'We Have Started Another Era'

Shuttle Returns Home

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Challenger, ship No. 2 in America's spacefaring fleet, came home Saturday from a break-in flight of 2.1 million miles. More than 100,000 cheered the pinpoint landing on a sun-splashed desert runway.

Paul J. Weitz, a retired Navy captain, and Air Force Lt. Col. Karol Bobko guided the ship to a centerline landing, on time to the predicted second. It was 42 seconds after 10:53 a.m. in California.

Astronauts Story Musgrave and Donald Peterson were only passengers for the final phase of Challenger's five-day, 80-orbit flight, which would have been an unqualified success had not a satellite gone astray after it was ejected from the ship.

Musgrave and Peterson spent 3 hours, 47 minutes in the ship's open cargo bay on Thursday, making the first U.S. spacewalk in nine years as they practiced techniques that will be needed when the shuttle goes up to retrieve and repair satellites.

The foursome left the shuttle a half-hour after landing and walked around the ship, which appeared little worse for wear.

"Challenger is one hell of a flying machine," said Weitz, at a post-landing ceremony attended by Gov. George Deukmejian of California. "Being here today and having you folks be here kind of makes us feel a little bit like the Academy Awards, we stand up front and take all the bows and credit."

Bobko called the flight "a fantastic voyage" and Musgrave added: "We hope we have started another era in the space program by getting Challenger off to a good start."

And Peterson: "We had really a good time. We had a really fine mission. We really enjoyed ourselves."

The problem that marred Challenger's debut lay not with the spacecraft but with its cargo.

The $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite carried aloft by Challenger was ejected properly at the end of the ship's seventh orbit on Monday, launch day. But the satellite's attached

ECU Moves Graduation To Ficklen

By ANGELA LINGERFELT

East Carolina University Chancellor John M. Howell said Saturday the school's graduation ceremonies next month will be held in Ficklen Stadium to allow more guests to attend.

The May 6 ceremony had originally been scheduled for Minges Coliseum, which seats only 6,900. Graduating seniors were each issued two tickets and the opportunity to request more.

C.C. Rowe, chairman of the commencement committee, said the decision to move the graduation outdoors came in response to numerous complaints about the limited seating.

"There was quite a bit of student discontent concerning the location, Minges, because of limited seating. Dr. Howell, after considering alternatives for several days, decided late Friday afternoon to move it to Ficklen," Rowe said.

There hd been reports that students were circulating petitions protesting the fact that many of their relatives and friends would not be able to attend the indoor ceremony.

"I didn't see a petition, but had heard a couple of students were circulating one and were going to give it to us next week," Rowe commented.

School officials had planned to hold graduation ceremonies in Minges because of plans to install a new drainage system and to resod the stadium's playing surface by footbal season.

"We thought the work would have begun on the field by now, but there have been delays. And students do of course want to hold it in a place where they can invite as many people as they want," Dr. Howell said.

Only the south side of the 35,000-seat stadium will be used in order to keep the field from being torn up.

"All graduates and guests will be seated on one side. The only thing that will be on the field is the platform party," Rowe said.

The coliseum will be used as an alternate site in the event of rain. Rowe said the tickets that were issued will be used to relieve overcrowding in case of bad weather.

Howell added that the ceremony was scheduled "in the morning hours when we are not as apt to have rain as in the afternoons."

During the ceremonies, ECU will award the first honorary degrees in the school's history to former Chancellor Leo Jenkins and former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, who will deliver the commencement address.

Lowly Shad Gets His Due In Grifton This Week

GRIFTON — The double-barreled Shad Festival celebration will crank up in Grifton this week as the annual event that recognizes the return of the migratory fish to Contentnea Creek gets under way.

April 13-17 are the official dates for this year's festival with "A Double-Barreled Celebration" as the theme, based on Grifton's centennial celebration in 1983 and the annual return of the shad.

Over 30 events designed for all ages are scheduled at this 13th annual Shad Festival, according to Janet Haseley of Grifton, publicity chairman for the festival.

Included are two fishing contests, the Hickory Shad competition, which closes at noon Saturday, and the Bass Fishing Tournament, scheduled for Saturday. The deadline for entries is Wednesday.

Tournaments in softball, tennis, golf, horseshoes and archery will also be featured. Archery and horseshoes will be held Saturday afternoon and no pre-registration is required. The softball tournament will begin Wednesday and the tennis tournament will begin Friday. The golf tournament will be held all day Saturday.

The Fishy Tales story-telling competition is scheduled for Thursday at 8 p.m. at Grifton School and is open to all "tall-tale-tellers" in the area, noted Mrs. Haseley.

On Friday the Shad Festival Queen for 1983 will be selected at 8 p.m. at Grifton School at the annual Shad Queen Pageant.

The centennial costume and the beard contests will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. There is no fee for entering any of these contests.

There is also no entry fee for the two-day art show and ribbons will be awarded in several age groups in various media. The art show will be held Saturday and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m. at the Grifton Civic Center.

The crafts show will also be open from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday and 12 noon-6 p.m. Sunday. The show will be on the lawn of First Citizens Bank.

The Grifton Historical Museum will be open Saturday and Sunday also, with displays and demonstrations of traditional rug hooking on the museum's 200-year-old Blizzard Loom. A special display of antique dolls will carry out the centennial theme of this year's festival.

From 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturday will be prime time for

Massachusetts Demos Pick Mondale

By STEVEN A. COHEN
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale topped five other Democratic presidential candidates Saturday and concern over unemployment came in a strong second in a straw poll of Massachusetts Democrats at the party's state convention.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California was third in the balloting designed to get an early sampling of preferences for the party's 1984 election.

The strong showing for the jobs issue shows "we can deliver," said Arthur Osborne, president of the state AFL-CIO, which promoted the write-in vote for jobs. "Now, when the candidates fly across the country, I think their co-pilot will be jobs."

The tally was 1,013 votes for Mondale, or 29.3 percent of the 3,453 votes cast. Not all of the 3,830 delegates attending the convention voted.

The number of delegates voting for jobs rather than a candidate was 884, or 25.6 percent. Cranston followed with 582 votes, 16.9 percent.

Then came Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, 528 votes or 15.3 percent; Sen. Gary Hart, Colorado, 362 votes or 10.5 percent; Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, 17 votes or 0.5 percent, and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, 12 votes or 0.3 percent. Fifty delegates, or 1.4 percent, voted no preference, while 5 delegates, or .1 percent, voted for others.

State Democratic Secretary Michael Connolly, one of several state party leaders who endorsed the former vice president, said the vote showed Mondale's "ability to put it all together."

And U.S. Rep. James Shannon, D-Mass., said Mondale's showing was the "first clear indication where Sen. (Edward M.) Kennedy's support will go."

Kennedy, D-Mass, who had generally been regarded the front-runner, announced last December that he would not pursue the party's nomination for president.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who is neutral, said it's "hard to say" what the poll meant for the candidates' campaigns, "but I think if you did reasonably well, it helps. But it's got to shake out a little bit; this is just the first of many steps along the way."

Both Mondale and Cranston, active campaigners in Massachusetts in recent weeks, had claimed the jobs vote — pushed by local labor leaders — would hurt their chances in the voting.

But after some early hesitation weeks ago, none of the candidates nor state party leaders opposed organized labor's plan for a convention rules amendment permitting the vote for jobs. The amendment carried easily shortly before the poll.

Before the vote, state Democratic Chairman Chester G. Atkins said that "the purpose of the poll is not to pick a winner; it is to establish where the candidates are on the issues."

He described the jobs vote as an effort "by the delegates to ensure that the candidates have a strong commitment to economic renewal."

Five of the candidates — Mondale, Cranston, Glenn, Hart and Askew — were on hand to make speeches before the nearly 4,000 delegates. Hollings sent his wife, Peatsy, citing a change in the speaking schedule and a commitment in Georgia. He showed up before the vote was taken, however.

The non-binding presidential preference poll dominated the state party's "issues" convention. But many of the candidates played down the poll in recent days and played up the issues.

"We are meeting here today ... to shape the issues to define where we want to go with this nation and to provide a leader who will take us there," Mondale said. "I ask you to vote for a president who will provide jobs and justice."

Cranston said his "overriding" goals are "ending the arms race and achieving full employment."

Arthur Osborn, president of the state AFL-CIO, told the estimated 700 labor delegates who attended the morning caucus, "We're going to get our message across, and our issue, and that's jobs."

Eating Death Raises Doubt Over Contests

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Richard Drown choked to death on a doughnut during an eating contest in Newport near Morehead City last Saturday. His death raises doubts for many about the wisdom of who-can-eat-the-most competitions that have been a part of many festivals and fund-raisers throughout the area for some time.

"Yes, indeed, I'm in favor of discontinuing these contests," Dr. Jack Allison, director of emergency services at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said in an interview.

"They have built-in hazards. They're the exaggerated examples of what we call the 'cafe coronary' — choking on food. You're just asking for trouble when you suggest that someone engorge himself so rapidly," Allison said.

"There are two places the food can go — down the esophagus to the stomach or down the trachea or windpipe toward the lungs. If it goes down the esophagus, fine, but if it's down the windpipe, it's either got to be brought up or within four to six minutes the average adult is brain dead of lack of oxygen."

Allison said he understands there were EMT's (emergency medical technicians) on hand during the Newport Pig Cookin' Contest of which the doughnut-eating contest was a part. Their attempts to use the Heimlich techniques (swift compressions of the abdomen administered from behind) were unsuccessful, however.

"The wad of cooked dough that Corporal Drown choked on was probably down past the vocal chords. Plus it was mush and, therefore, hard to bring up by usual emergency measures," Allison said.

"The only possibility would have been to go into a second phase of emergency care, using a laryngoscope (an instrument with a light to visualize the vocal chord area) and Magill forceps (a long grasping instrument) to get the foreign material out. This may not have worked, however, if these tools and properly qualified people had been on hand because, again, what was lodged was a large amount of mush — difficult to bring out.

"My heart goes out to those people who did try to save Drown," Allison went on. "These were real frustrating circumstances. The means they had were just not sufficient and a man in the prime of his life out for good wholesome fun with other people died before their eyes."

Pitt Roads OK'd For Double Rigs

Department of Transportation spokesman Cy Lynn says only two highways in Pitt County have been approved for use by double-trailer trucks — U.S. 258 and U.S. 64.

Lynn said in an interview that DOT will "be doing some fine tuning" on the routes the double trailers will be allowed to use, but at the present time the trucks can use only U.S. 258, which passes through Farmville and the western end of the county, and U.S. 64, which passes through Bethel in the north.

Federal law included in the package that raised gasoline taxes on April 1 broadened the routes that can be used by the longer, wider and heavier truck rigs.

The double trailer trucks, according to Lynn, will be allowed to travel U.S. 258 from the N.C. 24 intersection in Onslow County to the U.S. 64 intersection at Tarboro. The U.S. 64 route runs from Lexington to Williamston.

Lynn said, too, that the big rigs can travel U.S. 17 from the South Carolina line to Virginia, and I-95.

According to Lynn, the entire 768 miles of interstate highways in the state can be used, while 2,631 miles of other roadways have been designated as routes for the big trucks. He said the 3,399 miles of approved roadways amount to 3.7 percent of the total public roads in North Carolina.

Fingerprints

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

What if your child ran away from home or was otherwise missing? The best way to identify him or her would be through fingerprints.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the Greenville Police Department is developing a program for children now. "We're working on a form (a fingerprint card) we can use, then get the program started," he said.

Generally, laws prohibit the fingerprinting of juveniles. A court order is required before persons under 16 years old can be fingerprinted for police purposes.

But Cannon said children can be printed when it is requested by a parent or guardian. "We'll take their fingerprints and turn them right over to the parents. We won't have anything on file," Cannon said.

Although Cannon said "we've only had a couple of requests," he said "I would hope to get the program started within the next month," possibly with the assistance of a civic group.

"We may have a club or organization to sponsor the program and assist ... maybe set up a booth at the mall," he said.

Why have a child fingerprinted? "Say you have a child run away, or a missing child. If the parents have their fingerprints, it would help to easily identify the child," the chief said.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said his department has no plans to establish a child-fingerprinting program. He said his department has had no requests to fingerprint children.

"We would do it for them, but only if the parents want to do it. We would not keep the prints on file. We would give them to the parents," Tyson said.

Neither the Williamston Police Department nor the Martin County Sheriff's Department has a child-printing program, but spokesmen for both agencies said they would print children if asked to do so.

The Beaufort County Sheriff's Department and the Police To Start Childrens' Plan

Washington Police Department do not have a program now, but spokesmen said both agencies are working with a civic club to develop a program.

State-wide, Winn Dixie supermarkets are sponsoring a child-identification program and Winn-Dixie stores in Greenville, Washington and Williamston are participating.

Company spokesman Ivan Hardesty of Raleigh said the program is "going extremely well. The response has been going very good.

"We estimate that we've fingerprinted in excess of 16,000 in North Carolina. That sounds good, but really it's only the tip of the iceberg."

There's no age limit to the store's program, according to Hardesty, who said: "We figure if the parents are concerned enough, whatever age the children are, we are glad to preform the service."

Hardesty said there is no cost for the printing and "Winn Dixie keeps no records of any kind." He recommended that parents take the fingerprint cards home and "file them away in a safe place, and we hope they never have to use it."

The Winn-Dixie cards includs space for other identifying information such as hair and eye color and birthmarks.

"We'd certainly like to encourage any concerned parents to bring their children in and have this service performed," Hardesty said.

The program has been in operation for about a month and the Winn-Dixie store at Rivergate Shopping Center in Greeenville has fingerprinted 350 children. A spokesman for the store at Carolina East Convenience Center said "about 150 ... maybe more" have been printed there.

Britain Upset Over Planned Police Powers

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government is under fire from jurists, clergymen and other professional groups over proposed legislation to give police wide-ranging powers, including access to confidential files and new search rights.

Even the police are divided on the issue.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Bill now before Parliament has united professional bodies who claim it will violate civil liberties and the long-cherished confidentiality of clergy, the press, the medical profession and social workers.

The bill seeks to empower Britain's 130,000 policemen to hold suspects for up to 96 hours without charge and without access to lawyers for 48 hours. At present, police can hold suspects without charge for 24 hours.

Suspects now have access to a lawyer as soon as possible after their arrest — usually within a few hours — provided such access does not cause "unreasonable delay or hindrance" to police investigations.

The bill also seeks to force doctors and clergymen, with the approval of a judge, to grant police access to their records. It also would allow police to stop and search anyone if they they have "reasonable suspicion" the person may have carried out, or be planning, a crime.

The bill has passed through the House of Commons virtually unscathed, but it faces a stormy reception and probable revision next month in the House of Lords.The Lords can delay and amend legislation, but the house no power to defeat proposed bills outright.

The bill does not address the controversy over whether British bobbies should be armed. This debate heated up last week when the city of Manchester put armed police mobile units on the city's streets for the first time in British history because of a sharp increase in crime involving firearms.

Lord Salmon, former Lord Justice of Appeal, branded the bill on police powers "shocking and monstrous" and charged that it would move Britain "closer to being a police state."

The Police Review, an independent monthly reflecting the views of many officers, said that access to confidential files is a power "few police officers want, none of them need and hardly any will exercise."

ButLeslie Curtis, chairman of the Police Federation representing officers up to chief inspector, declared: "To hear some people talking, you'd think that the lamp of freedom in this country is about to be snuffed out and a new dark age of police tyranny is upon us. That's dangerous nonsense."

He hailed the bill as the first real "framework" for a fight against crime.

David Mercer, spokesman for the Law Society representing 30,000 lawyers, said: "We support codifying our extremely vague laws. But the bill tips the balance too far towards the police against the freedom of the individual."

In the face of this protest, government sources said Mrs. Thatcher, a stern law-and-order advocate, may be forced to dilute the bill's most controversial provisions.

Home Secretary William Whitelaw last week pledged to limit police access to doctors' confidential records. But he has not spelled out his planned amendments and fears remain that they will be cosmetic.

Whitelaw said in a television interview: "I think these fears are unjustified and the criticisms misguided."

The opposition Labor Party has pledged to repeal such a bill if Labor returned to power in the next general election. Labor's home affairs spokesman, Roy Hattersley, said the bill contains "arbitrary and draconian powers" that will heighten alienation between the police and public.

Dr. William Styles, spokesman for the Royal College of General Practitioners, said: "The powers suggested for the police ... represent a gross intrusion into an individual's privacy."

Fifty-six Anglican bishops said in a statement that they would defend the confidentiality of the confessional if police press clergymen for evidence of serious crime.

The assistant bishop of Shrewsbury, the Right Rev. Leslie Lloyd-Rees, declared he was prepared to go to prison rather than give officers access to confidential records.

The bill is designed to modernize and codify police powers of search, arrest and interrogation, presently a collection of vague and often contradictory regulations.

The chiefs of Britain's 42 police forces have long claimed the law is weighted heavily in favor of criminals. Lawyers and civil libertarians counter that it affords too little protection.

Zionist Group Urges West Bank Settlements

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An advisory group on Saturday recommended a major expansion of settlements in the West Bank to increase the number of Jews there by the year 2010 to 1.2 million, compared to 25,000 now.

The World Zionist Organization outlined its plan the day after the United States said it would step up pressure on Israel to freeze its settlement activity if King Hussein of Jordan entered U.S.-sponsored Middle East peace talks.

President Reagan has said the settlements harm the search for peace between Israel and its Arab neighbors. Israel took the West Bank of the Jordan River from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War.

Zeev Ben-Yosef, a spokesman for the non-government World Zionist Organization that takes part in settlement planning, told The Associated Press that the plan would be completed within a month and would be presented for Cabinet approval in conjunction with the Ministry of Agriculture.

A senior Israeli official said Israel would continue its settlement policy despite the State Department's statement on Friday warning of increased pressure. The official, who asked not to be identified, repeated Israel's position that the Arabs were using the settlements as an excuse not to make peace with the Jewish state.

The Zionist organization's settlement plan, outlined in detail on Israel Television, recommends 165 Jewish settlements by the year2010 with a population of 1.2 million — equal to the projected Arab population.

Currently, there are about 100 settlements with some 25,000 inhabitants. Some of the projects recommended in the plan are already under construction.

The Zionist organization envisages a Jewish population of 120,000 by 1986 in the West Bank.

Banks May Be Sold As Package

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — State and federal regulators are discussing a plan to package banks in Tennessee's four largest cities and offer them to the highest bidder, possibly an out-of-state company, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The Tennesseean. Nashville's morning newspaper, said the proposal is one of several alternatives which have been placed on the table as regulators have grappled with ways to deal with banks shaken by the Feb. 14 failure of Jake Butcher's United American Bank in Knoxville.

The newspaper quoted sources close to the discussions as saying such a package sale would be attempted only if all other efforts fail.

A Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. spokesman in Washington would not comment on the report Saturday.

According to the newspaper, the banks include US Bank of Nashville, which received a $25 million loan Thursday from the FDIC to stay afloat.

The paper identified the other banks as United American Bank of Chattanooga, Central Trade Bank of Memphis and C&C Bank of Knox County.

Since the failure of UAB of Knoxville, Butcher has been trying to sell without success his stock in UAB of Chattanooga and Central Trade, formerly UAB of Memphis. C&C Bank of Knox County is owned by Jake Butcher's brother, C.H. Butcher Jr., who has been trying to raise additional capital for the bank and others he owns in Tennessee.

By combining the four banks, there would be more than $500 million in assets, according to the report.

Although FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney would neither confirm nor deny the report, he explained the 1982 federal act that would allow such a sale. Under that law, the FDIC may solicit bids from out-of-state companies, regardless of state law, if a bank with assets of at least $500 million is on the verge of collapse.

Author Charged In Estate Theft

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A man man who wrote a book about a custody battle over his nephew has been charged with stealing more than $125,000 from the child's estate.

Stanley C. Mann, 53, author of "One Against the Storm," was charged Friday with three counts of felony theft and three counts of unlawful dealing with property of a fiduciary.

Mann is accused of unlawfully spending the money on himself and his children while trustee of a $186,000 estate left to his nephew, David Mark Newton Wheeler, after the boy's mother, Joan Newton Wheeler, died in an airplane crash in Seattle on Dec. 28, 1978.

The complaint, filed in 5th Circuit Court, said Mrs. Wheeler designated Mann in her will as trustee of the child's estate and that Mann misappropriated large amounts of cash for his personal dealings. The the bulk of the cash in the estate is now spent, it said.

A probable cause statement attached to the charges said Mann refused to answer questions about a $15,000 expenditure from the estate on May 30, 1980, "14 days after a mysterious homicide attempt had been made against the minor child's father ... who had physical custody of the child, and to whom the defendant said he would never allow any of the estate assets to be transferred to."

Zoo Officials Say Third Condor Egg Unhealthy

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A third California condor egg taken from a nest to the San Diego Zoo is being watched closely by officials who are concerned that it may not live to hatch, a zoo spokesman said Saturday.

Meanwhile, two chicks hatched in captivity are gaining weight and the oldest is now being fed a diet of adult mice at the San Diego Wild Animal Park.

The two chicks are Sisquoc, hatched from an egg at the San Diego Zoo on March 30, and Tecuya, hatched last Tuesday.

"Sisquoc has graduated to eating whole adult mice," said Martha Baker, a spokeswoman for the animal park. "He's no longer eating minced pinkie mice. Tecuya is still eating the minced two-day-old mice."

Ms. Baker said Sisquoc gained 33½ grams Friday and now weighs 1 pound 1½ ounces. Tecuya gained 23 grams on Friday and weighs 218 grams. A gram is equal to 0.035 ounce.

"Both chicks are eating well," said Ms. Baker. "Tecuya has reached a plateau in his weight gain, but we don't want to overfeed it because it might get sick."

The new egg is "still a concern and we're trying to stabilize it," zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said. The egg will not be "candled" again until Monday or Tuesday to determine if the embryo is still alive.

An egg is candled by holding it in front of a strong light beam to see inside the shell. "The light is hot and the egg must be turned continuously," Jouett said. "Candling is a disruption to the egg and cannot be done too often."

The egg was airlifted to the zoo Friday after two federal scientists removed it from its nest because the father was fighting with the mother and would not let her return to the nest. Jouett said the parents were away from the nest for 5½ hours and three hours of neglect for a young egg is considered critical.

"If the egg is going to die from neglect it won't show up at once," he said. "A pool of blood will form in the egg that gradually grows. The egg was alive when it was candled on Friday but we can't say if it will hatch."

California condors, with a wing span of 10 to 12 feet, are the largest birds in North America. The birds are threatened with extinction and biologists believe only 19 to 20 remain in the wild. Five are in captivity, including the two chicks.

Hunt And Helms Have Long Way To Go For '84

North Carolina's next fling at choosing a U.S. senator is well over a year away, but it would be easy to assume the race has already begun. Gov. Jim Hunt, while saying publicly he hasn't decided, is actively shoring up the foundation he launched years ago for a run for the Senate in 1984. Sen. Jesse Helms, who has held the job for a decade, is doing the same.

But neither will say definitely that he is running. Why the secrecy?

A few years ago then-Attorney General Robert Morgan was in the same position as Hunt. Everyone knew he was going to run, but Morgan wouldn't announce. Asked why privately, Morgan said he could always back off with grace — if he had not announced publicly — if something developed at the last minute that was unfavorable to his cause. In the meantime, his name recognition was spreading as people kept asking, "Will Bobby run?"

There are other factors, of course, such as money sources that haven't been tied down. But we can't believe that Hunt or Helms is seriously short on campaign funds.

Whatever the reason, the waiting game is providing an interesting campaign. Helms continues to promote his status as a congressional conservative leader interested in the common people. Hunt, on the other hand, recently set the stage for a South-wide run at Helms with his fund-raiser in Atlanta in which other Democratic Southern governors pledged their parties' backing to his effort to unseat Helms.

Hatteras Lighthouse brought them together, momentarily, while tobacco and its propensity for danger constantly provides a forum for debate. As the year wears on and they have to announce, it will be interesting to see these veterans trying to out-do the other.

To that, we say: on with the race!

Heritage Tours Offer Overdue Look At State

We seldom comment on commercial ventures, but a Williamston woman has launched an undertaking that is long overdue and deserves note. Lucia Peel has created a company called North State Heritage Tours. Her mission: to conduct tours of North Carolina places of history, such as Edenton, Bath and the Outer Banks.

Mrs. Peel said she formed the tour company after friends who had visited Williamsburg and Charleston repeatedly expressed surprise that North Carolina also had points of historical interest.

Her tours are primarily for members of the Sir Walter Cabinet — an organization for spouses of legislators — in Raleigh, but they are open to the public.

It's starting as a small-scale venture, but this is one worth maintaining and developing. North Carolina does have its points of interest, as Mrs. Peel said, and they can match anything found in other states. Only the ferris wheels and roller coasters are missing.

It's A Long, Long Way To '84 For Hunt And Helms

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

He visited a restaurant on the island where he ordered a vegetable soup that was suggested to him. Something in it looked familiar and he asked the waiter what it was. The waiter came back with the raw plant and it turned out to be collards, just like the eastern North Carolina variety.

Some friends, who were also to stopover at the Azores, wanted to know the location of the restaurant so they could try the "collard soup".

Holmes gave them directions. When the friends returned, he asked them about it.

"There was nothing there but a vacant lot," they told him.

Holmes swears that the restaurant did exist and in fact there are collards all over the Azores.

He theorized that the restaurant was damaged in one of the earthquakes which hit the island and had to be demolished, or burned. At any rate it is apparently gone now, although there are other restaurants on the islands.

W.E. Boswell brought by a copy of his collection of Life magazines recently. This one was dated May 10, 1948. It featured Earl Warren on its cover, not as chief justice of the Supreme Court but as a Republican presidential candidate.

The article was one of a series on potential GOP candidates. It was entitled "The Case for Warren."

"His record of nonpartisanship and his capacity for growth in office win the independent voters."

Warren was governor of California at the time. As we know, the nomination went to Thomas Dewey, who lost to President Truman. Warren was later to be appointed chief justice by President Eisenhower and presided over some of the landmark decisions of the 20th century.

There was a popular song out at the time called "Nature Boy." An article said the song was written by a bearded mystic named Eden Ahbez. The song was then No. 1 and netted him $20,000 in royalties. The article was accompanied by a photo of the bearded Ahbez in a mountain pool.

And remember this was in the days before hippies and outlandish rock groups.

There was even television. A General Electric ad showed a radio, phono, TV console. The screen and the radio dial were about the same size. There was also a jumbo screen which was advertised as being 3 feet square.

And wouldn't you know there was fighting in the Holy Land. Life carried reports on Jews and Arabs slugging it out in Palenstine in that time when the Jewish state was being established.

In that area of the world at least, little has changed.

Paul T. O'Connor — Life Was The Same

RALEIGH — If you can believe the letters a Reconstruction era legislator wrote home to his wife, life in the North Carolina General Assembly of 1866 was very much like that which modern lawmakers face.

In it's winter issue, the N.C. Historical Review kicks off a three-part series of the letters which Sen. Leanders Sam Gash wrote to his wife, Margaret Adeline McClain Gash, who had stayed back home on their Transylvania County farm. The letters were written in January and February 1866, while the federal Congress was debating the direction of Reconstruction and the legislature was debating state policy towards the former slaves.

While Gash's views on the various state and national issues are interesting, the real fun in reading these letter comes from his depiction of life in Raleigh. If you modernized some of the spelling and diction, these letters could easily pass as communications between a present-day legislator and his family. The complaints haven't changed much.

The first duty of any legislator is to complain that he's losing money by not being at work back home. Gash's letters return repeatedly to his concerns that the chickens, pigs and horses be properly tended by his sons.

The natural outgrowths of that concern are that the legislature will never adjourn and that legislators aren't paid enough. "From present appearance, it looks as if we will never get through for the business seems to increase on our hands," he wrote less than a month after he'd arrived.

Legislators in those days were paid $6 a day and there were moves afoot to lower that to $5, $3 or $1. Gash was appalled.

The letters are full of complaints about the slow flow of legislation, the dallying of the U.S. Congress in Washington, the power of committees in Raleigh and the lack of support for his bills in the state House.

James J. Kilpatrick — Indecision Rules Again

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court tried once more the other day to tackle the exclusionary rule. As usual, the rule slipped away into a broken field of subtleties and fine distinctions. In the end a manifestly guilty dope smuggler went free and the court divided 5-4, more or less.

The case involved a young man named Mark Royer. Five years ago, on Jan. 3, 1978, two narcotics detectives observed him in Miami's International Airport. He fit "the profile." These were the elements of suspicion: "Royer was carrying American Tourister luggage, which appeared to be heavy; he was young, apparently between 25 and 35; he was casually dressed; he appeared pale and nervous, looking around at other people; he paid for his ticket in cash with a large number of bills." In addition, he wrote only a surname and "LaGuardia" on the ticket he purchased to New York.

Thus alerted, the detectives drew him aside, identified themselves as police officers and asked if he would speak with them. He said "Yes." Immediately it transpired that, while his name was Royer, he was traveling on a ticket in the name of "Holt." Their suspicions further aroused, the detectives said they had reason to believe he was transporting narcotics.

To shorten the story, the officers escorted Royer to a small interrogation room about 40 feet from the ticket counter. They asked if the suspct would consent to their opening his bags. He handed them a key to one bag nd consented to their prying open a second suitcase. The officers found 65 pounds of marijuana and put him under arrest. When time for his trial approached, Royer moved to suppress the evidence as unlawfully obtained. The trial court denied the motion, but the Florida appellate courts reversed. On March 22, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed that the evidence was inadmissible and held that it must be excluded.

It was one of those explosive days at the court. Justice White wrote an opinion in which Justices Marshall, Powell and Stevens joined. Powell wrote a supplementary statement. Justice Brennan didn't like White's opinion, but he concurred in the result. Justice Blackmun dissented, finding the conduct of the police "minimally intrusive." Justice Rehnquist, joined by Chief Justice Burger and Justice O'Connor, filed a biting dissent. That made the score 4-1-4. Par is five.

Rehnquist was in fine fettle. On this usually pedestrian court, he has the finest fettle around. The plurality opinion, he scoffed, "betrays a mind-set more useful to those who officiate at shuffleboard games, primarily concerned with which particular square the disc has landed on, than to those who are seeking to administer a system of justice whose twin purposes are the conviction of the guilty and the vindication of the innocent." At another point, he remarked that "If the plurality's opinion were to be judged by standard" appropriate to Impressionist paintings, it would perhaps receive a high grade, but the same cannot be said if it is to be judged by the standards of a judicial opinion."

This was fair criticism. Justice White, speaking for the plurality, had worrisome concerns: How large was the room in which the questioning took place? Had Royer consented "orally" to the opening of his bag, or he had he merely surrendered his key silently? The plurality agreed that the officers had adequate grounds for temporarily detaining the suspect. They agreed that Royer had consented to talking with the officers, but they concluded that at some critical point the "consensual aspects evaporated."

As he so often and so usefully does, Rehnquist recurred to fundamentals. The Fourth Amendment does not forbid all searches and seizures; it secures only a right to be free from "unreasonable" searches and seizures. Given the facts in the Royer case, Rehnquist saw nothing unreasonable. Here there was no second-degree interrogation at a station house. The questioning was not prolonged; the whole incident consumed no more than 15 minutes. The plurality's backing and filling "adds up to little more than saying that if my aunt were a man, she would be my uncle."

Donald M. Rothberg — Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — It looks like the Democrats are going to need another revision of party rules after the 1984 presidential campaign.

Party leaders thought last spring they had come up with a balanced rewrite — the fourth revision since 1970 — that accomplished the goals of shortening the nominating process and encouraging elected and party officials to play a greater role in selecting presidential candidates.

Gov. James Hunt of North Carolina, who headed the commission responsible for the latest rewrite, said, "I think we've got the pendulum back in the middle now." He added that he hoped it would be the last major rules revision for some time.

"We certainly hope so," added party chairman Charles T. Manatt.

Well, the rules have been in place for a year, the presidential campaign is well under way, and it now is clear some things are happening that never were anticipated by people who applauded the Hunt Commission effort.

It may not have been accidental that the new rules, written with the active participation of aides to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, tilt toward front-runners.

Ironically, the rules have magnified the importance of money at a time when most candidates are decrying its influence and calling for curbs on political action committees.

Those two consequences are serious. A third is more ludicrous: in attempting to shorten the season, the Democrats succeeded in lengthening it.

It seemed like a wonderful idea to shorten the season and that was done by creating a 13-week period in which states could hold caucuses or primaries and forcing Iowa and New Hampshire to move within 15 days of that "window."

A background memorandum written by the Hunt Commission staff warned that the plan had potential dangers. It noted that some observers "believe that any attempt to compress the process, or strictly enforce a window, will encourage 'front loading' which will substantially impair the ability of relatively unrecognized candidates to emerge."

Those observers were absolutely right.

Having an equally strong impact on lesser known candidates was the decision to move the Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary closer to the window.

Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas told how that worked in his announcement this week that he was abandoning his plan for a long-shot run at the nomination.

"We have had a situation develop in the Democratic nominating process that weighs heavily against the less well-known candidates," said Bumpers. "In 1976 and 1980 we had three to four weeks between the New Hampshire primary and the next one. Previously unknown candidates such as Jimmy Carter, who did well in Iowa and New Hampshire, gained national recognition in plenty of time to raise money before the next primaries."

The first day states other than Iowa or New Hampshire can hold caucuses or primaries under the new Democratic rules is March 13, 1984, and at least 10 will do so on that Tuesday. Several more will begin selecting convention delegates on the following Saturday.

Bumpers pointed out that lacking the opportunity to capitalize on New Hampshire and Iowa, darkhorse candidates had to raise enough money to compete for delegates on March 13 and 17, long before they would know how well they would do in the two early contests.

The reason for moving Iowa and New Hampshire closer to the window was to diminish their impact on the process, a goal of party leaders who felt the two states were unrepresentative of the Democratic electorate.

But the unintended impact was to increase the need to raise huge sums of money early in the process and that may be the biggest reason why the 1984 presidential campaign has started so early.

There have been presidential years in which individual candidates started earlier but none in which the entire field was geared up, organized and running hard more than a year before the first caucuses and primaries.

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer — Law

WASHINGTON — America's recent incidents of spectator rape have led some state legislators to a seemingly logical conclusion: There ought to be a law that makes witnesses at least partly culpable for sexual violence.

Yet proposals in the Massachusetts and Rhode Island legislatures to fine or imprison those who observe and then fail to report a rape stumble on their simplicity. Simple solutions don't necessarily make for good law or effective deterrents.

As with most Americans, the horrible image of cheering rape-watchers at a New Bedford, Mass., tavern is foremost in the minds of Barbara Gray, a Massachusetts state representative, and Gloria Kennedy Fleck, a Rhode Island state senator. Gray and Fleck have sponsored bills in their respective legislatures requiring witnesses of a rape to report it within 24 hours or face one year in jail or a fine of up to $1,000 ($500 in Rhode Island). Gray's bill would, in fact, cover all violent crimes.

"It just doesn't make any sense to have nothing on the law books to address the type of situation that allegedly took place in New Bedford"' said Fleck, 33, who has served in the Rhode Island legislature for seven years.

Fleck modeled her proposal after a two-year-old Rhode Island law that requires witnesses to report child abuse to the police. Otherwise, models are few. Some European countries, including France and the Soviet Union, hold that those who fail to assist someone in peril can be imprisoned or fined. In this country, only Vermont does and, according to the state attorney general, it has never even put its law to the test.

By contrast, Fleck said, the Rhode Island child abuse statute has led to two convictions since its enactment. She adds that her own conversations with law enforcement officials, as a member of the state senate's judiciary committee, gave her hope of obtaining more rape convictions and forestalling more New Bedfords.

Yet the lack of precedent suggests the difficulty of devising ways to round up the witnesses. For one, different crimes generally involve different circumstances. Child abuse prosecutions, for example, practically demand evidence of harsh physical and emotional abuse over an extended period of time. Rape is more a crime of the moment. While the transgressions are equally egregious, they place dissimilar demands on a witness' judgment and sense of responsibility to alert the authorities.

Moreover, some witnesses are better observers than others. Witnesses who come to the fore simply out of fear of prosecutions won't necessarily speed the pursuit of justice. Those "who come forward due to some requirement of the law don't always make the best witnesses," the Essex County (Mass.) district attorney told The Boston Globe. "We would prefer to have people who at the outset decide to be cooperative."

Such practical problems may only add up to a fundamental constitutional dilemma in the Massachusetts and Rhode Island bills. Does an individual have a constitutional responsibility to report a crime, or simply a moral one? If put to the test, too many courts would say the latter. Even when a criminal act can incite a cheering crowd, the law should defer to those whose obligations are less than clear.

This isn't a pleasing judgment to those of us who see New Bedford as a dangerously, and possibly contagiously, bad example. Only two years ago, a University of California survey disclosed that 35 percent of all men interviewed said they might rape a woman if they were confident of not being caught or punished. In the face of such statistics, our society hangs by a thread of social propriety.

But the New Bedford incident and others like it would best serve as shock treatment for a nation that too often shuffles its feet on sexual violence.

To the editor:

There seem to be misconceptions concerning the Pitt County Humane Society. The society is a non-profit organization and is operated by volunteers. We do not have a shelter; therefore, our animals are placed in foster homes until we can find permanent homes.

We try to improve the lives of Pitt County's animals by meeting their needs for such things as medicine, food, shelter and affection.

I would like to share with you some of the things that happened to the society in the past year:

1. Our foster homes increased (We still need more homes)
2. Our membership increased.
3. We went back to publishing a newsletter and also printed flyers and an animal series that was featured in The Daily Reflector.
4. One of our members was appointed to the N.C. Humane Federation Board of Directors.
5. We increased the size and effectiveness of our spaying and neutering program.
6. A holding pen project was begun in Grifton and has now been completed.
7. We gave presentations to various groups and lots more.

We don not receive any financial help from any source other than contributions. We need help to continue our work and our growth.

Now more than ever we need donations. All gifts are tax-deductible and can be sent to me at the following address: Route 5, Box 503, Greenville, N.C. 27834. No gift is too small.

Reagan Sticks To His Guns On Appointees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is known as a "loyalist" to his appointees.

He sticks with them until the die is cast and he can no longer lend his support to a losing cause. But even then he has yet to admit a mistake in his appointments. And he often finds another government sinecure for those who fall by the wayside.

In the case of his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, all allegations, right or wrong, seemed to rub off on his White House. His aides were a closely knit group. They had made the long march with him from Georgia and they were a family.

But then they could be counted on one hand: chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, press secretary Jody Powell, and before he was forced to resign, budget director Bert Lance.

Allegations against Lance for his banking practices, Billy Carter's personal problems and Libyan connections, and the troubles of Dr. Peter Bourne, his drug abuse expert, added to Carter's woes.

Throughout his presidency, Carter had to contend with one shoe falling after another under the relentless spotlight and publicity attending the allegations.

The bad luck followed him in his close relationships with family and staffers.

Not so for Reagan, who manages to escape any taint when the activities of some of his appointees come into question. And yet many more of them have had troubles in public service.

Although the Reagan White House laid down the controversial policies for the Environmental Protection Agency — particularly in terms of dealing with business with a lighter hand on matters of pollution and toxic wastes — the president has not been faulted for the fate that has befallen former EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch Burford, and several other top-level assistants.

One of them, Rita Lavelle, director of the toxic wastes division, was fired under a cloud of allegations.

At least two of the EPA assistants who were forced to resign their positions in the agency moved over to the Energy Department where they were given jobs as consultants. One aide described the department as a "dumping ground" for EPA staffers who had been eased out.

Among the several appointees who have been subjected to public scrutiny are most recently Thomas C. Reed, who held the post of assistant for national security affairs, although he allegedly profited from inside information on a stock trade.

Among others forced out of the White House was former national security adviser Richard V. Allen for accepting a $1,000 from a Japanese magazine that had been granted an interview with Nancy Reagan. Allen was added to the Foreign Intelligence Advisory panel, and he has become the foreign policy expert on the Republican National Committee.

Publicity has also focused on William J. Casey for failing to disclose his holdings and comply with other financial regulations before he became CIA director.

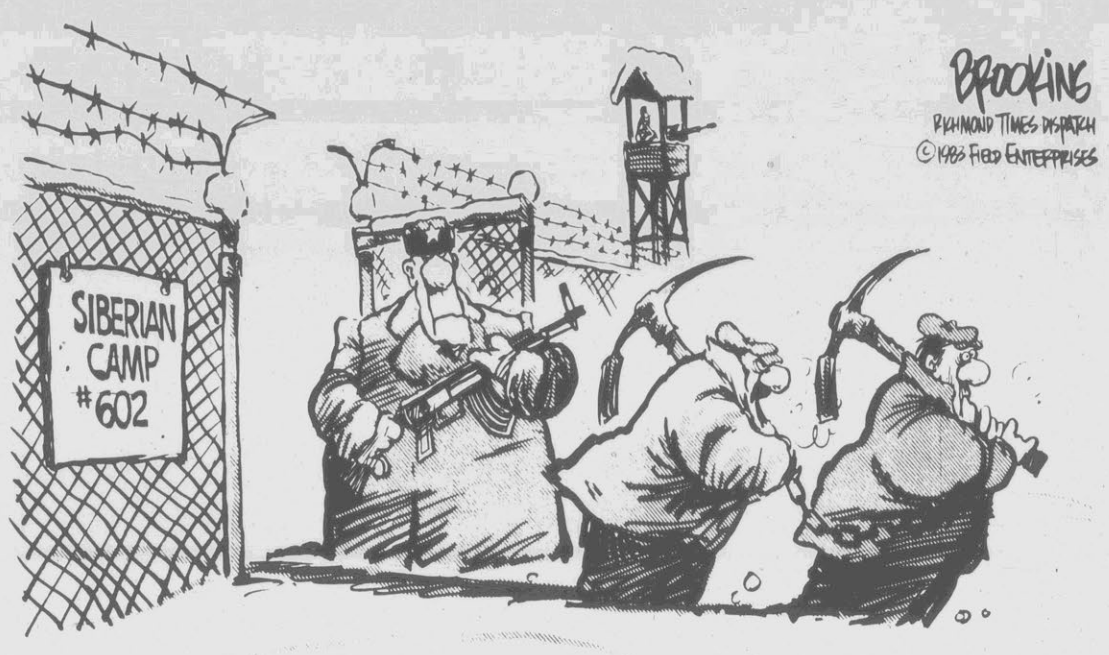
Former Reagan aide Dennis E. LeBlanc, who earns $58,500 a year as director of the National Telecommunications Office in the Commerce Department, still accompanies the president on his trips to his mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., to help Reagan chop wood and clear brush.

In most cases, Reagan has lashed out against the critics and has strongly defended his appointees as victims.

He told Mrs. Burford that she could leave with her "head high," and since then has said he never would have asked her to leave the agency. He also blamed environmental "extremists" for the upheaval at EPA and quipped that they would like to turn the White House into a "bird's nest."

In short, Reagan fights back and is loathe to drop anyone until his top White House aides tell him the handwriting is on the wall and he has to cut his losses.

In such cases, his aloofness and detached style of governing serves him in good stead.



"'HEY, I'VE GOT IT!', YOU SAID.... 'LET'S CALL FOR A FREEZE HERE IN RUSSIA!', YOU SAID.... WELL, COMRADE BIGMOUTH, ARE YOU SATISFIED?!"

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Case

WASHINGTON — The missing ingredient in the administration's plan to defeat the nuclear freeze resolution in Congress is the still-secret case against Soviet SALT violations, a case President Reagan is almost ready to take to the congressional jury.

Despite questioning by some White House aides, Reagan personally insisted on writing into his March 31 Los Angeles World Affairs Council speech a phrase in which he said "there have been increasingly serious grounds" for questioning compliance with existing treaties. He said he would "have more to say on this in the near future."

That opens the door for a presidential challenge of Soviet SALT compliance. Under White House guidance, an unpublicized study of alleged Soviet violations will soon be completed and handed to the president. It is expected to provide Reagan with an argument strong enough to cripple to freeze movement, and possible defeat it in its first test in the House in mid-April.

The argument is this: Even if all other objections miraculously disappeared, it would be suicidal for the U.S. to submit to a nuclear arms "freeze" with knowledge the Soviets have been systematically cheating on existing nuclear arms treaties.

Reagan methodically ticked off his case of how "dangerous" the freeze is in his Los Angeles speech. Except for his teaser about having "more to eay," he decided to ignore the cheating issue until he has studied details of the high-level probe of alleged violations, to be sent to the Oval Office within the next few days.

But Reagan has laid a groundwork on the cheating issue. In his March 29 interview with six White House reporters, he said he had "reason to believe that there have been numerous violations" by the Soviets of the treaty limiting underground nuclear tests. On Feb. 23, entertaining the Sperling breakfast group at the White House, Reagan described the Feb. 8 Soviet missile test as "the closest to indicating that it is a violation of SALT II." No president has ever been so frontal in suggesting Soviet treaty violations, although some have nursed similar suspicions.

Proponents of the "freeze," including liberal Democrats who glorify it as a passport for capturing the Democrats who glorify it as a passport for capturing the White House next year, have found the issue a bit more slippery than they bargained for even without a presidential onslaught against Soviet treaty violations. Soviets Face Choices, Too

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, as did his predecessors, has had to formulate an arms control policy in the midst of a continuing and spirited public debate about what the right course may be.

Leaders of the Soviet Union are in a much different position, of course, but that does not mean they are spared equally difficult decisions. High on their list must be the question of how to deal with Ronald Reagan.

The Soviets can negotiate with him seriously on arms control, or delay in the hope that political forces will force Reagan to change his stance, or they can try to wait until Reagan is out of the White House.

"The Soviets have a very difficult decision to make in terms of strategy," Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations and Intelligence Committees, observed last week.

The United States and its NATO allies are preparing to deploy 572 nuclear armed missiles in Europe begining late this year. Reagan has said that deployment could be delayed or limited if the Soviets agree to some reduction in their existing missile forces.

Opponents of the U.S. missile deployment are vociferous both in the United States and in Europe, giving the Soviets hope that the West can be talked or bluffed out of the deployment.

