A Throng Of Pilgrims In Good Friday Procession

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — In the walled Old City where Jesus died 1,950 years ago, Franciscan monks led a solemn procession along the Via Dolorosa on Good Friday, following the path that Jesus is believed to have walked to his Crucifixion.

Protestants held a service at the Garden Tomb, a tranquil park a few hundred yards north of the city walls.

Only a handful of police could be seen guarding the pilgrims along the 1,000-yard-long Via Dolorosa, the Street of Sorrows. There was no sign of the fully armed border police who used to escort the pilgrims and watch from rooftops to guard against violence.

The streets of the Old City were crowded with pilgrims and tourists. Outside the walls the roads were congested with visitors spending Easter and the coinciding Jewish Passover holiday in Jerusalem.

Nevertheless, there was a noticeable drop in the number of pilgrims. The Tourism Ministry expected 70,000 visitors for Easter and Passover, a drop of at least 10 percent from last year. The Middle East's tensions and the West's recession were believed to be keeping pilgrims away.

The procession set out from the first Station of the Cross, where Jesus was tried, and wound along the narrow street to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, which Roman Catholic and Orthodox tradition hold to be the site of Calvary, where Jesus died.

Many of the pilgrims in the groups shouldered wooden crosses supplied by a Franciscan monastery.

Inside the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, followers of various Christian denominations chanted prayers around the grotto of Jesus' tomb in the wide diversity of languages and Christian rites.

Within a radius of 200 yards, Moslems, who worship every Friday, piped prayers over loudspeakers, while hundreds of Jews clustered at the Wailing Wall to celebrate the fourth day of the Passover week commemorating the Israelite exodus from the pharaoh's Egypt.

Greenville's Crime Rate Soared In '82

The city of Greenville experienced a 16-percent increase in crime during 1982 — the largest increase among 15 cities listed in the preliminary annual report of crime published by the North Carolina Police Information Network.

But Police Chief Glenn Cannon and state officials suggested that the reason Greenville showed the largest increase might be because the department is more accurate in its reporting.

Following Greenville in the preliminary report was Gastonia, with a 13 percent increase; Charlotte with an 11 percent hike, and Goldsboro with an 8 percent jump.

Durham showed no increase in crime during 1982, the report said, while Rocky Mount and Raleigh listed a 1 percent increase and Wilson a 5 percent decrease.

"Greenville was used as a model city" when PIN began collecting the crime data several years ago, Cannon said. "We turn in everything," he said.

While the local department reports thefts from "$1 up," Cannon said Kinston doesn't "report anything under $200" and other cities don't report "anything under $500."

"We've checked and if we didn't report anything under $200," Greenville's increase in 1982 over 1981 would be about 4 percent, Cannon said.

PIN Director William Corley said Greenville is one of 32

"incident base cities" out of 440 law enforcement agencies which provide the network with "more accurate data."

Corley said "we get to look at all investigative reports that come in" to the Greenville department, "whereas agencies not on the incident base reporting system only give us a summary of data. There is no way of verifying whether they are giving all of it to us or not."

He said "only a few" of the 15 cities listed in the preliminary report are incident base cities.

The report showed that total index crimes in Greenville in 1982 totaled 2,984 as compared with 2,577 in 1981. Property crimes totaled 2,770 last year, compared with 2,448 in 1981, while violent crimes totaled 214 as compared to 129 in 1981.

The report showed five murders and 16 rapes last year, as compared with two murders and 10 rape cases in 1981; 1,801 larcenies and 855 burglaries last year as compared with 1,626 larcenies and 750 burglaries in 1981; and 114 motor vehicle thefts and 87 robberies in 1982 as compared with 72 motor vehicle thefts and 39 robberies the year before.

The preliminary report indicated that, state-wide, crime rose only 2 percent during 1982. The largest increase was in robberies, which increased 9 percent, followed by a 3 percent increase in larcenies.

March Saw Mild Drop In Civilian Unemployed

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate declined to 10.3 percent in March as hundreds of thousands of the discouraged jobless — not counted in the rate — apparently waited for stronger signals they would find work before renewing their search for a job, the government reported today.

The seasonally adjusted rate fell for only the second time since the economy plunged into a deep recession in the summer of 1981. The 0.1 percentage point decline in unemployment followed two months of standstill 10.4 percent civilian joblessness.

Nonetheless, nearly 11.4 million people remained on the unemployment rolls.

The department recorded an additional 1.8 million "discouraged workers," Americans who have given up their search for a job and are thus not counted as unemployed members of the labor force. The figure matched the previous calculation of discouraged workers.

An alternate unemployment rate that includes the 1.7 million military personnel stationed in the United States fell an identical 0.1 percentage point — from 10.2 percent to 10.1 percent.

There were several bright signs of improving job prospects in the March statistics reported today.

The number of "discouraged workers," for instance, held steady after rising for the last six consecutive quarters.

In addition, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported, the number of people forced to accept part-time work last month for lack of anything better fell by nearly 500,000, to 6.2 million. Most of that decline, the bureau noted, "was among workers who usually work full-time but experienced a reduction in their weekly hours."

And the average workweek rose by 30 minutes to a seasonally adjusted 34.9 hours, following a decline in working hours in February.

Shuttle Poised For Lift

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The shuttle Challenger, poised for Monday's takeoff, is a safer spacecraft because of lessons learned from engine leaks that delayed its inaugural launch for 2½ months, say space agency officials.

"We have stubbed our toe, but we have not broken our leg," said Air Force Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, who heads the shuttle program.

The faulty engines have been fixed and improved, and quality control and management have been tightened throughout the shuttle program, Abrahamson said Thursday.

"The price that we're paying for this — a 2½-month slip — is small compared to the real gain in efficiency and operational capability that we'll have later on when we'll be operating at high launch rates," he said.

The long launch countdown, which began Wednesday, continued to progress smoothly toward a liftoff of America's second shuttle, scheduled at 1:30 p.m. EST Monday.

"Essentially everything is going smoothly, and we're very pleased," test director Stan Gross told reporters today.

The spaceship's fuel lines were purged, its tanks pressurized and its computers checked Thursday. Main tasks today were servicing the power-producing fuel cells and checking the communications satellite in the cargo bay.

The four astronauts assigned to Challenger's debut were winding up their simulator training at the Johnson Space Center in Houston and were to fly here late today to make final flight preparations.

They are Paul J. Weitz, commander; Air Force Col. Karol J. Bobko, pilot; and mission specialists Story Musgrave and Donald H. Peterson. Their main task during five days in orbit will be to deploy the world's largest, most complex communications satellite. Musgrave and Peterson plan a 3½-hour space walk in the ship's open cargo bay on Thursday.

Authorities Confirm At Least 200 Dead In Colombian Quake

POPAYAN, Colombia (AP) — Authorities today confirmed at least 200 dead from a powerful earthquake and the provincial governor appealed for help for this shattered city, where tourists and religious pilgrims joined in a desperate search for survivors.

In a nationwide radio broadcast, Provincial Governor Amalia de Salazar said the most urgent needs for Popayan and the surrounding area were for drinking water or water purification drugs, tents, portable stoves and large pots for cooking collective meals for the many homeless.

Doctors appealed for drugs — especially pain killers — and also for rat poison because many of the destroyed buildings, some dating back to the 17th century, were infested with vermin.

First aid shipments, organized by the International Red Cross, arrived at the airport in Cali, 92 miles north of here, from Canada, according to Radio Caracol.

The United States, France, Spain, Ecuador, Panama and Venezuela mobilized a massive aid effort, but the transfer of supplies from the airport was very difficult, officials said.

Local authorities said 132 dead had so far been identified and that there were about 70 unidentified bodies. At least 500 were injured, authorities said. A hundred buildings were destroyed in the neighboring towns of Cajibío, Piendamó and Mondomo, where 15 of the dead and 50 of the injured were found. More than a dozen villages in the area also were hard hit but details of the devastation were not immediately available.

In Popayan, 235 miles southwest of Bogotá, more than 3,000 homes and other buildings, including the Roman Catholic cathedral, were destroyed, officials said. Many families spent the night in the streets in makeshift shelters of plastic and sticks.

The 18-second tremor, measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale, hit at approximately 8:15 a.m. local time, collapsing buildings throughout this provincial capital of 200,000 people and sending panicked residents into the streets.

The entire ceiling of the cathedral, which dates to Spanish colonial times, collapsed on some 200 worshippers, killing at least 15 people and trapping about 100 others until rescue teams dug them out. More victims were expected to be found under the debris, which was piled 15 feet high in some places.

The city's sewage system and water purifying plants were badly damaged. The telephone exchange was knocked out and telephone company officials said they doubted it could be repaired.

President Belisario Betancur, who toured the stricken area two hours later, called the earthquake "a terrible catastrophe."

"The cathedral, the churches, the convents and the university have been left in ruins," he told reporters. "There is no water, there is no electricity. Many sections of the city have been partially destroyed and many homes damaged."

Betancur placed the city under military control, and army troops and police patrolled the streets all night to prevent looting.

Rescue efforts centered on the demolished cathedral. Lines of people, including children, passed masonry and timbers hand to hand outside while men inside dug through the wreckage. Some wept openly as they worked.

Nearby, a pile of rubble marked the spot where a two-story house had stood. As rescue workers dug feverishly into the mound, a child was heard crying: "Mommy. Mommy. Help me. I can't see. It hurts Mommy."

EAR OPERATION APPEAL

With Hotline's help Bill Moore of Bethel did some research on the plight of a family written of in a recent Associated Press article as needing an ear operation for a 12-year-old son and being just over the legal limit for public assistance to have the surgery done at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem.

Arrangements have now been made to have the surgery done at Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill and Moore has set up a fund administered through his church to help foot the hospital bill and other related expenses. Vernon Shawn Collins, 12, of Kernersville, near Winston-Salem, will have the operation in the near future if the funds are generated. His father, Vernon Collins, 57, is said by his wife, Elizabeth, also 57, to be terminally ill with cancer. He is a patient in Baptist Hospital. There is a 13-year-old daughter and Mrs. Collins has recently been laid off from her job in a High Point embroidery firm.

Anyone wishing to assist this family may send a tax-deductible check to the Vernon Shawn Collins Fund of King's Crossroad Free Will Baptist Church, c/o Roy C. Jones, treasurer, Route 2, Box 345C, Farmville, N.C. 27828. Anyone having inquiries may call Moore, 825-7111, after 6 p.m. any evening.

CAREER DEVELOPMENT SEMINAR...was held for members of project's fashion show.(AP Laserphoto)

Young Gang Girls Attend Seminar To Dress For Success

PICO RIVERA, Calif. (AP) — A polka dot miniskirt and outsized black shoes were among the fashions donned by unlikely models — female gang members hoping to leave behind their often jobless street life.

The fashion show attracted about 65 teen-age girls, many of them members of Hispanic gangs, who listened to tips on applying makeup, dressing for interviews and finding information about entry-level work in data processing and hospital service.

"They (Los Angeles County) asked me to put on a softball league and I said no," said Carmen Ybarra, 24, a former gang member who set up the project through the Los Angeles County Youth Gang Services project. "They won't benefit from that. They'll go home and their kids'll still be hungry and they won't have a job."

The seminar last week was geared to combat the "tough" gang image which often offends employers, Ms. Ybarra said.

A public park building in this Los Angeles suburb was decked out with pink paper garlands and balloons. A professional makeup man touched up eyes and lips while girls traded jeans for dresses.

"I'm going to wear a miniskirt?" asked Yvette Hinojos, 17. "I don't know how they talked me into it!" A small audience applauded as she modeled a polka dot dress, parading in the only matching black pumps available — three sizes too large.

The seminar was geared to provide an alternative help the teens improve their image, Ms. Ybarra said.

"Some of these girls are proud of being cholas (female Hispanic gang members)," Ms. Ybarra said, but added that inside they want to get out of the gang life. "You stick a label on yourself and then you can't change it."

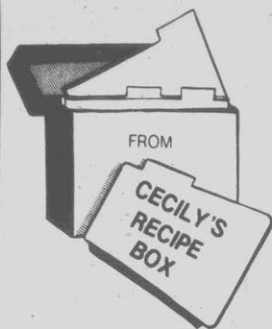

The counselor said she herself has changed her style, and old friends sometimes don't recognize her in her tailored suits and subdued makeup.

"If I can do it, they can do it," she said.

Deidre Curtis, 17, modeling a gauzy gown, said her drug counselor told her about the seminar.

"Maybe it's a start for me. I don't know," she said. "That's what we're here for — to show that there's more than getting high or whatever."

Cooking Is Fun

When I was in my early teens, growing up in Canada, my mother used to keep a big jar of Olive Cheese Spread in the refrigerator for various uses.

Spread on thin slices of home-made bread, it made delectable sandwiches for tea time.

Or sometimes it would be spread on whole wheat bread and layered with lettuce and crisp slices of bacon for sandwiches to enjoy with hot tomato soup for lunch.

It was also used as a stuffing for the tender inner ribs of celery. The stuffed celery would be cut in short lengths and served as an hors d'oeuvre.

Since those years ago, I've used the Olive Cheese Spread in several different ways. For instance, I've stuffed hollowed out cherry tomatoes with it. I've also used it to top slices of cucumber.

And just the other day, a friend who was in my kitchen while I was making a batch of the Spread, dreamed up a new way of using it. He heated a few packaged tacos to crisp them, filled them with some of the Spread and topped them with shredded lettuce and diced tomato. Very satisfying, he said.

In our long-ago Canadian kitchen, the cheese for the Spread was, of course, grated by hand and the olives and walnuts chopped with a knife. But I made my recent batch in a food processor much more speedily than it can be made by hand. The following recipe gives directions for doing just that.

PROCESSOR OLIVE CHEESE SPREAD
1/2 cup pimiento-stuffed green olives (3 ounces)
1/2 cup walnuts (2 ounces)
8 ounces cheddar cheese (sharp or extra-sharp)
1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard

In a food processor, with the metal blade, coarsely chop the olives and walnuts, pulsing 6 or 7 times — the walnuts should be the size of small peas. Remove only the metal blade.

Insert the medium shredding disc and shred the cheese; turn cheese, olives and walnuts into a 1-quart storage bowl that has a tight fitting cover. Add mayonnaise and mustard; with a spoon, mix thoroughly. Store, covered, in the refrigerator. Makes about 2 and 1-3rd cups.

SPINAL PROBLEM

NEW YORK (AP) — An estimated 10,000 American teenagers have scoliosis, an abnormal curvature of the spine which can lead to serious physical deformity if left untreated.

In scoliosis, the spine curves from side to side and also twists, throwing the body out of line.

Many adolescents can live normal lives with proper treatment. Several kinds of back braces, worn from one to three years, are used to correct the problem. In severe cases, surgery may be required.

Couple Marries Recently

FARMVILLE — Sophia Angela Szymczek and John David Stokes Jr. were married March 19 in the First Christian Church here. The Rev. Lee Parker performed the double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Szymczek of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Atha Stokes of Washington and the late John David Stokes.

The honor attendant was Caroline Szymczek of Washington, sister of the bride, and the best man was the brother of the bridegroom of Newport News, Va., George C. Stokes.

Miriam Bailey played the organ for the ceremony. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Parker.

The couple lives near Greenville. The bride is a register nurse and works at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She graduated from East Carolina University School of Nursing. The bridegroom is a quality control supervisor at Vermont American Corp. in Greenville. He graduated from Washington High School and attended Beaufort Community College and the University of North Carolina.

Dear Abby

A Wedding Blessing For Young Marrieds

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, "Lisa," is attending college but of state. Last fall she told us she had met someone "special," but we didn't know it was serious until she came home for Thanksgiving with an engagement ring on her finger and "Charlie" on her arm! He's a quiet, well-mannered young man — also a college student. We thought it was much too fast, but Lisa was so happy and so obviously in love that we accepted the situation.

The kids told us they wanted a big church wedding, reception and all the trimmings this summer, so we started making plans. We "met" Charlie's parents on the phone. They seemed bewildered and didn't even know their son had a girlfriend!

Last weekend the kids came home and told us that they had been secretly married since Christmas! We are still hurt by this deception. They told several others, and now all their friends know and so do most of ours. We do not feel right about putting on a big, showy church wedding and reception with all the trimmings.

We spoke with our minister, and he suggested a "wedding blessing" with just the immediate family.

Charlie's family live 2,000 miles away, and they don't know their son is already married. We want to do the right thing, but don't know what that is. Please help us.

UNDER PRESSURE IN HIGHLAND PARK

DEAR UNDER: What kind of ceremony did the kids have? If it was just a civil ceremony, they could have a simple church wedding with the families and a few close friends present. Under the circumstances, I think a big, showy wedding and reception with all the trimmings would be inappropriate.

DEAR ABBY: I had polio as a child and consequently my left foot is two sizes smaller than my right. In order to get a pair of shoes I can wear, I have to buy two pair in different sizes. This leaves me with an extra pair of brand new shoes that I may as well throw in the garbage! This hurts my thrifty nature.

I have at least 20 pairs of beautiful, expensive shoes in my attic (the left shoe is 4B and the right shoe is 6B.) If I could sell them for a third of what they cost me, it would make me very happy.

I tried placing an ad in our local paper, but the only two people who called did so to ridicule me. (They must have thought I was some kind of weirdo.)

My question: Do you know of any shoe company that will sell mismatched shoes?

