Dr. C.R. Coble Is Named ECU Education Dean

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Charles R. Coble, an 11-year veteran of the East Carolina University faculty, has been named acting dean of the School of Education, ECU. Announcement of the appointment was made by Dr. Angelo Volpe, acting vice-chancellor for academic affairs. Coble will assume duties of the office on May 6. He succeeds Dr. Richard Warner, who is taking a one-year sabbatical beginning in May to attend a seminary. Warner will return to ECU next year as a faculty member. Coble will also serve in the capacity of actively coordinator for teacher education at ECU.

"We are very pleased to have Coble in this position," Volpe commented. "I feel that his background, his experience and his abilities will be very helpful in meeting the challenges of a job that requires skills in a number of complex areas. We're looking forward to working with Dr. Coble."

A native of Oakboro, near Albemarle, Coble graduated from Oakboro High School and Mars Hill Junior College before attending UNC-Chapel Hill. At Chapel Hill he earned the AB, MA and Ed D

DR. CHARLES R. COBLE degrees, and taught there one year before coming to ECU in 1972.

For the past couple of years, Coble has directed two major projects that involve grants from the National Science Foundation. "One grant was through the state university system to disseminate grants to teachers in the field of elementary science throughout North Carolina," Coble explained. "The other National Science

Ruckelshaus Nominated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today nominated William D. Ruckelshaus for a second tour as chief of the Environmental Protection Agency and the corporate official said he has a "free hand" to run the beleaguered agency.

Reagan personally announced the nomination and said of Ruckelshaus: "No one could bring more impressive credentials... He is the right man for the right job at the right time."

Anne McGill Burford resigned as EPA administrator on March 9 after half-a-dozen congressional panels had launched investigations into EPA affairs.

Ruckelshaus, now a vice president for Weyerhaeuser, the giant timber firm, was the first director of EPA, under President Nixon. He stood beside Reagan as the president sang his praises "as tough, fair and highly competent."

"I guess my immediate task is to stabilize the EPA and reinstate the dedication of the people there... and to get on with the enormous job of protecting the environment," Ruckelshaus said.

Reagan said the attacks on his EPA have been "unwarranted" and said "all I ever proposed is that we be fair," not that there be a tilt to favor the business community.

The White House hopes the Ruckelshaus nomination will bring credibility to the much-investigated EPA, and Ruckelshaus, asked how much independence he was given, told reporters: "I have a free hand."

Daily Reflector Gets Citation

The Daily Reflector was notified today of having been awarded an Associated Press Managing Editors' Instant Citation for its assistance to the AP with coverage of the March 2 explosion which leveled part of the Village Green apartment complex here.

The citation notes that "within two hours of the explosion, Reflector photographer Tommy Forrest was on the phone to the AP with three photos to transmit. During the next three hours, the newspaper moved three more photos on the network and made its darkroom facilities available to AP photographer Bob Jordan."

The AP also cited the Reflector for quotes from survivors for same-cycle use.

An accompanying citation saluted Tommy Forrest for "outstanding cooperation with the Associated Press."

Virtually every member of the Reflector new staff participated in the coverage of the Village Green explosion, managing editor Alvin Taylor said, and he praised the quality of coverage provided Reflector readers and other news services during the few hours between the explosion and press time for the afternoon edition.

Daily Reflector Woman's Editor Rosalie Trotman and Greenville free-lance writer Patricia Moore were announced Saturday as winners in the North Carolina Press Club's annual writing contest.

A second-place award in the newspaper layout division was presented to Mrs. Trotman and a first place in short fiction writing and a first place in photography in publications other than newspapers went to Mrs. Moore during the Presswomen's meeting held in Chapel Hill this past weekend.

Mrs. Trotman's winning entry was a feature page layout titled "Fashions Through the Ages" which focused on dresses displayed in the North Carolina Museum of History. It was published September 12, 1982 in The Daily Reflector. Mrs. Trotman is a past president of the organization.

Mrs. Moore's winning short story was titled "Legacy of Love" published in Lady's Circle magazine in November, 1982. The photography series judged as best illustrated an article on shell flowers crafted by Jeanette Whitehurst of

Tentative Approval Given New Tax Bills

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners today gave tentative approval for the use of new tax bills after tax supervisor Jimmie Hardee and tax collector Bill Smith said the county could save several thousand dollars a year.

Hardee told the board that by using a post card bill similar to bills used by utility companies the county could save 5 cent in postage for each bill mailed out and save 2.4 cents for the form itself.

According to Hardee the cost per bill for the present tax notice is 3.4 cents each and the cost for postage is 17 cents.

The post card type bill costs one cent per notice and postage would cost 12 cents. He reported that if the new bill had been used in November when tax notices were mailed the county could have saved $2,830.

The board approved the use of the new form subject to a review by the county attorney to be certain of its legality.

Commissioners this morning also approved as resolution to be sent to Pitt's representatives in the General Assembly asking them to introduce legislation which will do away with Tar River Port Commission.

The commissioners and the Greenville City Council held a public hearing on the proposal several months ago and agreed to have the port body abolished.

In other business, the board named Charles Joyner of Farmville to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees.

Currency Realignment Is Agreed To By Europeans

By DAVID MASON
Associated Press Writer
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — European finance ministers agreed today on a broad realignment of their currencies, including a 5.5 percent upward revaluation of the West German mark and a 2.5 percent devaluation of the French franc.

"This will enhance the credibility of the European Monetary System," said

West German Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg, who announced the agreement.

The system was thrown into the worst crisis of its four-year history over the weekend when the ministers failed to agree on realigning their currencies, a move needed to end waves of speculation on the currency markets, which in turn aggravated the world recession.

France at one point threatened to pull out of the system, which could have made matters even worse for its trading partners, including the United States, because it would have led to additional French trade barriers to U.S. and other exports.

After the Europeans failed to reach agreement over the weekend, their eight currencies were allowed to float free of mandatory central bank controls when the money markets opened today. There was some confusion on the markets but very little trading.

Otto Poehl, president of West Germany's central bank, said that markets could return to normal following the realignment agreement.

One U.S. dollar bought 7.17 francs today in Paris; at close of trading Friday, the quote was 6.925 francs to the dollar.

The strong West German mark soared today to a record 2.9925 French francs from Friday's fixing at 2.8985. In today's trading the mark was at 2.975 to the U.S. dollar.

France had been refusing the other countries' proposal that it devalue the franc for the third time since the French Socialists came to power 22 months ago. The West Germans were reluctant to raise the value of the mark because it means the country's exports will be more expensive.

French Finance Minister Jacques Delors had threatened to yank France out of the European Monetary System if no agreement is reached. The system was created to stabilize currencies of Common Market members.

All Common Market currencies except the British pound and the Greek drachma are in the system. Besides the French franc and the West German mark they are the Dutch guilder, Belgian and Luxembourg francs, Irish pound, Danish kroner and Italian lira.

A realignment in the system normally affects the U.S. dollar, the British pound, the Japanese yen, and other major currencies.

Pastoral Care Post Is Filled

The Rev. Lewis E. Lint has joined the staff of Pitt County Memorial Hospital as director of the newly established pastoral care department.

The department provides pastoral services to patients, families, staff and students at Pitt Memorial. The services support the holistic approach to care by addressing the emotional, social and spiritual needs of individuals coping with the stresses associated with acute illness and the needs of those caring for the ill and injured, Hospital President Jack Richardson said.

The pastoral care department, consisting of the director and a secretary, operates on a referral basis. Patients may be referred by nurses, doctors, ministers and families, or they may personally initiate the request for services. Initiators of the service felt it is needed largely because PCMH has patients from throughout a 29-county regional, many of whom are far from their own clergy, and because the hospital, being a referral center, is now constantly dealing with serious medical conditions that produce traumatic experiences that call for a holistic approach in dealing with them.

Lint says he plans to establish an adjunct chaplaincy program to utilize the services of local clergy and provide pastoral care on a 24-hour-a-day, 7-day-a-week basis.

Prior to his appointment, Lint was a clinical chaplain with the Cumberland County Hospital System Inc. of Fayetteville. He is an ordained elder in the United Methodist Church and received ecclesiastical endorsement as a chaplain by the Division of Chaplains' Board of Higher Education and Related Ministries of the United Methodist Church in February, 1982.

He received his undergraduate degree in psychology and sociology from Iowa Wesleyan College in Mount Pleasant, Iowa, and his master's degree in divinity from Boston University in Boston, Mass. He served as resident chaplain at Duke University Medical Center during 1979-81 while completing his residency in the advanced clinical pastoral education program.

He is a member of the College of Chaplains, the Association for Clinical Pastoral Education, and a member of the executive board and publicity chairman of the North Carolina Chaplains' Association.

Mrs. Moore is a frequent contributor of feature stories and interviews to the Daily Reflector. She was installed as secretary of the organization during the awards and installation luncheon held Saturday.

Also attending from Greenville was Marianne Baines of the East Carolina University News Bureau.

The meeting was held in Chapel Hill in conjunction with the UNC School of Journalism. Members heard a panel discussion by Brent Hackney of the Governor's Press Office, Ted Bonus, UNC Public Information Director, and Albert Morris, vice president of Corporate Communications for Carolina Power and Light Company. Bill Cloud of the UNC School of Journalism spoke on possible service projects the club could undertake. N.C. ## Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Slimming vertical stripes in softly blending shades are highlights of this lightweight crocheted vest. The vest is started along one front edge and then is worked around to the other front edge to easily achieve the vertical striping. All seaming, except at the shoulders, is eliminated by working in this fashion. Triple strands of a feather-light yarn allow the subtle shading. Easy to follow directions, written without the usual abbreviations, are for small (8-10), medium (12-14) and large (16-18).

To obtain directions for making the slenderizing vest, send your request for Leaflet No. CL-3208 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. CK-3208 by sending a check or money order for $15 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit price includes instruction leaflet, Flere Troder yarn in four shades and the shipping costs. Designer's choice of beige/brown tones will be

I have talked to many people who can crochet beautifully yet claim they cannot follow crochet instructions—and must, therefore, pass up the opportunities to make many lovely designs. If you fall into this category, promise yourself to try to overcome that difficulty so that you aren't limited in design choice.

It has been my experience that most people are intimidated because the directions look so involved and forbidding that they dare not even try to follow them. I have found that when I write out unabbreviated instructions, much of the mystery of following the directions disappears. You can do the same thing for yourself if you have some instructions written in the usual way with abbreviations.

For example, here are some instructions I picked at random from a book:

Ch 64 stitches. Row 1: Dc in 3rd ch from hook (counts as 2 dc), dc in next ch and in each ch across. Turn each row. Row 2: Ch 3 (always counts as 1 dc), sk 1st dc, dc in next dc and in each dc across, end dc in turning ch. Row 3: Ch 3, sk 1st dc, dc in each of next 6 dcs, *ch 1, skip next dc, dc in each of next 11 dc. Repeat from * across, end ch 1, sk 1, dc in each of next 6 dcs, dc in top of turning chain.

Now let's spell out those directions and see if they become clearer to you. Make a chain of 64 chain stitches. Row 1: Work a double crochet in the 3rd chain from the hook. The chains you skipped over in doing this count as 1 double crochet, so you now have 2 double crochets. Work 1 double crochet in the next chain and in each remaining chain across to end of row. Turn. This means to turn your work so other side is facing you.

On all following rows, the chain-3 made at the beginning of a row counts as 1 double crochet. Row 2: Chain 3, skip the first double crochet stitch of the previous row; work 1 double crochet in next stitch and in each remaining stitch across to end of row; finish row by working 1 double crochet in the top of the turning chain of previous row. Turn as before.

Row 3: Chain 3, skip first stitch, work 1 double crochet in each of the next 6 stitches. (Chain 1, skip next stitch; work 1 double crochet in each of next 11 stitches). Repeat the steps between brackets across row. Your last repeat of these bracketed steps will end with a double crochet in each of next 6 stitches and a double crochet in top of turning chain of previous row. Turn as before.

As you can see, the unabbreviated instructions take three paragraphs while the shortened version takes only one paragraph. In a book or magazine full of instructions, the cost saving of abbreviated directions is considerable. I am sure that is why this system was adopted many years ago.

