Big Setback In Ruling On Nuke Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a stunning setback to the nuclear power industry, ruled today that states may ban new nuclear plants until the federal government devises a safe method for disposing of radioactive waste.

In a 9-0 ruling, the court upheld a moratorium on new nuclear plants enacted by California in 1976.

The justices, rejecting legal arguments by the Reagan administration, said that state power to limit development of commercial reactors is not completely pre-empted by federal law.

The decision comes at a time when the future of nuclear power is already in some doubt because of costs to build new plants and safety fears raised by the accident in 1979 at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island.

Today's decision does not deal directly with regulation of existing nuclear facilities.

Justice Byron R. White, writing for the court, said a lower court ruling which upheld California's moratorium was correct in saying "that the promotion of nuclear power is not to be accomplished 'at all costs' ... Congress has allowed the states to determine — as a matter of economics — whether a nuclear plant vis-a-vis a fossil fuel plant should be built."

White said, "Congress has left sufficient authority in the states to allow the development of nuclear power to be slowed or even stopped for economic reasons."

Set Alternative Rules On Draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just in case the military draft is revived, the government has issued rules for alternative service for people who object to military service.

The Selective Service System, which administers the current registration program for young men, developed the new regulations, which would offer alternative service in the event Congress decided to reinstate a draft.

First proposed in January, the regulations took effect Tuesday with their publication in the Federal Register.

People with moral or religious objections to military service would be allowed to perform two years of alternative work.

U.S. Economic Growth Races

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy grew at an annual rate of 3.1 percent in the first three months of this year, the fastest pace in two years and the strongest signal yet that recovery from the 1981-82 recession had begun, government figures indicated today.

The new growth rate was hardly robust in comparison with other recoveries of the last several decades. And it was slower than the 4 percent rate government economists had projected in their first estimate before the quarter even ended.

However, the report was still moderately good news after the string of declines and tiny gains that had followed the increase at a rate of 7.9 percent in the first quarter of 1981, just before the recession began.

The Commerce Department reported that inflation-adjusted gross national product — the broadest measure of U.S. economic activity — rose to an annual rate of $1.489 trillion in the just-ended January-March quarter.

Before such adjustment, the GNP rose 11.3 percent to a rate of $3.177 trillion.

The report also gave apparently conflicting figures on inflation.

It said the broad-based GNP implicit price deflator increased at an annual rate of 5.8 percent in the first quarter, the highest rate since the final quarter of 1981.

On the other hand, it also said the GNP fixed-weighted price index rose at a rate of just 3.2 percent, the lowest since 1972.

The fixed-weighted index assumes that the same types of goods were being produced in early 1983 as in past years, while the deflator takes into account changes in the composition of GNP.

The lower figure was much more in line with other government measures — such as the Consumer Price Index — that have indicated inflation has been down to virtually nothing so far this year.

The report also included downward-revised figures on corporate profits for the fourth quarter and for all of last year. They indicated:

—Before-tax profits declined 2.4 percent to an annual rate of $175.9 billion in the fourth quarter rather than dipping the 0.8 percent estimated one month ago. They dropped 24.6 percent to a total of $174.9 billion for the year rather than declining 24.3 percent.

—After-tax profits edged down 1.3 percent to a rate of $117.9 billion for the quarter, a bit worse than the flat showing originally estimated. They fell 22.4 percent to a total of $117.1 billion for all of 1982 rather than the 22.1 percent first reported.

Overrule Ban For Pickets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today struck down as unconstitutional a federal law that banned demonstrators from the public sidewalks surrounding the court's own building on Capitol Hill.

By a 9-0 vote, the justices said that the law violates constitutionally protected free-speech rights because it includes in its definition of Supreme Court "grounds" the public sidewalks on all four sides of the block-long marble building.

Vote No On Annexation

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission voted Tuesday night to recommend that the City Council not annex a mobile home development north of the city at this time, citing a potential loss of revenue by Greenville Utilities if the area is taken in.

In voting on the matter, the board also endorsed the staff position stated by Bobby Roberson, director of planning, that the area should not be annexed now because it is in the five-year non-petition annexation study area requested by the council. He said the park area represents a large concentration of population which would enable the city to consider larger land tracts north of the river for potential non-petition annexation at a later date.

The planning director also pointed out that annexation laws are currently being reviewed by the legislature.

The board's action followed a presentation by Jim Roberts, attorney for the owners of Colonial Mobile Home Park, who petitioned the city for annexation of the 70-acre tract across from Burroughs Wellcome.

Roberts said that opposition to the non-contiguous annexation by Greenville Utilities stems from the loss of $26,500 that GUC says it would lose in revenue as a result of charging an

Recipient Of Scholarship

North Pitt High School student Judson L. Joyner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Joyner of Bethel, has been named recipient of a $1,000 National Merit Scholarship.

The National Merit Scholarship Program, headquartered in Evanston, Ill., today released the names of 1,800 students nationwide who have been selected for the $1,000 category of the National Merit Scholarships.

The 1,800 were chosen from about 15,000 who qualified earlier as semifinalists in the annual competition in which over one million students from 18,600 high schools in the nation competed.

This one-time national category means that each of the 1,800 will receive $1,000 at the time they enroll in a college or university of their choice. The scholarship received by Joyner is sponsored by Aetna Life & Casualty Foundation Inc.

Joyner is a member of the National Honor Society at North Pitt, served three years on the Quiz Bowl, and has held membership in the Science and Math clubs for two years. He is also senior class secretary-treasurer, treasurer of the Literary Club, attended Governor's School, and was a finalist in the Japan-U.S. Exchange Program. Joyner was selected as the outstanding math student in Pitt County and was a Morehead Scholarship nominee.

Greenville Among Leaders For Governor's School

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

On the basis of percentages of students chosen from overall student populations to attend the annual summer months Governor's School, Greenville leads eastern North Carolina schools in the number of students selected for this honor, according to Greenville School Superintendent Delma Blinson.

Blinson presented data to the city school board this week which shows that, in actual numbers, Greenville ranks second next to Wilson in students chosen for attending Governor's School. But looked at from the number selected compared to total student population, Greenville is far ahead of other eastern North Carolina school systems.

The allocation of the number of nominations for Governor's School that each school system receives is based, not on each school's headcount of gifted and talented students, but on the basis of the average daily membership (attendance) within each system.

Greenville, with an average daily membership (schoolwide) of 4,800, was assigned 16 nominations — four in the academic area and 12 in the performing arts area. On this basis, larger school systems with, for example, a daily membership of 10,000 would receive approximately twice the nominee allocations that Greenville would receive.

This year, the state selection committee chose 12 of Greenville's 16 nominees for attendance at one of the Governors Schools in Winston-Salem and Laurinburg.

"Each year we have a very difficult time narrowing the many gifted students that are eligible in an academic area down to only four nominees," Blinson stated. He added that "selection in the performing arts is even more difficult, but for a different reason. Often our most talented students do not meet the gifted criteria, and therefore, are not eligible for nomination. Students nominated must be gifted and also possess a talent."

In the information provided by Blinson, 11 eastern North Carolina school systems east of Wake County are listed, plus the Chapel Hill school system, which Blinson said was included since Greenville and Chapel Hill were so often compared as similar systems in size and achievements.

The number of students each of the 12 systems had selected to attend Governor's School, and the student body population of the school systems are:

Wilson, 15 selected from 13,000 students; Greenville, 12 from 4,800 students; Fayetteville, 12 from 9,165 students; Chapel Hill, 11 from 5,400 students; Kinston, 10 from 5,200 students; New Bern-Craven Schools, 6 from 13,600 students; Martin County, 5 from 5,900 students; Rocky Mount, 5 from 6,400 students; Goldsboro, 4 from 5,300 students; Pitt County, 4 from 11,000 students; Washington City, 4 from 4,000 students; and Tarboro, 3 from 3,200 students.

From the 12 selected for Governor's School from Greenville, four were in the field of instrumental music; two each in art and math; and one each in dance, drama, social studies and Spanish.

Statewide this year, a total of 801 students were selected by the state selection committee to attend Governor's School. The number chosen in each field were: art, 40; dance, 40; drama, 50; musical, 90; instrumental music, 105; math, 205; English, 94; natural science, 109; social studies, 44; French, 14, and Spanish 10.

Mother's Day Cards Have Floral Motif

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Even if you only send her a card, chances are you'll say it with flowers this Mother's Day.

Floral designs have been blooming on Mother's Day cards ever since the annual tribute took root right after the turn of the century, says Keith Davis, curator of the Hallmark Historical Collection here.

Those first simple but flowery greetings, published as early as 1912, were considered as part of the friendship category, and were known as "cards for mothers," according to Davis.

By the end of that decade, he explains, spurred on by the recognition of Mother's Day as an official national holiday occurring each second Sunday of May, the country's card companies were coming out with separate lines of Mother's Day cards.

Flower motifs were popular from the start, stemming no doubt from the introduction of carnations into the commemoration by Anna Jarvis, known as the founder of Mother's Day. It was this woman, never a mother herself, who supplied the carnations at the first Mother's Day church service because of her own mother's fondness for them, Davis relates.

As Mother's Day cards progressed through the years, the messages have remained simple, but the floral patterns have spread from carnations to roses, daffodils, orchards, daisies, pansies and other colorful blossoms. This year, Davis estimates, about 90 percent of the Mother's Day cards will contain some form of floral design.

Americans will probably be sending more cards this Mother's Day than ever before, Davis predicts — some 150 million, which keeps the holiday fourth on the list of card-occasions behind Christmas, Valentine's Day and Easter.

This will represent a 5-to-10 percent increase over the past few years and Davis attributes the steady gain to purchases by children of parents from the baby boom generation of the '50s.

Dear Abby

Talking Sister Won't Write

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What do you do about late-night telephone callers who ring you up at midnight (or later) for a social chat?

My sister, who lives several thousand miles away, thinks just because she calls long distance I should be happy to talk to her regardless of the hour. I have asked her repeatedly not to call me after 10 p.m. unless it's an emergency because I have to get up at 6 a.m. and need my eight hours of sleep.

Well, she called at midnight about three weeks ago. I was sound asleep and didn't feel like talking, so I asked her to please write a letter or call me again — before 10 p.m. She hasn't called or written since.

I'm truly enjoying the respite, but family is family. Any suggestions?

ENJOYING MY SLEEP

DEAR ENJOYING: You may be enjoying your sleep, but your conscience must be bothering you or you wouldn't have written.

You could get in touch with your sister and apologize. But if you do, she will continue to disregard your wishes and call you whenever she feels like it.

Or you could let her know that you would like to hear from her — and reiterate the 10 p.m. deadline. And if she disregards your wishes again, give her the same treatment until you have her trained. Good manners and consideration are for family as well as strangers.

DEAR ABBY: My nephew and his wife (early 30s) own a nice home in Phoenix. (I'll call them Tom and Terri.) They have no children.

Recently when Jean and John, an out-of-town unmarried couple from Los Angeles who live together, came to stay with them, they were asked to use separate bedrooms!

Now Tom and Terri are going to L.A. for the weekend and plan to stay overnight with Jean and John. I told Tom that it seemed rather hypocritical to me, since the issue is not the ownership of the house, but whether or not to sleep under the same roof with a couple whom they regard as "sinners."

To avoid their being sanctimonious, I suggested that Tom and Terri stay in a motel. They said to ask your opinion.

UNCLE ROG

DEAR UNCLE: It seems to me that if Tom and Terri want to be consistent in the matter of unmarried people of the opposite sex sharing living quarters, they should stay in a motel.

But hypocrites have been known to stay with "sinners" to save a buck.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter you received, "And Baby Makes Three," in which the bride wanted to carry her 7-week-old baby down the aisle cradled in her arms, let me say this:

When my husband and I got married (three years ago), we had our cat at the altar with us. (The best man held him.)

Sure, some of the guests thought we were crazy, but that's too bad. The "three of us" had a wonderful day to remember. After all, it was our wedding, right?

400th Anniversary Preview Program Given Chatham Club

A preview of America's 400th anniversary celebration was given by John D. Neville, executive director of the N.C. 400th Anniversary Committee, Tuesday afternoon.

He was speaking at a meeting of the Chatham Book Club at the home of Mrs. Bruce Thompson. Mrs. John Howell, chairman of the Pitt County Steering Committee for the anniversary, was also a guest. Mrs. E.T. Vinson was assisting hostess.

Four hundred years ago the first English explorers came to North Carolina where they found friendly people, a good climate, unspoiled land and an abundance of natural resources.

"The celebration will mark the arrival of English-speaking people in the new world with the intention of establishing a new colony. April 27, 1584, was the day of departure of the ships from England to bring the explorers and July 13, 1584, was the date of their arrival. It was under the sponsorship of Sir Walter Raleigh," said Mrs. Howell.

North Carolina will sponsor certain events in Dare County, which will serve as the focal point. "Archaeological digs will attempt to find the Indian villages visited and described by the English explorers. They will also seek to find the site of the first English village in America. An Elizabethan ship — Elizabeth II — is also being built," Neville said.

"The British Library and British Museum are preparing an exhibition which will be in Raleigh during our commemoration. John White's drawings will return to North Carolina. A British-American Festival will celebrate 400 years of Anglo-American relations."

Mrs. Howell said the "four-year enterprise will include a lot of people coordinating activities. It is the hope of the Pitt County Steering Committee that a wide range of organizations including schools will assist us in developing meaningful plans. Our steering committee hopes to develop a permanent museum on the history of tobacco. The prospective site will be the City of Yesteryear at the Pitt County Fairgrounds.

400TH ANNIVERSARY ... of day. He is pictured with Mrs. John America and North Carolina was Howell. John Neville's program topic Tues-

"Other groups and organizations will be encouraged to develop their own focus for projects. Any aspect of Elizabethan social and cultural life such as music, costumes, gardens, dances or herb gardens would be a suitable focus for developing programs. Most of the towns in the county are represented on the committee," she said.

"Each county will be responsible for developing its own programs subject to approval by the state committee and will also be responsible for financing its 400th anniversary activities," said Mrs. Howell.

The celebration will end in 1987 with the observance of Virginia Dare's birthday. She was the first child born of English parents in the new country.

Neville will be traveling to England with other North Carolinians in April 1984 for ceremonies which include the placement of a plaque in Plymouth Harbor and in Devonshire, the home of many of the early Roanoke colonists, for other events. The British Library exhibition in London will open while the delegation is there.

Homemaker's Haven BY EVELYN SPANGLER

Make It Pay--Prevent Mildew Damage

Anyone who has had clothing damaged by mildew knows the best cure is to prevent the problem in the first place.

That means a mildew prevention game plan needs to be in place before hot, humid weather arrives, says Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Extension Home Economics Agent, Pitt County.

Cleanliness, good ventilation and dry atmosphere are the most effective weapons against closet mildew, she adds.

Soil on clothing can supply nutrients for molds, so always wash or dryclean garments before storage. Hang clothes as loosely as possible, so air can circulate and store shoes, suitcases and other leather goods on shelves. Leather handbags and gloves may be safer in summer if they are kept on open racks rather than in closed, unventilated drawers, Mrs. Spangler adds.

Chemicals that will dry the air can also help combat mildew. Silica gel, activated alumina and calcium chloride, often sold under trade names, held control mildew growth by absorbing moisture from the air.

Silica gel and activated alumina won't harm fabrics and can be hung in cloth bags in closets, placed in open containers on closet floors or spread in the folds of garments stored in drawers, boxes and trunks.

Calcium chloride should not come into contact with fabrics as it can make holes in them. However, calcium chloride can be placed in open containers in closets.

Paradichlorobenzene, often used for moth control, can help control mildew. Since it does damage some plastics, the homemaker should remove plastic buttons and ornaments and avoid using plastic hangers, if she uses this compound.

A few precautions can help keep mildew from clothing and fabrics not in storage. "For example," Mrs. Spangler says, "make sure soiled clothes, towels, and washclothes are dry before putting them into a hamper."

Keep wet shower curtains stretched out; they are likely to mildew if left bunched together or stuck to the wall or tub.

Dampened rolled-up clothes are an invitation to mildew-molds, so when you sprinkle more laundry than you can iron in a day, dry and air it.

If mildew shows up in spite of these precautions, contact Mrs. Spangler at the County Extension Office at the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth Street (old hospital), Greenville or telephone 752-2934 for stain removal suggestions.

Dr. Kathryn Kolasa, of East Carolina University, will be among the speakers at the 74th annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association in Milwaukee, Wis. in June.

She is chairperson of food, nutrition and institution management in the School of Home Economics.

The theme of the event is "Home Economics: Momentum for Change." Sessions will be held at Milwaukee Exposition and Convention Center and Area. Her address will be entitled "Food and Nutrition in the International Arena."

Dr. Kolasa, who joined the ECU faculty last December, previously taught food and nutrition courses at Michigan State University. Her professional background includes co-authorship of a book, more than 50 research articles and reports and participation in food science and human nutrition projects in several Central American and European nations.

Toll May Be Answer

People sometimes have a way of saying two things at the same time. Some observers would call it a case of a person talking out of the both sides of his mouth.

Case in point: Robert V. Owens Jr., chairman of the Dare County Commissioners and owner of a restaurant in Nags Head, calls N.C. 12 along the Outer Banks "a national disgrace" but is violently opposed to a proposed toll fee to help maintain the highway.

