Another MX Deployment Plan Has Dubious Future

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest plan for basing the MX missile, similar to a proposal rejected by Congress two years ago, is awaiting President Reagan's endorsement before it faces a bitter congressional fight. A commission appointed by Reagan proposed Monday that 100 MX weapons should be built and put in Minuteman silos in Wyoming and Nebraska and that a new, smaller land-based nuclear missile should be developed in the next decade. "Few, if any, will consider our recommendations an optimal solution," said retired Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, the former national security adviser who headed the 11-member panel. "If such were available, this commission probably would not have been convened." "What we have, we feel, has a reasonable, has the best chance to be successful," he told a news conference. But most of the immediate Capitol Hill reaction came from MX opponents and it was predictably negative.

Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, predicted defeat. The MX "is a dog that has been around too long," Addabbo said.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the panel's "recommendation to deploy 100 MX missiles in existing Minuteman silos makes no more sense today than it did when the administration proposed it as a temporary solution 16 months ago. It was rejected then; it should be rejected now."

Sen. J. James Exon, a Nebraska Democrat whose state would receive some of the missiles, called the plan "ridiculous."

"A dangerous, expensive fraud," was the reaction of Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, called the recommendations "nothing less than mad."

"If the commission's recommendations are adopted, we might as well also announce that America has adopted a first strike nuclear strategy," Hatfield said.

Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., a key House MX supporter, predicted a close vote.

"Most people who were against it are still against it," Edwards said in a telephone interview. But some members who opposed the since-discarded dense-pack basing last year may vote for the new deployment method simply because it is the only choice left, he said.

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said Congress will probably approve the plan. "My guess is that the struggle will be intense, the fight will be difficult, and in the end we'll be successful."

The report was released after the panel met with Reagan, who didn't publicly endorse it.

Instead, said White House sources who declined to be named, Reagan will probably wait a week so the MX debate doesn't detract from administration efforts against a House nuclear freeze resolution and in favor of Kenneth Adelman, the embattled arms control nominee.

The administration says the 10-warhead MX is needed because the 1,000 Minuteman missiles — the backbone of America's land-based nuclear force — is vulnerable to a first strike by increasingly accurate Soviet missiles.

The MX was first proposed a decade ago, and three dozen basing plans have been considered and rejected since then.

President Carter proposed shuttling 200 MX weapons among 4,600 shelters in Nevada and Utah, but Reagan ridiculed that plan during the 1980 campaign and junked it when he took office.

Instead, Reagan said in 1981, 40 MX weapons should be put in Minuteman silos until a permanent basing method could be found. But Congress rejected that, saying it would leave the MX just as vulnerable as the Minuteman.

Old Snow Hill Road adjacent to N.C. 11 was rezoned from residential to highway commercial, according to Town Clerk Ralph Ford, may contain any type of business normally found in a downtown district, including offices, institutions, car sales, etc.

City School Board OKs Affirmative Action Policy

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A first reading of an affirmative action policy for the city school system was unanimously adopted at the information meeting of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night.

The policy, with its accompanying regulations titled the "Affirmative Action Plan for the Greenville City Schools," will be up for a second reading and final approval at the May 16 school board meeting.

The relatively brief policy statement constitutes the official guideline for the city schools in assuring that "the selection and assignment of minority educators should be such that sufficient numbers in each job classification are indicative of the fact that quality performance and qualification merit selection regardless of race."

"There shall be no invidious racial discrimination practiced within the Greenville City Schools. No person shall be employed, assigned, promoted, demoted, dismissed, or disciplined solely on the basis of race, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, or age and physical handicap (except when age or physical handicap is rationally related to job performance criteria)," the statement continues.

"However, race, sex, and/or national origin may be valid criteria to be considered in achieving the overall goals and objectives of the Greenville City Schools."

City school attorney Phil Dixon told the board that, "legally, it's as solid a document as I've ever seen. I feel it's a model document and I would not be surprised if other schools use it as the basis for formulating their own affirmative action policy."

Walter Morehead, who served on the Affirmative Action Committee as the representative of the Black Assembly contingent in drafting the policy, acted as spokesman to explain to the board the manner in which the policy was formulated. He related that, instead of the initial three or four meetings planned to work out details, the committee met 25 times "to be certain that the policy would meet two key considerations, that it will have broad community support and that it's legally defensible."

Morehead touched on the step-by-step processes the committee used in refining the rationale, goal, objective and final terminology of the document.

One of the primary objectives was that of determining a specific percentage of minority certified educators within the city school system as a reasonable, attainable goal.

A percentage of 32.45 was arrived at by the committee as the "obtainable" objective of minority personnel. This (Please turn to Page 8)

Administrative Actions Approved By School Bd.

By JERRY RAYNOR

Approval was given to two key administrative actions by members of the Greenville Board of Education at its information meeting Monday night.

The first action approved was that of declaring certain personnel positions being in a "Critical Shortage Areas" category in relation to the recently adopted Reduction-in-Force policy for the schools if cutbacks in total personnel become necessary.

Personnel approved for the critical areas are: those in intermediate/mathematics concentration; secondary mathematics; intermediate/science concentration; home economics/infant care (a specialized position); and any coaching position (at the discretion of the principal, dependent on available alternatives.)

Superintendent Delma Blinson elaborated on the coaching positions falling into the critical area by explaining that at the present time personnel who coach carry out these duties in addition to regular teaching assignments. He noted that a tenured teacher who also serves as a coach could conceivably opt to resign his coaching duties, which would impose a real hardship on athletic programs in the city schools.

The second approval action was for adoption of the rough draft of the comprehensive plan for the improvement of Greenville schools. This broad-based document outlines goals to be achieved by the school board, the superintendent and the staff of the city schools.

Basic areas covered in the comprehensive plan deal with action to improve public support, personnel performance, instruction, relationship with East Carolina University and administration.

Following a report by Fraegar R. Sanders Jr. director of federal programs for the city school system, the board approved action by Sanders to submit annual applications for federal funds for the coming school year.

In his report, Sanders pointed out that in Chapter 1 federal funds, the proposed cut from last year's funding level is 15 percent. "The bulk of these funds are for programs in grades K-7," Sanders said. "Assuming we will be funded at 85 percent of last year's funding, we will be able to implement, without staff changes, the current programs involving 17 and one-half teaching positions." The majority of these positions, Fraegar pointed out, "fall within work being done in remedial instruction in reading and math."

On the outlook for Chapter 2 funds, Sanders said that "funding is expected to be the same as last year, contingent on the level of funding Congress may give this category of funding."

One of the factors influencing federal funding for public schools is census figures used by the government in establishing funds based on the number of families falling into the poor (Please turn to Page 8)

Struck By Car

FARMVILLE — An 18-year-old Route 2, Walstonboro, youth was struck by a car and killed on U.S. 264 about 442 feet east of the Marlboro intersection with U.S. 258 here Monday just before 10:40 p.m.

Police said Charles Daniels was struck near the middle of the east-bound lane of the highway by a car driven by Janice Ramsey, 35, of Richmond, Va. Ms. Ramsey, who was en route from Richmond to New Bern, told police Daniels stepped into her path after a truck had passed him. She said she did not see him before impact.

Police estimated that her vehicle was traveling at about 30 mph after stopping for the red light at the Marlboro intersection. She pulled over, she said, not knowing what she had hit until she was out of the car to investigate.

According to a medical examiner's report filed by Dr. Thomas Patterson of Farmville, Daniels died of a broken neck "nearly instantaneously."

Farmville Police Chief Ron Cooper said no charges had been filed pending further investigation.

Wastewater Conference Set By Winterville Governing Bd.

WINTERVILLE — The Town Board of Aldermen will meet with representatives of Sunnyside Eggs, Contentnea Metropolitan Sewage District, the Department of Natural Resources and an engineer to determine whether the town should allow Sunnyside Eggs to discharge wastewater into the town's sewage system.

Sunnyside has requested sewage service from the town but town officials voted at their monthly meeting Monday to meet with CMSD Manager Gene Coley, engineer Bucky Moore, Sunnyside Manager Joe Wilson and Roger Phorp, a regional engineer from the water quality section of the division of environmental management, N.C. Department of Human Resources to determine if the town's system can handle the wastewater. A date for the meeting was not set.

The board also approved a letter responding to a letter the board received from Lyman Cox accusing members of discrimination in awarding bids on the Community Development Block Grant program.

Cox, one of three bidders for rehabilitation work on six houses, said in his letter he had "grievance in the way the bidding was conducted and the circumstances the same."

"Also, I would like to question the judgment of the city councilmen's final decisions and that of the program administrators/consultants," Cox wrote.

Contracts for the work were awarded to Allgood Builders, the low bidders, which according to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, "is standard procedure."

Ayden Commissioners Vote Higher Power Rates

AYDEN — Electrical customers in Ayden will get higher electrical bills in May because of a 12.98 percent rise in the wholesale cost of power from Carolina Power and Light that prompted an 8 percent rise in retail rates from the town of Ayden.

The Town Board of Commissioners approved the 8 percent increase Monday.

The new rates will apply for the months of April, May and June.

Town Manager Don Russell said the increase means electrical customers will pay $5.32 more per 1,000 kWh. Another increase may be necessary in July, he said, to offset the remainder of the 12.98 percent increase.

"Another increase (in July) is pending depending upon what is in the budget (1983-84 electrical budget) by then," said Russell.

In other business: The board awarded the 1982-83 audit contract to Earl Umphlett for a sum of $4,650.

Taylor and Associates was granted the Ayden Housing Authority audit for 1982-83 pending approval of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The first of two public hearings on the town's application for community development funds was held. High, Barwick, Turnage, Watermelon and Blount streets along with a portion of East Avenue was designated a tentative target area.

Warns Americans Of Acid Rain Cost

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Canadian minister of the environment says the acid rain issue hasn't affected the way Canadians view Americans — yet.

"Canadians are very much aware of this problem, the acid rain problem," John Roberts said at a news conference Monday. "I believe that they think ... that most of them believe the United States is not actively responding to this problem because people in the United States aren't aware of it."

"I think if Canadians ever had the view that Americans do know about the problem ... and didn't give a damn or weren't concerned about responding, then I think the reaction in Canada would be very strong," he said.

Roberts stopped in Ohio to meet with officials, including Gov. Richard Celeste. He said U.S. action on the problem of acid rain has been "agonizingly slow."

"I would like to hear Governor Celeste say: 'I understand the seriousness of the problem, the urgency of the problem and that we will do everything feasible to cut back emissions,'" Roberts said.

Paul Costello, the governor's press secretary, said Roberts met with the governor but Costello didn't know what was discussed. Some scientists blame sulfur dioxide emissions from coal-burning power plants for acid rain, which has threatened the aquatic life in streams and rivers of eastern Canada and the northeastern United States. Many of the plants are in the Midwest. Some are in Canada.

Roberts said that if technology could reduce emissions, there wouldn't have to be any "impact" on jobs.

"We're concerned about jobs in Canada as well," he said.

During the news conference, Roberts cited a 1980 agreement between Canada and the United States to solve the problem of acid rain. But he said talks have stalled since the United States rejected a Canadian proposal for joint emissions-reduction programs last June.

"Progress since that time toward an agreement that was envisaged then has been agonizingly slow," Roberts said.

"Our disappointment has been with the tardiness of (Reagan) administration action," he said. "(But) over the past two years or so, I think Congress has shown a point of view, a very encouraging shift."

Choices Are Many As Camping Time Nears

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

United Press International
It's camp-pickin' time for Americans of all ages looking for fun, learning and adventure during the annual escape from home.

Camping gives kids a vacation and provides parents one too.

The biggest growth in camps seems to be among those offering computer instruction, based on information in the "1983 Parents' Guide to Accredited Camps" ($5.95, American Camping Association, Bradford Woods, Martinsville Ind. 46151.)

Armand Ball, ACA executive director, said camps for adults, especially the elderly, also are growing; many operate yearlong. Other year-round camps cater to kids whose school vacations fall sometime other than summer, as in school districts that operate 12 months, with vacations staggered over the academic year.

For families hit by the recession, Ball said many camps, both resident and day camps, provide assistance or are very inexpensive.

Parents lacking funds should check out day and resident camping opportunities available through the Salvation Army, the Y's, Boy's Clubs of America, Girl's Clubs of America, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, Settlement Houses and similar neighborhood helping agencies.

Specialty camps and summer programs include those stressing sports, farming, hiking, horseback riding, foreign languages, aquatics, climbing, nutrition, band, dance, drama, music, religious emphasis, riflery, and even junior statesmanship.

The Junior Statesman Summer School at Davis is described in "Summer Camps & Programs: Over 200 of the Best for Children 8 to 18" (Harmony Books, $8.95 paperback).

This is at the University of California at Davis and costs $895 for four weeks — end of June to end of July. Kids get to meet state legislators, constitutional officers, lobbyists, reporters, administration officials and other political leaders in nearby Sacramento, California's capital.

