Honors Science Program Plan Offered

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"This is one of the most exciting things to appear on our agendas in a long time. If it can be developed and if it works, it will be one of the best things to happen in Greenville City Schools for some time." These are the words Superintendent Delma Blinson used to present a proposal for an honors science program for Rose High School to the Greenville Board of Education Monday night.

Dr. Blinson said the proposal stems from discussions 15 months ago with East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell and Dr. William Laupus, dean of the ECU School of Medicine.

Basically, an honors science program would be a senior-level science elective course open to outstanding science and math students. Initially, as few as 10 or 15 students, or even less, would be selected from applications made by juniors, with screening to be based on high standards of achievement on the part of applicants.

One of the factors motivating consideration of an honors science program is the shortage in North Carolina of teachers in the fields of science and math, with no immediate prospects for an increase of teacher candidates for these fields.

Blinson said that, due to the presence of East Carolina University and the ECU School of Medicine, "Greenville is in an advantageous situation to establish an on-site honors science program. It would be a slow developmental process to establish such a program, and it will naturally involve finding professors who are willing to take time to work in the program."

Noting that he was presenting the proposal to the board "only as an idea at this time," Blinson added "it has exciting possibilities. I can see it as something that would become a prestigious program in the eyes of students, something to work toward in the early years of high school."

He added that, "Dean Laupus has given his blessings to the idea of such a program."

A rough draft of regulations for the Reduction in Force for Certified Employees policy was accepted by school board members. While a basic policy statement requires board action, regulations applicable to a policy do not. However, it is standard procedure for the administration to present regulations to the board for consideration and suggestions for revisions before regulations are put into final form.

Contract Is Awarded For Maintenance Building

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners awarded a contract Monday to Riverside Iron Works for construction of a maintenance garage building at the county landfill.

Riverside's $18,408 bid was the lowest of eight bids received for the metal building. Other bids ranged from $24,700 to $18,900.

Commissioners last month rejected three bids received for a wooden garage building, which ranged from $19,954 to $25,000.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital President Jack Richardson reported on the hospital's response to last week's explosion at Village Green Apartments.

"We got our first call at the hospital at about 6:30 a.m. to put our disaster plan in effect," Richardson said. "We saw about 12 patients and tried to take care of them at the hospital because they didn't have a home to go back to."

Richardson also said a press conference was held about 10 a.m. on the day of the explosion. "We felt like there was a lot of apprehension in the community so we went on and released the names" of those that were injured.

"We had over 100 calls from the press in two days," Richardson said, adding "we had a lot of support from the (East Carolina University) School of Medicine staff. The people really knew what to do."

Ed Garrison, director of the county Department of Social Services, recommended that commissioners run the Community Work Experience Program for another year.

He said 48 people who received AFDC (Aid to Families With Dependent Children) benefits have been placed in full-time jobs since the program began last year. There are another 89 people working in job-training slots at the present time, Garrison said.

"I recommend that we continue this program for another year. The program is doing much better than we anticipated," Garrison said.

Housing Authority Again OKs Revenue Bond Issue

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Resolutions authorizing the issuance of revenue bonds to provide mortgage financing for a new townhouse development here were re-adopted

Monday by the Housing Authority and the newly formed Greenville Housing Development Corp. due to the expiration of the original financing time schedule.

The authority created the development corporation in December to serve as a vehicle to provide tax-exempt bond financing for Greentree Village off East Tenth Street. The action was taken after the board was approached by Westminster Co. of Greensboro and Highland Mortgage Co. of Raleigh regarding the possibility of creating a corporation to handle financing.

When the authority and GHDC authorized the financing and issuing of revenue bonds and notes for construction of Greentree, a 60-day time limit was involved. That schedule has now expired, according to Joe Laney, the authority's executive director, and the new resolutions extend the time frame another 60 days.

Laney said funding problems the developers experienced with the Department of Housing and Urban Development had delayed the project but the developers are confident that Greentree will now move ahead.

The resolutions reflect the sale of $1,355,000 in first lien revenue bonds to finance the 40-unit development and also $1,269,900 in construction notes for the project.

In addition to the financial resolutions, the authority also adopted several technical amendments to the bylaws and articles of incorporation of the GHDC, as recommended by HUD.

In other business, commissioners adopted an updated administrative plan for all of the authority's Section 8 housing programs, with the exception of the University Towers mid-rise project for the elderly. Laney said HUD had asked the authority to bring the plan up to date and he said he has spent almost a year getting HUD's approval of technical revisions in the plan.

Commissioners also adopted a revised personnel, procurement and travel policy for the authority, involving a series of technical changes that expand on several policy matters in detail.

EPA Testimony Is Brought To Justice Dept. By Rep. Dingell

WASHINGTON (AP) — A subcommittee chairman, who says his panel heard "sworn, direct testimony" of wrongdoing in the Environmental Protection Agency, is meeting with Justice Department officials to tell what he knows.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., said he would discuss with department officials today the testimony EPA staff members gave during closed hearings of his House Energy and Commerce subcommittee.

Dingell told reporters of the meeting after a public committee session that sparked another allegation of wrongdoing at EPA.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., said the panel should ask the Justice Department to determine whether the EPA's top lawyer committed perjury in testimony before the Dingell panel.

Dingell said the request would be discussed in a private committee session.

The Justice Department, acting under President Reagan's orders, has been trying since last week to schedule a meeting with Dingell.

Six congressional committees and the FBI are investigating a variety of allegations involving the administration of the $1.6 billion "superfund" established to clean up hazardous waste sites.

The allegations involve political manipulations, conflicts of interest, perjury, coverup, destruction of documents and "sweetheart" deals for industrial polluters.

EPA Administrator Anne McGill Burford says she favors a special prosecutor to investigate the allegations.

Resolution Is Amended At City Council Meet

The City Council has decided to amend its original resolution relative to compensation for members of the Greenville Utilities Commission by stating that GUC may set its own pay, subject to approval of the council.

The council's adoption of the amended resolution, which took place at the regular agenda workshop Monday afternoon, followed a meeting with Pitt Rep. Ed Warren involving Mayor Percy Cox and some members of the council.

Cox said the amended resolution will be forwarded to Pitt County's legislative delegation in Raleigh today.

A bill that would allow GUC members to set their own pay has been introduced and is now in a legislative committee, but Warren indicated Monday there would be no problem in offering an amendment to the measure. The council, meeting in December, had adopted the resolution asking Warren to introduce legislation allowing the GUC members to set their own salaries.

Cox said the local officials asked Warren his opinion of the bill Monday and discussed with him the provisions of the measure. There had been concern expressed locally relative to the bill and its wording.

The salaries of GUC members is $50 per month and has been at that figure "for many years," according to City Manager Gail Meeks. The council appoints members of the commission and has ultimate authority over approval of the GUC budget.

Mrs. Meeks said that while there are control measures relative to compensation for the board members, the amended legislation would stipulate those controls "on paper."

ROBERSONVILLE — State, county and town officials Monday joined Donald W. Mabe, president of Perdue Farms Inc., in the dedication of Perdue's new broiler complex in Robersonville. Mabe traveled to Robersonville from Perdue's headquarters in Salisbury, Md., to head the ceremony.

State and area officials on hand for a tour of the poultry processing facility and for the official dedication included N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth, state Sen. J.J. (Monk) Harrington and state Rep. Frank Ballance. Also attending were John L. House, chairman of the Martin County Board of Commissioners, and Robersonville Mayor Wilson Wynne.

Culmination of the dedication event was the unveiling by Mabe and Graham of a bronze plaque at the entrance of the administration building which reads "Business and community working together to build a strong future."

Recently completed and now in an initial one-shift operation phase, the Robersonville unit processes 260,000 broilers a week. The facility, acquired last year from Central Soya Co. Inc., has been renovated at a cost of more than $1 million. The new operation has provided jobs for more than 250 local people.

Mabe stated that statewide, "Our investment in North Carolina now exceeds $60 million dollars in property, facilities and equipment, and includes a processing plant in Lewiston, a soybean processing operation in Colfield; a hatchery in Halifax; broiler houses throughout the eastern half of the state and this new complex in Robersonville. Additionally, each year we spend $60 million for the purchase of grain, corn and soybeans, within North Carolina.

"Eventually, most likely by April 1984, we will have a two-shift operation in Robersonville and will employ another 220 people," Mabe explained.

"This year, for the first time in the family-operated business, our sales appear headed to go over the one-half billion dollar mark."

A considerable portion of this huge food operation is centered in eastern North Carolina. "Our plant at Lewiston operates two shifts and processes 24,000 chickens per shift. Also, one of our soybean processing plants, located in another (Please turn to Page 5)

Jones Introduces Tax Bill

Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., has introduced a bill which would permanently exempt certain fishermen from the federal unemployment tax.

The 1976 Tax Reform Act exempted owners of fishing vessels from paying federal withholding on income taxes and Social Security taxes for fishermen on their vessels if the vessel was manned by less than 10 crew members and if the crew member's pay was only a share of the catch. The bill also exempted owners of vessels under 10 tons from paying federal unemployment taxes.

Jones' bill would correct the inconsistency caused by the Economic Recovery Act of 1981 which made the unemployment tax exemption for self-employed crew members (those receiving a share of the catch) renewable annually.

Set Of Rules Adopted By N. C. Senate

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Senate overwhelmingly adopted a set of rules Monday night, but there was division on an amendment to eliminate roll call votes in committees.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, introduced the amendment, which eventually was adopted, 29-20. He said the change returns the rule to what it was about five years ago.

The rules were approved, 48-1.

"The action in committee is not what converts a bill to law," Allsbrook said. "The action in committee is simply a recommendation. The roll call serves no good purpose."

But Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, said that, "even in committee we have the responsibility to be accountable to the people of the state." He noted that some committee votes are difficult if not impossible to reverse on the floor of the Senate.

"There are occasions when our consciences and obligations to the people of the state require us to go on record in a committee vote," he said.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he had never seen a roll call vote in a committee. He said there are times when the voice vote in a committee is too close to determine the outcome and hands are raised to vote — something that wouldn't be changed by the amendment.

Until the rules were adopted Monday, the Senate operated under the 1981 session rules.

In other legislative action:

Savings & Loans

The Senate unanimously approved and sent to the House a bill rewriting much of the law governing savings and loan associations.

One of the changes in the bill would allow an individual or combination of family members to own more than 10 percent of a savings and loan's stock and allow another financial institution to buy stock in the savings and loan.

Another bill approved unanimously by the Senate would allow state and local governments to deposit public money in any savings and loan. The governmental units already may deposit public money in banks.

Judges

The House refused to go along with a Senate amendment to a House-sponsored bill making assaults on judges a felony. The amendment would have extended the protection to magistrates.

A conference committee was to be appointed to resolve the differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill.

