High-Tech Missile Defense Reagan Goal

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is challenging the nation's scientists to share his "vision of the future" and develop an impregnable high-technology defense against missile attack by the end of the century.

Reagan announced his surprise initiative in a nationally televised speech Wednesday night, appealing for public support of his embattled defense budget, defeated in the House less than an hour before he spoke.

The president and some of his top aides stressed that Reagan was attempting to turn long-range U.S. policy away from reliance on massive nuclear offensive weapons and deterrence and toward a foolproof defense.

"In recent months, my advisers, including in particular the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have underscored the necessity to break out of a future that relies solely on offensive retaliation for our security," Reagan said.

Saying that he has reached a decision offering a "new hope for our children in the 21st century," Reagan announced he has ordered an intensive research program aimed at an "ultimate goal of eliminating the threat posed by strategic nuclear missiles."

Reagan acknowledged that "this is a formidable technical task, one that may not be accomplished before the end of this century."

Yet, he added, technology has reached a level of sophistication "where it is reasonable for us to begin this effort."

More immediately, the president pressed his case for a continued U.S. military buildup with several photos of Soviet military facilities in Central America and a series of statistical comparisons on U.S. and Soviet strength.

The speech came shortly after the Democratic-controlled House rejected Reagan's proposed 1984 defense budget and substituted a Democratic plan that would have the administration's 10 percent spending hike. The vote was 229-196.

Reagan, with the GOP-dominated Senate about to take up the 1984 budget, urged his audience to "tell your senators and congressmen that you know we must continue to restore our military strength."

Presidential spokesman Peter Roussel said today that, as of 10:30 p.m. EST — two hours after the president finished speaking, 1,204 calls had been logged by White House operators. Some 948 callers agreed with Reagan and 188 disagreed, Roussel said, characterizing the response as one of the heaviest and most positive to any of Reagan's speeches.

Reagan's proposals for a record Pentagon budget of $238.6 billion and the futuristic missile defense ran into immediate opposition on Capitol Hill.

"I was deeply troubled by what I heard about the president's plans for militarizing outer space," said Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"This is not, as the president suggests, a shifting of our national genius away from war, it is a call to siphon off the meager and inadequate commitment which now exists to rebuild America," Hatfield said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., complained of "misleading red scare tactics and reckless Star Wars schemes of the president."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said Reagan's futuristic proposal was good because "there are a number of potential means for new defensive weapons." But he cautioned that "there is substantial time and money involved and it will require a careful examination of existing treaties" limiting anti-ballistic missiles and outlawing weapons in space.

In asking for support for the administration's 1984 defense budget plan, Reagan said the Soviets have "built up a massive arsenal of new strategic nuclear weapons" while at the same time "spreading their military influence in ways that can directly challenge our vital interests."

He showed four photographs taken from U.S. spy planes of Cuba, Nicaragua and the Caribbean island of Grenada, all ruled by leftist governments.

The pictures showing Soviet-made helicopters and anti-aircraft guns at a Nicaraguan airfield and at a 10,000-foot aircraft runway under construction on Grenada had been released earlier.

But the two pictures of a Soviet intelligence-gathering communications complex at Lourdes, Cuba, and Soviet MiG warplanes at an unspecified base in western Cuba were new.

Representatives Approve Defense-Slowing Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled House has handed President Reagan his first defeat of the 98th Congress, approving a budget plan for fiscal 1984 that would slow the president's defense buildup, increase domestic spending and raise taxes by $30 billion.

Even as Reagan was defending his defense program in a nationally-televised broadcast Wednesday night, the House voted 229 to 196 to adopt "A Democratic Plan For Economic Recovery."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the vote reflected a major political shift in both the House and among voters.

"The people believe that Reagan policies are unfair and have gone too far," O'Neill said. "The House voted to restore fairness and (Please turn to Page 8)

Two Tar Heels Broke Ranks To Vote Against Democrat Budget

By The Associated Press
Two U.S. Representatives from North Carolina broke rank and voted against the Democratic budget plan in Congress yesterday.

Reps. I.T. "Tim" Valentine, D-N.C., and Charles O. Whitley, D-N.C., said the proposal did not include enough money for defense.

But the Democratic-controlled House of Representatives approved a budget plan for fiscal 1984 that would slow the president's defense buildup and increase domestic spending and raise taxes by $30 billion. The bill passed 229-196.

The rest of the North Carolina delegation cast their votes along party lines, with six Democratic congressmen voting for the Democratic budget and the two Republicans voting against it. Democrat Stephen L. Neal, who is recovering from a back operation, missed the vote.

Valentine, from the 2nd Congressional District, said he was troubled by the Democrats' proposal to increase defense spending next year by 4 percent, compared with the 10 percent increase requested by Reagan.

"I don't want to do anything that affects our ability to defend the country," Valentine said. He also said he thought the Democratic plan called for too many new programs.

Whitley, from the 3rd Congressional District, also said he could not vote for the Democratic budget because of its lower defense spending.

"I never could make up my mind that we should limit defense as much as this budget called for," Whitley said after the vote.

Rep. Ike F. Andrews, D-N.C., said he voted for the Democratic proposal even though he hoped defense spending would be increased and domestic spending cut when the bill goes to the Senate.

Death Claims Barney Clark

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark, "a very stoic, very strong man" who traded a peaceful death from heart disease for a painful, uncharted medical odyssey, died 112 days after becoming the first human to receive a permanent artificial heart.

The end Wednesday night for the courageous retired dentist came "in peace and with dignity," said University of Utah Medical Center spokesman John Dwan, shortly after the 62-year-old Clark died of "circulatory collapse due to multi-organ system failure."

His death at 10:02 p.m. MST followed a day of medical setbacks in which Clark was returned to intensive

Gov. Hunt Will Address Session

Gov. Jim Hunt is among the speakers scheduled to speak to school officials and state legislators from 33 eastern North Carolina counties meeting here Sunday and Monday to discuss a broad range of issues facing rural public education in the years immediately ahead.

The conference, sponsored by the Rural Education Institute of East Carolina University's School of Education, begins Sunday at 8 p.m. at the Willis building with an address by Dr. Linton Deck, a special consultant to the U.S. secretary of education. His topic will be "The Issue of Power: Its Use and Abuse."

Hunt will speak at 10 a.m. Monday on "Now to the 90s: Issues Shaping Public Education in North Carolina."

Dr. Phillip C. Schlechty of Charlotte, executive director of the Metrolina Educational Consortium and professor of education at UNC-Chapel

Hill, will speak at 8:30 a.m. Monday on "The Issue of Good Teaching: Identifying, Training and Nurturing Effective Teachers."

REI Director Kathryn Lewis said the session will be "an awareness conference. It is designed to create an awareness of the issues facing rural education from now until the 1990s, and to get feedback from the public as to the needs in addressing those issues."

She said the conference is part of REI's planned objectives to develop and set in motion "a broad range of support services to assist local school boards and central office staff, teachers and community groups."

The REI provides consultation services, workshops, conferences and leadership training seminars for rural public school systems in eastern North Carolina.

KINSTON — Du Pont unveiled a new sign, proclaiming the Kinston facility as the "World's First Polyester Plant," as part of activities Wednesday commemorating 30 years of operations here.

Nine employees who have 30 years' plant service participated in the unveiling and joined media representatives and plant officials for brief ceremonies at the new sign, located near the plant highway entrance.

Howard Kress, plant manager, said that while the sign notes the plant's role as the first polyester plant 30 years ago, he views it as a symbol of the future. He said it is a reminder that the plant "will continue to be a positive force in the area" and he added, "we plan to stay."

The sign, designed by John Burroughs of the plant's engineering section, is constructed of Edenboro stone on the outside and shale rock from the Kinston site on the inside, according to Kress.

The plant manager and Ruth Rucker, one of the 30-year employees, helped seal a special time capsule, containing mementos from the first 30 years of operations, inside one end of the sign. The capsule is scheduled to be opened by the site manager in 50 years, said Kress.

He said the Kinston site was one of 87 locations considered by Du Pont in 1950 but Lenoir County was chosen after the "site scored highest in a system that weighed factors such as proximity to customers, access to raw materials, transportation, water supply and labor."

Kress said the first "Dacron" polyester fiber was produced on March 23, 1953. Today the product is used worldwide in a variety of end uses including clothes, furniture upholstery, carpet and pillows.

The payroll at the Kinston plant has amounted to over $800 million since 1953, Kress said.

Du Pont, which announced recently that it is recalling 30 of the employees laid off here Nov. 1, currently has some 2,200 workers. Approximately one-third of the employee roster, which reached a peak of 3,600 in 1976, is from Pitt County.

Kress said that 164 employees took advantage of early retirement incentives offered by the company during the lay-off period last year and 86 employees lost their jobs. Du

Make It Pay With Smart Laundry Techniques

Much of the energy used in home laundering goes for heating water. So it figures that a family can reduce energy use a lot if warm, rather than hot water, is used for washing, and cold water is used for rinsing.

For best laundering results, Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Extension Home Economics Agent, Pitt County, suggests selecting water temperature according to the type and amount of soil and type and color of fabrics. Here are some guidelines:

For moderately to lightly soiled items, use warm water for washing and cold for rinsing.

Hot water is best for removing oily and greasy soil. But it may be possible to substitute warm water for hot by pretreating heavily soiled areas, and collars, cuffs or underarms of shirts and blouses.

Conserve additional energy by using a cold water rinse for every load, Mrs. Spangler advises. Rinsing is a dilution process, so a cold water rinse is just as effective as a warm one.

Wash full loads of laundry in the correct amount of water. Using too much water is wasteful; not using enough water may mean rewashing garments to get them clean.

During washing, clothing must be able to move freely to facilitate soil removal.

The clothes dryer is another significant user of energy. Mrs. Spangler suggests conserving energy by using the following procedures:

Wash and dry several loads in succession. A warm dryer uses less energy since metal parts do not have to be heated each time.

For faster and more uniform drying, separate dryer loads into light and heavy-weight fabrics.

Choose the correct setting for the type fabric being dried. The use-and-care instructions that came with the dryer should be helpful.

Use short drying times. Overdrying wastes energy and causes static and wrinkling. Remove clothes while they are still damp and let them finish drying on racks or hangers.

Dry only full loads, but don't overload the dryer. Keep the dryer lint screen clean.

Drip-dry individual items and very small loads in the bathroom, on the porch, in the basement, or on an outside line.

Helen Chapin showed pictures of birds she had taken at her home.

Mrs. Robert Crouse had the horticulture exhibit — foxglove and said that its a biennial which forms a rosette of wooly leaves the first year and the following spring it has flowering stalks.

Mrs. R.A. Davis, president, welcomed Katherine Highsmith as a new member. Guests included Mrs. Chapin and Eva Lee Tucker.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I never have luck with having my picture taken. The one on my passport makes me look like I'm too sick to travel and the ones that appear in yearbooks all look like they were taken on a cot in the first aid room.

I guess that's why I never look upon getting my driver's license renewed as a chore. I look upon it as God's way of giving me a second chance to have a decent picture to carry around.

As the woman behind the counter cut my old driver's license in half and told me I could expect my new one within several days, I couldn't help but smile. I was saying goodbye to a picture that made me look like a 75-year-old woman who had just been told by her obstetrician that she is about to make medical history.

Yesterday, the smile left my lips. My new driver's license arrived. For the next three years (156 weeks, 1095 days, 26,280 hours) I have a picture for identification that makes me look like John Houseman with a migraine.

My husband looked at it and said, "What did they ask you to do to make you, look like that?"

I looked over his shoulder.

"It is a strange expression, isn't it?"

"What are you looking at?"

"One eye is looking at the painted feet on the floor where I'm supposed to stand. The other one is lost and trying to find the other eye."

