Agency Board Votes Disapproval Another 'No' To Hospital Plan

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency governing board, following recommendations of an ECHSA project review committee, voted Wednesday night to disapprove an application for a certificate of need for a 65-bed private psychiatric hospital in Greenville.

The board also rejected bids for two other private psychiatric facilities, one in Rocky Mount and the other at River Bend near New Bern, but gave approval to an $8.5 million expansion plan at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and a PCMH-East Carolina University School of Medicine proposal to establish an open heart surgery program at PCMH.

The ECHSA board's action on the Charter Medical Inc. application for a private psychiatric hospital in Greenville was rejected without comment or dissenting vote after the review committee report recommending the disapproval of the application was read.

The project review committee cited the same reasons for recommending disapproval of all three psychiatric facilities. Their report said the three proposals were: "inconsistent with the philosophy, goals and objectives" of the health systems plan to have mental health services deinstitutionalized and provided "... by community hospitals and community mental health centers;" that patients can be cared for in community hospitals at less cost; and "the applicant does not have sufficient support from existing health and social service providers in the area to be served by the facility to assure necessary or appropriate referral, back-up and support services."

In addition to the PCMH expansion and open heart surgery applications, the governing board also approved applications by Beaufort County Hospital for replacement of a 12-bed intensive care unit, and by Nash General Hospital for a 76-bed expansion.

In approving the $4.26 million Nash General application for 64 medical-surgical beds and 12 intensive care beds, the board rejected an application by Rocky Mount Sanitarium for an additional 52 medical-surgical beds costing $4.4 million.

The health agency board also disapproved applications by Healthcare Management Group, Omni Health Services and Southeastern Health Services for private hospitals in Dare County, which presently has no hospital.

The review committee said proposals by the three firms were inconsistent with the health systems plan and the state medical facilities plan and lacked support from residents of the county.

Healthcare proposed a 50-bed hospital costing $6.06 million, while Omni proposed a 50-bed facility costing $6.8 million. Southeastern's application was for a $4.7 million 40-bed hospital.

The certificate of need applications, with the ECHSA recommendations, now go to the state Department of Human Resources for final review and action.

The ECHSA, a private, non-profit group funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, serves 29 eastern North Carolina counties by planning changes in the health care system, developing needed services, and reviewing and making recommendations to the Department of Human Resources on proposed changes in the health care system.

Storms Follow Flood

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer
Thunderstorms clobbered Mississippi with so much rain that some homes spared by last week's floods were soaked today by water gushing down the streets.

Meanwhile, a blustery storm spreading up to 11 inches of snow shut down schools and roads in the northern Plains.

Firefighters blocked by floodwaters had to let a house burn down in Vicksburg, Miss., and the waist-deep flash floods caused by 5 inches of rain chased at least 500 people from their homes around Jackson.

Power lines were down and hundreds of schools were closed in Minnesota today because of wet snow flung around by winds gusting up to 53 mph. The blinding "near blizzard" forced plows off the clogged roads in some parts of the state, officials said.

Snow in Nebraska shut down public and parochial schools in Omaha, and most highways in the state were packed with ice or snow. One man was killed in a highway crash.

Up to 7 inches of snow fell on South Dakota overnight and winds up to 40 mph forced many travelers into truck stops.

"I was trying to keep from being blown off the road," said Rick Thielen, who couldn't drive his empty bus faster than 20 mph Wednesday night on the highway between Redwood Falls, Minn., to Sioux Falls, S.D.

As the storm in Mississippi dumped 4 inches of rain in a little more than an hour, police received at least 100 calls requesting help for evacuations. They tapered off about midnight, but Jackson city spokesman Brad Carter estimated that 500 people fled their homes and that 150 houses and businesses were flooded early today.

No injuries were reported and three schools were opened as emergency shelters, officials said.

The flooding affected hundreds of houses "that have never taken water before," police spokesman Brad Carter said.

A fire destroyed a section of an auto dealership at the height of the storm in downtown Jackson, and firefighters in Vicksburg, Miss., had to let a house burn down when flooded streets kept them from reaching the blaze, said Vicksburg Police officer Rudolph Walker.

"We've got boats out, the civil defense, anybody who is able to get the people out of their houses," Walker said about flooding in that west-central Mississippi city.

Winds from a thunderstorm downed tree limbs and power lines and lifted the roof off a small building in Pontotoc, Miss., while marble-size hail was reported near Bolton, officials said.

A Tax Deadline Looms

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is gearing up to receive about 15 million tax returns the rest of this week — and one of them will be from the boss.

Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. said his return is ready to drop into the mail, but he's waiting to receive some paperwork about an investment. He plans to mail it well before the Friday midnight deadline.

If you're one of the 25 million couples or individuals who waited until the last week to file, Egger doesn't hold that against you. "Why pay it until you have to?" he said in an interview Wednesday. "This may sound like heresy but, nevertheless, it's good money management."

Egger's advice does not apply, of course, to the nearly 80 percent of taxpayers who get a refund. The sooner you file, IRS always says, the sooner you get your money.

IRS expects between 96 million and 97 million couples and individuals to file returns this year, up about 1 million from 1982. Nearly 62.1 million had filed through last week. About 2.7 million are expected to ask for a four-month extension for filing, but they'll have to submit the request on Form 4868 by midnight Friday and accompany it with a check for estimated taxes.

Another 1.2 million or so will miss the deadline and have to pay a late filing penalty. Others, including Americans abroad, have different filing deadlines.

With the growth in population, IRS had expected that returns filed so far this year to have been about 1 million above last year's mark. In fact, the number is down about 800,000 and nobody has a sure-fire explanation.

However, Egger said, the drop-off in filings does not indicate more Americans are joining the ranks of tax cheats. He said public accountants tell him they have never seen a year in which people were so slow to have returns prepared.

"I suspect a lot of it is just people with a balance due who are just dragging their feet," Egger said.

Although the average refund paid so far this year is $723, up about 2.5 percent from 1982, the total amount of refunds is down about 6 percent. Egger attributes that mainly to the recession, speculating that many people reduced amounts withheld from their paychecks last year so they would have a higher take-home pay. That means the government has to refund less.

On another subject, Egger said there is no practical way, without withholding, for the IRS to stop cheating on interest and dividends. Withholding of 10 percent is due to start July 1, but Congress is under pressure to repeal it.

The IRS would have to add as many as 40,000 more people to its 88,000-person payroll to match all interest and dividend earning reports against tax returns in an effort to catch cheaters, Egger said.

Up to 20 million returns have some sort of discrepancy on interest and dividends, Egger said. Without withholding, IRS would have to check each of those returns, at a cost of more than $1 billion a year, he added.

"That is unacceptable when you consider we audit (only) about 1.2 million returns now. The very thought of having to contact another 18 million to 20 million is simply not in the cards," he said.

Walesa's Wife Searched, Quizzed By Gdansk Police

By SYLWESTER KRUPPA

Associated Press Writer
GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Danuta Walesa, wife of Solidarity chief Lech Walesa, said she was frisked and questioned by Gdansk police for three hours today about her husband's whereabouts during his absence from home between April 9-11.

She said she told the interrogating officers she had no idea.

tion Wednesday.

Mrs. Walesa appeared in good spirits on her return home from Gdansk police headquarters and told Western reporters she had been asked about her husband's whereabouts during his absence from home between April 9-11.

She said she told the interrogating officers she had no idea.

"I do not know where he was. After all, he is a grown-up person and as far as I am concerned he was simply away for three days. I am not interested where he was," she said she told the officers.

She described the officers as polite "even though they frisked me prior to questioning, possibly looking for a hidden bomb."

Walesa told reporters just before he drove with his wife to the police station, "I told Danuta to refuse to answer any questions."

"I refused to answer them myself, as to where I was and what I had been doing," said Walesa, visibly upset over the police decision to interrogate his wife.

The summons ordering Mrs. Walesa to the police station said authorities wanted to question her as a "witness," but did not specify the nature of the inquiry.

On Wednesday, her husband was interrogated by police in Gdansk for almost five hours about a secret meeting with underground union leaders.

Walesa's detention occurred a day after he disclosed that he met over the weekend with five fugitive Solidarity leaders trying to revive the outlawed labor movement.

It was the second time Walesa was detained since his release from an 11-month martial law internment in November. He was picked up by police and driven around Gdansk for nine hours Dec. 16 to keep him from addressing a rally outside the Lenin shipyard, where Solidarity was born in August 1980.

By announcing the weekend meeting, Walesa appeared to be trying to see how far the authorities would allow him to go in maintaining his public role as Solidarity leader.

"As a free man, I have a right to meet with anyone, even criminal elements, so long as the meeting has no criminal intent," Walesa told reporters after he returned to his apartment Wednesday evening.

His spokesman, Adam Kinaszewski, said the 39-year-old labor leader "didn't confirm or deny" to the police that he met with the Solidarity underground. "He simply refused to make any kind of statement."

As armed police bundled Walesa off in a red van for questioning, he yelled to reporters, "Tell the whole world they are breaking the law."

Under Polish law police may detain people for up to 48 hours without charge, a tactic they used often in dealing with Walesa and other labor activists.

Arafat Calls A Parley

By The Associated Press

Yasser Arafat asked his 15-member executive committee to meet in Tunis within 24 hours to discuss King Hussein's decision to break off talks with the PLO on a common negotiating position on Mideast peace, his spokesman said today.

Hussein halted the talks after the Palestine Liberation Organization refused to allow Jordan to represent the PLO in peace negotiations with Israel. Hussein has not responded to Arafat's comments at a news conference in Stockholm on Wednesday that the PLO was ready to resume talks with Hussein. Arafat arrived in Tunis early today.

Jordanian officials told The Associated Press in Amman today that the king's decision would depend on the PLO's willingness to offer new compromises. On Sunday, Hussein said he was withdrawing from the talks with Arafat and blamed the PLO for breaking a tentative agreement to cooperate in negotiations based on a modified version of President Reagan's Middle East peace plan.

Arafat's spokesman, Ahmed Abdel Rahman, told The Associated Press in Tunis today that the cutoff in negotiations was only a "pause" and not a breakdown. "The recent Palestinian-Jordanian talks were only a phase in a long series of uninterrupted dialogues," he said. "These negotiations will resume quickly at all levels."

Abdel Rahman said the PLO executives are especially anxious to break the impasse with Jordan because it forced Moroccan King Hassan to postpone the Arab summit conference he was planning to convene this weekend until early May.

"The PLO wants this summit more than ever and considers its convocation an urgent necessity to establish a common Arab position," Ahmed Abdel Rahman said.

Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told reporters in Cairo today he believes "there is no alternative to King Hussein as the negotiator."

CHURCH GETS STEEPLE — The Oakmont Baptist Church had a finishing touch placed on the building Wednesday with the delivery of a new steeple. The church building was constructed in 1967 and has not had a steeple. Church member A.B. Whitley donated the funds needed to purchase the structure. SUBSTITUTE PARENTS FOR EDUCATIONAL PLANNING SOUGHT Substitute parents to take part in educational planning for residents of Caswell Center, a Kinston state facility for mentally retarded citizens, are being appealed for by Amy O'Neal of Caswell Center.

Some mentally retarded persons under 21 years old at the center have no parents to represent them at a yearly meeting held to discuss the educational needs of each. The child who has no parent has no one from the outside world to make sure that the plan developed is best for his individual needs, she said. Volunteer recruiter Earl Williams said the meeting will last about three hours. He said it is hoped that each person who volunteers to serve in this capacity will spend time meeting his or her child, seeing what his or her life is like, questioning the kind of care he or she receives and making an effort to see that his or her care is the very best it can be. For more information about this opportunity to share, call Caswell Center's Volunteer Services office, 522-5125, or write to the office, 2415 W. Vernon Avenue, Kinston, N.C. 28501.

