General Says Harassment By Israeli

DETROIT (AP) — The nation's top Marine, saying he can "no longer remain silent," has accused Israeli troops of repeatedly threatening U.S. peacekeeping patrols in Lebanon, a published report today said.

According to a copyright article, Marine Corps commandant Gen. Robert Barrow wrote a classified letter dated Monday to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger reporting three incidents this year in which shots were fired.

It was the first report of any gunfire by Israelis involving U.S. forces. On another occasion, Israelis threatened to kill an American captain, the article said.

The article, by Knight-Ridder Newspapers' Washington bureau, appeared in today's Detroit Free Press and other newspapers.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli security source rejected the report, saying there were "no cases of anything being said to insult the Marines, the United States, the officers or the Marines' uniform." The source, who insisted on anonymity, also said the Israelis had not threatened Marines.

In Washington, Marine Corps and Defense Department officials who asked that their names not be used said they were not familiar with the letter or the reported incidents.

The incidents involved both Marine and Army officers "in life-threatening situations, replete with verbal degradation of the officers, their uniform and country," Barrow wrote, according to the published report.

"Unfortunately, and of greater concern to me, (is that) incidents of this nature are the rule, rather than the exception....

"It is inconceivable to me why Americans — serving in peacekeeping roles — must be harassed, endangered and degraded by an ally."

The report quoted another classified document as saying an Israeli tank opened fire with a .50-caliber machine gun on the road in front of an American patrol Jan. 31, forcing the patrol to turn around.

In another incident, Israeli troops were said to have pointed American-made M-16 rifles at a Marine captain and "stated they would kill him if he took one step toward them," the report said. The captain retorted his vehicle.

In a third incident, the article said, Maj. Herman Kafura of a United Nations observation team was "threatened with loaded and pointed weapons" and his "life was deliberately threatened."

Barrow was quoted as writing that he could "no longer remain silent on this continual problem of provocation," by Israeli troops.

"It is evident to me... that the incidents" between the Marines and the Israeli Defense Forces "are timed, orchestrated and executed for obtuse Israeli political purposes," Barrow wrote, the report said.

"It is time for firm and strong action to demonstrate to the Israelis that a role as a peacekeeper does not presume weakness."

In a highly publicized instance in January, a Marine captain drew a pistol to stop an Israeli tank patrol from infringing on what he considered U.S.-controlled territory.

U.S. officials said then there had been "half a dozen" confrontations between U.S. and Israeli forces. Only one has been reported since then, a verbal clash between U.S. and Israeli patrols last week.

The 1,200-man Marine force, part of a larger deployment of troops from Britain, Italy and France, has been patrolling the Beirut area since last fall in an effort to bolster the Lebanese government.

Five Marines in Lebanon were slightly injured Wednesday in a grenade attack for which a group calling itself Islamic Holy War claimed credit.

Baker To Keep Trying

Senate Jobs Bill In Stalemate

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., claiming he has the votes for repealing the withholding tax on interest and income, challenged Senate leaders today to put his measure to a quick vote and end the stalemate over a $5.1 billion jobs bill.

Kasten said he is willing to support a move by Senate leaders to limit further debate on the bill — in a vote now scheduled for Friday — and to take his chances.

The battle over Kasten's amendment has tied the Senate in a parliamentary knot for more than a week.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., vowed to keep the Senate in session through the weekend to resolve the dispute over the jobs legislation. "I'm going to run the Senate as long as it's necessary," he said.

In separate procedural votes Wednesday, the Senate delivered a divided verdict on Kasten's measure.

It rejected by 10 votes a leadership bid to block Kasten's repeal drive. But, by a one-vote margin, the Senate also turned back Kasten's attempt to force a vote on the repeal measure.

Both motions were procedural ones requiring the votes of 60 of the Senate's 100 members. The vote on the motion by Senate leaders was 50-48, while the tally on Kasten's effort was 59-39.

Unable to proceed further on the bill, Baker put the measure aside until Friday, and had the Senate take up the Social Security bailout legislation instead.

But Kasten said today he was ready to support Baker's motion to limit further debate on the bill, and that he's ready to do it immediately, without waiting until Friday.

His change of strategy all but assured that Baker would get the 60 votes required to limit debate through a so-called cloture motion. One effect of such a motion would be to strip all non-germane amendments — including Kasten's — from the jobs bill.

Kasten said it was a gamble he was willing to take. He said that if his amendment is ruled non-germane, he will seek to overturn the ruling in a parliamentary move that would require only a simple majority vote of senators.

Recall Planned

KINSTON — Du Pont has announced that it will recall on March 28 approximately 30 former employees who were laid off here Nov. 1.

The Kinston plant, which employs over 2,200 people, had announced plans last August to reduce its work force by approximately 250 employees beginning the first of November.

"We are very pleased to be able to offer the opportunity for re-employment to part of the group that was involved in the layoff late last year," said Jimmy H. Moore, assistant plant manager.

"This action is being taken to staff an additional quality assurance effort as well as continue to meet production needs," the spokesman said.

"Based on our view of the pace of the recovery of the economy, we believe this action will place us in a strong position to meet the current and projected needs of our customers," Moore said.

The plant, located on N.C. 11, produces "Dacron" polyester fiber for the apparel, home furnishings and automotive upholstery markets.

Funding

Pitt County was allocated $9,733 by the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Act for fiscal year 1983-84.

The funds are designated for program use in the following categories: community residential care, community non-residential care, volunteer programs and alternative schools.

Persons or agencies wishing to request JJDP funding must submit a letter of intent by April 1 and all local requests for funding must be submitted by March 25. Submit requests to the Pitt County Juvenile Task Force.

Direct further inquiries may be had from Jan Woodworth, Task Force Chairperson, P.O. Box 1160, Greenville, or 752-1811.

Postmaster In Bell Arthur Has Retired

Louise Dail Webb has retired as postmaster of Bell Arthur, a post she had held for 30 years.

Mrs. Webb became postmaster after she and her husband, Rufus Raymond Webb, rented a store from her predecessor, Mattie Parker Crawford. The post office was located in the back of the store. In October 1966, it was moved to its present building adjacent to the store.

The Webbs retired from the store business five years ago. A Winterville-area native, Mrs. Webb is active in the Arthur Christian Church and has, in the past, been active in supporting the activity of the Bell Arthur Volunteer Fire Department, of which her husband was chief.

Mrs. Webb, mother of four and grandmother of 10, will be succeeded as Postmaster by Cynthia Craft.

Asked what she plans to do during retirement, she said, "No more than I can help. I'm going to fish a lot."

A retirement ceremony honoring Mrs. Webb will be held March 25 at 1 p.m. by the U.S. Postal Service.

Pressure On Britain To Undercut OPEC Prices

LONDON (AP) — Britain, which forced OPEC to cut prices for the first time, is facing pressure from major oil companies to undercut the cartel in what petroleum analysts call news signs a worldwide price war is inevitable.

The Daily Telegraph reported today that several oil companies were seeking a reduction of as much as $1 a barrel from the state-owned British National Oil Corp.'s proposed price of $30.50.

Oil companies say Britain's North Sea oil at $30.50 cannot compete against premium Nigerian oil of the same quality selling at $30 or against the $29 price set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on Monday after a dozen days of wrangling in London by ministers from all 13 members.

The oil minister from the world's largest oil-producing nation, OPEC-member Saudi Arabia, said after the cartel agreement was announced that if Britain cuts its price below $30, a price war might break out for the world's shrinking petroleum market.

Britain, which does not belong to OPEC, is the world's fifth-largest oil producer.

Britain's decision last month to reduce its prices for North Sea crude forced OPEC-member Nigeria to bolt from cartel policy and cuts its prices. Other OPEC members threatened to slash their prices as well unless the cartel reduced its base price, which had been $34 before Monday's agreement. It was the first time the 22-year-old cartel reduced its prices.

The Daily Telegraph said some reports in oil circles predicted that North Sea oil could fall as low as $25 a barrel.

Peter Lymbery of the authoritative Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said he believed OPEC "might swallow" a $30 or even a $29.50 pricetag. But, he said, the oil companies want a price of $28.50 for North Sea oil.

Lymbery predicted that "all hell would break out" if Britain's price fell below $29.50.

British Petroleum said in a statement last week a $29 OPEC benchmark was "not sustainable" and would encourage further cuts.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union, which sells about 1 million barrels a day to Western Europe, cut the price of its crude $1.25, to $28 a barrel.

North Sea crude was selling for $28.30 on the unregulated spot market this week, and industry sources said that price was $2.50 too much in the glutted world oil market.

Bids Awarded By Winterville Board

WINTERVILLE — Bids for paving and resurfacing several streets in Winterville have been awarded by the Winterville town board to Barrus Construction Company of Kinston.

The streets include portions of Jones, Knox, Academy, Church, Depot and North and South Railroad. Barrus was the low bidder with $23,181. The contracts were awarded at a recent meeting of the Town Board of Aldermen.

The board also designated First State Bank as the depository for the recently received Community Development Block Grant and appointed Harriet Britt as labor standards officer.

A special meeting was set for March 28 to awards bids for a contract on six houses in the rehabilitation portion of the project.

The board also approved a payment to Line Equipment Company for a Pittman aerial bucket lift truck at a cost of $17,500 and approved purchase and payment for a 1976 fire department water wagon to replace wrecked water wagon. The cost of the water wagon is $6,500 from F&D Motor in Bethel and the town's insurance will pay $4,900.

A representative of the U.S. Geological Survey requested the town consider a ground water supply survey to evaluate water supply potential of the aquifer system and evaluate regional impact of alternative schemes for ground water development. The cost to the town would be $1,000 per year for three years. No action was taken.

Nuclear Resolution Is Assured, Say Backers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional supporters of a nuclear weapons freeze resolution say House passage of the measure is inevitable despite Republican tactics which blocked a final vote after 12 hours of floor debate.

Freeze proponents also sought to play down conflicting views which emerged during Wednesday's debate over what specific weapons would be affected if a freeze with the Soviets was negotiated.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., a leading freeze advocate on Capitol Hill, asserted that GOP "dilatatory tactics were successful in postponing the inevitable. But next week the people of this country will be heard."

The House's Democratic leadership had forecast easy passage of the resolution — calling for a "mutual and verifiable" freeze to be followed by nuclear arms reductions — after a single day of floor action.

However, Republicans voted solidly against a motion to limit debate so that the measure could be put to a vote by midnight. They were joined by more than 40 Democrats to prevent the Democratic majority from forcing an early decision on the measure.

The action put the resolution off until Monday at the earliest because the House plans to do no legislative business on Thursday, which is St. Patrick's Day, and will not be in session on Friday.

If passed, the resolution likely would face a much more uncertain future in the Senate. And even if both houses approved the initiative, it would not be binding on President Reagan.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said "it's still a tough fight," and that if the administration does not succeed in killing the resolution in the House it will take its battle to the Senate.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said it was "by no means certain" that the freeze would be the first order of business when the House returns next week. He said a decision would be made "after we have had a chance to regroup."

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., estimated that the measure had enough support to pass by 60 to 100 votes.

"The only possible way" to change the outcome, he said,

"would be to adjourn and have the president get on the phone" in a lobbying effort against the measure.

Before quitting for the night, the House rejected, 226-195, an amendment spearheaded by Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., to permit "modernization and development" of whatever weapons were needed to maintain the credibility of the U.S. nuclear deterrent.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, charged that Stratton's amendment would destroy the effect of the freeze.

The House also turned back, 215-209, an amendment by Rep. Mark D. Siljander, R-Mich., allowing U.S. negotiators at talks in Geneva to have the option of seeking either arms reductions or a freeze.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, speaking out bluntly against the freeze proposal, contended that it was the product of a "well-planned, well-financed movement toward unilateral disarmament."

A PHILADELPHIA...Chippendale side chair and handcrafted 18th century reproductions in the English Chippendale bed are among the 33 Tryon Palace Collection.

Furniture Reproductions Are Available At Tryon Palace

NEW BERN — The Colonial American antiques admired by thousands of visitors at Tryon Palace and the nearby John Wright Stanly House are now available in handmade reproductions for present-day homes.

Thirty-three pieces from the palace and Stanly House collections have been copied and reproduced employing the same lines, finishes and methods that gave birth to the 18-century originals.

Pieces to be copied were chosen based on their adaptability to modern living and their popularity among Tryon Palace Complex visitors. An English Chippendale bed and a Chippendale dropleaf table are two of the larger pieces. Smaller reproductions include a tea caddy, available with felt or copper lining, a slant-top desk of New England origin and a Queen Anne lowboy.

All pieces are offered in their original wood — in most cases mahogany but in some pieces walnut, oak or pine — with additional wood choices available for certain pieces.

Fred Tharrington of Raleigh, chosen as cabinetmaker by the Tryon Palace Commission, made measured drawings of each original, duplicating all moldings and other construction details. He and his assistants make copies using 18th-century methods, although the interior construction of case pieces is modified to employ more durable present-day construction practices.

Prices are competitive in the field of antique reproductions.

Tryon Palace, called the "most beautiful building in Colonial America," was built in 1767-1770 as the first permanent seat of government of the Royal Colony of North Carolina. The John Wright Stanly House, in the palace complex, was completed in the 1780's and reflects the taste of a prominent late-18th-century New Bernian such as its former owner, a merchant and ship owner. The furnishings of both buildings are recognized collections of English and American antiques.

Reproductions from the collection can be purchased at the Palace Gift Shop or by catalogue, which contains photographs, descriptions and prices of all pieces. For information write The Tryon Palace Collection, Box 1007, New Bern, 28560.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Mothers are getting older in this country . . . even before they have the baby.

Some recent figures show that while teenagers are having fewer babies, the birthrate for women over 35 is increasing and will probably be up 46 percent during this decade.

I know, it probably sounds like a lot of fun having a baby who will sit around and connect liver spots on Mommy's arms, but in reality, there are a lot of problems older mothers haven't even considered.

For example, just when the baby is outgrowing his need for naps, you'll grow into them. When his teeth start growing in, yours will start coming out.

I've always felt there are two things a woman should never do after the age of 35: stand in a natural light and have a child who is learning how to play the trumpet. The aging process is not helped by a child who is learning how to play the trumpet.

Probably the worst adjustment will be when the babies grow into teenagers. For example, if a mother has a child at the age of 35, her son will begin to drive at age 16, making her 51 years old. Anyone knows this is too late for patience and too early to die. I have seen younger mothers carried comatose, their bodies rigid, their eyes glazed, from the passenger side of the car even before they left the driveway.

Probably the No. 1 complaint of mothers everywhere is exhaustion. Ask yourself how you will feel when you are going to bed when your teenager is going out and getting up when he is coming in.

Cash Gifts Get Hearty Endorsement

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've written to you three times in my life — so far — and two of my letters have appeared in your column. Not bad! Here goes again:
Re money gifts at weddings: Why not? So many young people live together for a while before they tie the knot and really don't need any more serving pieces, toasters or blenders.
We gave both of our nephews money for wedding gifts. One of them pooled all his cash gifts and used it for something he really needed — a sizable down payment on a car.
I think the "correct" thing to do in every situation is what is sensible and practical for the people involved.
Any gift given with love and consideration for the recipients is "correct" in my book. Who cares what the etiquette books say!