Says Owens: The highway "is terrible. Nobody would believe it unless you drove down it. There are potholes, there are washouts. Some days they have to cancel school. Any weather or rain will bring the sea tides over it and wash out the asphalt."

Owens, who acknowledges that his area depends on tourism, apparently wants to keep his cake — a state-maintained road supported only by tax money mostly collected elsewhere — and eat it, too — by reaping the profits of such a road.

But as he pointed out, even "normal" weather for the Outer Banks will wash away N.C. 12. And those repairs do get expensive, especially at a time when roads all across the state are in need of maintenance.

North Carolina has a tradition of avoiding toll roads, and we would dislike seeing a toll initiated on N.C. 12 by the state or the federal government. But how else will the money become available to make those continuing repairs?

Owens' business is just that, and it can live on its own merits, but the Outer Banks is a national park that should be accessible to all who wish to see and see and enjoy them.

Perhaps even the state should consider joining the federal proposal for a toll on N.C. 12 and its accompanying system of ferries.

Mickey Paves The Way

Japanese and United States cultures are rooted in ancient cultures which are as different as they can be on the same planet.

Yet these former enemies of World War II have been drawn closer and closer in the years following the end of that war.

The Japanese have accepted the democratic principals of their ally and they have enthusiastically embraced the private enterprise methods which built industrial America. Even the Christmas holiday of the western world has become an important event in Japan.

For our part, the United States has found the industrial products of Japan attractive. Many of us drive Japanese-made autos and there are few homes and businesses which do not have electronic devices made in Japan.

The merging of cultures may be complete as of last week. The grand opening of Tokyo Disneyland was held. Those uniquely American characters of Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Goofy, Pluto and Donald Duck were there to help with the ribbon cutting. Developers expect 10 million visitors annually to the $630 million project.

Soon any visitor, Japanese or American, should feel right at home in Disneyland, Disneyworld or Tokyo Disneyland.

Cubans Like Store

HAVANA — Each morning, along the tree-shaded sidewalk of a downtown square, Cubans stand for up to eight hours just to get inside a former Sears-Roebuck store which, by local standards, really "has everything."

The renovated department store is stocked with large supplies of food, clothing and other consumer goods that are otherwise rationed, scarce or unobtainable. The catch is price: Everything in this store is two to 10 times higher than elsewhere in Cuba. When it opened this store four months ago, Fidel Castro's communist government bowed — however slightly — to the laws of supply and demand.

Since Castro closed the country's 50,000 private stores and shops 15 years ago, consumers have been buying their rationed and unrationed goods at inexpensive state-owned markets (experiments with farmers' stands have been erratic). Two years ago, government surveys showed that Cubans with unspent savings would pay extra for hard-to-get items.

In response, the government created the more highly-priced "parallel market" and, sure enough, Cubans last year spent up to 30 percent of their disposable incomes in the old Sears store and two other outlets like it.

In startling contrast to most Cuban markets (which offer little more than brown bags of grain, Soviet-produced pickled vegetables, and rationed items such as milk and meat), the former Sears store resembles a suburban Safeway. Its windows beckon pedestrians with unprocurables such as mayonnaise, mustard, chocolate sauce, wine and cereal; enormous crowds wait behind barriers for the store to open each day.

While the long lines repel some Cubans, they make perfect sense to Eugene Bilari, president of Havana's Institute of Internal Demand. Bilari says that free education, health care, community services, school and work meals, as well as low-cost recreation, transportation and day care, make the average Cuban's income of $208 a month "very high."

Bilari denies Cubans' new spending habits will interfere with the government's efforts to purge counterrevolutionary materialism from the public consciousness.

"We have a philosophy based on satisfying basic human needs of the population, be they material or spiritual," he said. "(The new stores) might raise some kind of bad influence in small groups of young people who don't have their heads correctly fixed. But most won't care."

"Perhaps we are wrong," he added. "But this is our position. We'll accept this challenge."

Somewhat surprisingly, the Castro regime has high hopes for Cuban tourism. Cuba's 260 white-sand beaches are currently attracting the interest of 15 foreign developers, including Club Med. At present, about 200,000 tourists visit Cuba, most from the communist bloc; of Western visitors, Canadians make up the majority. (In 1957, some 272,000 Americans alone visited the island, then known for its gambling, inexpensive night life and prostitution.)

Lottery Debate Raises Old Issues

RALEIGH — At the Senate's public hearing on a possible lottery for North Carolina, opponents kept repeating two arguments. The Legislature should reject the creation of a lottery because it is immoral and because it would prove to be a regressive tax on the poor.

The morality debate was rather superficial. The Christian Action League put forth four ministers, all of whom said lotteries are immoral because gambling is wrong. Proponents provided no moral insight into the question when they responded that cutting social programs is immoral. The debate never clicked.

The question of a lottery being a regressive tax, however, was much better debated that afternoon. Both sides continuously returned to this question and, at day's end, it was not clear who had been the winner.

Opponents said a lottery will be disproportionately funded by the poor. They argued that poor people, being less educated and less sophisticated about money, would be more susceptible to the "get rich quick" lure of a lottery. And, echoing points Gov. Jim Hunt has made in opposing the lottery, they noted that the 50 cents or $1 that a poor man puts down on a game of chance amounts to a disproportionately large part of his family's food budget.

Proponents said studies of lotteries operating in other states show that the poor do not buy a disproportionate number of lottery tickets.

The Rev. Coy Privette, executive director of the Christian Action League, best articulated the opponents' position. He quoted a Michigan study which he said showed that the Michigan lottery was two to three times more regressive than the sales tax. In Michigan, those with annual incomes less than $5,000 spend approximately one-third of 1 percent of their incomes on the lottery. Those making more than $30,000 a year spend one-fiftieth of 1 percent of their income.

Privette also cited comments made in Las Vegas by Daniel Bower, president of Scientific Games, a firm which provides states with lottery tickets. Privette said that Bower described the average ticket buyer as a non-white, male, laborer or service worker who has less than an eighth grade education.

From the University of Connecticut, Privette drew a study that shows the Connecticut lottery "primarily attracts poor, long-term unemployed and less educated participants. It generates state revenue in a regressive manner," the report said, according to Privette's quotes.

Proponents quickly argued those points. Edward Powers, former director of the New Hampshire lottery and a consultant to Scientific Games, said "state lotteries are supported by the broad middle class or society, the working people of America ... There aren't any long lines of poor people buying these tickets. The old myth about lower income families just isn't so."

That was the conclusion reached by Kenneth Levenbook, staff attorney to the Senate committee holding the public hearing. After researching market data from the 17 states which have lotteries, he reported last month that poor people were not buying a disproportionate number if the lottery tickets. In an interview after the public hearing, Levenbook said there wasn't one shred of good research supporting Privette's view.

He said the study done by a Connecticut consultant showed that the overwhelming majority of ticket buyers earned in the range of $12,000 to $28,000 annually. The poor buy fewer tickets than their portion of the population represents, he contends.

To the editor:

"The number of people who can read is small and the number of those who can read to any purpose, much smaller, and the number of those who are too tired after a hard day's work to read — enormous." George Bernard Shaw.

According to Dear Abby in the Tuesday, April 12, 1983 Daily Reflector, parents are urged to read to their very young children in an effort to inspire them to learn to read for themselves; however, one of the reasons some parents don't read to their children is because they themselves can't read. Today in the United States there are over 23 million adults who can't read well enough to read a children's bedtime story, to read a medicine label, to read the notes that come from school. These illiterate adults must be taught to read.

Johnny can, but won't read. Reading is a family-school partnership.

What better time than now, National Library Week, April 17-23, to begin spending more time in the library, enrolling in an adult education class through Pitt Community College, taking your own very young children to the children's room of public libraries, and seeing to it that your schoolagers spend a portion of each day after school in the library? — for reading influences yours and my life.

The theme for this week is "Look to Your Library."

To the editor:

GUC Director Charles Horne is credited in the Wednesday, April 13, edition of The Daily Reflector as saying that, even with the upcoming June 1 rate increase, "GUC's rates are still below retail rates charged by CP&L and Virginia Electric and Power Co."

An analysis of the residential rates among the three area power suppliers indicates Mr. Horne's blanket statement on rates may not be correct, even before the June 1 rate increase is considered.

According to rate structure information that I obtained today by telephone, any residential user of more than 948 KWHs per month would pay more, on summer rates, to GUC than to CP&L for the same amount of power. (All winter rates would be lower on GUC than CP&L).

However, if an across-the-board 6 percent residential rate increase is considered, any residential customer using more than 309 KWHs per month would pay more to GUC than to CP&L, during both summer and winter seasons.

Unfortunately for VEPCO, their rates were higher for all rate considerations.

In making these comparisons, no energy management program (Beat the Peak, etc.) discounts were considered. Additionally, for this comparison, the GUC rates were increased across the board by six percent as the proposed rate structure was not listed in this edition of The Daily Reflector. Also, any proposed rate increases by CP&L and VEPCO were not taken into account, as this information was not available.

And, unfortunately, comparison shopping for electricity does not help most of us, as we usually do not have a choice of which power company we buy from.

A July Fourth That Could Be

The Department of Interior is now hard at work planning the July Fourth celebration on the Washington Mall. Secretary of the Interior Watt is involved in every detail of the celebration.

"Mr. Secretary, here are the latest rules we're issuing to assure the Mall party will be a patriotic family affair."

"Read them to me."

"No one with long hair or beards will be permitted to sit on the grass."

"What about the dress code?"

"All males will be expected to wear jackets and ties, and all females must wear skirts and blouses, or dresses with proper necklines. The Park Police will turn the hoses on anyone who is not properly attired."

"That should keep out the rowdy element. Did you check out the hosing with our legal department?"

"Yes, and they have informed me it's your Mall, and your Fourth of July."

"How are you doing on the food rules?"

"We're banning brown bags. People are only permitted to bring picnic hampers, but they will be examined to make sure they don't smuggle in any wine. Any unlicensed food purveyors will be horsewhipped. This also goes for souvenir people selling Nuclear Freeze Buttons."

"Good. What else have you come up with?"

"We've divided the Mall into smoking and non-smoking sections."

"Is that necessary outdoors?"

"We're limited in the number of narc agents at our disposal, and in this way we can keep a better eye on anyone who tries to light up a joint."

"How are we doing on the entertainment?"

"I spoke to the United States Army bandmaster and he gave me a list of patriotic songs they plan to play."

"Let me see it ... They're not serious. Are they really including 'This Land Is Your Land'?"

"What's wrong with it?"

"Haven't you ever heard the lyrics? They're against everything this Interior Department stands for. We're trying to sell off the land and open it up to mining and lumbering, and lease the oil rights. If people believe it's their land, they'll take us to court. Throw it out."

"Yes, sir. Anything else you don't like?"

"How did John Philip Sousa's 'Washington Post March' get on this list?"

"I have no idea. Someone in EPA must have goofed. We'll dump it."

"They can't be thinking of playing 'Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band.' That's a Beatles song!"

"We thought kids might like it."

"But the Beatles are hard rock, and I told you I didn't want hard rock on my Fourth of July."

"Then it won't be performed, sir. We'll replace it with 'When I Grow Too Old to Dream.'"

"That's more like it. My wife loves that song."

"Do you want to go over Wayne Newton's numbers?"

"Of course not. Anyone who works in Las Vegas knows what the American people want to hear. What about the fireworks display?"

"Strictly family stuff, sir. There isn't an R-rated rocket in the package."

"One more thing. I don't want any anti-administration demonstrations on the Fourth."

"You have nothing to fear on that score. If anybody holds up a sign, our mounted police will trample them into the ground."

"Well done, Meddler. If the country doesn't have a safe and sane Fourth of July this year, they can't blame it on old Jim Watt."

Strength For Today

We are told in the Book of Proverbs (15:33) that before honor is humility.

This is the biblical way of saying that we accord our highest honor to people who make the least attempt to seize it for themselves. Socrates has, through the ages, gained a reputation for wisdom because, although very wise, he declared that his wisdom consisted in the full knowledge that he knew nothing.

Jesus, with God's divine purpose revealing itself in his words and life, declared that he was "meek and lowly in heart."

The word humility comes from the word "humus," which means earth. Humble people are those who bow down to earth. They bow mind and soul before the overreaching reality by which human life is controlled.

Defiance of this spiritual reality is called sin. Some people think they can get away with this defiance. But the truly humble are also the truly intelligent.

They know that spiritual reality is sovereign reality.

States Are Taking Up Slack In Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is it a tax cut or a tax shift? That's the political argument, but the hard facts are that your federal taxes are coming down for the most part while your state taxes are going up.

Whether there is a net loss or gain remains to be seen. Also for the future to tell is whether any impetus to the national economy from the federal tax cuts will be offset by rising taxes at the state and local level.

President Reagan says despite what is happening with taxes elsewhere, his national economic recovery program is working and he will veto any effort to repeal the federal income tax cut scheduled for July 1.

This would be the third year of a phased in reduction of personal income taxes planned to average 25 percent by 1984. The first reduction in payroll deductions was 5 percent beginning Oct. 1, 1982. Last July 1 another 10 percent was removed, and the final 10 percent comes this July 1.

The idea was to free money from the federal tax collector and put it in the hands of private investors. Their investments would spur an economic recovery based on private enterprise initiatives. According to the Reagan doctrine, this would be less inflationary, more effective and longer lasting than federal pump priming.

But while federal taxes have been coming down, federal budget deficits have been going up, federal aid to state and local governments has been shrinking, and unemployment has skyrocketed. This has put an extra strain on state-dispersed welfare services at the same time Washington is withdrawing assistance.

This leaves state and local governments with the responsibility of caring for citizens deposed from job, home and daily bread by the long recession.

It also means they are losing tax income because the unemployed pay no income taxes. Those without jobs and those who have jobs but fear losing them also spend less and therefore pay less sales taxes. These are the two major sources of state finance.

To help hold down the deficits and perhaps fend off more cuts in federal support for programs administered at state and local levels, some members of Congress have been talking about postponing or canceling the July cut and possibly the tax "indexing" scheduled to follow.

"Nothing could be more unfair," Reagan said in his weekly radio speech last weekend. "I will veto any attempt to take away the third year of your tax cut."

"Just as our program is beginning to mesh and deliver what we promised ... just as the recovery is gaining strength, a plan is afoot that would wreck the progress we've made," Reagan said.

But Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., responded for the Democrats by arguing that Reagan's tax cutting program is "really a shift in taxes." He said any savings at the federal level are putting pressures on the taxpayers in their hometowns and states.

In other words, the federal government may be putting money into one of your pockets while cities and states take it out of the other. So, the argument goes, where's the gain except to pass the buck and the blame from one tax collector to another?

If Reaganomics works in the long run, the gains would be substantial. But only if the stimulus to the economy nationally is successful enough to offset the growing local burdens.

Since the recovery is new and unproven, there's no way to tell yet just how it will work out. But in the meantime, local taxes are, indeed, going up.

An Associated Press survey made in February showed the states facing a combined $5.8 billion deficit. Since most states cannot operate legally in the red, this must be made up by the taxpayer or services must be slashed.

Neither is easy. The services that would be cut include schools, roads, parks and other facilities dear to the powerful middle class. But the survey found virtually every state considering legislation to cut services or raise taxes.

There are still 30 states where legislatures are in session; so, it will be some time before all have completed action on these measures.

in-city single rate for water service. He said the development is now charged a double rate for service outside the city, although there is only one master metering point for the whole mobile home park.

Roberts said that GUC has what amounts to a "zero cost operation" that is very profitable in that it has several hundred water users channeled through one meter site. He said, "That is the bottom line."

The attorney asked that the city look at the petition from a positive standpoint in considering what is best for Greenville. He said it involves a unanimous application for annexation by the residents, an increase in the tax base, in-place underground electrical utilities, a development that is less than a mile from the present city limits.

It was pointed out that water and sewer services are provided to the 260 residents of the park by Rose Hill Associates Water Co., a public utility, and there would be no obligation on the part of Greenville Utilities to assume operation of the in-park system if the area is annexed. Roberts said no extension of lines would be necessary to serve the development.

Mac McCauley, assistant city attorney, said that statewide annexation legislation adopted in 1974 relative to non-contiguous annexation says an area may be brought into the city if there is 100 percent petition participation by property owners. He said there are no requirements that the city annex such an area.

Roberson said that while the park meets current criteria for annexation by petition, the key point is the revenue loss by GUC if positives and negatives are weighed. He said the staff feels the area should be considered at a later date.

Commissioner Rufus Keel said he was not as concerned with the revenue loss as he was that lots in the development meet standards and that the owners maintain the water system. He said he was concerned with "making sure the quality of life in this area is suitable."

Roberts said the requirement that lots in a mobile home park be at least 6,000 square feet can be met. He said the owners have a 26-acre undeveloped tract adjacent to the park.

Streets in the development are private drives and maintenance responsibility would rest with the owners, not the city, if the area is annexed, it was explained. Roberts said access to the park is through a dedicated street.

The board's recommendation will be forwarded to the council for consideration.

In other business, board members voted to recommend that the council approve a request by Kenneth M. Buck, Charles H. McGowan Jr. and Janice M. Barbee to rezone one acre, located south of Ninth Street, north of U.S. 264 Business/10th Street, west of W.S. Pollard property, and east of Clark Street, from unoffensive industry to downtown commercial fringe.

