Downtown Mall Removal Abandoned By Merchants

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Downtown Greenville Association, which initiated a survey asking its members whether Evans Mall should be replaced by vehicle traffic and parking, has voted for now not to pursue the matter, according to a DGA official.

Dave Mosier, the association's executive director, said the survey was mailed to 95 members and 25 were circulated at city offices. He added that absentee members of the DGA were not on the survey mailing list. Signatures were not required in order to respond to the survey, he said.

According to Mosier, 64 responses were received, some of them bearing signatures and comments. He said 35 said the mall should be replaced, 26 voted no, and three replies reserved their vote. A breakdown of merchant voting reflected 27 affirmative responses and 19 who were against the issue.

Mosier said that since the vote was considered close and not "overwhelmingly" in favor of altering the mall, the board of directors voted to take no further action. He said that some of the directors, who had helped spearhead the drive to study the mall issue, indicated that they would have chosen to proceed had the vote been more definitive in favor of doing away with the mall.

The spokesman said the effort, part of a move to look at ways of improving downtown business, "never got beyond the feasibility stage" and the DGA did not push to get rid of the mall. He said the organization would have "gone citywide" with a survey if the initial downtown response had indicated there was sentiment to study the issue further.

Mosier said that he and DGA member Jack Edwards, in representing the association on the "Heart of the City" subcommittee of the city's Comprehensive Plan Committee, had taken the matter to the subcommittee. He said it was agreed by the group that the matter would be recommended to the CPC for inclusion on its overall study agenda relative to the downtown area.

According to Mosier, a report by the CPC on its work is due in June and if the committee decides to look into the mall issue, the DGA could reactivate its interest in the matter.

Mayor Percy Cox said the mall is not part of the study objective of the comprehensive committee.

Cox, who sat in on a meeting with Mosier and several other DGA members, said he told the group that if the mall was torn out, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development would probably require reimbursement of funds it granted the city to construct the two-block pedestrian facility.

Cox said it could cost at least $750,000 to reimburse HUD and build a new two-lane street with curb and gutter.

In viewing the possibility of tearing out the walk area, Cox said he personally feels "it would be the biggest mistake we ever made."

He said he feels downtown business would improve if more apartments, and potentially more shoppers, were located in the section. "By doing that, it would bring in more grocery stores and drug stores and related businesses for the area," he suggested.

The Chamber of Commerce-Merchants Association petitioned the City Council in September 1965 for improvements in the downtown area. In October of that year, the council voted to approve the program and to request federal funds. In 1966, at the direction of then-Mayor Eugene West and the council, an application for urban renewal funding was submitted by the Redevelopment Commission. A $6,118,815 grant reservation, representing 75 percent federal funding, was set aside by HUD for the central business district project with the city obligated for the remaining 25 percent or some $2.3 million. The city provided its share through street improvements, sidewalk construction and the underground placement of the utilities distribution system in the CBD. Evans Mall, a part of the downtown plan, was completed at a cost of $425,000 in time for the Christmas shopping season in 1975.

During the project period, 89 downtown buildings were renovated at a cost of about $1 million and nine new buildings, representing some $3 million in new construction, were added. Throughout the planning and construction period, the CBD schedule was reviewed and approved at each stage by a project advisory committee made of some 15 business leaders and property owners in the downtown section.

The CBD plan for the 72-acre project called for cleared land to be sold to redevelopers under conditions that required compliance with the HUD contract. The contract provided that after the sale or lease of real property in the project area, all modifications, including any to the mall, must be consented to by all of the redevelopers who bought disposal parcels from the commission and who would be affected by any proposed modifications.

February Unemployment Statistics Show No Rise

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment held even at 10.4 percent in February as large numbers of jobless Americans awaited further signals of improved hiring prospects before resuming their search of work, the government reported today.

The unchanged unemployment rate resumed an 18-month pattern of rising or stand-still joblessness. That trend had been interrupted only by last month's healthy decline.

When the full-employment, 1.7-million-member U.S. military work force was included, February's overall unemployment rate also held steady at 10.2 percent, the Labor Department said.

Government statisticians said that, in interpreting the health of the civilian labor market, emphasis should be given to what happened in both January and February. They noted that the 0.4 percentage point drop in January might have been exaggerated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics' seasonal adjustment process.

Martin S. Feldstein, chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, said in a telephone interview that the February figures presented "mixed news" and would be "viewed with caution."

He noted that average weekly working hours declined last month, but said he hoped there would be improvement in total employment in March.

White House spokesman Peter Roussel said, "The overall thrust of the economy is good. ... Despite some ups and downs on the road to recovery, we believe the administration has laid a solid foundation for permanent reduction in unemployment and are confident this will occur."

In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, noted that "in the two months between December and February, payroll jobs rose by 150,000."

Ms. Norwood said there was likely no further decline in civilian unemployment because businesses were assessing prospects for an economic turnaround before recalling laid-off workers.

Representatives Approve Major Anti-Recession Bill

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first major anti-recession bill of the 98th Congress has cleared the House by a wide margin and is headed for what is expected to be equally quick action in the Senate.

The $4.9 billion emergency measure, approved 324-95 Thursday, is designed to provide 400,000 permanent jobs and $700 million in emergency housing, food and health care for victims of the recession.

A similar but slightly smaller version of the proposal is scheduled to go before the Appropriations Committee on Monday, with final Senate passage likely later in the week.

President Reagan is expected to sign the measure into law, unless the Republican-controlled Senate takes the unlikely step of adding significantly to the price tag.

During four hours of House debate, there was criticism from only a few Democratic liberals and Republican conservatives who said it will barely nick the nation's unemployment rate, which was 10.2 percent in January.

"To call this a jobs bill in March of 1983 is to mislead millions of people out of work and millions more who will wind up out of work," said Democratic Rep. John Conyers of economically depressed Michigan.

Republican Minority Leader Bob Michel of Illinois said the legislation is "inefficient, misdirected, exploitive and politically tainted ... In a word, it is mediocre."

Before passage in the House, the measure was changed to answer charges that too much of the money would go for "pork barrel" projects benefiting members of the Democrat-controlled House Appropriations Committee, and other senior House Democrats.

Before the amendments were approved, Rep. Del Latta, R-Ohio, said, "If you want to vote for pork, this is it."

In reply, Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the 53-member House Appropriations panel, said, "A man that handles a national program and leaves the district out, he better not go back home."

One amendment, approved 335 to 83, requires that 75 percent of the jobs money go to areas with the highest unemployment rates.

Another amendment, providing an additional $61 million in mass transit funds, would give the Transportation Department, rather than the Appropriations Committee, authority to decide where the money would be spent.

Public works projects included in the bill include mass transit facilities, park improvements, flood control, and soil conservation.

Encouraging N.C. Revenue Data For January And February Seen

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — January and February income tax collections in North Carolina were substantially higher than during the previous six months, an "encouraging sign," Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch said today.

Legislative analysts hailed the development in a report on the state's economy, which they predicted would continue to recover from the recession at least until late summer or early fall.

"The good news in many areas of the economy reduces any slight concern that economists had back in January that there might not be a recovery," said the report by David Crotts, senior fiscal analyst.

Tentative figures released today show that General Fund tax revenues in February rose by .8 percent, which at first glance might seem a steep drop from the final January growth rate of 15 percent.

Lynch, however, said that in order to gain an accurate view of the situation the two months' figures should be combined, yielding an average growth rate of 7.14 percent. For the same two months in 1982, the average rate was 6 percent.

Lynch, who traditionally avoids characterizing revenue figures as parts of economic trends, nevertheless said the General Assembly should be encouraged as it struggles to project revenue increases on which to base a fiscal 1983-85 budget.

"I wouldn't attempt to outguess the General Assembly ... on projecting revenue growth," said Lynch. "But I do consider that the 7.14 percent increase for the two-month period is particularly encouraging in view of the fact that the percent increase was only 4.7 percent for the six-month period through December 1982."

The drastic difference between the January and February revenue collection figures, he said, is due primarily to the fact that in January the state received and deposited a "substantially larger" number of employees' remittances of individual income tax withheld from workers than during the same month the previous year.

"These remittances to the state are received in late January or early February each year and I expect the total number for the two months to be reasonably comparable in each of the two years," said Lynch.

Another positive factor, he said, is that tentative net sales and use tax collections increased by 7.1 percent in January and 9.4 percent in February, compared with only 3.1 percent for the six-month period ending Dec. 31, 1982.

In his analysis, Crotts said the improved revenue collections and better economic news on the national scene painted an optimistic picture.

He said new housing starts, car sales, construction spending, orders for new durable equipment, stock prices and the index of leading indicators are rising while interest rates and oil prices are falling.

Bur Crotts said the Federal Reserve Board needed to keep a close eye on the money supply and reduce its growth at crucial points to avoid inflation and higher interest rates.

Five Still In Hospital From Apartment Blast

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Five persons who were injured Wednesday in an explosion that destroyed 11 units at Village Green Apartments on Heath Street remained in Pitt County Memorial Hospital today.

Richard Seabolt of Durham, the most seriously injured of those hospitalized, was still unconscious this morning but in stable condition, hospital officials said. He had been listed as critical following the blast.

Seabolt had been a visitor in a third-floor apartment directly over the laundry room where the explosion was centered.

David Martin of Raleigh was in the same apartment and was killed. Henry "Hank" Redeker of Raleigh, Martin's roommate, was in stable condition this morning, according to a hospital spokesman.

Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen said investigators have determined that the explosion was fueled by liquid propane gas leaking from a gas clothes dryer in the laundry room. While the blast did center around one of six dryers in the room, "We can't tie it down exactly to what the ignition source was," Allen said.

Local police and fire officials, along with agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and the U.S. Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were cooperating in the hunt for the cause of the blast.

Greenville Fire Marshall Jerry McLawhorn said burn marks on thermostats for the dryers indicate arcing that may have touched off the gas, which had built up in the ground-floor laundry.

Jim Kaufman, Greenville's chief building inspector, said today that four of the apartments that were not destroyed by the explosion were to be torn down today. He said officials have had a difficult time keeping people

PI KAPPA PHI WILL HELP

Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity has offered its house at 803 Hooker Road as a center for anyone wishing to donate clothing or household items to the evacuated residents of Village Green Apartments. Six of those injured or displaced and the deceased were Pi Kappa Phi members and one of the young women was a Pi Kappa Phi "little sister." Fraternity members say they will be glad to pick up donated items if this is needed. The fraternity would also like to coordinate contact between people willing to donate the use of rooms and the parents of injured students who are now staying in Greenville to be near their children. For more information about donating, for pickup of items or for offering a room, call 756-3540.

Long History Of Shoes Full Of Ups And Downs

NEW YORK (AP)—Shoes do a lot more than cover the feet. Throughout history, shoes have had tremendous social significance, and they tell an amazing story of mankind's ingenuity, craftsmanship and artistic imagination, researchers at The Footwear Council have found.

From the Council comes this collection of footwear fact and fancy — sometimes bizarre, sometimes laughable, and sometimes highly practical:

— Platform shoes and sandals are far from a recent trend. In ancient Greece, actors wore 4-inch platforms for that "heroic" appearance on stage. They also used their thick soles to accommodate novelty noise-making devices. They created soles that squeezed like bellows, producing musical sounds with every step and others that clicked like castanets.

— The chopine, with an elevation of 2 to 12 inches or more, spread from Turkey, where it originated, to Venice and then to England. It was popular in the 16th and early 17th centuries.

— Back in the days of King Tutankhamen, highly decorated sandals were one of the privileges of royalty. They had a rather macabre purpose as well: the sole of a sandal might be painted with the effigy of the enemy, the intention being to crush the hated person with every step — rather like a walking voodoo doll.

— Oriental platform shoes looked like soles on stilts. At his coronation in 1926, Emperor Hirohito of Japan rose to truly imperial heights shod in "getas" 12 inches tall.

— In Britain during the third century, a humble shoemaker named Crispin made shoes for the poor by night and preached by day. Because he did not charge for the shoes he made, it was supposed that the leather for them was being miraculously supplied by an angel. In 287 A.D., Crispin was martyred, presumably for not revealing his source, and thus became the patron saint of shoemakers.

— Catherine de Medici, 1519-89, is said to have introduced the high heel and ballet dancing to France. The first high heels had a problem: They were simply flat-soled ballet slippers with a heel attached. Inevitably, the heel would buckle and give out from underneath. One of the first solutions was to mount the entire heeled slipper on a full sole to hold the heel in position.

— In the years after the Crusades, superstition held that shoes with pointy toes would render witches powerless. Pointy toes grew to such extreme lengths that they often extended 12 inches beyond the wearer's own toes, and had to be tied up to a kneeband to allow the fashion-conscious to walk.

— The average human walks the equivalent of two and one half times around the world in a lifetime, even in our society of automobiles and step-saving devices. Americans walk an estimated 3,000 miles a year.

— Thirty years ago, the average American woman's foot was 6B. Now it is 7B, and predicted to grow with each generation.

— Americans are able to choose among some 300 size-width combinations. Moreover, the right size in one shoe isn't necessarily right in another, since manufacturers use "lasts" (or forms for making shoes) in slightly varying sizes and shapes.

Better than 87 percent of households had one or more motor vehicles available in 1980. Nearly 34 percent had two vehicles available and 18 percent had three or more vehicles.

Mountain Climbers: Take Care

By MILLY MCLEAN

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — If you go mountain climbing, be a Boy Scout and Be Prepared — for anything. And if you're going off the beaten track, make sure someone knows your plans.

The people who rescue lost climbers in New Hampshire's rugged White Mountains don't mind performing good deeds in 80 mph winds and bone-chilling cold in a real emergency: an ice climber slips and falls, an avalanche begins unexpectedly, someone has a heart attack.

But sometimes an inexperienced and thoughtless hiker is unprepared or changes his course without telling anyone. When volunteer rescuers have to risk their lives to bail this kind of climber out of trouble — which could have been avoided — they get understandably angry.

Rick Wilcox, coordinator of the small Mountain Rescue Service of North Conway, puts it this way: "We'll help anyone. But we're not kamikaze about it. We're not going to kill of three rescue guys in an effort to save someone. The hikers have a responsibility to take care of themselves.

Probably the most controversial rescue ever made in New Hampshire's mountains involved two Pennsylvania ice climbers who were saved last winter after surviving several days in wind chill factors of at least 100 degrees below zero on 6,288-foot Mount Washington, the tallest mountain in the Northeast.

Albert Dow, a rescue worker, was killed in an avalanche while looking for the two young men — the first rescuer in the area to die in the line of duty.

Hugh Herr, 17, and Jeffrey Batzer, 20, suffered severe frostbite that cost them parts of their extremities. Herr's legs were amputated six inches below the knee while Batzer, 20, lost parts of his fingers.

Rescue workers still debate whether the climbers were negligent.

"They made two different decisions that spelled disaster," said David Warren of the Appalachian Mountain Club. "They changed their route without telling anyone, and they left some heavy equipment behind — leaving them unprepared for a night on the mountain.

