Community Development Hearing Held

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The first of two public hearings required as part of the city's third-year application for nearly $1 million in community development funds was conducted Thursday night by the City Council.

Jesse Harris, community relations officer, outlined segments of the program and said that the new application to the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development represents the final year of local participation under the current CD format.

Harris said that funding for Greenville has been targeted for the area designated as the South Evans Neighborhood, a 118-acre section bounded generally by 10th Street on the north, Charles Boulevard on the east, the Seaboard System on the west, and Norfolk-Southern Railroad on the south.

According to Harris, the CD program stipulates that funding must be spent in a defined area and South Evans was targeted by the city for revitalization.

Erma Carr, a home owner in the South Evans section, said she is a member of the area's neighborhood association, which endorses the third year application. Mrs. Carr said residents of the neighborhood met with CD officials here and shared ideas regarding the revitalization program.

The neighborhood spokesman said the plans included some home rehabilitation, some relocation for residents and some demolition. She said the first two years of the program here were "very encouraging," although painful for some. Mrs. Carr suggested that the completion of the CD plan should "insure the quality of life in the neighborhood."

The Rev. Arlee Griffin, pastor of Cornerstone Baptist Church, said he was proud of progress made in the neighborhood but he suggested that the residential association be kept informed of developments, particularly any proposed changes. He said the citizens have not been given the opportunity to assess the performance of the CD plan.

Planning Director Bobby Roberson said the city can not arbitrarily change the approved CD plan without hearings. He said a question now being addressed is how to develop property on a reuse basis in and around Pitt Street.

Harris said city staff members meet with the neighborhood association when there are progress reports to pass along. He said a meeting is scheduled for Monday night with South Evans residents.

The second public hearing on the application will be held in April.

The council continued action until a special call meeting on March 21 on a request by James H. Ward III to rezone two acres located south of section three of Sedgfield Park subdivision, north of the Greenville Church of God property, west of St. Andrews Drive, and east of Memorial Drive, from R-15 (residential) to office and institutional. The vote to continue the matter followed a public hearing on the rezoning request and on the related closing of a portion of Sedgfield Drive between St. Andrews Drive and Memorial Drive.

The council decided to continue the matter after City Manager Gail Meeks reported that the city had received a revised street plan for the property late Thursday morning and the planning staff did not have the opportunity to review the new plan.

Mayor Percy Cox said the city did not have time to draw up a new ordinance after receiving the revised street plan and he suggested that the council continue action until a later meeting.

Attorney Fred Mattox, representing Ward, said he understood the city's position regarding the need for a new resolution but he suggested that the public hearing could be held and then the council could vote at the next meeting. Mattox said the matter has been pending for some time and he expressed disappointment at the possibility of another delay.

Council members decided to conduct the hearing and Ken

NO LONGER RELIABLE — This B-52 bomber was being refueled in preparation for a training flight Thursday when the left wing cracked just inboard of the inboard engine pod. Mather Air Force Base (in California) spokesman Capt. Louis

Senate Jobs Legislation Hostage Of Dissidents

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Opponents of a new tax law requiring federal tax withholding on interest and dividends are holding a multibillion-dollar jobs bill hostage in an effort to win congressional repeal of the law.

Senate leaders concede they don't know how to stop the drive. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today that Reagan will veto the jobs legislation if it contains the tax changes.

At issue is the new rule requiring a 10 percent withholding by banks and financial institutions of all interest income, a change adopted in 1982 that takes effect July 1.

Opponents, led by Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., are seeking to attach an amendment repealing this law to a $3.7 billion jobs package now before the Senate, a move that has brought Senate action on the jobs bill almost to a standstill.

The Senate was due to resume action on the measure today, but earlier hopes by leaders of getting a final version to the president by the weekend had all but evaporated.

In a heated exchange on the Senate floor Thursday, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., accused colleagues favoring repeal of bowing to the banking industry, which has mounted a vigorous lobbying campaign against the new withholding rule.

"Let the poor people who are looking for jobs wait while we help the bankers," scoffed Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. He accused the American Bankers Association, the prime industry group lobbying for the rule's repeal, of spreading "misinformation, flooding the Senate with mail," and frightening consumers.

But both Dole and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., conceded they didn't have the votes to stop Kasten from winning Senate approval for his amendment. "I can count," Dole said.

Baker agreed, telling the Senate, "I don't know how to unravel this thing."

Kasten, claiming to have at least 51 senators — a majority — in his corner, vowed to press on with his effort. "This is not a banking issue. This is a consumer issue," he said.

In the House, separate legislation to repeal the withholding rule has 242 co-sponsors, well over a majority in that 435-member chamber.

Baker said Reagan told him he would "seriously consider" vetoing the jobs measure unless the withholding amendment is sidetracked.

"I predict the bill will be vetoed," Baker said.

The test of wills between Senate leaders and Kasten was quickly escalating into a high-stakes battle. One section of the jobs legislation contains emergency funds needed to help 29 states make unemployment benefit payments that come due as early as next week.

That section makes prompt passage of the bill mandatory, congressional leaders claimed.

Once the jobs package passes the Senate, a House-Senate conference committee must go to work reconciling it with a $4.9 billion version approved last week by the House. The House-passed bill does not now contain the withholding-repeal amendment.

The new withholding rules, favored by the administration and adopted by Congress last year, were designed to reduce cheating by persons do not pay taxes on dividend and interest income.

But banks and other financial institutions have balked at the new rules, calling them cumbersome and expensive.

Dole said the banks "have somehow exploited their customers into believing that there is a new tax ... It's not a new tax."

The jobs legislation includes a variety of public works projects, emergency food and shelter help for the long-term unemployed, summer jobs for young people, job retraining programs, and National Park Service programs.

Reagan had threatened to veto an earlier version last December.

Social Security Bail-Out Advances To Full Senate

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Senate tax writers have given the full Senate a bipartisan Social Security rescue plan that closely resembles a $165 billion measure passed by the House, including an increase in the retirement age.

President Reagan, meanwhile, said he is looking "forward to a signing ceremony in the very near future."

Following a drafting session that lasted more than 13 hours, the Senate Finance Committee voted 18-1 Thursday night to approve the legislation. Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the committee chairman, praised the measure and predicted "fairly broad support" in the full Senate next week.

The lone dissenting vote was cast by Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho.

Instead of raising the retirement age by two years in the next century, as the House bill does, the Senate committee provision combined a benefit cut with increasing the retirement age gradually to 66 between 2000 and 2015. It would have some effect on everyone born in 1938 or later.

All those retiring in the next century would be affected by a cut in initial pensions.

The House bill did not touch the payment to new retirees, but would raise the retirement age gradually from 65 to 67 by the year 2027.

The average retiree now gets a Social Security pension check equal to 42 percent of the final wage. The Senate committee would reduce that to 40 percent.

The Senate measure also would phase out over five years restrictions on how much retirees aged 65 through 69 can earn without losing benefits, starting in 1990. And it would liberalize the benefit formula for mothers who dropped out of the work force to raise children.

Although there are some technical differences, the Senate bill closely parallels provisions of the House-passed measure, including:

—A six-month delay in this July's scheduled cost-of-living increase in benefits.

—Increased payroll taxes on employees, employers and the self-employed.

—A levy on the benefits going to higher-income retirees.

—Mandatory coverage for new federal workers and employees of non-profit organizations after Jan. 1.

—Up to eight weeks of additional benefits for laid-off workers who have exhausted their unemployment benefits. The House bill provided 10 weeks.

—A "prospective payment" system for Medicare to pay hospitals at predetermined, fixed rates.

Legislators offered amendments to drastically alter those provisions or substitute others, but Dole made clear that he wanted to keep intact the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Edmisten In Greenville To Organize Campaign

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

State Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten has not announced his candidacy for the 1984 governor's race, but that did not stop him from holding a campaign organizational meeting Wednesday in Greenville.

In an interview, Edmisten said that this meeting was the fifth organizational session he has had so far, and he has "been pleased" with the results.

About 150 Democrats from the eastern part of the state attended the meeting at the Holiday Inn.

Edmisten's candidacy for the governorship came into play recently when he removed the State Bureau of Investigation, which is under his supervision, from an investigation of telephone records for Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's office. Green is a potential rival for the Democratic nomination for the 1984 race.

"To make sure everyone knows that politics has nothing to do with it (the investigation), I have removed myself from the case," Edmisten said Thursday.

Details of the SBI probe have not been made public, but Justice Department officials have acknowledged they have been conducting a follow-up investigation to the Colcor probe of corruption in southeastern North Carolina. Greens's name was mentioned in testimony at trials resulting from that probe.

Edmisten turned over the SBI investigation to two district attorneys on Monday.

Edmisten said he expects major issues in the 1984 gubernatorial race to include education, tobacco and jobs.

He said legislation is needed to help the victims of crimes. "The people that commit crimes ought to have to pay for the crimes they committed," Edmisten said. "Not enough is done about the rights of the victims."

He also mentioned his commitment to stopping the illegal drug traffic in North Carolina.

ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING ... Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten held a meeting to plan strategy for his 1984 gubernatorial campaign Thursday at the Holiday Inn in Greenville. Before the meeting, Edmisten talked with Marvin Speight of Farmville, chairman of the state ABC Board.

SUNDAY SERVICE REDUCTION?

Has there been any reduction in post office box servicing at the Greenville Post Offices? In light of discontinuation of Sunday service at so many other post offices around the state, is there likely to be? T.F.

Yes, there has been a reduction in service, Greenville Postmaster Lloyd Mills said. He said it's been policy for about the last eight months to a year to post only newspapers, special delivery letters and express mail on Sundays.

The local post office is going to conduct a count soon to determine the volume of accountable mail being posted on Sundays. Then a decision will be made in the District Section Center in Rocky Mount as to whether Sunday service will be continued.

Study Reports

On Skin Cancer

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) —

Officials at Livermore National Laboratory are studying the results of a state report that plant workers have a skin cancer rate up to four times higher than the general population.

"We don't pretend to understand it, and we're looking into it," said Dr. Lowry Dobson, staff senior scientist at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, about 50 miles east of San Francisco.

The state study, released Thursday, was a follow-up to a 1976 investigation that confirmed suspicions by doctors at the federal laboratory of a higher than usual incidence of malignant melanoma.

Commended

The City Council has commended city departments, particularly the fire-rescue section, for their professionalism in dealing with the March 2 explosion at the Village Green apartment complex.

The council, at its meeting Thursday night, adopted a resolution commending members of the Fire-Rescue Department "for their performance and for their expert use of professional techniques and procedures" at the complex.

The resolution also stated that the council "recognizes and appreciates the skillful and willing support demonstrated by other departments of the city and by emergency aid units throughout the city and county."

The explosion caused the death of one resident, who attended East Carolina University, and injuries to several other ECU students who lived at Village Green. The council said in its resolution that "without professional, highly skilled emergency personnel, this disaster could have been more costly in the loss of lives, in addition to the extensive loss of property."

The resolution stated, "The immediate response, the alert enactment of the disaster plan, the swift transport of the injured, and the impressive provision of emergency medical services demonstrated by the ... Fire-Rescue Department and neighboring support agencies were of a highly professional measure."

Mayor Percy Cox, who visited the complex the morning of the explosion, said he "saw professionals at work at Village Green." He said Police Chief Glenn Cannon has also received a letter recognizing the work of police personnel on March 2.

Couple's Nest Well Feathered

By FORD TURNER
Harrisburg Patriot-News
LOWER ALLEN TWP., Pa. (AP) — Mel Austin and his wife share their Cumberland County home with two true lady-lovers, a clown, and a hyperactive worrier who's had nervous breakdowns.

The Austins, married for 13 years, do not have any children. But they do have four parrots, three macaws and a cockatoo, and sometimes there isn't a lot of difference.

"If your kids are sick, you have to get up in the middle of the night to take care of them," said Austin, a policeman. "Well, it's the same with these guys."

The baby that screams and cries in the kitchen is Peppy the Amazon parrot, and between wails he chatters in Spanish.

"Peppy was raised in Mexico, and he seems pretty fluent in Spanish," Austin explained. "We tried to have it translated, but he talks too fast."

Peppy also hates men, and Austin can't handle him without wearing gloves because of the claws and a curled beak that's nearly two inches long.

But his wife, Sandy, a nurse, can come as close as she likes without worry.

"Willie is a lady's parrot, too," Austin said of Peppy's neighbor across the kitchen. "But Peppy is worse, he gets very upset around men."

In the cage next to Willie, Jake is perched quietly, eyeing the visitors with suspicion. He's an African Gray parrot and probably the best talker in the house, but his chest is featherless and Austin said he's a very nervous bird.

"He's had nervous breakdowns, and sometimes he just tears whole bundles of feathers from himself," he said.

In another corner of the kitchen is a cage for Gus, an Amazon parrot who was Austin's first "real" bird.

"I had a parakeet when I was a kid, but that doesn't count. I'd always wanted a macaw...or a parrot," said Austin, who bought Gus more than three years ago, and the family's been growing ever since.

Daisy, a hyacinth macaw, might be worth $5,000, said Austin, who admitted that keeping these birds has turned into an expensive hobby.

But like someone hooked on potato chips, he added, "I had one and I just had to have more."

Then there's Maude, a blue and gold colored macaw that is well-named, who Austin said is his favorite. She drinks warm coffee and iced tea from the glass and gives him an affectionate peck on the lip whenever he wants it.

And of course there's Jessica, a white cockatoo. She's kept in the living room, and the three macaws — Maude, Daisy and Crunch — live in a spare bedroom down the hall.

Jessica is in the same family as the bird that was seen often on the past "Baretta" TV series, sitting on the star's shoulder. And Austin's pets seem to have just as much personality.

When Daisy comes down the hall on someone's shoulder, Jessica's umbrella of long white feathers points straight out from her head, and her feet stomp in a little war dance.

"We don't let them get close because Jessica goes nuts," said Austin.

SQUASH ROMANO

Fine way to treat a comparatively new vegetable. 2 1/2-pound spaghetti squash 1/4-pound stick butter (1/2 cup)

4 small scallions, thinly sliced (1/4 cup)
1/2 cup grated Romano cheese

In a large saucepot cover the squash with water; bring to a boil; boil gently until tender when pierced with a fork — about 30 minutes. Halve lengthwise; remove seeds and fibrous portions. With a fork scoop out the long strands into a shallow baking dish (9 by 9 by 1 inch); keep hot in a low oven. In an 8-inch skillet melt butter, stirring in scallions. Spoon over squash; sprinkle with cheese. Pass coarse salt and a pepper mill. Makes 6 servings.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I've never had anything lifted, tucked, snipped, stapled, or melted down in my life, but a year ago I succumbed to vanity. I had the gaping space between my two front teeth filled in.

It wasn't like I was impatient. I gave it 50 years to fill in by itself and when it didn't, I figured it was time to take things into my own hands.

Face it. This is a capped-teeth world we live in. Maybe there is some place on this earth where a cavern in your mouth is considered an honor or a symbol of royal blood, but not in this country. Here, a smile that looks like a row of piano keys is what gets put in the first row of the class picture and dates during the week.

With some sadness, I said goodbye to a fraternity of individuals who have managed to survive in a straight-teeth world. Goodbye, Pete Rose. So long, Lauren Hutton. Ciao, David Letterman. I was determined to become a member of the orthodontic majority.

You may be wondering just how bad a space between your front teeth can be. I'll tell you how bad. I could eat five rows of corn through a picket fence without opening the gate.

I could spit over two sedans and a station wagon through my front teeth and never dribble. I could put a candle in my mouth and rent myself out for Halloween. Why, I was the only person in North America who could floss with a garden hose.

There was no doubt in my mind that with straight teeth, a new me would emerge.

I have been waiting for an entire year to have someone notice my teeth. My husband said, "If that's what you wanted, it looks fine." My kids said, "I can't remember what they were before." Some friends who have known me for years have said, "Did you lose weight?" "You changed your hair, didn't you?" "Did you change make-up?"

There are three morals to this story.

The first is that we are harder on ourselves than anyone in the world. We dissect our flaws both physically and emotionally, put them under a microscope and never take our eyes off them. We would never dream of judging others with the severity and cruelty with which we judge ourselves.

The second moral is that our friends will live with our imperfections and indeed become blind to them, looking only for the part of us that enriches their lives in some way.

The third moral. A smile doesn't have to be an unbroken line to be... a smile.

Doctors Don't Accept Their Diagnosis

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: "Tired of Waiting" complained about having to wait for 2½ hours for a scheduled 9 o'clock doctor's appointment. Then she learned that several others (also waiting) had been booked for 9 o'clock. She asked if that happened everywhere — or only in Pittsburgh.

My reply: "It happens almost everywhere. Doctors, what's the Rx for this epidemic?"

A sampling of responses:

DEAR ABBY: There are some legitimate reasons for a doctor being late, and they occur often. A doctor's office is not a factory where each person can be run through the assembly line on a fixed schedule. Depending on the type of practice, you try to estimate how long each patient will take and schedule patients accordingly.

In our primary-care setting, on the average each patient's visit takes about 15 minutes. Some visits are briefer, for example, blood pressure checks or simple infections. Some are longer, especially for older patients with multiple problems. Some patients save up their complaints and come in with a list. Often they present a few of the minor complaints, and after the examination, when they're almost out the door, they say, "Oh, by the way, Doc, I vomited blood this morning. Does that mean anything?"

AN M.D. IN WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: I work in busy ear, nose and throat office, and we try to keep to a schedule, but it's not always possible.

Some patients who have no appointments show up with urgent symptoms and cannot be turned away. Others don't cancel, they just don't show up. Some just happened to be in the neighborhood or the building, or they missed their appointment yesterday and are leaving town tomorrow. The list goes on and on.

One mother brought her 3½-year-old son in with a button stuck in his ear. After the doctor took care of him, the mother said, "Would you mind looking at his twin brother, too? I think he stuck something up his nose."

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

DEAR ABBY: I'll tell you why doctors run late: The patient calls for a routine checkup, then presents the doctor with a three-page insurance examination form to fill out.

