Investigators Comb Apartment's Debris

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Investigators today sorted through the debris of an explosion Wednesday that killed one person and injured 12 others in an effort to determine what set off the blast at the Village Green Apartments.

The 5:45 a.m. explosion destroyed 11 units of the 800 Heath St. apartment complex.

David Martin, 21, of Raleigh, an East Carolina University student, was killed when he was thrown from his third floor apartment into a swimming pool. His roommate, Richard Seabolt from Durham, was critically injured when he, too, was thrown from the third-floor unit to the ground.

Hospital authorities said today that Seabolt was "improving" and had been upgraded to guarded condition. He had been listed as being in critical condition.

Five other people were admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for observation. One of them, Gary Elliot of Durham, was released from the hospital at 10 a.m. today. Six more were treated at the hospital's emergency room Wednesday and released.

Officials said they were satisfied at noon Wednesday that all the people staying in the demolished section of the apartment complex had been accounted for.

However, one last "victim" of the explosion was released late Wednesday afternoon. A white and gold cat bolted from the debris and ran when investigators moved debris that had held it captive for most of the day.

It was thought that the cat was Puddin', a pet owned by Melody Tetterton of Plymouth. Ms. Tetterton had asked about her white and gold cat while lying in an ambulance before dawn. She was one of those who were released following treatment at the hospital.

Greenville Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen said this morning that leaking liquid propane gas fueled the explosion. "All indications are that it came from a gas dryer. We do know the explosion came from one of the dryers. We can see the burn pattern on the floor," Allen said.

But Allen said investigators are still "looking for the ignition source."

Cooperating in the investigation with city police and fire investigators were agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said all personal property found at the scene — clothes, jewelry, books, stereo equipment — was being stored in an apartment at Village Green. He said officers were inventorying the items and said people wanting information about their property should call the police department.

The Village Green complex contained 60 apartments. City Engineer Ron Sewell said this morning that nine of the 60 apartments are still usable while 20 others "can be occupied" once the glass blown from the windows is replaced.

He said inspectors "believe structural damage" resulted to the remaining units. "We're not letting anybody go back into those units."

He said the city may require the owners to have a structural engineer inspect those units before any further decision is made. "If they are not safe, they will have to make them safe or tear them down," Sewell said.

Sixty-two Greenville fire-rescue employees were at the scene of the explosion during Wednesday morning. Rescue squads from Eastern Pines and Winterville, and men and equipment from the hospital-operated Pitt Ambulance Service were also called to the scene to lend assistance.

The Farmville Rescue Squad dispatched a crash truck to the scene and a Farmville rescue unit stood by at the city's fire-rescue headquarters. Ayden also dispatched a rescue unit to Winterville to answer calls while Winterville's units were in Greenville.

Allen said, "I have never seen more cooperation than we had yesterday — volunteer squads, Greenville, citizens — all cooperating. I was amazed at how well the people worked together with no problems."

The Salvation Army and the Red Cross also responded with coffee, soft drinks and food for the workers.

Farmville Board Studies Its Options On Planning

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Town commissioners deliberated Tuesday night about how to best meet Farmville's needs for planning and for Community Development project supervision in light of the resignation of CD Director John Downs.

Downs, who also was the town planner, submitted his resignation during the meeting. He has accepted a job in Raleigh.

R.E. Deans, chairman of the Planning and Zoning board, read a personal letter expressing the opinion that a full-time city planner is not needed by the town and that professional planning assistance might be obtained from an agency like the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute. He said he believes the Planning and Zoning Board is functioning as a group of city planners. He further appealed to the commissioners to provide more specific guidance to the planning board.

"I challenge you to address the matter and give us instruction immediately," he wrote.

A letter of appreciation for Downs was read by Lucy Rumley of the Community Development Citizens Advisory Committee.

The board voted to advertise for applicants for the community development job and they asked Downs to leave detailed writings on "where the CD project is at this point." The idea of obtaining consultative services for planning will be explored, they indicated. Consideration of whether to hire an administrative aide for the CD program was tabled, as was consideration of obtaining a computerized accounting-reporting system for planning and Community Development.

There was discussion about offers for the town to acquire the "White Line" property on South George street, several lots owned by several different property owners. The idea is for the town to purchase the lots and improve them and put them back in use.

Also discussed was the notification of the town that the N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency will increase its billing to the town by 13 percent effective in May. It must soon be decided whether this new expense will be passed on to utilities users.

Approval was given for the following:

- Entering into contract with local CPA F. Earl Umphlett for the 1982-83 audit of the town.

- Awarding the bid to Southern Wood Piedmont Co. for the purchase of 62 power poles at a cost of $4,368.

- Entering into contract with Earl Umphlett for the conducting of four Clean Water Bond audits at a cost of $1,300. Contingency funds will be used.

- Awarding the bid to Rigby Electric Co. for the purchase of 10,400 feet of triplex electric service cable

- A resolution recognizing that improvements to North Railroad Street and South

Railroad Street are located within the right-of-way owned by the Southern Railway System

- Awarding of a contract for legal services for the 1982 Community Development Block Grant program to the firm of Lewis, Lewis and

Blast Victim Honor Student

David Martin was a senior broadcasting major at East Carolina who excelled in his studies and in being with people, his professors and friends said.

DAVID MARTIN

Wednesday morning Martin, who shared a Village Green apartment with fellow ECU student Ricky Seabolt, was hurled to his death when an explosion destroyed the apartment complex laundry room served by LP gas tanks, taking 11 apartments with it.

Martin and Seabolt's apartment was directly above the laundry room. Martin's body was found in a swimming pool. Seabolt is receiving intensive care at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, following emergency surgery Wednesday to repair a lacerated liver.

Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Martin of Raleigh, was a graduate of Sanderson High School in Raleigh. He had been on the ECU honor roll for the past three semesters.

Coalition Offers An Alternative To Natural Gas Decontrol Offer

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of more than 30 House members, opposed to President Reagan's natural gas decontrol bill, today unveiled an alternative they said would hold future consumer gas price hikes below the level of inflation.

The measure is the first comprehensive alternative to the decontrol plan Reagan advanced last weekend, and sets the stage for a congressional showdown on the gas pricing issue that is likely to pit members from gas-consuming states against those from producing states.

The alternative plan would roll back gas prices to their levels a year ago and extend price controls for two years, clamping limits on future increases and requiring federal regulators to take a harder look at requests to pass cost increases on to consumers.

"Efforts to lower natural gas prices through decontrol have failed due to the unique and non-competitive nature of the industry," said Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a primary sponsor of the measure, in a statement.

Gephardt said a "broad-based coalition" of labor, farm and senior citizens groups as well as utilities have endorsed the alternative, which will be introduced later this month.

"The president's bill goes in exactly the wrong direction," added Richard Brandon of the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, which helped draft the alternative plan. "The president is long on decontrol and short on consumer protection."

Brandon's group contends the plan would keep price increases far below the 67 percent over the next four years they project for the administration bill.

Foreseeing an extended Capitol Hill struggle on the issue, congressional leaders have said they are not anxious to tackle gas pricing legislation. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said earlier this week the Reagan plan may not get much immediate attention in the Republican-controlled Senate.

Gephardt said the alternative would roll back gas prices to Jan. 1, 1982, levels. It also would extend federal price controls — due to expire for most categories of natural gas on Jan. 1, 1985, under current law — for two additional years.

The bill, to be introduced later this month, also would allow gas prices to fall if the energy component of the Consumer Price Index drops, but would limit any increases to 75 percent of the CPI. It also would limit the prices that can be charged for imported and other expensive deregulated gas.

A major difference with the Reagan plan is that the alternative would retain price controls on so-called "old" gas, which is gas discovered before 1978 that makes up about 40 percent of supplies. Reagan's bill would decontrol all gas prices, including those for old gas, on Jan. 1, 1985.

It also would cut off the opportunity for the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which administers the present system of natural gas price controls.

Two Murders Charged

A first appearance hearing for Dwight Parker Sr. of Newark, N.J., who is charged with two counts of murder in the deaths of a Grifton minister and a Goldsboro man, was held this morning in District Court.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that a warrant formally charging Parker with the murder of Anthony Ray Herring, 27, of Goldsboro, has now been served. Authorities had earlier served a warrant charging the New Jersey man with murder in the death of the Rev. Leslie L. Thorbs.

Parker, escorted back to Greenville Tuesday from Essex County, N.J., following his waiver of extradition rights, was represented in court today by Richard Powell, a local attorney.

Parker is being held without privilege of bond in the Pitt County jail. Tyson said that, in addition to the murder counts, other charges will be presented to the grand jury.

According to Tyson, no bond has been set for Carolyn Pippins, 20, of Route 4, Greenville, who is being held on charges of being an accessory after the fact of murder in the Thorbs and Herring deaths. The weighted bodies of the two men were recovered from the Tar River near Falkland last week.

Tyson said that Thorbs' 1980 Cadillac, which was recovered in New Jersey, has also been returned to Greenville and will be impounded until Parker's trial.

Most Evacuees Have Found Other Housing

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Residents of 60 apartments at Village Green Apartments, which experienced an explosion that destroyed 11 apartments Wednesday, have been evacuated and most have located other housing, Eastbrook-Village Green general manager Blanche Williams said.

Mrs. Williams said all available Eastbrook and Village Green Apartments have been filled and that other owners of housing have come to the aid of those displaced. She said the University Housing Operations office and the Off-campus Housing Office at East Carolina University have also been helpful.

Many of those evacuated from the apartment complex were ECU students.

ECU off-campus housing director Lucy Wright said her office has been able to place some students in permanent housing. "Also," she said, "people in the community have very wonderfully called in and offered to take displaced persons in their homes on a temporary basis. We have been able to place some who have hopes of moving back into their original apartments soon."

Asked about calls from worried parents Wednesday, Mrs. Williams said, "Sue Holloman, my assistant, had some calls, but not as many as we might have thought. I think most of the people involved called home themselves to tell their families what had happened and reassure them. Some parents came here, but most of them were just coming to be with their children, not to check on them."

Both Williams and Wright said they have heard of no specific plans for financially assisting the displaced persons. "I think most of these are people used to taking care of their own needs," Ms. Williams said. "Most of them that I've talked to feel very lucky to be alive and safe and are willing to do whatever they have to to relocate themselves."

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's counties will eventually have one school system apiece as local school merger decisions arise, says the executive director of the North Carolina School Boards Association.

Eugene Causby told the Triad Chapter of the Phi Delta Kappa public educators' fraternity Tuesday that reducing the number of school units from 143 to "close to 100" probably won't be accomplished in the Legislature.

"We think that ought to be a local decision," he said.

Mergers have reduced the number of school systems in North Carolina from 174 in 1960 to 143 today. Several school systems are considering a merger.

The state's Select Committee on Education had considered proposing that the state pay only one school superintendent per county and that school systems be reduced to one per county. But that idea was later dropped.

"There is still strong sentiment in favor of that, but we think it should be a local decision," Causby said.

Merger "demands a high degree of cooperation, and if people feel the decision is for their benefit there is a better chance of success than if someone told them to do it."

City units would dissolve themselves and become part of county systems under legislation being considered. The association has taken no position on that issue, he said.

Causby said his group supports a measure, introduced last Friday, that would permit school boards to select the date of their annual organizational meeting. Current law says the meetings must be in April, although few boards comply.

The group also backs a bill defining "school" as an organized school, rather than someone teaching in his home.

Pro-Social Teaching To Curb Aggression

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A Syracuse University psychology professor is calling for a many-fronted war on aggression.

Arnold P. Goldstein, director of SU's Center for Research on Aggression, notes that while the overall crime rate in the United States has largely stabilized in the past few years, it has done so at unacceptably high levels.

Two especially aggressive crimes — forcible rape and aggravated assault — continue to increase; other crimes are becoming more violent, he points out.

"The rate of violence in America's schools is staggering," Goldstein says. In a typical recent year there were 110,000 assaults on teachers, 9,000 rapes, $600 million in damage to school property from vandalism, 20 million thefts and 400,000 acts of property destruction.

Goldstein believes aggression will diminish if planning and intervention are done on several levels, simultaneously.

"Initial research indicates effective and constructive alternatives to aggression can and are being taught," he says. "Such pro-social education is not yet sweeping the country, but its philosophy, teaching methods, materials and research base are in place and its utilization is clearly growing."

"Pro-social teaching techniques and materials exist, and are being used, for teaching moral reasoning abilities to typical school children, self control and reflectiveness to impulsive children, and constructive problem-solving methods to disruptive pre-adolescents."

"Aggressive adolescents are being taught means for resisting group peer pressure and for responding constructively to failure," he adds.

"Child-abusing parents are being taught parenting skills, argumentative couples are being taught communication skills and adult prisoners are being taught negotiation and other conflict-management behaviors."

Goldstein says one arena in which pro-social teaching techniques are not being used is American television.

"It would help a great deal," he says, "if during some reasonable proportion of the average 27.6 hours per week that Johnny watches television, he would see non-violent solutions to interpersonal conflict, cooperation rather than selfishness, marital understanding and not marital abuse, empathy, caring, sharing, and, in general, the best in human behavior, not the worst."

Goldstein says pro-social teaching efforts should not go forward in isolation. "Rather than continue the hunt for the one true light, for the answer, we must begin to think and act in ways that enable us to match our interventions to the personalities, behaviors and circumstances of the individual aggressor."

"Our ideal war on aggression, therefore, would proceed simultaneously along several avenues," he says. "Pro-social teaching techniques would be one, but only one, prominent component of such an effort."

Goldstein is author of "Aggress-Less: How to Turn Anger and Aggression Into Positive Action" and co-editor of "Aggression in Global Perspective."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Like most women I have become paranoid about crime.

I lock my house every time I go to the garbage can, set the burglar alarm when I go for the mail, and lock my car every time I get gas.

To date, I have been locked out of my house 14 times, have been charged for five false alarms, and required the services of a locksmith on eight occasions to get me into my own car. This proves something. The world is safe from me!

If there's one thing that ticks me off about the whole crime scene, it's the way other people whom I don't even know have had a profound effect on my life.

To begin with, I carry around more keys than a school janitor. I have a key for my luggage, a key for the gas tank, a key for the safety deposit box and a key to the box that holds all of my extra keys.

The keys have two things in common. They all look alike and they never open what I want to get into.

Secondly, I have been forced by bad people roaming the streets to get a dog that barks whenever he hears a noise. Unfortunately, this noise can be as inaudible as the sigh of a bored cricket at 3 a.m. This will cause the dog to jump higher than the window sill. The dog never barks at strange people. Only family.

Thanks to evil lurking around every corner, I have had to install dead-bolt locks on all our doors. Dead bolts were never meant to be taken seriously as a deterrent against crime. They were originally invented to measure the limits of human stress. At one point when I could not find a key I found myself on my hands and knees signing for flowers through a dog door.

Robberies have also turned me into a crazy person every time I leave the house. The house must look like it is occupied by five or six people who work from home. There should be no exposed windows but lots of lights. No newspapers in the driveway. A car in the garage ALWAYS. A sign on the front wn that says this house will break your eardrums if you turn the door knob.

Possibly the worst thing crime has done for me is to turn me into an unlisted number in the phone book, living in a house without a name, who is afraid to open the door to a person who might need help.

Sometimes, I think the rats are winning.

Chinese Brides Seek To Live The Good Life

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
SHANGHAI, China (AP) — What the ambitious marriage-minded women of Shanghai want is a man with "52 legs" who serves in the "light cavalry" and can provide a life of "all-duck, all-chicken."

That means, at a time of rising expectations and unabashed consumerism, that brides-to-be want the good material things of life and have coined quaint, cynical phrases to say so.

On the eve of the traditional spring festival wedding season, many less aspiring Chinese brides still are satisfied with the old "24 legs." That refers to the legs of furniture needed to set up a newlywed's household: bed, wardrobe, table and other standard items.

Shanghai women, however, have upped the ante. They now want "52 legs," including a night stand, woman's dressing table, writing desk, sofa, dining table, dish cabinet, coffee table, chairs and other trappings of success.

They also want "three things that go 'round and one that ticks," or a bicycle, sewing machine, electric fan and wristwatch.

A husband in the "light cavalry" (qing qi bin) is a man with a motorcycle, and the mobility it provides is highly prized. As one young Shanghai woman said, "with a motor bike, we both can fly."

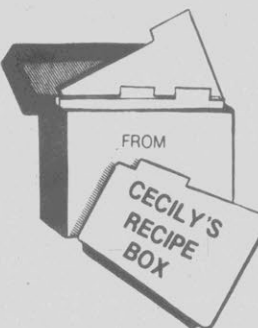

"All-duck, all-chicken" (quan ya, quan ji) refers to high quality goods and appliances. All-duck means the newlyweds must have padded jackets and quilts stuffed with superior duck down. Cotton padding no longer is good enough.

Wise young women also want a husband in the three armed services (hai lu kong) or one who has "land, sea and air" (hai lu kong).

"Sea" means he has connections with overseas Chinese who can remit him money or give him a chance to travel or move abroad.

"Land" means his family are rehabilitated former capitalists with wealth.

"Air" or space means the couple has a place to live, such as an apartment without in-laws in a country where housing is in short supply, overcrowding is a major problem and many couples don't have a room to themselves.

COFFEETIME FARE Ginger Gems & Coffee GINGER GEMS

Good also served with chocolate sauce and whipped cream for dessert at lunch or supper.

- 1 1/4 cups sifted cake flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1-3rd cup butter
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1/4 cup thick ginger marmalade (ginger pieces cut fine)
- 1-3rd cup milk
- 1/2 cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts

On wax paper stir together flour, baking powder and salt. In a medium bowl cream butter and sugar; beat in egg until blended. Stir in ginger marmalade. Add half the flour mixture and half the milk; beat gently only until batter is smooth; repeat with remaining flour mixture and milk. Stir in walnuts. Fill muffin-pan cups (each 1-3rd cup capacity) two-thirds full. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 20 to 25 minutes. Cool on a wire rack for 10 minutes. With a small metal spatula loosen edges and remove to rack to cool. Delicious served warm. Makes 12.

Dear Abby

Write Gracious Thank-You Note

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please let us know if we should send a thank-you note for a check we received as a wedding gift that was returned twice to us marked "N.S.F." (It finally cleared.)

NEWLYWEDS IN NEW CASTLE, PA.

DEAR NEWLYWEDS: A gracious thank-you note would be doubly appreciated after a double bounce.

