Food Prices Soared In Living Cost Index

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices soared at their sharpest rate since June to more than offset fresh falls in gasoline and fuel oil costs and send consumer prices overall up a small 0.1 percent in March, the government said today.

For the first three months of the year, prices rose at an annual rate of 0.4 percent, the smallest gain for a calendar quarter since 1965.

Today's Labor Department announcement of March price activity means the 36 million Social Security recipients will get a cost-of-living increase of 3.5 percent next January.

That will be the smallest inflation adjustment since 1975, when automatic yearly increases were tied to the Consumer Price Index. The benefit increase was 7.4 percent last year and 11.2 percent in 1981.

The new adjustment will translate into an average increase of $14 for a single retired worker and $24 for a retired husband and wife who both receive benefits.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the small consumer price rise "indicates that the underlying rate of inflation has fallen to a level below 5 percent. This is extraordinary progress."

The department said a 4.4 percent increase in fruit and vegetable prices accounted for almost the entire food price gain of 0.6 percent, which matched the increase of last June. Since then, food prices had posted small gains — or none at all.

Today's report said that, "in particular, fresh vegetable prices rose sharply, reflecting reduced supplies caused by the rain storms in California and Florida."

Economists expect fruit and vegetable prices to rise even more sharply in the months ahead, partly as a result of this week's severe frost in the South and partly because of the lingering effects of wet weather in crop-rich areas of the country.

Prices for beef, pork, poultry and fish fell slightly, but egg prices surged 7.7 percent. Prices for dairy products were unchanged while prices for cereal and bakery products rose 0.4 percent. Overall, grocery store food prices soared 0.9 percent while restaurant meal prices rose 0.2 percent and alcoholic beverage prices jumped 0.7 percent.

For the last 12 months, food prices overall have risen only 2.8 percent.

Energy prices continued to fall last month.

Budget Committee Gives Reagan Major Setback

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate Budget Committee has handed President Reagan a major congressional defeat by approving a 1984 budget plan which would raise taxes by $30 billion next year and dramatically slow the president's defense buildup.

The budget blueprint contains almost nothing which Reagan would support and was sent to the floor of the Senate on Thursday with only five Republican votes among 22 members on the committee.

That produced the unusual political spectacle of eight Democrats on a Republican-controlled committee providing the margin of victory for passage of a budget resolution which contains higher taxes urged by Democrats.

The spending and revenue proposal, approved 13 to 4, is certain to face significant changes when debated in the full Senate next week or in early May.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said today that the committee's action "moves the battlefield to the Senate floor."

"We think we have much more strength there than was indicated by the vote," he said.

Earlier, Speakes condemned the plan as "gross disservice to the American people."

He said Reagan would join with Senate Republican leaders to lower domestic spending, restore the military budget to levels "essential to the nation's security" and cut back "the utterly ridiculous tax figure."

Once a final budget resolution has been approved by both the House and Senate, it does not require the president's signature.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the committee chairman, said although he was among the five Republicans voting for the plan, he will seek major changes on taxes and defense spending on the floor.

The budget resolution included a Democratically-sponsored tax plan which was approved on an identical 13 to 4 vote.

Approval of the tax ceiling which would raise taxes by $266 billion over the next five years followed the breakdown of efforts to reach a compromise among Republicans on the committee and the White House.

One Republican committee member, Mark Andrews of North Dakota, said bitterly, "The White House was not negotiating. The White House was dictating. They said take it, or else."

Over the last several days, Domenici tried and failed to find a combination of taxes and federal spending which would attract a majority of Republicans.

He was blocked by a handful of hardline conservatives who refused to budge on their insistence that there be no tax increases to offset federal deficits approaching $200 billion over the next several years.

"There was little chance of getting a solid Republican majority," said a dispirited Domenici after the vote.

So, Domenici said he decided that the alternative was a continued deadlock in the committee, and no Senate budget resolution, an outcome he found unacceptable.

As a result, Domenici and the four other Republicans reluctantly voted for the $30.2 billion tax hike recommended by Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., as an expedient way to get the budget resolution to the floor.

13-Month-Old-Boy Given Second Liver Transplant

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Surgeons transplanted a second liver into 13-month-old Brandon Hall today as the world's second-youngest liver transplant patient kept on fighting for life.

"What makes you so sick is that he wants to live so much," said Billie Hall, the boy's mother. "He just wants to live. He's fighting so hard to live. It seems that someone who wants to live that bad should be given a chance."

John Donica, spokesman at LeBonheur Children's Medical Center, said doctors had removed the malfunctioning liver Brandon received just eight days ago by 3:30 a.m. and replaced it with the organ of a 5-month-old Kentucky girl 80 minutes later.

The surgery, which began shortly after 1 a.m. CST, was completed at 9:05.

"This liver is much healthier at this point than the previous organ," said Brandon's pediatrician, Dr. Peter Whittington. "The previous transplant suffered a great deal during surgery because of shock. In this instance, there's been no shock and the liver really looks outstandingly good."

Asked if Brandon stands a better chance of survival than the 50-50 chance doctors gave him after the first transplant, Whittington said, "I really would hate to assess his chances of survival because you conversely assess his chances of dying."

Brandon's heart stopped during the first operation, and doctors were forced to give him 20 pints of blood during surgery. The second operation was needed because of clogged arteries to the transplanted organ.

Whittington said surgeons today connected the aorta, or large artery, from the donor organ to Brandon's aorta instead of making the connection with the much smaller hepatic artery as doctors did in the first operation. However, he said there was a chance of clotting again.

The donor liver was flown in by charter jet at 1 a.m. after a surgical team from the University of Tennessee removed the organ in Bowling Green, Ky.

Dr. Rick Voakes of Bowling Green said the liver looked "perfect and really good," although the girl's blood was type A negative and Brandon's is type O positive.

Whittington said doctors did not think the difference in blood types will pose much of a problem in organ rejection.

"... Many tissues, most notably the kidney and hearts, carry blood-type antigens, so that if they are transplanted into the body there's essentially a transfusion reaction which is chronic because you've implanted a solid organ," he said. "The liver supposedly lacks those antigens in most instances."

He said Brandon would "be placed on routine therapy for rejection."

Resume Old Debate On Daylight Saving Time

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Frank Taylor, an avid softball player, this Sunday is the Sunday he's been waiting for.

But for John Datt, who grew up on a Pennsylvania dairy farm, it brings back memories when his family used to keep two clocks — "one my Dad called God's time" to run the farm and another his mother always used to keep appointments.

It's the weekend when at 2 a.m. Sunday most of the nation will usher in daylight-saving time, long a scourge to farmers and a blessing to sports enthusiasts.

Americans will lose an hour's sleep and, if all goes right, wake up at 8 o'clock when their bodies tell them it's 7. To keep things straight when changing the clocks, an old adage might help: "Spring forward, fall back."

With the exception of Arizona, Hawaii and 18 counties in Indiana, the longer daylight hours will last six months until the last Sunday in October when the clocks again will be set back an hour.

Congress established the uniform summertime change in 1966, although giving states an option not to participate. Now there is a movement gaining support on Capitol Hill to stretch daylight-saving time to seven or eight months, with the time change coming as early as the first Sunday in March.

While public opinion polls indicate widespread support for the longer daylight hours, the issue remains controversial.

Among the persistent critics have been farmers. The American Farm Bureau Federation, which represents more than 3 million farm families, is not only against the current time change, but wants Congress to limit daylight-saving time to between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

The trouble, the farmers say, is they lose an hour of planting and harvest time in the morning, only to have to make it up in the evening. Dairy farmers say the time change isn't appreciated by cows either because they have to hold their milk longer in the morning.

Cosmonauts Fail Space Link-Up; Return To Earth

MOSCOW (AP) — The three Soviet cosmonauts aboard the Soyuz T-8 spaceship that failed to dock with the Salyut 7 space station returned to Earth today, the official Tass news agency reported.

It said the cosmonauts felt "well" after a soft landing in the designated site 20 miles northeast of the city of Arkalyk, which is 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow.

Tass said the craft landed at 5:29 p.m. (8:29 a.m. EST), nearly a full day after the docking was aborted.

The news agency did not explain why it took nearly 24 hours to get the cosmonauts back to Earth but the report of the landing indicated there were no troubles during re-entry into the atmosphere.

In a report from the mission control center outside Moscow, Tass said the docking maneuver was called off because the Soyuz strayed Thursday from its correct approach path to the year-old spacelab.

Western monitoring stations said the two crafts came within yards of each other but never linked up.

Docking of manned

spaceships with Soviet spacelabs usually has occurred within 24 hours of launch, but the state media did not indicate the current mission was in trouble until the cancellation was announced.

As the Soyuz approached the Salyut on Thursday the radio said the linkup would be "one of the most difficult and responsible stages of the flight," signaling in advance Soviet apprehension about the maneuver.

The Salyut was doubled in size last month with the addition of the Cosmos 1443 supply craft. The total weight of the complex is now 40 tons.

The cancellation of the docking was the fourth known failure of a launch craft and a space station to dock since the Soyuz-Salyut program was launched in 1967. In addition, four Soviet cosmonauts died on space missions during the 15-year history of the program.

Radio Moscow's English-language world service broke the news in an early morning broadcast.

SCREENING RESULTS?

I am looking forward to taking advantage of the health screenings being offered at Carolina East Mall here this weekend during the Pitt County Health Fair. However, I would like to know before I go if the results of the screening will be given or sent directly to the person or if they will be sent back to one's doctor. I don't want to mess with it if I have to pay for a doctor's visit in order to get the results. F.B.

Results of such screenings as vision, hearing, blood pressure, anemia, height-weight, oral abnormalities and foot abnormalities will be given on the spot, Health Fair coordinator Barbara Berman said. The results of the blood chemistry tests that are being offered for a minimal $8 fee will be sent directly to the person within not more than eight weeks.

Hours of the fair are today from noon to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

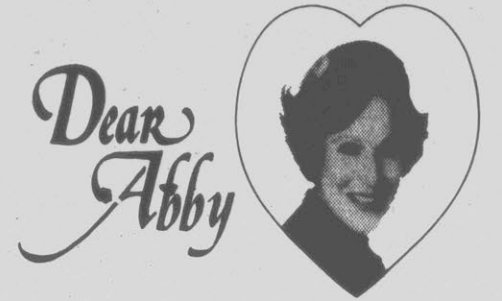

HOUSING LOAN PROGRAM?

I'm interested in the low- and middle-income housing loan program that was announced in Friday's paper. J.R.

This loan, according to a spokesperson for the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency which made money available for approximately 500 housing loans in the state, is not being handled by the state office itself, but by various banks and mortgage companies throughout the state.

Branch Banking and Trust's mortgage division and Wachovia Mortgage Co. were given out by this office as the Greenville agents. However, a spokesman for Wachovia said that Wachovia statewide was allocated $500,000 to loan through this program, but that none of this money is being made available through the Greenville office.

Applications will begin being processed in Greenville by BB&T Mortgage Loan early in May. For more information, call the office of Walter House, local BB&T mortgage loan officer, Monday or after, a spokesman for BB&T in Wilson said.

Have Your Prenuptial Agreement

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because my fiance and I have been fighting constantly over what I consider a major issue in our relationship.

I will be getting a large sum of money over the next two years and have informed my future husband that I would like to keep this money in my name after we are married. My reasoning: If the marriage doesn't work out, I do not want to have to split my money 50-50 with him.

My parents think I have made the right decision, but my fiance feels differently. He thinks I am taking a very pessimistic view of our future in even considering that our marriage might end in divorce. I really don't feel that way. I'm just playing it safe.

It's funny because lately I've been thinking that the reason my fiance wants to marry me is because he knows I am coming into a lot of money.

I really do love him, Abby, but need to know if you think I made the right decision.

PLAYING IT SAFE

DEAR PLAYING: Yes. Every divorce started with a marriage. And if you have even the slightest suspicion that your fiance is marrying you for your money, have a lawyer draw up a prenuptial agreement. Or better yet, don't marry him at all.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the traveling man who spends five days a week on the road interested me. He said he came home to discover a well-used pipe in the pocket of his bathrobe, and since neither he nor his wife smoked he was not only bewildered but a bit suspicious. Upon questioning his wife, she denied any knowledge of how said pipe came to be in his bathrobe pocket.

The following day when he went to get the pipe, it was nowhere to be found! He asked for your opinion of this puzzling incident, and you dismissed it with, "Too bad the evidence went up in smoke."

Well, Abby, this should clear up the mystery of my missing pipe. Being a plumber, I was summoned to the home of an attractive woman to repair a faulty shower nozzle that was spraying water all over her bathroom.

While waiting for my clothes to dry I slipped into a robe hanging on a hook in the bathroom, and I must have thoughtlessly put my pipe into the pocket.

After searching for it high and low later, I suddenly remembered. When I went back to that house, the door was open and I could hear a loud argument coming from another room, so I sneaked in and quietly retrieved my pipe.

I hope this explains it for all hands.

PETE McG.

P.S. Could you find out for me which five days that man is on the road?

DEAR PETE: Sorry, no help from this corner for a plumber who can't keep track of his pipes.

DEAR ABBY: What's the difference between a lady and a tramp?

STUMPED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR STUMPED: I've been sitting at my typewriter staring at a blank piece of paper for 20 minutes, rejecting one thought after another. Like you, I'm also "stumped," but I'd recognize an appropriate answer if I saw it.

Readers, I need your help. Please send "the difference between a lady and a tramp" to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Ex-Army Nurse Puts The Spotlight On Women Vets

By THOMAS FERRARO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — At the sound of a firehouse siren, Lynda Van Devanter dropped to the floor and crawled combat-style into the living room and back into Vietnam.

The sound was identical to the red-alert sirens that signaled rocket and mortar attacks while she served as an Army surgical nurse in South Vietnam's central highlands a decade earlier.