Another robust trend cited by Ball is camps catering to special clientele. The listings in the ACA Parents' Guide include camp opportunities for overweight kids, the asthmatic, blind, deaf, diabetic, economically disadvantaged, emotionally disturbed, epileptics, and those with physical disabilities as well as hemophiliacs, the learning disabled, the mentally retarded, mobility restricted and wheelchair bound.

Camp New Hope in Natural Bridge, Va., is operated by the Virginia Department of Corrections for boys, 11 to 18, who are assigned by the Department of Correction. Youthful offenders get old-fashioned camping with tents, hiking and campfires.

Ball said there are some 10,000 camps nationwide but only accredited ones — about 2,500 — are in the ACA guide. Among the unlisted are camps run by religious groups and staffed largely by volunteers, said James LeMonn, a spokesman for the ACA.

Mobile camps, mainly for teenagers, offer tours coast to coast, or around a European country or a continent.

"Parents need to pay as much attention to the quality of summer camp programs as they would to any other educational experience for their child," Ball said. "A summer camp should not be the product of random selection, but a real look into the child's needs."

Ball said parents should ask the camp director how a typical day is organized, and what kind of daily opportunities there are for individual or group activities.

"Some programs, relying on camping's good reputation, have seized on the term camp when, in fact, they are really only single-focused workshops," he said.

"Emphasis on only one activity, be it tennis or football or computers, may be all right for some kids, but it may also discourage children from activities that promote important interpersonal skills."

Regulations differ. "In most states water is tested and kitchens are checked," Ball said, but only 17 states have regulations he considers comprehensive, covering sanitation, personnel, food, transportation, programs, safety, site and facilities.

Ball said the 17 are California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont and Wisconsin.

Camping gives tax credits to persons who qualify.

Day and overnight camp expenses qualify as deductible child-care expenses. Money spent for education or transport to and from camps does not.

Requirements for camp-related tax credit:

—Children must be qualifying dependents under 15 or unable to care for themselves. Parents must either be working or looking for work. The intent of sending the child to camp must be "child care" rather than "education" or "camp experience."

—"Standards: American Camping Association Condensed Standards for Organized Camps" ($1.25) from the American Camping Association provides checklists and questions to help parents evaluate a camp.

—"Traditional Versus Specialty Camps," to help parents find a camp best suited for their child, is available from the ACA for a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope with a request for a free pamphlet.

—"1983 Parents Guide to Accredited Camps" ($5.95 including postage) lists more than 2,200 resident and day camps and provides details including program specialties.

CADDY AND MATCHING COASTER SET...are needlepointed on seven-mesh plastic canvas with a variety of yarns.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Cheery bright red cardinals highlight a needlepoint mail "caddy" and coaster set, quickly and easily made from 7-mesh plastic canvas. The mail holder can be made in a variety of sizes to accommodate any number of items other than mail. Put one or more on the kitchen counter to hold napkins, recipe clippings or coupons. The sets, as shown, are completely covered with stitches, but, if you prefer, you can take a shortcut with solid white canvas, working only the design stitches.

To obtain directions for making the Cardinal Set, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-410 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. NK-410 by sending a check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet, plastic canvas, needle and yarn sufficient for completing six coasters, coaster holder and mail caddy.

Dear Pat: I always thought that one must use only one type of yarn throughout a single needlepoint project. While traveling recently, though, I "made do" with leftovers from my needlework bag while working a floral tote bag from plastic canvas — combining one type of yarn for the background and two others for the flowers. I really think I like the finished result better. I thought this might be a good subject for one of your columns. — Rita L., Denver, Colo.

While debating on the subject matter of today's column, I browsed through a stack of mail that had been on my desk for some time and your letter did the trick. Thank you for nudging me, Rita.

It is a timely idea, too, because the kit for the plastic canvas set featured today uses three different yarns to achieve the desired effects. This design can be worked throughout with any one of the yarns to be mentioned, but I prefer the combination.

The cardinal is worked with a red nylon yarn to give depth and brilliance to that portion of the design. Other design areas are done in a bulky craft yarn while the background is worked in a knitting worsted-weight acrylic.

The relatively new nylon yarns are ideal for plastic canvas projects requiring small quantities of a given color, as they are now available in small skeins and do have the property of making the design area more outstanding.

When trying to determine the suitability of a yarn you happen to have on hand, why not make some small item, such as a bookmark or coaster, to test the results. While some of us get a lot of pleasure simply from testing stitches and materials, most people prefer to have something useful to show for even their practice sessions.

You might be surprised to learn that I use a lot of wool Persian yarns for 10-mesh plastic projects, since this type of yarn is relatively expensive and is usually reserved for fine work done on traditional canvases. The cost, however, is not prohibitive for most projects and the results are often superior. The color range is almost endless in this type of yarn, allowing shadings not available with many others. Too, those who do a lot of needlepoint on traditional canvases have a lot of odds and ends of Persian around that can be used for small design areas.

If you have never worked with Persian yarns, here are a couple of tips to make life easier. One strand of Persian yarn consists of three loosely twisted plies (very fine strands). The big advantage is that you can separate and use any number of plies to get the desired coverage.

Even when you are using it with a full strand, the plies should be separated before working and you should work with the nap or grain of the yarn.

Take a strand of yarn in one hand and run the fingers of the other hand down the strand in first one direction and then in the other. One way will feel smoother than the other. Hold it so that you feel the smoothness when you run your fingers down the yarn and thread that "top" end into the needle.

There are two schools of thought on "stripping" or separating the individual plies. Some people hold one ply securely and push down on the other two. Others run a fingernail down between the plies. Try both methods and see which you prefer.

After separating them and threading the needle with the desired number, make sure that the plies do not twist as you work. To help keep the strands flat and side by side, hold them down with your left thumb as you stitch.

Another unexpected material for 10-mesh canvas is embroidery floss, used double (12-ply). This gives a silky look and combines well with other materials — inexpensive for small areas, too!

Experiment with a variety of materials and just let your imagination go!

For Fall

THE AMERICAN LOOK — For fall clothing, the look is great: great business, great appearance and a great big easy cut that makes clothes easy to live in and work in. This smashing cape of gray flannel by C'est Simone typifies the trend to shadings of one color seen at the fall fashion market at Chicago's Apparel Mart. It's teamed with trousers to match the palest shade of the cape and has its own black fur hat. (UPI Telephoto)

Dear Abby

Mom Can't Read To Kids If She Can't Read

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for urging parents to read to their very young children in an effort to inspire them to learn to read for themselves.

However, one of the reasons some parents don't read to their children is because they themselves can't read! Today in the United States there are over 23 million adults who can't read well enough to read a children's bedtime story; to read the notes that come from school; to read a medicine label. These illiterate adults must be taught to read.

Literary Volunteers of America, Inc. (LVA) trains volunteers to teach adults and teens who can't read well enough to function. There are over 160 programs in 29 states. Between 1981 and 1983, 12,000 LVA volunteers taught over 17,000 students to read. Both numbers continue to grow, and we hope that one day we will be a totally literate society.

Please pass this along.

JONATHON MCKALLIP,
DIRECTOR OF FIELD SERVICES, LVA

DEAR MR. MCKALLIP: Thank you for writing. I learned something today.

I checked out LVA and I learned that it was founded in Syracuse, N.Y., in 1962 to combat the problem of illiteracy in the United States and Canada. Its primary premise is that well-trained volunteers can be effective tutors of adults. The organization has been enormously successful, and continues to grow.

For more information, please send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: LVA, 404 Oak St., Syracuse, N.Y. 13203.

DEAR ABBY: Here's some good news for you. Tell the librarian in Winter Park, Fla., who wrote to say that children don't read anymore, that here in Olympia, Wash., the public library is so popular that you can hardly get into the parking lot.

It might be because of the many services offered, it might be the rocking chairs, it might even be the plants or the stone sculpture of otters that the children "pet" — but something in that place is outdrawing the TV and video games!

I'm not sure whether the community is to be congratulated for the library or the library is to be congratulated for the community, but it's a wonderful spectacle, and I offer it as an encouragement to other towns that want their children to read. It can still happen.

REBECCA WRIGHT, OLYMPIA, WASH.

DEAR REBECCA: That's the good news. The bad news is that your town's library will probably be hearing from hundreds of librarians asking for details.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is in his late 20s. (I'll call him "Lester.") He's a fine young man and has always known that he was adopted, but he never speaks of it. We asked him a few years ago if he had any desire to know his biological parents and he said, "No. You are the only parents I want to know, and as far as I'm concerned, I have no other."

Lester is being married soon to a young woman whom he has never told that he was adopted. He asked us not to mention it to her because he would prefer that she didn't know.

My wife and I feel that Lester should tell his fiancée, particularly because he grew up in a small town not far from here where everyone there knows that we adopted him when he was a small child.

Many of our friends and relatives from that small town come here to shop and visit, and I worry that Lester's fiancée might hear the truth from someone else.

What should we do?

LESTER'S FATHER

DEAR FATHER: Try to persuade your son to tell his fiancée that he was adopted and tell him (as you told me) why he should do it soon.

If he refuses, he will have to handle the consequences.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ALL SCREWED UP IN RUSTON, LA.": Your problem is not unusual. It was well stated in a song from "Finian's Rainbow": "When I'm not with the one I love, I love the one I'm with."

Americans Change Eating Habits

Almost a fifth of American families say they have changed their eating habits because they are concerned about salt intake and controlling high blood pressure. But most of them are saying, not doing.

The person who buys and prepared the food was questioned in 1,353 households by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the fall of 1979. Researchers found people are concerned about health-related nutrition, but confused about what changes should be made in their eating habits, reports Sarah Hinton, extension nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University.

Early in the interview, before any health or nutrition-related questions were asked, the family's frequency-of-use of 37 food and beverage categories was tallied. Later, the respondent was asked what, if any, changes had been made in diet because of health concerns.

About 19 percent said they were reducing sodium and trying to control blood pressure. They said they used less pork, shellfish and salty snack foods, such as potato chips, pretzels, nuts and olives, says the nutrition specialist.

But they ate as much bacon and sausage, salted nuts, commercially prepared dinners and main dishes, all high in sodium, as families not concerned about salt and high blood pressure.

Researchers also found that people concerned with salt intake were much more likely not to use fresh pork, even though uncured pork has only as much natural sodium as beef, poultry and fish, Mrs. Hinton says.

Families in the survey also said they had changed diets because they were concerned about excess sugar, obesity, fat intake, cholesterol levels and food safety. Sixty-four percent reported changes for some health reason, and 54 percent got their information from doctors, nurses or dentists.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Did you ever stop and think how much the maintenance cost is on our quality of life?

I'm talking about the expense of keeping appliances running, wheels on the car moving and repairs on life's little necessities.

Early in life, you learn about priorities. There are some things you have to fix. There's no choice. If you don't you can't get to work or the meat goes bad. There are other things you will never fix but will live with.

I know in my heart when the frame on my glasses break, I will spend the rest of my life seeing a paper clip in my peripheral vision. If a light burns out on the sewing machine, I will either burn a candle or curse the darkness. It never occurs to me to replace the bulb.

A car door on the passenger side is never a priority. Just as long as there is one that works, who needs it? There isn't a chance of it being repaired until you are ready to sell the car.

In all the years we have been married, we have never replaced a garden hose. One more leak this summer and the entire hose will be one continuous roll of bedsheets!

People are really tight with a buck when it comes to shoestrings. To me, they measure the life of a shoe. When there is a knot between each eyelet and the 1-inch string at the top breaks, it is time to replace the shoes. But never buy shoestrings.

Another phenomenon that people seem to marry for life is their luggage. Ever stand and watch a carousel of luggage at the airport? Men standing around in Gucci loafers and solid gold chains around their necks will claim suitcases with a woman's cinch belt around them.

And how many women do you know who would throw away a compact just because it had a broken mirror in it that made your face look like a crossword puzzle? No one I know.

Whenever anything breaks down, you have to ask yourself some basic questions. If I throw it away, will there be a white mark on the wall? If I fix it, is there a possibility it will break down again? If I have a great personality, will anyone notice it's broken?

With our television, it's a series of compromises. When the picture kept spinning around, we hit the tuner with the bottom of our shoe and it stopped. When the faces on the picture turned green, someone would volunteer to stand at the set and hold the aerial between his forefingers. Last night, Tom Selleck's mouth was on one side of the screen and his mustache on the other.

We have to get the set fixed.

Mary, Queen of Scots, was executed in 1587, after having spent 19 years in English prisons. Overthrown by a revolution in Scotland, the Catholic queen had fled to her cousin, Queen Elizabeth I, who was also her political and religious rival. Mary's trial and conviction on grounds of treason sealed her fate. Childless, Elizabeth later passed the crown of England to Mary's son, James VI of Scotland.

The New One-Two.

Two of the nicest things that have happened to savers in years have been the new IRA rules and the new Money Market Accounts. Now NCNB has put together a plan that lets you get the best of both ideas.

1. New Money Market Liquidity.

Deposit $2500 or more in an NCNB Money Market Investment IRA, earn money market rates, along with the flexibility of moving your money into another investment any time you like.

2. IRA Tax Benefits.

As with other IRA plans, you can deduct your contributions each year and you pay no tax on interest earned until you start withdrawing money.