MY FEET DON'T MATCH

DEAR FEET: No, but you're in luck. There is a club you can join. It's a "mismatch shoe service" for men, women and children whose feet also "don't match." (Amputees, as well.)

There is a nominal fee for placing your name and needs in the registry. For information, write to: National Odd Shoe Exchange, Rural Route No. 4, Indianola, Iowa 50125.

Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope when writing for information about how to join.

Officers Installed By Order Of Eastern Star

"Friendship" was the theme for the installation of officers ceremony for Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of the Eastern Star. The ceremony was held Saturday evening at the Greenville Masonic Temple.

Installed were: Worthy Matron, Margaret M. Schiller; Worthy Patron, Bryce W. Tharp; Associate Matron, Ruth Forrest; Associate Patron, Alonza E. Forrest; Secretary, Jean K. Tharp; Conductress, Gertrude Andrews; Associate Conductress, Gay Garris; Chaplain, Mary J. Freeland; Marshal, Agnes Bunch; Organist, Marguerite Cook; Adah, Grace Hill; Ruth, Sarah Caprell; Esther, Nancy Corbett; Martha, Camille Leggett; Electa, Julia Lilly; Warder, Jane Adams; and Sentinel, Ellen Bostick.

Presiding officers were Jerome Botick, Worthy Patron, and Mrs. Corbett, Worthy Matron, who gave the welcome.

MARGARET SCHILLER

Distinguished persons attending were: Mrs. Glenn W. Garner, Past Grand Matron, who served as the Installing Grand Chapter Officer, and Marie Ray, District Deputy Grand Matron of the Seventh District; Joyce Wheeler, Past Matron, Installing Grand Marshal; Fred Chappelle, Past Patron, Installing Grand Chaplain; and Corabob Turnage, Past Matron, Installing Grand Organist. They were introduced by Mrs. Garner. They assisted her in the installation which followed the farewell addresses of Mrs. Corbett and Bostick.

Mrs. Schiller and Tharp gave acceptance addresses and introduced members of their family including: Mrs. Schiller's daughter, Jane; her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schiller and grandsons, Martin III and Andrew, all of Atlanta, Ga.; M-Sgt. and Mrs. Marshall Schiller, another son and daughter-in-law of Beaufort, S.C. and Marzelle Dillon of Charlotte. Tharp introduced his wife.

Mrs. Schiller was presented the gavel by her son, Martin, which was given to her by another son and daughter-in-law of Dandridge, Iowa, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Schiller. A musical tribute to Mrs. Schiller and Tharp was presented by Marie Mills accompanied by Mrs. Cook. Pages were Mrs. Schiller's grandsons.

Mrs. Corbett was escorted to the east and presented her jewel pin by Mrs. Tharp and it was pinned by her husband, Carlton. Mrs. Bostick presented her husband a jewel pin.

The chapter room was decorated with red camellias and spring flowers, seven branch candelabra holding white tapers entwined with ivy and a cross adorned with greenery.

A reception followed and was held in the Sugg-Whitchard dining room. The table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of camellias and spring flowers flanked by candelabra holding white tapers. Red bows and greenery accented the table. Jean Riggan poured punch assisted by Thelma Allen, Blanche Jackson, Evelyn Davenport, Penny Garris, Gay Garris, Norma Barnes, Gertrude Andrews, Jane Adams, Ruth Forrest, Sarah Caprell and Mary Freeland.

Audrey Felton, the Rev. Adrian Brown and Jerome Bostick greeted guests and Estelle Tucker and Lillian Hendrix presided at the register.

Margaret Gray, treasurer, will be installed at a later date.

Keep In Touch

Nearly half a million people in North Carolina have hearing problems. It has been said that blindness cuts one off from things, but a loss of hearing shuts one off from people.

"There are a number of ways to help someone with a hearing loss keep in touch," says Isabelle Buckley, extension gerontology specialist, North Carolina State University.

A television equipped with a headset can let a person with impaired hearing keep in touch with the world of news, education and entertainment. Headsets can be purchased in music supply stores and can be attached to any television set.

The Agricultural Extension Service has directions for attaching a headset to a TV in its bulletin "Sound Ideas." The bulletin is available through your county office.

The telephone company also offers telephone aids for the hard of hearing. There is an amplified telephone handset with recessed volume control for incoming voice.

Loud bells and chimes, flashing lights and "lamps that light up" are also offered to help the hard of hearing know that the telephone is ringing.

When talking face to face with someone with a hearing problem, first get his attention by speaking his name. It helps to move in close, speak distinctly and more slowly, Miss Buckley says.

Introduce the subject clearly and early in the conversation, and use only necessary words to put the message across. "The person speaking should avoid getting between a bright light and the person listening, and not sit in the shadows, as many people do some lip reading to get meaning," Miss Buckley says.

Giovanni, Giovanni

The saga of a bigamist who "tied the knot" 105 times (that's what he said) has earned a place in the record of notoriety.

Giovanni Vigliotto's lawyer is planning to appeal the 28 years for fraud and the 4 years, 7 months sentence, plus a $336,000 fine for good measure.

The jury took just 90 minutes in early February to convict Vigliotto on fraud and bigamy counts; and this month decided on a sentence within limits of what the law allows.

The four women and eight men obviously did not look lightly at the story of one man "marrying" 105 women to defraud them of whatever goods and cash he could get his hands on.

Poetic justice rather than the unimaginative and conventional by-the-book punishment does seem applicable; and there-in lie many, many possibilities.

To make the punishment fit the crime(s), suppose Giovanni was ordered to support his various "wives" in the manner to which they were accustomed.

Or, to suppose again, he was to be continually exposed to the fury of 105 women scorned. (Remember? "Hell hath no fury, etc. etc.")

No matter. While Giovanni Vigliotto made light of the law and social contracts, the law cannot take him lightly, or we would all be doomed.

He may not have won himself a place in the history books, but the Guinness' editors may be interested in Giovanni. Not even Pretty Boy Floyd rates mention in that annual publication.

Fitting Tribute

Greenville's $12.5 million water treatment plant has been named in honor of Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne.

The announcement was made by Mayor Percy Cox, to Horne's surprise, at the dedication ceremonies for the new facility last week.

Horne has served as director of utilities since 1968. Prior to that he was on the board of directors and served as chairman. He is a Greenville native who has maintained high interest in the development of the community.

Horne has helped guide the financing and construction of the water plant, and also of a waste water treatment facility which is expected to be under construction this year. He has also helped develop the N.C. Municipal Power Agency which promises cheaper electric power for participating municipalities.

The naming of the water treatment plant for Charles O'Hagen Horne is a fitting honor.

Tales Of Woe May Hurt Everyone

RALEIGH — Is Duke Power Co. hurting the state's industrial recruitment efforts through unduly pessimistic reports on the future of the state's electricity supply?

That sentiment has surfaced in the General Assembly this year in light of some statements made by Duke Power President Bill Lee. It is felt that in complaining about new utility laws, Duke Power is painting an overly pessimistic picture of how much electricity we'll have in the mid 1990s.

This story starts last summer after the state's utilities suffered two major losses in the assembly. They lost the automatic provisions of Construction Work in Progress (CWIP) and they got stuck with a fuel adjustment clause they didn't like. Almost immediately after the session ended, Lee started meeting with small groups of legislators.

His message was, and continues to be, that this state faces a crisis about a dozen years down the road. These changes in the law have made it more difficult for Duke Power to raise the money it needs to build new power plants. If those plants aren't started soon, we won't have them working in time to meet the demand of the mid '90s.

This position is contradicted by a recent report by the N.C. Public Staff which says that electrical demand will grow more slowly than Duke Power foresees and that we'll have plenty in 1995 without new power plants.

Several legislators have reported that Lee, in his presentation, told of a big industry which wanted to locate somewhere around Salisbury. That firm, the legislators have said they were told, went elsewhere because Lee told them his fears of a future electricity shortage.

When Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth appeared before the House Public Utilities Committee he said he had no idea of what industry Lee was talking about. So far as he knows, no industry has rejected North Carolina because of electricity, Faircloth said. Gov. Jim Hunt said at a recent press conference that he knew of no such industry. He discounted the story, saying the industry probably just told Lee what he wanted to hear.

Dan Besse of the N.C. Conservation Council told the committee that Lee, in providing overly pessimistic information to industry, was hurting the state's industrial recruitment. That charge infuriated Rep. Tom Rabon, D-Brunswick, but Besse answered that Duke Power was painting this gloom for its own benefit and hurting the state in the process.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, one of the severest utility critics in the assembly, is saying the same thing. "I wonder if Duke Power is discouraging industry ... It's part of a pattern by the utilities to make things look so bad to make the Legislature more pro-business and more pro-utility. Duke has gone overboard in its public reactions to make it look like there's an anti-business climate here."

John Hicks, Duke Power vice president, says Lee has never said the prospect definitely rejected North Carolina on the grounds of electricity supply. Hicks said that Lee has been careful to say only that the question about supply appeared to be a major concern to this firm. He said that Duke Power officials will continue to tell industry that they fear electrical supply will be short in the middle of the next decade. If that hurts recruitment, "that's too bad," Hicks said.

Wright thinks that all of Duke's dismal talk is coming home to roost. In an exchange with Lee at a committee meeting, Wright said that maybe Duke Power's stock would have fared better on the markets this past year if Lee wasn't spreading so many tales of woe. "I'm afraid they're creating the climate that's hurting Duke on Wall Street," he said.

Murders Symbolize Salvadoran Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was on Dec. 4, 1980, that the battered bodies of three nuns and a fourth Catholic churchwoman, all Americans, were discovered in shallow roadside graves in El Salvador.

Three had been shot in the head and one in the chest two days earlier. There was evidence at least two had been raped.

Those murders, still unsolved, continue to plague Reagan administration policy in El Salvador and throughout Central America. They are a symbol of all the unexplained civilian deaths — as many as 40,000 — in that violent-ravaged country in recent years.

Even administration officials who favor increasing military aid to the Salvadoran government agree that members of the Salvadoran security forces were responsible for the deaths of Ita Ford, 40; Maura Clarke, 46; Dorothy Kazel, 40 — all Nuns — and Jean Donovan, a lay worker.

Despite the efforts of two secretaries of state to defuse the issue, key members of Congress still want to know why the administration continues to give financial support to a government that seems reluctant to pursue the four deaths.

Congress has conditioned its approval of aid to El Salvador in the last two years on a certification by President Reagan that the Salvadoran government was making progress in solving these and other cases.

Five former Salvadoran national guardsmen have been accused in the deaths of the churchwomen, but there have been delays in bringing them to trial. Recently a judge said the evidence against them was not sufficient and returned the case to a lower court.

In recent weeks, frustrated members of Congress have suggested tying the administration's latest request for $110 million in new military aid to a solution to the murders. This still could be done.

"It's an open-and-shut case," contended Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., during a recent appearance by Secretary of State George P. Shultz before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee.

"They are thumbing their noses. They are taking our $1 billion and saying, 'Go to hell,'" Leahy told Shultz.

The senator charged that the Salvadoran authorities refuse to prosecute the case out of fear the accused will implicate high-level officials in the military and government in this and other crimes. The administration has said, however, there isn't any evidence that the murders were ordered from above.

Shultz told the Senate panel the four murdered churchwomen should be thought of in the same context as any of the murdered civilians in that nation.

Strength For Today

Some years ago a New England community decided to reconstruct a very old church which had fallen into disrepair.

Someone found a pencil drawing of the old church which had been made by a girl who was a bed-ridden invalid. She appeared to have had considerable artistic talent. She could look out of her window to the church; she drew a picture of it, accurately and to scale. Shortly after, she passed away.

When this sketch was found, some 300 years later, the architects seized it with avidity. Here was precisely what they wanted for the restoration of the old church.

Sometimes we can make only a very little contribution to life around us and apparently none at all to the world at large. Yet God picks up some humble, sincere effort and causes it to shine with the glory of a pearl of great price.

If At First You Fail ...

"Hi, Mr. Peters, remember me? Horatio Alger the Fourth. You laid me off from the company six months ago because I was unskilled labor. Well, I just completed a welding course, and I'm ready to go back to work."

"Sorry, Horatio, but since you've been gone, the company has decided to invest in robot welders. I don't believe your welding skills are necessary any longer. Now, if you knew something about robotics."

"I don't, sir, but I'll retrain myself and become a robot serviceman. I'll see you in six months."

"That's a good idea, son. Come back when you know something about robots, Horatio, and there will be a job waiting for you."

"Hi, Mr. Peters. Well, sir, here's my certificate from the Consolidated Robot School. It says I can repair any kind of robot now on the market."

"This is very impressive. Let's see, according to your file, you were in this personnel office last July. Since you were here the company has invested in a state of the art computer that can repair the robots that make our zits. We're no longer hiring service people to take care of the robots."

"But surely, sir, you must need someone to program the computers."

"As a matter of fact we do. Have you any experience in this field?"

"I don't at the moment, but I know I can be retrained to become a computer expert. If I do well in school may I have a job with your company?"

"Of course you can. You show the spirit this corporation is always looking for."

"Hello, Mr. Peters. Long time no see."

"As I live and breathe, it's Horatio Alger the Fourth. What have you been up to for the past two years?"

"I've been going to advanced computer programming school, sir, I am now fluent in BASIC, PASCAL and FORTRAN, and can work with any software on the market. I assume the company is still looking for programmers."

"We were for a while, Horatio. But then we subcontracted all our programming work to a software company who specializes in improving robot production for zits. We no longer have a computer division of our own, except for a small section that devotes itself to collating data on the zit market and then making economic predictions on how the company should expand.

"Do not worry, Mr. Peters, I will retrain myself to become an economist with an emphasis on long-range zit planning."

"You'll need a doctorate before I can hire you."

"Do not fear, sir. I will drive a taxi during the daytime and go to school at night. If becoming an economist is the only way I can get a job, so be it — I will become one."

"You show gumption, boy. Bring me that sheepskin and you'll be on the payroll."

(Three years later.)

"Do my eyes deceive me? Is this the little Horatio Alger the Fourth who used to drop in here to see me about a job?"

"The very same, and I have something to show you. Here, sir, from the Harvard Business School, is my doctorate in Hi-Tech Economics. And here is my doctoral thesis on the future of the zit market in the 21st century, as broken down by continents and countries throughout the non-Communist world. Now that I am retrained, may I have a position with the company?"

Stable Currency Holds Key To Recovery

gloomier has become its economic picture. Says Sen. Roger Jepsen (R-Iowa), chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, "Some argue that returning to a gold standard is a drastic step. Perhaps so, but the problems the gold standard deals with most effectively — inflation, the long-term capital market and short-term interest rates — are drastic ones."

America's continuing economic crisis was touched off in 1971 when President Nixon ended the guarantee that the dollar would be worth a specific amount of gold. He hoped this devaluation would enable us to sell more goods abroad, thereby increasing U.S. employment. Instead, Nixon's termination of the last link between gold and the dollar touched off the worst inflationary decade in the nation's history.

To curb the resulting inflation, Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, declared in October 1979 that the central bank would no longer worry about controlling interest rates, but would concentrate on keeping down the overall money supply. This policy followed the "monetarist" doctrines of Nobel-laureate economist Milton Friedman, who blamed an excessive supply of dollars for inflation. The Fed's move also slowed down the economy.

The effect on interest rates was dramatic. "Real" interest rates — that is, the actual return on money after adjustment for inflation — had been fairly constant at around 2.5 percent for half a century. But following Volcker's move to control the money supply, the real rate quickly climbed — to 4.2 percent in 1979, to 6.3 percent in 1980, to 9.8 percent in 1981.

The Federal Reserve's strong medicine succeeded in rolling back inflation, and Reagan strategists expected interest rates to fall as inflation declined. Instead, real interest rates continued to inch upward, dashing hopes that Reagan's 1981 tax cuts — designed to revitalize the economy by restoring incentives to save and invest — would generate non-inflationary prosperity. The economic casualty list was long:

*With mortgage rates close to 18 percent, the real-estate boom was over, and home-building languished.

*American auto makers, groggy over Japanese competition, were delivered a near-knockout blow by 17.4 percent financing on car loans. The auto industry laid off thousands of workers, and so did steel plants and other Detroit suppliers.

*The boost in consumer credit-card rates to 19.8 percent and some installment loans to well over 30 percent discouraged buying.

*And to the dismay of the Reagan administration, high interest rates prevented corporations from taking advantage of the newly-enacted incentives for capital investment.

By the summer of 1982 Volcker was having a change of heart, and on July 30, 1982, the Fed cut the discount rate — the interest rate it charges financial institutions. The Fed also began buying more government securities, thereby increasing the money supply. Interest rates fell.

CP&L Files For Tax Break

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. has filed a request for a break on the $1.1 billion tax assessment of its Wake County property, but county officials said the request is too high.

CP&L's request was for a 34.8 percent reduction, smaller than that sought by other utilities. That percentage is equal to more than $3.5 million in tax revenue for the county based on its 1982 valuation of $1.1 billion.

Making up that loss through property taxes would require an additional five cents of property tax per $100 of valuation, which would boost the county tax rate to 88 cents from 83 cents.

City To Observe Holiday

City hall, all municipal offices and city recreation centers and gymnasiums will be closed Saturday through Monday in observance of the Easter holiday.

GREAT buses will operate on a regular schedule Saturday but city transit service will not be provided Sunday or Monday.

The city sanitation division will be closed Monday, but both residential pick-up routes will be served during the remainder of the week. Emergency calls for public works services may be made to 752-3473.