"Suddenly I was back in Vietnam and we were under rocket attack, except I realized I was safe in Long Island," Miss Van Devanter recalled.

The 1979 wail of the firehouse siren gave her one clear message: Her war experiences were likely related to her profound depression in civilian life.

This flashback helped Lynda Van Devanter, a former high school cheerleader and one of five daughters of a Roman Catholic family in the nation's capital, to finally come home again from the emotional hell of Vietnam.

It was an ungodly ordeal that is the basis of her book,

"Home Before Morning — The Story of an Army Nurse in Vietnam" (Beaufort Books, $16.95).

The recently published book is being considered for a made-for-television movie.

"I kind of think the book will do pretty well," Miss Van Devanter, 35, said in an interview from her downtown office where she serves as head of the Vietnam Veterans of America's Women's Project.

"I think the American public, after so many years of turning its back on Vietnam and the veterans, is ready to read about this war."

For many years Miss Van Devanter was unable to look back and cope with her 12-month tour in Vietnam. She was possessed by the war that divided the United States and radicalized a generation.

Countless male Vietnam veterans experienced similar difficulties, but in many ways these problems were more acute for Miss Van Devanter and other women.

Neither the U.S. Army nor American society was fully prepared to deal with women as warriors or as veterans.

In Vietnam, the Army didn't even bother to issue women tampons, Miss Van Devanter said. Back in the United States, the Veterans Administration and veterans groups often seemed blind to women.

A few years after returning home, she attended a meeting of Vietnam vets planning an anti-war demonstration. She and other women were asked to leave — they didn't look like "vets."

Of the 193,000 women who served in the armed forces in the Vietnam era, 7,465 were stationed in Southeast Asia, 4,500 of them as members of the Army Medical Corps, Defense Department records show.

As head of the Women's Project for the past two years, Miss Van Devanter has emerged as one of the leading advocates for women veterans in America.

She has testified before Congress, addressed counseling centers and sought to raise funds for a comprehensive study of issues unique to woman Vietnam vets, whom she calls "the forgotten minority."

In her book, she tells how she went to Vietnam as a staunch supporter of the U.S. war effort and how, after tending to a steady procession of mangled bodies, became an ardent foe of it.

Returning home, she found a public that ignored vets or held them in contempt. She developed recurring nightmares, began drinking heavily, had difficulty establishing relationships and, at one point, considered suicide.

Shortly after the firehouse siren, she received counseling at a veterans center that helped her "walk through" her Vietnam experience.

In her book she writes: "Somewhere between the therapy ... the work that I've done with the VVA, and my therapy and rap groups, I've reached the point where I can truthfully say the war has lost its ability to destroy me."

"I'm back in control of my own life and I'm proud to call myself a veteran."

The motifs also accented the chapel length train and A-line skirt. A border of scalloped lace trimmed the skirt and sleeves. Her white chapel length veil and blusher was edged with scalloped lace and was attached to a pearl accented tiara. She carried a bouquet of white lilies, roses, pink roses, stephanotis tied with white satin ribbon.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Man has finally revealed his divine plan for life here on earth.

For six days of every week he will toil, putting together three football leagues with seasons running from the first of September through the last of August.

And on the seventh day, he will watch!

With the creation of the United States Football League, he has only one more league to go before the plan is complete.

I ask you, ladies, where were we when the new league was put together? We slept! I cannot remember when anything went together so fast. One minute, I remember old whatshisname sitting in front of the Super Bowl lamenting he had only one bowl to go before he was homeless, and the next thing you know 12 teams in three divisions calling themselves the United States Football League trotted out onto the field where they are going to play until the middle of July.

I can't believe it. Everything takes time. Creation of the earth: seven days; man on the moon: 200 years; full term of a baby on a soap opera: three weeks; creation of a football league: 15 minutes.

What I'm saying, ladies, is we've been had.

We've sat idly by and watched the sports week grow from Friday nights to Mondays, and the season extend from fall through midsummer.

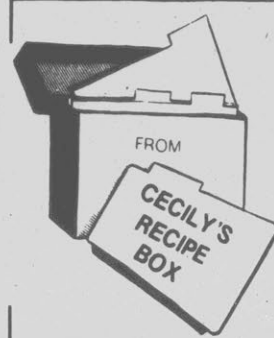

If they can jam in another league at the start of the baseball season, then baseball will have to retaliate by putting in another league in the two weeks between NFL and the basketball season. Basketball spills over into the golf classics now, so they'll stick in another league that will wedge between the golf opens and the National Hockey League, which takes away the week and a half between tennis at Wimbledon and the Indy 500.

I don't like to think where that leaves Bowling for Dollars.

In my heart I know that out there somewhere in this country, even as I write, is a group of men in a smoke-filled room putting together another football league to fill the 27-day gap that would make the season continuous throughout the year. No one will know anyone on the teams, but no one will care.

After all, how can you reason with someone who will love the Green Bay Packers in November as he loves the Arizona Wranglers in July?

COME FOR DESSERT Fruit Pie & Coffee FRUIT PIE

A springtime combination American cooks cherish — and no wonder.

1½ cups granulated sugar
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 quart (scant) strawberries, hulled
1 pound rhubarb, cut crosswise into ½-inch pieces (2 heaping cups)
2 tablespoons butter, soft
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon Unbaked pastry for 10-inch pie shell
¼ cup orange juice

In a large bowl, stir together the granulated sugar and ½ cup of the flour; add strawberries and rhubarb and toss together; let stand at room temperature 30 minutes. In a small bowl stir together butter, brown sugar and cinnamon; work in remaining flour to make a crumbly mixture. Turn strawberry-rhubarb mixture into pie shell. Sprinkle with orange juice, then with crumbly flour mixture. Bake on the rack below center in a preheated 425-degree oven for 1 hour. If top browns too much before baking period is over, place a sheet of foil over it. Cool on a wire rack until filling is "set." (It will still be on the runny side.)

'They Can Take It'

One would think the United States diplomatic service would have learned a lot from attacks on embassies in Iran and Pakistan.

The huge, seven-story American embassy in Beirut (a hotbed of violence in a country famous for recurrent violence) was a natural target.

The unvalled complex faces a busy highway, and as the Marine colonel in charge of the U.S. contingent in Lebanon observed, it "was not adequately protected, that's for sure."

In truth, the building probably could not be completely protected against fanatics determined to inflict damage and casualties among its personnel. And, as do so many people, we have a near-inherent distaste for walled-in facilities as symptomatic of a "siege mentality", unsuited to the desired image of a friend helping friends that should be part and parcel of our diplomatic efforts.

We should marvel, instead, that the embassy has not suffered similar damage and losses long before now. One small terrorist unit armed with modern rockets could have wreaked an even greater disaster (at a safe distance) upon the building.

Attacks on American installations should be anticipated in many parts of the world. Our presence — despite good intentions — stirs antipathy among all kinds of people.

It goes with being "rich and famous".

We even see it at home.

As one comedienne recently explained why she saved her most outrageous remarks for the "biggies": it was "because they can take it."

Evidence Of Progress

Many graduates and former students of East Carolina University are returning to the campus this weekend for the annual Alumni Day.

It is a day for varied activities for those who have been away from Greenville and the campus. The "Purple and Gold" spring football game will be held and there will be a reception at the chancellor's home. Various classes are having reunions and other activities and the annual Alumni Association meeting will be held.

There will be campus tours which should be exciting to the returning alumni.

The Brody Medical Sciences building is now in full use and various other changes are taking place at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and on the main campus. Evidence of progress still abounds on the ECU campus and it is a matter of pride for the alumni.

Radio Marti Would Be Redundant

HAVANA — Does the State Department need to beam 14 hours of daily radio programming to this Caribbean island to inform Cubans about the wonders of the United States and the evils of Fidel Castro?

Most level heads in Washington think not. But after spending the better part of a work week here, even the most rabid anti-communists could see (and hear) that the Reagan administration's Radio Marti project, now awaiting congressional approval, would be redundant, dangerous and fiscally wasteful.

When first introduced last year, Radio Marti was to be an independent radio operation, broadcasting from Washington via four 250-foot antennas in Key West, Fla. Programming was to include news, rock music, weather reports, American baseball game broadcasts and time checks — all for $12.9 million in the first year.

But the proposal, passed by the House, eventually died in the Senate. U.S. broadcasters had complained that Radio Marti would share its frequency with WHO-AM in Des Moines, Iowa, and the Republican majority wasn't about to leave Ronald Reagan's old employer vulnerable to interference from the Key West station or Cuban jamming.

This led the state Department to propose three alternative frequencies: one already used by Voice of America in its Spanish broadcasts to Cuba; "off band" slots at either end of the AM dial; or short wave. All three possibilities have been incorporated in a bill sponsored by Sen. Paula Hawkins (R-Fla.) that would also allow the U.S. to rent air time from privately-owned stations. Unless U.S. broadcasters succeed in adding expensive provisions to compensate stations disrupted by Cuban interference, the Hawkins bill would cost a modest $6 million this year.

Though Americans know little about this island nation, Cubans already know a great deal about the States. Because they reside only 90 miles south of Florida, residents have no trouble tuning in American TV and radio programs.

For instance, we've been able to hear National Public Radio's "Morning Edition" on the Armed Forces Radio Network; Southern U.S. commercial stations such as Miami's all-news WGBS ("you give us 22 minutes, we'll give you the world"); and the two major world services from the Voice of America and British Broadcasting Corp. Spanish-speaking stations on the AM and FM bands usually come in loud and clear from Miami, as do broadcasts of ABC-TV and Jerry Falwell's Old-Time Gospel Hour from Fort Myers.

At the same time, however, the Reagan administration wants Radio Marti to be all that available offerings are not: an anti-Castro propaganda tool. It would like to counter the admittedly-biased views of the state-controlled Cuban press with additional stories about Soviet adventurism, Latin American affairs, and Cuba's economic troubles, while projecting a better image of the United States.

All of this could get out of hand. The station, says Ricardo Alarcon, vice minister for foreign affairs, would by definition be "hostile" and prompt Havana either to jam or to "counterbroadcast" to the U.S. (an action to which Pentagon planners would respond by knocking out Cuban antennas).

Reagan's State Department also believes that Marti can provide Cubans with coverage of local news, such as Radio Free Europe does from its listeners behind the Iron Curtain. Yet Cuba's internal press is quite limited, particularly when it comes to domestic news. Foreign correspondents here, moreover, number fewer than 10. And there are no Cuban press officers or spokesmen from whom to elicit even a "no comment."

"There is no way Radio Marti will be able to contribute reliable information or internal events in Cuba," says Lionel Martin, a U.S.-born correspondent for Reuters who's spent the last 20 years here. "Marti will be forced to broadcast rumors from Cubans (living) in Florida."

Radio Marti (named after Jose Marti, a 19th-century Cuban patriot still revered here) would be a sorry way to seduce Cuba's well-educated (by Caribbean standards) population. Ronald Reagan would be better advised if his policymakers understood that most Cubans have long differentiated between the U.S. government and the American people. Remarkably, a long history of invasion, embargo, harassment and propaganda by Washington hadn't kept the Cubans we met from a deep admiration for Americans.

But all-hype radio, run by Uncle Sam, will only further Cuban disrespect for our government.

Court's Ruling Adds To Problems For Nuclear Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear power development was on hold even before the Supreme Court ruled that states can block new plans until the government figures out a safe way to get rid of waste fuel. Now there's that legal problem to go with the political and financial dilemmas that already were facing the nuclear power industry.

And the outlook for expansion of that energy source at any time soon is a bleak one, at best. Early in the atomic era, advocates of nuclear power claimed electricity could be generated so cheaply and plentifully that it wouldn't have to be metered. That science fiction euphoria is long gone.

In the four years since the accident at Three Mile Island, near Harrisburg, Pa., there have been no new orders for nuclear power plants, and some old ones have been canceled.

One major reason is money. Investors are wary of the risks involved in financing nuclear power plants, with costs spiraling and regulatory delays chronic, even when all goes well. When all does not go well, the cost of cleaning up after a nuclear plant accident can be stratospheric.

Even now, radiation remains at lethal levels in the Three Mile Island reactor that failed. A companion reactor was undamaged, but is still shut down. The cleanup is costing about $1 billion, and General Public Utilities, which owns the plant, estimates it will take another five years to complete the job. Financial problems have slowed the process.

Despite such problems, most financiers are said to favor rapid development of nuclear generating plants. Two Columbia University researchers who surveyed the opinions of decision-makers on nuclear power say that also is the prevailing view among government regulators, in the scientific community and in Congress.

But Robert L. Cohen and S. Robert Lichter of the Research Institute on International Change, found the most powerful and persuasive people involved in nuclear plant decisions were environmental leaders and anti-nuclear activists, who are unanimously opposed to proceeding with new plants.

"In spite of this impressive pro-nuclear consensus among key decision makers, both public opinion and the nuclear regulatory process have moved in recent years toward the preferences of the activists," Cohen and Lichter say in a study published by The American Enterprise Institute, a Washington research organization. "This suggests that the anti-nuclear and environmental group leaders have acquired a kind of veto power over nuclear development."

Cohen and Lichter suggest that it stems from political savvy, and from "the willingness of sympathetic national media to convey anti-nuclear arguments to the general public."

Their survey covered 274 people, among them scientists in and out of government, members of Congress and their top aides, financiers, nuclear power industry executives, officials at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and other government agencies, and the environmentalists.

Strength For Today

As Christian, in "Pilgrim's Progress," goes down into the water, he calls back over his shoulder, "I can feel the bottom, and it is firm."

We have peace in our religious experience when we believe we are standing on infallible and eternal truth. Walking against the current of a stream is not easy. We want to know that the bottom is firm. Only then can we withstand the current.