Other patients just love to talk. They are the real schedule-busters. They not only tell the doctor about their symptoms, they babble endlessly about their sister-in-law's symptoms in Scranton.

Then there are telephone calls from patients who insist on talking to the doctor right now!

Doctors are sometimes called to the hospital for emergencies. When this occurs, we always announce it to the patients in the waiting room, telling them the nature of the emergency, how long we estimate the wait will be and offer to reschedule them. For the most part, they are very understanding and appreciate being told.

A DOCTOR'S NURSE IN SYRACUSE, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent reply to a woman who waited 2½ hours to see a doctor with whom she had an appointment indicated you believe that such experiences are very common. I hope they are not.

Delays do occur. Emergencies intervene, babies are born on their own timetables, medical problems cannot be precisely timed, and some medical practices are better organized than others. Our office staffs can help by telling patients when the appointment schedule has been thrown seriously out of kilter. Patients certainly are entitled to know about inordinate delays. Sometimes they may elect to reschedule their appointment for another day.

I believe most doctors would appreciate receiving a factual letter from any patient who feels his or her time was not given basic consideration within their appointment scheduling. If your readers write to the American Academy of Family Physicians about serious problems in this regard, I will look for opportunities to share the information with other practicing physicians, residents and medical students as part of our continuing efforts to meet patients' needs.

Improving mutual understanding is certainly worth our best efforts. Sincerely,

GERALD R. GEHRINGER, M.D.,
PRESIDENT, AMERICAN ACADEMY OF FAMILY PHYSICIANS,
1740 W. 92nd ST.,
KANSAS CITY, MO. 64114

DEAR ABBY: When I threw my bridal bouquet at my wedding reception, guess who caught it? My husband's mother!

Abby, I had my bridal bouquet specially made with silk flowers in the color scheme of my wedding, intending to preserve it along with my wedding gown and veil.

Should my mother-in-law have returned the bouquet to me? She has not offered it back.

DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: According to Emily Post, the bridesmaid who catches the bride's bouquet keeps it, but I'm sure if your mother-in-law knew how much you wanted it, she'd return it. Ask her.

Incidentally, traditionally the bride tosses her bouquet to her bridesmaids, and the one who catches it is supposed to be married next, so your mother-in-law really should not have been in the competition.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Hope For The Future

A report ranking among the most significant news stories of the week came Tuesday with announcement by a team of EPA-financed microbiologists they have discovered a bacteria which decomposes PCBs.

Typically, one spokesman for the University of Tennessee researchers was cautious, saying "we try to hold down enthusiasm."

Again, typically, work to expand the discovery is continuing. PCBs, once manufactured for use in electrical transformers, have been often pointed to as a fearful long-lasting chemical compound believed to cause cancer.

North Carolina knows too well the problem of coping with that pollutant. Other states know, too.

A landfill in Warren County, where PCBs were disposed of in a carefully chosen site with elaborate precautions taken to prevent spreading contamination, stirred months of protest by concerned people.

Barring unexpected difficulties, the resolving of how to handle the pollutant is in sight. (Would that all our problems had such a promising rainbow.)

It took something around five years for the University of Tennessee to find an answer, and it may take as long or longer to discover answers to other dangerous chemicals contaminating the land. But the point is, if there was an answer to the PCB problem, there is most likely an answer to other similar problems.

It should make us all feel better about the future.

Proper Move For EPA

Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Anne Gorsuch Burford has resigned after strong public criticism of the agency's toxic waste cleanup procedures.

Mrs. Burford was defended to the end by President Reagan who, in accepting her resignation, told her she could leave "with your head held high." The president called her resignation an occasion for sorrow. He expressed disappointment that "some persons have unjustly attacked you and have made unfair judgments based upon allegations and innuendo alone."

There obviously are problems in the EPA and, even if the president thinks the criticism of Mrs. Burford is unfair, the buck has to stop somewhere.

There is a great interest in a clean environment in our nation. With all the controversy surrounding the EPA, it is clearly logical that new leadership be sought. Mrs. Burford's resignation paves the way for this and, in that sense, it was a proper move.

Slow Time In Legislature

RALEIGH — We're coming into the middle of March, a time when the Romans are wary, the Irish are happy and people connected with the General Assembly get sleepy. We're in the March doldrums — a time when all the action in the Legislative Building is in the cafeteria where everybody's got time for another coffee and another old story.

Every year, legislative reporters get to write one story about how slow things are. They compare the flow of legislation this year with that of the last session and they get a few comments from veteran legislators. Something like, "I've been here 140 terms and this is the slowest since we had to ratify the Bill of Rights."

There's evidence that this session is moving along more slowly than the 1981 session. As of the first week of March, the assembly had approved only about two-thirds as much legislation as they had at a similar point in the 1981 session. They're also filing fewer bills — about 95 percent of last session's total in the House, 75 percent in the Senate.

That may be changing. Gerry Cohen, head of the assembly's bill drafting operation, says his staff has written 10 percent more bills this session. Sounds like a lot of legislation is about to get dumped in the hopper. But even then, it'll be a while before it gets to the floor.

In defense of our legislators, there is a considerable amount of work being done. It's the kind of stuff we in the press don't write about because it's very technical and most people wouldn't want to read about it. But, it takes a lot of time.

For example, the House Judiciary IV Committee spent a full hour last week on a one-page bill that tightens the registration requirements for day care homes — private homes which hold a half-dozen or less children during the day. Almost everybody on the committee agreed with the principle behind the bill. But nobody could figure out how to write it. Legislators wanted to close loopholes in current law. But when they tried, they realized they would be requiring people to register even if they just watched after their neighbor's kids for a few hours. The committee sent it back to a subcommittee.

Such legislative tooth-gnashing is going on all over the assembly. The child support package has been written and rewritten and rewritten. And it hasn't moved out of the Senate yet. The same committee had to delay for another week its action on a mediation bill. Better to slow it down and get it right, Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, committee chairman, said.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, put his hazardous waste bill in the hopper early in the session. But that bill only came out of subcommittee last week. Again, it's a highly technical bill that required a lot of nitpicking.

The Appropriations committees are going through their budgets a line at a time. With each line, a bureaucrat has to explain what the money's being spent for. Legislators ask good questions and the bureaucrats explain how the federal government won't allow us to save money that way.

The Judiciary committees have spent two months trying to understand Gov. Jim Hunt's drunken driving bills and then trying to change them. Regardless of what we end up with, no one will be able to say that Hunt stampeded those bills through the assembly.

There's a lot going on in the assembly these days. A lot of debating, amending and clarifying. All pretty boring. Some pretty important. And there's not a soft place to snooze in either building.

Justice Burger Has A Point

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court of the United States is in deep trouble. For purposes of discussion, I ask you to accept that premise. If something is to be done about the situation — something along the lines recently suggested by Chief Justice Burger — Congress must be prodded by public comment into remedial action.

Simple statistics tell a part of the story. Thirty years ago the Court had 1,463 cases on its docket; it handed down 65 signed opinions. Last year the Court had 5,311 cases on its docket; there were 141 signed opinions. The statistics do not tell the whole story. As one who has covered the Court closely for this same period, let me ask you to accept this premise also: As the volume of work has gone up, the quality of the Court's output has gone down. Struggling against a flood of paperwork, the Court's nine members simply do not have time for thoughtful reflection and careful writing.

In his speech of Feb. 6 to the American Bar Association, Burger called upon Congress for relief. He proposed that for a period of five years, two judges from each of the 13 federal circuit courts be named to a special pool. From this pool, seven or nine judges a year would be drawn. This panel would hear and decide all inter-circuit conflicts. The Supreme Court would reserve a right to review these decisions, thus preserving the constitutional mandate of "one" supreme court, but Burger made it implicit that such a final review would rarely be granted.

Just a couple of weeks ago, on Feb. 23, reporters saw a striking example of how the Burger plan might work in practice. Seven signed opinions were handed down that day. Four of them involved the kind of inter-circuit conflicts that Burger would give to the new appellate panel.

One of the four cases had to do with a dispute involving rival teachers' unions in Perry Township, Ind. A union known as the PEA won exclusive bargaining rights. As part of its victory, the PEA also won exclusive rights to use the teachers' mailboxes. The other union, known as the PLEA, insisted on access to the mailboxes. This titanic issue went to court, and the PEA won. Trivial as it all sounds, the litigation raised First Amendment questions that had been decided differently by the several federal circuits.

A second case dealt with a kidnapping and rape in Connecticut in 1975. At the defendant's trial in 1976, the trial judge instructed the jury that "A person's intention may be inferred from his conduct, and every person is conclusively presumed to intend the natural and necessary consequences of his act." Three years later, in what is known as the Sandstrom case, the Supreme Court held that such an instruction violates the 14th Amendment, but the Court left open the question of whether the giving of this instruction may be "harmless error." Since then the circuits have divided on the issue. The Supreme Court ruled, 5-4, that the error was not harmless.

A third opinion on Feb. 23 involved the circumstances under which an applicant may be denied a license to deal in guns. Some circuits had ruled one way, some another. The fourth case dealt with a complex situation, of interest almost solely to lawyers, involving litigation under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act. Again, the circuits had divided.

Now, none of the four cases was of earthshaking importance. The constitutional questions raised in Indiana and Connecticut were molehills, not mountains. The other two cases involved statutory interpretation of limited application. Nevertheless, the inter-circuit conflicts had to be resolved, and under the present setup, only the Supreme Court can resolve them.

The proposed new panel would relieve the high court of 35 to 50 such cases a year, and thus might achieve a reduction of more than 25 percent in the laborious work of preparing full-blown, signed opinions. No one can promise that such relief would restore the great, magisterial tone that we expect from the Supreme Court. A great, magisterial tone is a product of personality, not jurisdiction. Such justices as Harlan, Fortas, Jackson, Frankfurter and Black could speak eloquently for the ages; today's justices speak in dull and desiccated prose for a Wednesday morning. But we have to try something, and the Burger plan sounds good to me.

Israel Speaks Up For Zaire

WASHINGTON — Israel is using its unmatched influence on Capitol Hill to persuade critics of Zaire's President Mobutu to vote the full $20 million in military aid asked by President Reagan, a unique thrust into U.S. politics designed to further Israel's diplomatic offensive in Africa but potentially unsettling to U.S. security interests.

The thrust may rescue Zaire's aid package, deeply endangered by years of accumulated congressional resentment toward corruption in the strategic, mineral-rich nation that was the Belgian Congo of colonial days. Why should Israel lobby for another country? Intelligence specialists who deal with Africa told us an Israeli cleanup of Mobutu's tarnished reputation in Congress was the price offered in return for Zaire's diplomatic recognition of Israel last May.

Beyond mere recognition, Jerusalem has in mind broad political and economic inroads in black Africa, where most diplomatic contacts with Israel ended after the six-day war of 1967. If successful with its Zaire account, Israel is likely to broker aid favors for other pariahs on the congressional hit list to enhance its influence. Israel has been quietly pressing administration officials — particularly in the Pentagon and CIA — to relax present U.S. strictures against Ethiopia, Iran and even the Central African Republic.

The unusual prospect of Israel serving as the secret Washington attorney for such clients makes some high officials in the administration worry that the Begin government may use its influence in ways that threaten President Reagan's national security policies. Whether or not such worries are justified, the reality of any foreign government with such influence on Capitol Hill can be disquieting.

President Mobutu's need for help in getting his embattled aid program through Congress was obvious to then Defense Minister Ariel Sharon long before he went to Kinshasa last year to seal the deal for re-establishing diplomatic relations (which includes Israeli training of Mobutu's presidential guard.)

Mobutu has been harshly criticized by members of congress across the board ideologically for personal and official corruption, the criticism coming from such pro-Israeli lawmakers as New York's liberal Democratic representative Steven Solarz and conservative Republican representative Jack Kemp. Aid to Zaire has been earmarked for heavy congressional surgery that could prove fatal to Mobutu, considering the importance to him of preserving the American tie both for his international standing and his domestic power. Sharon and Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir undertook to strengthen Zaire's bridge to Washington, something beyond Mobutu's capability.

In pushing the overall U.S. aid program (including the Zaire package), Israel safeguards its own aid interests. Congress again this year intends to raise Israel's military grant aid, this time by $300 million over Reagan's request. Both Israel and its congressional allies have been worried that reducing aid to other countries while the Jewish state gets more could backfire.

But the Zaire connection promises much richer rewards for Israel: an intelligence listening post in the center of black Africa (Zaire borders nine countries); a foothold for economic dealings in strategic minerals of immense value; a break in the anti-Israel chain stretched across black and Moslem Africa 16 years ago.

Strength For Today

We live in an age which thinks very little about angels. In fact, most people would dismiss the whole idea of angels with a smile. Yet, the Bible undoubtedly teaches that angels are real.

And they are not all in heaven. They are right here on earth around about us.

Every person has a guardian angel, and hosts of angels (the word means "messenger") bear tidings to our hearts from God himself and then go to the very throne of God carrying our needs, wishes and petitions. They are in the midst of the world's busy life, definitely carrying on a ministry of helpfulness and protection.

The conviction that there are heavenly messengers surrounding us every minute ought to make even the coldest-hearted person respond with faith and hope. The God who marks the fall of a sparrow is never indifferent to any thing in the lives of his children.

White House Sees New Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seemingly in tandem with the crocuses that are signaling the arrival of a new season in the nation's capital, controversy is springing back to life around the Reagan White House after a fairly quiet winter.

President Reagan and his aides have been doing battle on at least two major fronts, as they tackle problems at the Environmental Protection Agency and in El Salvador, just as the early signs of recovery are allowing them to relax their attention at least momentarily from the economy.

Throughout the Washington winter, the administration's leaders were preoccupied with the seasonal chore of preparing the budget, less controversial this year than in winters past because the direction of the president's program was well known.

But with the budget submitted, and Congress still gearing up for certain battle, the president has been able to shift his attention, albeit not to subjects necessarily of his choosing.

The White House staff has been unable to control the direction of the EPA controversy; and the president's sudden, intense focus on El Salvador has been dictated to some extent by developments in the Central American nation, where government troops have had increasing difficulty in stopping the leftist rebels.

While the president headed west last week for a few days at his California ranch and a visit with touring Queen Elizabeth II, he was given little respite. In public appearances he was asked about the EPA and El Salvador. In private moments, he met with senior advisers for strategy conferences and to be updated on both topics.

But one possible thorn was withdrawn, thanks to the voters in West Germany. They decided to keep Chancellor Helmut Kohl in office, removing the risk that Reagan would come under increasing pressure from a key ally to modify his arms control proposal at talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva.

The storm swirling around the Environmental Protection Agency has been growing for too long, and involves such a variety of issues, that it is unlikely to dissipate quickly.

After saying little for the past several months about El Salvador, the president and his advisers are anxious about progress made by the insurgents there and the Salvadoran government's difficulties in containing them. The president's interest in boosting military aid by $60 million to fight the guerrillas is renewing attention paid to the administration's policies in Central America.

The more the president talks about El Salvador, the more he raises questions about the role of U.S. soldiers there. And the more the debate focuses on that topic, the hotter it gets.

Twice in nine days, Reagan has summoned Republican and Democratic leaders of the House and Senate to the White House for consultations on El Salvador and, in particular, on his plan to increase military aid.

The meetings are apparently intended to seek the widest possible consensus for his aid effort before he proceeds with it.

At the same time, Reagan's plans to increase that aid are generating one more controversy around his White House.

Fire-Rescue Calls Reported

Greenville's Fire-Rescue Department responded to 226 calls — 160 rescue calls and 66 fire calls — in February, according to Chief Jenness Allen.

The chief said 128 city rescue calls were answered and 32 were from the county. He said 102 city residents, 44 county citizens and 14 non-residents were transported by the rescue units during the month.

Allen said the 66 fire calls involved 22 actual fires, 15 for rescue assistance, 25 false alarms, and four service calls.

Pitt Schools Air 'Viewpoint'

"Teachers Make It Happen" will be the topic of this week's "Pitt County Schools' Viewpoint," a radio show aired on several local stations.

Host Barry Gaskins will talk with Nancy Jessup and Rose Marie Sherman, Pitt County's teachers of the year for 1981 and 1982.

The show is scheduled at the following times and stations: Saturday, 7:30 a.m. WITN-FM, 8:30 a.m. WGHM-AM, 8:25 a.m. WOOW-AM; Sunday, 8:30 a.m. WRQR-FM; 1:06 p.m. WNCT-AM, and Monday, 3:05 p.m. WBZQ-FM.

For further information contact Pitt County Community Schools at 752-6106, extension 249.

Barnes Appointed Chairman

The Rev. Charles Barnes of St. James Christian Church, Fountain, has been appointed chairman of the annual "Wheels for Life" Bike-a-thon to be held in Fountain to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Mary Sue Harrell is chairman of the Bethel Bike-a-thon for the same cause. She is dispatcher for the Bethel Police Department.

Both events are scheduled for April 9, with rain dates of April 16.

Sickle Cell Drive Launched

A program to raise funds for the fight against sickle cell anemia is under way in eastern North Carolina.

The Hallow Distributing Co. of Greenville is participating by distributing store poster cans which call attention to sickle cell anemia and provide opportunity for the public to contribute to the cause. Sickle cell is an inherited blood disease that strikes one out of every 500 black Americans.

Professor Heads Reserve Unit

Reserve Col. Sheldon C. Downes of Greenville has been appointed commanding officer of the Marine Corps Staff Reserve Augmentation Unit at the headquarters of the Atlantic Command, Norfolk, Va.

Prior to this appointment, he was executive officer of the Mobilization Training Unit at the Second Marine Aircraft Wing, Cherry Point. In his new command Col. Downes will direct staff officers in intelligence and operations sections that support the commander of the Atlantic Command.

In civilian life, Col. Downes is chairman of the department of rehabilitation studies of the East Carolina University School of Allied Health.

Davis Named To State Board

Dr. Trenton G. Davis of Greenville has been named a member of the North Carolina Board of Sanitarian Examiners.