The Soviets could decide to bank heavily on that possibility.

They would then have to deal with the accomplished fact of NATO missiles pointed at the Soviet Union.

It is unlikely Reagan and his negotiators would ever be accused of giving away too much to the Soviets. If he were to give his assent to an arms treaty and submit it to the Senate, ratification would be almost assured.

The situation would be similar to Richard Nixon's decision to resume normal relations with China.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Fearing another Vietnam, the public overwhelmingly votes against President Reagan's proposal to spend an additional $60 million in military aid in El Salvador. They also reject his plan to increase the number of U.S. military advisers there.

The public takes this stand despite their widespread concern that other Latin American governments will fall if the rebel forces succeed in taking over the government in El Salvador.

Of the nine in 10 in the latest Gallup survey who are aware of the El Salvador situation, 68 percent oppose sending $60 million in additional military aid and 59 percent disapprove of increasing the number of U.S. advisers to about 55. A total of 68 percent feel it is either very or fairly likely that the U.S. involvement in El Salvador could turn into a sittation like Vietnam. Three in four (75 percent) think it is either very or fairly likely that, if the rebel forces succeed in taking over the government in El Salvador, the same kind of thing will happen in other Latin American countries.

Republicans and Democrats have similar views on the likelihood of other Latin American governments falling — the so-called domino theory — if the rebels in El Salvador succeed, but major differences are found between members of the two parties on the likelihood of a Vietnam-like involvement and on the desirability of sending military aid and additional advisers.

Democrats vote 77 percent to 16 percent against sending a greater amount of military aid, while far fewer Republicans do so. 48 percent to 36 percent. On the issue of sending additional advisers, Democrats are 64 percent to 28 percent opposed, but Republicans lean in favor 48 percent to 41 percent.

Finally, Democrats are far more convinced than are Republicans that U.S. involvement in El Salvador could turn into another Vietnam, with 73 percent of Democrats saying this is very or fairly likely, compared to 53 percent of Republicans.

Here are the national results and by political party affiliation:

Send Military Aid?
(Based on aware group)

	Should	Should not	No opinion
NATIONAL	23%	68%	10%
Republicans	36	48	16
Democrats	16	77	7
Independents	20	69	11

Increase Number Of Military Advisers?
(Based on aware group)

	Approve	Disapprove	No opinion
NATIONAL	32%	59%	9%
Republicans	48	41	11
Democrats	28	64	8
Independents	29	64	7

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,568 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period March 11-14.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Goerch Gave Tar Heels A Yarn

Folks who tuned in on editor-commentator Carl Goerch's broadcast one Sunday evening in early 1950s got a real charge. Goerch told his listeners that while flying home to Raleigh from Wilmington that day he encountered "this wierd-looking craft."

"It was in the shape of a huge saucer, and it circled around my plane several times," Goerch recalled several years later in a magazine article in which he reconstructed his broadcast. "Suddenly, a sliding door was opened, and two individuals peered through the opening. They had green faces and wore gold helmets. They stared at me, and you can rest assured that I stared at them."

"Suddenly they held up a large card with the word 'Hollywood' printed thereon in big letters."

"I pulled out one of my maps and wrote on it '3,000 miles west.'"

"they nodded their heads and held up another card: 'Where are we now?'"

"I replied 'North Carolina'."

"by this means we carried on quite a conversation while they kept circling around me. I found out they were from Mars, had accepted a movie contract and were on their way to Hollywood to fill it."

Goerch said he was fed up with tales of flying saucers and had resolved to tell his listeners "one so utterly ridiculous that people would realize the absurdity of the thing. And so I piled it on, thick and fast. The two Martians thanked me, headed west and quickly disappeared from view."

"I'm telling the truth when I say that never for a moment did I think that anyone would take the broadcast seriously," Goerch added. "My sole purpose was to show folks how ridiculous all the tales (about flying saucers and men from Mars) were."

Goerch said that as he finished the broadcast the phone in the control room started ringing, and people started asking questions.

"Has anything further been heard of the flying saucers?"

"Ask Mr. Goerch to tell us some more about the kind of plane they were in."

"How old were the two men?"

The telephone at Station WPTF kept ringing incessantly until the station closed at midnight. It also rang at the Goerch home and in newspaper office.

Goerch, a Tarrytown, N.Y., native who fell in love with North Carolina as a young man and forever after extolled its virtues, recalled that station manager Dick Mason called him on the carpet the next day. He was greatly upset over the public reaction to the "Flying Saucer Broadcast."

Goerch, of course, should have known better. His broadcast came only a few days after orson welles had almost panicked the nation with his "War of the Worlds" broadcast in which he told of New Jersey being invaded by men from Mars.

Goerch, a ebullient newspaperman, founded the State magazine in 1933 shortly after he moved to Raleigh. He began his weekly Sunday night commentary over WPTF at about the same time.

Even after he sold the magazine, and went into semi-retirement, Goerch continued as a news commentator and covered doingd of the legislature where he often filled in a reading clerk in the House. The General Assembly recognized his long love affair with his adopted state by officially naming him "Mr. North Carolina."

Until his death in 1974, Goerch continued to travel until he had visited every state in the union and 52 foreign countried. Everywhere he went, he continued to offer his personal testimony about "the wonderful people and resources for good living in the Old North State."

A few years before his death, Goerch was aboard a commercial airliner bound for Florida when hijacker siexed the plane and ordered the pilot to fly to Havanna, Cuba. When word of his predicament was flashed back to Raleigh, the common reaction of many of his friends was: "Carl's probably having the time of his life."

Today's Theme Is Still That Of A Slow Recovery

NEW YORK (AP) — A slow recovery is still the theme of the day, says Otto Eckstein, the economist-businessman who measures and analyzes every little twit and twee of the economic statistics.

Wages continue to rise only moderately, that at a 4.4 percent rate in the past six months. In February, single-family home sales fell 5.9 percent, new construction 2 percent and manufacturing orders 2 percent.

Moderating the negatives, the founder and head of Data Resources Inc. notes, were a 1.4 percent rise in February's leading indicators, a drop in unemployment insurance claims and a decline in manufacturing inventories.

These figures are just a few simple ingredients in a model of the economy that econometricians try to construct with the numbers, basketsful of numbers, numbers more plentiful than confetti at a wedding.

But there are some people who feel that economic painting by the numbers makes a clear picture, or that the number of economic numbers necessarily enables a person to make better economic decisions.

Too often, they say, we become so mesmerized by the numbers, so overloaded with data that the mind becomes catatonic and unable to arrive at reasonable conclusions. It may be so.

There are, for example, several people who live off their interpretations of the economy and who suggest that the recovery is slow because of reasons that require no great detailed analysis of the popular numbers.

Albert Sindlinger, the Media, Pa., economist and market researcher, has argued for many months that overall statistics show an economically stronger consumer than actually exists.

The reason, he says, is revealed by a simple examination of the evidence that shows an upper one-third of the population that was barely hurt by recession-inflation, and a lower two-thirds that was badly hurt.

The upper third had money in the bank, and so enjoyed the extraordinarily high interest rates. The poorer people did not enjoy such benefits. In fact, some were forced to borrow on very costly terms.

Sindlinger also points out that inflation was not nearly so bad among luxury items, such as big cars, as it was for the basic essentials of life. The rich could forgo some luxuries, but the poor could not forgo food.

T.J. Holt of the Holt Investment Advisory feels he has found another aspect of the overall economic numbers that give a clue to the relatively slow recovery. He speaks of a generation gap.

Earlier this year, he said, economists were tripping over each other in the rush to raise estimates for real growth. But now, he claims, they are having second thoughts.

Holt believes that demographics supplies the reason why.

"Yes, many households are indeed far more liquid than ever," he says. "But they won't help the economy much.

"Those consumers who must play a vital role in reviving business are, in fact, becoming progressively more illiquid. For that reason, there'll surely be many, many more downward revisions in the standard forecast for 1983."

As he sees it, the rich are getting richer, and the poor are getting poorer. And, he says, you can substitute young for poor and older for rich.

As a group, he contends, Americans age 45 to 65 are in "truly great financial shape." He explains that many are at their peak earning power, have paid off mortgages, have been relieved of child-rearing expenses.

Those age 45 years and older, he states, "hold the vast bulk of the nation's financial assets." They are net savers rather than spenders.

Speight Family Gives Portrait

A portrait of William Wesley Speight was presented to the people of Pitt County at a special session of Superior Court Friday afternoon by Speight's family.

Speight, who died May 4, 1981, was a Pitt native and served as county attorney from 1950 until his death — the longest period of service of any county attorney in the state.

Superior Court Judge David Reid, who presided at the session, called Speight "a lawyer's lawyer ... a statesman," and said it was "only fitting that his picture grace the walls of this courtroom."

Reid said Speight had "declined an appointment to the Superior Court bench" when it was offered by former Gov. Luther Hodges and had refused to run for public office to choose "the role of participating as a private citizen" in the affairs of the county.

Former Chief District Court Judge Charles Whedbee, a classmate of Speight's at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, characterized Speight as "an outstanding lawyer ... completely ethical and honest," and a person who "loved his fellow man."

Speight was a leader in the development of the industrial park; a founder and president of Greenville Industries; former president of the Greenville Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce; former vice president of the East Carolina Airport Authority, which worked unsuccessfully for a regional airport at Toddy; and a member of the Committee of 100 of the University of North Carolina.

The portrait was presented by Speight's twin brother, James C. Speight of Rocky Mount and unveiled by his nieces, Florence B. Hartsfield and Annie Britton Baskett.

Gritz Vows To Return

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Green Beret James "Bo" Gritz says only failure by his own informants will keep him from another Southeast Asian hunt for Americans he insists are prisoners there.

Gritz, a retired lieutenant colonel who in February led a fruitless search into Laos for U.S. prisoners of war, appears undaunted by that aborted mission.

Gritz says he is waiting for photographs from Laotian sources before trying another mission, but insisted that he will not go to the U.S. government first.

Students Honored

ECU News Bureau

Five students received scholarship awards for further study.

Engraved plaques were presented to the students judged most outstanding among seniors in each of the home economics school's five departments.

Recipients were Vicky Meadows of Maysville, department of housing and management; Deborah Lynn Hester of Wilmington, department of clothing and textiles; Susan Honeywell Nixon of Peru, Ind., department of home economics education; Vicki Marder of Gastonia, department of food, nutrition and institution management and Margaret Joan Shell of New Bern, department of child development and family relations.

Recognized as the school's most outstanding senior overall was Ms. Marder.

Recipient of the "most outstanding graduate assistant" plaque for the home economics school was Cecilia Foushee of Timberlake, a food, nutrition and institution management graduate student.

Two students received $100 awards named for former heads of ECU's home economics program, given each year in recognition of superior academic grade point averages. They were senior Marie Lynette Harrell of Mount Olive, who received the Bessie McNeil Award, and sophomore Shaela Kathleen Ray of Greenville, who was given the Miriam B. Moore Award.

Also receiving $100 awards were two recipients of the annual Phi Epsilon Omicron-Ruth Lambie Awards: Bernice Harrington of Greenville and Pamela Duncan of Raleigh.

New Plan For MX Missile Under Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — By giving the MX missile a mobile brother, a presidential commission is hoping that Congress will accept a fixed, existing home for the Pentagon brainchild conceived nearly a decade ago but as yet unborn.

But the latest plan for the MX is already under fire, even before the poorly kept secret is officially announced Monday by the commission.

The panel, headed by former national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, will recommend that 100 of the new nuclear-tipped weapons be built and put in existing Minuteman silos in Wyoming and Nebraska and that a new, single-warhead mobile missile also be developed.

President Reagan, who appointed the panel three months after Congress voted against his "dense pack" plan, will probably wait at least a week before endorsing the proposal and sending it to Congress.

The administration says the 10-warhead MX is needed because the current Minuteman missile, the backbone of America's land-based nuclear deterrent, is vulnerable to a first strike by increasingly accurate Soviet missiles.

A 1981 administration plan to put 40 MX weapons into Minuteman silos until a better basing method could be found was rejected by Congress after critics argued that the MX would then be just as vulnerable as the Minuteman.

Last November, Reagan proposed "dense pack," a plan to put 100 of the weapons into a 15-square mile area near Cheyenne, Wyo., on the theory that incoming Soviet missiles would knock each other out. It, too, was rejected by Congress.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker was more optimistic about the Scowcroft panel's latest recommendations. "I suspect they will have broad appeal," he said last week.

The new recommendations will be the latest attempt to give birth to a missile, for which more than 30 basing plans have been studied and rejected and more than $4.5 billion has already been spent.

Bishops Deny White House Influenced Letter On Nuclear Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two leading Roman Catholic bishops took the unusual step Saturday of denying that a bishops' committee yielded to White House pressure in softening a proposed church statement that originally denounced use of nuclear weapons.

Following Reagan administration praise for the new version of the proposed pastoral letter, the two churchmen stressed that the document still finds much to fault in President Reagan's policies.

Archbishop John R. Roach of Minneapolis, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, and Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, chairman of the committee that drafted the letter, said they "could not accept any suggestion that there are relatively few and insignificant differences between U.S. policies and the policies advocated in the pastoral."

"In the final analysis, the third draft is far more the product of reflection and dialogue within the Catholic community than of dialogue between the drafting committee and the administration," Roach and Bernardin said.

The State Department expressed pleasure Wednesday with the final third draft of the letter, on which the nation's 285 Catholic bishops will vote at a special meeting in Chicago on May 2-3.

If approved by the required two-thirds majority of the bishops, it will represent official policy of American Catholics and will move the American church far from its customary hard line on issues of national security.

But in a number of ways, the new version tones down the language in the earlier draft.

For instance, the earlier version called for bilateral agreements to "halt" the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons — the same words used by advocates of a nuclear freeze. The new version called for steps to "curb" testing, production and deployment.

The new draft is less emphatic in opposition to new weapons such as the MX missile and backs away from the earlier categorical opposition to the use of nuclear weapons.

But, contrary to White House policy, the document still advocates a policy of "no first use" of nuclear weapons and supports a comprehensive test ban treaty.

When Bernardin made the new, "more flexible" version public Tuesday — after months of administration criticism of two earlier versions — he said the changes were a matter of tone rather than substance.

"Admittedly certain sections have been nuanced differently," the cardinal told a news conference. "We were very sensitive to White House comments."

But Roach and Bernardin dismissed suggestions that the changes were prompted primarily by administration objections to the earlier drafts.

The two church officials were summoned to Rome in January by Pope John Paul II to consult with bishops from Germany and France on the nuclear arms issue.

"The third draft reflects the exchange of views which we had with representatives of the Holy See and of several European episcopal conferences in Rome last January," Roach and Bernardin said. "And of course the drafting committee received helpful information from administration officials at various stages in the project."

Child Wins Big Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A boy who was declared dead after his premature birth and then left unattended on a hospital counter for more than 14 hours has been awarded $1.3 million.

The Superior Court jury which granted the award found the doctor guilty of negligence.

The suit, brought by Irene Moreno, contended that her son suffered several permanent disabilities, including cerebral palsy, epilepsy, mental retardation and weakness on the right side of his body, as a result of the actions.

Dr. Basil N. Spirtos of Montebello was ordered Friday to pay Raymond Guerena $876,000 for loss of future earnings plus $250,000 in additional damages.

"I am absolutey thrilled and so happy for the mother and the child," said Joseph Shalant, Mrs. Moreno's attorney. He said the money will permit the boy to have access to expensive treatments he will need.

Neither Mrs. Moreno nor Spirtos was in court when the verdict was announced. Spirtos' attorney said the obstetrician-gynecologist is not insured.

The jury's 10-2 decision found Spirtos failed to "try adequately to resuscitate the infant, but it found he was not guilty of "wanton and reckless misconduct."

The boy, now 6 years old, was born when the mother was 6½ months pregnant, according to trial testimony. The baby weighed only 1 pound, 11 ounces.

The doctor said the baby was born with a bluish color and he tried for 15 to 20 minutes to revive it with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, but could not detect a heartbeat and told the mother her child was dead.

A few hours later a hospital housekeeper found the infant alive on a warming table in the delivery room and took it to another counter outside the delivery area where the baby remained overnight, according to testimony.

Jury foreman Carl de Villar said the jury was influenced by medical studies that indicated small-weight babies who survive birth can lead healthy lives.

Phony Heiress Rocks Florida

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A 30-year-old woman impersonating an heiress spent five days in a $700,000 beach house with four college friends and left a trail of bad checks and unpaid bills, police say.

"I think it's a beauty. It's a classic. It's a super scam," said Paul Ilyinsky, a member of the council in this resort frequented by the wealthy.

Authorities are looking for a divorced mother from Washington, D.C., who passed herself off as a debutante and an heiress to a famous old New England family, said Palm Beach Detective Sam Scott.

The desk sergeant on duty in Palm Beach on Saturday he said was not aware of any charges in the case.

Chicago Set To Pick New Mayor Tuesday

CHICAGO (AP) — Torn by pride and prejudice, voters decide Tuesday whether to go Republican for the first time in a half century to elect another white mayor or to remain faithfully Democratic and choose their first black.

"It is a contest that looms larger than life," says Bob Neuman, spokesman for the Democratic National Committee.

The contest between two-term congressman Harold Washington from the South Side, whose record of blemished personal finances is the central issue besides race in his Democratic bid, and Republican Bernard Epton, a millionaire lawyer and former state legislator, has caught the attention of the nation, and of much of the world.

Reporters from around the country and abroad have traipsed after the candidates, many focusing almost exclusively on the racial bitterness that caused Newsweek to label this "Chicago's Ugly Campaign."

Scores of prominent Democrats — including presidential contenders like former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Alan Cranston — have paid dutiful visits, to bolster Washington's candidacy, urge party unity and deplore efforts to make race the central issue.

But for many, the issue clearly is race.

Almost all black voters — now 40 percent of the population — will choose the 60-year-old Washington, as 84 percent did in his 30,000-vote primary win. Washington told them in that primary campaign: "It's our turn."

Many whites will vote for Epton, 61, because his opponent is black, as evidenced by a T-shirt urging "Vote Right, Vote White," buttons picturing watermelons and campaign ditties sung to the tune of "Bye-Bye Blackbird."

Early on, both candidates disavowed race as a campaign issue. But in the last week, their advisers traded charges that each was using it as a campaign ploy. Washington at one point warned of trouble if he lost, and special police patrols were ordered for Tuesday night.

The Republican's campaign slogan was attacked as a racist message. It urged voters to choose "Epton — Before It's Too Late." The candidate, who dropped the phrase in the final days, declared it was a warning of impending fiscal doom following four years under Mayor Jane M. Byrne.

But for a large number of Chicago voters, particularly the undecided 16 percent of whites cited in a Chicago Sun-Times and WMAQ-TV poll whose ultimate choice will decide the race, the issues are not black and white.

"The large majority of white, working-class Chicagoans are not racists," said John McDermott, publisher of the Chicago Repoyter, a nationally known newsletter that specializes in racial issues.

Ball Player Dies In Fall Down Shaft

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Two 17-year-old American high school basketball players plunged three floors down an elevator shaft Saturday, and one was killed while the other fractured his spine, U.S. and Egyptian officials said.

Police sources said the boys had been pushing and shoving each other near the boarded-up entrance to an out-of-service elevator, but they weren't sure if they were quarreling or just horsing around.

The hotel manager said they were quarreling, and that this led to the plunge from the seventh floor onto the top of an elevator parked on the fourth floor.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman who asked not to be named identified the dead player as Kerry Lance Grant and the injured one as Timothy Whitt, both members of the Westbury, N.Y., High School basketball team.

He said Whitt suffered spine and ankle fractures. A source at the El-Salam International Hospital, where Whitt was taken, said he underwent surgery and was in intensive care.

The embassy spokesman said arrangements were being made to ship Grant's body home.A member of the team, who declined to identify himself, said the group's departure was rescheduled for Sunday.

He said the team arrived in Egypt two weeks ago and played several games against Egyptian teams. The fall occurred as the team was preparing to leave the Misr Travel Tower Hotel in the eastern Cairo district of Abbassiya for a flight home.

The hotel occupies the seventh to 23rd floors of the 25-story building, which has two passenger elevators.

Police sources said there was "some pushing and shoving" among the players as they waited on the seventh floor for one of the elevators.

Grant and Whitt crashed against a boarded elevator door that was under repair, the sources said. It gave way and the two players fell down the shaft, landing on top of an elevator standing at the fourth floor, they added.

The hotel manager, Soraya Hafez, told The Associated Press a quarrel between Grant and Whitt caused the accident.She said the elevators were installed in 1981 and "there was nothing wrong with the doors."

Heart Device Sparks Interest

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah artificial heart is sparking technological advances similar to the rapid growth of knowledge following the launching of the Sputnik satellite in 1957, according to the doctor who implanted the heart.

But this time, the adventure is within the human body, rather than in outer space, said Dr. William DeVries, who put the air-driven pump into the chest of Barney Clark on Dec. 2.

Clark, 62, died March 23 at the University of Utah Medical Center after nearly four months of life on the device. He was the world's first recipient of a permanent artificial heart.

DeVries, speaking to the Utah Heart Association on Friday, said the hospital has been swamped by up to 1,000 letters of support since the historic operation late last year.

"We had no idea it would excite the interest it did," DeVries said.

He predicted that because the artificial heart had turned the interests of a generation of school children to health care, America could expect rapid advances in medicine and health-related fields in the future.

Flooding To Reach Records

By ROB GLOSTER

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Hundreds of Louisiana residents near the Mississippi line braced Saturday for Pearl River flooding expected to reach "levels never before recorded" Sunday as damage in the South approached $300 million.

Elsewhere in the flood-stricken South, waters receded and sunny skies returned to much of the area Saturday.

Louisiana's trouble spot was the Pearl River along the Mississippi state line. The river, which was expected to crest Sunday, steadily rose Saturday and spread over its banks.

"This is an extremely serious situation as water levels will reach levels never before recorded," said the National Weather Service in Slidell, La.

"The entire area east of Interstates 10 and 59 will be threatened by major flooding."

Eleven deaths were recorded during three days of flash flooding that stretched from near St. Louis, Mo., to the Gulf of Mexico. Six people died in Mississippi, three in Louisiana and two in Tennessee.

Damage estimates across the South edged toward $300 million Saturday. Louisiana officials estimated damage at $50 million in the Baton Rouge area and $50 to $100 million in New Orleans. Dozens of other hard-hit areas had not yet assessed damage.

Officials said it was impossible to determine how many people had been evacuated, but scattered estimates from Louisiana and Mississippi — the states with the most widespread flooding — exceeded 30,000.

The Red Cross said 90,000 families in Louisiana had been affected by flooding, either losing their homes or suffering water damage.

In Mississippi, 2,500 homes were damaged or destroyed statewide and more than 10,000 people were evacuated. Towns like Foxworth and Hattiesburg were inundated and Columbia became an island fortified by sandbags.

Hattiesburg alone reported $108 million in damage. Estimates from other flood-ravaged areas in Mississippi still were being compiled.

Weather forecasters Saturday said no rain was expected until next week. But the rains that began Wednesday were so excessive — more than a foot in Louisiana and 17 inches in Mississippi — that rivers crested at record levels.

Officers Say Teen-Ager Killed Father And Uncle

CONROE, Texas (AP) — A 14-year-old boy "just snapped" during an argument, killed his uncle with a shotgun and a double-edged ax and then panicked and shot his father to death, authorities said Saturday.

Authorities refused to release the name of the teen-ager, who was arrested Friday night as he walked along a highway in Walker County, said Montgomery County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Graeter.

Graeter said the boy admitted killing the two men and was being held in the Montgomery County juvenile detention center.

"He was very remorseful, especially about his father," Graeter said.

Texas law does not allow children under 15 to be tried as adults.

"The boy will be taken before a juvenile judge, probably Monday. After that, he'll probably turned over to the Texas Youth Council until he's 18 and then released," Graeter said.

The bodies of Riley Cantrell, 34, the boy's father, and Denton Cantrell, 35, were found in an remote wood 15 miles east of Conroe where they lived in two wooden shacks, said Graeter.

The bodies were found lying outside the shacks Friday morning by Travis Cantrell, the father of both victims. The elder Cantrell went to the shacks when Riley did not show up for work.

"Over a long period of time, there had been bad relations between the boy and the uncle. On Thursday, the uncle apparently told him that he better straighten up or he was going to beat the hell out of him," said Graeter.

"Apparently the boy just snapped and became so enraged that he shot his uncle with his father's 410-gauge shotgun. But that shot didn't kill him so the boy got the ax and finished him off," Graeter said.

The boy's father returned to the shack about 10 minutes later, Graeter said.

Reagan Pledges To Veto Effort To Revoke 10 Percent Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan accused liberal House Democrats on Saturday of trying to "wreck the progress we've made" toward economic recovery, and he promised to veto any congressional attempt to revoke the 10 percent income tax cut taking effect July 1.

Noting that "the date many of us dread more than any other" — the April 15 deadline for filing federal income tax returns — is only a few days away, Reagan promised Americans they will receive the final installment of his 25 percent reduction in income tax rates as scheduled.

"It's not as much as we wanted," he said, referring to his original proposal for a three-year, 30 percent cut, "but it's the most we could get, given the tremendous opposition to any tax reduction by the spending lobbies in Washington."

"All of you who've worked hard to meet your tax obligations this year, be on guard," Reagan warned in his weekly radio address, made Saturday from his Camp David, Md., retreat.

"The liberal Democrats in the House of Representatives want you to pay more, much more," he said. "They want to increase taxes on medium-income families by $3,550 over the next five years" by eliminating the July 1 tax cut and Reagan's plan to tie tax rates to the cost of living.

Group Dedicates Tree To Veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — No Greater Love, a group founded to aid the families of U.S. servicemen taken prisoner or missing in Southeast Asia, on Saturday dedicated a tree at Arlington National Cemetery as a "living memorial" to all American POWs and MIAs.

Veterans Administration chief Harry N. Walters and Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, were among about 150 veterans and family members who attended the dedication ceremony near the cemetery's Memorial Amphitheater.

Carmella LaSpada, board chairman of No Greater Love, said the amelanchier tree planted by the group would serve as "a living memorial to America's POWs, MIAs and to all those who keep their dream alive."

Christopher Schott, 18, of Wheaton, Md., whose father, Col. Richard Schott, was killed in action in Vietnam, placed a last trowelful of earth around the tree, while Christine Hess, 15, of Arlington, Va., daughter of Maj. Frederick Hess Jr., missing in Laos, planted a forget-me-not flower.

A stone tablet unveiled at the base of the tree read, "We Will Never Forget You."

The ceremony was held in conjunction with President Reagan's proclaiming of Saturday as National POW-MIA Recognition Day. The date was chosen because on April 9, 1942, thousands of Americans taken prisoner by Japanese forces in the Philippines began the "Bataan Death March."

U.S. Speeds Heat-Seeking Rockets To Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The United States rushed heat-seeking "Red Eye" rockets and other weapons to Thailand on Saturday in what U.S. officials called a show of support for Thai forces fighting Vietnamese troops deployed along the rim of western Cambodia.

At the same time, Thailand claimed its forces had killed at least 250 Vietnamese soldiers who it said had crossed the Cambodian border over the past nine days. The Vietnamese are part of Vietnam's Cambodian occupation force, which has been sweeping the Thai-Cambodian frontier for Cambodian rebels since March 31.

Visiting U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Paul Wolfowitz said the American weapons were expedited deliveries of arms already ordered by Thailand, through direct purchase and under credits provided by the Foreign Military Sales Program.

The hand-held "Red-Eye" surface-to-air rockets, which use heat detectors to find targets, were flown into Bangkok's military airport in a 10-day operation which also will include delivery of extended-range 155mm howitzers and ammunition, U.S. Embassy officials said.

Two C-130 U.S. Air Force transports are scheduled to arrive Monday to discharge the howitzers and ammunition, and a merchant vessel is scheduled to arrive April 19 with more of the these weapons, the officials said. The United States has not said how many weapons are involved.

A statement from Thailand's military command said 12 bodies of Vietnamese soldiers had been found inside Thailand, raising the number of Vietnamese dead to 250 since the border sweep began. The Thais suffered five dead, 20 wounded, and one missing, the statement said.

Vietnam denies its forces have intentionally entered Thailand, and has not announced casualty figures. The conflicting claims have been hard to assess because foreign reporters were banned from the frontier until recent days.

"It is not the first time the Vietnamese have intruded into Thai territory. You turn to the past and see that they have made incursions every dry season," Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda told reporters accompanying him on a frontier tour.

The pro-Hanoi government in Cambodia on Saturday announced it had telegrammed U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, protesting what it called gross violations of Cambodian territory by the Thais, including attacks by jet-fighter bombers and artillery barrages.

Vietnamese troops have been fighting a three-party Cambodian resistance coalition that controls several bases inside western Cambodia near the Thai frontier. From all accounts, the Cambodian guerrillas have suffered severe losses.

Spokesmen for one of the groups claimed Saturday that Vietnamese who overran the stronghold of Sihanoukville massacred "several hundred" Cambodian civilians with grenades and bayonets. This claim also could not be confirmed.

Sihanoukville was headquarters of one of the three groups that owes allegiance to Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the head of the coalition.

The other two groups are the communist Khmer Rouge and the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

Vietnamese forces entered Cambodia in late 1978 and toppled the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge government, replacing it with a government that has strong ties to Hanoi. An estimated 180,000 Vietnamese troops remain in the country.

Associated Press newsman Visetsak Sanguanpong, who toured the border area Saturday with the prime minister and army commander-in-chief, Gen. Arthit Kamlang-ek, reported a lull in fighting.

A spokesman for the International Committee of the Red Cross at the frontier said hiz agency was taking advantage of the respite to begin reuniting Cambodian families scattered in the chaos of recent days. An estimated 45,000 Cambodians have fled into Thailand since the Vietnam border sweep began.

Hawaiian Valcano Is Silent

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — Kilauea volcano fell silent Saturday, but lava from its latest eruption continued flowing through a remote hillside subdivision where it destroyed several homes, authorities said.

"We can't really say the eruption is over," said Jon Erickson, spokesman for Hawaii Volcanoes National Park. "When it stops it stops."

About 150 residents of the Royal Gardens subdivision, routed Friday and Saturday for the third time since the volcano began its eruption Jan. 3, had been ordered evacuated Friday as an 18-foot high, 900-foot-wide wall of lava approached their homes on the volcano's slopes.

But a vent in the volcano fell silent Saturday morning and the level of activity dropped to its lowest point since Jan. 3, Erickson said. Roadblocks were lifted and residents were allowed back home.

Five structures were destroyed overnight by lava, Erickson said, and a sixth — a model home for the subdivision — was "totally isolated, surrounded by lava, there is no way to get to it."

No other homes appeared to be immediately threatened.

Police and Civil Defense officials gave reporters a tour of the subdivision where burning boulders crashed from the top of the wall of lava and disintegrated as they slowly moved forward. Trees exploded when they came into contact with the flow.

Meanwhile, some contestants in the state's annual hula championship credited the eruption with helping their performances.

Geola Pua, who performed a Kahiko Ole, or ancient chant to the fire goddess Pele, was named 1983 Miss Hula in the Merrie Monarch festival 30 miles from the volcano in the Hawaii county capital of Hilo.

The lava moved so fast Friday night that civil defense officials ordered all observers in the subdivision, even scientists, to stay one block from the front edge of the flow, said Office Duane Rapoza of the emergency command at Hawaii Volcanoes National Park.

"It's quite a spectacular show; we can see the river flowing down the road from where we are sitting," Rapoza said.

Relatives Visit Falklands

SAN CARLOS, Falkland Islands — Relatives of British servicemen killed in the war with Argentina arrived in the Falklands Saturday aboard a passenger liner and put wreaths on the graves of their loved ones in a tiny cemetery on these bleak islands.

A single bagpiper played a dirge as 51 of the 541 relatives were brought ashore in launches and walked to the Blue Beach military cemetery where 14 British servicemen are buried. It overlooks the site where their comrades first waded ashore from assault boats to begin the campaign to recapture the islands Argentina seized on April 2, 1982.

Oil Slick Hits Bahrain

MANAMA, Bahrain — Black, tarry patches of an unchecked Iranian oil spill threatening the Persian Gulf hit Bahrain's northern shoreline Saturday, the state-run television said. Films showed thick globs of oil, hardened by exposure to sunlight, oozing ashore in northern areas of the island-nation of 360,000 inhabitants.

Two wells wrecked by Iraqi bombs in Iran's Nowruz oil field have gushed 2,000 barrels of oil a day into the gulf for eight weeks. The slick has been estimated to cover more than 9,000 square miles, but that figure may not include huge patches believed submerged below the surface.

Exhumation Begins This Week

GLOUCESTER POINT, Va. — Exhumation will begin this week on the remains of what are believed to be Revolutionary War soldiers buried after the Battle of Yorktown.

Seven graves were found on the site of a parking lot planned for a new building.Historians think the area, known as Gloucestertown during the 17th and 18th centuries, was a major field hospital during the Battle of Yorktown in October 1781.

Motion Filed In Groucho Case

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Attorney David Sabih, representing Groucho Marx' companion, Erin Fleming, has filed a motion for a new trial in her battle against the late comedian's estate.

Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Weiss set an April 29 hearing on the motion. Sabih contends the bank withheld evidence in the trial.

Two Die In Collision

FULLERTON, Calif. — A fire truck collided with a car that failed to yield the right-of-way, killing a fire captain and a young man in the back seat of the car, police said Saturday.

Fire Capt. Gilbert Hund, 49, a veteran of 23 years with the Fullerton Fire Department, was thrown from the cab and was struck by the truck's wheels. The second victim was identified as Craigan Woitt, a passenger in the car.

New York Names Chancellor

NEW YORK — Deputy Mayor Robert F. Wagner Jr. was named Saturday as the new chancellor in charge of New York City's public school system, the nation's largest.

Restaurant Hit By Bombs

CHICAGO — A pair of makeshift bombs exploded Saturday at a fast-food restaurant near the giant McCormick Place exposition center, injuring six firefighters and a sheriff's deputy.

The restaurant is across the street from Donnelley Hall, where Democratic mayoral candidate Harold Washington will spend election night Tuesday, but police said there was no apparent connection.

Producer's Neice Kidnapped

ROME — Two men abducted the 18-year-old niece of millionaire movie producer Dino de Laurentiis as she was walking home Saturday night, but she was found safe three hours later, police reported.

They said the men grabbed Simona de Laurentiis a few hundred yards from her house in the fashionable neighborhood of Casal Palocco in southern Rome, forced her into a car and drove off. She had been walking home with a friend who reported the incident to police.

He declined to speculate on the motive for the abduction and it was not known if she was released or broke away from the men.

Employes Work On Own Time

LOS ANGELES — About 200 street workers took to neglected chores around the city Saturday — on their own time and for free — to show the public that "we aren't as bad as they think we are."

The municipal maintenance employees painted rails, clipped hedges, cleared dirt from roads and scrubbed graffiti in four areas that have been without such services because of budget cutbacks.

The clean-up came just before the April 12 municipal elections, which include a question on whether to drop a charter requirement that city wages keep pace with prevailing rates in the private sector.

Squatters Riot In Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Squatters disrupted a memorial service Saturday to victims of the Nazi occupation of Denmark and several hundred later went on a stone-throwing rampage that led to at least 28 arrests, police said.

It was the latest outbreak of street violence in a long-running campaign by the BZ Brigade, a group protesting lack of low-rent housing and youth centers in Copenhagen's seedy Noerrebro district.

Israel Marks Holocaust Day

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — President Yitzhak Navon and other dignitaries on Saturday mourned the 6 million Jewish victims of Nazi genocide during a nationally televised ceremony that opened observances of the annual Holocaust Day.

The ceremony at the Yad Vashem Holocaust memorial in Jerusalem commenced a 24-hour mourning period in which Israelis will observe a nationwide minute of silence and most stores and restaurants will be closed.

Speakers at the ceremony read from Holocaust writings and a choir sang of the Jewish resistance to the Nazis in the years leading up to and during World War II.

Holocaust Day is commemorated here one week before Israeli independence day, which this year falls on April 16 according to the Jewish calendar.

The theme of this year's commemoration is the 40th anniversary of the Warsaw ghetto uprising, the 53-day revolt in which Polish Jews held out against the German army. An estimated 65,000 Jews died in that struggle, which began April 19, 1943.

At the televised ceremony, the Yad Vashem chairman, Dr. Yitzhak Arad, declared 1983 the year of Jewish heroism. Arad said the Warsaw revolt, which ended when the Nazis bombed every building in the compound and killed or captured most of the remaining Jews, sparked other Jewish revolts in ghettos and concentration camps throughout Nazi-occupied Europe.

In 1943, more than 1 million Jews fought in the allied ranks against the Nazis, and thousands of Jewish youths joined underground resistance fighters, Arad said.

The Jews in the Warsaw ghetto knew they would die, he said, but "they fought so that history could write that the Jews fought back."

Speaking earlier on Israel Radio, Arad quoted from the last letter of the ghetto commander, Mordechai Anilevitch. The letter was smuggled out before the Nazis destroyed the ghetto.

"What happened here goes beyond my wildest dreams — the Germans have fled from the ghetto twice. I have lived to see a Jewish defense in the ghetto in all its greatness and glory," he wrote.

Arad, a Holocaust survivor, will head an Israeli delegation to ceremonies in Poland next week marking the ghetto uprising.

The unofficial delegation is braving critics who charge that by going, the Israelis are legitimizing the Polish government's suppression of the independent union Solidarity. The critics also say the group would be endorsing the Polish view of the ghetto uprising as an all-Polish rebellion.

Guerillas Stage New Attacks In El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Guerrillas blacked out about half of El Salvador, divided the country with roadblocks and burned vehicles Saturday to avenge the death of a top rebel commander.

The Defense Ministry put military garrisons on a state of alert as the rebel attacks spread to most of the country.

A ministry statement said military intelligence had detected an increase in arms shipments to the rebels in eastern El Salvador in the past few days, but did not say where the weapons came from.

In Managua, thousands of Nicaraguans attended funeral services in a plaza for Melida Anaya Montes, 55, a top commander of the Salvadoran guerrillas who was stabbed to death there last Wednesday. The guerrillas blamed the CIA and "imperialist buzzards" for her death and vowed to retaliate. The United States strenuously denied any involvement.

Rebels set up roadblocks 59 miles east of the capital on the Pan-American Highway late Friday. They burned nine buses and two private vehicles before dismantling the roadblocks and withdrawing from the highway late Saturday, passing motorists said.

Rebels also set up roadblocks at Santa Anita, 92 miles east of the capital, and in Morazan province on the road from San Miguel, 83 miles from the capital, to the Honduran border and burned two buses there.

Another roadblock on the coast highway 60 miles southeast of the capital prevented buses and most other traffic from heading to the eastern third of the country through Usulutan province. Service station attendants said rebels also placed a roadblock at Quebrada Seca, on the Pan-American Highway in San Vicente province 53 miles east of San Salvador.

The roadblocks early Saturday on the Pan-American and coastal highways cut the country in half by virtually closing down the only two east-west highways.

Guerrillas dynamited electrical towers in San Vicente province, blacking out Usulutan, La Union, San Miguel and Morazan provinces late Friday for the 12th time this year, power company officials in San Miguel said.

They said the attacks on the nation's power grid continued Saturday when guerrilla dynamite charges toppled a pair of power poles north of the capital, leaving about 300,000 residents of northen Chalatenango province without electricity.

Grenades Fired At French Forces

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A group called Moslem Holy War claimed responsibility Saturday for firing two rocket-propelled grenades at French peacekeepers, and warned of more attacks to come against the multinational "occupation force."

Both grenades missed their targets and there were no casualties or damage in the attacks, which occurred 20 minutes apart late Friday night.

A group called al-Jihad al-Islami, or Moslem Holy War, claimed it was behind the attacks that came shortly after French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson wound up a two-day visit to the Lebanese capital.

A check on local eating contests showed that the collard-eating contest in the Ayden Collard Festival is based on quantity rather than the speed with which the collards are eaten. There is no eating contest included in the Grifton Shad Festival, a spokesman said.

U.S. To Expand Its Space Presence

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two years ago space officials held their breath as they tested a radical concept that some thought impractical — a reusable shuttle. Now, with two of the ships in operation, NASA is boldly moving forward with plans to expand America's presence in space.

From launch last Monday to landing Saturday, Challenger, second in the shuttle fleet, performed with a precision that impressed the experts. The only blemish — a problem with the $100 million communications satellite — apparently had nothing to do with Challenger, but was caused by a faulty rocket stage.

"It was kind of a proof flight," said Gary Coen, a flight director. "We're proving that it works the way it was built to work."

In two years, NASA has come from having no proven shuttles to having two of the world's most advanced spacecraft.

When Columbia was poised for launch in April 1981, space agency experts still had a timid uncertainty about the wisdom of trying to fly a winged craft into and out of space. Aerodynamically and scientifically, there were unknowns that caused sleepless nights and gray hair.

Now, after six flights — five by Columbia and one by Challenger — the shuttle system has accomplished these important milestones:

—Proven the practicality of a reusable craft that can land like an airplane. That accomplishment will be enhanced even further on the seventh flight when Challenger lands on a limited concrete runway at the Kennedy Space Center.

—Proven a spacesuit design that is more flexible, more easily put on and less expensive. A pair of malfunctions on the fifth flight helped to iron out small design and application flaws and helped make possible the highly successful 3½- hour space walk by Story Musgrave and Donald Peterson. Astronauts say they now have full confidence in the new suits.

—Proven the design and use of a robot arm that can be used to move large objects in space. The arm was tested on flights of Columbia and is ready for a major application, such as launching or recovering satellites.

—Proven the reliability and cost-effectiveness of using the shuttle to ferry satellites into orbit. The fifth flight successfully launched two satellites.

rocket did not fire long enough, for reasons yet unexplained, and the TDRS went into a misshapen orbit.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, head of the shuttle program, said that a North American Aerospace Defense Command camera in New Mexico was able to photograph the rocket at the moment it failed — a tremendous help to the team investigating the failure.

The photograph presumably was taken when the rocket was 20,000 miles from Earth — 2,000 miles short of its target.

The satellite story is likely to have a happy ending. Space agency engineers plan to use 1,300 pounds of steering propellant aboard the satellite to guide it to its proper station, in a circular orbit around Earth 22,300 miles high.

"The mission was just incredibly routine," said Abrahamson of Challenger's flight. "It really meant the Challenger was a superb spacecraft."

He said that on the first flight of Columbia two years ago, NASA recorded 82 "anomalies" — problems with the shuttle system. Each succeeding flight had fewer he said: 27 on Columbia's last flight and only 22 on Challenger's first.

Among those anomalies was damage to three heat-protecting blankets on the housing of the orbital maneuvering engines that occurred during the shuttle's liftoff Monday. But that caused no problem for Challenger.

"Another orbiter joins the fleet of active spacecraft in the STS system," said Mission Control in the minutes after landing. STS stands for Space Transportation System, the official name for the shuttle program. This flight was designated STS-6; the first five were by Columbia.

There were headwinds of 25 mph — the strongest of any of the shuttle landings to date. The ship's landing gear locked into place 20 seconds before Challenger's wheels kicked up dust on the runway.

The space plane performed near flawlessly on its inaugural flight except for the kind of annoyances expected with any new machine. These included a television mount bracket breaking loose, an on-board computer shutdown and difficulties with the flow of oxygen and nitrogen into the cabin.

With this flight, Challenger joined Columbia as an operational shuttle, designed to go into space again and again for as many as 100 flights. Columbia is in a hangar at the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla. being refitted to take up the European-built Spacelab in September.

The next flight of the shuttle, tentatively set for June 9, will be the first to land at the 15,000-foot runway at Kennedy, only a few miles from its launch site.

The shuttle fleet will grow to four with the addition of Discovery in 1984 and Atlantis in 1985. There is one more ship, the Enterprise, which never had space engines and was used only for landing tests.

The welcoming crowd, of course, did not match the more than 500,000 — including President and Mrs. Reagan — on hand when Columbia returned to Edwards after the fourth flight last July 4. But it was far greater than the 45,000 there for the fifth landing in November, which came early on a weekday morning.

On this flight, the president both messaged and telephoned congratulations to the crew. Vice President George Bush visited Mission Control on Friday and bantered with the four astronauts.

Concerned Over Priests In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek says Pope John Paul II is so concerned about the shortage of priests in the U.S. church that the Vatican has ordered bishops to check what is going on in seminaries and report back to Rome.

The weekly news magazine says the number of seminary students has declined by 75 percent in the past two decades, dropping from 48,000 to about 12,000, with only about 60 percent of them likely to take their final vows.

Battle Shaping Up Over Non-Resident Tuition

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A battle may be brewing in the General Assembly over the tuition paid by out-of-state students attending the 16 campuses of the University of North Carolina system.

The controversy centers on the question of how much non-resident students — whose parents do not pay North Carolina taxes — should be required to pay for their educations.

Three bills have been introduced in the House to sharply raise those rates.

"I don't think we can ignore our taxpayers," said Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford, sponsor of one of the bills.

But UNC system officials are opposing major increases while acknowledging some adjustments may be necessary.

"We have the whole question under study," said UNC President William Friday. "It's not that we don't appreciate the concern.

"What we ask not happen is a prohibitive kind of action that would foreclose" the admission of out-of-state students, Friday said.

Friday said the presence of out-of-state students is vital to the university system because it provides North Carolina students with valuable "exposure to people from all over the world."

The universities also must be able to recruit top-flight research and teaching assistants in order to attract quality faculty, said UNC Vice President Raymond Dawson.

The UNC system has been limiting non-residents to about 15 percent of entering classes, Dawson said, but substantial increases in tuition could reduce those levels further.

He said the Legislature doubled non-resident tuition between 1971 and 1973 and the number of out-of-state students dropped from 15 percent to about 12 percent.

But Rep. John M. Jordan, D-Alamance, said there are about nine applications from out-of-state residents for each vacancy.

Jordan, who introduced two of the tuition proposals under study, contends there will still be enough applications to fill available spaces.

"My general philosophy is the state of North Carolina has an obligation to North Carolina taxpayers and students," he said. "North Carolina taxpayers do not have an obligation to out-of-state students."