Sheppard Memorial Library and its branches will observe Saturday through Monday for Easter.

County Board To Meet Tuesday

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 West Fifth St. The board will not meet Monday as usual because of the Easter Monday holiday.

Included on the agenda is the opening of bids for three solid waste container pickup trucks; scheduling meetings for the Board of Equalization and Review for 10 a.m. April 6, and 2 p.m. on April 18 and May 2, and a review of the Department of Transportation's secondary road plan.

Rose Students To Visit France

A group of J.H. Rose High School French students, enrolled with the American Institute for Foreign Study, will leave Saturday to visit France.

The tour will include visits to Paris attractions as well as the Loire Valley region of castles such as Amboise and Chenonceau. A highlight will be a visit to the Mont St. Michel monastery.

Making the trip are Robert Bond, Willa Stancill, Jody Ross, Tammy Strum, Alex Laughter, Lisa Whitlow, French teacher, Nell Williams and Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Boyd.

They will leave Raleigh-Durham Airport Saturday morning en route to the Newark, N.J., airport. They will fly on to Paris later Saturday.

Science Fair Winners Named

Winners have been announced in the Falkland Elementary School's Science Fair. They are:

Fourth and 5th grades — 1st, Tracy Lawrence; 2nd, Eric Hale, and 3rd, Carrie Hale. Their projects will be entered in the East Carolina University Science Fair April 15.

Third grade — 1st, Misty Joyner; 2nd, Deborah Evans, and 3rd, Allen Barrow.

Group Experiments With Computers

A program on utilization of computer technology including hands-on experience with computers highlighted the annual spring meeting of the East Carolina University Adult Education Association last week.

ECU Chancellor John Howell addressed approximately 40 members attending the meeting. Howell was awarded an honorary lifetime membership in the organization.

For information about the association, call Kathy Sprau at 355-2712 or the ECU Office of Adult Education, 757-6825.

Pitt Republicans To Meet Tuesday

The Pitt County Republican Party will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the basement of Planters National Bank at the intersection of Third and Washington streets. The agenda includes planning for the district convention.

Crop Insurance Sales Extended

The Federal Crop Insurance Corp. has extended all-risk crop insurance sales for 1983 spring crops in North Carolina to April 15, according to Jim Taylor, district director for eastern North Carolina.

Producers interested in securing protection on spring crops should contact their local federal crop insurance agent, Taylor said, or call 1-800-447-4700 toll free.

A list of agents is available at the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, he said.

Bethel Town Board To Meet

The Bethel Town Board of Commissioners will hold its regular meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the town office.

The following items will be discussed: putting up a community bulletin board, position of the 201 sewage disposal plan, U.S. Geological water survey of eastern North Carolina, N.C. model housing code and the state building code, evaluation of water, administrative and police department supervisors, updating of the cemetery ordinance, truck routes, releasing taxes and budget amendments.

A public hearing on appropriation of funding under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 will be held. Anyone interested should be at the town office by 7:30 p.m.

Child Wins Baby Contest

James West Potter, 14-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Potter Jr. of Ayden, is the winner of this year's Beautiful Baby Contest sponsored by the Greenville Jay-C-ettes to raise money for the March of Dimes.

Of the $1,638.04 raised in the contest which ended last Saturday, more than $300 was contributed by supporters of the winner. The first runner-up was Cherry Leigh Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Smith of Greenville, and the second runner-up, Amanda Paige Pollard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kirby Pollard of Greenville.

Winterville Awards Contracts

The Winterville Town Board of Aldermen has awarded contracts to Allgood Builders for the rehabilitation of six houses under the Community Development Block Grant.

Allgood Builders were low bidders with the following individual bids: $13,990, $11,945, $12,495, $12,975, $14,680 and $7,775.

The board also approved the citizen participation plan, the affirmative action plan, the equal employment opportunity policy, the contractors handbook and the administrative guidelines ($14,000 maximum spent on each house), all associated with the CDBG.

Andrews Named To Honor Roll

Edward Andrews of Bethel was among students named to the honors list for the winter quarter at Martin Community College. The honors list is reserved for students compiling a 3.5 grade-point average for their respective course loads.

Andrews is enrolled in the forest management program.

Classes Present 'Three Bears'

The kindergarten classes of Eastern Elementary School presented a musical play, "Goldilocks and the Three Bears" at the school this morning. A number of students took part in the play, including Chris Shiver, Kristina Wooten, Amy Shive and Beth Measamer. Teachers assisting were Delores Ford, Pat Minges and Peggy Rowlett.

Drivers Injured In Accident

Cars driven by Mary Hodges Williams of 1619 East Wright Road and Betty Jean Belk of 1217A Clark St. collided about noon Wednesday at the intersection of 14th and Chestnut streets, according to Greenville police.

Officers, who said both drivers were injured in the collision, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Williams car and $600 to the Belk vehicle.

Whitfield Observers Teacher Week

G.R. Whitfield School celebrated Teacher Appreciation Week recently with a different branch of the school recognizing teachers each day for the roles they play in the lives of children.

The school administration treated the staff to coffee and doughnuts Monday and Tuesday, with media personnel and helpers presented teachers with badges reading "World's Greatest Teacher." Gifted and talented students and teachers supervised lunchroom duty Wednesday while other teachers were treated to lunch in the lounge. Thursday, the Student Government Association placed apples on the desks of staff members.

Nature got into the act Friday, giving staff members a snowy holiday. Several parents filled a table with food and drink the following Monday.

Annual Easter Program Planned

The Majestic Civic Club of Greenville will sponsor its 15th annual Mr. and Miss Easter Bunny Parade Sunday at 4:30 p.m. in Sadie Sauter School Auditorium on Fleming Street.

The highlight of the program will be the crowning of Mr. and Miss Easter Bunny 1983-84. A medley of Easter and other seasonal music will be presented by Roger Ingram, organist. Admission is free.

Warren Named To Panels

Rep. Ed Warren of Pitt County has been named to represent North Carolina on the National Conference of State Legislatures' State Federal Assembly Committee on Agriculture, Food Policy and Nutrition.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey also named Warren to a committee of the Southern Legislative Conference of the Council of State Governments designed to serve as a network to function as a liaison with Congress on issues of regional interest.

Mecklenburg Alumni Host Ensembles

The Mecklenburg County chapter of the East Carolina University Alumni Association hosted an evening of entertainment at Spirit Square in Charlotte this week.

Composer-pianist Loonis McGlohon, an ECU alumnus, collaborated with the ECU Percussion and Jazz Ensembles to present a concert.

McGlohon received a certificate of recognition from Pi Kappa Lambda, a national-international honor society in music. He also received honorary membership to Beta Zeta.

Nearly 250 people attended the concert.

The hearing will be at the Mid-East offices at 310 W. Main St. in Washington, N.C., at 9:30 a.m.

Consider Relaxing Twin-Trailer Rule

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

— North Carolina is considering allowing twin-trailer trucks on more roads than required by the federal government, endangering the lives of state motorists, Carolina Motor Club officials said Thursday.

According to the motor club, legislation has been introduced in North Carolina that would allow twin trailers on highways with 11 foot-wide lanes. This is 1 foot narrower than the 12-foot minimum specified by the federal government.

"Despite substantial evidence from both the Federal Highway Administration and other research studies pointing up the significantly increased dangers associated with these type trucks, it appears as if our state might be willing to allow them access to numerous highways beyond those mandated by the federal government," said Ralph Peters, president of the 223,000-member club.

Twin-trailer trucks are two trailers pulled by a tractor. Their use in North Carolina was authorized by the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982, passed by the last session of Congress.

Correction

A Community Services Fair will be held Tuesday at 3 p.m. at the Belk Building on the East Carolina University campus. Thursday's Daily Reflector listed the date as Saturday.

Festival To Be Discussed

The East Carolina Arts Festival, a series of April events featuring art, music, dance and drama, will be discussed on "ECU Concepts" at 8 a.m. Sunday on radio station WOOW.

Janice Faulkner, the festival's chairman and director of the ECU Regional Development Institute, will be the guest for the 15-minute program. She will be interviewed by James Rees of the ECU Department of Drama and Speech.

Tax Collections Are Reported

No Pricing Cut On Nigerian Oil

LONDON (AP) — Nigeria, which broke ranks from OPEC on oil pricing last month, says it will not alter its prices in response to this week's price cut for Britain's North Sea oil, the British Broadcasting Corp. reports.

The BBC quoted an official Nigerian statement Thursday as saying Britain's price cut of 50 cents to 75 cents per barrel was broadly in line with the policy of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and a genuine attempt to restore stability to the market.

Oil market sources said the Nigerian statement appeared to remove fears that the British action might lead to a price war with other producers.

The state-owned British Oil Corp. announced a cut Wednesday in its proposed benchmark price for North Sea crude from $30.50 a barrel to $30. It said the price of other grades would be reduced an extra 25 cents to $29.75.

Nigeria, which competes directly with Britain in the high quality oil market, had pledged to match any North Sea oil cuts below $30 dollars "cent for cent."

The long-awaited British announcement followed a March 14 agreement by OPEC to drop the benchmark price for Saudi light crude from $34 to $29 a barrel and set individual production quotas for Nigeria and the cartel's other 12 members.

Thousands Join Teen-Ager's Dream Of Nuclear Protest Trip To Europe Ended

ALDERMASTON, England (AP) — Anti-nuclear demonstrators sent thousands of multicolored balloons skyward today and joined hands in a 14-mile human chain linking three key defense facilities that span Britain's "nuclear valley."

The helium-filled balloons were freed in the early afternoon from 14 spots to mark the linkup of tens of thousands of demonstrators protesting British nuclear weapons and planned deployment of U.S. cruise missiles to counter a Soviet buildup.

Three hours before the linkup under cold and gray skies in the Thames River Valley 50 miles west of London, more than 100 peace campaigners scaled 15-foot-high chain-link fences topped with barbed wire at the Greenham Common U.S. Air Base, planned site for the cruise missiles.

A Newbury police spokesman said they were detained inside the base by British military police. Four women who scaled the Greenham fence at dawn were picked up by military police and later released without charge.

Chairman Joan Ruddock of the sponsoring Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament had estimated it would take 40,000 people to stand arm-in-arm along the route, "but we believe we have double that."

Mrs. Ruddock and police agreed it was impossible to make an exact estimate or determine whether the protesters joined hands at exactly the same time.

The event, start of an Easter weekend of anti-nuclear rallies in England and Scotland, mixed dancing and singing of 1960s protest songs like "Puff the Magic Dragon" with a message to NATO to keep its missiles out.

"The rest of the world is looking and I think they will know that the British people are determined to do something about these terrible nuclear weapons," Mrs. Ruddock said.

The protesters, who arrived by bus, car, motorbike, and foot, stood four and five deep in some places along the route holding signs that read: "Peace in the World or the World in Pieces" and "USA Death Merchants Go Home."

The chain stretched from Greenham Common past the Atomic Weapons Research establishment at Aldermaston to the Royal Ordnance Factory at Burghfield, where Britain builds nuclear warheads. The protesters call it "nuclear valley."

Traffic snarled on rural roads in this wealthy commuter belt in the rolling Berkshire hills, with dozens of buses in mile-long lines. Many of the mainly conservative local residents grumbled about the crowds.

After the organizers freed the balloons and exploded a few firecrackers, the demonstrators marched to a rally and festival at Padworth Common near Aldermaston.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Thursday the protesters would have been better off "to go and link hands round the Berlin Wall."

Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine returned today from the Berlin Wall and declared the Conservative government would never pursue the "naive and reckless road" advocated by the protesters seeking unilateral nuclear disarmament.

"We are committed to defend their (the demonstrators') freedom, however much I may disagree with the inconvenience and cost they impose on the majority of us who don't share their views," Heseltine told a London news conference.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — For six months, 17-year-old Billy Jefferson peddled M&Ms, lollipops, candies and doughnuts to scrape together enough money for a nine-day trip to Europe. He arranged for a passport and endured the necessary vaccinations, dreaming of his first airplane ride and of seeing countries besides his own.

The plane carrying the Laney High School student excursion leaves for Paris Saturday, but Jefferson won't be aboard. The Laney senior might even lose the $1,200 he raised to pay for the journey.

Jefferson was the driver of the New Hanover County school activity bus that was hit Tuesday afternoon by a tanker truck loaded with a dangerous chemical. The collision pinned Jefferson in his seat and left him with a concussion and scalp lacerations. His doctors don't know when he will be released from New Hanover Memorial Hospital. They also forbid the overseas trip.

Jefferson wasn't even being paid for driving Laney and Williston Junior High School students on their field trip to Robbins Nursery in Penderlea. He did it as a favor for the teacher, Albert Foxworth, who was in satisfactory condition Thursday afternoon at New Hanover Memorial Hospital.

All 39 students on the bus and the truck driver were injured at least slightly.

"Since it's happened, I can really tell how the Lord must have been looking after us all," Jefferson said Thursday, his husky body tucked under a gold hospital bedspread and his head wrapped in a cast resembling a heavy white ski mask. A tuft of brown hair peeked from the top of the cast, matching the color of his thin mustache and the stubble of dark whiskers on his chin.

"My life is more important than any trip," he said. "That's what I'm looking at

now. Now that it's over I just want to go ahead and get on with things."

Mary Thompson, Laney's associate principal who is accompanying seven students on the trip to France and England, said the other students have asked to postpone the trip until Jefferson can come, but that is not possible.

Rare California Condor Is Hatched In Captivity

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A tiny California condor popped out of its egg with a little human help to become the first of the vanishing species to hatch in captivity, San Diego Zoo officials said early today.

The chick, bald about the neck and head with a sparse covering of downy white feathers, was freed of its shell at about 10 p.m. Wednesday, said zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett. It weighed 201.9 grams — about 7 ounces — he said.

"Apparently, it's in good health," Jouett said exuberantly. He said keepers have not yet determined the bird's sex.

Two birdkeepers, Cyndi Kuehler and Pat Whitman — used surgical instruments and their hands to help the chick out of its light blue shell. Earlier, the rare bird had punched a hole "a bit larger than a quarter" on its own, Jouett said.

"It reached a point where it was felt that it was in the best interest of the bird to help it break out," said Jouett.

Keepers fed the hungry bird for the first time at midnight, administering "two finely chopped mice in warm water" by hand, Jouett said.

Five birdkeepers and a closed-circuit television camera monitored the progress of the tiny condor. A veterinarian was on call in case of emergency.

The team of scientists had maintained an around-the-clock "egg-watch" since Monday, when the chick first poked a hole in the shell, Jouett said.

The oblong egg, about six times the size of a chicken egg, was plucked from its parents' nest Feb. 23 by a team of scientists in the rugged back country of the condor sanctuary near Ventura.

Only about 20 California condors remain in the wild, and they are dying off at a rate of three or four a year. By removing the egg, scientists hoped to encourage the wild condor pair to produce another egg — in effect doubling the birth rate.

Before the condor was freed from the egg, Jouett said a successful hatching would rank "as one of the most important events" in the 67-year history of the San Diego Zoo, known for its captive breeding of endangered species.

To help the baby bird along, zookeepers rotated the egg by hand to make certain heat is evenly distributed. And every two hours, they played a tape recording of a "mother king vulture," a distant cousin of the condor.

"It's a form of communication that simulates what a parent might do in the wild," Jouett said. "It sounds roughly like a muted dog bark, but it seems to catch the baby condor's attention because the shell rocks to the music."

The chick will remain in the incubator at the zoo's Avian Propagation Center for at least 24 hours, Jouett said.

When it is healthy enough to travel, the chick will be placed in an isotope, similar to the germ-free plastic boxes used to house human premature babies. Then it will be transferred by ambulance to the San Diego Wild Animal Park near Escondido, a journey of 32 miles.

To help the chick feel at home far from the craggy peaks where its forebears soared, officials at the zoo have prepared a puppet show for feeding time.

The puppets look exactly like condors "because we want the baby condor to imprint on a condor face rather than a human face," Jouett said. Otherwise, he said, "If we released the baby in the wild, it might fly down to the first picnic table it sees since it would relate with humans."

The chick will be fed vulture vomit by the puppets, the same regurgitated food it would receive in the wild, he said.

A second egg is also being incubated at the zoo and is due to hatch in 10 days to two weeks.

With only three California condors, all male, now in captivity, the species "could plummet into extinction" without human intervention, Jouett said.

"We aren't sure it's going to work, but it's the very best effort humans could make at saving the condor," said Bill Toone, the zoo's condor keeper.

Car No Match For A Train

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP) — Accidents at railroad crossings left 579 Americans dead and 2,511 injured in 1982, according to the Federal Railroad Administration.

"Obviously, a motor vehicle is no match for an oncoming train," Gov. Bob Kerrey said in a statement read here Wednesday to kick off Nebraska's 1983 effort to remind the public of crossing dangers.

Since a National Safety Council program called Operation Lifesaver, began in Idaho in 1972, Nebraska, Oregon, Missouri and Iowa have joined the effort to discourage motorists from trying to beat trains over crossings.

Viets Attack Cambodian Base

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese tanks, troops and artillery routed 3,500 Khmer Rouge guerrillas from their base on the Thai-Cambodian border today, killing at least 32 civilians and wounding 150, Thai military officers said. They said they also expected an attack on a nearby camp.

The officers said at least 10,000 civilians fled across the frontier into Thailand as the guerrillas deserted their stronghold at Phnom Chat, 25 miles northeast of this Thai frontier town, and split up into small groups, fleeing north along the border.

