Mourning Mars Christians' Joy On Easter Day

By United Press International

Christians around the world heralded Easter Sunday and the 1,950th anniversary of Christ's rebirth, celebrating with prayer and ritual from the churches of Jerusalem to the soaring splendor of the Vatican.

The holiday is considered an occasion for joy and hope — but in Popayan, Colombia, it was an occasion for mourning after a devastating earthquake Thursday killed at least 250 people, injured 1,500 and left 100,000 homeless.

Popayan's Easter Week events, the most famous in all of Colombia, attract thousand of tourists annually. But they were canceled this year. The only religious service was a Good Friday mass burial for 79 victims.

"Easter will be sad this year," a nun said, watching a statue of Christ dismantled while workers pulled the body of an elderly man from cathedral ruins.

Pope John Paul II spent much of Saturday in prayer, pausing at midday to receive pilots and policemen, who guard him and transport him, and their families.

At 10 p.m. local time, watched by thousands of pilgrims who flock to Rome for Holy Week, he was to preside over an Easter Vigil ceremony at St. Peter's Basilica and light a tall candle symbolic of the "Light of Christ," or "Lumen Christi."

Dressed in white and gold robes, he would lead a procession up the aisle of the Baroque and Renaissance St. Peter's to the main altar, pausing three times to signify the three days between Christ's death and resurrection.

Priests, nuns and other members of the congregation also light candles during the long walk up the aisle. The ceremony culminates with mass at midnight.

The pope has declared 1983 a Holy Year celebrating the resurrection of Christ after his crucifixion at age 33.

In Jerusalem, a high pontifical mass was sung and other services held at the site of Jesus Christ's death and resurrection under a strict timetable of worship laid down by the ancient Ottoman Empire.

One-quarter of a mile away from the Holy Sepulcher church, focal point of the worship, Arab youths gathered near Islam's venerated Dome of the Rock mosque to protest Israeli occupation. Arab students cut classes in a school strike.

Israeli border police, wearing green berets, stood guard throughout the city, which the modern state of Israel has declared its indivisible capital. Pilgrims and tourists moved past into the twisting streets of the old city past Arab souks selling everything from Coca Cola to rosaries to carpets.

The Ottomans, who ruled in the 16th century, assigned strict hours of prayer to each Christian denomination, also decreeing that services inside the Holy Sepulcher church be conducted in Latin.

Catholic services in other churches, however, celebrated the Easter mass in the evening Saturday, as done in Rome and elsewhere in the Christian world, turning the city's churches into a procession of light.

As midnight neared in the Christian quarter, candles began lighting up darkened houses of worship, with each church choosing its own means of heralding Easter and the resurrection of Christ.

Shuttle Ready

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger stands ready at last to take its place as the second ship in America's space fleet, with only whipping high-altitude winds posing an obstacle to a Monday launch.

Liftoff of the shuttle, a slimmed down, slightly more powerful version of Columbia, is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. EST from Kennedy Space Center.

Challenger's four crewmen planned to spend Easter Sunday with final brush-up chores and flying aerobatics in T-38 jet trainers. They couldn't go to church even if time permitted; they are in semi-isolation, to minimize the chance of catching unwanted germs.

Commander Paul J. Weitz and pilot Karol J. Bobko practiced emergency abort landings on the 15,000-foot-long Kennedy center runway at dusk Saturday. The new shuttle has no emergency ejection seats.

Crews removed work platforms and tidied up the launch pad Saturday, preparing to pick up the terminal countdown early Monday after a day off for Easter.

The last several days, the jet stream has pushed wind velocities at the 40,000-foot level over the Cape Canaveral area to 160 mph, with too much turbulence for launch. But computer projections were that the jet stream would move northward and Maj. Donald Green, an Air Force weather officer, said "It's still looking real good for launch Monday."

The Air Force sent up balloons frequently to sample the winds aloft.

If the launch had to be postponed, it would be tried again 24 hours later. But if it slips beyond Friday, officials said, there would be a delay of 10 days to two weeks because of the need to replace batteries used to deploy a satellite the shuttle is carrying into orbit.

Kremlin Rejects U.S. Arms Plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko delivered a stinging rejection Saturday of President Reagan's plan for breaking the stalemate over arms reductions, labeling his offer "unacceptable on all counts" and warning that it widens the gulf between East and West.

Giving the Kremlin's first official response to the U.S. plan during a televised, two-hour news conference, Gromyko charged that Reagan made the missile reduction offer to obstruct the medium-range weapons talks in Geneva while preparing to deploy new nuclear missiles in Europe.

"This is not a road to peace or a road to agreement. The gulf between agreement and these proposals will be even wider," Gromyko said, glancing only occasionally at prepared notes and gesturing emphatically as he spoke.

The 73-year-old minister stood the entire two hours and sometimes looked intensely at the 300 reporters gathered in a conference hall.

Gromyko warned the United States against pressuring the Soviets to come to an agreement at Geneva, and said the Kremlin would reconsider participation in the talks and possibly deploy even more rockets if NATO goes ahead with plans to station 572 new U.S. missiles in Europe starting late this year.

"If the position of the United States of America remains such, as it was announced, then there is no chance of an agreement," the 73-year-old minister declared, in response to a

Station Operators Question Gas Tax

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Most everyone agrees that upkeep of national and state roads are a necessity, but local service station owners and operators wonder whether Congress could have chosen something less essential than gasoline to tax.

The five-cent-a-gallon increase took effect Friday, and is the first nationwide tax increase in nearly a quarter century. The federal gasoline tax was last increased in 1959, when it went to four cents a gallon. Money raised by the additional hike will be used to rebuild the nation's deteriorating highways and bridges.

Hobart Barnes, owner of Barnes Gulf on Memorial Drive, said he feels Congress' decision to raise the gas tax five cents is "... absolutely wrong. If anything, taxes should be increased on luxury items, not a necessity like gasoline," he said.

"I think five cents is a bit too steep, all it hurts is the poor people," Greenville Boulevard Etna Manager Charles Talley said. "People who legislate for this don't have to worry about five cents, but look at the truckers — it's killing them, and the consumer as well. Right now we're fighting inflation, and implementing this tax increase is adding fuel to the fire.

"What Congress wanted to do I guess is create more jobs, but it always comes back to the taxpayer in a big way. First it was four cents, and then five. They just tax and tax and tax, it's getting a bit ridiculous."

Both Barnes and Talley said the increase shouldn't affect their businesses, because "it's a necessity," as Talley put it.

"Even though it won't hurt us, I still don't like it," Talley added. "They just have to stop taxing necessities, it hurts the consumer too much.

On top of that, Talley said that consumers can expect another increase within the next month. "It's rumor, but I've heard wholesale prices will go up, causing the price of gas at the pumps to go up as well," he said.

Most retailers did add on four or more cents when the prices were increased.

Asked if he had an alternative for taxing gas, Barnes suggested methods used during World War II. "During the second world war up until the late '50s and early '60s a luxury tax of 10 percent on a dollar was charged on all unnecessary items such as rings, gifts, any thing you can think of that's not essential to life. It worked that way; they always had a surplus of funds and then they just stopped it. I guess lobbyists for luxury companies just got to the politicians.

"Right now in North Carolina the consumer is paying 21 cents in taxes per each gallon of gas (12 cents state and nine federal). People driving by the gas stations that display their prices think it is all us, but if we didn't have these taxes, gas would be going for about 86 cents a gallon," Barnes said.

"The federal government more than doubled what they originally taxed on gas and it is just too much. Five cents doesn't sound like much, but to someone who is on a tight budget, five

Peace Marchers Block U.S. Bases

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Tens of thousands of peace protesters staged "die-ins," blocked U.S. military bases, handed tulips to riot police and screamed anti-nuclear slogans Saturday during Easter weekend demonstrations in Western Europe.

In Glasgow, Scotland, 4,000 protesters converged in the main square and collapsed in feigned death to the wail of sirens and bagpipes, simulating the effects of an atomic war.

"It's a symbolic action, and it makes the point very well that ultimately, there is no defense against a nuclear attack," said Tony Nec, a 25-year-old Scottish protester from the Edinburgh suburb of Bilston.

The protesters were demonstrating against North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to deploy 572 U.S.-made Pershing 2 and cruise nuclear missiles in Western Europe starting later this year if the Soviet Union does not dismantle hundreds of multi-warhead rockets in Eastern Europe.

In West Germany, organizers said about 75,000 protesters joined the de-

Report To Cite Salt II Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — An interagency study group is likely to report soon to President Reagan that the Soviet Union has violated the terms of the unratified SALT II treaty limiting nuclear arms, administation sources said Saturday night.

The panel also intends to raise "serious questions" about Soviet compliance with the 1974 treaty limiting underground nuclear tests, the source said.

Just what the president would do with the report was not known, but he has hinted that he plans a speech soon on the subject.

Separately, a former defense science official said Saturday the United States "scaled back the ruler" in the 1970s to make seismic data show that Soviet underground tests were within the threshold.

The sources who reported the study committee's likely recommendation, speaking on condition that they not be identified, said a Feb. 8 test of a new solid-fueled Soviet missile at Plesetsk "brought to a head" U.S. concerns about Soviet compliance with the terms of SALT II. That test constitutes a violation, in the panel's thinking, the sources reported.

Magistrates Offer Front-Line Justice

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Have you ever signed a criminal warrant against someone? Ever had a traffic ticket and signed a waiver of your right to a trial rather than go to court, or felt someone wronged you in a business deal and filed a small claims action?

If you have done any of these things, then chances are you have dealt with magistrates — the entry level workhorses of the state's court system.

Elmore Hodges, the chief magistrate in Pitt County, outlined the duties of the office in a recent interview.

Nominated by the clerk of Superior Court and appointed by the resident Superior Court judge, magistrates are responsible for "writing all kinds of warrants" for criminal law violations, issuing search warrants, setting appearance bonds, issuing involuntary commitment papers for persons to be confined to state hospitals (eight to 10 each week on the average), handling small claims cases.

"We have a courtroom now, and on days we have small claims court (Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays) we'll have 25 to 40 cases a day," Hodges said.

Magistrates, under the present system, can handle small claims matters up to a limit of $1,000.

"We can take guilty pleas" in certain criminal cases, certain traffic offenses and city code violations " ... anything that does not exceed 30 days or $50 fine," Hodges said, "and can accept waivers" for which there is a "set cost (of court) and fine."

Magistrates also have the power to order jail sentences of up to 30 days for contempt of court. "It happens once in a while, especially at night," when people become unruly or cause problems, he said.

"You never know what to expect," Hodges suggested, because "any and everything comes through here.".

Magistrates set appearance bonds and grant bail in all criminal cases "except capital cases" the magistrate said, pointing out that "only judges can do that."

Marriages? "I would guess maybe we perform sometimes one a day, three a day ... maybe eight or 10 a week."

A magistrate for 15 years, Hodges said magistrates must have a high school education and must complete a two-week school at the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill within six months after their appointment.

At present, there are 10 magistrates in Pitt County. Six work in the Greenville office, which is open 24 hours a day. Others are located in Ayden, Bethel, Farmville and Grifton. They are paid between $9,400 and $15,000 a year.

Beaufort County is served by five magistrates — three full-time men located in Washington and part-time magistrates in Aurora and Belhaven.

Pitt County Superior Court Clerk Sandra Gaskins, who maintains records of the magistrates activities, said that from July 1, 1982, to Dec. 30, 1982, magistrates in the county handled 1,687 small claims cases. The 10 men issued 3,936 non-motor vehicle criminal warrants and accepted waivers in 599 cases and took 106 guilty pleas.

During the same period, 3,457 motor vehicle cases (traffic tickets) were filed with the magistrates, who accepted 1,683 waivers.

Magistrate Bill Whitehurst, who was a justice of the peace before the present system of magistrates was established in 1968, said the present system is "a whole lot better than it was. It's a more complex system now ... more in touch with the court system."

Whitehurst said JPs were not paid on a salary basis. They were paid $3.50 per case on a fee basis, but "only for convictions."

He said JPs wrote criminal warrants and heard minor cases. "But if you didn't convict, you didn't get any money" out of the $9.50 costs of court a convicted defendant was required to pay, he said.

"To me, this system is a whole lot better. It's more in contact with the court system ... a whole lot superior, more professional," Whitehurst said.

TV Mix-Up Brings Howls

CINCINNATI (AP) — A TV station angered and confused viewers Saturday when it interrupted the Louisville-Houston NCAA basketball tournament game to show the daily Ohio Lottery drawing — only a rehearsal — and then the real drawing.

Todd Hunter, night station manager for the CBS affiliate WCPO-TV, said the switchboard was flooded with calls for an hour after the mixup.

Basketball fans were outraged because they missed several minutes of the game after Houston had rallied to take the lead.

A Review

Boxing, Horses Subject Of 2 Films Now Showing

Two movies now playing in Greenville for a second week are both rated PG (parental guidance advised) — "Tough Enough" at Plitt Theater, and "The Return of the Black Stallion" at Plaza Cinema.

These ratings raise an interesting point of speculation — why does "Stallion," which has only one mild oath and implied violence, get the same viewing guideline assigned "Tough Enough," which surely must set a record for scenes of head battering in boxing rings?

•"Tough Enough" has a beginning that promises more than is ever realized. Art Long (Dennis Quaid) is a dreamer, a young man with a pretty, frail looking wife (Carlene Watkins) and a small son. Employed by his father as a tree trimmer, Long's heart is set on breaking into the big time as a country singer. Wife, friends and parents all look upon his singing as a hobby, a pasttime. Their lack of faith in his chances to become a successful singer only strengthens his determination.

Since the only immediate opportunity to gain public notice is to compete in the Texas regional competition for the toughest man in Texas, he gives it a try, billed as the Country Western Warrior. Art Long is a lean, fairly muscular man, handy with his fists, but obviously no match for some of the hulkier brutes he face in two days of free-for-all bouts. Nevertheless, he wins the Texas title through the machinations of promoter James Neese (Warren Oates), who takes a shine to Long as he sees in him a personality with a quality rare in the bruisers he normally encounters in his shady promotions.

In the competition, Long meets and becomes close friends with a knowledgeable black fighter, P.T. Coolidge (Stan Shaw) and his girl friend Myra (Pam Grier), and persuades the two to accompany him and his wife to Detroit for the big event, the national toughest man in America competition.

At this point, it's rather predictable, like in all good fairy tales, that Art Long will be triumphant. He is, but the way it comes to be is patently unconvincing.

"Tough Enough" has fine moments — Art singing an animated lullaby to his son; again when he sings a lovely ballad on national TV. In the final countdown, however, "Tough Enough" focuses so intently on bout after bout of men battering each other that there's no time left to develop other factors inherent in the story.

•It has been said that Americans have a special weakness for movies with horses, which accounts for the abiding popularity of cowboy films and movies such as "Black Beauty" and "The Black Stallion" in which the horse was the central character.

"The Black Stallion Returns," a sequel to "The Black Stallion," is an entertaining family film in which the beauty and power of the magnificant black stallion plus some fine acting on the part of the humans who love and connive for ownership of the horse far outweigh weak points in the film.

The chief flaws come from incredible coincidences that constantly clear the path are for teenager Alex Ramsey (Kelly Reno) in his quest to travel to Morocco to reclaim the stallion after Arabs have stolen him from his farm home.

Such bothersome points, however, are soon forgotten as young Alex becomes caught up in a series of fascinating adventures with friendly and unfriendly Arabs in the Sahara Desert areas of western Morocco. It is to this Berber territory that "Black" is being spirited by boat from New York to Casablanca then across country so that an Arab chieftan can run him in a ceremonial event that occurs every five years.

The tribe with the winning horse gains great honor as well as property renumerations. It was this that led the chieftan and his lovely young daughter to undertake the perilous journey to America to seek out and kidnap "Black," the cream of a purebred stock who had been lost to them some years earlier in the sinking of the boat taking the animal to the U.S. So it is established they are not true villains. Instead, they are acting from good motives and a conviction that the "Black" will be happy only in his native territory.

There are villains, however, particularly in the person of a Kurr tribal leader who disclaims the virtues of Arab honesty and hospitality. His connivances to steal the horse provide the basis for some rousing scenes — and lead to Alex making friends with a young English-speaking Arab. The two become close friends. Through their friendship timeless traditions of hospitality among Arab tribes are unobtrusively revealed. The two also suffer a suspenseful, near disastrous crossing of a desert area on foot.

Director of Photography Carlo di Palma has furnished striking scenes of desert, oasis, tribal gatherings, villages and herds of galloping purebred Arab horses. Young actor Reno is ably assisted by lovely Teri Garr as the Arab princess, and by fine performances from Allen Goorwitz, Vincent Spano, and Woody Strode.

"The Return of the Black Stallion" has the kind of happy ending that could conceivably happen — an ending sure to make everybody feel good about the love people lavish on horses and the friendship that can develop among people of different cultures.

Disapproval A Sound Move

Generally a new enterprise is welcomed to a community since it means new construction, new employment and new services.

In the highly complicated area of medical services, however, more is not always better.

Thus it is that the Project Review Committee of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency has recommended disapproval for three private pyschiatric hospitals in Eastern North Carolina. One of them was a 65-bed hospital proposed by Charter Medical Inc. for the Greenville area. The other two were proposed for New Bern and Rocky Mount by other corporations.

The board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital was on record opposing the private pyschiatric hospital.

By resolution the trustees said that it already provides for hospitalization of psychiatric patients.

"PCMH provides access to hospital care to patients without regard to their ability to pay for hospital care," the resolution says. It has 40 psychiatric beds and a plan to utilize 36 additional beds.

The resolution also cites joint efforts with the Walter B. Jones Alcohol Rehabilitation Center and the ECU School of Medicine to provide access to hospital care for patients suffering from chemical dependency.

The resolution says the best interest of patients needing psychiatric treatment and chemical dependency treatment "will not best be served by the construction and operation of 65 additional psychiatric and chemical dependency beds in Greenville."

In this time of soaring medical costs the opposition of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital board of trustees is fully justified. And the recommendation for disapproval by the Pproject Review Committee is logical and sound. Pitt County Memorial Hospital and other hospitals in the area have the facilities to meet the needs of psychiatric patients now and in the future. In the interest of holding down general medical costs, requests for building private psychiatric beds should be denied.

Improved Services Are Recommended

The Project Review Committee of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency virtually cleared the way for expansion of facilities and programs at Pitt County Memorial Hospital last week.

The committee, whose recommendations go to the full agency, recommended approval for expansion of surgical facilities, radiology and emergency departments at the hospital. A recommendation was also made for open heart surgical facilities for PCMH and the ECU School of Medicine.

The projects will mean expanded services for the people of eastern North Carolina. Open heart surgery has meant trips to Chapel Hill, Durham and Birmingham in the past for patients and their families. Soon the surgery can be done closer to home.

With expanded facilities, adequate emergency service can be offered to a broad area of the East. The improvements at PCMH and the medical school will be positive for eastern North Carolina.

Choosing A Wardrobe For Greenville's Spring

Sunday Morning Notes

It's Easter Sunday and as this is written we would not dare attempt to say what the weather is like.

In the past couple of weeks, since Spring officially came, we have had almost seven inches of snow, heavy rains, temperatures in the 20s and days when the coeds could don bikinis and acquire the tan that is so necessary for the summer.

Last year it was drought conditions and the experts were concerned that the water table table might not recharge for a decade. A wet winter changed that in a hurry and now the ground is soaked.

The snow is almost forgotten, but it was only a week back.

We have had several reports from dog owners whose pets simply couldn't take in the winter scene. One lady who acquired her puppy last year said the dog was excited when the snow began to fall. On Saturday morning, however, everything was buried in snow. The dog wouldn't venture out. Finally she threw the dog's ball into the year. It sunk out of sight. That settled it for the dog. He turned and retreated into the house. He wasn't about to be swallowed up by whatever this strange stuff was.

A neighbor got her dog last year. He had never seen snow, either. The dog never runs loose but the lady walks him regularly, something in which he takes great delight. Not last week. He took one look at the white world and refused to go out.

Another friend has two dogs who have spent their lives in California. Snow was not for them. They refused to go out and do what dogs have to do. Finally the lady cleared an area outside and the dogs went out that far.

Snow is wonderful but is sure creates a strange world for dogs who have never seen it.

A magazine put out by insuranceman J.B. Smith tells about a couple in Pigeon Cove, Mass., who built their home and all its furnishings of old rolled-up newspapers. The work was started in 1922 by Mr. and Mrs. Elis F. Senman. The walls and roof of the newspaper house are 215 pages thick.

In addition to the basic house, curtains are woven from funnies, and a cot has been made of papers dating back to World War I. A desk was built from papers reporting the flight of Charles Lindbergh. A grandfather's clock is built from newspapers of the capitals of 48 states.

The house could be used for a residence but it is a museum now and open to the public.

Bankers May Win That Repeal Yet

WASHINGTON — Bob Kasten, the junior senator from Wisconsin, now has thc numbers. Given an opportunity in April for an up-or-down vote on the withholding of taxes on interest and dividends, he can count almost certainly on 59 to 65 votes for repeal of the law. A dozen Republican senators who voted in favor of the act a year ago have switched. A similar situation obtains in the House.

If that is a correct reading of the situation, the bankers will win — but the bankers may also lose. The little old ladies will win — and the little old ladies will lose. Whatever faith one may have had in national party platforms, which is mighty little to begin with, will be further diminished. The affair is packed with gorgeous ironies.

From one point of view, we have witnessed an astounding achievement in public relations. If you were to name one group that historically has been identified with the bad guys, it is the bankers. In the cartoons, they appear with dollar signs on their well-fed vests. In the melodramas, they are foreclosing the mortgage on the Fair Belinda. In the current news, they are asking borrowers to pay exorbitant rates of interest and they are asking the taxpayers to bail them out of sour loans to underdeveloped nations.

Who would have believed that the bankers could get away with a new role as champion of the little old ladies? It is beautiful. Who is protecting the poor folks from the rapacious hand of government? The born-again banker, that's who. The bankers are urging repeal of that nasty law that would require them to withhold 10 percent of the interest on Grandma's passbook savings. Would Grandma help by filling in this handy-dandy coupon and mailing it to her senator? Grandma would. More than 1 million pieces of mail, urging repeal, have been dropped on Capitol Hill.

One of the bankers' arguments is that it would cost them "billions" to serve as a tax collector. The paperwork! The computers! The additional employees! The exemption certificates! Nobody understands how complicated it would be. But like every other employer in the land, the bankers already have mastered the withholding art. They ran into no difficulty whatever in rigging their computers to deduct 10 cents for every check.

Sure, say the bankers, "some folks" can receive exclusions. It seems to be uncontested that 21 million of the 26 million persons who might be affected could obtain exclusion. Ah, say the bankers, but this would require completion of a form that would mean lost privacy: "You will divulge information about your age and inoome you never had to give out before!" Pfui! The form asks no question about "income." The form asks, Are you over 65? Was your tax liability last year in excess of $1,000 (for married couples) or in excess of $1,500 (for single persons)? So much for this devilish form.

The bankers' propaganda would have us believe the withholding is a new tax: "The federal government will be getting a raise from you!" Humbug. Interest and dividends have been taxed for years. The law is nothing more than a new way of collecting an old tax. It relies upon the same mechanism, invented in 1943 by the late Beardsley Ruml, through which taxes invisibly are collected from the wages of the workingman. The only ones who might be significantly discomfited are the fat cats with enormous incomes from interest and dividends. Why should they be treated more solicitously than the working stiffs?

Public Television's Public Appeal Ends

RALEIGH — Fans of public television can relax. They've stopped begging for money on the University of North Carolina television system.

Festival '83, the system's annual fund-raising drive, reached its goal on the final weekend of its drive and expects to have brought in $1.2 million through its pleas.

The festival begging was enough to get under anyone's skin. Every 20 minutes, programming would be interrupted for the same old plea. For about five minutes, public television emcees would pass the mike around to each other so they could say exactly what the guy before them just said.

One of these emcees, a UNC-TV journalist, admitted that it was embarrassing to keep saying the same thing over and over. "But, man, it brings the money in."

UNC-TV director Jake Dunlop said in an interview that preliminary reports showed that $1.1 million had been received or pledged from a total of 27,860 people. He expected more money and pledges to trickle in and help the system reach its $1.2 million goal — the same goal it had last year.

During the festival, the emcees kept mentioning the cost of locally produced shows. But, very little of the festival money will go to local production. Dunlop said $800,000 of the festival money will be budgeted and that $750,000 of that will go toward purchasing outside programs.

UNC has already begun buying the programs it will air next year.

Jerry Rubin Finds A New Lifestyle

NEW YORK— Bvery now and then, we've contemplated throwing a party for 10 friends, stipuating that each guest bring another 10 people. Every time, we've rejected the idea, fearful that any gathering of complete strangers would prove disastrous.

In New York City, however, someone has found a way to make it work. Every Wednesday night, about 1,500 complete strangers pay $8 each to meet one another and exchange phone numbers at Manhattan's Studio 54. It's called "Business Networking," produced and directed by that notorious former Yippie, Jerry Rubin.

For the last two years, Rubin has been throwing his Wednesday evening get-togethers to provide, in his words, "a social environment in which to do business." After a brief stint as a Wall Street marketing director, Rubin now helps other young professionals promote themselves, make business contacts and find success. Networking "salons," he explains, are a "business be-in."

Indeed, a certain career-consciousness pervaded the club when we visited last week for Business Networking's second anniversary salon. Men and women, most under 40, sported business cards pinned to their suits (mostly gray flannel). Some actively worked the crowd, passing out promotional material; others, such as one man selling legal insurance, made their pitches from the dimly-lit sidelines.

After several hours, we learned that good networkers don't bother with conversation. They just introduce themselves and hastily arrange a meeting for the following week. "Make two lunch dates at every salon," Rubin's networking guide counsels.

Not surprisingly, the merger of fun and profit is an awkward one. Some networkers smile bravely but are too shy to speak; others strike up conversations as if they'd known you for years.

Like the sponsors of more memorable French salons, Rubin mixes the commonplace with the offbeat to create a unique evening. Every week, hourly demonstrations of "Yogarobics" vie with exhibits of computer-aided design. A tuxedoed Rubin marked the second anniversary with balloons, a 6-foot birthday cake and a recitation of marriages spawned and business deals cut because of networking.

To be sure, Rubin's brainchild has some salient features. According to Valery Lasher, a financial planner who was making her fourth appearance, the salon offers businesswomen a rare chance to meet people in other fields. (The need for an "old girls' network" was echoed repeatedly by other women.)

Unfortunately, after two years Rubin has had trouble maintaining what he calls the "quality" of his salons. Apparently, while many fascinating people attend once, not all return. Meanwhile, to issue 6,000 new invitations each week to attract "the most interesting people," as Rubin does, is a project doomed to diminishing returns.

Yet if his guiding theory is correct — that the 1980s is "the decade of achievement" — Rubin may soon have salons in other cities. Chronic career orientation has led some younger Americans to do anything in the interest of self-promotion. Besides, the ingenious concept of a "business salon" sanctions mixing work with play.

And, most people will try anything once.

Failure

CHICAGO — The overriding political reality in this uneasy city is Rep. Harold Washington's failure to use the month following his nomination for mayor in the Feb. 22 Democratic primary to reassure the white majority here, a failure with foreboding consequences here and for the Democratic Party nationally.

The immediate result is that what seemed impossible a few weeks ago may happen in the April 12 general election: An obscure Republican named Bernard Epton may ride white phobia of the black Democratic candidate, plus massive defections from the famed Chicago machine, to a victory in this overwhelmingly Democratic city. Once Mayor Jane Byrne abandoned her pathetic write-in campaign, the unthinkable became thinkable.

But whether Washington survives the backlash, severe damage has been done. The fragile biracial political coalition has been splintered, posing grave problems for the city's future. What's more, the frantic rescue operation for Washington conducted by the party's national luminaries has so poisoned relations between national and local white Democrats that Ronald Reagan's prospects for carrying Illinois in 1984 are markedly improved.

To say that Chicago's Democratic calamity is purely the product of white racism is not the whole truth. On primary day, when overwhelmingly black support gave Washington the nomination with 36 percent of the vote, nobody here dreamed he could be defeated in the general election. Former state representative Epton, a Jewish millionaire liberal, seemed just another in the dreary succession of sacrificial Republican candidates for mayor.

Washington presumably would perform two ritualistic political exercises: cut his deal with the Democratic machine and make reassuring noises for Democratic voters in the city's white working-class neighborhoods, particularly on the southwest side hard up against the black population, that his government would not be one of black revolution. But Washington did neither.

Proferred hands from white party leaders were ignored — including an offer of help from Attorney General Neil Hartigan, the state's senior Democratic officeholder. No help was solicited from State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, who split the white primary vote with Byrne, after his unequivocal endorsement of Washington.

This may be a product of Washington's disorganized lifestyle that led to repeated failure to file tax returns and a brief jail term — a focal point of the Epton campaign. But even Washington supporters concede it also reflects the mindset of his principal lieutenants.

At the most crass political level, Washington threatens not only a way of life in Chicago politics; he threatens a way of making a living for the machine faithful. "I figure," one ward committeeman confided to us' "that Bernie Epton is for just four years but Harold is forever." Thus, the defection of a dozen or so ward committeemen, delayed only for a week by Byrne's aborted write-in campaign.

But many pillars of the machine are playing a cooler hand — including the chairman of the Cook County Democratic Central Committee: Alderman Edward (Fast Eddie) Vrdolyak. He is publicly backing Washington and tells his liberal friends he means it. But his closest colleagues in the organization say there is no doubt Vrdolyak wants Epton to win. "That's what he tells us," confirms as Epton strategist.

Alderman Roman Pucinski — ward committeeman, state central committeeman, former congressman and onetime Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate — would never endorse Epton, but wears his sentiments on his sleeve. When Epton dropped into a Polish fraternal society's stag dinner in Pucinski's Northwest-side bailiwick last week, the alderman embraced him as a brother.

But the movement of white ethnic Democrats to Epton may be out of the hands of the Vrdolyaks and the Pucinskis. "My precinct captains get tossed out of the living room if they go in selling Washington," a ward committeeman told us. Washington's failure to calm the white masses, therefore, may be a more grievous failure than not cutting a deal with the machine.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I would like to make a few suggestions which hopefully will reduce the number of car accidents in Greenville.

A. Have a uniform speed limit of 25 to 30 miles per hour. The distance across the city is not so great and 25 miles per hour should not be too hard to take, especially when we think of the suffering by innocent victims of past accidents.

Presently, we have speed limits in the city of 20, 25, 35, and 45 miles per hour, legally; illegally, 50, 55, and 60 miles per hour. A casual timing of cars on one of our speedways, in other words, from the Highway Patrol office on 10th to Elm Street lights will verify these figures.

B. Select three of the intersections in town with the highest number of accidents for the past six months, then compare this record after six months of this change as I have recommended below.

Leave the overhead traffic lights operating as usual, but install additional lights at the left edge of each lane entering the intersection. These lights should be synchronized with the overhead lights and have a large red (stop) light and a smaller green (go) light. This should remind each driver not to run the red light.

We have other streets where entering is like playing car Russian roulette. Driving south on Harding Street to First Street is a pretty good example of this, because, looking east, you cannot see oncoming cars early enough because of the curve. This makes entering the intersection hazardous. A car moving 45 miles per hour travels 330 feet in five seconds.

When the yearly accident rate was averaging about 730 (two a day), then later seemed to reach about 1,095 (three a day), I hesitated about sending this in. But last week when seven accidents were listed, I had to reach for my pen.

Laws To Help May Have Different Results

WASHINGTON (AP) — Electing an American president is now a process governed by a maze of laws and rules that are largely the product of the last 15 years of various "reforms."

Campaign finance laws, delegate selection rules and multiple disclosure requirements were designed to make the process of choosing the nation's leader more open, more honest, more democratic.

But a distinguished political scientist argues that all the rules have had the definitely unintended effect of giving the country presidents who don't know how to govern once they win.

And some of Jimmy Carter's failures as a president can be traced to how he got to the Oval Office, Nelson W. Polsby of the University of California at Berkeley argues in his new book, "Consequences of Party Reform."

"What it takes to achieve the nomination differs now so sharply from what it takes to govern effectively as to pose a problem," Polsby writes. "The Democratic incumbent, Jimmy Carter, was a president whose conduct to a remarkable extent faithfully reflected the learning experiences available along the pathway he followed in order to achieve the presidency."

Polsby argues that the combination of the laws and party rules have encouraged wider use of primaries by the states, shut party leaders out of the nomination process and forced candidates to appeal to small factions of the party rather than trying to build coalitions.

"The task of the presidential hopeful, threading a path through the minefield is not to win a majority, but rather to survive," he writes in the book due to be officially published next month.

And a candidate survives by winning an early primary, garnering attention from the media and then raising adequate funds to continue the campaign, just as Carter did in Iowa and New Hampshire in 1976.

"In both states, he succeeded in forming not a broad coalition, but mobilizing a faction, emerging first among the numerous presidential candidates," Polsby said.

Carter did not have to appeal to Democratic party leaders to win the nomination and thus did not develop ties to Democratic members of Congress or state party officials.

"Nothing in Mr. Carter's prior experience as a politician, certainly nothing in his experience of the nomination process, led him to the view that he needed to come to terms with the rest of the Democratic party," even after winning the nomination, Polsby says.

Thus, as president, Carter did not know the people he would have to deal with on Capitol Hill, nor did he see the need for such knowledge.

And Carter had extensive, well-known problems working with members of his own party on the Hill.

Polsby, now a visiting scholar of the Roosevelt Center for American Studies in Washington, argues that at a critical time of his term, Carter made another mistake based on his primary experience. He "went to the people" in his "crisis of confidence" speech in July 1979.

"While it was necessary to go directly to primary electorates to capture the nomination, it was imprudent to infer from success in this endeavor that direct appeals would succeed without help. .. Over the longer run of a presidential term of office, successful mass persuasion entails successful elite persuasion," Polsby said.

Many of Polsby's comments apply most directly to the Democratic Party, which has much more extensive rules about selecting delegates to the national convention than the GOP does. But the campaign finance rules and the proliferation of primaries have changed the process for both.

Polsby discusses Carter at length but spends little ink on President Reagan. He does, however, lump them together in one sentence:

"That our two most recent presidents should be arguably the two most nationally inexperienced in American history cuts directly across the grain of common sense that tells us that duties of the presidency are not smaller today than when more seasoned candidates ... were routinely the only ones considered qualified for the job," he said.

The Democrats have actually been listening to the criticisms Polsby and others have been making — since he and others have pointed out the weakness of party candidates for president since the first of the reforms were enacted.

The party's elected elite — nearly 600 uncommitted congressmen, senators, governors and state chairmen — will be included as uncommitted delegates at next year's convention. And the rules have been changed to give all the delegates a little more freedom to change their minds about a candidate than was the case in 1980.

The answer to whether those changes will help the Democrats to win the White House — which they have failed to do in two of the three presidential elections since reforms took hold — will have to wait until Election Day 1984.

Tired

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years into his job as President Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes says "I'm as physically worn down as I've ever been."

For two years, Speakes has been the man in front of the shouting reporters. In recent weeks, the questions have dealt with the Environmental Protection Agency and with a part-time presidential adviser whose stock market dealings have brought controversy to the White House.

"It has worn me down," said the 43-year-old Speakes, who has yet to take a vacation since Reagan was inaugurated. "I've defended an awful lot of people, sometimes with a thin plate of armor."

"With the hint of scandal, the police-reporter comes out in most journalists," Speakes said, as he looked back at the recent weeks at the White House.

The "hint of scandal" to which he referred dealt with questions about political influence in EPA decisions, and the questions about Thomas C. Reed, a deputy national security assistant and vice chairman of the presidential commission studying basing for the MX missile.

Reed, who has said he will quit his White House job when the MX commission work ends next month, is under scrutiny by a federal grand jury and a congressional committee for a 1981 stock deal through which he netted $427,000 from a single option investment of $3,125 in Amax Corp.

Speakes is a veteran of previous administrations. He worked in the White House press office in the final days of the Richard M. Nixon presidency, and he worked there when Gerald R. Ford was president.

As the principal deputy White House press secretary, Speakes presides over a staff of more than two dozen people, who can be called upon to answer questions ranging from the president's latest missile proposal to what flavor jelly bean the president favors. (He likes them all, according to press assistant Flo Taussig.)

Speakes was thrust into the No. 1 job in the Reagan press office when presidential press secretary James Brady was wounded in the attempt on Reagan's life March 30, 1981.

"I don't have any problems" with the current relationship between reporters and the administration, Speakes said. "There's not a bad feeling in the press corps. There's not a bitterness there."

And when it comes to bitterness, he says, one should not overlook his experience in dealing with an embittered press corps during the Watergate years. That was a period of "us versus them," he said. "Hints of scandals are always a time of heightened 'us versus them.'"

Still, he said, he has some gripes about life in the White House press quarters these days.

"My pet peeve is the failure (on the part of reporters) to look at the big picture," he said.

While reporters were focusing on the EPA and Reed, Speakes said, they were overlooking approaches he favored to stories about arms control, U.S.-Soviet relations, El Salvador and the economy.

No Rhyme, No Reason

NEW YORK (AP) — If you look for rhyme or reason in things economic you may search in vain. Even those who claim to have some expertise must admit they are perplexed.

Why, asks Sotheby's, the auction house, have so many investment advisers written off collectibles, such as antiques, paintings and other items valued for their beauty or rareness.

To do so has become so commonplace. Some analysts have simply written off the entire group in one broad-brushed sweep. Collectibles as investments, they argue, are good investments only during unchecked inflation.

Having made that assumption, their conclusion was obvious: With inflation coming down there was little point to buying collectibles.

Sotheby's figures, however, suggest the analysts aren't entirely correct. Five of 12 major collectible items on which it keeps records have risen in price since the so-called peak in September 1980.

According to its records, American paintings from 1800 to World War II have risen 31 percent, American furniture 24 percent, Impressionist and Postimpressionist paintings 23, modern painting 23, and English furniture 6.

Overall, even its average of 12 items has risen 0.5 percent, which in some instances is better than investments some analysts suggested for their clients.

J. Peter Grace, chairman of W.R. Grace & Co. and protestor against big government, has been touring the country with facts and figures.

Grace worries, for example, why so many people can demand that the budget be balanced and then don't deal with some of the factors that make it so difficult to do so.

The so-called uncontrollable portion of federal spending in 1982 was $548.4 billion, says Grace. If that is so, it leaves only $180 billion that is controllable.

Most of the items called uncontrollable involve transfer payments — that's when your money is transferred to someone else — and interest on the federal debt. Together, they increased 5.9 times since 1967.

Grace concedes that such a situation makes it difficult for any president to battle the budget. And, under existing conditions, he seems to feel that it is almost impossible to do so.

But, you say, President Reagan has done so; he's cut spending for social programs. This perplexes Grace. It isn't so, he says. To him it's a baffling misconception.

"Despite the media image," Grace states, "social programs rose to 10.9 percent of gross national product under Reagan, 16 percent above the 9.4 percent of Carter's last year."

But Grace still stand's behind the president. "We should get off President Reagan's back while he tries to get the government off our back," he says.

In another area of economic life, some of the country's big consulting firms are as concerned and sometimes as uncomprehending about certain practices of their clients.

One of those areas is the practice of awarding "golden parachutes."

The practice, of rather recent origin, was designed to protect corporate officers in case the company was taken over by another, unfriendly concern. When that happens, existing officers sometimes are dismissed. Fired, that is.

To protect themselves, the managements of many companies have given themselves golden parachutes — golden because they can be worth millions of dollars, and parachutes because they assure a soft financial landing.

Towins, Perrin, Forster & Crosby, management consulting firm, thinks the habit is due for reappraisal. The practice, it suggests, has gotten out of hand, a feeling documented by numerous shareholder suits.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J.— Americans believe it takes a minimum of $296 weekly for a husband, wife, and two children to make ends meet. This median amount is identical to last Year's, marking the first time in five years that a significant year-to-year increase has not occurred.

By comparison, last year's $296 median represented a $19 increase over the $277 median amount for 1981. This, in turn, was $27 higher than the $250 figure recorded in 1980.

These annual audits of the public's perception of living costs have tended to closely conform to the Consumer Price Index (CPI) compiled by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. According to the CPI, living costs during 1982 rose only 3.9 percent over the comparable 1981 period.

The last time there was no significant year-to-year increase in the Gallup audit was in 1978, when the public's consensus that it took $201 per week for a four-person family to get by was statistically the same as the figure of $199 recorded the year before. For three consecutive years, 1952-1954, the median estimate stood at $60 per week. And for the four-year period ending in !951 it remained at $50 per week.

In 1937, when the Gallup Poll first surveyed Americans' perception of weekly living costs for a family of four, the median response was $30 (or one-tenth the current amount). By 1947, the figure had climed by $43. It did not hit three-digit proportions until 1967, when the median estimate was $101. It took only 12 years, until 1978, for living costs to pass the $200 mark.

As reported recently, the 1983 Gallup audit also revealed that the median amount spent for food by a representative, non-farm family was $69 per week, statistically unchanged from the $70 recorded a year earlier.

Americans' own life-styles tend to be reflected in their estimates of the minimum cost of living in their neighborhoods. The median amount cited by college-educated respondents, for instance, is $307 per week while the comparable figures for persons with a high-school education and for those with even less formal education are $293 and $245, respectively.

Similarly, $303 per week is the median estimate of persons whose family income is $15,000 per year or more. Those in the survey with less than $15,000 annual income estimate it takes $260 per week for a four-person family to get by.

As in past surveys, living costs are perceived to be slightly higher by Easterners ($304) and Westerners ($309) than by residents of the Midwest ($288) and South ($289).