"It's a bittersweet experience. Two people managed to stay alive and one person is killed."

Hastings said the Pennsylvania hikers did some things he considered "stupid" — including hiking on the summit of Mount Washington without really knowing where they were going.

Wilcox says, "They were good climbers, but they were unfamiliar with the White Mountains. Were they negligent or did they have bad luck? My opinion is that they had bad luck."

Fish and Game Capt. Henry Mock said the most blatant example he remembers of a hiking mistake involved a young couple who went winter climbing without leaving a note — one of the worst errors a climber can make, he said.

The young man and woman "took shelter in a culvert near Mount Jefferson. A terrible storm set in. We hunted for four days. We had no idea where they were. We had to cover the entire Presidential Range."

Mock said because the couple were protected from the harsh weather, "They were better off than we were. That makes me angry. We've left a nice warm fire to save someone who has been completely reckless."

Wilcox's 25 Mountain Rescue Service volunteers mostly work in shops and tourist-related businesses in the mountains. Like volunteer firefighters, when the call goes out for their services, they drop their work, gather their own equipment and often lose a day's pay at their regular jobs.

Another headache rescuers face is climbers who start up a mountain not knowing that the weather can change from pleasant spring to harsh winter in an instant.

"They get to Pinkham Notch and look at the weather report," Wilcox said. "It's marginal. What do they do, go home? No, they go. Meanwhile the weather has deteriorated with horrible winter winds. It's turned into a huge epic."

Several rescue officials said they learned a lot from the Batzer-Herr incident.

"We're much better coordinated among the agencies," Warren said. "We like to try to have at least one person from each office involved at the command center. We learned a lot about the media and about ground support, the need to have a brainstorming group that is somewhat removed from the rest."

Warren said they also learned that more education is needed, to inform hikers about the special weather patterns and conditions that can turn a pleasant hike into a nightmare.

They don't always get a proper thank you, either.

In many cases they will take someone off a mountain with hypothermia or a broken leg, put them in an ambulance and never hear from them again.

"Sometimes we never know if they lived," said Mock. "So

CAN'T SLEEP

STONY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — If you have trouble falling asleep, you're not alone. An estimated 20 million Americans suffer from chronic insomnia, says the director of a sleep disorders clinic here.

He offers the following advice to help you get a good night's sleep:

— Stick to a regular schedule for going to bed and getting up in the morning.

— Avoid alcohol before bedtime. A nightcap usually disturbs sleep patterns and may make you awaken too early.

— Get regular, daily exercise — but don't exercise just before going to bed.

— Before retiring, try to relax. Take a warm bath, read a novel or listen to music.

many times we never get a thank you. There are only one or two cases where families have donated money."

Most of the funds for the rescue groups comes from of the state Fish and Game Department. Mock estimated it costs $120,000 annually for all kinds of rescues, including drownings and summer rescues.

At least four groups are involved on a regular basis: Fish and Game, U.S. Forest Service, the AMC and the Mountain Rescue Service. A variety of other volunteers, the National Guard, State Police and local officials also help on occasion.

"Our motive is to help people. We also have a little bit of a selfish motive. If the fish and game and state police can't successfully perform rescues in the mountains, then the logical thing is to close down the mountains. We like to climb and we make our living sending people into the mountains so we want them to remain open," Wilcox said.

"Very often we get a call at 2 or 3 in the morning. Some people have this idea that we're real excited about rescues. But it's not something we eagerly go into."

The Pony Express offered mail delivery time of 10 days in winter and eight in summer. It was discontinued in 1861 when the company went bankrupt.

Care Extends As Far As Office Door

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible to have a genuine friendship with your doctor? I am a professional woman who has grown very fond of my woman physician during this past year. She treated me for a medical problem and has helped me a great deal with some personal problems, too.

From the very beginning I felt a strong attraction between us. We've attended the same social functions and have lunched together on occasion. After my medical problem was resolved, I had the feeling that my doctor wanted to end the personal relationship that I thought was just beginning to develop.

When I asked her about this, she said we could not maintain both a social relationship and a patient-doctor relationship, but she was quite willing to be my doctor.

I have trouble understanding this, as my husband and I have a social relationship with our lawyer and other professional types we deal with and it's never created any problems.

I would appreciate hearing your view or those of your readers on this topic.

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: It's my opinion that you came on too strong, and your physician felt that she couldn't handle a social relationship with you. In any case, she told you as diplomatically as she could that she prefers not to socialize with you.

Please accept her decision with grace and don't pursue her.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I returned to his hometown 80 miles away to attend a family wedding and stayed with his parents as usual. We asked in advance if we could bring a young woman who had also been invited to the wedding and were told that she was also welcome to stay with them as they had ample room.

When we arrived we were all told which bedrooms were ours to use. After the wedding and reception, we returned late and very tired. Upon retiring, we found there were absolutely no sheets on our beds, so rather than go searching for bed linen, we slept on the beds with no sheets.

The next morning, my husband politely teased his mom about the bed being bare of sheets. Mom became defensive and said she didn't appreciate our sleeping on her beds without sheets, and called us "lazy" for not finding sheets and making up the beds ourselves!

This conversation took place in the presence of the friend we brought with us and it was very embarrassing. I was offended by my mother-in-law's remarks. Our visits are rare, and she had plenty of notice that we were coming.

Question: Wasn't Mom the lazy one for not being prepared for our visit? Or were we the lazy ones for not making our beds at such a late hour?

MIDNIGHT SURPRISE

DEAR SURPRISE: Obviously Mom wasn't properly prepared for your visit, but that doesn't necessarily make her "lazy." And neither can you be called "lazy" for opting to sleep sheetless as you did. But all the unpleasantness could have been avoided had your husband not "politely teased" Mom about her thoughtlessness.

You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Mania Led To Career In Clothing

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — West Murray says she has been a collector all her life.

"When I was little, it was rocks and bottles," she said. "Then toys. I gradually worked into children's clothes. Being a stylist for photographers naturally led me in this direction."

The result is a new career for Mrs. Murray who recently opened a shop for children's vintage clothes, from infancy on up to size 14. Strangely, the clothes are brand new in that they were never sold at retail, never worn. But they date to the 1940s and 1950s.

Mrs. Murray — her unusual first name has no significance, she says — concentrated on that period "because everything had more taste then."

"Stylewise, constructionwise, things were so superior then. You don't find that nowadays." Her shop, called Kidz, is unique in the nation, she believes. That is why she won't divulge her sources for her collecting. "After you've collected for years, you know the companies, the stores," she explained. "Why give that away to any possible competitor?"

Her husband Bob travels the world on freelance photo assignments. But home is in New York's SoHo district, south of Greenwich Village, in a loft building.

"That's why we had room for storing all our collections," she said in an interview at her nearby shop.

The Murrys have two children, Jenny, 13, and Rio, 4.

"My daughter since she was small liked to dress up in neat clothes," she said. "My small son loves getting rigged out in short-sleeve cotton shirts, bow-ties and suspenders and boots that have Gene Autry or Red Ryder markings." "I think we're trying to hold onto the past, to gather things from our childhood," said Mrs. Murray, 34. "People come in and look at a cotton dress with twirly skirt and applique and say, 'Oh, I had a dress just like that once.'"

"Didn't we all," Mrs. Murray said.

Best sellers, so far, have been dresses for little girls, and shirts which either sex can wear.

The shop, neat as a newly starched dress, offers an assortment of things you'd be hard put to find elsewhere. There are a lot of Davy Crockett and Hopalong Cassidy items, Gene Autry boots, Popeye T-shirts, Pluto gloves, all-cotton socks, cotton infant's wear, saddle shoes and crinoline dresses as well as pretty silks and cottons, cowboy spats, tiny robes in chenille, cotton sweatshirts and boys' sports jackets you can't find elsewhere today.

Mrs. Murray seems unworried at the prospect of one day running out of clothing. "The whole backroom of this shop is filled," she said. "And so is one room of the apartment."

"You know, I get customers who have no children but just want a nostalgia dress. For a wall hanging, I guess."

WINTER SALAD — Sweet Spanish onion, sliced in rings, enlivens a salad of avocado and tomato.

Spanish Onion Enlivens Salads

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Sweet Spanish onions, widely available now, are great to use in winter salads.

One of the best tasting — and the best liked — of these salads is made with membrane-free orange sections, Spanish onion rings, salad greens and an oil-and-vinegar dressing. Since this salad was first concocted, good cooks have been adding to it in interesting ways. Here are five of them:

Avocado, peeled, seeded and cut in lengthwise slices or crosswise rings, looks pretty and tastes good with the citrus combination.

Pitted ripe olives, whole or halved, can go in.

Blue or Roquefort cheese, crumbled, may be scattered over the salad.

Fresh red peppers, when they are available, make a colorful addition. Just seed the peppers and cut them in slices or rings. When fresh peppers aren't on hand, you may want to use the roasted sweet red peppers that come in jars, or pimientos from jars or cans.

Strips of bacon, cooked until crisp, may be used to top the salad "as is" or the bacon may be crumbled.

Another excellent salad is made with Spanish onion rings, sliced avocado and tomato wedges. When fresh tomatoes are red-ripe and full of flavor, they may be used; but if they're not on hand, you may prefer to add cherry tomatoes.

The best guacamole I have ever tasted used to be served at a Mexican restaurant in my neighborhood. It differed from other guacamole recipes because of its utter simplicity — in my opinion, a great virtue. The avocado for the guacamole was mashed just until it was partly smooth and the only ingredients added were sweet Spanish onion — diced coarsely enough to be in distinguishable pieces — and salt and freshly ground pepper. It was served in a bowl, along with a basket of corn chips for dipping, as an appetizer. But there's no reason why this guacamole can't be served as a salad. This way, heap it on salad greens and garnish it any way you like. At my house, the garnish depends on what is in the refrigerator or on the pantry shelf.

Timing Is Not The Best

The state House has given initial approval to a bill that would give members of the General Assembly another $100 a week in fringe benefits. That's the result of legislation that would allow lawmakers to take a $50-a-day automatic deduction for weekends on their state income taxes.

Similar benefits are already available on week days for state tax reporting, and legislators can now claim deductions for each day of the week on their federal taxes. As for weekends, state law now requires the legislators to go through the bothersome task of itemizing their expenses. This new proposal, for legislators who routinely leave Raleigh on weekends, just simplifies the procedure. It's icing on the cake for those who stay in the capital city.

There is poor timing behind the legislation. It comes at a time when the General Assembly supposedly is faced with depressed revenue for a budget beefed by inflation. And here is still another bill that many — if not most — people will see simply as another self-compensating perk for legislators.

No one wants legislators to work for peanuts. Their expenses are high. And even a traveling salesman has the right to deduct his business expenses, so why shouldn't a legislator. But when a lack of state revenue creates a situation in which teachers face the loss of their jobs, highways reach a state of disrepair and the university system is told it may be relegated to a second-cousin status, it's not the time for legislators to feather their own pockets — however reasonable it might be.

Responsibility Is Shared

Despite cautious words to the effect that the United Steelworkers' new contract accepting a reduced hourly wage "does not set a pattern", our own inclination is otherwise.

During the long months of economic recession a large number of manufacturers have reached contracts with organized labor that were marked by lower wage agreements, and the reasons are obvious. Labor costs are the biggest single factor in the cost and pricing of goods.

The policy of constantly rising pay levels paid big dividends for the national economy at one stage of its development. That time may well be behind us.

The field of consumer goods in the United States today is heavily permeated if not dominated by foreign manufacturers whose production costs are much lower than American-made goods. Just last month, the Atari people announced they were moving their once-booming operations overseas. They couldn't grow (perhaps survive) against foreign competition; and competition is the name of the game.

Organized labor contributed much to the wealth and welfare of the American working man, but at this point the unions are faced with the facts of life: they share management's responsibility for maintaining production costs at a competitive level. It's either that, or go hungry.

Government can not do it alone.

More To The Story

WASHINGTON — Several weeks ago, we wrote a column about the electronics industry's opposition to a new federal regulation that prohibits defense contractors from including lobbying costs in their product price tags. At the time, we were interested in how big a fuss the arms industry was making about so little a cut.

Since then, however, we've learned that there's more to the story. The Reagan administration's honorable disavowal of "advocacy" costs in government contracts may have only been a smokescreen for subsequent regulation which, barring quick congressional action, could neutralize hundreds of non-profit philanthropical groups across the United States. A broad spectrum of organizations is rightly upset about the rule.

For years U.S. law has prohibited recipients of federal project grants from using such monies to influence lawmakers, the courts or public opinion. Simply put, the notion has been that taxpayer dollars shouldn't be used to begot more taxpayers' dollars.

But on Jan. 24, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) suggested a new rule which would bar federally-subsidized groups from engaging in politics even if their public monies support non-political activities. It advised that subsidized groups organize separate, independently-funded offices for political operations.

For the administration, the proposed rule has been a political matter itself. Right-wing groups have repeatedly denounced direct government assistance to those organizations that advocate or pursue policies in opposition to their own. Under Reagan, the effort to "defund the left" has become a matter of policy. The Heritage Foundation's 1981 "mandate for leadership" suggested dismantling of "Democratic constituencies"; and Conservative Digest has been sounding the attack ever since. Last year the Department of Health and Human Services probed whether Planned Parenthood spends federal dollars on lobbying, but uncovered nothing sinister.

Yet, political decisions about housing, jobs and other facts of life have historically depended on the advice of those who deliver the services. Often times those who run such agencies are better informed about, say, refugee resettlement than government officials. The experience in the field of groups such as the American Red Cross, the National Council on Alcoholism and the Audubon Society "is vital to shaping policy," said Matt Ahmann of the National Conference of Catholic Charities to our reporter Michael Duffy.

"The Reagan administration doesn't understand the role of this sector in interpreting the needs of people to public servants," added Brian O'Connell, president of a 450-member coalition of prestigious corporations, charities and volunteer groups known as Independent Sector. "It has a total blind spot on this one."

Unfortunately, the OMB rule, written by chief council Michael J. Horowitz, would give non-profit groups a difficult choice between federal funds or loss of political advocacy rights. Harder still, directors of such social service groups, for whom dealing with government is a daily responsibility, will have to settle either for dispassionately delivering services or for getting out of the business altogether. Either way, a tradition of public/private partnership is doomed to suffer.

One might think that business opposition would force the Reagan administration to think again about its new rule. Representatives of many mammoth corporations with independent non-profit arms — such as Conoco, Inc., Philip Morris, Inc., and General Electric Co. — are already buttonholing congressmen, turning out favorable public comment for the federal record and planning a court test. Both Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Texas) and Sen. David Durenberger (R-Minn.) plan hearings during the first week of March. And Horowitz has done little to calm the waters, calling a vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers an unprintable name at a recent Executive Office Building briefing for 40 business leaders.

RALEIGH — It's great fun to pick up the paper every night and read about another oil producer who's had to cut his prices. Watching the Arab oil ministers cut each other up is more fun than watching an Olympic hockey brawl between the Russians and the East Germans.

