OPEC Near Accord On Prices, Cutback

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The oil minister of Venezuela, a key hold-out in OPEC's efforts to reach an agreement on price cuts and production quotas, said today that only "minor details" remained to be worked out among cartel members.

The 13 OPEC ministers held a 12th round of discussions at a London hotel in a bid to forestall an outright price war and save the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries from collapse.

The ministers reportedly have agreed in principle on a $5 per-barrel price cut from OPEC's official posted price of $34, but were deadlocked on the critical issue of how to divide up production among the cartel members.

Sunday night, OPEC sources said Venezuelan agreement on quotas was the last hurdle to ending the London talks successfully.

"The quota problem is almost solved. I have to make one more call," said Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said as he went into today's session. "There are some minor details still to be adjusted, but I hope to finalize. We are going to finish today."

Calderon Berti said he was in contact with his government overnight to receive the go-ahead for the latest OPEC proposal on Venezuela's output, but some further talking with cartel partners was needed.

"They are offering us a certain level, we are not happy with that, we made some consultations last night," said Calderon Berti. "I think their position and our position are getting closer."

Other oil ministers were optimistic.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, said as he arrived for the morning session that there was a "99 percent chance" of an agreement today.

In Jakarta, Indonesia, the state-owned Pertamina oil company announced that if the $5 cut were ratified by OPEC, it would put the decrease into effect retroactive to Feb. 23.

OPEC ministers have been meeting in London for nearly two weeks to reach an accord for lower prices and production. The once-powerful cartel, which controlled oil prices in the 1970s, has been plagued by factional feuds and competition for the world's shrinking oil market from non-OPEC producers such as Britain.

An OPEC price cut of $5 off the current $34 benchmark would probably only mean a couple of cents' savings at gasoline pumps, since two-thirds of the world's oil already is priced at between $29 and $30. Oil is selling at the unregulated spot market for $27.50.

Under the tentative agreement reached late Sunday after 11 sessions, OPEC agreed to limit total production to 17.5 million barrels a day. Last December OPEC set a production ceiling of 18.5 million barrels a day but could not agree on country-by-country limits, and the ceiling has been ignored.

Deadlock On Middle East

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, trying to break the deadlock over withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon, looked to Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir today for an easing of Israel's demands.

Shamir, who planned to meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz again today, disappointed U.S. officials by giving no hint of flexibility during a 4½-hour meeting with Shultz on Sunday.

Shultz also met today with Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem. It is the first time Shultz has directly involved himself in the 10-week-old troop withdrawal talks.

A 30-minute midafternoon meeting with President Reagan at the White House today was added to Shamir's schedule. Salem was expected to visit with Reagan later in the week.

U.S. officials said they heard "nothing new" from Shamir on Sunday.

"They (Israel) made a presentation, and we had an exchange, but it was basically their presentation," said a senior U.S. official, who spoke on condition he wouldn't be identified.

Another U.S. official, who also insisted on anonymity, said if any new ideas develop from either the Israeli, Lebanese or American sides, they would emerge at today's meetings.

U.S. officials had hoped enough progress would be made to justify a trip by Shultz to the Middle East in late March or early April.

Shamir told reporters after his first meeting with Shultz that Israel still insists on "close cooperation" on security matters with Lebanon before Israeli troops will be withdrawn.

"It is clear to us that in the coming months — near future — the Lebanese government will not be able to control the security of its territory by its own forces," he said.

Contract Let

The Board of Transportation has awarded a contract to Barnhill Contracting Co. of Tarboro for the widening of N.C. 43 from the Falkland city limits to the N.C. 121 intersection.

Barnhill's $224,624 bid was the lowest received for the 2.2 mile long project, which includes widening the highway to 22 feet, and improvements to the N.C. 43-N.C. 222 intersection.

Work on the project is scheduled to start in April and is expected to be completed in October.

Commission To Give Report

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Commission on the Future will present its final report to Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. on Tuesday. UNC president William C. Friday, chairman of the commission, will make the presentation at 1 a.m. in McKimmon Center in Raleigh.

The commission was appointed by Gov. Hunt in 1981 to guide the NC 2000 project, the purpose of which is to involve North Carolinians in planning for the 21st century.

The commission concentrated on statewide issues, and local committees were formed in each county to address local concerns. A citizen survey was conducted with over 112,000 questionnaires returned, the most in any survey ever conducted in North Carolina.

The presentation Tuesday will be filmed by UNC Center for Public Television, and will be broadcast at 7:30 p.m. the same day over PBS stations (Locally, it will be seen over Channel 25, Greenville).

MEDICATION POISONED?

I have some medicine in my house that I think may have been poisoned. Recently I had in a bunch of visitors and when they left, there appeared to be something added to the bottle. I've very worried. I would like to pay for the service of a private lab to test this substance and find out if my suspicions are correct. Where can I find such a lab?

Hotline checked with a private lab on your behalf. They said they do mostly agricultural testing and cannot accomodate you. They provided better advice than we'd come up with, though. They suggested that you not try to handle this matter yourself. Instead, they suggested, turn it over to a law enforcement agency which will have the services of a publicly-funded crime lab.

Hoping To Undo Utilities Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts are mounting in Congress to roll back new government regulations that will allow utilities to begin charging wholesale customers for half their costs of building new power plants while construction is still underway.

Critics say the new rule would put the risk of building a new plant on the customers of a utility rather than the shareholders.

If state public utility commissions follow the federal lead, the change could raise retail rates $6 billion a year, according to electric distributors.

Federal Energy Regulatory Commission officials said Sunday that the effect of the new policy will be to allow the financing costs of new plants to be spread over the entire construction period. The utilities say this will improve their cash flow and lessen the impact of a sharp rate increase when the facility actually begins generating power.

"For example," FERC said in a fact sheet on the new regulation, "a company with $2 million invested in plant under construction would be allowed to file for rates that would include a return on up to $1 million of that investment."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, the ranking Democrat on the Senate energy supply and conservation subcommittee, said Sunday that he will introduce a bill either today or Tuesday to reverse the new rules approved by FERC last week.

"There's no question that I will put a bill in the hopper to try to undo that decision," Metzenbaum said.

Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and 65 co-sponsors have introduced a similar bill in the House aimed at limiting FERC's authority to allow utilities to include the cost of "construction work in progress" in their rates.

"This commission, which has allowed gas producers to gouge the consumers, is now granting electric utilities that same power," Harkin said.

Annual Testing Gets Underway

The annual testing schedule for students in grades one through nine in the Greenville City Schools got underway today with some practice tests scheduled and will be carried out through March and into April.

The schedule for testing of various grades, including the first day of practice tests or general instruction time are:

- Grade 1 — Today, 20 minutes practice test; Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 30 minutes test; Tuesday and Wednesday, March 22 and 23, 50 minutes test.
- Grade 2 — Today, 20 minutes practice test; Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 15, 16 and 17, 60 minutes test, and Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 22, 23 and 24, 60 minutes test.
- Grades 3, 4, 5 and 6 — Monday, March 21, 15 minutes practice test; Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 22,

CHARRED BOAT — The No Name, a commercial fishing boat, was one of seven boats destroyed by fire at the Hatteras Fishing Center Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Explosion, Fire Destroy Seven Boats At Marina

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — An explosion and fire at a Cape Hatteras marina destroyed seven fishing boats Sunday, but damages would have been more severe if residents weren't awakened to fight the blaze, officials said.

No injuries were reported in the explosion or fire, which ruined three commercial fishing boats and four sport fishing vessels moored to a pier at Hatteras Fishing Center Inc., a marina and campground.

Firefighters from Cape Hatteras, Frisco and Buxton helped Coast Guardsmen battle the fire for about an hour before bringing it under control. Damage was estimated at $1 million.

A New Bern teacher, identified as Willie Foster, was one of the first to report the blaze, as he ran to a neighbor's house in front of the fishing center.

"He said he heard a pop," said Patty Robinson, wife of ferry worker Lyle Robinson, who called local fire departments.

Lenwood Quidley, manager of the fishing center, said the fire's origin has not been determined, but a 30-gallon fuel tank exploded on the first boat that caught fire at about 2 a.m.

"I came down and saw about five boats on fire tied up to the pier," said Quidley in a telephone interview. "The fire was real bad, the flames were licking at the superstructure and there was flame inside the boats."

The fire spread from boat to boat, Quidley said, as he and other local residents raced to untie vessels moored to the pier and downwind from the flames. The boats drifted away from the fire to another area of the marina and nestled against a pier, he said.

Ropes holding two of the burning boats severed, and "the wind carried (the boats) out of the slip and down the center of the channel toward the other boats we had released," Quidley said. They were headed directly toward the marina fuel storage area where gasoline and diesel fuel are kept, he said.

Quidley said Coast Guard vessels stopped the drifting infernos about 75 feet from the 3,000 gallon marina fuel tanks. Coast Guardsmen threw an anchor onto one of the burning boats and pulled it away, while the other boat was pushed out of the danger area, he said.

The ruined boats, which burned to the water lines, were estimated at about $50,000 apiece, and many contained valuable electronic equipment and fishing gear.

An eighth boat received minor damage, mostly scorch marks.

The Coast Guard spent much of the morning stemming leaks from fuel tanks stored in the hulls of the burned boats. Crews also worked to contain and remove about 900 gallons of diesel fuel and gasoline which spilled into Pamlico Sound.

A Coast Guard Marine Safety officer from Norfolk, Va., was at the scene investigating. State Bureau of Investigation agents assisted local officials.

Torching, Trashing And Melee In 'Liberty City'

MIAMI (AP) — About 500 angry youths took to the streets of the Liberty City neighborhood during a four-hour melee, smashing windows, hurling bottles and beer cans and torching piles of trash after police shut down a noisy, open-air party, authorities said.

Three people were injured, 31 were arrested and a self-serve gasoline station was ransacked during the second disturbance in four months in a predominantly black neighborhood of Miami.

The incident started about 10 p.m. Sunday and was quelled four hours later in the low-income area, police said.

Angered partygoers smashed at least one police car windshield before spilling into Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard, Liberty City's main thoroughfare. A car windshield and rear window were bashed in and trash bins were set ablaze, authorities said.

The spree began after police officers, responding to complaints that "hoodlums" had filled the chilly, 55-degree air around African Square Park with thundering rhythm and blues, repeatedly told revelers to turn down their music, said Miami Police Information Officer Juan Santos.

"The last time (about 10 p.m. EST) we went and told them to shut it down," Santos said of the street party, a common happening in the rundown neighborhood. "They agreed, and as we were leaving, people started throwing rocks and bottles. They were not provoked."

Sporadic gunfire also was reported in the area, and Santos said he heard at least a dozen shots — "pip-pip-pip, like automatic weapons or something." But no gunshot wounds were reported.

Three people were treated for lacerations "probably suffered from rock-and-bottle throwing, flying glass etc.," said Jackson Memorial Hospital Night Administrator Bruce Fresko. Their wounds were not serious, however, and all were released from Jackson's emergency room by 3 a.m., Fesko said.

As crowds moved through Liberty City streets, leaving a trail of emptied beer cans, rocks and glass shards behind them, police massed a 90-man "field force" in a shopping center parking lot, and blocked a 30-block area of northwest Miami to traffic.

Helmeted officers carrying riot sticks made sallies into the area, arresting at least 31 people on charges ranging from looting to loitering and prowling. "We took people 18, 20 years old — there was even one I saw who must have been 30," Santos said.

At a self-service gasoline station, "about 100" people gathered and shattered the cashier's window, Santos said. Hoses on two pumps were thrown on the ground, and police fired tear-gas.

Two Requests To Be Discussed

Two rezoning requests are among the agenda items scheduled for consideration by the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission at Tuesday's 7:30 p.m. meeting at city hall.

The board will discuss a request submitted by residents of the West Gum Road community to rezone 8.8 acres, located east of and adjoining North Memorial Drive, north of Gum Road, and west of Fred Webb Elevator Inc., from R-6 (residential) and unoffensive industry to R-6-mobile home.

The board will also consider a request sponsored by the city to rezone approximately 19.08 acres, located between Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and North Pitt Street, from Moore Street northward to the city limit line, from highway commercial to downtown commercial fringe.

Other business includes: annexation petitions for section one and two of Greenridge subdivision and for Colonial Mobile Home Park; preliminary plats of University Medical Park Apartments at the end of Seales Place in University Medical Park, Kings Arms Apartments on the east side of Charles Boulevard just north of its intersection with 14th Street, and block C, lots one, two and three of Shenandoah on the west side of Shiloh Drive in Shenandoah-Tucker Farms development;

Final plat of section one-revised of Wedgewood in the southeast quadrant of the intersection of Red Banks Road and Arlington Boulevard; and discussion regarding a planning conference April 14-15 at the Institute of Government.

Rape Trauma Syndrome: Doctors Detail Recovery

By SHARON RUTENBERG
CHICAGO (UPI) — Rape, the fastest-growing violent crime, can happen to one of every six women and can lead to a disorder called rape stress syndrome, doctors say.

