Tobacco Means Profit For Pitt

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The County of Pitt has made money and saved taxpayers dollars by leasing the county-owned tobacco allotment each year.

But at the same time, the Board of County Commissioners has received criticism from farmers and others because of the allotment, which has produced $220,614.47 since the county acquired it more than a decade ago along with land for the Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The allotment was highlighted again last week when a news story that appeared in The Daily Reflector in mid-January, when the 1983 county allotment was leased, was used by a Wisconsin congressman to support his bill to abolish the tobacco support program.

Rep. Thomas E. Petri, a Republican, told the House Tobacco and Peanut subcommittee that high lease rates were driving farmers off the land and causing U.S. tobacco to lose its foreign markets.

"The answer to our tobacco problem is a free market," Petri told the susbcommittee.

Petri then charged that tobacco in Pitt County leased for "about 80 cents per pound." To illustrate, Petri produced the article from The Daily Reflector reporting that Pitt commissioners had leased 38,015 pounds of tobacco for $30,532.

Rep. Charles O. Whitley challenged Petri, saying "certainly there is no 80 cents widespread anywhere in eastern North Carolina. Anybody who knows anything about it knows that," Whitley continued, emphasizing that the Pitt lease was an atypical example.

A few days after this year's allotment was leased at public auction, a Daily Reflector editorial took farmers to task for bidding so high.

The editorial said in part: "There has been much talk in recent weeks about the quota owners being mercenary, greedy and unthinking in asking higher prices this year. Monday's sale pinpoints the major problem, however.

"Remember, there was no asking price. No minimum was set. This was grower against grower ... So it was grower push that shoved those bids above 80 cents — no one else was involved.

"After Monday's bidding, Pitt County growers can only blame themselves for the high cost of quota. No one else was involved."

Reagan: Veto Pen Ready

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, his veto pen "right behind my ear," said Saturday he will not tolerate attempts to repeal withholding on interest and dividends or indexing tax brackets to inflation.

He also threatened to veto attempts to change the third year of his tax-cut program scheduled to go into effect in July.

"I'm carrying my veto pen right behind my ear," Reagan said in his weekly radio broadcast, delivered from Camp David, Md.

"If the repeal (on withholding) passes Congress, I'm all set to veto it, just as I'm prepared to protect the July tax cut and indexing with a veto if necessary," he said.

The Senate, under pressure by banks and worried constituents, was expected this week to repeal the controversial law requiring 10 percent withholding on interest and dividends as of July 1.

But Reagan said the law would catch tax cheaters — gaining $18 billion for the government over the next five years — not punish savers.

Complaining that "people are being badly misled" over the issue, Reagan said withholding was simply "by far the most effective way of collecting taxes owed."

"The only people who stand to lose under this law are those who haven't been paying their taxes in the first place, and what's wrong with that?" he asked.

"What it really boils down to is this," Reagan said. "Even in a law-abiding country like ours, there's still a minority of people out there who cheat on their taxes. Last year Uncle Sam lost billions of dollars in taxes on unreported interest and dividend income."

Saying he wanted to expose the myths surrounding the issue, Reagan denied

Anyone Can Get Petition

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Have you ever thought how it would feel to be committed to a hospital for treatment of a mental disorder or for a problem involving alcohol or drug abuse, against your will?

It could happen. There is a legal "involuntary commitment" process that can be followed to have a person admitted to a hospital or otherwise treated, if he poses a danger to himself or others.

"We issue as many as eight to 10 involuntary commitments a week at times," Elmore Hodges, Pitt County's chief magistrate, said.

Records at the clerk of court's office show that for the six-month period which ended March 31, magistrates in Pitt County issued 129 such involuntary commitment orders.

"Any person can be a petitioner. It doesn't have to be a member of the family only. We have about as many doctors doing the petitioning as we do family members," according to Hodges.

He explained the procedure: The petitioner "comes to the magistrate's office, signs a petition ... We put the facts, or opinion, in the petition." If there are resonable grounds to believe that the facts in the petition are true, "then we fill out a custody order."

That gives the police or sheriff's deputies the authority to "pick up the person and carry

Helms Calls For Atlantic Coast Drug Task Force

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (UPI) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., called for establishment of an Atlantic coast drug task force at a special subcommittee hearing on maritime drug smuggling Saturday, saying the United States has a moral obligation to curb smuggling.

"To do nothing or to fail to do enough would be the most immoral act that I can think of on the part of the government of the United States," Helms said. "If we don't solve this drug problem, it could very well bring us down from within."

"I am calling upon the (Reagan) administration to consider the establishment of an Atlantic coast task force to supplement the fine work of the south Florida task force," he said.

Helms is chairman of the Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Western Hemi-

ECU Groups Schedule Alcohol Awareness Session This Week

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Strange things happen to people who drink alcohol. The shy girl blossoms into the life of a party or the serious executive tells the greatest jokes. At least, that's what a brochure published by the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University suggests.

The brochure, entitled "It's Party Time!", will be handed out at an alcohol fair Wednesday from 1-5 p.m. in the parking lot adjacent to Clement and White dorms on the East Carolina University campus.

The fair, entitled "West Area Gets High," is to teach alcohol awareness to ECU students and to suggest ways to have fun while responsibly drinking alcohol. It is sponsored by the ECU West Area Residence Council and the Campus Alcohol and Drug Program.

"The main thrust of the program is to promote alcohol

Volunteers

County Draws On More Than 4,000 Freewill Helpers

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

There's an "undercover" operation going on in Pitt County that involves 4,351 people and 1,075,062 hours per year and costs the county nothing.

It's been growing for years, but few people outside the "organization" know about it. Once you're a part of it, though, breaking away is tough.

It's volunteerism — over one million hours and 4,000 persons strong in Pitt County, according to unofficial totals — and chances are if you're involved, you'll never let go.

April 17-23 has been declared National Volunteer Week by national, state and local officials, and in Pitt County, the agencies that depend on volunteers are thanking them.

"A volunteer can give a child something that can't be bought," said Alice Keene, coordinator of Pitt County's Community Schools Program, one of the 25-plus local agencies that utilize volunteers.

"If you think about it," she said, "somebody, somewhere, made a difference in your life — in everybody's life. If you think about it again, chances are it's been a volunteer that made the difference, whether it was a scoutmaster, a fireman or just somebody giving more than they had to."

Ms. Keene said the most valuable resource volunteers have to offer is time.

"Some people don't get enough time, particularly children and in this program (Community Schools) time with children makes a whole lot of difference in what teachers and administrators can do with kids," she said.

"The way I view volunteers is, schools (and other organizations) don't have all the resources they need," Ms. Keene added. "The communities have so many of these various resources and if we can draw from them, it's a good exchange.

She said approximately 465 volunteers give 11,200 hours of their time to the Pitt County Community Schools Program annually.

According to an unofficial survey the following five local organizations are currently the largest users of volunteers:

•Community fire and rescue departments estimate they have 847 persons that contribute 843,114 hours annually.

•Greenville Parks and Recreation Department says 95,820 hours are given by 800 persons.

•The Pitt County Boy Scouts depend on 475 people to give a total of 50,000 hours.

•The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service has 24,000 hours contributed by 300 volunteers.

•Pitt County Memorial Hospital has 347 volunteers that give 20,347 hours.

The list of agencies that receive volunteer help includes local services leagues, child development centers, juvenile services, the American Red Cross and mental health centers.

Volunteers say the rewards aren't limited to the organizations, however. Charles Oakley says the time he's given in the last three years as a volunteer in the schools has brought him closer to his community.

"I get a lot of satisfaction out of it," said Oakley, of near Greenville. "I enjoy doing it and I think the kids enjoy it. Besides that, they

Center Honors Helper

Beatrice C. Jones Maye has been named volunteer of the year by the Greenville Pre-Release and Aftercare Center for her work in helping inmates make successful transitions from prison to society.

Mrs. Maye was chosen from approximately 150 center volunteers by employees of the center and she has been recommended for state consideration.

Mrs. Maye's volunteer services to the inmates has included giving counseling about marital problems and family style through questionaires, bibliotherpay, hand-outs, pictures and group discussions.

"Mrs. Maye has shown a lot of expertise in communicating with the inmates. She has a unique way of helping clients make adjustments back into the family," Matt Brewington, a pre-release training coordinator at the center, commented.

Brewington said she was chosen on the basis of the impact she had on the inmates, verbal reports and subjective responses.

"Of all the volunteer work I partipate in, I get a great deal of satisfaction out of working with the inmates because I enjoy the feedback I receive from them," Mrs. Maye said.

Mrs. Maye, a native of Henderson, has lived in Greenville since 1938. She holds a B.S. degree in English and French from North Carolina A & T State University and an M.S. degree in library science from North Carolina Central University.

A resident of 1225 Davenport St., Mrs. Maye is a member of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church and has two children.

She is a past president of the Pitt/Greenville Media Society, a former member of the Greenville City Board of Sheppard Memorial Public Library and a consultant to the East Carolina University Department of Library Science.

Mrs. Maye was appointed to the Elections Study Committee by Mayor Percy Cox in 1981. Her memberships include American Classroom Teachers, American Library Association, the Greenville Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc., National Education Association, North Carolina Association of Educators and North Carolina Library Association.

Mrs. Maye has appeared in a number of publications and was named Southeastern Black Librarian in 1976. She is the organizer of the Lorraine Hansbury Book Club of Greenville and is the author of two books.

Inmates Issue 'Points For Discussion'

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two inmates who grabbed hostages and holed up in a prison basement room after an escape attempt went awry issued a four-page list of "points for discussion" on Saturday, the third day of the standoff.

The hand-written list was passed through the door of the room by one of the hostages, Kostas "Gus" Mastros, said Ken Robinson, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections.

In return, prison officials handed over four sandwiches — the first food sent in since the stalemate began Thursday morning.

"It's a beginning point for us to go forward. At least it's a starting point for negotiations now," Robinson said.

He refused to disclose the contents of the message but said negotiators were "optimistic."

"It was not out of fear" of harm to the hostages that the food was provided, Robinson said.

"We were not going to give them something until we got something from them telling what they wanted to end it. We got that," he said.

Robinson said negotiators could not see into the room, but Mastros, a civilian prison data supervisor, had called out for food just before the list was issued and appeared to be fine.

Four cigarettes were passed through a keyhole for one of the hostages early Friday.

Robinson told reporters at an evening briefing that Mastos spoke by telephone with the negotiators Saturday evening and told them he was fine.

Earlier, Robinson had said that the inmates' "main concern is that they want things to have in their current situation to help them where they are. We're telling them we don't want to prolong this by making you more comfortable. We want to end this."

"The general opinion is that the longer it goes, the better it is," said Thomas Seiverling, administrative assistant to State Correctional Institution Warden George Petsock.

Telephone negotiations between the inmates and officials outside the room have been sporadic since 8:30 a.m. Thursday, when convicted murderer Louis Coviello, 26, and convicted bank robber and murder suspect Richard Henkel, 45, seized Mastros and guard Daniel Kohut at gunpoint.

The rest of the 1,300 prison inmates have been locked in their cells since Thursday morning. Sixty inmates in one section shouted and banged on cell doors briefly Friday in protest over denied commissary items such as cigarettes, Robinson said.

Henkel and Coviello seized the hostages in the Western Diagnostic and Classification Center, a section of the prison, as the inmates were being prepared for appearances in court.

They barricaded themselves in an identification room used for processing inmate transfers.

Gladys Russell of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Coviello's mother, and her daughter, Gigi Coviello, 21, arrived at the prison Saturday morning hoping to talk to Coviello, but were turned away. Prison officials have not permitted family members to become involved in the negotiations.

"The waiting and waiting, the longer I waited the more tension I felt," said Mrs. Russell.

Coviello's father, Joseph, and sister, Lois Johnson, went three times Friday to the prison on Pittsburgh's north side, but they were not allowed to speak with him, Robinson said.

Henkel, Coviello and a third inmate were being strip-searched Thursday morning in preparation for transportation to a pre-trial hearing when the incident began.

Their cells had been searched the previous night after the county sheriff's office received a tip about a possible escape attempt.

Officials said they did not know how the guns were smuggled into the prison.

Henkel was scheduled to go on trial Monday in the May 1979 slaying of Deborah Gentile, 27, who was allegedly killed to collect on an $800,000 insurance policy. Coviello was to testify at his pre-trial hearing Thursday.

Shuttle Returns To Kennedy To Prepare For June Launch

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — One week after completing its successful maiden flight, space shuttle Challenger returned to its launch site Saturday to prepare for a June mission featuring the first spaceship landing at Kennedy Space Center.

Bright blue skies and a crowd of about 2,000 tourists and relatives of space center employees greeted the white-and-black spaceplane as it landed — perched atop a 747 jumbo jet — on the 3-mile-long runway it will use after its second space journey.

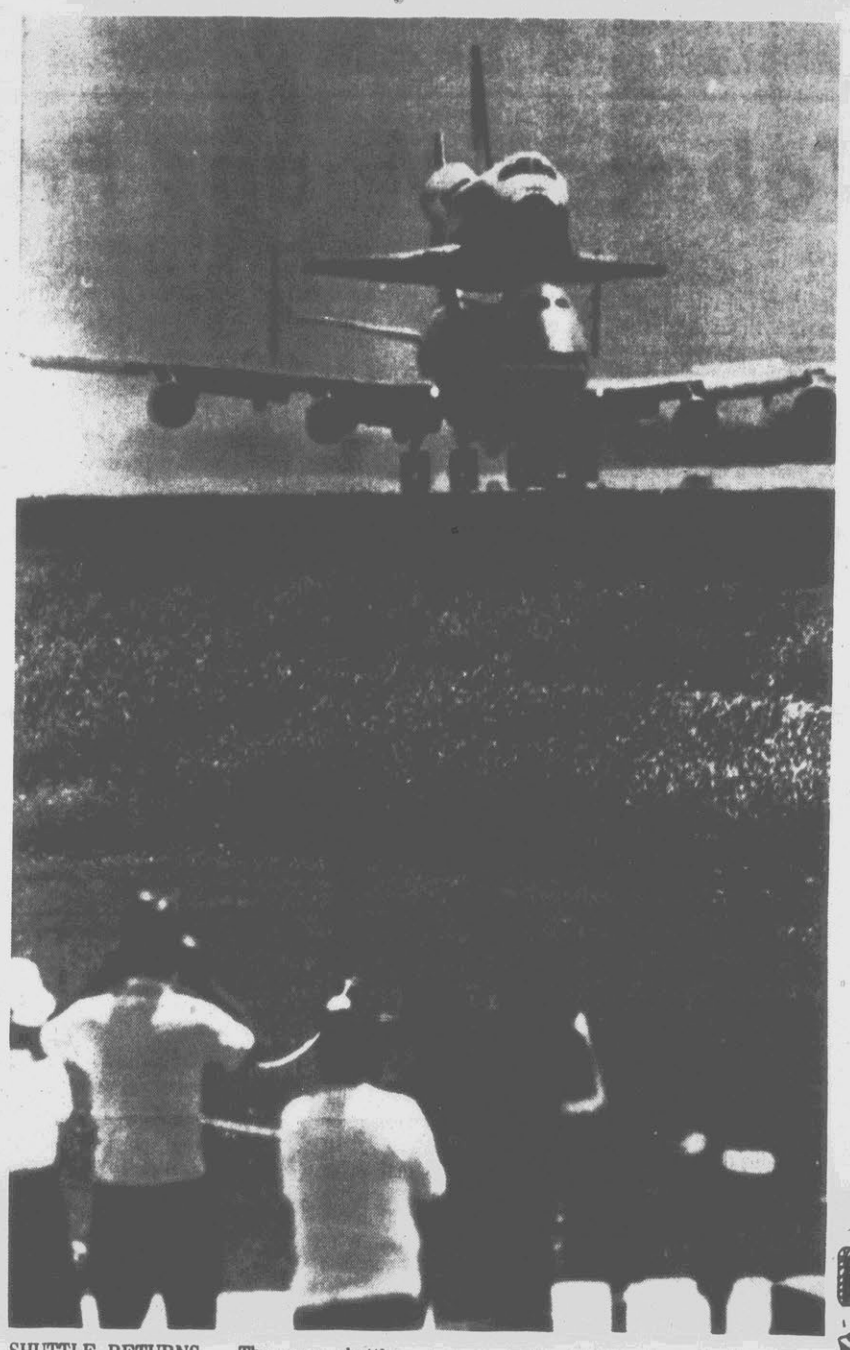

The cross-country trip from the shuttle's California landing site began Thursday morning but was interrupted by stormy weather, forcing the jet to remain at its midway refueling point, Kelly Air Force Base, Texas, for a day and a half.

"You're seeing a real clean bird," said KSC director Richard Smith as the jet carrying Challenger taxied to its "demating" facility after the 12:45 p.m. EST touchdown. "I think we're going to make the early June timetable."

Smith said the target date for the seventh launch of the shuttle program was no earlier than June 9.

"It's in excellent condition," he said of the space agency's newest shuttle. "Our biggest concern was any in-flight anomalies which could delay the turnaround. But there are no real problems. We accept the challenge to launch by then."

Smith said there were "no questions right now about returning it here. Crip (mission commander Robert Crippen) is confident ... the only problem would be bad weather."

SHUTTLE RETURNS ... The space shuttle Challenger, resting atop its 747 carrier jet, lands at Kennedy Space Center Saturday. Bad weather delayed the shuttle's trip, forcing it to lay over in San Antonio, Texas, for two days. The shuttle's next scheduled flight is in June. (AP Laserphoto)

Nobel Laureates Sign Petition

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Five Nobel laureates and 65 other scientists, saying they are frightened for the future of humanity, have signed a petition urging a massive reduction in nuclear arms worldwide.

"The single crucial fact is that the two major world powers now possess a sufficiency of nuclear warheads and delivery systems to destroy each other and a significant part of the rest of the world many times over," said the petition, presented Saturday to officials of Los Alamos National Laboratory, where the first atomic bomb was developed.

The petition was written and the signatures obtained by Paul Olum, president of the University of Oregon at Eugene.

Olum once was a member of the Princeton University team that pulled apart and later rebuilt the Harvard accelerator that was used at Los Alamos.

Nicaragua Frees Trio

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Three American fishermen who were captured Friday by a Nicaraguan patrol boat, apparently in Costa Rican waters, were released Saturday by the Nicaraguan government.

Luke Dallis, 37, of Greenville, Mich.; David Donaldson, 45, of Homewood, Ill., and Harry Kime, 73, of Orange County, Calif., arrived here in the afternoon aboard two small Costa Rican government planes.

Clad in fishing clothes and looking tired after their ordeal, the three were taken to a closed-off section of the airport for debriefing by Costa Rican officials and two U.S. Embassy representatives.

There was no immediate word on how they had been treated. Kime, who has been sport fishing in Costa Rican waters every winter for the past ten years, reportedly suffers from a heart condition.

Two Costa Rican fishing guides, captured along with the Americans, also were released.

A U.S. Embassy spokeswoman said Friday that the Americans were well within Costa Rican waters when they were captured by the Nicaraguan patrol boat at about 9:00 a.m. Witnesses said the Nicaraguans hadlfired shots before capturing the Americans.

Nicaragua issued a statement almost immediately after the incident Friday saying the boats had been in Nicaraguan waters when they were captured. A U.S. Embassy spokesman and fishermen on the expedition who were not captured denied it. Costa Rica filed a protest note with Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguans towed the Americans in two boats to the Nicaraguan port of Bluefields, witnesses said.

Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime has accused the Reagan administration of backing anti-Sandinista guerrillas infiltrating from Honduras, Nicaragua's northern neighbor, but there was no indication the Sandinistas were linking the latest incident to the guerrilla war.

Joseph Bovino, a retired Bayside, N.Y., businessman, and his son Jarald, a Toledo, Ohio, physician, were in one of five 16-foot "johnboats" that set out early Friday on a fishing trip.

They told The Associated Press Friday night that they saw a rusty but armed 50-foot trawler approach from the direction of Nicaragua and pull up next to their boat and one occupied by Edwin and Mitchell Ow, of Oakland, Calif.

The trawler had .50-caliber machine guns on it, they said, and most of the crew was armed and uniformed. They said it flew no flag and had no markings.

Jarald Bovino said their guide conversed briefly with the trawler crew then began to back his boat away.

"He gave it the gas and headed for the Colorado River mouth," he said.

The Bovinos said the boat with the Ows in it did likewise but that the trawler was between two other boats and the shore so those vessels could not escape.

"We heard several bursts of automatic weapons fire," said the younger Bovino. He said they did not see the bullets hit because they were face down on the floor of their boat.

They said the trawler chased them briefly and then turned its attention to the two boats that had been trapped.

The guide of the fifth boat had spotted the trawler earlier and headed for safety before it neared, the Bovinos said. They said the fifth boat had no radio and could not warn the others.

The Bovinos said their boats were about two miles north of the Colorado River mouth which would put them at least 10 miles inside Costa Rican waters.

They and an embassy official said the landmarks setting the border are clear and known to all who ply those waters.

Nicaragua and Costa Rica have had disagreements over border issues in the past, but most centered on interpretation of an 1858 border treaty and the free use of the San Juan River, which forms a natural boundary between the two countries.

Anti-Abuse Plan Said Successful

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — A program requiring Fort Benning soldiers to report cases of child abuse and take courses in how to spot it has produced "astounding" results in three years, officials say.

The Army Family Advocacy Program, which began in April 1980, was made mandatory for soldiers by Maj. Gen. David Grange, then commander of the post, to help curtail child abuse within the military.

"The results have been astounding," said Mary Behrend, coordinator of the program. "We had 125 confirmed cases of child abuse or neglect in 1980, 115 in 1981 and 85 last year."

Rick King, the principal case worker at Benning for the Muscogee Department of Family and Children Services, said the program also has resulted in a significant increase in the number of reports of child abuse.

"Because we've had more reporting, it makes you think there's more child abuse," King said. "But what it really means is that we've made the problem more visible, which has probably prevented some abuse from ever happening in the first place."

Ms. Behrend teaches soldiers and commanders what child abuse is, how to recognize it and how to report it. She also teaches commanders how to rehabilitate the abusers.

"You might not expect it from the Army, but the commanders here are genuinely concerned about family problems," Ms. Behrend said.

"It's not hard for us to get cooperation from the soldiers," she said. "Their commanders order it and it's done — just like everything else in the Army. And the commanders — from (current post commander Maj. Gen. Robert L. "Sam") Wetzel down to company commanders — go out of their way to help us."

When a case of child abuse is confirmed at the Army post, Ms. Behrend's agency works with military police, company commanders, chaplains and Martin Army Community Hospital workers to help the child and parents. Each case is investigated and corrective actions are recommended by a Child Protection Case Management Team, which meets once a week at Martin Army.

The program also tries to prevent child abuse, both by making the problem more visible and by educating military police about the problem.

"An officer will be sent into a home to check out something that might be unrelated to child abuse, but because he's trained to recognize the indicators — in the child or the parent — he leaves a card with the family that tells them where they can get help," said Col. Curtis Earp, Benning's provost marshal.

While the obvious indicators of child abuse are physical signs on the child's body, Earp said military police also are trained to recognize other signs of abuse, such as the way a parent talks to a child.

Hungarian Poet Gyula Illyes Dies

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — Hungary announced Saturday the death of essayist, poet and writer Gyula Illyes, who achieved international recognition for his accounts of the nation's political and social development. He was 80.

Illyes died Friday "after a long illness," the official news agency MTI said.

"He was in all his life devoted to committed humanistic literature," the agency said. "His death is a great loss to Hungarian culture."

"The bird does not sing any more," the state-run radio said in an announcement of his death that referred to him as Hungary's greatest 20th century writer and poet.

Born Nov. 2, 1902, into a family of farm workers on one of the large estates of a wealthy aristocrat, one of Illyes' most popular books was "The People of the Puszta," which was translated into several foreign languages.

Illyes received several Hungarian and foreign prizes for his work, including the Belgian and French Grand Prix of poetry, the Herder prize in 1970 and the Mondello prize in 1981, MTI said.

In 1920 Illyes went into voluntary exile in Paris where he attended the Sorbonne, but returned to Budapest in 1926 and became active in the arts, serving in later years as vice president of the Hungarian and International Pen Clubs, MTI said.

After World War II he helped found the National Peasant Party, and from the late 1970s, Illyes became one of the most prominent spokesmen in the country for the rights of the Hungarian minorities living in Romania, Czechoslovakia and other neighboring countries.

Stone Change Will Not Erase A Bygone Era

A reference to "colored" on a Pitt County Courthouse lawn monument that lists service men killed in action in three wars is to be eliminated.

County officials authorized the work to change the stone after it was called to their attention by a Vietnam veteran, now an ECU student. The work will be done during the summer.

So be it.

If the wording is offensive to anyone we would be among the first to say we should do whatever is necessary to change it. All the individuals listed on the stone gave all they could for our nation. They gave their lives, and certainly they should be honored equally and with dignity.

One has to wonder, however, how far we have come in improvement of race relations if a monument which was erected 30 years ago with the wording of that day is considered offensive today.

And to look at it another way, it says worlds for the maturity of our Pitt County citizens that thousands of us of all persuasions have walked by the stone through years of social change with little thought other than that it was but a relic of the past.

Anyone who lived in Pitt County during those years is well aware there has been great change in the way the races live and work. The old laws of segregation are long gone, schools are fully integrated, separate waiting rooms, drinking fountains and rest rooms have long since disappeared, public accommodations are fully open to minorities.

Apparently, though, attitudes have still not changed to the point where race is no longer a factor in our collective thinking. If they had, the memorial stone on the courthouse lawn would be looked upon as an example of an era past which should be preserved as it is for its historical value.

Erasing the word "colored" from the courthouse lawn monument will not erase the era. Nor can we can ever erase the allusions to slavery and segregation from historical and legal documents. We should not if our society is to guard against such injustices occurring again.

Junior Achievers Gain Experience

The students organize companies, determine a product, raise capital and manufacture and market a product.

It is practical experience for these young people. Not only do they learn how to be a part of the world of business which many of them will enter, but they gain financial experience that will help them manage their own affairs throughout life.

We congratulate the participants in the program and particularly those who won awards for their outstanding efforts.

"IT'S TIME TO DRAW THE LINE AGAINST SOVIET EXPANSIONISM...."

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer — Cuba

HAVANA — Cuban officials responded with wry and wistful detachment to last week's calls for U.S.-Cuban talks over growing tensions in Central America.

Pragmatic as negotiations sound, the Cubans said, appeals by elder statesmen from the U.S. and several Latin American countries probably won't bear fruit. Indeed, interviews with several members of Fidel Castro's inner circle reveal that the common cause needed for negotiations seems non-existent. As a result, the warring factions in El Salvador and Nicaragua may be forced to resolve their differences to the last man.

Of course, the appeal for a "many-sided dialogue" — issued April 5 by a group of prominent citizens including banker David Rockefeller, former secretaries of state Cyrus Vance and Edmund Muskie, and former officials from Argentina and Mexico — seemed to come at a critical juncture. Cuban-backed guerrillas have been mounting a new offensive in El Salvador while U.S.-backed rebels have been challenging the Sandinist government in Nicaragua. Both Havana and Washington have begun to worry that their clients will draw them into larger, unwanted conflicts.

Stressing themes of non-intervention and respect for national sovereignty, the private group suggested that negotiations "should begin among the governments of Central America, their opposition movements, the U.S., Cuba and the Soviet Union ... to explore whether the vital interests of each of the parties can be safeguarded without continuing war in Central America."

Yet, when we made the same suggestion last Thursday to Ricardo Alarcon, Cuba's vice minister for foreign affairs, he said such talks would yield too little, too late, if anything.

Alarcon said that while talks might have been useful to Cuba a year ago when Salvadoran troops were on the offensive, "Now we must wait." Recent events, he said, indicate the FMLN guerrilla forces in El Salvador would "inevitably" prove victorious, perhaps "within a year." In this light, negotiations are no longer squarely in the interest of Cuba or its allies in El Salvador's countryside.

Alarcon feared that a negotiated settlement would be as improbable as the talking points would be vague. A former head of Castro's Havana underground during the 1958 Cuban revolution, Alarcon contended that negotiations would only help the Reagan administration "persuade people that it's not only thinking in military terms."

Cuba's intransigence, unfortunately, is compounded by an equally-reluctant U.S. posture. According to American diplomats here, the Reagan administration isn't interested in sitting down with the Cubans — or their allies in Nicaragua and El Salvador. They say that Cuba's repeated snubbing of U.S. overtures has left Washington cool to the idea.

But, as The New York Times revealed last week, negotiations are generally anathema to U.S. policymakers. The Times disclosed an April 1982 National Security Council document on Central America which stipulated stepped-up efforts to "isolate" Nicaragua and Cuba and "to avoid congressionally-mandated negotiations, which would work against our interests."

Further deflating the prospect for cooperation was the postponement last week of a regional summit scheduled for May. Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala said that talks at present would serve no useful purpose. Few, if any, parties involved in Central America are willing to work out their differences amicably.

Does this mean that negotiations are hopeless? Not necessarily. Incursions by U.S.-backed anti-Sandinist forces have added an ironic new twist to the region's affairs.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

In this area, everyone knows what a 'possum is.

The fat, furry, low slung creatures frequently wander across highways, and they are wiped out in large numbers by relative newcomers to the scene, the automobile.

To look up the species in the enclycopedia, however, one has to add an "o" to the front of the name and search for opossum.

We looked it up and found that there are about 66 species of the mammal in the New World, but the most common, and the one we see, is the Didelphis Marsupialis, which has "a pointy white face, beady black eyes, round black ears, stout body and naked prehensile tail," according to Enclycopaedia Britannica.

It has sharp claws on each foot and a clawless toe for grasping branches and it has 50 teeth. It lives in woodsland near water and "eats almost anything." When surprised it may feign death, hence the term "playing possum."

And if you wonder why there are so many of them, the opposum can have as many as 25 young. The tiny young are born after only 12 to 16 days and are no larger than a honeybee. They survive because the mother has a pouch where they spend four or five weeks. Then they cling to the mother's back for eight or nine weeks.

Nature, no doubt, centuries ago anticipated the automoble when planning was done for the survival of the 'possum.

You might wonder why we did all this research on the 'possum. Well first because there are so many of them. But also because we visited the newspaper office one night recently. There is a rather large tree planted in all the asphalt and concrete at the rear door of the building where we entered.

As we were leaving we heard a rustling in the branches of the tree as we walked under it. High in the branches above was a large 'possum, clinging to a thin branch. This one was a good distance away from any "woodsland near water." Nevertheless he was there.

Why was he there? Well, one office wag suggested he wanted to apply for a reporter's job. After all, Pogo of comic strip fame did all right.

If he wants to work here he will have to come during office hours and apply like everyone else.

Paul T. O'Connor — Legislative Humor Is On The Board

RALEIGH — Every year, 75,000 tourists visit the Legislative Building. Tour guides show them the Senate and House chambers, the auditorium, the committee rooms. But those tourists really miss one of the best sights — the bulletin board in the press room.

Empty, the board is little to look at. But, during a legislative session, it will never be empty. Officially, it exists for the posting of committee notices and other documents. "House Judiciary II will take up HB 999 Friday at 11 a.m."

There are also the press releases posted by publicity-hungry legislators. "Senator Hoop Decries Crime, Applauds America." And reporters use it for community notices. "If anyone wants to form up a softball team, sign here."

Unofficially, the board exists for the entertainment of the press corps, lobbyists and legislators. Board readers are warned — don't believe anything you read. Those with refined sensibilities are also warned. As one reporter put it just the other day, "Nothing is too rude to be posted here."

The board is filled with spoofs and parodies of the legislative process, everything from phony rules to phony cafeteria menus.

After Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green issued a set of Senate rules restricting press movement on the Senate floor this year, several reporters posted their own set of rules, attributing them to Green, or course. Included were the requirements that all bow when Green enters the chamber and that no short people jokes be told while the Senate is in session.

One Green press release was parodied shortly after the lieutenant governor's showdown with Attorney General Rufus Edminsten. The parody, which was dangerously close to believeable, was printed on old stationery belonging to former Rep. George Hux. Fortunately, someone issued the warning: "Beware of Huxters."

Ron Faisson, cafeteria manager, posted a weekly menu and that gave someone an idea. Now a menu parody advertises a "Lieutenant Governor's Special, Shrimp Salad," a "Colcor Special, Filet of (Sen. R.C.) Soles," a special stew named after House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey in which "potential candidates for Speaker simmer in white lightnin'," and a plate named for Sen. George Marion, the Legislature's fanciest dresser, "fancy dressed turkey."

Using a photocopier, it isn't hard to make a phony bill look real. That's what a Charlotte reporter did last year in proposing that the state buy Rep. Aaron Fussell a new sports coat.

Many things are said in the Legislative Building which cannot be printed in family newspapers or broadcast over public airwaves. A special portion of the board is reserved for such quotes. So far, Speaker Liston Ramsey has the best quote — some words on the wisdom of limiting the length of session. Sorry, I can't repeat them.

Other quotes just won't fit anywhere in a story. So, instead of going out on the wires, they are only reported on the bulletin board. Like these, collected in the 1981 session. Sen. Wilma Woolard — "We don't know what we're doing." Rep. John Jordan — "You did a real good job explaining that bill but how about telling me what it does." Sen. Julian Allsbrook — "Sometimes it's hard to get out of the Twilight Zone, it really is." Rep. Charlie Hughs — "You can't play political politics in here."

That's the stuff of which feature stories in Sunday papers are written. Out-of-town reporters sent to Raleigh with the directive of finding an amusing feature stop first at the bulletin board. Maybe it's a good thing that the bulletin board isn't on the official tour. But, if you just stop by on your own, the board is usually good for a laugh, or two.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — O'Neill Emerges As New Power

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill is emerging as a behind-the-scenes power shadowing President Reagan's Caribbean policy in a way that threatens the administration's hopes for a Marxist-free Central America.

When liberal Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin late last month whispered in O'Neill's ear on the House floor that Chairman Clarence (Doc) Long of the House Foreign Operations Subcommittee might finesse a formal vote on Reagan's emergency aid for El Salvador, O'Neill intervened to assure a vote. That undermined both Reagan and Doc Long of Maryland. Then, early last week, word passed quietly to the Oval Office that O'Neill was considering a personal intervention to scotch Reagan's secret plan to undermine the Marxist Nicaraguan government.

O'Neill's sudden and, from Reagan's standpoint, malevolent interest in the administration's Latin policy is only partly a signal that the 1984 presidential campaign is now on the political threshold. It also signals a growing suspicion among liberal Democrats that Reagan has become vulnerable, particularly in his anti-Marxist policies in Central America. These Democrats are prodding O'Neill and he seems to be responding.

Obey was regarded as a crucial swing vote among the eight Democrats on crusty Doc Long's subcommittee, but his confidential appeal to O'Neill showed that in fact he opposed the president. Long's panel must approve, reject or modify Reagan's request to reprogram $60 million for Salvador that was voted for other causes last year. Long, understanding the emergency nature of the request and the relatively piddling sums involved, was inclined to let the president have most of what he wanted — without a formal vote.

Reports differ whether O'Neill, after hearing Obey's warning, wrote Long a letter, asked him on the phone or spoke to him person-to-person about Obey's demand for a formal vote. Whichever it was, it had the effect of dashing Reagan's hopes for quick action.

O'Neill's Nicaraguan intervention, though more shrouded, is intended both to destabilize Reagan's anti-Sandanista effort and to worsen his Salvadoran problem. Liberal Democrats schooled to hate any U.S. Latin policy not built on human rights and pure democracy want O'Neill to challenge Reagan's U.S.-financed campaign.

James J. Kilpatrick — Hollings Offers Ticket A Southerner

CHARLESTON, S.C. — The silver-maned senator from South Carolina, Ernest Frederick "Fritz" Hollings, will make it official on Monday: He will announce his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for president, and with his declaration the field probably will be complete.

Forgive a few metaphors from the track. We have had three scratches: Edward M. Kennedy, Morris Udall and Dale Bumpers. Their withdrawals have reduced the field to six: Walter Mondale, John Glenn, Gary Hart, Alan Cranston, Reubin Askew and Senator Hollings. Writing in The New Republic, Henry Fairlie finds them all a sorry lot. A British national, Fairlie has been watching our political horses run for 30 years or more; he is a 100-proof, aged-in-the-barrel liberal, and when he says this year's candidates are the stuff from which glue is made, we should pay respectful attention.

Former Vice President Mondale, in Fairlie's view, is "a gentrified liberal and party hack" who makes good causes seem a bore and himself irrelevant. Ohio's Senator Glenn, the former astronaut, is a media-manufactured product whose "very political weightlessness should disqualify him." Colorado's Senator Hart is an opportunist whose campaign is guided by "computerized calculations of how not to upset anybody." California's Senator Cranston is a one-issue candidate (arms control), and Florida's former Governor Askew is this year's Harold Stassen. As for Hollings, a "civilized and charming" man, the best that can be said is that he is "a total stranger to the national scene."

I didn't say those things. Henry Fairlie said those things, and I wouldn't challenge his judgment for the world. The Democrats have some first-rate men in the stables: Arizona's Rep. Mo Udall, New York's Sen. Pat Moynihan, Georgia's Sen. Sam Nunn and Washington's Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson, who at 70 is still the best of the lot. For one reason or another, none of them is going for the roses. That leaves the six who have paid their filing fees.

It's a large field, but not a record field. Back in 1972 we had no fewer than 13 Democratic candidates scramblingfor a chance to take on Richard Nixon. The possibility remains that Jesse Jackson may become a late entry as a black candidate for the nomination. If so, his bid would add a measure of suspense to the race.

Here in the Holy City, as Charlestonians modestly identify their home, the locals seem to view the Hollings candidacy with a mixture of skepticism, affection and hometown pride. Conversations with newsmen in Myrtle Beach and Greenville provide the same impression: Fritz Hollings is a nice fellow, but he has no image nationally. Most of the people with whom I talked were speculating that Hollings really is hoping for a place in history as a vice presidential nominee under Mondale or Glenn.

The theory is that the Democrats have litle hope of reclaiming the South's massive bloc of electoral votes unless a Southerner is on the ticket. It's a plausible theory — at least on paper — but that is the best that can be said for it. Jimmy Carter prov;:d that a Southerner could win, just as John F. Kennedy proved in 1960 that a Catholic could win and Ronald Reagan proved in 1980 that a divorced candidate could win. Such points have now been established. Hollings would need more than a Southern accent to rally Southern voters.

But Hollings' prospects ought not to be dismissed out of hand. He gained administrative experience with eight years as a governor. He has served 16 years in the Senate. He looks presidential and he makes a good speech. He turned 61 on New Year's Day. He has an attractive political asset in his second wife, Rita. His voting record is moderately liberal. Nobody is mad at Fritz, and as they say, he ain't mad at nobody. If he can raise the money for an effective campaign, he might surprise the doubters, starting with the doubters in his own hometown.

To the editor:

I have followed with interest the various stories, interview reports, editorials, etcetera on the recent loss by East Carolina University of accreditation by the National Council on the Accreditation of Teacher Education and the granting of provisional accreditation by the North Carolina State Board of Education. I have been a teacher at ECU for 34 years and feel a necessity to set the record straight on some matters repeated by the media.

First, it was not the School of Education only that lost accreditation. It included all schools and departments having graduate and undergraduate teacher education programs. East Carolina University lost accreditation.

Second, we received accreditation by NCATE as the result of a visitation by a committee in 1973. NCATE visits every 10 years asfter campus committee have completed a self-study. That first visitation resulted in accreditation but with recommended changes in governance. These changes were not implemented. At times efforts were made to reorganize, but changes nevr became a reality.

Many of the staff members in the School of Education were aware that, unless changes were made, the university faced the loss of accreditation. It was obvious from our self-study report that the recommended changed had been ignored.

Third, it was suggested by some that NCATE had changed its standards. Only small changes had been made, largely in the area of multicultural education. The major change was in enforcement of standards. If, at the time of visitation, an institution does not meet standards, accreditation is not granted. East Carolina failed to meet standards in governance.

Fourth, while we still have regional accreditation (Southern Association of Colleges and Schools) and provisional state accreditation (North Carolina Board of Education), it is important to have the national recognition that comes with NCATE accreditation.

I hope that the administration at East Carolina Unviersity will move quickly to make the necessary changes in governance. I hope these changes will not be minimal, but will reflect an interest in strengthening teacher education — which was our original mission for the children of North Carolina.

To the editor:

Americans love success stories. A large part of our popular press is devoted to stories about people who have "made it." And lately we've seen dozens of films about young people who have overcome tremendous odds to win a race, a degree, a job, a fight or just recognition for excellence.

One of the most popular of these stories is the "go for it" career of Sylvester Stallone, who wrote and acted and achieved his fantasy in "Rocky."

There is lots of evidence that young Americans are "going for it" these days. There's a new spirit of "can do" around that's heartening.

At the same time millions of Americans are unconvinced that they can achieve their dreams. As a result, they dream but they don't reach out for the brass ring. Often that's because they don't know how to get started or even where to go for guidance.

This spring America's libraries want to remind us all that a good place to start any campaign to "go for it" is at the library. The fact that April 17-23 is also National Library Week is a good reminder that much of what we need to know can be found in books, periodicals, and other resources in our libraries.

Of course, there's a big difference between "knowing" and "doing," but knowing gives us the confidence to begin the doing. That's how Sylvester Stallone tells it. He started to "go for it" at the library.

So can you.

Hoping you will find enough space in your paper for these few words for a fine man. I know there are many people that feel the same as I do.

I was reading in the paper about Dr. Fred Haar receiving the annual service award during the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Foundation banquet. I don't know of any doctor that deserves this any more than Dr. Haar.

I have been taking my children to him for years. There were times I went to his house all hours of the night. Never was he ill or in a bad way. If he didn't know what was wrong he would tell you and he would say, "I will try to find out what the problem is." Studies were made and you bet he would come up with the answer as to what was wrong with the child. I am sure there were times wehn things got on his nerves but to me he never showed this.

Thank, Dr. Fred Haar, for everything you have done.

Chicago Doesn't Pave Way For Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Chicago goes, Illinois does not — not in the past four presidential elections. The days of the big city kingmakers are over, and Mayor-elect Harold Washington need only scan the record of his predecessors to see what can't be done.

Chicago is the most Democratic of major American cities, but Illinois has gone for every Republican presidential nominee since Richard M. Nixon in 1968. Indeed, it has been almost 20 years since the Chicago Democratic organization has been able to get its candidate nominated and elected governor of Illinois.

Richard J. Daley was mayor and Democratic boss of Chicago for 21 years, long enough to see his clout in national Democratic politics wither away. Outgoing Mayor Jane M. Byrne tried to deliver votes for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts in the last presidential primary election, and all she got was embarrassed.

Washington, the first black mayor of Chicago, will have an impact on the 1984 Democratic presidential campaign, but not as a power broker. His more likely role will be as a symbol, perhaps a catalyst, to black voters in 1984, particularly in the Democratic presidential primaries.

"The whole nation is watching, and Chicago has sent a powerful message," Washington said after his narrow victory on Tuesday. Because of the racial rancor that marked the Chicago mayoral campaign, it took on a special meaning for black leaders who want to unite and mobilize black voters in 1984.

They already are talking of running a black candidate in the Democratic presidential primaries. "It's as logical as a black running for mayor of Chicago," Washington said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the Chicago black activist, said the mayoral campaign had stirred interest and activism "not seen since the Selma-to-Montgomery march" for voting rights in Alabama.

A survey of voters leaving the Chicago polls showed Washington got 97 percent of the black vote on Tuesday. With anything approaching that kind of solidarity in Democratic primaries next year, blacks could make their numbers felt and their demands enforceable at the national nominating convention.

Jackson says that 14 million black voters will be registered by next August, and that both national political parties will have to pay attention to them.

Democratic presidential candidates already are. Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale endorsed a Washington rival in the Chicago mayoral primary. "You make a mistake and pay the wrong debt, you're in trouble," Washington said at the time, in the language of Chicago politics.

But Mondale atoned, campaigning at Washington's side through crowds of white hecklers on Palm Sunday. Sen. Alan Cranston of California had backed Washington in the primary, and he campaigned for the mayor, too. So did Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado.

They'll be back next year, for the Illinois presidential primary election. But they may find Washington otherwise occupied, should blacks indeed agree upon a candidate of their own for the Democratic nomination.

Whether that happens, the alliances and favors of 1983 are not necessarily going to pay off for any of the candidates in 1984. It doesn't work that way any more.

After early indications that she'd be supporting President Carter, Mrs. Byrne endorsed Kennedy for the 1980 Democratic nomination and worked for him in the primary campaign. Carter won with 60 percent of the vote. Kennedy got 35 percent.

Daley, a dominant figure when Democrats held their national convention in Chicago in 1968 amid violent demonstrations, wasn't even seated at the 1972 convention. Reformers kicked the mayor and his delegates out of the convention, on grounds that they weren't representative of the party — even though they had been elected in the primary.

In 1976, Carter courted Daley with regular, low-key telephone calls all through the primary season. He entered and won the Illinois primary, but he carefully avoided contesting Daley's chosen slate of delegates in Chicago.

After the primaries were over, the mayor endorsed him. He hadn't forgotten that Carter opposed his ouster from the 1972 convention. Besides, Carter had virtually clinched the nomination.

It wasn't kingmaking. It was frosting on the cake.

Legislator Takes Issue

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Using a relatively minor budgeting position as his power base, a Fayetteville lawmaker has launched the roughest attacks yet in his nine-year campaign against Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Rep. Don Beard, D-Cumberland, has dispatched legislative analysts to examine the salaries and travel expenditures in Ingram's department as well as look at the examination fund used to pay staff members who analyze insurance companies.

His desk bears stacks of documents and flow charts, all designed to buttress his arguments that Ingram is doing a poor job running his department. He adds to the data during meetings of his joint Base Budget Subcommittee on General Government, asking officials how much Ingram's staff should be paid and why the commissioner's lieutenants are at meetings that don't concern their department.

As a result, Beard has generated more interesting stories about insurance issues than either of the General Assembly's insurance committees. That's a far cry from 1981, when both panels seemed to be embroiled every week in some sort of struggle between Ingram and insurers.

Beard — a sales mananger for an insurance company — has focused his most recent attacks on the Insurance Department's payroll and organization. He said his own research indicates the typical department employee is paid $22,000 per year while the average for all state workers is $15,000.

Ingram has said his payroll is higher because the department has an unusually high proportion of workers in professional categories, such as accountants and auditors.

But Beard suspects poor organization might be another reason. He said Ingram has failed to clearly designate a chief deputy to handle Ingram's duties in his absence. As a result, he said, at least four of the five deputy commissioners may be getting paid more than they are worth.

Ingram said he does have a chief deputy and wrote a letter recently to the state Personnel Director that one of his deputy commissioners also has held the chief deputy's post since 1980. But Beard said an organizational chart he received from the commissioner's office showed no slot for a chief deputy.

That absence can cause other problems, Beard said.

"Employees tell me he'll be (at his vacation home) in Myrtle Beach and come in on Friday afternoon and say 'I've got to get this done,'" Beard said. "If somebody had been there it could be done.

"Then he'll get 10 or 11 or 12 people working late that night and the next day, working on it. I've heard of him having two, three, even four people go down to Myrtle Beach to confer."

Beard said his interest dates back to 1974, when he alerted reporters to reports an Ingram supporter named Howard R. Bloom was calling insurance companies and suggesting that, with his help, they could speed the application process to do business in North Carolina. Some of those calls were made from Ingram's office.

In 1977, Bloom was indicted on five counts of attempted extortion. In February 1978, the Roanoke Rapids restaurateur was sentenced to six months in prison after pleading guilty to a count of soliciting money in an attempt to commit bribery.

District Attorney Randolph Riley said he found no evidence Bloom actually enjoyed the influence in speeding applications.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio continue to lead the field of Democratic hopefuls in the race for the 1984 nomination.

In a just-completed national survey, when asked to choose from a list of 16 possible Democratic presidential candidates, 32 percent of Democratic voters select Mondale. Sen. Glenn is No. 2 in the current rankings, but with 13 percent of the vote, he trails front-runner Mondale by a wide margin.

Next in the current choices are former California Governor Jerry Brown, with 6 percent of the support of his fellow Democrats, former Sen. George McGovern with 4 percent, and California Sen. Alan Cranston with 3 percent of the vote.

It should be noted that the current rankings are in some measure a reflection of recognition, and it can be expected that as the lesser-known candidates gain in recognition, they will move up in the rankings.

In January of the 1976 presidential year, the then little-known Jimmy Carter received the support of only 4 percent of Democrats in a Gallup survey.

These questions were asked:

"Which one of these persons (respondents were handed a card with the names and titles of 16 possible nominees) would you like to see nominated as the Democratic Party's candidate for president in 1984? And whom would be your second choice?"

Here are the first choices of Democrats, and the trend from December:

Possible Democratic Nominees
(First choices of Democratics)

	Dec.	March
Walter Mondale	32%	32%
John Glenn	14	13
George McGovern	6	4
Jerry Brown	5	6
Allan Cranston	2	3
All others	15	15
None, don't know	26	27
	100	100

Others on the list, none of whom receives more than 2 percent of the votes, are (in alphabetical order): Reuben Askew, Bruce Babbitt, Lloyd Bentsen, Bill Bradley, John Y. Brown, Dale Bumpers, Gary Bart, Ernest Hollings, Pat Moynihan, Jay Rockefeller, and Robert Strauss.

While the current standings of the two front-runners are a virtual carbon copy of the findings from the December survey, Glenn has made some headway in a two-way head-to-head match with Mondale, when all Democrats surveyed are asked to choose only between these two men.

Mondale has a 52-to-30 percent lead over Glenn in this test, but in December the margin was wider, 59 to 28 percent.

The Sound Is Familiar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cliches are the name of the game, so to speak, in Washington. Some call it bureaucratese or government gobbledygook. Academics call it jargon. But a rose is a rose is a rose. It's still a cliche.

The current one around town is "he's on a roll," meaning the person is enjoying a streak of success. Senate Republican leader Howard Baker was one of those using that one.

That cliche probably will outlast the previous one, "infrastructure," which President Reagan trotted out late last year to describe his administration's proposal to rebuild the nation's network of highways and bridges.

The Reagan administration also provided us with a couple of other cliches, equally terrible, "the window of vulnerability" and "social safety net." The first one refers to the nation's defense against outside enemies; the second refers to the basic welfare programs for the needy.

Going backwards in time, we got a bagful of cliches in the '70s. When two people went "eyeball to eyeball," they were confronting each other in a showdown. "Keep on truckin'" black evangelist Tom Skinner said. He meant, keep pluggin' ahead.

Or there was the "scenario," the plan or way something was supposed to unfold or occur. Or two of the worst, "interface," meaning points of contact, and "bottom line," an accounting term meaning about the same thing as the last word or that of ultimate importance.