The type of communities in which Americans live also contributes to their perception of living costs. Residents of the nation's central cities say it takes $301 a week to keep a family of four going. People living in the generally wealthier suburban areas report that a family requires $307 weekly. And for those who live in non-metropolitan or rural areas the median estimate is $260.

The figures reported today are based on in-person interviews with 3,014 mon-farm residents, 18 years and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation in two successive surveys during the periods January 14-17 and January 21-24.

The median is a measure of the mid-point of the distrbution of dollar amount reported. One half the sample falls above and one half below the median dollar amounts.

Randy Scott: For A Time He Acted

When Charlotte-reared Randolph Scott became a member of the snooty Los Angeles County Club, it started Hollywood tongues to wagging. The club had a strict rule which said, "No actors allowed."

One of the snide comments occasioned by Scott's admission that has survived is contained in actress Joan Fontaine's book of recollection, "No Bed of Roses." She said Scott has assured the admission committee "they only had to look at some of his films to know he was not an actor." A member of the club's board of directors explained that Scott was admitted "because we think of Randy as a gentleman who for a time acted."

Whatever version you accept, the tall, handsome Southerner played in more than 150 films, and was among the top 10 box office stars for four successive years. He retired from acting with the advent of television to manage a fourtune in oil, natural gas and real estate interests estimated at from $50 to $100 million. Even after he hade his last film, "Ride the High Country" with Joel McCrea in 1961, Scott remained one of filmdom's top male box-office draws and reportedly turned down a fortune in offers to star in television.

After Scott had begun to make a name for himself in the movies, his family moved to Raleigh when his father, George C. Scott, became director of accounts in the State Department of Revenue. When the handsome movie star would visit Raleigh to see his father, it was always a red letter day for the female employees in the Revenue Department.

One such occassion came on Oct. 11, 1934, when Scott and his two sisters, Barbara Scott and Mrs. Wesley Heath of Charlotte, visited their parents for the weekend. They were entertained at a luncheon in the Executive Mansion. They also took in the State Fair and attended the Duke-Georgia Tech football game in Durham.

But the high spot of that visit came when the Scotts were entertained at a weiner roast in the backyard of the George Ross Pou home on Jarvis Street along with more than 50 Raleigh youngsters. The weiner roast resulted from a letter Pou's son and daughter, Edwin and Ihrie Pou, wrote the movie star after they learned he was coming to Raleigh. Newspaper accounts of the party said that Scott munched on hot dogs with the young people and that he exchanged autographs with each one of them.

In an interview, Scott, who was educated at Georgia Tech and the University of North Carolina, told how he happened to make good in Hollywood, where so many talented youngsters fail. He said he "just stumbled into this business" as the result of a visit to a studio lot while on a visit to California in 1929.

"We just wanted something to talk about when we got back home," he related. He said he wasn't thinking about acting and had never even been on a stage but that he and his friends happened to get into a scene as "extras" and he was spotted by studio executives. Scott got an interview with Cecil B. DeMille, whose family came from Washington.

DeMille advised Scott to remain in California and get some experience. For two years, Scott trained as an actor in the Pasadena Playhouse and the Hollywood Vine Street Theater. Finally, he got a contract with Paramount Pictures. His early films included "Women Men Marry" with Sally Blaine, "A Successful Calamity" in which he supported George Arliss, "Wagon Wheels," a Zane Grey story, and "Code of the West."

But the biggest hoopla Scott ever caused in Raleigh came in November 1935, when "So Red the Rose," a story of the Civil War, was given its world premier in Raleigh and 10 other Southern capitols simultaneously. Scott was starred with Margaret Sullavan of Norfolk and was directed by King Vidor, a Texan. Newspaper accounts said the producers were so determined that the film be historically correct they submitted Lawrence Stalling's script of the Stark Young novel to the president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy for her approval.

In is 1975 Biographical Dictionary of the Cinema, Scott's niche in Hollywood was appraised by author David Thompson. "For 20 years," he wrote, "Scott was a reliable, uninspired actor. Having begun as a romantic lead, he moved into action films and increasingly minor westerns. It might have been expected that he would slip into oblivion during the 1950s. Instead, he seemed to realize that, at 50, he looked a more convincing cowboy than anyone else around. He formed his own production company, Ranown, with Harry Joe Brown and, largely through Budd Boetticher, he produced a series of second-feature westerns that are a major contribution to the genre. All of them are built around his own harsh sense of morality and an absolute concentration on a man alone against great odds."

Once, in a rare interview, Scott said he made westerns because he liked them even though "they are three times harder than the usual boy-meets-girl picture."

"Westerns are a type of picture everybody can see and enjoy," he added. "There is always a moral to the story. Right always triumphs. Wrongdoers are always punished."

And, he concluded, "Westerns always make money. And they always increase a star's fan following...and they have been good to me."

Today, although well into his 70s, Scott doesn't consider himself retired. He keeps busy playing golf with the film greats and managing the millions he ammassed on Horse Operas.

question following his opening 66-minute discourse on disarmament and foreign policy issues.

Gromyko warned that if new U.S. missiles are deployed in Europe, "There can be no doubt, no doubt in anyone's mind, that the Soviet Union will take the appropriate steps. We have enough materials, the mental possibilities, to do this."

In Washington, senior U.S. officials who declined to be identified said they were disappointed by Gromyko's "unconstructive" remarks, but that the Reagan proposal was still alive. "When we get to the guts of the Gromyko argument we find it doesn't stand up," one official said.

Reagan's offer, handed to Soviet negotiators last Tuesday and made public in a TV address Wednesday, proposed a substantial reduction in the planned stationing of Pershing 2 and land-based cruise missiles in Europe if the Soviets reduce the number of warheads on their comparable missiles worldwide.

Reagan suggested a "ceiling" on warheads, without naming figures, which would be open to negotiation when the medium-range weapons' talks resume May 17 in Geneva.

But Gromyko said Reagan's interim arms reduction plan would give NATO a 2.5 to 1 advantage in nuclear warheads in Europe.

"It is unacceptable on all counts," Gromyko said of Reagan's offer, listing three reasons for the Kremlin's rejection:

— U.S. refusal to include in the Geneva talks American aircraft based in Western Europe and on carriers off the continent, which are capable of bombing Soviet territory.

"All proposals that rule out formidable components, what we would call terrible components ... such proposals are not earnest and it isn't possible to seek agreement on such a basis," he said.

— The 162 British and French medium-range missiles which have been excluded from the U.S.-Soviet talks, contrary to Moscow's contention that the weapons must be counted as NATO forces.

"It is impossible to shut one's eyes to their existence, to consider they don't exist and discuss only American arms," the foreign minister said.

— The Soviets would be required to dismantle some of their SS-20 medium-range nuclear missiles already deployed in Europe and Asia as the first step of Reagan's plan to eventually ban such weapons.

"See how far they have gone? In the past Asia was not mentioned. But now we are being asked to abolish our missiles in Asia as well. I must say that this too and even this alone makes agreement impossible," Gromyko said.

Previously, the Soviets had offered to transfer some medium-range missiles from the European part of the Soviet Union to the Asian area, if the U.S. forgoes deployment of its new missiles.

Shuttle ...

on a month-long Skylab mission in 1973. Bobko, 45, an Air Force colonel, is making his first space flight as pilot.

The other two crewmen are going into space for the first time, too. Story Musgrave, 47, a medical doctor, and Donald H. Peterson, 49, a retired Air Force colonel, will make the first space walk of the shuttle program with a 3½-hour work-test tour of Challenger's open payload bay..

Challenger's first payload is the 2½-ton communications satellite, the largest ever placed in orbit. When they are unfurled in space, the satellite's solar panels span 19 yards from tip to tip and its gold-clad wire mesh antennas will become glittering spider webs in the sky

The ship will circle the globe 80 times during its five-day, 19-minute mission, with landing scheduled on the concrete runway at Edwards Air Force Base in California on Saturday.

"It will be a flight similar to Flight One in which most of the mission is devoted to checking out flight hardware," said Jay Hunnicut, a launch official. Commander Weitz saw the flight the same way. "Our job is to certify Challenger for routine space missions," he said.

Because of Easter, officials juggled the countdown schedule to provide a 24-hour hold beginning at midnight Saturday. That gave more than a thousand launch crew workers the day with their families. A skeleton crew of 200 to 250 was to stay on the job to make sure the shuttle remained in its state of near-readiness.

Weather prevented the astronauts from aerobatic flying in T-38 jet trainers Saturday and the flights were tentatively rescheduled for Sunday.

monstrations, blocking seven U.S. military bases and staging "die-ins" despite a chilly rain that soaked them. Organizers said protests were "quiet and peaceful."

On Friday, however, police used tear gas and snarling German shepherd dogs in a brief clash with protesters at a U.S. military base in the Bavarian town of Neu Ulm. About 250 youthful protesters returned Saturday, but riot police with wooden truncheons blocked them from getting close to the base entrance.

In Bonn, 200 protesters converged on the barbed-wire fence ringing the gray West German Defense Ministry, but made no attempt to scale it. Earlier at Muenster Square downtown, hundreds shouted slogans and carried placards that said in German, "Missiles Kill, We Want to Live," and "Rockets Are For War, Not For Us."

Outside the Kellinghusen munitions depot in northern West Germany, protesters handed yellow tulips to riot police as a gesture of peace. Despite the driving rain, they pitched tents and unwrapped sleeping bags to continue their protest Sunday.

Conservative West German politicians charged that the anti-nuclear demonstrations aid the Soviet Union.

"Those who call for one-sided disarmament make disarmament impossible," Defense Minister Manfred Woerner told the Bild Am Sonntag newspaper.

But organizers said the demonstrations, scheduled in 90 West German towns and cities throughout the weekend, will boost opposition to NATO's missile plan. West Germany is scheduled to get the largest share of the missiles.

Gas Tax ...

cents plays havoc," he added.

Travis Flanagan, owner of Greenville Oil, a gasoline distributor to independent stations, said although the tax is unfortunate, he does not think it will cause that many problems. "I would have hoped that the money could have been gotten in other ways, but it's passed and we've got to do our best. With the reduction in prices last month, even with this five cent raise, gas prices still aren't as high as they were several months ago," he said.

According to Barnes and Talley, public reaction has been mostly indifferent. "I'd say at least 30 percent of the people don't even know that there has been a tax increase," Barnes said.

Talley, however, said the majority of his customers knew about the increase and filled up their vehicles before Friday, but "most just accepted it. They seemed indifferent. There's just not much they can do about it."

Pastor Ronnie L. Williamson, wife, Terry, and daughter, Rebekah, formerly of Greenville will be moving the first week of May to Burlington, Vermont as Home Missionaries to establish a new Free Will Baptist Church. For the past 6 years, Pastor Williamson has ministered at The Tabernacle Church in Kinston, N.C.

Most Say Jesus Has Influenced Their Lives

NEW YORK (AP) — That compelling individual whose mysterious overcoming of death is celebrated by Christians on Easter Sunday has influenced the lives of 87 percent of Americans, according to a new Gallup poll.

Only 7 percent of the adults questioned said Jesus has had little or no impact on their lives as a moral and ethical teacher, and the rest had no opinion.

While 81 percent said they consider themselves Christians and most said they consider Jesus divine, they saw that quality in varying ways, with only 42 percent affirming the orthodox belief that "he was in fact God living among men."

But another 27 percent said he was "divine" as a man "uniquely called by God to reveal God's purposes," while 9 percent said he was divine in embodying the highest human potential. That made a total of 78 percent regarding Jesus as somehow divine.

Modern theologians also would doubtlessly diverge about those definitions.

More than three-fourths said Jesus is now alive in the heavenly realm and "lives in you and cares for you," with even more, 84 percent, saying "his spirit is alive in the world."

But many of those polled were vague about details of Christ's life on Earth. Only 42 percent knew he delivered the Sermon on the Mount and only 46 percent were able to name the four books of the Gospel recounting his life.

"Knowledge of Biblical facts is poor, even among religiously involved persons and the college educated," said the evaluation of the study by the Gallup organizaion.

Gallup interviewed 1,509 people scientifically selected as a cross-section of American adults. The poll was commissioned by the Rev. Robert Schuller, pastor of Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, Calif., and was released for Easter.

Mormans Say Church Well

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church "is moving forward with great strength and power" despite the frail health and absence of President Spencer W. Kimball and his senior counselor, church members were told Saturday.

President Gordon B. Hinckley, Kimball's second counselor in the governing First Presidency, convened the faith's 153rd annual General Conference by announcing that Kimball, 88, and President Marion G. Romney, 85, were too weak to attend.

However, Hinckley said, the work of the three-member First Presidency "is current and up-to-date. Nothing is being neglected and action is not being postponed."

Traditionally, the church president is the first and last conference speaker, setting out and summing up major themes of the twice-yearly gatherings at the Tabernacle on Temple Square. Hinckley was filling that role in Kimball's absence.

"I take occasion now to say to all that the church is moving forward with great strength and power," Hinckley said.

Hinckley's assurances to the 5.2 million members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints followed months of speculation within and without the church that Kimball was incapacitated or near death and that day-to-day decisions were being made by Hinckley alone.

Government To Ease Affirmative Action Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Labor plans to issue new regulations that would ease affirmative action requirements for an estimated two-thirds of the businesses doing work for the federal government, officials said Saturday.

The latest version of the department's new affirmative action rules for federal contractors has been sent to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission for comment, said H. Jack Bluestein, special assistant to the director of the office of federal contract compliance programs.

Earlier versions of the proposed rules were published in the federal register in 1981 and 1982 and drew criticism from business groups, which said they did not go far enough in easing regulatory burdens, and from groups representing women and minorities, which said they went too far.

Robert B. Collyer, deputy under secretary for employment standards, said the latest proposal is a "tightened up" version of the earlier proposals.

"What they do is relax the paperwork burdens on employers and make it easier for us to do compliance reviews," he said.

Another administration source, who asked not to be named, said the latest version is still less restrictive on business than an original proposal made under the Carter administration.

Under the Carter administration plan, written affirmative action plans would have to be filed by all federal contractors having at least 50 employees and a $50,000 contract.

In 1981, the Reagan administration proposed to lift that threshold to exempt contractors who had fewer than 250 employees and any contract less than $1 million.

In the latest version, the rule would have a new threshold requiring an affirmative action plan by all firms having at least 100 employees and a $100,000 contract. For companies having between 100 employees and 250 employees, and doing business between $100,000 and $500,000, the paperwork requirement would be reduced but not eliminated. Firms in that category would file a shorter written affirmative action plan.

All firms with more than 250 employees and $500,000 in contracts would have no exemption from the paperwork requirements.

The proposed regulation would generally place a two-year limit on awards of back pay for discrimination by employers. Various civil rights and women's groups have argued that back pay should be available for proven instances of discrimination dating 10 to 15 years before the emergence of a complaint.

The final regulation is also being circulated to the Department of Justice and the Office of Management and Budget.

When the Reagan administration's proposal was first issued, officials estimated it would exempt three-fourths of the companies doing business currently required to submit plans for the hiring and promotion of blacks and women.

Collyer, in a telephone interview, estimated the latest version would ease paperwork requirements for two-thirds of those businesses.

"The obligation to do the affirmative action and not discriminate remains the same," he said. "Our changes only affect the paperwork burden."

Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, writing about the general issue of affirmative action in last Sunday's editions of The New York Times, said the department "is wholly committed to the concept of affirmative action," but that it disagreed with critics in the methods used to eliminate discrimination.

"We have proposed changes that would reduce the paperwork burden on contractors, but at the same time enable the department to review the performance of more contractors," Donovan said.

Insurors To Pay Off For Crash

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing Co.'s insurers will contribute $10 million to settle claims from the crash of an Air Florida jetliner in the Potomac River last year, according to an insurance industry publication.

Business Insurance Journal reported in its March 28 edition that Boeing will make a one-time payment of $7.7 million to Air Florida Inc. for passenger claims and also will pay undesignated crew claims.

Business Insurance reported that the total share to be paid by Boeing's underwriters will be about $10 million of an expected $40 to $60 million in compensatory claims, which are based on lost wages, injuries or other monetary damages.

Tom Cole, a spokesman for Boeing's commercial airplane division, confirmed that "the insurers of various parties to the litigation have reached an understanding," but he refused to discuss specifics of the Business Insurance report.

Boeing attorney Keith Gerrard dismissed the Business Insurance report Friday, but he confirmed that the parties had reached an agreement.

Republicans Hold Key To Adelman Confirmation

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With undecided Republicans in the balance, the Senate appears nearly evenly divided over President Reagan's choice of United Nations diplomat Kenneth L. Adelman as arms control director.

An informal Associated Press survey shows that more than a dozen GOP senators have not made up their minds about Adelman's nomination to be director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Strategists on both sides in the fight, basing their count partly on private assurances from publicly uncommitted senators, said their latest tallies showed around 45 probable votes against Adelman.

That many, even if they were not joined by others, would be enough to sustain a threatened filibuster of the nomination, since it takes 60 votes to choke off the parliamentary stalling tactic. Republicans control the Senate is 54-46.

No date has been set for a Senate vote on the matter, but Congress returns Tuesday from a 10-day Easter recess and the issue is expected to come up some time this month.

Adelman's experience in dealing with arms control issues and his support of an arms control agreement have been questioned by his opponents. He is deputy to U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick.

But both Adelman's supporters and opponents have agreed that his chances appeared to have been hurt by controversy surrounding a memo he received dealing with possible arms control personnel changes.

On Feb. 16, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 9-8 against Adelman's confirmation, but agreed to let the whole Senate decide.

After its vote, the committee released a memorandum that Edwin L. Rowny, chief U.S. negotiator at the strategic arms reduction talks, handed to Adelman before his hearings. It was critical of members of the negotiating team and suggested changes.

Critics of Adelman said the memo conflicted with his testimony that he had not discussed personnel matters. His backers said it supported his testimony, since he took no action on the memo but passed it on to an associate for later consideration.

"As the polls say, it's too close to call," said an administration source of a possible Senate vote. "It's 50-50. It depends on the mood of a bunch of Republicans when they come back."

The source, who spoke on condition he would not be identified, said there were four or five "absolutely undecided" GOP senators.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., an opponent of Adelman, when asked about the personnel issue, said, "I believe it has hurt."

A Senate GOP source said Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., is awaiting a request from the White House to bring Adelman's name up for confirmation.

Reagan has insisted that he is sticking by his nominee, despite suggestions from both Republican and Democratic critics of Adelman that he find someone else for the job.

An aide to one GOP senator, however, said his boss was "not willing to commit himself until he hears that the administration has really committed itself."

"He hasn't heard from (Secretary of State George P.) Shultz, let alone from Reagan," said the aide, who asked not to be identified. "He is wondering if they are looking for someone else."

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who has been soliciting Democratic support for Adelman at the White House's request, told a reporter "my sense is that he can win" but whether he can survive a filibuster "is another big question."

Lawyer Helps Client Escape

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The red Toyota used by a lawyer and her inmate client to flee a psychologist's office was found 20 miles away in a housing subdivision, police said Saturday as agents searched for the fugitives.

Police received reports that the two had been spotted getting gasoline in southeastern Tennessee.

Arrest warrants have been issued for lawyer Mary P. Evans, 25, and William T. Kirk, 36, a Brushy Mountain Penitentiary inmate who was to stand trial this week on charges of killing two fellow inmates last year.

Kirk and Ms. Evans have been at large since Thursday, when they pulled a gun on guards who escorted them to the psychologist's office in nearby Oak Ridge and left the officers bound and gagged.

Their car was found Friday near the Knox-Anderson county line, said Oak Ridge Police Lt. Robert Darnell.

A convenience store clerk near Maryville, 45 miles from Oak Ridge, told police he believed the couple bought gas at about 2 a.m. Saturday for a blue Toyota bearing temporary license tags.

A source at the Blount County sheriff's department said the clerk reported that a couple bought gas, then headed south.

Reagan Says Faith Will Topple Communisum

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, taking a few minutes from a long weekend at his ranch near here, delivered an Easter message on Saturday expressing confidence that faith will triumph over communism around the world.

And in reply to a letter he said he had received from a grade-school class in Somerville, Mass., Reagan said "we must never stop trying" to achieve peace, freedom and friendship among all peoples.

Reagan's remarks were contained in his weekly radio address which he delivered from his secluded mountaintop retreat. It was given shortly after he was informed that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko had rejected the president's latest proposal for limiting medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Reagan made no mention of the Soviet response in his radio talk, and assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg said the president would leave any official comment to the State Department in Washington.

A White House statement said Reagan planned to spend the last full day of his four-day stay at the ranch horseback riding with his wife Nancy and working around the property. The Reagans are scheduled to leave the ranch Sunday morning and arrive back at the White House that evening.

In his five-minute address, Reagan said the observance of Passover during the past week "reminds all of us that the struggle for freedom and the battle against oppression waged by Jews since ancient times is one shared by people everywhere."

And on Easter morning, he said, "we'll celebrate the triumph of life over death, the resurrection of Jesus. Both observances tell of sacrifice and pain but also of hope and triumph.

"As we look around us today, we still find human pain and suffering, but we also see it answered with individual courage and spirit strengthened by faith."

Reagan noted the struggle in Poland against the crackdown there by the Soviet-backed government, and he told of an East German family that had fled its homeland in a seven-foot rowboat in search of freedom.

"In Central America," Reagan said, "communist-inspired revolution still spreads terror and instability, but it's no match for the much greater force of faith that runs so deep among the people."

The president told of receiving a letter recently from pupils in Somerville who wrote, "We studied about countries and found out that each country in our world is beautiful and that we need each other. People may look a little different, but we're still people who need the same things."

"We want peace," Reagan quoted the children as telling him. "We want to take care of one another. We want to be able to get along with one another. We want to be able to share. We want freedom and justice. We want to be friends. We want no wars. We want to be able to talk to one another. We want to be able to travel around the world without fear.

"Do you think that we can have these things one day?"

"Well, I do," the president replied. "I really do. ... We must never stop trying."

The junior senator from Massachusetts, Paul E. Tsongas, gave the Democratic response to Reagan's radio talk. He said the spirit of the Easter season was being overshadowed by the dangers of a continuing U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms race.

He accused Reagan of using "Cold War rhetoric" to convince Americans of the need for a military buildup and to oppose the grassroots nuclear freeze movement.

College Desegregation Involved

Civil Rights Showdown Ahead?

By GEORGE LOBSENZ

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 13-year-old legal struggle over desegregation of college systems in 13 states is pushing the Reagan administration into a major civil rights showdown.

U.S. District Judge John Pratt ruled last week that the government's desegregation effort was in large part a failure and ordered the administration to crack down on the states involved.

The battle involves college systems in Arkansas, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Delaware, Florida, Texas, Georgia, Oklahoma, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Missouri.

The court order was obtained by civil rights activists unhappy with the pace of desegregation and the administration's unwillingness to use its most potent weapon, the cutoff of federal education funds to the states.

Lawyers for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund Inc. said, however, that states have ignored the government's orders because the Reagan administration has publicly stated it does not want to start enforcement proceedings.

"As this court has learned from its experience in this 13-year litigation, what progress has been achieved has come only when the court has put the hand writing on the wall," the NAACP fund said.

The Education Department has not decided yet to appeal Pratt's order, but acknowledged that most affected states have made only limited progress in eliminating segregation and that others have taken no significant action despite years of federal-state negotiations.

Many publicly supported colleges in these states remain overwhelmingly white while others, some located just a few miles away, remain predominantly black.

The Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibits the federal government from giving money to public systems of higher education that have not been desegregated or which have no plan to remedy the problem within a reasonable time.

The Education Department has required the states to submit plans that will integrate both traditionally white and black institutions by altering student enrollment patterns through recruitment or curriculum changes.

The plans also are supposed to integrate faculty and administrative staffs and ensure that traditional black colleges get equal funding and, in some cases, additional money to improve their academic programs.

Florida, Arkansas, Georgia, Oklahoma, Virginia and North Carolina, called the "first-tier states," have had five-year desegregation plans in effect since the 1978-79 school year.

"There is no denying that results have been disappointing to some extent," the administration acknowledged in court briefs.

Pratt was more blunt.

"Each of these states has defaulted in major respects on its plan commitments," the judge said.

SCLC To Note King Slaying Anniversary

ATLANTA (AP) — The civil rights organization founded by the late Martin Luther King Jr. will mark the 15th anniversary of King's assassination Monday with a "jobs and peace" rally and a five-hour prayer vigil.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said the anniversary activities will focus on the problems that must be solved for blacks to participate fully in the American political and economic system.

"The issues that have sort of been resolved relate to the customer side of the lunch counter and the problems remaining relate to the cash register side of the lunch counter," he said, referring to demonstrations in the 1960s when blacks sat at segregated lunch counters to demand equal service.

On Monday morning, Lowery and King's widow, Coretta Scott King, will lay a wreath on the civil right leader's tomb. The rally at the Richard B. Russell Federal Building will get under way at noon and will be followed by the prayer vigil.

Monday night, the fourth annual Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Drum Major Awards Dinner will be held at Clark College, with the honorees including United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser, entertainer Lou Rawls and public television talk show host Tony Brown.

Lowery said SCLC chapters across the country will be holding rallies Monday to note the assassination of King, who was gunned down April 4, 1968, at a motel in Memphis, Tenn., where he was leading a protest by city sanitation workers.

The Memphis chapter of the SCLC will be sponoring a "jobs and peace" rally on Monday similar to the one held here.

In Anderson, Ind., thousands of people are expected to participate in a rally Monday sponsored by Operation PUSH, People United to Serve Humanity. The rally has been billed as a march for "justice, jobs and peace" and to call attention to the unemployed.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, national president of the self-help group, said the city 35 miles northeast of Indianapolis was chosen for the rally because Anderson's unemployment rate has risen to about 20 percent.

In announcing Atlanta's activities last week, Mayor Andrew Young, who was one of King's lieutenants in the civil rights struggles of the 1960s, said the nation still faces many problems that King battled.

"We are still spending an overwhelming, in fact increasing, proportion of our national resources on death and destruction rather than life and development," Young said.

"Dr. King's prophecy that the bombs you drop in Vietnam will explode at home in unemployment and inflation is very much a prophecy that unfortunately has been fulfilled in recent years," he said.

Klan Marchers Met By Jeerers

HOUSTON (AP) — Nearly 50 Ku Klux Klansmen marched in downtown Houston on Saturday, and at least six people were arrested as hundreds of demonstrators lined the parade route chanting "Death to the Klan."

Six hundred police, some in full riot gear and some in civilian clothes, protected the Klansmen from the jeering, fist-shaking spectators.

The sidewalks were filled, with the crowd estimated at 2,000. The official police estimate of the number of Klansmen was 45 to 50.

There were some incidents of rock- and egg-throwing, but no injuries were reported.

Anti-Klan demonstrators lined the 10-block parade route, shouting insults and obscenities at the Klansmen, who wore traditional white robes, black uniforms with riot gear or camouflage fatigues.

The most vocal group in the racially mixed crowd of protesters was the International Committee Against Racism. Its members marched in a circle at the parade's announced starting point and followed the march on either side of the street.

The parade actually began a block away.

One woman shouted, "Let's make sure the Klan does not have a safe journey through the streets of Houston today."

Parent Punches Coach

BURLINGTON — A Burlington man has been charged with assaulting his son's baseball coach after the boy was among several benched before the team came back from a 7-2 deficit to take an 8-7 victory, police said.

Coach Frank Mensch of Burlington's Cummings High School said William Eddie Wrenn Jr. punched him in the mouth after the game against Western Alamance High School, said Lt. Jerry Garner. Mensch said he suffered two loosened teeth as a result of the blow, Garner said.

Fire Kills Two People

HIGH POINT — Two people were killed and one injured Saturday when fire swept through a house believed to be vacant near downtown High Point, fire officials said.

Those killed were identified as Archie Lee Pemberton, 38, and Elease Walker, 37, said R.T. Surrett of the High Point Fire Department. William Redfarn was listed in serious condition at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem after suffering burns in the blaze.

Surrett said the cause of the fire was apparently carelessly discarded cigarettes.

Man Fined A Quarter

DURHAM — A judge fined a man 25 cents for a parking violation, suspending the $31 court costs. General Cheek, 31, was ticketed for obstructing traffic by parking in a no parking zone in front of Duke Power Company's offices.

Judge Karen Galloway said people often stop there to run in and pay their bill, so she fined Cheek what he would have paid for a parking meter.

Judge Allows Discharge

WILMINGTON — A federal judge refused to stop Fort Bragg officials from discharging a 25-year-old soldier who claims her dismissal stems from sexual assaults and harassment by military police superiors.

U.S. District Court Judge James C. Fox turned down a request for a temporary restraining order to prevent Army officials from discharging Spec. 4 Patricia Dorsey of Beaufort, S.C.

Government attorneys said Ms. Dorsey is being discharged as an unsuitable soldier for poor duty performance and writing a half-dozen bad checks. She will be discharged next week, a Fort Bragg spokesman said after the ruling Friday.

Pesticide Hearings Set

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Pesticide Board will conduct hearings in April to receive public input on proposed pesticide storage regulations.

The hearings are scheduled for April 25 at Pitt County Community College in Greenville; April 27 at Catawba Valley Technical College in Hickory, and April 29 at the Agriculure Building in Raleigh.

New TV Station Scheduled

GREENSBORO — A Florida minister who once hosted a Christian variety show has received federal permission to build a major television station in Lexington with power to reach viewers across the Piedmont.

The station, scheduled to begin broadcasting by year's end, will feature religious game shows for children, Christian programs for women, music, sermons and interviews.

About 1.5 million people from Concord to Chapel Hill will receive the station's signal from its Randolph County tower, said William P. Register, the Coral Springs, Fla., minister who is president of Koinonia Broadcasting Inc.

His station, Channel 20, will have 5 million watts of power.

Professor Dies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Francis T. Miller, a member of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine faculty, died Friday at age 50.

He was an associated professor in the department of psychiatry's division of community psychiatry. The Laurens, S.C., native joined the faculty in 1967.

He earned his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of South Carolina and his doctorate from the University of Houston.

He was with the Emory University department of psychiatry for four years before moving to Chapel Hill. He also had worked with the Houston State Psychiatric Institute and the South Carolina State Hospital in Columbia.

"Dr. Miller has been a devoted and important member of our faculty for 15 years," said Dr. Stuart Bondurant, dean of the School of Medicine. "He was an expert in the delivery of mental health services in rural areas. Few people in our time have contributed as much to the mental health programs for farm familites."

A memorial service will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. at the University Methodist Church in Chapel Hill.

Teacher Defends Grant Spending

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A psychologist who has resigned from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro says it was carelessness and not deception that led to suggestions he plagarized proposals for federal grants.

Arnold Rincover, who has taught psychology at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro since 1976 and is recognized for his research on autistic children, agreed to resign at the end of the academic year after the State Bureau of Investigation said he had misused about $11,000 in federal grant money, the Greensboro Daily News reported Thursday.

The newspaper said that while the SBI probe concerned only financial records, Rincover's grant proposals showed he copied parts of his proposals from the master's thesis of a graduate student and, in one instance, altered labels on the student's graphs to reverse their meaning.

The newspaper said the SBI agreed not to file charges after Rincover promised to repay the money.

Group Rates East And Helms Taxpayers' 'Best Friend'

By JOEY LEDFORD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South Carolina's Ernest Hollings and Tennessee's Jim Sasser are the "big spenders" among Southern senators, the National Taxpayers Union claimed in a report released Sunday.

The Washington-based group, which claims a national membership of 120,000, rates several Southern senators — North Carolina's Jesse Helms and John East, Georgia's Mack Mattingly and Alabama's Jeremiah Denton, all Republicans — as "taxpayers' best friends."

David Keating, the organization's executive vice president, said ratings were based on 180 Senate votes and 197 House roll call votes taken during the 1982 Congressional session.

Social spending and defense spending allegedly carried equal weight in the surveys by the group, which prefers congressmen be tight-fisted with taxpayers' money.

"After a lot of consideration, we thought this is the fairest way to do it — congressional spending attitudes for entire federal budget," Keating said.

Sasser, D-Tenn., had the lowest rating in the South, 31. He was closely followed by presidential aspirant Hollings, D-S.C., with 34.

Just barely out of the "big spender" category was Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., with 39, rated average by the taxpayer group.

Helms' 77 was the second best score in the Senate. East's 72 was fourth. Former Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia, who retired, was third with 76.

Mattingly scored 67 and Denton had 62.

Senators rating as average included John Stennis, D-Miss., with 41, Howell Heflin, D-Ala., (46), Sam Nunn, D-Ga., (47) and Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., (50).

Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., rated fair with 53, as did Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee with 55, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., (58) and Sen. John Warner, R-Va. (60).

In the House, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., ranked as the fourth highest spender, scoring 12. He joined 14 other current Southern congressmen in the "big spender" category.

Only four members of the House from the South ranked as "taxpayers' best friends." The leader there was Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., with 81.

Judge Refuses To Block Co-Op's Export Of Leaf

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has refused to ban direct foreign sales of tobacco by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

The Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association had sought a preliminary injunction to block such sales, but U.S. District Judge James C. Fox said he didn't see how the public interest would be served by such an injunction.

In the past, Stabilization has depended on export buyers to sell its tobacco to foreign companies. However, U.S. Attorney Samuel T. Currin said Friday that market conditions have changed.

Arguing the federal government's case against the restriction, Currin said exporters who formerly dealt primarily in U.S. tobacco now buy and sell tobacco produced throughout the world. Thus their interests no longer necessarily coincide with Stabilization's need to sell tobacco quickly, he said.

Fred Bond, Stabilization managing director, said his group hadn't sold any tobacco directly to foreign buyers, pending the decision.

"The way is perfectly clear for us to sell tobacco to anyone that wants to buy it right now," he said after the hearing.

Stabilization buys tobacco from buyers when they fail to receive bids higher than price-support levels. It borrows money from Commodity Credit Corp. to pay for the tobacco, then processes it for storage and sells it at a price that covers the original price, the processing and storing charges and the loan interest.

About half the flue-cured crop, including some owned by Stabilization, goes overseas. Farmers are required to make good any losses Stabilization might sustain.

Currin said direct sales by Stabilization to foreign customers can increase competition in tobacco marketing and this should benefit growers.

Fox said the public interest appears to lie with Stabilization and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, as the money involved comes from the public. Reduction of Stabilization's stocks, he said, would appear to serve the public best.

Secretary of Agriculture John Block authorized Stabilization to sell direct to foreign buyers Nov. 30, 1982. The Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association filed suit in mid-January, claiming Block illegally repealed a policy that had been in effect since 1946, when Stabilization was formed. The export group's attorneys repeated this contention Friday.

Leaking Acid Threatens Area

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — A truck carrying 6,000 gallons of acid overturned Saturday and sprang a leak, sending 15 people to hospitals for treatment after they inhaled fumes.

"We were lucky the wreck occurred in a very remote area," said state Trooper Larry McNair. "There are very few dwellings in the area and no evacuation is necessary."

An 18-mile stretch of Interstate 59 between Noccalula Falls and Collinsville was closed for most of the day after the 1:30 a.m. accident. The southbound lanes reopened at 8 p.m. but the northbound lanes remained blocked by the cleanup crews, troopers said.

Union Carbide, which owned the truck's cargo, sent two tankers to the scene Saturday night and workers pumped the remaining acid out of the damaged vehicle. An emergency response team from New Orleans, equipped with protective clothing and breathing equipment, then righted the truck, state troopers said.

It was loaded with 2,000 gallons each of acrylic acid, ethyl acrylic acid and ethyl atxylacrylate acid.

Dream Continues For Wolfpack, 67-60

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — North Carolina State didn't have to worry about a last-second decision this time. Still, reaching the NCAA basketball championship game wasn't easy for the Wolfpack.

"What can I say, the dream just continues," Coach Jim Valvano said after the Wolfpack beat Georgia 67-60 Saturday in a semifinal game of Final Four. "Just to be playing in the last game of the season.

"We were emotionally tired. Our team was sky high."

N.C. State built an 18-point lead with 5:56 to go, then withstood a Georgia rally for the right to play top-ranked Houston, ranked No. 1 in the country, in the championship game Monday night. Houston advanced by defeating second-ranked Louisville in the other semifinal, 94-81. North Carolina State is 16th.

"I'll tell you, those were the longest minutes I've spent in my life," said Valvano, in his third year as N.C. State's coach. "I was a little incoherent."

But the euphoria was short after Valvano saw Houston handle Louisville.

"I never saw so many dunks in my life. It's unbelievable," the N.C. State coach said. "I missed the first half (of the Houston-Louisville game) and I wish I had missed the second.

North Carolina State has been involved in a string of close games lately, winning three games in its conference tournament by a total of 11 points and getting into the Final Four with a total victory margin of 22 points in four games — including an 18-point victory over Utah.

This time, it was different.

Dereck Whittenburg, a 6-foot-1 senior, and Thurl Bailey, a 6-11 senior, each scored 20 points in pacing the Wolfpack, 25-10, to its ninth consecutive victory.No team with 10 losses in a season has ever won the NCAA title.

Whittenburg missed 14 games in midseason because of a broken foot and was suffering from the flu earlier this week. But on Saturday, as his coach said, Whittenburg "was dynamite."

He scored 12 of his points in the first half. The Wolfpack took a 33-22 halftime lead and Georgia had the jitters.

"I was still sick this morning," Whittenburg said. "During the game I got tired. I kept looking over at the bench to coach thinking he might take me out. But he just shook his head no."

Whittenburg sat out only 30 seconds. He hit eight of 18 from the field and had six assists. His backcourt partner, Sidney Lowe, had 11 assists and 10 points.

N.C. State used a variety of zones against the Bulldogs, known for their quickness — and lack of height. Terry Fair, at 6-7, was the tallest Georgia player.

After N.C. State went up 59-41, Georgia ran off 11 straight points to cut the margin to 59-52 with 1:55 remaining. But the closest the Bulldogs could get after that was 65-60 on Vern Fleming's layup in the waning seconds.

"At the beginning of the game we didn't shoot the ball very well," said Georgia Coach Hugh Durham. "Something like 27 percent for the first half.

Dunk Docs Cram Cards

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Clyde Drexler and Akeem Abdul Olajuwon led Houston's men of Phi Slama Jama on a 19-1 spree midway through the second half, and the Cougars went on to dunk Louisville 94-81 Saturday to move into the NCAA basketball championship game for the first time.

No. 1 Houston, 31-2 and winner of 26 in a row, will meet No. 16 North Carolina State for the championship Monday night. The Wolfpack beat No. 18 Georgia 67-60 in the other semifinal game at the University of New Mexico arena.

"Phi Slama Jama came alive in the second half," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis, a loser in three previous Final Four semifinals.

It was a battle of rebounds, speed and slam dunks in the second half as Houston overcame an eight-point deficit, 47-39, with 13:50 remaining.

The Cougars, who switched to a man-to-man defense in the second half, ran off 13 straight points, Michael Young starting it off with a one-handed slam stuff on an alley-oop pass from Drexler. Then came Drexler with a slam dunk, and Benny Anders hit on a driving stuff.

Houston wasn't through yet. Drexler hit a double-pump slam dunk, and, by the time the surge was over, the Cougars led 70-58 with more than seven minutes remaining.

What made the awesome display of high-flying offensive power even more remarkable was that the Cougars did it without 6-foot-9 Larry Micheaux, who fouled out with 13:28 remaining and the Cougars down 55-49.

Drexler finished with 21 points, as did Olajuwon, a 7-foot sophomore from Lagos, Nigeria who began playing basektball in 1979.

No. 2 Louisville, which had its 16-game winning streak broken and wound up 32-3, led at halftime mainly on the outside shooting of guard Milt Wagner. They also outrebounded the Southwest Conference champs 26-15 in the first 20 minutes.

After 10 ties and three lead changes, the Cardinals surged to a 41-36 lead in the first half. The Metro Conference champions decided not to attack Houston's awesome front line and got 13 of its 18 field goals from the guard position.

At the opening of the second half, Houston quickly bounced back to tie the score at 43-43 on Young's jumper. Then, Louisville began battling the Cougars inside and pushed ahead 51-45 behind the McCray brothers, Rodney and Scooter.

But, when it came to the battle of the dunks and blocks, it was the Cougars who won out. Also contributing to the Houston attack were Young with 16 points and Anders and freshman guard Alvin Franklin with 13 apiece.

Wagner paced the Cardinals with 24, followed by Lancaster Gordon with 17 and Gordon Jones with 12.

Houston previously beat Maryland, Memphis State and Villanova in the NCAA playoffs. Louisville, competing in the Final Four for the third time in four years and the champion in 1980, defeated Tennessee, Arkansas and Kentucky to reach the Final Four.

The Metro Conference champion Cardinals' last loss was Jan. 29 to Virginia. Houston's last loss also was to Virginia in January.

ECU Begins To Find Some Needed Depth

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Despite the rain and snow of the past two weeks, East Carolina University's football Pirates went into the Easter holiday period only one day behind in their spring practice schedule.

"We've gotten seven days in so far," Coach Ed Emory said. "We were supposed to work on Thursday, which would have put us right on schedule, but we were rained out again."

The Pirates are to report back for practice on Tuesday, with further workouts in the coming week set for Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. The annual ECU coaching clinic will be held on the weekend also, Friday through Sunday, with practice sessions on Saturday a part of the activity.

"Hopefully, we'll have better weather in April and get back on schedule and stay on it," Emory said.

Things appear to be going well in the offensive line where Greg Quick has been cleared to resume practice. "He still has to get back into shape, but this should be a boost to us," the coach said, "if he stays healthy. With Greg, Tim Dumas, John Robertson and Greg Sokolohorsky, we have four big tackles."