Peace of heart! Many people regard it as a mood, a gift from heaven which settles down upon us when we banish fear from our lives. But peace has its origin in deep certitudes. We are peaceful when we are sure about God and his goodness and his care for us.

Peace of heart is more than a moon — it is an assurance. It is the unshakable confidence which comes when we know that we are standing upon the unshakable — when we can say, as did Christian, "I can feel the bottom and it is firm."

Deregulation Brings Unity

Northrup said in a recent article in Industrial & Labor Relations Review.

In an interview, Northrup said it is hard to separate the impact of the recession and deregulation on the airlines, which went from making money before deregulation in 1978 to losing hundreds of millions of dollars in the last three years. But he said that during previous recessions, there were none of the concessions that he found in his analysis of recent labor settlements.

He noted that many of the new airlines which have cropped up since deregulation, such as People Express, Midway and New York Air, have hired non-union help.

The newcomers "are taking the business because their rates are lower," Northrup said. "They are forcing the airlines to be more efficient and they are making unions think twice before making demands that would push rates up."

Spokesmen for industry and labor, however, say that while strikes may be down, it is questionable whether labor relations have improved.

Northrup concludes that unions and management are cooperating better, but he adds that he also bases that belief on his analysis of the contract settlements and employee-relation developments.

For the future, he said, "We are going to have tough competition and pressure on airline earnings. There will be pressure on the unions to contain their demands and pressure on the companies to contain those demands. We will have a much more normal situation."

"Whenever you have government regulation you have enhanced union power ... because the employer gets relief," Northrup said. "Now that relief is no longer available."

Opinion Makers Agree On Opinion

going to spend it."

Leslie Stahl, of CBS, agreed with Sam. "I oppose sticking a lot of MX missiles in the ground until the Joint Chiefs of Staff assure me that they are not vulnerable to Soviet attack."

"Is this your personal opinion?" I asked.

"It is not only mine, but Dan Rather's. Dan feels 'Dense Pack' basing is unfeasible and a waste of money."

"So do Tom Brokaw and Roger Mudd," Chris Wallace, of NBC, told us. "They're for cutting the president's military request in half."

Helen Thomas, of United Press, said, "I've read the defense budget from cover to cover and there is a lot of waste and fraud there. Why should I support Weinberger if the Pentagon won't clean up its act?"

Rowland Evans and Bob Novak, media hardliners, who speak with one voice, said together, "If we don't give the president what he's asking for, we will be sending a message to the Soviets that they can get anything they want in the Geneva disarmament talks. We say Reagan isn't asking enough. You ultra-liberals are tying the president's hands, just at the time when the Soviets are starting to realize we mean business."

We all ignored Evans and Novak, as we usually do, when the question of national security comes up.

I said, "No one wants a stronger defense than my readers do. But I must know what our defense policy is. If the military will just tell me what they plan to do with the money, I would be the first to say, 'Go get 'em boys.' But as long as the president has his feet in concrete, I have to be a nay-sayer."

Tom Wicker, of the New York Times, said, "I couldn't agree with you more. I want to know if we are preparing to fight a limited nuclear war, a prolonged nuclear war, a two-ocean war, a one-ocean war, or a police action in space."

David Brinkley said, "What gets me is that the military will come to the media and tell us they only need $10 billion for a new weapon, and one they develop it, they're going to return next year and way it will cost us four times as much as they originally thought. I got badly burned on the F-18 fighter plane, and I'm not going to get sucked in again."

Columnist James Kilpatrick said, "I think you're all talking a bunch of claptrap."

We waited for him to continue, but apparently that's all he wanted to say.

Sarah McClendon said, "I can't justify a $2 trillion military expenditure over five years when there isn't enough money to take care of the sick and the poor. I say cut."

"Then the consensus is," I said, "that the Reagan-Weinberger military budget is totally unacceptable, and they're going to have to go back to the drawing boards and come up with something the media can live with."

"What's our next step?" Mary McGrory asked.

"We start a steady drumbeat of negative thought about defense expenditures, and let Congress take it from there."

Widow Regrets Police Not In Indictment List

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The widow of one of five Communist Workers Party members slain during an anti-Klan rally in 1979 says she was disappointed that no federal agents or police were named by the federal grand jury that indicted three Nazis and six present or former Klansmen on conspiracy charges.

The indictments stem from the shooting deaths of five CWP members in Greensboro on Nov. 3, 1979. The shooting came after a caravan of nazis and klansmen drove to the rally. Five of those indicted Thursday were among the first group of six nazis and Klansmen tried on state murder charges stemming from the shootings. The defendants were found not guilty by a Guilford County Superior Court jury after the longest murder trial in state history, and charges against 10 other Klansmen and nazis were dropped.

Dr. Marty Nathan, whose husband Mike Nathan was one of the victims, said she was disappointed no federal agents or police were named in the indictments.

"We welcome them (the indictments)," Ms. Nathan said. "Just because they are indicted does not mean they are going to be convicted this time," she said. "We are urging full prosecution."

Prosecutors also announced that former Klansman Mark J. Sherer of Cramerton already has pleaded guilty to participating in a conspiracy. Sherer, charged in a "criminal information" procedure, pleaded guilty March 24 in Winston-Salem, government officials said.

Prosecutors would not say whether Sherer, who fired the first shot in the 1979, violence, has agreed to serve as a government witness. It is known, however, that he has not been sentenced.

Also indicted Thursday was Henry Clifford Byrd Sr., a witness who appeared before the grand jury Tuesday. The indictment says Byrd lied in five instances.

Five of the nine new defendants named in Thursday's 14-count indictment were arraigned before a federal magistrate and ordered held on bonds ranging from $15,000 to $100,000. Virgil Griffin of Mount Holly, state leader of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, historically one of the most militant of the state's several Klan factions, was ordered held without bond. Griffin, 38, was called by a Justice Department spokesman "a ringleader in the plot." He was charged in two conspiracy counts.

DISCUSSING ADVANCEMENTS ... Hattie Blue, Business and Office state consultant, Dr. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of Public Instruction, the guest speaker and Loretta Martin, North Carolina

Association of Education president discuss advances in technology of business education yesterday at a meeting held in Greenville. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Business Career Emphasis Urged

Dr. A. Craig Phillips, superintendent of the State Department of Public Instruction, told eastern North Carolina business and education leaders that students need to dedicate more time in their high school careers to business education.

Phillips spoke at a Business and Office Education Awareness Seminar titled "The Impact of Technology in the Business Education Curriculum.

"People are always talking about students not being as good spellers, writers and readers as they used to be. How can this be changed if legislators are talking about cutting funds for education, not what they can do to get funds?" Phillips commented.

Other speakers at the seminar included Loretta Martin, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators; Gail Meeks, Greenville city manager; Kathy Riggs, administrative assistant of the Greenville schools and Hattie Blue and Elizabeth Douglas, state business and office education consultants. John Keely of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem presided at the seminar.

An afternoon session consisted of teacher improvement sessions in accounting, word processing, typewriting-keyboarding and career opportunities in the '80s.

The seminar was sponsored by the Business and Office Education Division of Vocational Education of the State Department of Public Instruction.

DST Debate...

Datt, director of the farm bureau's Washington office, recalled his father's struggle with the time change and his solution: two clocks in his Pennsylvania farmhouse.

The farmers' feelings have not changed, he told a group of senators the other day, although conceding that in some cases "rightly or wrongly (they) have come to almost accept what has happened to them."

But Taylor had another view as one of the country's estimated 30 million softball enthusiasts and past president of the Amateur Softball Association. He argued that most Americans get a lot more out of an extra daylight hour in the evening than in the morning.

"I don't know of any softball that is played at 5 in the morning. I know of an awful lot of softball games that are called because of darkness at 6:30 in the afternoon," he said.

His view was supported at the recent Senate hearings by other speakers, including a spokesman for the convenience store industry, who said daylight hours cut crime and increase business, and a speaker for 400,000 people who suffer night blindness and consider an additional hour of evening daylight "a precious gift of sight."

Various forms of daylight-saving time go back to World War I, but there was no attempt to standardize it on a permanent basis until Congress took action in 1966. After the jump in oil prices in late 1973, the government extended it to 10 months in 1974, put it back to eight months in 1975 and then to the six months now in effect.

But the 1974-75 experiment spawned efforts to permanently lengthen the daylight-saving time season.

Basically, says Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., sponsor of a bill that would start daylight-saving time a month earlier, it's an attempt to bring the clocks in line "with the way people actually live."

A supporter of Gorton's legislation, Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, complains daylight-saving hours now go four months past June 21, the point of maximum daylight, but begin only two months before.

Legislation similar to Gorton's is being pushed in the House by Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., who has scheduled hearings next week on his bill calling for a two-month extension of daylight-saving time.

The House last year by a 243-165 vote, approved a similar bill requiring an end to standard time on the first Sunday in March. But the effort in the Senate was bottled up in committee, chiefly because of opposition from a bloc of Midwestern senators.

FOCUS

North American Neighbors

This weekend marks the beginning of Canada-United States Goodwill Week, a celebration of one of the longest-standing international friendships in history. U.S. President Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau lead the two wealthiest and most powerful nations in the Western Hemisphere—two nations that have had their differences but have always continued to maintain close ties. For many years, Canada has been our nation's most important trading partner for imports and exports. We also share membership in NATO and have fought side-by-side in three wars. But the most important symbol of friendship is our mutual border 4,000 miles long—the longest unguarded border in the world.

DO YOU KNOW—What city is the capital of Canada?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER—The 1980 Democratic Convention was held in New York City.

N.C. Woman And Spouse Found Dead

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The bodies of a former North Carolina woman and her husband were pulled from the rubble of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut Thursday, three days after a terrorist bomb exploded in the courtyard.

Monique Lewis, 36, formerly of Goldsboro, N.C., and her husband, James Foley Lewis, 39, brought to 47 the known dead following the blast.

Mrs. Lewis had reported to the embassy for her first day of work as a secretary the day the building was bombed. Her husband was assigned there as a top political-military analyst. They had served earlier in Tunisia where she worked as an interpreter.

Mrs. Lewis, the former Nguyen LeMinh, a Vietnamese, had lived with Dr. and Mrs. Bob Getchell of Goldsboro after the fall of Saigon in 1975.

"We couldn't adopt her because of her age but she was family," said Mrs. Getchell. "We considered her our daughter. We loved her like she was our own flesh and blood."

The Getchells were notified of their deaths Thursday morning and will be guests of the government at memorial services at Andrews AFB Saturday and at the funeral in the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C., Tuesday.

They first learned that the couple was missing when a State Department official called Monday night.

"But in a way, we already knew," Dr. Getchell said Thursday. "When I learned that the embassy had been bombed, I said, Oh, no!"

The Getchells had taken Nguyen and her cousin, Dung Nguyn, into their home as "adopted" daughters.

Nguyen was the daughter of a former attorney general of South Vietnam. She was educated in France and at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., where she met her husband.

Lewis had served as a foreign service officer in South Vietnam and was instrumental in directing the evacuation of Saigon when the country fell to the communists.

He was captured by the North Vietnamese after the evacuation and spent several months in solitary confinement at Son Tay Prison, North Vietnam.

While in Goldsboro, Mrs. Lewis, a pharmacist, had worked with ICI Americas. She was a member of Adamsville Baptist Church.

Lewis was a native of California. They had no children.

Plan Tribute To Norman Cousins

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Former Saturday Review editor Norman Cousins is to receive a "peace quilt" from a group wishing to recognize him for his peacekeeping work, a spokeswoman says.

Heidi Read of the Boise Peace Quilt Project said Thursday that Cousins will be given the quilt Saturday when he stops at Boise en route from Sun Valley, Idaho, to Los Angeles.

"He was real excited, real touched, I think," to learn he had been chosen to receive a quilt, Mrs. Read said.

The theme of Cousins' quilt is based on children's drawings of family life and is being awarded because "his peacekeeping work has given a lot of hope to their generation."

Cousins, on the medical faculty at the University of California at Los Angeles, has received a United Nations peace medal and helped bring "Hiroshima maidens," survivors of the atomic blast, to this country for treatment, she said.

AFTER CHASE ... Investigators look over the car which led police on a chase through Greenville Thursday night. They have identified the driver as Nelson Dewy Edwards Jr. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Arrest Driver Following Chase

Nelson Dewy Edwards Jr., 18, of 166 Jones Dorm was arrested by Greenville police Thursday night on multiple charges following a chase that led officers from the East Carolina University campus to a point about five miles west of Greenville on U.S. 264.

Chief Glenn Cannon said local officers received a call from ECU police about 10:42 p.m., saying they were in pursuit of a car and asking for assistance in stopping the vehicle. Local police took up the chase on Fifth Street near the Elm Street intersection, Cannon said.

The chase led south on Elm Street, west on 10th Street, north on Grand Avenue, west on Chestnut Street, south on Skinner Street, west on Dickinson Avenue and west on U.S. 264.

Cannon said during the chase Edwards failed to stop for six traffic lights, several stop signs and allegedly tried to ram two police cars. He said Edwards was charged with failing to stop for a blue light and siren, speeding to elude arrest, two counts of speeding and two counts of assault on an officer (with vehicle).

University police charged Edwards with careless and reckless driving.

Francis Eddings, assistant director of security at ECU, said a campus officer on foot attempted to stop the Edwards car about 8:42 p.m. because of the way the vehicle was being operated on campus.

When he was unsuccessful, Eddings said, the officer radioed one of the campus police cars which later took up the chase.

Classmates Say Steve McQueen Was 'Loner'

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — One of Steve McQueen's reform school classmates remembers the late actor as a "loner" who "didn't participate" but who nevertheless felt that Boys Republic turned his life around.