Now, even though the maximum IRA contribution per year is $2000, you can start one of these accounts with NCNB for $2500, with (1) a lump sum distribution from your pension plan if you change jobs, (2) a combination of your '82-'83 contributions, if you deposit before April 15, 1983, or (3) a maturing IRA certificate.

There might be a few other places to find this kind of plan, but there's none more convenient than the one right in your neighborhood. So come see us soon. Why not have the IRA that works twice as nice?

Law Says Let Hu Na Stay

Chinese tennis star Hu Na officially is at home in the United States now that the Reagan administration, apparently deciding to follow U.S. law rather than political fears, has granted her asylum in this country.

The decision comes eight months after Miss Hu defected during a tennis tournament in Santa Clara, Calif. Since then, she has been living with Chinese families in the San Francisco area while U.S. officials pondered her future.

In defecting, Miss Hu said she had been asked to join the Chinese Communist Party and was fearful of the consequences if she did not. She said a high Chinese official threatened her when she refused. As could be expected the Chinese government has denied that contention and accuses the United States of meddling.

Perhaps so, but it would appear that U.S. authorities really had no choice in this matter. The Refugee Act of 1980 provides for asylum in cases where an applicant shows a well-founded fear of persecution because of race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership in a specific social group. Relations with the Chinese government, or any other involved in an asylum application, is not a factor to be considered under the U.S. law.

China already has expressed fairly strong dissatisfaction with the United States because of its continued arms sales to Taiwan — which some Americans feel has been slighted miserably in the U.S. rush to appease mainland China — and U.S. restrictions on Chinese textile and high-technology sales in this country. Now it is canceling sports and arts appearances in this country, as a symbol of its displeasure over the turn of events in the U.S.-Sino "ping pong diplomacy."

Miss Hu's case probably will be just a drop in the bucket in comparison to the economic and defense complaints. But it is one that China can use for verbal attacks aimed at seeking concessions from this country.

The United States apparently has acted properly in this case and we hope it holds its ground against the Chinese whining.

Matter Of Concern

It is a matter of concern that a UNC-Chapel Hill environmental scientist says 19 of 40 North Carolina cities with populations of 10,000-75,000 may not comply with federal standards for drinking water.

The concern involved the levels of trihalomethane in the water which have cancer link risks.

At the same time it is reassuring that local water supplies meet the federal standards. Wadie Lewis, superintendent of GUC's water and sewer departments, said samples from the old and new water plants and the deep wells had acceptable levels of THMs.

Lewis expects the levels to be even lower when the new water treatment facility is in full operation, but actual figures are not yet available.

Clean water is the primary concern of any community. Hopefully Greenville's will be kept among the best water supplies of the state.

Prison Situation Is Shocking To Some

RALEIGH — Two years ago, the N.C. Medical Society set out to study the general health of the state's prison population and the delivery of health care to these people. The society's report indicates that they found a mess.

The society's Committee on the Delivery of Health Care in Prisons in North Carolina was not able to make a demonstrative statement on the general health of the prison population. It had to make a guess, albeit an educated guess, because the prison system doesn't keep the necessary health records. The committee couldn't suggest improvements to the health care delivery system because no such system exists. Instead, it had to recommend that a system be created.

The physicians had hoped to evaluate the health care system in our prisons by conducting hearings with the physician who directs the system and by visiting several facilities which were representative of care at the different levels of incarceration. That plan had to be thrown out the window for two reasons. First, the state has no doctor directing the health care system. Second, after visiting several facilities, the committee found it "difficult to trace any coherent system for health care throughout the Division of Prisons."

Take an evaluation of medical facilities. The committee had hoped to analyze if the state had the proper facilities at the proper places. Are some facilities overused? Are some underused? Good questions to ask. But they couldn't get the answers.

"The data needed to make a complete evaluation of prison health care facilities was not provided to the committee. Some of this data may be difficult to gather; some of it may not exist. An effective health care system cannot be planned, managed or reviewed without such basic information," the doctors reported.

The prison system couldn't tell the doctors, for example, how much time inmates spend in the hospital, how many inmates are chronically ill, how much surgery is performed or how many inmates are on medication.

What difference does that make? Without that kind of information, it's very likely that inmates are not receiving the medical care they need and it's possible that some inmates are being kept in facilities far more sophisticated than they need.

For example, the state has only one acute hospital care facility. That's in Central Prison. Some inmates at lower security units will refuse medical care rather than go to Central. Others must be kept at Central longer than would normally be necessary because their prison units don't have facilities for those recovering from illness. Either way, we've got inmates in the wrong places, the report says.

"The information available to the committee did not enable it to evaluate whether (Central Prison Hospital) needs more acute care beds or is making appropriate use of the ones it already has," the report says.

The committee says the wrong people are in charge of prison health care. "Physicians are glaringly absent from administrative roles." They serve only as consultants. The warden is responsible for for health care at his unit and has a physician's extender who, of course, has far less medical training than a physician.

The report shocked members of the House of Corrections Committee. And several legislators called for the Department of Correction to explain the situation. Rep. Tim McDowell, D-Alamance, committee chairman, assigned the report to a subcommittee. He says that the subcommittee should try to develop some legislation to help correct these problems.

Boosts in sales of toilet paper, refreshments and other pluses in $$$ sales to celebrate.

Boosts in ECU, city, area, state and athletic conference recognition — PRESTIGE.

Boosts in future recruiting of students at ECU and industry in the area, and yes, tourism in eastern North Carolina.

Would ECU, the city of Greenville, the merchants of Greenville and, in fact, the entire area not welcome what the N.C. State University NCAA Basketball Championship brought to and will continue to bring to this area for years to come?

I, for one, am proud of the efforts of each of the "Big Four" schools in years gone by, along with ECU and the other schools of higher learning in North Carolina, both in academic and sports levels.

But the benefits of this national athletic championship by N.C. State University in Raleigh will long outlive the cleanup expense and temporary other discomforts of people celebrating.

Would ECU and Greenville welcome an NCAA major sports championship? — I think so.

Strength For Today

Among the vast multitude of people who have lived in the world since the beginning of time stand you and I. What significant little people we are.

Think of the great who have lived, and the great who are living today, and the great who will live, and then take a look at ourselves in the mirror or in our thoughts. We appear so insignificant that we wonder in despair where we can ever fit into the vast procession of human history.

But life is a picture puzzle. You and I stand with a little piece of the picture in our hands, which has to be fitted into that big picture. We fit it in and sigh, shaking our heads and saying, "What good will that do?"

But the picture would never be complete — the picture God has in mind — without the little piece you can place here and the little piece I can place there.

Not very much, but utterly essential. Apparently insignificant, but blessed in the eyes of God.

Catfish Points The Way For Many

WASHINGTON — Ward Sinclair, writing in The Washington Post, turned out a delightful piece the other day on catfish. He was down in Sunflower, Miss., where he interviewed catfish farmers, and he came away with a blooming affection and a growing respect for this humblest of creatures.

Moved by the proper spirits, I too could compose a rhapsody to the catfish, but Sinclair's piece set a train of thought in motion down a spur track. The problem the catfish farmers must overcome, if they would grow to a billion-dollar industry in the next decade, is a problem not of reality, but of perception. It is the same kind of problem faced by politicians and by public institutions all the time.

Let me say a word about the catfish. There is much to be said for salmon, if it isn't cooked too dry; a man can enjoy fresh mountain trout, though most restaurants smother its delicate flavor in a blanket of slivered almonds; given a lively sauce, pompano and red snapper are acceptable dishes. But these familiar offerings pale to insignificance beside the perfection of the Southern catfish. Imagine Helen of Troy. Now imagine Tugboat Annie. This will give you an approximate idea of the relative beauty of the catfish compared to other fish. . . . Another word or two will suffice: The catfish is easily cleaned; it gives itself to matchless fillets; the flesh is firm and superbly flavored. It requires no elaborate French or Spanish sauces. Accompanied by a strip of bacon, a handful of hush puppies, and a side order of black-eyed peas and unsugared stewed tomatoes, a lightly fried catfish provides a repast for the gods.

But the perception is something else, and here we go on the spur track. The catfish popularly is perceived as something else entirely. With its bulging eyes, oversized mouth and sinister whiskers, the catfish is thought to be ugly. Though the catfish is as clean as a Polident commercial, the catfish is widely regarded as dirty. Most significant in the marketing view, the catfish is perceived as the fare of po' folks. It is not sophisticated; it lacks eclat, elan and all those other French things. It's got no class.

This perception has depressed the catfish market for years. We see the same kind of thing at work in the ponds of politics. Jimmy Carter came to be perceived as a wimp, but no wimp could have achieved the Camp David accord or risked a rescue effort for the hostages in Iran. Richard Nixon still is perceived as sinful; in a more accurate view, he was merely unlucky. Abe Lincoln, the man who "freed the slaves," is perceived as a saint; in point of fact, he freed only a portion of the slaves and he voiced some racist notions that might have come from the Citizens Council.

What is the current perception of Ohio's Sen. John Glenn? He is perceived as a dull-witted fellow — but no one who heard him at last month's Gridiron dinner in Washington would accept that perception as the reality. Colorado's Sen. Gary Hart, another presidential hopeful, is thought to offer nothing but craggy good looks; the reality is something else.

So, too, with faceless fellows. The Washington "bureaucrat" is perceived as an odious flunky, concerned with tasks at once needless and wasteful; far more typically, the bureaucrat provides the sturdy shoulders on which government stands. We have unkind perceptions of bankers, lawyers, labor leaders and congressmen, and more often than not the perceptions are far from the mark.

To be sure, perception and reality often coincide. Every reporter has known politicians who were in truth fatheads, blowhards, tinpot tyrants and publicity hounds. But 40 years in the news business have taught me to develop reservations about those first impressions that, easily copied by the Xerox herd, get to be lasting impressions.

What the catfish farmers need is a new perception of the Olympian reality in their nets. If they marketed their product as "chatte du lac," maybe the toniest restaurants of New York and Washington would come to life. The delectable reality would soon be discovered; a catfish fad would become a catfish rage. Think it over, John Glenn. Realities count, but images often count for more.

Clark Moves Into New Role At White House

WASHINGTON — National security adviser William P. Clark, moving into a more influential White House role, put down two top aides of White House chief of staff James Baker on March 23, the day President Reagan made his hard-hitting defense speech.

Only hours before the speech, top Baker aide Richard Darman and White House communications director David Gergen asked Clark for a final copy of the speech to take into the Oval Office. Clark demurred. "I'll take the speech to the president," he told Darman and Gergen. "But we have to explain it to him," they countered. Clark said he would undertake that task, also.

That was Clark entering a new and more powerful role as the aide who has served Ronald Reagan the longest. Clark has confided to intimates that he "never" steps onto Baker's turf. Now he has balanced his act; no longer will he allow other White House aides to enter his domain.

Gov. Pete duPont, a rising Republican with political clout far beyond his home state of Delaware, caught Sen. Howard Baker's appeal that he run for the Senate next year and threw it back to the senate majority leader.

Summoned to lunch recently by Baker, who announced his plan to retire from the Senate last winter, duPont listened to an impassioned plea that he run for the Senate next year against Democratic Sen. Joe Biden. Baker's pitch: the best prospect in the country for a Republican to win a now+Democratic Senate seat is Delaware — if duPont would run.

DuPont is leaning against a Senate race, however. As Baker warmed up and reminded duPont of his obligation to party and country, duPont deftly cooled him off by asking: Well, Howard, if keeping Republican control of the Senate is so important, how come you aren't running for re-election? Baker's retirement opens the door to Rep. Albert Gore Jr., a Democrat, who is now the leading Tennessee prospect for Baker's seat.

President Reagan felt more heat than usual from the Republican congressional leadership at a White House meeting last week on the bitterly-fought issue of repealing the withholding tax on dividend and interest income.

Pressed against the wall by opponents of the new withholding law (who have the votes for repeal if they could get the repeal amendment up for a vote), Reagan was stunned by the intensity of the congressional Republicans. Sen. Strom Thurmond asked how many new internal revenue agents it would take to capture unpaid dividend-and-interest income taxes in an amount that would match the estimated take of the new withholding law.

The president called Treasury Secretary Don Regan to find out. Regan, a strong backer of withholding, did not bat an eye. "About 2,000 new agents, Mr. President," Regan told Reagan. So Regan told Thurmond and his allies: No way. His only concession was that it might be worth exploring whether a tax-collection agency other than the banks might be found to enforce the withholding law.

Former vice president and leading Democratic presidential hopeful Walter F. Mondale will soon read two double-spaced, typed pages of notes about Fritz

Mondale culled from the newly-published memoirs of Zbigniew Brzezinski, "Power and Principle."

Ordered up by Mondale's chief of staff, James Johnson, the notes record all the complimentary — and some of the unpleasant — things that Brzezinski says in his book about Mondale. President Carter's national security adviser and former vice president often clashed on issues involving Israel, the Middle East and defense spending.