"How the rape victim recovers from this can be greatly influenced by the medical care she receives after the rape," according to a recent article in the Journal of the American Medical Association. The authors are Drs. Catherine A. Martin and G. Richard Braen of the University of Kentucky College of Medicine and Mary Cabel Warfield of the Lexington, Ky., Rape Crisis Center.

"Because of the accompanying severe emotional and physical trauma, the physician should be able to be sensitive to the psychological needs of the rape victim," the article says.

"If you don't treat them supportively, you're re-traumatizing them," Dr. Martin added in an interview. "You're putting them through the same thing they've just been through."

"Women are vulnerable and it's not something that happens because you have done something wrong. So we're all vulnerable."

The first phase of rape trauma syndrome begins with fear and anger and lasts from a few days to a few weeks.

"They're afraid they're going to be killed and then they become angry they've been abused," Dr. Martin said.

A victim may immediately feel a wide range of emotions, including shock, disbelief and anxiety — although she may appear composed or subdued.

"A victim's outward behavior may not reflect the degree or nature of the emotional crisis she is experiencing," the authors wrote.

Rape victims want reassurance about their physical condition from emergency room physicians. They also need emotional support and control.

"Physicians should involve the rape survivor in the examination process, talk to her about the procedures, allow her as much control as possible over what is done to her and listen to her if she wishes to talk about the assault," the authors added.

Rushing a victim through an examination "may represent forcefulness and may remind her of the rape," they added.

"Physicians should begin by introducing themselves, by expressing regrets that the patient has been assaulted, and by explaining what will be done. The patient should be reassured that she is safe. She should not be left alone if at all possible."

"The victim should be asked if she has ever had a pelvic examination. A surprising number of rape victims have not."

Women often omit embarrassing details, the article said.

"Victims may have been subjected to a variety of sexual acts, since the rapist's goal may be to humiliate and degrade. The rape survivor's humiliation can be lessened if the physician prefaces each question with a statement to the effect that these are not uncommon acts by rapists," it continued.

The authors say a doctor can aid recovery by telling the victim to expect common symptoms of fatigue, tension headaches, exaggerated startle reaction, generalized soreness and vaginal irritation and discharge.

"Many victims have sleep disturbances, including difficulty falling asleep, awakening and not being able to go back to sleep, screaming during sleep, and, if the victim was attacked during sleep, awakening at the time of the attack... Many also have nightmares."

A rape victim may complain of decreased appetite, food not tasting right, nausea when thinking of the assault, or abdominal pain. She experiences shame, mood swings and irritability.

Symbols of the event, such as seeing a similar car or a man who looks like the rapist, may evoke a strong emotional reaction.

"The victim may try to block the thought of the assault, but is unable to. She also tries to undo what has happened by explaining how she could have escaped, but eventually realizes she might have been killed if she hadn't done what the assailant demanded."

In the next phase, the victim tries to deny and suppress the rape and return to normal activities. She goes through a long-term reorganization process that could last months or years.

"The victim may have chronic vaginal problems or changes in menstruation. Depression may develop. The victim begins to think more about the rape, and functioning begins to deteriorate. Nightmares continue through the long-term process.

"The victim dreams that she is in the same situation and tries to escape but fails. As time progresses, the victim may see herself killing someone, as if to master the situation."

The most frequent complication is an aversion to sexual activity, the article said. Women who do not develop an aversion may find less pleasure in sexual intimacy or have pain during intercourse.

"There is increased difficulty of recovering feelings of safety for women who were raped in areas they previously considered safe — work and home, especially if they were awakened from sleep and raped."

Victims may resume only a minimal level of functioning — "afraid to go out, afraid to socialize," Dr. Martin said.

They may stay home and go out only with friends, change telephone numbers or even residences. They frequently turn to their families for support.

Relatives and friends, hospital personnel, police officers and juries find it easier to believe and support a rape victim if she has physical injuries and if the assailant was a stranger.

"Despite the recent shift away from thinking of rape as a sexual experience to realizing that it is a violent assault, there still is a tendency to see the victim as responsible," the article said.

Sticky Problem Handled In Letter Form

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please, please print this letter. You are my last hope.

"Dear Mom: Although you are my mother-in-law, I show you the same consideration and respect I show my own mother, and I wish you would do the same for me. Your visits have become intolerable.

"When you come to my home, you stuff so much candy and cookies into my children, they become hyperactive. I don't give them sweets — it makes them wild and crazy.

"At bedtime, you say (to me), 'Oh, let them stay up a while longer' — making me look like the mean mother. You toss them around and get them so excited at bedtime it takes hours for them to settle down and go to sleep. Then you go home, leaving me to deal with hard-to-handle children.

"I've tried to talk to you about it, but you turn a deaf ear. I've tried to talk to your son about it, but he doesn't want to take sides against his mother.

"So here's the final word, Mom. You are not to upset the children's sleeping schedules or their eating regulations. If you insist on bringing them candy and cookies against my wishes, I can't stop you, but you will be getting their doctor and dentist bills. — Your Daughter-in-Law"

Gee, thanks Abby, I feel better already. Any suggestions on how to handle this?

FED UP IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR FED UP: Between us, I think we've handled this sticky situation as diplomatically as it can be handled.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a traveling man who's on the road five days a week. I have a pretty young wife (my second) whom I've always trusted until last Friday night when I came home, put on my bathrobe and found a well-used pipe in the pocket!

I don't smoke a pipe. Never have. And my wife has never smoked anything. She claims she has never seen that pipe before and doesn't know how it got there.

OK, so she's not admitting to anything, but the next day when I went to get the pipe, it wasn't where I had put it! It just plain disappeared. I searched the apartment but it was nowhere to be found.

My wife claims she doesn't know what happened to it. We are the only two people in this apartment.

From what I've told you, what conclusions would you draw? No names, please. My wife calls me . . .

PAPA BEAR

DEAR PAPA BEAR: It's just a wild guess, but I think somebody's been sleeping in your bed. Pity, the evidence went up in smoke.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 51-year-old advertising man who spends half his life on the telephone.

In the last two or three years, I find that when I identify myself to young women on the phone, they immediately begin calling me by my first name. I don't know their names and can't find out without making a specific request. These are the girls who want to be called "women," who resent being called "Miss," and who object to undue familiarity from male colleagues on the job.

Call me "Mister," OK? I'll call you "Ms." I promise not to pinch you or tell off-color jokes. You get my messages right. Deal?

'VALERIE' DOLL...can be made from fabric, yarn and stuffing that you have on hand at home. The pattern includes doll, dress and nightgown.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

"Valerie" is a charmer, an exclusive design for you to make to delight your favorite youngster. Just order the pattern for doll, dress and nightgown and use fabric, yarn and stuffing you might have on hand. For those of you who plan ahead, this would be a sure winner at any charity bazaar!

To obtain the pattern for making "Valerie" with dress and nightgown, send your request for Pattern No. QL-1383 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or, you may order Kit No. QK-1383 by sending a check or money order for $11.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes pattern, all necessary fabric, yarn, lace, felt, elastic and polyfil stuffing.

With the ever increasing interest in quilting and country crafts, I am not surprised to find a number of new books on these topics hitting the market.

Marriage Announced

The wedding ceremony of Lois Ann Stepps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt Tripp of Route 1, Grimesland, and Gerald Wayne Creech, son of Mr. and Mrs. Smith Creech of Greenville, took place Feb. 28. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Kenneth Emanuel in the Tarboro Emanuel Holiness Church.

The bride was given in marriage by Allan Riggs.

The couple will live on Route 1, Greenville.

One of the most exciting I have seen is Virginia's Avery's "Quilts to Wear" ($22.50 in hardcover), published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 507 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

In this intriguing book, the author shows you how to adapt commercial sewing patterns and create exotic designer-quality quilted garments. The beautiful color illustrations will make your fingers itch to stitch!

In some cases, Avery has combined traditional American quilt patterns with color and shapings from other cultures with smashing results. For example, there is a long Tibetan coat in dazzling polished cottons with diamonds and rectangles of the old familiar "Log Cabin" quilt pattern.

There is an evening pants, jacket and blouse ensemble of hand-dyed silk in purple, blue and white, with the cleanest and purest of lines, that would sell for hundreds of dollars if it could be found. A "Mariner's Compass" cape is pieced in triangles from 80 different cotton prints and several shades of Ultrasuede. A "Rainbow and Roses" vest is applied and quilted on a white background with a machine zigzag stitch.

Among other things, the author takes you from color coordination and fabric selection through instructions on the various types of quilting by hand and machine and assembling of the various garment pieces.

Another new book, which I now treasure, was a disappointment when it first arrived. I had ordered "The Quilt Engagement Calendar Treasury," by Cyril I. Nelson and Carter Houck, published by E.P. Dutton, 2 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016. I expected a calendar that could be used for a gift.

When it arrived, I saw that it was not a calendar at all, but a large softcover book filled with 185 color illustrations of magnificent quilts, with a section on patterns and instructions for making many of them. I have found it such an inspirational design source that I must admit I kept it for myself and found another gift for my friend.

You may be surprised when I tell you that, at the present time, I am not much of a quilter myself — mainly because of lack of time and so many other craft projects to keep me busy.

I, however, have been inspired to recreate some of the quilt designs in needlepoint — many of which you will be seeing in the coming months.

For those of you who are avid quilters, this book should be even more exciting and rewarding.

Duplicate Winners

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Webb were first place winners in the North-South duplicate game played Saturday afternoon at Planters Bank. Their game percentage was 625.

Others placing were: Mr. and Mrs. Andrew de-Sherbinin, second; Lee Johnson and Graham Lane, third; Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. Lacy Harrell, fourth.

East-West: Mrs. Beulah Eagles and Dave Proctor, first with 585 percent; Mrs. C.F. Galloway and Mrs. C.D. Elks, second; Mrs. Clifton Toler and Mrs. John Tayloe, third; Mrs. William McConnell and Lewis Newsome, fourth.

Unit tournament winners Wednesday afternoon at Planters Bank were: Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. E.J. Poindexter, first with 636 percent; Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Mrs. Barry Powers, second; Mrs. William Parvin and Forest Gray, third; Lee Johnson and Lee Hastings, fourth; Mrs. Beulah Eagles and Emma B. Warren, fifth; Mrs. Sol Schechter and Mrs. Max Chused, sixth.

Wednesday morning winners included: Mrs. Sidney Skinner and Mrs. Stuart Page, first with 611 percent; tied for second were Mrs. J.N. Le Conte and Mrs. C.D. Elks with Mrs. Charles Mitchell and Mrs. C.F. Galloway.

Club tournaments will be held Wednesday morning and afternoon and Saturday afternoon.

Couple Has 50th Anniversary

A reception honoring Mr. and Mrs. Preston L. Fields Sr. of Greenville on their 50th wedding anniversary was given Sunday afternoon at the Belvoir Free Will Baptist Church fellowship building.

Hosts and hostesses were their children, Mr. and Mrs. Preston L. Fields Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. James E. Pollard.

Guests were greeted by Sherry Grant, their granddaughter, and introduced to the receiving line including the honorees, their children and grandchildren.

Mrs. Fields wore a navy linen suit complemented by a corsage of yellow roses.

Guests were directed to the refreshment tables by Kimberly Grant, great-granddaughter, and Julie Fields, granddaughter of the couple. The three-tiered wedding cake was served by their niece, Linda Fulghum of Williamsburg, Va. Sue Smith of Greenville, also a niece, poured punch.

The refreshment table, covered with a white lace cloth, was centered with a silver wine cooler filled with yellow chrysanthemums, fuji mums, carnations and daisy pom poms interspersed with white baby's breath. Two triple silver candelabra flanked the centerpiece.

Mr. and Mrs. Fields have five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Assisting in serving were Pat Pollard, Betsy Harris and Barbara W. Pollard.

A Misguided Voice

It seems like shades of yesteryear on Capitol Hill. But now there is an exception.

Wisconsin's anti-tobacco congressman, Thomas Petri, has filed a new bill that would eliminate the tobacco support program. This time there are other voices added to those of the diehard anti-tobacco forces — voices of Tar Heel farmers who say they've been wronged by a program that has made it possible for them to raise the complaints they're now voicing.

One of those voices is that of a Pitt County man, Howard D. Moye Jr., who at one time had a rather extensive farming operation in the Farmville area. As executive vice president of the fledgling United Tobacco Growers Association, Moye is attacking the existing tobacco program as being a "feudalistic" means of certain bankruptcy.

His reasoning is unfounded. For his one voice there are hundreds, probably thousands, in the six states in which flue-cured tobacco is produced that look on the quota-acreage system and the price support program as their salvation.

Moye's complaint and that of others in the growers association apparently is based primarily on the requirement that they lease additional quota if they want to expand.

The concept is not unique to tobacco. Dairymen in many states have marketing orders, or quotas, that control their production. The exception there is that the order varies from one marketing period to the next. In tobacco, the order — or quota — is permanently assigned but can be transferred.

Last year Congress moved, with the blessings of just about everyone, to correct one longstanding ill of the tobacco program — non-farmer control of quota. Ownership of quota by non-farm interests was outlawed, and the permanent sale of quota was permitted.

