'About 40' Said Spies

France Expels Russians

PARIS (AP) — France's socialist government expelled about 40 Soviet agents today because of their 'systematic' espionage, 'particularly in the military domain,' the Interior Ministry said.

It said the agents were diplomats and non-diplomats and that it did not have a more precise figure. The French news agency said 47 Soviets were kicked out, the biggest expulsion of East bloc agents ever from France.

All of them left for Moscow aboard a special Soviet plane sent to Paris.

The Soviet Embassy denied any of its personnel were spies and said the expulsion was a political act by the government of Socialist President Francois Mitterrand, which includes four Communists.

The Interior Ministry said the French counter-espionage service had 'produced evidence of a systematic search... by many agents of the secret services of the U.S.S.R., for scientific, technical and technological information, particularly in the military domain.'

'The multiplicity and the gravity of the actions conducted for the benefit of this foreign power by agents most often benefiting from the statute of diplomatic officials, justified the departure of the people concerned.'

'That is the object of the measure conveyed to the Soviet authorities concerning some 40 of their citizens, which became effective today,' the statement said.

Oleg Chirokov, Paris bureau chief of the Soviet news agency Tass, told The Associated Press before the plane arrived that he and another Tass journalist, Vladimir Koulikovskiy, were among those being expelled.

'I feel offended, outraged, and I consider this measure as an offense to the whole journalistic profession,' Chirokov said.

The independent leftist daily Liberation said the group also included Nikolai Chetverikov, a first secretary of the Soviet Embassy.

Another Soviet first secretary, Alexandre Avfeev, told reporters that the embassy 'protests against the totally unfounded and arbitrary decision of the French authorities.'

'No instance of illegal activity on the part of the Soviet officials who have been told to leave the country was submitted to us, no proof, no explanation,' Avfeev said.

The Soviet Union has 86 diplomats posted in Paris — in the embassy and military mission surrounded by a high grill fence on the outskirts of the city, the ambassador's residence on the Left Bank near the Eiffel Tower, the trade mission in the city's swank 16th district, and the consulate in the 17th district. In Britain, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government expelled three alleged Soviet spies last Thursday, including two senior diplomats and a journalist for a Soviet weekly publication. That was the largest number of Soviets expelled from Britain at one time since 1971, when 105 diplomats and trade officials were thrown out for spying.

Pitt Board Okays Terms For Purchasing Of Land

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners this morning approved the purchase of 5.33 acres of land adjacent to the county landfill on the Allen Road.

The purchase, from Johnnie Moye, for $2,250 an acre, has been negotiated over the past several months, and will allow the use of some landfill property that otherwise would have been unusable.

The board also accepted bids today for three trucks equipped with tilt-frame assemblies for use in hauling solid waste containers to the landfill.

Six bids were received, ranging from a low of $167,895 by F&D Motor Co. of Bethel to a high of $225,993 from Sanco Corp. of Winston-Salem.

The board postponed action on accepting the low bid pending a review of the proposals.

Commissioners also adopted a resolution proclaiming the week of April 17-23 as National Volunteer Week in Pitt County in recognition of the many volunteers giving of their time to such agencies as the schools, the hospital, various recreation departments, agricultural extension office and others.

Extension agent Sam Uzzell, in a report to the board, said that only about 31,000 acres of corn will be planted in the county this year, as compared with about 70,000 acres in 1982.

He said the 60 percent decrease is a result of participation in the federal PIK program.

Flawed Satellite Launch Mars Challenger Flight

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The world's largest and most expensive communications satellite, vital to America's space future, tumbled out of control for several hours today after release from the shuttle Challenger. NASA reported it had regained command, but it was unclear how effective the satellite could be.

The question was whether ground controllers could maneuver the 2½-ton, $100 million satellite to its planned stationary orbit 22,300 miles high. Trackers estimated the payload was in a distorted orbit ranging from about 14,000 to 22,000 miles high, and it could not be fully effective on that path.

Experts consulted computers to determine if stabilizing gas jets aboard the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite could be used to shift the craft into stationary position.

'There is some possibility it could be done,' said Julian Levine, a spokesman for TRW, which built the TDRS. 'The satellite has some on-board propulsion capability and the technical issue now is its ability to move the satellite into the proper orbit.'

Challenger commander Paul J. Weitz and his crewmen, pilot Karol J. Bobko and mission specialists Story Musgrave and Donald H. Peterson, who had ejected the satellite from their cargo bay late Monday, were in a sleep period when the trouble began. They were in the second day of the second shuttle's maiden flight.

An hour after the deployed TDRS, the rocket fired successfully to propel the package on its way to the high outpost.

The problem arose about 6 a.m. after the rocket ignited a second time, to try to arrest the satellite in the stationary outpost. The resulting egg-shaped orbit indicates an engine misfire which sent the satellite tumbling with the rocket stage attached.

After several hours of suspense, Mission Control in Houston calculated a way to separate the heavy rocket stage from the satellite and then to command the small jets to halt the tumbling motion.

'We have gained control of the TDRS satellite,' NASA spokesman Jim Kukowski reported. 'We have initiated deployment activity and we are able to confirm it has separated from' its rocket stage.

'The TDRS appears to be stable and we are told the solar panels are being unfurled,' another agency spokesman, Steve Nesbitt, said. The panels unfurl to a wingspan of 57 feet to capture the sun's rays and convert it to electrical power.

Moments earlier there had appeared little hope of salvaging the satellite, which is crucial to the future schedule of shuttle launches.

Deploying the satellite was the major goal of the mission, helping establish the U.S. shuttle fleet as a dependable carrier of military, scientific and commercial cargo.

Say Thai Jets Napalmed Positions Of Vietnamese

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Thai military officers at the frontier said today that Thai fighter-bombers dropped napalm in a Monday raid on Vietnamese positions just inside Thailand.

The attack, if confirmed, would be the first of its kind since the Vietnamese overran a Khmer Rouge Cambodian guerrilla base along the Thailand border Thursday and began probing Thai frontier posts. The Vietnamese sweep has left scores dead and tens of thousands homeless.

There was no confirmation of the napalm attack from the Thai central government in Bangkok, the capital.

The Thai frontier officers told Associated Press reporter M a n g k o r n Khamreongwong that two U.S.-made F-5 warplanes swooped down on Vietnamese positions and dropped a total of eight canisters of napalm, a jellied gasoline.

Maj. Gen. Prachum Pibhunpranawat, commander of the second division of the first army, described the air strike as 'successful' but gave no details. Prachum is the ranking Thai officer at the border.

The Supreme Military Command said Vietnamese forces were holding territory just inside Thailand near the border town of Phnom Pan and the settlement of Phnom Chat that straddles the border with Cambodia.

According to reports from the field, Vietnamese cross-border artillery fire frequently has been intense in recent days, with the Thais sometimes returning fire.

The military spokesman said five Thai soldiers have been killed and 16 wounded during the fighting, while the bodies of six Vietnamese soldiers have been recovered over the past six days. Vietnamese weapons, ammunition and gas masks also have been captured, he said.

On Monday, Thailand sent a note to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar protesting what it claimed were Vietnamese intrusions into its territory and 'inhumane genocidal crimes' against Cambodian civilians.

Last Thursday, Vietnamese forces launched their most intense drive to date in a four-year war against Cambodian guerrilla groups on the western edge of Cambodia.

Two four-foot-long snakes, both venomous Gaboon Vipers, were in a plastic trash bag that the youth had carried on the bus, police said.

The driver then called police on the bus' two-way radio. The youth was rushed to Children's Hospital, where he was listed in critical condition. Hospital officials identified him as Louis Morton, 16, of southeast Washington.

The National's Zoo's total supply of anti-venom serum was used to treat the youth, and additional serum was flown in from Philadelphia, Virginia and New York.

Local Fans Exult On Pack's Victory

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

There was a red ribbon 'round the "No Parking" sign in front of Cox Florists, a recycled State's No. 1 (circa 1974) red and white rug above Malcolm Green's office door, and red and white attire and smiles on N.C. State University basketball fans everywhere today.

The North Carolina State Wolfpack beat predicted-to-win Houston in the final seconds of the NCAA National Championship in Albuquerque, N.M., Monday night and sent fans into ecstasy.

'The wonderful thing about State's No. 1 items,' Green quipped, 'is that they're reusable. You can depend on State to do it again.'

'The oddsmakers said they couldn't, but I knew they could win it,' Farmville resident Allen Vick said. He and many of his Farmville Central sophomore class friends got together at Marshall Payne's house to watch the game and celebrate afterwards, he said. 'I became a State fan when I was in the second grade, I guess, when I saw them win the 1974 National Championship. I've stuck with them through thick and thin ever since. They're great!'

Bion Schulken of Womack Electronics got up early this morning to wash and iron a white shirt to wear with a red tie. Malcolm Green donned his red pants and spent the morning teasing fellow Greenville Utilities engineer Roger Jones about keeping on his N.C. State jacket even though he was sweating. Greenville Utilities engineer Mike Waters (Class of '76) also wore red pants and pinned a wolf clipped from a game program to his shirt for good measure.

December 1982 State graduate Jamie Harper of Greenville said she was going to Raleigh today to get some "bumper stickers and stuff" to share with her friends. Malcolm Green said he'll have some Wednesday, too, courtesy of a fellow State alumnus from Raleigh.

'It's just like a Christmas present here in the springtime,' N.C. State-trained farm extension agent Sam Uzzell (Class of '74) said. 'I wouldn't take anything for it.'

'Old folks that haven't watched a basketball game in years were up last night,' Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne (N.C. State Class of '43) said. 'I saw exuberance last night that reminded me of the old days when Bones McKinney was playing for Carolina. It was wonderful, fantastic. Don't know when I've enjoyed anything any more!'

Dr. Charles Russell (NCS Class of '61) of Pitt Community College said, 'It was a great night for basketball in North Carolina, the ACC, the nation. The Wolfpack picked up the charter for that Phi Slama Jama Fraternity and dissolved it!'

Even Carolina fans like Beth Nichols of Greenville Utilities are happy. 'I'm tickled State won,' she said. 'They really did a great job.'

'I'm flying high,' long-time State fan Edith Edwards, nurse at the Greenville Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic, said. 'When Lorenzo Charles Slama Jamaed that last one, the Falkland crowd I was watching the game with went crazy. Yes, I'm wearing red and white today — my State button on my white uniform.'

Karen Green, Rose High student and employee of Greenville Cable TV, looks forward to a steak dinner, courtesy of a Carolina fan friend who bet her the Cardiac Kids couldn't pull it out.

Youth's Condition Critical After Bite By Viper

WASHINGTON (AP) — A youth was in critical condition today after he was bitten by a poisonous snake stolen from the National Zoo.

The youth was riding a transit bus late Monday night in downtown Washington, about three miles from the zoo, when he told the driver that he had been bitten by a snake, said District of Col-

Hospital spokeswoman Molly Hanson said Morton was bitten in the right shoulder.

Laurie Bingaman, an employee of the zoo's department of herpetology, said the vipers were returned safely to the zoo early today.

'They are a very venomous species, and tend to inject a lot of venom,' she said. 'The severity of the bite depends on the size of the snake and how much venom the snake decides to inject.'

She said the venom acts as an anti-coagulant and allows much bleeding.

Ray Harper, one of the first police officers to respond to the bus driver's call, said one snake started to come out of the bag when he arrived.

'We got a pole from the fire department, used it hold down the snake's head and picked him up,' Harper said. He and another officer accompanied the ambulance to the hospital with the snakes, with Harper holding one snake tightly behind the head.

Powell-Hardy Vows Solemnized Sunday

BELL ARTHUR — The wedding of Lisa Marie Hardy and William Allen Powell Jr. was solemnized Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Bell Arthur Christian Church. The Rev. Linwood E. Kilpatrick performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Earl Hardy of Route 2, Grimesland, and Mrs. Ardeen Powell of Route 1, Greenville, and the late William A. Powell.