Statistics compiled by the General Assembly's budget staff indicate the state pays $4,667 a year for each student attending one of the 16 UNC campuses, but the out-of-state tuition charges average about $2,000 a year.

The figures do not include costs or tuition charges for graduate health affairs programs at UNC-Chapel Hill, where per-student costs are $13,478 a year and out-of-state tuition is $2,790 annually.

Coble raised the issue in February when he introduced legislation calling for a phased-in increase raising non-resident tuition to 90 percent of per-student costs over a four-year period.

The measure would increase the charges to $2,800 this fall, $3,267 the following year, $3,774 in the 1985-86 school year and $4,200 in 1986-87. Ten percent of the final year's tuition would be placed in a reserve to help needy out-of-state students.

Coble said he prepared the bill after learning out-of-state tuition charges are running less than 45 percent of the per-student cost.

"They ought to be paying more than what they're paying now. I don't think 90 percent is unreasonable," Coble said. He admittee he doesn't expect the Legislature to accept that large an increase and is willing to accept changes.

Jordan introduced a bill calling for non-resident students to pay the full cost of their education, or $4,667 a year at current levels. When his measure and Coble's were sent to a subcommittee for study, Jordan introduced a second proposal.

It would tie state support for out-of-state students to the amount the state pays to assist North Carolina students attending private colleges. Those payments are now $850 a year, so out-of-state tuition at UNC campuses would be $3,817 a year.

Jordan billed his second proposal as a compromise, but it was also sent to a subcommittee of the House Higher Education Committee.

Rep. Betty Thomas, D-Cabarrus, the committee chairman, said all three bills are probably appropriations measures but they were sent to her committee for preliminary study.

"It's a policy decision," she said. "It is time to change tuition? It is definitely time to look at it."

"My real feeling is the Appropriations Committee is going to look at all kinds of tuition," she said.

State Board OK's Paving 900 Miles

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Over 900 miles of road will be resurfaced across the state as the North Carolina Board of Transportation approved 48 contracts for highway improvements Friday.

In one case, the board denied an Asheville company the right to bid on the projects.

Thirty-nine of the 48 projects were for resurfacing 940 miles of roads in the state.

Asheville Contracting Company was barred from bidding on the projects following an executive session by the board. The company had bid on two projects, one in Buncombe County and one in Madison County.

Officials said the decision was based on a affidavit by Phillips and Jordan Inc. concerning projects the two companies bid on in the western part of the state.

Phillips and Jordan Inc. has been convicted of bid rigging, an attorney general spokesman said. Asheville Contracting Company has not charged with bid rigging.

The board also approved design contracts for 28 bridge replacement and improvement projects totaling in excess of an estimated $28 million.

Of the 28 projects, 26 were bridge replacements while the other two were bridge improvements.

Four more bridge projects were added to the Federal-Aid Bridge Replacement Program, three in Guilford and one in Alamance.

Jury Seeks Voting Records

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal grand jury has subpoenaed voting records from Columbus County in connection with Colcor, the FBI probe of corruption in southeastern North Carolina.

"It's a second phase," said assistant U.S. attorney Doug McCullough. "This does not involve direct cases that the agents made, but on intelligence they gathered."

McCullough declined further comment.

U.S. Attorney Sam Currin has said the undercover investigation involved allegations of vote-buying.

"We're looking into vote-buying," Currin said in July. "We've encountered vote-buying in Colcor and have also run into vote-buying all over the Eastern District."

In the first phase of Colcor, FBI agents posed as drug dealers, gamblers and illegal metal dealers. Since last July, the investigation has netted 36 indictments. Among them was Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, charged with conspiring to influence a local referendum in Bolton and to influence legislation in exchange for a gold bracelet.

Twenty-five have been found guilty, including former state District Judge Wilton Hunt of Columbus County and former Rep. Ron Taylor, D-Bladen.

Jessie Graham, chairman of the Columbus County Board of Elections, said he received a subpoena Wednesday afternoon seeking precinct-by-precinct results for the 1980 and 1982 Democratic primaries and general elections.

He said the grand jury also wants absentee ballots from one precinct and the registration books from five — Bogue, Bolton, Fair Bluff, Ransom and South Williams.

Graham said he will deliver the records to the grand jury April 19.

Jobless Facing Tax On Benefits

By The Associated Press

About 900,000 people in North Carolina and South Carolina may have to pay state and federal taxes on the unemployment benefits they received, officials say.

"We were always very disappointed with North Carolina," said William Convey, a Charlotte accountant who has helped operate low-income tax service centers. "These poor people coming in with their pittance of unemployment, and then the state was going to tax them. I was so mad I couldn't spell my name."

Many people will pay the taxes out of their pockets or receive a smaller refund than they expected, said Matthew Holland, who works ina tax preparation program for low-income people run by the Charlotte chapter of the NAACP.

"It's mostly people who were out of work quite a while, who didn't make any provision to withhold for taxes," he said. "The problem seems to be more prevalent this year, but that's because there are so many more unemployed."

The U.S. Internal Revenue Service allows a minimum income before it begins taxing unemployment benefits — $12,000 for a single person this year, $18,000 for a married couple.

But in both North Carolina and South Carolina there is no minimum. All unemployment benefits are subject to state taxes.

Unemployed people who learn about the taxes are often surprised, said Betty Bridgewater, Charlotte manager for H&R Block Tax Service.

Orange Will Drop Road Suit

CHAPEL HILL — Orange County officials are dropping a five-year-old suit to block construction of Interstate 40 through the county. Richard E. Whitted, chairman of the county commissioners, said the county would end the suit provided the state Board of Transportation allowed the county to air its views on the route in a public hearing.

The 21.8 miles of highway would connect Interstate 40 where it ends in Research Triangle Park with Hillsborough by skirting Chapel Hill to the east and north, then running just west of N.C. 86 to Interstate 85. The road is scheduled to be completed by the end of the decade.

Museum Of Arm Opens

RALEIGH — The new $15.7 million North Carolina Museum of Art building opened to the public Saturday with a festival of dance and music.

During the festivities Saturday, the Frank Holder dance company performed a new work commissioned for the opening. Other entertainment included classical guitarist Stam Bumgarner, the Matrix Brass Quintet and the Kaleidoscope mime troupe.

The celebration will continue Sunday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. with entertainment including the Red Clay Ramblers string bank, juggler Ken Kaye, the Capitol City Cloggers and harpist Jaquelyn Bartlett. All events and museum admission are free.

Firm Moving Plant To N.C.

BURLINGTON — The 77-year-old Hanlon and Wilson Co. says it will move its manufacturing plant from Penn Township, Pa., to North Carolina, affecting about about 70 Pennsylvania workers.

Kay Barron, personnel director at the firm, said the company hopes to complete the move to a new 55,000 square-foot plant near Burlington within eight months. The company makes heat exchangers for the aircraft and diesel engine industries.

Dare Teen-Ager Held In Shooting

. WANCHESE — A 17-year-old Dare County girl has been charged in a shooting incident apparently stemming from a feud between two Stumpy Point families, sheriff's officials said.

Dare County sheriff's deputies charged Reutha J. Thompson with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflict serious bodily injury. Miss Thompson, who is being held in the Dare County Jail under $50,000 bond, is scheduled for a first hearing in Dare County District Court Tuesday.

Two Men Charged In Robbery

ASHEVILLE — Two men have been arrested on federal bank robbery charges in connection with a holdup Friday at the First Union National Bank on Smoky Park Highway.

Buncombe County Sheriff Thomas H. Morrissey said Anthony Wayne Kelly, 26, was charged with bank robbery and Lyle Anthony Juidelkon, 27, was charged with aiding and abetting the robbery. The robbery occurred about 4:15 p.m. Friday when a man walked through the front door of the bank, pointed a gun at a teller and demanded money. He then climbed over the teller's counter, grabbed a handful of cash, climbed back over the counter and ran out the front door.

State Adds New Vessel

RALEIGH — The Stones Bay II was added recently to North Carolina's Marine Fisheries fleet.

The vessel will be used by the state Division of Marine Fisheries to gather oysters from polluted areas and from slow-growing areas and move the shellfish to public harvest areas.

The 36-foot-long, 18-foot-wide vessel cost $60,000, state officials said. The Stones Bay II joins the 32-foot Cape Fear II at their home port of Wrightsville Beach and will work as far north as Carteret County.

Greensboro Plan Approved

GREENSBORO — The U.S. Justice Department has approved Greensboro's 5-3-1 district plan of electing city council members and ruled that the city may annex 10 square miles of land north and west of the city.

In March 1982 the Justice Department blocked the annexation saying the 13,000 new residents — about 90 percent of them white — would dilute the city's black voting strength and violate the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The council last December enacted the 5-3-1 plan, calling for the election of five council members from districts and four, including the mayor, at large. Two districts will have black majorities.

Strong Furniture Market Expected

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

The rebounding furniture industry, coupled with a surge in consumer confidence, is expected to make the spring Southern Furniture Market the best in more than two years, officials of the Southern Furniture Market Center say.

But furniture officials say the impact of the strengthening housing market won't be felt by the furniture market for at least six months.

"The spring market definitely will be an upbeat market," said Robert P. Gruenberg, general manager of the Southern Furniture Market Center in High Point. "It will be better than anything we have seen in the past two years."

The semi-annual market opens Thursday and runs through April 22.

More than 1,300 furniture makers will exhibit their products in showrooms scattered across the Piedmont from Burlington to Lenoir. The market attracts about 36,000 people over a 10-day period.

The furniture industry has been hard hit by the recession for the past three years. In North Carolina — where about 25 percent of the nation's furniture is produced — lagging sales have forced the layoff of 8.7 percent of the state's furniture workers, leaving about about 81,000 people out of work.

Nationally, furniture manufacturers' sales totaled just $8.3 billion last year, according to Wheat, First Securities Inc. of Richmond, Va. It was the worst year since 1977 when sales amounted to $7.6 billion.

"I think business will be on the upswing this year," said Wallace W. Epperson Jr., furniture analyst for Wheat, First. "There are several factors that will bring about an improvement, the first being the improvement in the economy in general."

Epperson said he expects sales to total about $10 billion this year, climbing to $16 billion by 1987.

Gruenberg said a national study conducted by the University of Michigan shows the consumer-confidence level rose recently by 10 points.

Gruenberg said despite the increase in the number of new housing starts this year, it may be as long as 1½ years before the furniture industry feels the impact.

Clark Predicts Drinking Age For Beer Will Be 21

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The 1983 General Assembly will raise the legal drinking age for beer and wine to 21, the state secretary for crime control and public safety predicts.

Heman Clark made his prediction Friday before a conference of college personnel from 45 institutions of higher learning across North Carolina.

Although the pending Safe Roads Act would raise the drinking age for beer and wine from 18 to 19, "there will be a separate bill introduced, for sure, to be voted on the the General Assembly," Clark said.

"I think it will pass at 21," he said. "There's a strong sentiment in favor of it."

Clark, a former state Superior Court judge from Fayetteville, was keynote speaker at the opening session of the Alcohol Education Conference at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, which was to end Saturday.

Clark, who worked closely with the 27-member governor's task force whose efforts resulted in the Safe Roads Act, said he expects the Legislature to approve the measure in about two weeks after a conference committee resolves differences between House and Senate versions.

Some of the college officials at the meeting expressed fear that a drinking age higher than 19 will run student drinking "into the closet" and out on the highways.

Sue Ross, associate dean of students at Davidson College, which has a permit to sell beer on campus, said a drinking age of 21 will lead students 18 to 20 to drink away from campus.

"What we're suggesting is that college students are going to drink, whether they do it legally or illegally," she said. "They're going to be driving drunk and coming back to campus."

Indictments Issued Over Record Sales

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted 11 North Carolina residents on charges involving the sale of counterfeit copies of popular recordings.

J. Douglas McCullough, an assistant U.S. attorney, said counterfeit recordings seized from the defendants would have accounted for a loss of millions of dollars in legitimate record sales.

The indictments were handed down Tuesday by a grand jury meeting in New Bern. They came two months after eight record companies filed civil suits against 52 stores across the state, alleging that the stores sold pirated or counterfeit recordings.

The indicted defendants, who are different from those named in the civil suits, were charged in connection with the distribution of counterfeit recordings. McCullough declined to say whether any were involved in actually copying recordings made by legitimate record companies.

Record industry officials have said that North Carolina is the center of illegal recording activities.

Andrews Given Driving Permit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A district judge has granted limited driving privileges to U.S. Rep. Ike F. Andrews, who pleaded guilty six months ago to drunken driving and lost his license for a year.

Judge Narley L. Cashwell ruled Friday that Andrews, 57, will be allowed to drive between 6:45 a.m. and 10:45 p.m. with certain restrictions.

The order was requested by Andrews' attorney and was similar to other routine orders that allow limited driving for people convicted of drunken driving.

Andrews, a Democrat who lives in Cary, may drive to and from his office and while "in the course and scope of the responsibilities of his work." He also may drive to get food and medical treatment and to attend church.

Andrews, as an only child, was also given permission to drive to see his mother in Bonlee or for any reason relating to her health and welfare.

If stopped by a law enforcement officer, it will be up to Andrews to prove that he was abiding by the terms of Cashwell's order.

The order came six months to the day after Cashwell gave Andrews a six-month suspended sentence, fined him $500, ordered him to surrender his license for a year and placed him on unsupervised probation for two years.

Andrews had pleaded guilty to drunken driving, speeding and illegal transportation of liquor. He also pleaded no contest to failure to stop for a police blue light and to improper registration — meaning he did not admit guilt but chose not to contest the charges.

In October, Cashwell also ordered Andrews to attend drug and alcohol traffic school. He has completed the school.

Andrews was arrested Oct. 2. Raleigh police officer J.D. McDougle testified in court Oct. 7 that he saw the congressman's car swerve on the Raleigh Beltline, almost sideswipe a car in the adjacent lane of the four-lane highway and drive onto the highway's grass median.

McDougle said that Andrews had refused to take a Breathalyzer test. Andrews later voluntarily submitted to blood tests that shows a blood-alcohol content of 0.19 percent. It is against state law to drive with a reading of 0.10 or greater.

Because Andrews refused to take the Breathalyzer test, he was, by law, ineligible for limited driving privileges for the past six months.

Morgan Holds Shot Lead

Wet Palmer
Arnold Palmer, dressed for wet weather Saturday at the Masters Golf Tournament, stands on the number one tee as he started his second round of play. Palmer was one of those still on the course Saturday evening when play was halted by darkness. (AP Laserphoto)

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Gil Morgan, wearing fisherman's foul-weather headgear against the rain, fought his way to a 1-stroke lead Saturday in the uncompleted second round of the Masters, which was played with Jack Nicklaus injured on the sidelines.

The round was called by darkness with six players — including Morgan — stranded on the rain-soaked Augusta National Golf Club course.

Hord Hardin, chairman of this weather-plagued tournament, announced that the round will be completed Sunday morning, followed by the third round. The fourth round now is scheduled for Monday.

"We tried but we didn't make it," Hardin said.

Nicklaus, the only five-time winner of this tournament and holder of a record 17 major professional titles, suffered a recurrence of a chronic back condition and withdrew, walking slowly and painfully to the clubhouse in a drizzling rain moments before he was due to tee off.

"It's no big deal," insisted the 43-year-old Nicklaus. "My back spasmed and I withdrew. It's no big deal."

It was, however, only the second time in his professional career he had withdrawn from a tournament and marked the first time in a quarter-century that the second round of a Masters had been played in his absence.

The tournament schedule was disrupted Friday when day-long rains washed out play. Intermittent showers, occasionally heavy, leaked from the gray skies throughout the day Saturday, once causing a 32-minute delay that, eventually, proved critical.

Morgan, holding the lead at 7-under-par for the tournament, and his playing partners, Jack Renner and Ray Floyd, still had two holes to play when they stopped at 6:59 p.m. EDT.

The six players who were unable to finish play Saturday marked their position on the course and will return at 8:30 a.m. Sunday to complete the round. The cut then will be made to the low 44 scorers and all within 10 shots of the leader.

The third round will begin at 10:45 a.m., with the players going off in twosomes from the first tee only.

Seve Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who won this title in 1980, had one hole to play and, at that point, was one shot back of Morgan at 6 under par for the tournament.

Floyd was 5-under with two holes to play.

Keith Fergus, who won the Bob Hope Classic earlier this season, was the best of those who managed to beat darkness into the white, colonial-style clubhouse.

He had a 69 and was at 139, 5-under par at the tournament's halfway point.

Jodie Mudd, who turned pro immediately after finishing as the low amateur in the 1982 Masters, and Nick Faldo, a three-time British PGA champion, were next at 140. Mudd had an eagle-3 on the 15th hole on the way to a second-round 68. Faldo shot a 70, including a chip-in birdie on the final hole.

Tom Watson, twice a winner here and the current U.S. and British Open title-holder, defending Masters champion Craig Stadler and Fred Couples were at 141. Couples had a 68, Stadler got a par 72 despite a ball in a pond that produced a double bogey and Watson said he "slopped it around in 71.

"And that's about what it was, too. It was awfully wet out there on the last eight or nine holes."

It was so wet, in fact, that gleeful Lee Trevino trotted up one fairway, happily splashing his way through the water, dragging a club that actually kicked up a wave and looking for all the world like a small boy playing in a mud puddle.

Trevino managed to match par 72 and was at 143.

Jack Renner, who shared the first-round lead with Floyd and Morgan, lost two shots to par and was at 3-under with two holes left. Also at 3-under were 21-year-old amateur Jim Hallet, with two to play, and the legendary Arnold Palmer, who had one to go.

"I did want to finish the round today, but when they tell us to stop, we stop. I can understand the committee's decision," said Palmer, who was soaked to the knees from the puddles and pools that collected on the fairways and caused several minor delays while grounds crews shoved water off the greens.

"It was unplayable at times and we stopped when it was," Palmer said. "It was just wet. It was very hard to play at times."

On several occasions, on his approach shots from the fairway, the club threw up a geyser of water into his face, and he'd pause momentarily to wipe his eyes.

At one time or another on the rainy day, nine players either led or shared the lead.

Morgan was the eventual survivor — if an uncompleted round can be so described.

But he, too, had his difficulties with the weather. The conditions, at best, were marginal for play, and with the subtle demands of the course that wends its way 6,905 yards over rolling hills.

He took the lead with a birdie on the third hole and moved two strokes clear of the field when he holed out from about eight feet on the sixth.

But, with the heaviest showers of the day pelting down, he made bogey-6 on the eighth and bogeyed again on the ninth.

He seemed to be slipping back into the field, but got his second deuce of the day on the 12th, then soared out in front again with a medium-range putt that produced an eagle-3 on the 15th.

The non-practicing optometrist, who kicked off the tour season with victories at Tucson and Los Angeles, grinned broadly from beneath his floppy-brimmed hat and gave a chipper little thumbs-up sign.

But he bogeyed the 16th in the gathering gloom of an early evening and dropped back to 2-under for the day and one slender shot in front.

Ballesteros, a former British Open title-holder, moved to within a stroke of the top spot with a string of three

Navratilova, Austin Gain Tennis Finals

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova breezed to a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Bettina Bunge Saturday and will face No. 3 Tracy Austin in the finals of the $200,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup women's tennis tournament.

Austin will get a chance at the $34,000 top prize Sunday as a result of her 7-5, 7-5 triumph over Andrea Jaeger in a marathon 2½-hour semifinal match.

Navratilova, who won the event last year, had little trouble with her opponent from West Germany, scattering service aces and breaking Bunge's serve almost at will.

"I was surprised it was so quick," said Navratilova following the match. "I was able to do more with her serve because I was able to hold mine so easily."

Bunge said her opponent "played as she well as she has been — I was just too mellow; I didn't do much of anything."

The nationally televised match began during a light rain which became heavier and forced suspension of play for about 15 minutes during the first set."It was hard moving. It was very very wet," Bunge said.

But the rain never stopped the Austin-Jaeger match, which was characterized by monotonous backhand volleys. The 20-year-old Austin said after her second match of the day that she would try to wear Navratilova down in the same way.

"She's got all the pressure and I'm gonna hit every ball," she promised. "I'm ready to stay out there all day."

Jaeger said, "I wasn't serving that well, I wasn't serving well all week." She said she used three rackets during the match because of the wet weather.

But she doesn't think Austin has much of a chance in the finals. "Tomorrow, if Martina plays well, it's going to be close to a kill," Jaeger said.

Earlier Saturday, Austin gained a berth in the semis by defeating Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-3, 6-2 in a continuation of a match suspended Friday because of rain.

In doubles action, Navratilova and Candy Reynolds defeated Hanna Mandlikova and Virginia Ruzici 6-1, 6-1 in a semifinal contest.

The other semifinal, which pits Jaeger and Paula Smith against Catherine Tavier and Andrea Temesvari, was put off until Sunday because of rain.

Here are the results of quarterfinal, semifinal and doubles action Saturday in the $200,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup women's tennis tournament at Sea Pines Racquet Club:

ECU-JMU Are Rained Out

East Carolina's ECAC-South baseball game at James Madison, scheduled for Friday and then delayed until Saturday, was again washed out that day.

The contest marked the third ECAC-South game for the Pirates, 1-1 in the league, that has been rained out. The others were home games with both James Madison and William & Mary. Current plans do not call for them to be made up.

The Pirates are scheduled to host Richmond in a league game today at 1:30 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Palmer Shows A Little Temper In 'Worst' Augusta Conditions

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus pulled out with a sore back and Arnold Palmer showed a brief flair of temper Saturday in the soggiest, sloppiest and most miserable round in Masters golf history.

Nicklaus, a five-time winner, withdrew dramatically after taking three swings on the practice tee before his scheduled 10:20 a.m. EST start.

A muscle spasm had stricken him on the practice tee and had become worse when he bent over to putt on the practice green.

A loud moan went through the crowd, 10-deep around the tee.

The second round started two hours late — 11 a.m. — with players going off from the first and 10th tees simultaneously — a procedure that normally would be abhorrent to the very sedate Masters.

Play started under leaden skies with an intermittent drizzle. There were periodic heavy rains and one downpour like an imported Niagara Falls delayed play for 32 minutes.

Traffic jams developed around many of the tees, with four three-man groups piling up at the 13th, one of them including Palmer, the 53-year-old four-time champion who electrified galleries with an opening round 68.

"We told jokes," Palmer said.

He called it the worst conditions he had ever seen in his 29 Masters.

"I've played in worse conditions in other places," he said. "I've played in rain, snow and hail in Britain. It was worse two years ago at Bay Hill (the site of Arnie's own tournament in Orlando, Fla.) when wind blew the tower down.

Pools of water dotted the beautiful, flower-bedecked layout, and every time a player struck a ball on the fairway, splashes of water flew through the air. better."

Palmer's temper got away from him after he had finished the 17th hole 3-under-par for 35 holes, four back of leader Gil Morgan, who had to stop because of darkness with two holes to play.

As Palmer sought to tee up on the 18th, an official told him that play had been suspended.

Arnie objected and said he wished to finish. He asked the official to check with Chairman Hord Hardin in the tournament headquarters.

Palmer slammed his club on the ground and was obviously disturbed.

"I was a little upset because I thought they planned to make us finish this round, then play two rounds tomorrow," he said.

"I thought that would be very unfair."

But when the message came back that only one round would be played Sunday with the last round Monday, Arnie's anger was assuaged.

Nevertheless, he was seen talking animatedly to Joe Black, president of the PGA, as the two trooped through the mud to the clubhouse.

"I wasn't arguing," Palmer said. "We were just talking. Once they told me that only one round would be played Sunday, I had no objections at all.

Back Spasms Cause Jack To Withdraw

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, the only golfer to ever win the Masters five times, withdrew from the tournament Saturday after suffering back spasms as he prepared to tee off in the rain-delayed second round.

"I took three practice swings with the driver, and on the third one it all spasmed up on me," he said.

Nicklaus, 43, handed the ball to his caddy, Willie Peterson, stuck his driver back in the bag and said, "I'm sorry. That's it."

The gallery, standing some 10 or 12 deep in a drizzling rain, let out a moan, then applauded politely as Nicklaus made his slow, painful way back to the clubhouse.

Back spasms, a recurrence of a chronic condition, forced Nicklaus to withdraw before the start of the fourth round of the 1980 World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio. He said that was the only other time he has withdrawn from a tournament in his 21-year professional career.

Nicklaus, who had a first-round 73, 1-over par and well back in the field, said he first felt a hint of impending problems last Monday, and sought treatment at that time.

"It got a little better, but I didn't get it all out," he said.

"I was sort of aware of it all week, just in the context that it wasn't quite right. It was not hurting, but it wasn't quite right.

"When I was warming up today, I was feeling it a little more than I wanted to feel it."

He said he went to the putting green shortly before his 12:20 p.m., tee time. "I tried to bend over to putt, and I really couldn't bend over."

He returned to the white, Colonial-style clubhouse, attempted to work it out by stretching, and took a pill to reduce the pain, "but it didn't have time to work."

"It's no big deal," insisted Nicklaus, stretched out on a bench in the champions locker room and obviously in pain. "It's exactly the same thing that happened in the World Series."

Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional championships, said the debilitating spasms now have have occurred "five times in the last 2½ years."

He said the incident probably will have no effect on his future schedule, except, he said, forcing a smile "that it has a definite effect on my winning the Masters."

He said he will return home to Florida for rest. His next scheduled event in the Tournament of Champions in California in two weeks. "I know I won't want to do anything for a week or 10 days, but I'll probably be okay for the Tournament of Champions."

Nicklaus said he has had numerous medical examinations and consultations concerning his back problems. Surgery is not indicated, he said.

"There's nothing wrong with my back," he said. In effect, he said, the problem is a pinched nerve.

On previous examinations, he said, doctors have told him: "You have three options. Change your golf swing. Quit playing golf. Or let it hurt. I said I didn't like those first two very much."

Seek Nominees For Top Athletes

Nominations are now being accepted for the Daily Reflector's second annual Collegiate Athletes of the Year awards.

To be honored are the top female and male athletes in the college ranks who are either students at East Carolina University, or, who are Pitt County residents attending college elsewhere.

Last year's winners were All-America football player Tootie Robbins, who became a starter with the St. Louis football Cardinals as a rookie; and Sam Jones, former basketball star, who is now a member of the U.S. Team Handball team, and a top candidate for the U.S. team in next year's Olympic Games.

Nominations may come from the general public, and the deadline for their receipt is Saturday, May 30. Those nominating athletes should include some information as to why they are making the nomination — what the athlete has done to merit the award.

Presentations will be made in May to the collegiate athletes. Awards will be made later in the month to the high school male and female athletes chosen from nominations by the schools in Pitt County.

Send nominations to Athlete of the Year, Daily Reflector Sports Department, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville N.C. 27835-1967.

Net Owner Says Brown, Kansas Acted Unethically In Hiring

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Former New Jersey Nets Coach Larry Brown was wrong not to ask for the club's permission to apply for the top basketball position at the University of Kansas and the school "acted very unethically" in hiring Brown, Nets' owner Joe Taub said Saturday night.

"What Larry Brown did was very wrong," Taub said before the Nets' National Basketball Association game against the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Brown resigned Thursday to accept the Kansas job, 12 days before the start of the NBA playoffs. Taub said he was upset that Brown did not consult him before applying for the position.

Brown, reached in Lawrence, Kan., Saturday night, said: "It surprises me he said that after the things he said to me. I'm very disappointed. He was the one who mentioned Ray Perkins to me and said that's why he wanted me to resign. I still care for (Taub) and agree it was wrong on my part.

"I agree it wasn't handled well and I'm upset about that," Brown added. "I didn't want anyone to know (I applied for the Kansas job) because I didn't know if anything would come of it."

Brown talked to Kansas officials Monday, but did not discuss it with Taub until Wednesday night.

"It was not a Ray Perkins situation. He went to Alabama with permission. Larry Brown went without permission," Taub said, referring to former New York Giants head coach Ray Perkins.

Perkins announced with three games remaining in the 1982 National Football League season that he would leave the Giants to become head coach at Alabama. Perkins, who remained with the Giants until the season ended, had asked the club's permission to apply for the Alabama job.

"Larry Brown went without permission," Taub said. "Whatever you want to call it — unethical — whatever, it's very disruptive to the organization."

Brown said he wanted to remain with the Nets until the regular season and playoffs were completed, but Taub told him he would have to leave immediately if he accepted the Kansas job.

"I had no choice. That was the easiest choice I had," Taub said. "I'm not happy toward Larry Brown. When you talk about an organization and talk about one of the most responsible positions, you have to accept a lot of responsibility.

"Winning and losing is not the most important thing to me. It's the way people handle themselves," Taub added. "I'd like, as of tonight, to forget about Larry Brown."

Taub also said he was bothered with Kansas officials' handling of the matter.

"Kansas acted very unethically," he said. "They never spoke to anyone in our organization about Larry Brown.

"If these coaches look at themselves...After the (Herschel) Walker situation, they should take another look at themselves," Taub added, alluding to the outcry by college coaches and administrators after Walker left the University of Georgia after his junior year to sign a contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League.

Taub also said he has not yet considered any coaching changes for next season. Bill Blair, Brown's assistant, is the interim head coch and General Manager Bob MacKinnon has a dual role as an assistant coach.

"It's ridiculous to mention Hubie Brown," he said, responding to published reports that the New York Knicks coach may be considered as a replacement for Larry Brown. "I don't know who's available."

Taub also said that Blair may be considered as the Nets' coach for next season.

Lopez Leads J&B Tourney

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Defending champion Nancy Lopez, who announced last week that she is pregnant, fired a 3-under 69 Saturday to take a 2-shot lead after three rounds of the $200,000 J&B Scotch Pro-Am at the Desert Inn Country Club.

The 72-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament concludes on Sunday with the winner earning $30,000.

Lopez will enter the final 18 holes with a 54-hole total of 209, 8 under par for the tournament.

The golfers played one round on the par-73 Las Vegas Country Club and one round at the par-72 Desert Inn before moving to the Desert Inn for the final two rounds.

Laura Baugh Cole, who hasn't won an LPGA tournament since joining the tour nine years ago, was alone in second place at 211 after carding a 70 in the third round.

Four shots off the pace after shooting a 70 Saturday was Pat Meyers. Next at 214 was Beth Daniel, who carded a 73 in the third round.

Six players including Amy Alcott, winner of last week's $400,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore Invitational at Palm Springs, Calif., were bunched at 215.

Meanwhile, the three players who shared the lead after Friday's second round shot dropped well off the pace on a sunny day which turned windy in the afternoon.

Jane Lock of Australia had a 78 in the third round, leaving her at 217 while Stephanie Farwig and Vicki Fergon both had scores of 76 and are among the six players at 215.

Lopez, who won the Elizabeth Arden Classic at Miami, Fla., in February, started the third round with a birdie on the par-5 first hole. She bogeyed the third hole when she missed the green to drop back to even on the day.

The 26-year-old native of New Mexico, who became the fifth millionaire in LPGA history last week, then rattled off nine straight pars.

Lopez, who is married to Ray Knight of the Houston Astros and will have her first baby around the middle of November, made her second birdie of the day on the 13th hole from eight feet and birdied the 14th with another eight-footer.

She made an excellent 8-iron shot on the par-3, 148-yard 16th hole when she hit the pin, but the ball caromed 15 feet away. However, she sank the putt for another birdie and finished with two pars, giving her a 33 on the back side.

Lady Bucs Finish Fourth In NCSU Invitational

RALEIGH — The Lady Pirates of East Carolina University were the only North Carolina team still in the running for the championship of the North Carolina State University Invitational softball tournament after the first day and finished fourth after losing again to Northern Kentucky 3-0 in the first game Saturday. The loss to NKU marked the first time the Lady Pirates have been shut out in their 14-7 1983 campaign.

The Lady Pirates dropped an 11-1 decision in their opening game of the tourney against Northern Kentucky Friday, but rebounded with wins over Western Carolina, 9-8, and NCSU, 4-2.

NKU picked up all three of its runs Saturday in the third inning, as catcher Marilyn Enzweiler opened with a walk and scored on a triple by pitcher Susan Grau. A base hit by Sandy Woeste drove in Grau, and Woeste advanced on a single by Pam Patrus. Kathy Smead singled to drive in Woeste and give NKU its margin of victory.

Patrus and Grau rapped two hits in three trips to the plate for Northern Kentucky, while catcher Fran Hooks led ECU with a two-for-three performance.

"I think we came out a little flat after the games with Florida State," said ECU coach Sue Manahan. "Northern Kentucky came out very strong; I think they surprised us a little because they were so consistant at the plate.

"We had two good games against Western Kentucky and N.C. State. We hit the ball hard. We did a good defensive job in the mud; we've gotten a little tentative.

"We've hit throughout the lineup; we haven't had a lot of hits together."

In the Lady Pirates first loss to Northern Kentucky, a 10-run explosion in the third inning proved too much for ECU. Grau went 3-3 in that game with a double, while Patrus and Deb Fields posted 2-4 efforts. Lisa Attinger added two hits in three trips for NKU. Mitzi Davis and JoLanda Clayton each slapped a pair of hits in four at-bats for the Lady Pirates, while Tamara Franks went 2-3.

East Carolina got back on the winning track agaisnt Western Carolina, as Davis had three hits, including a double, in four at-bats. Clayton added a double while going 2-3, and Hooks and Graves also went 2-3. Yvonne Williams and Melody Ham each had two hits in four trips.

Amy Konides went 3-5 including a double and a triple for WCU, while teammates Judy Greene, Lori Toney, Sandy Kruse and Robin Langley each went 3-4 for the Catamounts.

Against N.C. State, Liz Cox reached first on an error, Williams singled and Graves dorve in Cox in the top of the eighth to break a 2-2 tie. Ham's sacrifice fly to left allowed Williams to cross home for the final margin.

Hooks posted a 3-4 performance at the plate for ECU, while Ham and Roth went two-for-three. Williams added a pair of hits in four at-bats. Tracy Johnson belted a double along with two singles in four trips for the Wolfpack, while Cynthia Livengood legged a triple.

Hart In Charge Of ECU Marketing

East Carolina University Director of Athletics Ken Karr has announced the selection of Dave Hart Jr. to fill the position of Assistant Athletic Director for Marketing.

Hart, 34, comes to ECU from LeGrange, Ky., just outside Louisville, where he served as head basketball coach at Oldham County High School from 1977 to 1982. During his coaching at Oldham, Hart became heavily involved in high school sports marketing than received national recognition.

Within two years of accepting the position at Oldham, the attendance for games increased from 150 to a sellout situation on season tickets of 3,200. Hart's efforts were noted in an article he authored for Scholastic Magazine, as well as, in speaking to the National High School Coaches Association in Indianapolis.

"We need fulltime attention in the areas of promotions, ticket sales and advertising," said Karr. "Our need is to increase revenue capabilities for football, basketball and baseball. With the restructuring of our operations to involve this fulltime position, I feel we are taking positive steps for our athletic program."

A graduate of the University of Alabama in 1971, Hart played basketball under C.M. Newton and then worked as a graduate assistant in the program while earning his master's degree in 1972.

Hart will assume his duties at East Carolina the final week of April.

consecutive birdies, beginning on the 13th. He reached the greens on the two back-nine par-5s, the 13th and 15th, in two and 2-putted. And he made it from about 15 feet on the 14th.

Nicklaus, who had an opening 73, said his back began to tighten on him early in the day. He said he knew he was in trouble when he went to the putting green and "tried to bend over to putt. I couldn't bend over."

He retreated to the clubhouse in a vain attempt to work out the kinks, but couldn't do it. With his starting time approaching, he went to the tee and took three practice swings. On the third one, he said, "the back just all spasmed up."

He gave the ball to his caddy, said "that's it. I'm sorry," and slowly made his way back to the clubhouse.

"Well," he said, stretched out on a bench in the champions locker room a few minutes later, "so much for the Grand Slam."

SEC Stars Top ACC

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky's Charles Hurt scored 29 points and grabbed 15 rebounds to lead the Southeastern Conference All-Stars to a 107-90 victory over the Atlantic Coast Conference All-Stars in the Southern Shootout exhibition basketball game Saturday.

Hurt, a 6-foot-6 forward, connected on 14 of 17 field goal attempts in leading the winner's second-half surge.

He got support from Terry Lewis of Mississippi State with 23 points and Auburn's Odell Mosteller, who pitched in 20.

The ACC led 47-45 at halftime but fell behind after intermission in part because of poor shooting and ball handling. The ACC hit only 38 of 92 shots for 41.3 percent and committed 17 turnovers to the SEC's 11.

In addition, the SEC won the rebounding battle 64-57, with Hurt's 15 leading both squads.

Chip Engelland of Duke led the ACC team with 22 points, hitting on 11 of 20 shots from the field. He got scoring support from a pair of non-ACC players who were added to the roster — Dan Ruland of James Madison with 15 points and Jeff Pehl of Richmond with 12. Clemson's Fred Gilliam added 11 points.

N.C. State leads with a two-day total of 570, while the UNC White Team follows with 571, Wake Forest at 575, Duke at 576 and Florida at 584.

Rick Riddle of Duke and Mark Thaxton of WFU lead the individual race at 140, followed by NCSU's Nolan Mills, Duke's Chuck Taylor and Florida's Chip Hall at 141.

One Swing Makes Barfield A Hero

TORONTO (AP) — It took Jesse Barfield just one swing of the bat to turn from goat to hero.

Barfield, who helped the New York Yankees to score two runs when he dropped a two-out fly ball in the top of the eighth, came back in the Blue Jays' half of the inning to blast a three-run homer and help Toronto to a 7-4 victory in its American League home opener Saturday.

"I'm just thrilled," said Barfield, the Blue Jays' 23-year-old right fielder. "I just hope it will keep things going."

Barfield's blast came against Rich (Goose) Gossage, the ace of the Yankee bullpen.

"The first time I played a game against Goose, he blew me away on four pitches," said Barfield. "Today, I went up there with confidence and he gave me a good pitch to hit."

Gossage concurred.

"It was a fastball right down the middle, belt high," said Gossage. "I have to admit, though, that the wind (gusting up to 30 miles an hour) blew me around a little.

"Today, I just didn't feel confident. When I tried to really hump it up and throw, I didn't know where it was going."

Barfield's fielding mistake came on a sinking line drive by Jerry Mumphrey. After the ball fell from his glove, center fielder Lloyd Moseby kicked it attempting to pick it up, allowing the second runner to cross the plate.

"I lost it in the light standard," said Barfield. "It wasn't a mental mistake. I can remember losing balls there last year, too."

With the Yankees leading 4-2, Gossage came on in relief of starter Doyle Alexander and promptly walked ex-Yankee Dave Collins.

Willie Upshaw made it 4-3 on a run-scoring single to center and after Cliff Johnson advanced the runners to second and third, Ernie Whitt launched a towering fly to short right. Three Yankee players — second baseman Willie Randolph, right fielder Steve Kemp and center fielder Jerry Mumphrey collided, allowing the ball to drop and Collins to score.

Barfield then blasted his tie-breaking homer.

Toronto took a 2-0 lead in the second. Cliff Johnson walked to open the inning and moved to third on a single by Whitt. Rance Mulliniks and Lloyd Moseby later followed with RBI singles.

New York, aided by three walks, tied the game 2-2 in the seventh on a bases-loaded double-play grounder by Kemp and a run-scoring double by Don Baylor — his first RBI of the season.

Roy Lee Jackson, the fourth Toronto pitcher, picked up his first victory of the season with 2 1-3 innings of relief.

Cleveland 8
Baltimore 4

CLEVELAND (AP) — With the bases loaded and a driving rain threatening to distract his concentration, George Vukovich's only thought was bringing home an insurance run or two for the Cleveland Indians.

Instead, his rocket into the right field seats Saturday brought in four runs during Cleveland's six-run eighth inning as the Indians won their home opener 8-4 over the Baltimore Orioles before 52,150 fans.

"I didn't know how the ball carries in this ballpark," said Vukovich, who was playing his first game in Cleveland Stadium since coming to the Indians from Philadelphia in an off-season trade. "But that's the best I can hit it."

The grand slam was the first of his career, and it was also the first-ever given up by Baltimore left-hander Tippy Martinez.

"The mound was slick," Martinez said. "I slipped. It was a nothing fastball."

Indians' rookie Julio Franco, also acquired from the Phillies, followed Vukovich's homer with his first major league home run.

"I think my 12-year-old boy could have hit those fastballs," Martinez said.

Also making his Cleveland Stadium debut Saturday was rookie Indians' Manager Mike Ferraro, who last year coached the New York Yankees along with new Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli.

Ferraro had inserted Vukovich as a pinch hitter in the seventh inning and then left him in the game to play right field. Ferraro decided to let the left-handed hitter bat against Martinez in the eighth, although Vukovich has almost no track record against left-handed pitchers.

"I had that (the grand slam) in the back of my mind," Ferraro said.

Ron Hassey had snapped a 2-2 tie in the eighth by greeting Martinez with a one-out, run-scoring single. Manny Trillo then walked and after Rick Manning struck out, Vukovich smacked his grand slam and Franco belted his homer.

Baltimore reliever Sammy Stewart, 0-1, took the loss after walking the first three Cleveland batters in the eighth, one of whom, Alan Bannister, was thrown out trying to steal.

Rick Sucliffe, 2-0, allowed two runs on five hits in eight innings. Reliever Ed Glynn came in to pitch the ninth but gave up Leo Hernandez's first major league homer and later walked Eddie Murray with the bases loaded. Dan Spillner recorded his second save of the season by striking out pinch hitter Gary Roenicke with the bases loaded.

Communication Breakdown
Three New York Yankees appears to be making a synchronized effort to field a fly ball hit by Toronto Blue Jay Ernie Whitt in Saturday's American League game in Toronto. The three are, from the top, Willie Randolph, Jerry Mumphrey and Steve Kemp. No one made the catch. (AP Laserphoto)

The Indians took a 2-0 lead in the first against Scott McGregor on Toby Harrah's sacrifice fly and Andre Thornton's run-scoring single, giving him nine RBI in four games.

McGregor surrendered seven hits in six innings for the Orioles.

Baltimore scored in the third when Hernandez walked, stole second and scored on Dan Ford's double. The Orioles tied it on Ken Singleton's solo blast in the fourth, his first homer of the season.

Kansas City 5
Milwaukee 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jerry Martin will remember Kansas City's 1983 home opener for the bitterly cold weather and his first inside-the-park home run.

"Will wonders never cease?" Martin said after going 3-for-4 in the Royals' 5-2 victory over Milwaukee Saturday. Martin said it was the first time he had ever performed the feat.

"I hope you got a good look at it because it's probably the last one you'll ever see," Martin said.

The Royals announced the paid attendance at 17,078, more than 3,000 fewer than the next-lowest home opener crowd in Royals Stadium history. Temperatures were in the high 30s at game-time and a cold, intermittent drizzle kept the crowd huddled in blankets throughout the game.

"It's not baseball weather but the players are professionals and they know it's just something we have to fight our way through," said Royals Manager Dick Howser.

Larry Gura, 2-0, checked Milwaukee on six hits before Dan Quisenberry pitched the ninth.

"Right at first the cold weather felt bad, but once I got loose I was okay," Gura said.

The Brewers jumped on Gura for two runs in the first. Paul Molitor singled leading off, Robin Yount tripled and Cecil Cooper scored Yount with a groundout.

John Wathan singled and scored Kansas City's fourth run on a double by Willie Wilson in the sixth. Hal McRae walked in the seventh, went to second when Willie Aikens walked behind him and made it 5-2 on Martin's RBI single.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Rod Carew's grand slam highlighted a five-run fifth inning and Fred Lynn drove in three runs with three singles Saturday, powering the California Angels to a 10-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

Watson's Pinch Hit Lets Braves Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Pinch-hitter Bob Watson's run-scoring, ninth-inning single gave the Atlanta Braves a 6-5 victory over San Diego Saturday, but the veteran was surprised at the Padres' strategy.

"I was a little surprised. There was a base open with nobody out, and probably 99 out of 100 times you usually load the bases to get the force at home or set up the double play," said Watson.

Watson bounced his game-winning single over third off losing reliever Chris Welsh, 0-1, after Glenn Hubbard opened the inning with a drive to right-center and took second when right fielder Six-to Lezcano bobbled the ball. Bruce Benedict then reached first when Welsh fumbled his sacrifice bunt, sending Hubbard to third and bringing Watson to the plate.

"Over my career with the infield in I'd say I'm hitting about .650," said Watson, who admitted Padres Manager Dick Williams may have elected to pitch to him because he had struck out in a similar situation Friday night in Atlanta's 4-2 victory.

" Managers play their hunches and he (Williams) may have thought of last night when the situation was similar and I struck out with none out and runners on second and third," said Watson.

"I was surprised, but I will take it anytime," he said.

Watson's hit gave the victory to reliever Pete Falcone, who took over for starter Phil Niekro in the fifth inning and shut down the Padres, allowing only three hits the rest of the way.

San Diego scored three runs in the fifth to tie it at 5-5 and knock out Niekro. Singles by pinch-hitter Tim Flannery, Gene Richards and Steve Garvey got one run home and then first baseman Chris Chambliss booted Terry Kennedy's bouncer, allowing two more runs to score.

The Braves had reached San Diego starter John Montefusco for three runs in the first inning on an RBI single by Dale Murphy and Bob Horner's first home run of the season, a two-run shot off the left field foul pole.

The Braves made it 4-0 in the second on a single by Benedict, Niekro's sacrifice bunt and a run-producing single by Brett Butler. Atlanta added another run in the fourth on Benedict's solo homer, his first of the year.

The Padres got two runs back in the third on consecutive singles by Garry Templeton and Luis Salazar, Montefusco's sacrifice bunt and a sacrifice fly by Richards and an RBI single by Juan Bonilla, one of four hits for him in the game.

St. Louis.....5
New York.....0

NEW YORK (AP) — St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog is convinced more than ever that Joaquin Andujar is one of the best pitchers in the National League.

"Joaquin's throwing strikes, he's not walking anybody," Herzog said after the razor-sharp Andujar fired a four-hitter and struck out a career-high nine in a 5-0 victory over the New York Mets Saturday.

Andujar, 1-0, and did not walk a batter as he won his ninth straight game over two seasons.