During Watergate, former White House Counsel John Wesley Dean III kept saying "at that point in time," a phrase about twice too long, and White House chief of staff Alexander Haig referred to the "firestorm" that followed the "Saturday night massacre" of administration officials refusing to follow orders.

Others came out of the '60s. "Bite the bullet," President Lyndon Johnson and tens of thousands of others said. "Fish or cut bait," Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., said. Somebody else phrased it "paint or get off the ladder." They all meant to get started doing the hard task.

Originally, a "summit" meant a meeting of the highest leaders, and was used to refer to a gathering of the Western heads of government — the president, the British prime minister, the French president, the West German chancellor.

Now, almost any important meeting becomes a "summit" — President Jimmy Carter's 1978 summit on the Middle East, or the upcoming "summit of industrialized nations" in Williamsburg, Va., in May.

Then there was that memorable day in 1962 when a seat mate in a Chicago taxi got out and said to the driver, "Have a nice day." Millions of people repeated that now boring farewell.

President John F. Kennedy was first described as "charismatic." Sociologist Max Weber had an academic definition for the term charismatic, which comes from the Greek word for grace. Now anybody particularly appealing is charistmatic.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower chipped — Ike was a golfer but no pun is intended — in with the term "finalize." He might have said, simply, finish.

But for outright creativity, Western ranchers come up spontaneously with a crack that communicates immediately in a way that everybody understands.

"Cut that out — you're scarin' me," said a rancher when told his cattle were out of the pasture and running down the highway.

Or this one: "He went around me like I was tied," a South Dakota rancher said about a fast driver who passed his pickup truck at high speed.

Wild Ducks And Schools

To say that Joseph P. Knapp was a benefactor of Currituck County would be an understatement. As a matter of fact, the contributions of the the New York millionaire to the North Carolina county were such that the clerk of the Currituck County Commissioners was moved to comment in 1932 that, "Mr. Knapp has given us more this year than we have paid in taxes."

During the 35 years the Knapps lived in the country, Knapp and his wife contributed more than $500,000 to give the county a school system second to none in the state. Their contributions enabled the county to become the first in North CVarolina to adopt a free textbook plan, to serve free school lunches, to employ a school nurse and to use methods of visual education. Knapp's gifts also enabled the county to become one of the first rural counties in the state to adopt a nine-month school term.

Knapp, whose magazine publishing empire included Coller's Weekly, The American Magazine, The Woman's Home Companion, a widely circulated farm magazine and This Week, a syndicated magazine supplement for newspapers, was an avid hunter and fisherman.

It was the lure of wild ducks that first took him to Currituck in 1916. There he met Thomas Dixon, the Baptist minister who wrote the novel that was made into the movie "Birth of a Nation." From Dixon, Knapp purchased the hunting lodge and vast acreage he owned on Mackey's Island in Currituck Sound. Later he built a home on the island and he and Mrs. Knapp surrounded it with gardens of boxwood, camellias and azaleas combined with native hollies and red cedars.

In 1923, Knapp made his first contribution of $50,000 to the Currituck County schools and at the same time arranged with the U.S. Bureau of Education to make a survey of the county schools.

Mrs. Knapp paid for construction of the first brick school house on Knotts Island, the first completely equipped school in the county. Knapp, meanwhile, contributed $175,000 for a new school building at Poplar Branch.

Knapp also made substantial contributions each year to the county Board of Public Welfare and he gave $10,000 toward establishment of the Albemarle Hospital in Elizabeth City. Knapp's contributions enabled the county to build or repair other schools, buy school buses and erect teacherages, and to employ school supervisors, nurses and dentists, music teachers and a home demonstration agent as well as vocational teachers. Home economics courses were set up in the schools.

He took a deep personal interest in the development of the schools and met frequently with the school board to formulate plans and policies. As a condition for his gifts, Knapp insisted that the best available teachers be hired and that salaries be sufficient to attract and hold them; that the "teacher know his or her community and be an all-year helpful resident"; that the primary grades to be utmost importance and that top priority be given to home economics and agricultural courses.

"Our aim is to teach clean homes, good food, good health and good farms as an essential to the well-being of Currituck County," he explained. He insisted that the school board study and adopt the most advanced methods and, saying he wanted teachers "who believe in learning by doing, who have the ability and tact to lead in community life; who love their job and believe that it extends from January through December and over many more hours per day than merely the school hours."

He also believed in helping neighbors with their personal financial problems — provided they were trying to help themselves. During the depression years when many Currituck citizens were threatened with loss of their homes because of heavy mortgages, he helped them meet their payments. He also helped set up and finance their crops, to buy at wholesale prices and to hold their produce for the best market. This co-op helped turn the tide when many farmers faced foreclosure.

Long before he came to North Carolina to live, Knapp had learned a lot about the state from a business associate, James B. Duke, who had founded the American Tobacco Co. and who was later to endow Duke University. For Duke's cigarettes, Knapp's printers turned out millions of small pictures of baseball stars to be packaged with the smokes.

Knapp's biggest single contribution was made through the influence of Dr. Frank Graham, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina. At Graham's request, the Knapp Foundation put up $250,000 to help the state finance a statewide school survey and a fisheries research survey.

After Knapp's death in New York in 1951, his ashes were brought back to Currituck and buried in Memorial Cemetery near Moyock. The adopted Tar Heel had come home to rest. Mrs. Knapp continued to make Currituck her home until her death a few years later.

him to the Pitt County Mental Health Center or Pitt County Memorial Hospital's emergency room, where they are examined," Hodges continued.

"That's when a doctor evaluates the person. If he (the doctor) finds him (the patient) committable, the sheriff then transports him to Cherry (Hospital in Goldsboro).

"If the person is not committable, the sheriff returns them to their home. The doctor determines whether they are to be kept or released," Hodges said.

For those who are admitted to Cherry Hospital, Hodges said, there are still safeguards. "They have a District Court hearing at the hospital on Thursdays to determine if the patient should be kept or released.

Dr. Robert Nenno, a psychiatrist at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, said "we're using less and less of the commitment route if we can get people going to Pitt Memorial. If a person will go in, and 75 percent will, we put them in Pitt Memorial. Pitt Memorial will take anyone we feel is indicated to go in."

After a patient is seen, Nenno said, "We can medicate most of them on the spot and ship them right home to avoid commitment. Commitment for us is a last resort."

Nenno said the commitment laws, "as far as we are concerned, are functioning. We have an excellent relationship with the magistrates.

"Magistrates and the courts are very good about letting us make the decision," Nenno emphasized.

"We ship them to Cherry only if absolutely necessary. From the Pitt County Mental Health Center, we will make only two or three involuntary commitments a month."

He noted that "in may cases, judges will commit a person to outpatient treatment for 30, 60, 90 days."

The prime cause "for people going to Cherry," Nenno said, "is because they are not taking their medication ... the non-compliance people who go off their medication and become quite sick. We have to ship them on (to Cherry)."

Nenno said "we feel the laws here in this state are excellent," with enough safeguards.

"Between the magistrates, ourselves, Cherry and the court system it works very well," he said. "I can't speak too highly of the magistrates or Cherry. The sheriff's department also ... they do a bang-up job in transporting the patients. The men (deputies) are really excellent."

How do the families of the patients react?

"The families are usually the ones that make the petitions," according to Nenno. "They are highly involved. The families are very supportive. I've only had one case in six years here where there was some complaint."

As for the reaction of the patients, Nenno said "the patients are not responsible for their own actions." Many, he said, will object. But the psychiatrist said, "I've never had anyone (patient) come back angry at us.

"The system runs smoothly. It's slick. Everyone is pretty compassionate.

"I think the sheriff, the magistrates and ourselves are very sensitive to the civil rights of the patients. It's for their benefit ... not a helter-skelter thing. There are enough checks and balances," he said.

awareness to students and to promote responsible drinking," Rose Mary Smith, Clement Dorm director/counselor, explained.

The fair will include an aternative bar in which non-alcoholic beverages such as "Double Lime Punch," "Orange Blossom Special," "Cardinal Punch," and "Mardi Gras Punch," will be served. The beverages will be prepared from recipes in the brochure.

Another event at the fair will be an obstacle course to test coordination after drinking. Participants will drink one cup of beer, allow an absorption time, then run, jump rope, touch their noses and walk a straight line. The procedure will be repeated after each cup of beer to test the degree of drunkenness in a person by their coordination skills.

A tricycle race around cones and a ring-toss booth will test a drinker's manipulative skills.

The fair will include movies about drinking and driving, various educational booths, give-aways, a hot air balloon, clowns, candy apples and popcorn.

Members of the Highway Patrol will be on hand for public safety and to administer breathalyzer tests.

The brochure that will be handed out includes such topics as tips on being a responsible host, planning a party, punch and food recipes and what to do if a guest becomes drunk.

One interesting topic covered in the brochure is how to "bird watch" at a party. The brochure lists several types of "birds" to look out for at a party where alcoholic beverages are being served. Examples follow:

•Rail Bird — stays close to refreshments; is found leaning on the bar, hanging around the punch bowl, following the host into the kitchen.

•Peacock — "struts stuff" for other guests.

•Mockingbird — drinks because other people are doing it; can't make own decisions.

•Gooney Bird — giggles and acts giddy.

•Ostrich — has a few drinks and then is out of it; searches for a hiding place for the head.

•Hummingbird — a busy body who's always on the move.

Ms. Smith, along with Janet Johnson, Kathleen Braswell, Dawn Carpenter, Susan Kennedy and Vanessa Higdon, have spent much of their time coordinating the project. Students and other volunteers have also helped and are hoping to make the fair an annual event.

"It's not that we're trying to promote prohibition or anything, we just want students to be more responsible drinkers," Ms. Smith said.

Tobacco ...

Stacy Evans, who heads the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in the nation's largest tobacco producing county, seems to support Whitley's position.

Evans said Friday that the cost of leasing tobacco poundage in Pitt County this year "averaged 65 to 75 cents per pound," with much of it in the 70- to 74-cent range. "The county went to 80, but that was an extreme. The lowest was 60 or less," he said.

However, Evans said the county's lease price "is in some instances" used as a benchmark for other allotment holders. "Some won't lease until they see what the county does" and "there's been a lot of criticism concerning that."

Commissioners are well aware of the criticism.

But, according to board chairman Charles Gaskins, "the county-owned allotment is the property of all of the people of Pitt County and we have to take care of it to the best advantage of the people. We just can't throw it away and let it go.

"We have to make the best use of it we can. It's the people's property and has to be used to the best advantage of all of the people."

And it seemingly has been used to good advantage.

Since the county acquired the allotment when it purchased the 97¼ acres of land for the new hospital, the leases — all at public auction — have brought in $220,612.41 to the general fund.

The first year, in 1972, the 40,667 pounds were leased for $9,453.41, according to County Manager Reginald Gray, and the lease price has gone up each year since.

"It's saved the taxpayers a lot of money," Gray noted.

Actually, the leasing of the tobacco, coupled with the sale of 40 acres of the property to the state as the site of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has turned a profit for the county of some $26,612.

The county paid $389,000 for the hospital property, then sold the 40 acres to the state for $195,000. Add the $220,612.47 income from the allotment leasing to the $195,000 received from the state, and the county has gained $26,612 more than the original cost of the hospital site.

But the county's leasing of tobacco is almost at an end. New federal regulations require that allotment holders who are not actively engaged in farming must sell their allotments by the end of 1983.

So the county-owned allotment will be sold later this year — and bring in the last of the allotment-related income.

withholding would place a burden on the elderly, who are eligible for exemptions from withholding.

In addition, he said small savings accounts with interest of less than $150 a year are exempt so most accounts of low-income people and children will not be affected.

He said the law would actually be "a real convenience" for many people.

"For example, withholding will free many taxpayers from the chore of preparing quarterly tax payments," he said. "It will prevent other citizens from being faced with a substantial accumulated tax bill on April 15th."

Reagan denied the law would reduce incentives to save. "That just doesn't make sense," he argued. "Withholding will have a minimal effect on accrued interest. For example, the annual loss on a $1,000 account earning 9 percent interest would be less than 50 cents.

"But I think most Americans would forgo the 50 cents if it meant others who are cheating on billions of dollars of unpaid taxes would have to pay their fair share."

Reagan, who has previously criticized the banking lobby for trying to get the withholding law repealed, said Congress was considering the repeal "thanks to the pressure from a very busy lobby."

Oakley got involved with the county's Super Champ basketball program and now serves as vice chairman for the Pitt County Community Schools Advisory Board, working with all the programs in the system. He is also active in the schools on a local level and has one child at Pactolus and one at Wellcome Middle School.

Agnes Bunch of Greenville spends spare time with students at A.G. Cox School who need extra help with math and reading. She got involved through the adopt-a-school program and said she was "a little skeptical at first."

"I've been out of the school system for so long and I was afraid I'd run into something I couldn't handle," said Mrs. Bunch. "But I wanted to see how the schools had changed and what I found out is that they have in some ways and in others they really haven't."

Darlene Worley, a three-year volunteer for the Pitt County 4-H Program, and her daughter Lynn of Greenville are teaching a handicapped girl to sew, a task they say has taken many volunteer hours of planning.

"We are still learning," said Mrs. Worley. "We've had to set up the sewing machine for the girls' special needs and now my daughter is working with her to teach her the necessary skills," she said.

Mrs. Worley said she became a volunteer because he daughter joined 4-H as a member at large and wanted to participate in group activities.

"It's given me an opportunity to share and provide leadership," she said. "It's always a joy when you see children grow...I've been able to see growth in my daughter that I never would have been able to share otherwise...and also in others.

sphere Affairs, which sponsored the hearing jointly with the Judiciary Subcommittee on Terrorism and Security.

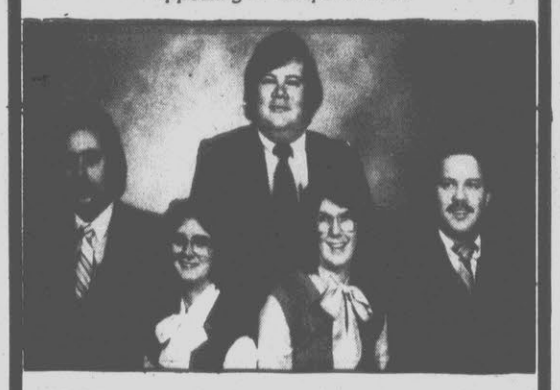

The primary witness before the panel was Admiral James F. Gracey, commandant of the United States Coast Guard. Gracey said the Coast Guard has proposed to the Reagan administration a $500 million plan he said would enable the Coast Guard to intercept 70 percent of drugs smuggled into the U.S by boat.

Gracey said if the money were provided, the stepped-up program could be put into effect within a year. He said the program would involve 3,000 personnel and an increased number of surveillance aircraft and surface craft.

Helms said the Coast Guard deserves increased support of its anti-drug smuggling operations.

Deep Space Exploration Urged

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, with limited science funds, should plan moderately priced missions to Mars, Venus, Titan and a comet before the end of the century, a panel recommended Saturday.

The proposal came from the Solar System Exploratory Committee, made up of leaders of the science community and NASA who have just concluded a two-year study.

The committee noted the first two decades of space exploration were a Golden Age for planet probes — with the United States dispatching 32 unmanned spacecraft to other worlds in the 1960s and 11 in the 1970s.

But only two are scheduled in this decade — to Jupiter and Venus.

"Constrained budgets for the space sciences has resulted in increasingly lengthy intervals between the initiation of new planetary missions," the committee report said. With this in mind, it said it has formulated a core program "in which scientifically exciting missions can be carried out within a framework of cost-saving innovations in both engineering and management."

To keep costs down, the report said, NASA should develop Planetary Observers, which would be derivatives of well-tested Earth-orbital satellites, and a new, modular spacecraft called Mariner Mark II for trips to the outer planets, comets and asteroids.

The committee said the Planetry Observer program should be funded at $60 million a year and the Mariner Mark II at $100 million a year starting in fiscal 1984. NASA will consider both in its budgetary plans.

The first four proposed missions are:

— A Venus Radar Mapper to be launched in 1988 to provide a radar map of the cloud-enveloped surface.

— Mars Geoscience-Climatology Orbiter to be launched in 1990 to gather information on the planet's surface composition, magnetic field and seasonal changes of carbon dioxide, water and dust that interact between the surface and atmosphere.

— Comet Rendezvous-Asteroid Flyby to make a flyby probe of a large asteroid and then rendezvous for a short period with a comet — to photograph the gas and dust boiling off the comet's nucleus and to measure the gas and dust composition. Three comets were mentioned as potential targets for a rendezvous in the mid-1990s — Enke, Tempel 2 and Honda-Mrkos-Pajdusakova.

— Titan Probe to be launched between 1988 and 1992 to examine the unique, orange-colored atmosphere that shrouds Saturn's largest moon and its mysterious surface, which is cold enough for methane to form pools or possibly oceans.

The committee said there are many other missions it would like to recommend but could not at this time because of their high cost. They include the return to Earth of samples from Mars and comets, robot rovers exploring the Martian surface and probes to Neptune, Uranus and Saturn.

Florida Reports Climb In Moonshining Activity

MUNSON, Fla. (AP) — Spurred by unemployment and a possible hike in liquor taxes, moonshiners are making a comeback in the Florida Panhandle, a state beverage agent says.

"We've been getting more information about moonshine recently," said Lt. Bob Baxley, a beverage control agent.

Beverage agents and deputies from two local sheriff's departments staked out a still Tuesday in thick woods about 30 miles north of here near the Alabama border.

Wearing camouflage overalls, Baxley waited and watched a man carrying two 50-pound bags of grain on his shoulders.

But the man saw the officers and raced through the tangled woods. He got away, Baxley said.

At the still, officers found nine 55-gallon drums of sour mash. Each drum could produce 5 gallons of clear whiskey. The officers also found about a 400-gallon cooking pot.

"Whiskey can be made from anything that can rot or ferment," he said. "If a person can see how this stuff is made, they really wouldn't touch it. We've found it rancid with dead snakes in it."

The tax on a gallon of liquor in Florida would increase from $4.75 to $6.50 under Gov. Bob Graham's recommendation to raise alcoholic beverage taxes for the fiscal year that begins July 1. The hike must be approved by the state Legislature, which can modify the governor's budget recommendations.

The last such tax hike was in 1978.

Baxley said the still found near here is the first working still discovered in Santa Rosa County in five years. The area where the still was found is about 60 miles northeast of Pensacola.

"From Munson to Belandville, the area has been noted for a good many years as 'moonshine heaven,'" said Baxley, a 13-year beverage agent in the area.

"Remote-type people live up there," the agent said, pointing to a forest trail. "There was no industry other than turpentine and that had a lot to do with it. It was a way of life for them."

Days Grow Longer For Chicago's Outgoing Mayor, Jane Byrne

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — For four years, Jane Byrne thrived on 13-hour workdays and around-the-clock phone calls. As she prepares to leave City Hall, the hours and the demands are fewer, but her days seem longer.

For Chicago's first female mayor, the days of power, perks and politics are almost over; the city is preparing to welcome its first black mayor, Harold Washington.

"I think we're prepared to turn it over," she said quietly in an interview. "Now it's sort of like waiting for the day in which you do it. It makes the days long."

For Jane Margaret Byrne, these are the days for taking stock — measuring accomplishments and filing away regrets.

"There's a feeling of having it all off the ground, but not completed," she said.

The days are also a time of concern — for the future of the city she loves and the damage done to its world image, which she had cultivated with zest.

The racial tensions that marred Washington's campaign against Republican Bernard Epton and brought in reporters from all over world "hurt" Chicago's image, she said, and that annoys Chicago's No. 1 booster.

What's important now, she said, is for Washington to keep the city moving.

"He's got to bring dissidents together," she said. "He's got to come in with a program. He's got to move the city forward, and those are challenges enough, believe me."

After one term, Jane Byrne is not eager to leave center stage in a city where the mayor is always the star, where her name is on billboards and garbage cans and always in the news.

Jane Byrne, the protege of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley who bucked his Machine to win City Hall, was always the leading player in a sometimes tumultuous tenure on the fifth floor of City Hall.

There were serious moments — she faced three public employee strikes in her first year — and showy moments — she rode a horse down Michigan Avenue and posed as one of the Blues Brothers.

There also were times of trial, like her struggle with city fiscal problems, and times of action, like her move into the gang-infested Cabrini-Green housing project.

With her flair and flamboyance, Mrs. Byrne proved a ready target for the lampoons of critics. Some said she had a split political personality — a "Good Jane" and a "Bad Jane." The media dubbed her "Mayor Bossy" and "Attila the Hen."

At the same time, the petite, straight-talking mayor faced an increasingly disenchanted public, frustrated with her never-ending public duels with enemies, her "revolving door" administration and her political U-turns.

It was a relatively unknown Jane Byrne who captured the mayor's office four years ago, defeating the Machine with little power and less cash. She coasted into City Hall with a record 82 percent of the vote, after narrowly winning the primary on the strength of a snowstorm.

This year, she had a $10 million warchest and the political muscle of her patronage army, estimated at 30,000 strong. But with two strong opponents, it wasn't enough to keep her job.

There's no doubt Mrs. Byrne regrets that.

A former debutante turned seasoned politician, she is neither meek nor mild when it comes to touting her administration.

She rattled off her accomplishments: a rapid transit line to O'Hare International Airport, the first contract for firefighters and police officers, restoration of the city's financial health and bringing the World's Fair to Chicago for 1992.

"For 3½ years, it's pretty good. And I say 3½ because we've spent, it seems to me, better than half the fourth year campaigning," she said.

Even after the primary, Jane Byrne was not ready to pack it in. She had lost by only 30,000 votes and briefly flirted with a write-in bid.

She abandoned the idea when supporters abandoned her.

Mrs. Byrne bristled at mention of the bitter campaign between Washington and Epton.

If they had emphasized programs rather than personal attacks, "people would be sitting today, saying this is what HE stood for and this is what HE stood for, and therefore we're in pretty good shape," she said.

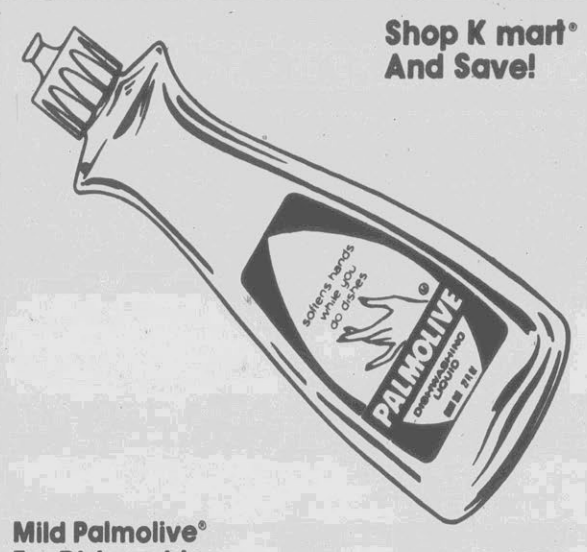

Mrs. Byrne was a constant promoter, prancing down the street in riding gear to promote a horse race, singing off-key in music festivals and even donning a fedora and shades to pose with Dan Aykroyd and the late John Belushi as a third "Blues Brother."

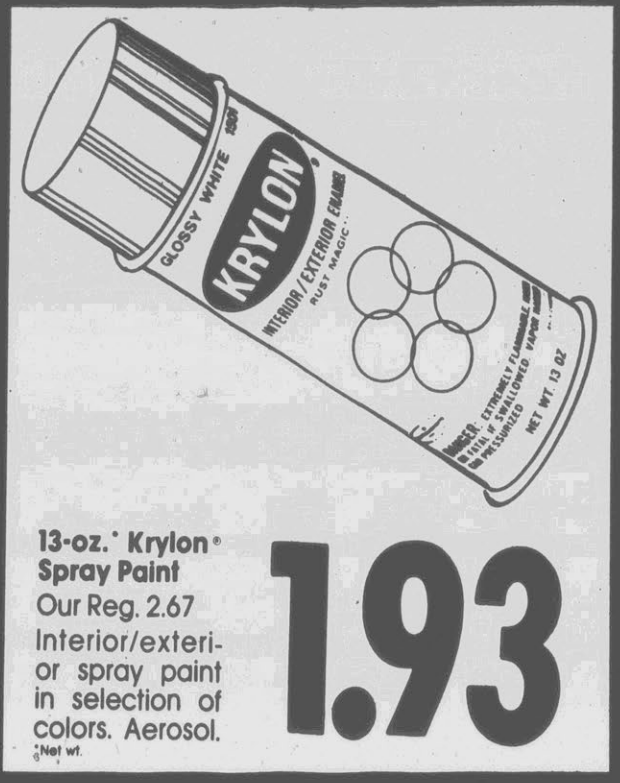

She added the word "fest" to Chicago's vocabulary, organizing a music or food festival for every season and every ethnic group. One newspaper denounced her administration as "Chaosfest."

But Mrs. Byrne defended the frivolity.

"The people loved those fests," she said. "With every event you saw more and more people returning to use their city.

Canada Seeks Help For Its Arctic Claim

By KEN MacQUEEN
Canadian Press Writer

The government is spending more than $1.4 million on the project — both for scientific research and as part of a 5-year-old effort to exert sovereignty over the region.

The Canadians hope to control the land in advance of any efforts by U.S. firms to exploit its unproven mineral resources, and as a hedge against Soviet activity in the area.

It still is not Canadian territory. But the red-and-white maple leaf flag, planted among the camp's 20 tents and prefabricated buildings, waves over a vista of ice — some flat, some buckled into pressure ridges — and snow that forms new designs with every wind.

The immediate goal of the scientific effort is to find out more about what lies below the base for the Canadian Expedition to Study the Alpha Ridge — known by its acronym, CESAR.

The Alpha Ridge is a jumble of undersea peaks and valleys stretching about 800 miles from Canada's Ellesmere Island toward the East Siberian Sea.

Hans Weber, a veteran Arctic explorer who is chief scientist on the expedition, says the research will determine whether Canada may lay claim to the range and any resources it may hold.

The Soviet Union has a permanent ice station about 180 miles farther west, but Weber says his primary interest is learning about the Alpha Ridge, which he calls an "enigma," rather than worrying about whose territory it might be.

"To tell you the truth, I don't give a damn," he said. "That's up to the lawyers to decide."

James Tanner, project manager for the Canadian Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, said in an interview in Ottawa that a claim would require strong evidence that the ridge is "a natural prolongation" of the continental shelf, not a free-standing mountain range.

Under the international Law of the Sea treaty — which was rejected by Washington but signed by Ottawa — Canada would have 10 years to apply to extend its offshore economic zone, currently 200 miles, out over the ridge.

About three weeks ago, Canadian Forces soldiers began work on the camp by chopping and blasting a 1,600-yard runway out of the drifting pack ice.

Equipment, food and fuel was carried to the site by aircraft. Working with numbed hands in the 24-hour sunlight, scientists and support staff assembled their tents and unloaded more than 1,000 barrels of fuel.

Fourteen journalists spent three days at the ice station, observing science in slow motion. Bundled against 40-below temperatures, scientists struggle to keep sensitive equipment operating inside drafty tents heated by diesel stoves.

A team headed by Ruth Jackson, a geophysicist with the Bedford Institute of Oceanography in Nova Scotia, is hauling core samples through holes in the ice from the ocean floor more than 6,000 feet below.

They are exploding dynamite and firing air guns underwater, learning the characteristics and type of rock in the ridge by the way sound travels through it.

The findings will help determine if the ridge was formed by volcanic action, or in a buckling of the ocean floor, or — if Canada is fortunate — as an extension of the continental shelf. An answer is expected by fall.

Although the polar ice cap sits in isolation at the top of the world, scientists have found evidence that waters of the Arctic Ocean include a mixture of currents from the Atlantic, Pacific and other oceans.

Two groups of scientists have found low-level radioactive contaminants from other parts of the world and are using them to trace the currents.

Valery Lee, a chemical oceanographer from the University of Miami, is tracing samples of tritium, which entered the oceans in atmospheric testing of atomic bombs.

Robert Moore of Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia is searching for further samples of Caesium, which he found in water near the Pole four years ago.

He believes the source is discharge from Britain's Windscale reprocessing plant where uranium is extracted from the spent fuel rods of nuclear reactors.

To the layman, perhaps the most familiar work is being done by Nick Prouse — also from the Bedford Institute — who is fishing through the ice.

Showing off a toothy, 17-inch rat fish, and sounding more like more a boastful fisherman than a marine ecologist, Prouse said, "It's probably one of the most northerly fish ever caught."

Syrians Show Hardened Stance On Lebanon

By The Associated Press

Syria sent tough warnings to Israel on Saturday, staging war drills and rejecting withdrawal of Syrian forces from Lebanon until all Israeli troops have left that country.

The Syrian moves came as U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib returned to Israel after briefing Egyptian officials on negotiations for a withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon. A U.S. Embassy official said no meetings had been set between Habib and Israeli ministers.

Syria's official SANA news agency said the Syrian drills followed two days of intensified reconnaissance flights by Israeli jets over Syrian positions in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. Israeli and Syrian forces also have been reported to be bolstering their artillery and tank positions in the valley.

SANA said Syrian infantry and warplanes staged the exercises at an undisclosed Syrian area to train the army in reacting to an enemy attack.

"Jet fighters, helicopters and various other kinds of armor took part in the tactical project. Combat units were capable of performing their tasks with a high degree of skill and competence," it said.

The Syrian government newspaper Tishrin said in a front-page editorial Saturday that Syria rejected the concept of a simultaneous withdrawal with the Israeli army from Lebanon.

"Syrian presence in Lebanon is different from Israel's aggressive presence," the newspaper said. "We want to make it plain that Syrian forces will not begin a withdrawal from Lebanon unless the Israeli invasion forces have completed their pullout from that country."

In the U.S.-sponsored troop withdrawal talks between Lebanon and Israel, the government of Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has been insisting on a simultaneous evacuation of all foreign troops in Lebanon.

Israeli forces invaded Lebanon on June 6 to smash Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla bases. An estimated 25,000 Israeli troops remain deployed in southern and central Lebanon and on the western fringe of the Bekaa.

Thousands of PLO guerrillas are in north and eastern Lebanon behind Syrian lines. About 30,000 Syrians have been in the country for more than six years to police an armistice that ended the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war.

The Syrian editorial reflected a hardened stance on the withdrawal talks. Previously, the Syrians had indicated they might start withdrawing their forces once the Israelis began pulling out.

The editorial also warned the Lebanese not to give any advantages to Israel in the form of commitments, guarantees or special arrangements that might imperil Syrian security. The Israelis have been insisting on keeping some Israeli troops in southern Lebanon for anti-guerrilla patrols.

"In such a case," the newspaper said, "Syria may declare it will not withdraw its forces from Lebanon.

Polish Police Seize Solidarity Supporters

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police seized at least 26 Solidarity supporters, along with radio transmitters and printing presses, in a crackdown against the underground in Warsaw and eight other cities, state television reported Saturday. It said one of those seized was plotting May Day protests.

The announcement came after Solidarity chief Lech Walesa's driver was released from 25 hours' interrogation in Gdansk and a summons was issued for Walesa's spokesman, Adam Kinszewski, to appear for questioning Monday.

The driver, Mieczyslaw Wachowski, said he told police nothing about Walesa's weekend meeting with fugitive union leaders. Walesa was questioned for five hours Wednesday and his wife Danuta for three hours Thursday, but they also said they told police nothing.

Solidarity's underground Temporary Coordinating Commission issued a communique Thursday calling for nationwide protest marches on May Day. Walesa declined to endorse the protest call publicly, but said he and the underground had agreed to coordinate policies.

The TV report Saturday did not name any of the five members of the Temporary Coordinating Commission as being among those seized.

The most important figure reported detained in the crackdown, which apparently took place Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, was Zbigniew Belz, a member of Solidarity's elected 107-member National Commission. He is from Gorzow Wielkopolski, a city of 110,000 in western Poland.

Map Presented

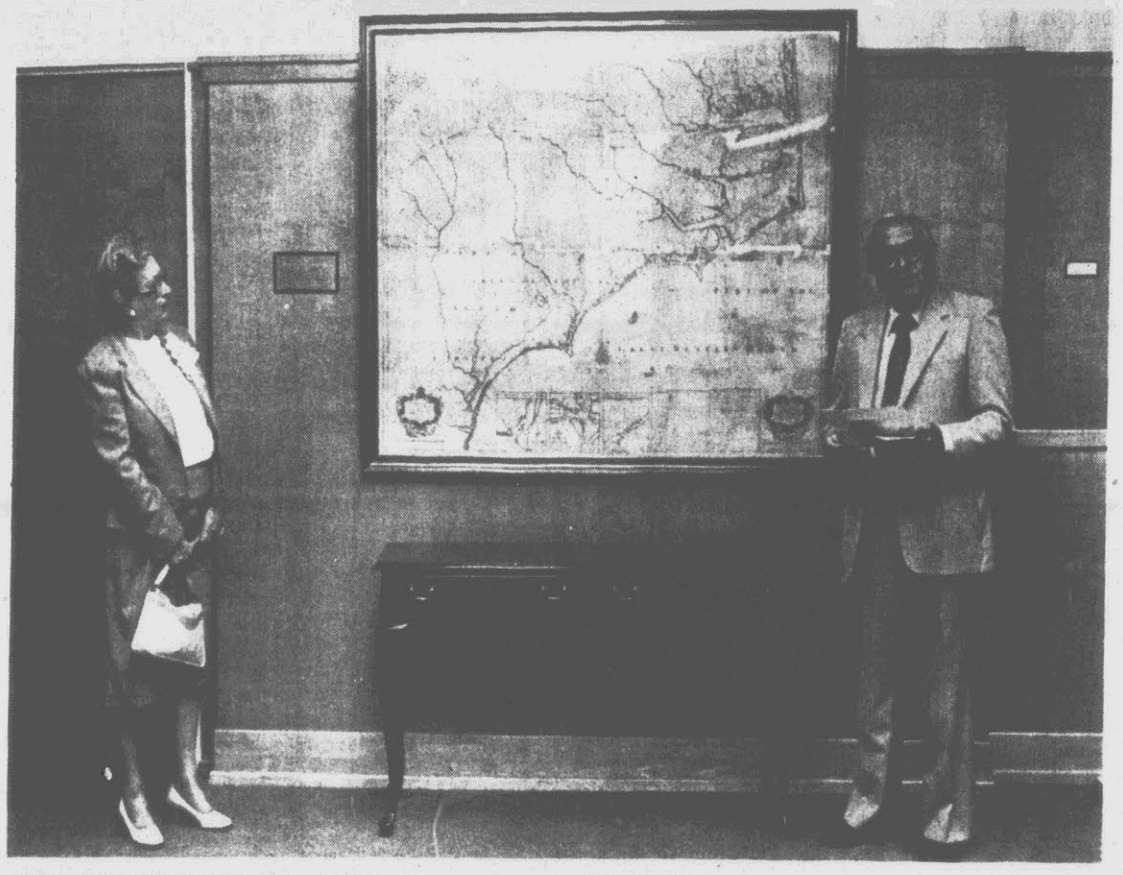

A rare, restored 1733 Edward Moseley map of colonial North Carolina is now on permanent display in the East Carolina Manuscript Collection of East Carolina University.

Mrs. John W. Graham of Edenton, who gave the map to the university, unveiled the framed document at a recent reception at ECU.

Donald Lennon, director of the manuscript collection, discovered the Moseley map last fall among papers stored in the attic of Wessington mansion in Edenton. He recognized it as one of the only three known originals drawn by royal surveyor-general Edward Moseley in the early 18th century.

It hangs in a new portrait gallery and exhibit area of the manuscript collection section of J.Y. Joyner Library. The wall display also featured an original 1779 Antonio Zatta Italian map of the mid-Atlantic states.

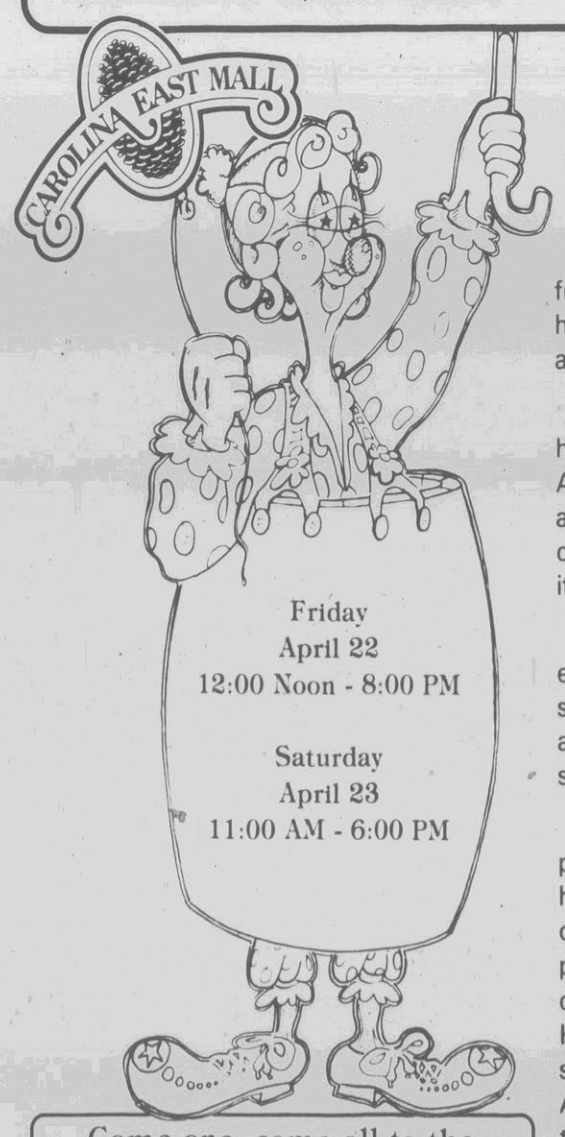

Lennon said the Moseley map was restored by map artists in Pennsylvania and the cost of restoration and the redecorating of the search area was borne by the Manuscript Collection endowment.

China Shells Vietnam's Border In Retaliation

By MICHAEL ROSS

PEKING (UPI) — Chinese forces unleashed heavy artillery barrages on Vietnamese border positions Saturday in what the government called retaliation for cross-border attacks by Vietnam that continued despite repeated warnings.

Chinese troops pounded Vietnamese installations and "destroyed" several of them, the official Xinhua news agency said.

The clash followed several weeks of accusations by Peking and Hanoi. Each had claimed the other's forces committed provocations along the tense frontier. China warned Vietnam it would suffer "grave consequences" unless the incidents ceased.

Sporadic skirmishes erupt intermittently along the China-Vietnam border, but reports of heavy fighting are rare.

There was no immediate word of casualties and no comment from Vietnam.

Peking radio and television both began evening newscasts announcing that "heavy counterattacks against the Vietnamese aggressors" were under way.

Xinhua said artillery units in Guangxi province, one of two southern provinces bordering Vietnam, opened fire on the Vietnamese Saturday morning.

"Reports from the artillery observation post said that the shelling hit and destroyed earth defense works of the Vietnamese troops," Xinhua said.

"The Vietnamese authorities have continued armed provocations against Chinese border areas in the last few days in disregard of China's repeated warnings and protests. Chinese frontier guards were forced to fire back."

The border clashes came as Vietnamese occupation troops in Cambodia pressed their dry season offensive against Peking-backed Khmer resistance elements near the Thailand-Cambodia border.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the anti-Hanoi resistance coalition, was on his way by train from North Korea to Peking, his sometime home, Xinhua said.

China pledged in February to come to Thailand's aid if the fighting spilled across the Thai-Cambodian border — as it has in the past two weeks.

But Western diplomats in Peking said they have received no reports of unusual troop movements in southern China near the Vietnamese border.

Xinhua said the shelling was in retaliation for several weeks of Vietnamese attacks that inflicted "heavy losses of (Chinese) life and property."

"In March alone, Vietnamese aggressors conducted more than 50 armed provocations against the border area, killing and wounding several Chinese frontier guards and civilians," Xinhua said.

Knievel Pushes A Brush Now

NORTH ROYALTON, Ohio — One-time motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel no longer wants to waltz with death. He now wants to choreograph life with a paint brush, he says.

Knievel, who now lives in a Cleveland suburb, says "Painting, and being withdrawn from life as I am, makes me happy."

Tape Figures In Trial

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — A farmer who claims he was insane when he killed his wife's ex-husband changed his story about the slaying after finding out it had been recorded on tape, a prosecutor says.

Paul Wolf, 21, of La Feria is on trial in District Court in last summer's slaying of Leticia Castro, a school teacher who was engaged to marry Billy Staton, previously married to Wolfe's wife.

Wolf also faces trial later in the slaying the same night of Staton, who had gone to the Wolf home with Miss Castro to pick up his daughter for a picnic.

The prosecution says the tape revealed "23 minutes of murder." Wolf contends the recording depicts a sudden act of insane violence spawned by his love for a child and fear for her mental health.

Arsenic-Laced Toys Found

PHOENIX, Ariz. — About 400 stuffed Easter chicks containing arsenic have been sold through floral shops in the Phoenix area, a spokesman for the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission said Saturday.

The spokesman said there have been no reported incidents of arsenic poisoning due to contact with the decorative chicks, which were stuffed in China and shipped to the United States for use in floral arrangements. The chicks have been recalled by the importers.

Authorities in Ohio, where the alert began earlier this month, have said the chicks turned up in Indiana, Georgia, California and Washington as well as Ohio. The chicks also have been reported in the Dallas area.

Attenborough Urged To Boycott

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A banned Indian activist on Saturday urged Sir Richard Attenborough to boycott South African screenings of his movie "Gandhi" and accused the director of sacrificing Mohandas K. Gandhi's memory "at the altar of international capitalism."

The activist said Attenborough, whose movie won eight Oscars last week, should have protested South African racial segregation by refusing to attend what he called "token" multiracial premieres of the movie.

Mawalal Ramgobin, former president of the Natal Indian Congress founded by Gandhi in 1894, said Attenborough ignored pleas from himself and other anti-apartheid activists by agreeing to come to South Africa next week for the local debut of "Gandhi."

Ethel Merman In Stable Condition

NEW YORK — Musical comedy star Ethel Merman was in satisfactory and stable condition Saturday after surgery earlier in the week to remove a brain tumor, a hospital spokeswoman said.

"The doctors feel it will take two to three days to evaluate the results of the surgery," said Ann Burton, a spokeswoman for St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center.

Artifacts Worth $5 Million Stolen

TEL AVIV, Israel — Thieves broke into west Jerusalem's Islamic Museum early Saturday and stole rare watches, clocks, books and a painting valued at $5 million, police said.

The museum's display of timepieces features dozens of antique clocks and watches from all over the world, and is in a room separate from the displays of Islamic artifacts.

Landmines Hurt 22

BANGKOK, Thailand — Two landmines blew up along the Thai-Cambodian border, wounding seven Thais and 15 Cambodians, a spokesman for the International Committee of the Red Cross said Saturday.

They were the latest casualties reported during the 17-day-old Vietnamese sweep to wipe out Cambodian guerrilla resistance in bases near the Thai border. Relief officials say Vietnam's push has left hundreds dead and forced tens of thousands of Cambodians to flee into Thailand.

Skeletal Remains Found

BOGOTA, Colombia — The skeletal remains of 100 people believed killed by smugglers during illicit marijuana operations were found in a remote cave in northern Colombia, authorities disclosed Saturday.

The skeletons were found accidentally by a military squad near Becerril in the district of Cesar, 400 miles north of Bogota, which borders on Venezuela. A military police spokesman said the remains may have been in the cave for as long as five years. He said the skeletons were found in the darkest area of the cave and were stacked "side by side."

Wounded Deputy Dies

WEST COVINA, Calif. — A Los Angeles County sheriff's sergeant critically injured in a shootout three days ago while serving a narcotics search warrant died Saturday after doctors removed live support systems, a sheriff's spokesman said.

Doctors at Queen of the Valley Hospital removed life support from Sgt. Larrell K. Smith at about 10:30 a.m. at the request of his family. He was pronounced dead 13 minutes later, said Deputy Bob Dearmore.

Smith, a 17-year-veteran of the department, had been in critical condition since the shooting, which had left him with brain stem damage.

Double Barreled Celebration In Grifton

Town Celebrates 100th Anniversary and 13th Annual Shad Festival April 13-17

DIFFERENT DRUM ... Pounding out the rhythm for the band, a drummer in the parade appears absorbed in his music. The D.H. Conley Marching Band won the first place band trophy for 1983.

IF YOU THINK I'M NOT HAVING FUN ... you'd better think again! Carrying a tattered umbrella, this seemingly sad clown delighted festival-goers by not cracking a smile.

SALT, VINEGAR AND SHAD ... All the ingredients for a good lunch are on this table of fish-eaters. After lunch, the Ayden Allemanders square-danced with the crowd and the Capital City Cloggers and Buck Swamp Cloggers gave performances. The April 13-17 festival will conclude Sunday with canoe races, the Spring Shad Run and a concert by "Sunshine," a country pop group.

A PORTION OF THE CENTENNIAL MURAL ... A 32-foot mural depicts historical objects in celebration of Grifton's Centennial and 13th Annual Shad Festival celebration. It was drawn and painted by students under the instruction of Fausto Cardelli in classes sponsored by the town of Grifton. The students spent 10 Saturday mornings working on the mural, which features umber tones resembling early sepia photographs. Suitable pictures relating to the town's centennial celebration were found in old catalogues and books.

Money Finder Sues The Loser

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Joey Coyle, who took $1.2 million that fell from a Purolator Armored car but was acquitted of theft by reason of insanity, has sued the company, charging its negligence made him crazy.

"Finding the money, that was the shock, but all of the noteriety of the trial, the entire incident taken as a whole is what ruined him," said Coyle's lawyer, Harold Kane. "The kid just couldn't handle it."

In a lawsuit filed Friday in Philadelphia Common Pleas Court, Kane asked for the minimum amount of damages, $20,000.

"We're suing basically for their failure to use responsible care in the way they transported money as a result of which my client was injured," Kane said.

Coyle, 30, an unemployed longshoreman at the time, found two sacks of money on the street Feb. 26, 1981. Coyle, who never denied taking the money, was arrested in New York by FBI agents March 3, 1981, when he tried to flee the country with $105,000 in $100 bills stuffed in his boots.

He was charged with theft, receiving stolen goods and theft of mislaid or stolen property. But on March 5, 1982, a jury found him not guilty by reason of insanity.

Kane said the suit charged Purolator with negligence for not properly securing the money that fell from the back of a truck without the driver knowing it.

Coyle allegedly spent $196,000 of the money in a six-day spree before his arrest. All but that amount of the money was recovered, some found stashed in weeds in a vacant South Philadelphia lot.

Jurors questioned after finding Coyle not guilty said they reached their conclusion by simply putting themselves in Coyle's place.

Juror Millicent Seagraves said that throughout the trial she asked herself what she would have done if she had been in Coyle's place.

Her conclusion was "probably the same thing."

Following his acquittal, Coyle said in a published interview that finding the money "was better than sex," but he added that keeping the money was stupid.

Teamsters To Select President

WASHINGTON (AP) — The executive board of the troubled Teamsters union will choose an interim president this week after bidding a bittersweet farewell to Roy Lee Williams.

Buffeted by dissident calls for a rank-and-file election — and a demand by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, to "clean house," — the union leadership will decide the issue in secret at a meeting opening Tuesday in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Officials at the headquarters of the 1.8-million-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters here refused to discuss what union leader might ascend to the presidency.

Other Teamsters, who were willing to talk about the election only on the grounds they be granted anonymity, said the contest likely will be between Ray Schoessling, the 75-year-old secretary-treasurer and trusted Williams aide, and Jackie Presser, a Teamster vice president who heads the 120,000-member Ohio Conference of Teamsters.

These unionists also mentioned the names of Joseph Morgan of Miami and Andy Anderson of Los Angeles as possible successors to Williams, 68, who relinquished his $225,000-a-year Teamster presidency on Friday.

U.S. District Judge Prentice H. Marshall of Chicago agreed to stay a provisional 55-year prison sentence handed to Williams, convicted of conspiring to bribe a U.S. senator, when Williams' attorneys said the Teamster leader would resign and sever his ties with the nation's largest union.

Williams will remain free on bail while he pursues his appeal of the conviction.

The leadership had supported Williams throughout his ordeal, referring to him at one point as "our much maligned leader."

The government had sought the immediate ouster of Williams, who suffers from severe emphysema. But defense attorney Raymond Larroca asked that Williams' resignation be effective this Wednesday so Williams could step down at the executive board meeting.

Williams had been convicted of conspiring to bribe Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., in connection with trucking deregulation. Cannon, who was never charged in the case, was defeated last November.

U.S., Mexico Open Harmony Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz and two cabinet colleagues set out for Mexico Sunday for a two-day visit that officials hope will narrow the broad differences of the two countries over Central America, Mexican immigration and other issues.

The unusually senior-level delegation, which also includes Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, reflects the high importance the administration attaches to maintaining stable relations with Mexico, officials said.

The most divisive issue has been Central America, where Mexico's opposition to Reagan administration policy has generated considerable cross-border acrimony.

Shultz told a gathering Friday in Dallas that Mexican authorities dispute the U.S. view of Central America's problems "by a fair distance."

"But I think that's a good subject for us to discuss," he said. "This is a new (Mexican) government and we'll see if we can find a way to work cooperatively on this problem. It certainly is a problem that we share and we'll both be beneficiaries if it can be resolved peacefully."

Mexico has been on friendly terms with Nicaragua and has implicitly accused the United States of attempting to sabotage the Sandinista revolution through covert operations.

Mexico also opposes U.S. military aid to El Salvador and, in contrast to the American position, advocates negotiations between the government and the guerrillas.

Another source of conflict with the United States is the repeated American assertions that the upheaval in Central America could spill over into Mexico.

Refuting such suggestions, Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda observes that Mexico is "an awfully big domino."

Shultz resurrected the domino theory on Friday, asserting that what is happening in Central America "could endanger our own security and that of our friends throughout the Caribbean Basin — from Mexico to the Panama Canal."

Under questioning later, however, Shultz said he does not foresee social upheaval occurring in Mexico in the foreseeable future.

"I don't say that as though I don't realize there are problems there as there are here," he said. "But they have a long track record of being able to handle their problems."

The highlight of Shultz's visit will be a meeting Tuesday with President Miguel de la Madrid. The two governments also have set aside several hours of discussions on a broad range of bilateral issues, including emigration from Mexico, and disputes over fishing rights and border problems.

Of these, the most controversial is a proposal in the U.S. Congress for curbing the flow of illegal aliens from Mexico. In December, the Mexican Senate took the highly unusual step of expressing "alarm and concern" over the proposed legislation, which contains a mixture of worker identity cards and stiff penalties for employers who hire illegal aliens.