Buck said the petitioners are considering relocating an existing business to the vacant warehouse on the tract and leasing part of the 38,000-square-foot facility to another tenant. He said the facility will be revitalized.

Commissioners approved the preliminary plat of phase three of Lexington Square Townhouses, located in Oakmont Professional Plaza on Oakmont Drive. The third phase will involve 14 townhouse units.

The board also voted to table consideration of a request by Ralph C. Tucker Jr. to rezone 57.717 acres, located south of the Greenville Athletic Club and Oakmont Square, west of N.C. 43, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to office and institutional. The petitioner requested that the matter be tabled.

Commissioners voted to: continue its present policy relative to notifying adjoining property owners of rezoning petitions; continue the policy of board members receiving all planning documents in advance of the meetings and the staff forwarding documents to all petitioners; have preliminary subdivision maps sent to board members for consideration prior to meetings; and to have agenda items forwarded to members one week prior to meetings.

private non-profit group that serves as an advisory group to the state department on health care matters.

Prior to approval, chamber directors listened to conflicting reports from Dr. Jon Tinglestat and Bob Griffin, members of a chamber task force that has studied Charter's proposal to build the psychiatric hospital.

"This tends to be a very sensitive issue and as you will see the task force was split on the matter," task force chairman Jeanette Cox said in her opening statement.

Tinglestat, from the East Carolina University Medical School, told the board that several task force members did not endorse Charter Medical's application, but rather endorsed Pitt County Memorial Hospital's plan to expand its own psychiatric patient facilities and services.

Tinglestat said members of the task force who disagreed with Charter's proposal believed it "was inconsistent with the philosophy, goals and objectives of the health systems plan to have mental health services deinstitutionalized and provided by community hospitals and community mental health centers..."

Griffin, an industry representative on the task force, told chamber members there is a need for services Charter Medical would provide.

Among the topics researched by the task force in making its recommendations were need of a new psychiatric facility, enhancement of the quality of service, financial impact on PCMH and the impact of Charter Medical on health care costs.

Griffin said "at least 1,310 children are in need of a community-based, residential treatment alternative to Cherry Hospital." He also told board members that present inpatient alcohol services in this area are "clearly inadequate to serve the needs."

Tinglestat agreed there is a need, but said it had been covered in PCMH's expansion plans. "The present psychiatric unit at PCMH consists of 40 beds and occupancy levels since October 1982 have averaged 83 percent. PCMH is responding to requests for additional psychiatry beds and construction will begin in the fall of 1983 on a 36 bed-unit at an estimated cost of $700,000," he said. Money for the proposed psychiatric expansion is already on-hand, Tinglestat said.

Tinglestat also offered a comparison of proposed health costs to support the PCMH expansion plan. "The private psychiatric hospital, in the certificate of need which has been submitted to the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, projects for the year 1984 an average daily room charge of $245 and $55 per day for all ancillaries, a total daily charge of $300. The current PCMH room rate is $160 a day with average additional daily charges of $35 for psychiatric patients, a total charge of $195."

He said rate changes for 1984 have not been determined but that a hypothetical increase of 15 percent would add $30 a day, yielding a daily charge of $225 at PCMH in contrast to Charter Medical's proposed charge of $300.

Other points brought out by Griffin included the role of the new beds proposed for PCMH that would be swing — medical-surgical-psychiatric — beds as opposed to the totally psychiatric-oriented unit Charter Medical proposed. Griffin also cited the number of jobs Charter Medical would open in the community — a possible 61½ positions.

Tax cost to Pitt County residents was brought up and Griffin assured the chamber that, if Charter Medical locates in Greenville, the taxpayers would not have to part with a cent. "The funding for the establishment of the Charter Medical psychiatric facility will be capitalized solely by Charter Medical and its investors," he said.

Tinglestat said taxpayers have a misconception about the amount of tax dollars paid into PCMH. He said the $9 million borrowed to finance the hospital "is now being paid off ... and the county puts no money into the day-to-day running of the hospital unless (an indigent) citizen is a patient." He said no new tax dollars would be used if expansion plans for the psychiatric unit at PCMH become a reality.

A major part of the discussion centered on effects to PCMH revenue. Tinglestat and Griffin concurred that PCMH would experience a loss of revenue if Charter Medical was to locate in Pitt County. Griffin and Dr. Jim Carter, another task force member, said in the long run, Charter Medical would help the hospital.

Carter gave an analogy of an empty bucket, saying that Charter Medical would help draw patients and better doctors to the area which would in turn fill the bucket.

System would maintain a directory of organizations eligible and willing to employ such people. Individuals could seek out the jobs on their own or accept assignment by Selective Service.

Organizations eligible to employ these workers include governmental units, charitable groups, hospitals and nursing homes, educational programs, social service agencies, environmental groups and community service organizations.

They would have to comply with minimum federal and local wage and hour laws, and provide at least 35 hours of work weekly for the individuals assigned to them.

Registration of men began in the summer of 1980 and continues, although there is no actual draft.

Registration was instituted to provide a reserve of names in the event a national emergency required a draft; development of an alternative service program is part of that preparation.

Currently, men are required to sign up at post offices within 30 days of their 18th birthday. Those who fail to do so can face up to a $10,000 fine and a prison term. Several have been prosecuted and some sentenced to perform public service terms after being convicted of failing to comply with the law.

The new rules also provide for prosecution by the Justice Department for men who are assigned alternative service but fail to complete it.

Pickets...

the outer boundaries of the court grounds are indistinguishable from any other sidewalks in Washington, D.C., and we can discern no reason why they should be treated any differently," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

But the justices left unanswered whether the ban on demonstrators can be applied to the rest of the court's grounds.

"We need not make that judgment at this time," White explained, "because (the ban imposed by Congress) covers the public sidewalks as well as the building and grounds inside the sidewalks."

Justice Department lawyers had argued that the ban on demonstrations qualified as a "reasonable time, place and manner restriction" on free speech and free expression rights.

The court rejected that argument. "We do not denigrate the necessity to protect persons and property or to maintain proper order and decorum within the Supreme Court grounds, but we do question whether a total ban on carrying a flag, banner or device on the public sidewalks substantially serves these purposes," White said.

White added: "We hold that under the First Amendment (the law) is unconstitutional as applied to those sidewalks. Of course, this is not to say that those sidewalks, like other sidewalks, are not subject to reasonable time, place and manner restrictions."

Although the federal law involved in today's decision — and White's opinion — dealt only with Supreme Court grounds, language in White's opinion conceivably could be applied to the sidewalks bordering other federal buildings as well.

Referring to the sidewalks surrounding the court, White said they "are used ... like other public sidewalks. There is nothing to indicate to the public that these sidewalks are part of the Supreme Court grounds or are in any way different from other public sidewalks in the city."

Need Time To Appeal Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission says it needs more time to decide whether to appeal a ruling that lifts the ban on urea formaldehyde foam insulation.

The Justice Department, in a petition with a federal appeals court on behalf of the CPSC, said the two-week extension in the filing deadline was needed. The petition said the CPSC needed to review the issues addressed in the court's 15-page ruling and the 100-volume record that led the commission to ban the once-popular insulation.

The ban, which had taken effect last August, was lifted April 7 by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. Under court procedures, the commission would have had until Thursday to decide whether to appeal the case, according to CPSC spokesman Lou Brott. The motion filed in New Orleans seeks to have that deadline extended until May 5.

Defeat Of 'Comparative Fault' Feared

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of a bill to establish a comparative fault system for negligence lawsuits in North Carolina say they doubt that the state Senate will vote on the bill this session.

That's because the Senate voted 25-22 Tuesday to reject a proposed amendment that would have exempted the state from the bill and then sent the proposal to the Senate Insurance Committee, where supporters say they lack the votes to get the bill back to the floor.

The amendment was aimed at calming opponents' fears that the bill would cost the state a lot of money in insurance claims. The vote was considered a test vote on the bill itself.

"The chances are extremely slim," Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said of his bill's chances for passage. "I don't see how we can get the votes to get it out of the Insurance Committee."

Insurance Committee Chairman Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, agreed the votes were not there. Jenkins supports the bill, however, and said he wanted to get it to his committee so he could control its fate.

"I've won this one so far," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, one of the bill's leading opponents.

Last session, an almost identical bill passed the House 79-32 but failed in the Senate by about four votes. Jenkins said the bill had gotten further this year because it has been sent to two committees — Insurance and Judiciary III — without being killed.

The bill, identical to one introduced by Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, would replace North Carolina's system of contributory fault with a comparative fault system. Currently victims may recover damages for injuries only if they can show that those injuries were caused by the negligence of another person. The comparative fault bill would allow victims to recover as long as they were less than half to blame for the injury.

The idea is to divide damages based on the relative fault of those involved.

The amendment Tuesday was prompted by a series of letters from supporters and opponents estimating what the bill might cost the state. The exchange of letters several weeks ago sent the bill back to Barnes judiciary committee.

Legislative analysts said they could not accurately determine the cost of the bill but said insurance claims could increase by 4 percent to 12 percent, costing state government $100,000 to $300,000 more each year.

The state budget office predicted it would cost the state an additional $500,000 a year and the state courts director said he could make no accurate estimate of the fiscal impact on the courts.

Barnes had said he wanted to submit a separate bill to set aside money for including the state under the proposed law. That would keep the comparative fault bill from going to the Appropriations Committee, where it could not be considered until the very end of the session when the budget is enacted.

"You are creating a double standard," Hardison said.

"What the amendment would do is make a bad bill worse," said Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg. "I don't understand how anyone could conceive of having two standards."

But Barnes and others said the state already has separate rules governing it in lawsuits. They said the amendment wouldn't change anything.

After the amendment's defeat, Hardison and others pushed for the bill to go to the Insurance Committee. A number of insurance-related questions were raised, including what would be the effect of comparative fault on the awarding of insurance driving points.

Barnes unsuccessfully sought to divert the bill to the Appropriations Committee, where he said support was greater.

But that effort failed, 28-19, and the Senate voted 38-9 to send the bill to the Insurance Committee.

Green Lauds Cooperation

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green today praised the cooperation of the four local governments as officials broke ground for the new runway at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

"The state has worked in conjunction with the counties and airport authorities across the state to see that airports have grown and expanded along with the industrial and commercial centers that they support," Green said in a prepared statement.

"The cities of Raleigh and Durham and Wake counties are to be commended for recognizing the importance of growth in the future," he said. Their cooperation is "an outstanding example of benefits gained from pooling resources and working together for the common mutual good."

Over 200 invited guests attended the groundbreaking ceremonies at the site of the proposed new 10,000-foot runway. The runway will parallel the existing runway.

Grading and clearing has been completed and should be finished by mid-1985 or early 1986.

OFFICIAL TOUR LONDON (AP) — A British Foreign Office minister will make a four-nation South American tour this month, the first ministerial-level visit by Britain to the region since its 74-day war with Argentina over the Falkland Islands last year.

Test Results Frightening Dioxin Area Residents

By RAY FORMANEK
Associated Press Writer
IMPERIAL, Mo. (AP) — Area residents screened for dioxin contamination are confused and frightened after being told by health officials that almost all of them have some abnormality in their blood or urine tests.

"I was terrified," Shirley Abrahamson said Tuesday.
"You start talking to all the neighbors and everybody has abnormal blood and urine. I can't believe we all have abnormalities."

"I called my wife at work and she broke into tears," said Larry Webb, one of 130 residents here to be screened after being deemed "high-risk" by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.
"I thought my heart was going to stop beating."

Webb was among 112 residents out of 130 receiving intensive dioxin screening who were notified in a letter from state health officials Tuesday that early lab results showed abnormalities in at least one test. In all, about 1,200 Missouri residents were screened in the CDC examinations.

Those screened all live near sites determined by the Environmental Protection Agency to contain some of the highest levels of dioxin in the state.

CDC officials ordered the intensive health exams earlier this year after the EPA found dioxin in some areas at close to 300 times the level it considers safe.

"All 112 showed some abnormality," Dr. Denny
Donnell of the Missouri Division of Health said in a telephone interview from Atlanta, where he is meeting with CDC officials.

"We are not yet in a position to say that these abnormalities are due to dioxin," he added. "Some of the key tests are still being completed."

Webb said he, his wife,
Sharon, and their two sons all had an abnormal blood count. In addition, Webb said he had abnormal blood chemistry while his son Brian, 10 had acetone, a flammable organic solvent, in his urine.

For the past decade, the Webbs have lived less than 100 yards from the so-called Minker site in the Meramec Hills area about 25 miles south of St. Louis. The site has been tested as having 300 parts of dioxin per billion parts of soil. The CDC has said it considers levels above one part per billion to be dangerous to humans.

Residents received the test results by registered mail about mid-afternoon. Donnell said he sent the results without explanation, directing those affected to consult their own physicians for further information.

"I will agree it is highly technical," Donnell said.
"But we expect they will find technical support to continue with their own health care."

Donnell said the battery of test results does not include three liver tests, which he called crucial. He said an overall evaluation will be done when those tests are completed by the CDC and residents notified of the results.

"I wouldn't be alarmed by the letters," Donnell said.
"But then, I'm not one of those people."

The Minker site is one of more than 25 sites sprayed with dioxin-contaminated waste oil in the early 1970s.
Dioxin is a byproduct of herbicide and germicide production. It has been known to cause cancer, liver and spleen problems, and reproductive failure in laboratory animals. Its effect on humans is disputed and unclear.

Opponents Fight State Using Lethal Injections

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Lethal injections, supported as the "state of the art" in enforcing the death penalty, may change the way juries look at death and may increase the use of capital punishment, opponents said Tuesday.

"I don't want to sugar-coat for juries exactly what they're doing," Raleigh attorney William B. Crumpler told the Senate Judiciary III Committee. "They're killing them. You're making it more palatable to the public and, in turn, more palatable to the jury."

Sen. Bob Davis, D-Rowan, introduced the bill to do away with the gas chamber in executions. He said gas "is an archaic method which was used to kill many, many thousands and perhaps millions of Jewish people in World War II."

Davis said lethal injections were less painful, more dignified and less expensive. And Dr. John Gamble said drugs are "the state of the art in administering death."

Davis said death by cyanide gas could take more than eight minutes, while the condemned suffered dizziness, pain and convulsions before succumbing to asphyxiation. He said sodium pentothal quickly brings unconsciousness before other drugs stop the subject's heart and breathing.

Dr. Arthur Finn, a physician's intern at North Carolina Memorial Hospital, said administering a lethal injection violated the Hippocratic Oath and everything physicians stand for.

He said the oath provides that no doctor "administer a poison if asked to."

Soviets Put 3 Into Space

MOSCOW (AP) — Three Soviet cosmonauts were lifted into space today aboard a Soyuz space vehicle to link up with an orbiting space laboratory, the Soviet media reported.

The official news agency Tass identified the cosmonauts as spaceflight commander Vladimir G. Titov, engineer Gennady M. Strekalov and researcher Alexander A. Serebrov.

The spaceship was launched at 5:11 p.m. Moscow time (8:11 a.m. EST) from the Baikonur space center in Soviet central Asia, the reports said.

Soviet television transmitted films of the launch about an hour after the shot.

Strekalov, 43, and Serebrov, 39, have flown on previous space missions and both have the title, "hero of the Soviet Union." The mission commander, Titov, 36, is a lieutenant colonel in the Soviet air force.

The manned mission was the first since two cosmonauts, Anatoly Berezovoy and Valentin Lebedev, completed history's longest space mission — 211 days aloft — last Dec. 10.

The record-setting cosmonauts set their record aboard the Salyut-7 space station, which is also the destination of the latest trio.

"In keeping with the flight program, Soyuz T-8 is to dock with the orbital complex, Salyut-7-Cosmos 1443," Tass said.

The unmanned Cosmos 1443 spaceship was launched March 3 and docked with the space station on March 10.

"The crew is to carry out scientific-technical, medical and biological research and experiments aboard the flight complex," Tass said.

"Cosmonauts Titov, Strekalov and Serebrov feel well. The on-board systems of the Soyuz T-8 spacecraft are functioning normally," it added.

"It's morally repugnant for a physician to do this," he said. "It strikes me that death can never be humane."

Betsy Glenmon, a physician's assistant at Duke Medical Center and a member of Amnesty International, said medical societies in all five states with death by injection have opposed the administration of the injections by doctors.

Other doctors disagreed, saying a physician's first responsibility should be to reduce suffering.

"Not all physicians take the Hippocratic Oath," said Gamble. "It's archaic, too."

Rep. Bill Grimsley, D-Guilford, also a physician, said he favored the change.

"The procedure has been used for a long time for surgical anesthesia," he said.

Libyan Aircraft Had Arms Cargo

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Four Libyan planes en route to Nicaragua with a cargo of arms and explosives have been ordered out of Brazil, according to a Foreign Ministry spokesman who accused the Libyans of "an abuse of good faith."

The spokesman, Bernardo Pericas, said Tuesday his government is delivering a formal protest note to Libya because the North African country misled Brazilian authorities about the transport planes' cargo.

When the Libyan government requested permission for the four planes to stop in Brazil Saturday for repairs and fuel, the cargo was listed as "ambulances, hospital equipment and medical supplies," Pericas said.