Resolutions

The House approved and sent to the Senate two resolutions. One urges Congress to oppose termination of low-income housing programs and the other urges Congress to authorize tax deductions for money saved to buy a first home.

Bills

Rep. Charles Hughes, R-Henderson, proposed a constitutional amendment that would authorize judges to require convicted criminals to pay restitution, pay the cost of their prosecution and pay for their imprisonment.

Hughes also introduced a bill to allow Henderson County to levy an additional 1 percent local sales and use tax to pay for jail and court facilities. County voters would be asked to consider the sales tax increase.

Say Bacteria Discovered That Decomposes Dangerous PCBs

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — University of Tennessee microbiologists said Monday they have found bacteria that can decompose PCBs, a long-lasting chemical compound thought to cause cancer.

In tests under simulated natural conditions, the naturally occurring bacteria has reduced the dangerous pollutant to water and carbon dioxide, the scientists said.

A landfill containing PCB-laced oil scooped up from more than 250 miles of North Carolina roadways has been the object of protest in Warren County, N.C., where more than 500 arrests have been made.

The discovery was made during a five-year, $500,000 university study into PCBs sponsored by the federal Environmental Protection Agency. The results were to be presented Tuesday at the American Society of Microbiology's annual meeting in New Orleans.

PCBs — short for polychlorinated biphenyl — represent one of America's most stubborn pollution problems. The EPA classifies the substance as a "priority pollutant" because it usually won't break down into non-toxic elements.

The U.S. manufacture of PCBs, once widely used in electrical transformers, was banned in 1977 after studies linked it to cancer and liver disease. When ingested by humans and animals, PCBs collect and remain in fatty tissues.

Dr. Gary Sayler, an associate professor of microbiology who directed the Tennessee study, said the natural bacteria have been found to break down PCBs in less than 25 days under natural conditions. Sunlight can make the process up to four times faster, he said.

"If the results can ever be applied, this could be extremely cost-effective," Sayler said. "But we try to hold down the enthusiasm."

Malcolm Shields, a Tennessee doctoral student in microbiology, is working to expand on the discovery by trying to isolate the specific genes responsible for the PCB breakdown.

"Since this decomposition process is occurring naturally in at least one setting, it might be possible through genetic engineering to develop bacteria which would be more effective in degrading PCBs or breaking down other chemicals," a university statement quoted Shields as saying.

Volunteers Find Murder Victim

WILLIAMSTON — Volunteer citizen searchers were enlisted to locate the body of a woman apparently kidnapped from a convenience store and murdered Sunday.

The body of Valerie Ann Roberson Dixon, 29, was discovered about 4 p.m. Sunday about 1½ miles up a logging road off Prison Camp Road near Williamston. She had been missing from the West Main Street Zip Mart where she worked since a few minutes prior to 5:47 a.m.

Williamston police said Ms. Dixon was seen by a Williamston police officer at 5:20 a.m. At 5:47 a.m. a customer calling from a pay phone reported that the market was unattended. A call to a newspaper revealed who should have been there and that her car should be there.

At 6:25 a.m. Ms. Dixon's car was spotted on Carolina Avenue and stopped by police. A bag holding a large amount of money and a .32-caliber pistol were discovered in the car and the driver, identified as Willie Brown Jr., 38, of Williamston, was arrested. He denied knowing the whereabouts of Ms. Dixon.

When further searching failed to locate Ms. Dixon, volunteers from the community were enlisted to comb Williamston and the surrounding area. Detective Keith Roach said. Searchers following tracks up the logging road found Ms. Dixon's body sprawled in the muddy path. She had one gunshot wound to the back of the head, possibly others, Roach said. As of this morning, results from an autopsy had not been returned to the police department.

Brown has been charged with murder, kidnapping and armed robbery and is being held in the Martin County Jail without bond. A probable cause hearing is scheduled for Martin District Court March 21.

Cain-Harris Wedding Solemnized Sunday

Kimberley Ann Harris became the bride of William Lance Cain Sunday at 4:30 p.m. in the Calvary Memorial Methodist Church. The Rev. Dewey Tyson performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mitchell Harris Jr. of Snow Hill and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Earl Cain of Greenville.

Nuptial music was presented by George L. Mewborn III, organist. Bobby Bennett sang "The Wedding Song" and played the guitar.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin taffeta over peau de soie. The sleeveless gown was fashioned with a sheer yoke of English net with a high neckline encircled in silk Venise lace. A ruffle of schiffli embroidered English net draped the sweetheart bodice front and continued over the shoulders to the gown back. Tailored white taffeta bows were featured at the shoulders and the full skirt extended from a modified natural waistline. A ruffle flounce of taffeta encircled the hemline and attached cathedral train. She wore a walking veil of imported illusion attached to a garland headpiece of rolled satin taffeta rosebuds. A bow with long streamers centered the back. She carried an embroidered handkerchief belonging to her late paternal grandmother, Winifred Riddle Harris, and a cascade of silk roses, carnations and baby's breath entwined with ivy, bridal lace and satin streamers.

Leigh Harris Pridgen of Greensboro was her sister's matron of honor and wore a formal gown of raspberry taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled with silk Venise lace. The bodice was enhanced with a sheer yoke of point d'esprit bordered in silk Venise lace. Short puff sleeves complemented the gown and cummerbund of gathered taffeta encircled the waistline.

Bridesmaids were Jennifer Jones Hines of Snow Hill, Lana Jean Ginn of Raleigh, Ginger Rogers Radford of Greenville, Pam Liles Capps of Kinston, Julia Smith Joyner of Wilson and Donna Eletheer Decker of Silver Springs, Md. Their dresses were identical to that of the honor attendant and they carried nosegays of silk roses, baby's breath and star dust with satin streamers.

Adrienne Gietz was flower girl and her full length dress of ecru eyelet was trimmed in crocheted lace around the neckline and ruffled hemline. Raspberry ribbons and streamers fell from the waist. She carried a natural straw basket filled with rose petals.

William Earl Cain served his son as best man. Ushers included Tracy Roland Cain, brother of the bridegroom, George Mitchell Harris III, brother of the bride, John Calvin Ard, Jack DeWayne Stokes, William Calvin Sanderson Jr. and Edward Dwayne Upchurch. Ashe Creech, ring bearer, carried a hand-embroidered pillow.

The mother of the bride wore a formal skirt of sapphire blue moire faille taffeta with a beige chiffon blouse. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of blue lustreglo designed with a round neckline. Both wore corsages of pink roses.

Payne Sugg directed the wedding and Terri Wade presided at the register.

A reception was held at the DAR Chapter House in Farmville given by the bride's parents. Guests were greeted by Patti Wilsberry and Mac Stocks.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Ramada Inn Saturday.

Dear Abby

Diagnosis Doesn't Spell Doom

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A friend told me that a couple of years ago you ran a letter from a woman who had just learned that she had multiple sclerosis and was debating whether to tell her young daughter, fearing it might upset her. My friend said you responded by printing a very helpful letter from another woman who had faced the same problem. Abby, please find that letter and run it again. I need it because my sister has just been diagnosed as having MS, and she's in the identical situation. Thank you.

CONCERNED SISTER

DEAR SISTER: With pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Prepared for the Worst," the woman with MS (multiple sclerosis) who was told by her doctor that eventually she would be paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair. How right you were to tell her not to accept her doctor's gloomy prognosis. She was debating whether to tell her 13-year-old about her disease in the hope that she might be more cooperative and understanding — yet she didn't want to frighten or upset her younger children.

I think all her children should be told.

She should also contact her local MS society. Members will invite her to meetings, put her in touch with other MS victims and provide her with a lot of helpful information.

"Prepared for the Worst" should also read "The Pursuit of Hope," an excellent and inspiring book by Miriam Ottenberg, a journalist with MS.

I know firsthand about MS because I have it, too. My 8-year-old daughter and 11-year-old son were told what I have and how they can help. They are among my greatest assets. Without their help and my husband's constant assurance, I wouldn't be able to do the things I do today. I'm a substitute teacher, Brownie leader, team mom for my son's baseball team and active in my church and PTA.

I manage to keep my home going and keep up a moderately active social life. I realize that someday I could be paralyzed and in a wheelchair. But right now I am not, and I intend to use to the fullest everything I have. Every day I fight to keep my body on its feet and walking. It's a struggle, but it's well worth the effort when I see what I can still accomplish.

PAT HERMAN, OXNARD, CALIF.

DEAR PAT: Thank you for a wonderful letter. I received hundreds of letters from those with MS, and all were in complete agreement that no one should expect the worst and resign him/herself to a wheelchair. They also told me that telling the children and asking for their help will bring the family closer together.

For those who want more information about MS, write to the National MS Society, 205 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10017. It is a non-profit organization, so please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter signed "Prime." She's the woman who was reluctant to submit to a premarital sex performance test to be "graded" like a side of beef.

Prime has a choice, and it's not good. This fellow is very commercial and there is no utility in keeping him. She should cut and can him.

Sign me...

HIGH GRADE

DEAR HIGH: You have a legitimate beef. T would be a pleasure to meat you.

You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Lisa Ann Joyner And Allen R. Meekins Marry

WASHINGTON — Lisa Ann Joyner and Allen Reed Meekins were married Saturday afternoon in a ceremony performed here by the Rev. Edwin Hill.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Lauris K. Joyner of Route 2, Washington. She was escorted by her father and was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Brownie N. Meekins of Washington. His father was best man.

A program of wedding music was presented by Martha Anderson, organist of New Bern and Treva Tankard of Bath, soloist.

Carla Joyner of Washington was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids included Terry Jones, sister of the bridegroom, Debra Meekins, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, both of Washington and Karen Willis of Oxford.

Ushers were Gene and Michael Meekins, brothers of the bridegroom, and Lauris T. Joyner, brother of the bride, all of Washington.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and chantilly lace over taffeta. The fitted chantilly lace bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke accented with embroidery edged with seed pearls. Long lace puff sleeves and a high rise waist. The skirt extended into a chapel train. A chantilly lace panel overlaid the skirt and train in an apron effect. Scalloped chantilly lace bordered the hemline of the gown. The bride chose a waltz length mantilla of bridal illusion edged with scalloped chantilly lace flowing from a lace caplet edged with seed pearls for her headpiece. She carried her mother's prayer book, which she carried in her wedding. It was covered with lace and cascading ivy and white button pom poms with baby's breath and white streamers.

The honor attendant wore a gown of seafam crepe satin with puffed sleeves. She carried a long-stemmed white mum with baby's breath and greenery tied with white picot ribbon.

The bridesmaids wore peach colored gowns of crepe satin with lace puffed sleeves. Their flowers were like those of the maid of honor.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

MRS. ALLEN REED MEEKINS

The couple will live in Washington, N.C. after a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina.

The bride works at Pitt Memorial Hospital and attended East Carolina University. She is currently attending Pitt Community College. The bridegroom works at A&B Mechanical Shop in Washington. Both graduated from Bath High School.