Davis is chairman of the department of environmental health of the East Carolina University School of Allied Health. His term on the state board will expire Dec. 15, 1985.

Poster, Essay Winners Named

Winners of a "Healthy Living" poster contest for grades K-6 and a "How Can I Maintain My Health" essay contest for grades 7 and 8 in Greenville and Pitt County schools have been announced.

K-3 winners were Jeremy Williams' of Sadie Sautler School's second grade, first place, and Tracy Downing of Sadie Sautler's third grade, second place.

Four-6 winners were Eric Sparrow of Grifton Elementary School's sixth grade, first place, and Stacie Tolan of Ayden Middle School's fifth grade.

The essay contest winners were Tom Ricks of Ayden Middle School's seventh grade, first, and Michelle Crawford of Farmville Middle School's eighth grade, second place.

Judges were Lillian Bradley of the Pitt County schools, Charles Ross of the Greenville schools and Pat Byrd and Barbara Lanford, both of the Pitt County Health Department.

The winning entries will be forwarded to Raleigh, where a special committee will select the statewide winners.

Cox Class Plans Yard, Bake Sale

The A.G. Cox School seventh grade GT class will sponsor a yard and bake sale Saturday from 9 a.m. until noon. It will be held at the GT trailer at the school, located on Church and Sylvania streets. In case of rain, the sale will be held in the school multipurpose room.

Gardner Named Society's Historian

Lloyd Gardner of Williamston, a sophomore in the East Carolina University School of Technology, has been appointed state historian of Phi Beta Lambda honor society.

He fills an unexpired term and will be responsible for publication of the spring statewide Phi Beta Lambda newsletter. He also plans to attend the society's state leadership conference in Greensboro March 24-27.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Stancel Gardner of 902 Hyland Ave., Williamston.

East Says Funding Short

The Reagan administration's proposed defense budget leaves North Carolina's five major military installations "seriously underfunded," Sen. John East said this week.

East, in a letter to Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said "a preliminary review" of the budget indicates a funding shortfall "primarily in military construction and operations and maintenance" for the state's facilities.

A member of the subcommittee on military construction of the Armed Services Committee, East's letter was in response to a request by Tower for senators to identify areas in their home states where military spending could be cut.

Galloways Attend Conference

Mr. and Mrs. James N. Galloway of Greenville attended the tobacco conference held in Myrtle Beach, S.C., Tuesday and Wednesday.

The educational conference was sponsored by the colleges of agriculture in the five states that produce flue-cured tobacco. Galloway is president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau.

Bloodmobile Visit Successful

Thursday's bloodmobile visit at D.H. Conley High School resulted in the collection of 192 pints of blood, according to local Red Cross spokeswoman Ruth Taylor.

She said that 34 deferrals were recorded during the drive, which was coordinated by school principal Bob Carraway. Mrs. Taylor said there were some first-time donors Thursday among the students and faculty at Conley.

The next school visit will be on Wednesday at Ayden-Grifton High School. Mrs. Taylor said the drive is scheduled for 9 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Ask Relaxing Of Standards

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Developers of a proposed peat mining and methanol project in Washington County have asked North Carolina officials to relax state mercury standards at the site.

Meanwhile, the U.S. General Accounting Office is probing a decision to provide a potential $465 million in federal loan guarantees to the project.

The request by Peat Methanol Associates for less stringent requirements follows earlier findings that some mercury measurements in waters draining from the site near Creswell exceeded by 40 times the standard for waterways.

The company wants to build a $500 million plant that would convert locally mined peat into methanol, an alcohol motor fuel.

Environmentalists have raised concerns that the project could harm water tables and marine life.

R. Paul Wilms, of the North Carolina Environmental Management Division, said the state standard was being reviewed.

"It would be premature at this point to say there is a consensus on the state level that the standards are too stringent," said Wilms. "We haven't determined that yet."

State officials said Thursday Peat Methanol could have petitioned the state Environmental Management Commission for a variance from the rules.

But the company decided to challenge a state law passed in 1979 requiring the commission to revise a water quality standard if "natural background conditions in the stream segment preclude the attainment of the applicable water standards" at reasonable cost.

The law requires, among other things, that petitioners show the revision wouldn't endanger human health or safety.

"My understanding is this provision of the law has not been used before," said Jay Langfelder, assistant secretary for natural resources.

He said because of the mercury levels, the project would not qualify for required wastewater discharge permits under the existing standard of no more than .05 parts per billion.

Peat Methanol is seeking to loosen the standard to allow yearly average mercury levels of one part per billion or 20 times the current standard and spot sample readings of up to 2.5 parts per billion or 50 times higher.

The commission received the company's petition on Monday.

Critics of Peat Methanol's proposed plant say they're concerned about the effect the mining might have on mercury levels in waterways. However, a Peat Methanol official said Thursday that mining may have no effect on the volume of water that drains from the peat fields or on mercury levels.

Investigators from the U.S. General Accounting Office have begun making contacts in North Carolina after Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., in January requested a review of the decision of the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp.

The corporation, which is a federal agency, provides loans and loan guarantees to encourage alternative energy sources.

GAO spokesman Laura Kopelson in Washington said Dingell had asked the agency to investigate the legality of Syntels Corp.'s letter of intent guaranteeing a minimum price for the methanol fuel the plant would produce and backing part of the developers' debt.

He said the review would take months to complete.

Argentine Government Unhappy Over U. S. Document On Cubans

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Gen. Reynaldo Bignone has accused the United States of interfering in Argentina's internal affairs by distributing a State Department document on Cuban support for Argentine revolutionaries.

Bignone made the accusation Thursday in New Delhi, India, where he was attending the summit of non-aligned nations. He was quoted here by the official Argentine news agency Telam.

The diplomatic flap began with the publication Wednesday on the front page of the Buenos Aires Daily "La Nacion" of excerpts from a United States Information Service document distributed here the previous day by the U.S. Embassy.

The document described Cuban government aid to leftist guerrillas who tried to take power here during the mid-1970s. The guerrilla violence was cited by the military as a key reason for its 1976 coup, and the ruling generals were openly anti-communist and anti-Cuban until last year.

The U.S. document was released a day after Bignone's New Delhi speech thanking Cuba and its leader, Fidel Castro, for moral and diplomatic support of Argentina in last year's war with Britain over the Falkland Islands.

The foreign ministry Wednesday demanded an explanation of the document from U.S. Ambassador Harry Shlaudeman, who met for an hour with Argentine authorities at the ministry. He told journalists following the session the distribution of the document "had no political connotations."

He described the timing of the document's distribution as "an unfortunate coincidence."

Bignone said in New Delhi the incident was "an episode of bad taste."

"The United States, in making this reference to Fidel Castro's support for terrorist movements in Latin America and particularly in Argentina at the moment when the Argentine president is taking part in this (non-aligned) conference, evidently in some way is interfering in the internal affairs of the Argentine republic," he said.

U.S.-Argentine relations, which in 1981 were flourishing because of the two governments' common anti-communist commitment, declined sharply after Washington backed Britain in the Falklands conflict.

Cuba's support for Argentina in the war resulted in the restoration of full diplomatic relations between the two nations. The Cuban Embassy here and the Argentine Embassy in Havana had been without ambassadors since 1981.

City Council. . .

Barnes of St. Andrews Drive said his neighborhood had no objections to Ward's plan at the present time.

The board, with council member Judy Greene casting an opposing vote, adopted an ordinance amending the city code to authorize the Board of Adjustments to issue special use permits for nightclubs and other similar activities. The council has been considering the nightclub permits.

Cox said the action takes the matter out of the hands of the council and he expressed reservations in that he felt the council had a responsibility to help keep Greenville "a good clean town." Cox said, however, that the Board of Adjustments is a judicial body that can handle the requests.

Councilman Louis Clark said he considered it a "wise move" to give the adjustments board the authority to consider the nightclub permits. Clark said he felt it would be in the best interest of the city to take politics out of the permit process.

Councilman Stuart Shinn said he wished there could be a moratorium on nightclubs.

In other action, the council:

— Continued action on a request for a public hearing on a petition for satellite annexation of the Carolina Opry House;

— Awarded a proposal submitted by Branch Banking & Trust Co. for city banking services for two years;

— Awarded a bid for police spring-summer uniforms to Frank's Uniforms of Savannah, Ga., for $10,733;

— Adopted an ordinance amending the city's personnel policies, ordinance relative to employment of relatives, group life insurance, longevity, creditable service retirement, and new disciplinary procedures.

— Adopted a Greenville Utilities resolution authorizing the abandonment of an easement and authorizing the execution of a deed of release for the new radiation therapy unit located between Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the Brody Building;

— Continued action on scheduling a public hearing on the proposed noise ordinance;

— Adopted a resolution declaring approximately 500 parking meters as surplus property and authorized disposal by private sale at a negotiated price;

— Adopted a resolution establishing a policy regarding the city's unappropriated fund balance, resolving that the cash on hand as of June 30 of each year will be used to establish such a balance which would equal 8 percent of the annual city budget;

— Approved a contract with Pitt County relative to furnishing data processing services for the city;

— Adopted an ordinance providing for the voluntary use of roll-out carts for garbage collection in the city

— Adopted a resolution establishing a petty cash fund in purchasing, with a maximum limit of $25;

— Adopted a resolution requesting the Legislature to repeal the city's cemetery fund; and — Reappointed William H. Taft Jr. to a five-year term on the Greenville Utilities Commission. Taft had filled an unexpired term on the board.

New Lights

The Greenville Utilities Commission, at the request of the city, is installing 18 new high-pressure sodium street lights on Fifth Street, between Memorial Drive and the Pitt County Memorial Hospital emergency entrance.

Malcolm Green, superintendent of GUC's Electric Department, said eight less-efficient mercury vapor lights were replaced with high-pressure sodium units and 10 additional lights added along the stretch of roadway.

Installation of the new lights cost about $4,000, which will be paid for by the GUC.

However, the city will pay a monthly fee of $11.96 for each light to offset the cost of electricity used by the 250-watt units.

The monthly fee for the less-efficient mercury vapor lights that were removed was $12.50.

Donor Again Helps Fund

MIDLAND, Pa. (AP) — "Mrs. Calabash," the mysterious benefactress of Beaver County food banks for the unemployed, has struck again, this time with a $2,000 St. Patrick's Day gift.

"It kind of renews your faith in people when she pops in here," said Jack Conway, manager of the Preservation Food Bank at Local 1212 of the United Steelworkers union in Midland.

"She kind of pulls it off at the right time, when you're at your lowest," he said today.

"Mrs. Calabash" is a gray-haired woman who has donated $16,000 to two Beaver County food funds during the past seven months. She keeps her identity a secret, and has contributed all but $3,000 in cash.

Thursday evening she walked into the Preservation Food Bank and handed an envelope marked "Happy St. Patrick's Day" to the union local secretary, Conway said.

The envelope contained $2,000 in $50 and $20 bills, he said. The money helps the food fund feed 1,600 families a month, most of them the victims of steel industry layoffs.

"She caught everybody off guard," he said. "We thank her the best way we can without calling any attention to her."

A food bank run by the county United Way agency received a $3,000 check recently, and while United Way Executive Director T.R. Graham says he knows who "Mrs. Calabash" is, he's not telling.

The late comedian Jimmy Durante used to sign off his radio and television shows with "Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are," and he used to call his first wife, Maude Jean Olson, by that name.

Marriage 'King' Plans For His 25th Divorce

BLTYHE, Calif. (AP) — A 74-year-old who holds the world's record for most marriages has decided to end No. 25 after just three weeks, because his latest wife wants "to drink and have fun like these young ones."

"If everything goes right I'm going to get a divorce on April Fool's Day," Glynn H. "Scotty" Wolfe said Thursday. "There's no fool like an old fool, but I'd rather be an old fool than a dirty old man."

The certified marriage king, listed in the 1983 Guinness Book of World Records, took his most recent wedding march last Dec. 22, when he and Eileen Sheila Shelton, 23, pledged endless love in Las Vegas. After honeymooning there they set up house in their hometown of Blythe, 200 miles east of Los Angeles on the Arizona border.

The two signed up for classes at Palo Verde College along with 18-year-old Glynn Jr. — one of Wolfe's 40 children.

Wolfe carried his wife's books across campus and they helped each other with homework until the magic faded. They filed for divorce after three weeks of marriage.

"We thought it was better if we cut it off. It was a lot of fun but we agreed to disagree," Wolfe said in a telephone interview. "She likes to drink and have fun like these young ones ... I knew that before but it's pretty hard when you're not used to that."

"These young ones have a lot of new things going," he added, "new actions, new songs, new lies."

The 25th Mrs. Wolfe has moved to Hollywood and there was no answer Thursday at the telephone number Wolfe gave for her.

The latest split sets a new record for Wolfe, whose shortest previous marriage lasted 38 days until divorce papers were filed. The longest survived five years. The Guinness book says he has long kept two wedding dresses — in different sizes — in his closet for ready use.

Wolfe's nuptial exploits, which began in 1931, won him an all-expense-paid trip to Japan for a world record television special last year.

At that time he had his eye on an Oriental bride, figuring a geisha would know how to make a husband happy. She backed out by letter, saying she thought she should marry another Japanese.

He's handling his own divorce in Riverside County Superior Court. The April 1 hearing date is fitting, he says, given that "I've been married on Valentine's Day, the Fourth of July, Christmas, New Year's, Easter and Washington's birthday. Marriage is fun."

Wolfe said he already has in mind wife No. 26: a 26-year-old Clinton, N.J., actress he's known for several years. He said she plans to visit Blythe, where he owns a small motel, once his latest divorce is final.

Why marry at all in the age of live-in love?

"I don't like to live in sin," said Wolfe, who claims he was ordained a Baptist minister. "Who likes to play marbles for fun? I like to play for keeps. Everybody thinks it's fun to shack up — I think it's fun to get married."

His advice for those contemplating marriage: "Get along with them and let them do what they want. When you get tired of that, let 'em go."

Student Paper Is Suspended

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A dispute about confidentiality and counseling at Calvin College has led to suspension of the school's student newspaper, Chimes, until a new staff and editor are named.

The newspaper was suspended this week by administrators of the 3,800-student college operated by the Christian Reformed Church of North America. It came after the Chimes staff voted to print and distribute an editorial asking for information on a rumor that a college chaplain or counselor had disclosed information given in confidence.

Rod Ludema, the paper's editor, said he had been ordered by the school's Communications Board not to print the editorial.

Support Appeal For Negotiation

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty-five Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders have cabled a message to the new Archbishop of San Salvador, Rivera y Damas, pledging support to his advocacy of negotiations among warring factions in that country.

Such dialogue is "an essential step toward solution of the armed conflict there," they said. "However, the alternative U.S. proposal to intensify attempts to impose a military solution is, to our mind, irresponsible and inhumane."

Won $15,000 But To Lose Welfare

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A blind, one-legged diabetic who received a $15,000 settlement in a false-arrest and assault suit says he'll lose welfare benefits when he accepts it.

"I can't even win by winning," said Ronald Ehler, 38. Ehler sued the Orange County Sheriff's Department after he was arrested Aug. 30, 1979, outside the Dana Trader Restaurant in Dana Point.

He won the cash settlement Wednesday. But Thursday he found out that accepting the cash will cut him off from Medi-Cal, which pays for his daily insulin injection, and Supplemental Security Income, a federal benefit he receives because he is blind.

Ehler lost his leg in 1973, when an old surfing wound caused an infection. A year later, diabetes, which he suffered for 20 years, claimed his sight. In 1977 the Dana Point resident started treatment for cancer of the colon.

A psychology student at Saddleback College, Ehler lives on $528 in Social Security benefits he receives each month. He will lose $74 a month in those benefits when he receives his settlement award.

Under Medi-Cal and Social Security, a recipient loses benefits if he finds himself, as Ehler would, with more than $1,500.

"I feel like I've lost my case if I don't retain my medical benefits," Ehler said. "I've been punished again by our system. It makes me ill. I have to say, I feel a little bitter."

According to his suit, Ehler had been leaving the restaurant at 1 a.m. with a friend, when two women attacked the friend in an apparent robbery attempt in the parking lot.

Ehler tried to aid his friend as the screamed for help, said Gary Wells, Ehler's attorney.

Moments later, he heard male voices order him to halt. The voices were those of deputies Daniel Martini and Dennis Duncan, Wells said.

Ehler claimed, however, that they did not identify themselves as officers and he believed they were attacking his friend.

When Ehler, tapping his red-tipped white cane, ignored the order and continued walking toward his friend, the deputies grabbed his arm and shoulder, the suit said. One shoved him over the patrol car, slamming his face on the hood, and one deputy, reaching for Ehler's right leg, pulled off the artificial leg, according to the suit.

It was not until a deputy told Ehler he was under arrest that Ehler realized the men were officers, the suit said, adding that the handcuffs were so tight Ehler lost the movement in his right hand.

Ehler was booked into Orange County Jail that morning on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct. He spent 10 hours in jail, the first two hours in a holding tank without his false leg, before he was released, he said.

According to court documents, the deputies said Ehler "first violently and viciously" assaulted them. They contended they used force to defend themselves.

Winery Legislation Wins Approval In N.C. House

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — California wineries, faced with state House approval of a bill that would make their franchise contracts more binding, may leave North Carolina in droves, the bill's leading House opponent says.

"This will discourage business," Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, told the House during a two-hour debate on the bill Thursday. "This is the wholesaler's license to steal. It's against fair competition."

The bill, approved 70-35, would let wineries assign one wholesaler to a designated territory, where once there were unlimited dealerships. Distributors could sell outside that territory, however.

In addition, wineries could not cancel franchise agreements unless the wholesaler lost his license, went bankrupt or failed to maintain adequate sales.

Minor House changes in the bill must be approved by the Senate before it becomes law.

During debate, Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, successfully argued that the wineries were unfairly manipulating distributors.

"Wholesalers have been threatened with losing their franchises if they support this bill," he said. "There is evidence of price setting, suppressing other wines from coming into the state (and) shipping types (of wines) not marketable or profitable to distributors. I don't know of anybody that's denied this is going on."