As tobacco specialists pointed out at a meeting in Myrtle Beach this week, modifications are still needed on the "new" tobacco program — but the program itself needs to remain intact.

Moye says the quota system should be abolished to let supply and demand take over. In reality, he is saying do away with the lease and transfer system and give me all the quota I want. The price support program, of necessity, would be abolished as there is no way a grow-all-you-want tobacco crop can be supported at the market.

Moye says small farmers are going bankrupt because they have to lease tobacco quota. There is no foundation for the statement.

One, small farmers aren't leasing the quota; it's the guy who wants to get bigger. Two, crop quality and foreign competition have had as much to do with low farm income as anything. And, three, unrealistically high price support levels have made it virtually impossible for domestic tobacco to compete with imports.

But to do away with the price support program and the quota-acreage system in their entirety? It would be doomsday.

Farm credit would dry up instantly when that guaranteed tobacco income is gone. Equipment sales would be on a cash-only basis, and at least a substantial deposit would be a certainty on such materials as fertilizer and chemicals. And all of that is on top of what the vast majority of growers believe would be a glutted market.

Then you'd have bankruptcies for sure.

Thoughts Come Forth

Newly revealed Harry S. Truman letters tell us his first impression of Winston Churchill was that he was "windy."

But Truman liked the World War II prime minister of Great Britain. "He knew his English language ..." was the late president's impression.

Truman found Stalin straightforward: "Knows what he wants and will compromise when he can't get it."

He saw Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as a "nice fellow and a good man" in 1945 even though relations cooled between the two leaders after Eisenhower was elected president in 1952.

The letters have come to light after all the leaders are dead ... and the late president's deepest personal thoughts now say what he could not have dared said publicly when he was in office.

WASHINGTON — Fifteen years ago this week, in the aftermath of the Tet offensive, newly-appointed Defense Secretary Clark Clifford began reviewing America's involvement in Vietnam.

"I first asked the Joint Chiefs of Staff how much more money they thought we'd have to spend to bring this matter to a conclusion," Clifford recalled in an interview. "I then asked if they'd noticed any change in the will of the enemy to carry out their struggle and how much time it would take to convince the enemy to capitulate ... no one had any answers."

Today, the United States finds itself at the crossroads of another military adventure — this time in El Salvador. But there seems to be at least one distressing difference: No one in Ronald Reagan's Cabinet is asking the kinds of questions that Clifford asked. Instead, the administration is making an all-out effort to win $60 million in "emergency" military aid and more "advisers" for the embattled Salvadoran government.

Luckily, questioners abound on both sides of the aisle in Congress. One of them, Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-Conn.), doubts that a country burdened with continuing atrocities against humanity, a Dunaway told Tinker and me the other day that the bank was going to foreclose on his house because he was unemployed and could not make his payments. He asked us if we had any ideas.

Tinker said he would go down to the bank with him and see if he could help him out. I tagged along to give Dunaway moral support.

"We're here today," Tinker told the vice president, "to restructure Dunaway's loan."

"And what exactly does that mean?" the VP asked.

"Dunaway is not able to pay on his note, and therefore we want to postpone his payments until he gets a job."

"We don't do that."

"The heck you don't," Tinker said. "You people are restructuring loans all the time. You do it with Poland every year."

"Poland's a country. Mr. Dunaway is an individual."

"You're doing it for Pan American Airways."

"Pan American Airways is a company."

"Why isn't Mr. Dunaway entitled to the same treatment you give Poland and Pan Am?"

"We can't foreclose on Poland. It would start a panic in world banking circles. And we have to give Pan American a chance, or we'll never see our money again."

"How much does Poland owe You?"

"Somewhere in the area of a billion dollars."

"Well, Mr. Dunaway only owes you $50,000, and you have a better chance of getting that back from him than you have of getting your billion dollars from Poland."

"You're obviously ignorant as to the way banks operate. When someone owes us $50,000 we take his house. When someone owes us over a million we have to work something out to make it possible for him to pay us back."

"Then what you are saying is that Mr. Dunaway doesn't owe you enough money to get any respect?"

"Don't put words in my mouth. What I am saying is that we don't restructure $50,000 mortgage loans. It isn't worth our time to postpone the payments on them."

"Fair enough," Tinker said. "That's why we've come to see you. We're not here to pay back the $50,000. We're here to borrow another $950,000, so we can owe the bank an even million."

I was tugging on Tinker's sleeve nervously.

The VP said, "You must be crazy to ask for a $950,000 loan. What kind of collateral can you put up?"

"We'll put up the same collateral Mexico and Brazil did to get their loans."

"What do you know about Mexico and Brazil?"

"I understand each of them owes you $500 million and you can't get your money back," Tinker said. "I have it on good authority you are going to loan them more money so they can pay the interest on the money they've already borrowed. Mr. Dunaway is willing to work out a similar arrangement. If you loan him the money to pay the interest on his mortgage, we won't tell anyone about Brazil and Mexico."

"You can't threaten me," the VP said.

"That's what you think. According to my information, you have $4 billion in loans outstanding to the OPEC countries. Now that the price of oil has plummeted, your OPEC clients have informed you they won't be able to meet their obligations. If word gets out that these loans could be in default, you'll have a run on your bank that will make the Penn Square debacle look like a church picnic."

"What do you want from me?" the VP said, wiping his forehead with his handkerchief.

"We want you to give Mr. Dunaway the same financial courtesy you extended to Poland. Allow him time to get a job, and don't foreclose on his house until he gets back on his feet."

"I can't make this decision myself. It will have to go to the Board of Directors."

"Well, don't take too long about it," Tinker snarled. "You're not dealing with some banana republic."

When we got out into the street Dunaway was white, and I was shaking. "You shouldn't have talked to him like that," I said. "He was really mad."

"Don't worry about it," Tinker replied. "That's the only language bankers understand."

"THE GOOD NEWS IS, THERE'S A SHIP COMING—THE BAD NEWS IS, IT'S THE E.P.A..."

John Cuniff

Forecasts Tell Of Doom Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — Here in the midst of what is being proclaimed as the long-awaited recovery some of the most amazing forecasts are being made about the U.S. and world economies and their various elements.

Like a "financial crash of unprecedented proportions ... to take place in April 1983," and $4,000-an-ounce gold and 30 percent inflation by 1985-1986.

There is money in such forecasts. Julian Snyder, who foresees the awful crash, accompanied by a flight from the dollar and a testing of the stock market's 1982 lows, charges $282 a year to subscribers of his International Moneyline Weekly.

The Aden sisters, who foresee that 30 percent inflation and 10-fold increase in the price of gold — and silver too — charge $312.50 for 15 editions of The Aden Analysis, which they write from their Costa Rica home.

The old-timers are still at it too. Howard Ruff recently reminded readers of his Financial Survival Report that six-months of dried food is still an important base from which to build one's future security.

Douglas Casey is still telling lecture audiences about the debacle to come and Jerome Smith's "The Coming Currency Collapse" is still in vogue, as is Harry Browne's best-seller "How To Profit From the Coming Devaluation."

There are at least two major reasons for the popularity of such mavericks.

—First, an enormous amount of political and economic uncertainty exists throughout the world.

The Middle East and Central America situations are high on the list of fears, but Europe's flirtation with socialism is close behind, as is the unrest in Central America.

The problem of uncollectible loans to underdeveloped nations remains unresolved, and so long as it does there exists the possibility of severe damage to the international monetary system.

Right at home, big federal budget deficits remind everyone that severe inflation can return. And energy prices, though falling, still produce worries.

—Secondly, it is difficult to overlook the fact that in the past some of the financial mavericks have been at least partially correct in their forecasts, no matter how scorned they be by the establishment institutions.

Many of them foretold the wild inflation that burned up the 1970s. They foresaw the big budget deficits, the collapse of stocks, the rise (and fall) in the prices of metals. Some anticipated the big recession of 1981-1982.

In a world of uncertainty they offered certainty, and they offered it with evangelical zeal. The coming collapse, they promised, would not only destroy the economically profligate but it would reward those who invested wisely.

The financial evangelists made many converts, and those converts became disciples who spread the word. They cautioned against accepting the word of establishment economists — in banks, corporations and government.

The establishment, they warned, said the traditional things and gave the the traditional assurances, their purpose being less to convey the truth than to protect the establishment.

The evangelists claimed to see the truth, and the record shows that some of them did see it ... at least part of it ... some of the time.

They have also been badly off the mark, especially in short-term financial matters, and some of them have cost their adherents dearly.

Thomas Holt, a high-priced stock market adviser, had to apologize in print for telling customers that stocks would fall sharply just as a bull market got under way.

Strength For Today

Thomas a Kempis was born in the year 1380 and died in 1471. At the age of 19 he entered an Augustinian monastery, where he remained for 70 years. One would scarcely imagine that as uneventful a life as his could in later life exert such influence.

In his 90th year there appeared a little devotional book written by Thomas entitled, "Of the Imitation of Christ." Since that time it has been reprinted in innumerable editions and until recently was considered, next to the Bible, to be the best-selling book the Western world had ever seen.

In it a great saint poured out an account of his long experience with God — how he found Him, how he had been sustained by Him, and how He gives hope to the faithful as they approach the end of life. Thousands of Christians have tried to relive this experience ever since.

All of which shows how God may take the most humble of his servants and use them to great ends.

Introducing Anti-Slavery Bill In General Assembly

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislation for improvements at migrant camps, including an anti-slavery bill, may be introduced in the Legislature this week, says the head of a committee examining migrant farmworkers' problems.

"The major point is that once and for all we get (an anti-slavery) statute on the books," said Rep. Malcolm Fulcher, D-Carteret. "I don't see how anybody in his right mind can oppose such a statute. I am a little bit embarrassed at even having to introduce such a bill."

At least 26,830 migrant workers harvested crops in 83 of North Carolina's 100 counties, according to the state Employment Security Commission.

Fulcher's Legislative Research Commission panel studied the migrant farmworkers' situation in North Carolina and reported to the General Assembly in January.

Under the committee's proposed anti-slavery bill, it would be a felony to hold workers against their will or hire crewleaders who are holding slaves, holding slaves. Convictions would carry a three- to five-year prison term.

Violators also could be fined between $100,000 and $1 million and could lose the right to do business in North Carolina.

Both the state and U.S. constitutions outlaw slavery, but there is no state criminal penalty for involuntary servitude.

"There is no statute to enforce the constitution. It's not worth the money for the paper it was written on," Fulcher said.

The penalty under federal law, however, has led to prosecutions of crewleaders in North Carolina.

The other bill proposed by the committee would set up an 11-member North Carolina Farmworker Commission under the Department of Administration. The governor would appoint four members and the House speaker and lieutenant governor would appoint two apiece.

Other commission members would be the secretary of the Department of Human Resources, the agriculture commissioner and the labor commissioner or their representatives.

The panel would try to better farmworkers' lives by coordinating and improving services offered them and proposing needed legislation.

"We need someone to speak for these people in a way that will catch the eye of the General Assembly," Fulcher said.

A rewrite of state health laws already introduced contains another of the committee's proposals allowing the state Board of Health to set sanitation standards for all migrant housing. Existing laws allow inspections only in camps with 10 or more workers.

The board would have broad authority to set standards for water, sewer, toilet, bathing, kitchen and dining facilities.

State officials have said that will increase the number of inspections each year from about 275 to 4,000.

The additional inspections would require appropriations of about $427,896 next year with most of the money going directly to the counties where the camps are located.

Fulcher said that next week he'll probably introduce the bill seeking the money to begin the additional inspections.

"We have got to do it," he said. "We don't have any alternative. If we don't do it ourselves, the federal courts will come in here and do it."

The committee decided against tackling two of the more controversial issues surrounding farmworkers — extending the minimum wage and workers' compensation laws to cover migrant farmworkers.

Fulcher said he didn't believe those changes would be welcomed by legislators "with the economy the way it is now." Farm representatives on the study commission heavily criticized the proposals.

Workers Compensation Hearings Are Planned

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state House committee is expected to begin hearings this week on workers' compensation — a subject that stirred up a hornet's nest when the Legislature tackled it two years ago.

Rep. William Clark, D-Cumberland, who introduced the 1981 bill to liberalize the state's workers' compensation law, says his latest proposals are a compromise. But industry leaders who lobbied successfully against his program last time say they're preparing for another fight.

Clark says a bill he introduced last week "is certainly more limited in scope than the other bill. I understand some of the legitimate concerns they (industry lobbyists) had and this is an honest attempt to deal with them while enabling workers to get the compensation to which they're entitled."

But Ivy Clayton, director of governmental relations for N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry, said that while the latest bill "doesn't contain all the objectionable features" of its predecessor, "the bottom line is it would be very costly ... so we oppose it."

Clark's bill has been sent to the House Labor and Manufacturing Committee, which is expected to begin debating it this week.

At issue are the standards by which a North Carolina worker is judged eligible for workers' compensation.

Critics of the existing law argue that, because of its strict interpretation by state courts, its purpose has been distorted to the point that a person can be compensated only for an on-the-job accident and not for an injury occurring under normal circumstances.

