Critical Report Card On U.S. Education

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he interprets a scathing report on American education as a mandate to dismantle the Department of Education, help parents send their children to private schools and restore prayer to public schools.

Educators generally welcomed the critical report card by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which was released Tuesday. But they said it will cost billions of dollars to carry out the reforms and rid the nation's schools of lax standards and mediocrity.

Reagan said the report demonstrated that "our educational system is in the grip of a crisis caused by low standards, lack of purpose, ineffective use of resources and a failure to challenge students... to strive for excellence."

"We're still the world's technological leader, but to be stronger, we have to get smarter," the president declared at a White House meeting with Education Secretary T.H. Bell, commission members, leaders of education committees in Congress and 100 educators.

The 18-member commission called for tougher standards, longer school days and higher pay for teachers to combat the "rising tide of mediocrity."

It urged high schools to emphasize five "new basics": four years of English, three years each of math, science and social studies, a half-year of computer science and, for the college-bound, two years of foreign language.

Reagan said the long slide in academic standards began in the mid-1960s at the same time the federal government began funneling aid to schools and intruding into their affairs.

"I believe that parents, not government, have the primary responsibility for the education of their children..." he said. "We'll continue to work in the months ahead for passage of tuition tax credits, vouchers, educational savings accounts. (Please turn to Page 6)

Reagan Turning Up Heat Tonight

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a move that an adversary says "has turned up the heat" in the debate over Central America, is asking a restive Congress to help combat communist advances in the war-plagued region.

Using a tactic reserved for rare occasions, Reagan speaks to a joint session of the House and Senate tonight on his administration's policies regarding the leftists in power in Nicaragua and those seeking power in El Salvador.

On both fronts, Congress is showing reluctance to give him what he is asking for.

The House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations cut his request for a $60 million diversion of military aid to the beleaguered Salvadoran regime in half Tuesday, voting by only a 7-5 margin to approve even that much.

But in an interview with Gannett News Service published today, Reagan said he would push for restoration of the full $60 million. "The cup's half full. We need the full cup. We will go back for more," he said.

In New York today, Reagan made a pitch for his Central American program in a speech before the 97th convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

"We are not accustomed to worrying about a military threat in our own hemisphere," Reagan said. "We have almost taken for granted friendly, independent neighbors."

"But we can no longer ignore the fire that is burning in our own front yard. We must respond both with unity and firmness of purpose. The peoples of this hemisphere are all Americans, and all of us share a vital stake in a future of democracy and freedom," he said.

Meanwhile, Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, proposed to cut off all aid to insurgents fighting the leftist government in Nicaragua after 45 days.

And Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., emerging from a closed Senate session that he requested, said he found a "very, very high" level of concern about what he charges is illegal administration support for the Nicaraguan guerrillas.

"Clearly the president has turned up the heat," Dodd said. "This is a rare use of the joint session of Congress. It has only been used, I think, nine times in the last 25 years, normally to announce some good news."

In the Gannett interview which was conducted Tuesday, Reagan said he intends to make it "difficult, in fact, impossible" for Nicaragua to arm guerrilla movements in El Salvador and the region.

Academic Coaches

By SUSANA HAYWARD
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Borrowing an idea from the football field, a suburban school district is turning this autumn to "academic coaches" — about 128 faculty members who will work more days and teach more hours while earning more money.

The program by the Garland School District, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation, was approved by the school board on Feb. 17. School officials said it is intended to improve education and recruit better teachers — particularly in the math and science fields.

On Tuesday, National Commission on Excellence in Education issued a scathing report on a "rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools. The report said the United States needs tougher educational standards, more homework and a longer school day and school year.

It also recommended 11-month contracts and higher pay for teachers, saying they earn an average of only $17,000 after 12 years.

In Garland, academic coaches will still teach regular classes but will have additional duties, said Jill Shugart, assistant superintendent for educational operations in the suburban district east of Dallas.

"If the teacher is a fourth-grade teacher, he or she will still teach the class, but would also work with students before and after class, including summer school and developing curriculum activties," Mrs. Shugart said Tuesday.

The name "academic coaches" came up because "we should give the same high priorities to academics as we do to athletics," Mrs. Shugart said.

She said the added pay could raise teachers' salaries up to $5,000 a year, depending on experience, putting them on the scale of "what an assistant varsity football coach makes."

With a $1,500 bonus, a teacher with master's degree could earn about $38,000 a year, Mrs. Shugart said.

Garland's program would extend a teacher's 183-day contract to between 202 and 220 days a year, including summer school.

FIRE ACCELERANT, NOT EXTINGUISHER

Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner has asked Hotline to pass on information about a potentially dangerous device being sold as a fire extinguisher which actually contains highly flammable accelerants. Approximately 3,600 white aerosol cans labeled in red "Federal Protection Service" and bearing an eagle symbol were marketed in Suffolk County, N.Y. It is indicated falsely on the label that the product is listed with the U.S. Coast Guard and approved by Underwriters Laboratories, Joyner said.

About 2,100 cans have been recovered by the Suffolk County District Attorney's office, leaving about 1,500 unaccounted for.

The product is reported to contain chlorinated hydrocarbons and to act as an accelerant on some fires. It is also believed to conduct electricity and may, upon exposure to heat, release phosgene, a nerve gas. Anyone finding a can of this product is asked to contact the Fire Marshal's office, 119 S. Fourteen East Carolina University students face criminal charges and one man has been convicted of criminal charges stemming from alleged hazing incidents on or about Feb. 20 which led to the suspension of Omega Psi Phi fraternity at ECU.

Jim Mallory, ECU's associate dean for student life, said today the actions involving the fraternity and the students resulted from an investigation by his office and the campus security office into complaints by Tony Michael Jones, a 20-year-old freshman fraternity pledge.

Jones told investigators that several hazing-type incidents occurred during his induction into Omega Psi Phi. The incident that resulted in criminal charges is reported to have occurred at a Greenville apartment complex Feb. 20 when Jones said, fraternity members jostled Jones and other pledges in a stairwell. He said he suffered head, neck and back injuries that required medical treatment, including overnight hospitalization. He has incurred large medical bills, Jones said.

Mallory said he was alerted by the Student Health Services the night of the incident. The following morning, Feb. 21, he sent a telegram to Omega Psi Phi headquarters in Washington, D.C., stating that the university was suspending the fraternity because of reports of hazing. That same day he said he hand-delivered a letter to the same effect to William Davis, ECU Omega Psi Phi president. Suspension means, he said, that the group is enjoined not to use any property or personnel of the university nor hold any official gatherings as a fraternity.

A letter from the district representative of the fraternity dated March 16 stated the national fraternity concurred with the university's decision to suspend the local chapter.

Mallory said Michael H. Swan was charged March 17 with hazing and Carl Purcell Jr. and Gregory T. Benson were charged with hazing and assault inflicting serious injury. Charged March 21, Mallory said, with hazing and assault inflicting serious injury were Danny R. Alston, Clinton A. Crawley, Ronald L. Eley, Donald G. Gatling, Alvin B. Jolly, Reginald L. McNeill and James V. Peele. On March 30 Wayne P. Smith, a non-ECU student, was charged with hazing and assault, Mallory said, and on April 5 Kenneth M. Coleman was charged with hazing and assault inflicting serious injury.

Three others — Richard L. Barfield, Reginald L. Holliday and Norwood J. Vann — were arrested Sunday and charged with intimidating a witness after they allegedly threatened Jones on Saturday, the ECU official said. Holliday and Vann also were charged with simple assault.