DEAR ABBY: Having recently reached the "single" status, I am in a quandary over how to answer the question, "Are you divorced or widowed?" Either way, it is a very painful and unpleasant subject, and I don't care to discuss it.

I realize that this is a "natural" question, but I would like to know how to politely but firmly refuse to reply without offending, or provoking curiosity, suspicion or any leading questions. I am a very private person.

I do not like to lie, but I have done so in order to avoid disclosing my past. I realize this is wrong, and one day I will be caught and embarrassed.

I've tried to come up with a suitable solution, but I have been unsuccessful. Any help you can give me will be appreciated.

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You need more help than I can give you in a letter if you are unable to respond to the "natural" (by your own admission) question, "Are you widowed or divorced?"

To be divorced is nothing to be ashamed of. Neither is having been widowed. To try to sidestep this question is unrealistic and childish and is bound to provoke suspicion.

Answer truthfully. Then should a question follow that you feel is either painful or prying, respond, "If you don't mind, I'd rather not discuss it."

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, 60 years old. I look no more than 50 — at least that's what everybody tells me.

I have been a widow for two years, after being married for 35 years to a wonderful man. A friend asked me if I would go out to dinner with a friend of hers. She said he was an attractive widower, age 63, whose wife had died two years ago.

I accepted, and we found we had a lot in common — same interests, religion, etc. We laughed and talked and had a lovely evening. I really enjoyed the gentleman's company and felt so comfortable with him.

When he took me home he spoiled it all by asking if he could "stay over." Imagine! To me that was an insult. What makes a man think that because he takes a woman to dinner she will let him stay over? Lots of my women friends tell me that's all the men want these days. I just can't get over the shock!

Now I won't go out with any man. I will just live alone with memories of what men used to be — gentlemen who had some respect for women.

INSULTED

DEAR INSULTED: Please don't judge all men by the one who insulted you. There are still some gentlemen around.

DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago I purchased a pair of artificial legs for my husband. He wore them twice and then refused to wear them again. They are like new. Since that time, they have remained in the closet.

Last December my husband passed away and now I'm stuck with a pair of useless legs.

Do you know of any organization I can sell them to?

WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: Get in touch with your nearest orthopedic rehabilitation center.

DERMA PROBE

DUNDEE, Scotland (AP) — A square meter of new skin could be grown from a 2- to 3-millimeter square of human skin, says a Scottish pathologist researching new ways to treat burn victims.

Dr. Michael Faed of Dundee University here is working on a new method of growing skin in culture dishes to avoid grafting large areas of healthy skin tissue from burn victims. Efforts concentrate on speeding up the growth of skin and finding a suitable supporting membrane to avoid curling.

A skin bank is planned if a way can be found to prevent the body from rejecting donor tissue.

Training Pays Off

A disastrous explosion rocked the Village Green Apartments and the surrounding area Wednesday morning.

An entire building of the apartment complex had been collapsed by the explosion and there was certain to be casualties.

Fortunately, there have been emergency drills for such disasters. This time it was the real thing. The situation was declared a Level I condition under the Pitt County Disaster Plan by Fire Chief Jenness Allen. Chief of Emergency Medicine Jack Allison explained later that meant he was summoned to the scene and emergency medical personnel instituted a plan of classifying victims according to the severity of their injuries.

Level I designation is for a situation where 25 casualties are known or suspected. The toll did not run that high in this case but there was reason to expect that it might and Allison said the move was warranted.

The multiagency disaster drills proved their worth. Allison said they "really help people get prepared for a disaster such as this. By 6 a.m. the disaster plan was in full swing. I don't think this would have been possible if we had not had these drills."

Many agencies, including law enforcement, rescue units, fire units and medical personnel, cooperated to provide aid to those who were injured in the Wednesday disaster. It should not be forgotten that the personnel were prepared because they trained and participated in drills prior to the real need. It is an important service to our area and the worth of disaster training was proven at the scene of Wednesday's explosion.

Good Luck, Jesse

North Carolina's Jesse Helms is so conservative he usually hedges when asked if he's running for such and such political office, even if he's been building for it for the last four years. But, now, the Tar Heel senior senator has let his secret ambition out of the bag in a question-and-answer session following a speech to the conservative "Monday Club" in Washington.

Some of those in the audience sported "Jesse" buttons on their lapels. One among the listeners popped the question, would Sen. Helms be willing to run for president.

The senator responded in characteristic fashion, dodging the issue but at least making a statement: "I'm running for the kingdom of heaven."

In this race, we wish him good luck.

Why The Recovery?

NEW YORK (AP) — Economists of every stripe agree, it seems, that the recession is over. The only question, they say, is how strong and long-lasting it will be.

That's a switch from as recently as December, when many economists were pointing to government economic reports that still showed factories slowing production, stores registering sluggish sales and unemployment rising.

What changed? Here are some questions and answers to help explain why economists now believe the recession has ended and recovery has begun:

Q. Is the recession really over?

A. No one can say for sure, but there is some evidence to suggest the slump ended last December or in January. In either case this recession is likely to be counted the longest since the Great Depression, surpassing the 16-month slump of 1973-75.

Q. What is the evidence?

A. Mainly it is the turnaround in industrial output and in housing. The nation's factories had been in steady decline throughout the recession, but January was different. Industrial production, which is the government's measure of output by factories and mines, rose 0.9 percent in January. Also, factories operated at an increased rate of capacity for the first time since February 1982.

Q. What's changed in housing?

A. More people are building, buying and selling homes — mainly because interest rates are lower. Work was started on 35.9 percent more houses in January than the month before. That was the biggest monthly increase on record. Also, the number of building permits issued in January rose 15.9 percent to the highest level since September 1979 — a sign that more and more people are preparing to start home construction. And the increase in sales of existing single-family houses from December to January was a record 15.5 percent.

Q. How can there be an economic recovery when unemployment is so high?

A. If a recovery actually is under way, the unemployment rate is bound to come down in the months ahead. But a drop in the jobless rate is not a precondition to declaring the recession dead. The unemployment rate actually did decline in January — to 10.4 percent from 10.8 percent the month before — but some of that was due to a change in the way the government figures the jobless rate. More importantly, the number of people applying for unemployment benefits has been sliding in recent weeks — an indication that layoffs may be slowing.

Q. When will we know for sure that the recession has ended?

A. There is no formal mechanism for declaring a recession over. The closest sort is an official declaration of that sort is the National Bureau of Economic Research Inc., a private firm based in Cambridge, Mass. A group of eight bureau research directors, as members of the bureau's Business Cycle Dating Committee, meet irregularly to declare a start or an end of a national recession. Through an informal arrangement, the federal government uses the bureau's estimates in its official record books. The bureau's committee decided the recession started in July 1981 — but the announcement came many months after that. It has not yet pronounced the slump ended.

Who Needs Such A Victory?

WASHINGTON — When it was all over at Asculum, back in 279 B.C., and the sun was setting on the battlefield, an aide came up to General Pyrrhus. "Well," said the aide, "we whupped the Romans this time."

Pyrrhus looked at the bloody field. He had lost two-thirds of his army. He looked at his aide and uttered the sentence that made him immortal: "One more such victory," said Pyrrhus, "and we are lost."

It is an old story, but it is a story that American bankers might want to think about. The bankers have mounted a massive lobbying campaign to repeal the tax withholding law that Congress approved last year. The campaign has produced the heaviest mail on Capitol Hill since the 1978 fight over the Panama Canal. Says Carroll Hubbard, who represents the First District of Kentucky, "It's awesome."

But in the process, the bankers have taken on (1) the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, (2) the chairman of House Ways and Means, (3) the speaker of the House and (4) the president of the United States. At the moment, because they have rounded up more than half of each chamber in support of their repeal bill, it looks as if the bankers may win. If they attach their bill as a rider to some other legislation the White House sorely wants, such as Social Security, they may even push the president into a corner where he has to sign the measure willy-nilly. Victory! They will have whupped the Romans.

Under the withholding law, scheduled to become effective in July, banks and corporations would be required to treat the payment of interest and dividends in somewhat the same fashion that all employers treat wages and salaries. Periodically, 10 percent would be withheld as income tax and paid over to the Treasury. This is not a new tax in any sense. Subject to certain exemptions, income from dividends and interest is taxable income.

The trouble is, according to Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., that about 11 percent of interest payments and 15 percent of dividends never are reported on individual tax returns. The withholding law, he says, "will cut these non-compliance rates in half, and raise almost $4 billion each year."

I may be in a small minority, but I see nothing wrong with the act. On the contrary, I see much that is right. To listen to the bankers' propaganda campaign, you might suppose that the idea is to penalize millions of little old ladies in tennis shoes. Baloney! The act provides a simple mechanism by which old folks in low-income brackets may exempt themselves from the law.

The bankers also are cultivating the impression that the act will cost them "untold billions" in paperwork. This too is baloney. Banks and corporations already are required to compile and report their payments of interest and dividends. In all but the smallest banks, the transfer of withheld taxes can be accomplished in the flicker of a computer's eye.

The repeal campaign has put some odd fellows in bed together. In the House, such conservatives as Kemp of New York, Paul of Texas and Edwards of Oklahoma are co-sponsors with such liberals as Mikulski of Maryland, Simon of Illinois and Conyers of Michigan. In the Senate, Helms of North Carolina and Tsongas of Massachusetts are walking hand in hand for repeal. Both Republicans and Democrats see an opportunity to put themselves on the side of the little old ladies, which, politically speaking, is a nice side to be on.

But the act is not aimed at the little old ladies. It is aimed at the fat cats who have large incomes from dividends and interest and cheat on their income tax returns. Once this truth is grasped, the political advantage will shift.

Hart Tries To Fit The Bill

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart has his work cut out for him.

Already an underdog, Colorado's senior senator has keyed his chances for 1984's Democratic presidential nomination on an elusive electoral bloc: young voters. On paper, Hart may have an edge with this group. But circumstances make him no more likely than his rivals to turn the young and restless to his advantage.

In his announcement Feb. 17 on Colorado's capitol steps, Hart left little doubt that the "vast, unorganized majority of Americans" in his sights included many of the same voters on whom he focused as campaign manager for George McGovern in 1972. "I believe Americans... sense the passage we must make between two worlds — the world of our parents and the one we will leave to our children," he said.

Yet, in his post-McGovern reincarnation, Hart sees in a younger America a similarly up-to-date outlook: He knows that it's skeptical about politicians but yearning for someone with an honest, constructive vision of the future.

Hart, 44, has tried to fill that bill. His renunciation of contributions from political action committees (a not-so-penitent vow matched by front-runner Walter F. Mondale) befits a reputation of self-conscious independence cultivated during his first Senate term. It also caters to the public's abhorrence of special-interest groups.

Meanwhile, Hart has almost blatantly peddled himself as an ideal candidate for thinking Americans, among whose ranks everyone likes to be considered. He talks of compassion, but within limits; of a strong defense, but at the right price; of a revived industrial base, but without protectionism. He has few rivals in his advocacy of government for high technology and education — two flashpoints for a younger generation of working Americans.

Hart's faith in change and active government has inspired a significant following of campaign workers from the professional ranks, many of whom might have heeded John Kennedy's call for the best and brightest had they been old enough.

Were his battleground the Oxford Union, Hart would probably win the war of ideas in 1984. But the U.S. electoral system repeatedly rebukes the intellectual. As much as Hart may have mastered the system's technicalities, voters may ignore his futurism for the here and now.

Presently frustrating for Democratic contenders are reports of an economic upturn. In the end, everyone votes his or her pocketbook. If the rate of GNP growth and housing starts are seen to improve, the candidates must attempt to distinguish themselves on a variety of other issues where the distinctions are inevitably fuzzy. Indeed, the scramble has already begun.

Among voters in the 18- to 34-year-old bracket, NBC exit polls last Nov. 2 indicated that the threat of nuclear war, environmental protection and social issues — abortion, women's rights — were key areas of concern.

The problem is that these issues leave little room for imaginative politics. Hart has pledged to sit down with the Soviets upon entering office, but so have Mondale and Sen. Alan Cranston of California.

Hart has committed himself to a clean environment, affordable housing and equitable salaries, but so have the others.

At the same time, younger Americans are more sophisticated than most politicians give them credit for. They're drawn to realists, but not self-touting answer men; they want action but sense the complicated nature of the nation's ills. In turn, "their" issues provide flimsy stepping stones upon which to reach the White House.

While Hart has wisely lunged for the smart set, the fleeting nature of his target is likely to compound the challenges presented by Mondale's contacts and Glenn's astronomical reputation.

But if he fails to overcome the odds this time, Hart will have at least set a standard for presidential candidates. Over time, younger Americans will appreciate someone who's keeping their futures in mind — whether Hart's the one or not.

Strength For Today

The Greek writer Zenophon relates that Persian princes had for their teachers outstanding men in four areas considered to be of the greatest importance for rulers.

First, they had the wisest men to teach them wisdom. Second, the bravest men to teach them courage. Third, the most just men to teach them moral standards. And fourth, the most temperate to teach them self-control.

These virtues, of course, are just as important today as they were 2,500 years ago. Yet, in the increasingly sophisticated body of human knowledge, the importance of these primary qualities has become less evident. Wisdom, for example, is something quite different from information or technique. Courage extends farther than merely holding to one's own views against opposition in a business situation.

The philosophy of relativism often tends to erode our moral principles. Our love of freedom and individualism often degenerates into license — and when license comes, character goes.

Courts Need A Stronger Arm

RALEIGH — Imagine if 60,000 North Carolinians walked into the state's courtrooms over the course of a year and spit in the face of a presiding judge. Figuratively speaking, that is what's happening in state courts today.

Every year, 60,000 North Carolinians defy court orders to pay alimony and child support. This defiance not only creates economic hardship for the people who don't get their money, it undermines public confidence in the court system.

There are more than 100,000 child support and alimony cases under court order in North Carolina. Franklin Freeman, director of the state's Administrative Office of the Courts, told the Senate Judiciary II Committee recently that 60 percent of those accounts fall into arrears every year. Some for just a payment or two. But many involve large sums of money in which the delinquent parent has no plans to comply with the court order.

The problem arises from two sources. First, women are often afraid to have their ex-husbands dragged back into court. Second, if the delinquent parent is brought to court, the judge will rarely throw him in jail because he can't pay the money if he's behind bars.

The committee is considering a pair of companion bills introduced by Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston. The bills establish a mechanism under which a county clerk of court would automatically instigate proceedings against anyone more than 30 days late in paying their child support or alimony. The program depends, however, on a $1.6 million appropriation for automated accounting equipment the clerks need. They don't have the manpower to pull each file every month to make sure it's paid. They need a computer which can search all files and find the deadbeats.

To the degree which the new program alleviates the problem of non-payment, it will restore public respect for the courts, several witnesses said. But they warned that the bills also carry the potential for further bruising the black eye the courts got on this matter.

Money is very tight this year and despite AOC's request, the $1.6 million may not be provided by the Legislature. If the law is enacted without the necessary funding, the clerks will be unable to put the law to work, Freeman says.

"It will aggravate the problem if they give us the duty without the money ... You will have a law that the courts cannot carry out and the natural result will be criticism of the court for not doing what it is supposed to do and that criticism will be talked about at the country store and in the newspapers," Freeman said.

The bill says no county will have to enforce the law until it gets the necessary equipment. Clerks applauded that provision. But they warned the lawmakers that if it gets taken out, their new law will just end up increasing public disrespect for the courts.

"The failure to enforce its own orders brings the court system into disrepute and contempt by those under order," Freeman said in remarks supporting reform legislation in this area.

Durham County Clerk of Court Jim Carr agreed: "People are laughing at the court, people who have the money to pay."

Others testifying before the committee hit on the same topic. Carol Spruill, staff attorney for Legal Services of North Carolina, said the high rate of non-compliance is "not only an insult to the families who need this money, but it's also a flaunting of the court." Raleigh lawyer and former Judge John Parker said, "Fathers know there are no teeth behind the child support orders."

Dram Shop Liability Insurance Provision Dropped

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A House subcommittee has dropped the mandatory liability insurance and shifted the burden of proof to plaintiffs in the House version of the controversial dram shop legislation.

The dram shop portion of Gov. Jim Hunt's anti-drunken driving package holds establishments liable for accidents caused by customers negligently served alcohol when they were underage or already drunk.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, suggested the changes at the prodding of lobbyists for restaurant owners.

"This burden of proof change was requested by opponents of dram shop," he told the House Judiciary III subcommittee Wednesday. "Under this (amended bill) the plaintiff must prove negligence."

Under the version approved by a Senate committee last month the vendor would have to prove he was not negligent in serving the alcohol.

The amended bill also drops the requirement that establishments serving alcohol have up to $50,000 in liability insurance — a provision that threatened to stall the Senate version of Gov. Jim Hunt's anti-drunken driving legislation.

"That would be a business judgement," Lancaster said. But he added that the bill would revoke the permit of any establishment that lost a judgement in a dram shop suit and would not regain the license until the judgement was paid.

In addition to the changes in burden of proof and insurance, the House version calls for the driver and the vendor to equally share liability for accidents and a reduction in the statute of limitations on suits from three years to one.

The new dram shop provisions, if adopted by the full committee, could help the House version of the entire bill reach the House floor before the Senate version gets out of committee.

The Safe Roads Act, including dram shop, cracks down on drunken driving by replacing driving under the influence and other alcohol-related offenses with a single charge of "driving while impaired." The bill would impose tougher penalties, eliminate plea bargaining, raise the drinking age for beer and wine from 18 to 19 and revoke the license of anyone driving with a blood alcohol content of 0.10 or higher.

In other legislative action:
Shellfishing

The last of the oyster and clam beds closed due to high bacteria levels in late February may be open by early next week, said James A. Summers, deputy secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

But Summers told a Senate committee there was little to prevent a recurrence of the conditions that forced officials to ban the shellfish harvest.

Winds, high tides and rain churned up sediment, while rivers laden with fecal coliform bacteria from septic tanks and municipal sewer systems continued to feed into the ocean, he said.

"I feel that we are making progress in the pollution area," he said. "But under the same conditions, the chances are we'd have that same result."

The department announced last Thursday that beds from Morehead City north would be opened 48 hours later. Bacteria levels to the south have remained above normal.

Landfills

House members questioned whether a bill banning landfills for some hazardous waste would succeed because it allows the rules to be waived after a technical review and public hearing.

Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, said current law requires permits for disposing hazardous waste in landfills and that most hazardous waste could be eliminated through that process.

But Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said the Legislature needs to set guidelines to make it clear which wastes it considers most hazardous.

The House Water and Air Resources Committee will continue looking at the bill next week.

Private Roads

A bill requiring that roads serving as the only link between two communities be open to the public stalled on the Senate floor when Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, requested a cost analysis.

Controversy erupted Tuesday when the Senate Ways and Means Committee approved the bill by a narrow margin, over the protests of lawmakers who said they needed more time to study it.

Rauch, whose motion to send the bill to a subcommittee was defeated by one vote, acknowledged that his request for a fiscal note was designed to delay a vote on the Senate floor.

"We discussed for half an hour what has been in the courts for months," he said.

If the bill is passed, Rauch said, the state may end up condemning a Currituck County road which was the target of the bill. In that case, the state would have to compensate the owner, he said.

Insurance

The House Insurance Committee postponed consideration of a bill that would let companies charge lower rates for workers' compensation insurance than those set by the N.C. Rate Bureau.

Rate deviation is permitted for other types of insurance, but the law specifically prohibits it for workers' compensation.

Rep. Gerald Anderson, D-Craven, said his bill would let businesses shop for the lowest possible policy.

"Can you think of a better time than now to give businessmen some relief?" he asked. "This would create another tool for the free enterprise system."

State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram said the bill would prohibit "price fixing" and "get some real competition in workers' compensation rates for our business people."

But Rep. George Holmes, R-Yadkin, said the bill didn't guarantee deviated rates would be applied to all of a company's customers. He said he was especially worried about customers referred to an assigned risk pool.

The committee agreed to consider the bill further next week.

Contractors Licenses

For the second straight year a bill that would exempt more housing contractors from licensing failed to pass muster, this time in the House State Government Committee.

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, said his bill would exempt contractors building structures valued at less than $80,000.

"I don't think the state ought to put restrictions on businesses that make the public pay more than they have to," he said.

Contractors and representatives of the N.C. Homebuilders Association opposed the bill, saying it would make it harder to assure quality construction and police the industry.

Debate ended when James said he wasn't "all that adamant" about the bill and the committee gave it an unfavorable report.

Human Resources

The Senate Human Resources Committee approved and sent to the full Senate a bill raising from 16 to 18 the age at which day care staff members would be counted in staff-child ratios.

The panel also approved a substitute bill to certify social workers as well as bills establishing a mortuary science board and amending laws governing maternity care homes.

Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, said the major changes in the social worker substitute would allow experienced social workers to be certified without meeting education requirements and would not prohibit uncertified social workers from working.

Highway Safety

A Senate bill that would change the penalties for driving on a permanently revoked license passed the House Highway Safety Committee.

The penalty would change from a one-year mandatory prison term to a discretionary term of 30 days to two years and a fine of up to $1,000.

The panel approved and sent to the House Finance Committee a bill that would let the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles collect a fee to cover the costs of approving equipment for motor vehicles.

License Tags

The Senate Finance Committee approved a bill that would authorize renewal of license tags by mail and a $1 handling and postage fee.

The bill also would authorize the Department of Transportation to provide one-day title preparation service for a $25 fee. Ordinary titles cost $5 or $7.

Rep. Dave Bumgardner, D-Gaston, said the bill's first provision would give statutory authority to a practice that has been done for several years.

"License renewal by mail has grown to such proportions that it seems reasonable to ask people to pay for it," he added.

The one-day title preparation service would require first-year expenditures of about $60,000 for two centers, one in Raleigh and the other in Charlotte, he said, adding that the service would produce about $460,000 the first year.

Voter Registration

State Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, introduced a bill that would authorize high school librarians to register voters.

Ms. Woodard already has introduced a bill authorizing public librarians to be voter registrars.

The intent of both, she said, is to make registration more convenient while sparking interest in politics among the young.

"This is to encourage those young people just turning 18 to exercise their rights as voters, and may even encourage teachers to have more lessons on civics," said Ms. Woodard.

Limited Sessions

Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, co-chairman of the Senate State Government Committee, appointed a subcommittee to study proposed limits on the length of legislative sessions.

"We need to deal with the complex, overall question ... of how we might operate more efficiently, and save taxpayers' money," said Hancock.

The subcommittee, which was told to report to the full committee within three weeks, includes Hancock and Sens. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland; Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland; Kenneth Royall, D-Durham; Russell Walker, D-Randolph; Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, and Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery.

Budget Cuts Identified In Community Colleges

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State abortion funding would continue at current levels, but spending for community colleges could be reduced up to $6.2 million a year, legislative subcommittees voted Wednesday.

Both the Joint House-Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Human Resources and the Subcommittee on Education are looking for three categories of possible budget cuts, each equal to 1 percent of the spending in that area.

Later in the session, the full Appropriations Committee will consider whether the cuts are needed to match spending and revenues for 1983-85.

The Subcommittee on Human Resources voted 9-8 not to cut state funding for abortions by $374,500 a year as recommended by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Gaston. The move would have left $1 million a year for abortions.

"We were promised two years ago it would not be more than $1 million," Harris said. "Then we came up with $1,374,000."

He referred to the 1981-83

session, when legislators tried to limit abortion funding to $1 million a year. At that time, lawmakers were upset because transfers from welfare funds had allowed the state to spend more than $1 million for abortions in the past.

Several budget leaders acknowledged later that $374,000 a year was added to the 1981-83 abortion fund without drawing the attention of abortion opponents.

Meanwhile, the Subcommittee on Education identified ways to cut between $2.1 million and $6.3 million a year from the 1983-85 community college budget.

The budget-cutting plan would reduce administrative costs and cut back programs including those for new industry, visiting artists, adult high school students, college transfer students and apprentices.

Tom King, community colleges vice president for finance and administrative services, said the reductions would mean layoffs but he didn't know how many. King said 95 percent of the community college budget goes for personnel.

The panel rejected a budget-cutting plan that would have increased the number of students for each community college teacher, eliminating the need for 258 teachers the first year and 496 the second year.

Recruiting Free Legal Service

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Bar Association joined Legal Services of North Carolina Wednesday to offset federal cuts to the state's Legal Services system by recruiting private attorneys to represent poor clients for free.

The state-wide program, called the Pro Bono Project, will be patterned on similar programs in Mecklenburg, Durham, Guilford and Wake counties.

The name is an abbreviation of the Latin phrase "pro bono publico," which means for the public good and represents work done for free in legal circles.

Legal Services provides free legal counsel for poor people in civil cases such as landlord-tenant disputes and social services claims. Eligibility is based on a sliding scale. Single people can earn no more than $425 a month to qualify for help. The Pro Bono project is funded through a $67,500 grant from Legal Services.

New Test Of Competency

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Competency Test Commission soon will field-test new types of the reading and math competency tests which high school students must pass to graduate.

The commission on Tuesday and Wednesday reviewed new test questions in reading and math, checking them for potential cultural biases and making suggestions for revisions, said commission member Bert Westbrook, a North Carolina State University professor.

Forty years ago, khaki was synonymous with muddy foxholes, C rations and other horrors of war. The stuff wore like iron, but if you were to be seen on the street with khakis on, you were probably A.W.O.L. Now manufacturers have re-established a khaki beachhead; the clothes durability and low cost make it a winner. Khaki is a staple in any wardrobe. Cotton, inexpensive and long lasting Duck Head is the khaki for you at a price you can afford.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts sunny skies and generally mild temperatures for most of the country on Friday. Showers are indicated for Texas and southern Oklahoma. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

With no rain-producing weather systems over the South and Mid-Atlantic states today and none expected Friday, North Carolina should enjoy another dry period before the next threat of showers over the weekend.

But even with the threat of showers, temperatures will continue to be well above normal, the National Weather Service reported.

By Friday moisture will be on the increase in advance of low pressure moving into the southern Gulf of Mexico states late in the day.

Fair tonight. Low in the upper 30s and into the 40s. Partly cloudy on Friday and becoming breezy with balmy 60s to low 70s again.

Pride Of Soviet Fleet Forced To Limp Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aircraft carrier Minsk, one of the Soviet Union's most powerful warships, limped home recently after more than three months in the Indian Ocean, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The 37,000-ton Minsk was seen to be leaking oil during a troubled voyage back to Vladivostok on the Soviet Siberian coast, said the sources, who spoke on condition they wouldn't be identified.

For a time, the carrier was dead in the water as its crew worked on problems which seemed to have developed during the Minsk's 108-day cruise in the Indian Ocean, the sources said.

Officials had no information on what caused the ship's evident problems.

The Minsk and its sister carrier, the Kiev, are often cited by Pentagon and Navy officials when they warn of the steady growth of Soviet naval power and the widening reach of the Soviet navy.

For example, Pentagon research chief Richard DeLauer mentioned these carriers in his new report to Congress when he said that "the Soviets are giving ever-increasing emphasis to large, sophisticated warships."

The Kiev-class carriers have been described by U.S. intelligence as among the most heavily armed warships afloat.

In addition to about 35 Yak-38 "jumpjet" fighter bombers, these carriers are equipped with a variety of ship-killing cruise missiles and guns.

A third ship of this class, the Novorossiysk, is said to be finishing its sea trials and preparing for its first deployment out of the Black Sea. A fourth Kiev-class carrier is being fitted out, according to DeLauer.

Meanwhile, Pentagon officials have been keeping watch on indications that the Soviets are planning to build a force of even bigger aircraft carriers, which would be nuclear-powered and equipped to handle conventional aircraft.

"The evidence indicates they have begun construction of such a ship, but it is too early to determine its characteristics," said DeLauer's report.

Last year, Rear Adm. Summer Shapiro, then director of naval intelligence, testified that the bigger carrier probably will displace between 50,000 and 70,000 tons and that it is expected to join the Soviet fleet by the end of the decade.

The United States, which built aircraft carriers long before the Soviet navy began constructing such ships, has 13 aircraft carriers. The biggest of these are the 93,400-ton nuclear-powered ships of the Nimitz class. They carry about 86 warplanes.

Shuttle Liftoff Time Set Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — The launch delays caused by engine problems aboard space shuttle Challenger have forced NASA to overhaul the ship's maiden flight schedule — mandating the shuttle program's first afternoon liftoff.

The extra quarter-day delay occurs because of the beginning of spring and the dimming of certain stars.

Liftoff is being rescheduled for 1:30 p.m. EST — no matter what day the shuttle is launched. Landing will be five days later at 11:40 a.m. PST at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The shift shortens the shuttle's "launch window" substantially — from the original 4 hours to just 18 minutes — due to the need for daylight conditions at an emergency landing runway at Dakar, Senegal.

Challenger originally was set to start its maiden flight at 9 a.m. on Jan. 20. But a series of engine leaks have pushed the flight back until at least late March — and more importantly beyond the beginning of spring, which starts this year at 11:39 p.m. on March 20.

At that precise time — called the vernal equinox — the sun crosses the equator and days and nights everywhere in the world are of equal length.

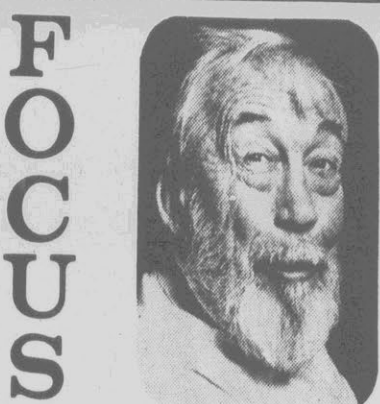

When this happens, the magnitude of millions of stars, as viewed from Earth, changes — some dimming, others growing brighter.

Aboard Challenger for this first flight is a data relay satellite, which will be ejected by the astronauts

Still Wrangling

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two teen-agers, a city, the Internal Revenue Service and others are still wrangling over who owns nearly $500,000 found in a Texas pasture in 1977.

Percy A. Garcia, one of the teen-agers who found the money, told the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday that the money should never have been taken from him and his friend, James Dean Bridges.

A Life in the Movies

Today writer/actor/director John Huston is scheduled to receive the American Film Institute's 1983 Life Achievement Award for more than 40 years of service to the film industry. Huston is known for writing and directing brooding adventure and mystery films like "The Maltese Falcon" and "The African Queen." In 1948, he directed his father, actor Walter Huston, in "The Treasure of Sierra Madre," and between them they won Oscars for best director, best screenplay, and best supporting actor. John Huston has long been a controversial figure who came under fire when he renounced his American citizenship to become an Irish citizen in 1964.

DO YOU KNOW — Who played the male lead in "The Maltese Falcon"?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Helmut Kohl is Chancellor of West Germany and head of the Christian Democrats.

Transportation Bd. Says Trucks Not Paying Share

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Transportation Department officials say their study of highway costs

O'Neill Will Run In 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr. has put to rest rumors that he might step aside by saying that he will run again for the congressional leadership post in 1984.

In making the announcement Wednesday, O'Neill was looking ahead only a year. But his close friend, Massachusetts Rep. Joe Moakley, said he thinks O'Neill will try to remain as speaker until the White House is occupied by a Democrat.

"I predict there are only two jobs the speaker would take to get out of elective office: golf pro at Eastward Ho or baseball commissioner. I don't think he's in the running for either," Moakley said.

Eastward Ho Country Club is on Cape Cod. O'Neill is an avid golfer.

"Absent that, I think you'll see that the speaker will stay in his position until and at least there's a Democratic president in the White House. He's told me in so many words," Moakley said.

O'Neill, who has been in the House for 21 years, told reporters that "there is no question that I am a candidate for speaker of the House."

Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, who is generally thought to be O'Neill's most likely successor, stood next to O'Neill for the announcement.

Turning to Wright, O'Neill said, "I'm sure Jim Wright won't mind waiting two more years."

Pressured Into New Boat Name

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A man who named his charter boat after Spam has changed his vessel's name after pressure from the manufacturer of the canned luncheon meat.

John Gerber, the once-proud owner of the M.B. Spam, said he renamed his vessel the Miss Guam after getting a letter from the Hormel Co., which owns the Spam trademark.

Hormel might have feared that his boat would get into an accident, producing newspaper headlines like "48 People Die on Spam," Gerber speculated.

Gerber said the letter, which he received in January, said only Hormel may use the name Spam. "I don't have the money to fight a big corporation," he said.

Still, Gerber thought Spam was a good name for his boat.

"Spam is something Chamorros (native Guamanians) can relate to," he said. "After all, it's been a regular part of our diet since after (World War II)."

Fewer Mishaps At Crossings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials say accidents and deaths at highway crossings in North Carolina and South Carolina are dropping, following a national trend.

In the year ending last June, 15 people died in 181 accidents at railroad crossings in North Carolina, compared to 287 accidents and 28 fatalities in the same period two years ago, state Transportation Department officials said.

In South Carolina, 129 train-vehicle collisions occurred last year, killing five people, according to the South Carolina Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Two years earlier, 179 accidents resulted in 18 fatalities in South Carolina.

The decline in accidents reflects a national trend, said Rick Harris, spokesman for Norfolk Southern Corp.

justifies higher fees on heavy trucks, but it doesn't recommend them.

The department's report released Tuesday concludes the heavier the truck, the greater burden it poses and that tractor-trailer rigs give much less to the state highway system than they receive from it. But the report adds that the multimillion-dollar gap will narrow significantly as new federal taxes take hold.

The study says there are inequities since the state's tax structure doesn't reflect the new federal taxes. Heavy trucks benefit most and cars and light trucks pay about what they get back, but medium-size trucks pay double what they should.

The Legislature is trying to find at least $62 million to match the federal highway funds the state will get as a result of the federal legislation.

Gov. James Hunt's administration, which includes the Department of Transportation, says it will stay out of the fray as much as possible. But Hunt says he stands by his 1981 recommendation to increase alcohol taxes to pay for roads.

The 1981 Legislature had requested the study, which is the first of its kind in North Carolina. Conducted by Transportation Department planner Charles Adkins, the report compares highway costs and highway payments by the three types of vehicles.

Highway costs include those directly related to a vehicle, such as the deeper pavement and wider lanes needed for big trucks, and those costs which all vehicles share equally, such as right of way acquisition.

Cars and light trucks, through state gas taxes and registration fees or federal fees and taxes returned to the state, pay about 96 percent of what they get in highway use, the report notes. Intermediate trucks pay 214 percent and heavy trucks pay 78 percent.

With the recent increase in federal taxes, the ratio for cars in trucks in 1985 would be 195 percent. The ratio would be 162 percent for intermediate trucks and 92 percent for heavy trucks.

"Are changes in North Carolina's tax schedules in order? It would appear so," the report says. "Evidence developed here suggests a shifting of (the) tax burden from intermediate weight trucks, which are generally single units, to heavy trucks (tractor trailers)."

"Our finding is that the way taxes are being collected now, if you want to get 100 percent equity, some changes are in order," Adkins said.

Although the report did not translate the "inequities" into dollars, even a modest change would represent millions of dollars, considering the size of the $550 million Highway Fund.

Adkins, who wouldn't disclose how much the fee for heavy trucks would have to be increased to create across-the-board equity, said only that it would involve "hundreds of dollars" per truck.

A maximum size truck of 79,800 pounds pays a $923 registration fee in North Carolina. Under the new federal legislation, truckers already will see their federal fees rise by from $240 to $1,600 by 1985.

Elbert L. Peters Jr., executive vice president of the North Carolina Motor Carriers Association, the state's trucking lobby, he said such studies miss the forest for the trees.

"We have some strong concerns about it," Peters said.

He said it was unfair to single out any part of the transportation system, but added that what truckers pay is equitable given the services they provide.

New Design For Burger King

NEW RESTAURANT ... An artist's sketch illustrates the type of facility Burger King will

Burger King has set a May target date for the opening of a new restaurant at the corner of East Greenville Boulevard and East 10th Street, across from Hastings

Ford, the Atlanta-based company reported.

Paul Meek, a spokesman, said the new restaurant will be operated by Danny Brew, who also holds the franchise for the present Burger King facility at 321 Greenville Blvd.

Meek said the restaurant will be built on the tract where the Speight family home is now located. He said the present occupant is going to build a new home on a lot adjoining the Burger King site and it is hoped the build at the corner of Greenville Boulevard and 10th Street, across from Hastings Ford.

Speight home can be moved and salvaged.

Brew said the house has been sold and the new owner will decide soon on the disposition of the brick structure relative to relocation or demolition.

According to Brew, the new restaurant will be housed in a brick structure with a wooden facade on the front. He said the building will be slightly longer and generally different in appearance than the present restaurant. "If it didn't have a Burger King sign on it, you wouldn't recognize it," he said.