Actually, I don't know what I expected. People who snap your picture are all graduates of the same school of photography my husband attended: "The Five-Second Click and Advance" . . . no posing, no waiting. I swear I've seen my husband spend a day and a half adjusting his setting, his focus and his light meter over a diseased ground the store the other day to cash a check. She looked at it and then at me. "I used to get these," she said, "but no more."

"What did you do?" I asked.

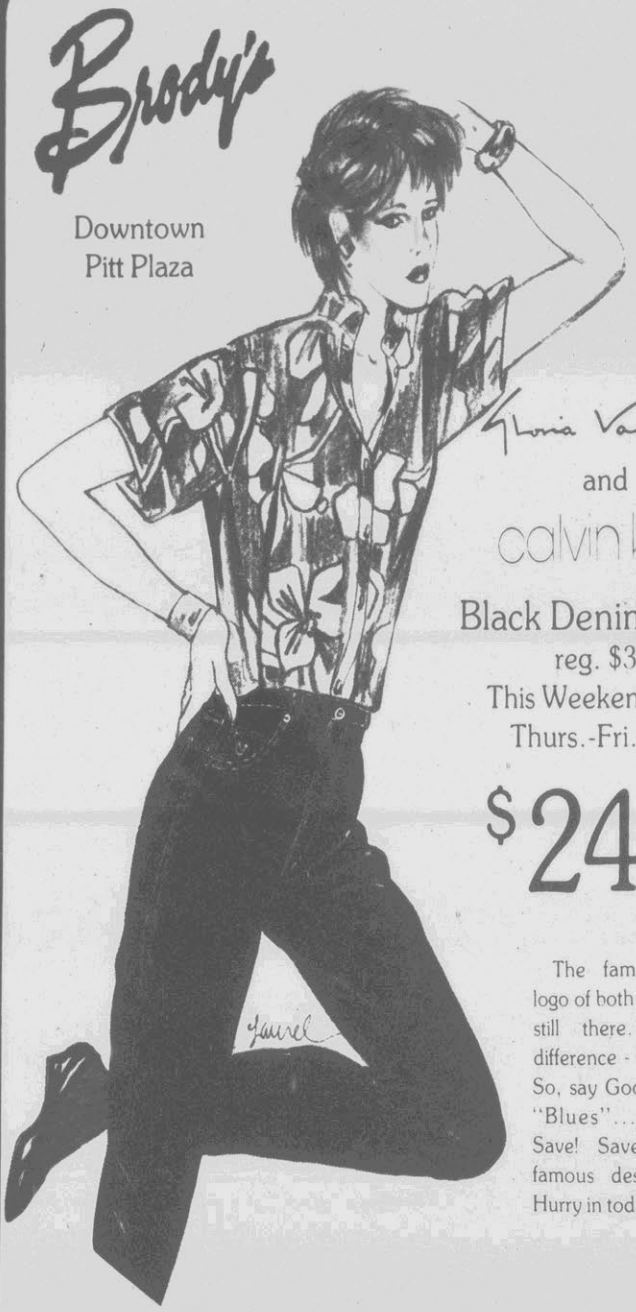

"I take a cab. Everywhere!"

Test Love Through An Engagement

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I'm crazy, but I'm a 44-year-old woman who has been madly in love with a 25-year-old man for the last five months. J. has never been married, but I have been married three times. (Widowed once and divorced twice.) I have three grown children who accept our situation because they have never seen me so happy in all my life! Abby, I never knew what love was all about until I met this beautiful, sensitive, caring man. When we are out together, people look at us like we're a little weird. Why won't society accept us? If I were 25 and J. were 44, nobody would think a thing of it.

Do you think we can make a go of marriage? J. is kind and gentle, and as mature as a man of 50. Besides, he makes me happy.

SITTING ON TOP OF THE WORLD

DEAR SITTING: Be less concerned with what "society" thinks and more concerned with what each of you can bring to a marriage. Being madly in love for five months classifies you as "honeymooners." Your chances for making a go of marriage would be better if you tested your love with a long engagement.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and my boyfriend is 15, and our parents are good friends, so we see a lot of each other. Please don't think I'm a little slut, but I am getting very close to going all the way. I guess I am very passionate for my age, but I can't see anything wrong with kissing and hugging and touching if you feel like it. It's what it leads to that scares me. I am still a virgin (I think), and I intend to keep my virginity as long as possible.

I have read letters from your readers who said they actually got pregnant without going all the way, and that scares me. We have gone too far already, and we can't go back to holding hands now. I know I'm going too fast for my own good, and I feel guilty.

Give me a good lecture if you think it will help.

FOURTEEN AND ONLY HUMAN

DEAR FOURTEEN: You are wise and intelligent to recognize the seriousness of your predicament. You and your boyfriend should see less of each other, and then only in circumstances that will minimize the temptation. Too much togetherness often places a superhuman burden on young and fiery passions.

Your feelings are normal, but, unfortunately, at 14 you can't afford to fully express them.

DEAR ABBY: I get my hair shampooed and set once a week at a beauty shop I have patronized for a long time. I also have my fingernails manicured there.

The young woman who gives me my manicures lights one cigarette after another during my manicure. I am not the type to complain, but it bothers me to be so close to someone who is smoking.

Should I tell her I am allergic to smoke? I don't want to upset her as she is a very nice person otherwise.

TIMID IN FORT WORTH

DEAR TIMID: Most smokers assume that their smoking is inoffensive unless they are told otherwise. If you tell a "nice person" that her smoking bothers you, she will graciously refrain from smoking in your presence.

Irish potatoes should be stored between 45 and 50 degrees. Warmer temperatures cause the potatoes to shrivel and sprout.

Free Hand Is Needed

William D. Ruckelshaus has been appointed as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency and with him comes renewed hope for protection of the environment.

Ruckelshaus was the first administrator of the EPA and he set the agency on a course of cleaning up the nation's air and water. Later he served under President Nixon as deputy attorney general and was fired by Nixon when he would not dismiss Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox in the Watergate scandal.

Recently he has been in private industry as senior vice president for Weyerhaeuser Co.

At this point there are few who oppose the selection of Ruckelshaus for the job of improving things at EPA. Former director Anne Gorsuch Burford resigned March 9 and the agency is still under fire.

Ruckelshaus said he was promised a free hand in running the agency and attempting to solve the obvious problems which have shaken public confidence in its ability to do its job.

President Reagan, who apparently underestimated public concern for the environment, says that his administration has a good record on the environment but that it can do better.

It can without question. The administration has chosen a man who can put the agency to enforcing the environment laws and do that without favoritism. Ruckelshaus should win confirmation by the Senate. Then he needs that free hand he has been promised to get the Environmental Protection Agency moving. We can all welcome that.

Savings Is Welcome

Pitt County tax bills have come in fancy computer-generated envelopes in recent years.

The recipient ripped off the tab and pulled out the bill to find out how much he owed in property taxes.

That may change this year. County officials told the Pitt commissioners that there could be a savings of several thousand dollars if post-card billing is used rather than envelopes. There will be a savings of 5 cents postage for each bill and 2.4 cents for the form. Based on that, the savings last November would have been $2,830. If the county attorney rules the new forms are legal they will be used this year.

It would be difficult to be against saving the county's money. Even $2,830 can be put to good use in some other area of county government.

Broken Record

WASHINGTON — Once upon a time, Ronald Reagan justified U.S. intervention in El Salvador by presenting evidence of communist activity there. Nowadays, he doesn't bother.

Like a broken record, Reagan still characterizes the Salvadoran civil war as a conflict nurtured principally by a Nicaraguan- (and Cuban) supplied pipeline of arms and advisers. Despite many credible reports to the contrary, however, the president and his advisers now offer "proof" of this contention only to closed congressional intelligence committees.

Their reluctance is born of experience. In the Haigzoic era, State Department officials embarrassed themselves with flimsy publicity gimmicks: Their "White Paper" of February 1981 was discredited soon afterward by, among others, the Wall Street Journal; taking a supposedly penitent Nicaraguan "soldier" before a Washington press conference to expose Sandinista meddling badly misfired.

Once burned, the administration shifted the battle to Capitol Hill. Although congressmen grow increasingly impatient with administration presentations, few have challenged Reagan in public. Yet the cloak of secrecy has enabled government spokesmen to clam up in the name of "protecting sources."

In fact, while Reagan has appealed publicly for an "emergency" bailout of El Salvador's government, he hasn't come forward with new evidence of need. The president is simply using his good office to certify that the guerrillas receive outside support by land, sea and air. Meanwhile, private briefings with House and Senate members have served to create the aura of crisis that another "White Paper" might not.

But with increasing evidence that most of the guerrillas' arms come from the El Salvador military, verbal assurances aren't enough.

If the administration's proof isn't good enough for the American public, it can't be very good at all.

A new China card? Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's latest "Defense Guidance" report indicates that the U.S. will rely on the People's Republic of China to help counter Soviet forces in the event of a European war. According to the classified war planning document, the Chinese could tie down many divisions on a "second front" in eastern Siberia.

Some kinks remain to be worked out, of course. Wrangles with the PRC over arms sales to Taiwan have cooled U.S.-Sino relations under Reagan; Peking is currently ignoring Weinberger's latest request to visit the Mainland.

Footnote: Steven Mosher, the former Stanford University doctoral candidate expelled in the wake of his controversial report of infanticide in China, was expecting to testify last week at a closed-door hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. However, at the State Department's urging, Mosher's appearance was canceled.

According to Robert Sutter, the committee's staff director, the administration could not provide a witness of its own. Yet another staff member contended that the administration feared exacerbating Peking's discomfort over Mosher's revelations.

NATO commander Gen. Bernard Rogers told the London Times last week that he'd like to meet his Warsaw Pact counterpart, Viktor Kulikov.

"I would suspect that over some vodka or over some bourbon," Rogers ruminated, "you would end up with his asking me what we are trying to do over here and I would tell him we are a strictly defensive alliance We would finally work down to where the basic difference is, and that's in ideology, where we are a peaceful, non-expansionist, non-imperialist, non-hegemonist organization. He can't say the same about the Soviet Union."

Susan Barlow, director of First National Supermarkets' Consumer Center, told a House subcommittee last week that further cuts in the federal food stamp program would force her company to shut some of its 12 inner-city stores in Cleveland. Need one remind the Reagan administration that a lack of supermarkets and similar services was cited by the Kerner Commission as a cause for race riots in the 1960s?

In its 1984 budget request the administration wants to extend a 19-month delay in cost of living adjustments for food stamp recipients and add a workfare requirement.

Who Can Balk At A Moment Of Silence

WASHINGTON — President Reagan made a renewed push the other day for his constitutional amendment to authorize prayer in public schools. Down in Tennessee the state legislature came up with a bill that could make such an amendment unnecessary. Twenty years after the landmark Engel case, this whole lamentable controversy is back in the news.

This is the president's amendment: "Nothing in this Constitution shall be construed to prohibit individual or group prayer in public schools or other public institutions. No person shall be required by the United States or by any state to participate in prayer."

The effect of such an amendment would be to overrule the Supreme Court's 6-1 decision of June 1962 in the Engel case. The case involved a brief prayer composed by the New York Board of Regents. Under the New York law, the prayer was to be said aloud in every class at the beginning of every school day. Pupils who asked to be excused could be excused.

Speaking for the court, Justice Hugo

Black found the law "wholly inconsistent" with the First Amendment's prohibition of laws respecting an establishment of religion. It is no part of the business of government, said Black, to compose official prayers to be recited as part of a religious program carried on by government.

"There can be no doubt," Black concluded, "that New York's state prayer program officially establishes the religious beliefs embodied in the Regents' prayer."

I thought the Engel case was wisely and properly decided for all the reasons spelled out in Black's opinion. To sanction even an innocuous official prayer is to invite the kind of religious dissension that ought to be avoided in a free society. Nothing in the Engel decision and its progeny, contrary to the implications in the president's proposed amendment, ever has prohibited "individual" prayer in the schools. All that is forbidden is the kind of school-sanctioned prayer that becomes a religious exercise. This is a dangerous and divisive territory, as history tells us, in which the state should not intrude.

