Pitt Trims Tobacco Allotment Charges

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, sitting as a board of equalization and review Wednesday, voted to reduce the number of pounds of tobacco charged to allotment holders on county property tax records by 10 percent to coincide with a similar reduction in tobacco allotments by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The action came after several months of discussion among board members and after John Farthing of the N.C. Department of Revenue's Ad Valorem Tax Division said Wednesday, "I would not be critical if you decided you wanted to reduce it."

Farthing, who attended the session, said the Revenue Department's position is that the reduction in tobacco allotments this year may not affect the value of farm property. He suggested that "the price per pound value will increase to offset the decrease" in allotment. "You may not need to do anything," Farthing said, unless "you find the reduction in the number of pounds has reduced the value of the property."

That position is based on the fact that in some counties, the value of tobacco allotments is included as an integral part of the value of farm property and not listed as a separate item.

However, Farthing said he would not be critical of the action after board Chairman Charles Gaskins explained that during the last revaluation of property in the county, the "pounds were listed separately on the computer" in setting property values and "it would be difficult to tax someone for something they do not have."

Tax Supervisor Jimmie Hardee said the 10 percent reduction in poundage from the tax base would cost the county only $20,000 in revenue.

As a board of equalization and review, the commissioners decided not to grant an across-the-board cut in peanut allotments, but said individuals whose allotment has been cut, or who have sold or purchased allotments, would be handled on an individual basis by contacting the tax supervisor's office.

That action was based on the fact that although peanut allotments have been cut 2½ percent, some farmers received no reduction while others were cut more than 2½ percent.

Hardee said if all peanut allotments on tax records were cut 2½ percent, it would result in a loss of income of only $308.

Meeting later as the board of commissioners, the governing body voted to sell the county's 38,015 pound tobacco allotment and 17,344 pound peanut allotment. A date for the public sale of the allotment, which already has been leased for this year, was not set Wednesday.

Stacy Evans, manager of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office here, told commissioners that most of the large tobacco allotments that will have to be sold because of government regulations have already been sold. He said the sales, which amount to about 218,000 pounds, ranged in price from $2.75 a pound to $3.25 a pound.

Evans also told commissioners that a report made to the board Tuesday by the Agricultural Extension Service which indicated that only 31,000 acres of corn would be planted in the county this year was in error.

Evans said about 60,000 acres of corn would be planted this year, compared with 79,000 acres last year. The remainder, Evans said, would be placed in the federal PIK program.

Commissioners also voted to purchase three trucks equipped with tilt-frame assemblies from F&D Motor Co. of Bethel for $167,895. The trucks will be used to transport 40-cubic yard containers from the various solid waste disposal sites to the county landfill.

The board, in December, decided to begin transporting the containers to the landfill with county employees and equipment, after it was estimated that $100,000 a year could be saved.

At present the county pays contractors to haul the containers to the landfill. The budget for contract hauling is $328,000.

PLOWING FIELDS — William Elks plows the field of J.C. Pollard on the Norman Winslow property off U.S. 264 outside Greenville Wednesday. According to farm agent Sam Uzzell, the wet weather has caused problems for area farmers, and corn planting has been delayed. Uzzell said some farmers had begun planting corn in the drier areas, although the weather is still a little cool. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Two Astronauts Suit Up For Planned Space Walk

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two astronauts entered Challenger's airlock and put on their $2 million suits today, eager for an early start on the first U.S. space walk in nearly a decade.

Mission specialists Story Musgrave and Donald Peterson were running about an hour ahead in preparations for the planned 4:10 p.m. EST start of their walk into the shuttle's open cargo bay and asked if they could start early.

Mission Control told Commander Paul Weitz the astronauts could advance the space stroll by exactly an hour, because at that time they would have good television and radio contact over a Florida ground station. Such coverage is required by mission rules in case something goes wrong at the outset.

"If you want to shoot for that, press on," capsule communicator Guy Gardner told the orbiting ship after Musgrave and Peterson had entered the airlock leading to the cargo bay and begun putting on their suits.

"If we get ready to breathe an hour early, we'll do so and let you know," Musgrave replied. The astronauts must breathe pure oxygen for 3½ hours to purge their systems of nitrogen that could give them the bends once in space.

All four astronauts were roused by Mission Control playing the theme song from the old TV series "F Troop." NASA gives each shuttle crew an alphabetical designation, and since this is the sixth flight, Challenger's crew is the "F crew."

Musgrave and Peterson were to slip into the 60-foot-long cargo bay clad in cumbersome million spacesuits that provide life-giving oxygen and protect them from meteorites, radiation and extremes of heat and cold.

Weitz and pilot Karol Bobko will monitor from Challenger's cabin during the 3½ hours the space strollers work outside, testing the suits and the tools and techniques for future satellite service and repair missions.

At White Sands, N.M., meanwhile, engineers firmed up plans to correct the orbit of the huge communications satellite that went astray after being ejected from the shuttle on Monday. They said they would start firing the craft's jet thrusters on Sunday to move it into its intended high orbit over a period of several days.

To prepare for their excursion, Musgrave and Peterson thoroughly checked their suits in the ship's depressurized airlock on Wednesday, doing everything short of leaving the spacecraft.

"The checkout ... was totally normal," Musgrave reported.

"We're all looking forward to tomorrow. I'm sure you are," Mission Control said. "You bet!" was the reply.

Later, as the astronauts relayed television pictures of the cargo bay to the control center, Peterson said: "You're going to see some additional stuff out there tomorrow."

The purpose of the test was to pinpoint any troubles in advance. On the fifth flight of the shuttle Columbia in November, technical pro-

Teacher Ed Programs At ECU Put On Probation

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The State Board of Education Wednesday put teacher education programs at East Carolina on a two-year probation because of problems it perceived with organization and administration of the programs.

However, state officials emphasized that the probation would have no effect on students now enrolled at the university.

The state board's Evaluation Committee report said "there did not appear to be a single unit charged with overall responsibility for coordinating all matters related to teacher education," and said no clearly organized record system was found for either the undergraduate or graduate programs. "The records are dispersed among several locations with no single site containing all."

The state board's criticisms were similar to criticisms of the teacher education programs cited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education which recently voted to deny accreditation to ECU effective Sept. 1.

The NCATE report said ECU's teacher education programs lacked a single governing unit for basic or advanced professional programs; that teacher education programs were spread among various departments of the school with no coordinating agency, and that there were excessive workloads on teachers in the field of special education.

The NCATE decision was made public last week, and ECU officials at that time said they were not overly concerned about the loss of NCATE accreditation, indicating that the accreditation should be restored next year.

Today, ECU Chancellor John Howell said state accreditation "is more crucial to us than the NCATE report," but "it also ... leaves us some leeway to function."

The chancellor said "the two teams, from NCATE and the state Department (of Education) came here at the same time. In a situation like that, there is a lot of interchange of information ... talking to the same people on the same subject," and the "preliminary reports the two teams gave us after they left were similar."

He said the fact that NCATE "does not have an intermediate classification of probation, while the state does, explains as much as anything the two different evaluations."

"It is, of course, the state department approval that we will eventually simply require in order to certify students to teach in North Carolina," Howell emphasized. "But the probation does not suspend our authority to certify. The report made that clear, too."

According to Howell, "The response we need to make to satisfy the state department is basically the same as we need to satisfy NCATE. The statement from the state

KNOX MAKES IT OFFICIAL ... Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox has announced he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the 1984 governor's race in North Carolina.

Knox Brings Candidacy Campaign To Greenville

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Eddie Knox says he believes the "mixture of farm and industry" that he sees across the state can coexist, and that this harmony is "essential for the state's continued success."

Knox, currently mayor of Charlotte, visited Greenville Wednesday after earlier officially tossing his hat in the ring for the 1984 Democratic nomination for governor.

"When I fly over your area I see a mixture of farm and industry," he told a group who greeted him at the Pitt-Greenville Airport. "I feel the two can successfully coexist and they must if ... (the state) is to continue to grow and prosper."

"This (coexistence) is essential for the state's continued success," Knox added.

Frances Knox, wife of the candidate, fainted during Knox' speech at the airport. A hospital spokesman said she was treated and released at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Martha Waters, a spokesperson for Knox's campaign, said this morning Mrs. Knox had been "very tired" Wednesday but was "fine now."

"She was released from the hospital about 5 p.m. yesterday and the doctor simply told her she needed to drink more fluids on these (all-day) trips ... the lights evidently were so hot," Ms. Waters said.

Knox continued Wednesday afternoon with scheduled stops in Wilmington and Elizabeth City and Mrs. Knox reportedly rejoined the group.

Knox listed jobs, education and crime as the three critical issues facing North Carolina.

"Developing better jobs will be the keystone of my campaign," he said. "Jobs will be our guiding star and I will keep my eye on that star."

Bringing new industry to the state, he said, is important, and will require "a much better industrial recruitment program that has expertise regionally situated to assist each area of North Carolina."

Backing up this recruitment program, said Knox, would be an extensive program "to train and educate the workers of the state to meet changing job needs."

Knox suggested that a symposium, planned and conducted by educators with input from business and industry leaders, should evaluate and re-evaluate the state's educational system.

Diminishing student population, a resulting tuition income drop and the increasing cost of providing quality education, said Knox, make this evaluation necessary.

Knox said crime control is the responsibility of "every man, woman and child in this state."

"Band-Aid approaches aren't going to heal the wounds that rampant crime inflicts on our communities ... When strong countermeasures are proposed with strong leadership, I believe the people will pull together and fight crime," Knox said.

Knox is a native of Davidson and has a degree in agriculture from North Carolina State University and a law degree from Wake Forest University.

A former state senator, Knox has practiced law in Charlotte since 1963 and is serving his second term as mayor of the city.

Dating Service Appeals To Disabled In Pennsylvania

By MARY MacVEAN
Associated Press Writer
MOUNT LEBANON, Pa. (AP) — Richard Crosby says being blind makes it hard to get dates. He can't drive. He has fewer opportunities to meet women and people often refuse to see beyond his handicap.

So Crosby, 26, joined Specialized Dating, believed to be the first dating service catering to people with physical handicaps.

"I just figured that service addressed the issue, and none of the others did," Crosby said. "I hope it will bring disabled people and able-bodied people together."

Disabled people are often reluctant to date and when they do try, the results can be disappointing, said Al Condeluci, adult program director at the United Cerebral Palsy Center in Pittsburgh.

"A gal on our staff went to one of the dating services and they turned her down," Condeluci said. "They felt she would have had a hard time getting dates because of her disability. The real message is, 'No one's going to want to date you, so we really don't want to serve you.'"

Some people have criticized Specialized Dating for contributing to society's segregation of handicapped people.

"The entire disability movement has been one of integration," Condeluci said. "This goes against that grain."

But he praised the attempt to offer the handicapped a social life, citing a 1980 study in the Pittsburgh area in which physically disabled people said their greatest need is socialization.

"It's not our thing to set people apart," said Karen Staver, who with Cynthia Van Horne established Specialized Dating. "It's our thing to get these people out of their houses and into the bars and restaurants and theaters where you really don't see anybody handicapped."

Ms. Staver, who is not disabled, and Ms. Van Horne, who has a mild case of cerebral palsy, have been friends since they went to suburban Bethel Park High School.

"You just look around you and you know problems exist," said Ms. Van Horne who gets around with two wooden canes.

"I've run across problems a couple of times," she conceded. "Even me, as well off as I am. And I figured, what about people in wheelchairs, what do they go through?"

"The opportunity to meet people is considerably curtailed when one isn't mobile," said Enny Seabrook, who specializes in sexuality and the disabled for the Family Planning Council in Pittsburgh. "The other issue is the stigma put on physically disabled people as if they were not sexual."

"You take rejection just so many times then you just don't put yourself in that position any more," Ms. Staver said.

And women, in particular, face difficulties in the emotionally trying world of dating.

"Some women, especially, who are handicapped and never learned to be real aggressive are still very backward about calling up a man," Ms. Staver said.

The big problem, she says, is mobility. Handicapped people have to check out beforehand whether a place is accessible.

While Specialized Dating has received more inquiries from women than men, its membership is 60 percent male.

Specialized Dating was started in January, and more than 200 people joined before the first membership list was distributed Feb. 28. For $30, a member receives three monthly lists of people of the opposite sex.

Ms. Van Horne and Ms. Staver prepare short profiles of each member, culled from questionnaire asking about occupations, interests, expectations of a date. The profile also includes a physical description and the handicap. Members must be at least 21 years of age.

People without physical disabilities are welcome to join, but the women decided they were not prepared to take responsibility for people with mental disabilities.

Neither woman has run a business before. Ms. Staver works for a trucking company. Ms. Van Horne is a receptionist at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in Pittsburgh, and hopes to make Specialized Dating a full-time venture.

"There's nothing more ideal for a person with a handicap than establishing your own business," Ms. Staver said. "You don't have to worry about being discriminated against."

"And I could hire disabled people to work for me," Ms. Van Horne added.

They acknowledge the venture is financially risky, but Ms. Van Horne said, "We figured that there was probably a need for this and decided to try it. It turns out there is a need."

Specialized Dating has received some cash donations and several mothers of handicapped people have volunteered to help with paperwork, the women said. In addition, a psychologist has offered free advice if the women are uncertain whether a prospective member has a mental handicap.

STRAWBERRY ROYAL
Try to have a helper when you make this scrumptious dessert.
10-ounce package frozen sliced strawberries with sugar, thawed
1 quart vanilla ice cream, slightly softened
6 fresh strawberries, hulls on
In an electric blender or food processor puree strawberries — there should be about 1 cup. In a large bowl, with a metal spoon, break up ice cream; gradually but quickly work in strawberry puree to achieve a ripple effect. Working fast, pack into parfait glasses; cover and freeze until serving time. Just before serving, let soften slightly in refrigerator and garnish each with a fresh strawberry. Makes 6 servings.

SPICE SQUARE
A cross between a teabread and a cake.
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 cup (16) pitted dates, cut fine
1/2 cup walnuts, chopped fine
3 large eggs
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 cup sour cream
Stir together flour, soda, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg; toss dates with mixture to separate them; add walnuts. Beat eggs slightly; gradually beat in sugar until thickened and pale lemon color; add sour cream and beat to blend. Gradually and gently beat in flour mixture until batter is smooth. Turn into a greased 9 by 9 by 1 3/4-inch cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 35 to 40 minutes. (Center may sink slightly but this does not affect texture.) Loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack; turn right side up; cool completely.

Dear Abby

Explain Hubby's Eccentricities To Children

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Sam and I have been married for seven months. This is the second marriage for both of us. He's a fine man and I'm lucky to have him, but here's the problem:

We both have grown children from our previous marriages. Mine are 28 and 31. Before we were married, Sam and I agreed that one week would be the limit for houseguests because Sam likes his privacy. He says anyone who wants to stay longer will have to go to a motel.

My children will be coming (separately) from a long distance and they would each like to stay for two weeks. I feel terrible putting a one-week time limit on my own children, and they can't afford a motel. Now what?

PALM BEACH NEWLYWED

DEAR NEWLYWED: Sam doesn't sound too flexible to me, so just explain his eccentricities to your children and treat them to an extra week at a motel.

DEAR ABBY: Is there an acceptable compromise when one partner wants another child and the other doesn't?

My friend is the mother of a 3-year-old child and she would love to have another baby, but her husband says one is enough! Mary is the stay-at-home type. She loves children, is an excellent mother and she herself came from a large family and feels very unfulfilled with only one child. She'd settle for two, but her husband won't budge.

I've never seen this problem in your column. How can this be settled to the satisfaction of both Mary and her husband?

MARY'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: It can't.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 30-year-old divorcee living with my boyfriend. We love each other, but neither one of us is ready for marriage yet. My parents liked "Alan" very much until we started living together. Now he is no longer welcome in their home.

When my parents invite me to family gatherings and holiday celebrations, I'm told to leave Alan home. Abby, we aren't asking to sleep together there. (We live in the same city.)

While my sisters bring their husbands, and the other relatives bring their mates, I'm not allowed to bring the man I love and share my life with. It makes no sense, Abby. Everyone in the family knows that Alan and I live together!

Alan's parents have welcomed me into their home with open arms, which hurts all the more to see Alan treated like an outcast.

Last Christmas I chose not to see my family at all rather than go without Alan. Why do my parents, who claim to "love" me, hurt me this way?

I am torn. Should I stay away until the man I love is welcome? Or go alone with a heavy heart?

HURTING

DEAR HURTING: Your experience is another example of the widespread "culture gap" that separates generations today. Your parents view your lifestyle as a violation of tradition, morality and the laws they live by. You view it as the right of a grown woman to make her own decisions.

Tell your parents that to stay away from family celebrations or to go without Alan breaks your heart. Be patient. They may decide (as have many parents in the same boat) that their adult children are free to live their own lives.

If they remain inflexible, then do whatever affords you the most pleasure — and the least pain.

The Cost Of Victory

We're happy for Jim Valvano, his team, Wolfpack fans, the Atlantic Coast Conference and all North Carolina over the Triumph in Albuquerque.

Still, there is a question to be posed:

Can N.C. State University, its students and the city of Raleigh afford another national championship this decade?

On their way to the NCAA playoffs the Pack waded through the ACC tournament. It was an occasion for parties and rejoicing in the streets.

There followed victories over Pepperdine, Utah and Virginia (again), then Georgia and Houston. (More occasions for riotous exuberance among the homefolks.)

Victory after victory brought celebration after celebration with bonfires, toilet paper, cheers and vast quantities of refreshments.

Not even the most affluent communities can afford many repetitions of burning old doors, chairs, tables, stools, books and other such inflammable goods.

There was the civic expense of overtime (and hazardous duty?) for police, firemen and street-cleaners night after night into the wee hours. For sure, the budget offices were wringing collective hands.

Nor does celebrating come cheap for Joe College, whose finances are proverbially verging on fiscal chaos. One big party a month is par, but these came in bunches like bananas.

Let us have no misunderstanding. Raleigh and its campus are not today blighted areas, but it would be well to avoid more national championships for a few years of respite. Too many can result in emotional and financial strain beyond endurance.

This time, the heroics made it all seem a perfectly reasonable cause for unbridled celebration; but we must keep an eye on the future, too.

Hesitance Doesn't Pay

It would appear that the entire Soviet community in Paris has departed with the expulsion of 47 Russian diplomats, journalists and other workers by the French government.

There are still Soviets left in Paris, of course. The ambassador, for instance, was not caught up in the mass expulsion for spying.

The expulsions were ordered because those involved were determined to be "agents of the secret services of the Soviet Union." There might be more agents among those who remain; they just were not caught.

The French government certainly would have preferred that the entire matter had not happened. The fact that Paris had to act is proof again that Soviet spying is widespread. It is frequently done by those who pose as diplomats, attaches and even journalists. France has acted forcefully to solve the problem and no other nation should hesitate to act similarly.

WASHINGTON — When the Senate returns from its Easter recess, an early order of business will be a vote on the confirmation of Kenneth Adelman as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Of course the nomination should be confirmed. It will be a shameful day for the Senate, and a sad day for the political process, if the nomination should be rejected.