—Pied Piper Of Walking— —Says Brisk Pace Is Best—

By SHARON RUTENBERG
CHICAGO (UPI) — Howard Jacobson stopped running 26 years ago.

"I converted to walking and I never stopped," he said. "Competition is not where it's at. Health is where it's at."

Jacobson, 52, known as the "Pied Piper of Walking," has coached thousands of people — from senior citizens to Olympic athletes — on how to turn a walk into a workout.

"I plan to spread the word nationwide," he said in announcing a series of "healthwalking" clinics in major cities. The first was March 27 in Tampa, Fla., and the last will be in Phoenix, Ariz., May 1.

Healthwalking, a fast-paced walk using vigorous arm motions, actually provides better overall body fitness than jogging, and is easier and safer, Jacobson said.

It's for all ages, "from the 20s through the 70s and beyond," he said.

"By adding more efficient arm movements and picking up the pace, walking can become a more effective overall body conditioner than running or jogging, without their injury risks."

Four 30-minute walks weekly at a brisk pace of about 15 minutes a mile can provide cardiovascular, muscular and calorie-burning benefits equivalent to those achieved by running or jogging, he said.

Jacobson said a rising number of injuries are attributed to running or jogging.

A recent National Center for Disease Control study showed more than one-third of people who run more than 6 miles a week sustain running-related injuries, most commonly to their knees, he said.

"In running, the foot touches down with an impact two to three times greater than that of walking. Also, in running the bent knee must bear the brunt of the impact, while a walker touches down with knees straightened. So, the whole leg can absorb the impact."

Jacobson also said walking burns more calories because, in smaller strides, walkers take more steps per minute.

Running involves a pushing motion, but walking uses both pulling and pushing "which is much better overall."

Jacobson said brisk walking is the safest exercise for sedentary older individuals who decide to get back into shape.

"For both the underexercised and the active athlete suffering injuries from overexertion, brisk walking can be the happier medium," he said. "I advocate the most natural exercise of all."

For maximum benefit, Jacobson suggested walking for at least 30 minutes at a time, ideally moving briskly enough to cover 2 miles or more during that period.

He said a 1979 study showed twice as many people were walking for exercise than running — with 10 million more people added recently.

Jacobson, author of the 1980 book "Racewalk to Fitness: The Sensible Alternative to Jogging and Running" (Simon & Schuster), founded the New York Walkers Club. The champion racewalker annually walks the New York City Marathon course faster than some run it.

He also is fitness consultant to G.D. Searle & Co. of suburban Skokie, which jointly announced the program to celebrate the 50th anniversary of its natural-fiber laxative Metamucil.

ACME Chapter To Have Meet

FARMVILLE — The ACME Chapter of Eastern North Carolina will have its meeting Saturday evening from 7:30-9:30 at the First Baptist Church here.

Trinidad and Tobago has the highest per capita income in Latin America. The Inter-American Development Bank says that in 1981 the small Caribbean nation located off the northeastern coast of Venezuela had a per capita income of $2,919. This compared to $2,615 for second-place Venezuela. Trinidad and Tobago, Venezuela and Mexico are the three leading oil-exporting countries of Latin America.

Equipment To Be Purchased For Hospital

The Greenville Service League will purchase two Central Monitoring Stations for Cardiac Care Unit 1 at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The request from Dr. Eugene Furth and the Hospital Gifts Committee said the equipment could be purchased for approximately $18,700.

Brenda Gray, of the Mental Health Association of Pitt County, gave an information program on mental health and emphasized the need for volunteers to work with their bereavement program.

Follies Chairman Mrs. Edward Smith reported on the follies production "Strut-tin' Southern" to be held May 13-14. A kick-off party will be held April 26 at 7 p.m. at 811 Dickinson Ave. and anyone interested in performing in the show is invited to attend and meet the New York director.

President Mrs. Frank Layne heard committee reports including the Bloodmobile report from Mrs. Kelly Barnhill. At D.H. Conley High School, 192 units were collected with 21 members working 64 hours and the March visit at Fletcher Dormitory netted 162 units with 71 hours worked by 20 volunteers. The next visit will be at Mendenhall Student Center. Mrs. C.W. Harvey Jr. said that 350 Easter tray favors were made for hospital patients and material was given to the layette fund and three layettes were furnished in March.

The Lending Chest had three calls and one item of equipment returned. Two requests were handled through emergency charity and the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund received nine memorials and answered four calls.

Finance Chairman Mrs. J.H. Hudson reported on the 1983 Charity Ball and profits of $9,200 were raised for the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund.

Can Double Deadlock Be Broken?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: To make a long story short, my sister has dumped Tammy, her 3-year-old child, on our mother, and it has us all upset — especially Dad.

It started out when Sis asked Mom if she could leave Tammy overnight, then for the weekend, and now she's living at Mom's full time. Sis drops in to see her now and then.

Poor Mom is exhausted and has no time for anything else. (She has two other grandchildren.) We feel that Mom and Dad have raised their family, and they shouldn't have to raise a grandchild.

We think Sis should face up to her responsibilities as a mother, but she's living it up and having fun instead. Meanwhile, Mom is raising the little girl. Mom knows she's being taken advantage of, but she doesn't say anything to Sis because she's afraid Sis will dump the kid on someone else, then Mom wouldn't know how her granddaughter was being treated.

Is there a solution? Maybe Mom would listen to advice from you.

END OF OUR ROPE

DEAR END: Your sister appears unwilling to raise her 3-year-old daughter. Your mother appears unwilling to allow the child to be raised by anyone else. Unless that double deadlock can be broken by appeal and reason, Tammy will be raised by her grandmother.

DEAR ABBY: We have a mildly retarded 17-year-old son. (I'll call him "Bill.") We can't leave him home alone (especially at night) except for short periods, and he is too old for a "sitter," so we take him with us wherever we go. Bill is friendly, well-mannered, neatly groomed, and he's not a source of awkwardness or embarrassment to anyone.

Our problem: When we are invited to a dinner at someone's house, is it all right to call the hostess and ask if Bill may be included? After all, he's not a small child — he's almost an adult. Sometimes the hostess is a stranger — for example, when we're invited to a wedding and don't know the bride's family.

Most folks, when they learn the situation, are happy to include our son, but occasionally they don't want an extra person. How can we tactfully find out if Bill is welcome? I might add, if we can't bring Bill, we won't go either.

BILL'S PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: You say your mildly retarded 17-year-old son can't be left home alone, yet he is too old for a sitter. If he can't be left home alone, regardless of his age, he needs a sitter, and you should make provisions for one rather than take him everywhere with you.

When you call your hostess whom you hardly know and "explain the circumstances," whether she wants an extra person or not, she will find it almost impossible to exclude your son. That's not fair to her.

I know you mean the best for Bill, but he needs a social life of his own, and by denying him one, you are further handicapping him.

Rather than refusing all invitations that do not include Bill, please consider helping him build a life of his own. He will not always have you around to look after him.

DEAR ABBY: I have yet to see this problem in your column and would appreciate some help from you.

I have this thing about married men. If I meet two men of equal charm and one is married and the other is single, I'll go for the married one every time. I'll even choose one who is engaged, or living with someone, instead of an eligible bachelor who's up for grabs.

I've dated loads of eligible men, but I've yet to find one who does a thing for me.

I would like to get married someday, but I'm 36 and have never met an eligible man I'd want to marry.

LIKES MARRIED MEN

DEAR LIKES: The experts in the field of human behavior would say that you are not ready for a serious commitment, so as an unconscious protective device you find yourself attracted only to men who are unavailable — and therefore safe.

A dutch breakfast for chapter members and their bosses will be held April 29 at the Holiday Inn from 6:30-9 a.m.

Amy Mills was selected as the chapter's outstanding member of the year. She has held several offices and has chaired various committees. The nominating committee submitted a slate of officers and elections will be held this month.

Opportunity In Space

Reliability (another word for painstaking design, preparation and testing procedures) has been a hallmark of America's space shuttles since the first launch of Columbia. The return of Challenger was routine, marked by the customary enthusiasm of its crew for a great flying machine.

The Challenger's debut was the testing of a new design, dissimilar from the first of the fleet which NASA has planned. It was marred by one failure, not connected with the space ship itself, but the failure of a relay satellite which was to play a major role in future shuttle flights. The satellite's attached rocket did not fire long enough, and it did not achieve its intended orbit.

The next shuttle flight is scheduled for June, and it comes to mind it might also serve as the occasion for testing a major facet of its capabilities: the repair and servicing of satellites while in orbit.

Crewmen of the Challenger demonstrated they could perform "chores" in space, and the June flight offers an opportunity to put that capability to good use.

There is a $100 million satellite up there that needs human help to put it into the proper orbit to function its intended purpose. That would be a fitting climactic endeavour in what to date have been experimental voyages.

It's a possibility we look forward to with considerable interest.

Ceremony Is Moved

East Carolina's graduation ceremonies will be outside, hopefully under the sun on May 6.

The decision had been made to hold the ceremonies in Minges Coliseum because of field work being done on Ficklen Stadium. Minges, however, only seats 6,900. Hence, a second decision was made to allow two tickets per graduate so that the crowd could be accommodated properly inside. This caused complaints from student groups. For some it could have meant that brothers, sisters or grandparents could not get in to see the culmination of four years or more of work by the graduates at East Carolina University.

So the decision was made to use the south stands of 35,000-seat Ficklen Stadium. Graduates will not be seated on the field as in the past, however. Instead they will occupy a section of stadium seats.

Problem solved? Not quite. As in the past Minges will be set up as an alternate site for the graduation in case of rain, and given the weather patterns of recent weeks, that is a real possibility.

Act Is Nominated

WASHINGTON — When the 98th Congress retires next year and pundits hold their annual "Worst Piece of Legislation Contest," we'll be ready with a nominee: the Uniform Product Liability Act. It would all but exempt makers of shoddy, unsafe or improperly labeled goods from expensive injury lawsuits.

Introduced by Sen. Robert Kasten (R-Wis.), who is not a lawyer, the legislation represents an all-out assault on judicial redress traditionally available to consumers. Unfortunately, the measure stands a strong chance of passing through Congress by the end of the year.

To hear business tell the story, of course, the Kasten bill is a long-overdue play for clarity. Since the mid-1970s, manufacturers claim, a burgeoning caseload of product-liability suits has left many companies in doubt as to just what is the law from state to state.

Product-liability reform guru Victor Schwartz, who heads an alliance of 150 businesses and trade associations backing the bill, says that industry wants a uniform federal law to define for state courts the conditions under which a manufacturer is liable for injury stemming from product use — usually cars, trucks and pharmaceuticals. Simple enough, right?

Wrong. By Kasten's reckoning, the "uniform" code would effectively rewrite liability standards that have long protected consumers and kept careless companies on their toes. It would relieve manufacturers of "strict" responsibility for design defects and failure to warn consumers while burdening plaintiffs with a long list of standards that must be proven before they recover damages. Every state would feel this flouting of case law.

For example, if a car owner in New Jersey wished to recover damages for a collapsed car roof, under present law he or she would only have to prove that the roof had failed to perform "as reasonably expected" or that the design's risks outweighed its benefits. Kasten's uniform code, however, would require the plaintiff to prove that the manufacturer knew or should have known about the danger — a much more difficult and expensive legal proposition and, ironically, by the current law standards, irrelevant.