For example, if a truck driver falls and breaks a leg while unloading his rig, he would be eligible for compensation because he had an accident.

But if the same driver suffers a slipped disc while lifting a crate from the truck, he wouldn't be eligible because the injury occurred during the normal course of duty and there was no accident.

Clark says the law, which says a person is to be compensated for an "injury by accident," means that a person is eligible for any "accidental or unexpected injury."

He is supported by Arthur Larson, a Duke University professor emeritus and nationally recognized expert on workers' compensation. In 1981, Larson testified before the state House Insurance Committee as it considered Clark's first bill.

"Accidental qualities simply means unexpectedness can lie either in the cause or in the result," said Larson. "If you lift a 200-pound box and all of a sudden you have a cerebral hemorrhage or a hernia or a slipped disc ... there's your accidental injury."

Industry lobbyists, however, say the courts have been correct in ruling that compensation is due only when a person "slips, trips or falls" — or has a similar mishap.

Grumble Over New Quarters

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Joseph Johnson, D-Wake, formerly a state House member, says his predictions about the new legislative building in downtown Raleigh have come true.

Johnson, among those who opposed the new building proposed in 1978, said the move would be "the biggest boondoggle in the history of the state."

On the House floor, Johnson attempted to halt construction, but his amendment to postpone the project was tabled on a vote of 76-36.

"Time has proved me right," he said last week.

When the new $8.5 million new facility opened this year, 74 of the 170 state representatives' offices were moved into it. The Appropriations and Finance committees meet there, and most of the lawmakers whose offices are in the new building are either leaders on the two money committees or freshmen who had little choice in their room assignments.

The six-story office building also houses the offices of the lieutenant governor and executive branch agencies.

Before the move, a legislator only had to step out of the office to be in the thick of the action. But now to visit a colleague, attend a meeting or confer with a lobbyist, a lawmaker might have to change buildings.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, has introduced a resolution calling for a study of the way the General Assembly has situated itself since the new Legislative Office Building opened across the street from the old building. Miller's resolution appears to have almost total support.

"I think everybody wants back over here," said Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash, House speaker pro tempore, as he stood outside his office in the original Legislative Building.

"The facilities (in the new building) are great; the meeting room is great," said Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, chairman of the House Finance Committee. "But if the facilities didn't require me to be here, I'd be in the old building. It's the hub of activity for the General Assembly."

Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, added: "It's made life tougher. The closeness we had over there is mostly lost. I spent 16 years in the center of activity, sort of on Times Square, and I miss people passing by."

The new building resulted from complaints by lawmakers about having to share small offices with secretaries and about meeting in cramped committee rooms in which lobbyists and reporters literally hung over their shoulders.

Some House leaders now talking about moving legislators back to the old building — including House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison — voted to defeat Johnson's effort.

"It probably was a mistake to build about half that building for the General Assembly," said Ramsey.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

DOES PREGNANCY CAUSE TOOTH DECAY?

Once and for all, let's put the myth to rest. Pregnancy does NOT cause tooth decay. It is easy to see where certain factors may lead to this erroneous conclusion. During pregnancy, women tend to be busier preparing for the upcoming birth. Once the baby arrives, she is even busier. Instead of six months, it may be a year or more between visits. Obviously, more dental work will be discovered in a period of one or two years than in a six-month checkup.

Of course, women experience certain hormonal changes during pregnancy. These changes may produce a temporary condition of puffiness or bleeding of the gums. This condition is called "pregnancy gingivitis" and can be controlled by keeping the mouth "preventive clean" by the proper use of brushing and floss.

Equally false is the notion that baby robs the mother's teeth of calcium. The composition of adult teeth cannot be changed once fully formed. Babies may be responsible for stretch marks-but not dental decay.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Farm Exports' Decline Spread Over A Broad Base

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decline in U.S. farm exports is spread over a broad base and is not the result of a sales slump to just a few good foreign customers, a new analysis by the Agriculture Department shows.

In calendar 1982, the value of agricultural exports dropped 15 percent to $36.2 billion from a record $43.3 billion in 1981. Another decline is expected in 1983.

"Mounting surpluses of grains and other commodities in the United States and the relative strength of the dollar maintained a downward pressure on export prices," the department's Economic Research Service said.

"As a result, while volume (of shipments) fell 6 percent to 152 million metric tons, the overall price level fell an additional 9 percent, driving the total value of U.S. agricultural exports to its lowest point in three years."

Of the 20 top foreign markets for U.S. farm products, only five showed increases last year, the report said.

Those included: Soviet Union, $1.87 billion, up 11 percent from calendar 1981; Spain, $1.68 billion, up 7 percent; Taiwan, $1.15 billion, up 1 percent; Belgium-Luxembourg, $906 million, up 6 percent; and Saudi Arabia, $500 million, up 4 percent.

Shipments of farm products to Japan, the top foreign market, dropped 16 percent to less than $5.56 billion from $6.6 billion in 1981.

Other countries in the top 20 markets last year and their percentage reductions from 1981 included:

Netherlands, $3.09 billion, down 9 percent; Canada, $1.82 billion, down 12; South Korea, $1.58 billion, down 21; China, $1.5 billion, down 24; West Germany, $1.45 billion, down 18; Mexico, $1.16 billion, down 52; Italy, $989 million, down 21; United Kingdom, $915 million, down 8; Egypt, $803 million, down 20; Venezuela, $671 million, down 25; France, $625 million, down less than 1 percent; Portugal, $578 million, down 24; Brazil, $526 million, down 26; and Nigeria, $489 million, down 12.

Exports of feed grains were hit the hardest, dropping 13 percent in actual volume to 56.2 million metric tons. Their export value plunged 31 percent to $6.4 billion, the report said.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat. It is the unit commonly used in world commodity trade.

Feed grain exports dropped last year for a number of reasons, including Japan's decision to resume buying sorghum from Argentina and corn from South Africa.

Wheat exports fell 7 percent to 40.8 million tons in 1982, in part "because of increased competition from Canada and Argentina," the report said. The value was down 15 percent to $6.93 billion.

Exports of soybean and soybean oil, however, increased about 15 percent in volume last year and were valued at $8.1 billion, down only slightly from 1981, the report said.

Farm Scene

To obtain maximum yields and good profits growers should topdress their wheat with nitrogen now. Results from on-farm tests have shown that topdressing in March generally produces 5-12 bushels more than wheat topdressed in April. Topdressing in March is also better than in February because it allows less time for nitrogen to leach and delays buildup of diseases, particularly powdery mildew and glume blotch. Topdressing in March also will reduce risks of the wheat becoming too succulent, thus subject to cold damage from earlier applications of nitrogen. On heavy clay soils, the nitrogen can be applied in the fall, but generally requires more per acre and the wheat will be subject to the problems just discussed.

Wheat varieties respond differently to nitrogen. The current suggested rates for topdressing with nitrogen are 100 pounds per acre in the Coastal Plain. The same rate applies for oats but only 80 pounds are needed per acre for barley. The total amount of nitrogen required can be reduced where some small grains follow legumes such as soybeans and peanuts and where some nitrogen was applied at planting.

A split application of the total nitrogen requirement in February and March would be ideal or optimum for maximum yields. However, fields are often too wet during this time to support heavy equipment and many growers have a difficult time applying nitrogen once. In some instances nitrogen can be applied by an airplane.

There is little difference in efficiency of nitrogen sources. There are several sources of nitrogen available that will produce good yields if they are used correctly. Some of these are anhydrous ammonia, solid ammonium sulfate, solid ammonium nitrate, solid urea and different percentages of nitrogen solutions. Your choice should be based on costs and ease of application.

Annual Meet To Be Held

The annual meeting of Tobacco Associates, Inc., will be held Wednesday at 10 a.m. at the Mission Valley Inn in Raleigh, corner of Western Boulevard and Avent Ferry Road, near North Carolina State University.

R.J. Pritchard, director of leaf and production, British American Tobacco Company, will be the featured speaker along with Governor Jim Hunt.

Nine Appointed To Egg Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block has named nine new members and eight alternates to the American Egg Board, an 18-member panel which administers a producer-financed egg research and promotion program.

The program is financed by a levy of five cents per 30-dozen case of eggs marketed by commercial producers. The department's Agricultural Marketing Service oversees the program's operation and reviews its annual budget.

New members, who will serve two-year terms ending Dec. 31, 1984, and their alternates, by region, include:

North Atlantic — Maitland E. Richardson, Skowhegan, Maine, and alternate Emanuel Hirth, Manchester, Conn.; and David W. Baker, Middletown, Del., and alternate Norman J. Hecht, Walden, N.Y.

South Atlantic — John Hamby Jr., Durham, N.C., and alternate Ronald Scott Braswell, Nashville, N.C.; and Jack Linville, Zephyrhills, Fla., and alternate James R. Biggers, Winter Haven, Fla.

East North Central — Harry W. Herbruck Jr., Saranac, Mich.; and alternate John D. Weaver, Versailles, Ohio.

West North Central — Sheldon A. Vermes, Gaylord, Minn., and alternate Dale E. Booth, Sioux Falls, S.D.

South Central — Hillman S. Koen Jr., Hope, Ark., and alternate Franklin E. Black, Cecilia, Ky.; and Delvin R. Barret, Bryan, Texas, and alternate to be named later.

Western — Gerald C. Bookey, Seattle, Wash., and alternate Antonio Cobar-rubia, Turlock, Calif.

Acreage Is Out Of Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Complaints about high premiums and poor coverage prompted the nation's farmers to remove millions of acres from federal crop insurance coverage last year, congressional investigators say.

The General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress, reviewed operations of the Federal Crop Insurance Corp. at the request of Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., chairman of the House agriculture rural development subcommittee.

"We still have a lot of work ahead if we expect to reach the goal of an effective, practical program under which farmers can insure themselves against the uncertainties of weather," Jones said in a statement released Sunday.

Under the crop insurance program, farmers in nearly every county of the nation can obtain insurance on any of 28 crops that guarantees production at 50 percent, 65 percent or 75 percent of their average yield.

Effort For N.C. Landfill Ban Becoming A Power Struggle

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Efforts to enact a law limiting the kind of hazardous wastes in landfills have become a tug of war between administrators and legislators, say observers on both sides.

The competition focuses on who should make policy on hazardous waste disposal — lawmakers or the Waste Management Board which they created and its staff of experts.

"It should be clear to everybody that the basic issue now has gone beyond what we are going to put in landfills in this state," said Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe.

"Now we are at the central issue — is the legislative branch going to allow the people who enforce the regulations to write the regulations they are going to enforce?" he asked. "There is a whole lot of room for secret negotiations when people who write the rules administer those same rules."

Gov. Jim Hunt said last week that he believes some of the conflict stems from a lack of confidence in the board. He defended the board, saying it deserves the full confidence of the legislature.

"I hope the legislature will begin to see this group as one they created to serve them," Hunt said. "I would hope they do not feel a sort of rivalry with them. I think it will work out as we go along."

Mavretic, a former waste board member, has introduced a bill that would prohibit landfill disposal of certain kinds of hazardous wastes but would allow waste generators to seek permission to dispose of the wastes under certain circumstances to be determined by the Waste Management Board.

The bill was introduced early in the session but Mavretic has been unable to force a vote on the bill in the House Water and Air Resources Committee.

The board voted last week to support a law banning disposal of certain wastes in landfills and banning landfill disposal of other wastes in their most concentrated, toxic form. A bill to that effect is expected to be introduced soon.

Bill Holman, a conservationist on the waste board, said the competition to enact a law may be between Mavretic and the administration.

Holman acknowledged that Mavretic's pressure perhaps forced the administration to act more quickly on landfill proposals than it had planned.

"It is clear that the administration did not move until it got the message from the General Assembly," Holman said. "In the last four months the board has been very active, very vigorous. What happens when the critics go home?"

Mavretic says his bill is a proper way to address the problem because the General Assembly is charged with setting public policy — that landfills should be used only as a last resort and should not be used at all for some kinds of waste.

He said his bill would allow the Waste Management Board's staff to use its technical knowledge to determine which exceptions to make to the law.

"The waste board is supposed to be implementing public policy as clearly defined by the statutes," Mavretic said.

He said his bill was needed because the board was not doing its best to discourage waste generators from using landfills.

But a spokesman in the Department of Human Resources who asked not to be identified said the board needed time to put together a comprehensive package, while Mavretic refused to compromise on getting his bill passed.

The spokesman defended the board's actions, saying it wasn't until recently that board members had enough information to discuss landfill guidelines. That information included a survey of the waste generators in the state.

Developing A Computer Network To Help U.S.

Plant Scientists' Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says a computer network is being developed which could help plant scientists the way seed catalogs assist home gardeners.

More than 600,000 different plants will be catalogued in the new system — which is called GRIN for Germplasm Resources Information Network.

The USDA's Agricultural Research Service, which will operate the system, says that "as fast as computers can punch out the words, scientists will be able to find among thousands of plants the specific ones needed for research or for breeding programs to cope with agricultural problems like droughts, blights or other emergencies."