"That's been the difference. ... control. Today he was sharp. You're going to have to hit him to beat him," said Herzog, whose world champion team won its first game of the season after losing its opener.

At one stage, Andujar retired 15 batters in a row. He needed only 80 pitches to breeze through the first seven innings and finished with 112 as no New York runner got past second base.

"Hub (Kittle, pitching coach of the Cardinals) changed my windup," Andujar said when asked what brought about his pinpoint control. "I used to kick my leg high and look at the sky. Now I look at the catcher.

"The name of the game is strikes. I go to the mound now and concentrate on throwing them. I also believe in the guys behind me."

St. Louis scored all of its runs in the seventh off New York starter Mike Torrez, acquired by the Mets from the Boston Red Sox during the off-season.

Ozzie Smith opened the Cardinals seventh with a double and moved to third on an infield single by Keith Hernandez. Torrez then walked Darrell Porter to load the bases.

George Hendrick followed with a single to make it 2-0 and Ken Oberkfell followed with a bunt single to reload the bases. David Green then chased Torrez with his two-run hit.

Mike Ramsey greeted reliever Jesse Orosco with a sacrifice fly.

The loss was the first for the Mets in three decisions.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ron Oester homered and doubled to drive in four runs Saturday, highlighting a 13-hit attack that carried the Cincinnati Reds to an 8-4 victory over the winless Chicago Cubs.

Oester's three-run homer in the first inning capped a four-run rally that began with two outs and sent the Cubs to their fourth straight defeat. The Reds are now 3-1, the first time they've been two games over .500 since 1981.

Frank Pastore, 1-0, left after giving up two runs on eight hits in eight innings. Tom Hume pitched the ninth and yielded a two-run single to Leon Durham.

Dave Concepcion started the first-inning uprising with a two-out double off starter Chuck Rainey, 0-1, and scored when third baseman Ron Cey barehanded a slow roller by Johnny Bench and threw past first base for an error. Dan Driessen then singled and Oester slugged his second home run of the season.

Scot Thompson drove in Chicago's first two run with a triple in the fourth and an eighth-inning double.

Cincinnati chased Rainey in the fifth when Bench singled and scored on Oester's double. The Reds added three runs in the sixth on Concepcion's two-run single and Bench's RBI single.

Philadelphia.....5
San Francisco.....4

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gary Matthews cracked a two-run homer and two singles and the Philadelphia Phillies took advantage of wildness by San Francisco pitchers to beat the Giants 5-4 Saturday.

The game was tied 3-3 entering the seventh when wildness contributed to San Francisco starter Mike Krukow's downfall.

Matthews walked with one out and was caught stealing. But Joe Morgan walked and the count on Mike Schmidt went to 2-0 when Jim Barr replaced Krukow, 0-2. Schmidt walked and Tony Perez was safe when center fielder Max Venable dropped his fly ball for an error, enabling Morgan to score and Schmidt to advance to third. Bo Diaz then followed with an RBI single.

Philadelphia scored once in the first on a pair of walks and a run-scoring single by Perez. The Giants tied it in the second when Darrell Evans singled, stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on a single by Krukow.

Duane Kuiper's single and Venable's second homer of the season put the Giants ahead 3-1 against starter Dick Ruthven in the third.

But Pete Rose was safe on third baseman Tom O'Malley's error with one out in the Philadelphia fifth and Matthews followed with his first homer of the season to tie it.

Reliever Sid Monge, 1-0, who blanked the Giants for 1 1-3 innings, picked up the victory with relief help from Ron Reed, who was touched by Bob Brenley's solo homer in the ninth.

STEAL WHEN READY

KANSAS CITY (AP) — John Wathan, who stole 36 bases in 1982 to lead the major leagues in that department for a catcher, thinks players should have the right to go on their own — but with one exception.

Wathan believes the manager should have the right to flash a stop sign if he thinks the time is not right to steal.

Montreal.....7
Los Angeles.....2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tim Raines singled in two runs during a five-run fifth inning and Charlie Lea and Jeff Reardon held Los Angeles to six hits as the Montreal Expos downed the Dodgers 7-2 Saturday.

Lea, 1-0, retired the first 17 Dodgers in order before pinch hitter Ron Roenicke doubled with two outs in the sixth. Lea, who hurled a no-hitter two years ago against San Francisco, lost his bid for a shutout when Dusty Baker homered in the seventh.

Lea pitched 6 2-3 innings and gave up five hits, including a run-scoring single by Bill Russell in the seventh.

Bob Welch, 0-1, allowed only one hit during the first four innings before encountering trouble in the fifth. Tim Wallach singled with one out, Warren Cromartie walked and Doug Flynn singled to score Wallach.

Lea then sacrificed and was safe on a throwing error by third baseman Pedro Guerrero that loaded the bases. Raines then followed with his two-run single.

One out later, Welch uncorked a wild pitch that allowed two more runs to score.

Montreal, unbeaten in four games, added two runs in the seventh when Los Angeles reliever Dave Stewart walked Bryan Little with the bases loaded and Al Oliver hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Pat Zachry.

Montreal had only five hits in the game.

Here's The Whole Truth About Your Dirty Roof

It's not dirt but black fungus that's turning your roof into an eyesore!..... $38.95 Per Square

How black fungus can quickly blacken a white roof

Black fungus is actually a form of concentrated algae growth. Thriving in warm humid southern climates, this fungus grows and speads much the same way common mildew does in shower stalls. The end result is unsightly black streaks and stains on your roof.

Zinc granules make the big difference.

The porous granules which chemically destroy fungus spores are incorporated into each Celotex fungus resistant shingle. This fungicide is slowly released and washed across the face of the shingle by rain, providing a continuous fungus inhibiting action.

Self sealing and U.L. rated for wind resistance.

Intermittent bands of adhesive are applied across the face of each shingle. When installed on the roof, the warmth of the sun activates this adhesive, bonding the shingles. The result is a sealed down roof that can withstand winds of great force without damage.

The Celotex fungus resistant shingle "limited" warranty.

Celotex FRS fungus resistant fiberglass asphalt shingles carry a 20-year limited warranty both as to fungus resistance and life of these durable fiberglass, self sealing shingles. (Refer to actual manufacturer's warranty for complete details).

Islanders Top Caps, Lead 2-1

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Bob Bourne and Bryan Trottier scored two goals apiece as the New York Islanders whipped the Washington Capitals 6-2 Saturday and took a 2-1 lead in their best-of-five National Hockey League opening-round playoff series.

The Islanders, seeking a fourth straight Stanley Cup championship, can close out the series when the fourth game is played Sunday night at Capital Centre.

Bourne, who scored 20 goals during the regular season, beat WAshington goalie Al Jensen at 9:31 of the first period and made it 2-0 at 14:48. Both shots came from the right wing circle. Trottier scored twice in the second period at 12:39 and 18:04, both times on an assist from Anders Kallur.

Craig Loughlin scored at 3:04 of the third period for Washington, which has only six lifetime victories over the Islanders in 46 games. John Tonelli scored for New York at 6:31 and Scott Stevens for the Caps at 17:34 before another Islander goal was scored by Bob Nystrom at 18:05.

Roland Melanson, making his first start in the playoffs, recorded 26 saves in the New York goal as the Islanders killed 11 Washington power plays. Pat Riggin replaced Jensen in the Washington net after the second period.

A total of 42 penalty minutes was assessed in the first period, including 10-minute misconduct calls against Gord Lane of New York and Randy Holt of Washington, who finished with 18 penalty minutes.

A sellout crowd of 18,130 turned out for the first playoff game in the nine-year history of the Washington franchise. The Caps have won only twice before 22 sellout crowds.

Home Fans Stunned By Probe

BLOOMINGBURG, Ohio (AP) — The hurt was obvious on Roger Grimm's face.

"Nobody can believe it that something like that would happen," said the 54-year-old barber, who remembers when a youngster named Art Schlichter used to come to him for haircuts.

"I guess it's just a story of a small-town boy that couldn't stand the pressures of all that money."

Schlichter, 22, a former Ohio State University football star and now a Baltimore Colts quarterback, was identified Friday as the National Football League player helping the FBI in a sports gambling probe.

He lost nearly $400,000 betting on basketball games this year, according to reports, and went to the FBI after the gamblers pressed him for payment and threatened to tell the Colts about his gambling.

Four Baltimore men have been indicted on charges stemming from the probe.

"It was a complete surprise to me," Grimm said Friday from his two-chair shop in Washington Court House, about five miles from Schlichter's hometown of Bloomingburg.

"How something like that really happens to a kid like that is beyond me," he said.

Grimm pulled out a 1979 magazine article that called Schlichter "The Buckeyes' Soft-Spoken Playmaker." The story portrayed him as a religious, soft-spoken farm boy who was loyal to his hometown. And Schlichter is quoted as saying he'd "probably go back to the country and be a farmer" if he couldn't play football.

"That's the kind of kid I thought he was," Grimm said.

Farming is what most folks do in this slice of rural central Ohio. Bloomingburg, a town of barely more than 1,000 residents, is part of Fayette County, where large farms dot the flat landscape.

Livestock and horses are big in the area, about 40 miles southwest of Columbus and known as the Herefordshire of Ohio. Horse breeding and riding are probably more popular here than anywhere else in the state. Hogs are the main farm commodity.

Grimm said Schlichter had spoken the week before at the Kiwanis Club, talking about the hard work and challenge of football.

"He was down here all the time," Grimm said, noting also that Schlichter had helped with the area Easter Seals Telethon, appearing for 21 hours on television.

He said the recent publicity about the Ohio State star and gambling doesn't matter to him. "I'm one of his biggest fans," Grimm said, adding later, "It doesn't change my feelings for him."

Scott Sefton, 24, has followed Schlichter's career a long time, playing against him on the basketball court in high school, and writing about him for the local newspaper.

"He just had time for everybody," Sefton said, talking about Schlichter's visits Miami Trace High School, his alma mater. "He came to home football games and the people there would swamp him for autographs. He signed every one until the crowd was gone.

"He was just in here the other day to get a jump rope to keep fit," said Sefton, who now works for Ramsey Sporting Good Inc. in Washington Court House. He said Schlichter bought a football at his store during the NFL players' strike.

"I knew that he was involved in gambling...horses," Sefton said. "The people who knew Art knew he was a gambler. But nobody thought he was in that deep."

Sefton likes to boast that he was the first person to call Schlichter an "All American" in a 1977 story. "I tell you, everybody thought a lot of him. We might be guilty of putting him on a pedestal."

Soto Protects His Meal Ticket

By The Associated Press

Mario Soto knew where his meal ticket was — and he didn't mind shelling out some bread to protect it.

The meal ticket was in left field in the person of Cincinnati rookie Gary Redus, who went 4-for-4 with a homer, five runs batted in, three runs scored and two stolen bases to help Soto and the Reds beat the winless Chicago Cubs 7-3 Friday night.

In the bottom of the eighth inning, Chicago relief pitcher Bill Campbell plunked Redus on the arm. Soto, who was accurate enough to strike out 10 Cubs, didn't take too kindly to that. So he brushed back Jody Davis in the top of the ninth.

That drew an official warning from home plate umpire Frank Pulli — and an automatic $50 fine.

"I don't like to hurt anybody. But what if he hit Gary in the head, and we lost him for the season?" Soto said of Campbell's purpose pitch. "We have to protect our players. That's the way the game is supposed to be played."

Manager Russ Nixon backed Soto's decision to pass along a calling card to the Cubs. "There were knockdown pitches going on before I ever thought about playing the game," Nixon said. "That's part of the game and no big deal."

In other National League games, Montreal ruined Los Angeles' home opener with an 8-3 victory over the Dodgers, unbeaten Pittsburgh beat winless Houston 5-3, San Francisco won 3-2 to keep Philadelphia winless and Atlanta beat San Diego 4-2. St. Louis' game against the Mets in New York was rained out.

Redus singled in the first inning, stole second and scored on Dave Concepcion's single. He crashed a three-run homer in the second off Steve Trout to put the Reds ahead 4-2 lead, and made it 6-3 in the third with a two-run single.

"Just everything was falling in, that's all," Redus said. "That's what I wanted to do, get off to a fast start, not my usual bad start. It seems like every other year I have a good start. This is the year for the fast start."

And when Redus was hit by Campbell's pitch, he made the Cubs pay for that, too. He stole second again and scored on Johnny Bench's single.

Expos 8, Dodgers 3

Andre Dawson was about as hot as Redus, going 5-for-5 for unbeaten Montreal and driving in two runs against the Dodgers.

"A couple of years ago, Dawson and I were being honored in Kansas City by Kansas City writers," said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda. "I spoke and said I thought he was the closest thing to Willie Mays in the big leagues today."

Dawson had a triple, double and three singles to tie the Expos' record for hits in a game. Tim Raines added three hits, scored three runs and stole two bases.

"I was a little disappointed in the way we played, especially considering it was our home opener," Lasorda said. "But I know they were trying real hard, trying too hard, I would say."The Dodgers committed three errors.

Pirates 5, Astros 3

Lee Mazzilli had his second game-winning hit in two nights against Houston, this one a ninth-inning two-run homer in the Astrodome following Lee Lacy's third hit of the game, a triple.

"Normally, I don't like hitting in this ballpark," said Maz. "Baseball was just not made to be played inside — but I don't have any complaints tonight."

Giants 3, Phillies 2

Mike Schmidt boosted the Phillies into a tie with his 350th career homer in the top of the fourth inning, but his teammates gave the Giants the winning run in the bottom of the inning.

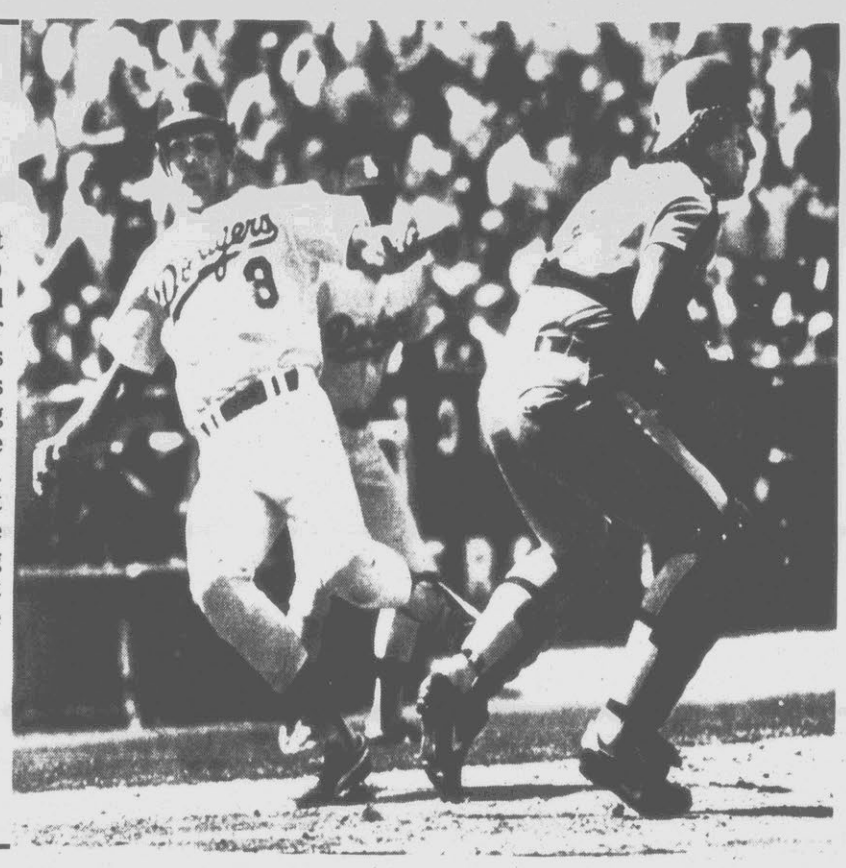
Braves 4, Padres 2

Bruce Benedict, who had stranded two runners in scoring position in the sixth inning, came through in the eighth with a tie-breaking double for Atlanta, appeasing Manager Joe Torre.

"I was happy to get another chance especially after Joe yelled at me after the first time for trying to hit a fly ball."



Under Pressure

Harrison Comments On Rules; Battle Commits

East Carolina University's basketball program has had another verbal commitment, bringing to two who have said they will sign grants-in-aid with the Pirates come Wednesday's national signing date.

Earlier, in the fall, ECU signed William Grady from New Jersey, one of the top players in that state. Two weeks ago, they received a verbal commitment from Wilmington New Hanover's 6-10 Jack Turnbil].

The latest to commit to the Pirates is 6-6 forward Derrick Battle of Northern Nash High School. Battle was selected as the Player of the Year in the Big East 4-A Conference this winter.

"Derrick is a fantastic athlete," Coach Charlie Harrison said. "He's a great kid and I think he'll be a good player for us. He plays big and he plays hard, which is what I look for in a kid."

Battle averaged 18 points a game and 14 rebounds during his senior season.

Harrison said that he hoped to have the signatures of these two, along with several others before the week is out.

Harrison, questioned about the possible change in the NCAA rules on freshman eligibility, said he would oppose any move to make freshman ineligible for varsity competition in the sport.

"Most of what you're hearing now is coming from football people," Harrison said. "I know that it's on the agenda to be talked about at the coaches' meeting in Chicago in May, but I would venture to think that most of the basketball coaches will be in favor of freshmen being able to play. Football people can't make basketball rules without getting basketball people involved."

Harrison said that while he understands the reasoning behind the rules change, promptly mostly by people like Penn State football coach Joe Paterno, he feels that freshmen can compete in basketball. "It's easier to make the adjustment in basketball. When a freshman comes into football, he's coming from a high school invironment to going up against gigantic guys who've been on a weight program for several years who are pounding each other.

"But basketball is a different sport, especially in our level of competition. The North Carolinas, Kentuckys and Indianas have the luxury of not having to depend on freshmen — that's something we can use as a selling point. A kid can have a chance of coming in and playing right away for us."

While the freshman eligibility rule is still at least a year away, two new rules were put forth during meetings of the rules committee at Albequerque. These still have to be formally approved by the NCAA, but that is usually automatic. They would take affect next fall.

One of these rules would limit to three the number of coach-called times out during televised games. Five are normally allowed in all games. Most coaches save their times out during tv games, however, calling them in the final minutes of play. This rulé would cut down on that.

The other rule would affect ECU more — a rule calling for two shots instead of a one-and-one for teams in the bonus when fouled in the final two minutes of play.

"I kinda like that," Harrison said. "It elminates the judgement of the official as to whether it was intentional or not. But it does take away a certain amont of coaching from the game. I think it was put in more to protect the players."

Harrison said, however, that he would prefer another rule to protect them on breakaways when defensive players actually tackle to prevent a basket.

"I think they ought to go ahead and award the basket and give the player two shots — or throw the tackler out of the game. Somebody is going to get hurt one of these nights — or cause a riot."

Trio Wins To Keep Hopes Alive

By The Associated Press

It may be that three into two won't go, but it seems the Atlanta Hawks, New York Knicks and Washington Bullets are all doing their darndest to try to disprove that theory.

Playing for the last two Eastern Conference spots for the National Basketball Association playoffs, the playoff-hungry Hawks, Knicks and Bullets all won Friday night to keep their hopes alive. The Hawks ripped the Chicago Bulls 138-101, the Knicks edged the San Antonio Spurs 102-100 in overtime and the Bullets beat the Boston Celtics 107-99.

In other NBA action, Kansas City defeated Utah 112-97, Denver whipped Dallas 132-115, Detroit stopped New Jersey 102-92, Philadelphia trimmed Indiana 126-118 in overtime, Phoenix nipped Portland 99-98 and Los Angeles beat Golden State 118-107.

Hawks 138, Bulls 101

Dominique Wilkins scored 34 points and Dan Roundfield had 11 assists, both career highs, to lead Atlanta over Chicago. Both the point total and the victory margin were high for the Hawks this season.

Wilkins had six points in the opening period and 12 in the second before exploding for 16 in the third. He did not play in the fourth. Roundfield had 11 points and 10 rebounds to go with his 11 assists.

"It was probably our best game of the year," said Atlanta Coach Kevin Loughery.

Looking ahead to a game with the Bullets tonight, Loughery noted: "With the game coming up with Washington, it was nice to rest our regulars."

Knicks 102, Spurs 100

Bernard King came off the bench in the last 5½ minutes to score 12 points and lead New York over San Antonio.

King scored a field goal with 13 seconds left in regulation to send the game into overtime tied at 92 and also scored the winning basket with two seconds left in overtime. King scored six overtime points and Rory Sparrow, who led the Knicks with 24, had the other four points for New York.

Bullets 107, Celtics 99

Ricky Sobers scored 27 points, and Greg Ballard hit 10 of his 14 in the fourth quarter as Washington beat Boston.The Bullets won for the 10th time in the last 12 games while Boston had a five-game winning streak snapped.

The Bullets pulled away with Ballard's help late in the fourth quarter after Boston had closed to 80-78 with 8:47 left.

"We couldn't be in this position (for the playoffs) without Sobers," Bullets Coach Gene Shue said. "Ricky Sobers is an excellent competitor. He works on defense. He runs the plays. He feeds the post well. He shoots well."

Kings 112, Jazz 97

Mike Woodson and Eddie Johnson triggered a fourth-quarter surge that broke open a tight game and led Kansas City over Utah.The victory kept the Kings tied with Denver for the sixth and final Western Conference playoff berth with 41-36 records.

The game was tied at 47 at halftime and the Kings were nursing a 76-73 advantage after three quarters. But Woodson's basket at the start of the fourth quarter started a Kings' rally which did not abate until Kansas City led by 15, 94-79, with seven minutes to go.

Nuggets 132, Mavericks 115

Alex English scored 29 points, including 17 in a crucial third quarter, and Dan Issel added 21 points to lead Denver over Dallas.

An English layup midway through the third quarter broke a 78-78 tie and sparked the Nuggets to only their second victory in their last six games.Dallas, 36-42, was mathematically eliminated from the playoffs with its seventh straight loss.

Pistons 102, Nets 92

Isiah Thomas scored four straight baskets late in the second half to lead Detroit over New Jersey. The decision spoiled the debut of interim Nets coach Bill Blair, who took over when Larry Brown resigned Thursday to become head coach at the University of Kansas.

The teams battled through 31 lead changes and 11 ties before Thomas hit a jumper with 4:22 remaining. A Thomas steal 18 seconds later led to the basket that put Detroit ahead for good at 92-89.

76ers 126, Pacers 118

Moses Malone scored a season-high 38 points and Philadelphia held Indiana scoreless in the last 2:15 of overtime to beat the Pacers.Malone, whose previous season high was 35, pulled down 24 rebounds for the Atlantic Division champions, now 64-14.

Suns 99, Trail Blazers 98

The game seesawed in the last three minutes. Portland grabbed a 96-95 lead on a shot by Calvin Natt. Maurice Lucas scored, then Natt scored again with 31 seconds left, giving Portland a 98-97 lead.

Walter Davis missed an 18-footer for Phoenix, but Nance, who had 17 points and 13 rebounds, tipped in the shot to give the Suns the decision.

Lakers 118, Warriors 107

Magic Johnson scored 36 points, 20 in the third quarter alone, as Los Angeles defeated Golden State to clinch the best record in the Western Conference, 56-20.

The game was tied at 64 at halftime before Johnson's broke open the game by outscoring the entire Warrior team 20-12.Kareem Abdul-Jabbar put in 19 points for the Lakers, and James Worthy contributed 18 points off the bench.

The first $1 million gate in boxing was on July 2, 1921, when heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey knocked out Georges Carpentier of France in four rounds.

'Bogus' Third Sacker The Real Thing

By The Associated Press

Wade Boggs' nickname is "Bogus," but the second-year third baseman of the Boston Red Sox looks like the real thing.

After posting the highest batting average (.349) in American League history last year for a rookie appearing in at least 100 games, Boggs is off and running again in the young 1983 campaign.

Through three games, Boggs is batting a mere .545, including Friday night's 3-for-5 — two doubles and a single — and five RBIs in the Red Sox' 8-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"Not a bad night," said the 24-year-old Nebraskan, who rapped a pair of two-run doubles and drove in his fifth run in Boston's three-run ninth after Glenn Hoffman's two-run single snapped a 5-5 tie.

In other AL action, the Oakland A's defeated the California Angels 5-3, the Chicago White Sox downed the Detroit Tigers 6-3 and the Minnesota Twins nipped the Seattle Mariners 5-4 in 11 innings. The Milwaukee-Kansas City game was snowed out.

After the previously unbeaten Rangers rallied to tie the score with three runs in the bottom of the eighth, Carl Yastrzemski and Dave Stapleton opened the Boston ninth with singles — Stapleton's fourth hit — against reliever Mike Mason. Odell Jones came on and walked Rich Gedman before Hoffman delivered his tie-breaking single.

Boggs rapped two-run doubles in the second and sixth innings. The first one gave the Red Sox a 2-0 lead and the second one, a ground ball that caromed off the third base bag, made it 4-2.

"That hit was sweet," said Boggs. "It rolled right down the line. I was hoping it wouldn't go foul. When the ball stayed fair, I said, 'Oh, God, when things are going right, they're going right.'"

Little has gone wrong in Boggs' career. After batting .263 in his first minor league season, he reeled off five straight years of .306 or better, including an International League-leading .335 in 1981.

A's 5, Angels 3

Jeff Burroughs slammed the first pitch from California reliever Doug Corbett for a two-run double in the bottom of the eighth inning to snap a 2-2 tie. Angels starter Geoff Zahn walked Carney Lansford and Dwayne Murphy with one out in the eighth before giving way to Corbett. The A's made it 5-3 on a bad-hop single by Davey Lopes, who drove in a fourth-inning run with a sacrifice fly.

Zahn brought an 18-3 lifetime April record into the game and Burroughs said the veteran left-hander "didn't throw me a good pitch to hit all night."

So he jumped on Corbett's first pitch of the season, spoiling California Manager John McNamara's strategy. "It was an ideal situation to bring in Corbett. He's a sinkerball pitcher and a right-handed hitter was up," McNamara said. "I was afraid I might see only one good pitch, so I took a whack at that first one," Burroughs said.

White Sox 6, Tigers 3

Dennis Lamp and Jerry Koosman combined on a seven-hitter as the White Sox spoiled Detroit's home opener before a crowd of 51,350 and posted their first triumph in four games. With the game tied 3-3 in the seventh, Chicago went ahead on singles by Carlton Fisk, Rudy Law and Tony Bernazard off Milt Wilcox. Harold Baines singled Law home and walks to Greg Luzinski and Greg Walker forced Bernazard home.

The White Sox trailed 3-0 in the fifth when Fisk tripled and scored on Vance Law's sacrifice fly. Rudy Law doubled in the sixth, right fielder Kirk Gibson dropped Bernazard's fly ball and Baines' two-run triple tied the score.

Twins 5, Mariners 4

Bobby Mitchell's RBI single in the 11th inning enabled Minnesota to defeat Seattle relief ace Bill Caudill. Mitchell's single scored Ron Washington, who led off the inning by reaching first base when right fielder Al Cowens dropped his line drive for an error, and was sacrificed to second.

Minnesota reliever Rick Lysander worked six scoreless innings and scattered five hits to pick up his first major league victory, while Kent Hrbek tied the game 4-4 in the top of the sixth on a two-run homer, his first of the season. Hrbek also singled a run across in the first inning. Orlando Mercado and Julio Cruz homered for the Mariners.

Race Day Busy For Crew Chief

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — What does the crew chief on a Grand National stock car team do on a rainy day at the racetrack?

If his car is already solidly qualified for the race and there's no big changes to be made, you'll generally find him catching up on lost sleep or talking about his favorite subject — auto racing.

"That's just natural, I guess, since we're all so involved in it and that's the way we all make our living," said Gary Nelson, the crew chief for the DiGard-Miller High Life team of Bobby Allison.

Nelson, from Redlands, Calif., is totally committed to his job and his sport. As rain fell steadily Friday, washing out the second day of practice and qualifying for Sunday's TranSouth 500 at Darlington International Raceway, he sat and talked about his job.

"Years ago, I probably could have told you this is what I wanted to do," Nelson said. "I knew I wanted to get into racing and once I did, I wanted to go as far as I could in Grand National racing.

"But there's no set pattern in the ways people get to be crew chiefs. Ask 'em and they're all going to have different stories to tell. The common denominator is that they're not afraid to learn all the things it takes to be successful in racing."

Nelson, who had been with the team for three years, left racing and DiGard after the 1979 season because of some internal turmoil on the team. But, after a year running a towing business in Seattle, he came back in March 1981, this time as the team's crew chief.

"I got real tired of that (towing) business," he explained. "You can make a lot of money, but you get real tired of dealing with angry people. When I had the opportunity to come back and do what I'd always wanted to do, I took it real quick."

The year he returned, with Ricky Rudd driving, the team finished sixth in the Winston Cup point standings without winning a race In 1982, with Allison behind the wheel, the team wound up second in the standings with eight victories and 20 top 10 finishes in 30 races.

The mustachioed 29-year-old, who now makes his home near the team's race shop in Charlotte, N.C., says the man in charge has to be a jack of all trades to get the job done.

"You have to have a good knowledge about every aspect of the team," Nelson said. "You don't have to be an engine builder or a chassis man because the guys that work for you can be the experts in those things.

"Some crew chiefs are expert engine builders or chassis men, of course, but I don't have any one expertise. I guess race strategy is my favorite part of racing.

"It's really an overall effort anyway," he added. "You need a combination of financial backing, a good solid team and a good experienced driver. If you suddenly find you don't have any one of those things, you can go from the top to the bottom overnight."

NASCAR officials said time trials to fill the last 18 spots in the 36-car field for Sunday's race would be run today if the rain ends. However, the National Weather Service was forecasting more wet weather.

If the rest of the cars are unable to get in qualifying runs today, the field would be filled from speeds posted in Thursday's time trials, as well as non-qualified cars from the current top 20 point standings.

1. Tim Richmond, Pontiac LeMans, 157.818.
2. Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 156.916.
3. Geoff Bodine, Pontiac Grand Prix, 156.467.
4. Joe Ruttman, Buick Regal, 156.204.
5. Harry Gant, Buick Regal, 155.971.
6. Lake Speed, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 155.897.
7. Terry Labonte, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 155.743.
8. Ricky Rudd, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 155.399.
9. Bobby Allison, Buick Regal, 155.389.
10. Mark Martin, Buick Regal, 155.286.
11. Ron Bouchard, Buick Regal, 155.262.
12. Bill Elliott, Ford Thunderbird, 155.080.
13. Neil Bonnett, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 154.934.
14. Cale Yarborough, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 154.656.
15. Jody Ridley, Buick Regal, 154.467.
16. David Pearson, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 154.282.
17. Dale Earnhardt, Ford Thunderbird, 154.258.
18. Richard Petty, Pontiac Grand Prix, 154.113.

Brown Gives Up Cash For New Opportunity

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Larry Brown has given up the National Basketball Association playoffs, the big city, and an annual salary reported at $200,000 to be head coach at Kansas for $57,000 a year.

"Kansas has an outstanding basketball tradition, and it means a great deal to me to be part of it," Brown, 42, told a packed news conference Friday, one day after resigning as coach of the New Jersey Nets.

"There is no reason why this can't be a great program. I don't think there could be a better situation for me."

When asked the terms of his contract, Brown turned to Athletic Director Monte Johnson and asked, "Should I tell them the truth?" Before Johnson could answer, Brown said he had not discussed the contract terms.

"I guess we'll talk about that later," said Brown.

Jonnson said later the contract was for four years, at $57,000 a year. Ted Owens, who was fired March 21 after 19 years at Kansas, was making a reported $47,500 in salary, with a television show and basketball camp which pushed his total income past the six-figure mark. Brown is expected to have similar opportunities.

Brown coached the Nets, who already have clinched a spot in the National Basketball Association playoffs, for two years. He also coached two years at UCLA, and has made coaching stops at the professional level in Carolina, Denver and New Jersey.

Schlichter's Career On Line With Investigation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Uncertainty clouds the professional football career of Art Schlichter, which just 11 months ago was filled with so much brightness.

The Baltimore Colts' reserve quarterback faces almost certain punitive action from the National Football League after Schlichter, according to federal sources and published reports Friday, bet $389,000 on basketball games in the last three months.

Twenty years ago, the NFL suspended Paul Hornung of the Green Bay Packers and Alex Karras of the Detroit Lions for one year for betting on pro football games. But the league isn't talking about Schlichter's status.

When asked what action the NFL plans against Schlichter, league spokesman Roger Goodell replied, "I couldn't answer that. We're just investigating the situation at this point."

However, the author of Schlichter's biography, "Straight Arrow," Dayton, Ohio, Journal Herald sports editor Ritter Collett, believes the player faces a stiff NFL penalty.

"His career is at stake," Collett said. "The league will have to do something. I think he faces a year's suspension, at the minimum. He has to be one scared, sick lad."

Jack Chester, the player's attorney, said in a prepared statement that none of the federal gambling indictments against four Maryland men involve Schlichter's betting on any team of which he was a member.

Federal law enforcement officials and Chester say Schlichter helped the FBI investigate the four men after he failed to cover $159,000 of his losses and they threatened to tell the Colts about his gambling.

Indicted on charges of traveling in interstate commerce to promote a gambling activity were Harold E. Brooks Jr., 26; Joseph A. Serio, 24, and Charles Thomas Swift, 41, all of Baltimore; and Samuel Richard Alascia of Catonsville, Md.

The player was not named in the charges, returned Thursday by a federal grand jury in Columbus.

The news of Schlichter's involvement stunned those who knew him.

"I love Art Schlichter. He has meant so much to our program," Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce said. In three seasons, the quarterback had helped Bruce earn 29 victories in 36 games, two Big Ten Conference titles and three bowl trips.

Bruce says he has had the FBI in to talk to his squad every season about gambling.

"We want to warn them of the dangers of that kind of thing. We go over everything and who not to get involved with," he said.

The Ohio State coach called the story incomprehensible. He said, "Art's kind of a nervous kid. I just hope he can handle the pressure involved with this. He's handled the pressure before, but nothing like the pressure he will have to handle now."

The 22-year-old son of soybean and corn farmer Max Schlichter was the most celebrated athlete in the history of Miami Trace High School, 45 miles south of Columbus.

He never quarterbacked a loser in three years at Miami Trace. The prep football teams he led won 29 and tied one. He accounted for more than 6,000 total yards and was Ohio's Player of the Year as a senior.

His talents were not limited to football. The 6-foot-2, 200-pound Schlichter led Miami Trace into the state basketball semifinals. He was all-state in both sports.

He started all 48 of his college games at Ohio State. His marks of 8,850 total yards, 7,547 passing yards and 85 touchdowns, running or passing, rank as the second highest in Big Ten history.

He won the conference's Most Valuable Player award in 1981.

The Colts coveted Schlichter so much they made him the fourth player in the 1982 NFL college draft, and the first quarterback chosen. They are paying him a reported $200,000 a year.

Schlichter, however, has not fulfilled his potential. He rode the bench last fall while another rookie, Mike Pagel of Arizona State, took over the Colts' quarterbacking.

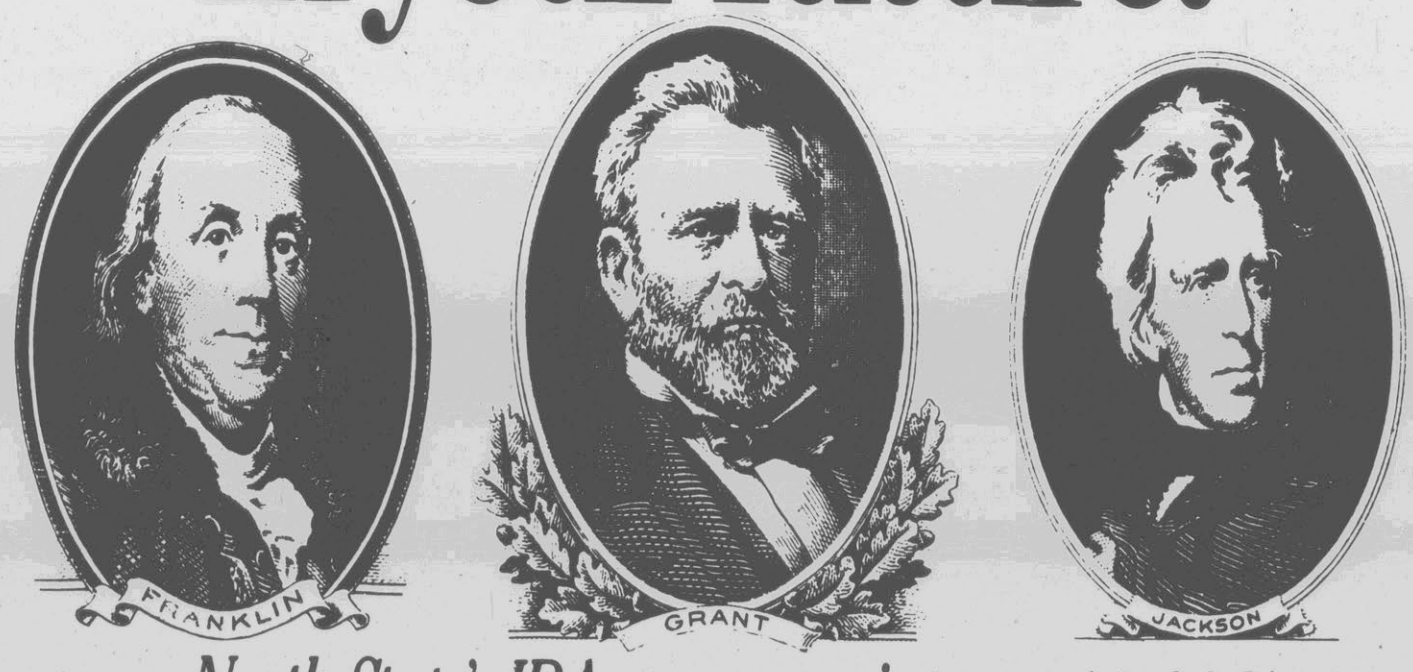
Put more great men in your future.



North State's IRA pays more interest: 11.00%

The real difference between all the available IRAs (Individual Retirement Accounts) is the amount of interest you get paid.

So check around. You'll soon find that North State's IRA pays you more.

And retirement will bring more big bills like Jacksons, Grants and Franklins when you open a North State IRA.

As little as $100 starts an IRA at North State. And even if you already have an IRA someplace else, you can open a new one and start getting North State's higher rates.

As with any IRA, you get tax deductions now (deduct deposits up until April 15 from your 1982 return) and income when you retire. So come in and let us tell you about a North State IRA at the office nearest you.

And while you may think that IRAs look a lot alike right now, a higher-rate North State IRA sure will look better later on.

*This is the annualized effective yield of North State's fixed rate IRA based on a daily compounding of a nominal rate of 10.44%

Ducks Unlimited And NASA Join In Unique Conservation Effort — Less than 20 years after the first ever photographs by Louis Daguerre in France in 1839, scientists realized the value of looking at the world from aloft when they attached cameras to hot air balloons and sent them wafting over Paris.

Today, satellite imagery is part of our lexicon and an indispensible tool for such things as weather forecasting, oil exploration — and raising ducks.

Raising ducks?

That's the idea behind a partnership between Ducks Unlimited and NASA to inventory North America's invaluable wetlands.

Ducks Unlimited, the world's largest waterfowl conservation organization, will use the images sent from Landsat 4 to decipher how it can best serve the needs of the nation's waterfowl and perhaps slow the continued loss of wetlands that is now estimated at 400,000 acres annually.

"The joint venture between DU and NASA will also make it possible for federal, state and private natural resource managers to obtain Landsat 4 data," says Dale E. Whitesell, executive vice president of Ducks Unlimited.

Landsat 4's sophistication is such that it can inventory areas as small as one-quarter acre, about the size of an average city lot. The purpose behind the wetlands inventory is to find the areas most critical to waterfowl and the myriad of other species that depend on wetlands for their very existence.

"It is paramount that we tend to the most productive areas first if we somehow want to lessen the impact of the annual loss of wetlands," says Whitesell. "Those areas lie mostly within waht is called the prairie pothole country — the Dakotas, Montana and western Minnesota."

So the next time you hear your favorite television weatherman predicting rain for your planned family outing, remember that elsewhere scientists are using similar information to predict the future of America's waterfowl. And waterfowl like nothing better than a little rain.

Clean Water Too Close To Lose — Most Americans want clean water — and they're willing to pay for it! A recent public opinion poll conducted by Louis Harris and Associates sponsored by the Natural Resources Council of America, found that a large majority of Americans want clean, safe water even if higher taxes and additional pollution controls are required.

Curbing water pollution was named by 74 percent of the adult population as "very important" in improving the quality of life. Americans also do not feel they must sacrifice environmental quality for economic growth. By 89 percent to six percent, citizens are convinced that such a trade-off is not necessary.

Public support for the Clean Water Act, which Congress will consider extending this year, is also strong. Ninety-four percent of the public wants the act to be kept as tough as it is currently, and 60 percent favor making the Clean Water Act stricter.

Quail Conservation Stamp — "Providing a more promising furture for the quail may be easier this year because of the quail conservation stamp and print program," says Rocky Evans, executive vice president fo Quail Unlimited. "We are using a portion of the monies from the sale of the conservation print program to organize fund-raising committees in local areas of the nation where quail need out help. Ninety percent of the funds raised by banquets stays in the state where it is raised with 60 percent going directly into habitat projects in the local committee's area and 20 percent going into the state's wildlife department for quail related projects. Another 10 percent is used in assisting the start-up of additional chapters within the state and 10 percent to cover the administrative costs."

Richard Plasschaert, winner of the 1981 Federal Duck Stamp competition and the designer fo the first state duck stamp print of North Dakota, has been chosen as the 1983 Quail Unlimited Artist of the Year. The design is a setting with two Bob White males and a female.

The 1983 edition, just released, consists of 1,500 signed and numbered prints of the highest quality and sells for $130 with a quail conservation stamp included. There are only 10,000 individually numbered stamps priced at $5 each, $20 for a block of four and $50 for a collectors mint sheet of 10 quail stamps.

Quail Unlimited chapters are organizing all across America with over 200 chapters in the beginning stages. Quail Unlimited is financing programs to develop quail habitat management on public lands in immediate areas where the chapters are organizing. These projects include controlled burning and the planting of special quail and upland game food plots that not only benefit quail, but deer, wild turkeys, grouse and numerous species of upland game wildlife and songbirds all over America.

The quail stamp and print program will allow QU to move rapidly into numerous areas of the nation where the quail needs additional help.

Anyone interested in assisting with a local chapter of QU or obtaining information about the collectors stamp or limited edition print should write Quail Unlimited National Headquarters, P.O. Box 10041, Augusta, Ga 30903 or phone (404) 724-6647. A donation or a QU membership is tax deductable as QU is a national, non-profit, tax-exempt conservation organization.

USFL Watching Week's Crowds

By The Associated Press

This is the sixth weekend of the fledgling United States Football League — but its first real test economically, according to Commissioner Chet Simmons.

"I think it's going to be a learning process, starting this weekend," said Simmons, referring to the USFL's first head-to-head battle with baseball for television viewers and the fans' dollar.

Simmons has seen attendance in his league drop dramatically in the past few weeks. Two places where the league will compete for fan support are in Los Angeles and the New York area, but even at that the New Jersey Generals are expecting a big crowd for Sunday's game in East Rutherford, N.J., with the Michigan Panthers.

The Generals say they expect a crowd of 45,000 to watch the return of their team from a road victory last week over Arizona in which running back Herschel Walker had his biggest pro day.

The USFL weekend began Saturday night when the Denver Gold, 3-2 and winner of three in a row, hosted the Tampa Bay Bandits, 4-1.

In other Sunday games, the Philadelphia Stars, 4-1, play in Los Angeles against the Express, 3-2; the Birmingham Stallions, 2-3, visit the Chicago Blitz, 3-2, and the Boston Breakers, 4-1, host the Oakland Invaders, 2-3. Monday night, the Arizona Wranglers, 2-3, play the Washington Federals, 1-4.

Tampa Bay, which holds a one-game lead over Chicago for the Central Division lead, is trying to come back from a 42-3 loss to Chicago last Saturday. The Bandits still lead the USFL in total offense, averaging 355 yards per game.

As the Generals, 1-4, host the Panthers, 1-4, the New York Mets have a scheduled doubleheader against the world champion St. Louis Cardinals across the river.

New Jersey Coach Chuck Fairbanks knows the Generals will have to stop Michigan's big-play receivers, Anthony Carter and Derek Holloway, and generate an offense against a club which has made 17 sacks this season.

While the Express goes against the Stars at the Los Angeles Coliseum, the LA Dodgers are expected to send Fernando Valenzuela against the Montreal Expos.

Both Philadelphia and Los Angeles have proven tough defensively so far. The Stars' offense is paced by rookie running back Kelvin Bryant, who has rushed for 514 yards in 124 carries. LA splits the quarterbacking duties between Mike Rae and rookie Tom Ramsey of UCLA. Rae has made 42 of 68 passes for 495 yards and Ramsey has made 46 of 108 for 493 yards.

Birmingham will try to stop Chicago quarterback Greg Landry, 19 of 26 for 277 yards last weekend, and keep the ball out of the range of cornerback Luther Bradley, who made six interceptions. Bob Lane quarterbacks the Stallions, while Earl Gant is their leading rusher.

Oakland's Raymond Chester, No. 2 in the USFL among receivers, seeks his fourth straight 100-yard day against Boston. Chester and running back Arthur Whittington each have 26 receptions.

Lemons At OCU Post

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma City University has hired former Texas basketball Coach Abe Lemons to head the Chiefs again.

Lemons, 61, coached the Oklahoma City basketball team for 18 years before going to Pan American University and later the University of Texas. He was fired by the Longhorns at the end of last season.

The hiring was announced Saturday by Oklahoma City University officials.

Lemons had a 309-181 record at Oklahoma City as coach from 1955 through 1973.

Nichols was at Oklahoma City for only two years, leading the Chiefs to a 14-14 mark in his first season after replacing Ken Trickey.