Meanwhile, Mary Ann Smith, an American University tort law expert, said the code would simply impose chaos on state courts while offering little guidance on how to interpret it. "State courts will either have a monster on their hands or they'll interpret it in terms that they already know — the old law," Smith said.

Indeed, Smith contends that the body of product liability law is already predictable and, though it has grown quickly in recent years, reliable. That it differs from state to state is natural and not necessarily all that bad (unless you dislike keeping lawyers in business).

Ironically, possible federal godfathering of state court authority has led the Reagan administration to withhold outright support for Kasten's code. While the White House could throw in its weight when the bill gets another commerce committee hearing later this month, the chance is that it will stay on the sidelines.

Yet, as it looks now, Congress won't need a push from Reagan to make life easier for producers, jeopardizing in the process the health and safety of consumers. Given that, during the 1970s, disabling accidents out-distanced lawsuits 20-to-1, a bill such as Kasten's would only reduce manufacturers' incentive for making safe and useful products. More consumers would be injured; fewer of those injured could recover damages.

In the end, the pro-business bill may only drive customers away.

Chicago Echoes Notes Of History

WASHINGTON — Related news stories often come in waves. Over the past several weeks we have experienced a small tide of stories having to do with race, or with alleged discrimination by reason of sex or national origin. The incidents all hang together, and they tell a melancholy tale both of human nature and of the clumsy attempts of government to reform it.

The picture that has developed in Chicago's bitter mayoral election should have surprised no one. It echoes the same history and the same fear that once characterized the segregated South. The South's patterns of discrimination were based upon law; Chicago's were based upon politics and custom, but the effect was the same: The blacks got the dirty end of the stick.

After the Supreme Court's decision of 1954 in the Brown case, the South set about abolishing its structure of legal segregation. It was a painful process, undertaken reluctantly, but many of us predicted at the time that the South would address its racial problems sooner and more successfully than the North would face its problems. In the South blacks and whites were not strangers; they knew one another, worked together, and in their curiously remote intimacy they often shared a deep affection.

None of this was true of Chicago. There the ethnic and racial separation was much sharper.

The virus of racism has affected societies for millennia. In our own time, government has attempted treatment in the form of a supposed miracle drug. We call it "affirmative action." The cure hasn't worked. For the past 10 years the government has been earnestly seeking to achieve higher levels of racial integration in Southern colleges and universities. Just the other day a federal judge in Washington entered one more injunction toward this end. The predominantly white institutions themselves are doing their utmost to attract black students, but there is no way to compel black high school graduates to attend white universities, and the effort lags.

A related story involves Grove City College in Grove City, Pa. This is an old and honorable little college. It accepts no direct federal aid whatever, but some of its students have been receiving Pell Grants and Guaranteed Student Loans. A federal circuit court ruled that if even one student accepts such aid, the effect is to make all of the college's programs and activities subject to federal regulations on sex discrimination. Grove City never has discriminated by reason of sex, but it objects to the heavy hand of federal bureaucracy. In February the Supreme Court agreed to hear the college's appeal.

At the Department of Labor, some revised regulations on discrimination have set off a renewed controversy. The effect of the changes is to exempt an additional class of small employers and to make it marginally more difficult for aggrieved workers to bring class action suits. Here again, idealism and reality have collided. The government's quotas on female plumbers, masons, carpenters and steamfitters have proved impossible of achievement, but the paperwork goes on.

Out in California, litigation sputters along under the Voting Rights Act. The law is intended in part to prevent discrimination against Hispanics. Thus ballots in certain areas must be bilingual. But in an election for what we know in English as Chief Prosecuting Attorney, is a "Fiscal en Jefe" the same thing as a "Procurador de Justicia"? Ballots have it both ways. Is it too much to ask that today's Hispanics learn English as other immigrants have learned it?

The wave rolls on. And despite the ugliness of the Chicago campaign, despite the futility of lawsuits and injunctions and bureaucratic decrees, the encouraging thing is that the picture slowly improves. We have far less racism and sexism than we had when I was born in 1920, and we will have still less in 2020, but be not deceived: These viruses persist in the bloodstream of all mankind. The condition may be relieved, but it will not be cured.

To the editor:

Monday morning I had the misfortune of a house fire. However, my misfortune was greatly reduced by the Greenville City Fire Department.

In this regard, I could go on to tell how the responding units arrived within two minutes of my neighbor placing the call for help or how each firefighter dispatched his duties with the utmost of professionalism and efficiency, while at the same time maneuvering me away from danger with a gentle but firm hand. Or I would tell how each man worked with the same speed and care that any man would if trying to save his own belongings.

But saying, THEY ARE THE BEST, BAR NONE, says it best.

To the editor:

I strongly support the proposal of Charter Medical Corporation to build a 60-bed private psychiatric hospital in Greenville.

It is inconceivable that the Pitt County Hospital Board of Trustees medical staff and county commissioners are against it. The Greenville City Council has failed to vote, saying they are not involved. They should be concerned about such an endeavor which will certainly affect the city, facilities and, above all, the people. In my opinion, the objections are more suppositions and opinions. What are the real reasons for their objections?

1. Is it because the staff fears free enterprise competition?
2. Is it because they fear the loss of government money?
3. Is it because it may diminish their dynasty? Haven't they now got enough to do?

How can they object to a proposal that offers:

1. a $7 million first-class psychiatric hospital without spending one dollar of tax money
2. $500,000 in tax revenue each year
3. Over 100 employees — new jobs
4. annual payroll of $2 million

Charter Pines Hospital will have comprehensive psychiatric services for children and adolescents for short and extensive periods of times. They will also have comprehensive adult psychiatric services and a comprehensive addictive disease service, including a special detoxification program.

These are only two of their excellent programs.

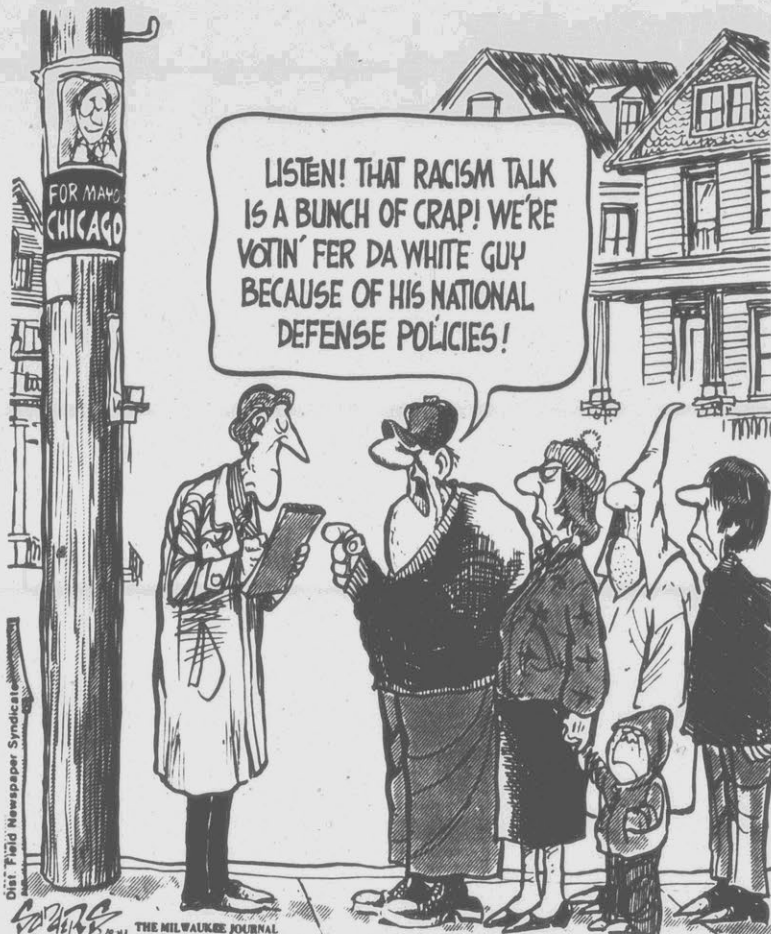

These people are professionals in operating hospitals and must be accountable to the public and their stockholders. I'm sure you know more and more cities are contracting with private industries or contractors to perform numerous services, including hospitals.

In all my years I have never known the government to operate an enterprise equal to the one run by private industry, both in quality of operation and low cost.

It appears to me the cards have been stacked against a free enterprise proposal from the beginning.

Won't you yell loud and tell the bureaucrats and the experts we want a private-ownership psychiatric hospital.

'Rite Of Spring' Continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two new U.S. proposals to reduce the pileup of nuclear weapons are the latest steps in a deadly "Rite of Spring" with the Soviet Union, played before an audience that fears if the superpowers flop the result could be annihilation.

When the curtain rises again on arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, on May 17, it will be the U.S. turn to lead. The chief American negotiator, Paul Nitze, will inform the Soviet delegation that President Reagan is prepared to modify his demand for an agreement banning intermediate-range missiles.

The Soviet response — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's rejection at a Moscow news conference April 2 is not considered final — will be carefully measured by the Kremlin's military judgment and by the impact it will have on the talks.

But the Soviets are sure to keep the gallery in mind as well, for across Europe there is deep concern that without an agreement halting the scheduled deployment of new U.S. missiles in December and dismantling the deadly Soviet SS-20s the risk of nuclear warfare will be high.

Whatever the United States and the Soviet Union think of the other side's weapons-limitation proposals, neither wants to lose the propaganda contest being played out in Geneva, in public statements by their leaders and in the media.

This helps make this spring's arms control negotiations a curiously deadly game. National bargaining positions are based not only on security considerations, but on how they will play in Peoria, Pinsk and, especially, in Western Europe.

The Soviets hope that if they stake out positions that appear reasonable and put the Reagan administration on the defensive, they can weaken the already shaky commitment among many West Europeans to the 1979 NATO decision to deploy new U.S. medium-range missiles beginning in December.

The second set of talks in Geneva, due to resume in early June, involve strategic nuclear weapons — ballistic missiles and bombers that can span oceans and continents.

Strength For Today

There is an amazing story in an article recently published about a farmer named DuBois in a part of southern Morocco which used to be French Equatorial Africa. His neighbors all moved away when the region became infested with poisonous snakes.

But farmer DuBois was not so easily panicked into a quick decision.

He found, after some study, that these snakes could be a boon. He learned how to handle cobras and straightaway began extracting venom from their fangs and shipping it to a laboratory. Today, he has a flourishing business in providing anti-snakebite serum.

Here is a case of a man who takes his life as he finds it and makes the best of it. If God takes away his living and sends him snakes, then snakes will be his living.

The lesson to be gained from this episode is that, if you can't have what you want, make the best out of what you have — even snakes.

Jobs Alone No Longer Cure Poverty

RALEIGH — It seems a fairly common assumption that the best thing we can do to reduce poverty in North Carolina is to create new jobs. For almost 100 years, that assumption has been at the heart of the state's industrial recruitment policy.

As Gov. Jim Hunt has said on so many occasions, the best thing we can do for a poor child is to give his parents a high-paying job.

A report issued by Hunt's own Division of Economic Opportunity says, however, that for 40 percent of the state's poor, a job is not the answer. As North Carolina approaches the year 2000, a greater percentage of the state's poor won't be capable of working. If they're to live above the poverty line, it will have to be the result of government largesse.

Of all the state households living under the poverty line, only 60 percent include someone who is working or who is able to work. Many of those people are working only part-time, or are working full-time at a job that pays so little the family can't be supported on it.