Nuptial music was presented by D.J. Rasberry, organist, and Mrs. Rasberry, pianist. Emerson Hobgood sang "There Is Love" and "We've Only Just Begun."

The bride and bridegroom entered the church together. She wore a formal gown of white silk organza over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in re-embroidered lace beaded with pearls. The fitted bodice featured an overlay of chantilly lace in a floral pattern. A border of scalloped embroidered lace enhanced the modified empire waistline. The full sheer bishop sleeves were styled in sheer organza and chantilly lace with fitted cuffs trimmed in embroidered lace. A panel of chantilly lace embellished the chapel length train and the embroidered lace edged the hemline and attached train. She wore an elbow length veil of tiered illusion edged in miniature silk Venise lace. Her veil was held in place by a Camelot headpiece trimmed in the Venise lace beaded with pearls. The bride carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

Kevin Hardy, brother of the bride, was ring bearer. Haywood Powell of Wilson, uncle of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included David Keith White of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Lester H. Mason of California, uncle of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of floral print and the mother of the bridegroom wore a pink linen suit. Both wore orchid corsages.

MRS. WILLIAM ALLEN POWELL JR.

Mrs. Arlie Adams, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Alice Coker, great aunt of the bridegroom, were remembered with white carnation corsages.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Georgia Powell White, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register.

A portrait of the bride was placed on a table covered with a white lace cloth. The table was decorated with Easter baskets filled with multicolored eggs filled with rice.

Wedding cake was served by Jean McLawhorn, aunt of the bridegroom. Punch was poured by Franchion McLawhorn Mason, aunt of the bridegroom. A color scheme of pink and white was carried out in carnations, baby's breath and miniature roses.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a white and gray ensemble and wore her mother's corsage.

The couple will be living at Route 1, Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy. She works at Belk Tyler Hair Salon. The bridegroom is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and Pitt Community College. He formerly worked at Procter and Gamble and is now engaged in masonry.

The mother of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party at a pre-rehearsal dinner Saturday night at Sweet Carolines. A pig-pickin' was given by aunts and uncles of the bridegroom.

Dear Abby

Traveling Father Solved Problem

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: "No Identification, Please" asked how single fathers of daughters take them to the bathroom in public places.

When my daughters were 2 and 3, I traveled almost constantly in my consulting business. Since I didn't want to be away from my children so much, I took them with me. We went to more than 40 states, South America, Europe and Asia. The girls loved traveling, and we never had a bit of trouble.

When the need arose in public places, I always looked around for a friendly looking woman to take them to the bathroom. No one ever refused. The only place I ever had any difficulty was in the airport in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, where approaching a strange woman could cause extreme difficulty. I saw a family sitting in the waiting area, the woman properly veiled, the father looking fierce but friendly. I asked him if he would mind asking his wife to perform this small service for me. He was most cooperative and she was delighted to help. My girls made new friends and I wound up with a new client!

My daughters still travel with me in the summertime, but they're old enough now to handle those matters by themselves.

COLORADO DADDY

DEAR ABBY: For a 27-year-old woman, I've been through a lot. I attempted suicide three times and was institutionalized twice because I was so filled with guilt and self-loathing I didn't think I deserved to live.

I am now recovering with the help of a therapist who has helped me realize that I was a victim.

My problems began when I was sexually abused by my stepfather from the time I was 8 until I was 14. I never told anyone until my younger sister became pregnant by him when she was 13. Because of her testimony and mine, Dad was sent to prison for seven years. (My mother divorced him.)

I just learned that he is out on parole and going to marry a young widow with two small daughters. I don't know if she knows about Dad's record, but if she doesn't and he molests her little girls, I would never forgive myself for not warning her. Should I be the one to tell her?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANON: Discuss this with your therapist. In any case, I agree, the woman must be told.

Your letter gives me an opportunity to repeat this advice:

Parents, keep a sharp eye on your little ones. They are never too young to be told that they must not allow anyone to touch their private parts, or to involve them in any "secret" game-playing. Stress the importance of reporting such incidents immediately, particularly if the older person makes the child promise not to tell anybody.

Studies show that most children are sexually abused by a trusted family member or friend — rarely a stranger.

"Parents United" has an excellent self-help program, and the organization is nationwide. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Parents United, Inc., P.O. Box 952, San Jose, Calif. 95108, for the address of the chapter nearest you.

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago I was dating a man in another city. For Valentine's Day, he sent me flowers that were legally dead on arrival.

I told him about it, so his florist called and promised to send me some "lovely flowers" on the next occasion that called for flowers.

He did, too — on Mother's Day! I didn't have the heart to tell my poor guy.

NOT AMUSED IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR NOT: Too late now, but you should have told the florist you wanted a replacement toot sweet!

Full-Scale Mock Wedding Climaxes Course On Marriage

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
WINCHENDON, Mass. (UPI) — To the familiar strains of the Wedding March, the radiant bride strolled down the aisle toward the handsome groom. Flower girls tossed petals. Parents snapped pictures. Perrish Kelly slipped a ring on Diane Desmond's finger. The young couple were pronounced husband and wife.

Two weeks and two "babies" later, the couple cheerfully reminded each other the wedding wasn't real, their offspring were literally raw eggs and the overwhelming responsibilities of marriage and parenthood could wait for now.

That's exactly the conclusion teacher Evelyn Honkala hoped for in initiating a "Marriage and Family" course heavily relying on role playing to dramatize the serious obligations the romantic ceremony incurs.

"Some think I'm negative about marriage," Mrs. Honkala said. "I'm not. I just want the students to understand through practical experience what they're getting into."

The course for Murdoch High School juniors and seniors has become so popular there's a waiting list.

"I never realized what was involved in organizing a wedding," said Lisa Clapp, in charge of the floral arrangements for the nuptials. "I thought it took a week and then you got married."

During the six weeks of preparation, each female member of the class planned her own make believe wedding, organized the mock ceremony, researched each detail from the cost of invitations, bridal showers, rings, photographs, a reception and rented formal wear for the troupeau.

The males were assigned the task of finding a hypothetical employer for a youth with only a high school diploma and itemizing a budget based on the husband's salary. The disillusioned teenagers found factory employment at low pay was all they would be able to obtain.

Since only about 40 percent of the high school graduating class goes on to college and there has been a tendency to marry young in the town, Mrs. Honkala views the course experiences as essential.

"It's not that women's lib passed us by," Mrs. Honkala said. "Young people need and want to discuss male-female relationships, regardless of when or if they marry."

"By the time the five-day-a-week course is over, they know exactly what they're getting into if they decide upon an early marriage," she said. "I tell them to continue their education or job training, to get out into the world and refrain from marriage until they are really ready."

"But nothing actually drives this message home" like the wedding and subsequent unit on infant care, Mrs. Honkala said.

The mock ceremony not only captures the imaginations of the students but much of the middle-class community of 7,000.

The red roses carried by the 17-year-old bride are donated by a local store along with the petals for the flower girls and bouquets for the maid of honor and four bridesmaids.

Shopowners also contribute the satin bridal gown, tuxedos, refreshments and even a beautician for the girl's hairdos while a mother of one of the participants bakes the tiered wedding cake.

Marching from the home economics room to the school auditorium packed with parents, teachers and students, principal William Driscoll accompanied Diane down the aisle. A science teacher conducted the ceremony. "It felt so real I was kind of nervous," Miss Desmond said afterwards. "I never wore a wedding gown before."

Emphasizing she has no plans of marriage after high school, she said, "I'm going to beauty school college. Marriage can wait."

"At first it started out like any other day," Perrish said. "Then I heard the Wedding March and got the jitters."

"I'm very relieved it was a mock wedding," said Perrish, who intends to enter the armed forces after graduation.

"I never realized how expensive a wedding is until I finished planning my own," said Wendy Wood, one of the bridesmaids. "I guess we were all pretty naive."

"But the ceremony made everything we've studied seem so relevant," she said, referring to the earlier class sessions on dating, standards for selecting a spouse and financial responsibilities.

Since all 35 students want to be in the wedding party, the 11 key spots are distributed at random by draw. The other youngsters, like Miss Clapp, are involved in the organizational aspects.

"The impact of the ceremony isn't just centered on the bride and groom," Mrs. Honkala said. "It affects them all."

There's no letdown afterwards, with the class immediately involved in parenthood preparation, prenatal care and birth in anticipation of the obligations soon to descend upon them.

"I wanted to come up with a way to make the responsibilities of parenthood real, not just academic," said Mrs. Honkala, a mother of four from Keene, N.H.

"At first I thought of giving each student a plant, but what could better demonstrate the fragility of a newborn than an egg?" Mrs. Honkala distributed the eggs, informed each new parent of the sex and instructed the class to "keep the babies with you 24 hours a day."

"Just like real babies, the eggs enter the world nameless, unclothed and defenseless," Mrs. Honkala said. "It's up to the parents to provide names, clothing, shelter and safety."

To get into the spirit of the assignment, the students decorate their eggs with faces and hair, pick names and make clothing, such as tiny coverlets and bonnets. All are required to provide a carrier, such as a bassinet or cradle. Some become so enthusiastic they supply tiny bottles and rattles.

"This is just what I've been waiting for," said Correen Ramsey, looking affectionately at the wide-eyed egg smiling back at her. "I didn't learn all about postnatal care for nothing."

"Each student must also keep a diary concerning the daily care of a real baby," Mrs. Honkala said.

The youngsters soon find balancing their books, egg and cradle through the crowded hallways isn't easy. And keeping an eye on junior during lunch and gym is so difficult they need "egg sitters."

Driscoll, his secretaries and office staff frequently end up watching the eggs.

"That's fine," said Mrs. Honkala, "as long as it's someone responsible. After all, a new parent wouldn't entrust the well being of an infant to just anyone."

The students find their charges are the targets of "egg-nappers," Mrs. Honkala said.

"Keeping the egg intact isn't easy," she said. "The problems become seemingly endless. That is what this is all about. It's fun, but it teaches the students that having a baby is a 24-hour responsibility every day."

"Anyone can give birth to a child, but that's when the real work begins. By the time the two weeks are over, the youngsters understand this very well."

The students don't take the breaking of an egg lightly.

"The death of a baby is a tragedy some parents must face," Mrs. Honkala said. "For the purposes of the course, the owner of a smashed egg must find out just what is involved in burying a baby, including the cost of a funeral."

"I don't consider this a morbid way of handling the situation," she said. "It is realistic."

Needs For Volunteers Grow, Recruits Are Hard To Find

By SANDRA L. LATIMER
COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — The candystriper, Little League coach, Girl Scout leader have something in common. They're volunteers — doing their job for no paycheck, often for self-satisfaction.

Currently high unemployment and cutbacks in agencies' service programs would seem to create both a supply and a demand for volunteers.

Not so, says Glenn Esh, executive director of the Volunteer Action Center in Columbus, and he thinks Columbus' experience with volunteerism applies nationwide.

Esh says people making it on their own are more inclined to be volunteers.

"Those whose survival is threatened are not very likely to help others," he said. "They are hurt too much themselves. I am not surprised that those laid off are not going to be able to do volunteer work."

He said a paid staff is necessary to manage volunteer programs, and staff cutbacks render agencies less able to be involved with large numbers of volunteers.

The higher the level of work, the greater the need for skilled volunteers, Esh said, and that in turn requires a strong staff and administration.

Typical volunteers often are thought of as homemakers working at the school their children attend, or driving for scouting programs.

A recent survey in Columbus showed men frequently volunteer — to sit on a board of directors or coach a Little League team — but hesitate to call themselves volunteers.

Esh lists four categories of volunteerism:

—Agencies, such as health services, hospitals, nursing homes, Red Cross.