The president's amendment got nowhere in the 97th Congress and it almost certainly will get nowhere in the 98th. No hearings have been scheduled in either House or Senate. It is wholly unlikely that the amendment could command the necessary two-thirds majority in each chamber.

If that is an accurate forecast, the situation will remain in statu quo. Fine with me. But Tennessee may have come up with a compromise that could ease the tension. A year ago the Tennessee legislature adopted a law permitting a minute of "prayer." The federal courts promptly threw it out. Now the legislature has passed a bill, expected to become law this week without the governor's signature, that mandates a "moment of silence" at the start of every school day.

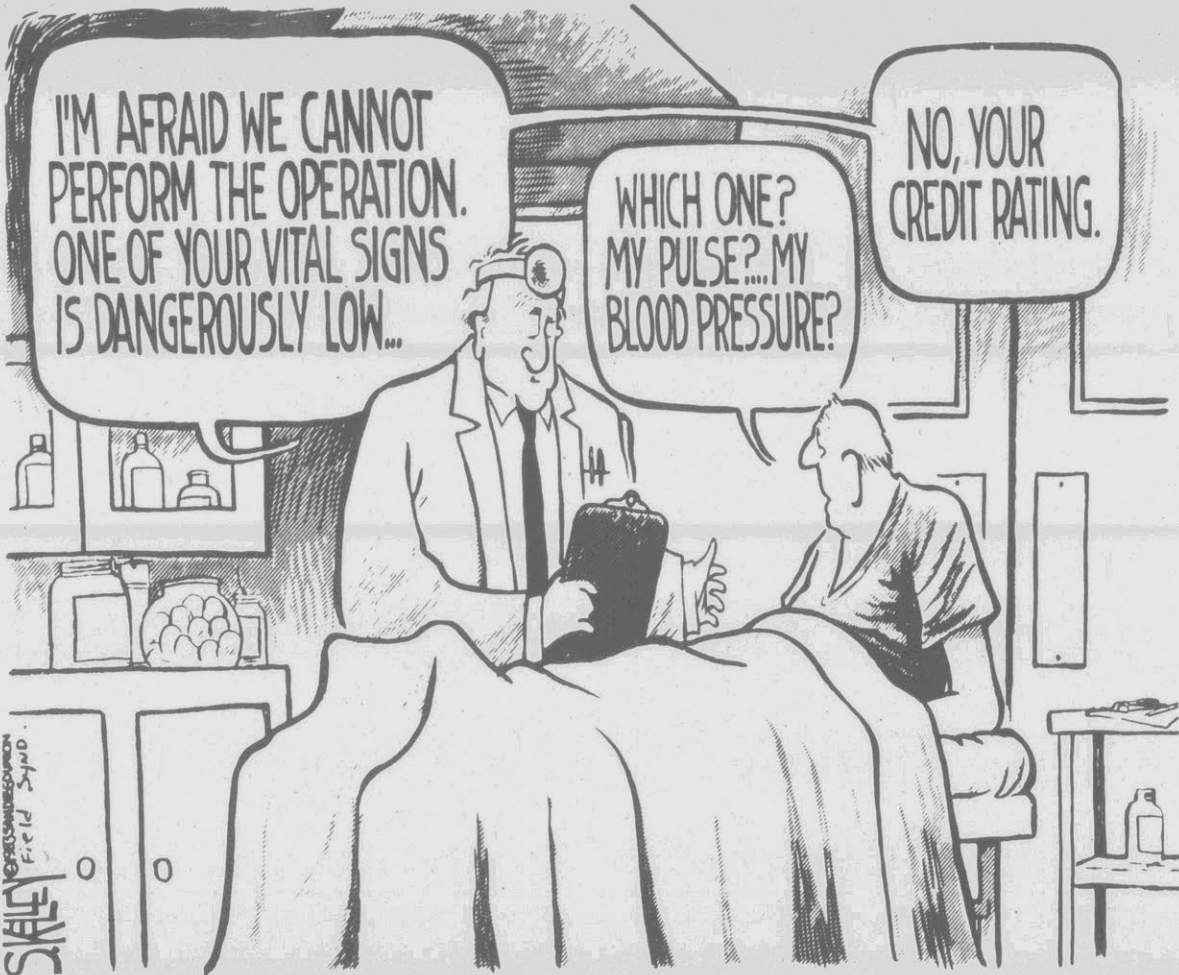

If the courts ever should hold that law unconstitutional, the courts will contribute to the impression that our courts are, in the polite word, nuts. Surely a "moment of silence" could not be interpreted as an "official prayer" or a "religious exercise" or as the indoctrination of "religious beliefs," all of which were forbidden under the Engel case. The Tennessee statute does not refer even to "meditation." All it requires is a moment of "silence." Every pupil would have to observe it.

What could be wrong with that? The children who wanted to engage in silent prayer would be free to do so. Other children could concentrate on the seven-times table. The teacher could steel her nerves for the day ahead. The American Civil Liberties Union would be hard put to show that silence violates anyone's civil liberties.

Tennessee's approach may not satisfy the advocates of formal prayers — the kind of prayers that are said aloud, with bowed heads — but such prayers are the province of the church and the family. They ought never to be the business of school boards.

Pay For It Or Leave

RALEIGH — You'd have thought it was Christmas when a pair of the state's leading industrial recruiters came before the Joint Committee on the Economy earlier this month. Like the little boy who can't whittle down his Santa list to less than six pages, they had plenty of requests but little concern for the realities of balanced budgets.

Alvah Ward, director of the state Division of Industrial Development, reported that North Carolina is a leader in industrial recruitment. The state has an equitable tax structure, he said, and for industries which take a total look at taxes here, you can hardly beat North Carolina. But to improve, he said, we must develop our skilled work force and reduce business taxes. Spend more, tax less.

You'd think Rockwell Poisson, legislative committee chairman of the N.C. Industrial Development Association and a vice president of NCNB, would be a little more sensitive to the process of balancing budgets. Nowhere near it. He agreed that North Carolina is very successful in industrial recruitment and that our tax structure is very equitable and competitive. But, if we want to grow even faster, we must do more.

The state needs to spend more money on vocational training in the public schools and community colleges. With more skilled workers, North Carolina will become a more attractive place for industry.

We need more graduate schools of engineering. If a big electronics firm is going to locate here, they'll want their employees to have the chance to go to graduate school at night. Can't do that if there isn't an engineering school within driving distance.

Our community colleges need more equipment. We can't train workers for the '80s with equipment bought in the '40s and '50s. And when a big firm relocates here and brings workers with it, the children of those workers shouldn't have to pay out-of-state tuition at state colleges.

We need better roads. More new roads. Better maintained existing roads. We need natural gas hook-ups in every corner of the state. The government should pay to run those lines from Manteo to Murphy. We need to advertise North Carolina in more magazines, to build more airports, to find new ways to finance industrial expansion. He just went on and on.

But did he have a way to pay for this. Sure. Cut taxes.

Right down the list, he cited just about every tax on business and gave good reasons, in terms of economic development, for cutting those taxes. The inventory tax, the intangibles tax, the property tax — all bad for business. It doesn't matter that overall business taxes here are as low as anywhere in the country. These taxes just have a bad psychological effect on people looking to relocate their industries. So, he said, we should have a big new study of state taxes with the "key element" being their affect on economic development.

All of which prompted one legislator to suggest, under his breath, that we raise the food tax to 50 percent to pay for all of this.

And what about Poisson's pie-in-the-sky wish list got the biggest chuckle? We'd be doing all this, he said, to recruit the firms of the future — the robot makers.

So let's see if we've got Mr. Poisson straight. We increase state spending and cut business taxes so new industries can come to North Carolina and hire robots, not North Carolinians. As our unidentified senator said, "If you're going to live here, pay for it. Otherwise, move over for the robots. That's the way it sounded to me."

Strength For Today

Karl Marx attempted to interpret life on a purely materialistic basis. To him, man was an eating animal. The pie was being unevenly cut; Marx suggested a system by which he believed it could be more justly divided.

Darwin also regarded man as an animal — a struggling animal seeking survival. There is some truth in this conception, but it is only partial.

Life is indeed a struggle and survival an achievement, but some who do not survive — the martyrs, for example — are the ones who achieve the most. Jesus, who did not withstand the malice of his contemporaries, stands as humanity's greatest achievement. History has been dated from his birth, and the world and its thinking have been made different by his words.

The gospel of Christ combines man's highest wisdom and God's revealed truth. It teaches that although man is born a creature, he may become a child of God through spiritual rebirth. The gospel alone answers the basic question about human destiny.

Hazardous Waste Curb Continues Fuel Debate

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill aimed at limiting the kinds of hazardous waste that can be placed in landfills is continuing to fuel a battle between several state House members and state officials.

The latest skirmish came Wednesday in the House Water and Air Resources Committee, where the bill has been lodged since its introduction early in the session by Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe.

Mavretic charged in committee and in a news conference later that two state officials met with industry representatives recently to "tailor" a hazardous waste landfill bill to their liking.

He said Department of Human Resources Deputy Secretary Lucy Bode and the Governor's Waste Management Board Executive Director Linda Little conducted the March 4 meeting.

He said they talked with industry representatives about alternatives to his bill, which would ban landfill disposal of certain kinds of waste while allowing waste generators to seek a waiver of those rules after technical review by the state and a public hearing.

The Waste Management Board has endorsed another method of limiting landfill disposal of waste. It wants to set concentration levels that indicate when a waste is safe enough to be buried.

Mavretic charged that Mrs. Bode and others have tried to stall his bill "in order to gain time to fabricate an alternative bill and to get some legislator to introduce that administration bill."

The House committee failed to vote on the bill Wednesday but adopted an amendment to make sure waste generators could appeal decisions to the state Court of Appeals.

"Now I suspect that the reason behind the delays was to gain time to create a bill favorable to the same firms that want to landfill the very dangerous hazardous wastes that (my bill) would prohibit," he said. "We simply must not allow hazardous waste generators to write their own rules."

But Mrs. Bode said the meeting was "the only responsible thing to do" in light of industry requests for information. She said it was departmental policy to sit down with interested people to discuss pending legislation.

"As deputy secretary I am responsible for meeting with people," she said. "I feel strongly about having an open door policy."

Brent Hackney, a spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt, said officials also have met with environmentalists and Mavretic.

"We will meet with anybody who wants to talk about this thing," he said. "His implication that concessions were sought and granted clearly is not the case."

But spokesmen for the governor's office and the Department of Human Resources could not say when they might have a bill drafted for introduction by a legislator.

Rep. William Clark, D-Cumberland, said he would introduce such a bill if Mavretic's bill couldn't be amended to satisfy all those involved. But he said Wednesday he didn't have such a proposal in hand.

Watt Proposes A Revenue Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt is proposing legislation that he says will protect the nation's disappearing wetlands.

The package proposed by Watt would double the cost of duck-hunting stamps and impose entrance fees at the most popular wildlife refuges.

These and other changes would make $25 million more available each year for wetlands protection, Watt said. Watt's proposed legislation would also eliminate a variety of federal subsidies landowners can now get to help them convert wetlands to other uses.

Watt said that half of the 215 million acres of wetlands that once existed in the United States has now disappeared and that a recent study indicated current losses totaled 458,000 acres annually from land being drained to provide agricultural land and housing developments.

Pont had announced plans last August to reduce its work force by approximately 250 beginning in November.

Kress said the company has no immediate plans to recall additional workers. He added that the 30 people involved in the recent recall are all former employees at the plant.

Thirty-year employees taking part in the unveiling ceremony were Johnny O'Neal, Jesse Gilbert, Charlie Barnett, Bill Jarman, Frank Griffin, Tom Mann, Betty Jones, Joyce Houston and Ms. Rucker.

