Almost Seven Inches Snowfall For Greenville During The Night

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Rather than a spring blanket of daffodils and clover, Pitt County found itself wrapped in a blanket of cold snow today as Old Man Winter took one last swipe at the area by dumping a half-foot of the white powder locally.

Just five days after the official arrival of spring, a surprise storm left the county under 6.9 inches of snow that closed schools, inconvenienced early-morning travelers and kept utility company officials biting their nails.

Greenville Utilities' Weather Station recorded 6.9 inches of frozen precipitation and .18 inch of rain from 8 a.m. Thursday through 8 a.m. today. Wind gusts of 40 mph were monitored by GUC during the night.

The snow, ice and winds left many residents without power; some temporarily, some overnight. In Winterville, where utility crews worked throughout the night battling blackouts, some residents who had been without power since 11 p.m. Thursday were still in the dark this morning, according to Town Clerk Red Nobles.

"We've still got spotty problems all over the town this morning and we've got everything and everybody we've got out working," said Nobles. "We started about 10:40 last night and we've been working since."

Nobles said electrical crews this morning hadn't been able to isolate the problem but were working with a crew from Greenville Utilities to restore power.

"I don't know at this point

TREES DAMAGED ... The weight of the snow dumped on trees on Evans Street Mall by Thursday's snowfall caused a number of them to where or how long the outages have been," he added. "I do know they've been widely scattered and some people who have been without electricity from the beginning last night are still without (this morning)."

GUC Superintendent Malcolm Green reported no major outages from the freak storm. "The system took a beating," he said. "We lost no transformers and no poles but we did have a lot of limbs on lines and a lot of services torn off houses."

Green said several outages occurred in the Clayroot-Calico area of the county.

"What we had a lot of was ice on the lines," Green said.

"We had a buildup of a quarter to a half-inch of ice on the lines. We have three wires up there and when it (ice) would melt off one and the wind would blow the other two iced against it, we had what we call fireballs. They (fireballs) appear to the supervisors as shorts so the supervisors shut the system down for about two seconds."

No serious accidents or injuries from the storm were reported this morning in Greenville.

Mark Suggs, head of Ayden's Utility Department, said outages in his town during the storm were scattered. "We really had no major problems, mostly some trees broken down on the lines," he said. "Snow is melting ... It looks like in a couple of hours everything will be back to normal."

All primary roads in the county were open this morning, according to Harold Ross, maintenance supervisor for the state Department of Transportation. "We have some icy spots on some primary roads but we do not have a road closed that I know about," said Ross.

He said DOT hoped to have all secondary roads cleared by tonight. "Overall, we're in pretty good shape," he added. "We've worked all night and we'll work all day today."

In Greenville, Public Works Director Mayo Allen said the streets were "in good shape" this morning. "The main thoroughfares are open and we're in the process of clearing residential streets now," he said. "We started at 3:30 this morning with the snow plows and motor graders and this morning we put two crews shoveling sidewalks and clearing limbs from the streets."

Allen said city sanitation crews were on the job today but services would be limited. "We'll empty all dumpsters today but backyard containers won't be serviced until tomorrow ... The snow is too deep to wheel them through the yard," he noted.

In Bethel, police reported no accidents Thursday night or Friday morning. A spokesman said that traffic was light and that main highways and principal city streets were but that smaller streets were slushy.

As of 9:30 a.m. today, no wrecks had been reported in Farmville, according to Police Sgt. Jenny Childers. She indicated traffic was light and many residents were staying home. Main arteries through the town have been cleared, according to the Farmville Public Works Department.

In Ayden, Town Manager Don Russell said roads were open this morning and traffic was "moving well" with no wrecks reported.

A spokesman for the Grifton Police Department also reported cleared streets and no wrecks.

Pitt County and Greenville schools were closed today but central offices were open. Pitt Community College staff reported to work at 10 a.m. but classes were "optional" for students. East Carolina University operated on its regular schedule.

Tax Refunds To See A Delay

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Federal income tax refunds to North Carolinians are delayed this year because more people are filing early and because the Internal Revenue Service is using old computers, an IRS spokesman says.

Spokesman Glenn Jones said 1.24 million people in North Carolina have filed their 1982 income tax returns, 15 percent more than at this time last year.

Social Security Rescue Sent To White House

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress sent President Reagan a landmark plan today to assure Social Security solvency into the next century by making workers pay more into the system, increasing the retirement age by two years and taxing benefits.

Shortly before midnight Thursday, the House approved the compromise $165 billion package 243-102. Then a 58-14 vote in the Senate early today ended two years of partisan congressional conflict over the explosive issue, and will avert the impending collapse of the system, which serves 36 million beneficiaries.

Reagan has embraced the legislation and, a White House official said today, is expected to sign it during the week of April 10. The official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said there was "no immediate pressure" to have the legislation signed sooner.

The bill follows the blueprint laid out two months ago by the National Commission on Social Security Reform, including:

- Higher payroll taxes in 1984, 1988 and 1989.
- A six-month delay in July's cost-of-living increase in benefits.
- A first-ever levy on benefits going to more affluent retirees.
- Mandatory Social Security coverage for new federal workers and employees of non-profit organizations.
- An increase in the current retirement age of 65.

Before the final vote, Senate Majority Leader Howard H.

Baker Jr., R-Tenn., pleaded for support.

"This is not a perfect bill ... but we are not a perfect body. This is not the last word, but it is the best we can make at this time," declared Baker.

With action completed on the bill, Congress has left town for a 10-day Easter recess.

The way was cleared for final congressional action after negotiators bargained for nearly 12 hours Thursday to hammer out a compromise version of the legislation which had previously passed the House and Senate.

Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., who served on the reform commission, hailed the package during brief House debate, saying, "It may not be a work of art, but it is artful work. ... It will do what it was supposed to do: It will save the nation's basic social insurance system from imminent disaster."

But in the Senate, legislators grumbled that their negotiators had given up too much to the House, and that the package relies too much on increased taxes.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., one of the conferees, attacked the compromise, saying, "I refuse to vote for fiscal irresponsibility."

The conferees dropped the Senate's "fail-safe" mechanism — devised by Long — which would automatically have reduced cost-of-living increases if the Social Security trust funds ran low.

Loss of that provision meant "you can't be sure we won't be back in 1985 and 1986 patching up Social Security again," warned Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo.

Resignations By 5 More Top Officials Of EPA

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in another round of political damage control, today accepted the resignations of five more top officials at the Environmental Protection Agency.

The resignations included John W. Hernandez Jr., who has been acting administrator for only two weeks since Anne M. Burford stepped down under congressional pressure.

Hernandez, who had expressed the hope that he would be considered for the top job permanently, came under fire himself almost immediately for his handling of a toxic chemical report while he was deputy administrator at EPA.

Also resigning were EPA General Counsel Robert M. Perry; Assistant Administrator John A.

Todhunter; John Daniel, Mrs. Burford's chief of staff; and Paul C. Cahill, director of the Office of Federal Activities at the agency.

The White House announced that Hernandez and Todhunter turned in their resignations today, and the EPA said the other three had resigned late Thursday.

Daniel resigned as chief of staff and was re-assigned to a job as special assistant where he will stay until William D. Ruckelshaus is confirmed by the Senate as the new head of the EPA. President Reagan picked Ruckelshaus on Monday to head the agency.

Nellie Hernandez said her son, John Hernandez, now plans to return to Las Cruces, N.M., where he is a tenured civil engineering professor at New Mexico State University.

Hernandez, Perry and Todhunter had been the focus of continuing congressional investigations into allegations of impropriety at the troubled agency.

EPA sources said their resignations were requested by Joe Ryan, assistant personnel director at the White House.

"The White House apparently felt if the three were out of the way, the investigations would taper off," said one agency source, who like all the rest talked on condition he not be named.

While Ruckelshaus is expected to win easy Senate confirmation, the whole process will take at least a month. Until he takes over, the sources said, Reagan will name Lee Verstandig, former assistant secretary of transportation, to be acting head of the agency.

Lee Thomas, who was brought into the agency along with Verstandig a month ago, will be named acting deputy administrator, sources said.

On Feb. 24, Reagan picked Verstandig, Thomas and several other respected career officials from other agencies to try to get the EPA back on track. Verstandig has been serving as head of EPA's agency's congressional lobbying operation.

Hernandez served only two weeks in the post of acting administrator following Mrs. Burford's March 9 resignation.

He was soon criticized in Congress for his handling of a report on dioxin contamination in Michigan.

Hernandez, who was deputy EPA administrator for two years, was accused of ordering EPA regional staffers to cooperate with Dow Chemical Co. in revising the report, which in its final version dropped a section concluding that Dow's Midland plant was the major source of dioxin contamination in the area.

Honduras Denies Charge That Soldiers Joined Rebel Force

By JUAN MALTES
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua charged that Honduran soldiers entered Nicaragua to join rebel forces trying to topple the Sandinista government, but Honduras denied it and said today it "wants peace."

The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry, in a statement issued Thursday night, said Nicaraguan troops battled Honduran invaders in the Papayas Valley, about 180 miles north of Managua.

The statement came a day after the Sandinista government said it was on the brink of war with Honduras. The Foreign Ministry said that after a skirmish the attack by Honduran soldiers was repulsed.

It said one Nicaraguan soldier was wounded in the fighting, but provided no casualty figures for Honduran soldiers. Nor did it say how many soldiers were involved in the fighting on each side.

The scale of the fighting was not known and no reporters were allowed into the fighting zone to assess the rival claims.

The Honduran Foreign Ministry said Thursday night, "At no time has the Honduran army attacked ... Nicaraguan territory."

Honduran Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica said in Tegucigalpa today after a meeting of the National Security Council, "If Nicaragua wants war, Honduras wants peace."

He said Honduras was prepared to open talks with Nicaragua to avoid an armed clash.

Earlier, the Nicaraguan government said its troops are "annihilating" rebel exiles who streamed into northwest Nicaragua from Honduras. But the insurgents' commander says his forces are fighting on several fronts and "the defeat of the leftist regime in Managua is sealed."

The Foreign Ministry said that Vice-Minister Nora Astorga addressed a note to Paz Barnica protesting two other attacks by Honduran soldiers on Nicaraguan soil. One attack allegedly occurred at 8 a.m. Thursday at the border post of Zopilota in Chinandega province, about 63 miles northwest of Managua, and the other attack took place at El Oyote, near El Espino, by a Honduran military patrol against a Nicaraguan patrol.

Meanwhile, the Sandinistas faced a new threat on the southern border with Costa Rica, where a separate exile faction announced plans to join the battle to overthrow Nicaragua's 44-month-old leftist government. Military sources said guardposts were reinforced on the Costa Rican frontier.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Mexico and Cuba sided with Nicaragua.

Judge's Drug Lecture May Help Youth

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As a captain in our local police department, I have witnessed countless tragedies due to drug-related crimes, suicides, etc.

You ran an extraordinary column entitled "Listen to the Judge" back in July 1972. That column was not only a public service, it might have saved a few young lives.

I hope you will run it again. If you do, I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

CAPT. STANLEY J. JANUS, LACKAWANNA POLICE DEPT.,
LACKAWANNA, N.Y.

DEAR CAPTAIN JANUS: I agree. It's worth a rerun, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Recently, a 17-year-old Florida boy pleaded guilty to possessing hallucinogenic drugs. He also had been charged with violence toward a Miami Beach police officer.

Judge Alfonso Sepe sentenced the youth to one year in the county stockade and four years' probation. The comments of the judge so impressed me that I ordered the transcript from the court reporter so that I could read it to my own children.

Your column is so widely read I am sending you the "lecture" Judge Sepe gave that boy in the presence of the grieving parents. I hope you will publish it and give it the national forum I think it deserves.

MRS. A. L. CATES, MIAMI, FLA.

DEAR MRS. CATES: Rarely do I devote an entire column to one letter, but I agree, this is worth it. Here it is:

Judge Sepe spoke directly to the youth and said, "Do you know who is going to serve that year? Not you; your mother and father will serve that year."

"That is what's wrong. They get sentenced. They get sentenced for a lifetime."

"You serve a year. Your body is in the stockade for a year, but their souls are tormented for a lifetime. Why? Because you are a selfish, spoiled boy, that's why."

"There is no punishment in the world that I could inflict upon you that could in any way compensate for what you are doing to your mother and father. I have not spent 5 cents raising you. I didn't know you from Adam. But your mother and father have put their lives, their hearts, their sweat, their money and everything else they have into bringing you up. And now they have to sit in this courtroom and listen to a total stranger who had nothing to do with your upbringing scold you and put you in jail."

"This is at a time when phony kids your age are yelling, 'You adults have your alcohol, we want our drugs; you have polluted our water and our air, you have polluted this and that,' and all the rest of the garbage that comes out of your mouths."

"Meanwhile, you put yourselves above everybody else. I feel sorry for you."

"I want you to think of this for one year, and the reason why I say it:

"If you are sick, a doctor will treat you and he won't be on drugs. The lawyer who represents you won't be high on drugs, and the people in whose custody you'll be won't be on drugs."

"Your astronauts are not on drugs, and your president is not, and your legislators are not."

"And your engineers who build the bridges that you drive across and the tunnels that you drive through are not on drugs, and those who build the planes that you fly in and the cars that you drive are not."

"Neither are those who build the bathrooms that you stink up with your lousy, rotten drugs."

"None of them have been on drugs, and this is because of people like your mother and father."

"But in the world of the future," Sepe went on, "the same may not be true. Teachers, doctors, lawyers, legislators — products of the new drug-oriented generation — may well be high as kites."

"You won't know whom to send your child to, or whom to trust your life to."

Sepe sighed and closed the case file.

"Let's see what kind of world you leave to your children," he said, "before you talk about the world that we left to ours."