Wayne P. Smith, whose original trial was set for April 5, was convicted of assaulting Jones but was

Lost In The Woods And Learns He Has Friends

By CAROL TYER

Marshall Buck got lost in the woods and found out how many friends he has.

Friday morning about 9 a.m., Buck, 86, heard a power saw in the woods behind the house in the Hudson's Crossroads community that he has occupied for the past 60 years. He drove his car to an entrance to the 1,500-acre tract of woods he'd traversed many times before and went in to investigate. Soon he was "turned around."

His son, Tommy, started looking for him about 10 a.m. and enlisted his grandson, Ricky, to help an hour or so later. About 1 p.m. they called the Pitt County Sheriff Department.

The scarier communication that went out at that time brought friends and neighbors running. "There were literally hundreds of people here searching, bringing food, offering to help in any way they could," Buck's daughter-in-law, Martha, said. "Everyone who rode by must've stopped and pitched in."

The search was directed by the sheriff's office and was led by volunteer firemen of Eastern Pines, Simpson and Black Jack. A bloodhound was brought in and search planes were sent for as night neared and Buck had still not been found.

In the meantime, Buck, a heart patient, said he walked and walked and walked. "I'd walk 10 minutes and sit down five to rest," he said. "Then I'd walk some more. I was turned around, but I was never really scared. I never had a doubt that I was going to be out of there before night. I've always been one of these kind that's hard to give up on anything. The Lord has answered a lot of my prayers and I knew He

HOME ON THE FRONT PORCH... is a far better place to be than lost in the woods, Marshall Buck says. However, the excursion into the woods near his home Friday wasn't all bad in that the Hudson's Crossroads man realized his own lack of fear and how much he is loved by his friends and neighbors. Wigs Were Status Symbol In 18th Century America

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Wigs in the 18th century were a status symbol and were available in all price ranges. White was the most prestigious color because it was so unavailable.

"Wigs were made from women's hair and their life expectancy was 40-45 years. A man would powder his wig white for special occasions and if he led a social lifestyle, would have a wig made from white angora goat hair," said wig maker Joyce Hedgepeth of Williamsburg, Va.

"The period which influenced the American colonists in the 1700s was during the 1600s when King Louis XIII of France started losing his hair. To preserve his image, he started wearing a wig. King Louis XIV did the same thing. King Charles of England was in exile in France and became accustomed to wearing French fashions and wigs. When he went back on the throne in England, wearing French styles, he was copied by his subjects. In turn, English styles were emulated here," said Mrs. Hedgepeth.

Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, George Wythe and John Randolph had wigs made for them by Edward Charlton, a leading wig maker in Williamsburg. They paid two pounds, three shillings for their brown bob wigs.

"Wearing wigs actually dates back to 3,000 B.C. — the Egyptians wore wigs for ceremonial occasions," she added.

"Hair was styled by using heated curling irons or clay rods with end papers. After wigs or hair was styled and combed out, a perfumed pomade was put on to hold the curl in place. The pomade was prepared from hog lard, beef marrow or bear grease. It was boiled for five hours with apple peel, rose water, oil of almond and mineral water. This was the original hair spray of the 18th century.

"To give a permanent or put a perm in a wig, the hair was rolled on clay rods using end papers and then wrapped in cheese cloth. The wig was taken to the bakery and placed in a loaf of uncooked rye dough (rye was cheaper than white flour) and baked for two hours. When the bread was done, so was the hair," said Mrs. Hedgepeth.

Both men and women wore wigs. "They could buy hair pieces, curls and braids (called queues) to add variety to styles. Men that had wigs, had several," she continued.

It takes approximately 200 hours to make a wig and approximately seven ounces of hair. "The wigs and hairpieces, curls and queues we make today are worn by the Colonial Williamsburg Company of Colonial Performers, theatrical department of the foundation. Also some of the wigs we make and maintain today are on display in bed chambers of our exhibition buildings," she added.

Mrs. Hedgepeth has worked with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation in the crafts program for nine years. Prior to making wigs she worked in the millinery shop, trimming straw hats in 18th century style with ribbons and flowers.

In the shop, the women also copy original articles of clothing. Mrs. Hedgepeth has made aprons, stomachers, mob caps, 18th century shifts (under garments worn by women) and negligee caps, which were worn by men when they weren't wearing their wigs. "Their heads were shaved in order that their wigs fitted properly," she stated.

"With certain guidelines, we were allowed to create any design using yards and yards of silk and velvet ribbons and silk flowers. Seeing a customer with a creation really brought it alive. We designed hats for weddings, special events or for interested customers," she said.

Mrs. Hedgepeth demonstrated wig-making during Williamsburg days Monday and Tuesday at Belk Tyler's in Carolina East Mall.

During hot weather, be especially careful not to leave children, pets and the elderly in a parked car with the door closed. Family Circle magazine says heat in a car parked in the sun can build up to dangerously high levels.

Child Guidance Techniques

Dr. Thelma Feaster, human development specialist with the Agricultural Extension Service, recently spoke with a group of parents and day-care personnel about child discipline. She defined discipline as a learning experience for the purpose of teaching a child to behave in an acceptable manner, helping the child to get along with others, and helping the child develop self control.

Dr. Feaster stressed that discipline is NOT physical or verbal punishment, policing or verbal punishment, policing every move of the child, or demanding absolute obedience.

The most common reasons for misbehavior is that parents expect too much, children are defending their identity, and the child may just be doing things that are natural at that stage of development. Other reasons, according to Dr. Feaster, include feelings of rejection or of being unloved, being scared, bored, frustrated, curious, wanting to be independent, not feeling well, lack of knowledge or experience, lack of self confidence, and the need for attention.

A variety of techniques are recommended for prevention of discipline problems. One suggestion is simply to change the setting—remove the child from the source of the problem; child-proof the home. Make rules for a reason then be consistent but exercise flexibility when a special situation arises. Be sure to explain why the rules were adjusted. Use do's instead of don'ts. Don'ts are demanding and tend to bring on rebellion. Set a good example for your child. Let the child make decisions and choices whenever possible—do not give a choice unless you can live with the decision. By all means, work toward building feelings of confidence in the child.

When responding to misbehavior treat your child as though he were someone else's child! Be firm and use a business-like voice—not yelling and screaming. Don't let the situation get out of hand. Dr. Feaster recommends diverting the child's attention when discussing the situation when everyone is calmed down. She also suggests taking time out—separate the child from the situation for five minutes.

For more child guidance techniques, call the Extension Office at 752-2934 and request the booklet "Child Guidance Techniques." There is no charge.

Dear Abby

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for the letter signed "Hearing Things in Illinois," from the elderly couple who described a high-pitched, humming, ringing, buzzing-type noise that seemed to come from inside their heads. They said they heard it constantly but were ashamed to mention it to their doctor for fear they'd be told they were "going crazy."

As a result of that column, all day I've been hearing from people saying they have had that problem for years but were also reluctant to mention it.

You explained that they probably had a condition called "tinnitus," from which literally millions of people suffer.

In addition to the many causes you listed, the use of aspirin — yes, plain old ordinary aspirin — should be listed. It's especially important because so many older patients take large doses of aspirin to ease the pain of arthritis. This information will not stop the ringing in their ears, but it may comfort them to know that they're not imagining things or going crazy.

It also helps people to know that they're not the only ones afflicted with this annoying problem. And it sure makes my job a lot easier.