Worried at first that Brzezinski's memoirs might contain disclosures or charges that would have a damaging impact on the 1984 campaign, Mondale operatives who have studied the excerpts think Brzezinski did no real harm. Brzezinski lost little love over Mondale, and has dropped many hints since, finishing his book that Sen. John Glenn, not Mondale, is his favored Democratic

Pirated Tapes Seized; Said Worth $1 Million

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina FBI agents have confiscated more than 1,400 pirated video tape cassettes of movies and television shows with an estimated value of $1 million in one of the largest such raids in the state's history.

Three video recorders, one television monitor and an enhancer were also recovered in the raids, which took place Friday. Greensboro's FBI headquarters was still cluttered Monday afternoon with the video equipment and stacks of cardboard boxes packed with pirated tapes.

"This completes the circle for us in North Carolina," agent-in-charge Robert L. Pence said Monday in announcing the raids. "We've had bootleg records, bootleg music tapes and now bootleg movies."

Pence said the raids were conducted against a business in Greensboro, another in Reidsville and a private residence in Stoneville. He refused to identify the businesses or the people involved until arrests have been made and charges filed. Agents were tipped off about the illegal tape trafficking by private citizens, Pence said. The movies on the confiscated tapes included "Battlestar Galactica," "Dog Day Afternoon," "An Officer and a Gentleman" and "Deep Throat."

Some cassettes were concerts and movies taped from television, including the "MASH" finale. The others were reproductions of the movie industry's copyrighted releases.

"We zeroed in on three locations and got search warrants," Pence said. "From noon until Friday evening, we recovered bootleg movie films. We made the raids for two reasons. One, we hope the evidence will bring a grand jury indictment; and, two, we want to send a signal to people that this act is a felony."

Unauthorized reproduction, sale or rental of movie cassettes became illegal in May 1982 and carries a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and a $250,000 fine, Pence said. Ten FBI agents and two representatives each from the Motion Picture Association of America and the Recording Industry Association of America assisted in the seizures. Dollar values will be assigned to each movie cassette by the Motion Picture Association of America, which will decide values based on the age and popularity of the movies.

Pence said similar undercover operations are still in progress, but the average home movie buff using his video cassette recorder need not worry.

"We are targeting our operations to those people involved in making money from illegal trafficking, manufacture and production of copyrighted material," he said.

Sixteen Are Selected For Governor's School

Sixteen high school juniors from Pitt County, including 12 from Greenville, have been selected to attend the 1982-83 Governor's School.

Some of the students will be attending Governor's School West at Salem College in Winston-Salem, others will attend Governor's School East at St. Andrews College Presbyterian College in Laurinburg.

The Governor's School of North Carolina is the oldest statewide summer residential program for gifted and talented high school students in the nation. The school receives yearly funding directly from the General Assembly of North Carolina.

There are no tuition or room fees for students, who furnish only their transportation to and from Winston-Salem or Lauringburg and provide their own spending money. The Governor's School is operated by the Division for Exceptional Children of the N.C. State Board of Education.

Students from Rose, the field in which they were selected, and the Governors School they will be attending during the period June 26 - Aug. 6 and their parents, are:

N.C. Hydroelectric Plan Is Submitted

SAPPHIRE, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to build a hydroelectric plant on the wild Horsepasture River in Transylvania County has been submitted to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission by a Henderson County power firm.

Carrasan Power Co., headquartered at Etowah in Henderson County, is seeking permission to put a dam on the river near Sapphire to generate electricity.

A small dam would divert a portion of the river near Drift Falls, a short distance from N.C. 281, and run the water through a conduit several miles downstream to the generation plant.

The property is near 100 acres of Transylvania County land owned by Duke Power Co. The potential buyer for the electricity generated at the facility is Haywood Electric Membership Corp., although Carrasan is negotiating with several power companies. Haywood Electric serves this section of Transylvania.

Housing projects, including condominiums in the undeveloped region of the county, would follow on more than 1,100 acres in the area owned by Carrasan, according to the application.

The Carrasan plan says the dam would back up a six-acre pond with a maximum depth of eight feet.

30 Years In Molesting

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Nineteen months after his prison term for molesting two Caldwell County boys ended, Arthur James West was sentenced to a 30-year prison term Monday for sex offenses against their younger brother.

West told Superior Court Judge Claude Sitton the boys' father picked him up at prison on his Sept. 15, 1981, release date and welcomed him back into their rural Hudson home.

The 44-year-old man had served a 4-to-5-year sentence for a 1979 crime against nature conviction involving two of the father's other sons, now 16 and 17. In an unrelated case in 1969, West was sentenced in Caldwell County to 10 years' imprisonment on six counts of crimes against nature.

West said he lived in the home until Jan. 19, when Caldwell County deputies charged him with sexually molesting the 10-year-old son.

Deputies investigated after receiving a tip from the Caldwell County Department of Social Services of possible child neglect.

Superior Court Judge Claude Sitton accepted a plea bargain in which West pleaded guilty to two counts of second-degree sexual offense and one count of attempted second-degree sexual offense. He had originally been charged with 14 counts of first-degree sexual offense.

"Life Begins At Forty" for Matilda, this old cliché became a living truth. Born and raised a Mennonite, she lived a defeated life even though she received Jesus as her Savior at an early age. Broken in health and spirit, the Lord met her in a very real way and gave her a glorious deliverance.

A gifted teacher, and very sensitive to the leading of the Holy Spirit, she feels it is a privilege to tell others of the truth that made her free, and to share the excitement of discovering who we are in Christ. Matilda is now serving as U.S. Field Representative for Aglow International.

were $13,990, $11,945, $12,495, $12,975, $14,680 and $7,775. Cox' corresponding bids were $20,180, $18,690, $18,840, $20,000, $22,388 and $8,245.

Cox said the $1,000 deposit the board required bidders to submit "would preclude most minority contractors and small business people."

The letter drafted to Cox stated that the "Town of Winterville disagreed with the comment concerning the $1,000 deposit precluding minorities and small contractors because you (Cox) were a minority bidder and (the) other two bidders were both small businesses."

"If the $1,000 deposit is a problem, that can be worked out," the letter stated. "A bid deposit is required to protect property owners from non-qualified contractors conducting work in the town ... (the money) is put in escrow and earns interest and is returned if the work is satisfactory."

The letter added that the "work of Alligood has been very good to date. We have no problem with dealing with them."

A bid on 3,980 feet of street improvement and 3,030 feet of water line improvement on the CDBG was awarded to Talbert Cox and Associates and Linwood Stroud and Associates. Their joint low bid was $12,364.

Bruce Gray, head of the Winterville Recreation Commission, gave the commission's annual report for 1982. The board approved the following four new Recreation Commission members: Robert Baker, Jay Boswell, Jerry Hines and Greg Smith.

Gray reported that the commission sponsored the following activities in 1982: basketball, four men's teams; softball, nine men's teams, six women's teams; Little League, six teams; Pee Wee league, 11 teams; one team junior Babe Ruth, one team senior Babe Ruth and four football teams.

Question to tax paying citizens of Pitt County:

Why should Pitt County Memorial Hospital spend 4 to 6 million of our tax dollars on new psychiatric beds and facilities when the largest private operator of psychiatric hospitals in the world is willing to spend its 7 million dollars to provide these facilities free of any capital outlay of our citizens?

Why doesn't PCMH spend that money on unmet needs in other areas of health care?

Charter Pines Hospital—Greenville

FACTS AND FIGURES

PCMH shouldn't blindly react to new innovations in health care that better serve the needs of Pitt County and that save the taxpayers of Pitt County money.

Many members of the PCMH medical staff are in favor of the new hospital and support innovative, efficient new approaches to health care. In fact there are private psychiatrists in Greenville who are not opposed to the new psychiatric hospital.

Why didn't the County Commissioners ask for a detailed presentation of the facts from both sides before passing a resolution opposing the location of this new 7 million dollar service bringing 80 to 130 jobs to Pitt County?

Why didn't the PCMH Board of Trustees ask to hear the story or presentation of the private psychiatric hospital before passing a resolution in opposition?

Why hasn't PCMH told the taxpayers that the new privately operated psychiatric hospital would provide services for adolescents and children not offered anywhere else in Eastern North Carolina?

Why doesn't PCMH concede that its psychiatric care is geared for only 30 day visits while many psychiatric patients need institutional treatment for as much as 90 to 120 days as would be available in the new private psychiatric hospital?

Did you know that Charter Medical is willing to accept patients regardless of ability to pay?

Why hasn't PCMH been able to explain its statement about the effect of a new private psychiatric hospital on them in these words "the financial result to Pitt County Memorial Hospital will be disastrous"?

Isn't it time for you to stand up and be counted in favor of the best medical care available for the citizens of Eastern North Carolina and Pitt County?

Isn't it ironic that we had much the same arguments against the establishment of the ECU School of Medicine that are now being heard against the new psychiatric hospital?

SPEAK OUT!!

There's still lots of time, the CERTIFICATE OF NEEDS process is still in its early stages and this issue has not been finalized.

If you are one of the growing members of the Pitt County Community in favor of the private psychiatric hospital proposed...

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed today after flirting once again with new highs in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The widely recognized average of 30 blue chips, up 17.12 Monday and another 4 points in early trading today, was down 3.48 at 1,138.35 by noon.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a narrow margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones industrials' closing high of 1,145.90 was established on March 24.

Analysts were watching closely to see how much resistance the market would encounter today around the levels from which it turned back three weeks ago.

The latest round of buying was attributed in large measure to a downturn in interest rates in the credit markets Monday.

Brokers also pointed out that signs of stability in worldwide oil prices eased fears of further strains on the international financial system, and helped depressed energy stocks to rally.

American Motors led the active list, down 3/4 at 55. The company doubled the size of a public offering set for today to 10 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .11 to 88.96. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .55 at 393.83.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 39.68 million shares at noon, against 37.66 million at the same point Monday.

Awaiting A Rescue On Their Liferaft

HONOLULU (AP) — Two downed Navy flyers and two rescue specialists who parachuted to help them after an A-4 jet ditched in the Pacific Ocean were still alive today after more than 15 hours battling 18-foot waves, the Coast Guard said.

Rescuers were awaiting the light of dawn to try to pluck the four to safety, said a Coast Guard spokesman in Honolulu.

Airplanes circling the area about 700 miles northeast of Honolulu on Monday reported the two flyers and one of the Coast Guard rescue specialists were trying to link their life rafts, while the other rescuer floated without a raft about half a mile away.

The Matson container ship Lurline, en route from San Francisco to Honolulu, was diverted to the area. Rescue aircraft circling the area had radio contact with the downed flyers.

"The first pararescueman was dropped and made contact with the rescue aircraft," said Coast Guard spokesman Keith Spangler. "But the second one never made contact."

"His parachute opened, and he was seen in the water," Spangler said. "At last report, he was approximately one-half mile from the (search and rescue) raft."

"It may not be until first light or later that we'll be able to get to them."

The Navy jet was part of a three-plane flight en route to the U.S. mainland from Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station when it crashed about noon Monday, Spangler said. The names of the flyers were not released and the cause of the accident was not known.

Richer Due $500 Gift

The Greenville school system is richer today by $500 as the result of a gift tendered under the Adopt-A-School program.

G.W. Harris, president of the Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters, presented a check to the school board Monday night for $500 "to be used in the math and science programs at Wahl-Coates and South Greenville schools in any manner you may wish."

The gift was accepted on behalf of the school system by Charles Ross, director of elementary education.

"We are truly appreciative of this fine support by the association," Ross said, "and hope that this public-minded group will make a yearly habit of adopting one of our schools. This money will be used to purchase math and science equipment and supplies for programs at Wahl-Coates and South Greenville."

Ross explained that, for the past year, ongoing efforts have been made to secure public support in a critical need to broaden the science and math programs in the city schools. He added that any individual, group, club, agency or business interested in adopting a school can specify the area for which a donation will be used.

Charge Priest Threatened

NEW YORK (AP) — A Catholic priest was arrested and charged with allegedly threatening the life of Cardinal Terence Cooke and another church official, police said.

The Rev. William Costello was arrested April 7 and accused of threatening the life of the cardinal and Bishop Joseph O'Keefe, vicar-general of the New York Archdiocese, in a telephone call made Feb. 28, police said.

Costello, 60, is a member of the Holy Ghost Fathers, based in Ireland. He was charged with aggravated harassment.

Costello's last position was as an assistant pastor.

Warn Of A Limit To Congressional Immunity

WASHINGTON (AP) — House lawyers are preparing a memo to tell congressmen the Constitution does not give them blanket protection from criminal arrests.

Stanley Brand, counsel to the chief clerk, said the memo was prompted by the mistaken belief of Montgomery County, Md., police last month that Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, had congressional immunity and could not be arrested on drunken driving charges.

Stokes' car was stopped during the early morning of March 25 when an officer suspected him of drunken driving. Police Cpl. Phillip Caswell said the eight-term congressman failed three roadside sobriety tests.

Stokes, chairman of the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the ethics committee, told a news conference in Cleveland on Monday he had not been drinking. He said he passed the roadside tests and never was asked to take a Breathalyzer or urinalysis test.