T.J.F. IN AGAWAM, MASS.

DEAR T.J.F.: I agree. But the etiquette books say that cash gifts are "correct." What is incorrect is a wedding invitation accompanied by the suggestion that a gift of cash is preferred. In other words, it's okay to give cash, but it's not okay to ask for it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are having a knock-down, drag-out fight about a point of etiquette.
Here's the situation: My husband and I were dinner guests at the home of a couple in another city. On returning home the following day, we sent the hostess an exceptionally lovely arrangement of flowers to express our appreciation.
It's been two months, and we've heard nothing from the hostess to indicate that our flowers were received. (Never mind a "thank-you.") My husband maintains that our flowers were a "thank-you" for the dinner, and it's not necessary for her to thank us for having thanked her.
I say the hostess should have at least let us know our flowers were received. Who's right?

DEAR ABBY: Your column featuring the questionnaire to determine whether you are an alcoholic brought tears to my eyes.
I remember taking that test a year ago at my second A.A. meeting. The results convinced me that I was an alcoholic and had to do something about it.
When I was 17, I found myself drinking Coffee Royals at 8:30 a.m. to face my day. I had been drinking and drugging since I was 12. I was a basket case.
I am 18 now, and I have not had a drink, or drugs of any kind, for nearly a year. Tomorrow will be my first anniversary!
Alcoholics Anonymous has definitely saved my life. I have everything going for me. I came from a life of hell, and today I have a hell of a life!
Thanks for constantly plugging A.A. That column made my day.

BOBBY S.

DEAR BOBBY: No thanks due me. A.A. threw you a lifeline. You caught it. Congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: In your column in the Toronto Sun, someone raised the old chestnut about whether a man should remove his hat in an elevator when there are ladies present.
I thought that was settled once and for all years ago by Emily Post — but I won't swear to it. This is the essence of her reply, though not the exact wording:
"An elevator is a means of transportation, in the same category as a local bus, subway, train or streetcar. The only difference is that an elevator travels vertically, rather than horizontally. A man does not remove his hat in other vehicles, so there is no necessity for him to remove it in an elevator."
You're welcome.

The meringue-like top crumbles when cut or cool, so serve slices whole and hot.

1 large egg
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
10 slices thin white bread

Beat egg until foamy; add sugar and cinnamon; beat to blend. Spread about 1½ tablespoons of the mixture on each slice of bread; place slightly apart on foil-lined cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until sugar bubbles out from underneath the meringue-like top — about 15 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 10 slices. (Adapted from Richard T. Hougens' "Cooking with Hougens," published by Abingdon Press.)

Line the bottom of a 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan with wax paper; grease paper. On another sheet of wax paper thoroughly stir together white flour, whole wheat flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and ginger. In a medium bowl beat egg until foamy; add milk, honey and oil; beat to blend. Add flour mixture and stir until moistened. Stir in raisins. Turn into prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 45 to 50 minutes. Turn out on a wire rack; remove wax paper; turn right side up. Cool completely.

Those Surplus Meters

It was a relatively small item in a busy City Council agenda. By resolution the council declared 500 parking meters as surplus property. The proper officials were authorized to dispose of the meters by private sale and by a negotiated price.

It brings into focus that there are relatively few parking meters in Greenville anymore. They are only found on streets in locations of high parking use. Some parking lots are metered, generally to provide all-day parking.

There was a time when controversy raged over the installation of parking meters in Greenville as in other cities. Their legal justification was that they controlled the time a vehicle could be parked on the street. A big side benefit was that they also brought in revenue to the city — a point that parking meter salesmen pressed on municipal governing bodies.

Changes in business and shopping habits have eased downtown parking problems, and many of the meters that were once so controversial are now gone — declared surplus by the City Council.

Unanswered Questions

It was a story that has been told before and likely to be repeated:

Two doctors in California were charged with murder after family consultation and a decision to no longer mechanically perpetuate a life when the situation was hopeless. The patient continued to "live," and nutrients to continue that life were also withheld.

A judge cleared them of the charge. Were the doctors right or wrong?

You can find pros and cons on any street corner.

Another news item, this time from Washington, where a panel decided "it is not medically appropriate to devote limited intensive care unit resources without reasonable prospect of significant recovery when patients who need those services ... are being turned away for want of capacity".

Medical people are also confronted by another unwanted decision process of who is to live (and who is to die) in allocation of transplant organs (there may never be enough to fill the demand).

And there is still another unanswered question posed for the profession: Is the gift of continued life to be forever tied to ability to pay the extremely high costs those recently developed techniques involve?

Clearly there is a limit to funding those exotic life-saving techniques ... just as there must be a limit to the more mundane surgical repair or medical treatment of conditions involving less than life-or-death decisions.

Some needs can be met, some cannot. There will always be people who cannot pay the resulting high costs; and organizations and foundations who try to help are also limited by available funds.

There is no one to blame. That's just the way it is.

Increased Competition

WASHINGTON — News that almost half of all black teen-agers were unemployed last month didn't surprise participants at the National Conference on Black Youth Unemployment held here last weekend. It only bolstered their arguments for immediate measures.

Among black educators and public officials in attendance, there was widespread interest in President Reagan's proposed subminimum wage for youth and any number of public/private job-training programs. There was also talk of black business involvement, student entrepreneurship and new study commissions.

Yet a mountain of proposals couldn't hide the conference's current of skepticism, summed up well at one point by former representative Shirley Chisholm of Brooklyn. "Even with an economic upturn," she said, "black youths ... could easily remain mired in joblessness and despair, stuck in a grim choice of starve or steal."

Younger blacks, everyone agreed, were feeling the brunt of increased job competition from women and immigrants.

Yet technological change posed an equal, if not greater, problem. Educators asked whether functionally illiterate young blacks would find a place in the information age, with its emphasis on verbal and numerical skills. Despite claims that much work is destined to require little or no skill, they feared that frantic competition for lower-tier jobs would leave the disadvantaged even more so.

Meanwhile, many fear that the replacement of humans with machines in daily routines like communications and shopping, for example, will further disable the illiterate. If young blacks miss out on an education in basics they will be even more alienated from better-educated Americans.

While such prospects may find resolution in the high-tech proposals flying around Washington, they have yet to encourage black leaders. Indeed, according to a recent Washington Post poll, only one in three black parents believed that their children would grow up to be financially better off, down from three in four two years ago. Privately, no conference-goers would predict a tranquil future either.

WASHINGTON — It made not even a small splash in the local papers, but a recent decision of a U.S. District Court in Maryland could set off a nice new wave of litigation in the seas of organized labor. Temporarily, at least, the big boys have lost one, and the little guys have won one, and because this doesn't happen often, the story is worth telling.

Back in the summer of 1976, nearly seven years ago, 18 telephone workers in Maryland got together and filed suit against the giant Communications Workers of America. The plaintiffs had the help of the National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation in a cause that is dear to the foundation's heart. The workers were resisting the kind of extortion, in their view, that goes with a union shop.

Under a union shop contract, all employees in an affected bargaining unit are compelled (a) to become dues-paying members of the responsible union, or (b) to pay the union the equivalent of membership dues anyhow. The idea is that once a union is certified as a bargaining agent, the union must bargain for all employees whether or not they are union members. It is unfair for "free riders" to accept the benefits of a union's services without paying their rightful cost. Out of this line of reasoning comes the "agency fee."

I can cite an example, close at home, of how the system works. I am not a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists. Nevertheless, because the local AFTRA union has a union shop contract with local TV stations and major networks, I cannot get on the air unless I pay dues to the union. The union performs no service whatever for me, but that is of no consequence. The rule is, pay up or stay off the air. So I pay up, and it irks me sorely.

This was the situation among the telephone workers in Maryland. They had to pay dues to the CWA, or they had to quit their jobs. It was that simple. But a body of law has been slowly developing to this effect — that compulsory dues may be exacted from non-members for three purposes only: collective bargaining, contract administration and grievance procedures. Dissenting workers cannot be compelled to pay for a union's other activities.

In the case at hand, a "special master" appointed by the District Court took voluminous evidence on how the CWA spends its money. Whole batteries of accountants and experts were called in by both sides. The union contended that just about everything was related in some way to bargaining, contracts and grievances. For example, the union argued that its contributions to charities helped to create a favorable public view of union labor, and thus promoted an atmosphere conducive to productive bargaining. The special master threw that one out.

On careful examination, the special master last summer concluded that an astonishing 81 percent of the union's funds were being spent for "impermissible" purposes — that is, for purposes not directly related to bargaining, contracts or grievances. The recommendations of the special master floated up to District Judge James R. Miller Jr. On March 4, he reduced the 81 percent to 79 percent, and ordered the union to refund 79 percent of the agency fees that had been extracted from the plaintiffs.

The individual payments won't amount to more than a few hundred dollars to each of the 18 mavericks, but the legal principle has large application. The ruling means that, while a union is free to lobby for the Panama Canal Treaty or the Equal Rights Amendment, non-members cannot be compelled to pay for these extracurricular activities. Those who are caught in the nets of a union shop cannot be made to support causes they do not believe in and have no voice in determining.

The CWA of course will appeal Judge Miller's decision, and another few years may elapse before the suit finally is settled. Meanwhile, the court's order is bound to encourage the 5 or 6 percent within a typical bargaining unit who resent their captivity and want at least some relief. This was a small but significant victory for individual freedom. We don't win many, but we do win a few.

Mediation Is An Alternative

trained mediator working on a volunteer basis then works with the two sides trying to solve the problem without having it brought into court. In the case of the students, they got together and hammered out proper ownership of the refrigerator.

Martin says mediation solves problems while court appearances often just aggravate them. Take cases of domestic violence. In court, the question would be, "Did you do it?" There'd be charges and counter-charges and nothing would be done to alleviate the hostility that led to the violence in the first place.

In mediation, Martin says, the husband and wife would be brought together in a structured setting. First they'd get the chance to vent their emotions. But then the mediator would try to get back to the real problems that exist between the two. Nobody would be right, nobody wrong. The aim would be to find a settlement both sides could live with.

The Senate Judiciary II Committee heard this month that mediation has kept 1,200 cases out of Orange County courts in the past three years — saving an average of $200 in paperwork in each case.

Wade Barber, Orange district attorney, and District Court Judge Patricia Hunt

both testified that mediation has kept cases out of court that never deserved to be there in the first place. "These are the kind of cases which would take an hour and a half in court and the judge still wouldn't know what to do with it," Barber said.

Sue Harnett, a volunteer mediator, said most of the cases involve some kind of trespass or family problem. Serious cases of domestic violence and other serious crimes aren't considered for mediation — except in rare cases like that of the "stolen" refrigerator. She stressed that the mediators are not counselors and therefore don't handle cases where the problem really requires psychiatrists.

Martin's bill aims first to carve a niche in state law for mediation. Provisions need to be made to make the law mesh with criminal statutes of limitation and the speedy trials act. He doesn't want people using mediation to get around the law. Secondly, he's asking for money for rent, staff and volunteer training. Private grants now fund the state's two pilot programs. With the potential for relieving overcrowded court dockets, it would be a wise investment of state resources, he says.

Much Is At Stake In Adelman Debates

WASHINGTON — A murmur of surprise swept the closed-door Democratic caucus last week when patriarchal Sen. John Stennis, a pillar of presidential prerogative, rose to oppose the nomination of Kenneth Adelman to head the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA).

The unexpected defection of Stennis from President Reagan's choice of Adelman, now UN Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick's deputy, shows the self-imposed misery enveloping the White House and the State Department over a good nomination gone sour. Chances for the Senate to overturn the Foreign Relations Committee's unfavorable verdict on Adelman are only about 50-50.

Coupled with the smashing 3-to-1 House Foreign Affairs Committee approval of the nuclear freeze resolution, to be followed by certain House passage, the administration's handling of the twinned Adelman-freeze challenge shows dangerous capacity for self-destruction.

Much is at stake. It goes far beyond Adelman's survival or the eventual outcome of the freeze resolution. Yet from the start, Reagan's top advisers have trivialized the appointment of Ken Adelman, a serious diplomat well-equipped to handle ACDA. These same advisers have toyed with the freeze, an emotion-powered issue that finds its origin in the peace movements sweeping Europe and only briefly blunted by the West German election.

All but ignored in the selection of Adelman was Secretary of State George Shultz. Shultz consequently has no big stake in his confirmation by the Senate. Adelman's first champion was Ambassador Kirkpatrick. When she suggested him to national security adviser

William P. Clark, Clark snapped up the idea.

But Clark suddenly weakened when Adelman botched the first day of his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, partly because he was not adequately forewarned and forearmed by State Department aides. The State Department had no investment in Adelman to protect.

The trivialization of the nomination of Adelman, who one White House insider told us is now without top-level champions "except Ronald Reagan himself," has led to a spate of damaging rumors. Administration officials are quietly eyeing other possibilities for the ACDA post: former national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, named by Reagan to head the MX missile commission, and Max Kampelman, Reagan's choice as ambassador to the European Security Conference, to name two.

More worrisome is the way that Adelman's trivialization has played into the hands of the nuclear-freezers, fueling their outrageous charges that Reagan really does not understand the gravity of the nuclear issue and toys with the great questions of nuclear war.

Protecting Reagan's rearmament program is the real objective in the battle to defeat the nuclear freeze campaign. Its first target, cloaked in confusing rhetoric, is unilateral arms control by the U.S., supposedly to be followed sometime in the future by the Soviet Union.

That means foregoing deployment of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe and the abandonment of the MX missile, the B-1 bomber and the Trident 2 submarine missile at home. At stake are political pressures forcing Congress to embrace unilateralism

To the editor:

I would like to commend you for the article in Sunday's paper, "Study Reports Lung Cancer, Tobacco Link," showing that non-smokers who breathe smoke-filled air have a higher rate of lung cancer than those with little contact with smokers.

This article should motivate non-smokers in this area to speak up for their rights. Knowing that we non-smokers are by far the majority, we should be able to say, "I wish for your sake and mine you wouldn't," when smokers ask if we mind whether or not they smoke. For non-smokers who are unable to assert themselves, the American Lung Association has attractive signs inscribed, "Thank You for Not Smoking." Just stop by their office at 112 S. Speak up (kindly) non-smokers! You owe it to yourselves.

To the editor:

In behalf of the Downtown Washington Association, and also from a personal viewpoint, we want to acknowledge, with many thanks, the excellent coverage of our inner city as published in the Sunday edition of your paper.

The text and photographs by Jerry Raynor are truly outstanding.

For eight years, it has been my function and responsibility to coordinate the plans and programs for our downtown Washington members. We have over 60 retail stores and professional persons supporting our endeavors.

Our goal and prime objective is to attract people into our area, so we can share these wonderful buildings which represent so graphically the history, life and times of the past.

Our inner city is alive and well, not only due to the good planning of those who have gone before, but also the real feeling of dedication and desire to make things work. We have every assurance that our plans for future restoration and preservation of what we now have, along with the potential of attracting tourists and new residents, will, in every way, make downtown Washington increasingly attractive and viable.