Two reasons support this view. The first is that Adelman is abundantly qualified for this position. The second is that Ronald Reagan won the presidency in 1980.

On the first point: President Reagan announced the resignation of Eugene Rostow as director of the arms control agency on Jan. 12, and simultaneously announced the nomination of Adelman to succeed him. Immediately a cry was heard that Adelman was "too young." He was "inexperienced." He had no background in "negotiations."

Adelman was born in Chicago on June 9, 1946. It would be difficult to find many men of his age with a better background in education and experience than Adelman can bring to this post. He received his master's degree from Georgetown University in 1969, and then spent two years in Kinshasa, Zaire, doing research for the doctorate in political theory he was awarded in 1975. In 1976 and 1977 he served as assistant to the secretary of defense. From 1981 to 1983 he served with the rank of ambassador as deputy permanent representative to the United Nations. In this capacity he was constantly engaged in issues directly relating to arms control. He led the U.S. delegation to the United Nations Second Special Session on Disarmament.

For the past 10 years, Adelman has written prolifically on foreign affairs. I have read enough of his writing to form a judgment that a keen and wide-ranging mind is here at work. To the charge that he has never engaged in direct "negotiations" on arms control, it may suffice to remark that the director's job is not personally to engage in negotiations. His job is to run a think tank. So much for the first point.

Over the long haul it is the second point that carries the greater meaning. If our political process is to function properly, responsibility and authority have to go hand in hand. Ronald Reagan won the responsibility in 1980. His general views on the Soviet Union were clearly understood. He deserves the opportunity to implement those views by delegating authority to key people of his own choosing.

To be sure, under the Constitution the Senate must "advise and consent" to certain presidential actions. When it comes to the confirmation of federal judges and the approval of treaties, that power ought to be exercised at a high level of statesmanship. Judges serve for life and treaties become part of the supreme law of the land.

It is a different matter with executive nominations. In this area, absent the most compelling objections, a president is entitled to confirmation of the nominees of his choice. The system hardly could work otherwise. In the Adelman matter, the situation is especially distressing, because we find such Republican senators as Pressler of South Dakota and Mathias of Maryland opposing the nominee chosen by their own president. What kind of team play is this?

The most shameful role in this affair has fallen to Sen. Alan Cranston of California. Before the Adelman hearings had begun, Cranston made it clear that he would never vote to confirm. The senator's general views on disarmament and arms control are quite different from the views held by the president and by his nominee. Well and good. If at some time in the future, the administration's views should be reflected in a disarmament treaty presented for the Senate's concurrence, that occasion will provide a forum for the Cranston position. If the senator from California should be elected president in 1984, he would be entitled to name his own key people. Meanwhile, his petty and disgraceful obstructionism arouses not admiration, but simply scorn.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Alton Warren, former chief building inspector, filed suit last week against former City Manager Ed Wyatt, Ron Sewell, and "three John Does."

This is an unfortunate and quite possibly unnecessary occurrence for the city of Greenville. What was, two years ago, a matter of internal concern is apt to be displayed before the entire state.

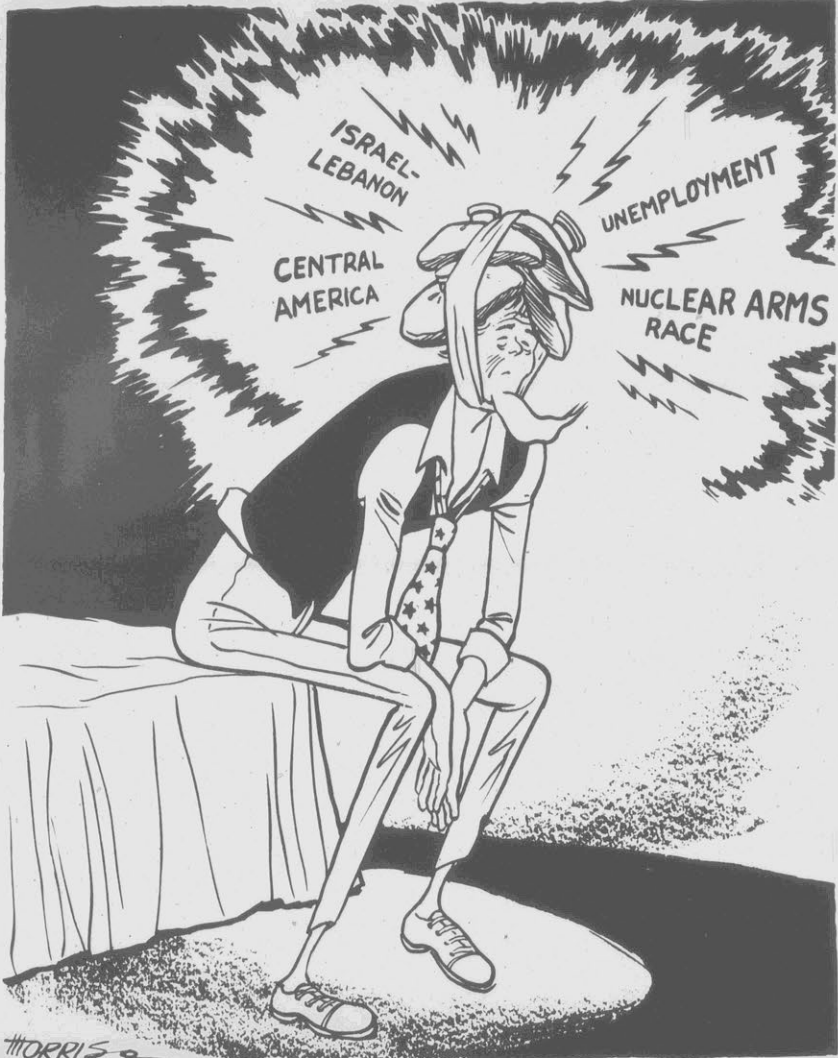

The dispute between Greenville and Mr. Warren might have been defused, had the former City Council used the power given it by state law to intervene and investigate all matters pertaining to the city.

The state law can be found at City Hall or the public library in "The Charter and Code of Ordinance, City of Greenville," under state laws governing the organization and procedures of the governing body. Section 160A-80 Power of Investigation; Subpoena power. Subsection (a) reads, "The Council shall have power to investigate the affairs of the City and, for that purpose, may subpoena witnesses, administer oaths, and compel the production of evidence." Subsections (b) and (c) are concerned with the enforcement and limitations respectively of subsection (a) the population limitation (c) does not apply to Greenville.

With no malice toward any former or present council members, I strongly urge present and future councilpersons to exercise this power in potentially volatile internal matters such as this one. This type of action could save the city much time, money and embarrassment in the future.

Early, Uniform Police Training Needed

RALEIGH — The quality of police training varies greatly from one town to the next in North Carolina. In some large cities, policemen get an intensive education before they go on duty. In other places, policemen are put on the street with a loaded gun and no training at all.

In between these two extremes, says John Elmore, special assistant to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, are a lot of policemen who are getting their training by well-meaning but unqualified instructors. Policemen assigned advanced duties, such as detective work, are often deprived of any of the special in-service training that could help them perform their jobs.

Later this month, Edmisten will ask the General Assembly to restructure police training in North Carolina. In a bill to be introduced by Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, Edmisten will propose a $3 million fund for the training of police officers. The money would come from a $4 increase in the court costs charged in criminal cases.

North Carolina law currently requires police to undergo a 240-hour basic training program within the first 12 months of their employment. This training is usually received at one of 44 community colleges now offering police coursework. The teacher is usually a full-time police officer who is working as an instructor part-time for the college.

Under Edmisten's proposal, the state would be divided into 12 regions. Four or five full-time instructors would be hired in each of those regions to conduct police training. The curriculum would be developed at the N.C. Justice Academy in Salemberg. But the courses would be taught at, and administered by, the local community colleges.

The instructors would be based at one of the colleges but, at the direction of an advisory council of sheriffs and police chiefs in the region, they would give courses in all the region's colleges.

The primary coursework would be the basic training, Elmore said. But advanced courses in areas such as investigations and management would also be available this way. This training is available now only at Salemberg, or out of state.

In an interview after he outlined the proposal to a legislative Appropriations committee, Elmore explained how the bill would improve police training in the state.

Currently, community colleges find part-time instructors from local law enforcement. These people don't have the time, he says, to keep up-to-date with rapidly changing laws and court decisions. In two years, Elmore estimates, as much as 50 percent of the standard search and seizure procedures can be affected by statute and court changes. It isn't fair to expect a full-time beat cop to keep in touch with all these changes. But, he reasons, a full-time instructor could.

Also, these people may be fine law enforcement officers but they may have no training in the art of teaching. If the state had this corps of full-time instructors, they could be schooled in teaching methods.

The proposal would take police training out of the traditional funding procedure for community college courses and, Elmore thinks, reduce the delay in organizing classes. As police courses are now funded, the colleges must wait until they have a good-sized class to make the course economically feasible. If the special instructors are hired, smaller classes could be formed when a need arises.

The bill wouldn't change the basic training requirement — a rookie would still have 12 months to finish. But Elmore hopes that by making basic more accessible, more rookies will get that training before they hit the streets.

Strength For Today

Years ago as one of the transcontinental trains roared across the prairie, a little boy used to run out each day and wave to the engineer.

This went on for several years and then the boy died. For the rest of his life the engineer made it a point on the little boy's birthday to stop the train and lay a wreath on the grave, which was near the tracks.

A mere sentimentality? Yes, but things like this count in life.

Watch out for people who have no sentiment whatsoever. They can be dangerous to themselves and to others. One might just as well fall into the habit of laughing at love as to laugh at all forms of sentiment. Some is over-dramatized and false; but there is such a thing as graciousness, thoughtfulness, kindness and a willingness to put one's self aside.

All of this pleases any of us whose heart and mind respond to genuine and sincere contacts.

WASHINGTON — For spring break this year, two Ivy Leaguers passed up the delights of Hilton Head, Ft. Lauderdale and Aspen for a trip to no man's land.

Gregory D'Elia, a Yale junior, and Charles Bork, who graduated from Yale in 1981, entered Afghanistan dressed as refugees one month ago to prove that the American press ignores the resistance by anti-Soviet Afghan guerrillas. Yet, while the trip was illuminating, Bork and D'Elia may have only dramatized how the continuing conflict in South Asia frustrates even the most aggressive of news hounds.

On Feb. 26, Bork and D'Elia set off for Rawalpindi. The two staff members of the right-wing-minded Yale Free Press had solicited $9,000 from various conservative thinktanks (Accuracy in Media, Inc. and Fund for Objective News Reporting, among others) early this year to underwrite plane tickets, camera equipment and incidental expenses.

They eventually rendezvoused with representatives of the Afghan resistance — or Mujahideen — in Peshawar, a Pakistani city about 40 miles from the Khyber Pass. For the ever-necessary disguise, they purchased turbans, capes and other local garb (one Mujahideen member blackened Bork's blond beard with dye and a toothbrush). It was then by bus to a border refugee camp where, late one afternoon, they crossed into Afghanistan with the help of a guide.

Bork, 24, and D'Elia, 20, stayed in Afghanistan's Pektia province for five days, visiting a school for refugee children, surveying bombed-out villages and farms and meeting other resistance soldiers. They also took more than 1,000 photographs (Bork, who is a military photography buff, hauled an antique plate camera and tripod along).

After two weeks in the region, Bork and D'Elia concluded that American news organizations were inadequately reporting the Afghan story and need to station full-time correspondents in Peshawar.

Yet, Henry S. Bradsher, who has covered Afghanistan over the last 25 years for the Associated Press, the nowdefunct Washington Star and the London-based Economist, dismisses the news bureau as an inadequate solution.

For one, he says, since the Soviet-backed regime of Habrak Karmal routinely denies Western journalists visas or freedom of movement, firsthand reporting is irregular if not non-existent. Most American editors must rely on the secondhand reports from "diplomatic sources" in Islamabad or New Delhi, or Mujahideen representatives in Peshawar — an unreliable system at best.

Secondly, the Afghan conflict's hit-and-run nature prevents reporters from gathering much news.

Though neither Bork nor D'Elia thought that their trip would singlehandedly improve U.S. coverage, each believes that more regular reportage, particularly by television crews, could mobilize public opinion against Soviet adventurism.

For the plucky pair at Yale, however, the lesson of their unorthodox spring break may be that the news media are doing the best job under the circumstances. While editors choose to ignore most Afghan-related dispatches, no conspiracy exists to spike the story, as some of Bork's and D'Elia's benefactors might believe.

Forged Memo Presents Confusion

WASHINGTON — Sudden publication in Warsaw's major Communist Party newspaper of a forged March 13, 1978, memorandum from Zbigniew Brzezinski to President Carter, detailing a plan to destabilize Poland, looks like the start of a desperate Soviet defense in the case of the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II.

The forged "top secret" communication to Carter from his national security adviser was a detailed plan on how the then-rising discontent against Poland's communist regime could be joined to Poland's powerful Catholic Church to create revolutionary turmoil. The U.S. objective, the forged Brzezinski memorandum told Carter, was to pull Poland out of the Soviet orbit.

Soviet specialists here regard the sudden publication of the spurious memorandum five years after it was purportedly written by Brzezinski as having two purposes: deflecting attention from the U.S. media campaign charging Soviet complicity in the pope's attempted murder in 1981; and providing new "evidence" against Solidarity leaders soon to be put on trial in Warsaw for crimes against the Polish state.

Soviet disinformation gambits are scarcely unusual.

Top State Department officials have not yet decided whether to publicly denounce the forgery.

The sequence of events leading up to the forgery — a sophisticated job obviously done by the KGB in the last few months and then back-dated five years — strongly argues for the Reagan administration to expose and denounce it. Shortly after the October 1978 election of Pope John Paul II, U.S. intelligence agents uncovered an undoubtedly authentic but wholly erroneous KGB analysis portraying in elaborate detail how the U.S. had plotted to elevate the Polish cardinal to pope.

Now that the Polish Communist Party's principal newspaper has published the forged Brzezinski memorandum to Carter, most officials believe an American response is needed. If not, the implication that the U.S. government embarked on a deliberate course of intervention into the most intimate affairs of the papacy offers Andropov a counterattack to charges of Soviet complicity in the attempt to murder the pope. Indeed, Andropov's attack on Ronald Reagan last weekend as a "liar" may have been intended to set the stage for just such a counterattack.

Retired Coach 'Bo' Farley Is 75 And Active

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Roland Boley Farley is known to most people in Greenville as "Bo." The small, white-haired man is in excellent physical shape at the age of 75. He is tanned from being outdoors year-round.

Several years ago, Farley began to go blind, but that has not slowed him down. The only sport he can play now is golf, even though he said he occasionally mistakes a toadstool for his golfball.

Farley was inducted into the Duke University Sports Hall of Fame in 1980 for his achievements in football, baseball and basketball while he was a student there. Now his name is engraved in Cameron Indoor Stadium along with those of such prominent sports figures as football Coach Wallace Wade and football star Sonny Jurgensen.

Farley and his wife of 55 years live in a small frame house on a quiet street in Greenville where they have resided since arriving here in 1935. For almost 40 years, Farley was a high school football, baseball and basketball coach in Greenville.

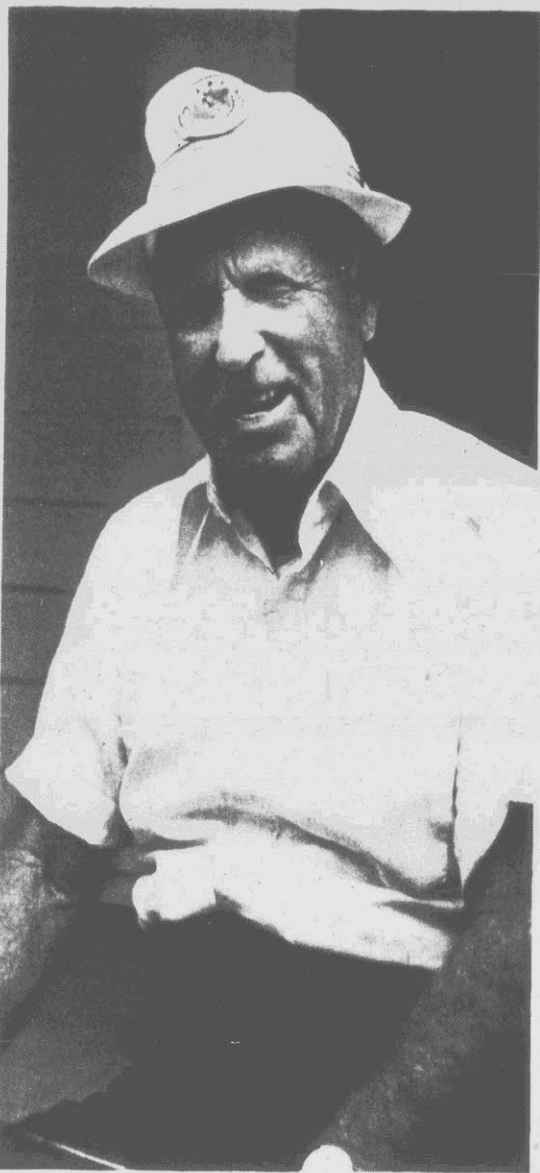

The men interviewed who have been associated with Farley speak with fondness about "Bo."

William L. Johnson, a used car dealer in Greenville, played football, baseball and basketball under Farley at Greenville High School from 1953-56.

He recalled, "We used to line up and run windprints during football practice. Coach Farley would run with us. Although he was in his 50s, he could outrun the fastest man on the team."

"He was a strong man then," Johnson said, "and I wouldn't want to arm wrestle him now."

Johnson said that when Farley was coaching him in

ROLAND BOLEY FARLEY

"Elsie Neal and I were married in 1928 on the way from her home in Laurinburg to my home in Danville, Va. We stopped in Pittsboro, N.C., and we got married without telling my folks or her people. My father got it out of me that we had gotten married and he made us go back and tell her parents."

After finishing college, Farley played two years of professional baseball with the St. Louis Cardinals organization. He retired after he broke his arm on the playing field.

"I had come to the conclusion that I could never play my favorite sport again," he said. "I also found out that it (professional baseball) was a hard way to make a living; I didn't like being away from home all the time, traveling and what not."

Instead of playing, Farley turned to coaching. His first job was at his old high school in Danville where he had been a three-sport standout. Three years later, Farley was coaching in Greenville.

He did not mind turning down two college coaching jobs because his family did not want to leave eastern North Carolina.

"I wasn't making enough money to let me buy a cigar and a milkshake a day, hardly," he said. "The jobs I turned down were probably better jobs, but I didn't mind staying in Greenville for my family."

Farley and his wife, Elsie Neal, have two sons, Edward, retired from the Navy, and John, a certified public accountant, both of Greenville.

Besides a short coaching stint at East Carolina University, Farley has spent most of his time in Greenville as a high school coach, both at the old Greenville High School and at J.H. Rose High School.

Dr. Richard Evans, a Greenville dentist, was a member of Farley's basketball teams in the mid-1950s. He remembered how important bird hunting was to his coach.