U.S. officials, who requested anonymity, say the bill has a good chance of passage this year.

Legislators Predict Cuts, Higher Taxes To Balance New Budget

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some legislative budget leaders are betting that a combination of tax increases and spending cutbacks will be needed to balance the proposed $12.5 billion state budget for the next two years.

But they say it could be mid-May before they know how large the cutbacks or tax increases will need to be.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said he believes budget committees can cut about $30 million, primarily by eliminating vacant jobs and removing some of the spending flexibility that state officials now enjoy.

But Adams said $95.7 million is needed to lift the freeze on salaries for state employees' and teachers', $30 million more to give state workers not affected by the freeze a pay raise and $50 million for repairing state buildings.

The joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee is in the process of reviewing cutbacks identified by subcommittees. Legislative budget leaders say they want to vote first on the cuts to be made regardless of the state's financial condition and then consider requests for money to expand old programs or start new ones.

Gov. Jim Hunt's $12.5 billion two-year budget included money for lifting the salary freeze with the help of an 8.8 percent growth in state tax revenues.

But legislative analysts said Hunt was too optimistic about the economic recovery and estimated that revenues would grow by only 7 percent, $92.7 million less than Hunt predicted.

That sent budget subcommittees running to identify possible reductions of 1 percent, 2 percent or 3 percent. Each 1 percent reduction is worth about $32 million.

"I am more confident now of my budget figures than when I submitted them," Hunt said last week, noting that sales tax collections for March were up about 8 percent. "I don't think there's going to be a shortfall."

"The economy will not provide it (money to pay for Hunt's programs) by any responsible estimates we've seen," Adams said, adding that Hunt may have seen additional, more optimistic figures.

"Lifting the freeze takes an awful lot of money," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir. "If the freeze is lifted we're just going to have to lift taxes."

Adams said that he was confident the Legislature would do something about raising the $120 sales tax ceiling on new cars and boats. Another idea he said he expects to be seriously considered is acceleration of corporate tax payments to generate $120 million over the next three years.

A third way to raise money would be to do away with the practice of tracking changes in federal tax laws without legislative action. The federal accelerated depreciation schedule, implemented without legislative action, is expected to cost the state about $35 million a year during the next biennium.

Adams said the state Constitution says the General Assembly has the power to levy taxes and it cannot delegate that authority, making the current practice unconstitutional.

State Budget Officer John A. Williams noted that the governor has promised to oppose any tax increase with the exception of closing tax loopholes, increasing various fees and raising the tax on alcoholic beverages and new cars and boats.

"If every time we have a recession or stagnant growth in the revenues we turn to a tax increase as the remedy, how high will taxes go?" Williams asked. "There is a definite limit in how far you can go in increasing the tax burden."

Until the revenue needs are better known, the Legislature will concentrate on budget reductions that leaders say consist mainly of eliminating vacant positions, reducing overbudgeted items and cutting salary reserves. All three items have served as a financial cushion for budget administrators.

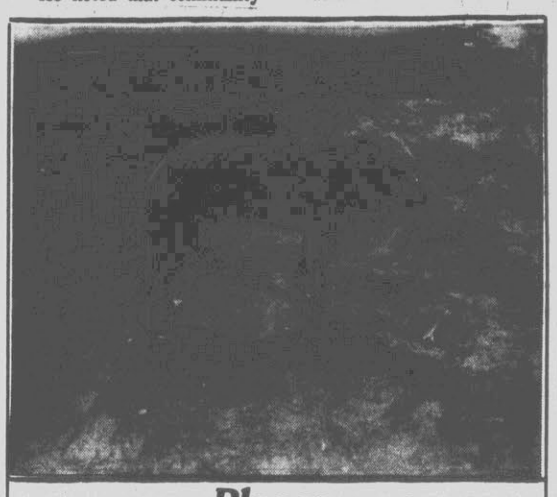

"It is a lot easier to manage a budget and effect savings than to prepare a budget and anticipate costs," Williams said. But he acknowledged that legislators have identified a lot of items where budget writers clearly overestimated needs.

One of those areas was in the Medicaid budget, where legislators found ways to trim state spending by $23 million over the biennium. The reductions were made by adjusting anticipated inflation in the cost of hospitalization and lowering the number of Medicaid recipients because of federal efforts to reduce participation.

Because of a revenue shortfall this year, nearly all state departments were ordered to spend only 94 percent of their allocated money. Adams said legislators were cautioned against assuming that proposed 1983-85 budgets could be cut by a similar amount, an estimated $147 million.

He noted that community colleges have been forced to turn away students because of the cutbacks.

"We can not assume that because they got by with 6 percent less last year that it did not do significant harm," Adams said.

Deputies Flush Man From House

NEW HILL, N.C. (UPI) — A 46-year-old New Hill man charged with shooting his father was in the Chatham County county jail Saturday under $10,000 bond after sheriff's deputies flushed him from his home with tear gas.

Willard Williams of New Hill was charged Friday with assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious bodily injury with intent to kill and with shooting into an occupied vehicle.

North Carolina Memorial Hospital officials said Williams' father, Seaman Williams, has been moved from intensive care into a private room and is improving.

Sheriff Jack Elkins said Seaman Williams was shot once in the chest with a .22 caliber rifle, apparently at close range.

Elkins said Willard Williams barricaded himself in his home for nearly two hours after the shooting and was captured after he was forced outside by tear gas. Elkins said Willard Williams fired at least five shots through the windows of the house during the standoff.

"Every now and then we could hear them coming through the glass," Elkins said.

Two bullets struck an occupied, privately-owned car.

After deputies fired two cannisters of tear gas into the house, Willard Williams ran out a side door with a .22 rifle into a nearby stand of trees, Elkins said.

MARLIN BACKBONE — Dr. Steven A. Wainright, Duke University zoologist, examines the backbone of a blue marlin. He says the elasticity of the backbone may be the key to the fish's fighting ability. (AP Laserphoto)

Backbone May Help Fighting Marlin

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The great blue marlin's uniquely elastic backbone may be a key to the fish's famed fighting qualities, according to a Duke University zoology professor.

Steven A. Wainwright says the backbone of the marlin and the related sailfish are different from those of any other animal he has seen. He theorized that it might have a function other than supporting the fish's body.

To test his hunch, Wainwright attached one end of a dissected marlin backbone to a table, allowing the other end to swing freely. He bent the backbone into a C-shape, then released it.

The backbone swung back and forth like a saw blade, he said.

When he did the same experiment with a shark backbone, the backbone returned to its original straight position slowly, with none of the springiness of the marlin backbone.

Wainwright said the marlin's backbone gets this elasticity from its unique structure. As in humans and other vertebrates, the marlin's backbone is a column of spool-shaped bones, the vertebrae, which surround the spinal cord and are connected to each other by flexible cartilage.

The marlin backbone differs in that it has six bony plates that look like the fins on the back and belly of fish and extend from each vertebra, three on the top and three on the bottom.

The plates are slanted so that when the vertebrae are in their normal position the plates interlock, forming a wall on top and bottom. This waall causes the elasticity, he said.

Unlike the cartilage between vertebrae, the plates resist bending. Like they saw blade, they can be bent, but snap back immediately.

When the marlin swims, it bends its backbone from side to side, flexing the plates as Wainwright did in his experiment. The elastic energy released during swimming may give the fish more power and more fight, he said.

He said the principle of elastic energy storage affects many activities in man and other animals.

For example, when a heart contraction sends blood through an artery, the artery wall stretches and fills with blood. The energy released when the artery snaps back adds impetus to the circulating blood.

Runners save up to 40 percent of the energy they expend running because of the elastic energy system in the Achilles tendon of the ankle, Wainwright said. As the foot leaves the ground after a step, the tendon springs back and speeds the runner along.

Wainwright said he is now probing the possibility tht the tough skin of the shark, rather than the backbone, adds energy to the fish's activity. When muscles attached to the inside of the shark's skin contract, they pull the skin, which snaps back elastically when muscles on the other side pull in the opposite direction.

South's Democratic Clout Is Stronger This Year

By JOEY LEDFORD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The South will enjoy unprecedented political clout next year in the selection of a Democratic presidential candidate.

The nine-state region will cast 172 more delegate votes at the 1984 Democratic convention than it did in 1980. Because of more delegates overall, that figures out to a 33 percent increase in strength.

But most importantly, the party's new rules and the calendar have combined to give the South a tremendous say-so in who will try to wrest the White House from the Republicans.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio is counting on Southern strength to overcome former Vice President Walter Mondale's front-runner position, but both must counter the South's own favorite sons, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Iowa and New Hampshire are seeking to retain their coveted positions as the states with the earliest delegate selection. But on March 13, just one week after the New Hampshire primary, voters in Alabama, Florida and Georgia go to the polls.

"It puts them in an important early position in the whole process," said Louise Lindblom, an Alabama native who is director of the Democratic National Committee's Compliance Review Commission. The commission is responsible for making sure states comply with national rules in selecting delegates.

Other Southern states also have selected early dates. Mississippi's complex four-tier caucus process will begin March 17 at the precinct level.

In South Carolina, precinct caucuses will start that same day but most of the excitement in Hollings' home state will come at the April 14 state convention.

Virginia is expected to hold its state caucus March 19 or 20, Lindblom said.

Louisiana will hold its presidential primary April 7, but Louisiana Democrats will have to return to the polls two weeks later to choose delegates based on the proportion of votes each presidential candidate received.

North Carolina scheduled a May 13 "winner-take-more" primary, which gives the winner extra delegates.

The situation in Tennessee is still undecided because the legislature has not acted on a bill to change the date of the state's primary. It is set for May 1, but might be moved back to March 20.

"It seems that the region has chosen early dates," Ms. Lindblom said. "A number of the Deep South states have chosen to be early in the system."

Four Southern states, Mississippi, both Carolinas and Florida, were filing their plans by the Friday deadline. And there were few signs of controversy in states that have asked for more time to prepare their plans.

Tennessee Democratic Chairman Bart Gordon said he hopes to put the delegate selection plan together swiftly as soon as the legislature breaks the primary date logjam.

Virginia got a one-month extension to allow more people in precincts and districts to get involved, spokeswoman Judy Griswald said.

Georgia will hold a March 13 primary but has requested a 60-day extension on filing its plan, Ms. Lindblom said.

Alabama got a four-week extension to allow time for public review of its plan. Al Lapierre, the state party's executive director, said the plan already has been "technically approved."

Louisiana asked for an extension to allow more time for public comment on its plan.

Each state employs a different plan to comply with the party's complex formula for delegate selection. In Alabama, for example, voters select not only their presidential preference, but also many of the delegates.

North Carolina's "winner-take-more" primary spreads delegates around in proportion to the actual vote but rewards the winning candidate in each congressional district with extra delegates.

First-Primary Squabble May Spoil Planning

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The best laid plans of the Democratic Party for a smooth and orderly 1984 presidential primary and caucus season are being threatened by a squabble among Maine, New Hampshire Vermont and Iowa over who goes first.

The 56 states and territories had until Friday to submit their delegate selection plans to the Democratic National Committee for approval. About 20 sent them in, the other asked for and got extentions — a not unexpected development.

New party rules for 1984 are aimed at shortening the primary-caucus season.

The rules say the 3,923 Democratic delegates will be picked by caucus or primary between March 13 and June 5. The only exceptions permitted were the New Hampshire primary which would be on March 6 and the Iowa caucus which would be Feb. 27.

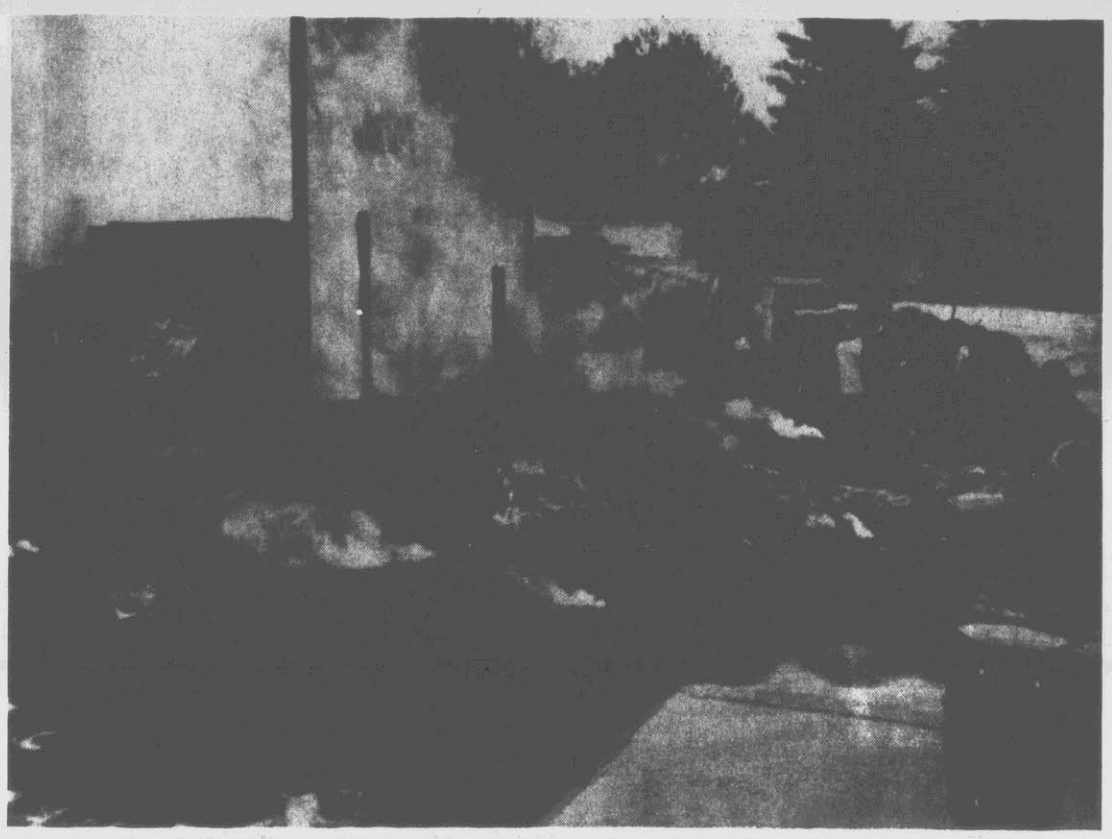

The problem arose when Maine said it wanted caucuses March 4, and Vermont said it would hold a non-binding beauty contest — which the Democratic Party would be powerless to regulate — on Feb. 26.

That got New Hampshire mad, and politicians said they would move theirs back as far as necessary to make it first. Iowa said fine, it would move the caucuses back a week before whenever New Hampshire was.

Maine Democrats say they traditonally held their caucuses on town meeting day, which fell prior to the New Hampshire primary. But no one paid much attention to the Maine caucus in the past, so it did notnterfere with New Hampshire's starting role.

Although no formal action has been taken on any of the state plans so far, Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt has made it clear he plans to be firm in enforcing the party's rules.

That would mean Maine could not have the caucuses early, but Vermont would have the non-binding primary because it would not be organized by the Democratic Party.

Plane Crash Kills Four

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — A man, a woman and two teen-age girls were killed when their small plane crashed on an approach to an unlighted airport on Hatteras Island, officials said Saturday.

The four were killed Friday night when their single-engine Beechcraft Bonanza hit a power line and crashed in flames in the Cape Hatteras National Seashore about half a mile from the Billy Mitchell airstrip near Frisco, said Dare County Sheriff Bert Austin.

"It appears they veered off from the runway, turned to the right and went into the power line," Austin said. "All the lines were tangled up in the aircraft."

The airport "isn't lit; you're not supposed to be landing on it after nightfall," Austin said. He declined to say whether the pilot was breaking any rules by landing there.

Austin said investigators from the FAA and the National Air Traffic Safety Board were probing the wreck Saturday. He said they believed the flight originated from Massachusetts but didn't know which town.

Dr. John Butts, associate chief medical examiner in Chapel Hill, said the pilot was identified as Lloyd Hendrick. He said Hendrick was in his 50s or 60s and owned a boat in Hatteras but said officials did not know his exact age or hometown.

Dr. Paul Biddinger of the state medical examiner's office identified two of the victims as Helen Craig, 47, and her daughter, Amy Craig, 15, both of Winchester, Mass.

Butts said the fourth victim, a teen-age girl, was identified but did not release her name pending notification of relatives.

The U.S. Coast Guard and three area fire departments were called to the scene shortly after the 8:55 p.m. crash to extinguish the flaming wreckage. Units approaching from land could reach the crash scene only by using four-wheel-drive vehicles on the beach.

Firemen had a hard time getting to the airplane because there was about 3 feet of water from recent heavy rains in the area, he said.

"The plane was fully engulfed when they got on the scene," he said.

A spokesman with the Federal Aviation Administration's flight service in New Bern said the pilot of the plane had not filed a flight plan and that the airport was officially closed at night because it has no lights.

Salesman Draws 20-Year Sentence

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Thomas Baker says alcohol, drugs and the pressures of society led to his fall from a successful salesman job into a life of crime.

Baker, 40, a former Lions Club president and Heart Fund chairman, was sentenced to 20 years in prison Friday after pleading guilty the day before to 45 criminal charges.

He could have received as many as 650 years in prison, said Superior Court Judge Peter W. Hairston, who sentenced Baker to two seven-year terms and a six-year term to run consecutively.

Baker was charged with 21 breaking and entering cases, eight counts of false pretense, four larceny charges, assault with a deadly weapon, one count each of receiving and possession of stolen property, four cases of conspiracy, two counts of embezzlement, two charges of second degree burglary and larceny, and with accessory after the fact of murder.

The State Bureau of Investigation said his crime spree took place from April 1981 until June 1982.

"Once I got started, it was like a whirlwind," Baker said. "It kept gaining speed and I couldn't get out. It was like I had been living in a detached body which had been sucked into a whirlpool. I wanted to get out, and I couldn't."

Baker, who was living in Thomasville when arrested Aug. 5, said he drifted into crime and into associations with others who were arrested with him. He said he had never planned on what happened to him.

Until he walked away from his wife and children in December 1980 and started living with a girlfriend, he had tried to be a law-abiding citizen, he said.

Baker said drinking, drugs, financial demands and the pressures of his job as a fabrics salesman got the best of him.

"The more I sold the more they wanted me to sell, and I still wasn't making the kind of money I should have been making for what I was selling. I got to drinking heavy. I got to taking pills, and I became a different person."

Teen-Ager Charged In Death

NEWTON, N.C. — An 18-year-old man was charged Saturday with breaking into an elderly neighbor's house and strangling her to death with a bed sheet, authorities said.

William Lee Hannah was in the Catawba County jail without bond on charges of first-degree murder, first-degree burglary, and auto larceny. He is to appear in Catawba District Court Monday.

The victim was identified as Iris Cleo Lehman, 76.

Lawyers May Face Jail

GREENSBORO — A federal judge says he may send a prosecutor and a defense attorney to jail after they nearly came to blows during a cocaine conspiracy trial.

U.S. Middle District Judge Richard Erwin said in court Friday that he was considering criminal contempt citations for assistant U.S. attorney David Smith and defense attorney John B. Hatfield Jr.

The trial was delayed by dozens of loud objections about procedure from both lawyers — objections that led to arguments, at least one shouting match and what Erwin called "almost a fistfight."

Bus Driver Is Charged

GREENSBORO — An 18-year-old school bus driver has been charged with failing to yield right of way after a collision of two buses Friday afternoon left 25 Greensboro school students injured. The buses were carrying elementary school students home when the accident occured.

The crash occurred, investigators said, when driver Bobby M. Goins, 18, attempted to make a left turn and entered the path of the second bus, driven by Alan Girard Irelan, about 19. Police said Goins was charged with failing to yield the right of way.

All the injured, ranging in age from 5 to 13, were treated at local hospitals and released.

Corps Rejects Inlet Proposal

WILMINGTON — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has rejected proposals to maintain the Oregon Inlet channel with dredging instead of building jetties.

Recent studies showed that dredging could cause serious erosion of public lands beside the inlet and that the type of equipment needed for dredging would be endangered in the treacherous inlet, Corps officials in Wilmington and Washington said.

Judges Call For Speedy Justice

RALEIGH — Wake County Superior Court judges ordered defense attorneys and prosecutors this week to make the judicial system move more quickly.

"In spite of the rumors, judges would rather work than not work," said Senior Resident Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey. "It's boring as hell to sit there with nothing to do."

The judges want to cut down on delaying tactics by defense attorneys and inefficiency in the district attorney's office, Bailey said.

Police Rule Out Klan Involvement

CONCORD — Police say they don't believe a recent cross-burning incident at the home of two black college students was the work of the Ku Klux Klan.

Sheryl Mitchell told police she saw the burning cross after she was frightened from her home by a noise Wednesday night. Shots were fired through her bedroom window, police said.

Police Chief Jack Moore called the incident a deliberate act of harassment, but he said he doesn't believe the Klan was involved.

Mother Sentenced In Abuse Case

NEW BERN — A Craven County jury took just 30 minutes to decide that Beverly Ann Woods, 20, was guilty of letting her husband abuse the couple's two-month-old child.

Prosecutors had argued that Mrs. Woods was guilty of child abuse for not reporting the beating of the baby by her husband, Ulysses Woods Jr., a Cherry Point Marine. Woods is currently undergoing psychiatric tests after pleading guilty to assaulting the child.

Superior Judge R. Michael Bruce sentenced Mrs. Woods to six months in prison, followed by an 18-month suspended sentence, after her conviction on misdemeanor child abuse.

A doctor who examined the baby after the arrests of the Woods said the infant had bruises on her body, broken ribs and legs and human bites on her feet.

Mortgage Agency Swamped

CHARLOTTE — A state agency offering $21 million in 9.6 percent interest home-mortgage loans to first-time home buyers in North Carolina says its phones have been swamped.

"The phones have ringing off the hook since 7 this morning," Judy Bynum, spokeswoman for the N.C. Housing Finance Agency, said Friday. "All eight lines are busy now."

The 30-year, fixed-rate loans are being provided through the sale of tax-exempt bonds approved by the agency last Thursday. Agency officials say the money should be enough for about 500 loans.

Friday was the first day the program became public.

Furniture Market Reflects Growth

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — After more than two years of sagging furniture sales, furniture manufacturers say dealers are building up their inventories to meet a pent-up demand for furniture.

Industry officials at the spring Southern Furniture Market in High Point this week say retail furniture sales increased sharply in the first three months of 1983.

"During the past two years, furniture buyers have been afraid to buy anything because furniture wasn't selling," said Larry Schlesinger, a vice president of Typhoon International. "Their inventories dropped down to nothing. Now we're talking to a lot of dealers in our showroom who are tryng to build up their inventories to meet customer demand."

Jerry Epperson, furniture analyst with Wheat, First Securities of Richmond, Va., said he had talked with 35 major retail chains and that they all planned to send a full team of buyers to the market. He said in recent years, stores have sent only a bedroom, dining room or fabric specialist to make limited purchases.

The 10-day furniture market, held every April and October, ends Friday. Each market attracts about 37,000 people to 1,300 furniture and fabric showrooms from Burlington to Lenoir.

The furniture industry has been hit hard by the recession during the past two years, particularly in North Carolina where 25 percent of the nation's furniture is produced. Last year, 20 percent of the state's 78,600 furniture employees were left without jobs because of plant layoffs and closings.

But industry officials say they are encouraged by an upswing in retail sales during the first quarter of the year and a surge in consumer confidence in the economy.

A spokesman for Miami-based Levitz, the nation's largest furniture chain, said his firm's sales were up 32 percent in January over last year, 12.8 percent in February and 22 percent in March.

"This year is definitely going to be better than the two years before," said Bob Elliott, president of Levitz. "It's already improved a lot."

The Conference Board, a national business survey organization, said its index of consumer confidence rose to 76.5 in March, up from 65.8 in February. The buying-plan index rose to 81.2 from 75.8.

Gene Stumpff, president of the Hammary Division of U.S. Industries, said department-store chains are buying more to meet growing customer demand for home furnishings.

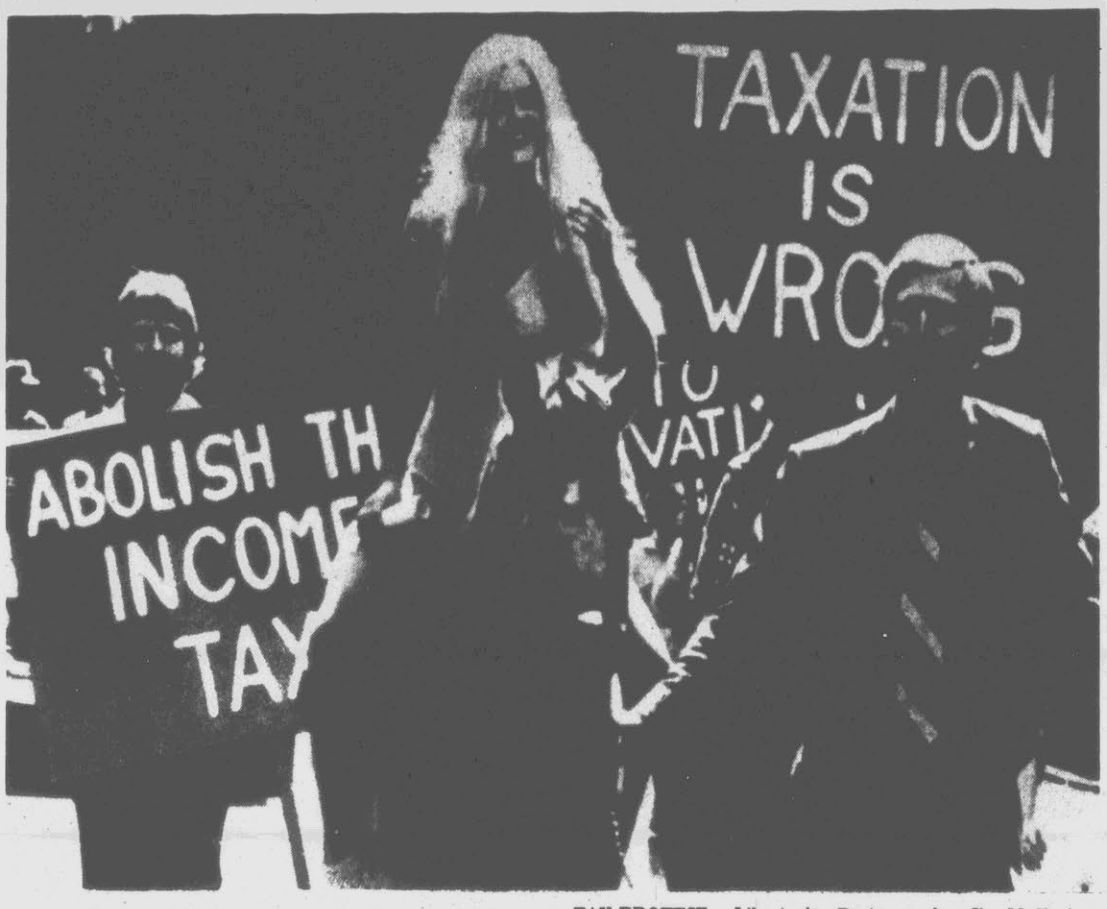

"The stores seem to be buying now to build up their inventories again," he said. "Last year, they bought only for orders they had sold. They didn't take any chances on getting something they might be stuck with."

Don Hunziker, president of LADD Furniture, said low inventories come at a time when housing starts are increasing nationwide.

"This could mean a strong pent-up demand from the past two or three years," Hunziker said.

Meanwhile, analysts say that although the furniture industry is beginning to recover, the recovery may be a slow process.

"There's a lot of optimism and everyone is positive for a recovery, but it won't happen overnight," Epperson said. "It's taken a while for the industry to get into the slump it's been in and it will take a while for it to get out again. This is just the beginning."

IRS Says More Tar Heels Are Protesting Tax

By The Associated Press

The number of tax protesters is growing in North Carolina and around the nation, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

About 40,000 "protest-type returns" were filed in the nation last year, up from about 13,000 in 1980, IRS officials say.

The service has identified 375 North Carolina residents as "illegal tax protesters," said IRS spokesman Glenn Jones in Greensboro. The IRS expects 2.4 million returns in North Carolina this year.

Some of the protesters claim that wages are an even, profit-free exchange for services rendered and therefor are not taxable income. Others claim that the U.S. tax system is voluntary, that dollars are no longer real taxable income because they're not backed by gold and silver. Others say that filing tax returns violates the First Amendment right against self-incrimination.

"It's just a matter of time before we win," said Marc Kelley of the Wilmington-based Constitutional Tax Association. "It's just a matter of time before we win. We're winning. They're losing. It's not if, it's when."

Rick Tyler, 25, who picketed the Charlotte downtown post office Friday night as scores of residents filed their returns, said the alternative to tax revolt is evolution into a "total slave state."

"We believe now we are seeing the beginnings, from a historical perspectve, of a federal dictatorship," Tyler said.

Kelley, 31, declined to talk about his organization's membership.

"You never give the enemy ammunition, do you?" he said. "Why should we allow the IRS to concentrate their activities where somebody's weak, because that's exactly what the Gestapo will do."

But Kelley, who said he no longer files tax returns, estimated that there are more than 30,000 tax rebels in North Carolina and South Carolina — a conservative estimate, he added.

Indians Rally To Defeat Pirates, 5-4

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — William & Mary pushed over a pair of unearned runs in the seventh inning to knot things up with East Carolina, then scored again in the tenth to pull out a 5-4 ECAC-South baseball game.

The Pirates, who are suffering through one of their worst seasons in some time, found themselves on the losing end of a score for the fourth time in the last six games, and have won in only five of their last 16 games, including one tie. East Carolina is now 16-13-1 overall and 2-2-1 in ECAC-South play, with one game left to go.

That contest is scheduled for 3 p.m. today at the University of Richmond.

Oddly enough, the Pirates would still seem to be in the running for a berth in the four-team ECAC-South baseball tournament, currently one of four teams in the league with an overall winning record.

East Carolina managed only two hits off the combined hurling of Alan Zoldark and Buddy Key. Zoldark went the first five innings and gave up just one hit, while Key went the final five to claim the win and also allowed just one hit.

The Indians pushed into the lead in the fourth inning, scoring once. After two had been retired, John O'Keeffe singled and came around when D.C. Aiken followed with a double.

East Carolina rallied in the top of the fifth to take a 2-1 lead in the contest. Winfred Johnson led off with a single and Robert Wells walked. Both were sacrificed up, and a sacrifice fly by Tony Salmond brought Johnson in to tie it up. A wild pitch then allowed Wells to score to put ECU into the lead.

That lead didn't last long, however, as the Indians quickly tied it up in the bottom of the fifth. With one away, Tad Geschickter singled and moved up on Dan Zebrwski's double. Greg Adams' sacrifice fly plated Geschickter with the tieing run.

East Carolina moved back out with a run in the sixth, 3-2. Kelly Robinette walked and John Hallow was hit by a pitch. Todd Evans walked, and that brought on Key in relief. David Wells hit a sacrifice fly to score Robinette.

Another East Carolina runner crossed in the seventh. Salmond walked and was sacrificed up. After Robinette walked, Evans singled to score Salmond.

But it was not to be for the Pirates as William & Mary came back with a pair of runs in the seventh to tie it at 4-4. Joe Lencewicz reached on a fielder's choice and Geschickter reached on an error on Evans. Zebrwski followed with a single score Lencewicz. Adams was safe on a fielder's choice, getting Zebrwski, and Ed Stanko singled, scoring Geschickter with the tying run.

The Tribe then held the Pirates in check through the next three frames, forcing the Pirates to leave a potential winning run at second in the top of the tenth. Hallow walked to open the frame, took second on a wild pitch, then watched as three of his teammates in a row went down on strikeouts.

The Indians then pushed over the winning run in the bottom of the frame. Stanko singled and Tray Harris came on as a runner, moving up on a wild pitch. With two away, Aiken was intentionally walked to set up the force, but Volpi singled to center.

Robert Wells' throw home was in plenty of time, but Harris' collision with ECU catcher Jack Curlings was forcful enough to knock the ball loose, allowing him to score the game-winning run.

While the Pirates were able to get only two hits during the afternoon, the Indians got 11 off starter Robby McClanahan and reliever Chubby Butler, who took the loss. Zebrswki, Stanko, O'Keeffe and Volpi each had two hits.

The Indians climb to 14-12 with the victory.

ECU's Denkler Awarded NCAA Post-Graduate Scholarship

East Carolina University's Mary Denkler has been awarded an NCAA post-graduate scholarship, one of ten awarded throughout the nation to the top student-athletes in basketball.

Similar awards are made in men's basketball.

The award, for $2,000, is for post-graduate studies at the school of her choice.

A senior majoring in urban and regional planning, Denkler carried a 3.2 average into the current semester. She will graduate at the end of the summer session. She has until May 31 to accept the grant from the NCAA.

"I don't know for sure where I'm going to go yet," Denkler said. "I might try to get into a business program and work on my (Masters in Business Administration). I wasn't expecting to get it, so I haven't really thought about it."

Denkler said she was quite surprised by the NCAA grant. "I'm really happy and pleased and honored. I couldn't believe it."

She said that ECU faculty representative to the NCAA, Dr. Ernie Schwarz got the application for the grant for her "back in January or February.

"He said he would send 'em in and find out in April sometime. I hadn't really thought much about it since then since I didn't think I'd have a chance of getting it."

Denkler, who has been named on several all-America basketball teams said that she feels the NCAA award is more of an honor. "There are only ten of these and it's not just basketball, but basketball and academics. I'm just real honored to get it, and a lot of people helped me. I'm glad for East Carolina too, because it gives a lot of credit to the school."

Denkler, who averaged over 20 points a game her senior year, finished her career as the second leading scorer in ECU history.

The award is the first for an East Carolina athlete, although two males were nominated at one time for the Rhodes Scholarships, football Larry Lundy and baseballer Robert Brinkley.

"It's like winning a great game," ECU women's coach Cathy Andruzzi said, "like getting into the top 20.

"I feel so proud for Mary and happy for East Carolina. It's such a prestigeous award. You can talk about athletes and their dedication, but to win this type of award is something. I know how hard Mary's worked from being with her for four years. She's not only worked hard on the court buy off the court. This is a reward for an individual who has never given up and has worked hard to represent her team and univeristy to the hightest limits. This is what athletics is all about."

The awards were made to four Division I athletes, four from Division II and two more to at-large candidate, both of whom came from Division I. The only other area player included was Ann Donovan of Old Dominion.

North Pitt Blasts Conley

By ALAN WOOTEN
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — Greg Briley belted a grand slam homerun and Daniel Keel drilled a solo homer during an eight-run second inning to lead the North Pitt Panthers to a 9-4 non-conference victory over D.H. Conley Saturday afternoon.

The game, originally scheduled to be played at North Pitt, was moved to Bethel Elementary because of poor field conditions.

Briley was very effective in the field also, giving up six hits in 4⅔ innings of mound work. Briley gave way to Junior Huber with runners at first and second in the fifth. Huber allowed only one other runner to reach base.

"The difference in the games we have lost and the games we have won is the ones we have came out mentally ready to play," North Pitt coach Doug Warren said afterward. "Today, we came out ready to play. That was the difference in the game."

The game was marked by a controversial call, which was typical of a game between two rivalries within the county. The play came in the bottom of the sixth inning.

North Pitt was holding to a 9-4 advantage and had the bases loaded with one out and Hubert Lewis at the plate. Lewis hit a grounder to first and Chris Via threw to second to get Chris Ayers out on the force.

However, in the process of hitting the ball, the end of Lewis' bat flew off and onto the field, with a sizable piece of cork also coming out of the bat.

The umpires ruled that the batter, Lewis, was out because of the bat breaking apart at the end. The Conley contengent thought that the Panthers would have to forfeit the game because of an illegal bat being used.

The rulebook stated that an aluminum bat must have a sound-deadening material within the bat which is securely fastened. Since the end of the bat came off, the call was made that the bat was not securely fastened and the batter, with that in respect, was definetly out.

After a discussion with both coaches, the batter and runner going to second were ruled out, the run did not count, and the inning was over.

Asked for a statement, neither coach wanted to comment.

"I was totally disgusted with our attitude, effort, and performance today," Conley coach Gerald Garner said.

"I have no comment," Warren said.

After falling behind, 2-0, in the first inning, North Pitt all but sealed the victory in the second inning.

Keel started the inning off with a shot to left field for a homerun. William Rollins followed with a walk and stole second. Scott Rawls walked and Alvin Grimes walked one out later to load the bases.

Brian Briley singled to center to score Rollins, and Jay Hines reached on an infield error to score Rawls and give North Pitt the lead, 3-2.

Rollins struck out for the second out and Rawls followed with a single to center, moving Keel to third. Rawls was thrown out trying to steal second for the final out.

The Panthers added an insurance run in the fourth. Greg Briley singled and stole second. Whitehurst reached on an error to score Briley and make it 9-2.

Conley scored first with a pair of runs in the opening inning. With one gone, Steve Mills drew a walk and stole second. Chris Via walked also and Mike Gurkins singled to center to load the bases.

One out later, Calvin Phillips ripped a double to right-center, scoring Mills and Via.

Conley got its final runs in the fifth. Mills reached on an error. Via singled to right and advanced to second on the throw to third trying to get Mills. Gurkins singled to score Mills and moved Via to third.

Rouse reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Via but getting Gurkins at second. Phillips followed with a single, moving Rouse to third. An attempted double-steal failed and Rouse was out at the plate.

Stacey McCarter grounded out to end the inning.

Greg Briley, Brian Briley, and Keel had two hits each to lead North Pitt, 7-5, in hitting. Brian Briley also had a triple.

Gurkins and Phillips had two each to lead Conley, now 6-5.

Gatlin Prepares For Terps, Ponders Basketball Future

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

From the Capital Centre in Washington, D.C. to The Omni in Atlanta, the basketball education of D.H. Conley's All-America Keith Gatlin has begun.

Gatlin managed 15 points in the Capital Classic All Star Game in Wahington and eight points in the highly-touted McDonald's All American Game in Atlanta, but the experience he picked up was more educational than exercise.

"The thing that was hard to realize is that when you drive to the basket, I'm used to getting my shot off," said the 6-5 point guard. "When you're going up against guys 7-2 or with a 42 inch vertical jump, it's not as easy. But I felt like I did all right."

For some of the participants, high school all star games are an opportunity to help decide where to play collegiately. For Gatlin, that pressure was removed in November when he announced he had chosen the University of Maryland over North Carolina State and Wake Forest.

"The pressure can hurt you because it can force you into a decision you may regret," he said. "Signing early lets you concentrate on school and basketball. But there's always a chance you might decide you like another school better later on, and you can't talk to them then."

The opportunity to play as a freshman was one reason for Gatlin's decision to go to Maryland, and if it works out, he'll be teamed in the backcourt with 6-6 junior Adrian Branch — forming the tallest guard tandem in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We'll have the advantage offensively because of the height," Gatlin says, but conceeds, "I'm going to have to work on speed for defense. It's harder for a tall player to manuever around the court — like on presses.

"In the McDonald's game, I played against a 5-3 guy that's going to Wake Forest; he's awfully quick. I put the ball on the floor start my move and it never came back up."

The Maryland coaching staff was, no doubt, impressed with his 25.7 points per game output, as well as his passing talents and free throw accuracy. But according to Gatlin, there are changes the Terrapins are looking for in their hot young prospect.

"They want me to put on 10-to-15 pounds to improve on my upper body strength," he said. "I have trouble putting on weight; I just burn up a lot of energy. They have a stregth program I'll be on, and I just want to do what the coach asks me to do."

Gatlin intends to enroll in July in time for the second session of summer school at the College Park, Md. campus, but he realizes it's going to take time to get adjusted to the new environment.

"It's easy to get behind once basketball gets started in the fall, and summer school will put me ahead six hours," Gatlin said. "I'm from Grimesland, and it's very quiet there. Maryland is fast-paced — I'm sure I'll get homesick for a while. But I'm sure I'll fit in — I've always wanted to play in the ACC.

"One of the reasons I chose Maryland was that if I went to State I'd be coming home anytime; this way I'll appreciate it more. Besides," he chided, "my mother would probably get tired of having me around the house so much."

Gatlin has already gotten letters from representatives of several National Basketball Association teams expressing interest in his career and indicating they would be keeping up with his progress.

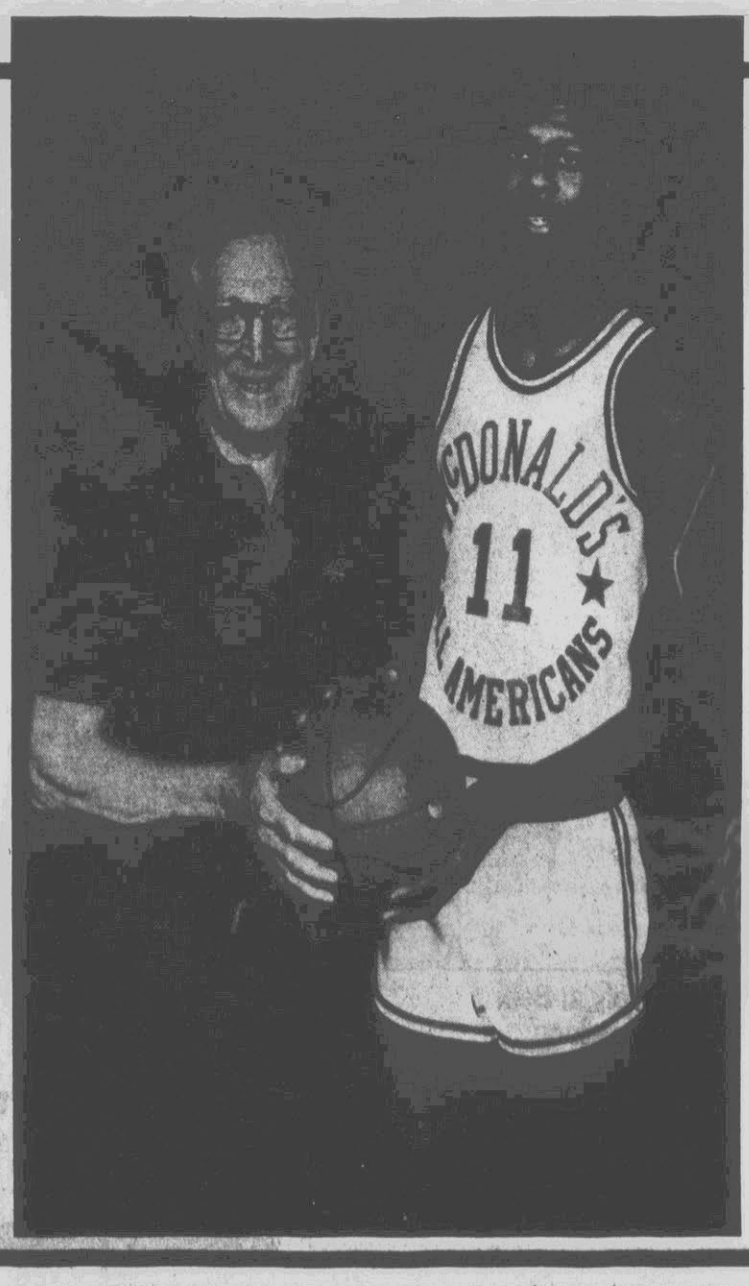

"I just want to do the best at basketball and my grades and see what happens after that," Gatlin said. "If I got hurt or something and couldn't play basketball anymore, it would hurt. But I thank God — He got me this far.

"If basketball happens and there's an opportunity, then I'll go to the pros. Otherwise, I'll probably come back to North Carolina.

"I think the nicest thing someone could say about Keith Gatlin is that he is a fine young man; not just for basketball ability, but for being a good citizen."

Gatlin led the Vikings of D.H. Conley to a 22-4 finish his final season, but he feels the team will be stronger in the next few years.

"Our team will have to find another guard," he said. "But I think they will get better because everyone was aware of me. Now there will be no one player they can pin-point and concentrate their defense on. I'd just like to thank them for helping me get this far, and I'm going to work to make them proud."

Gatlin And Legend

Zoeller Rallies In Heritage

Watching Putt Miss Fuzzy Zoeller, the third round leader of the Heritage Golf Classic watches as a birdie putt on the 17th green misses. Zoeller finished play at nine-under-par 204. (AP Laserphoto)

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller came from six shots off the pace with a 65 and moved into a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $350,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

While other leaders faltered, Zoeller beat the swirling winds with a seven-birdie effort, matched the best round of the tournament and completed 54 holes in 204, nine under par.

A single shot back at 205 was Bob Eastwood, a journeyman pro still seeking his first victory in 12 years of tour activity. He managed to salvage a round of par-71 with a 30-foot birdie putt from off the green on the 18th.

Canadian Jim Nelford and Mac O'Grady, who held the second-round lead, were next at 206, two shots back. Nelford had a 70 and O'Grady, who made 17 tries at the qualifying school before gaining his tour playing rights last fall, rallied for a 73. He played the front in 40, but birdied three of the last five holes, a stretch that winds down to the red and white lighthouse behind the 18th.

Hale Irwin, twice a winner of this title and a two-time U.S. Open champion, South African Mark McNulty and Mark McCumber were next at 207. McCumber closed up with a 68, Irwin shot par-71 and McNulty 72.

Craig Stadler with 67, David Graham with a 69 and Fred Couples with a 68 were grouped at 208.

Lee Trevino, who once crept to within two strokes of the lead, made bogey on three of the last four and finished with a 72 that left him six strokes off the pace at 210.

"The key to it was that I was able to hit the ball solid and the wind didn't bother it so much," Zoeller said.

Of equal importance, however, was the return of his putting touch, Zoeller said.

"I've been flirting with it for some time. Today, it was there. The hole just seemed to jump in front of the ball.

"I'm a streak putter. I just hope I can keep it going tomorrow."

Zoeller, who has won only once since taking the 1979 Masters title, scoffed at any hint of pressure in Sunday's final round of the chase for a $63,000 first prize.

"Pressure? What's pressure? What the hell, I'll just go play golf and try to enjoy it. You just have to wait for it to happen. If it's my turn, fine. If not, there's always another tournament."

"It's fun to beat such a great golf course," Zoeller said of the 6,650-yard Harbour Town Golf Links. "I used all 14 clubs in the bag. Used 'em all. And beating a course like this is more fun than shooting 65. Really it is."

He started poorly, however, missing the green and making bogey on the first hole.

But he made his move with birdies on both the front-side par-5s and both the front-side par-3s. He got pitches inside of six feet on both the long holes, birdied the fourth from 15 feet and hit a 7-iron to within a foot on the seventh for his second deuce of the warm, windy day.

Zoeller birdied the 10th and 13 from 10-12 feet and then took the lead alone with an eight-footer on the 18th.

Red Sox Edge Rangers In Chilly Climate

BOSTON (AP) — The temperature hovered around 40 degrees, a light but soaking rain persisted, and a stiff east wind blew in toward home plate.

"Baseball wasn't meant to be played in this kind of weather," admitted Manager Ralph Houk of the Boston Red Sox.

But southpaw Bruce Hurst didn't mind the weather at all Saturday as he combined with reliever Mark Clear for an eight-hitter and the Red Sox edged the Texas Rangers 2-1 for their third victory in a row.

"It was a good day to pitch," Hurst said. "I'd rather pitch than hit on a day like this. I was able to stay loose and keep warm in the clubhouse between innings. The pitchers have the advantage in cold weather."

Jim Rice and Wade Boggs drove in the Boston runs with sixth-inning doubles.

"The double was the best swing I had all day," Boggs said. "Pitchers have the advantage in weather like this. All they have to do is bust the hitters' hands. There was a cold mist blowing in our faces all day."

Hurst, who struck out a career-high eight batters while pitching 7 23 innings in his longest major leage performance, needed help from Clear after Texas scored its lone run with two out in the eighth.

Later, the young lefthander took a verbal swipe at critics of Boston's starting pitching staff.

"We may not be the best staff in the league, but we're not a bunch of rinky-dinks collected off the street and handed uniforms," he said. "We're a lot better than many people think."

Hurst, 1-1, blanked the Rangers on five hits for seven innings. He needed help from Clear after Texas pushed across a run on a single by Billy Sample, a bunt single by Mike Richardt and a two-out double by Dave Hostetler. Clear pitched out of the jam and went on to earn his first save.

California 9
Minnesota.....5

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins Manager Billy Gardner had a glimmer of hope for a moment, but it didn't last.

"All of a sudden, boom-boom!" Gardner said after California's Reggie Jackson hit a three-run homer to cap a seven-run explosion in the fifth inning and lift the Angels to a 9-5 victory over the Twins Saturday.

Bruce Kison, 2-1, yielded seven hits and struck out 10 batters in his first complete game of the season. Two of the hits were homers that drove in the Twins' five runs.

"Overall, I was happy with he way I pitched," Kison said, adding, he was relieved when his teammates gave him seven runs in the fifth. "The first or the fifth, I was glad to get them."

Gardner was hoping Rick Lysander, who relieved starting and losing pitcher Bryan Oelkers, 0-2, would walk Jackson in the fifth. But, "the pitch got away from him. He made a bad pitch. You can't make a mistake on Reggie."

California got a run in the third when Bob Boone hit his first homer of the year, off the foul pole in left field.The Twins retaliated with three runs in the bottom of the inning when Ray Smith and Lenny Faedo singled and John Castino hit his fourth homer, to right field.

Then came the big fifth. Oelkers walked Brian Downing and Bobby Grich. Tim Foli loaded the bases with an infield single, Boone drove in two runs with a single and Rod Carew followed with another run-scoring single to chase Oelkers and give the Angels a 4-3 lead.

Rick Lysander came on it relief and, one out later, walked Fred Lynn intentionally to reload the bases. Boone scored on a sacrifice fly by Doug DeCinces and Jackson capped the outburst with a 400-foot drive to right-center field for his second home run of the season.

DeCinces hit his third homer of the year for California leading off the eighth against Pete Filson. Gary Ward hit his first homer for Minnesota's final two runs in the bottom of the eighth.

Chicago 3
Detroit 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Greg Walker claims he's not the first person to come up to the big leagues and get off to a slow start. But he hopes his pinch homer which rallied Floyd Bannister and the Chicago White Sox to a 3-1 victory over Detroit Saturday might changes things.

"The key is to relax; that's been my main problem," said Walker, whose homer triggered a three-run eighth-inning rally.

Interestingly, failure led to Walker's success Saturday. Manager Tony LaRussa sent Jerry Hairston up as his first pinch hitter in the eighth but Hairston, who broke up Milt Wilcox's perfect game with two outs in the ninth Friday night, struck out.

"If Jerry gets on, Walker doesn't bat," said LaRussa. "I'd have let Scott Fletcher bat for himself. Walker knew that. But I'm glad now that Jerry struck out. Maybe that homer will help him relax. He can handle himself at the plate."