Seating for 75 customers and facilities for drive-through service, which Brew said represents 50-55 percent of the restaurant's total business, are included in the plans.

Access points will be located on both Greenville Boulevard and 10th Street, Brew said, pointing out that center turn lanes on both streets should help facilitate entering the restaurant's parking area.

Brew said Burger King will be hiring approximately 60 employees to handle restaurant operations.

Venture Construction Co. of Atlanta will build the facility, Brew said, adding that the firm hopes to get started around March 18 and complete work May 23.

Tuition Credit Ignites Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has a real fight on his hands over tuition tax credits for parents who send their children to private schools, opponents say.

"His plan ... would create a financial nightmare at a time when the federal government is dealing with a $200 billion annual budget deficit and our public schools are dangerously under-supported," Grace Baisinger, head of the National Coalition for Public Education, told a news conference Wednesday.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., noted that when a tuition tax credit was proposed several years ago, it had 53 Senate co-sponsors. "We had to come from behind to beat it," he recalled, and predicted it would be defeated again.

The coalition presented Hollings with petitions it said were signed by half a million persons opposing the Reagan plan.

The proposal would provide a 50 percent tax credit for private elementary and secondary school tuition up to $100 in 1983, $200 in 1984 and $300 in 1985.

"It is of great importance to the continued vitality of our society that parents have a meaningful choice between public education and the many forms of private education that are available," Reagan said in proposing his plan.

Parents "who for whatever reason are not satisfied by the education available in their local public schools should be able to seek an education better suited to their children elsewhere," he said.

Anne Graham, assistant secretary of education for legislation and public affairs, said, "President Reagan has carefully designed his proposal for tuition tax credits to help the low- and middle-income parents whose children constitute the substantial majority of private school students."

"The proposal is designed to help the inner city black and hispanic families whose children are increasingly attending modest private schools at tremendous cost to their family budgets," she said in a statement.

"The president is determined to provide the same schooling options to the working families of America that are currently enjoyed by the wealthy."

But Hollings said Reagan "has revitalized a proposal that would benefit few at the expense of many, violate the clear meaning of the First Amendment, and add a sea of red ink to a budget already drowning our economy."

New Award For Garrett

D.D. GARRETT

D.D. Garrett of Greenville was one of four people in the nation honored at the 5th annual Recognition and Awards Banquet of the Ministers' and Laymen's Association of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

Garrett is a member of York Memorial AME Zion Church in Greenville where he is president of the Laymen's Council and a member of the trustee board. He is also president of the ministerial and laymen organization's Convention on Christian Education.

The awards banquet was held recently in Houston, Texas.

Two Collisions In Early Hours

An estimated $2,050 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police early today.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 2:41 a.m. collision at the intersection of Charles and 11th streets, involving cars driven by Paul Reginald Schleicher of Langston Trailer Park and Susan Arlene Mardant of 300 N. Oak St.

Police reported Ms. Mardant was injured in the collision and charged her with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Damage was estimated at $700 to each of the two cars.

Cars driven by Peter Edward Lavin Jr. of 301 Allendale Road and Clifton Reddick Jr. of 507B Darden Drive collided about 12:40 a.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Skinner Street.

Damage from the collision was set at $350 to the Lavin car and $300 to the Reddick vehicle.

Charge Man In Brother's Death

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) — Aldostin Byrd, 35, of Smithfield has been charged first-degree murder in the shooting death of the suspect in his brother's death, police say.

"It appears to be a case of 'You got my brother and now I got you,'" said Smithfield police chief J.N. Pearce.

Byrd was charged Tuesday in the slaying of James Edward Ferrell, 46, of Smithfield. Ferrell was shot Tuesday morning while working at a garage bay. Byrd remains jailed without bond.

Byrd's brother, Walter James Byrd, 46, also of Smithfield, was shot in the face late Monday night outside the home of an unidentified Princeton woman. He later died at the hospital.

Ferrell had been charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill in connection with the shooting of Walter Byrd.

Move Faster

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon official says Soviet troops are already using western inventions not yet in use by American forces.

Richard N. Perle, assistant secretary for international security policy, said that because of the emphasis the Soviets put on military industry, they are often able to use new inventions faster than the west.

The Pentagon has Soviet military equipment "that incorporates western micro-electronics, that is in the field performing military functions today, while we have yet to field comparable equipment," Perle told the international policy subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Design Chosen For Shad Festival

A design submitted by Karen Podeszwa of Greenville has been selected for the cover of the Gritton Shad Festival souvenir brochure.

Janet Haseley, the festival's publicity chairman, said the four-color design shows two cannons firing a salute with the 1983 theme, "Double-Barreled Celebration: 100 Years of Progress and Growth," in a puff of smoke.

Nine other designs were submitted. Over 5,000 copies of the souvenir brochure will be distributed before the April 13-17 Shad Festival.

Mrs. Podeszwa is employed by Morgan Printers in art and layout and teaches calligraphy at East Carolina University.

North Pitt To Compete In Quiz Bowl

North Pitt High School's Quiz Bowl will represent Pitt County in a regional competition to be held in Goldsboro on Saturday. The single-elimination tournament involving five teams will begin at 1 p.m. at the Wayne County Public Library at 1001 E. Ash St.

North Pitt team members Judson Joyner, Woody Leggett, Renee Oakley and Ken Whitehurst won Sheppard Memorial Library's Pitt County Quiz Bowl in February.

First and second-place teams in the eight regional competitions across North Carolina will advance to state finals in Raleigh on March 26.

For more information, call Sheppard Library at 752-4177.

Student Participates In Conference

Juli Yongue, a senior at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, was one of 12 students that took part in the Harvard National United Nations Conference in Boston.

During the conference, students "represented" 88 countries in the United Nations. Students had to research their countries' positions on current issues in order to take part in debates and discussions.

Ms. Yongue, a graduate of St. Mary's College in Raleigh, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Yongue of Greenville.

Membership Items Being Distributed

The Pitt Greenville Chamber of Commerce is in the process of distributing its 1983 Program of Work, insert for membership plaques and new door decals for chamber members.

Members will be asked to display these items to symbolize their interest in helping build a better Pitt County.

Program Is Postponed

A program entitled "Harlem Heyday," sponsored by the Greenville Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Inc., originally scheduled for Friday has been postponed. The new date for the program will be announced later.

Club Conducts Fund-Raising Drive

The Moyewood 4-H Club is now raising funds for the Heart Fund and is recruiting new members.

During a recent meeting the group had Bible study, worked on their projects, had safety lessons and conducted home audits. Plans were made for attending the March 5 Lady Pirate basketball game, during which 4-H clubs will be recognized.

Driver Charged In Wreck

Kimberly Morris Nichols of Washington was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 10:29 p.m. collision Wednesday at the intersection of 10th and Williams streets.

Police said the Nichols car collided with a truck driven by Skinner Allen Phillips of Holy Brook Trailer Park, causing an estimated $900 damage to the Nichols car and $1,500 damage to the truck.

Falkland To Register Children

Registration for first graders and kindergarten students at Falkland Elementary School will be held March 30 from 8 a.m. until noon.

Children who will be 5 years old or 6 years old on or before Oct. 16 are eligible to register for the 1983-84 school year, according to Principal Judith Budacz.

Parents should bring the child's birth certificate and immunization records when registering, she said. For further information call the school at 752-7820.

East Named To Subcommittees

Sen. John East, R-N.C., has been appointed to the Senate subcommittee on Labor, the subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities, and the subcommittee on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse.

The subcommittees are under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

East said the assignments "should be useful for our state, especially for efforts to improve education and to deal with the very serious problems of alcoholism, drunk driving and drug trafficking."

East also serves on the Senate Committee of the Judiciary and on the Armed Services Committee.

Guest Ministers To Speak

Eldress Hattie Cobb will preach Sunday at 11 a.m. at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church.

Sunday at 3 p.m. Eldress Cobb and the St. Luke's FWB Church congregation will hold services at Rock Bottom Holiness Church. Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Eldress Ella Mae Hooks will preach an appreciation service at St. Matthew. She will be accompanied by the Holly Hill Choir.

Trustees Observing Anniversary

Rock Spring Free Will Baptist Church will celebrate the anniversary of its trustee board this weekend.

The observance will start tonight at 8:30 p.m. with a service led by Elder Robert Phillips and the Crisis Chapel congregation. On Friday at 7:30 p.m., Bishop Robert Gorham and Dildy's Chapel will conduct a service. A 7:30 p.m. service Saturday will be led by Elder Horace Joyner and St. James Church of Fountain. And on Sunday at 7:30 p.m., Bishop W.L. Phillips and the Waterside and Rock Spring choirs will lead the service.

Students Make Honors Lists

Four area students received academic honors at Elizabeth City State University for the fall semester.

Those included on the honor roll were Tammy A. Flemming of Greenville, Selina Pittman of Gritton and Johnnie Williams of Ayden. Vivian Ellis of Ayden made the vice chancellor's list.

Good Grammar Is A Phone Call Away

NEW YORK (AP) — You can dial R-E-W-R-I-T-E in New York City to learn how to write it right.

"Rewrite" is a grammar hotline that has been set up at York College, a senior college of City University of New York, to answer questions about grammar, punctuation and usage.

The service is available weekday afternoons, except during holidays and school vacations. It is staffed by English professors from York on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and on Tuesday and Thursday English teachers from nearby high schools field the questions.

Attached to the telephone is a tape recorder, activated with the caller's permission, to collect material for a half-hour local radio program broadcast twice a week. A log is kept of all calls and from it a faculty member selects excerpts from the tape and writes the radio script.

"Interest in REWRITE remains high," said Dr. Alan Cooper, chairman of York's English department. "College graduates who have long since paid their tuition and received their sheepskin get updated for a dime."

With calls coming as often as every 10 minutes, those seeking 30-second mini-lessons include secretaries, administrators, business executives, students and retired people, as well as professional writers with a mental block, he said.

"Calls," Cooper says,

Due to a backlog of applicants the Greenville Housing Authority is no longer accepting applications for the Conventional Program. A notice will be published when the Housing Authority will accept additional applications.

Board Endorses Vocational Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Education on Wednesday endorsed a proposal by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green that would begin a vocational education pilot program in 16 North Carolina school systems.

"The vocational program would be a combination of basic academic learning and hands-on experiences in an occupational laboratory or another similar setting," Greensaid.

The board also asked for more detailed information next month on the plan that would be tried in grades seven and eight in unspecified school systems — two in each of the state's eight education regions.

"I'm a little nervous about endorsing something I have not read," said Board Chairman C.D. Spangler, in abstaining from the vote. He and some other members said they wanted more time to study the proposal before voting.

However, other members, including James Chavis of Pembroke, said quick action was needed because of the short time the Legislature has left to meet this session.

Green's plan is expected to be introduced in the General Assembly within a week in a bill sponsored by Sen. Robert Swain, D-Buncombe.

The proposal calls for spending $1.07 million in the next two years. About 50 students from each school chosen will be involved, Greensaid.

Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, said North Carolina already spends about $7 million a year on vocational training in grades 7-12.

"This is not a new idea," Phillips said. "But if we can get $504,000 in new money (in 1983-84), that's great."

Phillips said he was not enthused by the plan "if he's talking about making 13- and 14-year-olds employable."

"To experiment with it, to put some more money into plans and equipment, that's good," he said. "We've got no problems with that."

Green, who is expected to run for governor in 1984, said last week that vocational education would be a cornerstone of his candidacy.

He told the board he hopes to curb dropouts by keeping students interested in school while giving them marketable skills.

After giving its endorsement, the board told Phillips to report at a later meeting how the program would work.

As proposed, $504,000 would be appropriated in 1983-1984, and $1,072,000 in 1984-1985.

In 1983-1984, 7th graders in two systems in each of the state's eight regional education districts would be eligible. The program would be extended to 8th graders in 1984-1985.

Chosen Prexy Of Calif. Univ.

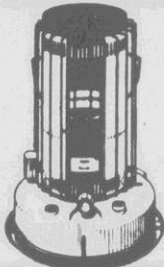

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — David P. Gardner, president of the University of Utah, has been chosen from among 250 candidates to become president of the nine-campus University of California.

Gardner, 49, replaces David S. Saxon, who departs in June to become chairman of the corporation that runs the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Part Of Estate Going To Alabama Wildlife

By GARRY MITCHELL, Associated Press Writer CHATOM, Ala. (AP) — Before she died last November, Martha Annie Jordan wrote a will that forever cares for her friends — deer, wild turkey, quail, squirrels — all creatures in her nature preserve.

A bequest of some $500,000, at least half her estate, was divided three ways: portions went to a college trust, to wildlife conservation and to her friends, Oliver Beech, 76, and his wife, Marie, to continue serving meals in the wild.

Mrs. Jordan lived humbly, sheltered by the piney woods of southwest Alabama, surrounded by wildlife, sustained by her faith in God. She was nearly 90 when she died.

Daily feedings in a field in front of Mrs. Jordan's house trailer attract scores of deer. The sound of the approaching corn-laden pickup truck is the dinner bell.

"He's an eight-pointer," Mrs. Beech said Tuesday, referring to the prongs on the deer's antlers. She tossed an ear of corn at a buck. "There's a 10-pointer buck comes here. He's something else."

"Come, baby!" she called toward the herd.

When she wasn't caring for deer Mrs. Jordan was in the trailer reading her Bible, said Mrs. Beech, 63, a constant companion who prepared Mrs. Jordan's oatmeal every morning.

"Nobody told Miss Annie what to do. Not even how to make biscuits. She loved to tell you what to do," said Mrs. Beech.

Mrs. Jordan lived alone, but sometimes entertained friends in a guest trailer or invited droves of young hunters to her camp. But poachers found themselves in "more trouble than Europe in the war," chuckled Mrs. Beech.

"She had some of the finest hunting in the world," said Wayne Hinton, principal of the Washington County High School.

Although she didn't act rich, her neighbors knew she was because she was the widow of Ellis Jordan, the largest individual landowner in Washington County.

The Jordans lived in separate houses most of their lives, but never divorced. Their lifestyles were part of the county's lore.

"They couldn't divorce because of the money," said Mrs. Beech. "He always said if he divorced, he'd probably remarry someone who'd kill him for the land."

So they lived apart and shared the wealth. He incurred the debts, she paid them. If Mrs. Jordan spent any money for herself it was usually on conservation and the hunting camp.

Part of Mrs. Jordan's trust will be disbursed as college scholarships, with a preference for students attending Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., or Alabama schools. Mrs. Jordan contributed heavily to Roberts' evangelistic association, Mrs. Beech said.

Jordan's wealth extended beyond the county borders into Mississippi and Florida, and included interest in an oil well.

The couple was not highly educated. In fact, folks who knew Jordan said he could hardly read and write, but he was good at arithmetic. When land was around $2 an acre he bought as much as he could, amassing some 70,000 acres before land got too expensive.

*The purchase of 25 roll-out carts for garbage collection from Solid Waste Systems Inc. at a cost of $52 each.

*Consideration of the town code reset for the April commissioners' meeting.

*Set a public hearing for March 16 on the preliminary design of the town common beautification project prepared by Geoffrey McLean.

*The reimbursement of fireman James Blalock for glasses broken during fire-fighting—cost, $58.50.

*That the town administrator proceed with bid procedures for the construction of additional drying bed space at the wastewater treatment plant. The funding is expected to be $75,957 through the Environmental Protection Agency; $12,659 from the N.C. Clean Water Fund and $12,659 from the town.

*A resolution supporting Amtrak service from Greenville to Raleigh and Charlotte. Commissioner John T. Walston abstained.

*The purchase of $692.92 worth of storm windows for the second story of the fire department building. These will be staff-installed.

*A budget amendment to allow for the repair of 10 aerators for the sewage plant at a cost of about $9,000.

brother, Will Adams, said he "was an easy-going guy that everybody like. He always went to class and did well at his studies and he always had a good time, too. He was very serious about broadcasting and also enjoyed intramural sports."

Carlton Benz, associate professor of drama and speech and director of closed circuit broadcasting for the university, said he considers Martin's death a great personal loss. "He was a good student and one of the finest individuals I've ever known. I had taught him and had worked with him in 'closed circuit' for the past two years. I had nothing but admiration for him. He had an ambition to excel in broadcasting and he would have."

Seabolt, who is from Durham, is a business major and is president of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, of which Martin was a member.

Author And Wife Dead

LONDON (AP) — Arthur Koestler — author of "Darkness at Noon," the widely acclaimed novel of the Stalin purges — and his wife were found dead today in what police called an apparent double suicide.

Police sources said Koestler, 77, and his wife apparently took an overdose of drugs. The sources said Koestler was believed to have been suffering from leukemia and Parkinson's disease.

Police officers were summoned to the Koestler home by a maid and found the bodies of the author and his wife, Cynthia, in separate chairs in the living room, a Scotland Yard spokesman said.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, said the maid also had found a note, the contents of which were not disclosed.

Mrs. Koestler was in her 50s.

Koestler, born in Hungary but later naturalized as a British citizen, published "Darkness at Noon" in 1940. At the time, it was heralded as the most important political novel of a generation.

he account of an old

Bolshevik arrested in the late 1930s Stalinist purges, in which more than 20 million people were believed to have perished, opened the eyes of many left-wing intellectuals in America and Europe to the realities of the Soviet Union under Josef Stalin.

The book was made into a Broadway play after World War II. In France, the novel sold nearly 400,000 copies and Francois Mauriac once wrote that it played an important role in turning the tide of public opinion against the Communists. In the literary world, the novel broke the ground for a new genre of political fiction, including such works "1984" by Koestler's friend George Orwell.

Solzhenitsyn Prize Winner

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exiled Soviet writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn has been named winner of the Templeton Foundation Prize for Progress in Religion.

Solzhenitsyn, responding to the award Wednesday, lamented that "prayers in school are forbidden even in a free country."

The announcement of the award was made Wednesday by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, one of eight members of an international panel that selected him. Solzhenitsyn did not attend the announcement.

The award was established in 1972 by John Templeton, a multi-millionaire philanthropist and financier.

Pentagon Avers U.S. Has Lead

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon report says the United States has maintained a lead over the Soviet Union "in most of the basic technologies critical to defense."

The report said the United States leads by a 15-1 margin in technologies that "have the potential for significantly changing the military balance in the next 10 to 20 years."