But before you start spending the money you think you're going to save on electricity rates, you'd better listen to what officials of the state's three leading electric utilities have to say. The oil price is a step in the right direction that may have some good indirect effects on power bills, they say. But substantially lower rates? Sorry, not much chance.

Some utilities really stand to gain from the oil price war. As dollars drop off the price of a barrel of crude, oil-dependent utilities in the Northeastern United States will save a great deal of money.

Utilities in North Carolina began moving away from oil a long time ago, however. Here coal is much less expensive than oil, although utilities use some to get their burners started. Carolina Power & Light uses oil for 1 percent of its electricity generation. Virginia Electric Power Co. uses oil for only 4 percent, and it's trying to reduce even that.

"Dropping oil prices have already helped us," Vepco President Bill Berry said in an interview. "We spent $83 million on oil last year and if the price drops only 10 percent, that means we'll have saved $8 million. Still, that's only 4 percent ... and if that's all that happens, I think we can say that it will only help to slow the rate at which prices rise because there are other costs associated with electricity which are rising."

One of those costs is natural gas. As oil has dropped in price, natural gas increases have risen to take away some of the savings, Berry said. Vepco has some plants which can burn both natural gas and oil, however. He said that if oil continues to drop in price, Vepco will most likely use oil instead of gas in those plants.

Bill Lee, Duke Power's chief executive, said lower oil prices could have an indirect effect on North Carolina rates: "If the price drop means downward pressure on coal prices, yes, that could help." Are they connected? "I do remember that the largest jump in coal prices in my lifetime came right after the oil price jumped."

Berry noted, however, that the price of oil would have to be cut in half before it would be competitive with coal. To produce a kilowatt hour of electricity, you need a nickel's worth of oil, two cents' worth of coal or a half-cents' worth of nuclear fuel. It would appear that oil prices would have to drop significantly before coal producers would worry about losing customers back to oil.

Al Watson, CP&L vice president for fuel, said the oil price war will help power bills in two minor ways. That 1 percent of oil-generated electricity will be cheaper to produce and CP&L's fleet of vehicles will pay less for gasoline. In a third area, the savings might be more substantial. Coal producers use a lot of diesel fuel to dig their product out of the ground. Utility companies then have to pay substantial fees to ship the coal to their plants. If oil prices are lower, the cost of mining and transporting coal may be lower. And a substantial savings might be realized for North Carolina electricity consumers.

The days of cheap electricity are not returning, even as oil prices drop. But at least we have some satisfaction in knowing that the shieks are finally getting their comeuppance.

Facing The Facts In Chicago

Americans can get used to almost everything — except Chicago holding an honest election. It's more than anyone can absorb. If the last successful Democratic political machine in the country can't elect its chosen candidate, then the party is in a lot more trouble than anybody thought.

The question is, why couldn't the machine deliver Mayor Byrne the nomination as promised? What happened to Richard Daley Jr., whose father ruled Chicago with an iron hand?

The answer is that Cook County for the first time in history had to change its election rules.

In one polling place on the North Side Dino Pinowski showed up at noon to cast his ballot.

The clerk said, "Dino, you already voted once this morning."

"So?" Dino said.

"You see that fellow over there? He's a federal poll watcher and he's insisting on a one-man, one-vote policy."

"But I always vote more than once in an election," Dino said. "Remember in 1960 when I voted four times?"

"Not so loud, Dino. He might hear you."

"What will my precinct captain say to me if he hears I only voted once today?"

"You'll have to tell him it wasn't your fault."

"He doesn't accept excuses like that. I have to show him three voting receipts or I won't be able to keep my city job."

"You'll have to tell him that due to circumstances beyond my control I could let you vote once."

"He won't believe me. You're going to have to give me a note to that effect."

"I can't give you a note, Dino. But ask him to call me at home and I'll confirm it."

"I don't believe it. My family has been voting three times each in an election for 30 years. My father always told me the more you voted the better government you get. He said one person's vote isn't going to change anything in this country."

"Your father was right, up to a point. But because the Feds got into this election, we had to change the qualifications. I don't like it any more than you do, but I don't want to go to jail."

"Okay, as long as I'm here, do you want me to load up the ballot boxes and hide them in my garage?"

"I can't give you the ballot boxes, Dino. I have to turn them over to the vote counters."

"You mean you're counting the votes right away? What the hell kind of election is this? Suppose the precinct goes against our candidate? We'll all be up the creek. Give me the ballot boxes for a couple of hours, just so I can tell how we're doing."

"Dino, they won't let us take the ballot boxes out the door. They're grabbing them as soon as they're full."

"I can't believe this could take place in a free country. I thought something like this only happened in Russia."

"Dino, you're holding up the line."

"Well, if I can't vote more than once for myself, can I vote for these people?"

"What people?"

"The list you told me to get from the graveyard. I only took the names of people who died in the last 15 years, like you told me."

"Will you shut up, and get out of here?"

"Look, I took the day off at my own expense. If I can't vote more than once, can I bring in some people from downstate to cast their ballots in our ward?"

"They have to be registered voters in Cook County."

"Since when?"

"Since they sent the federal marshals in. You're a loyal prect worker, Dino, and someday you will be a captain. But right now there isn't a thing you can do to help our candidate win. For the first time the voters are going to have to decide for themselves."

"That's one helluva thing to say on election day. I'll tell you one thing, Kelly. This would have never happened if Mayor Daley was alive."

Strength For Today

"If I don't take their money, someone else will."

So said a business man who doubtless considers himself to be honest. He felt that some people just don't have the capacity to hang on to their money and that, since someone was going to get it away from them, he had a right to share in the process.

It is strange reasoning that leads men to justify themselves on any such basis. The fact that wrong is going to be committed anyway does not relieve the man who commits it of moral responsibility.

Jesus said, "It must needs be that offenses come, but woe to the man by whom the offense cometh." The inevitableness of a situation is no excuse for a person who implicates himself in it.

All of our acts carry moral consequences, and we are responsible for those consequences. "It was going to be done anyway, so I thought I might as well profit by it," will be a weak defense on Judgment Day.

Big Names Move Into Real Estate Scene

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of real estate brokers has found that 89 percent of them operate from single offices, specializing in a local community and maybe even a neighborhood within them.

But big business is planning to change that.

The threat to the small independent broker isn't new, having begun before the near-collapse of real estate markets three or four years ago. But now, as markets recover, big-business real estate is gathering strength again.

Sears Roebuck, long known as a purveyor of retail goods; Control Data, generally thought of as a computer maker; and Merrill Lynch, popularly identified with common stocks all plan to expand their real estate holdings.

All three companies are also big in financial services, of which real estate is but one aspect, and intend to use their expertise in areas such as finance and insurance to deliver "total packages" to homebuyers.

As real estate activity picks up, the names of four big outfits, all of whom have had their growth plans stymied during the recession, are likely to become bigger factors in real estate through advertising and promotion.

Century 21, Electronic Realty Associates, Realty World and Red Carpet, the four biggest franchisors, all plan marketing campaigns as the economy improves, according to the National Association of Realtors.

Red Carpet, which offers a national affiliation with independent management of local offices, has concentrated its activities in the West, South and more recently the Midwest, but has ideas of entering many other states.

ERA was purchased last year by Commercial Credit Management Corp., a subsidiary of Control Data. By the end of 1982 it had opened 45 Control Data Homeowner Centers, offering homebuyers first and second mortgages, insurance and closing and relocation services. It hopes to add 500 franchisees next year.

Merrill Lynch Realty and Relocation has been buying well-managed local real estate brokerage businesses. It owns 26 firms in 40 metropolitan areas, with 300 sales offices and 8,000 sales person. It has expressed intentions of having a presence in the top 50 urban markets within the next several years.

Sears Roebuck has been building its presence through ownership of Coldwell Banker, a real estate company that established affiliates in nearly two dozen major metropolitan areas.

The motivation behind the big-company activities is the realization that real estate is ripe for professional management and training, and homebuyers ripe for salesmen to present a variety of other services.

All homebuyers need insurance. Most homeowners need help with financing. Many need help with disposing of old homes. Some might need help with moving. Moreover, many of them could use help with total financial planning.

Merrill Lynch, to name one company, can offer all these services in a package, earning multiple commissions and in the process learning more about a family's financial condition and needs than any other outsider.

What it amounts to is the modernization of an industry that has always been made up of relatively small operators who seldom wandered more than 100 miles or so from their main office.

Through their many offices, the big outfits now in the process of going national can offer a family moving from the one coast to another a variety of assistance even before they make a move.

In that they undoubtedly have an advantage over the local real estate operator, but an advantage that doesn't necessarily put them in a commanding position.

What the small real estate broker can offer is human services and human rather than computer know-how about the local scene. That is, the personal touch, an element that has disappeared from so many industries today.

Controllers' Plea Ends Felony Count

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Five leaders of the 1981 air traffic controllers strike have pleaded guilty to misdemeanor contempt of court charges in a plea bargain that ended felony charges against them.

The U.S. attorney's office agreed to recommend probation and community service for Albert Stephens, 43; William Newton, 34; Darrell Reazin, 44; Robert Kenny, 35, and Robert Butterworth, 38.

After the pleas Thursday, U.S. District Judge Stanley Weigel set sentencing for March 28.

The five were among 71 leaders of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization nationwide who faced charges in the walkout, which ended when President Reagan fired all strikers for violating no-strike laws for federal workers.

The five, who worked at air control centers in Fremont and Oakland, originally were charged with breaking that law, which carried a potential $1,000 fine and year in prison. The misdemeanor penalties are half that.

The defendants claimed they had been singled out for prosecution because of their leadership in the union. But the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said that issue could be raised only on appeal after a trial.

Three Economists Say Must Reduce Deficits

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — President Reagan must cut back on defense spending and reduce expected federal budget deficits in order to keep a recovery going, say three of the nation's top economists.

Murray L. Weidenbaum, Paul W. McCracken and Joseph A. Pechman lectured at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro on Thursday.

Pechman, a senior economist with the Brookings Institution, labeled as "irresponsible" the deficits proposed by Reagan. What happens to the economy next year depends on whether Congress can bring those deficits under control, he said.

"This economy cannot grow with deficits that large," Pechman said. "It can accommodate them this year and not do any harm but it's the outyears that they do harm."

Such huge deficits, he said, will take away money needed for business expansion and force interest rates back up, thereby cutting off the recovery as occurred following a 1980 recovery from another recession.

McCracken, chief economist in the Nixon administration, said while a sharp increase in the military budget won't kill the recovery this year, deficits of $200 billion to $250 billion forecast for the next several years could hurt long-term recovery.

He said Reagan must be persuaded to take immediate action to reduce those deficits and that one area that needs scrutiny is military spending.

But Weidenbaum said that won't be easy since Reagan feels strongly about national security and has said if he had to choose between that and a weaker economy, he would pick national security.

Weidenbaum, now a professor at Washington University in St. Louis, was a former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors in the Reagan administration.

He and Pechman disagreed over who is to blame for the deficits now being forecast.

Pechman said Reagan is responsible, but Weidenbaum said Congress did not reduce spending as much in 1981 as Reagan requested while forcing the President to accept additional, unwanted tax cuts in order to get his own tax-cut package passed.

Weidenbaum also disagreed with Pechman's claim that social spending has been cut about as much as possible and the budget deficits can be reduced only through higher taxes and lowered military spending.

Weidenbaum said the economy would be much better off if the deficits were half their projected size but increasing the tax burden won't help.

Suing Over Use Of Fund

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Federal officials filed a civil suit against Shaw University and its president and business manager Thursday, claiming they used school retirement funds to pay university operating expenses.

The suit alleges university president Stanley Smith and business manager William Love violated the Employee Retirement Income Security Act by failing to remit employee contributions to Shaw's retirement plan on a "timely basis."

The two also allegedly failed to collect employer contributions to the plan and remit them on time, U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said in a news release.

Currin said both men are responsible for enrolling participants and sending plan premiums for each participant to a non-profit life insurance and annuity company each month.

The complaint, filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, says the delinquent payment of the contributions and the use of the money for operating expenses have "caused substantial losses to the retirement plan."

Currin asked the court to remove Smith and Love from their positions in charge of the retirement plan and to make them personally responsible for any losses.

SHOOTING FOR A RECORD ... Bill Bennett (left) watches as partner Ty Taylor sets up his shot on the fourth day of their attempt to break the world record for consecutive pool-playing. They have been shooting since 8 a.m. Monday and will have to go nine days without stopping to break the world's record. The two Ayden men solicited pledges for their project and will donate the money to the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation. A surprise visit from the ECU cheerleaders Thursday raised their spirits. "We're gonna do it," said Taylor. "If they don't, we're gonna get a big stick after them," added a bystander. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Theorizes Oxygen A Factor In Aging

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Oxygen, essential for human life, may also play a role in much of the deterioration associated with aging, say researchers at Duke University Medical Center.

If the theory is true, future scientists may be able to slow the aging process by increasing the body's natural defenses against the harmful effects of oxygen.

"We're still a long way from discovering a biochemical fountain of youth," said Duke biochemist Dr. Irwin Fridovich. "But there have been many exciting advances in this field of inquiry."

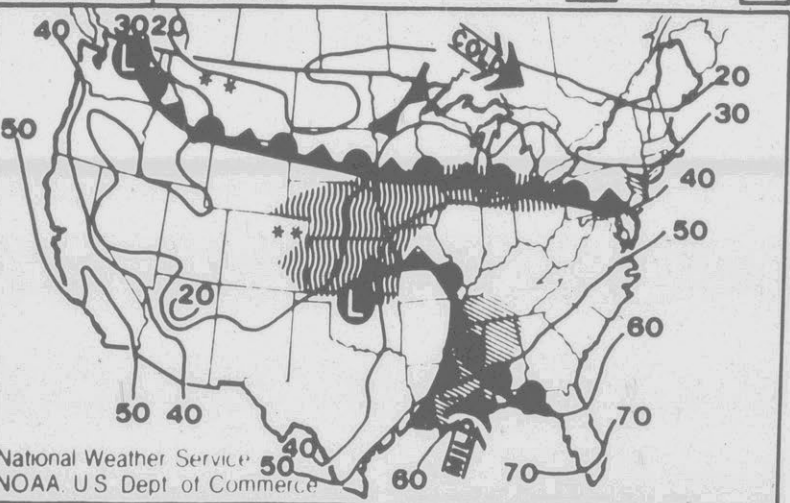

Fridovich and his students discovered 15 years ago that as the body uses oxygen it naturally converts some of it into damaging toxic substances. The body's defensive enzymes eliminate most of them.

"But no defense is perfect," Fridovich said. "We would need an infinite amount of the enzymes to take care of all the toxic substances produced by oxygen metabolism. The enzymes minimize the damage, which accumulates slowly over the course of 60 or 70 years, the normal life span."

Biochemists theorize that if we could supplement the body's production of the enzymes, we might be able to delay the aging process even more. The enzymes are being produced in large quantities in laboratories and are being tested abroad as pharmaceutical agents. Scientists also have been able to stimulate increased production of the enzymes in laboratory animals.