Walker's problem has been his fielding. Although seeing only limited duty at first base, he has committed three errors and embarrassed himself Friday night when he took a throw at first base and flipped the ball towards the umpire. Trouble was, there were only two outs — but the ball did not roll far enough to allow a runner to advance.

"It seems a lot of things are happening to me right now," said Walker, "but I'm not going to let it bother me. I have my whole career ahead of me. Maybe this will be anew start."

Walker slugged his first homer of the season with one out off starter Dan Petry and pinch-hitter Lorenzo Gray greeted reliever Howard Bailey, 1-1, with a single. Tony Bernazard doubled and when left fielder Larry Herndon misplayed the ball for an error Gray scored the go-ahead run.Harold Baines then doubled to score Bernazard.

Bannister, 1-1, who signed a five-year, $4 million contract as a free agent, gave up three hits in eight innings but had trouble with his control. Dick Tidrow picked up his first save.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the seventh when they scored an unearned run without a hit.John Wockenfuss was safe on shortstop Scott Fletcher's throwing error, Chet Lemon sacrificed and Mike Ivie was given an intentional walk before Bannister walked Glenn Wilson to load the bases. Tom Brookens followed with a sacrifice fly.

Cleveland 0-7
Baltimore.....2-4

BALTIMORE (AP) — Julio Franco, a replacement for the injured Toby Harrah, rapped a three-run double to snap a fourth-inning tie, and the Cleveland Indians defeated the Baltimore Orioles 7-4 in the second game to earn a split of their Saturday doubleheader.

Franco entered the nightcap after Harrah was struck on the left hand by a pitch from Dennis Martinez, 1-2, in the first inning. Franco singled and scored on a single by Andre Thornton in the third, and then cleared the bases to key a four-run rally in the fourth.

The three-run hit came after Cleveland forged a 2-2 tie on singles by Manny Trillo, Chris Bando, and Mike Fischlin. Miguel Dilone walked to load the bases for Franco.

Cleveland added two runs in the eighth off reliever Don Welchel on a double by Rick Manning, a single by Bando, a sacrifice and a double by Dilone.

Neal Heaton, 1-0, allowed five hits in seven innings of the nightcap, and Dan Spillner earned his fourth save.

Baltimore scored twice in the third on Dan Ford's RBI double and a sacrifice fly by Cal Ripken Jr., and twice more in the seventh on an RBI triple by Leo Hernandez, who scored on shortstop Franco's throwing error.

Cleveland, which led the American League with 1,258 runners left on base last season, stranded five of their 10 during the last two innings.

After loading the bases with none out in the eighth, Davis fanned three straight batters. And, after getting Thronton on a called third strike, to open the ninth, Davis was replaced by Tippy Martinez with a 2-2 count on George Vukovich. Vukovich was called out on a check swing strike, and Trillo fanned.

An RBI single by Rich Dauer off Larry Sorensen, 0-2, scored a Baltimore run in the second, and Lowenstein's sacrifice fly made it 2-0 in the third.

Lea Misses No-Hitter On Puhl Single

HOUSTON (AP) — Montreal pitcher Charlie Lea added another chapter to his domination of the Houston Astros Saturday, as he pitched 7 2-3 no-hit innings and finished with a baseball's second one-hitter in two days to lead the Expos to a 2-0 victory.

Lea, bidding for his second career no-hitter, lost it in the eighth when Terry Puhl, batting for rookie catcher John Mizerock, pulled a clean single to right field. He settled for his second one-hitter against Houston.

"Sure I was thinking about the no-hitter," Lea said, "but after I lost it I was just trying to stay in the game and save the shutout. The best game I ever threw was here last year against these guys, a one-hitter against Don Sutton. But this game and that one are comparable."

Lea, 2-0, finished with six strikeouts and three walks. Last May 26, also here in the Astrodome, he faced one batter over the minimum but was tied 0-0 with Sutton before the Expos scored four runs for Lea in the 10th inning.

This one-hitter followed Milt Wilcox's for Detroit Friday night. Wilcox had a perfect game going for 8 2-3 innings before Jerry Hairston hit a clean pinch single for Chicago, the only baserunner against Wilcox in the Tigers' 6-0 victory over the White Sox.

Lea, who pitched 5 2-3 perfect innings in winning his first game of the season against Los Angeles on April 9, pitched his no-hitter against San Francisco on May 10, 1981.

Lea said he was calm throughout this no-hit bid."Nobody can tell how somebody will react to a no-hitter. Some people get excited. But not me, I just relax and bear down."

"He was unhittable," Houston second baseman Phil Garner said of Lea. "He throws an invisible ball. It jumps over the bat. I wonder who beats him. I don't believe I've ever seen him lose."

Last year against the Astros he was 3-1 with a 0.52 earned-run average. Now it's down to 0.30.

Almost as dazzling as Lea's pitching performance was a mammoth ninth-inning home run by Andre Dawson into the upper deck, only the sixth homer lofted into the yellow seats in the Astrodome since it opened in 1965.

"Oh, it was just a fast ball out over the plate, a golf shot," Dawson shrugged.

Expos Manager Bill Virdon said Lea had been able to avoid trouble throughout his string."His control is good enough that when he gets in trouble, he gets right back out again," Virdon said. "He gets back in the groove quickly, even on the same batter."

Lea retired the first eight batters in order before yielding a walk to pitcher Bob Knepper in the third inning.Lea walked Harry Spilman and Kevin Bass with one out in the fifth but Mizerock hit a solid grounder to second baseman Doug Flynn, who started a double play to end the threat.Lea retired the next eight Astros prior to Puhl's hit.

Montreal got the only run Lea needed in the second inning when Gary Carter hit a one-out single went to second base on a single by Chris Speier and scored on Flynn's single.

Cincinnati 8
San Francisco 3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "We had good pitching last year, too, but we weren't generating any offense," Cincinnati Reds third baseman Johnny Bench said. "Now, we're generating offense."

Bench was a master of the understatement Saturday at Candlestick Park, where the Reds erupted for 19 hits, including a three-run homer by Bench, to bury the San Francisco Giants 8-3.

The barrage included four hits apiece by Ron Oester and Dan Driessen, but it was Bench's blast in the four-run sixth that broke open a tight game and helped the Reds to a 7-3 record.

Loser Fred Breining, 2-1, left nine runners stranded through the first five innings and was trailing only 2-1 when Bench connected with two down in the sixth for a 5-1 lead.

"He hung a slider," Bench said of the pitch which led to his 378th career homer. "Breining is the type of pitcher where you've got to get a mistake to do something. He's one of the better pitchers in the league."

Reds right-handed pitcher Mario Soto, 3-1, gave up two hits and struck out eight before leaving the game with a blister after seven innings. Tom Hume finished, completing a four-hit collaboration.

Cesar Cedeno was hit by a pitch by Breining to start the Reds sixth, Eddie Milner singled and Bench cracked his first homer of the season, with two outs. The Reds added another run in the inning off reliever Mike Chris when Driessen walked and Oester and Jeff Jones singled.

Driessen singled, went to third on Oester's hit-and-run single and scored on Jones' sacrifice fly for a 1-0 Reds lead in the second, then singles by Cedeno and Milner, Dave Concepcion's bunt and Driessen's RBI-single made it 2-0 in the third. Driessen also had a two-run single off Jim Barr in the ninth.

Soto, 3-1, struck out eight and yielded two hits before Tom Hume took over. Soto allowed a run in the fourth when Darrell Evans led off with a walk, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on Jeff Leonard's two-out single.

Chicago 6
Pittsburgh 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — There's an old baseball adage that goes, "A walk's as good as a hit."It held true Saturday for the Chicago Cubs.

Late-inning wildness by Pittsburgh pitchers Larry McWilliams and Rod Scurry, helped the Cubs rally for three runs on just one hit in the eighth inning and a 6-5 triumph over the Pirates.

The victory was just the second in nine games for the Cubs, while the Pirates lost their third consecutive home game after winning their first five contests on the road.

McWilliams, armed with a 4-3 lead, walked Ron Cey to lead off the eighth and then wild-pitched him to second. After retiring Leon Durham on a fly out and walking Keith Moreland, McWilliams was replaced by Scurry, who promptly walked Wayne Nordhagen to load the bases.

Tanner was asked afterwards why he didn't bring in Kent Tekluve, a right-hander, to face Morales.

"They still had two left-handed batters on the bench (Jay Johnstone and Scott Thompson)," Tanner said. "And I'd rather have Scurry pitch to Morales."

Morales said he went to the clubhouse between innings to swing a bat and stay loose in the 40-degree cold of Three Rivers Stadium.

"I was just up there to make contact," Morales said. "Hot weather, cold weather, it doesn't make any difference. If you come through you're a hero, if you don't ..."

The Pirates closed to within 6-5 in the bottom of the eighth on Lee Mazzilli's single, a wild pitch by Bill Campbell and Jason Thompson's RBI ground out.

But after Johnny Ray led off the ninth with a single and moved up on Tony Pena's sacrifice bunt, Cubs' reliever Lee Smith struck out Dale Berra and Richie Hebner to end the game.

"He's the guy who closes the game. He's our stopper," Cubs Manager Lee Elia said of the hard-throwing Smith, who has yet to give up a run in four appearances this season. "He's shown since the second half of last season that he could do the job."

Tanner said he's not concerned — yet — about the Pirates' inability to win at home.

"How many games have we played? Eight?" he asked. "I'm sure we'll do better at home than on the road."

The Pirates, trailing 3-1, got five hits in the fifth inning off Cubs' starter Ferguson Jenkins to take a 4-3 lead. Dale Berra and Lee Mazzilli had run-scoring singles and the other run scored when Lee Lacy grounded into a double play.

The Cubs had taken a 2-0 lead when Moreland hit a two-run homer over the left field wall in the second inning, but the Pirates got a run back in the third on Berra's leadoff double and Lacy's RBI ground out.

Chicago made it 3-1 in the fourth on Durham's single and steal of second and Nordhagen's sacrifice fly.

Elway's Future Soon To Be Decided

NEW YORK (AP) — John Elway's decision — football or baseball? — is less than two weeks away now and the tension is starting to get to Stanford's All-American quarterback.

"I'm not really worried because I can't make a wrong decision, but I'm at the point now where I'm ready to get it over with," Elway said Saturday during a visit to Yankee Stadium where his plan to meet some of the New York Yankees was postponed by rain that washed out the scheduled game against Toronto.

"I wish the (National Football League) draft was tomorrow so I could hurry up and get a decision made. It's starting to wear on me a little bit."

Elway said he will choose between the two sports "definitely within two weeks, probably a week-and-a-half." And his father, Jack Elway, head football coach at San Jose State, said Marvin Demoff, his son's agent, and Bill Dubbin, the family's lawyer, would meet with Yankee officials Wednesday or Thursday to talk money. The NFL draft is April 26.

George Steinbrenner was not around Saturday and 22-year-old John, a 6-foot-3, 205-pound blond, plopped himself in the chair behind the owner's desk for a news conference.

The only offer Elway has had thus far came from the Oakland Invaders, who own his territorial rights in the United States Football League. Elway said he rejected an offer of $200,000 a year for five years, a million-dollar annuity fund "which I couldn't touch until I'm 43," a life insurance policy which he could draw on at age 65 and an option to buy 5 percent of the team.

Since those numbers apparently weren't good enough, the Yankees and whichever NFL team drafts Elway will have to throw some serious zeroes around, and probably in the form of a guaranteed contract. Steinbrenner showed Elway some Yankee dollars last summer — 140,000 of them — for a six-week stint as an outfielder with Oneonta, N.Y., in the Class A New York-Penn League, where he batted .318 with four homers and 25 RBIs in 42 games. Although he is no longer under contract to the Yankees, they own his baseball rights for the next five years.

But Elway set a bushel of NCAA and Pacific-10 Conference records at Stanford and there are those who feel he may be the best passer ever at the college level.

"I've never been out here before and I just came to see the stadium and see how the Yankees operate," Elway said. "Any time you come to Yankee Stadium it's something you're really in awe of because of their prestige."

Although he reiterated that his football preference would be to play for a West Coast team or the Dallas Cowboys, Elway denied reports that he had told the Baltimore Colts and Houston Oilers, who have the first two picks in the NFL draft, that he would not play for them. But he didn't say he would, either.

"I don't want to say anything to offend either the Yankees or the NFL," he said.

If the money offers are in the same ballpark — Elway says he hopes there is not a big difference because he doesn't that to be a major factor — his decision boils down to this: In the NFL, he will suit up right away, but with more of an injury risk; with the Yankees, he probably will have to spend two or three years in the minor leagues.

"I'm not looking at the minors right now as being negative," Elway said. "I enjoyed myself last year, and right now I miss baseball because I haven't played it for a long time. It's seasonal — whatever season it seems to be is my favorite because I've played both for so long.

"Whether I start right away in the NFL isn't that big a factor. I could sit for a year or two and learn from someone who's been there a while."

Asked if it would be correct to say his preferences were (1) to play with a West Coast NFL team, (2) to sign with the Yankees and (3) to play with any other NFL team, Elway replied: "Kind of, but not really. It's still up in the air because I don't know who's going to draft me."

Sunday night, the Elway party — John, Jack, mother Jan and girl friend Janet — heads back to the West Coast, where John graduates from Stanford on June 12 with a degree in economics. First, however, he will take a directive reading course called "The Economics of Professional Sports."

In 10 days or so, Elway may be able to teach it.

Steelers Finally Sign Top 1981 Draft Pick

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League said Saturday they have signed Keith Gary, the defensive end who signed with the Montreal Alouettes in 1981 when he was the Steelers' No. 1 draft choice.

"I always wanted to play for the Steelers," Gary, 24, said at a news conference at Three Rivers Stadium Saturday.

The announcement of the multiyear contract was made by Gary and Dan Rooney, Steelers president. No details were released.

Gary, 6-foot-3, 255 pounds, said he did not negotiate with any other teams and did not consider the United States Football League, according to Steelers spokesman Ed Kiely.

Asked whether Gary or the Steelers made the first contact, Kiely said, "It was little bit of both. When he left there (Montreal), his agents indicated his feeling and we went from there."

In July 1981 Gary signed with the Canadian Football League because the Montreal team offered him a better deal.

"Keith wanted to play for Pittsburgh, but it got down to a business decision," Jerry Argovitz, then Gary's agent, said when the decision was made.

Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw called the decision "a big mistake."

"He chose the easy path instead of the tough one," Steelers Coach Chuck Noll said then. "It surprised me, I had a different view of him, obviously, or we wouldn't have taken him on the first round."

Even in 1981, however, Gary said he expected to return to the NFL after two years in Canada.

Vilas Defeats Smid In Semis

HILTON HEAD ISLAND ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Argentinian Guillermo Vilas overpowered Tomas Smid 7-6, 6-3, 6-4 Saturday and advanced to the final of the $250,000 WCT Spring Finals at Shipyard Racquet Club.

Vilas, second-seeded in the tournament, powered baseline volleys past the Czechoslovakian repeatedly.

Vilas will play the winner of the Saturday night match between Brian Teacher and top-seeded Ivan Lendl. The final will be played Sunday afternoon.

Smid continually attempted to charge the net, but Vilas hit the ball convincingly by him most of the time. After the match, Smid explained that he had no choice but to challenge Vilas at the net.

"You have to come to the net to beat him," said Smid. "You don't have any chance if you stay back."

Vilas complained he felt slow on the court and said he wasn't ready to think about the prospects of playing Lendl, the No. 2 player in WCT rankings.

Smid played on even terms with Vilas through the first set, but lost the tiebreaker 7-3. After that it was all Vilas.

He broke Smid's serve immediately in the second set and moved out to a 2-0 lead he never relinquished.

Smid attempted a rally in the third set but Vilas' powerful volleys overwhelmed him.

Lloyd Downs Mandlikova

AMELIA ISLAND, FLa. (AP) — Defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd played near flawless tennis for most of two sets to defeat Hanna Mandlikova 6-2, 6-4 Saturday as she moved into the final round of the $250,000 Lipton Women's Tennis Association Championships.

In the other semifinal match, 15-year-old Carling Bassett of Canada, the youngest player on the WTA tour, upset No. 8 seed Kathy Rinaldi 6-2, 6-2 and will face Lloyd in the $32,000 championship match Sunday.

Lloyd, playing on her home court and her preferred surface of clay, placed the ball along the sidelines and in the corners to keep Mandlikova moving along the baselines.

Mandlikova, 21, of Czechoslovakia, slipped and skinned her knee in the first game and said later that affected her play.

Lloyd swept through the first set and was up 4-0 in the second until Mandlikova overcame a 40-0 deficit in the fifth game to win.

Lloyd, 28, broke her serve in the next game but Mandlikova again rebounded to take three games in a row.

However, the injury took a toll, she said.

"I just couldn't run the way I was supposed to and just had to let some balls go," said Mandlikova, the No. 4 seed.

Lloyd said she did not think the injury was that serious.

"She made a lot of errors. She was sloppy today," Lloyd said.

'Iron Men' Shared Thoughts, Feelings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Garvey figures only one other man will truly know his feelings Saturday night when he eclipses Billy Williams' National League record of 1,117 consecutive games played.

"Billy and I spoke about the record some earlier," said the San Diego Padres' first baseman. "We have the same sort of thoughts, but only he and I can share them."

Williams, the former Chicago Cub who is now on the coaching staff of the Oakland A's, was to be on hand for pre-game ceremonies at Dodger Stadium honoring Garvey, LA's first baseman for 12 years before signing with the Padres last December.

Both had refused to say much about the streak, with Williams saying he considered it a taboo, similar to talking about a no-hitter in progress.

Only Lou Gehrig, with 2,130, and Everett Scott, with 1,307, have played in more consecutive games.

Garvey tied Williams' record, which was capped in 1963, Friday night as the Padres lost 6-2 to the Dodgers.

It was a time of mixed emotions for Garvey, whose much-heralded return to Dodger Stadium saw him go a frustrating 0-for-4 in his club's loss.

Still, a sellout crowd of 52,392 gave him a lengthy standing ovation prior to the game, and he can expect another when he rewrites the record.

"I've been blessed with the physical and mental strength to do it, to play when I'm injured," said Garvey. "I've always thought of it as a day-to-day thing. Some day I could have gotten a speck of dust in my eye and been unable to play."

Asked his plans after he gets the record, Garvey, who earlier had said he'd like to go after Gehrig's mark, smiled and said, "To play every inning of every game."

'Tentative' Game Gives Pirates 8-4 Win

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — For the longest time, East Carolina University's baseball doubleheader with American University was listed as "tentative" on the Pirate schedule.

As it turned out, the Pirates didn't find out how tentative until just before 1 p.m. Friday afternoon — the scheduled time for the start of the twin-bill.

As time drew near for the first game to begin at William & Mary's baseball field in Williamsburg, American hadn't shown, and Coach Hal Baird began to wonder if they would show at all.

But finally, at 12:58 p.m., American arrived, took a brief warmup, and the game got underway 25 minutes late.

East Carolina banged out an 8-4 victory in the contest, giving Bob Davidson only his second win of the season. The second game, however, after a rain delay, finally ended in a 1-1 tie when umpires called the game because of darkness after seven frames.

The tie is only the third for the Pirates since records became more established in 1962. The other two were against Bowling Green and Brown.

Once play finally got started in the opener, the Pirates wasted little time in establishing a lead as they broke their three-game losing streak.

With one away, John Hallow slapped a single and Todd Evans walked. Evans was then erased at second on David Wells' grounder, leaving runners at the corners. They worked a double steal with Hallow scoring.

The Pirates added two more in the third, taking a 3-0 lead. Tony Salmond opened with a triple down the right field line, and Kelly Robinette was hit by a pitch. Hallow singled to score Salmond and after an out, Wells singled in Robinette.

American rallied, however, scoring three in the bottom of the third to tie it up. Steve Salem got a one-out hit and Greg Wells doubled to score him. Mike Spring's triple brought in Wells, and Mark Stiles walked. Jim Vershbow then grounded out, scoring Spring to knot the score.

The Pirates quickly went back out, scoring twice in the fourth. With two away, Jack Curlings doubled and Salmond walked. After a passed ball moved both runners up, they scored on Robinette's single.

ECU added three more in the fifth to take an 8-3 lead. Evans singled and Wells was hit by a pitch. Both moved up on a passed ball, and a wild pitch scored Evans. Winfred Johnson walked as did Mark Shank, loading the bases. Curlings was hit by a pitch, scoring Wells and Salmond hit a sacrifice fly to score Johnson.

American came back to score once in the bottom of the sixth. Stiles walked and Vershbow reached on an error. Steve Gobish grounded out, scoring Stiles.

Davidson, in moving his record to 2-4, allowed only four hits, walked two and struck out five.

The second game turned into a struggle for both teams — in more ways than one. A 45-minute rain delay following the top of the first inning turned the field into a quagmire, but the game continued at Baird's insistance. He's already seen four ECAC-South games rained out and wasn't anxious to see another.

The Pirates grabbed a 1-0 lead before the rains came, however. Robinette reached on a drag bunt and moved up on a sacrifice. He took third on a wild pitch and scored on Evans' ground out.

After that, it was a series of frustrations for the Pirates. In the second, Mark Council opened with a double and was sacrificed to third, but died there. In the third, Hallow singled and moved up on a wild pitch but got no further. The fifth saw Mike Williams open with a hit and move up on a sacrifice only to be stranded. And in the sixth, Robert Wells got a two-out double, but went nowhere.

American, too, was having its troubles. In the second, Ron Barner walked and David Barnes singled, only to wait out the rest of the inning. That was their only threat, however, until the sixth.

In the sixth, American pushed over the tying run. Greg Wells doubled and with one away, Stiles singled to center, with Robert Wells firing a strike to home to get Greg Wells.

Vershbow then singled to right and Hallow's throw back to the infield got past Salmond and Evans both, allowing Stiles to dash on home with the lone American run.

Then, in the seventh, the Pirates came up with a double play that got them out of a game-losing situation. Barner and Barnes were both issued walks by Johnson, and were sacrificed up. With a 2-0 count, Salem attempted a squeeze bunt, but popped the ball up.

ACC All Stars Rescheduled

FARMVILLE — The Atlantic Coast Conference Barnstorming Basketball Game originally scheduled for Monday April 18 at Farmville Central has been changed to Wednesday April 27 at 8 p.m.

An invitation to dine at the Governor's Mansion by Gov. Jim Hunt to members of the 1982-83 NCAA champion North Carolina State Wolfpack team, along with the UNC Tar Heels, would have prevented guards Sidney Lowe and Derick Whittenburg and forward Thurl Bailey of State and guard Jimmy Braddock of Carolina from attending.

The date change will allow those four to play, along with Bob Bender, Chip Engelland and Tom Emma of Duke, Alvis Rogers of Wake Forest and Craig Robinson of Virginia. They will compete against a squad of former Farmville Central standouts.

There will be a dunk contest at halftime and an autograph session following the 40-minute game.

Rose, Vikes Rained Out

Rains washed out Friday night's baseball games for both Rose High School and D.H. Conley.

The Rampants, who traveled to Kinston, never got their game underway, and will try to play again on Monday at 7:30 p.m.

D.H. Conley's contest with West Carteret, at which the school's new baseball lights were used for the first time, got underway, but was washed out before it could be completed. No date has been set for its replay as yet.

Evans made a diving catch of the ball and was able to relay it to third in time to make the force on Barner for the final out.

At that point, the officials called the game because of darkness.

Greg Wells and Spring each had two hits for American in the contest, while Hallow had two for ECU.

The results moved the Pirates to 16-12-1 on the year, while American slumps to 6-14-3.

The Pirates were scheduled to face William & Mary on Saturday in another ECAC game, with a game at Richmond today in another conference matchup. The games are the final league contests for the Pirates who now stand 2-1-1 against ECAC-South opponents.

Wolfpack Home For Jim Valvano

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano said Friday North Carolina is his home and North Carolina State is the only place where he intends to coach.

Valvano, who led the Wolfpack to the 1983 NCAA championship, had been rumored to be a top candidate to coach the New Jersey Nets of the NBA.

"I would emphatically like to lay to rest the rumors that have abounded over the last week or so concerning the possibility of my coaching the New Jersey Nets," said Valvano.

"North Carolina is my home and State is the only place where I have any intentions of coaching. My family and I are looking forward to many more happy years here. I only hope the coming years are as enjoyable as the first three."

Valvano also said he plans to continue coaching college basketball and said he has had no contact with anyone from the National Basketball Association.

In January, Valvano and State athletic director Willis Casey agreed to a 10-year letter of appointment.

In three seasons at Iona and three seasons at N.C. State, Valvano's teams have been to the NCAA tournament four times.

His overall record is 196-130. During his three years with the Wolfpack, the teams record has been 62-33.

Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton said Valvano's decision to stay "obviously is good news."

"I'm delighted and I'm sure all the people in North Carolina are delighted. I tell you, we may have another Brickyard party."

"He means so much to us, for the morale of our campus. It's not just that he's a great coach. He's one of our favorite people."

Aycock Downs Kinston, 13-10

KINSTON — Vickie Parrott slapped a double and a home run, but it wasn't enough as Kinston defeated E.B. Aycock 13-10 in Friday softball action.

V. Gardner had three hits in four trips to the plate for Kinston, while P. Campbell had two hits in four at-bats. Campbell went the distance on the mound for Kinston.

Christy Tyler went two-for-two for Aycock including a triple. Aycock led 8-6 after three innings, but Kinston rallied to tie it up in the fifth.

Aycock plated a run in the top of the sixth frame, but Kinston retaliated with four runs in their half of the inning and went on to preserve the lead.

Moye's Homer Paces Charger Victory

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Ayden-Grifton managed just four hits against Farmville Central pitcher Billy Godley, but one of those was a two-run homer by Roger Moye in the fourth to lead the Chargers to a 5-1 Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference baseball victory Friday.

"(Roy Roman) made a good play on the home run ball to center," said Ayden-Grifton coach Allen Wilson, whose team is now 10-3 overall with an unblemished 3-0 mark in the conference. "He had the ball in his glove, but when he hit the fence it just came out. That was one of those breaks that went our way."

Ayden-Grifton pitcher Terri Garrett went the distance on the mound to pick up his third win in as many decisions, striking out nine Jaguars while giving up five walks. Godley went all the way for Farmville Central, now 1-2 in the conference with a 5-5 overall mark.

The Jaguars drew first blood in the opening frame, but the run produced when shortstop Bobby Carraway walked, stole second and scored on a single by Alvin Baker was to be the only one Farmville Central managed. The Jaguars left eight runners on the bases in the contest — three of those at third.

"We just didn't get the hits when we needed them — it's that simple," said Farmville Central coach Bill Davis. "Billy Godley threw the ball exceptionally well — well enough to win. He just didn't get the support behind him that you have to have.

"The Ayden-Grifton pitcher kept our hitters off stride. It's not that he throws the ball that hard, but it's well placed and he mixes up his pitches well."

Ayden-Grifton retaliated with a run in the bottom of the second. Senior rightfielder Tyrone Gay walked to open the inning, stole second and took third when Baker's pickoff attempt sailed into left-center. Gay scored when Moye reached first on an error.

But the big inning for the Chargers was the third, Doug Coley singled and then scored on when the ball was thrown out of play on a grounder by Joey Kennedy. Kennedy scored when Moye's shot to center eluded Roman's glove.

Godley retired the Jaguars without incident after the homer until the seventh when Moye led off with a bloop single that got by Roman allowing Moye to take second. A fielder's choice by Garrett moved Moye to third, and he scored when Charles Mitchell's grounder bounced over Gerald Wilson's glove at third.

Farmville Central hosts C.B. Aycock Tuesday at 4 p.m., while the Chargers entertain Roanoke at 7:30.

Knicks Clinch Playoff Berth

By The Associated Press

When the New York Knicks start the National Basketball Association playoffs next week, Coach Hubie Brown will be uncharacteristically relaxed.

"It's icing on the cake," says the man whose team lost 26 of its first 40 games.

The Knicks clinched a playoff berth by beating Detroit 100-83 Friday night, leaving Atlanta and Washington to fight it out for the final berth in the Eastern Conference.

"Just getting to the playoffs is the big thing for us," Brown said. "Call it incredible.

"Just about nobody gave us much of a chance when the season began," he added. "They said we had too many new faces. Not enough of this, not enough of that."

The playoff picture also cleared up in the West as the Portland Trail Blazers, who beat the Golden State Warriors 112-106, clinched a Western Conference playoff berth. The other berth will go to the winner of Sunday's game in Denver between the Nuggets and the Kansas City Kings.

In other games Friday night, Denver topped Dallas 137-126; Kansas City downed Houston 117-102; Cleveland beat Indiana 132-124 in overtime; Chicago downed Boston 120-117; San Antonio beat Utah 121-118; Philadelphia downed New Jersey 100-98; Phoenix beat San Diego 113-101, and Los Angeles beat Seattle 100-99.

Bernard King scored 23 points to lead the Knicks, but 47 New York points came from the bench, which has continually come through during the second half of the season.

"Tonight's game was like most of our others since we got going," Brown said. "Ten guys contributed. That's why I've repeatedly kept saying this is a true team."

Cleveland 132, Indiana 124

The game was really a loss for Houston, Indiana clinched last place in the East. Houston, dead last in the West, owns Cleveland's first draft pick and had the Cavaliers finished last, the Rockets would be guaranteed the University of Virginia's 7-4 center, Ralph Sampson.

Now Houston and Indiana will have to flip a coin for the first pick.

The crowd at Indianapolis' Market Square Arena cheered when Cleveland scored and booed when the Pacers did.

Cleveland Coach Tom Nissalke said of the Pacers: "Never have I seen an NBA team play with so much integrity when they had nothing to win for."

Portland 112, Golden State 106

Jim Paxson scored 21 of his 30 points in the second half, though Golden State, 29-52, gave the Blazers a scare by staying within one to three points for most of the game.

Calvin Natt had 25 points and 14 rebounds for Portland. Joe Barry Carroll had 27 points and 12 rebounds for the Warriors and Mickey Johnson scored 21.

Kings 117, Rockets 102

Playing at home, Kansas City breezed over Houston, which lost its 67th game in 81 starts. But the Kings must beat Denver to make the playoffs.

Nuggets 137, Mavericks 126

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 33 points, 15 in the third quarter, and reserve Glen Gondrezick contributed key baskets to blunt a Dallas comeback. The Nuggets still trail the Kings, but will get the final Western playoff berth if they beat Kansas City Sunday because they have a better record in conference play.

Dan Issel had 27 points for Denver and Alex English had 23. Mark Agguire had had 31 points and Rolando Blackman 20 for Dallas.

Bulls 120, Celtics 117

Dave Corzine, who had 34 points, broke a 112-all tie with a three-point play and Quintin Dailey added three free throws to clinch the game, played in Boston Garden.

Chicago had lost seven of its previous eight games and the Celtics had won seven of 10 going into the game. Kevin McHale had 26 points and Robert Parish 21 to lead Boston while Dailey had 18 and Reggie Theus 16 in support of Corzine.

76ers, 100, Nets 98

Franklin Edwards sank a 16-foot jump shot with two seconds left to win the game for the 76ers, who used reserves for much of the game. It was the third straight in which Moses Malone rested his aching knee.

Albert King of the Nets, who are 1-4 since Coach Larry Brown resigned to take the job at the University of Kansas, led all scorers with 25 points while Julius Erving had 17 and Andrew Toney 16 for Philadelphia.

Spurs 121, Jazz 118

Artis Gilmore went over the 20,000-point mark with his 16 points for San Antonio, becoming the 15th player to reach that level.

Johnny Moore scored 21 points to lead San Antonio including a free throw with seven seonds left that put the game out of reach. The Spurs trailed for much of the game, but Roger Phegley scored 12 points in the fourth quarter.

Suns 113, Clippers 101

Larry Nance scored 17 points and Walter Davis added 16 to lead a balanced scoring attack for the Suns, who won their 11th in 12 starts and clinched the home court advantage in the Western Division playoffs against all but Los Angeles.

The loss was the Clippers' eighth in a row.Tom Chambers led the outmanned Clippers' offensive effort with 35 points.

Lakers 100, Sonics 99

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 29 points, including the last point of the game — a free throw with 21 seconds to play — to give the Lakers their win at the Forum.The Lakers trailed for most of the game before Michael Cooper's two free throws tied it at 95 with 3:06 remaining.

Jack Sikma, who had 25 points to lead Seattle, missed a layup at the buzzer after Earvin "Magic" Johnson missed two foul shots that could have iced it for the Lakers.

Ruttman Takes Qualifying Lead

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Joe Ruttman turned the fastest lap Friday in rain-delayed qualifying for the Northwestern Bank 400.

Ruttman, 39, of Upland, Calif., closed in on the first pole position of his three-year career on NASCAR's Grand National circuit by edging Geoff Bodine and Mark Martin.

The entire field will qualify again Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m., with the two-day average speed determining the starting order.

Friday's top eight qualifiers were assured of being in the top eight starting positions for Sunday's 1 p.m. race.

Ruttman, fifth in the Winston Cup standings through the season's first five races, turned a lap in 112.748 mph on the 5-8 mile North Wilkesboro Speedway. His time was almost 3 mph slower than the track record set by Dave Marcis in 1982.

Driving a Buick, Ruttman reeled off the day's fastest lap midway through the qualifying, which was delayed 30 minutes by rain. He bettered his time on the second lap to clinch first.

Bodine, of Pleasant Garden, had a time of 112.448 mph, followed by Martin at 111.940, Neil Bonnett at 111.924 and Bobby Allison at 111.757.

Waltrip's younger brother, 19-year-old Mike Waltrip, won the pole position for Saturday's 3 p.m. running of a 110-lap race for Darlington Dash Cars. His pole-wining speed was 108.864 mph.

Guess What? Astros Win!

By The Associated Press

The Houston Astros are in the National League record book — but at least they're not alone.

The Astros could have broken their four-way tie with the with the 1918 Brooklyn Dodgers, 1919 Boston Braves and 1962 New York Mets by losing their 10th consecutive game at the start of a season. That would have established a modern-era record in the NL.

And for the first half of Friday night's game in the Astrodome, they appeared headed in that direction, falling behind Montreal 6-0. But the Astros regrouped, tied the Expos in the seventh inning and beat them 7-6 in the 10th on Craig Reynold's single.

"What's another loss if you're 0-9?" asked Houston Manager Bob Lillis when someone wondered how he felt, avoiding the ignominy of a niche in in the record book. "It's still bad, even if you avoid the record. This doesn't change what's happened in the past. We still have a long way to go. But I sure feel better now to get this one behind us."

Elsewhere in the NL, Los Angeles beat San Diego 6-2 in Steve Garvey's less-than-successful return to Dodger Stadium, Cincinnati downed San Francisco 3-1 and St. Louis defeated the New York Mets 5-2. Inclement weather forced the postponement of the Chicago at Pittsburgh and Atlanta at Philadelphia games.

"We're on our way now," said Lillis. "This is just what we needed. We had a few breaks go our way for a change. We've been battling all along. All these losses were not blowouts. We were just one pitch or one hit away in several games. Our record could be a lot better than 1-9."

"You can't look at this as a breakthrough," added Reynolds, whose single to center field off Ray Burris scored Phil Garner, who had singled and taken second on a grounder by Jose Cruz.

"You've got to forget about the first nine games," Reynolds said. "You've got to play them all like it is the first game of the season. We've battled all year. We've come back from big deficits before, we just couldn't win until now."

It was a disappointing return to Houston for Montreal Manager Bill Virdon, fired as the Astros' manager last Aug. 10. "A 6-0 lead is tough to lose," he said. "The people on the Astros are not quitters ... The bad breaks they've been experiencing usually even out."

Dodgers 6, Padres 2

Rookie Greg Brock, who took over at first base when Garvey headed south via free agency last December, hit his third homer in three games and fourth of the year to help Fernando Valenzuela and the Dodgers down the Padres.

For Garvey, who went hitless in four at-bats, it was his 1,117th consecutive game, tying Billy Williams' NL record. He can move into third place by himself tonight. Only Lou Gehrig (2,130) and Everett Scott (1,307) are ahead of him.

"The press built everything up a lot, but when the game actually started, it was just a matter of us going out there and trying to win," said Brock. "Steve tied the record, and nobody can take that away from him."

Reds 3, Giants 1

Rich Gale made a triumphant return of sorts to San Francisco. He was 7-14 with the Giants last year, then was dealt to the Reds. And after Bruce Berenyi left following three innings, saying his shoulder was bothering him, Gale checked San Francisco for five innings to beat his former teammates.

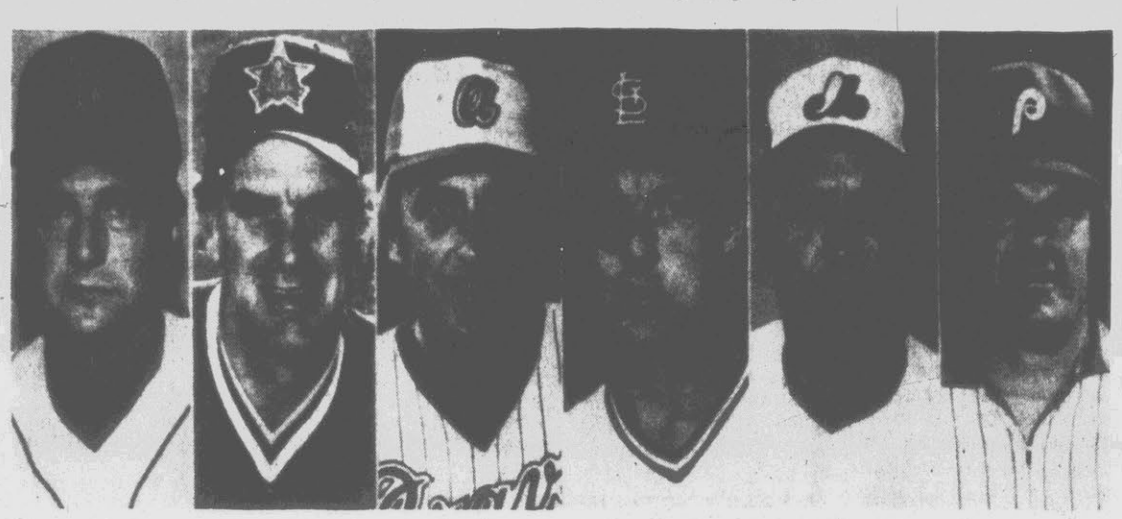

"It was very gratifying to come back here and pitch well," said Gale. But Giants Manager Frank Robinson wasn't impressed. "Heck," he said, "a guy with a sore arm shut us out for three innings." Dan Driessen hit a two-run homer for Cincinnati.

Cardinals 5, Mets 2

George Hendrick's third homer in three games helped the Cardinals win their fifth in a row and saddle the Mets with their fifth consecutive loss. John Stuper, in his first start of the year, scattered seven hits in eight innings and drove in two runs with a second-inning single and a sixth-inning squeeze bunt.

Baseball's Old Stars

The Beards Are Turning Gray On These Baseball Boys Of Summer

"It is too late! Ah, nothing is too late
"Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate." — Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, "Morituri Salutamus."

"It hasn't been easy for me all these years. I've had to work year-round, especially the last eight or 10 years. If I hadn't, I'd be fishing today instead of getting ready for another baseball season." — Carl Yastrzemski, Boston Red Sox.

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Age. The simple, chronological process of growing older.

It is, by nature, a game for younger limbs, quicker reflexes and more foolhardy attitudes. But not to Gaylord Perry, Phil Niekro or Jim Kaat, all 44 years of age. Not to 43-year-old Woody Fryman or 42-year-old Pete Rose. Not to 40-year-old Tony Perez or 39-year-old Bill Robinson.

New training methods and a growing awareness of the needs of the human body have allowed these men to stay in the game; their love of baseball and the tremendous influx of money have provided the incentive.

"Generally money lies nearest them that are nearest their graves." — William Penn, "Fruits of Solitude."

"Fifteen years ago, I could have made a lot more money doing something else," says Kaat, a left-handed relief pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals and the oldest man in the National League. "Not anymore."

Yastrzemski, a first baseman-designated hitter, has announced that he is playing his final season, but others like Kaat and Perry, the oldest man in baseball, have not yet reached the age of decision.

"Spring still makes spring in the mind
"When sixty years are told;
"Love makes anew his throbbing heart,
"And we are never old." — Ralph Waldo Emerson, "The World-Soul."

"Baseball is fun for me again," Perez says. "I hope I'll still be able to say that in September and October."

Perez is a first baseman-pinch hitter who left Boston as a free agent and wound up in Philadelphia with other oldtimers Rose, Morgan, Robinson and Ron Reed to form the nucleus of the Wheeze Kids, a pun intended to compare this team disparagingly with Philadelphia's 1950 Whiz Kids.

It is one of the hazards of growing older. One must endure the harassing from the more youthful while, at the same time, beating back the demons of doubt in one's own mind.

"The older I grow the more I distrust the familiar doctrine that age brings wisdom." — H. L. Mencken, "Prejudices."

Perez has found the answer to these problems in actions rather than words. He batted .386 with three home runs during spring training and was batting .333 in the first five games of Philadelphia's 1983 season.

In fact, there are enough oldtimers around who have learned a similar lesson to build a pretty good "Old-Star" team. Those under 35 need not apply, and it might look something like this:

First base — Rose, who had 172 hits in 162 games last season for Philadelphia and sometime next year could break Ty Cobb's lifetime record for hits of 4,191. Perez could be his backup.

Second base — Morgan, a .256 hitter in the spring with three homers. Last year with the San Francisco Giants, he batted .289 with 14 homers and 61 RBI.

Shortstop — Larry Bowa, 37, Chicago Cubs, a two-time Gold Glove winner who played in 142 games with the Cubs last year, batting .246 after a .186 start through mid-June. He's Chicago's regular shortstop again this year.

Third base — Graig Nettles, 38, New York Yankees, long considered one of the top fielding third basemen in the league, hit 18 homers and drove in 55 runs in 1982.

Left field — Robinson, who turns 40 in June, hit .417 in 11 spring games but has been sidelined so far in the regular season with a groin injury.

Center field — Amos Otis, 36, Kansas City, continues to stave off challenges from younger players. Last year, he batted .286 with 11 homers and 88 RBI.

Catcher — Gene Tenace, 36, Pittsburgh Pirates, an integral part of St. Louis' World Series title last season.

Designated hitter — Hal McRae, 36, Kansas City, who led the American League with 133 RBI last season, or Reggie Jackson, 36, California, who tied for the AL lead with 39 homers in 1982.

"With years a richer life begins,
"The spirit mellows:
"Ripe age gives tone to violins,
"Wine, and good fellows." — John Townsend Trowbridge, "Three Worlds."

The New York Yankees set a World Series record by batting .338 against the Pittsburgh Pirates in the 1960 classic, but lost the series in seven games.

Lou Dampier, a guard, scored the most points in the nine-year history of the American Basketball Association. He scored 13,726 points.

Doubtful Of Either Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes says he would consider fighting Teofilo Stevenson for charity and fighting Gerry Cooney again for $25 million.

But the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion said that he doesn't think either meeting will take place.

Stevenson is the three-time Olympic heavyweight champion, who will be trying for a fourth gold medal next year at Los Angeles. Cooney is the second half of boxing's richest fight in which he was stopped in the 13th round by Holmes last June 11. The challenger got equal pay with the champion, something that still rankles Holmes.

Several times while Muhammad Ali was champion in the 1970s, stories were written about a possible Ali-Stevenson fight, but it never happened.

Recently, Stevenson mentioned to some visiting reporters in Havana for a U.S.-Cuba amateur match that he would like to fight Holmes there under international amateur rules.

"I'm reading about it now," Holmes said by telephone from Las Vegas, Nev., where he is training for a title defense against Tim Witherspoon May 20.

"I'd do an exhibition just to shut him up," said Holmes, noting that he has not been approached about such a match.

But while Holmes doesn't think he'll box Stevenson under any conditions, he said that if it happened, it would have to happen in the United States.

"I really can't go over there for that," said Holmes. "After I knock him out, they might not let me out of the country. Let him come here and we'd charge an admission. We'd pay his expenses and I'd give mine to charity.

"He can have 20 ounce-gloves if he wants," continued Holmes, adding he wouldn't fight under amateur rules. "I'm the heavyweight champion of the world.

"We don't even need a referee, just like we're sparring ... a four-round sparring session."

But there would not even be a charitable feeling in connection with a rematch against Cooney, who received equal pay with Holmes in the first fight.

"Gerry Cooney will always have me on his mind," said Holmes, whose defense against Witherspoon will be his third since he beat Cooney, who is set to return to action for the first time since the loss when he fights Phillip Brown, a former sparring partner, on June 18.

"I have that win over Gerry Cooney and I don't need to fight him again ... unless they give me $25 million."

Bethel Dumps Knights By 8-7

KINSTON — Bethel Academy used a three-base hit and an error to push over a run in the bottom of the seventh inning and escape with an 8-7 baseball victory over Greenville Christian Academy on Friday.

Greenville Christian pushed over a run in the first inning to take the lead. Chris Stox got a triple and scored on Billy Stancil's sacrifice fly.

But Bethel came back with a run in the bottom of the inning, and both teams pushed over single runs in the second.

GCA then moved ahead with three in the third, to Bethel's two. GCA got a sixth run in the fourth, but Bethel scored three times to take a 7-6 lead.

GCA then tied it up in the sixth scoring once.

In the seventh, however, Scott Wilson led off with a triple. An error on the relay allowed him to travel on to home ending the game.

Wilson led the Bethel hitting with three. Tom Warburton had three for GCA, while Stox and Duane Roeser each added two.

Wilcox Just Misses Perfect Game

By The Associated Press

There was only one way Milt Wilcox was going to get into the Hall of Fame, and he blew it. That much, he knew.

"Too bad I got this close and didn't get it," the Detroit Tigers pitcher said after all the bats had been put back in the rack.

Only one of those bats from the Chicago White Sox's side had gotten a hit off Wilcox Friday night, and that came with two away in the ninth inning. Jerry Hairston, a pinch hitter, drilled Wilcox's first pitch, and 104th of the game, into center field for a clean single. Up to that point, Wilcox had a perfect game going.

The Tigers won 6-0, but Wilcox would remember only that one pitch to Hairston.

"I was trying to keep it down to him. If I had to throw it over, the only thing different would be I would throw it lower," Wilcox said. "You pitch a perfect game, and you get into the Hall of Fame, and that's the only way I would get in."

In other AL games, Toronto edged the New York Yankees 6-5, California clobbered Minnesota 8-2, Kansas City defeated Milwaukee 4-3 and Seattle beat Oakland 5-1. Cleveland at Baltimore was rained out.

Wilcox, who will be 33 in five days, struck out eight batters, including five of six in the fifth and sixth innings as he appeared to be gaining strength in the cold, blustery weather at Comiskey Park in Chicago. When rookie Ron Kittle flied to center field for the second out in the eighth, it was only the third ball out of the infield for Chicago all night.

Wilcox, 1-1, struck out Greg Walker to end the eighth, and he got Carlton Fisk to fly to left for the first out of the ninth. Mike Squires then came in to bat for Vance Law, and Wilcox went to 3-2 before Squires grounded to first, bringing up Hairston, who hit for Jerry Dybzinski.

Hairston was taking practice swings in the clubhouse when the ninth inning began. He knew he would hit, and he said he told teammate Jerry Koosman, "'OK, Kooz, I'm going to jump on that first pitch.' Fortunately, it was a fastball right there. I swung, and it was a base hit up the middle."

Detroit scored two runs apiece in the second, sixth and eighth innings. Chet Lemon had three of the RBI, Glenn Wilson drove in two runs and Lance Parrish, who doubled twice, drove in a run. Lamarr Hoyt, 1-2, was the loser.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 5

Ernie Whitt hit a two-out single in the ninth inning off New York reliever Rich Gossage to drive in Toronto's winning run in a game that marked Yankee Manager Billy Martin's first ejection of the season. Martin was thrown out in the first inning by homeplate umpire Vic Voltaggio for arguing balls and strikes.

Dave Collins, a Yankee last season, led off the Toronto ninth with an infield hit, chasing Rudy May. Collins was bunted to second and, after Willie Upshaw was walked intentionally, scored on Whitt's hit to center. Upshaw homered in the third.

Dave Stieb, 2-1, was the winner, allowing eight hits, walking five and striking out seven in going the distance.

Angels 8, Twins 2

Fred Lynn, Reggie Jackson and Bobby Grich each homered to back the eight-hit pitching of California right-hander Ken Forsch, 2-0.

The game began about four hours after the Metrodome roof was reinflated following a quick patch job to repair a rip caused by a heavy snowfall on Thursday.

Lynn's homer was a three-run shot in the fifth inning, giving the Angels a 4-1 lead. Jackson homered in the fourth, and Grich homered in the sixth. John Castino homered for Minnesota.

Royals 4, Brewers 3

Kansas City scored two runs in the sixth inning to erase a 3-2 deficit and held on behind the relief pitching of Dan Quisenberry. Larry Gura scattered five hits over seven innings in 37-degree temperatures and occasional snow flurries at Milwaukee to earn his third victory without a loss.

Hal McRae started Kansas City's winning rally with a single. He scored on Frank White's triple off Bob McClure, 0-2, and White scored the eventual winning run on Jerry Martin's sacrifice fly. Martin had three RBI for Kansas City, which spoiled the Brewers' home opener before 54,049 fans.

Mariners 5, A's 1

Perry, 1-1, yielded just three hits, struck out four and didn't walk a batter in his seven innings' work. The only A's run was unearned.

Worst Defenses Collide Today

By The Associated Press

United States Football League officials who are hoping for an offensive explosion to juice things up at the box office may get their wish this weekend when the league's two worst defensive teams collide Sunday in Tempe, Ariz.

"We're not much of a defensive ballclub," says Dick Coury, whose Boston Breakers, ranked last in the league in defense, take on the Arizona Wranglers, who are right ahead of Boston.

"We kind of pride ourselves on offense and we've shown we're more than capable of putting a bunch of points on the scoreboard," Coury said.

Last week was the first that Boston, 4-2, had offensive trouble, losing at home to the Oakland Invaders 26-7. But Arizona Coach Doug Shively says, "They've moved the ball against everybody they've played, outside of last week."

Oakland was in action Saturday night, playing at home for the first time in four weeks against the Philadelphia Stars, who lead the Atlantic Division with a 5-1 record.

In other games Sunday, Denver will be at Birmingham, Chicago at Michigan and Washington at New Jersey.

On Monday night, Los Angeles will be at Tampa Bay.

Boston's problem on defense has been getting to the passer. "We've got a ways to go on defense," says Coury. "We're young and we've been making mistakes that usually come with inexperience."