"That declaration did not correspond to the real cargo of the planes," he said, which included arms and explosives destined for Nicaragua.

Nicaragua's leftist government is fighting an insurgency by Honduras-based rebels.

A Prize For Buckling-Up

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A six-pack of soft drinks and a certificate to a fast food restaurant were presented to a Chapel Hill woman Tuesday — and all she did was remember to fasten her seat belt while she was driving.

The presentation to Annette Munson marked the inauguration of a six-month campaign to persuade drivers to wear seat belts by rewarding those who do with prizes. The effort is sponsored by the University of North Carolina Highway Research Program, the Governor's Highway Safety Program, General Motors Corp. and Village Companies of Chapel Hill.

Spotters are stationed in several locations throughout Chapel Hill and Carrboro. The project will give away about 60 prizes a day for a total of about $30,000 in donated prizes and certificates, according to B.J. Campbell, director of the project.

Will Lobby For Train Service

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Carolina Association of Passenger Train Advocates says it will lobby local officials to support train service connecting Charlotte, Greensboro and Raleigh.

Officials of the organization say they will ask city and county governments in the three cities to pass resolutions calling for train service.

A recent study by Amtrak concluded that enough support exists to make the 172-mile commuter route feasible. Once Amtrak puts a price tag on the service, the state Legislature will vote on whether to fund it.

Doug Lowe, a spokesman for the association, said if legislators vote in this year's session, daily train service between Charlotte and Raleigh could begin by the end of this year.

Did Jim Hunt's PAC Use Your Tax Dollars To Set Up The NCCF?

Richardson Preyer, State Employee and Hunt Fund Raiser

Jim Hunt

• First, Jim Hunt's Political Action Committee Chairman, Richardson Preyer was paid a state salary of $66,000 for teaching a few hours a week at the University of North Carolina.¹

• Then Preyer got fifteen of Hunt's political cronies, four of them on the state payroll, to lend Hunt's PAC $40,000.⁴

• While a state employee (earning $66,000 a year),³ Preyer and the Hunt PAC held press conferences attacking Hunt's opponent.^{3,5}

• Hunt and Preyer then traveled to New York,⁶ Atlanta,⁷ and Washington⁸ to raise over $165,000⁹ for the Hunt PAC.

• The Hunt PAC bought newspaper ads attacking Hunt's opponent^{10,11,12} that even the liberal media said were false and misleading.^{13,14}

• The Hunt PAC got thousands of dollars from Sol Linowitz (who negotiated the Panama Canal giveaway),¹⁵ Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and other liberal millionaires and union bosses.^{7,16}

• The Hunt PAC is mailing over a million fundraising letters, attacking Hunt's opponent, to raise millions from the liberal activists outside North Carolina.^{17,18}

So, the taxpayers shelled out $66,000 — and Jim Hunt got his Political Action Committee.

Shultz Sees Moderate Mexico Policy Trend

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says Mexico, long at odds with the U.S. view of the turmoil in Central America, may now be moving toward a more even-handed policy toward the region.

Shultz said Tuesday night that after two days of talks with top Mexican officials, "nobody took issue" with the American position that arms flows to Salvadoran rebels from Cuba and Nicaragua are a major source of conflict in the area.

Speaking to reporters on the return trip to Washington from Mexico City, Shultz said his discussions with Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda "gave me some encouragement that he does see it that way."

Implicit in Shultz's remarks was the possibility that Mexico, which has been on friendly terms with Nicaraguan authorities, may be in a position to moderate their policies.

Shultz spoke on the eve of a renewed effort by Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama to determine whether there is enough common ground among the parties to the conflict in Central America to pursue a peace initiative.

The foreign ministers of these four countries toured Central American countries last week and were meeting again today in Panama to discuss future strategy.

After Shultz's consultations in Mexico, which involved three U.S. and three Mexican cabinet secretaries, the two governments issued a joint statement that indicated they were as far apart as ever on the Central American issue.

The vaguely-worded statement said the United States and Mexico agreed to "promote processes of dialogue and negotiation" in Central America for the purpose of bringing peace to that embattled region.

The statement did not specify the type of negotiations which should be conducted. Mexico long has advocated negotiations between the government and the guerrillas in El Salvador as a means of settling the conflict there.

The United States, saying it wants to preserve the integrity of the democratic process now under way in El Salvador, has favored negotiations limited to enabling the rebels to participate in the electoral system.

Mexico has minimized the importance of the external support for the guerrillas while suggesting the conflict in El Salvador basically is a reflection of decades of repression and injustice.

In his remarks Tuesday night, however, Shultz said that Sepulveda recognized the importance of suspending arms flows from one country to another if peace is to be achieved. "That's really what's taking place from Cuba and Nicaragua to El Salvador," he said.

During his visit to Managua last week, Sepulveda "apparently took the lead" in highlighting this issue to Nicaraguan officials, Shultz said.

Shultz appeared skeptical about the prospective peace initiative Mexico and the three other countries are undertaking but said he hopes it bears fruit.

As U.S. officials see it, a decision by Nicaragua to halt its assistance to the Salvadoran rebels could represent a boost to the Salvadoran government in its efforts to gain the upper hand over the guerrillas and consolidate a democratic system.

It also would remove a principal source of tension between the United States and Nicaragua. The Sandinista government has accused the United States of engaging in a covert operation aimed at forcing the country's leftist leadership from power.

Still unclear is the degree of influence Mexico has with Nicaragua and whether the Sandinista authorities would see it in their interest to move toward moderation.

Shultz's assessment of Mexico's views on the situation seemed to contrast with those appearing in the government-influenced media in Mexico this week.

In what seemed to be a campaign orchestrated by the government, most major dailies in Mexico have carried front-page stories asserting that the Shultz visit will not alter Mexico's policies toward Central America's problems.

A major feature of that policy has been that the United States, by providing military aid to El Salvador and by pursuing a hostile attitude toward Nicaragua, has been a prime source of those problems.

Ready To Raise Satellite Orbit

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A plan to correct and raise the misshapen orbit of a $100 million communications satellite should be ready by next week, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

A malfunctioning rocket module put the satellite, called the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, into a low, lopsided orbit after it was deployed successfully on April 4 by the space shuttle Challenger.

The first stage of a rocket module attached to the satellite raised its orbit as planned, but a second stage of the module misfired, sending the craft into an orbit several thousand miles lower than planned.

Officials at the Goddard Spaceflight Center in Maryland said Tuesday NASA and TRW Inc.

engineers are about to finish a plan to fire small rocket thrusters on the craft over several days to raise the orbit to the planned point 22,300 miles over the east coast of Brazil.

Computers are being used to perfect the orbit adjustment plan and it should be ready by next week, officials said.

Two thrusters on the craft, officials said, are malfunctioning, but engineers expect to be able to raise the orbit without using those thrusters.

Officials earlier said the broken thrusters caused the satellite to wobble slightly, but this problem has been controlled and the craft is now in a stable attitude with its solar power cells pointed at the sun.

The satellite passes through the shadow of the Earth once a day and uses about half a pound of fuel after each such eclipse to regain stability, officials said. The length of the eclipse passages, however, is growing shorter, making it easier to control the craft, officials said.

The craft was launched with more than 1,300 pounds of thruster fuel on board and NASA officials said it should arrive in the high orbit with enough fuel to complete its planned 10-year mission.

The satellite is designed to relay radio signals from orbiting satellites, including the space shuttle, to a receiving complex in White Sands, N.M. The satellite will provide near-constant contact with low orbit satellites and improve the quality of communications from all satellites, officials said.

TRW Inc. designed the satellite. The rocket module that malfunctioned was manufactured by Boeing Aerospace under an Air Force contract. A special board is investigating the failure of the rocket module, called the Inertial Upper Stage.

Engineers are speculating that when the module failed it caused damage that resulted in the malfunction of the two thrusters on the satellite.

Has 2 Sets Of Identical Twins

TOKYO (AP) — Rare quadruplets — two sets of identical twins — were born to a farmer's wife in Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, the woman's obstetrician said today.

Myoko Hane, 32-year-old wife of Eiji Hane, gave birth Tuesday to the four boys at a Iwamizawa Hospital.

Two sets of identical twins at one birth is rare, said Dr. Hiroyoshi Hayashi of the Sorachi Obstetrics and Gynecology Hospital in Iwamizawa, 400 miles north of Tokyo. Mrs. Hane had not taken fertility drugs, he said.

The Asahi Evening News reported that quadruplets are born in only one out of 510,000 births.

The four babies weighed between 3 pounds, 8 ounces, and 5 pounds, 10 ounces, and were placed in incubators where they are doing well, the doctor said.

The couple has a 4-year-old boy and a 2-year-old girl.

Students Counsel Area Small Business Firms

AREA STUDENTS ON ADVISORY TEAMS — Management assistance to small business firms is discussed by this group of East Carolina University students. Left to right are

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Two students from the Pitt County area in the East Carolina University School of Business are counseling a small business firm in eastern North Carolina this semester. The business students are Stan Quimby of Greenville and Grayson Hufford of Winterville.

They are among 32 students involved in the ECU Small Business Institute, a program sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration. This program not only helps the businesses, but provides a valuable link between schools of business and the small businesses of the community.

At this time, the program involves 22 eastern North Carolina businesses — including retailing, wholesaling, manufacturing and service firms. Teams consisting of two or three ECU seniors furnish detailed management assistance and counseling to the participating firms — usually in the record keeping, selling, advertising and management areas.

The student counselors assist the business owners to determine their problems. Under the direction of Dr. R. B. Keusch of the ECU School of Business, the students make suggestions to overcome these problems.

Since the start of the SBI program at ECU eight years ago, East Carolina students have worked with over 250 firms. The ECU-SBI program has won four awards in the last six years. Three awards were for the North Carolina SBA district, and the fourth was for the entire Region IV consisting of eight southeastern states, in competition with 60 other universities.

"The businesses participate in the program voluntarily and, of course, our students may only advise. However, many of the recommendations of our student teams have been successfully put into practice in some manner," said Dr. Keusch.

N.C. Lottery Bill Inches Ahead

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although a state Senate committee voted 11-1 to approve a lottery bill Tuesday, debate about the measure was anything but decisive.

The Senate Rules Committee last week held a public hearing on bills to establish a lottery either through direct legislative action or subject to a public referendum. However, most members appeared willing to let the public have another chance to address the issue.

"I think we ought to sample the water," said Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, who chaired a subcommittee that worked on the bills.

"This is a pretty big change from the way the state's been doing things," said Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba. "I think we should look at this very carefully."

However, the committee decided against giving the other version an unfavorable report — a standard action that would preclude reconsideration of the measure.

Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, urged the panel to favor quicker action, saying the state could lose up to $100 million a year while waiting for a favorable vote. Both versions are based on Maryland's lottery laws, differing only in whether a referendum is required before enactment.

Instead, the panel voted 7-5 allow a referendum only during a statewide general election — meaning no vote could be taken before November 1984. The bill would have allowed a referendum as early as this Nov. 8, in conjunction with a water bond issue.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, pushed for the amendment, saying he wanted to be sure "to get the people out to vote."

Barnes said he was afraid the lottery would be overshadowed by a general election.

"I have problems with the amendment," he said.

The bill must go to the Appropriations Committee before being considered by the full Senate, and Barnes said some changes might be made.

"How a bill starts out and how it ends up are two different things," he said, but he refused to say whether he would attempt to amend the bill on the floor.

Barnes told the committee that the North Carolina Association of Educators, the North Carolina State Employees Association and the North Carolina State Government Employees Association all endorsed the bill.

But Sen. George Marion, D-Surry, the only member to vote against the amended version, said it is "horrendous that state employees have to lobby for lotteries to get a raise." He said he would rather increase taxes than legalize gambling.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he had mixed feelings about both bills since gambling has been illegal for so long.

"We're saying we need money so we're going to overlook our high principles for dollars and cents," he said. But Rauch said there are already inequities that discriminate against the poor.

"Anyone at this table can call a stock broker and buy or sell stock," he said. "There are already so many privileged people in this state who can have their 'lottery' and call it business speculation."

Payment Offer To Broiler Growers

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A major creditor of Watson Seafood and Poultry Co. of Rose Hill says it will pay broiler growers $135,000 owed them by the company.

Coastal Production Credit Association of Kenansville took over Watson last week to begin liquidating its assets. The company has debts totalling $5.6 million, including $2.5 million owed to PCA.

PCA officials last week said farmers who had chickens in their poultry houses would receive feed and be paid for growing the birds. Tuesday the PCA said it would also pay farmers for grown birds picked up by Watson in the three weeks prior to the PCA take-over.

Cape Fear Feed Products Co. of Greensboro attached Watson's accounts receivable early last week, leaving the company with no money to pay growers or buy feed.

Liquidation of the company could mean an economic loss of $15 million to $20 million a year to Duplin and Pender county growers and businesses. The company employs 120 people. It also indirectly provides jobs for another 220 employees of Rose Hill Poultry.

A group of broiler growers headed by Rabon Maready of Beulaville is attempting to raise money and prepare a financial plan to revive the failed company. About 120 farmers have production contracts with the company and depend on broilers for their income.

The grower group must raise at least $600,000 within the next few days to keep the company in operation.

PCA president Roy Houston said offers for the company so far have not been acceptable.

Lawmakers See Tiny 'Miracle'

BOSTON (AP) — The father of Jamie Fiske, the tiny recipient of a life-saving liver transplant, brought his chubby-faced daughter to the state Senate where he introduced her as a little "miracle."

The 16-month-old girl clapped happily Tuesday as Massachusetts lawmakers presented a resolution honoring the family.

Charles Fiske accepted the resolution, saying, "If you saw pictures of Jamie prior to the operation, she was jaundiced, yellow. ... We are here with a miracle that has happened to us. We ask that you offer that same hope to families like ourselves."

Legislation is pending that would require insurers to pay for liver transplants, a bill Fiske has asked state lawmakers to support.

"It remains for the builders to weld 17 kilometers (10.5 miles) of pipe in the most complex part of the route", Tass said, adding the entire project is ahead of schedule.

About one-fourth of the 2,782-mile pipeline is being built in the Siberian part of the Soviet Union, where work is possible only when the marshy tundra is frozen.

Dr. R.P. Patterson, a professor in N.C. State's crop science department, said the food symposium is unique and that it should make more people aware of the problems of feeding the world.

Freak N.C. Cold Snap Threatening The Fruit Crops

By The Associated Press
A freak cold snap dropped temperatures to record lows again Tuesday night as growers battled to save their fruit crops.

Both Greensboro and Raleigh-Durham reported record lows of 28 degrees early this morning. At Charlotte the temperature hit 31 degrees shortly after midnight, breaking the previous record of 33 degrees set in 1904. Wilmington recorded 33 degrees early this morning, breaking the old record of 34 degrees set in 1926.

Forecasters say the cold spell is not over for North Carolina, with frost warnings again being issued for tonight in all areas of the state except for the Outer Banks.

Low temperatures tonight are expected to be in the mid to upper 20s over most of the state, with readings in the 30s along the coast. Forecasters say a slow warming trend is expected later this week. Area not under a freeze watch was the Outer Banks.

Overnight temperatures Monday dipped to record-breaking levels, including 26 degrees in Greensboro, 31 in Raleigh and Durham and 30 in Charlotte. A low of 27 was reported in Asheville.

Wake County fruit growers were up all Monday night irrigating their crops to try to prevent damage from the freak, record-breaking April snow and freeze and some said they would be out again Tuesday night.

Peach grower Bobby Fryar of McLeansville spent the night trying to save his crop by spraying water over his 2,000-tree orchard. Ice forming on the crop protects it from subfreezing temperatures.

"We had light damage last (Monday) night," said Ervin D. Evans, horticulturalist with Wake County Agricultural Extension Service. "Most of the growers did what they were supposed to and kept irrigation going. Some of them hated to because the fields were so wet, but they had no choice."

"Judging from the temperatures, I'm sure a small percentage of the strawberries got zapped," Dr. Katie Perry, meteorologist with the N.C. State University Extension Service, said Tuesday. "The readings we've gotten have not been damaging levels in the Sandhills area."

Andy Boyd, a Guilford County agricultural extension service agent, said strawberry and flower growers were facing similar problems.

"I know one farmer who ran his irrigation Saturday and Sunday and still has one out of four berries dead," said Boyd. "The strawberries often will freeze over, even after irrigating in hopes of saving the crop. As for flowers, the top half of my azaleas was gone Saturday and I fully expect the rest of them to be dead when I get home tonight."

Sandhills peach growers, buoyed by the promise of a good comeback crop after last year's disaster, were worried about the temperatures.