The Forecast For Saturday, March 5 • Low Temperatures

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts mild weather for most of the country on Saturday. Cold is forecast from the northern Plains to New England and rain from the central Gulf to the upper Mississippi. Showers are expected for the central Plains and upper Midwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A very large area of low pressure covering much of the western third of the nation will slowly begin to effect the weather over North Carolina during the weekend.

This stormy weather that gave California and much of the western states severe weather just recently will now move into the Mississippi Valley by early Saturday.

This will spread some showers and thunderstorms into the mountains of North Carolina tonight and across much of the state Saturday into Sunday.

The showers and thunderstorms will be with us through the end of the weekend and probably into the beginning of next week.

Temperatures on Thursday were warm for this time of the year. By mid and late afternoon the bulk of the state had mercury levels in the 60s and 70s. Fayetteville with a 77 was top on the scale, while 64 at Cape Hatteras was one of the lowest.

Mountain stations varied from 76 at Hot Springs and Bryson City to a cool 52 at Mt. Mitchell.

Variably cloudy tonight with scattered showers and thunderstorms developing over the mountains then statewide by Saturday. Low tonight in the 40s and 50s. High Saturday in the 60s and low 70s. Windy Saturday.

Along the coast winds will be southwest at 10 to 20 knots through tonight.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF TRAVEL

TRAVEL IN BIBLICAL TIMES WAS AT LEAST A CHALLENGE. THE ROADS, IF THEY COULD BE CALLED THAT, WERE NIGH IMPASSABLE IN PLACES. ADDED TO THE DANGER OF ROVING BANDS OF BRIGANDS, THE SCARCITY OF PALATABLE DRINKING WATER OR WELLS TO DRAW FROM, MADE MANY A WEARY INDIVIDUAL WISH HE HAD FORGONE THE DUBIOUS PLEASURE OF THE TRAVEL THAT BROADENS AND EDUCATES. CARAVANS, THAT SLOWLY TRUDGED AWAY THE TIRESOME MILES, WERE THE MAIN EXPEDIENT BY WHICH THE PEOPLE WERE ENABLED TO REACH THEIR DESTINATIONS. AS A POINT IN FACT, YOU CAN SEE THE TEDIOUS DIFFICULTIES WHEN YOU REALIZE THAT BEFORE NEHEMIAH, WHO WAS TRAVELING BY SPEEDY CHARIOT, COULD SEE THE RUINS OF JERUSALEM, WHICH HE WAS GOING TO REBUILD, FOUR MONTHS WENT BY FROM THE TIME OF HIS SETTING OUT UNTIL HIS ARRIVAL AT THE RUINED CITY!

Faith 'Imperative' To An Exile

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

Alexander Solzhenitsyn, honored this week as "a pioneer in the renaissance of religion in atheist nations," says humanity is at a watershed when life's noblest lights have been dimmed and advance is possible only by religious renewal.

Achieving it would be like "climbing onto the next anthropological stage," says Solzhenitsyn, the expelled Russian writer who was named this week to receive the 1983 Templeton prize of about $170,000 for progress in religion. He has also won the Nobel Prize for literature.

The world "has reached a major watershed in history, equal in importance to the turn from the Middle Ages to the Renaissance," he says. "It will demand from us a spiritual blaze."

"We shall have to rise to a new height of vision, to a new level of life, where our physical nature will not be cursed, as in the Middle Ages, but even more importantly, our spiritual being will not be trampled upon, as in the modern era."

He says that trampling of spiritual-moral realities has occurred in different ways both in the antireligious materialism of totalitarian Eastern Europe and in the West's commercial materialism and divorce from religious values.

"At first glance this seems an ugly parallel," he says. "But such is the logic of materialistic development." Solzhenitsyn, who has lived most of his 64 years under Soviet communism, 13 of them in labor camps or Siberia for his criticism of the Soviet system, says its atheist dictatorship is "a leveling of mankind unto death."

Expelled to the West eight years ago and now living in Cavendish, Vt., he sees similar corrosive trends at work in America. He summed them up in a 1978 Harvard University address as an "eroded humanism" cut off from religious roots.

That is the present state of the West — "the proclaimed and practiced autonomy of man from any higher force above him," he said.

While the Renaissance threw off the shackles of the Middle Ages, which repressed man's physical nature in favor of spiritual aspects, he said that revolt from the spirit has now gone to the other extreme of sheer materialism.

It has pointed Western civilization toward "worshipping man and his material needs," while spiritual values are blanked out "as if human life did not have any higher meaning," Solzhenitsyn said.

"In American democracy at the time of its birth, all individual human rights were granted on the ground that man is God's creature. That is, freedom was given to the individual conditionally, in the assumption of his constant religious responsibility."

But now, he said, "all such limitations were eroded everywhere in the West" with "total emancipation from the moral heritage of Christian centuries with their great reserves of mercy and sacrifice."

He said "destructive and irresponsible freedom has been granted boundless space, leaving society defenseless against decadence, such as misuse of liberty for moral violence against young people" in films of pornography, crime and horror.

"The West has finally achieved the rights of man, and even to excess, but man's sense of responsibility to God and society has grown dimmer and dimmer," he said. "It is time, in the West, to defend not so much human rights as human obligations."

"We have placed too much hope in politics and social reforms, only to find out that we were being deprived of our most precious possession: our spiritual life. It is trampled by the party mob in the East, by the commercial one in the West."

The trend has reached a peak in the world, he said, bringing it to a "harsh spiritual crisis and a political impasse. All the celebrated technological achievements of progress, including the conquest of outer space, do not redeem the 20th century's moral poverty...

"Only moral criteria can help the West against communism's well-planned world strategy. There are no other criteria."

Solzhenitsyn is the 11th person chosen for the Templeton prize, which is judged by an international panel. It is to be presented May 10 in London. It was inaugurated in 1972 by American financier John M. Templeton, a Presbyterian layman.

First Time For Church Council

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time, the National Council of Churches has elected a Roman Catholic to head its Faith and Order Commission, which deals with doctrinal issues among the churches.

Brother Jeffrey Gros, a former theological professor and staff official of the Memphis-Roman Catholic Diocese, will oversee the analysis of theological issues among the council's 32 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations and other member churches, such as Roman Catholics and Southern Baptists.

Gros succeeds the late Rev. Jerry Boney, to whom Gros was assistant. The council has had other Roman Catholic executives, but never one to lead the key doctrinal commission.

For Las Vegas Convention

NASHVILLE (AP) — Although some officials opposed going there because of the gambling, the Southern Baptist executive committee has recommended the denomination hold its 1989 convention in Las Vegas.

From a "military viewpoint, the best troops are put where the fires are the hottest," contended Doug Waterson of Shelby N.C. "If the appellation of 'Sin City' is appropriate for Las Vegas, then that is the place for us to go. I favor going because it is the worst place we could go."

$1.6 Million To Media Projects

Kidnapped Child Is Found Unhurt

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — FBI agents waited until a kidnapper demanded a $250,000 ransom, then jumped him and freed his frightened 4-year-old hostage from the trunk of a car on the fringe of a darkened golf course, authorities said.

The blond, blue-eyed youngster, abducted from his home here Tuesday, was found unhurt Thursday night.

Thomas Gordon Ross, 39, a former golf course superintendent in nearby Stuart, was arrested in the kidnapping of David Edward Rattray, son of prominent Vero Beach physician Charles F. Rattray Jr.

Ross was wounded in the head by a shot from his own small-caliber weapon during a scuffle with federal agents and Indian River County sheriff's deputies, authorities said.

"I can't describe how happy we are to have him back... he was treated well... we don't wish anybody any harm," said Rattray, holding his son in his arms in the glare of floodlights at the sheriff's department command post.

FBI agent Joseph Corless said it was "entirely possible there are other individuals involved," but would not elaborate.

Corless and Sheriff Tim Dobeck told reporters the kidnapper had tricked his way into Rattray's two-story home in an exclusive section of this Atlantic coastal community by claiming to be a power company employee.

The intruder bound and gagged David and the housemaid, then drove off in the maid's car, which he later abandoned, they said.

The kidnapper contacted the family once Wednesday and then failed to do so later that day as promised.

Shortly after nightfall Thursday, he called and issued instructions directing Rattray to Dodge Pine Golf Club with $250,000 in a pillowcase, Corless said.

When Rattray arrived, he heard a voice telling him to leave the money against a fence, Corless said.

Deputies and FBI agents approached the man making the pickup. They scuffled and this "resulted in him shooting himself in the head," Corless said.

As he lay bleeding on the grass, the balding man was surrounded by agents shouting, "Where's the boy?"

The child was discovered in the trunk of a car parked near the golf course fence.

No Pay For 'Doggie Bag'

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Philadelphia officials say their city has been supplying New Jersey with an enormous "doggie bag" each year, and ought to get paid for it.

But the Garden State's outraged energy commissioner advised the Philadelphians "to emulate their favorite son, Ben Franklin, and go fly a kite."

Philadelphia is seeking a recycling grant from New Jersey, contending it delivered 30,000 tons of recycled food scraps to pig farmers in the southern part of the state last year.

The city, which state officials say is the largest single customer of south New Jersey landfills, claimed it qualified for the recycling grant because the food waste from hotels, restaurants and food stores had been separated from other trash and fed to pigs.

Leonard S. Coleman, the New Jersey energy commissioner, said out-of-state dumping has been a sore point in New Jersey for years, and that the city was "adding insult to injury."

"We do not appreciate Philadelphia's reaching across the Delaware River to dip its hand into New Jersey's pocketbook," Coleman said.

"It was clearly the intent of the recycling act to reward municipalities within the state the Legislature represents; that body did not intend to make Philadelphia the state's 568th municipality," Coleman said.

Pirates End Year With 76-60 Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's basketball Pirates wound up the 1982-83 regular season with a 76-60 romp over NAIA member Penn State-Behrend last night, in a game that could have seen them win more handily than they did.

But for some reason, the Pirates never really stayed with it during the evening, bulging out to as much as an 18-point lead once and to 17 on a number of occasions. Still, they never really seemed to take the Cubs by the throat when they had them up against the wall.

The Cubs, who led briefly twice in the early stages of the game, fell behind for good on a jumper by Barry Wright with 16:39 left, but twice fought back to tie it up late in the half. The Pirates then shot away to a six point lead at the half, and quickly spurred out to as much as a 14 point lead early in the second period.

For Coach Charlie Harrison, whose Pirates finished the regular season at 15-12 — a record considered miraculous by some — it was a game of mixed emotions.

"The kids are never as intense for a game as I am," Harrison said. "This is my livelihood, not theirs.

"We were a half-step late doing everything. The kids read the papers. 'Who the hell is Penn State-Behrend?' they've been asking themselves. And they go out on the court and they're suddenly guarding 6-2 kids where they're used to guarding 6-7 and 6-8.

"And (Penn State-Behrend) is a well-coached team. They did a good job. They've had some problems and their coach told me that this is the first time that they've all been together," Harrison continued.

"They (the Pirates) didn't play as enthusiastically as I'd like, but a win is a win is a win."

And it did come fairly easy. ECU shot 60.6 percent in the second half for a 55.2 percentage in the game. They held PS-B to only 45.2 percent for the game, and outrebounded the Cubs by ten, 37-27. All ten of that margin came in the second half when ECU held a 21-11 edge.

Johnny Edwards paced the Pirates in that department with 12, nine of them in the second half. Charles Green, who played his final game in Minges, added eight.

Green put the Pirates into the lead with a pair of free throws, but baskets by Darrell Gray and Joe Greer gave PS-B a 4-2 lead. ECU tied it up on a basket by Edwards, but Gray again hit from outside to put the Cubs into a 6-4 lead.

Green tied it once more on two free throws and Wright hit for an 8-6 lead and the Pirates never trailed again. Green hit a jumper then made the first of two free throws for an 11-6 lead, but the Cubs would not wilt.

They came back and although the Pirates went back out to a six-point lead at 14-8, stayed close, cutting it back to two, 14-12, before ECU again pulled away, this time to an eight-point lead, 20-12, on two baskets by Peartree after Wright had scored.

But again the Cubs rallied, finally tying it at 22-22 as Steve Aden hit from underneath. After a Thom Brown basket, Gray scored to knot it again, 24-24.

The Pirates then got a basket from Peartree, and two free throws by him followed that. Edwards finished the streak that opened a six point lead and the Pirates held that at the half, 32-26.

ECU scored the first eight points of the second half, as Edwards and Peartree both hit. Green then scored twice in a row, and ECU led, 40-26.

The lead hung between 10 and 14 until Chris Garrett cut it back to eight at 50-42. ECU again pulled back out to a 14-point sperad, then to 17 on a three-point play by John Williams with 7:55 left, 65-48. It fell to as little as 13 before the Pirates ran it to 18 at 76-58 before the Cubs got the final basket of the game.

Don Vaughn led PS-B with 22 points while Ty Vaughn and Greer each had 12.

East Carolina was led by Green, Edwards and Peartree with 16 each, while Wright had 14.

"I'm happy for the kids to be 15-12," Harrison said. "But that season is over. We've got the tournament next week, and that's a whole new season with no tomorrows."

Harrison said that he had set no goals for victories this year, but that in looking at the schedule early, he and his staff figured that 12 wins would be a good season. "We knew that it would be a struggle. But we won some that we didn't count on winning, just as we lost some we didn't count on losing."

Asked about his biggest satisfaction and biggest disappointment of the year, Harrison thought a while.

"I guess the fact that these kids don't quit is my biggest satisfaction. Sometimes they don't play all that well, but they put their backs to the wall and come out fighting."

As to the biggest disappointment, Harrison said it was not having Brown and Green, his only two seniors, back for another year. "I like these two young men. They're my type of people. And I think my biggest down of the year came when Green got hurt (against William & Mary) and I didn't think he'd be able to play again."

But Green did — and that may yet prove to be one of the brightest spots in Harrison's memories of this season.

The Pirates return to action on Thursday in Richmond in the first round of the ECAC-South tournament.

Thinclads At League Meeting

East Carolina's Pirates head into their second year of competition in the IC4A track meet at Princeton this weekend, looking to finish among the top 15 teams.

A total of 110 teams compete in the meet, according to ECU track coach Bill Carson.

Two members of the Pirate team go into the meet ranked first among those competing, long jumper Chris Brooks and sprinter Nathan McCorkle.

Brooks, who has a leap of 25 feet, 3/4 inches, is coming off an injury, but just recorded that jump last weekend, qualifying for the NCAA finals.

He's also second ranked in the triple jump, despite not having competed in that event for the past four weeks due to a bad bruise. "We are hoping to get about 12 points from Chris in the two events," Carson said.

Greenville freshman Chris McLawhorn is also competing in the long jump and is ranked sixth going in. Carson said he was hopeful for a placing from McLawhorn.

McCorkle's 6.32 second timing in the 55-meter dash ranks him first in the IC4A competition going in. "He definitely will score some points for us," Carson said. Also in the sprint is another Greenville freshman Erskine Evans, cranked fourth with a 6.32 timing and Henry Williams, ranked seventh at 6.37.