"We used to practice at 6 a.m. during Christmas vacation. Coach Farley would come into the gym dressed in his hunting boots and coat. He would leave his bird dog and gun in the car so he would be ready to go hunting at eight when we got through with practice," Evans said.

Coach Odell Welborn was one of Farley's hunting partners.

Welborn said, "If the weather was too bad to play golf, it was just right for us to go hunting."

Because of his close contact with Farley both on and off the football field, Welborn said that he had a growing respect for Farley as a coach and a person.

"The welfare and character of the boys always came first with Bo," he said. "The longer the boys knew him, the more respect they had for him and his philosophy."

Johnson agreed, "I've never heard the first critical word about Bo from anyone he ever coached."

Farley, who retired from coaching in 1971, said his greatest pleasure was not the awards he received as a player, but rather the opportunity to help other athletes.

"I am really proud of being able to coach and teach a lot of people," he said. "Other than that, I don't know of any great accomplishments I've made. You look back and you hope that over the years you have done something to help some people."

Those who have played for Farley and those who have been his friend agreed that the coach has reached his goal.

Ask SBI Look Into Explosion

SCHLEY, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation has been asked to investigate a fire and explosion that destroyed Payne's Chapel in northern Orange County. Sheriff Lindy Pendergrass has asked the SBI to look into an explosion that blew out the walls and roof of the 23-year-old sanctuary on N.C. 57 shortly after 4 a.m. Wednesday.

No injuries were reported. Moments after the explosion fire gutted an adjacent fellowship hall that was built in 1974 on the site eight miles north of Hillsborough, witnesses said. Both were one-story structures.

Caldwell Fire Chief Larry Johnson said propane gas used as heating fuel may have sparked the fire and explosion. "This was a well-constructed building, and it went down like it was made of Tinkertoys," Johnson said. Several metal folding chairs and pieces of stained glass were blown across N.C. 57 into a cemetery 200 yards from the church, Johnson estimated. Several pews, a piano and an organ were destroyed. Church officials said the sanctuary was built in 1960 after fire had destroyed two church buildings on the site the previous year. The fire could be seen as far away as three miles and the blast could be heard up to six miles away, Johnson said. Robert Cearnal, a trustee of Payne's Chapel, said a new propane gas furnace was installed last August in the brick-and-cinderblock sanctuary which is 28 feet wide and 70 feet long. William Stuart, pastor of the church, said Wednesday that the 85 members will rebuild and are already looking for a place in Hillsborough to hold their semi-monthly services on Sunday. He said the board of trustees plans to meet Saturday to determine whether to go into debt or use what the insurance money that's available to rebuild.

Waste Disposal Bills Are Discussed By Legislators

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Companies that produce hazardous wastes would pick up the tab for spills or other accidents until the wastes arrive at landfills under a bill introduced in the state House.

Rep. Billy Clark, D-Cumberland, filed the bill Wednesday. Meanwhile, a legislative committee endorsed the idea of a regional plan for disposing of low-level radioactive waste, while another panel established a subcommittee to study a Mecklenburg County proposal to incinerate wastes instead of storing them in landfills.

Clark's bill would make those who create, transport, treat, store or dispose of hazardous wastes responsible for problems associated with the wastes from the time they're generated until they reach the landfill.

Liability would not be imposed if the generator could prove the person claiming to have been damaged knew of the danger but didn't do enough to avoid it.

"This will force the generators to be responsible," said Clark. "They won't be able to hire John Doe who offers to transport the wastes for 15 percent less than anyone else but gives no guarantees that he'll be safe."

In a statement, Gov. Jim Hunt said Clark's bill would "help protect the health and safety of the people of North Carolina."

"It would give handlers of hazardous wastes a powerful incentive to use the safest possible procedures," Hunt said. "If they don't, they would pay the price."

Clark said in an interview his bill and another he introduced earlier in the session to govern hazardous waste landfills in the state were aimed at preparing North Carolina for a time when it might no longer be able to ship its wastes to South Carolina and Alabama.

Presently, there are no hazardous waste landfills in North Carolina except the PCB landfill in Warren County.

Rep. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, said he will introduce Thursday a bill to give Warren County $1 million as compensation for bearing the burden of the toxic wastes for the entire state.

The Senate Human Resources Committee approved a bill that would enter North Carolina into a compact with as many seven other Southeastern states to cooperatively dispose of low-level radioactive wastes.

Under the compact, each participating state would pay $25,000 to join the group. A board would decide where to set up waste handling facilities, which would be run at no additional expense to the states, said Robert Jansen of the Governor's Office.

States that have either passed the bill or are considering it are Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama.

Meanwhile, Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, requested a public hearing on a bill he introduced to prohibit disposal of certain kinds of hazardous wastes in landfills and a similar bill introduced by Clark.

Mavretic's bill would prohibit landfill disposal of some wastes but would allow generators to seek a waiver of those rules after a review by the state and a public hearing.

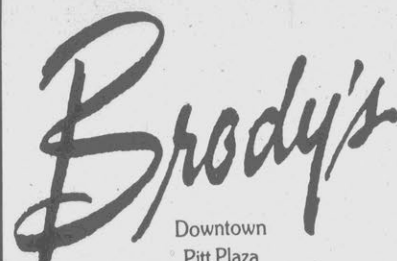

Clark's bill would ban landfill disposal of some wastes and permit landfilling others in their least concentrated forms.

In a related development, the House Water and Air Resources Committee sent to a subcommittee Wednesday a series of bills that would enable Mecklenburg County to incinerate its solid wastes through a process that would generate steam and electricity.

Gerald Fox, Mecklenburg County manager, told the committee the county could make up to $1.8 million a year by selling the energy that burning garbage would produce.

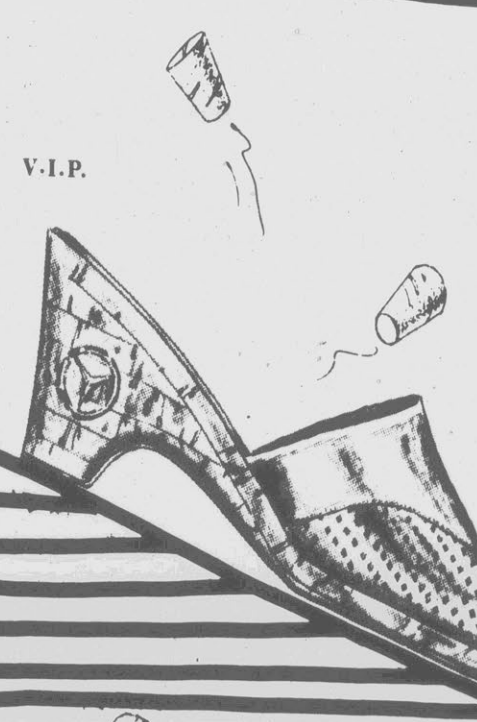

Several legislators expressed concern about one of the bills, which would allow the Department of Human Resources to designate areas that would ship their wastes to the incinerator. But Fox said he didn't expect the state to include any counties against their wills.

Schooner Is Unearthed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A ship wreckage uncovered by a December storm on a local beach has been identified as the Neptune, a schooner driven to her doom by another storm almost 83 years ago.

James Delgado, historian for the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, said Wednesday that researchers had used historic photographs of the ship, compared the old fittings with those of similar craft and analyzed the exposed timbers to identify the Neptune.

A 48-foot section of hull and several other pieces of the ship were exposed at Fort Funston beach after a storm last December. Storms since then have largely recovered the debris.

The Neptune, filled with ballast, was headed out of San Francisco to pick up a cargo of shingles and pilings on the north coast when she was blown aground on Aug. 10, 1900.

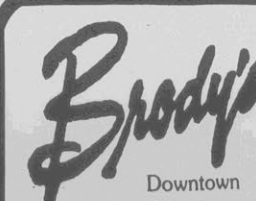

Said a newspaper of the time: "It is the opinion of nautical men that she will remain where she is until a storm breaks her up and scatters her bones along the beach."

Mondale Plans N.C. Campaign

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale will visit North Carolina next week as he campaigns for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984.

Mondale is scheduled to address the 1983 convention of the N.C. Association of Educators at 1:15 p.m. April 15 at the Raleigh Civic Center.

"It will be really brief," Loretta M. Martin, NCAE president, said of the visit. She said Mondale was fitting the stop between campaign swings through Virginia and Florida.

Deep South Deluge Paralyzes City Of New Orleans

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

A Deep South deluge of up to 14 inches of rain forced a mass exodus today with at least 25,000 people, many in boats or on foot, fleeing rivers flooding at record levels in southern Louisiana and Mississippi.

New Orleans, a city of 1 million people, was paralyzed with floodwaters lapping at the windows of automobiles and practically no traffic moving anywhere. Some people made it to work downtown by driving down the trolley tracks. The rain was still coming down in sheets this morning.

Five people were believed drowned, including two children who were swept away, in the flooding that spread this morning to Mobile and other cities in southern Alabama where Bay Minette was drenched with almost 10 inches of rain in just four hours after midnight.

Several motorists had to swim to safety when their cars were swamped in Mobile.

Thirteen people have died in the stormy weather that began Sunday in California, turning spring back into winter in several Western states.

Streets in New Orleans, where 7 inches of rain fell this morning, and in Baton Rouge, La., were awash in water at rush hour today. Bus and streetcar service was halted in New Orleans and at least 60 streets and highways in the Baton Rouge area were blocked by flooding.

In Tangipahoa Parish of southeast Louisiana, 45 roads were closed and 25 bridges had been swept away.

A freak storm deposited 10 inches of snow in Texas and tornadoes whistled through Rankin County and the Eatonville area of Mississippi, causing one injury. Meanwhile, the Gulf states were hammered intermittently by hailstorms.

The National Weather Service in Kansas City put the number of evacuees in the lower Mississippi Valley at 25,000 and the Louisiana governor's office said 20,000 fled their homes in that state alone.

"Nobody has an accurate count," said Sally Nungesser, a spokeswoman for Louisiana Gov. Dave Treen. "They're evacuating people as fast as they're calling in."

Treen ordered the National Guard to help with evacuations and planned a helicopter tour today to view the damage. Forecasters said more rain was on the way and warned the flooding could be the worst in the state's history — with the Amite, Comite, Tickfaw, Tangipahoa rivers all overflowing. Flooding also was reported in New Orleans and more than 60 streets were closed in the Baton Rouge area.

Rivers, streams, bayous and irrigation ditches overflowed across Mississippi and eastern Louisiana, particularly north of Lake Pontchartrain, forcing residents to flee to evacuation centers or to the homes of relatives. Areas normally safe from high water were threatened, officials said.

"Folsom is a little town, doesn't even have a river around it, and it flooded. That's how far the river's out of the banks," said St. Tammany Parish sheriff's Capt. Bill Dobson.

At Jackson, Miss., the Pearl River was projected to crest 10 feet above flood stage by Saturday, and officials readied a plan to build a levee across Interstate 55.

In Hattiesburg, Miss., a 7-year-old girl walking home from school Wednesday was swept away in a fast-moving creek and presumed drowned, police said. An 8-year-boy drowned near Powells Crossroads, Tenn., when he tried to cross the rain-swollen Sequatchie River on horseback, authorities said.

Rivers also crested above flood stage to the north. About 300 people fled homes along the Illinois River, mostly in Peoria, Ill., where the river was 6 feet above flood stage, and farther south in Grafton, where the river was 9 feet above flood stage and the main street through the town of 1,000 was under 18 inches of water.

Volunteers hefted sandbags in Portage Des Sioux, Mo., to hold back the Mississippi, expected to crest 6 feet above flood stage Friday in St. Louis.

Rainfall approached record levels across Mississippi and Louisiana. In Hattiesburg, 14.1 inches fell in seven hours Wednesday. An area northeast of Baton Rouge was hit with 10 inches.

A flash flood rolled through the southern Mississippi town of Columbia, leaving 30 downtown businesses and many homes awash in about 3 feet of water.

"It's a mess — one complete, royal mess," said Rex Thompson, a civil defense spokesman in Columbia, noting that about a foot of rain fell since Tuesday night. "I had to wade back to the office."

Amtrak said a mudslide in Mississippi covered railroad tracks and delayed the Southern Crescent's arrival in New Orleans by 10 hours. The 145 passengers were served free steak dinners, railroad officials said.

Tracks linking Memphis,

Tenn., to New Orleans and Jackson, Miss., also were washed out, and passengers were being bused, Amtrak said.

Louisiana authorities reported three men drowned Wednesday in two separate incidents, when their vehicles were caught in floodwaters.

Eight people were killed earlier in the week by the storm that hit the West Coast on Sunday and raged through Utah, Colorado and Wyoming with 100 mph winds, leaving up to 5 feet of snow before stalling over the nation's midsection. Fatalities included two deaths in Tennessee, four in California and one each in Colorado and Texas.

A freak storm dumped 10.5 inches of snow Wednesday in El Paso, Texas. The wintry weather tied up traffic, forced drivers to abandon cars, slowed bus service and kept students and workers home.

In New Mexico, 21 inches of snow had fallen at Cloudcroft by morning, with 19 inches at Ruidoso.

On Trial In Chemical Fire

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Baxter-Harriss Co. and its president, Herbert Harriss, will go on trial next week in Mecklenburg County District Court on charges stemming from a chemical fire last fall.

The charges center on the storage of hazardous materials without a permit in a downtown Charlotte warehouse.

The misdemeanors, violations of the city code, carry a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail and a $50 fine.

The Sept. 13 fire spewed clouds of poisonous smoke into the air and forced the evacuation of more than 1,300 people from their homes in downtown northeast Charlotte.

Boo Boo The Bear Back On Plantation

JACKSONBORO, S.C. (AP) — Boo Boo the bear is back home on the plantation after six months on the loose, and her friend Yogi seems pleased by the development, the plantation manager says.

Both bears are part of the menagerie of cable television mogul Ted Turner, and live at Turner's Colleton County plantation.

Boo Boo had foiled earlier capture attempts since escaping in October and hadn't been spotted since November. But she turned up near the Edisto River Wednesday and was reunited with Yogi, her mate.

Boo Boo "looks good, a little tired and thin, but doing fine," reported Hope Plantation manager Johnnie Godley. Boo Boo weighed about 200 last fall but now is down to a svelte 110.

Godley called off the search for Boo Boo in February, believing that the bruin had been killed by a hunter.

But Boo Boo was spotted by Dowling Garvin in the southern section of neighboring Charleston County around 5 p.m. Wednesday. Garvin gave Boo Boo something to eat, then got word to Godley.

Godley and some volunteers arrived shortly, shot the wayward bear with a tranquilizer dart and waited for her to fall asleep. Then they tied her up, put her in a pickup truck and took her home.

"Everything went real smooth this time," Godley said. "Nobody panicked, we didn't have to chase her or nothing."

In earlier attempts to capture Boo Boo, the bear was treed once, tranquilized twice, lured into a horse trailer equipped with a trap door three times, but never caught. Boo Boo even bounded into a deer hunter's empty truck, dumped a beer cooler and enjoyed a milkshake before heading back for the woods.

Chicago Students Advised Shun Mayoral Tension

By JOHN WOLFE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The emotionally charged mayoral race between black Democrat Harold Washington and white Republican Bernard Epton could fan racial tensions in the public schools, the city school superintendent says.

In an address today on Chicago's educational television station, Schools Superintendent Ruth Love planned to urge students to avoid any racial outbursts.

"What we're trying to do is prevent and become sensitive to what could become an issue," Ms. Love said Wednesday. "It's normal that whatever occurs in the community spills over into the schools. It's very important that the schools not become explosive."

Her remarks came three days after her order to beef up school hall patrols to guard against racial outbursts.

At a news conference Wednesday, Washington denied he has contributed to the problem.

"I've been alive 60 years," he said. "In that time, I haven't added an ounce, not one ounce, to racial tensions."

Meanwhile, a new poll released today showed most voters felt Washington could run the city better than Epton, and a city official charged that Washington, a congressman, still has unpaid bills from his South Side legislative office.

City Water Commissioner John B.W. Corey said Washington owes $465.85 in overdue bills for water used at the legislative office. He cited records showing nine notices seeking payment have been sent to Washington since Oct. 26,

Corey said the last payment for water used at the address, Washington's former state Senate office, was in October 1980.

A spokesman for Washington said the campaign staff was checking through old files, trying to determine if the water bills were legitimate.

Washington spokesman Dave Potter said he believed the bills were "campaign debts" and said, "If, in fact, we owe the bills, we will certainly pay them."

It was the latest of several allegations that Washington has failed to pay bills. Washington also has been accused of not paying gas bills and being in arrears on property taxes for a building he once owned.

Washington said he would, if necessary, pay $2,200 in delinquent property taxes on a building he and two others owned in the 1970s — despite his claim that a buyer had assumed the obligation. State law bars anyone in default of city debt from taking office, and tax obligations cannot be transferred.

Washington described the property tax revelation as "a tempest in a teapot" and a "cheap shot."

He said title to the building was transferred in 1978 for no money and the owner agreed to pay back taxes. But Washington said he would pay if necessary. "If that's the law, we'll have to comply."

In the latest Chicago Sun-Times-WMAQ-TV poll, 42 percent of 1,007 voters polled thought Washington would do a better job of keeping the city financially sound, while 38 percent felt Epton would do better. However, 20 percent were either undecided, thought both would do equally well or that neither would.

But when the answers were broken down racially, 69 percent of black voters polled by the Gallup Organization were in the Washington column, 6 percent saw Epton as best and 25 percent weren't sure.

Among white voters, 61 percent felt Epton could do best at keeping the city's finances sound, 15 were with Washington, and 24 percent were undecided.

Meanwhile, Epton dropped a slogan critics claimed was an appeal to racial fears, but he was still accused of "racist" tactics by Washington's media consultant, who slipped into a screening of new ads for the Republican.

Nixon Still Big As Fund-Raiser

LAPORTE, Ind. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon's appearance at a fund-raiser later this month is already sold out, to the delight of state Republican officials.

"Whoever has Nixon as a speaker is going to make money," said Gordon K. Durnil, chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Organizers of the $50-a-plate GOP fundraiser on April 20 sold 200 tickets within days of the announcement that Nixon would attend. They printed another 200 and sold them, too.

"Now we're in the process of returning money to people who wanted tickets," said John J. Hanberg, chairman of "An Evening With Richard Nixon."

Last week, the former president, who resigned in 1974 because of the Watergate scandal, spoke in Palm Beach, Fla. On April 15, he will appear in Atlanta.

China Halts Cultural Exchange

PEKING (AP) — China today angrily halted all official cultural exchanges with the United States in retaliation for the U.S. decision to grant political asylum to tennis star Hu Na.

The decision, which threatens to put U.S.-Sino relations under the greatest strain since diplomatic ties were established in 1979, affects performing arts, art exhibitions, film festivals and journalism and publishing exchanges.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Mark Croker responded, "We deeply regret the Chinese overreaction to the Hu Na case." In Washington, State Department duty officer Sue Pittman said there would be no immediate response by her agency.

Miss Hu's lawyer in San Francisco, Edward C.Y. Lau, called China's action "really an unfortunate move" but said he did not expect it to affect the status of his client, who defected to the United States last year.