McQueen, star of "The Sand Pebbles" and "Papillon" who died of cancer in 1980 at age 50, was honored by his alma mater Thursday with the dedication of the $310,000 Steve McQueen Recreation Center at Boys Republic 40 miles east of Los Angeles.

The 8,000-square-foot facility includes pool and ping-pong tables as well as other games, a reading room and a crafts shop.

McQueen, who was sent to the Riverside County facility in 1947 by his mother after she gave up raising him herself, never tried to make a secret of his reform school background. He left $200,000 to Boys Republic in his will.

"He was always a loner," said former classmate John Babcock. "He kept to himself and didn't participate in student government or any of the other organized activities."

But Babcock said McQueen "always felt that the school turned him around."

"He never was active in our alumni association, but he always stayed in touch with the school," said Babcock. "He liked to drop in unannounced and spend an afternoon with the kids in his old dorm."

Babcock also went on to success in later life. He is executive producer of documentaries and investigative news at KABC-TV in Los Angeles.

Now 'Eager' To Start Her Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Feminist leader Ginny Foat, charged in Louisiana with a 1965 murder, is eager to get on with the trial after losing her fight against extradition, her lawyer says.

Attorney Robert K. Tuller said Thursday he will travel with Ms. Foat to Louisiana after a court appearance here Monday in Municipal Court.

Ms. Foat, 41, on leave from the presidency of California's National Organization for Women, has been fighting extradition since being indicted Jan. 18 for a 1965 robbery-slaying. A former husband, John Sidote, has implicated her in the crime.

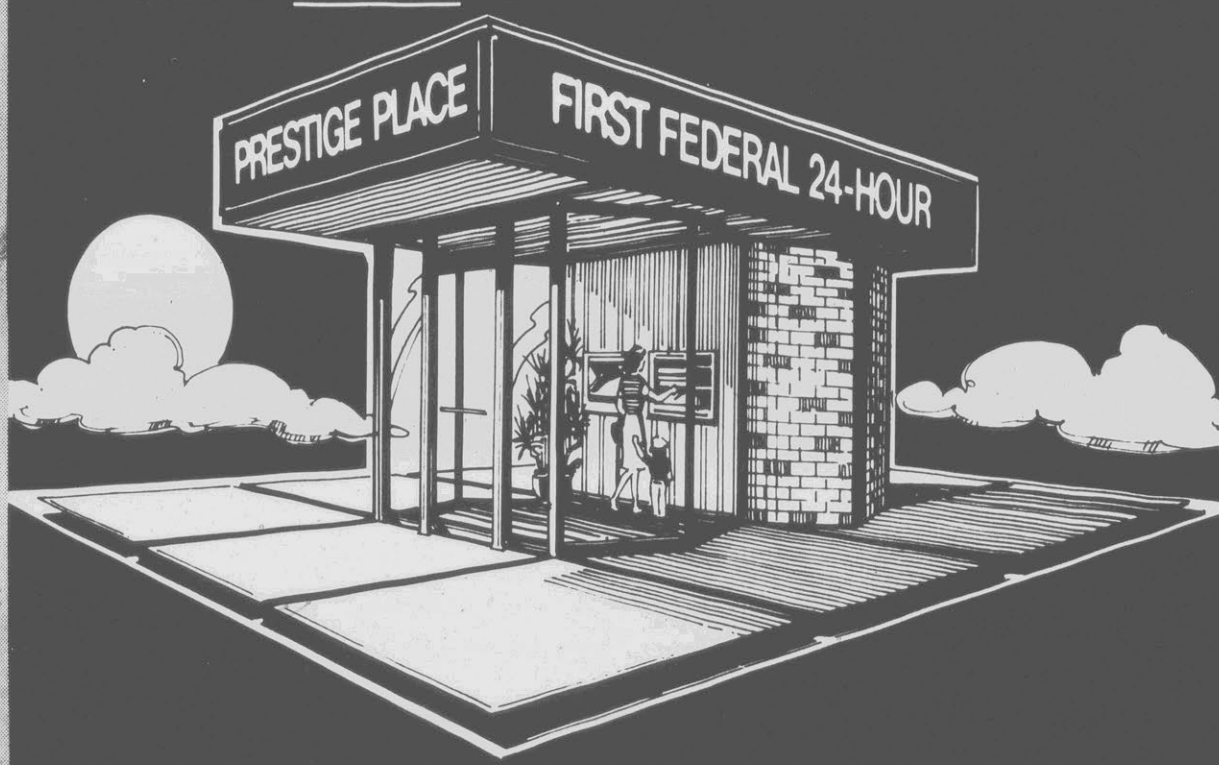

The state Supreme Court on Wednesday rejected her last bid to avoid extradition.

FIRE CAUSED HEAVY DAMAGE TO RURAL HOME — Staton House firemen extinguish the last sparks of a 4:25 a.m. fire that caused heavy damage to a Route 11, Greenville, house. According to Staton House Fire Chief Darrell Williams, the owner and occupant of the house was listed as Mrs. Henry Foskey. Williams said Mrs. Foskey was home when the fire started and escaped injury. Williams said Mrs. Foskey told him she thought the fire may have started from an electric blanket in a center bedroom of the woodframe house. The six-room house sustained heavy smoke damage to three of the rooms and heavy smoke and water damage to the remainder of the home. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Chief Glenn Cannon said Any Lou Schmidt told officers that a television set, a stereo system, a watch, 18 pairs of earrings and four art works were taken from her residence. Cannon, who said a door to the home was forced open to gain entrance, said the theft was reported at 1:24 p.m. Thursday.

Woods Scholarship Established

The Danny Woods Memorial Scholarship program has been established at Pitt Community College, Dr. William Fulford Jr., president of the college, has announced.

Two Wrecks Are Investigated

An estimated $1,700 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 11:48 a.m. collision on Greene Street, 600 feet north of the First Street intersection. Police said cars driven by Tony Oliver Dawson Jr. of 401 Nash St. and Steven Ray Padgett of Stancil Trailer Park collided, causing an estimated $50 damage to the Dawson car and $1,000 damage to the Padgett vehicle.

Cars driven by Jeng Ja Kim of 302 Scottish Court and Audrey Kaye Honea of 1101 Forbes St. collided about 9:18 p.m. at the intersection of 10th Street and Riberbluff Road, causing $250 damage to the Kim car and $400 damage to the Honea vehicle.

More Charges Are Filed

James Allen Wilson, 23, of 605 Albemarle Ave., arrested by Greenville police in connection with a Wednesday break-in at Elmhurst Elementary School, has been charged in connection with two other break-ins at the school. Chief Glenn Cannon said Wilson was charged with breaking and entering after officers caught him coming out of the school about 3:04 a.m. Wednesday.

He said further investigation has led officers to charge Wilson with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with an April 14 break-in in which $300 in foodstuff were taken from the school cafeteria. Wilson has also been charged with breaking and entering and attempted safe cracking in connection with an incident reported Sunday.

Cannon said that, in the Sunday incident, an intruder attempted to force open a safe in the school's office, cooked hamburger in the school's kitchen and left a note saying he was sorry for his actions.

Hunting Source Of Contaminant

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Extensive tests will be needed to determine the source of bacterial contamination that is forcing about 112,500 residents to boil their drinking water, officials say.

The order to boil water used for drinking and cooking was issued Thursday for Miami Beach and the coastal communities of Surfside, Bal Harbor, Bal Harbor Island and Indian Creek Village.

Routine tests turned up contamination from coliform bacteria, said the Dade County Health Department. The boil-water order will stay in effect until the water is found to be safe, officials said.

Sex And Drug Ring Disclosed

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Orange County officials have disclosed details of a sex-and-drug ring they say exploited girls as young as 9, luring them into sexual activities with drugs, money and jewelry.

Arthur C. Bowen, 40, was being sought Thursday on 22 counts, including illegal intercourse, rape, sex perversion and narcotics, said Sheriff Brad Gates. Six other men were arrested in the 181-count felony case Wednesday, he said.

Gates said the ring had been active for at least five years. An undercover investigation and the willingness of three teen-age girls to aid authorities led to the charges, he said.

Price Wins A 2nd Term

KINSTON — Woodrow Price of Gloucester has apparently succeeded in his bid to gain a second six-year term as a member of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, representing the 2nd District.

Price narrowly defeated Clyde Sutton of Lenoir County here this week in balloting at the district Wildlife Commission meeting. Although Gov. Jim Hunt makes the official appointment to the commission, historically the governor has chosen the candidate with the top vote total.

Under the selection format, the names of Price and Sutton would be submitted to Hunt but Sutton said that he will withdraw his name.

Over 2,000 people from the 12-county district, which includes Pitt, attended the meeting and gave Price the top position over Sutton by a margin of 807 votes to 746.

Bud Dixon of Morehead City was elected to serve as chairman of the meeting, defeating Claude Westbrook of Lenoir County, and Henry Oglesby of Grifton was named by Dixon as secretary.

When West led the three of clubs, it was obvious to all at the table that it was a singleton. Therefore, it seemed that declarer would have to lose two tricks, since he could get only one discard on the ace of spades. But Lauria had other ideas.

He won the king of clubs in dummy, cashed the ace of spades for a heart discard and ruffed a spade in hand. Next came the ace of diamonds and a diamond to the king. He ruffed another spade to eliminate that suit from East's hand, and then started to run trumps, coming down to this position:

West's hand is immaterial. On the penultimate trump, dummy parted with a heart. East could not discard a club for then declarer could simply give up a club, so he too let go of a heart. The groundwork for an end play was complete.

Declarer led a heart to the ace and ruffed a heart, then exited with the ten of clubs. East was forced to win and lead away from his queen of clubs into declarer's combined A-9 tenace, and the slam was made.

Three Russian Spies Caught, Expelled

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Soviet officials — a KGB officer, the acting defense attache, and a diplomat at the United Nations — have been expelled from the United States after the FBI caught them trying to obtain classified documents.

In two cases, the FBI used cooperating Americans acting as "double agents" to trap the Soviets. FBI agents surprised the attache, who is a military intelligence officer, as he picked up a green plastic garbage bag containing films of secret U.S. military documents from a "dead drop" at the base of a tree in a remote, wooded area outside Washington.

FBI officials said that no U.S. secrets fell into Soviet hands in the three unrelated incidents. The Soviets were seeking documents about U.S.-Soviet relations, military matters, the U.S. aerospace industry and weapons technology.

"It was coincidental they all came out at the same time," Assistant FBI Director Roger Young said. The cases are closed; no other people are being sought.

Young denied the expulsions were retaliation for the recent Soviet expulsion of a U.S. diplomat, Richard Osborn, for alleged spying. "I'm sure that case was in the minds of those who made the decision, but it was not the reason for the expulsions."

Three Russian Spies Caught, Expelled

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) —

Three Soviet officials — a KGB officer, the acting defense attache, and a diplomat at the United Nations — have been expelled from the United States after the FBI caught them trying to obtain classified documents.

In two cases, the FBI used cooperating Americans acting as "double agents" to trap the Soviets. FBI agents surprised the attache, who is a military intelligence officer, as he picked up a green plastic garbage bag containing films of secret U.S. military documents from a "dead drop" at the base of a tree in a remote, wooded area outside Washington.

FBI officials said that no U.S. secrets fell into Soviet hands in the three unrelated incidents. The Soviets were seeking documents about U.S.-Soviet relations, military matters, the U.S. aerospace industry and weapons technology.

"It was coincidental they all came out at the same time," Assistant FBI Director Roger Young said. The cases are closed; no other people are being sought.

Young denied the expulsions were retaliation for the recent Soviet expulsion of a U.S. diplomat, Richard Osborn, for alleged spying. "I'm sure that case was in the minds of those who made the decision, but it was not the reason for the expulsions."

But the expulsion of diplomats for alleged spying has been mounting in recent months. In the most celebrated case, France sent 47 Soviet officials packing. Britain has expelled four Soviets in recent weeks, and the Soviet Union has thrown three Britons out in retaliation.

Canada and Spain also have expelled Soviet officials.

FBI Director William H. Webster said Aleksandr N. Mikheyev, 44, an employee of the Soviet mission to the United Nations, tried to secure a highly classified document on Soviet-U.S. relations from a legislative aide to Rep. Olympia J. Snowe, R-Maine.

Soviet Army Lt. Col. Yevgeniy N. Barmyantsev, 39, who was acting military attache at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, was picked up by the FBI while retrieving eight rolls of undeveloped 35mm film of classified military documents near a remote state park in Montgomery County, Maryland, last Saturday, Webster said.

On April 2, Oleg V. Konstantinov, 33, an officer in the KGB, the Soviet intelligence agency, was detained by FBI agents as he attempted to obtain classified U.S. aerospace industry and weapons technology information from a U.S. citizen who was cooperating with the FBI's investigation, Webster said. That incident occurred in Manhasset on Long Island.

Konstantinov served as third secretary in the Soviet U.N. mission.

Aides to Rep. Snowe declined to discuss the case, but Webster said that in April Mikheyev approached Marc E. Zimmerman, her legislative assistant, trying to obtain the U.S.-Soviet relations document.

Zimmerman asked the FBI for guidance. At the request of the FBI and with the concurrence of the congresswoman, Zimmerman arranged to meet Mikheyev.

FBI recordings of Zimmerman's talks with Mikheyev showed Mikheyev persisted in trying to get the document even after Zimmerman told him it was classified. Young said their meetings occurred in Washington restaurants and Zimmerman was carrying a concealed recording device.

Webster said Barmyantsev was known to have tried to recruit several individuals in the United States with access to secret material.

At 8 p.m. last Saturday, Barmyantsev was stopped by FBI agents after he picked up the trash bag containing the film.

"When the agents pounced on him, he immediately threw the bag in the air," Young said.

Young said that although the photographs were of actual classified documents, "there was never any jeopardy of their being disclosed," but he declined to say why.