At the guard postion, Emory noted that Brad Henson has had a good week, but Shawn Brady has been injured and will miss some time. Scott Totten, however, should be returning shortly.

"Norman Vann is having an excellent spring at tight end. We appear to have some depth and quality here now," Emory continued. He added that Derrick Davis has been moved from a tackle position to tight end.

Emory said that a lot of time has been spent on the passing game, and a number of receivers are looking good, including Ricky Nichols, Chris McLawhorn, Henry Williams and Stefon Adams. "We've also moved Brent Holbrook (from defensive back) to wide receiver."

At quarterback, returning starter Kevin Ingram is finding some competition from John Williams and Brian Herndon. "Brian has made a lot of progress so far, but we'll have to see how far he comes. We have three more coming in in the fall, and any of them could help us too."

Defensively, Emory said that the team had shown the most gains. "We have good people at the tackles in (Steve) Hamilton and (Hal) Stephens, and (Gerry) Rogers at nose guard. The guy who's come the furtherest is William Jennette, even though he's slowed by a shoulder problem now. But we're still looking for depth at nose guard."

Jeff Pegues, J.C. Plott and Curtis Wyatt are all doing well at defensive end, although the latter has missed several days due to a death in his family.

Mike Grant, who missed all last year, is making big strides at linebacker, along with P.J. Jordan and Chris Santa Cruz. "Tyrone Johnson, a junior college transfer, has been hitting the hardest licks of spring practice so far," Emory noted.

Willie Mack, who opened at linebacker, has been moved to defensive end, and Emory said that the staff is also considering moving Kenny Phillips to

Rains Delay Greensboro

GREENSBORO (AP) — Thunderstorms and heavy day-long rain washed out Saturday's third round of the $400,000 Greater Greensboro Open and extended the tournament schedule to Monday.

Clyde Mangum, deputy commissioner for PGA Tour Operations, said the format now calls for single rounds of 18 holes Sunday and Monday.

The revised schedule will delay by one day the departure of some players for next week's Masters tournament in Augusta, Ga., the first of the year's major events. Among those who will be delayed is Craig Stadler, the Masters' defending champion.

"We know a number of our players want to get to Augusta Sunday night," Mangum said, "but there is nothing we can do about it. Our first concern has to be this tournament."

The heavy rains made the Forest Oaks Country Club course unplayable and third-round play was held up at noon Saturday.At that time, Nick Price and Ronnie Black had completed their rounds with scores of 73 and 78, respectively.

Of the 73 men who had made the cut for the final two rounds, 61 had started play. All of Saturday's action is washed out. All players will play 18 holes on Sunday, with half the field starting from the first tee, half from the 10th.

The tournament will be concluded with another 18 holes on Monday.

"Our usual procedure in this kind of situation," Mangum said, "is to play 36 holes on Sunday. To do that, we would have to cut the field to 56 players and start at 8 o'clock.

"The weatherman tells me it is unlikely we will be able to start play at 8 o'clock on Sunday. By using two tees, we will not start until 10:54 a.m., giving us a drying-out period, which the course needs."

Mark Lye and Bob Eastwood, who shared the second-round lead at 5-under-par 139, were among the dozen players who had not teed off Saturday when play was called off.

"I'm glad we're only playing 18 each day," Eastwood said. "I caught a cold and I'm glad to have a day to get over it."

"If it's a bad day at the office, it's a bad day at the office," shrugged Lye."This course is too long and hard to have to play two rounds in a day."

Buddy Gardner was alone in third at 140. Tied at 141, two shots off the pace, were Denis Watson, Bobby Clampett, Lanny Wadkins, Stadler, Phil Hancock, Ron Streck and Jim Nelford.

A-G's Tyrone Gay Spins No-Hitter, 5-0

WILSON — Ayden-Grifton's Tyrone Gay started the Wilson Optimist Baseball Tourament off with a bang Saturday afternoon, tossing a no-hitter at Wilson Fike, 5-1.

Gay overpowered the Golden Demons, striking out seven and walking just two in the effort. The two walks represented the only two baserunners that Fike put on the paths — and Gay promptly picked off one of them — facing only 22 batters, one over the minimum, in the contest.

Ayden-Grifton grabbed the lead in the first inning of the contest, pushing over two runs. Doug Coley led things off with a walk and Gay helped his own cause with a home run for a 2-0 lead.

The Chargers came back to score two more in the bottom of the inning. Wesley Hardy singled and stole second. Charles Mitchell reached on an infield hit and stole second also. Jackie Conway plated Hardy with a sacrifice fly and Gene Johnson's single brought in Mitchell, moving the lead to 4-0.

It stayed that way until the seventh when Ayden-Grifton added its fifth run. Johnson led off with a single and moved up on an error. A passed ball allowed him to take third, and he scored on Coley's single.

Johnson led the Charger hitting with three, while Coley added two.

The win boosted the Ayden-Grifton record to 6-2 on the season. The Chargers are next scheduled to play the winner of the Greene Central-Wilson Hunt game on Tuesday.

The remaining portion of the tournament scheduled for Saturday was postponed because of rain.

The second contest, between the Rams and Hunt had reached the fifth inning with a 4-4 tie when further play became impossible.

The contest will be restarted from the beginning on Monday at 2 p.m. with the rest of the Saturday schedule following at the times originally scheduled. The rest of the tournament will be pushed back one day.

Pryor Easily Retains Crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — World junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor says he put aside thoughts of his court battle with his manager to concentrate on one thing Saturday, beating challenger Sang-Hyun Kim of South Korea.

"Some people run for relaxation. I've been noted to fight for relaxation when something is on my mind," Pryor said.

Pryor easily retained his World Boxing Association junior welterweight title, stopping Kim just 37 seconds into the third round of the fight that had been jeopardized by Pryor's court battle.

"I was really pysched out about it," Pryor said, referring to the legal hassle. "There was a point during the week I thought about calling off the fight."

Pryor, who had to go to a hospital for tranquilizers earlier in the week to help settle an upset stomach which fight promoters say was caused by the litigation, completely dominated the scheduled 15-round bout.

Pryor landed a barrage of unanswered punches in the third round before referee Carlos Benocal of Panama stopped it. It was Pryor's seventh title defense since he won the crown from Antonio Cervantes in August 1980.

"I never gave the guy a chance to show what he had," said Pryor, who had to lose a pound earlier in the day to reach the 140-pound weight limit. "I was surprised I was moving him the way I was with my punches. I didn't think he was defending himself."

Pryor also said he was butted three times, one of them opening a bloody gash over his right eye.

"I thought it was sweat until it started getting in my eyes. Then I stepped back and saw it on him. It was the first time in my life I've been cut," said Pryor.

"I just outclassed him. I outboxed him," Pryor said moments after the fight.

Pryor went on the attack at the outset against Kim, the WBA's top-ranked contender. He pinned the 28-year-old challenger on the ropes as he lashed out with combinations to the body. Pryor stayed on the offensive in the second round, working on his southpaw opponent's head with left hooks and stinging rights.

Dr. Paul T. Williams, the ringside physician, examined Kim before the start of the third round and allowed the fight to continue. Moments later, Benocal stopped it.

The 27-year-old champion, weighing the division-maximum 140 pounds, boosted his record to 33-0 with 31 knockouts in the mandatory defense against Kim, the former World Boxing Council super lightweight champion who had won his last 12 fights since losing his crown to Saoul Mamby in February 1980. Kim, 138¾, is 42-4-2 with 24 knockouts.

The fight was little more than a tuneup for Pryor's scheduled rematch this summer against former world champion Alexis Arguello.

Saturday's bout was in jeopardy until the Ohio Supreme Court stayed a preliminary injunction against it by two lower courts with its ruling Friday that the fight could go on despite a contract dispute between Pryor, a Cincinnati native, and Cincinnati businessman Buddy LaRosa, his manager.

Pryor filed suit last year to break his contract with LaRosa, who had been granted the injunction to stop the Kim fight. The lower courts refused to set aside LaRosa's rights while the case is under litigation and held that Pryor must abide by the terms of his contract with LaRosa. The Supreme Court ruling didn't touch on the merits of LaRosa's contract dispute with Pryor.

Seals Kept Passing Tests

NEW YORK (AP) — Former middleweight contender Sugar Ray Seales, who fought for 2½ years with detached retinas, said Saturday he kept fighting because he kept passing state athletic commission physicals he expected to flunk.

"We were so close to getting a shot at the world title, I kept wanting to fight," the United States' only boxing gold medalist in the 1972 Olympics said in an interview taped for ABC's "Sportsbeat."

Seales, 30, underwent two operations last week to repair damage in both eyes. Doctors said afterwards that while he would never fight again he would probably regain enough sight to drive and read.

Seales, who says he has no money, said that for the past 1½ years his vision deteriorated. But he said that in pursuit of that elusive championship, he signed for fights in New Jersey, New York, California and Nevada, among other states.

"I didn't believe they'd pass me (in the physical examination)," said Seales, interviewed at Good Samaritan Hospital in Portland, Ore. "I went to take the chance they would pass me or to give me the final result — to get out of boxing. I knew that it was up to the commission itself to say, 'You can't see nothing; you have to get out.'"

Dr. Richard Chenoweth, who performed the operation, said in the interview that the physicals clearly used "inadequate standards" to determine retinal damage. He said such damage could be easily detected by having Seales read an eye chart.

"Couldn't he memorize it?" he was asked.

"Not if the test were administered correctly," Chenoweth replied.

Young Americans Reach Net Finals

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Youngsters Mats Wilander of Sweden and Mel Purcell of the United States, with a little help from Saturday's rain-compressed schedule, won their way into Sunday's final of the $300,000 Monte Carlo Open tennis tournament.

Rain delays Friday forced tournament officials to stage three quarterfinal matches and the semifinals on Saturday. That clearly gave an advantage to the 18-year-old Wilander and 23-year-old Purcell over their older opponents.

Wilander, seeded fifth here — the only surviving seed — and ranked eighth in the world, defeated 30-year-old Corrado Barazzutti of Italy 6-2, 6-3. Purcell's semifinal opponent, 34-year-old Manuel Orantes of Spain, dropped out of their match after losing the first set 6-3 and falling behind in the second 2-1.

Barazzutti faced Wilander after edging No. 2 seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, the defending Monte Carlo champion, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4 in a three-hour marathon. Wilander had an easier time of it in his morning quarterfinal encounter, dispatching France's Henri Leconte 7-5, 6-0 in just 53 minutes.

Purcell, ranked 30th in the world, beat Shlomo Glickstein of Israel 6-0, 7-6 in the only quarterfinal match not rained out Friday. He was well rested when he faced Orantes. Orantes, however, had to play three tough sets Saturday morning to upset Yannick Noah of France, the No. 6 seed, 2-6, 7-6, 6-3.

He dropped out of the afternoon match against Purcell after it became clear he could not keep up the pace against the agile, young American.

"I was very tired and my legs and back were a little stiff," Orantes said. "Both Barazzutti and I asked the officials if we could play the semifinals Sunday and have the finals Monday, but they refused."

This clay-court tournament, the season's first major Grand Prix event, marked the last announced appearance of Bjorn Borg on the professional circuit.

Borg, who was eliminated by Leconte in a second-round match Thursday, is retiring from the grind of the tour to go into business promotion and broadcasting.

Durham Still Pleased

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Coach Hugh Durham saw positive things in Georgia's 67-60 loss Saturday to North Carolina State in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

"Look at the big picture and you see Georgia was here," he said. "It was a surprise, naturally, but it shows you what can happen when a team has a chance to come together and play hard.

"In the dressing room after the game, we didn't reflect more than to say we just didn't shoot well. But the positive thing was that we hung and hung. It would have been easy for us to lose by 25, but we stayed in there."

Georgia, down by as many as 18 points with under six minutes to play, cut State's lead to six points with a flurry at the end.

"This team will leave a mark on Georgia basketball," Durham continued. "They played hard as a unit, as a group. Give these people credit for what they did."

Georgia suffered through a miserable first half, shooting just 28 percent and falling behind 33-22. James Banks made just three of his first 15 shots.

"They were easy shots, ones I normally knock down, but they just didn't drop for me," the 6-foot-6 junior said. "Coach Durham told me to keep putting them up and I did." Banks finished with 13 points on five-of-19 from the field.

Vern Fleming had a team-high 14 points. "We were ready to play but we just were not knocking down the shots," he said.

Banks thought that when Georgia fell behind in the early going, it affected their game. "We probably forced a couple of bad shots," he said. "I know I did, just trying to get something going."

Banks managed just two rebounds in the game as North Carolina State's Cozell McQueen and Thurl Bailey dominated the boards with 23 rebounds between them.

"McQueen is 6-11," Banks said. "He's a good offensive rebounder. They were aggressive and stayed around the ball off the offensive boards. They played an outstanding game today."

Gerald Crosby, who scored 12 points, said the Bulldogs were not hurt all that much by State's defense.

"Their defense didn't affect us," he said. "We affected ourselves. The ball just wouldn't fall. We finally got things going our way in the last 10 minutes. But by then it was too late to pull it out.

"Coach told us at halftime, 'It can't get any worse so just keep taking your shots.' He said they'd eventually start falling."

Crosby was proud of Georgia's late comeback. "We said, 'We got here being champs. Let's try to go out the same way.'"

Center Terry Fair, limited to five points by the Wolfpack, thought the Bulldogs could have pulled it out if they had closed to within a point or two at the end.

"But the ball kept rolling around the rim," he said. "We got ourselves in a hole and we couldn't get ourselves out."

Lamar Heard, who had 10 rebounds and eight points for the Bulldogs, said he couldn't feel sad about how the season had ended. "With all we have done for the Georgia program this year," he said, "it makes me feel good."

Mabry Sets Meet Record

FAIRFAX, Va. — Freshman Delphine Mabry set a meet record with a time of 2:11.6 to take first place for East Carolina University in the 800 meters event at the George Mason University Invitational Women's Track Meet Saturday.

Her time bettered the record of 2:15.0 set by Jennifer Prescott, wife of former ECU assistant football coach Spencer Prescott. Mabry also placed fourth in the long jump with a leap of 17-9½. It was only Mabry's second meet as a Lady Pirate after competing on the ECU basketball team.

Robin Cremedy took second place in the 100 meters with a time of 13.0 running into a head-wind, with teammate Teresa Hudson placing fourth. Cremedy also placed seventh in the 200 meters at 26.4 to set a new school record. Her time of 25.6 in the preliminaries was her best time of the year.

The 4 X 100 relay team of Hudson, Mabry, Jamie Carthcart and Cremedy took second place with a time of 48.6, also setting a new ECU record.

Cathcart placed fourth in the 400m race with a time of 57.4 after coming in at 57.0 in the semifinals.

In the shot putt, Amy Bowen took seventh place with a toss of 35-10. It was her first time in the finals of a meet as a Lady Pirate.

"We looked so good; that's the best meet I've ever coached," said Pat McGuigan of the eight freshmen she took to the meet. "We looked like a mature track team."

Other teams competing in the meet were host George Mason, Penn State, James Madison, Villinova, Wake Forest, N.Y. Tech, District of Columbia, Boston College, Mount St. Mary's, Georgetown, West Virgina, Wagner and several club teams.

'Incredible' Season Continues With Matchup Against Houston

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — For North Carolina State, the dream goes on.

The Wolfpack, a team of survivors who have thrived on adversity, completed one more chapter in what Coach Jim Valvano called their "incredible" season Saturday with a 67-60 victory over Georgia in the semifinals of the NCAA Basketball Tournament.

The triumph sent North Carolina State, 25-10, into Monday night's championship game, where it can become the first team in history to win the national championship with more than nine defeats.

"What can I say? The dream just continues," said an ecstatic Valvano. "To be playing on the last day of the season..."

North Carolina State, which will be making its first appearance in the championship game in nine years, squeezed the life out of Georgia's "Underdawgs" and it was the Wolfpack's senior combination of 6-foot-11 Thurl Bailey and guard Dereck Whittenburg that did most of the damnage.

The two N.C. State leaders each scored 20 points and combined with point guard Sidney Lowe to carry the Wolfpack into the finals.

"I'm thinking of taking a sabbatical next year and letting my sister run the program," Valvano said. "I haven't suited up without those three for a long time."

North Carolina State took command early, hitting 54 percent from the field in the first half, while a noticably shaken Georgia, an NCAA tournament participant for the first time, could hit on only 27.8 percent in the opening 20 minutes.

The play of Bailey, Whittenburg and Lowe, combined with N.C. State's tenacious zone defense, kept the Wolfpack in front throughout.

"I wanted us to play well defensively, and we did," Valvano said. "Offensively, we wanted to keep the ball in the hands of our guards."

Bailey and 6-11 sophomore center Cozell McQueen dominated play inside. They combined for 23 rebounds, with McQueen's 13 a career high.

Lowe and Whittenburg also killed the clock down the stretch when Georgia made a late run at the Wolfpack.

"We felt with a 16-point lead we could milk the clock pretty good," said Valvano. "After all, we're an agriculture school, so we ought to be able to do that."

Georgia, with guard Vern Fleming and forward James Banks getting inside, outscored North Carolina State 13-1 over a four-minute stretch late in the game to close within six points on several occasions.

"We knew they were going to make a run at us and we were going to have to hit the free throws," said Bailey.

Cards In Awe Of Frat

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The Louisville Cardinals began the NCAA basketball tournament in bitterness over not being placed in the Midwest Region, and they ended it in awe of the Midwest's top-seeded team.

"Houston was kind of awesome," Coach Denny Crum said after the top-ranked Cougars stampeded past the second-ranked Cardinals 94-81 in Saturday's semifinals.

Louisville had hoped to be placed in the Midwest Region and thus have an opportunity to play a tournament game on their home court. Instead, they were seeded first in the Mideast and Houston was able to play one game at home.

The loss, only Louisville's fourth in 36 games this season, was the result of a withering Houston run at the most unlikely of times in the second half.

After Houston forward Larry Micheaux fouled out, Louisville's Milt Wagner hit a jump shot that gave the Cardinals an eight-point lead, 57-49 with 13:15 left. Then, incredibly, Louisville's experienced, tournament-seasoned team went 6:38 without one field goal.

The Cougars began their run with slam dunks and turned the eight-point deficit into a 72-62 lead before Lancaster Gordon broke the fatal scoring drought with a bucket at the 6:37 mark.

"We just didn't make very many shots and Houston blocked a bunch," Crum said when asked what had happened to his team. "They just overpowered us.

"When they went to a man-to-man defense, they were just better, that's all."

The Louisville players were as awed by the powerful Cougars as their coach.

"They started getting the ball in a position to get us on two-and three-on-one fastbreaks," said center Charles Jones.

The Cardinals twice got within six points in the final 4:08, but the comeback stalled because of poor free throw shooting and one of the most embarrassing moments in Billy Thompson's life.

Thompson, a freshman, soared to the basket for an unmolested dunk and a basket that could have cut the deficit to six. But, he missed, badly, and Houston recovered the careening ball.

"I should have laid it up with two hands," he said. "It was a bad mistake at a critical situation."

It was a disappointing way for the McCray brothers, Scooter and Rodney, to end their illustrious Louisville careers, which saw the Cardinals make three Final Four appearances in four years.

"We've both had successful careers," said Rodney. "And the team has done some things that we were a part of. We don't regret a single minute since we signed (with Louisville)."

Crum did not waver in his praise of the Cougars.

"We played well. I certainly don't feel ashamed of anything," he said. "They physically overpower you. We couldn't wear them down, they just don't fatigue. They're a great team and they deserved to win."

Chicago Pair Nailed Stealing Home Plate

CHICAGO (AP) — Stephen Anderson and John Tokarz were caught in a rundown Saturday, moments after they allegedly tried to steal home plate. But instead of being safe or out, they were charged — with one count of misdemeanor criminal trespassing each.

The two men, both 18 and from western Chicago suburbs, may have thought the feat possible, given that the season opener is still two weeks away. What they didn't count on, apparently, was the pair of fleet-footed policemen on patrol around Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox.

Patrolmen Tony Skapardine and Chuck Parrillo said they saw the two men leaving Comiskey Park at 1:45 a.m. with home plate in tow.

"We chased them just a short distance, about a block," Skapardine said. "When they saw us, they dropped it.

"We had to come back and pick it up," he added. "And that son-of-a-gun (home plate) is heavy."

Anderson and Tokarz, who told police they'd been at a nearby party when the idea of stealing home plate came to them, were scheduled to appear on the charges in court April 13 — the day after the White Sox open the season at home against the Baltimore Orioles.

Lady Bucs Victorious

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates gained a 6-3 tennis victory over the Harvard "B" team Saturday.

The Lady Pirates won the first four singles matches, then added two wins in the doubles to sew things up.

East Carolina climbs to 5-6 with the win and next faces Old Dominion in Norfolk on Tuesday.

NCSU Students, Fans Gather For Celebration

RALEIGH (AP) — About 2,000 North Carolina State fans gathered at the campus' Brickyard Saturday to celebrate the Wolfpack's 67-60 basketeball victory over rallying Georgia in the NCAA tournament semifinals.

Unlike previous celebrations, where as many as 8,000 participated, Saturday's post-game party was smaller and more subdued. Earlier celebrations had spilled onto nearby Hillsborough Street, but this time the only street activities were a few cars honking and waving at passers-by.

Raleigh Police Capt. E.C. Winston said the crowd had dwindled from between 1,500-to-2,000 at its peak to a few hundred by 9 p.m.

Wake County Magistrate Charles Baker said two students were arrested for being drunk and disruptive, would be released when they sobered.

Police cited several reasons for the lack of numbers.

"First, it's Easter weekend and about two-thirds of our students are home," said Capt. Larry Liles of the university police. "Then the weather is damp and overcast and we don't have a PA system blasting music this way, so this won't turn into a concert."

Liles said before the day would end that he expected as many as 5,000 to appear, but said it wouldn't be until after the other semifinal game, between Houston and Louisville, before he'd know. Many fans were watching that game on television to see who the Wolfpack would play Monday night for the national title.

That turned out to be Houston, a 94-81 victor over the Cardinals, and police said they expect to have their hands full with perhaps the largest crowd to date.

In addition to 19 campus police, there were nine city officers and seven student officers handling the crowd with four other city police in other areas and five on traffic duty. Liles said another city squad would be called if needed.

"This is great, like a dream come true," said former student Monique Faust, 22, of Charlotte. "At the end, even though it got close, I felt like ... I just knew we weren't going to lose."

"It was awesome," said Ron Frame, 20, a junior from West Palm Beach, Fla. "(Dereck) Whittenburg was outstanding, (Thurl) Bailey was hitting the jumpers. And Cozell McQueen was awesome, that's the best game he's played all year."

Gary "Slim" Hudson, 23, a junior from Goldsboro, and Bess Carter, a 20-year-old junior from Durham, said they wished the Wolfpack could have played North Carolina, but it really made no difference as long as N.C. State won.

"I would've liked to see them beat Carolina a third time," Carter said. "But, I thought it was great and I want 'em to go all the way."

"I think it's fantastic," Carter said. "I thought Cozell McQueen played his best game and I think N.C. State fans are the most loyal."

Dream Continues...

That was a big factor in the game, but so was their board strength."

Banks, who led Georgia past St. John's and defendng champion North Carolina last week in the East Regionals, made only 5 of 19 shots from the field and finished with 13 points.

North Carolina State, a surprise winner of the ACC title, will be the third representative of the conference in the NCAA championship game in the last three years. North Carolina won the title last year after being beaten by Indiana in the championship game two years ago.

The last time the Wolfpack reached the championship game, they won it — in 1974, with a team led by David Thompson and coached by Norm Sloan.

Georgia, 24-10 and ranked 18th in the nation, was also a surprise conference tournament winner and was making its first NCAA appearance. Saturday's loss was the first this season for Georgia outside the SEC.

Fleming, a 6-5 junior guard, paced the Bulldogs with 14 points, followed by James Banks with 13 and Gerald Crosby with 12.

Whittenburg got N.C. State off to a fast start. At the outset, he hit a 22 footer and a 21 footer. In the meantime, the shots wouldn't fall for the Bulldogs, and N.C. State had a 33-22 advantage at halftime.

Georgia shot a cold 28 percent during the first half as Banks, a 6-6 junior who had been named the oustanding player in the East Regional final last weekend, managed to make only three of 16 shots from the field before intermission.

In the second half, the Wolfpack, winner of the West Regional, was ahead 43-29 with almost 15 minutes left. Georgia then came back with six straight points with Banks hitting four of them. But once again the rebounding of Bailey and 6-11 sophomore Cozell McQueen meant the difference.

Georgia got as close as 49-41 with about 10 minutes left on a layup by Banks, but then N.C. State pulled away on their 10-0 spurt.

Georgia finished with a 35 percent field goal percentage, while N.C. State shot 54 percent. McQueen led the Wolfpack in rebounding with 13 while Bailey added 10.

Fleming grabbed 11 rebounds, and Lamar Heard had 10 for Georgia.

drop end from strong safety.

"We've made a lot of progress in the secondary," he said. "It's probably the best we have, but it's going to have to be with the people we're playing against."

Clint Harris has looked very good, the coach pointed out, and he's pleased with the play of Kevin Walker and Vernard Wynn. "Rolando Caparas is going to be a good one, as is Keith Brown. Calvin Adams is having a good spring, as are Ed Varnes and Chuck Bishop. We have seven or eight who are pretty good secondary people and who'll break on the ball and hit you."

Emory said that the punt return game is getting a lot of emphasis. "We've got about eight people working there. One of the reasons we recruited Williams was for this, but we're also working Jimmy Walden, Stefon and Calvin Adams, Nichols, McLawhorn, and Bishop. I think we'll be improved in this."

As for punting itself, Jeff Bolch has been injured and just recently returned to drills. Williams has been handling much of the kicking in his absence.

"The big thing for us to do is find a quality punter and a snapper," Emory said. "We have some candidates (for the snapper) but we haven't settled on anyone yet."

Phi Slama Jama Stuns Cardinal Players

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Louisville's Scooter McCray said he'd never seen anything like it "in a real game."

Actually, it was just another fraternity party for Houston's rowdy Phi Slama Jama dunking brothers Saturday that helped the Cougars continue their season-long antics with a 94-81 victory over the stunned Louisville Cardinals.

After being bottled up for much of the game and trailing 57-49 in the second half, the Cougars, who have lived by the dunk all season, suddenly broke Louisville's press and reeled off four consecutive dunks as part of a 13-0 run to take a lead they never lost.

"This was just an average game for us from a physical standpoint," said forward Clyde Drexler, who helped fuel Houston's assault with a stunning double-pump dunk during the Cougars' explosion. Drexler, who could be the fraternity president, said the dunk was something he had worked on in practice.

"I wanted him (the Louisville defender) to think I was going to dunk, then I brought it down like I was going to pass and then I dunked it," Drexler said.

Houston's Larry Micheaux had just fouled out seconds before the Cougars started its massive comeback. Louisville's press had effectively contained the Cougars to that point.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis appeared confused that Micheaux had drawn his fifth foul and he admited later that neither he nor his coaches were aware that the 6-foot-9 Micheaux was in serious foul trouble.

"Honestly, I've got all kinds of assistants over there and not a damn one of us knew he had fouled out," Lewis said.

Lewis' trademark, a red polka dot towel, also caused him embarrassment in the first half when he apparently threw the towel onto the court during a Louisville steal and breakaway, drawing a technical foul.

"That's the first time since I've owned that towel that it ever fell out of my hand," Lewis said. "I was just trying to tell the official that it fell out and I didn't do it on purpose."

The Cougars had 11 dunks among their 24 field goals in the second half.

"It was just a normal show for us," said reserve Benny Anders, who came off the bench to score 13 points and contribute to the dunking contest.

"On behalf of the Phi Slama Jama fraternity, we just say, 'Let's go into the game and get all of our dunks there,' " Anders said. "We don't have contests to decide who dunks best. We just do it in the game."

Lewis said a key to the game was changing from a zone to a man-to-man defense in the second half.

"It caused some turnovers and it caused us to get more revved up than we were in the first half," he said. "They killed us on the boards in the first half. I don't know how we were as close as we were at halftime."

Louisville led 41-36 and outrebounded Houston 25-16 in the first half.

Alston Critical After Attack

CINCINNATI (AP) — Walter Alston, former manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers who will be inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame this summer, was in critical but stable condition Saturday following a heart attack.

Alston, 71, was admitted to Deaconess Hospital Friday night, a hospital spokeswoman said.

"His condition is critical. However, he's comfortable and he's been comfortable most of the day," said the spokeswoman, who declined to be identified.

Alston had returned to his Darrtown, Ohio, home earlier this week after spending five weeks at the Dodgers' training headquarters in Vero Beach, Fla., said team spokesman Tony Zwikel.

Darrtown is about 35 miles north of Cincinnati in a rural area of Butler County. Alston was taken to Deaconess Hospital because of its expertise in coronary care, the spokeswoman said.

Alston, who had a succession of one-year contracts during his 23 years with the Dodgers, was voted into the Hall of Fame on March 10.

He and former Detroit Tigers third baseman George Kell were chosen by the committee on veterans for induction at Cooperstown, N.Y., on July 31 along with former San Francisco Giants pitcher Juan Marichal and former Baltimore Orioles third baseman Brooks Robinson.

Alston, who guided the Dodgers to seven National League pennants and four world championships, was scheduled to throw out the ceremonial first pitch at Dodger Stadium on April 8 in the team's season opener with Montreal.

The quiet, unflappable Alston managed the Dodgers on both coasts, moving with the team to Los Angeles from Brooklyn before the 1958 season. He was succeeded by Tom Lasorda at the end of the 1976 season.

A former art teacher, he spent 41 years in professional baseball, starting his career on June 19, 1935, with a St. Louis Cardinals farm club at Greenwood, Miss., in the East Dixie League.

He began with the Dodger organization in 1944 as player-manager at Trenton, N.J., in the Interstate League.

Only two men — Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics and John McGraw of the New York Giants — managed one major league team longer than Alston. Mack, who owned the Athletics, managed them from 1901 to 1950. McGraw managed the Giants for 31 years.

Alston made only one plate appearance as a major league player — for the Cardinals in 1936. He struck out.

Royals Rally By Cards

By The Associated Press

Pinch-hitter Leon Roberts and Cesar Geronimo keyed a ninth-inning rally Saturday to lift the Kansas City Royals to a 4-3 exhibition baseball victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Roberts, acquired in an off-season deal with Toronto, tied the game with a one-out solo home run off rookie reliever Dave Von Ohlen. Then Geronimo followed John Wathan's double with a game-winning base hit.

The victory went to Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry, who pitched the ninth. Von Ohlen took the loss.

In other exhibition action, Milwaukee erupted for eight runs in the sixth inning thanks to Len Barker's wildness and key hits by Ted Simmons, Paul Molitor and Robin Yount as the Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 9-7.

Barker, 0-3 this spring, had blanked the Brewers on three hits through five innings.But in the sixth, Barker walked three batters, and Milwaukee collected six hits off Barker and reliever Ed Glynn.

Right-hander Rick Mahler shut out Baltimore on three hits for seven innings as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Orioles 2-0 in their final exhibition game of the 1983 spring season.

Detroit third baseman Howard Johnson had three hits and scored three times in the Tigers' 11-3 exhibition baseball victory over the Boston Red Sox. John Tudor, who worked the last six innings for Boston — giving up 18 hits and 11 runs — took the defeat, dropping him to 1-4 for the Grapefruit League season. Detroit starter Dan Petry, 2-0, went five innings for the victory.

The Seattle Mariners, using players from their Triple A farm team, unleashed a 21-hit attack to score a 14-8 victory over the Chicago Cubs.The Mariners chased Steve Trout in a four-run fifth inning and continued the assault against relievers Willie Hernandez and Lee Smith.

Dwayne Murphy missed a home run by inches but broke a 3-3 tie with a 390-foot drive in the fifth inning, and the Oakland A's went on to a 7-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants in the opening game of the first Bay Bridge Series.

Four games were rained out — Toronto vs. Pittsburgh, Montreal vs. Philadelphia, New York Yankees vs. New York Mets and the Chicago White Sox against Denver of the American Association.

In night action, it was Houston vs. Texas, Cincinnati against Minnesota, Los Angeles at California and San Diego at Seattle.

April Fool Little Late

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — University of Houston Coach Guy Lewis got his April Fool's joke played on him one day late Saturday.

In the midst of a news conference following Houston's comeback victory over Louisville in the NCAA Final Four championship tourament, Lewis was called aside by UH sports information director Jay Goldberg and told that President Reagan was awaiting to congratulate him.

"I think they are trying to pull my leg," Lewis said.

Then, Lewis added "Is it for real? Well, tell him to wait a few minutes."

When Lewis finally got to the phone however, it turned out to be a hoax.

In the 48 games he played in American Basketball Association playoffs, Julius Erving averaged 31.1 points per contest.

Daniel Gamble Fails To Work

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Beth Daniel gambled and lost on the 18th hole Saturday yet clung to a two-shot lead in the $400,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore Invitational golf tournament.

Daniel hit into the water trying to reach the green from the rough and carded a double bogey seven to finish with a 70 for the day and 208 total.

"Being the third round, I thought I had to gamble on it," said Daniel. "If it had been the fourth round and I had a four-shot lead, I would have chipped out from the rough instead of trying for the green."

Daniel had shot consecutive 69s to share the first-round lead and hold a two-stoke advantage over Amy Alcott after 36 holes.

Alcott matched the 70 on the third round for a 210 to tie veteran Kathy Whitworth, who shot a third-round 69, at 212.

With its $55,000 first prize, the Dinah Shore has been boosted into major status this year joing the Women's U.S. Open, their LPGA Championship and the Peter Jackson Classic in Canada.

Daniel, in her fifth year on the tour, has never won a major championship. Alcott, from Santa Monica, Calif., has catured two.

Asked her feelings when Daniel hit into the water, Alcott replied, "I certainly didn't want Beth to make an eagle. She was playing super and not making any mistakes, but if you miss a fairway here, it's tough to make par."

Par over the 6,265-yard Mission Hills Country Club is 36-36—72.

By the end of three rounds only Daniel, Alcott, and Whitworth were under par.

In fourth position came Janet Coles at 215. Tied at 216 were Nancy Lopez with 71 on her third round and Susie McAllister with a 74.

Walton Passes Breakers To Victory Over Stallions

Wide receiver Ron Frederick of the Birmingham Stallions (82) hangs onto a pass reception as he is caught from behind by Woodrow Wilson of the Boston Breakers in the first half of their USFL game in Boston Saturday. BOSTON (AP) — Johnnie Walton threw two touchdown passes in the first 5½ minutes and Tim Mazzetti kicked two field goals as the Boston Breakers rolled to their fourth consecutive United States Football League victory, 27-16 over the Birmingham Stallions Saturday.

The game drew 10,976 fans — about half of Nickerson Field's capacity — on a sunny, 50-degree day.

Birmingham, 2-3, scored in the second quarter on a 2-yard run by Cornelius Quarles and a 22-yard field goal by Scott Norwood, and trailed 20-10 at halftime. Two more Norwood field goals cut Boston's lead to 20-16 with 9:50 left in the game.

But Walton then led the Breakers, 4-1, on a 10-play, 75-yard march capped by a 2-yard touchdown run by Tony Davis with 3:52 remaining.

On Boston's first possession, Walton fired the ball along the line of scrimmage to wide receiver Nolan Franz, who scampered down the right side behind three blockers for a 26-yard touchdown.

Woodrow Wilson intercepted Bob Lane's pass on Birmingham's first series, but Boston's Joe Restic had to punt from his own 31. The kick hit Birmingham's Johnny Dirden in the back and M.L. Carter recovered for the Breakers at the Stallions' 12.

This time, Walton threw to Richard Crump in the backfield, and the running back raced 12 yards to put Boston ahead 14-0. Mazzetti kicked field goals of 42 and 23 yards in the final minute of the first half, extending his string of successful kicks to nine.

Yaz Looking To End Long Baseball Career In Style

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — It's been 22 years since he had to pull off one of the toughest acts in baseball history, as a youngster replacing Ted Williams in left field for the Boston Red Sox.

Now, like an actor completing a record run on Broadway, Carl Yastrzemski figures to exit with grace, to applause and hurrahs.

But Yastrzemski is trying not to think of how crowds will react around the American League this year as he winds up his amazing career.

"True, this is my final season, but I'm not thinking of it that way," he said while nearing the end of yet another spring training. "Next year at this time I'll probably be fishing somewhere. Right now, though, I'm treating this the same as any other year.

"That means another year of hard work, trying to win another pennant. This team has a chance to win and I have to be ready to help."

He will be 44 on Aug. 22, but Yastrzemski appears much younger as he pushes himself in preparation for his 23rd major league season. The body in the No. 8 uniform is muscular, harder than it was in 1961 when he broke in. But even Yaz knows it can only take so much more.

"It hasn't been easy for me all these years," he said. "I've had to work year-round, especially the last eight or 10 years. If I hadn't, I'd be fishing today instead of getting ready for another baseball season.

"The game has treated me fine and, in return, I've tried to give much of myself to it. However, everything hasn't come easy. For instance, my fielding came naturally. I think I was a born fielder, whether I played left field, first base or at shortstop, where I started as a kid in the Red Sox' farm system."

Yastrzemski is the only American League player to reach both 3,000 hits (3,318) and 400 homers (442). He also ranks among leaders in most offensive categories, and has a career batting average of.286

"Hitting, though, has been a lot of work," he said. "I've had to make many adjustments over the years and I've worked my butt off to become a better hitter. I've often even awakened at night from a dream about hitting."

This spring, after consulting with Williams and others, Yastrzemski is working to get more hip action into his swing.

"Ted said it's something he had to do to compensate for age - near the end of his career," he said. "And of course, I've had my original teacher and adviser, my dad, giving me advice. He's told me for years to just try to hit hard line drives. He's still telling me. That's another reason I'm still around."

If he plays in 110 games this year, Yaz will become baseball's all-time leader in games played. Hank Aaron leads with 3,298 games, followed by Yastrzemski with 3,189. Pete Rose, still going strong for the Philadelphia Phillies, is right behind with 3,099.

Lopez, Knight Expect Child

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Professional golfer Nancy Lopez revealed Saturday that she and her husband, professional baseball player Ray Knight, are expecting a child in November.

Lopez made her announcement on national television, saying, "I'm really happy and excited about the whole thing."

She and the Houston Astros' infielder were married last Oct. 25 in Pelham, Ga.

Nancy said she hoped to continue on the women's golf tour until July and then resume playing next year.

"I feel great," she said and then explained why she was making the announcement now.

"Some people were saying 'Nancy lost some weight, but she seems to be gaining it back.'"

Player's Parent Faces Charge

BURLINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — The parent of a Cummings High School athlete has been charged with punching the Burlington school's baseball coach in the mouth during a game with Western Alamance High School.

Burlington Police Lt. Jerry Garner said coach Frank Mensch charged William Eddie Wrenn Jr. of Burlington with assault. Mensch said he was hit in the mouth and suffered two loosened teeth, Garner said.

The alleged punch occurred after Mensch benched Wrenn's son, Hank, in the fifth inning when Cummings was losing 7-2, Garner said. The younger Wrenn is a junior at the high school.

Mensch said it was the first time in 13 years of coaching a parent has hit him.

Cummings later won the game 8-7, but for a while players were making numerous errors and mistakes in judgment, the 37-year-old coach said, "so I made some changes." Several players were taken out of the game, including Wrenn's son who was playing outfield, Mensch said.

Mensch said he regretted the incident and parents usually do not get belligerent at Cummings baseball games. He said his decision to take out a warrant was "an administrative move" but would not elaborate.

Burlington School Superintendent Jim Surratt said Friday he discussed Tuesday's incident with the coach and told him to decide about filing a warrant. Surratt also told Mensch if he did take out a warrant, the school board would provide legal help.

Alabama, Auburn Hold Scrimmages

By The Associated Press

The Alabama and Auburn football teams held their first full-scale scrimmages Saturday, and both squads were plagued by the same problem — sloppy offense.

"We found out what we thought we would," said Alabama Coach Ray Perkins. "This early in the year, the defense is ahead of the offense. We didn't really know what to expect in terms of our offense, but it made the mistakes we thought it might — those no-no things.

"It was not a kind of day to throw the ball and from the first snap, the offense stopped itself every way you can find — by interception, fumble and penalty. We lost the center snap four times and those are things you have early, but must eliminate later."

Auburn Coach Pat Dye also had problems with his offense, but he liked what his secondary did during the second day of spring training for the Tigers.

Tennis League Finishes Half

The USTF/Michelob Light League tennis sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department completed the first half of its season Saturday with three matches.

In the first match, played at River Birch Tennis Center, the Court Jesters downed the Lobsters, 3-2. In the second match, also at River Birch, the Greenville Tennis Association defeated Burroughs Wellcome, 4-1.

The final match, played in Washington, saw the Washington Netbirds roll over Greenville Country Club, 5-0.

Standings at the midpoint of the season are as follows:

Washington Netbirds	4	1
Court Jesters	4	1

Yates Gets Cinncinatti Position

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tony Yates, a star on the University of Cincinnati national championship basketball teams of the 1960s, was hired Saturday as head basketball coach to revive the school's sagging program.

Yates, 45, succeeds Ed Badger, fired after the 1982-83 season following the Metro Conference tournament. The Bearcats finished 11-17 overall and 1-12 in the Metro last season, Badger's fifth at Cincinnati. His composite records were 68-71 overall and 21-45 in the Metro.

Yates was born in Lawrenceburg, Ind., and attended high school in Cincinnati. He was a guard on the UC teams that won the NCAA tournament in 1961 and 1962 and lost in the championship game to Loyola of Chicago the next year.