London was astounded in 1821 when Queen Caroline, the wife for 26 years to King George IV when he was the Prince of Wales, was locked out of Westminster Abbey during his coronation and her name omitted from the ceremony. On the king's accession the House of Lords passed a bill to divorce and degrade her, but popular disbelief of her extramarital affairs caused its abandonment. Later, historians found that she and her husband were equally guilty of infidelity. Caroline died within three weeks of the coronation.

Within any set of instructions, if you will just read and follow one step at a time, you will usually have no trouble with each following step — almost before you know it — you will have mastered the complete pattern.

CHILI SAUCE

We copycatted our favorite summertime chili sauce, made with fresh tomatoes, for this winter version.

28-ounce can whole plum tomatoes, undrained
1 cup finely chopped celery (3 large ribs)
2-3rds cup finely chopped onion (6-ounce onion)
2-3rds cup finely chopped green pepper (1 medium)
Cinnamon stick 2 inches long
2 whole cloves
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
2-3rds cup light brown sugar
1 cup cider vinegar
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon chili powder

In a 3-quart saucepot, bring to a boil tomatoes, celery, onion and green pepper; boil gently uncovered, stirring as necessary and adjusting heat as mixture sputters, for 1½ hours. Stir in cinnamon, cloves, mustard, sugar, vinegar and salt and chili powder and return to a boil; simmer, stirring often, until thick — about 1 hour. Remove cinnamon stick. Store tightly covered in refrigerator for flavors to blend and mellow — about 1 week. Makes 3½ cups.

Tell Facts To Talking Aunt

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We're a family of "talkers." Most of us are also sympathetic listeners — with the exception of this one aunt. She calls me and talks for an hour without letting me finish one sentence!

If I call her to tell her something about myself, she'll listen for maybe half a minute, then she interrupts with, "Not to change the subject, but..." and she gets back to her favorite subject — herself.

Everyone in the family says she does the same thing to them. She uses us only as an audience for her monologues. She's really a good person, and I do love her, but she only wants to talk — not listen. How can this problem be solved to keep peace in the family?

TIRED OF LISTENING

DEAR TIRED: Tell her the truth — that you really do love her, but that you also need to be listened to, and you feel hurt and frustrated when she doesn't allow you to talk. If you can't say this to her, put it in a letter, but do get the message to her. Don't be critical or judgmental — just state the facts. She will respect you for it. And she may talk less and listen more.

***

DEAR ABBY: We have been married for over 40 years, and I am not happy at the moment. I am a fairly attractive, sports-minded, golf- and tennis-playing male of 69. My wife (I'll call her "Bernice") is 60, plays nine holes of golf twice a week while riding in a golf cart and says that's enough exercise for her.

Bernice has premature wrinkling all over her lovely face. I find this repugnant. At my insistence we saw a plastic surgeon who told her she was an ideal candidate for successful cosmetic surgery, but she wants no part of such an operation because she is "afraid" of surgery. Her mother was a psychotic who refused to stay above the first floor of any hotel, and I'm afraid Bernice has inherited some of her mother's irrational fears.

Bernice is a good wife and mother. It's probably too late in our lives to make any changes, and I don't really want to, but I would like her to go to exercise classes and build up her stamina so we could play 18 holes together and enter the club mixers. I also want her to have cosmetic surgery. I almost forgot another unattractive feature. She has a lower stomach protuberance that I find physically repugnant. She blames it on having had children, but I've seen women with figures like teen-agers who've had more children than she's had.

I've offered to take aerobic dancing or join an exercise club with her to help build up her stamina and improve her figure, but she spurns the idea.

Am I asking too much of her?

they own, pay lower taxes than younger persons with comparable incomes and are able to ease some of the effects of inflation through various "senior citizen discounts."

Researchers Find Diet Lacking For The Elderly

Good nutrition is essential for the well-being and health of the elderly, but many senior citizens are malnourished. Women, blacks, persons inside of institutions and those over 75 years of age are most likely to have an inadequate diet, researchers have found.

The nutritional status of American elders was studied in three nationwide surveys: the Household Consumption Survey, the Ten-State Nutrition Survey and the Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, which spanned approximately 12 years, says Dr. Nadine Tope, extension specialist-in-charge, foods and nutrition, North Carolina State University.

Standing in the way of good nutrition for elders are lack of money, the loss of teeth which makes it more difficult to eat many foods, the deterioration of the senses of taste and smell resulting in a loss of interest in foods and general poor health.

Findings included: — Over half of the women and more than a third of the men had diets deficient in calcium.

— Forty percent of the women and 20 percent of the men were taking in less than 10 to 15 milligrams of iron a day. Iron intake was especially low among blacks and other minorities. Institutionalized men and women also had low iron intakes even when the menus presented to them were high in iron content.

— Only men with good incomes, who were not institutionalized, took in as many calories as was recommended.

— Many elders eat unvaried diets. They are likely to be deficient in thiamin and riboflavin, found in meat, poultry and fish, bread, cereal, starchy vegetables and whole grain products.

On the positive side, most of the elderly got enough protein, vitamins A and C and niacin.

The fastest growing segment of the American population is the elderly. By the year 2000, they will account for about 12 percent of the total population.

Elderly Americans also compose one of the poorest segments of the population. The 1978 median income for persons 65 years of age and older was $5,630. In 1979, 15 percent lived below the poverty level.

Elderly women and minorities are far more likely to be poor than white men. The highest poverty level, about 42 percent, is experienced by black women, according to U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census.

It could be wrong to assume that all elderly persons are poor. In 1979, about one out of seven elderly persons had incomes of $10,000 or more and half of these had incomes of $15,000 or more. Elders are also more likely to live in homes

DEAR NOT: Yes. No one should be asked to submit to cosmetic surgery to please another. And although an exercise program would improve your wife's stamina and figure, your reasons for pushing it seem more selfish than loving.

Since you admittedly are "not content," I suggest you seek therapy to learn why you find your mate of over 40 years "physically repugnant" because of a protruding tummy and a "lovely" time-etched face.

— An unusual plastic cap for bottles and other containers shows you in plain English whether the container has ever been opened.

On the store shelf, the word "Sealed" appears in a window on top of the cap. But as soon as the bottle is opened, the word "Opened" appears. The new message is permanently locked into place, reports Sunbeam Plastics, inventor of the cap.

EARLY HINDU MARRIAGES

Even today, Hindu marriages in India are elaborate affairs. But in days gone by, the ritual involved much overshadowed the actual wedding.

A girl was to be married by the age of 10, but not younger than eight. She had to be married before she reached puberty.

Her father traditionally hired a priest and a barber to go find a suitable groom, three to four years older than his daughter and of the same caste. When a potential groom was found, an astrologer was called in to determine whether or not the match was favorable.

The astrologer also was asked to choose an auspicious day for the father to send gifts—the bride's dowry—to the groom. At least one-tenth of the dowry had to be in cash.

On the wedding day, the groom and his family made a procession to the bride's house. They wore brocade, red turbans, and jewelry, and music and fireworks accompanied this "parade." The bride's family, not including the bride, would put on a similar parade to go and meet them.

Support Is Needed

Quality and price are continually emphasized as the greatest barrier to the sale of United States' tobacco on world markets.

E.J. Pritchard, head of leaf purchasing for the British-American Tobacco Co., said lower quality, increased price supports and higher taxes have been a cause of the decline of American tobacco exports. He cited a drop of almost 40 percent in 10 years.

Gov. Jim Hunt said at the annual meeting of Tobacco Associates that growers need to unite to produce a quality tobacco. But, he said, "Tobacco is going to survive."

He cited the employment of 150,000 people in North Carolina directly in tobacco. And he told the growers, "You still produce the finest tobacco in the world and can still outwork and out-compete anyone else in the world."

The growers took the challenge and agreed to establish an educational and promotional campaign aimed at improving the quality of flue-cured tobacco.

The effort will involve growers in Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida as well as our state.

Reginald Lester, spokesman for the Tobacco Growers Information Committee, said that, while we still have the highest quality tobacco in the world, "that quality has been slipping.

"We are trying to re-emphasize the significance of growing top quality tobacco," he said. "We command a premium price for premium tobacco, but we need to keep the quality up to justify the demands and price."

It is an effort that everyone involved in tobacco must support. We must keep, and even expand, our share of the world market and we will do it by producing a superior product.

Two-Way Street

The U.S. Marine Corps commandant's disclosures of tension and unpleasant confrontation between the peace-keeping force and Israeli troops in Lebanon underlines a forboding that has accompanied the U.S. relationship with that little country for a number of years.

Gen. Robert Barrow is quoted as saying the incidents between Marines and the Israeli Defense Forces "are timed, orchestrated and executed for obtuse Israeli political purposes."

Even from this distance it sounds reasonable.

In terms of political maneuvering, the government in Tel Aviv is quite capable of taking any steps to achieve its purposes; and that capability is not limited to its dealings with adjoining countries.

There is one possible deterrent, and that is an awareness such policies can lose friendships.

Of course, maybe Menachem Begin does not need the United States anymore. And that is a two-way street.

Why The Decline?

NEW YORK (AP) — The descent of consumer prices from an 11.5 percent rate in 1980-1981 to just 3.9 percent in 1982 brings up as many questions as answers.

Was the decline due to planning or chance? Was the high interest rate "solution" to inflation one of the causes instead? Were the benefits of the decline spread widely or concentrated among a relative few?

There are indeed some curiosities revealed in a breakdown of the price slowdown.

A slowing in the rate of energy prices provided 2.2 points of the total 7.7 point-drop in the inflation rate, according to Data Resources Inc., which provides much of the arithmetic for the nation's economists.

There is no question that programs to diminish usage and step up domestic production contributed to the slowdown. Gasoline prices plunged. In the earlier period they had risen 26 percent. In the latter they fell 6.6 percent.

But the question that torments inflation-fighters is the extent of their contributions in comparison to those of the OPEC nations, which competed with each other, flooded the world with unneeded oil and forced prices lower.

How much of the price improvement was due to domestic planning? How much to poor planning on the part of OPEC and other oil-producing nations?

An even bigger contribution to the slowdown, some 3.6 percentage points, was made by the cost of home ownership.

Home prices and home maintenance and repair costs continued to rise, though more slowly than in the earlier period, but the category called finance-taxes-insurance actually fell by 4 percent — after having risen earlier by 22.8 percent.

Again, the questions. In the conventional thinking of economists, and in the practices of the Federal Reserve Board, rising interest rates are considered a consequence of inflation and an antidote to it.

It doesn't take close examination to realize, however, that a rise in interest rates also can be a factor in inflation, and that the removal of those high rates can make a contribution to lessening inflation.

Food and beverages, which lent 0.9 of a percentage point to the overall 7.7 percentage point slowdown, make up the only other significant contributor to the price slowdown, aside from the "all other" category.

The food-beverage and energy categories involve almost all Americans, but the home ownership grouping, which made the largest contribution to the slowdown, does not. Many people do not own homes.

Even more significantly, most people do not buy homes in any given year, and so are not subjected to existing interest rates, which in both periods had the most significant impact on prices of any item but gasoline.

The question that arises is an obvious one: If relatively few people benefitted from the biggest contributor to disinflation, is the consumer price index really a proper indicator of consumer prices?

The CPI, remember, shows very little contribution to disinflation from the clothing, home furnishings and medical care categories, which are shared by all people. A contribution, in fact, of only two-tenths of one percentage point.

Legislator Loses Another Round

tuition today is only $1,900 to $2,790 a year.

Under Jordan's proposal, out-of-state tuition would jump next year to 100 percent of the budgeted state expense — about $4,400. Under Coble's bill, it would rise over several years to 90 percent of that expense. Seems fair. These people and their families didn't contribute to the university by paying taxes. Let them pay the full cost of getting an education here. Jordan estimates that the higher fees would bring an additional $40 million into the state's coffers.

Then Friday got his chance. His argument was simple. If you raise out-of-state tuition to the degree to which you've proposed — a level which would make it the highest in the Southeast — you'll scare away the best out-of-state students, hurt the university system and, in the long run, cost the state a lot of money.

First he challenged the perception regarding the size of the out-of-state contingent. Of the 3,200 students in the freshman class at Chapel Hill, 480 come from out-of-state — less than 15 percent. And certainly, during the week of the ACC tournament, Mr. Jordan wasn't proposing that we turn away out-of-state athletes like one Sam Perkins from New York. Then there are all the ROTC students from out-of-state and the Morehead Scholars. Count them out, and we're talking about 200 students, Friday said.