Terry B. Kinney Jr., head of the agency, said the computer network is being completed by a Fort Collins, Colo., laboratory and that the system is expected to go into operation this summer.

"One of the payoffs will be that scientists can search through plant species for specific beneficial traits and then go to work to put into farmers' hands plants that resist disease and other dangers," Kinney said.

Yellow nutsedge

Purple nutsedge

You're looking at the best reasons for using Vernam® in peanuts.

Nutsedge. It's your biggest weed problem. If you treat only yellow nutsedge, you could be overlooking another problem weed: purple nutsedge. But there is one herbicide that can control both varieties. Only one, Vernam.

And Vernam has a lot going for it besides nutsedge.

Like the 20 other grass and broadleaf weeds Vernam can control by itself. (In a tank mix with Balan,* it gets tough buffalograss as well.) Or, that you incorporate Vernam, so it gives you reliable coverage in wet weather or dry. With Vernam, you don't have to rely on precisely the right amount of rain to do the job.

You know nutsedge is a problem in your peanuts. And you know Vernam can get the job done. That's why peanut farmers like you have been relying on it for the past 15 years.

Follow label directions. Stauffer Chemical Company, Agricultural Chemical Division, Westport, CT 06881.

*Reg. T.M. of Plenco Products Co.

To control weeds in tobacco, you have to make two difficult decisions.

1. Should I treat for nutsedge? Nutsedge has been called the world's worst weed with good reason. Spreading by seed and by tuber, above ground and below, nutsedge can reduce tobacco yields, lower crop quality and increase harvesting costs. Even one tuber per square foot can escalate into a major infestation in just 20 weeks. So if you think you'll get nutsedge this year, you should seriously consider applying a preplant herbicide that can control it.

2. Should I treat preplant? If nutsedge might be a problem, the only time to get effective control is preplant. So you can decide to apply your herbicide early. But if you have problem weeds that don't include nutsedge, you could decide to apply your herbicide at layby or transplant instead. Not only will a single application last through the growing season, but you'll run less risk of injuring young plants.

And one easy one.

1. Which herbicide should I use? Choosing application time is the hard part. Choosing the herbicide is easy. Devrinol® selective herbicide. Preplant, Devrinol can be mixed with Tillam® to control both yellow and purple nutsedge, along with many other grasses and broadleaves. And if layby or transplant is your decision, Devrinol can save you up to 50% in herbicide costs. Devrinol may not remove the entire load of decision making from you, but it can help simplify it. Follow label directions. Stauffer Chemical Company, Agricultural Chemical Division, Westport, CT 06881.

Radio Guests Are Announced

City Manager Gail Meeks announced that the guests on the "City Hall Notes" radio program this week will be Gerald Crisp of the public works' right-of-way and traffic control division, and George Reel of Greenville Utilities Commission. Crisp will discuss the city's new traffic signalization and maintenance program and Reel will talk about customer services provided by GUC. The program is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

Life Underwriters Will Meet

The Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters will meet Thursday at 8 a.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant. William H. Simpson, current president of the Charlotte Chartered Life Underwriters Association, will be the guest speaker.

Appears In Musical Comedy

Tim Tingen, son of Revalene S. Tingen of Rt. 7, Greenville, recently appeared in the musical comedy, "Once Upon A Mattress," staged at Wittenberg University in Ohio where Tingen is a senior. Tingen played the part of the wizard in the satirical version of an old fairy tale of a princess so sensitive she couldn't sleep on 20 downy mattresses when one pea was placed underneath. A theater major, Tingen has been involved in a number of campus productions including "The Miser," and "Same Time Next Year." He has also been a disc jockey at WUSO, the campus radio station for two years.

Prison Conditions Meet Set

ECU News Bureau

An informational meeting about a recent report on prison conditions in North Carolina will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at East Carolina University. The event is sponsored by the Phoenix Organization, a community group concerned with criminal justice, and the ECU Division of Social Work and will be held in the Willis Building at the corner of First and Reade Streets. Featured speaker will be Judge Willis P. Whichard of the N.C. Court of Appeals, Durham, who chaired the Citizens Commission on Alternatives to Incarceration. He will discuss the commission's published report, compiled after a two-year study of prison overcrowding in North Carolina. According to a Phoenix spokesperson, the program's sponsors have received assistance from the Criminal Justice Task Force of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Raleigh.

Transportation Commission To Meet

The Public Transportation Commission will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the public works facility on Beatty Street.

Dr. Bratton Will Speak

Dr. Mary Jo Bratton, associate professor of history at East Carolina University, will speak to the Tar River Civitan Club during a meeting to be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church. Her subject will be the "Contribution of the Greenville Business Community to the Founding of East Carolina University." The public may attend. For further information, call Raye Troutman, 756-3871.

Accountants Will Meet

Wednesday at 6:15 p.m., the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants will hold its monthly meeting at the Beef Barn on St. Andrews Drive in Greenville. Gene McCreary, president of the Federal Land Bank Association of Washington, N.C., will be the speaker. His topic will be "Bond Financing."

The Greenville-based chapter is affiliated with the Carolinas Council of the National Association of Accountants. Anyone interested in the association is invited to call Paul Setliff at 752-4126 for further information.

Retired Federal Employees To Meet

Chapter 1530 of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees (NARFE) will meet Wednesday at noon at the Three Steers. Dr. Richard Williams will be speaking. All civil service retirees with at least five years of service and 50 years old are welcome.

Raleigh Date For Holder Dancers

RALEIGH — The Frank Holder Dance Company is presenting a performance at 8 p.m. Thursday in Stewart Theater, on the campus of N.C. State University. Among works to be presented on the program are "Shadows" and "Untitled." Tickets for the dance theater will be available at the door shortly prior to curtain time.

Kite-Flying Contest Scheduled

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor a kite-flying contest beginning at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Jaycee Park, 2000 Cedar Lane, next to Eastern Elementary School. All kites must be registered and ready to be flown by 10 a.m. Contestants compete according to their age. There will be categories for children age 5-12. Prizes will be given to the highest and best flown kites and to the best built and most attractive homemade kite. All kites must be flown to be eligible for a prize. No fishing poles will be allowed.

Two Collisions Investigated

One person was reported injured and an estimated $6,100 damage caused in two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Sunday. Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 3:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and the entrance to Greenville Square Shopping Center. Drivers of the cars involved were identified as Ann Denise Harrington of Azalea Gardens and Arlene Valere Hull of Wedgewood Arms. Damage was estimated by investigators at $1,500 to the Harrington car and $2,100 to the Hull vehicle. Police said Virginia Lewis Andrews of Route 2, Durham, was injured when the car she was driving collided with a utility pole about 4:46 p.m. on 14th Street, one-tenth of a mile west of the Berkley Road intersection. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $2,500.

Planning Board Will Not Meet

The Pitt County Planning Board will not meet Wednesday as scheduled because no plats have been received for review. The next meeting of the board is scheduled for April 20.

Speak-Off Held By Club

The Greenville Business & Professional Women's Club has conducted its annual "Young Careerist Speak-Off" with Wanda Braxton, a Princess House consultant, and Bricena Chandler, marketing officer at Wachovia Bank & Trust, as the participants.

After participants spoke on their careers, Ms. Chandler was chosen to represent the local organization at the district meeting on April 30 at the Holiday Inn here. The district winner will move on to the state "speak-off" and the state winner will be eligible for national competition.

Delegates and alternates were named to represent the chapter at the district session. Reservation deadline for the meeting is April 15 and information is available from Louise Congleton at 752-4587.

A chapter board meeting is scheduled for March 24 at 6:30 p.m. at Western Sizzlin. The next monthly meeting will be April 14 at the Ramada Inn.

Eagle Award Is Presented

AYDEN — James M.S. Blocker Jr. was presented the Eagle Scout Award Sunday at the Ayden United Methodist Church. Scoutmaster Terry Payne made the presentation during worship services.

JAMES BLOCKER, JR.

James has been an active member of Troop 34 since September 1979. He has held the leadership positions of quartermaster, assistant patrol leader, patrol leader, assistant senior patrol leader, and at present is serving as a senior patrol leader.

In July of 1981, James was a delegate from the East Carolina Boy Scout Council (ECBC) to the National Boy Scout Jamboree at Fort A.P. Hill, Va. Last summer he attended Philmont Boy Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico. While there, he hiked 62 miles of trails and received the coveted 50 mile patch.

James is the son of Jim and Gay Blocker of 802 W. Fourth St., Ayden. He is an eighth grade student at Arendell Parrott Academy in Kinston, and a member of the soccer team.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area yesterday, computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was .90. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 90 percent of your hot water needs.

Nearly Ignored Elderly Neglect

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The prosecutor of a woman charged with neglecting her father until his death says he hopes the rare case will affect future incidents of abuse of the elderly. "This case came so close to being ignored," said assistant district attorney Paul Weinman. "I would hope this case would get people to come forward if a similar situation arises. Of course there's no guarantee."

Weinman said although many people knew about Avis Smith Forrest's situation, no one reported it.

The Winston-Salem woman was charged with involuntary manslaughter after her father, Grover Smith, was found last summer in a filthy bedroom of his house with cockroaches and fecal matter covering the floor. The 75-year-old Smith died nine days later.

A Forsyth County Superior Court jury convicted Ms. Forrest, who received a five-year prison term.

Police had reported that the day they found Grover Smith in the house, a drunken woman with a butcher knife in her hand met them at the door.

Weinman said Ms. Forrest's case is the first in the state he's aware of in which a child was convicted of neglecting a parent.

In fact, he said, as he prosecuted the case he had only one case on which to rely for legal precedent. He referred to a nine-year-old decision from the N.C. Court of Appeals which involved two parents convicted of neglecting their child.

Mason P. Thomas Jr., a faculty member at the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill, also said he knew of no other similar convictions.

Thomas said the case won't become a legal precedent unless it is appealed to the N.C. Court of Appeals and the court agrees to consider it.

But Weinman said he hopes it might influence future cases and bring about more prosecution of alleged neglect of the elderly.

Beth Barnes, a consultant for adult protective services with the N.C. Division of Social Services in Raleigh, said last week that 526 cases of neglect or abuse of people 65 and older were reported during the first three months of 1982 in North Carolina.

But neglect cases are difficult to prosecute, she said.

"There are a lot of things involved in neglect that are intangibles and hard to prove," said Brenda K. Powell, supervisor of protective services for adults with the Forsyth County Department of Social Services.

"FOR AN HONEST SECOND OPINION, ASK PERDUE'S FIRST GROWER."

"When Perdue started looking for broiler growers in North Carolina, they called on me. They liked the Bertie County area and knew that I was familiar with most of the folks here through my work with the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service. They wanted me to give them some leads on potential broiler growers. Perdue did a good job of convincing me it was a good investment, because I became the state's first grower!

That was eight years ago, and since then, they've really put a lot of money into this area. It's helped our economy a lot, and it's helped many individuals make a profit each year out of their farming operations. With all the changes I've seen in the other crop programs, it's nice to see a company like Perdue providing a good steady income. You can count on Perdue year after year.

With tobacco, peanuts and corn, the expenses keep growing faster than the market prices, and that's cutting the net incomes of a lot of farmers. With a Perdue house as a supplemental income, you've got something that doesn't require a major investment every year. And once you've paid off the house, as I did three years ago, profits start looking even better.

If anyone has second thoughts about getting with a poultry company, they shouldn't worry about Perdue. The way they have expanded in Bertie, Hertford, Halifax and surrounding counties, there's no doubt in my mind Perdue will be here for a long time to come."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing — chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarkets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Call 1-800-682-8729 or send in the coupon below, and talk chicken with a Perdue representative.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, continuing last week's retreat.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 23.22 last week, fell 7.74 to 1,110.00 by noontime today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by 3 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Motors dropped 1 to 58½; American Telephone & Telegraph ½ to 65½; International Business Machines 1 to 99½, and Sears Roebuck ¼ to 34¾.

The NYSE's composite index fell 60 to 86.69. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 3.42 at 381.81.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 27.91 million shares at noontime, against 30.88 million at the same point Friday.

ON DEAN'S LIST
 SALEM, W.Va. — Louise Hassell of Greenville has been named to the dean's list at Salem College in West Virginia for the fall semester 1982.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hassell.

Older Workers Are Recognized

Today through March 19 is "Hire the Older Worker Week" in North Carolina and across the nation. This is a week in which all businesses in the community are asked to observe and to consider hiring an older person.

In Greenville, an example of an older person who has proven to be an asset to a business in the community is Mrs. Katherine Cottle.

Mrs. Cottle, at 77, works part-time at the Employment Security Commission in Greenville. Her job has been provided through the Council on Aging since June, 1982.

She has been working for the past 59 years, with 33 years of experience in the clerical field. At the age of 62 Mrs. Cottle retired for about two weeks, then returned to work in order to regain what she terms as the vitality of being useful and constructive in a job.

Mrs. Cottle has lived and worked in Greenville for the past 25 years. She says the reason she continues to work is that "It is a great morale builder and more older people should try it."

During the calendar year 1982, the Greenville Job Service was successful in assisting 132 older workers get job placements.