2 large eggs
1-3rd cup sugar
1/2 cup light corn syrup
2 cups buttermilk
6-ounce can frozen orange juice, undiluted and thawed

2 medium bananas, pureed (about 2-3rds cup)
Beat eggs slightly; gradually beat in sugar and corn syrup; add buttermilk and concentrate; beat to blend. Pour into 2 freezing trays; freeze until almost firm — 2 hours. Turn into a large mixing bowl; break up into small pieces; beat, without melting, just until consistency is uniform. Stir in banana — it should be pureed just before using. Return to freezer tray and freeze until firm — 3 to 5 hours. Makes about 1 quart.

The Meaning Of News

It is not surprising that President Reagan, like most presidents before him, follows the news avidly.

And it is certainly no surprise that this president wants the bad news deleted and only good news — by his definition — reported.

The president deleted an attack on television anchormen in a speech at a fund-raising dinner for the U.S. Olympic Committee. But, he said he would like to see a week in April devoted to "good news."

It brings us to what reporters, editors, politicians and the public in general debate constantly — what should newspapers, radio and television news shows send out to the general public every day.

Certainly there is no lack of "good news" and it is duly reported. Recently upturns in economic indicators have occurred and these have been faithfully reported. Even the president's regular pronouncements that good times were ahead have been regularly reported. Sandwiched between this good news have been reports about the genuine plight of the unemployed and the troubles of the Environmental Protection Agency. We assume this is the kind of "bad news" to which the president objects.

It is the mission of the news media to give the general public the information it needs to make informed decisions in the democratic process. Since there are no scientific guidelines for this there will always be disagreement as to exactly what should be included every day.

The worst judge of what is news, however, is the elected office holder. Of course they want only good news. Naturally they want the bad ignored. What better way to remain in office?

It's Part Of Culture

The New York Times has reported a memo it says was obtained from the Voice of America which tells the woes of attempting to sort out suggestive music of the rock 'n roll era.

One official questioned the playing of "Sexual Healing" on Voice of America broadcasts, according to the report. But the popular song by Marvin Gaye won two 1983 Grammy Awards.

How about "Ebony and Ivory?" it was asked. Should that be sent to South Africa? Well, it turns out, that is the No. 1 song in South Africa.

And, according to the report, what about the old songs like Frank Sinatra's "All the Way" and Elvis Presley's "Love Me Tender?" Are they not too suggestive?

Such debate tells us why the United States leans to less censorship, rather than more. The Voice of America should reflect the American culture and the rock music of today is very much a part of our present culture.

A Word Is A Word

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers have an easy, time-honored way of dealing with programs or issues that take on an unpleasant connotation — they just change the name.

Thus "recesses" become "district work periods," taxes become "revenue enhancement measures" and "pork barrel" becomes a term used to describe only those federally financed projects placed in another's district.

The $4.9 billion jobs bill approved last week by the House and headed for the Senate contains a goodly number of such projects, funneled into districts of influential members.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W Va., has his own definition: "Well, if it's in West Virginia, I wouldn't call it pork."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said it with a poem, noting that one member's pork was another's "bread and butter":

"To hold this job that we have got and earn the pay we're makin'

"Each works with might to earn the name of one who brings home the bacon."

Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., said it more prosaically: "A man that handles a national program and leaves the district out — he better not go back home."

When former President Gerald Ford testified before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee the other day, he talked about helping set up the 1976 Bicentennial celebration.

After he finished, Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, asked Ford if Congress could call on him to continue to offer his counsel for ceremonies honoring the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution.

"I'm not looking for a job," Ford replied with a laugh.

Sen. David Pryor had some tough questions for John Svahn, the Social Security commissioner, at a Senate confirmation hearing on Svahn's nomination as under secretary of health and human services.

Svahn's wife and two children were present for the grilling. Pryor later said he couldn't vote for the nomination because he thought Svahn lacked compassion.

But he apologized for being so rough on Svahn in front of his family and made this peace offering:

"I told him I was going to send his children — they are beautiful young children — a dart board with my picture on it."

NEW YORK (AP) — When President Reagan talks about cutting the bureaucracy he generally means cutting the number of government workers. But, it is alleged, government bureaucracy has invaded the private sector also.

Nobody is more willing to say so than the nation's financial institutions, now campaigning for repeal of a law that would have them deduct 10 percent of dividend and interest payments beginning July 1.

As some of them view their assignment, it is almost forced labor. Because of a federal action, it is they who will have to deal with customer complaints and it is they who will have to do the government's bookkeeping.

STAGE MANAGER: The name of the town is Seven Corners. It's a nice town, you know what I mean? Nobody remarkable ever comes out of it as far as we know. We're just pin simple folk here and we can't claim to be nothing more than just another town along Route 16.

I better show you around a bit. That nice white house for sale on the corner belongs to the Jorgensons. It's a real good buy if you don't mind living over a landfill of dioxin. Oh, I forgot to tell you. About 10 years ago a fellow came through and sprayed oil mixed with dioxin on the roads to settle the dust. The dioxin's all over the place. That's why you see so many "For Sale" signs on people's lawns.

Over there is the school, and right behind it is where some chemical company dumped all its PCB in those big oil drums. The chemical company's out of business, and the stuff is now seeping into the playground. Funny, you don't ever see any kids playing there any more.

Well, as I said, it's just about morning.

Here's the mayor. How's it going, Charley?

MAYOR: Not too good. I been calling the EPA for two weeks trying to find out what they're going to do about all our hazardous waste. They claim they still have no idea whether our soil samples are bad for human health or not. Even if they find the stuff is unsafe, they said they can't do anything about cleaning the waste up until they do a study. They also said if their study shows we got a problem, their first concern is to find the chemical companynd make a deal with them to pay for the cleanup.

STAGE MANAGER: Well, have a nice day, Mayor. Here comes Doc Gibbs. You look kind of peaked, Doc.

DOC: I never saw so many sick people in a town in my life. Them that isn't sick is scared silly they'll get sick. I haven't slept in months.

STAGE MANAGER: What's going on at the hospital?

DOC: Mrs. Henigan gave birth last night to a premature baby. That's the 14th premature baby I've delivered this year. By the way, if you're still using well water, be sure and boil it before you let any of your family drink it.

STAGE MANAGER: Thanks for the tip, Doc. Fellow over there is Tad Jones. He's a farmer and has 100 acres of grazing land right next to the Cloverleaf Acid Pit. You look down in the dumps, Tad. What's up?

TAD: Five of my cows died last night.

STAGE MANAGER: What happened?

TAD: I don't know. They just keeled over and died, like my dog did last week. I'm on my way to the newspaper to put my farm up for sale, if anyone's stupid enough to buy it.

STAGE MANAGER: Good luck, Tad. Here comes the editor of the newspaper, Hiram Bonifal. Hiram knows everything going on in our town. What's the big news today, Hiram?

HIRAM: I just talked to the governor about our pollution problem. He says he'd like to help out, but he doesn't have enough money to tidy up every town in the state. He said the feds have a Superfund just for cleaning up places like ours and we ought to talk to Washington.

STAGE MANAGER: well' you can't aay the governor doesn't have a good sense of humor. You going to write another editorial about the sludge.

HIRAM: I'm too busy talking to reporters from out of town, who keep saying they're going to put Seven Corners on the map.

STAGE MANAGER: Excuse me, Hiram, I want to have a word with Sam Peters. (To audience) Sam's our undertaker, and I guess he's about the busiest man in town. Sam, can I have a word with You?

SAM: Sorry, I don't have time.

STAGE MANAGER: Don't let me stop you, Sam. Well, it's getting on to bedtime. Most of the folks are tucked in for the night after another uneventful day. Like I said, nothing much ever happens in Seven Corners. If it wasn't for the lead in the river which killed all the fish, Seven Corners would still be a real fine place to live.

Bumpers May Run Yet

WASHINGTON — The nudge that may push Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas into Democratic presidential competition as a formidable new challenger came from front-runner Walter F. Mondale burning his bridges with Jimmy Carter.

A Feb. 25 article by Boston Globe reporters Thomas Oliphant and Curtis Wilkie, based on an interview with Mondale, shows the former vice president revealing hitherto private criticism of a surprising variety of Carter administration policies that he publicly embraced at the time. That left a trail of smoldering Carterites from Washington to Plains, Ga. Normally self-controlled polster Patrick Caddell fumed over Mondale's description of Caddell's 1979 political analysis of national "malaise" as "crazy."

Caddell was present two days later at a secret strategy session at Bumpers' home in suburban Bethesda, Md. If Caddell was subjectively enraged by Mondale's bridge-burning, Bumpers was objectively disturbed. Under discussion were Mondale's disclosures cutting his linkage with a series of Carter decisions: the 1979 Cabinet purge; Paul Volcker's appointment to the Federal Reserve Board and subsequent tight-money policy; the anti-Soviet grain embargo; the MX missile "racetrack" basing system; sale of F-15 fighters to Saudi Arabia, and even Carter's early 1980 campaign strategy of seclusion in the White House.

Strength For Today

How often do we hear parents complain that Johnny or Joan writes home only when there is an acute need for mney to meet some extra expenses. On the other hand, the youngster's complaint of too little contact with home is seldom made articulate.

He does know that Mom and Dad are busy — too preoccupied with lesser things, in fact, to utilize an important opportunity for communication. And so parents don't talk things over at leisure and with thought. And the child longs for something he or she can't express.

One need only watch the beautiful smile on the face of the schoolboy or soldier as he reads the personal letter from home to see the lift to the spirit which comes from only a short letter.

How many of our beloved children grow up and are gone before we realize that we have hardly become acquainted with them, much less made them our close friends. If absence makes the heart grow fonder, show it in writing.

Bureaucracy Spreads Into Private Sector Of Business recognized certified public accountant recently commented good naturedly to a businessman that "You're just a businessman, I'm a financial engineer."

He explained that because of his understanding of the fine points of law, finance, accounting and insurance, and how through the use of computers they could be fitted together with little-known aspects of the tax law, he could almost manufacture money. "The Federal Reserve isn't the only one," he said.

The legal profession expanded by 70 percent to 220,000 in the 1970s, and Carol Boyd Leon, an economist with the Bureau of Labor Statistics, blames the increase in part to a proliferation of complex new laws.

Need you be told that the number of economists doubled, to about 140,000? While many of them were employed by securities, investment and management consulting firms, many of them also were used in an attempt to read government policy.

To be sure, many of the accountants, lawyers, tax specialists and economists would have found their jobs no matter what the federal government did, because all are part of the shift to white collar and service jobs.

It was a profound shift. Ms. Leon, writing in the Bureau of Labor Statistics' "Monthly Review," observes that one-half of the 16 million new jobs created from 1972 to 1980 were professional, technical or clerical.