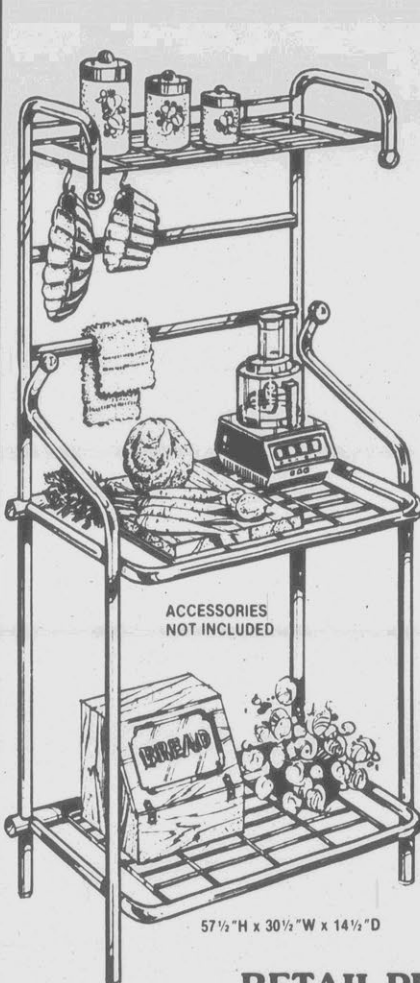

Gallimore, of D.P. Gallimore Farms near Ellerbe. "If this crop freezes we just couldn't stand it. If we lose this one...well, I'm just sick."

Clarence Black, Sandhills Research Station superintendent, said damage to the fruit trees and berries would depend on the length of time the temperatures fell into the 20s.

Provide Protection To The Lookalikes

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — State lawmakers are getting into the swim of things by giving official protection to a Loch Ness monster lookalike named "Champ," said to inhabit the depths of Lake Champlain.

The resolution, approved Monday by both houses of the New York Legislature, encourages "serious scientific inquiry into the existence of unusual animals in Lake Champlain, especially one commonly known as 'Champ.'" It also says the creature — if there is one — "should be protected from any willful act resulting in death, injury or harassment."

"I have not seen Champ, but I haven't been there as often as many others have," said Anthony Casale, a Republican assemblyman from Herk m0219-b. While legislative resolutions carry no official force, Casal 01:46 claims the new resolution will "draw attention to the issue."

The Lake Champlain Phenomena Investigation claims to have collected reports of about 170 sightings of what could be Champ over the past 200 years. Nine sightings were reported last year, the group said.

People who claim to have seen Champ say it is "blackish gray" and ranges in size from 15 feet to 50 feet with a "snake-like" neck and a small head.

"No act of violence by these animals has ever been recorded against any individual or group of people," according to the resolution.

Casale admits that "if nothing else, it (the resolution) might attract a lot of tourists."

Loch Ness in Scotland has been attracting tourists for decades with reports that a monster, fondly known as "Nessie," inhabits the depths of that lake.

A Third Failure To Vote On Mountaintop Measure

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Senate has failed for the third time to take a vote on a bill regulating mountaintop construction, but supporters called the latest delay a minor inconvenience.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green ordered Tuesday that the bill be returned to the Senate Judiciary I Committee for addition of a technical amendment that got bogged down on the Senate floor.

"The committee substitute was all ready and here they came with a four- or five-page amendment that was hard to follow," Green said in an interview. "That's no way to legislate. I told (Swain) to take the bill and work on it and come back with a clean bill."

The bill stemmed from protests over construction of a 10-story condominium atop Little Sugar Mountain in Avery County. Critics complained that the condo destroyed the beauty of the mountaintop and could lead to a rash of similar buildings.

Sponsored by Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, the bill would prohibit construction of buildings taller than three stories or 35 feet on ridges 2,950 feet above sea level or higher. Violators would be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Government buildings and water, radio, telephone and television towers would be exempt from the restriction.

The bill would apply only to counties and cities that haven't adopted ordinances at least as strict as Thomas' bill. Legislative advisers say there are 25 counties with peaks 2,950 feet above sea level.

The amendment that Swain proposed was to clarify another amendment allowing people to file suit to halt what they consider construction in violation of the law. Swain's amendment clarifies who could sue and be sued and further described the ill effects warranting a suit.

Additionally, the amendment stipulates that evidence presented at public hearings sponsored by counties wishing to be exempted from the law be preserved for public inspection. It gives local governments 120 days from the time the bill's ratified to "opt out."

"It's just clearing things up a bit," said Swain. "There was some wording I didn't like and it got to be too lengthy, so we'll just have to do a bit more in committee."

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, chairman of the Judiciary I Committee, said the amendment would be adopted quickly and that the bill would be back before the full Senate by Friday or Monday.

The bill had been to the Senate floor twice before but both times was returned to committee for more work.

In other legislative action:

Waste Bill

The Senate Judiciary I Committee established a subcommittee to study a bill regulating hazardous waste landfills in North Carolina after several witnesses praised the bill as the best way to deal with an inevitable problem.

The bill, which the House approved after lengthy debate, would require the bottom of hazardous waste landfills to be at least 30 feet above the water table — a requirement that opponents say would rule out construction of landfills in North Carolina.

The bill also would require that landfill operators have adequate insurance and report monthly to the Governor's Waste Management Board and the local county commissioners on the amounts and types of wastes at the site.

Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, bill sponsor, produced a group of supporters including a Florida hydrogeologist, several South Carolina legislators and officials, and Anson County environmentalists.

Anson County had been the site of a proposed hazardous waste landfill, but officials of the company that wanted to construct it recently told South Carolina lawmakers they had changed their minds.

"I'm not here to protect my home county ... but all of North Carolina," said Wyatt Siegler of Anson County. "This bill would provide some degree of protection of the resource we all cherish — our water."

Leslie Tindal, commissioner of agriculture in South Carolina, urged passage of the bill as a first step toward dealing with the hazardous waste problem in North Carolina.

The proposed Anson County landfill was controversial in South Carolina because of fears it would leak hazardous wastes into the Great Pee Dee River, a crucial water supply in northwestern counties.

Lawyers

After extensive debate, the House voted 85-26 to approve a bill that would require district attorneys and the attorney general to be lawyers.

"Lawyers don't have a monopoly on brains," said Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance. "It is an insult to the intelligence of the people of North Carolina to say they must vote for members of a certain profession."

But Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, said positions legally representing the state "ought not to be perverted by anybody who is not trained in the law."

If approved by the Senate, the bill would change the state Constitution only after a statewide vote in favor of the requirement.

School Bus

The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would let oncoming motorists pass stopped school buses in five-lane roads without a median.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, who introduced the bill, resisted efforts by Rep. Tim McDowell, D-Alamance, to gut the bill by removing undivided highways. Under current law motorists from both directions must stop for a stopped bus if there is no median.

McDowell said he was afraid the law would be too complicated for motorists to unravel.

Notaries

A bill that would require that notaries public take a course before being certified sparked debate in the House before passing its second reading.

Supporters said the bill is needed to help curb fraud, while opponents said the course would do little but take money from would-be notaries.

Education

In a move that caught his colleagues by surprise, Sen. Kenneth Harris, R-Mecklenburg, filed three bills that would make substantial changes in the state's public school system.

The bills would revise the system of hiring instructional and supervisory personnel, change the way the entire secondary and elementary school systems are financed and amend the state constitution to provide for election of State Board of Education members, who presently are appointed.

The bills were suggested in a report summarizing the findings of the Select Committee on Education, chaired jointly by Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, and Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe.

Harris, who wasn't on the committee, said he had read its report and was disturbed that the bills weren't introduced.

"The taxpayers paid for that committee and I think the bills it produced ought to go before the Legislature," said Harris. "I don't approve of everything in them, but I want to see them discussed."

Mavretic had no immediate comment on the bills but said he was surprised to see them introduced by Harris.

"Anybody can introduce anything they want," Hardison said.

He said the bills were in the hands of Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, and were ready for introduction. Hardison said he was surprised that Harris moved so quickly and said he was unsure how much he could support the Republican's efforts.

Shellfish

Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank, filed a bill to appropriate more than $160,000 in the 1983-85 biennium for temporary openings of shellfish growing waters.

The bill points out that 319,914 acres of the state's coastal area normally are closed to oyster and clam harvesting and that about 40,000 of those acres are prime shellfish producing areas.

It says limited harvesting in those areas would be beneficial to fishermen and bolster the state's economy but

Scooped'em In Ice Cream Caper

YORKTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — It didn't take police long to get the scoop on a pair of ice cream thieves.

The case began when a couple returned home to find that a half-gallon of chocolate chip ice cream had been taken from their freezer, opened, sampled and left melting on the kitchen floor.

Alongside was a small, used spoon.

Suspects from the heist last Thursday were questioned, and Lt. Daniel Morgan said police finally "solved and digested the case" on Monday.

The ice cream thieves, Morgan said, were 1½ and 2½ years old. They live next door to the burglary victims and apparently wandered into the house through an unlocked porch door.

No arrests were made. Names were not released.

adds that additional staff would be needed to monitor the harvesting's effect on the environment.

Budget

Several members of the joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee questioned why there are 21 vacant positions for Highway Patrol troopers. The jobs are being considered for elimination by the budget committee as a cost-saving measure.

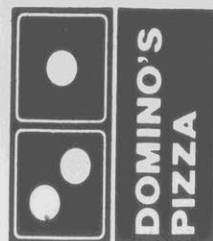

Rep. Margaret Tennille, D-Forsyth, said the positions were vacant because students could not pass the written examination to become a trooper.

"They simply couldn't read and write," Tennille said. She said there are enough applicants for the job but only so many can be trained at one time and when many of them fail the exam there are vacancies.

Committee members also raised questions about recommendations to cut vacant judgeships. Rep. Kenneth Spaulding, D-Durham, asked whether the state could quit funding a position to which someone had been elected.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied today, rebounding from Tuesday's setback.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 5.51 to 1,180.05 in the first half hour.

Gainers held a slight lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In Tuesday's session the market encountered some selling after a stretch of eight consecutive gains. But analysts noted that prices stabilized late in the day, suggesting that no rush to take profits was in the offing.

Interest rates, which rose fairly sharply in the credit markets Tuesday, also leveled off today.

The government reported this morning that the gross national product, adjusted for inflation, grew at a 3.1 percent annual rate in the first quarter of the year. The figure was about a percentage point below previous estimates, but it didn't appear to cause any great concern among traders.

Archer-Daniels-Midland led the active list in the early going, up 1/8 at 20 3/4. A 161,000-share block traded at 20 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dog Jones industrial average fell 8.70 to 1,174.54.

Declines outpaced advances by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 91.21 million shares, against 88.56 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 53 to 91.18. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .89 at 407.97.

A SINGLE FLOWER CLUSTER ... of the horse sugar is enlarged about three times in this photograph taken near Pictolus. A fragrant, white and cream colored flower, it is borne on showy compact clusters along the small tree's branches just before leaves appear. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

'Horse Sugar' Is Seeing Comeback

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The fragrant April flowering horse sugar (sometimes referred to as sweetleaf) has never been near the point of extinction, nor placed on a protected list. However, 10 or 15 years ago it took a little searching in local woods to spot one of the flowering shrubs that along with dogwood lights up forests in April.

Happily, the relatively former scarcity of the shrub has apparently been reversed. For the past couple of springs, horse sugar in flower has become increasingly part of the April display of roadside beauty.

On the north side of the straight stretch of N.C. 903 between Stokes and N.C. 11, on roadsides of country roads near Pictolus, along Martin County roads near Jamesville, and on roads near Goldsboro, among other locales, horse sugar shrubs are currently putting forth a vivid display of flowers.

Usually referred to as a flowering shrub, horse sugar can with equal validity be called a small tree, as it attains a height of 20 to 30 feet at maturity.

The prolific comeback of this small native tree is a heartening reassurance that nature can surprise us with holding its own when conditions are favorable.

Special Plaque To Honor Dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is ordering that a special plaque honoring U.S. Vietnam war dead be placed at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier where there is still an empty crypt.

The plaque will be dedicated on Memorial Day, the Pentagon said.

At the same time, Weinberger ordered a second plaque placed at the Arlington National Cemetery Memorial Amphitheater to explain that "interment of a Vietnam war unknown is impossible now because the remains of Americans who died in Southeast Asia are still being identified," the Pentagon said.

The election of Ms. Dorsey to succeed Greenville attorney Malcolm J. Howard took place at the biennial district convention in the District Court facilities at the courthouse in Greenville. Howard had served three two-year terms as chairman.

Other GOP officers elected were Hal McKinney of Pitt County as vice chairman and Gene Perry of Beaufort County as secretary-treasurer. Nine people were elected to the state's GOP executive committee at the convention.

The GOP convention is held every two years to elect officers and conduct other party business of the district, according to Howard.

LONDON (AP) — In London, commuters can take the subway or take a bus, but if they want to arrive on time, they'd better walk, according to a new survey.

The survey of 500 London office workers by a major employment agency found that people who walk or jog to work are 96 percent certain never to be late. Cyclists have a 92 percent chance of never being late.

But very few do walk or jog to work — just 8 percent,

Only Three Bus Mishap Pupils Still In Hospital

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Only three of the five Wahl-Coates school children admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital following the wreck of a city school bus Monday afternoon remained in the hospital this morning.

A hospital spokesman said Louis Jones, 10, of 313 Paige Drive and Lisa Vines, 12, of 4138 Roundtree Drive were released Tuesday.

Regina Reddick, 12, of 409 Darden Drive and Lindburg

Aarington of 118 Howard Circle remained in stable condition, while Victor Aarington, of 306B Paige Drive was still in satisfactory condition today.

Victor Aarington suffered a broken right arm in the accident, while the others that were hospitalized received head injuries.

Greenville police, who charged bus driver Al James Whichard Jr., 17, of 1907A Kennedy Circle with careless and reckless driving, said Whichard is scheduled for trial in District Court May 19.

Investigators said the bus overturned while turning off Memorial Drive onto Third Street.

Greenville city school Superintendent Delma Blinson said today that Whichard, a Rose High School student, has been relieved of duty as a substitute driver until the investigation of the accident has been completed.

Paul Rasberry, principal at Wahl-Coates, said "quite a few rumors" were circulating at the school Tuesday morning, but said "I made an announcement" giving the details of the incident, "no one killed ... five admitted" and everything was "real fine" after that.

He said 20 of the 65 students on the bus returned to school Tuesday, and said "a lot came back today," although he said no count was available at mid-morning.

The principal said he "talked with all of them" who returned to school Tuesday. "They were a little shook up and concerned," but felt better after the conference, he said.

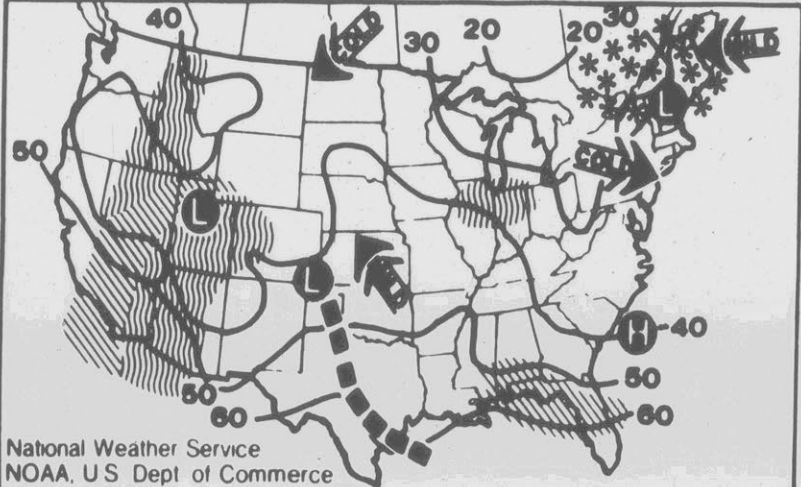

Rasberry said "only one of the students who returned Tuesday said he would not ride the bus. His mother brought the student in."

However, Rasberry said that, after he talked with the student, "he was all right."

Rasberry said flowers were sent to the five children in the hospital.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Edward E. Crutchfield Jr. Tuesday was named president of First Union Corp., company officials said.

Crutchfield, 41, will remain president and chief executive officer of First Union National Bank, the corporation's main subsidiary. C.C. Cameron will remain chairman and chief executive officer of First Union Corp.

Crutchfield joined the bank in 1965 and served in management positions in loan administration, investments, management development and retail banking. In 1973, he was named president of the bank, the youngest president of a major bank in the country. He became the bank's chief executive officer in 1978.

First Union Corp., with headquarters in Charlotte, is the fifth largest bank holding company in the Southeast with assets of $6.2 billion. First Union National Bank is the 34th largest bank in the country.

Subway And Bus Not Punctual

LONDON (AP) — In London, commuters can take the subway or take a bus, but if they want to arrive on time, they'd better walk, according to a new survey.

The survey of 500 London office workers by a major employment agency found that people who walk or jog to work are 96 percent certain never to be late. Cyclists have a 92 percent chance of never being late.

But very few do walk or jog to work — just 8 percent, the survey found. Commuters using London's subway have only a 29 percent chance of always being punctual and above-ground British Rail commuters a 28 percent chance, the survey said.

The City has a Speakers Bureau composed of elected and appointed officials whose expertise in their fields may be helpful to civic groups. Call 752-4137, Ext. 224, for details.

Bird Takes Away Hawks' Dream

By The Associated Press
Just when then Atlanta Hawks were on the verge of an upset victory, Larry Bird snatched it away for the Boston Celtics.

"You could see for a time that they got the smell of victory," the Celtics' Kevin McHale said of Atlanta's 85-81 lead midway through the fourth quarter. "They were like wolves smelling blood."

But Bird scored eight of his 26 points in the final 3½ minutes and Quinn Buckner hit three long jumpers to rally the Celtics to a 103-95 victory in the opener of their best-of-3 National Basketball Association Eastern Conference playoff series.