Ayars a generation ago.

The letters arrive at a retirement complex where Mrs. Ayars is unable to read them herself, because she is nearly blind. So her husband of 51 years, James, reads them to her.

"I answer every letter I get," said Mrs. Ayars, 83, smiling and touching her husband's hand. "I know the minute a child writes a letter he is looking for an answer."

For 40 years, since Mrs. Ayars' first book was published, youngsters have written — to ask questions about the characters, to seek advice about writing, or simply to say they enjoy the books.

"One said, 'That's the funniest book I've ever read; I laughed from 10 to 10:30,'" Mrs. Ayars recalls, chuckling herself.

Her 21 books were written from this university town, but nearly all are based on the people and places of Appalachia, where she was born.

It was after a trip to her home town of Poor Fork, Ky., around 1940, that Mrs. Ayars knew what she would do. "When I got home I knew that was the area and those were the people I wanted to write about," she said. "Appalachia was in my blood and I didn't know it."

The youngest of nine children, the writer-to-be learned to read from the pages of the Louisville Courier-Journal that served as wallpaper in the family farmhouse. At age 8, she wrote a poem, and her oldest sister assured her some day she would be an author.

Mrs. Ayars worked her way through college, taught school, then worked for publishers. Editing the work of others helped prepare her for her own writing career.

She met her future husband, also an editor and author, in Chicago and they were married in 1931. The couple moved to downstate Urbana six years later.

When a friend had a book published, Mrs. Ayars knew it was time for her to write. "I thought, if she can write a book, I can too."

Her first work, "Barrie and Daughter," was published in 1943.

A series called the Bonnie Fairchild books was based on Mrs. Ayars' own childhood. She and her brothers and sisters were the characters. The series developed because of her daughter's fascination with stories her mother would tell her as she helped dry dishes.

"To Becky Jean the stories were exciting because the world of my childhood was vastly different from her world. When she walked to school, for instance, she had to look for cars at every street crossing. When I went to school across the mountain, I had to look for bears."

Her books are full of tales of life in the country. They deal with likeable characters, when there is conflict it is civilized, and they teach children about love and understanding.

Mrs. Ayars always had wanted to write a Christmas book, and had several elements of the plot in mind, but they hadn't jelled.

"One morning, I woke up about 2 o'clock, and it came to me," she recalled. "I started on it the next day, and I wrote it in very short order."

The result was one of her most popular books, "A Certain Small Shepherd," published in 1963 and still in print.

"For me, the hardest thing about writing is getting the first draft of a book on paper," said Mrs. Ayars, who always wrote her manuscripts in longhand. "I can't think creatively on the typewriter; whatever I write sounds mechanical."

When she felt a manuscript was nearly perfect, it had to meet two tests.

"A story is not really good unless it is good read aloud," she says.

Then, she and her husband would sit down on the couch and go over it together.

"He'd make me write it until I got it right. Yes, I'd get mad, but I knew it was always for the best, so I didn't stay mad."

One of the most rewarding days of Mrs. Ayars' life came in February 1965, when she learned that the residents of her home county, Harlan, had voted to tax themselves to build the first library in Poor Fork, now called Cumberland. They decided it would be called the Rebecca Caudill Public Library.

Now, Mrs. Ayars and her husband entertain at their apartment, and Mrs. Ayars answers mail and "reads" by listening to books on audio tapes.

"I've been thinking maybe I should write again, but after that last book (in 1976), I thought I had said all I had to say," she said.

Zinc Can Cause Problems

Zinc is now being promoted as a cure for a wide variety of ills. People who dose themselves with large amounts of zinc can end up with a variety of problems, says Sarah Hinton, extension nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University.

"Zinc is important and deficiency does exist," says the nutritionist, "but anyone who eats enough animal protein should have no trouble getting the recommended daily allowance of 12.5 milligrams a day." Vegetarians are safe if they eat enough milk, eggs and whole grains.

The signs of zinc deficiency include a loss of appetite, decreased sense of taste, the failure of a child to grow, skin changes and the slow healing of wounds. Acne may also respond to a zinc supplement.

But people who have taken too much zinc lose muscle coordination, are dizzy, sleepy, lack energy and can develop kidney failure and anemia, Mrs. Hinton says.

"Anyone who has lost his or her sense of taste should not jump to the conclusion that most zinc is needed. Many conditions can alter the sense of taste. People who feel they may have a zinc deficiency should consult a doctor, rather than treat themselves with supplements," the extension specialist says.

Anyone taking more than 15 milligrams of zinc a day may aggravate a copper deficiency. Taking more than 2 grams of zinc sulfate a day will irritate the digestive system and cause vomiting; in fact, zinc sulfate is used to induce vomiting.

"We normally have about 2 grams of zinc in our bodies. It can be found in the eye, liver, muscles and male reproductive organs. It is involved with DNA and protein synthesis, the action of insulin, immune reactions and is needed for the body to use vitamin A," Mrs. Hinton says.

Child Fingerprinting Is Growing In Popularity

By KATHY HORAK
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —
Policeman Gary Armstrong grasped Nicholas Paz's hand, rolled his fingertips across the ink pad and pressed them one by one on a white identification form.

Then he fingerprinted
Nicholas' teddy bear.
Across the nation, children like 3-year-old Nicholas are being fingerprinted in the hopes that the prints will never be needed. Police call the growing popularity of kid-prints a reaction to the horror of child abductions and the tragedy of child custody battles.

"The fear that kidnaps and abductions bring are a sign of the times, as are the disintegration of families, the rise in divorce, the fighting over children in custody matters," says Capt.
Robert Taylor of the Los Angeles police juvenile division. "I think parents are looking for any additional thing that can help protect their children."

Programs to fingerprint children have been started in New York, Florida, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Virginia, Utah, Wyoming, New Jersey and other states. Whether this protects youngsters is disputed.

"If it ever gets to the point where you need fingerprints, you're really in trouble," says Peggy Berger. She was among the mothers who recently brought their children to a fingerprinting session at Mary B. Eyre Children's School in Claremont — where young Nicholas became a marked boy.

"It doesn't really protect children, it just provides a method of assisting police in the event that becomes necessary," Taylor says.

Capt. Frank Sano of Orange County's Westminster Police Department notes, "It could help a great deal if we found a child and they couldn't remember who they were. But if you haven't got anybody to match (fingerprints) to, they're absolutely worthless."

Other methods of identification are considered more important.

Jay Howell, chief counsel to the Senate Labor and Human Resources subcommittee on investigations and an expert on missing children, says it is critical for parents to have a clear, recent, close-up photograph of their child's face to help searchers.

Police and parents
throughout Southern California are organizing printing sessions.
Taylor says his department expects 500,000 children eventually will participate for free, thanks in part to a $5,000
grant from a civic booster group, Patrons of the Children.

One of the first fingerprinting programs was started last September by police in Salt Lake City.

They initiated Child Watch after a series of summer kidnappings, two of which became homicide cases.

"We did have a bit of opposition from a child psychologist saying we shouldn't be frightening children, but the school board and PTA supported us," says Officer Marcia Jensen of the department's Crime Prevention Unit.

"We're not trying to scare them or make them leery of everyone, just trying to teach them to protect themselves."

Child Watch incorporates films and lectures that once were part of its "Stranger Danger" program, as well as a karate expert who shows children defensive techniques for escaping a would-be abductor.

Ms. Jensen said Child
Watch has reached 23,000 children in Salt Lake City.

The comprehensive approach is also favored by Child Find, a non-profit organization in New Paltz, N.Y., founded in 1980 to locate missing children.

Spokeswoman Kristin Cole
Brown says fingerprinting projects could be "obscuring the more important need for general education of children and an awareness of the dangers they face."

Child Find offers a lesson plan to help teachers explain to students how they can protect themselves and what they might do if abducted.
Ms. Brown says teachers also are encouraged to watch for pupils who might themselves be kidnap victims.

She cites the case of Steven Staynor, the California boy who was kidnapped by Kenneth Parnell in 1972 and held eight years before he fled in March 1980.

"The man (Parnell) enrolled him in several schools up and down the coast," she notes, but teachers never realized the student named "Dennis Parnell" was Staynor.

In more than two years,
Child Find has located 300 missing children.

Not once did the group use fingerprints. Ms. Brown notes they were of no help in the organization's toughest unsolved case: the disappearance eight years ago of Joanna Harriet, daughter of agency founder Gloria Yerkovich.

Ms. Yerkovich believes Joanna was kidnapped by her father, who abandoned his family when the child was born, eventually resurfaced, and was last seen taking Joanna on a court-ordered, two-week custody visit outside New York.

Ms. Brown also objects to the business that kidnappers has created for some companies,
"charging $5 to $25 for what's basically an index card and ink pad."

Robert Dearing, president of Identiseal in Kansas City, Mo., sells child identification booklets like those used in Salt Lake City for 53 cents to 75 cents each, depending on the size of an order.

Rock Lobster Tails Suit Lent

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
DEAR CECILY: My husband often orders broiled South African lobster tails when we go to a seafood restaurant. During Lent I'd like to broil them at home for him and a few guests. I'd be grateful if you would tell me how to do so. I'd also like to know how to cook the lobster tails to use for a salad or for lobster rolls. — EAGER.

DEAR EAGER: There's a way
I particularly like to prepare South African lobster tails for broiling. You can use either a sharp heavy knife or a kitchen scissors and a knife. I prefer the scissors and knife.

Use lobster tails that weigh from 4 to 6 ounces. Thaw them by holding them under running cold water. With a sharp heavy knife, cut through the hard shell down the center of each (including the thin flat part of the tail) and through the flesh, taking care not to cut through the underside membrane. Or with a kitchen scissors, cut through the hard shell down the center of each (including the thin flat part of the tail); then with a sharp knife cut down through the flesh of each, taking care not to cut through the underside membrane. With your hands, bend each tail so it opens as flat as possible. Wrap a small piece of foil over the end of each tail to prevent scorching.

Place the tails, flesh side down, in a single layer in a foil-lined shallow pan. Broil about 4 inches from high heat for 5 minutes.
Turn the tails flesh side up; cup foil around tails; spoon the sauce you are using over the flesh.

Continue broiling until flesh is opaque through (test by cutting into a tail) — 5 to 10 minutes more. Remove foil from tails.
Remove tails to a serving platter or to dinner plates and spoon any sauce in the foil over them.

For sauce you can use butter melted with a smashed clove of garlic. Or you can use a Japanese-style sauce made with soy sauce, sherry, sugar and thinly sliced garlic and fresh ginger-root.

To cook 4-to-6 ounce South African lobster tails for use in lobster salad or lobster rolls, thaw the tails under cold running water. Drop them into a generous amount of boiling water. When the water comes to a boil again, boil the tails until the flesh is opaque through — 4 to 5 minutes.
Drain at once and drench with cold water. With a kitchen scissors cut away underside membrane. Gently pull the meat away from the hard shell and cut into the size you want for salad or lobster rolls.

Hope these directions will help you prepare lobster tails your husband and guests will enjoy. —
C.B.

He is director of Retired School Personnel in Raleigh. He spoke on the health insurance of state employees, the EDS program which has replaced Blue Cross-Blue Shield. According to Sugg, the EDS is a "good, sound program which gives high quality service."

He answered questions after his presentation. He was introduced by Lillie Weaver, chairman of the program committee.

O.E. Dowd, chairman of the legislative committee, said, "That the State Retirement Fund is committed to a salary increase beginning in July and when present state employees get any increase, retired teachers will receive an increase that combined with the increase from the retirement fund will equal the amount present employees will receive." President Vernon Ward said the state meeting will be held April 14-15 at the Mission Valley Inn in Raleigh. The chapter is entitled to send 19 delegates. Three new members were recognized including Margaret Hodges, Elaine M. Schael and Lucille Harris Evans.

Nader ... Always There

Just as the need for consumer advocacy will never die, its prime spokesman (Ralph Nader) just keeps on going.

Granted, there are times when the Nader words of warning, criticism (even nagging) resemble a broken record; but the fact that he is knowledgeable and persistent in his field is comforting to a public frequently abused in the past and present as well as in the foreseeable future.

Nader, the guest speaker for the East Carolina University spring lecture-seminar indirectly reaffirmed an old saying that people get the kind of government, and representatives, they deserve — blaming a lack of citizen activity and few citizen organizations for the public's plight.

He sees this largely as the crux of North Carolina's "problem" of poor leadership. In his view North Carolinians send poor spokesmen to Congress; and he enumerated some of the faults he found in their ranks.

His judgment, too, is open to doubt.

As a zealot for causes of environmental protectionism and consumer advocacy, he is subject to the "tunnel vision" besetting all enthusiasts.

He cannot understand why a lawmaker from North Carolina would work to protect tobacco and tobacco interests; nor does he relate to the concept of cutting governmental interference in individual lives or the role of private business.

The speaker is a believer in organized citizen activity and opined North Carolina was at "the bottom of the list" insofar as citizen activity was concerned.

We wonder about that. This newspaper deals daily with activities of citizen organizations and there are days when in our eyes North Carolina is top-heavy with such groups. (No purely local phenomena, we're sure.)

Most people, we suspect, agree with the Nader observation there is a low level of trusteeship in government on taking care of public lands; but then, the quality of governmental trusteeship in other fields is just as frequently subject to feelings of dismay.

On the whole, Ralph Nader is a welcome and thought-provoking change from the legion of crusaders that range the length and breadth of the land.

His credentials are such that he can speak with confidence that what he says carries credence, whether listeners like it or not.

More Stable Economy

Living by the sword and dying by the sword might be the best analogy to apply to the current world oil glut.

The government's consumer price index showed an actual decline last month, a situation which hasn't been seen since 1965.