One high-ranking officer said 32 bodies of Cambodian civilians were recovered just inside Thai territory near the anti-tank ditch that is Thailand's first line of defense.

Fifty wounded Cambodians were taken to refugee camps near the combat zone, he said, and 100 other Cambodians were treated for minor wounds.

He said that shelling was continuing south of Phnom Chat, near the Nong Samet border encampment which houses more than 70,000

Cambodian civilians, and he and other officers said they feared the Vietnamese were about to strike there.

About 30,000 Communist Khmer Rouge guerrillas and 10,000 allied non-Communist guerrillas are opposing 180,000 Soviet-backed Vietnamese troops who invaded Cambodia in 1978 and toppled the pro-Chinese Khmer Rouge regime.

Thai troops along the tense frontier were placed on full alert and there were reports of a clash between the advancing Vietnamese and Thais guarding the border.

A senior Thai military officer said fighting started before dawn when about 1,000 Vietnamese troops attacked the hilly Phnom Chat area, which straddles the Thai-Cambodian border to northeast of Aranyaprathet.

The attack was directed against Phnom Chat itself, a longtime Khmer Rouge stronghold, as well as two nearby villages — Jankago and Preymon.

The officer said fighting continued after daybreak, as 10,000 civilians huddled along the anti-tank ditch, about 200 yards inside the border.

Prasong Soonsiri, a Thai security official, held a hastily called news conference to condemn the Vietnamese attack.

He said he believed Vietnam had planned the attack several weeks earlier and had delayed it until after a conference of European and Southeast Asian foreign ministers ended in Bangkok last Friday.

"I hope the Vietnamese will not cross the Thai border. If they do, it might create a worse problem," said Prasong. "We have a right to defend the integrity of our territory."

He said the attack might be the beginning of a broader Vietnamese offensive against two other civilian and guerrilla encampments, at Nong Samet to the south and Ban Sangae to the north, which is the headquarters of non-Communist resistance leader Son Sann.

Prasong said today's attack followed skirmishing the previous two days and was carried out by units of Vietnam's 5th Division, based at the Cambodian town of Sisophon, 27 miles from the Thai border.

He said the division had a strength of 10,000 men.

N.C. Citizens Urged To Report Drug Smuggling

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina wants state residents to help catch drug smugglers by reporting suspicious boats or planes to a new toll-free number.

State Bureau of Investigation agents will man the phone 24 hours a day to take the information, and those phoning in the tips may remain anonymous.

"North Carolina's coastline has historically been a smuggler's paradise," Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said Wednesday. "We cannot cover every nook and cranny without the help of our citizens."

The number — 1-800-662-8858 — is printed on two posters. The poster on boats will be distributed to stores and marinas on the coast and the poster on airplanes will go to stores and airports around the state.

Hundreds of suspected drug smugglers have been caught because citizens reported suspicious activity. Fourteen people were recently convicted in a Brunswick County case because a man reported an unusually large plane landing at a local airport, he said.

"They do not have to give their names," Edmisten said. "People are often afraid to report drug information because of the danger of reprisal. Drug pushers mean business. They will kill one another and kill other people."

The boat poster asks citizens to look for 29 suspicious signs including:

— Boats transferring cargo from one to another at sea or tied up to each other at sea.

— Boats landing in isolated areas and being met by trucks or recreational vehicles.

— Boats purchased with cash and left registered in the former owner's name.

— Installation of unusually sophisticated electronic gear.

— Absence of women or children on pleasure craft.

The plane poster, which says, "No plane should be above suspicion," lists 22 suspicious signs including:

— Passenger seats removed from aircraft.

— Maps and charts of foreign countries, especially Latin America and the Caribbean.

— Large cash payments for aircraft, fuel and services.

— Failure to produce sufficient gas receipts to account for elapsed flying time in a rental airplane.

Poisoned Home Razed, Buried

NEW YORK (AP) — An $80,000 house was bulldozed and its contents were buried after state officials determined it was contaminated by a dangerous chemical used to rid it of termites, a newspaper reported today.

The chemical, Aldrin, was sprayed "inside the walls, beams, ceilings, linen closets, pantry and all over" the house in suburban East Islip, according to Vincent Hand of Bay Shore, an attorney representing the homeowners, Jeffrey and Dorothea Lever.

Hand told the New York Daily News that the Levers ordered the home destroyed after their insurance company agreed to replace it.

Aldrin is an insecticide intended only for below-ground application around the outside of buildings, according to Donald Middleton, regional director of the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

The Daily News quoted unidentified sources as saying Mrs. Lever suffered a miscarriage within a month after the chemical was sprayed. Another pregnant woman who had stayed in the Levers' house immediately after the spraying obtained a medical abortion on the advice of her physician, the News quoted state environmental officials as saying.

Hand said the Levers' two children, a 3-year-old girl and a 1-year-old boy, have suffered liver damage as a result of their exposure to the toxic fumes.

John Meister, of the environmental conservation department, said his office had received "dozens of phone calls from concerned citizens" about the contamination. The house was located less than 100 yards from the Timber Point Elementary School.

"There is no problem to the community," said Lever, 26, a New York City firefighter. "The problem was to the people living in the house. Now that the house is gone, the danger is gone."

Court Refuses Reopen School

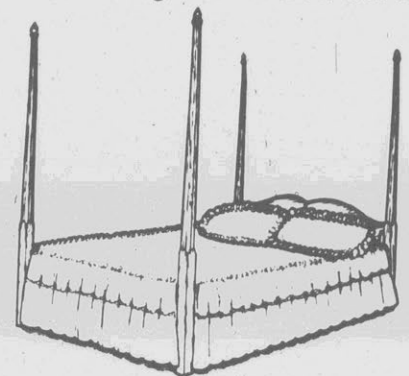

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In a 2-1 opinion, a panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has refused to order the reopening of Forest Hill Elementary School, which parents had once tried to turn into a "squatters' school."

Chris Roy, an attorney representing the parents, said Wednesday he would file a plea for a rehearing. The school was closed as part of a 1980 desegregation plan imposed on all public schools in Rapides Parish by U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott.

Judge Warns Teamster Prexy His Sentence Will Be Severe

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge will probably reduce a 55-year prison term for Teamsters President Roy L. Williams, but says the labor leader deserves a harsh penalty because his attempt to bribe a U.S. senator attacked "the very vitals of society."

U.S. District Judge Prentice H. Marshall took note Thursday of Williams' status as "president of one of the most powerful organizations in the free world" in ordering the provisional 55-year sentence for the Teamster leader's part in a conspiracy to bribe former Sen. Howard Cannon.

"Persons who achieve such high position should be expected to be treated severely when they use the office for corrupt purposes as he did," the judge said.

Marshall said the sentence probably sounded "horrendous" but likely would be "significantly reduced" after a 90-day medical assessment at the federal medical prison facility in Springfield, Mo., where Williams is to report by April 15. Final sentencing will be June 27.

Williams, 68, suffers from severe emphysema. He appeared in court on Thursday with tubes in his nose and a tank of oxygen at his side.

Marshall said it was inconsistent to believe Williams is unfit for imprisonment — as his lawyers contend — yet able to run the nation's largest union.

conspiracy indictment. While calling Williams "a very sick man," Marshall said, "Probation in this case would depreciate the seriousness of the offense."

"It's an attack on the very vitals of society," the judge said of the effort by Williams and four others to buy Cannon's influence in blocking trucking deregulation legislation opposed by the Teamsters in exchange for exclusive rights to buy Las Vegas property.

Cannon, a Democrat who lost a re-election bid last fall, was not charged and the deregulation legislation passed with his support.

The defendants were convicted Dec. 15 of conspiracy, interstate travel to further bribery and nine counts of wire fraud.

Williams was the third Teamsters president convicted of a felony in the last 25 years. Dave Beck and the late Jimmy Hoffa were convicted on federal corruption charges.

"Mr. Williams, you sold the working man out," Marshall said. "You were willing to take the working man's pension and use it. Yes, use it for your own aggrandizement."

Three others were sentenced with Williams, who was also fined $29,000. Reputed mobster Joseph Lombardo was given 15 years in prison and fined $29,000, former Teamsters pension fund trustee Thomas O'Malley, 30 months, and Andrew Massa, a year and a day.

All three also were given five years' probation.

A fifth defendant, Teamsters associate Allen Dorfman, a millionaire insurance executive, was sentenced in January. Marshall said he believed Dorfman was the mastermind of the conspiracy to bribe Cannon.

During six weeks of pre-sentencing hearings, the government tried to depict Williams as a "handmaiden of organized crime." Prosecutors contended he was controlled by the Kansas City crime syndicate headed by the late Nick Civella.

Marshall said the links between Williams and organized crime were "not clear, unequivocal and convincing."

The irony of the case, Marshall said, was that Cannon publicly had taken a position on trucking deregulation in opposition to what the Teamsters wanted.

"There was no conceivable way he could have done other than he ultimately did," Marshall said of the former senator.

The government built its case on about 50 conversations monitored by the FBI over 13 months of electronic surveillance — believed the longest such investigation in the agency's history.

Chemical Plant Battling Claim Of Risk In Dioxin

CHICAGO (AP) — Dow Chemical Co., responding to a federal accusation that it polluted a river with dioxin, said nearby residents "would have to eat more than 25 tons of fish per year" to consume cancer-causing levels of the chemical.

The government charged Thursday that Dow's Midland, Mich., plant had contaminated the Tittabawassee River with dioxin in its most dangerous form.

Federal authorities said the claim was based on a newly completed study supporting conclusions originally reached in 1981 by the Chicago office of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, but ordered stricken from the final draft by the EPA's Washington headquarters.

Dow spokeswoman Sarah Rowley said Thursday the company has not yet had an opportunity to study the EPA report in detail but said "there appears to be nothing in the report that's inconsistent with previously published data, much of which had been generated by Dow and provided to government agencies."

Testimony before a congressional committee two weeks ago revealed the decision to delete some of the original findings after Dow had been permitted to review the report and make "comments."

Revelation of that decision also led to the resignation under White House pressure of acting EPA administrator John W. Hernandez Jr., and four other officials.

"Our studies now show that Dow is a source of contaminating the Tittabawassee River with the most-toxic form of dioxin," said Valdas Adamkus, chief of the EPA office in Chicago. "I still get angry when I think of our office being forced to delete the original findings."

Scientists so far have been unable to determine what level of dioxin is harmful to humans, but researchers contend tests on laboratory animals have proved some concentrations of the chemical are lethal.

The compound is a waste product of herbicide manufacture.

Dow has fought efforts by the EPA to enter plant grounds for testing, and investigators have had to take samplings from the river near the complex. Not only dioxin was found, but also more than 40 toxic chemicals turned up in the samplings, the study indicated.

Dow repeatedly has denied contamination responsibility, and Ms. Rowley said, "You would have to eat more than 25 tons of fish per year to reach a level of dioxin that has been shown to cause cancer in animals."

But Howard Zar, an environmental scientist with the Chicago regional staff, said people should not eat fish from the river.

"When water passes through fish, the chemicals collect in them and multiply, and what we get is bio-accumulation," he said. "Dow discharges 35 million gallons a day and contamination accumulates."

The Midland facility, extending along both banks of the Tittabawassee, is one of the largest chemical manufacturing complexes in the country. It operates continuously, employing 5,000 people, and producing more than 200 chemicals and plastics, according to the study.

Adamkus said several forms of dioxin were found in the Dow effluent and in caged fish placed in the river below the wastewater outfall.

The EPA study, which began in 1981, indicated that a highly toxic form of dioxin was found at levels of 50 parts per quadrillion in the effluent, and at levels of 100 parts per trillion in whole fish.

The Food and Drug Administration has established 50 parts per trillion as the tolerance level of dioxin in edible parts of fish. He said complete results of the new EPA study will not be ready until summer.

Dow has maintained that any dioxin is coming not from its plant but from other sources, such as automobile combustion.

Life As It's Lived

Compulsive Talker Has Found A Good Listener

By GAIL MICHAELS

From the time that she was first able to put a sentence together, Meg has been laboring under the misapprehension that if she is prevented from talking for any significant period of time, she will cease to exist.

This belief is nowhere more apparent than in the dentist's office, where enforced silence is usually the order of the day. Even I find the proliferation of dental equipment in my mouth an impossible hindrance to speech. But X-ray plates and cleaning tools hardly phase Meg. She has elevated the production of excess verbiage to such a fine art that, if necessary, she can carry on an extensive monologue without the use of her jaws and teeth.

She has not yet, however, managed to bypass the use of her tongue. The last time she was at the dentist's, this unfortunate defect caused her extreme discomfort. She was getting plastic seals put on her back molars, and she had been instructed not to talk because the prerequisite cleaning agent had a citron base which would taste terribly bitter if it touched her tongue.

Naturally, the injunction against talking caused her tongue to wag even harder. She informed the dentist that she was delighted to find "Highlights" magazine in his waiting room because it proved he really cared about children. She told the dental assistant that her front teeth had a space between them because they had been stuck there in her gums for so long that they had forgotten how they were supposed to come in.

"At least the jokes about my two front teeth are over," she sighed. "Three years is too long to have to listen to such silliness."

Those were her last words before the citron hit her tongue. For a few seconds she sounded as if she were strangling; then she began to wail. "It's icky! It's yucky! It's gross! It's nasty!" she howled without stopping to catch her breath.

The dental assistant was unrepentant. "I told you not to talk."

"You don't understand," Meg explained tearfully. "I only talk when I have to. I have to talk to communicate. Now if I knew sign language, it would be different. I really wish I did know sign language."

"Good heavens, that would be awful," the dentist whispered to me. "Then she could carry on two conversations at once."

Meg eventually calmed down enough to choose one of the posters reserved for the "good" patients. Chattering cheerfully, she inspected each one. "I'll take this one," she finally said.

From my seat in another dental chair, I heard the muffled laughter of the dental assistant. One by one, the rest of the staff joined in.

"What did she choose?" I managed to mumble through the stainless steel Tinkertoys that had been jammed into my mouth.

"She chose a picture of a rabbit," the dentist said.

I couldn't understand why this was so funny until Meg walked over and showed it to me. The caption read, "I'm not much on talking, but I'm sure a good listener."

Some May Not Add A Credit Card Fee

By The Associated Press
North Carolina banking officials say some banks may not charge a credit card fee and others probably won't charge the full $20 approved by the Legislature for annual bank credit card fees.

"I would imagine that some banks are going to start charging a fee fairly soon (but) some are not going to charge it at all," said Edmund D. Aycock, general counsel for the North Carolina Bankers Association.

North Carolina National Bank, the state's largest, probably will introduce the fee in the next month or two, said spokesman Winton R. Poole. He said NCNB had not decided how much to charge but said it probably would be around $18 a year.

Aycock predicted many banks would charge less than the maximum $20.

Banks must give customers a 30-day notice under the measure approved Wednesday for VISA, MasterCard and other bank credit cards.

Banks say they have lost money on the cards because they aren't allowed to charge high enough interest rates on them and because many customers avoid interest charges altogether by paying on time.

"I think I can safely say that virtually 100 percent of the banks (in North Carolina) lost money last year" on the cards, Poole said.

Most banks aren't losing money now because the cost of money has dropped in recent months, officials said.

Radio Hoax

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel Radio reported today a shocking new $175 annual tax on video recorders, the country's new status symbol.

After airing stunned reactions from the public and at least one Parliament member, it then announced the report was an April Fool's hoax.

"I won't pay a single agoura" (cent), said one Israeli interviewed on the street. "This is mad," said another.

SPIES AND SCOUTS

IN BIBLICAL TIMES IT CAN BE SAID THAT AN ARMY WAS ONLY AS GOOD AS ITS SPIES AND SCOUTS. HAVING NO RECONNAISSANCE OTHER THAN THE NAKED EYE TO REPORT WHAT LAY AHEAD OF AN ARMY, THE MEN, DESIGNATED AS SCOUTS AND SPIES, HAD TO BE OUTSTANDINGLY ALERT AND ABLE TO JUDGE THE STRENGTH OF THEIR POTENTIAL OPPONENTS SEEN FROM AFAR. THE SCOUTS MOSES SENT TO SPY OUT THE PROMISED LAND (NUMBERS 13) WERE OF THIS CALIBRE. HOWEVER, IN REPORTING TO MOSES, THEY CLAIMED TO HAVE SEEN GIANTS IN THE LAND AND ADVISED AGAINST GOING FORWARD. ONLY JOSHUA AND CALEB GAVE MOSES A CLEAR PICTURE OF THE LAND AND ITS POSSIBILITIES. FORTUNATELY MOSES GAVE EAR ONLY TO THEIR REPORT! SCOUTS AND SPIES WERE THE UNSUNG HEROES OF EVERY CONQUERING ARMY, AS THEY ARE TO THIS DAY, THOUGH SOPHISTICATED WARFARE HAS THEM THUNDERING THROUGH THE SKIES AS "THEY SEARCH OUT THE LAND."

Feast Days Have Basis In History

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
With a kind of hardheaded realism, Judaism and its offspring, Christianity, base their faith on worldly events — on actions witnessed, experienced and recorded by people.

Those key happenings are being commemorated this week in observances of the Jewish Passover and the Christian holy week, culminating on Easter.

Both are festivals of redemption. The impact of the occasions are seen as continuing in the present. In both, divine intervention is seen in human affairs, and both involved luminous personalities, Moses and Jesus.

In their closely connected heritages, Judaism and Christianity draw their convictions from occurrences on earth, in the human grain.