While Stokes never claimed congressional immunity, police at the station where he was taken concluded he had such protection. A family member was summoned to take Stokes home and no charges were filed.

After the incident, Brand and local government attorneys in suburban Washington decided independently of each other to prepare memos on congressional immunity.

Brand said Article I, Section 6 of the Constitution says members of Congress "shall in all cases, except treason, felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same..."

The Supreme Court has said the protection applies only to civil arrests, which are virtually non-existent today, Brand said.

Hold Daughter

PINE KNOLL SHORES, N.C. (AP) — Police arrested the daughter of a woman found shot to death last week and charged her with murder.

Pine Knoll Shores police said they arrested Susan Lee Scheirer, 36, Saturday after she was released from Carteret General Hospital. She was being held in Carteret County Jail pending a bond hearing today.

Scheirer apparently shot herself in the left thigh after killing her mother, Olga Hedrick, 69, according to Pine Knoll Shores Police Chief Edgar Crawford.

Hedrick was found dead in her home at 109 Acorn Court on April 4, and an autopsy report later revealed she had been shot three times with a .22-caliber gun.

When the framers wrote the Constitution, civil arrests were common, especially in debtors' cases. A civil arrest may apply to certain traffic violations in some states, the House counsel said.

Bruce Sherman, the Montgomery County attorney representing the county police department, concluded five days after the Stokes incident that the police involved made the wrong decision.

"Members of the United States Congress are not immune from arrest and prosecution for criminal offenses," he wrote in a March 30 legal opinion.

John Kloch, the commonwealth attorney in Alexandria, Va., said that because of the Stokes case, he also is preparing a legal ruling.

No Value In Book 'Lists'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — College admissions officials and high school guidance counselors say they put little stock in listings of "outstanding students" by national publications.

Books published by such companies as The Society for Distinguished American High School Students, the United States Achievement Academy and Who's Who Among American High School Students feature short biographies of students.

The books are available at no cost to some colleges and all public libraries, but students who want their own books must buy them.

And that's something that college admissions officials and local guidance counselors don't like. They warn students that being featured in such publications may be a waste of money and a waste of time.

Bishops Blessed With Win Over Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's baseball Pirates struggled out of one hole and then fell right into another yesterday in a sudden home game against N.C. Wesleyan.

The game, originally scheduled for Rocky Mount, was switched to Greenville because of field conditions, and a game set for tonight at Harrington Field will instead be played at 3 p.m. this afternoon at Rocky Mount on the Bishop field on the Wesleyan campus.

The Pirates, who fell behind 6-1, struggled back to tie the game up, only to have mistakes in the eighth inning open the flood gates for the Bishops to take a 12-6 win in the contest.

"It was almost like Murphy's law," Coach Hal Baird said afterwards. "It just seemed like nothing went right for us. It was a nightmare from top to bottom. We couldn't pitch, we couldn't make the big defensive play when we had to."

Baird cited an error on a sacrifice bunt in the eighth as the key to the loss. At the time, the score was tied at 6-6 and Wesleyan had just put its leadoff batter on base. Toby Holliday laid down a sacrifice bunt that was fielded in plenty of time, but overthrown by catcher Jabo Fulghum at first. The baserunner sped all the way to third on the play.

"That changed everything," Baird said. "They were able to freewheel after that. They would have played it a lot different with one out and a man only on second, and we might have been able to get out of it. I don't take anything from Wesleyan, they have a good team, but our mistakes cost us."

Bobby Davidson opened the game on the mound for the Pirates, but was taken out after only two innings. "He just didn't have his stuff," Baird said. That brought on Chubby Butler, who was able to retire only one batter while giving up four hits before he was jerked. Robby McClanahan came on after that and seemed to take charge, limiting Wesleyan to only three hits over the next four and two-thirds innings. But he was chased in the eighth, as was his reliever, Kirk

Parsons, with Brian Peterson coming on to get the final four outs.

"We not getting good enough pitching," Baird lamented. "Then, when our defense breaks down at critical times...we have to play better."

Wesleyan pushed over a run in the first to take the initial lead. Richard Mattocks led off with a walk and stole second. Mike DeSola also walked and both runners moved up on a balk. With one away, Mike DeLeone reached on an infield hit, scoring Mattocks.

The Bishops added two more in the second. With two away, Vince Chamberlain walked and Mattocks blasted a homer to right and Wesleyan had a 3-0 lead.

The Pirates came up with their first run in the bottom of the inning. David Horne got a two-out single and Fulghum walked. Kelly Robinette then singled to right, scoring Horne. A pickoff play, on which Baird felt Wesleyan pitcher Larry Parr balked, ended the inning. "I had told the umpires to watch his balk move, but I didn't figure that it would do any good to argue it after the fact," Baird said.

Wesleyan boosted its lead to 6-1 with three in the third. Terry Coates singled and DeLeone got a hit. Charlie Simpson's single to right scored Coates, but John Hallow's relay to Horne got DeLeone at third. Simpson stole up, scoring on Mochie Medley's single. That spelled the end for Butler, who had opened the frame. Willie Arrington walked and with two away, Chamberlain singled in Medley with the sixth Bishop run.

ECU rallied for two in the bottom of the inning. With one out, Todd Evans doubled and David Wells reached on an error. Winfred Johnson then singled to score Evans. An error on Robert Wells' grounder allowed David Wells to score.

David Wells then left the game with a pulled muscle in the top of the fourth chasing a fly ball.

The Pirates tied it up with three in the sixth. Tony Salmond opened with an infield hit and both Horne and Fulghum walked, loading them up.

Robinette singled — his third hit of the day — to score Salmond, and after a double play got Horne at the plate, Evans doubled to score both Robinette and courtesy runner Robert Langston for a 6-6 tie.

But it wasn't to be. Wesleyan came back with six runs in the top of the eighth. Medley led off with a single and Arrington reached when his sacrifice bunt was errored, moving Medley to third. Holliday then singled to drive in both runners. An error on the relay allowed Holliday to take second, and Chamberlain sacrificed courtesy runner Robin Shorter to third. He scored on Mattocks' single, and Mattocks stole second, taking third on Coates's single. Mattocks then stole home with the fourth run of the inning.

DeLeone kept it going with a double to score Coates and he scored on Simpson's hit, finishing it off.

DeLeone led the 16-hit attack of the Bishops with four, while Mattocks had three and Coates, Simpson, Medley and Holliday each had two.

East Carolina was led by Robinette with three, while Evans had two — both doubles.

The loss drops the Pirates to 15-10, while Wesleyan climbs to 22-3.

Captures Second Masters Title

Ballesteros Rides Early Lead To Victory

The makings were there for a dramatic finish — four former Masters champions separated by only two shots going into the final round.

Seve's birdie-eagle-par-birdie magic on the first four holes quickly took care of that as the handsome Spaniard outdistanced three of the game's top players and strolled to a rather easy four-shot victory Monday in the season's first major golf event.

"I played 4-under the first four holes, and I think that was probably the key," Ballesteros said. "That put me 9-under and put my confidence straight up."

It also put more pressure on the third round co-leaders,

Raymond Floyd and Craig Stadler, playing one group behind him, and on playing partner Tom Watson, who had hoped to capture his third Masters crown.

The 26-year-old Ballesteros, who also won this tournament in 1980, lost that three-shot advantage only once the rest of the way.

That came when Watson knocked in a 35-40-foot eagle putt on the par 5 eighth to move within two shots of the lead.

But, a Watson charge wasn't to be.

Ballesteros rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the ninth and Watson, one of the game's top putters, lost his touch on the greens.

He three-putted Nos. 9 and 11 and also bogeyed the 10th, and the game was over for the reigning U.S. and British Open king.

Stadler and Floyd never got anything going, and the only ones who did, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite, were too far back for it to matter.

Ballesteros closed with a 69 for an 8-under 280 total in the day-late finish on the still-soggy 6,905-yard Augusta National Golf Club course.

Crenshaw had the low round of the day, a 68, and Kite fired a 69 as the two tied for second place at 284.

Watson and Floyd finished at 285 with scores of 73 and 75, respectively, and Stadler, the defending champion, struggled to a 76 and was tied at 286 with Hale Irwin, who had a 69.

Watson closed to within three shots with a birdie on the 13th, but had a double bogey 6 on 14.

Watson said the 14th "sealed the coffin. The lights went out."

"I told my caddy after 13 that from here to the last hole

we have to play in par," Ballesteros said. "I did."

"I made a couple of mistakes on the back nine, but I kept my cool," he said.

"The key on this course is you have to wait for the birdies. I made my birdies early in the round and that was the key."

The victory was worth $90,000 for Seve and it was his third major championship. He also won the British Open in 1979 and now owns 29 titles in his globe-trotting career — most of them overseas.

"This is my favorite course," he said. "You have to use your power... your mind... and be lucky."

He played the front side in 5-under, getting his birdies from 8 feet on the first hole, 2 feet at No. 4 and 15 feet at No. 9.

His two bogeys came on the backside when he two-putted from 12 feet, first on No. 10 when he caught a bunker and again at No. 12 when he missed the green.

Seve finished with a flourish, chipping in from 20 feet to par the final hole.

Watson called Ballesteros an "aggressive, flamboyant type of player" and said the start was "like a guy getting knocked down two times in the first round, and having a three-knockdown rule."

Crenshaw, who eagled the par-5 13th from eight feet, said, "I was so far behind. Seve started so well. I mean, good night! But I was proud of that round today. It was a tough day to play."

"Birdie, eagle, par, birdie," Kite said, recalling Seve's start.

"That's like driving a Ferrari and the rest of us in a Chevrolet," he added. "He just blasted us."

Hubie Brown Looking Forward To Winning Final Three Contests

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Coach Hubie Brown appreciates the luxury of not having to worry about other teams' scores, as long as the Knicks continue to win.

"I think we will win our last three games," Brown said after the Knicks' easy 121-92 victory over the Indiana Pacers in the only National Basketball Association game Monday night. "If we win all three, it doesn't matter what Atlanta or Washington does. From a positive standpoint, the best way to make the playoffs is not worry what the other teams are doing. We have to do it ourselves."

"We don't have to worry about Washington or Atlanta at all," said Bernard King, who hit 13 of 20 shots and scored 29 points to lead the Knicks. "I prefer it this way."

The Knicks are tied with

Atlanta for fifth place in the Eastern Conference, and both the Hawks and Knicks are one-half game ahead of Washington. Two of the three teams will earn a postseason berth by Sunday, the final day of the regular season.

But because of the tiebreaker situation, the Knicks are assured of making the playoffs if they win their last three games, at home against New Jersey and on the road against Detroit and Chicago.

"This is a good position to be in," said center Bill Cartwright, who hit all eight of his field goal attempts and finished with 19 points. "I feel we'll win our remaining games."

Indiana's seventh straight loss dropped the Pacers, 19-60, two games behind Cleveland in the Central Division. Both the Pacers and Cavaliers have three games left, and if Cleveland finishes ahead of Indiana, the Pacers will flip a coin with Houston for the right to choose first in the June 28 college draft, with three-time All-American Ralph Sampson of Virginia the likely first selection.

"We're not trying to catch anyone now," Indiana Coach Jack McKinney said. "We're just trying to win a few and salvage the season."

McKinney said the Pacers might have been expected to start "playing out the string" weeks ago, but "if we do that, we are cheating the people who pay our salaries."

"You can't accuse them of playing out the string," Brown said of the Pacers. "They lost in overtime to Philadelphia on Friday and led most of the game against Cleveland Sunday. It's been a frustrating season for them and tonight they just had a bad game."

After trailing 57-42 at halftime, the Pacers cut the deficit to 59-50 in the third quarter, but got no closer than that as the Knicks outscored them 62-42 the rest of the way.

King had 15 points and Cartwright and Paul Westphal nine each in the first quarter as the Knicks led by as many as 17 points in the period, which ended with them ahead 35-22.

With the New York starters on the bench, Indiana outscored the Knicks 14-5 to close the gap to 38-30.

Chargers Rally Past Cougars

PINETOPS — Ayden-Griffon scored three runs in the ninth inning to gain a 5-2 baseball victory over SouthWest Edgecombe yesterday.

The Chargers pushed into the lead in the first inning, scoring once. Jackie Conway doubled and took third on an error on the play. Gene Johnson was hit by a pitch and when he was thrown out trying to steal second, Conway scooted home.

The Chargers picked up a second run in the third for a 2-0 lead, but couldn't hold it. SouthWest came back with single runs in the fifth and sixth innings to tie it at 2-2.

It stayed that way until the ninth, when Ayden-Griffon broke it open with three. Tyrone Gay led off with a single and Joey Kennedy got a hit. Roger Moya's single loaded the bases and a walk to Terry Garrett brought in Gay. Wesley Hardy's grounder was relayed to home, but errored, scoring Kennedy and Charles Mitchell then singled in Moya with the fifth Charger run, insuring the win.

Gay led the Ayden-Griffon hitting with two, while Eddie Naylor had two of three hits SouthWest got off Doug Coley, who went the distance.

Now 9-2 overall and 2-1 in Eastern Carolina Conference play, the Chargers host Greene Central today at 4 p.m.