He said since the bill was introduced Feb. 24, several wineries had terminated franchises because they supported the bill.

But Holt said wineries were cutting their ties to North Carolina because they wanted to leave the restrictive business climate the bill would bring.

She said the bill would set up a monopoly and questioned the state's right to intervene in contracts between private parties. The result would be reduced competition and higher prices to consumers, Mrs. Holt said.

Nesbitt said the bill would result in lower prices "when the California wines don't suppress the other wines coming into the state."

Mrs. Holt introduced an amendment that would let wineries establish unlimited dealerships in a given area — a move Nesbitt said would undercut the intent of the bill. The amendment failed, 67-38.

Opponents continued delaying tactics, with Rep. Billy Clark, D-Cumberland, suggesting it go back to his Alcoholic Beverage Control Committee to consider 10 amendments proposed by Mrs. Holt.

But Nesbitt and Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, spoke against the proposal and it failed, 61-46.

The House approved an amendment asking wineries to make efforts to give franchises to minorities and women. Also approved was a technical amendment to clarify language saying a winery may have more than one distributor as long as they do not sell the same product. For example, one distributor could sell a winery's white wine while another sold red.

In other legislative action:

Wildlife

The House Wildlife Resources Committee approved a bill allowing the state to charge $5 for each application to join state-managed deer hunts. The money would pay for the computer drawing of participants.

Currently there is no charge to apply to participate in the hunts, which are conducted at the end of the regular season. The number of participants is determined by the population of the deer herd on the game land.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Jim Lambeth, D-Davidson, also would allow the state to charge $5 to apply to join state-managed duck or goose hunts. The state Wildlife Resources Commission hopes to start the hunts soon.

The bill would allow the state to charge $25 a day to hunt from each three-man blind. The fee could be split by the hunters using the blind.

Lambeth said the fees would pay for processing applications and maintaining blinds.

Volunteer Firemen

The House tentatively approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would exempt some small, rural volunteer fire departments from safety standards set up by the North Carolina Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The bill, which brought dozens of firemen to the House galleries, had generated controversy in the House Judiciary IV Committee because of concerns that volunteers would not be adequately protected.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, said such concerns were misplaced, since the state had no way of enforcing safety standards for the volunteer departments.

Under the bill, towns with populations below 10,000 could exempt themselves with the approval of the appropriate local officials, Watkins said.

Separation of Powers

The House Judiciary I Committee adopted a subcommittee's recommendation giving the Legislature power to set salaries for several high government officials.

Among the positions affected are commissioner of the Department of Motor Vehicles, banking commissioner, Employment Security Commission chairman and highway administrator.

Tom Gilmore, chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Integrity, told the committee to be careful in taking on such duties.

"That could cripple the management of government," he said. "I do not think you want to meet to manage state government on a day-to-day basis."

Gilmore, who was among those behind efforts to have legislators removed from the powerful Advisory Budget Commission, urged the committee to oppose efforts to let the Legislature or its members choose any ABC members.

But Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, chairman of the committee and a former ABC member, said that would be going too far.

"If we don't watch out, we're going to delegate the duties the legislature's been elected to perform," he said.

Willie M

Joint Base Budget Appropriations Committees on Education and Human Resources both considered funding for North Carolina's Willie M program, which serves children who are emotionally disturbed and sometimes violent.

Discussions in the Human Resources budgetary committee centered around the possibility of easing a federal court order that set up the programs. That order resulted from a suit filed by four children, including Willie M., from which the program derives its name.

Officials told the committee that in light of the state's compliance with the order, more time might be allocated to extend services to all Willie M children. The state now funds programs that fully serve about 60 percent of them.

Members of the Education committee heard descriptions of the programs funded for the special children.

Credit

The House Banking Committee delayed voting on a bill that would let North Carolina police credit institutions in the state instead of the federal government.

Discussion on the bill bogged down over a provision that would let banks and lending institutions charge up to $20 for credit cards, provided a court case rules such charges are legal in North Carolina.

Human Resources

A bill that would use day care licensing money to help educate the public about day care in North Carolina was approved by the House Human Resources Committee.

The bill would shift about $95,000 a year from the General Fund to an account in the Department of Administration, with both collections and distributions managed by the DOA.

Since that would mean a loss to general government, the bill will be sent to the House Appropriations Committee for consideration.

Equipment Fees

The House Finance Committee approved a bill authorizing the commissioner of motor vehicles to collect a fee covering the costs of approving vehicle equipment.

The fees would cover the costs of verifying that the equipment complies with either federal or state standards.

Confidential Information

Representatives of two professional organizations urged the Senate Judiciary II Committee to change a House bill making it easier for confidential information to be used as court evidence.

Under existing law, the presiding judge of a superior court case may order that the discussions between a client and his doctor, psychologist, school counselor or therapist be disclosed if the information is considered vital to the case.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, would allow any judge to issue such an order.

Tom Walking, a psychologist, said if confidential conversations must be made public the order should come from a judge closely involved with the case.

Ron Anderson, president of the N.C. Personnel and Guidance Association, said many school guidance counselors were worried about the effect of the bill on their relations with students.

"They feel that any breach of confidence undermines their ability to help students," said Anderson.

The committee took no action on the bill but scheduled further discussions for its next meeting.

Banking Commission

The Senate Banking Committee approved a bill to add three members to the 13-member State Banking Commission.

Bill sponsor Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, acknowledged under questioning that there was no great need for the additional members.

"But there's only been one member from my area for years, and he's passed away," said Duncan.

The bill was amended to provide that the Senate president and House speaker, instead of appointing members, would suggest appointees to their respective chambers. The names then would be sent to the governor for official appointment.

The change was made to avoid possible separation of powers conflicts.

Coastal Commissions

The House Natural and Economic Resources Committee voted to approve two bills dealing with membership in the Coastal Resources Commission and the Coastal Advisory Council, but then recanted the votes when Rep. Chancy Edwards, D-Cumberland, raised questions about minority representation.

Farm Vehicles

Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank, filed a bill to allow farm vehicles carrying produce to market to shift loads without penalty when the weight doesn't exceed its licensed limit.

Daniels said many farmers have been penalized for accidentally exceeding axle weight when their trucks are loaded with crops, even though the weight is below the limit for the truck itself.

Farmers have complained that they're unable to weigh accurately a truckload in the field.

"I believe this (bill) will save North Carolina farmers thousands of dollars each year in avoiding penalties or fines," said Daniels.

Felony Murder

Reps. Frank Redding and Harold Brubaker, both R-Randolph, filed a bill that would allow juries to impose the death penalty for murder committed during a break-in.

The bill would add felonious breaking and entering to a list of crimes punishable by death if, in the process of committing the crime, the criminal also murders.

Engineer Fees

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, filed a bill increasing licensing fees charged by the N.C. State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors from $70 to $100.

Critical Care

A bill to authorize construction of a self-liquidating, $18.6 million critical care unit at N.C. Memorial Hospital was filed by Hardison.

The capital improvements project would be financed with gifts, grants, receipts, special funds, self-liquidating indebtedness and other sources. But there would be no state funding.

Equitable Distribution

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, filed a bill amending the Equitable Distribution Act and allowing court injunctions to stop one spouse from quickly disposing of property to avoid sharing proceeds with the other spouse after separation.

Comparative Fault Measure Stalls; Debate Is Postponed

By MARY ANNE RHYNE

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state Senate vote on a bill setting up a comparative fault negligence system was delayed Thursday by charges that the bill would cost the state $1 million a year.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green postponed debate until Thursday to give Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, and Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, time to determine the actual cost involved in the bill.

"If the consensus is that it will cost the state 50 cents that is not in the appropriations act I am going to send it to appropriations and it will take 34 senators to keep me from doing it," Green said.

Hardison offered the Senate a memo from the state Office of Budget and Management showing that comparative fault would cost the state $1 million in insurance claims and premiums each year.

But Barnes, the bill's sponsor, offered notes from the legislative staff showing that the costs of comparative fault legislation could not be calculated.

If a bill is determined to cost the state money, it must be examined by the Appropriations Committee. Barnes said the bill would be "sorely wounded" if it is sent to the budget panel.

He said supporters believed they had a majority of votes Thursday but he was unsure whether that margin could be maintained through next week.

Two years ago, the Senate rejected the bill by about three votes.

Comparative fault allows an injured person to collect damages if they are less than half to blame for the accident. The damages they collect are reduced in proportion to their share of the blame for the accident.

North Carolina now has a contributory negligence system under which an injured person may collect no damages if they contributed in any way to the accident.

Barnes said the current system is harsh and noted that only 11 states maintain that system.

"People are not on one side pure and one side wrong in most cases," he said. "This is an idea whose time has come."

Barnes said a survey of 35 state insurance commissioners indicated no insurance cost increases associated with the change to comparative fault except in Alaska, where the commissioner speculated that insurance prices had increased 5 percent.

He rejected a study commissioned by utilities, railroads and other industries showing insurance prices might rise between 16 percent and 28 percent under comparative fault. Barnes said the states examined in that survey have a higher cost of living in general.

Then Hardison presented the memo from the state Office of Budget and Management and moved to send the bill to the Appropriations Committee.

Before the motion was voted on, Barnes tried to get the Senate to adjourn. His effort was rejected, 19-25.

Barnes then offered an amendment that would rewrite the bill so it didn't apply to state government. But after a conference with Green and Hardison, he withdrew the amendment.

Senator Offers N.C. Ridge Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, introduced a bill Thursday for keeping high-rise buildings off mountain ridges, but at least one legislator is considering another approach to the problem.

Thomas' bill would prohibit construction of buildings taller than three stories atop mountain ridges in 24 counties.

It would affect ridges at altitudes of more than 2,750 feet above sea level and would consider ridges to be any land within 100 feet below the mountain top.

Violation of the bill would be a misdemeanor and subject to a civil penalty of $50 per day.

He said he introduced the bill because he has received many telephone calls saying, "somebody ought to have the courage to save the North Carolina mountains that belong to all of us in this state."

But Rep. Margaret "Pinky" Hayden, D-Alleghany, was circulating another bill among county officials in the western part of the state. She said she doesn't plan on introducing the bill until she receives comment from local officials.

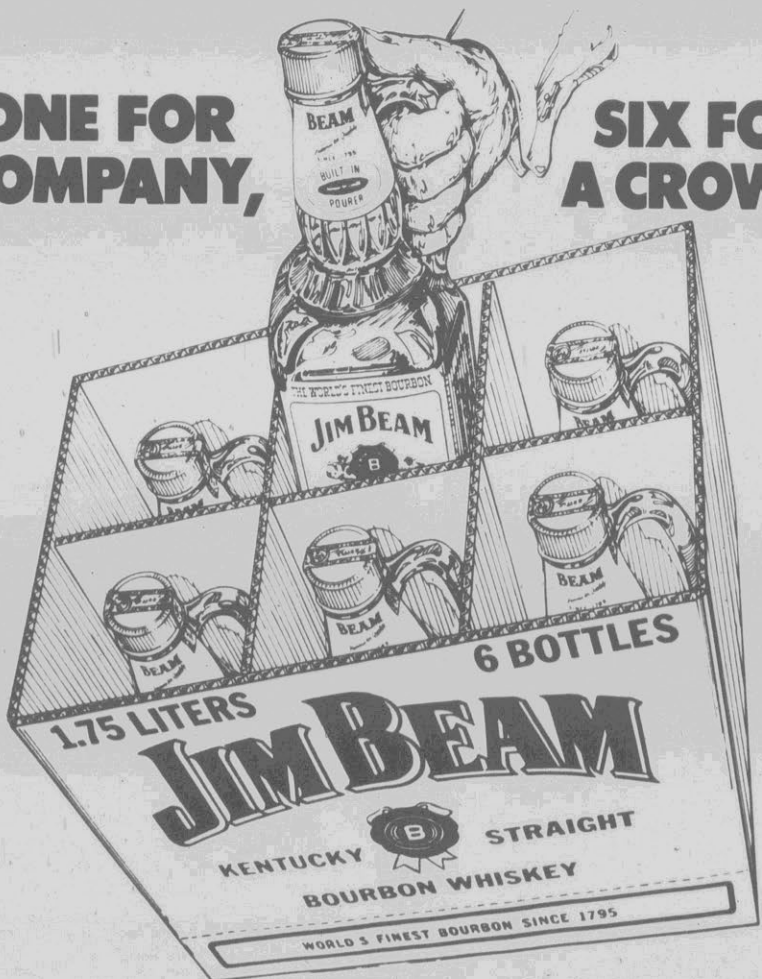

Her bill would allow any county to adopt and enforce an ordinance regulating construction of tall buildings on mountain ridges.

It lists criteria that may be considered in denying permits, including danger to life or property from high winds, hazards to air travel, feasibility of supplying water or disposing of sewage, feasibility of providing fire service and impairment of natural beauty of the mountains.

It would apply to ridges with an elevation of 2,500 feet or more above sea level and ridges 500 feet or more above the adjacent valley floor.

Non-Aligned Summit Wrangles

BATTLE OF BENTONVILLE — Volunteers from last year's march celebrating the anniversary of the Battle of Bentonville are shown in action as they marched in a gusty wind. The march this year will be held on Saturday and Sunday, and will be open to the public invited at no charge. Bentonville Battleground is located a short distance north of Newton Grove, and is about 80 miles southeast of Greenville. (AP Laserphoto)

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Battlefield enemies Iran and Iraq sparred today at the conference table as they and other non-aligned nations struggled toward the conclusion of a week-long summit.

The delegates, for example, could not decide where the summit, held every three years, would next take place.

The lack of consensus threatened to delay today's scheduled end of the seventh non-aligned summit, which formally began Monday with 100 of the 101 members attending.

Today, sources said Iran was demanding that the final summit declaration label Iraq as the aggressor in their 30-month-old war. The 20-year-old association of non-aligned nations has never called one of its members an aggressor.

Iraq also was pressing delegates to select Baghdad, its capital, to host the next summit. Baghdad was to be the site of the seventh summit but, because of the war between the two neighbors, New Delhi was chosen.

Meanwhile, Morocco threatened to organize a new crippling boycott of the planned summit of the Organization of African Unity unless the Polisario guerrilla movement is "clearly and explicitly" excluded.

Thursday, on the sidelines of the summit, the leaders of 12 African states agreed to try once again to reconvene the twice-collapsed African summit in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa in June.

Moroccan Foreign Minister Mohamed Boucetta told The Associated Press that more than one-third of the African organization's 50 members have assured Morocco they will join the boycott, thus depriving the OAU's 19th summit of its legal quorum for the third time in seven months.

The Algerian-based Polisario movement immediately announced its determination to take part in the summit.

The OAU, the world's largest regional body, has been paralyzed since its secretary-general, Edem Kodjo, proclaimed Polisario a member in February 1982, saying that 26 of the 50 members recognized the movement.

Morocco and most of the moderate, Western-oriented members vigorously protested Kodjo's action, asserting that only a two-thirds majority can legally admit a controversial member.

The Marxist-led Polisario movement has waged a bitter and costly guerrilla war against Moroccan forces from bases in Algeria and neighboring Mauritania for the past seven years.

The non-aligned summit's final declaration was expected to follow lines of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who as leader of the host nation, chaired the conference.

The final declaration will include an "appeal to the great powers" to urgently work for nuclear disarmament. Speaker after speaker here warned that economic collapse threatened the world's poorest countries, and the declaration includes a call for negotiations to avert such disaster.

Cambodia's place at this summit was vacant because participants at a preliminary meeting couldn't resolve rival claims of Cambodia's Vietnamese-sponsored regime and opponents of the rulers.

'82 Farm Sales Seen Below '81

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Total farm sales in 1982 are expected to fall below their record-breaking level of 1981 when figures are released later this year, an agricultural official said Thursday.

Cash receipts from 1981 totaled a record $4.2 billion, eclipsing the old figure of $3.6 billion set in 1980, according to the North Carolina Farm Income Report of 1981 just released.

The figures represent gross income.

The 1982 report is expected this fall. Carl Cross, a statistician with the North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, said the figures will be down because of an off-year in tobacco sales.

"We're expecting tobacco (receipts) to be much lower," Cross said. "The actual income for the 1982 tobacco crop will be a couple million dollars less than 1981."

The reason, Cross said, was that in 1982 production was down and acreage was cut in half.

Tobacco revenues made up 30.6 percent of all sales for 1981 — tops among all crops in the state.

Cross attributed the '81 increase of 17.7 percent in total farm sales to a doubling of peanut sales. He also said corn, soybean and tobacco sales rose in 1981.

The report is "trend-wise, a good measure from year to year of the strength of the farm economy," said Cross. He said there were no surprises in the report, adding that 1981 was "a pretty good year."

Duplin County was the top county in cash receipts, which include poultry, dairy and livestock sales as well as crops. Robeson County led all counties in crop sales.

Duplin had a total sales of $211,411,000 up slightly from its $208,053,000 total in 1980. Wilkes County was second with $133,332,000 and Union third with $133,064,000.

Robeson had a total crops sale of $106,847,000 followed by Sampson County, $99,650,000 and Pitt, $99,556,000.

Total crop sales were $2,650,855,000 for 1981 while total livestock, dairy and poultry sales were $1,585,435,000 for a total of $4,236,290,000 for the sale of all farm goods.

Postponement On Sentencing Judge

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Sentencing for former District Court Judge J. Wilton Hunt Sr., convicted on federal bribery charges, has been postponed until at least March 21.

The sentencing hearing, which had been set for Monday, was delayed because of a conflict in presiding Judge James C. Cacheris' schedule, said U.S. Attorney Sam Currin of North Carolina's Eastern District.

Hunt faces a maximum sentence of up to 35 years in prison and fines of $35,000.

Last month, Hunt was convicted of federal bribery and gambling violations that stemmed from the FBI's investigation of corruption in southeastern North Carolina, nicknamed "Colcor."

He recently resigned as judge in the 13th Judicial District, which includes Bladen, Brunswick and Columbus counties.