Then Friday read from a list of distinguished North Carolinians. People who rung big corporations. People who've made big gifts to the state, brought jobs here. All were out-of-staters who settled here after attending UNC. He brought on Bruce Poulton, chancellor of N.C. State. Poulton did the same thing. They also listed folks who came to school here and left but who, like pollster Lou Harris, have made large gifts to the university.

Poulton spoke of N.C. State grads who hold big jobs in the state and pay big taxes. Many of these people came here from out-of-state. North Carolina only invested in their college educations. Other states paid to put them through elementary and high school.

Chancellor John Howell of East Carolina, Dr. Jasper Memory of State and Dr. Phillip Maneri of Chapel Hill followed with other arguments. They spoke of the need to have out-of-staters on campus. They told of the contributions out-of-staters have made to North Carolina — like the graduate student who developed the process state farmers use to fight witchweed.

In making his presentation, Jordan claimed he was a biblical David fighting a Goliath. But everyone knows that David slew the overconfident Goliath. Friday wasn't overconfident. He was prepared. And Jordan's bill was sent to a subcommittee. If it ever re-appears, it's certain to look very different.

A Call To The French Embassy

"No one likes to be kicked in the stomach. I know Klaus liked to kick other people in the stomach, but he never wanted anyone to do it to him."

"I don't understand where this conversation is leading."

"I told you. I'm just interested in Klaus Barbie's health and I want to make sure he's getting the best medical help available. You say he has kidney trouble. He must be very uncomfortable."

"The French doctors are taking very good care of him."

"I'm sure of that. But tell them not to give Klaus any painkillers."

"Why not?"

"Klaus never believed in painkillers. He said painkillers dulled the mind and senses. I'm sure if he wouldn't prescribe them for others, he wouldn't want any for himself. Tell me about the nervous disorder."

"From what we know he can't sleep at night."

"Poor Klaus. He used to sleep so well in Lyon. Don't let the doctors give him anything to get a good night's rest. Barbie always maintained the less you let a person sleep, the more willing he was to cooperate with his captors. Be sure and shine a light in his eyes all night long. He likes that."

"How do you know what he likes?"

"He used to do it all the time to the people in his care. He wouldn't have done it if he didn't believe a bright light was good for someone who needed sleep."

"Are you a doctor?" the man at the embassy asked.

"Not exactly. But when someone like Klaus Barbie gets sick, I like to be of help. Have the French doctors hit his kidneys with a night stick?"

"I'm sure they haven't."

"They might try it. Klaus always said hitting a person in the kidneys was a good way to make him forget his hernia problems."

Strength For Today

"The best hamburger in the U.S.A."

That's what the sign says at this roadside restaurant. Now the hamburger is very good, but we can be pretty sure that there are other places in the country that serve just as tasty hamburger. Does this mean, therefore, that the proprietors of this establishment are consciously lying?

Not at all. Their estimate of the delectable quality of their hamburger is simply a measure of their enthusiasm and self-confidence.

The result has been that they have conducted a very successful business. This success has been largely due to the confidence they had in their own hamburger and about everything else in their establishment and about their own ability to put things across.

The lesson is: have faith in yourself. We can do most of the things we set out to do if we go about our efforts in a spirit of confidence and faith.

Volcker's Future Is A Guessing Game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Will he seek another four-year term? Will he get it? No, not Ronald Reagan. Paul Volcker.

One of the biggest guessing games in town, after trying to figure out the president's own political plans, is whether the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board wants to keep his powerful post, and whether Reagan will reappoint him, when Volcker's term expires this August.

Naming a head of the nation's central bank will be the most important appointment Reagan will make this year, possibly for the rest of his term unless Reagan gets the chance to name a chief justice to the Supreme Court.

So far, Reagan has refused to signal his intentions about Volcker. And Volcker says he only has confided in his wife as to whether he wants to leave his government job and return to New York, where his family still resides, for a certain fortune as a private consultant or financier.

Until an economic recovery began unfolding this winter, it seemed certain that Reagan would replace Volcker, a man first chosen by a Democrat, Jimmy Carter. After all, this would be Reagan's opportunity to put his own man in the crucial Fed job, a leading power base for conducting economic policy.

But signs of an improving economy, an unexpectedly low inflation rate and a gradual decline in interest rates over the past two years have increased the chances that the 55-year-old Volcker will be asked to stay on.

"The probability of his reappointment increases with each day the economy improves," observes Thomas Thomson, chief economist for Crocker National Bank in San Francisco.

"I haven't heard a word here about successors," said a Treasury Department official, speaking only on condition that his name not be used. "That tells me Volcker may stay."

A year ago, with the country smarting from both a deep recession and high interest rates, Volcker was everyone's favorite scapegoat.

Now, most of the brickbats have turned into bouquets.

Within the influential business community, Volcker is viewed as a towering figure, and not just because of his 6-foot-7 frame. He is respected for his mastery of the nation's complex financial policies, and awed as a "macho" figure — complete with cigar jutting from jaw — who was tough enough to stick to a tight-credit policy for fighting inflation over the cries from Congress about the high unemployment and business bankruptcies that resulted.

Volcker also is winning praise for his early warnings about the worrisome debt problems of developing nations, and for the rescue loan packages he helped negotiate to avert an international financial crisis.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, suggested this month that Volcker be reappointed, and the committee's ranking Democrat and former chairman, William Proxmire of Wisconsin, recently said: "I think the country is lucky to have you as chairman of the Federal Reserve. You've done a remarkable job under very difficult circumstances."

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, a periodic critic of Fed policy, has been supportive of Volcker lately, and chief White House economist Martin S. Feldstein is an admirer of the Fed chairman.

Most importantly, the president has had nothing but kind words for Volcker over the past few months, supporting the central bank's policy and crediting the Fed with helping to lower inflation to below 4 percent — lower than anyone thought would be possible by now.

Volcker still has his critics, but their voices are muted. They warn that the Fed is letting the nation's money supply grow too rapidly, a course they say will rekindle inflation and high interest rates down the road.

Others, such as Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., while pleased that the Fed is fostering a recovery by letting the money supply grow more rapidly, are concerned that Volcker is using too much of his own judgment rather than objective guidelines to conduct monetary policy. "He's got the economy in the palm of his hands. That's just too much power for one person," Kemp griped in an interview.

Conservatives argue Volcker's reappointment would force Reagan to accept blame for the recession, a political liability for the GOP in 1984.

Several possible successors have been mentioned, but each has some drawback. Walter B. Wriston, chairman of Citicorp, has effectively taken himself out of the running, saying it would be a "conflict" for a commercial banker to take the post. Preston Martin, a California savings and loan official who was appointed by Reagan to be vice chairman of the Fed, may lack sufficient expertise on monetary policy.

Alan Greenspan, chief White House economist in the Ford administration, has the qualifications but is believed to have many political enemies.

Four events have been scheduled. These are in swimming, track, tennis and golfing. The swimming event will be held at UNC-Wilmington, the track and tennis events at Legion Stadium, and the golf event at the city's municipal golf course.

Three Sunday Wrecks Reported

An estimated $5,100 damage resulted from a series of three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Sunday.

Police said heaviest damage resulted when a car driven by Catherine Daniels Johnson of 107 Greenfield Blvd. collided with two parked cars on Woodside Drive, 250 feet south of the Fireside Drive intersection.

Investigators said the Johnson car ran off the road and struck a fence and two cars owned by Herbert Arthur Lee of 108 Woodside Drive.

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Johnson car, $600 to each of the Lee cars, and $300 to the fence.

Timothy Elliott Perkins of Red Barn Trailer Park, was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 1:15 a.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Elm Streets.

Officers said the Perkins car collided with a vehicle driven by Joseph Harold Leonard Jr. of Kings Row Apartments, causing an estimated $1,000 damage to each of the two cars.

Trucks driven by Edward Carol Evans of Route 6, Washington, and Lester Moye of 300 Cadillac St. collided about 3:48 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 50 feet north of the Chestnut Street intersection, causing $400 damage to the Evans vehicle and $200 damage to the Moye truck.

Two Collisions Investigated

An estimated $5,500 damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 12:10 a.m. collision on N.C. 11 a quarter-mile north of the Greenfield Boulevard intersection, involving cars driven by Donnie McMillar of Route 2, Walstonburg, and Jasper Cooper Jr. of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $2,000 to the McMillar car and $2,500 to the Cooper auto.

A 9:54 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene Street and Gum Road, involved a truck driven by Norman Jesse Paramore of 1310 VanDyke St. and a car operated by Lindell Wright of Route 1, Robersonville.

Paramore was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety by officers who estimated damage at $300 to the truck and $700 to the car.

Rape, Assault Is Charged

Greenville police Saturday night arrested a 19-year-old Robert McKinley Crawford of Apartment 4, 2101 Montclair Drive, on rape and assault with a deadly weapon charges.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Crawford allegedly entered the home of a 40-year-old woman about 11 p.m., produced a knife, ordered her to disrobe, then raped her.

Cannon said after the attack, Crawford told the woman he would have to kill her, then severely beat her and choked her until she passed out.

The victim knew Crawford, and he was taken into custody shortly after the attack, Cannon said.

An estimated $4,700 damage resulted from a three-vehicle collisions investigated Friday by Greenville police.

Officers identified the drivers of the cars involved as John Michael VanWagenen of 2606 Jackson Drive, Lesley Ann Falconer of 118 Greenwood Drive, and Barry John Cousler of Havelock.

Police, who said the collision occurred about 7:07 p.m. on Cotanche Street, 50 feet south of the Ninth Street intersection, charged Cousler with driving under the influence.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $2,800 to the Falconer car, $1,600 to the Cousler vehicle and $300 to the VanWagenen car.

Charges Are Made By Police

Greenville police Friday night arrested two 16-year old Route 2, Farmville, youths in connection with two break-ins here.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers charged Tony Frizzell with breaking and entering an auto, after he was picked up on Dickinson Avenue a short time after employees reported a car parked at Margaux's Restaurant at 706 South Evans St.,

ADOLESCENT CHEMICAL DEPENDENCY

by Porter Shaw
Substance Abuse Program Director

Adolescence is, of course, a time of experimentation. Many young people may begin to drink alcohol to feel grown up and independent, or simply for the thrill of it. In a large number of adolescents the experimentation may end there. For others, however, this experimentation with alcohol may progress to an increasingly regular use, daily preoccupation, and finally dependency. 20% of teenagers who drink, according to recent reports, have significant problems with alcohol. Chemical dependency may be defined as the "overwhelming urge" to use substances regardless of the consequences. This chemical dependency affects the entire family, which then suffers from progressive illness such as a child who misuses alcohol or other drugs suffers from a progressive illness. In the early stages of a child's chemical use, parents deny that their child has a problem (just as the child will deny that he or she has a problem). This may be described as "emotional denial," and denial is a serious problem in itself. Parents may begin to look for behavioral or psychological causes rather than examining the core of the problem. Without positive intervention, the families' illness, as well as that of the child, progresses. There is generally a stage of anger and self-pity. Parents may try to bargain with their child by saying, for example, "If you stop this behavior, we will let you have the car on Saturday night." These attempts to exert control can split families right down the middle. One parent may be in the bargaining mood while the other is in a fighting mood. At this point the family may become frustrated and depressed and require treatment. Unfortunately, most families of adolescent chemically dependent reach this point before they seek outside help. Next week our discussion of chemical dependency in adolescents will continue with a questionnaire for young people to examine their relationship with alcohol or other drugs.

If you have a question you would like for us to answer through this column, please submit to Community Services, Pitt County Mental Health Center, 306 Stantonsburg Road, Greenville, or call Community Services, 752-0119.

Some people think an IRA won't help until retirement. Nonsense. A BB&T IRA helps every April 15.

An IRA, you see, is more than a fast-growing retirement fund. It's a tax shelter.

Now, the tax-wise have been taking advantage of tax shelters for years, contributing money to charity, for example, so they can take big deductions and pay smaller income taxes.

Well, we think it's about time working people got a piece of the action. And they can with BB&T's Individual Retirement Account, a tax shelter that's yours when you make a contribution to the charity closest to your heart: you and your family.

You're allowed to invest as much as $2,000 a year in your IRA ($2,250 if you're married and only one of you is a wage earner, $4,000 if you both are). And every penny is deductible. Which means big tax savings. If you're in the 25% tax bracket, for example, and you and your working spouse put $4,000 into an IRA, your refund check from Uncle Sam will be $1,000 fatter than it would be otherwise.