The shared outlook is that humanity, in its limitations, can know of God only as he chooses to reveal himself in the human dimension — in the confines of time and history.

That is the biblical view and method, a record of earthly occurrences in which God's participation is seen as showing his will and ways to people to the extent they are able to grasp it.

The approach makes Judeo-Christianity a religion of history, rather than of metaphysical abstractions, as characteristic of Oriental religions, and the distinction is underlined in the occurrences celebrated this week.

The week-long Passover observance, which began Monday evening, recalls the liberation of the enslaved Jews from ancient Egyptian tyranny. "Let my people go!" Moses demanded, and ensuing strange disturbances made pharaoh yield.

"I will sing to the Lord, for he has triumphed gloriously," goes a hymn for the occasion, from Exodus 15. "The Lord is my strength and my song and he has become my salvation."

The amazing deliverance of the powerless became a key sign of what God is like, attesting that he is one who saves, who frees from oppression, who cares for the lowly, whose love redeems the lost.

"He raises the poor from the dust and lifts the needy from the ash heap," reads the Psalms chanted at Passover. "Our God is merciful. ... He has delivered my soul from death. ... His steadfast love endures forever."

The event is seen both as past and present, as not only a deliverance from ancient despotism, but signifying ultimate redemption from all domineering exploitations, allying God with the oppressed and suffering, and summoning believers to that purpose.

A kindred message of hope and triumph over wrong is expressed in the Easter events recalled by Christians this week, climaxed with the celebration this Sunday of the resurrection.

Jesus was crucified by Roman military rulers, but he, similar to his Jewish forebears, broke loose — even from death. "He is risen!" the astounded witnesses exclaimed, and that "good news" echoed through the centuries.

His ordeal on the cross is regarded as mirroring the very agony of God at human sin, taking its consequences on himself, thus offering redemption from it and signalling victory over it in the resurrection.

"Behold, I make all things new," Jesus said. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life."

The resurrection is not considered a past event, but a continuing reality and a glimmering of the future, heralding the opening of a new frontier and a new world for humanity into which Christ has pioneered the way.

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 39.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 83 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a preliminary weighted average of 39.82 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is firm and the live supply is moderate for an improving demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 1,654,000, compared to 1,157,000 last Friday.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was trending lower. Supplies adequate. Demand light to moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter was 16-17 cents.

Have Eye On Blue Mold

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina tobacco specialists are keeping tabs on an outbreak of dangerous blue mold fungus in northern Florida, but say as yet there is no reason for alarm.

"We're in contact with those (Florida) people every day, sometimes twice a day," said N.T. Powell, a plant pathologist with the North Carolina State University Agriculture Extension Service. "It's just that this disease is so explosive."

Tobacco farmers are being advised to follow up initial Ridomil fungicide treatments of seed beds, Powell said. Seventy days after the first treatment, farmers should reapply Ridomil with an outer layer protective fungicide containing the chemical maneb, he said.

Powell said leaf specialists are concerned the rainy weather could help transport the mold, which can destroy an untreated tobacco bed in less than a week. Powell said, however, he was encouraged that the three Florida farms hit by the blue mold had not used a fungicide.

REQUEST APPROVED

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of a request by the Guiding Light Temple of Faith Free Will Baptist Church to conduct a door-to-door solicitation and bake sale April 9 through May 21 to raise funds for the church.

Camp Lejeune Exercise Set

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — More than 47,000 military personnel from all branches will participate in a training exercise at Camp Lejeune, N.C., Fort Stewart, Ga., and Morehead City, N.C., April 16 through May 11, the Navy announced today.

Solid Shield '83, the 21st in a series of annual U.S. Atlantic Command joint exercises, will focus on commanding military forces in a simulated combat environment, the Navy said.

Participating in the exercise will be men and women from the Army's 18th Airborne Corps; the Navy's Atlantic Fleet; the Fleet Marine Force Atlantic; the Air Force's Tactical Air Command, Strategic Air Command, Military Airlift Command and Communications Command and the Coast Guard.

The exercise will simulate combat between opposing land, sea and air forces. It will include air mobile assault and amphibious operations at Camp Lejeune and paratrooper drops with mechanized and armor forces at Fort Stewart.

Off the coast of Morehead City, Air Force B-52 bombers will drop inert mines that will then be cleared by Navy units.

More than 35 ships and submarines and about 350 aircraft will be used in the exercise, the Navy said.

The Atlantic Command,

Trio Jailed In Robberies

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Three men in Guilford County Jail on other charges have been tied by police to a string of 67 brutal robberies of women in the Greensboro area in the past 2½ years, police said Thursday.

Greensboro Police Capt. B.L. Thomas revealed the results of the lengthy investigation involving computer-prepared charts and analysis, 16 law enforcement agencies and the State Bureau of Investigation and its spotter plane.

Police next week will turn over evidence to prosecutors that may lead to 76 indictments against the men, he said. No charges have yet been filed.

Detectives Ken Brady and Rick Baulding, who coordinated the investigation, said the robberies began in October 1980 but police did not detect a pattern until May 1981. The last incident in the string occurred this February, they said.

All the women were beaten, some severely, and all but two were over 50 years old, and all apparently were followed home at night from shopping centers, grocery stores or hospitals, the detectives said.

The women "were assaulted as they stepped out of their vehicles at home, reached back in for groceries or attempted to open the door," Thomas said in a news conference.

Decision Date For Faircloth

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Secretary of Commerce D.M. Faircloth says he'll make a decision on whether to run for governor "toward the end of the legislative session."

Faircloth said if he decides to run for the Democratic nomination he will resign his Cabinet post.

Gov. Jim Hunt has said any high-level employee in his administration who becomes a candidate for a major office must quit.

Watson (Not Tom) Tied With Lye For GGO Lead Area Teams In Tournaments

GREENSBORO (AP) — Denis Watson, who grew up in the blazing heat of East Africa, has a problem.

"Where do I go now?" he asked.

Watson, shivering and soaked despite several layers of clothing, holed a bunker shot for a birdie on the 18th hole Thursday and took a share of the lead in the drizzling rain and biting cold that marred the first round of the $400,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Watson is a native of Rhodesia who lived in South Africa for several years before trying the European Tour. He joined American circuit three years ago.

"You must remember," said Watson, who contrived a 3-under-par 69 despite the miserable, wet conditions, "I come from a country where we don't go outside if the temperature goes below 60 degrees.

"This reminds me of playing in England: bitter cold.

Mark Lye birdied three of his last four holes to gain a share of the lead.

"It's kind of a surprise," he said. "I felt like the round was getting away from me. I was just trying to hold on. Sometimes it happens when you don't expect it."

And he shared Watson's sentiments about the weather. The temperature didn't get out of the 40s. Leaden skies leaked a steady drizzle throughout the day.

"This is one they'll talk about it," he said. "The players will be sitting around a locker room somewhere talking about bad weather and they'll say, 'remember Greensboro in '83?'"

Roger Maltbie, Canadian Jim Nelford, Mike McCullough and Bob Eastwood, a runnerup last week, were a single shot off the lead at 70.

The group at 71, and the only others able to break par, included Dave Eichelberger, South African Nick Price, England's Nick Faldo, Fuzzy Zoeller, Chip Beck, Thomas Gray and Craig Stadler, who will defend his Masters title in Augusta, Ga., next week.

Hal Sutton, winner of the Tournament Players Championship Monday, shot a 75. Gary Player of South Africa opened his American campaign with a 72. Danny Edwards, the defending champion and a two-time Greensboro winner, also matched par.

Watson, who said he got warm "only when I made double bogey on the 16th," holed from a buried lie in a bunker on the 18th for the birdie that gave him a share of the top spot.

Lye, not yet a winner in six seasons on the American tour, scored three consecutive birdies, beginning on the 15th, on putts of 10, 10 and 15 feet.

The second round follows starting at 1 p.m. with losers meeting losers and winners meeting winners. The final round will be Tuesday starting at 10 a.m. as the teams play to all eight places.

Good Bite

Golfer Dennis Watson bites his tongue as he hits from a sand trap to the 16th green during Thursday's first round of the Greater Greensboro Open being played at the Forest Oaks Country Club. Watson shot a 3-under-par 69 and is tied for the lead with Mark Lye. (AP Laserphoto)

Cold Winds, Rain Force Watson To Use Panty Hose For Warmth

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — Denis Watson couldn't find a pair of long johns, so to keep warm during the first round of the Greater Greensboro Open, he said he had to settle for a pair of panty hose.

With cold winds and occasional rains sweeping the Forest Oaks Country Club course, golfers had to do what they could to battle the elements. Watson's idea apparently paid off since he was tied with Mark Lye for the lead with a 3-under par 69.

"I think if there's anything that wears your concentration down, it's much tougher playing when it's windy," said Watson, who finished in a tie for seventh in last year's GGO. "I'm not a very good cold weather player, so I was really pleased."

Watson said there's was little protection from the weather, which saw temperatures hovering in the 40s.

"My hands just get very cold. I've just gotta do my best to try and keep the rest of my body warm," Watson said. "There's nothing much you can really do but put on as much clothes as you can that will still permit you to swing and do as much as you can."

Lye said the soggy conditions made it difficult for him to get the golf ball to the perfect lie. He said after his fifth hole, he decided to go for more distance to compensate for the weather.

"The fairways are just a little bit wet," Lye said. "The grass is heavy. A lot of guys, I'm sure, felt like walking in. It was just a cold day at the office."

Roger Maltbie, one of four golfers at 2-under par 70, said switching from glasses to contact lenses this year helped him get through the round. He added, however, that there are other parts of him that couldn't tolerate the situation.

"The hardest part was playing in the wind," Maltbie said. "There's something about wind that is annoying. You always have that noise in your ears. It's never tranquil or peaceful. If you couple that with rain, I think everybody gets a little annoyed at it."

Maltbie also said the best way to take his mind off the weather was to remember that a victory would lead to a slot in next week's Masters tournament at Augusta.

"Maybe I'm a little more elevated for this than I would be normally because it is the last chance and I want to play very well," Maltbie said. "This is it."

Craig Stadler, winner of last year's Masters and two shots behind the leaders, said he wasn't pleased with his round, but added that it wasn't bad considering the lack of spring weather.

"I've had enough of that today," Stadler said. "I'm just starting to get the feeling back."

Holland: The Final Four

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. — "Houston and Louisville are the power teams," said the collegiate-looking gentleman in tweeds. "The key will lie with the dominance of Houston's front line. Louisville is the one team in the tournament who can negate that advantage."

"I feel the winner should come from the Houston-Louisville game, but somebody might get killed in the process. It will be a war."

If anyone is in a position to assess the survivors who square off here Saturday night in college basketball's Final Four, it's Terry Holland, the University of Virginia coach. He has gone eyeball-to-eyeball with three of the teams, beating them, and has more than a casual acquaintance with the fourth, Georgia, which faces North Carolina State in a duel of darkhorses in the other half of the draw.

Actually it's something of an upset that Holland will be following the action from the sidelines instead of the bench. With the best winning record in college basketball over the last four years (112 victories and 24 defeats), with 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson at center, his Cavaliers were a prime favorite until knocked off in the regional finals by N.C. State.

Virginia, without Sampson in the lineup, whipped Houston in Tokyo last December 72-63 and six weeks later crushed Louisville 98-81. The Cavaliers won their first two games comfortably against N.C. State but lost cliff-hangers to their conference rivals in both the Atlantic Coast finals and the NCAA playoffs.

"N.C. State started well but Derek Whittenburg, their best shooter (17.2 game average), broke his foot and some of the 10 games they lost happened while he was out of the lineup," Holland said. "They seemed to peak at the end of the season — an opportunistic, ball-control team."

The 40-year-old Virginia coach called Houston's front line of 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon, 6-9 Larry Micheaux and 6-6 Clyde Drexler one of the most formidable ever in the college game. One observer commented that it could hold its own in the National Basketball Association.

"If Houston can play the way it wants to play, the team will be hard to beat," Holland said. "But Louisville is a better balanced club. It is capable of applying a full-court game that can give anybody trouble."

"Look at the game against Kentucky (won by Louisville 80-68 in the Midwest Regional final). Late in the game the pressure was so great that Kentucky had trouble getting the ball in play from out of bounds."

Louisville's tallest starter is 6-9 Scooter McCray. The top scorers are Lancaster Gordon and Milt Wagner, each 6-5 with an average of 13 points-plus a game.

"It's a poised, disciplined team which has been in the Final Four three times in the last four years," Holland said. "Yet Houston can be overpowering. Drexler is a tremendous athlete. Micheaux is less sensational but more workmanlike. And Akeem is dominating."

Houston finished the season with No. 1 national ranking on a record of 30 victories and two defeats. Louisville was back at No. 2 with 32-3.

"Incredible records," Holland acknowledged. "It looks like the logical championship game but, as we've found it, anything can happen."

He said Georgia's season record of 24-9 is very deceptive.

"Outside their conference they were unbeaten," he added. "they're in a crazy league — Kentucky, Alabama, teams like that — where everybody beats up on everybody else. People talk about their lack of height (starters range from 6-1 to 6-7) but they are exceptionally quick and against North Carolina they destroyed the theory that you can beat them by making them shoot from the outside."

NBA, Union Agree To Tentative Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Two previously untouched concepts — guaranteed percentage of gross revenues and salary caps — are being added to the sports labor lexicon with the tentative agreement by the National Basketball Association and its players' union.

NBA management and players agreed on a contract Thursday that will guarantee players 53 percent share of gross revenues, effective next season. The salary cap provisions will not begin until the 1984-85 season.

Both sides say they got what they wanted.

The players kept virtually all of their free-agent rights and assured themselves of maintaining their lucrative salary levels. The owners say they will be better able to cope financially and compete more equally for player talent.

Both sides also didn't get what they didn't want — a strike that the union threatened to start after Saturday's games if a settlement was not reached by then.

"We are hopeful that teams will be able to use this agreement to plan their future more successfully and we can continue to operate with 23 teams," said David Stern, the NBA's executive vice president for business and legal affairs.

The salary cap provisions will prevent teams from signing other clubs' free agents or trading for players who would increase their payroll. They also require teams to spend a certain amount on salaries, and if they do not have enough money to reach that figure, the NBA would use a pool of shared revenues to bring the struggling clubs up to the minimum standard.

Bob Lanier of the Milwaukee Bucks, president of the Players Association, said the players believe "that not only have they maintained competitive bidding, but have greatly enhanced it because now all the teams will be bidding rather than merely a handful, as has been the case for the last few years."

However, the five teams with the highest payrolls — Los Angeles, New Jersey, New York, Philadelphia and Seattle — will be frozen at their current salary levels next season, before the salary cap provision takes effect.

These teams will be able to sign other teams' free agents next season if they adjust their payrolls in other ways to keep their salary at the same level.

The final roadblock to ratification is 23 player representatives, who will consider the proposal Monday. Larry Fleisher, the union's general counsel and chief negotiator, said ratification is a formality.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien said 22 of the 23 members of the Board of Governors, which consists of the league's owners or their top-level representatives, already have voted for the settlement. Eighteen votes were needed for approval.

Sam Schulman, owner of the Seattle SuperSonics, was the lone dissenter. "I voted no because I wasn't given the proper opportunity to fully examine and assess all possible repercussions as they applied to my franchise," he said in a telephone interview Thursday with The New York Times.

A strike would have been the third by a professional sports league in as many years. In 1981, baseball players struck for 50 days; last year, NFL players struck for 57 days.

There had been speculation for days that the two sides were close to a settlement that would allow the players to drop their strike threat.

But Fleisher said the agreement was not "nailed down" until Thursday.

Lanier had two speeches prepared, the one he made and the one that said the war was on," Fleisher said, referring to the threatened strike.

Both sides said they are convinced the contract will enable the NBA to stay at its current level of 23 teams.

"We expect teams to be sold before they'll fold," Stern said. "That is because prospective buyers can project what they will have to spend and won't have to worry about having its best players taken by rich teams."

Because of the minimum salaries and revenue sharing, Lanier said, "teams will be able to compete with each other on an equal basis. The large teams like Los Angeles and New York would be bidding basically at the same level as all the other teams in the league. This is something the league has been concerned about for years and had finally accomplished."

"Most teams didn't see a light at the end of the tunnel," said Larry Weinberg, owner of the Portland Trail Blazers and chairman of the Board of Governors. "With this agreement, I believe that now they will be able to see a light at the end of the tunnel."

The amount of the salary cap will be set at 53 percent of the league's gross receipts. Only parking and concession revenue is excluded from the gross receipts figure.

The cap cannot be lower than $3.6 million per team in 1984-85, $3.8 million in 1985-86 and $4 million in 1986-87, according to the agreement.

Since there are certain to be teams who will exceed the cap, the amount over the cap that those teams spend will be added together and then subtracted from the basic cap level to determine the minimum level. For example, if the cap level is $4 million and three teams are a total of $5 million over the cap level, the remaining 20 teams would be required to spend $3.6 million on salaries ($5 million divided by 20 is $400,000, which is subtracted from the basic cap level of $4 million).

The settlement also includes a provision that would give management the option of expanding the number of playoff teams from 12 to 16 and making the first-round series best-of-five instead of best-of-three.

Another provision would guarantee the players association 253 jobs, a figure that was arrived at by multiplying 23 times 11 — the minimum roster size. Even if the number of teams is reduced, the other teams would have to increase their rosters to keep 253 players in uniform.