He was an assistant coach at UC during 1971-74 and has been an assistant at the University of Illinois for the past nine years.

Babe Ruth, with 10 hits in 16 at bats, batted .625, a record, in the 1928 World Series between the Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals.

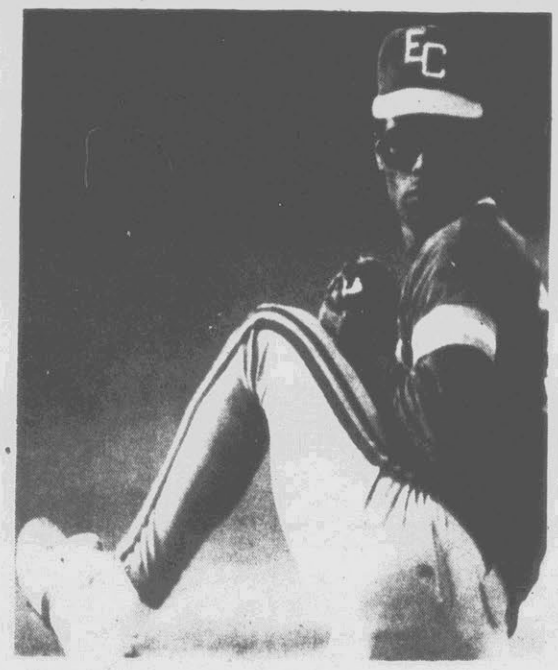
Davidson Loses Heartbreaker, 1-0



Intensity
East Carolina sophomore pitcher Bob Davidson looks homeward with intensity as he delivers a pitch against UNC-Wilmington Friday. Davidson allowed only three hits in the game, but got little offensive help from his teammates as he and the Pirates went down to a 1-0 decision to UNC-Wilmington. (Reflector Photo by Katie Zernhelt)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

There wasn't a whole lot more Bob Davidson could have done. He pitched the best game of the 1983 baseball season for East Carolina, allowing only one run on three hits — two of them extremely cheap — and still came away on the short end of the stick.

For the Pirate sophomore, it was his second loss in just three decisions this spring despite twice that many appearances. And it came as the Pirates suffered their second shutout loss in three games, 1-0, at the hands of UNC-Wilmington Friday afternoon.

"That's the best he's thrown this year," a disappointed ECU coach Hal Baird said. "Their guy threw a super game, too, but not like Bobby's. He really deserved to win, but we just couldn't get anything going with the bats. I guess it just wasn't in the cards."

While UNC-W got only three hits off Davidson, his Pirate teammates were picking up only four off Seahawk hurler Carl Willis, who bumped his record to 5-2 on the year.

Going into this week, the Pirates had a 74-game scoring streak going for them, but after gaining a Monday victory over Baptist College in Charleston, they were shut out 1-0 by the Buccaneers on Tuesday. Then, after squeezing past UNC-Wilmington on the Seahawk field Wednesday, the Pirates suffered their second shutout in three games Friday.

It marked the first time since 1979, when the Pirates suffered shutouts on six occasions, that ECU has been blanked twice in a season.

"We played good defense, but I guess there weren't that many tough plays," Baird said. "Maybe our bats will come around. We hit the ball well (in Wilmington) but today was one of the best games I've seen pitched against us.

"It's just a shame that we couldn't get some runs for Bobby. You play well enough to win and pitch well enough to win and still don't get it."

Davidson, who walked one and hit one, struck out 12 batters along the way — every Seahawk he faced except number nine batter Bobby Reynolds, who, ironically, was both the man he hit and the man he walked.

The only run of the game came in the fourth inning when Chris Cubbage led off the frame with a homer to left field — at that time the only hit off Davidson and just the second baserunner.

No other Seahawk reached until the seventh, when Mike Antle reached on an error to open the frame, but died at first.

In the eighth, with one away, Gary Hall beat out a slow roller to short by half-a-step for just the second hit off Davidson, who then walked Reynolds to put men at first and second. Following a strikout, John Hallow made a diving stab of a line shot off the bat of Cubbage — the defensive play of the day.

Antle followed up in the ninth with just the third Seahawk hit, a high hopper in front of home that saw him reach before the ball came down.

East Carolina counldn't seem to get anything going offensively, however. The Pirates got men on base in the first and second innings on base hits, only to see them cut down as the next batters grounded right back to Willis to start double plays.

Todd Evans singled in the fourth with two away, but got no further. David Wells reached on an error on the fifth and was sacrificed up, but the next two batters fanned.

In the seventh, Wells singled, but was then forced at second to end the inning.

The best chance the Pirates had came in the eighth. Tony Salmond reached on an error to open the inning, moving to second on a sacrifice and to third on a ground out. Kelly Robinette then grounded to short, ending that threat.

Illustrating the fact that the Pirates weren't hitting the ball well was the fact that only two of the 27 outs of the game came in the outfield.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 14-7 on the season, while UNC-W climbs to 12-10.

East Carolina travels to Chapel Hill on Monday to face North Carolina, then returns home on Tuesday to host Old Dominion.

"We have a tough week at home," Baird said. "I was really hopeful that we could take this one to get off to a good start."

Jaguars Run By Conley, 8-1

HOLLYWOOD — Farmville Central jumped on D.H. Conley for four runs in the second inning and went on to record an 8-1 baseball victory Friday afternoon.

The loss was only the second in seven outings for the Vikings, while Farmville was winning just its second game in five starts.

Farmville scored its first run in the opening inning. Billy Godley reached on an error and stole second. Wade Corbett then singled him across.

Conley came back with a run in the bottom of the first to tie it up. Steve Mills singled and Todd Rouse walked. Mike Gurkins then singled, scoring Mills for a 1-1 deadlock.

But that tie didn't last long as Farmville quickly came back to score four times in the second inning to put the game away. Roy Roman led off with a single and Tim Askew followed with a hit, moving Roman to third. Askew then stole second and both runners crossed the plate on Bobby Godley's double. Andy Daniels walked and Corbett singled to score Godley. Bobby Carraway reached on an error, allowing Daniels to score for a 5-1 lead.

Farmville later added two more in the fifth inning.

Corbett and Askew led the Jaguar hitting with three each, while Gurkins had two hits to pace Conley.

Both teams were to return to action on Saturday, playing in the Rose Easter Tournament.

Panthers Nip Rams By 6-5

BETHEL — North Pitt pushed over a run in the bottom of the sixth and held on for a 6-5 baseball victory over Greene Central Friday afternoon.

The win was the fourth in seven starts for the Panthers.

Greene Central grabbed the initial lead in the contest, scoring three times in the top of the fifth. Tommy Goff led off with a single and Chris Suggs reached on an error. James Moore walked, loading the bases and Richie Chase singled to score Goff and Suggs. Moore then stole home for a 3-0 lead.

In the bottom of the inning, however, North Pitt rallied for five runs to take a 5-3 lead. Daniel Keel walked and William Rollins doubled. Gentry Snead reached on an error, loading the bases. Alvin Grimes then singled in Keel and Rollins and Lee Manning's double plated two more. Greg Briley followed with a single scoring Manning with the fifth run.

Greene Central then rallied for two in the top of the sixth to tie it up.

North Pitt came back with a run in the bottom of the frame, however, taking the win. Ken Whitehurst doubled and Keel singled. An error then allowed Whitehurst to score.

Moore and Chase each had two hits to lead Greene Central's effort, while no one had more than one hit for the Panthers.

Greene Central was to return to action Saturday in the Wilson Optimists Tournament, while North Pitt returns to action Tuesday in the Roanoke Easter Tournament.

Ayden-Grifton Rolls To 10-3 Win Over Firebirds

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton evened its Eastern Carolina Conference baseball record with a 10-3 victory over Southern Nash on Friday.

The Chargers pushed over eight runs in the second inning to account for all they would need.

Joey Kennedy led off the frame with a walk and Roger Moye slammed a home run for a 2-0 lead.

Terry Garrett kept it going with a single and was sacrificed up. Shannon Peede walked and Jackie Conway's single scored Garrett. Gene Johnson then singled to score both Peede and Conway. Doug Coley reached on an error and a passed ball let both runners advance. Tyrone Gay then walked to load them up, and a single by Kennedy scored Johnson and Coley. Gay then stole third and an error on the play let him score.

Ayden-Grifton added single runs in the the fourth and sixth innings for the ten-run total. Southern Nash scored once in the third and got two more in the seventh.

Johnson and Kennedy each had three hits for Ayden-Grifton, while Moye and Garrett each added two. No one had more than one for Southern Nash.

The Chargers, now 5-2 overall and 1-1 in ECC play, were to return to action Saturday afternoon in the Wilson Optimists Baseball Tournament.

Rose Outlasts Rocky Mount, 16-14

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

ROCKY MOUNT — No doubt Rocky Mount Gryphon baseball fans and players are still wondering what happened Friday at Municipal Stadium.

The Gryphons held a 12-5 lead after five innings of a scheduled seven, but a bases-loaded double by Rose centerfielder Randy Warren in the top of the eighth and catcher Curtis Evans' pinpoint throw to nail Hank Jones at second in the bottom of the inning gave the Rampants a 16-14 Big East 4-A Conference victory. Rose had tied the game at 14-all in the bottom of the seventh.

Eddie Coats, reinserted on the mound after starting and being relieved, got Kenny Kirkland to pop out to the infield opening the eighth and snared a line drive by Evans for the second out, but he got behind and walked Bill Johnson. Traye Fuqua laced a single to center, and Bobby Buie drew his fifth walk of the game to load the bases.

Warren's fly ball barely eluded the Rocky Mount rightfielder to allow Mike Walsh — running for Johnson — and Buie to score.

Mike Kinley, who came on in relief for the Rampants in the fifth, handed out walks to Hank Jones and Greg Luther in the bottom of the inning. But on the 0-2 pitch to Neil Avent, Jones wandered too far from second and Evans threw nailed him for the first out. Kinley got Avent and Eddie Coats on harmless pop flies to end the game.

"The pick-off at second was the deciding factor," said Rose coach Ronald Vincent, whose team is now 3-0 in its rain-shortened campaign. "It relaxed our pitcher and took away the chance to bunt the man into easy scoring position. Kinley had just pitched Tuesday, and we didn't want to use him.

"Warren's double really came at time when we needed a boost."

Rocky Mount jumped on Rose starter Bill Owens for five runs in the bottom of the first, plated three against Kenny Kirkland in the second, a single run in the fourth and three more in the fifth before the Rampants' sticks came alive.

"The first few innings were typical of an early season game," Vincent said. "A few mistakes and some walks cost us early runs, but they showed a lot of heart fighting back the way they did."

Rose had plated three runs in the fifth, but the big inning was the sixth as six Rampants scored to cut the gap to 12-11. Eric Woodworth led off the inning with an infield single and advanced when Coats, who started on the mound for Rocky Mount, walked the next two batters to fill the bases.

Reliever Barry Butler walked Johnson to score Woodworth, then struck out Fuqua for the first out. A base-on-balls to Buie plated Kirkland. A strikeout by Warren was followed by an infield single by Rudy Stalls that scored Evans and Johnson. Stalls advanced on a single to right by Kinley and scored from second on a single to left by Woodworth — the tenth Rampant batter of the inning. Butler got out of the inning on a called third strike to Kirkland.

Rocky Mount retaliated with a pair of runs in the bottom half of the inning, as leadoff hitter Danny Isbell walked, moved to third on a sacrifice by Shelton Grant and a wild pitch by Kinley. Cedric Bullock drew the second walk of the frame to put runners at the corners, and a long two-out single by Neil Avent scored both.

Evans opened the seventh with an infield single and took second on an errant throw by the Gryphon shortstop. A passed ball moved Evans to third, and Fuqua and Buie walked to load the bases. Walks to Warren and Stalls scored Evans and Fuqua, and a fielder's choice by Kinley allowed Buie to cross home.

Kinley walked Rod Batts and Isbell with two outs in the bottom half of the seventh, but struck out Grant on a 3-2 pitch to get out of the inning.

In all, the Rose pitchers gave up 12 walks while the Rocky Mount crew issued 18.

Warren drove in six runs on three hits and a base-on-balls, while Stalls batted in four with three singles and a walk. Fuqua scored four runs for the Rampants, having reached base on a pair of singles and a pair of walks.

Barry Butler drove in four runs for the Gryphons on a single, a walk and a sacrifice. Avent went four-out-of-five at the plate for Rocky Mount.

Rose will open play in the Pitt Easter Tournament Monday at 5 p.m. agaisnt Farmville Central.

Jags' Hobgood Signs Golf Grant

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central golfer Gary Hobgood has signed a grant-in-aid with Campbell University, it has been announced.

"Gary is one of the top players in the state and he is our number one recruit this year," Camel golf coach Jerry Smith said. "He's got as good credentials as any player I've signed and we think he'll be an outstanding freshman for us.

Gary Hobgood

Hobgood, 17, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hobgood of Farmville. He has been the number one player on the Farmville Central High School golf team the past three years and a member of the squad for four years. He has helped the Jaguars to three consecutive conference championships while being named all-conference in his sophomore and junior seasons.

A one-handicap golfer, Hobgood has consistantly shot in the 70s during his high school career. Later this spring, he will be looking to qualify for the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's state tournament for the third straight year.

Hobgood has participated in tournaments since the age of 10. Since that time, he has captured numerous junior invitational titles throughout Eastern North Carolina.

"I think he will continue to improve," Smith said. "We're especially pleased because he's a fine student-athlete, the type we feel like will help us reache the athletic and academic goals our team is striving to reach."

In addition to golf, Hobgood was also a member of the Eastern Carolina Conference's co-championship basketball team at Farmville Central this past winter.

Sampson Not Watching Race

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Virginia's Ralph Sampson, who has intently followed basketball races throughout his career, is not currently interested in the race between Houston, Cleveland and Indiana to acquire his services in the National Basketball Association.

"Right now I'm interested in achieving my diploma and that's all I'm concerned about," Sampson said Friday as won the Associated Press' Player of the Year award for the third time. "I'm just enjoying what is happening now and going around accepting these awards."

While Sampson travels about receiving accolades, the three pro teams are winding up poor seasons and will soon see who gets the first pick in the NBA draft.

Houston has already clinched the Western Conference cellar and would get to pick first if Cleveland finished last in the Eastern Conference because the Rockets own the Cavaliers' first-round pick.

But if the Pacers edge out Cleveland for last place in the East, a coin toss would decide who gets to select Sampson.

"It's not my choice anyway as to where I get drafted in the NBA, so I'm not going to worry about it," Sampson said.

The Rockets and Pacers desperately need to acquire a big man of Sampson's stature to rescue sinking franchises. Houston traded Moses Malone, the league's most valuable player last year, to Philadelphia in exchange for Cleveland's first-round pick — which Philadelphia had previously acquired — and Caldwell Jones.

LeFlore Waived

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The Chicago White Sox requested waivers Saturday on outfielder Ron LeFlore for the purposes of giving him his unconditional release.

LeFlore, who signed as a free agent after the 1980 season, was cut from the squad six days ago but was placed on the suspended list pending the outcome of his Chicago trial on drug and weapons charges. If he clears waivers, he will be free to make a deal with any major league team.

Also on Saturday, the American League team cut four players to reduce its roster to 27 players, two over the opening-day limit, and gave a contract to outfielder Rusty Kuntz, who had been working out with the club.

In Women's NCAA Finals

Louisiana Tech, USC Collide

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — No. 1 Louisiana Tech and second-ranked Southern California have advanced to Sunday's finals in the second NCAA Division I women's basketball tournament on the strength of little guards passing to big shooters.

The Lady Techsters, 31-1, dominated Old Dominion's fourth-ranked Lady Monarchs 71-55 in Friday night's semifinals because 5-foot-4 guard Kim Mulkey was able to consistently get the ball inside to 6-foot-3 center Janice Lawrence, who scored a game-high 23 points.

The victory gives the Lady Techsters a shot at a third straight national title. Louisiana Tech won the first NCAA tourney on this same Norfolk Scope floor a year ago.

Southern California's Women of Troy, 30-2, were sparked by the drives of 5-foot-5 freshman guard Rhonda Windham in their 81-57 romp over eighth-ranked Georgia, 27-7, in the other semifinal.

Windham got the ball to 6-foot-3 twins Paula and Pam McGee and 6-foot-2 freshman Cheryl Miller.

Pam McGee scored eight points in a 12-point second-half spurt that put the game out of Georgia's reach and wound up with a total of 19. Miller scored 16, Paula McGee 14 and each grabbed 14 rebounds.

"Rhonda is a very bright young lady," Southern California Coach Linda Sharp said of Windham, who scored 10 points and had 14 assists. "She knows what she has to do and where she has to take the ball."

Louisiana Tech co-coach Leon Barmore credited the play of Mulkey and 5-foot-9 senior guard Jennifer White.

"I think our guards did an excellent job tonight of pressuring up the floor," he said. "I certainly think they'll be a key for us" in the finals.

Barmore noted neither Mulkey nor White committed a turnover. Tech had 14 turnovers while Old Dominion was plagued with 26.

"That killed us," said Old Dominion Coach Marianne Stanley.

Old Dominion's 6-foot-8 center, Anne Donovan, held to eight points in the first half, broke open for a short spurt and had 10 points in one six-minute period. She finished with 22.

The game ended her four-year career as one of the most dominant players in women's college basketball and left Old Dominion with a 29-6 mark.

She played on a national championship team as a freshman in 1980, when the Lady Monarchs won the AIAW title for the second straight year. Louisiana Tech won the AIAW title the following year, then added the first NCAA crown.

Barmore said he is looking forward to the challenge from Southern California since the two finalists "were the best two teams" in the country during the season.

The Trojans and the Techsters met twice this past year with each team winning once.

"I certainly can't see us running away with them, so I hope it's close," Barmore said.

Sharp said her players had been hoping for a shot at the defending champions.

"I think they feel very confident right now," she said.

I Got It!

Tampa Bay Looking For Record USFL Crowd

By The Associated Press

Officials of the Tampa Bay Bandits were hopeful that the largest crowd in the brief history of the United States Football League would turn out Saturday night to see if the league's only unbeaten team can continue its winning ways.

The record crowd in the USFL's first month was the 53,370 who turned out in East Rutherford, N.J., two weeks ago to see Herschel Walker's home debut for the New Jersey Generals.

The Bandits spoiled the day for Walker and the Generals and were trying for their fifth consecutive triumph when they entretained the Chicago Blitz.

"The way it looks now, I'd have to say Tampa Bay is the dominant team in the league. We are certainly going to be tested," says Chicago Coach George Allen, whose own club was touted as a preseason powerhouse but has split its first four games and is tied for second place in the Central Division, two games behind the Bandits.

Saturday's only other game was an afternoon match in Boston where the Breakers played host to the Birmingham Stallions. Sunday afternoon, the schedule finds Washington at Philadelphia and Oakland at Los Angeles, with New Jersey at Arizona for a night contest. The weekend slate winds up Monday night with Denver at Michigan.

"Maybe this is the best thing that could have happened," he said. "If we had blown them out 45-10, our players might have gotten a big head and lazy for Chicago."

Regardless of the weather in Boston, the stands will be "dry" when the Breakers play the Stallions at Boston University's Nickerson Field.The Boston Licensing Board has suspended the university's license to serve alcohol at athletic events for two weeks beginning today.

The suspension was ordered because BU violated its club license at the Breakers' game two weeks ago by making alcohol available to all fans. BU's club license permits serving alcohol to faculty, but it does not have a common victual or entertainment license permitting it to serve and entertain fans.

On March 20, the 18,340 fans were given cards making them club members for a day and entitling them to buy alcohol during the game.

The Breakers, tied with Philadelphia atop the Atlantic Division, have won their last two games in the fourth quarter by capitalizing on opponents' mistakes. But Birmingham Coach Rollie Dotsch says the Breakers have more than luck.

"They're able to score a lot of points," he says. "Their running backs have done an outstanding job. They're balanced. They can run. They can throw. They can possess the ball on you."

Birmingham, on the other hand, has allowed the second fewest points and fourth fewest yards in the USFL.

"Their defense is certainly the strong part of their team," says Boston Coach Dick Coury. "Their defense is a lot like ours and Denver's, a very physical, aggressive defensive team that doesn't give up until the whistle is blown."

The USFL is still waiting for Walker to pile up some of the yardage he did in three years at the University of Georgia, where he amassed 5,259 yards and needed only 824 to become college football's all-time rushing king when he signed with the Generals.

"He's just waiting to explode," says Arizona Coach Doug Shively. "I just hope it isn't against us."

Despite his slow start — his best game was last week when he rushed for 97 yards on 21 carries against Boston — Walker goes into Sunday night's game fourth in USFL rushing statistics. Philadelphia's Kelvin Bryant, the leader, has 454 yards on 91 carries to just 261 on 69 tries for Walker.

"Before his career's over, he'll be marked down with (O.J.) Simpson and (Jim) Brown and the rest of the great ones," Shively said. "He's that good."

Coach Chuck Fairbanks of the winless Generals says one of Walker's problems is that "he's doing too much footwork; maybe he wants to make the big play."

Sonic Owner Isn't Pleased

SEATTLE (AP) — The tentative agreement reached this week between National Basketball Association management and the players' union is an indisputable victory for the players, says Sam Schulman, owner of the Seattle SuperSonics.

"The union made no concessions of any substance. When we go into negotiations, we deal from weakness and make concessions. This is a repeat of what has happened each time in collective bargaining. We are shutting our eyes to reality," said Schulman.

Schulman cast the lone no vote on the tentative agreement "mostly on principle."

"I don't know if the rest of the owners know what they've voted on," Schulman said from his Los Angeles office after the owners voted 22-1 Thursday in favor of accepting the new agreement with the NBA Players Association.

"I think it's irresponsible to vote on a proposal involving millions of dollars that they haven't studied," Schulman said. "No intelligent person can take a vote on such a proposal from a telephone conversation that described it very briefly and sketchily as I had, plus a briefing the night before from Zollie Volchok (the Sonics general manager)."

Schulman said the possibility of a strike was an intimidating factor.

"There's no question Larry Fleisher (the players' association chief counsel) had this whole scenario mapped out. I even described what he would do last summer. He delayed and delayed this thing until now. He took two months to study our books, then said that up to 10 teams were in trouble, but he didn't care. Then he cut off negotiations after the All-Star break and said there would be a strike April 2. The whole scenario was obvious to an 11-year-old.

"We should have never started the season without a contract. But we remain ignorant or don't face reality. I'm not going to try to talk to (fellow owners) because it's already been voted on. There's nothing to talk about."

But Schulman said he's studying what legal recourse he might have as an owner.

"If there are ways and means of preventing it from happening, I'll hear from my attorneys."

His main complaint is with the salary cap in the contract. Beginning in 1984-85, teams will have a maximum amount each can spend on player salaries and benefits. But there would be exceptions — such as for teams already spending over the amount — and this is what bothers Schulman.

"What does a cap mean if you're allowed to go over it?" he asked. "I think Fleisher has gone a long way toward doing exactly what he set out to do. If Jack Sikma becomes a free agent and someone can still give him $2 million, what is accomplished? The agreement does make for fewer teams capable of doing that, but less teams doesn't mean anything. They haven't eliminated the threat.

"Historically, it's taken only one owner to destroy salary structure, and that possibility still exists."

The ball must clearly leave a player's hand on a shot before the expiration of the 24-second clock in the NBA.

Each National Basketball Association team must have a minimum of eight players dressed for a league game.

Southern Nash Nips Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — The Ayden-Grifton Chargers battled for four runs in the bottom of the seventh but left the bases loaded as they lost to Southern Nash 9-6 in Friday softball action.

Joyce Artis led off the inning for the Chargers with a double, moved to third on walks to Cathy Tyndall and Michelle Sullivan and scored on another walk to Rountree. Linda Brown singled in Sullivan, and a double by Jackie Garris scored Rountree and Brown.

Southern Nash scored three runs in the fourth to insure the victory, as Robbins and Vaughn singled and Hall singled to scroe Robbins. A triple by Morgan drove cleared the bases.

The Chargers, now 0-2, remain idle until April 12 when they host Greene Central.

Mr. October Ready A Little Earlier

By The Associated Press

The calendar says April and Mr. October is ready.

Reggie Jackson, who is best known for his postseason heroics in front of big crowds, gave an indication that he's set for the opening of the baseball season next week when he slammed his first homer of the spring on Friday night. The two-run shot in the sixth inning off Bob Welch followed a double by Brian Downing and put the Angels on top to stay in their 7-4 exhibition victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

An Anaheim Stadium crowd of 57,408 saw the Angels win their 11th game in their last 12 and the Dodgers suffer their sixth straight loss.

"An old geezer like me senses when the season's coming," said Jackson. "It just happens like this when you have enough experience.

"Besides, it helps to just get some at-bats under your belt," added Jackson who has suffered from sore calves this spring and had been to bat only 25 times before Friday night's.

Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda was ejected from the game in the second inning by plate umpire Daryl Cousins for objecting to ball-and-strike calls.

Elsewhere, rookie John Shelby hit an inside-the-park homer with one out in the 10th to give the Orioles a 3-2 victory over Texas. It was the third hit of the day for Shelby, who scored all three Baltimore runs. Shelby has hit .444 this spring.

Mike Flanagan became the first Orioles pitcher to go seven innings this spring, giving up just four hits.

San Francisco pitchers Mike Krukow, Renie Martin, Andy McGaffigan and Gary Lavelle combined for a seven-hit, 2-0 shutout of the Chicago Cubs. Mark Bradley, acquired by the Mets from the Dodgers earlier this week in a trade, homered in the seventh inning to boost the New York Mets over Cincinnati 3-2. The New York Yankees, whose pitchers had a 30-inning scoreless string ended the previous day, were raked for 19 hits in Boston's 12-4 triumph that stopped a six-game New York winning streak.Jim Rice hit his seventh homer of the spring and Dave Stapleton had three hits for the Red Sox.

Claudell Washington's two-run homer in the third gave Atlanta a 3-1 win over Houston, which now has lost seven straight and 15 of 18.

Montreal's Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer to pace the Expos over St. Louis 5-4.

Rookie Ron Kittle and Marv Foley each had an RBI single in the ninth to carry the White Sox to their baseball-leading 19th victory of the spring, 7-6 over Kansas City. Kittle and another rookie, Lorenzo Gray, each had three hits for Chicago.

The Pittsburgh Pirates erupted for five runs in the seventh to erase a 6-5 deficit and beat Detroit 13-6. The rally was capped by a bases-loaded pinch double by Richie Hebner.

Four-time Cy Young winner Steve Carlton — who will open the season for the Phillies next Tuesday — gave up one hit in his three-inning stint and Bo Diaz broke up a scoreless duel with a run-scoring double in the sixth as Philadelphia downed Toronto 3-0.

Oakland's Danny Goodwin singled leading off an eight-run sixth and added a three-run homer, while Mike Woodard ripped an RBI single and then stole second, third and home on consecutive pitches in a 12-3 romp over Cleveland. Bill Krueger pitched six scoreless innings for the A's.

At Las Vegas, the San Diego Padres and Seattle Mariners played a 1-1 tie before 13,878 people, the largest crowd ever to see a baseball game in the state of Nevada. The game was played at the home of the Padres' AAA farm team and was called after 10 innings because of travel commitments.

He's No Fool

New York Yankee manager Billy Martin eyes his dugout after his players come off the field in the sixth inning of Friday's game with the Boston Red Sox. The Sox slammed the Yankees, 12-4 with 19 hits as the Yankees also had some shoddy field play. (AP Laserphoto)

This Prophet Says It's State

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The North Carolina State Wolfpack says they have drawn a lot of inspiration in their run for the national championship from a Michigan fan who has struggled back from cancer and two car accidents.

James M. Letherer decided underdog North Carolina State would win the NCAA basketball championship when the tournament pairings were first announced.

When the NCAA pairings were announced, Letherer studied the field and took off for Corvallis, Ore., to root for his adopted team.

"I met him before the Pepperdine game," said N.C. State coach Jim Valvano. "He introduced himself, told me he was pulling for State, and said we would beat Pepperdine in a game we had no business winning."

N.C. State rallied from a six-point deficit in the second overtime to beat Pepperdine.

"Then, he said we will go on to win it all in Albuquerque," Valvano said. "It gives me cold chills to think about it."

But Letherer explained that he sees miracles as a way of life.

"You see the world through a different perspective when you see it from a wheelchair and on a pair of crutches," the Saginaw, Mich., native said. "You look for things that happen to the underdogs, the long shots, those who have to beat the odds just to get the little things that people take for granted."

The Wolfpack went on to shock Nevada-Las Vegas, Utah and Atlantic Coast Conference foe Virginia to reach the Final Four in Albuquerque.

And Letherer stayed with the team to see N.C. State battle Georgia Saturday in the NCAA semifinals.

"I'm not charmed," Letherer said. "I don't really know what is going to happen (Saturday). I know situations. I know people. I can read some things in life that a lot of other people don't care about.

"I think State's going to win this thing for people who have enough guts to believe in miracles."

Letherer said he has fought bone cancer since age 7. He lost his right leg at the age of 9 and suffered a paralyzing stroke and extensive injuries after being struck twice by a car.

He uses crutches or a wheelchair to get around but, despite his handicaps, he said he has traveled widely and sailed across the Pacific Ocean. In 1965 he said he marched with Martin Luther King Jr. on the famous civil right treks from Selma, Ala., to Montgomery.

The N.C. State players, who gained a sense of destiny when they beat defending national champion North Carolina and then Virginia in the ACC tournament, call Letherer "Cap'n Jim," and insist he will be with them Monday evening when they cut down the nets after the championship game.

"That guy is incredible," N.C. State guard Dereck Whittenburg said. "People say we are incredible. They don't know nothin' 'til they see this guy."

Guard Sidney Lowe was equally fascinated by Letherer.

"I have never known ayone quite like him," Lowe said. "I have never seen a man so full of life, and he has so much going against him. Just goes to show you that winners are going to be winners no matter what."

Letherer appeared with a newly purchased red vest and matching pompom to greet the Wolfpack in Albuquerque Wednesday night.

"Awesome! I knew you'd be here," Whittenburg said when he saw Letherer. "If you weren't I was going to cut practice 'til I found you."

"That guy may be a key to this tournament, if you believe in this sort of thing," Valvano said.

Nets Sink Philadelphia

By The Associated Press

"The way we played tonight, we could've beaten anybody," said New Jersey Nets Coach Larry Brown.

But it wasn't just anybody the Nets beat Friday night, it was the high-flying Philadelphia 76ers. The score was 111-104, it was the third time in a row New Jersey defeated the Sixers and it spoiled Philadelphia's hopes of setting a National Basketball Association for most victories in a single regular season.

It also clinched a playoff spot for the Nets.

With 60 victories and only nine games remaining, the Sixers can do no better than tie the mark of 69-13 set by the Los Angeles Lakers in 1971-72.

Brown said the key to the Nets' victory over the 60-13 Sixers — New Jersey leads the season series 3-2 with one game left — was rebounding.

"We kept them from hurting us with second shots," he said.

In other NBA action, the Boston Celtics trimmed the Milwaukee Bucks 97-83, the Los Angeles Lakers trounced the New York Knicks 102-88, the Atlanta Hawks nipped the Chicago Bulls 108-107, the Washington Bullets whipped the Indiana Pacers 123-109, the San Antonio Spurs thrashed the Houston Rockets 124-99, the Detroit Pistons downed the Cleveland Cavaliers 120-111, the Utah Jazz defeated the Golden State Warriors 112-108, the Kansas City Kings beat the San Diego Clippers 135-119 and the Seattle SuperSonics turned back the Dallas Mavericks 101-95.

Buck Williams and Mike O'Koren each scored 20 points to lead the Nets over Philadelphia. Julius Erving scored 26 and Moses Malone 22 for the Sixers.

The Nets built a 70-53 lead with 10:45 left in the third quarter and led by 15 with 7:28 remaining in the period.The 76ers then scored 11 straight points and the period ended with New Jersey ahead 86-82. That was as close as the Sixers got.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham complained that New Jersey used illegal zone defenses that were not called by the officials.

"Personally, I saw six of them," he said.

But Brown replied: "We did not play zone. We just pressured them to keep them from getting inside."

Celtics 97, Bucks 83

At Boston, the Celtics broke open a close game with a 15-4 spurt at the start of the fourth quarter and beat Milwaukee behind Robert Parish's 20 points. The Bucks, who were held to a season low of 81 points in their last game, managed their second smallest total. Boston's Larry Bird, who scored a team regular-season record 53 points Wednesday night, was held to 13.

Lakers 102, Knicks 88

At Inglewood, Calif., Norm Nixon scored 16 of his game-high 22 points in the first half as Los Angeles clinched a tie for the Pacific Division crown. The Knicks, who have dropped seven of their last 10 outings, are only one-half game ahead of Atlanta and 1½ in front of Washington in the race for the last two playoffs berths in the Eastern Conference.

Hawks 108, Bulls 107

At Chicago, Atlanta's Johnny Davis, held to three points in the first three periods, popped in a 15-foot jumper to cap a 12-point fourth-quarter outburst that lifted the Hawks over Chicago.The triumph enabled the Hawks to maintain a one-game lead over Washington for the last playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.The Bulls led by as many as 11 points and were ahead 105-100 with 3:47 left before the Hawks pulled it out.Wilkins and Dan Roundfield led Atlanta with 25 points each.

Bullets 123, Pacers 109

At Indianapolis, Rick Mahorn and Don Collins each scored 24 points for Washington. Mahorn paced a late surge by the Bullets after Indiana pulled within 99-94 with 5:45 to play. Billy Knight led Indiana with 23 points.

Spurs 124, Rockets 99

At San Antonio, George Gervin scored 24 points and Artis Gilmore chipped in 21 ... pulled down 17 rebounds to lead the Spurs. San Antonio, which hit 54 percent of its shots, grabbed a season-high 64 rebounds and set a franchise record with 50 defensive rebounds. With the triumph, San Antonio stretched its Midwest Division lead to 7½ games over Denver. Houston's James Bailey scored a game-high 28 points.

Pistons 120, Cavaliers 111

At Pontiac, Mich., Kelly Tripucka pumped in 43 points as Detroit ended a three-game losing streak. With the score tied 91-91, Tripucka hit a basket and Vinnie Johnson followed with another 16 seconds later and the Pistons did not trail again.Terry Tyler added 24 points and Isiah Thomas 22 for the Pistons, while Cleveland rookie John Bagley enjoyed his finest night as a pro with 29.

Jazz 112, Warriors 108

At Salt Lake City, Jeff Wilkins scored 26 points and John Drew added 21 to spark the Jazz.Joe Barry Carroll scored 29 for the Warriors.After Golden State led 15-10, the Jazz ran off 10 straight points and were never headed.

Kings 135, Clippers 119

At San Diego, Ray Williams scored a season-high 36 points to lead Kansas City to its fourth straight victory and sixth in the last seven games.The triumph lifted the Kings within one-half game of Denver in the race for the sixth and final Western Conference playoff spot. Tom Chambers led San Diego with 34 points.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

Outer Banks Fishing Begins — Easter marks the traditional start of the spring fishing season along the North Carolina Outer Banks.

Seven piers, extending from Kitty Hawk south to Hatteras, will welcome anglers next weekend while area marina operators report a brisk business in charter bookings for the month of April.

With no appreciable price increases noted due in part to stabilized fuel costs, the outlook for 1983 is one of optimism.

"All indications are that we are going to have a good season," says outdoor writer Ray Couch of Buxton.

"We've been hurt some up to now because of the tremendous amount of rain we've had," he continues, "but this past winter was mild and that means the bluefish will probably hit here earlier in April than normal. I also expect to see more sea mullet, trout and flounder than we did last year."

Nags Head fishing guide Joe Malat concurs.

"Mid-April to mid-May is the peak time in the spring for blues, channel bass and gray trout," he says, "and I would anticipate that blue fishing will be particularly good this year because last summer we saw an abundance—school after school—of small bluefish in the surf. They should be much bigger by now."

Malat also quickly reminds the blues and channel bass escaping the fisherman's hook in the spring return for a more extended stay in the fall.

The piers are good bets for blues, trout, spot, whiting and flounder, according to Monica Cremia, manager of the Nags Head Fishing Pier, and even more so as water temperatures continue to rise.

"I would also think we would have some good croaker fishing this season," she adds.

Anglers seeking charter boats will find marinas located throughout Dare County. Headboats operate out of Oregon Inlet and the Pirate's Cove Marina.

Judy Coleman, co-owner of Hatteras Harbour Marina, looks for good king mackerel fishing this spring and Oregon Inlet Fishing Center manager Bob Kennry expects, weather permitting, to see catches of big blues and flounder. Offshore charter trips for blue marlin and other large fish increase around the middle of May. Marina operators reported last year's run of tuna as having been excellent.

Six fishing tournaments are scheduled along the outer banks in 1983. For free information, including a "Fishing the Outer Banks" brochure and a directory of accomodations, write the Dare County Tourist Bureau, P.O. Box 399, Manteo, N.C. 27954.

Wildlife Commission Will Stock White Perch in Lake Phelps — North Carolina fishermen will be glad to know that the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission will be stocking white perch in Lake Phelps this spring. Wildlife Fisheries' Biologist Pete Kornegay, stationed in Camden, stated, "Most of the white perch in Lake Phelps were killed during the severe winter of 1980. The cause of the kill was mystery because the water quality factors were normal." Kornegay also said, "It was also unusual that only white perch died. Many northern states have experienced similar and unexplainable winter fish kills."

The Wildlife Commission had hoped the white perch would make a comeback on their own. However, three years after the fish kill, biologists' samplings have shown little, if any, such comeback. Research has shown a tremendous increase in the number of small yellow perch.

White perce will be collected by commission biologists from several tributaries of the Albemarle Sound and then will be transported in large holding tanks to Lake Phelps. This stocking program will take two to three years in order to rebuild a self-supporting white perch population. Kornegay said, "This stocking program will not produce successful white perch fishing overnight in the lake and it will be several years before fishermen will see the benfits of the stocking."

Sampson Player Of The Year; Lewis Is Coach Of The Year

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — For Virginia's Ralph Sampson, Player of the Year trophies came three times in three years.

For Houston's 61-year-old Guy Lewis, Coach of Year honors have come twice during his 27 years with the Cougars.

Both received their honors Friday from The Associated Press in conjunction with the NCAA Final Four basketball championships.

Sampson, who made the Final Four once as a sophomore and never attained his goal of winning the national crown, won the Adolph F. Rupp Trophy as the AP's College Basketball Player of the Year.

Sampson, a 7-foot-4 senior, is the second player in the 12-year history of the Rupp Trophy to win it three times. He also is the first to win it three times in the eight years that it has been presented to the AP Player of the Year.

Bill Walton of UCLA won the Rupp Trophy in 1972, 1973 and 1974.

"I'm thankful for the honor," said Sampson, who averaged 19.1 points and 11.7 rebounds in leading the Cavaliers to a 29-5 record. "It's hard to do with all that talent out there."

Lewis, who previously won the coach award in 1968 with Elvin Hayes on the squad, guided the top-ranked Cougars to a 30-2 record this season heading into today's NCAA semifinal game against No. 2 Louisville.

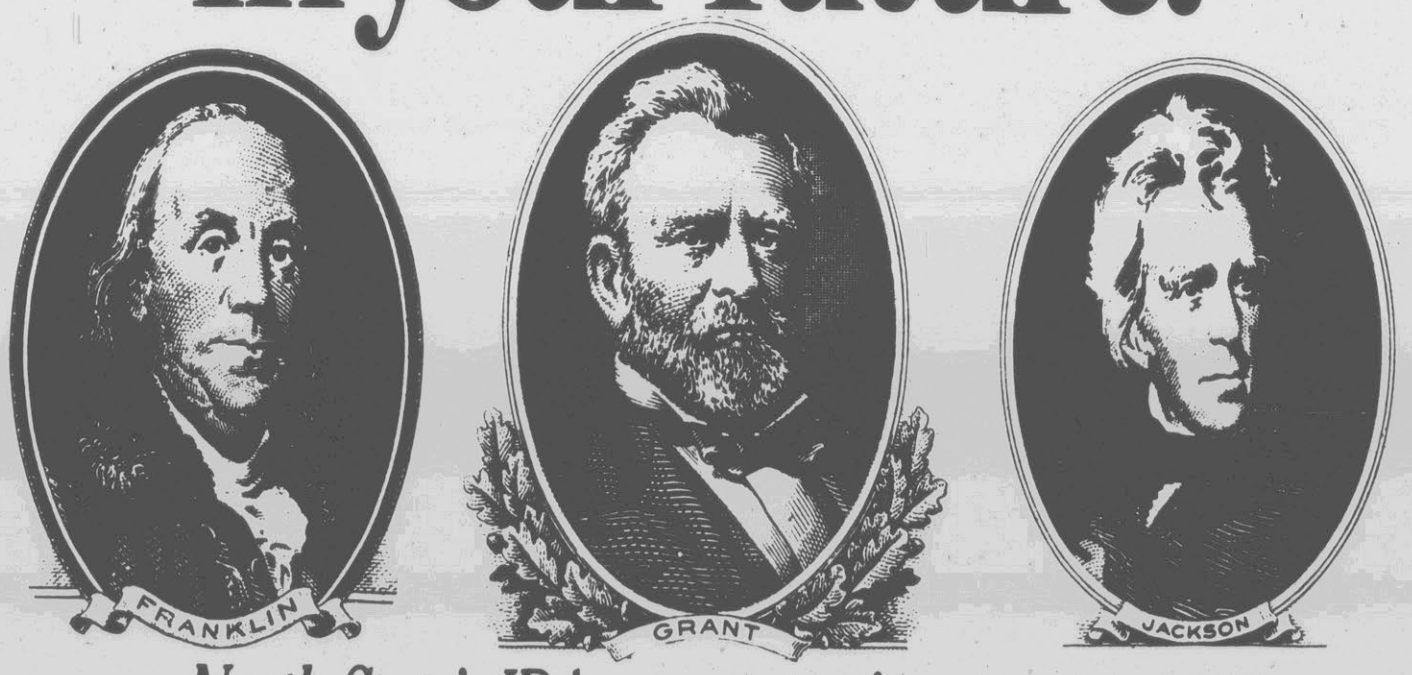
Put more great men in your future.



