presidential commission's proposals for salvaging the Social Security system, which includes some delays in cost-of-living adjustments and taxing benefits of high income recipients.

The group also called for restraints in programs such as Medicare, disability and pension plans funded by the government, as well as another $2 billion in cuts for some programs for the needy, students, veterans and farmers.

But the governors said they cannot tolerate any more reductions in grants to state and local governments.

New taxes should be levied if needed to reach the 1988 deficit target, the governors said.

Some governors, particularly newly elected Democrats from states hard hit by the recession, fought the measure. They said it should be stronger, calling for elimination of the third installment of Reagan's supply-side tax cuts due for July 1. They also opposed further cuts in human needs programs.

"You can be bipartisan without being bland," said Anthony Earl, the new Democratic governor of Wisconsin, who led the attack.

Gov. Scott Matheson of Utah, the Democratic chairman of the group, said, "Whether it will have the impact on the hill in terms of addressing the budget we hope it will have is problematical to answer."

"But I'm convinced we've made a major step forward in grappling for the first time with the overall budget process."

Student Loses Suit Over Honor Society

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit filed by a Pewaukee High School student who claimed his constitutional rights were violated when officials did not select him for the National Honor Society.

Walter William Karnstein, 17, and his father, Walter Wolfgang Karnstein, contended that the youth's rights to due process were violated.

But U.S. District Judge Terence Evans ruled Tuesday that the actions of teachers and administrators on the school's National Honor Society selection committee did not violate his rights.

"What due process merely requires is fair treatment under the circumstances," Evans said. "Here, the procedures followed were, in my judgment, fair."

The Karnstein youth had a grade point average of about 3.6 on a scale of 4.0. He also played varsity football and intramural sports, was active in church and enjoyed various hobbies and other activities.

Wage Concessions For Steel

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Steelworkers acceptance of a wage-cut contract brings to an end a year of lagging union clout and austerity bargaining in industries hardest hit by the recession.

But some analysts say it likely will be a different story this year when newer, non-industrial unions go the bargaining table.

Large-scale wage concessions by two once-powerful unions, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the United Auto Workers, triggered contract "givebacks" in many allied industries in 1982.

Yet, when pacts for some 3 million workers covered by collective bargaining in 1982 were analyzed by the Labor Department, they showed average first-year wage hike of 3.8 percent — just a fraction of a percent below the 3.9 percent annual rate of inflation that year.

So private analysts cautioned against reading too much into the 41-month concessionary contract that leaders of the Steelworkers union gave to seven major companies on Tuesday.

That contract — highlighted by an immediate $1.25-an-hour pay cut for some 266,000 unionists — was the first of its kind in the 40-year history of the union.

Wayne Horvitz, a former director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, noted that the wage freezes and curbs on cost-of-living clauses accepted in early 1982 did not set a pattern for all bargaining.

"What you saw in autos and trucking were problems in specific industries," he said. "And you're seeing that in spades in steel."

John Zalusky, an AFL-CIO economist who specializes in collective bargaining, interpreted the settlement as "reflecting problems unique to steel. We don't see them (concession contracts) flowing over the whole economy."

Audrey Freeman, chief labor economist for the Conference Board, a private business research firm in New York, said the pay cut was inevitable.

"Steel management really didn't bargain realistically" in recent years, she said. "They gave away the store. They never paid any attention to the fact their costs of operation had exceeded that of their competitors around the world."

Last year, the UAW accepted new pacts with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., which forsook previously scheduled pay raises amounting to 3 percent in exchange for job security guarantees by the two top automakers.

The Teamsters union currently is resisting pressure by the unionized trucking industry to renege on a concession pact the two sides negotiated only a year ago.

The union has been unwilling so far to set aside a 33-cent-an-hour cost-of-living increase scheduled April 15.

And despite its concessions, the UAW is fighting to make sure its members' interests are protected in a venture in which General Motors and Toyota Motor Corp. will jointly build a new subcompact car at GM's Fremont, Calif., plant.

The union evidently has won no assurances that laid-off UAW members will get first crack at the jobs to open up at Fremont.

Horvitz said any general retreat by unions will result more from the declining rate of inflation than from concession bargaining.

"It's ridiculous to think" that the Steelworkers settlement set a pattern, he said.

Baby Contest Set By Jay-C-Ettes

The Greenville Jay-C-Ettes will sponsor a Beautiful Baby Contest March 25-26 at Carolina East Mall, with all proceeds benefitting the March of Dimes. The project will be co-chaired by Laura Jackson and Marilyn Danford.

Mrs. Jackson said that last year's contest had 59 entries and netted contributions of $1,517.56. The goal this year is 75 entries, she said.

Children from birth to 24 months of age may be registered. To register a child, one must submit a 5x7 or 8x10 photograph of a child with his or her name, birth date, sex, parents' names, telephone number and mailing address on the back. A $1 registration fee will be charged to cover cost of returning photographs.

Advance registration will be held at Carolina East Mall at the Community Booth March 23-24 from 7 to 9 p.m.; at the Greenville Pediatrics Services office, at the office of Dr. Edward Davis; at Dotty Lou's and Youth Togs shops; or by calling Laura Jackson, 756-9934, or Marilyn Danford, 758-9660 after 6 p.m.

The baby inspiring the collection of the most money votes will be the winner, receiving a trophy. First and second runners-up will be recognized. Voting will be held at Carolina East the afternoon of March 25 and until 6 p.m. March 26. Winners will be announced that evening.

Lowe's Reports Earnings Rise

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Lowe's Cos. Inc. of North Wilkesboro has announced an increase in earnings of 37 percent on a 16 percent sales increase during 1982, its first $1 billion year.

Lowe's said it earned $1.26 a share compared to 91 cents per share the previous year. The company said fourth-quarter earnings jumped by 72 percent, or 27 cents a share.

Alaskan Is Jailed In Slaying Of Six People

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer
GLENNALLEN, Alaska (AP) — A man charged in the handgun slayings of six people in a remote Alaskan mining town was jailed in Anchorage early today, as state troopers planned to return to the tiny town of McCarthy to retrieve the victims' bodies.

Two people were injured in the shootout Tuesday in the snowbound village in the Wrangell Mountains of eastern Alaska.

Alaska State Troopers said Louis D. Hastings, 39, was charged with six counts of first-degree murder in a late court hearing Tuesday after being driven to Anchorage from Glennallen, where he had been taken for treatment of stab wounds.

Hastings was captured without incident as he rode a snowmobile about 20 miles outside McCarthy, a community of 22 residents.

Hastings was being held in lieu of $300,000 bond. Assistant District Attorney Stephen Branchflower said Hastings may face more charges later.

Magistrate Sheldon Sprecker and troopers in Glennallen said they would fly to McCarthy today to bring the bodies out. An injured survivor, Christopher Richards, said a man came to his cabin for a cup of coffee Tuesday, then fired two shots "out of the blue."

He said the attacker told him after firing: "Look, you're already dead. If you'll just quit fighting, I'll make it easy for you."

Richards, a McCarthy resident, said he had invited Hastings into his cabin for a cup of coffee.

Richards said that as he reached for a cup, he felt something hit him near the right eye and realized he had been shot. He said he turned toward his attacker and was shot in the neck before slashing at his assailant with a knife, fleeing the cabin and slogging through snow in his stocking feet until he was picked up.

Richards said a neighbor driving a snowmobile carried him to a nearby airstrip, where he was flown to Glennallen for treatment.

No details were immediately available about the other shootings.

There is no telephone service to the isolated community, formerly a mining town of 1,000 people but now a virtual ghost town cut off from the rest of Alaska for most of the year.

"We don't have any communications out there at all," said Trooper Ken Lewis in Glennallen, about 100 miles northwest of McCarthy. He said some homes in the community had radio-telephones, but they could not be used by investigators because they are "part of the crime scene."

Lewis said Hastings was suffering from "several lacerations" which appeared to be knife wounds when he was picked up. He was treated at Faith Hospital in Glennallen, about 150 miles northeast of Anchorage.

Lewis would not say whether Hastings was armed when taken into custody.

The names of the six dead and one of the wounded were being withheld until relatives could be notified. Richards and a woman wounded in the arm were in stable condition at Faith Hospital in Glennallen.

All were shot with a small-caliber weapon, and the bodies of the dead were found in several locations, Lewis said.

Seven Alaska State Troopers flew to McCarthy after Richards was flown into Glennallen, Lewis said.

McCarthy is inaccessible by road during the winter months, but has two unlighted air strips.

The tiny town had been the home of a large copper mining operation of the Kennecott Copper Co., which built the town around the turn of the century to house miners. The mine closed in 1938.

Gold was discovered near

25 Killed By Insurgents

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas last week killed 25 Soviet soldiers and Afghan troops and civil servants in some of the heaviest recent fighting in the Afghan capital of Kabul, Western diplomatic sources said here.

Several dozen other people reportedly were wounded.

The insurgents launched several attacks on Afghan government and Soviet military posts and installations February 21-22, the sources reported Tuesday.

The action marked the third anniversary of the Soviet massacre of scores of schoolchildren who were protesting the 1979 Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Western military sources estimate there are 105,000 Soviet combat troops stationed in the rugged, landlocked nation to fight the widespread insurgency. As the insurgents hit regime military posts in and around Kabul, Afghans opposed to the Soviet intervention put up signs around the city that read: "Allah-o-Akbar (God is great)," sources reported.

Western diplomatic dispatches seen here said the rebels launched a major rocket attack on the twin military posts of Kote Sangi and Fazil Beg in Kabul on February 21, killing 12 government troops.

Rockets and machineguns were also used by the rebels during their attack on Darul Aman in the capital, a key defense station maintained by regime troops, it was reported. The rockets hit a military jeep, killing two Soviet and four Afghan soldiers, the reports said.

A land mine planted by the rebels the next day hit a Ministry of Mines bus near a Soviet-built housing district. Six passengers were killed instantly and another died later in a hospital. The sources said two of the victims were Soviet advisers.

After the explosion, 12 people were admitted to a nearby hospital.

Driver Injured In Train Mishap

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Lincoln woman was in critical condition Tuesday at Charlotte Memorial Hospital after the car she was driving was struck by a train.

Lincoln County authorities said Corine Heatner, 65, an employee of the Lincoln County Office on Aging, apparently saw the train coming in time to clear the tracks but panicked and failed to react.

Mary Rayfield Peeler, 68, of Lincolnton, a passenger in the car, was killed in the accident.

The wreck occurred about 11:35 a.m. Monday near Iron Station in Lincoln County.

John Paul II Seeking The Triumph Of Love

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer
LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Pope John Paul II, en route to a nine-day tour of Central America, said today the first papal mission ever to the strife-torn region would seek the "triumph of love, harmony and peace."

While his plane from Rome refueled at Lisbon's Portela Airport, the pope told thousands of well-wishers that a successful tour would mean "peace among spirits, peace among men and peace among peoples."

High Vatican officials say this journey is among the Polish-born pontiff's most politically sensitive of his 17 trips overseas.

During his 10-minute address, John Paul, the leader of the world's Roman Catholics, indirectly referred to the violence that has plagued parts of Central America in recent years.

"My heart suffers with all the hearts that are wounded by the evil of violence in any part of the world," he said.

Thus, the pope said he was making the trip to meet "my brothers in countries very beloved to my heart" and show that "love is stronger than sin and stronger than death."

It is with the greatest esteem that I reiterate to each son of this beloved nation and I ask them to cultivate their brotherly love and raise prayers together with the pope, especially during this pastoral journey for the triumph of love, harmony and peace; peace in our souls, peace among men and peace among peoples.

The pontiff thanked the people of Portugal for the warm welcome and called his visit last spring to the Portuguese shrine Our Lady of Fatima in this country "unforgettable."

During that trip, an estimated 1 million Portuguese attended an outdoor Mass he said in Lisbon and almost as many came to see the pontiff during the annual Fatima pilgrimage. That journey was marred when, from the throng, a Spanish renegade priest lunged at John Paul with a bayonet. The pontiff escaped injury.

The incident happened exactly a year after another unsuccessful assassination attempt was in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981 when a Turkish gunman shot and wounded him.

Among today's crowd was Portugal's President Antonio Ramalho Eanes and Prime Minister Francisco Pinto Balsemão.

The special Alitalia DC-10 carrying the pope and an entourage of Holy See officials, bodyguards and reporters left Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport at 8:22 a.m. (2:22 a.m. EST).

After the refueling stop, the plane lands next in San Jose, Costa Rica.

The 62-year-old pontiff will visit eight countries in nine days. All are overwhelmingly Roman Catholic. Four are experiencing severe internal strife and one — Guatemala — has reported anonymous death threats against the pope.

John Paul, wearing a white overcoat over his white vestments and a white skull cap, was seen off by top Vatican prelates including Cardinal Carlo Confalonieri, dean of the Sacred College of Cardinals, and Cardinal Paolo Bertoli, who will be in charge of the Vatican during the pope's absence.

Diplomats accredited to the Vatican and Italian Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni also bade farewell to the pope.

The pontiff was accompanied on the plane by Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, Deputy Secretary of State Spanish Archbishop Eduardo Martínez Somalo and other officials.

In addition to Costa Rica, the trip will take John Paul to Nicaragua, Panama, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Belize and Haiti in his 17th overseas journey as pope.

Holy See sources disclosed that in preparation for the pontiff's trip, top Vatican officials conferred earlier this week with a special U.S. envoy sent to brief them on U.S. policy in Central America and elsewhere.

U.S. Ambassador at large,

Vernon A. Walters, a former deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, met with high-level officials at the Vatican Monday, Vatican and U.S. sources said.

The meeting coincided with a controversy in Congress over President Reagan's policy on El Salvador and the administration's request for an additional $60 million in aid to the country.

Walters, 65, a former romance language interpreter for Presidents Harry S. Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Richard Nixon, is a devout Roman Catholic who has briefed the pontiff and his aides on U.S. policies several times previously.

On Monday, Reagan called congressional leaders to the White House to present his case for immediate aid to El Salvador. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the El Salvador government needs $60 million to buy military supplies "as a matter of survival" and has suggested that more U.S. military advisers may be necessary.

There are currently 55 U.S. advisers in the country in non-combat roles.

The U.S. Congress is increasingly restive about continuing economic and military aid for the government, which seems unable to defeat the rebels in the 40-month civil war.

Earlier this week, 14 senators and 82 representatives published an open letter asking Salvador President Alvaro Magana to call a truce coinciding with the pope's arrival in Central America.

The Salvador government on Tuesday tacitly agreed to a cease-fire for the pope's 10-hour visit Sunday after guerrillas said they would temporarily lay down their arms.

Since being named pope, John Paul has traveled to his native Poland, the Far East, Africa, Britain, Europe and South

Hunt Asks Federal Aid In Coastal Management

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt, saying uncontrolled growth could jeopardize North Carolina's coastal resources, asked a congressional subcommittee to seek immediate federal aid Tuesday.

"Accelerated exploration and production of offshore oil and gas resources, without careful management, bring risks to our fisheries, beaches and cultural resources," Hunt told the House Subcommittee on Oceanography of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Subcommittee.

He testified on a bill to establish and Ocean and Coastal Resource Management and Development block grant program, in which the federal government and the state would share the costs of the plan.

"North Carolina strongly supports this bill," he said. "Ocean and coastal resources are vitally important to the state of North Carolina."

Hunt said commercial fishing is a $70 million-a-year business in the state, where some $200 million a year is generated by sports fishing.

But he said unmanaged development, which has led to huge losses through beach erosion, also could jeopardize coastal resources.

"Almost 32,000 acres of productive shellfish waters in North Carolina are now closed to harvesting because of water quality problems," he said.

"Because of the magnitude of these threats, it is critically important for the entire nation that we establish and maintain an effective ocean and coastal resource management program."

Hunt said business has helped federal, state and local officials address many coastal problems.

"However, even if we are able to secure the doubling of (state) funds for coastal management... we will still have to operate our program on 65 percent of the resources we had two years ago," Hunt said. "And this will provide no funds to continue our work on coastal energy impact, research and education and fisheries management programs."

The governor said the Reagan administration's failure to recommend no funding for coastal management "would have the federal government turn its back on years of hard work and investment."