YOU DON'T EVEN PAY TAX ON THE INTEREST YOU EARN UNTIL YOU RETIRE.

Which is nice, because at BB&T, you'll be earning at a rate that's tied to money market rates, with a guaranteed minimum of 8%. What's more, we don't compound that interest annually or quar-

ELECTRIC TOOTHBRUSHES

Electric toothbrushes are the 20th century's answer to "toothbrusher's elbow." But you can do just as well manually. Their main advantage is that all you have to do is apply the brush to your teeth and the brush does all the work.

Another advantage of the electric toothbrush is its novelty value. It is a mechanical device and children are more likely to develop regular brushing habits because of their fascination with a brush that "does the work." If an electric toothbrush encourages the habit of brushing teeth on a regular schedule, it is well worth the investment.

The electric toothbrush is definitely a boon to handicapped persons who cannot brush their teeth easily with a regular hand brush.

The late president, Lyndon Johnson was sold on electric toothbrushes. He used to present them (engraved with the presidential seal) as gifts. "I give these toothbrushes to friends," LBJ told his biographer, Doris Kearns, "then I know they will think of me every morning, and every night."

Production Of Sunflowerseed Expected To Slump

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It appears sunflowerseed production will take a sharp tumble this year, say Minnesota, North Dakota, Agriculture Department analysts.

According to a recent survey, farmers in the four major production states — Minnesota, North Dakota,

South Dakota and Texas — intend to plant about 3.86 million acres of sunflowers this year, down 23 percent from more than 5.01 million acres in 1982.
Fifteen years ago, farmers planted fewer than 100,000 acres of sunflowers a year. Some were grown to produce a high-quality vegetable oil, others for non-oil purposes, including seed roasted and marketed as snack foods.

As an oilseed, the crop has a market link to soybeans and cottonseed, and has an important role in world trade.
Beginning in the early 1970s, when world demand exploded for many U.S. farm commodities, sunflowers hit the big time for many producers.

Prices at the farm rose accordingly, from an average of less than $5 per 100 pounds in 1972 to $8.06 in 1973 and to a record $16.70 per hundredweight in 1974. Prices stayed above $10 until the huge crop of 1979 when the season average dropped to $8.93.
The 1979 sunflowerseed harvest was 7.08 billion pounds, which resulted after farmers planted a record 5.33 million acres to the crop.
Sunflowerseed production declined to about 3.55 billion pounds in 1980 — and the price once again rose, to an average of $10.60 per hundredweight.
In the 1981-82 season, when the crop was about 4.63 billion pounds, prices rose to $11.10 per hundredweight.
But last year, with production soaring 27 percent to nearly 5.87 billion pounds, the prices dropped sharply and are expected to average about $9 per 100 pounds in the 1982-83 sunflower marketing year which began last Sept. 1.
A recent USDA outlook report for fats and oils said that a major reason for prices declining is the drop in exports, which in recent years have accounted for about three-fourths of the U.S. sunflowerseed crop. The largest single market in 1981-82 was Mexico, which took about 40 percent of the harvest.
"Traditionally, the largest market has been the European Community," the report said. "However, in 1981-82, the community took only 35 percent of the U.S. sunflower seed exports, versus 60 percent a year earlier."
The report said the main reasons for the cutback was increased production of European rapeseed — a major oilseed crop in parts of the world — and a stronger U.S. dollar, which made American products more expensive to buy.
Sunflowerseed exports in 1982-83 are expected to decline slightly from last year, the report said.
"However, lower prices should encourage foreign purchases," it said. "Also with declining U.S. interest rates, the dollar may weaken, which would improve foreign demand."
On the other hand, the report said, seed supplies in other countries are up by more than 13 percent this year, which dampens the U.S. export outlook.

Farm Scene

By MIRIAM NANCE
Agricultural Extension Agent
There have been many questions asked about cover crops for "set aside" acres. Pitt County farmers need to look at various alternatives before making a decision about cover crops. Any annual, biennial or perennial grass or legume may be used except for soybeans. Summer cover can be planted but no grazing or harvesting will be allowed April-September. You will be allowed to mow during the no-harvest season to suppress weed growth.

There are several summer cover crops that could be planted in the spring. These covers will help prevent soil erosion from wind and rain. The crops you could plant are sorghum, sudan, pearl millet, German/foxtail millet, annual lespedeza, sericea lespedeza, cowpeas, fescue, pigeon peas and possibly red clover.

The best planting date for many of these is May 1-15. This is too late for several of the above crops except for lespedeza. (mid-March) fescue and red clover. Cover crops must be sown by March 31 according to the set aside rules. Nitrogen, at least 50 pounds per acre, will be needed to provide a good stand of any of the grasses mentioned. The soil should be tested to find out if enough residual fertilizer is present to support a crop.

There are two options for a farmer in Pitt County. He can either plant no cover crop or plant a summer cover. Natural vegetation is allowed on set aside land. Legume covers can be used to an advantage if set aside land is to be rotated with corn or sorghum but grasses are probably the best choice on peanut land. This will prevent any carryover of disease and insects to the next peanut crop.

Costs must be studied before a cover crop can be planted. These costs include seed, fertilizer, land preparation, mowing, etc. The Pitt County Extension Service can assist you when preparing forage crop budgets.

TOBACCO COURSE — Carl Briley, center, of Pitt County was one of 53 young tobacco farmers who attended a Tobacco Short Course conducted by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service with assistance of a grant-in-aid from Phillip Morris. ## New Dried Milk Standards Set Await Hundreds At Nat'l 4-H Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that revised federal standards for dry whole milk will go into effect on May 13.

Edward T. Coughlin of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said the revisions will eliminate the U.S. Premium grade standards for the product. The remaining grades — U.S. Extra and U.S. Standard — will "adequately classify the quality of dry whole milk as it is used now," he said.

Coughlin said the revisions were developed in cooperation with the American Dry Milk Institute, an industry association.

Production and sales of dry whole milk have shown a steady increase in recent years, he said. The product is used in the manufacture of ice cream, candy, soup and baked goods.

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 300 4-H youths and adult leaders will attend the 53rd annual National 4-H Conference here next month.

The meeting will be April 9-15 at the National 4-H Center in Chevy Chase, Md., a Washington suburb. The delegates will represent five million 4-H members and 600,000 volunteer leaders.

Eugene Williams, deputy administrator for 4-H in the Agriculture Department's Extension Service, said the delegates will hold meetings on this year's theme, 4-H Pathways to the Future.

Williams said discussion groups will "analyze specific 4-H program areas and provide ideas on how to strengthen each." For example, he said, one group will consider ways 4-H can help create a greater awareness of agriculture in the United States.

Other highlights of the conference will include visits to the Agriculture Department and Capitol Hill.

"After the conference ends, the 4-H members and leaders will return to their communities and tell the people back home about the word they did and what it can mean to local groups," Williams said.

The annual conference is sponsored by the Extension Service, in cooperation with the cooperative extension services of the nation's land-grant colleges and universities, and the National 4-H Council.

A sicklepod in the shade is a pushover. But since you can't make your soybeans canopy any faster, why not make sicklepod emerge slower?

That's where Vernam® herbicide comes in. Tank-mixed with your Treflan®, Prowl® or Basalint®, and applied preplant incorporated, Vernam knocks back first-flush sicklepod. So later-emerging sicklepod has already lost the shade race to your soybeans.

MORE GOVERNMENT OR MORE PRIVATE ENTERPRISE IN PITT COUNTY?

Can Pitt County afford not to support a new private enterprise or do we want the taxpayers to foot the bill again?

Shouldn't we let private industry build and operate a new psychiatric hospital for Pitt County and Eastern North Carolina rather than the taxpayers of Pitt County?

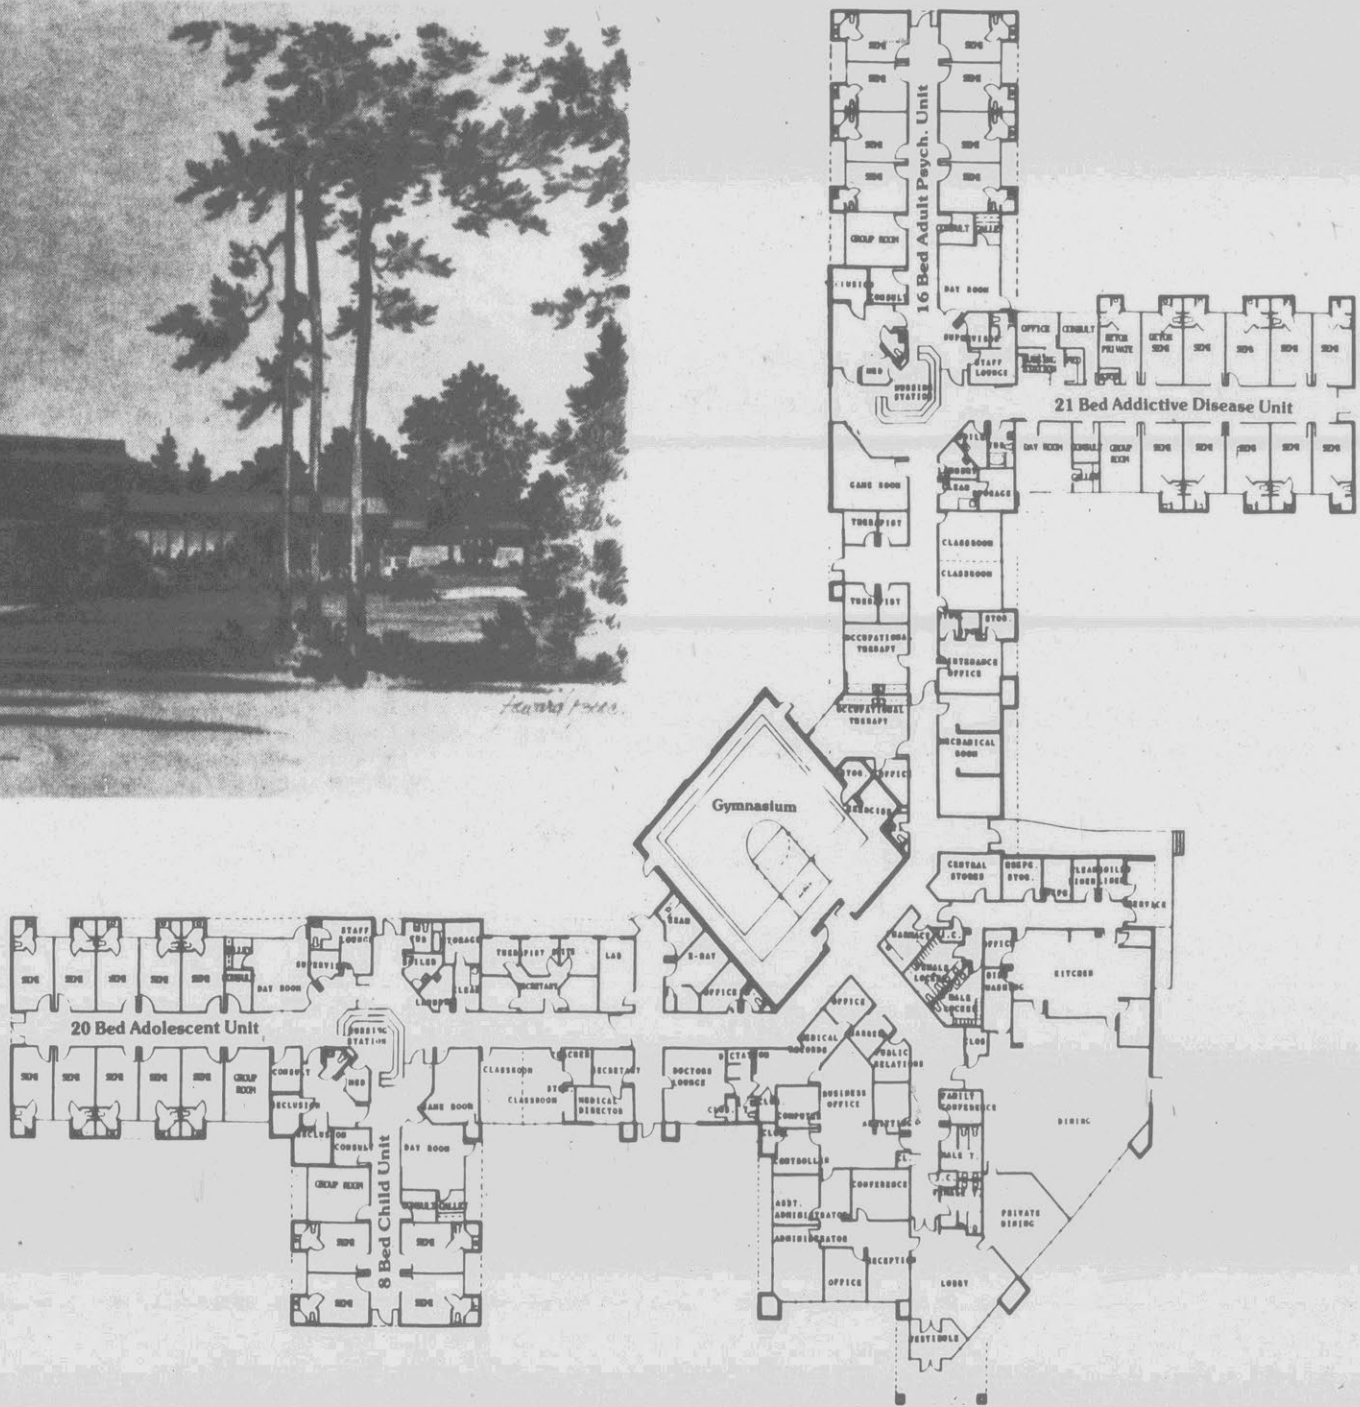

Why shouldn't we be for a new comprehensive psychiatric hospital employing over 100 people when fully operational, paying county taxes of $100,000 annually, income taxes of $400,000 annually, furnish 65 beds with all needed support facilities without a penny of cost to Pitt County taxpayers?