Dedicating New PerdueComplex

The dedication of Perdue Farms Inc.'s new poultry processing complex in Robersonville will take place at 10:30 a.m. Monday. The plant has been renovated at a cost in excess of $1 million, and will provide more than 250 jobs for local residents.

The company's president, Don Mabe, will attend the dedication ceremony. State officials scheduled to be in attendance include N.C. Agricultural Commissioner Jim Graham, Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth, state Sen. J.J. Harrington, state Rep. Frank Ballance, as well as a number of local and Martin County officials.

Perdue has a $60 million investment in industrial development in North Carolina.

If you've been driving to another city, to another airport, simply to take advantage of low air fares, Piedmont would like to make something perfectly clear. We've brought those same low, round-trip fares to your hometown airport. Which means now you won't have to spend all that time in a car. Or all that money in the air. And that, we think you'll agree, makes perfectly good sense.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading is 41.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate to short for a good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,722,000, compared to 1,810,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly again today, hitting record highs for the third consecutive session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.19 to 1,138.25 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the bull-market mood of Wall Street was heightened by Wednesday's news that the index of leading economic indicators jumped 3.6 percent in January, for its largest increase in 33 years.

The report inspired increasing hopes that the recovery from the recession would prove to be stronger and faster than most forecasters have been predicting.

Today the Conference Board, a business research organization, said its consumer confidence index registered a large increase last month.

Among the early volume leaders, Houston Industries rose 1/4 to 20 1/4, Schlumberger 1/4 to 42 1/4, and Texaco 1/8 to 33 1/4.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 4.35 to 1,135.06.

Advances outpaced declines by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 112.60 million shares, against 103.75 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index added .85 to 87.78. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.23 at 380.90.

Pleased By The Decision

WASHINGTON — Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, has expressed satisfaction with an administration decision to abide by cargo preference laws and ship at least 50 percent of the wheat flour being sent to Egypt on U.S. flag ships.

"If ever there was a situation where the cargo preference laws should apply, this is it," Jones said. "Without the U.S. government's negotiation of this contract with Egypt, and without the donation of government-owned wheat flour to American millers, this transaction would never have occurred."

The Department of Agriculture had opposed application of the cargo preference laws to this contract and Jones called for the enforcement of the statute.

"It is unfortunate that we had to fight so hard to assure compliance with the law, but I am encouraged by the ultimate decision," the congressman said.

Under the terms of the Egyptian wheat flour contract, American millers will sell Egypt 1 million tons of wheat flour over the next 13 months at rates below world market prices.

The subsidized price will be made possible by the Department of Agriculture giving free government stocks of wheat flour to the millers.

Say Imposter Is Giving 'Advice'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Some patients leaving messages for their doctors with answering services have instead been called by an imposter who intercepted radio pages.

At least 10 patients of doctors at the Durwood Clinic have been called in the past two weeks by the imposter, described by the patients as a male with high pitched voice and a southern accent.

"There's certainly a grave danger," said Dr. James Black, an internist at the Clinic.

Black said one woman who was suffering from chest pains and blackout spells was told by the imposter that there was nothing that doctors could do and that she should prepare to die.

Shortly after she talked to the imposter, her doctor returned the call and she was hospitalized in a coronary care unit for treatment of irregular heart rhythms, Black said.

Other patients have been sent by mistake to minor emergency centers or medical clinics, or otherwise given medical advice by the imposter, said Black.

East Carolina Nips Rams In 10th, 2-1

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

provide East Carolina University with a run to nip Virginia Commonwealth University, 2-1, in the season-opener for both teams.

The Pirates had scored a go-ahead run in the first inning of the contest, but their bats had been silenced until the tenth when catcher Jabo Fulghum opened the inning with a double to right. That set the stage for Hallow's game-winning single.

VCU, playing its first game under new coach Tony Guzzo, a former ECU assistant coach, tied the contest up in the fourth, using two stolen bases and a double to make it 1-1. The Rams followed that up with several threats, but the Pirates were able to get out of trouble each time and hold on until finally pushing in the fateful run in the tenth.

"Here we go again," a smiling coach Hal Baird said afterwards. "Virginia Commonwealth played a great game. I really thought that we would score more runs, but we were fortunate to get out with the win. But this was an opening game and I wouldn't have been surprised at anything."

Baird added, however, that he was a little surprised by the Pirate pitching. "The pitchers were throwing the ball all over the park and that surprised me. I really thought (Bob) Davidson was decent without his best stuff, and Chubby (Butler) did a good job for a couple of innings.

Davidson, the top returning pitcher as a sophomore, went the first eight innings, giving up six hits, walking three and striking out four. He threw a lot of pitches during those eight innings, however, going to high counts on a number of batters. Butler in two innings of relief, got the win. He didn't allow a hit, walked none and struck out one.

"Our regular position kids played well under a lot of duress (having runners on base). But we're going to have to swing the bats better. I thought (Tony) Salmond played well at second base, but he needs to be more aggressive at the plate. And we're still going to be juggling a few positions for a while too," Baird said.

"I tell you, we played our — off," Guzzo said. "I really don't think we're this good. We're young and this is my first year. We surely didn't play that well in the fall and in our practice so far this year.

"But East Carolina is the type of team that will give you a run or so. If they score four, they'll let you have three; if they score two, they'll let you have one; if they score one, they won't let you have any," he said with a laugh.

For a while there, however, it looked like Guzzo and his Rams might be making the last laugh during their Greenville visit. The Rams left runners stranded at second base in the first (on two walks) and again in the second on a single and an error.

East Carolina, meanwhile, pushed over a run in the bottom of the first to take the initial lead. With two away, Todd Evans drew a walk and Winfred Johnson singled off the glove of the diving second baseman. David Wells then doubled to right, easily scoring Evans. Johnson, trying to score a second run, was thrown out at the plate.

In the third, a key play occurred that set the tone for much of the rest of the afternoon. With one down, Hallow lifted a fly to short left. VCU's Tom Fahrney dropped the ball and let it get by him. Hallow, seeing Fahrney chasing the ball, dashed on to second, but the fielder was able to get to the ball and easily throw out the runner at second.

Evans then followed with a single to center, in which the ball again got past the fielder, allowing him to go to second. "Hallow probably could have scored from first on the play," Baird said. "We tell them to pick up the fielder when they round first and if he's going back, to be aggressive and go for second. But I don't believe he realized that the fielder was playing so short at the time and didn't have that long a throw to make."

At any rate, the Pirates didn't get another runner as far as second until the ninth inning.

Meanwhile, VCU came up with the tying run in the top of the fourth. With one down, Don Phillips reached on an infield hit, and courtesy runner Terry Summerfield stole both second and third. Rodney Wright then followed with a double to right center, easily scoring Summerfield. Vernon Word followed with an infield hit, putting runners at the corner, but a pop-up ended the threat.

VCU's Kenny Grant opened the sixth by reaching on an error and was sacrificed up, ending up on third on an infield out. In the eighth, Chuck Hiter singled with one away and moved up on Phillips' infield hit to deep short. Both runners then

Roanoke Girls, Boys Win District Openers

AHOSKIE — Roanoke High School's boys and girls, winners in the Northeastern Conference, took their first step toward the District 1 3-A basketball finals last night with wins in the first round. The Roanoke boys downed Warren County, 63-43, while the girls rolled to a 58-41 win over Northampton-West.

Warren eased out into the lead after one period of play in the boys game, gaining a 14-12 advantage at the end of the frame. But Roanoke quickly established who was in command in the second period scoring 17 points while holding Warren to just seven. That left the Redskins with a 29-21 lead at the half.

Roanoke again scored 17 points in the third period, five more than Warren could manage. That left Roanoke in charge, 46-33. The Redskins then finished off Warren with a 17-10 advantage in the final quarter.

Roanoke's scoring was led by Greg Everett with 17 points, while Glen Daniels had 15, and Ricky Highsmith and James Duggins each had 12. Warren County was paced by Darrel Jefferson and Joseph Gibbs with 10 each.

Roanoke's girls eased out into a 10-6 lead after the first period of their game, then zoomed away from Northampton-West in the second quarter. In that, Roanoke held a 20-9 advantage, building up a 30-15 lead at the half.

Roanoke then held a 12-10 advantage in the third period, leading 42-25 going into the final period. Both teams scored 16 points during that frame.

Gloria Duggins led Roanoke with 18 points, while Sheila Howell added 12. Teresa Green had 11 and Jerry Squire had 10 to lead Northampton.

Roanoke returns to action on Monday in the semifinals against opponents yet to be decided. That will come to night when Plymouth and Southeast Halifax meet in a girls' game, and Northwest Halifax and Bertie play in the boys' contest. The first round ends on Friday, with Tarboro and Northampton-East meeting in a girls game and Plymouth and Northampton-West meeting in the boys. The other semifinal will be Saturday and the finals will be Wednesday.

The Lady Cougars now face North Lenoir tonight at 8:30 while the boys team faces Farmville Central tomorrow at 7:00. D.H. Conley will play the winner of tonight's West-Craven-North Pitt game tomorrow at 8:30.

Gatlin, headed for the University of Maryland, scored 23 points in the first half as the Vikings surged to a 43-26 lead. The Vikes built the lead to 20 in the third quarter before Ayden-Griffon closed within 55-47 by the end of the third period. The Chargers got as close as four before the Vikings subdued the challenge in the final period.

"We didn't do a very good job on the transition," Murphrey said. "We didn't hit the boards and that took us out of it. We also didn't get back on defense and we practiced that hard yesterday."

D.H. Conley controlled the rebounding department by a decisive 30-15 margin, including 17-4 in the first half. The Vikings also shot 53.7% from the floor, hitting on 29 of 54 shots.

By ALAN WOOTEN
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — "When Keith gets his hands on the ball, something good is usually going to happen," D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh said.

"A player like that is an offense within himself," Bob Murphrey said.

Those were the comments on D.H. Conley's Keith Gatlin after he scored 37 points, pulled down 12 rebounds, and dished out 7 assists in leading the Vikings to a 75-60 victory over pesky Ayden-Griffon in the first round of the District II 3-A Tournament being held at D.H. Conley.

"He has such talent, he can do it all," Marsh said. "He really doesn't have an overall weakness. He's not as strong as he's going to get, though."

In other games last night, SouthWest Edgecombe's defending State 3-A Champion girls team ripped Havelock, 62-36, and the Cougar boys team edged by West Carteret, 50-49.

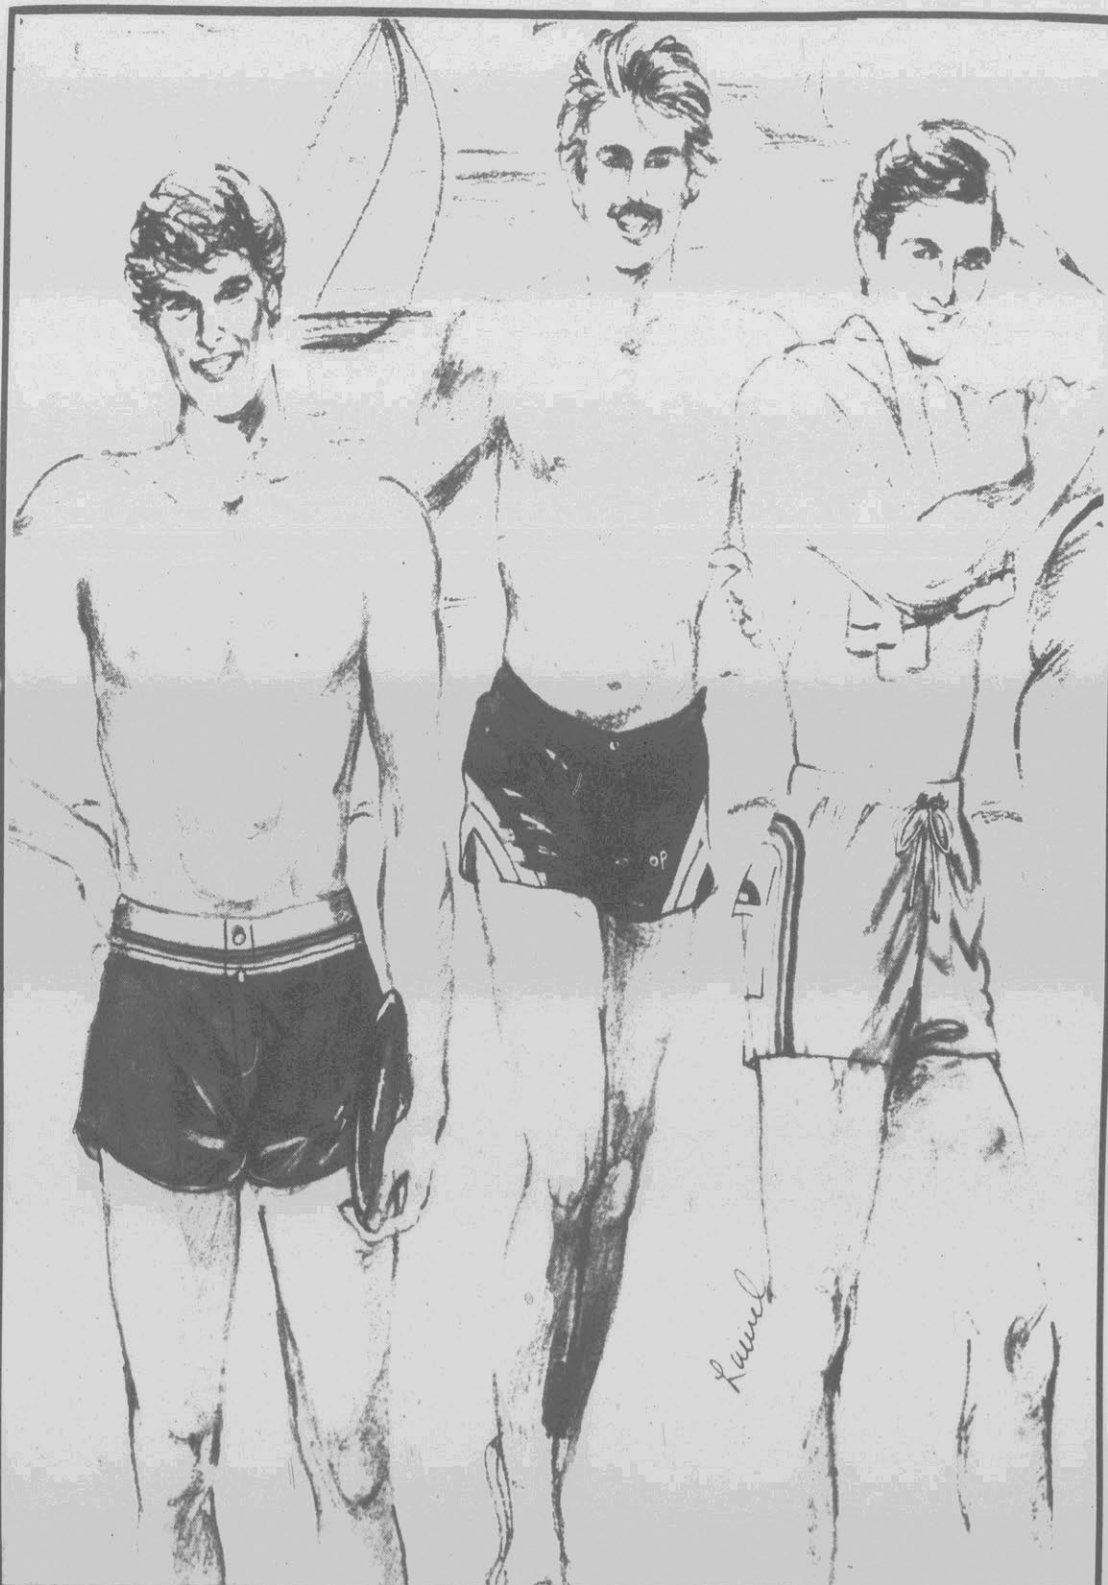

The Lady Cougars now face North Lenoir tonight at 8:30 while the boys team faces Farmville Central tomorrow at 7:00. D.H. Conley will play the winner of tonight's West-Craven-North Pitt game tomorrow at 8:30.

Boston College Nips Hoyas In Overtime

By The Associated Press

As a player with the Boston Celtics, John Thompson wasn't used to losing in the Boston Garden.

He still hasn't gotten used to it now that he coaches the Georgetown University basketball team.

"To be a coach or a player, you have to be a little crazy, a glutton for punishment," said Thompson after his 16th-ranked Hoyas were tripped up in the Garden by 15th-ranked Boston College 87-85 in overtime in an intense Big East game Wednesday night. "With the competition in this league, you have to be ready every day."

The Eagles had a distinct advantage at the foul line, sinking 37 of 46 shots while Georgetown was making just 17 of 26 free throws. It was a field goal by Michael Adams with 2:06 left in overtime that finally put Boston College ahead to stay, 86-85.

"I really wanted to give it to the big guys," said the 5-foot-10 guard. "But Georgetown just backed up and let me shoot it."

It was still nail-biting time, though.

After Michael Jackson, who led the Hoyas with 26 points, was called for traveling with 23 seconds remaining, Georgetown stole the inbound pass. With four seconds to go, Jackson missed a 20-footer, and B.C.'s John Garriss wrapped up the rebound and was fouled. He made the first of his two free throws, accounting for the final margin.

"Anybody could look for the penetration on that play, but we were a little apprehensive. We're young," Thompson said. "Still, it (Jackson's shot) wasn't bad. It hit the rim."

"They just got the breaks in the end," said Georgetown's Patrick Ewing, who had 16 points, 14 rebounds, six blocked shots and six steals before fouling out near the end.

Jay Murphy, whose basket with 24 seconds left in regulation forced the overtime, had 20 points for the Eagles and Adams added 19.

"We beat Georgetown, St. John's and Villanova, all fine ballclubs," said Garriss, who led the Eagles with 25 points.

"We're in the Top Twenty, we just want to stay there."

Boston College's 21-5 overall record and 11-4 conference mark include a two-point loss to the Hoyas, who fell to 19-8, 9-5 in the Big East.

In other games involving the Top Twenty, No. 2 Virginia whipped Wake Forest 107-74; No. 3 Louisville stopped Virginia Tech 73-64 and No. 8 North Carolina downed Georgia Tech 85-73.

Top Ten Ralph Sampson scored 28 points to lead Virginia to a runaway victory over Wake Forest. The Cavaliers shrugged off an early seven-point deficit and raced to a comfortable 53-28 halftime lead behind their big man.