Rep. Ramsey Urges Caution In Separating Powers

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislative powers of setting salaries and writing regulations "are not ours to give away," State House Speaker Liston Ramsey told a legislative committee Tuesday.

"It (the power) belongs to the legislators who will follow us. Once you give it away, it is very difficult to get back," he told the House Judiciary I Committee, which is considering a separation of powers bill.

The bill would redefine who has authority for setting salaries for officials like the deputy commissioner of banks, for writing rules about things including motor fleet management and for deciding on building projects.

In the past, the Legislature has given the Advisory Budget Commission power to review such decisions made by the executive branch. But a recent state Supreme Court ruling forced the Legislature to seek another way of retaining control over the money matters.

The court ruled that the Advisory Budget Commission could only advise the governor and executive branch as long as legislators sit on the commission.

By delegating authority, the Legislature could reduce its own effectiveness, Ramsey said.

"We do more than simply come to Raleigh and raise taxes on people. But if we're not careful that's what we're going to be good for — levying taxes," he added. "We do not want to encroach on any other branch of government. At the same time, we do not want to be encroached upon."

Ramsey said he decided to talk with the committee because, "They've had department heads and different ones over there telling them what a great injustice it would be for the Legislature to do its job. It's just the Legislature attempting to use the authority granted to it by the state constitution."

In other legislative action:
Tax Deduction
State House members voted 90-17 Tuesday to allow themselves an income tax deduction of up to $50 a day, including Saturdays and Sundays, for the expenses of being a lawmaker.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, was sent to the Senate with no debate.

Current state laws allow legislators to deduct from their state income taxes an amount equal to the money they spend in Raleigh for food and lodging during the session.

Licenses
The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill extending the time a driver is allowed to appeal, revocation of his driver's license.

Instead of appealing within three days of notification of revocation, drivers under the bill could appeal up until the license is actually taken.

The bill also would allow revocation hearings to be held by judicial districts rather than by counties, rotating from one county to another in districts with more than one.

Human Resources
The Joint House-Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Human Resources delayed deciding between eliminating some regional state offices or cutting funds for an Asheville hospital.

At issue was the possible removal of Department of Human Resources offices in Winston-Salem and Fayetteville, shifting staff members to offices in Raleigh at a savings of about $200,000 a year.

The committee also considered phasing out funding for Thoms Orthopedic Hospital in Asheville, the only private hospital now receiving state money for operating expenses.

Jim Johnson, a legislative analyst, said many of the services offered by the facility are offered at other large hospitals. He said Thoms has had difficulty keeping its beds occupied.

The recommendation was to cut the hospital appropriation for 1983-84 by $200,000 to $377,332 and reduce it by $477,332 in 1984-85 to $100,000.

Community Colleges
The Joint House-Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Education received a list of possibilities for reducing the community college budget by as much as $6.3 million a year.

Among the options were eliminating two new pilot programs, cutting money for equipment for technical instruction, reducing the $1.7 million new industry training program or increasing the number of students per teacher.

The committee, expected to begin considering the reductions today, must identify three categories of possible spending cuts, each equal to about 1 percent of the community college budget.

Senate Rules
The Senate Rules Committee approved and sent to the floor a bill that would add three members to the 12-member Advisory Budget Commission and require that if the governor appoints any legislators to the commission, he must appoint equal numbers of senators and representatives.

The committee also approved the Senate's rules of operation for this year's session.

The panel decided against a proposal that would have required all bills for this session be introduced by March 15 instead of April 1.

Judge Assault
A Senate committee approved and sent to the full Senate a bill that would make it a felony to assault or threaten a judge or magistrate.

The bill, introduced by

Rep. Ken Spaulding, D-Durham, would include judicial officials in current laws applying to state legislators.

Spaulding told the Senate Judiciary III committee that magistrates were eliminated from the bill because of House objections. Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, raised similar concerns when the committee restored magistrates to the bill.

"If we're going to put in magistrates, why not put in highway patrolmen?" he said. "They're much more likely to be subject to assault."

"I certainly don't want any less protection for judges and magistrates than we have given ourselves," added Sen. James Edwards, D-Caldwell.

Under the bill, anyone who verbally threatened to kill or injure a judicial official could be sentenced to three years in prison if convicted. Anyone convicted of physical assault in such cases could receive up to 10 years in jail.

Mental Health
A bill to let area mental health agencies process patients through a single portal of entry has been stalled by attempts to include penalties for the unauthorized disclosure of patient records.

Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, sought the penalties, saying she had received complaints about such disclosures under current laws.

While the bill would slightly enlarge the scope of the exchange of patient records among agencies, Rep. Chris Barker, D-Craven, questioned whether the committee should spend any more time on concerns with confidentiality.

"I see no reason to get all tied up, as we have, over the confidentiality question," he said. "We really aren't creating a lot of new exchange of information over what we had in the past."

Health Recodification
Six representatives have been named to a joint House-Senate subcommittee that will study a 250-page bill rewriting North Carolina's public health laws.

Appointed were Reps. John Varner, D-Davidson, Sam Beam, D-Gaston, Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, Betsy Cochran, R-Davie, Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly and Robert Brawley, R-Iredell.

Housing
Rep. C.R. Edwards, D-Cumberland, introduced a bill to prohibit discrimination in housing.

Under the bill, it would be discriminatory to consider the race, religion, sex, national origin, handicap or marital status of a person in making a real estate transaction or furnishing the facilities.

It also would be discriminatory to refuse to negotiate a transaction or say the real estate was not available because of the applicant's race, religion, sex, origin, handicap or marital status.

New Bills
Other bills were introduced to require minimum education and training standards for correctional officers, to require reporting of child abuse and to waive tuition costs for dependent children of University of North Carolina employees who are accidentally killed on the job.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, introduced a bill asking the state Board of Education and UNC officials to set up a pilot program allowing teachers and education professors to trade duties for no less than 10 days.

Welfare Penalty Order Appealed

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The state, before a federal appeals court judge Tuesday, argued its appeal of an order requiring it to pay Medicaid and welfare applicants $50 a week each time their payments are held up.

William M. Webb, an attorney for the state, argued that the order could cost North Carolina as much as $6 million over the next four months. But John Syria, a state Department of Human Resources spokesman, said it would cost about $1 million.

Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge J. Dickson Phillips listened to the appeal of an October ruling by U.S. District Judge James McMillan of the Western District.

The decision followed a 1974 case involving a welfare recipient who claimed an application for Aid to Families with Dependent Children was 100 days overdue and that it caused financial difficulty, said Dan Hudgins of Durham County Social Services.

McMillan, ordering total compliance for any applications overdue, gave state officials 90 days to comply. The penalty provision became effective Feb. 2.

In oral arguments Tuesday, Webb presented the state's side, while Theodore Fillette of Charlotte, representing legal aid services in western North Carolina, presented the plaintiff's case.

Under current federal rules, the state has 45 days to process claims for aid to families and 60 days for Medicaid.

Syria said at the beginning of February, the state was behind in 350 to 400 cases but hoped to have many of them caught up by the end of the month. Some cases may be delayed until April.

McMillan had also ruled that some cases marked overdue with good reason — such as delays caused by the applicant — were being deliberately misrepresented.

KIDNAPPED

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Carlo de Feo, a 39-year-old Neapolitan manufacturer of electronic and telephone equipment, was kidnapped by gunmen as he was driving home Monday night, police said.

Judge Planning Resign May 1

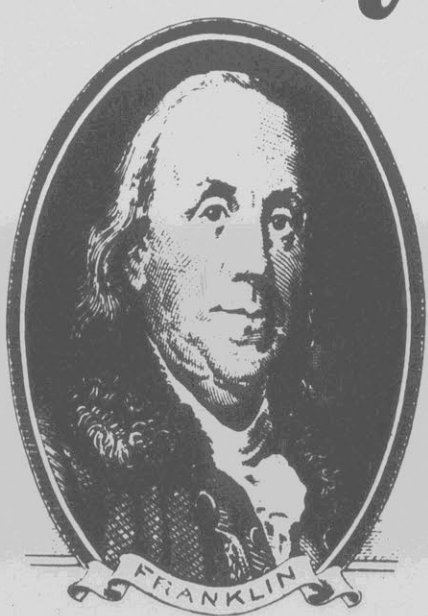

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — District Court Judge Gary Tash announced Tuesday that he is resigning to enter private practice, effective May 1.

Tash, a Republican, said he has sent a letter to Gov. Jim Hunt, advising him of his decision.

He was appointed to one of five District Court seats in Forsyth County in early 1976 and was elected to a full four-year term in November of that year. He was re-elected in 1980.

Hunt will appoint a successor, based on nominations from the Forsyth County Bar. Under state law, the successor must be from the same political party as Tash.

North State's IRA pays more interest: 10.50%

The real difference between all the available IRAs (Individual Retirement Accounts) is the amount of interest you get paid.

So check around. You'll soon find that North State's IRA pays you more.

And retirement will bring more big bills like Jacksons, Grants and Franklins when you open a North State IRA.

As little as $100 starts an

IRA at North State. And even if you already have an IRA someplace else, you can open a new one and start getting North State's higher rates.

As with any IRA, you get tax deductions now (deduct deposits up until April 15 from your 1982 return) and income when you retire. So come in and let us tell you about a North State IRA at the office nearest you.

And while you may think that IRAs look a lot alike right now, a higher-rate North State IRA sure will look better later on.

Because it puts more great men in your future.

You'll get the highest rates with a North State IRA.

Horror In The Early Morning

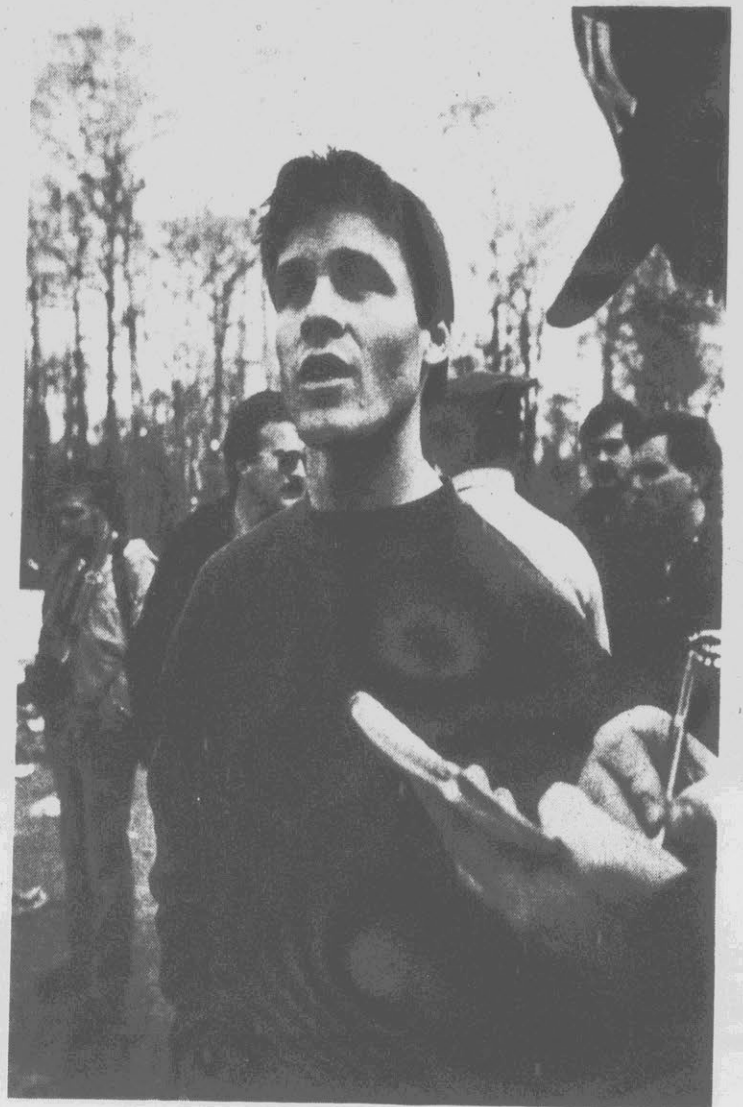

Surprise Blast Levels Apartment Complex

Devastation Scene

Firemen try to locate victims in rubble created when a section of the Village Green Apartment complex blew up shortly before dawn this morning.

Unbelieving

Rick Murray, a resident of Village Green, was one of the first to reach safety following the blast. Neither Murray nor his roommate were injured even though windows and sliding glass doors in their apartment were blown in from the force of the blast.

Photos by Tommy Forrest

Cars Destroyed

Cars parked on the side of the apartment complex were all but completely crushed by falling debris. In the background, firemen work steadily looking for injured people.

Survives Blast

Buzz Chadwick crawled to safety with the aid of rescuers after he was trapped in a first floor apartment. Firemen had to move parts of the building's collapsed roof from the area to free Chadwick.

Victim Rescued

Firemen remove one of the victims from the rubble of the apartment complex.

Explosion Aftermath

Rescue personnel continue their search for injured people long after the explosion occurred. The blast threw debris throughout the adjoining area, making it difficult for rescuers to know where to look for victims.

N. Lenoir Defeats N. Pitt

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — North Pitt coach Randy Avery and his Pant-HERS were happy just to be here.

In last place midway through the regular season, North Pitt came on to finish tied for fourth in the Eastern Carolina Conference and then earn a District II 3-A berth in the ECC tournament.

The Pant-HERS stay in the districts was short-lived, however, as North Lenoir handed them a 43-36 season-ending defeat Tuesday evening.

North Lenoir, 21-4, advances to the semifinals Friday (8:30 p.m.) against the winner of Thursday's South West Edgecombe-Havelock game. The Pant-HERS finish 11-15.

"To be quite honest with you, we're just tickled to be here. We haven't been to the districts in so long," said Avery, whose team was in the districts for the first time in his three years as head coach.

The Pant-HERS saw any chance of winning negated by their poor shooting. North Pitt hit just 25.8% from the floor, including just two of 15 in the last eight minutes.

The Lady Hawks led by 11 at intermission and extended their lead to 17 in the third quarter. The Pant-HERS never got closer than eight, despite North Lenoir missing the front end of seven one-and-ones in the final 2½ minutes.

"We had our chances," Avery said. "They missed some foul shots at the end, but just couldn't get the shots to fall at the end. We rushed ourselves and we missed some shots and turned the ball over."

North Pitt did not have anyone in double figures and managed to stay close on the strength of its rebounding. Delores Pittman grabbed 16 rebounds and Regina Cox had 11 to lead the Pant-HERS.

The Lady Hawks were led in scoring by Veronica Chapman with 15 points and Dee Dee Phillippe with 13.

Final Home Game For 2 Pirate Seniors

ECU Meets Cubs In Season-Finale

A Staff Report

The two senior members of the East Carolina University men's basketball team will be honored Thursday night as the Pirates close out the 1982-83 regular season against Penn State-Behrend at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Thom Brown and Charles Green end their careers at the conclusion of this season's play, and both have become integral parts of the Pirate team since they transferred in three and two years ago, respectively.

Green has been a starter in nearly every game since he transferred in from Catonsville Community College in Baltimore, Md., following his sophomore year.

Last season, the 6-7, 200-pound Washington, D.C., native, scored at an 11.3 clip and pulled in 4.3 rebounds. During the year he had 14 double figure games and was over 20 on four occasions with a high of 25 against UNC-Wilmington. He wound up the year by being named to the Basketball Weekly all-region and all-JV Transfer third team.

This season, Green started off at a fine pace scoring in double figures in seven of his first 12 games. In that 12th game, against William & Mary, he was undercut driving to the basket just six minutes into the contest and suffered a dislocated shoulder. He missed the next nine games before returning to action in a reserve role against Baptist, where he scored eight points.

Since then, however, he's scored in double figures in four straight games, tying his season high of 17 in his last outing against UNC-W. He also scored 17 against Virginia Tech.

Green's best rebounding effort of this year was 14 in the first James Madison game.

Brown, a 6-6, 225-pound forward, transferred to East Carolina after his sophomore year from the University of Maine. During his junior season at East Carolina, he saw only limited playing time, averaging 3.5 points per game.

This year, however, Brown moved into the starting lineup with the injury to Green, after having been the top reserve in the forecourt prior to that. Since then, he's seen action both as a starter and a reserve, and stands fourth on the team in playing time this year.