The decline was due almost entirely to the plummeting price of gasoline, which dropped 6.7 percent. Gas prices have fallen 10.8 percent during the past four months and fuel oil prices dropped 4.7 percent last month.

Food and housing costs were unchanged, no doubt held stable by the drop in energy prices. Only medical costs kept rising.

The double-digit inflation of recent years was attributable to soaring energy costs brought on by the iron hold OPEC had on oil pricing. Now supply and demand is working and the price of energy is falling. Just as the high prices of oil worked through the entire economy so, too, will lower prices.

If it means trouble for OPEC, it should mean a far more stable economy for the United States.

Differences In A Name

WASHINGTON (AP) — You'd think that in a 13-hour congressional debate, like the one the House had the other day on a proposed nuclear weapons freeze, lawmakers would run out of different ways to say the same thing. They didn't.

They just keep getting more and more elaborate in their comparisons.

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., compared the nuclear arms race to "two people standing in a gasoline puddle, one with 10 matches and one with nine, arguing over which can start a fire."

Rep. William Ratchford, D-Conn., viewed the arms race as a "genie let out of the bottle ... that genie is no longer a genie or a genius. That genie has become a monster."

Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., denounced the freeze resolution as "the first sip of the bitter cup." Rep. James Martin, R-N.C., compared it to a misguided gambit "in a careless chess game."

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said the resolution, in calling for what amounted to both a freeze and a reduction, had become "a carnivorous vegetarian." Rep. Ed Bethune, R-Ark., accused freeze proponents of "shoveling smoke."

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., didn't offer an analogy; just some fractured English. He kept referring to the "mutual and verifiable" freeze as "a variable freeze."

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., marched onto the Senate floor resplendent in a bright red vest, a shiny gold watch chain dangling from his pocket, and wearing a wide tie with red, white and blue stars.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., stopped in his tracks and gave Byrd a bewildered glance. "Am I bright enough for you, Howard?" Byrd asked.

"If you were any brighter, I'd be blind," Baker replied.

Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., recently declared that "women, because of certain lifestyle issues, are less likely to have coronaries and more likely to have babies." She spoke at a news conference on economic equity legislation and was referring to the price of life insurance for men and women.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who was at the same news conference, confessed to some enlightenment. "I learned something new here this morning. I learned that women are more likely to have babies."

With everyone in the room laughing, Ms. Mikulski retorted: "You have to begin somewhere."

RALEIGH — Much has been made of the mandatory jail sentences drunk drivers will receive under Gov. Jim Hunt's "Safe Roads Act." But the greater majority of North Carolinians convicted of "Driving While Impaired" won't be going to jail after the law goes into effect Oct. 1. Instead, their punishment will consist of community service work.

For a while, it looked like nobody in government wanted the job of running these community service programs. Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, told his Expansion Budget Committee recently that neither the sheriffs nor the state's probation officers wanted responsibility for the estimated 50,000 people who'll be up for community service each year.

The job is apparently going to the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety. In an interview, Heman Clark, department secretary, said he has some preliminary plans for the program.

Defendants will be charged a fee to participate in the community service program and this money will be used to hire coordinators in each of the state's 35 judicial districts. The coordinator will be hired by, and report to, the chief District Court judge. Calrk estimates that the coordinators will be paid about $18,000 a year.

Clark said he wants the programs to be fairly uniform across the state and to really amount to work which will help the public. The work must be visible to the public but Clark says he doesn't support the idea of having the workers wear clothing that identifies them as being on community service.

Community service sentences will be for a minimum of 24 hours. As Clark envisions the program, the judge will sentence the defendant with a specific number of hours and then refer him to the coordinator. The coordinator will have developed community service assignments for the people who are sent to him. He'll also be responsible for assuring that those sentenced to do the work actually put in their time.

So what kind of work will you be doing if you are convicted of drunken driving? Clark sees you in the county courthouse, sweeping floors or washing windows. Maybe you'll work for the recreation department getting the local ballfields in shape for summer, planting flowers in the town square or cleaning up the community center. He also likes an idea developed in Florida — putting people to work helping ambulance services. "Let them see what the drunk drivers are doing on the roads."

Clark says this will be public work rather than work for non-profit organizations. You'll work for the city or county. There won't be any jobs through local churches or senior citizens' centers. "Non-profit organizations would be getting away from the uniformity, the accountability and the visibility. For this idea to work, the public must see this as a sanction and we need those fundamentals if this is to be a sanction," Clark said.

Still, these groups might be able to get some of these workers for small projects. If a garden club, for example, wants to plant bushes at the entrance to the town, then they could go to the town council for help. If the council agreed, workers could be routed to the project through the town's maintenance department, Clark said. This way, the town would be responsible for making sure the full sentence was served.

Watkins says he doesn't think the state will save any money through community service. Rather, "there's some possibility that we'll get some things accomplished for the good of the public that would not have been accomplished otherwise."

Endorsement Is No Great Boost

WASHINGTON — Dr. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, is quietly lobbying backstage at the White House for another term for Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board — an alliance based on fear of a real economic boom.

Gloomy though he is in public, Feldstein sounds even more pessimistic in private about the economy. That coincides with Volcker's long-faced statements that caused instant distress in the bond and stock markets. Not by accident, Feldstein and Volcker have been telephone pals lately, discussing the economy.

This doom-and-gloom alliance heightens tension surrounding President Reagan's urgent decision whether to keep Volcker after his term as chairman ends Aug. 6. With the president's men in no doubt that vigorous economic growth is essential for his re-election, willingness to risk displeasure from the financial community by sacking Volcker is rising in the White House West Wing, as it is among conservatives in Congress.

Certainly, Feldstein's endorsement is no great boost these days for Volcker's retention. The eminent Professor Feldstein, who charged down from Harvard late last summer as a take-charge, no-nonsense realist, has lost credibility not only because his growth estimates were unrealistically pessimistic but because he has been reluctant to retreat from them. Presidential aides who were singing Feldstein's praises six months ago now grumble that he is trying to protect his reputation in anticipation of leaving Washington in 1985.

Whether or not Feldstein's persistent pessimism is partly a matter of professional self-interest, he is truly an old-fashioned conservative who can tolerate protracted recession but sees in a too-rapid recovery the dangers of a renewed inflationary blowout. Taking that crabbed view of the world, Feldstein has found a soul mate in Volcker.

"I don't think there's any question but that the Fed is tightening (money)," one Treasury official told us. Another high-level economist in the administration agrees, citing the drop in gold from $500 to $450 an ounce. Volcker's critics, both downtown and on Capitol Hill, are concerned about further tightening that would abort the recovery.

That concern is nourished both by Volcker's alliance with Feldstein and by his recent rhetoric. On March 8, Volcker's congressional testimony hinted at a return by the Fed to "monetarist" efforts to target the money supply that produced more than three years of nearly unrelieved recession during his watch at the central bank; simultaneously, Feldstein has shown new interest in the need to control M-1 as a measure of the money supply. On March 9, Volcker and Feldstein appeared before the National Association of Manufacturers as the Gloom Brothers, warning that economic optimism may be the worst of sins.

To Rep. Jack Kemp, as expressed in a March 10 letter to Volcker, the chairman's statements were "ominous hints that the Federal Reserve will return to the disastrous policy of mechanical monetarism abandoned only last year." He told Volcker "no one knows what to expect from the Federal Reserve," which means the U.S. and the world must be "wrecked by the appearance of confusion, inconsistency and indecision."

Most important, published reports that chief of staff James Baker and his lieutenants in the West Wing favor another term for Volcker to please Wall Street are premature, at the least.

Strength For Today

One of the greatest statues fashioned by human hand is Michaelangelo's "David." Thousands of people every year stand before this marvelous creation and exclaim over the genius of its creator.

But most people do not realize that this statue was hewn out of a piece of marble which some previous sculptor, lacking skill, had only hacked and marred. For years it lay half buried beneath rubbish. At last Michaelangelo saw it. He went to work on it and when he was finished it was a noble work of art.

The man who hacked the piece of marble into disfigurement was a bungler. Michaelangelo was an artist. Here, in a figurative sense, we can see how God finds consecrated servants to work on the rejected and despised in the human community.

The incident has much to teach us if we have ears to hear, eyes to see and sense enough to be instruments in the hands of God.

It's Not Really A Winking Situation

to win the hearts and minds of the Salvadoran people?"

"Of course. That's why we're sending you there. One of your missions is to make sure the government troops don't kill too many peasants or burn down too many villages that are suspected to be harboring left-wing fighters."

"How do I do that?"

"The same way you did it in Vietnam. You explain to the government soldiers that rape, murder and pillaging will not be tolerated by President Reagan. That should stop them."

"It certainly should. Anything I ought to know about human rights?"

"We're not sending you down there to train anyone in human rights. The government of El Salvador has just been given a clean bill of health on human rights by the American government, so I don't want to see anything in your reports on human rights violations on our side. But if you see any committed by the other side, we want to hear about them pronto."

"I understand, sir. How is the morale of the El Salvadoran troops?"

"Excellent, although there have been a number of desertions. Your job is to see that the government troops don't go over the bill."

"Can I shoot them?"

"No, but you can authorize one of the officers you're advising to shoot them. But, for God's sakes, don't put anything in writing."

"How do we know if we're winning the war?"

"We're working up a body count system at the Pentagon that will soon go into effect. We'll expect body count reports from you every day."

"It sounds more like Vietnam all the time."

"This is not a Vietnam operation, and you're not to refer to it as such. This is a rescue operation to uphold a democratic protect a freedom-loving people from being taken over by the Communists."

"I gotcha, sir."

"Stop winking. I'm serious. Now you were chosen to be one of 110 American advisers to turn this war around."

"That's not a lot of advisers for a full-scale guerrilla war."

"It's only a beginning. Once we get enough of you in there, Congress will be in no position to stop the president from sending in more American troops to support you."

"I hope so. I don't want to get my keister shot off."

"Sergeant, I have utmost confidence that you can do the job. And one more thing, don't talk to the press. They'll only write how incompetent and corrupt the El Salvador military officers really are."

"Are they?"

"That's top secret information."

Strange, Unexplained Events In Soviet Leadership

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Strange and unexplained events surrounding the Soviet leadership this week caught

Western analysts off guard, prompting reassessments of the power lineup inside the secretive world of Kremlin politics. Word that Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov was hospitalized with heart and kidney problems until early this week leaked on Wednesday. Dmitri F. Ustinov, the defense minister who is assumed to be an Andropov ally, made an unusually quick return to Moscow from Budapest on Tuesday — the same day he left for an official visit to the Hungarian capital.

On Thursday, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, another presumed Andropov ally, received an additional title — first deputy premier.

Throughout all these developments, Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov was in Yugoslavia on a state visit.

In the four months since Andropov became the top Soviet leader, government sources have portrayed him as enjoying total control of the Kremlin power structure.

But the subtle leak of his hospitalization raises the possibility of a political move against him by an enemy in the Politburo, the Soviet Union's most powerful political body. Or his own people may have put out the word, seeking to stifle rumors of a more serious illness.

In this tightly controlled society, information is one of the most valuable political commodities. Its availability usually means it was distributed for a reason, especially when it concerns the man assumed to be the most powerful in the Soviet Union.

It remains unclear how Ustinov's unusual one-day visit to Budapest fits in to the week's events. Western diplomats contend his quick return was on an emergency basis, to assure his presence for a vote on the new job for Gromyko. But Soviet sources say Ustinov had never planned to be gone longer than a day.

Another question is why Gromyko, who is 73 and has led the Foreign Ministry for 26 years, suddenly was given a first deputy premiership — a job traditionally confined to economics.

The answers are not apparent to outsiders, but the sudden appearance of so many important and puzzling developments in the internal machinations of this closed political system could signal important shifts in the power structure.

Soviet sources, who spoke on condition that they remain anonymous, said Gromyko's new job simply was a kick upstairs in advance of his retirement as foreign minister. It puts him in a senior position to any incoming successor and would make him a potential elder adviser.

But Western diplomats, who study Kremlin politics carefully, said Andropov pushed Gromyko into the new position to control the career of Geidar A. Aliev, also a first deputy premier.

Aliev's loyalty to Andropov has been questioned because he was a protégé of Leonid I. Brezhnev, Andropov's predecessor. Brezhnev, who died Nov. 10, was believed to have favored his longtime aide Konstantin U. Chernenko to become the top Kremlin leader. Chernenko is thought to still harbor this ambition.

By moving his presumed ally Gromyko into a job that is equal in rank to Aliev's, Andropov has opened the way to make Gromyko, not Aliev, the next premier.

That would be important to Andropov's consolidation of power because the current premier, Tikhonov, also is believed to be in the opposition camp with Chernenko.

The six players in this drama constitute half the membership in the 12-man Politburo. The six members who have not been mentioned in the week's events are considered minor or regional representatives on the secretive body, and their positions are less defined and less important except as swing voters.

The way the votes are cast could become evident next week when, Soviet sources say, a plenary meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee may convene.

Such meetings typically deal with personnel matters among the higher echelons of the Soviet power structure as well as with economic planning and foreign policy.

Soviet sources also say the impending meeting might be postponed until June. A delay presumably would signal that Andropov had not consolidated his forces and was seeking more time before calling such a major party gathering.

Evangelist's Church Is Investigated By IRS

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has refused to release documents involving television evangelist Jim Bakker, saying Bakker and his Heritage Village Church in Charlotte, N.C., are under preliminary investigation by the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS proceeding was disclosed Thursday by the FCC. Several requests for documents involving Bakker had been filed under the Freedom of Information Act.

"We're not opening those files because the IRS has informed us it is in the preliminary stages of an on-going investigation," said FCC spokesman William Russell. "As long as another federal agency is conducting a proceeding, the files will remain closed." IRS officials refused comment. Les Witmer, an IRS spokesman in Atlanta, said it was the service's practice "neither to confirm nor deny the existence of on-going investigations. There's nothing I can say."