—Education and recreation, such as schools, tutoring programs, adult literacy programs, museums for tour guides and lecturers.

—One-to-one personal support with organizations such as Big Brothers and Big Sisters and juvenile justice programs. — Administrative-related work, such as stuffing envelopes and licking stamps, serving on a board of directors or on a committee.

Esh, who came up through the volunteer ranks himself, has seen a change in attitudes.

"Prior to the '60s, we had a large religious motivation," he said. "People helping out were saying, 'God says that I should do this.'"

"Then a need for personal development took over, and there is a big push of, 'I want to volunteer and learn an experience that can help qualify me for a paid job.'"

Many agencies, businesses and programs cry for more volunteers than they can get, Esh said, and the biggest need is in one-to-one programs.

"People have a tendency to choose an institution rather than work with an individual."

Volunteers can spend as little as a couple hours a week in volunteer work or as much as 20 hours or more, he said.

Esh suggests anyone wishing to do volunteer work call a specific institution or agency.

Those who have no idea of where to turn, he said, should call the local office that coordinates volunteer work — for instance, in Columbus, the Volunteer Action Center.

Esh's office provides placement counseling. "We help the person decide what he can do and where he can do the volunteer work," he said. "First we look at what is nearest to home and go from there."

He said volunteers seeking work should go about it as they would for a paying job: call an agency to see if there is work to be done, leave their name, address and telephone number, and then go for an interview.

Bread And Butter, Too

Gov. Jim Hunt stated his summation succinctly: "The real answer to across-the-board economic growth is quality education." Hunt, whose administrations have emphasized economic growth and education, brought those ideals together in his speech in Greenville at a Rural Education Institute Conference.

Hunt has spearheaded a move to provide more pay for math and science teachers — a move that we cannot fully support — but he offered a more intriguing suggestion in his Greenville talk: a system of master teachers and principals judged on the quality of their teaching and rewarded generously, possibly by additional thousands of dollars.

Singling out specific groups of teachers — such as math and/or science teachers — can only lead to prejudicial pay scales and justifiable unhappiness in the ranks of teachers. But a system of master teachers ... that's something else.

We are assuming that Hunt meant what he said — teachers judged on the quality of their teaching; that would mean teachers in all fields, equal billing for the all-important kindergarten teacher and the teach-everything elementary and middle school teacher and those math and science teachers.

A few days ago we called for more inducements for public school teachers to bypass those higher-paying jobs in private industry. Hunt's proposal is a major start in the right direction.

But, in striving for that lofty ideal, we urge Hunt and others involved in the policy-setting machinery not to forget the bread-and-butter factors for teacher — such as better overall pay for all teachers and increased efforts by administrators to provide teachers qualified for their classrooms.

It's these basics that have to be corrected before any quality education can be assured for the future.

Extremes Change

Low pressures continue to sweep across the nation, dumping heavy rainfalls on eastern North Carolina before exiting to the Atlantic Ocean.

Where there was concern about drought conditions last year, the worry now is that the regular rains will keep farm fields too wet for farmers to prepare them for planting.

The N.C. Crop and Livestock Reporting services says there were only 1.6 days statewide suitable for working in the fields. That will mean when fields do dry out farmers will have to work overtime to get the work done that is usually spread over several weeks — and even that depends on several clear days to give the soil some time to dry out.

As always, nothing can be done about the weather, but dry or wet, in the spring the weather can make life difficult for the farmer.

More Certification

RALEIGH — There are certified public accountants and certified engineers. Does North Carolina now need certified social workers?

That question is now being debated in the General Assembly. The North Carolina chapter of the National Association of Social Workers says it is in the public's best interest to create certification procedures for social workers. The N.C. Association of Black Social Workers says the opposite.

Legislation pending before the assembly would create a procedure for certifying social workers. The bill would not require a license for practicing social work. It would not require that all social workers become certified to practice their profession.

Under the proposed legislation, four categories of certification are created. The act says that anyone who wants to present himself to the public as a certified social worker in any of these four classes would have to complete a specific load of college or graduate school coursework and pass an appropriate examination. If a social worker doesn't want to take the coursework, doesn't want to take the test and doesn't want to be certified, he doesn't have to. He can continue as a social worker. He just can't say he's certified.

It's all that simple according to the people who are pushing the legislation. For others, certification promises to be an unfair burden on practicing social workers — a burden which will fix something that isn't broken, they say.

Lawrence Davis, lobbyist for those supporting the bill, says social work is an increasingly complex field. We should recognize those people who have the rigorous training required to understand the field. That way, people know what they're getting when they go to a social worker.

"Unqualified social workers can do a great deal of harm to a poor person in this complex field," Davis warns.

But the association of black social workers, in remarks prepared for a legislative study committee meeting, asked to see the proof that the public is now being served poorly by social workers. Show us something broken before you try to fix it, they said.

The black social workers also complain that the certification procedure will force some people who've been working in the field for years to go back to school, at their own expense, to take more coursework. Davis denies this, citing the grandfather provisions of the bill.

One neutral bystander who has witnessed much of the debate says the marketplace is at the heart of the debate. Social worker salaries are kept low because there are plenty of applicants for every open job. If certification standards are introduced, many jobs will go only to certified social workers. When that happens, the pool of applicants will decrease and maybe salaries will have to rise.

Davis denies that the bill is designed to move people out of the field. And he says that it is inconceivable, with today's market, that salaries will be forced up in the near future.

Two years ago, a bill requiring the licensing of social workers failed in the assembly. A study conducted between sessions established criteria for licensing professions and decided social work did not require licensing. This is a different bill and certification is a far less stringent procedure than licensing. Still, in the "Weekly Summary" of legislative activities, the Institute of Government recently opined that "both proponents and opponents of the licensing of social workers will probably view (this act) as a substantial step in the direction of licensing."

WASHINGTON — I seem to be in a relatively small minority, but for the record: I thought the president's speech recently was a first-rate effort. He laid out the disturbing facts on Soviet military expansion; he defended his own defense budget; and in his closing few minutes he touched upon the stuff from which "Star Wars" are made. I found it impressive.

But the reaction around here ranged between ho-hum and ho-ho. House Democrats rushed to approve a budget that would make hash of Mr. Reagan's defense proposals. Media critics cried "politics!" On the day after the speech, 20 senior correspondents were invited to one of those not-for-attribution briefings at the White House. My brother lords of the press asked questions that curled across the table with a little spin on the ball: "If you were the Soviets, wouldn't you regard the 'Star Wars' stuff as an escalation of the arms race?"

For my own part, I faulted the president on one point only. The White House lately has been making a great thing out of "tightening internal security" and "protecting classified matter." It seemed a bit unsettling for the president himself then to display top-secret satellite photographs of Soviet installations in Cuba and Grenada. Either the photographs never should have been so classified in the first place, or the president had no business playing show-and-tell with his TV audience. But that is an issue for another day.

We have heard so many statistics in recent months on comparative levels of U.S. and Soviet arms that most of us have been pretty well numbed by the figures. Even so, accepting the president's figures as accurate, we have to regard the situation as deeply disturbing. This was the president's litany:

Since 1969, the Soviet Union has built five new classes of intercontinental atomic missiles; we have introduced none. The Soviet Union has put 200 new Backfire bombers in the air; we have built no long-range bombers since the B-52s of 25 years ago. The Soviets now have deployed 1,300 land-based intermediate missiles; we have deployed none. Since 1974, we have produced 3,000 tactical combat aircraft; the Soviets have produced twice as many. In this period we have produced 27 attack submarines, the Soviets 61. We have produced 11,200 armored vehicles, the Soviets 54,000.

The apostles of pooh-pooh may be correct in saying that when the forces of our allies are put on the scales, the apparent imbalance is less dramatic. Even so, the Soviet threat to peace in the world is plainly ominous, and the Soviets' deployment of so many intercontinental missiles is especially disturbing.

Mr. Reagan's concluding "vision of the future" thus struck me as especially appealing. "Would it not be better," he asked, "to save lives than to avenge them?" He proposed stepped-up research on bold and far-out defenses against the ballistic missiles. The two experts who briefed us confirmed that the president is thinking of powerful lasers and of particle physics — devices that would intercept and destroy ballistic missiles before they reached their targets.

Such a program makes great good sense. One anti-ballistic missile agreement with the Soviet Union prohibits "development" and "deployment," but it does not bar either nation from basic research. We were told at the briefing that it could take "decades" for the research to reach a point at which actual development and assembly could begin. Meanwhile, our intelligence agencies are certain that the Soviets, for all the bluster of their response to the president's speech, are themselves engaged in the identical basic research.

The pooh-bahs of the press scoffed at the futuristic stuff, but the years have taught me the risks of incredulity. When you consider the breathtaking breakthroughs of recent years in genetics, computers, fiber optics, satellite communications and the like, nothing seems impossible in the realm of technology.

We ought almost to welcome a race with the Soviet Union in these defensive systems. If the means could be perfected by which their missiles and ours were rendered equally impotent, surely we would have achieved a step back from the brink of catastrophe. The president, in my view, deserves something better than derision. He merits applause.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I read with amazement the article in Sunday's Reflector concerning the gasoline tax increase. The gasoline dealers seemed so concerned about the increase and how it would affect the public. Neither one explained why, at a time of declining price per barrel of oil, that the oil companies put in their own price increase, making the increase from nine to 11 cents, instead of the five cents necessary for the federal tax. I am not saying either price increase is right or wrong, only that before we point a finger at someone else we should examine our own back yard.

'Sons Of EPA' May Be Released

WASHINGTON — For many, scandal and housecleaning at the Environmental Protection Agency might seem enough to set an administration listing dangerously toward business interests back on an even keel.

Any number of "Sons of EPA" sequels, however, may soon be released, exposing trails of conflict and malfeasance as unconscionable as those at the traumatized agency. One can only wonder if the Democrats are waiting for a "smoking shredder" or a telltale appointments calendar before screening other horror stories.

So far, the heat has been on William D. Ruckelshaus to convince everyone that past ties with Weyerhaeuser Co., for whom he recently served as general counsel, won't influence his stewardship of the EPA. The Weyerhaeuser connection deserves the scrutiny that it's receiving: Despite Ruckelshaus' record of integrity as inaugural EPA administrator and onetime deputy attorney general, his former employer is a major polluter in an industry widely subject to federal environmental law. The Anne Burford era as EPA proved, if nothing else, that such connections cannot be ignored in a pro-business administration.

Unfortunately, Ruckelshaus' celebrated return hasn't sparked a similarly intense review of the "industrial connection" at other agencies. Yet one would find that such incest has led to a similar pattern of non-enforcement and dangerous non-regulation.

Take the Occupational Health and Safety Administration, for example. Its chief, Thorne G. Aughter, a Florida construction company scion and former Reagan campaign soldier, has overseen one of the more thorough counterrevolutions to date. According to a study released Monday by nine national environmental organizations, Aughter's OSHA has ignored both recommendations and evidence for tighter rules on benzene, asbestos and other carcinogens; it has also cut proposed fines by 70 percent and the number of workers protected under OSHA standards by half.

Perhaps not so surprising to Sewergate addicts, OSHA policy now requires that proposed federal safety standards be submitted to industry for comment (John W. Hernandez, a New Mexico sewage specialist, resigned as acting EPA administrator March 25 partly as a result of a controversy over his extending the same privilege to Dow Chemical Co.). As Rep. David Obey (D-Wis.) told the House recently, "It is the same pattern of bias in the area of working health that EPA has demonstrated in the area of public health."

For miners, Obey's words ring with a deeper resonance. Reagan's man at the Mine Health and Safety Administration, Ford Barney Ford, once told subordinates shortly after a major mining accident, "We are servants of the people who supported us." To wit, he has cut back inspections and proposed that manufacturers of mining equipment be allowed to certify the safety of their own products — this despite a 14 percent increase in mining deaths between 1980 and 1981.