Brown, a native of East Greenwich, R.I., is averaging 4.6 points a game and 4.3 rebounds. His career high in points came in this year's first game with Navy, when he scored 14 points, and he has twice pulled in ten rebounds, in the second Campbell game and the second George Mason contest.

"I feel very fortunate in having had these two young men for the year I've been associated with them," Coach Charlie Harrison said. "But at the same time, I feel very unfortunate in not having them for a longer time. Each has made a major contribution to our program, not only on the court, but off the court as well, and to the university as a whole. And I know that whatever the future holds for them, it will be success."

Harrison said that Brown plans to do post-graduate work in physical therapy. Green, should he not continue his career as a player in some level of professional basketball, will probably return to ECU as a member of Harrison's staff, the coach indicated.

The Cubs of Penn State-Behrend, members of District #18 of the NAIA, bring in a 4-21 record following a 94-70 loss to Geneva College last night.

PS-B uses a three-guard offense and will be one of the few teams that the Pirates will tower over. The Cubs are led by 6-6 senior forward Dawn Vaughn with a 13.5

Jags Whip Hawks In District Opener

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — Farmville Central, having lost in the opening-round of the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament a week ago, avoided a similar fate last night in the first round of the District II 3-A Tournament. But it was anything but easy for the Jaguars.

Farmville, bearing the ECC's #1 district seed, needed a technical foul and the ensuing 8-0 spurt early in the fourth period to subdue a better-than-advertised North Lenoir squad, 70-57.

The Jaguars, now 17-7 and 13-3 since Christmas, face the survivor of tonight's West Carteret-South West Edgecombe in the semifinals Friday at 7 p.m. The Hawks, the Coastal Conference's No. 4 seed, finishes the year at 8-17.

The Jaguars controlled the game early and led 19-8 after the first period. The Hawks cut the lead to six midway through the second period but Farmville led at the half 32-21.

Farmville, which picked the North Lenoir defense apart in the first half, came out in the third period against a more aggressive and tougher man-to-man, which helped bring the Hawks back.

North Lenoir scored nine straight points to cut a 10-point lead to one (43-42) going into the final period. The Hawks, who never led, got the tap to start the final period, but Maurice Thorbs was called for a foul.

Thorbs, whose 19 points and 14 rebounds were game highs, was then whistled for a technical. The Jaguars' Andrew Edwards, who had missed the front end of three one-and-ones in the third period, canned both free throws and Reggie Gorham hit the technical.

Edwards then drove the lane for a bucket for a 48-42 lead. North Lenoir turned the ball over and Tony Hargrove canned an off-balanced shot on the baseline and was fouled. He missed the foul shot, but Farmville led, 51-42.

and North Lenoir never got closer than six again.

"The technical was the key point," Farmville coach Mike Terrell said. "That gave us momentum. It seemed like it perked us up."

North Lenoir coach Jerry Walton agreed — "The tech took a lot out of us," — but questioned the call. "The kid said all he said was 'How 'bout getting him off my back.' But he (the ref) was looking to call something, in my opinion," Walton said.

It was Thorbs and James Fisher (17 points, five rebounds) who helped keep the Hawks in the game, but the Jaguars won it with their passing (19 assists on 26 baskets) which led to a 56.5% (26 of 46) effort from the field.

The Hawks hit 43.6% (24 of 55) from the field and out-rebounded the Jaguars 20 to 15 in the second half. Both teams had 31 rebounds for the game.

Farmville was led by Gorham with 17 points and Tony Hargrove with 16. Terrence Pettway and Edwards each had 13 points. Edwards also led the Jaguars with eight rebounds.

Farmville scored 11 straight points to open up a 13-2 lead with 3:29 to go in the first period. North Lenoir started in a passive 1-3-1 zone but the Jaguars forced the Hawks into a man-to-man.

Gorham immediately hit a three-point play to help Farmville take a 19-8 bulge after the first period.

Asked about the move to force the Hawks out of their zone, Terrell said: "We feel like we execute better against a man-to-man. We get a lot of picks inside against a man and we get a lot of good shots."

Farmville extended its lead to 23-10 on a backdoor and a power move inside by Pettway with 7:06 left in the half. North Lenoir sliced it to 23-17, but guard Gary Hobgood feed Pettway for one of his game-high seven assists, and Hargrove canned two buckets to give Farmville a 32-21 lead at the half.

The Hawks, playing more aggressively on defense and forcing Farmville to fire from outside, cut the lead to seven early in the second half but it was taken a 9-0 spurt to bring North Lenoir within one (41-40) with 58 seconds left in the period.

Fisher nailed two jumpers from outside and Larry Johnson canned a layup and a short jumper to spark the surge, which saw the Jaguars miss three one-and-ones and turn the ball over twice.

North Lenoir rallied within six (61-55) after the technical early in the last period, but a dunk and three free throws by Andrews in the last 1:35 to clinch the win.

"We played tonight like we played all season, with the exception of a couple games," Terrell said. "It was a tradition Farmville type basketball game. We did a good job tonight."

Hunt Downs Rampettes

WILSON — Rose High School's girls faded in the final period and Wilson Hunt pulled off a 45-36 victory to advance into the second round of the Big East Tournament last night.

The game was close until the final period, when Hunt was able to pull away over the tiring Rampettes, missing two members of their team. Linda Evans, a sometime starter, was absent due to a test, and Niansa Outlaw was benched for missing practice, Coach Dennis Gibson said.

"Bench strength got us in the end, but the girls gave a good effort. They were able to pull away only in the last six minutes of play."

Rose used a 15-4 rebounding margin in the first half to stay close and take the lead on a few occasions.

Hunt took a slim 13-10 lead at the end of the first period, but Rose fought back and held the lead briefly near the end of the period before Hunt managed to take a 25-22 halftime edge.

In the third period, Rose outscored Hunt, 8-6, and closed the gap to 31-30, but they were unable to keep it up. Hunt outhit Rose in the final quarter, 14-6, to gain the victory.

Rhonda Bynum led Hunt with 19 points, while Ann Ellen added 11. Rose was led by Doris Richardson with 12, while Frances Barnhill scored 10.

The loss ends the season for Rose, which wound up 9-13. Hunt, now 10-13, moves into the league's semifinals and will face Fike, a 55-19 winner over Northeastern. In the other bracket, Kinston downed Beddingfield, 72-70, and Rocky Mount topped Northern Nash, 71-45.

Steinbrenner Hints Silence Won't Last

By The Associated Press

Owner George Steinbrenner, who has promised to remain silent even if the New York Yankees lose every exhibition game, has indicated it may be different once the season starts.

"If Billy Martin can't win with this team, we can never win," Steinbrenner said Tuesday at the Yankees' spring training camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Steinbrenner said he would "have to shoulder some of the blame for our poor showing last season," referring to the Yankees' finish one game out of last place in the American League East. "I probably demanded and meddled too much."

"I think from the top down the whole team is embarrassed and disgraced by the performance. I get the feeling that all the guys are eager to redeem themselves. I sense a different attitude out there. Guys like Goose Gosage, John Mayberry and others coming in with their weights down. They're all businesslike and working hard. Personally I think this team has as much all-around talent as the 1977 (world championship) team, which I have considered our best — maybe even more."

Meanwhile, in West Palm Beach, Fla., Atlanta's Bob Horner passed his first test as a left fielder and showed that no matter what position he plays he can still hit. Horner had only one chance defensively in an intrasquad game and handled it flawlessly. At the plate, he smacked a home run — off Phil Niekro — and triple in two at-bats.

"I didn't feel bad in left," Horner said. "After I had played two or three innings it wasn't that big a deal. It's just so completely different from third base, which is a razor's edge on every play. I'm much more relaxed in the outfield."

At Winter Haven, Fla., the Boston Red Sox welcomed 43-year-old Carl Yastrzemski to camp for his 23rd major league season. Yastrzemski, who says he will retire after this season, said that move could come sooner if he can't contribute.

"If I can't help the ballclub win a pennant, there's no possible way I'm going to hang on," he said. "There's no way I can sit on the bench and pinch hit once in a while, no way. What I've done in 22 years I'm not going to tear down in one year or two months or three months."

Tuesday was second baseman Manny Trillo's first full day with the Cleveland Indians and he said he could feel the spotlight on him.

"It was strange. I got everybody's attention," said Trillo, who was acquired from Philadelphia in an off-season trade. "It's not like the first day with the Phillies. Everyone was with Pete (Rose) or Mike (Schmidt)."

The trade of five Phillies for outfielder Von Hayes still bothers Trillo, for more than one reason.

"Right now, for us it is really a good deal," he said. "It would have been a good deal, me for him (Hayes), straight up, one on one. I really think I got thrown out with the trash. I still consider myself a good ballplayer. At least four of us should make the team."

Also, Trillo indicated he is concerned about the Indians' ability to sign him once he becomes a free agent at the end of the season.

"I would like to play in Cleveland if the money is there," he said. "If I don't sign by the end of spring training, then I won't be bothered during the season."

Elsewhere, several teams still had key players missing. Joe Rudi and Carney Lansford were absent from the Oakland A's camp. Rudi has had an Achilles tendon problem and Lansford was house-hunting. Both were excused by Manager Steve Boros.

At the Sun City, Ariz., training site of the American League champion Milwaukee Brewers, first baseman Cecil Cooper and designated hitter Roy Howell were no-shows. Cooper had permission to be late and Howell's son was ill.

At the Chicago Cubs' camp, third baseman Ron Cey, after his first full workout with his new club, issued some parting salvos at his former employers, the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Cey, acquired in a Jan. 20 trade for two minor leaguers, said the Dodgers would suffer this season for losing veterans like himself and first baseman Steve Garvey, who signed a lucrative free-agent contract with San Diego.

"That was their fault," Cey said. "They made it plain and clear early that they wanted to make some moves. They were moving in a new direction, changing faces, bringing in new people."

"If they had played their cards differently, I'm sure they could have got somebody they wanted. But as it turned out, they got some bodies who are going to help them down the road. That says nothing for me. You look at a ballclub that has been successful there and you start naming the people who were responsible for that, and there's none of them there any more."

"That tells you right there that the ballclub is going to be in a state of paying the price for losing the players who have been successful and put them on top. We brought the attendance up from 2.2 (million) to 3.6 (million), and when it was our turn to get rewarded they let us out the back door. With the Dodgers, it's time to move on when you reach a certain salary figure."

Winfield — 'Marriage' A Flop

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
FORT LAUDERDALE

The courtship was great but the marriage has been sort of a flop, says big Dave Winfield of his hot-and-cold relationship with owner George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees.

"I was really swept off my feet when they went out to sign me," the wall-climbing outfielder reflected at the Yankees' training quarters.

"You know, fancy restaurants, sweet talk, a lot of promises, stuff like that. I don't know what happened but George suddenly turned sour on me."

"I have fulfilled my part of the contract, I have played the best baseball I know how, I have put numbers on the board."

"For some reason, I've never been the pet of managers or owners."

Winfield's attorney, Al Frohman, insists that the burr in George's bonnet is the $21 million contract which Dave signed in December, 1980, when he was the choicest morsel in the year's free agent market.

The contract was staggering in scope, a 10-year commitment with payments stretched over an even longer period — the lushest contract in all baseball.

Its provisions haven't been set forth fully but involved — at the ball player's insistence — payments to the Dave Winfield Foundation to help underprivileged kids.

Last year an acrimonious situation arose when Winfield and his lawyer accused Steinbrenner of delinquency of payments.

There were hassles and hints of law suits, but apparently matters were worked out satisfactorily.

Feelings apparently were not fully soothed.

Seething over the Yankees' poor showing last year, a rich team finishing only a game out of the cellar, Steinbrenner made some remarks that offended his All-Star leftfielder.

He commented that Winfield, for all his statistical contributions, was not the kind of player that could carry a club — as was, for instance, the discarded Reggie Jackson.

His boss cast reflections,

Winfield charged, on his winning attitude.

Steinbrenner contends his comments were misconstrued.

"What I said," Steinbrenner insisted, "was that Winfield had never played on a winning team — not in the NCAA (when he was a star in three sports, baseball, basketball and football at the University of Minnesota) and not in the World Series."

"It wasn't meant as a criticism. It was just a statement of fact. It's one thing to put numbers on the board, another to be a winner."

Steinbrenner, a former assistant football coach at Northwestern and Purdue, is big on intangibles.

"Some people are just born winners," the Yankee owner said. "Thurman Munson was one. I think Lou Piniella is, Graig Nettles and Rich Gossage."

"Billy Martin is a winner. Certainly Reggie Jackson was. It's something you're born with — you don't turn it on and off like a faucet."

"I remember Ted Williams said he always thought he was a better ball player than Joe DiMaggio but DiMaggio got the credit because he was a winner."

Winfield is a superb athlete — 6-feet-6 inches tall and 220 pounds with long legs, graceful movement and speed. Not an overpowering but a line drive hitter who averaged .280 last year, he hit 37 homers despite being a righthanded hitter in a lefthanded hitters'

Yankee Stadium paradise, and batted in 108 runs. He literally climbed the stadium walls to make sensational catches.

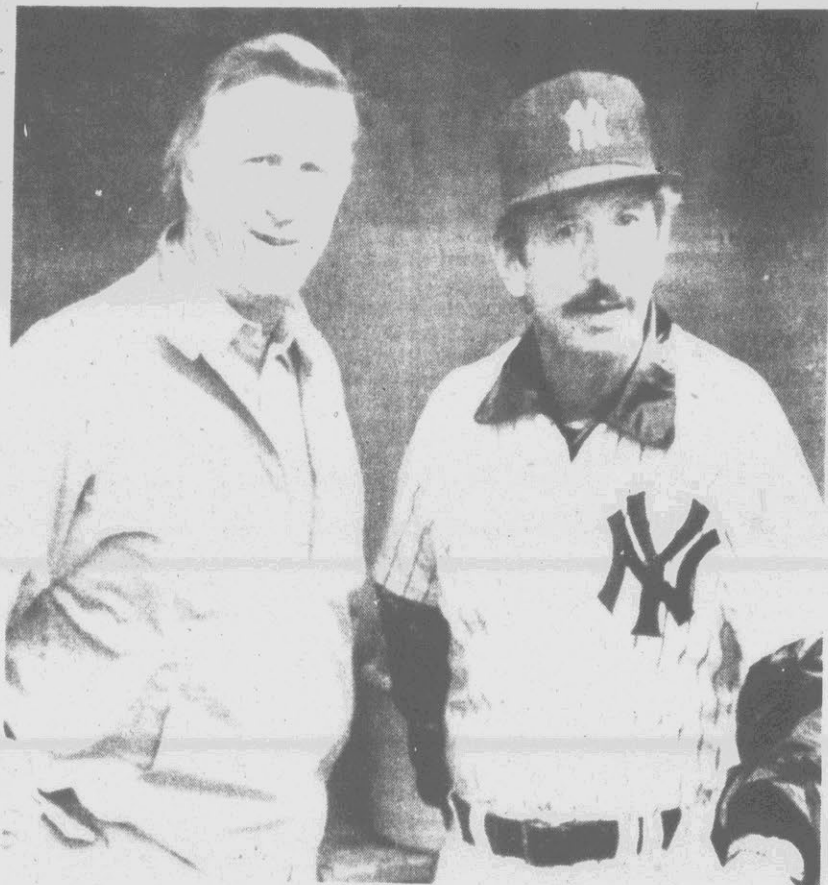

He feels he is being downgraded not because he hasn't produced but because of Steinbrenner's regret over signing such a lavish contract.

"Was it really $21 million?"

"More," said Winfield.

Steinbrenner declines to discuss the contract technicalities, saying, "That's lawyers' stuff. I don't like to fool with it."

"However," Steinbrenner adds, "Winfield had the same problems at San Diego. We knew that when we signed him."

Question In ACC: Who'll End Up In Third Place

RALEIGH (AP) — Second-ranked Virginia and No. 8 North Carolina have the top two spots in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race tied up, but the question is who will win the fight for third place.

With two games left, the Cavaliers and the Tar Heels are locked into the top positions with 10-2 records. The North Carolina State, Wake Forest and Wake Forest are tied for third with 7-5 marks.