Playing Safe

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Putting a tiger on your tag would definitely be legal under a bill sponsored by state Sen. T. Ed Garrison, D-Anderson.

But it will be legal only if the tiger — or more likely, a Clemson "Tiger Paw" — is small enough not to obscure the letters or numbers on the license plate.

Although Garrison is a Clemson University alumnus and a Tiger fan, he consented to making Gamecocks and Paladins legal on tags too.

And you don't have to be a college fan — any high school booster club symbol also would be legal.

The bill, co-sponsored by Sens. Robert Lake, D-Newberry, and Harvey Peeler, D-Gaffney, awaits third reading in the Senate before moving on to the House.

Garrison said he is not sure the many tags already sporting paws are illegal. But he wants to make the law absolutely clear before putting one on his own car.

Organizing Densa Club

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Quick — what does "arundinaceous" mean?

If you don't know, you probably qualify for Densa, a newly announced club for "poor slob" with sub-genius IQs.

James Stewart, chairman of the bored of the International Dull Folks' Ltd., estimates his new satellite organization has a potential membership of 4.5 billion — nearly the entire world population.

Stewart formed International Dull Folks' Ltd. last month as a splinter organization of the International Dull Men's Club, whose president is Joseph L. Troise of Boulder, Colo. The Dull Men's Club's original slogan was "in generic beer is truth."

Applications for Densa membership are available to anyone who is not among the 70,000 members of Mensa, the international society for people with high IQs.

The entrance examination for Densa — which every applicant must fail — asks "In what sport is a hockey puck used?" and "Who is buried in Grant's tomb?"

The one stumper that virtually guarantees failure: "What does arundinaceous mean?"

Webster's New World Dictionary defines it as "of or like a reed."

Recalls Earlier Attack By Dog

MURPHY, N.C. (AP) — The grandson of a Murphy woman who was killed by a neighbor's dogs Tuesday said Wednesday the woman had been attacked by one of the dogs three weeks ago.

Cherokee County Sheriff Blain Stalcup said 83-year-old Lemuel Smith called him Sunday and asked him to talk to the neighbor about the dogs. But Stalcup said he hadn't contacted the neighbor since the call.

Ruby Smith, 79, died Tuesday two hours after two of a neighbor's pit bulldogs mauled her as she walked to her mailbox.

"Granny was attacked once before, about three weeks ago, and she beat the dog off," John Griffin said Wednesday. "She wasn't hurt that time."

Griffin, who lives near his grandparents' house east of Murphy, said his grandfather called the sheriff's office Saturday and reported the trouble with the dogs.

Stalcup said Smith called him Sunday and "asked me to talk to Mitch (Mitch Myers, the dog's owner), but I hadn't talked to him."

"There wasn't a formal complaint. There hadn't been any trouble before," Stalcup said. "I thought the way they were talking they just wanted me to say something to Mitch."

Myers "is taking it awful hard," Stalcup said. "He's taking it as bad as the family."

Myers, former head football coach for the Murphy High School Bulldogs, could not be reached for comment. He was reported to be under a physician's care.

Stalcup said Myers owns five pit bulldogs, and the two that attacked Mrs. Smith were older dogs. "They weighed between 40 and 45 pounds. They're trained to attack and, once they start, they don't quit," he said.

Smith, who retired from a local sawmill three years ago, suffered a heart attack moments after the incident. He was in serious, but stable condition Wednesday in Murphy Medical Center.

Smith was working nearby when he heard a commotion and saw the dogs attacking his wife. He rushed to her aid and, with the help of a neighbor, Bob Jones, beat the dogs off.

An EMS unit transported Mrs. Smith to Murphy Medical Center, where she died two hours later.

Smith was transported to the hospital in a private vehicle by members of the Cherokee County Rescue Squad.

One of the dogs apparently got loose from its chain or may not have been tied, Stalcup said.

3 Collisions Investigated

An estimated $3,950 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

According to officers, heaviest damage resulted from a 10 a.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Charles Street involving cars driven by Maxel Eugene Minges of 411 Lock View Drive and Lillian Harding Primus of Route 4, New Bern.

Damage from the mishap was set at $750 to the Minges car and $1,200 to the Primus vehicle.

Cars driven by Martha Hylton Taylor of Route 7, Greenville, and Mark Hassell Smith of Route 1, Greenville, collided about 3:18 p.m. on the Stantonsburg Road, 4 mile west of the Moye Boulevard intersection, causing $500 damage to the Taylor car and $600 damage to the Smith vehicle.

Police charged Brenda Joyce Gardner of Route 1, Grifton, with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 10:02 a.m. collision on Dickinson Avenue, 20 feet east of the Clark Street intersection.

Investigators said the Gardner car collided with an auto driven by James Carson Mills of Route 2, Greenville, causing $200 damage to the Mills car and $700 damage to the Gardner auto.

To Ask Boost On Premiums

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state board overseeing the health insurance plan for state employees and teachers voted Wednesday to ask the legislature for a 19.8 percent increase in premiums paid by the state and workers.

The proposed increase drew immediate negative reactions from representatives of state workers and a top budget leader.

The bulk of the increase is needed to pay for rising medical costs and increasing use of the insurance, said John E. Coalson of Charlotte, a representative of the state's consulting firm of William M. Mercer Inc.

If lawmakers approve the request, it will require a $22 million annual increase in state funding for the plan. That money would cover the premium the state pays for individual employees and teachers.

Workers paying for family coverage would see their monthly premium rise from $76.98 to $92.24. Coalson said the increase would take effect Oct. 1 if the legislature agrees.

Coalson said the cost increase was unrelated to the administration of the plan by EDS-Federal Inc., the Texas-based company that took over the plan last year. The company was criticized earlier this year by state employee groups because of a claims backlog.

Consult the Energy Services Department at Greenville Utilities Commission concerning ways to save energy in your home and business. Call 752-7166.

"I am distressed at this early call for such an increase," Emmett W. Burden, executive director of the N.C. State Employees Association, told the Board of Trustees of the Teachers' and State Employees' Comprehensive Major Medical Plan.

Rep. William T. Watkins, D-Granville, co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said he was stunned by the board's request. He said the budget proposed for the next two years contains no additional funding for the health insurance.

The board's recommendation would include keeping a

$27.3 million reserve for the plan. The reserve would help pay part of $32 million in outstanding claims projected for the start of the new fiscal year. The reserve would also cover fluctuations in monthly claims payments. Watkins said he doubted the legislature would increase the annual appropriation for the plan by $22 million while allowing the board to keep the reserve.

House Budget...

balance to our national policies."

Because Democrats won an additional 26 seats in last November's elections they now hold a 268-166 majority over House Republicans.

In a sharp break with the last two years, there were only 36 Democratic defections, allowing House leaders to claim their first victory on a budget blueprint since Reagan took office.

Only four Republicans voted with 225 Democrats in approving the budget proposal. House GOP leader Bob Michel of Illinois said the spending and taxing plan was approved without Republican support because of the Democratic election gains last November and resentment of Reagan's budget victories in 1981 and 1982.

"This alleged budget should be titled, 'The Revenge on Ronald Reagan Act of 1983,'" Michel said. "It is the offspring of an unholy union between political spite and political opportunism."

The Democratic budget, said Michel, "is nothing more than a statement of political principle and a framework for the Democratic National Convention platform in 1984."

The budget plan now goes to the Republican-controlled Senate, where leaders have been deadlocked with Reagan over his insistence on a 10 percent defense increase, not including inflation.

No decisions are expected there until Congress returns from an Easter recess early next month.

Ultimately, the federal spending limits for the next fiscal year starting Oct. 1 will be set in negotiations between the House and Senate, and some House members said privately that because of deep political differences with Reagan and Republicans, they doubt that a final budget resolution can be agreed to this year.

Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okl., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said if that happens, "We will see fiscal anarchy."

In an interview, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said of the Democratic budget, "I don't believe it could be implemented even in the House...It is very questionable fiscal policy. This will put the president cleanly on the offensive."

Israeli Budget

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Parliament has approved the government's 1983 budget of $21.4 billion, allocating 24.3 percent for defense.

Under the new budget defense spending will reach $5.2 billion, a 3 percent increase over 1982.

Specifically, the House budget proposal:

—Establishes fiscal 1984 spending at $863.5 billion with a deficit of $174.5 billion, slightly lower than Reagan's budget.

—Increases defense spending by 4 percent next year, which adds up to $9.3 billion less than Reagan recommended, and $164 billion less through 1988.

—Includes $30 billion in additional taxes, which Republicans say would have to come from repeal of both a 10 percent tax cut due to take effect July 1, and indexing the change in tax law in 1985 which protects wage earners from paying higher taxes just because they receive cost-of-living salary increases.

—Rejects Reagan's freeze or further cutbacks in domestic programs, including education, job training, food stamps, energy assistance for poor persons and mass transit, substantial increases.

—Allows room for a 4 percent increase in pay for military and civilian federal workers, compared to a freeze urged by the president.

The budget was approved by assembling a delicate balance of mainstream House Democrats, conservative southern Boll Weevils, and liberals.

Once necessary compromises are made with the Senate Republicans, it is not clear that the same coalition can be reassembled and a final budget resolution adopted.

As Republican leader Michel said to the Democrats, "You may very well have the votes to pass this thing today, but there will be another day and you better be giving some thought to an eventual (compromise). Will you have the votes then?"

State Jobless Rate Inches Up

By The Associated Press

The unemployment rate hit 10.2 percent for February in North Carolina with government figures showing 295,600 people out of work.

February's totals represent the second consecutive month of double-digit unemployment rates and the highest figures in the current recession. The highest rate so far was July 1982 when the unemployment hit 10.1 percent.

The national unemployment rate in February was 11.3 percent or 12.3 million unemployed.

"While there's talk of improved economic condition, unemployment in North Carolina is still tied to the persistent recession," said Glenn R. Jernigan, chairman of the state Employment

Security Commission. "We attribute some of the change to a minor increase in the number of unemployment insurance claims plus a slight increase in the unemployed new entrants and re-entrants into the labor force."

The January rate in North Carolina was 10.0 percent.

Manufacturing employment dropped by 2,600 from mid-January to mid-February. Tobacco manufacturers led with a decline of 1,100. Trade occupations dropped 3,400 and construction was down 2,300, according to government figures.

The average weekly hours worked by production workers in manufacturing declined to 38.0 in mid-February from 38.3 in mid-

January. In mid-February 1982, workers averaged 37.7 hours per week.

Nonmanufacturing employment increased by 3,500 jobs from mid-January to mid-February.

Agree Study Helms' Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Wednesday adopted legislation instructing the Secretary of the Treasury to study the feasibility of a proposal by Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., to create a private retirement system as a Social Security supplement.

The requirement is part of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, which passed the Senate today.

Helms offered his proposal to establish "individual retirement security accounts" in which each worker could save and invest for his or her own retirement security. However, Senate Finance Committee chairman Robert Dole suggested the Treasury Department be asked to study the proposal before it is taken up by the Senate.

Dole called the proposal "a good idea" and said "It makes a great deal of sense."

With the understanding that Treasury would be called upon for the study, Helms temporarily withdrew his proposal from further consideration.

"We've made a great deal of progress with my plan," Helms said. "Obviously, Congress is not ready to adopt it now, but after the study is complete, it will have a better chance."

The Senate passed by 88-9 Wednesday night a landmark Social Security rescue plan, but only after granting a reprieve to federal workers that some leaders said could rupture the entire $165 billion package and possibly draw a veto from President Reagan.

Mental Health Bill OK'd By Senate Committee

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill to let area mental health centers process patients through one institution received a Senate committee's approval Wednesday, despite protests that it could restrict admissions to patients with serious problems.

Rep. Chris Barker, D-Craven, who piloted the bill safely through four weeks of objections in the House Mental Health Committee he chairs, said it was essential to progressive mental health care in North Carolina.

But Doris Jeter, a member of the Friends and Families of the Mentally Handicapped in North Carolina, said the bill would narrow a bottleneck that already makes it difficult for a patient to get into a state institution.