During the same period the number of blue-collar jobs shrank, with farmworkers declining by about 365,000 between 1972 and 1980. Few blue-collar occupations even approached the national average growth rate. Many declined.

The country changed vastly in the 1970s, to be sure, but you can hardly overlook the influence of law and taxes and federal programs in that change.

Which is the point that banks are making in sending a storm of letters to Congress seeking repeal of a law that hasn't yet gone into effect.

With the board's acceptance, the regulations to the RIF policy will now be put into effect.

Provisions of the regulation include:

"All certified employees shall be divided by category according to the position held and subject area. Names shall be placed on a list in each category in the order of points earned, ranked from low to high. The following scale will be used during the 1982-83 school year: performance rating, 25 percent; certification, 25 percent; total length of service, 25 percent; and length of service within the school system, 25 percent. The person(s) within the designated categories with the lowest point scores shall be separated from the service."

Blinson remarked that in effect, that paragraph, applicable for the current school year 1982-83 if needed, "honors the recommendations made by the Liason Committee."

Another key point in the regulations deals with persons occupying positions in areas of critical shortage.

"By April 15 of each year, or at other appropriate times, the superintendent shall present to the board a list of categories or positions that he deems to be critical shortage areas. Upon approval of any category by the board, for the first two years of employment in the Greenville City Schools, all personnel filling such positions shall have the 'RIF score' computed such that their seniority shall be at least equivalent to that of the average for all certified employees; provided, such persons have a total average weighted performance score of at least 171 ..."

The "critical shortage area" provision also incorporates consideration of objectives for minorities established in the Affirmative Action Policy and Regulations ... "As long as the objective established in the Affirmative Action Policy and Regulations has not been achieved, the category of 'minorities' as provided for in the Affirmative Action plan shall be deemed a critical shortage area without the need for further action to so identify said category and the provisions above shall apply as with all other designated critical shortage categories."

The regulations provide for a performance criterion on an annual step progression from 25 percent in 1982-83; to 40 percent for school year 1983-84; and 55 percent for 1984-85 and thereafter.

Two annual field trips were approved, both for students at Aycock Junior High School. The first is for a trip by ninth grade social studies classes to Charleston, S.C., May 5-7; the second is for a trip by eighth grade language arts-social studies students to Washington, D.C., on March 30-April 1. Costs for the trips are $85 to Charleston, and $82.50 to Washington.

The firm of University Life Insurance Company of America, headquartered in Indianapolis, was approved for inclusion in the list of firms authorized to offer tax-sheltered annuities to all employees of the city school system. The area agent authorized to deal with school personnel is Robert L. Teele Jr. of Washington, N.C. Firms authorized to offer such services to Greenville city school employees now number in excess of 15.

Holding Talk On Tobacco

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Tobacco experts from five Southeastern states gathered here today to discuss the changes Congress made last year in the flue-cured tobacco program.

"The primary difference between this year and years before is the requirement that the tobacco program operate at no net cost to taxpayers," said Marion Brown of the Clemson University Extension Service.

"Many ramifications of the program are still being worked out."

Brown said about 150 research scientists, extension service tobacco experts and others from the Carolinas, Florida, Georgia and Virginia were attending the meeting.

The two-day conference is being sponsored by land-grant universities in the five states where flue-cured tobacco is grown.

"What we're dealing with is fallout from the changes," Brown said.

Experts are concerned about price prospects for flue-cured leaf and will discuss how high tobacco allotment rents should be, the university spokesman said.

"We're not telling how to grow the crop. We're talking about the political and economic ramifications of the changes made last year," Brown said.

eastern North Carolina town, Cofield, has been operational since 1982."

Perdue Farms Inc. is the fourth largest broiler producer in the nation and is the largest supplier of fresh poultry products to East Coast markets, including the vast New York metropolitan market.

"Perdue is also the largest roaster producer in the country, with more than 600,000 Perdue roasters a week going into the markets. These roasters, known as oven-stuffers, are large birds that dress out from five and one-half to seven pounds," Mabe said.

The production of Cornish hens is another of Perdue's operations. "They are much more popular in some areas of the country than in others," Mabe said.

The demand for poultry has created a parallel demand for "chicken houses to supply the millions of chickens we process and market each year," Mabe pointed out. "Since 1973 we have constructed 646 chicken houses and we still need 110 more to meet our constantly growing demands for poultry."

Declining interest rates, Mabe said, "is making construction of more chicken houses an attractive business proposition. At this time, we have 42 more under construction or with loans approved for construction, with another 54 applications submitted for loans."

Mabe, a native of Kernersville and a graduate of North Carolina State University, has been with Perdue for 25 years. After serving 21 months in the U.S. Army, he worked for a feed manufacturer in Roanoke, Va., and joined Perdue in 1957. In 1972, with various operations of Perdue fully integrated, Mabe was appointed executive vice president. In 1979, when Frank Perdue assumed the title of chairman of the company, Mabe was named president.

Officials, guests and media personnel were given a tour of the plant. Garbed in boots, white coats and white hats, they were escorted by Rex Thompson, manager of the Robersonville plant, who explained procedures from the arrival of live birds in wire cages on wheels through an assembly line process to a finished product being stored in refrigerated storerooms.

Following the tour, Mabe commented that "one of the key ingredients in making a decision to locate is that of feeling wanted. We definitely got the impression we were wanted here. Another consideration is that of work ethic. An independent research firm shows that in North Carolina 10 workers will do the work that it takes

Whale's Body On N.C. Beach

HOLDEN BEACH, N.C. (AP) — A 35-foot dead humpback whale, estimated to weigh seven tons, washed up on Holden Beach Monday.

Several marine biologists from the North Carolina Marine Resources Center at Ft. Fisher identified the whale as the humpback variety late Monday night. Scientists were unsure what type it was earlier because the whale was badly deteriorated and lying on its back, said Holden Beach Police Sgt. Robert Lawing.

Lawing said the some scientists estimated the whale's weight at two tons, but George Tregembo, a research associate with the North Carolina Museum of Natural History, said it probably weighs six-to-seven tons.

Farm Protester Freed From Jail

LONDON, Ohio (AP) — A farm protester who fought unsuccessfully to save his 191-acre farm from a sheriff's auction was ordered released from jail after he filed for protection from his creditors.

Doug Dailey, 37, was freed from Madison County jail Monday after a county judge issued a stay of proceedings.

Dailey, who owes the Columbus Production Credit Association about $400,000, had been jailed Jan. 28 for failing to provide records to the association. He said he decided to file for bankruptcy when the association began trying to take his farm machinery to cover some of his debts.

Graham said "what we are seeing here today is change, an important change in food efforts. Agriculture is still a vitally important part of North Carolina's economy. We're fortunate to have a balanced pattern of industry, with food being an important part of our economy."

"Perdue," Graham added, "is one operation that is all domestic, a product grown, processed and used here without competing with a European market. We need more of this type of private agriculture, private agribusiness."

Faircloth touched briefly

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. The final weighted average was 41.19 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights desirable. Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina hen market was 1 cent higher. Supplies light. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 18 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground today, retreating after its fifth consecutive record-high close.

Four stocks fell in price for every three that rose in the noon tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which edged up .78 point Monday to cap a 47 percent surge since Aug. 12, fell 6.97 points to 1,134.77 in the first two hours.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker said the central bank is closely watching the growth of the money supply measure M1, which he said has been growing "somewhat faster" than expected. Rapid M1 growth since October has heightened inflationary fears among some economists. If the Fed adopted a more restrictive stance to reduce the growth of M1, interest rates would rise further and economic recovery might be slowed.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 41 to 88.25. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 87 at 385.49.

Big Board volume reached 35.96 million share a third of the way through the session, compared with 38.71 million in the same period Monday.

Natamas, a diversified energy and natural resources company, topped the active list on the NYSE, up 1 at 19.

International Business Machines, which today expanded its line of personal computers, rose ½ to 103½. Johnson & Johnson, which said earnings would fall $20 million because of the temporary withdrawal of the prescription pain reliever ZOMAX, fell ½ to 45¼.

Pitt Board...

Commissioners approved granting a temporary 20-foot drainage easement over a portion of property near the county office building. The easement would allow Doctors Quadrangle to connect drain lines from a proposed parking lot to an existing storm sewer.

Commissioners also discussed locating a solid waste container site at Fountain, and agreed to do what they could to help find a permanent location for the Farmers Market.

The board declined an offer from East Carolina University to help fund an optical scanner for the county's data-processing department, but expressed appreciation for the university's willingness to cooperate in the project.

Commissioners last month approved leasing a scanner for $1,565 a month, with option to purchase the equipment, after receiving bids for the equipment which totaled just over $49,000.

ECU's offer of help was turned down after it was determined that county agencies would need the scanner on a full-time basis.

In other business, commissioners appointed Diane Davenport to the Council on the Status of Women, Kathryn Lewis and David Spier to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital board of trustees, and reappointed Ronald Rice, Leolia Dixon and Jacqueline Jones to the mental health board of directors.

Fingerprints Go To The Parents

By DENNIS PATTERSON

Associated Press Writer

State government officials are considering a voluntary statewide program for fingerprinting children similar to one begun a week ago in Watauga County.

"We do know of some efforts underway by private enterprise in cooperation with state agencies," said L.D. Hyde when asked if other areas besides Watauga County are using the program. "We expect something could be kicked off in late March."

Hyde, who is director of the state Crime Prevention Division, said he could give no other details now.

Watauga County began the "Locate our Missing Children" project last Tuesday. Chuck Henson, juvenile officer and investigator with the county sheriff's department, said the response has been overwhelming.

"We expected to have about 30 children to fingerprint at a private school," Henson said Monday. "We had three times that many because parents brought their children from private schools to be fingerprinted. We've had overwhelming response from all parts of the county."

Parents must agree to the fingerprinting and they are supplied with an information sheet on the child. Henson said the information sheet and fingerprints are kept by the parents for use if the child is missing or runs away from home.

"The key to our program is that no one other than the parents will retain the material," Henson said. "Only one set of prints are taken and they're handed immediately to the parent or custodian."

"The unique thing we have in Watauga which is different from other areas I've checked is that we're using an actual FBI personal identity card for the fingerprints," he said. "No one would be able to program into the information network with this card, and it looks more professional than mimeographed forms on bond paper."

SONG KIM ... of Greenville has been named a John Motley Morehead Scholar of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Miss Kim, now a student at the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics, serves as editor of the school newspaper, as a member of the all-state orchestra, and is a National Merit semifinalist. Being designated a Morehead Scholar entitled her to an all-expense-paid education at UNC worth about $25,000.

TRAINS COLLIDE

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Two trains collided head-on Monday at the Moncada station near here, killing two railroad workers and injuring 45 other people, railroad officials said.