When Barmyantsev identified himself as a diplomat, FBI agents let him go at the scene.

Soviet officials in this country, like diplomats of all countries around the world, are immune from criminal prosecution.

On April 2, Konstantinov was confronted by FBI agents on Long Island as he met with an American from whom he was attempting to obtain classified aerospace and weapons data, the FBI said.

Young said the American was a double agent who has operated under the control of the FBI for several years and "it's a fair assumption that he had access where he works to this kind of data."

But Young would not amplify.

Konstantinov was allowed to depart after he identified himself.

State Department spokesman Rush Taylor said Barmyantsev had been expelled on Tuesday and Mikheyev on Wednesday. He did not mention Konstantinov, but Young said the bureau believed he had already left the country after being advised to do so.

Nuclear Waste Is Yet To Be Solved

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

There was once talk of shooting it into space or burying it under a polar ice cap. While those notions have been discarded, the problem of what to do with nuclear wastes that will remain lethal for thousands of years is a long way from being solved.

Since the dawn of the atomic age four decades ago, the waste has been piling up from construction of nuclear warheads and the generation of electricity at civilian power plants.

Congress, after 25 years of debate, passed a bill last December that sets up a schedule for completing the first burial site for civilian wastes by 1998.

While that gives the government 15 years to find and build the site, past history indicates that all that time and more may be needed.

The problem gained new urgency Wednesday when the Supreme Court upheld a California law banning new nuclear power plants until the federal government devises a safe method of disposing of the wastes. At least 12 other states have some type of restriction on plant construction.

Even before the decision, the Reagan administration was pushing ahead on an accelerated schedule to meet the requirements of the waste bill to demonstrate its commitment to solving the problem.

While the law requires the president to pick three sites for detailed studies by Jan. 1, 1985, Department of Energy officials say they expect to have the three candidates picked by the end of this year.

Then they will begin detailed "site characterization" work leading to the selection of one site for the waste dump by the president on March 1987.

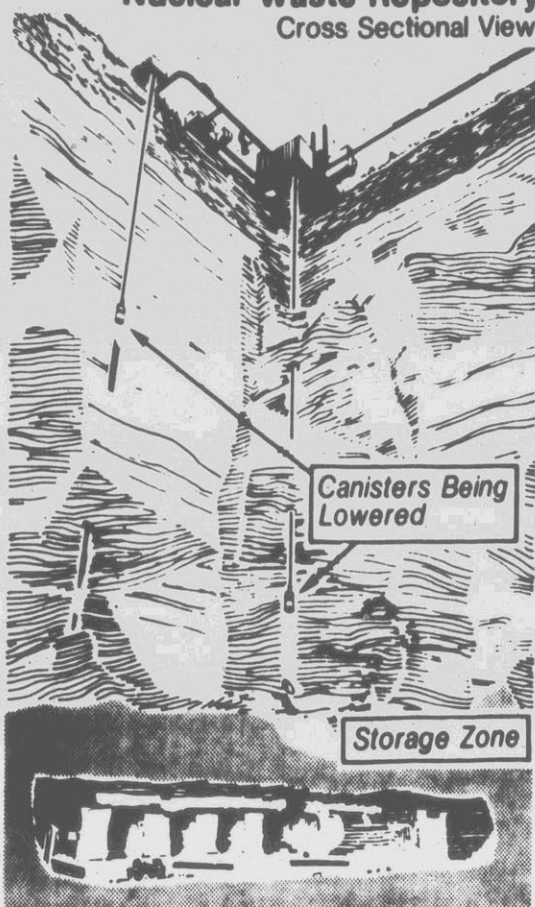

Two of the three sites — in Washington and Nevada — have already been nominated. Four states — Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Utah — are in the running for the third site. Each candidate site in these four states features underground salt formations. The department may decide to pick one primary salt formation for study with a back-up in case problems are found.

The selection of candidate sites has stirred stiff opposition.

Five hundred people turned out for hearings in Nevada last month to protest selection of the Nevada test site and Gov. Richard Bryan promised to veto a high-level dump in his state.

The law allows such a veto, but Congress can override it by simple majorities in both houses.

The DOE plans to spend close to $100 million at each of the three final sites sinking test shafts six to 20 feet in diameter and up to 3,000 feet deep for a detailed look at the geology of the formations.

At the Hanford, Wash., nuclear reservation, the shaft will go into dense basalt rock. At the government's nuclear test site in southern Nevada, scientists will be drilling into volcanic tuff. The salt formations are located along the Gulf Coast and in the Texas Panhandle.

Once the president picks a final site, the DOE will have two years to prepare a license application and design the repository. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission would then have three years to hold hearings and issue a final license.

After construction, the facility would resemble a rabbit warren with tunnels leading off from the main shaft where the nuclear waste capsules could be stored 2,000 to 3,000 feet underground. The site must be certified as capable of preventing the release of radioactivity for 10,000 years.

Whenever it is built, the government won't have trouble filling it. Utilities are already storing some 8,000 metric tons of wastes in concrete pools at the reactor sites. By 1990, this waste is expected to triple.

While selection is still under way for the first site, government geologists have already begun examining rock formations for a second burial site. They are looking at formations in 17 states, primarily along the Great Lakes and in the Northeast. The Energy Department must recommend five sites by 1989 for a second repository.

Voters in Wisconsin aren't waiting that long. Earlier this month, in the first referendum of its kind, they voted to oppose locating the second dump in Wisconsin, one of the states being considered.

Besides Wisconsin, the other states under consideration for the second site are Michigan, Minnesota, Georgia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

The nuclear industry contends that the technology for safe disposal has existed for more than a decade but what is lacking is the political will to pick sites.

However, environmentalists contend that the public is right to be concerned.

"The solution to the waste problem isn't just around the corner. We have some difficult technical and scientific problems to solve," said David Berick of the Environmental Policy Institute, an environmental research group.

Advised Resist Any Shortcuts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco farmers should resist the temptation to make up lost time due to soggy fields by short cutting waiting periods required for certain disease control chemicals, a plant pathologist says.

Dr. N.T. Powell, North Carolina State University extension tobacco disease specialist, said farmers run the risk of reduced disease control and chemical damage to transplants, if the plants are placed in fields treated with multi-purpose soil fumigants too soon after treatment.

Powell recommends that farmers go with a late crop, if necessary, use non-fumigant type chemicals for nematode control and Ridomil to help control black shank, and avoid planting the tobacco unless the multi-purpose fumigant materials can be used and 21-day waiting period observed.

A surge among automotive issues and an encouraging government report on inflation helped fuel the rally.

After trailing in the early going, more stocks rose in price than fell in the midday rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones industrials, off 3.20 points Thursday, rose 5.91 points to 1,194.18 in the first two hours. On Wednesday, the blue-chip average reached an all-time closing high of 1,191.47.

A long-awaited rebound in profit in the automobile industry helped spur buying. Earlier this week, General Motors said earnings soared five-fold, and Chrysler said Thursday its profit was a record for any quarter.

Chrysler topped the active list on the NYSE for the second straight day, up 1 1/2 at 25 1/2. GM was up 3/4 at 64 1/2. Ford rose 1 1/2 to 47 and American Motors gained to 7 1/2.

Among encouraging developments cited by analysts was a government report today that consumer prices rose 0.1 percent in March and that inflation rose at an annual rate of 0.4 percent over the first three months of the year, the smallest quarterly gain since 1965.

But analysts also said a growing economy, a nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax that took effect this month, and rising wholesale prices for gasoline are expected to push consumer prices higher in future months.

The NYSE's composite index rose .19 to 92.14. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.36 to 414.81.

Big Board volume reached 42.10 million shares a third of the way through the session, down from 52.72 million in the same period Thursday.

The interruption of a rally Thursday was attributed in part to investor disappointment with a Texas Instruments report of a 74 percent decline in earnings, which pushed technology issues lower.

Texas Instruments, which plummeted 1 1/4 points Thursday, fell another 4 1/4 to 144 1/4 after a delayed opening today.

BankAmerica slipped 1/8 to 23 1/4 in trading that included a block of 1,245,700 shares changing hands at 23 1/4 a share.

Glenn Formally Announces Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Glenn stressed his small-town roots, Walter Mondale his experience,

Alan Cranston his dedication to arms control and Gary Hart his search for new ideas.

Southerners Ernest Hollings and Reubin Askew made it clear they were not Jimmy Carter in style or substance.

That was how they began their presidential campaigns, these six Democrats who hope to succeed Ronald Reagan.

Each had his own style and tone. But their announcement speeches sounded many common themes.

Glenn was the most recent to declare his candidacy. He entered the race on Thursday with a speech in the John Glenn High School in his hometown of New Concord, Ohio.

Glenn chose the most out of the way site for his announcement, a small town a two-hour bus ride from Columbus, Ohio. But for the senator and former astronaut, New Concord perfectly symbolized his emphasis on "the simple values we learned in this small town."

Mondale and Glenn run one-two in polls ranking the Democratic contenders.

Beach Bridge Hearing Set

MOREHEAD CITY — The Department of Transportation will hold a hearing here April 28 to get public reaction to the proposed replacement of the bridge over Bogue Sound between Morehead City and Atlantic Beach.

The hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the West Carteret High School Auditorium on Country Club Road. DOT representatives will explain the locations and designs of four alternatives being considered.

Alternative 1 would have the new bridge connect to the present causeway on the beach side and to the 23rd and 24th Street area on the mainland, while Alternative 2 would connect the present causeway on the beach to the 25th and 26th Street area on the mainland.

The third alternative would connect the 28th and 29th Street area in Morehead City to the old causeway road on the beach; while Alternative 4 would connect U.S. 70 west of the Bridges Street on the mainland to N.C. 58 just west of the end of the curb and gutter section on the beach side.

Two designs for the high-level bridge are being considered. One would include four 12-foot wide traffic lanes with a separate sidewalk, while the other would have four 11-foot wide traffic lanes with 5-foot wide shoulders.

Charged With Chemical Theft

A 29-year-old Dover man has been arrested by Pitt County authorities and charged in connection with the April 12 larceny of farm chemicals valued at $6,000-$6,500 from Blount Fertilizer Inc. on N.C. 11 at Ayden.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said David Earl Rouse was charged with felonious breaking, entering and larceny stemming from the incident, which resulted in the theft of liquid and powdered chemicals, including herbicides and fungicides.

Tyson said the chemicals were apparently loaded onto a company-owned truck before the vehicle was driven through a fence on the property and then stolen.

He said officers have recovered the truck and approximately 32 gallons of farm chemicals. Investigation of the theft is continuing.

Purple-Gold Game Set For Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Saturday night at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, East Carolina football coach Ed Emory will watch his charges go through their fourth Purple-Gold intrasquad game under him — and he expects it to be the best since he's been at the school.

"We've got a lot better players than we've ever had before," Emory said prior to the contest. Now — for the players — it's a first chance to prove it.

Returning starting quarterback Kevin Ingram will be guiding the Purple team, with John Williams at the helm of the Gold. And Emory says he has to give a little bit of a nod to the Gold team in the contest.

"From the results of the draft, I think the Gold team came out a little ahead, although there are good people on the Purple team too. I think both teams will be able to score some points," Emory added.

The starting lineup for the Purple on offense has Ingram at quarterback with Reggie Branch and Tony Baker at the running backs. The flanker will be Chris McLawhorn, with Ricky Nichols at split end. Lloyd Black will start at tight end.

On defense, Gerry Rogers will start at nose guard with Hal Stephens and William Jennette at the tackles. Curtis Wyatt and Willie Mack will be the ends, with Mike Grant and Chris Santa Cruz at the linebacks. Chuck Bishop will be at right corner, with Rolando Caparas at left corner. Randy Bost will be the strong safety with Marcus Somerville at free safety.

Stuart Ward will hand

snaps, with Jeff Bolch doing the punting.

On the Gold unit, John Williams starts at quarterback, with Earnest Byner and Bubba Bunn at the running backs. Stefan Adams will be the split end with Henry Williams at flanker. Either Norwood Vann or Damon Pope will start at tight end.

The offensive line includes Terry Long and Ricky Hilburn at the guards, with Greg Quick and Tim Dumas at tackles. Greg Thomas will handle the center position.

The defensive backs will find Clint Harris at free safety, Keith Brown at strong safety, with Kevin Walker and Calvin Adams at the corner.

The linebacks will be P.J. Jordan and Tyrone Johnson, with Jeff Pegues and Kenny Phillips at the ends. David Plum will be at nose guard with Steve Hamilton and Maurey Banks at the tackles.

Kevin Samuel will handle snaps with Williams doing the punting.

Jeff Heath will handle kickoffs, placements and field goals for both squads.

Art Baker, the new offensive coordinator, will be the head coach for the Gold, with Tom Throckmorton, the new defensive coordinator, handling the Purple.

"You never accomplish all you want to in spring practice," Emory said. "But we've had some good things happen. We brought in five junior college players and four of them have worked their way into the top two units. I like that."

"Tim Dumas has been one of the pleasant surprises of the offensive line, and getting Greg Quick back is a positive thing. Greg Thomas also had a heck of a spring in the offensive line."

There were some negative things too. "We've missed some people with injuries and this concerns us. But we do feel that we have a chance to have a real good offensive line. We have four good tight ends, but we haven't found a third fullback."

Emory feels that the Pirate defense is the best it's been in years. "They are older and been through a lot," he said. "Gerry Rogers is giving us good play at nose guard, but we still need another."

Having healthy linebackers is also a blessing, Emory feels. "There's no question that our secondary is better."

Things are still unsettled at snapper and in the punting department. Jeff Bolch, who punted last year, missed much of the spring, but Emory notes John Williams is coming on.

"John has improved tremendously," he said. "This is the first spring he's had, and if he had been here last spring, he really would have been something now."