North Carolina and Virginia would like ACC regular season and tournament titles, they both would appear certain for selection to the NCAA tournament which the Tar Heels won last year.

The rest of the tournament picture is cloudy, with the odds of the ACC having five teams entered appear slim. In that case, one of those tied for third would probably be left out.

Most likely, even that team will get a tournament bid, but it would be to the less prestigious National Invitation Tournament.

North Carolina State can take care of the matter itself when it hosts Maryland Thursday and Wake Forest Saturday.

Both the Terrapins and Demon Deacons must meet Virginia before its over. Wake Forest takes the first shot at the Cavaliers Wednesday in

Besides the Virginia-Wake Forest matchup, Wednesday's schedule features Duke at Clemson and North Carolina at Georgia Tech.

Virginia, 23-3, defeated North Carolina State 86-75 in its last outing, and center Ralph Sampson later predicted his team would reach its peak at tournament time.

"I don't think we have peaked," the 7-foot-4 Sampson said. "I think we're right at the time when we're going to peak and play well. We've got a long way to go yet."

Wake Forest, 18-7, will try to recover from an 83-75 loss to Maryland on Saturday.

"Now we go on the road to end the season," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said after Sunday's 93-80 victory over Clemson boosted his team's record to 23-6.

"Georgia Tech will be angry on Wednesday after their (106-81) loss at Duke. Of course, they've done a good job at home recently against Wake Forest and Maryland."

N. Edgecombe Triumphs

AHOSKIE — North Edgecombe's boys and Warren County's girls, the top seeded teams from the Roanoke River Conference, advanced to the semifinals of the District I 3-A Tournament as play opened last night.

North Edgecombe defeated Tarboro, 69-62, while Warren County ripped Edenton, 60-33.

All-Exempt Helped Koch Capture Open

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — The new, all-exempt format for the PGA Tour played an important part in Gary Koch's victory in the Doral Open.

"That was a big factor," Koch said after a practice round for the $400,000 Honda-Inverrary Classic, which begins Thursday on the 7,129-yard, par-72 Inverrary Country Club course.

"It took a lot of pressure off me," said Koch, who broke a five-year winless streak with his triumph Monday.

"At the start of the year, you can set a schedule for yourself. You can play the cities and the courses you like, the courses where you think you'll do well. You can take time off when you want to, and be with your family."

"Before, you're looking at that Monday qualifying and not knowing if you're going to make it (into the tournament field) or not. Then, if you make it and make the cut, you're almost forced to play the next week, and keep on playing, so you don't have to go through that qualifying again. This has made the game fun for me again."

The new format for the Tour went into effect this year. It did away with the Monday qualifying and allows the expanded number of exempt players a place in any regular-season tournament they care to play.

Koch very nearly missed making that exempt list, however.

"As late as last fall, I was right on the No. 125 spot (the last qualifying position for the all-exempt tour). I'd backed myself into a corner," he said, and added that he'd even considered dropping off the pro golf circuit and taking up another line of work.

It's Mine, Isn't It?

Syracuse 'Steals' Past No. 4 Villanova, 79-70

By The Associated Press
Syracuse's Erich Santifer stole a ballgame for the Syracuse Orangemen — literally.

Santifer not only scored his team's last basket after his sixth steal of the game, but twice connected on a pair of clutch free throws in the last 79 seconds as 18th-ranked Syracuse, playing at home, upset fourth-ranked Villanova 79-70 in a Big East Conference basketball game Tuesday night.

"It was a special win; it gives us a little momentum for the end of the season and it's important to have momentum going into the Big East tournament," Santifer said.

In the only other contest involving a member of The Associated Press Top Twenty, Jon Sundvold scored 22 points, including a game-winning 20-footer with one second left, as No. 13 Missouri staved off an upset bid and clinched its fourth straight Big Eight title with a 49-47 victory over Kansas State.

The Syracuse victory ended a frustrating string of losses for the Orangemen against three of their key conference rivals — Villanova, St. John's and Georgetown. Syracuse improved its record to 19-6 overall and 9-5 in the conference and kept Villanova, 21-5 overall and 12-3 in the Big East, from clinching the title.

Villanova's John Pinone led all scorers with 23 points, but Syracuse took a 63-55 lead with 5:02 remaining when Santifer, who paced his team with 21 points, stole the ball from guard Gary McLain and drove for a slam dunk. That was the last basket for the Orangemen, who connected on 16 of 21 from the free-throw line down the stretch.

"Down the stretch, a different guy made the key play every time, but Erich was the difference," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim.

At Manhattan, Kan., Sundvold's bucket capped a second half in which there were eight lead changes and seven ties. Kansas State's last lead was 47-45 with 4:43 to play on a Tyrone Jackson jump shot.

Sundvold tied the score 47-47 with a 20-footer with 1:47 remaining, and Missouri, 22-6, regained possession for the winning shot when Kansas State guard Jim Roder threw the ball out of bounds with 51 seconds left.

"A lot of people thought our kids would play lackadaisical tonight, having already clinched a tie for the championship," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart. "But I don't think we did. Our kids were intense; they just played great. I'm so proud of our ballclub — all of them...you have to enjoy the moment, and this is great."

At Milwaukee, Marc Marotta scored the go-ahead points on a jump shot from the key with 3:52 left in overtime and Marquette held on to defeat Stetson 69-66. Glenn Rivers, held to one field goal in the first 32½ minutes, finished with 15 points to lead Marquette, 18-8. Stetson, 18-9, was topped by Mike Reddick's 16 points. The game was tied at 60-60 at the end of regulation and Marotta's jumper put the Warriors ahead to stay 62-60. Stetson's Roland Rucker sent the game into overtime with a desperation 30-foot shot at the buzzer.

At Auburn, Ala., Odell Mosteller scored 20 points and Charles Barkley had 17 points and 17 rebounds as Auburn crushed Mississippi 82-59 in a game that gave idle Kentucky the Southeastern Conference championship. Kentucky had clinched a title tie on Sunday and Ole Miss was the only team that retained a mathematical shot at a tie.

Auburn was in control the whole way, bursting to an 11-0 lead as Mosteller scored seven points and Barkley the other four. Auburn's biggest lead of the night was 80-52 with 1:23 left.

Rain Postpones Games

Rain forced the postponement of the first three spring sports contests of the year yesterday, one baseball game and two tennis matches.

The baseball game, between West Craven and hosting Ayden-Grifton, was washed out and rescheduled for March 26.

East Carolina University's men's opening tennis match, at Atlantic Christian, was postponed until March 15. A high school match between North Duplin and Greene Central was reset for today.

NBA Negotiations Break Off With Angry Words

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations for a new contract between the National Basketball Association and its players association were broken off after the first meeting in more than two weeks lasted just 24 minutes and produced angry exchanges by both sides.

"The players are not prepared to address in any meaningful way the current problems of the league and said they were firm on an April 2 strike deadline," David Stern, the NBA's executive vice president for business and legal affairs, said following Tuesday's abbreviated session.

"No purpose would be served under the circumstances to continue meeting," said Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

O'Brien said the players' strike threat, delivered officially for the first time Tuesday, was "a stunning and disturbing development."

The commissioner, in a message to the league's Board of Governors, said he had opened the meeting by asking Larry Fleisher, the union's general counsel, to clarify his comments to the media regarding the strike deadline.

"Mr. Fleisher responded unequivocally that the players would not agree to any proposal addressing the league's financial problems which would take effect prior to 1987 at the expiration of the Robertson settlement agreement," O'Brien said in his message to the clubs.

The Robertson settlement gives free agent players the right to sign with any team. Part of the club owners' contract proposal would set a salary cap for each team and would bar any club which exceeds that limit from signing free agents.

"I advised Mr. Fleisher and his colleagues that the NBA would not enter into any new collective bargaining agreement which did not address the league's current financial problems," said O'Brien.

The commissioner's message to the Board said Charles Grantham, a member of the union's negotiating team, had said the NBA's financial problems were the problems of the owners and need not be a concern of the players.

"It was a very short meeting," said Fleisher. "We discussed philosophical differences. Philosophically, we are as far apart as Los Angeles is to New York."

In the course of the meeting, Fleisher could be heard shouting.

"There really wasn't great animosity," Fleisher said. "It was a difference of opinion. I thought it might be worse."

Asked about the shouting, Fleisher said, "I have a tendency to get excited."

Fleisher said the union was concerned by an attempt by the league to change its free agent system.

"Part of the dispute is the league's desire to take away things we fought for for so many years," he said. "Give-backs is one point. More important is changing the system that allows a free agent at the end of his contract to be free to negotiate with 23 teams. They want to limit the number of teams."

The last time the two sides met was Feb. 11 in Los Angeles. The NBA said Fleisher made no mention of a strike threat at that time. O'Brien said the league first learned of the April 2 deadline through news reports and it was not confirmed by the union until Tuesday.

"I'm quite depressed," the commissioner said. "We had engaged in negotiations over a period of time and in view of what had transpired up until Los Angeles, I was stunned (by the strike threat). There had been no indication of anything like this at any time. It was a stunning and disturbing development."

O'Brien said the league had provided Fleisher with financial data which the union has studied. "He concluded that 10 teams in his judgment were in serious difficulty. His response was 'Let's have a strike.'"

"We are looking for the players to work with us to look into the problems of the league," said Stern. "They are willing to do nothing for four years, except increase the benefits they have."

Bob Lanier of the Milwaukee Bucks, president of the union, said the players are firm in their stand.

"I should think the players will do what they have to do," he said. "From the meetings we've had, the guys are unified."

Asked if there would be pro basketball after April 2, Lanier smiled.

"There will be basketball if there can be," he said. "I don't have a crystal ball."

Garagiola Quits As Tucson Host

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The Joe Garagiola Tucson Open will become the Seiko Tucson Match Play Championships next year, according to sponsors who plan to increase a $300,000 purse to $1 million and adopt match-play competition.

The Tucson Conquistadores said Tuesday that Seiko Time Corp. will co-sponsor the tournament, to be held Jan. 2-8 at Randolph North Golf Course.

The format calls for members of the PGA Tour and the new PGA Senior Tour to compete in separate events, officials said.

Match play, based on hole-by-hole competition, will begin Jan. 2 and end Jan. 8 with a one-day break on Jan. 5 for the celebrity pro-am.

Although the celebrity pro-am is being retained, sports broadcaster Joe Garagiola said he no longer will be associated with the tournament.

Garagiola has served as celebrity host of the tournament for the past six years.

Conquistadores President Bill Browning said the switch to match play "returns to pro golf for the first time in over 10 years, a concept many top players on the tour have been advocating for some time."

All other PGA tourneys are based on medal play, total strokes over the duration of the tournament, usually 72 holes.

Garagiola said he decided to end his relationship with the tourney when the Conquistadores "made the decision to accept corporate sponsorship."

"There will be a new format, a new sponsor, and this will be good for the tournament, the city of Tucson and the state of Arizona," Garagiola said.

Philly Whips Knicks, 106-94

76ers Take 10th Straight

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia 76ers are winning so often that they could slow down their pace for the rest of the season and still finish with the best record in the history of the National Basketball Association.

Their 106-94 victory Tuesday night over the New York Knicks, who had been playing their best basketball in 10 years, gave the 76ers a 50-7 record, the fewest losses ever for a team with that many victories.

If Philadelphia wins at least 20 of its remaining 25 games, an .800 percentage compared its current winning average of .877, it will become the first NBA team to win 70 times, surpassing the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers' regular-season record of 69-13.

Julius Erving, who has led the 76ers to the NBA finals three times since 1977, only to see them lose on each occasion, said this year's team "was not the best I've ever seen in training camp. But now it could begin to rate with the best I've every played on."

The closest anyone on the team comes to being concerned at all about the 70-victory milestone is Moses Malone, the all-star center who led the 76ers with 25 points and 13 rebounds against the Knicks.

"We want to play sound ball," Malone said. "If we have a chance (for the record) with 12 games to go, maybe we'll go for it. But now, we just want to keep playing the way we're playing."

"Winning 70 games was not a training camp priority," Coach Billy Cunningham said. "If we get to that point, it's just a regular game for us. I won't play Moses any more to win a game and lose the war. Seventy wins is something I hear from the press."

The 76ers led 58-47 at halftime after outscoring the Knicks 24-8 in the last 6:49 of the second quarter, then fought off several rallies in the third period. After New York got within four points, the 76ers scored six in a row, and a few minutes later, when the Knicks pulled within 68-66, the 76ers netted the next seven points.

Bucks 101, Bulls 99

Sidney Moncrief scored 33 points, including Milwaukee's last nine, to lead the Bucks over Washington. Moncrief had six of his points in the last 31 seconds of the game to break a 95-95 tie. Jeff Ruland finished with 25 points for the Bulls.

FLORIDAGOLD® IS 100% VALENCIA. THE OTHER BRAND ISN'T.

30¢ SAYS YOU'LL TASTE THE DIFFERENCE.

Unlike the other leading brand, FLORIDAGOLD® is made only from Valencia oranges. And when it comes to naturally sweet taste, that makes quite a difference.

You see, the Valencia is a special kind of orange, a slow-ripening orange that soaks up sweet sunshine three to four months longer than ordinary oranges. The result is a juice with a naturally sweet taste like no other in the world.

The other brand blends only some Valencia juice with the juice of other oranges. But FLORIDAGOLD is 100% Valencia, and we think you'll taste the difference. In fact, we're so sure that we'll give you 30¢ just to try our naturally sweet 100% Valencia orange juice and find out for yourself.

Neither team fared well at the foul line. North Pitt was six of 16 for 37.5%. North Lenoir was 11 of 28 (39.2%).

The Pant-HERS took an early 6-2 lead on a bucket by Pittman, but North Lenoir scored seven straight points — four by Chapman — to go on top 9-6 and the Lady Hawks never trailed again.

North Lenoir lead 15-10 at the end of the first period. North Pitt sliced the lead to 21-16 on a hook by Peggy Latham with 2:55 to go in the half, but North Lenoir scored six straight for a 27-16 halftime lead.

After a scoreless minute and a half to open the third quarter, the Lady Hawks hit three straight to open up a 33-16 lead with 4:48 remaining. Two jumpers by Patricia Daniels cut the lead to 35-26 at the end of the quarter, but the Lady Hawks stretched their lead to 39-26 on a bucket and two free throws by Chapman and North Pitt never got closer than eight again.

"The thing I'm proud of," Avery said, "is they never gave up. They kept on until the end trying to win. That says a lot for us."

NHL's Awards: Few Clear Cut

By The Associated Press
 For the first time in several years, there is no clear cut favorite for any of the National Hockey League's most prestigious awards — on both an individual and team level.

The race for the Stanley Cup hasn't been so wide open since the Islanders established their three-year domination of the league in 1980. As for the individual honors — who knows?

With one month left in the season, there are several candidates for most valuable player, rookie of the year, best defenseman, coach of the year etc.

For most of those awards, statistics will play a pivotal role. Many of the Professional Hockey Writers Association members who vote for such awards — only the Adams Trophy for Coach of the Year selected by NHL broadcasters — and the Vezina Trophy as most valuable goaltender (picked by league general managers) are not the province of the writers — need to use the numbers as a guideline. It may not always be the best way but there haven't been too many arguments about award winners in recent years.

Wayne Gretzky has won the Hart Trophy as the NHL's MVP for the past three years but is being challenged by Boston goaltender Pete Peeters for that honor. Gretzky could score 200 points again this season and win the scoring title by more than the 65 points he captured by last year, yet Peeters might take away the Hart because of his superb work in the Bruins' goal. In this era of double-digit scoring, Peeters' sparkling goaltending is even more impressive.

The one award which should not be decided by statistics alone this season is the Calder Trophy, which goes to the top rookie. If goals and points were the lone criteria, then Chicago's Steve Larmer would be a runaway winner. Larmer appears headed for a 40-goal, 85-point season, greatly average, while 6-0 junior guard Joe Green has a 12.5 mark. Other starters include 6-2 freshman guard Darrell Gray (.8 per game), 5-10 sophomore guard Shawn Thamer (.47), and 6-2 senior Ty Vaughn (.83).

Dawn Vaughn is also the leading rebounder with a 10.9 average.