Pope Greeted By Hondurans

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Pope John Paul II came to Central America's most impoverished country today and was greeted by festive thousands who lined streets in native costumes and jostled for a view of the pontiff.

President Roberto Suazo Cordova, who took office in January 1982, knelt before John Paul after the Roman Catholic pontiff kissed the ground in his traditional arrival gesture.

The pope flew to Honduras from Guatemala City aboard a specially fitted Honduran SAHSA airlines Boeing 727 jet.

Tegucigalpa's airport, in a valley surrounded by low hills, has too short a runway to accommodate the papal Alitalia DC-10, which remained in Guatemala during the 10-hour visit.

John Paul is scheduled to return to Guatemala City this evening after celebrating Mass on the outskirts of Tegucigalpa, the capital, and speaking in San Pedro Sula, the country's second largest city.

On Monday in Guatemala City, the pope committed the church to the defense of Latin America's Indian peasants against injustice and rebuked Guatemala's president for ordering six men executed last week.

Disrespect for life, the pope declared in a Mass before 500,000 people in Guatemala City is "a crime and a grave offense against God."

The pontiff delivered a similar message to Guatemala's Protestant president, Gen. Efraim Rios Montt, during a private meeting before the Mass.

"The pope expressed once again his immense pain and his displeasure ... for the recent capital executions carried out in this country as he was preparing to make a pastoral visit to the people of Guatemala," a Vatican spokesman later said.

"He also reiterated his profound suffering for all the victims of violent death."

Last week, Rios Montt ignored a personal plea for mercy from the pope, sending six convicted terrorists to die before a firing squad.

Vote 'No' On Deduction

RALEIGH — Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr., representing Pitt and Greene counties, were among 17 House members who voted against a bill last week that would allow members of the General Assembly to deduct $50 a day from their state income-tax returns.

However, the bill passed the House and was sent to the Senate when 90 House members voted in favor of the measure.

The bill allows members of the General Assembly to deduct up to $50 without having to list expenses. They could deduct higher amounts, but would have to itemize expenses.

The bill would bring N.C. tax law in line with 1981 federal tax changes which allow state legislators to deduct $50 a day for expenses, seven days a week, without itemizing the deductions.

Present North Carolina law allows deductions up to $50 per day for the five days a week that the General Assembly is in session. However, it requires lawmakers to itemize their expenses and does not allow deductions for weekends.

State revenue department officials said the extra deduction would mean a $7-a-week tax savings for legislators in the 7 percent tax bracket, which covers people making more than $10,000 a year. In a six-month session, the bill could amount to $182 a member — a tax loss of $30,940 for the state for the 170 members of the General Assembly.

North Carolina's law makers are paid $578 a month, and while the Legislature is in session they receive $50 a day for lodging and meals seven days a week, $172 a week for office expenses, and 25 cents per mile for one round-trip home.

Jo Ann Harrelson, wife of Charles V. Harrelson, was convicted Monday of lying in her testimony about the purchase of a .240-caliber Weatherby used to kill Wood in San Antonio, Texas, on May 29, 1979.

Fe Railroad — stirring speculation that Norfolk Southern was aiming at establishing a transcontinental railroad company.

Cougars Gain Just A Little Respect

By The Associated Press
The Washington State Cougars don't get much respect. They aren't in this week's Top Twenty despite a gaudy 21-5 record.

And up there in Pullman, Wash., just eight miles from the Idaho border, they don't get many headlines, either. But the Cougars of the Palouse — that area between the moist forests of the Rockies and the dry scablands of Washington — are 22-5 today after preventing fourth-ranked UCLA from clinching the Pacific-10 basketball crown by upsetting the Bruins 70-68 Monday night on sophomore Bryan Pollard's tip-in at the buzzer.

"Sooner or later, those LA writers will realize we have some talent," said WSU Coach George Raveling. "It wasn't the most thrilling win for me, but 20 years from now when I'm sitting around somewhere, I'll remember it."

Washington State led 68-64 on a pair of dunks by Pollard, but two jumpers by UCLA's Rod Foster tied the score at 68 with 39 seconds left to play.

The Cougars let the clock run down to five seconds before calling a timeout. UCLA knocked the ball out of bounds on the first throw-in, but the Cougars finally got it in to Chris Winkler, who missed a shot from the baseline and Pollard tipped the ball in at the buzzer.

"At the end, with three seconds left, we didn't have much recourse. I just told Winkler to go to the ball and shoot," Raveling said.

Pollard scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, but UCLA's Foster led all scorers with 26 points. Washington State kept its Pac-10 title hopes alive with a 14-3 record, just behind UCLA's 14-2. The Bruins are 22-4 overall.

The triumph, the Cougars' 16th straight in Friel Court, sent a school-record 12,422 fans into delirium.

"I've heard the WSU crowd this loud before. They get sky-high for us," said UCLA Coach Larry Farmer. "Their fans really get up for the Bruins and George really does a good job of getting the fans behind the team."

In the only other game involving a member of The Associated Press Top Twenty, Patrick Ewing and David Wingate keyed a second-half explosion to lead 15th-ranked Georgetown University past No. 20 Syracuse 80-75 at Landover, Md., in a preview of Thursday's Big East Conference tournament match-up.

Georgetown, 21-8 overall and 11-5 in the Big East, will meet Syracuse, 19-8 and 9-7, in the first round of the conference tournament in New York.

Wingate scored seven points in the first four minutes of the second half as Georgetown turned a 38-30 halftime deficit into a 46-42 lead. Ewing, who led all scorers with 26 points, controlled the boards, scored four points and blocked two shots during the streak. He finished the game with 14 rebounds and four blocks.

The Orangemen were hampered by the absence of forward Tony Bruin, who was out with a sprained ankle. Bruin is expected to be ready for the tournament. Erich Santifer, the team's high scorer, was slowed by a sprained wrist and scored only six points. Andre Hawkins led the Orangemen with 15.

"I'm pleased as I can be with what went on out there, but there are still a lot of things we do inconsistently," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "We've got to play with more consistency because in tournament play one letdown and it's a summer vacation. It's not an advantage to play a team twice in a season and beat them and play them again. Everyone knows the big game is Thursday."

For Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim, the defeat, following an upset loss to Connecticut last week, was especially hard to swallow.

"I'm very disappointed," he said. "Not only in the way we played, but with the lack of intelligence we showed. You don't win games by taking the ball inside and trying to shoot over Ewing."

At South Bend, Ind., John Paxson scored 20 points to power Notre Dame over Dayton 53-41 in a battle between two independents struggling for a berth in the NCAA Tournament.

At Cedar Falls, Iowa, Brent Carmichael scored 22 points as Northern Iowa knocked Southwest Missouri out of first place in the Association of Mid-Continent Universities Conference 66-60. Northern Iowa never led until Carmichael scored to make it 48-46 with 8:42 left. Southwest Missouri's loss let Western Illinois move into first place.

In the first round of the Southwest Conference tournament, freshman Carl Wright scored four points in the final two minutes and Southern Methodist survived a Texas tip-in that was disallowed at the buzzer to defeat the Longhorns 49-48 at Dallas.

The Longhorns led 48-39 before SMU scored the last 10 points of the game to hand Texas its 22nd defeat against six victories, the worst season in the school's history.

In another SWC first-round game at Lubbock, Texas, Quentin Anderson scored 22 points and Bubba Jennings added 19 to pace Texas Tech over Baylor 57-55. The Red Raiders survived despite blowing a 14-point lead early in the second half. And at Fort Worth, Doug Arnold scored 22 points and all-conference guard Darrell Browder added 17 as Texas Christian trounced Rice 74-49.

At Pittsburgh, Craig Helms hit a short jump shot with eight seconds left to give George Washington a 71-70 victory over Duquesne in an Atlantic 10 Western Division first-round playoff game. Mike Brown scored 32 points to lead the Colonials to their first victory in seven years of postseason play.

At Amherst, Mass., freshman John Hempel scored 18 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to lead Massachusetts to a 91-74 victory over Rhode Island in another Atlantic 10 contest.

Roanoke Gains District Finals

AHOSKIE — Roanoke's Northeastern Conference champion boys advanced to the finals of the District 13-A tournament last night, but the girls, who were also league champs, bowed out of the competition.

Roanoke's boys nipped Northwest Halifax, 39-38, on two late free throws, but Roanoke's girls fell before Southeast Halifax, 52-35.

Wednesday night, the championships will be held with Southeast meeting Warren County in the girls' game, while Roanoke takes on North Edgecombe in the boys' contest.

Roanoke's boys eased out into a 14-8 lead in the first period of their game, but were unable to pull away from Northwest. Both teams scored nine points in the second period leaving Roanoke with a 23-17 lead at the half.

In the third period, Northwest rallied, 12-7, and closed the gap to only one point, 30-29. The two then battled through the last period until Northwest eased ahead, 38-37, with 12 seconds left in the ball game.

Roanoke called a time out with eight seconds left to set up its final bid for the win. On the play, however, Glen Daniels was fouled and made both shots to put Roanoke into a 39-38 lead with five seconds left. Northwest then traveled bringing the ball back downcourt, turning it over to Roanoke with one second left to run out the clock.

Ricky Highsmith led Roanoke with 16 points, while Greg Burgess had 14 and Richard Lee had 12 for Northwest.

Things didn't go as well for the Squaws of Roanoke, however. After slipping into a 9-8 lead after one period, Roanoke fell behind in the second period, and trailed by one at the half. A 16-14 margin for Southeast made it 24-23 at intermission.

The third quarter proved decisive. Roanoke was held to only four points, while Southeast poured in 15. That pushed the Roanoke River representative into a 39-27 lead as the final quarter opened. In that, Southeast outscored Roanoke, 13-8, to win going away.

Constance Hunter led Southeast with 26 points, while Angela Hunter added 10. Mary Bland had 11 to lead Roanoke's effort.

The winners of Wednesday night's games move into the regionals next week at Wilson.

Game Time Is Changed

East Carolina University's baseball game with N.C. State, scheduled for 2 p.m. this afternoon, was tentatively rescheduled for 7 p.m. tonight at Harrington Field.

A final decision on whether the game would be played was to be made at 3 p.m. this afternoon.

The two teams lost one game yesterday when rain forced the cancellation of the scheduled contest.

Also postponed yesterday in the area was D.H. Conley's opening track meet at New Bern. It was tentatively rescheduled for this afternoon.

ECU Tourney Is Underway

The East Carolina Invitational Golf Tournament, which was to get underway this morning at Brook Valley, was delayed for two hours this morning because of weather conditions.

The tournament, the second annual, includes 12 teams. They are N.C. State, UNC Charlotte, UNC Chapel Hill, Duke, Campbell, UNC Wilmington, Old Dominion, William & Mary, Temple, Virginia, American, and the hosting Pirates.