Craig White will compete in the high hurdles, with a fourth place ranking going in. "He should be in the top five, but he's going up against the third, fourth and fifth place finishers in the NCAA meet from last year."

Ray Dickson will compete in the 500-meter, where he finished sixth last year and Carson is looking for about the same this season.

"Our mile relay team is ranked sixth also, and I think we have a good chance to place with it." That unit consists of Eddie Bradley, Willie Fuller, Keith Clarke and Rubin Pierce. Brooks will serve as an alternate in the group.

"I really think we can finish in the top 15 teams, and with 110 teams in the meet, that would be very good for us," Carson said.

ECU Whiffs Bulldogs

By WOODY PEELE

East Carolina got good pitching from freshman Winfred Johnson, while Todd Evans opened up a phenomenal hitting streak to help power East Carolina University to a 5-0 baseball victory over Atlantic Christian College yesterday.

The victory was the second straight for the Pirates and their first shutout of the season.

Johnson, making his first mound appearance for the Pirates, went the first seven innings before giving way to Kirk Parsons for the final two frames. Johnson gave up four hits, walked just two and struck out three during his time on the mound.

Evans, however, might be the big story so far for the Pirates. In his first at bat, against Virginia Commonwealth, he drew a walk, then followed that up with three straight hits.

And against the Bulldogs, he continued that streak, getting clean hits in each of his four appearances yesterday, including a one-run triple in the third and a solo homer in the eighth that closed out the scoring. In the first and fifth innings, he came up with singles to give him a seven-for-seven beginning and an eight-for-eight on-base performance so far.

"I would like to think that Todd can keep going," Coach Hal Baird said afterwards. "That's a great start."

Getting hits is nothing new for the Greensboro junior, as he set a new East Carolina record for single season hits with 64 last year. With 119 hits in his career so far, he would seem to have a good shot at the career mark of 181 set by Billy Best from 1977-80 if he stays healthy.

"I was real pleased with Johnson's first start," Baird said. "He threw strikes and he got them to hit the ball on the ground, which was what we wanted."

"And our infield played an outstanding game. We also showed signs of breaking out with our bats, although I will admit that the pitching we faced today wasn't as good as it was Wednesday. The kids did play hard, though, and the signs were a little brighter."

Baird made some changes in his lineup from the first day, juggling the order, and replacing Mike Williams with Daniel Boone in right and Jabo Fulghum with Jack Curlings behind the plate. Freshman David Horne also did the hitting for Johnson and Parsons, whereas Johnson was the DH on Wednesday.

"I expect that we might keep juggling the lineup, especially in right and at catcher until one or the other takes charge," Baird said.

For Atlantic Christian it was a case of not being able to get on base. The Bulldogs got only five hits off the Pirates, and offered only three threats.

They got their first runner to second in the fourth inning and he died there on three straight infield grounders. In the sixth, Kenny Meekins opened with a single and Russ Williamson walked. But a fielder's choice and a double play — the second of the day for the Pirates — ended that threat.

Then, in the seventh, the Bulldogs had their final threat. With one down, David Lawhon singled and Jeff Pierce walked. A fly ball and an infield out ended the inning.

The Pirates, meanwhile, left a man standing at third in the first after a two-out error was followed by a single.

In the third, however, the Pirates got all they needed with four runs. Tony Salmond led off with a walk and scored on David Wells' one-bounce triple to the fence in dead center. Wells then came home on Kelly Robinette's sacrifice fly.

John Hallow followed with a single to right and moved to second when a pickoff attempt was thrown past first base. Evans then tripled him across and scored the fourth run himself on Boone's groundout.

The Pirates lost scoring opportunities in the fifth and sixth innings, leaving runners at second in both frames.

The final run came on Evans' leadoff homer in the eighth.

Hallow had two hits to go with Evans' four for the Pirates.

East Carolina, now 2-0, travels to Raleigh today to face N.C. State. The Wolfpack will return to Greenville on Monday and Tuesday for single games starting at 2 p.m. each day.

West Craven Storms Over Panthers, 64-49

By ALAN WOOTEN
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — North Pitt and West Craven were matched up for a first round game of the District II 3-A Tournament and everyone expected a tight, close, and exciting game.

The last of those was about the only thing they got on Thursday night, depending upon whose side you were on.

The Eagles, led by 6'6" center Ronnie Bellamy's 26 points, jumped on North Pitt early and never allowed the Panthers back in the game in rolling to a 64-49 win, which was not even that close.

"The key was that we were able to use a lot more patience on offense and didn't force as many bad shots," West Craven coach Lorenzo Jones said afterwards. "Once we got the lead, everyone seemed to realize we could do it."

The Eagles had lost three of their last four coming into the game while North Pitt had won the ECC Tournament with three impressive victories the week before.

"We helped them with our defense a little but they played real well," Panther coach Cobby Deans said. "They jumped on us early and we never bounced back. They controlled the boards, too."

West Craven controlled about every facet of the game. The Eagles shot 65.9% (29 of 44) from the floor compared to just 36.5% (19 of 52) for North Pitt. West Craven also controlled the rebounding department, 33-20.

"They shot well and controlled the boards and that was pretty much the ball game," Deans said. "We just never could match up with their size."

West Craven blitzed the Panthers at the beginning, hitting six of their first seven shots, to get into a 20-10 lead after one quarter. In the second period, it was much the same as the Eagles got to a 36-20 halftime advantage.

A 15-10 third quarter upped the advantage to 51-30. North Pitt had a slight comeback, 19-13, in the final period.

"We did a good job on the boards," Jones said. "We had some good leapers who hung in there and did the best job of rebounding we've done in quite a while."

Bellamy hit from 10, 15, and 22 feet in the opening three minutes of the game as West Craven took a quick 10-2 lead. Bellamy swished the nets from the lane and on a turnaround jumper, the last with 3:29 to go, to expand the lead to 14-4.

Following a Dennis Bradley bucket, Clifton Blount and Tim Cox hit buckets to push the lead to 12, 18-6. The quarter ended with West Craven up by 10.

West Craven hit its first five shots of the second quarter to go up by 18, 30-12. Cox hit two snowbird layups in the offense to finish the spurt with 4:27 left. The Eagles held their ground in the final four minutes of the half and took a 16-point lead to the dressing room.

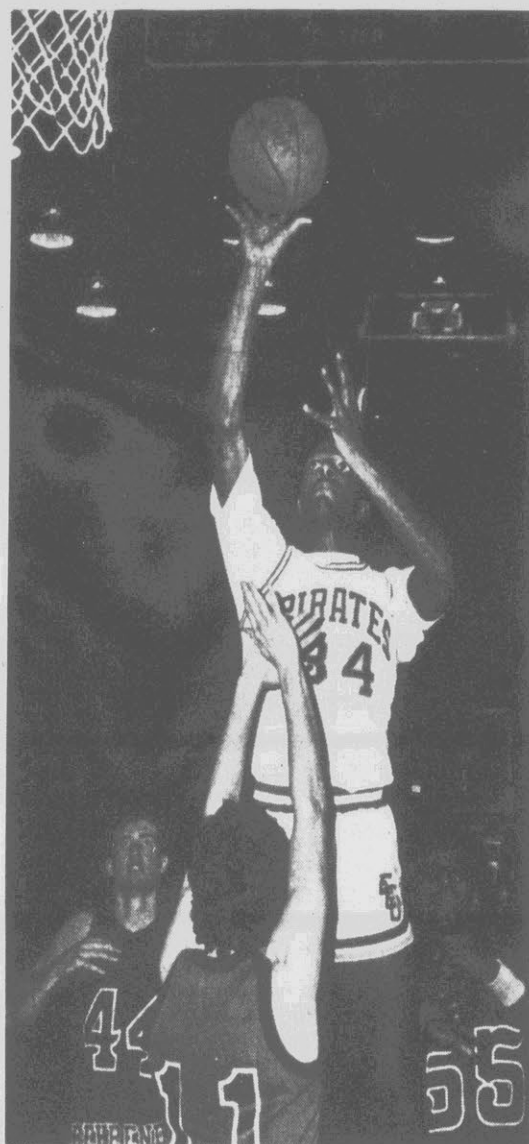

The Eagles shot 73% (16 of 22) from the floor in the first half while North Pitt made good on 29% (eight of 28).

"Bellamy hit from the outside where we wanted him to be," Deans said. "Then we went to a man-to-man defense and he scored inside. I think he was the difference."

In the third period, North Pitt continued to have their shooting problems. The Panthers could only connect on three of 11 (27%) in the quarter while West Craven connected on seven of 12 (58%), the Eagles' worst quarter up to that point.

Bellamy got things started with a drive from 20 feet out after the Eagles controlled the tap and set up the offense.

Lady Pirates End Season

East Carolina's Lady Pirates close out the 1982-83 season Saturday night, hosting UNC Charlotte at 7:30 p.m.

And at the same time, the ECU fans will be saying a goodbye to three seniors, one of them to be remembered among the best women basketball players ever to don the purple and gold, Mary Denkler.

Denkler, along with Fran Hooks and Caren Truske, will be playing her final game for the Lady Pirates, unless the team is picked next week for the ECAC women's tournament. An announcement as to the field for that is expected the first of the week.

Denkler, a 6-0 forward from Alexandria, Va., will finish her career as the second leading scorer of all-time for the Lady Pirates. Going into the UNC game, "The Denk," has collected 1,758 points. This year she's scoring at a 22.2 rate, her second straight year over 20 points a game. The last four games, she's scored at a 27.5 clip.

Denkler scored her career high in the George Mason game last Saturday night with 34, and she has a career high of 15 rebounds, the last time against Detroit in the first round of this year's Lady Pirate Classic. Only twice this year has she failed to score in double figures, and five times, she's passed the 30 point level.

"Words cannot describe the impact that Mary Denkler has had on women's basketball at East Carolina," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said of her star player. "She is the model student-athlete, the all-American girl. Not only has she been a fine athlete, but she is also a fine student. I've only had three people that I've been with for four years in my coaching career that I will truly remember and Mary is one of them. You don't forget the Denk. I'll remember how hard she worked to achieve the type of talent she became. She always strived to be the best that she could be. She'll long be remembered when people talk about women's basketball at East Carolina."

Hooks, a 5-8 guard from Goldsboro, is, along with Denkler, the first two women to complete a four-year scholarship program at East Carolina. As a freshman and sophomore, she saw little action, but became a sometime starter last year and a full-time starter this season. During the course of the year, she's played almost every position on the court and is respected by teammates and foes alike for her hustle.

Hooks scored her career high of 17 points against UNC Charlotte in the two team's first meeting this year. Her rebounding high is 11, against George Mason.

"Fran Hooks — the all-out rat," Andruzzi said. "She has hung in there for the past four years and worked her way up and that's a credit to her. This year, she has come through for us when we needed her at almost every position on the court. She's always strived to be the best that she could be, providing us with the desire, hustle and intensity that we need."

Truske, a 5-6 guard from Columbus, Ohio, transferred from N.C. State following her freshman year, but saw little playing time until this year. She was an early starter and became a full-time starter after injuries cut down Loraine Foster and Delphine Mabry. She scored her career high of ten against St. Peter's and tied it three other times during the year — against Appalachian State, George Mason and George Washington.

Conley Girls Top Ladybirds

By ALAN WOOTEN
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley jumped to the early lead and managed to get through a physical contest with Southern Nash with a 56-36 victory Thursday evening in the first round of the District II 3-A Tournament being played at D.H. Conley.

"I felt the ball game got out of hand," Joy James, D.H. Conley coach, said afterwards. "I thought the officials did a poor job. Someone could have gotten hurt."

"I thought our girls did a good job and survived in World War III," James continued. "If we have them (the same officials) again, we won't play."

Both teams were constantly finding themselves lying on the floor with no fouls being called. There were only 28 free throws attempted by the two teams combined while the number of collisions between them would seemingly have called for more.

"Our guards did a good job," James said. "But every time they went down the court, they got tripped."

Conley eased into the first quarter lead, 14-5, and increased the margin to 26-11 by halftime. In the third quarter, the Valkyries padded the lead again, 10-6, and finally finished off the Ladybirds, 20-19, in the final quarter.

Karen Barrett finished the night with 22 points to lead all scorers. Mechio Kornegay popped in 20 to aid the Valkyrie attack. Melissa Morgan had 14 for Southern Nash.

"I thought Mechio did a good job in the middle because everytime she got it, she got hacked," James said. "Karen did a good job on the baseline and offensive boards."

Barrett pumped in 10 of her points in the first quarter as the Valkyries built up their nine-point lead.

D.H. Conley used an 10-2 run to finish the second period in getting out to the 15-point bulge at the half. Kornegay hit a jumper with 4:07 left to make it 18-9.

Irish Barnhill then hit two layups off the fast break to give DHC a 22-9 lead. Kornegay made a jumper in the lane and Barrett added two free throws with two seconds left to make it 26-11 at the half.

In the third period, it was the same as the first two. The Valkyries pushed the lead to 21 with an 8-0 run midway the quarter. Barrett had six of those points while Cannon hit the other two on a jumper in the lane. The Valkyries went into the final quarter with a 36-17 advantage.

Conley scored the first eight points of the fourth period to take full control of the game. Kornegay hit a pair of free throws and a jumper in the lane to make it 40-17 with 5:33 left.

Lisa Mills and Barrett hit a pair of buckets for Conley to up the lead to 44-17. From there it was just a matter of letting the time expire as the Valkyries improved their record to 23-3 on the year.

The loss ended the year for Southern Nash, the Ladybirds finishing the year at 13-10.

D.H. Conley will play C.B. Aycock, a 62-38 winner over West Carteret in Tuesday's first round, tonight at 5:30 to wind up the semifinals.

The girls' semifinals got underway in the second girls' game of last night, as North Lenoir downed SouthWest Edgecombe, 47-45, to move into Tuesday night's finals.

RALEIGH (AP) — Maryland basketball coach Lefty Driesell said his club's 67-58 decision over North Carolina State was a big victory — big enough to put his club into the NCAA tournament.

"I thought we had it (NCAA bid) when we won our 18th, so now I think we'll receive a bid," Driesell said after his club took sole possession of third place in the Atlantic Coast Conference. "I think N.C. State deserves one, too. Anybody that saw them to-night knows that they're one of the top 52 teams in the nation."

Except for a brief period in the first half, North Carolina State had the upper hand until the last six minutes. But between Lorenzo Charles' rebound basket at 6:13 and Thurl Bailey's tip-in with two seconds left, the Wolfpack managed only one free throw.

Meanwhile, Maryland ran off 15 points to run its record to 19-7, 8-5 in the ACC. N.C. State fell to 16-10 and 7-6, good for a fourth-place tie with Wake Forest, which the Wolfpack plays Saturday in the regular season finale.

Leading 60-56 with 1:07 left, Maryland's Jeff Adkins sank the first of two free throws.