How Good It Feels

Astros, Cubs Rival For Worst Start Of 1983

By The Associated Press
Winning isn't everything — and for the Houston Astros and Chicago Cubs these days, winning isn't anything.

The Astros, off to the worst start in the 22-year history of the franchise, have dropped their first seven games, the latest an 11-inning 4-3 heart-breaker Monday night to Los Angeles.

And the Cubs, starting their midsummer swoon a bit early, have dropped six in a row without a victory, their latest a 5-1 decision Monday in Cincinnati.

In the only other National League game, Atlanta blanked San Diego 4-0.

Bob Knepper was two outs away from his — and Houston's — first victory of the year when Derrel Thomas singled and, with two away, pinch-hitter Mike Marshall singled just over the glove of leaping second baseman Bill Doran. Then Steve Sax tied it 3-3 with a liner through the box.

"Going into the ninth I didn't feel that strong," said Knepper. "I made two bad pitches, to Thomas and Marshall. If Marshall's hit is an inch lower, the game is over. Doran catches it. Sax hit a good pitch. The ball came right at me. It caught me flat-footed. I couldn't get off the ground to get it."

"I'm generally happy with my pitching," Knepper added,

"but I'm not overjoyed we lost again."

They lost it in the 11th when Julio Solano walked Thomas, wild-pitched him to third and walked the bases loaded. Dave Smith took over and got Sax on a pop-up before Bill Russell's suicide squeeze brought Thomas home. It brought cheers for Russell from the crowd which had booed him earlier for his erratic fielding at shortstop.

"The crowds and I have an old thing going," Russell said. "It doesn't bother me or I wouldn't have played this long."

Reds 5, Cubs 1

The Cubs are off to their poorest start since 1962, when they lost their first seven games. "We're off to a poor start, but we've got a good ballclub," Chicago Manager Lee Elia proclaimed. "Once we start cooking, we'll be all right. Things are just magnified now because of the start of the season."

"They're not quitting," he said of his players. "Maybe they're trying too hard as a team ... Down deep every guy on this ballclub knows we've got a good ballclub."

Joe Price pitched a two-hitter for the Reds, one of them Wayne Nordhagen's home run, and Dann Birdello hit a two-run double and Cesar Cedeno added a two-run homer, both in the second inning against Dickie Niles.

"Two swings of the bat, that's all it took — a two-run double and a home run," Elia said. "They didn't do anything after that. It's obvious we're not musing any offense."

Braves 4, Padres 0

Pascual Perez stymied the Padres on five hits to stretch Atlanta's winning streak to five games. "He was super, just great," Braves Manager Joe Torre said. "This was his best. He's now put two complete games back-to-back."

Terry Harper hit a run-scoring single in the fourth inning, then Bob Horner and Harper hit successive home runs in the fifth.

Healthy Pitcher Draws Optimism

Leonard Leads Royals' Hopes

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals probably proved last year that Dennis Leonard is crucial to any hopes they might have of winning the American League West championship.

Last May the hard-throwing veteran broke two fingers, stopping a line smash with his pitching hand. The Royals spent the rest of the season in a futile duel with California. Leonard missed 16 starts, and the Angels won the flag, finishing three games ahead of the Royals.

But after Monday night's six strikeouts in a 6-2 victory over Boston, Leonard and Manager Dick Howser were resting a lot easier.

"Leonard threw the ball as well as he can tonight," said Howser. "He had as good a fastball as he is going to have. I have been very impressed with the way he's thrown four of his last five times. He was mixing his pitches very well."

In Monday night's only other AL game, the California Angels defeated the Seattle Mariners 6-1.

Leonard's six strikeouts included the heart of the Boston order in the third — Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Tony Armas. In the fourth, he struck out Dave Stapleton and Glenn Hoffman.

"I was mixing them up and getting them over the plate," said Leonard. "And that's the secret to good pitching — mixing 'em up and getting 'em over the plate."

Mixing pitches is vital when facing the Red Sox, he said. "I got Evans with a fastball. Armas missed a couple of changeups pretty bad. Rice struck out on a slider."

"The fingers feel fine. It feels like everything is falling into place."

An inside-the-park home run and a fielding gem by shortstop U. L. Washington helped Leonard beat the Red Sox. With the score tied at 2-2 in the fifth, Washington ripped a pitch from Bruce Hurst, 0-1, into the left-field corner that eluded Rice. It gave the Royals a 3-2 lead.

"I didn't really think about it until I caught my breath three innings later," Washington said of the first inside-the-park homer of his career. "Then I was just glad I wasn't out. I know the guys in the dugout were laughing at me when I came around third. Did you see me? I looked like a dying quail trying to get away. Home plate looked like it was moving away from me."

In the first inning, Washington deprived Boston of at least one run. With one already in, two runners on base and two out, he went to his left to stop Stapleton's hot grounder and flipped the ball behind his back to Frank White for the force at second.

"U.L.'s inside-the-park job was certainly an exciting thing, but that defensive play he made was every bit as impressive," said Howser. "I like to see us sharp defensively. I know we're going to hit the ball."

Red Sox Manager Ralph Houk said Hurst performed better than the score would indicate. "I thought Hurst pitched good enough to win," he said. "He just didn't get too many breaks. Leonard is a good pitcher, one of the best in the league."

Angels 6, Mariners 1

Tim Foli drove in four runs for California with a pair of singles and left-hander

Tommy John scattered seven hits for his second complete game in two starts. Bobby Grich went 4-for-4 for the Angels.

"When I get into a groove and find my rhythm, my confidence level goes way up," John said. "I have confidence in throwing some pitches I might not throw were I struggling ... When I'm throwing well, I keep the ball down and hope the fielders behind me can come up with the good plays — which they've now done in two games for me."

Top Prospects Sign Wednesday

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Wednesday is national signing date for high school basketball players and coaches say the top prospects range from 7-foot-2 to 5-3.

But there are no overpowering big men in the mold of Ralph Sampson or Pat Ewing, say the cross-section of coaches and recruiters.

"It's the year of guards and forwards," said Mike Gilleran, who coordinated the NCAA's Operation Intercept. In Operation Intercept, the NCAA works with recruiters and high school and college coaches to compile a list of the most heavily sought players so their recruitment can be monitored.

"The closest to a consensus No. 1 player would probably be Reggie Williams of Dunbar High School in Baltimore," said Gilleran.

Williams is a solidly built 6-7 swingman and the leader on what everyone considered the top high school team in the country. One of his teammates was Tyrone Bogues, who's out to prove a 5-3 guard can play in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"He's said he's going to Wake Forest," Gilleran said of Bogues. "He impressed a lot of people last week in an all-star game in Washington, D.C. His team won, in large part because of Bogues, the way he stole the ball, set up plays and generally created havoc. It will be interesting to see what he can do in the ACC."

In the all-star game, Bogues more than held his own against another of the country's greatest prospects, James Blackmon, a 6-3 guard from Marion, Ind.

"A lot of people are wondering about Bogues' defense at 5-foot-3, but you just have to see him get out there and play to appreciate how he can mix it up," said Gilleran. "He gave Blackmon some trouble. And the fact he could stay out there with Blackmon tells you something. He hung in there pretty well."

Many of the best prospects have already signed, taking advantage of an experiment by college administrators that allowed seniors to sign during a seven-day period last November.

"Blackmon is headed for Kentucky," said Gilleran. "He's an excellent player, handles the ball well and can shoot." Kentucky also is expected to land 6-7 Winston Bennett of Louisville's Male High School, which has produced a number of gifted players, including former Louisville All-American Darrell Griffith.

"He's a big, muscular kid who is very gifted and will probably play power forward," said Gilleran. "If Kentucky gets Bennett and Blackmon, that will be quite a coup."

The tallest player on the NCAA's list of top recruits is 7-2 Martin Nessley of Columbus, Ohio, who is headed for Duke.

A legend in the New York City prep ranks, Dwayne "Pearl" Washington, has decided upon Syracuse, said Gilleran. However, the 6-2 Washington, from Boys and Girls High School in Brooklyn, did not exactly overpower Curtis Aiken, a small guard from Buffalo, N.Y., who says he's coming to Kansas.

"He's listed at everything from 5-9 to 5-11, but he's a fine player," said Gilleran. "He first bloomed in the Empire State games last summer when he played against Washington. Aiken's team beat Washington's in an upset and everybody who came to see Washington went away about equally impressed with Aiken."

One of the top guards is Antoine Joubert of Detroit, a smooth 6-5 guard and all-around player. Another is Henry Dalrymple, a native of New York who attended prep school in Vermont and has committed to Georgia Tech.

Four Teams Fined After TranSouth

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Four teams, including winner Harry Gant's, were fined when illegal parts or equipment were discovered Sunday morning before the start of the TranSouth 500 Grand National stock car race at Darlington International Raceway.

"Trick" fuel dump cans were taken from the Blue Max (with Tim Richmond as driver), Mach 1 (Gant), and RahMoc (Neil Bonnett) teams. An illegal fuel cell was found in the Childress Racing team (Ricky Rudd) entry, according to NASCAR officials.

The cans would have allowed the teams to add more fuel than legally permitted during pit stops.

NASCAR flagman-technical inspector Harold Kinder said the cans, which hold 14 gallons of gasoline, had false bottoms.

"The welds were such that air could get into the bottom of the cans," Kinder said. "The real bottoms had valves in them that fell open when the cans were tilted up to pour the gas into the cars."

He said the rigged cans allowed fuel to flow about twice as fast as it would from regulation cans.

The confiscated fuel cell was a half-inch too wide, according to Kinder.

"This would give those cars the capability of carrying several more cubic inches of fuel," he said. "It could have meant the difference in maybe not having to make a pit stop."

NASCAR director Dick Beatty of Charlotte, N.C., said the Richmond, Gant and Bonnett teams were fined $500 each for the dump cans. Meanwhile, the Rudd team was fined $250 for the large fuel cell.

The confiscated parts and equipment will be included in a display section at the Darlington track known as "The Cheater Showcase."

Long Pass Tops Federals

Worthy: Lakers Can Still Win

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the catch that put him in the record books, and won the game for the Arizona Wranglers, wide receiver Jackie Flowers was thinking of only one thing — how to knock it down.

Trailing 21-16 in the fourth quarter, Flowers outjumped two Washington Federals defenders at the home team's 49-yard line and then rambled the remaining distance to complete a 98-yard touchdown pass, the longest in the history of the United States Football League.

"I threw the ball as far as I could and he made a heck of catch," said quarterback Alan Risher, who completed 16 of 30 passes for 310 yards, including eight to Flowers for 179 in the Wranglers' 22-21 victory.

"I saw it from the second it left Risher's hand. I thought it was a jump ball and seriously thought about knocking it down so they wouldn't intercept it. We needed to hold on to the ball at that point in the game," Flowers said.

Washington cornerback Jeff Brown and free safety Donnie Harris had surrounded Flowers when the two Federal defenders collided in midair and crashed to the turf.

"I just watched it all the way and it went right between my hands and hit me in the chest. All I could do was just hold on and continue to run," said Flowers, who leads the USFL with eight touchdown catches.

Washington coach Ray Jauch, who watched his team fall to 1-5 and last place in the Eastern Conference along with next week's opponent, the New Jersey Generals, was disheartened by the defeat.

"This has got to be the worst one yet. It's like we find a new way to lose every week."

The winning score spoiled what, to that point, had been a glorious return to pro football by former NFL quarterback Joe Gilliam.

Gilliam, who toiled in the minor leagues for five years after righting himself from an admitted drug habit that prematurely ended his NFL career, threw two touchdown passes and set up a third score with a long pass as the Federals built a 21-13 halftime lead.

Despite suffering a pulled hamstring and muscle spasms in his back, Gilliam repeatedly moved the Federals down the field and into scoring position.

"It's good to be back playing pro football, but it feels better to win," said Gilliam, who sports a Super Bowl championship ring from his days in a Pittsburgh Steeler uniform.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — James Worthy, the Los Angeles Lakers' outstanding rookie who's out for the rest of the season with a broken bone in his leg, sees no reason why the club can't win the National Basketball Association title without him.

"Why not? They won it without me last year," said Worthy, who was scheduled to undergo surgery today to have one or two screws inserted in the broken bone, the tibia, just below the knee in his left leg.

Dr. Stephen Lombardo was scheduled to perform the surgery at Centinela Medical Center.

"We really feel optimistic about his eventual return," Laker physician Dr. Robert Kerlan said. "Without complication, the prognosis for the future is excellent and it is expected that James will be ready to return to action in approximately six months from the time of surgery."

The injury, suffered Sunday night against Phoenix, would appear to be a big blow to the playoff-bound Lakers, who already have clinched the Pacific Division title.

"We've had very serious injuries this year," said Earvin "Magic" Johnson. "But this one really hurts the most. It's going to have a big effect on the team."

Worthy, out of North Carolina and the Lakers' No. 1 draft choice, was being counted on to give the team the offense off the bench that they lost when veteran Bob McAdoo was injured one game after the All-Star break.