Efforts to contact Bakker and his spokesman, Brad Lacey, were unsuccessful Thursday. A switchboard operator said the church's offices had been closed because of a spring snowstorm.

Bakker in the past has consistently denied any wrongdoing.

One week ago, the Justice Department said it would not pursue an investigation of Bakker that was undertaken by the FCC more than three years ago.

The investigation of Bakker, a prominent evangelist who is host of a daily religious program, "PTL Club," that is broadcast on dozens of TV stations, focused on allegations that he had solicited donations from viewers for overseas missionary work but had used the money for other projects.

After investigating the matter for almost three years, the FCC decided last December to end its own inquiry by allowing Bakker's church to give up ownership of WJAN-TV in Canton, Ohio. WJAN-TV was the only station that Bakker's church owned directly.

At the same time, the agency announced it was forwarding the results of its staff investigation to the Justice Department. The FCC said Thursday it also had informed the IRS "that it might want to look into the matter."

Marketing Expert Says Specialty Vital

An East Carolina University marketing specialist says professionals should use marketing techniques to achieve success in today's increasingly well-managed and competitive business environment.

Dr. Edward W. Wheatley, chairman of marketing in the ECU School of Business, said a "negative bias toward marketing is usually an emotional reaction to generalizations, and stereotypes the professional associates with marketing activities ... It is not a reaction based on knowledge or experience."

The ECU professor is the author of the book "Marketing Professional Services" released recently by Prentice-Hall Publishers. The book is a step-by-step marketing guide for accountants, architects, health care specialists, attorneys, engineers and consultants.

"One of the greatest misconceptions about marketing is that marketing is advertising. While marketing does include advertising, the field is much broader and more complex," Wheatley says.

In "Marketing Professional Services," Wheatley explains how to attract and retain clients through marketing research and offers suggestions on developing a firm's image and how to convey that image through written and personal communications with clients.

The book also provides a self-administered diagnostic test called an "MPS Audit" to determine a firm's weaknesses and strengths and it concludes with a chapter on professional fees.

Prior to joining ECU in October, Wheatley was a professor of marketing at the University of Miami, Fla. He is the author of more than 20 published articles and monographs and two other books, "Values in Conflict" and "Modern Marketing."

Hotel, Motel Tax Proposal Assailed

By The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Business representatives Thursday attacked a proposal to levy a hotel and motel room tax in Mecklenburg County, saying the tax could spread to other parts of the state.

Charlotte and Mecklenburg County officials supported the measure Thursday before the House Finance Committee. The bill, introduced by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, would levy a 3 percent tax on rooms and requires the money raised to be used locally to promote the area as a tourist and convention center.

The bill has drawn widespread support from local legislators and business groups.

"This bill would have an obvious domino effect and eventually would spread throughout the state," said Bill Turner, legislative spokesman for the N.C. Hotel and Motel Association. "It's opposed by the vast majority of the travel industry in North Carolina."

Bill Lewis, general manager of the Ramada Inn in Charlotte, said North Carolinians on vacation and state employees on business trips would bear most of the tax burden.

"I loathe, abhor, detest and despise any taxes, especially new taxes," said Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg. "But...we firmly believe this will create new jobs and benefit our economy."

"A local occupancy tax is very important to the Charlotte-Mecklenburg area, not just for our growth, but for our survival as a city that wants to attract conventions," said Joan Zimmerman, chamber of commerce vice president for public affairs.

In other legislative action:

Primarys
Rep. Ken Spaulding, D-Durham, filed a bill that would reduce the number of state political primary runoffs held at taxpayers' expense.

The bill is a slightly watered down version of one Spaulding introduced earlier, only to see it killed in committee.

The current bill would allow runoffs only if the winner received less than 41 percent of the original vote or if the margin of victory was less than 3 percent. Present law allows the runner-up to call for a runoff if the winner received less than 50 percent.

Spaulding said he introduced the bill after failing to receive enough support to bring the previous measure before the House as a minority report. He said some members of the House Committee on Elections Laws had been criticized for parliamentary maneuvers that killed the bill without letting it be amended.

"This will introduce some of the concerns that did not come out with the previous bill due to parliamentary procedures," he said. "I hope it will get a fair hearing this time."

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, who spearheaded the attack on Spaulding's first bill, said he would wait and see what happened with the new bill.

Spaulding's previous bill had a 40 percent cutoff figure and no requirement of a clear winner. He said the 41 percent figure in the new bill was necessary to make it substantially different from the one that failed, adding that the figure could always be amended.

Separation of Powers

The House Judiciary I Committee adopted a committee substitute for a bill that would redefine the responsibilities of the executive and legislative branches of government.

Chairman Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said the bill would not be reported to the full House until next week, to give members time to absorb the changes.

"I think we came out of this committee pretty good," said Stephanie Bass, who represented the Department of Administration at committee meetings on the bill.

The bill was drafted after two court cases found the two branches of state government had begun to overlap.

Auditor Revision

A bill filed to revise statutes governing the State Auditor's Office would shore up its independence and make it more efficient, State Auditor Ed Renfrow said.

He said the bill, filed by Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, would make it clear that the state auditor would not serve on any boards his office audits. It would also have the auditor file reports directly to the General Assembly, instead of to the Advisory Budget Commission.

Renfrow said that was designed to comply with ongoing changes in the definition of state branches of government.

In addition, the bill would give the auditor the power to approve any audits of state government done by outside agencies. Renfrow said that would improve efficiency by reducing redundancy.

Much of the bill uses language from a model act governing the Federal General Accounting Office, Renfrow said.

Other changes include a relaxation of provisions requiring annual audits of all state departments and the requirement of reports from state agencies.

"That will help move the comprehensive annual financial statement for the state more quickly," he said. "Financial statements over six months old don't have much meaning."

Andrew Jackson

Sens. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, and Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, filed a bill to appropriate $53,000 over two years for research into an Andrew Jackson memorial.

Although the exact birthplace of the seventh president is disputed, it's known that he was born in the Waxhaws area along the North Carolina-South Carolina border.

Tax Credits

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, filed a bill to provide an additional income tax personal exemption for people aged 70 and older. The credit would apply only to people whose net income is $10,000 or less.

Rep. John Gillam III, D-Bertie, filed a bill to provide an income tax credit for buying conservation equipment for farming and forestry.

One DUI Bill's Proviso Fails Grant Standards

By MARY ANNE RHYNE

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

State Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, says he's encouraged that North Carolina's proposed drunken driving legislation will qualify the state for $1.2 million in federal grants.

But Barnes said a federal official told him and three other lawmakers Thursday that at least one provision of the bill does not meet standards to get the money.

The federal government has set aside $125 million to be used as an incentive to states to pass strict drunken-driving laws.

The four legislators met Thursday in Washington with Raymond A. Peck Jr., a U.S. Department of Transportation administrator to tell him about the drunken driving bill that has been approved by the state Senate and is expected to be considered by the House next Tuesday.

Barnes said North Carolina stands to get $737,522 a year in basic grant money and an additional $491,702 a year in supplemental grants. The money would go to the Highway Fund and could be used for enforcing the drunken driving law.

But Barnes said Peck told the legislators that the state fails to meet requirements in one category — a requirement that states suspend a convicted drunken driver's license for 30 days and give the driver limited driving privileges for 60 days after that.

The bill before the state House would immediately suspend a driver's license for 10 days after his arrest and would take away the his license for one year after conviction. In most cases, the driver could have limited driving privileges during that year.

Barnes said Peck liked the bill, however, and promised to seek a way to get the money for the state.

"He said our bill was the strongest he'd seen to this point and time," Barnes said, adding that no state has met the requirements to get the money.

"It was difficult enough to get 10 days (revocation). We didn't feel 30 days would pass," he said. "Going from 10 to 30 days is not something we would do in North Carolina just to get $1.2 million."

He said the Governor's Task Force on Drunk Driving felt a 30-day suspension would put people out of work because they were without transportation.

Opponents of the proposal say the 10-day revocation is unconstitutional because drivers don't get a hearing before their license is suspended.

Barnes said Peck promised to "try to find a way to fit (the bill) into the criteria" so the state could get the money. He said he expected to receive some notification before Tuesday.

"It looks very good at this point," he said.

Barnes said there are three other requirements to get the $737,522:

— A mandatory 48-hour sentence for second offenders. North Carolina's bill would provide a minimum of seven-day sentence.

— A provision that driving with a blood alcohol content of .10 percent would be illegal by itself and not merely evidence of a crime. North Carolina's bill would do just that.

— A provision to increase efforts to educate the public about drunken driving, which Barnes said the state already has begun to do.

There are 21 general provisions to be considered before giving the supplemental grant, Barnes said.

Desegregation Warning For Colleges

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina community colleges will lose federal funds unless state officials begin racial desegregation within 18 months, a federal judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt yesterday ordered nine states to meet a September 1984 deadline for showing they had begun desegregation of their higher education systems by the fall of 1985.

"We have been aware for some time that the 1978 desegregation plan would soon expire and would likely be extended or renegotiated," said President Robert W. Scott of the Department of North Carolina Community Colleges. "We intend to negotiate in good faith and a response to the U.S. Department of Education is being prepared."

Pratt's ruling affects 58 community colleges and technical institutes in North Carolina. The University of North Carolina is not affected by the decision following its desegregation agreement with the federal government in 1981.

Five states — Arkansas, Georgia, Oklahoma, Florida and North Carolina — were ordered to submit acceptable desegregation plans by June 30 containing specific measures to desegregate by the fall of 1985.

One of the states, Virginia, already has a revised desegregation plan approved by the Department of Education's office of civil rights.

Pratt gave Texas 45 days and Pennsylvania and Kentucky until mid-summer to draw up acceptable desegregation plans or face funding cutoffs.

The ruling by Pratt marked the first time in a decade-long battle over college desegregation that a federal judge has ordered the Department of Education to enforce specific deadlines.

Pratt's order came after the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which filed the original lawsuit in the case nearly 13 years ago, argued that without a court-supported threat of federal sanctions the Department of Education and the states would not move quickly enough to achieve desegregation.

Weather Expert Says Snow Is Not So Unusual

Thursday's 6.9-inch snowfall was "not really an unusual thing," an East Carolina University science education professor said this morning.

Weather expert Dr. Moses Sheppard said, "I would say probably about every four or five years you can expect something like this late in the season, so this is not really an unusual thing for March."

Sheppard, a Hendersonville native, said he could recall "having snow on Easter Sunday" a number of years ago. He also cited the March 7, 1980, storm that dumped 18 to 20 inches of snow on the Greenville area.

"The conditions which existed yesterday were just right; cold upper air, jet streams dipping down into this area, with a low (pressure system) coming up from the Gulf bringing in the moisture," he said.

While the snowfall was not unusual, Sheppard did say the thunder and lightning Thursday night was. "Yes, thunder storms and snow; that does happen, but this is unusual."

Sheppard noted that the March 1980 storm is listed as a "record blizzard snow storm" for the mid-Atlantic and Southern states.

He suggested that, given the definition of a blizzard (an intense strong, cold wind filled with fine snow), you might "call this a blizzard. There was some fine snow last night," he said. "But most of the snow associated with the thunderstorm was large flakes."

Freeze Letter Approval Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cardinal Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago predicts that the nation's 285 Roman Catholic bishops will endorse a proposed pastoral letter that condemns the threatened use of nuclear weapons and calls for a nuclear arms freeze.

Bernardin, chairman of a five-bishop committee that wrote the letter's final draft this week, said that although there remains some disagreement about the 25,000-word document, "all support it as a whole."

"I have the feeling it will pass with a good vote," Bishop Daniel Reilly of Norwich, Conn., said in a telephone interview Thursday. Reilly was also a member of the drafting committee.

A two-thirds majority vote at a meeting on May 2 and 3 in Chicago is required for the letter to be adopted as church policy in the United States.

The document, which has been in preparation for two years, has been criticized by the Reagan administration, which believes it would undermine the U.S. position in arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union.

The letter calls for a freeze in nuclear arms production or deployment, an idea President Reagan opposes. It also denounces as immoral any use or threatened use of nuclear weapons.

particularly first strike attacks and attacks on population centers.

But the proposed policy statement also supports the concept of a "just war," the position that "a nation has the right to defend itself against an unjust aggressor."

Reilly said the letter concludes that possession of a nuclear deterrent is morally acceptable as a way of buying time to negotiate for disarmament.

Services Announced

High Marks By Nursing Grads

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Over 90 percent of the nursing school graduates passed the state licensing exam in February, the executive director of the North Carolina Board of Nursing says.

All graduates from North Carolina Central University, North Carolina A&T, East Carolina University and Wake Technical College in Raleigh passed the exam.

Central and A&T graduates had posted low scores in recent exams. Each had one graduate take — and pass — the exam. ECU had all 12 graduates pass and Wake Tech had three.

Nursing Director Anna Kuba said the overall passing rate was between 93 percent and 96 percent for the 470 people taking the exam.

For the past five years, the nursing programs at A&T, Central and Winston-Salem State University have been under mandates from the nursing board and the University of North Carolina Board of Governors to improve passing rates or face possible closing.

No Winston-Salem St. graduates took the February exam.

The programs at Central and Winston-Salem State are no longer under intense scrutiny, having improved sufficiently to satisfy UNC Board of Governors and the nursing board.

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County received unofficial snowfall ranging from six to 12 inches Thursday but no traffic accidents were reported, according to officials in the Williamston Police and Martin County Sheriff's offices.

Main roads were reported open and safe for careful driving today. Secondary roads were still mostly snow-covered this morning, with persons advised not to attempt traveling unless necessary.

In Williamston, some sections of the town were without power for varying periods of time due mostly to falling limbs across wires.