When and how the Democrats (and surely some Republicans) will respond to this pattern is uncertain. So far, Obey is one of the few to treat another agency with the scrutiny accorded EPA. He recently requested Aughter's appointments records, if only to demonstrate OSHA's business bias.

For now, however, lawmakers choose to see only the tip of the iceberg. If they take a closer look soon, they'll find that other agencies have become the neutralized, compromised and demoralized outfit that is Reagan's EPA.

Strength For Today

The word "whosoever" is one of the gracious words of the New Testament. "Whosoever cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." "That whosoever believeth on him ... might have eternal life." "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

The gifts and blessings of God are open to everybody. One does not have to belong to a certain race, or have a certain amount of ability, or be in a favored social position in order to have these things.

In the spiritual realm, the things most worth having cannot be achieved by any effort but are freely given to those who truly want to receive. There are requirements for the gift, but these are fair and can be met by anyone. They are simply that we repent of our sins and turn our faces to the light of a new day. If we do that, then God's greatest blessings are ours for the asking. "Whosoever will ... let him."

Proud To Be A Teacher

profession in which I could make a contribution to making this a better world. I don't believe any of us are in this profession for the money. And, to be sure, there is much about teaching that we wish were not so. It is all too easy, at least for me, to allow the "grit" to overshadow the good feeling that comes from being a part of what is the most noble profession on earth.

I am proud to be a teacher (and I am a teacher). I am proud of my profession because of its importance to mankind. I am proud to be a part of a profession that has the very best people in it. It is truly a privilege to be able to work with you.

I hope — during this special week — that you will join with me in reassessing why we are in this business. My sincere wish is that this week you will pause to recall that feeling when a young child hugs you and you know it is love ... when you see the sparkle in those eyes which have discovered a new idea ... when you have felt one torn by conflict and uncertainty develop a bit of security because you care ... when you've seen them grow — even to act as if they don't need you any more — and become successful ... when you have taught a lesson and felt you've done your best ... and when, because of your commitment to the most noble profession, another young one finds it to be "his place."

Recall those things, for that is what it means to be a teacher ... that is what's important ... that is what "Teacher Appreciation Week" is all about. It is not tokens, be they nice; it is not materialistic things, be they good; it is not duplicated memos, be they sincere; but rather it is when each of us feels in our heart that to be a teacher is the highest honor God could grant us in this life.

Recall these things and feel appreciated. You deserve it! You are!

Six Gunmen Take 'Mountain Of Money' In London

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Six gunmen who quietly looted the vaults of a London security firm are on the run today with the proceeds of a heist that may outrank the 1963 Great Train Robbery as Britain's biggest cash robbery ever.

No one was hurt in the eight-hour raid, staged by the shotgun-carrying robbers to coincide with the Easter Monday bank holiday.

"They got a hell of a lot. It was a mountain of money," said a Scotland Yard detective after investigating the ransacked vaults of Security Express Ltd.

One of the firm's employees said the loss might be more than 6 million pounds — $8.82 million.

Britain's largest recorded cash theft to date was the so-called Great Train Robbery in which 2.6 million pounds, then worth nearly $7.3 million, was stolen.

There have been two larger robberies since then, from a bank and a security vault, but valuables as well as cash were stolen.

Security Express transports large quantities of cash between branches of major banks, large stores and commercial firms. It is a subsidiary of the De La Rue group, which prints most of Britain's banknotes as well as currency for several other countries.

A spokesman for De La Rue said today the group has "no idea how much was in the vaults. We will not know until later today."

But an employee who asked to remain anonymous to protect his job said that "There was the maximum amount of money there and the minimum number of staff."

Scotland Yard gave this version of the raid, based on witnesses' accounts:

Six men scaled a rear wall at Security Express headquarters in the financial district, near the Liverpool Street railway station at about 7 a.m. and captured a guard.

They held the guard prisoner until noon when seven other staff members arrived, were seized one by one, and bound and gagged. The robbers threatened the staff with shotguns and forced them to hand over the keys to the money vaults.

Then they systematically looted all the piles of 1, 5, 10 and 20-pound notes, and fled. Scotland Yard said it had not yet determined how the robbers made their getaway with the large sacks of bills.

Staff members didn't manage to free themselves and alert police until about about 3 p.m. — two hours after the robbers' escape.

It was not known why none of the firm's many alarms sounded when the robbers scaled the wall. A Yard detective said security devices in the building were "quite sophisticated," and that the gang seemed to know their way around.

Reporters saw empty bottles of vermouth and wine and dirty glasses strewn on the floor of the entrance hall of the four-story building, suggesting the gang took drinks in with them knowing it would be a long job.

Armed robberies in London, now running at five a day, reached a record-breaking total last year of 1,772, with total losses estimated at $18 million.

Another Condor Egg Is Hatching

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A second condor egg housed in an incubator at the San Diego Zoo has begun to hatch, and officials say the chick poked a fingertip-sized hole in its shell as it rocked back and forth to a tape of "mother vulture sounds."

Meanwhile, Sisquoc, the first of the rare birds hatched in captivity, was reported steadily gaining strength and size Monday at the San Diego Wild Animal Park, where it was being kept in a warm, sterile plastic box.

The second chick began pecking through its light blue eggshell Monday, and the hatch was expected to be completed by later today or Wednesday, zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said.

"It pipped (broke through) its shell earlier than anyone imagined," Jouett said. "You can see the beak poking now and then and the whole egg wiggles and rocks back and forth with the vulture tape."

Zookeepers use a tape of "mother vulture sounds" to duplicate conditions in the wild, Jouett said.

The second egg concerns biologists because it is smaller and the shell is thinner than Sisquoc's eggshell, said Jouett.

But he said scientists, who were maintaining a 24-hour "egg-watch," "are encouraged by the vigorosity with which it is trying to break out if its shell."

According to a team of scientists who watch the endangered species in their 50,000 square-mile range in the central California mountains near Ventura, fewer than 20 of the huge, ash-grey birds are left in the wild.

Four, including Sisquoc, are in captivity.

In an attempt to save the vanishing birds — the largest in North America — scientists initiated the egg-napping program with the idea of incubating the eggs in zoo laboratories. Once a breeding pair in the wild loses an egg, the condor couple usually mate again, and lay another egg.

He said an early hatching could cause the chick some neurological complications such as a curled beak or feet.

Like Sisquoc, which was helped out of the shell March 30 by zoo biologists, Jouett said the new egg would get help in breaking free "when it stops attempting to break out on its own, or it has broken a big enough hole that we can look inside and tell it has used up all the food in its yolk sac."

Sisquoc, named after a condor preserve in Santa Barbara County, was reported eating like "a little pig," said condor keeper Bill Toone, who uses puppets that resemble condors to feed the condor chick. The condor puppets are used so the chick won't become attached to humans.

As of Monday, the salmon-colored chick weighed "under 11 ounces."

Jones Recovering From Surgery

A spokesman in Rep. Walter B. Jones' office said today that the Farmville Democrat was "doing great" after undergoing what he termed minor vascular corrective surgery on his left leg last week.

Floyd Lupton said in Washington that Jones had the surgery March 28 at Walter Reed Army Medical Center and is expected to be released Wednesday or Thursday.

"He's convalescing at Walter Reed and is getting along fine," said Lupton.

Hutton Sets Moving Date

E.F. Hutton & Co., stock brokers, has set Sept. 1 as the date to occupy its Greenville offices under construction at 102 Arlington Blvd.

Manager Brian Palmer said the 6,400-square-foot, two-story facility will be similar in design to the Raleigh Tavern in Williamsburg, Va., with a brick foundation and wood siding.

Palmer and Van Fleming, an asset liability management specialist with the firm here, will own the building, which will have an office capacity for 18 brokers. The site will be landscaped and parking for clients will be in front of the structure. William B. Everett Jr. Inc. is the construction contractor, Palmer said.

E.F. Hutton moved to Greenville from Kinston about 18 months ago with eight brokers and currently has a staff of 14 brokers at its existing 327 Arlington Blvd. offices.

The company is headquartered in New York City.

FDA Says 'Warning' Just A Rumor

NEW YORK (AP) — A newly revived rumor that people who wear contact lenses can go blind from looking at sparks is erroneous, say federal officials willing to mount a publicity campaign if the fable doesn't fade away.

In the last few weeks, industrial safety officers, labor publications and concerned employees across the country have spread a warning that electrical discharges from arc welders or switches can cause a contact lens to fuse to the cornea, damaging the eye and causing blindness. The rumor is untrue, authorities say.

"This particular story was like a fourth-hand report put out by someone who forgot to check his facts," said Dennis Hirschfelder, director of eye safety for the National Society to Prevent Blindness.

If the rumor doesn't disappear on its own, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration could launch a public information campaign to stop the spread of the incorrect information, Chet Reynolds, head of the FDA's device monitoring branch, said Monday.

Hirschfelder has traced the rumor to an incident in 1967, when a worker in a Baltimore shipyard received minor eye injuries after the explosion of an electrical device.

His vision returned soon after, Hirschfelder said.

Recently, the rumor has been revived. "I have had in the last few weeks about 250 calls and letters from every state in the country," he said.

The FDA, which operates a network to collect reports of problems with medical devices — including contact lenses — has no report of any such occurrence, said Robert Britain, the agency's director of medical devices.

Police Check Two Accidents

An estimated $3,700 damage resulted from two collisions Greenville police investigated Sunday.

Officers said an estimated $1,000 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 9 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenville Boulevard.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified as William Randy McKinney of 103 Holiday Court, and Herbert Corey of Route 1, Ayden.

McKinney was charged with driving under the influence.

Cars driven by Denia Jean Harper of Snow Hill and Clarence Edward Sharp of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 6:25 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 790 feet north of the Chestnut Street intersection, officers said, causing an estimated $1,100 damage to the Harper car and $600 damage to the Sharp vehicle.

Harper was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Automotive News said Monday the 296 total follows 1975's 325-model offering and 1982's 307.

In a separate story, the periodical said $15,900 sticker prices have been set for the Bertone X 1-9 and the Pininfarina Spider 2000, which will be sold in the United States by International Automobile Importers Inc.

Taxpayer Won't Have To Decide Between Parties

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Taxpayers won't have to choose between Democrats and Republicans when they check off $1 on their tax return for political campaigns as the result of a law enacted Monday night.

The state House enacted the checkoff law and another law that will force hunters, fishermen and trappers to pay an average of 20 percent more for licenses.

Meanwhile, the Senate met for less than a half hour before Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, called for adjournment "in highest hopes and expectations that our state university will win one more time during the 1982-83 basketball season and that time will be tonight."

Lawing referred to North Carolina State University's National Collegiate Athletic Association title game against top-ranked Houston in Albuquerque, N.M.

The House cleared three bills from its calendar as tipoff time approached.

The House voted 90-17 to change the way taxpayers may check off $1 on their state income tax return to go to political campaigns.

In the past, taxpayers have been able to check off money for Democrats, Republicans or an unspecified party. Money from the unspecified category was divided among political parties according to their number of registered voters.

Under the new law, taxpayers will say whether they want to donate the $1 and all the money will be divided according to the number of registered voters in each party. Senate Republicans objected strongly to the proposal, saying it would hurt them because they have fewer registered voters.

"The main purpose is to get more people to check off," said Rep. Robert Hunter, D-McDowell. He said about 7 percent of the taxpayers contribute the $1 and he expects that amount to go up to about 20 percent under the new law. He said both major parties should benefit.

But Rep. Frank Redding, R-Randolph, said it was a "partisan bill."

"I don't think we should spend public money on political activities," he said, adding that he believed taxpayers felt the same way and that's why they don't take the checkoff.

The House also voted 98-6 to enact a bill raising the price of a license for hunting, fishing and trapping to generate $1.2 million a year to maintain wildlife programs at current levels.