That should provide opportunities for Arizona's Alan Risher, who has thrown a league-leading 11 touchdown passes, including a 98-yarder to Jackie Flowers that gave the Wranglers a 22-21 victory over Washington last week. The Wranglers are 3-3 — tied with the other three teams in the USFL's most even division, the West.

Boston's offense is led by quarterback Johnnie Walton, who has completed 105 of 207 attempts for 1,190 yards.

Pam Pack Rips Tigers By 14-4

WASHINGTON — The Washington Pam Pack rallied for five runs in the fifth inning and seven more in the sixth to defeat the Williamston Tigers 14-4 in Friday Northeastern 3-A Conference baseball action.

Seth Edwards rapped a three-run double in the sixth for Washington, but nine of the Pam Pack's runs came on seven Williamston errors. Edwards and Joey Ange each posted two hits in four trips to the plate, while winning pitcher John Modlin had three hits in five at-bats.

Williamston had taken a 4-1 lead after two innings, but couldn't hold on. James Ward singled to open the first for the Tigers, and Greg Thomas followed with a base-on-balls. An error on Keith Perry's grounder allowed Ward to score, and Thomas crossed the plate on a single by Glenn Hardison.

In the second, Tommy Wynne reached first on an error, Ward walked and both scored on a single by Thomas.

Williamston, now 4-2 in the conference and 5-4 overall, hosts Edenton Tuesday.

Free Agents Are Ignored

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers and wide receivers John Stallworth of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Harold Carmichael of the Philadelphia Eagles were three of the 209 free agents who failed to receive a bid from any National Football League team.

"In effect, it's a conspiracy of silence," Dick Berthelsen, legal counsel for the NFL Players Association, said of the inactivity of the teams. "They don't bid. They want to leave well enough alone."

None of the players who became free agents after last season and were still available received an offer sheet to sign with anew team as the deadline passed Friday.

Originally, 252 players became free agents following the strike-shortened 1982 season. Since then, 23 have been signed by their old teams and 13 signed with the United States Football League.

Under the new contract, a player going into his 14th season, for example, could receive an offer from another team of $189,999.

Seattle Owner Convinced That His Mariners Can Be A Winner

SEATTLE (AP) — The owner of the Seattle Mariners talks a lot about motivation and attitude, and how they can change also-rans into champions.

"I believe strongly in both of them," George Argyros says, with a twinkle in his eye.

Through that belief, the 45-year-old southern California real estate tycoon places a good deal of pressure on Manager Rene Lachemann to win without the superstars and high-priced free agents who populate other major league rosters. The Mariners won 76 games last year, a club record but only good enough for fourth place in the American League West.

"Yeah, I think we'll be a contender this year," said Argyros, who has avoided the free-agent market while preaching the policy of fiscal restraint to fellow owners. "But it all depends on Lach and how he motivates this ball team, and whether he can make some of these fellas live up to their potential.

"In fact, Lach needs a few of these fellas to exceed their potential and that's (why) one who is successful is an overachiever. So it takes some overachievers on a club to make it."

But can a pitcher with a 7.00-plus earned run average, such as 44-year-old Gaylord Perry, strike out a batter with attitude and motivation?

Can a .220 batter, such as Pat Putnam, hit a curve ball with attitude and motivation?

Can a player with limited defensive skills do a major league job in the outfield or infield with attitude and motivation?

Can attitude and motivation beat raw talent?

Lachemann says he will take talent every time.

"If you have a bunch of Triple A players and you say you're going to go ahead and try to motivate them to win a championship, I think you're just fooling yourself," he said, "It can't be done, you can't win championships with people that don't have talent.

"There's no replacement for talent. You don't see any club that's going to win a championship in a 162-game season that does not have talent. After you have that talent, there's certain things added to that talent. That's when motivation enters into it."

That's not to say the Mariners are fielding a Triple A team. But Seattle's roster is loaded with players who couldn't do it elsewhere or haven't had the chance. Pat Putnam and Steve Henderson came in offseason trades that cost the Mariners only a pair of minor league relievers. Putnam came to Seattle from Texas and Henderson from the Chicago Cubs. And six members of the 25-man roster are rookies, tying the Houston Astros for the highest percentage in the majors this year.

A major league baseball season with the coast-to-coast travel is an endurance contest. The wear and tear on a player's mind can be devastating.

"It's tough to get the players up day in and day out," Lachemann said. "You can't give them Knute Rockne speeches, the team meeting-type of things you do for football games and basketball games. It just doesn't work that way in baseball.

"The players just aren't going to be yelled and screamed every single day for 162 games. I do most of my talking to the players on an individual basis. But in a 162-game season, you're going to get some guys who are just mentally drained.

"To me, I don't think a baseball player is ever physically tired other than possibly a pitcher who goes 250 and 260 innings. But I don't think the other guys get physically tired from playing the game. What happens is that they get mentally tired and tell themselves that they're physically tired."

Argyros is in his third season as the Mariners' owner. He bought the team in January 1981, from the club's original owners, which included entertainer Danny Kaye.

Argyros fired Maury Wills as the Mariners' manager in May 1981, and gave the job to Lachemann, then the skipper of the Mariners' Triple A farm club in Spokane of the Pacific Coast League.

Lachemann, the major leagues' youngest manager at 37, merely shrugs when the subject of his own future comes up. If he's going to get fired by Argyros, Lachemann says, he's going to get fired.

Again, the word "motivation" comes up.

"A manager's job is to get the players to do the best to their abilities," the manager said. "That's what motivation is to me at the big league level."

Fourth Annual East Coast King Mackerel Tournament — Tournament fishermen are reminded to make a note of the following King mackerel tournament. The Kure Beach and Carolina Beach Fire Departments will offer a $25,000 purse to king mackerel anglers, May 11-14 in what will be a fine tournament with plenty of whopper-size kings available.

The Fourth Annual East Coast Open offers more and better cash prizes and an increasingly wider number of participants each year.

Grand prizes for the largest king will be $10,000. In addition, there will be cash prizes ranging from $1,250-3,500.

Daily cash prizes will run from $200-1,000, and there will be both a $1,000 cash drawing plus $1,100 for the largest king caught by a lady angler.

Entry fee per boat is $115 before May 1 with an additional $25 fee for late entry.

The official weigh station will be at the Carolina Beach Yacht Basin. An organizational meeting will be held at 8 p.m. May 11. Fishing hours are from sunrise to 7 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 4 p.m. Saturday. For further information write to East Coast Open, P.O. Box 300, Kure Beach, N.C. 28449.

Stocking Canada Geese — Reports are circulating that the N.C. Wildlife Resource Commission will be stocking a resident population of Canada geese soon. Plans call for stocking 1,600 geese in selected areas in the an effort to establish a resident flock. These geese would remain in N.C. throughout the year and would not migrate to other areas.

Efforts like this in other areas of the country have been successful. It will be interesting to see if the project is successful here.

Wildlife Commission Public Elections — Elections will be held Tuesday April 19 at Lenoir Community College in Kinston. Woodrow Price of Glouster who has been this area's representative on the commission for the last six years is seeking a second term. Price was outdoor editor for The News and Observer in Raleigh for 28 years prior to his retirement.

His knowledge of this area's wildlife and its problems is extensive.

Interested outdoorsmen should drive over to Kinston Tuesday night and cast their vote.

Turkey Season Opens — The 1983 spring turkey season opened this past weekend. Reports from the field show that the favorable weather and high water conditions combined to give hunters a good chance at bagging a gobbler.

Several Bethel residents bagged turkeys along the Roanoke River and number of gobblers were taken in Onslow County near Jacksonville.

The season is open until May 7 and the season limit is two birds per hunter (gobblers only).

Fishing Report — The wet spring weather to date has all but washed out the annual spring shad season around Grifton. The fish have been there but due to high water they have been spread out and difficult to catch.

The Tar River has been a hot spot for herring and shad net fishermen. Catches of 50-75 herring per boat have been reported. These are good numbers for the Tar, which is on a rebound of sorts. In recent years the Tar River has seen a reduction in migrating fish (herring, shad, striped bass) that are making their annual spring spawning runs.

Bass fishing has been up and down due to the constant weather changes. Reports from Lake Mattamuskeet show bass have started hitting top water bugs. Plastic worms have also been popular over the last several weeks on the lake.

Out on the coast the bluefish are hitting well near the lighthouse at Hatteras. Running in the 10-12 pound class, the blues are biting just about anything you throw.

High water conditions at Kerr Reservoir has made fishing difficult at best on this body of water.

Pack To Speak To President

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The NCAA champion North Carolina State basketball team will be able to talk to President Reagan through a satellite television hookup Monday after the NCAA rejected attempts to send the team to Washington.

Officials at WRAL-TV in Raleigh announced Friday that the conference between their studios and the White House was set for 3 p.m. Capitol Broadcasting Inc., WRAL's parent company, last week offered to fly the team to Washington, but NCAA rules prohibited such an arrangement.

"We couldn't bring the mountain to Mohammed, so we settled on the next best thing," said John Greene, senior vice president and general manager of WRAL-TV.

White House officials say it will be the first time they have been involved in a simultaneous two-way television hookup.

At 7 p.m. Monday, the Wolfpack and North Carolina's 1982 NCAA basketball champions will be the guests of honor at a joint meeting of the General Assembly. Afterwards both teams will be guests at the Governor's Mansion.

WHY N.L. DOMINATES

NEW YORK (AP) — Would you like still another theory on why the National League dominates baseball's All-Star game?

Tommy Davis, a former National League batting champion and now in the air-cargo business, believes it's because the National League is a fast-ball league and the American League has a lot of pitchers who throw "junk."

He transferred to the retail banking department in 1982 and remained there until he assumed the Robersonville position.

Shipyards See Sharp Increase In Job Layoffs

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — An international oil surplus and a recession that was slow to hit the marine industry have forced thousands of layoffs at the nation's shipyards in recent months.

One industry executive said it's the gravest since World War II, and workers who have plied their rugged trade on the America's docks for years are increasingly alarmed.

"I'm scared," said William Conklin, a shipfitter for most of his adult life, as he picked up his final paycheck recently at Jacksonville Shipyards Inc.

"If it goes on like this much longer, none of these shipyards can stay in business very long," said Conklin, 38, who supports three children. "I've been laid off before. And that's been happening more in the past several months than in the 11 years I've worked here."

In Jacksonville, an estimated half of 4,000 shipyard workers are unemployed.

"Right now, we have about 1,200 laid off from a normal workforce of 2,200," said Larry Brown, vice president of operations at Jacksonville Shipyards, the largest company of its kind here.

Brown said several hundred workers had been given pink slips within the past two weeks as the oil glut, recession and high interest rates continued to slow ship repairs.

"The marine industry was probably the last to be hit by the recession, so it will probably be the last to reap benefits from economic recovery," said Brown, adding the slump began last summer.

"When the oil is not flowing the ships are not moving. When the ships are not moving, they're not getting fixed," said Chuck Applebach, a spokesman for Norfolk Shipbuilding & Drydock Corp.

Compared to Jacksonville, the Virginia company is fortunate, Applebach said. Employment there is down 1,000 from a high of 4,500 since the summer of 1982, he said.

The ship repair trade has always been one of peaks and valleys, executives said. But Brown said the current slump is "without a doubt, the worst that I've seen it in 10 to 12 years."

Ed Motter, general manager of Marine Maintenance in Houston, went even further: "It's by far the worst since World War II."

Motter's company is luckier than most; it expanded to 350 laborers compared to 50 two years ago.

"But only because we're bidding very cheaply," he said.

"It's not just a Houston problem, or a New Orleans problem or Jacksonville problem or a national problem. It's a worldwide problem," Motter said.

"The thing that's hurt Houston the most is that the trade with Mexico has fallen off," he said.

Motter said "a lot more traffic in oil and petrochemicals" would turn business around.

"We've got a lot of oil and gas over here. And right now, things are slow in oil and gas," said John Lim, general manager of Port Houston Marine.

Lester Martin, general manager of Todd Shipyard Corporation's Galveston division, said normal employment is 700 or 800. Since layoffs at the end of 1982, he said, he works anywhere from 300 to 400.

"You could get a job next week and rehire them. But you don't get those jobs like you used to," Martin said.

Motter and Brown said a few yards with shipbuilding contracts from the Navy enjoy brisk business; Motter said "maybe six or seven companies" out of 30 nationwide.

In the private sector, shipbuilders tell a different story.

"There just isn't any new construction these days," said Chuck Musante, assistant personnel director for Atlantic Marine Shipyards in Jacksonville. "People just don't want to borrow money on current interest rates to build ships."

Leroy Yeomans, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Shipbuilders, called the slump "the worst in years" but said he hopes for a change in coming weeks.

"It's that kind of boom-or-bust business," Yeomans said. "Most of the men working in the yards have been there for a lifetime and they are used to it."

But Ronald Matthews, a first-class rigger for six years, felt differently. Matthews, sitting on a concrete bench outside Jacksonville Shipyards, waved the pink slip he received last week with disgust.

Futures Prices Lower

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Grain and soybean futures prices were lower Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Most of the pressure was technical in nature, based on factors such as trends on price charts, said Walter Spilka, a grain analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

"I don't see anything new fundamentally," Spilka said, and he noted that prices started in a downward trend earlier in the week and continued falling Friday with a major portion of the selling coming from commission houses, which handle accounts for investors. He said they were opening new short positions in anticipation of lower prices as well as liquidating long positions, which are agreements to take delivery of the product.

Underlying support from farmers' continued reluctance to sell the grain they have and from freezing temperatures threatening the winter wheat crop in western Kansas prevented a steeper decline, Spilka said.

In addition, he noted, export business has been active with Mexico buying wheat and South Korea buying corn.

Wheat settled 1¼ cents to 3¼ cents lower with May at $3.49 a bushel; corn was 1½ cents to 4½ cents lower with May at $3.10¾ a bushel; oats were 2¼ cents to 2¾ cents lower with May at $1.63 a bushel; and soybeans were 5½ cents to 8½ cents lower with May at $6.23¼ a bushel.

Silver futures prices continued climbing Friday on the Commodity Exchange in New York while gold advanced slightly.

"We've had a good rally the last couple days in the metals tied to the economy: silver, platinum, palladium and copper," said Marty McNeill, a metals analyst in New York with James Sinclair & Co.

McNeill said analysts believe that producers are beginning to build their inventories in anticipation of strong demand as the economy recovers because supplies "are pretty thin right now because our system is wrung so dry."

Factors that indicate more industrial use include increased housing and auto production and the rally in stock prices, McNeill said.

Gold settled 80 cents lower in all delivery months with the contract for delivery in April at $437.40 a troy ounce; silver settled 31 cents to 32 cents higher with April at $12.18 a troy ounce; copper settled .50 cent to .70 cent higher with April at 74.30 cents a pound.

Live cattle prices continued under pressure on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange with anticipation of a major report on cattle inventories dominating the trade.

Many analysts expect the report, to be released after trading Monday by the Agriculture Department, will show a substantial reduction in the amount of cattle placed in feed lots during the first quarter of the year in the 13 major beef producing states, said Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson American Express.

As a result, Levitt said, many traders are buying the contracts for delivery next fall and simultaneously selling the contracts for delivery in June and August, a technique known as spreading in which the strategy is to take advantage of the changing relationships between the contracts.

Levitt noted that farmers have opted to put their cattle in wheat fields instead of feed lots because the lots are in extremely muddy condition, which prevents normal weight gains, and the USDA has permitted farmers to feed their cattle in wheat fields instead of harvesting the crop in land enrolled in the grain reduction program.

Hogs and pork bellies continued to fall as well, with pressure from increased slaughter, Levitt said. He noted that the slaugher this week reached 1.7 million, the highest of the year.

Cash prices for hogs were lower in western markets, Levitt said, because a storm there had prevented marketing earlier in the week.

Steel Deal Upsets U.S. Locals

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

HOMESTEAD, Pa. (AP) — Upset by U.S. Steel Corp.'s proposal to buy British steel, about 100 United Steelworkers union officials from mills around the country met to pledge support for workers at the company's Fairless Works plant.

"We've got to stop British steel from coming into this country. And we've got to stick together," said USW Local 1397 President Ron Weisen, a union dissident who conducted the Friday meeting at the union hall in Homestead, just south of Pittsburgh.

"If they get Fairless, they're going to get us. They're going to get everybody," said Local 2227 President Mike Bonn of nearby West Mifflin.

The USW local presidents vowed to try to reopen their latest contract agreement and strike if any foreign steel is delivered to the plant near Philadelphia.

They also agreed to draft a letter to USW President Lloyd McBride, asking that part of the union's strike fund be used to send members to Philadelphia to rally in protest of U.S. Steel's proposal. A date for the rally has not been set.

Weisen said he invited McBride to Friday's meeting, but received no reply. The day-long session was not sanctioned by the international union, so the local presidents could not take formal action.

U.S. Steel tentatively plans to sell a $150 million interest in the Fairless Works to Great Britain's state-owned steel company in return for large shipments of semi-finished steel slabs from British Steel's plant in Ravenscraig, Scotland.

The plan would result in about 3,000 layoffs at Fairless.

The slabs would be finished at Fairless, where 3,000 layoffs would result, and sold in the United States.

The Scottish plant employs about 4,000 workers.

"I guess if they took a knife and stuck it in my back, it couldn't have been any worse. The ink on the contract wasn't even dry before they were negotiating for British steel," said Al Lupini, president of USW Local 4889 at Fairless.

About 1,400 of 8,000 workers are laid off at the 32-year-old Fairless Works, located along the Delaware River between Philadephia and Trenton, N.J.

A spokesman for U.S. Steel, which declined to comment on the meeting, said Friday that the company has been contacted by several foreign firms interested in selling unfinished steel to U.S. Steel for processing in the United States. But he said U.S. Steel is conducting "active" discussions only with British Steel.

Lupini said he plans to meet with attorneys next week to prepare a lawsuit against U.S. Steel, the nation's largest steelmaker.

Lupini claims U.S. Steel breached its contract, approved two months ago, by failing to channel its savings into modernizing American plants. In addition, the steelmaker "bargained in bad faith" by negotiating with British Steel during contract talks, he said.

If legal steps fail, Lupini has vowed to call a strike.

"If they can break the law, we can break the contract. We can pull out of every U.S. Steel plant in the company," Lupini said amid claps and cheers.

Last month, James McGeehan, chief of the union committee that negotiates with U.S. Steel, said the international union would "explore every avenue" to prevent the steelmaker from importing any slabs.

U.S. Steel Mills Continue To Show Grim Statistics

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard P. Simmons, chairman of Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., contributed $500 to Ronald Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign and drummed up considerable financial support from others.

Two years later, three requests for a White House meeting rebuffed or ignored, Simmons was leading a pack of executives and union leaders down Pennsylvania Avenue in a bitter protest march.

"We are being destroyed," Simmons angrily told the press at a pre-march luncheon last October. "This administration has done nothing meaningful to effectively deal with a massive trade problem."

The march was an SOS from a small, desperate sector of a troubled industry; a smokestack behemoth hit hard by recession and foreign competition.

As communities buckle under mill closings and layoffs, steel companies have turned with mounting urgency and mixed results to Washington.

Neither Congress, the administration nor the press has been spared a litany of statistics that remain grim despite slight upturns this year.

Steelworker unemployment hovers at 136,000, mills are operating at 50 percent capacity, 200 facilities have closed permanently since 1974, imports rose to a record 22 percent domestic market share last year.

The steel industry — like the farmers, automakers and bankers — is waging an intensive campaign for trade protection, subsidies and other government relief.

And, like the automobile industry, steel producers are fighting a perception that they created their own dilemma through exorbitant labor contracts and high-level mismanagement.

That perception has been strengthened by recent announcements that domestic producers are buying huge amounts of foreign steel even as they press for trade relief.

But Robert Peabody, president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, blames the criticism on the industry's "lousy job of communicating" its dilemma.

"We are accused of being paranoid. We are accused of being protectionist. But we are like Sir Lancelot. Our hearts really are pure," he recently told reporters.

Peabody says that the industry has made "astonishing" internal progress and any further recovery rests on changes in government policies.

To that end, Washington has withstood a barrage of impassioned demands for import quotas, surcharges, yen revaluing, tax breaks, eased environmental standards and exemption from antitrust laws.

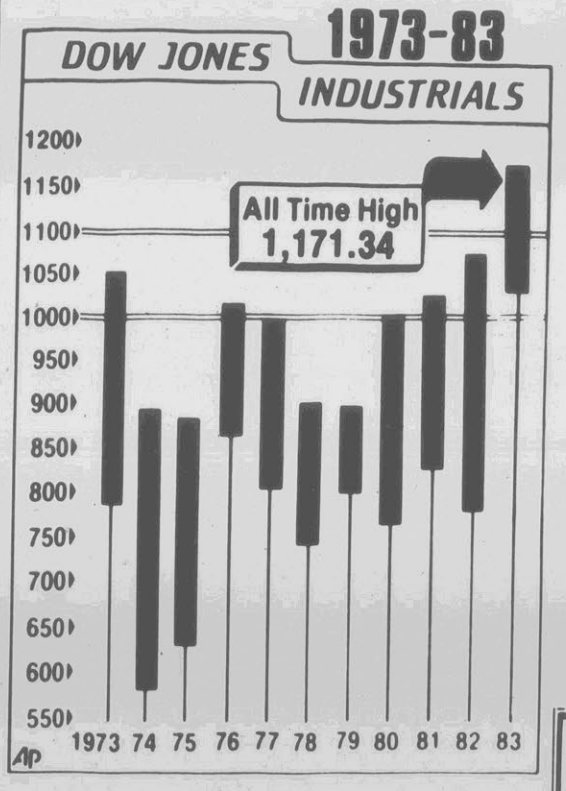

The industry's equally diverse tactics range from attention-grabbing media events to the sophisticated use of new bureaucratic and political tools.

A month after the specialty steel march, President Reagan directed U.S. Trade Representative William Brock to monitor imports and asked the International Trade Commission to investigate import-related damages to the domestic industry.

"He obviously did get the message that we were out there," says one consultant who asked not to be identified. "For an industry as relatively small as specialty steel, we have been able to persuade the administration to take a unique action."

Charles Blum, acting deputy assistant U.S trade representative for industrial trade policy, says Reagan does not believe government should intervene in industrial policy. But he says that doesn't mean the administration is not concerned about steel problems.

"We work more closely with the steel industry than most. They have a great deal of high-level access in this administration," he says.

Wall Street Awaits Hint Of Volcker's Future

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the hottest questions on the minds of Wall Streeters right now is the political future of Paul Volcker, the chairman of the Federal Reserve.

The four-year term to which then-President Carter appointed Volcker in 1979 runs out Aug. 6. President Reagan can reappoint him or choose someone else, subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Volcker isn't saying whether he expects to be kept on, or even whether he wants to be. It's generally believed that the President hasn't yet reached any conclusions on the subject either.

But almost everyone else in Washington or Wall Street seems to have a strong opinion about whether Volcker should remain at the helm of the agency that acts as the nation's money manager.

Volcker's tenure to date has been a stormy one. In the view of many observers in the financial community who regard him as an authentic hero, Volcker has been the commanding general in an important, perhaps decisive, victory in the battle against inflation.

To his critics, the Fed's policies under Volcker have helped cause a long, severe recession that only now seems to be easing, with the unemployment rate still above 10 percent.

One school of thought holds that because Volcker is so closely linked in the public's eyes with the nation's recent bout of high interest rates and slumping economic activity, Reagan might be inclined to replace him. As Jeffrey Applegate, political economist at the brokerage firm of E.F. Hutton, summarized this view recently: "He is identified as the high priest of high interest rates, so his departure would sever White House association with those troublesome rates."

Then, too, there is the undisputed assumption that Volcker would be a prized candidate for any number of jobs in the private sector paying several times what he earns at the Fed.

Yet lately, speculation has swung toward the view that Volcker will be reappointed after all. The economy is beginning to improve by almost all measures, and inflation has yet to revive. On Friday, the government reported that wholesale prices of finished goods declined 0.1 percent in March.

At the same time, the stock market's boom continues unabated. In the past week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials soared 46.63 points to a record high of 1,171.34.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index climbed 3.31 to 91.18, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 7.98 at 407.12.

The strong feelings about Volcker are likely to manifest themselves in the bond, stock and currency markets when a decision is announced. There has been conjecture — perhaps exaggerated, perhaps not — that any move to replace him could cause a tumultuous drop in security prices and the dollar.

But Applegate, for one, says, "it is our guess, and ought to be treated as such, that he will be asked to remain, and will.

"In many respects we think the people at the White House need Volcker more than he needs them. Since October 1979, he has established enormous credibility, both here and abroad. No one, no matter how good, can bring as much stature immediately to the job as Volcker currently maintains.

"It may turn out that market reactions to a new Fed chairman, and the development of credibility, could be a problem that the administration would prefer to avoid."

Whichever way the choice goes, Applegate maintained, government economic and monetary policy is unlikely to shift away from its stand against inflation. "While any successor would be subject to an adjustment period," he said, "the administration's disinflationary drumbeat would continue."

Money Funds' Assets Show Losing Trend

By JAMES PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What a difference four months can make, at least in the business of saving.

Last fall savers were pouring cash into money-market mutual funds. They were attracted by the funds' yields and were wary of an uncertain stock market and bank savings accounts that carried interest-rate ceilings.

Since then, however, savers have steadily siphoned cash out of the funds. And credit for the withdrawals goes in large part to guess who: banks and the stock market.

Money market funds pool investors' money to buy large bank certificates of deposit, Treasury bills and other securities with large denominations that most people could not afford individually.

Until last December, the funds provided many people with the only way to tap money market interest rates. The funds generally required a minimum deposit of only $1,000 or $2,500, and did not require a fee every time you added or withdrew money — a move that required only a telephone call.

The funds' assets kept climbing until the week ended last Dec. 1, when they hit a record $232.6 billion.

Since then the assets have fallen for 19 consecutive weeks, dropping $1.7 billion this past week to $178.3 billion, according to the Investment Company Institute, a mutual fund trade group. That is a 23.3 percent drop since Dec. 1.

Money fund observers are reluctant to predict when the decline will end. "There's really no way to tell," says Jeffrey Seglin, senior editor of Donoghue's Money Fund Report, a newsletter based in Holliston, Mass.

The big blow to the funds came last Dec. 14, when banks, savings and loan associations and other financial institutions were allowed to start offering their own versions of the funds.

As a kicker to win new customers, many of the banks offered temporary interest-rate premiums. Observers agree that some savers who were in money market funds took their savings to their bank — especially since they temporarily could get a higher return.

At the same time, the stock market was well into its record-breaking rally. Not only were people pumping cash into individual issues, they also were investing heavily in stock mutual funds. Those funds operate on the same principle as the money funds by pooling savers' money to invest in a portfolio of different stocks.

Finally, interest rates have fallen since December, dampening what was one of the funds' main attractions in 1981-82.

The 30-day average yield on the funds in the week ended Oct. 13, 1982, was 9.53 percent, according to Donoghue's, but this past week the yield was 7.89 percent.

Yet while the funds' assets keep falling, the number of funds keeps rising. In the week ended Oct. 13, 1982, there were 256 funds. This past week there were 307, according to the Investment Company Institute.

Reg Green, an institute vice president, says new funds keep cropping up because "people realize that money market funds are going to continue being an ingredient of people's investments. In addition, we believe we're going to be fully competitive (with the bank accounts)."

Seglin says money market funds also continue to provide a backup to a stock fund or other investments in the event money market rates climb above yields of those other investments.

"You can keep a look at the percentage return on money funds, and switch back and forth into stock funds, for example," he says.

Green says the declines in assets of money funds has steadied following the initial big withdrawals in late December and early January, which may indicate that savers are judging more closely the differences between the money market funds and the money market accounts offered by financial institutions.

But Green says he "won't predict" when the consecutive string of weekly declines in the funds' assets will end.

In other news this past week:

—Wholesale prices fell 0.1 percent in March and 4.1 percent, calculated annually, for the year's first three months. The March decline was led by a 3.2 percent drop in energy prices — its fourth straight. Not since 1976 have wholesale prices fallen for a full calendar quarter, the Labor Department said.

—U.S. industrial production rose 1.1 percent in March despite a decline in auto output. Auto assemblies fell to an annual rate of 5.8 million units from the 6.3 million rate of February. The overall increase followed gains of 0.2 percent in December, 1.5 percent in January and 0.3 percent in February.

—Consumer installment expanded an adjusted $1.74 billion in February after a $2.93 billion increase in January. It was the weakest gain since last October and indicated continued reluctance among consumers to increase spending to the point of acquiring additional debt.

—Retail sales rose 0.3 percent in March, the first increase since last November. But some economists said the rise, which followed a 1.2 percent drop in February, was too weak to give the economy a substantial boost.

—Business inventories rose 0.1 percent in February, following a revised 0.9 percent decrease in January. It was the first increase in stockpiles since September, but at least part of it was seen as involuntary as sales remained sluggish, and economists said companies probably will continue to build inventories slowly until sales pick up.

—Major U.S. oil companies announced scattered price increases to gasoline dealers and distributors ranging from a half cent to 4 cents a gallon. The increases followed a nickel-a-gallon rise in federal gasoline taxes that took effect April 1, and analysts said both increases would inevitably be passed along to motorists.

Carol's Miracle

The better part of every day is spent quietly standing in the corner of the paddock. Most foals take frequent naps or rest until they get stronger.

Mary sets the pace for romps in the pasture, while Carol contents herself with a slower, more watchful speed.

For several weeks, Mary would only allow little people to approach her. Here, she looks on with a skeptical eye as this tot, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel McLawhorn of Ayden, makes advances.

At 5 a.m. the alarm shrieked in my ear.

I looked balefully over at the offender and decided to sleep for 15 more minutes even though 5 a.m. was the prearranged hour to check on Carol. We had checked her at 3 a.m. and nothing was amiss, as nothing had been amiss for the past week and a half of sneaking and peeking and almost sleepless nights.

Deciding for once to heed our veterinarian's advice "Give Carol some privacy, she doesn't need you peeking in on her all the time," my husband, Scott, and I stayed in bed until 6.

Pulling my jeans over my pajamas, I headed out the door expecting nothing. There had been too many days and nights of hopeful wishing and too many disappointments.

It was a glorious morning. The sun was casting promising patterns of light across the horizon for the first time after days and nights of rain.

I parked beside the barn and walked over to Carol who was standing just outside her lean-to like stall. I leaned against the fence, and there on the ground, not visible from the truck, was Carol's first foal. An ugly little chestnut filly. But she was mine, ours, and she was beautiful.

For a minute I just stared, and then ran up to the stable owners' house, Donna and Ed Daughtry, and tried the back door, then tried the front door. Both were locked. Knowing that Donna and Ed would just "die" if they weren't awakened at 6 a.m., I ran around to their bed room window and banged on the glass. They and their daughter, Missy, were up in no time, and came out to see Carol's miracle.

We called Scott to let him know he was a "grandfather" and my parents in Chapel Hill to let them know the long-awaited birth had taken place. We then settled down to tell the story over and over again over coffee.

Mary has grown over six inches since she was born and her fawn-like figure has filled out until she is a beautiful little Arabian filly.

She and Carol spend most of their days running around in their pasture rearing, bucking and basically just looking pretty. We spend most of our free time just watching.

Del Mahrietta, or Mary as she is called at the barn, was born just as the sun peeked over the horizon at Hayfield Farm in Ayden March 15. She was HB Sweet Caroline's, Carol's, first foal, as well as the first foal born to the Hinson family of Ayden and the Fernald family of Chapel Hill who jointly own the purebred Arabians.

Text and Photos by Sue Hinson

MRS. ROY RAYMOND CAWLEY

Couple Marries Saturday

Edith Evelynne Weaver and Roy Raymond Cawley were married Saturday afternoon in an outdoor wedding at their home in Simpson. Dr. Dennis Chestnut officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Ms. Herta Lehmann Weaver of Oceanside, Calif. The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cawley of Virginia Beach, Va.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Renate Thompson, sister of the bride, and Terrie Long, both of Greenville, were the bridesmaids. Flower children, cousins of the bride, were Oedepa Rice of Washington, D.C. and Henry Carter of Greenville. Jody Thompson, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer.

The couple, signifying their unity, walked to the altar together. After the vows were spoken, Dr. Chestnut sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a handmade gown of antique ivory Indian gauze fitted at the waist and flowing floor length. The hemline was accented with stenciled morning glories interspersed with lavender wild flowers. The bodice, fastened at the back with frosted pearl buttons, had a sheer yoke with a high collar, laced with royal purple ribbon. The sheer bishops sleeves were stenciled with a scroll of the morning glory vine extending down the sleeve and the cuffs were fastened at the wrist with frosted pearl buttons. The gown was fashioned by the bride's cousin, Gloria Lundberg of Washington, D.C. The bride's hair was showered with lavender star flowers and she held a cascade of iris, carnations and wild star flowers with flowing ribbons in varying shades of lilac and lavender.

Each of the bridesmaids wore a long-sleeved ivory blouse with a high collar accented with lavender eyelet on the front and sleeves. The floor length skirts were in deep lavender with a floral design. The flower girl wore a lavender nosegay print dress with ribbons.

The bridal couple will be living in Simpson after a wedding trip to Europe where they will visit the bride's grandmother and family.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Connecticut College and is a carpenter. The bride is a graduate of Pitt Community College and works at the University Nursing Center.

Carbon Monoxide Build Up

Do you balk at opening a window and letting that cold air in when using a kerosene heater? There is a very sound reason for this practice, says Sandra Dellinger, extension housing specialist, North Carolina State University.

"Improper use of these appliances can cause carbon monoxide poinsoning. When a kerosene heater is operated in an unventilated aream dangerous levels of carbon monoxide can build up, so leave a window or door ajar at least an inche when the heater is burning," Mrs. Dellinger warns.

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless gas that builds up in the red blood cells, keeping them from carrying enough oxygen to the brain. Early symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning include dizziness, drowsiness, headache, nausea and vomiting.

It may take hours or only minutes for a dangerous level of carbon monoxide to build up in the blood stream, and it takes from 10 to 24 hours for the blood to rid itself of carbon monoxide. "So even though you may not experience any of the symptoms, the accumulation over a period of weeks of small doses of the gas can be dangerous, especially to pregnant women, infants and the elderly," says the extension specialist.

Carbon monoxide can be produced from any fire if there is not enough oxygen for complete combustion, says Dick Allison, extension forestry resource specialist at NCSU. Defective furnaces and woodburning stoves can also cause problems. "You want a free flow of air into the fire and out the chimney. Carbon monoxide may also be produced if the draft controls to an airtight wood stove are not opened enough," Allison said. Chimneys clogged with creosote or the nesting materials from birds also have a poor draft.

Dellinger recommends a yearly check of the combustion system of furnaces, along with a check to see that the vents and chimney are free from obstruction.

Dear Abby

Mother's Grief Not Eased

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old son was killed in a tragic accident seven months ago, and I am just now beginning to come out of my numbness and shock. Throughout the ordeal, friends, family and acquaintances tried to comfort me. Some succeeded, while others failed miserably.

The following comments are words that did not help at all. I realize that everyone was trying to be kind, but there are certain words bereaved parents do not want to hear:

1. "I know just how you feel. I lost my mother, father, husband, brother, sister, etc." These words are so hollow to a parent who has lost a child. Unless they have suffered the loss of a child, there is no way on earth they can know how you feel.

2. "It was God's will." I am no more (or less) religious than the average person, but if it was "God's will" to take my son at 14 and end his young life, then I want no part of a God who could be so cruel.

3. "God needed him more than you did." How inadequate that made me feel, as though something was lacking within myself. If I had needed him more, would he still be alive?

4. "These things happen for a reason." What reason? There is no reason good enough to explain why I had to suffer the loss of my child.

5. "You can have another child," or "At least you have your other children." This is really cold and cruel. Children are individuals and no child can replace the child who has died.

Now for some words that comforted me: a simple and heartfelt, "I'm so sorry." Many people hugged me, held my hand or cried with me. No words were spoken, but they were there for me when I needed them.

Miss Burnette, Mr. Carr Marry

Deborah Lou Burnette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daniel Burnette Jr. of Greenville, and Lee Carver Carr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winston Carr of Durham, were married Saturday in a high noon ceremony.

Performing the single ring ceremony in St. James United Methodist Church was the Rev. Dewey Tyson. A program of wedding music was presented by Frances Cain, organist, and Hardee Whitehurst, trumpeter.

Jean Ann Burnette of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Sallie Carr Tomlinson and Mary Eliza Smith of Richmond, Va., Mrs. Scott David Fullagar of Laurinburg, Deborah Carlyle Fox of Raleigh, Nancy Allison Potter of Beaufort, Mrs. Eugene Davis Day Jr. of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Robert Winston Carr Jr. of Raleigh, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

Elizabeth Louise Burnette of Raleigh was the flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man while groomsmen included Edgar Toms Carr of Durham and Robert Winston Carr Jr. of Raleigh, brothers of the bridegroom, William McClanahan White, Judson Blount Williams and John Frederick Nash of Raleigh, John Buchanan Coupland of Durham, Dr. Eugene Davis Day Jr. of Greenville and Kenneth Cole Wagner Jr. of Morehead City.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk chiffon beaded with re-embroidered alencon lace and pearl clusters with a Queen Anne neckline. Alencon lace covered the fitted bodice accented with motifs of netting and pearl clusters. The three-quarter length puff sleeves were accented with pearls and re-embroidered alencon lace. The skirt and watteau train were trimmed with alencon lace and the chapel train extended from a lace yoke in back. She wore a chapel length veil of illusion with a Juliet cap covered in matching alencon lace, pearls and sequins, which also edged the veil. The bride carried a Victorian bouquet of white and pink roses, stephanotis and greenery.

The attendants wore formal gowns designed by Phyllis for Bianchi with an open neckline, miniature rolled shoulder straps and fitted bodice of white linen. The waistline was encircled with cerise grosgrain ribbon from which fell the modifed A-line skirt in a contrasting shade of bluestone linen. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a short white eyelet jacket. They carried colonial bouquets in shades of pink and white spring flowers.

The flower girl wore a formal white gown with the bodice smocked in shades of pink and blue. The waistline was encircled with cerise grosgrain ribbon. She carried a fireside basket featuring pink and white daisies, freesia and alstromeria.

The mother of the bride wore a short aqua gown of sheer georgette and the mother of the bridegroom selected an ice blue suit of pure silk. Both had phalaenopsis orchids pinned on their handbags. Grandmothers of the bride were given white cymbidium orchids.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. E.T. Vinson.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the Greenville Country Club given by the bride's parents.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip to the Cloisters, Sea Island, Ga.

The bride graduated from St. Mary's College, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the National Center for Paralegal Training. The bridegroom graduated from Virginia Episcopal School and UNC-CH. He is assistant vice president of State Bank of Raleigh. She was formerly employed by the law firm of Parker, Pollard and Brown, P.C. in Richmond, Va.

An after-rehearsal cocktail party was given Friday evening at the Ramada Inn by relatives of the bridegroom. An after-rehearsal dinner was given at the Ramada Inn by the bridegroom's parents and was followed by a dance at the Brook Valley Country Club given by friends of the couple's parents. A bridesmaids luncheon was given Friday by Mrs. Roger Mann and Mrs. William Queen.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If the millinery industry is really serious about bringing back hats, they should keep Queen Elizabeth out of them.

With all due respect, that woman has done for hats what a shark attack does for tourism.

Every time I think maybe I'll add a hat to my wardrobe, I see another picture of the royal family and think, "Maybe next year when I see someone else wearing one."

Like most women of my generation, I've been a "Queen Watcher" for years and I've never known her to appear without a hat. She has a hat for reviewing the troops, one for receptions, a hat for polo matches, a hat for balcony waving, a hat for weddings, one for funerals, a hat for Scotland, a hat for Africa and a hat for ships returning from the Falklands.

It's the same hat.

I used to think it was just a matter of personal preference. Her Majesty liked to play dress-up with long white gloves, a big handbag and a country of her own just like the Queen Mother, but now I'm convinced it comes with the territory.

It's only theory, mind you, but remember when we first saw Princess Di? Her haircut swept this country like a designer label. All people talked about was Princess Di's hair. Next thing you know, we saw her going down the aisle in a headpiece attached to a train the size of our first apartment. We never saw her hair again.

I think when she promised to love and to cherish the future King of England and to serve the British commonwealth and all of its traditions, she became an obedient subject of the Royal Hatmaker. From that day forward, she would endure the hat drill that would prepare her for her place in English history. (You're shaking your head. So why don't Margaret and Anne wear hats? They're out of the line of succession and they know it!)

Bette Midler says the hatmaker lives in the basement of the castle and turns out hats all day long. I don't think so. I think he only makes two hats now — one for the Queen and one for Princess Di. Both of them hang on a hook by the front door, ready for service.

There is a moral to the story. All of you young girls out there who want to be storybook princesses, listen up. You know you have to kiss a load of toads before you marry a prince, but are you willing to wear that hat with everything before you wear a crown? Think about it.

She wore a halo of crushed chiffon accented with silk flowers and self-fabric bow centered in back with a double tiered illusion veil with pencil edging. The bride carried a cascade of ivory and sonya roses, gardenias, spring flowers and ivory ribbons.

Both of the attendants were dressed in cocktail length dresses in dusty rose with an overlay bodice in matching shimmer material with split sleeves, deep V-neck and back. The dress had a fitted waist, full skirt and self-tie belt. They each carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers with ivory ribbons.

The mother of the bride wore an orchid and green crepe street length dress and the mother of the bridegroom selected a lilac street length dress of polyester. Both wore corsages of ivory roses. The grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Harold Fyke of Old Hickory, Tenn. was given a white daisy corsage.

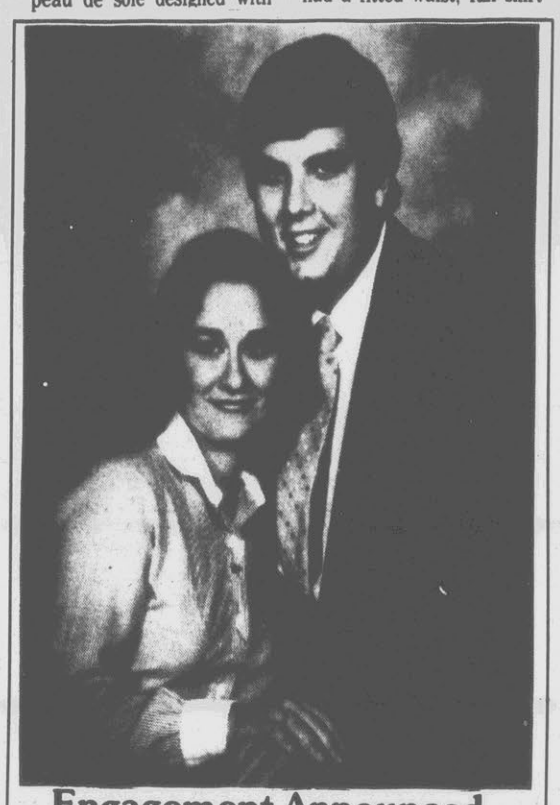

MRS. JERE MICHAEL FREY

A reception was held in the garden and a centerpiece of mixed spring flowers centered the refreshment table. Cake was served by Terry Frey, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and punch was poured by Ronda Kerr.

Cooking Is Fun

TORTA VERDE

Makes a satisfying main course.

4 ounces spinach egg noodles
¼ cup butter, soft
3 ounces cream cheese, soft
2 large eggs, separated
½ pint commercial sour cream, at room temperature
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

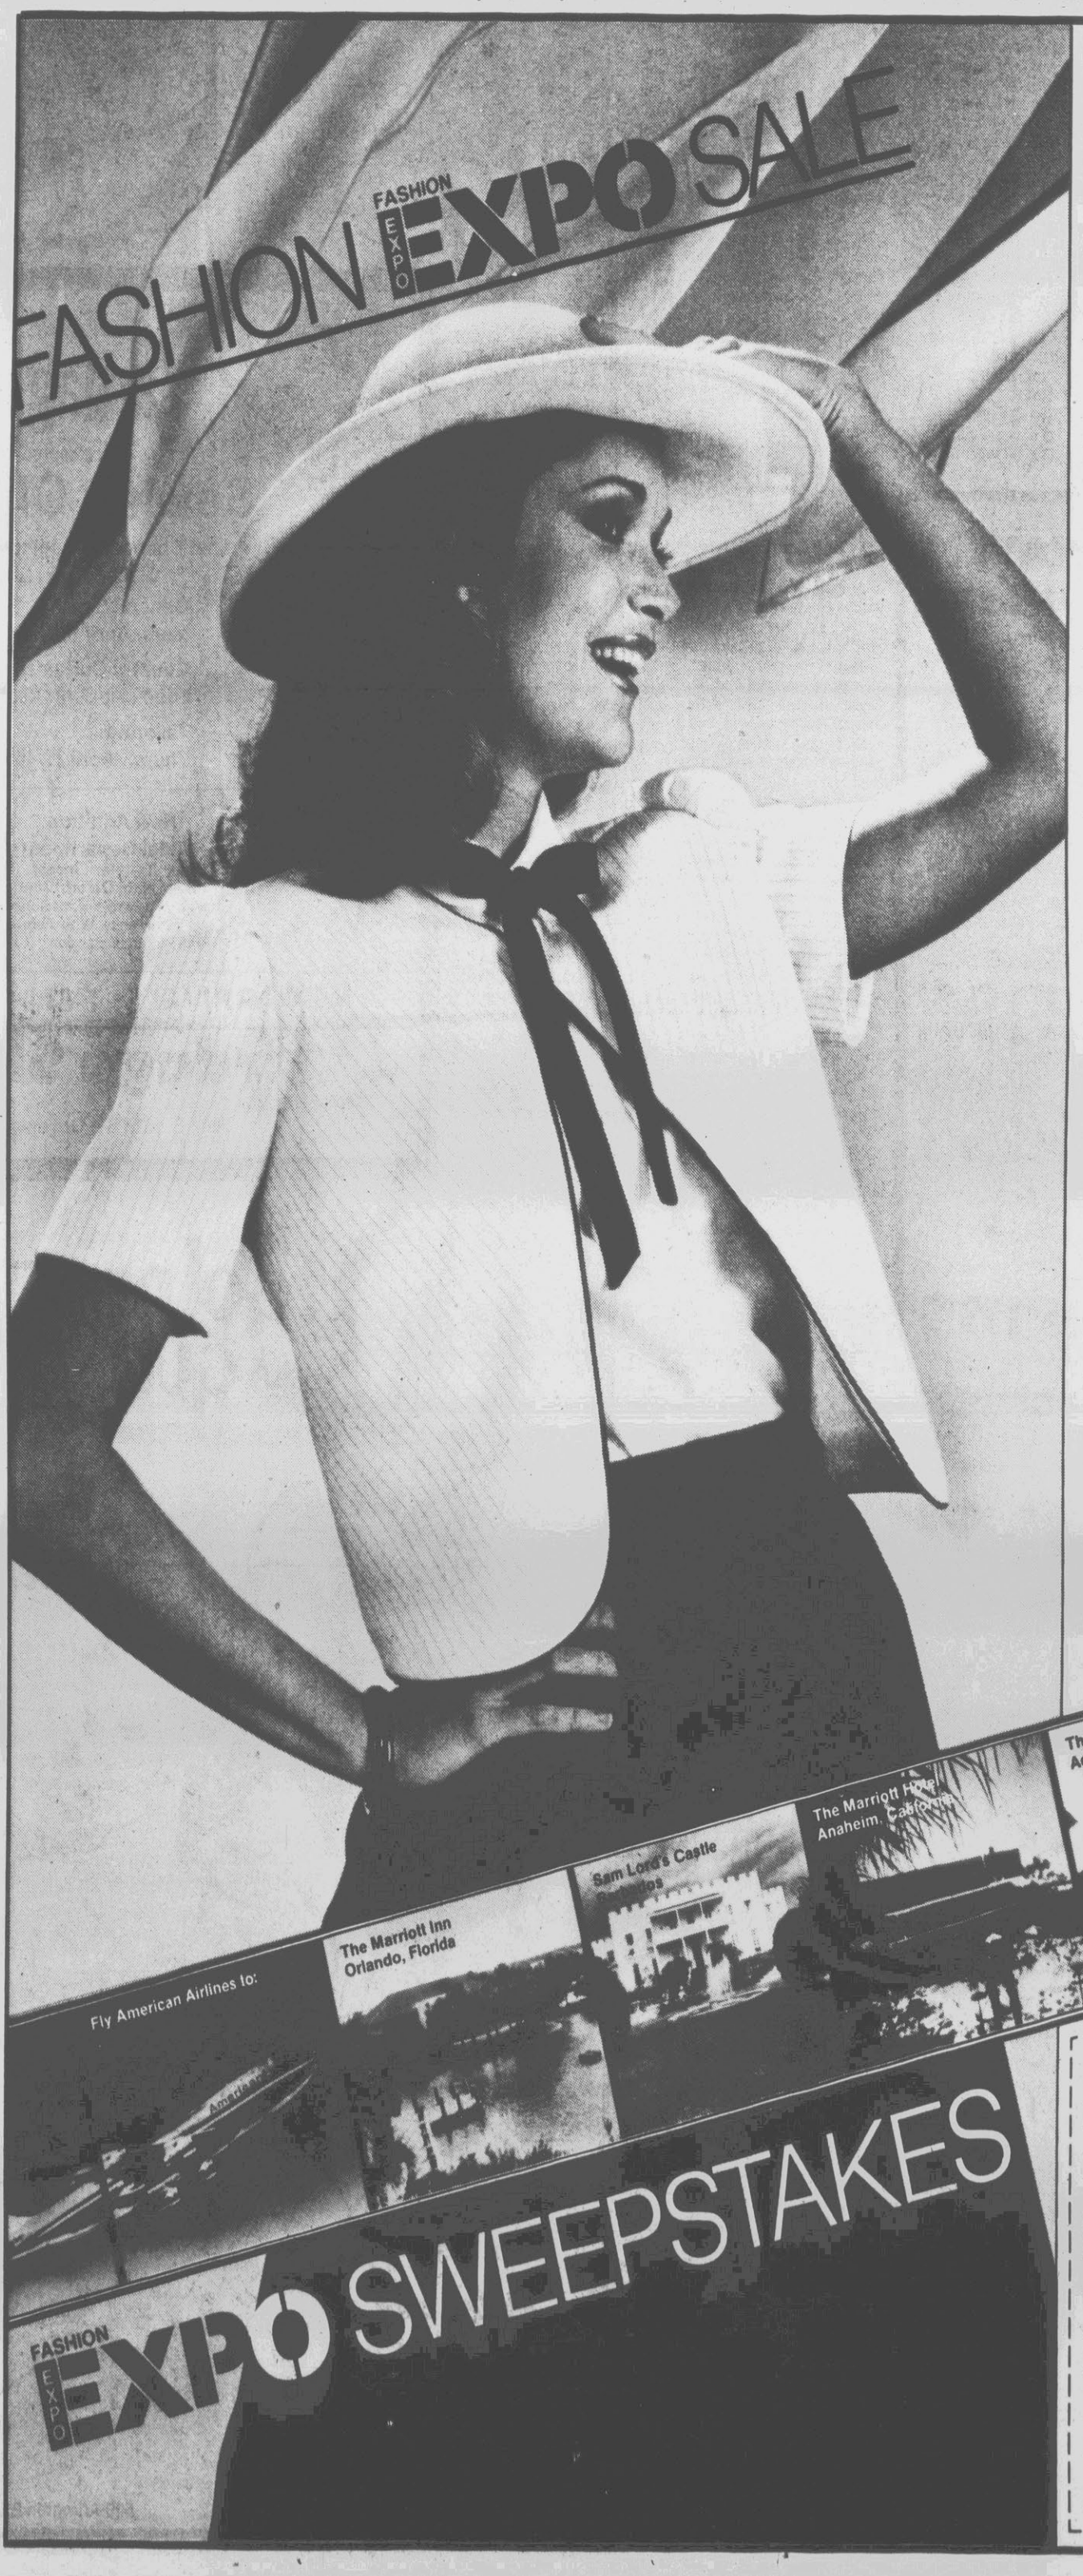

Cook noodles according to package directions and drain. Beat together butter and cheese until blended; add egg yolks and sour cream and beat until smooth. Fold in the noodles and ¼ cup of the Parmesan. Beat egg whites until stiff; fold in. Turn into a 10 by 6 by 1¾-inch baking dish. Sprinkle with remaining Parmesan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a knife inserted in center comes out clean — 20 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MIDNIGHT BARS

Dark and moist brownies.