County schools were closed for today, and unless the inclement weather continues, the schools will open Saturday for the make-up day for today's lost school day, in accordance with the standard policy for make-up on Saturday of any day lost during the week.

Inventory Tax Relief Opposed

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday proposals to phase out the tax on business inventories are "not the right decision to make for our economy and our future."

"We cannot afford to erode the tax base in North Carolina," Hunt said at his weekly news conference. "It is too risky."

Hunt also said his administration will make a legislative proposal on hazardous waste landfills next week.

The House Finance Committee has endorsed a bill that would ease the inventory tax burden on North Carolina businesses and speed up corporate tax payments to compensate for the loss of revenues to the state.

The bill would allow businesses to write off on their state income taxes 10 percent of the inventory tax they pay for the year beginning Dec. 26, 1982, and ending Dec. 26, 1983. The write-off would increase to 20 percent the next year and 25 percent the following year.

Meanwhile, the bill would require corporations with an estimated tax liability of $5,000 to pay their tax in quarterly installments. The existing law requires quarterly payments from businesses with liabilities of $100,000.

The net result of the bill would be a $5 million gain for state revenues in 1983-84 but that amount would dwindle and the tax relief would eventually cost the state money. Supporters, however, say the tax break would attract new industry and result in no net revenue reduction.

Meanwhile, Hunt said his administration will make a legislative proposal next week to limit the kinds of hazardous wastes that can be placed in landfills.

He also criticized Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, for unfairly accusing the administration of secretly meeting with and cooperating with waste generators on the bill.

"Of course you meet with people who want to meet with you," Hunt said.

Mavretic has introduced a bill to ban landfill disposal of certain kinds of waste while allowing waste generators to seek a waiver of those rules after technical review by the state and a public hearing.

The Waste Management Board has endorsed another method of limiting landfill disposal of waste. It wants to set concentration levels that indicate when a waste is safe enough to be buried.

Mavretic charged that state officials have tried to stall his bill "in order to gain time to fabricate an alternative bill and to get some legislator to introduce that administration bill."

But Hunt said the waste board's bill "would have been in two weeks ago if we had not been trying to ... pull together the best ideas." He said he had been working with Mavretic to try to resolve differences over the bill when Mavretic made the charges Wednesday.

Hunt said he was not sure what the administration proposal would be although he was sure that the state "cannot be bound by federal regulations that are totally inadequate."

Investigate 2 Break-Ins

Greenville police this morning were investigating two break-ins on Evans Mall, between Fourth and Fifth streets, one at Roberson's Jewelers and one at New York Fashion World.

Chief Glenn Cannon said police discovered the break-in at the jewelry store about 11:30 p.m. Thursday, and tracked the thief to a point near the intersection of Fifth and Washington Streets.

He said entry to the building was gained by breaking a glass door.

Part of the merchandise taken from the store was recovered on the sidewalk near Brody's Department Store.

Cannon said the break-in at New York Fashion World was discovered about 4:30 a.m.

He said thieves broke the glass from a door to enter the building, and were tracked by officers to the 400 and 500 blocks of West Third Street.

He noted that a quantity of clothing was recovered along the route the thieves took.

Cannon said no list or estimate of the value of the merchandise taken from either of the stores was available at mid-morning.

Seven Collisions In City Investigated

An estimated $8,100 damage resulted from seven traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:30 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 175 feet east of the Cedar Lane intersection, involving cars driven by Mattie Blackley Britton of Stokes and Phillip Jensen Broadhurst of 105 Crown Point Road.

Damage was estimated at $2,100 to the Britton car and $1,400 to the Broadhurst vehicle.

Vehicles driven by Samuel Elijah Heath of Grimesland and Robert Louis Pilgreen of Route 1, Winterville, collided about 1:27 p.m. at the intersection of 10th and Verdant streets, causing an estimated $700 damage to the Heath truck and $1,500 damage to the Pilgreen car.

Cars driven by Rosa Mackey Bell of 1705 W. Third St. and Walter Jarvis Corey of 701 Skinner St. collided about 4:45 p.m. on Skinner Street, 20 feet south of the Norcott Circle intersection. Damage was set at $200 to the Bell car and $700 to the Corey vehicle.

Cars driven by Michael James of 102 E. Catawba Road and Peggy Ruth Jenkins of 316 Oak Grove Road collided about 1:06 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth Street and Roosevelt Avenue, resulting in an estimated $300 damage to the James car and $500 damage to the Jenkins auto.

A 3:55 p.m. mishap on Beech Street, one-tenth of a mile north of the Third Street intersection involved cars driven by Kathryn Lynn Bell of 803 Forest Hill Circle and Leigh Michele Williams of Wildwood Villa Apartments. Damage from the collision was estimated at $400 to the Bell car and $300 to the Williams car.

There were 250 tickets sold in last year's raffle, and Ms. Waganek's name was randomly chosen from 175 tickets sold this year. She did not attend either drawing.

Ms. Waganek, of Mentor, said she plans to take her second trip June 1. Before last year's trip, she said, she had never been any farther west than Illinois.

"I enjoyed the trip immensely," she said. "Luckily, I even came home with some winnings. I wanted to go back again, but I didn't realize it would be this soon."

'Big Star' Market In Greenville To Be Closed

The Grand Union Co., which operates Big Star Supermarkets, will close the firm's Greenville store at Pitt Plaza on April 2, a company spokesman said Thursday.

Donald C. Vaillancourt, vice president-corporate communications for Grand Union, said the decision was made because the Greenville supermarket is "an older store and is unprofitable."

Vaillancourt, contacted at Grand Union's Elmwood Park, N.J., corporate headquarters, said the store "has a history of unprofitability." He said, "It is really an obsolete store that does not lend itself to our new marketing philosophy."

The Greenville supermarket opened under the Colonial Stores name in 1966 and became a Big Star operation in 1970.

According to Vaillancourt, about 15 local Big Star employees will be affected by the store closing. A spokesman for Big Star in Raleigh said that with the exception of some newly hired part-time workers, all of the permanent employees here have been given the opportunity to take jobs with Big Star in other towns.

Asked if the company had any plans to relocate the store to another location in Greenville, Vaillancourt said Grand Union has no such plans at this time.

The spokesman said Big Star leases the Pitt Plaza facility and still has two more years on its present agreement, "so the obligation is on us to find a sub-lessee. We are trying to do that now."

He said that in recent years, the company has been re-examining stores in the chain in an effort to turn around operations that experienced lagging business.

Grand Union has several other Big Star stores in this area, including Farmville, Tarboro, Wilson, Goldsboro, Williamston, Kinston and Washington.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE DISAPPEARING ARMY

DURING THE TIME DAVID AND HIS FOLLOWERS WERE BEING HOUNDED BY SAUL'S ARMY THEY DEVELOPED A STYLE OF SUDDEN RETREAT IN THE WILDERNESS WHENEVER THEY WERE THREATENED BY SAUL'S SUPERIOR FORCES. THIS IS THE SAME METHOD WE READ ABOUT IN THE MYTHICAL ROBIN HOOD AND HEAR ABOUT IN MODERN DAY GUERRILLA TACTICS IN VIETNAM AND AFGHANISTAN. NO MATTER HOW SET UP THEIR CAMP WAS, IF A SCOUT WARNED OF SAUL'S APPROACH, IN NO TIME AT ALL NOT A TRACE OF THE CAMP REMAINED, NOT EVEN THE SMALLEST OF JUGS WAS LEFT BEHIND. THEY WOULD DISAPPEAR INTO THE WILDERNESS TO LEAVE SAUL PUZZLED AS TO THEIR WHEREABOUTS. THIS MANUEVER IS WHAT GAVE DAVID THE APPELLATION OF "THE DESERT FOX."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 39.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 54 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a preliminary weighted average of 38.14 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. Hens RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was steady with a weak undertone. Supplies fully adequate. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter was 18 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, hesitating after reaching record highs on Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .97 to 1,144.93 in the first half hour. Gainers took a 54 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Reagan administration today issued a revised forecast envisioning a stronger economic recovery than it had previously projected. The new estimate calls for the nation's gross national product, after adjustment for inflation, to rise 4.7 percent from the fourth quarter of 1982 to the last three months of this year, against an earlier figure of 3.1 percent.

At the same time, the administration's forecast of the inflation rate was lowered. But analysts said many investors had grown increasingly concerned about interest rate prospects. Rates have turned higher this month with Federal Reserve data showing monetary growth exceeding the Fed's targets.

Today's early volume leaders included DuPont, down ¼ at 40½; Sears Roebuck, down ¼ at 36½; Sony, down ¼ at 15¼; and Procter & Gamble, unchanged at 61½.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.03 to 1,145.90, surpassing the closing peak of 1,141.74 it reached on March 7.

Advances outnumbered declines by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 92.34 million shares, against 94.98 million Wednesday.

The NYSE's composite index rose .35 to 88.20. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .56 at 385.00.

Woodpeckers Are Attracted

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Woodpeckers are finding certain types of houses around North Carolina very attractive — usually to the detriment of the houses, wildlife officials say.

"If someone has built a house out of cedar, cypress or redwood siding, the birds think that it's a tree, and they begin pecking to attract mates, to feed and to make holes to build nests in," said Donald T. Harke, state supervisor of wildlife assistance for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Raleigh.

"I get calls every year at this time from all over the state — most recently from Wake Forest, Winston-Salem, Raleigh and Charlotte — about woodpeckers pecking holes in houses with cedar or redwood siding," Harke said.

"I suggest hanging a rubber snake on a piece of string right near where the birds are pecking, because birds and snakes are natural enemies," Harke said. Hanging aluminum foil streamers and pie pans also may frighten the birds away.

of the Adams-Miller murders.

Adams, 21, an assistant manager trainee, and Miller, 24, a bartender at the restaurant, apparently were the only persons left in the restaurant after closing time and were tallying the night's receipts when the murders took place. Both apparently were shot at close range. Investigators said there was no sign of struggle. Previously it had been stated that there was no sign of forced entry. Raker said today that the matter of how the suspect entered the building will not be revealed until the trial.

Rewards offered for the solution of the murders had mounted to $26,000 in the months since: $15,000 by the Steak and Ale Corp.; $10,000 by the governor's office, and $1,000 through the Winston-Salem Crimestoppers Program.

Raker said a decision about who will get the rewards or if anyone will has not been made, he said. "You could say we're at a halfway point," he said. "We've made enough progress to be comfortable with the charges we've made, but there's a lot more work left for us to do."

Adams' parents, A.A. and Diane Adams of Grifton, have followed the investigation of the murders closely and talked with Winston-Salem police weekly about the progress being made, Raker said. They were informed of the charges prior to the news being released to the public, Raker said.

"We want the criminal or criminals who did this caught," Mrs. Adams, manager of a doctors' office in Kinston, said several weeks ago. "It won't bring Richard back, but maybe it will keep it from happening to someone else."

Adams was a recent graduate of Emory and Henry College in Emory, Va., when he entered the Steak and Ale management training program five months before his death. His parents say he liked the work, that it was his ambition to one day own his own restaurant, possibly in partnership with his father. He was considering attending a culinary school in New York.

He was an early starter at work, at academics, at relating to people, and had laid a foundation for a bright future, his parents and friends said. From the time he was 8 years old, he had held at least one job, sometimes more at once — He had a Daily Reflector route and a Kinston Daily Free Press newspaper delivery route simultaneously. He worked at the S&T Grocery in Grifton, beginning at age 11, at Domestic Manufacturing Co. in Grifton, at Hardee's in Kinston, at Burroughs Wellcome Corp. in Greenville, and at George's Sportsworld during his teens and preteens. He was an avid collector, trader and refinisher of antiques and was knowledgeable about them, his family said. They have some of his pieces in their home; some he was saving for the uniquely decorated restaurant he planned to own.

He excelled academically, too, graduating from Ayden-Grifton High School in three years. He entered Brevard College in Brevard under an early admissions program and attended the school two years. While there, he initiated an Episcopal youth fellowship group and served as a student ambassador to work with new students at the college.

At Emory and Henry he majored in business administration and took part in an internship with P.J. Brown and Co., a restaurant in Abingdon, Va.

Better Communication For Marines, Israelis

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Marines and the Israeli army in Lebanon have set up two new communications channels in efforts to stop the friction and misunderstandings between the two forces, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

The commander of the Marine peacekeeping contingent in Beirut, Col. James M. Mead of Boston, met with Brig. Gen. Amnon Lifkin, commander of Israeli forces in the Beirut area, on Thursday to arrange measures to avoid further confrontations between their troops, embassy spokesman John Reid said.

The two officers decided to set up a "liaison channel" through the Lebanese army at Yarze, just east of the Lebanese capital, Reid said.

"Each side will provide the (army) with routine operational information, and use it as a point of contact," he said.

In addition, the Marines will name a liaison officer to deal with any "irregular, non-routine items that might come up," he said. "The U.S. officer will not be with the Israelis, but they will have access to him, they will be able to contact him if necessary."

Reid also said an existing channel between the two forces — the emergency radio net that involves all multinational peacekeeping forces in Lebanon, as well as the Israelis, will continue to operate.

Sues Spouse Over Herpes

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A $5 million complaint has been filed by a woman who claims her estranged husband gave her herpes.

The complaint was filed in Alameda County Superior Court on behalf of Marietta Olson, who charged her husband of nearly six years, Rex Olson, with "intentionally, unlawfully and harmfully transmitted the venereal disease herpes to the plaintiff through sexual contact."

The husband's lawyers filed a preliminary response denying the allegations and added, "Marietta Olson consented to all matters in which she was involved."

The Olsons, both in their 50s, were married in April 1977. She filed for divorce Sept. 30, and the action is pending.

The herpes complaint, submitted in December, was amended this month to specify damages.