Rep. Jim Lambeth, D-Davidson, said hunters and fishermen across the state helped determine the increases. "If we want to protect wildlife, we've got to have this," Lambeth said. "It's a question of whether we want to travel down the road first class or down the backwoods."

The price of a sportsman license, for example, will be increased from $27.50 to $30 for residents and from $55 to $95 for non-residents. The higher increase for non-residents is to bring the price in line with licenses in surrounding states.

The most popular license, the fishing license for state residents, will increase from $9.50 to $11.50. The next most popular license, the combination hunting and fishing license for state residents, will increase from $12.50 to $15.50.

The law also creates several resident and non-resident one-day, three-day and six-day fishing licenses to meet tourists' needs. Tourists now must buy several one-day licenses.

In other legislative action:

Sales Tax

Cumberland County representatives introduced a bill to raise the sales tax there by 1 percent. The tax increase would be decided by voters. The bill does not specify how the money will be used.

Alarms

Rep. John Church, D-Vance, introduced a bill to set up a licensing system for businesses that install, service or monitor alarm systems.

Mandates Force Counties Spend Local Money To Fund Programs

By The Associated Press
North Carolina counties are caught between programs required by the state and federal government and public resistance to increased property taxes, county commissioners say.

Five years ago, counties spent about 66 percent of their local budgets for programs mandated by the state and federal government, said Ed Regan, fiscal analyst for the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners. Now some counties spend up to 80 percent of their budgets for mandated programs.

A large part of the increase is due to such required programs as Medicaid, whose costs rose faster than the inflation rate, he said.

In addition, many people have successfully resisted large property tax increases — the main source of local revenues for counties, he said. That means counties spend a higher percentage of their money for mandates than before.

Most mandates fall into three major categories. Total mandates are "must-have" programs such as food stamps. Discretionary mandates allow counties to determine the level of service for required programs. Conditions of aid are programs that a county must have before it can qualify for federal or state aid.

"A lot of times when they mandate a program and fund it, the formula changes, and it ends up costing the county a lot more money," he said. Yadkin County, for example, is spending almost $2.9 million a year on mandates. The programs range from food stamps to foster-care provisions for adults. They include hidden costs, such as set jail fees and ceilings on how much the county can charge in sales tax.

The mandates cost the county about 62 percent of the $4.6 million it raises locally for its $16.4 million budget.

"Sometimes it seems that we're just a board of enforcers," said Grady J. Hunter, chairman of the county commissioners. Hunter said changes in the cost-sharing formula for public nursing-home care several years ago forced the county to put about $85,000 more into the program.

Sen. Robert B. Jordan, D-Montgomery, introduced a resolution last month that would require the North Carolina budget to show the cost of the state's share of mandates.

"In mandating such things as detention, mental health and social services, we have not looked closely at the continuing costs of those programs," he said. "The result has been that the state and counties have been at odds over who bears the cost."

Dr. Oliver Williams, a political science professor at North Carolina State University, said mandates reflect the voters' will and are therefore accurate reflections of how government responds to its citizens.

"Any piece of legislation that we have today is the result of an interaction of interests across the country," he said.

But David Stedman of Asheboro, chairman of the Stedman Corp. clothing firm, said mandates reduce the power of local government — and local citizens.

"If the only thing we want is freedom from responsibility, then we'll lose that responsibility (to government) down the road," he said.

HOUSECLEANING

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Cleveland County's new sheriff, B.R. McKinney, was sworn in Monday and said he plans to dismiss 17 people in the department, including 10 deputies, and may dismiss two others. McKinney defeated incumbent Dale Costner in November.

Said To Overlook Competitive Bids

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Wake County Hospital System could have saved an undetermined amount of money by buying some of its supplies through the state and using the competitive bid system required by state law, a Raleigh newspaper reported Monday.

The News and Observer said records and interviews indicate the county-owned hospital system has been ignoring a law that requires competitive bids on purchases over $10,000.

An examination of hospital system records, made public by court order in November, shows that the five-hospital system pays a higher price on many items than N.C. Memorial Hospital, a state-owned institution in Chapel Hill.

N.C. Memorial's volume usually is higher but it also buys most of its supplies through competitive contracts established by the State Division of Purchase and Contract.

Hospital system officials declined to talk about missed savings or bidding procedures.

"What you're talking about, I just think we don't classify as news," said William F. Andrews, president of the system.

Shortly after the Wake County Hospital System lost a legal fight to prevent public inspection of its financial records, the system started using the bid system more often, the News and Observer said.

In the fiscal year ended last Sept. 30, its purchasing department awarded only two supply contracts by competitive bid. In the past six months, it awarded 11 supply contracts through competitive bid. In most cases, the prices declined dramatically, the newspaper said.

Last fiscal year, the hospital system bought 1,330 chest drainage units. The price in August was $49.61 each.

In the next two months, the system was offered two lower prices on chest drainage units, so it decided to advertise for bids.

When the bids were opened Jan. 18, three vendors, including the company from which the system had been buying, bid $35, and a fourth bid $34.99 — a 29.6 percent drop in price and an annual savings to the system of $20,175.

Air Controllers In Another Jobs Bid

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Thirty-eight North Carolina air traffic controllers are making a second attempt to get back the jobs they lost during a nationwide strike in August 1981.

The controllers, 21 of them from Fayetteville, have appealed a federal hearing officer's decision to uphold their firings by the Federal Aviation Administration, according to Doug Canders, their Fayetteville attorney.

They are among 11,400 controllers in the nation who were fired when they failed to show up for work during a strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Association.

Hearing officer Margaret Cunningham heard the first appeals of the 38 controllers last September in Fayetteville.

Acting on behalf of the U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board, Ms. Cunningham upheld the firings of the 38 and overturned the dismissal of a 39th controller from Wilmington. The controller, Robert Springle, has returned to work, Canders said.

Canders said Ms. Cunningham's decision to uphold the firings of the 38 is being appealed to the full Merit Systems Protection Board, which considers appeals of job actions against federal employees. The appeals were filed with the board last Friday, he said.

Ms. Cunningham said in February that she upheld the firings because they failed to show they were not participating in a strike. It is illegal for federal employees to strike.

She said she also found the controllers were not denied their rights to due process under federal law.

Canders said the second appeal is based partly on a claim that the government did not make clear its conditions of amnesty for controllers who wanted to return to work. He said a deadline to return passed before many of them were aware of it.

Lost A Foot On Railway Track

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A 7-year-old boy's left foot was severed Sunday when he slid down an embankment and onto a track in front of a Southern Railway train, police said.

The boy, Kockons Dwayne Marsh of Winston-Salem, was treated at Baptist Hospital, police said. Hospital officials later refused to release his condition.

Police said a witness to the accident told them he found the boy lying in a field near the track, picked him up and carried him to a nearby house.

Bruce W. Nations, a flagman who was riding in the caboose, said that he heard a man yelling for him to stop the train shortly after the accident. He said he contacted the train's engineer, Ralph H. Harper, who told officers he hadn't seen the boy.

The boy's leg was severed about four inches above the ankle, according to the police report. A police spokesman said the boy was conscious when he was put into an ambulance. The boy's foot was retrieved and put into the ambulance, the report said.

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — A man whose water was turned off because he failed to pay his bill apparently decided to make a stink about the situation, city officials say.

The 32-year-old man had been angry and vocal at City Hall, prompting a call to police, but later returned to pay up, smiling pleasantly. Lt. Mike Hamblen said Monday. Soon after the man left, the aroma of skunk oil spread through the building.

Police would not identify the man pending an investigation to determine if he was responsible for the caper last Thursday.

Workers were forced to keep every available window and door open "for hours and hours," said receptionist Delores Webb.

"After he (the bill-payer) left, the aroma was there, but nobody saw him do it," Hamblen said.

"The skunk oil and what they had used to get rid of it was very sweet-smelling, stinky sweet," he recalled.

Bishops Say Soviet Also Responsible

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In a statement on disarmament, a committee of Roman Catholic bishops opposes use of nuclear weapons under almost any circumstances and places more responsibility for peace on the Soviet Union.

The statement is expected to be approved by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops in Chicago on May 2-3. About 300 bishops are to attend.

The statement's third and final draft, completed over the weekend, is a strong stance against the use of nuclear weapons under almost all circumstances, said Columbus Auxiliary Bishop George Fulcher, a member of the five-bishop committee.

The 155-page draft differs from the second draft by placing more responsibility on the Soviet Union in deterring the arms race, Fulcher said Monday. The second draft had placed the greatest responsibility on the United States and NATO countries.

It is the first time the Catholic Church has taken a position on nuclear arma-

Keep An Eye On Freedoms

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A national group dedicated to protecting individual freedoms opened its North Carolina office Monday.

People for the American Way plans to monitor censorship in public school libraries, promote the separation of church and state and monitor the news media's fairness in covering both sides of issues.

"Today a number of our most precious freedoms are under attack," said Barry Hager, director of the office to be based in Winston-Salem. "Our organization hopes to play a part ... in restoring North Carolina's role in the defense of individual rights."

People for the American Way was founded in 1980 to combat what its members see as a growing tendency to flout the Bill of Rights, particularly its provisions on the separation of church and state.

Among its founders are television producer Norman Lear; the Rev. Claude Broach, former director of Wake Forest University's Ecumenical Institute and Dr. James Dunn, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs.

The group claims 100,000 members, including 1,500 in North Carolina.

Hager said anyone who has a problem with censorship will be able to turn to the group for help.

To promote freedom of religion, the group plans to air public service announcements and to produce written educational material for public use, he said.

SPRING IN DENVER — A handful of pedestrians cross 17th Street in Denver Monday afternoon while a winter storm rages through the city. Snow started to fall on Sunday and is expected to continue through the week. (AP)

Snow Piling Up As Storms Stall

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

A stalled April snowstorm with winds gusting to hurricane force blew snow into chest-high drifts from Utah to Oklahoma today and a rare blast of polar air dropped temperatures to their lowest marks of the year in some areas.

Hundreds of travelers were stranded, motels were full in many areas, and virtually all roads were closed in the Oklahoma Panhandle where 8 inches of snow had fallen. About a foot of snow fell overnight in parts of Utah as the storm that swept into the area Sunday continued its onslaught.

The temperature was zero just before sunrise in Las Vegas, Nev., and the National Weather Service said budding trees and other spring foliage were hard hit by the severe freeze.

The high in Denver on Monday was only 25 degrees, 30 degrees below normal, and well below the record for the date of 30 set in 1918. The weather service expected it to be much the same today, as snow fell on the city for the third consecutive day.

Winds measured in gusts up to 104 mph roared out of northern Utah's canyons on Monday, tearing roofs away, derailing a train, toppling high-tension transmission towers and cutting power to 44,000 homes.

The winds continued during the night with gusts of 75 mph in the Cache Valley area where power lines were down and some buildings were damaged.

Wind-blown snow piled waist-deep in New Mexico. "Because of icy and slick conditions, all our motels are full," said Nancy Marquez, a dispatcher with the New Mexico state police in Tucumcari. "They are putting up people in the National Guard Armory."

Destiny! Lorenzo Charles' Slama Jama At Buzzer Makes State's Phi Pack Attaka National Champions

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — North Carolina State's Heart Attack Wolfpack rule as college basketball's national champions today, unlikely winners of a crown that had been all but conceded to Houston's Phi Slama Jama skywalkers.

Beaten 54-52 in the NCAA finals Monday night, the men of the tallest fraternity in the land learned a couple of important facts of basketball life.

When you live by the dunk, sometimes you can die by the dunk, too. And you also can perish at the foul line, where soaring above the basket simply isn't allowed.

The irony of it all was that N.C. State did Houston in with a dunk by Lorenzo Charles at the final buzzer after Phi Slama Jama failed Elementary Basketball 101: Foul Shooting.