PHARMACIST IN IOWA CITY

DEAR PHARMACIST: Many physicians wrote to suggest that I mention aspirin as a possible cause for tinnitus. This may give the manufacturers of aspirin an Excedrin headache, but I feel an obligation to pass the information along to my readers.

I also heard from many in the dental profession informing me that "buzzing in the head" is sometimes caused by ill-fitting dentures, tooth grinding or malocclusion (abnormality in the "bite"). Dentists who focus on the treatment of TMJ (temporomandibular joint) have also offered some relief from tinnitus.

Readers: Now, also is heard an encouraging word:

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Hearing Things in Illinois" and the millions of others suffering from tinnitus about the American Tinnitus Association. It supports tinnitus research and provides information and referrals to health care providers who can help some sufferers. Referrals can also be made to one of the many tinnitus self-help groups that have sprung up all over the United States and Canada.

Research into the possible causes and cures for tinnitus is being carried out at several universities in this country and abroad. Patients should, however, be wary of those who make extravagant claims because at present there is no universal "cure" for tinnitus.

Patient should feel free to make further inquiry by writing to the American Tinnitus Association, P.O. Box 5, Portland, Ore. 97207.

This is a non-profit organization, so please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

POTATO BREAD WITH CARAWAY SEED

- 1 package dry yeast
- 1 1/4 cups warm water (105 - 115 degrees)
- 4 1/2 cups (about) all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon salt

3/4 teaspoon caraway seed
1/2 cup firmly packed mashed potato, at room temperature

In a large bowl, dissolve yeast in 1/2 cup of the warm water; stir in 3 tablespoons of the flour. Cover and let rise for 30 minutes.

Stir in remaining 3/4 cup warm water, salt and caraway seed. Gradually stir in the mashed potato and enough (about 4 cups) of the remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on a lightly floured board; knead (using more flour if necessary) until very elastic — about 10 minutes. Place dough in a lightly greased bowl; turn to grease top. doubled — 1 1/2 to 2 hours. Punch down dough and knead until elastic — about 4 minutes; shape into a ball. Place in a greased 9-inch ovenproof skillet and flatten to fit. Let rise until doubled — 30 to 35 minutes. Brush loaf with water; with a knife make a 1/4-inch deep cut in the center in the form of a cross. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven on the rack below center until golden and a cake tester

A Dedicated Lot

Public school teachers are fed up with low pay, low prestige and unsatisfactory working conditions. Right?

There are few teachers who would not welcome the opportunity to chuck the whole profession and move into the world of business or industry. True?

Maybe not. East Carolina University recently offered a workshop titled "Alternative Careers for Teachers." The workshop was designed to examine career options for teachers and it was to be conducted by a former educator who switched to the field of industry.

Were the doors to the ECU Continuing Education Division broken down by hoards of teachers anxious to change careers? No, sir. The seminar was canceled for lack of interest.

It would be nice to think that all the problems that are customarily cited for teacher dissatisfaction do not exist and that all teachers are very happy in their work. We know, however, that is not true. Too many teachers have expressed their concern for low pay, poor working conditions and lack of prestige.

Rather, we would like to interpret the cancelation as an indication that, even though teachers are not happy with their lot, they are truly dedicated to what they are doing. We would like to feel they are willing to work through the bad parts of teaching in hopes of changes in conditions and incomes.

It takes considerable training and dedication to become a teacher and the efforts of teachers should be appreciated by the public. Certainly, we are happy to see no mass exodus from teaching is contemplated.

Year Of Excitement

As a nation we look to July 4, 1776, as our birthdate. Thus, the nation will be 207 years old this year.

At Manteo on the North Carolina coast a birth date will be celebrated which stretches back much longer than the founding of the United States. In 1984 Manteo will begin a three-year celebration of the first English settlement of North America. It will be the 400th anniversary of the settlement of the famed Lost Colony, whose coming to the area is well documented but whose fate is unknown.

That attempt failed but it set the pattern for the settlement of Jamestown and other colonies and greatly shaped our future as a nation.

It is an exciting time for Manteo and the state and major changes are being made on the island for the celebration.

New Look For Guard

ABERDEEN, MD. — The U.S. Army's new M-1 tank is probably one of the world's most lethal non-nuclear weapons. It packs a computer-guided rapid fire 105 mm gun, three machine guns and a grenade launcher.

Although it weighs 60 tons, it can race cross country at 35 miles per hour, bobbing and weaving on a battlefield with the maneuverability of a prize fighter, hurdling mounds and gullies just like those Dodge trucks on the TV commercials. And, it is practically indestructible. The Army says the tank has suffered direct hits from artillery — even explosions in the ammunition compartments — without the crew quarters being damaged.

So why on earth is the Army shipping 63 of these $1.8 million tanks, plus its most advanced Cobra and Blackhawk helicopters and something called the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, to the N.C. National Guard? What good will this equipment do our "Weekend Warriors," those civilian-soldiers who help keep the roads open during trucker strikes and who rush emergency aid to disaster areas?

"That's a good question," says Col. Joe

Parker, publisher of eight community papers in North Carolina and, part-time, a public information officer for the N.C. National Guard. "You can't just think of the guard as a police unit anymore. It's much more."

"This emphasizes the role the N.C. National Guard will play in the defense of our country," says Gen. Emmett Walker, the nation's top National Guard officer, who met with North Carolina reporters during a special demonstration of the M-1 tank at the Aberdeen Testing Grounds in Maryland. "The guard is now a full partner in that mission."

A decade ago, the Nixon administration decided to scale down the size of the Army, Walker explained. At the same time, the Army Reserve and the National Guard were to be beefed up as a way of assuring we'd have enough trained and equipped men in case of war. But, in the intervening decade, the equipment to make the National Guard a viable reserve unit was not provided. It is only now, with the arrival of equipment like the M-1, Walker said, that the guard is being equipped to fulfill this reserve role.

The tanks are going to Fort Bragg where they'll be assigned to a guard battalion based in Raeford. That battalion "rounds out" to the Second Armored Division based at Fort Hood, Texas. That means the battalion becomes part of the Second Armored in times of national emergency.

Gen. William Ingram, NCNG commander, sees deployment of the tanks in one of his units as the fulfillment of the Army's commitment to Nixon's changes. "There's more reliance being placed on the guard and the reserves by the regular Army because of its size (780,000 men). The Army can't continue to do everything assigned to it without the help of the National Guard and the reserves," Ingram said.

It logically follows, then, that if the guard is to be asked to go into combat for the first time since World War II that the Army equip it with its best weapons, Ingram said. The Army obviously agreed with that reasoning. It sent the M-1 tanks to the NCNG before sending them to some regular Army units.

This summer, the 500-plus men of the NCNG battalion will take three-week rotating shifts learning how to fight with the tanks. Ingram hopes that the entire battalion will be combat proficient by fall. Then, the tanks will be used in weekend training. If the day should ever come when the unit is called into combat, the tanks will be loaded onto the CSA transport planes, or ships, and sent to the front along with the local guard unit.

As Parker said, the guard is more than just a police force.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decision to address a joint session of Congress tonight on Central America reflects his view that disaster could lie ahead unless he confronts his opponents on the issue more aggressively.

Reagan believes his arguments in support of his position thus far have been unconvincing, and that history will treat him unkindly if he makes less than an all-out effort in defense of his policies.

The president senses that the stakes are too high in Central America to permit continued erosion of public support for his policies. Only a dramatic gesture, he feels, such as a prime-time, nationally televised appearance before a rare joint session of Congress can turn public opinion around.

He has delivered two speeches recently on the subject and his aides have testified on dozens of occasions to various congressional committees, but the skepticism about his position remains rampant.