"It's going to change everything for us," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar after Worthy was hurt Sunday night. "It's depressing. We have to overcome everything, I guess."

Worthy was hurt with about 15 seconds remaining in the third quarter of the loss to the Suns at the Forum.

"He's a 6-4 swingman, quick, aggressive and tough," said Gillman.

Other top guard prospects from New York include 6-2 Kenny Smith, who's said to be headed to North Carolina or Virginia, and Kenny Hutchinson, 6-4, reported to be leaning to North Carolina State.

Indiana has been promised the services of Steve Alford of Newcastle, Ind., a record-breaking 6-2 guard.

"He's your prototype shooter," said Gillman. "A great pure shooter."

Other top center-forward prospects include Dave Popson, 6-10, of Kingston, Pa., who's said to be considering Notre Dame and North Carolina, Ricky Winslow, 6-8, of Houston, and 6-8 Tom Sheehy of Rochester, N.Y., who announced Monday that he will sign a letter of intent with Virginia.

"Most coaches seem to think that although there's not a great, overpowering big man in this year's class, there is greater depth than usual at guard and forward," said Gillman. "There are also some good prospects on the West Coast, and in the Deep South."

makes you a criminal!

And criminals do get caught! Now the stores are wise to shoplifters, and have the manpower and sophisticated equipment to prove it. Closed circuit cameras, undercover people, specially trained tag cover systems... even jail when they're caught. And the stores are taking legal actions! Shoplifters face even stiffer fines... even jail when they're caught. Plus the humiliation of getting arrested and a criminal record that could effect future schooling, jobs, credit rating, and the respect and trust of family and friends. Shoplifting... like any other crime... just doesn't pay!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Another 20 years? Without question I would do it again," said a clearly gratified Richard Attenborough as his two decades of struggle on the epic "Gandhi" paid off with eight Oscars, including best picture.

Attenborough, who produced and directed "Gandhi," said his wildest expectations were more than fulfilled Monday night at the 55th annual Academy Awards. The movie also earned him the best director award and, for Ben Kingsley, best actor honors.

Meryl Streep, who won the best actress award for her portrayal of the tortured Polish war refugee in "Sophie's Choice," said she thought she'd given her best performance ever in the role. "I don't think I'll ever see one like that again," said Ms. Streep.

Six and a half months pregnant with her second child, Miss Streep admitted that attending the ceremony had entailed a certain amount of physical discomfort. "The baby was kicking all night long," she smiled ruefully.

It was Miss Streep's second Oscar — she won for supporting actress in 1979 in "Kramer vs. Kramer."

Louis Gossett Jr. became the first black actor since

Sidney Poitier's best actor award for 1963's "Lilies of the Field" to garner an Oscar, winning best supporting honors for his steel-hard drill sergeant in "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Dolores Del Rio Dead At Age 78

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Actress Dolores Del Rio, the aristocratic Latin beauty whose 50-year career in movies was launched after a director saw her dancing at a party, is dead at age 78.

Miss Del Rio died Monday afternoon at her fashionable Newport Beach apartment of natural causes, deputy Orange County coroner's investigator Bernie Mazuca said.

The convent-reared daughter of a well-to-do Mexican family, Miss Del Rio began her career as a dancer in a 1925 silent film and went on to star in "Ramona," "The Loves of Carmen," "Evangeline," "Madame du Barry" and more recently "Cheyenne Autumn."

She was born Lolita Dolores Martinez Asunsolo Lopez Negrette. Her father was a banker and the family hacienda was in Durango, Mexico. In 1909, when she was only 4, her family was forced to flee Mexico because of terrorist raids by Pancho Villa's revolutionaries.

She went to the Convent of St. Joseph for her education and was presented to the king and queen of Spain in 1919 during a European trip.

In 1920 she married attorney Jamie Del Rio, 18 years her senior. Hollywood director Edwin Carewe later saw her dancing at a party and offered her a role in "Joanna" in 1925. It was a modest film debut, with much of her performance edited out.

Later films included "High Stepper" (1926), "What Price Glory?" (1927), "Bird of Paradise" (1932), "Flying Down to Rio," (1933), "Madame Du Barry" (1941), "Portrait of Maria" (1945) and "Once Upon A Time" (1967).

said the bespectacled actor, who is part-Indian. He is an experienced classical actor on the British stage, but "Gandhi" was his first movie.

Miss Streep's primary competition this year was Jessica Lange's performance in "Frances," the harrowing story of actress Frances Farmer. But Miss Lange seemed content with her consolation prize as best supporting actress for her soap opera star role in "Tootsie."

"I feel real lucky to have worked with actors like Charles Durning, Dabney Coleman and Teri Garr and to have Sydney Pollack as my director and Dustin Hoffman as my leading lady," she said. In "Tootsie," Hoffman played an actor masquerading as a soap opera actress.

It was the only win for "Tootsie," which had received 10 nominations — second only to the 11 nominations for "Gandhi."

"E.T.," the top-grossing film of all time, could muster only four technical awards: best score, special visual effects, sound effects editing and sound.

"Gandhi" rounded out its big coup with an Oscar for John Briley's original screenplay, as well as for costume design, art direction, cinematography and editing.

It also was the second straight British film to take the best picture award. "Chariots of Fire" was an unexpected winner last year. Said the self-effacing Kingsley: "This is an Oscar for a vision, for the awards were a tribute to the vision and courage of Attenborough, who could get no American company to finance the biography of the man whose spirit of non-violence helped free India from British rule and helped inspire the 1960s U.S. civil rights movement."

The award for best song of 1982 was given to Jack

Nitzsche, Buffy Sainte-Marie and Will Jennings for "Up Where We Belong" from "An Officer and a Gentleman."

The nationally televised ceremony began with the award for best foreign language to the Spanish-made "Volver a Empezar (To Begin Again)."

The music scoring awards went to two veterans of the pop field: John Williams for his original score for "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" and Henry Mancini for his song score and adaptation for "Victor-Victoria." Williams and Mancini each had won three previous Oscars.

The furor created by the Justice Department over three Canadian documentaries reverberated at the ceremony. One of the films branded as propaganda, the anti-nuclear "If You Love This Planet," was named best documentary short. Said one of its producers, Teri Nash, "For its tremendous efforts in promoting our film, I'd like to thank the U.S. Department of Justice."

Mickey Rooney received a thunderous ovation when he was brought on stage by Bob Hope to receive his honorary award for 50 years of versatility in films.

"You honor me with the highest tribute I can receive in the business," said Rooney after the audience had seen clips of his films ranging from the 1934 "A Midsummer Night's Dream" to the 1979 "Black Stallion."

Rooney spoke frankly of being the No. 1 movie star at 19 and when he was 40 — "Nobody wanted me, I couldn't get a job."

He thanked his agent Ruth Webb and his wife Jan for helping him get back on the road to success.

The production, reported to have cost $2 million, had few high spots aside from the tribute to Rooney and a salute to songsmith Irving Berlin, starring Bernadette Peters and Peter Allen.

Charlton Heston couldn't call up film clips depicting the acting career of the late Jean Hersholt.

After an embarrassing stage wait, Heston said, "Never mind ... If you come to my house I'll show you the film."

He presented the Hersholt Humanitarian Award to producer Walter Mirisch.

And at one point stagehands mysteriously appeared, prompting a distracted Richard Pryor, one of the hosts for the evening, to inquire: "Is everything all right back there?"

Child Testifies In Murder Trial

IN COURT — Elizabeth Hutchinson, 31, sits in court as testimony was taken from Ray Mallett, 7, in connection with the beating death of his sister, Brandy, age 3. (AP Laserphoto)

By SUSAN ESSOYAN
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The sounds of a woman screaming obscenities and a 3-year-old girl pleading "Don't hit me, I'll be a good girl!" were described in testimony by the neighbor of a live-in babysitter charged with the child's murder.

"During the banging I could hear Brandy crying and crying," said Ms. Isbart. "She was saying, 'Please, Mummy, don't hit me, I'll be a good girl. I promise.'"

Brandy's father, Roy C. Mallett, will be tried later on manslaughter charges because he "set up an atmosphere of discipline and physical violence" in his home and knew of the beatings, Thomas Drechsler, an assistant district attorney, said when Mallett was charged. Mallett's wife lives out of state.

Ray Mallett, Brandy's 7-year-old brother, testified that the babysitter regularly hit his sister in the stomach with her hand or a belt, and on the day she was fatally injured, "She pulled her up by the hair and threw her on the ground."

"Every time I saw her she had bruises," he said. "Brandy's brother was the prosecution's opening witness in Middlesex Superior Court. Ms. Hutchinson also faces a charge of assault and battery for allegedly beating Brandy during a period from Jan. 1 to Oct. 16, 1982, the day the youngster was hospitalized."

"Brandy died of a blood clot at Massachusetts General Hospital 13 days after she was admitted with bruises, a broken leg and head injuries. 'They had a regular routine of slapping and beating going on within the walls,' Drechsler said."

The blond-haired boy fidgeted, frowned, gazed at the ceiling and scratched his head in his three hours of testimony. Often he simply shrugged and told lawyers "I don't know" when pressed on a point.

He did not look at Ms. Hutchinson, who wore a surgical eyepatch over her left eye as she has in other court appearances. The reason for the patch has not been explained.

The defense contends that Brandy fell down the stairs and that it was Brandy's father who beat the children. "Brandy Mallett tumbled down the stairs wearing her father's bruises," Ms. Hutchinson's attorney, Charles Balliro, told jurors and Judge James Nixon on Monday.

The boy said his father used to make him stand in the corner with his hands clasped above his head and then would "beat on me." "One day he did put a knife to my throat, the day he ripped up my shirt," the youngster said.

He also said under questioning that his father also told him about killing young children in Vietnam.

Mallett was at work as an auto mechanic the day Brandy was hospitalized.

Ms. Hutchinson moved into the Mallett's Everett home early last year, about the time the children's mother moved out, Ms. Isbart said. She added that Ms. Hutchinson appeared to be Mallett's girlfriend.

Ray and Mallett's other child, 18-month-old Kimberly, are being cared for by their aunt and uncle in Tewksbury, under state supervision.

The case attracted widespread attention partly because Brandy reportedly was beaten six weeks after the state Department of Social Services received a report of possible child abuse in the home.

Agency officials have ordered disciplinary action against several employees involved in the case.

F-16s For S.C. Guard

HORREL HILL, S.C. (AP) — The South Carolina Air Guard has received the "pink slip" for an F-16 fighter, becoming the first National Guard group in the nation to get the sophisticated Fighting Falcon.

The jet, delivered Monday to McEntire Air National Guard Base about 19 miles east of Columbia, was the first of 26 the state's Air Guard is expected to receive this year.

Air Force Lt. Col. Rusty Heft, who flew the plane to McEntire, handed papers turning the plane over from the Air Force to the Air Guard to a group led by state Adjutant General T. Eston Marchant.

The plane is replacing the A-7D fighter which the Air Guard has flown since 1975. The older aircraft already are being transferred to other guard units around the country.

Marchant said arrival of the plane marks an important breakthrough for the Air Guard and reserve units where they are receiving equipment of "first-line ranking."

"We are no longer receiving equipment on a hand-me-down basis," he said. "This is the most modern fighter jet we've got."

The F-16 can reach speeds of 1½ times the speed of sound, carry more than 20,000 pounds of air-to-air and surface-to-surface weapons and has a combat radius of 700 miles, double that of most jet fighters, officials said.

FOCUS

A Soviet Hero

On April 12, 1961 — 22 years ago today — Yuri Alekseyevich Gagarin became the first human being to travel into outer space. The Soviet air force pilot rode his spacecraft Vostok I into orbit at speeds of more than 17,000 miles per hour on a trip that lasted 1 hour and 48 minutes from blastoff to landing. The flight stunned the U.S., and it would be another year before the Americans would manage to put a man in Earth orbit. At the age of 27, Cosmonaut Gagarin became a national hero known to every Soviet citizen. But his flight aboard Vostok I was to be his only trip into outer space. On March 27, 1968 — two weeks after his 34th birthday — Gagarin died in an airplane crash near Moscow.

DO YOU KNOW—Who was the first American to travel into Earth orbit?

MONDAY'S ANSWER—Gandhi was called the "Mahatma" because it means "Great Soul."

'Strong Start' In A New Field

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is off to a strong start, but a lot of work and money is needed if the state is going to catch up with the nation's major microelectronics centers, an industry executive says.

Peter Calingaert, vice president of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, told a conference of the Association for Computing Machinery last week the state must also attract top personnel to compete with microelectronics centers in California and Massachusetts.

The Microelectronics Center, under construction in the Research Triangle Park between Durham and Raleigh, is a non-profit, private research center that was incorporated in July 1980.

Center employees should be able to move into the 84,000-square-foot building by September, Calingaert said.

In addition to offices, a computer room, an auditorium and a video conference room, the new building will have 8,200 square feet of "clean space" where silicon chips will be made and electronic materials studied, he said.

This "clean space" will be controlled for temperature, humidity and vibration. Its air will be five times cleaner than the air that most people breathe, he said.