State was a longshot in this tournament after a mediocre 10-loss season. But Coach Jimmy Valvano, a street-smart New Yorker who took his wise-cracking act to tobacco country, sold his kids a dream and saw them deliver it against the top-ranked Cougars.

It was not an easy victory, but little of what the Wolfpack did in the tournament was easy. Why should the title game have been any different?

So when Charles grabbed Derek Whittenburg's last-gasp air-ball and stuffed it through the basket for State's winning points with one second remaining, it was almost routine for the Cardiac Pack.

"That's just the way it's designed on the blackboard," deadpanned Whittenburg, who in three years of playing under Valvano has learned to place his tongue in his cheek every bit as well as his coach.

"You think that's a freak play?" asked Valvano. "It's part of my Emergency Scoring Series, triple credenza play, unbalanced coach around left end."

It set off a wild celebration in the University of New Mexico's Pit, where State eliminated first Georgia and then Houston to capture the second NCAA title in the school's history.

It was a crown N.C. State almost didn't have a chance to win. They were the longest shots to win this tournament since 1966 when tiny Texas Western upset No. 1 Kentucky in the championship game.

The Wolfpack struggled through a mediocre season and was a so-so 17-10 going into the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. It was there that State beat North Carolina and Virginia on consecutive nights to win an automatic invitation to the NAAs.

Then there were pulsating wins by two points in double overtime against Pepperdine, by one point over Nevada-Las Vegas and by two over Virginia again to reach the Final Four.

All the while, Valvano was selling a dream, telling his kids they were a team of destiny. And the Pack bought the idea.

"They get tired of me talking about dreaming," Valvano said. "But I've been dreaming about this for a long time, ever since I got into coaching."

All State had to do to make the dream come true was beat the No. 1 team in the country, a dunk-drunk squad riding the crest of 26 consecutive victories. Houston had put on a clinic destroying second-ranked Louisville in the semifinals and figured to destroy Valvano's dream.

But it didn't quite happen that way. "Our goal was not to give them a dunk, to make them beat us outside," Valvano said.

The Wolfpack scored the game's first three baskets and for the first 15 minutes, Phi Slama Jama did not manage a single stuff shot as State's dreamers charged into a lead on the fine inside work of 6-11 Thurl Bailey.

"We played great," said Valvano. "We were up 6-0 and it could have been 10-0."

Eventually, 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon soared over the rim for one of Phi Slama Jama's specialties with five minutes left in the half. It was to be the only dunk all night for the team that had stuffed 13 in the faces of Louisville's Cardinals just two days before. State's tenacious 2-3 zone defense controlled the area under the hoop.

Winning Basket

N.C. State's Lorenzo Charles (43) stuffs the ball in the basket to give the Wolfpack a 54-52 win over Houston in the final seconds of the NCAA Basketball Championships last night in Albuquerque. (AP Laserphoto)

At halftime, Bailey had 15 points, Houston's Clyde Drexler was tied to the bench with four personal fouls and the Wolfpack was sitting on a 33-25 lead, 20 minutes away from a national championship.

It turned out to be the longest 20 minutes of Valvano's life.

"I felt we were in a better position eight down to North Carolina State at the half than we were five down to Louisville at the half (in the semifinals)," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis. "I just had the feeling we hadn't played a lick. I felt if we go out and play at all, we win the game."

North Carolina State came out ice cold in the second half and Houston went on a tear, outscoring the Wolfpack 17-2 over the first 9½ minutes. It was reminiscent of the 21-1 Cougar spurt that had buried Louisville on Saturday. The only difference was that Phi Slama Jama still wasn't stuffing. But the fraternity did have the lead, 42-35.

"We were stone cold," said Valvano.

It was beginning to look like the dream was over. Then, though, Houston helped revive it. The racehorse, run-and-gun Cougars, slowed to a walk. The slowdown that N.C. State was expected to play arrived from an unlikely source — Houston. "We went to that because I have a lot of confidence in that offense," said Lewis. "I felt we could pull it out and get some layups."

Valvano admitted he was surprised to see it. Not sorry, you understand. Just surprised.

"They were on a roll and there was quite a bit of time left," he said. "It wasn't like there were four or five minutes. They hadn't exactly been lighting it up, either. Maybe they were trying to get us extended and further from the basket to get some layups."

The play did not work. Suddenly, State's perimeter game came to life. Whittenburg and Sidney Lowe, the backcourt partners who had played together for eight years through high school and college, began bombing from long range and hitting. They got help from Terry Gannon, another outside shooter, and slowly Houston's led melted away.

Olajuwon, the tournament's most valuable player and high scorer in the game with 20 points, tried to keep Houston in control but the Wolfpack kept coming. When the clock got inside five minutes, Valvano went to his last bit of strategy. He started sending Houston to the foul line.

They don't allow dunks from there and Houston has had problems with free throws all year, managing just 61 percent for the season. The shortcoming doomed the Cougars this time.

"We do not want someone else to decide the outcome of the game," explained Valvano. "We knew we had to get them to 1-and-1, so we had to foul. We don't care who we foul. If someone makes it, we don't foul him again. If we foul Drexler and he knocks in two, we don't foul Drexler again. If we foul (freshman Alvin) Franklin and he misses, we tackle him the next time."

Drexler was the first candidate and he hit both of his free throws, extending Houston's lead to 52-46 with 3:19 to go. Valvano did not shop at his stand again, choosing instead to foul Michael Young, who had missed both of his free throws in the first half. Young obliged by missing again.

In the meantime, Whittenburg and Lowe were playing bombs away from the outside. First, Lowe hit a pair of 20-plus footers and then Whittenburg connected from the same territory. With 1:59 left, the Wolfpack had caught Houston, tying the score at 52.

Valvano's next customer at the foul line was Franklin, the freshman. When Whittenburg hacked him, he applauded himself, happy he had fouled the man he wanted to foul. Franklin missed his free throw and Cozell McQueen dragged down the rebound.

Now State could control its own destiny. The Pack called a timeout to plot the last shot.

"Usually in that situation, we go with Derek and Terry on each side and Sidney in the middle," said Valvano. "I tell him, 'Go to it. Nobody does it better.' But we got bent out of shape and didn't know how much time was left."

Drexler barely missed an interception but Whittenburg recovered the ball. With time running out, he launched a rainbow that never got near the basket. It didn't have to, though, because Charles was under the rim, waiting for it. And Olajuwon, who had 18 rebounds until then, was missing in action.

"He wasn't supposed to be that far from the basket," said Lewis. "I told him, 'Don't leave that bucket.' I don't know where he was to tell the truth."

Charles leaped high, grabbing the ball and driving it down through the net for the winning points as time ran out. It was over that quickly.

"It feels awful," said Lewis, a loser in the Final Four for the fourth time in 27 years at Houston. "I never lost a game that I didn't feel awful. But this has a special meaning. I feel terrible. You throw it up, you take your chances."

Phi Slama Jama, indeed.

Heels Drub ECU, 9-1

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina, ranked 12th among collegiate baseball teams in the country, jumped on East Carolina's Pirates for five runs in the first inning and went on to record a 9-1 victory last night.

The loss was the second in a row for the Pirates and their third in the last four games, but it wasn't for lack of trying. The Pirates missed out on several scoring opportunities — including one effort that could have resulted in an inside-the-park home run.

The Tar Heels, who are now 29-4 on the season, brought on Brad Powell, now 6-1 on the year — and the ace of the North Carolina staff — for the game, despite the fact that its comes right in the midst of a string of Atlantic Coast Conference games. Powell did the job, too, limiting the Pirates to an unearned run and just six hits.

The Tar Heels let the Pirates know right off the bat that they were in for a tough night. Drex Roberts backed Robert Wells to the fence in center on a fly ball on the first pitch of the game by ECU starter Charlie Smith. That was followed by a second pitch home run to right by Jeff Hubbard, staking the Heels to an early 1-0 lead.

Before the inning was over, they added four more. B.J. Surhoff followed Hubbard's slam with a single, stealing second. Pete Kumiega walked and both runners moved up on a passed ball. Scott Johnson's single then scored both runners. Johnson advanced on the relay and scored on Mike Jedzinski's hit. Jedzinski also moved up on the relay and scored when Jon O'Leary singled.

It stayed at 5-0 until the fourth when the Tar Heels added a run. O'Leary reached on an error and Walt Weiss singled him to third. The Heels then tried a double steal, but catcher Jack Curlings fired instead to John Hallow at third, catching O'Leary off base. Weiss took second on the play and went to third on a passed ball. He scored when Hubbard singled.

The Pirates got on the scoreboard in the sixth inning with their only run. Kelly Robinette singled to right and Hallow followed with another hit to the same field, moving Robinette to third. Todd Evans grounded to third, forcing Robinette to hold the base. The play got Hallow at second, but on the relay back to third, the ball was thrown away, allowing Robinette to score.

Carolina came back with three more in the bottom of the sixth to wind up the scoring. With one away, Weiss doubled to left and Roberts reached on an error. Hubbard singled in Weiss and Surhoff doubled, driving in both Roberts and Hubbard.

East Carolina had several other scoring opportunities, leaving men on second and third in the fifth, and on second in the ninth.

Their best other chance came in the eighth when a potential inside-the-park homer was erased by a goof by a non-playing Tar Heel.

Hallow sliced a line drive between the Tar Heel first baseman and first and the ball curved on, headed for the corner of the fence in right. As Hallow was rounding second, however, a pitcher in the Carolina bullpen picked the ball up and threw it to the charging right fielder, who was then able to hold Hallow at third.

The umpires made no ruling on the play.

Carolina's hitting was led by Hubbard with three, while Roberts, Surhoff and Weiss each had two. Hallow and David Wells each had two for ECU.

The Pirates, now 14-8, return home tonight at 7 p.m. to host Old Dominion. Wednesday, they host Virginia Wesleyan at 3 p.m., a time change from the original 7 p.m. schedule.

Luck, Outside Shooting Make Pack No. 1

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — North Carolina State was good, yes. But the 1982-83 NCAA basketball champions agreed they were also very lucky — especially at the end, where it counts the most.

"You need luck in a national tournament," an always-frank Jim Valvano said in at the moment of his greatest triumph. "Being in the right place at the right time is going to help you win a close game."

The underdog Wolfpack's improbable 54-52 upset of top-ranked Houston in the NCAA title game Monday night included at least two strokes of great fortune in the final two minutes when the game was ready to swing one way or the other.

Dereck Whittenburg's 23-footer set the stage for the final act in the drama, knotting the tightly-played affair at 52-52 with 1:59 left. Valvano then ordered his troops to foul Alvin Franklin, Houston's freshman guard in hopes that the Cougars' season-long Achilles heel, poor foul shooting, would deliver the ball back to the Pack.

It did. With 1:05 left, Franklin missed the front end of the one-and-one. The ball bounced off the rim and North Carolina State's Cozell McQueen and Thurl Bailey both got their hands on it. But Bailey thought he was fighting Houston center Akeem Olatunji.

"I thought Cozell was Akeem, and I was trying to pull it away from him," said Bailey. "Then I looked at his back and saw who it was, and let go of the ball."

At that instant, McQueen deferred to Bailey and he, too, let go. The ball came within inches of going out of bounds, and into Houston's possession, before McQueen saved it.

"We were awful lucky right there," said Bailey.

Valvano said the winning shot, Lorenzo Charles' stuff at the buzzer of Whittenburg's 30-foot prayer, was also dripping with good fortune.

"When I got the ball, I couldn't see the time," said Whittenburg. "I really didn't know where the goal was or how far away I was."

He let fly. The ball arched high into the air, angling lazily toward the basket. And, luckily for the Wolfpack, Olatunji was not as close to the bucket as Houston Coach Guy Lewis had instructed him to be and Charles was standing there instead.