The state Judicial Standards Commission, which investigates allegations against judges, had recommended Hunt be removed from the bench, but the N.C. Supreme Court must make the final decision.

Despite the resignation, the court will still have to make a decision. Without court action, Hunt would be eligible for retirement benefits.

Under state law, if the Supreme Court removes Hunt from office, he would be stripped of benefits, said Franklin Freeman, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

Hunt also faces prosecution on state bribery charges. That trial has not been scheduled.

More Than Cookies To Girl Scout Coordinator

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Cheerful, red-cheeked faces, pig tails, camping and cookies are what most people think of when Girl Scouting is mentioned.

But Mrs. Wyatt Brown, one of the many long-time girl Scout workers in Pitt County who is celebrating Girl Scout Week March 6-12, says there is much more to Scouting.

"I never was a Girl Scout myself, but I became involved when my daughter joined the Brownies in the second grade. That was in 1956, so I have been in Scouting in one way or another for 27 years," Mrs. Brown said.

Mrs. Brown said she has been everything from Brownie leader to neighborhood chairwoman. She is now 75 and is still working for the Scouts as Brownie coordinator in Pitt County.

One or two experiences stand out in Mrs. Brown's memories of Scouting. "What I really enjoyed the most was being down at Camp Hardee on the Pamlico. We used to have a day camp down there and had a marvelous time," she said.

"Each summer the county schools let us use their buses for two weeks. Each day for those two weeks I would ride with the children back and forth from camp. The girls sang songs until they were coming out of my ears. We would always stop the bus at a filling station in Chocowinity and the girls would open the bus windows and scream, 'We are the girls from Camp Hardee.' I felt so sorry for that gas station attendant," she said.

"We had to stop day camp one year because we couldn't get transportation for the girls and I miss it dreadfully," she said.

Mrs. Brown said the only event she recalls with both pleasure and a churning stomach was the time her daughter's senior troop wanted to go to New York over Easter. "Oh, they went to various places and took in the shows and got teased about being green berets by all the men. I did not get to go on that trip, but we all pitched in at home to help raise the money. We made chicken salad until it was coming out of our ears and sold it so the girls could go," she said.

Camping is perhaps the highlight of Scouting to many of the girls and Mrs. Brown said she particularly enjoyed sleeping out herself.

"One time we took all the little Brownies down to Camp Hardee right before camping season actually began to sleep under the stars. But before we went to bed we had to sprinkle a three- to four-inch line of sulphur all around our site to keep the snakes away. You sort of have to do those things because if you've ever seen or heard a bunch of screaming girls running around in their pajamas you'd know why."

Girl Scouting is not only for having fun. The girls are supposed to develop a good moral code of behavior. Briefly, the principles set down by Juliette Gordon Lowe, who founded Girl Scouts in 1912, are belief in God, service, responsible character, high ideals of character and conduct and appreciation of the worth of all people.

Today there are more than three million Girl Scouts and volunteers in the United States. The Coastal Council, which includes Pitt County, is one of 336 councils with a membership of more than 10,000 girls, aged 6-17, and adults.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE SHEPHERDS' PROTECTORS

WHILE THE YOUNG SHEPHERDS GUARDED THEIR FLOCKS THEY IN TURN QUITE OFTEN WERE GUARDED THEMSELVES BY SMALL BANDS OF YOUNG MEN WHO WERE SUITABLY ARMED TO WARD OFF BRIGANDS AND OUTLAWS WHO MIGHT STEAL THE SHEEP. THESE YOUTHS WERE USUALLY IN SOME KIND OF MINOR TROUBLE WITH THE AUTHORITIES. FOR PAY THEY RECEIVED FOOD FROM THE OWNERS OF THE FLOCKS. SUCH AN ARRANGEMENT WAS MADE BY DAVID AND HIS SMALL BAND OF COMPANIONS WHEN HE HAD TO LEAVE SAUL'S PALACE UNDER THREAT OF DEATH. THIS MEAGER BEGINNING LATER LED TO DAVID AMASSING AN ARMY POWERFUL ENOUGH TO ENSURE HIS CONTROL OF THE ENEMY PHILISTINES WHEN HE WAS MADE KING.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

Whether they are Protestant or Roman Catholic, whether their church services are simple or elaborate, Christians generally are in harmony when it comes to personal prayer.

They do a lot of it and largely in similar ways, times and attitudes.

These are among details brought out in an unusual cross-denominational survey of readers of 10 mainline denominational magazines, probing specifics about how they pray, when, where and what for.

Previous national studies have indicated that an overwhelming proportion of Americans, 89 percent of them, pray at times, even if not church members, making prayer by far the most prevalent of all religious activities.

For church members, it's even more so, about as much a part of everyday life as eating or sleeping, the new study indicates. All of them, 100 percent of the 1,491 respondents, do it, 92 percent daily, most of them several times daily.

The ordinarily private motives, manners and expectations brought to this most widespread religious process are pointed up in the study, which indicates close similarities about it among the mainline church people involved.

Whatever small variations showed up in prayer habits, these generally don't reflect denominational patterns, but rather personal preferences.

"Differences in our prayer practices do not follow denominational lines," writes church historian Martin Marty of the University of Chicago in summarizing the findings.

While collective prayer historically has been a key note in church life, the study indicates that church members nowadays overwhelmingly prefer to pray alone, 85 percent of them. "We are in prayer life 'alone' and 'do-it-yourselfers,'" Marty says, noting this may make churches nervous, but it may be "God's wonderful way of breaking open organization and subverting formalism."

The poll involved readers of these magazines and denominations:

U.S. Catholic (Roman Catholic), The Episcopalian (Episcopal), The Lutheran (Lutheran Church in America), The Disciple

(Christian Church — Disciples of Christ), The Lutheran Standard (American Lutheran), The Messenger (Church of the Brethren), A.D. (United Presbyterian and United Church of Christ), The Church Herald (Reformed Church) and Presbyterian Survey (Presbyterian Church U.S./Southern).

Virtually all of the respondents, 97 percent, also saw the impact of prayer on themselves as causing "changes in my own life."

Senators Okay Hunt DUI Bill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt praised the state Senate for tentatively passing his drunken driving bill, as supporters of raising the legal age for drinking beer and wine from 18 to 21 vowed to continue the fight.

The Senate voted 48-0 Thursday to pass Hunt's bill on its second reading after Sen. Robert Warren, D-Johnston, withdrew his amendment approved Wednesday to raise the drinking age to 21, instead of 19 as Hunt supports.

Warren said he acted in light of widespread fears that raising the drinking age so drastically would force the bill off the Senate floor and back to the Appropriations Committee, where it could die.

But he said he immediately would introduce separate legislation to raise the drinking age to 21. At least two amendments dealing with other controversial sections will be introduced Tuesday, when the Senate takes its final vote on the bill.

Under Senate rules, each bill must survive three votes before being sent to the House. Thursday's vote was the second on Hunt's bill.

The House Finance Committee, meanwhile, approved the House version of Hunt's bill. It was referred to the House Appropriations Committee for further consideration of its monetary impact.

Hunt's bill would replace driving under the influence and other related charges with a single driving while impaired offense. It would eliminate plea bargaining and require sentencing hearings during which evidence would be presented on each case's severity.

The bill also would impose civil liability on ABC permit holders who sell alcoholic beverages to underaged patrons who later cause traffic accidents.

Slept Through Siege By Police

Can't Afford 3rd Operation

CINCINNATI (AP) — After spending 2 1/2 hours staking out a home from which shots had been fired, police finally entered the building and found its occupant sound asleep.

Police assembled 17 cruisers, a 15-man special weapons and tactics team and a fire truck outside Clarence Miller's home upon receiving reports of gunfire.

At length, after there was no response to telephone calls or shouts from police, officers climbed a ladder, entered a second-story window and found the 61-year-old Miller sleeping.

He was awakened, arrested and taken to jail. "It appears it was just a little case of intoxication," said Lt. Col. Larry Whalen, who said Miller's family fled the house after Miller fired several shots.

After they left, Miller laid down and fell asleep, and was apparently unaware that police had surrounded his home, officials said. He was charged with inducing panic and using firearms while intoxicated.

TO EXTEND RIGHTS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The all-white government will introduce legislation soon giving people of Asian and mixed racial backgrounds the right to hold certain seats in Parliament, a South African official says.

Evacuated Due Chemical 'Flash'

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — A metal-plating chemical accidentally spilled at Hughes Aircraft Co. caused a "flash" that prompted the evacuation of 60 employees while sending 29 others to area hospitals, officials said.

None of those treated or examined for inhalation of fumes from chromic acid was seriously hurt Thursday, officials said. "It was an oxidizer flash — like a gunpowder flash, phoomph! — not an explosion," said El Segundo police Lt. Dave Johnson.

Pirates Surprise Mason, Face Indians

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
RICHMOND, Va. — With nine seconds to go last night in the first round of the ECAC-South tournament, East Carolina's Tony Robinson was on the verge of being the goat of the game.

But just a couple of seconds later, he turned into a hero, making a steal that gave East Carolina a 68-65 "upset" over George Mason.

Robinson had been intentionally fouled with nine seconds left by John Niehoff, and Robinson missed both shots with ECU up by just one, 66-65.

Mason grabbed the rebound on the second miss and got the ball to Co-Player of the Year Carlos Yates just off the ECU foul line. As he turned to go up court, Robinson slapped the ball out of his hands, grabbed it up and laid it in for a 68-65 lead with just four seconds left and it was all over.

The victory, ECU's 16th against 12 losses, sends the Pirates into tonight's semifinals against regular season winner William & Mary, which had a first round bye.

In the second game last night, Navy downed Richmond, 74-69, and will meet number two James Madison in the other game tonight.

The contest between ECU and Mason was close all the way, with the Pirates opening up a six-point lead behind the scoring of Johnny Edwards and Charles Green with 6:46 left at 55-49.

The Pirates slowed it down over the final five minutes, and got only one field goal, but made nine of 13 at the line to keep the lead. Mason cut the margin back to one on four occasions over the last two minutes, but each time, the Pirates would make their free throws to hold onto the lead.

That is, until Robinson missed and it appeared that Mason might get off the last shot of the game.

Then — Robinson got the fateful steal.

"He bricked those two free throws," a relieved ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said of Robinson's final heroics, "but he made up for it with the steal."

GMU Coach Joe Harrington didn't quite agree. "They could have called a foul there," he told the press afterwards. "(Yates) could have gone to the line a lot more than he did tonight. It would have taken a lot of guts to make the call, but I think it should have been called."

But both coaches agreed that one of the big differences in the game was the play of Charles Green, who tossed in 20 points and pulled off a game high 14 rebounds.

"Green makes a lot of difference for us," Harrington said. "He gives us a lot more flexibility. We can move Johnny outside at forward some too with (Green) in there, like we did tonight. He had four possessions out there and scored on three of them."

Edwards, who was overlooked for Rookie of the Year honors in the ECAC despite being picked as the only freshman on the All-Conference team, led the scoring with 21 points.

The two teams bounced the lead back and forth throughout the first half as it changed hands five times in the first 11 minutes before Yates, the fourth leading scorer in the country, popped a three-point play for a 22-20 margin, then added another and Dwayne Grace hit two, running Mason out to a 28-20 lead with 5:35 left in the half.

ECU rallied behind four points by Green to within two, but couldn't take the lead. A three-point play with four seconds left by Green pulled the Pirates back to 35-34 at the half.

The two swapped the lead again early, nine times over the first ten minutes in the second half.

Then, with 9:48 left, Edwards hit from the foul circle and Barry Wright added a baseline jumper. Green added a free throw, then scored from underneath on a pass from Tom Brown.

That made it 55-49 with 6:46 to go.

Yates scored for GMU, but Edwards matched that. Then, over the next four minutes, the Patriots slowly chipped away at the lead until Mike Shannon hit with 1:44 to go cutting it to 60-59.

From there on, however the Pirates made their free throws — and got the key steal from Robinson when they missed at the stripe.

Yates was held to 20 points by the Pirates for the second time this year. That tied his second lowest total of the year. (The other game saw him score 23 in a double overtime.)

And it was — without a doubt — a typical ECAC game between the two. Four of the five meetings between the two teams have been decided by a total of seven points.

In addition to Yates' 20, Ricky Wilson added 18. Wright added 11 and Robinson, ten, to Edwards' and Green's totals.

ECU shot only 44.2 percent while GMU made good on 52.0 percent. The Pirates outrebounded the Pats, 33-29, with an 8-12 margin in the second half.

Houston's Manning Brings Home The Best

By The Associated Press
Houston Oilers quarterback Archie Manning received the highest base salary — $600,000 — of any player in the National Football League last season, according to published reports.

The next two top base salaries were paid to Cleveland Browns linebacker Tom Cousineau, who received $500,000 and New Orleans Saints quarterback Ken Stabler, who earned $450,000 in base salary. The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story today. A similar story also appeared in the San Diego Union.

Herschel Walker, the Heisman trophy-winning running back from the University of Georgia, signed a contract earlier this month with the New Jersey Generals of the new United States Football League worth an estimated $5 million over three years. It is the biggest contract ever for a pro football player, although it is not known how much of the money is in base salary and how much in bonuses and other incentives.

The NFL figures, which were compiled by the NFL Players Association, do not include signing bonuses or performance clauses and were not adjusted to show what the players earned for nine games during the strike-shortened 1982 season.

The report, the first undertaken by the NFLPA, indicates that 23 percent of the NFL owners' revenue goes to player salaries. At the center of last season's strike was a demand by the players that 55 percent of each team's gross income be guaranteed to cover player costs — salaries, pensions and other benefits. That demand eventually was dropped in negotiations.

The complete list of NFL players salaries have been mailed to members of the NFL Players Association by Ed Garvey, executive director of the players union.

In Washington, Garvey refused to elaborate on the reported figures.

"As I said in the cover letter which accompanied the salary directory to the NFLPA membership, 'This directory is for members only, please keep it to yourself.' I have no further comment on the accuracy of the figures circulating in the media which are attributed to the directory," Garvey said.

The players receiving the lowest base salaries were Atlanta Falcons defensive back Mike Perko and Cincinnati Bengals linebacker Jeff Roberts, both of whom were both paid the league minimum of $22,000, according to the reports.

The Denver Broncos had the highest average base salary — $118,460, according to the newspapers.

Following the Broncos were the Los Angeles Rams, with an average base of $110,470; the Dallas Cowboys, $107,990; the Los Angeles Raiders, $104,470; and the Buffalo Bills, $103,440.

The Baltimore Colts, who had the worst record in the league last year at 0-8-1, were last with an average of $69,465, according to the report.

The figures showed quarterbacks had the highest average base salary at $161,380.

in both games today," Baird conceded. "They have a young program and they've been every game they've played."

"A lot of what has happened at East Carolina over the past 15 years helps in games like this. It helps win games like that."

"We knew we are young and have an inexperienced pitching staff, but we did anticipate a better hitting attack. Once we get a few under our belt, we'll be a lot better off."

traded to the Saints by the Oilers in exchange for Manning — was second on the quarterback salary list at $450,000 a year. Joe Ferguson of the Buffalo Bills was third at $440,000, Steve Bartkowski of Atlanta fourth at $410,000.

Rose Opens Victorious

SNOW HILL — The Greenville Rose softball team opened its season Thursday with a convincing 4-2 victory over Greene Central as pitcher Amanda Smith allowed only five hits.

Rose scored a pair of runs in the top of the first and another pair in the fifth to put the game out of reach. Greene Central's Rams played a run in the second and fifth frames.

Lisa Leggett led the Ram-pants with three singles, while Greene Central got a pair from Pam Davis.

Greenville Rose takes a week off before hosting Greene Central next Friday.

Syracuse Needed Win, Got It

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Jim Boeheim didn't have to say much to his Syracuse basketball players before sending them out to meet Georgetown in the Big East tournament.

"If any team needed a win, it was us," said the Syracuse coach.

The 20th-ranked Orangemen had lost two regular-season games to the Hoyas — including one as recently as last Monday night — and a loss Thursday night would not only have bounced them out of the tournament, but quite possibly out of the NCAA playoffs as well.

They made sure that wouldn't happen, beating the 15th-ranked Hoyas convincingly, 79-72.

"Syracuse was better than us tonight," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "Monday night had nothing to do with it."

"Rautins and Santifer knew it was their last time around. They did a great job. They beat us."

Thompson referred to two of the Orangemen's seniors, Leo Rautins and Erich Santifer. Santifer scored 23 points and Rautins had 18 points, seven rebounds and six assists.

In the other quarterfinal games at Madison Square Garden, No. 8 St. John's defeated Pitt 64-53 behind Billy Goodwin's 16 points; No. 13 Villanova edged Connecticut 69-68 on John Pinone's free throw with 23 seconds remaining and No. 14 Boston College hammered Seton Hall 79-56 behind John Garris' 23 points, outscoring the Pirates by a whopping 53-20 in the second half.

"Connecticut played inspired basketball. Our patience down the stretch and experience down the stretch took its toll on them," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino.

The Big East tournament was one of several played around the country Thursday night as teams continued to shoot for spots in the NCAA's post-season tourney.

Sidney Green scored 28 points to lead No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas to 74-67 victory over University of the Pacific in an opening round game of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tournament.

In other first-round games, San Jose State beat Utah State 80-66 behind Chris McNealy's 27 points; Fresno State defeated UC Irvine 86-68 as Bernard Thompson scored 24 and Ricky Smith hit a 12-foot bank shot with three seconds to play as Long Beach State upset Fullerton State 61-59.

In the Southern Conference, Willie White had 28 points as 18th-ranked Tennessee-Chattanooga pulled away from scrappy Appalachian State 71-58. George Singleton scored 17 points as Furman stunned Marshall 67-60. Winfred King scored 21 points and pulled down 19 rebounds as East Tennessee State took a 75-65 victory over The Citadel. Kenny Trimier's 24 points paced Western Carolina to an 86-62 victory over Davidson.