In Tuesday night's Western Conference playoffs, Phoenix beat Denver 121-108 for a 1-0 lead in their mini-series. In tonight's other openers, New York is at New Jersey in the East and Portland is at Seattle in the West.

"I thought we played well and they played excellent," Bird said. "If we had played this one in Atlanta we would have lost. Atlanta's defense was tough. They forced us into a lot of bad shots and turnovers."

"Atlanta's slowdown pace is tough," said McHale, who scored 12 points for the Celtics. "It's tough for the other team to get into a running tempo. I'm glad it didn't come down to a basket at the end where one shot could be the difference."

Buckner tied the score for the sixth time at 87-87 with the first of his three open jump shots. The Hawks never caught up after Bird put Boston in front 89-87 with two free throws.

Forward Dan Roundfield led Atlanta with 24 points and 20 rebounds, earning praise from Boston Coach Bill Fitch.

"Roundfield was effective from outside early," he said. "He was the only one hitting for them and he kept them in the game. His inside game is as good as any power forward in the league. He's an excellent player."

Dominique Wilkins added 21 points and Johnny Davis 18 for Atlanta, while Robert Parish had 18 points and 16 rebounds for Boston.

The game was close in the first three periods, with the Celtics never leading by more than eight points until the final moments. It was 22-22 after the first quarter, and Boston was ahead 48-45 at halftime and 72-70 going into the final 12 minutes.

Game 2 will be Friday in Atlanta, with the third game, if necessary, back in Boston Sunday.

Suns 121, Nuggets 108
Guard Dennis Johnson had 28 points, 12 rebounds and eight assists while Phoenix held NBA scoring champion Alex English to 16 points to win the first game of its series with Denver.

The Suns, who lost four of five games to the Nuggets in the regular season, surrendered 32 points to Kiki Vandeweghe and 25 to Dan Issel. But English, who averaged 28.4 points and had 31 points and 20 rebounds in Denver's playoff-clinching victory over Kansas City Sunday, was held in check.

Johnson had eight points in the second period as Phoenix erased a 32-23 first-period deficit to take a 62-56 halftime edge.

Maurice Lucas, who had 12 of his 17 points in the second half, and Johnson both scored eight points in the third period as the Suns built a 90-77 advantage. But the Nuggets, behind Vandeweghe and Issel, pulled to within three points twice in the fourth period, the last time at 104-101 with 4:19 left.

Walter Davis, who finished with 18 points, had six down the stretch to keep Denver at bay.

Chargers Down Roanoke With Early Run Production

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton High School pushed over four runs in the first inning and went on to take an 8-3 baseball victory over Roanoke High School yesterday.

The Chargers got all they were to need in the opening frame. Doug Coley got things started off in the right way for Ayden-Grifton, smashing a leadoff homer.

Tyrone Gay kept it going with a walk, stealing both second and third. On the latter steal, the ball was overthrown at third, and Gay scooted home with the second run. Joey Kennedy then walked and also stole second, moving to third on a passed ball. Roger Moye walked, and a double steal scored Kennedy. Moye took third on a passed ball and after Terry Garrett walked, still another double steal brought home the fourth run as Moye crossed the plate.

Roanoke rallied for two in the second, but three Ayden-Grifton runs in the third, one on a homer by Kennedy, ended any hopes of the Redskins. Ayden-Grifton got another run in the fourth, while Roanoke's third run scored in the fifth.

The Chargers were led by Kennedy with two hits, while no one else for either team had more than one.

Ayden-Grifton, now 11-3, hosts North Pitt on Friday. Roanoke, 1-10, entertains Washington on Friday.

Pitches, Slugs Pirates To Victory

Johnson Leads ECU Win

WILMINGTON — East Carolina might just have discovered the secret of winning — let Winfred Johnson pitch. When he's on the mound, the freshman who also doubles as the designated hitter seems to want to make sure that he's not the loser.

Yesterday at UNC Wilmington, the Pirates put Johnson on the mound, and he hurled a four-hit shutout at the Seahawks, as East Carolina took a 6-0 win. But he did more than that, banging out four hits to drive in three runs, one of them coming on his eighth homer of the season.

Johnson, working in the cold afternoon weather, had some control problems, walking six batters, but he struck out nine, and gave up just four hits — three of them coming off the bat of Seahawk catcher Bobby Bryant. The other was a single by Ken Jones.

And although the Seahawks had their chances, Johnson never let them get enough going to push a run across. The 'Hawks left 12 men stranded in the game, including nine in one four-inning stretch in the middle of the game.

The Pirates, meanwhile, were banging 14 hits off Wilmington hurler Carl Willis, who also went the distance for his fourth loss in ten decisions. Four of those were doubles, by Kelly Robinette, Todd Evans, Robert Wells and David Horne, along with the homer by Johnson.

Johnson, with the win, boosted his record to 6-1 on the season. Ironically, as the DH, he had been benched against Richmond on Sunday for his lack of hitting in recent days.

The Pirates pushed into the lead in the second inning, scoring once. With one out, Wells doubled to left, and after a second out, Mark Shank had a blooper to left, scoring Wells.

Two more crossed in the third. Again with one out, Robinette reached on a single, moving up on an infield out. He scored when Evans singled. An error on the play allowed Evans to advance a base, and he took third on a passed ball, scoring when Johnson singled.

East Carolina stretched its lead to 5-0 with two in the fifth. Evans doubled to left and Johnson singled him in. The hitter moved up on a sacrifice and scored on a double by Horne.

The final run came in the seventh on a lead-off homer by Johnson to left.

In addition to Johnson's four hits, Robinette, Evans, Horne and Shank each had two hits to pace the Pirates.

UNC-Wilmington drops to 16-17 with the loss, while the Pirates up their mark to 17-14-1.

The two teams meet again tonight at 7 p.m. in Greenville at Harrington Field.

Aycock Utilizes Farmville Errors For Late Rally, 8-5 Victory

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — C.B. Aycock managed just four hits off Farmville Central starter Alvin Baker but rallied for six runs — five unearned — in the sixth inning to defeat the Jaguars 8-5 in Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference baseball action Tuesday.

Baker struck out seven Aycock batters while scattering nine walks in 6½ innings on the mound. His record slides to 3-1 on the season, while the Jaguars are now 5-6 with a 1-3 conference mark.

Johnny Carr came on in relief as the third Falcon pitcher to pick up the win for Aycock, now 5-3 overall and 4-1 in the conference. Dwayne Nichols pitched the final six outs to record a save.

"We had the game under control — we beat ourselves," said Farmville coach Bill Davis. "Baker threw the ball well, but he didn't get any backing in the field."

Five Farmville Central errors and a pair of singles by the Falcons erased a 5-1 Jaguar advantage.

It all started when John Thomas led off the sixth for Aycock with what appeared to be a routine fly to the infield. Baker called for the ball and made the play, but a collision with shortstop Billy Godley jarred the ball loose. Pinch-hitter Kenneth Core followed with a walk, but Greg Smith struck out. A single by Johnny Carr allowed Thomas to score and moved Core to second.

Paul Summerlin slapped a grounder to Godley at shortstop, but his throw to second sailed into right field allowing Core and Carr to score. Pinch hitter Tommy Lynch struck out but got to first on a passed ball and an error by Bobby Carraway at first base.

Perry Jones was inserted to run for Lynch, and he stole second. A wild pitch moved Jones to third and allowed Summerlin to score. Steve Hicks drew a walk, and Jones was out at the plate on a fielder's choice by Dwayne Nichols.

An argument ensued over the call at the plate but time had not been called, and Nichols took off for second. Farmville catcher Taylor Walston's throw to second was too late, and Hicks raced home from third. Nichols raced to third where Walston's throw was bobbled by Gerald Wilson.

A single to right by Frankie Satterfield drove in Nichols, but Farmville Central finally got out of the inning when Baker got Thomas on a pop-up to center.

"We just have to keep our heads up," said Davis. "We played hard today, it was just too many mistakes on defense that cost us this game." The Jaguars drew first blood in the third inning when Tim Askew and Godley singled to open the inning. A sacrifice bunt by Randy Daniels advanced the runners a base, and Corbett's long fly to right drove in Askew.

Farmville Central added another run in the fourth. Carraway led off with a walk and moved to third on a sacrifice by Wilson. A sacrifice fly to deep left field by Walston allowed Carraway to score to put the Jaguars up 2-0.

Aycock got on the board in the top of the fifth with a pair of errors on a grounder by Hicks and a sacrifice fly by Nichols to score Hicks.

Farmville Central bounced back in the bottom half of the frame when Askew walked, stole second, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single to left by Godley. After a strikeout by Daniels, Wade Corbett cracked a two-run homer to right for the 5-1 Farmville Central edge.

Corbett a pair of hits for three Farmville Central RBI, while Godley slapped three hits in four at-bats. Satterfield was the lone C.B. Aycock player with more than two hits with a pair of singles in four trips to the plate.

The Jaguars travel to Greene Central Thursday.

Spilman's Blast Keys Houston Rally For Win

By The Associated Press
HOUSTON (AP) — It was only his second hit of the season, so Houston pinch-hitter Harry Spilman wasn't expecting a miracle.

But one out short of another Houston loss Spilman hit, a fat pitch from Cincinnati's Tom Hume over the right field fence for a three-run homer to rally the Astros to a 6-5 victory Tuesday night.

"Since it was the Astrodome, I wasn't sure when I first hit it but I thought it had a chance to go all the way," said Spilman, whose blast gave the Astros only their third victory of the season in 13 games. "I expected a hard slider but it was a fastball out over the plate. He made a mistake."

The contest was one of only two played in the National League, as bad weather around the country postponed St. Louis at Montreal, Pittsburgh at New York, Chicago at Philadelphia and Los Angeles at San Francisco. In the other NL contest, Atlanta whipped San Diego 9-2.

"Guys you trade seem to come back and haunt you," Reds Manager Russ Nixon said of Spilman, traded to the Astros three years ago. "You've got to give him (Spilman) credit. He hit a bad pitch. If we were machines, I guess we wouldn't make mistakes, but we do. I know the pitch was up. I know it had to be up to go that far."

Cincinnati had taken a 4-0 first-inning lead on a two-run homer by Dan Driessen, a run-scoring double by Johnny Bench and a passed ball by rookie catcher John Mizerock. Another passed ball by Mizerock gave Cincinnati its fifth run in the sixth inning.

Prior to the ninth, the Astros had scored on Phil Garner's RBI single in the first, Dickie Thon's solo homer in the fourth and his run-scoring single in the eighth. Thon had four hits.

"I think this should help us," Thon said. "I felt very aggressive tonight and that's the way I have to hit."

Hume, 0-1, said, "I threw a fastball over the outside of the plate, it was a bad pitch, and I didn't want it there. I just wanted to get the ground ball like I tried to do on the rest of them. I didn't want to walk him, that's where I made my first mistake."

Bill Dawley, appearing in his second game since being called up from the Astros' Class AAA Tucson team, got his second victory in relief of starter Joe Niekro.

Braves 9, Padres 2
Glenn Hubbard and Ken Smith each belted two-run homers to back Rick Camp's route-going pitching as Atlanta downed San Diego. Camp scattered eight hits, walked three and struck out three.

The Braves, who wracked four Padre hurriers for 13 hits, jumped on former teammate John Montefusco for seven hits and five runs in the three innings.

May Buy Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — A New York attorney who is a former Cleveland resident is considering purchase of the American League's Cleveland Indians, according to a published report.

David LeFevre, grandson of the late Cleveland industrialist Cyrus Eaton, might purchase the Indians for more than $20 million, the (Cleveland) Plain Dealer reported today.

"There is nothing definite," said F.J. O'Neill, the Indians' principal owner. "He's interested and is trying to work out something. But he hasn't done it yet."

O'Neill also told the newspaper that there are "other parties also very interested but nobody wants to take over the present (Municipal Stadium) lease."

Earlier, LeFevre talked with Ted Stepien, owner of the Cleveland Cavaliers, about a possible purchase of the National Basketball Association team. Stepien has granted an option for purchase to brothers George and Gordon Gund of Cleveland.

Etchison No-Hitter

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — St. Andrews right-hander Bill Etchison fired a no-hitter Tuesday as the Knights took a 2-0 baseball victory over Pembroke State.

Etchison, a senior from Charlotte, N.C., faced 29 batters. He walked two and struck out one.

St. Andrews scored a run in the sixth when Dyke Anstead singled and moved to second on an outfield error. Gary Barfield singled and Joe Critcher added another hit to score Anstead.

Critcher scored in the ninth on Dean English's single.

St. Andrews raised its record to 12-13, while Pembroke State dropped to 12-14-2.

Blair Says Nets Ready To Battle With Knicks

By The Associated Press
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Bill Blair says New Jersey's 24 record since he became interim head coach is no indication that they Nets won't be ready tonight for their National Basketball Association playoff opener against the New York Knicks.

"I've never had a team that doesn't play harder in a tournament or playoffs," said Blair, who took over April 8 after Larry Brown resigned to become head coach at Kansas University. "There shouldn't be a letdown in the playoffs unless somebody's head is screwed off."

Blair said the Nets' late-season slump, which included an eight-point loss to the Knicks, had nothing to do with Brown's sudden departure, which caused a bitter reaction by President Joe Taub.

"I don't think Larry leaving had anything to do with our problems at the end," Blair said. "Games are won and lost by the players on the floor, not by coaching changes. We had some injuries and were trying some new things to get ready for the playoffs."

The Nets won their first four games with the Knicks during the season, but the metropolitan rivalry between the two teams, who are based only eight miles apart across the Hudson River, heated up when New York won the last two meetings.

The first and third games of the best-of-three series will be played at Brendan Byrne Arena tonight and Sunday, with the second game at Madison Square Garden Thursday night. New Jersey won the homecourt advantage because its 49-33 record was five games better than New York's 44-38 mark.

"Initially, the pressure is on us because we're playing in the Meadowlands," Nets guard Mike O'Koren said.

But the Knicks won 28 of their last 40 outings after a miserable start.

"They played better lately and we struggled," said Buck Williams, New Jersey's all-star forward. "But we know what we need. We just can't lay down and die because of some adversity."

"We're expecting a donnybrook series," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said. "A mini-series is tough. Anyone who doesn't think so should just use Houston and Los Angeles (in 1981) as an example. The Lakers were coming off a championship and got upset."

"There is no way to predict the outcome of a mini-series," Knicks guard Paul Westphal said. "The best team doesn't always win. A lot sometimes depends on who is shooting hot and who gets the calls. I think what we have to do is establish our inside game."

"If Truck Robinson can outplay Buck Williams, we can reap some benefits from that. Also if Bill Cartwright can get Darryl Dawkins in foul trouble."

Dawkins was third in the NBA in field goal percentage and was one of seven Nets who averaged double-figure scoring, but he fouled out 23 times, three short of the league record.

Jack's Back Fine So Jack's Back

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus said his ailing back, which forced him out of the Masters, is fine and he's ready to compete in the $400,000 MONY-Tournament of Champions.

Nicklaus, however, was expected to be the last of the elite field of 28 title-winners from the last 12 months to arrive at the La Costa Hotel and Country Club for the tournament that begins Thursday.

"I talked to him by phone and he said his back is fine. He said he hit some balls last weekend and is looking forward to playing here," Tournament Director Tommy Jacobs said Tuesday.

Nicklaus, a five-time winner of the Tournament of Champions, was forced to withdraw from the Masters two weeks ago when severe back spasms made it impossible for him to tee off in the second round.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, the eventual Masters winner, had a previous commitment — he's defending his title in the Madrid Open this week — and was unable to join the winners-only field that will be chasing a $72,000 first prize here. There's a $4,700 guarantee to the man who finishes last.

Among the leading contenders are defending champion Lanny Wadkins, Craig Stadler, Ray Floyd, Tom Watson and 1983 leading money-winner Tom Kite, runnerup in the Masters and winner of the Vardon Trophy the last two seasons.

Cal Peete and Bob Gilder each has won four times in the eligibility period, which began with this tournament last year. Floyd won the PGA championship last fall and holds two other current titles.

Watson, twice a winner of this title, currently holds the U.S. and British Open crowns. Other double winners in the eligibility period are Wadkins, Stadler, Keith Fergus, Jay Haas, Gil Morgan and Hal Sutton.

Sutton tops the list of first-timers at this event. Other T of C rookies are Isao Aoki of Japan and Australian Bob Shearer, the only foreign players here, Payne Stewart, Tim Norris, Bobby Clampett, Gary Hallberg and Mike Nicolette.

Others are Scott Hoch, Ed Sneed, Tom Weiskopf, Bruce Lietzke, Wayne Levi, Gary Koch, former winner Johnny Miller, Bill Rogers and Fuzzy Zoeller, whose victory in the Heritage Classic last Sunday made him the last man to get in.

The tournament is sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

Computer Whiz Throws A Zinger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A computer whiz who helped design and install a computer system for the Dodgers is under investigation after a records check shows he may have used the system to print and sell as many as 7,000 tickets, police say.

Kurt Borg, 27, of Sepulveda, has been booked for investigation of grand theft and receiving stolen property. The police department's case against him has gone to the district attorney's office for a decision on whether to file charges.

A police affidavit filed Tuesday shows the Dodgers had been unaware that anything was amiss until a routine search of the records found an unusually large number of tickets going to an account set up on the day of a power failure.