To administration officials, it is something of a mystery that there should be so much congressional opposition to Reagan's relatively modest military aid requests for El Salvador.

The $110 million he is seeking represents only one-thirtieth of the amount the United States was spending at the height of its involvement in the Indochina war. For each of the 50 or so U.S. military trainers now in neighboring El Salvador, there were 10,000 Americans stationed in faraway Vietnam 15 years ago.

Yet, congressional opposition remains fierce despite Reagan's repeated admonitions that leftist revolution could spread throughout Central America and possibly into Mexico unless it is stopped in El Salvador.

At the heart of the congressional misgivings is the suspicion that, as in Vietnam, the United States is involving itself in a conflict it cannot win.

What began as a $5 million military aid program in January 1981 has expanded geometrically since then. Despite this increase, there is a widespread belief that guerrilla strength has been steadily enhanced.

In addition, support for Reagan's policies has been diluted by the perception of many in Congress that the administration, in defiance of legal constraints, is secretly attempting to topple the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

Many say the administration's policies are radicalizing the Nicaraguan revolution and the guerrilla insurgency in El Salvador as well. Only negotiations will produce peace and moderation, they contend.

With these sentiments so widespread, it is apparent that Reagan's message has fallen on deaf ears. In addition to a region-wide Marxist upheaval, he believes abandonment of his policies will lead to unprecedented refugee flows and a vast increase in U.S. military spending for the Caribbean Basin area — at the expense of American commitments elsewhere.

As officials have said repeatedly, allied countries such as Israel and South Korea will wonder about the credibility of American defense commitments if the United States is unwilling to protect its security interests close to home.

The discovery that Libyan planes detained in Brazil were carrying tons of explosives earmarked for Nicaragua reinforces the administration's view that Soviet bloc supporters are responsible for much of the violence in Central America.

In private, administration officials are contemptuous of congressional liberals who believe American interests can be protected through a negotiated settlement.

They believe the stated support of the Salvadoran guerrillas for negotiations is a tactical maneuver aimed at ending U.S. military aid for the Salvadoran government. Once that goal has been achieved, the administration contends, the guerrillas will move quickly to achieve final victory.

There are broad differences between the Indochina and El Salvador conflicts but there are some parallels as well.

To Reagan's critics, the huge cost of U.S. involvement in Vietnam is a lesson which can be applied to El Salvador. To Reagan, the lesson of Vietnam is that if a negotiated settlement in El Salvador brings the same result as the one in Vietnam, the United States for the first time could face a major security threat close to home.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I take exception to your editorial of April 21 regarding the action taken by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce in support of Charter Medical. To the best of my knowledge, this was one of the few organizations that took the time to clearly study the issue and to evaluate objectively and without emotion, the pros and cons of having a private enterprise hospital located in our community. Just because the Health Systems Agency has given its opinion on the subject doesn't mean that organizations like the chamber of commerce should not express theirs.

I disagree strongly with your position that the chamber would have been wise to let the matter drop. It's about time that the public has the opportunity to hear the facts rather than have the fate of 60-80 new jobs as well as new construction of millions of dollars decided by groups behind closed doors and without input from the community.

To the editor:

Recently two of my ECU students were charged approximately $28 by The Daily Reflector because they wanted a picture of both of them rather than a picture of the bride-to-be only printed in your paper. The caption "paid announcement" appeared under the picture.

Several things about this policy deserve your consideration. Adding this caption seems to be adding insult to injury. It also lends an unsavory note to the picture. When I visit in California and Washington every summer, I note that it is customary for those papers to print pictures of both bride and groom in both engagement and wedding pictures. I am sure there are many papers throughout the country where this is the practice.

An engagement and wedding involves two people. Many readers know only one of the couple and would appreciate seeing a picture of the other. In this time of equality of opportunity regardless of sex it seems to be an archaic practice for a newspaper to discriminate against those couples desiring to run a picture of both of them.

Isn't it time for The Daily Reflector to examine its traditional policy and allow a couple the option of whether to run a picture of one or both without paying extra for the choice? (I wonder what it would cost to run a picture of the groom only?)

Strength For Today

The doctrine of the deity of Christ is basic to Christian thought and life. We often hear people say that they believe Jesus to be the greatest man that ever lived, the wisest teacher — in fact, the only person of perfect character ever to have walked the earth.

Yet these people cannot accept him as a divine being equal with the heavenly Father in power and glory.

The New Testament does not present Jesus just as a great man and teacher, but as the only begotten Son of God, the divinely promised Messiah, the Savior of mankind from the eternal catastrophe of unforgiven sin. No mere man can forgive sins. Only God can do that, which means that Jesus was the incarnation of God himself.

A denial of the deity of Jesus Christ is much more than the denial of one doctrine — it is the denial of Christ himself and of the solemn statements he made about himself and his work.

Partiality To The Winds

There was lots of nostalgia about the Falkland Islands war a few weeks ago. The British celebrated, the Argentines mourned, and we were all treated to a tour of the battleground by the TV networks.

What wasn't mentioned was that as soon as hostilities ceased, the world's arms merchants descended on Argentina to replenish the loser's arsenal.

The French arrived first and said to the Argentine military, "We're sorry you didn't do as well as you expected, but the good news is that we can sell you our Exocet Missile again."

"Where were you when we needed you?" An Argentine general wanted to know.

"We couldn't ship you the missiles while the war was going on because we didn't want to upset Margaret Thatcher. But now that things have quieted down, we can sell you anything you want. Since you demonstrated to other countries how accurate our Exocet is, we'll give you a free one for every dozen you buy. But you better act fast because we have a lot of countries in line for the missiles."

The Argentines put in their order immediately.

As soon as the French left, the West Germans walked in. "We told you you couldn't win a war against the British if you didn't have enough sea power. If the fight for the Malvinas proved anything, it's that your country needs a strong, modernized Navy. West Germany is prepared to build Argentina the most modern ships on the high seas, including first-rate attack submarine. You'll never be humiliated by England again."

The Argentine military chief of staff said, "I thought West Germany and Great Britain were both members of NATO."

"NATO is NATO," the Western Germans told him. "Business is business. Give us a billion dollars and we'll turn over four ships to you tomorrow."

The Argentines signed the order, and mortgaged their grain crop for five years.

Next came the Israelis, the Belgians and other Western arms salesmen. No one left without an order.

Needless to say, the Pentagon was upset when they heard about the arms sales. It had nothing to do with the fact that Argentina was getting back into shape to take on the Brits again. It was that President Carter had imposed a military embargo on Argentina because of its human rights abuses, and U.S. weapons exporters were left out in the cold.

The Pentagon dealers complained to the White House. "We're losing our best South American market to the French and West Germans. The Argentines are committed to becoming a first-class military power, and need our stuff to do it. If we don't give them a waiver on human rights, we'll have to close down our Buenos Aires store. Worse still, the Soviets might offer to supply them with the hi-tech equipment just so they can give the British a bloody nose."

President Reagan, when informed that U.S. military equipment wasn't selling in Argentina, started pushing Congress to lift the embargo immediately, and promised he would deal with the human rights problem later.

In the meantime, private arms dealers in Virginia assured the Argentines they could order any U.S. equipment they wanted through third countries, who would rather have the cash.

The Argentines, according to reports, are now in hock up to their ears, but will soon be militarily stronger than they have ever been before. They are the first to admit they couldn't do it alone.

While most of the countries supplying Argentina with new weapons are Great Britain's closest allies, they haven't put any conditions on their sales. When you're a major arms-producing country, it's much more profitable not to take sides.