State May Replace Landfills With Incinerators

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sanitary landfills may give way to incinerators as North Carolina enters the 21st century an industrial state with more solid waste and fewer places to put it, lawmakers and scientists say.

"By the year 2000, we're going to have to look very hard at alternative waste disposal methods," said Ray DeBruhl, director of the N.C. Division of State Construction. "And if we can do it in ways that will benefit both the state and local government, so much the better."

That's the idea behind legislation introduced last week by Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, to create a N.C. Energy Development Authority.

As envisioned by Tison, the five-member authority would foster cooperation between state and local officials in construction of facilities that would burn solid wastes while creating steam or other energy sources for state buildings.

The bill was inspired by Burke County's decision to construct a "resource recovery plant" that would burn 100 tons of garbage a day while producing steam for sale to a local hospital.

Rep. Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, has introduced bills to provide a mechanism for construction and operation of a similar facility in the Charlotte area. Wilmington plans an incineration program but is working independently and will sell the energy to private industry.

Incineration long has been viewed as a way to kill two birds with one stone by getting rid of wastes while producing energy. But in recent years the concept has come under attack.

Critics say incineration plants have been too costly and harmed the environment while performing marginally or failing outright. Voters in several cities across the nation have blocked construction of new plants, while others have been closed.

DeBruhl, however, says the bugs will work themselves out as technology advances. He says he'll push colleagues at N.C. State University, where he's an on-leave civil engineering extension specialist, to study the problems.

"The fact remains that we've got two great needs in our society," he said. "We must dispose of solid wastes and we must provide a mechanism to reduce energy costs. This system offers an answer to both and I can't see giving up on it just because it isn't perfect."

Tison, interviewed Friday, said localities would have to weight the risks of the new technology alongside the growing need to replace landfills.

"We're not forcing anything on anyone," he said. "Counties with plenty of room for landfills may not be interested. But those with a solid waste problem would do well to take a long look at resource recovery, especially if they've got a lot of state buildings that could buy the steam or electricity."

Other potential problems were raised last week during a meeting of the House Water and Air Resources Committee, which is studying Ms. Easterling's three bills.

One bill would bar competition with the county waste disposal unit, which some lawmakers said might clash with antitrust statutes. Another would authorize the state Department of Human Resources to establish areas that would send their wastes to the incinerator, leading some legislators to worry that adjacent counties might be forced to participate against their will.

"I think we've got enough waste in Mecklenburg County to keep the facility running at full capacity," said Gerald Fox, county manager. "I don't see unwilling partners being forced together."

DeBruhl became involved in the incineration program when officials from Burke County asked for help. One of their two landfills would be full by 1984 and the other by 1987 and they didn't want to start another.

DeBruhl studied the situation and recommended a 100-ton-per-day incineration system, using Modular Controlled Air Incinerator units similar to the one planned for Wilmington. The plant probably would be built in an unused field near Broughton Hospital.

If it performs as expected, the plant would extend second landfill's life beyond 1993 while satisfying Broughton Hospital's steam needs all year — except during the coldest months when additional heat will be needed.

In some states, incinerators have been used to produce electricity as well as steam through a process called cogeneration. Wood is mixed with solid wastes as they're burned, and the steam propels turbines that create electricity which is sold to power companies.

Cogeneration has yet to be used in North Carolina, DeBruhl said, because it's considered primarily a moneymaking venture.

"Our intent is not to sell electricity and make a big profit, though some counties might want to consider that someday," he said. "What we want to do is solve those twin problems of energy production and waste disposal."

Recovery Isn't Living Up To Pace Many Executives Had Projected

By JAMES PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumers' confidence in the economy keeps growing. So does that of executives. And future gauges of the economy are upbeat. But the economy itself seems diffident about improving.

"After an upward surge in January, the economy showed signs of a lull in February and March," says Robert J. Genetski, economist of Harris Trust & Savings Bank in Chicago. "For the moment, business activity appears to have leveled off."

Car sales in March rose less than 5 percent from depressed levels of a year earlier, the major U.S. automakers said this past week. Most major retailers reported March sales rose strongly over a year earlier, but analysts noted continued softness in sales of durable goods, such as major appliances, indicating unwillingness among many consumers to take on additional debt.

Yet while the economy currently appears stalled, hopes remain high that it will resume growing this spring.

Confidence among consumers surveyed in March showed its largest monthly increase in nine years, the Conference Board said. Its measure of confidence, with a 1969-70 base of 100, jumped to 76.5 from 65.8 in February, the board said.

A Conference Board survey of executives, covering this year's first quarter, showed their confidence climbed to its highest level in nearly six years. That measure rose to 70 from 60 in the fourth quarter of 1982, and is up from 43 in the final quarter of 1981, the business-supported research group said.

And a survey of executives who buy materials and supplies for U.S. companies showed industrial production climbed to a six-year peak in March, and that new orders also were up, the National Association of Purchasing Management said.

The purchasing agents also joined consumers and other executives in professing increased confidence about the economy's future, with 51 percent of the agents saying they were optimistic about the 12-month outlook for business conditions, up from 25 percent who expressed such confidence in November.

Why so much optimism in the face of a lackluster economy?

Bernard Schoenfeld, an economist with Irving Trust Co., says the surveys reflect a change in people's expectations.

"During last summer people were constantly hearing about another 2,000 people laid off; about factories closing here and there," he says. "So workers had to be nervous about how much longer they would be employed, and that limited consumer spending."

But after the economy perked up in December and January, "people began getting a valid sense that things are no longer getting worse," he says. "Now they're showing workers carrying their lunchbags back to work. So it gives a different tone and releases some of the anxiety that was stored up."

However, he adds, many Americans remain cautious about the prospects for recovery until the economy shows further signs of health — which may account for strong increases in sales of clothing and other nondurable goods, but hesitence in purchases of relatively high-priced durable goods.

The amount of installment credit consumers took on in February is expected to be announced by the government this week.

"Expectations (about recovery) are up, but that will have to be satisified by real live events," Schoenfeld says.

In other news this past week:

—Federal regulators declared Biscayne Federal Savings & Loan Association insolvent, renamed it and took control until the Miami thrift can be merged with another institution. A federal judge denied a petition by officials and shareholders of Biscayne to block the takeover, but a trial to determine whether regulators had sufficient reason to take over Biscayne was scheduled for April 24.

—Assets of the nation's 306 money market mutual funds fell $1.97 billion in the latest week, the Investment Company Institute said. The decline, to $180.10 billion in the week ended Wednesday, was the 18th straight weekly drop in the funds' assets, according to the Washington-based mutual fund trade group. The assets fell $2.2 billion in the previous week.

Georgians Go Fishing For Caviar

DARIEN, Ga. (AP) — Some fishermen have docked their big shrimp boats and taken to skiffs to fish for sturgeon. The reason is sturgeon roe — caviar — which sells for $24 per pound.

The sturgeon began their spring spawning run up the Altamaha River a month ago, and fishermen here estimate more than 1,000 pounds of caviar have been brought in.

According to Gerald Stein, president of Iron Gate Products in New York, which deals in domestic and imported caviar, sturgeon roe from southeastern rivers like the Altamaha is of high quality.

"It's becoming a very popular product," said Stein. "It hasn't taken the place of imported caviar, but there's a whole new group of people wanting to eat it."

Fishermen like Ricky White, 24, and Howell Boone, a 25-year-old shrimper whose family owns a river-front dock here, say sturgeon fishing hasn't always been profitable. Many times, packers refused to pay for the roe, saying it hadn't been properly processed.

Henry Skipper, owner of Skipper's Seafood Dock a few hundred yards upriver from Boone's, is screening the roe that comes into his dock and sending the product on ice to northern markets.

But at Boone's, a Tennessee caviar buyer recently set up shop in a windowless metal shed, buying the roe fresh off the boats and apparently processing it on the spot.

Low Supplies Help Crude Oil

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Petroleum futures were mostly higher Friday as a report on domestic inventories confirmed a substantial drawdown expected by the market.

The American Petroleum Institute reported Thursday that during the week ended April 1, crude oil inventories declined 9.5 million barrels; gasoline, 4.4 million barrels; and distillates, such as heating oil, 6.2 million barrels.

Don McCausland, a petroleum analyst in New York with Lewis & Peat Futures, Inc., said the drawdown in inventories signified a reluctance on the part of refiners to process oil because it had been uneconomical. He said that led to a shortage of readily available petroleum products and pushed prices higher.

He noted that another study indicated imports of crude oil are running about 27 percent behind a year ago, which gave additional support.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, heating oil settled .37 cent to 1 cent higher with the contract for delivery in May at 79.24 cents a pound; leaded gasoline settled .12 cent lower to .70 cents higher with May at 87.78 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices were higher on the Chicago Board of Trade.

There were few new factors inherent in grains to help support prices, which left the underlying factors to fuel the rally, said Walter Spilka, a grain analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

He noted that export business has increased slightly in the past couple days and the extremely wet weather in the south has delayed planting by farmers there.

In addition, farmers still are reluctant to sell much of the grain they already have because they are expecting prices to rise further, Spilka said.

Demand for soybean oil has increased around the world and the Agriculture Department disclosed that the Soviet Union purchased 98,000 tons of U.S. soybeans, both of which added to price support, sources said.

Wheat settled ¼ cent lower to 2¾ cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at $3.63¾ a bushel; corn was 2¾ cents to 3¾ cents higher with May at $3.14¾ a bushel; oats were 1 cent to 4 cents higher with May at $1.69½ a bushel; and soybeans were 5¼ cents to 8 cents higher with May at $6.48¼ a bushel.

Livestock and meat prices were mixed on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

April cattle continued advancing to new highs with support coming primarily from uncertainty about the supply of market ready cattle, said Art Paulsrud, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Cargill Investor Services.

Live hogs were mixed in featureless trading, he said.

Sources said frozen pork bellies were supported by higher prices on wholesale markets.

Live cattle settled .15 cent lower to .60 cent higher with the contract for delivery in April at 73.37 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .20 cent to 1.05 cents higher with April at 70.65 cents a pound; live hogs were .35 cent lower to .40 cent higher with April at 49.70 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .12 cent lower to .35 cent higher with May at 74.07 cents a pound.

Precious metals prices were lower in very quiet trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Prices fell early in the session but recovered later when a sharp selloff that was anticipated failed to materialize, said Howard Levine, a metals analyst in New York with ACLI International.

But midway through the session a report that the United States was sending military aid to Taiwan sent a buying wave through the metal markets, which pushed prices to their highs of the day, Levine said.

A subsequent selloff left gold slightly lower but silver fell sharply as the decline triggered selling by traders who watch technical factors such as trends on price charts, Levine said.

Gold settled $3.70 to $3.90 lower with the contract for delivery in April at $421.70 a troy ounce; silver settled 23 cents to 26.3 cents lower with April at $10.985 a troy ounce.

Schlitz Is Looking For Plant Buyer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Stroh Brewery Co. is advertising for a buyer for its Schlitz brewery in Winston-Salem or Memphis.

Stroh agreed to find a buyer for one of the two southeastern plants as a requirement for getting U.S. Justice Department approval if its takeover of Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. last year.

The department said it would not pursue a pending antitrust suit challenging the merger if Stroh sold one of the plants, and a consent decree was signed by Stroh in April and approved in a federal court in November.

The Stroh-Schlitz merger was approved in June.

Stroh was given a year to find a buyer, and the Justice Department said it could not be either of the brewing industry's leaders, Anheuser-Busch and Miller. If a buyer is not found within that period, the department can ask the court to appoint a trustee to sell one of the plants.

Synfuel Plant Projects Loss Of $773 Million

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's leading synthetic fuels plant is projecting losses in the first decade of $773 million, raising the possibility that even more government assistance will be needed to keep the project going.

The Great Plains coal gasification plant in Beulah, N.D., is being constructed with the help of a $2.02 billion loan guarantee — the largest amount so far awarded in the government's program to develop a domestic synthetic fuels industry.

In a financial report filed with the Energy Department on March 31, project sponsors said that even with this aid, losses in the first 10 years of operation could reach $773 million.

This estimate replaced an earlier projection that the project would earn a net profit of $1.2 billion in its first 10 years of operation.

Sponsors blamed the pessimistic new forecast on falling oil prices. Under a government-approved rate formula, the price of the natural gas manufactured by the plant is tied to the cost of fuel oil and an inflation index. With oil prices falling and inflation slowing, the projected gas prices have had to be lowered, sponsors said, from estimates as high as $10 per thousand cubic feet to perhaps as low as $6.

Now, the sponsors' report said, it could be 16 years before the cost of the plant would be recovered, compared with the earlier projection of nine years.

There is a clause in the loan guarantee that allows the private sponsors to abandon the project if "there no longer exists reasonable assurance" that the plant will generate enough cash to pay back the loans and the owners' equity.

Joel Melarvie, a vice president for Great Plains Gasification Associations, said Saturday that none of the five companies sponsoring the plant had given any indication it wanted to pull out. However, he said talks had begun with the Energy Department over what additional financing may be needed.

Robert Porter, a DOE spokesman, said options being considered include extending the pay back period for the loans to providing additional price supports for the gas the plant will produce.

He said DOE has asked the companies to come back in the next two months with proposals for additional assistance.

"We are hopeful that because of the importance of the project some alternative financing will be arranged," Melarvie said. "We are viewing the situation positively."

He said construction, which is 50 percent complete, is continuing and the sponsors expect to have hired 550 employees to run the plant by the end of this year.

Rep. Mike Synar, chairman of a Government Operations subcommittee which oversees the synthetic fuels program, said Saturday that he had asked the General Accounting Office to investigate what a federal bail-out of the plant would cost.

Spring Garden Tour Planned

Greenville will have its first spring garden tour April 16 under sponsorship of the Greenville Area Preservation Association. Hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Featured will be seven private gardens in the Greenville and surrounding area, the tropical plants at the East Carolina University greenhouse and a tour of the recently restored Robert Lee Humber home at 117 W. Fifth St.

The Humber House, an American Queen-Anne style residence built in 1895, contains 5,300 square feet of living space plus a full cellar of 1,000 square feet. It features walnut, cherry and pine panneling, clam shell bookshelves, imported marble fireplaces and wood moldings with dozens of built-in cupboards. A new landscaped garden enhances the grounds and a new split-rail fence separates the house from the street.

A slide presentation on "Colonial Gardens of Williamsburg" will be shown at the Humber House every hour on the half hour, beginning at 10:30 a.m., by Nancy Meyer.

The following gardens will be open:

•The garden of Dr. and Mrs. Ira M. Hardy II, located at 1721 Circle Drive, is highlighted with a shaded back yard enclosed by a fence, featuring openwork brick on the front side. An old brick patio is laid in a herringbone pattern centered with a flowering pear tree. Walkways extend from this area to gates on eighter side. Wisteria blooms cascade over beam supports on the house side. Borders are filled with blooming shrubs and flowering trees that have been chosen for colors that blend. Bulbs and pansies bloom in beds in the spring and impatiens and begonias in the summer. Hostesses will be members of the Junior Woman's Club.

•The landscaped garden of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howard Jr., located at 148 Longmeadow Road, is only six months old but is well-planted with blooming shrubs and trees. A white Kentucky paddock fence surrounds a small garden at the rear and steps lead to a garden house and play area. The patio of antique brick features a triple-tiered garden of azaleas, rhodendendrons, Indian hawthrone, gardenias and yew with ground covering of strawberry geranium and periwinkle. Hostesses will be members of the Tar River Civitans.

•The informal English cutting garden of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Mann, located at 225 Country Club Drive, has sweeping beds of greenery and blooming flowers which are well-established. Hollies, birch and long-leafed pine provide the height for wide informally landscaped beds that curve from the front to the side and along the rear. Blooming azaleas nestle among forsythia, quince, bulbs and perennials. Azaleas form cornerstones in the beds. Hostesses will be members of the Dig & Delve Garden Club.

•The garden of Dr. and Mrs. Charles G. Rob, located at 230 Country Club Drive, has been pruned and replanted by the owners since June of 1978. A terrace with flower beds is bordered with shrubs that change color schemes throughout the seasons. The bank below the house, near the edge of a creek, have been planted with blooming Exbury azaleas along with hundreds of spring bulbs and lilies. A rose garden, camellias and iris varieties have been added as well as an herb garden. Hostesses will be members of the Junior Woman's Club.

MARRIAGE PENALTY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Working couples who file the long Form 1040 will have to do a little more paperwork if they claim a special new "marriage penalty" deduction. But the tax saving should make it worthwhile.

The marriage penalty is the extra tax that many two-earner couples pay compared with what they would have to pay if they were single and filing separate returns. The 1981 tax-cut legislation offsets part of that penalty through the new deduction.

The deduction for 1982 returns is for 5 percent of the "qualified earned income," up to $30,000, of the lesser-earning spouse. Thus, the maximum deduction is $1,500.

If you claim this deduction on the short Form 1040A, you simply calculate 5 percent of the income earned by the lesser-paid spouse and write that on line 11 of the form.

If you are filing Form 1040 and take the new deduction, you will have to complete and attach Schedule W, which is included in the instructions with your form.

On that schedule, you total each spouse's earned income separately and subtract any adjustments claimed (on lines 24, 25, 26 or 31 of Form 1040) for employee business expenses or payments to an Individual Retirement Account or Keogh plan.

Determine which spouse has less income left after those calculations, multiply that figure by 5 percent and write the resulting deduction on line 29 of Form 1040.

For example, assume a husband earned $20,000, claimed $1,000 employee business expenses and contributed $2,000 to an IRA. The wife earned $12,000 and deposited $1,500 into her IRA. Those adjustments leave the husband with $17,000 "qualified earned income" and the wife with $10,500. Thus, the special deduction is for 5 percent of $10,500, or $525.

For income earned in 1983, the deduction will be up to $3,000 — 10 percent of the first $30,000 earned by the lower-paid spouse.

WHAT IS INCOME?

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you had all the money paid lawyers and accountants each year for advice in determining what is income for tax purposes, you could make a sizable dent in the federal government's deficit.

As long as the federal income-tax laws cover more than 2,000 pages of laws, there probably won't be a simple definition of income. But here are three terms that you should know in filing your tax return:

—Gross or total income is all income that you received during the year except for items that are specifically excluded, such as Social Security benefits.

—Adjusted gross income is gross income minus one or more of 17 separate adjustments. In filing Form 1040EZ, there can be no adjustments; total income and adjusted gross income are the same. On Form 1040A, the only adjustment is the new "marriage-penalty" deduction. All the adjustments, including certain moving expenses, contributions to an Individual Retirement Account and alimony payments, are available to filers of the long Form 1040.

—Taxable income is what's left after the $1,000-per-person and deductions are subtracted from adjusted gross income. This is the figure on which you calculate your tax.

The wedding took place in the sanctuary of Jarvis United Methodist Church with the Rev. James Bailey performing the double ring ceremony. A program of music was presented by Mark Gansor, organist, accompanied by Carol and Amy Moore, violinists. Jerry Jolley sang "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride was escorted by her father and wore a formal gown of candlelight taffeta featuring a Victorian neckline and illusion yoke etched with re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls. The fitted bodice was designed with an overlay of illusion and alencon lace which continued to the scalloped dropped waistline. The back bodice featured a V-yoke of illusion and closed with fabric buttons. Full length fitted sleeves of illusion and taffeta were fashioned with an overlay of lace patterns. The A-line skirt and full cathedral length train were edged with alencon lace. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion scattered with appliques of re-embroidered alencon and pearls held in place by a caplet covered in matching lace and pearls. She carried a garland bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids and ivy touched with pink baby's breath.

The gowns of the bridesamdis were styled identical to that of the honor attendant. Kaye Galloway of Greenville wore a lilac gown, Deborah Bryan of Greenville wore a gown of apricot qiana and Jayne Ann McKinney of Raleigh wore a gown of mint green qiana. Each wore a comb in their hair which was tied with tulle and baby's breath matching their gowns. Hand-carved sandlewood fans entwined with baby carnations and tulle were carried by each. The flower girl, Kristen Galloway of Greenville, wore a floor length dress of yellow taffeta and lace. She carried a basket of pink and yellow carnations touched with baby's breath.

Robert Hellwig of Raleigh, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were Garland Waters of Greenville, Frank Carson of Sanford, Brad Harman of Tazewell, Va. and William Harman of Manassas, Va.

The mother of the bride wore a formal dress of pink imported silk. The mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length gown of ice blue qiana. Both wore a corsage of cymbidium orchids.

Greeting guests were Ella Reynolds and Bonnie Harrington. Florence Norman introduced guests to the receiving line. Christine Waters poured punch. Assisting at the guest register was Dorothy Hellwig and good-byes were said by Mary Harvey.

The couple will live in Greenville after a Caribbean cruise.

The bride is a graduate of Concord College and is a consultant with the N.C. Department of Administration. The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and is an accountant with the N.C. Department of Human Resources.

Clay Cookers

One of the first cooking "utensils" was probably wet mud. It was used to coat a chicken or fish, which was then put among the embers to cook.

The moisture in the food was sealed in by the hardening mud, which was presumably high in clay content. When it was time to serve dinner, a rock was used to crack the clay shell open, the skin was peeled off and the gently steamed meat was eaten.

A baking utensil which follows these lines today is the rough clay pot. Before using, the pot is soaked in cold water until it is wet. Then the food is put inside, and placed into a cold oven, says Dr. Nadine Tope, extension specialist, foods and nutrition at North Carolina State University.

This method can produce tenderly braised meat or poultry without adding fat. Little additional liquid is used.

Extension Food Safety Specialist Dr. Robert Brackett is concerned about the proper cleaning of these clay cookers. "They are so porous. If they are not completely cleaned and dried between uses, bacteria could grow."

He recommends washing the clay pot on the bottom rack of the dishwasher and then placing it in an oven set on low to allow the moisture to bake out

Answers Up To Denominations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After a 10-month study, a doctrinal panel says it can't resolve the issues raised by the application of a denomination serving homosexuals for membership in the National Council of Churches.

The panel says that since there's no clear-cut answer in the council's constitution or statement of purpose, each member denomination will have to decide the issue on the basis of its own concept of what being a church requires.

The report was made by the council's theological unit, the Faith and Order Commission, in advance of a meeting of the council's governing board May 10-13 in San Francisco to discuss the membership application of the Metropolitan Community Churches.

No vote on the long-simmering issue is expected until a board meeting next fall. The cooperative council includes 32 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, and 18 of them previously have submitted 200 pages of commentary of their own views of the question.

We've come on a simple but elegant recipe for a frozen dessert — one we're delighted to pass along to you. Its ingredients are few: kiwifruit, lime juice and a sugar syrup.

The kiwifruits are halved and hollowed out to make "shells;" after that the pulp is pureed, mixed with the lime juice and sugar syrup and frozen. Then the Kiwifruit Ice is packed into the shells and stored in the freezer.

A friend of mine, who sometimes caters dinners, tasted the Kiwifruit Ice at my house and asked for the recipe. He's sure this dessert will make a refreshing and elegant ending for many a party dinner.

If you prefer to serve the Kiwifruit Ice in sherbet glasses, don't prepare the shells. Peel the skin from the kiwifruit and proceed as the recipe directs.

KIWIFRUIT ICE

1½ cups sugar
1½ cups water
8 medium-size ripe kiwifruits
¼ cup fresh lime juice

In a 2-quart saucepan over moderately low heat, stir together sugar and water until sugar dissolves; bring to a boil; boil, without stirring, for 5 minutes to make a syrup; reserve.

Cut a very thin slice from each end of each kiwifruit; halve crosswise. With a teaspoon gently hollow out pulp from each half, leaving at least ⅛-inch surrounding skin, to make "shells." Reserve shells in freezer. In an electric blender or food processor, puree pulp — you should have about 2 cups puree.

In a medium bowl, stir together reserved syrup, puree and lime juice. Turn into a 9 by 9 by 2-inch pan; freeze until mixture begins to harden and is partly frozen — about 1 hour. Turn into a large bowl; beat until smooth and airy. Return to pan or a refrigerator container; cover; freeze until firm enough to pack into reserved shells. Store, covered, in freezer until ready to serve.

Makes 8 servings.

Tokyo Disneyland Opening Set

By ROBERT C. MILLER

TOKYO (UPI) — The $160 million Tokyo Disneyland opening April 15 would still be only a glint in Masatomo Takahasi's eye if the Chiba Prefecture Cabinet had been golfers.

And Disney spokesman Dick Nunis confessed that when the Japanese came up more than 10 years ago with the idea of creating the first foreign Disneyland, the American reaction was thanks but no thanks.

"Frankly," said Nunis, President of Walt Disney Outdoor Recreation Division, "we were not the least bit interested in the Japanese proposal to build the first foreign Disneyland in Tokyo. We had enough problems running the California and Florida operations without starting another Disneyland in Japan."

But the blond six-footer didn't know much about Japanese tenacity.

"There was just no way of discouraging Takahasi-san," he said with a laugh and a bewildered shake of his head. "He kept pestering us and arguing." And...."he shrugged, "here we are."

Where they and some 3,000 construction workers were was in the tidying-up stages of the 60-acre recreational park which only hosted ducks and duck hunters 18 years ago.

There was the fairy-like Cinderella Castle which towers even higher than famed Osaka Castle, Westernland, Adventureland, Tommorowland, Fantasyland, The World Bazaar, Flying Elephants, a Mississippi River steamboat, 27 dining facilities and, of course, Mickey and Minnie.

"The very best of everything we've ever created will be here," said Executive Vice President Jack Lindquist. "Tokyo Disneyland is not a copy of either Florida or California. It will have its own personality."

One difference will be the ticketing. Admission will be by reservation only.

"We have no idea what sort of response we'll get from the Japanese public," Lindquist said. "We figure we can handle about 40,000 a day at the start, so only 40,000 reservations will be accepted. Several days were sold out weeks ago.

"We don't want a single child or adult to leave here unhappy, and were we to open the gates, say for 100,000 or maybe more, it could be chaos. There'd be bound to be some unhappy people. I'm certain that later on we'll increase the number of daily reservations.

Tokyo Disneyland is a joint venture of Walt Disney Productions and the Oriental Land Co. which dredged out Tokyo Bay 20 years ago and created some 2,160 acres of new land adjacent to the Tokyo suburb of Urayasu. Oriental, headed by President Takahasi, is itself a joint venture involving the powerful Mitsui interests and the Keisei Electric Railway Co.

Part of the reclaimed land was to be used for housing, part for commercial development and part for recreation and leisure.

Oriental's idea of leisure was to put in a golf course, knowing that a course seven miles from downtown Tokyo would make money faster than it could be printed.

But the Chiba Prefectural Government balked. It said the reclaimed area must be used for something with more universal appeal than golf. That was when Takahashi bought his first ticket to Hollywood.

It took about 2½ years of planning and actual con-

Dedicates His Time To The Preservation Of Kachina's Tradition

By KIM SUE LIAPERKES
Scottsdale Daily Progress

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Manfred Susunkewa has dedicated the last six years of his career to preservation of an art that has fallen prey to commercialization.

Even some of his own people, the Hopis, have forgotten what Susunkewa has a heartfelt desire to protect — the true kachina.

A painter and textile designer, the artist began creating kachinas as "a protest against the contemporary."

But the protest soon become a quest to educate the misguided as to the kachina's tradition and how to recognize one that is authentic. It became his full-time career.

"The traditional has a sculptural quality I'm trying to get across to the people and my own people," Susunkewa said. "The response has been very great; it's tremendous."

Last year Susunkewa said he set up a booth in Santa Fe, N.M., and featured 31 of his kachina dolls. He sold out in two hours, much to his own amazement.

His kachinas range in price from $165 to $2,000.

When purchasing a kachina, he said most people look for the most elaborate and the most detailed. But traditional kachinas are not elaborate and they are not brightly colored, he added.

"Years ago my ancestors, they would carve the dolls. I think the dolls were not really carved. They made indents into the wood to make the impression (of a doll)," he explained. "Centuries ago kachina dolls were presented to female youngsters...(so) they would become educated on how to take care of the doll and people."

When the child was through playing with the doll, it was hung on the wall, Susunkewa said. "The next day when the youngster wanted to play with it, it was taken off the wall.

"This was the whole teaching part of the tradition," he said. "The whole purpose is still that, but the feeling is lacking now."

The Hopis still give the kachina to the young female, he added. "But now when the child gets a kachina (as a gift), the parents will take it and sell it."

An authentic kachina is made of cottonwood and has very deep colors, Susunkewa said. "The paints that I use are all earth-pigments."

He carves the kachinas with basic hand tools.

And each of his dolls comes with a string around the neck so it can be hung on the wall. He says he does not put kachinas on a base because that is another sign of commercialization.

"Centuries ago we didn't have anything on the walls. They were bare so these would really stand out when they were hung up," he said, "but if it's to your liking you can decorate with them any way you want."

Tennessee's Brother Leads Colorful Life

By JULI CRAGG

COLLINSVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — The late Tennessee Williams, hailed as America's greatest playwright since Eugene O'Neill, was renowned as an eccentric, but his younger brother — who wants to be President — has led an equally colorful life.

Dakin Williams, an attorney in Collinsville, unsuccessfully ran for governor and U.S. Senator from Illinois on a platform of "peace and love."

During a campaign to unseat former Sen. Adlai Stevenson, Williams challenged the senator to a contest of nude centerfolds in a popular magazine.

"Adlai refused. He wasn't in a position to agree," Williams said. "When you look like Adlai, you wouldn't want to pose nude, you would want to wear a big fur coat."

Williams is planning to run for president in 1984, with a platform of nuclear disarmament and the slogan "Love everybody." He says he doesn't worry that the presidential campaign of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., might steal some of his thunder on the nuclear arms issue.

"He's one of the ugliest people God ever created," Williams said of Cranston. "Charisma is important in presidential elections. I may not be a raving beauty but I am next to him."

Williams admits he is a "long shot," but said if he were president he would go to the USSR and stay there until the Russians agreed to do away with their nuclear arsenal.

"We're on the brink of annihilation," he said. "The roaches will take over. They're pretty well protected by nature."

Tennessee Williams cut his younger brother out of his will because of an old grudge, but Dakin Williams still believes the playwright's death will make him rich.

An unauthorized biography Dakin wrote about his brother was rushed into print after Tennessee's death last month.

"Tennessee was opposed to this book and he's made a million sales for me by timing the advent of his death with the book," Williams said. "I'm going to make so much money off this that it's immoral."

Two earlier books Dakin wrote were unsuccessful but he now plans to re-release one, "The Bar Bizarre."

"It's about my own very sexy legal cases," he said.

Williams said the main differences between himself and his brother were his outgoing nature and Tennessee's homosexuality.

"I once wrote him an immature letter that was the beginning of our troubles," Williams said. "I said we've already got insanity in the family, let's not also have gaiety."

Their sister Rose underwent a lobotomy when she was young and is institutionalized in New York.

Williams blames Tennessee for pushing Rose over the brink of insanity with an angry remark after Rose had "squealed on him for a sex party he held while me and my parents were away."

"He passed her on the stairway and said, 'I despise you and I don't ever want to see you again,'" Williams said.

Williams also expects to capitalize on his brother's fame by increasing from $500 to $2,000 the price of an appearance he gets for reading from Tennessee's plays. He also accompanies himself on piano and sings lyrics written by Tennessee.

Williams said Tennessee cut him out of his will after he had the playwright committed for three months in 1970 to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis for drug addiction treatment.

He said the act saved Tennessee's life, but the playwright never forgave him.

"He would always make fun of me, do imitations of me for his friends in parties at Key West," Williams said. "He said in interviews that I put him in a 'snake pit.' That snake pit cost $200 a day."

Williams said he plans to sue the estate on the grounds of "Tennessee's irrational hatred for me." The playwright left virtually all his estate to an indigent writer's fund.

"There is no such thing," Williams said of the fund. "Tennessee is creating it with 10 million bucks that would have been in my pocket if I hadn't saved his life in 1970."

William R.D. King, vice president under Franklin Pierce, was too ill to travel to Pierce's inauguration in 1853. He took office in Cuba, then returned to Washington after recuperating.

A Review

Imagination Applied To The Ice Age

The Valley of Horses. By Jean M. Auel. New York, Crown Publishers. 502 pages, hardback. $15.95.

Another something Number Two. Having just finished Jean Auel's marvelous first novel, "The Clan of the Cave Bear," my first thought about "The Valley of the Horses" was: "here's another run-away novel riding the coat-tails of a best seller!"

I wasn't far from wrong, but my recommendation is: "Read 'Valley.' But read 'The Clan' first. If you read 'Valley' first you're going to spoil a great novel for yourself if you ever get around to 'The Clan.'"

What has happened with Number Two is that a talented writer did a lot of good research for "The Clan" and used what she needed for a believeable plot. She had her 30,000 year old ice-age people acting like 30,000 year-old ice-age people must have acted when they were up to their stone axes in snow. Then she got rolling and used everything she had left over in "The Valley."

That's not to say it isn't a fine piece of writing, it just lacks the smoothness and flow of "The Clan." In "The Clan," I'd read some part about human behavior and think: "Golly, that's probably what happened." In "The Valley," I'd read a part, put the book down and do something else. I'd keep thinking about it and feel: "It could have been that way, who knows?" Finally I realized that it was just a good story with no real scientific or historical significance.

In "The Clan" Ms. Auel fleshed out the fossils of pre-history and made a scientific contribution. She brought together those things that survived, namely stones and bones and spores and gave them life again. She probably could have written "The Valley" with no research.

The author starts "The Valley" with Ayla, the excellent character she created in "The Clan," and has her wandering across what will eventually be Asia Minor when all that ice melts. Ayla finds a snug little cave in which to sit and crave for her kind of man. She has never seen "her kind of man" because she was raised by a kind of hominoid, which, although they lacked verbal communication, were gifted in survival in a harsh environment.

While Ayla sits in her cave making friends with all sorts of wild things, weaving baskets, and chipping rocks, every other chapter is about two brothers, Jondalar and Thonalan.

Jondalar and Thonalan, at least in the early part of the story, could have been John and Tom from down the road. They'd have fitted well in a four-wheel drive pick-up truck with two days training. They spend a better part of their time playing around with the girls while the author works them across Europe to where Ayla is holed up in her cave. You knew they were going to get there, and could pretty well figure out which one was going to get the girl.

Ms. Auel has more new tribes and names going early in "The Valley" than "Exodus" and "Leviticus" put together. This bothered me at first, then I discovered I could keep up with the story without remembering any of them. These new names aren't important. What is important is how well the author uses her imagination in sweeping up the reader in what might have been some of man's customs, mores and crafts at, or towards, the end of the last ice-age.

No trace of the spoken word survives the thirty thousand years since the ice-age. It was up to the storyteller to imagine what sounds and thoughts were part of Ayla's kind of human communication system. She gives Jondalar and Thonalan a total spectrum of language with all the insights and emotions to express every feeling and thought.

Ms. Auel did this in "The Clan," but it was in a more convincing manner, with sounds and signs shadowed by the superstitions and instincts of the people of the clan. In "The Valley," there is, for me, too much talk and detail. In spite of this, I was caught up in the plot.

It was an exciting time in man's history. Jonathan, Thonalan, and Ayla will keep you involved in that history. Reading "The Valley of Horses" is well worth the time and insight it will give — and take.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

Three new books at Sheppard Memorial Library feature advice on physical and mental well-being

"How To Stay Healthy in an Unhealthy World" (call number 613) is Dr. Steven Davis' guide to the prevention or cure of illnesses and injuries which are caused by our everyday environment.

Dr. Davis describes the hazards of tainted foods, unsuspected poisons, outdoor activities, and tools and products used and kept around the home. In addition to giving tips on making home surroundings safer, he advises on precautions to be taken when away from home. The physical dangers posed by legal and illegal drugs, alcohol and sexually transmitted diseases are explained. An entire chapter is devoted to "the hazards of being a child," from risky toys to nutritional deficiencies.

Dr. Davis' book will both sensitize the reader to common threats to personal safety and equip him or her with the knowledge to prevent mishaps.

"Carlton Fredericks' Nutrition Guide for the Prevention and Cure of Common Ailments and Diseases" (call number 615.854) is an alphabetical listing of physical disorders and the dietary adjustments which may prevent, cure or improve disorders. Fredericks, a noted nutritionist, discusses major ailments such as heart disease and multiple sclerosis as well as more temporary or less critical complaints such as the common cold and difficulty remembering or forgetting dreams. Specific foods, vitamins, minerals, or other dietary supplements are recommended, and their beneficial functions are explained in terms of each disorder.

Fredericks also indicates foods and other substances which aggravate physical disorders and which should therefore be avoided.

"Dr. David Reuben's Mental First-Aid Manual" (call number 158) is subtitled "Instant relief from twenty-five of life's worst problems." The problems include trying marital and family events, addictions, job-related stresses, psychological and emotional difficulties, financial worries, and social crises. For each problem, Dr. Reuben describes a person in a tight situation and then suggests, often step-by-step, the actions and reactions which will help that person regain control, calm and confidence.

Although Dr. Reuben's methods may not always succeed where psychiatry, drugs, religion, traditional self-help books and "exotic solutions" have allegedly failed, his rational recommendations may appeal to victims of "emotional accidents" and guide them in figuring out "what makes it hurt, and, what to do to take the hurt away."

Annual Conference For Children's Literature

ECU News Bureau

"The Pictures and the Books: Illustration and Children's Literature" is the topic of East Carolina University's seventh annual Children's Literature Conference on Friday.

The conference is designed for all adults involved in the field of children's books — educators, authors, librarians, and parents. All sessions will be held in the Willis Building.

Illustrator Gail Haley, a Charlotte native whose work has been awarded both the Caldecott Medal and the Greenaway Medal, will be a special guest. Her interest in illustration extends into other media. She has worked with Weston Woods on filmstrips of her "A Story, A Story" and "The Green Man." Her work in animated film won the Czechoslovak Children's Film Festival award in 1974.

•"Feelings of Power in Characters of Selected Children's Books as Evidenced in Pictures and Text," Alice P. Naylor, Appalachian State University.

•"Howard Pyle," Sarah Smedman, UNC-Charlotte.

The conference is co-sponsored by the ECU Department of English and the ECU Division of Continuing Education. Further information and preregistration materials are available from "Children's Literature Conference," Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville, 27834.

Inductees Named For N.C. Hall Of Fame

CHAPEL HILL — Newspapermen from three very different publications, a national broadcast journalist and a long-time educator and writer have been chosen as the 1983 inductees for the N.C. Journalism Hall of Fame.

The five who will be inducted on Sunday, April 17 at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, are:

• W. Horace Carter, Pulitzer Prize-winning former editor of the Tabor City Tribune.

• Roger Mudd, NBC television news correspondent.

• Walter Spearman, professor emeritus of journalism at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

The Hall of Fame is sponsored by the UNC-CH School of Journalism. It honors journalists who are strongly identified with North Carolina.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The first meeting for the month of April of the Greenvillo Writers Club will be a public one to be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Willis Building, corner of First and Reade Streets.

This meeting is part of the ongoing activities of the third annual Eastern Carolina Arts Festival now underway.

In addition to the regular procedure of members reading and critiquing manuscripts, members of the public attending will be given an opportunity to give their comments on individual stories or poems.

Sculpture Awards Listed

Laura Fulton capped the top award among approximately 80 entries made by East Carolina University School of Art students in the recent one-day wind-powered sculpture competition held on campus.

Fulton's first place creation is a blue and silver sculpture of sails and gears constructed predominantly of wire and silkspan.

David Cherry's second place winner is a construction of wire and plexiglass, in light blue. A hanging piece, it can be taken off its hook and walked with, which creates a yo-yo like movement of the piece as it is stirred by movement.

Another construction of wire and silkspan, by Linda Sizemore, took third place. The sculpture, which has an up and down movement cycle, is purple and silver in color.

Six freshmen artists were awarded honorable mention for their pieces — C. Schauble, Bob Ontis, Greg Jackson, David Schehr, Evan Stanford and Jim Lux.

Wilson Craft Festival Set

WILSON — Now is the time for local craftsmen interested in displaying and selling their work to get things in readiness for the Saturday on the Town Festival to be held in Wilson on April 23.

The festival's committee is looking for all kinds of arts and crafts — things like basket making, furniture, folk art type of work, candlewicking and stencilling. Committee members are also looking for artists to take part.

Craftsmen and artists interested in showing-selling items at the event are to contact: Sandy Wiggins, Home Economist, P.O. Box 3027, Wilson, N.C., 27893 (telephone 237-0112).

Additionally, there will be opportunities for non-profit groups to sell a variety of foods in concessions to be operated during the festival day. Groups interested in this possibility may contact Jane Owen at 237-5605.

Mariners Events

BEAUFORT — After an Easter period of non-activity, three events are being offered during the coming week at Hampton Mariners Museum, 120 Turner St., Beaufort. These are:

•Tuesday — Birding field tirp, Beaufort-Morehead causeway, 10:30 a.m. Reservations required.

•Saturday — Fossil Hunt field trip to Texas Gulf at Aurora. Meet at Aurora Fossil Museum at 9 a.m. The fossil hunt will last until 3 p.m. Reservations and a fee of $5 required.

struction work to complete the project. An additional four months have gone into staff training and delousing the bugs from the unique audi, animation and electronics show systems like the "Country Bear Jamboree" and "The Mickey Mouse Revue."

The general admission price will be $10 for adults and $6 for children. Special tickets including general admission plus the various rides and attractions will range from $14.80 to $16.00 for adults and $10 to $11.25 for children.

Lindquist stood outside the Country Bear Theater and gazed admiringly at the towering Cinderella Castle. He cocked an ear to the whistle of The Western River Flyer coming 'round the bend of Westernland and with just a slight accent of braggadocio in his voice, said: "This just shows what the Japanese and Americans can do if they put their heads together instead of banging them together."

'Our Town' Opening On Thursday At McGinnis

ECU News Bureau

One of the most popular plays in the history of American Theater, Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," will be presented by the East Carolina Playhouse in ECU's McGinnis Theater April 14-19, with nightly performances set for 8:15 p.m.

Director Cedric Winchell, who guided the ECU production of "The Shadow Box" last December, points out that "Our Town" is the "most produced play in American history. It's a model of reality on the American mentality of having materialistic values, and ignoring our neighbors' real needs," he says. "It presents the point that one has to live in the moment — every moment."

This Pulitzer Prize-winning chronicle of the way life was lived in a fictitous little New Hampshire town in the gentle, early years of the century is a touching celebration of being alive.

It's a drama of the daily affairs of love, marriage and death in Grover's Corner (population 2,642) that defines the little-realized beauties of everyday moments.

Playwright Wilder lets the audience eavesdrop on the characters inside their homes, in the exchange of gossip on street corners and at their gathering on a hilltop cemetery. The focal point of the play is centered on Emily, whose role covers childhood, courtship, marriage, death and a wistful brief revisitation to life. Also prominent in the play is George, the boy next door who woos, marries and mourns her.

"Our Town" had a brilliant success on Broadway when it first played in 1938.

Special matinee performances have been scheduled for Friday and on April 19, both at 1 p.m. According to Playhouse General Manager Scott Parker, the matinees have been set aside primarily for school groups who have read the play as part of their course work and now want to see it performed on stage.

"Last week we had reserved space for about 15 schools, some from as far away as Roanoke Rapids and Havelock," Parker said. "We still have several blocks of seats available for school groups; however, an early phone call to the box office would be a good idea if other groups wish to attend one of the matinees."

Tickets nat be purchased at the box office in Messick Theater Arts Center, corner of Fifth and Eastern streets, each weekday from 10 until 4. Telephone reservations may be made by calling 757-6390.

COURTSHIP IN "OUR TOWN" ... A nostalgic look at a soda fountain courtship in small-town America is provided by this scene from the ECU Playhouse productin of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town." The pair of young lovers are Emily Webb and George Gibbs, played by Donna Lynn Cooper of Yanceyville and Jeffrey Benninghofen of Charlotte, both students at ECU. The production will be presented April 14-19. (Photo by Carlton Benz)

Quartet Sets Workshop

The Greenville Barbershop Chorus is planning an open house and workshop from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday at the Jaycee Park Recreation Building, 2000 Cedar Lane.

The purpose of the workshop is to demonstrate the art and craft of the type of four-part singing known as "barbershop harmony," a style that is strictly American in origin and heritage.

Featured in the workshop will be several songs performed by the Greenville Barbershop Chorus (The Pamlico Sound) under direction of Dr. Norwin C. Pierce.

Another demonstration will be that provided by a constituent quartet, "The Double Paradox."

Guests will be invited to take part in a sing-along and there will be a brief talk on the history of the local chapter and the international barbershop organization.

Refreshments will be served and all interested persons may attend, free of charge.

Local chapter meetings are held every Monday evening at 7:30 in the auditorium of the Jaycee Park Recreation Building. All men interested in singing with the group may attend any meeting. Previous singing experience is not necessary. For further information, call Al Ingenito, chapter president, at 756-5081, after 5 p.m.

Boys Choir Concert

The Greenville Boys Choir will appear in a concert of sacred music at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Tom Hawley, organist, will share in the evening's program as soloist and accompanist.

The concert is free and open to the public on a first-come, first-seated basis.

Selections to be presented on the program will include a variety of musical styles featuring works by J.S. Bach, Camille Saint-Saens, Robert Powell and Malcolm Williams.

The Boys Choir, directed by Carolyn Greene Ipock, is now in its eighth year of operation and continues to provide the Greenville area with a special choral experience.

The boys perform for various church and civic groups, as well as appearing as visiting artists in surrounding communities.

Hawley, a faculty member at the ECU School of Music, has distinguished himself both as teacher and performer here and abroad. He has recently returned from Germany where he studied as a Fulbright scholar.

Percussion Ensemble To Perform Monday

A concert by the East Carolina University Percussion Ensemble, free and open to the public, will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. Thomas G. Cunane, a graduate teaching assistant in percussion, will conduct the program.

Cunane has selected half a dozen compositions to be performed. The program will open with Paul Creston's "Ceremonial," to be followed by Carlos Chavez's "Toccata" and Anthony Cirone's "Triptych."

The next selection, the Dinicu-Heifetz "Hora Staccato" will feature soloists Blair Smith, marimba, and Darla Richards, piano.