last week's indecisive showing.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, unchanged in last week's trading, edged up .20 to 1,117.94 by noontime today.

But declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 5 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines dropped 1/8 to 99 3/4; American Telephone & Telegraph lost 1/4 to 65 1/4, and General Motors was unchanged at 60.

The NYSE's composite index was down .02 at 86.35. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.36 to 379.77.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 26.76 million shares at noontime, down from 35.29 million at the same point Friday.

Meanwhile, Trading on foreign exchanges was thrown into confusion today after a realignment of European Monetary System currencies that lifted the value of the West German mark 5.5 percent and devalued the French franc 2.5 percent. The dollar rose against all major currencies except the mark and the Canadian dollar.

And in Washington, in the broadest sign yet of economic recovery, the government estimated today that the economy grew at a 4 percent annual rate during the first three months of the year, the strongest performance in two years.

The Commerce Department's so-called "flash" estimate of inflation-adjusted gross national product showed the largest increase since the first quarter of 1981 and underscored the near-unanimous view of economists that the severe 1981-82 recession ended last December.

Coble....

Foundation grant is one for handicapped students which I've coordinated through the State Department of Public Instruction as a leadership institute project in elementary sciences."

Coble is the author or co-author of five books in his basic field, science education. "Two of them are on mainstreaming science and math, another is on mainstreaming language arts and social studies. The other books deal with science in the junior high level and life and earth sciences."

He is a charter member of the Greenville-Martinsborough Lions Club and enjoys outdoor recreational activities as well as playing basketball. He is married to the former Diana Semke of Enide, Okla. and they have two children, Christopher, 13, and Andrea, 10.

"I feel honored being named to this position. It's a challenge, one that will take a lot of cooperation with faculty members in the School of Education as well as with faculty in other departments," Coble commented. "I have a great deal of respect for faculty in both areas and think we'll be able to work well together to encourage growth and improvements."

Coble added "One of our major goals is to continue to strengthen the preeminent position that the School of Education has enjoyed over the years."

Report Of Study On Cable TV

Greenville Cable TV will carry the first state government meeting in N.C. history to be sent by satellite to cable television homes across the state at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Sponsored by the Electronic Town Hall Task Force, the meeting will reveal results of a study examining the impact of deregulating the telephone industry and how it will affect consumers, business and the telephone industry itself.

The two-hour video-taped meeting of the Agency for Public Telecommunications Board will be carried on local cable channel 13. Some 51 cable television franchises representing 116 municipalities across the state will air the program. A live one-hour statewide telephone call-in program will follow the meeting at 10 p.m.

The cablecast meeting is part of a demonstration to study the possibility of delivering unedited, impartial coverage of state government meetings to North Carolina citizens.

Homicide Ruled

GRIFTON — Dr. Stan Harris, Pitt County medical examiner, has ruled homicide in the death of a Route 2, Grifton, man whose body was discovered by his wife this morning in a machine shop behind the victim's home.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said his department is investigating the death of Booker T. Dixon, about 35.

Tyson said Dixon's wife told officers that her husband went to the shop Sunday night and did not return to the house. She reported that she found him lying in a pool of blood on the floor of the shop around 8 a.m. today.

Harris, who said that an autopsy will be conducted, reported that Dixon had apparently been dead since Sunday night. He said that Dixon had suffered gunshot wounds.

Utah, NCSU Advance To Semifinals

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Utah and North Carolina State meet Thursday night in the final fitting session for this year's glass slipper at the NCAA basketball tournament.

The Wolfpack challenged the Utes for the Cinderella tag Sunday with a last-gasp 71-70 victory over sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas. Utah and North Carolina State meet in the West Regional semifinals at Ogden, Utah.

Of the 16 teams remaining in the national championship tournament, 13 are seeded, with Iowa, Utah and North Carolina State the only unseeded teams.

Utah, whose 18-13 record is now the worst in the tournament, beat No. 7 UCLA Saturday after opening the tournament with an upset triumph over Illinois.

In other games Sunday, St. John's beat Rutgers 66-55 and Ohio State defeated Syracuse 79-74 in the East Regional. Memphis State ousted Georgetown 66-57 and Iowa swamped Missouri 77-63 in the Midwest. Louisville toppled Tennessee 70-57 and Indiana whipped Oklahoma 63-49 in the Midwest and Boston College stopped Princeton 51-42 in the West.

As Atlantic Coast Conference champions, North Carolina State appears to have more solid credentials than Utah, but the Wolfpack was only 17-10 in the regular season before three straight victories in the ACC tournament gave it an automatic berth in the NCAA.

North Carolina State edged Pepperdine 69-67 in the first round before upsetting Nevada-Las Vegas on 6-foot-11 center Thurl Bailey's rebound basket with four seconds left. Bailey tipped in the rebound of a missed 20-footer by Derek Whittenburg to give North Carolina State its fifth close victory in a row.

"When it came off the rim I tried to tip it in the first time," Bailey said. "It rolled off and there were a couple of hands on it, so I grabbed it and, as I was falling back, I just threw it off the board and it dropped."

"What can I say? It was a one-pointer. That's five of those close ones in a row for us," Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said. "I said it would be a one-point game and it was. There's luck involved in this, too. I call it the luck factor. Don't discount it."

Nevada-Las Vegas led 52-40 with 11:40 remaining, but the Runnin' Rebels allowed the Wolfpack to come back by missing several layups and free throws.

"We haven't been a good free throw team all year and it came back to hurt us in a big game," said UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian.

Nevada-Las Vegas, UCLA and No. 10 Missouri are the only seeded teams (and the only ones in the Top Ten) who aren't among the 16 who advanced to regional semifinals with victories on Saturday and Sunday.

Greg Stokes scored 22 points as Iowa easily handled the Tigers in the Midwest Regional at Louisville to advance to the next round against No. 13 Villanova at Kansas City of Friday.

In the first game of the Midwest doubleheader, Keith Lee hit eight of 11 shots from the field and had 28 points and 15 rebounds to lead 17th-ranked Memphis State past No. 20 Georgetown. Georgetown's sophomore star, Patrick Ewing, had 24 points and nine rebounds, but he was in foul trouble for much of the game and also missed four dunk shots.

Memphis State meets top-ranked Houston in the other Kansas City semifinal.

Third-ranked St. John's, the top seed in the East, got 24 points from Chris Mullin to defeat Rutgers despite a shaky first half at Hartford, Conn. The Redmen fell behind 26-19 while shooting only 39.4 percent in the first 15 minutes, but then went ahead 29-28 at halftime despite 74-percent shooting by Rutgers.

"Our offense wasn't going, but our defense kept us in there," Mullin said, referring to two steals by Billy Goodwin that led to baskets during the St. John's comeback.

In Sunday's East opener, Tony Campbell scored eight of his 17 points on rebound baskets in a span of 7:11 in the second half to lead Ohio State over Syracuse.

In the East Regional semifinals at Syracuse on Friday, St. John's meets Georgia and Ohio State faces North Carolina.

In the Midwest doubleheader at Evansville, Ind., Charles Jones and Lancaster Gordon scored 18 points apiece to lead No. 2 Louisville past Tennessee, the 30th victory in 34 games for the Cardinals, including the last 14 in a row. An 11-2 spurt midway through the second half put Louisville in control after Tennessee cut a seven-point halftime deficit to 45-43.

"I thought we did a good job of keeping the ball out of Ellis' hands," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said. Dale Ellis, an All-American, was held to 13 points — 10 under his average.

Fifth-ranked Indiana got 22 points on 10-of-17 shooting from Randy Wittman and effectively used delay tactics in the final 14 minutes to beat Oklahoma.

Louisville takes on Arkansas and Indiana meets Kentucky in the Midwest semifinals at Knoxville, Tenn., on Thursday.

After the North Carolina State upset of Nevada-Las Vegas, Boston College held Princeton without a field goal in the first 14½ minutes of the second half to turn a close game its way. Jay Murphy scored 17 points for the 11th-ranked Eagles, who led 41-30 after the Tigers missed their first 12 shots from the floor after halftime.

Boston College meets Virginia, the top-seeded team in the West Regional, in the other half of Thursday's doubleheader.

Bailey's Follow-Shot Lifts Pack

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Thurl Bailey's rebound basket with four seconds left gave No. 16 North Carolina State a 71-70 upset victory over No. 6 Nevada-Las Vegas Sunday in the second round of the NCAA West Regional basketball tournament.

Bailey, a 6-foot-11 senior, brought the Wolfpack back from a 12-point deficit in the final 11:40 of the game. He scored 17 of his team-high 25 points in the final 11 minutes of the game.

N.C. State, 22-10 and winner of four straight extremely close games, plays Utah in the West Regional semifinals Thursday night in Ogden, Utah.

Boston College met Princeton in the second game of the Corvallis doubleheader Sunday.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 28-3, took a 20-19 lead on a layup by freshman Eldridge Hudson with 8:26 left in the first half. The Runnin' Rebels took a 33-27 halftime lead, then with forward Larry Anderson's outside shooting, UNLV expanded the lead to 52-40 on Sidney Green's three-point play with 11:40 remaining.

The Rebels missed two straight layups to help the Wolfpack get close. N.C. State pulled within 56-54 on two free throws by Lorenzo Charles with 7:25 to play.

UNLV led 70-67 when Eric Booker hit one of two free throws with 48 seconds left. Bailey scored on an eight-footer 12 seconds later and Hudson missed the front end of a bonus opportunity with 32 seconds left to give the Wolfpack a chance.

Derek Whittenburg missed a 20-footer with nine seconds left, but Bailey grabbed the rebound twice, scoring on his second attempt.

Green led all scorers with 27, while Anderson added 16. Charles scored 16 and Whittenburg 13 for the Wolfpack.

New Orleans Builds Reputation With NIT

By The Associated Press
When you're trying to build a basketball reputation at a little-known school, you don't complain when the National Invitation Tournament ships you halfway across the country.

"We will go anywhere and play anyone at any time," says Don Smith, whose New Orleans team will play Oregon State Monday night in Corvallis, Ore. "This is a chance for us to get exposure in another part of the country."

Smith's Privateers, 23-6, didn't have to go far for their first victory, traveling up to Baton Rouge to beat Louisiana State, 99-94 in overtime. That gave them some prestige in their home state; now they're seeking it at a national level.

"One coach told me they may be the most underrated club in the country," said Lanny Van Eman, an assistant coach at 19-10 Oregon State, which downed Idaho 77-59 in its first-round game.

"They don't have any obvious weakness."