¼ pound butter, at room temperature or cut in thin pats
1 cup sugar
½ cup Dutch-process cocoa
2 large eggs
½ cup all-purpose flour
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

With an electric beater cream butter, sugar and cocoa; at high speed, beat in eggs, one at a time, just until blended each time. Add flour mixture; beat gently to blend. Stir in walnuts. Turn into a buttered 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until sides shrink from pan — a cake tester inserted in center will not come out clean — 25 minutes. Cool on wire rack. Chill before cutting into bars and removing with a small metal spatula.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

FOUNTAIN — The Fountain Presbyterian Church here was the scene of the marriage ceremony Saturday at 3 p.m. of Cara Harden Burnette and Wayne Grier Winstead Jr. Conducting the double ring ceremony was the Rev. Ronnie Davis.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ricks Burnette of Fountain, the bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Dot Winstead of Farmville and Wayne Winstead of Roxboro.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and the maid of honor was Janet Meeks of Greenville.

Bridesmaids were Linda Peele of Greenville and Mrs. Tod Williams of Winterville. Honorary bridesmaids included Gayle Flanagan of Farmville, Karen Eidson of Greenville, Jackie Jones of Durham and Mrs. Rodney Buhrman of Fayetteville.

Mary Lane Brown of Fountain, niece of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was Brian Burnette of Fountain, nephew of the bride.

Tom Hawley presented a program of organ music and Wynette Winstead of Farmville, sister of the bridegroom, sang "For All We Know," "A Wedding" and "Wedding Prayer."

The bride wore the formal gown which was worn by her mother and sister, Mrs. John Shelton Brown. It was fashioned of ivory duchess satin with a fitted bodice of alencon lace over satin with a net yoke embroidered with seed pearls. The sheer fitted sleeves were styled in alencon lace with calla points at the wrists. The gown had a gathered skirt and attached cathedral train. Her cathedral length mantilla of sheer ivory imported English illusion was bordered with ivory re-embroidered alencon lace and draped madonna styled on a satin pillbox. Her only ornament was a string of pearls also worn by her mother. She carried a bouquet of white roses, pixie carnations and baby's breath.

The bridal attendants wore formal gowns of petal pink taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled with corded taffeta. The gowns were fashioned with short puffed raglan sleeves featuring a double row of ruffled taffeta. A sash of taffeta enhanced the modified natural waistline and gathered skirt. They each carried a bouquet of pink carnations, daisies and baby's breath with rainbow streamers. The flower girl wore a floor length dress of petal pink taffeta with short puffed sleeves and carried a white wicker basket filled with daisies and pixie carnations with rainbow ribbon. They each wore baby's breath in their hair.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the fellowship hall of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pierce, aunt and uncle of the bride, greeted guests.

Ethel Trevathan, Mrs. George Jefferson and Mrs. Shelton Brown served cake and punch assisted by Beverly Burnette, Ann Pierce and Kate Holland. Mrs. Anthony Holland presided at the guest register. Mr. and Mrs. George Burnette, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Peele and Jim Jefferson assisted in receiving and saying good-byes.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at the Colonial Inn in Farmville for a rehearsal dinner Friday.

After a wedding trip to the mountains, the couple will be living in Raleigh.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College and Atlantic Christian College. She is employed as a registered nurse at Wake County Medical Center. The bridegroom is a graduate of N.C. State University and is employed at Wickes Lumber Co. in Raleigh.

SURVEY SHOWS

NEW YORK (UPI) — A typical reader of romance fiction does not fit the stereotype of an uneducated, emotionally deprived housewife addicted to television soap operas, a new survey shows.

The study by a former University of Houston professor found typical readers instead "mirror the general population in age, education, an marital and socioeconomic status."

Carol Thurston's findings are reported in the April issue of Psychology Today. Now a marketing research consultant, Ms. Thurston questioned 600 mostly female romance readers in her study.

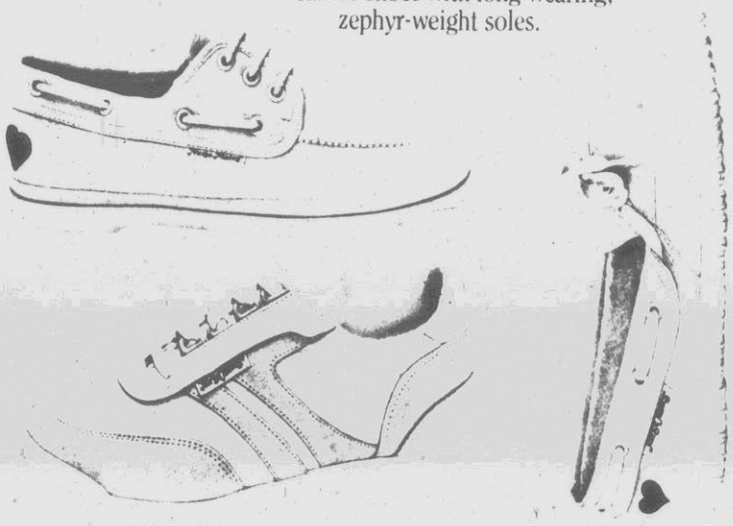

She found about 40 percent were working full-time and an equal number have family incomes in excess of $30,000 a year. Nearly half have at least some college education.

Most watch television, the study found, but much less than the national average, and they tend to prefer news and movies to soap opera.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Present-day American cooks who enjoy trying ethnic recipes have their predecessors. American cookbook writers of a century and more ago sometimes gave recipes for foreign dishes — but often misspelled their names. They were also known to misspell the names of American recipes. Here are some examples.

MISSPELLING: Chile Con-Cana. This spelling mistake was made in her comprehensive cookbook, by a 19th century lady who conducted one of the best known and most successful cooking schools in the United States. I'm glad she didn't brush up on her Spanish because the error is so amusing.

The correct spelling is, of course, chili con carne. There are as many versions of the dish as there are chili freaks. On my bookshelves right now are about half a dozen cookbooks giving hundreds of different recipes for chili. Nevertheless, according to Webster, chili con carne is "a highly spiced stew of chopped or ground beef and minced chilies or chili powder, usually served with beans."

MISSPELLING: Jambolaya. The same honorable lady who created Chili Con-Cana in her cookbook managed a double-whammy one page later. Not only is the name misspelled; the recipe for this pride of Louisiana cookery appears in a section of her book entitled "A Group of Spanish Recipes."

The correct spelling is Jambalaya. Only three ingredients — rice, liquid and chili peppers — appear in all recipes for it. Meat, sausage, poultry, game and shellfish as well as onions, celery, tomatoes and virtually the entire spice rack are other recorded additions to this adaptable dish. Jambalaya seems to be limited only by the state of your desires and bank account.

MISSPELLING: Sabyllon. This appeared in a recipe booklet published at the turn of the century by a New England apothecary company to tout its new patent medicine.

The correct spelling, in both English and French, is sabayon, which evolved from the Italian zabaione or zabaglione. Originally Italian, sabayon is a dessert sauce of egg yolks and sugar beaten together over hot water until very thick. It is flavored with a wine such as Marsala, or with orange or lemon. Warm, it may be a sauce for fresh fruit, especially strawberries; cold, with whipped cream folded in, it makes a heavenly foamy custard dessert.

MISSPELLING: Mint Julip — as the words appear in a charming small cookbook, "Suggestions for Charleston Tea," published in South Carolina at the turn of the century.

The correct spelling is Mint Julep. A mint julep is a "tall drink consisting of bourbon, sugar and mint served in a frosted tumbler filled with finely crushed ice." To my, and perhaps your, surprise the recipe in the oldtime South Carolina book calls for adding rye whiskey rather than bourbon to this drink.

MISSPELLING: Penotchie. Another of the famous 19th century cookbook authors is responsible for this boo-boo. And she made another: she allowed that the word could also be spelled "Penuchie." Too bad, because the word may be spelled seven ways — but none of them as above.

The correct seven spellings are: penuche; panocha; panoche; penuchi; pinoche; pinochi; or penoche. However it is spelled, penuche is a luscious fudge made usually of brown sugar, butter, cream or milk and nuts. Worth making and tasting.

Music And Dance Night

A "Music and Dance Night," sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, has been set for Tuesday at 6:30 p.m., at the Carolina Opry House. This is an annual event of the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival.

A variety of entertainment is planned for the entire family and doors open at 6 p.m. Chris Deane, percussionist and artist in residence at Pitt Community College, is the first artist scheduled to perform. He will play his traditional hammer dulcimer at 6:30 p.m. The next performance will be square dancing by the Tar River Twirlers and the Ayden Allemanders.

These acts will be followed by the Wallace Family, a Greenville father and daughters group, whose music has a flavor of Virginia bluegrass via Eastern North Carolina. They accompany themselves with four-stringed instruments.

Other events on the schedule include the singing of the "Sweet Adelines," and The Hometown Boys and the Green Grass Cloggers will alternate during a clogging contest. Soloists featured for the Hometown Boys are Lightning Wells on the guitar and mandolin and Lane Hollis on the banjo.

Jean Duff will chair this third annual "Music and Dance Night." For detailed information call 757-1785.

'Carnival' Opens Thursday At ATW

AYDEN — "Carnival" is coming to town in the Pitt County area of Ayden on Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, complete with belly-dancers, magicians, jugglers and snake-charmers who explode onstage in a blaze of color and vitality for the pleasure of music and circus-lovers of all ages.

The three performances by members of the Ayden Theater Workshop will be at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Saturday, and at 3 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is by season ticket or $2.50 at the door.

Doug Mitchell, Ayden-Grifton drama teacher who is directing the 50-member cast involved in the entertainment spectacle, says of "Carnival" that "It's got everything, it's happy and it's sad. I really love this show."

In "Carnival" spectators follow the story of a young, orphaned girl who joins the enchanting troupe seeking excitement and glamor but finds herself the center of the attentions of two circus performers, a magician and a puppeteer, who compete for her love.

Darrell Mitchell, who teaches chorus at Ayden-Grifton, is directing the chorus of this musical.

Many seasoned performers who have appeared in previous ATW productions comprise the chorus, with 10 newcomers to ATW cast in the chorus. The newcomers are Kathleen Jackson, Patsy West, Nancy Liles, Wanda Werdal, Letha Jones, Marty Warren, Bob Little, Garland Johnston, Ron Sealey and Roy Turnage.

"Old-timers" of past ATW shows appearing in "Carnival" are Kim Dale, Sarah Baldree, Barbara Plummer, Shirley Hickman, Page Adkins, Merrie Adkins, Cassandra Dosch, Adrien Willims, Reggie Barrow, Reginald Dixon, Colin Baldree and Ed West.

ATW CARNIVAL PERFORMERS ... Three of the members of the large cast of "Carnival," which opens Thursday at 8 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School, were photographed during rehearsal. The actors, left to right, are: Lauretta Riggs as Rosalie; Heidi Anderson Lane as Lili; and John Williams as Marco. Performances will also be given on Saturday evening and at 3 p.m. Sunday. Workshop Production Set For Bathanti's Play 'Afomo'

PLAYWRIGHT WINNER . . . Joseph Bathanti of Charlotte is winner of the Playwrights Fund, Inc. for his one-act play "Afomo." The play will have a workshop production at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Willis Building. The public is encouraged to attend and to offer critique following performance. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"I'm real excited and pleased that somebody is taking the time and effort to give unknown playwrights an opportunity to be heard," says Joseph Bathanti, novice playwright and a teacher at Central Piedmont Community College, Charlotte.

Bathandi's one-act play "Afomo" will be given its premiere workshop performance at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Willis Building.

"Afomo" is the prize-winning play of the 1982-83 Playwriting Contest sponsored jointly by the Greenville Museum of Art, the Playwright's Fund, Inc., the Pitt-Greenville and the North Carolina Arts Council.

Admission is free and the public is encouraged to attend and to remain to provide critique following the performance.

While on a recent visit to Greenville, Bathanti summed up "Afomo" as "the story of a fellow returning to his home town after being away some years. He has returned to attend the funeral of a friend, but runs into another friend and ends up playing basketball instead of going to the funeral."

Bathanti, whose published works have been primarily in the field of poetry and articles, explained that "the idea of attempting to write a play has intrigued me. So when I saw the notice in the Arts Journal about Greenville's play competition, I put my play together and submitted it. You can imagine my surprise and delight when I was notified that I was the winner and that it would be given a workshop production."

A visit to Greenville by Bathanti and his wife Joan for a couple of days in late March was to work with Christine Rusch and Sheila Turnage, two local playwrights who are coordinating the production of "Afomo."

"It's an excellent play," Ms. Turnage commented. "The dialogue, the symbolism works well all through the play. It's complete, and the only problems we had getting it ready for production were technical ones."

"We were pleasantly surprised to find the play so compact and ready to work into shape," Mrs. Rusch said. "I feel certain our local play audiences will enjoy 'Afomo'."

Bathanti said that for his part "I've learned from Sheila and Christine in a short time lot of things about the form and techniques needed for playwriting. It's not only been a pleasant experience, but a rewarding one for me."

A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., Bathanti is a graduate of Pittsburgh University where he majored in English. Two volumes of his poetry have been published by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

Bathandi first came to North Carolina as a Vista Volunteer in August of 1976 and was assigned to work in Huntersville Prison. "I taught there for four years," he commented. "At one point I toured Central Prison, which changed my way of looking at things, it was a horrifying experience." Bathanti taught at the Huntersville Prison for four years. "As a person without authority, the prisoners were nice to me, treated me like one of the guys."

Winner of the playwright competition follows Bathanti's first-place honors in two other North Carolina competitions — a statewide essay competition and a statewide poetry contest.

His work has appeared in Southern Exposure, Uwharrie Review, Davidson Miscellany, The Charlotte Observer, Phoenix, Blackjack, Milkweed Chronicle and many others publications, encompassing articles, poems, and book reviews.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By HANSY JONES

From among the multitude of children's books published each year in the United States, two are chosen annually as "best" in the field. "Dicey's Song" by Cynthia Voigt was awrded the 1983 Newbery Medal for the most distinguished contribution to children's literature, and "Shadows" by Marcia Brown received the Caldecott Medal for the most distinguished picture book for children published in 1982.

"Dicey's Song" is the story of four lonely, abandoned children who go to live with their grandmother in a small Chesapeake Bay town. Having been deserted by their mother, 13-year-old Dicey and her brothers and sister now face the task of adapting to a new home, school and friends. It is a story of growing-up — under difficult circumstances — of learning to love, to reach out to other people, and to adjust to what life brings.

This year's Newbery selection is enjoying great popularity among the young people for whom it was written as well as among the adults who chose it a winner. J.J. Powell, a well-read sixth grader at South Greenville School (and a loyal library patron) liked the book, and had this to say about the selection.

"The Newbery Award book is a good one. It is about Dicey learning to cope with her mother being in an asylum and her younger brothers and sister depending on her. One of the things I liked best about the book is the way Dicey, her friends and family lived. I thought that since they were poor, they cared for each other more than their money. At night they would sing songs together while Maybeth played the piano. James would help her with her reading and spelling for school. I also like the setting on the water."

"Dicey's Song" is a sequel to an earlier novel by Ms. Voigt, "Homecoming." Readers who enjoy one book will probably want to read the other.

The Caldecott Award winner, "Shadows," is a translation (from the French) of Blaise Cendrar's poem "La Feticheuse" ("The Sorcerer"). In a hauntingly beautiful blending of text and illustration, Marcia Brown retells a story told by African shammans and storytellers of the past. Ms. Brown also won the 1962 and 1965 Caldecott Medals for "Cinderella" and "Once a Mouse."

Titles chosen as Caldecott Honor Books were "When I Was Young in the Mountains" by Diane Goode and "A Chair for My Mother" by Vera Williams. Newbery Honor Books include the following: "Graven Images" by Paul Fleischman, "Sweet Whispers Brother Rush" by Virginia Hamilton, "The Blue Sword" by Robin McKinley and "Doctor De Soto" (a local favorite) by William Steig.

Each of the books mentioned is or soon will be available in the Children's Room at Sheppard Library.

Search On For Wine Artifacts

ROSE HILL — A search is on for rare North Carolina wine and wine artifacts. In attics and basements, packhouses and on display shelves across the state are the treasures of North Carolina grape and wine heritage — mute testimony to a once thriving industry. None are unimportant — some are quite valuable.

Beginning in 1835 with Medoc Vineyard in Halifax County, our nation's first commmercial winery, North Carolina grew to become the leading wine state in the Union before prohibition halted commercial wine production.

From "Murhpy to Manteo" the state was literally peppered with successful wineries in Fayetteville, Castle Hayne, Wilmington, Conover, Eagle Springs, Gibson, Littleton, Louisburg, Manteo, Murphy, Peachland, Holly Ridge, Samarcard, Tryon, Warrenton, Willard, Edenton and Icard.

With the revival of the state's commercial grape and wine industry, marked bottles signs, packing boxes and, of course wine, are now being sought by collectors.

In recognition of the interest and demand for these artifacts Duplin Wine Cellars, now the state's largest winery, will sponsor a North Carolina Rare Wine and Artifacts auction and banquet April 30 at the winery in Rose Hill. Everyone is invited to submit such finds to the winery for auction, or, to display.

Beginning at 2 p.m. collectors may exchange wines or artifacts to complete collections or purchase autographed copies of "Scuppernong: North Carolina's Grape and its Wines" by Dr. Clarence Gohdes. A speech by Dr. Gohdes, formerly of Duke University and a noted authority on North Carolina's native grape, will be featured at the banquet.

Reservations for the day's events, including the banquet, is $10 and must be made by April 23. Items to be auctined, displayed, or exchanged may be delivered to the winery any time prior to 2 p.m., April 30.

For reservations or more information contact: Pam Pope, Duplin Wine Cellars, Drawer 756, Rose Hill, N.C., 28458, telephone 289-3888.

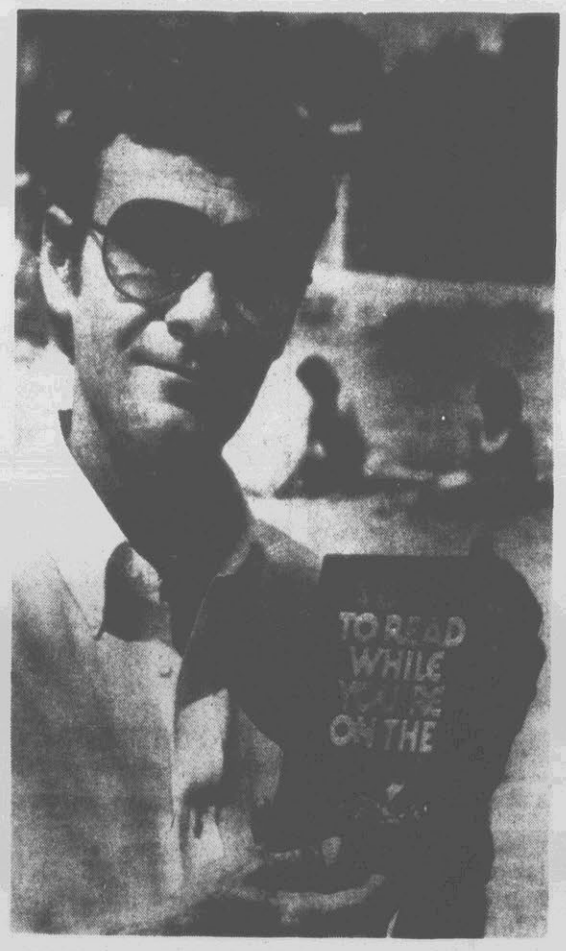

Watercolor Class

MARS HILL — Two watercolor workshops will be conducted this summer at Mars Hill by watercolorist-teacher Frank Jennings.

The first will be held July 24-30; the second, July 31-August 6. Each class will be limited to 20 students. Cost for either class is $200, which includes tuition, a room in one of the college's residence halls, and meals in the college cafeteria.

For complete details, contact: The Center for Continuing Education, Mars Hill College, Mars Hill, N.C., 28754, telephone 704/689-1166.

A Review

Biography Restores Reputation

W.W. Holden, A Political Biography. By Edgar E. Folk and Bynum Shaw. Winston-Salem, John F. Blair, Publisher. Hardcover, 275 pages, illustrated. $24.95

As one by one our phantom heroes vanish through vilifying media exposes, it's immensely gratifying to have one thus previously "vilified" restored to us a hero.

In their biography of W.W. Holden, Folk and Shaw have accomplished this feat. It's a serious and scholarly work, excellent reading for those who appreciate the powerful and fascinating influence politics and journalism exerted over North Carolina's turbulent history from 1812-1892.

It's both frightening and intriguing to preceive how fickle are the winds of politcal war, how battles fought in this arena shape our destiny and sometimes strip us of life itself. Too often it's a vicious gossip-mongering contest, the winner being he who best panders to the unhealthy needs of those destructive natures who must tear others down in order to build themselves up.

Too few are the noble persons who fight with the courage of logic and reason, armed with their own integrity and demanding truth.

William Woods Holden was one of these few.

He was born in North Carolina, a bastard child of "unpretending origins," as he often said. This fact proved to be a driving force behind his quest for power and fame. At the age of ten, Holden was apprenticed to a newspaper editor, and later worked for various editors. He studied law, but in 1843 returned to journalism, becoming editor of the Raleigh Standard. His leadership made the paper the most influential Democratic newspaper in North Carolina.

A man of great intellect, with the ability to move minds and hearts, Holden was a man the common people rallied behind as he verbally fought for their rights against the aristocratic class ruling North Carolina at that time.

But he who lives by the word can also suffer by it. The aristocrats, born into wealth and position, never forgave Holden his piercing verbal assaults against them during his rise to fame. Nor did they forgive him the fact of his low birth. It was these men who sealed his doom just after the end of the Civil War.

Because of his reputation for committment to democratic principles and his leadership for peace, Holden was appointed governor of North Carolina in 1865, soon after Lincoln's assassination. He steadfastly refused to tolerate the underground rule of the Ku Klux Klan and declared martial law in parts of North Carolina in an effort to combat their violent actions.

His actions as governor brought down on his head the wrath of the legislature and the Klan's 40,000 members, many of whom were influential people. They accused Holden of "the most brazen corruption and incompetency," and called him "a rapscallion."

Holden became the first governor in America to be impeached, tried and removed from office.

At times the minutely detailed accounts of Holden's activities become tiresome, but the brilliant journalism of the authors on issues such as free suffrage, slavery, war, and the KKK make exciting reading. We can see how these forces shaped Tar Heel history in a way that affects us even today.

In this splendid book, the authors have retrieved W.W. Holden from undeserved notority and reveal him as "a man ahead of his times." Holden falls into that group of men who throughout history has been a person with the courage, the intellect, and the compassion for human rights to speak his own truth, no matter what the consequences were for him personally. Discovering the real Holden is a comforting experience.

The workshop, for dancers at all levels of training, has been scheduled to celebrate National Dance Week and will include classes in auditioning techniques, ballet, modern dance, jazz and tap dance. Registration is limited to dancers 10 years old or older, with a $10 per person fee charged.

Layton's film work includes staging the musical sequences of Carol Channing in "Thoroughly Modern Millie" and a year as consulting director for Columbia Pictures. He has also done four ballets for the Royal Ballet in London and one for the Joffrey Ballet in New York.

In addition, he has worked with the National Theater for the Deaf and for the past 19 years has directed the North Carolina outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony."

In conjunction with the "Day of Dance," an organizational meeting of the North Carolina Dance Alliance will be held at 9:30 a.m. April 24.

The meeting is expected to draw persons from a 15-country area of eastern North Carolina who wish to help foster the potential and growth of dance in the state. No advance registration is required to attend the Dance Alliance meeting.

Also, Karen McCall, a graduate teaching assistant, will conduct "Lift Thine Eyes" from Mendelssohn-Bartholdy's "Elijah."

Following an intermission, the Men's Glee Club will perform: Charles Burney's "Round for 20 Voices;" Persichetti's "Jimmy's Got a Goil" and "Sam Was a Man;" "Five Slovak Folk Songs" by Bartok; Ralph Vaughn-Williams' "Drinking Song;" Luboff's "Whoopee Ti Yi Yo;" and Victor Herbert's "Italian Street Song."

The program will conclude with the combine choruses singing Randall Thompson's "Frostiana" comprised of six nature songs based on Robert Frost poems.

Joel Schultz will conduct the next selection, the "Symphony for Band" in four movements — allegro vivace; andante; and adante maestro; and allegro ritmico — by Jerry H. Bilik.

The last two compositions to be performed — Gordon Jacob's "Suite in B-Flat" and Martin Mailman's "Liturgical Music for Band" — will be conducted by Herbert L. Carter. The Jacob piece is in three parts — March, Solemn Music, and Finale; and Mailman's composition is in four parts — Introit, Kyrie, Gloria, and Alleluia.

4 WAYS TO SAY "CHARGE IT"

The Newly Opened Complex At Eastern Carolina Vocational Center Offers

A Modern Recreation-Therapy Program

ASSURANCES GIVEN . . . Ross Boyer assures Dot Jean Tice of Greenville that the specially designed lift for wheelchair patrons is a safe and easy way to get into the water.

"Recreation programs designed for handicapped persons do not always provide good opportunities to teach teamwork and socialization within the same program," said Danell Le Roux, executive director of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center.

"The fine new swimming pool at the center is an excellent example of what can be done in this field," Le Roux pointed out. "This pool, the only one of its kind in North Carolina, is a great asset to our therapy progam. It provides both an opportunity to improve the body and to create team spirit. Our clients not only can learn to swim or improve their swimming skills, but they learn to be part of a team attitude by playing water basketball and water polo.

"One of the nicest things about the center's fine pool is that it can be used not only by the center's clients, but also by senior citizens from Martin and Pitt Counties, by cerebral palsy persons from the facility at Hooker Memorial Church, and by groups from other agencies such as Pitt Community College," Le Roux explained.

"In effect, it will be a community center, with the pool available for use during any periods it is not being used by our clients."

Le Roux mentioned that "no state funds are available for operating the pool. We will have to rely on federal funds and our own funds that we raise, so we need continued public support."

BEGINNING A SWIMMING LESSON . . . Kim Griffith, a lifeguard and instructor, standing at rear, gives an orientation to five center patrons prior to their entering the water as Ross Boyer waits in the water to assist the quintet. Two of the five are already competent swimmers.

LIVELY OLDER LADIES . . . is the description this quartet of Williamston women use for themselves. The four, shown with Ross Boyer, are, left to right, Mrs. Lee Blackwell, Miss Alma Swindell, Miss Bettie Swindell, and Mrs. Annie B. Dunn. These four and other residents of Santree Living Center in Williamston plan to use the pool for swimming each Tuesday afternoon.

Everybody connected with the thoroughly modern recreational facility at the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center — staff members, the clientele, and members of the public who have visited the center — express enthusiasm for the possibilities that the recreation-thearapy program hold in assisting handicap persons and also in serving the general public.

Washington, N.C. native Ross Boyer, trained at N.C. State University and East Carolina University, heads the relatively small staff of the center's Recreation-Therapy Department responsible for the program just now getting underway.

Daneel Le Roux is executive director of the center, in charge of the multiple operations involved in several departments.

In addition to Boyer, the Recreation-Therapy Department staff consists of two recreation therapists, Devicky Cox and Karen Kelly, both ECU graduates, lifeguards/swimming instructors Kim Griffith and Alan Broadhurst, instructor and secretary Betty Johnson, and Emerson Watford, a graduate of ECVC who serves as a full time aide.

"The 25 meter Olympic pool is the showpiece and a facility that provides significant opportunities in the program," Boyer said. "However, it's only one part of the fine modern facilities we have to work with."

Other facilities noted by Boyer include "the games room which has pool tables, ping pong, foosball and video games. There's also the gymnatorium for basketball, and a stage on which various productions can be shown." Recently, a church group rented the stage to put on a fashion show.

"Another important facility is the weight room which has a 10 station Universal weight training set. This is a vital part of our program in filling the need for physical development and weight training."

"The recreation program is a total rehabilitation procees, we feel," said Ross Boyer, superintendent of the center's Recreation-Therapy Department. "The thrust of our program is to provide our clientele with confidence and skills they need to be integrated into existing community programs.

"Our ultimate goal," Ross added, "is for our clients to become competitively employed. We feel too that leisure time management is critical in today's work society, and plays an important role not only in obtaining a job, but in being able to hold it. These are some of the objectives we have in the operation of this program."

Boyer explained that "at any given time we have about 180 persons enrolled in our programs. Our residental population is about 70, and in addition we serve about 400 patrons each year in additional programs. Some clients require six months of training, others three months, and a few as little as a week or two. The programs are open to men and women 16 years old or older, and we also serve special populatins such as young children who are cerebral palsy victims."

ECVC basically serves 33 counties in eastern North Carolina.

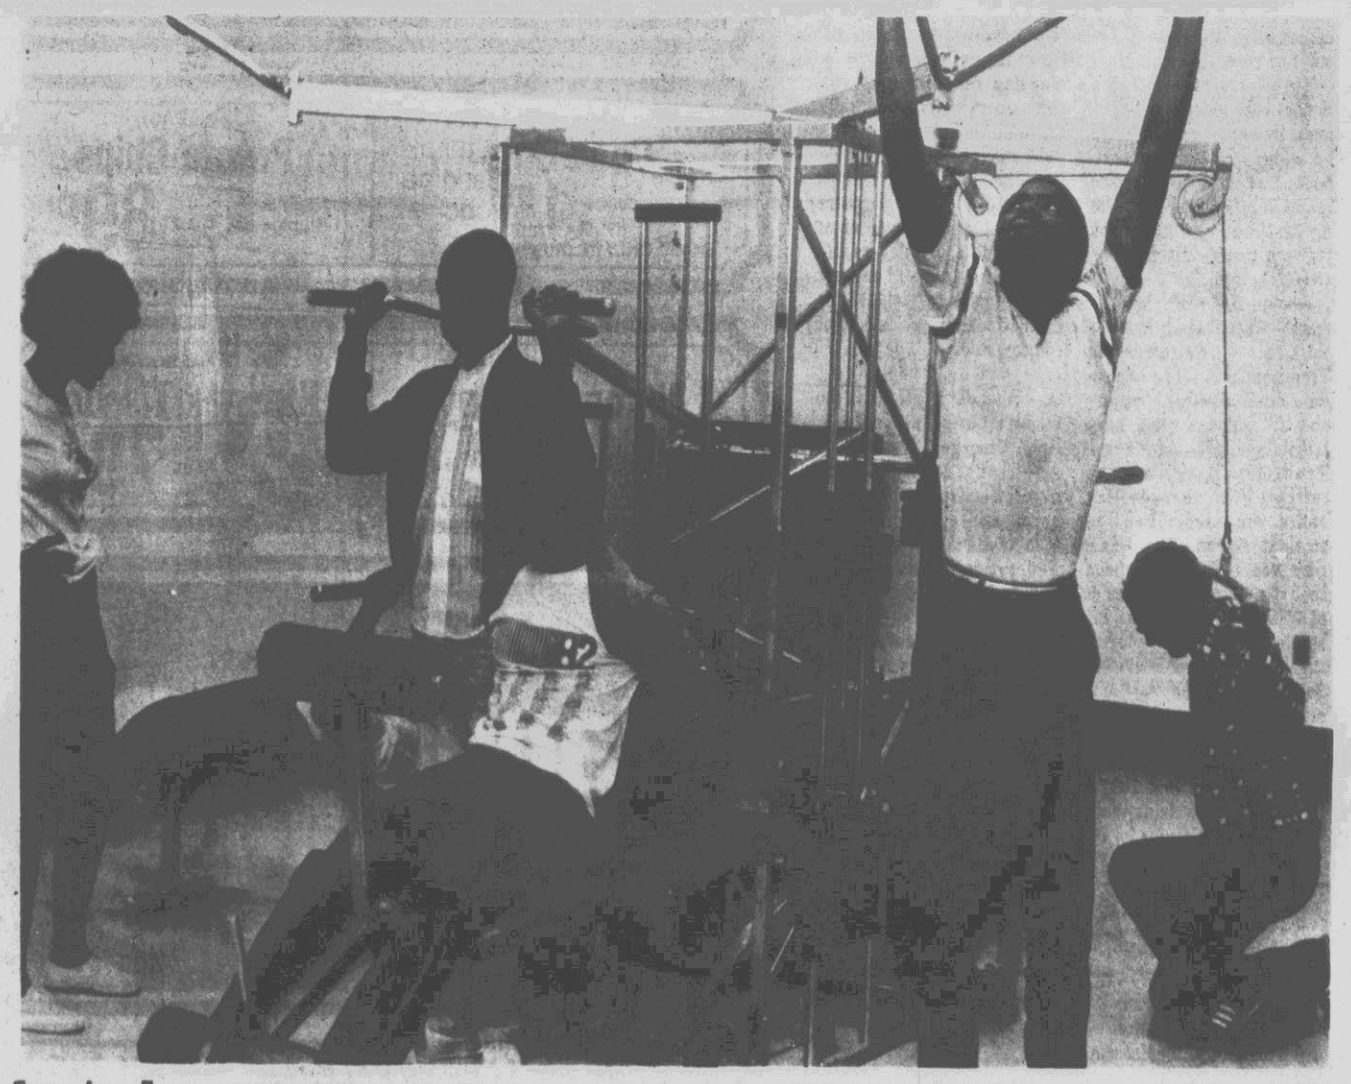

"Although we have been talking about the physical activities, the center also has a music room, a library and an arts and crafts program."

Boyer added that contributions for the programs, whether swim suits, sport equipment, items for the music center or library, "are always welcome and appreciated. We have had wonderful public support and will continue to need such support in order to give the best possible service to help the handicapped," he said.

FREE-PLAY PRACTICE . . . in the center's modern gymnasium sees five players with three balls energetically practicing close-range throws into the basket.

Exercises For Body Strength

BUILDING STRONGER BODIES . . . is one of the objectives of the center's recreation-therapy program. Here, instructor Betty Johnson, left, looks on as six young men (two partially hidden) use modern equipment in the weight room.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE INCOHERENT ARTIST DRAWS A CROWD.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: G equals I.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

ASK OMAR

Q.—I know that you play a sophisticated system that includes five-card majors as a cornerstone. Why then do you persist in espousing four-card major methods in your columns? Do you bow to Charles Goren in this?—R. Edwards, New York City.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize)

A.—We have answered questions about four-card majors vs. five-card majors on several occasions, but they keep cropping up. Usually, my co-author answers them, but I am glad to be given the opportunity to present my point of view.

Yes, I do play five-card majors with most of my partners. However, since I learned bridge from a Goren textbook, I adhered to four-card major methods for most of my life. Frankly, I don't think there is much difference between the two.

About 20 years ago, a match was staged in New York between Scientists and Traditionalists. The Scientists used five-card majors and all sorts of then new-fangled gadgets, while the Traditionalists were restricted to methods that could be described as straight Goren. The Scientists won, but no one claimed that the victory was a result of system. Indeed, in the 256 hands that were played, there was not one where the Scientists opened one of a minor and the Traditionalists one of a major!

You do me an injustice if you think that I would agree to propagate methods that I thought were inferior for the average player. You do Charles Goren even more grievous harm by suggesting that he would not progress with the times—his record proves otherwise.

However, there is no gainsaying that five-card majors are growing in popularity. More than 90 percent of the tournament world employs them, and more and more rubber bridge players are adopting the system. A large majority of bridge teachers are teaching five-card major opening bids.

Charles Goren and I included a chapter on five-card majors in the last edition of "Goren's Bridge Complete." Now he is working on a teaching program for home computers that employs those methods.

I am quite comfortable playing four-card majors with those of my partners who prefer it. A number of the world's great players still play that way. And I suggest that you use whichever method makes you feel most comfortable.

Q.—Who do you think is the world's best player?—R. Katz, Chicago, Ill.

A.—That's a loaded question. Two of my favorite partners, Giorgio Belladonna, who heads the World Bridge Federation's master point list, and Benito Garozzo can stake strong claims. Bob Hamman would advance the case of the leading American on the list—who just happens to be Bob Hamman! And there are many who would agree with him. Take your pick from among these and other candidates too numerous to mention here.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Several months ago Phillip and I decided that this was the year to teach Meg the value of self-discipline. We were determined to inculcate this virtue because she was bringing home sloppy work from school and, on the whole, she didn't seem too concerned about it.

After much deliberation I devised a system of incentives. I promised Meg that I would give her a star for each day that she turned in neat, reasonably correct work on time to her teacher. If she earned four stars in a week, she could choose a weekend activity like ice skating or a movie. She seemed enthusiastic, and I felt certain that within a week or two we would see a significant improvement in her work.

We did not. What I hadn't reckoned on was Meg's absolute aversion to any attempt to regulate "her" time. Meg, unfortunately, is and always be a libertarian. She dreams of freedom, especially from adults. She has informed me on a number of occasions that although parents do teach children about love, children would do better in all areas if they were left to themselves.

Translated, this means no school, a filthy room, an escape from the structures of table manners, and the right to be maddeningly slow. Meg detests being hurried. She doesn't mind hurrying us when it suits her, but she responds to every attempt to get her moving faster by slowing down to an inchworm paee.

This was obviously what was occuring at school too. So Phillip and I eventually decided to attack on both fronts. In addition to the incentive system for schoolwork, we would prod her toward responsible action at home. We began with the way she gets ready for the scholbus.

Every weekday morning, I drag her out of bed. I get most of her limp body dressed. I listen to her complain about being harassed, even though Saturdays and Sundays she is always up at least half an hour earlier. By the time she gets out the door I am usually hoarse from exhorting her to get a move on it.

"You have to stop doing everything for her," Phillip told me. "Get her up and make her responsible for the rest. Explain that if she misses the bus, she's grounded that afternoon."

I did as he suggested, but she took 20 minutes to put on her socks. And she was still in her nightgown. I couldn't help myself. I reminded her gently that the bus would appear in approximately 30 minutes.

With only ten minutes left before the bus came, she sat down to the breakfast table with the rest of us. I knew that she normally needed at least 15 minutes to brush her teeth.

Simply getting the toothpaste on the brush required between 7 and 8 of those precious units of time. I began to hyperventilate. I looked down at my ratty robe. I knew that I did not want to take her to school that morning.

"Hurry up," I begged.

She munched with the lassitude of a horse two days from the glue factory.

"Get moving!" I said through clenched teeth.

She scraped the sugar off the bottom of her cereal bowl with the side of her spoon.

"Go!" I roared.

As she shot out of the kitchen, Phillip reminded me that I wasn't to push her like that. "You were supposed to let her make her own mistakes."

"I know," I sighed. "But I don't think I have enough self-discipline."

N.C. Leads In Outdoor Shows

RALEIGH — According to a survey made by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research, North Carolina has more outdoor dramas than any state in the country. Ten North Carolina outdoor dramas contribute to the artistic and economic life of the state in several important ways, says Louise Lockwood in an article in a special arts issue of the center's magazine, N.C. Insight.

The largest three Tar Heel outdoor dramas — "The Lost Colony," "Unto These Hills," and "Horn in the West" — have evolved into indispensable ingredients in the tourist economies of Manteo, Cherokee and Boone, respectively.

The other seven dramas contribute to a sense of community in areas with modest artistic resources. In all 10 productions, ticket prices remain low and the outdoor atmosphere high.

In 1982, a total of 230,000 people attended the North Carolina dramas. North Carolina also serves as the administrative base for this genre nationally through the Institute of Outdoor Drama at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Center for Public Policy examined the extent to which the state subsidizes the outdoor dramas. Lockwood found that over $1 million had been appropriated for the dramas in the last five years (fiscal years 1978-82).

The average state subsidy per paid admission during that period for each drama was only 89 cents per ticket. However, "Liberty Cart" in Kenansville receives state funds amounting to a subsidy of $7.98 per paid admission, while the 1982 ticket price for adults was only $5. "The Lost Colony" in Manteo — the first outdoor drama in the United States, dating from 1937, receives a subsidy of only 24 cents per admission.

Five of the dramas began as historical commemorations during the bicentennial celebrations before and during 1976. They have continued to operate, sometimes in the face of small crowds, because "state funding has made it possible for outdoor drama to continue on a personal level," according to Judy Chavis, director of the state's Theater Arts Section.

"Outdoor drama has done a lot for theater," Ms. Chavis says. "It's taken away the elitist atmosphere of red carpets and posh seats. It's made people feel more comfortable with theater, giving them an incentive to try theater in other settings."

- "The Lost Colony," 1937, Manteo, 78,550
- "Unto These Hills," 1950, Cherokee, 102,069
- "Horn in the West," 1952, Boone, 22,609
- "Listen and Remember," 1965, Waxhaw, 1,100
- "From This Day Forward," 1968, Valdese, 3,155
- "Sword of Peace," 1974, Snow Camp, 6,915
- "Strike at the Wind," 1976, Pembroke, 8,505
- "Liberty Cart," 1976, Kenansville, 5,098
- "First for Freedom," 1976, Halifax, 2,720
- "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," 1977, Bath, 6,970.

Some Rock Stars Are Breaking Away

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Supertramp's Roger Hodgson, the latest supergroup quitter, says he's not surprised at the growing number of rock stars who are leaving the bands that made them famous.

"What has happened, really, is a very, very normal pattern for any group," Hodgson says. He recently announced that he will be leaving Supertramp after the group's planned summer tour.

"While you're on the way up, while you're struggling, there's a common goal that keeps everyone together," he says. "You're together, you're fighting and you're living together and you're sleeping together, struggling together.

"When you make it, when you achieve success, you achieve the money that gives you the freedom to have things your own way and you want your own way," Hodgson said, munching on chocolate cookies during an interview at the Hollywood offices of A&M Records.

The next step at that point usually is the long vacation, says the 33-year-old Hodgson. In Supertramp's case, it was more than three years between "Breakfast in America" and "Famous Last Words," which was released late last year and continues to spin out hit singles.

But the time off simply exacerbated the differences between Hodgson and Rick Davies, the group's other principal singer-songwriter. As a result, Hodgson says, the music on "Famous Last Words" was "lightweight, because that's about the only area we can meet in any more."

While he still considers "Famous Last Words" to be a good Supertramp album, "It wasn't a great one," he says. "It won't go down in my memory as a particularly enjoyable one."

Davies, who took up rock 'n' roll to escape a future working in a factory, and Hodgson, a British private school graduate, joined forces in their native Britain 12 years ago. With the help of Dutch millionaire Stanley August Micsegaes, a longtime Davies admirer, they made a record deal.

But for four years, there were no hits.

Then, in 1973, they recruited bassist Dougie Thompson, saxophonist-synthesizer player John Helliwell and drummer Bob Siebenberg, changed their name to Supertramp and poured out their frustrations with the British class system on an album called "Crime of the Century."

It became a hit on both sides of the Atlantic, spawning such standards as "School," "Dreamer" and "Bloody Well Right."

The band moved to the United States in 1975 — "27 years of rain was enough!" Hodgson smiles.

Hodgson now lives in northern California while Davies makes his home in the Los Angeles area. The two had always written their songs separately anyway.

"As a generalization, he's tougher, more cynical and dryer," Hodgson says of Davies. "I'm more idealistic, romantic.

"It's still interesting, but the experience of trying to make it work together has become so difficult and — on the last album — painful, that it's just become no fun making it work anymore," Hodgson said. "We don't want to just have a business arrangement."

Hodgson is already at work on an album which will be a solo effort almost in the literal sense of the word.

HAVING IT HIS WAY . . . Roger Hodgson of the rock group Supertramp says he will be leaving the group after its planned summer tour. He says that this is a very normal pattern for any group. "When you make it, you achieve the money that gives you the freedom to have things your own way and you want your own way." (AP Laserphoto)

NCSA Gala Weekend

WINSTON-SALEM — A recital today and the three-day weekend gala opening of Stevens Center are on the calendar this week at the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem.

At 4 p.m. today, organist Bruce Stevens will perform in Crawford Hall in a free recital open to the public. The recital is sponsored by the Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Organ Fund.

Special events are scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday on the occasion of the gala opening of the Stevens Center. At 7:30 p.m. Friday, in a black tie event, Donald Saddler will present a tribute to Roger L. Stevens, for whom the center is named. Admission, including the dinner at Benton Center following the tribute, is $250 per person of which $175 is tax-deductible.

At 7 p.m. Saturday, the opening gala features a performance of Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate," directed by Alan Rust. Also, the American National Theater and Academy's presentation of the National Artist Award will be made to Roger Stevens. A reception will follow in Winston Square. Tickets are priced at $50, $45, $40 and $35.

The final gala event is a 2 p.m. Sunday matinee performance of "Kiss Me Kate," introduced by guest celebrities and presented by NCSA students and faculty. Entertainment and refreshments will be served in Winston Square and Park following the performance. Tickets are $20, $18, $12, and $8.

For further information or reservations to any of the gala events, call 761-2001.

Carowinds Open Weekends

CHARLOTTE — Carowinds, celebrating its 10th anniversary season, is now open for weekends — Saturdays and Sundays through June 5. Beginning June 6 the park will be open six days weekly (closed Fridays) thorugh Aug. 25 when it returns to a weekends-only fall schedule.

For this season, new boats have been added and modifications made to the Rip Roarin' Rapids whitewater ride.

Other entertainments scheduled for this season include "Play Me That Country Music" being perfromed in the Sound Circus Theater; "Return of the Phantom of the Opry" in Harmony Hall, and three rotating shows, "Cyclone Sam's Stuff and Nonsense," "Appalachian Abracadabra" and "Twin Pickins" in Troubadours Roost.

"That's Entertainment," the Broadway-styled show, will return to Midway Music Hall June 4, and a new trampoline act will premier on June 6.

One change is in the sale of seats to the Paladium amphitheater series of 20 different concerts by big-name entertainers. This year, instead of being included in the general admission tickets, reserved seats will be sold on a separate basis to each Paladium performance.

The Ocean Island wave pool will open for weekend operation May 14 and for daily operation (including Fridays) on May 28.

Admission to Carowinds is $11.95 with children under 3 years old and younger admitted free.

On Finding Sea Riches

By JIM TYLER
Div. Of Marine Fisheries
N.C. Department Of Natural Resources And Community Development

MOREHEAD CITY — Miserable weather had us down to the last day to catch some ocean creatures to exhibit in the Outdoors Expo in Raleigh, and it was blowing a gale out of the west. No way to get a boat out into the ocean on that late March date

Otis Lewis, captain of the Machapunga, the all-purpose vessel of the University of North Carolina Institute of Marine Sciences at Morehead City, suggested we try a portion of Newport River, where we could work and be close to shore where the wind would not bite.

We dragged a funnel-shaped net along the bottom there, a trawl net, and when we hoisted the catch aboard we all smiled. It could have been an ocean haul, the variety was so good. Everything from a stingray to a sea horse to a horseshoe crab to a suprisingly large sea mullet flipped and crawled on the deck.

The water was thick, churned greatly by wind, rain drainage and extreme tides, and pink shrimp, nocturnal scavengers, were out and about and were also scooped up. At least 30 species of finfish and shellfish came aboard.

Machapunga mate Joe Purifoy and I sorted through and put some in a holding tank. These were transported back to the institute and kept in a concrete pond until time to move them to Raleigh.

Other concrete ponds were being drained for the annual cleaning, and Dr. Frank Schwartz of the institute added a creature or two to our collection. A last minute call sent Marine Fisheries law officer Lamar Croom to the bay scallop grounds in Bogue Sound where he asked commercial fishermen to donate 100 of them to a good cause.

Visits to calico scallop boats the week before, docked and loaded from a trip offshore, resulted in colorful crabs and large seashells with the creatures still inside and alive.

Early the following morning, we placed them in containers, loaded them into a station wagon, rigged equipment to pump air to them, and another caravan of live sea creatures left for Raleigh.

We have been exhibiting sea life in Raleigh at least once a year since 1970. Without exception the crowds have been plentiful. Curiosity about sea creatures knows no age or sex bounds.

It's always rewarding to observe scientists, law officers, boat captains and secretaries work together so a child or an adult in Raleigh will have the opportunity to see a bit of the sea, to learn a bit first hand about life not packaged.

Festival For Wilson Set

WILSON — Wilson's former Sunday in the Park has outgrown the park and this year is moving downtown. The new festival, Saturday on the Town, will take place Saturday.

Activities for the Wilson Arts Council and Downtown Redevelopment Corporation sponsored event will range from athletic events sponsored by the Recreation Department to a barbecue cook off.

Crafts and fine arts will be represented, and there will be a special children's section featuring clowns, face painting, a Tom Sawyer fence, and a bubble blowing booth.

Signing up by individuals and organizations is still ongoing. Interested persons may call 237-4151.

Swapping Home Loans Involve Several Factors

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Many a homeowner these days would love to trade in an old cash-guzzling mortgage for one of today's new models.

Interest rates have fallen substantially in the past year and a half, making home loans issued now quite a bit easier on the budget.

At their peaks in the interest-rate crunch, fixed-mortgage rates got as high as 17 percent and even 18 percent. By late March, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., the average rate on a conventional 30-year loan for 80 percent of the price of a new single-family dwelling was down to 12.82 percent.