East Carolina opens its regular season against Florida State on September 8.

Rose Crushes Fike, 12-0

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Mike Kinley and Randy Warren each hit two-run homers and Rudy Stalls had a three-run double to highlight an eight-run fifth inning as Rose High School romped to a 12-0 baseball win over Wilson Fike yesterday.

Kenny Kirkland tossed a three-hitter for the shutout gaining his second victory against no losses this year.

Stalls, who had two doubles, led the Rose attack with three hits, while Warren and Kirkland each added a pair. Rose banged out a total of 13 hits during the afternoon.

Kirkland had some control problems, walking five and striking out four and going to a full count on several batters. But he helped start a double play — one of two the Rapants pulled off — to kill the biggest Fike threat.

That came in the top of the fifth, just before the big Rose explosion. With one out, Kirkland hit Allen Boyette and Brad Almond and Rusty Dail both got singles, loading the bases. Kelly Farmer, however, grounded back to Kirkland, who relayed home to get Boyette, then Curtis Evans nailed Farmer going to first to retire the side.

Only on two other occasions did Fike threaten, leaving a man at second in the first after two walks, and in the seventh, when a walk, and out and a wild pitch, put a runner at third.

Rose, meanwhile, had grabbed the lead in the first inning. Traye Fuqua reached on an infield hit with one away and was sacrificed up. He took third on Kirkland's infield hit and scored on a passed ball.

The Rapants pushed over three more in the third. Stalls led off with a walk and Fuqua reached on an error. Warren doubled, driving in Stalls, and Kirkland's dropped sacrifice fly scored Fuqua. Warren then scored when Kinley grounded out.

Rose then exploded for eight big runs in the fifth frame. Kirkland opened with a single to left and Kinley followed with a homer to center, making it 6-0.

Eric Woodworth walked, as did Evans and Bobby Buie, loading the bases with one away. Stalls then cracked a double to left, driving in all three runners to up it to 9-0.

After Billy Michel's single drove in Stalls, Warren closed out the scoring with a homer to left, and Rose held a 12-0 margin.

"It was good to get a shutout," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "Kirkland made some good pitches at good times, and our defense played well. Fuqua had a good game at shortstop, and I was real pleased with the way Evans played behind the plate."

"We got some good hits from Warren and Stalls continues to hit the ball well."

Rose boosted its record to 9-0 overall and 5-0 in the conference with the win. Fike falls to 2-3 in the league and 5-6 overall.

Rose travels to Wilson Hunt tonight for a 7:30 p.m. contest.

Rudd set a qualifying record Thursday, gunning his Chevrolet to an average speed of 90.005 for the top starting

Hendrick Doubts Reports

MONTREAL (AP) — It may be a while before St. Louis outfielder George Hendrick believes the Cardinals' scouting reports.

The report on Bryan Little, the diminutive switch-hitting shortstop of the Montreal Expos, was not to play him as a pull-hitter batting left-handed. Dutifully, Hendrick, the Cardinals' right fielder, moved away from the line when Little came to bat in the first inning Thursday.

Little promptly doubled into the right-field corner, driving in Tim Raines and tying the score 1-1. The hit sparked a three-run first inning and the Expos went on to defeat St. Louis starter Joaquin Andujar, an old nemesis, 6-5.

In the only other National League game, the Houston Astros edged the Cincinnati

Reds 4-3 on Phil Garner's two-run double in the bottom of the 10th inning.

Andujar had an 11-1 career record against Montreal and had won 12 consecutive games, including a victory in the 1982 NL playoffs, and two in the World Series.

Little delivered another run-scoring double to almost the identical spot in the second inning, which prompted a comment from Hendrick as he passed him on the field later in the game.

"Am I going to believe the scouting reports on you any more?" he asked.

Explaining his success, Little said: "The only thing I was trying to do was move Tim Raines over to third base because he was on second both times I came up. But I got something I could pull and it worked out to my advantage."

Al Oliver and Terry Francona added RBI singles in the first inning and Gary Carter belted a solo home run.

Astros 4, Reds 3

Omar Moreno led off the Houston 10th with a single off Cincinnati relief ace Tom Hume. Kevin Bass singled Moreno to third and went to second on the throw and Dickie Thon was intentionally walked to load the bases. Garner's long fly to center bounced over the wall to score Moreno and Bass. Garner also homered in the fourth and singled a run across in the 10th.

Rose Defeats Hunt, Remains Unbeaten

WILSON — Rose High School's tennis team rolled to a 6-3 victory over Wilson Hunt yesterday, remaining unbeaten on the year.

The Rampants lost matches in the number two and five singles and the number two doubles.

Now 10-0, Rose plays host to Northeastern on Tuesday.

Seattle Hurler Ignores Scouting Report, Throws Past Minnesota

By The Associated Press
Mike Young is a Seattle rookie pitcher quickly learning that what got him to the major leagues will keep him there.

After taking one look at the scouting reports for Thursday's Mariners-Minnesota game, Young promptly threw them away. And then he went out and threw the ball past the Twins.

"I had been trying to follow the pitching charts on how to throw to each hitter's weakness. It wasn't doing me any good," said Young, who pitched 81-3 innings of two-hit ball in Seattle's 2-0 victory over the Twins.

"I was pitching too fine, trying to hit spots. That's not me. Today, I decided I'd be me, let my natural stuff work for me. I went mainly with the fast ball, busted the slider on the right-handed hitters. No soft stuff."

In other games on an abbreviated American League schedule, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Texas Rangers 3-2 in 14 innings and the California Angels swept a two-night doubleheader from the Oakland A's, winning the opener 6-2 and taking the nightcap 6-5.

Young, now 2-2, struck out four and walked two. He gave up a single in the first inning to John Castino and a one-out single by Darrell Brown in the ninth, which brought Bill Caudill in from the bullpen.

Caudill retired the last two batters on grounders for his third save.

Young, who got all the runs he needed on seventh-inning solo homers by Pat Putnam and Julio Cruz, said he wasn't overly disappointed about exiting the game so close to his first major league shutout.

"I don't mind leaving for Caudill," the 24-year-old left-hander said. "I probably could have completed the game. But we are fortunate to have a strong relief pitcher like Caudill to come in and finish at the end. That's what he's being paid for."

Castino said he was impressed by Young. "He was tough. He kept riding that fast ball or sinking it away off the outside corner from the right-handers. And he had the hard slider in tight."

The rookie pitcher also made an impression on Minnesota's Kent Hrbek, namely on the arm.

second inning after being hit in the right forearm by a Young pitch. X-rays were negative, although Hrbek's arm will be in a plastic cast for the next few days.

Orioles 3, Rangers 2

John Shelby scored the winning run in the bottom of the 14th inning as Texas failed to complete an inning-ending double play. Shelby singled with one out off Odell Jones, 1-1, and cruised to third on Dan Ford's bloop single.

Cal Ripken then hit a grounder to shortstop Bucky Dent, who bobbled the ball before throwing to second baseman Mike Richardt. Ford's hard slide into Richardt broke up the relay and allowed Shelby to score.

Tim Stoddard won his first decision of the year by striking out four in the final two innings. Orioles starter Jim Palmer gave up two unearned runs in eight innings.

Benny Ayala homered for Baltimore.

Angels 6-6, A's 2-5

Fred Lynn drilled a two-run homer in the first game and triggered a six-run, sixth-inning rally with a leadoff homer in the nightcap.

Geoff Zahn, 2-1, tossed a five-hitter in the first game and got additional hitting support on a two-run homer by Doug DeCinces. Rickey Henderson hit his first homer of the year for Oakland.

Lynn's fifth homer of the season helped the Angels overcome Oakland's 2-0 lead in the second game. Brian Downing and Bobby Grich also singled in runs during the uprising.

PCC Downs Craven, 6-2

Pitt Community College's tennis team gained a 6-2 tennis victory over Craven Community College yesterday.

The win was the third against no losses for Pitt. The number two doubles match was not played.

Pitt returns to action on Monday, hosting Coastal Carolina Community College.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

SAFETY IN FORTIFICATION

IN BIBLICAL TIMES PEOPLE ONLY FELT SAFE WHEN THEY HAD THE WALLS OF A TOWN STRONG ENOUGH TO WITHSTAND THE ONSLAUGHT OF RAPACIOUS ATTACKERS. WALLS SOMETIMES SEVENTY OR A HUNDRED FEET IN DEPTH WERE KNOWN TO EXIST. GATEWAYS WITH STRONG TIMBERS THREE FEET THICK WERE NOT UNUSUAL. ALSO DOUBLE WALLS WERE QUITE COMMON. ONE CAN IMAGINE THE CHAGRIN OF THE ATTACKING FORCES WHO HAD FINALLY MANAGED TO PUNCH A HOLE IN THE WALL ONLY TO REALIZE THAT A SCANT FIFTY FEET MORE THERE WAS ANOTHER WALL TO BE PENETRATED! NO WONDER, WHEN MAKING AN OATH, PEOPLE OFTENTIMES WOULD SWEAR BY THE TOWERING WALL OF THEIR NATIVE HOMESITE.

Music Said Key To The Hearts

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In a heavily secularized world, churches are revitalizing a way to break through barriers to faith, says singer Jane Murphy. She says it's being done with song.

"Music can worm its way through armor," she says, adding that this subtle yet potent means is particularly necessary in a technologically obsessed age which tends to deaden the sense of spiritual realities.

A "numbness," she calls the effect. She says apt music can penetrate that crust and "touch those levels that we need but that we're out of touch with most of the time."

Those depths remain present, even when covered over, she says. "We're not really fooled down inside. There's a tremendous, deep-down yearning for the transcendent."

The evidence of it, and its rise to the surface, is something she has observed many times in parish "renewal" gatherings that she and a priest-evangelist have conducted in many communities.

After the priest, the Rev. Owen Lally of Chelsea, N.Y., gives a talk on some theological concept, such as God's constant love for every person, then she will gently reinforce the message in poignant song.

Softly strumming her guitar, her clear, wistful soprano appeals for that greater friendship. "Father, it's one of your children again," she sings, "asking that you would hear. I've only a few simple words to speak. I guess you might call it a prayer."

Typically, by the time she's finished, the eyes of listeners are wet with tears. "People cry a lot," she says. "Music intrinsically is more intimate. They feel way beyond what they feel with spoken words."

Touching that emotional chord is relative new to Roman Catholics and some liturgically formal Protestants, but it's essential in a mentally secularized time, Mrs. Murphy said in an interview.

"It brings into play one element of our spirituality that we haven't engaged before — our emotions," she said. That aspect, she said, must be integrated and balanced with the intellectual, devotional side.

"Just 'jump and holler' affairs lack comprehensiveness," she said, but the "feeling" element, conveyed in tender, tasteful song, reaches into "that little corner" clogged by modern thought-patterns and un-reachable by mere words.

Mrs. Murphy, a warmly vibrant Roman Catholic who is regular soloist at Our Lady of Fatima Church of Port Washington, N.Y., also is engaged widely at various Catholic and Protestant churches, schools and civic organizations.

"A depersonalization has crept over people's lives," she said. "But music can reach over and around their defenses."

At schools and some other civic settings, the specifically religious notes have to be omitted. "You have to be very circumspect about that," she said. "Recently in our society, any mention of God or faith has become a faux pas."

"A kind of idolatry has put man in the position of God so that expressing relationship to any higher authority is considered immature. It has circumscribed our thinking."

In the secular arenas, where her songs are especially for children to help them express inner feelings, she said the numbers are usually of a humorous, give-and-take nature, but underlaid with Christian principles.

Mrs. Murphy, with a melting, golden voice, also has issued an album, "Magnificat," of contemporary-style religious songs about hope, faith and biblical imagery.

A one-time teacher, married and the mother of two, she said that in Roman Catholicism a "whole new phenomenon in church music" has opened up, sometimes still with its rough edges but now more skillfully incorporating contemporary musical forms.

"It touches people in a way the grand old stuff never could," she said, noting that what used to be called "folk Masses" — with string and wind instruments — have been refined into an increasingly regular part of liturgy. "The church is finding its voice musically. It's forging a new one, an amalgamation of all that is best, the contemporary taking its place alongside the ancient hymns and chants we grew up with."

Protestant churches also have shared in the trend with several denominations issuing or working on new hymnals, including Episcopalians, Lutherans and Presbyterians, both of old and new songs.

Mrs. Murphy, ecumenically at home across denominational lines, calls her religious songs "almost archetypal, going to the core of people's hearts. Any-one gets this kind of music."

"There's a yearning for spiritual contact and music serves to spark it when it can't be done by spoken words."

A Review

Ayden Theatre Has A Pleaser

The stage opens to the strains of a lonely concertina and closes with a pair of young lovers, but in between there are puppets and dancing bears, beautiful candy and magic as "Carnival" comes to the Ayden Theater Workshop. (Two more performances of "Carnival" will be given at Ayden-Gritton High School, on Saturday evening at 8 and Sunday at 3 p.m.)

The production is set off by some good, solid performances and a non-stop progression of innovative sets and properties. Director Doug Mitchell and company have put together a show that starts in the lobby, fills the stage and at times even spills into the audience.

The story is about a young girl, Lili, finding a life in the carnival. Heidi Anderson Lane, as Lili, gives a strong consistent performance in both acting and singing, as did Mitchell Riggs as Jacques the young puppeteer. Lili falls in love, first with the debonair magician Marco (John Williams) and finally with the shy puppeteer Paul (Darrell Mitchell).

These two roles allow us to enjoy the magic of Mr. Williams (complete with white rabbits and disappearing ladies) and the wonderful baritone voice of Mr. Mitchell. Also putting in exceptional performances were Lauretta Riggs as the Incomparable Rosalie and Joey Pollock as Carnivalmaster Schlegel. These two, individually and in their duet, "Humming," were entertaining.