The Ministry of Culture said all remaining exchanges for 1983 will be stopped as of today, China's official Xinhua News Agency reported.

"The Chinese government has no choice but to take the above measure," said Ding Gu, director of cultural relations with foreign countries.

"The U.S. government should be responsible for the consequences arising therefrom."

Relations between China and the United States were severed after the Communist takeover in 1949. A thaw began in 1971 when a U.S. table tennis team went to China at the invitation of Peking, starting the "ping pong diplomacy" that led to President Nixon's trip to China in 1972.

On Monday, the United States granted political asylum to 19-year-old Miss Hu, despite months of Chinese protests that it would encourage other defections, and that Miss Hu did not face persecution if she returned home.

Miss Hu sneaked away from the Chinese tennis team on July 20 in Santa Clara, Calif., where she was playing in an international tournament. She has been staying with Chinese-American families in the San Francisco area.

Miss Hu has said she defected because she had been pressured to join the Communist Party as a "model" for others and because she received a threatening letter from a top Chinese official. The official has not been identified.

Foreign diplomats in Peking said they had expected

China to cut off certain sports and cultural exchanges in retaliation for the granting of asylum.

However, China's decision apparently will not affect the 8,000 to 10,000 Chinese students and scholars currently in the United States or the 300 American students and 250 U.S. specialists in China.

It also apparently will not affect China's participation in the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

"From today on," the Ministry of Culture announced, "the Chinese government will stop implementing all the cultural exchange items which have not been carried out in the accord for cultural exchange in 1982 and 1983 between China and the United States."

Ding said the U.S. decision to grant asylum "is extremely unfriendly to China from a political point of view, juridically impeachable and morally condemnable."

"It has also impaired the normal atmosphere for Sino-U.S. cultural exchange and created an obstacle to the bilateral exchange activities," he said.

Ding announced the Chinese retaliation today in a meeting with Charles Freeman, minister-counselor of the U.S. Embassy.

He said the action cancels the following events that had been planned for this year:

—An official Chinese cultural delegation's visit to the United States.

—The mutual exchange of a small performing arts group for visits and performances.

—China and the United States each holding a high-quality small art exhibit in the other country.

—Each nation organizing a film week for the other country and exchanging delegations of cinematographers.

—A visit to China by a delegation of U.S. journalists.

Twin Trailer Law Has Raised Doubts In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A new federal rule Wednesday opened 3,200 miles of North Carolina highways to double-trailer trucks while some state officials questioned the law's standards.

"The only thing we're going to do is allow them to travel on the roads the U.S. secretary of transportation has designated," said state Highway Administrator Billy Rose.

Rose said the federal law had opened about 3.5 percent of the mileage of all public roads in the state to the twin trailers, previously prohibited in North Carolina and 13 other states.

However, trucking industry officials said it might be several days before the big trucks, widely used in Western states, appear on North Carolina highways.

Many eastern states vowed Wednesday to fight the new highway rule, which opened about 180,000 miles of highways nationwide.

Federal officials pleaded for tolerance, but at least seven states — Vermont, Connecticut, Virginia, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and South Carolina — said their highway patrols still would ticket the twin trailers off the Interstate system.

Under the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982, the twin trailers are legal on state highways built with federal money and access roads to terminals.

Quentin G. Anderson of Charlotte, public affairs director for the Carolina Motor Club, praised Connecticut Gov. William O'Neill for signing a bill Tuesday banning the trucks in that state.

"We applaud that," Anderson said. "He (O'Neill) said, 'The hell with them.' I wish we had a governor like that. It takes guts to do that sort of thing."

In his weekly news conference Wednesday, Gov. Jim Hunt said, "we have the federal law now and there's no question that twin trailers have the right to move on Interstate highways."

However, Hunt recommended that the state's transportation officials study whether the trucks should be allowed to travel highway access roads.

"The big question is what about the smaller highways that may be needed for access," he said. "I'm very concerned that twin-bottoms not go on roads that are too narrow and create a real hazard."

The Carolina Motor Club supports legislation to require the state to observe the minimum standards mandated by the federal law, specifically the 12-foot lane limitation. Despite the federal law, some 11-foot lanes on access roads have been approved.

The club contends that 11-foot lanes are too narrow for the rigs' length, sway and braking systems.

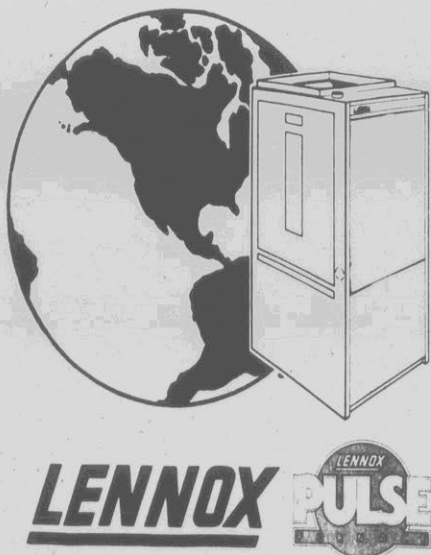

The Hunt administration is backing a measure before the Legislature that would let the state transportation secretary designate access roads with 11-foot lanes to open the state ports of Morehead City and Wilmington to twin-trailer traffic.

Elbert L. Peters Jr., executive director of the N.C. Motor Carriers Association, said only about 10 percent of the organization's 450 to 500 members would use the double rigs. But he said out-of-state companies may send them through the state or into North Carolina terminals.

BROUGHT HIS OWN — First Lady Nancy Reagan has a laugh as violinist Itzhak Perlman told her he brought his own candy bar to the White House Wednesday while taking part in a rehearsal for a performance at the White House telecast that will be aired later. blems developed in the suits just hours before two astronauts were to take a space walk and the exercise had to be canceled.

The only question involved batteries that power small headlamps on the space walkers' helmets. Four are required for each helmet, and Musgrave reported only seven of 11 on board were functioning. Mission Control said the headlamps are not essential to the exercise.

While outside, Musgrave and Peterson were to attach 50-foot rope-like tethers to guide wires that run the length of the bay on both sides. They planned to test hand tools, winches and ropes that may be useful one day in retrieving satellites or in making emergency repairs of the shuttle itself.

They would become the 37th and 38th individuals to step outside a spacecraft. Twenty-seven of the earlier walkers were American, and nine were Soviet. Several of the Americans have been outside more than once, raising the total number of U.S. walks to 56. That includes 28 excursions on the moon by 12 astronauts who landed there.

The last U.S. walk was a dual affair by two Skylab space station crewmen in February 1974.

Weitz asked Mission Control on Wednesday "how the old TDRS is doing." TDRS stands for Tracking and Data Relay Satellite.

"Everything is positive," replied Roy Bridges in Houston. "All the TDRS experts think they have a good bird. The whole plan will require 10 days to two weeks to complete ... We won't know the end of the story until you guys get back."

Said Weitz: "That sounds super."

The satellite, released from Challenger on Monday, failed to reach its intended orbit when its rocket stage misfired and sent the package into a tumble. Radio commands from White Sands separated the rocket from TDRS and stabilized the satellite.

Starting Sunday, some of the satellite's jets will be commanded to fire in short bursts to gradually move the craft from the low point of its 13,540-by-21,950-mile orbit.

Mountain Ridge High Rise Limits Win Approval

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — High-rise buildings would be limited to three stories or 35 feet on any mountain ridge 2,950 feet above sea level under a bill approved Wednesday in a state Senate subcommittee.

The bill, a rewritten version of one introduced by Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, would apply to 25 counties, but only if local governments have not adopted building ordinances as strict as those in the bill.

Counties could override the bill if they hold a public hearing and get approval from bordering counties, while cities could override it through a public hearing only if their county exempts itself from the bill.

The Senate Judiciary I Subcommittee rejected an alternative proposal to create a Mountain Ridge Development Commission, with one representative from each of the 25 counties affected, to review proposals to build on ridges.

"If we pass this legislation we're talking about we would have another Coastal Area Management Act," said Sen. George Marion, D-Surry. Marion said he preferred allowing cities and counties to "opt out" of a statewide ridge-law and moved that the subcommittee accept Thomas' bill.

The bill would not apply to government buildings or water, radio, telephone or television towers. Violation of the law would be a misdemeanor.

Grandfather Mountain developer Hugh Morton recommended that the subcommittee consider a ridge as anything that rises as much as 500 feet above an adjacent valley floor, saying he had heard complaints from counties at lower elevations.

Morton said that "normal, sensible, tasteful development will not be impeded one bit."

He said recent development at Grandfather Mountain, Hound Ears and Linville complies with Thomas' bill.

"Development would not be slowed down much except development like at Sugar Mountain and we want to slow that down," he said.

He referred to construction of a 10-story condominium project being built atop Little Sugar Mountain in Avery County.

In other legislative action:
Rent-To-Own

A bill aimed at regulating rent-to-own transactions and making consumers more aware of the terms of those transactions was approved 110-2 by the state House and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Jeanne Fenner, D-Wilson, said the new rent-to-buy transactions are not covered by the state's Retail Installment Sales Act. The bill would expand the definition of retail sales to include the transactions.

Mrs. Fenner said some unscrupulous merchants have not told customers the total purchase prices or interest rates on some items, and they sometimes fail to tell the buyer he is only renting the merchandise until the last installment is paid.

Many times the eventual purchase price is inflated and the interest rates are higher than legally allowed under the installment sales act, she added.

"They want the market advantage of sales but they do not want the responsibility of following the law," Mrs. Fenner said.

Wolfpack

A joint resolution honoring North Carolina State's NCAA basketball champions was introduced in the Senate and referred to the Senate Rules Committee.

"The General Assembly applauds and cheers the accomplishment" of the Wolfpack, the resolution says.

A copy of the resolution, if passed by both houses, would be sent to coach Jim Valvano, assistant coaches Tom Abatemarco, Ray Martin and Ed McLean and team members Derek Whittenburg, Thurl Bailey, Ernie Myers, Sidney Lowe, Lorenzo Charles, Terry Gannon, Cozell McQueen, George McClain, Alvin Battle, Walter "Dinky" Proctor, Harold Thompson, Mike Warren, Quinton Leonard, Walt Densmore and Tommy DiNardo.

The resolution was introduced by Sen. Bob Davis, D-Rowan, who filed a resolution Tuesday that would ask Congress to name its next three U.S. bomber squadrons after N.C. State's long-range shooters Whittenburg, Lowe and Gannon. That resolution was also sent to the rules committee.

Computers

The Senate State Government Committee delayed voting on a bill to set up a state computer commission after debate erupted once more over the commission's membership and a provision requiring annual reports to the Legislature.

Sen. Jack Childers, D-Davidson, said the committee, which is comprised of the Council of State and the Secretary of Administration, should also include someone representing the community college system.

Sen. Ken Harris, R-Mecklenburg, then suggested the bill be amended to require the commission to collect five-year plans on the state's nine computers and report to the General Assembly on the first day of each session.

Sen. David Parnell, D-Robeson, said another bill had been introduced to establish a legislative study commission on state computers.

"This takes the study away from the Legislature," he said. "It just depends on where we want it to be."

The bill was already delayed several weeks while Council of State members not included in the original bill lobbied for their "turf." But committee members decided another week would help iron out the remaining difficulties.

Justice

The Appropriations Subcommittee on Justice and Public Safety delayed voting on proposals to cut the special prosecution office in the Attorney General's Office.

"We did fine prior to 1973 without this provision," said Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, who said the $344,000 program could be replaced with more cooperation among district attorneys.

"I don't believe their's a DA in the state who wouldn't say he's jammed up with all he can do," countered Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland. "I don't think what we were doing before 1973 has anything to do with what we're doing now."

Workers' Comp

The House Insurance Committee got its first look at a bill to let insurance companies pay dividends on workers' compensation policies to businesses based on each business's loss experience.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram said he was concerned because the bill would affect other kinds of insurance. He requested and was granted the chance to return next week to testify on the bill.

Rep. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, said he was worried that the bill might encourage companies to lay off injured workers or not to report their injuries to keep their loss record clean and remain eligible for larger dividends.

Voting

The House voted 108-6 to approve a bill to let voters who have moved within the same county 30 days before an election vote in their new precinct on election day and change their addresses at the same time.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where an amendment is expected to be considered limiting the times such voters can go to the polls to change their address and vote.

Child Abuse

A bill requiring the director of a county social services department to report to the local district attorney any evidence that a juvenile has been abused was approved 111-3 in the House.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said it clarifies existing responsibilities for social service directors.

Realtors

After lengthy debate, the House postponed until next week consideration of a bill that would increase education requirements for real estate salesmen and brokers.

Rep. Marvin Musselwhite, D-Wake, said the bill would require candidates for a real estate salesman's license to take 60 hours of classroom instruction instead of the 30 hours now required.

It would require candidates for a broker's license to take 150 hours of class instead of 90 hours.

Musselwhite said more education is needed because only 34 percent of those taking the broker's examination pass.

Printing

A House bill exempting firms from paying sales taxes on printed materials delivered to the postal service or another carrier for out-of-state sale won speedy approval of the Senate Finance Committee.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, told the panel that the $450,000 the state would lose in tax revenue would be recovered quickly when a Michigan firm moves to the state. One of the firm's officials said the only thing keeping it out of North Carolina was the sales tax.

Auto Licenses

The Senate Finance Committee approved a bill allowing cities and towns to levy auto taxes of up to $5 on residents' vehicles and $15 on local taxis. A number of local bills have been approved allowing individual localities to levy the taxes.

Child Exploitation

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said he had asked Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, to introduce legislation to prevent sexual exploitation of children.

The five-part bill would make sexual abuse of children and promotion of child pornography felonies. The children involved would have their records expunged if they commit no further violations within two years.

In a statement, Green said North Carolina has a severe runaway problem and that many runaways "frequently become the victims of prostitution and pornography."

Mental Health

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, filed a bill to license facilities for the mentally ill, mentally retarded and drug abusers.

The bill says licensing is necessary to ensure that construction, maintenance and operation of the facilities will be safe and that treatment of the patients get is of high quality.

The licenses would be issued by the Department of Human Resources, which would renew them every 24 months.

Minor Commitment

The Senate Human Resources Committee approved a bill that would let licensed state mental health facilities admit minors for treatment, as long as parents are informed within 24 hours.

Angie McMillan of the Department of Human Resources said the bill was needed to keep from turning away those under the age of 18 who need help.

Committee members questioned whether the bill would require that parents be notified in other situations that might make minors wary of seeking treatment.

"This only addresses in-patient situations," Ms. McMillan said. "It affects very rare situations."

New Bills

Sen. Bob Davis, D-Rowan, filed a bill that would change the method of executing death row inmates in North Carolina from lethal gas to lethal injection.

"Gas is a terrible way to force a person to die," Davis said. "And it's dangerous. The gas could leak out and injure someone."

He said a lethal injection was more humane.

Davis also filed a bill that would include the accidental killing of someone during commission of a felony in second degree murder laws.

He said the bill would provide a "general approach" to what several earlier bills have tried to do "piecemeal."

$100 Million To State Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The federal government says it will distribute $100 million to states and volunteer agencies this month to supplement food and shelter programs for the poor.

The money was in a $4.6 billion recession jobs bill. Half of the funds will go initially to states and Indian tribes, while the remaining half will first be distributed to a board representing volunteer agencies.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency, which is handling the aid program, said the largest state distributions will be the $4.6 million for California and $4.5 million for New York.

The law requires that the government distribute the money to the states and volunteer board by April 23. Government agencies and volunteer groups that aid the poor must spend the money by Sept. 30.

Students Displaying Realistic Attitude Over Career Choices

MILLBRAE, Calif. (AP) — High school students who once dreamed of careers in pro sports or fashion modeling are now making more pragmatic choices, such as computer programming, a study shows.

"Kids today are becoming more realistic about their career choices," said Sheryl Pomerenk of the San Mateo County education office's occupation program, which conducted the study. "We live in a high-tech area, and they're waking up to the fact that they have to have computer skills to do well."

In a survey of 10,832 county high school students, computer programming ranked No. 1 out of nearly 200 professions, ranging from accountant to X-ray technician.

"Maybe we're getting away from stereotypes, too," Ms. Pomerenk said, suggesting there may be "less bias toward the so-called 'nerds' who like science.

In each of the last four years, her department has polled nearly 11,000 ninth graders and eleventh graders in the county just south of San Francisco about their career preferences.

Ms. Pomerenk said the exercise makes students think seriously about future occupations and helps educators plan training programs.

Since the first survey, computer programming has moved up from No. 23 to outperforming arts from the top of the list with 880 votes. But fantasies still linger, and performing arts remained in second place with 670 votes.

"We've had a few stars come out of our schools — Merv Griffin, Suzanne Somers and some members of Fleetwood Mac — but there certainly aren't 670 openings for performing artists," Ms. Pomerenk said.

Choices change between freshman and junior year, she said. The surveys showed that while modeling and professional sports are among the top-10 career choices for ninth-graders, they didn't even rank in the top-20 among 11th-graders.

"There's some maturity taking place," Ms. Pomerenk said. "A lot of kids who wanted to be professional athletes never grew past 5-foot-3, and the ones that wanted to be models never lost their baby fat."

This year's survey for the first time was broken down into male and female responses, and more girls than boys aspired to be doctors, lawyers and business executives.

But very few girls opted for blue-collar jobs such as auto mechanics or carpentry. Nor did many boys express interest in becoming a cosmetologist or a secretary.

Low on the list among boys and girls were jobs as public administrator, economist and newspaper reporter.

The top 15 choices, based on replies from both sets of students, were: computer programmer, performing artist, auto mechanic, computer operator, professional athlete, cosmetologist, physician, lawyer, pilot or flight engineer, business executive, secretary, fashion designer, model, accountant and carpenter.

Credit Card Paying Fines

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Motorists without cash now have the option of whipping out a credit card to pay county fines for traffic violations and to post bail for misdemeanors.

In the past, San Francisco police refused even to take checks.

A new ordinance, which became law in February and was instituted several weeks ago, makes San Francisco the nation's first county to institute a credit card system for traffic fines, said Kerry Tuccori, a Hall of Justice information clerk.

"At last, the plastic age has caught up with the Traffic Fines Bureau," said Presiding Municipal Court Judge Dorothy von Beroldingen.

"A great idea," agreed Jim Irwin, a 24-year-old photocopier salesman who dropped by the Hall of Justice Wednesday to protest a $20 parking tag. "This is convenient, because sometimes you're without cash."

Clerk Vadim Nemechayeff said no publicity has been given the experiment for fear of an avalanche of plastic money that untrained clerks couldn't handle.

"We're still in the training period," he said. "The word that we were accepting

Some White House Aides Suspect Watt May Reverse His Rock Ban

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt has struck a sour note with some White House aides by banning rock groups such as the Beach Boys from the capital's annual Fourth of July celebration.

"There are a lot of us who think they (the Beach Boys) are a national institution," said Michael K. Deaver, the White House deputy chief of staff and close adviser to the president. "Anybody that thinks that the Beach Boys are hard rock must think Mantovani plays jazz."