In other NIT quarter-final games Monday night, Iowa will be at Nebraska; Virginia Tech at South Carolina; Fresno State at Michigan State; Wake Forest at Vanderbilt; South Florida at Mississippi; Northwestern vs. DePaul at Rosemont, Ill., and Texas Christian at Arizona State.

"They're an interesting ballclub and they play under control," Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller says of New Orleans, to which Smith concurs: "we do a little bit of everything."

The Privateers are led by Mark Pettaway, a 6-7 senior who averages 17.8 points and 7.6 rebounds a game. Charlie Sitton, one of the few holdovers from last year's NCAA quarterfinalists, leads the Beavers with an 19-point average.

But Carl Tacy of Wake Forest isn't as happy to be on the road. He thought the Deacons would get to play at home after going to Murray State.

Wake Forest beat Murray 87-80 while Vanderbilt was downing East Tennessee at home, where it has a 14-2 record this year. But Vandy Coach C.M. Newton says, "We'll have to play better than we did against East Tennessee."

There's an interesting local rivalry in Rosemont, where traditional national power DePaul plays traditional Big 10 doormat Northwestern, which won its first post-season game ever last week by trouncing Notre Dame, 71-57 at the Horizon. DePaul, also playing in Rosemont, edged Minnesota 76-73.

Davidson Downs Lady Pirate Netters

The East Carolina University women's tennis team suffered its fifth loss in seven outings Sunday as Davidson claimed a 6-3 victory at the Minges Coliseum courts.

ECU's Janet Russell defeated Eleanor Knobloch 6-3, 6-2 in singles and teamed with Laura Radford for a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Sue Hilton and Meg Short.

The Lady Pirate tandem of Katherine Tolson and Debbie Christine defeated Katherine

Frye Takes Super-Light KICK Title

LAS VEGAS — Dale Frye of Greenville won a nine-round unanimous decision over Mexico's Gamma Costa to take the Budweiser Superlights KICK Association super lightweight title at Caesar's Palace.

Greenville's Curtis Crandell stunned light-heavyweight champion Don Wilson twice before a round kick to the head opened a cut over Crandell's eye to force the referee to stop the fight in the 11th round. The fight was scheduled for 12 rounds, and Wilson was ahead on points at the time of the TKO.

Smith and Carolyn Barkley 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

The victory lifts Davidson's record to 5-0 on the season.

The ECU mens tennis team will be in action today at 3 p.m. at the Minges courts against Atlantic Christian College, while the women will have an exhibition at Riverbend Tennis Club.

Summary:

Chicago Gives USFL Snowy Debut

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Chicago gave George Allen the cold shoulder.

The coach of the Windy City's entry in the United States Football League brought the Blitz into snowy Soldier Field Sunday, and barely one-third of the 68,000 seats in the ancient edifice were filled.

And the Denver Gold left the Blitz with a cold, empty feeling, too. Quarterback Ken Johnson swept into the end zone on a fourth-down, 1-yard keeper with 18 seconds remaining to defeat Chicago. The 16-13 defeat was the second last-minute loss by the Blitz in two weekends.

"It's like a doctor doing a lot of things properly and then the patient dies," said Allen.

In Sunday's other games, unbeaten Tampa Bay routed winless New Jersey 32-9 as John Reaves threw three touchdown passes and the Bandits shut down Herschel Walker, and the Boston Breakers edged winless Washington 19-16 on Tim Mazzetti's 29-yard field goal with 27 seconds to play.

On Saturday night, Oakland outlasted Michigan 33-27 and Arizona defeated Los Angeles 21-14. Tonight, Philadelphia visits Birmingham.

Denver Coach Red Miller said he never considered playing it safe, going for the "sure" three points with a field goal and then hoping for a shot at victory in overtime. "We didn't think 'kick' at all," Miller said. "I didn't want to tie. We wanted to win — and it was a big, big win for our young team."

Johnson drove Denver 70 yards to its winning touchdown, passing twice to tight end Bob Niziolek for gains of 14 and 13 yards, the second completion putting the ball at the Chicago 3-yard line. Three plays gained just two yards, setting up the fourth-and-1.

"I took a good look at the goal line right before the play," Johnson said. "It looked like a yard and a half away." And with the snow and the wind, the footing was treacherous. But Johnson crossed up the defense, sweeping around left end and scooting over a goal line he couldn't see because of the snow.

Greg Landry's 42-yard touchdown pass to Lenny Willis and field goals of 27 and 38 yards by John Roveto accounted for the Blitz scoring. Harry Sydney set up a field goal by Brian Speelman with a 36-yard run, then sprinted 30 yards for the first TD by the Gold.

Bandits 32, Generals 9

Walker had been only mediocre in the Generals' first two games, both on the road, by rushing for 65 and then 60 yards. And in front of a home-opener crowd of 53,370 — the largest attendance in the USFL's three-week history — he carried the ball 19 times for only 39 yards against a Tampa Bay defense that keyed on him all day.

Breakers 19, Federals 16

A tiny home-opening crowd of 18,430 in nearly as tiny Nickerson Field (capacity: 20,535) saw Tim Mazzetti continue his sizzling performance for the Breakers with four field goals. Mazzetti had a meteoric rise and fall with Atlanta in the NFL a few years back.

But the real hero of the game was Boston's nose tackle, Jeff Gaylor. He lined up opposite Federals center

Dave Pacella, a replacement for regular long-ball snapper Bruce Byrom. Two of Pacella's snaps — one on a field-goal attempt, the other on a punt — were bungled, leading to a touchdown and the game-winning field goal by the Breakers.

Veteran Coach To Be Released?

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The University of Kansas was expected to announce that Ted Owens has been fired after 19 years as head basketball coach.

Sources told the Associated Press Sunday night that athletic director Monte Johnson had informed Owens, 53, of his dismissal. The Topeka Capital-Journal also reported in today's editions that Owens had been fired.

Neither Owens nor Johnson could immediately be reached for comment.

Owens' status has constantly been the subject of rumor and speculation throughout his 19 years despite a high degree of success.

His teams won six Big Eight championships, made nine post-season appearances and show a record of 348-182 for a winning percentage of .653.

Speculation that Owens' job was on the line heated up last fall when Johnson, who played basketball at Kansas in the 1950s, became athletic director. Johnson and Owens were known to have been at odds when Johnson was active in alumni affairs, and the youthful Jayhawks' 13-16 record this past season was the second consecutive sub-500 year.

Owens twice took teams to the Final Four of the NCAA Tournament, finishing fourth in 1971 and 1974.

Toney Keeps 76ers On Winning Track

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

With the Doctor in sick bay, Andrew Toney is keeping healthy the 76ers' chances of being the winningest team in National Basketball Association history.

Toney scored 39 points Sunday night, including 20 in the final period, to bring Philadelphia back from a 12-point deficit to a 121-119 decision over the Detroit Pistons. It was Philadelphia's seventh victory in a row and the 76ers are 57-9 on the season. They need to win 13 of their final 16 games to set an NBA record of 70 victories this season.

"I figured I was the man who had to get the job done for us tonight," said Toney. "I've been the hot guy for us with Julius out."

Indeed, since Julius "Dr. J" Erving was sidelined with a sprained right wrist — he's expected back Tuesday night in New York — Toney has thrown in 42, 33, 24 and 39 points.

"I guess I've been going a little more on offense," said the slick guard.

Until Toney took charge in the final period, the Pistons were in control. Kelly Tripucka scored 28 points. Isiah Thomas added 27 and Bill Laimbeer had 24 as Detroit assumed command through 36 minutes.

Pistons Coach Scotty Robertson thought Reggie and Clemon Johnson were "keys to the 76ers continued success."

"They give Philadelphia the depth and that was the difference," Robertson said. "They kept rotating people on us and we sustained it as long as we could."

But not long enough.

Elsewhere, it was Portland 118, Denver 106; Kansas City 128, Golden State 114; Milwaukee 107, New Jersey 92; Los Angeles 117, Dallas 110; Seattle 128, Chicago 116; and Boston 90, Cleveland 79.

Trail Blazers 118, Nuggets 106

Portland snapped Denver's nine-game homecourt winning streak thanks to staunch defense by Mychal Thompson, who held Alex English, the NBA's leading scorer, to 2-for-12 shooting and blanked English in the final period. Thompson also scored 21 points.

"I really didn't hold him scoreless," said Thompson. "He got his shots in the position he wanted them but he just didn't make 'em. In the past I've played the best defense I'm capable of on Alex, doing everything short of hitting him over the head and he still made his shots. So today really had nothing to do with me. It's impossible to block his shot; he just couldn't get 'em down today."

Portland is 38-30, while Denver is 37-32. The two teams currently hold the final two playoff spots in the Western Conference.

Kings 128, Warriors 114

Mike Woodson's 30 points and 28 by Eddie Johnson led the Kings, who snapped a five-game skid. Joe Barry Carroll had 31 for Golden State, which continued its slide — five straight losses and 12 of the last 14.

"Their defense was the difference in the game," said Warriors Coach Al Attles. "Their defense improved in the second half and ours didn't."

Lakers 117, Mavericks 110

The Lakers clinched a playoff spot as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 23 points. The Lakers grabbed a 17-point halftime lead only to see Dallas rally and take a 101-100 lead with 7:10 to go. But Los Angeles reeled off an 11-2 string to take command.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 18 points and 16 assists after missing one game with a bruised thigh muscle. Dallas was led by Mark Aguirre's 33 points.

Bucks 107, Nets 92

Brian Winters scored a season-high 30 points but the Bucks had to rally after blowing a 22-point, third-quarter lead. After trailing 73-51 the Nets scored 15 straight points. Milwaukee led 80-71 entering the final period, but the Nets scored nine in a row to tie it. Then Charlie Criss came off the bench to ignite the Bucks.

Albert King led the Nets with 26 points.

Sonics 128, Bulls 116

David Thompson had 29 points, including 16 in the third period to pace the Sonics, who have won six in a row and are one game ahead of fourth-place Portland in the Pacific Division. Gus Williams added 24 points for Seattle. Quintin Dailey led the Bulls with 30.

Celtics 90, Cavaliers 79

Larry Bird scored seven points in the last two minutes and the Celtics survived despite playing poorly.

"This is a difficult time and we're not playing good basketball," said Bird. "We're not worried about Philadelphia or the teams behind us. We just have to play every game as if we're in the playoffs now."

Whitworth Putts To Kemper Open Win

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — It must have seemed like old times for LPGA veteran Kathy Whitworth as she sank a putt worth $1,000 per foot to birdie the 18th hole and win the Women's Kemper Open.

"When I was winning a lot several years ago; I never thought about anything but the shot I was taking at the time," the 43-year-old Whitworth said following her victory Sunday.

The Hall of Famer now has won 84 events in 24 years on her way to earning more than $1.2 million in prize money. She has been honored as Player of the Year seven times.

"I love playing golf," Whitworth said. "I think it is so great to compete with younger players. Although my future is limited, I still have a few years left."

"But actually, I've surprised myself this year. It's usually hard for me to get started on the tour. I usually do better toward the end."

Whitworth came into the final round tied for third place, three strokes off the pace. She ended the 72-hole, $200,000 tournament at 4-under-par 288, one stroke ahead of Dale Eggeing. Both fired 4-under-par 69s Sunday.

"I knew that Kathy would make the putt on the 18th," Eggeing said after she saw the 30-footer drop into the hole. "She's a veteran, she's been there. I knew she wasn't going to fold."

Whitworth, who collected $30,000, started the final round with a birdie on the first hole, and added three more before she ran into trouble toward the end and bogeyed the 15th and 16th.

"When you bogey, it's difficult to regain your composure," Whitworth said. "But with me I think it's a matter of pride. I just say to myself 'I'm not going to do that again.'"

Whitworth must have heard what she told herself, because she went on to win the tournament on the strength of back-to-back birdies.

Donna Caponi and Stephanie Farwig tied for third place at 1-under-par 291, while JoAnne Carner, Yuko Moriguchi, and Jan Stephenson had to settle for fourth place at 292.

Lynn Adams, who led after the second and third rounds, shot a 4-over-par 77 Sunday to dropp back into a three-way tie at 293.

Adams, who was aiming for her first Ladies Professional Golf Association victory since joining the tour in 1978, said, "The cream always rises to the top, and Whitworth definitely is the cream."