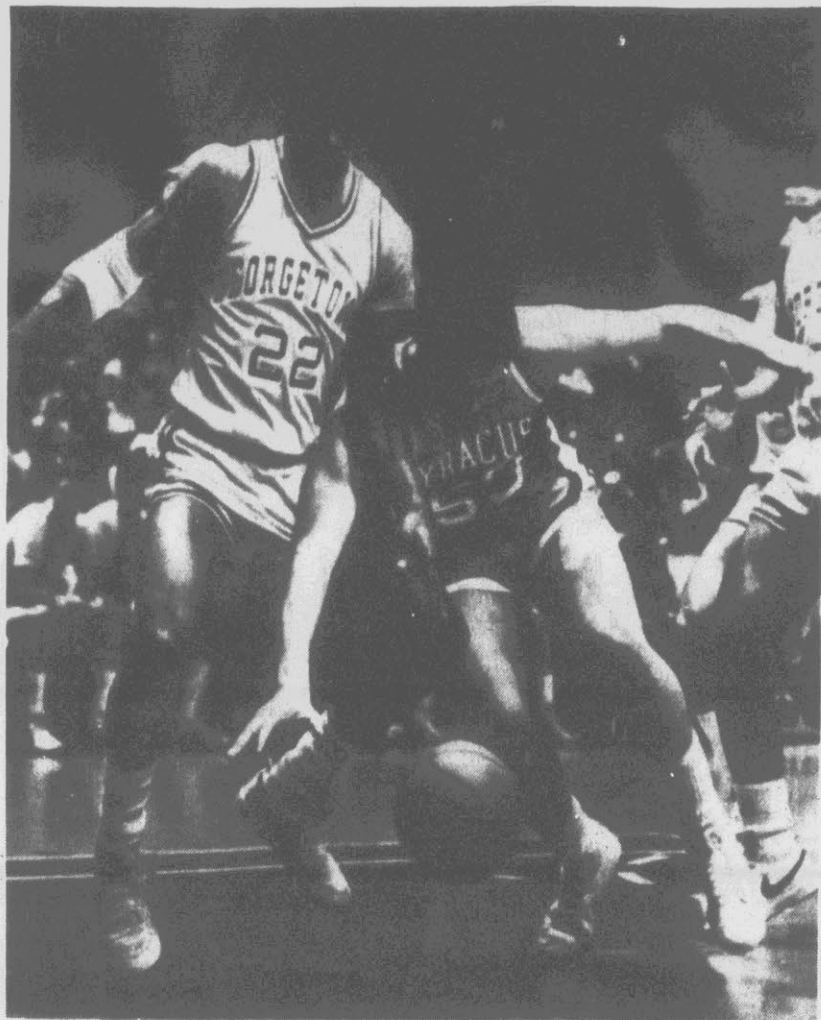

The three day event winds up on Thursday.

Panthers Win On Defense

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Coach Jim Stanley had no trouble describing the United States Football League debut of his Michigan Panthers and the Birmingham Stallions, and neither did the 38,352 fans.

"It was a good defensive game first and foremost," Stanley said after the Panthers defeated Birmingham 9-7 on three field goals by Novo Bojovic, two for 49 yards and one for 48.

The hometown fans had only one chance to cheer, when Birmingham quarterback Reggie Collier skirted right end on a bootleg keeper for the game's only touchdown.

Other than that, the most cheering occurred before the kickoff when a parachutist delivered the game ball at midfield.

All the scoring occurred in the first half although Birmingham threatened twice after the intermission. Scott Norwood missed a 27-yard field goal attempt on the first play of the fourth period and later Birmingham drove from its 39 to the Michigan 32 but linebacker Ray Bentley intercepted at the 19.

Bentley was a main reason it was a good defensive game. He had another interception and led his team in tackles with 10.

Linebacker Larry McPherson of Birmingham had 12 tackles and the Stallions' Mike Raines sacked Michigan quarterback Bobby Hebert twice.

"Any win is a good win," Stanley said, calling it "a good football game for both sides."

Coach Rollie Dotsch of Birmingham, however, said, "The disappointment is very severe."

He noted that the Stallions "had several opportunities to win but we failed to take advantage of those opportunities. We will get better. I am confident of that."

Although Collier was the heralded quarterback, Hebert came out better in the air, hitting on 11 of 20 tosses for 131 yards with no interceptions. Collier connected on 6 of 14 for 49 yards and had three picked off. He led Birmingham's runners with 76 yards on 20 carries.

Michigan's Tony Ellis got 74 yards on 20 carries.

The Panthers' No. 1 draft pick, wide receiver Anthony Carter, picked up nine yards on an end-around and returned one punt for 16 yards. He caught no passes.

In the league's other opening games, all on Sunday, it was Boston 21, Tampa Bay 17; Chicago 28, Washington 7; Philadelphia 13, Denver 7; Los Angeles 20, New Jersey 15, and Oakland 24, Arizona 0.

Ex-PSU Coach Engle Is Dead

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Former Penn State football Coach Charles "Rip" Engle, whose teams achieved national prominence, has died at the age of 76.

Engle, who retired from Penn State following the 1966 season, died Monday in a nursing home in nearby Bellefonte following a lengthy illness, the university said in a statement.

As head coach from 1950 through 1966, Engle's teams produced the likes of Rosey Grier, Dick Hoak and Galen Hall.

In addition, he was responsible for importing Coach Joe Paterno, who led the Lions to their first national championship last year.

Paterno played quarterback during Engle's last season as coach at Brown University, and came to Penn State as an assistant coach when Engle became head coach.

"He was a true gentleman. He had a tremendous influence on me, not only in coaching, but in values, conduct and patience," Paterno said Monday.

Engle was inducted into the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame in 1974.

During his 16-year career with the Lions, he compiled a record of 104 victories, 48 defeats and four ties. Prior to that, he was coach for six seasons at Brown and his lifetime college coaching record is 132-67-8.

Smith Wins AP Honor; Says Winning Not All

By The Associated Press
Winning is common for North Carolina's Dean Smith, The Associated Press' 1983 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Coach of the Year, but he says winning isn't the only sign of a good coach.

"A few years ago, I tried to talk the National Association of Basketball Coaches into naming as National Coach of the Year someone who had a losing record but had done a great job considering his circumstances," he said. "They didn't go along with not necessarily the only criteria one should have when picking a Coach of the Year."

But North Carolina fans expect a winner under Smith. He has led the Tar Heels to 13 straight 20-plus victory seasons, an NCAA coaching record. His 22-year record is 493-151 with seven final four appearances, including last year's national championship.

He received five first-place votes from the eight-member panel of sports writers and sportscasters from the states represented by ACC schools. Georgia Tech's Bobby

Brewers Tuning Up With Aerobics

By The Associated Press

The Milwaukee Brewers are being put through aerobic exercises as part of their spring training routine, but General Manager Joe McDonald of the St. Louis Cardinals is finding that it takes two to tango where trade rumors are concerned.

Brewers GM Harry Dalton is considering having his team do the aerobic exercises three times a week.

"I think you exercise all muscles more and better," Dalton said Monday after Kathy Borgia of Phoenix, a dance instructor, put the team through a half-hour of the exercises at its Sun City, Ariz., camp. "We'd like to do it three times a week. We're going to see tomorrow (Tuesday) how everyone feels."

Most of the Brewers admitted that the exercises were strenuous, but they got a good reception.

"I kind of like them," said first baseman Cecil Cooper. "It just seemed to go 15 minutes too long."

The American League champs open their exhibition season today against the Chicago Cubs with Pete Vuckovich, Moose Haas, Jerry Augustine and Jamie Easterly scheduled to pitch. Relief pitcher Rollie Fingers, recovering from a torn muscle in his forearm, threw on the sidelines for about 12 minutes Monday and said his arm felt the best it has all spring.

Meanwhile, outfielder David Green became the final member of the Cardinals to sign a 1983 contract as rain forced the world champions indoors. The Cards would like to move the 22-year-old Green into a starting role, perhaps by trading veteran right fielder George Hendrick. However, such prospects were described as "slim and none" by Manager Whitey Herzog.

"I'm talking to clubs, but there's nothing hot," McDonald said. "They all have an excess of outfielders."

Elsewhere, minor surgery was performed on the right knee of Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt and Dr. Phillip Marone said the Phillies' power-hitting third baseman would be sidelined from 10 days to two weeks.

"We removed an area of softened cartilage on the (femur) bone," Marone said. "There also were a couple of loose bodies that we flushed out. It was a routine procedure."

Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner says the new five-year, $1-billion television package for major league baseball may have saved Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's job.

"Bowie had a very competent committee working with him on the TV deal, but he had a lot to do with it, too," said Turner, one of five National League owners who voted in November not to renew Kuhn's contract when it expires in August. "This may keep him on the job."

Baseball has signed a $500 million contract with NBC, giving the network half of its television rights for five years beginning in 1984. ABC has the option of matching that $500 million figure for the other half of the package. If ABC does not pick up the option, industry sources say, NBC will put up the additional $500 million to get the entire package.

Montreal Expos outfielder Terry Francona has been benched by Manager Bill Virdon, a victim of his own exuberance. Although his rehabilitation program following major knee surgery is close to successful completion, Francona will not start in the first 10 exhibition games "for his own good," Virdon said.

"We've tried to caution him and warn him to slow down. It seems the only way we can slow him down is to keep him out of some of the games," Virdon said. "He'll continue to work out — he's done everything and more than anyone else here — but we won't start him in games for a while. He's a competitor and gives that little extra in the games."

In exhibition action, Bill Gullickson and three relievers limited Los Angeles to three hits as the Expos blanked the Dodgers 3-0.

Greg Luzinski doubled with two out in the seventh inning and Ron Kittle singled home pinch-runner Chris Nyman to give the Chicago White Sox a 1-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers as LaMarr Hoyt, Kevin Hickey, Dennis Lamp and Fernando Arroyo combined for a four-hitter.

Rookie center fielder John Shelby had four hits, including a home run and a triple, as the Baltimore Orioles downed the Atlanta Braves 7-3.

Top Three Remain Same

By The Associated Press

Houston, Virginia and Louisville held onto the top three spots today in The Associated Press' next-to-last college basketball poll, while UCLA climbed from sixth place to fourth — only to lose its next game — and defending national champion North Carolina jumped from eighth to fifth.

The Houston Cougars, who defeated Arkansas and Baylor last week, received 43 of 52 first-place votes and 1,030 of a possible 1,040 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

The other nine first-place ballots went to Virginia, which defeated Wake Forest and Maryland and received 987 points.

Louisville disposed of Murray State and Virginia Tech before going into overtime to nip Memphis State and preserve its No. 3 ranking. The Cardinals received 919 points.

UCLA, which knocked off Washington last week, received 837 points. But the Bruins were upended 70-68 Monday night by Washington State. North Carolina climbed to fifth with 739 points by trouncing Georgia Tech and Duke.