"We doubt in the reality of this bill that justice will be done to all those who need help," she told the Senate Human Resources Committee. "You're making it almost impossible for some people to get into a state hospital."

The bill, supported by most mental health organizations in the state, was designed to keep patients from slipping through administrative cracks. By designating a single portal of entry and exit, officials hope to make record-keeping more efficient and improve treatment for all patients, Barker said.

Opponents of the bill have attacked a provision that would slightly expand state laws allowing mental health centers to exchange patient information, calling it an unwarranted breach of confidentiality.

But Barker pointed out that the bill is not mandatory and that state law already has strict rules governing the disclosure of information. He said only two areas, one encompassing Robeson, Bladen, Columbus and Scotland counties and the other in the Smithfield-Selma region, were likely to adopt the system.

Mrs. Jeter said that both regions have already adopted policies restricting access to state institutions. But Barker said state policy called for an increasing reliance on local and home care for the mentally ill.

"It might make it harder to get into a hospital, but that's the idea," he said.

Barker said objections to deinstitutionalization often grew from disagreements with doctors over treatment options.

Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, said there was still a place for institutions. But Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, agreed with Barker.

"What you're hearing is from people who disagree with doctors at these mental health centers," he said. "They are not always being objective."

In other legislative action:

Court Costs
The Senate Finance Committee, after lengthy debate, delayed action on a bill to raise court costs $5 per case.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, said the bill would generate about $5.4 million, which would be distributed to counties in amounts depending on their volume of court business.

"I really don't want to be too hard on people ... but these court facilities are in need of repair and someone's got to pay," said Thomas.

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, said court costs have been raised so frequently in recent years that low-income people are having trouble paying them.

"In a DUI case, for example, you have to pay $100 to attend the school and perhaps another $100 fine on top of court costs," said Soles. "You also might have to pay for a night in jail."

Another controversial element of the bill was its requirement that Henderson County's share of the court cost revenue increase, estimated at about $50,000, go into a fund to build a new courthouse there.

"Are all the people of North Carolina going to have to pay more for (traffic) tickets so you can have a new courthouse in Henderson County?" said Rep. J.A. "Chip" Wright, R-New Hanover.

The committee agreed to postpone consideration of the bill in anticipation of receiving similar legislation from the House.

The House bill, introduced by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, would raise court costs and revise the cost and fee structure but the $10.3 million it's expected to raise would go into the General Fund.

Property Tax
The House voted 61-51 to kill a bill that would have given local governments the power to levy property taxes to pay for housing projects.

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, led debate on the bill, saying it would make a substantial change in taxation without a vote by the people.

Rep. Gerald Anderson, D-Craven, said passing the bill would result in pressure on county commissioners to raise taxes. And Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, said he feared the law might be abused at the expense of farming communities.

Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, who introduced the bill, emphasized that it was not mandatory and that she had heard no opposition to it.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, appeared to tip sentiment away from the bill when he noted that the taxes could be used to subsidize housing as well as build it.

House Rules
The House Rules committee approved resolutions to study transferring schools for the deaf and blind from the Department of Human Resources to the Department of Public Instruction and to ask Congress to oppose the sale of National Forest Service land in North Carolina.

The committee also sent to a subcommittee a bill that would prevent the introduction of legislation after May 1.

Medicaid
Legislative analysts told one budget subcommittee that Medicaid costs have increased more than 452 percent in the past decade, with the state's share of the program rising 905 percent.

The Medicaid program helps pay for medical services for the poor and its costs are shared by the federal, state and local governments.

Analyst Bob Daughtry said the steep increase in the cost of the program was prompted by inflation in all health care costs, expansion of services offered under the program and an increase in the number of participants as the population grew.

"More people have become dependent on Medicaid," Daughtry said. "We have come a long way in this state toward removing medical bias" that prohibited poor people from obtaining health care.

He said the state has not found that much fraud or abuse of the program.

Sessions
A Senate State Government subcommittee examined information about limiting the length of legislative sessions but failed to make any recommendations to the Senate, which sought the study.

Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, said that of nine Southeastern states only North Carolina and South Carolina have no limit on the length of legislative sessions. He said North Carolina has the fourth longest legislative session of those states.

"Few states place a greater burden on the legislators' time and resources with less compensation," he said.

But when compared to the 10 most populous states, North Carolina is among the majority with no session limits. Hancock said, however, that the state's two-year legislative salary is $12,000 compared to an average $40,566 in the other states.

"Clearly the other states have professional legislatures that permanently have abandoned the citizen legislature," Hancock said.

He said limits on the length of session would keep citizens from having to pass two tests to be elected — one electoral and one economic test.

Private Aid
The Senate approved unanimously a bill to allow requests for aid to private school students to go directly to the Advisory Budget Commission.

Presently, such requests must be screened by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, which represents public school interests.

Lawmen Raided A 'Minicasino'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte vice squad officers raided what they called "a minicasino" operation in the Lake Apartments complex Tuesday night and arrested 10 men.

Officers armed with a search warrant seized $5,860 in cash, playing chips and playing cards in the 11:30 p.m. raid at the complex. The 10 suspects face gambling charges.

Police speculated the apartment may have been rented for gaming purposes only, with a share of the gambling proceeds going to pay rent. They said the apartment was set up with a moon-shaped blackjack table in the living room.

Games at the apartment were scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday nights, police said. The men arrested Tuesday were playing blackjack, using chips worth $5, $10 and $25, police said.

New Head For NCSU Alumni

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — William M. Barnhardt of Charlotte will assume presidency of the 13,000-member North Carolina State University Alumni Association on July 1, replacing Raleigh mayor Smedes York.

The board of directors elected Barnhardt, president of Southern Webbing Mills Inc., of Charlotte, at a Raleigh meeting. He is a 1950 graduate of the school.

Charles T. Lambert of Virginia Beach, Va., was named president-elect.

Byrne Abandons Her Mayoralty Race

CHICAGO (AP) — Four years ago, Jane M. Byrne came up holding aces in her pauper's bid to become mayor. But in her political gamble this year, she turned up nothing better than jokers.

Mrs. Byrne ended her latest long-shot bid, as a write-in candidate, Wednesday night — folding her hand just a week after vowing to stick it out until the end.

Mrs. Byrne, 48, said in a statement that she didn't have enough time to properly wage a successful campaign before the April 12 contest. Hours earlier, the Board of Election Commissioners had denied a request by her attorneys to change ballot envelopes to help write-in candidates.

Allies had abandoned her. Her campaign chief quit. Her media strategist during the primary quit three days ago after pressure from the Democratic National Committee.

Meanwhile, presidential contenders in the nation's capital joined local aldermen in the City Council to line up behind her opponents.

Even Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a one-time staunch Byrne backer, came to her home turf Wednesday and endorsed the Democratic nominee, U.S. Rep. Harold Washington.

It was one of the final blows for Mrs. Byrne, who had been labeled a sore loser, a spoiler and a hypocrite for launching a write-in campaign just three weeks after promising to support Washington, who defeated her Feb. 22 in the Democratic primary.

Some politicians contended she was trying to appeal to "raw racism," currying those who wouldn't vote for Republican Bernard Epton but wouldn't vote for Washington because he is black.

Washington said Wednesday day he was gratified by Mrs. Byrne's latest switch, but predicted he will still win April 12.

Epton praised the mayor's decision. "We happen to think the mayor has shown good judgment in withdrawing from the race," he said in a statement. "The people from the city of Chicago have already spoken."

Mrs. Byrne, knowing she had triumphed once before as an outsider, began her write-in campaign with enthusiasm. In 1979, when she scored Chicago's political upset of the century by defeating the machine candidate, Mrs. Byrne was a party pariah.

But by this week, Mrs. Byrne was "recognizing the agony of being on the outside looking in," Alderman Roman Pucinski said.

In many ways, the situation was bleaker than in 1979, said Don Rose, the political strategist who masterminded Mrs. Byrne's first maverick campaign.

This time, Rose said, she was "publicly vilified much more than in 1979 when she tended to be ignored or dismissed laughingly as a candidate."

Mrs. Byrne tried to brush off the criticism, saying she was best able to run the city. Running a write-in campaign was a risk, Mrs. Byrne said a week ago, but "I'm willing to take that risk even if it means the end of public life and public service."

Unlike 1979, however, the mayor faced a three-way race, a record to defend and a major obstacle in not having her name on the ballot.

She also couldn't count on black voters, who supported her in overwhelming numbers in her first mayoral bid. Almost all of them voted for Washington in the primary.

April Ferry Runs Change

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An extra departure time will be added at Ocracoke and Cedar Island ferry terminals starting April 1 to meet the expected influx of travelers to and from Ocracoke Island during Easter.

The additional departure times will be 10 p.m. from Ocracoke and 7 p.m. from Cedar Island.

Ben L. O'Neal, director of the state's ferry division in Morehead City, said that an extra ferry vessel and two additional runs are normally added during Easter.

"Because two ferry vessels are currently undergoing routine maintenance, the extra vessel will not be available by Easter weekend," O'Neal said. "This is an interim schedule and will be maintained until the two vessels currently undergoing maintenance are back in service."

Normal service is expected to resume in April.

The interim schedules:
Departures from Cedar Island at 7 a.m., 1 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Departures from Ocracoke at 10 a.m., 4 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Reservations are still being accepted and are recommended for both departure points, O'Neal said.

Seek Exemption For Videotapes

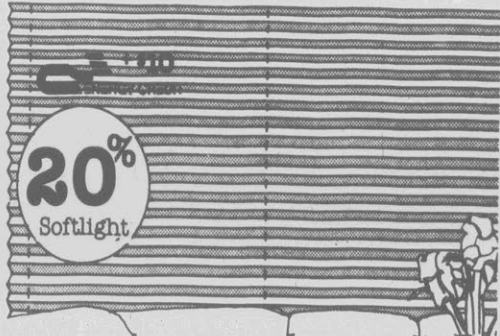

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill introduced in the Senate would provide an exemption from the copyright laws for owners of home videotape recorders.

Sens. Jake Garn, R-Utah, and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., sponsors of the bill, said Tuesday the purpose of the legislation is to shield individuals from possible liability for the purchase and use of video cassette machines.

CAMPAIGN ENDS — An unidentified man sticks out his tongue as he follows Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne. Byrne, then campaigning for write-in re-election votes, has announced she is withdrawing from the race. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan's Goal...

Defense officials said these were the first reconnaissance pictures of Cuba to be made public by the U.S. government in 20 years.

The statistical details used by the president had been publicized previously by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other Pentagon officials.

As for his futuristic anti-missile plans, the president, without specifics, called on the "scientific community who gave us nuclear weapons to turn their great talents to the cause of mankind and world peace — to give us the means of rendering these nuclear weapons impotent and obsolete."

A senior administration official who briefed reporters said the president is "carefully avoiding endorsing any explicit technology."

However, this official indicated the research will focus on such advanced technology as lasers, charged particle beams and microwave devices.

A laser uses an intense beam of light to destroy or disable a target. Charged particle beams are streams of micro-sized electrons, protons or other forms of energy which have been described as resembling lightning bolts striking objects. Microwave devices would involve electromagnetic energy, defense scientists said.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union have major research programs in these areas. The Soviet high-energy laser program alone is estimated by the Pentagon at three to five times the U.S. effort.

The Defense Department's recent report on Soviet military power suggested that a space-based, Soviet anti-missile system using high-energy lasers could be tested in the 1990s "but probably would not be operational until the turn of the century."

The United States is spending about $1 billion a year on anti-missile research over a wide spectrum of technologies. The senior administration official, who spoke with reporters on condition that he remain anonymous, said it would be "premature" to estimate what an all-out program as envisioned by the president would cost.

The official said that a number of agencies will work together in attempting to identify the technologies "that offer greater promise," and that this preliminary task may be finished in the next few months, after which the president likely would go to Congress with money proposals.