The complaint accused the husband of "conscious disregard for the rights and safety of plaintiff, and intending to cause injury to plaintiff, concealed from plaintiff the fact that he had the venereal disease."

Mrs. Olson seeks $2 million in punitive damages, $2 million in general damages and $1 million in special damages for "negligence, battery, fraud and concealment."

along with people and his eagerness to learn. "He was the best trainee I've had to work with. He definitely had a lot of potential," the manager said.

He said he and Adams had talked about what to do if the restaurant was robbed and had agreed that they'd offer no resistance, just let the money go.

Family Affair

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos swore in his only son, Ferdinand Jr., 24, as governor of Ilocos Norte, Marcos' home province north of Manila, the presidential palace announced Thursday.

Young Marcos, nicknamed Bong-Bong, replaces his aunt who the palace said resigned for health reasons. He was elected vice governor of the province in an unopposed election in 1980 and was responsible for upgrading the province's slaughterhouses and for holding sports tournaments.

The president's wife, Imelda, is governor of Metropolitan Manila, human settlements minister and a member of Parliament. Their daughter Imee, 27, heads a government film agency and a national youth movement. A brother of the president, Dr. Pacifico Marcos, heads the medicare commission; and a nephew, Michael Keon, is president of the national Olympic committee.

Senator's Wife Seeks Divorce

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The wife of state Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, has sued him for divorce and accused him of adultery.

Jane Gaffney Lawing also contends that Lawing has spent unnecessary time in Raleigh, where he is in his third term as president pro tem of the Senate.

Mrs. Lawing, the senator's wife of 39 years, filed the suit Monday in Mecklenburg Superior Court.

The suit says her husband was away from home 149 nights in 1982, including numerous occasions "without business justification." It says Lawing committed adultery on numerous occasions with a woman in Raleigh.

Lawing declined to comment on the suit Wednesday.

Virginia, State Set To Clash Once More

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — So much for the popular notion that Virginia is a one-dimensional team, a squad made up of All-America center Ralph Sampson and a ragtag supporting cast.

Sampson sat out more than 12 minutes of the second half because of foul trouble Thursday night, but his teammates didn't appear to notice, taking up the slack as the fourth-ranked Cavaliers defeated Boston College 95-92 in the semifinals of the NCAA West basketball tournament. Virginia's victory set up an all-Atlantic Coast Conference final Saturday.

North Carolina State is the other finalist, having routed Utah 75-56 Thursday night. The winner advances to the Final Four in Albuquerque.

Sampson picked up his fourth foul just seconds into the second half, at which time Virginia, the No. 1 seed in the West, had a one-point lead. When Sampson returned with 7:27 remaining, the Cavaliers up 70-64.

Virginia extended its lead to 84-70, but Boston College fought back to within three points. But the 6-for-6 free-throw shooting of Virginia guard Rick Carlisle in the final 27 seconds protected that lead.

Carlisle led Virginia, now 29-4, with 22 points, 16 in the second half.

Sampson had 19 points, only four in the second half, and guard Othell Wilson scored 18.

"A lot of times we find teams saying, 'We did it, we did it,' when they get Sampson out of the game," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "But at the same time, our players are saying 'We've all got to play a fifth better now.' We played well without Ralph twice before this season, against Missouri and Houston."

Holland admitted that when Sampson went to the bench with four fouls, he thought his team could have been in trouble since Boston College forward John Garriss was playing so well inside.

"But Craig Robinson and Kenton Edelin just shut down their inside team completely at both ends and on the boards and I thought that was the difference in the ball game," Holland said.

Although the Cavaliers fell behind Boston College briefly in the second half, Virginia went on a tear with 15 minutes remaining, outscoring the Eagles 15-1 over the next five minutes to take a 68-57 lead. And all of that without Sampson.

Boston College Coach Gary Williams, whose team finished the year with a 25-7 record, said he designed a play at halftime aimed at drawing a fourth foul from Virginia's big man.

"It worked and it was a good feeling when he picked up his fourth foul," Williams said. "Obviously you tend to relax a little bit when you think he is out of there. We hear so much about Ralph that maybe we thought it would be easy after that.

"They hurt us on the boards and on second shots in that stretch they had, and that's something you don't expect them to do when Sampson's out of there."

Garriss had 25 points, Jay Murphy 23 and Michael Adams 18 for the losers.

In the earlier semifinal, guard Derek Whittenburg scored 27 points, many from long range, as hot-shooting North Carolina State ended Utah's Cinderella tournament experience.

The 16th ranked Wolfpack shot 68 percent from the floor, including 79 percent in the second half when they made good on 15 of 19 field goal attempts.

Whittenburg hit 10 of 13 shots, at least half of them from the 18 to 20 foot range, and reserve guard Terry Gannon was 4-for-5 while forward Lorenzo Charles hit seven of nine.

"I thought we did an excellent job on defending them," said Utah Coach Jerry Pimm. "But the shots they were putting him, they were hitting. Whittenburg was unbelievable. Those were three-point shots in the pros."

The Wolfpack broke things open in the second half, outscoring the Utes 20-5 over a 10-minute span to take a commanding 68-48 lead.

"We felt we had the opportunity to take the outside shot as we were convinced we could get that shot tonight," said N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano, whose team raised its record to 23-10.

"We knew they were going to slough off on our big men," said Whittenburg. "The team had a lot of confidence in me."

Charles scored a career-high 18 points for the winners and Gannon finished with 10.

Utah, 18-14, was paced by Peter Williams with 15 points and Pace Mannion with 13.

Weather Hits Games

Rain and snow forced the postponement or cancellation of all of the area's sporting events scheduled for yesterday.

As of this morning only four of those events had been rescheduled. A tennis match between Roanoke Rapids and Roanoke was reset for Monday, while a golf match between Southern Wayne and Ayden-Grifton was rescheduled for Tuesday.

A softball and a baseball game between Bear Grass and Mattamuskeet was rescheduled for April 27.

All of today's activities were also postponed, but it was not known whether any of them had been rescheduled as yet.

Donovan's 27 Sparks Monarchs Past Maryland In Women's Play

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Anne Donovan scored 27 points and grabbed 16 rebounds to lead Old Dominion to a 74-57 win over Maryland to advance in the NCAA Division I women's basketball tournament.

Old Dominion will play for the regional title here Saturday against Penn State, a 73-72 winner over Cheyney in the first game of a double-header Thursday night.

The 6-foot-8 Donovan's 16 rebounds eclipsed Maryland's total of 13 individual rebounds and helped the winners add eight unanswered points to its 37-30 halftime lead.

Old Dominion, 28-5, also got 22 points from Helen Malone.

Lea Hakala scored 15 points to lead Maryland, now 26-5.

In the first game, Louise Leimkuhler's baseline jumper with 11 seconds left to play lifted Penn State from a one-point deficit to its 73-72 victory. Time ran out as the two teams struggled for control of the ball.

Kahadejah Herbert led Penn State with 22 points and eight rebounds, and Rosetta Guilford paced Cheyney with 16 points.

After a 67-67 tie with 2:50 remaining, Cheyney went ahead on Sandra Giddins' basket.

Sheryl Ellison sank a foul shot and Leimkuhler put in a rebound to give Penn State a 70-69 edge. Guilford's foul shot tied it and Sharon Taylor gave Cheyney a one-point lead with a foul shot.

Ellison tied it again for Penn State before Taylor sank a foul shot to give Cheyney its last lead at 72-71.

Penn State takes a 26-6 record into Saturday's regional final. Cheyney's record is now 27-3.

Clocks, 3-Pointers Up NCAA Scoring

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Shot clocks and three-point goals boosted college basketball scoring for the first time in eight years, according to the NCAA.

The NCAA said Thursday that Division I teams in 1982-83 combined for an average of 138.61 points per game, 3.53 points more than last season's 135.08, which was the lowest in 30 years.

If all three-point goals were counted as two points, the average would have been 137.56.

The scoring average breaks down to 70.03 points offensively for Division I teams and 68.58 defensively.

The 12 conferences that experimented with shot clocks, three-point goals or both averaged 71.89 points offensively, 4.12 points more than a year ago. The remaining Division I teams averaged 68.82 points offensively, up .34 points.

Atlantic Coast Conference teams, which had a three-point line 19 feet from the basket, led all Division I leagues with an average of 78.198 points a game. The ACC also had a shot clock this season.

The ACC average was up 13.39 points from last season but would have dropped to 74.75 if three-point goals had counted for just two.

Young Arranges Tour Of Apple For Deacons

By TOM FOREMAN JR.
AP Sports Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. — If anyone on the Wake Forest basketball team missed the sights of New York City during last December's trip to Madison Square Garden, guard Danny Young has personally arranged one more tour of the Big Apple.

Young scored 17 points, while Alvis Rogers and Delaney Rudd scored 14 apiece to lead the Demon Deacons to a 78-61 victory over South Carolina in the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

Perry: Winning Still Priority

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — As far as 44-year-old Gaylord Perry is concerned, the game of professional baseball is exactly the same as it was when he broke into the sport in 1958.

The major leagues' 15th 300-game winner — almost a sure bet for a spot in baseball's Hall of Fame — says the most important thing for him in 1958 was to win and that's still the No. 1 priority.

"There's nothing like winning," he said. "I think the young players on the Seattle team understand that winning is very, very important. You can't always win but the more you win the more enjoyable the game is."

That philosophy that has kept Perry going for 20 years and 58 days of major league service. That and a breaking ball that is often thought to be a mite wet.

The sometimes-cantankerous, sometimes-charming peanut farmer from Williamston, N.C., is the big leagues' oldest player. He goes into his 26th professional season with a 307-251 career record and a 3.03 earned run average.

He also is the only pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in both leagues. He took the American League honor when he was 24-16 with the Indians in 1972 and won the National League award when he was 21-6 with the San Diego Padres in 1978. He was 40 at the time.

Last May 6, he posted his 300th victory by beating the New York Yankees 7-3 in the Kingdome. It made him the first 300-game winner since Early Wynn in 1963.

But Perry, who will turn 45 on Sept. 15, says a lot remains to be done.

With 3,452 big league strikeouts, he ranks third on the all-time list behind the famed Walter Johnson (3,508) and Nolan Ryan of Houston (3,494). He'd like 100 strikeouts to put him ahead of Johnson and to make him the first to get over a hundred strikeouts for 19 seasons.

The Mariners are getting Perry's arm and name — not necessarily in that order — for $200,000 this season.

He was released by the Atlanta Braves at the end of the 1982 season and signed by the Mariners. He responded with a 10-12 record and a 4.40 ERA, starting 32 games and completing six, striking out 117 batters in 216 2-3 innings.

"I enjoy the game very much," he said. "You have to have fun no matter what you do. Some days are not fun days. But the majority of days are. Baseball is a game you have to have fun at just about every day."

Perry thinks he has had a good spring. "I've had a couple of bad innings now and then," he said, "but I think a lot of pitchers experience that. I've had some good innings, too."

Seattle is Perry's seventh team. He was a fixture in San Francisco in the 1960s and also pitched for Cleveland, Texas, San Diego, the Yankees and the Braves.

With the departure of free agent Floyd Bannister, Perry's experience and maturity are being counted on heavily by Mariners' Manager Rene Lachemann, who guided Seattle to a surprise fourth in the American League West last season.

Lachemann has named Perry to be his opening day pitcher against the Yankees in the Kingdome in Seattle Tuesday night, April 5.

"All I want to do," volunteered Perry, "is be ready when my turn comes to pitch and do a good consistent job. I want to keep us in the ball game for six or seven innings. We have such a great bullpen. If I can do that, I think I've done my job."

In 1982, in the 742nd game of his career, Perry was ejected for the first time on Aug. 23 against the Boston Red Sox. Plate umpire Dave Phillips warned him in the fifth inning after he found a substance on the ball and then threw him out for a pitch in the seventh inning.

The American League suspended Perry for 10 days and fined him $250.

Perry reacted bitterly. His words were vintage Perry. "I was incorrectly accused of something I did not do," Perry said simply.

He made it clear he wanted to dismiss the subject and it was dropped. There's no point antagonizing a nice, old Southern gentleman, is there?

olina's Kenny Holmes hit a short jumper with 13:44 left, Rudd hit a jumper from the corner 19 seconds later and added another basket in the spurt that put the Demon Deacons ahead to stay.

"We felt coming back home was a lift for us," Rudd said in reference to Wake Forest's first two NIT games which were at Murray State and Vanderbilt. "We wanted to come in and play hard. We knew South Carolina would be a good team, but we did a lot of things well."

One of those things was field goal percentage. Wake Forest shot 57.7 percent on 30 of 52 attempts, including 61.9 percent in the second half. South Carolina, 22-9, shot 33.8 percent on 26 of 77 tries.

The Gamecocks made a brief run in the second half, closing a 39-28 halftime deficit to 47-42 on Brad Jergenson's two free throws with 14:16 left. A 14-5 breakaway by the Demon Deacons, capped by Kenny Green's turna round jumper at the 7:04 mark, put Wake Forest in firm command.

Green finished with 11 points, all in the second half, while John Toms had 10 for the Demon Deacons. Jimmy Foster led South Carolina with 19 and Jergenson scored 15.

"We had effort and enthusiasm and not much else going for us to night," South Carolina coach Bill Foster said. "We just couldn't score. I'd like to give credit to their defense."

Finally: Kentucky Vs Louisville

By The Associated Press
Bluegrass rivals Kentucky and Louisville have a basketball date for the first time in 24 years, while Tobacco Road foes Virginia and North Carolina State will meet for the second time in two weeks and fourth time this season.

Those NCAA matchups will take place Saturday as a result of Thursday night's regional semifinal action. And the fans of the respective teams seem certain to get more excited than the players and coaches.