The second missed and after Ben Coleman lost the ball, Adrian Branch scooped in a layup to make it 63-56 and settle the issue.

"At the start of the year we were picked seventh or eighth in the conference and now we at least have third place," Driesell said. "If we're not in it (the tournament) now there's got to be a thorough NCAA investigation."

Driesell also put in a bid for

Riggins Back With Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Running back John Riggins, who says he's "real glad" about his long-term contract with the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins, will receive, according to sources, a guaranteed total of $900,000 for the first two years of the pact.

The contract is worth more than $2 million over four years, said sources within the National Football League team. They provided no further details.

The pact, reached Thursday, breaks the longstanding Redskin policy against guaranteeing salaries — a policy which led to Riggins' walkout during the 1980 season while an arbitrator decided his salary.

"John Riggins will spend the rest of his playing days with the Washington Redskins," said owner Jack Kent Cooke, after the 33-year-old Riggins agreed to terms at Cooke's estate in Middleburg, Va.

"He wants to stay and I want him to stay," he said of Riggins, who is the seventh leading career rusher in the National Football League and ranks second in the team's all-time rushing statistics.

The club did not release details of the contract, and neither did Cooke.

"You can speculate all you want to," the owner said. "It will be impure speculation fraught with guesses and will be far wide of the mark. No sir, that is John Riggins' business and my business. It is none of your bloody business."

In a brief, prepared team announcement, Riggins, named Most Valuable Player in Washington's 27-17 Super Bowl victory over Miami, said "This is what I always wanted. I'm glad, real glad."

And referring to next year's Super Bowl site, he told Cooke, "Next stop, Tampa Bay. I'll see you there."

Riggins, who became a free agent after the Super Bowl victory, had been wooed by the Michigan Panthers of the United States Football League. They reportedly offered him a three-year, $2.5-million guaranteed contract.

Cooke said the USFL's offer did not affect his offer to Riggins, whose salary of $330,000 was the highest on the Washington team last season.

"I was not remotely interested in what he allegedly was offered and he never once brought it up," Cooke said. "Maybe, once (Wednesday), I mentioned 'The Other League.' But it was only in passing. We were talking Redskins. John Riggins is not auctioning himself."

The 33-year-old running back spent several days talking with the USFL team, but had promised the Redskins he would talk with them before signing a contract.

After learning of Riggins' signing with the Redskins, Panthers' General Manager Jim Spavital said, "We were very happy to have the opportunity to talk to him. And we also appreciate his coming to see us and look at our league."

"Of course, we're disappointed but we are happy for him because it must have been an outstanding contract," he said.

Spavital, who coached Riggins when both were with the New York Jets, said Riggins called him and let the Panthers know about the agreement.

the rest of the ACC.

"I also think the ACC deserves five bids," Driesell said. "The ACC is the toughest league in the country. Out of 52 teams, we deserve to send five."

"We had some good opportunities," Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said. "But the ball wouldn't go in the basket. That's something you can't control. If you can't put the ball in the hole, you're not going to beat anybody."

Valvano was asked why, with his club behind 58-55 with two minutes left, he chose to push the ball inside rather than go for a 3-pointer by Dereck Whittenburg or Terry Gannon.

"We felt they'd pay special attention to Whitt and Gannon," Valvano said. "We wanted to go inside. Then it'd be a one-point game. If they score, we do it again. Then we foul if we have to. We got it inside, but the ball wouldn't go down."

Branch led Maryland with 17 points while Coleman added 15 and Len Bias 12. Charles and Whittenburg scored 15 each for the Wolfpack, while Bailey added 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Kerwin Ousts Lady Knights

WINSTON-SALEM — Kerwin Christian Academy, ranked number one, ousted the Greenville Christian Academy girls from the North Carolina Christian Athletic Association state tournament last night, rolling to a 63-23 victory.

The Lady Knights were virtually out of it by the end of the first period as Kerwin rolled up a 12-2 lead in the contest. They followed that with a 13-7 margin in the second period to take a 25-9 lead into intermission.

Things got even worse for the GCA lassies in the third period as Kerwin held a 23-2 margin, and took a 48-11 lead going into the final period. In that, Kerwin outscored GCA, 15-12, to wrap it up.

Chocowinity Dumps Bears

BATH — Chocowinity High School gained revenge for its loss in the finals of the Tobacco Belt Conference tournament last week, downing tourney champ Bear Grass, 53-40, in the semifinals of the District I-A girls playoffs last night.

In the boys' game, Aurora rolled to a 72-52 victory over Chocowinity.

Tonight, Bath and Belhaven meet in a girls' game while Mattamuskeet takes on Belhaven in the boys' game. Winners from tonight's game meet last night's winners in the championships on Tuesday, and the winners go on to the I-A regionals at Wilson the following week.

Chocowinity eased out into an 8-7 lead in the first period of the game, then blitzed the Bears in the second period, 10-3. That left the Squaws in an 18-10 lead at the half.

Bear Grass rallied in the third period, however, outscoring Chocowinity, 19-15. That cut the gap to 33-29. But the Lady Bears couldn't keep it up and were outscored, 20-11, in the final period as the Squaws cruised to the victory.

Verna Myers led Chocowinity with 22 points while Wendy Elks added 12. Angie Mizelle picked up 17 for Bear Grass while Mary Rodgers added 11.

Ricky Rudd Speeds Way To Carolina 500's Pole

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Ricky Rudd, in grabbing his third straight pole and setting a North Carolina Motor Speedway record Thursday in qualifying for the NASCAR Carolina 500, says his crew was optimistic all along.

Rudd averaged 143.413 mph on the 1.017-mile track in tryouts for Sunday's race, surpassing the mark of 143.228 mph set by Cale Yarborough for last year's American 500. In the last two weeks, he has won poles at the Daytona 500 and Richmond 400.

Tryouts were expected to resume today at 1:30 p.m. with positions 21 through 30 up for grabs with slots 31 through 36 being contested Saturday beginning at 11 a.m.

"All the guys on my crew kept saying all morning we were going to win three poles in a row because we were running so good in practice," Rudd said. "I just had to try and put it out of my mind. I guess now they'll start getting on my case about winning four poles in a row. Man, I don't even want to think about that right now."

Neil Bonnett earned the outside pole with a 142.337 mph effort. Bobby Allison, winner of last week's Richmond 400, made it a clean sweep for Chevrolets by taking the third spot with a 142.271 mph average.

"Well, that lap wasn't that bad... but it wasn't that good, either," said Allison. "This race track can be awfully unforgiving and you've got to be careful. Sunday's what counts."

In fourth place will be Dale Earnhardt, who qualified at 142.171 mph. Yarborough and Bill Elliott are in the third row while Harry Gant and Mark Martin fill row four.

"I'm not really happy with it," Yarborough said after his run of 142.012 mph. "We had a few problems on the car and never got a chance to work them out. We just don't have the car just like we like to have it — yet."

Ron Bouchard and Joe Ruttman round out the top 10 while the sixth row features two of NASCAR's winningest drivers, Darrell Waltrip, the defending Winston Cup champion and winner of this race last year, and Richard Petty.

"Loose, loose, loose," Waltrip said. "Considering everything, the time wasn't all that bad. We really don't have any problems other than the car just isn't running fast enough. We'll change the engine Friday and try something new."

Waltrip averaged 141.332

mph while Petty posted a best lap of 141.152 mph.

The seventh row has Tim Richmond and Terry Labonte while Petty's son, Kyle Petty, will start in the eighth row with Buddy Baker.

Lake Speed and Geoff Bodine are in row nine with Dick Brooks and Slick Johnson filling the last two of the 20 spots claimed in the first qualifying round.

Rick Baldwin hit the guard rail in the second turn during practice and repairs took longer than expected, causing a two-hour delay in qualifying.

The top 20 qualifiers for Sunday's Warner W. Hodgdon Carolina 500 at the North Carolina Motor Speedway with driver, type of car and average speed. Qualifying will resume Friday for positions 21 through 30. Positions 31 through 36 will be filled in time trials Saturday morning.

The loss was the first in two matches for the Rams, who had opened the season on Wednesday with a 5-4 win over North Duplin.

The Rams return to action on Tuesday, traveling to Parrot Academy.

He had compiled a gaudy amateur record and, he said, "thought I'd just breeze right through" the PGA Tour qualifying school. It didn't happen. He failed to make it. And he failed again the next time he tried it.

"That opened my eyes," he said. "I realized I still had a lot to learn. It's probably the best thing that could have happened to me."

So he took his new humility on the Asian circuit for a couple of years, playing in such cities as Manila, Seoul, Hong Kong, Singapore, Calcutta and Bangkok.

It paid off. "That was definitely the start of my career," Stewart said after he'd posted a no-bogey round of 7-under-par 65 for the first-round lead last Thursday in the $400,000 Honda-Inverrary Classic.

"In Asia, I learned what I had to learn. I learned what it took to win," said Stewart, who used that experience in winning the Quad-Cities Open last season during his first full season on the American circuit.

Stewart, now 26, birdied his final hole from 18 feet in warm, sunny weather for a one-shot lead over Mike Reid, who, like Stewart, played 18 holes over the 7,129-yard Inverrary Country Club course without a bogey.

"An oasis at the end of the desert," said Reid, who had missed the cut in his last two starts.

PGA champion Ray Floyd rallied with a 31 on the back nine — "it easily could have been two or three shots lower," Floyd said — and was tied at 67 with Peter Jacobsen.

The big group at 69 included Gary Koch, a five-shot winner last week in the Doral Open, Johnny Miller, Mike Sullivan, George Burns, Lon Hinkle and Steve Melnyk.

Cougars Win Southwest Showdown

By The Associated Press
Benny Anders averages just 5.1 points a game coming off the bench for the Houston basketball team — but sure picks his spots to stand out.

One of those times was Thursday night, when the 6-foot-5 sophomore reserve scored 18 points to lead the top-ranked Cougars to a 74-66 victory over fifth-ranked Arkansas in a Southwest Conference showdown game.

"When I hit my first two baskets, I got my confidence," said Anders, who connected on six of his seven shots in the first half to help the Cougars take a 34-27 lead at the half.

The triumph gave the Cougars their first regular-season basketball championship in the SWC, which they joined in 1976. The Cougars, 15-0 in the SWC and 24-2 overall, now have a 19-game winning streak, longest in the nation.

In other games involving the nation's Top Twenty, No. 7 Kentucky tripped Mississippi State 61-58, No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas stopped San Jose State, 67-61, No. 11 Indiana walloped No. 20 Purdue 64-41, 12th-ranked Wichita State edged Bradley 97-96 in double overtime, Illinois upset No. 14 Ohio State 74-73 in overtime and 17th-ranked Memphis State rolled past Florida State 94-67.

Arkansas, which entered the game with an eight-game winning streak and a 28-game winning streak at its own Barnhill Arena, led only twice in the game, at 2-0 and 9-8 midway through the first half. From then on, it was all Houston.

The Razorbacks pulled within one point, at 57-56 with 5:48 left in the game, but never could catch the Cougars.

"Houston has a great basketball team," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "Neither team played as well as we're capable of, but that happens sometimes in a big game" like this. Houston got the jump on us and we were forced to play catchup all night. We never could quite get over the hump."

Top Ten
Kentucky, which clinched the regular-season

Southeastern Conference championship earlier this week, used its inside one-two punch of Melvin Turpin and Kenny Walker to beat Mississippi.

Turpin got 23 points and Walker contributed 17 to extend Kentucky's winning streak to eight games and Ole Miss' string of consecutive losses to three.

Sidney Green scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Nevada-Las Vegas over San Jose State, the Rebels' first victory since a two-game losing streak knocked them out of the No. 1 ranking.

The Runnin' Rebels erased a 12-point halftime deficit by outscoring San Jose 15-4 in the opening five minutes of the second half to trail 42-41. Nevada-Las Vegas took the lead for the first time since the opening minutes of the game on two free throws by Green with 1:15 remaining, 63-61. San Jose missed two shots in the final minute that could have tied the game.

Second Ten
Randy Wittman scored 16 points and Indiana's defense held Purdue scoreless during a seven-minute stretch in the second half as the Hoosiers snapped a two-game losing streak to defeat the Boilermakers.

It was all Indiana. The Hoosiers scored 12 of the game's first 14 points and never trailed in an emotional game which saw injured forward Ted Kitchel make an appearance. Doctors removed a ruptured disc from Kitchel's back in a four-hour surgery Monday night, but he sat in street clothes on the bench Thursday night after receiving a two-minute standing ovation from the crowd of 17,312 in Bloomington.

"Emotionally, we were just not ready to play," said Purdue Coach Gene Keady. "I felt like they did exactly what I expected them to do. There was no surprise. They ran their offense and played hard defense. I'm not sure if we could have plugged the dam if we had two days to play the game."

Xavier McDaniel scored 34 points and pulled down 20 rebounds and Zarko Duric converted two free throws in the second overtime to lead Wichita State over Bradley.

Substitute Kevin Bontemps' two free throws with 10 seconds left in overtime gave Illinois a four-point lead and the Illini withstood a rally by Ohio State to beat the Buckeyes. The defeat knocked Ohio State from a share of the Big Ten Conference lead with Indiana.

"In my four years, those are the most pressure free throws I've ever shot," said Bontemps. "I tried to relax. They just fell in."

Andre Turner and Philip Haynes combined for 42 points as Memphis State routed Florida State. Turner, a 5-foot-10, 150-pound freshman, led all scorers with 22 points, while Haynes, a junior, added

Others
In other action, Cliff Tribus scored 21 points as Davidson set a school record for field goal accuracy with 71.1 percent in downing VMI 83-68; Bill Varner scored 18 points, leading Notre Dame past Seton Hall 59-40; Len Bias ignited a 15-3 scoring burst by Maryland in the final five minutes as the Terrapins claimed a 67-58 victory over North Carolina State; Michigan State guard Scott Skiles scored 25 points to lead the Spartans to a 79-67 victory over Minnesota; Mike Sheehy scored 16 points as St. Bonaventure clinched the Atlantic 10 Conference West Division regular-season title by beating George Washington 60-55 and Bob Hansen hit a three-point field goal to ignite a second-half surge that carried Iowa to a 63-50 victory over Northwestern.

Also, Morgan Taylor hit the front-end of a one-and-one free throw situation with 13 seconds left to give Arizona a 74-73 victory over Stanford and break the Wildcats' 15-game losing streak; Rick Fields scored 25 points to lead Indiana State to a 95-87 victory over Creighton and Mike Davis hit four free throws in the closing minutes to boost Alabama to a 106-99 double-overtime victory over Florida.

Fike Tops Semi Play

ROCKY MOUNT — Wilson Fike's boys and girls advanced to the finals of the Big East Conference tournament last night.

Fike's boys downed Northeastern, 78-72, and will take on cross-county rival Beddingfield for the championship and a berth in the State 4-A Playoffs.

The Fike girls eased by Wilson Hunt, 38-35, and challenge first place Rocky Mount for the title.

The championship games will be played tonight at Beddingfield. Winners take on the Cap-Eight runners-up on Tuesday in the first round of the State Playoffs.