The program will close with the performance of two other works — Robert Washburn's "Pentagons for Percussions" and Anthony Korf's "Blue Rhythm Quintet."

Concert Band To Perform In Wright

The East Carolina University Concert Band will present a free concert, open to the public, at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus.

School of Music faculty member Joel Schultz will conduct the Concert Band, assisted by Dan Freeman, a graduate teaching assistant.

The 68-member band will present a program of compositions by six composers, opening the concert with Henry Fillmore's "Americans We."

This will be followed by Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Sea Songs" and the Frank Erickson arrangement of Mitch Leigh's "Man of La Mancha."

The next selection will be the Erik W.G. Leidzen arrangement of Rimsky-Korsakov's "Procession of Nobles" from "Cortege from Mlada."

The final two compositions on the program are Eric Osterling's "Beguine for Flutes" and Ceasar Giovanni's "Overture to a New Era."

The assistant conductor, Freeman, will conduct the Williams and Rimsky-Korsakov pieces, with Schultz conducting the other numbers on the program.

Still Time To Sign For Humanity Walk

"It's still not too late to decide to walk and to get sponsors," says Sister Happy Shondell, one of the coordinators of the 12th Annual CROP Walk for Humanity. "That way," she adds, "a person will be raising money for the needy of Pitt County and also for the needy overseas."

This year's walk will take place on Saturday. Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. at Green Springs Park. The walk will cover 20 kilometers, or 12.6 miles, and for most walkers will take four to four and one-half hours to complete.

Participants in the walk are to get sponsors to pledge a certain amount for each kilometer they walk. Anyone who would like to sponsor a walker is urged to call Lynwood Walters at 758-1240. Donations should be made out to CROP Walk and sent to Immanuel Baptist Church, 1101 South Elm Street, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Greenville's Church Ministries will receive 25 percent of this year's funds, and 75 percent of the funds will go to a dozen hunger relief organizations which work throughout the world. These organizations are funded under the umbrella of CROP.

According to Sister Shondell, last year's walk earned $6,000. Of that amount, 25 percent went to the Campus Ministries' Emergency Relief Fund, and the remainder went to CROP.

The course of the walk winds through Greenville with seven stops along the way. Refreshments are available at some check points and a free lunch is provided after the walk at the Baptist Student Center, the final checkpoint. Persons wishing to help by making sandwiches for the lunch are asked to call the number listed above.

As in past years, the theme of this year's walk is "Put a Little Heart in Your Sole." Cathy Andruzzi, coach of ECU's Lady Pirates, is honorary chairperson for this year's walk.

Bob Clyde, Baptist Student chaplain who has coordianted the walk several times in past years, notes "the walk has always attracted people of all ages who share a comon purpose of wanting to help the needy here and overseas. They seem to have a lot of fun doing this too."

Persons wishing to obtain walk cards are stop by the Newman Center at 953 East 10th Street (telephone 752-4216) or at the church office of Immanuel Baptist Church, 1101 South Elm Street, (telephone 758-1240).

Plans Changed For Roanoke Residency

MANTEO — England's Imperial Ballet, which had originally been scheduled to spend the month of April as artists-in-residence at the Roanoke Island Center for the Arts, has had to return to England due to a last-minute change of plans.

Joe Layton, director-choreographer of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama, said that plans had been for the company to create a new ballet during April to premiere in North Carolina which would in turn be taken back to England. Postponement of the planned activity came about, Layton explained, when events accelerated too quickly to keep pace with the financial and immigration-related planning required for this event.

Layton added that arrangements are now being made for the 21-member Imperial Ballet to return to Roanoke Island this year during the autumn months.

The Imperial Ballet is an amalgam of talent form two English ballet groups, the Royal and the Festival Ballets, as well as the Netherlands Ballet.

While the Roanoke Island Center for the Arts is still in the planning stage, such a residency of internationally acclaimed artists would be a prototype of the kind of activity the center hopes to create.

The Imperial Ballet, and all other future artists-in-residence to be invited to the Roanoke Island Center for the Arts, will be able to make full use of the sophisticated "Lost Colony" facilities when they are not in use during the drama's regular summer season.

Spring's Residue Of Winter Rains

SPRING'S BOUNTY . . . also includes what sometimes amounts to an over-abundance of water, as evidenced in the water covered yard of this house on the banks of the Roanoke River in Williamston during the first week of April.

FLOWERING THORN TREE . . . An unidentified tree bearing thorns and clusters of white flowers was discovered in a Pitt County forested area.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Just Before The Leaves, A Display Of Flowers

In the early days of April, just as the pastel-hued green, bronze, and reddish leaf buds on trees break into full leaf, native flowering trees, shrubs and ground flowers splash the landscape with a rich spectrum of spring color.

On the ground, a large variety of small white, gold, pink and purple wild flowers, along with new growths of green clover and grass, carpet the winter gray of the earth.

In the woodlands of our area, dogwood begins to unveil its annual display of white at the same time that vine borne sprays of gold Carolina jasmine drape over tree limbs. Another showy early April favorite is the rose-pink or purplish flowers of the redbud tree that stand out against the tree's leafless branches.

Early April in eastern North Carolina is also a period of bountiful surface water, as streams, creeks and rivers receive the drain off of water from the western and central portions of the state as well as local run-off. Often, if March rainfalls have been copious, as has been the case this year, local streams overflow their banks.

NEW GREENERY FOR GRAZING . . . A horse in a Pitt County pasture grazes on new clover and other green growths now beginning to blanket the formerly gray ground cover of the winter months.

OPENING UP . . . A leaf formation begins to unfold on the tip of a bay tree twig.

Rural Co-Ops Grew Out Of Civil Rights Drive

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Black cooks in south Louisiana sell fruitcake by mail order through a cooperative bakery.

Black farmers in east Georgia take their cattle and hogs to a meat processing plant in which they own part interest and receive a discount.

Black seamstresses in southwestern Alabama work in teams to produce quilts that sell for $200-$300 apiece.

These rural entrepreneurs, and thousands of others throughout the Southeast, are joining and maintaining cooperatives established and nurtured by the civil rights movement of the 1960s.

"We were teaching people to read, the three Rs. But soon we came to realize that people needed economic help. They needed to put food on the table," said Charles O. Prejean, recalling his work with the Rev. J.R. McNight, a Catholic priest who operated a literacy program in LaFayette, La.

Prejean said he and others in his hometown of LaFayette began studying cooperatives and "became convinced that this type of business operation was right for rural communities, for communities with limited resources.

"Apparently other people had the same idea," he added.

In the early 1960s, southern blacks were establishing agriculture, craft, grocery and credit union cooperatives that provided bulk purchasing and product marketing services, as well as some employment opportunities for members.

Following a series of meetings involving representatives from 22 cooperatives, the Federation of Southern Cooperatives was established in 1968 "to try to mobilize resources" and represent the interests of the community-based operations, Prejean said.

Prejean, the federation's first and only executive director, said the 15-year-old umbrella organization now encompasses more than 100 cooperatives representing 30,000 rural farm families in 10 southeastern states, ranging from Texas to South Carolina.

Organized like a cooperative itself, the federation is run by a board of directors that includes one representative of each of 10 state federations.

The 25 staff members of the federation work "primarily to train management staffs of the cooperative businesses and to raise money to capitalize these businesses," Prejean said in an interview at the federation's fundraising office in Atlanta.

As with most surviving civil rights organizations, the federation has had to withstand criticism and controversy.

Strong opposition from white neighbors of the federation's 1,300-acre experimental farm and training center in Sumter County, Ala., led to a two-year federal grand jury investigation into the federation's use of the more than $15 million it had received in federal funds.

The probe ended in 1981 without uncovering any wrongdoing, but it dried up many traditional funding sources for both the federation and member cooperatives, Prejean said.

Those fundraising problems, coupled with Reagan administration budget cutbacks, have forced the federation to reduce its staff and activities, he said.

While the reduction may limit the federation's ability to expand its network of cooperatives, Prejean said support for existing business ventures will continue.

One of the federation's most successful cooperative business venture is the Southern Consumers Cooperative that Prejean and others founded in LaFayette, La., in the early 1960s. The cooperative, which now has assets of more than $1 million, operates a successful credit union for poor blacks and finances a bakery that specializes in fruitcakes.

The federation helped the Southern Consumers Cooperative establish the bakery by teaching co-op members about loan packaging and marketing plans, identifying lending sources and providing specific skill training, Prejean said.

The East Georgia Farmers Cooperative, which includes 332 members, has been operating a meat processing plant and butcher shop outside Waynesboro in Burke County for the past year.

"We're almost at the break even point, but we're not there yet," said Ronald Stokes, manager of seven employees at the plant. "We need to increase our contracts with food chains so we can make our (four) part-time workers fulltime."

Federation workers "provided much needed technical assistance" in the launching of the meat processing operation and helped the plant land its only food chain contract so far, with the Food Giant chain in Atlanta, Stokes said.

The cooperative, which also has an equipment sharing operation, plans next to open a cannery this summer where members may can their garden vegetables for home use next winter, Stokes said.

Women in Wilcox County, Ala., looking for a way to supplement their meager farm incomes by using their sewing skills, formed the Freedom Quilting Bee in the early 1960s. The federation helped them conduct marketing research, establish a distribution system and raise money to purchase sewing machines and construct a factory, Prejean said.

The cooperative now includes almost 50 employee-members who gross about $200,000 a year producing items ranging from elaborate and original quilts to potholders and pillowcases, he said.

Not all the cooperatives in the federation were established in the 1960s.

On the shoulder of Mississippi highway 49-E in the tiny black farm community of Mileston sits a cooperative cotton gin that has been processing the crops of local farmers since 1941.

The federation recently helped the Mileston Farmers Cooperative, which grosses about $100,000 from its gin, put together a loan package for renovation of its equipment, said cooperative president Shadrack Davis, who is Mississipi's representative on the federation's board of directors.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Peridoically, I am overcome by the desire to learn a trade for home improvement purposes, but Phillip remains unimpressed with my enterprising nature. He has seen first-hand what I can do to drapery material and picture frames. The draperies lie on the floor of a closet waiting to be cut into sunsuits for my children, and the framing shop wouldn't even stick its label on the back of my magnum opus.

With these fiascos in mind, Phillip has managed to talk me out of plumbing, upholstery and bricklaying. Unfortuantely, he did not manage to talk me out of wallpapering. The hankering was simply too strong, and the propaganda was too enticing.

And I do mean propaganda. Those of us who yearn to do it ourselves but who have the dexterity of large vegetables are suckers for the promise of easy savings. The ubiquitous do-it-yourself literature is littered with allurements like "simple," "nothing to it," and "easy as pie." The one that hooked me was "much easier to do than you expected."

As soon as I read this, I grabbed up three double rolls of wallpaper for our half-bath and all the necessary equipment and proudly brought my purchases home to Phillip. "It was on sale for half price," I explained.

"It's beautiful," he said. "Hire somebody to put it up."

"Are you kidding? That would cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $45."

"How much did you say the paper cost?"

"$45."

He shrugged. "Then either way it's going to cost us $45."

I was exasperated. "That doesn't make sense."

"Oh, yes, it does. We either pay someone who knows what he's doing, or you'll ruin $45 worth of wallpaper."

"O ye of little faith," I sniffed. "For your information wallpapering is a cinch."

"Says who?"

"Says the book I bought. It says that I'm going to create walls that cry out, 'Touch me. I'm real.' So there."

"I have no doubt that you're right. In fact, I'd be willing to bet that when you're through, the first response of anyone who walks in there will be, 'Unreal!'"

I was undeterred. I read all the directions and started to work. But I soon found out that the book left out a few things. For instance, it didn't tell me that those little wallpaper knives aren't worth the paper they rip. What one needs for such work is a scalpel.

Another thing the book didn't mention is that wet wallpaper has a tendency to rip without benefit of a knife, expecially when it is being fitted around a door or a window. After tearing up two panels in this manner, I progressed to the other side of the window and found that one should never try to fit wallpaper around a window anyway. It's far better just to paper over it. I pulled the piece of paper I was working with off the wall at least 15 times, and I still couldn't make it match the piece beside it.

"There is something wrong with this window!" I sobbed.

Phillip, who had been looking after the kids in the next room, came running in. "Where are you?"

"I'm underneath the tallest wad of paper," I wailed. "There is something wrong with this window. It's not a rectangle. It's a trapezoid."

"Well, what do you want me to do about it?"

"Get my scissors."

With wet wallpaper still flung over my head, I frantically cut it in strips. When I finished, it at least matched under the window. Then I hung the rest of the wallpaper. It took two days. I was aching all over. And I was exactly two strips short.

"I'll have to buy another roll," I moaned. "And it's not on sale anymore so it will cost an extra $30."

Phillip was brimming over with sympathy. "Add that to the money you spent for equipment — you spent about $10 for equipment right?"

I nodded glumly.

"Then you saved approximately $5 by doing it yourself. Of course, that's not counting the crown molding you want to put up to cover the ripped places."

MR. GOREN

Q.—One of the players in our game argues vehemently about the virtues of "balancing." I know what he means, but I am not sure how bids in the balancing position differ from bids in the immediate seat. Can you help?—D. Cameron, Toronto, Ont.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—First of all, let's show what we mean by the balancing seat and the immediate seat:

West North East South
1 ♡ Pass Pass ?

North is in the "immediate" seat, i.e., the seat right behind the opening bidder. He chose not to act. After East's pass, South is in the "balancing" seat. If he does not take some action, the auction is over.

To act in the immediate seat, you need sound values. One of your opponents has already announced a hand that is stronger than the average, and right behind you is another one of the enemy anxious to do you great damage if he can. After all, his strength is as yet unknown.

In the balancing seat, however, you can act on far weaker hands. That is because there is an implication that partner has a fair amount of strength. Why, then, did partner not enter the auction? Because his hand was flawed in some way or other. Perhaps a large part of his length or strength was in the enemy suit, or perhaps he had the wrong distribution for a takeout double.

How can you be sure that partner has some strength? Assume that your hand is weaker than an opening bid—say 10 points. Since responder did not act, he cannot have more than 6 points. So if we give the opener 13 points for his bid, we see that partner can have anywhere from 11-17 points. In other words, you might even have enough for game, even though partner could not act initially.

Another consideration is that you certainly don't want to let the opponents buy the hand at the one-level. Therefore, you want to compete, either by bidding a suit of your own or by asking partner to bid his best suit via a takeout double.

But partner has to know whether you are bidding on sub-minimum values simply to protect against the opponents buying the hand too cheaply, or whether you really have a sound hand. One simple way to do this, and one that has won favor with a majority of experts, is to have all good hands, i.e., those of 11 HCP or better, start off with a takeout double. That means that any time you balance with a suit bid, you are limiting your hand to 10 HCP. The only exception is a balancing bid of 1 no trump, which is shaded to 12-15 HCP.

If you are going to shade your balancing double, you still need a way to tell partner when you have the sort of hand which would have qualified for a takeout double in the immediate seat. Therefore, you have to change your schedule of rebids. To show a normal takeout double, you raise partner's suit; you jump raise his suit with 16-18 points, instead of just making a simple raise. And a takeout double followed by a new suit simply shows a sound overcall.

This method might not be perfect, but it works well enough. If you follow it, you should be able to stay out of trouble and improve your results.

Book Describes Life On Beach

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The beach wasn't really invented by a man from North Forks, Neb., looking for a suntan. But that's the way it happened in the tongue-in-cheek world of Michael Ritchie.

Ritchie, a 34-year-old refugee from the advertising wars in the big city, settled in this beach resort two years ago. He liked what he saw so much, he decided to write a book about it.

The volume, with the unassuming title "The Book to Read While You're On the Beach," began rolling off the presses last week.

The author sees his book as "a light, frivolous look at beach life."

"It's not really like anyplace else to live," said Ritchie.

He swears he'll never return to the snow and the pressure of Chicago — "a great city but it's too cold."

Ritchie labored for eight years in advertising, working for J. Walter Thompson and the Leo Burnett firm. He helped create the little Sprout in Green Giant Foods commercials.

But he decided to flee to the sunshine of the South because of "a combination of being tired of the agency business and pressure."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE FINE SHOE CATALOG CONTAINS LONG FOOTNOTES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: M equals D.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Housing Costs Are Outpacing Consumer Prices

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer prices overall rose only 3.5 percent in the 12 months through February, but the prices of several components of new housing have risen twice or even three times as fast.

That ominous development is being warily watched by builders, and by families who for years have delayed buying a home while awaiting price stability and lower interest rates.

The lower rates have come. Mortgages below 13 percent are common in most areas of the country now, and mortgage points — those up-front charges that lenders tack on for their efforts — are shrinking.

Prices, while still rising, have been doing so at a slower rate than two years ago, as confirmed by builder and seller surveys. Meanwhile, incomes have risen some, and houses are considered more affordable today.

But how long will it last? The National Association of Home Builders says its members are reporting increases in the prices of lumber, brick, insulation and several other important components of new houses.

So far, says Harry Pryde, NAHB president, the evidence doesn't necessarily add up to a new round of inflation.

"We are keeping a close eye on building material prices movements," he says. And he still hopes that increases still might turn out to be "a one-shot hike" rather than a return to the prolonged surges of the 1970s.

Wood products, which make up 10 percent to 15 percent of many single-family homes, have risen the most.

In January, he reports, the NAHB Random Lengths Index for softwood lumber rose to $247 for a thousand board feet of framing lumber, a 63 percent increase from the $152 index four months early in October.

In the 12 months from February 1982, the NAHB survey shows, insulation board rose 9.9 percent, and general millwork 9.3 percent. Domestic water heaters cost 7.3 percent more early this year, and glass 6.2 percent more.

Major appliances, according to the survey, rose 6.1 percent, brick 6 percent and gypsum products 3.3 percent. Gypsum wallboard is widely used in new-home construction as well as in remodeling.

While Pryde stresses that housing is a cyclical industry, with sales rising and falling in tandem with economic expansions and contractions, there is no assurance that the increases are a one-time catchup phenomenon.

The plunge in housing sales in the 1980s was devastating to suppliers of all sorts, forcing them to close plants and lay off workers. As a consequence, there may have been some spotty, long-term reduction in capacity.

Lessened capacity, combined with supplier start-up costs, could account for some of the price increases. As Pryde suggests, whatever increases can be attributed to this situation might indeed be short-lived.

However, materials price increases in housing have a tendency to continue, based at least on the experience of the 1970s, an experience which is enough to make some people in the industry apprehensive.

Perhaps more important than that, it makes would-be buyers anxious. An untold number of families postponed purchases of homes during the past few years because of high prices and interest rates.

After several years of waiting, events seemed to turn in their favor. Prices stabilized and interest rates fell. Confirming this, the affordability indexes of the NAHB and the National Association of Realtors began rising.

But affordability ratios still haven't returned to what either builders or sellers consider desirable.

The Realtor index, which compares the median income to the median-priced existing home, rose to 80.4 percent in February, its ninth monthly rise. It meant that a family with the median income of $24,033 had just over 80 percent of income needed for the purchase of a median, $68,300 existing home.

The last time the index stood at 100 — meaning the median income was exactly that needed to qualify for the median priced home — was in December 1978.

If prices of housing components continue to rise — and there is no proof that they will or will not — that level of affordability might not be reached for a while yet.

Stained Glass Worker Finds Meaning In Art

HONOLULU (AP) — When Brone Jameikis was a little girl growing up in Lithuania, she couldn't keep her eyes off the stained-glass windows in the cathedral.

"My mother would pull my skirt and say, 'Brone, Brone, you are here to pray,' but I was fascinated with the light and color pouring through the windows." She couldn't stop looking at them.

And she's still looking, particularly at the soaring windows of St. Peter's Episcopal Church for the past eight years.

In 1975, when the congregation began plans to restore the small church behind St. Andrew's Cathedral on Queen Emma Street, Ms. Jameikis was commissioned to design and execute the stained-glass windows to replace the plain-glass ones.

She has completed 11 of the large and two of the smaller windows and is repeating the demanding process of creating designs for two more of the larger windows. These she will construct later in her Chicago studio.

Ms. Jameikis works in faceted rather than leaded glass. She orders her 1-inch-thick glass from France, England or West Germany and it arrives in 10-pound slabs.

She will have completed her design, determined her colors in precise drawings that also delineate the size and shape of each facet of glass on a scale of 1 inch to 1 foot.

She will have spent days and hours in research, selecting the chapter and verse from the Book of Revelation that provides the theme for her window. All the windows are designed from Revelation, which she chose for its sense of mystery, for its mysticism, its prophetic scenes and images.

And she will have spent a lot of time getting to know the sponsors of the window since each window is designed specifically for the family that commissions it.

"Each window must have meaning for that particular family," she said. Flowers, birds, stars may represent children, grandchildren or even a wife. And a bit of Hawaii is incorporated into each design — a rainbow, the blue Pacific, the white sand, even a fish the artist saw when swimming at Hanauma Bay.

Then with her special hammers and chisels she goes about designing each facet of glass. Hers is a discipline fine-honed for this precise and demanding skill, this tactile exercise in achieving balance in color and form. Some of the facets are very small, some triangles of 3 or more inches. Each must be chipped, to create the angles that reflect the light.

Each piece is matched to the numbered, color-coded pattern she has drawn on brown paper and is finally put in its place and secured with epoxy resin. The epoxy and the chunks of glass make sturdier, more durable windows than those of leaded glass. They become an integral part of the architecture of the structures they adorn.

Although leaded glass has been used for centuries, the sparkling brilliance inherent in faceted glass leaves Ms. Jameikis no choice of medium.

"Composition and design are important," she said, "but so is the organic unity of creative reality and all these elements begin to shine and glow in a different light if one uses faceted glass."

Ms. Jameikis earned a master of fine arts degree from the Art Institute of Chicago and worked at the Velaska Church Art Studios there, where she still creates her stained-glass wonders. She studied Far Eastern art and taught at the University of Hawaii.

Her creations are in public buildings and private collections here and on the Mainland and she has won numerous awards. She has lived in Hawaii for 16 years.

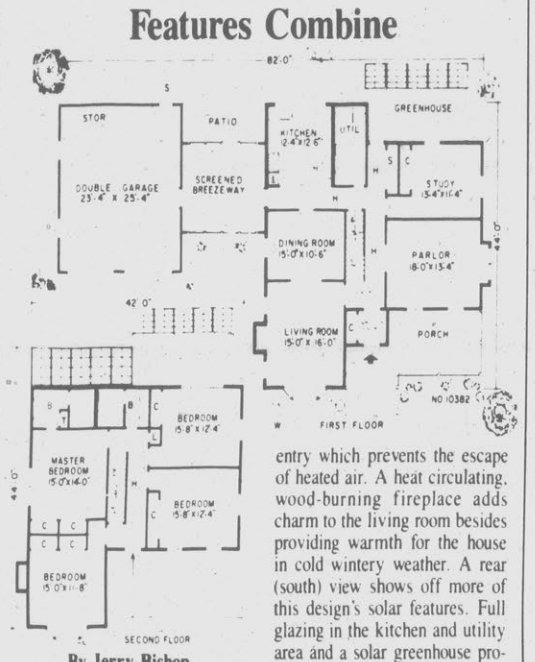
Passive Solar & Victorian Features Combine



By Jerry Bishop

The beauty of Victorian architecture and passive solar energy are combined in the attractive design of the Baldwin. Scallops and latticework add distinction to the front exterior. Step inside and you'll find yourself in an air lock entry which prevents the escape of heated air. A heat circulating, wood-burning fireplace adds charm to the living room besides providing warmth for the house in cold wintery weather. A rear (south) view shows off more of this design's solar features. Full glazing in the kitchen and utility area and a solar greenhouse provide an abundance of solar gain.

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Judging from the frequency with which he is asked how to refinish furniture, Tom Benson says there must be a great many pieces of old furniture about that are still serviceable but need sprucing up.

Benson, a furniture care expert for Johnson Wax, recently answered some questions at a furniture care seminar in New York.

Though an amateur should not risk hurting a fine antique or costly piece of furniture, any lesser pieces can be adequately refinished by someone without any special knowledge or skill, he said.

A fairly simple procedure is to first remove accumulated dirt and polish by scrubbing a piece's surface with a solvent-soaked rag sprinkled liberally with a powdered detergent. The solvent can be turpentine, mineral spirits or a specially formulated polish remover.

Using plenty of clean rags and discarding them as they get dirty, keep wiping until all traces of the detergent are removed. Then sand the piece to remove the finish, wipe it with a solvent-soaked rag and allow it to dry.

Next, apply a sealer purchased in the paint or hardware store and allow it to dry. Then sand the piece lightly, dust it off and apply one or more coats of varnish, shellac, polyurethane or other coating. Your retailer can advise which product to use.

If more than one finish coat is applied, sand lightly between each coat. Finally use a furniture polish to protect the newly applied finish.

If you find the finish goes on unevenly, leaving some surfaces insufficiently covered — this is known as fish eyeing — a few drops of "fish eye preventer" available from paint and hardware stores can be added to the varnish or other finish to alleviate the problem, said Benson.

Benson says most new furniture is sold with a highly resistant nitrocellulose coating designed to protect the underlying finish and wood for a long time. To keep new furniture looking good a long time, he advised obtaining specific information about the finish and how to care for it.

The major enemies of wood furniture are sunlight, excessive moisture or dryness, and temperature extremes. Constant exposure to direct sunlight can cause tiny hair-line cracks in the finish of wood furniture.

To avoid the problem, arrange furniture away from direct sunlight, use sun-screening draperies during intense sunlight hours or rotate the furniture in place to prevent spot bleaching. Also, avoid placing objects in one spot on a table for a long time.

Don't place furniture next to a radiator or other heat source or where it will be subjected to frequent sudden drops in temperature. If you do, it may develop swollen joints and surface blemishes as the wood alternately expands and contracts. If excessive humidity or dryness is a problem, consider using a dehumidifier or humidifier to alter humidity. Aim for an average humidity measurement of about 30 percent, said Benson.

You can minimize damage to furniture through water, alcohol or food spills by wiping up spills as soon as they occur. And dust your furniture with a soft cloth so it is not exposed to the unnecessary abrasion which comes from dusting with a harsh cloth.

Here's the Answer

Q. — We have two small bureaus we would like to refinish. They have a white enamel finish on them. At first, we were going to remove the enamel with a paint remover, stain the wood and then varnish it. Now we have decided that might be too much trouble and we just want to change the color of the bureaus. If we apply another color paint over them and then varnish them, could we get by without removing the enamel?

A. — It would seem a waste of time and varnish to do it that way. Why not just use a gloss paint or enamel of the color of your choice? However, the new finish will hold properly only if you dull the gloss of the present enamel.

Q. — Can we use polyurethane varnish directly over a cabinet that has an enameled finish?

A. — Possibly. Before you purchase the polyurethane varnish, read the label carefully to see whether there are any restrictions about the kind of finish it can be applied over. Some are not compatible with enamel. Also, see the answer above regarding any gloss remaining on the old enamel.

Q. — The finish on our bedroom set is varnish and appears to be in good condition, but it is dirty. What can I clean it with?

A. — Use a mixture of turpentine and boiled linseed oil — about half and half. Use a clean cloth and rub vigorously, the final time parallel with the grain.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you own a house, you'll eventually have to make the acquaintance of concrete. Know the fundamentals of mixing and using concrete and you will save yourself a lot of headaches caused by poor results.

When you finish reading this, clip it out and save it. It is difficult to remember months or even years later the information you read somewhere about a particular do-it-yourself project. A common mistake of the novice is to think that concrete and cement are the same thing. They are not. Concrete is a mixture of Portland cement (a kind of cement and not a brand name), sand, aggregate and water. Cement, when used in connection with concrete or anything similar, is the product that holds the ingredients together.

If you have a small or medium-sized job, consider using a packaged concrete mix. It has everything in it except the water, which should be used in the proportions described on the bag. However, the ingredients in the package will have separated during distribution, so you should pour out the contents and mix them thoroughly. Put back what you will not need and pour water into the remainder until you have a workable but not too mushy mix.

As with any mixture requiring the addition of water, too much of it will weaken the finished product. Also, sand that is too wet or too dry affects the quality of the mixture. Squeeze a handful of the sand, then drop it. If your hand is still wet, it means the sand has too much water in it, in which case apply just a little less water than the directions specify. If the sand falls apart as you squeeze it, it is too dry; in that case, apply a little more water than normally. If the sand compacts as you squeeze it, yet does not leave your hand wet when you drop it, then it is fine for the mixture.

Testing the sand is necessary only when making your own mixture, since the sand in the packaged concrete already has gone through the testing procedure and is all right for use, assuming the bag is not wet or damp for some reason. Your own mix can be one part of cement to two parts of sand to three parts of aggregate, which usually is gravel. For extra heavy-duty jobs, such as a foundation, add an extra part of sand and an extra part of aggregate to the one part of cement. The mixing can be done in some kind of container, on a large board or in a wheelbarrow, but when large quantities must be mixed, it's a good idea to rent a portable concrete mixer.

Q. What are nematodes? (P.W., Benson)

A. Nematodes are microscopic roundworms that feed on plant roots and cause various types of damage. They are one of the most destructive groups of pests that attack plants in North Carolina.

Q. Is it better to buy shrubs in containers or those wrapped in burlap? (T.R., Hendersonville)

A. Most Nursery-grown plants are balled and burlapped (B&B), bare root (BR) or container-grown. Container and B&B plants can be bought and planted successfully anytime of the year as long as adequate water is provided. B&B plants are grown in the field, then dug and wrapped for selling. Bare-rooted plants have no soil around the roots and are generally handled while the plant is dormant.

If planting is delayed, place the bare-rooted plants in a trench and cover the roots with loose soil. This is known as "heeling in" and is a temporary measure to keep the roots from drying out.

Q. Can I leave dahlia tubers in the ground over winter? (D.S., Stanley)

A. Dahlias will sometimes overwinter int eh sil, sbut it is better to dig and store them to protect them from rotting and rodents. Soon after frost kills the tops in the fall, cut off the old growth two to four inches above the ground. Then lift the clumps gently out of the ground with a spading fork, working well back from and around the club. Be careful not to break the neck or small part of the tuber where it joins the stem. A tuber with a broken neck is worthless for propagation.

Remove the soil and allow the clumps to cure for a day or two. Then store them in a cool basement or cellar where they can be protected from freezing. Cover the clumps with vermiculite and enclose them in a plastic bag to prevent drying and shriveling.

Q. The leaves and stems of my white pines looked stunted. This year's needles are a yellowish color with dead tips. What is wrong? (S.P., Raleigh)

A. Your white pine is probably suffering from phytophthora root rot. The only control is to avoid planting white pines in wet sites east of the mountains.

ECU Will Add Emergency Residency

The East Carolina University School of Medicine will begin offering residency training in emergency medicine this summer, according to Dr. E. Jackson Allison Jr., chairman of the department of emergency medicine.

Allison said the postgraduate program for emergency physicians has received approval from the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education, the accrediting agency for residency training. The three-year accreditation will allow the medical school to accept four physicians into each of the three years of training required for board certification in emergency medicine.

The medical school plans to accept the first four physicians into the second year level July 1.

Allison said residents will receive most of their training at PCMH but will also rotate through emergency departments at other major medical centers in the state and in Washington, D.C., Augusta, Ga., and Baltimore. They will also receive some experience in community hospitals in the region, including Wayne County Memorial Hospital in Goldsboro and Beaufort County Hospital in Washington.

'Tucker' Has 2nd Chance

By Peter Meade

If you're a fan of baseball or "Dynasty," chances are good you never saw "Tucker's Witch" before it recently reappeared on March 31.

CBS is hoping the chances are better it will be seen during its six-week tenure in the Thursday evening slot previously occupied by "Knots Landing." The hour-long series, starring Tim Matheson and Catherine Hicks as husband-and-wife detectives, will have tough competition in its time slot going against "Hill Street Blues." However, when "Tucker" originally debuted on Wednesday nights in October, it received strong — make that overwhelming — competition from two sources. It ran against the baseball playoffs and the World Series on NBC and the two-part season premiere of "Dynasty" on ABC. No wonder that even with the magical powers of Amanda Tucker, played by Miss Hicks, the show did not survive. But unlike many others, it is being given a second try.

"CBS called me and said they believed in the show," says series producer Philip Mandelker. "But the time slot was not working. They promised it would reappear in a more protected time slot in the spring. We consider this our second chance."

"CBS has been very supportive," says Mandelker. "Both 'Simon & Simon' and 'Cagney and Lacey' debuted slowly, were taken off and rescheduled, and are now doing well."

The showing of the half-dozen new episodes will determine the future of "Tucker" for next season. Mandelker and partner, Len Hill, are optimists, but they are also television veterans who know producing shows is about as stable a job as predicting the weather.

If "Tucker" fails, it's back to the drawing board for Hill and Mandelker. They've scored before with "The Dukes of Hazzard," and TV-movies "Mae West," "Amber Waves" and "The Women's Room" and the duo are solid believers that television is only now entering its Golden Age. As preparation, Mandelker says the duo currently has 40 more television projects on that large drawing board.

Elvis Presley

'This is Elvis'

A two-hour biographical feature on Elvis Presley will air April 10 on the "NBC Sunday Night at the Movies."

The film will combine rare footage of Presley's professional and personal life along with dramatized sequences based on the memories of some of Presley's long-time associates.

The story begins with a 10-year-old Elvis and ends with his death in 1977. Col. Tom Parker, the entertainer's manager, and Joe Esposito and Jerry Schilling, two Presley associates, served as consultants. The film also includes 38 Presley songs.

News from PBS

Based on a recent vote of PBS stations and station groups, a commitment has been made regarding the hour-long version of "The MacNeil/Lehrer Report."

The expanded "Report," featuring Robert MacNeil and James Lehrer, will be fed via satellite at 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. (ET) each weekday evening.

PBS will also be holding a follow-up vote to determine if stations require a third feed at possibly 8, 8:30 or 9 p.m.

The expanded "Report" is slated to begin airing sometime mid-summer, but it has not yet been determined where it will fit in the schedule vs. network competition.

This honors a promise made by MacNeil and Lehrer to the individual stations at the Washington Program Fair last November that they would allow the stations maximum freedom to schedule the program to their respective markets..

MacNeil and Lehrer

Parade Of Stars

Debbie Reynolds, Milton Berle and Dick Cavett are the first announced stars of stage, screen and television to play legendary stars of the Palace Theatre in "Parade of Stars: An Actors Fund Benefit at the Palace," a two-hour special airing Monday, May 9 on ABC.

Alexander H. Cohen, producer of the telecast, said the legends of the Palace would range from Eddie Cantor to Fred Allen, from Harry Houdini to Bob Hope to Milton Berle himself — a cavalcade of the greats performed by popular present-day entertainers.

Keeping 'Restless'

Although her role as Traci Abbott in "The Young and the Restless" keeps her quite busy, young actress Beth Maitland still finds time for personal interests, such as presenting awards to winners of the 5km and 10km run sponsored by the Los Angeles Kiwanis Club. Miss Maitland also indulges her love for music — she recently recorded a demo tape for which she wrote both music and lyrics, and she is now working on a nightclub act for presentation this spring. And if that's not enough, she is also a member of the Master Acting Class at the Film Industry Workshop. Miss Maitland certainly is "young and restless."

Health Heroics

By Ruth Thompson

Allowable "sick days" — that can maybe add on to vacation time if not used — are an unknown luxury to career-oriented actors. "The show must go on," is still the rule, and it has a frightening corollary: "The show will go on with somebody else if you can't or don't report for work."

Tight budgets being what they are, that's the way it is. Movie-making sometimes has more elasticity when waiting for a recuperating star. Then schedules can stretch longer, budgets can expand, though sometimes it reaches a disaster point. With television, there's no leeway with a weekly series.

That's why — with the exception of the occasional ailing or truant performer who garners publicity — actors are among the most self-disciplined members of our society when it comes to building and maintaining health.

Here are some of the fitness secrets from a trio of television veterans; Tim Conway, Joel Higgins and Robert Hayes.

In his new CBS series, "Ace Crawford, private eye," Tim Conway is noticeably trimmer than when he played second banana on "The Carol Burnett Show." He says he has taken off nearly 40 pounds over five years, but credits his new energy to a regimen prescribed by a nutritionist. "It requires Mega vitamins for a month," explains Conway. "then eliminating things we found I was allergic to."

Joel Higgins, of NBC's recently renewed "Silver Spoons," has homes on both coasts. His criterion for buying a Manhattan apartment included that "it had to have a health club in the building, so I can work out every day." His California house has a gym.

Robert Hayes, known to TV viewers as Dr. Brad Benson from the 1979-80 "Angie" series, has starred in "Airplane!" and "Airplane II: The Sequel," and is currently seen in "Trenchcoat" with Margot Kidder.

When he talks about his exercise regime it's so tough you think he's kidding. He isn't.

'AMC' star Shoberg a real-life daddy

By Nancy M. Reichardt

Richard Shoberg is one happy fella these days. His Tom Cudahy character is back on the front burner at "All My Children," and he's become a real-life daddy for the first time. Richard and his wife, Varaporn, became the proud parents of a son, Zachary, back in February.

Richard Shoberg

Another "AMC" member doing some recent celebrating was Richard's on-screen wife, Julia Barr (Brooke Cudahy), and her real-life husband, Dr. Richard Hirschlag. They celebrated their first wedding anniversary on Feb. 14.

Along with his regular role as Dane Taylor on "Search for Tomorrow," Marcus Smythe found time to appear nightly in a workshop production of a new musical, "Liberties Taken," at New York's American Place Theatre. The somewhat unusual production featured Marcus as 10 different characters.

Next week the National Television Academy in Los Angeles will be honoring soap opera veterans Mary Stuart, Larry Haines (Jo Tourneur and Stu Bergman on "Search for Tomorrow") and Charita Bauer (Bert Bauer on "Guiding Light") for their life-long achievements in daytime television.

Making recent soap opera guest appearances were "42nd Street" star Jerry Ohrbach, who appeared on "Ryan's Hope," and singer Stephanie Mills, who guested on "Search for Tomorrow." Miss Mills treated her fans to several tunes including "Do You Love Him," the "SFT" theme song. Miss Mills was so impressed with the tune (composed by Barbara Morr with lyrics by Betsy Durken Matthes) that she has included it in her upcoming album, "Merciless."

Speaking of record albums, the MCA Records release, "Love in the Afternoon," is now available at record stores. The album, which features 10 of ABC's soap stars, is an enjoyable musical treat. Notable on the album are cuts by Mary Murray (Becky Abbott on "One Life to Live") and "Edge of Night" stars Sharon Gabet (Raven Devereaux) and Joel Crothers (Miles Cavanaugh).

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I would like some information on Erica Gimpel, who stars as Coco on "Fame," and an address for her. RODRICK FORD, GOLDSBORO, N.C.

TO RODRICK IN GOLDSBORO: A native New Yorker, Erica Gimpel was not actually born in a show business trunk, but she came very close indeed. Erica traveled with her mother in "Porgy and Bess," while her mom performed in locales from Australia to Portugal and in the United States. A member of the first All Children's Theatrical Workshop and a recent graduate (last June) from the New York School for Performing Arts, from which the hit film and the series are based, Gimpel dazzled viewers last year when she performed her energetic dance numbers on the series. "I can never practice enough. I've learned what it is to say 'practice makes perfect.'" I suggest you write to Erica in c/o the series, "Fame," NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Avenue, Burbank, Ca., 91523.

DEAR MICHELE: I have been watching "Capitol" since it first came on. Is the actor who plays Tom McCandless crippled in real life? What happened to him? Also, whatever happened to the original Ed Bauer on "Guiding Light"? SUSAN GEARHART, PARKTON, N.C.

TO SUSAN IN PARKTON: Brian Robert Taylor, who portrays Tom McCandless, is not really crippled — he only appears handicapped on the serial. Mart Hulswit, although not the original Ed Bauer, was fired off "Guiding Light" when the show underwent several new facelifts.

DEAR MICHELE: Did Edd "Kookie" Byrnes play in the movie "Grease"? If not, could you please tell me the name of the man who played the part of Vince Fontane? JUST CURIOUS, ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C.

TO JUST CURIOUS IN ELIZABETHTOWN: That was Edd Byrnes, "Kookie" of "77 Sunset Strip" fame, who starred as the vain dance show host with an eye for the female fans in the film "Grease."

DEAR MICHELE: I missed the last episode of "Falcon Crest." Please tell me who killed Agretti? Will it be back on next season? MRS. A. PRESSON, GOLDSBORO, N.C.

TO MRS. A PRESSON IN GOLDSBORO: Julia Cumson, Lance's mother, killed Agretti. "Falcon Crest" will be back next season to reveal who was killed in the scuffle when Chase tried to disarm Julia.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

CINDY SAYS

Bet on a Brady book; Happy 75th to Rex

By Cindy Adams

NEW YORK — James Brady, whose career as President Reagan's press secretary and whose strong, powerful body were both shot down by John Hinckley's bullets, will tell it all in a book. "Bear," as Brady is lovingly called, and his wife, Sarah, will personally write the story which includes the assassination attempt, the recovery and the ongoing experience... Rex Harrison opened on the London stage with Diana Rigg in "Heartbreak House" on his 75th birthday. For a present he wanted rave reviews... 80-year-old Myron Cohen's circulatory system went flooey. Operated on in Nyack Hospital, he's home convalescing. "I'm fine," he said. "I feel like a 21-year-old — but there's none around."

Richard Harris, traveling with 11 suitcases, bought a ticket on the Concorde. At the ticket counter at London's Heathrow Airport he was hit for $500 extra in excess baggage... Anna Moffo is booked for the White House April 12. She'll be a hired hand when the Reagans break pita bread with the Sultan of Oman.

Barry Manilow
taking lessons

The book, "Hollywood on Ronald Reagan: Friends and Enemies Discuss Our President, the Actor," will drop on us come June. Author Doug McClelland admits, "There was no cooperation from the family. No turndowns, just no responses. Nothing."... Did Jane Wyman rap her ex? "She never mentions his name," says McClelland. "In '38 when Reagan came to Warner's, Miss Wyman was married to dress manufacturer Myron Futterman, whom no one ever mentions. But she was immediately attracted to Reagan and set out to get him." The book will feature a photo, circa 1941, of Wyman in pajamas... Muhammad Ali's estranged frau, Veronica, will settle for stardom when the divorce is settled. She's into drama lessons... Also studying acting is Barry Manilow. Nobody's after him but, just in case, he's ready.

Million-Dollar Pet

A $1 million grand prize will be awarded by Penthouse to its 1983 Penthouse Pet of the Year during a special global telecast of the 1983 Penthouse Pageant finals next fall.

Judges will select the Pet of the Year from contestants from approximately 30 countries. The $1 million dollar prize is estimated to amount to more than 10 times the combined total of all prizes awarded in other beauty pageants.

Top Sports Car

Actor Hugo Napier, who plays the role of adventurer Gunnar Stenbeck on the serial "As the World Turns," says the best part of his recent trip to Spain to tape special on-location sequences for the serial was the transportation. "I got to drive the most wonderful sports car I ever drove in my life," he says. In dramatic chase scenes Napier got to test it. "I think I gave them a bit of a shock when I put the gas pedal down to the floor. The car took off like a racehorse."

Seven-time loser Conway hopes 8th is an 'Ace'

By Peter Meade

If nothing else, Tim Conway is certainly resourceful. "Ace Crawford, private eye," wrapping up its five-week run Tuesday, April 12 on CBS, is his eighth series.

That's right, eight. But Conway is also funny, as any fan of "The Carol Burnett Show" could attest. Maybe he has never been in a long-running series because he has never taken show business seriously.

"I've always dealt with show business as just an occupation," says Conway. "I've never been in the theater world and worked my way up from earning $25 a week. I was originally a television director in Cleveland and did some comedy work on 'The Steve Allen Show' that Steve said wasn't bad. Then it was on to 'McHale's Navy' and I've just fallen into jobs along the way."

Conway is resourceful and he's also modest. When the chance to appear as Ensign Parker on 'McHale' came along in 1962, he originally turned it down and did the same for the series "Ensign O'Toole."

"I didn't want 'McHale,' " says Conway. "I figured I'd done 'The Steve Allen Show' and didn't think there was anywhere else to go after that."

Soon after he was fired by the station manager and began a four-year ride with "McHale" aboard the PT 73. The series ended in 1966 when the networks began switching over to filming in color.

Conway came back the next

year in "Rango," a short-lived series about the Texas Rangers.

"I was trying to do something comparable to 'McHale,' " Conway explains. "That was not a good idea and then there were very few successful attempts at poking fun at the old West. I was trying to play Ensign Parker being a sheriff."

Conway has since realized he cannot rely on previous characters. But he couldn't resist doing a short bit of his favorite "Carol Burnett Show" character, old man Tudball, on one episode of "Ace."

"I've just fallen into jobs along the way," says Conway, of his secret of continual work. "I give a lot of credit to Carol. She allowed us to do ludicrous things on television and most of the accidental characters worked out the best."

Marlowe is back on HBO detective series

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Raymond Chandler's fictional detective Philip Marlowe, last seen around these parts as a foil to Steve Martin in his film-noir spoof "Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid," is back, and playing it straight in HBO's limited-run series, "Philip Marlowe — Private Eye."

The pay-cable network is airing five one-hour Chandler classics, beginning with "The Smart-Aleck Kill" on Saturday, April 16. To its credit, HBO will be featuring previously unadapted Chandler works, adapted by two writers — Jesse Lasky Jr. and Jo Eisinger — who knew Chandler personally.

Powers Boothe, best-known for his role as cult leader Jim Jones in "The Guyana Tragedy," is cast as Marlowe, the cynical, but noble gumshoe. Unfortunately, Boothe operates under an automatic handicap — being compared to Humphrey Bogart, who created the classic Marlowe film role in "The Big Sleep."

Indeed, Boothe ain't Bogie. He's a little too healthy for Marlowe, as we've come to know him and isn't strong enough to make a deep impression on his own. He doesn't have that lean-and-hungry look to give the role its proper cutting edge. Despite the fedora and wide-lapeled jacket, he belongs more to the Los Angeles of sprouts and granola than of cheap rotgut. Besides, his diction is too clear — even with a cigarette pasted on his lower lip.

But once you accept Boothe as Marlowe, the drama succeeds on its own merits.