If the state were to experience an economic boom, some of these people would lift themselves above the poverty line. If all of them did, it might raise enough new tax money that the state budget could easily afford better subsistence programs for the 40 percent of poor who cannot work. But that's all dreaming. We're not experiencing such a boom.

"Jobs alone cannot solve the problem for 40 percent of the poverty households because either no household member is employable or employability is too restricted to earn an adequate income," the report, titled "The Changing Face of Poverty," says.

Age and health are certainly two of the biggest factors involved with this 40 percent of the poor population. Elderly folk represent more than a third of the state's poor and they represent the biggest portion of those for whom a job is not the answer to poverty. A great many of these elderly poor are women living alone — or with others not related — with only a Social Security check to keep them alive.

About 10 percent of poor families include a handicapped or disabled person. One out of three poor families has at least one member with a serious illness. These people obviously can't work and they are very dependent on government programs to pay their medical bills.

There is one other group for whom jobs may not be the answer — poor women who are raising a family on their own. Many have no job skills and when they do get a job it pays so poorly that day care costs eat up most of the paycheck.

In 1980, about 10 percent of poor households headed by a woman in North Carolina included children under the age of 6. A majority of these women work. But that isn't enough to keep them above the poverty line.

The nature of the state's economic development also bodes poorly for these women. The state's service and retail sectors are growing fastest and in these areas women — along with other minorities — have traditionally taken the lowest paying jobs. North Carolina has about the highest percentage of its women working. But those women are, for the most part, in low-paying jobs.

Federal budget cutting makes those jobs even less attractive because many services to the working poor are being eliminated.

As we look ahead to the next decade, this problem of non-employable poor looks like it will get worse. The overall population is aging. North Carolina's senior citizen population is expected to top one million very soon and keep growing. Recent years have certainly seen a rise in the number of women supporting their children alone due to divorce, senorior or illegitimacy.

Got The Jump On A Skydiver

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Campus police got the jump on a champion skydiver who landed on top of her own car in a crowded parking lot after her parachute was blown off course.

Linda Dickey, a 22-year-old Auburn University senior from Ozark, was supposed to join two members of the Auburn University Parachute Club as part of a charity stunt Wednesday, but she drifted off target and into the 150-car parking lot.

Ms. Dickey, who won a national collegiate parachuting championship in December, was treated for a few abrasions at the Student Health Center and released, a spokeswoman said.

When Ms. Dickey finally had time to check on the dent she made in her car, she also discovered that university police had given her a ticket for illegal parking.

Urged Support Program Funds

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Officials of southeastern North Carolina towns have been told state laws affecting municipal governments and the money they receive are under attack in Raleigh and Washington.

Staff members of the N.C. League of Municipalities encouraged officials at the regional meeting Tuesday to write their legislators and congressional delegations to rally support.

"We have a real problem in Raleigh," said S. Leigh Wilson, executive director of the league.

For the first time in years, the state has no surplus money and faces a $250 million deficit. Since the state by law has to have a balanced budget, it means the General Assembly is under a lot of pressure.

"When the General Assembly is faced with the grim task of cutting $250 million, they are looking at every single nickel," Wilson said.

The league has been a powerful lobbying group in Raleigh for years, but is facing tough tests this time, Wilson said.

Among the items for the group's attention, Wilson said, are state aid for municipal water systems, state involvement in housing and changes in annexation laws.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Thursday, April 14, 1983 — 5

At the federal level, city and town officials are also facing budget cuts, according to a report prepared by the League of Municipalities staff and presented to members at the meeting.

Among federal programs in the budget, the League of Municipalities and other local government interest groups are putting top priority on general revenue sharing funds.

That federal program, begun in 1972, will end this fall unless it is extended by Congress and local government groups are lobbying for its passage.

West led his ace of diamonds and then shifted to the king of clubs. The normal way for East to show that he holds a doubleton in the suit would be to start an echo by playing the higher of the two cards he holds. Had he yielded to the reflex action, declarer would have wrapped up his four spade contract, for West would surely have continued with the ace of clubs and another, and declarer would have had his ten tricks.

But East realized that he could not overruff dummy. Since he was a very good player, he followed suit with the two of clubs. Now it was West's turn to don his thinking cap.

Since East could not possibly have a trick, it was pretty obvious that the defenders would have to collect their four tricks in the minor suits. But how was West going to reach the East hand for a diamond lead?

Clubs was the only possibility. West had to hope that East's two of clubs was either a singleton or from a holding that included the nine, so at trick three he led his low club. East was rather surprised to find that his nine of clubs held the trick, but he was not so startled that he forgot to switch back to a diamond. West's ruff was the setting trick.

The U.S. in Nicaragua

Recently Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the leftist junta that has ruled Nicaragua since 1979, accused the U.S. of trying to undermine his government. The U.S. has denied those claims and countered with charges that Nicaragua is interfering in the affairs of neighboring nations. However, the U.S. did have close ties with Nicaraguan governments in the past. From 1912 until 1933 U.S. troops were stationed there to protect friendly governments from revolution. During that time, General Augusto Cesar Sandino became a folk hero as the leader of raids against the Marines. Forty years later, the guerrillas who overthrew the pro-U.S. Nicaraguan government in 1979 took the name "Sandinistas" in his honor.

Issue Warrants On A Wounded Man

A Route 9, Greenville, man was in the intensive care unit at Pitt County Memorial Hospital undergoing treatment for a gunshot wound following an incident at a neighbor's house early today that resulted in warrants being issued for the injured man.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that warrants for Claxton Stancill Jr., who was shot in the upper left chest area by Carl Averette, Route 9, Greenville, were secured charging Stancill with assault by pointing a gun and with criminal trespassing.

Tyson said Averette, who was not charged, told deputies that Stancill went to Averette's home on 14th Street Extension (County Road 1704) and threatened him with a gun.

Tyson said deputies were summoned by Averette's wife and the officers had arrived and were headed toward the house when they saw Stancill raise his gun. The deputies said Stancill was then shot by Averette in the chest. Stancill was transported to Pitt Memorial by the Eastern Pines rescue unit.

According to Tyson, Stancill had a 9 mm pistol loaded with 15 rounds of ammunition.

The sheriff said the incident was reported at 1:16 a.m.

Title-Holders

To Be Honored

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's 1983 NCAA basketball champions and North Carolina's 1982 title-holders will be honored by the Legislature and Gov. Jim Hunt Monday night.

The House and Senate have been called to a joint session at 7 p.m. in a resolution filed Wednesday by Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland.

"The intent is to do it up in a dignified and orderly fashion and properly recognize both teams," Hunt said.

N.C. State recently lost a chance to meet President Reagan when the NCAA ruled the trip could not be funded by the university or by private interests in N.C. State's behalf. North Carolina missed its opportunity to be feted last year because the General Assembly was not in session when they won the championship.

Hunt said members of both teams, their coaching staffs and both chancellors would attend the joint session before going to a reception at the Governor's Mansion.

Rep. Gillam Talks Race For Congress

State Rep. John B. Gillam III, who says he is still "feeling the waters out" relative to a possible bid for the U.S. House of Representatives, met here Wednesday night with a large contingent from the 1st Congressional District.

Gillam, who represents the state 6th House District, has said he is strongly considering opposing Rep. Walter B. Jones of Farmville in the 1984 elections.

Gillam said he will make a decision on a congressional bid after traveling throughout the district, meeting with people in rural areas as well as the more populous sections. "While the more populated areas have more voters, rural areas have people who care just as much," he said.

"It is with a great deal of respect for the political system that I am considering entering the race for Congress," said Gillam.

The Windsor resident said today that 179 people from all 21 counties of the 1st District, including some he said drove over three hours, attended the Greenville meeting.

Gillam said the gathering was one of several he plans in upcoming weeks as he attempts to meet with residents of the districts and gauge their support. He said other meetings are scheduled this week in Carteret, Hyde, Dare and Craven counties.

Gillam said he talked to the gathering here on "what I'd like to see for eastern North Carolina, regardless of who is in Congress." He said he pointed out that, "As we approach 1984, our area is in a precarious state, for example the tobacco situation and lack of a guarded industrial development program. It will take active strong leadership to change our economy in the way I foresee it will have to be changed."

He said that in discussing the uncertainties of the tobacco program, "I feel like we are sitting on a keg of dynamite." He also said that many inland residents are not aware of a critical situation that is developing with water in the eastern section and he suggested that by the year 2000 it "will be one of the major issues."

Returned To Do It Again

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Two women who share the same doctor, and gave birth on the same day at the same hospital, returned 23 months later to do it again.

On May 5, 1981, Denise Weldon of Tuscaloosa and Cheryl Tynan of Birmingham gave birth at Baptist Medical Center-Montclair.

Mrs. Weldon had a boy and Mrs. Tynan a girl.

Last week, the two women again entered the Birmingham hospital and at almost the same moment, on April 5, they again had children.

The only change in the new scenario was that Mrs. Weldon had a girl and Mrs. Tynan a boy.

All four children were delivered by Dr. Ronald Goldberg.

The women said they had no idea Dr. Goldberg had been the doctor for both of them. As it turned out, both had visited him, usually on Mondays, during their pregnancies, and both had visited him on the Monday before the births last week.

After the women delivered, Mrs. Weldon recovered in room 419. Mrs. Tynan was next door, in 417.

"It gets odder by the minute, doesn't it?" Mrs. Weldon said. "We had not seen nor heard of them in two years."

The hospital staff is wondering if the couples are planning another encore.

Hazardous Waste Hearing On April 27

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A public hearing will be held April 27 on two bills to keep hazardous wastes out of North Carolina landfills, but that was the only issue resolved by a House subcommittee considering the bills Wednesday.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, who filed the stricter of the two bills, argued for nearly 30 minutes to have separate hearings on each bill.

"Hazardous wastes and public hearings go hand-in-hand," he said. "It's better to err on the side of too much time for public comment."

But Rep. Robert McAllister, D-Rockingham, chairman of the House Water and Air Resources Committee and several other members objected to the idea.

"I do not see the need for a long and exhaustive hearing," said McAllister.

"If there's any compelling need after we have that one to have another, we'll have another one," added Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham.

The rest of the 1½-hour meeting revolved around a substitute for the bill introduced by Rep. Billy Clark, D-Cumberland.

Mavretic's bill would prevent the landfill storage of several hazardous wastes in any concentration, subject to an appeal through a public hearing and scientific review. Clark's bill, backed by the Department of Human Resources and Gov. Jim Hunt, sets "threshold concentrations" below which certain wastes may be stored.

In addition, Mavretic's bill would allow North Carolina law to be stricter than federal hazardous waste regulations, while Clark's measure would allow only minor exceptions.

Mavretic was suspicious about changes introduced Wednesday, saying the department "isn't sure what it's doing."

"How many committee substitutes are we going to have before we get down to talking about the bill?" he asked.

He said one major change was moving authority over hazardous wastes from the Governor's Waste Management Board to the Health Services Commission.

Mavretic questioned whether the new version would outlaw polychlorinated biphenyls from landfills and was told by a department spokesman that PCBs had been left out of the rewrite through "an oversight."

Soil contaminated with PCBs, which have been linked with cancer in laboratory animals, was put in the state's first hazardous-waste landfill in Warren County last year over extensive protests by residents.

Mavretic was also suspicious about provisions that would give the commission the power to decide whether hazardous waste generators could prevent wastes and whether there were commercially feasible alternatives to landfills.

"Here we have a kind of Catch-22," he said. "Since you can landfill hazardous waste, you don't have to worry about all those other things."

The subcommittee adjourned without acting on either bill.

Unreliable Role In Emergency Radios

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Edmund Deaton of Greensboro recalls several years ago trying for three days to telephone an area radio station, only to learn finally that the station's phone was on the blink.