Some White House aides, speaking on condition they not be named, said they wouldn't be surprised if Watt reversed his decision. "That's what some people are hoping," said one official. "I think it's fairly widespread."

As for President Reagan's opinion of the Beach Boys, Deaver said, "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if he is a fan." The Beach Boys, known since the 1960s for their "surfin' sound," have had hits such as "Good Vibrations" and "California Girls."

Deaver emphasized he was not making a big issue out of Watt's decision and said he had no power to overturn it. Asked if he would discuss the matter with Reagan, Deaver said, "Sure."

In a decision made public

Wednesday, Watt expressed concern that rock music was attracting "the wrong element" — drinking and drug-taking youths — to the annual celebration on the Washington Mall.

Instead, Watt arranged for "patriotic, family-based entertainment" by the U.S. Army Blues Band and Wayne Newton, the king of Las Vegas casinos.

Watt, as Interior secretary, controls the National Park Service, which runs the celebrations on the Mall.

The Beach Boys performed at the annual fireworks display in 1980 and 1981, and the Grass Roots performed last year. Hundreds of thousands of people attended the celebrations.

Deaver said: "My wife and children went to that concert (by the Beach Boys) and loved it."

But Watt complained the concerts were "hard rock," and said he decided to change their tenor because of "high drug use, high alcoholism, broken bottles, some injured people, some fights."

Authorities say 52 adults were arrested during last year's celebration for offenses ranging from disorderly conduct to assault.

After one of their concerts, the Beach Boys got a guided tour of the Reagan White House.

In 1980, the Beach Boys performed a benefit concert for Vice President George Bush when he was running for the presidency. "Those guys are friends of his," said one White House aide.

Other White House aides, all of who requested anonymity, recalled the group performed at one of the many inaugural concerts for Reagan.

"They are not considered foe here," an official said.

Shirley Green, Bush's press aide, said the vice president had a "personal friendship with the Beach Boys. He likes Mike Love very much; he likes the group; he likes their music. He expresses again the appreciation he had felt for their personal friendship and support, and for the fact they have entertained on the Fourth of July for free."

But she said the question of whether Bush would intervene with Watt had not been discussed. "Certainly, the vice president and Secretary Watt don't feel that they are in conflict over this."

In Monckton, New Brunswick, Mike Love, the Beach Boys' lead singer, told reporters before a concert, "It's kind of rough when the secretary of the Interior ... is now telling us what kind of music we can have."

In replacing the rock groups, Watt said, "We are trying to have an impact for wholesomeness. July Fourth will be a (traditional ceremony) for the family and for solid, clean American lives."

"We're not going to encourage drug abuse and alcoholism as was done in the past years," Watt said.

Watt's decision lit up switchboards at local radio stations, the Park Police and even the White House with a flood of protests.

Forest Watch Program Tried

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina national forest officials say a new, long-needed program may help rangers reduce vandalism and detect fires in national forests.

The keystone of the program is a toll-free number that people can call if they notice a fire or suspicious activity. The number is 1-800-222-1155. The call will be answered by a 24-hour answering service and the information will be relayed to the appropriate agency.

"We want to make reporting fires and other unusual occurrences on national forest lands as easy as possible," said George Olson, the state's national forest supervisor.

"We recognized long ago that the many eyes of the public are more effective in spotting fires than the eyes of a few people in our towers or planes for fire protection."

Fred Foster, fire management staff officer with the U.S. Forest Service, said the service has long needed such a program.

"We kind of got the idea when we started analyzing the Crime Watch, Neighborhood Watch and the (Blue Ridge) Parkway's Park Watch programs," he said. "They have had positive results, and we developed a similar program. As with the other watch programs, the only action we want people to take is to note the location, description of people involved, license numbers of vehicles and report the incident as soon as possible."

He said the information would be kept confidential.

Foster said the fire seasons are from mid-March to mid-May and from mid-October to mid-December.

"The first fire season is the worst fire season, and the largest percentage of our fires are man-made," he said. "Sometimes they are caused by carelessness, but arson causes more fires than carelessness does."

More than 70 percent of forest fires are reported by the people visiting the forests, he said. The fire towers and aircraft make up the rest.

He said it costs up to $500,000 to put out one major fire. North Carolina's national forests average more than 200 fires a year.

The state has 1,213,541 acres of forest land in four national forests — Croatan, Nantahala, Pisgah and Uwharrie. Vandals caused nearly $157,000 damage to forest service lands last year.

"There also is a tremendous amount of timber theft for firewood. People can cut firewood from the national forests, but they must have a permit," Foster said.

Pessimism Over Arms Control

SPRING FEVER FISHING — Every year when it's warm enough to get outdoors without heavy clothing, the urge comes to go fishing the old-fashioned way with cane poles and a can of fishing worms. Here, two young men try their luck at the Kehukee Park ramp on the Roanoke River in Williamston. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Several senators who received a briefing from U.S. negotiators say they are pessimistic about prospects for an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, blamed the Soviets for the situation, while Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., charged the Reagan administration had bungled its opportunities.

On a related issue, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said there was new evidence that arms control nominee Kenneth L. Adelman misled the Senate panel. The full Senate will vote on Adelman's confirmation on Monday.

Tsongas made his comments after the committee quizzed arms negotiator Edward L. Rowny in closed session Wednesday. Paul Nitze, another negotiator, also appeared before the committee.

"You have a list of events which cannot be explained by the official explanation," Tsongas said.

"Either people are not talking the same language or someone is misleading us," Tsongas told reporters. "I happen to think that someone is misleading us."

Tsongas said he sought to have Rowny's testimony made public, but was overruled by Percy. Tsongas said he would try again to have the testimony released.

Rowny, the chief U.S. negotiator in talks aimed at reducing U.S. and Soviet arsenals of intercontinental ballistic missiles, and Nitze, the chief negotiator in talks on medium-range missiles in Europe, testified for more than three hours.

Most of their testimony dealt with arms control and left committee members dubious of prospects for reductions in nuclear armaments.

"I believe the Soviet Union intends to stonewall the situation," said Percy. "It does not appear in the foreseeable future that there is any chance (of an agreement)."

Cranston, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said, "I think we have bungled and blown the opportunity to have significant arms control."

Tsongas said, "I have seen nothing to indicate that there is any progress in arms control talks anywhere. The Soviets have now decided that because of the ham-handedness of this administration they can simply wait us out."

On a related topic, the New York Times reported today that during the latest round of strategic arms talks, the United States offered to limit the number of long-range bombers and airborne cruise missiles, while the Soviet Union called for a ban on deployment of all kinds of cruise missiles.

The Times said unidentified Reagan administration officials claimed these proposals were evidence of movement in the Geneva, Switzerland, talks.

Rowny was also questioned about a memorandum that he gave to Adelman when they had lunch together in Washington on Jan. 14, two days after President Reagan nominated Adelman to head the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

The memo was critical of some U.S. arms negotiators and suggested personnel changes. Adelman sent it to a friend and former associate, Assistant Secretary of the Interior J. Robinson West, with a handwritten note saying, "Eyes Only! Ed Rowny's very confidential real views on people. Thanks!"

Percy said Rowny told the senators the memorandum was a set of talking point that was handed to him by an aide during his 15-minute meeting with Adelman. He said he had not read it before.

As quoted by Percy, Rowny said that when he did read it he telephoned Adelman to say it did not reflect his views. By the time Adelman got the call, however, he had already written his note to West.

Cranston said, "I find it hard to believe that a man of Gen. Rowny's experience would hand a superior a memorandum containing views which he now states are contrary to his own views and that he would not explain that these were not his own views. He left Ken Adelman with the clear impression that these reflected Gen. Rowny's views."

When a reporter asked Percy if he was surprised by Rowny's account, Percy said, "Yes, I was surprised. I think it was an unusual procedure. I am sure it was unusual for Gen. Rowny."

Rowny is a retired general. Adelman is deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., when asked about the impact of Rowny's testimony, said, "I don't think it changed much one way or another."

Committee sources said the nomination would be scheduled for floor action on Monday.

Baker has predicted approval on a close vote. Tsongas has threatened a filibuster, but said Tuesday it might not be necessary because he understood as many as 15 Republicans might oppose Reagan's nomination of Adelman. Since all but five or six Democrats are expected to oppose him, this would spell defeat for the nomination.

Big Oil Slick Blackens Island Nation's Beaches

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Patches of crude oil blackened beaches of this island nation today, part of a giant oil slick floating unchecked in the Persian Gulf and fed by two bombed wells off the Iranian shore.

Environmental officials in Bahrain said pools of tarry crude were spotted on the beaches Wednesday night and they predicted more oil would come ashore.

Iran says the slick began forming after the two wells were bombed by Iraqi warplanes in early February, but Iraqi Health Minister Sadik Alwash said in Kuwait today that the initial leak was caused by a damaged pipeline and that the Iraqis did not bomb the wells until March 2.

Ministers from eight gulf countries, including Iran and Iraq, were in Kuwait today to discuss ways to combat the slick, estimated last week to cover between 1,000 and 9,000 square miles. Delegates met informally Wednesday, but delayed the official start of the conference because of sharp differences between Iran and Iraq, who have been at war since September 1980.

Again today, the meeting was delayed by Iraqi-Iranian wrangling, with the scheduled morning start pushed back until evening.

"As long as we have no common ground, what is the point of a public show," said Iran's ambassador to Kuwait, Ali Shams Ardekani. "We are not actors."

Ardekani repeated his nation's rejection of Iraq's demand for a cease-fire before cleanup work begins.

The other gulf ministers attending the conference expressed concern about the lack of progress, but both Iraq and Iran said they would remain until a solution to the stalemate was found.

Politics Is Real Fight

KINGSTON, Idaho (AP) — Two candidates for honorary mayor will give new meaning Saturday to the phrase "title fight" when they put on boxing gloves to wrap up their campaigns.

Robert Pankonin and Harry Holand, both 56, are both old-timers in this tiny northern Idaho community. Both are called "Mayor" by friends, neighbors and family.

The fight will all be in good fun, out behind Margaret's Place, a bar, where it was decided they would trade more than political barbs.

"Harry was down on the other end of the bar and someone called him the mayor and that kind of set things off," Pankonin recalled. "I then said that we've got to settle this thing in the ring once and for all."

Holand countered that Pankonin has been an "imposter" long enough.

"Everybody here has called me the honorary mayor for the past 15 years, but now he's claiming it," Holand complained.

Even though Kingston is unincorporated and honorary mayor is nothing more than a title, that hasn't tarnished the honor for either contestant.

"It's great to be mayor of Kingston," said Pankonin. "Besides, it's the frog-croaking capital of the world."

"I'm the honorary mayor and that's all there is to it," countered Holand. "We'll settle it Saturday once and for all."

Found Drowned On Fishing Trip

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Jasper Hairston, 22, of Eden, apparently drowned in the Dan River Tuesday while fishing alone, Rockingham County Sheriff's officials said Wednesday.

Hairston's body was pulled from 12 feet of water near the shoreline of the river just south of Eden after rescue workers found his fishing pole on the bank, said Sheriff C.D. Vernon.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 39.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. Two few of the loads offered have been confirmed, with no preliminary weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,806,000, compared to 1,810,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned upward today, reversing a four-session decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial average rose 2.51 to 1,116.00 in the first half hour. Gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's recent retreat attracted some traders who had been waiting for a dip in stock prices to do some buying. But there were some doubts about the likely longevity of the upswing, given concern about the interest-rate outlook and some scaling back in earnings expectations for the first quarter.

Traders have been unsettled this week by earnings disappointments from two high-technology companies, Prime Computer and NBI Inc.

Norton Simon led the active list in the early going, unchanged at 22½. A 200,000-share block traded at that price.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 6.67 to 1,113.49, bringing its loss over the past four trading days to 29.80 points.

Declines outpaced advances by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 77.14 million shares, against 76.81 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 50 to 86.79. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 3.07 at 385.12.

Jointly Support Missionaries

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — United Methodists of Kansas have joined with Methodists in Switzerland and Germany to buy an airplane for use by missionaries in Zaire. The Swiss church gave $66,000, German Methodists $6,000 and the U.S. church's conferences in Kansas raised $176,000. Dennis and Janette Fulton, Kansas missionaries assigned to the African nation, are in the United States now, and Fulton is learning to fly the twin-engine plane.

department people made it clear that they are primarily concerned with the administrative organization," and not the quality of the university's programs.

"We've already taken several steps to respond to all the criticisms," Howell said. Some of those steps, according to the chancellor, address the "shortage of staff in special education, for example" and "things they thought ought to be added to the curriculum in teacher education programs."

"Starting last fall, we set up committees of teacher education people to propose those curriculum changes and they have already gone through the Faculty Senate." However, neither NCATE or the state board of education "took those changes into consideration," Howell said. "They were dealing with the situation on the date they came."

The changes cited by Howell were begun after the on-campus inspections were carried out.

Howell said, too, that ECU has "created the position of coordinator of teacher education in the office of the vice chancellor for academic affairs, with authority over all teacher education programs. The dean of the school of education was named to that position." Serving the dual roll, Howell suggested, "gives him a lot of authority."

"What we ought to do over the summer, is begin to explore whether or not these changes are going to be enough" to satisfy the accrediting agencies. "If not, we'll do more."

He said if the changes are sufficient, "We'll ask the state department to remove the probation," and ask NCATE "to revisit the campus with a new team."

"We feel we have the machinery going to deal with the situation in an effective way," the chancellor said.

Arthur Taylor, a spokesman for the Department of Public Instruction's teacher certification division, said today that "East Carolina graduates are certainly in the upper portion" of graduates of state-supported institutions in passing the required National Teachers Examination.

"It's been some time since we compared graduates from public and private schools," Taylor said, "but there are a number of institutions below the average for East Carolina." Pointing out that the last comparison "showed that, between 1979 and 1982, the average composite score for East Carolina graduates (on the NTE) was 1.99."

That compares, he said, to 973 for the institution with the "lowest composite score," Elizabeth City State University, and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, which had the highest, 1.313.

"That's the latest look we've taken," Taylor said, adding that "graduates of East Carolina have traditionally done well. Although not all have passed," he said, "the number of failures have been relatively small."

Taylor noted that ECU and Appalachian State University "go back and forth" for the record of the largest number of teachers graduating each year, and for the best composite score on the NTE.

He said Appalachian's average composite score during the 1979-1982 period was 1.205.

Trust Fund's Overpayment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security's trust funds may have paid $40 million too much to the Railroad Retirement Board in 1979 because of errors and an imprecise formula used by the board, government auditors say.

The General Accounting Office said its check showed the Railroad Retirement Board makes "numerous errors" in calculating how much it is owed by Social Security. The auditors called for reforms to ensure that the payments are accurate.

Under an exchange that Congress established in 1958, Social Security has paid the railroad board more than $17 billion to place the Social Security system in the same financial position it would have been in had railroad employment not been excluded from Social Security coverage.

Seeking Cause Of Fatal Fire

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Union County fire officials say they're trying to determine the cause of a fire that killed a 70-year-old woman and her 2-year-old granddaughter Tuesday.

County Fire Inspector Kevin Stewart said electrical experts would return to the scene Wednesday to try to pinpoint the cause of the blaze. He said the fire apparently started in a utility room.

Willie Mangum Wooten, 70, and Kim Wooten, 2, died of smoke inhalation in the 7:40 a.m. fire at Mrs. Wooten's home.

Mrs. Wooten and the child were found near a door of the six-room house. Stewart said Mrs. Wooten apparently had used a telephone in a back bedroom to report the fire.

Transit System Study Approved

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Cabarrus County commissioners have approved a study to determine whether Concord, Kannapolis, Landis and China Grove need a transit system.

The 10-month study is expected to cost $22,000, county Transportation Planner Lynn Bates said Wednesday.

Funding could be provided by a grant from the state Transportation Department and a 10 percent local matching grant.

Bates said the transit system would be designed to meet the needs of the elderly and handicapped as well as the community in general.

Exporting More, Drinking Less

COGNAC, France (AP) — The French are exporting more cognac than ever before, but apparently drinking less of it themselves, according to the Bureau National du Cognac.

The United States retained its position as the world's top consumer of cognac, importing 25,017,000 bottles for the period Sept. 1, 1982 through Aug. 31, 1982, as compared with 23,520,000 bottles the previous year. In second place, the British imported 15,031,000 bottles during the same period against the 14,660,000 purchased the year before.

Meanwhile, French consumption slipped to 14,195,000 bottles from the 16,267,000 of the previous year.

Partners Divide Over Politics

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Talk about political differences! A husband and wife hope they don't, even in their sleep, since one is a Democratic Party official while the other is a staunch Republican.

Nathan Robfogel is vice chairman of the Monroe County Democratic Party and tonight is expected to be elevated to chairman. Susan Robfogel is a loyal GOP worker and former counsel for the county Republican Party.

They also are partners in competing Rochester law firms.

"It's an unusual situation, I grant you," Robfogel said. "We just don't talk about things that happen in the office at home," says Mrs. Robfogel.

Even visitors are drawn into the fray. U.S. Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, a Democrat, has been there at the invitation of the husband, and Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, a Republican, at the invitation of the wife.

Robfogel, who said he won't attend any Republican functions with his wife, adds, "As far as I know, I don't talk in my sleep."

Conrail Faces Cost-Cutting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conrail, the government-owned freight railroad, has made major improvements, but likely will have to do more cost cutting to compete successfully, a new report says.

The report by the U.S. Railway Association, a quasi-government corporation which monitors Conrail, said Conrail has made great strides in improving costs, but faces unique problems that result in a particularly small operating margin compared to that of its competitors.

Yet, Stephen Berger, the association's chairman, said he was "cautiously optimistic" about Conrail's prospects, although "tough problems remain ahead" for the Philadelphia-based railroad.

Johnson Hurls, Hits ECU To 8-5 Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Winfred Johnson pitched and batted East Carolina to an 8-5 baseball victory over Virginia Wesleyan yesterday, snapping a three-game losing streak for the Pirates. Johnson went the first eight innings against the Blue Marlins, giving up just five hits and one run. He started the Pirates on their way with a two-run homer in the first inning, and finished the game with two hits.

Kelly Robinette pounded out four hits in five trips, driving in one run, in leading the 13-hit attack of the Pirates.

While Johnson kept Wesleyan off the basepaths for the most part, he didn't get much back-up support when he finally left the game in favor of Phil Spring, who was touched for four runs in the top of the ninth to make what wasn't a close game look like one anyway.

Even then, it took some shifty moves by the Marlins to pull it off, sending several illegal batters to the plate without being caught.

That series of events began in the fifth inning when starting pitcher Glenn Pizzanella was taken off the mound and sent to shortstop. Under the rules of baseball governing designated hitters, the DH was then dropped and Pizzanella was to bat in his position, with the new pitcher having to bat in the spot vacated when the second baseman left the game. However, DH John Abbate remained in the game, batting three more times, collecting two doubles and driving in two of the four runs in the ninth inning.

Pizzanella, meanwhile, batted in the spot left by the second baseman, reaching on an error in the ninth and scoring one of the runs.