Daniel, Spuzich Tied At Shore

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Spuzich came to the conclusion some time last year that she must overlook her bad golf shots.

Her game since that psychological decision has improved dramatically and today she holds a share of the first-round lead at 69 with Beth Daniel in the richest event on the women's tour.

The $400,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore tournament is now classified with three others as majors, with the winner to collect $55,000.

"I decided I would never be absolutely perfect," said the 45-year-old Spuzich, now in her 22nd year on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

"I was going to hit some bad shots the rest of my life. Once you accept that and go on, you do better."

Spuzich and Daniels shot their 3 under-par scores over the Mission Country Club course Thursday in different ways.

Spuzich carded three birdies and parred the other holes in what she termed "the most consistent round I've had in some time."

She's had many of them and last year won two tournaments after only five victories during her many previous pro seasons.

She finished in the top 10 on eight occasions in 1982 and already has been there twice this year.

But being ahead after the first round doesn't impress her.

"It's like being ahead after the first two holes," she said. "There's a long way to go."

Daniel holed a 40-yard wedge shot on the 11th hole to take over a share of the lead.

One stroke back at 70 on 6,265-yard, par-72 layout were Amy Alcott and Susie McAllister. At 71 were Donna Caponi and Jan Stephenson.

Defending champion Sally Little, less than four months after undergoing major surgery, fell to an 80.

Another suffering a fall was Penny Pulz who shot the best nine holes with a 32 with four birdies. Then she carded a double bogey on the 10th and added four other bogeys to score a 42 for a 74 total.

Kathy Whitworth, winner two weeks ago in the Women's Kemper Open on Maui in the Hawaiian Islands, shot 73.

After today's second round, the field of 90 will be cut to the low 70 pros and ties for the nationally televised rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Jim Valvano Won't Be Sitting In Rafter This Year At The NCAA

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano has given up his usual NCAA tournament seat near the rafters for a sideline seat that includes the chance to live a dream.

Valvano's, 16th-ranked Wolfpack earned him that sideline seat by defeating Pepperdine, Nevada-Las Vegas and Virginia in the NCAA West Regional. N.C. State, 24-10, meets No. 18 Georgia, 24-9, in Saturday's semifinals, beginning at 3:39 p.m. EDT.

"Like we all say in the business, it's a short walk from the castle to the out-house," Valvano said Thursday. "Two years ago I was sitting there (at the Final Four) with (Louisville coach) Denny Crum. I was a row from the rafters and he was another row up. He had won the championship the year before and he was saying, 'What a difference a year makes.'"

Crum will also have give up his rafter seat for one on the floor, sending his 2nd-ranked and 32-3 Cardinals against top-ranked Houston, 30-2, in the other semifinal battle.

Valvano said he has met several coaches among the rafters, and most shared the same thoughts.

"You never know who you'll be sitting with," he said. "You're lucky to get a ticket, much less two together, and you're probably with somebody who coaches in the Midwest and you sit there and watch those three games (semifinals and championship). You watch and you dream and you coach with the guy down on the floor and you're going, 'Wow.'"

For Valvano, that dream has never ended.

"I think about the championship constantly," he said. "When we were four games away I always thought about it. Last year, when we lost (to Tennessee-Chattanooga in the first round) I was thinking, 'If we can just get by them, we're only four games away.'"

But now, Valvano's club is only two games away.

"It's just that this is what you dream about when you're a college basketball coach," Valvano said. "I've been coaching for 16 years and there's no question that this, this, is what you dream about. The Final Four. The Final Four. The Final Four. Just to say it. I've been to the Final Four so many times, but this is the epitome, to do it as a coach."

Valvano had other thoughts Thursday, including the health of guard Derek Whittenburg, who missed practice because of the flu.

Whittenburg, who missed 13½ games because of a foot injury at midseason, is the Wolfpack's leading scorer at 17.5 points per game, but in NCAA tournament play has averaged 21.5 points.

"We hope it's a 24-hour thing," said assistant trainer Jim Rehbock. "With rest and medication, hopefully he'll be ready Saturday."

Georgia Plans To Think About Self, Not Its Foe

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — For 18th-ranked Georgia, getting ready for the biggest basketball game in the school's history means the same kind of pregame preparation that got the Bulldogs this far.

That is, more time practicing and less time watching game films.

"We think more about what we're going to do than what the other team does," said Georgia Coach Hugh Durham, whose team meets 16th-ranked North Carolina State in an NCAA tournament semifinal Saturday in Albuquerque, N.M. "Our strategy is simple — play good defense, rebound and take good shots."

Candy man Giving Pirates Hope For 1983 Season

By The Associated Press
Pittsburgh's Candy Man may have given the Pirates a sweet taste of things to come.

Left-hander John Candalaria, scheduled to be the Pirates' opening day pitcher next week, has been battling tendinitis in his elbow all spring and owned an inflated 9.00 earned run average after being roughed up for six runs in four innings by the Boston Red Sox last Saturday.

But in Thursday's final tuneup, Candalaria was running on all cylinders. He went six scoreless innings, allowing three hits, walking one and fanning three, in the Pirates' 3-1 baseball exhibition victory over the Red Sox.

"I'm satisfied with the arm," Candalaria said. "It didn't hurt when I was pitching, but it hurts now. It always hurts after I pitch."

"I'll be glad to leave Florida. This spring when it hasn't rained, it's been windy. The wind today was blowing from left to right about 40 miles an hour. My curve ball was breaking so much, it had to be the wind."

Jim Morrison drove in two runs for the Pirates with a third-inning single after Lee Mazzilli had doubled, and with an eighth-inning home run. Pittsburgh's non-roster rookie Jim Winn got Gary Allenson to hit into a double play with the bases loaded to end the game. Winn, who worked the ninth inning, was unscored upon for the sixth time in his seven spring appearances.

Candalaria's outing was a blessing for the Pirates, who have been getting unreliable starting pitching this spring. Candalaria and Don Robinson have battled arm problems and Larry McWilliams and Manny Sarmiento have been inconsistent. The only consistent starter has been rookie Lee Tunnell, who has pitched his way into the starting rotation.

Another pitcher getting ready for next week's opener, Montreal's Steve Rogers, held the New York Mets to one run in seven innings and the Expos got solo homers from Andre Dawson and Jerry White in a 3-2 victory.

Meanwhile, four hot teams — the California Angels, New York Yankees, Minnesota Twins and Chicago White Sox — kept rolling.

Rod Carew's tie-breaking single highlighted a three-run fifth inning as the Angels defeated the San Diego Padres 5-2 for their 10th victory in the last 11 games.

Oscar Xamblé's home run with two out in the bottom of the 10th inning enabled the Yankees to defeat the Houston Astros 6-5 and extend their winning streak to six games.

Bob Meacham and Brad Gudden also homered for the winners.

Consecutive RBI singles by Lenny Faedo and Bobby Mitchell with one out in the 11th inning boosted the Twins past the Texas Rangers 5-3. Minnesota's Gary Ward drove in his 28th run of the spring with a first-inning single as the Twins raised their exhibition record to 15-6.

Home runs by Pat Tabler and Jerry Hairston powered the White Sox to a 5-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

their in succession and 10th in the last 11 games. Floyd Bannister pitched seven scoreless innings for the White Sox.

The hard-hitting Milwaukee Brewers got a taste of their own medicine when Oakland's Wayne Gross smashed a grand slam home run to key a 22-hit attack as the A's outslugged the Brewers 16-13 in a game that featured eight home runs.

Davey Lopes and Jeff Burroughs also connected for the A's, while Milwaukee's 16-hit attack included home runs by Robin Yount, Gorman Thomas, Don Money, Ted Simmons and Ben Oglivie.

Ron Cey went 4-for-4, including a three-run homer, raising his spring average to

.477 and pacing the Chicago Cubs to a 10-7 victory over the San Francisco Giants. The home run off Bill Laskey in the third inning was Cey's fifth of the spring and second in two days. Leon Durham had a two-run homer and a pair of singles for the Cubs.

Bob Horner's fourth home run of the spring highlighted a three-run first inning and Randy Johnson squeezed home the deciding run in the seventh as the Atlanta Braves edged the Kansas City Royals 6-5.

Dan Driessen homered and tripled and the Cincinnati Reds scored an unearned run in the 10th inning to nip the Detroit Tigers 5-4. Dave Concepcion scored the winning run from second base when Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell let Jeff Jones' two-out grounder go under his glove for an error.

Lary Sorensen allowed one run in seven innings and the Cleveland Indians rolled to an 11-2 rout of the Seattle Mariners, who committed six errors. Gaylord Perry, the 44-year-old right-hander who is scheduled to start the Mariners' opener, was hammered for nine runs on nine hits and two walks in six innings, although only three of the runs were earned.

Two-run homers by Dan Ford and Eddie Murray helped the Baltimore Orioles defeat the University of Miami 14-7.

Jamesville Crushes Creswell

CRESWELL — Jamesville High School romped to a 10-1 victory over Creswell in a Tobacco Belt baseball game on Wednesday.

Jamesville, now 4-0, grabbed the lead in the second with three runs. Kevin Waters led off with a double and Terry Perry laid down a sacrifice bunt. The ball was errored, however, allowing Waters to score and Perry to race all the way to third. Whit Brown followed with a walk and Earl Bowen's grounder was errored, scoring Perry. Greg Hardison then hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Brown.

Jamesville added two more in the third and doubled its total with five in the fifth. Creswell's only run came in the second.

Perry led the Jamesville hitting with two.

The Bullets return to action today as they host the Jamesville Easter Tournament. Jamesville meets St. Francis of Apple Springs, N.Y., in the first round.

Jamesville Dumps Creswell

CRESWELL — Jamesville High School romped to a 23-1 softball victory over Creswell Wednesday.

Details of the game were not available. The win leaves the Lady Bullets at 3-0 on the season.

USC Looking Into Metro Affiliation

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina Athletic Director Bob Marcum, who's said "the time is right" for the university to join a league, has been talking to members of the Metro Conference, says a USC public relations worker.

Marcum has talked with both Virginia Tech's and Florida State's athletic directors about the Metro Conference, which both belong to, says Sid Wilson, USC media relations assistant.

Marcum said Wednesday he would soon formally propose conference affiliation to the university's board of trustees and administration, and predicted the Gamecocks will be in a conference by 1986.

Marcum did not name a league, but the Metro Conference has been mentioned in news reports as a possibility in the last two days.

The Metro is a non-football conference, offering championships and automatic NCAA berths in basketball, as well as baseball and other spring sports.

Marcum pointed to the USC basketball team's failure to qualify for the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament despite posting a 20-8 record as an incentive for joining a conference. The Gamecocks racked up two postseason victories before being defeated in the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

The athletic director said that even with that record, a financial report on the basketball season "is going to be marginal."

Marcum said joining a league would solve the problem of scheduling and give the team two goals: a league championship and an NCAA berth.

The Metro Conference is expected to sign a lucrative television pact in the off-season.

Proving Again New Comedies On Television News Are Doomed

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The liability in doing any comedy about television news is that it will never be as good as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

CBS's new romantic comedy, "Goodnight, Beantown," doesn't come close. It doesn't work as comedy, or social commentary on TV news, so it concentrates on the chemistry between its two strong leads, Bill Bixby and Mariette Hartley.

"Goodnight, Beantown," which begins its spring tryout on Sunday, joins NBC's "Cheers" and "St. Elsewhere" as Boston-based, but Hollywood-originated series with nary a BAHSTAHn accent in earshot. But CBS obviously has faith, allowing this five-episode run to coast on Mike Wallace's top-rated coattails in the slot following "60 Minutes."

The program focuses on the kiss-and-kick relationship between WYN's news anchors, Matt Cassidy (Bixby) and Jennifer Barnes (Miss Hartley). Mary Richards and her regular gang at WJM never allowed incestuous love to develop, unless you count Ted Baxter's affair with himself.

Matt is a no-nonsense anchor for Boston's bottom-rated newscast — the one without Happy Talk. Shades of Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters: Matt resists sharing his solo anchor with Jennifer. "I won't do 'Punch and Judy Do the News,'" says Matt.

Jennifer is no pushover on the set. But at home, where she's divorced, raising a stereophonic teen-ager and living in the same apartment building as Matt, she's flighty. Just because TV gives women key roles doesn't mean they won't be stereotyped.

On "Mary Tyler Moore," Ted (Ted Knight) raised buffoonery to new lows. That's not the approach here, although there's a foolish on-camera snit between Matt and Jennifer.

One point from their disagreement is that hard-core journalists are blind to the humanity in some stories, like male strippers, while another lesson is that there is too much male-female type-casting in story assignments.

After the tiff, viewers call and say they liked the friction, so the news director (George Coe) deems the pairing a success.

If Happy Talk news can be a ratings winner, so can "Goodnight, Beantown." Hard-core journalists may ask who, what, where, when and WHY?

atrocities, he's able to turn the head and heart of Keo Sirisomphone, played by Indonesian actress Moira Chen.

Although their love is obviously strong — he risks his life for her — the script by writer-director Hall Bartlett tends to schmaltz up the drama when reality is exciting enough. A stern Russian leader of the Pathet Lao is introduced to add conflict, with the two men fighting a physical and mental battle of machismo for Keo.

Jurgen Prochnow ("Das

Boot") imbues Gen. Kapler with more human qualities than most Russians ever get on American TV. But the boxing match between Kapler and Everingham, although well-staged, brings "Love Is Forever" close to incredulity.

The movie gains inspiration from "Rocky" in other ways, too. When Everingham is training in Thailand for his perilous underwater journey, he quits smoking, jogs and does push-ups. The only thing he doesn't do is beat up a slab of beef.

NEW YORK (AP) — The final episode of "The Thorn Birds" received higher ratings than on any of the other three nights, according to A.C. Nielsen Co. overnight figures released today by ABC.

The $21-million production seems assured of becoming the No.2-ranked miniseries behind "Roots."

Wednesday night's installment of ABC's 10-hour adaptation of Colleen McCullough's best-seller averaged a series-high 44.5 rating and a 62 share for Nielsen's six monitored cities. In the concluding episode, the priest played by Richard Chamberlain renews his love affair with the woman played by Rachel Ward after a 20-year hiatus.

In New York, Philadelphia and San Francisco, "The Thorn Birds" attracted more viewers than on any of the other three nights. The program had a 46.8 rating and 63 share in New York, 49.1, 65 in Philadelphia, 45.7, 64 in San Francisco, 41.9, 59 in Chicago, 39.5, 58 in Los Angeles, and 45.1, 63 in Detroit.

A rating measures the percentage of an area's TV homes watching a broadcast, while a share represents the percentage of TV sets in use tuned to the program.

If national figures, which will be available today, for Wednesday night's broadcast keep pace with the overnight figures — and they've been close all week — then "The Thorn Birds" easily will jump over "The Winds of War" in the miniseries ratings sweepstakes. The seven-part, 18-hour "Winds of War," broadcast in February, averaged a 38.6 rating and 53 share.

Through the first three episodes, "The Thorn Birds" averaged a 41.7 rating and a 59 share. ABC's audience estimate for the 10 hours would not be available until today.

Despite lower ratings, "The Winds of War" will Report Seven Injured In Thursday's 8 Collisions

Seven people were reported injured and an estimated $18,550 property damage caused in a series of eight traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 9:40 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 300 feet north of the Moore Street intersection in which six persons were reported injured.

Police said cars driven by Richard James Roberson of Robersonville and Lois Tripp Stepps of Route 1, Grimesland, collided, injuring both drivers as well as three passengers in the Roberson car and one passenger in the Stepps vehicle.

Officers, who charged Ms. Stepps with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety and driving without a license, estimated damage at $5,000 to the Roberson car and $4,500 to the Stepps car.

Cars driven by Linwood Frank Rountree of Corapeake and Bettie Wheeler Rawls of Route 1, Aulander, collided about 3 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville and Arlington boulevards, causing $1,500 damage to the Rountree car and $250 damage to the Rawls auto, according to investigators.

Police said a passenger in a car driven by Dalton Franklin Beacum of Route 2, Greenville, was injured when the car collided with an auto driven by Faye Kornegay Coward of Route 1, Vanceboro, about 4:45 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 300 feet south of the Village Drive intersection.

Damage from the wreck was set at $1,000 to the Beacum car and $500 to the Coward auto.

No students were on the bus at the time of the collision, according to police.

An estimated $1,500 damage resulted to a car driven by George Lee Shaver Jr. of Plymouth, as the result of a 4:40 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 250 feet west of the Trade Street intersection.

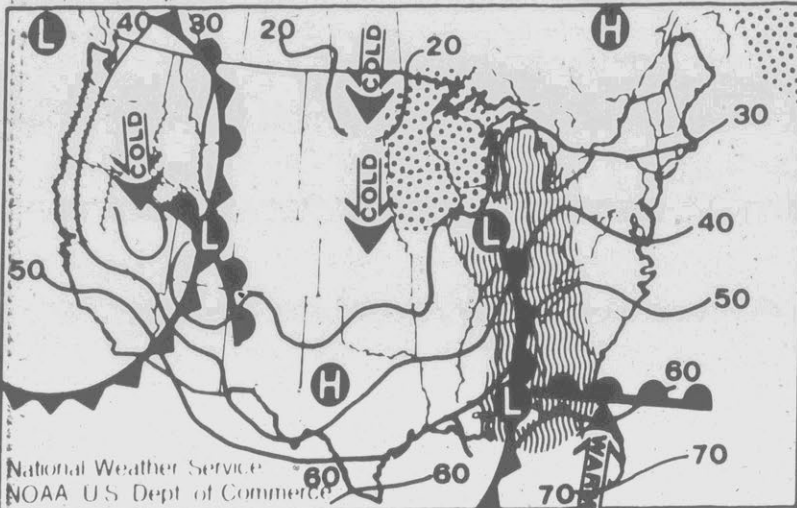

Investigators said the Shaver car was involved in a collision with a truck driven by David Earl Vick of Henderson, which was not damaged in the mishap.