Ennis Whatley hit two free throws with 1:12 remaining to give sluggish Alabama the lead, and Terry Williams made two clinching free throws with four seconds to play as the Crimson Tide came back in the second half to trim Auburn 62-61 in the opening game of the Southeastern Conference tournament. Dale Ellis tallied 26 points, 19 in the second half, as Tennessee rolled past Florida 78-62.

Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said the key to the Crimson Tide victory was its man-to-man defense in the second half after playing mainly a zone defense the first 20 minutes.

"The man-to-man defense picked up our intensity and helped us play harder," he said.

Rick Lamb scored 22 points to spark Illinois State to a 79-61 victory over Bradley in the semifinal action of the Missouri Valley Conference championships. Ricky Ross hit a 15-foot jump shot with four seconds left in the game to lead Tulsa past New Mexico State 49-48 in the night's second game.

Darrell Browder's 17 points carried Texas Christian to a 65-53 Southwest Conference quarterfinal victory over cold-shooting Texas A&M. Jon Koncak, hitting 25-footers with as much ease as layups, scored 21 points to pace Southern Methodist to a 76-69 victory over Texas Tech.

"Everything was falling for me," said Koncak. "I knew in the second half they would come out and front me to stop me and they did but the other guys picked up the slack."

John Devereaux poured in 25 points, pulled down 16 rebounds and blocked six shots as Ohio University whipped Toledo 70-59 to move into the finals of the Mid-American Conference tournament. Bowling Green was the other semifinal winner, beating Ball State 79-69 as Bill Faine scored 28 points.

"The thing I like is that we held Ball State to 47 percent shooting tonight, and they were coming off a 63-percent game against Miami," said Bowling Green Coach John Weinert.

Xavier guards Victor Fleming and Anthony Hicks scored 16 points each and spearheaded a pesky defense that forced Detroit into numerous turnovers on the way to a 90-70 victory in the semifinal round of the Midwestern City Conference tournament. Alfredrick Hughes scored 25 and Andre Battle added 17, as Loyola bounced Evansville 80-66.

Russell Davis scored 20 points and grabbed 12 rebounds and Robert Brown contributed 24 points as Long Island University rallied to defeat Fairleigh Dickinson 101-98 in overtime to gain the finals of the ECAC Metro North playoffs. Chipper Harris scored 32 points to lead Robert Morris to a 106-94 victory over St. Francis in the other Metro North semifinal.

In the ECAC South, Tony Robinson stole the ball and scored on a layup with four seconds left to nail down a 68-65 victory for East Carolina over George Mason. Also, Navy hit seven of 10 free throws down the stretch to hold off Richmond 74-69.

Darren Maloney scored 23 points and Chris Logan added 22 as Holy Cross rallied in the second half to defeat New Hampshire 89-77 in an ECAC North Atlantic game. Also, Tony Simms scored 34 points to lead Boston University to a 95-82 victory over Niagara.

Darryl Murphy and James Mitchell scored 14 points each to power Jackson State to a 63-61 victory over Mississippi Valley in the Southwestern Athletic Conference tournament. Alcorn State stopped Prairie View 98-55 as Aaron Brandon, David Clabon and David Williams scored 16 points each. Southern University defeated Grambling 77-68 as Glenn Bridges scored 14 points.

Kenneth Lyons scored a Southland Conference Tournament record 47 points as North Texas State stunned regular-season runnerup Louisiana Tech 87-73 in a first-round game. Jay Hansen scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half to lead Arkansas State to a 66-56 come-from-behind victory over Texas-Arlington. Joe Dumars scored 33 points and Kenny Jimerson added 32 to lead McNeese State to a 112-101 double overtime victory over Northeast Louisiana.

In other action, Kenny Fields scored 24 points to lead fourth-ranked UCLA to a 111-58 rout over Arizona to clinch at least a tie for the Pacific 10 Conference championship.

Warriors Rally For Second Half

HOUSTON (AP) — On an night when neither team seemed particularly interested in playing defense, Golden State guard Ron Brewer said Coach Al Attles made sure the Warriors were ready for the second half.

The Houston Rockets burned up the nets with 60.4 percent shooting in the first half, but only had a 64-60 lead for their effort Thursday night.

Golden State picked up the defensive tempo in the second 24 minutes after some fiery halftime discussion to hand the Rockets a 119-109 defeat, Houston's 13th loss in its last 14 games.

It was the only National Basketball Association game on the schedule.

"They were getting a lot of easy baskets in the first half," Brewer said. "They were executing their offense, and what you've got to do in this game is get a lot of easy baskets."

Attles "fussed out" the Warriors at halftime, and they limited the Rockets to 45 second half points on 40 percent shooting, Brewer said.

"I probably said a few things at halftime that they responded to," Attles admitted. "We came out in the second half and played like we should. I think the Rockets dominated us in the first half, but we played with intensity in the third quarter."

On the other side, Rockets Coach Del Harris was not pleased with his team's play on defense, either.

"We're just not exerting enough defensive pressure to keep their field-goal percentage down," Harris said.

He pointed out that Houston opponents have shot more than 50 percent from the field for eight straight games and nine of the last 10.

"We just aren't getting into it defensively, and that's got to come from the heart," Harris said.

Center Joe Barry Carroll scored eight of his game-high 34 points in the third quarter, as the Warriors quickly evaporated Houston's halftime edge. Carroll's tip-in with 8:49 left in the period put Golden State ahead for good, 70-68.

The Rockets trailed by three, 89-86, going into the last stanza, but hit only three of their first 12 shots as Golden State built a 101-92 bulge with 7:05 remaining.

The Rockets, 11-53, rallied to within three points, 103-100, but a string of eight unanswered points, including four by Lewis Lloyd, put the game out of reach.

Lloyd added 25 points for the Warriors, now 25-39, and Mickey Johnson had 21 points, 11 rebounds, and 10 assists. James Bailey paced Houston with 22 points and 13 rebounds.

Jarman Overcomes Size Barrier

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Murray Jarman didn't think his nerves could stand the pressure of being Clemson's starting center, but he's slowly overcome the fear to assume the role with confidence.

Jarman, currently the league's shortest starting center at 6-foot-6, has enough on his mind trying to battle people like Virginia's 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson. His main concern in today's opening round of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament was North Carolina's 6-foot-11 Brad Daugherty, but there was a time when he didn't think he could do the job regardless of the opponent.

"I never imagined I'd be playing center, but it worked good for me," said Jarman, the Tigers' second leading scorer at 13 points per game.

The move into the pivot took time, Jarman said, because he wasn't convinced he was the man Coach Bill Foster had in mind.

"A lot of my problems were mental," Jarman said. "I always thought I had the physical abilities to play. I didn't have the confidence I needed."

"As I started getting more game experience, I gained more confidence," he continued. "It sort of snowballed from there and I haven't looked back since."

Jarman shot 51 percent from the field and nearly 70 percent from the free throw line while putting in 21 minutes a contest. He's started in six of Clemson's last seven games.

"You've gotta do it with a little bit of quickness," Jarman said. "They don't expect me to go inside and take it to the hole."

He also said you've got to forget that often his opponent may be staring at the top of his head and not straight in the eye.

"I try to block it out of my mind, no matter who it is or how tall they are," Jarman said. "Height is an overrated thing. A couple of inches here or there won't affect our game that much."

Pro basketball star Junior Bridgeman's proper name is Ulysses Lee Bridgeman.

Rose High Downs Bears

The Greenville Rose golf team soundly defeated New Bern High School Thursday in non-conference action with a total of 329-341.

Brian Hill claimed low medalist honors for the Ram-pants, as he fired a 77 for the 18-hole round. Craig Davies shot a 78 and Peter McCurdy and Chris Evans 87 for Rose.

Ashley Scott and Trey Honeycutt needed 82 strokes to complete the round for the Bears, while John Stewart shot 87 and Paul Pomoroy 90.

Rose will travel to Northern Nash Monday at 1 p.m. for a Big East 4-A Conference matchup.

Alston, Kell Voted Into Hall

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
TAMPA, Fla., (AP) — The doors of baseball's Hall of Fame have opened for Walter Alston and George Kell. That means another long year's wait for the forgotten men of the game — the shortstops.

Phil Rizzuto, Marty Marion and the late Glenn Wright were passed over Thursday when the Committee of Veterans voted to induct Alston, 71, who managed the Dodgers over a 23-year span in two cities, and Kell, Detroit's flashy, good-field, good-hit third baseman.

For years there has been strong criticism that the Hall of Fame electorate ignored defensive geniuses and concentrated on long-ball hitters and strong-armed pitchers. Shortstops compose the least-represented position in the shrine in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Alston and Kell, whose credentials are indisputable, will be enshrined July 31, along with Brooks Robinson, the great third baseman of the Baltimore Orioles, and San Francisco's ace pitcher, Juan Marichal. They were elected earlier by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

In recent years there has been a strong campaign for Rizzuto, a member of the New York Yankees in the Joe DiMaggio era, among baseball's all-time outstanding fielders in the 1940s.

That was when Marion was doing outstanding things for the St. Louis Cardinals, a competitive team that won the World Series in 1942 behind the .276 hitting and flawless fielding of their great shortstop.

Oldsters had waged a lobbying campaign for Wright, another sure-handed, shotgun-armed shortstop who played with the Pittsburgh Pirates before World War II.

But all were left wanting. "I think the committee is waiting for next year when Pee Wee Reese (the Brooklyn Dodgers' great shortstop) will be eligible for the first time and they can put Rizzuto and Reese in as a pair," said one prominent baseball personality who serves on the committee.

Sentimentality frequently enters into the Hall of Fame voting procedure, as in the case of the simultaneous induction of Mickey Mantle and Whitey Ford, old Yankee teammates.

A player becomes eligible for the Hall of Fame five years after retirement and remains eligible for selection by the baseball writers for 15 years if he can maintain a fixed voting count. Missing this, he must wait an additional five years before he becomes eligible for consideration by the Committee on Veterans.

Kell thus gained admission to the baseball shrine on his first year of eligibility in the veterans class. Alston was chosen in a special category which includes managers and administrators.

Besides Alston and Kell, players given special consideration by the veterans committee were Charlie Grimm, the oldtime Chicago Cubs' first baseman and later manager; pitchers Vic Willis and Carl Mays; Ray Dandridge, an outstanding first baseman of the Negro Leagues, and umpire Al Barlick.

A special committee to make redress for the long ban against black players was disbanded several years ago, blacks falling into the category of the veterans committee.

Alston was one of the most successful and unique managers in baseball history. A school teacher from Dar-town, Ohio, his major league playing career spanned one at-bat (a strikeout), but he managed the Dodgers in Brooklyn and then Los Angeles for 23 years, always on a year-to-year contract.

He explained that he never asked for a long-term contract because, "they never said anything about it and I didn't want to bring it up. They treated me well and I was happy."

A tall, mild-mannered man, he won seven National League pennants and four World Series championships after succeeding the fiery Charlie Dressen, who had come in the wake of equally volatile Leo Durocher.

"It was awfully quiet around there after Durocher and Dressen," said Carl Erskine, one of Brooklyn's greatest pitchers.

Alston joined the Dodgers in 1954 and won his first World Series a year later, beating the Yankees. It was a feat he called "the most satisfying event in my life."

He won three more World Series crowns after the team moved to Los Angeles and retired in 1976, succeeded by Tom Lasorda.

Kell was a 5-foot-9, 175-pound whiz at third base who had good range, a strong arm and set numerous American League records for double plays, fielding percentage, putouts and assists.

But he was equally valuable at the plate, finishing his 15-year career with an average of .306. He batted more than 300 eight times, seven times in a Tiger uniform, once hitting .343 and another time .340.

An automobile dealer in his native Swifton, Ark., he broke in with the Philadelphia Athletics in 1943 at age 20, joined the Tigers early in 1946 and stayed with the Detroit team until 1952, when he went to the Boston Red Sox.

He played two years with the Chicago White Sox and finished his career with the Baltimore Orioles in 1957. He serves as TV commentator for the Tigers' games in the summer. He was in Detroit when his election was announced and the news was passed onto his wife in Swifton to be relayed to him there.

"He said he was so nervous that he broke two pencils trying to write down telephone numbers," Mrs. Kell said. "I was flying — it's great," Kell said later.

Both men were scheduled to fly to St. Petersburg, Fla., to attend a Hall of Fame traveling road show and the traditional governor's dinner to-night at the Bayfront Center.

USFL Sets For Second Week

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona Wranglers Coach Doug Shively, relying on a "gut feeling," says he will start ex-Louisiana State standout Alan Risher at quarterback in Saturday night's United States Football League game here against the Chicago Blitz.

Meanwhile, Michigan plays at Tampa Bay in Saturday night's other USFL game. Both the Panthers and Bandits won their season openers last week. On Sunday, New Jersey is at Philadelphia, Boston plays at Denver and Birmingham is at Oakland with Washington at Los Angeles in a Monday night game.

To combat the Blitz, Shively said he also has several other lineup changes in mind — mainly at cornerback, halfback, punter and placekicker — as the Wranglers try to recoup and regroup from last Sunday's season-opening 24-0 loss to Oakland.

"We weren't very proud of the way we played," said Shively. "(Right cornerback) Aaron Mitchell and (strong safety) Tommy Willcox played well and that's about it. When you lose like we did, you have to go out and find solutions. That's what we're going to do."

Four free-agent punters were given tryouts here this week, including former National Football League veteran Rick Partridge.

The Wranglers failed to penetrate beyond Oakland's 17-yard line and Jim Asmus missed both of his field goal attempts, from 34 and 35 yards out. Asmus also punted seven times for a 30.4

average. "Our kicking game left a lot to be desired," Shively said. "I promise you we'll give you a better product this week."

Risher relieved Wrangler starter Todd Krueger midway through the fourth quarter and completed five of 13 passes for 62 yards with one interception. Krueger, a left-hander out of Northern Michigan University making his pro debut, hit on 11 of 21 attempts for 94 yards.

"The biggest thing was that we got no points," Shively said. "I guess you (switch quarterbacks) on gut feelings and my gut feeling is that we'll go with Risher."

Shively also said Lee Wilson and Eddie Ray Walker may replace Lyndell Jones and Admiral Dewey Larry at the cornerback slots. Jones was burned on a 53-yard touchdown pass in the Invader game and also fumbled a punt.

Curtis Bledsoe, a former Kansas City Chief hampered by hemorrhoids last week, should start at halfback as Arizona attempts to revamp a ground game which gained just 102 yards on 31 carries.

"I don't care what game you go into, you have to develop your running game," Shively said. "If you don't, it's going to be like what happened to us last week — you get beat."

Chicago is coming off a 28-7 victory at Washington as veteran NFL quarterback Greg Landry completed 19 of 27 passes for 251 yards and two touchdowns.

The Blitz "certainly has the best talent of the teams in the league," Shively said. "You look at their linebacking corps and they have 26 years of experience and the same thing on their front four. They have a premier wide receiver in (Trumaine) Johnson and a proven, successful quarterback (Landry). And they have better overall speed at the skill positions. That's where it counts."

Although his team is favored by 13 points, Chicago Coach George Allen is not shortselling Arizona.

"We must be ready for the Wranglers," he said. "They beat Oakland badly in a (controlled) scrimmage several weeks ago. And going into the fourth quarter (Sunday), the score was only 7-0."

But Shively said "once we got behind, we didn't have the ability to come back."

A crowd of 30,000-40,000 is expected at 70,030-seat Sun Devil Stadium for the game, which will be televised by ESPN — a sports cable network.

Electric Rate Rise Expectable

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans can expect their electric bills to rise by billions of dollars a year under new regulations approved by an obscure federal agency that most of them have never heard of. The regulations, approved Thursday by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, will allow utilities to begin including in their wholesale rates half the construction costs of new power plants as they are being built.

The new rules, sought since the mid-1970s by financially strapped utilities, reverse a government policy that consumers should not have to pay for a power plant until after it is completed and the electricity is flowing. Commission officials estimated that the change will increase the wholesale rates of the 140 utilities it regulates by an average of 6 percent. But they said the rates of utilities with large construction programs could climb as much as 14 to 17 percent.

If state public utility commissions follow the federal precedent and allow the higher wholesale rates to be passed on to consumers, the increase would raise retail bills by $6 billion to $6.5 billion a year, according to an analysis by the American Public Power Association.

Ruth Caplan of the Environmental Action Foundation, a consumer group that monitors electric utilities, called the commission's action "a disaster for the consumer."

She said it "gives utilities a false signal to build more plants" at a time when demand for electricity is decreasing and the industry, because of overbuilding in the past, currently has a 40 percent excess in generating capacity.

"The impact of the Reagan administration's energy policy to promote construction of more generating capacity is clear," Ms. Caplan said. "Consumers will be forced to loan their utilities money for this unneeded construction and will suffer through higher rates."

The Edison Electric Institute, an organization of privately owned utilities, called the commission's action "a consumer victory."

"We're convinced that this is going to lower the cost of building new plants to meet increased demand or to replace older, less efficient power stations," said Kirk Willison, a spokesman for the institute.

Legislation has been introduced in both houses of Congress that would roll back the regulations and restrict the commission's authority to approve rate increases based on ongoing construction costs.

The commission said it will allow no more than a 6 percent rate increase in any one year to pay for "construction work in progress."

FERC Chairman C.M. Butler and Commissioner Anthony Sousa said they actually favored allowing utilities, which now finance their new plants through long-term revenue bonds, to put all of their construction costs into their electric rates.

They were outvoted by Commissioners Georgana Sheldon, John David Hughes and Oliver Richard III.

Ms. Sheldon noted that the regulations were proposed when utilities, which have canceled 117 power plants since 1975, were financially squeezed between double-digit inflation and high interest rates.