"When Derek shot it, I saw it was going to be short," said Charles, whose two last-second free throws had lifted the Wolfpack past Virginia in the West Regional title game. "I was in the right place at the right time."

"When I looked up, I saw Lorenzo grabbing the ball and putting it through," said Whittenburg. "I looked at coach. He looked at me — we didn't know what had happened. And then everybody started jumping and hugging, and that was the game."

"When I saw him slam it, a cold chill went through me," said McQueen.

"We got all fouled up and didn't know how much time was left. Fortunately, we got the Hail Mary shot to the right spot," said Valvano.

"Lorenzo, up to that point, hadn't been playing up to his level of play. Then he made the biggest play of his life with the stuff. We played to win this game. This team has so much heart, it never gave up on itself."

Another lucky break for the Wolfpack may have been a decision by Lewis after the Cougars outscored North Carolina State 17-2 at the outset of the second half to turn a 33-25 Wolfpack lead into a 42-35 Houston advantage. To Valvano's surprise, Lewis then ordered his run-and-gun team to slow down the tempo.

"I was a little surprised they were going to a stall with 10 minutes to play," admitted Valvano. "It wasn't like they had four minutes to go. Maybe they were trying to get us extended and further from the basket to get some layups."

But it turned out to be the end of Houston's run. N.C. State, which knew it had to control the tempo to win the game, was back in business, and on its way to one of the most improbable championships in college basketball history. At 26-10, the Wolfpack is the first team with double-digit losses ever to win the NCAA championship.

"Throughout the tournament, the other team was supposed to win," said McQueen. "It was just our day."

Rams' Offense Insures Tournament Victory

WILSON — Greene Central opened play in the Wilson Optimist Tournament Saturday afternoon, and had a 4-1 lead evaporate as Hunt rallied for a 4-4 tie before rains washed out the game.

Yesterday, when the tournament was resumed — with a new start between the two, the Rams made sure of no comeback by the Warriors, rolling to a 10-1 baseball victory.

The Rams pushed over one run in the second inning, then added a second run in the fourth.

But it was the fifth, when eight runs scored, that put the game on ice for the Rams. Michael Warren led off with a single and Chris Suggs walked. With one away, Tommy Goff doubled to score both runners. Richie Chase followed with a single double, scoring Goff. Todd Grant followed with a single that brought Chase over with the fourth run. Otis Barnes then singled in Barnes, who had advanced on an out, and Kevin Langston walked. A third double by Warren scored both runners and Suggs reached on an error, plating Warren with the tenth Ram run.

Hunt's lone run came in the seventh inning.

Warren and Barnes each had two hits to pace Greene Central, while Goff, Chase and Elmer Dixon each added doubles. Christy Rodri led Hunt with two hits.

Greene Central climbs to 5-2 on the season, while Hunt drops to 3-2.

In other games yesterday, Beddingfield downed SouthWest Edgecombe, 27-1, and North Lenoir defeated Raleigh Enloe, 12-2.

Ayden-Grifton downed Fike on Saturday in the tournament's opening game.

Today's pairings have Fike and Hunt at 11 a.m. and SouthWest and Enloe at 2 p.m. in the two losers' bracket games. Ayden-Grifton and Greene Central play at 5 p.m., followed by Beddingfield and North Lenoir at 7:45 p.m. in the winners' bracket.

The tournament winds up on Wednesday.

State Followers Celebrate Pack's Dream Come True

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — They hung from the balconies of their dorm rooms. They smashed beer bottles in the street. They hugged each other and poured gallons of beer over each other's heads. They howled.

North Carolina State fans went wild after the Wolfpack took a 54-52 victory over Houston to win the NCAA basketball championship.

Thousands screamed "N.C. State, N.C. State," as they paraded along Hillsborough Street in front of the N.C. State campus.

Police estimated 20,000 fans turned out for the celebrations. Minutes after the game, police were trying to keep about a thousand fans waving beer cans off the street, which was already bumper-to-bumper with cars honking their horns.

One police officer, who asked not to be identified, estimated there were about 60 or 70 officers there.

"We could use about 600," he said, adding "there's only going to be just so much we can do."

"We've got injuries and we've got arrests, but I couldn't tell you how many of each," a police dispatcher said shortly before 2 a.m. "We've got a pretty big mess out there right now."

Wake County Magistrate Charles Baker said eight people had been brought to the magistrate's office by about 2 a.m. on charges ranging from assault to being drunk and disruptive.

"We've had about 10 in the emergency room, and there's an EMS unit at the door and another on the way," Ms. Mary West, nursing supervisor at Rex Hospital, said three hours after the celebration began. Other hospitals farther from the campus also reported a sprinkling of emergency cases from the celebration.

Sullivan, Boyette and Musgrave each had two hits to lead Aycock, while Vincent had three, and Mizelle and Smith each had two for Rose.

'Man From U.N.C.L.E.' Back Tonight After Fifteen Years

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There's a scene in tonight's CBS movie "Return of the Man From U.N.C.L.E.": The 15 Years Later Affair" when Napoleon Solo and Illya Kuryakin are walking virtually unnoticed past real people on a real Los Angeles street that's supposed to pass for New York City.

You'd think there'd be a turned head or a double-take or two for the suave, stylish Solo (Robert Vaughn) and the implacid, introverted Kuryakin (David McCallum). What's the matter with the folks in Los Angeles? Are they too trendy for nostalgia?

These guys were THE SUPERAGENTS of the 1960s. And if it weren't for them and U.N.C.L.E., the United Network Command for Law and Enforcement, we'd all be saluting the THRUSH flag today.

Reunited 15 years after NBC canceled their four-season series, "The Man From U.N.C.L.E.," Solo and Kuryakin are as much fun as ever, providing light-hearted escapist entertainment. There's a twinkle in everything they do.

Or as Vaughn, rescued from his recent TV roles of villainy, said in an interview: "It's fun, games and terrorism."

The plot, such as it is, can be dispensed with quickly. Solo owns a computer company, but still prefers human companionship from femme fatales and poker players. Kuryakin is a thriving dress designer. They meet again during a restaurant brawl. After their fists separate right from wrong, Solo asks devilishly: "Gotta minute?"

This high-class Batman and Robin have been called back to the spy wars because their archenemy THRUSH, headed by Anthony Zerbe, has threatened to detonate a nuclear bomb if Solo doesn't personally deliver $350 million in ransom.

This is no "Special Bulletin," the authentic-looking movie about nuclear blackmail that caused a stir on NBC last month. James Bond is the tongue-in-cheek inspiration here, so there's no question the boys from U.N.C.L.E. will save the world in time.

George Lazenby even makes an appearance as J.B., whose car, equipped with a missile-launcher, helps Solo out of a tight spot during a wild chase down the strip in Las Vegas.

The script originally was written for a theatrical film budgeted at $5 million, according to Steve Mills, who heads CBS' TV movie department. In doing it for television, the cost was pared in half by removing some of the spectacular stunts.

But there's still plenty of energy and excitement for action-adventure lovers. There are several U.N.C.L.E. — THRUSH shoot-'em-ups reminiscent of "Star Wars," as only the nasties get hit, and oodles of fistfights and explosives.

Vaughn and the Scottish-born McCallum have aged well, even if Solo complains, "This all seemed a lot easier 15 years ago." Vaughn has that regal forehead and the hair that seems to be one piece. McCallum is slightly unkempt and still has the boyish looks that made him a teen-age heartthrob, although he would have to pump and swallow iron to qualify as one of today's hunky video sex symbols.

Willy's Name Almost On Road

WACO, Texas (AP) — Willie Nelson's name almost ended up "On the Road Again," but a plan to name an 8-mile stretch of highway after the country singer was stopped in its tracks because the highway already is named for somebody else.

McLennan County commissioners approved a petition Monday to name part of old state Highway 2, which runs through Nelson's hometown of Abbott in neighboring Hill County, the "Willie Nelson Highway."

But a county judge said the commissioners would have to rescind their action today because the road already is named in honor of former county commissioner Jerry Mashek.

Hillsboro lawyer Frank McGregor said the name change would have been the first step toward construction of a country-western music museum south of Hillsboro.

"The big thing is," said McGregor, "we want to honor Willie Nelson."

TWO DAYS LATE
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Two days late, Argentina observed the first anniversary of its invasion of the Falkland Islands with an outdoor Mass and a small-scale military parade. The observance was delayed because the invasion date coincided with Holy Saturday. About 1,000 civilians attended the services and parade.

Entertainers Mourn Loss Of The Legendary Gloria

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainers mourned perennial glamour queen Gloria Swanson as a "wonderfully vibrant lady" who was a "thorough professional" during six decades on stage and screen.

Miss Swanson died in her sleep at New York Hospital early Monday, less than a month after her 84th birthday.

Although medical officials did not disclose the cause of her death, friends said she entered the hospital a week ago for treatment of a slight heart attack.

"I am big. It's the movies that got small," she pronounced haughtily in the classic film "Sunset Boulevard." And those who knew her seemed to agree.

"She was a wonderfully vibrant lady whose name was synonymous with Hollywood," comedian Bob Hope said in a statement. "She had an aura of glamour that few stars before or since have displayed."

"Absolutely dynamic," said Mousie Powell, the wife of actor William Powell. "When she walked in, you knew she was there. She was effervescent and interested in everything and everybody."

"We just keep losing all the greats," said actress Bette Davis.

Actor Buddy Ebsen recalled her as "a delight and a thorough professional."

An Academy Award eluded her, although she was a contender for one in 1950 for her performance in "Sunset Boulevard," in which she played a former silent film star who kills her younger lover.

Miss Swanson's movie career wound down after "Sunset Boulevard," but she seldom was out of the public eye because of her many marriages, frequent talk show appearances and a sensational autobiography claiming a love affair with the father of President John F. Kennedy.

The star of Hollywood's golden age, whose $25,000-a-week salary paid for a 24-room mansion and lavish life during the silent film days of the 1920s and the early talkies of the '30s, had lived in New York City for many years. Despite advancing years, she frequently was seen at social events until recently.

A tiny woman, Miss Swanson attributed her longevity and well-preserved appearance to a life-long interest in nutrition. In her later years she co-authored with her sixth husband, William Dufty, a book about the harmful effects of too much sugar.

She was once quoted in a Broadway Playbill sketch as saying that she had never had plastic surgery and "name, nose, teeth, bosom, hair, kidneys — everything but the eyelashes — is real."

Miss Swanson was born March 27, 1899, in Chicago, the daughter of an Army captain, and as a child lived in Florida, Texas and Puerto Rico.

During a visit to Essanay Studios in Chicago in 1913 she was hired as an extra at $13.25 a week; within a year she moved to Hollywood, and appeared in a series of Mack Sennett comedies.

When she was 19, director Cecil B. DeMille cast her as a sophisticated woman in "Don't Change Your Husband."

"That was just like having a god come down from Olympus and shake hands with you," she later said. "DeMille was everything in pictures."

She made six films for DeMille; he made her a star, with lavish productions and costumes, including a gown made of ermine tails and a hat modeled on a Chinese pagoda. She left for Paramount in 1921, making 10 films in two years, then formed her own company.

Her first of six husbands was Wallace Beery, the burly character actor of many major Hollywood films. Others were cafe owner Herbert Sornborn; the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudray; Irish sportsman Michael Farmer and businessman William Davey. She and Dufty were married in 1976 and separated in 1981, according to Celebrity Service.

She had two daughters, Gloria Sornborn and Michelle Farmer. A son, Joseph, adopted during her marriage to Daly, died in 1975.

In her 1980 autobiography, "Swanson on Swanson," she said she had an affair with the late Joseph Kennedy in the 1920s, and Kennedy wanted to leave his wife and "maintain a second household with me."

Shortly after the autobiography appeared, Eunice Kennedy wrote a letter to The Washington Post denying her father had an affair with the movie actress.