A Turn Of (Tax) Events

making. Even steadfast aides now are admitting the president has no tax clothes.

Until last week, the White House-OMB line pooh-poohed tax increase prospects; presidential aides who confessed a hankering for higher taxes declared that Reagan had drawn a hard line. Suspicion that this was an elaborate cover (beyond the president's ken) was confirmed April 18 when Stockman launched his annual budget offensive.

A 29-page OMB "Budget Outlook" distributed to the Cabinet by Stockman (and immediately leaked to the press) depicted a breakdown in the congressional budget process this year producing the Apocalypse: "Economic recovery would be eventually aborted — possibly within (the) next two years." The enemy, as sighted by Stockman consists not only of free-spending liberal Democrats but what the OMB paper calls the Senate's "anti-tax GOP-conservative faction."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger interjected that the congressional budget process was so stacked against Reagan it might be better for it to self-destruct. Stockman retorted that Weinberger's argument was "ludicrous." Two indisputably non-Reaganite Cabinet members never known as crusaders against spending, Education Secretary Terrel Bell and Health Secretary Margaret Heckler, weighed in supporting Stockman.

The brief debate ended without comment from the president. "I think this may be the real battle for Ronald Reagan's soul," one aide told us. But that melodramatic assessment overstates the president's involvement. While his basic economic program crumbled the last two weeks, he busied himself with an exercise in trivia: a hopeless and politically humiliating salvage operation for interest and dividend tax withholding.

On the day after Stockman turned down the Senate's no-tax-increase offer, the president engaged in an orgy of antitax rhetoric with his panel of outside economic advisers. He agreed with monetarist Milton Friedman and supply-sider Arthur Laffer that this would be the worst time even to talk about tax increases, a view shared at that season by the often austerity-minded Alan Greenspan. Nor did the president object when Friedman avowed — contradicting Stockman — that there are worse things than big budget deficits, and huge tax increases are among them.

No word of the impending Reaganite disaster in the Senate was mentioned. Nor, improbably, did it come up in a 90-minute Cabinet meeting shortly before Domenici bought the $30 billion tax increase.

What's more, neither the president nor his aides have joined efforts by two Reaganite budget committee members, Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas and Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to evolve a balanced budget by fiscal year 1989 without tax increases. "I would say the administration has been an impediment to us," one participant in that effort told us.

Presumably, Ronald Reagan would exult in what Gramm, Hatch and the Chamber are attempting.

Tobacco Companies Are Trying To Kick The Habit

By NICHOLAS RAVO
Richmond News Leader
RICHMOND (AP) — Slowly and quietly, America's tobacco companies have been trying to kick the cigarette habit.

Faced with a projected decline in domestic cigarette sales, the nation's six major tobacco companies have spent the past two decades getting involved in everything from golf balls and chocolate chip cookies to movies and oil exploration.

If the diversification trend continues, the South's mighty tobacco industry someday might become better known for selling light beer, canned tomatoes and high-quality tequila than for producing Marlboros, Winstons and Virginia Slims.

"We started off as a tobacco company," said Robert Pittman, vice president of the BATUS Group, the conglomerate that owns Brown & Williamson

Tobacco Corp.'s plant in Petersburg. "But now we want companies that are growing, and there has been a limited amount of growth in the tobacco industry."

Less than half of BATUS' revenue last year came from the sale of cigarettes. The balance came from subsidiaries such as the Saks Fifth Avenue, Marshall Field and Gimbel's department stores.

The high level of product diversification at BATUS is typical.

At Philip Morris Inc., a New York-based company that operates a research center and cigarette manufacturing plants in Richmond, one-third of the parent company's sales last year came from Miller Brewing Co., Seven-Up Co. and Mission Viejo Co. planned communities in California and Colorado.

At American Brands Inc., the parent company for American Tobacco Co. in Richmond, 36 percent of the company's revenue came from such products as life insurance, Jergens Lotion and Jim Beam Kentucky bourbon.

At R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. of Winston-Salem, N.C., the country's largest cigarette manufacturer, more than half of its revenue this year is expected to come from such corporate acquisitions as Del Monte Corp., Kentucky Fried Chicken and Heublein Inc., the liquor distributor.

"Our overall plan is to become a consumer products company," said David Fishel, an R.J. Reynolds official. "Go into any grocery store and you'll see that we are one of the largest suppliers to grocery stores in the country. We have over 200 individual products."

In 1964, when the first Surgeon General's report on the hazards of smoking came out, nearly 100 percent of the tobacco companies' sales and revenues were based on cigarette sales. But since then:

—At R.J. Reynolds, the maker of Salem, Winston and Camel cigarettes, only about 50 percent of last year's revenue came from tobacco. That figure is projected to drop to 48 percent this year.

—At New York-based American Brands, sales of cigarettes like Lucky Strike, Carlton and Pall Mall accounted for 64 percent of the company's overall sales in 1981.

—Lorillard, the maker of True, Newport and Kent cigarettes, has been owned since 1968 by Loews Corp., a movie theater chain that also owns Bulova Inc., the watchmaker, and CNA Financial Corp. Loews also owns some hotels. Last year, tobacco products accounted for 24.7 percent of the parent company's $1.2 billion in total sales.

—Liggett & Myers Tobacco Inc., of Durham, N.C., maker of L&M, Lark and other cigarettes, is owned by Grand Metropolitan Plc., an international conglomerate based in London. Fourteen percent of the parent company's sales last year came from cigarettes. The balance was derived from a variety of industries, including an international hotel chain, a sporting goods company, and the pet food company that makes Alpo dog food.

—At Philip Morris, the second-largest cigarette producer in the country and the No. 1 American exporter of cigarettes, 66.6 percent of its $11.7 billion in sales last year came from tobacco products.

—At Brown & Williamson, 47 percent of the BATUS Group's $1.9 billion in revenue in 1981 came from the sale of cigarettes.

Overall cigarette output, export and consumption all declined in 1982. Production dropped 5 percent while domestic consumption dropped 1.1 percent.

According to cigarette tax receipts, overall unit sales dropped about 1 percent. Cigarette consumption is projected to decline 3 percent to 10 percent in 1983.

Industry analysts say the decreasing plateau of growth stems from a 24.7 percent increase in the wholesale price, boosts in state and federal cigarette taxes and a drop in the sales of low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes, which today make up 61 percent of the overall cigarette market.

Still, the companies are not giving up entirely on tobacco.

"We have said consistently that we believe in the future of the cigarette industry," said Frank Saunders, a Philip Morris official. "We have solid confidence in the industry. There may not be growth rates, but there's a bigger market worldwide."

That worldwide market may be the long-term salvation for U.S. cigarette manufacturers. Philip Morris currently holds 10 percent of the foreign market, and R.J. Reynolds recently stepped up its marketing of Camel cigarettes in the Far East, the Caribbean and selected Latin American countries.

But as BATUS Group's Pittman remarked when asked about the future of the cigarette industry: "We see a lot of growth in areas other than tobacco."

"Once You Achieve..."

Amid rumors that he may become a presidential candidate in 1984, Reverend Jesse Jackson is continuing his campaign to register black voters and urging blacks to demand "justice, jobs, and peace." In the 1960s, Reverend Jackson was an aide to Martin Luther King, Jr., but, in 1971, he started his own civil rights organization—Operation PUSH—in Chicago. Jackson has worked to gain economic power for blacks by demanding affirmative action programs in business and by urging young blacks to stay in school. He has said: "The burden of being black is that you have to be superior just to be equal. But the glory of it is that, once you achieve, you have achieved indeed."