Team officials knew the computer could not have set up an account that day.

Further checks of the system found two other apparently bogus accounts.

The Dodgers waited until April 11, when some fans used the tickets and questioned the users about where the tickets were obtained.

The affidavit said officials were led to Tyson's Choice Ticket Service on Martin Luther King Boulevard, where owner Abraham Bort said he had purchased more than 1,000 tickets from Borg on March 20 for $15,000.

Bort returned most of the tickets, and police arrested Borg.

"He (Borg) acknowledged involvement, but I don't want to go into specifics with you for fear of prejudicing the case against him," said Los Angeles Police Detective Melvin Lunsford. "He claims that even though the (computer) says that 7,000 tickets were generated, only 1,300 were actually generated and they were all sold to Tyson's. He says new computer systems have flaws."

Miller In Hospital

DENVER (AP) — Red Miller was being treated at a Denver hospital exhaustion apparently stemming from his round-the-clock schedule as coach of the Denver Gold.

"He's been working seven days a week, about 18-to-20 hours a day for several months," Jim Van Someren, a spokesman for the United States Football League club, said Tuesday night. "It just started to catch up with him."

Van Someren said the 35-year-old Miller was at practice Tuesday afternoon when he began to feel weak and went to rest.

"A trainer was keeping an eye on him," he said. "A half hour later he was white and sweating and feeling really weak, so we decided to take him down to the hospital."

He was admitted to Denver Presbyterian Hospital, where doctors had him under observation for exhaustion, Van Someren said.

Umpires Finally Impose Penalty On Steinbrenner

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AP Special Correspondent

If George Steinbrenner can be fined $50,000 for making a critical remark to a friend about an umpire's call in spring training, what sort of punishment should be inflicted on the baseball fan who yells, not once but 100 times during a game, "Kill the umpire!"

Hanging or the electric chair would seem too merciful.

The umps have been out to get the impetuous, outspoken New York Yankee owner for years and they finally did it, prevailing on Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to give George more than a slap on the wrist — a hefty blow to the pocket-book.

It's a knee-jerk reaction by the outgoing commissioner, who is not too fond of George anyhow, and a decision that seems to violate every tenet of freedom of expression for the country in which baseball purports to be the national pastime.

Most of us have had it up to our ear lobes with the archaic explanation that it's "in the best interest of the game."

That's the official explanation used in the $100,000 fine in 1979 against Ray Kroc, the hamburger king who owns the San Diego Padres, and the $10,000 fine and year's suspension assessed against Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves, for what was termed "tampering."

Here's how the two men tampered. In a phone conversation with a sports reporter, Kroc was asked if he would be interested in Graig Nettles and Joe Morgan if they became available. "Sure," replied Kroc, innocent of baseball's 19th Century strictures. Turner, admitting to too many dry martinis at a cocktail party, violated a cardinal rule by offhandedly expressing an interest in the Giants' Gary Matthews.

Kroc became so disenchanted that he divorced himself from further baseball operations. Turner sued, but the courts ruled against him.

Baseball is its own little world. There are ogres everywhere trying to soil its image and the commissioner is given absolute power in trying to keep the game pure as Ivory soap. Judges and congressmen are inclined still to view baseball as the corner lot game they knew as kids and outside normal jurisdiction.

If the cited offenses occurred in any other area, penalties would be ludicrous. The Constitution gives everyone the right to express his opinions — negative or positive. The game can't be sacrosanct. It's a business. There is no place for "gag" rules.

Steinbrenner's war with umpires has been going on since 1978 when the Yankees won their second straight World Series over the Los Angeles Dodgers. He thought it silly that half the umpires wore red coats, the other half blue, took different stances on the field, wore different style breast protectors and even had different strike zones — as imposed by the rival leagues.

He insisted the National League umpires intimidated the American League umps and cited cases to press his point. He launched a successful campaign to standardize umpiring but failed to put them under a common umbrella. Once he was fined $1,000 for showing instant replays on the Yankee scoreboard. NL umps never forgave him.

The latest incident was innocuous. It happened at spring training in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 25. The Yankees were playing Montreal. There was a close play at first base and NL ump Lee Weyer ruled for the Expos.

Whereupon, the iconoclastic Yankee boss yelled out, "National League umpires will always give close plays to the National League." Steinbrenner said it was a remark he made to a friend. A newsman overheard and printed it.

The incident provoked Richie Phillips, head of the umpires union, to call for Steinbrenner's suspension. The $50,000 fine was Kuhn's response.

Phillips also argued that Steinbrenner heated up the feud by bringing back Billy Martin and putting the premier umpire-baiter on the cover of the Yankees' media guide sticking a finger under an umpire's nose.

Harassment, charged Phillips. The word isn't harassment. It's paranoia. Phillips should know that, in the great American game of baseball, the umpire is fair game. By tradition, he's everybody's target, everybody's villain.

Under Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Labor Department proposal to limit back pay awards and remedial measures under a law that forbids job discrimination by employers receiving federal contracts is coming under fire from civil rights groups.
Spokesmen for a number of groups testified against the proposal at a House Education and Labor subcommittee hearing.

A Short And Tragic Life For Michael Manning

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — By the time police arrived with a document declaring Michael Manning a neglected child, it was too late. He was already dead.

He was only 3 years old, and in the final, violent weeks of his brief life, there were no social workers to help him. No relatives, no neighbors. Nobody.

His mother, Elizabeth, told police she watched that final morning as her live-in boyfriend allegedly pummeled the small, blond child for wetting his pants — the last in a brutal series of regular beatings.

When they discovered Michael was dead, she said, they hid the body in a heating vent at the housing project where they lived.

The police didn't come until two weeks later.

"It took me too long to catch on," Cecilia Sopher, the victim's aunt, said last week at her house in nearby Niwot.

"She always said Mikey was sleeping or was at another place or he was spending the night at a friend's house," said Mrs. Sopher, who became suspicious in late December and alerted police. "I made the call, but it was too late," she said.

Michael was buried Monday in a small, white casket at Mountain View cemetery. His mother was in jail and did not attend. His father, Michael Manning Sr., committed suicide in Baltimore several years ago, his mother told authorities. Most of the mourners were strangers.

Mrs. Manning has been in jail since Dec. 30 when she defied a judge's order to reveal the boy's whereabouts.

Her boyfriend, a 22-year-old high school dropout named Daniel Arevalo, is being held on $100,000 bail bond for suspicion of child abuse. The district attorney has said charges will be filed Friday.

The discovery April 12 of Michael's tiny corpse ended a puzzling four-month episode in which a child suddenly disappeared and nobody, it seemed, knew where he had gone.

His mother, an admitted prostitute, insisted that he was safe with friends. A judge tried to force her to talk by sending her to jail, where she stayed, silent and unbending, for three months.

Police, baffled, speculated privately the boy had been sold.

"It seems like somebody should have picked it up, neighbors or somebody," said Larry Hone, director of the Boulder County Department of Social Services.

The break came about a week ago, shortly before midnight April 9, when Mrs. Manning broke her silence. She admitted that Michael was dead and led police to the muddy ditch where, she says, her boyfriend secretly buried him.

Affidavits in the case, plus interviews and other court documents, tell the tragic story:

On the day before Thanksgiving, Michael was found wandering in a drug store. A policeman took him home to San Juan del Cristo housing project, a bleak cluster of buildings and trash-strewn yards.

Arevalo allegedly beat the boy. When Michael wet his pants, Arevalo took his clothes and left him locked in his room, naked and crying.

In the weeks that followed, she said, the beatings increased in frequency and severity.

Arevalo is a short, young rooster of a man, 5-feet, 4-inches tall, thin and angular, with a sparse black moustache and a record of petty crime.

Michael was beaten for three hours before he died on Dec. 17. According to his mother's affidavit, events unfolded with dark, chaotic fury:

The beatings lasted through the morning and into early afternoon. Arevalo allegedly used a belt with a large buckle, stopping occasionally for five or 10 minute rest periods.

Mrs. Manning tried to intervene, but said she was pushed away. She looked into the bathroom where "she observed Mikey on the floor, crawling around," pinned under Arevalo's foot.

He allegedly dragged the limp child through the apartment for more beatings before giving him to Mrs. Manning, who put the battered child to bed.

Thirty minutes later, he was dead.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call voted Apr. 11-15.

HOUSE
REDUCE By a vote of 219 for and 195 against, the House kept a freeze on nuclear arms build-ups as the top priority of the resolution (HJ Res 13) directing the U.S. and Soviet governments to engage in talks aimed at achieving a "mutual and verifiable" halt in their nuclear arms race.

The vote derailed a pro-Administration amendment to make reductions in arsenals the top priority, followed by a freeze. The White House argument is that a freeze at present levels would guarantee Soviet superiority.

HJ Res 13 awaited a final vote.

Supporter, Les AuCoin, D-Ore., called the arms race "a runaway freight train" that must be stopped before it can be curtailed.

Opponent Ed Zschau, R-Calif., countered that arms talks "do not obey the laws of physics," adding that negotiators can easily discuss reductions and a freeze at the same time.

Members voting yes wanted a freeze to be the first priority of HJ Res 13.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Ike Andrews, D-4, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Charles Whitley, D-3, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10.

Not voting: Walter Jones, D-1, Jim Valentine, D-2, Stephen Neal, D-5.

FREEZE The House rejected, 190 for and 229 against, an amendment to the freeze resolution (above) directing each superpower to discard two nuclear warheads for every new warhead it deploys.

Because it permitted the U.S. to modernize its arsenal, the pro-White House amendment eased Administration fears that the freeze resolution would lock the U.S. into nuclear inferiority.

The amendment was opposed by most freeze advocates, on grounds that modernization would escalate the arms race.

Supporter Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said "any conservative who votes against this amendment is taking the risk of voting in favor of freezing the U.S. in inferiority."

Opponent Jim Wright, D-Tex., said the amendment got into areas suitable for the negotiating table, not the House floor. "Let us keep (the freeze resolution) clear, simple and straightforward," he said.

Members voting yes wanted to tailor the freeze measure more to President Reagan's liking.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Valentine, Whitley, James Martin, Broyhill.

Voting no: Ike Andrews, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: Walter Jones, Neal.

FORESTS By a vote of 136 for and 275 against, the House rejected an amendment to nearly halve the pristine federal forest acreage to be protected by the California Wilderness Act of 1983 (HR 1437).

Defeat of the amendment left unchanged language to include some 2.3 million untouched acres in California in the national wilderness system. In addition to reducing that figure to 1.2 million, the amendment sought other changes advocated by commercial interests but opposed by environmentalists.

The bill, later passed and sent to the Senate, defines the future use of some 6.5 million U.S. Forest Service acres in the state not yet committed to conservation or development. In part, it frees up 4.3 million acres for logging and other limited development.

Supporter Gene Chappie,

R-Calif., said "people in my area simply cannot afford a bill which will drastically reduce logging and sawmilling jobs in timber towns already reeling from unemployment rates as high as 37 percent."

Opponent John Seiberling, D-Ohio, said "not only will few timber jobs be lost by this bill, if any, but we are also protecting the fishing industry jobs...by keeping these lands in wilderness."

Members voting yes wanted a smaller California wilderness area.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: James Martin.

Voting no: Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: Walter Jones,

Neal, Broyhill.

SENATE

ADELMAN The Senate confirmed, 57 for and 42 against, the nomination of Kenneth L. Adelman as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Reporting to Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Adelman will become a key figure in dealing with the Soviets and in other areas related to negotiating and verifying weapons pacts.

His nomination became a battleground for critics and defenders of President Reagan's nuclear arms policies and attitude toward the Soviets. Adelman, 36, was criticized in part for lacking experience and for not dealing squarely with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Supporter Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said Adelman will approach arms control negotiations "with realism, common sense, courage, and toughness tempered with wise flexibility."

Opponent John Glenn, D-

Ohio, said "we should be putting forward at Geneva not someone who can just get by, someone appointed for political reasons, but the finest negotiating team we can possibly assemble."

Senators voting yes favored Adelman's appointment.

Voting from North Carolina were John East, R, voted yes. Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

Prelate Defies A Political Ban

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer
HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — Like all clergymen in Mexico, Monsignor Carlos Quintero Arce is bound by the country's constitution to stay out of politics — not even speak publicly of them. Nevertheless, he speaks out.

The 63-year-old archbishop of the capital of this northern state says the church must be the voice of the people and Roman Catholics must see that the laws of their country do not conflict with the moral laws of the Gospel.

"There is separation of church and state in Mexico and that is a good thing," the monsignor said in a recent interview, "but Christians must participate in the political and social process. The Christian must commit himself to being, through his faith, a light to the world."

The Mexican constitution strips the clergy of the right to vote or participate in politics. Any statement by a bishop is interpreted here by many politicians as interference by the church in matters legally beyond its jurisdictions.

Quintero Arce considers this attitude a legacy of the violent years of revolution and the 19th century reform laws that did away with many of the rights of the church.

This is being overcome slowly, he maintains.

"The church does not seek to control the state," he said. "It does not seek power. The words and the attitude of the bishops are only to light the path of the people."

"The church is neither leftist nor rightist. It is evangelical. It opposes capitalism and it opposes collectivism because both go against the dignity of man."

Although not an arbiter of politics, Quintero Arce is a respected voice throughout the country and state politicians have been known to visit him for long chats.

Unlike other Mexican bishops, Quintero Arce does make statements on political issues.

Speaking of President Miguel de la Madrid's campaign for "moral renewal," Quintero Arce claims that corruption at all levels continues to be a Mexican plague and contends that people are not convinced of the government's good intentions because there has been no attempt to investigate officials of previous administrations.

Earlier this year, the attorney general's office in Mexico City said it investigated but rejected allegations that de la Madrid's predecessor, Jose Lopez Portillo, diverted public funds "for individual or improper uses."

The monsignor brushed aside contentions of government officials that prosecution of previous government officials would amount to "vengeance" and would be an attack on the country's political system.

"But this is not a question of vengeance," he said. "As the elders of the tribe would say, things must be equal." If there is a reason to investigate, then there should be an investigation. It is a matter of justice, not of vengeance.

"We must have an attitude of honesty in the public and private sector. We cannot have again the reports of millions of dollars stolen in Pemex, (the state-owned oil monopoly), for instance, or in any of other state agencies."

He added: "The church must educate and preach honesty and the truth expressed in its social doctrine — a vision of man as a son of God and not limited only to human environment. The church must share the agonies of the people suffering low salaries, high taxes and unemployment."

Quintero Arce holds that Mexicans are now mature enough politically to "demand a more active participation in the political and social process."

"The people will demand the changes needed not through violence, but with political maturity to eliminate the bad and retain the good," he said. "We hope and pray that the Lord will guide the representatives of the people so we may have justice and peace."

Ostracized Ex-Sheriff Is Survivor

By MARTHA BRYSON HODEL

Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Former sheriff Ronald Donell was threatened, ostracized and defeated for re-election after he exposed a local gambling protection racket, but now he's headed back into law enforcement because of a presidential appointment.

President Reagan chose Donell last week as U.S. marshal for West Virginia's northern district. And while community feeling against the former sheriff remains strong, Donell is looking forward to the new job.

"That's great!" the former Hancock County sheriff whooped when told of the nomination. "You can't believe how I'm looking forward to getting back into law enforcement. I've been waiting and waiting and waiting for this."

Former Hancock County prosecutor Robert Altomare and 24 other prominent area residents were indicted by a grand jury in 1979 on the strength of Donell's undercover work. The sheriff secretly taped conversations that showed Altomare had taken money from gamblers in exchange for protection from prosecution.

Donell's testimony also indicated the racket had been a fixture of Hancock County politics for years, a revelation that apparently displeased many residents. There were several threats on his life, and Donell lost a re-election bid in 1980.

"I felt I had an obligation to the people to give them a choice," he said of his bid for a second term. "But I knew in my own heart that I was going to lose."

Altomare was sentenced to 10 years in prison after federal convictions of racketeering, conspiracy, obstruction of justice and obstructing the enforcement of state law.

Others also were convicted. But Donell found himself shut out in the community where he had grown up.

"I think what happened was that it all became a very emotional issue," he said. "I exposed something that they knew was happening, but that they wanted to ignore. I brought a bad name to their community."

Donell settled into a quiet life as a beer distributor in his community — a far cry, he says, from the problems he encountered as sheriff after his court testimony.

He says he wouldn't seek the sheriff's job again — "at least not so long as my children are small. ... I think I have an obligation to give them an equal opportunity to grow up as normal as possible."

The memory of the threats and community scorn is still fresh.

"We still get some harassment," he said. "It's not a life-threatening situation like it was, but people still make obscene gestures, cuss at me, things like that."

During the year of the trials, police twice staked out Donell's home after rumors circulated that Donell would be killed and that his house would be firebombed. Donell's wife, Alice, learned to shoot a gun. The Donell home became an armed camp, with a loaded weapon in nearly every room.

The threats also reached Donell's two daughters, who were escorted to school each day by state troopers. Metal plates were installed in their bedroom windows.

The youngest one suffered a great deal, Donell says, and has had continual stomach problems that doctors say are stress-related.

"She understood what was going on, even though we tried to protect her," Donell says.

For that reason, Donell says he now believes his 1980 defeat was "a blessing in disguise."