But it's an unfortunate fact of financial life that swapping home loans isn't as simple as, say, trading in an old car for a new one.

The fees involved in closing out an old note and signing a new one can be steep. For example, a mortgage taken out a year or two ago may call for a prepayment penalty. Most lenders also charge "points" for originating new loans.

So the question of whether to refinance an existing mortgage becomes an exercise in arithmetic, and there are some x-factors in the equation. Daunting as the job may seem, however, experts in personal finance say calculating the pluses and minuses of refinancing can be rewarding.

In a recent report on the subject, Elliot M. Friedman, tax principal at the accounting firm of Arthur Young & Co., suggests that would-be refinancers look at expenses like points not as a cost, but as an investment.

"For many individuals with high interest rate mortgages," he said, "the amount paid to refinance a home mortgage may be the best investment on the market."

For simplicity's sake, consider an example provided by Friedman of a swap of mortgages in which the only significant expense is points. The case he cites involves a $100,000 loan, but the lessons it provides apply proportionately to smaller mortgages — and larger ones, for that matter.

Friedman's hypothetical homeowner (in the 50 percent tax bracket) has an existing $100,000 loan at 14 percent, and now has found a bank willing to give an equivalent loan at 12 percent. The bank's origination fee is four points — 4 percent of the amount of the loan.

So refinancing means an immediate outlay of $4,000. The switch from a 14 percent to 12 percent interest rate, meanwhile, lowers the monthly mortgage payment by $156, or $1,875 per year. In the short run, therefore, the refinancer comes out behind, not ahead.

But after a few years, the breakeven point is passed, and the up-front outlay of $4,000 begins to pay off. In this example, Friedman says, "refinancing would not make sense for the individual who plans to sell his house after only two years. However, if the individual holds the new mortgage for its entire 30-year life, the initial $4,000 investment would generate an annual after-tax yield of 27 percent!"

Each case in the real world is different. "The rate of return resulting from the refinancing of any particular mortgage depends on the reduction in the interest rate, the number of points paid, the homeowner's tax bracket, and the number of years the new mortgage is held," Friedman says.

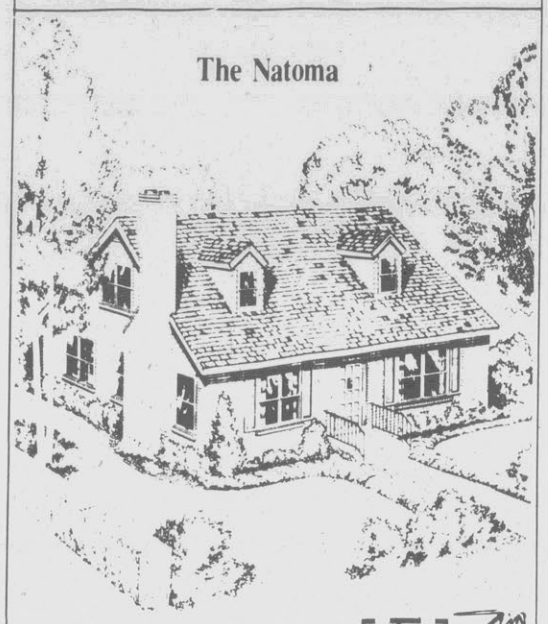

In making a decision on refinancing, mortgage debtors naturally might wonder what will happen to interest rates in the future. If rates fall further, there could be even better deals available later on.

This is where the unknowns start to creep into the calculations. Predicting interest-rate trends accurately is a mission on which some of the most sophisticated professionals have failed badly.

Generally, financial advisers recommend that amateurs not concern themselves overly with this imponderable. If a refinancing deal looks appealing on all other counts, they suggest, it may be folly to wait for another ¼ or ½ percentage point in your favor, which may or may not materialize.

Building With Ideas

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The manuals and looseleaf binders, the charts, graphs and maps, the records and contracts that flash on computer terminals document what is already obvious: Here is a disciplined operation.

A maverick company of sorts too, especially for homebuilding. "Builders are anathema to our logic," says Robert Toll, president. "We don't have builders working for us; we have in-house people trained by us."

Successful too. Last year was a devastating one for builders, but Toll Bros., a partnership, says it sold 430 units compared with 350 in 1981, and earned 8 percent on sales of $43 million.

"It was our best year ever," said Robert Toll, 42, partner with brother Bruce, 39, in founding, designing and operating a company out of Horsham, Pa., that is recognized as one of the country's smartest outfits.

Robert is a lawyer, Bruce is an accountant. Some of their project supervisors are business school graduates who couldn't read blueprints when hired. But they could think, and thinkers can be trained, says Robert.

A master's degree in business administration is just another standard by which the Tolls screen applicants. "We're reviewing a fresh crop of MBAs," said Robert, who figures it will take eight or nine months to train them.

The Tolls believe homebuilding is a business but that most homebuilders are merely entrepreneurs who exploit opportunity and then fail when it's absent, an observation that was underscored by the past few years of tight money.

Toll Bros. survived because of many factors, but all important was their foresight in lining up money commitments before interest rates rose to record highs and their detailed knowledge of the intricacies of mortgaging.

While other builders lost customers because of financing problems just before the sale closed, the Tolls managed to obtain financial commitments from customers. If would-be buyers seemed unable to afford a house through routine financing techniques the Tolls could rearrange numbers to make it possible.

In effect, the Tolls turned a bad market to advantage by applying financing to the product. "Adaptation is a necessary element of survival," said Robert Toll. "Either you adapt to your environment or you do not survive."

You must be competent in all facets of your business. "If you cannot, you'll be a failure," Robert says categorically. "What separates the successful building concern is the ability to manage all components."

Throughout the Toll organization are systems and measurements, many of them originating with the two brothers in the company's early years and developed and refined by years of experience and input from their project managers.

At any time, very little is unknown, and what is unknown — about costs, pricing, quality, the construction timetable, the competition's efforts, etc. — at any time seems certain to be corrected quickly through inspection or review or the revelations of a newly devised chart or report.

One revelation: The greatest sales are from mid-January to the end of March, and then again in July and August. Ask almost anyone, including some homebuilders, and they'll talk about the "spring selling (buying) season."

The Tolls are strong merchandizers. People really don't need "shelter," he claims. " No matter what some government officials might think, there is no shortage of such a commodity. What people do seek, he believes, is an ego trip, a step upward.

As Toll sees it, a new home is it. Many builders, he observes, wait around until they feel people will accept new housing, apparently unaware that houses must be sold, no matter how fine the quality.

In a Toll Bros. exhibit house there is always a fire in the fireplace and bread or cookies baking in the oven. The houses are perfectly finished and landscaped. Flowers usually grow outside, because the Tolls have found various hardy breeds that can display their beauty from March to December.

The houses are excitingly furnished. "We are the Bloomingdale's of housing," says Robert, referring to the department store chain famous for its displays. "Why does Bloomingdale's succeed? Because it's exciting."

A Toll exhibit house is exciting. It has lots of brass and mirrors, because they look rich. It might even have a green piano, just to show people that they need not think conventionally.

"It's not what the average man might like," Robert concedes. "But it's exciting. It gets your juices flowing."

To the degree, he claims, that the sale might already be made when the shopper walks through the front door and says "wow."

Ornament Finds A New Place In Modern Fashion For Homes

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

It's been said that if you hold onto outmoded furnishings long enough, they will come back in fashion. If so, those who never abandoned lace doilies, overstuffed furniture and ornate china can congratulate themselves.

Ornament is back in fashion. Designers who were taught that form should follow function and that ornament is bad, have recently taken up the call for embellishment, according to Robert Jensen, an author, teacher and architect.

Jensen is co-author with Patricia Conway of the book, "Ornamentalism: The New Decorativeness in Architecture and Design."

The failure of modern technology to solve the problems of living and a new belief in the individual appear to be basic reasons why many artists and designers trained in the modernist discipline are throwing off tradition, the authors believe.

"The urge to embellish and the love of ornamental effect seem to be basic to human nature since human beings have demonstrated a persistent impulse to decorate," said Jensen.

Far from being useless as modernism had taught, such surface embellishments as bright colors, columns, cornices, ornamental iron work and applied surface patterning are functional.

"They delight the eye, intrigue the mind and rest the soul," said Jensen. In practical terms, surface decoration on buildings is often an essential element in helping people to identify the building's function, in reducing surroundings to human scale, in enabling people to pick out landmarks and in directing traffic.

He pointed out that furniture and accessories — whether mass produced or hand-made — have continued to be embellished despite the dictates of modernism as many consumers rejected unadorned, strictly modern furniture and accessories as cold and uncomfortable.

Today, this popular instinct is being endorsed by many artists, craftsmen and architects.

Typical of the new type of artist-craftsman is Tom Loeser of Cambridge, Mass., who recently graduated from Boston University where he was enrolled in its program in artisanry. Trained in traditional woodworking, Loeser has been experimenting with new ideas . His wood and metal chair which hangs flat on the wall as art, or can be quickly assembled as a seat, is displayed in an exhibition on ornamentalism at the Hudson River Museum in Yonkers, N.Y., through May 15.

The young woodworker says he has made about 30 chairs himself, but would like to see the design produced in a factory. Loeser sees no contradiction in designing an art work that is also functional.

Similarly Arlene Slavin, whose painting is on display at the exhibition, also makes decorative screens for use in the home. She feels ornamentalism is an art movement that "gives permission to people to go with their own taste."

Dorothy Hafner, an artist whose medium is ceramics, has on view a "room" composed of a hand-made porcelain tile floor, table and ceramic dinnerware. Her work of art could serve as a setting for a dinner party. To her, ornamentalism signals a return of interest in embellished surfaces. "Artists like to do them and people love to look at and live with embellished objects," she said.

Lutherans See Year Of Growth

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Lutherans in the world now total about 68.9 million, an increase of 354,000 over the previous year, reports a statistical survey by the Lutheran World Federation.

It says the biggest increases were in Africa and Asia, with North American Lutherans declining slightly to 8.8 million.

Scholar Cites An Obligation

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Christians are obligated to defend the poor and the disenfranchised "because politicians don't pay much attention to people without power," says a noted Presbyterian scholar.

The Rev. Donald Shriver, president of New York's Union Theological Seminary, told a seminar sponsored by the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, that Christians should "be the first to request legislation for special interest groups — those who will die if we don't act."

India became an independent sovereign republic in 1950, the first Commonwealth country to do so. As a full member of the Commonwealth of Nations, the new republic recognized the King of England as its head but not as emperor of India. The King's representative, the governor general, was replaced by a president elected by the Indian parliament.

NASHVILLE (AP) — A growing number of United Methodists are preparing for full-time careers in the "outdoor ministry" at camps and parks, says the Rev. Robert G. Cagle of the denomination's Board of Discipleship.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have a portable electric oribital sander that is fine for most jobs, but doesn't perform satisfactorily for heavy-duty work. I am thinking about getting a belt sander. Will this be all right for sanding rough pieces of wood?

A. — Yes. A belt sander is excellent for that type of project, but be sure you get one large enough to handle the tasks you will perform. See if you can get some kind of brochure or pamphlet that tells you how to use a belt sander properly. .

Q. — We have a concrete patio that is getting discolored in spots and have decided to paint it. Can we use a latex paint?

A. —Yes, but be certain to get one made especially for using on concrete floors. You realize that once you paint it you will have to do it every couple of years, more or less, depending on usage.

Q. — My house has a butcherblock counter top with no finish on it. I would like to finish it, but am worried about which kind to use since the counter top will often be used for preparing food. Any suggestions?

A. — Sand it. Remove all grit particles. Apply vegetable oil to it, wipe off any excess and rub vigorously. Do this regularly, although you can skip the sanding after the first time.

Q. — I applied latex paint to the walls of our bedroom. After the paint dried there were several places where I could see through it to the old paint. I used a roller. What did I do wrong?

A. — If the old paint was a dark color and the new one light, you may not have done anything wrong. The wall merely required two coats. Otherwise, you could have rolled out the paint too much. It is important when using a roller that you redip it into the paint tray before it begins to get dry.

Q. — Our house has been painted several times without any problems. Now, however, it has started to peel on one side. The last time it was painted was about two years ago. What could be causing a condition of this kind? Oil paint was used every time the house was painted.

A. — Peeling of exterior paint can be caused by one or more of several reasons. Perhaps the most likely is that moisture has found its way behind the paint. The moisture could be coming through the inside walls and, because of a lack of moisture barrier or some other cause, getting under the outside paint. It also might be water from an opening in the exterior wall or from water backing up under the roof shingles. However it got behind the paint, it is pushing outward and producing the peeling. It is apparent that there is no point in repainting until you determine now the moisture gets there.

Panned Before Launch

By Peter Meade

At least it's not another TV series about a hospital, a lawyer, a detective or a police officer.

However, the NBC series "Casablanca" may rank as the most maligned and audacious television project ever. From the start, fans of the 1942 Bogart classic have said that by making "Casablanca" a series, producer David Wolper has committed a most sacrilegious act.

The idea for Wolper's first TV series began simply enough. He was watching a "60 Minutes" spot about the famous city.

"I like that period," says Wolper. "In 1941 there was a clear morality, a lot of idealism, and it was easy to know good from evil."

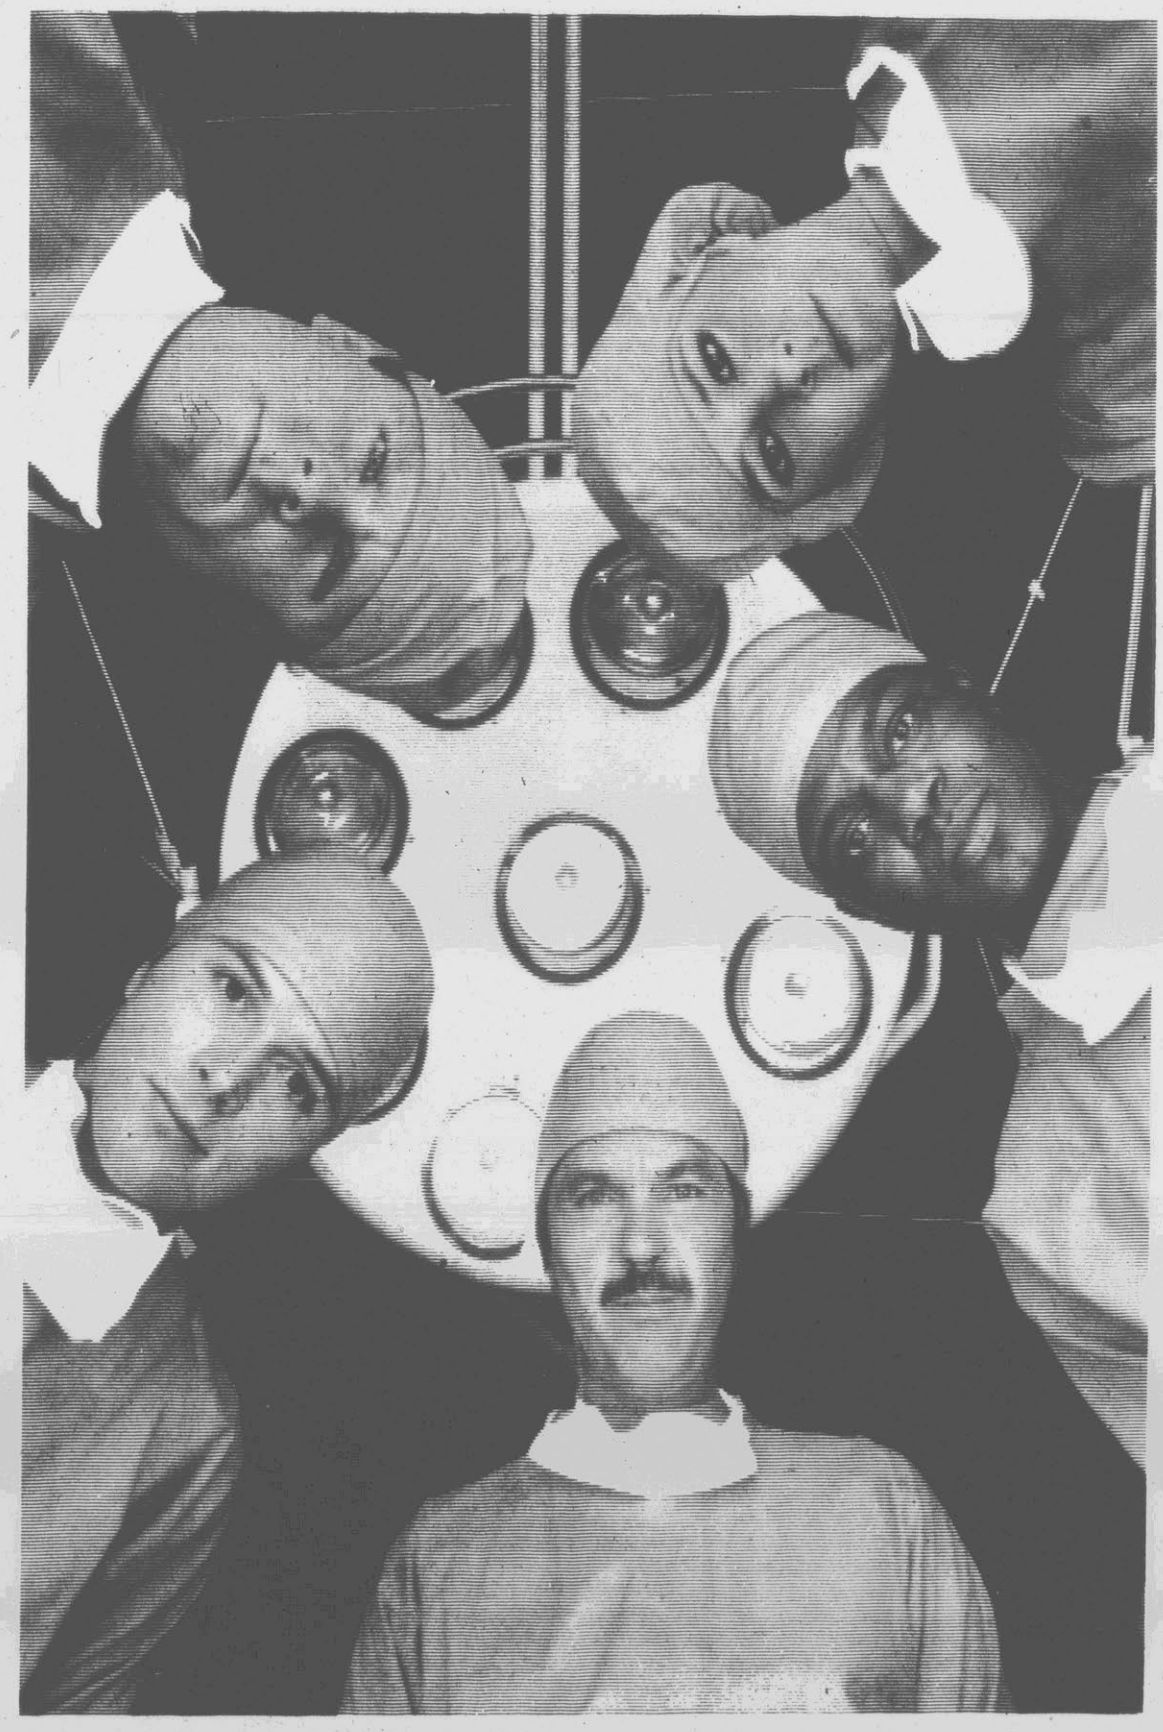

ABC's attempt to bring "Casablanca" to television in 1955 was unsuccessful, mainly because where do you find the person to play Rick, the role made famous by Bogart? It was impossible to find a Bogart clone, so Wolper took the opposite route. His choice did result in several quizzical glances, including one from the network.

"An NBC executive had other ideas," says Wolper, "but I was casting Rick, not Bogart. David Soul is a good actor and he's perfect for the role. He's not the guy on 'Starsky and Hutch.' He's Rick, a private, mysterious person."

The series' five-show run takes place before the United States entered World War II when "Casablanca was the crossroads of the world," says Wolper. "It was filled with romance, intrigue and mystery."

Wolper says the series will be also. He gets an A for authenticity after acquiring the original "Casablanca" set plans and rebuilding "Rick's Cafe Americain," with the film's original doors and the chandelier. Wolper also hired an 80-year-old cameraman and a 70-year-old makeup artist to help recreate the era.

"We're not using conventional TV photography," says Wolper. "It's more like a film because we use lots of shadows and muted colors."

"Ryan's Four," ABC's new limited-run series, features several interns at a large metropolitan hospital. The Wednesday evening series stars Tom Skerritt (mustache) as Dr. Thomas Ryan with the young doctors played by (clockwise from Skerritt); Timothy Daly, Dirk Blocker, Lisa Eilbacher and Albert Hall.

IN FOCUS

'Pegs' are searching for ratings success

By Peter Meade

The key to success for first-year high schoolers Patty Greene and Lauren Hutchinson is to be accepted as popular members of the "in crowd" at Weemawee High. For their first-year show, "Square Pegs," the key to success is acceptance as popular members of TV's "in crowd," the Nielsen ratings.

Sarah Jessica Parker

When the half-hour comedy went into reruns recently in a new Wednesday night time slot, neither goal had been achieved.

If Sarah Jessica Parker, who plays the brainy but bespectacled Miss Greene, had her wish it would be instant popularity for the CBS series. The 18-year-old has already achieved a degree of success for herself gauging by the 250 fan letters she receives a week.

"Most of the letters are from ninth-through-11th grade girls," says Miss Parker. "They say they are just like Patty or have a friend like Lauren. I also get a lot from guys in their late 20s, who wish they had a girl like Patty. The hard part is answering them all right away to let them know I care, but I do answer them all personally."

Despite her popularity, the show has barely received a passing grade in Television Success. This has been a source of constant consternation for series creator Anne Beatts.

"Anne's insight into high school is beyond most high schoolers," says Miss Parker, who admits she doesn't always understand the things Patty and her classmates say. This is a contributory factor in the show's ratings problem.

"The show has an urban contemporary taste, so we haven't done well in the bible belt," she explains. "Also, if people can't accept something different on television, they don't watch. Maybe the title is a turn-off."

When Miss Parker first did the pilot for the show last March, she didn't understand the title's meaning, and it wasn't until "Square Pegs" was fit into a round hole in the CBS schedule that she understood her good fortune.

"I never realized how many pilots were made a year," she says. "Later, I found out it was 200 or 300."

This was her second series opportunity. She won a lead in the 1980 series "Me and Maxx," but turned it down to take the title role in the Broadway show "Annie."

"I made the right decision," says Miss Parker. "I learned a lot about discipline from working in the theater."

Career Tomboy

Melinda Culea, who plays Amy in "The A-Team," started her career in third grade back in her home town of Western Springs, Ill., a suburb of Chicago.

Said Culea: "I usually played the crusty parts — witches, bad boys and the like — probably because I was a tomboy."

Lee's Two Loves

Lee Curreri, who plays Bruno on the series "Fame," loves music as much as he does acting.

"I balance my time between acting and music. In the show, I'm often playing the piano," said Curreri. "Sometimes I can get a little confused between my lines and the music notes."

Simon And CBS

Neil Simon will develop and write a new half-hour comedy series for CBS-TV for next season. The deal has been made for Simon to script the pilot script, but negotiations are now underway whereby the network may make an early production commitment on the proposed show.

Bowling On Cable

The Kessler Open will return to San Jose, California this summer and the finals will be televised by USA Cable Network according to PBA commissioner Joe Antenora. The tournament will be held at Futurama Bowl.

Double Duty

Young actor Giancarlo Esposito, who recently joined the cast of the popular serial "Guiding Light" as architecture student Clay Tynan, is currently doing double duty. Along with his continuing serial role, he is also appearing off-Broadway in the play "The House of Ramon Iglesias," currently playing at the Ensemble Studio Theatre. Esposito is a past recipient of an off-Broadway Obie Award for his acting.

New Soap To Air

Agnes Nixon and Douglas Marland, both Emmy Award-winning writers, have created a new daytime serial. "Loving" will premiere in a two-hour prime time motion picture Sunday, June 26 and will begin airing in its regular time period June 27 at 11:30 a.m. on ABC.

Tom Did Research

Tom Skerritt spent time observing the workings of three busy hospitals before tackling his title role in "Ryan's Four," which airs on ABC.

"I spent a week at each to see for myself the life of a staff doctor at a large metropolitan hospital," Tom said. "Something that sticks in my mind is that those hospitals are basically tiny cities within themselves. There's an electric-like current that is never very far below the surface — that even I felt — which has a tendency to keep you constantly alert. I really came away with renewed respect for the people who dedicate their lives to medicine.

"I also wish I had spent a week with the doctors, working on pronouncing medical terms."

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I was captivated by the "Winds of War" and David Dukes, who portrayed Leslie Slote. Who is this talented actor and what has he done until now? P. MYERS, LEXINGTON, N.C.

TO P. MYERS IN LEXINGTON: As a star, David Dukes has become one of the most respected young leading men in the American theatre, most recently on Broadway in "Bent" and "Armadeus" and in Los Angeles (where he currently resides) in "Key Exchange" and "Another Part of the Forest." If you juggle your memory bank a bit, you'll recall his stunning performance in the most unusual and powerful of all episodes of "All in the Family," he was the rapist who attempted to assault Edith. That particular episode was so realistic that it is still shown to police vice squads. His feature films include "The Wild Party," "A Little Romance," "The First Deadly Sin," and "Only When I Laugh" (as Marsha Mason's faithless boyfriend). A native of San Francisco, David is divorced and the father of a teenaged son.

DEAR MICHELE: I am a sophomore at Fayetteville State University, and I would appreciate it if you could give me some information on Eddie Murphy. Also, where can I write him? WANDA SMITH, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO WANDA IN FAYETTEVILLE: Comic genius Eddie Murphy is, without a doubt, one of the hottest actors in Hollywood or New York. With the tremendous success of his first feature film, "48 Hours," Murphy is highly bankable. Born in Brooklyn, New York, on April 3, 1961, Eddie began being outrageous at the age of 15, when he performed comedy at his high school in Roosevelt, New York. A year later, he moved his act to a nearby Long Island club, Richard M. Dixon's White House. Filling the void left by former "Saturday Night Live" players Belushi, Ackroyd, Radner, Curtin, et al, was not easy, but Murphy's vast repertoire of alter egos boosted the series and gave it new impetus. Whether Eddie will return next season is still questionable. This June, he'll begin work on his second movie, "Traveling Places," with former 'SNL' alumnus Dan Ackroyd. Eddie is single and lives in Freeport, Long Island. Fans should write to him in c/o "Saturday Night Live," NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10020.

DEAR MICHELE: Can you tell us if the actress who portrays Julia Newman on "The Young and the Restless" played Liza on "Search for Tomorrow" several years ago? MARION AND SHELIA, ROXBORO, N.C.

TO MARION AND SHEILA IN ROXBORO: Actress Meg Bennett did, indeed, portray Liza Kaslo on 'SFT' in the mid-seventies. Meg, in addition to her current acting duties on 'Y&R,' is also writing for the show.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

Scott is so popular he returns to 'ATWT'

By Nancy M. Reichardt

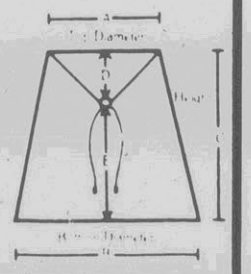

Although he's been absent from "As the Worlds Turns" for some time, Scandinavian-born actor Einar Perry Scott will most likely have reappeared on the show by the time this column is in print. It seems Scott was so popular with "ATWT" viewers that he's been brought back even after the show's writers had decided to drop his character of Nels, James Stenbeck's manservant.

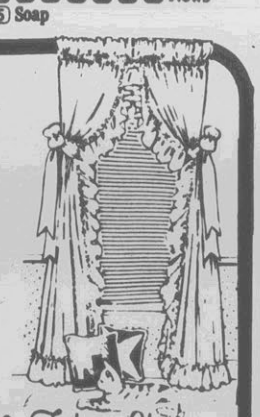

The word is out that "ATWT" headwriters Jerome and Bridget Dobson will be retiring from the soap writing business this month after a long and satisfying career. While Bridget continues working on a novel, Jerome will be getting some well-deserved "R and R" at the couple's California ranch. Back East, former "All My Children" writers Carol Franz and Jay Saffron will take over the "ATWT" writing reins.

An air date has been announced for the long-awaited new ABC soap by Agnes Nixon. It was formerly titled "Love Without End," but the new sudser will be called "Loving." It will debut as a two-hour prime-time motion picture on Sunday, June 26. The following day the half-hour show will begin airing in its regular time period at 11:30 a.m. (EDT). At press time no casting information was available for the soap, which will be produced by Joe Stuart (ex-"One Life to Live") and written by Douglas Marland (ex-"GH" and "GL") and Patrick Mulcahey.

Kin Shriner (Scotty Baldwin on "General Hospital") is turning theatrical producer along with former "Another World" actor Chris Knight (ex-Leigh Hobson). The two buddies are co-producing a new off-Broadway play, "Red Rover, Red Rover." Included in the cast is Helen Gallagher (Maeve Ryan on "Ryan's Hope").

Early Dancer

Kim Miyori, who co-stars as Dr. Wendy Armstrong in "St. Elsewhere," is a former professional dancer who began her career at age 5.

"I was actually dancing from before I could walk," said Miyori. "I always felt at one with my dancing. I lived to dance because it was instinctive and put me in touch with my emotions."

Not An Easy Life

"It's almost a curse to want to be one," said Ellen, who appears as Nurse Shirley Daniels on "St. Elsewhere." "You have to give up a lot. You need tunnelvision to succeed and there's so much competition. Few people succeed at it unless there's something inside them that they can't turn away from."

CINDY SAYS

Margaux's new movie; Caroline and the ballet

By Cindy Adams

NEW YORK — Margaux Hemingway is in New York filming "My Darling Shiksa." The script calls for Margaux to inject Elliott Gould with insulin then touch the spot with her lips. Said director Menahem Golan: "Just because of this scene my movie will get an 'R' rating."... Dolly Parton and her staff — that's half of L.A. and three-quarters of Nashville — arrived in foggy England for 10 days to tape the HBO special, "Dolly in London." Three vans were hired to haul her luggage... Bob Hope's Salute at Radio City on May 2 will benefit the New York Firehouse. To hype sales Susan Anton is flying in for two days. Who's subsidizing her trip? The NY Firehouse.

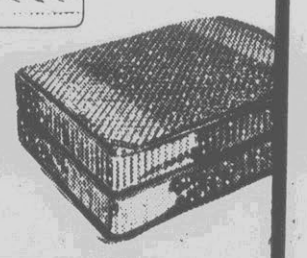

Dolly Parton lugging luggage

Mickey Rooney's nag, Zippy Peppy, won at Roosevelt. Paid $5.40... The party at Scoop celebrated Dr. Renee Richard's return to ophthalmology. She opened offices on Park Avenue... Caroline of Monaco will fulfill another of her mother's wishes. Princess Grace wanted the principality to have its own ballet company. Caroline is now organizing a local corps de ballet. The company will number 35... The networks are panting for another miniseries. CBS OK'd one about the guy who started the ball rolling in 1492, Christopher Columbus.

Lee Grant

Lee Grant, Director

Oscar and multiple Emmy winning actress Lee Grant will direct Jean Stapleton, Pamela Putch and Miss Grant's daughter, Dinah Manoff, in the upcoming NBC drama "The Women of Wilmar."

The two-hour World Premiere Movie is based on the actual events of eight Minnesota women, who, in 1976, struck their employer, a small-town bank, seeking wages comparable to their male counterparts.

Miss Manoff portrays Glennis Rasmussen, who, after starting work at the bank, finds out there is a significant difference in salary and advancement opportunities between male and female employees. Head teller Irene Wallin (Miss Stapleton) soon files a grievance against the bank and the pair is joined by six other female employees, including the outspoken Jane Harguth (Miss Putch). The eight form a union and begin a two-year struggle picketing the bank, even in sub-zero temperatures.

Think positively

Television veteran Morey Amsterdam will star with Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs and Heather O'Rourke from "Happy Days" on "Believe You Can... And You Can!"

The hour-long special will air Thursday, April 21 via an ad hoc network of more than 100 stations. The special, taped as Disneyland's new Fantasyland, features a mixture of animated figures combined with action and song.

Miss O'Rourke plays an imaginative 7-year-old whose life becomes an uncertainty when her family moves to a new home. When she follows her brother to Disneyland she meets Fantasyland's problem solver, Chiffy (Amsterdam), who introduces her to many Disney characters. The colorful group insist they can help her only if she "truly believes."

Hometown Hero

Bobby Vinton's scheduled one-night stand in his hometown of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on June 12, sold out so fast — he has agreed to extend the engagement for two additional days.

Bodine Is First

Geoff Bodine, 1982 Champion Spark Plug Rookie of the Year on NASCAR's Winston Cup Circuit, is eager to return to the Alabama International Motor Speedway for what could well be the fastest race in NASCAR history, the Winston 500 on May 1. Bodine's official entry was the first to be received. "That would be a great place to get my first win, wouldn't it?" said Bodine.

Official Victory

Gene Littler bagged his first official Senior PGA Tour victory by running away with the Daytona Beach Seniors Classic. He has won four unofficial events since joining the Senior Tour in 1980, but as he pointed out, "My banker didn't realize they weren't official."

Sixers/Celtics battle again

The Philadelphia 76ers and the Boston Celtics will play their last game of the regular season in Boston Garden, with CBS broadcasting the action on Sunday, April 17 (1 p.m.). Both of these Atlantic Division teams clinched their playoff berths several weeks ago.

The Sixers posted the best record in the NBA, and the Celtics, although dominated in their division, had one of the better records in the league. The NBA World Championship has been won 17 times by the team with the best record during the regular season, and 19 times by other clubs. In the last 10 years, however, the 1981 Celtics are the only team to compile the best record and go on to win the championship.

The addition of Moses Malone to the Sixers' roster has resulted in several notable quotes since the season began, including...

"Having Moses in the middle makes it simple for us," said Philadelphia point guard Maurice Cheeks. "You run the ball upcourt, and if what you want isn't there you just throw it to him. At the other end he rebounds the ball, sends it out to us and we run."

Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham put it another way: "Moses is a horse. He just works and works."

"Having Moses will force (Boston's) Robert Parish to play his man honest and keep him from helping out on everyone else," said Philadelphia's premier forward Julius Erving. "Before, Parish would block five or six shots a game on us by helping out on other players driving the lane. Now he can't do that because Moses keeps him honest."

The Sixers' guard Clint Richardson says Malone pays dividends for Philadelphia even before the opening tap. "Teams, instead of warming up, are watching us," he said. "I think just having him is a big psychological help."

Boston's M.L. Carr, when asked about Malone's big contract: "I wouldn't mind being Moses' wife. She's the one who'll get to spend all that money, isn't she?"

Malone's league-leading 15-plus rebounds per game has been a major force behind Philadelphia's new-found strength on the boards. "We knew Moses was a great offensive rebounder," said coach Cunningham, "but he has also had a great impact on the defensive boards. It seems like offensive rebounding has been contagious on our team ever since we acquired Moses."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

This month will mark the 24th anniversary of what I think was one of the worst moments of television. It happened on the game show "County Fair," hosted by Bert Parks. A contestant was seated center stage with an enormous "firecracker" in his lap, while his blindfolded wife fitfully attempted to stamp out the fuse — she failed and the "cracker" went off. Buckets of flour fell on the hapless Manny Webber, and then the unexpected happened — he suddenly went up in flames — he jumped out of his chair and ran offstage while the audience screamed. "Whoa, we goofed," said Bert, bringing the nervously smiling wife back on camera — "That was close, but he's all right," he announced. The show cut to a commercial and no further mention was made of Mr. Webber, who was taken to a hospital with burns on his face, neck and hands.

Thank goodness we have come a long way since that memorable occasion and safety precautions are strictly adhered to, however, there are still occasional minor slip-ups in production that cause us a few chuckles, and we realize that after all — we are human.

In response to those of you who wrote in inquiring about the questionable scenes I alluded to in my March 27 column concerning "The Thorn Birds" — the answer is "no" — the scenes were not altered. In Barbara Stanwyck's death scene, she was visibly breathing after she "died." Miss Stanwyck has been suffering with bronchitis and as she said, "I am older now and cannot hold my breath for long periods of time." In view of her tremendous talent and the prestige of having her in the drama — she was allowed to breathe.

Also, it was clearly stated in a scene between Justine and Dane that she was 20 to his 19 years in age — however, when Dane was born and Justine came into her mother's room to see the "new baby," she was 2 1/2 to 3 years old (a rather long pregnancy).

The other inquiry concerns a religious matter, and I have learned long ago that you don't argue about religion and politics.

GENIE FRANCIS

star of TV's Bare Essence

What did you do last year between leaving General Hospital and starting your new series? — C.G., Plainfield, N.J.

I traveled, read, decorated, rode horses. But most of all, I learned an awful lot about myself. I changed and I grew. I was on General Hospital from age 14 to 19. I never really knew how to live like a normal person. On the show, they dressed me, put my makeup on, told me what to say. I was like a little robot. I had to figure out what I like to do in my free time. I had to find my place on earth. I missed all those years of social development, dating, seeing people my own age. I still haven't caught up completely, but I finally feel comfortable with myself when I'm not working.

LOS ANGELES — Bob Hope's first movie in more than 10 years (since 1972's Cancel My Reservation) will be Winchell, a biopic based on several books and other material about the late gossip columnist. The 79-year-old Hope will play Walter Winchell, at least from age 50 on, the years of his greatest fame. Hope would like the project, set to begin production in July for Hope Enterprises, to be a feature film but is toying with the idea of an NBC-TV two-parter with a younger actor playing the first half of Winchell's life.... Legendary B-movie director Roger Corman has the U.S. Navy Department's O.K. to launch the 15-hour TV miniseries Iwo Jima, based on James Corrigan's screenplay and focusing on the women left behind. Sound familiar? Corman points out that Corrigan's story was written before 1971's The Winds of War. Meanwhile, some familiar names, Burt Lancaster, Morgan Fairchild, Jane Seymour and Karl Malden, are being sought for the top roles.... Barbara Stanwyck, still suffering bronchial aftereffects from smoke inhalation due to a fire on the set of The Thorn Birds, says her work on that miniseries could well be her last. She recently even turned down The Love Boat's popular China cruise.... Seventeen years ago, Beverly Hills barber to the stars "Little Joe" Torrenueva started in business, charging clients like Larry Hagman and Robert Wagner what then seemed an exorbitant $10 for a haircut in his shop, $35 for a housecall. These days it's $80 in his Sunset Strip barber chair, a minimum of $250 for a housecall. —Robert Windeler

Jane Seymour

NEW YORK — Their celebrated battle in Kramer vs. Kramer brought Oscars to both Dustin Hoffman and Meryl Streep. And it turns out theirs was a stormy relationship offscreen as well, with the stars repeatedly arguing. At one point, according to a source on the set, Hoffman told Streep, "Meryl, why don't you stop carrying the flag for feminism and just act the scene."... It's going to be the year of living successfully for Australian film star Mel Gibson, now scorching screens with Sigourney Weaver in The Year of Living Dangerously. At last count, Gibson has received 17 U.S. movie offers.... You may think that the creators of TV's The Dukes of Hazzard constantly parade co-star Catherine Bach around in T-shirts and cutoffs just to increase the show's jiggle appeal. Maybe so, but Bach says that's actually what she wears offscreen, too.... Latest word on the upcoming film bio of the late Errol Flynn is that Roger Moore will portray the swashbuckling screen lover .... At 26, author Julie Davis has more books to her credit than years. She's written 28, including her latest, 30 Days to a Beautiful Bottom and How to Get Married.... Gregory Peck's daughter, Cecilia, is managing The Groceries. No, not a supermarket, but a new rock group. —Anita Summer

WASHINGTON — Don't look now but John Anderson may be running for President again. Because Independent Anderson got more than 6 percent of the vote in 1980, he claims he qualifies as a minor party candidate who can receive almost $6 million in Federal campaign contributions. The Federal Election Commission is studying Anderson's request. If it decides to fork out the millions, Anderson may soon launch a campaign for 1984.... It has been reported that more than 40 years before Watergate, Republican President Herbert Hoover may have ordered an illegal break-in into Democratic Party offices to steal a damaging political file. In his new book, Conflict of Duty: The U.S. Navy's Intelligence Dilemma, Rutgers University Professor Jeffrey Dorwart says that in 1930, when Hoover heard the Democrats might be holding information that could destroy him politically, he ordered a naval intelligence officer and a retired police inspector to break into the New York Democratic Party offices of a man named O'Brien — not to be confused with 1972 Democratic party leader Lawrence O'Brien, whose office was broken into by someone else.... On a recent shuttle flight between here and New York, veteran CBS newsman Mike Wallace and son Chris Wallace, NBC's White House correspondent, sat directly behind each other but exchanged nary a word. However, it was neither a case of network rivalry nor family feud. Both men were simply so preoccupied that they didn't notice each other until after the plane landed. Then father and son shared a taxi into town.

WHO'S ON THIRD?

THE BEST ATHLETES IN BASEBALL, THAT'S WHO!

BY MARK GOODMAN

UPI

The Yankees' Graig Nettles snares a smash: the best of baseball ballet

Paul Molitor, of the American League champion Milwaukee Brewers, is one of those baseball players so richly talented that he can play virtually any position on the diamond. As a result, he's done just that since the Brewers drafted him as a shortstop out of the University of Minnesota six years ago.

Robin Yount's presence at shortstop moved Molitor to second base, where he won an All-Star berth. Then he was sent to center field. Finally, stark need prompted the Brewers to switch Molitor to third base last year, where he committed 19 errors by the All-Star break. He closed out the season brilliantly on offense (.302 batting average, 19 home runs, 41 stolen bases). But even though he finally started to get the hang of things at the Hot Corner, he still wound up with a glum, league-leading total of 29 errors. Says Molitor, 26: "I learned everything about that position but how to love it. It's a challenge down there, especially because of all the great third basemen in the game. But there's no way I'm ever going to enjoy it."

Challenging but unlovable: That's as sharp a characterization of third base these days as you'll find anywhere. There was a time, as California Angel third baseman Doug DeCinces points out, "when the idea was to put power hitters at first and third and not worry about their gloves." Now, says the Hot Corner's grand old man, New York Yankee Captain Graig Nettles, 38, "Pitchers have come to rely on us in the field more and more over the years. On top of that, we're still expected to provide power at the plate."

If that sounds like a third sacker singing his own praises, will you take the word of Boston Red Sox catcher Gary Allenson, who flatly calls the current crop of major league third basemen "the best athletes in the game today." Adds Brooks Robinson, the best third baseman ever and one of only eight elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. (see box): "Right now there are more good third basemen around than I can ever recall. And it's also the best-played position in the game."

Says former Baltimore Oriole great Brooks Robinson, "Right now there are more good third basemen around than I can ever recall."

Do they exaggerate? Let the scorecard tell the story. The Philadelphia Phillies' Mike Schmidt, 33, was named the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1980 and 1981; George Brett, 29, of the Kansas City Royals was the American League M.V.P. in 1980 when he came within five hits of becoming the first player to hit .400 since Ted Williams did it in 1941. But who does Brett think is the best third baseman in the A.L. — leaving himself out? "Buddy Bell — leaving myself in," says Brett. "He's the best all-around player in the league." Indeed, the Texas Rangers' Bell, 31, son of former Cincinnati Reds outfielder Gus Bell, is a strong hitter who has won four straight Gold Gloves (awarded annually to the premier fielder at each position).

The list of outstanding third basemen goes on. California's DeCinces,

32, finished third to Milwaukee's Yount for A.L. Most Valuable Player in 1982. The Pittsburgh Pirates' Bill Madlock, 32, one of the best in the business at scooping bunts, has also won three N.L. batting crowns. Atlanta's Bob Horner, 25, should be one of history's most prolific home-run hitters before his career closes. Carney Lansford, 26, traded this winter from the Red Sox to the Oakland A's, is tabbed by former Detroit Tiger third sacker George Kell (who was also voted into the Hall of Fame this winter) as "one of the five best players in the league."

Several of these exceptional athletes — surely Schmidt and Brett — are ticketed for the Hall of Fame once their day is done. But note the curiosity that, in more than a century of baseball, only eight third basemen have been so honored — the fewest of any position on the diamond. That raises the question: Why did so many great prospects suddenly wind up at third? Answer: Because they are needed now more than ever before in the history of the game.

DeCinces points out one crucial reason why: "Pitchers are throwing more

Only eight third basemen have been elected to the Hall of Fame, the fewest of any position on the diamond.

curveballs and sliders now, so a lot more ground balls are coming our way. That simply makes us more visible than our predecessors." True. Third base was dubbed the Hot Corner back in 1889 on a day when Cincinnati's Hick Carpenter was roasted by seven line drives off Brooklyn Dodger bats. Hence, the myth. The reality was that for years third base could virtually be occupied by a defensive somnambulist — as long as he came awake at the plate with a stout bat.

The reason was that big-league pitchers generally relied largely on their smoking fastballs to cut down rival batters. The fastball usually causes the hitter to do one of three things: (a) strike out (b) pop up or (c) hit the ball up or over the middle. Thus the traditional heart of any defense has been right up the middle — the shortstop, second baseman and center fielder.

But a fastball can also fly out of the ball park even faster than it arrives at the plate. In the 50's and 60's, a spate of powerful hitters with crack reflexes — Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and third basemen Eddie Mathews and Harmon Killebrew, to name a few — were laying for fastballs and pounding them into pulp. After

THE BEST THERE EVER WAS

In 1955, a youngster out of Little Rock, Ark., came up to the Baltimore Orioles as a mildly promising second baseman. Mildly promising because he had good reflexes, but little speed and a suspect bat. Further, he was a baseball curiosity — an infielder who was naturally left-handed and did nothing with his right hand but throw a baseball.

Then, after a few uninspired games at second, Brooks Robinson was moved over to third, where he wound up throwing that baseball across major-league diamonds for 23 years. In that time, he won 16 consecutive Gold Gloves and made his name a generic term for excellence at third base. As a fitting tribute, Robinson recently became the 14th player in history to be voted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

Only six men at that position have been chosen before Brooks and fellow 1983 inductee George Kell: Frank (Home Run) Baker, Fred Lindstrom, Jimmy Collins, Pie Traynor, Eddie Mathews and, from the old Negro Leagues, a splendid acrobat named Judy Johnson.

Robinson is one of the few players ever to be named to the Hall of Fame almost purely on the basis of his defensive play. True, he was a dandy clutch hitter who stroked 268 home runs in his lifetime. In 1964, the year he was named American League M.V.P., he even batted .317 with 118 runs batted. But he won his spikes for his incredible play down at the Hot Corner. Few men ever carved themselves such a glorious niche in championship play as Robinson did in the 1970 World Series, when he single-handedly shut down numerous Cincinnati Red rallies with dazzling, diving catches and leaping throws to first base that brought the crowds screaming to their feet.

Baltimore won the series in five games (in which Brooks also batted .429), and when he was named series M.V.P. and awarded the automobile that went with the honor, Redleg slugger Johnny Bench wanly observed: "The rumor is that the car has an oversize glove compartment."

Reflecting on his swift election to Cooperstown, Brooks says, "I think this is a blow struck for defense in baseball. The Hall of Fame has always been power oriented. So, for that matter, is traditional baseball thinking. Every time I would go to negotiate a contract, the Oriole front office only wanted to hear about home runs, runs batted in and batting average. Now general managers will award great contracts to an infielder who saves two runs a game. It's about time somebody recognized the defense."

Brooks never suffered from lack of recognition. His performance in that 1970 World Series, in which he admits, "I never had another five games like that in my whole career," made Robinson a national celebrity. He has parlayed his fame nicely in retirement. The 45-year-old Robinson lives in the handsome Maryland suburb of Lutherville with his wife, Connie, and their four children, and broadcasts 52 Oriole games a year for WMAR-TV. He also represents Crown Royal liquor distributors, as well as more than 50 professional athletes in his role as vice president of Personal Management Associates.

For all the honors granted him, though, Robinson's proudest trophy is the third-base bag presented him by his successor, Doug DeCinces, during 1977's Brooks Robinson Day at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium. Says Robinson: "Hell, I loved that position. I didn't have the range and speed of guys like Paul Molitor, who could play anyplace on the field. Where would I have been without third base?"

surrendering more than their fair share of home runs, pitchers began experimenting more and more with dipping sliders and hard, dancing curves. Right-handed batters tend to get out in front of such pitches and drive them into the ground and down the third-base line. Also, teams began searching for left-handed hurlers to balance their pitching rosters, and right-handed hitters tend to pull the ball against lefties. Finally, more teams began platooning players, sending seven or eight right-handed hitters to the plate against left-handed pitchers.

All these factors translated into more action for third basemen. Says Eddie Yost, a third baseman with the Washington Senators in the 1940's and 50's and now a Red Sox coach, "The fastball used to cause so many pop-ups that I seemed to spend half my time in foul territory. On the ground, I was lucky to get two or three chances a game. Never did I get as many balls as these guys get today."

To illustrate the point: Of history's 10 highest single-season assist (ground ball) totals by a third baseman, nine have come since 1962. Nettles set the record, 412, in 1971.

Thirty years ago, no team would have moved a player of Molitor's gifts to third base. The same could be said of Lansford, who came up as an outsized shortstop. In another day, he would have been switched to, say, center field. Instead, he went to third. "I found out it was the toughest position on the field," he says. "I got burned for 30 errors that first year."

What makes the position so tough is the wide variety of responses it requires in addition to a quick and accurate throwing arm. Brett thinks the hardest play is the swinging bunt, which he has to encircle from behind the bag and scoop up with one hand in order to make the putout at first. Molitor says the toughest move to master is the diving backhanded stop, which veterans such as Nettles have turned into the best of baseball ballet. Consequently Molitor and other young players tend to "cheat" toward the third-base line to stop those blistering line smashes. Even veterans such as Cleveland's Toby Harrah, 34, who enjoyed his best season ever in 1982, will do that. "I'd rather give up two singles to my left than a double down the line," he says. "Two singles give you runners on first and second and a chance for the double play."

On the other hand, artificial turf has made the bouncing chopper between the hole at third and shortstop harder than ever to flag down. The Pirates' Madlock, after spending years studying ground balls hit to the left side of the infield, says, "I'm just about the opposite of Harrah. More balls go through the hole, so my philosophy is to set up there and not worry about the smash down the line — you're not going to get it anyway."

There is one dread thing that all third basemen must constantly concentrate on, at peril to their bodily health: the line shot smack in front of them. All theorizing stops at that point. Says DeCinces: "If a pitcher is throwing 90 miles an hour, the ball comes off the bat going 180. That doesn't give you much time, and you'd better be ready to take one off your chest."