North State's IRA pays more interest: 11.00%

The real difference between all the available IRAs (Individual Retirement Accounts) is the amount of interest you get paid.

So check around. You'll soon find that North State's IRA pays you more.

And retirement will bring more big bills like Jacksons, Grants and Franklins when you open a North State IRA.

As little as $100 starts an IRA at North State. And even if you already have an IRA someplace else, you can open a new one and start getting North State's higher rates.

As with any IRA, you get tax deductions now (deduct deposits up until April 15 from your 1982 return) and income when you retire. So come in and let us tell you about a North State IRA at the office nearest you.

And while you may think that IRAs look a lot alike right now, a higher-rate North State IRA sure will look better later on.

Because it puts more great men in your future.

You'll get the highest rates with a North State IRA.

*This is the annualized effective yield of North State's fixed rate IRA based on a daily compounding of a nominal rate of 10.44%

Century 21 real estate offices in North Carolina have pledged more than $30,000 in contributions to the 1983 Easter Seal fund raising campaign, according to John Tice, regional director of Century 21's Carolinas region and president of the North Carolina Easter Seal Society board of directors.

Tice said the statewide pledge contributed to the $1 million pledge of the nationwide system of Central 21 Real Estate Corp. He said it is the largest single pledge to this year's Easter Seal campaign.

The company said that in Federal District Court in Fort Lauderdale, Sav-A-Lot Drugs admitted to infringing the pharmaceutical company's "Actifed" trademark by selling generic products under the brand name label.

Sav-A-Lot Drugs has been permanently enjoined from using the trademarks Actifed or Actifed-C in connection with the sale, offering for sale, advertising, labeling or display of any merchandise other than antihistamine-decongestant preparations originating from Burrough Wellcome Co.

First Federal And Greensboro Firm

Merger Plan Proposed

Burney S. Warren, president of First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Pitt County, announced that First Federal and First American Federal Savings & Loan Association, a Greensboro-headquartered mutual association, have signed a letter of intent which provides for a merger of the two firms.

Warren said in a letter to his association's stockholders that the letter of intent proposes that each stockholder of First Federal will receive $8.25 for each share of First Federal's common stock.

According to Warren, the stock price of $8.25 represents a profit of $2.25 above the initial offering price per share of $6.

"In the next several weeks, the two associations expect to negotiate a definitive merger agreement," Warren said. "Thereafter, conditions of the merger agreement and required regulatory approvals must be met and the merger must then be approved by the First Federal stockholders."

The spokesman said the board of directors of First Federal "believes the proposed merger to be an excellent opportunity for First Federal's stockholders, customers and the communities it serves."

Warren said that under the conditions of the proposed merger, First Federal will operate at its present offices and with its present staff as a part of First American Federal Savings & Loan. First Federal has two offices in Greenville and also locations in Farmville, Ayden and Grifton.

Warren, who will serve as senior vice president and Greenville area executive, said the federally insured association that will result from the merger will have 43 offices and total assets of approximately $800 million.

He said the new association will be the largest savings and loan in North Carolina.

Bull Market Rewards Believers

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's bull market continued to reward the believers and punish the skeptics in the first quarter of 1983.

In the waning days of March, most measures of stock price trends hit record highs, and the market ended the quarter on Thursday showing healthy gains since New Year's.

For weeks now, many analysts have been warning of a "correction," or temporary reversal of the market advance that began in mid-August. So far, no such decline has materialized, and the averages have generally climbed about 50 percent from last year's lows.

As traders headed home for a long Easter weekend Thursday night, even the depressed energy stocks were enjoying some newfound favor after a modest reduction in Britain's oil prices.

Because Britain, which is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, did not post any larger reduction, analysts said, it appeared increasingly likely that OPEC's efforts to stabilize world oil prices would succeed.

Despite a 10.06 drop to 1,130.03 in the past week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials boasted an 83.49 gain since New Year's, and is up 363.11 points since last Aug. 12.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index up 0.22 at 88.03, and the American Stock Exchange market value index up 3.05 at 389.08.

Big Board volume averaged 75.04 million shares a day, against 83.28 million the week before.

Worries about the durability of the economy's budding recovery from the recession appear to have eased in recent days.

State Will Get $30 Million In Federal Job Funds

By The Associated Press

North Carolina is expected to get $30 million from the federal jobs bill, with $10 million slated for the Department of Human Resources and $5 million earmarked for the Department of Transportation, state officials say.

The state's share, about 6.5 percent of the $4.6 billion package, will pump money into health care, food supplements and jobs for low-income families while funding improvements in highways and public facilities.

So far, however, officials are unable to say exactly how many people will be helped or how many jobs will be created by the program.

"We have just now been able to break out figures coming to the state," said Ted Parrish, assistant secretary for intergovernmental relations with the Department of Human Resources. "It's premature to say how much money will go to specific programs or how many people will be helped. It's just not there. We don't know yet."

In DHR, about $3 million will go to the Women, Infants and Children program to provide supplemental food for the poor. Another $3 million is targeted for maternal and child health care programs and $2 million will be used to provide training and jobs for unemployed young people this summer.

Also in the Human Resources appropriation is $1 million to employ 46 senior citizens in part-time jobs, with $600,000 going to alcohol and drug abuse programs and $200,000 allotted for social services block grants.

Most state officials said the money would mean emergency assistance for those who need it the most, because in most cases the funds must be spent in the current fiscal year.

"It's unfortunate we have to spend it so quickly," Parrish said. "We're still trying to find out how much we are getting in specific programs."

More than 200 people will be employed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers because of a $3.1 million grant for immediate projects to include work at B. Everett Jordan Lake and Kerr Lake. Construction firms that receive the contracts will do the hiring.

Billy Rose, state highway administrator, said he did not know how the $5 million transportation allotment would be used. But he said any jobs created would be in private construction firms, not in the department itself.

About $3 million will pay for weatherizing schools, hospitals and low-income homes. The jobs bill also provides $600,000 for historic preservation projects across the state and about $1 million for library construction programs.

Some funds provided in the bill still haven't been accounted for.

About $150 million has been targeted for airport construction and improvements across the country, but state officials are not sure how much North Carolina will receive. And federal agencies have yet to determine how much money for Economic Development Administration projects, such as construction of military base housing, will reach the state.

Labor-Industry Group Requests Perks For Trade

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America will lose jobs and suffer an erosion of its standard of living unless the government helps U.S. industries cope with foreign competition, business and labor groups said Saturday.

In a 100-page study, the Labor-Industry Coalition for International Trade noted that many overseas companies competing with American firms have been getting direct assistance from their governments.

The report, which examined trade policies in Japan, France and West Germany and other countries, concludes that "foreign governments have targeted a broad range of future growth industries for special aid and accelerated development ..."

The coalition is comprised of Bethlehem Steel, Corning Glass Works, B.F. Goodrich, Westinghouse Electric and other corporations along with 11 industrial labor unions.

Its report asserted that both "high-tech" and basic U.S. industries "have been seriously weakened as a result of aggressive industrial policies adopted by the governments of most of the world's other industrialized nations and advanced developing countries."

There have been increasing calls by labor unions in recent months for a more protectionist U.S. trade policy in view of decaying conditions in many of the nation's basic industries, such as autos and steel. Those industries are facing mounting foreign competition.

The commission's recommendations for helping U.S. business compete with foreign firms included:

—Strengthening and enforcing existing American trade laws.

"When foreign industrial policy measures violate U.S. trade laws or international agreements on trade, there should be a prompt, effective response by the United States," it said.

—Encouraging the federal government to review existing policies toward U.S. industries with an eye toward stepping up research and development efforts, restructuring old-line industries faced with rapid change and improving the ability of American businesses to invest in new plants and equipment.

—Making the government improve its capability to assess the potential impact on U.S. industries of other nations' industrial policies.

Amory Houghton Jr., chairman of Corning Glass and co-leader of the coalition, said the U.S. government has no capacity to monitor the industrial policy initiatives of other countries.

"The global marketplace is not a mirror image of the American marketplace," he said. "In the United States, we all operate under similar restraints. Elsewhere, laws governing trade vary according to national need and attitude."

Glenn E. Watts, president of the Communications Workers of America, said:

"If we — labor, government and the business community — do not join together in a spirit of cooperation and mutuality of interests, we will find ourselves further victimized by foreign competitors who benefit from export subsidies, closed government procurement policies and other similarly one-sided trade policies," he said.

Just one day before the coalition issued its report, President Reagan imposed stiff tariff increases on large foreign motorcycles in an attempt to help the Harley-Davidson Motor Co., the only remaining U.S. maker of the machines.

The action should raise the price of imported motorcycles in this country, thus helping Harley-Davidson which has faced increasing competition from foreign manufacturers, particularly the Japanese.

Reagan, in a statement on the action, said, "I have determined that granting import relief is consistent with our national economic interest."

Under the five-year program for motorcycles, import duties on large bikes will soar more than ten-fold, from the current 4.4 percent to 49.4 percent of the machines' list cost in the first year.

DESIGNING BY COMPUTER — An engineer for Grumman Aircraft of Long Island, N.Y., uses computer graphics to design a single-seat prototype airplane. For designers and draftsmen, the growing use of the computer has meant liberation from the time-consuming process of drawing engineering plans by hand. Grumman says by using graphic plotters connected to computers, engineers have access to thousands of geometric shapes used to design aircraft parts and can generate quality drawings in minutes at the touch of a button. Investors Back Chrysler In Stock-buying Spree

By MICHELINE MAYNARD
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. is the business world's rags-to-riches story, a drama of bankruptcy and recovery that could easily become a TV mini-series with its own chairman as the star.

Investors last week jumped on the Chrysler bandwagon by buying — in just two hours — 26 million shares of stock worth $432 million. The company originally planned to sell 12 million, but increased the offer twice because of market demand.

Analysts hailed the sale as proof the company was back on its feet just two years after the janitor was about to turn out the lights for the last time.

"I think it can be said with great confidence now that Chrysler is a viable company," said Philip Fricke of Goldman Sachs in New York.

The turnaround — from years of billion dollar losses to a 1982 profit of $170.1 million — is credited by all to Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, the cigar-smoking, fast-talking former car salesman who came up with a plan to rescue the company.

"He has done an absolutely brilliant job at Chrysler," Fricke said. "It was not a one-man show but Iacocca has certainly provided the leadership, the charisma needed to hold the organization together while it was under mend."

Tuesday's stock sale was the second largest in U.S. history, behind only Ford Motor Co.'s first public offering in 1956. Underwriters were not surprised at the speed, for buyers were lined up at the opening of the New York Stock Exchange.

Investment counselors say the stock was purchased both by individuals and institutions such as banks, corporations and universities, signaling all-around confidence in the once-struggling automaker.

Analysts credit the rapid sale to three factors: Chrysler earnings have improved; its sales gains are running ahead of other companies, and its breakeven point has been significantly reduced.

The stock sale is one of the key components of a recapitalization plan drawn up to improve the company's balance sheet and more quickly pay off $1.2 billion in federally back loans.

The recapitalization plan, which must be approved by shareholders May 5, is one of the most ambitious in U.S. corporate history. Its completion, analysts say, is one of the last building blocks Chrysler needs to assure its recovery.

The stock sale apparently woke people up to how far along Chrysler has come. But the recovery has been underway for months with Chrysler common stock climbing from a low of $4 a share to the current $17-plus price.

The firm's 1982 profit, the stock sale and the repayment of loans are impressive achievements in light of the financial mess the company was in at the start of the decade.

In 1980, Chrysler hit bottom with a loss of $1.7 billion. The company was being run almost on a day-to-day basis and a debate was on whether Chrysler should be rescued or allowed to fail.

Panel Says U.S. Ignores Studies

By ROBERT SANGEORGE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States stands alone among major western nations in ignoring new research on acid rain and adopting policies that may worsen the pollution problem, an environmental research group charges in a new report.

In a three-year study of air pollution policies in Europe and North America, the Washington-based Environmental Law Institute concluded that since President Reagan took office in 1981, "The U.S. has retreated from its historic leadership position in national and international air pollution control."

At the same time, however, most other industrialized western nations, "have been moving in the opposite direction" and adopting tougher emission limits, it said.

The report was financed by the German Marshall Fund, a private grant-making institution in Washington established by West Germany.

Acid rain is created when sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides combine with water vapor in the atmosphere. It is blamed for damage to lakes, streams, forests and man-made structures in eastern North America and parts of Europe.

"The United States, along among major western nations, not only opposes new control programs but has adopted new policies over the past two years promoting increased sulfur dioxide emissions," the study said.

"Under the Reagan administration, the Environmental Protection Agency has approved state emissions control relaxations allowing sources to release more than 1 million additional tons of sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere annually," it added.

EPA officials said they were developing a response to the report, but had no immediate comment.

The administration argues far more research is needed to determine the precise environmental causes and effects of acidic air pollution, before themultibillion dollar expense of new pollution controls can be justified.

The Environmental Law Institute's study argued acid rain is "taken far more seriously than ever before" in West Germany, Sweden, Norway, Canada, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Denmark.

It noted three international organizations recommend immediate action toreduce sulfur dioxide emissions.

Oil Slick Reaches Qatar

DOHA, Qatar (AP) — The first waves of a giant Iranian oil slick oozed on to the shores of Qatar Saturday, plunging the small Persian Gulf state into "a grave and grim situation," officials said.

People lined up for mineral water and fresh fish, as prices rose by the hour, while work teams rushed sand and construction material to the coast to build protective dams around Doha's desalination and power plant.

Hajar Ahmad, vice chairman of Qatar's Environmental Protection Committee, said that "a slight portion" of the slick hit the coast at two points, Ras Laffan and Ras Qurtas. Some dead dolphins washed ashore.

He warned that the main part of the massive, partially submerged crude oil slick was "now very close" to this peninsula with 240,000 inhabitants.

However, the Qatar News Agency said late in the day that the slick had veered away and claimed that survey teams had determined that Qatar's coasts were "completely free from pollution."

It said anti-pollution equipment was still being imported from Europe and that fish samples would be analyzed daily to determine whether seafood was safe for human consumption.

The agency also assured citizens that there were no shortages of water and that power generators "capable of handling any emergency" were on standby to meet air conditioning demands.

Qatar became the first victim of the seven-week-old slick after efforts had failed to work out a compromise between warring Iran and Iraq that would enable experts to repair offshore oil wells in Iran's Nowruz field that were bombed by Iraqi jets.

Future Remains Murky For Most U.S. Airlines

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

The skies may never clear for America's major airlines, even with falling fuel costs and an improving economy, company executives and analysts say. Lean and hungry competitors are skimming off the industry cream, and more new entrants are poised to attack.

The latest worries add to the burdens of tough times for major airlines, including losses of more than $1 billion over the past two years. And these fears run counter to conventional hopes that an economic revival would increase air travel while falling oil prices lower operating expenses.

"Boy, the airlines are just going to start making bundles of money," is a comment being heard, said David Venz, a spokesman for Trans World Airlines. "True, in the old days," he said, but no longer.

John Van Ardsdale, chairman of Providence-Boston Airways, a swiftly growing New England and Florida vacation carrier, noted new airlines had already been challenging mature competition. Other new entrants will spring up when the economy improves and it becomes that much easier for a new line to go into business, he predicted.

TWA's Venz agreed: "There are a couple of dozen paper airlines out there waiting to come in."

For 40 years, the airlines weathered recessions, wars, periods of stunning growth, always with their routes protected from competition and their future ensured by the federal government.

In those four decades, the Civil Aeronautics Board rejected scores of applications from would-be new carriers to serve major markets.

As a result, the entrenched airlines made money, expanded their fleets and put up with the costliest labor settlements of any industry in the country.

For example, a veteran pilot with a major airline can earn more than $150,000 a year for a few dozen hours work a month. Many own their own businesses on the side.

A recent CAB study quoted various 1980 and 1981 government reports showing that airline ground employees were routinely more highly paid than comparable workers in business and industry in general.

Airline keypunch operators earned 31 percent more than the average keypunch operator; airline typists were paid 41 percent more; and for computer operators the differential was 38 percent.

The staff study asserted that clearly, with fare and route protection, the airlines had merely passed their costs on to the public through CAB-approved fare increases.

It was no surprise that when deregulation came along, allowing virtually anyone with an airplane into the business, the old-line carriers had the rug pulled out from underneath them.

Adding to the increased competition was the almost four-year recession, a tripling of fuel prices since 1978 and the wholesale firing of striking air traffic controllers in 1981.

Business plummeted. Seats went empty. Cash flow was off precipitously.

But employees, fuel vendors, insurance companies and banks all had to be paid. And new competitors were pulling up to the gate, absorbing a growing portion of the dwindling market.

The fare wars began.

This month, a number of airlines, led by American Airlines, had intended to move away from the discount fares that had seriously cut into their earnings. But a tacit agreement to stabilize fares that seemed industrywide was shattered when Pan American World Airways announced another round of fare cuts.

The "American plan" would scrap countless confusing discount fares with a rate schedule based on the length of the route. Shortly after it was unveiled last month, the question of how long it would last was put to David Schneider, new general manager of El Al Israel Airlines' North American Division, a 29-year-veteran of British Airways and a long-term observer of American aviation.

His answer was perhaps prophetic.

"Until the first guy gets hungry," he said.

It was discounting, to speed cash flow, that helped kill Braniff International last May, the first major bankruptcy since airlines came under the protective wing of the CAB in 1938.

"Price wars can be expected to continue unabated with adverse financial consequences for the airlines," said Julius Maldutis, an airline industry analyst at the investment firm of Salomon Brothers Inc.

Savings from lower fuel costs, lower interest rates and lower labor costs "will be lost in the vicious competitive environment," he said, observing that it had taken almost four years for the big airlines to realize how much they'd lost in revenue and traffic to the smaller lines.

He said he anticipated even more fierce fare wars than have already been encountered and suggested the industry was "now in a state of constant discount fares."

The CAB study shows that many of the new entrants in the business operate at far lower cost than the "incumbents."

For example, it cost rapidly growing Southwest Airlines $24 a passenger to fly 200 miles, while it costs United $58 to fly the same distance.

One reason is that in 1981, for example, United's pilots were required to fly only 43 hours a month and their contract stipulated a three-man crew in its Boeing 737s. Southwest and most other carriers used only two pilots in their B-737s and they flew 73 hours a month.

Comparisons are difficult because many new airlines keep costs low by offering fewer amenities. But some new entrants have higher costs, such as New York Air which operates out of high cost LaGuardia Airport in New York.

Newark, N.J.-based PEOPLExpress earned its place in corporate history by returning a profit to its shareholders, including all of its employees, in its first year in business. Despite its low fares, it claims it makes a profit on every flight.

Not all the new entrants are no-frills.

On April 1, a new airline based in St. Louis, Air 1, took to the skies, offering first-class service at coach fares.

Air 1 stripped out the three-and-three abreast seating from four used B-727s, put in two-and-two leather seats and now offers first-class food and drink with china and glassware on flights between New York, St. Louis and Kansas City.

The new entry is being eyed warily by TWA, which has a massive operation in St. Louis, its "hub" for matching domestic flights to its international gateway in New York.

The CAB staff study concluded that years of regulation cut the incentive for the big airlines to be efficient. Thus, it said, it will be years before the lingering effects of regulation on airlines' costs completely disappear.

In acknowledging that, Frank Borman, chairman of Eastern Airlines, said, "1983 poses a severe test of our skills, our resolve, our ingenuity and our determination to survive in a competitive, deregulated environment."

First-Time Home Purchases Rise

CHICAGO (AP) — Falling prices and lower downpayment requirements are producing a rise in the number of people making their first home purchase, according to a national survey.

First-time home buyers accounted for 40.6 percent of home sales last year, the highest in more than two years, a survey for Chicago Title Insurance Co. said.

The figure was slightly greater than in 1981, when 39.4 percent of home purchases were made by first-time buyers.

But it was well below the peak of 1978, when almost half the homes sold were bought by people who had never owned one before, the company said Friday.

The median home price for first-time buyers last year was $58,900, down from $63,180 a year earlier, according to the survey of home buying trends in 11 major metropolitan areas. The average monthly mortgage dropped to $630 from $665 in 1981.

The average downpayment as a percentage of sale price dropped for first-time buyers — to 15.1 percent in 1982 from 19.4 percent a year earlier, the survey found.

Slightly more than two-thirds of first-time buyers relied entirely on savings and investments to meet the downpayment, up from 63.8 percent the previous year, the survey found. The number relying on help from relatives fell to 11.3 percent last year from 17 percent a year earlier.

The survey was conducted by an independent national research organization, which conducted telephone interviews with more than 400 recent home buyers across the nation in October 1982.

Don't cheat yourself.

Open your Wachovia IRA before April 15 to save on 1982 taxes.

Here's what you can save.

If Your 1982 Taxable Income Is Approximately:	Your Tax Brackets Probably Are: Federal	N.C.	If You Put $2000 Into A Wachovia IRA, You Can Probably Reduce Your 1982 Income Taxes By:	If Your Working Spouse Also Contributes $2,000 Together You Can Probably Reduce 1982 Taxes By:
$20,000	22%	7%	$ 580	$1,160
$29,000	29%	7%	$ 720	$1,440
$39,000	39%	7%	$ 920	$1,840
$64,000	49%	7%	$1,120	$2,240

The above examples are based on the most recent IRS and N.C. tax information available, assuming a married couple filing a joint return and not itemizing their deductions. While deposits to an IRA are tax-deductible in the year they are made, these funds are taxed as ordinary income when they are withdrawn from the account.

You still have time to save hundreds of dollars on your 1982 taxes. If you open a Wachovia IRA before April 15, you can deduct the amount you put in from last year's taxable income (up to $2,000 a year, $4,000 for a working couple). Depending upon your tax bracket and the amount of your contributions, this can mean a substantial tax break for you. The chart above will give you an idea of the kind of savings you can expect. For example: If you have a taxable income of $29,000 a year and you put aside $2,000 in an IRA, after you adjust for tax savings of $720 your $2,000 savings have only "cost" you $1,280.

Money Can't Buy A Smile...

Adopting A Grandparent Can

Mattie Lane sat alone in a wheel chair in her small room at Greenville Villa Nursing Home. The cold rain pattered on the window panes and she appeared depressed and lonely. Then, four little girls entered her room and a bright smile spread across her wrinkled face. She became radiant, glowing, happy.

"I feel so good I don't know what to do. They make me so happy," Mattie said as Angie, Sonya, Stacy and Callie Dellano gathered around her and began to play tamborines and sing a gospel song. Mattie soon joined in. After the song ended, each little girl went over and gave Mattie a big hug.

Mattie Lane and the Dellano sisters are only a handful of people who have formed special relationships by taking part in the "Adopt-A-Grandparent" program at Greenville Villa Nursing Home. Individuals, churches, families, sororities and other groups have adopted "grandparents" at the nursing home.

Terry Fuller, activities director of the home, started the program three years ago and it has met with continued success.

The program, according to Ms. Fuller, has three goals: to encourage sharing of talents, knowledge and skills; to encourage relationships and to increase the public's awareness of aging.

"The residents get cards, clothes and candy (from the people who adopt them), but the most precious things they get are time and love. Money can't buy a smile on a face that used to be sad," Ms. Fuller said.

Children make the best adopters, she said, because they don't have any preconceived ideas about old people and fear hasn't been installed in them.

"I think geriatrics is a special population. People need to get past their fears of aging and find out that it can be a fun time. I look on aging as a turning point and a happy time, not a stopping point," Ms. Fuller commented.

"Since I've been here (working at Greenville Villa), it's been my dream to get the city involved, to come out and see what a nursing home is really like. I can remember when a newspaper (reporter) wouldn't come to a nursing home unless there was something negative to report," she added.

There is no limit to how many grandparents a person can adopt. Ms. Fuller said groups will sometimes adopt as many as 10 or even 40 during holiday seasons.

"The good thing about the program is that you can put in as much time as you are able or want to put into it. We have a man now that comes in on his way to work everyday and stays for 15 minutes," Ms. Fuller said.

Aimee Howes, an East Carolina University student, is a member of Gamma Sigma Sigma National Service Sorority. She adopted Laura Carowan, a 76-year-old resident of the nursing home.

"The semester after I joined the sorority my grandmother died and Laura makes up for that. She gets involved in all our lives. We need her as much as she needs us," Ms. Howes commented.

A lot of ECU students enjoy the program because their grandparents live too far away to visit often.

Susan Dewhirst, another member of the sorority, commented, "I've never really known my grandparents because they live so far off, but because of Laura I'm able to relate to old people better. Laura has taught me to appreciate and enjoy life a lot more."

To adopt a grandparent, go by Greenville Villa Nursing Home to have an interview with Ms. Fuller. She will go over the rules and regulations of the nursing home, take you on a tour and pair you up with someone compatible.

Peggy Ann Beddard Weds Mark Case Jr.

MRS. MARK DURWARD CASE JR.

MAURY — Peggy Ann Beddard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Beddard of Snow Hill, and Mark Durward Case Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Durward Case of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at 3:30 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Charles Mosley in the Brooks Frizzelle United Methodist Church. A program of wedding music was presented by Eloise Jackson of Greenville, organist, and Denise Butler of Chapel Hill, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with chantilly and Brussels lace beaded with pearls. The fitted bodice was overlaid in chantilly lace. The long fitted sleeves were fashioned of chantilly lace and finished in a ruffle of matching lace. The full circular skirt was accented with chantilly lace trimmed flounces that extended to form an attached chapel train. She wore a double tiered veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. She carried a silk bouquet of pink roses, baby's breath and white carnations with pink and white ribbons and bridal lace.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of blue lustreglo designed with a V-neckline and a corsage of white orchids. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of ice pink chiffon over matching taffeta. She also wore a corsage of white orchids.

The honor attendant wore a formal gown of wine organza designed with an open neckline featuring a double ruffle of organza outlining the off-shoulder bodice and scooped back. A gathered sash of organza encircled the modified waistline and the A-line skirt was enhanced by a flounce at the hemline that extended up the back of the gown to form a bustle. She carried a single pink rose. The bridesmaids' gowns were styled identical in a contrasting shade of frost rose. They also carried a single pink rose. The flower girl wore a light pink gown styled identical and carried a basket of pink rose petals and daisies.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va.

Couple Weds Saturday Evening

WINTERVILLE — The wedding ceremony of Myra Lou Brock and Joseph Harvey Baggett Jr. was solemnized Saturday evening at eight o'clock in Immanuel Free Will Baptist Church.

The Rev. Alfred Cates performed the double ring ceremony. A program of organ music was presented by Carl Worthington Jr. Vanlora Teel played the piano and Patricia Edwards sang "Truly," "Evergreen," "Color My World" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Loyd Brock Sr. of Route 2, Winterville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs.Grace Baggett of Winterville and the late Joseph Harvey Baggett Sr.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with chantilly lace and satin ribbon. It was enhanced with a sheer yoke of illusion accented with a silk Venise motif and bordered in ruffled chantilly lace. The fitted bodice was overlaid in French Nottingham lace and tucked organza. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel train were accented with a flounce of matching lace edged with ribbon. She wore a bridal hat overlaid in re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls and complemented with a satin rose and fingertip length illusion appliqued with lace motifs. She carried a silk cascade of ivory rubrum lilies, Queen Anne's lace, azaleas and miniature tiger lilies tied with ivory satin and lace ribbon.

Pam Brock, sister-in-law of the bride, was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Linda Taylor and Jane Parrish, all of Winterville, Frances Perkinson of Burlington, aunt of the bride, and Sarina McDaniel of Oriental, niece of the bridegroom. The flower girl was Wendy Ross of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom.

The honor attendant wore a formal gown of nordic rose chiffon over matching taffeta fashioned with a high neckline encircled with a ruffle of chiffon. The sheer scooped yoke was accented by a chiffon ruffle that extended over the gown back. She wore a garden hat in matching color braid trimmed in silk flowers overlaid in illusion with streamers and carried a cascade of silk rubrum lilies, azaleas and single agapanthus in shades of pink and dusty rose tied with lace ribbon and miniature English ivy. The attendants wore identical dresses and carried a cascade of silk azaleas and agapanthus in shades of pink and dusty rose. The flower girl was also dressed identically and carried a pink wicker basket edged in dusty rose ribbon and filled with agapanthus petals.

The best man was Howard Paramore of Winterville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom. Ushers included David and Clifton Brock Jr., brothers of the bride Gary Brock, cousin of the bride, all of Winterville and Keith Gould of Grimesland. Acolytes were Chris Moore, cousin of the bride, and Richard Harrington, both of Winterville. The ring bearer was Stephen Tyndall of Franklin, Va., cousin of the bride.

Patsy Kittrell of Greenville directed the wedding and Kathy Moore, cousin of the bride of Winterville, presided at the guest register.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Laddie Avery and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nichols, aunts and uncles of the bride.

The couple will live in Winterville after a wedding trip.

The bride and bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School. She works at Sunshine Garden Center. He graduated from East Carolina University and is employed by Pitt County Schools.

The bride and her attendants were honored at a bridesmaids luncheon Saturday at the home of Patsy Kittrell, who was assisted by Kathy Moore and Linda Miles. Mr. and Mrs. Harrington gave a pre-nuptial pig-pickin for the couple at their home.

Engagement Announced

BETTY J. TRIPP...is the daughter of Dennis Ray Tripp and Mrs. Doris Hulon, both of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Timothy Lane Garris, son of Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Garris of Greenville. The wedding will take place April 29.

Average Family Lives Very Well

Complaints about food costs are common, but the average American family seems to be living pretty high on the hog. A U.S. Department of Agriculture nationwide survey of 14,000 families showed 61 and a half percent of the money devoted to food was spent in restaurants, vending machines and on convenience products at the market.

For every $100 spent on food, $30 goes to a restaurant or into a slot of a vending machine. Although some people argue that it is cheaper to eat out, the USDA survey found that an average meal at home contained 81 cents worth of food per serving. The average away-from-home meal cost $2.06, about 2 and a half times the value of food in the home meal. Eating in or carrying bag lunches and snacks is one way to trim food costs.

Of every $100 spent on food, $31.50 goes for convenience products, foods partially or fully prepared by the manufacturer. In fact, food processors keep $27 of the homemakers $100 food bill. Only $29 trickles down to the American farmer, with another $4 going to fisheries and importers, according to USDA figures.

Pancakes, waffles, dinner rolls, plate dinners, spaghetti sauce and lasagna are examples of foods which can be prepared in bulk and forzen for later use. But convenience is not always bad. Fresh fruits and vegetables may be the best buy in season, but the plain canned or frozen product is usually cheaper the rest of the year. Some muxes are also cheaper than "scratch."

One of the best ways for a family to get its money's worth at the market is to plan balanced, nutritious meals. Good nutrition costs less. Compare the cost of a pound of apples with that of a pound of cookies.

Remember these nutrition basics at the supermarket, says Sarah Hinton, extension nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University.

— Adults need two servings from the milk and milk products group each day. Children under 9 need two to three servings and those 9 to 12 years old need three. Teenagers and pregnant and nursing mothers should have four servings.

— All people need two servings of meat, poultry, eggs, fish or beans daily for protein. Calorie counters of those concerned with saturated fats should eat more poultry and fish.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

GRITS SOUFFLE

One of the airiest of its kind, as made by Jonathan Dudley.

1 cup milk
1 cup water
½ cup hominy grits
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter (½ of a ¼-pound stick)
¼ cup grated extra-sharp cheddar (1 ounce)
¼ teaspoon white pepper
4 large egg yolks
5 large egg whites

In a 1½-quart saucepan, bring to a boil the milk and water. Stir in the grits and salt; cover and cook, stirring often, over very low heat, for 30 minutes. Off heat, whisk in butter and cheese until melted. Whisk in pepper, then egg yolks, one at a time. In a large bowl, beat egg whites until they hold stiff peaks; stir a large spoonful into the grits; fold the grits into the remaining egg whites. Turn into a buttered 1½-quart souffle dish. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until puffed, very lightly browned and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 30 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

Several students were winners at the National History Day competition hosted by East Carolina University Wednesday. While entries submitted by 15 participating schools covered a wide range of subjects they all had to adhere to this year's theme "Turning Points in History."

In the group media presentation division, Maya Ajmera, Charles Moore, Joe Rayle and Amy VanScoy captured first place with their presentation entitled "The Chip: A Turning Point In Your Life," dealing with the computer chip. Winning second place in the division were Kristine Ambert and Elizabeth Ellen, whose entry "Synthesizers: A Revolution in Sound" featured the music synthesizer.

In the group project division, Kipper Hair and Barbara Partin's entry "The Miniature Ecliptical Spectrograph" won second place place while Chris Sessoms also placed second in the individual project division with her project on the Columbia space shuttle.

All students were given superior rankings for their work and were awarded certificates and ribbons. They will now advance to the state level of competition April 30 at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. From there they may be eligible to compete at the national contest June 16-18 at the University of Maryland at College Park. National History Day is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Competing against seven schools at the annual high school mathmetics contest at UNC-Wilmington, Rose's six-member team won second place in division one. Representing the school were Alice Dawkins, Alan Dickens, Elizabeth Ellen, Angie Michel, Janet Mizelle and David Priestley. Alan, Angie, Janet and David all placed within the top 10 and Angie and Alan will now advance to the state math competition May 5 at the Research Triangle.

Hunter Bost is the newly chosen 1983-84 Community Ambassador who will represent Greenville abroad during the summer. He was selected after a 10-minute interview with members of the Community Ambassador committee headed by Dr. Richard Taft.

Candidates also wrote "dear family" letters and submitted written responses to questions dealing with why they wished to be community ambassador. Any junior was eligible and encouraged to apply. A third year Spanish student, Hunter plans to spend his summer utilizing his knowledge of the language in the country of Spain.

Average Family...

— Four servings of friuts and vegetables are needed. One serving should be citrus fruit for the vitamin C, and another should be a dark green or deep yellow vegetable for vitamin A.

— Four servings from the bread and cereral group are also needed. Choose whole-grain products when possible for the fiber.

— Fats and sweets give little nutritional value other than calories. They are not forbidden, but these empty calories should never replace foods with nutritional value.

Shoppers can save money while buying nutritious foods by following these tips from Rachel Kinlaw, NCSU extension food specialist.

— Buy fresh or nonfat dry milk in as large a package as can be stored without waste. Use evaporated and nonfat dry milk in cooking. Mix equal amounts of fresh whole milk and reconstituted nonfat dry milk for drinking.

— Select cheese in chunks rather than in individual slices.

— Substitute less expensive fruits and vegetables. Buy produce in season. Compare the prices of fresh, canned, dehydrated and frozen to see which is the best buy. Take advantage of specials, but only purchase what can be stored properly. Try lower priced brands; the family may not notice the difference.

The Roman Catholic Vatican Council authorized in 1963 the use of the vernacular instead of Latin in the sacraments. The Ecumenical Council voted overwhelmingly to reverse years of church tradition. The decree allowed most of the sacraments, except the blessing, to be said in the local language. It was approved by Pope Paul VI.

Bumblebee Meanderings Have A Purpose

By MARIE SCHNELL
NCSU News Bureau

On a lovely spring day has your mind ever followed the bumblebee in its seemingly mindless meanderings from flower to flower?

Now, wouldn't you know it, scientists are laying to rest even these idyllic visions of springtime.

It seems the bumblebee's movements are not so random after all. In fact, according to Dr. Leslie Real, assistant professor of zoology at North Carolina State University, they can be predicted by the same theories employed by economists to describe how investors in the stock market will allocate their funds in times of economic uncertainty.

Such research is important to farmers, because the bumblebee is a key pollinator of many agricultural crops — blueberries, squash, snap beans, lima beans, tomatoes and cucumbers. More pollinator visits mean more fruit, and a higher quality of fruit, Real explained.

"Understanding what makes one plant desirable (to the bumblebee) may help us understand how to increase their pollinator visits, and therefore, increase the yield of certain crops," he said.

In North Carolina alone, there are as many as 13 species of bumblebees, ranging in habitat from the coast to the mountains.

Bumblebees decide which flowers to pollinate in accordance with a very specific mathematical model that describes their behavior, Real said.

To develop his theory of how bumblebees make their choices of flowers to pollinate, Real drew on the work of economists Harry Markowitz and James Tobin. This behavioral model of how consumers invest scarce funds in an uncertain stock market was cited in Tobin's 1981 Nobel Prize in economics.

"Organisms face the same problems as consumers — how to allocate scarce energy and time to various activities," Real said. His study combined psychology, economics and ecology. "The bumblebee is uncertain about the reward it will get from a flower, just as an investor is uncertain about the return he will get on a stock."

To test his theory, the biologist constructed models which took into account the uncertainty the bumblebee would encounter in making decisions on which flowers to visit. He made artificial flowers in two different colors, blue and yellow. Each blue flower was injected with the same amount of nectar, while the yellow flowers received varying amounts.

Real found that bumblebees exposed to the two artificial flower species in a closed environment preferred to visit the blue flowers, which would yield a constant amount of nectar, over the yellow flowers where the bee might find more nectar or none at all.

This is what stock investors do in an uncertain market when they want to avoid taking risks, he said. "They will choose stocks with a more certain return over a more risky investment. The bees behaved like efficient little stockbrokers."

The biologist said it was possible to get the bumblebees to choose the yellow flowers with varying nectar amounts by increasing the average amount of nectar in them.

This is also in accordance with Tobin's theory of investor behavior, he said.

Real's project was sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

Former Music Teacher Now Crafting String Instruments

By SANDY BROWN
The Brainerd Daily Dispatch

GARRISON, Minn. (AP) — While he was working as a string instruments teacher for Mankato public schools, Arnold Anderson bought a book entitled, "How to Build a Stradivari Violin."

Studying the methods of Italian master craftsman Antonio Stradivari, who built violins in Cremona, Italy, in the early 1700s, was to change Anderson's life.

Anderson took a year's leave from his job to bicycle through Europe, and stopped to visit a Stradivari museum in Cremona.

"I discovered that there was a violin-making school there," Anderson said. "I took a tour and they asked if I would like to enroll."

Anderson attended the International School of Violin Making for three years, then stayed in Europe another year and a half to collect 6½ tons of spruce from Italy and Yugoslavian maple, which he says are unequaled in the world for their evenness of grain.

Upon his return to Minnesota, Anderson opened his own violin-making shop in the Twin Cities. Two years ago, he moved the business to Garrison.

"I liked teaching, but I like this better," he said.

Anderson, who has been in business eight years, has sold about 100 instruments. His violins sell for about $2,500, violas for $3,000 and cellos for $4,500.

Anderson, 38, who now produces 10 to 12 instruments a year in his home workshop, counts among his customers members of the British Broadcasting Corp. and the Covent Garden Orchestra in London, the New York Philharmonic and the University of Minnesota Orchestra.

"Students going into music professionally will 'sell their souls' for a good instrument," Anderson said. "You can't even touch an Italian violin for what I charge."

Anderson uses wood that has been seasoned at least seven years. Tops of the instruments are always made of spruce, with the rest maple.

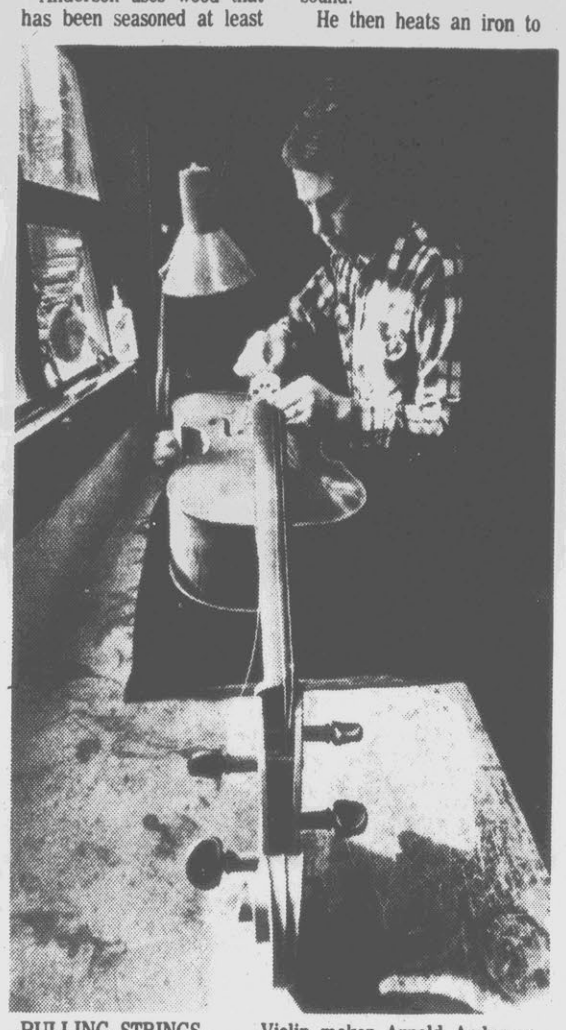
He uses a planing tool to contour the top and bottom pieces with great care, emphasizing that this step is "critical" to the instrument's sound.

He then heats an iron to bend six thin maple strips around the sides. The instrument is put together with weak wood glue along side edges, to allow for humidity-related expansion and contraction of the wood, and strong white glue on the fingerboard, bridge and other points of stress.