Officers said cars driven by Inga Overton Nichols of Route 7, Greenville, and Francis Noell Blank of 2402 E. Second St. collided about 5:17 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 100 feet west of the Elm Street intersection, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Nichols car and $1,000 damage to the Blank auto.

Cars driven by Judith Harper Miller of 1208 Kingsbrook Road and David Coleman Dickerson of 311 Glenwood Drive collided about 8:35 a.m. on Elm Street, 500 feet north of the 14th Street intersection, causing $200 damage to the Miller car and $300 damage to the Dickerson vehicle.

The Forecast For Saturday, April 2

Low Temperatures

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Saturday from the central and eastern Gulf to upper Great Lakes. Snow is predicted from the Midwest to the western Great Lakes. Rain is forecast for the central and northern Pacific coasts and central Rockies. Most areas will be colder. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

An intense low pressure moving into the state will cause rain with scattered thunderstorms to return to North Carolina over the weekend.

Some of this precipitation could spread into the mountains late tonight. Strong gusty winds will also spread over the state tonight and Saturday as the system approaches.

Yesterday rain ended over western sections of the state during the morning hours but lingered through most of the day in the east. Heaviest rainfall amounts were in the east and ranged up to 1.96 inches at Elizabeth City. High temperatures held in the mid 40s to low 50s statewide.

Winds will increase tonight and be very strong mainly from the east to southeast on Saturday. Rain will move into the mountains late tonight and spread across the state Saturday. The rain could be quite heavy, especially in the mountains. Eastern sections should see warmer temperatures on Saturday but this will help increase the risk of heavy thunderstorms there.

Low temperatures tonight will dip to the mid 40s to around 50. On Saturday there could be a wide range of temperatures across the state ranging from low 50s over the northwestern Piedmont and northern foothills to upper 60s for southern and central coastal areas.

Extra Cents On Gasoline Price

By The Associated Press

North Carolina motorists who thought gas prices were going up only five cents a gallon got an unpleasant surprise at some service stations today.

In addition to the five-cent federal tax increase there were several more cents added on in some places to make up for wholesale price increases to dealers this week.

Bill Barker, owner of the Cary Village '66 service station and past president of the state's Service Station Association, said his wholesaler has increased prices five cents in the past week. But Barker said since he didn't change his pump each day the prices rose, he would have to boost the price of self-service regular gasoline from $1.03.9 to $1.10.9 on Friday.

the federal government the five-cent-per-gallon increase.

As a result, he said, the stations will be forced to raise their prices immediately.

"It's going up all at one time," Barker said. "In fact, some have raised their prices today."

Martin Hamrick, manager of a Raleigh Servco station, said his prices for regular gasoline Friday would increase from 99.9 cents a gallon to $1.099. Unleaded regular at $1.039 will increase 12 cents, and premium will increase eight cents to $1.219 cents.

Prices had fallen so low that "somebody had to give," Hamrick said. "Of course next week we'll have to adjust to the competition."

Fred A. Robbins, president of the Wake County Service Station Association, said he would tack a nickel onto his prices Friday.

Robbins and others reported a booming business Thursday as motorists rushed to beat the tax increase.

"Business usually goes down from 20 to 25 percent when it rains," Robbins said. "But customers know that (gasoline) is going up."

Some operators said business Thursday was up by 25 percent.

Chosen Attend Seminar

Michele D. Coburn, a junior at D.H. Conley High School, has been chosen to attend a congressional seminar in Washington, D.C., in May under the sponsorship of Union Carbide's Battery Products Division in Greenville.

J.M. Maxon, manager of the Greenville plant, said expenses and tuition for the trip and seminar will be covered by Union Carbide.

Miss Coburn was chosen over four other candidates who represented high schools in the city and county school systems. She was chosen because of her outstanding scholastic record, her active interest in civic and student affairs and her panel interview.

Miss Coburn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Stocks of Winterville.

Measure Poses Obstacle To N.C. Waste Landfills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would make it difficult to put a hazardous waste landfill in North Carolina received tentative House approval Thursday, but only after a lively debate.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, would make it "very difficult if not impossible" to put a landfill in the state, said Bryant Haskins, a spokesman for the state Department of Human Resources. He said there are few places in the state where a landfill would be more than 30 feet above the water table — the requirement stipulated in the bill.

But Hightower said he knew of such places in Anson County, which has been mentioned as a potential site by hazardous waste disposal firms.

The bill also would require that landfill operators maintain adequate insurance to cover possible accidents and that the Governor's Waste Management Board establish the level of adequate insurance.

In addition, it would require landfill operators to make monthly reports to the state and county on the kinds and amounts of waste in the facility.

Rep. William Clarke, D-Cumberland, said current state laws prohibit the legislature from enacting laws stricter than federal regulations. He said the insurance provision in the bill would violate that law and "provisions of the bill would be meaningless."

He unsuccessfully tried to have the bill sent to the Water and Air Resources Committee, which already is considering two bills aimed at tightening regulations on landfills. One of the bills was introduced by Clark.

Rep. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, said those bills had been "languishing" in the committee and cautioned against sending other proposed legislation there.

The other bills would limit the kinds of hazardous wastes placed in landfills and would allow the state to enact laws more stringent than federal regulations in at least several areas.

Hightower said he had heard there are no landfills that haven't leaked. He praised landfills in Oregon and Alabama because they are located 600 and 1,000 feet above the water table.

"This (bill) won't prohibit a landfill in North Carolina," said Hightower. "But I don't think one should be put in North Carolina."

The bill, tentatively approved 69-22, could face a final House vote today.

In other legislative action:

Separation of Powers

Two bills that realign responsibility between the executive and legislative branches of government were approved in committee and moved toward House consideration.

The House Judiciary I Committee approved a bill that redistributes salary setting authority, makes sure the Advisory Budget Commission is strictly advisory and generally brings state government in line with court rulings that declared the line between the branches had become blurred.

The House Judiciary II Committee approved companion legislation removing the ABC's approval for bond acts by the N.C. Seaford Industrial Park Authority and the University of North Carolina System.

That bill also removes ABC authority over Clean Water Bond Acts of 1971, 1977 and 1981.

Justice

A bill that would allow recovery of legal costs by those successfully appealing a government decision received tentative approval after it was amended to include costs incurred in pursuit of public records.

Mike Rouse, managing editor of the Durham Morning Herald, said the amendment would encourage disclosure of public information without going to court.

"There's nothing in the law to discourage a public body from doing this sort of thing," he told the House Judiciary I Committee.

The bill would award court costs and attorney fees only if the court finds the agency in question acted unreasonably in initiating the claim.

Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford, said fiscal analysts were unable to determine if the bill would cost the state anything if enacted.

Crime

The House Judiciary II Committee approved an amended version of a bill that would provide up to $20,000 in crime victims' compensation, with the money to be raised by increasing court costs paid by convicted criminals.

Rep. Tom Womble, D-Forsyth, who introduced the bill, said it was amended to raise court costs $2 instead of the $5 called for in the original legislation. He said the $2 fee would raise about $1.4 million.

The bill would compensate crime victims, their dependants and third parties for economic losses greater than $100 but less than $20,000.

Compensation would be denied to offenders and their accomplices, insurance companies, people injured in motor vehicle accidents, prison inmates and anyone not reporting the crime within 72 hours.

Party Primaries

The second version of a bill to limit party primary runoffs was killed in the House Committee on Election Laws without debate.

Rep. Ken Spaulding, D-Durham, earlier introduced a bill that would allow runoff elections at taxpayers' expense only if the victor had less than 40 percent of the vote. Current laws allow runoffs when the winner has less than 50 percent.

That bill was killed by an Election Laws subcommittee, prompting Spaulding to introduce a slightly different version that would allow runoffs if the winner had less than 41 percent of the vote and there was 5 percent or less separating the first and second places.

The full committee gave that bill an unfavorable report and Spaulding said he planned no further action.

Insurance

Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, introduced three bills that would affect the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility, a pool which insures motorists who are considered high risks.

The first bill would change the way Reinsurance Facility recoupment surcharges are levied. It would place more of the burden for recovering facility losses on drivers with more accidents or traffic violations. Currently all drivers are surcharged at the same rate.

Another bill would prevent the Reinsurance Facility from awarding drivers a point for property damage up to $200. The points determine the drivers' rate.

The third bill would allow insurance companies that reduce their rates to extend those benefits to drivers inside the facility with no points.

Workers

Members of the House Manufacturers and Labor Subcommittee members voiced resentment at the tone of letters they've received on a workers' compensation bill as they staked out positions on the legislation.

The bill would expand the definition of injuries for which workers may be compensated. Labor spokesmen view the bill as a compromise compared with legislation rejected last session. Business leaders say it still is too broad and would hurt them.

Chairman Rep. Tom Rabon, D-Brunswick asked both sides to come forward with acceptable recommendations to remedy the problem.

Rep. George Robinson, R-Caldwell, and Rep. Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, said they resented letters portraying the situation as labor versus industry and forcing them to choose sides.

Ms. Easterling said that what affects one side will affect the other and should be to the benefit of both.

Slavery

A House bill that began as an effort to repeal an obsolete law turned into a debate over sharecroppers and slavery. The old law made it a crime for an employer to hire a person who failed to live up to a contract.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, noted that the bill was used to keep sharecroppers from deserting a farmer for a more lucrative offer. Others noted that the law doesn't affect all counties and is supported by much of the agricultural community.

But Rep. Annie Brown Kennedy, D-Forsyth, said the law allowed the equivalent of involuntary servitude and imprisonment for debt. Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, noted that the courts have ruled it is possible to break contracts, but people must be held liable for that action.

The House delayed debate on the bill until next week because of the questions.

Lottery

Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, filed two bills to establish a statewide lottery. Under one bill, the lottery would be created if both houses of the Legislature approve. Under the other, a referendum would be required.

Barnes filed the legislation after a study by a subcommittee of the Senate Rules Committee. They're expected to be sent back to the Rules Committee, which will call a public hearing, he said.

Election Checkoff

A bill that drew stiff opposition from Senate Republicans cruised through the House Election Laws Committee with the help of several GOP votes.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, would revise the procedure by which taxpayers indicate on their returns that they would like to donate $1 to political campaigns.

Presently, taxpayers may stipulate that the dollar go to the Republican or Democratic Party. If they have no preference, they check "undecided" and the money is divided among the parties based on the number of registered voters they have.

Under the Woodard bill, all donations would be distributed on the basis of the number of party members. Taxpayers simply would indicate on their tax forms that they want $1 to go to political campaigns.

Criticism Of N.C. Council On Women Condemned As Unjust

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state legislator has vowed to cut state funds for a women's advocacy group he says is lobbying with taxpayers' money, but administration officials say the criticism is unjust.

"Why should taxpayers fund advocates of programs that they don't necessarily support?" Rep. Brad Ligon, R-Rowan, asked the Joint Base Budget Subcommittee on General Government Thursday.

He said the Council on the Status of Women, established in the Department of Administration in 1977, was designed to help train women who are displaced homemakers, not to lobby "for abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment or whatever."

He said he would move to drop the $331,000 state funding for the council when the subcommittee resumes consideration of the council budget Tuesday.

Stephanie Bass, a spokeswoman for the department, said council members are prohibited from lobbying the legislature although she said the council did have opinions on some bills.

"The council has supported some legislation, including bills on child support and property distribution (after divorce), but no staff members have lobbied for them," she said. "And, after all, the Council on Tourism supports tourism bills. That's part of their duties."

Ligon handed out photocopies of sample letters used by the council to teach lobbying methods at a 1981 conference and quoted council minutes mentioning pieces of legislation the group planned to push through the General Assembly in 1982.

Ms. Bass said the conference was designed to improve the political effectiveness of participants and took no particular position on any issues.

Ligon quoted a state audit of the council as saying "many of the activities conducted by the council have been done without the appropriate legislative authority."

But Ms. Bass said the state Attorney General's Office told the department the council's activities were legitimate.

Ligon also questioned how effective the council was in its role of training women, presenting figures showing that the council spent an average of $10,400 training 30 women while the state Labor Department spent an average of $115 for on-the-job training of 5,900 employees, including 213 women.

"Obviously, the Labor Department has an incredibly more cost-effective mechanism for training women," he said in a prepared statement. "With $312,000 the Labor Department could have trained 1,840 women."

Administration Secretary Jane Patterson challenged Ligon to back up his figures and suggested the State Auditor appear before the subcommittee.

"Once I understand where you got your figures, I would be glad to respond and separate myth from reality," she said.

Ms. Bass pointed out that the money spent by the council was under the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act, which requires that trainees receive salaries while being trained.

Bingo Parlors In Violation

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Eight of nine bingo parlors operating in Gaston County had closed their doors as of Wednesday under warnings by Gaston County Police that they were in violation of state bingo laws.

Detective Dewey Brown, in charge of monitoring bingo activities, said no charges have been filed against the operations, but said action will be taken if the organizations running the games don't "get in line with state law."

Brown said the most common violation is a failure to file state-required quarterly reports including financial receipts, expenses and prizes, with the county police.

Republicans in the Senate complained that the change would hurt them, because there are more registered Democrats.

Crime Stoppers

A subcommittee was created to study a bill designed to help private groups that pay informants who provide crime tips.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, would allow judges to require as a condition for probation that lawbreakers reimburse the private groups the reward they paid informants.

New Bills

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, filed legislation to authorize creation of a board to devise a deferred compensation plan for state employees. The plan would offer such options as life insurance, annuities, regulated investment trusts, or other investments approved by the board.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, filed a bill to allow juveniles to admit themselves to treatment facilities without parental consent during emergencies. However, the parents or guardian would be notified within 24 hours if possible.

A bill to bar developers from proceeding with a project while a request for a hearing on the construction permit is pending was filed by Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham.

Hancock also filed legislation to create a new offense, unlawfully obtaining funds. He defined the crime as getting money through "willful misrepresentation or concealment."

In the House, bills were introduced to protect renters against conversion of apartments to condominiums, to set up a law-enforcement training fund and to allow the people of Kannapolis to vote on incorporation.

Resolutions

The state Senate approved unanimously two resolutions dealing with national policy. One urges the U.S. Navy not to sink decommissioned nuclear submarines off the North Carolina coast, while the other asks Congress to forbid the sale of national forest lands in the state.

Argentines Still Awaiting War Explanations

Shoemaker's School Is Reviving Cobbler's Art

COBBLER — John Brown, a student, stitches the tongue in a shoe as novice cobblers learn the old ways at an old Army barracks at Port Townsend's historic Fort Flagler. (AP Laserphoto)

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash. (AP) — A former businessman with a dream of reviving the ancient craft of making shoes by hand attracted five students who would rather be independent than rich.

Each of the five who responded to an ad that Alan Zerobnick placed in Mother Earth News paid $3,000 for an intensive monthlong workshop on shoemaking.

The students included a barber, a park worker and an oil company computer operator.

"I try not to paint anybody a rosy picture," said Zerobnick, 36, of Cosmopolis. "I tell them if you start right now, and work as fast as you can for the rest of your life you can't begin to fill up one Kinney's Shoe Store. I tell them to think small and stay small."

A good week's production for a cobbler is three pairs, Zerobnick says.

That output, at $125 to $175 a pair, would mean gross earnings of $18,750 to $26,250 annually. With materials deducted, that would mean an annual income of $11,250 to $17,250.

But that's enough to survive outside the "rat race," said Zerobnick.

Student Cliff Stout, a 38-year-old computer operator, said he flew here from New Jersey for the class because his company is cutting its payroll "and also this seemed to be a good way to slip into retirement ... it's not physically demanding and I could do it long after normal retirement age."

Student Arlen Johnson, 51, of Anchorage, Alaska, said he has been an Army barber for 22 years and would like to open a small barber shop in the city. Shoemaking attracted him "because I've been looking for something to do in the downtime, and I've had my fill of reading," Johnson said.

Born in Colorado, Zerobnick worked in television and marketing, then started a backpacking equipment company but "packed it up" in 1976 to head West. He made his first shoes for himself and began to make others for friends who admired his efforts.

He learned his craft by reading, practicing and consulting with some shoemakers "who now are in their 70s and 80s" and with younger orthopedic shoemakers.

Why would people pay $100 and more for a pair of his shoes?

Comfort, says Zerobnick. The forms from which factory-made shoes are fashioned are made in standard sizes and "the average human being doesn't have standard feet," he said.

"Look around you on the street some day and you'll see a lot of people like that," he said, hunching forward and grimacing. Those are the people who need custom shoes, according to Zerobnick.

His shoes are also built to last. "Some of the first shoes

I made are still on the road after seven years," he said proudly.

For their $3,000, students at the Tenderfoot Workshop received hand tools, books and enough leather for 15 to 20 pairs of shoes. The package also included a month's room and board in the old Army buildings at this city's historic Fort Flagler.