Wake Forest went scoreless for four minutes at the start of the second half as the Cavaliers expanded their margin to an unsurmountable 69-41.

Charles Jones, Rodney McCray and Lancaster Gordon teamed for 49 points as Louisville whipped Virginia Tech for the 1,000th victory in the history of the Cardinals' basketball program.

Louisville led 38-31 at the half and put the game away with a nine-point burst early in the second half. The closest Virginia Tech got after that was five points at 65-60 with 1:20 left in the game.

Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir: "Louisville is so strong inside that we were intimidated by them. They cut off Perry Young, and he's been such a big scorer for us. They played him with a taller man and it was difficult for him to take the ball to the basket."

Michael Jordan scored 24 points as North Carolina downed Georgia Tech. Jordan had two baskets during an 11-0 Carolina spurt that stretched a 42-36 advantage to 53-36 with 11:18 left in the game. Georgia Tech never threatened thereafter as the Tar Heels eventually rolled up a 23-point lead, which they held on five occasions.

"I didn't like our shot selection in the first half," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "(but) I thought we played very well in the second half."

"They simply had too much firepower," said Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins. "We couldn't get anything going. I'm disappointed. The last two games we've just played poorly."

Others

Elsewhere, Rick Olson scored 25 points, igniting Wisconsin to an 82-70 victory over Michigan; Terence Stansbury set an Atlantic 10 Conference scoring record with 39 points to lead Temple over Massachusetts 91-64 and Ken Epperson scored 19 points to lead Toledo to an 81-63 victory over Western Michigan.

Also, Wayman Tisdale and Chuckie Barnett each scored two field goals in overtime to help Oklahoma state off a Big Eight upset bid by Iowa State, 67-65; Andy Sisinni and Terry Teachout each scored 18 points to lead Duquesne to a 93-70 victory over West Virginia; Butch Moore scored a game-high 19 points, including five crucial free throws in the last 3:15, to lead Southern Methodist to a 61-56 victory over TCU and Kenny Holmes hit a 12-foot jumper from the baseline with three seconds remaining to give

South Carolina a 52-51 victory over DePaul.

Bob Lojewski scored five of his 27 points in overtime to lead St. Joseph's (Pa.) to a 92-82 victory over George Washington; Dave Hoppen hit three of four free throws in the final 23 seconds, and Nebraska held on to defeat Kansas 60-58; Roy Hinson scored 24 points to lead Rutgers to an 82-73 victory over Rhode Island; Anthony Jenkins scored 30 in just 25 minutes as Clemson rolled past Duke 93-86 and Lorenza Andrews scored 20 points to lead Oklahoma State to a 75-73 victory over Colorado.

behind-the-back pass from Anderson for a layup to get A-G to within 55-51. Mitchell Cox and Gatlin scored for Conley to up the lead to seven, 59-52, with 5:28 remaining.

Anderson scored the next six points for Ayden-Grifton and the lead was down to four, 62-58, with 1:56 left. The Chargers could only manage one more basket after that while the Vikings reeled off 13 points.

Leon Cox made a jumper in the lane for a 64-58 lead. Then Gatlin finished off any lingering Chargers hopes with a 20-footer and four free throws, making it 70-58 with just 56 seconds left.

"If we had run our game plan in the first half, we might could have made the run a little earlier," Murphy said. "Gatlin did about what he wanted to. We could have made it a little tougher if we had been smarter. Their rebounding and transition was the difference."

"Our board work was the best it's been in six or seven games," Marsh said. "We worked hard on it yesterday and I told the kids we couldn't make it out of the district if we didn't get on the boards."

"We took off the press and that allowed them to get into their offense," Marsh said of the comeback by Ayden-Grifton. "When we pressed, we got them out of their offense. Leon and Mitchell did a good job on Anderson and Gay by not allowing them to get the ball back after they passed off."

In addition to Gatlin, Leon Cox had 13 for Conley. Anderson finished with 19 for the Chargers while Gay added 14.

off with his third hit of the day, a high chopper to third. He was sacrificed up, and David Wells was intentionally walked. The next two went down in order, however, ending the threat.

In the bottom of the tenth, the Pirates got the winner. Fulghum led off with a double to right center, and Mark Shank came on to run for him, moving to third on a sacrifice. Then, with two away, Hallow banged the ball into left center, easily scoring Shank to end the game.

Evans' three hits led the Pirates, while Phillips and Wright each had a pair for Virginia Commonwealth.

The Pirates were to return to action today at 3 p.m. against Atlantic Christian. They travel to Raleigh on Friday to face N.C. State.

Cavs, Heels Remain Tied

RALEIGH (AP) — Second-ranked Virginia and No. 8 North Carolina enter their final regular season games this weekend tied for first in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball chase.

Virginia rolled over Wake Forest 107-74 Wednesday while North Carolina slipped past Georgia Tech 85-73 to give each an 11-2 mark with one conference game left. North Carolina travels to Duke Saturday, while Virginia hosts Maryland on Sunday in the conference finale. A victory by the Tar Heels or Cavaliers and a loss by the other would give the winning team the conference title, but a tie would make them co-champions. However, a tie would be in North Carolina's favor as the Tar Heels have beaten the Cavaliers twice and would become the top-seeded in the ACC Tournament. Wednesday's only other action was a 93-86 Clemson victory over Duke. Ralph Sampson threw in 28 points to spark Virginia's victory over Wake Forest, which jumped out to a 20-13 lead in the first seven minutes. The Cavs eventually tied it on Ricky Stokes' jumper and Virginia continued pouring it on, taking a 53-38 halftime lead. "It showed early in the game that we were not as mentally prepared as Wake was," Holland said. "The key was the fact that we realized it and kept working at it until it started to go our way." "We were playing hard," Sampson said. "They had their best players in there and we just started taking it to them."

"We got off to a pretty good start, but we didn't have good alertness or concentration on either end of the court to keep us in the game," Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy said. Rick Carlisle scored 16 points for Virginia, 24-3, while Craig Robinson added 14 and Jim Miller 11. John Toms' 22 points led the Demon Deacons, 17-9, 7-6 in the ACC. Michael Jordan's 24 points led 24-6 North Carolina to victory, while Sam Perkins chipped in 16. The Tar Heels' 37 percent first-half shooting left them with a 32-27 intermission edge, but the second-half mark improved to 57 percent.

"I didn't like our shot selection in the first half," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "I thought we played very well in the second half." "They simply had too much fire power," Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "We couldn't get anything going. I'm disappointed. The last two games we've just played poorly." Mark Price led Tech, 12-14 and 4-10, with 19 points. Clemson's Anthony Jenkins scored 30 points to spark his club's victory as the Tigers ended their conference season at 2-12. David Shaffer added 11 points. The 10-19 Tigers fell behind early, but rallied to a 37-27 lead at halftime. Duke cut the lead to 41-39 early in the second half, but Clemson scored 19 of the next 23 points to take a 60-43 advantage with 12 minutes left. Duke, 11-15 and 3-10, was led by Jay Bilas with 21 points, while Johnny Dawkins and Chip Engelland added 18 each and Mark Alarie 15. Thursday's lone ACC battle will pit Maryland, 18-7, at North Carolina State, 16-9. They are tied for third in the league standings with 7-5 marks.

USFL, AFCA Set Meeting

DALLAS (AP) — Representatives of the American Football Coaches Association and the United States Football League planned to meet today to discuss the controversial signing of underclassman Herschel Walker.

Walker signed a multimillion-dollar contract last week with the USFL's New Jersey Generals, giving up his senior year at Georgia. The signing breached a long-standing tradition between colleges and the pros regarding underclassmen.

AFCA director Charley McClendon of the Orlando, Fla.-based AFCA said the meeting would be held at the Amfex West Hotel at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

"We're going to discuss just what the future holds for our relationship with the league," McClendon told The Associated Press. "We want to know what their future policy is going to be."

He added, "We'll just play this meeting by ear. It could turn out to be positive, we just don't know."

Chet Simmons, commissioner of the USFL, will lead the new professional football league's contingent.

Simmons said recently he "had trouble" with the signing of Walker, a junior.

Simmons said he had supported an earlier USFL rule against undergraduate signings.

"I honestly said it and believed it," Simmons said.

He said he changed his mind on advice from USFL counsel Steve Ehrhart.

Simmons said if Walker had taken the USFL to court and won, it would have opened the door for every underclassman to challenge the rule.

Accompanying McClendon will be Wiles Hallock, executive officer of the Pacific-10 Conference; commissioner Carl James of the Big Eight Conference; Dave Cawood of the NCAA, and coaches Emory Bellard of Mississippi State and George McIntyre of Vanderbilt.

ODU, VCU Favorites

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Two teams from Virginia, sitting atop the Sun Belt Conference standings and sporting victory strings, are favored to make it to the finals in the league's tournament.

Old Dominion, in its first season in the conference, and Virginia Commonwealth both are 12-2 in the league and are in different brackets in the tournament that begins Friday.

However, Old Dominion, 19-8 overall, is top-seeded because it defeated Virginia Commonwealth in their two season meetings.

Old Dominion goes against Jacksonville, winless in league play and 6-21 overall, and Virginia Commonwealth, 22-5, faces Western Kentucky, 4-10 and 12-15.

Other opening round games put South Florida, 8-6 and 19-8, against South Alabama, 6-8 and 16-11, and North Carolina-Charlotte, 5-9 and 8-19, against Alabama-Birmingham, 9-5 and 16-13.

The winners of the Old Dominion-Jacksonville and South Florida-South Alabama games meet in one semifinal game Saturday night, and the winners of the Virginia Commonwealth-Western Kentucky and Charlotte-Birmingham games meet in the other.

The title game will be played Sunday, with the winner getting an automatic berth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament.

Birmingham won last year's Sun Belt tournament and made it to the final eight in the NCAA playoffs.

Old Dominion, relying mainly on defense and rebounding, has won its last seven games and 11 of the last 14 games. The team leads the league in team defense, giving up 64.4 points a game, and in rebounding margin, five.

Virginia Commonwealth has a 14-game win string, the school's second longest ever. Senior Fred Brown has scored in double figures in 17 of the team's last 18 games and grabbed 50 rebounds in the last four games.

For the tournament, the league will continue to give three points for a goal beyond 21 feet and to use the 45-second shot clock, turning it off for the final four minutes.

One blow fell on the New York Yankees, hoping to re- bound under new manager Billy Martin from a fifth-place finish in 1982. Roy Smalley, a key man in Martin's infield plans underwent an appendectomy Wednesday and will be lost for at least three weeks. Club officials said Smalley arrived at the Yankee training base in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., suffering from stomach pains and was hospitalized shortly thereafter. Smalley was operated on by Dr. Richard Schultz, who said he should be able to resume workouts in two weeks and be back to normal in three. The Cincinnati Reds also temporarily lost pitcher Charlie Puleo, obtained from the New York Mets in the deal for Tom Seaver. Puleo, fighting for a spot in the starting rotation, underwent arthroscopic surgery and is expected to be lost for two weeks. Seaver himself had his share of aches and pains in the Mets' camp at St. Petersburg — primarily a series of pulled calf muscles. But Seaver said Wednesday he had recovered and Met Manager George Bamberger said the 38-year-old three-time Cy Young Award winner was slated to start today in the first intrasquad game. Then there were the Montreal Expos, where all-star catcher Gary Carter was chewed out by new Manager Bill Virdon for going after a popup that can be caught by an infielder. "You don't have any right to catch a popup that can be caught by an infielder," Virdon said, pointing a finger at Carter. "And I don't want to hear you calling the play." Later, Carter told reporters that he would go along with Virdon. "But I don't know for how long," he added. "It's not my style to remain passive on that kind of play. The transition will be hard." The no-show was in Bradenton, Fla., where the Pittsburgh Pirates were still awaiting the arrival of relief pitcher Enrique Romo. But Manager Chuck Tanner wasn't overly concerned. "He's late every year," Tanner said of Romo. "But when he does get here, he's ready to pitch." In Tucson, Ariz., there were contract problems between second baseman Manny Trillo and his new team, the Cleveland Indians. Trillo, obtained from the Phillies during the off-season, was trying to agree on a new contract during spring training, so that, in his words, "I won't be bothered during the season." Arkansas has won 28 straight here and Sutton's home record is 100-6 over nine seasons. Houston gets its scoring punch from 6-foot-6 Michael Young (17.8), 6-foot-7 Clyde Drexler (17.4), 6-foot-9 Larry Michaeux (14.5) and Akeem Abdul Olajuwon (12.8). Olajuwon, a 7-foot sophomore from Nigeria, heaped embarrassment on Arkansas the last time they met by blocking 11 shots. The Cougars registered 17 blocked shots in that contest. Olajuwon has blocked 135 shots this season. Sutton said several goaltending calls should have been made against Olajuwon and he hopes to get a better break in officiating this time. "No way he blocked 11 shots," Sutton said. "I studied the film. By not calling goaltending and the three-second rule, they (referees) give Akeem a chance to go free, just battering everything away." "Akeem gives them a different dimension. He doesn't know how good he can be some day. It's amazing that he's only been playing the game for four years. If they didn't have him, they'd be a typical Houston team." Houston finishes its regular season Saturday at Baylor, while Arkansas visits Rice Saturday night. "I'm surprised we wouldn't lose a conference game this season," said Lewis, whose team has a 14-0 SWC record, one-half game in front of Arkansas. "And I didn't think Arkansas wouldn't lose another." Houston is 23-2 with an 18-game winning streak, the longest in the nation. Arkansas is 24-1 overall and 13-1 in the SWC. One factor Houston will be facing is the Barnhill Arena here, with a capacity of more than 9,000 people. "I think it's going to be as loud as it's ever been," Walker said. "The crowd can be intimidating. Houston is the No. 1 team in the nation and I don't know if they can be intimidated." Emotional Hospital Visit By Visiting John Paul II

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Pope John Paul II, on a Latin American tour to "share the pain of the people," made an emotional visit today to a hospital for retarded and seriously injured children, touching their heads and caressing their cheeks.

Security guards struggled to keep crowds from surging into the hospital behind the pope. Nurses cried as the pope stopped by the beds of the boys and girls, some of them in traction.

Meanwhile, Costa Ricans streamed into the capital, where the pope is to celebrate Mass outdoors in La Sabana Park. Church leaders predicted as many as 1 million people — two-fifths of the country's population — would attend. The faithful carried canteens, lunches and papal flags.

Vendors with large piles of watermelons and soft drinks were on hand, and all businesses and government offices were closed. Some people slept in the park overnight, to get good views of the pontiff.

When the pope awoke at the Papal Nunciature, or Vatican Embassy, thousands of people were waiting in its gardens for a blessing. The pope, smiling, obliged them.

The Polish-born pontiff also meets this morning with the tiny Polish community in San Jose and with Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge.

John Paul told an eager, welcoming crowd at San Jose airport Wednesday he was making the eight-nation tour to "share the pain of a people ... and leave a word of encouragement and hope, based on a necessary change in attitudes."

Later, he told 66 of the region's bishops that the church "cannot resort to methods of violence which are abhorrent to its Christian conscience."

"A lacerating clamor rising from these lands and calling for peace, the end of war and to violent deaths has sounded with accents of urgency in my spirit," the 62-year-old pontiff said.

"This clamor implores reconciliation ... and it thirsts for widespread and heretofore uselessly awaited justice."

"There is nothing more deplorable and alarming as the threat of war which would raze the countries involved and would become a deadly scenario for foreign interests."

The pope rejected both "a purely economic capitalism" and "a materialistic collectivism (communism) that equally oppress human nature."

"The Gospel is a defender of man, especially of the poor and defenseless, of those who lack earthly goods and are ignored," he said.

Costa Rica is poor, but in troubled Central America, it is an oasis of peace and democracy.

The Pope's other stops will include three tortured lands: El Salvador, where a bloody civil war rages; Guatemala, where a rightist military government is trying to quell a stubborn guerrilla movement and Nicaragua, where the guerrilla-led government is trying to rebuild the nation after a bloody revolution.

In all, some 100,000 people have died in conflicts in the region in the last five years — many in civil war and many others at the hands of death squads linked to rightist elites trying to hold off social change.

In the 1960s, the traditional alliance of church and Latin American elite began to break. Clerics and laymen who organize the poor and condemn the abuse of the underclass in El Salvador and Guatemala are now frequent targets of assassination.

The pope's remarks reflected the enormous controversy the church's changing role has stirred in Central America and within the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

In Nicaragua Wednesday, leaders of the ruling leftist Sandinista movement and church officials clashed over arrangements for the pope's visit there.

The government published a plan telling people they must assemble at one of nine points in the Nicaraguan capital of Managua in order to attend a Mass to be said by John Paul.

The Rev. Bismark Carballo, secretary general of the Nicaraguan conference of bishops, called the plan "a serious error."

Cultural Exchange City Is In Gaspe Peninsula

Rimouski, a city in the French-speaking Gaspé Peninsula of Canada's Quebec Province, was announced Wednesday night as the site of exchange visits for local persons participating in the annual Friendship Force of Greenville.

Jean Marc Loy, head of the Quebec government, was the special guest at the Wednesday night meeting held in the Willis Building. He made the announcement of the cultural exchange city.

Rimouski, a town of 20,000, is the county seat of Rimouski County. It is a harbor town located on the south bank of the St. Lawrence River, about 80 miles northeast of the northernmost tip of Maine.

Loy told Greenville ambassadors and hosts about the beauty of the rugged landscape, the European flavor of the French-speaking province, and said the people of Rimouski were looking forward with enthusiasm to the exchange visit with Greenville-area people.

The exchange visits will begin April 23 with Gaspé Peninsula residents coming to Greenville at that time for a period of one or two weeks, depending on the individual choice of those visiting. They will live in private homes and be introduced to the life and culture of the area.

Greenville's ambassadors will leave June 11 to begin a one- or two-week stay in private homes in Rimouski.

Millie Schechter, state Friendship Force director, and Esther Hall, state director of training and development, were special guests for the meeting Wednesday evening.

Said Greatest Risk Of Quake

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The New Madrid Fault in southeastern Missouri poses the nation's greatest earthquake risk because 12.6 million people live in the potentially affected area, a new study says.