Carlton, Phillies Come To Terms; Pact Makes Him New Millionaire

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — All Steve Carlton has to do is affix his signature and the Philadelphia Phillies' left-hander will become the highest-paid pitcher in the history of baseball.

Carlton reached an agreement Thursday with the team that will pay him $1.15 million for 1983.

The only four-time Cy Young Award winner will earn $1-million in each of the next three years.

After the 1986 season, the Phillies have an option to pick up Carlton's contract by Oct. 31 of each year at a fixed increase.

The contract agreement was a compromise between the pitcher and the Phillies on an agreement previously agreed to that would have paid Carlton $700,000 for 1983 and $1.15 million for the next three years starting in 1984.

Carlton wanted the change so that in at least one year of his career he would be the highest paid pitcher in the game.

The 33-year-old Carlton last season became major league's only four-time Cy Young winner and baseball's career strikeout leader. He was the only pitcher in the majors to win 20 games last year, compiling a 23-11 record to lead the National League.

He and his agent, Dave Landfield, felt the recent $1-million arbitration award to Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers might keep Carlton from the highest paid honor under the previous understanding with the Phillies. Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros is also reported to be collecting $1 million.

The new contract was made possible under the suggestion of Phillies' president Bill Giles that they take $450,000 of the guaranteed money under the previous agreement and apply it to Carlton's 1983 salary.

Giles, at a news conference after a spring training drill here Thursday, announced, "We have come to an economic understanding of the new Steve Carlton contract."

"We met his desire, and met our desire at the same time."

"Our desire was not to guarantee him more than $4.15 million over three years."

"His desire was to be the highest-paid pitcher once in his life, so we agreed to take $450,000 of the guaranteed money and pay it to him this year."

The amounts for the next three years were reduced so that the total economic package still totaled $4.15 million.

"For this year he will be the highest-paid pitcher," Giles said.

"We still have some language disagreements, but I don't think they're insurmountable," Giles said.

Landfield said reports he tried to renegotiate the previously agreed upon package were untrue.

"We just wanted to be sure that Lefty (Carlton) was the highest paid pitcher in at least one year of the contract."

Giles said, however, that Landfield wanted to leave open the 1984 salary in the event somebody earned more.

"I didn't want that burden over my head so I came up with this solution," Giles said.

"In case somebody got $2 million, I didn't want to pay (that) to Steve."

Prior to the new agreement, Carlton had been under contract with the Phillies through the 1984 season.

Giles said he violated his policy of not renegotiating contracts until their final year because he wanted to be sure that Carlton would be with the Phillies for the rest of his career.

"I didn't want that threat of free agency down the road," Giles observed.

Giles also said the incentive clauses chage in 1984.

"They're a little less."

Giles said the Phillies drew from two to four thousand more fans when Carlton pitched.

"There were a couple of other options I offered, but this was most attractive to them."

Giles and Landfield settled on the agreement at a 45-minute meeting. Carlton was not at the meeting or the news conference. He does not talk with the media.

Giles also said the previous disagreement was not discussed.

"I told him (Landfield) to forget what had been said and written before and start anew."

Giles also noted that Carlton was the only player who renegotiated a contract downward.

"After he had a bad 1973, he agreed to pitch in '74 for less than what we promised to pay. I think Steve is a very intelligent, fine, decent human being as well as the best pitcher in the game."

Giles said he wanted to get it over with and let him (Carlton) have peace of mind.

Giles said he had discussed with Carlton the possibility of resuming communications with the media, but that the pitcher feels more comfortable the way he is.

AAA Division Champs

Flamingo Disco captured the championship of the AAA Division of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's Adult League for the first half season. Members of the team are, first row,

makes you a criminal!

And criminals do get caught! Now the stores are wise to shoplifters and have the manpower and sophisticated equipment to prove it. Closed circuit cameras, undercover people, specially trained tagging systems... are all used to successfully catch shoplifters. And the stores are taking legal actions. Shoplifters face even stiffer fines... even jail when they're caught. The humiliation of getting arrested and a criminal record that could affect future schooling, jobs, credit rating, and the respect and trust of family and friends... just doesn't pay!

Nerve-Wracking Play Was Also Stimulating

Thursday night's presentation of Ayn Rand's "Night of January 16" opened with a full house and received a standing ovation. The Ayden Theater Workshop has added another to its list of fine entertainments it is providing for the Ayden-Grifton community.

"Night of January 16" proved to be both stimulating and nerve-wracking. The drama opens in New York Superior Court, where Karen Andre, portrayed by Diantha Muzikar, is being tried for the murder of her employer and supposed lover, Bjorn Faulkner. The drama unfolds in the courtroom and centers around a confusing, brain-teasing plot of murder, exchanged bodies, conflicting testimony and total chaos.

Kim Dale, director of the show, is one of the original founders of Ayden Theater Workshop. In this production, she has put together a cast which gave remarkable performances.

The strongest characters are Judge Heath (John Spence), Sigurd Jungquist (Joel McLawhorn), John Graham Whitfield (Doug Mitchell) and Magda Svenson (Page Adkins).

John Spence was totally in charge of his role. He dominated the actions of district attorney Flint (Robert W. Young) and defense attorney Stevens (Wink Phillips) as well as that of the jury selected randomly from members of the audience.

Joel McLawhorn as Sigurd Jungquist provided brief comedy relief but also provoked feelings of sympathy from the audience as the ex-con who later admits to being an unknowing participant in the murder of Bjorn Faulkner.

Doug Mitchell's portrayal of the mighty John Graham Whitfield, who prizes his wealth and daughter above all else, enraged the audience with his part in the destruction of a human being who threatens his utopia.

The "star" of the show was

Page Adkins. Her uproarious portrayal of Magda Svenson left the audience wiping tears of laughter from their eyes. She gave her best performance since her outstanding role as Aunt Ev in "The Miracle Worker."

One performance, that of Robert W. Young's district attorney Flint, somehow missed its mark. He was too soft-spoken and apologetic, especially in his approach for having put the jury through the inconvenience of the trial.

Wink Phillips portrayed the hard-driving ambitious attorney with a passion. She gave the impression she would stop at nothing to prove her client's innocence.

"Night of January 16" will have two more performances—at 8 p.m. Saturday and at 3 p.m. Sunday. It is being presented in the courtroom of the Ayden Town Hall. It's a show you'll not want to miss.

THE ROMANTIC LONDON (AP) — John Hartley Williams, an imaginative Briton, has won an international poetry contest with an epic love story set in the American West, a land he has seen only in cowboy movies.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Brokaw, in a magazine interview, says some strong things about President Reagan that the anchorman would never say on the "NBC Nightly News."

Interviewed by Frank Browning for the April issue of Mother Jones, a feature magazine with a liberal slant, Brokaw says Reagan's values are "pretty simplistic. Pretty old-fashioned. And I don't think they have much application to what's currently wrong or troubling a lot of people."

Brokaw also says that Reagan doesn't understand "the enormous difficulty a lot of people have in getting through life, because he's lived in this fantasy land for so long." He considers Reagan more pro-business than other presidents "and far more willing to go to greater lengths to make sure big business gets what it wants."

Does it damage Brokaw's credibility as an anchorman to give such strong opinions about Reagan? Will Middle America trust his reporting on Reagan after knowing how he feels? Is it possible that Reagan's supporters will question Brokaw's objectivity on the news, or turn him off?

"No. My credibility stands for itself after all these years," Brokaw says. "I didn't trash-can the Reagan administration in Mother Jones. I was just looking at the record and saying that he has a simple view of what America requires and what it is."

"Most people and most observers in politics and journalism would say Ronald Reagan is pro-business."

Brokaw says his remarks were similar to the ones he and co-anchor Roger Mudd made in a recent NBC documentary assessing Reagan at midterm. Although he doesn't do commentary on

"Nightly News," he has offered analysis on election night and after Reagan's national speeches.

Brokaw says the public can make distinctions between what he said in Mother Jones and what he says on the news. "Nightly News" is a separate piece," he says.

Brokaw's comments are a deviation from the philosophy practiced by Walter Cronkite, the venerable CBS anchorman, who scrupulously avoided taking stands in any forum.

Because of that philosophy, his impact was significant when he made one exception to the rule and spoke out against American policy in Vietnam in 1968 during commentaries on the "CBS Evening News."

'Dallas' Heads For Big Screen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The popular "Dallas" television series is headed for a movie set in one of three features planned by a partnership formed by Universal Pictures and Lorimar Productions.

"We already have a script and we've arranged for the entire cast of the series to be in the picture with the possible exception of Victoria Principal," said Merv Adelson, board chairman of Lorimar.

"She has indicated she wants to do other things, but we're still hopeful that she'll change her mind."

Besides "Dallas: The Movie," the companies will turn out "The Last Starfighter," described as a

"lighthearted fantasy adventure in which a young boy is recruited from Earth to help save an alien world," and "Tank," about an Army sergeant-major who uses his homemade Sherman tank to rescue his teen-age son.

Adelson said Thursday that work on the "Dallas" film began a year and a half ago. "Dallas," a prime-time soap opera on CBS, consistently is among the leaders of the weekly Nielsen ratings.

said the house was owned by the Kintzy Tyson Farms of Route 2, Greenville. There was no one living in the house at the time of the blaze. No estimate of damage was given. Members of the Eastern Pines and Winterville fire department responded to the call. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Life As It's Lived

Eccentricities Needed To Leaven Our World

By GAIL MICHAELS

I think people delight so in small town eccentricities not only because they provide a ready source of entertaining anecdotes but because they exert a humanizing influence over the people with whom they come in contact.

Obviously, cities have their eccentricities, too, but city characters are rarely as visible as small town characters, merely because city dwellers tend to remain anonymous to all but a few acquaintances. In contrast, the small town eccentric becomes a focal point of the community. His actions relieve the monotony of routine interpersonal relationships, which can be as dehumanizing in their own way as routine jobs. People who regularly come into contact with an eccentric not only learn to accept differences both in themselves and in others but to appreciate them.

It almost goes without saying that eccentrics differ from one another as much as they differ from the general populace. The lives of the residents of my hometown were enriched by a young man with cerebral palsy who performed odd jobs for the Main Street merchants and who assiduously extended a cheerful greeting to everyone who passed him on the sidewalk. We also told and retold with relish the newest misadventure of our own Miss Kate, an unmarried descendant of the town's founder who lived all alone in a peeling mansion and who celebrated her 70th birthday by getting herself a driver's license, a blue Corvair and an English sheepdog to accompany her on her excursions.

I was reminded of these two very dissimilar events several weeks ago in Madison, Tenn. My sister-in-law and brother-in-law, both a little eccentric themselves, informed me that they were taking me out to eat delicious homemade pasta at an Italian restaurant in a converted Toddler House. "But as much as you like the pasta," my sister-in-law assured me, "you'll like the chef even better."

She was right. Guiseppe, the chef-owner of the restaurant, met us at the door in an immaculate white jacket and chef's hat. Or rather he pushed us out the door.

"Letsa talka outside," he said with an accent that I'd heard before only in Alka-Seltzer commercials. "We don't gotta enough room in there, and you letta the heat out."

After an ignominious retreat from the open door, we were informed that we could not be seated until 8:30. "You get inna car and go to da Peddler. I call you there." There was never any doubt that we should return when summoned.

We passed Luigi's in a roar of laughter, noting that it was not suggested as an alternative. Then we pulled into the Peddler parking lot. Much to my chagrin, I realized that this was not, as I had assumed, a small bar but one of the Peddler steak houses. I was rather hesitant at marching in and announcing that Guiseppe would call. My sister-in-law, who had been this route before, was not. The bartender grinned and waved us to a table. We were the third party of four called that evening for an audience with his employer's competition.

Once inside "Guiseppe's" we were treated graciously. Never before had a chef deigned to stop and have a glass of wine with me while we discussed the relative merits of Italian, German and American ice cream. Now I know what the restaurant guides mean by a "total dining experience."

But I think that the pinnacle of the evening was meeting our middle Tennessee waitress. She waited until Guiseppe had departed, handed me a menu, then asked, "Now what kin I git fur ya, Honey?"

Fewer Living On N.C. Farms

By The Associated Press
U.S. Census figures released Thursday show the number of people living on North Carolina farms dropped dramatically between 1970 and 1980, but the actual decline may be less, state analysts say.

"You're getting, in effect, larger, more mechanized farms buying out smaller farms," said John H. McIntyre, a data consultant with the North Carolina State Data Center. "The decline in rural population has not been nearly that drastic."

The figures show 3.2 percent of the state's population were living on farms in 1980 or 188,437 people, compared to about 10 percent or 530,316 people in 1970.

The nation's rural population dropped by a third during the same period. In 1980, 2.5 percent of the U.S. population or 5.6 million people lived on farms. The nation's farm population was 8.3 million in 1970.

However, state experts said the actual decline may be less than the figures showed because the definition of farm population changed during that 10-year period.

McIntyre said a farm could be any size, in any area, with $250 in sales (or $50 in sales on farms less than one acre) in 1970. But in 1980 the requirements changed, defining a farm as having $1,000 in sales on at least an acre in a rural area.

He said if the 1980 census had used the previous criteria, about 81,000 more people would have been listed as living on farms.

Census statistics indicated more farmers lived in North Central states proportionately than in any other part of the nation. About 4.9 percent of those living in the nation's breadbasket were on farms in 1980, a 7-percent decline from 1970.

In the South, which experienced as severe a decrease as North Carolina, the rural population fell from 4.7 percent in 1970 to 2.4 percent in 1980.

The census figures for North Carolina are comparable with state statistics on the decline of farms and farmland.

James Olson, a state agricultural statistician, said there were about 150,000 farms covering more than 15.2 million acres in 1970, compared to 88,000 farms covering 11.1 million acres in 1982.

State officials said the number of farms has been declining since 1950, when there were 301,000 farms covering nearly 20 million acres in North Carolina.

Olson said the average size of farms has increased from 66 acres in 1950 to 101 acres in 1970 and 123 acres in 1982.

Arrested 8 At PCB Landfill

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — Eight people were arrested Thursday afternoon after lying down at the entrance to a PCB landfill and refusing to move at the command of state troopers, authorities said.

Many of those arrested were members of Warren County Citizens Concerned About PCB. They were protesting the pumping of water from the landfill's leachate collection system.

Bill Phillips, assistant to the secretary of the Department of Public Safety and Crime Control, said workers were preparing to install a new pump Thursday morning before they were blocked by the protesters.

The system will absorb the moisture in the PCB-contaminated soil and filter the water into a small pond, where the water will then be pumped back on top of the landfill.

But protesters say the water will seep out of the lagoon and contaminate ground water.

Held In Death Of A Retiree

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 20-year-old Raleigh man has been charged in the murder of a 71-year-old retired high school teacher whose body apparently was found Thursday.

Christopher L. Partin was being held at the Wake County Jail without bond. He is charged with first-degree murder in the death of Meriman C. Hill, a former biology teacher and football coach at Washington, Ligon and Broughton high schools who had been missing since December 19.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♦ Dble 2 ♦ Pass
4 ♦ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: King of ♥.