DO YOU KNOW—What does "PUSH" stand for?

being dissatisfied with school programs, it is a matter of doing more," said Mrs. Shugart. "As a matter of fact, our trend has been for test scores to be up, not down, in comparison to other districts."

The Garland district's 30,000 students are 82 percent white, 7.5 percent black and 7.5 percent Hispanic. It has a $70 million annual budget and the academic coaching program will increase costs by $400,000 to $500,000 a year, Mrs. Shugart said.

The plan was conceived by district superintendent Eli Douglas, a former social studies teacher.

"What he wants to do is promote educational excellence — broad-enough based to extend not only to the average student, but also to the brightest and remedial students. We want to address the needs of as many people as possible," she said.

Douglas said Tuesday that he hoped to recruit about 25 percent of the new teachers from "outstanding young graduates," with the rest hired from the district's 46 schools.

In January, U.S. Education Secretary T.H. Bell suggested a pilot program to test the idea of "master teachers" in primary and secondary schools.

The rank of master teacher "should be a much-esteemed and sought-after distinction among teachers," Bell said. "It should provide a step beyond the ranks of beginning teacher and regular teacher and it should command a salary that is commensurate with other salaries that recognize accomplishment that is of great worth to American society."

But the National Education Association, which represents many teachers, was sharply critical, calling the idea a "gimmick approach to a very serious problem."

In Tennessee, Gov. Lamar Alexander suggested in January that a master teacher program be launched in his state.

Under his proposal, new teachers would serve at least three years as apprentices before becoming "senior" or "master" teachers. Se-was going to answer that one."

Buck's pastor, the Rev. Cedric Pierce, his great-nephew, Randy Hudson, and his neighbors, Charles Gaskins, Harold Mills and Phil Page, were in the party which found him. About 5 p.m. Hudson yelled, "Uncle Marshall!" as he had many times before, and Buck answered.

He was wet up to his knees and had many briar scratches and admitted he was very tired, but he told the group he needed no rescue squad, no doctor, not even to be carried back to his son's truck. "Let me rest just a minute and I can walk out," he told them.

"Which looks better — this Pepsi or these people?" Gaskins asked him. "All these faces," Buck answered as he accepted the soft drink. As he emerged from the woods, he "thanked all the searchers from the bottom of my heart," he said.

Buck is a retired tobacco farmer, the widower of Maggie Hudson Buck, whom he married in 1916 and who died in 1959. He lives with his son, Tommy, and daughter-in-law, Martha. Once the father of five, he has "three children left," eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

He is a member of Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church and has been a Mason for 64 years. He no longer drives at night, but his son takes him to the monthly meetings of Grimesland Masonic Lodge No. 473 and of Winterville Redmen Tribe 56.

trict. Masters could earn an average $26,873 for 12 months' work.

voluntary school prayer and abolishing the Department of Education.

"Our agenda is to restore quality to education by increasing competition and by strengthening parental choice and local control," Reagan said.

But Dr. Robert V. Haderlein, a Girard, Kan., dentist who served on the commission and who is past president of the National School Boards Association, said afterwards, "There was no mention of tuition tax credits or the Department of Education in the report, whatsoever The president piggybacked that one on the report."

Willard H. McGuire, president of the 1.6-million member National Education Association, said it would cost "additional billions of dollars, with a big boost from the federal government, to achieve these sweeping objectives."

Paul Salmon, executive director of the American Association of School Administrators in Arlington, Va., said the report "flies in the face of many of the things the Reagan administration has stood for."

Allan W. Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, said, "I don't think tuition tax credits or vouchers will deal with the problem of increasing the quality of people going into teacher education or making it possible for more youngsters to get a quality education."

The Reagan administration has been largely unsuccessful in its efforts to eradicate the three-year-old Education Department, enact tuition tax credits and cut back on federal aid to college students and for teaching disadvantaged and handicapped children. Bell emphasized to reporters that Reagan did not seek major cuts this year.

The report said state and local governments have the primary responsibility for financing and governing schools. But it said, "The federal government has the primary responsibility to identify the national interest in education... (and to) help fund and support efforts to protect and promote that interest."

The federal government in the past decade has been paying about 8 percent of the nation's elementary and secondary school bills. Under the Reagan administration, that share has slipped to about 7 percent.

Glenn T. Seaborg, a Nobel laureate and professor of chemistry at the University of California-Berkeley who served on the commission, said, "I think the main support actually is going to have to come at the local and state level by increasing taxes."

Bell said schools should not look to Washington for more aid, but to their state legislatures and local governments.

He said his department would sponsor forums around the country to disseminate the report and spur debate about its recommendations.

Located New Home For Unappreciative

ST. LOUIS (AP) — An animal rescue center has found a new home for some troublesome guests — two beavers who showed their appreciation at being rescued from an oil spill by chewing up the premises.

The animals — a male and female — were picked up April 3, the day after an oil spill on the Mississippi River. It took three weeks of special treatment at the Wildlife Rescue Center to restore their health.

Volunteers stayed up several nights to blow-dry the beavers' pelts after giving them repeated baths.

"They're nocturnal and we're not," said Suzie Sutton, co-director of the center. "And every day, we had to scrub down the pool because of the oil."

The beavers also were given special food and injections of steroids, antibiotics, and vitamins.

They repaid the kindness by breaking three $50 animal control sticks, chewing steps to a wading pool, and behaving so boisterously that a $100 steel cage had to be built to contain the male.

They were the most difficult and expensive patients the center has ever treated, Ms. Sutton said.

Last weekend, the beavers were sent back to the wild, on private property along the Meramec River in Times Beach, the community tainted with dioxin.

"They'll probably find some tributary off the river," said Thomas M. Clark, a veterinarian at the center. "But even if they're around Times Beach, I don't worry about them making it. These are good strong beavers."

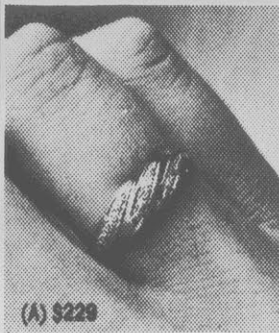

"We were so glad to see them go," Ms. Sutton added.

Sec. Shultz Stresses Security Of Israel

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz declared today that while the United States wants Israeli forces out of Lebanon, the Reagan administration is "committed without qualification to Israel's survival, security and well-being."

In a statement at Ben-Gurion International Airport, Shultz said: "President Reagan has sent me here to work closely with you on new steps toward peace... Our immediate task is bringing peace to Lebanon, restoring Lebanese sovereignty, withdrawing all foreign forces, and ensuring peace and security on Israel's northern border."

Shultz went immediately by motorcade for a meeting with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

A meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, scheduled for later in the day, will be Shultz's first with the Israeli leader.

Shamir welcomed Shultz at the airport on his arrival from Cairo, saying his trip here "demonstrates the American commitment to peace and stability in our region."

Indicating some flexibility in Israel's position on a withdrawal of its 25,000 troops from Lebanon, Shamir predicted Shultz's visit would "contribute to a solution of pending problems in Lebanon."

In his remarks, Shultz said a "number of difficult issues remain" in the negotiations on a troop withdrawal but "so much has already been accomplished in this negotiation that none of us can allow it to fail."

Shultz told reporters during the flight from Cairo — the first stop on his current Middle East tour — that he will meet with Begin twice before going to Lebanon on Thursday where he will confer with President Amin Gemayel on the withdrawal talks.