So the third basemen have learned to look for every possible edge. For one, most of them have followed Nettles's lead and started playing deeper behind the bag. "The main reason," he says, "is that I realized 10 years ago that not many people are going to bunt anymore. And playing deep gets you a better angle on balls hit to either side." Modern manufacture provides another trump. Old-timers will grumble about the "motormen's gloves" they had to use; by comparison, the oversized glove favored by a number of today's players looks no smaller than, say, your average-sized jai alai basket. Says the Indians' Harrah: "Some of the other guys around the league laughed at me when I started using one. But when I showed them I could get 30 more balls a year with the big glove, they stopped laughing and started ordering."

Of course, the glove cannot make the man. And by all accounts, the man among today's third basemen is Mike Schmidt of the Phillies. He has now won seven consecutive National League Gold Gloves along with his two M.V.P. awards and five home-run crowns. Says teammate Pete Rose, a former third baseman himself, "Sure he's the best third baseman in the league. He's the best player in the league, so it stands to reason he's the best third baseman." Adds Phillie Manager Pat Corrales, who used to manage Bell with the Rangers: "In the field, it's too close to call between Schmidt and Bell. Overall, I'd have to give Schmidt the edge on power."

Not to mention speed and flair. Once, Schmidt overthrew second base and kept running into right field to recover his own error. Another time he set sail for the fence when a ball bounced over the left fielder's head, ran it down and threw back to the infield to hold the runner at second. Yet another time he cut down a chopper into the hole and fired the ball into the dirt at first. The batter rounded first and started for second as Rose raced over to the stands to retrieve the ball. Meanwhile, Schmidt kept running toward first, took the throw from Rose and tagged out the runner before he could scramble back to the bag. No one in baseball can recall another instance in history in which a third baseman has made a put-out at first base.

Power at the plate; panache in the field; these are the hallmarks of today's third basemen. So move over, Brooks, and make room for an expanding Hot Corner in Cooperstown. FW

PARTY-PERFECT LASAGNA SURPRISE

By Marilyn Hansen

SAUSAGE AND SPINACH LASAGNA

Sausage-Tomato Sauce:

- 4 tablespoons olive or vegetable oil
- 1 cup finely chopped onions
- 4 cloves garlic, chopped
- ½ lb. sweet-style Italian sausage, skinned and chopped
- ½ lb. hot-style Italian sausage, skinned and chopped
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil leaves, or 1½ teaspoons dry basil leaves
- ½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
- Few twists freshly ground black pepper
- 2 cans (6-oz. size) tomato paste
- 2 cans (2-lb. 3-oz. size) Italian-style plum tomatoes, undrained, crushed

Spinach and Ricotta Filling:

- 2 lbs. ricotta cheese
- 1 cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
- 1 lb. spinach, washed
- 6 eggs, lightly beaten
- ¼ cup milk or cream
- ½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
- Few twists freshly ground black pepper
- Dash ground nutmeg
- 2 lbs. curly lasagna noodles or 2½ lbs. freshly made lasagna noodles
- 1 pkg. (8 oz.) mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced
- ¼ cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
- 2 tablespoons olive or vegetable oil

1. Make up Sausage-Tomato Sauce: In a large saucepan or Dutch oven, heat olive oil until hot but not smoking. Add onion, garlic and chopped sausages; cook over medium heat, stirring until meat is cooked through and onion and garlic are tender.

2. Add basil, salt, pepper, tomato paste and tomatoes; mix well. Heat mixture to boiling, reduce heat and simmer uncovered for 10 minutes, until thick.

3. Make Spinach and Ricotta Filling: In a large bowl, combine ricotta and grated Romano; mix well.

5. Add chopped spinach, eggs, milk, salt, pepper and nutmeg to ricotta-Romano mixture. Mix well to combine.

6. In a large stockpot, bring 6 quarts water to boiling, salting to taste. Add 1 lb. lasagna noodles to the boiling water gradually so that water continues to boil. Boil noodles 8 to 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until al dente or still somewhat firm to the bite. (They will cook further in the baking process.) Add 1 cup of cold water to stop cooking process. Drain lasagna and return it to cooking pot, adding a little warm water to facilitate handling and prevent sticking together.

7. Assemble casserole: In a 9×13×2-inch greased baking dish, layer half of sausage-tomato sauce, lasagna and half of spinach and ricotta filling, beginning and ending with sauce. Top casserole with thin slices of mozzarella and a sprinkle of grated Romano and olive oil. Cook remaining 1 lb. of noodles and layer in second baking dish as described in steps 6 and 7.

8. Lasagna may be baked right away in preheated 425° oven for about 30 to 40 minutes, or until bubbly throughout. Or casserole may be wrapped and sealed in a large plastic bag, overwrapped and sealed with foil, labeled and frozen.

9. Allow 24 hours to thaw casserole in refrigerator. Place defrosted casserole in preheated 400° oven and bake for about 60 to 70 minutes, or until bubbly throughout. Makes 16 servings

Note: This recipe can be halved: Arrange lasagna in a 9×13×2-inch baking dish, bake and/or freeze as described above.

FROZEN TUTTI-FRUTTI CREAM

- 1 cup chopped, mixed candied fruit, glaceed cherries, well-drained maraschino cherries or orange peel
- ½ cup maraschino or amaretto liqueur
- 1½ cups sugar
- ½ cup water
- 6 egg whites
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- 2 cups chopped toasted almonds or 1½ cups chopped toasted almonds and ½ cup chopped pistachio nuts
- 1 qt. heavy cream

1. Place candied fruit in a small bowl, pour liqueur over and let soak until ready to use.

2. In a medium saucepan, combine sugar and water. Heat to boiling, stirring until sugar dissolves; continue boiling, uncovered, until syrup reaches soft-ball stage, 236° on a candy thermometer.

3. Place egg whites in a large bowl and beat until soft peaks form when beaters are slowly raised. Slowly pour the hot syrup into the egg whites, beating at high speed as you pour. Continue to beat until mixture forms stiff peaks; chill. Meanwhile, place another large bowl and beaters in refrigerator to chill.

4. Mix almond extract into soaked fruits; fold along with almonds into chilled meringue.

6. Turn mixture into three 1-qt.-size containers or molds; cover and freeze.

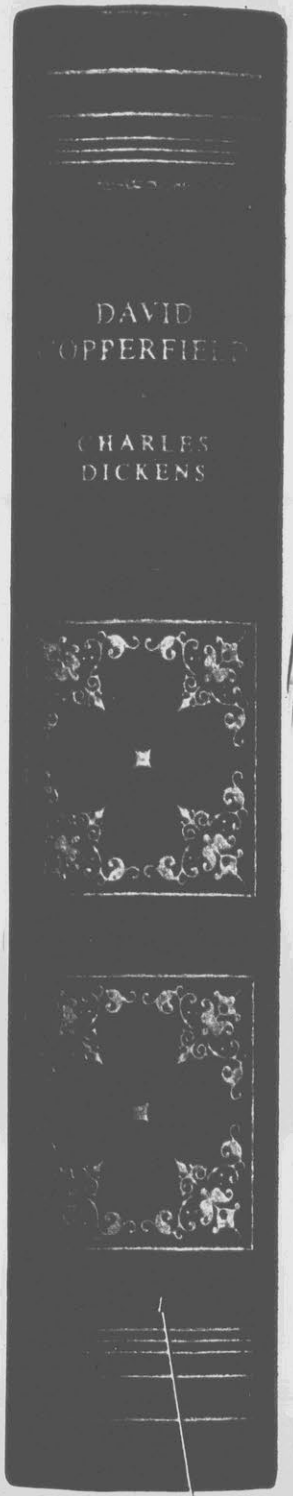

7. If Tutti-Frutti mixture is molded, unmold and decorate with halved candied cherries, whole blanched almonds and whipped-cream rosettes. Return mold to freezer to harden rosettes.

WRONG. WRONG. WRONG. The price, of course, is only $12.50 for David Copperfield and every other volume of the new Collector's Library of the World's Great Books.

Again and again, Franklin Library, the world's leading publisher of fine books, has seen its remarkable new Collector's Library confound the experts.

(The effect in your room is uncanny. Each volume different but harmonious. A luxurious library that is a tribute to your taste.)

The page edges are gilded; the paper, itself, is crisp, opaque, specially milled and acid free to last for generations.

Many artists were commissioned for the project. And the illustrations are magnificent. (The color paintings by Thomas Rowlandson in TOM JONES make us tingle with pleasure.)

The typography is classic, the printing first rate, the contents immortal and priceless.

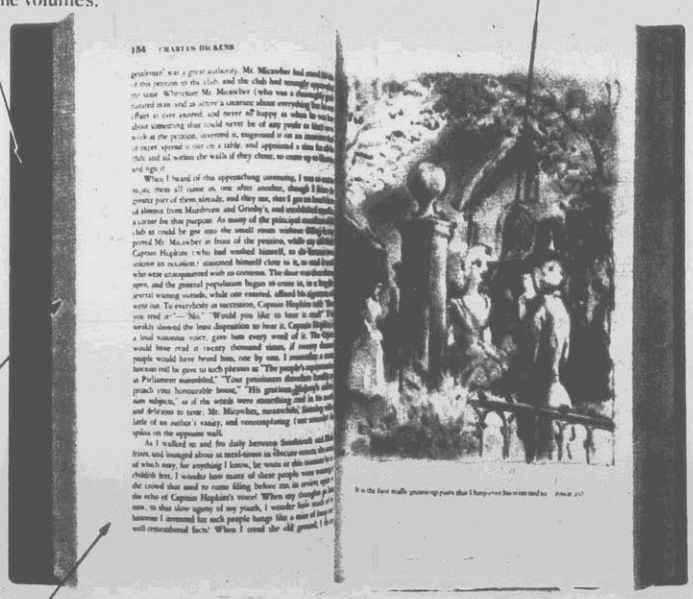

Yet the price for each volume is only $12.50, less, as you know, than many ordinary hardcover books.

It is a publishing conundrum with a simple, albeit spectacular answer. Franklin Library has made a publish-

PEOPLE QUIZ

DO YOU SINGLE OUT YOUR FRIENDS WHEN YOU'RE LONELY?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How well educated you are can determine how often you feel lonely.
2. The less lonely you are, the less stress you feel.
3. Research shows that many people never feel lonely.
4. You can be lonely even if you have a lot of friends.
5. If you do not trust others, you probably are often lonely.
6. You can't be very lonely if you care about someone who cares about you.
7. As people grow older and become better adjusted to life, loneliness is rarely a problem.

ANSWERS

1. True. Researchers from the University of Southern California administered loneliness, health and psychosocial tests to men and women from various walks of life. They found that the people who are the least subject to loneliness tend to be more educated, have a well-defined purpose in life and are in the best physical health.

2. True. A team of behavioral specialists at Southern Illinois University tested male and female undergraduates at the college and concluded that the less lonely a person is, the less he or she is affected by stress. The researchers associated mild and moderate as well as intense levels of loneliness with a poor adjustment to stressful situations.

3. False. Undergraduates at New York University were asked whether they considered themselves lonely people. Only one person denied ever feeling lonely. More than one half of the subjects reported that they sometimes felt lonely; 11 percent felt lonely often or most of the time; and 36 percent reported they rarely felt lonely. In addition, 37 percent reported that their loneliness was severe in intensity.

4. True. Studies at Wake Forest University (North Carolina) showed that it's not how many friends you have but the extent to which you reveal your feelings and thoughts to others that determines how vulnerable to loneliness you are. The study showed that lonely people tend to disclose significantly less about themselves to others than persons who are seldom lonely. The latter enjoy exchanging confidences with friends and find mutual self-disclosure one of the most interesting and rewarding aspects of social intercourse. The findings concluded that a person's reluctance to share his desires and feelings about things with others impairs the normal development of social relationships and inhibits a feeling of closeness, which results in a state of loneliness.

Researchers sought ties between distrust and loneliness.

5. True. According to a Wake Forest University study, lonely people do not trust other people. This lack of faith in the good will of others can be a motive in a person's failure to disclose personal information. Also, Johns Hopkins University studies on the influence that shyness has on loneliness showed that shy individuals are significantly lonelier than unshy individuals.

6. True. A San Diego State University study affirmed that loneliness is precipitated by a lack of relationships of mutual caring.

7. False. A University of Southern California study cited findings showing that loneliness was a particular problem later in life. It reported that "after illness, crime and financial insecurity, a representative sample of Americans of middle age or older rated loneliness as the next major problem." FW

DOES 60 lbs. OF TOMATOES FROM ONE YIELD SOUND INCREDIBLE?

NOT IF YOU OWN THE Amazing TREE TOMATO

(Cyphomandra betacea)

GROWS INDOORS OR OUTDOORS . . . YOU PICK BASKET AFTER BASKET OF RIPE, TASTY TOMATOES . . . ONE BUMPER CROP AFTER ANOTHER . . . 5 TO 7 MONTHS A YEAR . . . YEAR AFTER YEAR!

We Get Letters!
Read what L. F. S. of Wisc. has to say . . . ". . . Just a line to let you know the Tree Tomato is doing great . . . about 5½ ft. tall . . . you said leaves grew 12" . . . mine are 15 and 16". It's just beautiful!"

Noted Citriculturist of New Zealand says:
"Ripening in New Zealand from late April to early November, the tree tomato has a very long fruiting season. Its wide range of culinary uses make it a valuable winter and spring fruit . . . a welcome addition to the menu." "Although introduced into New Zealand many years ago, it is only in recent years that the tree tomato has become better known for its many uses. It is now much sought after, and its popularity is indicated by the high price realized for it on local markets . . . Under suitable conditions the plant will produce from 40 to 60 lbs. of fruit annually."

From New Zealand comes the biggest garden sensation of the century . . . THE PERENNIAL TOMATO!

GROW IT OUTDOORS AS A TREE—INDOORS AS A HOUSEPLANT!
The TREE TOMATO will thrive marvelously—indoors or out! If you live in a temperate zone, plant it outdoors and enjoy its bountiful, exotic beauty in your garden! Or, tub-grow the TREE TOMATO, bring it indoors for winter, and surprise your family and friends with ripe, just-picked tomatoes even during the coldest months of the year! Or . . . cultivate the TREE TOMATO as a house-plant anytime . . . anywhere! The TREE TOMATO will achieve heights of up to 8 ft. outdoors, but it can be trimmed and trained to any size or shape you wish!

ENJOY TREE TOMATOES SO MANY DELECTABLE WAYS!
We think TREE TOMATOES are much tastier than ordinary tomatoes . . . it's hard to find a meatier, firmer, more bursting-with-goodness taste treat! Rich in Vitamin C, TREE-TOMATOES are fabulous in salads, sandwiches and are absolutely fantastic just sliced up and popped in your mouth!

Nothing beats fresh produce, so why continue to pay high supermarket prices for inferior tomatoes, when you can grow your own TREE TOMATOES! REMEMBER, WE SHIP MATURE PLANTS . . . NOT SEEDS . . . ORDER YOUR TREE TOMATOES TODAY! Full growing instructions included.

The TREE TOMATO . . . a remarkable new horticultural concept . . . unlike anything you've ever seen before! NOT a vine . . . NOT a regular tomato plant that withers and dies after one summer . . . the TREE TOMATO is a living, growing tree that BEARS FRUIT SEASON AFTER SEASON . . . YEAR AFTER YEAR! Why settle for garden-fresh tomatoes a few short weeks of the year? Why put up with hothouse tomatoes that taste like cardboard the rest of the time? Not when you can pick crop after crop of red, plump juicy TREE TOMATOES up to 7 months a year (all year 'round when grown indoors!)

WAVE AFTER WAVE OF SUCCULENT TREE TOMATOES GROW AS QUICK AS YOU CAN PICK 'EM!
Your TREE TOMATO will arrive already leafed-out . . . in full, green hardy vigor! When ready to bear, the branches will literally droop with huge clusters of delicious TREE TOMATOES, hundreds upon hundreds . . . and, as one crop is harvested, another rushes forth to take its place . . . so you have a virtually constant supply of luscious TREE TOMATOES!

LAKELAND'S DOUBLE GUARANTEE
All plants must arrive in perfect condition. If you are not totally satisfied with any order, return within 10 days for a prompt replacement refund of purchase price (except post. & hdlg.). And all plants must thrive after planting, or return anytime within 3 months for prompt replacement—no questions asked!

HOW MOOD VIDEO CAN TURN OFF YOUR CARES

Jack Tinney

By Kathy Hacker

It's been a horrid day. Your nerve endings are as frazzled as a punk rocker's hairdo. Your brain cells have short-circuited. You could try a drink, perhaps, or put in an emergency call to your therapist. But no, as a true child of the electronic age, you head straight for the video cassette recorder, pop in your favorite tranquilizing tape and settle down in front of the television.

For the next hour, the screen will be filled with soothing pastoral scenes — birds darting hither and yon, trees swaying in a spring breeze, rays of sun glimmering on the surface of a creek — with appropriate chirping and tweeting sounds in the background.

Depending on just how much stress you're feeling, you may decide on an additional anesthetizing dose, perhaps "Video Fish," a tape depicting exotic marine life gliding about an aquarium.

If such an evening strikes you as something less than stimulating, that's entirely the point. Since arriving on the consumer market less than three years ago, these so-called "environmental videotapes" have attracted a small but steadily growing band of devotees who've embraced the product as the ideal sedative for the tuned-in 80's. The tapes — variously nicknamed video Valium, mood video and video Muzak — have even made some inroads into the medical community.

"It's fantastic — it hypnotizes patients and literally puts them to sleep," enthuses Dr. Lee Metcalf, an Anaheim, Calif., dentist who plays "Video Fish" in his treatment room for jittery clients under the drill.

Whatever the tapes' tranquilizing powers may be for ordinary nervous wrecks, they've had quite the opposite effect on their producers, who've been frantically scurrying to supply the market with more mellowed-out cassettes. (The tapes are sold through video dealers and mail order at prices ranging generally from $35 to $50.)

"We call it passive programming because the tapes are not designed for somebody to really watch continuously," explains Jim Spencer, president of Environmental Video Inc., which offers a series of 60-minute tapes of West Coast scenery. "Viewers can sit and have a conversation and take a look when they want to."

But exactly how relaxing are they? The Los Angeles-based Candle Corporation, which spawned "Video Fish," recently brought on board an experimental psychologist, Dr. Robert Jansen. A specialist in visual perception and stress, Dr. Jansen plans to set up a test to measure this tape's effects on anxious subjects; if his hunch is right, the results could be similar to those of a University of Pennsylvania study in which dental patients watching a real aquarium registered dramatic reductions in heart rate and blood pressure. Until then, though, "we don't know for a certainty what the tape does or does not do," he says.

Some social scientists fret that the soporific tapes will serve only to feed the land with video zombies. But the cassettes' defenders will have none of that grim prophecy. Among them is Josephine Laventhol, director of patient education at Montefiore Medical Center in the Bronx. Ever since late 1979, a series of environmental tapes dubbed "Video Wallpaper" — from Nebulae Productions — has been beamed onto the TV sets in patients' rooms between 10 A.M. and 6 P.M. daily. And the response, Laventhol says, has been "very, very positive.

"One man was quite ill after chemotherapy," she reports, "yet he said these tapes totally took his mind off the way he felt. In fact, I keep telling my staff that it wouldn't be a bad idea if all of us took some time each day and did the same thing."

Stay tuned for variations on video Muzak. One company is considering putting out a collection aimed not only at relaxing viewers but also breaking such stubborn habits as overeating, with an offscreen psychologist offering suggestions and encouragement.

"The function of the TV set has been expanding," says Dr. Jansen, who foresees the environmental cassette as the sleeper of the decade. "I think these tapes have the potential to be our lifelong friends." FW

ROACH PRUFE, #1 in University Tests

In a report released by the UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA and published by the ENTOMOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF AMERICA, eight commercial and test products that included a broad spectrum of insecticides were tested against a product called "ROACH PRUFE." The tests were conducted in heavily infested apartments and showed at the end of the 8 week test period that with a single application of ROACH PRUFE in each apartment, the roach population was reduced by an average 99.5%. By comparison, with the worst results were two widely recognized insecticides currently used in aerosols and applied by exterminators. They showed a 0% (no) reduction at the end of the 8 week tests.

Commenting in a letter, the University researchers stated: "Our experience under field conditions has shown that when properly applied, the ROACH PRUFE formula provides a degree of cockroach control that is usually superior to all other registered commercial or consumer products."

Disease Carriers Odorless, Easy To Apply

Alan Brite, holder of 15 U.S. and foreign patents has just been awarded the first of 3 U.S. patents pending on ROACH PRUFE. Brite says: "Because roaches simply do not recognize ROACH PRUFE as an insecticide, they do not try to avoid it by scattering to other parts of your residence as they do with other insecticides. Plus the electrostatically charged powder sticks to their bodies. They then carry the powder back into the walls spreading it among the other roaches. The result is you kill not only the roaches you see, but also those hiding and multiplying in the walls."

ROACH PRUFE is odorless, non-evaporating, non-staining and non-flammable. The powder is simply applied with a teaspoon under kitchen appliances and in other hidden areas. It can be used in homes, schools, hospitals, restaurants, plus new construction.

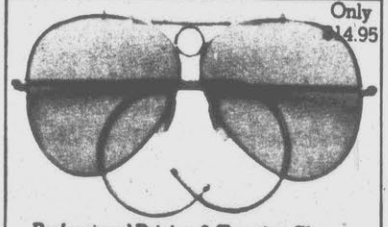

If ROACH PRUFE is not available at your local hardware store, the manufacturer will be glad to send it to you. To obtain a one pound container, just send a check or money order for $8.90, which includes postage. Add tax if you live in California. One pound covers up to a 9 room residence. You'll need an extra pound for a basement or garage. Send to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. 12 at 5147 W. Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90016. Copies of the University test are available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. A.

SYNOMETRICS...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

Turn Belly Fat into a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

...in 7 short minutes a day with the "miracle" of SYNOMETRICS ... the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping away ugly, embarrassing fat and flab ... to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim, handsome body!

Introducing IKE BERGER
Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes
• Olympic Gold medal winner

"I'm over 50, yet in just 7 days SPEED SHAPER™ 'burned' off the fat and flab I've lived with for thirty years."
"I thought my fat and flab was with me for life ... SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days"
HY HARRIS, New York, N.Y.

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS
You already know about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics. Millions of people use one or the other in their daily exercises. One day I accidentally discovered that if I used BOTH methods together in one single exercise, I automatically speeded up the results tremendously and I reduced my daily exercise hour down to only 7 short minutes.

THE SCIENCE OF SYNOMETRICS
I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is ... a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now ... build yourself a fantastic looking body with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

IRON CLAD MONEY BACK GUARANTEE
In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable, real results ... or your money back promptly and without any question.
• No diet needed if daily caloric intake does not add to present body weight.

Observations

Debt and taxes. "The Income Tax," noted humorist Will Rogers, "has made more Liars out of the American people than golf has." That was 1924. These days, the IRS figures tax cheats are beating Uncle Sam out of nearly $100 billion a year in income taxes. So what's government's response? More audits, penalties, withholding. Coming soon: a computerized phone system to dun delinquents at home. Sure, fair's fair–but don't forget the underlying problem: *Tax laws are too complicated, and tax rates are too high.

Cooked goose? "The art of taxation," said 17th Century French statesman Jean Baptiste Colbert, "consists in so plucking the goose as to obtain the largest...amount of feathers with the smallest possible amount of hissing." Modern-day politicians pluck subtly–with "higher taxes" passed off as "revenue enhancement" and hidden taxes on companies that you end up paying. Such taxes are as much a cost of doing business as wages or rent, so companies need to pass them on as higher prices. If your gasoline, for example, reflects the pattern for all oil products sold in the U.S., the price of a gallon includes less than six cents of profit–but twice that in invisible taxes!

"Why do you break your back with the long form?"

Profits 1, U.S. 7. The "real beneficiary" of profits, California Congressman Bill Dannemeyer explained to his constituents, "has been the U.S. Government (whose) share of these so-called 'obscene' profits totaled more than seven times what Mobil collected itself and over 23 times what Mobil's shareholders received." That was even before oil company earnings weakened and the windfall profits tax arrived–but once again you're hearing calls for an import fee or excise tax on crude oil that would boost your prices.

Simple alternative. Instead of looking for new taxes, isn't it time for government to work harder at spending less? Back in 1960, Uncle Sam spent $92 billion and still had a budget surplus of $269 million. Now, the outlook for fiscal 1983 is a bloated $208 billion deficit...unless Congress shrinks the planned $805 billion in spending. That deficit, and especially others planned for five more years, will rekindle inflation and run up the cost of borrowing–and so derail America's economic recovery. So while you're still scrambling to rebuild your own nest egg after this year's April 15 tax shock, let your congressional delegation know where you stand. Tell Uncle Sam how much his pinching hurts.

It's free: Our booklet, "Making Your Voice Heard in Washington," will show you how to get your message across to Congress more effectively–but it won't tell you what to say. For your free copy, drop a postcard to Box V at the address below. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

SUSAN SARANDON

A CLOSE ENCOUNTER WITH A FAR-OUT STAR.

Brigitte Lacombe/Liaison

People who think it strange that Susan Sarandon falls in love with a female vampire (played by Catherine Deneuve) in her new movie, The Hunger, should be reminded that this is the woman who dared to pose for the cover of a rock magazine with her boyfriend's name painted on her chest. Indeed, Sarandon has built her robust reputation as an actress with offbeat roles in such films as Joe, The Great Waldo Pepper, King of the Gypsies, The Rocky Horror Picture Show, Pretty Baby and Atlantic City (for which she received an Oscar nomination). More recently, she breezed through the movie Tempest in the role of a beautiful bohemian and portrayed an assault victim crazed with rage in the Off Broadway play Extremities. In August, she'll be co-starring with Richard Dreyfuss in the film The Buddy System. Sarandon, 36, has called herself "spacey," but in an interview with FAMILY WEEKLY's Mary Ellin Bruns she was mostly down to earth about her fears, her childhood and her feelings on relationships (including her 10-year marriage to actor Chris Sarandon, from whom she was divorced in 1979). She did, however, admit that she is a bit quirky and hungers to become even more so as she gets older.

Bruns: You once said that you like taking roles that frighten you. Was there anything that scared you about doing Extremities?
Sarandon: It frightened me to have to look into that side of my nature which everybody suppresses, which is the feeling that you could kill someone. I've never exposed such a dark side of my nature and it's certainly not an attractive side.

Q: Have you ever been so angry that you wanted to hurt or kill someone?
Sarandon: Yes. I had a man turn on me and get physically violent with me and I snapped. I broke every nail and I bruised myself terribly striking back. I was so shocked and hurt by the attack. I felt very, very strong feelings toward him. It triggered something primal in me.

Q: What was the most frightening thing that ever happened to you?
Sarandon: I went through a frightening time when I realized that there were no absolutes, when I really had to examine my expectations of the world and the way it worked, a period when I was forced to grow up and understand that love does not conquer all, that there is evil in the world. I think as a kid you're taught that if you're a good person and you love people that will make a difference and you can have some control over your life. And when you finally have to realize that the world is not that simple and that life is not fair, that is very frightening.

Q: You've said that you'd like people to recognize that you have a sense of humor. Do you laugh at yourself a lot?
Sarandon: Oh yeah, absolutely. I laugh at myself. When I don't is when I'm in trouble. I'm in awe of people who don't have a sense of humor. I don't know how you can live without a sense of humor and irony.

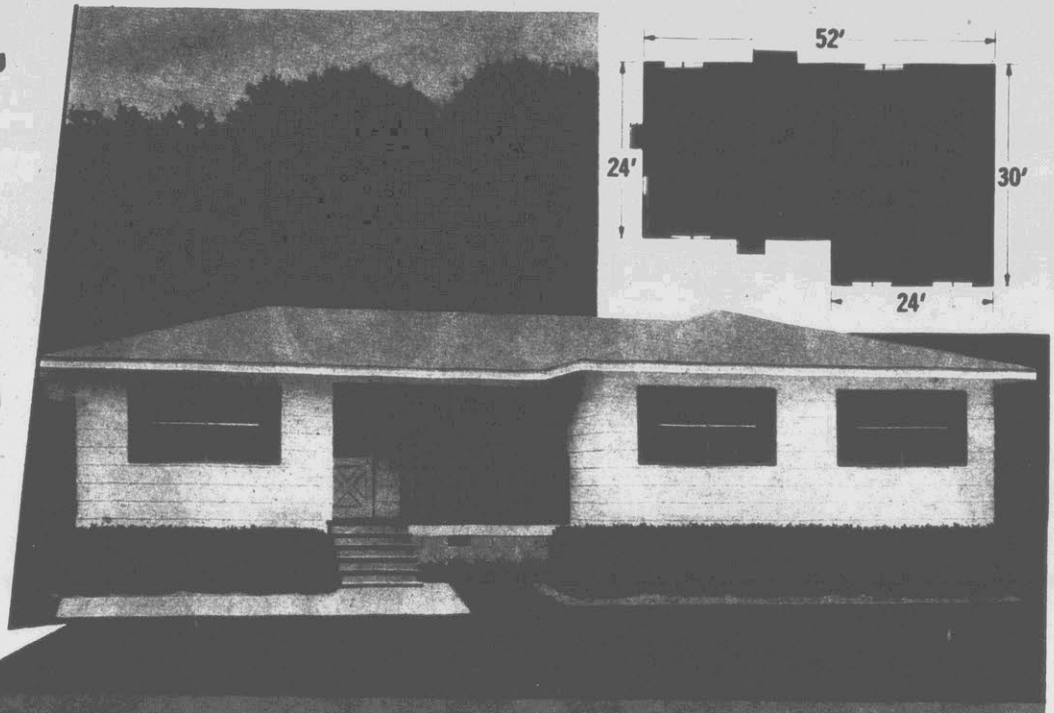

Q: What do you find most amusing about yourself?
Sarandon: Any time I'm desperate I'm hysterical. I mean desperation is very funny and sometimes I just have to stop and look at myself and say, "Why are you taking this so seriously?" I laugh at what life dishes up for me. You have to just keep laughing.

Q: What are your earliest childhood memories?
Sarandon: I remember sitting on the stairs and staring at the wall for hours. I remember cutting the arms off my sweaters and being punished for that. I remember my father making kites and taking me into an empty lot, and I remember falling down steps and laughing and looking up and seeing horror-stricken faces looking down at me. I had knocked out my front teeth.

Q: What were your parents like?
Sarandon: Very busy. My father worked. My mother just had all these children. Neither of them came from a real family. My mother was raised in an institution from the time she was 3. My father was raised by a brother. And

You may not believe it, but . . .

It's a FACT !

. . . but better financing can save you as much as $58,000 on a $35,000 home . . . and WE CAN PROVE IT!

Believe it or not, you CAN save as much as $58,000 on a new home, built on your property and financed by Jim Walter. What's more, your home will be paid for in 20, rather than 30 years, and your monthly payment to Jim Walter will be less . . . MUCH LESS! It sounds unbelievable, but it's TRUE! It's a FACT and we can prove it! While most other home financing is 13% or more, Jim Walter's annual percentage rate is still only 10%. For comparison, your monthly payment on a $35,000, 30-year mortgage at 13% would be $387.17. The monthly payment for a home with this cash price, built and financed by Jim Walter, would be only $337.70 . . . almost $50.00 less. That's fifty of your hard-earned dollars, and for only 240, not 360 monthly payments. Based on this comparison, the TOTAL SAVINGS on your mortgage will actually be

MORE THAN $58,000. IT'S A FACT!!!

Jim Walter can build your choice of beautiful homes with two, three or four bedrooms and one or two baths, from a selection of more than 20 models. Financing can be arranged in a matter of days, rather than weeks, and there will be no "points" or closing costs to increase what you will pay.

NO DOWN PAYMENT FOR QUALIFIED PROPERTY OWNERS

Jim Walter can begin construction almost immediately, almost anywhere that you own property. We'll complete the outside and, if you like, stop right there so that you can finish the interior at enormous savings. Or, we'll finish the inside, up to 90% complete. You tell us how much or how little you want to do. Remember, however, the more inside work you do for yourself, or with friends, the more money you'll save at today's labor costs.

Call, send the coupon, or visit the display park nearest you to get all the facts. We want you to know exact costs and what your monthly payment will be before construction even begins. We want to explain the many money-saving methods you can use to keep costs within your budget. When you have all the facts, we truly believe you'll choose Jim Walter. Then, together we'll build on your property to give you more home for less money than you might have imagined.

these two people met and had this huge family without very much experience or understanding. So they had their hands full.

Q: Were you a rebel in high school?
Sarandon: I wish I could say I was. I never fit in but I certainly was not a rebel. I wanted desperately to understand how things worked in high school and I never figured it out, never. I didn't know what girls talked on the phone for hours about. I didn't have a lot of close friends. I was a little too smart for the "in" kids and a little too wise-ass for the smart kids, and I wasn't allowed to go bowling or wear stockings or makeup or anything. My parents were fairly strict.

"I'm very lucky right now to have somebody very positive in my life, but I haven't thought past that. I don't know about getting married."

Q: Were you allowed to go on dates?
Sarandon: I dated somewhat, yeah, but I never even pretended that I fell in love. The boys had a strange kind of protective attitude toward me. They never got serious and never tried anything. I guess they knew that I didn't know what was going on and they were very sweet and took really good care of me. I always had crushes on the hoodiest guys and never went out with them. There was never anything serious.

I didn't have boys in my class until I went to high school. I went to a Catholic grammar school, where the boys and girls were separated, so you gazed with great wonder at them across the courtyard and maybe you would have a rendezvous if you were very fast. You would arrange for a rendezvous during lunchtime in the church. You could get permission to leave the schoolyard to go make a visit to the church during lunchtime, so the girls would go there. Of course, I was actually going there to pray for courage for when the Communists came and my faith was tested. But they would be meeting the guys and kind of whispering and holding hands. But I was so far behind. I was very old-fashioned and very romantic.

Q: Was Chris Sarandon your first love?
Sarandon: First love, yeah, absolutely, for years and years and years. I've had a lot of periods of grace in my life where blessings have come to me in the form of people, and he was definitely one of those. At a time when I was very frightened and fragile he moved very slowly and was very giving and allowed me to grow up under the best of conditions. I think he probably, in his gentleness, was able to allow me to slowly gain self-confidence and some sense of who I was. I didn't have to define myself defensively. And he taught me that loving someone in no way cost you any of your power, which was a lesson I had picked up somewhere. He really taught me what a high being in love can be, how very vital it is and how most of your growth only takes place in those periods. I think the kind of acceptance that you receive when someone loves you is so important. If you don't feel, how can you possibly live? So we took really good care of each other for a long time and then, in order to grow up, in a sense, we split. And we're still very close.

Q: Is there anyone in your love life at the moment?
Sarandon: Mm-hmmm. I'm very lucky right now to be in love and to have somebody very positive in my life, but I haven't thought past that. I don't know about getting married.

Q: Would you like to have kids?
Sarandon: I'm very good with kids. I love kids. I've always held onto the romantic, old-fashioned notion of having a child with a man who actually stays around. There was a time when I was in a relationship and I severed the relationship because I wanted a child and it was clear that he didn't want that kind of commitment. I have a few more years left before I have to panic about it. I don't think my life would be incomplete without a child, but I'm incredibly greedy and it's such an extraordinary experience that I don't know if I could really go through life without having one.

Q: How do you feel about people looking upon you as a sex symbol?
Sarandon: I think it's great. I just wish that you could be a sex symbol and also be smart and fun. I would love to be the first one to find some way to pull that off, to be articulate and at the same time vulnerable and sensual and strong and intelligent. I don't see why you can't be them all.

Q: Do you think you're eccentric, quirky?
Sarandon: Sure. I think that as the years have gone by I've become more so. I was trying to think the other day about what I would be like at 65 or 70. I think as you get older you either start to be free from needing to please people or you become even more conservative. It's one or the other. I hope I'm even more eccentric. FW

THE LAW

A GUIDE FOR EVERY PARENT

IF YOUR TEEN IS ARRESTED

Rita Grasso

By Saunders M. Bridges Jr.

"Dad, it's me. I've been arrested. I'm in jail."

Most parents secretly dread such a phone call, regardless of how well behaved their children are. Today's teen-agers face such a bewildering assortment of pressures and temptations that brushes with the law are increasingly common among all types of families. In 1981 more than three and a half million teen-agers were arrested in the United States for non-traffic crimes. There was one arrest for every nine teen-agers, which means that any child's chance of arrest during his teen-age years is alarmingly high.

If the long arm of the law snares your teen-ager, your early actions can affect both his immediate safety and his long-term prospects. As a parent, you should know what to do — just in case.

If your child is arrested, he or she will be allowed to telephone you. You should immediately find out exactly what the charges are against him. Try to talk to a police officer instead of asking the child. In the heat of the moment, the information your teen-ager gives you may not be accurate.

If the offense is a misdemeanor — public drunkenness, disturbing the peace, vandalism — you will most likely be able to get your child out of jail on your own (in many jurisdictions, juvenile offenders are routinely released into parental custody), and you should do so immediately. Jail is always upsetting and often dangerous. If you own property you can usually arrange bail by signing a surety bond, a document guaranteeing the amount of bail through a pledge of your property as collateral. With a surety bond, no cash bond is necessary.

If you cannot post a surety bond or you cannot raise the necessary amount of cash, you may have to turn to a professional bail-bond service. This should be your last resort. A bail bondsman will charge a fee, usually 10 percent, which is not refundable.

If the charge is a felony — car theft or burglary, for example — contact a lawyer immediately. Important things can happen in the hours following a felony arrest, and legal advice can be crucial (in addition, a lawyer is generally necessary for the negotiation of bail in felony cases).

Even if the charge is a misdemeanor and carries only a fine, you should still consult a reputable lawyer with criminal-law experience once your child is out of jail. Most states have special laws for dealing with juvenile offenders. Often these laws provide for special treatment in cases of jail terms and for confidentiality of court records. A juvenile offender can usually be placed on probation for most crimes, and there are programs that allow a juvenile's case to be handled in such a way that he ends up with no criminal record at all. After a period of good behavior, he can have his record erased.

These programs are usually not automatic, however, and they often depend on the discretion of judges, police officers or prosecutors. Special application sometimes is necessary for a teen-ager to be included in one of these programs. Since the details vary widely and are little known by the public, legal advice is indispensable.

By taking advantage of a juvenile-offender program, you will lessen the severity of your child's treatment by the criminal-justice system. You may also cushion the impact of the arrest on his future: With the aid of a juvenile-offender program, your child's record will be much less damaging to his future.

Above all, you should "keep your cool" during the entire process. A certain amount of parental outrage may be justified, but that can wait. It is important for your child's long-term well-being that you act calmly and deliberately. Remember, your child will probably need you now more than at any time since he learned to walk. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

DOCTORING A NURSE'S IMAGE

One reason for our continual nursing shortage could well be the image of nurses often portrayed in the media, an image, says Sherry Smith, director of the School of Nursing at Indiana's DePauw University, of the nurse "as the girl in the short white dress who carries the bedpan."

William Rittase/Frederic Lewis

After watching episodes of General Hospital and *M*A*S*H*, the students proclaimed the daytime soap "a disaster area, which continues to promote the nurse as sex symbol; she's seldom seen in a patient's room, but usually out in the lobby or cafeteria, scheming about how to get a date with a doctor." Conversely, "the chief nurse on *M*A*S*H* [Margaret Houlihan] is effectively portrayed as a colleague of the doctors and is shown to be intelligent, assertive and interested in her patients, yet evidences human needs and emotions."

In an effort to upgrade the image of nurses on the tube, the students have sent their comments to the networks.

ON RELIGION, THE WEST'S NOT LIKE THE REST

No jokes about godless Californians, please, but Westerners are lagging behind the rest of the U.S. in religious belief.

A recent Merit Report opinion poll found that at least 67 percent of Americans in other regions say religion plays an important role in their lives, compared to 54 percent of Westerners.

Overall, women put more emphasis on religion than do men (75 vs. 66 percent) and 76 percent of those 50 and older say religion is important in their lives, compared to 63 percent of those 18 to 34. Sixty percent of Americans say married couples should be of the same religion.

FLYING FRYERS

Chickens can fly, says Bob Evans, who has held the International Chicken Flying Meet on his 1,100-acre farm in Rio Grande, Ohio, every May for the last 11 years. At least the barnyard variety can; those who are perpetually cooped up can no longer wing it, Evans told us.

Some 300 entrants from 10 states will compete for the $100 top prize, with a $500 bonus to any flyer who can outflap the world record of 302 feet 8 inches. Participants in years past included Atilla the Hen, Artoo Flewto and Kung Flewk, a Japanese blacktail bantam.

Charles Weller

First the chicken is placed in an open-ended mailbox perched 10 feet above ground. If the bird doesn't fly within 30 seconds, it's egged on with a bathroom plunger. The flight distance is measured from the base of the launching pad to the point where the chicken first touches ground.

According to Evans, some of the birds barely fly, others soar straight and true, and then there was the one in 1980 who set a world record — only backward!

HELP FOR YOU YAHOOS

If you're a'fixin' to learn redneck talk, you'll get the real lowdown in an uproarious new book, Redneckin', a Hell-Raisin', Foot-Stompin' Guide to Dancin', Dippin' and Doin' Around in a Gen-U-Wine Country Way by Kathryn Jenson, who admits to being a real-life redneck Oklahoman. Here are some of her choice down-home expressions.

To describe a person who's not too smart: "He's got rooms to let upstairs"; when you're feeling happy about something: "That really melts my butter"; someone stingy: "He's as tight as the bark on a tree"; a powerful drink: "That'll sure wind your watch"; your threatening mood: "I'm fixin' to dot your eyes"; real hunger: "I could eat the south end of a northbound polecat"; depression: "My heart's heavy as a bucket a hog livers." And, our favorite, when your partner in conversation keeps looking at his watch: "You takin' medicine regular?"

OF CAVIAR, WHIPS AND TURTLES

If you're going to stash, uh, personal things in your desk at work, just remember that somebody might find them one day. Besides the stray pack of gum and linty comb, The Itkins, a company that sells and rents office furniture, reports these items recently found in rental desks returned to the firm's Manhattan warehouse: a Barbie doll (dressed in a Ken doll's clothes, no less); a toy cap pistol; a false mustache; a pair of boxing gloves; loaded dice; five tins of Beluga caviar (valued at $600); a leather whip and matching mask; a 1946 Los Angeles phone book; a video cassette of men and women "engaged in acts of extreme friendship," according to the company's president; a set of 1971 Playboy magazines (minus the 12 centerfolds); a live turtle.

And to think we feel guilty about hiding that Milky Way bar in our bottom drawer.

TRY THIS TEST:

Stretch your skin by smiling broadly or sticking your chin out. See how much smoother and younger it looks? Now relax into normal position. Did your skin spring back into resilient firmness, or relax into puffiness? Very young skin with its abundant Elastin looks as smooth in repose. This elasticity factor formed by dermal Fibroblast cells works because of ELASTIN.

FOR MEN & WOMEN of mid-youth or prime years, it's never too early to see what our ELASTIN Cream may do for you. Try to start using it before skin Elastin loss occurs inside deep-down skin layers, before age mars sensitive outer skin. But it's never too late to fight Elastin-loss and related face or body skin problems with the natural externally-applied Elastin in our special ELASTIN Cream.

In recent weeks we have sold thousands of 2 oz. jars of this truly amazing facial cream for $5 each. But now you can get the regular 2 oz. jar FREE!

Why do women love ELASTIN Cream? Because, once you pass the age of 25 your skin is already threatened by sagging. The reason is simple and, sad to say, inevitable.

Before you reach your mid-20s. Nature's supply of ELASTIN, the substance your own body creates to give skin elasticity, begins to diminish. Then you need ELASTIN Cream with its Protein-building amino acids. It works to keep firming connective tissue fibers in the dermis strong and healthy, supple and beautifully youthful.

Our ELASTIN Cream contains a famous biological element that can penetrate into your skin's nourishing inner layer, carrying its beneficial firming deep-down. European ELASTIN research shows it may even help provide the "vital missing link" in skin care—the way to new skin elasticity.

Discover why thousands of women depend on ELASTIN Cream. Get your regular 2 oz. jar FREE and without charge. Just check the box in the order form and return it with any order before May 2, 1983.

Junior Whirl®

by Hal Kaufman

● TAKE FIVE! There is some sage advice on minding one's tongue in this poem of obscure origin: "These five things observe with care: Of whom you speak, to whom you speak, ANDH OWA NDWHE NAN DWHERE." Rearrange cap-letter spacing for sense.

"... and how and when and where."

● Riddle-Me-This! What kind of music puts ripples on a pond? Plunk rock. What do you call a crafty old man? An artful codger.

● Starry Eyed? Challenge: Given five wooden toothpicks, form a five-pointed star. How is it done?

WHICH DAY'S CHILD...

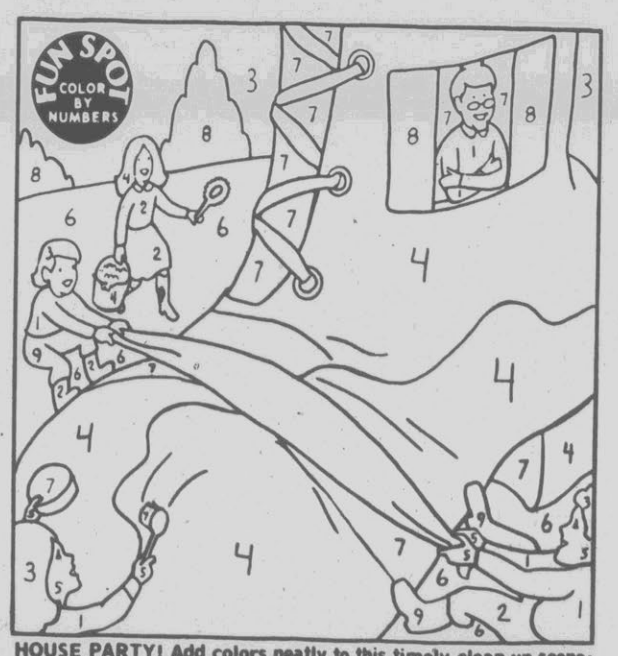

On what day of the week were you born? Let's see. Take the last two figures of your birth year. Divide by four, disregarding remainder. Add to first number. Then add day of the month.

Add 1 for Jan. (0 if leap year), 4 Feb. (3 if leap year), 4 Mar., 0 Apr., 2 May, 5 Jun., 0 Jul., 3 Aug., 6 Sep., 1 Oct., 4 Nov., 6 Dec.

Divide by 7. Remainder gives day of week: Sat. 0, Sun. 1, Mon. 2, etc. Ex.: May 11, 1969—69 + 17 + 11 + 2 equals 99. Divide by 7, remainder is 1, therefore original birth day was Sunday.

DIGGING IN! Start at dot 1, draw a line to dot 2, 3, 4 and so on, to see what's missing from the diagram above.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story:

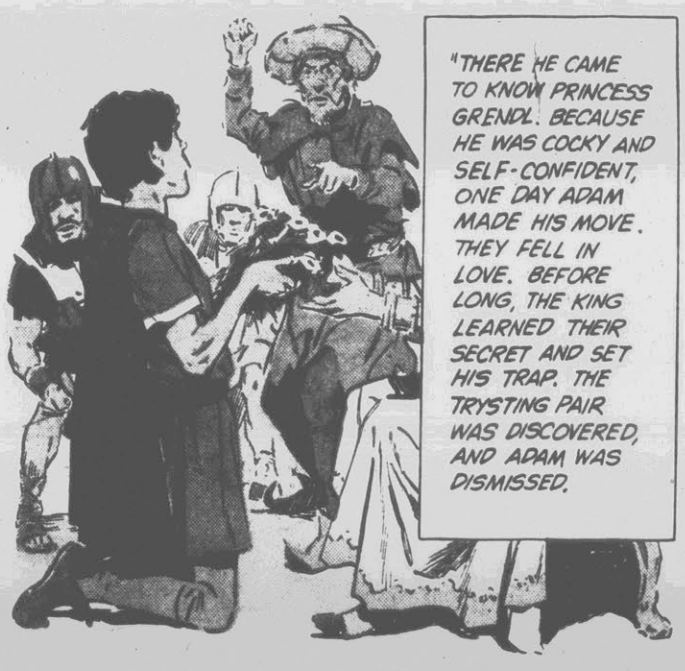

PRINCE VALIANT FACES THE MASKED BOY AS THEIR GAME OF CHESS IS PLAYED OUT IN THE ARENA. AT STAKE ARE THE LIVES OF THE TWO "KINGS," ALP AND ULF, ZOG'S TWIN SONS. WHEN A BREAK IS CALLED, VAL, FIGHTING TO SAVE ALP ARSLAN, IS LOSING BADLY. IN A DARK PASSAGE GALAN ACCOSTS KAREN AND SPEAKS TERRIBLE WORDS. "THE MASKED BOY...

"...THIS TIME HE IS NOT ME. HE IS A LITTLE MAN NAMED ADAM WHO IS PLAYING TO WIN." AND GALAN SPINS A TALE OF THWARTED LOVE.

"THE STORY REALLY BEGINS IN THE DAYS OF KING ULRIC WHO COULD BARELY LOOK A SHEEPDOG IN THE EYE. VAIN OF HIS APPEARANCE, HE BEGAN RECRUITING PALACE GUARDS FOR THEIR HEIGHT. THE CUSTOM TOOK HOLD AND MANY YEARS LATER ADAM WAS TAKEN INTO KING ZOG'S HOUSEHOLD.

"THERE HE CAME TO KNOW PRINCESS GRENDL. BECAUSE HE WAS COCKY AND SELF-CONFIDENT, ONE DAY ADAM MADE HIS MOVE. THEY FELL IN LOVE. BEFORE LONG, THE KING LEARNED THEIR SECRET AND SET HIS TRAP. THE TRYSTING PAIR WAS DISCOVERED, AND ADAM WAS DISMISSED.

JOHN CULLEN MURPHY

"HE BIDED HIS TIME. WHEN ZOG ANNOUNCED A TOURNEY TO CHOOSE A HUSBAND FOR GRENDL, ADAM KNEW HIS CHANCE HAD COME. YET HE KNEW NOTHING OF SWORDPLAY. HIS ONLY GAME WAS CHESS. HE CONCEIVED A GREAT DECEPTION, AND WHEN HE SAW YUAN CHEN AND ME FOIL SOME THUGS, SETTLED ON HIS PARTNERS. IT TURNED OUT I WAS EXACTLY HIS SIZE. YOU KNOW THE REST.

© 1983 King Features Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved.

"WHY WE WERE IN SALONAE I WILL TELL YOU SOME OTHER TIME. RIGHT NOW WE MUST SET THINGS RIGHT." AND KAREN SAYS TO HER BROTHER: "DID YOU SAY HE WAS COCKY?"