Last week's No. 4-5 teams, Villanova and Arkansas, fell to 13th and sixth, respectively. Villanova lost to Syracuse, while Arkansas was beaten by Houston. However, Arkansas, Houston and ninth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas are the only major college teams with only two losses.

Arkansas received 690 points, followed by seventh-place Indiana, which was No. 11 a week ago, with 656 points. Rounding out the Top Ten are St. John's, UNLV and Kentucky with 646, 575 and 544 points, respectively. Last week, St. John's was 10th, UNLV ninth and Kentucky seventh.

The Second Ten consists of Wichita State, Missouri, Villanova, Boston College, Georgetown, Ohio State, Memphis State, Tennessee-Chattanooga, Oklahoma and Syracuse.

Monday night, Georgetown defeated Syracuse 80-75.

Last week's Second Ten was Indiana, Wichita State,

Missouri, Ohio State, Boston College, Georgetown, Memphis State, Syracuse, Chattanooga and Purdue.

Palli Captures Samaritan Golf

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) —

Anne-Marie Palli, making a strong comeback on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, admits to being staggered by her triumph in the Samaritan Turquoise LPGA Classic here.

She led throughout the rain-shortened, 54-hole tourney and on Monday finished seven strokes ahead of her nearest competitor.

"I feel like I'm on another planet right now," Palli said after shooting a 5-under-par 68 in the final round of the $150,000 event at the 6,380-yard Arizona Biltmore course.

Palli, a 27-year-old citizen of France, wound up with a 14-under-par 205 over three rounds.

Finishing a distant second at 212 was Lynn Adams.

Adams, who shot a 71 Monday, said she knew she "was playing for second" after Palli rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt at the 13th hole.

"I saw an exciting game of golf today out of Anne-Marie," Adams said. "Everything she hit was right at the pin. Even if I had hit the shots I should have made, it still wouldn't have been a contest."

Ayako Okamoto fired a hot 4-under 69 in the last round to trail Adams by only two strokes.

Going into the tourney, which was scheduled to start Thursday but was delayed by rain until Friday, Palli was planning to follow up the competition with a visit home to France to see her parents.

But her $22,500 first prize will allow her to buy plane tickets for her parents to visit the United States, she said.

"I hope they come for the (Nabisco) Dinah Shore (Invitational)," she said. Palli's triumph here qualifies her for the March 31-April 3 event.

It was only two years ago that Palli's poor performance caused her to be dropped from the LPGA tour two years after she signed on.

"I couldn't seem to do anything right," she said. "I had lost everything that I had going for me in France."

She credits golf teaching pro Ed Oldfield, who winters in Phoenix, with helping her to get her game back on track.

"This could be just the start for her," Oldfield said. "She's got all the physical tools, and she's always had the confidence that she could win."

Pat Bradley, who won the Mazda Classic in Deerfield Beach, Fla., the tour's opening tournament of 1983, and Janet Anderson, tied for fourth at 215.

Vicki Fergon and Chris Johnson, tied for third place at 4-under-par after two rounds, couldn't keep up the pace Monday. Johnson slipped into a fifth-place tie with four others — all with 216s — and Fergon scored a 217 for a sixth-place tie.

Country Music Begins Cable Network Shows

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music fans nationwide got their first glimpse of a cable television channel produced just for them called the Nashville Network.

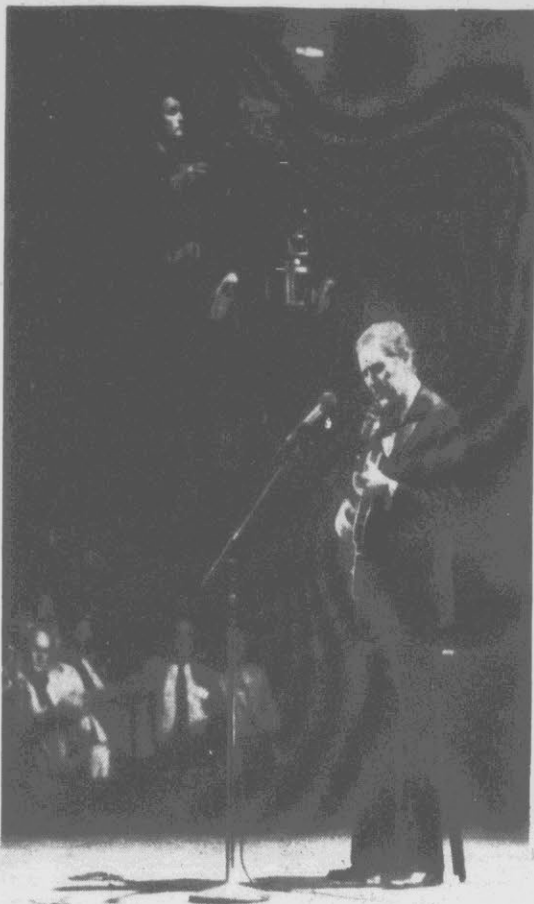

A five-hour live show kicked off programming Monday night on the new cable TV network from the stages of the Grand Ole Opry and an Opryland Hotel nightclub in Nashville as well as clubs in New York, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles and Austin, Texas.

"Years from now, people will remember March 7, 1983, just like they do Nov. 25, 1925, the day the Grand Ole Opry went on," said country singer Bill Anderson. "A hundred years from now, they'll be talking about us."

Nashville Network is a joint venture of WSM Inc. of Nashville and Group W Satellite Communications of Stamford, Conn. Officials said 800 cable systems reaching an estimated 7 million homes were initial subscribers to the advertiser-supported network.

The network begins with 21 shows aired 18 hours a day, seven days a week. Expansion to 24-hour-a-day programming is being planned, network officials said.

The shows include a 90-minute nightly live Johnny

Trying Salvage 'St Elsewhere'

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC has done everything to resuscitate "St. Elsewhere." They tried more romance, more muggings and even scheduled the network's most popular programs as lead-ins, hoping viewers would happen by the hospital.

Nothing worked. NBC's worst fears are being realized. Viewers are actively turning away from "St. Elsewhere," the most humane and intelligent new program this season.

At last, NBC has a popular show opening its Tuesday night lineup. The intimidating Mr. T, barking that Fonzie's "Happy Days" are over, has helped make the wacky "A Team" a hit. But there has been little viewer carryover to "Bare Essence" at 9 p.m. EDT, and even less for "St. Elsewhere" at 10.

So little, in fact, that NBC recently announced changes for its Tuesday night lineup in another attempt to boost "St. Elsewhere." Starting next week, the urbane "Remington Steele" will move from Fridays to Tuesdays, and "Bare Essence" will shift to Fridays.

"One week in December we finished in 75th place out of 75 shows," says Bruce Paltrow, the executive producer of "St. Elsewhere." "We were thinking of taking out ads: 'Just watch us now. PLEASE.'"

Paltrow still has a sense of humor, a rare commodity in the failed ratings business. What keeps him sane is the conviction that he's making the best show he can, and "St. Elsewhere" certainly is the most realistic and involving show to ever own a stethoscope.

In fact, it may be too life-like; there may be too much death in "St. Elsewhere." Women generally watch medical shows, and "St. Elsewhere" could be too bold for their blood. They evidently prefer the magical medicine and 60-minute cures in "Trapper John, M.D." and its ancestor programs.

"I loved 'Ben Casey' and 'Dr. Kildare,' but I get off on doing things that have a high level of reality," Paltrow says. "I wouldn't want to stay on the air if I had to make a show I didn't want to do."

Paltrow doesn't object to NBC's entreaties to bring more love-lust to the show and more personal jeopardy to the doctors.

"I wanted more personal involvement, too," he says. "NBC also wanted us to simplify our stories, making it a little easier for the audience."

"St. Elsewhere" also suffers because it's not "Hill Street Blues."

"If people expected 'Hill Street Blues' in a hospital, they were bound to be disappointed," says Paltrow. "The similarities are that we both have ensemble casts and multiple stories. But we're more like 'M-A-S-H' and 'Lou Grant.'"

One compelling feature of the gritty "Hill Street" is that the regulars constantly drop in and out of danger. "Hey, be careful out there," Sgt. Esterhaus advises. In "St. Elsewhere," it's the patients — the guest stars — who are sticking their necks out.

"Our doctors wait for the problems to come to them. We're counterpunchers," says Paltrow. "Our jeopardy is emotional. It's tough to visually excite in a hospital."

"St. Elsewhere" isn't the first Paltrow show with humor, interesting characters and an urban setting. His "White Shadow" was never a big hit, either. "Maybe my lot in life is that I do good shows with low ratings."

If so, he'll go down challenging the audience. In "The White Shadow," Paltrow killed off regular character Curtis Jackson (Eric Kilpatrick). "I went for an emotional, visceral response because I wanted to show that life is tough and real in the urban jungle."

Life is tough and semireal in Hollywood, so it looks like "St. Elsewhere" isn't going to make it. Too bad. Television has too many bad patients to kill off the good ones.

Speaking of good programs, public television tonight has a repeat broadcast of Kurt Vonnegut's "Who Am I This Time?" on "American Playhouse." It's a delightfully gentle love story between a painfully shy man (Christopher Walken) who sheds his shell only on the dramatic stage. Susan Sarandon plays his fellow thespian who discovers the man while falling for the illusion.

Hope Cable Bill Vetoed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — After hearing the strains of "The Stripper" during a lively debate, Utah lawmakers overwhelmingly approved two bills to keep sexually explicit material off cable TV.

"I wanted to be a little dramatic," said Rep. Samuel Taylor, a Salt Lake City Democrat who played the recording of the burlesque music as he pleaded for passage of the bills Monday.

"I wanted to set the stage for what I sincerely believe is a false issue on this thing — which is First Amendment rights," he said.

Taylor said cable TV companies are interested in protecting their profits, not in preserving constitutional freedom.

Another House member disagreed, jokingly suggesting training bras for a pair of nude cherubs on the chamber's clock.

"If you don't want to look at porn in public, I think we need a couple of training bras up there," said Rep. Arlo James, D-Kearns, referring to a gold clock at the front of the chamber.

Senate debate on the bills last week focused on Mormon Church doctrines regarding chastity and freedom of choice.

Over 90 percent of the 75-member House and the 29-member Senate are Mormon and both bills passed by more than 2-to-1 margins in both houses.

The Church of Jesus of Latter-day Saints has not directly endorsed the bills, but has often stressed the evils of sexually explicit entertainment in the home.

Some House members called the bills unconstitutional, and an attorney for a cable TV firm says he expects Gov. Scott Matheson to veto at least one of the bills.

"I'm disappointed but I'm not surprised," Bryan McDougal, attorney for Community TV of Utah, said Monday after the House approved the bills. "The next step is to wait and see what the governor does."

country music stars hosted a series of live concerts from around the nation.