He made clear his talks with Begin will be important in shaping the direction of his mission here.

"I expect by the time I go to Beirut to have a very clear idea of things that Israel considers important and where the critical elements of the negotiations are as they see it," he said.

He said he thinks there is "a very good chance of getting a troop withdrawal agreement on this trip."

An agreement between Israel and Lebanon for a withdrawal of Israeli troops is "the first thing we are concentrating on," Shultz said. He will then turn his attention to an agreement for withdrawal of Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas.

He told reporters he hopes to go to Syria to meet with President Hafez Assad. The Beirut newspaper Al-Sharq said Assad agreed to meet with Shultz when the secretary goes to Damascus, probably after his visit to Beirut on Thursday.

State Department spokesman John Hughes cautioned that Syria is likely to decide the status of its 38,000-man Lebanon force based on the kind of conditions Israel sets for withdrawing its troops. He said the Palestinians, with an estimated 7,000 fighters in Lebanon, are likely to do whatever the Syrians decide. Lebanon has a population of less than 3 million.

A senior State Department official who asked not to be identified said Begin may be pressured to withdraw by "growing restiveness in Israel over the mounting number of Israeli casualties in Lebanon."

The Israelis invaded Lebanon last summer to drive out Palestinian guerrillas. The Syrians have had troops in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war.

In another development today, Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan left Beirut for hurriedly arranged consultations with King Fahd of Saudi Arabia about Shultz's trip.

The decision to dispatch Wazzan and five senior aides was made during a four-hour conference Gemayel held Tuesday night with chief advisers on the upcoming talks with Shultz.

At the Cairo airport, before flying to Israel, Shultz said his stopover in Egypt gave him with "renewed enthusiasm and greater determination to do everything possible to seek a greater element of peace in the Middle East."

He spoke of the "overriding importance" of "bringing an environment where Lebanon is sovereign territory and free of all forces."

So far the Israelis have insisted that any withdrawal from Lebanon be conditional on letting their Lebanese ally, Maj. Saad Haddad, command forces in the southern part of the country bordering Israel. The Lebanese government rejects this as undermining its army and its sovereignty. Shultz received a solid endorsement of his mission

Tuesday from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak during a meeting in Cairo.

Commutation Is Under Probe

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Parole Commission is investigating commuting the life sentence of a woman who was first sentenced to death for the poisoning death of her husband.

Rebecca Case Dettler, 44, was convicted in Forsyth Superior Court in 1978 of first-degree murder and was sentenced to die in the gas chamber. But the N.C. Supreme Court nullified the death sentence in 1979.

The high court ordered a life term for Mrs. Dettler, noting that North Carolina's capital punishment law was not in effect when Mrs. Dettler committed the acts that caused the death of Don Gene Dettler.

According to trial evidence, Dettler, 39, died on June 9, 1977, of arsenic poisoning from an ant-killer compound that his wife systematically put in his food and drink over many months.

Though Dettler died eight days after the state's capital-punishment law became effective, the Supreme Court held that the acts that caused his death occurred while the death penalty was in limbo.

The Parole Commission said in a letter to District Attorney Donald K. Tisdale that the investigation into commuting the sentence is being conducted at the request of Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

Tisdale said Tuesday that

Mrs. Dettler committed the "most cold-blooded murder" that ever drew his attention as a prosecutor and that he will oppose a sentence reduction with his "every resource."

Gwen O. Williams, a parole-case analyst who is handling the investigation, said yesterday that she does not know what kind of a reduction of sentence the governor's office may have in mind.

"They could commute it to time served," Ms. Williams said, "or they could commute it to 10 years, or they could commute it to five years. I don't know if they would make immediate release possible."

4 WAYS TO SAY "CHARGE IT"

Money-Raising Games Defended By Bingo Backers

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
The president of the North Carolina Bingo Association said Tuesday that 80 percent of receipts from the games go for prizes, so it was not unreasonable that only five percent of proceeds go to charities that sponsor the games.

Ed Hedgepeth, a Raleigh man who leases bingo facilities to charities, told the state House Judiciary I Committee that most of the remaining money pays for operating the games.

Some legislators have charged that unscrupulous bingo operators are skimming off the charities' profits but Hedgepeth said he had not seen proof of the allegations.

The committee is considering a bill that would allow only charitable organizations to operate bingo games and is aimed at earning them a higher percentage of the receipts. The proposal is expected to be sent to a subcommittee for further consideration.

"I would like to see it where charities make 45 percent but you can't still have 80 percent paid out in prizes," Hedgepeth said.

If the prizes are reduced, Hedgepeth said that would result in declining numbers of people wanting to play the games.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, would require that charitable organizations obtain a license from the Department of Justice to operate bingo games or raffles. Operators without licenses could be sentenced to 10 years in prison.

It also would require quarterly and annual audits to be filed with the Justice Department.

Charitable organizations would be prohibited under the bill from contracting with someone to conduct the game. The organizations could hold only one five-hour session a day or two five-hour sessions a week under the bill.

Ethridge said the intent of the existing law was that only charitable, non-profit organizations be allowed to run bingo games but he said the laws are being circumvented.

He said the bill was based on a Georgia law that has proven successful.

"The bill is absolutely unfair to every charity recognized out there," said Dan Chatham of the Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Reidsville.

Chatham said it is advantageous for a charity to rent a bingo hall because it would cost more than $30,000 for the charity to open its own facility.

Robinson said he believed Chatham's figures were distorted because many charities already would have the facility for the bingo games.

Hedgepeth said he charges $450 a session to operate bingo games. Many times there are four sessions in one night, he said, generating $1,800. He said it costs him $350 to hold each session. He said he earned $38,000 last year after working with 12 charities.

Cite Inequity In Food Stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enlisted military personnel are treated inequitably in their eligibility for food stamps on the basis of whether they live on or off military installations, congressional auditors say.

A study by the General Accounting Office, the investigating arm of Congress, said most of the 2.1 percent of military families who qualify for food stamps would not be eligible if their government-furnished, on-base housing was counted as part of their income.

"The exclusion of government-furnished housing ... creates a considerable inequity between those service members who receive government-furnished housing as part of their pay and those who receive cash allowances instead," the GAO report said.

The cash allowance for housing is counted in income in figuring food stamp eligibility, while the government-provided housing is not, the report said.

Senate OKs High-Rise Curbs

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill to prohibit high-rise construction on mountain ridges unanimously passed the state Senate Tuesday after supporters said the buildings could be pollution risks and fire hazards on top of eyesores.

The House may send the bill to committee today before giving it full consideration.

While the bill has been pushed as a way to protect the scenery of North Carolina's mountains, Sen. Charles Hipsley, D-Haywood, said there were other considerations.

He said rock formations and limited top soil made it likely that pollution at higher elevations could contaminate water supplies. He added that such construction could be a fire hazard because of difficulties bringing firetrucks up winding mountain roads.

The measure, which would prohibit construction of buildings more than 35 feet tall on ridges more than 2,950 feet above sea level, was amended only slightly Tuesday after spending several weeks shuttling between committees and the Senate to iron out problems.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, amended the bill to make it clear that no buildings already in violation of the legislation would be affected. And Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, offered a change to make sure local governments in one county could not build on ridges in another county.

The bill, which stemmed from protests over construction of a 10-story condominium atop Little Sugar Mountain in Avery County, exempts government buildings as well as water, radio, telephone and television towers.