East Carolina will next return to action on Thursday, March 10, in the first round of the ECAC-South tournament at the University of Richmond's Robins Center. Finals pairings for the tournament are yet to be decided, although William & Mary has clinched the number one spot and a first-round bye.

GCA Girls Gain Bid

Greenville Christian Academy's girls basketball team will compete in the North Carolina Christian Athletic Association state tournament, to be played this Thursday through Saturday at Winston-Salem.

The GCA girls, runners-up in the district tournament last week at Raleigh, gained an at-large bid to the eight-team field and have been seeded in the eighth position. They will face top-seeded Kerwin Christian Academy of Kernersville at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Winners from Thursday's first round will meet in semifinal action on Friday, with the losers there meeting for the consolation title and the winners for the championship on Saturday. First round losers are done after Thursday night.

UNC To Get 'D' Coach?

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Dale Evans, the University of Colorado football team's defensive coordinator, is leaving CU to become defensive backfield coach at the University of North Carolina, the Rocky Mountain News reported.

The News reported Wednesday that Evans, 46, is expected to be replaced by Lou Tepper, linebacker coach and special teams coach at Virginia Tech.

Evans flew to Chapel Hill, N.C., and interviewed with Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum Friday, and on Sunday, he told CU Coach Bill McCartney he was leaving, the newspaper reported.

Evans was hired at CU last June after McCartney became head coach. Before coming to CU, Evans had been a coach at South Carolina for eight years.

thanks to linemates Denis Savard and Al Secord.

Rookie goalie Bob Froese of Philadelphia came up in early January when regular net-minder Pelle Lindbergh was injured and helped spur the Flyers to a solid lead in the Patrick Division. He even went unbeaten for his first 13 games.

Then there's defenseman-center Phil Housley, an 18-year-old from South St. Paul, Minn., who has gone directly from high school to a starring role with the Sabres. Housley leads all rookies in headlines and already is one of the flashiest players in the league.

Still, the feeling here is that the NHL's best rookie this year is precisely who everyone expected it to be, even though he has not torn the league apart. He is Brian Bellows of the Minnesota North Stars, who figures to score 30 goals or so and perhaps around 70 points.

Those are hardly the kind of numbers one expects from a kid touted as everything from "the next Gretzky" to "the type of player you build a franchise around."

Bellows, who was the No. 2 selection in the Entry Draft last June after the North Stars pulled a last-minute trade to make sure Boston, picking first, would pass on the 18-year-old right wing, entered the NHL with as much fanfare as anyone — including Gretzky. A born leader, Bellows was the cornerstone of a Memorial Cup championship with the Kitchener (Ontario) Rangers junior team last year.

He stepped right in as a regular with Minnesota, a fine team which made the Stanley Cup finals two years ago and appears primed for another assault at the title. And he has improved all season.

"Watching Brian, you see a youngster getting better all the time," says North Stars GM Lou Nanne, who made it a personal crusade to acquire Bellows last spring. "He's had as good a year as any rookie in the league."

Nanne certainly is prejudiced but it isn't hard to agree with his assessment of Bellows. The kid is dedicated to working both ends of the ice — in the final minutes of a tight game, this is one rookie you don't have to be afraid to put on the ice — as well as the corners. He is a good passer and an adequate shooter who stresses accuracy over power.

Most of all, he is a high-priced rookie who is popular among his teammates, a rarity on most teams. Bellows might be just the ingredient that the North Stars lacked in their drive for the top last few years.

ECU Swimmers In Championships

East Carolina's men's swimming and diving team will compete in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships this weekend. The meet will be held Thursday through Saturday at the University of Syracuse.

The Pirates closed out their dual meet season against Duke on February 5, and have been preparing for the Easterns since then, according to coach Rick Kobe.

"Everyone should swim real well," Kobe, completing his first year as head coach, said. "We've had a chance to rest a bit and the swimmers will be shaved for the first time this year."

Last year the Pirates finished fifth. The goal this year is to improve on that.

"It's hard to predict this meet," the coach said. "Teams usually score most of their points on depth so it depends on how many swimmers we have who get into the finals and score."

According to Kobe, top teams at the meet will include West Virginia, Pitt, Penn State, Syracuse, Maryland and East Carolina.

Following the meet, Pirate diver Scott Eagle and diving coach Jon Rose will travel to Columbia, S.C., where Eagle has qualified for NCAA regional diving competition, to be held March 11-12. If he finishes among the top nine in South Carolina, Eagle then goes to the NCAA finals March 24-26 in Indianapolis, Ind.

An Activist Church For Hondurans

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer
TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Tall, sporting a thick moustache and a short sleeve shirt with open collar, Spanish-born Jose Maria Tojeira does not fit the old image of the portly priest in a black cassock who spent his time sipping hot chocolate with parishioners.

The 35-year-old Jesuit embodies the new social activist church in Honduras, where priestly activities are viewed with displeasure by the government and the military.

"The hierarchy of the church has awakened in the last few years," said Tojeira, superior of the 30 Jesuit priests in Honduras, as he explained the problems of the "poorest church in Central America" and its increasing role in denouncing social injustice.

Geographically isolated from the main routes linking other Central American countries, Honduras in the days of Spanish rule was the place where "priests who misbehaved were sent as punishment."

It is a church dominated by foreign clergy. Even now, with a population of 3.8 million, the impoverished nation has 224 priests. Most of them are Spanish, American or German. Only 50 are Honduran.

In a country where governments traditionally expected the church to be a silent ally, even mild criticism, such as that expressed in a pastoral letter last October, can bring a rash of anti-clerical charges.

"The military resents it when the church tells them anything," said Tojeira. "It bothers them because they know they cannot control the church."

Early in January, Col.
Roman Tabora Bogran, new commander of the 3rd Infantry Battalion, charged that "communist priests want to impose communism on us by force or persuasion."

Churchmen still recall the 1975 shooting by soldiers of two priests who befriended a group of peasant squatters.
They and 12 peasants were killed, their bodies dumped in a well in the town of Los Horcones, in sparsely populated Olancho province.

The soldiers involved were tried and imprisoned. But two were given amnesty in 1981 and at least one is reported back in uniform.

Church officials here say that "Perhaps some priests have deviated from their evangelical mission," and have become politically involved in groups that seek to change Central American social conditions by force.

"But when you see the great social injustices that are committed, when you see the exploitation of your peasants who cannot sell their products at a fair price, you need a tremendous amount of faith to maintain some sort of balance," said Monsignor Oscar Rodriguez, 43, assistant bishop of Tegucigalpa. Rodriguez is considered by many to be the mediator between the government and the more liberal priests of the church.

The head of the Roman Catholic Church here is Monsignor Hector Santos, 64, a frail-looking fatherly figure who, according to one priest who requested anonymity,
"leads in the direction the others push him."

A bespectacled man with a quick smile, Rodriguez said the mistake of some governments and of the military in Central America has been to mix their anger at the church with anti-communism.

"All extremism is fatal," he said. "Rabid anti-communism is the best breeding ground for communism."

Rodriguez, who has spoken strongly from the pulpit in defense of the refugees from the civil war in neighboring El Salvador, says he often asks the military "to come to the bishops when they have a conflict with a priest."

Some of the conflicts have been sparked by church involvement in the problems of Central American refugees.
The Honduran military has charged that much of the aid given to the refugees through church-related organizations has ended in the hands of leftist rebels fighting the Honduran military's counterparts in El Salvador.

M-A-S-H Sets A New Record In TV Audiences

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An estimated 125 million viewers watched the final episode of "M-A-S-H," making the audience the largest for any single TV show ever broadcast, CBS said today.

CBS' estimate was based on a rating from the A.C. Nielsen Co. for the 2 1/2-hour program broadcast Monday night of 60.3. That eclipsed the previous record of 53.3 for the "Who Shot J.R.?" episode of CBS' "Dallas," shown Nov. 21, 1980.

Further, nearly eight of every 10 TV sets in use nationwide during the broadcast of "M-A-S-H" — 77 percent — were tuned to CBS.

The "M-A-S-H" finale, for which advertisers paid as much as $450,000 for a 30-second commercial, attracted nearly 10 million homes more than "Who Shot J.R.?" — 50.3 million to 40.7 million. A single ratings point is worth 833,000 homes today, an increase from 763,000 in 1980.

The audience estimate breaks the record for a single show of 111.5 million, NBC's calculation for Super Bowl XVII last Jan. 30.

ABC's recently broadcast "Winds of War" miniseries drew an estimated 140 million viewers, but that was for an 18-hour production carried over seven nights.

In ratings for the week ended Feb. 27, "9-to-5," a comedy about three secretaries and their chauvinistic boss, grabbed two places in the television ratings Top 10, one on CBS and one on ABC.

The original movie starring Jane Fonda, Lily Tomlin and Dolly Parton was the No. 1 show on CBS. The ABC series, starring Valerie Curtin, Rita Moreno and Rachel Dennison, was in a three-way tie for seventh place.

The special movie presentation of the hit comedy film helped carry CBS to victory for the week.

CBS finished first in the national ratings with 20.1. ABC was second with 17.3 and NBC was third with 15.3. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 20.1 percent of homes with television were tuned to CBS.

It was CBS' second straight victory in the February sweeps. It won the past two weeks after the ABC miniseries "The Winds of War" carried that network to the top during the first two weeks of February.

"Dallas," placed second in the ratings for the past week and the "M-A-S-H" episode preceding the final show was in fifth place. "60 Minutes" was third and "Magnum, P.I." was fourth. Both are on CBS. ABC's highest-rated show was "Three's Company," in sixth place.

ABC's "The Love Boat," the second part of the NBC miniseries "Rage of Angels" and the ABC series based on "9-to-5" all tied for seventh place. The Grammy Awards on CBS were tenth.

CBS' "The Dukes of Hazzard," aided by the return of John Schneider and Tom Wopat, climbed to 13th place. It was the show's highest rating since September. Schneider and Wopat had not appeared in any of this season's shows until last week's episode because of a legal dispute, which has been resolved.

The week also found two former "Charlie's Angels" opposing each other in the ratings. Jaclyn Smith starred in NBC's "The Rage of Angels," which was in a tie for seventh place. Cheryl Ladd starred in the Monday-night competition, ABC's "Grace Kelly," based on the life of late Princess Grace of Monaco and former movie actress. That movie was in 21st place.

Here are the Top 10: CBS

"9-to-5," a rating of 28.6 or 23.8 million households, CBS; "Dallas," 25.4 or 21.1 million, CBS; "60 Minutes," 23.7 or

19.7 million, CBS; "Magnum, P.I.," 23.6 or 19.6 million, CBS; "M-A-S-H," 23.1 or 19.2 million, CBS; "Three's Company," 23.0 or 19.1 million, ABC; ABC's "The Love Boat," NBC Monday Night Movie, "Rage of Angels," Part II, and ABC's "9-to-5," 22.1 or 18.4 million, three-way tie; The Grammy Awards, 21.6 or 17.99 million, CBS.

Here are the next 10: CBS' "Falcon Crest" and ABC's "Dynasty," 21.5 or 17.90 million, tied; "The Dukes of Hazzard" and "Simon & Simon," 21.4 or 17.8 million, tied, both CBS; "Hart to Hart," 21.3 or 17.7 million, ABC; Charlie Brown Special, "Is It Good-Bye?," 20.3 or 16.9 million, CBS; "The A-Team," 20.2 or 16.8 million, NBC; NBC's "Hill Street Blues" and CBS' "Gloria," 20.1 or 16.7 million, tied; "Newhart," 19.9 or 16.5 million, CBS.

Here are the five lowest-rated shows: "The Powers of Matthew Star," NBC; "St. Elsewhere," NBC; ABC Friday Night Movie, "The Warriors," ABC; "The Family Tree," NBC; "Voyagers!," NBC.

One Giant Step Beyond Boy-Meets-Girl Story

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS goes one giant step past the tired old format of boy meets girl. In tonight's semi-intelligent, sometimes-funny "Your Place or Mine," boy doesn't meet girl.

Bonnie Franklin and Robert Klein play the perfect couple, that is they would be ideal their friends say, if they could ever find the right circumstance and opportunity to meet and begin a relationship.

So, while Mr. and Ms. Right are moving on parallel paths, they have time to match themselves with an assortment of losers and creeps — none of whom would get past the first interview on "The Dating Game."

One man requires his dates to take, personality tests, another is an egomaniac who talks incessantly about his ex-wife. One woman is the type who browbeats waiters and causes embarrassing scenes in restaurants, another owns a dog who barge into his owner's bedroom at inappropriate times.

All the while, "Your Place or Mine" is lambasting America's ritualistic war dance called dating, and playfully teasing the audience about when — and whether — Klein and Miss Franklin are ever going to get together.

Alexandra (Miss Franklin) from "One Day at a Time" is a psychiatrist. Her patients have been unlucky in love, and her advice is to be patient: "You will get over him," or "You're capable of surviving without a man."

One flaky patient (played by Penny Fuller) has computer charts proving that there are only three eligible men in San Francisco right for her, once you discount the men beneath her intellectual percentile, and those who drink too much or smoke cigars.

Alexandra really believes her clinical advice until her live-in lover moves out, taking the furniture and toilet paper while charitably leaving her clothes and classical records.

Soon, Alexandra is handling depression by eating boxes of cake, spilling her guts to her friend, Karen (Tyne Daly of "Cagney and Lacey") and sounding exactly like her patients: "It's a zoo, and I don't want to go back on exhibition."

Karen is an eager match-maker, much to the chagrin of her husband, Phil (Peter Bonerz, the dentist from the old "Bob Newhart Show"). It's Phil's weekend rugby acquaintance, Nick, who becomes Karen's choice for Alexandra.

Nick (Klein) has just become the odd-man-out in his own romance. A sensitive, humorous man, Nick gave up the advertising rat race for landscaping. His concept for exterior decorating is edible parks that can feed the poor and nourish the eyes, too.

Maybe he is right for Alexandra. We'll only know if there's a sequel, but that story's been done a million times: Boy meets girl ... boy loses girl ...

Also tonight, public television tackles President Reagan's federalism proposal. The documentary "Reagan's New Federalism: Shift or Shaft?" analyzes why the idea of turning back money to the states for welfare programs has bogged down.

The plan, first proposed by Reagan at his 1982 State of the Union speech, was back again in January in a modified form.

One major concern expressed in the show is, if the states take welfare administration away from Washington, would there be equal treatment in all 50 states, many of which have vastly different economic standing and social attitudes.

In Mississippi's welfare program, for example, a mother receives the same payment for her 13 children that a mother in Wisconsin gets for three children. Fears are also expressed that federal programs to rehabilitate the handicapped, among others, would lose out in the priority shuffle under Reagan's plan.

This documentary offers valuable glimpses into how the federal system works — or doesn't work, for that matter. It also points out that simple speeches and solutions aren't always realistic responses to complicated problems.

LIZA AND LORNA — Lorna Luft, sporting a baseball cap, wraps her arms around her sister, Liza Minnelli as Luft is welcomed to the cast of the musical "Snoopy" during a celebration in New York Tuesday. Luft, who is returning to the New York stage after an absence of 12 years, will play the role of Peppermint Patty in the play based on the well-known cartoon by Charles Schulz. In background are unidentified cast members, and, wearing tie, the play's director Arthur Whitelaw. (AP Laserphoto)

Tanker Fire Burned Two

MOORESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two men were burned when a tanker truck containing more than 8,000 gallons of kerosene burst into flames Tuesday after hitting a Cleveland County volunteer fire department truck, police said.

Johnny Augustus Owens, 58, the tanker driver from Forest City, was listed in satisfactory condition at Cleveland Memorial Hospital in Shelby with third-degree burns on his legs, a hospital spokesman said today.

The fire truck driver, Richard Olin Thomas, 31, of Lattimore, suffered slash burns and was treated and released at the same hospital.

State Highway Patrol Trooper David Thomas said the fire engine's brakes failed at the intersection of Business U.S. 74 and the truck struck it on the left corner, forcing the tanker to sideswipe the fire truck.

Both vehicles were engulfed in flames and smoke was seen several miles away, witnesses said. After the collision, the tanker swerved across the median and flipped over into an oncoming traffic lane, police said.