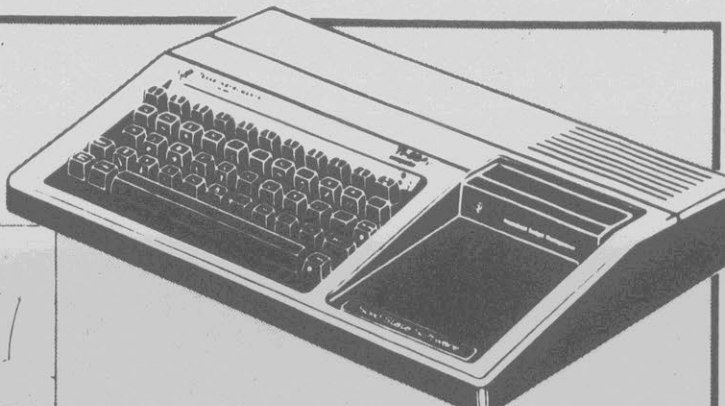

By comparison, only about 4 million people would receive the same amount of damage if the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 were to recur, according to the 200-page report released Wednesday by the U.S. Geological Survey.

Californians Get Lull In Week Of Violent Storms

LEVEE BREAK — Alviso residents (near San Jose, Calif.) use their bodies to shore up a levee while they wait for more sandbags. Alviso citizens

By KIM MILLS
Associated Press Writer

California got a break today with a lull in almost a week of violent storms that have caused at least $130 million in damage, killed 17 people, and chased 9,200 from their homes. But more trouble may be on the way.

Officials late Wednesday evacuated about 1,200 people from the Simi Valley, northwest of Los Angeles, after deciding that the earthen Sinaloa Dam could give way under the strain of a week of rain.

"There's 6 inches of water coming over the dam and both sides of the dam are corroding," Ventura County fire dispatcher Kathy Whitman said.

"We have engineers out there cutting off the flow of water, trying to lower the level of water," said police Lt. Dorsey Cullen, who said the water behind the dam was 6 feet above normal.

The death toll from the West Coast storms that began over the weekend rose to 17, with more than 50 people injured. Forecasters predicted another powerful storm would hit California this weekend.

The storm pushed eastward into Arizona and western Colorado where forecasters issued a winter storm watch.

Elsewhere, an intense storm over Nova Scotia was dumping rain and heavy snow over eastern New England. During the six hours ending at 7 a.m., a half a foot of snow fell at Caribou, Maine. The storm also buffeted New England with strong northerly winds.

But unseasonably mild weather continued over much of the nation.

The storm has wrecked over $130 million in property, according to the state Office of Emergency Services. Thirty-one counties were expected to ask Gov. George Deukmejian for emergency aid today, and the governor was expected to relay the request to President Reagan.

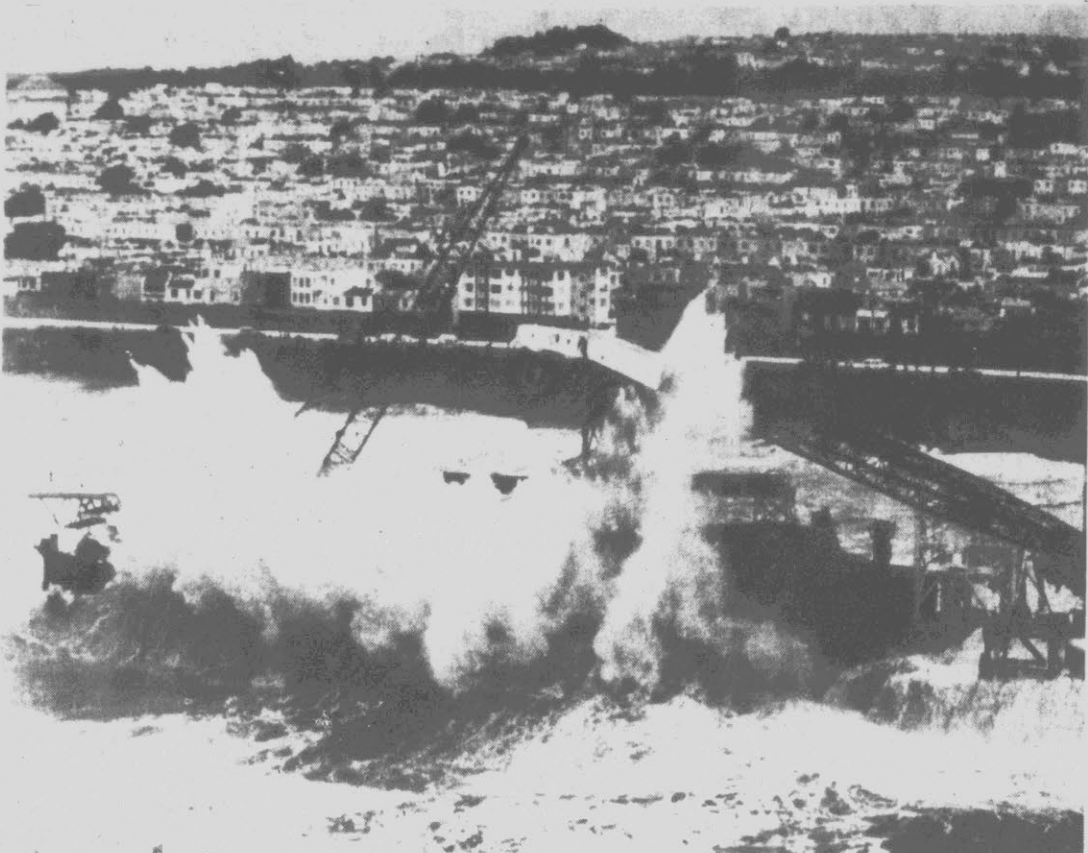

The foul weather rerouted the California tour of Queen Elizabeth II, who left Southern California by air Wednesday afternoon and arrived at San Francisco a day ahead of schedule.

The British monarch offered her sympathy to Deukmejian in a statement that said she and Prince Philip were "saddened by the loss of life and damage caused by the storm in California."

"The state is just absolutely soaking wet right now," said Alex Cunningham, director of the state Office of Emergency Services. "It's like a completely saturated sponge that can't hold another drop of water without a drop running out somewhere."

Forecasters said the storm also spread eastward today to Colorado and Arizona. Storm warnings were issued for Colorado.

In Southern California, 10 piers were undermined or sheared off by pounding surf and at least 1,124 homes and

TROUBLED BARGE — Ten crew members had to be airlifted from the Betty L after waves caused its anchor lines to break and the barge began businesses were damaged or destroyed, including six wrecked by Malibu surf and 12 by a downtown Los Angeles tornado.

In northern California, flooding and mudslides swept houses from their foundations and trapped 90 people in a canyon.

The Sacramento River, which has already driven 2,000 people from their homes, was expected to crest at 10 feet above flood stage today.

Helicopters plucked more than 80 people to safety, 10 from a wayward barge off a San Francisco beach Tuesday and 28 from a narrow Monterey County canyon swept by a wall of mud that one witness said was 15 feet high. Another 43 were brought out by Army helicopters Wednesday, said Art McDole, emergency operations coordinator for Monterey County.

"There are still some people in there, we think around 20," McDole said. "But they are all safe and warm ... well-stocked with food."

Among those killed in the storm Wednesday was a 3-year-old boy buried in Clear Lake, about 125 miles north of San Francisco, when a wall of mud 300 feet wide swept down a hillside and crushed his home.

Three other people died near Indio when their car skidded on a water-logged road and slammed into a tractor-trailer rig and exploded, the California Highway Patrol said.

The National Weather Service, noting that Wednesday was the eighth consecutive day of rain in California, said Mount Wilson, Calif., had received 8 inches of rain in 24 hours, bringing its total for the week to 16 inches. And no end was in sight soon.

"We've got bands of showers spinning off a weather system stalled offshore, and that pattern likely will continue into Thursday," said weather service forecaster Ron Wagner.

Among the homes destroyed in the exclusive Los Angeles suburb of Malibu was one owned by tennis star Billie Jean King and her husband Larry. The house was so damaged by surf that it was condemned and torn down. The Kings had retained the home in a celebrated "palimony" suit filed by Mrs. King's former lover, Marilyn Barnett, who claimed she had been promised the house.

The man-made oil well island Esther, about three-quarters of a mile off Huntington Beach, was destroyed by surf, and 2,100 gallons of oil was floating on the surface, Coast Guard spokesman Tom Heflick said. Only one derrick remained of the 150-by-178-foot island and "all other structures and most of the landscaping ... were toppled and washed away," he said.

In Santa Barbara, the Harbor Patrol abandoned its office on a jetty after 15-foot waves submerged cars in a beachfront parking lot, washed away pavement and broke a natural gas main, causing several small fires.

Half the pier at San Clemente, 65 miles southeast of Los Angeles, washed into the ocean Wednesday night and a 100-foot section was torn from the Imperial Beach Pier in San Diego County, authorities said.

Hawaii's Lava In The Street

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — A three-mile long tongue of lava from the erupting Kilauea Volcano began creeping down a subdivision street, forcing residents from their homes for the second time this year. Civil Defense officials said.

The flow was about 500 feet wide and moving about 600 feet an hour late Wednesday, said Harry Kim, Hawaii county civil defense administrator. It was not known whether any houses had been damaged.

The residents of the Royal Gardens subdivision were ordered to leave their homes earlier in the day.

About 50 homes are scattered throughout the 500-lot subdivision, which has no electricity or telephones. Police had set up roadblocks around the area to limit access.

"Our priority is the lives and safety of people," Kim said. "Not only the flow, which is a slow-moving element, we're talking about fire, fumes and smoke."

The possibility of brush or forest fires sparked by the hot lava were a major concern, Kim said. The island of Hawaii is in the midst of a five-month drought.

The lava flow was being fed by 200- to 300-foot fountains from a vent in the volcano's east rift zone. The fountaining began Friday in the latest of a sporadic series of eruptions which began Jan. 3.

"From all indications of our measurements it looks like it will last at least another couple of days," said Reggie Okamura, scientist-in-charge at the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcanoes National Park Observatory.

Kim also ordered the subdivision evacuated on Jan. 7, when a lava flow appeared to threaten some homes. The flow halted before causing any damage, and residents were allowed to return to their homes.

'Friend' Not So Helpful

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — A college student says he remained calm when he found himself adrift on a piece of ice in the Blue Earth River — despite not getting much help from a friend.

Eugene Wolf, of Mankato State University, had been tossing a football to a buddy, Joseph Bird, in Sibley Park on Tuesday, when he decided to hop onto a nearby ice floe on the Blue Earth River.

When the student stepped onto another floe, it broke loose and began floating downstream — with Wolf aboard.

Wolf thought about swimming ashore but decided against plunging into the icy water. Twenty minutes and two miles later, he was rescued by three city firefighters using a boat.

Police gave Wolf a talking-to before sending him home. "He was cool, very cool, about the whole thing," said officer James Schweiss.

Wolf, a sophomore from Adrian, Minn., said he didn't panic. "I figured I'd be able to get off once I started heading out of town," he said.

And how did Bird help his friend during the ordeal? "He kept tossing snowballs at me, trying to knock me off," Wolf said.

VA Adding Beds In N.C.

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Veterans Administration medical centers in North Carolina and South Carolina are rebuilding facilities and adding beds for aging parents to prepare for an onslaught of World War II veterans aged 65 and over.

There are 2,851 hospital beds in six VA medical centers in the two states. Four of those institutions have a total of 334 nursing home beds.

But that's not enough to care for the veteran population now, much less in the future, medical center administrators say. There are about 650,000 veterans in North Carolina and about 354,000 in South Carolina.

"We have 93 nursing home care unit beds," said Joseph Cherry, associate director of the VA medical center in Salisbury, the largest in the two states with 811 hospital beds. "We have 236 intermediate-care beds. We have a waiting list in both areas."

North Carolina has VA medical centers in Asheville, Fayetteville, Durham and Salisbury and an outpatient clinic in Winston-Salem. South Carolina has VA medical centers in Columbia and Charleston and an outpatient clinic in Greenville.

Commission Names 15 Heroes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When a teen-ager came running into an athletic club chased by two men wielding clubs, trainer Gregory Mackrides knew he "wasn't going to give up this little kid."

Mackrides protected the youth, but was beaten and knifed in the process and his injuries led to $27,000 in medical bills.

The 28-year-old Philadelphia athletic trainer was one of the 15 people praised as heroes Wednesday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission. Mackrides was one of the few people named for interceding in urban crime.

Mackrides said he and Warren Parks, 14, the boy he saved, are now good friends.

"It was very, very fortunate, by the grace of God, that Warren picked this door to run in," Mackrides said in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

"It's the biggest thing I ever did as a person," he said, adding that he doesn't consider himself a hero.

"I'm just a person that cared. It doesn't make me a special or better person," said Mackrides, who still suffers aches and pains from his injuries.

Since the incident, which occurred April 4, 1982, Mackrides said he has become involved in several programs to aid the victims of violent crimes.

The commission honored heroes from six states, including five people who sacrificed their lives. The heroes — from Pennsylvania, Oregon, New Jersey, California, New York and Ohio — bring to 6,685 the number of people so honored since the commission's founding in 1904 by industrialist Andrew Carnegie.

The heroes or their survivors receive $2,000 each. The other 14 honorees were:

—Jackie L. Jacobs, 43, of Troutdale, Ore., a refrigerator serviceman, who died after saving a 75-year-old man from his burning house in Troutdale on March 16, 1982. Jacobs died of a heart attack after helping pull the man from the house.

—Richard S. Seeley, 29, of Salem, Ore., a tractor salesman, who drowned helping rescue a 6-year-old boy in the North Santiam River, Mehama, Ore., on Sept. 19, 1982. The boy was saved by his father.

—Marshall V. Stanley, 54, of Portland, Ore., a log rafter, who died trying to save a 3-year-old boy from drowning in the Deep River, Naselle, Wash., on Aug. 28, 1982. The boy was saved by a man in a boat.

—Fred Worthington Jr., 55, of Willow Grove, Pa., a utility lineman, who died trying to save an 11-year-old boy in danger of electrocution by downed power lines in Philadelphia on July 28, 1982. Worthington and the boy were electrocuted.

—Joseph John Mareno Jr., 22, of Malaga, N.J., a truck driver, who died trying to save a man in danger of drowning in a reservoir on June 15, 1981. R. Janton Sumner, 22, of Newtown Square, Pa., a bartender, and Lee Harold Sturt, 29, of Broomall, Pa., a carpenter, were honored for rescuing the same man.

—Alan A. Daugevelo, 25, of Forest City, Pa., a surveyor's assistant, who pulled a man and woman from their burning car after a collision with a truck in Simpson, Pa., on Aug. 22, 1982.

—John Rex Fidler, 31, of Bridgeville, Calif., a mechanic, who saved five brothers and sisters from their burning house on March 10, 1982. Fidler suffered smoke inhalation.

—Stanley W. Heideman, 30, of Cleves, Ohio, and John Paul Eshman, 33, of Buffalo, N.Y., truck drivers, who pulled an unconscious woman from a burning car after an accident in Shelbyville, Ind., on April 21, 1982.

—Jeffrey Kyle Johnson, 23, of Urbana, Ohio, a truck driver, who saved a 10-year-old boy from a burning mobile home on Sept. 10, 1982.

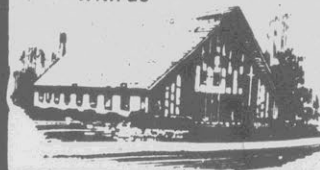

—Richard E. Saulpaugh, 23, of Apple Valley, Calif., a college student, who pulled a 61-year-old man from a burning car in Los Angeles on Nov. 19, 1981. The man died a short time later.

—Helio J. Tavares, 43, of Cotati, Calif., an electronics technician, who saved a 53-year-old man from a burning car in Santa Rosa, Calif., on Nov. 13, 1982.

Public Employees Hail Ruling On Retirements

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Public employees are hailing a Supreme Court decision limiting forced retirements, but state officials say the ruling may mean bigger bills for taxpayers.

Gerald McEntee, president of the nation's largest public employee union, welcomed Wednesday's ruling that state and local governments generally may not force their workers to retire before age 70.

McEntee, head of the million-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, called the ruling "a victory for flexible retirement among state and local government workers."

"The decision strikes down unfair and discriminatory statutes in numerous state and local governments," he said. "Age should not be a sole determinant in the retirement decision in the public sector."

But Algert S. Agricola Jr., assistant state attorney general in Alabama, said, "Of course, we're disappointed." He said the decision may force states to retain workers in their 60s when hospital stays for injuries and illness are longer and more frequent.

In Alabama, he added, it would mean primarily "increased benefits coverage for state troopers over 60."

Agricola argued before the Supreme Court in behalf of 18 states including Alabama that said Congress overstepped its authority in applying a law against age discrimination to the states.

But in its 5-4 ruling, the Supreme Court said the 1974 law did not infringe unconstitutionally on states' rights.

The court said the law — which exempts the federal government — legitimately protects the rights of state and local employees aged 40 to 70.

The court ruled in the case of Bill Crump, who complained to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in 1980 about his forced retirement at age 55 as a Wyoming game warden supervisor.

An EEOC suit against the state was thrown out in 1981 by U.S. District Judge Clarence Brimmer in Cheyenne, Wyo. He said Congress had gone too far in extending to states the age discrimination ban in 1974.

The high court's decision reinstates Crump's lawsuit but does not mean he has won back his old job.

The case must go to trial to decide whether Wyoming has reasonable grounds for forcing game warden supervisors to retire at age 55.

Crump, now 58 and running a ranch near Lander, Wyo., said he has not decided whether he will return to his state job if he wins his case.

"I've never had the chance to make that decision one way or another," he said. "It was made for me. I intend to pursue the thing until I have that decision."

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the Supreme Court majority, acknowledged that the 1974 federal law regulates "the states as states" and may deal with matters usually left to state sovereignty.

But, he said, the law does not directly impair "traditional governmental functions" of state and local governments.

Brennan was joined by Justices Byron R. White, Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Lewis F. Powell, William H. Rehnquist and Sandra Day O'Connor dissented.

Burger said the majority ruling permits "Congress to usurp (a) fundamental state function." He said, "I fail to see where it (the Constitution) grants to the national government the power to impose such strictures on the states."

Burger said that 30 states, besides Wyoming, have laws that violate the federal statute.

They are Alabama, Arkansas, California, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Washington and West Virginia.

Confiscations Investigated

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation is investigating the possible theft or mishandling of confiscated drugs at the Salisbury Police Department, the Salisbury Post reported Wednesday.