Strength For Today

New truth always originates at a point of conflict. Jesus came to proclaim the greatest of all truths and was crucified. Galileo had a new scientific truth to proclaim and was forced to kneel and recant.

John Huss was burned at the stake in the 15th century and John Wesley and his Methodist associates were pelted and abused throughout the 18th century. Pasteur was assailed by the scientists of his day because he advanced a new theory regarding the nature of disease.

The most noted mathematician in the United States "proved" that an airplane could not possibly rise from the ground just a few weeks before the Wright brothers made one do so at Kitty Hawk. Scarcely 70 years have passed since Billy Mitchell was persecuted and disciplined by the Army because he insisted upon the importance of airplanes in warfare.

So what is the lesson we should derive from all this? Don't be afraid to be different.

Sold Marijuana To Pay For Her Candy

TAVARES, Fla. (AP) — An 11-year-old girl who said she sold a pinch of marijuana to pay for candy has been ordered to attend a drug counseling program and help clean up her school, officials say.

The sixth-grade girl told the Tavares school board Tuesday she sold marijuana to a classmate because she had eaten candy she was supposed to sell to raise money for the school band.

"I had to sell it for my M&Ms," said the youngster, trembling and swinging her legs under the table.

School officials ordered the unidentified Umatilla Middle School student to enroll in a six-week state drug counseling program to learn about the dangers of drugs and alcohol. They also said she must undergo private counseling and help clean up at the school under the direction of school principal Ted Martin.

"The girl was not expelled," said Pat Galbreath, assistant superintendent of administration. "She will have to perform work around the school. The principal will determine the kind of work and how long."

The 500 pupils at Umatilla Middle School were trying to raise money for the school band in early March by selling M&Ms for 50 cents a box. Each student taking part in the sale was supposed to sell six boxes.

The girl told school officials that after her candy was gone, she got the marijuana from her 26-year-old brother and sold it to a classmate for $1.

Galbreath, who said the whole school was talking about the marijuana sale, said the child who bought the pot was expelled after Martin investigated.

He said the marijuana sale was considered an isolated incident and school board officials had no intentions of clamping down on fundraising activities at the school.

The Forecast For Friday, March 18

•Low Temperatures

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain stretching from the lower peninsula of Michigan through the Carolinas and Georgia for Friday. Rain is also expected for much of California and snow for portions of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Strong high pressure off the northeastern United States, plus a strengthening low pressure area over the northeast Gulf of Mexico will keep a cool northeast flow over the state for the next several days.

The northeast flow will result in abundant moisture and a high probability of rain, the National Weather Service reported.

The strong high pressure made it necessary to issue gale warnings for the sounds and coastal waters of the state for northeast winds at 30 to 40 knots. Winds will subside some on Friday.

Rain is forecast through Friday, with heavy downpours times. Temperatures will hold in the 40s through Friday, except for the coast where readings around 50 will be the rule.

Fair weather will return to the state during the weekend. Temperatures will moderate upward.

Crank Calls

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet ambassador to the United Nations says his office has received 2,640 crank telephone calls since Jan. 1.

Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky blamed the calls on "anti-Soviet hooligans" but did not attribute them to any particular group.

In his letter addressed to the U.S. mission released Wednesday, Troyanovsky said that every day the Soviet mission received "a large number of telephone calls and threats to blow up the mission building, and with unprintable epithets."

"Thus, for example" he wrote, "in January 1983 there were 845 such calls and in February there were 1,795. This campaign of hooliganism is interfering with the normal work of the mission."

FURIOUS PEERS

LONDON (AP) — It's not just the poor who are angered by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's austerity plan. Peers in the House of Lords are furious over a tax increase on Scotch whisky, "the only sensible drink".

Indict Youth In Shooting Death

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old Charlotte youth has been indicted on charges of murder in the January shooting death of a Charlotte man who was waiting for a bus to go to work.

A Mecklenburg grand jury Tuesday also indicted him on charges of attempted armed robbery and conspiracy to commit armed robbery.

The boy is a ninth-grader at Albemarle Road Junior High School and is being detained under $50,000 bond at the Gatling Juvenile Diagnostic Center near Huntersville.

In the same case, a 17-year-old, Michael Leon McFadden, was indicted March 7 on the same three charges in the Jan. 23 shooting of James W. Gordon, 52.

The two were arrested Jan. 26 and the younger suspect's case was later sent to Superior Court where he will be tried as an adult. McFadden, a 10th-grader at Independence High School, remains jailed under $17,000 bond.

New Job For An Ex-Astronaut

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former astronaut Gerald Carr, who commanded the nation's longest manned space mission, has been named project manager for the world's largest single-mirror telescope.

The 300-inch telescope is proposed for the McDonald Observatory, part of the University of Texas. It will take five years to grind, form and polish, according to university officials, who said Carr will manage the development and construction of the telescope.

Restoration Of Capitol Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel is trying to decide whether to restore the crumbling West Front of the Capitol or to add an extension to that side of the building.

In his most recent cost estimate, the architect of the Capitol, George White, maintains restoration alone would cost $66 million, while extension would cost $73 million.

William Ensign, assistant architect of the Capitol, told a House public works subcommittee Wednesday that a special commission appointed to examine the issue is split over whether to restore or extend.

The West Front is the only remaining original wall of the Capitol. The sandstone facade has been crumbling for decades and White's predecessor had wooden buttresses erected to keep it in place as Congress argued over what to do about it.

"There is no justification for destroying this historic architectural monument just for the purpose of putting in costly hideaway offices for more senior members," said Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., who noted he has been following the issue since 1959.

"At a time of critical budget deficits, it would be most unseemly for the Congress to spend anything further for its own comfort, rather than to concentrate on preserving, not destroying, one of the architectural marvels of the western world," Stratton said.

But Ensign told the panel an extension on the west side of the Capitol, while preserving the present wall as an interior wall, would follow the original plan for the building.

"To say that the Capitol, a building that has evolved over many years, ought not to be completed in accordance with its plan, is a rather negative approach to historic preservation, in my judgment," he said.

The East Front was moved out 34 feet in 1959 and the first plan to extend the West Front was proposed in 1966. That original plan would have included a restaurant overlooking the Mall and a visitors center, as well as a number of hideaway offices for senior members of Congress.

A modified plan abandoned the restaurant and visitors center and would only partly fill in the empty spaces between the original Capitol and wings added later. But that plan has not been accepted either, and the deadlock over what to do has continued.

Russian Talking Of Missiles Near U.S. Borders

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Soviet official said today that if the United States and its allies deployed medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe, Moscow would have to set up its own rockets "near American borders" to achieve equality. It was believed to be the first time any Soviet official was that specific about how the Kremlin could react to NATO plans to begin deploying 572 new Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe by the end of the year.

Georgi Arbatov, director of the U.S.A. and Canada Institute at the Soviet Academy of Science, wrote in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda:

"As far as equality (of weaponry) is concerned, in that case for the sake of this equality we would have not only to add to our missiles in Europe, but also to deploy them near American borders."

The New York Times today quoddd the chief of the Soviet General Staff, Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, as saying in an interview that if U.S. missiles in Europe were used against the Soviet Union, Moscow would directly strike the United States.

Ogarkov was quoted as saying "it is not logical to believe we will retaliate only against targets in Europe. Let me tell you this, if some of your experts think this, they are foolish. ... The idea of a nuclear war has never been tested. But by logic, to keep such a war limited will not be possible."

In the propaganda battle that has accompanied Soviet-American talks in Geneva on reducing both long-range and medium-range missiles, the Soviets have said on at least two occasions that the American deployment would force Moscow to put Washington "in an analogous position."

Some Western analysts said that meant the Soviets would install nuclear-tipped rockets in Cuba, but the Soviets were never more specific until the Arbatov article today. Arbatov, however, never mentioned where near American borders the Soviets would put missiles.

Arbatov also rejected as "a propaganda ploy" indications from Washington and other NATO capitals that the Reagan administration might be ready to seek an interim agreement on missiles deployed in Europe.

Reagan's current position calls for the Soviets to dismantle their more than 600 medium-range missiles aimed at Western Europe, in exchange for which Washington would scrap plans to deploy the new NATO nuclear force.

Reagan has come under pressure to modify his position and agree to a smaller Soviet reduction coupled with a limited American deployment.

But Arbatov claimed that any deployment of new U.S. missiles meant that "the American side would actually undermine the ground for talks on nuclear weapons."

"But if a change is really ripening in Washington, it will, of course, be noticed in Moscow in time," Arbatov added, saying that the Soviets would be "reliable partners in any fair talks and agreements."

Western arms experts in Moscow saw the article as essentially a restatement of the position set out Feb. 24 by Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. Gromyko said a breakdown of the medium-range negotiations could have a serious effect on talks on limiting strategic missiles.

Gromyko also hinted that the Soviets might pull out of the medium-range talks if NATO goes forward with the deployment.

Demo Officials Angry Over Byrne's Decision

By PEGGY ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Jane Byrne's decision to defy her own party and mount a write-in campaign for reelection drew cheers from dozens of City Hall supporters, but angered Democratic officials.

"It's been said, 'It isn't over til it's over,'" Mrs. Byrne said Wednesday at a city hall news conference where she announced her write-in candidacy. "Well, I'm here to tell you that it isn't over yet."

Mrs. Byrne, who lost the Democratic nomination in the Feb. 22 primary election to U.S. Rep. Harold Washington, said three weeks ago that she would support him against Republican Bernard Epton.

"She still does not realize that she's finished," said Washington, who hopes to become the city's first black mayor. "She would still rather destroy Chicago and the Democratic Party ... than abide by the will of the people as expressed on primary day."

Asked how he believed members of the community would respond, the two-term congressman said: "You have to be thunderstruck ... I think there's a shock all over this city."

Epton said Byrne's announcement "certainly doesn't help me. I'm not thrilled."

Saying her experience makes her the best candidate, Mrs. Byrne charged that neither Epton nor Washington had offered any effective new programs for the city. "I've seen nothing but divisiveness," she said.

Some powerful city Democrats have been reluctant to support Washington, and a few have openly endorsed Epton.

Mrs. Byrne's announcement drew protest from Democrats around the city, the state and the nation, along with pledges of support for Washington.

Democratic National Committee Chairman Charles Manatt said Washington's "well-deserved victory in the Democratic primary should not and cannot be denied by this mischievous and hopeless write-in effort."

Washington said Mrs. Byrne's move was "clearly an act of political desperation" and one more sign of the "instability that has marked that administration."

He said he hoped Mrs. Byrne "will reconsider what she's done and bow out gracefully."

Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, who finished third behind Mrs. Byrne and Washington in the Democratic primary, said "the obvious strategy behind a write-in campaign is an appeal to racial divisiveness."

Mrs. Byrne denied she is making race an issue. "I honestly believe that I will be the best mayor for blacks in Chicago," she said.

She characterized the new three-way race as a "runoff," noting that many major cities require primary voters to win more than 50 percent of the vote. Washington won 36.5 percent, or 424,146 of the primary votes. Mrs. Byrne placed second with 33.4 percent, followed by Daley with 29.6 percent.

Chicago has never elected a mayor on a write-in vote.

Nixon Library Land Offered

WHITTIER, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon's hometown has offered to donate 25 acres of city land valued at more than $125,000 for a Nixon presidential library.

The City Council voted 4-1 Tuesday to offer a portion of 125 acres originally planned for future expansion of a landfill in the community 15 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

The lone dissenter, Councilman Bob Henderson, said he has "never been a great Nixon lover."

Henderson said the proposal was worth considering because of Nixon's historical significance, but he asked for more study and a public hearing.

"We're talking about a gift of public funds of substantial magnitude," he said.

Mayor Lee Strong said, "All we are doing ... is telling Mr. Nixon that out of 125 acres we have 25 to set aside for a presidential library."

Nixon resigned Aug. 9, 1974, amid the Watergate scandal.

The Richard M. Nixon Archives Foundation informed the University of California-Irvine recently that the Orange County campus had been dropped from consideration for the library "due to time constraints" in locating a site, said Assistant Chancellor Ramon Curial.

City manager Tom Mauk said the land was valued at $5,000 an acre when it was purchased 10 years ago but that it would have to be re-evaluated.

Accused Spy Flying Home

MOSCOW (AP) — American diplomat Richard W. Osborne, branded a spy by the KGB secret police last week, has left the Soviet Union, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

It was believed Osborne left Wednesday night on a Lufthansa flight to Frankfurt, but that could not be confirmed.

The embassy provided no details and still has refused to comment on the substance of the KGB charges published last Thursday in the government newspaper Izvestia.

Izvestia said that the KGB detained Osborne "red-handed March 7 while (he was) working with espionage radio equipment."

The newspaper said that a "set of portable intelligence special-purpose apparatus for the transmission of espionage information via the U.S. Marisat communications satellite" was confiscated from Osborne.

Osborne was a first secretary in the U.S. Embassy's economic section.

The last known expulsion of a U.S. diplomat from Moscow came in January 1978 when Donald Kursch, a first secretary, was kicked out in retaliation for the expulsion of a Soviet trade mission official from Washington.

The last Soviet diplomat expelled from the United States was Maj. Gen. Vasili I. Chitov, who left the Soviet Embassy in Washington in February 1982 after reportedly being caught with sensitive U.S. military information.

Wine Franchise, Nuke Freeze Clear N.C. Hurdles

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill to allow wineries and wholesalers to enter into franchise agreements and a resolution supporting a nuclear freeze advanced Wednesday in the General Assembly.

The House voted 75-37 to support the franchise bill after two lawmakers said wineries recently have withdrawn distributing rights from wholesalers in their area. The measure was expected to go before the Senate today for concurrence in several amendments.

One of the amendments approved Wednesday would remove from the bill wineries selling less than 1,000 cases of wine in the state each year. Bill sponsor Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said he wrote the amendment to calm the fears that some small, specialty wineries would be hurt by the bill.

The bill would require wineries to divide the state into territories and select one primary distributor in each area. The distributor would not be limited to selling wine within his territory.

It also would require wineries and wholesalers to enter into franchise agreements that could not be broken unless the distributor loses his license, goes bankrupt, fails to maintain an adequate sales volume or fails to offer services comparable to those elsewhere in the state.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, unsuccessfully tried to amend the bill Wednesday to limit wholesalers to trading within their territory. He said the amendment would protect small distributors, but opponents said it would unconstitutionally restrict trade.

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, tried without success to send the bill back to committee.

"Everyday we wait more wholesalers are being stripped of their franchises out there and more pressure is being applied," Nesbitt said. "We're about to the point where they've already done what we're trying to stop with the bill."

Meanwhile, the Senate State Government Committee endorsed the nuclear arms freeze resolution after rejecting a motion by Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, to send the resolution to the Senate Rules Committee.

The resolution asks President Reagan and Congress to seek a bilateral, verifiable freeze in nuclear weapons production by the United States and the Soviet Union. The House already has approved an identical resolution.

Hardison argued that since the Rules Committee is considering a "peace through strength" resolution he introduced, it also should consider the freeze resolution.

But Hancock, State Government Committee chairman, said Hardison's motion was a thinly veiled attempt to kill the resolution.