That was just a routine call, but Deaton wonders what would have happened had he been trying to get the station to activate its emergency broadcast system because a tornado was approaching.

Deaton is the assistant coordinator of the Greensboro-Guilford County Emergency Management Assistance Agency — the office that swings into action in the event of a tornado, nuclear accident, flood or other disaster.

The station he was trying to call is the primary control radio station in the area's emergency broadcast system. As such, it is responsible for feeding warnings about natural and man-made disasters to other radio stations in a five-county area.

Deaton's experience is not isolated, officials say.

Richard Colwell Jr., who recently retired as chief meteorologist at the National Weather Service station at Greensboro's Regional Airport, recalls the time severe thunderstorms were approaching an area served by the weather station.

He called the primary control radio station for that area — he declines to identify the station — but found that the only person, a part-time disc jockey, had no idea how to activate the station's emergency broadcast system. Colwell had to spend 15 minutes explaining how.

"The system finally got activated, but it was no practical use by then," Colwell says. "Speed was important. If it doesn't get activated for 20 minutes, then the event was over."

Marilyn Braun, coordinator of the local emergency agency and Ed Deaton's boss, says that current emergency broadcast procedures are "sloppy" and that her office has long been pushing for reforms.

Rose To Seek Eliminate Tobacco Crop 'Feudalism'

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., said Wednesday he will try to eliminate what critics call the feudal system of allotment ownership in the tobacco price support program.

Rose, the chairman of the House Agriculture tobacco subcommittee, promised critics of the program he will move to end high cash lease costs farmers are now paying for the right to grow tobacco in the South and to get more of the federally issued growing rights into the hands of the actual producers.

Critics of the support program have been extremely vocal about what they call a feudalistic system that keeps control of the U.S. crop mainly in the hands of non-producers who hold growing rights — acreage allotments and production quotas — that were issued by the government decades ago.

Backed up by various studies, they say most growers of the nation's major types of tobacco must pay those allotment and quota holders for the privilege of growing a crop. They say that rental cost alone accounts for 30 percent to 60 percent of production costs and is a major reason for the uncompetitive price of American tobacco.

"I agree that there have been some excessive rents, and we're going to take every step to reduce that," Rose told Rep. Thomas Petri, R-Wis., a leader of the latest drive to abolish the tobacco program.

In addition, Rose promised, "We're going to get the tobacco allotment back as close as we can to the tobacco producer."

North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham told the subcommittee that the tobacco program must be preserved and that a "vocal but very small minority" of leaf growers advocate ending the program.

"My best advice is to do whatever is necessary to preserve the program in a workable form and pursue the course of action best benefitting the total tobacco interests," said Graham.

Petri acknowledged that Congress began to correct some problems last year when it passed legislation requiring tobacco growers and allotment holders to pay an assessment to cover any potential future losses from the support program and mandating that corporations and institutions holding allotments turn them over to actual producers by December.

"But that process of unwinding is going to take very long, and I'm not sure the industry can afford to sit back," he said.

Rose told Petri that any attempt to solve the program's problems can only be accomplished through cooperation among the industry and the program's supporters and critics.

"I'd be perfectly happy to sit down ... and work out modifications in the program in a constructive spirit," Petri replied. "I'd like to see the program abolished ... but I recognize that an enormous, immediate change could be disruptive to the industry and the people in it."

Rose opened hearings Wednesday on the troubled tobacco program, which has seen increasing shares of the nation's crop put under government loan as cheaper imported tobacco garners a rising portion of the U.S. market.

But Rose, who has said the program could be abolished unless some changes are made, said the panel would try to find solutions to the problems facing the industry and then decide whether to try to enact them this year or next.

Petri and other critics say the supports amount to a federal subsidy for tobacco growers, and that the program has pushed market prices so high imports are undermining traditional U.S. markets. They also cite the apparent contradiction of the government, on one hand, paying to operate the tobacco support program, and on the other financing major campaigns about the health hazards of using tobacco.

City Counts 3 Collisions

An estimated $4,400 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 4:30 p.m. collision at Bryton Hill apartments where a car driven by James Reeve Walker Jr. of 107A Brookwood Drive ran into the building at 101 Bryton Hill when the brakes on the car failed.

Police said damage to the car was estimated at $200 while damage to the building was set at $2,000.

Cars driven by Jacqueline Britt Wilson of 104 Terry Drive and Judy Nobles Lewis of Route 2, Greenville, collided about 3:30 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Memorial Drive, causing $500 damage to the Wilson car and $900 damage to the Lewis vehicle.

Robert Allan Main of 209 Templeton Drive was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 5:47 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 200 feet east of the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Investigators, who identified the drivers of the other two cars involved as Crystal Lynn Hoffman of Medford, N.J., and Russell Eugene Barnes of Roanoke Rapids, estimated damage at $100 to the Hoffman car, $200 to the Barnes vehicle and $500 to the Main car.

NO FOOD DROP

LONDON (AP) — Ice and fog has prevented a food drop to lone Arctic explorer David Hempleman-Adams of Britain, stranded by bad weather since last Saturday on his solo trek to the North Pole, an expedition spokesman said Wednesday.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 39.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,827,000, compared to 1,806,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, pausing to test the winds at its highest levels on record.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.07 to 1,155.57 in the first half hour.

Analysts said enthusiasm about prospects for the economic recovery was still running high on Wall Street.

Reports Wednesday of higher auto sales in the first 10 days of April were taken as a big plus. Traders have been worrying for some time about sluggish consumer spending for cars and other durable goods.

But some investors apparently concerned that the time had arrived to cash in some profits with the Dow Jones industrials having risen 380 points over the last eight months.

Today's early volume leaders included Chrysler, up ¼ at 20½; Black & Decker, up ¼ at 19, and American Telephone & Telegraph, unchanged at 64½.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 11.32 to 1,156.64, surpassing the peak of 1,145.90 it reached on March 24.

Advances outpaced declines by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 100.52 million shares, against 80.51 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .58 to 90.04. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.58 at 399.98.

Diaz Had A Better Idea Than Corrales

Pat Corrales figured a double would do. Bo Diaz's grand slam was even better.

With Philadelphia trailing the New York Mets 9-6 in the bottom of the ninth inning with the bases loaded and two outs Wednesday night, Corrales, the Phillies manager, sent speedy Bob Dernier to pinch-run at first base.

"Don't try and hit it out of the ballpark," Corrales told Diaz while the Mets were bringing in relief ace Neil Allen. "Dernier is on first and he can score on a double."

"I nodded 'OK,'" Diaz said. Diaz ran the count to 2-1 before unloading a grand slam deep to left, capping a five-run rally and powering the Phillies to a dramatic 10-9 victory.

"Oh man, it was a good feeling," Diaz beamed.

In other National League games, Atlanta downed Cincinnati 6-1, San Diego nipped San Francisco 2-1, St. Louis routed Pittsburgh 9-1 and Los Angeles beat Houston 5-3 in 14 innings.

Allen, who lost Tuesday's night game to Philadelphia by giving up a 10th-inning run, sat in the New York dugout for 10 minutes with his head in his hands after Diaz's blast.

Meanwhile, Mets Manager George Bamberger fumed at the events leading to the game-winning blow, namely four walks in the ninth inning that fueled the rally.

"A few more like that and I'll need another bypass before it's over," said Bamberger, who underwent heart surgery a few years ago. "If you don't get the ball over the plate, you can't pitch here and that's a fact. If they don't get it over, I'll find someone who can."

Mets reliever Rick Ownbey took a 9-5 lead into the ninth but exited with two outs after loading the bases on three walks. Jesse Orosco was brought on and promptly walked pinch hitter Bill Robinson.

That set the stage for Allen, now 0-2, to face Diaz.

"He threw me a fastball inside for a ball," Diaz said. "Then he got a fastball inside for a strike. Now I get a curve for a ball."

"I know he's going to challenge me with a fastball. He doesn't want to walk me. I

The homer was the first of the season for Diaz, his second career grand slam and topped off his five RBI performance, the first-ever for Diaz.

The blast also spoiled a four-hit night for New York's Dave Kingman, who unloaded his first homer of the season. Danny Heep and Bob Bailor also homered for the Mets while Mike Schmidt cracked his second of the year for the Phillies.

Pete Rose, who turns 42 today, doubled twice for Philadelphia.

Dodgers 5, Astros 3

Steve Yeager slammed a two-run, two-out homer in the bottom of the 14th inning as the Astros matched the National League record with their ninth consecutive loss at the start of the season.

Derrell Thomas doubled with two outs in the 14th off Frank LaCorte and Yeager followed with his homer, his second game-winning blast in two nights.

Joe Niekro pitched 10 innings for Houston before being relieved by LaCorte. Niekro allowed three runs on five hits, including a two-run homer by rookie Greg Brock.

Braves 6, Reds 1

Chris Chambliss homered twice to knock in three runs as Atlanta won its seventh straight game.

The Braves, who won a modern record 13 consecutive games to start last season, have not lost this year since dropping their opener to Cincinnati.

Chambliss drilled a two-run homer in the second inning and added solo blast, his third homer of the year, in the sixth.

Rick Camp, 1-0, gave up Cincinnati's run as he managed to scatter 10 hits in 7 2-3 innings.

Cardinals 9, Pirates 1
George Hendrick went 5-for-5 and homered twice while Joaquin Andujar won his 12th consecutive game over two seasons.

Andujar, 2-0 this season, shacked Pittsburgh on seven hits and retired 13 batters in a row during one stretch. He has now allowed just one earned run in 18 innings this season.

Hendrick highlighted a 16-hit attack with an RBI single during a five-run fifth inning, a solo homer in the seventh and a two-run blast in the ninth.

Padres 2, Giants 1

Terry Kennedy knocked in the go-ahead run to help San Diego snap its five-game losing streak.

San Diego's Eric Show yielded a leadoff homer to light-hitting Johnnie LeMaster on the second pitch of the game and then settled down.

Lucas got the final four outs for his first save.

San Diego scored twice on Sixto Lezcano's run-scoring double and Kennedy's RBI single.

Two More Added To EC List Of Cage Signees

East Carolina University basketball coach Charlie Harrison added two more recruits to the list released yesterday morning in signings Wednesday afternoon.

Roy Smith, a 6-7½, 190-pound forward/center, from Gastonia Hunter Huss, averaged 21.6 points and 12.8 rebounds and nine blocked shots as a senior. He was the Player of the Year in the Western 4-A Conference and was honorable mention All-State.

"Roy knows how to score. He's extremely quick, quick around the basket and a quick jumper. I feel very good about his being a player right away."

The battle for Smith came down between East Carolina and Clemson, which made a strong bid for his services.

The other singee is Leon Bass, a 6-10, 180-pound center, from Wilson High School in Florence, S.C. Bass averaged 15 points, 10 rebounds, and three blocked shots. He was all-region, and grew 5½ inches in the last year.

"Leon is just 17 and already 6-10. He'll be a 7-footer and there's just no telling how big he will be. His arm reach is now 7-1. He has great size with a great pair of hands and a fine shooting touch. Leon has quick feet and is willing to work. The only question right now is his strength, but that can be taken care of."

Clemson was also after Bass, along with Virginia Commonwealth and Tennessee-Chattanooga.

The signings bring the total to six, and there remains the possibility of another signing, but the timing of that is uncertain.

Those announced yesterday include Derrick Battle, a 6-6, 190-pounder from Northern Nash; Keith Sledge, a 6-3, 180-pounder from Roanoke Rapids; and Jack Turnbull, a 6-9, 185-pounder from Wilmington New Hanover. The Pirates also have 6-2, 170-pound William Grady of Patterson, N.J., who signed during the fall signing period.