Firemen from several surrounding county departments pumped foam onto the burning trucks after the 4 p.m. accident, containing the flames within the hour.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

VTJXXVA RNAX MTJ PJEWWNOP ATTZR:
MNZX VEWNOXA?

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — FORGETFUL RUNNER JOGS MEMORIES OF JILTING.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals B.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Garnishments By Tax Office

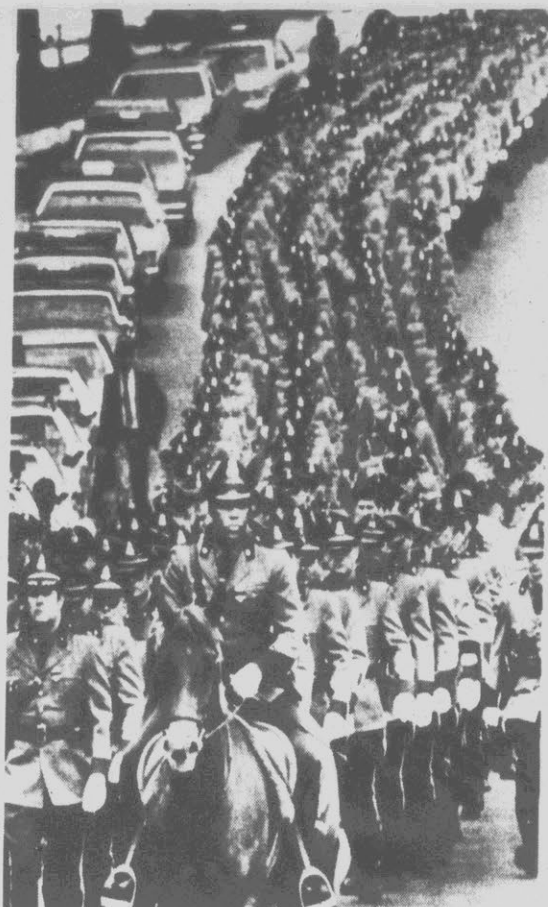

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — Stanley County officials say the county tax office has stepped up wage garnishments and other legal methods to collect nearly $2 million in back taxes.

County commissioners last week authorized the measures to beef up the county's coffers, said interim Tax Director Donna Hinson.

"We realize many people have been in hard times for the past few years; Alcoa, in particular, has been in a layoff situation for at least two years and shows no signs of picking back up soon," Ms. Hinson said. "This hits our people hard."

Until two years ago, Stanley County didn't enforce collection of back taxes. Ms. Hinson said that's the reason more than $17,000 in overdue taxes is still owed for the 1973 tax year — the earliest year the tax office can enforce collection.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAR. 3, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day for you to seek and gain important information which will help you advance in your line of endeavor. Organize your day so you can utilize your time to best advantage and make progress.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study quietly and come to the right decisions where important matters are concerned. Seek an expert if you need advice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If invited to a social affair, make sure you don't become involved in an argument. State your goals to a trusted friend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Some work connected with your career is annoying but has to be done. Don't jeopardize your credit by not paying a bill.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A new project needs more study before putting it in operation. Do whatever will improve your career.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Talk over money matters with close tie and avoid misunderstanding that now exists. Don't rely on your intuition at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know exactly what is expected of you by associates and consult with them before making personal plans. Be alert.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Quickly handle obligations awaiting your attention. Use a more direct approach with others. Don't neglect health treatments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show in some tangible way that you appreciate the alliance with associates and add to the goodwill you now enjoy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Give attention to those problems at home that require immediate handling. Show that you are a loyal family member.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Being alert in motion could prevent an accident. Think before you speak or you could say the wrong thing today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be mindful not to spend money on foolish things today or you could regret it later. Strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have personal aims that require a proper perspective if you are to attain them. Take steps to improve your appearance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be full of fantasy and should be given the right training to permit steady advancement in chosen career. Learning comes quickly here. Education should be directed along government lines for best results.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
4 ♥ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Three of ♦.

There are some situations where declarer has to guess the location of the opponents' cards. But in the majority of cases, the cards will be marked by the play to earlier tricks.

North's hand revealed to just enough to qualify for a jump raise of his partner's one, heart opening bid. Besides the 11 HCP and 1 point for distribution, the queen of trumps must be upgraded 1 point, bringing the total to 13 points.

West led his fourth-best diamond and declarer played low from dummy. East made the correct technical play of the jack, which won the trick, and then exited with a trump. How should declarer proceed?

Declarer has a sure loser in each suit outside of trumps. Therefore, it might seem that the contract hinges on the club finesse, and a glance at the diagram shows that his majesty is off-side. Thus it might seem that declarer must go down one.

However, there is a second line available to declarer, and the opening lead makes it an almost sure thing. It is unlikely that West has under the ace and queen of diamonds at trick one, so East surely has one of those cards. And in that case, declarer can guarantee his contract.

Declarer should win the trump return in dummy and lead the king of diamonds. East must cover with the ace, and declarer ruffs. Declarer gets back to dummy with a trump, in the process drawing the last of the defenders' trumps. Now declarer leads the ten of diamonds from dummy, and he doesn't really care which defender has the queen of diamonds.

If East produces that card, declarer ruffs and he can then discard a club from hand on the established nine of diamonds. The club finesse can be tried for a possible overtrick. But when East follows with a low diamond, declarer simply discards a club from hand. As the cards lie, West wins the queen and shifts to a club, but declarer simply rises with the ace and discards his last club on the nine of diamonds. Either way, declarer cannot lose more than two tricks in the minor suits—either one in each, or two diamonds and no clubs.

Howards' Knob Windmill Is More Than A Memory

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
BOONE, N.C. (AP) — When the U.S. Department of Energy dismantles the giant windmill atop Howard's Knob this spring, Boone residents will be left with more than just a memory of the problem-plagued turbine.

One of the 100-foot blades will be used as part of a monument to the windmill. "There's a nice little park up on Howard's Knob where families can picnic and look out over the area, and we think it will be a great place for kind of a monument to the windmill," says Bob Bumgarner, Watauga County district manager for Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp. "So one of the blades will be used in some type of a monument. It's still in the planning stages, so I don't know exactly what kind of monument it will be."

Blue Ridge, with headquarters in nearby Lenoir, ran the windmill.

Energy-department officials announced last November that the windmill would be taken apart and removed from Howard's Knob.

The turbine broke down in January 1981 when bolts connecting the two 100-foot rotor blades to the drive shaft snapped. Workers began repairs on the windmill last October.

But Energy Department officials, along with NASA and General Electric Corp., decided to tear it down when they determined that it would cost $1 million to repair it.

Officials have said they don't know how much it will cost to dismantle the windmill and haul it away.

Since its dedication in July 1979 as the world's largest windmill, the wind generator has run only 300 hours and has cost the federal government about $30 million to maintain.

The $3.5 million windmill was a joint project of the Energy Department and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The machine has a wing span larger than that of a Boeing 747.

It was designed to switch on when the wind reached 6 mph and cut off when the wind velocity got up to 33 mph. At an ideal speed of 25 mph, it was supposed to produce enough power to supply electricity for 500 homes.

The operation of the windmill caused an uproar in Boone from the beginning. Residents living at the foot of the mountain below the turbine complained that it interfered with their television reception like an airplane flying over and that it made bumping noises as the blades turned.

NASA and DOE crews

spent months talking with residents and testing the noise level of the windmill. They succeeded in partially reducing the noise level.

In January 1981, the driveshaft bolts broke and the windmill has been still since.

The windmill even lost its reputation as the largest in the world when NASA announced the start up of operations at its "windmill farm" at Goldendale, Wash. That location had three wind machines that were larger than the one at Boone.

In the fall of 1981, an attempt was made to sell the windmill to Hawaiian Electric Co. But the proposal was later withdrawn.

Meanwhile, the Energy

Department was scheduled to begin taking bids last month on dismantling the windmill. But Bumgarner said his office hasn't been notified of any bidding.

"They may be running a little behind," he said. "I'm sure we'll get a letter telling us what will be done as soon as a contractor is determined to take it down."

"Besides, they can't do anything with it until the winter weather lets up, probably April or May," he said.

Bumgarner said parts of the turbine may be used in other windmills or may be sold as scrap. He said the Energy Department has stipulated that it may never be put back together and used as a windmill again.

No Losers In His Shell Game

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — Jim Morgan is running a shell game in bars up and down the Georgia coast, and nobody loses.

Morgan is the self-styled commissioner of his own National Crab Racing Association. On any given weeknight, you can find him racing his crabs in bars from Brunswick to Savannah.

"It beats working for a living," said the 42-year-old Morgan. "And besides, the crabs work cheap."

The real show is the lux-edged, wisecracking Morgan, a cigar clenched in his teeth, a bullhorn in one hand, a spray bottle of water in the other.

The spray allows Morgan to punish spectators who violate any rules, and also lets him "grease up the joints" of sluggish contestants.

The rules are no pointing, no blowing, no leaning and no banging on the plywood race-track and its 7-foot diameter course.

The crabs are selected and named by their sponsors at "the stable," the aquarium where they are kept between races.

The crabs, with numbers on their shells, are placed in the middle of the racetrack under a large, upside-down salad bowl. When the bowl is lifted, the race is on. And the first crab to get both pinchers across the finish line is the winner.

The record time for the 3-foot dash is 15.33 seconds. But Morgan can't say which of his nearly 100 crabs holds the record.

Some races have lasted as long as 11 minutes. But if that happens too often, Morgan said, "I take the crabs out to the kitchen and let them talk to the lobsters awhile. That usually motivates them."

Turks Hope To Restore Green

By EMEEL ANIL
Associated Press Writer
ANKARA, Turkey (AP) —

By the next decade, the Turkish government hopes to bring the green back to the arid steppes of northern Mesopotamia where one of the world's earliest civilizations once flourished.

Some experts say the plan that calls for the harnessing of the historic Euphrates River through a series of dams and irrigation canals could result in Turkey producing $5 billion worth of surplus food in the region and serving as a breadbasket for the entire Middle East.

At the same time, it will mean more electricity for Turkey's power-starved industry.

The generally parched and impoverished area lies between the Euphrates and the equally historic Tigris River in northeast Turkey. Known as Mesopotamia, it was the flourishing home of the ancient Sumerians, Babylonians, Assyrians and Hittites.

The project has already begun in bits and pieces.

In 1974, Turkey completed the Keban Dam on the northern reaches of the Euphrates and its 6.2 billion kilowatt hours of electricity have been a boon to Turkish industry.

But without the Southeast Anatolia Project, as the reclamation plan is called, Turkey can expect no further industrial growth without the construction of the Karakaya and Ataturk dams and several smaller ones south of the Keban on the Euphrates, officials say.

Sabahattin Sayin, director of state water works, maintains that the Southeast Anatolia Project could double Turkey's energy production and increase by five-fold the agricultural output of the region.

The project has existed on paper since the early 1960s but the government lacked funds and the political stability to go ahead with it.

Construction is already started on the Karakaya Dam, about 100 miles downstream from the Keban. Karakaya, a concrete arch gravity type dam expected to cost $1.9 billion, would generate 7.5 billion kilowatts of electricity annually when it goes into operation by 1988.

But the star of the project is the Ataturk Dam, named after the founder of the Turkish republic, Kemal Ataturk. It is to be the largest dam ever built in Turkey and the fourth largest rock-fill dam in the world. It will serve purposes of both power generation, at 8.1 billion kilowatts, and irrigation.

A Turkish company is already building the diversion tunnels, changing the course of the Euphrates to prepare for the construction of a 375-square-mile reservoir.

Construction has been under way since 1977 on irrigation tunnels which would draw water from the Ataturk Dam reservoir. The system would be the world's longest with a 16-mile tunnel and 175 miles of main canal. Also planned are 95 miles of secondary and 125 miles of tertiary distribution canals.

The canals would be ready by the time the Ataturk Dam is completed in 1992, officials say. The tunnels would irrigate 1.6 million acres of land in the Harran and Siverek Plains north of the Syrian border.

For the 4 million residents of the region this would mean an abrupt change from dry farming to irrigation farming, requiring different skills.

Experts predict a reverse migration, with people who left the land for greener pastures returning, as well as a flood of newcomers.

The yield of such crops as cotton, rice, sugar beets and vegetable oil producing plants would be double current Turkish production, a government study indicates.