United Way Sees Big Year Of Giving

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Despite an economy hampered by recession and high unemployment, giving to the United Way hit a record $1.7 billion last fall. Agency officials expect even better this year.

"The more apparent the need, the more the people can see it, the greater the generosity," said Bill Aramony, president of the United Way of America.

"Giving has been tremendous because people know it's legitimate. The needs are there. They can see it, their neighbors are out of work."

Aramony was in town to address a three-day convention for trading ideas on raising funds that's attracted 325 United Way staffers from 11 Southeastern states.

Fund raising nationwide last fall was up $100 million from the previous year, the agency president said. While he didn't supply a specific figure, Aramony said in an interview that this fall's effort should surpass that total.

It's important for the agency to be sensitive to changes in the environment, he said.

"Two years ago, United Ways weren't in food banks or food-assistance programs, but they are now in many, many communities where the need is great," Aramony said.

"United Ways are and must continue to be responsive to those changing conditions. There is a so-called new need. We also have some of the old problems — high unemployment for youth, high unemployment for minorities — that only basic changes in the economy will help turn around."

Man Returned On Charge

Jerry Thomas Swindell, 19, was escorted back to Pitt County from St. Augustine, Fla., Sunday by Pitt deputies after he was charged with felonious larceny of a satchel of money from an area night spot.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Swindell, who waived extradition back to North Carolina, was charged with taking a briefcase containing approximately $650 in cash from the Players Retreat on the Pachtolus Highway on Feb. 19. Tyson said the theft was reported at 2:46 a.m.

Bond for Swindell, who listed a Shady Acres Trailer Park address, was set at $10,000, Tyson said.

Marijuana Charges Made

A 55-year old Route 5, Greenville, man was arrested this morning by Pitt deputies on three felony charges involving marijuana, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said William Henry Elks was charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell, maintaining a dwelling house for the storage of a controlled substance, and with manufacturing marijuana.

Bond for Elks, who was arrested at his residence, was set at $2,000. A first appearance hearing has been scheduled for Tuesday in District Court here, said Tyson.

Eight Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
 A teenager involved in a three-car wreck was one of eight people who were killed in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads during the weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported.

Susan Darlene Deal, 13, of Lemon Springs, died and four people were injured in a three-car crash on a rural road in Lee County, one mile east of Sanford, at 10:10 p.m. Saturday.

A Clinton man died at 2:55 a.m. Sunday when his car ran off a rural road south of Newton Grove and struck a culvert. Troopers say Carl Linwood Britt, 43, was the victim.

Also Sunday, Neal Archie Locklear, 34, of Lumberton, died at 10:40 a.m. on a rural road three miles east of his hometown when the car in which he was riding ran off the road and hit a tree.

Daniel Boone, 50, of Bakersville, was killed Saturday night in Yancey County when his car ran over an embankment and struck a tree, throwing him out.

Tracy Antonio Thornton, 3, of Pelham, died when she was playing near rural paved road 1306 six miles north of Yanceyville in Caswell County about 2:20 p.m. Saturday and ran into the path of a car.

An elderly Robersonville couple died when the car in which they were riding was struck from behind by another vehicle and hit a tree. Lela G. Hyman, 74, and Louis Brown, 86, were killed and two others were injured Saturday.

Edward Jay Wiggins, 18, of North Wilkesboro, died Saturday afternoon when he was struck while riding his bicycle in Wilkes County.

So far this year, 179 people have died in traffic accidents on state highways, compared to 189 reported at this time in 1982.

MDA Event To Be Held

The Muscular Dystrophy Association said that The Attic nightclub here is sponsoring a "Shamrocks Against Dystrophy" event for two nights this week with a portion of the proceeds from beer sales going to MDA to help fight neuromuscular disease.

The association said the club will sponsor the program on Wednesday and Thursday nights. Anyone wearing a green shirt will be admitted at half price and girls will be admitted free until 10:30 p.m. MDA said it will also receive proceeds from the sale of any beverage that is in a green bottle.

Entertainment on Wednesday will be a film festival starring John Belushi. "The Diamonds" will entertain on Thursday.

Parkinson's Group To Meet

The Parkinson's Support Group of Eastern Carolina will hold its second meeting Wednesday at 1 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church, 14th and Elm Streets.

Persons having Parkinson's disease, their friends and family are urged to attend.

Obituaries

Evans

Mr. Guy E. Evans, 87, retired merchant, died Sunday at his home in Grimesland. The funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Charles Luckadoo, pastor of the Bell Arthur Methodist Church. Burial will be in Oakdale Cemetery in Washington.

Mr. Evans, a native of Pitt County, had spent most of his life in the Grimesland Community. He was a member of the Grimesland Methodist Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Clyde B. Evans; two daughters: Mrs. Maude E. Dail of Elizabeth City and Mrs. Mildred E. Norman of Chesapeake, Va.; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Margie Woolard of Hampton, Va.; two brothers: Josh Evans of Norfolk, Va. and James Evans of Jacksonville; three sisters: Mrs. Thelma Whitley and Mrs. Eleanor Pratt, both of Washington, N.C. and Mrs. Shirley Brenner of Cary; nine grandchildren; two step-grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home.

Pack Surprises Cavs For ACC Title

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano needed senior leadership to beat Virginia in the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament finals and he got plenty of it.

Senior forward Thurl Bailey scored 24 points, including 16 in the second half to lead the Wolfpack to a 81-78 victory over the No. 2 Cavaliers. It was N.C. State's first tournament championship in nine years and Virginia's second straight loss in an ACC title match.

"We've played well against Virginia all the years I've been here," Bailey said. "We just weren't able to pull it out. It was just destiny for us this time to win."

N.C. State received a berth in the NCAA West Regional at Corvallis, Ore., where they'll face Pepperdine Friday night. Virginia was seeded No. 1 in the West Regional and will play either Washington State or Weber State on Saturday.

Dereck Whittenburg, a senior guard who two months ago wasn't expected to play in the tournament, scored 15 points and hit two free throws with six seconds left to clinch the victory, which raised N.C. State's record to 20-10.

Whittenburg suffered a broken bone in his foot against the Cavaliers last January in Raleigh. Thought to be out for the season, he returned in their rematch in Charlottesville last month.

"I was just thinking of my four bounces and (shooting) over the front of the rim," Whittenburg said of the game-clinching free throws. "When they had only six seconds left, I knew it would be pretty hard for them to catch up. Once I got the first one, I felt real good about the second one."

Sidney Lowe, the third of four seniors on Valvano's team, scored 18 points, 12 of which came on three-point field goals. He was named the tournament's most valuable player.

"We're dreamers," Lowe said. "We follow our coach — he's a dreamer and our dream came true today."

"You get 'em in the locker room, there's no talk. You walk in, they jump up and they're ready to roll," Valvano said. "I knew they'd play well. I was concerned with them being tired."

Valvano might have been concerned with fatigue, especially after watching N.C. State blow an early 12-1 lead and fall behind by as much as 23-18 late in the first half. Virginia went on an 11-0 binge en route to a 40-37 halftime lead.

Bailey was three of eight from the field in the first half and Valvano said a little bit of bench time did his forward some good.

"He started to miss," Valvano said. "We took him out for a rest and he went back in and knocked in everything."

After the rest, Bailey was six of nine in the second half. He and Lowe logged 39 minutes each.

"All I know is he hit a lot of big jump shots for us, but so did Dereck and Sidney," Valvano added. "Those kids just did a great job. They just kept going after it."

Virginia stretched its halftime lead to 59-51 on a Rick Carlisle basket before the Wolfpack rallied. A Bailey jumper, and three-point baskets by Lowe and Terry Gannon sandwiched around a tap-in by Virginia's Kenton Edelin pulled the Wolfpack to within 61-59 with 9:37 left.

Bailey later scored two more baskets, the last of which was a three-pointer that gave N.C. State the lead for good at 67-65 with 7:02 left.

"In order for us not to struggle," Bailey said, "I have to shoot well. Maybe it was the fact that it was the finals that made me look for the shot in the second half."

Alvin Battle got a tap-in, but Ricky Stokes retaliated with a free throw for the Cavaliers. Whittenburg scored on a driving layup for a 71-66 edge with 5:46 left. On Virginia's next possession, the bench was assessed a technical foul after arguing a jump ball call.

"It didn't look like a held ball to us," Virginia coach Terry Holland said. "We stood up and said 'that's not a jump ball' and that's all that was said and they called a technical."

Whittenburg hit both technical free throws and added a jumper at the 4:20 mark to give N.C. State a 75-66 cushion.

Aggressive defense and a couple of turnovers kept Virginia from an immediate challenge. One of the turnovers occurred when Gannon stole the ball from Ralph Sampson just as he was headed for the basket.

"We were in a man-to-man and I was on the weak side," Gannon said. "They lobbed the ball down to Ralph and I don't think he saw me. He brought the ball down which enabled me to strip the ball. I got it cleanly."

Virginia finally cut the lead to 79-78 when Otthell Wilson hit a three-point basket with 26 seconds left. Whittenburg was later fouled by Wilson and hit the insurance free throws.

Sampson scored 18 points in the first half, but was held to 6 points in the second half by some of that tenacious Wolfpack defense.

"At halftime, we decided to run a box-in-one on him," said sophomore forward Lorenzo Charles, who also put in time defending the Virginia center. "We always had two or three men around him. We figured if they were going to beat us, they were going to beat us from the outside."

Sampson said his small second-half output was due to problems with the Virginia offense. As a result, his college career will end without an ACC tourney title in his trophy case.

"I think we were waiting for something to happen instead of running what we're supposed to run," Sampson said.

"I didn't play well in the second half."

Otthell Wilson led Virginia, 27-4, with 19 points. He said the Cavaliers now have to get the tournament loss out of their systems.

"Whenever we lose, we just start concentrating harder," Wilson said. "The things that we did to lose, we can't do them again."

Clemson Captures Iron Duke Tourney

DURHAM — The Clemson Tigers fired a three-day total of 870 to defeat second-place North Carolina State by 11 strokes and capture the Iron Duke Classic Golf Tournament at the Duke University Course Sunday.

Jim Macafie of Clemson and Nolan Mills of State were tied after 54 holes with 214, but Macafie captured the individual honors defeating Mills on the fourth playoff hole.

Charles Raulerson of Clemson placed third with 215, followed by Chuck Taylor of Duke at 216, and Jefferey Lankford of UNC and Billy Musto of William and Mary at 217.

East Carolina finished 13th with a 920. Jon Riddle led the Pirates with a 227, with Chris Czaja at 228, Roger Newsom at 234, David Dooley at 237 and Kelly Stimer at 239.

East Carolina will be competing March 17-19 in the Furman Invitational at Greenville, S.C.

Gymnasts Compete In Weekend Events

Debbie Sigler won one of three spots on a team to compete in the AAU Nationals July 26-August 1 this weekend at the North Carolina AAU State Championships at the Salem Gymnastics Center in Winston-Salem.

Sigler's total of 33.65 was second in the 12-14 year old category in the all-around competition. Kerri Moreno's 32.85 put her in fourth place, earning her the slot as the optional team member for the nationals.

Sigler won the vault with a score of 8.8 and the uneven parallel bars with 8.65. Her 8.15 on the balanced beam was good for second place.

Moreno captured first in the floor exercise with an 8.7, while she took fifth on the beam with 7.8 and sixth on the uneven bars with 8.25.

In competition Saturday at the North Carolina Senior Gymnastics Championships at the North Carolina Gymnastics Academy in Greensboro, Frankie Lynn Hardee took first place in the floor exercise with an 8.1 and third in the vault with an 8.2.

Kim Moreno placed third on the uneven bars with a 6.6 and seventh on the beam with 5.8.

ECU Sweeps Connecticut

They say every team has some trademark — something that can be relied on by that group of players.

This year's East Carolina baseball team seems to have found that trademark — believing they cannot be beaten.

Twice yesterday, they kicked the ball around and allowed the University of Connecticut to come from behind to take a lead — and twice they rallied in the bottom of the seventh inning to pull out a doubleheader victory, 9-8, and 11-10.

"I keep thinking that we'll use up all of those (rallies)," Coach Hal Baird said of the Bucs, who have come back now in at least five of their eight victories on the season. "These kids keep battling back and I'm proud of them for doing it."

"We're not playing real well right now, kicking it around. But it's hard to say something to them when they're trying so hard. I just hope our pitching and fielding come around quickly."

Baird said that he thought there was a quota on comebacks, but that his team apparently felt they could keep on doing it game after game when it was needed. "What they lack in ability, they certainly make for in heart."

The doubleheader win gave ECU a sweep of the Huskies of Connecticut and ran their winning streak out to six in a row. The Bucs are now 8-2 on the year.

The first of the heavy-hitting games got underway with the Pirates scoring two runs in the bottom of the first inning. With two away, Todd Evans doubled and that was followed by a line drive over the fence in left by Winfred Johnson for a 2-0 lead.

Connecticut came right back with one in the top of the second. Gerald LaPenta opened with a double to left and moved up on a fly to center. He then scored on a passed ball.