Grady has been selected to play in the Bridgeport Classic, which features an all-star team from New Jersey going against all-stars from New York and Connecticut.

Goose Tagged For Second Time In Row

By The Associated Press
What's sauce for the Goose is sauce for American League hitters.

Goose Gossage, whose appearance on the mound is usually enough to guarantee a New York Yankee victory, gave up the game-winning hit for the second straight time Wednesday night as the Detroit Tigers downed the Yankees 7-5.

Gossage, who surrendered an eighth inning three-run homer to Toronto's Jesse Barfield in his last appearance, entered the game with one out in the seventh with the Yankees leading 4-3 and two men on.

He struck out Lou Whitaker, but Johnny Grubb ripped a double to left-center to put Detroit ahead to stay and Larry Herndon singled him home. Glenn Wilson homered off Gossage in the ninth.

"I feel great, I can't feel any better," Gossage said. "I got the ball maybe up a little bit more to Grubb than I wanted, about belt-high and over the plate...You've got to credit these guys a little bit, but I'm supposed to get them out."

At Yankee Stadium, Detroit got off to a 3-0 lead in the first. Ken Griffey homered in the fourth, then the Yankees scored three runs in the fifth on a single by Graig Nettles, an RBI double by Willie Randolph and Griffey's second homer.

"Goose has always been tough on me," he said. "He usually gets me out on the same pitch — a fastball up and away. I usually ground out or swing through it because I always tried to pull that pitch. This time, I tried to think the other way."

The game was marred by a fifth-inning fight between New York's Dave Winfield and Detroit's Dave Rozema, who had just relieved starter Jerry Ujdur. Rozema's first pitch sailed over Winfield's head. Winfield charged the mound and threw a punch at Rozema as both dugouts emptied. Winfield was ejected and Rozema given an official warning.

Red Sox 18, Royals 4
Glen Hoffman had five hits and Jim Rice had a homer and triple as the Red Sox pounded out 21 hits and took advantage of five Royal errors in a game played in Kansas City's sub-freezing weather, with a wind-chill factor of 10 degrees. The start of the game was delayed 48 minutes by a cold rain and Hoffman said that late in the game the water looked like it was beginning to freeze on the infield.

Rookie Mike Brown got the win for Boston and Paul Splittorf, who was shelled for eight runs in 32-3 innings took the loss. Rice, Wade Boggs and Rick Miller each knocked in three runs.

Angels 6, Mariners 1
Geoff Zahn tossed a four-hitter and Doug DeCinces hit a two-run homer as the Angels breezed to their Anaheim Stadium victory.

Zahn retired 15 in a row between the fourth and ninth innings. He had all the runs he needed by the second inning, when California took a 2-0 lead on a double by Fred Lynn, a single by DeCinces and errors by Mariner left fielder Steve Henderson and shortstop Todd Cruz.

Reggie Jackson singled in a run in the sixth and DeCinces followed with a homer. Jackson doubled in the seventh for the final run.

Indians 4, Rangers 3
Mike Hargrove doubled home Chris Bando with the tying run in the seventh inning, then scored the winning run on Bake McBride's single as Cleveland handed Texas its second loss of the season.

Cleveland starter Len Barker, 2-0, posted his sixth straight victory without a loss against Texas, his former team, in Cleveland Stadium.

Blue Jays 7, Brewers 2
Jesse Barfield slammed a two-run homer and Garth Iorg hit a two-run, bases-loaded double to power Toronto over Milwaukee.

A's 5, Twins 4
A bases-loaded, two-out double by Bob Kearney in the eighth inning drove home two runs to lift Oakland over Minnesota.

Jaguars Take Track Victory

FARMVILLE — Despite forfeiting all three of the relay races, Farmville Central edged out SouthWest Edgecombe in a three-way track meet at the Jaguar track yesterday.

Wesley Carmon won all three of the sprint races for Farmville, while Tony Hargrove won the two hurdle events.

The Bears picked up two more before the inning ended, and added two in the fourth and three in the fifth for a 9-0 lead. Chocowinity rallied for single runs in the sixth and seventh.

Johnny Squires and Ronnie Hooker each had two hits for Chocowinity, while Mason and Cratt picked up doubles to lead Bear Grass' hitting.

Celebrations Cost $100,000

RALEIGH (AP) — An NCAA championship can cost a lot of money, what with planes, lodging and meals for the team and other school representatives.

But officials of North Carolina State and Raleigh figure the Wolfpack's string of victories to the national championship could cost them about $100,000 for damages and overtime for employees.

Damage to university property alone has reached $18,000 and is expected to increase. In addition, campus police estimate that damage to personal property — bicycles, cars and furniture owned by students, faculty and visitors — will reach at least $10,000.

N.C. State police say they saw students toss furniture stolen from academic and administrative buildings, street signs, bicycles, mattresses and plumbing fixtures into a huge bonfire on the campus.

Raleigh police Maj. J.V. Haley said it cost the department more than $41,000 for compensatory time and overtime to the officers who were called out to protect Hillsborough Street.

Overtime for campus police will top $10,000, officials said.

UNC, Tech Sign Top Players

By The Associated Press
North Carolina and Georgia Tech announced major basketball signings Wednesday, while national champion North Carolina State continued to woo two major high school prospects.

North Carolina, from whom the Wolfpack claimed the NCAA title, announced that it had signed 6-foot-4 guard Kenny Smith from New York's Archbishop Malloy High School. Georgia Tech enjoyed a big day by announcing it had signed Henry "Bruce" Dalrymple, a consensus high school all-American from St. Johnsbury Academy in St. Johnsbury, Vt.

"We are delighted that Kenny has decided to attend the University of North Carolina," Tar Heel coach Dean

Smith said in a prepared statement. "He is an outstanding young man and it is indicative of his background that he recently was selected as the top student-athlete in New York City."

The Tar Heels are also after two big men, 6-10 Pennsylvanian Dave Popson and 6-11 Joe Wolf, brother of former UNC center Jeff Wolf.

"This is one of the happiest days of my coaching career," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said after the signing. "He's one of the finest young men I've ever recruited."

Dalrymple, a 6-foot-4 small forward, averaged just over 28 points and 19 rebounds per game in leading his team to two state championships and the No. 2 spot this year.

The Wolfpack is said to be in the running for 6-foot-4 guard Kenny Hutcherson of New York and 6-6 wingman Kenny Bolton from Hyattsville, Md., DeMatha High, the same school that produced Sidney Lowe and Derek Whittenburg.

Coach Jim Valvano was reportedly in New York Wednesday on a recruiting trip, although it was also rumored that he might be talking to officials of the NBA's New Jersey Nets. Recent reports have put Valvano in line to replace Larry Brown as head coach of the Nets.

N.C. State has already signed three prep stars, including 6-11 Terry Shackelford of Denton.

Also joining Georgia Tech next season will be 6-5 point guard Craig Neal from Washington, Ind., who averaged 27 points and 12 rebounds per game.

Clemson raided south Georgia to sign Hancock Central's twin 6-foot-8 forwards Harvey and Horace Grant.

The Grant twins led Hancock Central to a 22-5 record and the Region 4AA title. Horace Grant averaged 22 points and 12 rebounds per game while Harvey, who suffered a broken wrist during the season, averaged 18 points and 10 rebounds per game.

Duke has already received commitments from center Martin Nessley and guard Tom Amaker, while Wake Forest is awaiting word from 6-7 all-America Mark Cline of Williamson, W.Va.

Opportunity For Minority Mayors In Big Cities

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Harold Washington's election as mayor of Chicago is the latest and most dramatic illustration of a trend in American urban politics: whites fleeing cities and leaving political power in the hands of the minorities who stayed behind.

Washington, the two-term Democratic congressman who won a narrow victory Tuesday over Republican Bernard Epton, becomes the first black mayor of the country's second largest city and the 28th black to become a big-city mayor.

The tide of control in the cities has been shifting steadily in the past decade as white majorities drifted to the suburbs, where political organization is more lax and loyalties more divided.

Washington's triumph ends a years-old tradition of Chicago's control by a white-dominated political machine.

Of the nation's 12 biggest cities, seven have mayors who are black, women or members of some other minority.

Chicago's black community, which represents about 40 percent of the population, was only 23 percent in 1960 and grew to 33 percent in 1970. In Los Angeles, the black sector grew from 13 percent in 1960 to 18 percent in 1970, before declining a point in the 1980 census. Detroit's black population jumped from 29 percent in 1960 to 63 percent in 1980.

Dorothy McCullough Lee, a Republican who was elected mayor of Portland, Ore., in 1948, made the first big crack in white male domination of urban politics. Portland was the first major U.S. city, in modern times to have a woman mayor.

More recently, Lila May Cockrell served six years as mayor of San Antonio, Texas, starting in 1975. Later that same year, Margaret Hance was elected mayor of Phoenix, Ariz., the 11th largest city, and still holds office. In all, the United States Conference of Mayors says there are 84 woman mayors of cities of 30,000 population or more. This includes Chicago, whose outgoing Mayor Jane M. Byrne was that city's first woman mayor.

Only one sizable city in the country has a black woman mayor — Loretta Glickman, elected last year in Pasadena, Calif.

Until Washington takes office, Los Angeles will be the largest city with a black mayor, Tom Bradley, who has held office since 1973.

Carl Stokes of Cleveland in 1967 became the first black to be elected mayor of a large American city. He lost to white Republican Ralph Perk in 1975 in a contest that split the city's traditional Democratic majority over the race issue.

Since then, Cleveland has elected white mayors. The current, one, George Voinovich, is both white and Republican.

Generally, however, minority insurgents have maintained their grip on city hall once they ousted white male mayors.

Richard Hatcher, a black, was elected mayor of Gary, Ind., in 1968 and still holds the job. Kenneth Gibson was elected in Newark, N.J., in 1970 and also remains in office. So does Bradley in Los Angeles.

Walter Washington was appointed "mayor" of the District of Columbia in 1967 by President Lyndon Johnson. The title was more ceremonial than literal because Washington actually was an appointed commissioner. But in 1974 he became the capital city's first elected mayor. He was defeated in 1978 but succeeded by another black, Marion Barry, who was re-elected last year.

Coleman Young has been black mayor of Detroit since 1974, the same year that Maynard Jackson in Atlanta became the first black mayor of a sizable Deep South city. Jackson was succeeded last year by another black, Andrew Young.

Henry Marsh was elected mayor of Richmond, Va., in 1977 by the City Council. He was ousted last year but was succeeded by another black, Roy West.

Richard Arrington became the first black mayor of Birmingham, Ala., in 1979.

With the departure of Jane Byrne in Chicago, Kathy Whitmire of Houston, population 1.6 million, will be mayor of the largest city with a woman chief executive.

Margaret Hance of Phoenix governs a city of more than 760,000, slightly larger than Mayor Eileen Anderson's Honolulu. San Francisco is the fifth largest city with a woman mayor, Dianne Feinstein.

There are no official lists of Hispanic mayors, but there also are some notable examples of Hispanic gains in urban power. Maurice Ferre has been mayor of Miami since 1973, Bob Martinez in Tampa, Fla., since 1979 and Henry Cisneros in San Antonio, Texas, since 1981.