Another "mistake" came in the ninth, when left fielder Jerry Oravitz came in to pitch, and Tobias Short was inserted into the lineup in Oravitz' hitting spot, although he did not come to bat.

Umpire Claude Kennedy said afterwards that it was up to East Carolina to protest the wrong batters, and that did not take place.

ECU Coach Hal Baird, however, wasn't that worried about the breach of rules. He was just glad to get the victory.

"We'll take a win. We were sluggish but we swung the bats well. I don't really think that Winfred had his good stuff, but we got a lead early and coasted in and I'm glad to get it."

"But we've got to play even better to win down the road. We'll see better pitchers. We've already seen better ones. But Kelly did have a good day and we had a chance to let David Wells rest some and get over a leg injury."

Johnson, who didn't allow a hit until Steve Barnett beat out an infield roller in the third, was touched for his only run in the fourth. But by then, the Pirates had pushed over five runs of their own.

East Carolina got things started in the first, scoring twice. With two away, Todd Evans singled up the middle and Johnson hit his fifth homer of the year, the fourth to the opposite field, as the ball cleared the fence in right.

Two more scored in the second. Tony Salmond reached on a fielder's choice and moved up on the second out of the inning. Mark Shank then singled him over. Shank stole second and scored on Robinette's second hit of the game.

Run number five scored in the third. With one away, Johnson singled and Robert Wells walked. David Horne then singled to score courtesy runner Robert Langston.

Wesleyan got its first run in the fourth. Andy Hesington led off with a walk and with one away Matt Eshelman also walked. Joe DiGiacomo singled, driving in Hesington.

East Carolina got a sixth run in the fourth. Jack Curlings opened with a walk and Langston came on to run for him, moving up on a hit by Robinette. A passed ball let them advance and John Hallow's sacrifice fly scored Langston.

The Pirates closed out their scoring in the seventh with two more for an 8-1 lead. With one down, Wells and Horne both walked. With two away, Curlings singled, and a walk to Shank forced in Wells. Robinette then reached on an error, scoring Horne. The threat ended, however, when Shank didn't notice that Langston had stopped at third and also advanced to that base, catching the courtesy runner in a rundown for the final out.

Wesleyan then came up with four runs in the bottom of the frame to close out the scoring. Joey Holland reached on an infield hit and Pizzanella reached on an error. Barnett singled in Holland and Frank Gilikin got a hit to score Pizzanella, but Barnett was

Ayden-Grifton Takes Wilson Tourney Crown

WILSON — Ayden-Grifton's Chargers got a two-hit effort from Tyrone Gay and pulled out a 2-1 baseball victory over North Lenoir last night to win the Wilson Optimists Tournament.

Greene Central took third place in the eight-team tournament, downing Beddingfield, 6-5, in eight innings, while Fike downed Raleigh Enloe, 7-6, for fifth, and Hunt beat SouthWest Edgecombe, 9-4, for seventh place.

Gay, who had a no-hitter in the opening game of the tournament last Saturday, was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player after he struck out 14 and walked just three in his two-hit effort. Gay and Gene Johnson were named to the All-Tournament team.

North Lenoir struck first, getting its only run in the third. Dennis Taylor walked and Randy Barnes was hit by a pitch. Both advanced on a passed ball, and Darnell Thorbes' single plated Taylor.

Ayden-Grifton quickly came back to tie it up in the bottom of the third. Charles Mitchell was hit by a pitch and Jackie Conway walked. Johnson's single loaded the bases, and Mitchell then scored when Doug Coley grounded out.

The Chargers broke the tie — and got what proved to be the winning run — in the fifth. Coley opened with a single and Gay reached on an error, moving Coley to third. Gay then broke for second, and while he was being put out, Coley scored with the winner.

No one on either team had more than one hit.

Ayden-Grifton, now 8-2, travels to West Craven on Friday for its next game.

In the battle for third place, Beddingfield took the early lead, but was unable to hold off Greene Central's Rams.

The Bruins gained the lead in the first, scoring twice. Mark Davis singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on Ken Lucas' single. Woody Mercer got a hit and Roger Batts' hit brought in Lucas for a 2-0 lead.

Greene Central quickly tied it up with two in the second. James Moore singled and with two away, Elmer Dixon singled and both moved up on a passed ball. Kevin Langston then singled in both runners.

Beddingfield went back out with two in the bottom of the second, but the Rams countered with one in the fourth and two in the sixth to take a 5-4 lead. Beddingfield then tied it up with one in the seventh.

Greene Central scored the winning run in the eighth. Todd Grant singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on Chris Suggs' single to left.

Dixon and Grant led the Ram hitting with two each, while Beddingfield was paced by Davis with four. Lucas and Mercer each added two.

The Rams are now 6-3, and have a rematch with Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday as the two resume Eastern Carolina Conference play.

Junior southpaw Mike Kinley reminded Greenville Rose followers he is more than a designated hitter by striking out 10 Kinston batters and scattering three hits over seven innings on the mound. Then he reminded them he is more than a pitcher by cracking a leadoff home run over the right field fence in the seventh to give the Rampants a 5-4 victory and the championship of the Pitt Easter Tournament.

For his efforts in the three-day event, Kinley was named to the all-tournament team along with teammates Kenny Kirkland, Bobby Buie and MVP Rudy Stalls. Other members of the elite group were Paul Beaman, John Hooks and Rod Brown of Kinston; Neal Paul and Joey Ange of Washington; Ward Winthrow of New Bern; Darrell Edwards of D.H. Conley; Alvin Baker of Farmville Central; and Richard Carter of Havelock.

"Mike came in after pitching in the seventh and told me that if it went to eight (innings) he didn't think he could pitch," said Rose coach Ronald Vincent, whose team now sports a 6-0 mark. "I told him, 'All right, make something happen so we don't have to go to eight.' He caught a curve and put everything into it — he really bowed his neck on that one."

Beaman drove in all four Kinston runs, as he collected two of the Vikings' three hits. Kirkland slapped two hits in three at-bats to drive in four runs.

Stalls collected hits in eight of his 12 trips to the plate in the tourney including three doubles and a four-of-four tear against New Bern in the Rampants' 6-5 semifinal win.

The Rampants jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first on a grand slam homer by Kirkland off Kinston's John Hooks, who was pitching in his first game for the Vikings. Randy Warren slapped Hooks' first pitch for a single to right and moved to third on a single by Stalls. Kinley walked to fill the bases, but Eric Woodworth struck out before Kirkland's blast. Hooks struck out Curtis Evans and Bill Johnson to get out of the inning.

The Vikings posted a pair of runs in the third, as Ricky Carlyle walked and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by David Mitchell. Harold Fleming walked, and both runners advanced on a passed ball. Beaman looped a two-out single to right to drive in the Kinston runs.

Kinley retired the next five Kinston batters without incident, but Mitchell's grounder with one out in the fifth slipped by Traye Fuqua at second. Fleming popped up for the second out, but Beaman again nailed Kinley's offering — this time sending it for a two-run homer to knot the score at 4-4.

Neither team generated any offense until pinch hitter Toby Fisher walked to open the bottom of the sixth. Johnson followed with a base-on-balls, and a sacrifice by Fuqua moved the runners to second and third with one out. But with the Vikings infield pulled in tight, Warren slapped the ball to second sacker Neal Pate who fired it home for the tag on Fisher. Stalls' grounder to Pate ended the Rampants' hopes of a rally.

Paul Jones, whose homer Tuesday ignited a Kinston comeback for a 12-9 win over Washington, was inserted to

Plymouth Nips North Pitt In 17; Williamston Rolls By Tabor City

ROBERSONVILLE — It took a while, but Plymouth and Williamston finally emerged as the two who will battle for the championship tonight in the Roanoke Easter Baseball Tournament. Williamston gained the finals in an 11-5 romp over Tabor City, while Plymouth slipped past North Pitt, 1-0.

Now that might sound simple — but it wasn't. It took the Vikings 17 innings before North Pitt finally succumbed. And it was well after 10 p.m. last night before the Williamston-Tabor City game finally got underway.

In the losers' bracket game, Bear Grass downed Roanoke, 7-5.

Tonight at 5:30 p.m., North Pitt and Tabor City meet in the consolation contest, while Williamston and Plymouth collide for the title at 8 p.m.

Plymouth's David Mizelle and North Pitt's Greg Briley battled along through 16 scoreless innings before the Vikes finally pulled it out. Briley scattered only six hits through those 17 frames, while he and his teammates banged out 11, but couldn't put enough together to score a run.

North Pitt left runners stranded at third base three times, and on five other occasions left men on second base.

But, finally, in the 17th, Plymouth broke the deadlock. Steve Hart reached on a two-base error and moved to third on a wild pitch. He then scored when Corvin Hudson singled.

The loss dropped the Panthers to 5-4 on the year.

Williamston scored first in the final game of the evening, but then had to rally to beat Tabor City.

The Tigers got a run in the first inning and added two more in the fourth. But the Red Devils came up with two in the bottom of the fourth and added three in the fifth for a 5-3 lead.

Williamston then exploded in the sixth for eight runs as Tabor City just couldn't seem to get the side out. Keith Perry led off with a single and Kevin Leigh got a hit. Mike Daniels reached on an error, scoring Perry. Roger Baker walked, loading the bases. Both Tommy Wynne and James Ward reached on errors, each allowing a run to score. Grey Thomas then reached on a two-base error, scoring two. Perry, back up, was safe on yet another error, scoring Ward, and Leigh then singled in both Thomas and Perry, closing out the scoring. Leigh led the Williamston hitting with three, while Perry had two, one of them a solo homer in the fourth.

Tabor City's hitting was led by Rodney Allen, Kevin Patterson and Cary Jernigan, each with two. One of Allen's was a solo homer, also in the fourth inning.

Williamston is now 3-3 on the season.

Roanoke grabbed the early lead in its game with the Bears, scoring three times in the first inning. Ricky Taylor walked and moved up on an out. He scored when Darius Hudgins singled. Greg Casper doubled and Charles James walked, loading the bases. Jeffrey Morning reached on an error, scoring Hudgins, and Richard Wilson walked to force in Casper.

Bear Grass scored once in the second and Roanoke came up with two in the third to take a 5-1 lead.

The Bears then scored four times in the bottom of the third to tie it up. Phil Peele walked and Tony Leggett did too. Lawrence Watson drove both in with a single, and David Price slapped a two-run homer to tie it up.

The Bears then moved ahead for good with another run in the fifth, that coming on a two-out homer by Mark Taylor. The Bears added an insurance run in the sixth.

Taylor, Hudgins and Casper each had two hits for Roanoke, while no one had more than one hit for Bear Grass.

Speeding Up Final Minutes Aim Of New Basketball Rules

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — In two moves designed to speed up the increasingly lengthy final two minutes of college basketball games, the NCAA Rules Committee has decided to increase the penalties for late-game fouls and cut down on the number of timeouts in televised games.

The committee also announced Wednesday that it would continue to experiment by conference with a three-point basket and shot clock, but declined to implement it nationwide.

In the key change, the committee said that starting next year, players fouled the last two minutes of games will get two free throws if the bonus is in effect instead of the present one shot, plus a second if they make the first.

Ed Steitz, secretary-editor of the rules committee, said of the change: "We felt it would eliminate the tendency to foul at the end of the game." But it would also presumably cut the length of the final two minutes of college games, which are often continuing processions to the foul line.

The second change — cutting the time outs — would probably have the same effect, since coaches normally save most or all of their timeouts for the crucial final minutes.

The changes will have to be adopted by the entire NCAA, but that is usually a formality.

Had they been in effect this year, the outcome of Monday night's NCAA final might well have been different. In that game, which North Carolina State won 54-52 over Houston in the final seconds, Houston twice missed the first end of one-and-one free throws in the last two minutes and the Wolfpack used those misses to get the ball for both the tying and winning baskets.

If the new rule had been in effect, the Cougars would have received an extra shot each time.

Lee Leads Jag Golf

BUIES CREEK — Lee County heads the field after the first round of the 36-hole Farmville Central Invitational Golf Tournament, being held at Buies Creek.

Lee County finished the first day's round with a 319 team total, while Jacksonville is in second place with a 347 total. Hosting Farmville is at 347, in sixth place in the seven-team field.

Mitchell Perry of Pine Forest leads the field with a 67, while Farmville's Gary Hobgood and Zebulon's Art Robinson are tied for second with 73 each.

Other Farmville scores include: Alan Wooten, 87; Scott Lewis, 91; and Mel Williams, 96.

The tournament winds up today.

In reducing the number of timeouts from five to three in televised games, the committee implied that extra official timeouts are taken for television commercials. The timeouts would be cumulative — as is now the case, they could all be saved up until the end of the game.

Steitz said most NCAA coaches preferred to continue the experimentation with the three-point basket and the shot clock instead of instituting either or both on a standard basis. The NCAA tournament was played with neither.

The committee will determine later this year exactly which conferences will use the shot clock and three-point basket.

Erhmann Takes Putt-Putt Win

Robbie Erhmann shot a 91 in three rounds to capture first place in the Wednesday Night Tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course.

Corbett's Homer Leads Jags To 12-9 Victory

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

A three-run homer by Wade Corbett capped a third inning rally which paved the way to a 12-9 Farmville Central victory over Havelock in the consolation game of the Pitt Easter Tournament Wednesday at Guy Smith Stadium.

Alvin Baker went the distance on the mound for Farmville, recording his third win of the season to even the Jaguars record at 4-4. Baker was bombarded for 13 hits in the first four innings including three homers, but settled down to hold the Rams hitless through the final three frames.

"Baker got hurt early in the game on the mound," said Farmville coach Bill Davis. "He didn't get his pitches down, and they were hitting them pretty well. Later on he settled down and mixed his pitches well."

"I give these kids credit; they got down early and could of given up, but they battled back. We've got to cut down on our errors in the field if we're going to be a real good team."

Farmville Central managed only eight hits off the Havelock trio of hurlers, but the Rams' staff handed out 11 walks to aid the Jaguars.

The Rams got on the scoreboard in the top of the first, as Willie Pryor doubled with two out and catcher Tom Young followed with a homer to left. Pitcher Richard Carter reached first on an error, Dwight Downie drew a base-on-balls and Joey Colly singled to score Carter.

Farmville Central evened the score in the bottom of the inning. Billy Godley rapped a leadoff double to left and took third on an error by Ram starter Carter. A one-out walk by Baker loaded the bases and a single by Bobby Carraway drove in all three runners.

A one-out double by designated hitter Tom Mullins and a homer by Pryor gave Havelock a 5-3 lead after two innings. The Rams added another in the third before the Jaguars rallied to take control of the game. Colly doubled, stole third and scored on a two-out single by D.J. Fleming.

A leadoff walk by Baker was followed by a three-base throwing error on a grounder by Carraway to plate the first Jaguar run in the third. Carraway scored on a single by Gerald Wilson, and Carter hit Taylor Walston with a pitch for the second time of the game to advance the runner.

A base-on-balls to Roy

Roman loaded the bases, and Tim Askew walked to force in a run. The Rams inserted Kevin Johnson in relief, but Walston's courtesy runner scored on a wild pitch by Johnson. Johnson got Godley and Daniels to strike out before giving up the home run ball to Corbett.

Young reached first on an error by Godley to lead off the fourth for Havelock, and Carter followed with a homer to help his own cause. After one out, Colly singled to the infield, took second on an error by Carraway and scored on a single by Chris Gerende.

But the rally fell short for the Rams, as Farmville Central plated insurance runs in the fifth and sixth to seal the victory.

Wilson went two-of-four for the Jaguars and drove in a pair of runs, while Corbett drove in three runs with one hit in four trips.

Pryor, Young and Carter had two hits and two RBI for the Rams, now 4-6-1 on the season. Farmville Central travels to North Pitt Tuesday.

Norris Escapes Harm, Gets Good Start

CHARLOTTE—East Carolina's men's tennis team bowed before UNC Charlotte, 8-1, yesterday.

The lone East Carolina victory came in the number three doubles after it was all sewed up by the 49ers. Galen Treble and David Creech combined to bring the Pirates their lone victory.

East Carolina travels to Belmont Abbey today and then to N.C. State on Friday.

Summary:

Ed Caldwell (C) d. Ted Lepper, 7-5, 6-4.
Dana Barry (C) d. Paul Owen, 6-4, 6-1.
Nick Farnella (C) d. Galen Treble, 6-0, 6-2.
Bill Holden (C) d. David Creech, 6-2, 6-2.
Todd Stewart (C) d. Cole King, 6-1, 6-1.
David Ross (C) d. Tom Battle, 6-1, 6-3.
Farnella-Holden (C) d. Lepper-Battle, 6-2, 6-0.
Caldwell-Tim Melton (C) d. King-Owen, 6-2, 6-3.
Treble-Creech (C) d. Barry-Rese Farnish, 6-4, 6-1.

two years and to start the 1983 season he almost completed the trip—literally.

The 28-year-old right-hander of the Oakland A's, who has slipped from 22-9 and a 2.53 earned run average in 1980 to 12-9, 3.75 in 1981 and 7-11, 4.76 last year when he was troubled by a sore shoulder, blanked Cleveland for five gutty innings Wednesday—after totaling his $42,000 sports car against a telephone pole in the Oakland hills en route to the ballpark.

"It was off the mountain or into the pole, one of the two," Norris said after the A's defeated the Indians 5-3 with relief help from Tom Burgeimer and Dave Beard. "The front wheels locked on me. I'm just lucky I wasn't killed."

In other American League action, the California Angels edged the Milwaukee Brewers 4-3, the Seattle Mariners continued their Kingdom domination of the New York Yankees 6-2, the Texas Rangers made it three in a row over the Chicago White Sox 4-1, the Baltimore Orioles trounced the Kansas City Royals 11-1 and the Detroit Tigers trimmed the Minnesota Twins 9-5.

Norris left in the sixth with a 3-0 lead and a two-hitter—he was charged with Cleveland's two runs in the inning—because of tightening back muscles in the sixth inning.

Dr. Hirsch Handmaker, the team physician, said the back strain was caused when Norris braced himself against the steering wheel during the accident. Norris was sent to a hospital for tests. Handmaker said the pitcher had a "minimal strain of the muscles along the lumbar spine" and probably would not miss his next start.

"He was shaken up, but he bit the bullet and went out to try to win the game," said left fielder Rickey Henderson, who tripled off Bert Blyleven to start the Oakland first and scored on Carney Lansford's sacrifice fly. Henderson also walked four times and made the best defensive play of the game in the fifth inning, robbing Julio Franco of an extra-base hit with a diving, sliding catch of a line drive. "He showed what a competitor he is."

Norris leaped up, punched his glove and ran out to thank Henderson.

"He was real excited," Henderson said. "He's had a lot of bad luck the last year or so and maybe the good luck will start coming his way. The whole club is behind him. We need him to come back all the way."

Dwayne Murphy gave the A's a 3-0 lead in the third with a two-run double after Henderson walked and Mike Davis singled. The A's padded their lead with two runs in the seventh on an RBI single by Burroughs and an RBI double by Davey Lopes.