Gov. Jim Hunt has requested $17.3 million for the Microelectronics Center for the fiscal years ending in 1984 and 1985. A decision on the request probably will not come until early June, when legislators vote on the full budget.

The Microelectronics Center will continue to be "significantly dependent on funding from the state," Calingaert said.

But he said taxes generated by companies attracted to North Carolina by the Microelectronics Center "are expected to repay the state's investment rapidly."

Bankruptcy Action By Taylor Company

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A tobacco equipment company headed by former state Rep. G. Ronald Taylor has filed for bankruptcy claiming it owes $1.5 million more than it has in assets.

The 15-year-old corporation, which was doing business as Taylor Manufacturing Co. in Elizabethtown, makes and sells tobacco harvesting equipment.

The petition filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Wilson last month said the Taylor firm had debts of $2,667,376 and assets of $1,159,475. The action is filed under Chapter 7 of the federal bankruptcy laws. A meeting of creditors is scheduled May 25 in federal bankruptcy court in Wilmington.

Taylor, listed as president, is serving a 20-year prison sentence after being convicted for participating in a scheme to burn warehouses owned by a business rival, state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie.

Taylor won the Democratic Party nomination to his fourth term in the N.C. House but resigned after pleading guilty to charges of unlawful burning and conspiracy.

According to testimony in Bertie County Superior Court, Taylor paid two Clarkton men $5,000 each to burn Harrington Manufacturing Co. in Lewiston April 23. Harrington and Taylor had been adversaries in a patent infringement case in federal court, and Harrington had been awarded a $350,000 judgment.

The Harrington judgement was the largest of five listed in Taylor's bankruptcy petition, which said Taylor's firm paid Harrington $100,000 in October. Other judgments were to the Internal Revenue Service, the Industrial Engine and Equipment Co., Fafnir Bearing-Textron Co. and the N.C. Employment Security Commission.

In 1960, a team of New York experts met a team of Los Angeles all-stars in the first of what was to become a series of intercity matches. Los Angeles eked out a narrow win, but the New Yorkers could point to several hands where they beat themselves. This was one of them.

At both tables West opened one diamond, and both Norths chose to take advantage of the vulnerability to make a light one heart overcall. The Los Angeles squad reached three no trump in quick time. New York languished in four clubs on the auction shown.

Bridge World Magazine submitted the hand to a panel of experts to adjudicate blame for the disaster. Their decision will appear in the magazine's "You Be the Judge" feature in April. Readers of this column are invited to take part in a competition, to see if they agree with the judges' verdict.

To enter, you must decide which player, in the opinion of the experts, is most to blame for the catastrophe. Also, which of the bids the panel will select as the worst. Your entry might read: East (most to blame), 2 diamonds (worst bid); or West, 3 hearts. (Note that the player who is adjudged the most guilty might not necessarily be the one who made the worst bid. To enter, send your verdict and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Judgment," The Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025. (Correspondents from outside the United States and Canada may send postal coupons instead of stamps; Canadian readers, please send loose stamps.)

All who enter will be sent a copy of the panel's vote and comments, plus the staff's analysis. If you correctly predict the panel's vote on BOTH questions, you will also be sent a copy of the magazine that includes the "Judge" article. Entries must be postmarked no later than April 18.

Detention For War Critique

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former president and army commander Leopoldo Galtieri has been placed under detention for 60 days for criticizing the way Argentine officers waged the Falkland Islands war, the official Telam news agency says.

The agency said Galtieri, who was forced to retire because of Argentina's defeat in the war, was issued the punishment by Gen. Cristino Nicolaides, the current army commander.

Argentina's military code empowers the commander to sanction any active or retired officer whose conduct is judged to have damaged the army's honor.

Galtieri, 56, was head of the ruling military junta when Argentine troops invaded the Falklands April 2, 1982. He was sacked after the Argentines surrendered to British troops who recaptured the British colony to end the 74-day war.

A private Argentine news agency, DYN, said Galtieri, who has been a virtual recluse in his suburban home for the past nine months, probably would serve the 60-day detention at a military compound in the Buenos Aires area.

Nicolaides also established an army Tribunal of Honor to review Galtieri's conduct, Telam said Monday night. The tribunal could strip Galtieri of his right to wear his uniform and halt his military pension.

Galtieri, in an interview published April 2 in the newspaper Clarin, said he was "surprised" by the surrender of Argentines in the Falklands, known here as the Malvinas, to the British on June 14.

"I thought we could have put up more of a fight," he said. "Not that we were going to win, but that we would offer more resistance."

Galtieri has placed most of the blame for the defeat on Gen. Mario Menendez, who became military governor of the islands off Argentina's coast following the occupation and at various times vowed to defend the islands "to the last drop of blood."

"Menendez disillusioned me," Galtieri told Clarin. "It is one thing to talk about dying and another thing to die. Every day that passed, he shrank five centimeters in my eyes."

Local newspapers said Menendez asked Nicolaides to form the army tribunal to clear his name.

Argentina claims sovereignty over the Falklands, accusing Britain of ousting Argentine authorities and settlers in 1833.

Sets Record In 'Gulping' Eggs

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — It takes a hard-boiled type to gulp down 36 pickled quail eggs in a half-minute.

But Kirk Jordan of Grand Prairie claimed a share of the world record in the event by doing just that over the weekend.

Jordan, a member of a team fielded by the Wax Museum of the Southwest, beat 13 others in the world championship contest.

The contest was part of the two-day Eighth Annual Prairie Dog Chili Cook Off and World Championship of Pickled Quail-Egg Eating.

Pitt Community College Serving Industrial Needs

Employees of three Pitt County industries are involved in specialized classes at Pitt Community College covering machine, shop theory and emergency medical first responder training.

According to PCC officials, one of the major functions of the college is to serve the various types of industrial training or retraining needs of the county, and these specialized courses were designed with this in mind.

"These offerings have been conducted in a practical, flexible manner in which various skills have been tailored to meet specific industrial needs," said Ola Porter, assistant dean for continuing education at PCC. "We have experienced some very fine relationships with many of our local industries in Pitt County while cooperatively providing in-plant training and on-campus training programs."

Thirteen employees from Empire Brushes are among those who have been involved with the machine shop theory and practice courses. The courses, according to Jack Robinson, coordinator of cooperative skills training at PCC, were designed to train production mechanics to properly use the lathes and milling machines, enabling them to fabricate and repair machine parts.

Stanley Zicherman, manufacturing superintendent of Empire Brushes Inc., said this course, the fourth in a series completed by Empire employees and maintenance staff, helps eliminate loss of production due to machine down-time and waiting for parts ordered from vendors.

Zicherman said the courses have been "highly successful in upgrading employees."

"We have found that the individual has been given a basic foundation in machine shop practices which also helps to build his skills and understanding of the shop's capabilities and functions," said Zicherman.

"Our student trainees can now speak to the machinist in his own language and be more assured of having the proper job done, when needed, without misunderstanding," he added.

Similar training of employees has in the past been conducted at Prepshirt Manufacturing Co., Procter & Gamble, Vermont American, Grady-White Boats and Union Carbide. Plans are now being made for classes at TRW Inc.

In addition, two classes in emergency medical "first responder" training have been conducted for 21 Burroughs Wellcome employees. These classes provided training in administering proper medical attention or lifesaving services during emergency situations until a professional lifesaving group arrives.

"We very much appreciate the assistance provided by PCC in arranging for these courses to be taught at our plant," said John McConney, Burroughs Wellcome Greenville site general manager.

"This is important for us since we are establishing an emergency medical response team made up of employee volunteers who have been trained in first aid and will be available on the spot to respond to medical emergencies and plant injuries," he added.

Ten employees of Simpson Industries will soon complete a class in machine shop math and blueprint reading designed to provide training in both decimal and metric math and in machine blueprint reading.

According to PCC officials, such training shows the trainee how to set up equipment and lay out the proper parts for machining Diesel engine component parts according to blueprint specifications.

Gene Hiner, plant manager of Simpson Industries, said his company was "highly pleased" with the training program.

"Our employees seemed to grasp the techniques and methods of what was being taught, as well as the technical details to accomplish quality machining methods," said Hiner.

The following instructors taught the courses: William Griner, Empire Brushes; Kathleen Sullivan and Fred Tetterton, Burroughs Wellcome, and Gary Smith, Don Williams and Joe Pasell, Simpson Industries.

"This type of training is just another way of serving the people and industries in our community and we are pleased to be a part of it," said Jim Fulcher, chairman of the PCC Machinist Department.

According to Jack Robinson, PCC coordinator of cooperative skills training, the college's ability to respond to industries' training needs has increased in the last two years.

"This is due to dedication by state officials to provide more jobs to the people of North Carolina and the increased funding for new industry training and the cooperative skills training program," he said.

PCC SERVES INDUSTRY ... Employees of three local industries are involved in specialized training courses taught by Pitt Community College designed to upgrade and increase their job skills. In the program are, left to right, Richard Garris of Empire Brushes; PCC Machine Shop Chairman Jim Fulcher; instructor Bill Griner; George Campbell and Robert Leggett, both of Empire Brushes.

'Troop A' Cites A Reduced Toll

There were 15 fewer traffic deaths in the 22 northeastern counties in Highway Patrol Troop A in 1982 than in 1981, Troop Commander Carl Gilchrist said Monday.

Gilchrist said 139 persons died on the highways in the troop in 1982, while 154 died in 1981.

The 142 Highway Patrolmen in the troop, with headquarters in Greenville, charged drivers with 56,790 traffic law violations during 1982. Gilchrist said 7,964 drivers were charged with driving under the influence during the year, an average of 76.2 arrests per trooper. The total represents a 12 percent increase of DUI arrests over 1981 and was the second highest troop total in the state.

Gilchrist said 7,184 chemical tests for alcohol and drugs were administered by Highway Patrolmen in the troop during the year.

The officer also said 261,520 drivers licenses were checked during the period, and 40,413 written warnings were issued, 302 of which were for violations of the child restraint law which went into effect July 1, 1982.

The troopers in the 22 counties investigated 7,489 accidents during the year — an 8 percent increase over 1981; served 9,730 revocations and suspensions; rendered courtesies to 20,859 motorists; and presented 320 public information programs to various groups, in addition to various appearances on television and radio programs.

Gilchrist said patrolmen in the troop performed more than 150 blood and other medically related relays, such as organs donated for transplants, during 1982.

The average cost per mile for operating the troop's fleet of patrol cars was 13.44 cents, Gilchrist said, which was the lowest troop average in the state.

NCAA Denies Wolfpack Trip

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The NCAA has voted not to allow the North Carolina State basketball team to accept an offer from a private company to fly the team to Washington to meet President Reagan.

University Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton said today he was notified by Dr. John Toner, director of athletics at the University of Connecticut, that the administrative committee of the NCAA "voted on our request and has denied our appeal."

"The rule therefore remains in effect that the university may not pay the expenses of the team for the trip to Washington, nor can anyone else acting on behalf of the university."

Poulton said he will work at the next meeting of the NCAA to change the rule, which prevents the university or anyone on the university's behalf from paying for post-season travel beyond 100 miles.

Capitol Broadcasting Co. had offered to pay for the team's travel to Washington after it learned that the university could not pay the team's way.

President Reagan had scheduled a meeting with the Wolfpack on Monday, but the meeting had to be postponed while the school waited for a ruling from the NCAA. Poulton said as a result of the NCAA ruling, the trip has been canceled.

Reagan invited the team to the White House after it won the NCAA championship in Albuquerque, N.M., beating Houston 54-52.

Toner told Poulton that he will support Poulton's attempt to change the rule.

Poulton said the invitation to the White House "was more than a social visit. I think it amounts to a decision by the president that there is a national interest involved. The way North Carolina State played captured the imagination of the man on the street."

"I judge that the president wanted to recognize the outstanding performance of our team, which was cast as the underdog in many of its games. We appreciate so much their generous offer. I'm just very disappointed we can't accept it."

Corrections On Festival Events

The times for the following upcoming Shad Festival events listed in Sunday's Daily Reflector were not correct:

•The Hickory Shad Fishing Contest dates are from Jan. 1 until noon Wednesday.

•The Archery Tournament will be held Sunday afternoon, not Saturday.

•The Historical Museum will feature weaving on the 200-year-old Blizzard Loom, not rug hooking. Rug Hooking will be demonstrated separately.

•Square dancing will be done by the Ayden Allemanders and clogging by the Capital City Cloggers and by the Buck Swamp Kickin' Cloggers, who will also give free clogging lessons.

•The Golf Tournament will be held all day Saturday and Sunday, not just Saturday.

The Shad Festival begins in Grifton Wednesday and will continue through Sunday.

Bright is the most enjoyable and delightful cigarette I have ever had the pleasure to smoke.

I love the clean, fresh taste it leaves in my mouth. It has no "after taste" and that's great.

I recently purchased a package of your new product, "Bright 100's." I must say that I truly enjoyed the taste. There was no "empty" taste like the other low tar cigarettes. I thought for a moment that they really weren't low tar! I would like to thank the company for such a wonderful tasting cigarette.