"I think there's no doubt ... the purpose of this motion is to bury it in committee," Hancock said. "We have an obligation to act on this. It should reach the Senate floor where all the senators can vote on it."

But Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, chairman of the Rules Committee, said that if the resolution was sent to his panel, it would "receive the fair hearing it's entitled to."

In other legislative action:

Wildlife

The House tentatively approved a bill that would require deer hunters to pay a $5 fee to enter a computer lottery to participate in state-managed hunts.

It also would let the state charge $25 a day for using a three-man blind during a state-managed duck or goose hunt. The fee could be split by the three hunters using the blind.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Jim Lambeth, D-Davidson, said the state hopes to conduct waterfowl hunts sometime in the future. He said the fees are needed to run the computer system for selecting hunt participants and for maintaining the hunting grounds.

CAMA

Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank, said he will introduce a bill later this week to expand the Coastal Resources Commission from 15 to 20 members — a change rejected earlier by the Legislative Research Commission.

Daniels said there are 20 counties covered by the Coastal Area Management Act, a coastal land-use plan, and each should be represented on the commission. He said he would like to see the commission's advisory council reduced from its current 47 members.

Members of the research commission rejected the idea because they said it would make the commission similar to a coastal legislature.

Daniels told the joint House-Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Natural and Economic Resources about his plans. The subcommittee is looking at the 1983-85 funding requests for CAMA.

Twin Trailers

Daniels filed a bill Wednesday to limit twin-trailer trucks to traveling on interstates or four-laned roads although access to terminals would be provided.

The bill also would limit the size of the trucks to less than 80,000 pounds and less than 48 feet long.

Daniels, who opposes the use of twin trailers, said the bill would comply with the recently enacted federal gasoline tax that allows the twin trailers on interstates. But he said he was concerned about the trucks damaging rural roads in eastern and western North Carolina.

Drunken Driving

Lancaster, D-Wayne, predicted that House floor debate on Gov. Jim Hunt's drunken driving bill will begin next Tuesday. The House version of Hunt's bill won speedy approval of the House Appropriations Committee Wednesday, having earlier been passed by the House Judiciary III and Finance committees.

A legislative analyst told the Appropriations Committee that the bill is expected to raise $1.2 million the first year it's in effect and $1.7 million the second year through fee imposition. It is expected to cost the court system $923,000 and the Department of Motor Vehicles an amount still undetermined.

The analyst stressed that the figures were tentative, but Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, moved that the bill be approved if money to fund it is appropriated by Aug. 15.

"You can't hold up a bill as important as this to see what the costs will be," said Adams. "We're exercising an abundance of caution by giving ourselves until August to find the money. And the money will be found."

At Lancaster's request, the bill was sent back to the Judiciary III Committee, where the Senate version approved Tuesday also has been sent.

Lancaster said the committee probably would revise the Senate bill to conform with the House version, then send it to the House floor. The House bill will receive no further action, he said.

Both versions would raise the legal minimum age for drinking beer and wine from 18 to 19. They would create a new charge, driving while impaired, to replace driving under the influence and other related offenses.

They would revoke the driver's license of any driver blowing 0.10 on the Breathalyzer.

The bills, however, differ in some significant respects. While the Senate version imposes dram shop liability only for sales of alcoholic beverages to underaged patrons, the House bill retains a provision the Senate struck which would impose the civil liability for sales to drunken patrons for on-premises consumption.

Housing

The House Committee on Housing approved a bill that would create a state Housing Commission, the centerpiece of a program put forth by a legislative study committee. The bill was sent to the Appropriations Committee.

Election Checkoff

The state Senate gave final approval to a bill revising the procedure for designating $1 on income tax forms for political campaigns.

Under the bill sponsored by Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, taxpayers no longer would ask that the money go to a specific party. Instead, taxpayers simply would indicate that they'd like to donate $1 to the campaign fund. The money collected then would be distributed to all the parties on a prorated basis, depending on their number of registered voters.

The Senate voted 39-7 to table an amendment by Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, to do away with the checkoff altogether.

Redman said the money collected last year, about $250,000, could have gone to the General Fund and gone to far better use.

Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, said that a greater percentage of registered Republicans than Democrats traditionally donate the dollar. He said Republicans stood to lose about $10, under the new system.

The bill passed, 40-6.

Passed unanimously was a bill to permit registration of voters in public libraries.

Child Support

The Senate approved unanimously on its second reading a bill allowing court clerks to initiate action against ex-spouses who fall behind in child support payments.

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said a "disgracefully high" number of fathers were in arrears on their payments and that

Say Response Is 'Favorable'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state agency says it has gotten favorable feedback to a proposal to upgrade training for police officers in North Carolina towns where most training done is on the job.

The Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission held four hearings across the state — the most recent one conducted in Raleigh. Commission Chairman Wade Barber Jr. of Pittsboro said the response to a pre-service training plan has been favorable.

However, the proposal to make officers complete the required 240 hours of training before starting work could hinder small police departments, said Barber, district attorney for Chatham and Orange counties.

The commission is considering options that would require just part of the training before officers start their duty, he added.

"While North Carolina's larger cities already have pre-service training, none of the smaller cities do because they cannot afford their own police academies," Barber said. "New recruits may be sworn in, given a badge, issued a weapon and go to work without any training at all."

About two-thirds of the state's officers begin work before their training starts. Officers have 12 to 18 months to complete their training.

Most training is done in the state's community college system, funded by the state and local police departments. Barber said he hoped that arrangement could continue in pre-service training.

Barber said small departments must fill vacancies quickly to avoid a lapse in law enforcement and they frequently must put a trainee to work immediately.

the only recourse for mothers was to hire an attorney and file a lawsuit.

A final vote was delayed until analysts could prepare a study of the bill's costs.

N.C. Speakers Praise Proposal On Constitutional Amendments

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Proposed constitutional amendments should go before the state's voters during general elections, although they may be overshadowed by races for major offices, a prospective gubernatorial candidate says.

Tom Gilmore, chairman of a grassroots organization called the Committee on Constitutional Integrity, Wednesday supported House and Senate bills to require

Group Buys Shelby Star

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — The Shelby Daily Star was sold Wednesday to a West Virginia-based newspaper group after 89 years of local ownership.

Henry Lee Weathers, publisher of the Star the past 25 years, announced the sale to Clay Communications Inc. The company owns three newspapers in West Virginia and last year bought the Monroe Enquirer Journal.

It also owns television stations in Wilmington, N.C., Jackson, Miss., and two in Texas — Wichita Falls and Port Arthur.

The sale price was not disclosed.

Star employees were told of the sale Wednesday morning.

Weathers, 69, whose family, along with General Manager Ned Smith, has owned the Star since 1911, cited his approaching retirement and the expense of future newspaper production as major reasons for the sale.

Smith will become president and general manager for an indefinite period.

Weathers said in an interview that several large newspaper companies were interested in buying the Star.

CCI is based in Charleston, W.Va., and Lyell B. Clay is Chairman of the Board.

in workers' compensation payments for lung ailments such as brown lung. Present law limits the payments to $20,000.

Under the bill, payments would depend on the degree of breathing difficulty over a certain period of time.

Staton also filed legislation to increase salaries paid to State Industrial Commission members and their deputies.

Many of the other speakers were board members of Gilmore's committee or otherwise affiliated with it. They included David Stedman of the Stedman Corporation based in Asheville, his associate Don Vaughn, former legislator Ralph Scott, former Raleigh Mayor Isabella Cannon, University of North Carolina law student Harry Kaplan, Mrs. Holt and former lawmaker Jim Beatty.

Several speakers and the N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry endorsed another bill introduced by Mrs. Holt. It would require publication of summaries of proposed amendments "in layman's language" at least 60 days prior to their consideration by the voters.

"Sending these summaries to the news media, county elections boards and elsewhere hopefully would have people more informed before they go to the polls," said Mrs. Holt.

White House Hunts A Permanent Chief For EPA

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The White House is moving rapidly to find a new head for the Environmental Protection Agency, whose acting director ran into controversy just a week after he took over, a Reagan administration official says.

The official said it was "extremely unlikely" that acting director John W. Hernandez Jr. would get the job permanently following revelations about his record at the troubled agency.

"There is a sense we need to move on an expedited basis and as rapidly as we can," the White House official said Wednesday night, speaking on condition that he not be further identified.
The official said President Reagan's senior advisers have narrowed the list of potential administrators to approximately six names.

Hernandez became the center of new controversy Wednesday when he told a congressional panel that he showed a 1981 EPA draft report on dioxin to the Dow Chemical Co., the manufacturer of the toxic chemical.

But Hernandez, who was then deputy EPA administrator, denied ordering changes in the final version that deleted critical references to Dow.
Hernandez said the Chicago EPA office deleted the critical references to Dow. But EPA spokeswoman Kathy Brown, in Chicago, said the changes were ordered by Hernandez' subordinates in Washington.

Hernandez was named by Reagan to replace Anne McGill Burford on March 9. But since then, White House and EPA officials said he has had no contact or direct instructions from the president.

Mrs. Burford resigned under pressure from Congress, where six panels are investigating EPA, looking into allegations of political manipulation, perjury, conflict of interest and "sweetheart" deals with industry.

According to the White House official, the list of potential nominees to take over the agency permanently includes: William D. Ruckelshaus, the first administrator of the agency when it began operation in the Nixon administration and now a Weyerhaeuser Co. official; Christopher DeMuth, a budget office executive responsible for the administration's regulatory reform program; Henry Diamond, a Washington lawyer who was an aide to former N.Y. Gov. Nelson Rockefeller; and James Buckley, the former Republican senator from New York who has worked for the Reagan State Department.

In addition, said the official, "There are a couple of others" on the list. But one of those mentioned in the past week as a possible nominee, John Quarles, a former EPA official, has been ruled out, the White House source said.

Hernandez has also said he would like the EPA job permanently.
While the White House source discussed the urgency attached to the search, he said there was "no guarantee" that it would be resolved this week. He said he did not think the list of nominees had been discussed with the president.

Since assuming the No. 1 spot at EPA, Hernandez has dealt with the White House through Craig Fuller, the assistant to the president for Cabinet affairs, according to Peter Rousell, a deputy White House press secretary.

Hernandez' executive assistant, Helen Cameron, said "there has been no direct contact between the president and Dr. Hernandez. I think we've been in a holding pattern here."

Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes, said the president had full confidence in Hernandez.

At the House Public Works subcommittee hearing Wednesday, House members quizzed Hernandez about the 1981 dioxin study which said in a draft that Dow's plant in Midland, Mich. "has been the primary contributor to contamination of the Tittabawassee and Saginaw Rivers and Lake Huron."

The draft also said consumption of fish from those waterways "should be prohibited" because of the contamination.

Those sections were deleted from the final report. On Tuesday Rep. James H. Scheuer, D-N.Y., said he had evidence that Hernandez ordered the changes after showing the preliminary report to Dow.

But Hernandez said the changes were made by "the people who wrote the report; the people in Region 5 (Chicago)."

According to Ms. Brown in Chicago, it was a dioxin work group in Washington under Hernandez that ordered the changes.

"A coordinating committee working on the dioxin report in Washington was headed by Donald Barnes, who was accountable to Hernandez," Ms. Brown said. "The conclusions implicating Dow were omitted at the request of the work group in Washington from the final draft, drawn up several months after the original."

EPA spokesman Richard C. Hoffmann said in Washington, "We're still trying to sort this out ourselves."

The White House said the EPA inspector general was investigating the allegations about Hernandez and the Dow report.

N.C. National Guard To Get New Battle Tanks

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's National Guard will soon be the first guard or reserve unit to receive 63 of the Army's newest and most advanced battle tanks.

Guard officials confirmed Tuesday that the guardsmen will get the M-1 Abrams tanks, which are worth more than $126 million altogether. The weapons distribution is the largest single allocation ever made to a guard unit.

The guardsmen are getting the tanks at the same time they are being distributed to Regular Army units in the United States and Germany, said Lt. Gen. Emmett Walker, chief of the National Guard Bureau, in Washington.

In the past, reserve and Guard units have been the recipients of cast-off equipment the Regular Army either had used already or cannot use.

There is such a close correlation now between the roles of the reserve and guard and the Regular Army "that there would be no time in an emergency to switch equipment," said an Army spokesman who declined to be named.

The 252d Armor will receive the 63 Abrams tanks. That unit would be called to duty to "round out" the Regular Army's 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas, in a national emergency.

"It will help tremendously for the Guard unit to have the same equipment, ready to roll, manned by competent soldiers and technicians," said the Army spokesman. "There will be no lost time."

The M-1 Abrams tanks will be assigned to the 252d headquarters at Raeford and to units in Southern Pines, Sanford, Albemarle, Red Springs and Laurinburg.

The Army spokesman described the Abrams as "the most modern of any U.S. armored fighting vehicle ... noted for its survivability, improved firepower, ease of maintainability and increased mobility." The Abrams contains a new, highly sophisticated weapon system.

Lt. Donna K. Willis of National Guard headquarters in Raleigh said that because of the skills required to operate and maintain the Abrams, qualified men from southeastern North Carolina were recruited for the Guard.

Thirty-one newly enlisted guardsmen left this week for Fort Knox, Ky., to undergo 14 weeks of basic and advanced training to become crewmen on the Abrams, she added.

The guardsmen will begin getting the first of their tanks in June or July after the first crewmen are trained.

Wallace 'Home' To Meet Glenn

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, declaring he felt weak but "all right" after six days in hospital, returned home to meet privately with Democratic presidential candidate John Glenn.

Wallace, greeting the Ohio senator with a smile Wednesday, said, "I feel all right. It's just a matter of being confined and being weak. I've sat up all day."

The 63-year-old Wallace, confined to a wheelchair since a 1972 assassination attempt, met with Glenn shortly after being released from Jackson Hospital.

Wallace's six-day stay was the second time in less than a month that he had been hospitalized. The first trip was for treatment of an inflamed colon. Aides said a reaction to medication prompted the latest trip.

Pot Yacht Sold At Auction To Duo Who Want To Go Sailing

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer
GLOUCESTER POINT, Va. (AP) — A 63-foot yacht found abandoned with six tons of marijuana aboard last May has been sold to two men who plan to use it "just for sailing."

The Endless Summer was sold at auction for $67,000 Wednesday as police scoured the crowd for possible suspects in the still-unsolved drug smuggling case.

The yacht was found abandoned in the Mobjack Bay north of Yorktown last May 5. Acting on a telephone tip, the Coast Guard boarded the anchored vessel and found six tons of marijuana worth about $6 million.

William M. Jordan of Grafton and Paul Shaver, a Nags Head, N.C. realty company owner, bought the boat in the auction on the Virginia Institute of Marine Science dock.

Jordan, owner of a used auto parts business, said he and Shaver would use the white, wood-trimmed ketch "just for sailing."

Hoping for leads in the case, Gloucester County sheriff's deputies photographed the crowd of about 150 and copied down car license plate numbers.

"We got photographs of just about everybody that was here," said Deputy Frank Crotty.

He said police surveyed the crowd in case drug smugglers tried to buy the yacht again.

"There have been boats seized that have been seized more than once," he said.