Angels 4, Brewers 3

Bobby Clark's RBI double snapped a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning and gave California its second consecutive one-run triumph over the defending AL West champions. Brian Downing drew a leadoff walk from Mike Caldwell and scored on Clark's shot to left-center.

California used solo homers by Brian Downing and Doug DeCinces in the first inning and Fred Lynn in the third to erase a 3-0 Milwaukee lead. The Brewers scored three times in the first against Tommy John on Robin Yount's single, Cecil Cooper's RBI double and Ted Simmons' homer.

Mariners 6, Yankees 2

Todd Cruz hit two home runs in a game for the first time in his major league career, driving in four runs, and left-hander Matt Young pitched seven strong innings to win his major league debut as the Mariners beat the Yankees for the 22nd time in 32 meetings in Seattle's Kingdome.

Cruz drilled a two-run homer to cap Seattle's three-run second inning against Bob Shirley, led off the fourth with another homer off Jay Howell and singled home a run in the eighth. The Yankees nicked Young for 10 hits in seven innings but didn't score until Dave Winfield hit a two-run homer in the seventh.

Rangers 4, White Sox 1

George Wright's two-run double in the fifth inning helped Texas to a sweep of its three-game season-opening series. Rick Honeycutt scattered eight hits in seven innings and Dave Tobik blanked the White Sox over the final two. The Rangers chased loser Richard Dotson in the seventh when they scored their final two runs on a single by Pete O'Brien, pinch-hitter Larry Bittner's triple and Billy Sample's double.

Orioles 11, Royals 1

John Lowenstein contributed three singles to the Orioles' 14-hit attack and drove in three runs as Baltimore gave Manager Joe Altobelli his first victory as Earl Weaver's successor. Lowenstein's second-inning hit scored Eddie Murray, who had doubled, tying the score 1-1, and his two-run single in the fifth extended Baltimore's lead to 5-1 and kayoed loser Dennis Leonard.

Tigers 9, Twins 5

Detroit's Dan Petry worked seven innings after a shaky start—Gary Gaetti hit a three-run homer in Minnesota's four-run first—and the Tigers came from behind with five runs in the sixth on four hits and three errors. The Twins led 4-2 in the sixth when the Tigers sent 10 men to the plate. Minnesota shortstop Ron Washington committed two errors and right fielder Tom Brunansky made one, while Kirk Gibson, Mike Ivie and Lou Whitaker had RBI singles. Larry Herndon homered in the ninth for the Tigers, his second in as many games.

Guerrilla War Is Escalating

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—Cambodia's four-year-long guerrilla war escalated to its highest level in the past week as Vietnamese forces swept into resistance strongholds, tangled with Thai border troops and sent more than 43,000 refugees fleeing into Thailand.

Here, in question and answer form, is an explanation of the complex, ongoing conflict.

Q: Which are the opposing sides?

A: Vietnam, which has about 180,000 soldiers in Cambodia, is fighting a loose coalition of three Cambodian resistance groups, whose total armed strength is roughly estimated at 40,000.

The coalition, headed by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, includes two non-Communist factions and the Khmer Rouge, whose brutal ultra-revolutionary government was toppled from power by the Vietnamese invasion in 1978 which brought Heng Samrin to power.

The Heng Samrin government is propped up by the Vietnamese in Cambodia and has been building up its armed forces but there have been no signs that the pro-Hanoi Cambodians are taking part in the current fighting in any meaningful way.

The Thais, prime backers of the resistance coalition, and the Vietnamese also have clashed, although an all-out confrontation has been avoided so far.

Q: Where is the fighting?

A: Combat is concentrated along sections of the 450-mile-long Thai-Cambodian border, where the guerrillas have established bases. It is a sparsely populated region with mountains in the southern and northern sectors and jungles and flat land in central parts.

Although the coalition and some of its supporters like to paint a picture of Cambodia seething with guerrilla activity, western journalists, relief program officials and other foreigners have been able to travel through a large area of the country in safety.

Q: What is the status of combat?

A: In a series of swift blows, Hanoi's troops, backed by tanks and artillery, overran the Khmer Rouge stronghold of Phnom Chat and Prince Sihanouk's headquarters in northern Cambodia. More than 43,000 Cambodians have fled the fighting and been granted temporary asylum in Thailand.

Although the basic trends of the fighting can be confirmed by various sources—including international relief agency officers operating along the frontier—accurate details have been difficult to obtain.

Thai authorities banned Western journalists from key areas of the frontier. Overall casualty figures, although believed to be high among civilians, have been impossible to ascertain because most of the fighting has taken place inside Cambodia, where access is limited.

The Thai-Cambodian

border is poorly defined, making Thai claims that Vietnamese troops have intruded into its territory difficult to assess. Thai and Vietnamese artillerymen have, however, dueling across the frontier and ground troops have clashed along the frontier.

Q: How do Thailand and Vietnam officially view the conflict?

A: Thailand has accused the Vietnamese of "genocide" against Cambodian civilians, of seeking a confrontation with the Thais and violating its territory. The United States, China and Thailand's Southeast Asian allies have echoed such accusations.

Vietnam claims its troops are moving not against innocent civilians but against hard-core guerrillas inside Cambodian territory. Hanoi has accused Thailand of harboring Khmer Rouge and other resistance groups on its soil.

Q: How can one assess the claims of the opposing sides?

A: China, and possibly other countries, have funneled large amounts of weaponry through Thailand to the K1½y4—a Zher resistance groups over the past four years.

The Soviet-backed Vietnamese have shelled and burned down border encampments housing large civilian populations. But these camps are under the control of the various resistance groups. About 200,000 Cambodians live near the Thai-Cambodian border. Some are committed to helping the anti-Vietnamese resistance; others are merely border traders and farmers.

International aid officials stress that armed Cambodian guerrillas have not crossed into Thailand since the latest Vietnamese drive began. But in the past, the guerrillas, when pressed hard by the Vietnamese, have been known to cache their arms inside Cambodia and cross the border as "civilian refugees" seeking humanitarian aid.

Q: What is likely to happen next in the guerrilla war?

A: The current fighting is unquestionably the most intense but there have been major Vietnamese drives followed by months of minor clashes, probes and sporadic shelling. This pattern may reassert itself.

Although indications are that the resistance groups have been badly mauled this dry season, veteran analysts point out that one simply cannot eradicate 40,000 guerrillas operating in difficult terrain over a short period.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—Vietnam said Tuesday that U.S. electronic reconnaissance aircraft made more than 20 sorties over its territorial waters during the first three months of the year for "spying and intimidation purposes."

Special Brews Commemorate Prohibition's End 50 Years Ago

By JOHN C. GIVEN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In San Francisco, drinkers are raising glasses of Old Foghorn while in upstate New York, they're sipping something called Jubilee Porter — all to celebrate today's 50th anniversary of the end of Prohibition and the return of beer.

The occasion is being marked by small breweries around the country that have made limited quantities of special beers.
In New Orleans, brewmaster Tim Stover said the Dixie Brewing Co. has made Jubilee Commemorative Lager because the day Prohibition ended "the motto was 'Happy Days are Here Again' and we want to remember that."

"We'll celebrate it right on schedule. We'll just draw it right out of the tank," he said. "I'll have about 150 barrels ... we'll put it in bottles and kegs and when it's gone its gone. And in 50 years, we'll make another one."

Fritz Maytag, brewmaster and president of San Francisco's Anchor Brewing Co., and Stuart Wilson, brewmaster of the Fred Koch Brewery in Dunkirk, N.Y., said the idea for commemorative brews came up in casual conversation during a trade meeting.

"All of a sudden, it hit us that it would be 50 years exactly since beer came back," said Maytag. "We decided it must be distinctive and very limited to show the ability of little breweries to make special beers."

"What have we got if we don't have diversity and flexibility and fun and quality? If we have all these things against the big breweries, why not celebrate the fact and do it?"

On April 7, 1933, after 14 years during which consumption of alcoholic beverages was illegal in the United States, a constitutional amendment permitted the sale of beer. Old-timers still remember it as "the day beer came back," according to Maytag.

Other laws liberalizing consumption of alcoholic spirits followed, while the American love for beer grew. But through the years, big changes have come to the brewing industry, bringing what critics call a vast homogenization of taste and style.

In 1935, 750 companies produced 45 million barrels of beer. Last year, according to the Washington, D.C.-based U.S. Brewers Association, there were only 45 breweries left — producing 179.2 million barrels. One barrel equals 31 U.S. gallons, or 313 liters.

Two companies — Anheuser-Busch and Miller — produced 55 percent of all beer consumed in the United States, while the top six producers made 89 percent, according to the trade journal Modern Brewery Age.

The trend toward bigness continues, with many of the surviving small breweries fighting to preserve a long tradition and love of the brewer's craft.

Maytag said he is making 30 barrels of Old Foghorn Barley Wine, "a strong slightly sweet and very, very aromatic aroma."

Wilson said porter, a dark, full-bodied brew, was first imported to the United States in the latter half of the 18th century but fell from popularity.

"We thought porter would be a particularly good example of a beer not generally available today which was in keeping with a small commemoration of the repeal of Prohibition," Wilson said. "It's almost a forgotten beer."

The brewery expects to produce about 80 barrels of Jubilee Porter.

"I'm not approaching it as a commercial exercise," Wilson said. "It's a fun thing for a small brewery, because I can't think of anyone other than a small traditional brewery who would bother producing just 1,000 cases."

Used Knife, Water To Thwart Attack

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An elderly Charlotte woman stabbed a would-be assailant with his own knife Wednesday, then threw hot water in his face, police said.

The 74-year-old woman, who was not identified, told police the man tried to rape her.

Police arrested George Blackmon, 50, a short time after the incident. Police say the woman identified Blackmon as her assailant. He was charged with attempted rape.

Blackmon was treated at Charlotte Memorial Hospital for a stab wound in his leg.

The woman told police a man came to her home at about 7 a.m., saying he would repair her driveway. The woman, who was home alone, said she let him into the living room while she went into a bedroom to put on a robe.

She said the man followed her and threw her on a bed. She said she struggled with him and managed to grab a knife from his shirt pocket. She said she stabbed him in the leg with it.

The woman told police the attacker then left the bedroom and ordered her to make him some coffee. The woman said she put a pot of water on the stove to boil and threw it in his face when it got hot.

The woman ran to a neighbor's house and called police. Police arrested Blackmon when they spotted him walking along the road with his leg bleeding.

Say Tax Refunds Top $24 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax refunds to 33.7 million couples and individuals total more than $24 billion so far this year, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The average refund during the first 13 weeks of the year was $714, compared with $703 during the same period a year ago. The average for all of 1982 was $769, a mark that is likely to be matched this year since refund figures tend to get larger as the filing deadline nears. The average refund processed last week was $751.

IRS said that 56.8 million individual returns have been filed this year, down 1.2 percent from the pace at this time a year ago. About 96 million returns are expected this year, up 1 million from 1982.

Brasilia Becomes Hometown To A Million People

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer
BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — For a million people, Brasilia is now their hometown. It was not always thus, even though the modern inland capital of Brazil will be 23 years old this month.

Brasilienses, as the inhabitants are called, have settled into a life on what a quarter century ago was a prairie of red dust in summer and red mud in winter. They no longer stampede the airport on Fridays to flee for weekends on the beaches of Rio de Janeiro or the bustling metropolis of Sao Paulo as they did in Brasilia's early years as the capital.

"People now have families here. Instead of going to Rio or Sao Paulo, relatives come to Brasilia," said Luiz Barbosa, a Brazilian journalist who has lived here for 20 years.

It wasn't too long ago that Brasilia, which formally opened April 21, 1960, was the capital in name only, a place where people came to work during the week but cleared out on Fridays.

The birth of the inland capital was said to be the subject of a clergyman's dream in 1883, an idea included in the first constitution in 1891, and a presidential campaign promise by the late Juscelino Kubitschek in 1954. Kubitschek won the election and become known as the president who built the new capital.

After the city officially became the capital, foreign embassies and government workers were reluctant to leave the old capital, Rio de Janeiro. Ten years of foot-dragging led President Emílio Médici, one of the military leaders who took over in 1964, to insist that all embassies and federal agencies relocate to the new city, 600 miles from the Atlantic coast on Brazil's rolling central plateau.

Civil servants were asked to volunteer to come here in return for hefty salary increases and tickets home on weekends. The embassies, threatened with losing their accreditation, moved their operations but in most cases left behind consulates and friends often they went back to visit.

Flights to Rio were fully booked early every week.

Now, said a clerk at the Vasp airline ticket counter, "our flights to Rio are not usually filled."

Brasilia now has a population of 1.35 million, about half of whom live on the outskirts in what are called the "satellite" cities.

The central area of Brasilia, laid out in the shape of an airplane by architect Lucio Costa, still looks deserted. It is a driver's dream as Costa planned, but a stroller's nightmare. Brasilia is made up of wide streets and cloverleaves originally designed to reduce accidents, but it lacks sidewalks and areas for people to gather.

People go by car or bus from homes on the city's artificial lake or apartments in the wings of the airplane design to their workplaces in the modernistic government buildings designed by Brazil's Oscar Niemeyer, a student of the famed French architect Le Corbusier.

"If you like the out-of-door activity, Brasilia is a haven," said U.S. Ambassador Langhorne Anthony Motley. "But if your bag is sitting in some posh discotheque or listening to a string quartet, forget it."

The people who came here from Rio say they miss the city's Atlantic beaches. The city planners responded to that by installing a pool with artificial waves in the city park. Most Rio natives claim it is not the same, but every half-hour on the half-hour a machine churns out waves in the concrete and tile pool.

Other Brasilia critics point to the isolation from other cities, the lack of culture and the costs to build the capital.

"There was absolutely nothing," said Octavio Bomfim, head of the international section of the Brazilian news service, EBN. "They brought everything in by plane, and I guess you can say inflation in Brazil started in Brasilia."

The price tag is a government secret. The birth of Brasilia launched an intensive move to build roads linking the capital to the rest of the vast but still largely undeveloped country. Developments sprang up along the routes. And Brasilia became known as the place where "John Nobody" could come and make a fortune.

"It was a kind of frontier mentality," Bomfim said.

"Now it is different. I know that I am in the center of power here. All decisions are made here. In Rio and Sao Paulo you have rumors."

Tony Longrigg, press spokesman at the British Embassy, said he has no reason to leave the capital.

"My family and I have a house here, and I play golf on the weekends."

Barbosa summed it up another way:

"There's been a generation here, you can climb in your career, and it's a miracle."

Cites Disaster Value Of CD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say their request for a big increase in Civil Defense spending would help the American people cope with natural disasters as well as with a possible nuclear attack.

Louis O. Giuffrida, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, and retired Gen. Richard G. Stilwell, deputy undersecretary of defense for policy, testified before a House Armed Services subcommittee.

The $253.5 million request for fiscal 1984, nearly $106 million larger than the current Civil Defense budget, is part of the administration's seven-year, $2.4 billion program to upgrade emergency preparedness.

The program places new emphasis on evacuating civilian populations from likely targets of a Soviet attack. Giuffrida and Stilwell said the same kind of planning could save lives in cases of hurricanes, floods and other natural disasters as well as accidents at nuclear plants.

Reminds State Revenue Needs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning that most states are facing huge budget deficits, a spokesman for the National Governors' Association is urging reauthorization of the general federal revenue sharing program.

"As of January 1983, 41 of the 50 states are facing revenue shortfalls totaling $7.9 billion below their original estimates," Vermont Gov. Richard Snelling told the Senate Government Affairs subcommittee on intergovernmental relations.

His testimony joined the almost unanimous appeals to Congress this year for renewal of the 1972 general revenue sharing law that expires Sept. 30.

King Kong On Empire State Again; Droops

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A partly inflated King Kong drooped from the Empire State Building early today like a shapeless garbage bag, hardly a good imitation of the ape that first terrorized movie audiences 50 years ago.

An eight-story fabric replica of the giant ape was supposed to be inflated with cold air Wednesday night and come to rest with its arm looped around a mooring mast atop the 102-story building.

But engineers ran into problems and could only partially inflate the 3,000-pound balloon.

"It's a very slow process that's never been done before," said Charles Guigno, director of building operations. "You put it on paper but when it comes to reality you run into problems."

After several delays, workers began to inflate the balloon at 3 a.m. today, but a twist in the fabric made it a stop-and-go operation. They said part of the problem was that numbered straps used to position the balloon were assembled out of sequence.

Dan Wolfson, spokesman for Robert Keith & Co., which created the $100,000 balloon, said before dawn, "They're raising his right arm and raising his head. All the ropes are in place, and mainly he just needs air."

Putting the ape-like balloon on the building is part of a stunt to publicize the 50th anniversary of the movie "King Kong." It is also a bid by the Empire State Building to attract tourists and by the San Diego company that makes "inflatable product replicas" — gargantuan balloons, soda bottles, beer cans and the like — to attract business.

The classic film, starring Fay Wray, retold the beauty and the beast legend and ended with Kong falling from what was then the world's tallest building.

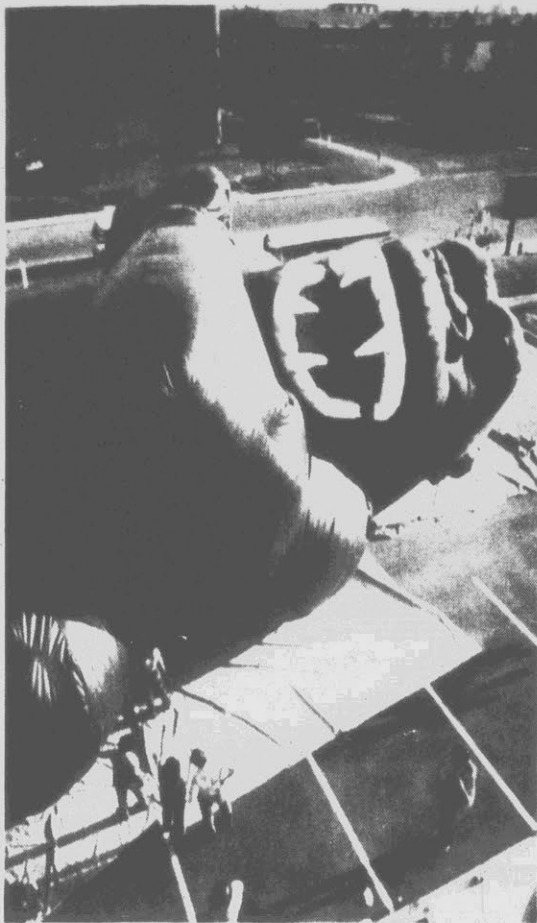

Workmen struggled through the night to prepare the giant ape for morning ceremonies, including the unveiling of a plaque in Kong's honor, a display of King Kong memorabilia and the re-creation of the movie's ending, complete with two biplanes hired to fly around the Kong balloon.

"We'll try to create a realistic scene, but not so realistic that he'll fall off the building," said Robert Keith Vicino, owner of Robert Keith & Co.

Vicino said the 84-foot balloon will remain atop the building for a week and then tour the world. Vicino hopes to place it atop other famous buildings, such as the Eiffel Tower.