East Carolina — which was to score in 11 of the 14 innings played this day — came back with one in the bottom of the inning. With one down, Jabo Fulghum walked and courtesy runner Mark Shank moved to third on Mark Council's single to left center. The two then pulled a double steal to score Shank for a 3-1 lead.

The Pirates increased that to 4-1 in the third. Robert Wells walked and moved to third on an error on a pickoff play. He scored on a triple by David Wells to right center.

Connecticut then took advantage of several Pirate mistakes in the fourth to score six runs and take a 7-4 lead. Dave Ford opened with a walk and LaPenta got the first two runs with a homer to left center. Then, with two away, Paul Tinkham singled and courtesy runner Steve Marcinkak stole up. Ed McMillan reached on an error and Tom Roberts singled to score Marcinkak.

Chris Kuselias followed by hitting a grounder back to pitcher Bob Davidson, but his throw was wild and both McMillan and Roberts scored, with Kuselias racing to third. On the relay, the ball was thrown into the Huskie dugout, allowing Kuselias to come on across with the seventh run.

East Carolina came back with two in the fifth. Kelly Robinette singled and with one down, Evans walked. Then, after two were out, walks to David Wells and Tony Salmond forced in Robinette. Fulghum then reached on an infield hit, scoring Evans to cut the lead to 7-6.

Connecticut added an eighth run in the sixth. Roberts singled and stole second, moving to third on Kuselias' single off the pitcher's foot. A double steal brought home Roberts.

But the Pirates then came up with two in the sixth to tie it at 8-8. Both Mike Williams and Robinette were hit by pitcher Kevin Hickey, and advanced on Robert Wells' sacrifice. Evans then singled to drive both across.

Then, in the seventh, the Pirates pushed over the ninth, and winning, run. Salmond

Oklahoma State Upsets Missouri

North Carolina State and Oklahoma State, both unranked among the nation's college basketball powers, worked overtime to gain automatic bids to the NCAA Division I playoffs which get under way this week.

"We're dreamers," N.C. State guard Sidney Lowe said Sunday after the shocking 81-78 overtime victory over second-ranked Virginia for the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament title. "We follow our coach (Jim Valvano). He's a dreamer. Our dream came true today."

In the Big Eight tournament, Oklahoma State knocked off No. 12 Missouri, the regular-season champion 93-92 in double overtime Sunday to earn its first trip to the NCAA tourney since 1965. Leroy Combs led the Cowboys with 34 points.

N.C. State, 20-10, advanced to the final by upsetting No. 5 North Carolina, the defending NCAA champion, 91-84 in overtime Saturday. Virginia and North Carolina had shared the regular-season ACC crown.

Is N.C. State a Cinderella team?

"In a way it is when you have the defending national champion and the heir apparent," said Valvano after the Wolfpack won the ACC tourney title for the first time since 1974. Thurl Bailey led N.C. State with 25 points.

Dereck Whittenburg hit two free throws with six seconds left to prevent Virginia, 27-4, from winning its ACC tourney crown during Ralph Sampson's four years. The 7-foot-4 Sampson scored 24 points, only six in the second half and was stripped of the ball by Terry Gannon while going up for a dunk shot with 30 seconds left.

For consolation, Virginia was seeded No. 1 in the NCAA West regional.

Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said of the Big Eight conference final, "They had the ball game won in regulation. We had it won in overtime. And they won it in the second overtime. We just needed one more overtime."

Combs, a 6-8 senior, made 11 of 16 field goal attempts and 12 of 14 free throws in helping the Cowboys increase their record to 24-6 while dropping Missouri to 26-7. Steve Stanovich led the Tigers with 22 points.

No. 3 Louisville and unranked Georgia also nailed down automatic NCAA berths by winning post-season tourneys Sunday to join the field of 52 which will determine the national champion April 4 in Albuquerque, N.M.

Louisville swept through the Metro Conference unbeaten in the regular season and post-season, capturing the tourney title with a 66-51 win over Tulane. The 29-3 Cardinals got 15 points from Charles Jones and 14 from Scooter McCray.

"We are going the along the same path as in 1980," said Rodney McCray of Louisville, which won the tournament that season. The Cards are seeded No. 1 in the Midwest regional.

Vern Fleming's 22 points gave Georgia the Southeastern Conference crown over Alabama and its first NCAA berth. The Bulldogs hit 22 of 26 shots from the field in the second half.

"Alabama did a heck of a job," said Georgia Coach Hugh Durham, "but it's hard to stay out there when they're shooting 84 percent against you."

The remainder of the automatic bids were determined Saturday in regular-season or post-season tourneys.

Top-rated Houston ran its winning streak to 22 (27-2 overall) in edging Texas Christian 62-59 for its third Southwest Conference tournament crown in five years. Akeem Olajuwon scored 19 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Cougars, who are seeded No. 1 in the NCAA Midwest regional.

No. 4 UCLA, 23-5, was upset by Arizona State 78-76, but the Bruins already had clinched the Pacific-10 title when Washington topped Washington State 76-75.

No. 7 Indiana, 23-5, ripped No. 16 Ohio State 81-60 behind Randy Wittman's 24 points to win the Big Ten championship.

Eighth-ranked St. John's, 27-4, with Chris Mullin's 23 points leading the way, won the Big East tourney, 85-77 over No. 14 Boston College. The Redmen are seeded first in the NCAA East regional.

No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas, 28-2, captured the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tourney, 66-63 over Fresno State on Eric Booker's three-point field goal with two seconds remaining.

No. 18 Tennessee-Chattanooga won its third consecutive Southern Conference title, stopping East Tennessee 70-62.

Russell Todd tossed in 23 points in leading West Virginia to a 87-78 victory over Temple for the Atlantic-10 championship.

Illinois State, paced by Rickie Johnson's 22 points, took the Missouri Valley title by downing Tulsa 84-64.

The Big Sky title went to Weber State, which beat Nevada-Reno 87-78.

Utah defeated Air Force 67-55 to share the Western Athletic Conference crown with Brigham Young and Texas El-Paso.

ECU Sweeps Connecticut...

opened with a walk and Fulghum walked to follow him. Both moved up on a sacrifice and with two away, Robinette singled to left, easily scoring Salmond to win the game.

Robinette and Evans each had two hits for ECU, while Roberts and LaPenta batted for a pair for the Huskies.

While it's usual to see a wild first game followed by a sedate 1-0 contest in the second, that was not to be the case Sunday afternoon. Instead, it was just a continuation of what had gone before.

East Carolina opened the game with a run in the first. John Hallow, who had been benched in the first game, came up and swatted the ball out of the park in his first at-bat in the opening inning, making it 1-0.

Three more Pirate runs crossed in the second. With one down, Robert Wells singled and Salmond got a hit. Both moved up on a wild pitch, scoring when Jack Curlings singled to right. Shank walked and Robinette singled to load the bases. Hallow then reached on an error, scoring courtesy runner Robert Langston for a 4-0 lead.

Connecticut started its comeback in the third, scoring once. McMillan led off with a walk and with one out, Bob Bibbiani also walked. Larry Keough grounded to second, where Bibbiani was forced, but the relay to first was off-target, allowing McMillan to score.

The Pirates stretched their lead to 6-1 with two in the bottom of the inning. Johnson opened the inning with his second homer of the day. Then, after two outs, Salmond reached on an error and Curlings was hit by a pitch. Shank then singled in Salmond.

The Huskies came back with four in the fourth, cutting it to 6-5. Bill Crowley reached on an infield hit and Pete Vincent singled. Both moved up on a wild pitch and with one away, Crowley scored on a single by Brian Fitch. McMillan singled to score Vincent, and LaPenta was safe on an error, loading the bases.

Bibbiani then grounded to second, scoring courtesy runner Marcinak, and when the double play attempt was again thrown wide at first, McMillan trotted home to close the gap to just one run.

Then, in the fifth, the Huskies moved ahead, 7-6, with two runs. David Ford opened with a single and was replaced by Dave Darling. With one down, Vincent walked and both runners came over when Kuselias tripped to right.

The Huskies appeared to be ready to pull out a victory with three more in the sixth, running the lead to 10-6. McMillan was hit by a pitch and LaPenta singled. An error on the play allowed McMillan to take third, and LaPenta then stole second.

Curlings, after bluffing to second on the steal, threw to third, but was off target, and McMillan scored. Bibbiani then doubled to left, scoring LaPenta. Both of those hits came when freshman David Horne, just put into the game by Baird, lost the ball in the lights. "That's the first time he's played under lights ever," Baird relayed later.

Vern Proctor's sacrifice fly later scored Bibbiani, who had taken third on a fly to right.

The Pirates began their final rally in the sixth, scoring twice to cut it to 10-8. Hallow walked and Evans singled. Johnson doubled to right, scoring Hallow and David Wells hit a sacrifice fly to score Evans.

Then, in the seventh, the Pirates came up with three runs. With one down, Horne walked and Robinette doubled. Hallow then hit a 3-2 pitch down the right field line for a two-run double, knotting the score.

After Evans was intentionally walked, Johnson paid off with a single to center, scoring Hallow with the winning run. It also gave Johnson, who had come on in relief, his third victory of the year on the mound.

Johnson led the ECU hitting with three, while Robinette, Hallow and Curlings each had two. Ford had two hits for Connecticut, which now falls to 0-3 on the season.

The Pirates return to action this afternoon against Fairfield, which is in town for a two-game series, Monday and Tuesday, game at 3 p.m. daily.

Marshall President Surprised By Rumor

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Marshall University President Robert Hayes says if Carl Tacy plans to quit as coach at Wake Forest to take the Marshall job "it's news to me."

"I haven't talked to the man in years, either on the telephone or in person," said Hayes who will make the final decision on who will replace Bob Zuffelato.

Zuffelato announced before this season he would step down to take an administrative job at the school.

ESPN reported Friday that Tacy would leave Wake Forest for Marshall, where he coached 11 years ago. Rumors that Tacy would resign and return to Marshall circulated last weekend during the Southern Conference tournament at the Charleston Civic Center Coliseum.

Irish, DePaul Head NIT Field

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though the NCAA championship tournament grabbed 40 teams which won at least 20 games this season, the National Invitation Tournament was able to fill almost half its field with 20-game winners.

Throw in such popular schools as Notre Dame, DePaul, Oregon State and Wake Forest, and the NIT's 32-team collection is pretty attractive.

"I think we actually have come up with the strongest field in history," said Pete Carlesimo, executive director of the nation's oldest post-season college basketball tournament. "I think this group of 32 has the greatest balance across the board of any field since we adopted the new format."

That new format calls for games at campus sites in the opening, second and third rounds of the NIT, which begins Tuesday with 22-8 East Tennessee State at Vanderbilt (18-13), and 21-10 South Florida hosting Fordham, 19-10.

The NIT made its selections Sunday after the NCAA filled out its field. The other 20-game winners in the NIT, which will use a 30-second shot clock and red, white and blue ball for the first time this year, are: New Orleans, 22-6; Idaho, 20-8; South Carolina, 20-8; Texas Christian, 21-10; St. Bonaventure, 20-9; Iona, 21-8; Fresno State, 21-10; William & Mary, 20-8; Virginia Tech, 22-10; Murray State, 21-7; Alabama State, 22-5; Fullerton State, 21-6, and Bowling Green, 21-7.

On Wednesday, it will be New Orleans at Louisiana State, 19-12; Idaho at Oregon State, 18-10; Old Dominion, 19-9, at South Carolina; Minnesota, 17-11, at DePaul, also 17-11; Texas Christian vs. 19-11 Tulsa at Oral Roberts;

St. Bonaventure at Iona and Texas-El Paso, 18-9, at Fresno State.

Thursday, the matchups are William & Mary at Virginia Tech; Northwestern, 16-12, vs. 19-9 Notre Dame at the Horizon at Rosemont, Ill.; Wake Forest, 17-11, at Murray State; Tulane, 19-11, at Nebraska, 19-9, and Alabama State at Mississippi, 18-9.

The first round ends Friday with Fullerton State at Arizona State, 17-12, and Bowling Green at Michigan State, 16-12.

"We're pleased to be in it," said Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir. It looks like a really good field, a lot of 20-game winners. It should be very competitive."

Added South Carolina Coach Bill Foster: "When we got the 20 wins, we felt comfortable we'd go to one (tournament). We're glad to be in a post-season tournament. It was one of the goals we had this year."

Not all coaches were completely thrilled with their NIT invitations. Digger Phelps of Notre Dame said, "We respect the (NCAA) committee's decision but we are disappointed." When informed of the NIT bid less than an hour later, Phelps added, "We now look forward to the NIT. It's a prestigious tournament with a great history and we'll be proud to be a part of it."

Music Shop In Fiftieth Year

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Musical instruments have literally filled the air at Ted's Musicians Shop for 49 years, but Ted Martini says he doesn't plan anything special to mark his golden anniversary in business.

"I'm just going to keep going," says the softspoken, 77-year-old. "I was always in music. It's like they say, I was born with a fiddle in my hand."