Anderson lets the instrument dry in the sun to improve the sound quality, then applies from 10 to 15 coats of home-made varnish. The instrument is then ready to be strung and sold.

From start to finish, it takes Anderson about five weeks to build a violin and six weeks to build a viola.

"The Germans have been mass-producing these instruments for many years and occasionally, they may hit on the right sound," Anderson said. "Percentage-wise, we individual makers have better instruments more often."



PULLING STRINGS . . . Violin maker Arnold Anderson strings up a cello he built in his home workshop in Garrison, Minn. Anderson, who learned violin making in Cremona, Italy, produces from 10 to 12 instruments a year and so far has sold about 100.

Local Man Comments On Buddhist Psychology

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"I feel that I understand Christianity better because of my experiences in Buddhist thought," says Dr. Don Brown, a Greenville native who currently is gaining additional training in obstetrics at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. "I appreciate the wisdom, the psychology of Christianity more, particularly the significance of Christ."

Brown, who grew up as a Presbyterian, adds: "I still consider myself a Christian."

A 1966 graduate of Rose High School, Brown completed medical school at the University of North Carolina in 1974, then lived for nearly five years in Portland, Ore.

"I first encountered Buddhist teachings and doctrines during an eight-month trip around the world in 1978," he said.

"After three months spent in mission hospital work in Kenya, I went to Kathmandu, Nepal, for a visit. During that visit, I took a course in meditation and learned a little at that time about Buddhist teachings and meditations."

When Brown had completed his world tour, he went to Birmingham, Ala., where he completed a residency in family practice.

"After two years in Birmingham, I decided to return to the Orient. On the return trip I spent one month in China and in Tibet. I was fortunate to be allowed to spend three weeks in Tibet. It's not an easy place to get permission to visit."

This second trip to the Orient also involved five months visiting northern and central India, three months spent on the island kingdom of Sri Lanka, and three months living and working in Nepal.

Brown's 1978 first encounter with the mountainous kingdom of Nepal, bordered in the north by the massive chain of the Himalaya Mountains, was "exciting, a revelation in the astonishing beauty of the country and in the way of life I saw and experienced there. The Nepalese pace of life is comfortable, despite what we might consider as having certain inconveniences. I was amazed to find that these seemingly impoverished people seemed so happy and peaceful," Brown comments.

DR. DON BROWN

"Buddhism to the Oriental is not just a religion, it's a psychology of the way that the mind works, a way of life that is typified in everyday living. Every action relates to their spiritual heritage."

Brown says "the things that attract me most about Buddhist psychology is that it's based on reasoning, it encourges skepticism and examination and has a quality of openness and tolerance for other points of view.

"The teachings also present methods for transforming and taming the mind, principally through meditation. Mediatation is actually a heightened state of awareness and through this method it's possible to cultivate all those qualities that we wish to develop but have not known how to."

Dr. Brown, who says "a person teaches what he most needs to know," has just completed teaching an eight-week course at Pitt Community College titled "Taming the Mind" which integrates these methods and the psychology behind them."

Book News

By JULIE HICKS

Merv Griffin, the internationally known TV talk show host, has teamed up with Peter Barsocchini, the producer of "The Merv Griffin Show," to compile "From Where I Sit: Merv Griffin's Book of People." This book is an intimate behind-the-camera look at many of the world's most interesting personalities.

Griffin shares insights and anecdotes about the most provocative of his 20,000 guests. He candidly comments on the legends: Henry Fonda, Orson Welles, Richard Burton and the reclusive Jack Paar as well as the news makers: Henry Kissinger and Robert Kennedy.

Among the many guest personalities Merv speaks of are Jack Benny, Burt Reynolds, Alfred Hitchcock, Judge John J. Sirica, Barbara Walters, Dan Rather, James Jones, Jerzy Kosinski and James Michener. "From Where I Sit" is at once personal and enlightened by this perspective of the inimitable Merv Griffin.

Micheal Wilding was working on his autobiography when he died in 1979. "The Wilding Way" has been given an epilogue, prepared for publication by Pamela Wilcox, and illustrated with more than 50 photographs. Wilding tells of his family; his famous partnership with Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox, recalling with humor the disastrous period in Hollywood and revealing the reasons he gave up acting; and his loves and marriages to some of the world's most beautiful women, including Marlene Dietrich, Elizabeth Taylor, and Margaret Leighton, the true love of his life.

"The Wilding Way," like Michael Wilding himself, is a combination of charm, humor, and romance.

Folklore Film Being Shown

ECU News Bureau

North Carolina's rich tale-telling heritage is the focus of a film showing and informal talk sponsored by the East Carolina University Department of English from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Tuesday in Room 244, Mendenhall Student Center.

"Being a Joines: A Life in the Brushy Mountains," a portrait of John "Frail" Jones, master tale teller from Wilkes County will be shown. The event is free and open to the public.

The film depicts the natural family and home community of Frail Joines, a man whose tale legacy includes tall tales and comic personal acnecdotes and whose life experiences, transformed to tales, include the horror of helping to liberate victims of the concentration camps in World War II and his religious experiences following his wife's healing.

The film will be introduced with commentary by Dr. Daniel Patterson, chairman of the Curriculum in Folklore at UNC-Chapel Hill and one of the film's producers.

Patterson is a specialist in American literature and Shaker culture and has received the North Carolina Folklore Society's prestigous Brown-Hudson Award for exellence in folklore scholarship.

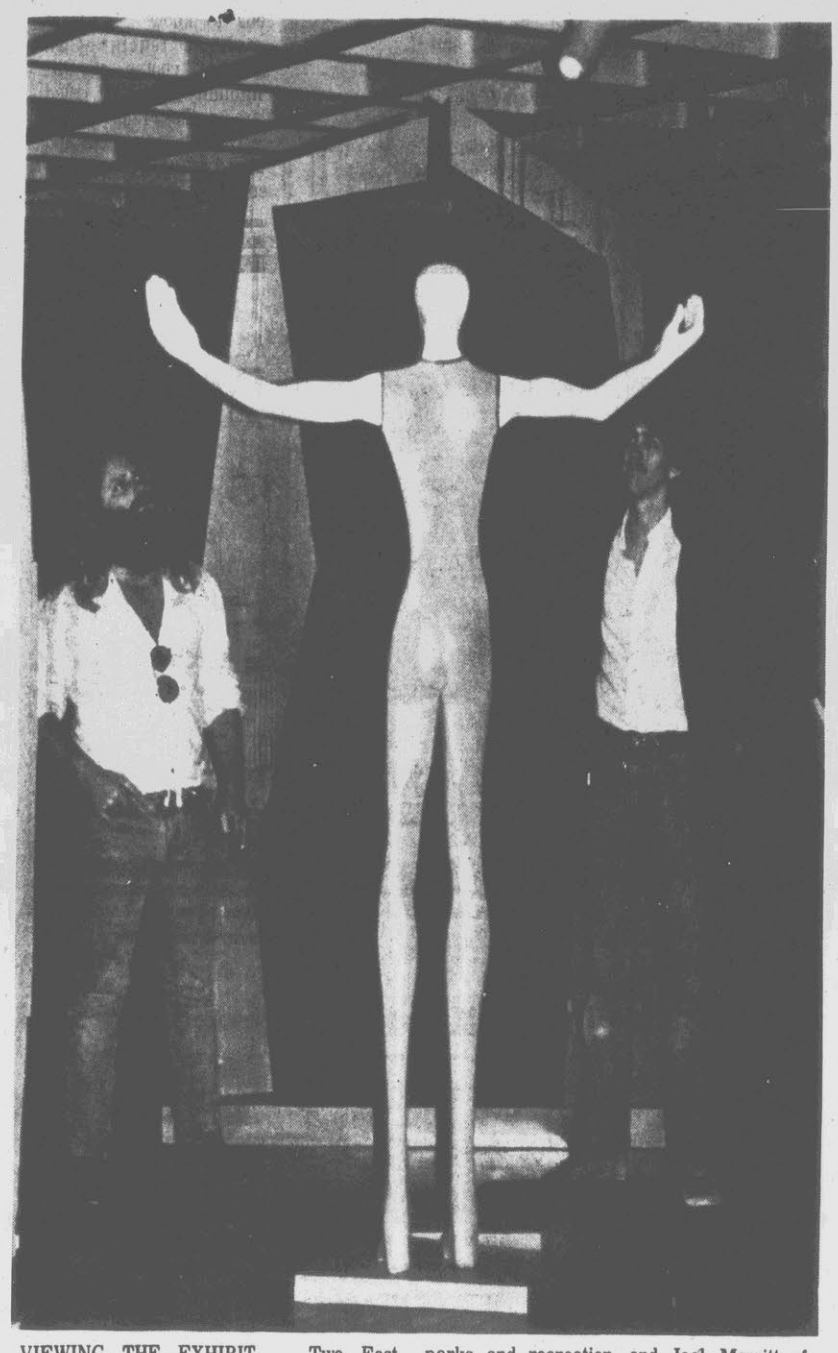
Graduate Thesis Show At Gray Gallery



VIEWING THE EXHIBIT ... Two East Carolina University students are shown viewing Norman McLeod's standing mixed-media sculpture in the 1983 graduate thesis exhibiton now on view at Gray Gallery. The two are Luke Bryan of Wilmington, left, a junior in parks and recreation, and Joel Merritt of Waynesville, a sophomore in communications art. Eleven graduate students have work in the show which will be on view through April 10. (Reflector Photo by Angela Lingerfelt)

It's a big show, running from the entrance at Gray Gallery all the way back to the corner hallway and space at the west end of the gallery. And it has lots of color and a number of very large pieces.

The 1983 Graduate Thesis Exhibition on view at Gray Gallery (through April 10 only) is a handsome man-made garden of art flowering on the walls and on stands scattered around the spacious floor area.

This year, a total of 11 graduate artists of the School of Art are exhibiting — painters James Beaman, Bruce Hall, Larry Shreve, Paula Blumenfeld, Rita Shumaker, and Nina Friefeld; printmakers Ed Midgett and David McDowell; ceramist BeeGee Allen; and sculptors Tom Grubb and Norman McLeod.

The word "big" applies particularly to the standing bamboo sculpture by Tom Grubb and Nina Freifeld's paintings. Grubb has provided mixed media drawings that serve as exploratory beginnings for sculptural ideas based on his concept of star charts. It's interesting to compare his initial thoughts with the finished product. One bonus related to Grubb's work - a video is shown at 2 p.m. each day of Patricia Pertalion formulating the choreography of "Dimensions in Time and Space" which she presented in the recent ECU dance concert and which incorporated a stage sculpture by Grubb.

With one exception, Freifeld's large paintings have an explosive quality, as if turbulent technicolor skies were being ripped apart by force. One painting, "I Was a Free Man in Paris," is full of brilliant scarlet semi-circles.

Perhaps the most eye-catching work in the show is Norman McLeod's mixed media standing sculpture arrangement, "The Courts of Praise" (see photograph for a detail of the work). Composed of elongated figures, an arch and some detailed free-standing structures, the stylized pieces provide arresting architectural patterns when viewed from different angles within the gallery.

Fanciers of posters and album jackets will find highly appealing Bruce Hall's relatively small works of musicians, dancers, singers and listeners. Hall uses magazine colors, and the theme of music and entertainment is realistically depicted in lyrical arrangements objects ranging from jukeboxes to drive-in movies to the 1980s flamboyant ambience of rock and roll.

Paula Blumenfeld's abstractions are paintings that I found myself going back to several times. Beautifully patterned, richly colored, they bring to mind remembered or imagined landscapes of the waters, skies and shores of the Mediterranean world. These works are exuberant, and yet have a quality that recalls certain of Wallace Stevens's earlier poems.

Two of the 11 artists are showing work in black and white — printmakers David McDowell and Ed Midgett. McDowell's series of a man and a child, entitled "Deonne and Daddy" are typical of his fine handling of line to create warmth and tenderness without undue sentimentality. Midgett treats the viewer to his imaginative build-up of an idea through several stages, and once more confirms he has a real knack for handling a mixture of very dark, very light and in-between gray areas within one work.

Rita Shumaker's paintings, in the far end of the gallery, offer something of a puzzling contrast. Some of the works are delicate, full of subtle hues and forms. Others are dark, dense paintings that seem to have no affinity with her other work. James Beaman, showing works of small size, makes ample reference to recognizable personages in art — i.e., the three graces, Mona Lisa, and figures that the viewer will remember from other paintings — Rubens maybe? The two smallest pieces are icon-like miniatures.

Practical but playful are descriptives that can be applied to BeeGee Allen's pastel hued ceramic creations. Utilitarian in that they can actually serve as magazine racks or bottle holders, they are the kind of pieces that would be fun to use as the focal point for decorating a bright, cheerful room.

Larry Shreve's assemblages of painted wood and various found objects, perhaps lose impact from being placed at the easily overlooked area near the entrance, a narrow bottleneck space that funnels visitors to the rest of the gallery.

This year's Graduate Thesis Exhibition is a bright point in the gray days that have befallen the Greenville weather scene recently. Now is a good time to allocate a couple of hours to take this big show in. Gallery hours are 10 to 5 on weekdays, and from 1 to 4 on Sundays. Admission is free.

LITHOGRAPHS BEING SOLD . . . An edition of 10,000 lithographs based on an original painting, "The Mystery of the Carroll A. Deering," are being sold statewide to raise funds to benefit the Save the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse Campaign. The lithographs are priced at $35 and will be sold in restaurants and galleries across the state. (Photo Courtesy Carolina Art Merchandising)

Sale Of Lithographs For Lighthouse Fund

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sixty-two years after rescuers from the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse rowed out to a foundering schooner and found no one aboard, the mystery may help save the lighthouse itself.

"The Mystery of the Carroll A. Deering," an oil painting by Greensboro artist Wendy Wallace, was unveiled Thursday in a ceremony attended by the artist, Gov. Jim Hunt, and other state officials.

Mrs. Wallace, 32, has produced from the painting an edition of 10,000 lithographs that will be sold in galleries and restaurants to benefit the Save the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse Campaign, a non-profit organization with chapters in every county in North Carolina. The lithographs measure 10 by 14 inches, and come with a white mat, which brings the overall size to 16 by 20 inches. The price of a lithograph is $35. Persons unable to locate a lithograph locally can order one from: Carolina Art Merchandising, P.O. Box 5524, Greensboro, N.C., 27043, telephone 294-0371 or 0318.

The 6-by-8-foot canvas shows nine Coast Guard surfmen leaving the shore by the candy-striped lighthouse in a wooden rowboat. In the distance by the rising sun lies the Carroll A. Deering, a five-masted schooner.

The boat was discovered hard aground on shoals opposite the lighthouse with all sails set on a stormy morning in January 1921. The rescuers discovered no trace of the Deering's 11 crewmen, although a meal was set in the galley.

Mrs. Wallace said the wreck of the Deering is an appropriate symbol of the historic lighthouse, which has stood over the "Graveyard of the Atlantic" since 1802.

The sand around the lighthouse is in danger of being eroded by the Atlantic Ocean. Public figures, including Hunt and Sen. Jesse Helms, have given their support to save it.

Money from sales of the lithographs will go to the campaign.

"The campaign to save the lighthouse is one of the most worthwhile efforts going on in our state," Mrs. Wallace said. "This is the best way I know for me to assist it."

Poses Questions About Role Of Museum

On the eve of the official opening of the new North Carolina Museum of Art building, the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research in Raleigh says in the latest issue of its magazine, "N.C. Insight," a special issue devoted to the arts, that five proposals may curb accessibility to the museum by North Carolina artists and the public when it opens on April 9.

Of the five museum proposals discussed by the N.C. Center for Public Research, the first three are said to reflect the museum's approach to North Carolina artists and the second two affect accessibility to the museum's holdings.

"The N.C. Museum of Art stands at a crossroads in its history," says Michael Matros, associate editor of the arts issue and co-author of the museum article. "These five proposals may alienate the very people the museum exists to serve — the general public and North Carolina artists," Matros added.

The staff of the North Carolina Museum of Art defends the proposals as necessary if the museum is to heighten the quality of its programs.

The five proposals, with comments by Dr. Edgar Peters Bowron, the museum's director; Joseph Covington, the museum's education director, and additional comments by Matros, are:

•Changing the N.C. Artists Exhibiton to a Triennial Event — Borwon defends the change of the N.C. artists exhibition from an annual event to one taking place every three years. "We feel strongly that we want to show the work of N.C. artists and we will, by having a number of exhibitions," he says. "At the same time, we're derelict if we're not showing works of art that are of high quality ... Just because an artist happens to pay taxes or resides in North Carolina doesn't mean that he or she automatically should receive representation in the museum." The N.C. Artists Exhibition has been an annual event for over 40 years.

•Closing the Collectors Gallery — The Collectors Gallery, a place for North Carolina artists to sell and rent their works, will no longer exist in the new museum. Bowron says that "museums are educational institutions, and most professionals agree that the sale of art is not one of their legitimate functions." However, Matros points out that the Museum of Modern Art in New York, as well as the century-old Philadelphia Museum of Art, run art-rental galleries. One of the two other state museums in the United States, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond, also permits artists to sell their works in a sale gallery.

•Not Scheduling the N.C. Film Festival — With no formal announcement, the museum staff did not schedule a North Carolina Film Festival for 1983 and has no definite plans for reviving the popular event. Matros says that if the museum administrators exclude this festival from long-range plans, North Carolina filmmakers will be hard-pressed to find a sponsor of comparable prestige and resources.

•Reducing the Schedule of Traveling Exhibitions — The education department of the museum is scaling down traveling exhibits, which annually have hung in libraries, schools and the museum's 12 affiliate galleries across the state. Covington says the museum will continue statewide services, but financial constraints are forcing the museum to cut back on the traveling exhibits. Matros points out that about 80,000 people a year have viewed the various traveling exhibits in recent years, while the museum topped 100,000 visitors in only one year (1978) in its old downtown Raleigh location. The Virginia state art museum, Matros notes, is offering six shows in traveling exhibitions this year.

Heritage Tour Set

KINSTON — A two-day "Lenoir County Heritage on Tour," sponsored by the Lenoir County Historical Association, has been scheduled April 16-17.

Tickets for the tour are priced at $7 when purchased in advance, or $8 when purchased on the tour. The Saturday tour will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., with the Sunday tour hours from 2 to 6 p.m.

Proceeds realized from the tour will benefit the further restoration of Harmony Hall, built in 1772. The structure was the home of Richard Caswell, first post-Revolutionary governor of North Carolina.

Seventeen buildings will be included on the two-day tour and tickets may be used both days. Boxed lunches will be available for the Saturday tours. These are priced at $3 and must be purchased with advanced tickets.

Outlets for purchase of advanced tickets are: in Greenville, the Book Barn; in Ayden, at the office of Dr. H.W. Gooding; in Kinston, King's Restaurant, Carter's Office Supply, Neuse Regional Library, Caswell State Historical Site, Lenoir Community College, and in La Grange, J.P. Walters Insurance Agency.

Those taking the tour are to provide their own transportation. For those touring from Greenville, a suggested beginning point is the Lafayette Plantation, the Tripp home, between Greenville and Kinston. To reach this site, turn right off N.C. 11 a short distance before the Du Pont plant entrance, then almost immediately turn back left on the road that parallels N.C. 11. Directions for other places on the self-conducted tour can be had at the Tripp home.

Concert To Honor Concerto Winners

The concert honoring the three winners of the annual East Carolina University Concerto Competitions will be held at 8 p.m. April 12 in Wright Auditorium.

Tickets, priced at $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens, will be sold at the door prior to the performance hour.

For this honors concert, the winners will perform with the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Robert Hause. The young musicians being honored with solo performances with the orchestra are Sydney Reed and Kelly Via, flute, and Denise Froio, piano.

The program opens with "Concerto in G Major for Two Flutes" by Domenico Cimarosa, an Italian composer who was born in 1749 and died in 1801. The two honor flutists, Reed and Via, will be soloists in the allegro movement to be performed from this composition.

As her solo performance, pianist Froio will be heard in the allegro of Ludwig van Beethoven's "Concerto No. 5 in E-Flat for Piano and Orchestra." Beethoven (1770-1827), was a German composer whose life and work spanned the latter part of the 18th century and the first quarter of the 19th century.

After an intermission, the ECU Symphony will perform the four movements of a symphony by Austrian composer Gustav Mahler (1860-1911), the "Symphony No. 1 in D Major (The Titan)."

Sydney Reed, a native of Sacramento, California, earned her bachelor's degree at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York. In 1979 she won the concerto competition at California State University, Northridge. At ECU she studies with Beatrice Chauncey.

Kelly Via, of Douglasville, Georgia, also a student of Beatrice Chauncey, earned his bachelor's degree at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa. He has performed with the Des Moines Symphony, the Des Moines Metro Opera Orchestra, and in 1976 was winner of the Iowa Choral Directors Association Composition Contest.

From Rome, New York, Denise Froio is a student with Charles Bath. She earned the bachelor's degree at Concordia College, Bronxville, New York. Currently, she is organist and piano teacher at the Pinetops Presbyterian Church.

All three concerto winners were also 1982 winners in the ECU Young Artist Competition.

The ECU student Government Association has provided support for this concert.

Jazz Band Concert Set

A SPRINGFEST '82 SCENE ... During the 1982 Springfest, a top-hatted juggler captivated a sidewalk audience as he performed his act. Art and entertainment will be the principal ingredients again this year when Springfest '83 is held downtown from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Springfest Saturday

Downtown Greenville will be transformed into a haven of music, dance, mime, drama and art from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday. All events are free for the annual downtown gala.

Festival director Katherine Lewis and her committee have put together a program for all in eastern North Carolina to enjoy, as Springfest '83 features a showcase of all facets of art by regional and local visual and performing artists.

Exhibits and demonstrations in various art fields are planned. Included will be exhibits-sales of items fashioned of clay, fibers, basketry, woodwork, leather, as well as watercolor, photography, stained glass, batik, quilting — plus demonstrations by weavers, spinners, quilters, mimes, dancers, magicians, puppets and clowns.

Springfest also promises a widely diverse program for music lovers, with groups specializing in jazz, folk, country, rock, barbershop and bluegrass music to be performing. Among performers scheduled are The Wallace Family, the N.C. Symphony Brass Quintet, Blues Plus, Billy and Sandra Stinson, North Carolina Tuba Band, the ECU Jazz Bones, the Hometown Boys and Craven County Cloggers, Mike "Lightening" Wells, Chuck Ball and Laurie Lofton, and Scrappy and Harry.

Greenville police will close off several connectiong streets near Fifth and Evans streets so that festival-goers will be able to walk freely and safely to different events.

The celebration is sponsored by East Carolina University, Downtown Greenville Association, Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

People wanting additional information may call the Greenville Arts Council at 757-1785. Those interested in arrangements for arts and crafts exhibit/sales sites or as food vendors (commercial and non-profit groups) may also call the Arts Council number.

About 30 roles, some for women but most for men, are open for this year's production. Actors, singers and dancers are needed, as well as a few technicians. Since the play involves considerable physical activity for male performers as well as for several female performers, those auditioning should be agile and able to cope with acrobatic falls and tumbles.

One role is open for a boy of about 10-12 years of age.

Rehearsals for the 1983 production of "Blackbeard" begin on June 6, with the drama opening June 30. Performances will be presented each Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings during July and into August.

Bunker Or Hulk, It's Opening

By FRED McNEESE

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The new North Carolina Museum of Art opens April 9-10 — and critics be damned.

If art by its own nature generates controversy, the building designed by Edward Durell Stone and Associates of New York is surely a work of art. It has been called a "bunker", a "hulking mound of concrete," and several other derogatory things.

If there was even a remote chance of an argument during its planning and construction, an argument occurred. Beginning in 1967, when the state's General Assembly created the State Art Museum Building Commission, there were battles over the location of the building, over its design and over what was to be exhibited.

The conflicts continue.

Despite the museum's $15.75 million pricetag, the roof leaks and paint bubbles. Critics say too much was spent on a "Gone with the Wind" staircase in the middle of the building and not enough on interior walls which will display paintings.

The original contractor was fired by state officials who were chagrined by his "inability" to finish the project. The contractor claims there was no way to finish because of continual changes in the building plans.

Dr. Edgar Peter Bowron, museum director, concedes one of his tasks is to free the museum of "prevailing negative opinion."

"We have been at a terrific disadvantage because, while we have been moving into the new building, the museum hasn't been open," Bowron said. "Most people who have been so critical haven't been inside."

One of the few things that did not generate an argument was the need for a new building. North Carolina's art collection was the first in the country to be bought by a state legislature, which allocated $1 million in 1947 for works of art. The museum was housed in a former state office building with inadequate lighting, climate control and space to house the collection.

The new building has 50,000 square feet of exhibition space — nearly twice the exhibition area of the former museum — so the state can display more of its art collection. It also features a 272-seat lecture hall, a 16,500 volume art reference library, a restaurant and workshops for the restoration of paintings and other exhibits.

"The new building heralds a new era in the preservation, exhibition and interpretation of the collections," Bowron said.

The museum's collection has more than 6,000 objects covering 5,000 years of art from ancient Egypt to the present. The collection is considered particularly notable for its paintings — Italian Renaissance and Baroque, Dutch and Flemish 17th century, British 18th century and American 19th century.

Of special importance is the Samuel H. Kress Collection, gathered by the founder of the Kress department store chain and comprising 70 Renaissance and Baroque paintings and sculptures. With the exception of the National Gallery in Washington, the North Carolina museum has the largest Kress collection in the United States.

"The significance of our collection is probably less known by the public than by museum professionals," Bowron said. "Our pictures are, at any given time, on loan in London, Paris, Stockholm, Amsterdam and various parts of the United States.

Bowron believes the museum has a national role.

"I think we do have one of the better collections of Old Master paintings," he said. "We feel we have a role to play on the national scene, to get involved in the dissemination of proper catalogs and eventually through exhibitions and programs involving those collections."

Special shows planned for the next year include paintings by Andrew and Jamie Wyeth and by Illinois artist Nicholas Africano, life-sized models of rodeo figures by New York artists Red Grooms and photographs by Andre Kertesz.

The European galleries will open during the summer and the museum's first permanent installation of African, Oceanic and New World art will be completed in 1984.

Endowment Fund For NCSA

WINSTON-SALEM — Francis J. and Anne-Marie Tague have established an endowment fund in memory of their daughter, Kathleen, who was a student at Reynolds Senior High School and a violinist in the Young Salem Symphony.

The endowment, in the amount of $25,000, is to have annual earnings divided evenly for two scholarships to be granted in the areas of music and visual arts.

It is the hope of the donors that investment returns permitting, the award levels will be at $1,000 or better for each of the two annual scholarship grants.

Friends of the family and others interested in scholarship endowment for NCSA students may add to the endowment fund as a memorial to Kathleen Tague. Tax deductible gifts for this purpose may be forwarded to the NCSA Foundation, P.O. Box 12189, Winston-Salem, N.C., 27107.

A STONEWARE JAR . . . from the famed North Carolina Jugtown pottery firm, is from the Busbee period (1917-1947). The piece is slip decorated with brown-gray frogskin glaze, and is a gift of the N.C. Art Society through the Jacques Busbee Memorial Committee Fund.

When the new North Carolina Museum of Art officially opens to the public on Saturday and Sunday, April 9 and 10, the long awaited occasion will be celebrated with two days of festive entertainment on the grounds of the new facility, located at 2110 Blue Ridge Blvd., near the N.C. State Fairgrounds.

A Brief History

In 1956, after 30 years of planning and landmark state legislation, the N.C. Museum of Art opened its doors to display the first art collection purchased by a state legislature. The founding of the museum was the culmination of both government and private initiatives, a partnership which has continued through the years.

Two important events contributed to the museum's inception — the formation in 1924 of the N.C. Art Society, whose original goal was to encourage the founding of a state art museum. This organization began acquiring art works from private sources, and in 1928 received its most significant donation — the art collection of Robert F. Phifer, accompanied by a generous contribution of funds to be held in trust. The society's embryonic collection was displayed in the State Art Gallery, organized with the support of the legislature and located in a series of temporary quarters.

The second event was a landmark decision by the N.C. Legislature. In 1947, following the lean years of the Depression and the disruption of World War II, Greenville's Robert Lee Humber succeeded in persuading the assembly to appropriate $1 million for works of art, becoming the first state legislature in the United States to set aside funds for an art collection. Humber assured the legislators that the stipulated matching funds of $1 million had already been promised, in the form of a donation pledged by Samuel H. Kress, founder of the store chain and a noted art patron. Kress did not wish to be identified as the potential contributor, so the legislators passed the appropriation (by a narrow margin) on Humber's assurance of the stipulated donation. The Legislature later amended the stipulation to permit works of art valued at $1 million in lieu of a monetary donation.

The $1 million art collection, supplemented by $300,000 from the Phifer bequest, was used by the State Art Commission in 1952 to assemble an impressive nucleus of about 200 European and American paintings.

On April 6, 1956, the North Carolina Museum of Art opened in a renovated state Highway Division office building in downtown Raleigh. Four years later, the Kress Collection, estimated in value at more than $2 million, was installed.

The collection resulting from these gifts and purchases was particularly strong in Italian Renaissance and Baroque, Dutch and Flemish 17th-century, British 18th-century and American 19th-century work. Subsequent state appropriations, further gifts from the Phifer bequest and other generous donations have significantly enriched the collection.

In the past decade, the collection has been broadened to include Egyptian, Greek and Roman antiquities; objects representing the artistic heritage of African, Oceanic and pre-Columbian cultures; Judaic ceremonial art; modern Euroepan and American works, and an important representation of art by North Carolinians.

In 1961, the General Assembly officially separated the museum from the Art Society, making it a state agency.

The New Building

It was apparent from the beginning that the renovated office building was unsuitable as a permanent site for an art musuem. Only a small part of the collection could be shown at one time because of the lack of exhibition space, and it offered no educational facilities. It also lacked the critical necessary climate control to ensure maintaining safe temperature and humidity levels for the art works.

In 1967, the General Assembly created the State Art Museum Building Commisison, with 15 members to be appointed by the legislature and the governor. Sen. Thomas J. White of Kinston was appointed commission chairman and continues to serve in that capacity. Among the commission's duties were to determine the site for a new art museum and to employ an architect for the building.

What first appeared a straight-forward task became a major source of conflict and delay.

In 1969, legislators appropriated $3 million for the building project — the first of four appropriations which would total $10.75 million.

In the early 1970s the commission considered various sites for the new building. A private consulting firm recommended a location on Blue Ridge Boulevard, a site easily accessible from downtown Raleigh as well as from nearby urban areas. The Building Commission accepted the firm's recommendation and, in 1974, the 164-acre tract of land was designated as the site for the new museum.

Initial construction was delayed, however, by controversy over the site selection. Bills were introduced that would have required the new museum to be lcoated in the state government complex downtown, but legislators declined to reverse the Building Commission's decision. In 1975 the N.C. Supreme Court ruled, following legal challenges, that the commission was not limited to a downtown location or even to the city of Raleigh.

The Building Commission interviewed 43 architectural firms who visited the site at their own expense. In 1973, the commission signed an agreement with Edward Durell Stone and Associates of New York and Holloway-Reeves of Raleigh. Stone was known internationally for designs for the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi and the Kennedy Center in Washington. In North Carolina, he collaborated with Holloway-Reeves on the design for the new Legislative Building in Raleigh.

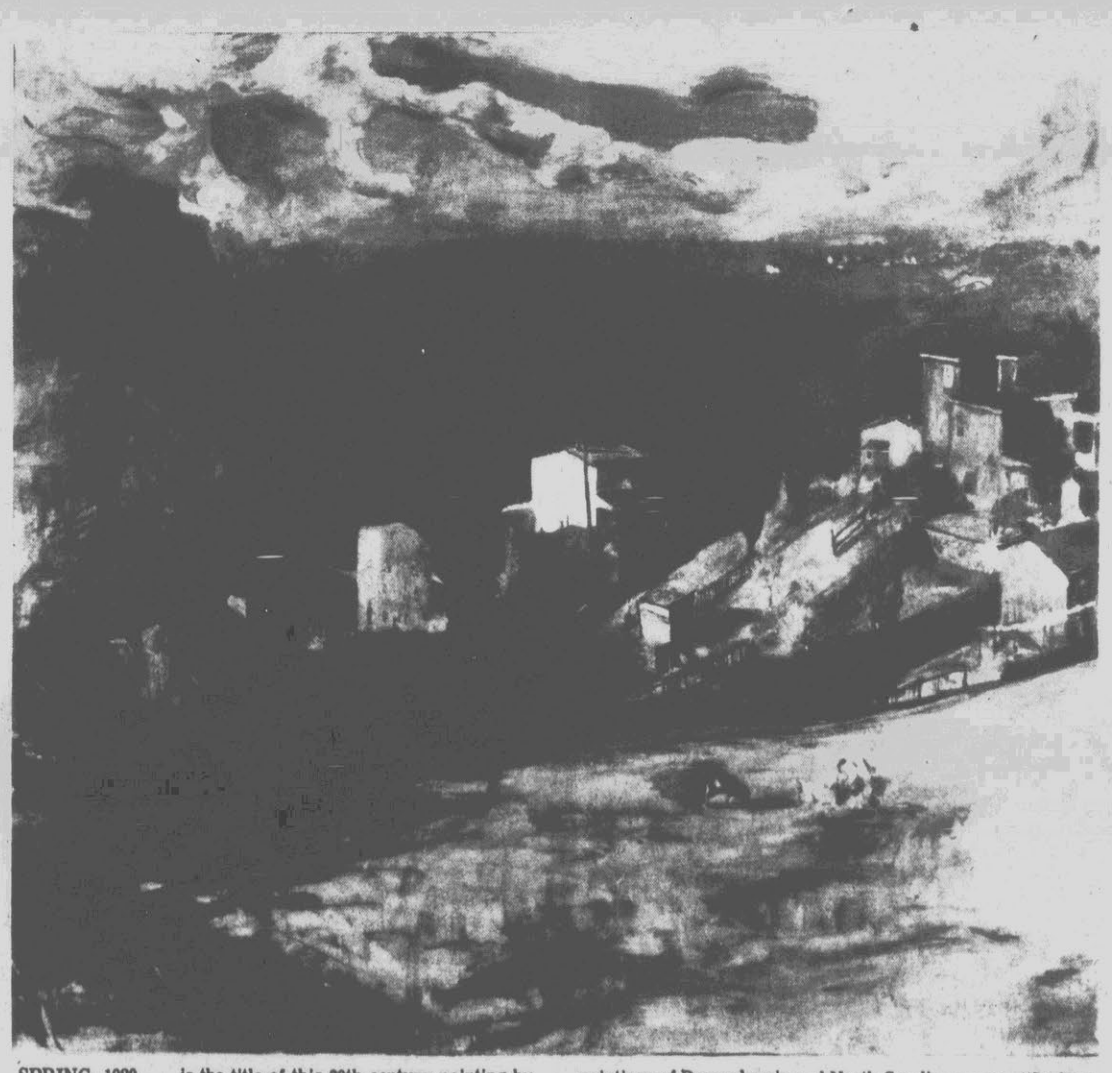
Construction of the new museum began in July 1977. Also, a statewide campaign was undertaken to raise funds to supplement the state appropriation. The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation made a $1.5 million challenge grant, and many groups throughout the state joined in raising funds. By December 1979, $5 million had been added to the building fund.

In May 1981 the new building was dedicated, and in February 1982 the museum staff moved into the administrative offices. Final construction work was delayed by disagreement between the architect and the contractor, with the contractor dismissed in December 1981. A new contractor was hired in May 1982, and the building was completed in August.

The new North Carolina Museum of Art, officially opening on Tuesday, contains 181,000 square feet of space. This provides four times the exhibiton space of the former building, plus an education wing with a 272-seat lecture hall, and an art reference library, a museum shop and restaurant — altogether making it a complete facility for the study and enjoyment of art in North Carolina.

FROM AFRICA . . . comes this ceremonial dish in the form of a rooster. The intricately carved wooden piece is from the Yoruba tribe of Nigeria in north central Africa. This work is a gift of Edward H. Merrin.

MORE THAN THREE CENTURIES OLD ... This large painting, "The Holy Family With St. Anne," was painted about 1633-35 by the great Flemish painter Peter Paul Rubens, who born born in 1577 and died in 1640. The oil on canvas work was acquired through the original state appropriation for works of art.



SPRING, 1930 . . . is the title of this 20th century painting by North Carolina artist Francis Speight. Speight, a native of Bertie County now living in Greenville, is noted for his paintings of Pennsylvania and North Carolina scenes. "Spring, 1930" is a Pennsylvania landscape and is a gift to the museum of Mr. and Mrs. Warner L. Atkins.

Q.—I am told that I cannot play a five-card major system unless I also use a forcing no trump response. Is this really so? If it is, what exactly is a forcing no trump response and why do I need it? — R. Maxwell, Silver Spring, Md.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You have been partially misinformed. You can play a five-card major system without using a forcing no trump response. However, to get maximum efficiency from your methods, you do need a comprehensive system that includes the forcing no trump response and several other little gimmicks that go along with it.

The cornerstone of methods using a forcing no trump response is this corollary: all two-over-one responses are virtually forcing to game. The forcing no trump response is used to pick up the slack for many hands in the 10-12 point range that are now difficult to bid because they no longer qualify for a two-level response.

Perhaps the most useful aspect of the forcing no trump response is that it allows you to differentiate between courtesy raises of partner's major suit and raises on relatively sound values. Also, between invitational and forcing raises of partner's suit with four trumps and those with only three trumps.

Most players who have adopted forcing no trump responses to five-card major openings also play that double raises of partner's suit are limit bids, i.e., they show 10-12 points and can be passed.

To illustrate how this integrated system works, suppose that partner opens one spade and you hold:

a) ♠KJxx ♡Ax ◇Qxx ♣xxxx
b) ♠KJx ♡Ax ◇Qxxx ♣xxxx

Both hands are worth 11 points, counting distribution. But there is no doubt that the second hand is the weaker of the two, because it has only three-card support for partner's suit instead of four. You can advise partner of the difference by jumping to three spades on the first. With hand b) you first respond with a forcing no trump and then jump to three spades at your next turn.

Similarly, suppose you hold the following and partner opens one spade:

c) ♠Qxxx ♡Kxxx ◇xx ♣Jxx
d) ♠KJxx ♡Axxx ◇xx ♣xxx

With hand c) you would like to raise partner with your four trumps in an effort to keep the opponents out of the bidding, but you would not like partner to bid again — he needs a magic hand if your side is to make a game. However, hand d) is a sound raise and game is not unlikely if partner has a good hand. Again you can differentiate between the two by raising to two spades on d), but first bidding the forcing no trump and then correcting to two spades with c).

We have barely touched on the ramifications of the forcing no trump structure. It is a complicated method that needs considerable partnership understanding. Using it before you understand it properly could lead to more trouble than it is worth.

Observatory Works In Dark

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — When Dr. Bruce Rafert goes to work, he likes to operate in the dark.

Rafert is the director of Appalachian State University's Dark Sky Observatory. He says the isolation of the observatory's mountain setting provides the darkest — and therefore the best — observatory site east of the Mississippi.

"There is a very low sky background, no city lights to be seen, and that makes it a very good site for an observatory," says Rafert. "We may have the most excellent location for an observatory of any place in the United States."

Astronomers say man-made lights ruin observatories by making it more difficult to train telescopes on distant stars.

The metal-domed Dark Sky Observatory sits high on a ridge at Phillips Gap, halfway between Boone and North Wilkesboro. Four Appalachian faculty members take turns manning the observatory.

It is also a classroom of sorts for the college's astronomy students, who use the observatory to conduct individual projects.

The observatory, which opened in May 1982, is now available to students from other colleges who want to do study projects. It is funded by Appalachian and federal grants.

It is unheated, which is a mixed blessing for the astronomers who work in the building. Astronomers at some other observatories have to use dry ice to keep sensitive telescope components cool.

Rafert said the observatory was unheated because hot air escaping from the dome roof through which the telescope peers would distort its vision.

"It would be about the same as heat waves shimmering on a highway on a hot summer day," Rafert said.

Dark Sky's 18-inch telescope is hooked up to two computers, which keep it aimed at a star that is being studied. The computers in the observatory are shrouded in sleeping bags to protect them from the cold.

Dear Abby

Gifts of Cold Cash Gain Warm Approval

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with you, but when you say requesting money as a gift (a money tree, for instance) is tacky and greedy, I must disagree.

I have always vaguely disliked giving "cold cash," but I've often loved getting it! We were married when times were tough. We were both unemployed, on food stamps and had moved 3,300 miles from home. Thank goodness, no one decided that "every couple needs a sterling silver bonbon dish!" (If friends had sent silver, we'd have sold it for food.) Our dear families sent us money, trading stamps and special gifts of food.

If you want to show off your own exquisite taste, fine — send an expensive, decorative item, but don't expect sincere thanks. If you want to give something to show the recipients you care, give them what they need.

Thank heavens, we are no longer in need of anything, but we wouldn't have lasted long without the letters from home with those $5 bills and a few postage stamps.

Love means never having to say, "Where are you storing the tea service we sent while you were moving around?"

POOR NO MORE IN PORTLAND

DEAR POOR: Read on for a letter from another reader who disagrees with me:

DEAR ABBY: You have always said that the recipient of a gift should graciously accept whatever comes his way. Sorry, but I must differ with you.

Recently my parents sent me a surprise gift. When I opened the box, I cried. It was a very beautiful and obviously expensive dress!