"The Smart — Aleck Kill," about the mysteries surrounding the death of a Hollywood idol, has particular relevance to the underbelly of today's Tinseltown. To give plot details would spoil it for viewers, but suffice to say, life was just as high in the 1930s.

The drama faithfully captures Chandler's pungent dialogue ("That's like taking a trip down a sewer in a glass-bottom boat," Marlowe explains at one point) and his plot line, which has more twists and bends than a plate of linguini.

The scenery and props excellently reproduce the Los Angeles of the 1930s — — even if the shows were filmed in London.

Mexican Condo

Rene Enriquez, who co-stars as Lt. Ray Calletano on "Hill Street Blues," recently purchased a condominium in Mazatlan, Mexico, where he enjoys entertaining his pals on weekends and other days off.

"It's beautiful," said Enriquez. "And I enjoy loaning it to friends when I'm not there. One thing I noticed, though, is now that I have one, other 'Hill Street' cast members are checking out how they can get one too. It's funny how a good thing gets around fast."

Energetic Janis

Beautiful Janis Paige, starring as modern-day grandmother Blanche Riddle in "Baby Makes Five," a new series on ABC, looks just as glamorous as she did when she made her motion picture debut in "Hollywood Canteen."

The vivacious blonde went on to greater success in the smash musicals "Pajama Game" and "Mame," in which she showed off her dancing prowess. When asked how she keeps her size six shape and high energy level, Janis said, "I dance and exercise every day for my figure. As for my energy, it's a genuine love for life. I throw out the negative."

Couples Guest

The fun-loving couples who will try to guess their partner's responses to a variety of "Tattletale" questions this week on CBS will include: Jamie Farr and his wife, Joy. Roger Mosley and his friend, Toni Laudermilk. Anita Gillette and her husband, Armand Coullet.

Boxleitner Cast

Bruce Boxleitner, who starred on "Bring 'Em Back Alive," has been set to star in the CBS pilot "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," with Kate Jackson. In addition, Boxleitner will star in the four-hour sequel to "The Gambler."

Augusta hosts golf's elite

The Masters Tournament isn't "just the Masters." The event carries as much if not more prestige as any golf tournament in the world. The Masters, the final round of which will air on CBS, Sunday, April 10 (3:30-6 p.m.), is an occasion whose pressure descends and remains from the first to the last stroke.

The field in the event is elite since invitations — treated with the respect of a command performance — are based on present proficiency and past heroics, and, as a result, amateurs and professionals making their initial appearances on the famed Augusta National Golf Club, rub elbows with the legends of the game.

Masters fever is chronic among players, fans and viewers. Why?

Perhaps because the Masters signals the end of winter, with the dazzling beauty of Augusta beckoning golfers to challenge its layout. Or perhaps because the Masters is tradition, from its founding in 1934 by Bobby Jones to the current defending champion, Craig Stadler. In between those years stands the historical warp and woof of the fabric that has made the Masters green coat one of the most coveted symbols in golf.

Stadler has improved significantly every year he has been on the PGA Tour, but 1982 was his most superlative year. He won four times — capturing the tour's first event, the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, the Masters (in a playoff with Dan Pohl), the World Series of Golf (in a playoff with Raymond Floyd), and the Kemper Open (by seven strokes).

Stadler attributed his $446,000 in winnings to two things — driving the ball better than ever by sacrificing some distance for accuracy, and improved putting.

Although the 29-year-old Stadler joined the tour in the spring of 1976, he didn't get his first victory until the Bob Hope Desert Classic in January 1980. Later that year, he added the Greater Greensboro Open to his laurels.

Stadler said he knew winning would come with patience, learning to control his emotions and working a little harder on his game. Dave Stockton, a close friend, gave Stadler some sound advice along those lines prior to the 1980 Bob Hope, stressing the importance of the mental aspect of the game.

Before turning professional in 1975, Stadler compiled an excellent amateur record, highlighted by his victory in the 1973 U.S. Amateur Championship at the Inverness Club in Toledo. "I just made everything that week," he said.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Touted as the largest assemblage of country music stars ever on a stage at one time — it was a country music fan's dream come true. I am referring to the CBS special "Kraft Salutes the 25th Anniversary of the Country Music Association" to be televised Wednesday at 9 p.m. I was invited to the taping of this special event at Constitution Hall in Washington, D.C., for an evening I will not soon forget.

A veritable who's who in country music was there as well as President and Mrs. Ronald Reagan, Vice President and Mrs. George Bush and members of Congress — all in formal attire — except for "outlaw" Willie Nelson — who wasn't about to ruin his image by appearing in a tux.

Luckily I was seated in a choice seat that afforded me an unobstructed view of the stage and of the honored guests. I couldn't help but watch the President's reaction to the "between the acts" performances of Minnie Pearl, Tennessee Ernie Ford and Jimmy Dean — who kept us entertained while the next act was being set up. It was obvious that the President is a country music fan — he laughed heartily at their jokes and kept time with the music as the performers sang the hits they made famous. Mrs. Bush was also enthusiastic as she nodded and swayed with the music — First Lady Nancy was just a little more restrained in her reaction but obviously enjoying the evening and the President's reaction. As for Vice President Bush, his conservative New England background did not permit him to sing and sway with Grandpa Jones, Ray Charles and Mickey Gilley — to name a few.

Greenville-Pitt County Board Of Realtors

Private Property Week

April 10-16

Greenville Mayor Percy R. Cox signs a proclamation designating April 10-16 as Private Property Week in Greenville. With him are Anne Stott Duffus, Public Relations Chairman, and Karen Rogers, Private Property Week Chairman, of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors.

Prizes will be awarded and the winners will be recognized at the Realtors Prayer Breakfast on Monday, April 11, from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. at the Ramada Inn. First place winners in each category will receive $100.00 each. Second place winners in each category will receive $50.00 each. The public is invited to attend. Tickets will be $5.00 per person for the Prayer Breakfast.

Winning photographs were judged by how well they conveyed the relationship of people to any kind of real property; how they reflected human interaction with real property, and how well they conveyed the closeness between the land and the men, women or children who cultivate, conserve and care for it. Entries also were judged on the technical and aesthetic quality of composition.

All entries will be on display at Carolina East Mall from April 11-16, 10 a.m. until 9 p.m.

Realtors Seek Home Built In 1908

Mayor Percy R. Cox has proclaimed April 10-16 Private Property Week in Greenville, and urges local citizens to join with Realtors and Realtor-Associates nationwide in marking the observance.

During this annual event, which this year carries the theme "The Strength of a Nation Lies in the Homes of Its People," the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors will sponsor a week of community-oriented programs and activities designed to call attention to Americans' right to own real property.

In his proclamation, Mayor Cox reminds Greenville citizens that one of the most precious rights Americans enjoy is the right to own, use or transfer real property.

"Above all," stated the mayor, "we must guard against taking for granted the rights that come with home ownership. Owning one's home and preserving these rights disperses individual decision-making that collectively affects the well-being of our community."

Mayor Cox called upon all Greenville residents to reaffirm the freedom of such ownership by taking part in the April 10-16 observance of Private Property Week.

GREENVILLE--The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors is conducting a search to find the most representative local home built in 1908 to enter in a nationwide competition sponsored by the National Association of Realtors.

Board president, Thelma Whitehurst, says the Board will use its records and those of the local historical society and any other available sources to locate a 75-year-old home in the area that will best represent the Greenville-Pitt County area in the Diamond Jubilee Homes Competition to honor the finest examples of a 1908 American Home. It is sponsored by the Realtor organization in recognition of its 75th anniversary this year.

Whitehurst said all suggestions from anyone in the Greenville-Pitt County area will be welcome. She says anyone who owns a home built in 1908, or knows of someone who does, should contact Realtor Jean Hopper, Make America Better Chairman, at 756-3500 as soon as possible. The deadline for nominations is June 1, 1983.

Nationally, The American Institute of Architects will appoint a special panel to judge photographs of all the 1908 homes nominated from across the country. The panel will choose 10 finalists, and the owners will receive certificates of recognition from the Association. The owner of the winning home will be awarded special recognition.

A Realtor Is A Professional

By Mac Harris

Although the word "Realtor" often is used mistakenly to mean any real estate agent, a Realtor is a licensed real estate agent who subscribes to a strict professional code of ethics beyond what the law requires.

The term "Realtor" is a registered trademark of the National Association of Realtors, and those who use the term are members of that professional association.

A Realtor, as a licensed real estate agent, has demonstrated through completion of a prelicensing course and passage of a comprehensive examination administered by the state licensing board, that he posseses the fundamental knowledge to practice real estate in North Carolina.

But as in every profession, the Realtor doesn't stop learning more about his chosen field of practice. Through a series of continuing education courses offered by the national and state associations, the Realtor achieves a superior knowledge of real estate, and stays current with new developments.

North Carolina Realtors developed for their association a series of specialized, in-depth courses that help expand Realtors' skills. Called the Realtors Institute, and supported by the School of Business at UNC-Chapel Hill, the program was the first in the country, and the model for similar programs in other states.

On the local level, the Realtor, as a member of a the Board of Realtors, participates in the exchange of ideas among professionals that aids him in serving his clients and customers better. The local boards offer education programs to their members, and to the public as well, and serve as the collective "voice" of its members, in education, in community service, and in community affairs.

The Realtor, as a member of an association of professionals, seeks not only to serve the interests of clients, but to serve his community. Realtors sponsor a variety of community service projects throughout each year, from visiting lonely folks at nursing and convalescent homes, to promoting energy awareness among the public and designing energy conservation programs in cooperation with public agencies.

Community service through the "Make America Better" program of the Realtors is not the only way Realtors' professionalism results in positive benefit to the community. Each year the National Association of Realtors and its state and local arms sponsor a week-long celebration of Americans' constitutional right to own property, called Private Property Week.

Realtors are involved all programs and activities that aid homeowners, and they are dedicated to making it possible for every American to own a home.

To that end, Realtors every year give a large amount of money to the Realtors Political Action Committee, which seeks to influence legislation on all political levels that help property owners and those who dream of owning property.

More than a special interest group to promote the real estate industry, the Realtors Political Action Committee is concerned with the protection of all Americans' rights. Realtors, as professionals, see their political involvement in matters affecting property ownership as representing the interests of every American who owns or aspires to own a home or invest in real property.

So the word "Realtor"--not at all synonomous with "real estate agent"--is synonomous with "real estate professional." By gaining superior knowledge and skills in his field, by adhering to a code of ethics that facilitates good relations with other agents and that protects his clients' and customers' interests, by helping make his community better, and by participating in activities that promote the American Dream--Homeownership--the Realtor becomes more than a tradesman. He becomes a professional.

Realtors High School Essay Contest

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors held an essay contest and invited high school seniors at Ayden-Grifton, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central, J.H. Rose and North Pitt to enter.

The contest theme was "How Widespread Home Ownership Strengthens Democracy." Essays were limited to 1000 words or less. The contest was held in conjunction with Private property Week April 10-16, an annual event sponsored by Realtors and Realtor-Associates nationwide. The contest ended April 5, and the winners will be announced Monday, April 11, 1983, at the Realtors Prayer Breakfast to be held at the Ramada Inn at 7:30 a.m.

The local contest comprises entries from each high school, from which three winners will be selected. First prize will be a $100 Savings Account; second prize will be a $50 Savings Account; and third prize will be a $25 Savings Account. Winning essays will be entered in the State contest.

The North Carolina Association of Realtors is holding a State contest. First prize will be a certificate and $100 savings bond; second prize will be a certificate and $50 savings bond; and third prize will be a $50 savings bond. The North Carolina Association of Realtors will send the State's three best essays from those received throughout the state and submit these entries to the National Association of Realtors for final judging. Three national winners will be selected in September.

The winner of the National Association's first price will receive a trophy and a $1,000 savings bond; second place winner will receive a trophy and a $500 savings bond; and the third-place winner will receive a trophy and $250 in savings bonds.

Various Activities Planned For Private Property Week

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors will sponsor a Realtors Prayer Breakfast, a Public Information Booth at Carolina East Mall, a Home Buyers Seminar and a Trash and Treasure Sale in observance of Private Property Week, April 10-16, announced Thelma Whitehurst, president of the board.

Private Property Week is observed annually to remind citizens of their constitutional freedom to own real property, according to Whitehurst.

Among the activities to be sponsored by the board, the Realtors Prayer Breakfast is to be held Monday, April 11, from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. at the Ramada Inn to kick-off Private Property Week. Rev. Willis Wilson, Pastor of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church, will be guest speaker. Winners of the Photo Contest, the Essay Contest, the art contest and the Realtor Citizenship Award will be honored and presented their awards. Tickets will be $5.00 per person, and the public is invited.

The Public Information Booth t Carolina East Mall will be from April 11-16 from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. each day and will have the entries for the Photo Contest, the Essay Contest and the Art Contest on display. Free information, handouts and balloons will be given out.

The Home Buyers Seminar, "How To Buy A Home," will be held at Planters National Bank, Corner of Third and Washington Streets, Greenville, on Wednesday evening at 7:30 p.m. until 9:00 p.m. The public is cordially invited, and it is free.

The Trash and Treasure Sale to be held Saturday morning 7:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. will benefit the Greenville Police Department's Crime Stoppers Program. The public is urged to make donations of clothing, household items, furniture, office equipment, vases, flower pots, televisions, radios, appliances, books, pictures and frames, baked goods or anything they would like to donate. "Your trash may be someone else's treasure." Donations will be received by the board office 752-5579 or Realtor Dorlis Mills 752-5058.

"The Strength of a Nation Lies in the Homes of Its People' is the theme of this year's Private Property Week observance," Whitehurst added. The theme bespeaks board members' efforts to make the public aware that widespread home ownership disperses decision-making to each individual household over the use and protection of the home.

"We want everybody in Greenville and Pitt County to be aware of the significance of private ownership rights in their lives. Home ownership brings out the best in people, because it allows them to assume a responsibility, put down roots and make a commitment to the community."

Whitehurst added that "Because property owners pay taxes, they care about what happens here to the schools, streets, sewers, the trees and the parks. They want adequate police and fire protection. They care about the quality of life for their families. It's really no different for people who own businesses, either."

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors is one of over 1,800 boards comprising the National Association of Realtors. This professional trade association represents more than 600,000 members involved in every phase of the real estate industry. This year the organization marks its 75th continuous year of service to America's property owners with a Diamond Jubilee celebration.

Crime Stoppers Program Organized

Crime Stoppers is a reward program, supported and financed by community resources, which pays for information leading to the indictment of criminals. Persons who call in information are not required to reveal their identities. Information called in to the Crime Stoppers Program and recovery of stolen property have increased impressively where Crime Stoppers operate.

Crime Stoppers is a program that provides effective help in the fight against crime. This program has been established in several North Carolina communities and must be properly formed for top efficiency.

Crime Stoppers is a unique crime fighting program. It provides to the police a mechanism for citizen involvement without citizen interference in police operations. Crime Stoppers is not a program of "police buffs". Rather, it is a program of sincere public support of law and order.

Crime Stoppers is a program that raises money from private sources to be used as rewards to people who help the police. It is administered by private citizens upon the advice and counsel of their local police. IT IS A PROGRAM WHERE THE PEOPLE PUT THEIR MONEY WHERE THEIR MOUTHS ARE AND SUPPORT THEIR POLICE.

Crime Stoppers, at least for now, is not a crime prevention program. It is a public awareness program that puts criminals in jail after all the preventive measures fail and the crime is committed. It can be crime prevention program when and if it is implemented statewide.

For more information on the Crime Stopper Program in Greenville and the surrounding area, please feel free to contact Sergeant Doug Jackson with the Greenville Police Department.

MLS: A Service For The Buyer And Seller

By Jack Duffus,
MLS Committee

The purpose of the Greenville-Pitt County Multiple Listing Service is the orderly dissemination and correlation of listing information to its members so that REALTORS and their associates may better serve the buying and selling public through mutual cooperation. Every rule of Multiple Listing is designed to expedite the sale of real estate with due regard to the public and is directed in every way to helping the public, serving the public and protecting the public.

Multiple Listing is not new and has its origins in the nineteenth century. In the beginning, what is today a Board of REALTORS, was in that day a Real Estate Exchange. On certain days, the members would meet and exchange information about their listings. In these meetings they would, many times bid on properties listed by another broker that might be wanted by their principals. The practice was common in the late nineteenth century.

Soon, the term "multiple listing" came in to use. It is mentioned as an activity of Boards of REALTORS as early as 1907. In the 1920s, multiple listing had become widely accepted as a means of serving the real estate needs of the public. The concept continued to expand through the years and spread to different parts of the country. Today there are many hundreds and hundreds of Boards of REALTORS which provide Multiple Listing Services to their members.

The local Multiple Listing Service was authorized by the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS on August 10, 1977. By laws, Rules and Regulations were developed to provide a smooth working, valuable service to all members.

Our Multiple Listing Service provides a ready source of information on properties, listed by a participating member, in the Pitt County area. White participation in the Multiple Listing Service is voluntary, those who elect to join are required to submit all listings of properties to the service for dissemination to all members.

This sharing of information is beneficial for the seller because information on their property is made available to thirty-four local agencies and 107 agents assisting in the sale of his property. It is beneficial to the buyer because current information on almost all properties in the area is at the disposal of his local agent who is member of Multiple Listing.

The Multiple Listing Service is a Committee of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS, consisting of three members appointed by the President of the Board. Each member serves a two year term. The Committee members for 1983 include Jimmy Lee, Chairman, David Evans and Jack Duffus. This Committee supervises a Multiple Listing Service that has approximately 529 listings of various types. The MLS publication is restricted to REALTOR use only and contains complete information on these listings. Helpful statistics are also included of weekly, monthly and yearly sales volume, average sale amounts, days-on-market, percent of listed price and other vital information necessary for the real estate professional.

A quarterly report of all sales is also published and contains data useful to REALTORS for the proper appraisal of properties.

The Multiple Listing Service of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS has a record of excellence and outstanding performance. It will continue to serve the buying and selling public of Pitt County in future years as well as it has served them in the past.

Shared Equity....Friend Or Foe?

By Joseph C. Ward, REALTOR

If you are in the market for a new home and can afford ownership with the initial high costs involved and the financial obligations that follow, then shared equity financing is not for you.

The concept of shared equity is to make home ownership affordable for a market that normally would not be able to buy real estate. Shared equity is synonymous with its name...the equity, and the property and its cost is shared by more than one owner. Therefore, a buyer can get into a home with approximately one-half the usual costs involved (down payment, closing costs, etc.) and have half the cost of a conventional monthly payment. This unique form of financing is usually catered to the renter who is looking for a logical and affordable alternative to renting. First-time buyers, singles and even higher-income buyers may choose this plan due to the lesser financial obligation. The lower monthly payments and initial investment enable buyers to own a home and still be able to afford other things they may enjoy.

This affordability is made possible by the creation of a partnership that allows two people to buy the same property and share the advantages and responsibilities of home ownership. One owner (owner/occupant) has the right to occupancy and lower payments. The other owner (owner/investor) has a tax benefit with the security of a partner rather than a tenant.

Shared equity is not for everyone, but it is a creative financial tool that is used propertly and professionally can provide benefits for both owner/occupants and owner/investors that otherwise they could not afford.

Consider Purchasing A New Home

By Connally Branch

You should consider purchasing a new home for obvious reasons. All builders are under a 12 month warranty period and some offer 10 year buyer protection plans. Many times you may select your own decor and vary allowances.

Small detail changes are easy to make while the home is under construction and when complete, buyers have a greater feeling of accomplishment.

The not so obvious reasons to buy a new home may be the most important. Insulation and energy saving features abound in our area with most builders exceeding Greenville Utilities E-300 standards. Maintenance costs can and will save a home buyer several hundred dollars a year as compared to a house over 5 years old, with few exceptions.

In purchasing a new home, overall appearance and functional utility in design is up to date giving the new home buyer less interior maintenance and attracting buyers when and if they decide to sell.

Now is a highly unusual time in that we're seeing new home prices "cost per square foot" the same as resale properties of similar size and with rates down as low as they have been for over 3 years, there is little question now is the time to consider a new home.

What Is A Life Worth

By Eddie Pate

For the second year in a row, the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, in conjunction with the City of Greenville Fire Department and Fire Departments throughout the county, is engaged in a most humanitarian project.

This project is the "Life Saving Smoke Detector Campaign." Begun in 1982, the board, through private and corporate sponsorships, is to place smoke detector units in the homes of the handicapped, elderly and the truly needy. Our goal this year is to place 500 units throughout the county.

The smoke detectors are purchased by the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors at cost, and the units are distributed among the city and county fire departments.

This year, like last year, these detectors will be placed in the homes by the city and county fire department personnel free of charge.

The cost per unit is $10.58, and your sponsorship is fully tax deductible on your Federal Return.

Your participation in this most humanitarian project shows your concern for the handicapped, elderly, disabled and truly needy members of the community.

To find out how you can help, visit your local neighborhood Fire Station or call the Realtor of your choice. REALTORS SHARE, BECAUSE THEY CARE, so won't you please help.. This is one of our board's Make America Better Projects.

The Advantages Of Buying An Existing Home

by David G. Nichols, Jr.

As a Realtor engaged in both the sale of new and existing home it's hard to take sides when asked this question. I feel that both new and existing homes fill different needs for different people, however there are some advantages to purchasing the existing home.

It's often been said that one must build at least two new homes before one finally gets that new home exactly as one wants. I know from personal experience that this is true. Buying an existing home gives the homebuyer the advantage of seeing and learning from other's mistakes. It's alot like buying a good used car, the previous owner has worked all the problems out. The existing homebuyer gets to shop around and make more of a selection, and usually gets a cheaper price than with new construction. Certainly it's hard to beat the shine and sparkle of a brand new home, but what about that plot of dirt that's going to take many hours of back breaking labor and lots and lots of money. There are also new and expensive drapes and window treatments to be bought, as well as fireplace equipment, special carpets and so on. Often these items, along with refrigerators, stoves and other appliances can be negotiated in the sales price of an existing home.

Aside from these advantages the biggest and most obvious advantage for purchasing an existing home is better financing. There are many and varied forms of loan assumptions available with existing mortgages and they usually offer a lower rate as well as a substantial savings in closing costs. Also an existing owner is more likely to offer some owner financing or a possible "rent with option to purchase" than a builder whose money is tied up in the construction of a new home.

Again there are advantages to buying both new and existing homes. It depends on what the homebuyer is looking for. Luckily there are both types of homebuyers and these help provide a good climate for the local real estate market.

Home Buyers Seminar To Be Held

Theater Thoughts From A Local Trio

Once there were three people who had never heard of Greenville, North Carolina: A Winston-Salem boy who wanted to dance-fly on the trapeze, a spirited South Carolina contralto, and a California football player. But one day, the boy attended a play; the singer met a consummate drama coach; and the football player's friend went to an audition. And each one moved a step closer to Greenville.

Doug Mitchell, Catherine Rhea-Darby, and Cedric Winchell will each direct a play during the Pitt-Greenville Arts Festival.

"Carnival" is a happy show, sophisticated enough for adults and delightful enough for children," explains Ayden-Grifton High School drama teacher, Ayden Theatre Workshop director Doug Mitchell, who has summered at the North Carolina School of the Arts, ECU and Charlotte Summer Theatres, and The Lost Colony. "A circus was the first live performance I attended. It was probably the only live entertainment available to children locally." But his own experience was not the only consideration in Doug's choice of "Carnival" for the festival. "The Curtain Players" – his well known student mime troupe – can use their acrobatic and juggling talents...It's a tender story too, an innocent girl thrust into the razzmatazz...

And the puppets work. They become characters! Audiences like to see it all happen, the tent going up, and the lights being strung." And the once tempting risk of the trapeze is now manifested in the excitement of production.

• An intrinsic sense of presence blossomed into a serious acting career at the likes of Dallas Theatre Center, Stage South, and the State Theatre of Virginia, as well as TV and radio commercialk recording, all because of a high school drama teacher who "expected a lot from us." Catherine Rhea-Darby feels that this early training in the importance of discipline in theater now proves invaluble in working with new scripts; she is directing "Afomo," the winning script in the Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina 82-83 playwrighting competition.

As the organization's producing director, she says the play is especially imaginative in its dialogue, characterization, setting, and thematic development. "'Afomo's' characters are types of everymen that encompass certain classifications of people. The playwright (Joseph Bathanti of Charlotte) uses economy in his writing, yet everything that needs to be said is said. This is unusual for a beginning playwright. . . I'm excited about working with the playwright to make 'Afomo' a produceble script for the theater without its losing its impact. 'Afomo' has such strong visual elements that it would adapt well to film. But for now, our purpose is to develop the script to its fullest stage potential."

• "'Our Town' is a play which has been unjustly treated in terms of its particular style. The playwright (Thornton Wilder) focuses on an Oriental spiritualness and is a seminal figure in American experimentalist theater," explains Cedric Winchell, who gave up pigskin when he accompanied a friend to an audition and got the part. "It was all an accident. I was in football and I needed a course so I took acting."

The accident resulted in a chain of successes, both in the west (Universal Studios, Old Globe Theater) and in New York, where he did extensive work in TV and off-off Broadway.

"But I wanted them to let me direct, so I got a PhD." It worked. Another chain of success followed, leading to a position at ECU drama department. During "Our Town" fulfills a long-time goal for Winchell, who sees it as an example of Oriental theater akin to the philosophies of Artaud, Meyerhold, and Barrault.

"'Our Town' is frequently chosen because English-oriented (not theater-oriented) drama taachers think it's a safe, quaint, nice drama about a little town. But it is actually visceral theater, in the Noh style. Its seminal message is that no true understanding occurs in our world, and that there is a higher kind of order which

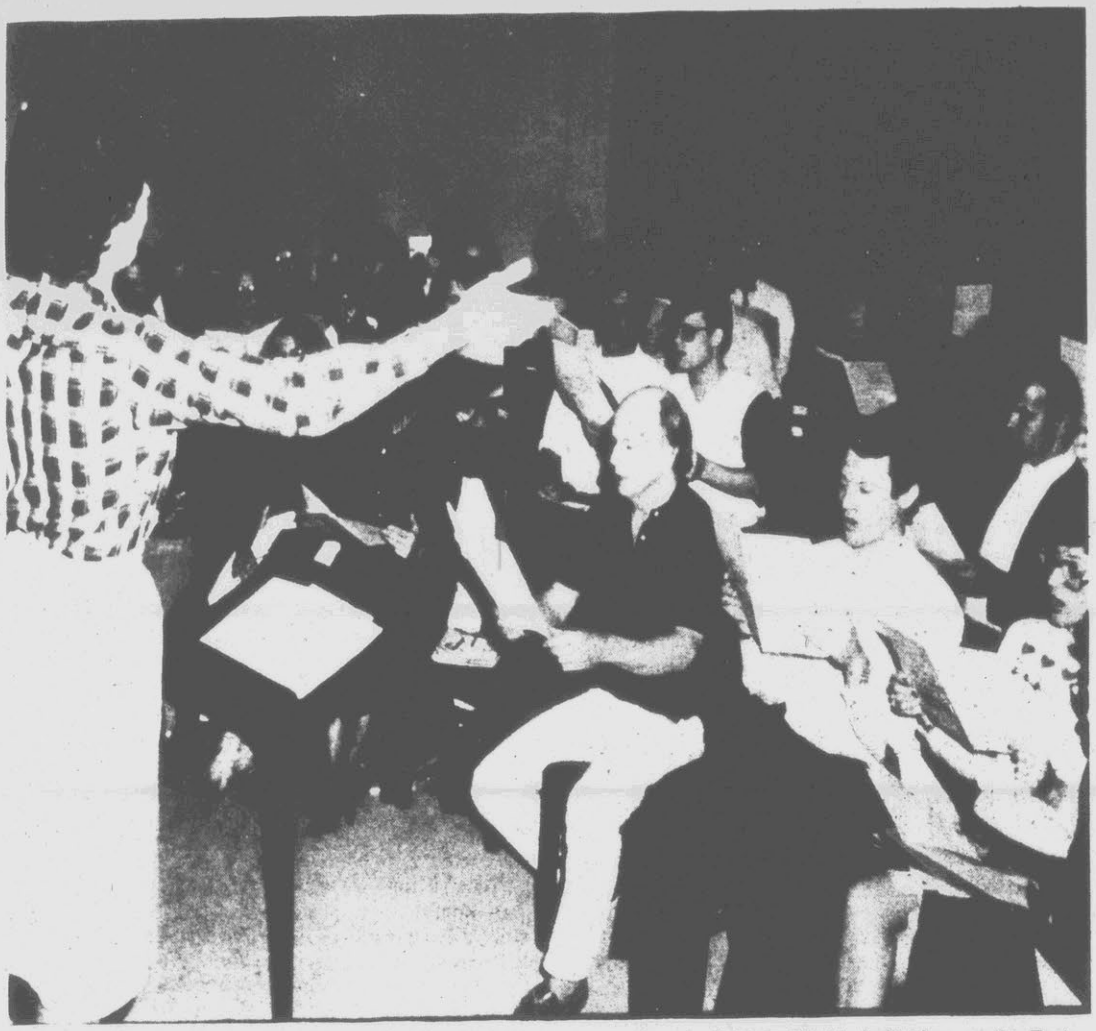
Choral Society To Present Spring Concert



IN REHEARSAL . . . Members of the Greenville Choral Society, directed by Rhonda Fleming, are shown in rehearsal for their spring concert which is scheduled to be presented at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 24 in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus.

The 75-voice Greenville Choral Society will present its Spring Concert at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 24 in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus.

Haydn's "Theresa Mass" will be sung by the chorus and soloists and accompanied by orchestra. The work is one of six masses that was commissioned by Haydn's patron, Prince Nicolaus II of Esterhazy, in honor of the prince's wife.

The Mass is characterized by brilliant declamatory passages such as "Gloria," contrasted with tender, almost delicate moments in the "Benedictus." The work is a crystal example of Haydn's classical style, and is one of his true masterpieces.

The second half of the concert will include a group of selections composed by American musicians. Two pieces by America's early composer, William Billings, are "Modern Music" and "David's Lamentation."

Several folk songs representative of our folk heritage will also be sung. These are, "O Dear, What Can the Matter Be," "Black Is the Color of My True Love's Hair," and the ever-favorite, "Shenandoah." Two settings by Aaron Copland, will be "Long Time Ago," and the Shaker Tune, "Ching-a-Ring-Chaw." The program will conclude with two dramatic spirituals, "All My Trials, Lord," and "Daniel, Servant of the Lord."

The program for the spring concert has been selected to please a wide range of musical tastes. Tickets are priced at $2 and may be purchased form any Choral Society member or at the door. Tickets are also available at the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council office in the Home Federal Savings and Loan Building, 543 South Evans Street.

Two freighters — one loaded with explosives — collided in Halifax Harbor in 1917. The resulting blast sank both ships and wrecked the north part of the city, causing $35 million in damages. More than 1,000 persons were killed, several thousand injured and 10,000 left homeless.

Grifton Art Shown In Annual Festival

Art classes in the family town of Grifton culminate in a yearly exhibition sponsored by the Shad Festival. Out-of-town work is welcomed and takes home many of the ribbons, but the lion's share of the work is done by Grifton artists.

While the show is referred to tongue-in-cheek as a Sunday Painter's show, most of the pieces are done in Wednesday night and Saturday classes. The Wednesday night classes for adults are sponsored by the town and Pitt Community College. The Saturday classes for young people are completely underwritten by the town. All classes have been ongoing for nearly 10 years and all are taught by the same teacher, Fausto M. Cardelli of Kinston.

Art is an inner thing, not an outside goal that someone has set for you. When you work with people from the third grade to grandparents, it forces you to look at art in a new way. For art to be valid for any age group there has to be that spark of excitement of discovery. You can't just take one approach.
Cardelli

Cardelli is a graduate of East Carolina University's School of Art and a full-time teacher at Kinston High School. His own work has been selected for the Springs Mill Art Show in both 1982 and 1983. He has taught upwards of 50 Grifton adults and many children who started in third grade and are now in college.

Cardelli never forces an artist beyond their desires but does encourage them to stretch their imagination. Thus, adults who came in as "barn painters" have now tried warped grid, gesture, and contour drawings, also collage paintings and impressionistic lifestyles.

Seventy-five-year-old Frances Long, third place winner in oil in 1982: "Cardelli is wonderful about bringing out the potential in everybody. I like especially that he doesn't expect us all to do the same thing. He lets us express out own ideas and individuality. He has a very nice way of finding something good about everyone's work."

Jane Lambert: "He's so enthusiastic himself, he carries you right along into techniques you might never have thought of trying."

Bill Frisell of Greenville, second place winner in oil in 1982: "I go to Grifton art class because I enjoy the company of creative people, and we have a stimulating and excellent teacher."

Each Saturday for 10 weeks, Cardelli brightens the gloomiest months of winter with art classes for students from ages eight to 18. Youngsters who take the morning classes (3-7th graders) have very limited rules, are allowed to express themselves totally with every medium imaginable. Tools of the trade include: toothpick and ink on wet paper, candle smoke, drink straws, clay, scissors, meat tray prints, stencils, wax paper, india ink, watercolor, tempera and acrylic.

Marian McLawhorn, whose whole family has been students: "Cardelli has really made Grifton Shad Festivals special to youngsters because they are able to prepare for the festivals by using their own special artistic talents. He is a gifted teacher; not only does he love the art he teaches, but he loves to see his students learn and create for themselves. His enthusiasm endears him to the children; every year they look forward to his Saturday classes."

The matting and preparing of the show (sometimes 50 large pieces) is done by adult volunteers. The show this year, rather than concentrating on individual work, will stress sooperation: a 30 by eight feet mural depicting examples of life in Grifton a hundred years ago. Done in brown tones, it will be reminiscent of old sepia photographs. The Shad Festival theme this year is "Double-barreled Celebration," a reference to Grifton's 100th birthday as well as the 13th annual festival.

All work will be on display in the Grifton Museum lobby during the Shad Festival weekend April 15-16 from noon to 6 p.m. An invitation is open to any exhibitors in this area who would like to compete for ribbon prizes.

George Brett, 1982 judge of Shad Festival Art Show: "What the show lacks in quantity it makes up for in quality. I am always pleased with the variety of mediums and refreshing creativity produced by both young and old. I shall look forward to the show again this year."

GIVING POINTERS TO DANCERS . . . ECU choreographer Petrus van Muyden demonstrates a point to student dancers in the studio of the ECU Dance Theater on campus. On April 23 and 24 fledgling choreographers at ECU will present their works in a showcase setting in the Studio Theater of the Messick Theater Arts Center.

Showcase Of Dance

Every other year, fledgling choreographers at East Carolina University present their works in a showcase setting in the Studio Theatre of Messick Theatre Arts Center. This year the student concert will be presented at 8:15 p.m. on April 23 and 24. Admission is free and seating capacity is limited. Patrons will be admitted on a first seated basis.

The workshop presentation is the result of collaborating students from upper-level classes in dance, lighting, and costuming. Faculty members who teach these courses are involved in an advisory capacity and their participation includes setting guidelines and goals for the projects, offering constructive criticism, and supervising activities when necessary.

This year eleven student choreographers will be presenting pieces with costumes and lights by student designers. The dances will be in modern, ballet, jazz, and musical comedy styles. The evening will be varied and lively.

Theater Thoughts . . .

• It is no accident that risk, discipline, and spirituality — elements basic to all good theater — are abundant this spring in a place no one used to know about so far as theater is concerned. Greenville is growing and changing, attracting a variety of people from everywhere. How do our Festival play directors respond to these changing audiences? All three recognize the need for greater audience involvement.

"The audience needs to hear schrei, the cry, to realize the imploring to appreciate day to day events. The theater's mission is spirituality; its roots lie in primitive ritual," explains Winchell.

Doug Mitchell wants ". . . to spill 'Carnival' into the aisles, and into the lobby for total involvement. I want cotton candy in the lobby!"

For Mrs. Darby, audience is excitement. "I'm always impressed by how perceptive our audiences are. They frequently see things we don't . . . And there's something extraordinary about the word being heard for the first time. We all — including the audience — feel 'I was here when this happened!' and 'perhaps one day a larger body of people will appreciate this person's work.'"

Such intensity takes energy. The source? "The energy comes from me," explains Winchell, though he admits that transferring it to the actors is no simple task. Mitchell's secret is a pre-opening pep talk: "I tell them if they aren't exhausted after the last curtain, if they haven't enjoyed themselves more than they ever did, they've failed."

Mrs. Darby, sounding like a disciple of educational philosopher John Dewey, but all her own, suggests that the interest in the material must come first, then the discipline. The resultant energy, she insists, is positively infectious.

Barbershop Quartet Open House

The Greenville Barbershop Chorus is planning an Open House and Workshop on Monday. April 11, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Jaycee Park Recreation Building in Greenville. The function is meant to demonstrate the art and craft of the type of four-part harmony singing known as "barbershop harmony," a style that is strictly American in origin and heritage. The proceedings will feature several songs performed by the Greenville Barbershop Chorus (The Pamlico Sound) under the direction of Dr. Norwin C. Pierce, Chorus Director.

The unique sound of four-part barbershop harmony will be demonstrated by a constituent quartet, "The Double Paradox." The quartet will show how musical chords are structured to obtain the characteristic sound. Guests will be invited to participate in a sing-along and there will be a brief talk on the history of the local chapter and the international barbershop organization. Refreshments will be served and all interested citizens are cordially invited to attend, free of charge.

The Greenville Barbershop Chorus is a constituent chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Singing in America, Inc. (SPEBSQSA), an organization of over 38,000 men in the U.S.A. and Canada, enrolled in over 800 local chapters.

Founded in 1938, the Society has its headquarters in Kenosha, Wisconsin, which sponsors music education programs and competitions between choruses and quartets. The local Greenville Area Chapter, chartered in 1979, presently consists of about 25 men from all walks of life, many with little or no formal voice training. They share a common love of this style of singing, which frequently features old time songs of the 1920's and '30's but also includes modern themes set to barbershop harmony.

The barbershop organization stresses good fellowship and community service and the chorus and associated quartets can frequently be heard at local community functions, fund raisers, festivals, and church suppers. Singing engagements are usually done free of charge by the local chapter, but any contributions received are sent to its national service project. In addition to "The Double Paradox," other quartets in the group include "The Metaphors," "The Four Muscatels," and "The Decadent Four."

The national service project of SPEBSQSA is the Institute of Logopedics; a foundation mainly devoted to rehabilitation and therapy of children having speech and hearing impediments. The institute has its major facility for live-in children in a campus-like setting in Wichita, Kansas.

Local chapter meetings are held every Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Jaycee Park Recreation Building. All men interested in singing with the group are cordially invited to attend any meeting. Previous singing experience is not necessary. Further information may be obtained by calling Al Ingenito, Chapter President, at 756-5081, after 5 p.m.

BURT REYNOLDS

Who inspired you to get into acting? —G.D., Las Vegas, Nev.

Spencer Tracy. The first time I met him was in 1959 at a film studio. I kept following him from the set to the dressing room, the dressing room to the set, in the hope of attracting his attention. Finally, many days later, Tracy spotted me. He asked, "Are you an actor?" I replied, "Yes sir, I'm trying to be." Tracy considered my answer for a moment and said, "Don't let anyone catch you at it."

DEBBIE REYNOLDS

Carrie and Todd (Fisher) were constantly in our shadow. Carrie was always called Debbie. They didn't have privacy like other kids — they lived in a fishbowl. Teachers and other children were quicker to criticize them because of who they were. And I didn't have enough time to be with them when I was needed most — but I tried. When Carrie was young, I had it written into my studio contract that I'd stop working by noon every Wednesday so I could attend weekly Girl Scout meetings.

LOS ANGELES — Raging Bull producers Irwin Winkler and Robert Chartoff are trying to land Robert De Niro, their Oscar-winning Jake La Motta, to play Jesus in their upcoming The Last Temptation of Christ. They already have Raging Bull director Martin Scorsese and screenwriter Paul Schrader for the film, to be made in Israel. . . . The Lena Horne-Frank Sinatra two-record album duet, to be produced by Quincy Jones, has been temporarily postponed. Horne, who is still touring in her one-woman show, told Jones she is having throat problems and doesn't want to add to them by squeezing in sessions with the Chairman of the Board. . . . There are now three competing TV movie biographies of Mary Pickford in development: one with Eve Plumb (Jan Brady of The Brady Bunch), who resembles Pickford; another with Charlene Tilton, who doesn't; and a third, with no particular actress in mind but with the blessing of Pickford's widower, silent-screen star Buddy Rogers. . . . Ever-experimental, third-place NBC has two, er, original pilots in production: Manimal, about a sleek, handsome man who turns into a panther, and Me and Mrs. C, which concerns a young black man and an elderly white woman sharing a home, brought together by Reaganomics. . . . Mel Brooks will appear twice as Adolf Hitler in his upcoming movie, To Be or Not To Be, a remake of the Ernst Lubitsch classic set in 1939 Poland. Although it is a comedy, To Be will open with newsreel footage of the Nazi blitzkrieg. Says Brooks, who will produce and co-star with wife Anne Bancroft: "Humor is mightier than the sword. I try to get a German into anything I do, just to remind everyone." —Robert Windeler

NEW YORK — The Verdict, up for five Academy Awards, including Best Picture, has been judged guilty of glaring legal errors by experts here. Famed criminal lawyer Roy M. Cohn says, "The judge should have set aside the jury's verdict because there was no evidence to support it." Negligence lawyer Harry H. Lipsig points out that Paul Newman was obligated to relay the hospital's settlement offer to his client. Continues former New York County District Attorney Richard H. Kuh: "All counsel [Newman, Charlotte Rampling and James Mason] behaved in a manner that might well call for disbarment. New York Appellate Justice Theodore Kupferman, however, jokes that the portrayal of the judge was accurate: "He was constantly eating in his chambers because he was so overburdened with work he didn't have time to go out to eat." . . . The popularity of the movie Gandhi has prompted 40 books (new and reprints) on the Indian spiritual leader to hit bookstores. . . . Former Taxi driver Jeff Conaway, now starring in the medieval fantasy series, Wizards and Warriors, offers no apologies for the show's appeal with kids: "There's no getting around it. You have to get that audience to succeed. Once the kids are watching, maybe the parents will sit up and notice, too." —Anita Summer

WASHINGTON — Every senator and congressman has unlimited free use of the mails for "official business." But according to a new Senate Rules Committee report, only 4 percent of the 234 million pieces of mail sent by the 100 senators last year were replies to constituent questions. The rest were newsletters, press releases and other self-promoting announcements. Estimated cost to the taxpayers: $48 million. Heading the list is multimillionaire Senator John Heinz (R.-Pa.), who sent home 15 million pieces of mail last year when up for reelection. Next come Alfonse D'Amato (R.-N.Y.), Charles Percy (R.-Ill.), Lloyd Bentsen (D.-Tex.) and Daniel Moynihan (D.-N.Y.). . . . To 200 astonished guests gathered for his 48th birthday dinner at an elegant hotel, Secretary of Agriculture John Block crooned a medley of country and western hits as he strummed along on his guitar. "Until I came to Washington, I used to be afraid to speak publicly, never mind sing country," said the former Illinois hog farmer. "But after two years as Secretary of Agriculture, I am not afraid of anything."

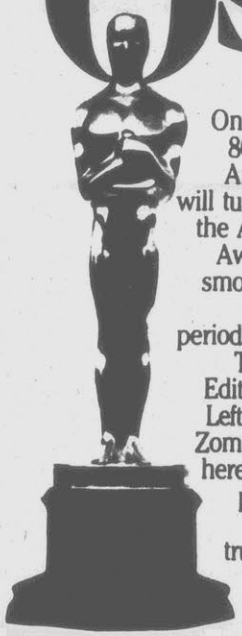
A Night at the Oscars



On Monday 80 million Americans will tune in for the Academy Awards. To smooth over the dull periods of Best Technical Editing by a Left-Handed Zombie, etc., here's a potpourri of Oscar truths and trivia.

How an Oscar Changed Their Lives

Is an Oscar worth more than its weight in gold plate? We asked some former winners to describe how winning affected their lives.

Jack Lemmon (Best Supporting Actor, Mister Roberts, 1955, and Best Actor, Save the Tiger, 1973): "The first Oscar was very important to my career and confidence. It was only my fourth film, but winning an Oscar boosted me into another league from that point on.

"The second Oscar, well, that was sort of a pat on the tushy. You never get jaded about the Academy Awards. I'm still enough of a kid to appreciate a pat on the tushy from my peers."

Jane Wyman (Best Actress, Johnny Belinda, 1948): "It made me work harder."

George Burns (Best Supporting Actor, The Sunshine Boys, 1975): "I was very happy to have won it, but life goes on, you know. I stayed the same size — I didn't get any taller or any fatter. I still put ketchup in my soup."

Patricia Neal (Best Actress, Hud, 1963): "Unfortunately, not at all. You see, I won the Oscar after I suffered my stroke, so the great worry was that I would die and that the child I was carrying at the time would die. So whatever great opportunities were opening up at that time all had to be canceled so that I could stay home and, hopefully, survive."

John Houseman (Best Supporting Actor, The Paper Chase, 1973): "It confirmed what had already happened, which was that at the age of 70 I took on a new career and became an actor. And this might not have gotten anywhere if it had not been for the confirmation of the Academy Award, which made it sort of irresistible, you know?"

Ernest Borgnine (Best Actor, Marty, 1955): "It raised my salary enough to enable me to make a living as an actor."

Rita Moreno (Best Supporting Actress, West Side Story, 1961): "It gave me the courage to turn down the Indian Maiden and Latin Spitfire roles that were constantly being offered me."

Burt Bacharach (three Oscars, including Best Song for "Arthur's Theme," 1981): "I got married, at least in part, because of the Oscars. Carole Bayer Sager [a co-winner] and I had been collaborating for about a year writing songs together, and winning together made it so special. Carole and I felt we had to do something to top the Oscar. We won on Monday and we were married on Saturday."