"It means getting a chance to go to the Final Four," is the way Louisville Coach Denny Crum summed it up. "This time of year there are only eight teams left. They (Kentucky) just happen to be here. We don't care who we play. I think Kentucky feels the same way."

Actually, 12 teams are left. But four more will be eliminated tonight when third-ranked St. John's meets No.18 Georgia and eighth-ranked North Carolina, the defending NCAA champion, plays Ohio State in the East Regional at Syracuse, N.Y., while top-rated Houston faces No.17 Memphis State and No.13 Villanova goes against Iowa in the Midwest Regional at Kansas City, Mo.

In Thursday night's Mideast Regional at Knoxville, Tenn.,

Melvin Turpin scored 16 points and 12th-ranked Kentucky survived a late Indiana rally to defeat the No.5 Hoosiers 64-59.

Then, Scooter McCray's tip-in at the buzzer capped Louisville's comeback from a 16-point, first-half deficit to give the second-ranked Cardinals a dramatic 65-63 triumph over No.9 Arkansas. That set up the first meeting with Kentucky since the 1959 NCAA Tournament.

In the West Regional at Ogden, Utah, fourth-ranked Virginia withstood the loss of All-America center Ralph Sampson for more than 12 minutes in the second half and defeated No.11 Boston College 95-92, while No.16 North Carolina State shot 68 percent — 28 of 41 — and routed Utah 75-56 behind Dereck Whittenburg's 27 points. N.C. State won the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament by defeating Virginia on March 13.

Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall had no trouble accounting for the Wildcats' triumph over Indiana that avenged a December loss to the Hoosiers.

"We had excellent shot selection, but mostly we played with patience," Hall said. "Our bench really gave us a big lift," he added, mentioning Bret Bearup, who had eight first-half points, and freshman Kenny Walker, who scored 11 of his 13 in the second half.

Kentucky, in one of its finest efforts of the season, surged to a 57-47 lead over Indiana's Big Ten champions with 8:31 remaining. The Hoosiers pulled within two with 2:49 left but Kentucky continued its delay game and got one free throw from Dirk Minniefield and two from Charles Hurt. Melvin Turpin led the Wildcats with 16 points.

"A lot of people told us we were chokers and couldn't win in the tournament," said Minniefield. "We proved them wrong. All the time, we knew we would be in this position in March. We believe in ourselves."

McCray's decisive tip-in for Louisville came after the Cardinals' third missed shot in the final 11 seconds. McCray and Lancaster Gordon sparked the rally that produced Louisville's 15th victory in a row after a 16-0 burst gave Arkansas a 35-19 lead in the first half.

McCray scored 11 of his 17 points and Gordon had 12 of his 19 in the second half as the Cardinals methodically sliced the deficit and finally tied it 61-61 when Gordon stole an errant pass and hit a layup with 3:03 to go.

After McCray's game-winning tip-in, Crum's thoughts immediately flashed back to the 1981 tourney when Arkansas ousted the Cardinals 74-73 on a halfcourt fling at the buzzer by U.S. Reed.

"I thought it was turnabout's fair play," Crum said. "Ours was a six-incher and their's was a 50-footer, but they both counted two points."

Despite picking up his fourth personal foul just seconds into the second half, Virginia's 7-foot-4 Sampson scored 19 points and was a dominating force inside against Boston College. A 15-1 burst gave the winners a 68-57 advantage with 10:23 left and it was 70-64 when Sampson returned with 7:27 to play.

"We came out at halftime with a play designed to try to make him block a shot," said B.C. Coach Gary Williams. "It worked, and it was a good feeling when he picked up his fourth foul."

But the strategy backfired. With Sampson on the bench, Rick Carlisle, Othell Wilson, backup center Kenton Edelin and sub guard Ricky Stokes took charge for the Cavaliers. Carlisle was Virginia's leading scorer with 22 points, 16 in the second half, and Wilson added 18. Boston College was paced by John Garriss with 25 and Jay Murphy with 23.

"Obviously, you tend to relax a little bit when you think he (Sampson) is out of there," Williams said. "We hear so much about Ralph that maybe we thought it would be easy after that."

North Carolina State's hot shooting had Utah Coach Jerry Pimm shaking his head. He was especially impressed with Whittenburg, who bombed unerringly from long range.

"He was unbelievable. Those were three-point shots in the pros," Pimm said.

Whittenburg said State's strategy was to shoot from outside.

"We knew they were going to slough off on our big men," he said. "The team had a lot of confidence in me."

"We felt we had the opportunity to take the outside shot and we were convinced we could get that shot tonight," said Coach Jim Valvano. "We had more control of this game than in the other postseason games where we had a more frenzied time of it."

Sophomore forward Lorenzo Charles added a career-high 18 points for the winners.

New Satellite To Improve Search-Rescue Operation

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — An American search-and-rescue satellite going aloft next week will join a Soviet satellite already saving lives by pinpointing downed planes and sinking ships from outer space, NASA officials say.

The new satellite, in a north-south orbit about 530 miles high, will scan the entire earth every 12 hours, officials said Thursday.

By bouncing the distress signal down to designated ground stations in any of several nations, the satellite can locate a downed plane within 12 miles.

"Since we started working with the Soviet satellite COSPAS I (last year), there have been 22 lives saved, and we are just really getting started," Bernard J. Trudell said of the demonstration project that also includes Canada and France as prime partners.

"Some of those people absolutely would not be alive and walking around today if it wasn't for that satellite. The others were assists," he told a news conference Thursday.

Trudell is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's mission manager for SRSAT, or Search and Rescue Satellite, which is to be launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base on Monday, weather permitting.

NASA says the United States is spending about $29 million on the experimental project, with Canada and France together adding another $24 million. Cost of the Soviet effort, which is independent but coordinated with NASA, is unreported.

Federal law requires ships and private planes to carry emergency radio beacons which, when activated by impact, transmit a continuous and distinctive signal. But unless a plane passes within about 100 miles of the transmitter — and has a receiver on — the distress signal will not be heard.

That problem should be solved by satellites. But the nature of the distress signal, designed for aircraft rather than satellite detection, means the space-borne searcher can only be effective when it is within direct sight of both the crash and a ground station. The satellite acts as a mirror to collect the signal and bounce it back to earth for analysis.

"The object of this project is to shorten the time between the occurrence of distress and the rescue ...

(That) means saving lives and reducing the costs of rescue operations," Trudell said.

That was graphically demonstrated in the first rescue, on Sept. 10, 1982, barely a week after the joint effort began.

The Canadian government had concluded an unsuccessful $2 million search for a pilot missing in the rugged forests of northern British Columbia, but the victim's father, also a pilot, continued to search on his own, NASA says. The father and two passengers failed to return from a search Sept. 9 and the satellite search program was notified.

COSPAS I heard the father's distress beacon the next day, Canadian ground technicians located the crash site and helicopters quickly rescued the three passengers, all seriously injured. All three survived and the cost, NASA said, "was minimal."

Trudell said the plane, virtually invisible from the air, "was in a valley surrounded by 7,000-foot mountains," which blocked the radio signal except to receivers directly overhead. "That's why airplanes couldn't find it and that's the advantage of satellites, they can look down into mountains."

The northern hemisphere is generally well-covered, Trudell said, "but in the southern hemisphere there is very little coverage. We're going to fix that."

"You could fly an airplane anywhere in the world, crash into the Brazilian jungle and know that a satellite pretty soon is going to pick you up and notify someone," Trudell said.

Investigating Ammonia Spill

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — State officials are investigating an ammonia spill discovered Wednesday at Whitaker Park that killed about 200 fish in Silas Creek and Lake Catherine.

Steve Mauney, a Department of Natural Resources and Community Development spokesman, said the spill's extent hadn't been determined. State wildlife officials said Thursday other fish and wildlife downstream probably wouldn't be affected.

HELD BACK — Retaining chains hold tons of logs in place aboard the Ocean Steelhead, listing badly at a Weyerhaeuser Co. dock on Tacoma's Hylebos Waterway. Salvage crews cut holes in ballast tanks in an effort to pump them out and get the 574-foot vessel back on an even keel. (AP Laserphoto)

Freighter Listing Under Heavy Weyerhaeuser Timber Cargo

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A dock was evacuated as a precaution when one of many retaining chains holding timber on the deck of a listing ship snapped and a couple of logs shifted, officials said.

But a marine safety investigator reported early today that the movement did not appear to affect the list of the 574-foot freighter, which is threatening to roll over at a Weyerhaeuser Co. dock, said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Dave Ginsburg in Seattle.

The dock area on Tacoma's Hylebos Waterway was cleared as a precaution, he said.

Salvage crews continued pumping water from holes they had cut Thursday in ballast tanks of the Ocean Steelhead, a Panamanian-registered vessel.

Loaded with $10 million worth of logs, the vessel began to stabilize late Thursday when crews were able to correct its list from 41 degrees to 30 degrees, said Coast Guard Lt. John Schott.

Ginsburg said the list remained about 30 degrees early today, despite the log movement and an incoming tide.

The ship also carried 2,000 tons of diesel fuel. Containment booms were placed across the Hylebos Waterway to guard against an oil spill if the ship were to sink, said Rodriguez.

Officials were not certain what caused the ship to begin listing just before midnight Wednesday, shortly before it was due to leave for Japan. When the list reached 20 degrees, all 29 crew members were evacuated.

Officials feared the ship would roll over and spill its 18,000 tons of logs on the dock, which would destroy the asphalt structure, Bradbury said.

The ship was thought to be stabilized at mid-morning Thursday at a list of about 35-38 degrees, but shortly before 11:30 a.m. it listed to 40 degrees, said Petty Officer Michael Rodriguez, a Coast Guard spokesman.

The waterway was closed to all marine traffic to prevent wakes of passing vessels from upsetting any stability the ship had left.

The ship's agent is Olympic Steamship Co. of Seattle and the ship is chartered by Mitsubishi International Corp., said Lowell Lewis, manager of Weyerhaeuser's Tacoma sort yard where the ship was docked.

Brad Cleverdon, Olympic Steamship vice president, declined to comment.

Goldilocks Loses A Verdict By Jurors

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A jury of 43 first- and second-graders weighed both sides in the Circuit Court trial of Goldilocks, and delivered its verdict: guilty of criminal trespass, damage to property and theft of porridge.

Judge Mark Frankel ordered that the blonde nursery tale character buy a new chair for Baby Bear with her allowance.

The verdict and sentencing concluded a 25-minute mock trial Wednesday designed to teach the youngsters about the workings of the legal system.

Goldilocks was accused of entering the home of The Three Bears, breaking Baby Bear's chair and eating his porridge.

Defense attorney Linda Balisle told the jurors, from Marquette Elementary School, that there had been a "classic misunderstanding" between her client and the shaggy-haired animals. She said Goldilocks only ran into the bears' home because she had been chased by a swarm of bees.

"She did not intend to do anything wrong and she is very sorry for the trouble that she accidentally caused the bears," Ms. Balisle said.

However, The Three Bears' attorney, Peter Carstensen, said that "sorry" would not fix his clients' chair.

"The chair is still broken. If Goldilocks doesn't buy a new chair for Baby Bear, then the bears will have to — and it isn't their fault the chair broke," he said.

"It is one of those things that teaches kids that the law isn't black or white," Ms. Balisle said. "There are gray areas, extenuating circumstances."

Reward Offered In Two Murders

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Governor Jim Hunt announced Thursday the state is offering a reward of up to $10,000 for information in the murders of two Guilford County storekeepers.

The body of 66-year-old Ollie Ledbetter was found in her small grocery just outside Summerfield Wednesday. On the same day about five miles away, the body of 64-year-old Archie Kellan was found inside his store.

Guilford County Sheriff Jim Profitt said although one person has been questioned, all he has is "bits and pieces" to go on in the slayings.

FOCUS

Crisis in Education

President Reagan has called it a crisis that "could compromise America's future in international market places." The crisis? A sharp decline in American students' knowledge of science and math. More than half of our country's high school graduates have taken only one year of science. About 50 percent take no math or science at all during their last two years. The result: U.S. students are far behind their counterparts in the Soviet Union, West Germany, and Japan where fully 65 percent of all college graduates hold science degrees. As Congress addresses this problem, members appear to be taking heed of Buckminster Fuller's warning: "Take away science from humanity and within six months half of humanity will die of starvation and disease."

DO YOU KNOW — What share of U.S. college graduates hold science degrees?
THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The Montreal A.A.A. won the first Stanley Cup championship in 1894.

A finesse is a way to win a trick you otherwise would not be entitled to. But a finesse for that reason alone can sometimes be foolhardy. There are many points of interest in the auction. East's raise to three spades was preemptive. Even so, we would have removed West's double to four spades because the hand did not contain the vestige of a defensive trick. And we don't like West's double of four hearts. With so much strength in his side's long suit, his hand was more oriented to offense than defense. We like South's bold decision to compete with four hearts and North's faith in his partner—he did not run to diamonds when hearts got doubled. Against four hearts doubled, West led the king of spades. Declarer ruffed, finessed the jack of hearts and cashed the ace. Now he was locked in dummy with no entry to his hand. He started to run the diamonds. West waited to ruff the third diamond, then shifted to the king of clubs to knock out the entry to the diamond suit. Declarer won the ace in dummy and discarded a club on a winning diamond as West ruffed with the trump king. But declarer still had two clubs to lose for down one.

Declarer's error lay in taking the trump finesse. That would gain only if West had started with a doubleton king of hearts—unlikely in light of his double. The contract is quite easy to make if, at trick two, declarer leads a trump to the ace and then overtakes the jack of hearts with the queen. Since it does West no good to duck the king, he might as well win. It is still correct to shift to the king of clubs, but declarer is in control. He wins the king of clubs with the ace, comes to his hand with a spade ruff and draws the outstanding trumps. He can get back to dummy with a diamond and will end up with two overtricks!