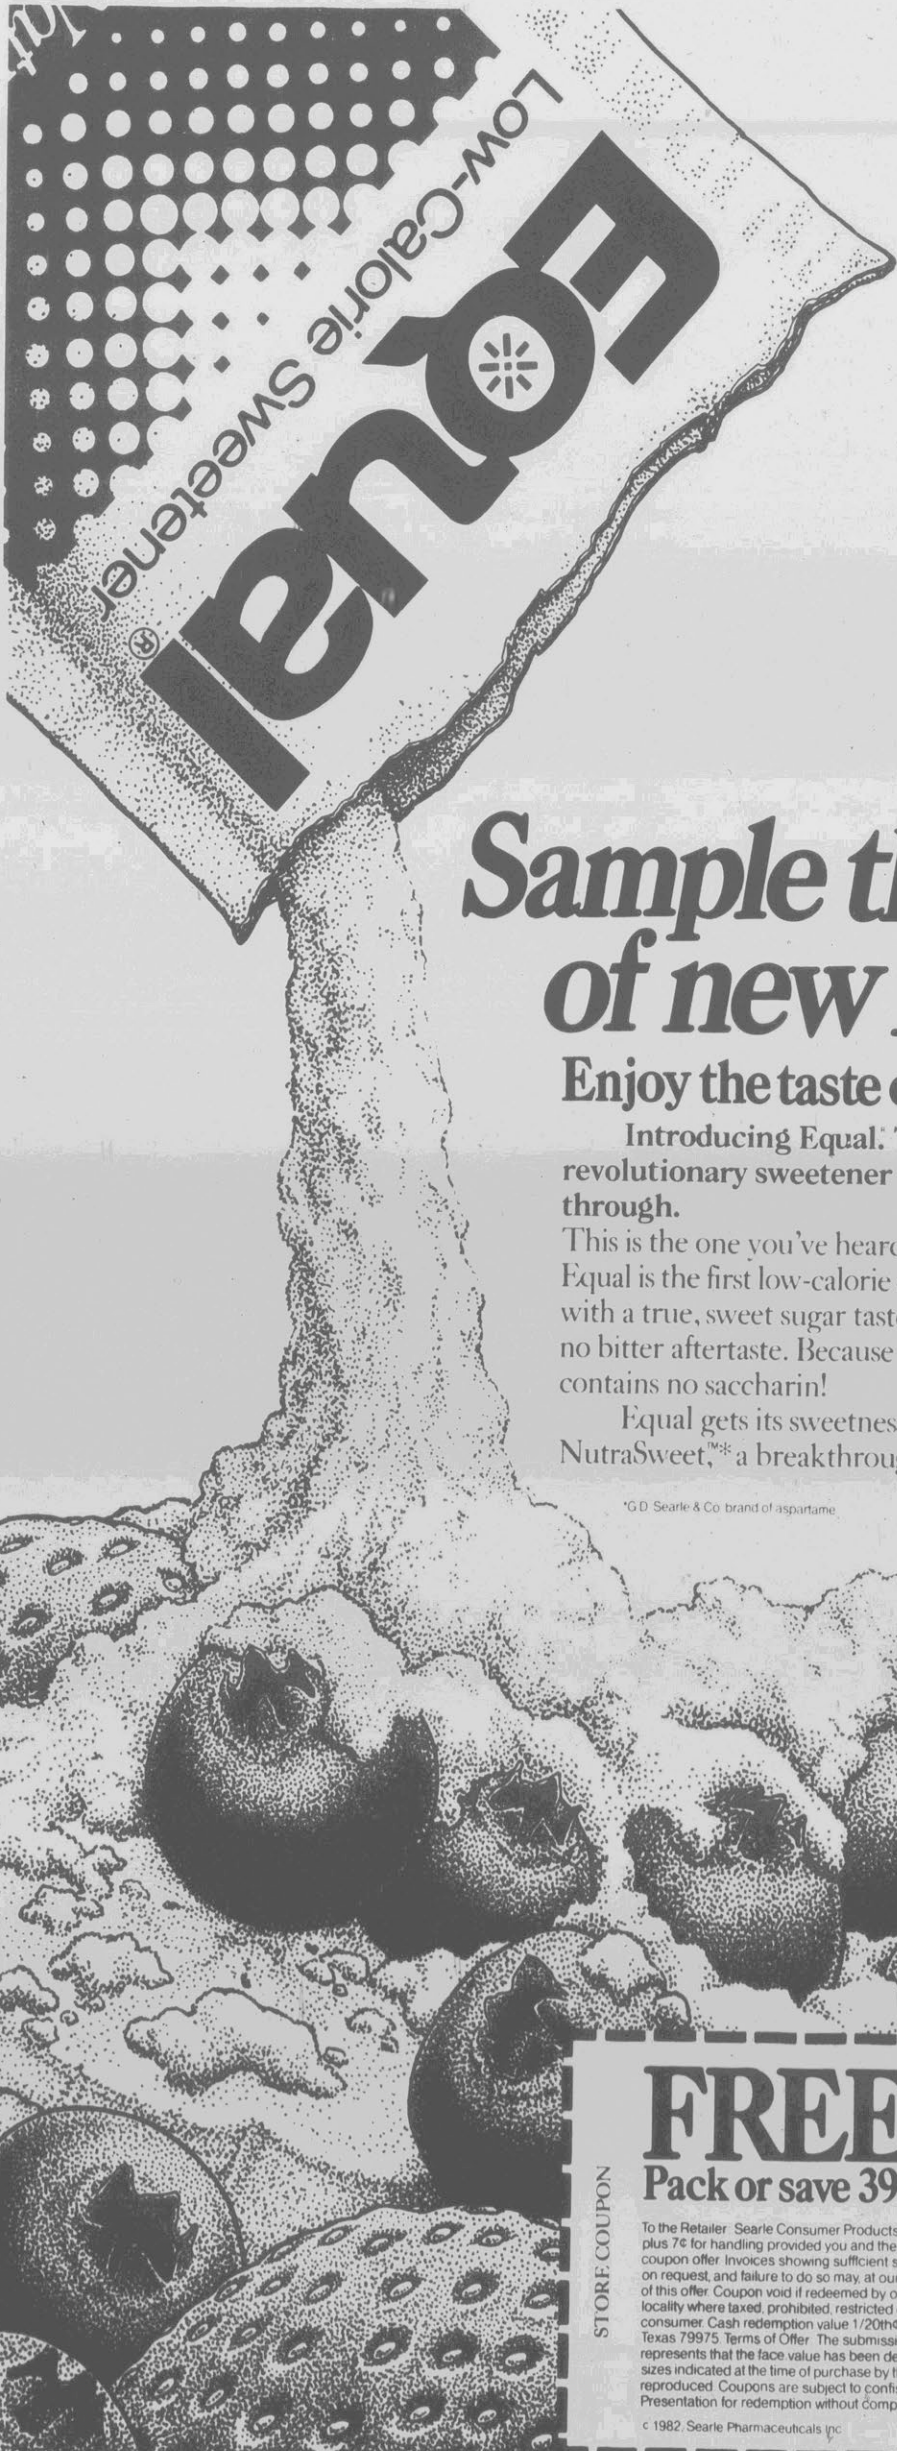

The government has already set up experimental farms in the area to familiarize the people with irrigated farming methods. An agricultural university has opened in Urfa Province two years ago.

But financing is one problem with the project right now. The cost of the Ataturk Dam is estimated at $3.5 billion and the irrigation project an additional $560 million. Turkey needs $1.5 billion in foreign loans for the Ataturk Dam and $150 million for the tunnel system, according to state planning documents.

The World Bank, usually a good source of loans for energy projects, has been balking at this one because neighboring Iraq and Syria oppose the project on grounds the dams will give Turkey the ability to cut them off from the southward flow of the Euphrates.

Another problem is the resettlement of 20,000 people from the reservoir area of the Karakaya and 50,000 from the Ataturk Dam lake.

Introducing Equal: The revolutionary sweetener breakthrough.

This is the one you've heard about. Equal is the first low-calorie sweetener with a true, sweet sugar taste — and no bitter aftertaste. Because Equal contains no saccharin!

Equal gets its sweetness from NutraSweet,* a breakthrough sweet-ening discovery with ingredients like those found naturally in many foods.

One packet of Equal is as sweet as two teaspoons of sugar. Yet it has only 4 calories. The same amount of sugar has 8 times as many calories.

Equal is in supermarkets and drugstores everywhere. Now you can try it — free. It's a perfect way to taste the sweet life of Equal.

Solar Power Project Not Big Success

By ROGER MUNNS
Associated Press Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — One of the biggest solar installations in the country, located near the Iowa Statehouse, faces a hazy future, and the reason is simple.

"There just isn't that much solar energy falling on a square foot of Iowa to make it go," said Stan McCausland, the former state General Services director who was the driving force behind Iowa's $200,000 project, completed three years ago.

Authorities had hoped the project eventually would be expanded to supply half of all the energy needs for the Capitol complex.

Instead, it produces only a tiny fraction of the needed energy and has never run at more than 50 percent efficiency. Today, the mirrored panels are turned toward the earth, idled by a broken pump.

When working, the panels reflect sunlight onto an oil-filled tube 12 feet away. The synthetic oil in the tube is heated to at least 350 degrees and then pumped to a heat exchanger where the energy is converted to steam and combined with the rest of the heating system.

Even when it's running, the solar experiment has few vocal supporters. Jack Walters, McCausland's successor, said he'll keep the system going but will not expand it.

"I'm not saying it was a waste of money. But from everything I have read, it is a disappointment," he said. "The payback is 15 or 20 years, way off in space."

Don Ashwill, a heating specialist whose duties include monitoring the solar installation, said the panels are producing about 30 percent less energy than he had expected.

The oil used in the system is expensive and so thin that tiny quantities leak from joints in the tube, Ashwill said. In addition, because the mirrors are 12 feet away, it's hard to focus them on the oil-filled tube.

But the biggest trouble, McCausland said, is a lack of sunshine.

At Iowa's latitude, an average of 2,100 British thermal units of sun energy strike every square foot a day. By casting the mirrors at a certain angle and making them follow the sun, about 2,700 Btu will fall on solar panels like the Iowa system.

But a large amount of that light never reaches Iowa. The National Weather Service estimates the sky is partly cloudy to overcast 71 percent of the time in Des Moines.

And 30 percent to 40 percent of the sun's energy that does reach the solar panels is lost as it is converted into steam, McCausland said, adding, "Solar just is not all its cracked up to be."

Still, Ashwill says the solar system was worth the money because it produced useful data. "I know what to look for if anybody gets serious about solar again," he said.

McCausland agrees and defends the original gamble.

"At the time, everyone was saying, 'We're going to run out of oil and gas.' I was truly convinced that by the turn of the century, we might be out of oil," McCausland said. "At that point... you'd better have something up your sleeve."

Buried Trees Preserve Dunes

FLAGLER BEACH, Fla. (AP) — For the third consecutive year, volunteers here collected discarded Christmas trees and used them to help preserve miles of sand dunes threatened by erosion.

In a community improvement program sponsored by R.J. Reynolds Industries, members of the Future Farmers of America rounded up some 500 trees and partially buried them in eroded areas to help anchor the sand and protect the dunes from high winds and hurricanes.

"The trees disappear under the reconstructed sand dunes," says Jim Galvin, an FFA advisor. "Within a few years, no one can tell they are there."

Swaggering U.S. Sailor On Display

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer
NORFOLK, Va. (AP) —
The American sailor has quite a reputation to live up to.

He's cocky, handsome and always gets the girl. He spends a lot of time on the town while in port, swaggering along in his bell-bottom trousers, listening to music and dancing. Occasionally he goes into battle to nobly defend his country.

This image is captured in an exhibit called "The Sailor 1930-1945" on display through March 13 at the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk's Ghent neighborhood.

The display, which marks the 50th anniversary of the art museum, was put together by Thomas W. Sokolowski, the museum's curator of European painting and sculpture.

He spent about nine months researching sailors in paintings, recruiting posters, cartoons, advertisements and photographs.

"The sailor that sort of evolved was someone who was terribly handsome, chiseled to the degree of being a sort of Greco-Roman god, very, very lean, always white, never ethnic, never black, and almost never shown doing sort of the occupation of a sailor, fighting or pulling ropes," he said, "but rather shown enjoying themselves."

Army infantrymen, airmen and Coast Guardsmen were "always shown fighting, shown with bandages and bleeding and dirty and uniforms ripped, very frequently shown dead," Sokolowski said.

He suggests the reason for the contrast may be the enduring romance of the sea, especially strong during the bleak days of the Depression.

"Doctors, lawyers, businessmen, stockbrokers ... were no longer models. They were jumping off of buildings," he said. "So who did the world have to look to?"

And in the current recession, Sokolowski said the Navy man is still a hero to the public, citing the 1982 film, "An Officer and A Gentleman," which portrayed the training of a Navy flier.

"These kind of mythic, romantic, grand, heroic things are coming up again," Sokolowski said. "We start to think in similar ways when times are similar."

Sokolowski said the exhibit is the first to examine the sailor as hero.

The museum staff came up with the idea as a way to strengthen ties between Navy-oriented Norfolk and the city-funded museum.

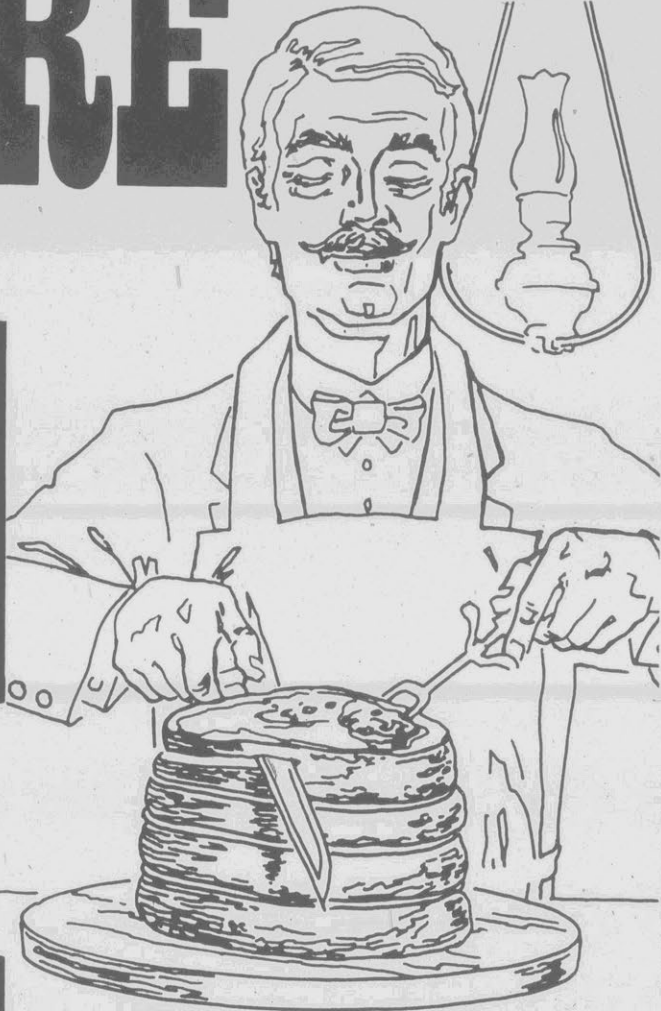

"We wanted something that would be popular to bring a lot of people in," Sokolowski said. "What more appropriate thing than to do something that has to do with the sailor in Norfolk, which is the largest Navy town in the world?"

Sokolowski gathered the works from art, history and Navy museums and private collections.

The exhibit of nearly 200 works ranges from a 1943 Picasso pencil drawing of a sailor to a humorous Norman Rockwell painting of a sailor getting a tattoo.

Besides paintings, the sailor is portrayed in recruiting posters — "A Sailor Doesn't Have to Prove He's a Man" and advertisements — "Sweatin' Sailors Love These Soothing Suds."

Other memorabilia on display include sailor hats from seven foreign countries, sailor uniforms and a tattooed mannequin.

Nat'l Party Is No Factor

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer
LA NEUVILLE DU BOSQ, France (AP) — Christian Conard is running for mayor in this tiny Normandy village of 360 people. That's not surprising since he has held the post since 1936, his father was mayor for 25 years before that, and his grandfather before him.

In fact, the mayoralty of this pretty little town nestled in a forest between two river valleys has been a family affair since 1855 in what Conard says is a rare, but not unique dynasty.

But the 74-year-old mayor says he doesn't expect voters here to be sending any signals to national political analysts who are calling France's municipal elections March 6 and 13 the first national test of President Francois Mitterrand's Socialist government.

"In small villages like this,
we are not interested in political ideas," said Conard, gesturing at the town through a second-floor window in the City Hall built by his grandfather.
Manasses Conard, who was mayor from 1870 to 1911.

"I don't even know exactly the political opinions of the 11 members of the City Council.
I know their abilities. That's what's important. Being a communist or on the extreme right is not what makes us good administrators. Politics does not enter into the preoccupations of the voters here."

On a national level, most of the attention is focused on the 219 cities of more than 30,000 population, where the political affiliation of candidates is important. But of France's, 36,414 communities, more than 28,000 of them have fewer than 700 inhabitants.

"Like much of France, La Neuville du Bosq is divided in two," says Conard, a vigorous man with a gray beard and mustache. "Half is more or less right and half left. But in a town like this, you can't be an administrator for half of the community. You must be an administrator for all of it."

The first family member to run Neuville was Jean-Baptiste Avisse. Conard's great-uncle who was elected in 1855. Conard's own great-grandfather, Louis Conard, never had time to dabble in politics.

"He spent most of his life running around the world fighting for Napoleon I... He came home after the fall of the empire with nothing but four wounds and a Legion of Honor."

His grandfather, Manasses Conard, became mayor just as the Franco-Prussian War of 1870 was starting. His father, Raoul, followed and then came Christian.

"The heads of our family have always been, I say modestly, good managers who did a lot for the community over the years," Conard says, pointing to the City Hall, the school, the post office and other projects carried out by his family.

Under Christian Conard's mandate, Neuville was electrified, in 1937, and got running water, in 1960, among other things.

"What have water and electricity got to do with politics?" he asked. "It's the same for all villages of this size. They have their political feelings, sure, but that doesn't affect the municipal administration."

"In little villages like this,
everybody knows everybody, sometimes for generations."

Conard likes to tell of his family's friendship with the Guay family. Vital Guay was a friend of Manasses Conard and a city councilman. Delphis Guay was a friend of Raoul Conard and a municipal councilman. And today, Georges Guay is a friend of Christian Conard, and a municipal councilman.

"Mayoral candidates choose their electoral lists from those he feels he can work with, people who are serious. I have not changed my list of (11) councilmen for 18 years."

The mayor of a place like Neuville has to do more than administrate town affairs and sign papers.

"He must be there to help and defend his people," Conard says. "It's not really the role of the mayor, but it has become that. There are more, much more, important tasks than playing politics. I am opposed to anything that divides a village. Socially, it's bad."

Who is the next Conard to be mayor?

Alas, there is none. The Conard dynasty ends with Christian, who is childless.

Shoemaker For Clowns

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) —
It's not a laughing matter when a clown has no shoes, according to a man who specializes in making extra big brogans for performers.

Jack Haas won't start work on a pair of shoes for a clown unless he is given the order in writing. "I don't like to do that because, boy, are they fussy." He wants not only the size but also a sketch.

The shoemaker's business takes off every October after students graduate from the Hingling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus clown class in Venice, Fla.

Most of the clowns order a big version of a basic shoe, like a wingtip. But Haas remembers getting one order modeled on the scarecrow's shoe in "The Wizard of Oz," a boot 33 1/2 inches long.

First he makes an inner shoe, which fits the clown's foot. Then he adds the top portion, stuffing horse and hog hair in the toe. Finally, he glues a leather sole to the bottom.

It takes him 10 to 15 hours to make a pair of "regular" clown shoes. His minimum fee for the leather type is $100.

Haas also takes orders from Shriner clowns and from performers with other organizations. Clowns' shoes account for about half his profits.