"The president is turning emphasis from offense to defense," the official said. "The president is trying to open the door to the next century and find a way to get rid of those massive arsenals on both sides."

Both Reagan and the senior official indicated they believed the new approach would not violate the 1972 treaty which strictly limits anti-missile defenses in both the United States and the Soviet Union. The administration official said the treaty permits research against missile attack.

But the official Soviet news agency Tass said deployment of the anti-missile system would violate U.S.-Soviet treaties. And in a separate reaction, Radio Moscow termed Reagan's speech "bellicose" and accused him of using "new CIA-fabricated figures about the Soviet military potential ... to try to justify the unprecedented military spending of the United States."

The underlying purpose of Reagan's speech was to appeal for public support against members of Congress bent on cutting the president's record $238.6 billion defense spending budget for fiscal 1984.

As the United States moves toward a hoped-for defense against missile attack, the president said, "we must remain constant in preserving the nuclear deterrent and maintaining a solid capability for flexible response" in event of a Soviet move against the United States or its allies.

At the same time, Reagan stressed that he was "totally committed" to seeking nuclear arms reductions in negotiations with the Soviet Union.

N.C. Arts Funding Is Sharply Reduced

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Federal budget cuts over the last two years will hurt North Carolina historic preservation efforts, dance companies and possibly the N.C. Symphony, the director of a private research group says.

A state study says federal funds available to North Carolina artists from the National Endowment of the Arts have been cut in half over the last two years.

"These cutbacks affect North Carolina's ability to call itself 'The State of the Arts,'" said Ron Coble, director of the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research, a private, non-profit group that studies state government.

"The cutbacks are going to hurt historic preservation efforts, dance companies and perhaps the N.C. Symphony," he said. "Many groups are looking to state government to offset federal cuts, but with the tight revenue picture, it is unlikely the General Assembly will be able to help."

Total funds from the NEA to the state declined by 25 percent from fiscal 1980 to fiscal 1981, the study said. From fiscal 1981 to fiscal 1982, funding dropped 32 percent. Cuts during the two years together reduced funding from about $2.4 million to $1.2 million.

The National Endowment of the Arts is a federal agency that gives basic grants to all 50 states and has supported a Dance Touring Program and Artists-in-Education effort in the state.

LIFT SANCTIONS

East Carolina Rallies, Nips Ohio, 5-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

After having lost two straight games and three of the last four, East Carolina baseball Coach Hal Baird might have been a little worried as time wore on yesterday when the Pirates hosted Ohio University.

After five and a half innings, the Pirates were behind, 3-1, and had shown little activity with the bat. But in the sixth, East Carolina suddenly came up with two runs to tie it up, then added two more in the seventh to pull out a 5-3 victory in typical come-from-behind Pirate style.

"We really needed that one," Baird said afterwards. "The kids really played well. Bobby (Davidson, ECU pitcher) struggled early, but from the seventh through the ninth, he smelled (victory) and really went after it. There were a couple of times there when he was one pitch from being yanked, but he got out of it. I hope that this turns him around."

Davidson, who was one of the brightest spots on the ECU pitching staff last year as a freshman, has struggled this year so far, failing to earn a decision in his first three starts, and losing his fourth. Yesterday's victory was his first of the year, evening his record at 1-1.

"We did the things we had to do to win," Baird said of the Pirates. "I feel better about the way we played. With Kelly (Robinette, regular shortstop) gone, we have a makeshift situation in there." Robinette, scheduled to return to Greenville today, has missed three games this week due to the death of his sister.

Both pitchers started out strong, retiring the side in order in the first inning, although Davidson did have some control problems, going to 3-1 counts on two of the three he faced in that frame.

Two walks put runners in scoring position for Ohio in the second inning, but again Davidson got out of it with a fielder's choice, and infield out and a strikeout, the first of seven he recorded.

East Carolina then struck for its first run in the bottom of the second. With one down, David Wells singled to right and David Horne followed with a hit into left. Tony Salmond's grounder to short got Horne, but moved Wells on to third. He and Salmond then worked a double steal, with Wells scoring the run for a 1-0 lead.

The Bobcats came right back and tied it up in the third. Mike Jaworski, batting in the ninth position, got the first of four hits he was to record, a double down the right field line. He moved up on an out and scored on Rich Korkate's sacrifice fly to left. That knotted it at 1-1.

In the fourth, Ohio moved ahead with another run. Rob Livchak doubled to center and moved up on a hit by Joe Ausec. With one down, Chris Tenoglia's sacrifice fly scored Livchak for a 2-1 Bobcat lead.

A third Ohio run crossed in the fifth. Jaworski led off with a single to left and Jeff Zickafosse singled to right, moving Jaworski to third. He scored on Korkate's ground out.

After that, however, Ohio offered only two more threats, in the seventh and ninth innings. In the former, Jaworski again led off with a single, moving up on a sacrifice and an error. But a fly ball ended that inning. Then, in the ninth, it was again Jaworski leading off with a hit and moving up on a wild pitch. With one out, Korkate reached on a bad hop single, but Jaworski was unable to advance, and after a second strikeout in the frame, a ground ball ended the contest.

East Carolina, held in check from the third through the fifth, finally exploded in the sixth for a couple to tie it up. Robert Wells opened up with a double to left, and scored on John Hallow's double to right. Hallow moved up on an out and scored when David Wells' fly to left was misplayed and also fell in for a double.

Then, in the seventh, the Pirates pushed over two more to wrap up the win. Salmond reached on an error and was sacrificed up. Mark Shank walked and a walk to Robert Wells loaded the bases. A passed ball let Salmond score and Hallow singled in Shank. Wells, however, was cut down at home trying to score a sixth run. East Carolina moves to 12-5 with the win, while Ohio is now 2-5.

Conley Set For Dash For State Girls Title

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

The Valkyries of D.H. Conley High School have utilized speed, determination and ball control to fashion a 27-3 record during the 1982-83 season and earn the right to play for the state 3-A Conference championship Friday at Elon College. The Sugar Jets of Enka have used size, experience and team balance to achieve the same accomplishments.

Junior forward Mechio Kornegay leads the Valkyries offensive attack with a 15 point average, while Irish Barnhill contributes 12 points per outing. Darlene Cannon 11 and Karen Barrett 10.

Kornegay scored 32 points and hauled down 15 rebounds in the regional tournament to win MVP honors while leading the team to a 50-36 win over Warren County and a 61-48 victory in the title game against Southeast Guilford.

Cannon, a senior guard, was awarded Associated Press honorable mention All-State this week for her contributions to the Valkyries title quest.

"We don't look that impressive on paper," explains Conley coach Joy James. "I don't think anyone expected us to get as far as we have. Once you get this far, you can't overlook anybody."

"I think a lot of people were surprised at the way Mechio played in the regionals, but that's the way she's played all year. Ever since the district tournament, this team has improved — reached for its peak. I think we have a lot of confidence going into the game."

Sophomore forward Lisa Mills has provided solid defensive effort for the Valkyries, but in the regional championship game Southeast Guilford elected to intentionally foul her late in the game to stop the clock. Mills sank three of her free throws to help ice the game for Conley.

"(Enka) might do the same thing; it depends on what the situation is," said James.

"Basically, what I do as a coach is be straight-forward with my players. I've told them everything I've heard in scouting reports about Enka. I have a good group of girls; they have a good mental attitude about the game."

With three of the Sugar Jets' starters at 5-10 and two off the bench standing over six feet tall, James recognizes the disadvantage her team will have in the contest.

"They're going to be about the tallest team we've faced this season," she said, but added, "I don't think they're slow, but Madison-Mayodan ran on them in the western regionals."

"Our strong points are team speed and ball handling. We've been working on our press; they turned the ball over several times against the press when they were playing Madison."

"We've seen mixed defenses like they like to run, and we've been working on it in practice. My guards are pretty smart; they're good at recognizing switches of defenses and making adjustments."

The Sugar Jets get 14.5 points a game from 5-10 center Donna Montgomery and 10.5 from point guard Jill Blankenship. Michelle Barrett and Susan Gasperson contribute 10 points each.

"From what I understand, Montgomery gets a lot of her points on pure power moves inside," said James. "Barrett and Blankenship are their outside threats, so they have a pretty balanced attack."

"The big difference in the game will be if we can hold our own on the boards. 'My main concern is that they are tall, not that they start four seniors. But I don't think either team will dominate."

"As far as experience is concerned, my girls are smart and know what it takes to win; I don't have to do or say anything to get them pumped up for the game. If anything, they get me pumped up."

Rose Girls Run To Fifth Victory

Rose High School's girls' track team continued to streak along yesterday, rolling over Farmville Central and Beddingfield.

By the time the afternoon was over, the Ramettes had piled up 108 points to Farmville's 46. Beddingfield managed only ten points.

Rose had two double winners in Jennifer Bird and Sonya Williams. Bird won the two hurdle events, capturing the 100-meter event in 15.25 seconds, a new school record. Williams won the long jump and the 100-meter dash.

One other school record was set as Angie Michel ran the 1600 meters in 5:42.

Farmville had one double winner, as Samantha Payton won the triple jump and the 200-meter.

Now 5-0, Rose travels to Beddingfield on Wednesday. Farmville is now 4-2 and hosts Conley and SouthWest Edgecombe on Tuesday.

Pack, Cavs Resume Action

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano says tonight's NCAA West semifinal game with Utah pits his team of destiny against a Cinderella squad.

Hollywood's most respected directors wouldn't touch this one. The script reeks of sentimentality, pitting as it does two of the most improbable teams in the NCAA basketball tournament.

The Wolfpack and the Utes meet tonight in the first of two NCAA West semifinal games.

Boston College battles Virginia in the other, with the two winners playing Saturday to determine one of the entries in the Final Four.

"What we have here is a team of destiny meeting a Cinderella team," said Valvano. "This is a grade B movie we have going here."

It seems a pity that one of them must lose. The Wolfpack have come from behind to win its last five games, including three contests to win the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. Then came a first-round NCAA tournament victory over Pepperdine — 69-67 in double overtime — in which State trailed by five points with 24 seconds left.

The Wolfpack followed that up with a narrow 71-70 verdict over sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas.

"We have obviously had five incredible games," Valvano said. "I'd get nervous if we ever had the lead. I wouldn't know what to do."

N.C. State, at least, has had some national recognition, ranking 16th in the final regular season poll. Utah, by contrast, spent most of the 1982-83 season shrouded in obscurity. At one point, the Utes had a 7-10 record. They had to win nine of their last 12 games to gain a share of the Western Athletic Conference title and a tournament berth. Saddled with the worst record of any of the 52 tournament teams, the Utes were considered an embarrassment.

But the "don't-believe" tag was quickly forgotten when Utah knocked off Illinois, 52-49, and then upset seventh-rated UCLA 67-61.

"When we were 7-10, if anyone had suggested we'd wind up in the final 16, I would have wondered where they broke out of," said Utah Coach Jerry Pimm. "We questioned ourselves for a while, but our tough early schedule helped us in the long run and now we're playing our best basketball of the year."

The Wolfpack, led by 6-foot-11 forward Thurl Bailey and guards Derek Whittenburg and Sidney Lowe, are considered slight favorites over the Utes, but they'll have to contain Utah's all-around forward Pace Mannion.

In the second game, fourth-ranked Virginia goes against 11th-ranked Boston College. Virginia, the West top seed, and Boston College both averaged more than 80 points per game in the regular season and coaches Terry Holland and Gary Williams are expecting a high-scoring affair, even though NCAA tournament games usually are characterized by low point productions.

The Eagles must contend with 7-4 All-America center Ralph Sampson. Virginia faces a more balanced attack in BC, which also is a team that doesn't mind pressing for the full 40 minutes.

Conley Drubs Cougars, 9-1

HOLLYWOOD — D. H. Conley's Vikings, after suffering their first loss of the year earlier this week, bounced back yesterday with a 9-1 baseball victory over SouthWest Edgecombe yesterday.