Oppose House Bill On Hunting

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners have gone on record opposing N.C. House Bill 21, which would prohibit the hunting of certain types of wildlife using dogs in a specific area of Martin County.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Frank Ballance, would make it illegal to hunt, take or kill black bear, deer, foxes, raccoons, opossums and bobcats with the use of dogs in an area of Martin County bounded by N.C. 903 on the west, Pitt and Beaufort counties on the west and south, and by paved secondary roads 1113 and 114E on the east and north. The area is located near the Cross Roads community off the Prison Camp road.

A group of about 3E landowners and hunters from the area appeared before the board at its April meeting with a petition opposing Ballance's bill.

Ballance also was on hand for the meeting. He explained he had introduced the bill in response to a petition with 40 names from residents in the area asking that action be taken to prohibit hunting with dogs in the area.

In an unanimous vote, commissioners voted to seek $167,500 from the State Literary Fund for use by the eMartin County Board of Education to fund construction of a new School Bus Garage complex. The money, if approved by the Literary Fund, would be a loan for a period of 10 years at a 4 percent interest rate.

Blaine Cargile of the Community Based Alternatives Task Force told board members that the state has indicated that it will provide $22,002 for the project for the coming year, but expected the county to match the funds with a cash match of 30 percent. In the past, county matching requirements have been allowed by in-kind contributions in lieu of cash.

Board members indicated they will study the matter but stated they look favorably on action to provide the cash match.

Groundwork For Sewer Job

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston town commissioners have authorized public works Superintendent Junior Long to obtain informal bids for repairs of sewer sections on Watts Street, on Willow Avenue and outside the city limits on U.S. 64 West.

Commissioners agreed to let work begin after bids are taken, provided low bids do not exceed a limit to be placed by the board.

Long told the commissioners that repairs would require a professional company as the local maintenance crew does not have equipment to get to the buried pipes. Most of the sewer lines causing problems are buried 14 to 16 feet deep. He also noted that there is a need for replacement of sewer facilities in several areas in order to reduce water infiltration into the system.

Approval was also given for a budget amendment of $10,000 to use for parks in the city. The parks money will be spent only if funds are available after work on streets and sewer projects are completed.

Graduation Rule Upped

WILLIAMSTON — The Martin County Board of Education has increased the number of completed units required for graduation from 18 to 21 for freshmen during the 1983-84 school.

It was noted that state policy now calls for a requirement of at least 20 units to qualify for graduation.

For Martin County, the board established that the three additional units would be comprised of: one vocational elective, one additional math course and one additional elective.

The board also adopted the 1983-84 school year calendar, with school to begin on Aug. 29 with the last day of school to fall on June 6, 1984.

Board members said they would review proposals for closing North Everetts School and weigh various alternatives before making a decision within the next month or two.

A spokesman for parents and students, Doris Wallace, presented a petition with 109 names of persons in favor of keeping the school open. The board noted also that a recent survey on whether or not to keep the school open was sent to 160 parents, with about half responding — with 60 in favor of keeping the school open, and 20 opposed.

High Tech And High Stakes Mark A Computer Age

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It is cold inside the University of Minnesota computer center, almost as cold as the early spring temperature outside.

"Got to keep it cold in here. The big computers like the cold," Professor Peter Patton, director of the center, says.

And because the big computers don't like smoke, smoking is prohibited throughout the building. Instead of "No Smoking" signs, a few offices far down the hall have "Smoking Permitted" signs.

Whatever the big computers want, the big computers get. Scientists say "supercomputers," the machines that can do hundreds of millions of mathematical calculations per second, are vital to the nation's economy and security.

Yet a report by the National Science Foundation warns that a consortium of Japanese businesses, with the financial support of the Japanese government, a year ago launched a $200 million project to overtake the United States in supercomputer technology.

"The Japanese have begun to make clear their intentions to do in electronics what they have already done to us in automobiles, steel and cameras," says Bill Shaffer, public relations manager for Control Data Corp., one of two companies in the world making supercomputers.

A few miles from Control Data, at the University of Minnesota, Patton weaves through a maze of boxy computers that range in size from refrigerators to walk-in closets, then stops before one that is circular. The six-foot-tall panels forming the center of the circle are surrounded by a two-foot "bench."

This is the Cray-1, a supercomputer. It looks like modular furniture in a futuristic airport waiting lounge, but it is one of the most complicated and most expensive machines ever invented.

Supercomputers are already being used for research into "cleaner" nuclear power, fuel-saving aircraft design, better medical diagnosis and long-range weather forecasting.

The basic list price for a supercomputer is $10 million. Depending on the task, it costs $3,000 to $5,000 to run one for an hour. Humans cannot "talk" to supercomputers; other computers must translate and relay human orders before the supercomputer can digest and then follow them.

"And look what else it's good for," Peter Patton says, sitting down on the Cray-1's bench with his cup of coffee. "See, you can even eat your lunch right here. Very utilitarian."

Atop the machine, a fuzzy little Golden Gopher, the university mascot, peers down. The Cray-1 itself, both bench and standing panels, are upholstered in maroon and gold, the Minnesota school colors.

"When you pay $10 million for one of our computers, you can have it in any color you want," says John Rollwagen, president of Cray Research Inc., the company that makes the Cray-1.

Cray Research and the much larger Control Data Corp. are the only two companies in the world manufacturing supercomputers. Both companies are based in Minneapolis, but not because of the cold: their respective founders, William Norris of Control Data and Seymour Cray of Cray Research are from this area.

Since the first Cray-1 was delivered to the Los Alamos, N.M., national lab seven years ago, supercomputers have become critical to weapons design and testing. Twelve government supercomputers are used solely for weapons research. Others play a more passive role in national defense. Instead of testing the effects of a bomb on an isolated Pacific atoll, scientists do it on the computer.

In England, a Cray-1 crunches 80 million different bits of weather data per day, and then does 500 billion calculations to make 10-day predictions.

Space shuttle designs are tested on supercomputers. So are radar and missile systems. Supercomputer "wind tunnels" are helping engineers design more fuel-efficient airplanes. Supercomputers are helping get more oil out of undersea reservoirs, chemically treat coal so it burns more cleanly and efficiently, develop safety systems for nuclear power plants, study black holes in space and design buildings to withstand earthquakes and tornadoes.

There are about 40 supercomputers — either the Cray-1 or Control Data's CYBER 205 — operating in government, university and private industry laboratories in the United States. About 20 others have been sold overseas to allies — West Germany, France, England and Japan.

The National Science Foundation report that warns of the Japanese effort to best the United States suggests a $226 million federal program to help private and university researchers develop newer, faster computers.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., has introduced legislation to provide $500 million a year in federal matching funds for high-tech training and research. And the Defense Department is asking Congress for money, beginning with $50 million in 1984, to help U.S. private business compete with the Japanese.

Control Data, the much larger, diversified company that has sold about one-fourth of the world's supercomputers, would welcome federal aid and any arrangement for pooling supercomputer expertise. Cray Research, the small specialty company, would not.

Cray Research has employees who do nothing but design, make and sell supercomputers. Sales in 1982 were $140 million.

Control Data, on the other hand, has 56,000 workers and $7 billion in assets. Supercomputers accounted for a only small part of its $155 million in earnings last year.

Control Data helped start the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., a new business whose only employee so far is its president, retired Adm. Bobby Inman, the former deputy director of the CIA.

The business group, which includes United Technologies, Sperry Univac and a dozen other big American high-tech concerns, intends to spend up to $100 million a year to develop computer technology. The companies will share the technology, but not the production, packaging or marketing of any products they individually develop from it.

Inman says the United States will remain a leader in economic competition only if it continues to offer the highest of the high technology. In regard to the supercomputer's value for national defense, Inman says, "Do we really want to be dependent on foreign suppliers?"

Since the Japanese program began, Control Data and Cray Research have both imposed stringent security measures. Approved visitors must sign in and out, wear colored badges and never walk the halls without an employee who has clearance for that area.

Cray Research recently turned down a Japanese film crew's written request to tour the Chippewa Falls, Wis., plant where the Cray-1 is assembled. When the film crew turned up anyway, Don Whiting, the vice president in charge of manufacturing, would only let them film the outside of the main building from the parking lot.

"They said they had come all this way," Whiting says. "We said that's too bad."

High tech, high stakes, high risk.

"Building a supercomputer is risky business, economically," says Lloyd Thorndyke, Control Data's vice president for technology development. "The stakes are extremely high."

Speed is the critical factor. Increasing the speed of a computer tenfold saves the scientist hours a day. In a sense, a supercomputer is a time machine; by creating more information in less time, it slows the clock in the laboratory.

The key to increasing computer speed is in decreasing the size of the computer. The less time it takes an electronic impulse to travel from A to B, the more mathematical calculations the machine can do in a second. Even now, half a supercomputer's operating time is spent on "waiting" for the electrons to get where they should when they should.

The rule of thumb is that reducing a computer's size by half will double its speed and lower the cost per calculation by three-fourths. The room-sized supercomputers of the 1960s used to do 100,000 calculations at a cost of about $14. The new supercomputers can do 100,000 calculations for less than a penny.

So the emphasis in supercomputer design is on density. In the Cray-1, millions of tiny parts — 626,000 resistors, 400,000 connector pins, 250,000 logic chips — are packed in so closely that the machine, about the size of a typical ton-and-a-half automobile, weighs five tons.

The problem with density is that it increases heat. The Cray-1 pumps out 600,000 BTUs. Without its cooling system, the Cray-1 could not run for five minutes before melting through the floor below.

The University of Minnesota uses some of the heat dissipated by its Cray-1 to warm — if 60 degrees is considered warm — its sprawling computer center. Only once, Patton says, has extremely cold weather hampered the center.

"During a blizzard," he says. "The storm knocked out the computer air conditioners."

Urged To Join Peace Corps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of retired Agriculture Department employees are being urged to sign up as Peace Corps volunteers.

Under a plan announced Monday by Agriculture Secretary John R. Block and Loret Miller Ruppe, Peace Corps director, the department will send letters to about 3,000 former employees who have skills in such areas as crop production, plant protection, animal husbandry, range management, development of cooperatives, soil and water conservation, forestry and agricultural education.

Have Hopes For Damaged Egg

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Scientists hope that a damaged California condor egg will hatch a healthy addition to the endangered species, amid signs that the embryo is growing.

"It appears to be a pretty hardy embryo," San Diego Zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said Tuesday. But he warned that the embryo could still suffer developmental problems.

According to zoo officials, the egg was exposed to too much cold in the wild.

Air Quality In U.S. Improving

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air quality in the United States is getting better but much of the most recent improvement resulted from the idling of factories during the economic recession, according to a trade publication.

The weekly Air-Water Pollution Report said the EPA is holding off on announcing the improvement in air quality until its new administrator, William Ruckelshaus, takes office, so he can disclose the news.

Chris Rice, an EPA spokesman, said the publication had obtained a draft copy of an EPA report that was still undergoing agency review. He said Kathleen Bennett, assistant administrator for air pollution, had not yet reviewed the draft or approved it.

SOLAR-POWERED

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Construction will begin soon at the Red Sea port of Yanbu for a solar-powered desalination plant partially sponsored by the United States, the Saudi Gazette reports.

The City has a Speakers Bureau composed of elected and appointed officials whose expertise in their fields may be helpful to civic groups. Call 752-4137, Ext. 224, for details.

Argue Reduced Benefits Is Wrong 'Cure' For N.C.

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Reducing workers' benefits is the wrong way to improve the health of North Carolina's unemployment insurance fund, some members of the General Assembly say.

The lengthy proposal for bolstering the fund, which came under fire Wednesday in a meeting of the Employment Security Committee, is aimed at avoiding a projected $146 million shortfall in the fund by 1984.

Unemployment insurance claims are paid out of the fund, which consists of employers' contributions and interest earnings.