As workmen hoisted the balloon up to the 88th floor where its feet will rest, high school students stood on the 86th floor observation deck chanting "We want Kong!"

Robert Tinker, the building manager said, "We hope the problems getting King Kong back to his original perch will be more than worth it. They started their relationship 50 years ago and it's only right that we put ourself out to get them back together."

Wind Ensemble In Free Concert

The East Carolina University Symphonic Wind Ensemble, conducted by Herbert L. Carter and guest conductor Ronald Payne, will present a free concert open to the public at 8:15 p.m. Sunday in Wright Auditorium.

The Wind Ensemble, comprised of nearly 50 young instrumentalists, will perform half a dozen compositions by as many different composers in this spring concert.

The ensemble's regular conductor, Carter, will conduct the first part of the program, opening with Peter Mennin's "Canzona." This will be followed by Fisher Tull's "Sketches on a Tudor Psalm" and William Alwyn's "Fanfare for a Joyful Occasion" (for brass and percussion).

The next selection will be "After a Gentle Rain" by Anthony Iannaccone, which includes two airs, "The Dark Green Glistens With Old Reflections" and "Sparkling Air Bursts With Dancing Sunlight."

The work to be conducted by guest conductor Ronald Payne, a graduate teaching assistant, will be Charles Gounod's "Petite Symphonie" in two movements, adagio and allegro, and scherzo. Performers in this piece will be Nancy Bailey, flute; Beth Shelton and Keith Hall, oboe; Todd Barnhart and Amanda Leon-Guerrero, clarinet; Mark Deal and Larry Hobbs, horn, and Matt Morris and Todd Stone, bassoon.

The concert will conclude with John Paynter's arrangement of Malcolm Arnold's "Four Scottish Dances."

Arnold, a contemporary English composer (born 1921), enjoys the reputation in his native land as the most uninhibited of all of England's living composers, both for what he says in music and how he says it.

His "Four Scottish Dances" were composed in 1975. One of the airs is based on a Robert Burns tune, the other three are original melodies by Arnold.

The concert will be broadcast Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America" program.

"She wears everything and the kitchen sink," asked why she would appear in a soap opera after a career that includes comedy, movies and Broadway, Miss Burnett admitted the new role was unusual for her, but said it would be a learning experience.

"Any time you do something different, and you do it with professionals and people as good as this, and you learn, it helps your career because it helps you," she added.

"Let me put it this way," Miss Burnett said in an interview to be broadcast Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America" program.

"She wears everything and the kitchen sink," asked why she would appear in a soap opera after a career that includes comedy, movies and Broadway, Miss Burnett admitted the new role was unusual for her, but said it would be a learning experience.

A Spinoff, But New 'Casablanca' Series Has A Lot Going For It

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly everything in television is imitative, a spinoff, rip-off or dust-off of something else. Programs come from books, movies, or TV in other countries. But hardly anything is original.

So why the pious objections and fuss over NBC's "Casablanca" series, starring David Soul, which begins its spring trial Sunday night? Sure it's a popular cult film, its fans know lines by heart, and its star, Humphrey Bogart, personifies the moral man who can separate good from evil and romance from realism.

But, despite "Casablanca" being ingrained into our culture, is this adaptation any different from "M-A-S-H" or "The Odd Couple," movies turned into TV series? And great ones, at that.

Do you remember this season's reject series "Gold Monkey" and "Bring 'em Back Alive"? Well, they were cheap imitations of "Raiders of the Lost Ark." NBC's "Casablanca," at least, isn't cheap or campy. Its problem is that Sunday's opening episode just isn't tremendously exciting.

Dramatically, it has intrigue and mystery, but the story is slow and standard TV, sort of a "Gunsmoke Goes to Morocco." Still, it has potential because of those wonderful characters, period settings and ... Paris, "we'll always have Paris." Hey, how'd that get in here?

David Wolper, fresh from his successful "Thorn Birds," produced "Casablanca." He was vacationing with his friend Grant Tinker two years ago, when Tinker told him about being offered the job of NBC chairman. After saying he'd be crazy to accept, Wolper agreed to do something for NBC.

The inspiration came during a "60 Minutes" segment on "Casablanca." Wolper called Tinker, who was watching the same show, and an idea was reborn.

"It's not another lawyer, cop or hospital show," says Wolper. "I liked the clear morality of 1941, when you had no doubt about good and evil. There was a lot of idealism, people fighting for a cause. People are searching for morality today."

The series is set in German-controlled Morocco, mostly at Rick's Cafe Americain, before the United States entered World War II and before Ingrid Bergman's character, with all the stinkin' gin joints in the world, walked into Rick's saloon.

"I wanted the tension of another woman in Paris playing against every woman Rick meets," says Wolper.

What works well here is the foreign, 1940s atmosphere. It's almost as if the ambience has been lifted from an old movie. Wolper found the original set plans from the 1942 "Casablanca" and lovingly re-created it, adding only one staircase and using the original bar and doors.

Everything was filmed in muted colors and tinged in shadows. Rick's cafe is filled with smoke, and Wolper even considered shooting in black and white, but "the audience would have been disappointed," he says.

Now the big question. Will viewers be disappointed by Soul, formerly of "Starsky and Hutch"? Yes, if they're looking for Bogart. Probably not, if they get into the spirit of the series. "I didn't cast Humphrey Bogart. I cast Rick," says Wolper, who admits force-feeding NBC with his choice. "David's a very mysterious person, much like Rick."

With Soul's hair darkened, he smoothly captures the gallantry of Rick but not as easily the bitterness and cynicism that was naturally Bogart's. There's also too much caricature in Soul's performance, with his pursed lips, dangling cigarette and bitten-off emotions.

Scatman Crothers as Sam, Hector Elizondo as Col. Renault and Reuben Bar Yotam as Ferrari, are stronger, but their characters are not cultural role models, like Bogart's Rick.

All in all, "Casablanca" is a better-than-average series, which achieved something by not being offensive.

"I didn't want it to look like 'Casablanca Night on 'The Love Boat,'" says Wolper.

It doesn't, and that's more than you can say about the first "Casablanca" imitation, an ABC series in the mid-1950s.

Thousands Of Canada Geese Spent Winter In Cold

By PETER COY
Associated Press Writer
SENECA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — In a departure from migration patterns dating from the last Ice Age, thousands of Canada geese have spent recent winters in such chilly northern climes as New York, Illinois and even southern Ontario.

some exasperated hunters and birdwatchers in the South are blaming Northern states for "shortstopping" their geese by hunting them too heavily or planting grain to lure them.

Gene Hocutt, manager of the Montezuma National Wildlife Refuge near Seneca Falls, recently called the failure of the geese to fly south in the winter a "profound change occurring in just a photoinstant of geologic time."

The migratory changes have been dramatic in places.

On upstate New York's Cayuga Lake, aerial surveyors counted a hundred or so Canada geese in midwinter of 1970. Ten years later there were 11,000 geese, 23,000 this past winter.

To the south, North Carolina's Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, once the winter home of 130,000 Canada geese, had just 14,000 this winter, manager Larry Ditto said.

"People are grasping at every straw possible" to try to reverse the trend, which has forced motels and hunting guides out of business, Ditto said.

In a largely futile effort to re-establish Southern flocks, several thousand Canada geese have been captured, crated and trucked to Arkansas, West Virginia and Georgia.

In the Atlantic flyway, the main factor in the change is corn — the favorite food of the big, raucous black-and-gray birds. Modern farm machinery generally leaves behind as much as four or five bushels of corn an acre.

Corn was planted extensively on the Delmarva peninsula east of Chesapeake Bay after World War II, and that is where most of the Canada geese winter today — 570,000 in Maryland alone last winter.

Now the same thing is happening in upstate New York's Cayuga and Seneca counties, where acreage devoted to grain corn roughly doubled between 1975 and 1980.

From a relative handful 15 years ago, New York State had 84,000 Canada geese last winter, more than any other state except Maryland.

"These birds are lazy. They're going to stay just as far north as they can find food and open water," Hocutt said.

"It looks just like a chicken yard used to look after you spread the grain around," said James Caslick, a Cornell University professor of wildlife management.

In the Mississippi flyway, the northward trend began earlier and a few thousand geese have been trickling south again, but the situation is "pretty much the same," said Ken Gamble of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Columbia, Mo.

An entirely separate factor is the explosive growth in year-round flocks.

About 5,000 Canada geese live year-round in New York City's Westchester County suburbs and another 5,000 are scattered through Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, estimates William French of the Fish and Wildlife Service's Boston office.

Living mostly in residential areas and protected from hunting, the geese are multiplying without control. They uproot lawns and fairways, clog swimming pool drains with their feathers, foul tennis courts with droppings and frighten children.

their hands."

One of their favorite winter spots is a large, unfrozen man-made lake on the grounds of Pepsico Inc. headquarters in Westchester County.

"They've become professional beggars," Pepsico spokesman William Griffith said. Two years ago, state and federal wildlife officials rounded up 500 geese during summer molting season when they couldn't fly.

They trucked them south, leaving a modest 24 behind.

But the numbers quickly reached 500 again. To scare them off, maintenance workers patrol the 140-acre grounds and shoot blanks, Griffith said.

Southern states would like to have such problems.

CP&L Raises Cost Estimates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. has raised the estimated cost of its Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant, a move that could boost consumers' power bills.

The new estimate of $4.4 billion is a jump of $1.1 billion and increases the project's cost by about one-third.

"There's no question that if a plant costs more to build, then rates would have to be higher than they otherwise would," said Robert Fischbach, executive director of the Public Staff of the North Carolina Utilities Commission.

The Public Staff represents consumers in rate cases.

Fischbach said a one-third increase in construction costs means the cost of operating the plant would increase by nearly the same amount. Rates are based on a number of factors, including plant construction costs, fuel and labor expenses.

The cost jump was detailed in a company filing with the Securities Exchange Commission.

When the project was announced in 1971, the company put the cost for building the four nuclear units at $1 billion. Since then, the cost has risen while the company has cut the project to two units, citing reduced projections for power demands.

CP&L's experience is not unique, Fischbach said.

"By and large we're seeing big increases" in the cost of nuclear plant construction, he said.

CP&L spokesman Mac Harris said various factors contributed to the increase, including a decision to delay the completion date for each unit by a year. Unit I is scheduled for completion in 1986 and Unit II in 1990.

He said the increase also reflected higher expected costs for materials, equipment and other items.

In addition, he said, construction financing costs rose because of a ruling last year by the Utilities Commission not allowing the company to recover all these costs through rates. The commission refused to allow CP&L to recover through rates the full cost of financing the plant and other construction costs.

Says One Cost Is Overlooked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $1.77 trillion for defense that the Reagan administration proposes over the next five years could fall about $258 billion short of what military spending will cost, a private analyst says.

About $230 billion of the budget problem comes because the administration has not taken into account the higher maintenance and operating costs of the sophisticated new weapons that will be introduced into the U.S. arsenal, said William W. Kaufmann of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Besides the adding operating costs, procurement expenses probably will rise $28 billion above estimates, he said.

Kaufmann commented in the defense chapter of a Brookings Institution analysis, of the fiscal 1984 budget and at a meeting with reporters.

FOCUS

A Bookish Birthday

In 1833—150 years ago—the people of Peterborough, New Hampshire established the first free, tax-supported library in the world. Before that time, most circulating libraries had been open only to paid subscribers. The fees they paid went to the purchase of books which members could then borrow. But by the early 1800s, communities throughout the new nation were beginning to require local publicly-supported elementary schools. To the taxpayers of Peterborough, their public library was a logical extension of the public school. This idea caught on quickly, and, in 1853, the Smithsonian Institution brought hundreds of librarians to New York City for the first conference on public libraries in the U.S.

Don't let a seemingly easy only one poor play to turn a large profit into a loss.

The auction was well conceived. Although he had a fair hand, North could do no more than bid two spades over West's intervention.

South realized that game was a real possibility if he found partner with values in diamonds, so he made a trial bid in that suit. North was delighted to accept the in-itation.

West led the king of clubs and continued with the ace.

Declarer ruffed the second trumps to learn of the 4-1 break. Now declarer could not draw the rest of the trumps before driving out the ace of diamonds, because he would have to exhaust his trumps and the defenders would be able to cash club tricks.

So declarer abandoned trumps and started on diamonds. West ducked the first diamond, won the second and gave his partner a ruff. Since declarer could not avoid losing a heart trick, he went down one.

Declarer should have realized that the only danger to his contract was a bad trump break, which would cause him to lose control of the hand. But there was a simple way to retain control. Instead of ruffing the second club, declarer should simply have discarded the heart that he would have to lose anyway. Now there was no way that his trump holding could be weakened. If West persisted with another club, declarer would ruff in dummy. If West shifted, declarer could win and draw trumps. Since declarer would still have a trump left after all the enemy trumps had been extracted, he could then knock out the ace of diamonds in peace and comfort to assure his contract.

Two Collisions On Wednesday

An estimated $1,650 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted when a Pitt County Sheriff's Department car driven by Willie Ivan Harris of Route 2, Greenville, and a car driven by Kenneth Ed Jones of Kings Row Apartments collided about 11:50 a.m. at the intersection of Fifth and 10th streets.

Damage from the collision was set at $500 to the Jones car and $700 to the county-owned car.

Elbert Williams of 209 N. Summit St. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:05 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Fourth and Jarvis streets.

Police said the Williams car collided with a vehicle driven by Sharon Ann Goodson of 3000 Golden Road, causing $50 damage to the Williams car and $400 damage to the Goodson vehicle.

Freed From Cuba Prison

BACK FROM CUBA — Sandra Mecier kisses the ground as Regla Blasco-Carmona (right) drops to her knees and Elisa Steedly steps off a plane at Key West after the three were released from prison in Cuba. (AP Laserphoto)

By LAUREN J. CRYER
Associated Press Writer
KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Three American women whose "joy ride" to Jamaica landed them in Cuban prison for nearly a year fell to their knees and kissed the ground as friends and relatives welcomed them home.

"I just wanted to be home," Regla Blasco-Carmona, 17, said Wednesday as she hugged her daughter, Jenika. "God gave me the prayers that I've been asking for the last 11 months."

Miss Blasco, Sandra Mecier, 27, and Elisa Steedly, 17, all of Key West, had been jailed in Cuba since their arrests last April 15 on drug-trafficking charges.

They returned to Key West International Airport around 5:30 p.m. Wednesday on a private jet arranged by the office of U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., who helped arrange their release.

The women had told Weicker's wife, Camille, that they were on a trip to Jamaica when the man piloting the boat brought marijuana aboard and headed toward Cuba.

"She said she just went for a joy ride and didn't know what was going on," said Mrs. Mecier's half-sister, Gloria Perez, 46. "I think she's learned a great lesson ... we never dreamed she'd be in prison in Cuba."

Weicker had sought release of the women and 13 American men during a recent five-day trip to Cuba to talk with President Fidel Castro about marine sentences.

Weicker said his office received word last week that the women would be freed. Freedom for the men, most jailed on narcotics and drug trafficking charges, was still under consideration. Weicker aide Brendan Fitzsimmons said Wednesday in Washington.

"I'm glad I'm here with my family where I belong," said Mrs. Mecier, tears streaming down her face. "Being an American in a foreign country is not easy. We were told very nasty things. I tried killing myself."

Her daughter, Jennifer, 8, clung to her as she faced television cameras. Dressed in a frilly blue dress, Jennifer had said she was "gonna go up and hug" her mother as soon as she saw her.

"I kiss your picture every day. I hope and pray to be with you soon," Mrs. Mecier had written to the youngster from her prison, just 90 miles from this southernmost tip of Florida. "Please remember me, I love you so with all my heart."

The women were whisked into a U.S. Customs office for nearly 20 minutes immediately after their arrival. When they stepped out, they were mobbed by a crowd of about 60 friends and family members.

"I won't let you go. I love you so much," cried Kathy McCall, 21, Miss Steedly's sister. Mrs. McCall had brought her sister a fast-food hamburger, but during the wait at the airport — as long as 8½ hours for some relatives — she said she had to go get a fresh one "because the kids ate the others."

Mrs. Mecier's mother, Clara Valdes, said she was going to take her home "and cook her up some good meals."

She showed a letter her daughter had written, with a tiny cross drawn on the inside envelope flap and the words: "Keep your head high and trust in God, he will help me through."

"We had prayers all over for her," said Mrs. Mecier's sister, Brenda Valdes. "I really believed God would bring her home."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Fluctuations in Blood Pressure

I decided to apply for insurance and was sent to a doctor for a heart examination. My blood pressure was so high that I was turned down for insurance. My own doctor took my blood pressure the next day and it was normal. It has stayed normal. I didn't seem to be very nervous when I was in the strange doctor's office. So I can't understand why this happened. — Mr. T.R., Pa. Dear Mr. R.:

Even in the absence of extreme nervousness or anxiety, a physical examination by a strange doctor can call forth a fluctuation in blood pressure readings.

Such a temporary high blood pressure is known as labile hypertension. This refers to the temporary changes in blood pressure levels in the absence of any underlying physical problem.

Almost everybody has at some time felt a sudden pounding of the heart and quickening of the heartbeat during moments of emotional excitement or distress. If the blood pressure were taken at that time, there undoubtedly would be changes even in people whose blood pressure is normal.

Visiting a new doctor is a stressful situation. It is for this reason that many doctors with psychological insight and understanding spend an extra amount of time with a new patient in establishing a relationship and quieting the tension.

A few minutes of extra time in casual conversation is an excellent way for doctors to modify those tensions. It is interesting that all people, children, adolescents and adults, have some overlay of anxiety and fear when first making contact with a new physician. The art of medicine includes the sensitive awareness of such anxiety. The added time taken to assuage it establishes the groundwork for a good relationship that pays off with many important dividends.

There is no reason why you should assume that the temporary change in blood pressure has any special significance, especially after being reassured about this by your own physician.

Is it possible for a thermometer at home or in the hospital to carry infection from one person to another? — Miss M.A., Ind. Dear Miss A.:

Of course it is possible. But it can only occur when the temperatures are taken by mouth and when thermometers are passed from one person to another without careful washing.

Ordinary thermometers in the home should be carefully washed with soap and lukewarm water. Remember, too, that the instrument should be carefully cleaned so that infectious germs will not be harbored and transmitted to other members of the family.

In hospitals, most thermometers are disposable. Each patient has his own and cross-contamination does not occur. Also most hospitals have electronic thermometers, the tips of which are used and immediately discarded.

ASSAULT RESPONSE
BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — President Nicolae Ceausescu is defending his country's tax on citizens seeking to emigrate, and says the United States has no right to retaliate with economic sanctions against Romania.

Minority Pupil Count Growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The percentage of minority students in Roman Catholic schools has nearly doubled in the last 12 years, while the percentage of non-Catholics has increased four-fold, the National Catholic Educational Association says.

The education group, opening its annual convention here, also reported a continued slide in enrollment in Catholic schools, which now have 3,026,000 students, or 68,000 fewer than last year.

The report found that minority students now occupy 20.4 percent of all the seats in Catholic classrooms, up from 18.4 percent in 1980-81 and from 10.8 percent in 1970-71.