At the Opryhouse, Roy Acuff, "the king of country music," was joined by Patti Page, Rosanne Cash and T.G. Sheppard were in New York, Tammy Wynette and Don Williams in Chicago, Lynn Anderson and George Lindsey in Denver, Tanya Tucker and Hoyt Axton in Los Angeles and Bill Monroe and Emmylou Harris in Austin.

Carson-style interview show called "Nashville Now" with host Ralph Emery, a country music game show called "Fandango," a situation comedy called "I-40 Paradise," and "Dancin' U.S.A.," a country dance program.

All of the shows are produced in Nashville by WSM Inc., creators of the Grand Ole Opry, the world's oldest continuously produced live radio show.

But for premiere night,

Cosby Sued For Boyhood Jokes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby, whose gags about his boyhood in a poor section of Philadelphia prompted a libel suit by some of his childhood chums, has asked for a jury trial.

Cosby was sued by two friends of his youth — Walter Whitehead of New York City and Eugene "Poppy" Whitehead of Philadelphia.

The brothers filed a complaint in U.S. District Court against Cosby in October, charging that Cosby had made references to the brothers during a monologue he delivered on "The Tonight Show" in October 1980. Cosby on Monday requested a jury trial in the case.

In their suit against Cosby, The Tonight Show, the National Broadcasting Co., and Carson Productions Inc., the Whitehead brothers charged that the comedian described how he learned about sex with the assistance of Poppy Whitehead.

The suit charged that Cosby's monologue damaged the brothers' reputation in his description of certain incidents which took place in the Whitehead family home in Philadelphia.

Debbie Back On Stage Tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — When the curtain rises on tonight's performance of Broadway's "Woman of the Year," star Debbie Reynolds is expected to be back in the lead, kicking up her heels.

Miss Reynolds, who nearly collapsed on stage during a matinee at the Palace Theater on Saturday, was to be released from Roosevelt Hospital today, press representative Merle Debuskey said.

The 50-year-old actress underwent more tests Monday in an effort to pinpoint what was ailing her.

Exhaustion was believed to have contributed to her condition, Debuskey said, noting that Miss Reynolds stepped into the lead in "Woman of the Year" on Feb. 22.

Mentally Ill Filling Beds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The removal of thousands of patients from state mental hospitals in the past 15 years has spurred overcrowding in nursing homes, where some mental patients aren't getting proper care, health officials say.

Dr. Carl B. Lyle Jr., associate director of the program on aging at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said that releasing patients judged not to belong in mental institutions has created a logjam in nursing homes.

He said many discharged patients were returned to their communities, where they were maintained as outpatients of local mental health centers.

"As time went on, they tended to wind up in nursing homes," he said. "Now we have a large percentage of patients in nursing homes in the state that 15 years ago would have been in mental institutions."

He estimated mental patients represent as many as 40 to 60 percent of all nursing home residents.

However, I. Manly Fishel, assistant deputy director for the state's mental health services, estimated the figure much lower.

Fishel said data has shown about 4,000 to 5,000 people in North Carolina's nursing homes have a history of being in psychiatric hospitals — or about 20 to 25 percent of the state's 20,000 nursing home patients.

"Truly, these people are a perfect example of a group that may be said to have 'fallen through the cracks' as far as the mental health system is concerned," said a study by the state Neuropsychiatric Association.

Craig Souza, executive vice president of the N.C.

Health Care Facilities Association, said he didn't think the release of patients was a major factor in North Carolina's growing shortage of nursing home beds.

"If it is contributing to the problem, it is contributing to a very small degree," said Souza, whose agency represents nursing homes.

But hundreds of patients are waiting in the state's four mental hospitals because of the lack of nursing home space.

Fishel said about 500 patients were in the four hospitals because of a lack of nursing home beds, but about 60 percent of them require more specialized care than nursing homes provide.

The state converted a tuberculosis sanatorium in Wilson into a 208-bed, special-care center to handle some of those patients.

Still, Fishel says, more facilities are needed.

The state placed a freeze on new nursing home construction and additions in 1981, partly in an effort to keep state expenditures for Medicaid down. But even without a freeze, special "behavior management" nursing home services from problem cases would require higher levels of reimbursement than Medicaid allows.

"The choices are to leave them in a psychiatric hospital or to set up something that is ... appropriate," said Fishel.

Fishel said a September 1982 report by the U.S. General Accounting Office, based on studies in New York and Texas, concluded that some nursing homes don't provide adequate mental health services for elderly patients.

He said he thought similar shortcomings existed in North Carolina.

International Women's Day

Today is a day set aside to honor women, particularly working women. On March 8, 1857, female garment and textile workers in New York City staged a demonstration to protest poor working conditions. In 1910, an international conference of women in Helsinki commemorated that event by declaring March 8 a day for the female workers of the world. This is one of the few holidays of recent origin that is observed by every member of the United Nations. In the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China, today is a national holiday, and women receive flowers and gifts as thanks for the contributions they make to the work force.

DO YOU KNOW — Which Amendment to the Constitution gave women the right to vote?

Name Game By Guru Followers

RAJNEESHPURAM, Ore. (AP) — The comprehensive plan for this central Oregon city, populated by disciples of Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, reads like a map of Asia.

The John Day River is called the Radha, the Big Muddy Reservoir is called Kabir Reservoir and Little Muddy Creek is called Kamaal Creek.

The new town, incorporated by the guru's followers last year near their religious commune, published its official comprehensive plan with dozens of creeks, buttes, canyons and other local landmarks listed with foreign-sounding names.

Several people questioned the town's authority to put new labels on old, familiar places, says Dan Durow, head of the Wasco County Planning Department.

"Practically speaking, anybody can call anything by any name they want to, but when it comes out in an official document, that's when we begin getting questions," he says.

Landmark names are in the jurisdiction of the state geographic names board.

Millard McClung, secretary to the names board, says no formal proposal has been submitted to make the new names official. "They can rename these things any way they want, but until they appear on a map, there's nothing official about them."

It suits Rajneeshpuram just fine if the local names aren't officially recognized on the state level, says Swami Deva Wadud, director of community development for Rajneeshpuram.

Members of the religious community have renamed hundreds of roads, landmarks and buildings after "people who we feel made a significant spiritual contribution to the world," says Wadud.

"We took people from all of the spiritual traditions of the world. We have names from the Middle East, Chinese masters, Japanese masters, Indian masters, ascetic, Christian spiritual people. We embrace the spirit of what those people represented."

New names were used in the plan because "the city felt that if those names were going to be the popular names used locally, then they should appear in the comprehensive plan," Wadud says.

The plan is easily referenced to remove possible areas of confusion between the old and new names, Wadud says.

City Counts 4 Collisions

An estimated $5,910 property damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 7:55 a.m. collision on Charles Street, 45 feet south of the Red Banks Road intersection, involving cars driven by Michael Earl Adams of 1810 Sulgrave Road, and Elaine Reynolds Cobb of Route 13, Greenville.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,800 to the Adams car and $500 to the Cobb auto.

A truck driven by Deborah Sue Lorezetti of Route 4, Greenville, and a car driven by Elmer Everett Pittman of 625 Maple St. collided about 2:10 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and 10th streets, resulting in an estimated $1,200 damage to the truck and $400 damage to the car.

Police said a car driven by Michael Ray Early of 1719 S. Greene St. collided with a parked car owned by Lindburg Joyner of 1801 Battle Drive about 2:20 p.m. on Sheppard Street, 50 feet south of the Sixth Street intersection, causing $110 damage to the Joyner car and $1,000 damage to the Early vehicle.

Officers reported that a car driven by Kenneth M. Creson of Stokes, ran into the front of the Economy Auto Parts and Convenient Mart on North Greene Street about 1 p.m., causing an estimated $1,000 damage to the building. No damage resulted to the car, police said.

Dragged From Cab And Killed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte taxi driver was dragged from his cab by four men and stabbed to death less than 1½ miles from where another cab driver was fatally shot six weeks ago, police said.

Kenneth Harlan Knutson, 23, a driver for Charlotte Cab Co., was stabbed repeatedly in the chest Monday, police said. He was dragged 400 or more yards from his car along a path into a wooded area. His pockets were turned inside out, police said.

Acquaintances said Knutson was working extra hours to make money to buy a mobile home. He had worked for the cab company for three months.

Balloon Finds Same Name

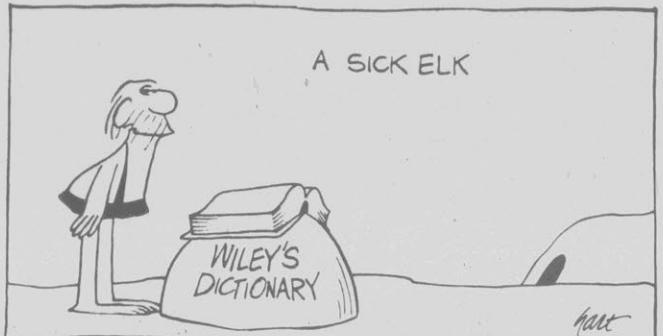

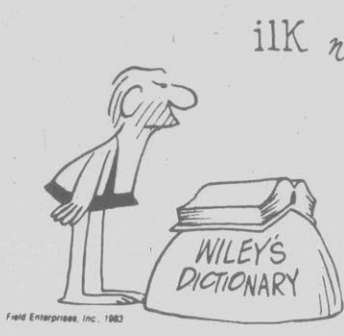

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Vern Herrington's helium balloon, launched at Forest Hills Elementary School as part of Georgia's 250th birthday celebration, has floated to earth 300 miles away in Wilmington, N.C., at Forest Hills Elementary School.

"It's a real coincidence," said Gayle McGee, a teacher at Augusta's Forest Hills Elementary School. "When we first heard about it, everyone said, 'That's incredible.'"

Compliance Is Said Difficult

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some North Carolina university officials say it'll be hard to comply with a law denying financial aid to male college students who don't register for the draft.

Robert M. Boudreaux, financial aid director at East Carolina University, said he was "preparing for the worst," adding, "There's quite a bit of discrimination in the law as it's written."

Boudreaux said he particularly objects to the fact that the law affects only male students and only those who need financial aid.

Several colleges and universities in the state have been asked to post reminders that starting July 1 financial aid may be denied if students haven't registered for the draft.

"I don't know what we are going to do," said Eleanor Morris, financial aid director at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "We're trying to figure out how to comply, but it's going to be very difficult."

Carl Eycke, financial aid director at North Carolina State University, said his office will carry out the law, despite his views on it.

"I don't think we ought to be put in the role of being a policeman," he said. "It seems to be asking an awful lot for a relatively few people who haven't registered."

The requirement has sparked protest on college campuses across the nation. The American Council on Education, which opposes the requirement, favors a plan requiring schools to simply to ask whether students have registered.

Three Minnesota students, filing suit in an attempt to block the new law, say discriminates against young men who need financial help to go to college.