Concur Threat Overestimated

WASHINGTON (AP) —
Former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara and former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance say $136 billion in defense spending can be cut over the next five years.

"It has been customary for years — it was when I was at the Pentagon — to overestimate
the Soviet threat and underestimate NATO forces," McNamara told a news conference here.

"The military balance today is sufficient to deter the Soviet Union," he said, calling into question contentions by Reagan administration officials that the United States is fast losing ground to the Soviets in military power.

McNamara and Vance called for decreased spending on a number of weapons, including elimination of the MX missile, B-1 bomber and proposed new chemical weapons. They urged the cuts in a letter to House and Senate budget chairmen.

A Quiet Denial To Weinberger

WASHINGTON (AP) —
Pentagon sources say Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was "very gratified" to receive a telephone call from Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens denying a report he had pictured Weinberger as being pro-Arab.

Pentagon officials close to Weinberger said he received the personal assurance from Arens, who claimed the report by Israel Radio was untrue.

'Book 3' On Jean Harris

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Harris was a "middle-aged Sleeping Beauty" when she met Herman Tarnower, but her sweet dream of romance soured when she had to tolerate his "lollipop" affairs, says a new book on the woman convicted of killing the Scarsdale Diet doctor.

"If you're really in love with someone, and he finds himself a little lollipop, a little Tootsie Roll, and that's what he wants — what do you say?" Mrs. Harris said. "I thought I was handling it rather elegantly by being cleverly snide..."

Shana Alexander's "Very Much a Lady" is the third book on Mrs. Harris to appear since the highly publicized 1981 trial but it is the first to have her cooperation.

Ms. Alexander interviewed the woman many times and says they are now friends. Her book, to be published March 30 by Little, Brown and Co., provides new details about Mrs. Harris, now serving 15 years to life in prison for second-degree murder.

The book tells how Mrs. Harris, 59, has adapted to her new home. The pink jacket she wore when she shot her lover is allowed to remain as a rolled-up bed rest in her cell, and she has turned her prison shirts into preppy button-downs by re-sewing the collars and adding pearl buttons.

Peace is new to the former girls' school headmistress. Her 14-year affair with Tarnower was evidently a tortured battle with her own sexual double standards.

But she learned long ago to control her emotions. As Jean Struven growing up in Ohio, almost anything could make her cry. The only way she found to hold back the tears was to sing a song to herself in her head. She tried folk songs, show tunes, even hymns.

At her wedding to James Harris, a carburetor salesman she later divorced, Mrs. Harris sang the lyrics to herself throughout the ceremony. The song became her secret weapon.

"She got so good at it that ... she was able to sing the song in her head and carry on a conversation at the same time," Ms. Alexander says.

The proper, mannered headmistress was 43 when she met Tarnower, a lifelong bachelor she saw as wealthy, sophisticated and a "wonderful snob."

Mrs. Harris said Tarnower — who would make a housecall for a bee sting if the patient was rich enough — once told her, "If you want to own a rich man, save his life and don't send him a bill."

But it was his womanizing, not social climbing, that hurt.

In Tarnower's world of sexual freedom, the old-fashioned Mrs. Harris was a "middle-aged Sleeping Beauty" unable to adjust her values to his, the author says.

Mrs. Harris finally told her lover she would tolerate his infidelities and that he need not worry about her "rather serious case of love" rubbing off on him.

"We've pretty much established that it isn't catching anyway," she said bitterly.

Putting on a front was easy for a woman with the magic song, and tears never came in public. But she carried on.

"I think there are probably many women who spend their lives crying themselves to sleep and get up and are very jolly and funny the next day," Mrs. Harris said later. "You just don't talk about it."

The author says Mrs. Harris allowed herself to be a mistress to restore the sense of womanhood she lost as a working mother.

As the head of school and family, Mrs. Harris was boss of "every aspect of her life" except love and welcomed Tarnower's domination, the author says.

"The biggest attraction Herman Tarnower ever had for me was that he never asked my opinion on anything!" Mrs. Harris once exulted.

On March 10, 1980, Mrs. Harris shot her lover four times in the bedroom of his Purchase, N.Y., estate. She said she tried to kill herself.

JEAN HARRIS

With no chance for parole from the Bedford Hills Correctional Facility until 1996, Mrs. Harris pins her only hope for freedom on a request that the U.S. Supreme Court hear her appeal.

Puzzled and perhaps afraid of close friendships between women, Mrs. Harris remains a loner, the author says.

She likes to read and write in bed propped up against her old pink jacket beneath a sign that says "To live is to suffer; to survive is to find meaning in suffering."

"What still makes it easy to be here is that if I get out of here — I don't have a home," Mrs. Harris told the author. "There isn't any place I'd rather be. There is no place I belong on the outside."

Games Train Supervisors

HOUSTON (AP) — A roll of the dice, penalties assessed in funny money and reprimands from a computer terminal are all part of a game that teaches the fine art of running an amusement park.

The Monopoly-like board game seemed the answer to how to train 70 new supervisors a year at the Astroworld theme park, said Mike Glennan, director of administration.

Players landing on a numbered square on the board must answer a question in one of four management areas — motivation, communication, delegation and human relations. The answers are scored on paper and by computer.

Some squares carry penalties, such as "Employee walks off job" or "Employee violates grooming code," which cost the player $20 in phony money.

Others pose supervisory problems and give a choice of answers.

A correct answer is rewarded with a modest computer beep of "yes," Glennan said, while an incorrect answer gives a conspicuous and embarrassing "wrong."

The whole game addresses problems and situations that would take them (trainees) four or five years to encounter in actual experience," Glennan said.

Loses Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — H.R. Haldeman, chief of staff under President Nixon, has lost a claim that the government owes him monetary damages for the seven years that officials held his personal diary.

U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn has ruled that Haldeman "only has himself to blame" for the delay in returning copies of his hand-written and taped materials. Penn said Haldeman could have copied the material before it was taken by the government and that he further delayed its return by renouncing ownership of the diary.

Some People Ready To Move Back To 'Love Canal'

By BEN DE FOREST
Associated Press Writer
NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Before Times Beach, Mo., there was Love Canal. To many Americans, the name conjures up images of buried industrial poisons contaminating school playgrounds and family homes — a homeowner's nightmare.

But today there are people who want to move back in — to buy the vacated homes in what once was a quiet, middle-class section of this upstate New York community.

Approximately 250 people have left their names with the office of the state-run Love Canal Area Revitalization Agency which now owns most of the remaining homes in the area.

They've heard about the health hazards that officials say exist in the Love Canal neighborhood where chemical wastes were dumped for more than a 20-year period. Even so, they are interested in the homes. Some want to buy as an investment and rent to others. Many say they just want to buy a house to live in.

Joseph Abbott of nearby North Tonawanda says he would like to move into a three-bedroom house with his wife and their three daughters. The Abbotts once lived at the Love Canal, and he played in the neighborhood as a youngster.

"I don't think there's anything wrong with the place," he said. "I see people down there. I see the grass growing."

Richard Morris, the head of the revitalization agency, says people who inquire about Love Canal property ask few questions about the environment.

"They drive in here and they look around and they say, 'Gee whiz, I don't see anything wrong with this place. I don't see any dead bodies. I see dogs and kids, and they're still alive and breathing.'"

Morris came to Love Canal on loan from the state Department of Transportation's real estate division. He moved himself, his wife and two teen-age daughters into a home only 100 yards from the old dump.

"I didn't think it would look effective if I lived in some other community," Morris said. "The day I moved in a man rode up on a bicycle and said, 'I want to buy that house across the street.'"

When the dump was declared a health hazard in 1978 after chemicals began oozing to the surface and people complained of illness, the state bought 237 homes on streets next to the dump and moved the families out. Those homes have since been destroyed. The only exceptions are the homes of two families who refused to leave.

People owning 555 other homes in a 10-block area around the dump were given a chance to sell under an expanded government program begun in 1980.

So far, more than 400 families have sold their houses to the agency. Left are 98 other families; 49 reside in a federally subsidized housing development and 19 others occupy senior citizen apartments.

The revitalization agency now hopes to sell the $15 million worth of homes that it bought. The agency paid $7,500 to $90,000 for the homes, Morris said. The average price was $35,000.

In the Missouri case, the federal government offered earlier this week to purchase the homes and businesses of all the residents of Times Beach which was contaminated by the toxic chemical dioxin.

Last spring, federal health officials concluded that — based on Environmental Protection Agency data — the Love Canal neighborhood was as safe to live in as many other industrial areas of the nation.

Excluded were the two streets next to the canal where nearly all the homes were demolished. And the authorities said the dump should be made more secure from leakage by placing a sunken concrete wall around the site and capping the dump with another thick layer of clay. Some work on that project is under way.

But several public officials are unsure about moving people back. New York's two senators, Alfonse D'Amato and Daniel Moynihan, recently called for another federal look at potential health hazards.

State Attorney General Robert Abrams, who has filed a lawsuit against the former dump owner, Hooker Chemical Co., demanding that it pay cleanup costs, is threatening legal action against the revitalization agency if it tries to sell homes. He wants a full-scale health study.

Morris says he believes the neighborhood is safe and the agency is anxious "to recover that part of the area that is recoverable."

According to the agency's lawyer, Morris said, a simple environmental study is all that would be needed to ensure the area is habitable.

Gail Feeley of Niagara Falls said she and her husband became interested in the area last spring after the EPA report declared the area habitable, she said.

"I would go by their (the EPA's) standing," she said. "If they don't know, nobody else is going to know."

Greg Stenzel, who has lived in another section of highly industrialized Niagara Falls, is also interested in a home there.

"The way times are right now, I can't afford to get myself a $40,000 or $50,000 house," said Stenzel, who has a 5-year-old child. "And because Love Canal is a federal disaster area they're not going to blast you with high taxes. I would expect tax concessions and lower interest rates."

Find Dieters Need Support In Effort

CHICAGO (UPI) — For dieters to succeed, they need help from family and co-workers, a new survey shows.

The sociological study of working women was published recently in the Journal of The American Dietetic Association.

Even women who want to control their weight and who are well-informed about nutritional ways to do it are still likely to fail unless they get solid support to change poor eating habits, the study showed.

It focussed on 100 women who said their families were all talk and no action when it comes to helping them shed excess pounds.

More than half the women questioned are working mothers whose families prod them to diet and even scold them for not losing weight.

They said family members undermine their determination by bringing fattening foods home and demanding they cook high-calorie meals for non-dieters in the household.

The research was conducted by Ann A. Hertzler, a registered dietitian at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Blacksburg, and Robert S. Schulman.

"You've got to have support — somebody to talk to who understands," Ms. Hertzler said. "I've heard so many people say, 'If only my husband would eat broiled fish, too.'"

right on his house and hopes to buy another house in the chemical dump neighborhood. (AP Laserphoto)

World Unprepared For Big Waves Of Migration

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Assam and Nigeria, settings for human tragedy and trial in recent weeks, are only two of the stopover points for a many-tongued, multi-colored nation of migrants on the move around the world.

Each day, 1,000 or more Afghans come out of their rugged highlands into Pakistan. Every day, perhaps triple that number of Mexicans splash or scramble across the U.S. border. Young men from the dry savannah pour into Africa's port cities. Uncounted columns of Colombians file down forest paths and into the Venezuelan oil country.

The world is often unprepared for such flash floods of humanity. The episodes in India's Assam state, where Bengali immigrants were slaughtered by natives, and in Nigeria, where foreign workers were abruptly tossed out, are evidence of it.

Global migration of workers and refugees "has been growing in importance," says international economist Jagdish N. Bhagwati.

"In the 1980s and 1990s it will not just be an important item on the human-rights agenda but will doubtless emerge as a major issue in the management of the world economy."

Bhagwati, head of the International Economics Research Center at New York's Columbia University, proposes a "code of conduct" to protect this stateless nation and regulate its flow.

Such novel ideas are expected to be discussed at a meeting of world migration experts March 21 in Tunisia, a preliminary to a U.N.-sponsored world population conference next year in Mexico City.

The United Nations' own specialists sound concerned.

"The movement of labor across national boundaries has assumed very large proportions," the U.N. Population Division wrote in its latest monitoring report. "... What the long-term consequences will be ... is imperfectly known."

FEWER REFUGEES ADMITTED INTO U.S.

If they were a nation, the world's migrants would be one of the biggest — possibly equal to an Egypt or France.

The United Nations puts the number of migrant workers at 20 million worldwide, and refugees at 8 million to 14 million.

But U.N. population-watchers acknowledge these figures are probably on the low side, and the true totals may be many millions more.

Equally uncertain is the impact of the current world recession on migratory movements.

It apparently has speeded up one of the biggest cross-border currents — of Mexicans into the United States. The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service reports catching 25 percent more Mexican "illegals" today than a year ago.

But at the same time the economic slump is believed to be shrinking demand for foreign workers in the Arab oil states.

There have been three great flows of migratory labor in recent years: from East Asia and North Africa into the Middle East oil empire, from Latin America into the United States, and from the West African interior to the fast-growing coastal strip.

Here is a look at the biggest concentrations of migrant workers:

MIDDLE EAST — A total of 3 million documented foreign workers, from engineers to hod carriers, have been counted in Saudi Arabia, Libya and five other oil-exporting countries. Many laborers are from Pakistan, India and the Philippines. The number of "illegals" is unknown.

UNITED STATES — The official estimate of undocumented aliens is 3 million to 6 million. Other estimates are higher. There are 5 million documented aliens as well.

WESTERN EUROPE — At least 6.6 million foreign workers and 4 million other aliens, legacy of mass worker migrations of the 1960s.

VENEZUELA — The oil boom of the 1970s drew migrants, mostly illegal, from Colombia and other Latin American countries. Estimates vary widely, from 1 million to 4 million.

IVORY COAST — Now that Nigeria is emptying itself of foreign migrants, Ivory Coast is the strongest West African magnet. About one-quarter of the work force of 3 million is foreign, largely from Upper Volta, Mali and Guinea.

MALAYSIA — This oil-producing, fast-industrializing Asian land is estimated to have one million illegal aliens, many from overcrowded Indonesia.

SOUTH AFRICA — More than 200,000 men from black African states trek into South Africa each year to work in the white-governed nation's mines. Some 100,000 come from Lesotho, half that small land's male work force.

War set off the greatest human tides of recent years. As many as 2.7 million refugees have poured out of Afghanistan since 1979, some 1.5 million have left Indochina, and a million or more spilled over into Somalia as a result of Somali-Ethiopian hostilities.

Population specialists believe the drive to migrate will grow. The income gap between rich and poor nations is widening. More and more, instantaneous communications tell the world's poor about the better life over the horizon. Improved transportation networks make it easier to get there.

But obstacles may grow, too.

In the Middle East, huge numbers of foreign workers have been needed only for the initial, economy-building stage. As oil revenues decline, some in the Persian Gulf already are clamoring for a Nigeria-style expulsion of migrant labor.

In an interview, Bhagwati suggested a code of conduct that would, among other things, set standards for protecting migrants' rights in a host country, judicial-like procedures for expelling them, and global refugee-aid programs that are more automatic and better-financed.

The India-born economist, himself a migrant, insists he is no utopian. But he speculates about a day when the world community may lower its anti-migrant barriers, just as trade barriers were lowered after the trade paralysis of the Great Depression.

"Perhaps after another cataclysm, the human conscience may be aroused and we may shift to a different kind of ethic," he said. "After looking inwards, we may say, 'Look, we should have reasonably open borders, milder regulations.'"

FOCUS

"Green" Power

This weekend, West Germans go to the polls for national elections. The conservative Christian Democrats and the liberal Social Democrats are the major parties, but a group of activists called the "Greens" is challenging both. Petra Kelly, National Chairperson for the "Greens," has described the movement as an "anti-war, non-violent-ecological party" that opposes the continued build-up of nuclear arms. "Green" candidates have done very well in recent local elections — commanding about 6 percent of the popular vote — and they could win seats in the national government. Analysts wonder if growing support for the "Greens" will influence West Germany's commitments to the NATO allies.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is Chancellor of West Germany and head of the Christian Democrats?

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying manufacturer's suggested retail price, or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck, (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown can be ordered for you.