The production itself moved well throughout Act one thanks to the rapid-fire scene changes and the cast support from the Roustabouts and the chorus. Act Two opened with a charge — the entire cast on stage in a celebration of "Beautiful Candy" and the chorus moves into the audience to pass out balloons and cotton candy to top off the affair.

The show slows down at this point to let the love stories emerge and resolve, then the orchestra kicks back in for the finale. The costuming was (as usual with ATW) colorful and creative. Music overpowered some of the singers, but generally Tim Haley's direction was good support for the musical talents of the cast.

Overall, "Carnival" is a dazzling visual performance offering a wide range of entertainment. The puppetry, the magic, the exotic

Blake Great In His Hoffa Role

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —

"Blood Feud," dramaticlicense history depicting the bitter, decade-long struggle between Robert F. Kennedy and Teamsters Union leader

Jimmy Hoffa, is a four-hour, syndicated TV movie that feels more like four rounds in the boxing ring.

That's because of the on-track, dogged way Kennedy, first as a congressional investigator, then as attorney general, pursues and prosecutes Hoffa. As characterized by this Operation Prime Time presentation, Kennedy was obessed with Hoffa, and Hoffa became paranoid about

Kennedy.

In one scene, Kennedy finishes work at 12:20 a.m. In the parking lot, he looks up and the sees lights in Hoffa's office. Not to be out-worked, he heads back to his desk. It could have been the janitor, or an energy-wasting Hoffa,

but "Blood Feud" doesn't consider those possibilities.

In another scene, Kennedy is taking a much-publicized

30-mile walk for fitness, while Hoffa is tearing up his own office because he's convinced Kennedy has a bug planted there.

The two-part "Blood

Feud," a project which was developed for NBC, then dropped by the network

during front-office shuffling, will be seen on 88 stations, reaching nearly 90 percent of the country, starting Saturday, although air date and time varies. The ad-hoc OPT network has distributed such exceptional programs as "A Woman Called Golda," starring Ingrid Bergman, and

"Smiley's People," with Alec

Guinness.

"Blood Feud" isn't in the same league with those productions. Although it often is gripping and volatile

TV, its focus is too superficial and one-dimensional. There are times when the movie seems to be a sequence of staged confrontations.

There had to be more to these men than their public parrying, yet their motivations and lives beyond the committee hearings and courtrooms are ignored.

One time, though, Hoffa and Kennedy get stuck in an elevator together. "So how's the family?" asks Hoffa.

Although Kennedy is reluctant to drop his guard, they finally do look at each other's wallet pictures.

As the back-slapping, street-smart, mob-connected

Hoffa, Robert Blake makes a superb comeback performance. The child star from "Little Rascals" who gained

TV fame in "Baretta," Blake admits to pushing his selfdestruct button too often during the 1970s. He was a heroin addict and a star who crossed too many directors and network executives.

He didn't work in the year and a half before "Blood

Feud," and only nailed down the Hoffa part after agreeing to a unique condition. Blake's full salary would be held in escrow and be paid only if his conduct and performance

were judged thoroughly professional by Harris Kat-tleman, chairman of 20th

Century-Fox, the production company behind "Blood

Feud."

Blake, who was paid, deserves a bonus. His work is sensational. With hair

slicked back, paunchy jowls

and piercing cackle, he brings a fist-waving passion and vitality to Hoffa, making him, at times, a sympathetic

character and seemingly the steppingstone for Kennedy's political ambition.

Although no saint, Hoffa seems to care about his rank and file. His finest hour could be his decision not to call a national strike to protest his jailing for jury tampering.

On the other hand, Kennedy is treated more ambivalently. Although he's dedicated and virtuous, he shows no respect for J.

Edgar Hoover (Ernest

Borgnine) or Lyndon

Johnson (Forrest Tucker).

The broadcast seems to be saying that Kennedy lost sight of the war on crime

because of his personal vendetta against Hoffa.

It doesn't help Kennedy's cause that newcomer Cotter

Smith gives the part a caricature quality because of an annoying shrill New England accent.

Ethel Kennedy, the widow of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, protested the program, saying it "distorts history."

Maybe so. But as contemporary history, it is often fascinating to watch, even if there's an element of event-dropping here, with shopping-list inclusions of the illegal wiretaps by the Justice Department, a CIA

plot to kill Cuba's Fidel

Castro and the theory that organized crime may have been involved in the assassination of President

John F. Kennedy.

Sevareid Is A Winner

ERIC SEVAREID

NEW YORK (AP) — Retired CBS commentator Eric Sevareid has been named winner of the Lowell Thomas Award for having the same "imagination, courage, ambition and humanity" as the late broadcaster-explorer.

The award for "outstanding service" was announced Thursday by officials at Marist College, a liberal arts institution in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., where Thomas was an honorary alumnus. Thomas, who died in 1981, was a broadcaster well known for bidding the world "so long ... until tomorrow."

Sevareid, 70, a long-time analyst on CBS' "Evening News," joined the network as a European correspondent in 1939 and broadcast news from around the world. He is the recipient of three George Foster Peabody awards.

Deadly War Games In Nevada Desert

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Residents of the tiny eastern Nevada town of Pioche say the mammoth B-52s pass over at an altitude so low you can almost see the rivets in the bellies of the aging warhorses of America's nuclear fleet.

The 225-ton giants cut west across 200 miles of rugged desert terrain for a realistic rendezvous with jet fighters bearing ominous red stars.

Several times a year, for six weeks at a stretch, electronic war games are played out as the giant B-52s and more sophisticated F-111s zip through canyons carved between 9,500-foot mountain peaks, homing in on targets on the desert floor.

More than 40 men have died since Operation Red Flag was initiated in November 1975 by an Air Force worried about heavy losses in Southeast Asia. Seven B-52 crewmen died on a Red Flag exercise last week when their huge bomber slammed into the side of a Utah mountain during a blinding snowstorm.

Yet the Air Force says the losses in the peacetime war raging over the three million acre desert bombing range are a necessary price to pay if American pilots are to hold their own in real combat.

On a clear day, the 600 residents of Pioche and the 40 people in the nearby hamlet of Casleton, 180 miles northeast of Las Vegas, watch the powerful B-52s lumber down the valley between their communities.

"They're so close to the ground you can practically hit 'em with a rock," says Lincoln County Sheriff Larry Wilkinson.

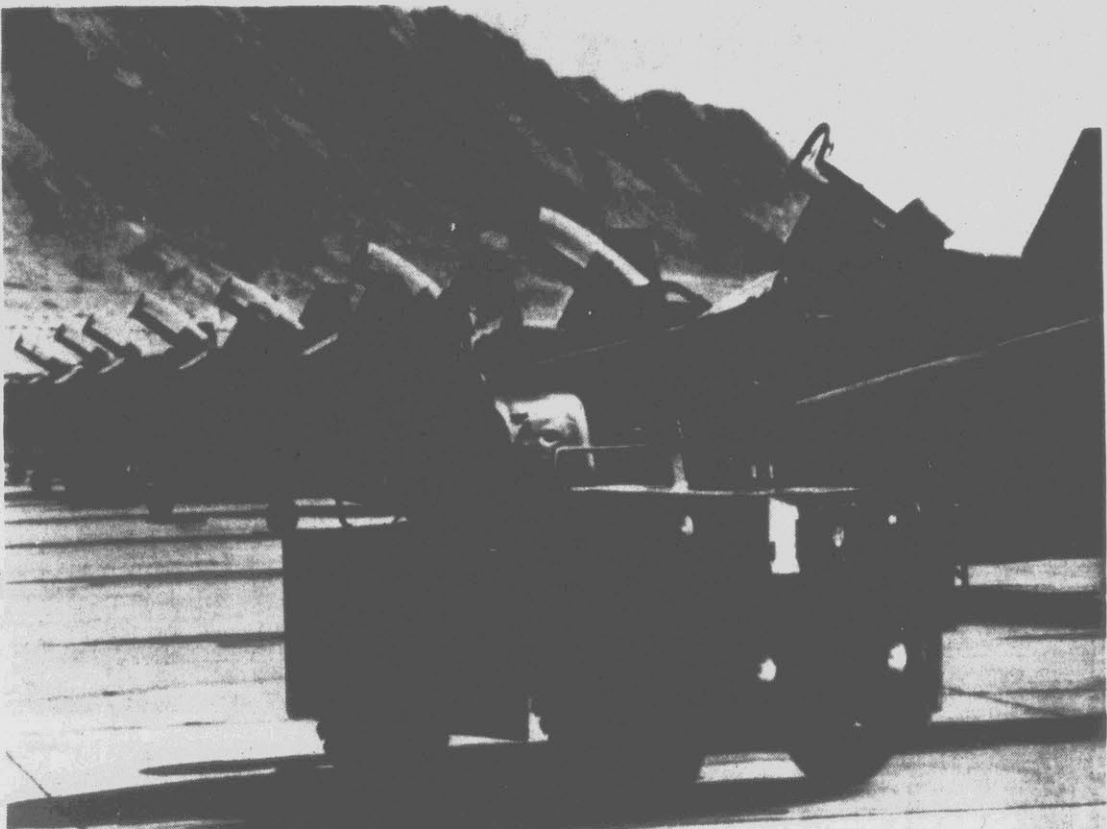

He says people at higher levels of the valley can look down on the camouflage-speckled wings, which stretch nearly two-thirds the length of a football field, as the bombers sneak in low to the ground to avoid radar detection.

Awaiting the huge bombers and escort fighters are elaborate Soviet-style tracking gear and an aggressor squadron trained in the latest techniques of Warsaw Pact pilots.

"It's almost impossible to go in there and not get in a fight," says Col. Joel Hall, commander of the 440th tactical training group at Nellis Air Force Base. "Everybody's gotta die at least three times or we're not doing our job."

Hall's "job" consists of orchestrating battle conditions so realistic that pilots return totally drained to Nellis or their home base — the B-52 that crashed was flying out of Robins AFB in Georgia — after a mission.

While the pilots and crew evaluate the mission, a threat analysis section spends the night viewing videotapes of the exercise. Red Flag is designed to test readiness of American and allied pilots against Soviet air tactics. (AP Laserphoto) battles. It is then the pilots and crew learn whether they survived their encounter in the desert, 200 miles north of Las Vegas.

Eight times in the morning and seven times in the afternoon planes of all descriptions lift off the Nellis flightline for their desert battles.

The job of the friendly or "blue" pilots is to knock out desert targets — tank convoys, airfields, industrial complexes, surface-to-air missile sites and a railroad yard complete with tunnel.

Aggressor aircraft and the "red" battle commander, also headquartered at Nellis, are there to make the job as difficult as possible.

Electronic dogfights rage from the desert floor to a height of 25,000 feet while commercial flights slip over the area at 37,000 feet — passengers unaware of the realistic war games below.

Army, Navy and Marine pilots also participate in Red Flag, preparing for weeks at their home base before deploying to Nellis for a six-week stint — equipped as if they were heading for battle.

"They have to anticipate scheduled maintenance," says Hall. "We don't want to stop in the middle of combat to change an oil filter. If they bring in six airplanes, they'd better bring in the supplies for those six planes."

The pilots and crew are even required to have necessary shots in case they should be deployed straight from Nellis to a battle area.

Problems for the pilots start out relatively simple. "We start the war easy, gradually making it harder," says Hall. "We start out one step higher than what they've been doing at their home base. I feed the war to them one day at a time."

Air crews work 12 to 13 hours a day, and for some it is their first experience at loading live ammunition. More live ammunition is loaded at Nellis, and delivered at the bombing range, than anywhere else in the world, Hall says.

When the planes are armed they head north for the encounter with the aggressor aircraft and missile sites. Giant AWACS early warning radar planes are stationed near the battle site and help control the battle, tipping friendly forces to the location of red planes and missiles.

Dixon, said all the school's lockers were checked. The dog was taken through the gymnasium and other parts of the school and across the school grounds. The students were in class at the time and were barred from the hallways, he said. Neither students nor teachers were told in advance that the dog would be brought to the school.

"This check" was not the result of any information that led us to believe we would find anything," Dixon said. He said the dog was not used in an investigation of particular students.

It was the first time a dog has been taken into a Durham County school in a search for drugs. Ray said the dog could also be used to sniff at the trunks of cars in parking lots.

The dog was not used to search students, Ray and Clayton said.

Hunt Drugs In School Lockers

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Durham police dog trained to find drugs was taken to a junior high school Thursday to sniff at lockers at the request of county school administrators.

Of the 850 lockers at Neal Junior High School, the dog reacted at only one, said Dr. Thomas E. Dixon, the school's principal. The locker was opened, but no drugs were found. Capt. C.W. Clayton, head of the police vice squad, said he was convinced drugs had been there.

Sidney Ray, administrative assistant to Superintendent J. Frank Yeager, said school officials hope to use the dog at all junior and senior high schools in the county.

"We're hoping something like this would be a deterrent," he said.

Clayton said city officers did not go to Neal to make arrests. He said that decision would have been left to school administrators.

"We're trying to keep kids from bringing drugs to school," Clayton said.

Brazil Building Military Might

By K. MICHAEL FRASER
Associated Press Writer

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Brazil, which has the largest armed forces in Latin America, is showing signs of increasing willingness to use its military muscle to help other countries in the region.

One indication is the recent buildup of Brazilian forces on the northern borders in response to tensions between neighboring Venezuela and the leftist government of Guyana.

Veja magazine, Brazil's largest newsweekly, reported that Venezuela would like to count on Brazil as a staging area for its forces in case of armed conflict with Guyana.

Brazil also is continuing an active business in the international arms market, becoming the largest arms exporter in the Third World. The Air Force said this week it sold 12 fighter-trainer Xavante jets to Argentina for $60 million, adding to the nine Xavantes sold to Paraguay earlier.