About 15 people placed bids on the boat, which police had stripped of radio and radar gear. Bidding started at $20,000, and within five minutes auctioneer Meyer Chovitz called out, "Sold at $67,000."

The new owners must pay a 10 percent down payment on the boat by today and the balance within 21 days. The sale must be finally approved by the Gloucester County Circuit Court. The proceeds will go to the State Literary Fund, used for funding school and construction projects.

When the auction ended, a Gloucester County sheriff's officer led Jordan away to sign the ownership papers.

"I feel like I'm being arrested," Jordan joked. "I just want to go sailing."

One of the boat's former owners, Parham Bridges of Jackson, Miss., said he sold the boat to an unidentified man in 1981 for about $200,000.

When the boat was abandoned, its owner turned out to be a fictitious company based in Delaware, said Lt. David Hudgins of the Gloucester County Sheriff's Department.

Jordan said he expects it will cost about $50,000 to get the 19-year-old boat ready for sailing.

Asked if he had owned a boat before, Jordan said yes, but added emphatically, "not this one."

Say Fainting A Hysteria

BOSTON (AP) — When dozens of school children fainted and fell ill during a choir practice and concert, many people believed they had been poisoned. But a study released today concludes they were victims of mass hysteria.

The incident occurred in May 1981 at Narragansett Regional High School in Tiverton, about 60 miles west of Boston. Twice during the day, youngsters suffered fainting, nausea, abdominal pain, shortness of breath, itchy eyes and other symptoms for no apparent reason.

Urine tests conducted on the children disclosed tiny amounts of n-butylbenzene sulfonamide, a chemical found in insecticide Wednesday by telephone.

The "teleradiology system" — the nation's first — is expected to revolutionize X-ray transmission and storage, allowing X-rays to be sent anywhere in the country, and possibly in the world, in less than a minute.

Dick Beder, president of Ratel Labs Inc., which designed the system, said transmission speed of 20 seconds to 50 seconds is possible.

Ratel, a 15-month-old company based in Campbell, has $5 million in sales pending, Bader said.

Plans Fight Allegations

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Ronald Dellums, denying that he or his aides ever bought or used drugs, is challenging the House ethics committee and the Justice Department to be specific about any such accusations.

"I am aware of these vague allegations that are directed at us," the California Democrat told a news conference Wednesday. "I flatly deny them."

Dellums made the assertions in the wake of media reports that Robert Yesh, until Wednesday a 13-year employee of the House doorkeeper's office, had told a federal grand jury that Dellums and some of his aides had bought and used cocaine and marijuana.

Dellums, 47, said he had hired Washington attorney Michael Tigar to meet today with House ethics and Justice officials involved in probes of possible drug use on Capitol Hill.

Tigar was to meet with Joseph Califano, the special counsel hired by the ethics committee. He also hoped to arrange a session with D. Lowell Jensen, head of Justice's criminal division.

Dellums said Tigar would be trying to learn "who said what, what were we supposed to have done and when we were supposed to have done it — to find out in very specific terms."

Tigar also said he planned to investigate the possibility that the allegations were "politically motivated" because they showed up in the media just before Wednesday's House debate on the nuclear freeze resolution.

Dellums, a liberal, is a vocal advocate of the freeze, which is opposed by the Reagan administration.

"I don't have the factual basis to suspect that these leaks are politically motivated," Tigar said.

"Their timing, coming as they do in the middle of the nuclear freeze debate, might give rise to a suspicion that would cause a reasonable person to investigate. We're reasonable people, and we intend to investigate."

Tigar said that Dellums does not know Yesh and added that "no representative of government has identified who this faceless informant is."

Dellums, he continued, "has received no formal notification from the Justice Department about anything." He said the representative has been told by the ethics panel that it is conducting a preliminary inquiry.

"A preliminary inquiry under the rules of the House can be conducted even (when), as here, the evidence is totally incredible and unworthy of belief," the attorney said.

There has been no comment on the published reports by the Justice Department or the ethics committee, which usually operates under strict secrecy.

The panel met Tuesday for about 90 minutes. Califano and aides participating in his investigation were closeted with the committee.

The House doorkeeper, James Molloy, says he has accepted a written resignation from Yesh, whose salary, according to House records, was about $30,500 a year.

Yesh, 39, began as a doorman and in 1972 became a telephone assistant who took messages for lawmakers, according to a doorkeeper office source who requested anonymity.

The source said that Yesh was transferred to the document room in December after the ethics committee told Molloy that Yesh's name "had come up" in an investigation.

Arrested As Libyan Spy

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — An American who worked here as a waitress has been arrested and charged with espionage for collecting sensitive information on Swiss officials, authorities said today. She reportedly passed the details on to a Libyan diplomat posted in Bern.

Swiss officials identified the woman as Alexandra Lincoln, 30, dubbed the "Mata Hari of Bern" in local newspapers today.

They said the Libyan was out of the country and would shortly be leaving his post at the embassy in Bern.

The newspaper reports said Ms. Lincoln, whom they called an "attractive blonde," had worked since 1980 at exclusive restaurants frequented by politicians and government officials. They said the Libyan paid her 14,000 Swiss francs, or almost $7,000 for the information.

Government officials would not discuss details of the case and the newspaper reports did not say what information she is accused of passing.

There was no answer at a telephone number listed for Alexandra Lincoln in Bern.

Apologizes For 'Slob' Label

HOT SPRINGS, S.D. (AP) — Allegations of unclean living made by this town's mayor prompted the sudden appearance of bumper stickers bearing the slogan "I'm proud to be a country slob."

Mayor Joe Lux said on a local radio show several weeks ago that the city was going to crack down on

Charge Attempt Poison Teacher

VERNON, Fla. (AP) — Two students accused of trying to poison their English teacher by spiking his coffee with a caustic lye have been charged with felonies and suspended from school, authorities say.

The students, both 16 and sophomores at Vernon High School, allegedly put sodium hydroxide in the instructor's cup of coffee while he was out of the classroom.

They have been remanded to the custody of their parents.

The youths are charged with poisoning food or water, a first-degree felony that carries a possible penalty of 30 years to life imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Vernon Police Chief Robert Whitehurst said the boys allegedly put the lye into Gregg Patterson's coffee cup Friday afternoon. The teacher reported the incident after he took some of the coffee into his mouth, only to spit it back into his cup without swallowing.

Patterson told Whitehurst his mouth began burning after he sipped the coffee. A laboratory analysis showed the coffee contained traces of sodium hydroxide, which presumably came from the school's chemistry laboratory.

A spokeswoman for the Gulf Regional Poison Control Center at Pensacola said swallowing sodium hydroxide could "burn the mouth, throat and can eat through the esophagus and cause burns lower down."

Whitehurst theorized the two knew what they were doing and that the incident may have started as a joke. He described them as "A and B" students, and said that to his knowledge, the two had not been in any previous trouble.

Principal Jerry Tyre suspended the boys for 10 days. A decision on whether they will be expelled will be taken up by the Washington County School Board at its meeting next month.

Pat O'Brien Guest Of Honor For Irish

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Some of Hollywood's most famous Irish eyes, including those of James Cagney, Martin Sheen and Gene Kelly, were smiling in honor of actor Pat O'Brien at an Irish group's dinner.

O'Brien was the guest of honor at a $100-a-plate United Irish Societies of Southern California testimonial banquet on the eve of St. Patrick's Day to raise funds for an Irish cultural center to be named after him.

The dinner Wednesday night drew some two dozen celebrities including Robert Stack, Ralph Edwards, Scott Brady, Forrest Tucker and Richard Egan. Also on hand were one-time O'Brien leading ladies Jane Wyatt, Dorothy Lamour and Virginia Mayo, as well as O'Brien's non-Irish friends Cesar Romero, Loni Anderson and master of ceremonies Bob Hope, who delivered a series of Irish jokes.

"Pat is so Irish, he makes Donald O'Connor look Lithuanian," Hope said.

However, Hope drew his biggest laugh from the audience of about 900 at the Beverly Hilton Hotel when he described the Irish organization as "the group that arranged the weather for the queen's visit. That poor lady went back to England with webbed feet."

Hope also referred to O'Brien's starring role in "Knute Rockne, All-American," in which a then-unknown Ronald Reagan played the role of football star George Gipp.

"Pat told him to get out of the business," Hope said of Reagan, "and it turned out to be good advice."

Cagney, a longtime friend of O'Brien's who co-starred with him in such films as "Angels with Dirty Faces," residents with messy or dirty lawns. People who want to live like slob should move to the country, he said.

That led to the bumper stickers, the brainchild of local businessman Bill Sides.

Lux later apologized, saying he was misunderstood and didn't really think rural residents were slob.

Former Justice Held On Island

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A former Texas Supreme Court justice who fled to the Caribbean to avoid a prison term was being held on the island of St. Thomas after consular officials had him arrested on St. Vincent island, officials say.

Don Yarbrough, who was sentenced to five years in prison for perjury, faces felony bond-jumping charges, District Attorney Ronnie Earle said Wednesday.

Yarbrough resigned from the high court July 16, 1977, and, more recently, "Ragtime," flew in from New York to attend the banquet.

Confined to a wheelchair, the 83-year-old Cagney spoke only briefly but got O'Brien to give a spirited rendition of the Irish ditty, "Donegal."

ECU Gridders Opening Spring Drills

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina head football coach Ed Emory will find plenty of familiar faces on hand Friday when the Pirates open spring drills.

But perhaps the biggest crew of new faces will be on his own staff, where only two veterans return, along with one volunteer coach now in a full-time position.

The only returning coaches are John Zernhelt in the offensive line and Bob Sanders in the outside linebackers. Charlie Elmquist, a volunteer coach for two years, takes over as tight end coach and will aide Zernhelt with the offensive line.

Newcomers include both the offensive and defensive coordinators, former Citadel head coach Art Baker in the former position, and Tom Throckmorton in the latter.

They'll be joined by Ken Matous at receiver coach; Rex Kipps at defensive line coach, and Phil Elmassian at defensive secondary coach.

But while those faces may be new, Emory finds plenty of veterans on hand as a total of 42 lettermen return, including just about the entire starting offense. A total of 19 rising seniors, 18 juniors and five sophomores return who played enough to letter last year.

As far as starters are concerned, 19 are back from last year, and Emory expects to have the best senior leadership since he took over four years ago.

Only two starters from last year's offense — and they shared the same position — are gone so there will be little rebuilding to do in that department. Emory also has two defensive tackles who will be starting for the fourth year.

Primary concentration areas for the spring would thus appear to be in building depth in the receiver position, throughout the defense, and at quarterback.

One job that probably prove the toughest will be finding a replacement for All-America defensive end Jody Schulz.

Emory believes that even though there are a lot of new faces on the coaching staff, it's the best he's had here, but it will take some adjustment time for the players and staff to get used to one another.

"We should have a better team than we did in 1982," Emory said. "But we face a far tougher schedule, so our record might not show it."

The Pirates, for the second year in a row, play seven games on the road, including dates at Florida State, Miami and Florida in the Sunshine State, along with trips to N.C. State, Missouri, Temple and Southern Mississippi.

With that slate, matching last year's 7-4 mark might be hard to achieve.

When the offense takes the field, there will be returning starters at every position but two, the two tackle slots. Of those 11 slots, eight will open with seniors, including quarterback Kevin Ingram, fullback Earnest Byner, tight end Norwood Vann, left tackle Mac Powers, left guard Terry Long, center John Floyd, right guard Norman Quick and right tackle John Robertson.

The remaining spots will be filled by sophomore Tony Baker at tailback, and juniors Ricky Nichols at wide receiver and Stefan Adams at split end.

Not that Emory really expects it to stay that way. He looks for plenty on competition for spots from other returning lettermen or red-shirts.

Defensively, there are seven returning starters, although one of them sat out last year with an injury, senior linebacker Mike Grant. Other vets back include senior outside linebacker Jeff Pegues, senior tackle Hal Stephens, senior tackle Steve Hamilton, junior linebacker P.J. Jordan, senior free safety Clint Harris and senior cornerback Chuck Bishop.

Others listed as "starters" on the initial depth chart are senior nose guard Gerry Rogers, junior outside linebacker J.C. Plott, junior cornerback Calvin Adams, and senior strong safety Kenny Phillips.

Again, Emory is going to be looking for plenty of competition here — including some that will build the depth throughout the defense.

While one of the key losses was Schulz, another was that of snapper Whitley Wilkerson, who handled that difficult job for several years. Leading the list of candidates there is sophomore Kevin Samuel.

Junior Jeff Bolch returns to handle the punter, while Jeff Heath, who set both ECU and NCAA records last year as a freshman, will handle the kickoffs, placements and field goals.

Last year, the Pirates suffered through a number of injuries which about wiped out the linebacking crew. This year, he's hopeful of having fewer injuries.

One thing being done is outfitting 44 interior linemen and linebackers with Anderson braces and McDavid braces, designed to cut down on knee injuries. Should they prove successful, the chances of keeping more players healthy will be improved.

Plans call for the Pirates to practice each Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday with the exception of the Easter holiday break. A total of 20 practice periods are allowed by the NCAA, including the final Purple-Gold game which winds up the stint on Saturday, April 23 at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Conley's Keith Gatlin Selected To Play In McDonald's Classic

From Wire and Staff Reports

ATLANTA — D.H. Conley's Keith Gatlin will join 24 other high school stars in the annual McDonald's High School All-American Basketball game.

The 6-5 guard, already committed to the University of Maryland, was one of 25 named to the McDonald's team which will play an exhibition contest in the Omni in Atlanta on April 9.

Among his teammates in the game will be a 7-foot-2 high school basketball center from Ohio. Martin Nessley of Whitehall Yearling High School in Whitehall, Ohio, was the tallest of six centers on the roster, which was announced at a news conference by former UCLA Coach John Wooden and selection committee chairman Morgan Wooten.

Gatlin averaged over 25 points a game during the season in leading Conley to the championship of the Coastal Conference and the finals of the district tournament.

Other centers named to the team included Tom Curry, 6-foot-9, of Redemptorist High School, Baton Rouge, La.; Dave Popson, 6-foot-9, Bishop O'Reilly High School, Kingston, Penn.; Mike Smith, 6-foot-9, Los Altos High School, Hacienda Heights, Calif.; Barry Sumpter, 6-foot-11, Lovejoy High School, Lovejoy, Ill.; and Joe Wolf, 6-foot-10, Kohler High School, Kohler, Wis.