South made a theoretically correct play, but it cost him his four spade contract. However, the technically correct play would have succeeded!

North's raise to two spades after West had interposed with a takeout double is in keeping with modern theory—you make the bid you would have made had there been no intervening action. South's jump to four spades was clear-cut.

West led the king of hearts and then shifted to a diamond to attack dummy's entry. Declarer saw no problem. He counted seven trump tricks, one diamond and two clubs, just enough for his contract. Unfortunately, one of those tricks vanished when, after winning the ace of diamonds, declarer led a trump to his king and West showed out.

Declarer tried his best. He led a heart. West took the ace and exited with the king of diamonds. Declarer ruffed and led the ace of clubs followed by the queen. This time West held up, and declarer had to concede a club and a trump for down one.

In terms of the trump suit alone, declarer's play of a high trump at trick two was correct. But had declarer taken the whole hand into consideration, he might have realized that, once East had followed with a trump at trick two, the finesse of the jack guaranteed the contract.

As the cards lie, the finesse would win and declarer would lose only two heart tricks and a club. But let's suppose that the finesse failed and West won the second trick with the queen of trumps. That would mean that trumps were 2-1, and that the third trump on the table was an entry.

West has a safe exit with a diamond. Declarer ruffs, draws the last trump and leads a heart. West must win, and he still has a diamond exit. Declarer ruffs high, then crosses to dummy by overtaking the five of trumps. He discards two clubs on the queen-jack of hearts and claims his contract.

Historic Inaugural

Today marks the 50th anniversary of Franklin D. Roosevelt's first inauguration. He was one of the most popular leaders in U.S. history, and yet, curiously, he did not receive the 1932 Democratic National Convention's nomination until the fourth ballot. When he heard that he was his party's choice, Roosevelt flew to Chicago and became the first presidential nominee ever to deliver an acceptance speech at a convention. On election day, Roosevelt received 472 electoral votes to only 59 for the incumbent Herbert Hoover. He remained in the White House until 1945 and died just 83 days after becoming President for an unprecedented fourth term.

DO YOU KNOW — Whom did President Roosevelt name as the first woman Cabinet member in 1933?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Humphrey Bogart played the male lead in "The Maltese Falcon."

Mystery Sub

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Navy, Coast Guard and harbor police are all looking for the owner of a 135-foot submarine found bobbing in San Diego Bay last week.

Now docked at the 32nd Street Naval Station, the sub was found adrift on Feb. 24, torn from its moorings by the recent storms that pummeled Southern California.

The Navy and harbor police want the sub moved, but the owner hasn't surfaced to reclaim it.

"Not many people know anything about this sub — that's part of the problem," said Capt. Don Hadley of the harbor police. "We think we know who the owner is... we're trying to contact him and tell him to come get his sub."

Port District officials are concerned that the grey submarine, which looks like a pontoon, will become their responsibility if the owner is not located. And Naval Station officials just want the sub towed somewhere else.

"We can't have privately owned vessels tied at our pier," said Julie Swan, a Navy public affairs officer. "We only did it (allowed the Coast Guard to tow the vessel there) in the interest of keeping the harbor safe. They said the submarine was a hazard to navigation."

Hadley said the submarine was once apparently used by the Navy as a "submarine sonar target." But its history — and how it was sold — remain a mystery.

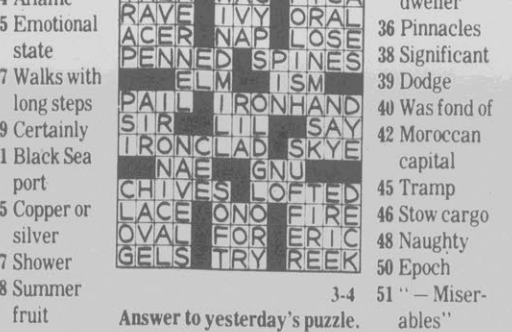

"It's amazing to me that the Navy sold this sub to a private individual," said Lt. Cmdr. Chris Desmond, executive officer at the Coast Guard's marine safety office.

"I didn't think they did that sort of thing," he said.

Found Bones
In Home Of A Neighbor

By STEVE ELLWANGER
Associated Press Writer
SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I.

(AP) — The 40 members of the South Kingstown police force never stopped looking for 5-year-old Jason Foreman, despite a failed nationwide search and eight frustrating years of dead ends.

They never suspected that the boy's bones were sitting in a box at the home of Michael E. Woodmansee, a neighbor who lived across the street from the Foremans.

"He was never considered what you would call a real suspect," Police Chief Vincent Vespa said Thursday. "He was questioned along with the other neighbors."

Woodmansee, 24, a bearded loner who acted in college plays, last week admitted that he lured Jason into his home on May 18, 1975, the day the boy disappeared, stabbed him in the heart and put his body in a basement trunk.

Woodmansee, who was sentenced to 40 years in prison, said he later removed about a third of Jason's bones and kept them in his bedroom.

But because Woodmansee's father was a reserve police officer, their home was never searched. When the elder Woodmansee asked his son about the bones, he was told they were for a school play.

John and Joice Foreman buried their son's remains in a small white coffin Wednesday, in a cemetery across the street from their home.

"I can tell you that I know my wife and I are going to feel better now that it's over," Foreman said. Of Jason, he added, "If he had had a chance to grow up, he would have done good deeds."

When the police chief found the boy's skull and bones in Woodmansee's house, his feelings were a mixture of pain and relief.

"It wasn't the type of end result we had hoped for," said Vespa, who searched for Jason as a Rhode Island state trooper before he became chief here in 1981. "I was sick to my stomach."

The discovery that the boy's remains had been only a stone's throw away — especially in the wake of a massive manhunt in 1975 — left many law enforcement officials in this southern Rhode Island community shaking their heads.

"But it didn't come together until the Sherman case," Vespa said, referring to Woodmansee's attack last April on 14-year-old newsboy Dale Sherman, which provided the answer to Jason's fate.

Woodmansee admitted inviting Sherman into his home on April 15, 1982, plying him with vodka and beer and trying to strangle him with a scarf when he passed out. Sherman managed to get away and tell his father, who called police.

"Woodmansee told us at the station he was trying to revive Sherman. But that didn't make sense to me," Vespa said.

"Bearing in mind he lived across the street from Foreman when he disappeared, we started pressing that issue and he confessed. It took just a few minutes," he recalled.

The next morning, Vespa went to the Woodmansee home. "We told the father what we were looking for. The son had told us where the remains could be found."

Woodmansee originally pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, but psychiatrists who examined him judged him competent to stand trial. His attorney and state prosecutors agreed that Woodmansee would plead guilty to a reduced charge of second-degree murder to avoid a potentially gruesome trial.

Vespa said justice was served. "It would have been a sensational trial with difficult legal issues. Bearing in mind the great tragedy involved, the disposition imposed by the judge is fair and equitable," he said.

Subcommittee Considers Reducing Runoff Votes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill to do away with some primary runoff elections was waylaid to a subcommittee Thursday after an opponent said it would change the majority rule.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Ken Spaulding, D-Durham, provides that if the winner in a party primary had at least 40 percent of the vote, he would not be subject to a runoff. Under present law, the loser may demand a primary at taxpayers' expense if the winner has less than 50 percent of the vote.

Spaulding told the House Committee on Election Laws that a statewide runoff cost between $500,000 and $1 million, even though "the winner usually wins by fewer votes in the second primary than the winner in the first."

Rep. Robert McAlister, D-Rockingham, suggested the bill be referred to a subcommittee, saying his constituents were concerned about any bill that might "change the majority rule."

That motion sparked debate, however.

"I have seen things go into subcommittee and never come out," said Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange.

"Many of the standing committees have a majority that has problems with the bill," added Spaulding, who asked that the bill be tabled until next week.

He criticized the entire second primary system, saying he originally favored doing away with it. But he acknowledged that such a drastic move would be difficult to get through the General Assembly.

"In the Kentucky Derby, when a horse comes in second, he can't say he wants a second chance," Spaulding said, but he added that trying to do away with the second primary altogether "would be more effective in killing the bill."

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, who co-sponsored the measure, said it could help prevent dissension prompted by runoffs.

"Someone behind (in the first primary) needs to do something drastic to catch up," he said. "Often these tactics are not things that we condone. They end up dividing the party."

The committee voted 10-8 in favor of subcommittee consideration.

In other legislative action:

Comparative Fault

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, defended before the Senate Judiciary III Committee his bill that would give North Carolina a comparative fault negligence system.

Under the system, people would be able to collect damages from an accident if they were less than 50 percent at fault. Presently, the plaintiff can collect damages only if the defendant was completely at fault.

Barnes said the current contributory negligence system was an "aberration and an abomination" that was unfair and led to longer, more expensive lawsuits.

Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, said the bill would make it harder for judges to dismiss frivolous lawsuits and expose defendants to unreasonable jury rulings.

"Justice doesn't necessarily prevail in the jury system," he said, alluding to the "deep pocket theory" which holds that juries are susceptible to emotional pleas by injured parties and often award excessive amounts.

Coastal Management

An official of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development told a House committee that the Coastal Area Management Act had become less controversial as some of the most frequent criticisms had been proven groundless.

Kenneth Stewart told the House Committee on Natural and Economic Resources that there was sufficient local input, despite claims to the contrary, since six of the 15 Coastal Resources Commission members are either city council members or county commissioners.

He said complaints that the state was improperly dictating land use and that its standards were too strict had been shown invalid as well.

Stewart said that while normal forestry and agriculture programs were exempt from CAMA, the act justly regulates farm runoff. But he said only one farmer's request for a runoff permit had been rejected.

"We realize that runoff is a necessary outgrowth of farming and we don't think in terms of denying permits," said Stewart. "Rather, we think in terms of how to allow it without harming the environment."

Budget

The House Base Budget Subcommittee on Education began a probe of Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed public school budget for the 1983-85 biennium.

Meanwhile, the Base Budget Subcommittee on Human Resources voted to take a closer look at the budget for disability payments after a state official said many of the people his office ruled ineligible were restored to eligibility by administrative judges.

George Flemming of the Division of Social Services said that while his office had rejected 65 percent of the applications for continued disability payments over the past three ears, an administrative law judge had reversed 61 percent of those.

The reason for the high number of reversals, Flemming said, is that the judges aren't bound by the federal standards he must observe.

S&Ls

The Senate Banking Committee approved a lengthy rewrite of the savings and loan law which would lift limits on the amount of stock an individual or family may own in a newly organized, state-chartered stock savings and loan.

The bill also would allow other financial institutions to buy stock in the newly organized savings and loan.

Supporters said the bill will extend privileges held by state-chartered banks to the savings and loans, which now are allowed to offer many of the same types of accounts.

Wineries

The Senate suspended its rules to approve and send to the House a bill aimed at protecting wine wholesalers from arbitrarily losing their franchise from wineries.

It prohibits wineries from cancelling franchises except for certain reasons — the wholesaler's loss of license, bankruptcy and failure to maintain an adequate sales volume.

The winery couldn't cancel the franchise just because the wholesaler changed ownership or was transferred to another family member.

Similar franchise protections have been extended to beer and gasoline wholesalers.

Assaults

A bill making it a felony to assault judges and magistrates passed the Senate and was returned to the House for concurrence in an amendment.

The Senate unanimously amended the bill to affect only assaults made when the judicial officials are performing their job or assaults made because of the officials' jobs.

ABC

By a 39-3 vote, the Senate enacted a bill expanding the powerful Advisory Budget Commission from 12 to 15 members. The lieutenant governor, House speaker and governor each would appoint one of the new members.

The commission's main job is helping the governor prepare the state budget.

House Debate

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, had to defend two of his bills on the House floor before they won grudging approval.

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, sparked the first debate when he suggested a bill that would let judges consider "educational plans" in awarding alimony really did nothing.

"It costs us just to introduce bills, let alone if they don't do anything," he said.

More than a dozen representatives took the floor to support or oppose the bill before House Speaker Liston Ramsey quipped, "We still have nine attorneys that haven't spoken."

That bill passed by a 64-50 margin.

Hackney found similar trouble with a bill that would allow separated couples to engage in intercourse without negating their separation agreement.

He said the bill would reverse a North Carolina law that discourages separated couples from attempting to resolve their differences.

Rep. Hugh Lee, D-Richmond, questioned whether the bill would apply to sexual congress in other states or actions other than intercourse "that I have heard of."

The House tentatively approved the measure, 94-18.

Revoked License

The House tentatively approved a bill that would change the penalty for driving under a permanently revoked license from a mandatory one-year prison term to a discretionary term of 30 days to two years and a fine of up to $1,000.

New Bills

Bills filed Thursday would change the rules governing the expunction of some criminal records, ensure the inheritance rights of adopted children, let the Wildlife Resources Commission conduct hunts on game lands, regulate the importation of dangerous animals and have convicted litterers clean up litter as a condition of probation.

Police List 3 Collisions

An estimated $3,500 property damage resulted from a series of three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 12:32 p.m. collision at the intersection of Ninth and Washington streets, involving cars driven by Barbara Ann Smith of Clemmons and Susan Knott McGhee of 14F Branche's Estates.

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Smith car and $700 to the McGhee auto.

A 10:18 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, 350 feet north of the Chestnut Street intersection, involved cars driven by Beverly Carol Webber of Goldsboro and Brenda Leigh Fleming of Route 4, Washington.

Damage from that mishap was set at $700 to the Webber car and $300 to the Fleming auto.

A 5:57 p.m. collision on Hooker Road, 35 feet south of the Cozart Street intersection involved cars driven by Robert Lee Belcher of 1802B Hopkins Drive and Robin Wade Williams of 209 Evanswood Drive.

Officers estimated damage to the Williams car at $800, and reported no damage resulted to the Belcher vehicle.

Recovery Is Said A Fact

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Economic recovery is not a rumor but a fact, the chairman of the nation's largest business organization said Thursday.

Robert T. Thompson of Greenville, S.C., chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, told Greensboro-area chamber of commerce members that the rebound has started and it will be solid.

Chamber economists in Washington foresee a 5 percent growth in the Gross National Product — considerably higher than the 1.7 percent increase projected by the Reagan administration, he said.

But Thompson said "the government continues to grow at a record pace and it is going to continue to grow."

He said this year's budget is the largest in history. He recalled that in the 1960s when the budget hit the $100 billion mark, "everyone thought that was horrible. Now it's $800 billion."

Most alarming of all, he said, is the projected $200 billion budget deficit in 1988. He fears the size of the debt may bring pressure for a tax increase. There's already a strong push for one among some Washington leaders, he said.

Thompson said the Reagan administration should examine a model balanced federal budget that chamber economists have prepared.

Theft Reported

Greenville police today were investigating the theft of a quantity of property from a house at 2408 E. Tenth St. Tuesday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said thieves gained entrance to the home by forcing open a rear door. A television, a turntable, a 35mm camera and a quantity of jewelry were taken.