After her movie career appeared at an end following the 1941 "Father Takes a Wife," Miss Swanson formed Multiprises, a firm that tested and promoted inventions; and produced and starred in "The Gloria Swanson Show," a 1948 TV program in which she sat in a livingroom-studio and chatted about clothes, food and household tips.

In 1951 Miss Swanson starred with Jose Ferrer in the Broadway hit "Twentieth Century." She later had parts in "Airport 1975" and a television movie, "Killer Bees." In 1971, at age 72, she appeared on Broadway again in "Butterflies are Free."

Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Putting Pre-Teens 'In College'

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — In many ways, the classroom looks like a typical one. There are books lining the shelves, geography maps and hand-drawn posters on the walls, and a large green chalkboard dominating one corner.

The fifth through ninth graders look like the standard fare too, most wearing blue jeans, tennis shoes, T-shirts and sweat jackets. One 11-year-old blows bubbles in a huge wad of green bubble gum. Two other pre-teens sit in math class wearing cassette headphones, and giggling when a particular lyric is played.

Typical kids? Hardly. All are enrolled in SACK, St. Andrews College for Kids. These 11- through 14-year-olds have IQs ranging from 125 to 170. According to a 1982 study, the average IQ in the United States is 100.

SACK includes two teachers, one parent volunteer, three small rooms and 24 very smart kids, all from Scotland County.

They're very brilliant children. But they're very normal in other respects," says Carolyn Debnam, a parent volunteer whose son Alex is enrolled in the course.

Two former students have gone directly into college from SACK. But most continue through high school, taking advanced placement courses at Scotland High.

"We still think of them as children," said Donna Ormand, who has taught the students since the program began in 1979.

"What's interesting to me is to see these brilliant kids get out and play tag or soccer. They're not your slide rule, bespectacled bookworm types," said Mrs. Debnam.

Mrs. Ormand and math teacher Donna Hickman give their special students an enormous amount of freedom, emphasizing research and group discussion, with only minimal use of textbooks. "The emphasis here is on learning meaningful things," she said.

If they do poorly on a test, they take it again. Grades aren't stressed. Learning the material is.

SACK began four years ago as an experimental program for bright youngsters preparing to enter college early. It is modeled after the British open classroom where children of various ages are grouped together.

"Socially (the different ages) is a problem. But for the most part they're very tolerant of each other. They are a challenge to each other," Mrs. Ormand said.

To 14-year-old Theresa, the 10- and 11-year-olds are "just bratty."

Theresa entered the program after her parents moved to Scotland County from Chicago. She was in a county public school for one day before enrolling in SACK.

Alison, also 14, wants to be a lawyer and Spanish interpreter in Florida.

Unlike Theresa, she wants to go to a public high school next year so she can be with old friends.

"They think we're stuck up," she said.

During a school day last week — their last before the Easter break — the students were active.

In one of the three small adjoining rooms, a group of fifth and sixth graders studied math — in this case, Algebra I and II, which most students don't begin learning until high school.

In another classroom, three students read, while in the third room a group of children sat cross-legged on a 6-foot high carpet-covered loft, while Mrs. Ormand sat nearby, her head just inches from the ceiling.

The SACK children study American history, geography, American literature, human anatomy, English grammar, creative writing and imagery, math and pre-calculus.

Parents pay an $850 yearly tuition, and the children are heavily screened before admission. They must be recommended for the program by their parents and former teachers, must score highly on diagnostic and intelligence tests, and must complete a project to see if they are independently motivated — which is vital for the program to succeed.

Many have enrolled in regular college courses, in addition to SACK. One boy consistently receives the highest grade in whatever college course he enrolls in. Another former student, now a high-school freshman, has taken 17 college courses.

According to Mrs. Ormand, their parents are very involved with SACK, but few others in the community are aware that the program exists.

"As far as I know, there's not another school like this," she said.

WON'T RUN — Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., according to political sources, has decided not to seek his Party's presidential nomination. Bumpers will formally announce later this week that he will not organize a presidential campaign. (AP Laserphoto)

Industrial Secrets Succumb Most Often To Loose Mouths

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — When it comes to protecting industrial secrets, North Carolina businessmen say they worry more about the loose lips of their employees than cloak-and-dagger spying.

Daniel E. Wilson, president of Asset Protection Associates Inc., a security consulting firm in Charlotte, said it's hard to tell how much damage results from employee talk.

He said leaks are difficult to trace to a single source, especially when competing firms are working on the same problem. And companies often don't prosecute because they want to avoid publicity or because they don't have a clear case.

"To prosecute an employee for leaking information, you have to be able to prove you took steps to safeguard secrets," said Wilson, a former U.S. Defense Department counterintelligence officer.

"This can be as simple as clearly identifying documents as property of the company not to be released and having confidentiality statements all employees must sign."

"It's not just a matter of spy-versus-spy or buying off a weak employee," said Marcia Proctor, manager of corporate security for R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. in Winston-Salem.

"In general, employees are just not aware of how their own job fits into the entire picture and how what they do — or fail to do — affects the whole system."

Companies such as Reynolds long have stressed the need to protect information like tobacco blends, new product developments and employee records from outsiders' eyes.

But employees often aren't as aware of the value that a company places on other kinds of information, or how disclosure can help competitors, executives say.

For IBM, information security is as important as physical security, said Dewey Olson, spokesman for IBM's Information Products Division in Charlotte. Last year IBM, cooperating with the FBI, thwarted a plot by employees of Hitachi Ltd. of Japan to steal some of its computer secrets.

Olson said IBM continually indoctrinates its employees about security. Orientations, posters, employee publications, periodic security checks and performance reviews remind employees that "what you hear here, you leave here," he said.

Almost every project at Charlotte-based Catalytic Inc. is highly confidential, said spokesman Thayer Russell. The firm is currently working on modernization plans for two competing aluminum-foil manufacturers.

Russell said secrecy agreements are signed with customers and employees, and employees are reminded in biweekly staff meetings about the need for secrecy. Also, project work groups are physically separated.

Wilson works mostly with smaller companies that don't have their own security staffs. More than 250 major corporations have purchased the company's educational program on security since it was introduced three years ago.

HELD IN CONTEMPT — Paul Lataille, of Lincoln, R.I., gestures during an interview at the Adult Correctional Institution in Cranston, R.I., where he is being held for contempt of court in refusing to pay $12,425 in back alimony, legal fees and property division to settle his divorce from his wife of 17 years. Lataille claims that divorce discriminates against men, and has vowed to stay in jail until he gets what he considers a fair settlement. (AP Laserphoto)

Yom Hashoah

Allied forces entered Buchenwald, the Nazi concentration camp located near Weimar in what is now West Germany on April 10, 1945 — thirty-eight years ago this week. There they found and liberated about 21,000 prisoners — malnourished, diseased, but alive. These survivors were fortunate, but most of those who passed through the gates at Buchenwald were not. The Nazis established the camp in 1937, four years after Adolf Hitler came to power. During the next eight years, more than 50,000 prisoners were executed there. Most of the victims were Jews. In their memory, the Israeli parliament has set aside this Sunday, April 10, the anniversary of the Buchenwald liberation, as Yom Hashoah — Holocaust Day — to honor the Jewish dead of World War Two.

The cards were not running well for Trump Coup Tommy. The hands had all been straightforward, and though he had gone down in only two game contracts that should have been made, he was already quite a bit out of pocket.

Things finally began to take a turn for the better when Tommy cut against The Stranger. He was a visitor from out of town who had ridiculed Tommy's bidding on a number of hands. Both sides were vulnerable when this hand came up. Tommy's final bid left something to be desired. Since his partner's heart response should have alerted him to the possibility that some of partner's values might be wasted, a pass would have been more prudent. Six diamonds, however, was an excellent contract. The Stranger's double proved that he was unaware of the transformation that came over Tommy when he was faced with a bad trump break.

With a smile, West led the king of hearts. When dummy came down, it was obvious that the double had to be based on trump length. Tommy was in his element. He won the ace of hearts and gave up all thought of leading trumps. Instead he came to hand with a heart ruff, cashed the ace-king of spades and ruffed another heart. The king-ace of clubs and a club ruff reduced The Stranger to nothing but five trumps.

Tommy ruffed a heart with the king of trumps as West underdressed helplessly. Declarer led his last club. If West ruffed low, dummy would overruff. Declarer would then ruff a heart with the ace of trumps and he would still have to score the jack of trumps en passant to make his slam. So West ruffed with the queen of trumps and returned a trump. But that was no better. Tommy won in hand with the ace and led a spade, and dummy had to score both the J-9 of trumps since they were poised over West's 10-8.

Up-To-Date On Burnt Offerings

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Paper money, tiny palaces and miniature replicas of Mercedes Benz cars went up in smoke today as Chinese residents offered prayers to the dead, with a 1980s offering added — video equipment.

Cheng Beng day, roughly equivalent to Christianity's All Souls Day, is when the Chinese visit graves and burn offerings to serve their dead in the next world.

The Star newspaper said the producers of the colored paper, cane and wood replicas introduced a new item this year, which is in great demand — video equipment.

A complete "system" of color TV, video recorder and two video cassettes can be bought for the equivalent of $4.80, with a choice of "brands" ranging from Sony to Philips.

Cash benefits paid directly to you

All benefit checks will be made out to you and mailed directly to your home. You can use the money to pay the hospital or your doctor—or spend it any way you choose. It's entirely up to you!

Your benefits are not taxable

The cash benefits you receive do NOT count as "income" for tax purposes. This helps to make every dollar go further as you use these benefits to meet your needs.

Unlimited cash benefits

The American Citizens Health Plan will pay you as long as you're in the hospital for any covered accident or illness—even if you're hospitalized for the rest of your life. There are no limits on how long you can collect benefits!

You can never be cancelled

We can never cancel your insurance protection—no matter what your age or how much you collect in benefits—as long as you pay your premiums on time. Only you can cancel.

Pre-existing conditions:

You won't be covered for pre-existing health problems during the first year (any new conditions will be paid for immediately).

Pays in addition to any other insurance

To help pay your medical bills and everyday household expenses, you'll receive a check in addition to any other insurance benefits you collect.

Your Guarantee of Satisfaction

When you receive your policy in the mail, look it over carefully. Discuss it, if you wish, with a trusted advisor and feel free to compare this Plan with other policies of this type. If, for any reason, you decide that you no longer wish to participate in the plan, simply return your policy within 30 days of issue and we will promptly refund your money. In the meanwhile, you will be fully protected while you are making up your mind.

a month

Even if you're entitled to "free" medical care at a VA or government hospital, we'll still pay you full benefits.

Your premiums stay the same year after year

Your premiums will NOT go up as you grow older and you cannot be singled out for a rate increase. Your premiums will only change if there is a general rate adjustment on all our policies of this type in your entire state.

Guaranteed acceptance (you can't be turned down)

You and your entire family will be accepted automatically in the plan of your choice—no physical examination required. . . no health questions to answer. You cannot be turned down!

Coverage reduces at age 65 Read how American Citizens Health Plan pays in addition to Medicare!

When you reach 65, the American Citizens Health Plan will pay you up to $30.00 a day (50% reduction of benefits provided those under 65) to tie in with Medicare during the first 60 days of hospitalization. Then, just about the time when Medicare benefits are reduced, we will pay you up to $60.00 a day beginning with the 61st day for as long as you are in the hospital.

Your low monthly premiums include $20.00 a day for Home Nursing Care, Double Accident Benefits, and up to $5,000.00 for loss of limb or eyesight as outlined above.

You are not covered for. . .

In order to keep rates down and guarantee that everyone will be accepted with no medical questions asked, there is a limit of only one policy per person.

Also, some exclusions are required losses resulting from acts of war, nervous or mental disorders, or use of narcotics, normal pregnancy, unless Maternity Benefits have been selected; and confinement in a nursing home or convalescent care facility as defined in your policy.