The guards, in addition to Gatlin, included Tommy Amaker, 6-foot-2, of W.T. Woodson High School, Fairfax, Va.; Freddy Banks, 6-foot-2, Valley High School, Las Vegas, Nev.; James Blackmon, 6-foot-3, Marion High School, Marion, Ind.; Frank Ford, 6-foot-4, Osceola High School, Kissimmee, Fla.; Corey Gaines, 6-foot-3, St. Bernard High School, Playa Del Rey, Calif.; Melvin Howard, 6-foot-1, Decatur High School, Decatur, Ga.; Antoine Joubert, 6-foot-5, Southwestern High School, Detroit; Kenny Smith, 6-foot-2, Archbishop Molloy High School, Jamaica, N.Y.; Dwayne Washington, 6-foot-2, Brooklyn Boys and Girls High School, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Nine forwards were named to the team, including Winston Bennett, 6-foot-7, of Male High School, Louisville, Ky.; Mark Kline, 6-foot-7, Williamson High School, Williamson, W.Va.; Dallas Comegys, 6-foot-9, Roman Catholic High School, Philadelphia, Penn.; Henry Dalrymple, 6-foot-4, St. Johnsbury Academy, St. Johnsbury, Vt.; Tom Sheehy, 6-foot-8, McQuaid Jesuit High School, Rochester, N.Y.; Kevin Smith, 6-foot-7, Everett High School, Lansing, Mich.; Daryl Thomas, 6-foot-7, St. Joseph's High School, Westchester, Ill.; Reggie Williams, 6-foot-7, Dunbar High School, Baltimore, Md.; and Ricky Winslow, 6-foot-8, Jack Yates High School, Houston, Texas.

'Skins Face East Bladen

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

When the Roanoke High School Redskins take the court Friday at Wilson Beddingfield in the 3-A Regionals their opposition will be East Bladen, a team which lost only two games in 23 outings during the 1982-83 campaign — both to eighth-ranked 4-A power Wilmington Laney.

The latter of the two games against Laney went into two overtimes before Wilmington utilized the home-court advantage.

But the Northeastern Conference champion Redskins have posted impressive statistics along the way, as well. Small forward Greg Everett sports a 16.2 scoring average, while power forward Ricky Highsmith contributed 11.3 points and 8.2 rebounds an outing.

Add 5-8 point guard Spencer Bryant, sophomore guard James Duggins and 6-3 center Donnie Wallace — already committed to UNC-Chapel Hill for football — and there's little doubt the 23-3 Redskins have earned the right to play for a spot in the state tournament.

"Right after Christmas it seemed that we didn't play as well as we're capable of playing," said Roanoke coach Clarence Atkinson. "We were still winning, but it wasn't the same. Since about mid-January we've been playing really well; we've only had a few bad quarters."

Coach Sam Boger's East Bladen squad swept through the Three Rivers Conference with an unblemished 10-0 mark and defeated Southern High School of Durham 98-90 for the District III Championship. East Bladen and Southern were tied 57-57 at one point of that contest, but the team from Elizabethtown outscored Southern 16-4 over a 4:32 span to put the game out of reach.

In that game, point guard Steve Moore and center Sherman Roberts posted 18 points each.

But the star of the East Bladen offense is 6-3 guard

Rodney Rhoda who averaged 14 points per game during the regular season. Rhoda, also known for his leaping ability, was selected as one of the outstanding players at the Prep Stars Camp held last summer at Elon College.

Moore scored 13 points an outing and Roberts and forward Adolph Jones 12 apiece for the run-oriented East Bladen offense which averaged 73 points a game.

"We're not a running team," said Atkinson. "We'd like to control the tempo, to control their fast break."

"We will look for the break on offense but not usually. We try to work the ball inside. We have three (Wallace, Everett and Highsmith) we can work inside at the post."

While Roanoke relies primarily on zone defenses, East Bladen uses pressure man-to-man.

"We're going back and taking our favorite defenses and working on them," Atkinson said. "We want to run three or four defenses at them."

"We press the guards on defense, but we don't like to go baseline-to-baseline on a press."

"I think there will be several keys to the game," he continued. "We must rebound well. Donnie Wallace does a good job blocking out for us underneath — he takes up a lot of room. Everett and Highsmith will have to hit the boards for us, too."

"We must cut off their fast break, and to do that we must mix our defenses well. Also, our offense will have to be able to handle their pressure on defense. Free throws have been one of our downfalls in the last few games, so we're working on that."

"The whole thing comes down to who will control the tempo of the game."

Waltrip Off To Slow Start, But That May Mean Trouble For Rest

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip is off to a slow start again, but that may be bad news for the other drivers on the NASCAR circuit.

Waltrip comes into Sunday's Coca-Cola 500 at Atlanta International Raceway in almost exactly the same shape as last year — winless on the Grand National tour three races into the 30-race season, and not even in the top 10 in Winston Cup point standings.

But last year, Waltrip limped into Atlanta, won the Coca-Cola 500 and sailed off toward his second straight dozen-victory season and his second straight Winston Cup.

Slow starts are normal for Waltrip's team, headed by Junior Johnson. For the past 10 years, the Johnson team, even back when Cale Yarborough was the driver, has consistently started slow and finished strong.

"I have a theory about our team," Waltrip said Wednesday as he prepared for today's scheduled pole qualifying session, expected to be dampened by rain. "The reason we start off so slow is that we've peaked at the end of the previous season (in December). We win the championship, we go to New York for the ceremonies and the celebration, and then there's Christmas and New Year's."

"And then, I don't think our guys are ready for the season to start when it does (at Daytona in February). We go two our three races and don't look so hot, and everybody on our team says, 'Gosh, we're better than this! We'd better get going,'" Waltrip said.

Expert observers have also long theorized that master mechanic Johnson often uses the early part of the season to experiment with new parts, systems or theories, and that it takes a few races for Johnson to get his innovations working smoothly.

"I guess there's some truth to that," Waltrip said.

The winners tonight will proceed to Saturday's championship games at the same sites, with the victors from those matchups reaching the state finals March 25-26 at Elon College.

Huss will play Page, 18-3, at East Burke High School in the West Regional 4-A playoffs at 7 p.m. That game will be followed by a contest between No. 5 Gastonia Ashbrook, 19-4, and East Mecklenburg, 18-6.

Huss, averaging 70 points per game, is led by 5-foot-10 Karen Robinson, averaging 18 points and 9.5 rebounds, while Angie Green's 14 points tops Page. Ashbrook has sisters Deana (17.5 points) and Kathy Tate (16 ppg) while East Mecklenburg is paced by 5-7 Julie Theberge (18 ppg).

In the East at Wilson Hunt, No. 2 Raleigh Broughton, 27-0 and led by Matisha Brown's 13.3 average, will face 4th-ranked Fayetteville Pine Forest, 26-1, led by Tracy Vann's 16.5 average. Rocky Mount, 18-6, and its 6-3 Kim Taylor, who averages 32.2 points and 20.3 rebounds, will meet No. 3 Goldsboro in the second game. Goldsboro, 23-4 and defending state champion, is led by Selina Best's 10.4 points per game.

Class 3A
The only ranked team appearing in the East Regional at Wilson Beddingfield will be No. 1 East Bladen, while three teams among the state's Top 10 will play in the West tournament at Hickory.

East Bladen, 22-0, is led by Sharon McDowell's 15 point average and faces Southeast Guilford, 23-3, and Lori Phillips, the regional's top scorer at 20 per game. D.H. Conley, 25-3, and led by Mechio Kornegay's 15 point norm, plays 19-4 Warren County, topped by Gloria Kearney's 13-point average.

The 10th-ranked Enka Sugar Jets open West action against Lincolnton, 17-5. Enka, 25-3, is allowing only 39.8 points per game while Lincolnton depends on Clarissa Metts, scoring 17.8 points and grabbing 15.9 rebounds per game.

The other West game may be the best of the 3A matchups, pitting No. 2-ranked Kannapolis Brown, 24-0, against No. 3 Madison-Mayodan, 28-0. That promises to be a low-scoring affair as Madison-Mayodan gives up 37.9 points per game and Brown only 37.

Class 2A
Bandys, the defending champion and top-ranked at 28-0, will face Sylva-Webster in the opening round of the West Regional at Lenoir-Rhyne. Bandys is led by 5-11 Beverly Greenard, a 72.8 percent shooter, while No. 7 Sylva-Webster, 28-2, is paced by Lisa Shepherd, a 10 point scorer.

In the second game, 4th-rated Southwest Guilford, 25-0, goes up against No. 6 Monroe Parkwood, 27-1. Laura Stanley (12 ppg) and Julia Weaver (11.5) lead Southwest while Parkwood, which gives up only 35 points per outing, is led by Rocky River Conference player of the year Cynthia Monroe, who averages 18.8 points and 12.9 rebounds.

Oella Burney, in the East will lead No. 2 East Carteret, 28-0, against Orrum, ranked 8th at 23-2. Burney averages 23 points per game while Orrum's Amy Townsend has a 19.7 standard.

Whiteville, 25-1, plays unranked Franklinton, 20-3, in the second battle. Whiteville, ranked 10th, is led by 5-11 Phyllis Edwards 18.7 points while Lisa Allen's 13.7 tops Franklinton.

Class 1A
The only ranked team among any of the Class 1A schools left is No. 5 Hiwassee Dam, 24-3 and the defending state champion, which faces Cherokee, 14-9, in the West Regional at Tuscola. Hiwassee Dam is led by Pam McNabb at 14.3 points per game while Cherokee's Dee Owie averages 15.3.

The second game finds Polk Central, 22-5, playing Highlands, 21-6.

Women Fail To Place

LONG BEACH, Calif. — East Carolina University failed to score in the first day of competition in the NCAA Division II Women's Swimming and Diving Championships. The competition began yesterday at Long Beach State University.

A total of 54 teams are competing in the event, and the first 12 places in each event score points for their teams.

The best finish for the Lady Pirates was in the 200 freestyle relay, where the team of Nan George, Nancy James, Kaky Wilson and Nancy Rogers finished 13th in a time of 1:40.70.

East Carolina also participated in the 50 butterfly, the 200 breaststroke, the 400-medley relay and the 1-meter diving, but failed to place there either.

"The meet is extremely fast," Coach Rick Kobe said. "In about every event the first through third places are breaking the national records. The meet is three to four times bigger than it was last year and ten times faster."

The meet continues through Saturday.

Social Security 'Rescue' Amendments Piling Up

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is giving a $165 billion Social Security rescue plan its last major congressional test as legislators line up with amendments ranging from a payroll tax rollback to a retirement age of 68.

The Senate began preliminary work on the legislation Wednesday and was resuming debate today. The House approved its version of the bailout plan last week on a 282-148 vote. But the House, which has stricter rules than the Senate for considering legislation, was able to insulate the measure

No Card And Self Service Mark Small Town's All-Night Library

BLUE RIVER, Ore. (AP) — Frances O'Brien's library is probably the only one in the country that is open any time, day or night. There is no lock on the door and no need for a library card. At 4 a.m., visitors can borrow a copy of Audubon magazine and read until the birds of the lush McKenzie River Valley awaken. "People are shocked when I tell them I don't lock it," said the 81-year-old, white-haired library proprietor. "Maybe ours is a very trusting community." The library is the offspring of Mrs. O'Brien's longtime love affair with books and learning. It began in the living room of her home more than half a century ago and now consists of nearly 21,000 donated books in a small building constructed in 1975 behind her house. It is not tax-supported or publicly administered and relies solely on donated books and on money Mrs. O'Brien earns as a tax consultant. Books have floated in from all parts of the country, and offers of collections have come from as far away as Japan. Last year, some residents of Ohio read about the library and made up their minds their next vacation would be in Oregon. "They arrived with three people in the car and two large boxes of books," Mrs. O'Brien recalled in a recent interview. With the help of the Blue River Lions Club, the library in this small town of 300 families soon will turn another page in its history. Club members plan to construct an addition to the building to allow room for more books, including 2,000 that are still in boxes. Mrs. O'Brien will put up the money — she won't say how much — for the addition; the Lions will provide the labor. "I thought when I built this building, I had built for all times," Mrs. O'Brien said as she stood in the cramped library, which measures about 24 feet by 32 feet. "For the last year, it's been entirely too tight." The special charm of the library lies in the rules that harken back to simpler times. "We just don't have a problem with vandalism," Mrs. O'Brien said of her open-door policy. "I had a woman say the other day, 'I was in your library at 2 a.m. We were in Eugene and on the way home, my husband said let's stop.'" But Mrs. O'Brien worries about the library's future. "I've had offers for extensive private collections, provided I'll show that the library will go on when I'm gone, but so far I can't make those assurances," Mrs. O'Brien said. "I can't find anybody to devote the time it takes to work on it." She said she has no desire to turn the facility over to the Lane County library system. "I wouldn't let them run it," Mrs. O'Brien said. "I want it open all the time. I want it available day or night. Nobody agrees with me on that."

Distressed By Big Leaf Price Decline

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — A bumper crop of tobacco has resulted in low prices at the opening of the southern Maryland tobacco auction, leaving farmers surprised and worried. State officials estimated this year's crop at 37.5 million pounds, up more than 4 million pounds from last year's total. "The size of the crop seems to be keeping the price down," Claude McKee of the state's tobacco research farm said. "There's the uncertainty of consumption. You have to be careful how much money you tie up in a crop that you may not use for three years." Farmers at the Edelen Brothers Warehouse Tuesday — the first day of the tobacco auction — complained about the plummeting prices. "They've gone crazy," said Donald Scott of Croom. The per-pound prices slapped on the stacks of tobacco — known as burdens — ranged between $1.40 and $1.60. "This tobacco would have brought $1.80 or $1.75 last year," Scott said. "We won't ever make any money." Edelen reported gross sales Tuesday of 117,308 pounds with an average price of $1.56 a pound, down 21 cents from last year's opening day average. The Planters Warehouse near here reported gross sales of 169,452 pounds with an average price of $1.63, down 14 cents from last year. Net sales for Maryland tobacco last year surpassed $58 million, a record, with farmers receiving a $1.75-per-pound average. The Type-32 leaf, known worldwide as "Maryland tobacco," is a thin leaf that produces a high number of cigarettes per pound with a distinctive burn and aroma.

from amendments. Members of the Senate, however, have indicated they will try to attach more than two dozen amendments to the version of the bill drafted last week by the Senate Finance Committee. The Senate was voting today on amendments by Sen. Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho, to gradually raise the retirement age from 65 to 68, and by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., to provide "disability-retirement" benefits in the next century for workers 62 or older whose health prevents them from working but who do not meet the stringent requirements of the regular disability program. Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said he would seek to block the package's increases in the payroll tax. Sen. Russell Long, D-La., the top Democrat on the Finance Committee, attacked the package for setting "a dangerous precedent" by relying too much on general revenues to shore up the Social Security system.

Convicted In Son's Death

EBENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A fundamentalist convicted with his wife of manslaughter because they relied on faith healing while their 2½-year-old son died of cancer says it may be "God's will" if he goes to prison. William Barnhart, 56, and his wife, Linda, 35, were found guilty Wednesday of involuntary manslaughter and endangering a child's welfare by a Cambria County Court jury that deliberated two hours. "This hasn't waived my faith a bit," Barnhart said after the verdict ended the five-day trial. "We did the best we could. It was God's will it turned out this way." Of prison, he said, "If God sends me there, I'm going to go."

"Maybe it will put parents on notice they're responsible for their children regardless of their religious beliefs when it comes to the life and death of their children," said John Barron, the county coroner who called an inquest into the child's death. Defense lawyers immediately asked Judge H. Clifton McWilliams set no sentencing date in the case. The involuntary manslaughter charge carries a maximum prison term of five years and a $10,000 fine. The maximum penalty on the endangering charge is two years in prison and $5,000 in fines.