His store, in the shadows of Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory, occupies adjoining three-story row houses. It is decorated with hundreds of instruments suspended from the ceiling — including oddities such as a 10-foot-long Alpine horn, a double-belled trumpet, carved African drums and Arabian horns.

His customers have included the late conductors Arthur Fiedler and Leopold Stokowski.

Martini doesn't recall the date he established his shop. He only remembers that it was during a heat wave in the summer of 1933.

He was running his parents' music store in his native New York when he met his future wife, Evelina Fine, a Baltimorean studying the violin at the Julliard School. After they married and moved to Baltimore, Mrs. Martini eventually was hired by the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra.

"I didn't come here with anything," Martini says in his scratchy voice. "I was broke. It was the Depression. I had no money. But I saw a store that was vacant. I knew it would be good for me."

Martini borrowed $25 for rent, despite the landlord's warnings that the money would be wasted, and asked the wholesaler who dealt with his parents to send him every broken guitar he could find.

A shipment soon arrived, and Martini repaired them. He also decorated the store by tacking his wife's sheet music along the walls.

"So I had a music store. I was in business," he recalls. "Right away, I had a big stock."

Since then, the store has been moved across the street and its inventory has grown to several hundred instruments. The oldest, a rectangular violin, is about 500 years old.

Martini once obtained a mute violin — a fiddle consisting of little more than a fingerboard, bridge and strings — for Stokowski.

A customer once requested a sitar case. Martini showed one. But the customer didn't buy it, and instead left the store with a Jew's harp.

The rare instruments are not for sale.

"Anything that's old, we keep," he says. "Sometimes, people have offered to buy them. I turn them down. I guess some day, I'll donate it to either a museum or a music school."

Despite almost five decades of buying, selling, renting and repairing instruments, Martini still enjoys going to his crowded shop on Centre Street every day.

"It's not monotonous because every instrument that comes in is different," he says. "It's like human beings. Every instrument has its own characteristics. If you understand that, you can get a kick out of it."

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Bassinger In Movie Comedy

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kim Bassinger, most recently seen co-starring with Charlton Heston in "Mother Lode," will co-star with Burt Reynolds and Julie Andrews in the new Blake Edwards comedy, "The Man Who Loved Women."

Miss Bassinger, who recently starred with Sean Connery in "Never Say Never Again," will play a married Texas lady who has a fling with Reynolds.

"The Man Who Loved Women" will shot shot on locations in Los Angeles and Houston beginning this month with Edwards directing.

McCartney Film Is On The Way

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Paul McCartney, most active of the surviving Beatles, is starring in "Give My Regards to Broad Street" through his own company, MPL Communications Ltd.

McCartney wrote the screenplay, and will portray himself in the film, a free-wheeling musical comedy in the vein of the old Beatles hits "A Hard Day's Night" and "Help." Co-starring with McCartney will be his wife, Linda.

The score will consist of 10 McCartney songs, two new compositions and eight reorchestrated versions of songs originally written for the Beatles and McCartney's group, Wings.

TV's Story Of Candy Lightner

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "M.A.D.D.: The Candy Lightner Story" is both an indictment and an endorsement of the American legislative system.

Tonight's crusading and intelligently written NBC movie shows how one determined woman manages to break down the barriers against strong drunken driving laws — obstacles that only a democratic and lobby-loving country would put up in the first place.

Teacher's Book A TV Series

By JAMES V. HEALION
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — When Rollyn Osterweis realized she was terminally ill, she reached for the phone to ask her father, a Yale professor, "if he wouldn't finally let me try to turn the book he and I are trying to get published into a television series."

The book was based on "The History of American Oratory" or "History 39," as it was commonly known at Yale, a seminar course limited to 15 students each semester. Professor Rollin G. Osterweis, the debating team coach, taught it for 25 years. The course was one of the most popular at Yale.

His teaching strategy was to trace American history through its great orators, starting with people like Patrick Henry. One of the first to enroll was William F. Buckley Jr., the student-editor of the Yale Daily News who had suggested the course in a series of editorials.

Over the years many people asked Osterweis to convert the course lectures into a manuscript for a book.

"Dad's feeling was that he didn't want to turn it into a book until he retired in 1976 — he loved teaching it so," one of the professor's four daughters, Mrs. Nancy O. Alderman, said in an interview.

Osterweis titled his book "American Panorama," but publishers were not keen on it. His daughter, Rollyn, an editor in the publications department of the Detroit Institute of Arts, told him it would make a better television series. He turned the project over to her after her telephone call in May 1980.

"He wanted to help her in any way he could. If this was a project that would interest her and keep her interested, he would do it. It never occurred to him that she would be able to turn it into a television show if he wasn't able to get it published. But he never held those reservations with her," Mrs. Alderman said.

Rollyn Osterweis did indeed become the spark that since has transformed the book into "Freedom to Speak," a PBS production in which a total of 160 orators, portrayed by 20 leading actors, are shown shaping the nation's history with their eloquence.

The 12-part series will run nationwide under various local PBS listings throughout March.

Rollyn Osterweis and her father didn't live to see it come to fruition. They died of cancer within a few weeks of each other last year. She was 39 when she died Feb. 4, 1982. He was 74 when he died Feb. 28, 1982.

Rollyn Osterweis moved to Detroit in 1972 to marry Dan Krichbaum, then the director of the city's recreation department, who had three adolescent children by a previous marriage, Matt, Anna and Sarah. They then had a child of their own, Steven.

Then, in May 1979, she underwent a mastectomy.

Through her illness, she insisted on one beyond a few close friends and her immediate family know of her predicament.

"It was important for her that no one know she was sick, not Bill Buckley, anybody. That project had to fly on its own. It had a life of its own and had nothing to do with her sickness," her sister, Nancy, said.

In her journal for May 20, 1980, Rollyn wrote:

"... Terminal — terminal — yes, terminal disease — and you know what I did? — I reached for the phone and asked Daddy if he wouldn't finally let me try to turn the book he and I are trying to get published into a TV series..."

She sent public television producer Robert Kuretsky of WQED in Pittsburgh an outline and a copy of the book.

A Review...

Horror Fans Movie Awaits

Horror movie fans, here's another one for you. "Mausoleum," now playing at Plitt Theater, combines all the best ingredients to keep your eyes glued to the screen.

Inside Susan Farrell, played by Bobbie Bresee, lives a demon-monster. Bobbie does some fine acting, one minute she is sweet innocence, the next a seductress-murderess.

La Wanda Page gives us a much needed break in the building suspense. As Elsie, the zany maid, she makes us laugh at her unpredictable reaction to the demon.

"Mausoleum" is dripping with blood and exploding with flesh. Be prepared for the unexpected and don't eat before you go to see the movie.

A last word of caution, take someone you trust along. "Mausoleum" leaves you feeling slightly paranoid.

The judicial system doesn't get off lightly, either. Drunken drivers are quickly back on the streets, and the point is made that juries are made up of citizens who have driven under the influence, and they tend to go easy on drunken drivers.

The fact-based movie is about Candy Lightner, who founded Mothers Against Drunk Drivers after her daughter, Cari, was killed by an intoxicated motorist who was out on bail on a previous drunken driving charge.

Candy, played passionately by Mariette Hartley (James Garner's wife in the Polaroid camera commercials), is a divorced mother of three, who is so non-political she isn't even registered to vote. What turns her into a flaming advocate is Cari's death and then the feeling that the legislative and judicial systems aren't listening.

Willard Kohler (James Gannon) can barely stand, but he gets behind the wheel anyway. His car is weaving along the road when it drifts inside the bicycle lane and strikes Cari. Kohler leaves the girl to die.

In contrast with Kohler's callousness are the dedicated doctors and nurses who attempt to save the 13-year-old child. The doctors are perspiring, and one nurse breaks down and cries when they lose the patient.

The simple death of a child at the hands of a drunken driver should be enough to galvanize audiences on this issue, but the movie can't resist some intemperance, showing the bloodied, unconscious girl on the operating table five separate times.

That excess aside, "The Candy Lightner Story" makes a potent political statement, although the legislative struggle may be seen as overly dramatic and outdated today. Because of Candy's Mothers Against Drunk Drivers and other groups — like Alliance Against Intoxicated Motorists and Remove Intoxicated Drivers — tough drunken driving laws now are sailing through state legislatures.

Candy is told by friendly legislators that passage of effective drunken driving laws in her home state of California is threatened by several groups: the well-organized, well-financed liquor lobby, lawyers who profit from defending drunken drivers, and judges who resist being told how to sentence law-breakers. (If this were a documentary, those assertions would not be allowed to go unchallenged).

But Candy calls press conferences, makes speeches, buttonholes legislators and becomes too much of a pest to be ignored.

The movie also effectively shows the emergence of this shy woman who channels her grief in an obsessive fervor for a cause which she hopes will give meaning to her child's death and prevent more highway killings.

This is the kind of issue movie that TV brings home so well. Last year, "Lois Gibbs and the Love Canal" focused on chemical dumping and showcased another woman, motivated by the force of family disaster, acting as an American conscience.

While Lois Gibbs' activism damaged her marriage, one price Candy pays is the feeling from her children that she is abandoning them, particularly Cari's twin sister. But, as she explains to Serena (Shelby Balik) in a moving scene, this is what she must do now.

According to the movie's postscript, California has the most stringent drunken driving laws in the country. In their first two months on the books, highway deaths in the state were reduced by 22 percent.

RELISHES ROLES — Actor Vincent Price admits to a preference for playing villainous roles. He says the good guy may win the heroine's heart on film, but it's the villain who captures the audience's imagination. (AP Laserphoto)

THE BEST — Richard Attenborough received the Directors Guild of America motion picture directing award in Los Angeles Saturday night. This award, presented by last year's winner, Warren Beatty, often presages the Academy Awards. (AP Laserphoto)

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 3-14

WFX ATMMX PTS APFAWFEFS ATEFFE.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — THE FARMYARD FASHION SHOW THIS WEEK HAD MANY CHIC CHICKENS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals C.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Frog-Raising Book Out Of Obscurity

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — For the would-be entrepreneur who wants to go where business is hopping but doesn't want to jump into just anything, the answer could be as near as the bookstore.

It's contained in a slender 1937 volume entitled "Frog Raising." The book was published by Albert Broel, founder of the American Frog Canning Co. of New Orleans to help encourage the then-new industry.

Out of print for more than 40 years, Californian Derek Van Alstine and Dell Books have resurrected Broel's book from obscurity in a facsimile edition. Everything you need to know about frogs and frog raising is included — biological information on different species, instructions for locating, building and operating your breeding pond, even recipes for froggy haute cuisine.

In its day, the book attempted to capitalize on a popular business. In the 1930s, thousands of people dug ponds on their farms and in backyards, raising giant bullfrogs for what was seen as a growing demand for frog meat.

The Father of Communism

Today marks the 100th anniversary of the death of Karl Marx, the founder of Communism and one of the few men in history whose thinking actually changed the world. He was born in 1818 in the Prussian city of Trier in what is now West Germany. Because of his outspoken criticism of the Prussian government, Marx was forced to leave his homeland for Paris. Later he moved to Brussels and London. As a freelance journalist, he worked as a reporter for the "New York Tribune." But Marx devoted most of his time to the writings that became the source of modern Communism — "The Communist Manifesto," "Das Kapital," and other works. He died in London, a poverty-stricken political exile.

DO YOU KNOW — Who co-authored Marx's "Communist Manifesto?"

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — An American has an average life expectancy of 73.3 years.

Pig-Kissing Good Fund-Raising Idea

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Some Nebraska high school students are going hog wild about the idea of having their teachers kiss pigs as a means of raising money for class projects.

During recent fund-raising drives in at least two high schools, teachers have pasted kisses on the snouts of young porkers.

"It felt a little like sandpaper. Other than that it wasn't too bad — no bad breath or anything," said Russell Leonhardt, a Hastings High School civics teacher.

Marla Dowse, one of 14 North Platte High School teachers who recently pecked a pig, agreed.

the book "high camp," says with tongue-in-cheek the project "kind of plopped into our laps" when he and his wife discovered a copy of Broel's original book in the basement of a home near Santa Cruz.

The copyright had long since expired and after deciding against publishing it themselves, the Van Alstines last year found an agent.

In an interview with the Huntsville Times, Van Alstine he is enjoying his new role as an author.

"It's been a lark for us," he said. "But I imagine it's deadly serious for the frogs."

"Aside from the odor, it wasn't bad," she said.

Gwen Davidson, Hastings business teacher, said her students came up with the idea when they were brainstorming for ways to raise money to attend a state convention.

Four teachers and the school's principal volunteered to keep jars on their desks into which students pitched nickels, dimes and quarters. Leonhardt, who raised the most money, $78, then was required to kiss the pig at a school assembly.

Contest rules were similar in North Platte, except every teacher collecting more than $12 was forced to pucker up. Alex Hogg, an extension veterinarian at the University of Nebraska, said he hopes the fad is short-lived although he said there wasn't anything dangerous about it. "There aren't that many diseases that are transmitted from humans to pigs or vice versa," he said.

The teachers said this year's fund-raisers were so successful that they plan to repeat the practice next year.