Rep. Jeff Enloe, D-Macon, defended the bill he sponsored, saying its purpose was to "get into a position to protect the solvency of the fund and not to get in debt to the federal government."

The bill would reduce workers' benefits by an estimated $60 million a year and increase employers' contributions by $90 million a year, depriving 1,800 jobless workers of compensation. About 40 percent of those receiving benefits would be affected by the cuts.

The bill would:

- Put employer contributions on a sliding scale tied to average yearly wages instead of a set taxable wage base.
- Allow the ESC to use an "emergency escalator" to increase employer contribution rates when the unemployment fund dips to dangerously low levels.
- Decrease maximum worker benefit rates from 66 2/3 percent to 60 percent of the state's average weekly wage.
- Adjust qualifications to eliminate 1,800 of the 512,000 people who claim benefits.
- Adjust the way the length of benefits is calculated to make it harder to qualify for the maximum.

ESC chairman Glenn Jernigan said the state's ratio of maximum weekly benefits to average weekly wages ranks 11th nationally.

"We ought to be proud of the fact that we're ahead of the national average," said Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, suggesting allowing jobless benefits to increase when the fund is in good health and when employers' contributions decrease.

"We are proud," Jernigan said. "It's because of that pride that we're here today. Our 11th rank shows our interest in the workers has exceeded our capability sometimes to pay. We want to get it closer correlated to income."

"That ignores the need of workers," Wright said. "Sixty percent of a salary is not much when your salary is not high."

But Jernigan said the bill was meant to be a balanced approach to protect both employers and employees.

Enloe said the fund has gone from a $600 million balance to $380 million in December 1982 and is expected to drop to $175 million in December 1983.

In other legislative action:

Budget

Legislative analysts reminded lawmakers that the state will lose between $75 million and $90 million in federal highway aid during the next biennium if they fail to find $51 million in state matching money.

The joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee heard a plan for finding $55.5 million to get federal aid in 1983-84. But legislative budget leaders acknowledged that they have not yet found a way to raise $51 million in matching state money for 1984-85.

The Appropriations Committee is reviewing the 1983-85 budget in an effort to identify reductions.

PCBs

Rep. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, pushed for support of his bill that would prohibit construction of a hazardous waste landfill or PCB dump in parts of Vance, Franklin, Halifax, Durham and Wake counties.

Ballance said Gov. Jim Hunt had already promised what is in the bill, but that it would be good to get it in writing. "The governor's job only lasts four years," he told the House Water and Air Resources Committee.

Ballance's bill would prohibit locating another hazardous waste landfill or PCB landfill within 50 miles of an already existing hazardous waste or PCB landfill.

"As far as another landfill in that area, I don't see it happening," said O.W. Strickland, head of the state's Solid and Hazardous Waste Branch.

Commitment

The Senate unanimously voted to send to the House a bill to make sure that people who are charged with a violent crime but are found not guilty by reason of insanity or unable to stand trial are considered for involuntary commitment.

Under the bill, the same Superior Court judge who tried the person would determine whether they should be committed to a mental institution.

Sales Tax

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, introduced a bill to change the discount which merchants now keep for collecting sales taxes. Vendors now get 3 percent of the tax they collect as a handling fee, which totals about $30 million a year.

Under Walker's bill, merchants would keep 3 percent of the first $100 a month in taxes and 2 percent of the rest up to a monthly maximum of $1,000.

The plan would raise $12 million for the state and $2.5 million for the counties and cities in 1983-84.

Computer Commission

The Senate State Government Committee agreed to include the president of the state Department of Community Colleges on a computer commission that would be created by a long-disputed bill.

The commission now would include the Secretary of Administration, the Council of State and the community colleges president.

The committee also adopted an amendment by Sen. Ken Harris, R-Mecklenburg, to require each government agency to submit a five-year plan for its computers to the commission. That plan would be included in a state plan to be updated annually and submitted to the General Assembly at the beginning of each session.

Health Institute

The Senate Human Resources Committee approved a bill that would create a North Carolina Institute of Medicine, which would do research on health problems in the state and provide the Legislature with information on health-related issues.

The bill calls for a one-time $25,000 state grant to start the institution, to be matched with $200,000 or more from private donations. Supporters said they expected the institution to be self-supporting thereafter.

Motorboat Fee

The Senate Finance Committee approved a bill raising the fee for motorboat registration from $2 to $5.50 for one year or $13 for three years.

Vernon Bevil of the Wildlife Resources Commission told the panel that the commission is losing money returning checks to people who mistakenly believe they owe $5.50, the fee for registering a new boat. He said the bill would save up to $40,000 a year.

Liability Insurance

A bill amending procedures for dealing with expired auto liability insurance was delayed in the Senate Finance Committee when a Divisions of Motor Vehicles official and Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, disagreed on what the law says about lapsed policies.

The House bill, sponsored by Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, would require that anyone whose policy is terminated and decides to re-register his vehicle within 60 days of surrendering his license plates must pay a $25 fee.

Insurance

Debate erupted over a bill designed to limit surcharges on drivers who cause accidents involving less than $200 in damages when an industry spokesman said safe drivers would pick up the tab.

"We submit it is not desirable to give these people a break over those without points (on their licenses)," John McMillan, representing Allstate Insurance Co., told the House Insurance Committee.

The bill would prevent insurers from applying a premium surcharge on the liability insurance of drivers who cause minor accidents. But such drivers would still be assessed a point on their licenses.

Legislative analyst Bill Hale said the drivers would pay for loss recoupment to the Reinsurance Facility, which covers high-risk drivers. He added that any loss in premium income would be made up through increased rates to all drivers.

Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, said the bill was intended to keep increased insurance premiums from costing drivers more than out-of-pocket costs for minor repairs.

No Evidence Of Violence Links

WASHINGTON (AP) — No scientific evidence exists to support claims that television violence causes violent behavior in society, researchers from the three major TV networks say.

But the project director of the National Institute of Mental Health study that linked TV violence to real-life aggression is standing by his findings.

Alan Wurtzel of ABC told a congressional committee Wednesday that the government study was "seriously flawed" and contended that the researchers misinterpreted the information they gathered.

J. Ronald Milavsky of NBC said his studies of young children "found no evidence that television exposure has a consistent or statistically significant effect" on their behavior.

The government study had contended that TV violence has an especially strong link to violence among youngsters.

Philip A. Harding of CBS Broadcast Group said part of the government's research included a study of third grade school children. Among acts government researchers considered aggressive were children sticking out their tongues and giving people "dirty looks," he said.

Wurtzel told the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime that "in many social sciences, statistical results of the magnitude reported in the studies cited in the NIMH report would lead to a conclusion of 'no significant relationship.'"

"Yet in the NIMH studies the same small correlations are interpreted as signifying very important behavior and attitudinal relationships."

However, Dr. David Pearl, director of the government study, said he stood by the report's conclusions. He said no single factor is likely to make a viewer aggressive or anti-social, but extensive viewing of TV violence may be an important contributor in some cases.

"There can no longer be any doubt that heavy exposure to televised violence is one of the causes of aggressive behavior, crime and violence in society," added Leonard Eron, professor of psychology and research at the University of Illinois.

Belated 'Gift' For A Gatlin

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Steve Gatlin has received a welcome, if belated, birthday present — a third daughter for him and his wife, Cynthia.

Aubrie Lane, weighing in at 5 pounds, 4 ounces, arrived Wednesday morning at a Nashville hospital, just a little late for Gatlin's 32nd birthday on April 4.

The mother and daughter are in "wonderful condition," a hospital spokeswoman said.

Gatlin is one of three members of the Gatlin Brothers. Their songs include "All the Gold in California," "Broken Lady" and "Nighttime Magic."

PBS Begins Computer Series

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Public television's "The Computer Programme" isn't a British farce, although its opening sequence and two hosts could have come from Monty Python.

The 10-part computer series, which begins Saturday, is produced by the British Broadcasting Corp., and, at times, it displays the wacky irreverence of Monty Python's troupe. It begins with a Milquetoast-type walking tentatively into a computer store and asking a high-pressure salesman about buying a you know what.

But, for the most part, "The Computer Programme" is an earnest, sometimes entertaining enterprise intent on treating "Computer Phobia" — a sociological disease for modern times.

One purpose of the series "is to demystify computers," says host Chris Series, a computer illiterate who learns along with the viewer. The thrust is to make the computer a comfortable tool at home, which is practical for both the viewer and the program's underwriter, Acorn Computers Corp. of Woburn, Mass. Acorn is one of 100 firms selling computers in Great Britain, many of them for personal use.

Series, a BBC journalist, is joined by Ian McNaught Davis, who tries to separate some of the mumbo from the jumbo. Davis is a computer expert who talks fast, loves those mechanical devils and reminds you of Benny Hill.

Based on the first four segments — they'll all half-hours, for the viewers' limited attention span — the series is of dubious value as an educator. The broadcasts jump around too much, the graphics are not easily discernible, and Davis' explanations become convoluted in the third and fourth episodes.

Particularly irritating is the way Series and Davis have sideways, casual conversations as one means of making teaching points. If these messages are to be retained, they should be presented in a straightforward manner and emphasized and re-emphasized.

However, what is valuable, at least for this computer novice, is that the first two installments manage to cut the computer down to size and reduce anxieties about this electronic creature, which Time magazine named "Machine of the Year" for 1982.

It appears that someone who is all thumbs around mathematical-mechanical things could actually learn to talk to computers. "They're quite stupid in many ways," says Davis, "but also very clever."

If Series can learn to "LOAD," "LIST" and "RUN," and then get the video-game "Breakout" on the screen, so can we. Of course, Series proves to be the kind of student who never asks a dumb question and never gets lost. Ah, the magic of television.

A feature on a grandmotherly lady who runs a grocery store makes the point that anybody can befriend a computer. The woman owns her own computer and uses it for book-keeping purposes. It saves her time and money, and when a new highway is built bypassing the store, the woman starts a sideline business computing the inventory and receipts for other storekeepers.

According to PBS, "The Computer Programme" will be available as a credit or continuing education course this fall by participating colleges in cooperation with local public TV stations.

Although this show is more a TV program than a course, it is better than no program at all, and it will help viewers grasp "Computer II," a more clinical series that recently ran on British television and also seems destined for public TV.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There could be some unpleasant opposition by those who are unable to control their temper today. Keep in mind that a conciliatory attitude can prevent rows at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get a good hold on your emotions today or they could lead you astray and cause trouble. Use caution in motion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A friend is in a strange mood today and could prove most trying to you, but keep poised and this will pass. Relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Any public duties you have should be handled without delay. Don't neglect to pay your bills. Avoid a troublemaker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have new ideas on how to spend right now, but proceed with caution for best results. Be poised.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Attend to routine duties early in the day so you'll have time for more important things later. Make the evening a happy one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) An associate could be in a bad mood so control your temper and avoid an argument. Establish better relations later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be more alert to opportunities coming your way now. Take a more optimistic outlook on life. Show others you have wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find new ways to put your creative talents to work. Strive to make life more satisfying. Take health treatments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you control your temper at home today, harmony can be restored. Not a good time to engage in outside activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't labor under any miscalculations or unpleasant results could follow. Obtain the data you need from the right place.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan to save more money instead of spending it foolishly. Take time for thinking and planning about the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may want to have a showdown with one you think has done you an injustice, but wait for a better time when tempers cool.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she may have to struggle to get ahead in life. Teach to be independent and to be more willing to work for what is desired, and to consider the feelings of others. Stress sportsmanship and honesty in your teachings.

"The stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