"Justin had a right to be taken care of by his parents to give him the kind of treatment he needed to reach the age of reason" to decide his religious beliefs, said Assistant District Attorney Patrick Kiniry. The Barnharts are members of the Faith Tabernacle, a small Christian sect that disavows medical treatment in favor of faith, prayers and annointment. An autopsy revealed a 5.4-pound tumor in the boy's stomach. Pathologist Sidney Goldblatt testified the tumor absorbed most of the nourishment the boy ate, and eventually starved him. Mrs. Barnhart bowed her head into her hands when the verdict was announced, and was escorted out a back door while her husband addressed reporters. Barnhart, a labor foreman at Gallatin State Park near his home, testified that he, his family and congregation prayed and fasted after realizing Justin was ill. "I feel it's not all my fault that God took Justin from this earth," Barnhart testified. "He gives your first breath and He gives you your last."

The couple was supported throughout the trial by their pastor, friends and family members, including Barnhart's son William, 32, from a previous marriage. The Barnharts also have two daughters — Joy, 6, and Jill, 8 weeks.

Nonetheless, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Finance Committee, predicted Wednesday the Senate would pass the bill "by a substantial vote," and that Congress will "have this on the president's desk sometime late next week." Generally, the Senate package parallels the House version. It keeps virtually intact recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to curb benefits, increase payroll taxes, tax a portion of the benefits going to more affluent retirees and make Social Security coverage mandatory for new federal employees. The Senate Finance Committee version of the bill calls for raising the retirement age to 66 by 2015 and phasing in a 5 percent benefit cut for new retirees in the next century. The House bill would raise the retirement age to 67 by the year 2027, but not cut future benefits. Dole, who served on the reform commission, acknowledged that the package, which he said "requires concessions from all the parties who have a stake in Social Security," cannot stand much tinkering. "It is a fair and reasonable proposal, not a perfect proposal," Dole said. But he added "the strength of this package may be the weakness of its parts" since legislators know it will fail if any of its major provisions are significantly modified. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who also served on the reform commission, agreed it is a fair package. "The balance, nonetheless, is fragile," Moynihan said. "The House has succeeded in avoiding significant alterations to the package. It is our responsibility in the Senate to do the same."

The Senate took up the measure Wednesday after laying aside a jobs bill stalemated over an amendment to repeal tax withholding on interest and dividends. In early action Wednesday, the Senate approved by voice vote an amendment by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., to require the secretary of health and human services to draw up a proposal by year's end for sharing Social Security work credits between husbands and wives. A non-working wife would get the same credit on her Social Security record as her husband. The senators also adopted an amendment by Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H., to include a notice with Social Security checks next year warning people that it is a felony to cash checks made out to someone who has died. Meanwhile, Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., introduced legislation to end mandatory retirement at any age in the United States. Workers now can stay on the job until 70.

Drug Can Deter Artery Spasms

BOSTON (AP) — A new drug can prevent dangerous artery spasms in patients recovering from broken blood vessels in their brains, according to a study published today. Doctors gave the medicine to people who suffered bleeding inside their skulls because of broken bulges, called aneurysms, in their blood vessels. Even after doctors surgically repair the leaks, the patients risk further damage because spasms often occur in the large arteries that feed the brain. These spasms cut off the blood flow and can cause a variety of problems, including permanent paralysis, loss of speech and memory — even death. The medicine, called nimodipine, prevents these spasms in the first crucial weeks after the hemorrhage. The drug is a calcium blocker, one of a new group of drugs used to prevent heart problems, including angina, that occur when arteries contract. The treatment was developed by Dr. George S. Allen of Johns Hopkins Hospital and described in the New England Journal of Medicine today.

BIG SETTLEMENT — Gregory Blevins Jr., 9, of Pontiac, Mich., is shown by the transformer where he was burned on July 2, 1981. Gregory, then seven, was playing with his younger brother Robert when he opened an unlocked electrical transformer behind a shopping center. He received a shock that set his clothes on fire and caused third degree burns over 41 percent of his body. An Oakland County Mich. Circuit Court judge has signed a consent judgment calling for an initial payment of $1,052,000 and annual payments for the rest of the boy's life. If he lives to retirement age, 65, the settlement is worth $22 million. (AP Laserphoto)

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Z equals G.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:

South West North East

1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass

4 ♥ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Don't just consider the odds in one particular suit. We have stressed repeatedly that you must take the whole hand into consideration.

The vulnerability prevented East-West from entering the auction. At any other vulnerability they would have a good sacrifice at four spades if they could get there. Also observe North's raise to two hearts despite the fact that he had only three low trumps. He had a respectable responding hand and wanted to make the most encouraging response he could.

West got his side off to the most effective lead of a spade, attacking dummy's only entry. Declarer made the technically correct play of allowing the defenders to win the first trick, but was forced to win the continuation. He saw no problem, but when he led a trump to the king and West showed out, the contract was beyond redemption. Declarer had a loser in each suit and nowhere to put them.

While declarer's play in the trump suit was correct considering that suit in isolation, it was a losing line with regard to the hand as a whole. The correct technique is to take a trump finesse at trick two, despite holding ten cards in the suit!

As the cards lie, the finesse wins and the contract is home. But what if East follows with a low heart and West captures the jack with the queen?

The contract is still secure. Suppose West shifts to a diamond—the best defense. Declarer wins, draws the outstanding trump and leads a club. West grabs the ace and perseveres with diamonds. Declarer wins, then crosses to dummy by over-taking the four of trumps with the five. He discards his diamond loser on a high club and all is well.

Now, the last surviving members of the species perch in an aviary at Santa Fe Community College Zoo. The sparrows are all between 7 and 9 years old. Nobody knows how long a dusky seaside sparrow lives, or how long the males remain fertile.

The Audubon Society and Walt Disney joined forces last week to mate the dusky with the Gulf Coast seaside sparrow, which dwells in southwest Florida and the Everglades.

The experiment will be the first back-crossing of a songbird in the United States, and assumes all five dusky will live five more years. Previous experiments have mated the endangered eastern peregrine falcons with Arctic peregrines.

Disney will pay about $55,800 of the experiment's $64,300 first-year cost, and plans to exhibit some of the dusky's offspring at the park in December.

To raise its $9,500 share of the project's initial expense, the Audubon Society has enlisted entertainer Buffett for a March 20 benefit to be held in Miami.

Audubon officials hope eventually to be able to release 100 or so of the almost-dusky into reflooded swamps around the Kennedy Space Center, where their ancestors made their last home in the wild.

The experiment will have the blessing but not the participation of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which cannot legally work with hybrids.

Scientists say the last dusky sparrow probably hatched in 1973 or 1974. The last female was spotted in 1975. Eight years of forays through Florida's Atlantic coast marshes have failed to turn up a single female.

It's Tough Going For Immigrants From Laos' Hills

By LLOYD G. CARTER
FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Soft-spoken Vang Houa Thao sometimes dreams about his native hills in Laos and the days before the war and the killing and the communist revenge.

"I dream about Laos sometimes," he admits. "I feel very sad about it. I cannot go back to my country."

"If I could fly back with a gun in my hand I would kill them, destroy them," he says in a sudden burst of controlled anger.

Thao, 30, is a Hmong, one of thousands of hill country people from Laos who were brought to the United States after the Southeast Asian country fell to the communists in the mid-1970s.

An estimated 30,000 Hmong were recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency to fight the communists, and when the communists gained victory, vengeance was swift. Thousands of Hmong fled to Thai refugee camps and from there were re-located in the United States.

There now are 6,000 to 8,000 Hmong living in Fresno County, one of the largest Hmong populations in the nation. Most of them are on public assistance.

Critics say the federal government allowed them into the country, then ignored them. Few can get jobs because of the depression, and their future is black.

Vang Houa Thao is luckier than most. He speaks some English and works at the Fresno Community Council, where he helps the refugees with legal documents, takes them to the doctor, and is a "fix-it" man who knows how to maneuver among the Americans.

His father was a career soldier and Vang went to work for the CIA at 17. He was in two big battles and saw many of his friends killed. Two of his five brothers and an estimated 18 uncles, cousins and nephews died in the fighting.

In 1975 he fled to a refugee camp in Thailand, where he spent five miserable years.

"It's a terrible life in the refugee camp," he remembers. He married in the camp, immigrated to Hawaii in 1980 with his wife and mother, and finally wound up in the San Joaquin Valley.

His father and two brothers are in France. His mother is sick and the French authorities won't let her in to join her husband; American authorities won't let his father come here.

Vang worries about the old people, stricken by severe culture shock, unable to learn a difficult new language.

"Back in Laos, they were the leaders of the family and right now the kids are the leaders of the family," he says. "They (the children) pick up the language, they know where to go and they know what to do. And the old people become like babies, they don't know anything, they cannot learn the language and so they become very depressed. It becomes a mental health problem."

But there is no mental health program in Fresno County for the Hmong and so he is the one to "try and cheer them up", to answer the late night calls from distraught or suicidal people, to get them through another dark night.

Vang has a sister in Laos whom he has not seen in nearly a decade but he is fearful of writing her because the communists might harm her.

"Sometimes I feel very bad about the communists treating my people in that way," he says. "The communists they will not kill you but they will let you die day by day, slowly."

In southwest Fresno, Hmong families bunch together in rundown apartment complexes, seeking safety in numbers.

The women peer from behind curtains while the children, friendly and laughing, come out into the courtyard. Inside one apartment, the walls hold a curious mixture of family pictures, pictures of Hmong generals, photos of American warplanes, nature pictures from Laos and a poster of Cher and Gregg Allman.

A Hmong man asks in halting English if there is anywhere he can obtain a job. Every day, he says, he goes out seeking work but no one will hire him.

His wife, lacking coffee cups, serves sweetened, hot tea in tall, thick Mickey Mouse glasses, then retreats from the room, three small children clustered behind her skirts.

Vang is guardedly diplomatic when asked about hostility toward his people.

"There are good and bad people all over the world," he shrugs. "Ninety-nine percent of Americans are good people."

But he complains that Hmong living in poorer areas of Fresno are plagued by burglars and robbers.

"People always come to their apartments and break in, take their TVs, break into their cars. I hear that almost every day," he says.

"I would say back in our country, before 1970, it was safer there than here. If you carried $10,000 with you, you could go anywhere, sleep by the road, whatever, nobody would bother you."

"But since 1970, everything has changed."

Lesotho Overhauling Its Transportation: Horses

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer
GOD HELP ME PASS, Lesotho (AP) — In remote mountain meadows, Lesotho is trying to overhaul the national mode of transportation — the horse.

Aid workers from Ireland have brought in foreign bloodlines to improve the stock of 100,000 horses that is the main means of movement in Lesotho. The country has only 3,500 cars and 1.5 miles of railroad.

"Local breeding and nutrition are so bad that, without help, they'd have nothing left to ride in 10 to 15 years," said project manager Jim Whelan.

Lesotho, with 1.3 million people and territory the size of Maryland, is surrounded by South Africa, which has 2.5 million cars and 14,300 miles of railroad.

Lesotho worries about the drought that killed an estimated 10 percent of its horses within a year.

"This is one of the last few countries where the horse is important," Whelan said in an interview. "There are only one or two roads that cars can use."

Lesotho's alternative to the superhighway is the mountain trail, and it has plenty. It is the only country in which no point is lower than 3,300 feet above sea level, guidebooks say.

The Lesotho horse is hardy and surefooted, although, strictly speaking, it's a pony. Most stand less than 14 hands, 2 inches (58 inches), at the withers, or shoulders — the height below which breeders classify equines as ponies.

Over the years, Whelan said, the Basotho pony — taking its name from the tribal name of the Lesotho people — has been diminishing in quality and numbers.

The decline started 80 years ago, when both sides in the Boer War raided tribal herds. As grass gradually vanished in overgrazed and eroded valleys, Basotho peasants turned to cornstalks to feed horses during winters — a diet Whelan called grossly inadequate.

When the first of three Irish workers arrived in 1978, Lesotho was depending significantly on purchases from South Africa to replenish its horse stock.

The Irish imported two of their own Connemara stallions and one Arab stallion, a great-grandson of the famed Nazeer, given by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt a month before his assassination. The imports joined one Basotho stallion and 100 local mares on a stud farm at Thaba Tseka, deep in the central mountains.

The first ponies from the stud farm are being broken this year. Anticipating a surge in local horse trading, the Irish established a national marketing center 30 miles from Maseru, the capital, here at God Help Me Pass, where the paved road ends and alfalfa (lucerne) grass grows as a potential answer to dietary needs.

A horse is a major investment. A stallion costs about 500 maloti ($450), six times a laborer's monthly minimum pay, and a riding horse costs 300 maloti ($270).

The project has cost little more than $1 million so far, said Whelan, 31, a farmer's son from Tullow who has worked horses in California and Arabia. "But we are talking about a 20- to 40-year program, if we do it all."

"People have to be educated away from counting their wealth in livestock" so they will reduce herds and allow better grazing, he said.

Another problem is the Basotho custom of sending horses to run free in the mountains during summer when high pastures are green. Wild stallions mate with mares and ruin efforts to keep bloodlines pure.

"If we don't castrate those wild stallions, we will fail," Whelan said.

Basotho pony bloodlines are so poor, he said, that only about 500 mares — about one in 80 — are worthy of breeding.

Down the line, Whelan foresees a register and stud book for Basotho ponies, a slaughter market for horsemeat, which the Basotho eat, and perhaps a Lesotho sweepstakes like the one in Ireland.

"But we have a lot of other things to do first," he said. "We don't want to put the cart before the horse."

Bank 'Disaster' Service Devised

CHICAGO (AP) — A remote check-processing backup service has been designed for banks fearing a computer system breakdown or "disaster," reports a management information systems journal.

According to MIS Week, the service is believed to be the first in the nation. It allows banks to fulfill their federal check processing obligations through a sophisticated "dial-up" communications capability that re-establishes operations while minimizing disruption from a computer breakdown.

Prepare Implant Of Blood Vessels

DISPLAYS VESSELS — Dr. Donald Lyman, director of the University of Utah Center for Polymer Implants displays various sizes of artificial blood vessels which researchers have spent 12 years developing. (AP Laserphoto)

By DONNA ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A University of Utah medical team, laboring quietly in the shadow of the school's artificial heart program, is preparing to implant the first tiny plastic blood vessels in a human patient.

The vessels — polyurethane tubes as large around as a drinking straw or as small as the lead in a pencil — potentially could benefit 300,000 people a year, says Dr. Donald Lyman, director of the university's Center for Polymer Implants.

In contrast, doctors estimate 50,000 people a year eventually could be helped by the Utah artificial heart, which was developed in a separate university department.

Dacron implants to replace large-diameter blood vessels of 8 to 30 millimeters have been used for years, often in heart patients. But never before have surgeons tried to replace the small-diameter vessels that make up about 75 percent of the human circulatory system.

Within the next four to six weeks, Lyman says, his medical team will attempt its first vessel implant in a human patient. The surgery follows nearly a dozen years of research and frustrating funding problems.

The artificial vessels, Lyman said in an interview, are simply "little tubes that essentially save lives and prevent amputations. They don't do anything dramatic like pumping."