The game was a scoreless deadlock until the fourth inning when the Vikings pushed over four runs to take the lead for good. Todd Rouse and Stacey McCarter led off with a pair of singles and an infield hit by Glenn Clemons loaded the bases.

Those hits were then followed by three straight walks, to Timmy Elks, Paul Hill and Chris Via. Those served to force in three runs. Eddie Robinson then grounded out, scoring Elks with the fourth run.

Conley added two more in the fifth and scored three times in the sixth to hold a 9-0 lead before SouthWest avoided a shutout with a run in the seventh.

McCarter batted out three hits to lead Conley at the plate, while Rouse and Mitchell Cox each had two. Daniels Mills had two hits for the Cougars.

The win leaves Conley with a 4-1 record on a season. They return to action on Tuesday, traveling to Williamston. A game scheduled Saturday with North Pitt has been postponed until later in the year.

Rampants Roll To Net Victory

WILSON — Rose High School's tennis team rolled to an 8-1 victory over Wilson Fike yesterday.

The win was the fourth straight for the Rampants on the season without a defeat. The Rampants travel to Northeastern on Friday for their next match.

Details of the match were unavailable.

Deacons Must Stop Fast Break

RALEIGH (AP) — Wake Forest basketball coach Carl Tacy says his club must close out South Carolina's fast break if they expect to win tonight's National Invitation Tournament quarterfinals at Greensboro Coliseum.

"Although they don't have great speed, they are explosive getting the ball down the court on the break and we'll have to be equal to that and do well on the boards," Tacy said. "I think we'll be ready for that challenge. Those are two big keys I see right now."

Wake Forest, 19-11, advanced to the quarterfinals with an 87-80 victory over Murray State and a 75-68 decision over Vanderbilt, both on the road. South Carolina, 22-8, opened with a 100-98 verdict over Old Dominion and then knocked off Virginia Tech 75-68, both at home.

Vanderbilt rolled to a 32-25 halftime lead before the Demon Deacons made their comeback.

"It was a good victory after being behind by that many points at halftime and seeing our defensive play come back in the manner we had grown used to earlier," Tacy said. "The defensive pressure we were able to supply, certainly on the perimeter, and fullcourt I thought had a bearing on the outcome."

It also reminded Tacy that the 8 p.m. tipoff will come on the Demon Deacons' home floor.

"Vanderbilt was a good victory on the road — it seems like that's where we've been playing most of our games recently," he said. "It's good to be back home against South Carolina."

Wake Forest has received improved play from guards Danny Young and Delaney Rudd, both now healthy after a rash of injuries.

John Toms leads the balanced Demon Deacon scoring with a 14.1 point average while Young averages 13, Rudd 12.6, Alvis Rogers 11.2 and Anthony Teachey 10.

South Carolina has a size advantage with 7-foot sophomore Mike Brittain, who scored a season high of 15 points against Virginia Tech, and 6-8 Jimmy Foster.

Brittain averages only 4.5 points and 2.2 rebounds, but he's improved steadily while playing the high post. Foster, at the low post, leads the Gamecocks at 17.2 points and 8.8 rebounds per game.

"One reason we do it is Brittain is a legitimate offensive threat outside," Gamecock coach Bill Foster said. "Plus, we don't want Foster too far from the basket. We want him operating as close to the hoop as we can get him."

Oregon State Seeks Revenge

By The Associated Press
The Oregon State basketball team has a revenge motive and the home-court advantage in tonight's National Invitation Tournament game against Fresno State in Corvallis.

And Fresno State Coach Boyd Grant is a little concerned about the situation, particularly the home-court advantage.

"We sure have gone through a lot of traveling recently," says Grant, who feels his team might not be as fresh as it can be for the quarterfinal game. "They're playing at home where they're tough to beat."

"What will really beat us is we don't have much time to prepare. The Bulldogs have all the advantages in this game."

After an opening-round victory at home over Texas-El Paso, the Bulldogs flew to Lansing, Mich., on Sunday, and beat Michigan State 72-58 the next night. Then the players flew home Tuesday for a day of classes and were back on the road Wednesday, heading for Oregon and one of three NIT games tonight.

In the others, Wake Forest meets South Carolina at Greensboro, N.C., and Texas Christian plays at Nebraska. The last of the quarterfinal games will be played Friday night when Mississippi meets DePaul at Rosemont, Ill.

Oregon State will not only be trying to get a ticket to New York for the NIT semifinals next Monday night at Madison Square Garden, but will be trying to avenge a 43-42 defeat by the Bulldogs earlier this season.

"This will be a rematch and provides us with a chance to rectify an earlier loss," said Beavers Coach Ralph Miller, who recognized his Pacific Coast Athletic Association foe as "a formidable opponent."

"It also gives us an opportunity to earn a trip to New York City," added Miller, "so a lot is riding on the game and we will do our best to succeed."

Grant is hopeful his Bulldogs can play as well as they did against Michigan State.

"If we play like we did at Michigan State," he said, "we can play anybody."

The Bulldogs do have a couple of advantages. Fresno State has the nation's leading defense, giving up fewer than 54 points a game. The 30-second shot clock may also prove a plus. Fresno State had time to adjust to it during the regular season. It was used in PCAA.

"The clock has not really bothered us and wasn't expected to," noted Miller.

Meanwhile, Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy says two problems — most notably the South Carolina's fast break.

Two Regional Semis Set For Play Tonight

By The Associated Press
The college basketball season is approaching Oscar time, with the main producers and directors in Knoxville, Tenn., tonight, while the sport's biggest star takes the stage in Ogden, Utah.

The NCAA Tournament, down from 52 teams to 16, resumes with fifth-ranked Indiana meeting No. 12 Kentucky and runner-up Louisville taking on ninth-ranked Arkansas in the Midwest Regional at Knoxville.

The regional is loaded with three conference champions and features three of the four coaches still in contention who have captured a national championship. To wit:

—Big Ten champion Indiana is seeking its fifth national crown and third under Coach Bobby Knight.

—Kentucky claimed one of its five national titles under Coach Joe B. Hall.

—Louisville, the top seed in the region, hopes to give Coach Denny Crum his second national crown in four years.

Meanwhile, in the West Regional at Ogden, fourth-ranked Virginia with 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson takes on No. 11 Boston College and No. 16 North Carolina State meets Utah.

On Friday night, the East Regional at Syracuse, N.Y., pairs third-ranked St. John's with No. 18 Georgia and eighth-ranked North Carolina, the defending NCAA champion, with Ohio State.

If Kentucky and Louisville win tonight, it would set up the first collision between the two perennial powers since 1959, although the schools are located only 80 miles apart. The Louisville players are trying not to think about that.

"If we don't win (against Arkansas), there's no match-up at all," said Lancaster Gordon, the Cardinals' second-leading scorer.

"You start thinking about too many teams, it can distract you," echoed Rodney McCray.

Crum says Arkansas is probably quicker than any team Louisville has played. "We're not slow, but we're not as fast as they are," he said.

"I think our team believes they can beat them," said Coach Eddie Sutton of Arkansas. "If it were a seven-game series, we'd be in trouble, but it isn't. It's just one game."

Indiana beat Kentucky 62-59 at Bloomington in December, but the Hoosiers are without high-scoring Ted Kitchel, who underwent back surgery last month.

"I don't think the earlier game has much bearing whatsoever," said Knight.

"I really like the attitude of my team right now," said Hall. "They have a new look in their eye. They're anxious to play. Indiana is a team you have no trouble getting prepared for."

At Ogden, North Carolina State's Jim Valvano calls the Wolfpack's match with Utah "a team of destiny meeting a Cinderella team. This is a grade 'B' movie we have going here."

The Wolfpack have come from behind to win their last five games — three in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, plus NCAA victories over Pepperdine, 69-67 in double overtime, and sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas 71-70.

Sugar...

The Sugar Jets mix man-to-man with zone defenses and rely on reserves Julie Garner and Sherry Shope for back-court rest.

"In the regional tournament, the referees called a pretty tight game," Dewese said. "Our starters got in foul trouble, but our bench came in and did well."

"We take pride in our defense, as well as balanced scoring."

Barrett leads the team with 12 rebounds a game, while Montgomery hauls down nine. Blankenship hands out five assists an outing to lead that category.

"I feel like we'll stick to what we've been doing to get our 27 wins," said Dewese. "We'll have to work for the good shots and get on the boards. The team that blocks out on the boards the best usually wins."

"We're definitely ready to play. We want to go out and play to win, instead of play not to lose."

Nighttime Terror: Indigestion or Heart Attack?

Sometimes in the middle of the night I get up with a heartburn that scares me. I try to control myself but soon both my wife and I go into a panic and are sure I am having a heart attack. What can I do about this? — Mr. M.T., Tenn. Dear Mr. T.:

Heartburn is a symptom. It is often confused with indigestion and a wide variety of conditions. The burning sensation is caused when stomach acids normally found in the stomach find their way up into the esophagus.

Many people are anxious and confused and frightened when any symptom occurs in the middle of the night. Indigestion actually is a symptom complex which includes heartburn among others. A sense of fullness, a desire to belch, a feeling of abdominal distention and pain all tend to terrify people. Many are certain that these severe attacks of indigestion and heartburn are due to some heart disorder.

In most instances the heart is not the offender. But when repeated attacks of indigestion occur, the heart must be ruled out as a cause by complete medical examination, blood studies and electrocardiograms. A great many people past the age of 50 have a small hiatus hernia. Overeating, especially foods with a high fat content, can be responsible for the distress you describe.

A great many people under severe emotional tension, tend to gulp their food and swallow large amounts of air. Going to bed right after a heavy meal can be responsible for the distress you describe.

Immoderate smoking and excess alcohol must be avoided by people who are prone to indigestion and heartburn.

Concern and anxiety about a condition is not the ideal way to eliminate it.

A great many people feel better in the morning after a nighttime seizure of heartburn and indigestion. They are so relieved from their nighttime anxiety that they fail to consult the doctor. Far too many people go from heartburn to heartburn without really doing the sensible thing of seeking the basic cause for it.

Is it possible to find out what I am allergic to without taking all the skin tests? — Miss N.Y., Ala. Dear Miss Y.:

Besides the routine skin testing, there are now some computerized blood studies done to pinpoint an allergy. For those who do not want to become involved in this way, there are a number of diets which, by the process of elimination, may discover the offending substance.

It is well-known that shellfish, nuts, eggs, melon, chocolate and citrus fruits are high on the list of troublemakers.

Eliminating one group of foods at a time may help in this detecting process. Keeping an accurate record of one's food intake and reactions can sometimes find the offender and avoid extensive testing.

Army Chooses A Vehicle Supplier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has chosen AM General Corp. to produce a new family of light vehicles which will serve a variety of purposes from missile-carriers to ambulances.

The Army eventually hopes to buy 54,973 of the new High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicles for nearly $1.2 billion over a five-year period.

The new vehicles will replace the traditional quarter-ton jeep, four-wheel-drive light cargo carriers called Mules and all one-and-a-quarter-ton trucks in the Army.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♥ 2 ♦ 2 ♥ Pass
4 ♥ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♦.

An end play is a fairly simple maneuver. But it is not always easy to spot what form the end play should take. This hand from a recent team match is a case in point.

The bidding started the same way at the two tables. At one table South chose to rebid three no trump, an eminently sensible choice in our opinion. After a diamond lead, he had nine running tricks.

At the other table South elected to rebid four hearts. The safest lead would have been a trump, but West was reluctant to lead a singleton and chose instead to attack with a low spade. That quickly presented declarer with an extra trick when East correctly played low and the nine won. Now declarer had nine tricks, and it was obvious that an end play would be needed to score the tenth.