"I would never have been eligible for this job had I been re-elected," Donell said, adding that he thinks the U.S. marshal's job is safer.

Despite the threats and the rejection, Donell doesn't believe voters were choosing vice and gambling when they voted him out of office.

"The people here are all good, well-meaning people, but I just became controversial and they didn't like that."

Pravda Raps 'Excessive' Gift-Giving

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Doting Soviet parents risk turning their children into spoiled materialists by giving them lavish gifts like jewelry and tape recorders, complains the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

One group of high school students said their most recent birthday presents cost an average of $130, according to a letter in Pravda, representing more than half the $242 average monthly pay taken home pay a Soviet worker.

The result, said the letter, is that children are "looking for the sweet life" and learning "the habits of pre-revolutionary wealthy people."

There never has been much debate about the proposition that Soviet children are pampered. The average Soviet child is an only child, and in many homes a grandmother — the babushka — lives with the family.

A child's smallest need is usually met immediately. Babies rarely are left to cry and as teen-agers are looked after as if they were 8 or 9.

But too many parents, Pravda said, are going too far, lavishing their children with excessive gifts.

"I am confident that expensive presents spoil children. They teach them to be consumer-minded," wrote high school teacher Genady A. Gubin.

By printing his letter Monday, Pravda put the stamp of party approval on the views of Gubin, who lives in the Crimean resort city of Yevpatoriya.

He told of a boy named Vasily whose parents gave him a tape recorder worth $500 (350 rubles) for his 16th birthday.

When Vasily told his friends about the present, the teacher said, they showed no surprise.

"Probably, 16-year-olds are used to such presents. But the salaries of Vasily's parents are quite humble. A 350-ruble present for a son was no simple thing to come up with," Gubin wrote.

In Yevpatoriya, Gubin said, 115 students finishing secondary school were given questionnaires recently asking about the presents they received on their last birthday.

"It turned out that only three were given flowers, five got books, 20 received money. Every third girl possessed a piece of gold jewelry. The average present cost $130."

"Why are we teaching our children the habits of pre-revolutionary wealthy people?" Gubin asked. "Naturally every person wants to arrange the life of his children so that it is better than his own. But does giving children expensive gifts make them happy for the rest of their lives?"

He suggested better presents would be books, something that is "spiritual food" for "teen-agers who need it most."

Excessive gift giving had forced teachers into a war against "philistinism, the cult of objects among their pupils," Gubin said. "But we don't always win. Some mothers, choosing school as the place for demonstrating their wealth, send their kids to school in super-fashionable clothing. Girls start wearing gold jewelry in the earliest grades."

"And the pity is that very often this results in an unhealthy competition among children. It's hard for them to realize that not everyone can buy their children an expensive present."

Gubin related a story told by the parents of one of his former students. They said their son had become "a loafer ... looking for the sweet life."

"I'm sorry for these parents since they're torturing themselves trying to figure out how they have lost their son. And I am thinking, maybe they have presented him with a $420 tape recorder on his 16th birthday," the teacher wrote.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — GREAT GRANDMA IS FAN OF OLD FILMS: "SILENT IS GOLDEN."
Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals B.
The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Latest In Robots Show Their Varied Talents

CHICAGO (AP) — It looks like a huge elephant's trunk, but it can delicately pick up an egg and put it in a holder or take a ball and drop it through a basketball hoop. Although the robot from Sweden is not yet dunking shots, it is one of the flashiest players at the Robots 7 Conference and Exposition that has turned McCormick Place — Chicago's lakefront exhibition center — into a wonderland of 250 hissing, whirring, light-blinking contraptions that can do about everything but clean fingernails. The exhibit is billed as the biggest industrial robot show ever staged, drawing products from 175 robot builders in 12 countries — $750 million worth of engineering. At $15 a ticket, the show, open to the public, is expected to draw 30,000 people for its brief run (it closes Wednesday). But the exhibitors mostly hope to attract manufacturers interested in buying robots for their factories. Many of the robots are programmed to ham it up to draw crowds to the various booths, like the 13-foot model from Spine Robotics, with its elephant-trunk-like arm able to reach nearly 16 feet. "The Spine Robot can reach everywhere — from behind, from below, from the front and around," said Per Lenschow, control systems manager.

In a United States Robots display from King of Prussia, Pa., three blue robots warm up like football players — raising and lowering their "necks" and stretching their "arms." Then it's game time and they go to work putting together smoke detectors on an assembly belt. The "Smokies" going at top speed "can turn out 2,800 smoke detectors on an eight-hour shift," said Mitchell Weiss, director of advanced development of the company. "It takes five humans to produce 2,000 in eight hours." "Among the many things these robots can do on a diet of electricity is put together their own motors," he said. "It's the nearest thing to propagation in the robot world."

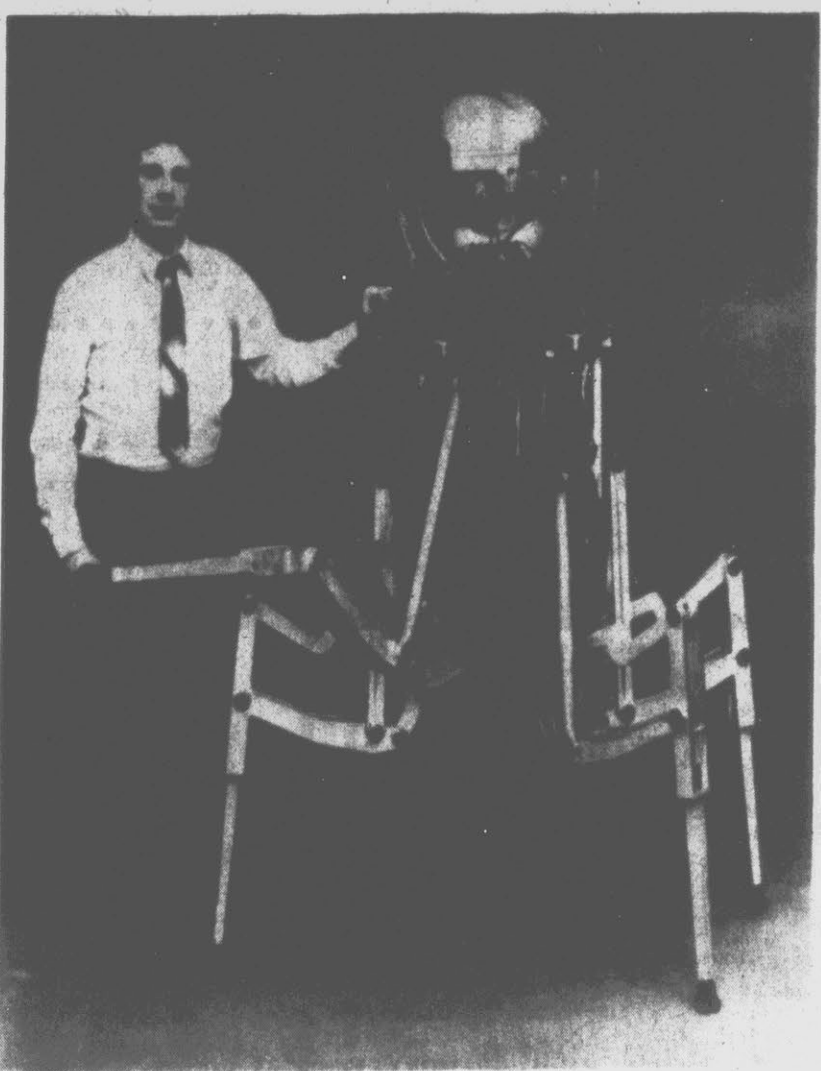

There are robots for everything. One model 10 feet high can lift three auto engine blocks at a time and stack them for shipment. Another squirts sealant into freezer liners and boasts a 2,000-position memory with capability of handling 99 different programs.

A sleek little robot from Japan follows a thin cord snake-like, coating it on all sides and smoothing it over. It would be used for applying plastic or other coating to wires or ropes.

Another robot can pick out specific machine parts from piles of different kinds and store them.

One of the biggest showoffs at the exhibit is "T3-726," the brainchild of Cincinnati Milacrom. It lures crowds to the company's exhibit by dealing cards, explaining the rules of blackjack, calling out point totals and announcing winners. It keeps track of what has been played and knows how many cards are left in the deck and what their values are.

When the robot has a blackjack hand totaling 16 points — with 21 points needed to win — it points to the ceiling and says, "Look at that," and pulls a 5-card from behind its back. In other words, it cheats.

"FUNCTIONOID" — Model stands next to ODEX I, which according to its developers — Odetics Inc., of Anaheim, Calif., — is the first walking machine or "functionoid" robot combining electronics, mechanical engineering and computer science to perform multiple tasks without regard to the environment. Most industrial robots are single-function devices for use in a factory environment; but ODEX I will serve as the base technology for future robotic applications in agriculture, land, sea and space exploration, security surveillance, military and many others. (AP Laserphoto)

FOCUS

A Model Life

The season's high fashion shows in Paris are part of a multi-million dollar industry that owes as much to the unsung fashion model as it does to the big-name designer. But 'til the middle of the 19th century, new fashion designs were displayed only as sketches or on wooden dummies. Then in the 1860s, Charles Frederick Worth, a British designer living in Paris, decided to have his wife Marie model his creations. He attracted the attention and patronage of Empress Eugenie, and for the next 30 years Worth and his models dominated the Parisian fashion world. Today, many fashion models make more than a $100,000 a year, and a top model can earn far more in a career that usually lasts less than a decade.

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

South, declarer at three no trump, thought he was choosing between two equal lines of play for his contract. Truth is, he simply rolled the dice — and they came up snake eyes!

We can't blame South for being so impressed with his 150 honors that he bid three no trump. Had North not been so pitifully weak, that contract could have been a laydown when there was little play for eleven tricks at a minor-suit contract.

West led his fourth-best heart, and when dummy came down declarer realized that, to make his contract, he would have to run nine tricks. If the opponents gained the lead before then, they would have at least four heart tricks to cash to defeat the hand.

Declarer saw that, if he could bring in either minor suit, he would have nine tricks. But which minor-suit finesse should he take? He had eight cards in each suit, so it seemed to be a toss-up. Mentally, he flipped a coin and took the diamond finesse. When that lost, the hand fell apart and declarer ended up down four!

But wait, you say. The club finesse would also have failed for the same result.

Right you are. The club finesse would have failed, but the contract would not if declarer combines his lines of play.

The two lines of play are not really equal. If East has the king of clubs, declarer can bring in the suit even if it breaks 4-1. A 4-1 diamond split, however, would mean that declarer can score only three tricks in that suit.

Even more important is the fact that declarer might not need a diamond finesse to run the suit! By first cashing the ace-king of diamonds, declarer gives himself the extra chance of dropping a doubleton queen of diamonds off-side. If it doesn't drop, declarer can then fall back on the club finesse. As the cards lie, the queen does fall and declarer has nine tricks without having to bank on any finesse at all!

Cut Number In State Hospitals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Largely by moving patients with chronic mental disorders back into the community, the number of people in state hospitals has been reduced from about 600,000 to about 150,000 in the last several years, according to the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration.

Officials of the agency gave those figures to a House appropriations subcommittee considering the administration's budget. Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., complained that the administration budget plan "doesn't reflect a desire to get those people out and keep them out" of hospitals because it would cut funds for community programs to serve them once they return home.

Dr. William E. Mayer, agency administrator, told the subcommittee he knew of no community center forced to close due to cuts in federal funding.

CBS Board Chairman William Paley Retires

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Inc., created 55 years ago from "a patchwork, money-losing little company," got its first new boss in 55 years today when founder William S. Paley retired as chairman.

Thomas H. Wyman, a former Pillsbury Co. executive who has been president and chief executive of CBS since June 1980, was preparing to succeed the 81-year-old Paley as the company's directors gathered in St. Louis for the annual shareholders' meeting.

Paley, who announced his decision to step down as chairman last September, will remain with CBS as a director and as chairman of the board of directors' executive committee. He will also serve CBS as a consultant.

Wyman takes over with the CBS television network dominating in prime time and rising in corporate income. CBS recently began expansion into new areas of communications, such as teletext and personal computer software, and only the failure of the CBS Cable network in September marred Paley's last months as chairman.

The CBS empire, built by Paley, a cigarmaker's son, on the struggling United Independent Broadcasters radio network he purchased in 1928, now includes theatrical films, records, musical instruments, toys, books and magazines.

But it was pleasing the public with top-quality entertainment, first in radio, later on television, that was Paley's strength.

WM. S. PALEY

"Quite early in the game," he said in his autobiography, published in 1979, "I had evaluated the essential elements of broadcasting and come to believe that the crux of this business was programming..."

That meant, in the early years, attracting radio's best-known personalities to CBS, people such as Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Red Skelton and Bing Crosby. Later, television programs such as "The Beverly Hillbillies," "All in the Family," "The Waltons" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" would make CBS a leader in the field.

"The biggest victory," Paley said in an interview in 1979, "is when you get ... quality and popularity. When they come together, it's just beautiful."

Born in Chicago in 1901, Paley graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1922 and went to work for his father's Congress Cigar Co. in Philadelphia. He became interested in radio in 1928 when he saw how sales jumped after the company's La Palina cigars were advertised over the air.

His $400,000 investment in United Independent Broadcasters — known on the air as the Columbia Broadcasting System — had, by the early 1980s, become a vast communications network of 350 radio and more than 200 television affiliates.

"I founded CBS nearly 54 years ago," he told employees in announcing his decision, "and except during World War II, I have served the company full time since its inception."

6 Months Of TV Frustration

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Can you imagine racing through a book you can't put down, then finding the last two chapters missing? How would it feel if your television set goes on the fritz in the final minutes of the football game of the century?

These exasperating situations would drive anybody crazy. Yet tonight, millions of Americans will goggle up the season's finale of ABC's "Dynasty," and then suffer through six months of frustration before learning whether the characters hanging over the cliff fall or find a helping hand.

As ABC's press release on the show trumpets: "Blake, Krystle, Alexis, Adam, Fallon, Steven, Jeff and Kirby are caught in a vortex of swirling events that signals the end of the Carrington empire, in the startling season finale of 'Dynasty'..."

"The Carrington Dynasty is crumbling, and the people who built and thrive on its power and wealth can't stop the impending destruction. Someone within the dynasty tapestry is out to destroy the love between Blake and Krystle, once and for all. The life of one of the babies could be permanently altered. And in one desperate stroke, another is determined to murder two of the women."

What ABC doesn't say is, "Tune in next October to see what actually happens."

It's never been clear why there's such an enormous fascination with glossy soap operas that utilize any contrivance to confound and titillate viewers. Shows like "Dallas" and "Dynasty" are prime-time manifestations of Murphy's Law: "If it's possible for something to go wrong, it will."

However, Esther Shapiro, executive producer of "Dynasty," says it takes passion and a bountiful fantasy world to write for the program. "When I wonder if something is too outrageous," she says, "I look at people we all know, and it seems pale."

Mrs. Shapiro compares the serial's scripts to Dickens and Shakespeare. "We're using the same serial form Dickens used in 'Nicholas Nickleby,'" she says. "It's basic Shakespeare and (public television's) 'I, Claudius,' where the Romans would poison each other and tell each other off. Audiences love it. They often can't say the things they want. It's a fantasy kind of expression."

Mrs. Shapiro says her staff of a dozen writers "are dramatists constantly looking for conflict in the characters. Unpredictability is the key. We do things the audience doesn't expect. If you're reality-bound, you'll have problems with this kind of writing."

She says it takes a special talent to write about the rich. When Krystle (Linda Evans) married billionaire Blake Carrington (John Forsythe), "she moved from nothing to $7,000-a-month electric bills. She has to cope with money, a new problem for her. Writing about that takes a fantasy perspective."

That also seems true for the viewers of "Dynasty," this season's fifth most popular show. "We got a letter," says Mrs. Shapiro, "from one woman who said her husband has left her, life is horrible, and she has nothing to live for, except her paycheck and 'Dynasty.'"

Agonizing from week to week with a continuing serial is the novel come to TV, says Mrs. Shapiro. "We have longer scenes than normal prime-time programs because we're dealing with so much emotion. Every scene should have conflict for good drama."

"Daytime serials are different. They have so much time that all the characters can react to every situation. They can converse over coffee and mull things over. We have 48 minutes, and we like to tell a lot of stories."

Another difference between "Dynasty" and daytime is that the afternoon serials keep current and don't fade into summer reruns. Actually, "Dynasty" had 24 episodes this season — two more than the normal series order of 22 programs — but that still means 28 weeks of waiting for the other shoe to drop.

"I'd like to do 13 more episodes," says Mrs. Shapiro. "Six months without 'Dynasty' is hard on our audiences."

Claim Staffer

Was 'Harassed'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Embassy, say authorities in suburban Greenbelt, Md., harassed an embassy staff member who was accused of shoplifting last week.

The staff member, who was not identified by Greenbelt police or the embassy, was stopped Friday night in a department store, and police were summoned.

Police said the man had concealed two belts, a woman's swimsuit and a vase under his clothing, but that he was released after the goods were recovered. They said no charges were filed and no arrest was made because of the man's diplomatic immunity.

The embassy said in a statement that there were no grounds for suspecting the staff member of shoplifting and that the incident was "provocative."