"After seeing friends who have lost limbs or have died because they have not had vessels in their own bodies — I would have friends alive today if this graft had been available," Lyman said.

The vessels, which could be used in any part of the body, should aid victims of heart ailments or arterial diseases, accident victims whose blood vessels are damaged and those whose vessels have become hardened or weakened with age, he said.

The current method for replacing damaged veins or bypassing obstructed blood vessels and coronary arteries is to transplant a vein from a patient's leg.

However, Lyman said transplants don't always work well because some patients lack suitable veins. The body has miles of blood vessels, but only a few that can be moved elsewhere, he said.

The plastic vessels were approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for human implantation in late November. But Lyman and other members of his team had to abruptly halt their research to write lengthy applications for grant renewals.

The program has courted poverty for years. "We're essentially donating all of our time,"

Lyman said of the principal researchers, and at times other employees have been laid off for lack of funds.

The surgical team that will perform the implant was reassembled last week after the grant applications were sent off. The surgeons have resumed vessel implants in animals in preparation for the human operation.

Dr. Dominic Albo Jr., the only surgeon authorized by the FDA to implant the vessels, heads the team.

"We want to check everything back out," Lyman said. "It will be four to six weeks before I'm comfortable about doing it." The first recipient likely will be someone with failing vessels in a limb, where the alternative treatment eventually would be something serious, but non-life threatening, like amputation.

Lyman doesn't expect problems finding a recipient. "We have so many letters in our files," he said.

FDA approval came after years of research by the principal investigators, who built the vessels from the molecular level up.

Lyman originally worked on the artificial heart with Dr. Willem Kolff, director of the university's Division of Artificial Organs. He left Kolff's group in 1971 because he wanted to pursue research with vessels.

The major obstacle to development of an effective artificial blood vessel was the tendency of proteins in the blood to adhere to polyurethane surfaces. Lyman and his group developed their own plastic "atom by atom."

"We juggled the molecules around," he said, so that only albumin — a protein in the blood — would bind to the vessel walls. And since platelets in the blood won't adhere to albumin, the clotting problem was solved.

The next step was developing a vessel elastic enough not to damage parts of the body it touched, and that would pulsate — as do natural veins and arteries — in response to changing volumes of blood flow.

The new vessels have been implanted in dogs which survived with them up to 2½ years. However, the vessels had to be removed from the dogs to provide more data for the recent grant applications.

With animals, the plastic vessels have been termed successful. But, Lyman said, "How do you know until you go to humans?"

If human implants prove feasible, Lyman said, it probably would be two to three years before they would become a routine clinical procedure.

"They're really not expensive," he said. "You would expect to see hundreds of dollars for the grafts rather than thousands of dollars."

Protection Asked By Smith-Douglass

NORFOLK (AP) — Norfolk-based Smith-Douglass Inc. has applied for protection from creditors in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in the Eastern District of North Carolina.

The fertilizer manufacturer and distributor filed its petition in Wilson, N.C., because "the majority of Smith-Douglass's operations are located in North Carolina and a substantial portion of its 1982 sales were generated from that area," a company spokesman said Wednesday.

In a prepared statement, the spokesman added that "adverse economic conditions and pressure from a small group of creditors" prompted the financial reorganization petition last Friday.

Roy W. Brun, president of Smith-Douglass, could not be reached for comment.

The spokesman, who did not disclose the company's assets and liabilities, said Smith-Douglass will continue operations at its Danville, Va., plant and its 50 retail distribution centers in the Carolinas and Virginia. The existing company is a

Fans Who Remember, Mourn Godfrey

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Fans mourned Arthur Godfrey, the ukelele strummer whose gift of gab made him a radio and television favorite for five decades, and even the singer he once fired on live TV recalled Godfrey as "the greatest salesman in the world."

Godfrey, who liked to call himself the Old Redhead and who was once dubbed "the

ARTHUR GODFREY

Huck Finn of radio" for his folksy wit, died Wednesday at age 79 after being hospitalized 13 days for emphysema and pneumonia at Mount Sinai Hospital.

The entertainer will be cremated without any public service, said a spokesman for the William Morris agency, which represented Godfrey.

"I hope — indeed I shall pray — that he will rest in peace," said Julius LaRosa, the singer "discovered" by Godfrey and then fired by him on the air in 1953, shocking the nation.

LaRosa had just finished singing "Manhattan" on the TV show "Arthur Godfrey and Friends," when Godfrey turned to the audience and announced, "This is Julie's swan song." He accused LaRosa of a "lack of humility."

The singer told reporters Wednesday night that he and Godfrey never reconciled, but he credited Godfrey for giving his career a boost and recalled Godfrey as "the greatest salesman in world."

From his signature greeting of "Howa'ya, Howa'ya," to his public battle against lung cancer, Godfrey did everything with his own brash style. He liked to say that you "get as much out of life as you put into it."

"You had nothing to do with your birth, and you can't control the circumstances of your death. But you can do something about living," he told one interviewer.

"He made the personality more important than the talent," recalled another easygoing TV celebrity, Art Linkletter.

At his peak in the 1950s, Godfrey had a Monday-through-Friday daytime show, "Talent Scouts" on Monday night and an hour of "Godfrey and His Friends" on Wednesday nights. His weekly prime-time audience measured 82 million viewers.

In 1959, it was reported that Godfrey's shows brought in $159 million in advertising for CBS.

Big Night Out At A Cabaret

PARIS (AP) — Princess Anne of Britain and her husband, Capt. Mark Philips, shared a night on the town with Ginger Rogers, visiting the famed Moulin Rouge cabaret for dinner and the opening of a new show called "Girls, Girls, Girls."

The gala Wednesday night at the 94-year-old Moulin Rouge was to benefit the International Children's Charities.

Miss Rogers, an American musical comedy star who is a great favorite in France, attended the show with the royal couple.

The princess and her husband were greeted by a fanfare of trumpets and an honor guard from the French Garde Republicaine and a contingent of the Welsh Guards sent over for the occasion.

Before entering the cabaret, the couple stopped and chatted briefly with one of the Welsh guards. French gossip columnists say Princess Anne is the first member of the royal family to visit the Moulin Rouge since her great-grandfather, Edward VII.

His "Talent Scouts," with an applause meter that measured audience response to unknown performers, is credited with giving newcomers Pat Boone, Barbara McNair, Vic Damone, Johnny Nash, the McGuire Sisters and Shari Lewis their start.

Godfrey never claimed to be much of a singer himself, but he loved to perform.

He threw himself into his work and into other pursuits as well. He flew his planes around the world, and twice

NEVER RECONCILED — Singer Julius La Rosa answers questions Wednesday evening after announcement of the death of Arthur Godfrey, the man who fired him during a broadcast "for his lack of humility." Speaking at a New York City nightclub where he is appearing, La Rosa said the two had met a few years ago and that La Rosa offered his hand to Godfrey. "Unfortunately, he chose to reject it," La Rosa said. (AP Laserphoto)

Dreyfuss Plans To Wed Sunday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Richard Dreyfuss, who won a best actor Oscar for his 1977 performance in "The Goodbye Girl," will marry television producer Jeremie Rain on Sunday.

The Jewish ceremony will be held at the home of his agent, Meyer Mishkin, the agent confirmed Wednesday.

It is the first marriage for Dreyfuss, 34, and the second for Miss Rain, who has worked in soap operas in New York City and is now a writer-producer for CBS.

Dreyfuss, who also starred in "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," recently entered a two-year drug diversion education program.

Godfrey's career got its start about the time the stock market was plunging the nation into depression in 1929.

Then a Coast Guardsman, Godfrey and some friends were in a Baltimore pub listening to amateurs perform on a local radio station. His friends, who had heard Godfrey's banjo plucking, urged him to audition.

He got a 15-minute spot on the station and was billed as "Red Godfrey, the Warbling

Legal Opium Keeps Turks In The Red

By EMEL ANIL
Associated Press Writer
ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The Turkish government is in the red by millions of dollars in its efforts to grow opium poppies under strict controls and prevent their leakage into the world's illicit heroin market, officials say.

The chief causes for the losses lie in a low demand on the legal world market, a large stockpile of dried poppies and a new poppy-processing factory working far under its capacity.

From dried opium poppies come the morphine derivatives that produce pain killers for the medical drug industry. From ripened poppies comes the opium gum that is processed in clandestine laboratories into heroin.

In 1971, the Turkish government banned opium poppy cultivation under strong pressure from the United States. Cultivation was resumed in 1975 under a system declared virtually smuggle-proof by the United Nations and U.S. narcotics experts.

The peasants of the sun-baked central Anatolia plateau, the only part of the country where cultivation is permitted with licensing, are not allowed to slash the ripe poppy pods to let the sticky opium gum ooze out. The pods, which grow as big as tangerines on long stalks in mid-summer, must be left to dry out in the fields, and the opium gum dries up with them.

Only sophisticated factories can extract the morphine derivatives from the dry pods and until the Turks built their factory the plants existed only in France, the Netherlands and Hungary.

But Turkey's factory was built — at a cost estimated by Western experts at $50 million — to turn out 90 tons of morphine hydrate annually. One Western expert said that far exceeds the world demand.

Working at full capacity, the plant is capable of processing 20,000 tons of dry poppy pods a year. But it started production this year at half capacity and three tons of morphine hydrate have been shipped to a U.S. drug company. Contracts have been signed for the export of at least seven more tons this year — still not enough to break even.

Another problem for the Turks is that since 1975, dry pods have been piling up in storage. The state-owned soil products office is under legal obligation to buy the entire crop from the farmers.

Halil Ceken, director of the soil products office, said 44,000 tons have been exported so far, mostly to France and Netherlands.

But 76,000 tons remain in stock, he added.

Dry pods are light but large in bulk and Turkey has trouble finding storage space.

More than $15 million has been paid to the farmers for poppies in the last eight years and only one third of the cost has been recovered from exports.

Turkey and India are the two major legal producers of opium poppy, and the United States has pledged to support their control efforts through purchase of 80 percent of its morphine needs from the two countries.

Turks are eager to sell to the United States a more refined product, morphine sulphate, which is double the price and costs the same amount to produce as morphine hydrate.

A memorandum of understanding was signed with the U.S. General Services Administration to sell 10,000 pounds of morphine sulphate from the Turkish factory for emergency stockpiling of strategic materials, but so far there have been no shipments reported.

At the same time, Turkey's excess production of poppies has led to a gradual shrinkage of cultivation, with the state giving fewer licenses and lower prices to the farmers, officials say.

Production went down to 5,600 tons of pods last year from 13,700 tons in 1980, and cultivation areas shrank from 478,500 acres two years ago to half that in 1982, according to official statistics.

Only Skin Rash In Dioxin Exposure

BY FORMANEX
Associated Press Writer
KIRKWOOD, Mo. (AP) — Preliminary health examinations of people exposed to some of the highest known concentrations of dioxin in Missouri have uncovered only minor skin rashes, a federal health official has confirmed.

"We have found no gross physical defects," said Dr. Paul Stehr, epidemic intelligence service officer with the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"But what we didn't expect to find was people falling apart or dying," said Stehr who confirmed an earlier statement by the physician in charge of screening of Missouri residents labeled "high risk" by the CDC.

"There have been no positive findings in the physical exams of those tested so far," said Dr. Burton Gedney, chief internist at Kirkwood's St. Joseph's Hospital.

But both doctors cautioned that results of extensive laboratory tests under way at the CDC will be needed before the exposed residents can be given a clean bill of health.

More than 1,200 people have been screened at St. Joseph's, according to Gedney. Of those, 112 deemed to be of the greatest risk were selected for more extensive medical tests.

The screenings, paid for by the Environmental Protection Agency's "superfund," are a cooperative effort of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, the Missouri Department of Health, St. Louis University Hospitals and St. Joseph's.

The EPA has confirmed that 31 sites in Missouri are contaminated with dioxin, which was mixed with waste oil and sprayed on roads as a dust-control measure in the early 1970s. Several sites have been cleared by the on-going tests and the EPA says another 40 to 50 sites are under investigation.

About 100 people living near the so-called Stout site in the Meramec Heights area of Imperial, Mo., are still worried.

The subdivision lies at the foot of a steep hill below the Stout site where EPA and CDC tests have shown dioxin at levels above those considered safe.

"You can see the soil wash down even during light rain," said Bob McGraw, pointing to a standing pool of rainbow-colored water in his front yard. "It took us 22 years to build this home. Now I'm scared to live here."

"Bob can't work out in the yard without getting headaches, my son has bladder problems and my daughter's got a rash on her face that won't go away," said McGraw's wife, Francine. "We've been to our doctor and he can't explain why."

CDC and state health officials have refused to examine residents of the area saying they were not considered a high risk group.

Led by a registered nurse, residents of the area are conducting a door-to-door health survey based on questions asked new patients at a doctor's office.

"We're doing what the CDC should be doing," said Gail Hanks, 30, the nurse who designed the survey. "We're looking to see if the liver problems, headaches, skin rashes and nervous system problems we're having here are more than the norm."

Dr. Samuel S. Epstein of the University of Illinois-Chicago told residents of Times Beach, the state's most publicized dioxin-contaminated site, that dioxin-contaminated soil in Missouri should be cleaned up to a level of 5 parts of the substance for each trillion parts of the soil — the minimum detectable level.

Epstein, professor of occupational and environmental medicine, called the 1 part per billion level recognized by the CDC as generally being safe "pure technical expediency."

"This is a substance that is 180,000 times as toxic as cyanide," Epstein told the residents. "It attacks virtually every organ system in the body."

But a University of Missouri doctor who has reviewed available studies on dioxin exposure dating back to 1949, says people who have been exposed to the toxic chemical in industrial accidents have shown no greater incidence of cancer than normal.

"The effects are dose-related," William G. Dunagin said in a recent telephone interview. "Most studies show kidney and liver damage if the dose is very high. But the same studies show no toxicity at lower doses."

The study, which appeared as a copyright article in the March issue of Missouri Medicine, was based on accounts of dioxin exposure in industrial accidents at Nitro, W. Va., in 1949; Ludwigshafen, West Germany, in 1953; Amsterdam in 1963; Grenoble, France, in 1966; Bolsover, England, in 1968; and Seveso, Italy, in 1976.

"In long-term follow-up of human exposure, no increase has been noted in overall mortality," the article said. "(A) 30-year follow-up of 122 workers at Nitro, W. Va., showed no excess over the expected rate of malignancy. No other disease or type of malignancy was increased compared to control populations."

Dunagin said several workers at the Nitro site developed cancer "just like 25 percent of the general population of the United States will at some time."

Students Cater To Lifestyles

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Catering to student lifestyles is the key to success for student entrepreneurs at the University of Rochester.

Successful student-run businesses tend to be based on the eating, listening, and traveling habits of undergraduates. Late-night snacks, custom-baked "Mega-cookies," refrigerator rentals, records and stereo equipment, and luggage transport between hometown and campus reap rewards — financial and otherwise — for students in business for themselves.

One student even turned his modest "Yogi Airlines" into a career after he graduated. Instead of taking fellow students on "mystery tours" to unannounced destinations, he now ferries executives to business meetings as a corporate pilot.