Life As It's Lived

A 'Streaker' Is Born, Not Made, These Days

By GAIL MICHAELS

Zachary has discovered at least one positive consequence of being toilet trained: he is no longer inhibited by the cumbersome bulk of his diapers.

He realized just how good freedom could feel when he was allowed to run around for hours in nothing but a pajama shirt and underpants on one of the first warm Saturday mornings in March.

He zoomed from room to room with screeches of delight. He rolled on the carpet like a dog newly introduced to the beach. Unfortunately, he concluded from this experience that the fewer clothes one wears, the better one feels no matter if it's balmy or freezing outside.

At the very least he now insists upon walking around with his shirt hiked up around his chest while the March winds ripping across the lawn aim for his navel as if it were a bullseye.

At first he explained at each attempt to disrobe that his clothes were "making him cold." But closer observation of his sister taught him that there were more successful methods of riding himself of superfluous attire. Meg's stock excuse is that she's burning up.

As far as she is concerned, there are only two seasons in the year. She is usually figuratively on fire from early March until mid-November. The first time after Christmas that the mercury crept above 55 degrees, she came home from school dragging her coat behind her and panting like a jackal in the equatorial sun.

"You dress me too wamrly," she keeps telling me. "I just about burn up in gym. I sweat like a pig."

"How do you know pigs sweat?"

"I know it in my bones." Meg's incredibly intuitive bones are the final authority on any question.

"But all you were wearing," I protest, "was a short-sleeved knit shirt and blue jeans."

"I would really prefer a sunsuit," she tells me in all seriousness.

Two Services

The Rev. James Lindsey will speak at the Sunday worship service at 11 a.m. at Rock Spring Free Will Baptist Church. The No. 2 Choir and ushers of the church will participate.

Eldress Gladys Newton, the No. 2 Senior Choir and ushers of Bell Arthur Free Will Baptist Church will conduct the 7 p.m. service.

BUSINESS MEETING

The Sweet Hope Traveling Choir will have a business meeting at 4 p.m. Saturday at the church. Its regular rehearsal will follow.

Zachary, of course, has been taking in every detail of such conversations. So when I ran inside to answer the phone and left him playing on the patio a few days ago, I sensed trouble the moment I overheard him declare to himself, "Dese shoes and socks is burndin' me up."

I excused myself from the conversation as soon as possible and checked outside. Sure enough, the shoes and socks were on the patio, and Zachary was not.

As I rounded the corner of the house, I spotted his corduroy pants. They, too, had been vacated.

Zachary was running up and down the front sidewalk trying to rid himself of one last piece of clothing — his pullover shirt. From nose to mid-chest he was covered. The rest of him was exposed.

"Don't bodder me!" he shouted when he saw me coming.

If this kid has his way, streaking may again become a national pastime.

Service Friday

Eldress Dottie Little and the congregation of Hattie's Chapel will lead a service Friday night at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church in Greenville. The service will start at 7:30 p.m.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Give Americans a love story, and they'll line up to watch it. Make that love nearly impossible to achieve, or even forbidden, and they'll beat the door down.

The networks sell soap in the afternoon on that premise, and ABC is counting on "The Thorn Birds," a 10-hour miniseries that runs for four consecutive nights starting Sunday, to work as well.

It should — and for the right reasons, too. "The Thorn Birds," Colleen McCullough's romantic novel that sold 10 million copies in the United States, is everything that "The Winds of War" wasn't. It's an intoxicating story that springs from passionate people and their relationships — not from contrived historical encounters pumping up lifeless characters.

David Wolper and Stan Margulies, who broke television ground with "Roots," produced the $21 million "Thorn Birds." While it doesn't have any of the sociological significance of "Roots," "The Thorn Birds" is entrancing.

Thankfully, Miss McCullough did not write her own screenplay, as Herman Wouk did on "Winds of War." While Wouk's words were stilted and long-winded on the screen, the dialogue in Carmen Culver's teleplay fits nicely.

The TV story, except for some minor condensation, also is exceptionally faithful to the book.

The core of the book and miniseries is the forbidden fruit, an overwhelming — but mostly unfulfilled — love over three decades between a handsome priest and a beautiful woman. Father Ralph de Bricassart (played by Mr. Miniseries himself, Richard Chamberlain) must choose between God and Rachel Ward, as the gorgeous Meggie Cleary.

This isn't just a choice between chastity and passion. Father Ralph's anguish and guilt are intensified by ego. He has a burning desire to rise in the Catholic hierarchy. Ambition, more than anything else, is his mortal sin.

The series is running during Holy Week and the scheduling has prompted a protest from the United States Catholic Conference.

In the middle of Sunday night's episode, the legend of the thorn birds is explained, establishing an aura of ill-fated destiny that afflicts the female characters from generation to generation.

The thorn bird has no song until it impales itself on a thorn tree. Then it sings majestically. "It pays its life for just one song," says Ralph. "But the whole world stills to listen, and God in his heaven smiles."

"What does it mean, Father?" young Meggie asks the priest.

"That the best is brought only at the cost of great pain."

Set in Australia, the filming actually was done in the Simi Valley outside of Los Angeles. The background scenery does not provide the same starkness that on-location shooting did for the Australian productions "Gallipoli" and "A Town Like Alice."

"The Thorn Birds" follows an Australian family, the Clearys, through three generations covering 40 years.

Paddy Cleary (Richard Kiley), his wife (Jean Simmons) and their children are brought to Australia in 1920 by his sister, a rich widow named Mary Carson who needs help running her sheep ranch, Drogheda. Barbara Stanwyck is deliciously evil as the old maid who lusts after Father Ralph.

What Mary can't have, she wants no other woman to enjoy. At her death (watch for the corpse to keep breathing) she will she leaves makes it more difficult for what Mary believes is the inevitable attraction between Ralph and her niece, Meggie.

Chamberlain, who starred in "Shogun" and "Centennial," gives another intense performance. He had his frustrating moments with the inexperienced Miss Ward. But this doesn't show on the screen. Miss Ward is enchanting and gets better as she ages. In fact, she's more credible as a senior citizen in the 1960s than Chamberlain is.

Tremor Shakes Western N. C.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An earth tremor Thursday night rattled dishes and furniture in homes in Buncombe, Polk, Transylvania and Henderson counties.

A spokesman for the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., told the National Weather Service the tremor occurred at 9:47 p.m. and measured 3.1 on the Richter scale.

Officials with the National Weather Service said the tremor "felt like an earthquake."

"I would say it was a tremor," said weather specialist Odell Sluder, adding that tremor and earthquake are interchangeable words. "I can't state for sure, but that's the way it felt," he said.

Sluder said that in 18 years of service, he could recall two other tremors in Buncombe County. "They occur every so often. We've had others that shook buildings," he said.

Other local authorities said they had had "hundreds" of calls from anxious residents in all sections of the county, and that they were frustrated in their attempts to answer the callers' questions.

"We've done all we can do, we just have to wait it out and see if the weather service or someone else can discover the cause," said Buncombe County Sheriff's Department Patrol Chief Roy Creasman.

None of the callers reported any damage or injury as a result of the tremor, he said. "It was just strong enough to make people nervous."

Mrs. Lester Jones of Brevard, who said her house is built on solid rock, told a reporter "it felt like the rock was coming apart. It was like sitting on something shaking," she said.

Mrs. Jones said her husband, outside their home on Lake Sega Road in Brevard, reported that the tremor seemed to be moving toward Rosman, "sort of like an underground roar."

Don Neale of Fairview said the tremor rattled dishes and furniture in his house, and upset his dog, which "came up barking."

"It lasted a split second," said James W. Irwin. "The house shook and the chair I was sitting in shook."

Irwin, who said he experienced several earthquakes in Tokyo, said the feeling was much the same, except that Thursday night's quake was accompanied by a loud noise. "You'd think that it could have been thunder but there was electrical display whatsoever. There was just a big rumble."

American Architecture: A Blankness On Main St.

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There's a new face on Main Street — a blank one.

Buildings with big, blank walls designed to shut out the street and everyone on it are proliferating in the nation's downtowns, according to William H. Whyte, an urbanologist who has mounted an exhibition on the trend at the Urban Center here.

Hotels, civic centers, banks and other structures are using walls to block out the "messy and chaotic" city and create an "internalized, controlled environment," complains Whyte.

"Look what they're doing to the street," he cries. "They're making it deadly dull."

Whyte, author of "The Organization Man," the best-selling study of corporate culture in the 1950s, has in recent years moved his gaze from the corporate boardroom to the street below. There he has found vitality in chaos, delight in tackiness.

The blank walls he protests are common in downtown "megastructures" such as the Renaissance Center in Detroit, Atlantic Richfield Plaza in Los Angeles, Omni International and Peachtree Center in Atlanta and Houston Center.

The builders of the complexes of hotels, stores, offices and theaters have said they are designed to guarantee a secure, efficient and tranquil environment in turbulent and possibly threatening urban settings.

To Whyte, they are as inviting as fortresses. To Whyte, the Renaissance Center says, "Come inside and be safe from Detroit." It doesn't do anything for downtown renewal. To save the city they repudiate it."

Many downtown hotels seem designed to protect the visitor from the city he is visiting, Whyte adds. The Bonaventure Hotel in Los Angeles has "the largest blank wall you ever saw," Whyte says.

Institutions "have a special affinity for blank walls" and buildings such as FBI headquarters in Washington and the Atlanta

Public Library "proclaim the power of the institution and the inconsequence of the individual ... They tell you you're pretty damn insignificant," Whyte says.

The blank wall's move to the city from the suburbs is most apparent in new downtown shopping centers such as James River Plaza in Richmond, Va. and the Williams Center in Tulsa, Okla., Whyte notes.

Convention centers, he says, "are the worst offenders of all." In Dallas, Atlanta and Kansas City, they are almost all wall, "hermetically sealed boxes ... with equispaced saplings for visual punctuation," Whyte says. "There's no regional variation. The only difference is the number of saplings."

Banks used to have windows through which pedestrians could see banking take place. But the Banque National de Paris in New York has installed one-way black glass so those inside can see out, but not vice versa.

Signs compound the insult of this authoritarian architecture. A great blank telephone company building wall in New York bears the sign, "No ball or Frisbee playing."

Sometimes architects provide openings on only one side of a building, forgetting about the other three. At Lincoln Center here, Avery Fisher Hall proves that a theater, a classic excuse for a closed box, can put on a show of its own for the street if it is enclosed in glass.

But a block away, the same complex has a dull, gray face on Amsterdam Avenue.

On his travels around the country, Whyte has encountered blank walls most often in smaller and medium-sized cities "shell-shocked" by the rise of suburban shopping centers. "They've lost their ego to the suburbs, so they say, 'If you can't beat 'em, join 'em,'" Whyte said with a shrug.

Many of these communities' new buildings are designed by "architects who don't know the street and are afraid of it. They're up the wall with fear of undesirables. They think the city is a place of wins, porno shops, that sort of thing."

Albuquerque, N.M., a city with some colorful, interesting streets, has been marred by several faceless megastructures, Whyte says.

Some big cities have the same problem. Downtown Los Angeles, he says, is awash with new blank walls. "They ought to have their heads examined," he says. "They're blowing their big chance."

To Whyte, the man who symbolizes these trends is John Portman, the architect and developer whose many hotels are known for centering on a dramatic atrium and shunning the street.

Portman admits the streets outside his Renaissance Center and Bonaventure Hotel are dead. But he says they were dead to begin with, and nothing he could have done would have changed that.

"Unless there's already a critical mass of street activity, you can't stick shops down there," he says. "They'd just go out of business."

In his exhibit, Whyte offers examples of streets with faces instead of walls. Madison Avenue on the upper East Side of Manhattan is wonderfully vital because of its "second-storyness": windows not only on the street level but on the second and third floors.

In Boston, Boylston Street offers a contrast. Its north side, across from the Prudential Center, is lined with older buildings that have several stories of shops and restaurants. On the other side, the Prudential offers a bleak lining of walls and garage entrances.

Whyte fears the war against blank walls will not be won easily.

"They have a message: mistrust for the city," Whyte says. "They are an expression of alienation from the city that runs pretty deep."

Much Radiation Said 'Unneeded'

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Americans undergo millions of dental and medical X-rays every year and a consumer group which says much of the radiation is unnecessary is urging people to ask more questions before they agree to the tests.

The Health Research Group has produced a guide for consumers called "The X-Ray Information Book." It was written by Priscilla W. Laws, a physics professor who worked with the group to study the risks involved in needless diagnostic X-rays.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the health group, which is affiliated with Ralph Nader's Public Citizen organization, said that X-ray tests "properly and appropriately done, are an important part of the practice of medicine and dentistry."

"But what about X-rays that should not have been done at all or ones that were done with poorly functioning equipment, poor techniques or inadequate patient protection? In each case, the patient is the victim of unnecessary radiation and its attendant hazards."

Wolfe said consumers should ask doctors and dentists exactly why each X-ray is needed. Is it simply a repeat of a similar procedure done relatively recently? Why can't the existing X-ray be used? If you decide you don't want a new X-ray, tell your doctor. If the doctor refuses to listen, Wolfe said, consider changing doctors.

Wolfe said members of the medical profession are getting used to people asking more questions. And he said consumers should think carefully about dealing with a doctor who is unwilling to listen to a second opinion — from another doctor or from patients themselves.

According to "The X-Ray Information Book," more than 150 million people had at least one diagnostic X-ray last year. And the guide estimates that 30 percent are unnecessary. Wolfe also said that as many as one-fifth of the X-ray units checked by state radiation inspectors are not in compliance with the law, "often causing patients to be exposed to excessive and illegal amounts of radiation emitted from faulty equipment."