Several people said they had been interviewed by SBI agents, and said they were asked if they had any knowledge of guns or drugs missing or being converted for personal use.

Duke Prof Aids In Recruiting

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Duke University professor is helping the Department of Defense and the Navy decide how to spend nearly $1 billion a year for recruiting.

Dr. Richard C. Morey, director of the Fuqua School of Business' Center for Applied Business Research, recently received $35,000 from the Defense Department to visit Army and Air Force posts to a comparative analysis of their recruiting programs.

The grant is based on the work he has been doing for five years for the Navy. The Naval Recruiting Command gave him $139,000 for 1983 to analyze advertising media used in recruiting and their relative cost-effectiveness.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MAR. 4, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Make sure that you keep an open mind in discussing subjects with others. Organize your time effectively and advance in career matters. Plan for a more satisfactory future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If a co-worker is annoying, take it in stride, and then everything works out well for you. Use good judgment and all will be fine.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make certain you keep promises made to others at this time. Avoid spending more than you can afford.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your work load may appear difficult to surmount, but if you plow right into it with good conscience, you can surprise yourself.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't be so critical of others when stating your views. Make sure to pay your bills on time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Consult business expert for advice on an important money matter. Show others that you are kind and thoughtful.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Important you use caution in travel, or you could easily get in trouble. Take time to improve your health and appearance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The advice of one in business is not likely to be good at this time. Strive for increased happiness. Be logical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't allow yourself to build up prejudices that could be harmful to you. Know exactly what your true ambitions are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take time for philanthropic work that could give you added prestige. Show others that you have wisdom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) One who has a sharp tongue could get you in a dither, if you permit, so ignore altogether for best results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be silent but watchful in handling an outside affair, otherwise you could get into some kind of trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A condition arises that is not to your liking, but sleep on it and tomorrow you will know exactly how to handle it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those delightful young people who can tackle all kinds of problems and come up with the right answers, but it is important you teach your youngster not to make sarcastic remarks to others.

South made a most unusual play to the first trick. But it proved to be vital to a successful campaign.

A successful barrage can create bidding problems, but North-South coped well here. After South elected not to leave the decision of whether to double four spades or bid on to his partner, North decided that his three aces made slam a reasonable proposition.

West led the jack of spades, and declarer was faced with a problem at the very first trick—should he discard a club or a diamond from hand? Since declarer was not sure which suit he could spare, he made a rather strange decision—he ruffed dummy's ace!

Declarer cashed the ace of hearts, and when East showed out, declarer opted to give West his trump trick. If West led another spade, declarer could discard a minor suit in dummy while ruffing in his hand. He would then set up a long card in that minor suit by ruffing the third round in dummy, which would enable him to obtain a discard for the loser in the other minor.

So West chose to exit with a diamond, but that, too, was

Hopeful News in Medicine

Anyone who has ever been affected by traveler's diarrhea knows that this is a most unpleasant illness. Not only does it make one uncomfortable, but it also plays havoc with the joys of an anticipated holiday.

Recently at a meeting on digestive disorders, Dr. Edgar C. Boedeker, of the Medical Corps of the United States Army and stationed at the Walter Reed Army Institute in Washington, D.C., reported a happy scientific advance. He described the progress that is at the present time being made to prepare a vaccine that will eliminate traveler's diarrhea.

The germ that causes this condition is known as Escherichia coli. It is believed that the bug causes the diarrhea by adhering to the lining of the small intestine. It is believed that if these germs are kept from attaching themselves to the wall of the intestine, they will pass out with the feces without doing any harm to the body.

At the present time the vaccine is being studied in both experimental animals and in human volunteers. The field tests that have been made are, at the present time, limited to those people who are going to those countries where the "coli bug" is most likely to flourish.

It is expected that if the preliminary studies are effective, a special vaccine will be made to protect people against this bug and other allied germs. It is anticipated that it will not be a difficult problem to create the vaccine. In fact, it is already so advanced that it is expected that the vaccine might soon be available for general distribution.

There is good news on the horizon to help those people learn to speak after their larynx, or voice box, has been removed.

All kinds of devices have been tried to make people with a laryngectomy (removal of the voice box) speak normally.

Now a special kind of valve may soon be available for these courageous patients.

Recently Dr. Eric D. Blom and Dr. Mark I. Singer of Indianapolis were able to fit patients with a special valve device. These researchers say that patients "can immediately tell the significant reduction in effort it takes to speak."

The valve is a complex one which is not yet available for general distribution.

It is expected that before long the Food and Drug Administration will have completed testing of this device. Then if it fulfills all of the initial enthusiasm, it will be made available for general use.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Many automobile accidents can be traced to emotional upheavals and tensions. Far too often, this basic reason for an accident is overlooked.

It is well-known that drugs and alcohol diminish the reflexes and make the automobile a lethal weapon. It must be acknowledged that behavior patterns, emotional conflicts, anger and seething aggressiveness are common causes for death and destruction while driving an automobile.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "M-A-S-H," the new King of the Ratings, had some very humble beginnings, proving once again that TV hits generally are not born successful. They must be nurtured, cradled and molded into stardom.

Or, as CBS' programming chief, Harvey Shepherd, puts it: "Most shows on TV are position hits. Few shows are clear hits." Translation: In television programming, it's mostly a case of being in the right place at the right time slot.

A program like tonight's "Simon & Simon," given up for dead last year on Tuesdays, is this season's reclamation project in the time spot following the ever-popular "Magnum, P.I."

"I had written the entire project off," says Phillip DeGuere, executive producer of "Simon & Simon." "My mindset was: 'Who says you're supposed to produce a series forever?'" With a boost from Tom Selleck's largely female audience, "Simon & Simon" ranks seventh this season.

"M-A-S-H," one of television's great commercial and critical success stories, almost didn't have a chance to start the war that ended in Monday night's tidal wave of public sentimentality and the No. 1 rating of alltime — 60.3.

In 1973, the prognosis was dim, and the program nearly expired because of sickly first-season ratings.

As a Sunday night sitcom, following the feeble "Anna & The King," "M-A-S-H" finished the 1972-73 season ranked 46th in popularity among prime-time programs, averaging a 17.5 rating and a 27 share. In today's marketplace, diluted by cable and strong independent stations, those numbers would mean a hit. A decade ago, it was a miss.

But network executives liked "M-A-S-H" and gambled on another season. Hawkeye and Co. moved to Saturday nights, a veritable paradise position between "All in the Family" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

In the previous season, "All in the Family" had been No. 1 in the ratings and "Mary Tyler Moore" No. 7, and they were attracting the kind of sophisticated comedy viewer who could appreciate the pointed humor of "M-A-S-H." Sure enough, "M-A-S-H" finished in fourth place, its highest standing until this current farewell season.

From that point, "M-A-S-H" was bounced around the schedule — to Tuesdays, Fridays, Tuesdays and, finally, Mondays — but its faithful fans would follow it anywhere. "M-A-S-H" had become a "clear hit," whether it was on in prime time on the networks, or any other time in syndication.

That's not the case with "Alice," which one day will be popular with trivia buffs as the show that inherited the 9 p.m. EDT "M-A-S-H" timeslot. CBS apparently figures after the finality of the farewell episode of "M-A-S-H" that it would be anticlimactic to rerun this season's programs right away. Resting the repeats will whet the appetite of the Mashies.

This has been a tough season for "Alice." To make room for the new "Gloria," "Alice" was separated before the season from CBS' Sunday night security-blanket lineup that includes "60 Minutes," "Archie Bunker's Place" and "The Jeffersons." The program landed on Wednesday night, a CBS sore spot for several years.

Instead of riding with the popularity of Archie Bunker and George Jefferson, "Alice" went down with "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" and "Filthy Rich."

On Sunday, viewers turn on CBS, stay with the network and even fall asleep there. Except for the two weeks of "Winds of War" and Super Bowl Sunday, CBS has topped the ratings every Sunday night this season, and all of its programs there are in the Top 25.

On Wednesday nights, viewers habitually don't turn on CBS' series. "Alice" was hurt enough to have been yanked from the schedule at one point. It currently ranks No. 65 out of 84 programs. Last season, "Alice" was the sixth popular show on television.

Now it's on Monday nights, a great TV position, at least it was when a little military number named "M-A-S-H" was there.

MacNeil-Lehrer Report Going Into Big Leagues

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — Robert MacNeil, the affable co-host of public television's critically acclaimed "MacNeil-Lehrer Report," contemplated $10 million in the bank and an hour on the air and jettisoned all thoughts of past humility.

This summer, abandoning their 30-minute format, he and partner Jim Lehrer will be out to play in the big leagues.

"Up to now we've said we're a supplement to the networks — watch them and then watch us and you'll get one story expanded on," he said.

"Now we're going to say, for the first time there's an alternative. You can watch us for an hour and you'll get a fix on the day, and it you want to watch only us, you'll have a fix on the day, but in a different style."

For eight years, "style" has been the hallmark of the incisive PBS showcase which consistently picks up and explains — through interviews and often heated debates between selected experts — the lead story of the evening after ABC, CBS and NBC have given it the obligatory 2½ minutes of coverage.

Now MacNeil and Lehrer have what anchormen on all three commercial networks long have lusted after — a one-hour showcase in which to work their brand of broadcast journalism.

PBS stations have approved the expansion and AT&T has agreed to underwrite it to the tune of $10 million a year — plus an additional $2 million in advertising and promotion.

"There's never been a grant as big as that in public television," MacNeil said. "There's never been a public television program promoted like that before, except for the occasional 'National Geographic Special.'"

It will be enough, MacNeil feels, to effectively raid audiences now loyal to the CBS "Evening News," ABC's "World News Tonight" and the NBC "Nightly News" — even though he was quick to add that he wants no part of the ratings frenzy and the grandstanding it inspires at the networks.

"The strength we think our program has — and we get this from the viewers — is that it is the one place where they can count on getting a serious, thoughtful treatment of current events," MacNeil said. "We are not going to follow the increasing tendency of commercial television to go for style over substance."

"We'll have more money and opportunity to use the resources of the medium — lights, graphics, film and so forth — but we'll make those tricks of the trade subordinate to the substance and not dominate the substance, which we think is happening increasingly on commercial news."

The approach, when "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report" hits its hour-long stride on or shortly after July 1, will be simply more of the existing format which involves bringing people to the national screen through PBS affiliates all across the country.

"One of the hallmarks of the new program will be flexibility," MacNeil said. "Occasionally it might be important to do one story for the whole hour."

"That doesn't mean sitting down with guests and talking to them for a whole hour. It means doing different segments and aspects on one story, but the style and feel of the present program, and the effort to make the news understandable and lucid, will remain..."

MacNeil said at present, the "Report" is budgeted for 70 or 80 guest "interconnections" a year from interviewees at PBS affiliates, and that under the new financing, that number will go up to 460 a year.

AILING — His wife has confirmed Oscar-winning actor David Niven (above) is suffering from a muscle disease which has impaired his speech and partially paralyzed his left hand. Rumors about the actor's failing health have circulated and been denied for months. Hannibal Invites Potter HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Sherman Potter, the kindly colonel of the television show "M-A-S-H," will receive a warm welcome if he ever decides to return home.

On its final show Monday, Potter told his troops that he planned to return to his wife in Hannibal and weed the flower beds.

Tuesday night, the Hannibal City Council passed a resolution honoring the commander of the MASH 407th for his dignity, his humor, and his service to his country.

Councilmen also said they had offered actor Harry Morgan, who played the colonel on the long-running show, a key to the city if he agrees to participate in a "homecoming."

The Senior Citizens Center is located in the Community Building at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets. A variety of programs are provided. Call 752-4137 for more information.

Japan's Rising Life Expectancy Affects Tradition

By DEBORAH SMITH
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Japanese life expectancy is rising and the graying of the population is having an impact on one of the nation's ancient traditions — the extended family, in which three or even four generations live under one roof.

Experts interviewed on the subject say cramped housing, changing patterns of living and the need for professional nursing care have forced many elderly Japanese to give up living with their children.

"When the time comes when an old person must depend on someone, whom does he turn to? In the past there was only the family, but today's family structure is different," said Masaaki Hashimoto, operator of the 250-resident Shisei Home for the elderly in Tachikawa, a western suburb of Tokyo. Although the custom of several generations living together remains strong in rural areas, the percentage of old people living alone or in nursing homes is increasing. About 68 percent of aged Japanese now live with their adult children, generally the eldest son's family, while 27 percent live alone or with a spouse.

Mariko Bando, deputy counselor in the Prime Minister's Policy Office for the Aged, said a Confucian "sense of duty" will keep the number of multi-generation families higher than in other industrialized countries, but more facilities will be needed for those requiring professional care or having no place else to go.

"When the extended family system flourished, there were many members and someone could take care of the elderly (while the others worked). But now the family size is shrinking so the capacity to care for the aged is decreasing," Mrs. Bando said.

Mechanization reduced the need for large families to work in the rice fields, and the high cost of urban housing and education helped lower the birth rate. With more leisure time and a chance to contribute to family income, more married women seek jobs, leaving fewer wives at home to care for the infirm.

At present, says the Health and Welfare Ministry, 180,050 people over 65 live in 2,421 facilities providing full or minimal care. But official estimates show 510,000 elderly people need full-time care, with the number of bedridden old people expected to surpass 1 million in the year 2000.

"In one sense Japan's old people today are chosen," said Soji Tanaka, a government gerontologist. "They survived the war. They are strong. Today's young people do not engage in much physical labor and may be weaker as they age."

The average life expectancy in 1981 was 73.8 years for Japanese males, the world's highest, and 79.13 for females, second only to Iceland.

Japanese 65 or older make up 9 percent of the population; in the United States it's 11 percent, Britain 14.6 percent, France 13.8 percent and West Germany 15.3 percent.

But demographers predict that the proportion of oldsters will more than double, to 21.3 percent, by 2025, making Japan perhaps the world's oldest society. They project that by that time in the United States 15.8 percent of the population will be 65 or older; in Britain and France, 18.6 percent; and in West Germany, 20 percent.

"Japan is a very 'young' country now, but the composition of the population will change rapidly. Those born during the baby boom — people now in their mid-30s — make up a substantial portion of the work force. As the number of children decline and the proportion of older people swell, the burden on the work force will grow," Hashimoto said.

Nihon University's Population Research Center said the tax burden, including social security deductions, will soar from the present 31 percent to 63 percent in 2025.

Residents of facilities for the aged pay part of the bill for their lodging, food and medical care, which can cost as much as 190,000 yen ($815) a month. The amount contributed is based on a resident's assets, including pension funds and family support. National and local governments pick up the remainder.

Tanaka said the government is building and subsidizing new facilities, particularly those with private rooms. About one-third now share a room with four or more, while 56 percent have one roommate.

He wants to encourage healthy older people to live alone.

"I don't think the elderly should be spoiled and have everything done for them while they are still able," he said.

The U.S. trend for older people to congregate in specially designed retirement communities probably will not be popular here because "the emotional ties to family are still strong," he said.

A 1981 government survey showed that almost 60 percent of the elderly Japanese surveyed thought "it best for the whole family to live together," compared with about 6 percent in the United States and Britain and 12 percent in France. Sixty-five percent of the Americans and 82 percent of the French thought it was best for the younger and older members to meet "from time to time for meals and a chat."

While almost 7 percent of the Americans said they were troubled by a "feeling of having nothing to live for," only 1.3 percent of the Japanese felt that way, probably because of close family ties.

M-A-S-H Vodka Is Given Green Light

NEW YORK (AP) — "M-A-S-H Vodka," packaged in an imitation intravenous bottle and dispensed through a tube, may not fit "accepted standards of fitness and good taste," but a judge has decided it can be sold in New York state.

"One of the prized qualities of vodka is its tastelessness," Judge Richard Wallach said Tuesday, one day after the popular M-A-S-H series folded its tent on television for the last time.

The State Liquor Authority had earlier rejected a petition by the Hawkeye Distilling Company to register the vodka for sale in New York, finding the proposed label and packaging "misleading, deceptive, offensive to the commonly and generally accepted standards of fitness and good taste" and "not dignified."

But Wallach, a Manhattan Supreme Court judge, granted Hawkeye's petition to annul the authority's action, calling it "arbitrary and capricious."

"No rational person could believe that a serious medicinal application of the product was intended," Wallach said.

"Once it appears that neither the bottle nor its label are misleading," the judge wrote, the SLA has no power "to reject a bottle ... simply on the ground that it offends good taste."

The series, which ended Monday after an 11-year run on CBS, often featured the character of surgeon Hawkeye Pierce and his Army buddies drinking vodka made in the doctor's still.

PUBLIC NOTICES

NOTICE

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain deed of Trust executed by George E. Ward and wife Lou F. Ward, to James O. Buchanan, Trustee, dated the 20th day of February, 1979, and recorded in Book Q-47, Page 557, in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, North Carolina, default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured, and the said deed of Trust being by the terms thereof subject to foreclosure, the holder of the indebtedness thereby secured having demanded a foreclosure thereof for the purpose of satisfying said indebtedness, and the Clerk of the Court granting permission for the foreclosure, the undersigned trustee will offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder for cash at the Courthouse Door in Greenville, North Carolina, at 12:00 Noon, on the 4th day of March, 1983, the land, as improved, conveyed in said deed of trust, the same lying and being in Pitt County, North Carolina, and being more particularly described as follows:

BEGINNING at an iron pipe 27 feet, more or less, from the centerline of N. C. Highway No. 33 (formerly U.S. Highway 264), a corner with Charles W. O'Rear, said beginning point being further referenced as being 771 feet, more or less, in a southeasterly direction running thence with the Charles W. O'Rear line N. 69°48'30"E. 140 feet to a iron pipe; running thence S. 30°58'03"W. 75 feet to an iron pipe; running S. 36°23'45"W. 184 feet to an iron pipe, said pipe being located 67.7 feet easterly of the centerline of N. C. Highway 33; running thence N. 20°30'W. 175 feet to the point of Beginning, and containing 0.427 acres, and being part of the property described in that certain deed dated June 1, 1981, from Weldon Elbert Warf, Jr. and wife, Carolyn P. Warf, to Weldon Elbert Warf, Sr. and wife, Ruby Murphy Warf, as recorded in Book A-50, Page 284, of the Pitt County Registry.

SUBJECT, however, to taxes, special assessments and prior encumbrances of record, if any.

Five percent (5%) of the amount of the highest bid must be deposited with the Trustee pending confirmation of the sale.

Dated this 1st day of February, 1983.