Gigi Hay, 29, is the only student from Washington state. She lives in Ashford and spends five months a year working on trails in Mount Rainier National Park, so she said she needed something "to do the other seven months ... and I definitely want to be my own boss; that's kind of a dream of mine."

With her classmates, Ms. Hay advanced through a curriculum that began with making sandals, then moccasins, shoes and boots. Three weeks into the workshop, she was wearing the boots and called them "the most comfortable footwear I've ever had."

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Leopoldo Galtieri looks down from a balcony, as he did a year ago.

But it is not the balcony of Government House and there are no multitudes below hailing him as a conquering hero.

The former president and army commander who launched Argentina's ill-fated invasion of the British-administered Falkland Islands last April 2 is in civilian clothes, in retirement and in disgrace.

Since being ousted from both the presidency and the army command following Argentina's surrender to Britain last June, Galtieri has been a virtual recluse in his 19th-floor suburban apartment.

And the country's 28 million inhabitants are still waiting for a report from an armed forces commission investigating "political and strategic responsibility" for the conflict that cost about 1,000 lives and billions of dollars.

Some are awaiting the report more anxiously than others. The young ex-conscripts at the Malvinas Veterans Center are impatient and skeptical.

Argentines refer to the Falklands as the Malvinas.

"We're waiting for the report, because when it comes out we're going to study it point by point and say, 'This is what's true and this is a lie,'" Miguel Angel Trinidad, 20, the group's secretary who spent 10 weeks in the Falklands, said in an interview.

The military government has not prevented the Falklands war story from being told at least partially. The prisoners of war returned by Britain in the weeks following the surrender leveled charges of cowardice, corruption and logistical incompetence among much of the Argentine officer corps.

Jorge Luis Borges, the 83-year-old Argentine author who is the grand old man of Latin American letters, commented: "The Malvinas war demonstrated that Argentine military men are much more dangerous to their compatriots than they are to an enemy in the field."

He alluded to the regime's mid-1970s campaign against leftist guerrillas that resulted in the "disappearances" of 6,000 to 15,000 people. Local and international human rights organizations claim many of the missing had nothing to do with the guerrillas, but were summarily executed on suspicion of subversion.

The administration that succeeded Galtieri has refused to formally declare a cessation of hostilities in the South Atlantic and misses no opportunity to declare the "recovery" of the islands one of the country's highest priorities. But the nationalistic fervor that swept hundreds of thousands of people into Buenos Aires' Plaza de Mayo a year ago is absent.

Argentina claims Britain "stole" the islands 250 miles off southern Argentina in 1833, when the Royal Navy ousted Argentine authorities and settlers from the archipelago and established a colony.

The Falklands debacle left the 7-year-old military government in such disrepute that the generals, who prior to the war indicated they planned to hold power until at least the end of the decade, were forced to begin a transition to civilian rule.

Galtieri's successor in the presidency, retired Gen. Reynaldo Bignone, has promised elections, the first in 10 years, for Oct. 30. The transfer of power to elected authorities is set for Jan. 30.

Political campaigning and the deep recession — unemployment is at a 10-year high of 12 percent and 300 percent annual inflation constantly erodes salaries — now command much more space in the newspapers than the war and its consequences.

Nicanor Costa Mendez, the foreign minister during the war who presented the Argentine case in world forums, is campaigning for a conservative federalist party and is mentioned as a possible presidential candidate.

He, Galtieri and the former military governor of the islands, Gen. Mario Menendez, have appeared in recent days before the investigative commission and others who played a major role in the war are to testify in coming weeks. The report is expected to be completed in early May.

The current junta says Argentina rigorously observes a "de facto" halt to hostilities. But deliveries of sophisticated arms in recent months have prompted expressions of concern from London about possible air raids or commando strikes against the 4,000-man British garrison on the islands.

Diplomatic and military sources here and abroad say the air force had acquired six French-made Super-Etendard jet fighters, 10 Mirage 5s and two dozen Israeli-made Daggers since the war and is in better shape now than last April. Argentina also has acquired from France new Exocet missiles like the ones used to sink two British ships during the conflict, and West Germany recently delivered the first of four Exocet-armed destroyers it has contracted to build for Argentina by next March.

Even so, the sources virtually rule out the renewal of hostilities by a harried government concerned principally with orchestrating an orderly retreat from power.

The war drastically altered Argentine foreign policy. Before the conflict, the staunchly anti-communist regime was strengthening ties with the United States and emphasizing the country's "Western and Christian" identity.

When the United States and West European nations sided with Britain in the conflict, Argentina found moral and diplomatic support from Third World and Soviet-bloc countries. The government is now firmly entrenched in the same Non-Aligned Movement it was considering abandoning in the months before the war.

Ferry Schedule To Be Changed

The North Carolina Department of Transportation has announced that, beginning April 1, an extra departure will be added at the Ocracoke and Cedar Island ferry terminals to meet the expected influx of travelers to and from Ocracoke Island during Easter.

The additional departure times will be 10 p.m. from Ocracoke and 7 p.m. from Cedar Island.

Ben O'Neal, director of the state's ferry division in Morehead City, said an extra ferry vessel and two additional runs are normally added during Easter.

"Because two ferry vessels are currently undergoing routine maintenance, the extra vessel will not be available by Eastern weekend" but will be back in service by late April, he said.

The interim schedule includes 7 a.m., 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. departures from Cedar Island, and 10 a.m., 4 p.m. and 10 p.m. departures from Ocracoke.

Reservations are still being accepted and are recommended for both departure points, O'Neal said.

Follow Trends in Sunglasses

NEW YORK (AP) — The women who help other women decide what to wear and how to look apparently follow the trends they set, at least when it comes to sunglasses, according to a survey by Corning Optics.

In a poll of 46 female fashion and beauty editors at the introduction of a new line of sunglasses, 28 preferred brown or tortoise frames. Eight opted for red, six for wine and four voted gray. The majority of editors, 27, said they had oval faces, six said oblong or round, and four each described their faces as square or heart-shaped.

The fashion experts' selections closely matched Corning's recent poll of its customers, which showed their most popular sunglass frame color to be tortoise, with red a distant second. Most said they had oval-shaped faces.

The male editors in attendance also were consistent with the national trend, unanimously expressing a preference for gold-rimmed styles.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — YOUR RING DEALER NEEDED A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: V equals P.
The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Reorganize League For 'All Religions'

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Carteret County officials say they are forming a new church softball league that will allow members of any religion to play, while some members of a league that voted to exclude Mormons say they will stand by their decision and play without county support.

Neal Lewis, director of the Carteret County Parks and Recreation Department, had suspended the church league Tuesday. Mormons who attended a league meeting March 24 were told they could not participate in the league because they "do not believe in the same Jesus Christ" as other churches in the league.

"Some of the folks adamantly opposed to allowing Mormons to play have been replaced as the leadership of this league," said Neal Lewis, director of the Carteret County Parks and Recreation Department. "The league is being reorganized by folks who just don't see things that way."

The county could not legally allow the exclusion of anyone from a county-sponsored activity, he said.

"When that issue is resolved, then we've left room in our field schedule to allow them (the league) to begin on April 8," Lewis said. "The bottom line is they all want to play softball."

"Some of the members of these churches have really gone back and questioned their representatives," he said. "Some of these representatives have done an about-face."

However, some teams in the previous league are planning to form their own league, operating independently of the county, and will continue to ban Mormons from participating, league member Stephen Harris said Thursday.

"We are going to continue our league with our decision we already made," Harris said. "We're planning to play on another field. We don't yet have a new name for our league."

Why the Easter Egg?

The egg, symbol of fertility and new life, has long been a part of the Easter celebration of the Resurrection. However, some religious historians believe that the practice of giving eggs on Easter day comes from an old church law that said eggs could not be eaten during Lent. Thus, on Easter Sunday, church members marked the end of Lent by eating eggs once again. Ancient Persians who believed that the Earth had come from a giant egg often dyed eggs as part of their spring festivals and gave them as gifts. But the idea of coloring eggs for Easter began with early Christians in the ancient Middle Eastern land of Mesopotamia.

DO YOU KNOW — Which President staged the first Easter egg rolling contest on the White House lawn?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The three main U.S. Virgin Islands are St. Croix, St. Thomas, and St. John.

The contract is 6 NT by South. West leads the ten of diamonds. Would you rather play or defend?

We are indebted to our good friend Jose le Dentu of Paris for this hand. Assuming best play and defense, choose whether you would rather play or defend six no trump, then send your solution, together with a complete explanation of the line you have chosen, to: Shell Game, 47 Parry Road, Stamford, CT 06907. Entries must be postmarked no later than April 13. The solution to the problem will appear in this column on April 15. All who submit correct entries will receive a copy of "Goren on Play and Defense."

Do you think that six spades is a better contract? If you like, you can see if six spades can be made after a diamond opening lead, presuming best play and defense. But that is for your own edification—we don't want to hear about it!

Avalanche Victim Back On Skis, And Teaching

By JENNIFER KERR
Associated Press Writer
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Anna Conrad, buried for five days in an avalanche one year ago, has returned to the ski slopes even though she lost part of a leg and foot, and says the accident taught her "don't give up."

"There's a lot of sadness involved and it's kind of scary, thinking that it's been as long as a year and it's only been a year," she said of the avalanche that killed seven people, including her boyfriend.

Ms. Conrad, 23, has a special artificial "sports leg" and has been skiing this winter at Mammoth Mountain, near Yosemite National Park. She plans a skiing vacation this week in British Columbia.

Lately, much of her time has been devoted to working as a high school student teacher, instructing in biology.

"I've always wanted to teach students so they might get a little more excited about what goes on around them," said Ms. Conrad.

Since the avalanche, "I try as hard as I can to do everything as well as I can. I tell my students, 'Don't give up on things easily.'"

Two avalanches roared down the slopes of the Alpine Meadows ski resort in the Sierra Nevada last March 31, covering a ski patrol building, damaging the main lodge and burying resort employees and visitors.

Ms. Conrad, a ski lift operator who was cross-country skiing that day because the lifts were closed, was inside the three-story ski patrol building and got trapped in an air pocket formed by debris.

She was found five days later, her feet badly frostbitten. She later lost her right leg below the knee and part of her left foot.

"People died who were very close to me," she said. "It's hard to look back and say they're not here any more."

She hasn't been back to Alpine Meadows, which she is suing, but plans to return next week for a national handicapped ski race.

"My feeling is I want to be active. I've always been

SURVIVOR NOW TEACHES — Anna Conrad, who was buried 5 days in an avalanche a year ago, is now a student teacher at the Sacramento High School. (AP Laserphoto) active and I don't want to change my lifestyle any more than I absolutely have to. Skiing is something I can do and it's exciting, exhilarating and thrilling."

She said her skiing has steadily improved and she can now race down advanced slopes. Before the disaster, Ms. Conrad was an expert.

"I'd like to have something good come out of this. I'd like to help other disabled people have confidence and not have fear in doing some things," she said.

Ms. Conrad worked at the resort last winter after finishing her biology degree at the University of California-Davis. She graduated last June and began student teaching last fall. She taught at a Davis junior high school the first half of the year and has been at Sacramento High School since Feb. 1.

"She is an inspiration, really," said Fred Vanderwold, her supervising teacher and a skier who followed the avalanche story last year. "She's just a nice, good person, a dedicated person. She's special, but I don't think she's any more special than she would have been anyway."

Ms. Conrad, who grew up in Glendora in Los Angeles County, says she's looking for a teaching job for September.

"I think she will probably find a job," said Vanderwold. "She does a good job. Her handicap is not holding her back."

Ms. Conrad sometimes uses crutches but said she's having no problems with the artificial left leg. However, the partially amputated right foot has nerve damage that might be permanent. She cannot tell when she's hurting it and it gets easily blistered.

She said she's not scared of skiing, but has "some fear of being up in an area with a bad storm. And I have had to ski in some storms this winter."

business at McDonald's, you'd think they would want to use our eggs. But they don't."

"Obviously, they want to buy all their eggs from one place," Danko said. "But you'd think they would bend a little in this case."

Telephone calls to McDonald's corporate headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill., went unanswered Tuesday night.

Some New England politicians, including Rep. Norman D'Amours, D-N.H., wrote letters of complaint to McDonald's. Rep. John R. McKernan, R-Maine, appealed to McDonald's to "understand the potential damage the white egg giveaway could do to our egg industry."

He said more than 80 percent of egg buyers in New England preferred brown eggs.

"We're fighting for our survival," said LaFlamme, who runs a poultry farm in Monroe. He said higher costs for heat and grain make the local brown eggs more expensive than white eggs produced closer to grain markets in the South.

LaFlamme said brown eggs are more likely to be fresh.

"White eggs are shipped, and you can have eggs that are several weeks old before they're brought to market," LaFlamme said. "We ship our eggs out daily from the henhouse to the processing plant."

The color of eggs is determined by the genetic strain of the hen. Danko said about the only difference between the two colors of eggs is that brown shells are thicker and harder to break than white shells.

"But who eats the shells?" he asked.

Heavy Sentence For 'Rampage'

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Johnny Hiram Allison was found guilty Wednesday of killing his mother, stabbing his father and brother and setting fire to the family home in a second trial ordered by the North Carolina Supreme Court.

The jury took less than an hour to reach the verdict. Judge Robert D. Lewis of Asheville sentenced Allison to 25-30 years in prison for the murder of his mother, 7-10 years for each assault charge and 5-10 years for burning the house.

Lewis combined the assault and burning sentences and ordered that they be served after the sentence for murder is completed. Allison's prison term is credited with 842 days of time already served.

The charges against Allison, 39, stem from a Dec. 8, 1980, rampage. He first was convicted in March 1981, but the state Supreme Court granted him a new trial on grounds that the jury was not allowed to hear a psychiatrist's testimony.

In both trials, Allison pleaded innocent by reason of insanity and offered testimony from two psychiatrists who said he suffers from schizophrenia.

Marcos Children Unlikely Heirs To A Dynasty

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — They have grown up near the seat of power, but the three children of Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos appear unlikely heirs of any political dynasty.

While son Ferdinand Jr., 24, and daughter Imee, 27, hold government offices, neither has shown the political flair that has kept their father and mother, Imelda, in power for 17 years.

Marcos has denied any dynastic intentions, although he has placed a brother, a brother-in-law, a nephew and several distant relatives in influential government positions.

Ferdinand Jr., still known by his childhood nickname "Bongbong," was sworn in March 24 as governor of the president's home province. He replaced Marcos' sister, Elizabeth Rocka, who resigned for health reasons. But the president says his Oxford-educated son is more inclined to mathematics than national politics.

Imee Marcos, who studied political science at Princeton and is finishing a law degree here, is widely considered the most articulate and politically visible of the children. She is also the most independent and has defied her parents by secretly marrying Philippine sportsman Tommy Manotoc in the United States in December 1981. She is reportedly expecting her first child soon.

The youngest child, Irene, 22, is interested primarily in anthropology and music. A cover story in a recent Sunday supplement announced her plans to marry a local businessman in June, although the marriage has not been confirmed by the Marcos family.

Marcos, 65, was elected president in 1965 and re-elected in 1969. He declared martial law in 1972, ending an American-style democracy. After lifting martial rule eight years later, he ran against a token opponent and won a six-year term which runs until 1987.

The 52-year-old first lady married Marcos when he was already an influential congressman and eventually shared power with him. She is minister of human settlements, metropolitan Manila governor and a member of parliament. Both have de-

Iraq's Foreign Workers Leave As Boom Fizzles

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The drain of the war with Iran and falling oil prices have brought an end to Iraq's construction boom and throngs of foreign workers who had come to reap its benefits are now streaming back home. Western diplomats say.

At the same time, the country's oil-supported economy has come under heavy strain. At the height of the boom last summer the more than 2 million foreign workers made up more than half of the nation's labor force; 1.5 million Egyptians alone accounted for nearly 10 percent of the total population.

These workers sent home about $3 billion to $4 billion annually and symbolized President Saddam Hussein's policy of pressing ahead with development in spite of the war with Iran that began in Sept. 22, 1980.

Now, the departure lounge of Baghdad airport is crowded with Pakistanis in traditional baggy pants and Egyptians in native robes. There are few new arrivals.

One hotel worker from the Philippines said a new regulation went into effect in December under which the government cut back the hard-currency portion of his salary from 75 percent to 60 percent.

It is now taking more than a month to transfer even this and it's causing hardship for my family back home," said the worker, who declined use of his name for fear of losing his job.

One Iraqi dinar is worth $3.20 at the official rate, but outside Iraq and on the black market it is worth only about half that.

In a further sign of the economic pinch, the government has let no new contracts, delayed payments for work already completed, and publish the national budget for 1983, and reduced the amount of currency foreign workers can take out of the country.

As a result, international businesses are scaling back their local offices and letting workers go after completing projects. One American company, for example, has cut its staff from 17 to four. Before the war began with Iran, Iraq had $35 billion in reserves built up from the sale of its oil. Despite nearly $20 billion in aid from neighboring Arab oil states worried about Iranian expansion, the reserves now total only about $4 billion, diplomats say.

supplying anti-government Islamic fundamentalists in Syria with arms and explosives. Western diplomats say Syria is now acting as a conduit for arms sales to Iran.

Iraq's main source of income is from oil through a pipeline that runs through Turkey, carrying about 700,000 to 800,000 barrels a day. A project to expand the Turkish line's capacity to over a million barrels daily will take about 18 months.

"Even if they get the capacity of the pipe increased it may just balance the drop in prices" from $34 to $29 a barrel, said the diplomat.