Declarer drew three rounds of trumps. West sluffed two diamonds. Now the high spades were cashed, ending in dummy, and a low club was led. East carefully played the jack of clubs. As the cards lie declarer could have gotten home by rising with the ace of clubs and exiting with a club, but that is not a natural line. Instead, he finessed. West won the king and exited with a club, and declarer eventually had to concede two diamonds for down one.

South overlooked the almost sure end play. West was marked with the ace of diamonds for his overcall, and declarer should have used that knowledge to advantage. After drawing trumps and clearing spades, declarer should have led a diamond from dummy and ducked in hand!

Best defense is for East to win the diamond and shift to a club. Declarer counters by rising with the ace of clubs and exiting with the king of diamonds, forcing West to win. Now West has the choice of cashing the king of clubs or conceding a ruff-sluff. Either way, declarer loses only two diamonds and a club. The line must succeed whenever West has the ace of diamonds, regardless of the lie of the rest of the cards.

'The Mississippi' And 'Drake'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Television leaves the security of terra firma, with one program on the high seas and another on the mighty Mississippi.

"Drake's Venture," on public television's "Masterpiece Theater" Sunday night, is more of a personality piece on the English explorer, Sir Francis Drake, than it is an exciting epic. But after a slow start, the two-hour production proves relatively see-worthy.

"The Mississippi," CBS' new vehicle for dear Papa Walton, Ralph Waite, is more apt to make you seasick. The spring trial series of six episodes is buoyantly situated on Friday nights, where it follows the final weeks of "Dallas," in the popular berth temporarily vacated by "Falcon Crest."

Don't miss the show's opening. That's the only way to piece together the background that Ben Walker (Waite) is a criminal lawyer who becomes disgruntled with big-city life. So he shucks it all to buy his own tugboat on the Mississippi, where he hangs his shingle. His caseload is heavy on excitement and danger but short on well-heeled clients.

"Why don't you ever defend people with money?" asks his sassy assistant, Stella, played by Linda G. Miller.

Ben, Stella and Lafayette Tate (Stan Shaw) share the tugboat in a living arrangement that looks like "Three's Company." But S-E-X is not the theme here; L-A-W is.

Ben is white, Lafa is black and Stella isn't a man, so all the major demographic bases seem covered. Lafa, a Vietnam veteran, keeps the tug running smoothly. He's also another legal assistant without portfolio, having joined the floating firm "to escape from the violence of his past," says CBS.

Based on Friday's first episode, the stories are standard TV. Ben defends an unpopular client (Cotter Smith) in a murder case. A scratch-the-surface investigation by the sleuth-lawyer and his two bloodhounds turns up a handful of plausible killers.

What's unique about "The Mississippi" is the on-location shooting along the river and in the state of Mississippi. Although the river is picturesque, "The Mississippi" is shallow.

Except for some sailing ships filmed under blue skies, "Drake's Venture" doesn't dazzle with its locales. An "Around the World in 1,100 Days" extravaganza, with swashbuckling battles against Spanish galleons, would have been too costly, so Britain's Thames Television opted for a more cerebral story.

It's really "Drake's Dilemma," focusing on Sir Francis' intramural squabbles on board, principally with an old friend, Thomas Doughty (Paul Darrow), who starts the seeds of a mutiny because he and his soldiers have been deceived about the purpose of the expedition. Their expected pleasure cruise is, in reality, a worldwide search-and-steal mission against the Spanish.

Drake makes an example of Doughty. He railroads him in a trial and has him beheaded. "This is an end to all traitors," Drake says, holding up the head in an unnecessarily bloody moment.

But aren't these British oh-so-very civilized? Doughty and Drake share a last supper together. "God be with you," Doughty tells Drake before his date with the executioner.

For this act of shipboard justice, Queen Elizabeth is a bit put off when Drake returns to England. But Drake knows that his "specimens" of stolen gold and silver will save his head. Bess certainly did like her baubles.

James Thaw gives a forceful, imposing performance as Drake, a complicated character who was part pirate and part explorer. He commanded with an iron fist and had a single-minded obsession in the pursuit of global navigation and booty. "Where Magellan goes, I go."

"Drake's Venture" is not Errol Flynn bounding from deck to deck. But if you want to see how the pirates and politicians of another era behaved, it's moderately interesting TV. It's not every day that TV does docudramas from 400 years ago.

Awards For Two Celebs

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Jazz musician Lionel Hampton and writer Toni Morrison will receive honorary degrees at State University of New York campuses this spring, state officials say.

In announcing the awards Wednesday, the SUNY Board of Trustees said 19 honorary doctoral degrees will be bestowed during commencement ceremonies at SUNY campuses.

Hampton will receive a doctor of humane letters degree at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City on June 3. Hampton's musical career has spanned five decades, first as a drummer and later as a vibraphonist. His playing has been seen as a key step toward the "electronic age" in music.

Ms. Morrison is author of such critically acclaimed books as "Song of Solomon" and "Tar Baby." The award-winning works have dealt mainly with the lives of blacks in America.

Ms. Morrison will receive a doctor of letters award during commencement ceremonies May 21 at SUNY's Purchase campus, the trustees said.

'GoodProgress' For Bel Geddes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Barbara Bel Geddes of television's "Dallas" is "making good progress" after triple bypass heart surgery and may be released in another week.

"She's eating regular food and she's doing very well," Cedars-Sinai Medical Center spokeswoman Virginia Bohannon said Wednesday. "She's making good progress."

Miss Bel Geddes underwent the operation March 15 after suffering a massive heart attack. She had been admitted to the hospital three days earlier because of chest pains, according to officials of Lorimar, which produces "Dallas."

Ms. Bohannon said she did not know of a release date for Miss Bel Geddes. "I would guess — and it's only a guess — that it may be another week," she said.

Barker, the longtime host of television's "Truth or Consequences," has worked with the beauty pageant since 1967. Miss Van Ark, known to television viewers as "Val" on "Knots Landing," was co-host of the pageant last year.

The Miss USA pageant is a preliminary to the Miss Universe competition, pageant spokesman Mike Butler said Wednesday.

Collegiate Slapshots

Today marks the opening of the National Collegiate Hockey Championship finals at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks. Collegiate ice hockey is as old as the game itself and goes back to 1875, when a group of students at McGill University in Montreal drew up the first formal hockey rules. In the 1880s, ice hockey teams were springing up all over Canada. In 1893, the game had become so popular that the Canadian Governor General, Lord Stanley of Preston, donated a silver cup to be awarded each year to the best hockey team in the nation. The Stanley Cup still bears his name today. The first U.S. college hockey competition began in 1895 at Yale and Johns Hopkins.

DO YOU KNOW — What team won the first Stanley Cup championship in 1894?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — East Pakistan is now called Bangladesh.

Pot Boat Crewman Get Prison Terms

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Ten South American crewmen of the marijuana mother ship Sherezade were sentenced to federal prison terms ranging from six months to three years after pleading guilty to drug charges.

Two more will be sentenced after federal court officials in Charleston receive paperwork from Puerto Rico, where the two were charged with jumping bail for another offense.

The 12, all Colombians, each pleaded guilty Wednesday before U.S. District Judge Falcon B. Hawkins to possessing nearly 58,000 pounds of marijuana with the intention of importing it into the United States.

The freighter Sherezade and its marijuana cargo were seized by the Coast Guard cutter Escape about 400 miles southwest of Bermuda last Nov. 4.

The pleas Wednesday followed a hearing that began Tuesday on evidence gathered by the prosecution. A jury trial had been set to begin Wednesday.

In plea agreements negotiated with the government, the defendants pleaded guilty to the possession charge in exchange for the dismissal of a conspiracy count.

Hawkins went along with a recommendation that seven of the men, for whom the incident represented their first offense, be sentenced to time already served awaiting trial and be deported to Colombia.

The judge handed three of the remaining five men sentences of two or three years.

'Mystery Professor' Is Believed To Be Identified

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A man who allegedly used fake identities to get teaching jobs at two Pennsylvania colleges simultaneously was a Washington, D.C., professor who complained he was paid "peanuts," according to reports published today.

The Lancaster Intelligencer Journal reported today that the mystery professor is Paul Arthur Crafton, 59, of Potomac, Md., who has taught engineering administration at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., since 1956.

The Intelligencer said the mystery professor identified himself as Crafton during a prison interview with an unnamed newspaper source, and claimed his various deceptions were prompted by a need for money to care for a daughter crippled since birth by cerebral palsy.

The Baltimore Sun said in today's editions that Crafton and his wife, Sonia, 52, have a son, Eric, 20, and a handicapped daughter, Laura, 18.

The suspect, known to authorities as "John Doe," had refused to answer questions about his personal background during a court appearance Tuesday night.

The bearded man in his 50s allegedly posed as an Australian professor, John Byron Hext, to get a teaching position last fall at Shippensburg (Pa.) State College.

At the same time, he was employed as Peter H. Pearce at Millersville (Pa.) State College, 75 miles away, authorities said.

The Intelligencer quoted the suspect as saying he had been teaching for "peanuts" at George Washington and needed money to take his daughter to Switzerland to undergo a spinal fusion operation.

Kathleen Gilchrist, 22, who grew up in Crafton's neighborhood and said she frequently cared for the couple's daughter, told the Sun that Laura Crafton had many operations and can walk with the aid of crutches.

Lancaster attorney John Pyfer, who is representing the man, said he is preparing a bail reduction request to be filed later this week. He told the Intelligencer Journal that he could neither confirm nor deny that the mystery professor is Crafton, but said the man's identity would be disclosed at the bail reduction hearing.

The professor also said he is a licensed engineer, having graduated from the University of Maryland in 1944.

Among the 16 boxes of material seized at the Lancaster apartment where the mystery professor lived were several items bearing Crafton's name, including a 1983 George Washington identity card with Crafton's picture, the newspaper said.

George Washington spokesman Barry Jagoda said the university tried unsuccessfully Wednesday to contact Crafton, who teaches only two classes, one on Thursday night and the other Friday morning.

"Special agents are having trouble keeping up with the information coming in," said Robert Gentzel, a spokesman for the Pennsylvania attorney general's office in Harrisburg.

The mystery professor is charged with five counts of forgery and five counts of tampering with public records for allegedly submitting a fraudulent resume and three letters of recommendations from fictitious people.

He is also charged with theft by deception, false swearing and tampering with public records, as well as fraudulently accepting over $14,000 in salary from Shippensburg.

He was being held in the Cumberland County Prison in lieu of $150,000 bail.

Coincidentally, a John B. Hext resigned from Wagner College on Staten Island, N.Y., last Sept. 9, said college spokeswoman Sheila O'Mara.

"It sounds very likely" the man could also be David A. Gordon, a part-time business teacher at Towson State College in Towson, Md., who resigned last March, according to Towson spokeswoman Katie Ryan.

Agents for Pennsylvania Attorney General LeRoy Zimmerman arrested the man Monday as he returned to his apartment after spring break at Millersville.

He had been fired March 10 from Shippensburg after student complaints of incompetence in his computer course and discovery of the real Hext in Australia.

State Fair Profit Eyed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina State Fair could increase profits by making several changes, including phasing out most state employees who hold part-time jobs during the fair, a state Department of Agriculture report says.

The report was written in January but released this week. It led to the resignation of fair manager Arthur K. Pitzer, effective May 1.

The recommendations include ways to increase revenues, reduce operating costs and improve fiscal control. The report suggests that fewer state employees be hired to work at the fair because they are likely to qualify for overtime.

Elimination of prizes of less than $10 dollars was also suggested in the report.

William G. Parham Jr., deputy commissioner of agriculture, said Wednesday the department did not know how much the recommendations might increase fair profits.

Audits for the past two fiscal years show that the State Fair lost $253,486 in 1980-81 and made a profit of $170,209 in 1981-82.

Parham said the State Fair would not begin implementation of the recommendations until Sam G. Rand, Pitzer's assistant, takes over the top post May 1. Some of the recommendations will be implemented this year, Parham said, and some may be rejected after further study.