Simon Popular Baseball Commissioner Choice

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

If the winds blowing around baseball's exhibition camps are whistling the right tune, super-charged William E. Simon will be tapped to succeed Bowie Kuhn as commissioner.

The question is: Will Bill Simon take the job if offered? At the moment, he is too busy to think about it. As president of the U. S. Olympic Committee, he is tidying up for the 1984 Games, the summer version of which will be staged in Los Angeles.

But Bill Simon is the man a lot of influential people are talking about in the back rooms. He is not a baseball man, as such, but neither were Kenesaw Mountain Landis and Happy Chandler, two of the best the game has had.

His credentials are imposing — law-trained, Wall Street hardened, former energy czar and Secretary of the Treasury under two Presidents. He is on close speaking terms with economics and organization, two areas in which the game suffers.

He has a reputation of being tough, outspoken, an innovator, a doer and leader. Throughout his career, he has generated authority. Intimates say he is a guy who is quick to detect flaws in an institution and quicker to effect the cure.

A top baseball executive, reacting to reports that Simon is high on the list of probables for the commissioner's post, commented:

"All I know is that they say he has guts. That's what baseball needs if all these owners with their diverging interests and philosophies are going to be brought together."

"The game is in danger. What we need is not necessarily a baseball man. We need strong, firm leadership. That's what we're short on."

Another commented:

"Simon sounds like a man who could save the owners from themselves. Otherwise, it's going to be disastrous."

Baseball seemed to panic when baseball lost its precious reserve clause, which had bound a player to a club for life unless sold or traded.

Since then there has been an explosion of salaries which, some owners say, threatens to eat away the basic structure of the game.

Simon was asked if he would turn down the commissionership if it were proffered.

"I haven't been approached by Bug Selig (president of the Milwaukee Brewers and chairman of the committee searching for a new commissioner)," he said. "I have many public and private interests that keep me busy."

The former cabinet member declined to say whether he had been approached by other baseball executives, as reported.

"I am very busy getting ready for the Olympics," he said.

Some baseball men, addressing that point, insisted there should be no conflict. The commissionership is just another barrel that could be balanced on a second shoulder.

Simon is known to be an intimate of Edward Bennett Williams, president and chairman of the Baltimore Orioles, and Jack Kent Cooke, majority stockholder in the Washington Redskins football team. He helped orchestrate Williams' move from Washington to the Orioles and Cooke's abandonment of Los Angeles for the nation's capital.

Simon has another admirer and friend in George Steinbrenner, the impulsive owner of the New York Yankees, although Steinbrenner has expressed no personal preference for a successor to Kuhn.

Simon is son of an insurance broker and grandson of a French-immigrant textile-dyeing manufacturer. He served with the Army in Japan in 1948, took pre-law at Lafayette College in Pennsylvania, specializing in economics, and ventured into Wall Street upon graduation in 1952.

His political career has been meteoric. He became director of the Federal Energy Office in 1973 after the Arab nations stunned the world by cutting off the oil supply. He was appointed Secretary of the Treasury by President Nixon and stayed in the post under President Ford until the inauguration of President Carter.

'Sixty Minutes' And Military Involved In Sniping

Movie Frightened Some Despite TV Campaign

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer

One viewer said she was so frightened by NBC's "Special Bulletin" that she had to take tranquilizers. Others phoned in bomb threats or fears, and some worried that a realistic drama about nuclear weapons threats could inspire real-life terrorists.

"A lot of people are scared," said telephone operator Ed Walsh at San Francisco's KRON-TV, which received 50 calls during the two-hour program's first 45 minutes. "One woman called and said 'Why do you give all this time to terrorists on TV?'"

Both before and during the show, NBC broadcast numerous warnings to viewers that the story was fictional. Even so thousands of worried viewers called TV stations around the country, although some objected to the disclaimers, saying they detracted from the drama.

The movie showed a fictional TV network responding to a threat by an anti-nuclear group aboard a tugboat in the harbor at Charleston, S.C., to detonate a bomb as powerful as the one that destroyed Hiroshima, Japan.

They demand a "ransom" that the American government disarm 964 nuclear warheads in the Charleston area.

Charleston viewers bombarded the local affiliate, WCIV-TV, with 250 phone calls during and after the program, and others called the city's police station. Police Capt. George Volpe said many of the calls were from reporters and only "four or five" were from concerned citizens.

The Charleston station superimposed the word "fiction" on the upper left side of TV screens throughout the telecast. That sparked some angry calls from viewers who complained of "an eyesore."

"I have got my switchboard going off the hook," said the operator at KING-TV in Seattle just 20 minutes after the show began

Sunday night. "One guy said his son was in Virginia and thought his son was in trouble."

But in Groves Mill, N.J., — scene of a fictional Martian invasion in Orson Welles' 1938 "War of the Worlds" radio broadcast that resulted in a panic — police dispatcher Cynthia Napolitano said all was quiet.

Chicago TV station WMAQ, which carried the program, received two bomb threats, said station spokesman Nick Aronson. One caller warned that if the program was not taken off the air in five minutes he "would blow us up," Aronson said.

A prepared statement was read to about 760 callers Sunday night, Aronson said, and the station dropped its regular news capsules between 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. CST to avoid confusing viewers with the movie.

In New York, NBC spokesman Curt Block said the network received more than 700 calls — nearly two-thirds of them critical.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Many fans of the top-rated "60 Minutes" see the program as a news-western, with Marshal Mike Wallace and his deputies bringing the bad guys to journalistic justice. But the show's detractors view "60 Minutes" the way the characters did in an old magazine cartoon: "When we find out what you're trying to hide," a psychiatrist says to his patient, "well find out why you're running away from an interview with Mike Wallace."

According to "60 Minutes," it's no laughing matter that the military heads for the back door whenever the program bangs on the front. Phil Scheffler, senior producer for "60 Minutes," says military officials have refused to give on-camera interviews or have imposed unacceptable ground rules. For one story on the Maverick missile, the Pentagon insisted on unedited interviews and rebuttal time.

"We never impose these rules on anybody else," says Henry Catto, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs. He says these rules were imposed on individual stories and do not reflect a militarywide policy. "On the Maverick piece, we were convinced by their approach that they thought it was another Pentagon boondoggle," Catto says. "The perception in this building is that '60 Minutes' is a program with a point of view," adds Catto. "I agree that the American people have a right to know what's going on in the military. But there's no right to force somebody to go on-air when they're convinced what will be used won't portray accurately their feelings." Catto acknowledges that many military officials mistakenly hold "60 Minutes" responsible for "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," a documentary questioning the judgment of Gen. William Westmoreland, which was prepared by the "CBS Reports," documentary team, a different unit at CBS News. The program, which is the subject of a libel suit, had Wallace as its narrator. Wallace says the Pentagon policy is "anti-'60 Minutes,' not anti-Mike Wallace." But Don Hewitt, the show's executive producer, says "Catto is knuckling under to a bunch of military guys trying to punish Mike Wallace. We're not anti-military. We practice good journalism and patriotic Americanism."

Wallace claims the military obstacles started about the time Caspar Weinberger became secretary of defense. "Until the last two years, the military had always been cooperative with us," he says. "This is an absolutely new policy established from on high. I think they hurt themselves by not being forthright."

They also hamper the ability of "60 Minutes" to do its job. "We've had to kill some stories because we couldn't get the Pentagon to give its side," says Hewitt.

The program wanted to do a piece on the Pentagon reaction to reports of alcohol abuse on American naval bases in Europe. Hewitt says the project was dumped because the Navy would only agree to written questions. "We need to be on-air, with a chance of follow-ups," says

Wallace. "We're television." The Maverick piece was broadcast, however, with the notation that the Defense Department wouldn't comment without imposing "unacceptable conditions." While "60 Minutes" savors its reputation for aggressive journalism, this controversy isn't helping its credibility, which is under attack in 10 current lawsuits. And besides limiting access — the program's lifeblood — there's the fear that the Pentagon's silent treatment could catch on elsewhere. "60 Minutes" does not want to be hoisted on its own petard.

"It's a myth, a legend that we are calling miscreants to account all the time," says Wallace. "If we do too much of that stuff, no one will talk to us."

"CBS Evening News" anchor Dan Rather says his broadcast hasn't felt any abnormal Pentagon pressure. But the bad blood may be affecting other CBS reporters covered by a broad Pentagon brush. Col. Robert O'Brien, director of defense information, recalls how one CBS correspondent tried to open a closed door by saying: "This is not for '60 Minutes,' it's for the 'Evening News.'"

The "60 Minutes" Pentagon feud has taken nasty turns, escalating into what CBS considers harassment. On an upcoming story, which Wallace says puts the military in a good light, the correspondent went to the Pentagon and found himself being taped in the interview room.

"Wallace was not the least bit happy," says Catto. "He made his views vigorously known."

Wallace says "60 Minutes" accepts being taped, "but our only stricture is that they

In Cincinnati, Robin Phillips of NBC affiliate WLWT-TV said about 25 people called.

"I don't think anybody thought it was real," Ms. Phillips said. "Some thought it was realistic and some thought it would be the ammunition to get some nut to do it."

In Portland, Ore., a blind woman called the NBC affiliate, station KGW-TV, because she could not see the disclaimers printed on the screen and was worried, a station spokesman said.

"Three or four people were hysterical, crying," said Genie Ostle, a switchboard operator at WCMH-TV in Columbus, Ohio, who got 38 calls during the program. "One woman said she took tranquilizers" because she was so upset.

In Spokane, staffer Ed Joyce of KHQ-TV said several viewers protested an extra warning the station superimposed on the screen. The viewers said they knew it wasn't real already, said Joyce.

To simulate network coverage of a breaking story, the show cut back and forth between news anchor people in New York City and reporters in Charleston, Congress, the White House and the Pentagon.

It is interspersed that with "live feeds" from terrorists aboard the tugboat, where a TV news crew was being held hostage.

The show's director and co-producer, Ed Zwick, said he was disappointed at the disclaimers peppered through the program — including superimposing the word "dramatization" on the screen during the most sensational scenes.

"I feel they (the use of disclaimers) very much mitigated the impact of the show, not unlike the way in which television often tries to soften or dilute the impact of many programs."

Noting that the disclaimers were added at the last minute after vigorous objections to the program by NBC's News Division, Zwick said there is "a certain sanctimonious attitude by broadcast journalists because of the way in which they were portrayed."

Several NBC affiliates chose to ignore the whole thing. In Nashville, Tenn., WSMV-TV, aired a syndicated special, "Salute to Rhythm and Blues."

tape only when we do, so as not to capture casual conversation." Wallace was embarrassed several years ago when his jocular racial remarks were taped and then revealed by an interview subject.

To stop the sniping and improve relations, Hewitt sent a letter to Catto last week, calling for a truce. He asked Catto "to disabuse your people of erroneous impressions that '60 Minutes' is the bogeyman out to get them, and I would apprise my people of your concerns

"Love us or hate us, '60 Minutes' is a fact of life. Love you or hate you, so is the Pentagon."

But Catto and Hewitt even disagree on a piece "60 Minutes" did on Catto in the early 1970s, when he was President Nixon's chief of protocol.

Hewitt calls it a "glowing profile."

Says Catto: "It was scarcely glowing."

Children from birth to 24 months may be registered by submitting a 5x7 or 8x10 photograph of the child with his or her name, birth date, sex, parents' names, telephone number and mailing address on the back. A $1 registration fee will be charged to cover cost of returning photographs.

The baby inspiring the collection of the most money votes will be the trophy winner. First and second runners-up will be recognized. Voting will be held at Carolina East Mall the afternoons of March 25 and 26 until 6 p.m. Winners will be announced the evening of March 26.

Twelve Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press

Twelve people died in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend, including five men killed when the car in which they were riding ran off a road and hit a tree, the state Highway Patrol said.

Alan Dane Jimison, 26, of Marion, was driving at high speed in McDowell County, about 4 miles south of Marion, when his car ran off N.C. 226 at about 9:30 p.m. Sunday, troopers said Sunday.

The other victims were Terry Lee Hensley, 31, and Billy H. Hensley, 20, both of Old Fort and Don Ray Flynn, 23, and Michael Eugene Woody, 23, both of Marion.

At 1:30 a.m. Sunday, Arthur Roebuck, 20, of Swansboro was killed when he was struck by a car as he was standing in the roadway of N.C. 33 about 5 miles east of Greenville.