Shelley Winters (Best Supporting Actress,

Oscar Nominee Ben Kingsley: The Roots of His Royal Success

On his first visit to India, Krishna Bhanji fell in love with the country "as soon as I got off the plane and smelled that mixture of spice, perfume, gasoline fumes and incense." It was a homecoming of sorts for Bhanji who, years before when he became an actor, had changed his name to Ben Kingsley. Now Kingsley was in India to play the title role in the epic film Gandhi. The movie would open to raves and Kingsley, 39, was suddenly as hot as lamb vindaloo. He has already won a half-dozen major awards and is a strong candidate to win an Oscar on Monday.

Kingsley, who is half Indian, can trace his roots to Gandhi's own state of Gujarat, where his paternal grandfather was born. The grandfather left India at age 9 to escape a cholera epidemic. He was shipwrecked off the coast of Zanzibar, adopted by a spice grower and later went into the spice business himself. Kingsley's father came to England at age 13. Eventually he became a doctor, married a British fashion model and settled in Manchester. "He was totally Anglicized," Kingsley recalls. "He wore wool tweed suits and drank pints of beer at the local pub."

For the actor, childhood was as idyllic as the proverbial English countryside. He was raised in a "middle-class English household" by parents he describes as "caring and stable." From them, he says, he inherited "my mother's interest in presenting herself, as she learned to as a model, and my father's fascination for the human being, love of travel, pragmatism, wit and sense of organization."

At school, he didn't feel much different from the other children. In fact, Kingsley recalls, he and his siblings "enjoyed a certain amount of celebrity being rather lovely children with huge, brown eyes. People used to stop my Dad's car and say, 'May we have a look at your children?' We were stars, all of us."

The biggest star appears to have been Kingsley himself, who was dubbed "the Danny Kaye of the family" on account of his talent for mimicry. Initially, though, Kingsley seemed most interested in imitating his father by becoming a doctor. But he finally — and literally — fell for the theater the summer he was 19. During a performance of Shakespeare's Richard III "it got so hot and I got so excited that I passed out." When Kingsley came to, he told his parents that he wanted to be an actor. His father advised him to change his name, and Kingsley has never felt bitter about the fact that such a step was necessary. He chose Ben, his father's nickname, and Kingsley because his grandfather had been nicknamed King Clove.

In fact, the pragmatic Kingsley reasons, if he hadn't changed his name he might never have been cast as Gandhi because he might not have made it into the Royal Shakespeare Company, which he joined in 1967 after several years in children's theater. Nor would he then have been cast as Hamlet in 1975, the role that Gandhi director Richard Attenborough spotted him in. He also might never have married "a great woman," director Alison Sutcliffe, whom he met while working on Hamlet, nor experienced the thrill of caring for his "brilliant and very entertaining" infant son, Edmund.

Kingsley is equally reasonable when it comes to coping with the sudden movie-star status that has followed his rave reviews in Gandhi and, more recently, Betrayal, viewing it as merely the latest stage in a career he has been building for almost two decades. "I can see some kind of logic that stops me from panicking," he says. "Therefore, I don't run away when I pass a poster on Hollywood Boulevard and the print of my name is bigger than my wildest dreams. I just say, 'Yes, O.K., it's been 18 years of very, very hard work.'"

But hasn't the Oscar nomination unsettled this sensible man just a little bit? "One little contest can't change me," proclaims Kingsley. Whatever happens, he'll still have to return to London and face the press in a preview of his new play, Edmund Kean, "I'll still be scared stiff, wondering what the critics are going to say." But, he admits, with a hint of pride, "no matter how terrified I am in the wings, as soon as I step on stage, the fear goes."

The Diary of Anne Frank, 1959, and A Patch of Blue, 1965): "I think I got a divorce [from Vittorio Gassman] on account of it. Why? Because I was married to an actor. It's terribly competitive when you both are actors, whether you want it to be or not."

Rod Steiger (Best Actor, In the Heat of the Night, 1967): "It made me much more of an asset to the industry, and so I began to get more and better scripts and roles. Personally it had a very positive effect. Having first choice always improves one's personal outlook."

Broderick Crawford (Best Actor, All the King's Men, 1949): "The money gets better and the parts get better, and as an actor you can't ask for anything better than that. I suppose, too, that some people — you could call them users — try to get on the bandwagon, but you've just got to ward those off.

"Personally I don't think it changed me. I was delighted to have won, but if I hadn't won I don't think it would have made a bit of difference."

All the King's Men

Mary Steenburgen (Best Supporting Actress, Melvin and Howard, 1980): "In general, how it changed my life was that it didn't, because I wouldn't let it. It's a wonderful honor, and that's about as far as it should go.

"It may have given me a little more self-confidence, but as far as my work is concerned, I'm pretty confident. In other areas of my life I'm a wreck. I could use an Oscar in other areas."

Gene Hackman (Best Actor, The French Connection, 1971): "There's no question that, certainly for a period of time, and to a diminishing extent for the rest of your career, the Oscar does improve your ability to get films financed.

"Personally it helped a lot, because I was at a low point. The year before that had been very bad. The six months after I finished French Connection, I had no work whatsoever."

Cloris Leachman (Best Supporting Actress, The Last Picture Show, 1971): "It makes a ready introduction on talk shows when they don't know what else to say. . . . Winning it made me want to say, 'You ain't seen nothin' yet!'"

Shirley Jones (Best Supporting Actress, Elmer Gantry, 1960): "For me the Academy Award was a perfectly timed, professional lifesaver. The brief movie name I'd made for myself at the time was as a musical ingenue, and without some instant and miraculous transition to actress, I surely would've gone the unfortunate way of the great, old Hollywood musical.

"How did it change my life personally? Well . . . my price doubled, my friends tripled, my children got more popular, my tables at Chasen's got better, the man at the bank said he was in love with me and my housekeeper asked for a raise. But while all those things did happen, the truth is that there really were no personal changes for me. I love my work, but I also love and treasure my life after work with my crazy husband [comedian Marty Ingels]."

Faye Dunaway (Best Actress, Network, 1976): "First, it gave me confidence, real confidence, knowing that my peers had awarded it to me. Second, although I think I'm generally very sensible and cautious in most ways, when choosing a role, I do have an appetite for a large effort, for throwing caution to the wind . . . . I think an Oscar helps make those kinds of efforts possible by increasing your importance to the industry and to the public. The Oscar gives you stature and recognition."

Jon Voight (Best Actor, Coming Home, 1978): "It gave me a great deal of encouragement at a time when I needed support."

The Androgyny Strain

In Oscar-nominated films Tootsie, Victor/Victoria and The World According to Garp, characters seem better suited to the opposite sex than to their own. Why this interest in how the other half lives? Film critic Molly Haskell and Carolyn Heilbrun, Ph.D., at Columbia University, gave us their thoughts.

Haskell: "There have been female and male impersonators before: Garbo used to do light male impersonation. But now it goes deeper. Roles are a central issue in our thinking."

Heilbrun: "The point is not that we go out and pretend to be the opposite gender, but that we don't have to be afraid of having feelings that we've been told aren't appropriate. We've found the courage to make movies which, without camping, act out those feelings."

How They Handled the Night-Before Jitters

Dustin Hoffman (Best Actor, Kramer vs. Kramer, 1979): "I get very nervous going to those Academy Awards. It's really a very tense affair and I'm always glad when it's over. Even if you don't expect to win or don't want to win, there's a very bad reflexive feeling when you don't. They name somebody else and something in your brain says, 'YOU LOST.'

"I must say the most enjoyable times I've ever had with the Academy Awards were when I was like the rest of the American public. Which is to say I was home, having some milk and cake — or a beer — and watching them, enjoying them and laughing."

Burt Bacharach: "Carole [Bayer Sager] and I both worked around the clock on a new song so we wouldn't think about the Oscar competition."

Tatum O'Neal: (Best Supporting Actress, Paper Moon, 1973): "Gee, I was 9 years old. I didn't know that I was supposed to be that nervous — so I wasn't."

Ernest Borgnine: "I was living at home at the time and I remember that I put the Oscars totally out of my mind and went to sleep. And if you don't believe that, you can ask my Mamma."

Gene Hackman: "I spent the night painting."

Patty Duke Astin: (Best Supporting Actress, The Miracle Worker, 1962): "I threw up."

Where They Keep Their Oscars

West Side Story

And once they've won it, where do they keep it?

Cloris Leachman: "In the front closet."

Jon Voight: "I gave my Oscar to my mother this year for her award-winning performance in my new film '[Table for Five]."

Rita Moreno: "In a nice, quiet corner of my living room. I worked very hard for it, and I never use it as a doorstop."

Jack Lemmon: "In my study at home."

Patricia Neal: "I keep it at my home in England in the living room, on the shelf. I also wear every day a gold replica of an Oscar, a very little gold Oscar, on a chain around my neck."

Patty Duke Astin: "On the den mantel where it shares space with my children's Little League baseball awards and my four Emmys."

Shelley Winters: "One Oscar is at the Anne Frank House in Amsterdam. It's part of a museum against intolerance. The other one is on the mantelpiece at my house. Every actor who visits picks it up and makes his

It's now 40 years since Rick bade Ilsa farewell by saying, "Here's looking at you, kid," 40 years since the making of Casablanca — The Best Picture of 1943. As time has gone by, the epic has been voted one of the top three films ever by the American Film Institute, and a TV Guide poll found it's the most popular and frequently shown film on television.

Hard to believe then that only a handful of Hollywood's top agents could recognize its screenplay when sent in recently under a pseudonym, and that, in fact, most rejected it.

As a test, freelance writer Chuck Ross simply retyped Casablanca's screenplay, changed the title to that of the original play, Everybody Comes to Rick's, and mailed copies to all 217 agencies listed with the Writers Guild of America. Not surprisingly, over 130 copies went unread or "got lost in the mail." But of the 85 agents who did read the script, only 33 spotted it as Casablanca — only 33 could remember this: "Louis, I think this is the beginning of a beautiful friendship."

Forty-one of the agents rejected it outright (among the criticisms: "weak dialogue" and "thin story line"); eight more rejected it adding that it seemed to resemble Casablanca; three wanted to represent "Ross's" work, and one suggested turning it into a novel.

Says Ross, "I think this says a lot about the access novice writers have in getting scripts to the powers that be in Hollywood. But then again, a would-be screenwriter can always find solace by saying, 'So my script was rejected. So what. After all, look what they did to Casablanca!'" —Eliot Kaplan

PEOPLE QUIZ

CAN RELIGION GIVE YOU FAITH IN YOURSELF?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your religious beliefs can be more important to your happiness than your accomplishments.
2. How you feel about yourself — your level of self-esteem — is an index of how you treat others.
3. If you take a critical attitude about things, places and people and express your dislikes openly, you will be more appreciated than a less critical person.
4. Your belief in astrology could vary with the amount of stress you encounter in certain situations.
5. The more educated you are, the less you are likely to believe in supernatural phenomena.

ANSWERS

1. True. A team of behavioral scientists at the University of Texas studied the influence that Americans' beliefs about life, death and the hereafter have on their emotional well-being. They found that strong religious faith is related to increased feelings of well-being. Although the researchers found that the strength of a person's religious beliefs has a positive effect on the quality of life, they also discovered that faith does not eliminate everyday stress.
2. True. Veterans Administration studies showed that the higher degree of self-esteem a person has, especially an older person, the more generous he is toward less fortunate people, the more time or money he gives to charitable causes and the more he takes a sympathetic interest in others' problems.
3. False. A series of studies conducted by a team of University of California investigators indicated that people like "likers," regardless of whether they express their liking toward us or toward someone or something else, such as movies, cities, vacation resorts, celebrities, etc.
4. False. Dr. H. J. Eysenck, professor of psychology at the University of London, reported that under conditions of high stress (particularly stress coming from relationships) an individual may use astrology as a coping device, even though under low stress conditions he may not believe in it. Astrology seems to be attractive because it gives people a lot of supposedly objective information about themselves without requiring any psychological input. It also supposedly predicts the future, thereby reducing uncertainty about what lies ahead.
5. True. A survey sponsored by Canada's Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council explored a belief in extraordinary phenomena (ghosts, mental telepathy, extrasensory perception, etc.) of university professors and a representative cross-section of men and women in the general population. The researchers concluded that more-educated persons would be the most skeptical toward extraordinary phenomena and most inclined to question things that many people believe. FW

MARATHONER PATTI CATALANO: OFF AND RUNNING AGAIN

By Tony Scherman

When the Boston Marathon is run next week, the most compelling story of the race could well be a young woman who isn't even going to be running in the event this year, due to injury. But Patti Catalano, a native of nearby Quincy, Mass., and the best woman marathoner in the U.S. until injury and depression stopped her cold in 1982, will run — and win — again someday. Just ask Joe.

Joe is Joe Catalano, Patti's coach, fellow marathoner and, since 1980, her husband. He's the main witness to the amazing self-transformation of a once overweight, chain-smoking young woman into a superbly conditioned athlete, second in the world and still peaking when she was knocked out of action after winning the Hawaii marathon in December 1981. "She was setting records, running times no American woman had ever run before," says Joe. "She was still on the rise. Once she gets back into top shape, we'll see more things out of Patti."

For Patti, last year brought more sadness than Boston's Heartbreak Hill. After winning the 1981 Hawaii event for the fourth straight year, she cracked a bone in her lower back while body-surfing. She was bedridden for three months. Finally on the mend in late 1982 from the injury and a long period of self-doubt and withdrawal, she tore a muscle in her foot. The foot injury will keep her out of the Boston Marathon, but she's continuing to fight back. "It'll happen," she says about a return to the top. "I've been there once and it was harder then, because I didn't know I could do it."

Tony Scherman is a freelance writer who runs 20 miles a week. He does not intend to run a marathon — ever.

Husband and coach Joe tracks Patti's progress.

Steve Hansen/Sports Illustrated © Time Inc.

Overcoming adversity is just standard procedure for Catalano. Patti, 30 this month, is the oldest of nine children from a working-class Quincy family; her mother is a Micmac Indian who ran away from her Nova Scotia reservation home as a child. Patti was always a second mother and father to her siblings, taking care of the little ones while holding down as many jobs as she could. "I grew up fast," she says. "I was kind of streetwise." When Patti was 18 her father died; soon after, because of friction with her mother, she left home.

Drifting around unhappily, she gained weight — at her peak she packed 148 pounds onto her 5-foot-4-inch frame (compared to 104 now). She hung out in bars (often dropping $20 a night on draft beers) and job hopped — one restless year she went from job to job seven times. Finally she decided to pull herself together. For starters, she decided to lose weight. Running was her choice of methods. Accidentally, she hit on the activity that would change her life.

She must have doubted her sanity after the first outing in March 1976. Donning a sweatsuit, skin diver's belt and Earth shoes, she took off on a seven-mile jaunt around a Quincy cemetery. The next day she couldn't get out of bed, and it was two weeks till she could walk again. But she did lose three pounds, so what the heck, she pressed on.

Soon enough she found that "running gave me a sense of fulfillment, of well-being." She and others saw that she had a special talent for the sport, and it was off to the races. The drifter had found herself: She was a runner, and a rare one. "Running was the first thing I really wanted to do," she says. "I found it. Nobody told me to do it. I made the decision to pursue it. And that's why it's so important to me." In autumn 1976 she won her first marathon, in Newport, R.I. Shortly thereafter, and soon after splitting up with her first husband, a Boston transit worker and marathoner, she met Catalano, whom she credits with "99 percent" of her achievement. He was a high school track coach and offered to help her train.

"Running was the first thing I really wanted to do," she says.

From 1977 to 1981 the pace quickened. Patti pulled away from the pack and went off in hot pursuit of Norway's Grete Waitz, the best in the world. Patti won races, as she says, "from Japan to Jacksonville" and set a slew of American records. She became the first American woman to run a marathon in less than two and a half hours when she finished second to Waitz in the 1980 New York Marathon. And until last September, Catalano held the American women's mark of 2:27:51, which she set finishing second to Allison Roe in the 1981 Boston Marathon.

Yes, those were giddy times for her: She and Joe did a weekly Boston TV show in the summer of 1981, and in

PATTI CATALANO

Hollywood there was even talk about a movie on her life.

And then it all fell apart out on the waves off Hawaii. The accident shook her badly. "When you're an athlete," she says, "when you rely on your body and then you wreck it, it's not like a normal person who can just take a week off and then go back to work." Unable to run at all for the first third of 1982, she fell into a depression, staying inside her house and even growing apart from Joe. She felt betrayed by friends: "People you thought were your friends aren't really your friends. They were just, I don't know, groupies. It hurts." For a while she even thought about quitting.

But she didn't. Even though her comeback has been delayed by last fall's foot injury — which hit just when she'd finally gotten back up to her full regimen of 100 to 130 miles per week — she's defeated her demons. She and Joe enjoy their house in Dedham, Mass., their pet cat, Tuff Stuff, and they talk about starting a family. ("I think we'd adopt," she says. "But that's a long way down the road: I mean, we've been having a big discussion about getting a dog for two years now.") An excellent cook, Patti is said to make a great carrot cake and is even considering marketing it, possibly opening her own fancy bake shop in Boston. In short, Patti Catalano seems at peace with herself and eager to get back out on the road again.

Her fans want that, too — the locals who cheer her on her workouts and fellow runners like Bill Rodgers, America's longest running marathon attraction. Before her injuries, says Rodgers, "Patti was very, very good, the best American woman. She has to ease back and then she'll be O.K. Patti can be one of the best female long-distance runners in the world again." She can, Rodgers believes, be even better than she was before.

Her talk, as she looks toward a return to top form later this year and toward the 1984 Olympics (which will include a women's marathon for the first time), is full of phrases like "antsy" and "chomping at the bit." Is No.1 worldwide still a goal? "Sure, why not?" she says, sounding guardedly flip. Then the flippancy vanishes. "Once you achieve something beyond anything you've ever dreamed of," she points out, "there's absolutely nothing you can't do. And that's what I tell people: There's nothing you can't do. All it takes is the willingness to work, and you have to really want it. You may have to work harder and longer than you thought, but you'll get there. Because I did." FW

Amazoy withstands active kids and cookouts. Gives you time to relax since it needs little water and cuts mowing two-thirds

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow ... until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn"...is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in...Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

LAWN WATERED ONLY ONCE

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn —nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious, established Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long.

FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS—PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Goes off its green color after killing frosts. Begins regaining its green color at the time when the temperature in the spring is consistently warm. This, of course, varies with climate. Easy planting instructions with order.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed: like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills. Save time, work, money. Plug in Amazoy.

TWO GROWN MEN CAN'T PULL IT APART

So deep-rooted is Amazoy . . . it grows into practically indestructible turf. Amazoy thrives in porous, sandy soil, "builder's soil"—even salty beach areas! Beauty is but one advantage of Zoysia Grass. It's also so vigorous and rich it thrives in soils where lesser grasses have failed you repeatedly. Start your Amazoy lawn this Spring, and never re-seed your lawn again!

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffling, the Zoysia (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 300 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement...ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ⅓.

WATERCRESS—THE SPRIGHTLY GREEN WITH A BIT OF BITE

By Marilyn Hansen

Now is the time that fresh watercress is at its peak of perfection — and it's so much more than just a garnish. These crisp, piquant, healthful greens can add unique flavor, color and texture to a host of dishes. That's why we've put together these delectable, easy-to-prepare recipes. Take your choice from sauce to sandwich spread — or try them all.

WATERCRESS HOLLANDAISE

3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dash salt, or to taste
Dash Tabasco sauce
½ cup unsalted butter or margarine
½ cup finely chopped watercress

1. Place egg yolks, lemon juice, salt and Tabasco in warm blender container (rinsed in hot water). Turn motor on and off just to blend ingredients.
2. Heat butter in a small saucepan or skillet until very hot and bubbling.
3. Remove blender cover, turn motor to high speed and slowly drizzle in all the hot butter. Turn off blender. Add watercress and blend at low speed just to mix. This sauce is perfect for serving with poached chicken, broiled fish and seafood or steamed vegetables. Makes about 1½ cups

WATERCRESS TEA SANDWICHES

1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese, room temperature
1 cup unsalted butter or margarine
½ teaspoon coarse salt, or to taste
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
1 bunch watercress, washed, dried, finely chopped
1 bunch watercress, washed and dried

1. In bowl of food processor, using plastic mixing blade, or in a medium-size bowl, using electric mixer, combine cream cheese, butter, salt and pepper. Add chopped watercress and mix at low speed just to blend.
2. Trim crusts from sandwich bread. Spread cream cheese-watercress filling thickly on bread, using about 3 tablespoons per sandwich. Top with second slice of bread, cut diagonally in half, and again in half, making triangles.
3. Place sandwiches close together on a large plate or platter, separating layers with waxed paper and covering all with a damp paper towel and plastic film; store in refrigerator.
4. To serve, arrange sandwiches attractively on a large platter and garnish ends of platter with two bouquets of watercress.
Makes about 72 sandwiches

Country Maron

WATERCRESS AND RADISH COTTAGE CHEESE

½ cup finely chopped watercress
½ cup finely diced radishes
2 cups (1 lb.) cottage cheese
½ teaspoon coarse salt, or to taste

1. In a medium bowl, combine all ingredients and mix well. You'll find this mixture a great addition to a salad platter and great for stuffing tomatoes and avocadoes.
Makes about 2½ cups

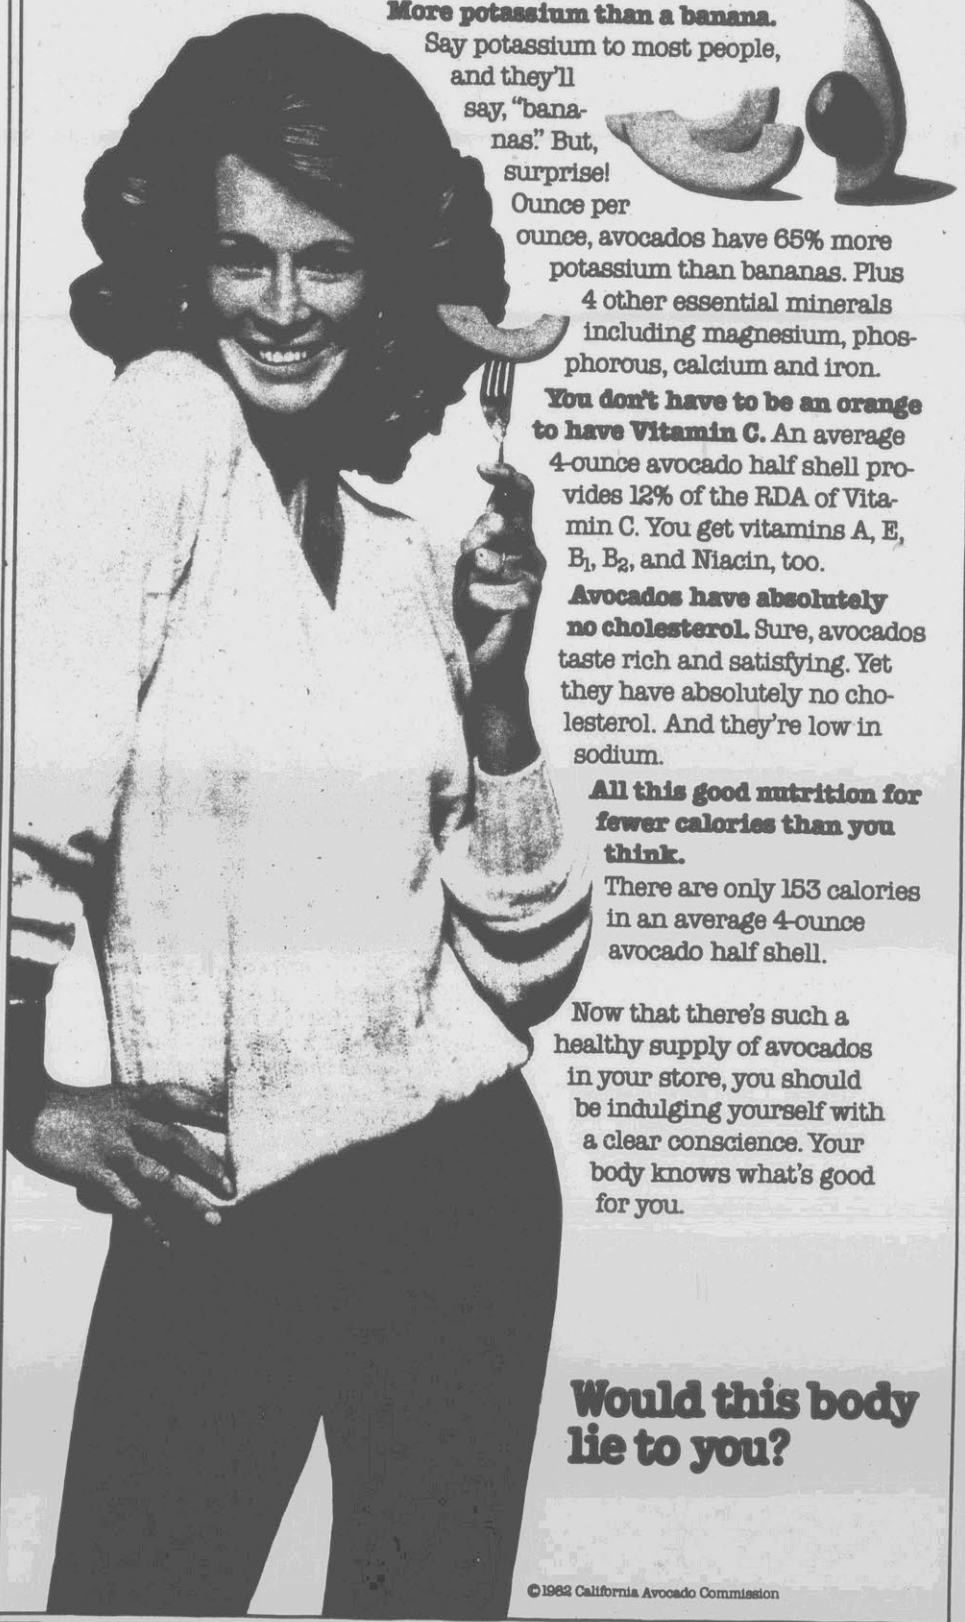
TIPS ABOUT WATERCRESS

To buy: Watercress is sold in small bunches. Look for perky, fresh, deep-green leaves and crisp stems with no yellowing or wilting.
To store: Wash watercress in cold water, shake water from leaves, gather stems into a bunch and place stem ends into a small container with about 1 inch of cold water. Enclose top green leaves with a plastic bag, securing sides with a rubber band. Place container in refrigerator in moderately cold, 40° section. If stored in too cold an area, leaves will freeze and become limp.

Angie Dickinson says:

"Maybe you love Avocados because they're good for you!"©

If you're absolutely crazy about avocados, maybe it's because your body wants what's in avocados.



More potassium than a banana. Say potassium to most people, and they'll say, "bananas." But, surprise! Ounce per ounce, avocados have 65% more potassium than bananas. Plus 4 other essential minerals including magnesium, phosphorous, calcium and iron.

You don't have to be an orange to have Vitamin C. An average 4-ounce avocado half shell provides 12% of the RDA of Vitamin C. You get vitamins A, E, B_1, B_2, and Niacin, too.

Avocados have absolutely no cholesterol. Sure, avocados taste rich and satisfying. Yet they have absolutely no cholesterol. And they're low in sodium.

All this good nutrition for fewer calories than you think. There are only 153 calories in an average 4-ounce avocado half shell.

Now that there's such a healthy supply of avocados in your store, you should be indulging yourself with a clear conscience. Your body knows what's good for you.

Would this body lie to you?

Available in a single limited edition, exclusively from Franklin Porcelain. At the attractive price of $95.

JONATHAN BRONSON is that rare breed of artist whose entire life has prepared him to create the wildlife sculptures for which he is widely known. Sculptures that are the pride of many private collectors in this country.

Now the artist has turned his talents to the portrayal of the legendary snowy owl—the bird that has been a symbol of wisdom and insight for thousands of years.

In white bisque porcelain—with the eyes formed of authentic gemstones—the sculpture is an extraordinary and unusual work of art.

Bronson has portrayed the snowy owl landing on a weathered log—the wings swept gracefully forward, in a movement of soundless beauty. And the all-seeing yellow eyes shine brightly against the bird's white plumage, as it blends invisibly with the snow-covered landscape.

To represent the luminous eyes of this impressive creature, the sculptor has chosen golden citrine gemstones. The stones were selected because they add the proper degree of luster and life to the work. And the combined effect of pure white bisque with golden citrine produces a striking contrast seldom found in bisque sculpture.

Every feather, every feature and detail of the snowy owl is perfectly captured in this work. And each imported sculpture will be individually hand-cast and hand-finished. The work is being issued at the advantageous price of $95—which may be paid in convenient monthly installments.

In the tradition of important works of art in porcelain, "Night Sentinel" is being made available only during its year of issue: 1983. After that, it will never be offered again. Each sculpture will bear the signature of the artist, and a Certificate of Authenticity will be included attesting to the limited edition status of the work.

Jonathan Bronson's premiere work in porcelain conveys mankind's age-old fascination with this most dignified and majestic of birds. A sculpture that is certain to be handed down from generation to generation because of its elegance and timeless quality—and the reputation of its creator.

To acquire "Night Sentinel" by Jonathan Bronson—to own and display proudly in your home—please return the application to Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, PA 19091, by April 30, 1983. No payment need be sent at this time.

FAMILIES

SPECIAL HURDLES FOR PARENTS AND GROWN KIDS

Illustration by Lisa Powers

By Arthur Maslow, M.S.W., and Moira Duggan

At some point or another, it comes as a shock to parents to see that the child they brought up from diaperhood through adolescence has broken out of the cocoon and turned into an adult. In many families there is an awkwardness at this stage. Although friendship would seem to be the logical development, it doesn't come naturally to parents and their grown children. They have to work to achieve it.

The difficulty has to do partly with disparities of age and experience. Friends relate to each other on a basis of equality, but the parent-child relationship is founded on a biological *in*equality — the parents brought the child into the world and that physical order of precedence is permanent.

Moreover, the two generations are divided by cultural differences that are all the more extreme in today's fast-changing world. One example is the movement toward sexual equality, which has brought with it a certain amount of role confusion. Many of today's fathers have no training in accepting their daughters as equals in the work place; today's mothers may feel frustration as they see their daughters having jobs and experiences that were denied to them when they were young.

Most difficult to deal with, perhaps, is the need that all parents have to try to "do the best" for their child. They feel responsible for what their children are, and this sense of responsibility is lifelong. As a result, they may persist in giving advice that their children don't ask for and can't apply to their own lives.

Once some of these hurdles are identified and faced, it is possible for parents and their grown children to work at building a healthy, happy relationship. The most crucial aspect is probably the matter of advice giving. Parents have to realize that they can't truly know what is best for their grown son or daughter.

Usually there is a kind of verbal signal that precedes the advice giving. "Let me tell you . . ." or, "That's right" or, "That's wrong." It is helpful if parents can learn to recognize these signals and switch to a different attitude — one of offering not suggestions but input from their own experiences. Instead of, "This is what you should do," the parent should say, "This is what happened to me." If there is anything helpful in the story of a past experience, the child will be able to extract it and use it in his own life.

What to do about conflicts? Often, in trying to preserve friendly relations with their child, parents sugar-coat any painful issues that exist. The irritant may be some behavior of the young person, his choice of friends, job performance or financial irresponsibility. Keeping quiet about it is not the answer. Indeed, in families where there has been a complete break between the parents and a grown child, it is usually because these issues have never been addressed.

It's a good idea for parents to take the lead and say whatever it is they are itching to say as fairly and mildly as possible. Fighting with their child may not be such a bad thing; what must be avoided is letting the fight turn into perpetual family bickering.

The best rapport between parents and grown children occurs when the two generations have grown as individuals to the point where they don't feel needy of one another. A family is like an ecosystem. You can't change just one thing in a system. Everything else has to change — if only a little bit — to make a new balance. When a child starts moving out on his or her own, parents have to adjust by doing something different with themselves in place of the active parenting they used to do. Independence works both ways: It is a going and a letting go. If the family can't rebalance appropriately, then the easy, comfortable relationship that is so desirable between the adult generations may never come to pass. FW

NEW LAWS THAT PAY OFF FOR WOMEN

POWER TO THE PURSE

By Merrie Spaeth

Women benefited directly from some actions taken by Congress last fall, and it literally pays for every woman to be aware of the changes in the law. For clarification FAMILY WEEKLY spoke to Senator Nancy Landon Kassebaum (R.-Kan.)

Kassebaum

Q: Senator Kassebaum, Congress recently took steps that will affect women economically. Can you explain the situation for us?

A: Well, the Economic Equity Act [Kassebaum was a chief sponsor], which would have tackled a long list of inequities faced by women — involving everything from pension reform to child care — was never voted on. But women should take heart from news that three very important provisions of the act were passed separately, under the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 and the Fiscal Year 1983 Department of Defense Authorization Act. Even if there's a long way to go, I think we made progress, for example, increasing the possible benefits of Individual Retirement Accounts (I.R.A.'s) for nonworking persons.

Q: Can you tell us how the change in the law could affect an individual woman?

A: The homemaker is considered "nonworking" in the eyes of the law because she doesn't receive an income. Until recently a homemaker and her husband could only set aside a maximum of $1,750 in an I.R.A. each year, compared to the maximum of $3,000 which could be set aside by two working people who were married.

The first step in reform was made several years ago. It created a "spousal I.R.A.," allowing a larger account to be saved up and the wife a claim on part of the money, even if divorce terminates the marriage. The '81 tax act increases the amount which can be set aside by $500 (to $2,250). That might not sound overwhelming, but over 25 years it can mean tens of thousands of dollars more in retirement money.

Q: And what about the working mother? Did Congress provide any help for her?

A: Yes. We have liberalized the amount that a family can save in taxes for day-care costs. This is particularly important for single mothers. It's astonishing to realize that one in five children under age 18 is living in a single-parent household. Most of these are headed by women. At lower income levels, being able to afford child care is often the critical factor in deciding whether one can afford to work. The new law has a sliding-scale feature — that means these lower income mothers or families get even more of a break.

Q: How does it work?

A: Well, first, the day-care provision is a tax credit, not a tax deduction. A deduction is subtracted from your income to calculate how much you must pay taxes on. But a tax credit is deducted directly from your taxes. That's important for women who may not be earning high salaries. It can mean up to $800 off your taxes if you spent $2,400 on child care, or $1,600 if you spent up to $4,800 for two dependents.

Today's laws offer tax credit for day care and more equitable sharing of pensions and I.R.A.'s.

Q: What is the third provision you referred to?

A: Military pension protection for military spouses. The Supreme Court ruled in McCarty vs. McCarty in 1980 that military pension benefits belonged just to the military person and that they were not "property." That meant pension benefits weren't something that could be divided as part of a divorce settlement, like a house. We passed legislation last year to permit division of these benefits. This is an enormous step forward.

Women haven't thought of protecting their pension assets, but if you're divorced in midlife and the work you put in at home isn't recognized, being old and poor is a terrible tragedy. For many military wives, the amount of travel required made it very difficult for them to develop careers or independent pension benefits. And, of course, they thought they were contributing to their husbands' careers. However, I caution people that there are restrictions in the new law. FW

New UDS Computer Telephones To Be Sold For Only $10 Apiece In Mammoth Publicity Drive

All who wish to apply for a new Computer Telephone should write to the company address below before Midnight, April 30, 1983

NEW YORK—One million new UDS Computer Telephones with electronic memory and pushbutton dialing will be sold as part of a publicity campaign for only $10 apiece to the first one million persons who write to the company address before Midnight, April 30, 1983.

These are the same famous UDS Computer Telephones to be nationally publicized in The New York Times, TV Guide and other leading magazines, with electronic re-dial (which automatically keeps re-dialing busy or unanswered numbers till they answer) and electronic "mute" (which lets you talk "confidentially" without putting your hand over the mouthpiece.)

Only half the size (and half the weight) of standard phones, they also have adjustable electronic ringers, which means you can turn them "off"—for complete silence—whenever you don't want to be disturbed. And when you finish your call, you don't have to bother hanging up—simply put the unit down (anywhere you please) and it will hang itself up, automatically.

These new UDS Computer Telephones are FCC-approved and require no installation. Simply plug them into the same modular outlets as your present rotary dial or pushbutton phones. You can then legally return your present phones to the phone company, saving yourself up to $8 a month (or over $90 a year) for each phone you return.

These new UDS Computer Telephones will not be sold at this price by the company in any store. To obtain one at this price, apply in writing to the company address no later than Midnight, April 30, 1983.

Each phone carries a full one-year money-back guarantee, and the company will replace it, free of charge, if it ever fails to function. There is a limit of two (2) phones per address at this price, but requests which are mailed early enough (before April 25) are permitted to order up to 5 phones.

To apply for a new UDS Computer Telephone, mail this original printed notice together with your name and address and $10 for each phone desired. Add $2 shipping and handling for each phone you are requesting. Mail to: Carter & Van Peel, UDS Computer Telephone Offer, Dept. 603-108, Box 1728, Hicksville, New York 11802.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

PASS THE POPCORN, YANKS

Will Britishers give up their "crisps" (potato chips, to us) without a fight? If American popcorn producers have their way, folks in the U.K. will soon be munching away. While the average American chomps away on 40 quarts of the buttery stuff a year (70 percent popped at home), the typical Brit noshes on a paltry four-fifths of a quart yearly. This from Virginia Blair of the Popcorn Institute (honest) in Chicago.

The United Kingdom is the world's largest snack-food market after the U.S., and the Institute hopes its all-out blitz, aimed at British homes, pubs, concession stands and school cafeterias, will boost sales there (currently $4.7 million annually, compared to $1 billion a year in the U.S.). The campaign does have to buck traditional tastes. "Most British have never tasted popcorn," Blair told us, "or have only eaten it sweetened with powdered sugar or caramel. Many consider corn to be cattle feed."

Well, even if popcorn never

replaces crumpets and scones at teatime, pubs surely should take notice. Studies show that a pub crawler will quaff 30 to 40 percent more beer while nibbling popcorn — and it's cheaper to give away than peanuts. Or even crisps.

FLIGHT INTO THE PAST

Forty-one years ago, in the dark days of World War II, six P-38F fighter planes and two B-17 bombers on a supply mission to England crash-landed on Greenland's ice cap. All 19 airmen survived and were rescued 10 days later. But the planes were never recovered.

Last August, after four years of research, the crash site was finally located, and this June a team of 15 will try to dig out the lighter P-38's from under 40 feet of snow. The 15,000-pound aluminum-body planes, which will be lifted out by helicopter, should be in excellent shape, since snow acts as a preservative.

Commercial pilot Russell Rajani, who has recovered and restored many historic planes, will head the expedition. As a fee, he'll get to keep one or two of the P-38's, valued at $400,000 apiece.

Brad McManus, only 21 in 1942, was the first pilot to set down on the cap. Landing with the wheels down, his plane flipped over but he crawled out unharmed. He told us recently that he won't be on the actual recovery mission but that he's sure going to be there when the planes arrive in the U.S. — filled with no treasure, just precious memories.

THE EYES HAVE IT

Not only are the eyes the mirror of the soul, they can also reflect much about the state of your body.

Besides eye ailments like cataracts and glaucoma, eye doctors today can also spot symptoms of many non-eye problems. Dr. William Frayer, an ophthalmologist at the Scheie Eye Institute of Presbyterian-University of Pennsylvania Medical Center, says that narrowing or hemorrhaging of blood vessels in the retina could indicate high blood pressure. Frequent prescription changes could indicate diabetes; redness could signal arthritis; intermittent dimming could mean you're at risk for a stroke; and drooping eyelids could tip off a doctor to the possibility of myasthenia gravis.

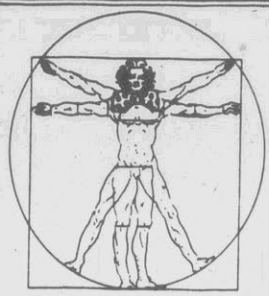
Dr. Frayer, who sees about 8,000 patients a year, reports that he finds at least one of the diseases listed above in 20 percent of his patients. He says that after age 40 you should visit your eye doctor about every three years but, though the eyes say a lot, don't skip your regular physical.

BEATING THE TAX CLOCK

A last-minute reminder: If you're still struggling with your tax return, the I.R.S. can answer many of your questions. Check the phone book for your local office (it's usually listed under U.S. Government). If you live in a rural area or have no access to an I.R.S. office, call toll-free: (800) 424-1040.



THE EARLY BIRD GETS NO SLEEP

If a maxim is a phrase that states a universal truth, like "a penny saved is a penny earned," then a minim must express a truth so obvious as to be completely useless. At least that's what Tom Weller demonstrates in his clever new book, Minims, or Man is the Only Animal That Wears Bow Ties. Some examples:

—The way to a man's stomach is through his esophagus.

—Where there's smoke, there's pollution.

—Time heals all nonfatal wounds.

—The road to hell is paved by the same contractors as all the other roads.

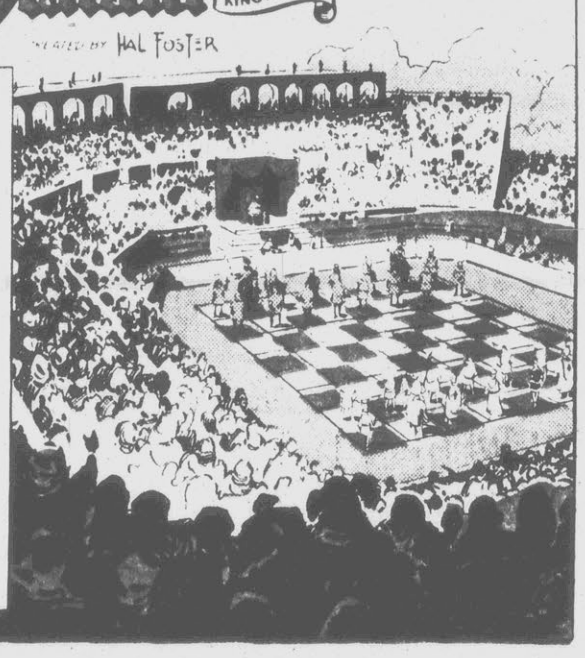
CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE FINAL EVENT BEGINS: A GAME OF CHESS. BUT THE TOURNAMENT'S PRIZE-- PRINCESS GRENDL-- HAS BEEN ALL BUT FORGOTTEN. AT STAKE NOW ARE THE LIVES OF ALP AND ULF, THE WHITE AND BLACK "KINGS," ZOG'S TWIN SONS. IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE LAW OF THE TWINS, THE LOSING "KING" MUST PAY WITH HIS LIFE. PRINCE VALIANT MOVES FIRST.

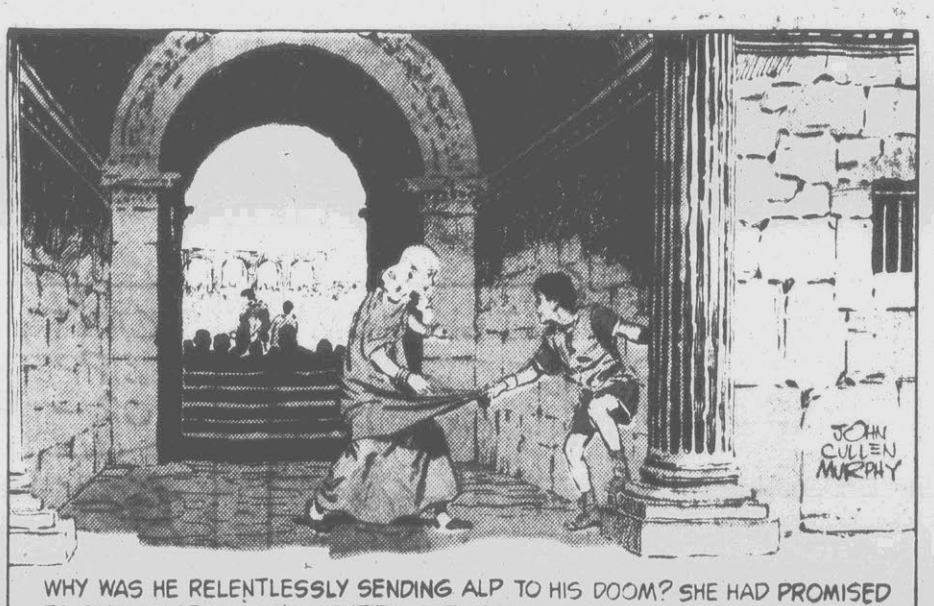


FOR A TIME THE GAME PROCEEDS UNEVENTFULLY. PIECES ARE TRADED AS VAL AND THE MASKED BOY VIE FOR POSITION. HOURS PASS.

THE CROWD GROWS RESTLESS. SUDDENLY THE MASKED BOY ACTS. COPYING THE MOVE IN THE RING BELOW, A "ROOK" GLIDES INTO POSITION AND AIMS A BOW AT ALP ARSLAN. "CHECK," THE MASKED BOY SAYS. VAL MOVES ALP TO SAFETY ONLY TO FIND HIM THREATENED ON THE NEXT MOVE.

"CHECK," THE BOY SAYS AGAIN. THIS TIME A "KNIGHT" ATTACKS. AS ALP STARES DOWN A LANCE VAL HOPS HIS FRIEND TO ANOTHER SQUARE. BUT THE MASKED BOY PUSHES FORWARD A PAWN. "CHECK," HE SAYS. ON THE FIELD, THE "PAWN" DRAWS A KNIFE. KAREN WATCHES WITH DISBELIEF.

SHE HAD LEARNED THAT HER BROTHER GALAN, FOR REASONS SHE COULD NOT GUESS, WAS PLAYING THE MASKED BOY'S ROLE. BUT WHY WAS HE BEHAVING SO?



WHY WAS HE RELENTLESSLY SENDING ALP TO HIS DOOM? SHE HAD PROMISED TO SAFEGUARD GALAN'S IDENTITY, BUT AS A FANFARE SIGNALS INTERMISSION SHE CHANGES HER MIND. HER SKIRTS ARE DETAINED BY A DETERMINED HAND. "KAREN, WAIT," GALAN SAYS. "THE MASKED BOY-- THIS TIME HE IS NOT ME." AND IN DESPERATION HE TELLS HER ALL.