I am 30, again a student, and living on less than $400 a month. I must pay rent, buy food, books, clothing and pay my own health insurance premiums. While the dress is lovely, it's positively the last thing I need. I could use shoes, stockings, underwear, and just plain money!

I wrote my parents a two-page letter explaining the situation and asking them to either send money or ask specifically what I need.

A gift should not just please the giver. And in these hard times, the greatest gift can be in understanding that many of us, for a variety of reasons, actually need necessities.

Sometimes a useless gift can be painful.

ANNIE

DEAR ABBY: As a clergyman, I have witnessed innumerable weddings during my 40 years in the ministry, and I beg to differ with you on one point: Repeatedly you have said that it is "improper" to include with a wedding invitation the suggestion that cash would be appreciated more than any other gift.

I have seen young couples receive duplicate gifts of pots and pans, electric appliances, etc., when they could use money to pay for the reception, the hall, orchestra, caterers, photographer and honeymoon. And let us not forget a little something for the clergyman!

Prior to the wedding, the couple has probably contracted debts for an apartment, furniture, insurance, car, etc. Money would be far more practical than things they really don't need.

And while we're on the subject of money, please tell your readers that their clergyman does not need any more wallets, pens, pencils, handkerchiefs or shirts. A gift of cash would enable him to take a holiday break or a side trip during his vacation. These suggestions may break with tradition, but I'm sure they would make many people happier. If you publish this, don't use my name or location; I'm too well-known here.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the bride who wishes to carry her baby down the aisle during her church wedding: I think it would be fine. Good baby sitters are expensive and hard to come by these days.

I also think it would be appropriate for the bride's father to carry a blue or pink shotgun, depending on the sex of the child.

Lab Seeks New Peanut Variety To Fight Fungus

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer

DAWSON, Ga. (AP) — Scientists at the National Peanut Research Laboratory are hoping to develop a new variety of peanut resistant to a fungus that produces cancer causing chemicals called aflatoxins.

Under the direction of Richard J. Cole, the government laboratory's team of eight scientists has spent three years battling the problem of aflatoxin contamination in peanuts.

In those three years, they've developed methods of detecting the mold invasion in its early stages and ways to determine conditions under which contamination is likely to occur.

"But until it's eradicated, aflatoxin will continue to be the No. 1 problem wherever peanuts are grown," Cole said during an interview at the laboratory in southwest Georgia.

In Cole's opinion, the best approach to eradication is "genetic resistance" — developing a new variety of peanut that will withstand aflatoxin-producing fungus.

"If we had an aflatoxin-resistant peanut, there'd be no need to develop fungicides and then have to deal with all the environmental problems that come with them," Cole said.

The laboratory's progress in developing an aflatoxin-resistant peanut has been slowed by the lack of funding, however.

Operating on a $1 million appropriation under the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the laboratory is turning to the nation's $1.1 billion peanut industry for financial support of its research.

"Money is tight, so we're having to solicit research grants from the industry," the lab director said.

"We're a little handicapped, though, because we have such a low profile. A lot of people don't even know we exist, much less what we do."

The laboratory was first proposed in Congress in 1961 by Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia. Disagreement over where to locate the lab delayed its opening for eight years.

"They finally decided on Georgia because it's the No. 1 peanut producer, and in Georgia, the No. 1 area is around Dawson," Cole said.

The problem of aflatoxin came to the peanut industry's attention two years before Russell proposed the laboratory. It surfaced with a load of contaminated peanuts shipped from Brazil to Great Britain.

"The industry immediately recognized this was a major problem," Cole said.

Research began and the USDA initiated a system to monitor peanuts at all levels of production and marketing.

Because the USDA's monitoring system is so effective, Cole seized the problem of aflatoxin contamination as "more of an economic problem in the insdustry than a health problem."

If aflatoxin is detected, the contaminated peanuts are diverted to oil stock, where they are purified. Oil stock is not as economically rewarding as food markets, Cole explained.

"A lot of money can be lost by a farmer if his crop, even one five-ton shipment, has to be diverted," he said.

In drought-ridden 1980, for example, up to $50 million worth of peanuts produced nationwide were rejected for human consumption because of aflatoxin contamination, he estimated.

A 1979 study by a task force of the national Council for Agricultural Science and Technology reported that aflatoxins "have been established as a cause of liver cancer in certain animals."

"Less than one part per billion in the diet is sufficient to produce significant incidence of liver cancer in rainbow trout, the most sensitive animal known," the task force reported.

The task force, which included Cole, said that "in the United States, there is no evidence that aflatoxins are a significant cause of human liver cancer at this time."

It noted, however, that "evidence from developing countries showing an increase in incidence of liver cancer with an increase of aflatoxin content of the diet points to aflatoxins as a cause of human liver cancer.

It further noted that the aflatoxin intake per person in the Southeastern United States from a variety of foods is "about nine times greater than that in the country as a whole."

The concentration of aflatoxins is "high enough sporadically in peanuts and corn to be hazardous to domestic animals and humans," the report concluded.

Violin Maker Helps Others

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Violin maker William H. Moennig Jr. has a lifetime of expertise in a family skill dating to 1621 that he hopes will hone a chosen few into craftsmen in the restoration of stringed instruments.

At 77, the "Geigenbaumeister" — the only American to earn the German title of master violin maker — has taken a career turn. He has turned from making stringed instruments to teaching several students at Vanderbilt University's Blair School of Music the art of repairing and restoring violins, violas and cellos.

Moennig says the United States has 10 to 20 skilled stringed instrument makers who trained in the European pockets where he learned the craft and in schools in Chicago and Salt Lake City.

"People don't know how to take care of the instruments — the shops, no one. There's a lack of training. We're working so they'll be competent repairers and use the skill required not to ruin a violin through repairs," Moennig said with a slight German accent, a remnant of his own training in Markneukirchen, now in East Germany, and Mittenwald, Bavaria.

Tarboro Woman Recalls Her Days In The Mill

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — If Lizzie Armstrong's hands could talk, they would have a lot to say.

Bent now and calloused, they move like birds in frantic flight, pausing only to pick up a bit of cloth or a well-worn container she uses for dipping snuff.

These hands have chopped cotton, cleared ditches and looped stockings at Mayo Mill for the better part of this century.

For the past several years, Mrs. Armstrong's eyes haven't been able to see what her hands have been doing.

Mrs. Armstrong is blind. Her work these days is mostly confined to a bedroom in her home where she makes patchwork pillows and quilts.

She sews, not for the food and other necessities that work provides but so she will have something with which to occupy her days.

The place near Mrs. Armstrong's chair resembles an assembly line in a mill. There are small squares of cloth nearby that her daughter-in-law, May Armstrong, and her daughter Mary Smith have cut out for her.

In a bag near another chair are other pieces of cloth that she unravels with her fingers.

"I've got to do something. I've worked all my life. I'm waiting for that day when my Savior calls me to come home," she said.

She remembers the day in 1906 when her family moved to the Wahree Mill section of Tarboro from the Cotton Patch landing near Washington, N.C.

Her husband worked on several Edgecombe County farms until 1933 when he and his family moved back to town to go to work at the mill.

Mrs. Armstrong went to work at Mayo Mill at the age of 44. She stayed there until four days shy of her 76th birthday.

"On my 75th birthday, some of the girls I was working with had a jubilee for me with flowers and cake. On the day I left, I told 'em, 'It's time for me to hang up the hat,'" she said.

Old Water System Survives

Fountain Park, the piping delivers drinking water by gravity flow to two fountains.

Schaeffer and his wife gave the system to residents of Market Street in 1763. A petition was granted by the state legislature in 1845 for an act of incorporation, and a charter was issued to the Schaefferstown Water Co.

The non-profit water company exists on donations from people who come for water and from the more than 60 residents of Market Street.

The antique water system was built sometime between 1744 and 1750 by Schaeffer at a time when the town was called Heidelberg.

SCHAEFFERSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — If Alexander Schaeffer, founder of this quaint Lebanon County community, were alive today, he would be smiling.

The water system he deeded to the town 220 years ago continues to make a sip of cool spring water something special.

Residents of Market Street — in the form of the Schaefferstown Water Co. — still hold rights to the system, which is the oldest gravitational water conveyance system by underground pipes in America, according to historical records.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

At the risk of being called a scrooge, I must admit that I've never been overly fond of the Easter Bunny. I object to him most strenuously because he seems to me to represent a trivialization of Easter. As the Christian equivalent of the Day of Atonement, Easter should be as much a time for serious reflection by both adults and children as Yom Kipper is for the Jews.

Besides, the Easter Bunny is illogical. He simply does not inspire the level of belief that Santa does. Meg has been asking me for years what the connection between rabbits and eggs was, and her questions only got more urgent as she began to encounter the huge department store versions of bunnies sauntering around in their vests and bowties.

"I have a feeling those are not for real," she told me when she was 4. "Rabbits don't grow that big, and besides they're supposed to hop."

By now of course you have pegged me for what I am, a hopeless hypocrite. Yes, I am too cowardly to forego the tradition I despise. I don't want my children to feel left out. I'm terrified of their grandmothers. And I've always been afraid that if I reject one popular tradition as being false, my kids will start to question the ones that I love.

This year, as always, I'm wondering whether or not that's a valid excuse. After being disabused of her childish belief in Santa by a worldly first grader on her bus, Meg no longer believes in the Bunny, either. Naturally she made certain before she revealed this information to us that disbelief would not prevent her from getting her fair share of the loot.

"Do children who don't believe in Santa and the Easter Bunny still get presents?" she asked.

Like an idiot, I reassured her that they did.

Unlike Meg, Zachary believes too strongly in the Bunny. He thinks that Santa is making a second visit.

For several weeks he has been wildly scattering Easter grass from various parties over my carpet where it burrows and spawns. "I want a truck and a car," he would tell me, "and another truck and another car and ..."

"The Easter Bunny does not bring lots of toys," I kept asserting. "He brings mostly candy."

"Yes, lots of yummy candy," Meg would add, "and some small toys."

I could only glare at her. "He brings some candy and one or two small toys."

"I want lots of candy and a truck and a small car and another truck," Zachary would repeat.

"And he hides bunches of chocolate eggs everywhere," the voice of experience would pipe up again.

"Bunches of choc'late," Zachary would echo dreamily.

Visions of jellybeans melting in the recesses of my furniture kept dancing through my head.

Finally I got so exasperated that I asked Meg, "Why are you doing this to me? I'm trying to downplay the importance of the Easter Bunny and you're busy pushing Zachary into a frenzy of expectation. Why?"

Meg's eyes twinkled. "Well, I know that the Easter Bunny won't be able to stand disappointing Zachary. And its only fair that what he gets, I get, too."

This is hardly the sentiment I had hoped to foster.

Brace Offers Mobility

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — After 13 years in a wheelchair, Chuck Coulter rolled into Dan's Orthopedic Services, tried on a reciprocating gait brace "and walked around the office."

"It walks for you," the 40-year-old paraplegic said. "You just go along for the ride."

That office has become a steppingstone to a new life that starts when paralyzed and wheelchair-bound visitors wheel themselves through the front door, park their chairs in one of the offices and walk out the same door on two feet.

The key is about nine pounds of light polypropylene plastic and aluminum molded into a leg brace that allows the wearer to walk with a reciprocating gait — that is, with one foot in front of the other.

Additional support can be provided by crutches, walkers, canes or any walking aid that proves functional.

The reciprocating-gait brace, designed at the Louisiana State University, gives users a natural walking pattern. Earlier options — rigid braces and crutches — forced users to drag their legs behind them or swing and land both legs together, in a vaulting fashion.

Daniel Leal, owner of Dan's Orthopedic Service, was ready to retire when he discovered the brace being used at Louisiana State University. Leal, a specialist in designing and fitting orthopedic devices, changed his mind about retiring to devote his time to further improvement and application of the brace.

The system employs a leg brace and torso support to allow the wearer to stand in an upright position, Leal said. The key to the brace's design is a dual cable system to each leg that provides hip-joint stability by locking into place, yet permits the joint to unlock instantly when a step is attempted, he said.

The mechanism is triggered when the patient moves his upper body. As the person shifts weight, the cable twists and compresses on the side of the standing leg, allowing kinetic energy to be stored. When shifting to the other side, the stored energy is released.

When a person "de-weights," or takes weight off a leg, that leg will go forward, leading Leal and his co-workers, as well as patients, to say that the brace practically walks by itself.

Layered Windows Save Energy And Look Nice

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Not too long ago, the undressed window was the height of fashion. But the popularity of homey, informal rooms and the desire to conserve energy have made the well-dressed window a better bet recently.

Multiple materials at the window, layered to provide the ultimate in energy savings and decorative currency, have been turning up more often in decorating publications and in the work of leading designers. A trade publication confirmed the current trend by noting recently that a wider selection of window treatment products is now available in the stores.

Reflecting an increased concern with energy savings, sales of miniblinds and vertical blinds, shutters, shades, woven woods and curtains and draperies with energy-efficient linings and backings are showing the greatest sales increases.

The publication found, for example, that about 44 percent of department stores now specifically promote energy-efficient window treatments. Many more stores carry lined draperies and other products which help conserve energy.

Borrowing from the apparel industry which has used separates and the layered look for years to keep people comfortable in many climatic situations, interior designers have begun using layered treatments at the window.

This trend was evident in a recent display of window treatments created by six interior design firms for Hunter Douglas Window Products, a window blind manufacturer.

Robert S. Hart, a New York designer, combined miniblind vertical blinds and sheer side panels to provide maximum flexibility for a hypothetical home office with a ground floor window facing the street. Hart mounted 1-inch miniblinds on the lower half of the window to block views from the street, verticals on top of them to control lighting, and sheer side curtains to provide decorative interest.

According to the designer, vertical blinds are an improvement on sheers at the window since they can be drawn, tilted open, or completely closed for maximum light and mood control.

In the same show, Bill Goldsmith of LCS Inc. used multicolored vertical blinds at either side of a window as "draperies." Slender horizontal miniblinds directly over the window control light and provide privacy. Goldsmith created stripes at the top of the miniblinds by using slats in three different colors. He continued this "border" by painting the same colors on the walls at the same height.

Besides their ability to control privacy and light, layered window treatments can offer significant energy savings by trapping air at the windows, preventing warm air from leaving the room and cold air from entering. A disadvantage has been that such layered treatments produce a dark room. However, new products which overcome the problem are now available. One new energy-efficient product, for example, is a sheer polyester fabric with an ultra-thin layer of aluminum laminated to one side. The metalized fabric is translucent, but not transparent.

Tests have shown such fabrics can be as effective as an added pane of glass or a storm window, according to Nada Napoletan of Verasol USA, one of the manufacturers.

Q. What causes leaves of some of my azaleas to become abnormally large and succulent? (K.G., Fuquay-Varina)

A. Azalea leaf and flower gall is a fungal disease that is common and widespread in the spring. The disease causes the leaves to become swollen, curled and form fleshy galls that are pale green, white or pink in the early stages of the disease and brown and hard as the season progresses. Infected flowers are fleshy, waxy and swollen. The disease is more alarming than damaging. Gardeners can keep the disease in check by picking the galls and destroying them.

Q. When should I plant dahlia tubers? (D.G., Spindale)

A. Dahlias should be planted the middle of April along the coast, the first part of May in the Piedmont and around May 10 in the mountains.

Q. Some of the new growth on my pear tree has shriveled and turned black. My neighbor says the tree has fire blight. Is there anything I can do? (A.F., Buies Creek)

A. Fire blight is a bacterial disease which can severely damage and sometimes kill pears and apples. The name "fire blight" describes the most characteristic symptom of the disease — a blackening of twigs, flowers and foliage as though they were scourched by fire. Control is difficult, but many control practices help reduce the severity of the disease. Careful pruning to remove newly infected twigs and shoots reduces the spread of the disease. Cuts should be made 10 to 12 inches beyond any evidence of dead tissue. The trees must be monitored daily, and new infections must be removed promptly. Care must be taken to prevent spread of the bacteria by hands of cutting tools. Use a mixture of one part bleach and 10 parts water to sterilize the cutting tools between each cut. Control of insects can reduce the spread of the bacteria and the occurance of infections. During blooming, bees can carry fire blight bacteria. However, bees are beneficial insects because of their role in pollination. Thus, insecticides should not be used during blooming. Instead, this is the time streptomycin sprays should be used. These sprays will not harm the bees, but will aid in preventing the bacteria from infecting the blossoms. Succulent, rapidly growing twigs and shoots are most susceptible to fire blight. Management practices which reduce tree growth without an excessive loss of tree vigor are helpful. Such practices include not cultivating late into the summer and not using excessive amounts of nitrogen fertilizer.

Q. Aphids have infested my strawberry patch. How can I control them? (L.S., Knightdale)

A. Strawberry aphids can be controlled by spraying with endosulfan (Thiodan) or malathion according to instructions on the label.

Q. What is the best way to avoid frost damage to newly emerged or transplanted garden vegetables? (P.S., Granite Falls)

A. First, you should plant only after the average last day of frost. This date varies significantly across the state. The specific date for your area can be obtained by contacting the Office of the State Climatologist in Raleigh at 919-737-3056. Second, should a frost occur after this date, there are some things that can be done. Do not cultivate prior to a forecasted frost. Moist compact soil will provide several degrees of protection. Covering plants at sunset is also beneficial. However, do not let the covering touch the plant. Make tents if cloth is used. Baskets, plastic containers or pieces of plastic are also good. Remember to remove them in the morning so the following day's sun will warm the plants.

Q. What is meant by "hardening off" plants? (J.G., Woodleaf)

A. "Hardening off" is the process of conditioning plants to a new environment. Vegetable seedlings and bedding plants from a greenhouse are succulent and tender. They should be hardened off before being planted outside because a sudden change to lower humidity, more wind exposure and more intense sunlight can injure tha plants. Hardening off is accomplished by gradually exposing the young plants to outdoor conditions and, in some cases, giving them less water and fertilizer. Hardening off is often done in a cold frame. Hardened off plants will not have the lush look of plants direct from the greenhouse, but they are much better garden plants.

Q. I had several snapdragons to overwinter. Is this uncommon? Will they bloom again this year? (P.B., Sherrills Ford)

A. Snapdragons often survive the winter in North Carolina, espcially if the winter is mild or if they are mulched or protected. They will bloom again this year, probably before the snapdragon transplants you set out this spring. To keep snapdragons blooming, remember to remove flowers that have already bloomed. Break the flower stalk off where the leaves end and the flowers begin.

Q. I pruned by grapes last week. Now sap is oozing out of every cut. Will this hurt the vines? Did I wait too late to prune? (O.P. Sanford)

A. You did not wait too late. "Bleeding" is common on pruned grapes. It will not hurt the vines.

Q. I plan to order some gooseberries. How should I plant and take care of them? (T.E., Archdale)

A. You should plant them outside of North Carolina. It is illegal to plant gooseberries or currants within the state becaue are alternate host plants for white pine blister fungus. This fungal disease is deadly to white pines.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A patio at the rear of a house — or anywhere else — gives the family the kind of indoor-outdoor living necessary to enjoy every season of the year. Whether or not the area has a roof, it gains a measure of distinction if the floor is made of brick.

Installing a brick patio floor can be transformed from a fairly tedious chore requiring a certain degree of skill into a project that even a novice do-it-yourselfer can handle without much trouble. If you work carefully and have patience, you have the ingredients necessary to achieve a presentable result. What places the job into the workable category is the absence of mortar between the bricks or under them. Instead, sand is used both as the bed on which the bricks are laid and the material for the joints.

The first step is to level the ground on which the floor is to be installed, taking into consideration the 2 inches of sand that will be there, the thickness of the bricks and the height at which you want the surface of the bricks to be. It is best to use paving bricks that are weather-resistant. Take the measurements of the area to be covered to the dealer and have him estimate the amount of bricks that will be required. You can also ask his advice on the king of edging needed. Redwood, pressure-treated wood or even bricks can be used, but you must make sure they are fastened so that they do not shift when the patio is walked on.

When you level the soil, loosen it to help drainage and allow a very slight pitch so that rain water flows off the bricks when the job is finished. This will require the use of a long level and constant checking as you proceed. When you are sure everything is the way you want it, pour in the sand, smoothing it out at the same pitch. The sand should be purchased, if possible, at the lumber yard or building supply dealer where the bricks are bought so that the dealer will know how it is being used.

The bricks now must be laid one by one, which is where patience comes in. Set each brick firmly in place and be sure the top of each is level with the top of the next. No matter how simple the pattern you have chosen, sketch it roughly on paper so that you can refer to it frequently as you move on. And use the level often to keep the pitch constant.

Every few feet or so, stand away from the completed part and look at it. Sometimes you can spot something that escapes you close up. When all the bricks have been installed, give the new floor a thorough inspection to see whether any last-minute changes are necessary. But be careful where and how you walk, since the bricks have been installed without any joint support. Now is the time to fill the joints with sand. You cannot do each joint by itself, so dump the sand into them as best you can and then use a pushbroom to sweep it into the openings. You probably will have to go over the whole thing a second time until the sand between the bricks eems fairly solid.

At this point, use your garden hose at the spray setting and wash the patio. Work very carefully, always spraying and never holding the hose in one place for more than a fraction of a second. This spraying will clean the surface of the bricks, but it also will cause some of the sand to settle in the joints, so get out the pushbroom again and, after some more sweeping, repack the joints that need it.

One of the advantages of a patio floor of this type is you do not have to wait until the mortar dries and gets hard. One of the disadvantages is you have to keep a check on the floor the first few weeks to see which, if any, bricks must be reset and whether any other adjustments are necessary.

THE PRODUCT — A hot water heater said to provide more hot water for less money.

Manufacturer's claim — That this heater provides virtually unlimited hot water and saves fuel by reducing the average boiler water temperature ... that its secret is a heat exchanger that dissipates heat quickly, turning cold water hot almost instantly ... that it stores hot water efficiently in an inner tank made of polyethylene ... and that this inner tank is covered with a totally sealed casing made of deep-drawn steel.

THE PRODUCT — A clear glass that makes windows, skylights, residential solar greenhouses and southwall windows and glazings more energy-efficient.

Manufacturer's claim — That the glass reduces the amount of sunlight absorbed within the glass by iron oxides and other impurities ... that its low-iron content lets in 16 percent more sunlight than ordinary glass and collects at least 25 percent more BTU's from the sun ... that it has a clearer and less green-colored appearance at the edges than conventional glass ... and that it transmits up to 90 percent of total solar energy.

Tips To Avoid Damping-Off

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Many gardeners starting vegetables from seed they expect to transplant outdoors later run into "damping-off" problems in the spring.

Damping-off is a fungus disease that often hits seedlings that appear to be growing well, then wilt and die. Generally, the stem shows a shriveled black or water-logged area at soil level.

Sometimes the same fungus will cause seeds to rot and seedlings to die before they rise above the soil. Sometimes poor germination is blamed for failure to get healthy, compact young plants.

Several pathogenic fungi, all common in soil, may cause damping-off. Most often seedlings are attacked, but under certain conditions, more mature plants may be hit.

To reduce chances of damping-off, use a sterile planting medium for germinating seed and growing transplants. Don't overcrowd, over-water or over-fertilize, particularly with nitrogen. Also encouraging the disease are high humidity, warm temperatures and deep planting.

If you do experience damping-off, discard the plants and soil and begin again with a clean container, new seeds and sterile growing medium.

Just as youngsters turn away from castor oil, a substance that has the same effect on the boll weevil, a destructive cotton plant pest, has been found by U.S. Department of Agriculture researchers.

It is a natural produce of the tung tree, native to China, that flourished on southern U.S. plantations when its oil was added to paint as a drying agent. Petrochemical products replaced tung oil in paints.

Tung trees may become abundant again if a derivative of its oil catches on among cotton farmers as a weevil "anti-feed."

The USDA reports that Colorado-based Bio-Systems Research Inc., is ready to market the tung oil derivative. It notes that as a spray, it keeps boll weevils away from cotton plants for up to a month and is nontoxic to plants and warm blooded animals.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I recently put up walls in our attic. The studding already was there, so all I had to do was to install 4-by-8 sheets of gypsum board. The framework had been erected somewhat differently than is usually done in an attic, so that the ceiling portion of it is straight across rather than at a slant. Now I intend to put up a ceiling material and would like it also to be gypsum board, but I am afraid it would be too tough to handle the large sheets by myself. What is your suggestion?

A. — You can, of course, install ceiling tiles, a project which must be done carefully but requires no large muscles. Or you can place an order for 4-by-4 sheets of gypsum board, which are somewhat easier to handle. But if you want to use the 4-by-8 sheets, it can be done by making a couple of wooden supports. A support is made with a 2-by-4 or some other similar-sized piece of wood. To the top of it, attach another piece of wood, about 30 inches or so. This second piece should be at right angles to the first except that it will form a T when completed. This T should be long enough so that it can be used as a wedge. Even then, it will require some maneuvering to get the panel in place while you are on the ladder and then push the T into position. You will also have to get a second T into place so the entire panel is held by the two Ts while you make the attachment to the framework. If it sounds like quite a project, it is.

CRYPTOQUIP 4-2

MGTYVC'W ECKMXVB: 'A FGTTKJ YVVE G WVFCVJ; A'B G JVXXVC.'

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: CURIOUS PILOT TURNED CARPENTER USED A PLANE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals N.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Repairs Needed

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The tradition-rich Westerkerk (Western Church), its high clock tower and 47 resonant carillon bells a symbol of Amsterdam's historical evolution and bustling present-day life, has developed a chronically leaky roof.

That is hardly cause for alarm considering the structure is more than three centuries old, but the problem reaches far deeper than any puddles on the venerable church's wooden floor.

The Dutch government, faced with a projected 1983 budget deficit of more than $11.5 billion, is finding it increasingly difficult to pay for renovating the country's historic monuments, such as the Westerkerk.

At the same time, the Westerkerk, where the Dutch painter Rembrandt was entombed in 1669 and Dutch Queen Beatrix was married in 1966, needs between $1.5 million to $2.25 million to replace its aging slate roof.

The church could also use some interior refurbishment, but Amsterdam's city officials at this point just hope that a roof repair subsidy will be forthcoming from sparse public funds.

"The roof of the Westerkerk is so bad that if it is not restored, the church would have to be closed down at least temporarily," said Babs Rentjes, deputy director of Amsterdam's department for preservation and restoration of historical buildings and sites.

Ms. Rentjes added that what is important about keeping the Westerkerk open is that it is one of the few historically significant churches in the city still active "and very busy."

The only sign of the famous painter in the Westerkerk today is a commemorative plaque which misleadingly reads "Here lies Rembrandt."

Lucrative Firm Faces Questions About Operations

By PEGGY ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — For 15 years, as the wizard of America's garbage, Waste Management Inc. seemed able to turn even the most noxious poisons and toxic wastes into gold.

It made a steady climb to the top as the world's largest waste-handler, taking on industrial poisons in North America, garbage collection in Saudi Arabia and street-cleaning in Argentina. Two of its ships ply the oceans, burning chemical wastes at sea.

But now environmentalists, citizens and reporters are asking disturbing questions — particularly about Waste Management's handling of cancer-causing industrial wastes.

There are also allegations that Waste Management has used its market dominance to crowd out competitors.

The billion-dollar success story began in 1956, when the company president, Dean L. Buntrock, was asked to take over the family's Ace Scavenger Co. in Chicago. The firm had 12 trucks and $750,000 in annual revenue.

"I certainly didn't see it as an opportunity at the time, but that's what it turned out to be," says Buntrock, then a Denver insurance man whose only business experience was helping his father sell tractors in South Dakota.

Ace collected commercial trash — largely paper — and burned it in its own incinerator, an innovation for a small hauler. Buntrock rapidly came to appreciate the industry's potential.

"Everyone has garbage," he says. "Once you got a customer and took care of him, you didn't need to sell him the service every month ... You could predict your cash flow and revenue and grow very quickly and easily."

Over the years, Buntrock consolidated several small Chicago-area companies and expanded into Madison and Milwaukee, Wis.

Meanwhile, from 1962 to 1968, H. Wayne Huizenga, a relative by marriage, transformed a one-truck collection company in Pompano Beach, Fla., into Southern Sanitation Service, with more than 40 trucks and a sanitary landfill.

In 1968, Buntrock, Huizenga and Lawrence Beck of the Acme Disposal Co. in Chicago joined forces to create Waste Management. Their combined income then was in the $5 million to $6 million range.

In 1971, the company went public and began to expand, using what spokesman Don Reddicliffe calls "centralized finance and decentralized control." Within 30 months, it was in 50 North American communities and listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The company now employs about 14,000 people, with 200 subsidiaries in 30 states and Canada. It operates 60 sanitary landfills, 10 hazardous waste disposal sites and two non-hazardous oilfield disposal sites.

It still handles garbage, but now serves millions of homes and businesses.

Last year, Waste Management reported net income of $106.5 million, up 27 percent over 1981, on revenue of $966.5 million, up 25 percent.

Central to the company's success is its uncanny timing.

Its early growth was enhanced by the Solid Waste Disposal Act in 1965. The company then anticipated stricter hazardous waste controls and built a waste analysis laboratory and treatment plant for its emerging Chemical Waste Management subsidiary.

After the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act became law in 1976, the subsidiary became a leading government suppler for cleanup at abandoned hazardous waste sites.

Last year, as Congress bore down on nuclear waste legislation, Waste Management entered that field.

There have been difficulties. Competitors and state and federal authorities have alleged improper influence of government bodies and monopolistic practices — charges Waste Management has denied.

Last month, a Georgia subsidiary was fined $375,000 on conviction of federal price-fixing charges. A Chicago-area competitor, Mr. Frank Inc., has filed two antitrust suits. Reddicliffe declined comment on that case on grounds that it was in litigation.

But the assault began in earnest last month, after a host of charges leveled at the Environmental Protection Agency renewed public interest in environmental issues. Waste Management was bombarded with queries on reports of improper handling of hazardous wastes in Alabama, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The company's stock was trading at $59.875 on March 18 — down $2 from a 12-month high of $61.875. After a New York Times report March 21 on Waste Management's problems, it fell to $41.625 within two days. The drop cost shareholders about $1 billion, Buntrock said.

The stock has been heavily traded since and stood at $43.625 at midweek, according to Doug Augenthaler, a senior analyst for E.F. Hutton & Co.

A Cook County grand jury is investigating Waste Management's waste-handling practices and the company faces a $1.1 million state suit alleging improper disposal of carcinogenic dichlorobenzidine, or DCB, at its landfill in Calumet City, southeast of Chicago.

Waste Management has denied DCBs were illegally dumped, but said it was investigating a related allegation that manifests for incoming shipments were not forwarded to the state's environmental agency.

Last Friday, angry citizens swarmed into Waste Management's pleasant, airy headquarters to denounce a planned dump site on Chicago's South Side that also has been criticized by state officials.

On Monday, a stockholder filed a federal suit in Chicago, charging the company's failure to divulge its environmental problems had artificially inflated the price of stock he purchased Feb. 15.

And on Tuesday, the Illinois attorney general's office acknowledged an investigation into purported antitrust violations.

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A most productive day when you can get the support and backing to gain your aims. Avoid the extremes of either limiting yourself too much or being too optimistic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get busy at whatever is of a routine nature and get it done efficiently. Steer clear of new ventures at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Making new arrangements is wise today but don't try to force anything with others. Use your own good judgment.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get in touch with a clever friend who can assist you in getting out of a difficult situation. Show that you have poise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take no risks in motion today. Avoid a higher-up whose ideas are radically different from yours.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study new ways and means for operating more efficiently in the future. Attend a group affair and listen to new ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Engage in inexpensive pleasure that will help to lighten your spirit. Hunches are tricky, so don't rely on them today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Not a good day for having discussions with associates, or there could be arguments instead of reaching right decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good talk with new associates brings fine results at this time. Steer clear of unwanted problems. Show that you have wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Those fine ideas you have can now be put in operation most successfully. Postpone making an important decision.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to find out what family members expect of you and endeavor to please them. Take needed health treatments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get out into the world of activity and stop fretting about something you can do little about. Make plans for the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to the fine and practical ideas a good friend gives to you and use to your advantage. Learn to trust others more.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she should be taught to be practical where new ideas are concerned. Give a comprehensive education that will be modern and standard at the same time. Expose to ethical and religious training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

'Dinah Shore' Yields Riches

The final round of the Nabisco/Dinah Shore Invitational, one of the most prestigious events in women's sports and the richest tournament in women's golf, will be held Sunday, April 3, at the Mission Hills Country Club in Rancho Mirage, Calif. NBC will televise the event from 4-6 p.m.

Boasting a purse of $400,000, a $90,000 increase over last year's money, the Nabisco/Dinah Shore will feature the finest field in women's golf, including Nancy Lopez, Jan Stephenson, Sally Little (defending champion), Jo Anne Carner, Beth Daniel, Donna Caponi, Sandra Haynie, Amy Alcott and many more. First prize is a record $55,000, a $10,000 boost over the 1982 winner's share.

Last year, Ladies Professional Golf Association commissioner John D. Laupheimer designated the tournament as a Major Championship, only one of four in the world, and called the tournament "the most important women's sports event in the world." That, combined with the new purse, a stellar field, tremendous galleries and a star-studded Celebrity Pro-Am featuring the likes of former President Gerald Ford, Perry Como, Jack Lemmon, Kirk Douglas, Willie Mays, Fred MacMurray, Wayne Rogers, Frank Gifford, Charley Pride, Don Meredith, Bryant Gumbel, Christopher Lee and Dinah Shore herself makes the golf classic one of the most popular women's sports events on television.

"I am proud of the style and the respect with which our tournament is treated throughout the whole world of sports," says Dinah Shore. "The most exciting thing about our tournament is its importance not only in terms of the purse — which is really pretty wonderful — but how prestigious and meaningful it has become to women in sports and women in general."

Defending champion Sally Little and other leading players have called the tournament "the Masters of the LPGA Tour."

"A $400,000 purse is pretty incredible," says Little. "But without the money, most of the top players have always felt that the Nabisco/Dinah Shore was something special.

When the first Dinah Shore event teed-off 12 years ago, this precedent-setting tournament doubled the previous year's top tour prize of $10,000 and tripled the average LPGA purse — ranging between $20,000 and $40,000 — to $110,000.

The finest golfers on the Ladies Professional Golf Association (LPGA) tour, including (clockwise from top right) defending champion Sally Little, Nancy Lopez and Jan Stephenson, will compete in the Nabisco Dinah Shore (inset) Invitational. NBC will air the final round on Sunday, April 3 (4-6 p.m.).

Newsman At Sea With Co-anchor

WYN in Boston takes a bold step to improve the ratings of its television news in the premiere episode of "Goodnight, Beantown," airing Sunday, April 3 (8-8:30 p.m.) on CBS. It hires a comely co-anchor to share the news desk with its veteran anchorman, Matt Cassidy, much to Cassidy's surprise.

Bill Bixby stars as Cassidy and Mariette Hartley as Jennifer Barnes, his new partner on the air — and off, also — if her 13-year-old daughter Susan (Tracey Gold) can work it.

Cassidy is far from delighted to learn belatedly that Jennifer has been hired to share his news broadcast. His resentment makes his and Jenny's first week on the air a rocky experience for both of them. Their relationship is compounded by the fact that they have coincidentally become next-door neighbors in Matt's formerly tranquil apartment building, with Susan set on being a matchmaker.

"Goodnight, Beantown" also stars George Coe as Dick Novak, WYN's news director, and Charles Levin as Sam Holliday, the station's news producer. The series is filmed at The Burbank Studios in California.

Bixby, a sixth-generation Californian, didn't start acting professionally until he graduated from the University of California at Berkeley and completed a stint in the Army. Moving to Hollywood, Bixby parlayed a job as a lifeguard into a two-year modeling career when a visiting advertiser offered him $100 a day to pose for some automobile ads in Detroit.

Back in California, Bixby enrolled in drama classes and was spotted by an agent in a showcase production. Television and movie roles quickly followed.

"Goodnight, Beantown" is Bixby's fifth series, following the successful runs of "My Favorite Martian," "The Courtship of Eddie's Father," "The Magician" and "The Incredible Hulk."

Mariette Hartley and Bill Bixby

Miss Hartley appeared with Bixby several years ago in an episode of "Hulk" and won an Emmy Award for her performance.

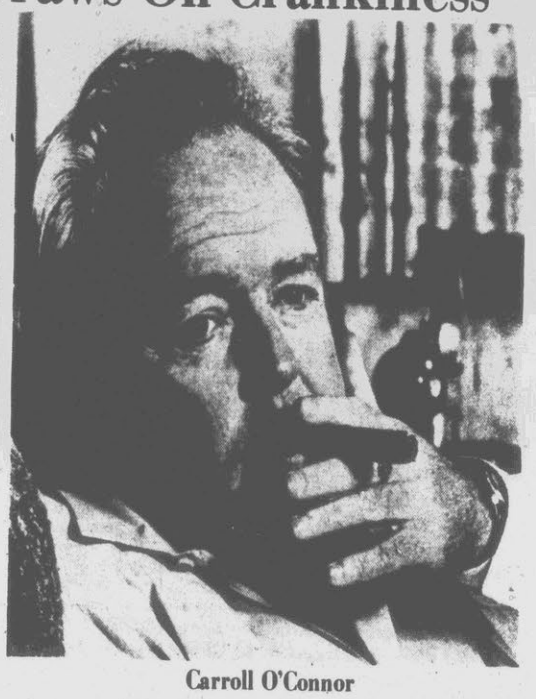
'Archie' Draws On Crankiness



Carroll O'Connor

HOLLYWOOD - Carroll O'Connor's place in swank Beverly Hills and Archie Bunker's place in blue-collar Queens obviously have very little in common, other than the fact that the proprietors are one and the same.

He can frequently be found at The Gingerman, which he co-owns with actor Patrick O'Neal, greeting diners, holding court at his corner table, or mingling with patrons.

That's where I caught up with him one recent afternoon for an interview frequently interrupted by phone calls from studio and network executives and producers.

He was particularly touched that day by a letter he had received from a woman in Boynton Beach, Fla., who enclosed a check for $20.

"My friend tells me that she read that you're broke and on hard times," the woman wrote. "Please accept my gift to help tide you over."

O'Connor said he intended to write to the woman, assuring her that he wasn't broke.

Far from being broke, O'Connor has made a fortune since "All in the Family" debuted in January, 1971. He is the only remaining original cast member.

The show was retitled "Archie Bunker's Place," and although its ratings are not as strong as they once were, O'Connor is ready to continue if the network renews. In what appears to be a test of its waning strength, CBS has moved the series from Sunday to Monday nights at 8, where it faces life without "60 Minutes" as a lead-in.

Is there any of Archie Bunker in Carroll O'Connor?

"An actor does bring a lot of himself into a role," he replied. "I am a bit cranky about a lot of things. I draw upon crankiness."

He also indicated he is miffed with Sally Struthers, who played his daughter, Gloria, until 1978. Miss Struthers returned to television in her own series, "Gloria," a spinoff of the character. O'Connor says he helped put that new series together and even directed the two episodes of "Archie Bunker's Place" that introduced Miss Struthers and co-star Burgess Meredith in their new portrayals.

"She never called," O'Connor complained. "To this day, she hasn't thanked me."

He recalls that Norman Lear, who created "All in the Family," wanted it to "die with dignity" several years ago.

"I thought I could continue the show with dignity," he said.

Technical Advice

Retired FBI agent John F. Morrison has opened shop as technical consultant to film-tv industry on matters of FBI procedures and other law enforcement activities by the Feds.

Efforts Rewarded

The critically acclaimed NBC drama "Cocaine: One Man's Seduction" and its star, Dennis Weaver, will be honored by the Southern California Motion Picture Council at an awards luncheon to be held Wednesday, April 6, at the Sportsman's Lodge in Studio City, California. (The movie was telecast Sunday, Feb. 27 on NBC.)

Charles Fries, the executive producer, and David Goldsmith, the producer, will accept Golden Halo Awards of Excellence. Dennis Weaver will accept a Bronze Halo Award of Special Merit for his performance in the drama and his outstanding contributions to the entertainment industry.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: We would like to know why they killed the part of Ciji, portrayed by Lisa Hartman, on CBS' "Knot's Landing." My friends and I have decided that that was a major mistake. Ms. Hartman really made the show worth watching. Please tell us why this had to happen. PHYLLIS BRITT AND PHIL HUGGINS, LUMBERTON, N.C.

TO PHYLLIS AND PHIL IN LUMBERTON: Don't be so unhappy. Ciji may be gone from "Knots Landing," but Lisa is back in ABC-TV's new action-filled dramatic series, "High Performance." Catch Lisa, ex-"Devlin Connection" star Jack Scalia, and Rick Edwards as a crack team of high-risk security school instructors on Wednesdays at 8 p.m. on ABC.

DEAR MICHELE: Is NBC's "The Family Tree" coming on again, perhaps in the fall? LAURA SMITH, GOLDSBORO, N.C.

TO LAURA IN GOLDSBORO: No. "The Family Tree" was a 'limited' series from Comworld Productions.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please tell me something about Howard Hesseman? SUSAN REID, LEXINGTON, N.C.

TO SUSAN IN LEXINGTON: Before he was Dr. Johnny Fever on "WKRP In Cincinnati," he was Don Sturdy — a bona-fide 'DJ' for KMPX in San Francisco, the nation's first underground rock 'n' roll station. In 1971, he took his own name back when he was cast in his first feature film, "Steelyard Blues," with Jane Fonda, and he's been operating under his own name since. Hesseman was born in Salem, Oregon, on February 27 and attended the University of Oregon. Hesseman is admittedly not a proponent of television, and since the cancellation of his series, he has made few guest appearances. Recently he appeared as Sam Royer in a special three-part story on "One Day At A Time." He is divorced and lives in Hollywood.