Gary Dale Winchester, 18, of High Point, was killed at 2:47 a.m. Sunday in his hometown when a car in which he was a passenger lost control at high speed, striking a utility pole.

Richard Cartee, 30, of Shelby, died after a go-cart he was driving was struck by an car on N.C. 2293 5 miles east of Shelby Saturday afternoon.

Billy Ray Stiller, 44, of Albemarle, was killed at 4:45 p.m. Saturday in Stanley County when he drove his car off N.C. 1549, north of his hometown, and overturned.

Troopers said Horace Wellman, 66, of rural Troutman was killed early Saturday when he was hit by a car as he stood in the center of a country road in Iredell county. Troopers said the driver of the car claimed he couldn't see Wellman because of foggy condition. No charges were filed.

Two Virginia men were killed when their cars collided head-on late Friday night about 2 miles east of Eden on N.C. 770, state troopers said. The victims were identified as Keller Smoak, 33, of Danville, Va., and William Ray, 23, of Cascade, Va.

The deaths raised to 206 the number of people killed in traffic accidents in the state this year, compared to the same number this time last year.

FOCUS

A Free Press

We Americans like to think of our nation as the first to champion freedom of the press, and yet, in 1690, our first colonial newspaper was banned after only one issue. "Publick Occurrences" was written by Benjamin Harris, who had already been pilloried in Britain for not obeying press restrictions there. Harris' four-page newspaper stepped on many prominent colonial toes. And so the British governor banned "Publick Occurrences," pointing out that it had not been licensed. This week representatives of the Inter American Press Association are meeting in Manzanillo, Mexico to consider how to maintain freedom of the press in the Western Hemisphere — a freedom many of us take for granted.

DO YOU KNOW — What British poet called for a free press in his essay "Aeropagitica" in 1640?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — When it is 10 A.M. in Los Angeles, it is 7 P.M. in Stockholm.

Saw Some Good From 'Ill Wind'

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — It was the case of an ill wind that finally blew some good.

Harry Lemire had nearly forgotten about his tussle with a neighbor about a tree that fell on his fence 10 years ago until he saw a television program recently that gave him second thoughts.

Lemire, 76, a former Columbus resident and postal employee now living in Franklin, N.H., was watching "The People's Court" one afternoon when he saw a case that sparked memories of his own dispute with Ray Wright, a Columbus contractor who owned the property behind Lemire's house.

When high winds dropped a chinaberry tree on Wright's lot onto Lemire's fence, Lemire had his lawyer send Wright a letter asking for money to repair the fence. Wright's company responded with $100.

But when Lemire saw a similar case on "The People's Court," the judge ruled that the defendant not liable for damage. "It was an act of God," the judge said.

Lemire decided he had been wrong. So he took into account interest and inflation, and sent Wright a check for $600, along with a letter of apology.

"I am writing to you to repay you for what it cost you to repair our fence, and to make restitution for cutting down your trees, cluttering your lot with my branches, stumps and shrubbery, thereby causing you extra expense to clean up, and digging up a few small trees, maybe 10 or 12," Lemire said.

"I am doing this to clear my conscience and to get right with God and with you," Lemire said. "Please forgive me and my late wife."

Wright has decided to give the $600 to a church in memory of Lemire's wife, Mayiree. The contractor also plans to name a street after Lemire in one of his new housing developments.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q1073 ♠Q65 ♣K92 ♠K63
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—This is not the time to do anything unusual. Partner has shown a strong hand with his reverse bid but, since you have a minimum, you can do no more than take a simple preference to three diamonds. By the way, don't rate your hand as a dead minimum, even though you have a flat distribution. Your partners in partner's suits should be upgraded.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦K1087 ♠K62 ♣K95 ♠K43
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ 2 ♦ 2 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Even though you raised freely, you have nothing to be ashamed of. You have excellent trump support and your kings are undervalued in the point count. We would raise to four spades unhesitatingly.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AJ63 ♠K95 ♠95 ♠AJ7
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ 2 ♦ 2 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have a fine hand, but it is not quite good enough to merit another bid, particularly at this level. Bear in mind that you have forced partner to bid and that he might hold little or nothing. If he does have useful values, he is not far from taking further action.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦6 ♠5 ♣KQ1087 ♠AJ7652
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ ?
What action do you take?
A.—The opponents are headed at least for game, and nothing in your hand suggests that they won't make it. However, your distribution suggests that you might have a cheap sacrifice, especially since the vulnerability is favorable. Bid three no trump. That can't be natural—it must be the Unusual No Trump, asking partner to choose between the unbid suits.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦8 ♠87642 ♣K754 ♠A106
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ Dble ?
What action do you take?
A.—Don't worry about the fact that partner might have to play one spade doubled. The odds are that the opponents will remove to another contract. But should they leave the double in, you have some useful cards for partner. A pass is clearly indicated. For those of you who felt compelled to "rescue" partner by running to one no trump, your most likely accomplishment was to bail your opponents out of a hole.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

A.—It is quite possible that you can make three no trump or four hearts, but it is also possible that you have no game. In a situation like this be an arch conservative—double and take any penalty you can get. After all, bridge is not an exact science. You will still be a 3-1 favorite to win the rubber.

Have you been running in to double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. ## Symposium Set Alpha Epsilon Delta, a pre-health professions honor society, will hold a symposium on epilepsy March 25 and 26 at the Brody Medical Sciences Building.

The program, sponsored in conjunction with the Comprehensive Epilepsy Program at Bowman Gray School of Medicine, the ECU School of Medicine, and funded by the ECU Student Government Association, is designed to increase public and professional knowledge about epilepsy.

The March 25 session will begin at 12 a.m. and will be geared toward allied health professionals. Identification, treatment and prevention will be discussed during the early afternoon program. When the group reconvenes for the late afternoon session at 3 p.m., epilepsy in the classroom, counseling and the role of the nurse will be discussed. Friday evening, people with epilepsy, family members and friends are invited to view an informational film and ask questions.

The Saturday program will begin at 8 a.m. and will be geared to physicians with topics such as pathogenesis and classification of epilepsy, drug therapy, pseudoseizures, and surgical treatment of epilepsy.

A session for allied health professionals will also be held Saturday beginning at 7:45 a.m. Living with epilepsy, social aspects of epilepsy and treatment prospects for the future will be discussed.

To get more information or a pre-registration brochure on the symposium, contact AED President Carla Lee Morgan at 752-3465.

Predators Kill An Eagle In Habitat

GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Predators killed one of two bald eagles in an enclosed habitat atop Grandfather Mountain, officials of the tourist attraction said Sunday.

The female American bald eagle was killed and partially eaten Saturday, one month after nine deer were killed by dogs in an adjacent habitat, said Grandfather Mountain owner Hugh Morton.

Both eagles in the habitat had been disabled by gunshot wounds before they were brought to the mountain and could not fly, he said.

Steve Miller, a wildlife biologist at the facility, said he was not sure what killed the eagle, although it was most likely a dog, fox or bobcat. Nine black bears and three cougars enclosed in other habitats on the mountain were not suspected, he said.

Invitation

RALEIGH — America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee has invited any individual or organization interested in contributing ideas or assistance to the upcoming 400th anniversary of the first settlements in North Carolina to contact the committee.

At Odds On Paddling In
N.C. Schools

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some North Carolina educators say paddling is needed to keep order in the classroom, while one state legislator is preparing a measure that would first require a parent's consent.

According to state figures, more than 60,000 students are paddled each year in North Carolina.

State law permits principals, teachers, substitute and student teachers and their aides to use "reasonable force in the exercise of lawful authority to restrain or correct pupils and maintain order."

State Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, and the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth, which identifies the needs of children, are drafting a bill to require teachers and principals get the parents' consent before paddling a student.

A similar law was introduced in the House in 1975 but it never reached the floor.

"Before such a bill is drafted I will discuss its contents with educators at all levels," said Mrs. Marvin. "I do not anticipate proposing anything the majority of educators cannot live with."

Under her measure, schools would be required to tell students the kinds of conduct that warrant discipline, try alternatives to corporal punishment, punish students in the presence of a second school official, give students a chance to object to arbitrary punishment and, if requested, provide the child's parents with a written explanation of the reason for the punishment.

The courts have demanded those guidelines to provide the students their due process rights under the U.S. Constitution.

But a study by the council shows relatively few schools adhere to the court guidelines. Of 83 school systems surveyed, 66 percent did not meet legal standards.

John Niblock, council director, said his organization has received several complaints from parents about corporal punishment.

"The council felt it was time to take another look at the situation and attempt to prohibit corporal punishment," Niblock said, adding that the council met resistance to abolishing paddling and decided to compromise with the proposed legislation.

But Causby said he hasn't heard of anyone who is dissatisfied with the current law except the council.

"I haven't heard of any problems," Causby said. "The law has been tested in the courts and on numerous occasions has stood that test."

"It is my belief that the youngsters in schools who corporal punishment is used on... have those very parents who wouldn't give consent (to paddling)," said Gene Causby, executive director of the N.C. School Board Association. "That may be the very reason they need discipline."

Glenn Keever, spokesman for the North Carolina Association of Educators, said his group wants to keep the existing law although it does not encourage using corporal punishment.

"The present law does offer a measure of protection to teachers that is very necessary," Keever said. He said the requirement of notifying parents before administering corporal punishment could present a problem.

"It could certainly cause a considerable amount of time to take place between the actual event and the punishment and may not make it worthwhile to administer the corporal punishment," he said.

But Niblock said the national trend is to do away with corporal punishment.

Four states — New Jersey, Maine, Massachusetts and Hawaii — prohibit corporal punishment, while 12 states have no law on the issue. School districts that have banned corporal punishment include Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, New Orleans, New York City, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Washington, D.C.

North Carolina programs for children with behavioral problems, including training schools and correctional centers, prohibit corporal punishment.

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is considering a half dozen bills that would let Americans set up tax-deferred savings accounts to buy homes.

Details of the measures vary, but most are patterned after the popular individual retirement accounts — better known as IRAs.

Republican Sen. John

Tower of Texas is among those who have offered proposals, and because of his position as chairman of the Senate housing subcommittee, Tower's bill is certain to get a lot of attention.

Tower's version would have little adverse impact on federal tax collections — and thus the deficit — because it would not allow the same person to have both an IRA and a tax-deferred mortgage savings account.

Some of the other bills contain no such prohibition and are almost certain to draw administration opposition because of their potential adverse impact on the Treasury.

Tower's bill would allow people with IRAs to either leave the money in them until retirement or draw it out without penalty to pay for a home — either for a down payment or to make advance payments on an existing mortgage to save interest.

Tower's bill is called the Mortgage Retirement Account Act, emphasizing its approach of essentially considering mortgage savings accounts and IRAs as being interchangeable.

Just as there is an immediate tax liability for early withdrawal from an IRA, a homeowner who used such an account to finance a home would incur an immediate income tax liability if the home was sold before the buyer reaches age 59½. Income taxes on the account become due at age 59½ in either case.

As with an IRA, there is no overall limit in the Tower bill on how much could be put into a tax-deferred mortgage account — as long as it does not exceed $2,000 a year per individual, or $2,500 for a married couple where only one works.

"This legislation would simultaneously encourage savings and stimulate the vital housing industry," Tower said in a letter to his colleagues. "Young people who may not wish to save for their retirement would have a significant incentive to combine the tax advantages of an IRA with the opportunity to set aside money for a home."

Rep. Harold S. Sawyer, R-Mich., has introduced a similar bill that would let someone with an IRA convert it to use in buying a home without losing the tax benefits of the retirement fund. The basic restriction is that the IRA would have to exist at least three years before it could be converted.

Reps. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., Bruce F. Vento, D-Minn., William G. Whitehurst, R-Va., and Larry E. Craig, R-Idaho, all have introduced bills to allow creation of new individual housing accounts.

The maximum annual contribution allowed under the House bills would range from $2,000 in the Vento proposal to $5,000 in the Whitehurst bill and the lifetime maximum ranges from $4,000 in the Vento version to $20,000 in the Frenzel bill.

Yet another bill aimed at making it easier for people to buy homes comes from Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho. It would provide a 25 percent tax credit — up to a $1,500 maximum for an individual or $3,000 for a couple filing a joint return — for a savings account used to buy a home.

That would mean a couple could take advantage of the tax break to build a mortgage savings account of as much as $12,000. The money would have to stay on deposit at least 12 months before it could be used.