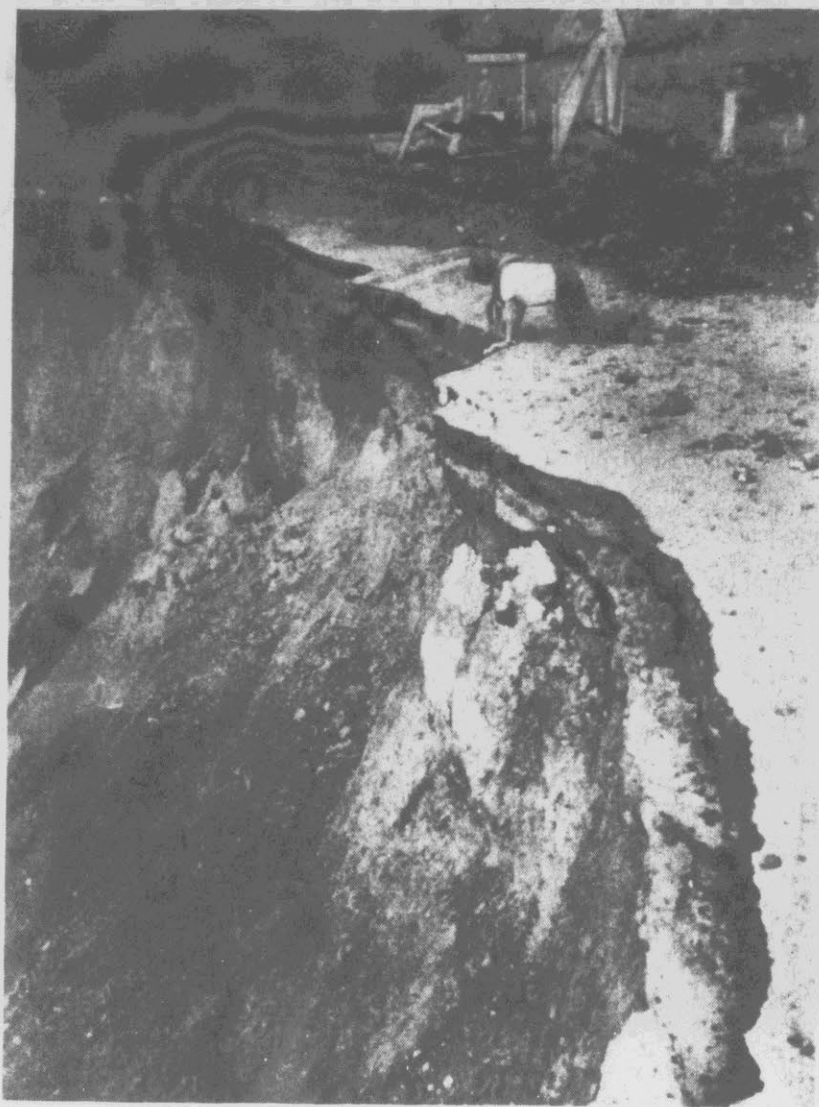

"With inflation and interest rates down, the timing concerns me," she said. "Ultimately, the expense is borne by the consumer, whether you pay as you go or not."

The commission's staff said the new policy should eventually smooth out rate increases and "price surges" that consumers now experience when a new plant costing $1 billion or more begins generating electricity and is put into the rate base all at once.

Butler said the regulations were "long overdue," adding that the change will "require utilities to confront their customers and give interested parties an opportunity to weigh whether a project is justified."

Since 1975, the commission had allowed utilities to include construction costs for pollution equipment, or for converting their plants from oil or natural gas, in their rates before the work was completed.

It also had allowed some construction work to be included in the rates early if a utility could show specific criteria proving its "financial distress."

FAMED HIGHWAY GONE — A Big Sur resident, Zeda Snodgrass, creeps out for a peak at a slide that took a large section of Highway 1 toward the ocean far below. Recent storms devastated the highway in more than 100 places, closing the route between Los

Impressions In Truman Letters

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Winston Churchill was "windy," Josef Stalin was "straightforward" and Dwight Eisenhower was "nice," in a newly released batch of the late President Harry Truman's letters.

Few people outside the Truman Library staff knew about the boxes of letters, newspaper articles, appointment books and other memorabilia found throughout the Truman home in Independence, one historian says.

"It's a very considerable amount of very frank and very personal material," said Robert Ferrell, who is writing a book based on the letters titled "Dear Boss." The book will be published this spring.

The boxes, made available to historians this week, contained unpublished material about Truman's early adulthood, and personal letters from 1910 to 1955 to his wife, Bess Wallace Truman, and in later years to daughter Margaret Truman Daniel.

Mrs. Truman died Oct. 18 at the age of 97. Truman died in 1972 at the age of 88.

The letters also included Truman's first impressions of British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet Premier Josef Stalin, Jackson County politics and his thoughts on religion, farming and history.

In one letter, dated 1918, a 33-year-old 1st Lt. Truman jokingly wrote his future wife that he was "going to disgrace the service by going AWOL" if she didn't write to him.

"If I could only see you, I'd be all in heaven," the future president wrote from Camp Doniphan in Oklahoma before departing for France and the American Expeditionary Force.

Truman described Churchill, whom he met at the July 1945 Potsdam conference, as "windy" but said: "I did like old Churchill. ... He knew his English language and after he'd talk half an hour there'd be at least one gem of a sentence and two thoughts maybe which could have been expressed in four minutes."

Truman wrote to his wife after meeting Stalin at the conference: "I like Stalin. He is straightforward. Knows what he wants and will compromise when he can't get it."

After three months as president in 1945, Truman thought General Dwight D. Eisenhower was "a nice fellow and a good man. ... They're running him for president which is OK with me. I'd turn it over to him now if I could."

Seven years later Eisenhower declared himself a Republican and was elected president. Relations between Truman and Eisenhower reached a low during the former general's two terms.

El Salvador Commitment Broadened By President

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's toughly worded speech declaring U.S. determination to defeat leftist insurgents in El Salvador has put his administration on the road to a larger military commitment in Central America.

In near apocalyptic terms favored by some of his most conservative advisers, Reagan warned that a rebel victory in El Salvador would jeopardize U.S. security interests not just in Latin America, but throughout the world.

"Soviet military theorists want to destroy our capacity to resupply Western Europe in case of an emergency," he said in asking Congress for $110 million more in military aid for El Salvador.

"They want to tie down our attention and forces on our own southern border and so limit our capacity to act in more distant places such as Europe, the Persian Gulf, the Indian Ocean, the Sea of Japan."

He declared that "Central America is simply too close and the strategic stakes are too high, for us to ignore the danger of governments seizing power there with ideological and military ties to the Soviet Union."

The toughness of the rhetoric appears to dash hopes of some administration moderates for a negotiated settlement of the Salvadoran civil war in the near future.

The bitter 3-year-old conflict now seems likely to continue indefinitely and possibly intensify. Already, about 40,000 people have died.

In his Thursday speech, Reagan rejected comprehensive negotiations being demanded by the guerrillas — and instead focused on the need to build up the Salvadoran army so it can reverse its sagging fortunes.

Reagan conceded that the military situation "is not good," but added that U.S. training and supply can turn the situation around. No U.S. combat troops nor combat advisers would be sent, he said.

"Only Salvadorans can fight this war, just as only Salvadorans can decide El Salvador's future," he said.

Despite the new aid request, he called claims that he is seeking a military victory in El Salvador "nonsense" and restated administration hopes that social reforms and elections, like the one now planned for December, could lead eventually to peace.

Last week, Ruben Zamora, an insurgent leader, said the left would only take part in elections if first "a political settlement" was reached, putting restraints on the security forces and providing safety for leftists who choose to participate.

"We are not interested just in discussing the technicalities of an election," said Zamora, a member of the rebels' political arm, the Democratic Revolutionary Front.

"If you are going to run an election, it doesn't mean only (protecting) candidates," he said. "It means hundreds of people who have to come out into the open. What is going to happen to these people the day after the election? ... Then will come the time for the paramilitary forces to kill these people."

In his address to the National Association of Manufacturers, Reagan voiced support for talks "aimed at expanding participation in democratic institutions" but flatly ruled out "negotiations that would be used as a cynical device for dividing up power behind people's backs."

He expressed hope that with $110 million in new military training and supplies, the Salvadoran army can put the guerrillas on the defensive and gain more time for the country's beleaguered economic reforms to work.

According to an administration "fact sheet," the $110 million would "provide the Salvadorans with enough trained manpower to station a 320-man light infantry battalion in each of the 14" provinces in El Salvador.

Currently, the Salvadoran army has three U.S.-trained quick-reaction battalions, which have been used to respond to guerrilla attacks.

Using the increased aid, the Salvadoran army could be expanded by 8,000 men. The force now numbers about 22,000.

In the past several months, the guerrillas have succeeded in spreading the conflict across the country. U.S. officials have criticized the Salvadoran army for relying too much on large-unit sweep operations and failing to challenge the guerrillas with aggressive, small-unit tactics.

Barney Clark Has Attained Day 100

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark marks his 100th day on the permanent artificial heart today — an unexpected three-month gift of life that would have been impossible before his historic implant operation.

On Dec. 2, Clark was a dying man with little hope when he was operated on by Dr. William DeVries.

But now the 62-year-old Seattle-area dentist is an international celebrity, hailed for his stoic struggle for survival.

No celebration was planned by doctors for Clark today at the University of Utah Medical Center, where he was in fair condition and recovering from a recent bout with aspiration pneumonia.

Although doctors are "certainly pleased that Dr. Clark has done this well, that he has lived to 100 days," hospital spokeswoman Anne Brillinger said it held no "special significance" for them.

"Even a couple of days is a milestone," she said.

Clark's life with the artificial heart has not been easy. Depression, disorientation, severe nosebleeds, nausea, pneumonia, seizures, and multiple surgeries have been his lot.

And emphysema is a nagging companion, keeping him locked in an intermittent gasping battle for air.

Still, Clark says the battle been worthwhile.

In his 100 days, Clark has celebrated a Christmas his old heart would have denied him. He's seen his 62nd birthday. He and his wife, Una Loy, quietly shared their 39th wedding anniversary.

Encouraging letters have come from around the world, including telegrams from President and Mrs. Ronald Reagan and Valentines colored by school children.

"I've had some wonderful letters and so forth from all parts of the world plus the United States supporting me. Some of it I can't interpret," Clark said last week in his first public comments about his experience.

"But all in all it has been a pleasure to help people and then, you folks have learned something."

Demonstrates How To 'Plant' A Pilot

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) — Gardener's tip for the day: How to plant an airplane.

Take one rookie pilot, flying solo in a small plane. Lose power and altitude over northern California, navigate under a string of utility wires, nick a tree, clip a parked pickup and come to rest, nose down, beside the flowers in a San Leandro backyard.

Fay Hadley, the pilot of a rented Cessna-150, wasn't injured in the Thursday accident.

"It was a pretty amazing landing, considering she's a rookie pilot," said San Leandro Police Sgt. Del Dehn. "Nobody was hurt. She wasn't even scratched. The street didn't even have much damage. The only other damage was to the garden."

Ms. Hadley was flying from Placerville to Hayward when she lost power south of Oakland, Police Lt. Robert Maginnis said. She radioed the control tower at Oakland International Airport and began searching for a landing strip, Maginnis said.

"She was real low," said one witness, Norman Goolsby, who was in a telephone booth at the time. "I thought she would hit me."

Ms. Hadley guided the sputtering plane to a nose-dive landing in Jesse James Ray's backyard.

Ms. Hadley rented the plane Wednesday from Silver Wings Aviation in Hayward. The company's owner, Hans Hockwarth, said the $12,000 plane is a total loss but is insured. He said Ms. Hadley is a licensed pilot and regular customer.

Air Controllers Perform Well

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration says a spot check of new air traffic controllers finds them well trained and performing professionally. But officials say they plan to tighten evaluation and monitoring proposals later this year.

Robert H. Throne, manager of quality assurance at the agency, said a spot check of 82 randomly selected controllers at 21 facilities showed only one with an unsatisfactory performance. He said that controller was removed for his "phraseology."

The National Transportation Safety Board, meanwhile, is due to release a report next week that is expected to be critical of the way FAA keeps track of errors by controllers, according to a source who asked not to be identified.

Gas service is available through Greenville Utilities Commission. For installation or hookup, call 752-4137.

Looks To Day Guard Is Gone

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Amy Carter has some constant companions she can't wait to lose, but that won't happen until she turns 16 in October.

The 15-year-old daughter of former president Jimmy Carter says when it comes to getting rid of her Secret Service protection: "I can't wait!"

In a recent interview, Amy said for entertainment she and those watching out for her often drive to Columbus where she visits with her best friend, Katie Aumann, 18. Nights out, she said, usually include pizza, movies and a trip to a video arcade.

As for a recent characterization of her and her protectors on "Saturday Night Live," Amy said it was exaggerated — but she still enjoyed the show.

The Best of the Rockies.

Coors starts out clean and fresh. And then it stays that way.

One of our secret ingredients has 18 wheels and weighs 32,000 pounds.

Like every other beer in the world, Coors starts with water.

But that's where the similarity ends.

You see, we start with pure Rocky Mountain spring water. That's because we make our beer in one place and one place only: Golden, Colorado. And its perfect brewing water is why we started there in the first place.

In the second place, we use a brewing process that's unique to the industry. We start with only natural ingredients — absolutely no additives or preservatives — and then we brew Coors more slowly and age it longer than most beers.

Then, we package Coors cold. Other beers are subjected to extreme heat (up to 140°) after being put in cans or bottles. Coors doesn't do that, simply because the less you heat beer, the better it tastes.

This is where our trucks come in. And go out.

When Coors Premium and Coors Light are finally through aging, they have a wonderfully cold, clean, brewery-fresh taste. The last thing in the world we'd want to do is put that nice, cold beer on a big, hot truck like other brewers do.

So we don't.

We use refrigerated trucks. And they take our beer — nice and cold — up to 2,000 miles (give or take a detour) to our distributors. At this point, it makes no sense to truck cold beer all that distance and let it get warm in some warehouse.

Don't worry. It doesn't. Our distributors use refrigerated warehouses for our beer. (It's more expensive, but we know they like that brewery-fresh taste as much as we do.)

Next, our distributors take that nice, cold Coors and put it in their own refrigerated trucks and take it to where you can finally buy some.

Does Coors have to be refrigerated?

No. But every now and then, the folks who sell Coors to you will have more on hand than they can keep on ice. So, you might see Coors out in one of those big displays at your store.

If you do, don't be concerned. Even though we go through all the expense and trouble to keep Coors Premium and Coors Light fresh from the Rockies to you, our beer is no more affected by heat than any other beer.

To kind of sum it up, we refrigerate our beer because we want to, not because we have to.

Now on tap. Soon in your store.

We're getting Coors Premium and Coors Light out to you as fast as we can. Chances are, you might find it first on tap at your favorite tavern. Check around. It's worth it.

And when you do find it, give it a chance. The real beauty of Coors is how it keeps that brewery-fresh taste beer after beer, hour after hour.

Thanks for reading all this, and there's just one more thing:

Enjoy!

Coors

The Best of the Rockies is yours!

NBC Magazine Show 'Monitor' To Debut Saturday

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, the network without a magazine show since last July, gets back into the prime-time news field Saturday night with "Monitor," a program that could give soft news a good name. "Soft" has been the blanket putdown for pieces that look at subjects uncritically or superficially. ABC's "20-20," which can engage in daring and meaningful journalism, sometimes does stories on pop entertainment figures with the emphasis on the stars' performance, rather than personality and psyche. CBS' "60 Minutes" does fewer entertainment profiles, and its pieces tend to be deeper and more classical, like segments on Vladimir Horowitz and Itzhak Perlman. But the program's popularity stems more from its exposes and investigative pieces, the so-called news-western approach to journalism. "Monitor" fits a different category, oriented more toward stories that are too deep in human feeling and foible to be labeled mere people pieces. The program successfully broadens the concept of "soft" news.

Anchored by Lloyd Dobyns, who is irreverent without sacrificing his credibility, "Monitor" is gentle, humorous and emotionally meaty. It is not flashy or sensational. Prokofiev's "Piano Concerto No. 1" is its dignified theme music. A simple grid serves as Dobyns' backdrop.

And one beauty of the opening night stories is that they are explained and explored without resorting to glittery graphics, the hocus-pocus techniques often used to camouflage swiss-cheese reporting.

Correspondent Steve Delaney has a powerful report on harassment, situations that arise when obsessive love or hate causes one person to hunt and haunt another. One example shows an 85-year-old woman who's been hounding a man for 42 years, ever since he was the paper boy and claimed her dog bit him.

The most striking illustration focuses on a man who won't take no for an answer. His one-sided love for a now-terrified woman has taken the form of letters, phone calls, stakeouts and visits to the woman's relatives. Ever-so-calmly, he says her resistance is "rude and childish behavior."

A psychologist explains that these trackers can't fathom the rejection when all they think they are doing is showing affection. They see themselves as the victims.

"Monitor" travels for another piece to Tulelake, Calif., formerly an internment center for Japanese-Americans in World War II and now the horseradish capital of the world. This funny story, narrated by Dobyns, will make you care about horseradish and the people who grow it more than you ever imagined you could.

Correspondent Rebecca Sobel's story on skin-white whites, who are judged by Louisiana law as black because of their ancestry, is interesting from a psychological standpoint, although more attention could have been given to the practical impact that being legally black has on their lives.

The final segment, about the traveling extended family of 5,000 or so film-flam operators known as "The Williamson Gang," is an offbeat and interesting — although somewhat rambling — investigative piece.

Quick labeling can be deceptive and misleading, but it looks like the objective of "Monitor" is to touch viewers, not grab headlines.

Sy Pearlman, the show's executive producer, says

"Monitor" will not engage in the type of ambush or confrontational interviews made famous by Geraldo Rivera on "20-20" and Mike Wallace on "60 Minutes."

"I think it's an unfair technique," Pearlman says. "We have the camera, and all he has is his feet. I told my producers not to chase people down the street, and to find other ways to shoot the subject."

"Monitor" follows a long line of busted NBC magazine shows, including programs that featured Tom Snyder and David Brinkley. The best of the bunch was the first one, "Weekend," which was quirky and clever. Dobyns was host, with Reuven Frank, now president of NBC News, as executive producer.