DEAR MICHELE: Would you please tell me a little about Constance Towers, who plays the role of Clarissa McCandless on daytime's "Capitol"? TONYA TYNER, SURFSIDE BEACH, S.C.

TO TONYA IN SURFSIDE BEACH: Constance Towers hails from Whitefish, Montana, where she was born on May 20. She attended the Juilliard School of Music and the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. A Broadway veteran, she completed a record-breaking two-year run with Yul Brynner in "The King and I," prior to her role on "Capitol." Miss Towers is married to former actor John Gavin, who is now the American Ambassador to Mexico. They are the parents of four children, Maureen, Michael, Maria and Christina.

Jose Jimenez Still Around

"I've been on strike at least four times against myself," says Bill Dana, the versatile producer who carries union cards as actor, writer and publisher.

"I've been working in the television medium for 30 of the 33 years it's existed, and it seems I've done almost everything. Right now I would love to be part of a hit series."

Dana plays Bernardo, Zorro's faithful servant, in the new comedy series "Zorro and Son," which premieres Wednesday, April 6 (8 p.m.), on CBS.

"There's a lot of Jose Jimenez in the character of Bernardo," Dana added. Jimenez is the famous character he created for the "Steve Allen Show" in 1959. "Bernardo has more guts than Jose, but he has the same qualities of gentility and sweetness."

Dana recalled that the Jimenez character emerged when he was writing a skit about a school for Santa Clauses. "I thought it might be funny if Jose was the instructor and spelled 'ho,ho, ho' as 'jo, jo, jo,'" he said. "The instant I did the character, the switchboards lit up and the letters came pouring in. For a long time, people sincerely believed there was a man named Jose Jimenez."

In addition to acting in numerous movies, Dana has extensive writing accomplishments. His credits include "The Bill Dana Show," and the creation of private detective Maxwell Smart and the only half-hour series episode ever to be nominated "Show of the Year" by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

Dana has also co-authored a book entitled "The Laughter Prescription," with Dr. Lawrence J. Peter ("The Peter Principle").

"I'm a jokist," Dana says. "I firmly believe in the therapeutic value of laughter. As far as religion goes, I believe my survival lies in the knowledge that it's all a big joke and there's a standup cosmic in charge."

Dana admits that his career has been like a "smorgasbord" and likes the diversity of his past endeavors. "There's nothing like the gratification that you get from the affirmation of an audience," he said. "But then again, there's nothing like seeing material you've written win approval."

Statue Of Liberty Disappears?

If you tune in CBS on Friday, April 8 at 9 p.m. expecting to see "Dallas," you won't see the top-rated show. Illusionist David Copperfield has made the Ewing clan disappear.

The 26-year-old has previously done the same thing to a Ferrari, and a Lear jet, and before the hour-long "The Magic of David Copperfield V" disappears, Copperfield will attempt — and it's OK to say he'll succeed — in making the Statue of Liberty disappear. Don't fear, Copperfield is such a nice guy he has made all the aforementioned reappear, including "Dallas" and 225-ton Miss Liberty. This is his fifth CBS special and in each he has withstood the pressure of topping his previous achievements.

Originally he thought about doing his "now you see it, now you don't" specialty to the Queen Mary, but after having recently spent so much time touring, Copperfield felt he wanted to make a statement while also performing his prestigious prestidigitation.

"Traveling through Europe I met many magicians, some of whom had escaped from behind the Iron Curtain," Copperfield explains. "Then I realized some others can't leave, even if they wanted to, so I decided to spotlight the concept that we don't appreciate freedom till it's gone."

The Statue of Liberty disappearance, filmed last September, required three nights' work for 300 people.

"Magic must be done in a controlled atmosphere," says Copperfield, who is the special's producer. "Usually it's performed on stage with a proscenium and the audience sitting where we want them. If we'd had boats all around the statue it would be like sitting backstage at a magic show."

Situating the audience for this event was the toughest task of the Statue of Liberty finale. However, the 20 tourists, chosen at random from the Liberty Island crowd, were all convinced that Copperfield had made the statue disappear and reappear.

Television viewers will have the added benefit of watching the act on radar. When the curtain is raised to cover the statue, a blip is still seen on the screen. Moments later, the blip disappears — as does the statue — only to resume when Miss Liberty reappears.

Linda Miller Loves The Mississippi

"Calm and cooperative one day, cold and bitter the next. Sometimes hard, sometimes seductive. So romantic and so appealing, a character with a voice of its own."

The object of Linda Miller's affection is not a living being; nonetheless, it is alive and full of personality. Her passionate observations are directed toward the Mississippi River, the locale of "The Mississippi," a limited CBS series airing Fridays (10-11 p.m.).

"I grew up on 59th St., in New York City," she explained, "but I have such a strong feeling of belonging here, although I really don't know why. Perhaps, because the river is like a family. Information gets passed along back and forth between the boats, so people always know what you're up to."

What Miss Miller is up to, at the time, is waiting for her first scene of the day. As she sits in her small mobile dressing room, she describes her role of Stella McMullen, a former client and now close friend of attorney Ben Walker (Ralph Waite), who joins him and Lafayette Tate (Stan Shaw) in adventure along the mighty Mississippi.

Although Stella has the potential of becoming a role model for other women, Miss Miller has no intentions of patterning her character after any female leads now on television.

"It might be easier to copy," she says, "but it's more exciting to put together something of value and simply go for it. I don't want Stella to be Hollywoodized into a glamorous woman who just happens to be standing on the Mississippi. She should certainly be appealing, but this woman's vanity doesn't her life. I don't want her to have an ego that takes over the situation. She just gets on with life."

Miss Miller has definite ideas about Stella, and where she wants to go with the character.

"My goal is not to be the poster girl for anything," she says. "As a woman, I hope to create a character that I would aspire to be — tolerant, caring, less fearful and more adventuresome than I might be myself."

That might take some doing, since Miss Miller has a very active and, some might say, adventuresome life herself.

Schneider To Host

The "Star Search" special, a two-hour primetime Bob Banner Associates' syndication show to air in April, will be hosted by actor John Schneider.

The show kicks off the "Star Search" series, which is scheduled to premiere this September. The series will feature talent competing for prizes in eight different categories with each act receiving a minimum of $1000 for appearing.

Winners will be allowed to perform on the following week's show and continue on to the finals to compete for the $100,000 top prize for each category.

New To ABC

Susan Clark and Alex Karras have finalized negotiations with ABC to develop "The Lady and The Gladiator," a two-hour film in which they will star. The romantic comedy is tentatively scheduled for a late summer start.

The project is their first for ABC under their independent banner, Georgian Bay Productions.

'The' Tournament Eyed

Al McGuire, sportscaster and ex-coach of the Marquette Warriors, will have a forum for his insights on the championship game of the national basketball tournament on Sunday, April 3 (1:30-2:30 p.m.), when NBC airs "Al McGuire's NCAA Special." CBS will present the final game of the tournament Monday night.

The special, featuring McGuire with coaches, fans and others who help to make college basketball the entertaining spectacle it is, will include segments produced on location in Albuquerque, N.M., the site of the NCAA championship game.

"There are a lot of Al McGuire junkies out there," says NBC producer David Neal, who has worked with McGuire all season, preparing halftime features for the network's basketball broadcasts. "And they're not all just basketball fans. Because of Al's wit and charm, those halftimes and this special are targeted for the total audience, not just the basketball junkies."

The outspoken McGuire will focus not only on the teams vying for the national title, but also on the season past and all the elements that make the NCAA tournament such a happening.

"The best thing I can do is let Al's personality come out," continues Neal. "There won't be any script for this special. It would be foolish to try to script Al. I just let his personality dictate the flow of the piece. The agony comes when I have to edit out parts because of time limitations. But that's fine, too, because then the final product is like Al McGuire's greatest hits."

McGuire's commentary for NBC basketball games and his syndicated series, "Al McGuire OnSports," has established him as a first-string cult hero to many roundball fans. But to fully appreciate McGuire, you have to be able to understand his schoolyard brand of basketball lingo. For example:

Aircraft carrier — the big man who carries the team.

Back-room lawyer — the dissentious player who thinks he knows more than the coach.

Cloud piercer — a guy who can pick a quarter off the top of the backboard.

Cupcake — an easy opponent, "a team that plays with snowshoes on."

Dance-hall player — the guy who enjoys the physical aspects of the game.

Dollar game — when a team scores 100 or more points.

French pastry — a fancy move.

Hail Mary — a desperation shot that doesn't have a prayer.

Hammer job — a flagrant foul.

Hot dog — a flashy player, only exceeded by a hot dog with mustard.

Nosebleeder — see cloud piercer.

Push — a close game.

Tap city — the game is over.

White knuckler — a game that is close right down to the end.

Three In A Row

Earl Anthony continues to dominate the PBA National Championship. Last month he won the event at Imperial Lanes for the third straight year and sixth time since 1973. Anthony left Toledo with $73,680 and his name atop the official money standings list.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

There hasn't been anything released officially yet — but the new Duke cousins, Vance and Coy (Christopher Mayer and Byron Cherry), may have already been dropped from the cast of "The Dukes of Hazzard." CBS announced the series has been renewed for 22 episodes next season, however, Chris and Byron's names were conspicuously absent from the list of stars who would be returning.

"Gimme A Break" turned out to be just that for Don Rickles when he recently guest starred on that series. A spinoff of his character "Max Green," the owner of a delicatessen, is being planned for him by NBC. The format presents a perfect foil for his particular brand of humor. One thing's for sure, it will definitely be a deli where the customer is never right!

It will be a "labor of love" for "Falcon Crest" star Lorenzo Lamas when he stars in a feature film written by his mom, Esther Williams, and his dad, the late Fernando Lamas. The project, which was to be directed by Fernando, will have Esther as its executive producer.

I can bet that one of the happiest couples at the Academy Awards Ceremonies (April 11) will be Lou Gossett, Jr. and his date. Lou, nominated as Best Supporting Actor for his role in "An Officer and a Gentleman" has chosen his 8-year-old son, Satie, for his date that night. "We'll be the only couple there in matching tuxedos," he brags.

Crystal Gayle had to cancel out on some of her appearances with Kenny Rogers during his current tour. She and hubby Bill Gatzimos are expecting their first baby in September and the pregnancy is causing her some difficulties.

Poor Brooke Shields just can't win in or out of her jeans. After all the controversy over her billboards advertising Calvin Klein jeans — she is now being served a $74-million breach of contract suit by designer Valentino. Hired to be the exclusive designer of at least a dozen costumes for her new "Sahara" film, Brooke's mom accepted delivery on only four of them. Ignoring calls from Valentino about future deliveries, Mom then hired someone else to complete the wardrobe for the film. "Not fair," claims Valentino.

"TOOTSIE'S" TIM GARR GETS PERSONAL

A TIME TO LOVE

By Andrew M. Greeley

Easter is a time of beginning again. This is not merely a statement of the pieties you may hear in church on Easter Sunday. It is rather a reality built into the structure of the Passover festival, whose origins may be lost in the midst of antiquity, but whose fundamental meaning is the same today as it was more than five thousand years ago.

Of all your films, which is your favorite? And since we all know you don't love acting, why do you stick with it? — D.T., Savannah, Ga.

I look back with the most affection on The Last Time I Saw Archie, which I made in 1961. Although I didn't like my role as a con man, nor my portrayal of him, it was the first time I was paid $100,000 a week. Why am I still acting? How else could a no-talent guy like me make this kind of dough? Besides, it keeps me off the streets. The thing I like least about acting is talking about it. What I enjoy most are the days off. Fact is, actors receive more respect than they deserve — me, for one.

You must get a lot of fan mail. What are most of the letters like? — H.G., Marion, Ind.

Most of them are the Dear Abby type. I get questions such as, "This guy I like does not like me. How can I change his mind?" Or, "My parents are divorced and I'm very unhappy. What should I do?" There's not too much I can do, unfortunately. I'm not a psychiatrist or capable of giving advice, but my family helps me answer the mail. And I do acknowledge the letters. If you ignore lonely or troubled people, they'll get lonelier or more troubled.

LOS ANGELES — Lauren Tewes, who reportedly makes almost $1 million a year to play cruise director Julie McCoy on TV's The Love Boat, is attempting to more than double her take in the show's next four seasons, for which contracts are now being negotiated. Most of the cruise's crew members have quietly settled for the usual exorbitant increases, but co-producer Douglas Cramer calls Tewes's demands "preposterous."...This being the 20th anniversary year of John F. Kennedy's assassination, two Kennedy-related theater projects are in the works. Cliff Robertson, who portrayed the President as a Navy ensign in the 1963 movie PT-109, will now do a one-man stage show, JFK, which will also be taped for cable TV. And Rock Hudson is the top choice for Kennedy in the intended-for-Broadway musical The Party Girl. Suzanne Somers is the leading candidate for the Marilyn Monroe-esque title role....A rough cut of Barbra Streisand's Yentl was screened at M-G-M recently for a mixed group of movie types and nonindustry people off the street. Praised were Streisand's direction and co-stars Mandy Patinkin and Amy Irving. Panned were Streisand's starring performance (which makes the story of a 1904 Polish girl dressing up as a boy so she can study the Talmud less than believable), the film's excessive length (135 minutes) and its nine songs (which all sound the same, except the finale, which sounds like Funny Girl's "Don't Rain on My Parade"). —Robert Windeler

NEW YORK — Singer Linda Ronstadt wonders when will she be loved. At 36, she says she's never married because she intimidates men. Always has, too, she claims, even before becoming famous....David McClintick is more than just the author of Indecent Exposure, the best-selling expose of the David Begelman affair. A longtime Frank Sinatra fan, McClintick won a Grammy Award for the liner notes he wrote for Ol' Blue Eyes's 1980 album, Trilogy....In Buying the Night Flight, her new book on overseas adventures, foreign correspondent Georgie Anne Geyer says of two enigmatic world leaders: Fidel Castro is "close to virtually no one. He's cold, strangely effeminate." Yasir Arafat is "witty and more charming than his ugly pictures suggest."...In collaboration with a French writer, tennis star Ilie Nastase has completed half a novel centered around the private lives of tennis players....While race-car driver Paul Belmondo romances Princess Stephanie, Belmondo's dad, actor Jean-Paul Belmondo, 48, is dating Brazilian beauty Maria Sotto Mayor. At 22, she's only four years older than Stephanie. —Anita Summer

WASHINGTON — Senator Alan Cranston (D.-Calif.) is the only Presidential candidate who can boast he was sued by Adolph Hitler. In the late 1930's, Cranston read Mein Kampf in German and found that the English version being circulated around the United States did not carry the inflammatory sections in the original. Cranston translated the book in its entirety to show Hitler's true colors. Hitler sued for copyright infringement and won — but after Cranston had already sold a half-million copies....Former House Speaker Carl Albert finds that it pays to be retired. His annual pension of $82,000 is not only more than the $65,600 he made in Congress but, until last December, also more than current House Speaker Tip O'Neill was making. Albert, 74, says it's unfair that Congressional pay increases have been frozen while retirement pensions rise automatically....Nancy Reagan's trim figure is the result of hard work. The First Lady tries to start each morning with 20 minutes of calisthenics mixed with riding her stationary bike. But she admits she is not as compulsive about exercise as her husband. Following doctors' orders after the assassination attempt, President Reagan presses weights religiously every evening and can boast results that would make a man 50 years younger proud. He has added 1½ inches to his pre-election 44¼-inch chest. —Kathleen Maxa and Jane Ottenberg

By Andrew M. Greeley

We renew our loves, revitalize our intimate relationships, break away from the chains of monotony and nastiness in which we have been imprisoned during winter and celebrate the fact that life begins again. We do all these things because our spring festival, whether we call it Easter or Passover, impels us to start anew.

In most languages the name of the spring festival is the same whether it's Christian or Jewish — Pasqua, Pascua, Pasch. In English we use a name from the Anglo-Saxon pagan past, rather than from Jewish or Christian traditions. Eastre was the Anglo-Saxon goddess of the dawn and the spring, a kind of Teutonic Aurora. She was honored in the beginning of spring because, as the days grew longer than the nights, Dawn was imagined to be winning a great victory over Darkness, a victory seen as a triumph of life over death. Therefore several symbols of fertility — eggs, rabbits and lilies — were associated with the feast of the goddess Eastre, because at the time of her victory, nature came alive again.

The early English Christians adopted the name of the pagan feast and some of its symbols and used them to commemorate the death and resurrection of Jesus, which for Christians signified a new beginning with God the Father. They appropriated the pagan festival and made it their own because they perceived, perhaps even more clearly than we do, that it was virtually the same festival as their celebration of Jesus. Pagan, Christian and Jewish spring feasts may not have quite the same meanings, but all of them acknowledge the fundamental human need to begin again, particularly when spring is in the air.

The Jewish Passover itself is a combination of several ancient pagan festivals that existed among the wandering semitic tribes long before the Exodus of the Children of Israel from Egypt into the Sinai. Principal among these feasts was the meal of the unleavened bread, celebrating the first harvest of the agricultural tribes, and the feast of the sacrificial lamb, celebrating the first fruits of the flocks of the pastoral tribes.

Years later, the Hebrew tribes combined these feasts to celebrate their commitment to one another and to God (in the seder meal) and their freedom from the slavery of Egypt (in the blood of the paschal lamb). The Christian Easter, then, built on the Jewish Passover. Jesus was both the new Moses, continuing the work of freedom which Yahweh (the Hebrew word for God) began with the Hebrews' Exodus from Egypt, and the new Paschal Lamb whose blood made liberation and redemption possible. And the final seder Christ ate with his apostles, establishing a feast of mutual commitment, continues through every Christian eucharistic liturgy.

The early Christians also borrowed practices from their pagan Roman neighbors, including rituals from the Roman Feast of Fire and Water. Fire and water had obvious sexual implications for the Romans, the former representing the male and the latter the female, as they do in almost all of the old pagan nature religions. At spring, during this pagan festival, a flaming torch was plunged into water to symbolize life beginning again.

Through the years, Christianity continued this ritual through the blessing of the Easter water with the paschal candle. Because the ceremony has lost its sexual and fertility implications, most contemporary Christians are not aware of them. The early Christians who adopted the Roman fertility ritual, however, knew exactly what they were doing: In the resurrection of Jesus, they were saying that God consummates his love affair with His people and that we who are baptized with the Easter water are the first fruits of this passionately loving union. Even the Latin words of this blessing have sexual implications. The verb used was fructifero — fructify, fertilize. The English translation in the new Catholic liturgy (which, incidentally, does not insist that the priest plunge the candle into the water) waters down this meaning. But sexual passion is a reflection of God's passion (as St. Paul reminds us) and sexuality is God's instrument for causing nature to begin again every spring.

The immersion of the candle in the water is the most obvious of the Passover symbols. It leaves no doubt that Christians believe that with the return of Jesus life begins again. It also should leave no doubt that Christians believe that each time lovers renew their commitments and break free of the barriers which isolate them from each other and then celebrate this beginning again with sexual love, they continue the work of love Yahweh manifested in the return of Jesus.

All the symbols of Easter and Passover then — eggs, rabbits, lilies, the paschal lamb, the seder meal and especially the fire and the water — stand for the renewal of life-giving love, communion and commitment. And it's through these symbols that we see love, like all things in nature, is cyclic. As psychiatrist Joan Anzia and theologian Mary Durkin have observed in their book, Marital Intimacy: A Catholic Perspective (Loyola University Press), the cycle can be considered in four phases (not unlike the four seasons): falling in love, settling down, bottoming out and beginning again. The last phase of the cycle is the most difficult and, like spring itself, is the transition. We fall in love again in the process of beginning again. Easter symbolizes this beginning.

We can resist Easter's message, of course, we can resist this renewal. But to do so we have to ignore the power of spring. This doesn't mean that the renewal of love is simple. No birth or rebirth comes easily, and the earth gives way to spring only with terrible effort. Good Friday, which also can represent the death to our old, selfish, narrow, fearful selves, is an essential prerequisite to Easter Sunday — the birth of our new, open, vulnerable, loving selves.

The symbols of our spring celebrations don't provide the comforting message that new beginnings come easily. But they do give us this challenging message: that new life is possible. FW

FOOD

ORANGES— SWEET DELIVERANCE FROM THE DESSERT DOLDRUMS

By Marilyn Hansen

This year's bumper crop of oranges means the price is right for adding this healthy citrus staple to spring menus. So what could be more appealing than these "good for company," mouth-watering desserts that we've whipped up for you. They're so easy to prepare, you won't believe it!

ORANGES ORIENTAL

6 medium to large navel oranges
1 cup boiling water
⅔ cup water
⅓ cup sugar
¼ cup curaçao or other orange-flavored liqueur
⅓ cup toasted almonds

1. With vegetable parer, peel one orange, removing outer orange-colored peel only. Cut this peel into thin slivers and cover with boiling water. Let stand 5 minutes; drain.

2. Finish peeling orange, removing inner white part of rind. Completely peel remaining oranges. Cut each orange into ½-inch-thick slices. Place orange slices in bowl and set aside.

3. To make syrup, combine ⅔ cup water and the sugar in saucepan; bring to boiling, stirring to dissolve sugar. Add slivered peel; boil 1 minute. Remove from heat; add curaçao. Pour over orange slices. Chill 4 hours or overnight. To serve, sprinkle with almonds and serve with dessert forks and spoons. Makes 4 servings

ORANGE SHERBET IN ORANGE SHELLS

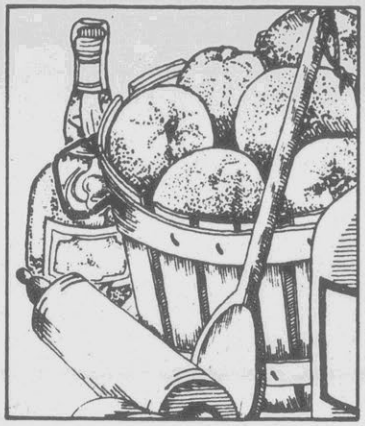
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup sugar
Grated peel of ½ fresh orange, about 2 teaspoons
2 cups orange juice
1¼ cups milk
6 orange shells*

1. In a medium saucepan, mix gelatin with sugar; blend in orange peel and juice. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves completely, about 5 minutes. Cool completely; stir in milk.

2. Pour mixture into a large bowl and freeze 1½ hours, or until mixture is frozen about ½ inch around sides of bowl. With electric mixer or rotary beater, beat mixture until smooth, about 2 minutes. Pour into two 4×10-inch freezer trays or an 8-inch baking pan. Freeze until firm, about 4 hours.

3. Spoon sherbet into orange shells or dessert dishes. Garnish, if desired, with additional freshly grated orange peel and/or fresh mint. Makes 6 servings

*Orange shells: Cut 3 oranges in half crosswise; carefully ream out juice and reserve for sherbet. Scrape shells clean with spoon. For a sturdier base, cut a thin slice from the bottom of each shell.



ORANGE-WALNUT TORTE

6 egg yolks
1 cup sugar
1 cup finely ground walnuts or pecans
1 cup fine, dry sponge cake or lady finger crumbs
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
2 tablespoons orange juice
Dash salt, or to taste
6 egg whites
1 tablespoon fine, dry bread crumbs
1 cup thick apricot, pineapple or raspberry jam
2 cups heavy cream
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
2 teaspoons orange-flavored liqueur
8 walnut or pecan halves
2 tablespoons of long-shredded orange rind

1. In a medium bowl, use electric mixer and beat egg yolks until very light. Gradually add sugar and continue beating at high speed until mixture is very light in color and thick in consistency. This will take about 5 minutes of beating.

2. At low speed, add the ground walnuts, sponge cake crumbs, orange rind, orange juice and salt.

3. Preheat oven to 350°. In a large bowl, using clean beaters, beat egg whites until they are stiff, but not dry, and fold them into batter gently but thoroughly. Divide the batter between two 9-inch layer-cake pans that have been greased and coated with bread crumbs.

4. Bake layers on center rack of preheated oven for 30 to 35 minutes, or until center of cake springs back when gently pressed with finger. Cool on rack 10 minutes, then turn out of pans onto a rack to cool completely. Meanwhile, place a bowl and beaters in refrigerator to chill.

5. Put cake layers together with jam. In the chilled bowl, use chilled beaters to whip heavy cream until it holds a shape. Stir in confectioners' sugar and liqueur. Frost top and sides of cake with whipped-cream mixture and decorate cake top with walnut halves and orange-rind shreds. Refrigerate until ready to serve; this cake will cut best when thoroughly chilled.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

SPECIAL SALE $2.33 Plus up to 900 FREE Plugs

Lakeland's Famous® 30-Below-Zero Zoysia Takes Wear, Tear, Cookouts, Children's Games . . . After 30 Below Zero Winters, It Bounces Back Green, Thick, And Beautiful! Closest Thing To An Indestructible Lawn You Have Ever Seen!

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed Or Watered For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

By Mike Senkiw, Agronomist, Lakeland Nurseries

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOYSIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten cobwebs! In Iowa, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

Cut your water bills. Save the work of lawn sprinkling. Start a famous Zoysia grass lawn now.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Famous® Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Reseeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's Famous® Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat... stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly

Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote): "upgrading your current lawn"

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN
PLUG IN Z-52 ZOYSIA

requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other to form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of, WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw, Agronomist

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel... It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., J.M. writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot—it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful...a deep green."

The success of many thousands of delighted Famous® Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

PEOPLE QUIZ

DO SHY PEOPLE MAKE BOLD LOVERS?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. There are many types of romantic love.
2. You are particularly vulnerable to feelings of attraction after sports activity.
3. The most attractive men and women tend to find themselves in the most loving relationships.
4. Shyness doesn't handicap a person's search for love because the need for a close relationship spurs him to greater effort.
5. Escaping loneliness is not a good reason for getting married.

ANSWERS

1. False. Using established measures of romantic love, a Western Illinois University study of dating students at the college concluded that there is but one type of romantic love. It involves intense emotional attraction and a serious commitment.
2. True. Specialists from the University of Maryland, University of Notre Dame and Rutgers University determined from studies of passionate love and the misattribution of arousal that if you are excited by something (watching a sport, for example, or seeing a movie) and you meet an attractive person very soon after, you will be much more attracted to him or her than you would be under other circumstances. And you will attribute your excitement and pleasure to that person, when it actually derives from the previous arousal.
3. False. In a study of physical attractiveness and romantic love, a team of North Texas State University psychologists realized that there is no relationship between the two variables. Even though attractiveness plays an important role in the initial attraction between two persons, once a dating relationship is established, the overall level of physical attractiveness begins to decrease in importance. However, the study did indicate that less attractive people in a relationship tend to be more considerate and understanding of their mates' feelings and desires than more attractive persons, and they are more self-sacrificing when they feel it will help to insure their partners' well-being.
4. False. Shyness appears to prevent an individual from entering long-term relationships such as love and friendship, according to a Texas Lutheran College study that involved 153 male and 217 female students. The study found that the shy individual with low self-esteem is not likely to initiate or intensify contacts with others, as required in love and friendship, because of extreme self-consciousness and fear of rejection.
5. True. Psychiatrist Barry R. Berkey says that three of the more common wrong reasons for marrying are: to acquire a regular sex partner, to obtain economic or emotional security and to escape the loneliness of a solitary existence. While these can seem like logical or satisfactory reasons at the time, Berkey finds that a person who races down the aisle to escape an unpleasant situation rarely experiences an enduring and satisfying marriage. GETTING PERSONAL WITH

TERI GARR

© Elisa Leonelli/Photo Trends

Currently delighting audiences as Dustin Hoffman's loopy girlfriend in Tootsie (for which she and Jessica Lange both have been nominated for the Best Supporting Actress Oscar), Teri Garr has been pegged by Pauline Kael of The New Yorker as "the funniest neurotic dizzy dame on the screen." The daughter of a vaudevillian father and a mother who was one of the original Rockettes, Garr was dancing with the San Francisco Ballet at 13, before landing parts on TV's Shindig and The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour. Her 1974 film debut in The Conversation was quickly followed by parts in Young Frankenstein, Oh, God!, Close Encounters of the Third Kind, The Black Stallion and One from the Heart. Now in The Sting II and The Black Stallion Returns, she'll appear next in the comedy Mr. Mom. Garr, who only reveals her age as "somewhere between 30 and 40," was otherwise much more candid in a recent conversation with FAMILY WEEKLY's Eliot Kaplan.

Q: So far you've played only character parts. Do you long to land glamorous leading-lady roles?

Garr: Absolutely, are you kidding? But I just can't get those. I call my parts "the wife of the man that something happens to" or "the mother of the boy that something happens to."

Q: Why do you keep taking those parts?

Garr: Each time I say no, they say, "How about if we double or triple your salary?" My background is lower middle class, and I can't just say no to that money. It's like Faust. You sell your soul to the devil.

Q: Will the Oscar nomination help?

Garr: I'm thrilled by it, but what really hurts is that I think Jessica Lange was the leading lady in this movie. [Director] Sydney Pollack told me, "We can't make you look too good because everyone will want Dustin to come back to you." So I played the supporting part, and I was a good sport about it. And then to have to share the nomination — well, I am a little bugged by that. I mean, she [Lange] gets to be leading lady and gets to be supporting actress. Oh, well. I think Glenn Close [The World According to Garp] deserves to win anyway.

Q: What words would you say best describe yourself?

Garr: Tenacious, slender — well, that's wishful thinking — brave, childlike and a little irresponsible.

Q: Did Dustin Hoffman honestly change at all after playing a woman in Tootsie?

Garr: I think Dustin is open-minded about the sexist problem, even though I really think he's a sexist. He's sexist in the sense that he's always doing "guy" all the time: "Look at the bodies on those girls." That sort of thing. He's very sexual and very visceral, and his language is, well, shocking.

Q: Have all these wife and mother roles made you think about starting a family?

Garr: Who, me? Yes, of course, but what am I going to do about it? All the girls my age are now saying the same thing. "The biological clock is ticking. Only 12 more shopping days till Christmas, and we all want babies."

Q: You're very secretive about your age. Does it really matter?

Garr: Yes, it counts. Already I've waited so long to get a shot at being a leading lady. I used to be open and honest and vulnerable, and I'm not now. If I told them, "I will be fair with you. I'll tell you my age." They'll go, "We'll put cigarettes out in your face, O.K."

Q: Why do you keep saying "no" to appearing in Playboy?

Garr: I considered it but then said, "What has this got to do with getting better roles? Absolutely nothing." But I'd love for those guys in high school who didn't ask me to the basketball games to go, "Hey, she's in Playboy magazine! We could've asked her out!" FW

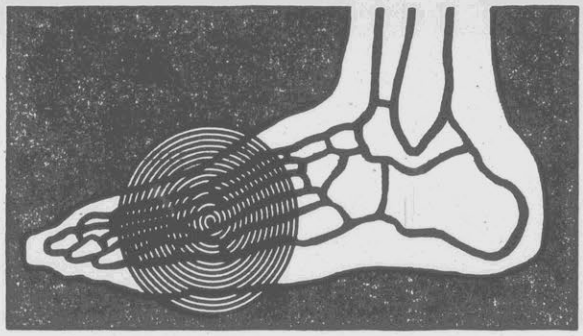
My Feet Were Killing Me ...Until I Discovered the Miracle in Germany!



It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted — see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom formed foot support called Flexible Featherspring.® When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them — even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Germany with my own countrymen.

In the last nine years over a quarter million Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom formed and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet, Flexible Featherspring will bring you relief with every step you take or your money back.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Germany can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today. No salesman will call.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

"Received my wife's Featherspring two days ago. They are super—neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is better . . . As a retired physician, this result is amazing."

Dr. C.O.C., Tucson, Arizona

"I was extremely skeptical when I placed my order, and was expecting to be disappointed. Much to my surprise, I found almost immediate relief from knee and leg pains and corns on my right foot which were a source of continuing pain and irritation have ceased to trouble me."

J.C.J., Meridian, Miss.

. . . "At the present time I still wear the Featherspring and indeed they perform well after seven years of use."

G.M.G., Dallas, Texas

"Wish I had believed your ad five years ago."

HEALTH

LOW BLOOD PRESSURE: SYMPTOMS AND SOLUTIONS

By Merri Rosenberg

When most people think about blood pressure problems, they usually worry about the perils of hypertension — high blood pressure. This condition afflicts nearly 34 million Americans, who are considered to be at increased risk for heart attacks, strokes and related diseases.

But close to 300,000 individuals — predominantly young women in their teens, 20's and early 30's — suffer the opposite extreme: low blood pressure. Though not life threatening, the condition can be distressing. Symptoms can range from nausea and dizziness to severe headaches and fainting episodes, and it can cause its sufferers to experience significant and prolonged discomfort.

Yet doctors caution that it is important to distinguish between low blood pressure that is normal, and indeed healthy for an individual, and low blood pressure that is considered symptomatic.

The blood pressure number your doctor tells you after an examination measures the arterial pressure when the heart beats (known as the systolic pressure) over the arterial pressure between heart beats (known as the diastolic pressure). Most doctors would consider a reading of 120 over 80 as normal. An individual with a 90 over 70 reading would generally be considered to have low blood pressure. According to Scott Kirsch, M.D., director of the family practice residency at South Nassau Community Hospital in Oceanside, N.Y., many women register lower blood pressure than the so-called norm simply because "there's a variation in what is considered normal blood pressure." Their blood pressure is actually fine for them.

In some individuals, though, a low blood pressure reading reflects that the heart pumps more slowly than normal, and thus the amount of blood going to the brain decreases because of a corresponding decrease in the volume of blood and tissue fluid.

Merri Rosenberg is a freelance writer specializing in health and family issues.

But even then there isn't necessarily a problem. The important consideration is what symptoms, if any, exist. "If I had a patient with low blood pressure without any chronic complaints, I wouldn't do anything about it," says Dr. Kirsch.

Those individuals who experience occasional discomfort, say doctors, usually do so when they change positions from reclining to sitting or from sitting to standing, because blood rushes from the head to the feet before the heart has a chance to compensate by pumping harder.

Other factors can bring about an episode of low blood pressure symptoms: strenuous exercise, which causes blood to flow out to the limbs; dehydration brought about by diet or fever; drinking alcohol, which increases the dilation of the blood vessels; being in a warm or hot environment, which increases perspiration and loss of internal body fluid through evaporation from the skin surface; and even taking medication to counteract high blood pressure.

According to Andrew P. Morley, M.D., a family practitioner in Decatur, Ga., and a member of the Academy of Family Physicians, poor diet can also be at fault for stimulating such symptoms as faintness or dizziness when an individual has low blood pressure. "Many women aren't getting enough sugar or iron, and that can give them an iron deficient anemia," he says.

For otherwise normal individuals who experience occasional rather than chronic low blood pressure symptoms, doctors offer the following suggestions to counteract the effects: Increase fluid consumption during warm weather and summer months, and maintain the salt in your diet. Don't take diuretics during warm weather, as you risk rapid dehydration. Wear support hose to encourage blood circulation, and avoid changing positions abruptly.

If you have chronic low blood pressure symptoms, be sure to check with your physician. Symptomatic low blood pressure can be a sign of more serious health problems and is used as an important diagnostic tool. "Many anorexics who are below ideal body weight have low blood pressure," says Jeffrey Garber, M.D., an endocrinologist and instructor at the Harvard Medical School. "When some women are below critical body weight, they can have a starved heart, which indirectly leads to low blood pressure and these symptoms." Low blood pressure can also signal anemia, hyperventilation or cardiovascular difficulties. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

PREVENTING CHILD ABUSE

It's a shocking and sad statistic, but one of every four girls and one of 10 boys is sexually assaulted before age 18. And in 85 percent of reported assaults, the child knows the assailant.

Now there's an excellent read-aloud booklet, for ages 3 to 9, that sensitively raises a child's awareness that no one has the right to touch or see his or her private parts (no anatomical parts are mentioned).

Author Frances S. Dayee, a Seattle mother of 13, told us, "I wrote the text in consultation with experts, because my own 4-year-old was sexually assaulted by a close family friend who is now receiving treatment."

She says one of the most important messages of the booklet, called "Private Zone," is that children are advised to "tell and yell" if they have been assaulted. She advises parents to look for symptoms such as unexplainable moodiness or withdrawal from others, and she offers advice on where to seek professional help. To order the booklet, send $2 plus 75 cents postage to: The Chas. Franklin Press, Dept. FW, 18409-90th Avenue W., Edmonds, Wash. 98020.

ON THE PROWL

Even better than the personal ads or the weekly church bingo game, one sure way to meet Mr. Right is to dip into the funny, frank manual for husband hunters, How to Get Married, by Dr. Herman Weiss and Julie Davis.

Increasing your visibility is key, they point out. Forget singles bars. Instead, live by these four rules: (1) Walk everywhere. If you commute, park at least 10 blocks from your destination. An encounter at a traffic light could lead to a date. (2) Plan at least three evenings out a week. (3) Never eat lunch at your desk. Go where corporate types gather, or strike up a conversation while lunching at the hot-dog vendor. (4) Learn a new skill, preferably not shorthand. A computer course is where men are likely to be.

Another sure path to the altar, Davis told us, is to play the field. "It not only helps in choosing, but it also drives men crazy when they know you're dating others." But, she adds, don't date men with similar first names, like John and Jim, or a slip of the lip could prove disastrous.

PUZZLING PRESCRIPTIONS

Illegible handwriting isn't the only problem some doctors have in prescribing medicines — your doctor may unintentionally be making you sick due to vaguely worded instructions.

Thirty percent of all prescriptions written are never filled and, of those filled, only 20 percent are properly taken, often due to poor directions, according to Bruce Wooley, a professor of pharmacology at Brigham Young University.

Wooley tells of a woman overdosing on a tranquilizer by taking "one tablet as needed for anxiety until exhausted" — just as the label instructed. And when drugs are prescribed to be taken four times daily, "it should be made clear," Wooley says, "whether that means while awake or during a 24-hour period. Those few hours could make a difference."

You have a responsibility to question both your doctor and pharmacist until you're satisfied. If several doctors are treating you, be sure each knows what the other is prescribing.

MORE OF YOU TO LOVE

If you stare longingly at a heaping plate of fettuccine Alfredo and wish that Richard Simmons, Jane Fonda and the rest of those fitness gurus would be deported to Siberia, you have an ally. In a new album of 10 hilarious songs, I Love You Because You're Fat, mimic-musician Rick Segall (feasting above) inveighs against the whole diet mania.

Segall, 5 feet 8 inches and 175 pounds, describes himself as a "fat Dudley Moore, only taller," and is convinced we're too fitness crazed. "I feel religious about it," Segall told us. "I hate people being put down for their weight."

The musical feast includes such parodies as "Michael Ate the Smorgasbord" (to the tune of "Michael Row the Boat Ashore"), "Eat Around the Clock," "House of the Rising Bun" and an original, "Eating with Johnny Tonight," dedicated to his wife of six years, Barbara. Together they watch Carson "while eating popcorn in a big, wooden salad bowl, with tons of fresh butter."

WHAT YOU SEE IS WHAT THEY THINK

If you are sometimes puzzled by the trends and biases you see on television, look no farther than the people who make the shows. A new study of TV directors, producers, writers and top execs reveals that their attitudes can creep into our shows.

CBS

"The programmers are down on business and this shows up on many programs, where the majority of businessmen are portrayed as criminals, fools or greedy people," says Linda Lichter, who helped conduct the study for the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research. Eighty-two percent of those surveyed said that people in authority do not know best. Perhaps not so curiously, 37 percent of TV criminals are authoritative figures like businessmen and cops.

The television power brokers, almost all liberal, middle-aged, white males, say they don't think there is too much sex on TV (70 percent agree), but nearly 60 percent feel TV is too violent.

Our Story: ALP ARSLAN, RAISED AS AN ORPHAN, LEARNS BY CHANCE THAT HE HAS A TWIN--AND THAT HIS FATHER IS KING. BUT TWIN SONS ARE NOT PERMITTED THE HOUSE OF ZOG. NOW THE SECRET IS OUT. KING ZOG FUMES AS THE SACRED LAW OF THE TWINS IS PLACED BEFORE HIM.

ONLY ONCE BEFORE HAS IT BEEN INVOKED. "THE NOBLES OF DALMATIA," ZOG READS, "DECREE THAT SHOULD TWIN SONS BE BORN TO THE ROYAL FAMILY, THE YOUNGEST SHALL DIE. IF THE YOUNGEST BE NOT KNOWN, THE VICTIM WILL BE CHOSEN IN THE FOLLOWING MANNER.

"THE MONARCH WILL CHOOSE COMBATANTS TO REPRESENT THE TWINS. THEY WILL COMPETE IN A CONTEST OF THE KING'S CHOICE. THE CHILD CHAMPIONED BY THE LOSER SHALL FORFEIT HIS LIFE." THE GREAT TOURNEY RESUMES ON THE MORROW, ONE EVENT ONLY REMAINING. ZOG DECLARES HIS WILL: "THE CONTEST," HE DECIDES, "SHALL BE CHESS. THE CHAMPIONS? FOR ALP, PRINCE VALIANT. FOR PRINCE ULF, ONE OF THE MASKED STRANGERS."

THE NEWS SATURATES SALONAE. AT NOON THE NEXT DAY THE ANCIENT STADIUM GROANS WITH SPECTATORS. IN THE RING, LIVING CHESSMEN AWAIT THEIR ORDERS. ALP AND ULF, TIGHTLY BOUND, ABLE TO HOP ONLY ONE SPACE AT A TIME, ARE THE RIVAL KINGS. WHICHEVER FALLS WILL LOSE HIS LIFE ON THE SPOT TO HIS CAPTOR. IN THE ROYAL BOX VAL BOWS TO HIS OPPONENT. IT IS THE MASKED BOY.