Army Minister Gen. Walter Pires said in a recent speech to the Superior War College that military exports were expected to reach $2 billion this year. And O Estado de Sao Paulo, an independent daily newspaper, reported that the military is creating a special rapid deployment force with capability of reaching not only the Amazon but other regions in Latin America. The army has refused to comment, but Col Mario Jose Santana Filho, an air force spokesman, said new airbases in northern Brazil could be used to move troops into the area quickly.

Gen. Danilo Venturini, a special Cabinet minister with personal access to President Joao Figueiredo, the head of Brazil's military-backed government, made an unexpected trip this week to Surinam. The purpose, according to the Foreign Ministry, was to "expand and strengthen cooperation" and to "protect South America from confrontations which are not part of its character."

The air force has announced plans to build one airbase in Roraima, a wilderness that borders Venezuela and Guyana, and one in Rondonia on the border with Bolivia to the northwest. In January the army set up a 250-man unit in Boa Vista, the capital of Roraima, equipped with tanks and other armored vehicles.

Venezuela has long claimed five-eighths Guyana's territory, or all the land west of the Essequibo River, as its own, and tensions between the two countries have been growing in recent months.

Life As It's Lived

True Greener Grass In The Neighbors' Yards

By GAIL MICHAELS

That aphorism about the grass always being greener is nowhere more irrefutable than at my house. My kids like everyone else's yard better than their own. In fact, the mere suggestion that it might be Meg's turn to entertain on her own turf brings tears to her eyes.

Now I realize that our yard is not exactly Pullen Park. We hardly have any grass at all, much less enough for color comparison. Our driveway is so steep that all Big Wheel traffic is forbidden. And Meg, unlike some of her neighbors, does not have free access to the goodies stored in the freezer in the garage.

But I have the feeling that even if our yard mimicked Busch Gardens, Meg would balk at being confined to it. "Christina's yard is just better, that's all," she says when asked to explain her preference. "She's got a dirt pile."

"You've got something even better," I tell her. "What?"

"Mud."

"Oh, mother," she groans and rolls her eyes. But I can remember actually seeking out as a child the lots in my neighborhood with the most mud so that I could slide down the inclines. And here Meg has for the asking a lot that is almost entirely an incline with red mud enough to content the greediest of bleach substitute manufacturers. That I am immune to its charms is understandable; that she is immune is preposterous.

Our yard doesn't have trees, she explains. This is true. Phillip and I have spent innumerable hours nursing the one maple allotted by the developer. It gives shade only to a few of the assorted insects making their way toward our domain. With luck it will be a climbing tree for my grandchildren. But Nancy at this very moment has a whole forest behind her house with enough climbing trees to accommodate any number of evolutionary throwbacks.

And Rebecca has a screened-in porch that makes a great jail. Susan has her very own make-believe playhouse between two stacks of logs. Jennifer has a front porch with a swing.

"All we have," Meg sniffs, "is Zachary."

But Zachary doesn't want to be here either. He prefers Christopher's yard. Christopher has a sandbox equipped with two dumptrucks and a boom crane. Andy, on the other hand, has a teeter-totter. We have a yucky old T-gym. Patty has a mother who gives gum. And Scott has a volcano.

"A volcano?" I repeated when Zachary first claimed this distinction for Scott's yard.

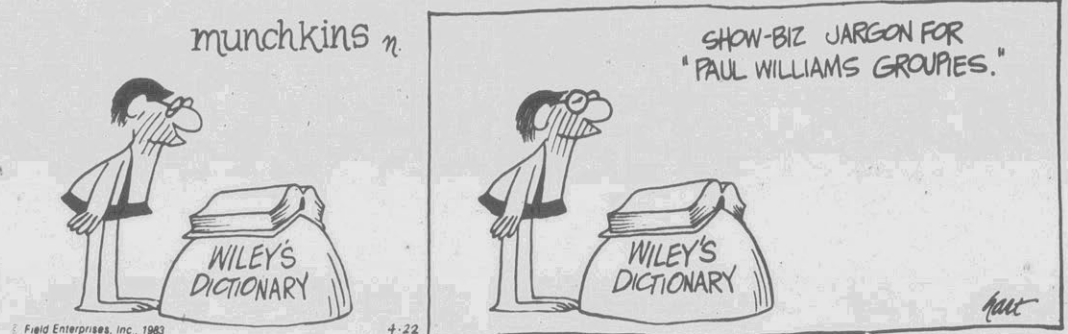

"Yes," Zachary assured me solemnly. "It chased me but I was too fast for it." Volcano or no, I finally put my foot down. "I am not stirring out of this yard today, and neither are you two. If you want someone to play with you can invite them here."

But after two full hours of intermittent thundershowers and hair-raising noise, I suddenly saw my children's point. I would have rather been some place else, too.

Committee Studies Erasure Of Criminal Charges

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill to allow erasure of arrest records for those cleared of criminal charges dominated a Senate committee's action, but the panel found time for bills on high-rise ridge construction and church-run day care.

"You can expunge official records but you can't expunge people's memories and false memories," Mike Rouse, managing editor of the Durham Morning Herald, told the Senate Judiciary I Committee Thursday.

Supporters of the bill argued that those mistakenly arrested may have their reputations hurt and have trouble finding jobs if a record is kept.

But Rouse said erasing court records could conceal patterns of frivolous prosecution.

"Police states tend to close records; democratic states tend to leave them open," Rouse said, speaking on behalf of the North Carolina Press Association.

The committee considered removing an amendment adopted by the full Senate that would give the courts discretion over erasing records.

"When you have a discretionary bill you don't have any law," said Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe.

Since the form recommended by the Governor's Crime Commission was amended, Gov. Jim Hunt has opposed the bill, saying it is too broad. The panel was expected to vote on the change next week.

The original bill would have allowed defendants who were found innocent or against whom the charges were dismissed to petition the court to erase their arrest record immediately if they were younger than 18 years old or three years later if they were older than age 18.

The court would have had to find that the arrest involved a case of mistaken identity or mistaken finding of probable cause for arrest before the record could be erased.

The bill was amended to remove the distinction between defendants older and younger than age 18. It was amended on the Senate floor about a week ago to exclude a finding of not guilty by reason of insanity.

The committee approved and sent to the full Senate a bill that would prohibit high-rise construction on mountain ridges after considering it for the third time.

The panel amended the measure, introduced by Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, to give counties and municipalities 120 days to exempt themselves from the proposed law. Other changes adopted expand the bill to cover towns and villages as well as cities and explain terms used in the bill.

The bill would prohibit construction of buildings higher than three stories or 35 feet high on mountain ridges at an altitude of more than 2,950 feet above sea level.

Those injured by a violation of the proposed law could seek injunctive relief, enforcement of the measure, damages or a combination of the three.

The rules would not apply to government buildings or water, radio, telephone or television towers.

The committee also approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would exempt church-operated day-care facilities state licensing requirements as long as they comply with the same standards as private day-care centers.

If the facilities did not meet standards set in the bill, the state could order them to close or seek an injunction.

Tom Strickland, lobbyist for the North Carolina Association of Christian Schools, said the churches operating day-care centers believe the license is a form of prior restraint on a religious ministry.

John Lail, director of the Office of Child Day Care Licensing, said the bill was "the best compromise we can get that does not compromise the state's interest in protecting children while satisfying the interests of the churches."

In other legislative action:

Lethal Injections

Action was postponed on a bill to change North Carolina's mode of executing death-row inmates from the gas chamber to lethal injections while Senate committee members awaited a second fiscal note.

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, said a note saying lethal injections were cheaper than the gas chamber was incomplete because "inexperienced" researchers compiled it.

The note indicated death by gas chamber cost the state $104.04, while death by lethal injection would cost $30.12. Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, chairman of the Senate Judiciary III Committee, said information was needed on start-up costs for switching procedures.

Supporters of the change say lethal injections are more humane, while opponents say reducing the brutality of executions will make juries more likely to apply capital punishment.

Equitable Distribution

House Finance Committee chairman Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, broke a 20-20 tie by voting to send to subcommittee a bill that would clarify a 1981 law giving husband and wife equal rights to income from jointly owned property.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said the bill should be sent to the subcommittee he chairs because fiscal analysts have estimated that it would cost the state between $750,000 and $900,000 per year.

Mavretic's panel is examining about a dozen bills expected to reduce state revenues.

"What we have to do is study these bills and decide on some priorities," said Mavretic. "It's difficult to decide how much money you can give up when the revenue picture is so unclear."

But Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, said the bill cleared up a legal issue that needed clarification regardless of how much it cost.

Social Workers

A bill to require certification of social workers, which has cleared the Senate and the House State Government Committee, encountered at least a temporary setback when the House Finance Committee voted 14-18 not to give the bill a favorable report.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, quickly moved that the bill be debated later, forestalling effort to kill the legislation outright.

The bill would establish qualifications for certified social workers and prohibit anyone not meeting them from representing himself as a certified social worker. It would not bar uncertified social workers from practicing.

The bill also would create a State Board of Examiners for Social Workers, which would certify applicants, collect fees and establish ethical and disciplinary standards.

Sara Fields, acting president of the N.C. State Association of Black Social Workers, said she was "elated" by the vote.

"I didn't expect this, the bill is so far along," she said.

Ms. Fields said her group opposes the bill because it would place too much emphasis culturally biased written tests instead of applicants' true abilities.

Separation of Powers

The House Judiciary I Committee reconsidered a bill to realign authority between the legislative and executive branches of government, adopted some technical amendments and reapproved the bill.

The amendments made clear that the governor would set the salaries of certain positions in consultation with the Advisory Budget Commission, which the separation of powers bill changes from a policymaking body to an advisory board.

The bill is the result of a state Supreme Court ruling that the lines between the legislative and executive branches had become blurred.

Education

The Senate Education Committee approved a bill proposed by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green to create a vocational education program in some seventh- and eighth-grade classrooms.

The committee delayed a vote on a bill that would establish a pilot program in which college and public school teachers would swap places temporarily. The House approved the bill overwhelmingly.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, said his bill would give both college and public school teachers a chance to hone their skills.

The bill is opposed by some education officials, and a vote was postponed to give them an opportunity to respond.

On an unrelated subject, Duke University educational psychologist Ellis Page told the committee that teachers should give public school pupils more homework.

Page said homework and student ability were the main factors in determining performance and grades.

Lottery

A bill that would establish a statewide lottery if voters concur in a referendum, approved earlier this week by the Senate Rules Committee, was referred to the Senate Judiciary II Committee.

Bill sponsor Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, said some technical amendments needed to be added. He wouldn't say whether he expected more substantive changes.

The bill would set up a statewide lottery if voters approve a referendum on the measure in November 1984.

Senate Action

The state Senate voted unanimously to direct the N.C. Courts Commission to study Superior Court operations and to approve resolutions authorizing continuation of the Joint Special Committee to Review the Department of Transportation and assuring public ownership of North Carolina forest and park lands.

A bill proposed by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green to allow children of missing Vietnam War soldiers to attend state universities at in-state tuition rates was returned to committee when Sen. Bill Redman, D-Iredell, proposed giving spouses the same privilege.

Chowan Hospital

A bill to allow some hospitals to garnish wages to recover overdue payments was delayed in the House after several members moved to exempt their counties from its impact.

The bill, first introduced by Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, to help Chowan Hospital, was killed in committee after it grew to a statewide bill. It re-emerged Wednesday on the House floor in its original form, but lawmakers rushed to add 14 more hospitals to it.

Under House rules, once a public bill is defeated it may not be taken up again. A local bill becomes public when it involves 15 or more counties.

After the bill was amended Thursday to include 15 hospitals in less than 15 counties, Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, asked to have his county's facility removed. Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, then objected to the inclusion of a hospital in Henderson County, saying it might garnish the wages of his constituents.

Lawmakers with similar concerns removed Bladen, Pender, Sampson, Orange, Durham and Chatham counties from the areas that could be subjected to garnishment. Nesbitt was in the process of removing Buncombe, Transylvania, Haywood, Jackson, Madison, Swain, Alamance, Rockingham, Brunswick and Washington counties when Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, moved to recalendar the bill for Tuesday.

Accident Reports

The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill that raises from $200 to $500 damages due to automobile crashes that must be reported to the state.

Compromise Clears A Hurdle In Workers Compensation Coverage

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state House committee has approved a compromise for expanding the number of injuries covered by workers' compensation but the bill may go to another committee before it reaches a House vote.

The House Manufacturing and Labor Committee voted Thursday to approve the bill. Committee chairman Rep. Tom Rabon, D-Brunswick, said he didn't think the bill would have a significant impact on the size of claims paid by the state. But budget leader Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said "it might be well" to refer it to the Appropriations Committee before House members get a chance to vote on it.

The compromise was worked out by Frank Huskins, a former state Supreme Court justice and Industrial Commission member, at the request of industry.

For at least three years, labor representatives have tried to expand the existing law as interpreted by the courts. Many industry representatives have resisted any change while others have tried to limit the number of new kinds of injuries included in possible changes to the law.

The courts have ruled that workers may be compensated for injuries sustained when they slipped, tripped or fell at work. They said workers cannot be compensated for injuries sustained during the normal performance of their job.

Rep. William Clark, D-Cumberland, introduced the original bill which would have compensated injuries from any job-related accident.

The proposed compromise would allow compensation for back injuries from any job-related accident while limiting compensation for other kinds of injuries to those sustained when the worker slipped, tripped or fell.

Rep. Marvin Musselwhite, D-Wake, said the compromise would help compensate 95 percent of the workers who have been barred unjustly from compensation under the current law.

"The substitute does not solve all the problems or concerns on the employee side of the question nor does it resolve all the concerns of industry," Musselwhite said.

Some of the committee members, including Adams, sought assurances that the Senate would approve of the bill and that industry would support the proposal.