Saturday night at 10 p.m. EST, a low viewership period, has not been successful at NBC for a long time. But, even if the ratings are low, "Monitor" is supported by NBC Chairman Grant Tinker, who says he has the same commitment to a magazine show as "NBC Nightly News."

Saturday's show indicates the right direction, but it will take time to find audiences.

"Remember," says Dobyns, "60 Minutes" was on for seven years solely to answer the question: "What's the lowest-rated show on television?"

First Lady Returns To Former Profession For TV Acting Role

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the writers of NBC's "Diff'rent Strokes" asked Nancy Reagan to help with an episode about drug abuse, all they had in mind was a recorded appearance from her White House office.

But Mrs. Reagan — an avid anti-drug crusader — wanted to do more, and on Thursday she took up her former profession as actress for the first time in more than 25 years to tape two scenes before an audience of 250 at Universal Studios. The episode is scheduled to air March 19.

"First ladies have a lot of public appearances, but she's fairly excited about this," said Sheila Tate, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary.

Crisp-looking in a red skirt and sweater with black-and-red trim and a black tie, the first lady completed each scene in just one take, consulting cue cards beforehand but delivering her lines easily and naturally.

Mrs. Reagan plays herself in the episode, scheduled to air March 19. The plot centers around a drug abuse story that Arnold — played by "Diff'rent Strokes" star Gary Coleman — writes for a New York newspaper's journalism contest.

When Arnold's school principal refuses to enter the story because he believes it to be made up, Arnold sends it to the newspaper himself. The story is published and Mrs. Reagan shows up at the family's door.

"I'm sorry. I hope I'm not disturbing you. I'm Nancy Reagan," she says to Arnold's amazed adoptive father, played by Conrad Bain.

"Yes, you certainly are. Welcome to our building," Bain replies.

"Forgive me for dropping in like this, but sometimes it's better if I show up without any fanfare," Mrs. Reagan says.

She then congratulates Arnold for his story, explains her concern about drug abuse, and agrees to accompany Arnold and his father to his school.

The second scene is at the school, where she talks about the dangers of drug abuse and hugs many of Arnold's classmates.

The show is not devoid of light political humor. At one point Mrs. Reagan talks with her husband on the telephone to tell him she won't be home for dinner.

"I love you," she says. Then, after a pause, "If I can say it in front of strangers, you can say it in front of Tip O'Neill," the House speaker and a powerful Democratic opponent of many of President Reagan's programs.

Mrs. Reagan felt "it was such a good opportunity to reach over 20 million children," said Mrs. Tate when asked why Mrs. Reagan offered to do scenes lasting about five minutes rather than the originally requested cameo.

"She felt it was a powerful way to reach them and a dramatic way. She also thought it would be fun," Mrs. Tate added.

Mrs. Reagan met her husband when they both were acting. She gave up her career when they married in 1952, but did appear with him in the 1956 film, "Hellcats of the Navy."

Although Betty Ford made a cameo appearance on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," Mrs. Tate said she knew of no other first lady who "has ever gone on a stage and rolled up her sleeves and worked."

Mrs. Reagan was paid only union scale for her work and is donating the money to the National Foundation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth, a spokeswoman said.

Youngsters Bring Tears

BERGENFIELD, N.J. (AP) — A group of fourth- and fifth-graders turned the tables on Frank Capra, bringing tears to the eyes of the director famous for his own sentimental movies.

Capra recently wrote the students at Franklin School that after receiving their letters praising his film, "It's A Wonderful Life," "a faucet inside me began to leak and run out of my eyes."

Nineteen students wrote Capra letters in December after the class watched the Christmas favorite, which starred Jimmy Stewart as a man on the brink of suicide who is shown by an angel what the world would have been like if he were never born.

Capra wrote back individual letters to the students, and also sent 19 autographed copies of his autobiography, "The Name Above the Title."

Ricky Pego, a fourth-grader, wrote Capra that he would like to direct movies someday.

"You old 9-year-old," Capra wrote back from his California home. "My age is 9 X 9 (plus) 4. I look like this." Then, in the letter's margin, Capra had scrawled a self-caricature complete with a big nose and single hair on his head.

Rock Star Has Changed Pace

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Rock star Ted Nugent says he's switching this year from the noisy indoors, where he usually performs, to the quiet outdoors.

He plans to spend much of his time in hills and wood, instead of concert halls.

In an interview for a public television program this week called "Michigan Outdoors," Nugent told of growing up in a Detroit suburb where as a boy would hunt along a river near his home. Now he lives in a ranch house alongside 30 acres of woods near Jackson.

"Rock 'n' roll is about having fun," he said. "Next to a good bird dog and a woodcock, I think it's damn good."

While other rockers turned to drugs, Nugent, 34, said "I got lucky and chose to put a tent in the back of a rent-a-car, borrow my dad's rifle and go up north and do a little deer hunting."

Since his wife was killed in a car accident last year, he has been taking care of their two children.

Nugent likes to tell of the time his 9-year-old daughter bagged a nine-point buck.

Grand Jury Winds Up Belushi Inquiry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A grand jury concluded its hearings into the death of comedian John Belushi without handing down an immediate indictment.

"The decision has been made not to seek an indictment today," grand jury foreman Joe Healy said Thursday.

Healy said prosecutors would review evidence taken over the past six months and return to the grand jury in a week or two with recommendations on how to proceed. The grand jury was impaneled last September.

"We'll review it," he said of the evidence. "We'll decide what to do."

Belushi, the star of TV's "Saturday Night Live" and such films as "Animal House," "The Blues Brothers" and "Neighbors" was found dead of a drug overdose in a Chateau Marmont Hotel bungalow in Hollywood on March 5, 1982.

Deputy District Attorney Michael Montagna on Thursday denied an earlier news report that he would seek a drug or murder indictment against Cathy Evelyn Smith, Toronto, a sometime rock singer who was believed to have been the last to see Belushi alive.

"If anything like that was picked up, it was taken completely out of context," Montagna said. He said an indictment was only a "possibility" at this point.

Ms. Smith's Toronto attorney, Milton Davis, reiterated his opinion Thursday that grand jurors had heard no evidence strong enough to indict his client, that Belushi's death had already been ruled accidental and that he would oppose any extradition attempt.

"I have no doubt that there is not any evidence that showed Ms. Smith had anything to do with John Belushi's death," Davis said.

Ms. Smith refused an invitation to appear before the grand jury but has not been subpoenaed. The inquiry was at least partially triggered by comments attributed to her in an interview with the National Enquirer, prosecutors have said.

Culinary Creativity Is Thwarted On All Sides

By GAIL MICHAELS

As much as I like to eat, I am rarely inspired to great heights of culinary creativity. In a fit of optimism I did break down once and buy a Julia Child cookbook, but as of yet I haven't been able to translate it.

But I'm afraid that even an in-depth knowledge of gourmet terminology would do little to upgrade my cooking. For some reason both of my children feel it necessary to attach themselves to me like fungi the moment I enter the kitchen. At the very least, Zachary swings from the refrigerator door while Meg tatters the floor with two legs of a kitchen chair. This is not, in other words, an atmosphere conducive to the perfect soufflé.

Besides, when I do attempt some culinary masterpiece, the most positive response I usually get is, "Would you mind telling us what this is, or do we taste it first and then guess?"

The other evening, for instance, in a sudden fit of dementia I prepared curried shrimp au gratin on a bed of spinach noodles. Confident that I had created a nutritious, tasty and colorful crowd-pleaser, I served it with pride to my family.

"Green noodles?" was the resounding cry.

"What did you do to them to make them this color?" Meg asked in a low voice.

"It's a family secret."

"Well, we're family so you should tell us."

"I bought them that way."

"On purpose?" Phillip asked.

I gave him a nasty glance. "They're spinach noodles."

Meg recoiled as if from a snake, and Zachary crossed his arms. "I hate noogles."

I found their comments rather irritating. "This family is so much fun to cook for," I ranted. "Meg likes steak, hamburger and milk. Zachary likes chicken, bananas, olives and apple juice. Hardly a balanced diet."

Meg raised her hand. "You mentioned three of the four basic food groups."

"You're going to be a well-informed invalid if you keep this up. And you," I pointed at Phillip, "you just encourage them."

He quickly shoved a forkful into his mouth. "It's delicious, kids. Try it."

Meg gingerly filled one prong of her fork with sauce. "I have a feeling I'm not going to like this."

"I hate it," Zachary said. We finally reached a compromise. I ordered Meg to eat hers, and I traded Zachary an olive from my salad for every bite of shrimp he took.

Within 20 minutes after the meal was over, his knees and elbows started swelling, and he broke out in hives. Frantic, I called his doctor. Between us we decided that he must have an allergic reaction to the shrimp. Or the curry. Or the au gratin. Then again, it could have been the noodles.

"Oh, well," I told Zachary. "I guess the next time the rest of us have that dish, you'll get a hot dog."

Meg turned almost noodle green with envy. "He sure has all the luck. I wish I had allergies, too."

They Wear Gowns For PTA Pageant

HURRICANE, W.Va. (AP) — They're being called "Tootsies" or "Hurricane Honeys," but the mayor, police chief and a school principal — all men — are donning evening gowns to raise money for a school PTA.

It is the "Mz. Hurricane Pageant," and money raised in the Saturday "beauty" pageant will benefit Hurricane Middle School.

PTA president Tawney Mangus explained the organization has always had rather "mundane" fundraising activities, and wanted to add some life to this one.

"We're sort of in the Bible belt here, but I think the movie 'Tootsie' has sort of loosened everybody up," she said. "Everywhere I've gone this week, people are talking about it."

Mayor Raymond Peak, a 53-year-old schoolteacher, plans to wear pearls and a yellow Empire waist evening gown. He's entered in the pageant under the name "Raïmona."

The way it was explained to me four weeks ago was that the Hurricane Middle School was having a fundraiser and would I help?

Peak said, "I said yes. After that is when they told me what I would have to do."

Also taking part will be "Rachel," better known as Police Chief Dick Gillespie; "Danielle," who most folks call patrolman Dan Perry; and "Elana," otherwise known as Hurricane Middle School Principal Alan Messinger.

Local businesses are helping supply the male beauties with dresses, gowns and wigs.

Peak said he doesn't mind making the unusual public appearance at the school, where he teaches business courses.

"I always say, anything to help students. I've been teaching for 33 years so I've kept a relatively young outlook on life," the mayor said as he adjusted his long, blonde wig. "I've played Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny before, but this is a first for me."

Toxic Agent In Discharge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A highly toxic discharge into a small tributary of the Henry River was found near Hickory last month, state officials said Thursday.

Wastewater discharged by Neuville Mobile Sox Inc. of Burke County was toxic to test organisms in concentrations of less than 3 percent, officials of the state Division of Environmental Management told the state Environmental Management Commission.

The division ordered the plant to stop discharging on Feb. 7, and the staff began an investigation to identify the toxic agent.

The company prepared socks by washing them in a mixture of chemicals, pressing them and packaging them. The toxic agent was a chemical used to treat the socks to prevent foot odor.

In other actions Thursday, the commission:

- Granted Abbott Laboratories Inc. of Nash County permission to increase the temperature of a nearby stream up to 10 degrees centigrade above its normal temperature. The plant makes intravenous solutions and related medical equipment.
- Approved $3,983 in extra Environmental Protection Agency funding for Clarkton to evaluate new wastewater treatment alternatives involving swamp discharges.
- Granted the Orange Water and Sewer Authority the power to condemn land for the proposed 3 billion-gallon Cane Creek reservoir in Orange County.

FOCUS

The Graying of America

This weekend, delegates to the Conference of the National Council on the Aging plan to meet in Detroit to discuss networking, life enhancement, and economic independence for our 26.3 million elderly citizens. These topics are of vital interest to all Americans, because almost all of us can expect to join the ranks of the elderly someday. In fact, the share of older people in our society is growing rapidly. In 1900, only about 4 percent of the population was over 65. Today, about 12 percent of Americans are elderly. But, by the year 2010, the "post-war baby boom" babies will be ready for retirement, bringing the number of elderly Americans to more than 41 million.

DO YOU KNOW.— What is the average life expectancy for an American?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The largest religious group in Afghanistan is Islam.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: New arrangements in career matters makes it possible to do a better job at your regular routines. Let others know of your talents and special aptitudes. Think logically.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Find a better system for handling obligations you have assumed and become more successful. Make plans for the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take the treatments that will improve your appearance. Engage in favorite hobby with congenials. Use care in travel.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Improve conditions at home so that they are more to your liking. Contact close friends and make mutual plans.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make plans to surmount any obstacles in the path of success. Take no chances with your reputation.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Look for an ideal way to handle an important monetary matter. Show more devotion to loved one and get excellent response.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Improve your appearance and then go out socially and make a good impression on others. Stay within your budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make the changes that will bring harmony into your life. The evening can be very romantic with loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try a new attitude where a long-time friend is concerned and get better results in the future. Evening is fine for sociability.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your environment and make some improvements. Plan how to make family members happier.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Progress now is best achieved by making necessary changes and working in a methodical manner. Guard your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sure to keep any promises you have made to others. Strive for increased happiness. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Come to a better accord with one who opposed you in the past. The evening is fine for studying and becoming more informed.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have the ability to whittle down big ideas to a workable level and make a success out of them. Teach to complete whatever has one been started. Be sure to give ethical and religious training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — ATTILA TOOK FUR AND FLOWERS TO WIFE; 'THANKS, HUN,' SHE SAID.
Today's Cryptiquip clue: J equals R.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

You can never be too careful when playing a hand. This hand from a recent tournament shows what can happen if you get careless.

South considered himself too strong for a simple overcall, so he started with a takeout double and then introduced his suit at his next turn. We admire the way North took all the strain off his partner by jumping to four spades instead of making pusillanimous raise to three spades.

It was obvious that West's lead of the two of diamonds was a singleton. Some declarers won in dummy and led a trump. East took the ace and returned the queen of diamonds, and West ruffed away declarer's king. Since declarer still had a loser in each minor suit, that meant down one.

Some declarers did slightly better technically, but with the same outcome. To protect against having the king of diamonds ruffed, they won the first trick in hand and led the king of spades. East won the ace performance,

Jail To Impose Weekend Rates

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Weekend inmates at Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center may soon be asked to pick up the tab for their time behind bars under a cost-cutting program.

"People must pay for the damage they do," said Joseph Bort, a member of the Alameda County Board of Supervisors, which tentatively approved the idea Tuesday and scheduled a final vote next week.

Offenders would be billed on the basis of their ability to pay.

The weekend rate for room and board would be $35 a day, plus a $25 booking fee.

There would be a maximum $100 charge for a public defender, covering up to three court appearances, and probation supervision would cost $25 a month.

The board said it hopes to recover $175,000 a year from the charges.

Seven Named To New Committee

Seven Pitt County residents have been appointed to the newly formed Citizens Concerned for Higher Education Committee.

They are Dr. Elliott Dixon of Ayden; Mrs. Brinn Cheatham, Dr. Howard G. Dawkins Jr., Richard R. Gammon and E. Hoover Taft Jr., all of Greenville, and Jim Black and Thomas McCaskill, both of Winterville.

This is a statewide committee of 400 that will work with the General Assembly to assure that the best possible system of higher education is maintained in North Carolina. Members are selected by colleges and universities across the state.

The committee's priority for the current legislative session is to increase the amount of state aid provided to the 24,000 North Carolina students attending the state's 38 independent colleges and universities. Currently, the state grants $850 for each state resident attending an independent institution. The General Assembly has been asked to raise that allocation to $1,025 for 1983-84 and to $1,200 for 1984-85.

North Carolina taxpayers now provide $2,450 for every out-of-state undergraduate in a public university, committee co-chairman David Britt said.

C.E. Boulware, also a co-chairman, said, "If the 24,000 young North Carolinians in independent institutions enrolled in public universities, it would cost the state an additional $80 million per year, not including new construction needs.

There's Been A Big Change In The Neighborhood.

We're not just changing our business cards; we're changing what we can do for you.

Maybe it's a new name in your neighborhood. Maybe not. But, either way, now that Bank of North Carolina has become a part of NCNB, some things are really going to change.

Then again, a lot of things will be staying the same.

Same Good People; Some Better Services.

The same people who've made Bank of North Carolina the bank for so many people, will still be working for you.

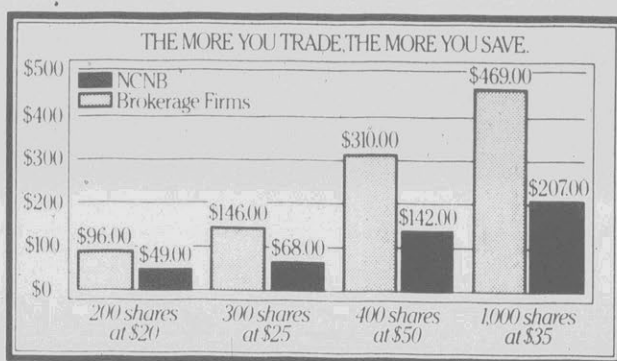

But they'll have a lot more services to offer you.

For $2,500, you can take your choice of NCNB Money Market Accounts, Investment or Checking. Both are insured up to $100,000 by the FDIC.

When you make your own decisions on trading stocks and bonds, you can save up to 50%, or even more, on commissions when you use our new Discount Brokerage Service.

You get the convenience of doing your banking at over 240 neighborhood offices.

More Exclusives At The Newest NCNB.

With NCNB 24, you can get 24 hour banking at over 70 locations. And, in April, you can use your card all over the country.

You can get flexibility with NCNB Checkmate, the plastic check that's good at over 2 1/2 million places.

From IRA's to savings certificates, we can help you make the most of the money you make.

The Only One In The Neighborhood.

Finally, we can now offer you what many people call "the best banking service in North Carolina, maybe anywhere."

With NCNB DeLuxe Banking[®], you can now get all the everyday banking services you're likely to need at special rates, or at no charge.

So, if you're banking with us now, things will be even better. If you're not, this could be a very good time to start.

So come see us. Soon.

Find out what's new at the newest name in the neighborhood.