Under the bill, violators would be guilty of a misdemeanor. Counties would be able to opt out of the bill within 120 days, but only if they held public hearings and showed cause why they should be exempted. In addition, government construction is not included — a move designed to satisfy concerns by officials at Appalachian State University and Western Carolina University, where some dormitories may rise above the skyline.

"This bill here will go a long way toward protecting the mountain panorama," said Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, who introduced the bill.

In other legislative action: Court Funds

Supporters and opponents of a bill to require that the state invest money paid to county court clerks sharply debated the issue in a public hearing before the House Finance Committee.

Presently, the money is deposited in a checking account with a local bank. Clerks collect the money for jail and facility fees, alimony and support, cash bonds, deposits and raised bids on land sales and other payments.

Beard told the committee that his bill would give the state "free money," by raising interest that hadn't existed before.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said that $20-25 million could be invested and the interest used for such purposes as bolstering the exhausted state fund for paying indigents' attorney fees.

"I think it is incumbent on us ... to maximize resources and avoid raising taxes against our people whenever possible," said Boyles.

But a group of court clerks, led by N.C. Clerks Association President George T. Griffin of Cumberland County, attacked the bill as unconstitutional and impractical.

"This bill would allow (the state treasurer) to invest funds that do not belong to the State of North Carolina and thereby deprive the rightful owner of his property in violation of the Constitution," said clerk Ralph Knott of Franklin County.

No action was taken on the bill. Court Costs

The House Courts and Administration of Justice Committee sent to subcommittee a bill that would increase most court costs and fees.

Several committee members complained about what they called excessively high increases, which are expected to raise a total of $10.3 million a year.

"I have some difficulty raising fees just to be raising them," said Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe. "The court system is not supposed to be cost-effective, it's not supposed to pay for itself. It's one of the things we pay taxes for and it should be accessible to everyone."

Ralph S. Knott, Franklin County court clerk who served with the commission, said some fees hadn't been raised in a decade while the costs of operating court had skyrocketed.

The bill propose increases of $31 to $34 for district criminal and civil court, $58 to $60 for superior criminal court, $14 to $19 for magistrate civil court, $41 to $50 for superior civil court and $16 to $25 for special proceedings.

There also are proposed increases in estate proceedings and miscellaneous services such as preparing copies and marriages. Tuition

Former East Carolina Chancellor Leo Jenkins told the Senate Higher Education Committee that military personnel and their children should be charged in-state tuition at the University of North Carolina campuses and community colleges in the state.

Jenkins spoke in support of a bill introduced by Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, that would extend in-state tuition to service personnel. Jenkins said that would make the state more attractive to the military, which already is a multi-billion dollar industry in the state.

Legislative analysts have said the bill might affect as many as 400 students.

The committee took no action on the bill, which is expected to go to a subcommittee. Bills

Bills were introduced in the House to allow courts to order parental participation in some juvenile treatment cases and to establish a commission on security and privacy of computerized criminal records.

Several House members who have been investigating the National Guard introduced a bill to set up a select committee to further investigate possible abuses in the organization. Fault

A bill that would establish a comparative fault system of liability insurance in the state stalled again when the Senate Insurance Committee voted not to send it to the Appropriations Committee, considered more receptive to the idea.

Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, said he believed the Insurance Committee should consider how much the bill might cost North Carolina consumers. He noted that legislative analysts have predicted it could cost the state at least $100,000 a year.

"If we send it through here to Appropriations we are not doing our job," said Sen. Ken Harris, R-Mecklenburg.

The committee overwhelmingly voted to continue considering the bill, which narrowly survived a recent vote in the full Senate by being sent to the Insurance Committee. Crime

The House approved 108-2 a bill raising court fees by $2 to establish a crime victim's compensation fund. The fund would pay the cost of medical bills, time lost on the job and burial.

Awards ranging from $100 to $20,000 would be made by a five-member committee. No claims would be paid until 1984, giving the fund time to build up to an estimated $457,000. Support

The House tentatively approved a bill requiring the state be paid a fee for collecting child support payments for people not receiving public assistance.

Those on welfare may take advantage of the service free. Lottery

The Senate Judiciary II Committee listened to a detailed explanation of a bill to set up a state lottery after a binding referendum but took no action because a leading opponent of the lottery was absent.

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, committee chairman, said Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, was concerned that the date for the referendum might be moved up.

Harris pushed through an amendment to the bill last week requiring that the referendum be held in conjunction with a statewide election, effectively delaying it until Nov. 6, 1984.

Bill sponsor Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, said Tuesday that he plans to move up the referendum in an amendment to be introduced on the Senate floor.

"If I put it back the way it was, we could hold it anytime we want to," he said.

If approved by the General Assembly and the public, the bill would set up a lottery based on Maryland's law. The lottery, expected to generate up to $100 million a year, would begin Jan. 1, 1985, if passed in the referendum. Ticket Signature

A bill that would eliminate the requirement that traffic tickets be signed by those cited was killed by the Senate Judiciary II Committee.

The panel voted to hold the bill indefinitely after law enforcement officials said it would lead to more red tape for police to check identities. Mental Health

The House Mental Health Committee approved a bill to require law enforcement officers to return escaped mental patients to treatment centers at the expense of the patient's home county.

The panel delayed voting on a bill that would let mental health facilities admit minors without parental consent in an emergency.

Rep. Jeanne Fenner, D-Wilson, said she wanted to be sure parents were notified immediately upon admission, instead of within 24 hours as the bill requires. Early Parole

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, filed a bill to create a program allowing early parole for nonviolent prisoners who agree to perform community services. Swain also filed legislation to provide payment for attorneys of juvenile offenders. Math-Science Tuition

Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, filed a bill that would require tuition at the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics for anyone whose parents' income is above $20,000 a year.

"It could bring about $450,000 to the state," Ballenger said. "I feel the money comes out of the public school system."

He said he didn't think parents would object to paying for the superior education provided by the school, although he expected opposition from Sen. Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who fought a similar bill last year.

"Kenneth didn't like it then and he probably won't like it now," he said. "But then again, with the need for money we have this year, you never know."

Royall, told about the bill, said he would not support it.

Under the bill, families with incomes greater than $50,000 would pay $4,000 of the estimated $6,000 it costs per student at the school. Families with incomes between $25,000 and $50,000 would pay $2,000. Those earning $20,000 to $25,000 would pay $1,000 and anyone earning below $20,000 would pay nothing.

Autos

Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, introduced a bill that would rewrite the automobile dealers franchise law.

He said the bill would set standards for determining the market area for a dealership and conditions for authorization of new dealers of the same line.

It also would update conditions for continuing, terminating or passing on franchise agreements and update provisions relating to dealer warranty services.

Drunken Driving

Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, introduced a bill to allow the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety to conduct a community service program as an alternative to prison sentences.

The bill would affect those convicted of drunken driving under Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed drunken driving law.

Drivers Use Poetic License With Ego Tags

By CATHY LEWANDOWSKI
United Press International
"JESUS" and "MR BIG" are cruising the nation's highways.

Creative drivers seeking an identity on the road have turned to their license plates to advertise their trades, boast their IQs and flash their egos.

While state employees match wits with crafty drivers who try to slip a racy message past them, the state coffers fill with added revenue from vanity plates.

Drivers who may not want to pay extra — as much as $100 — have made a minor sport out of spotting odd license plates. Newspapers in Chicago feature some of the jazzier combinations in their people columns.

"Illinois has a unique love affair with license plates," said Mike Walters, spokesman for Secretary of State Jim Edgar. "It's kind of a minor sport to check out how creative the driver of a vehicle is."

Montana authorities say they issue 800 vanity plates a month, and they need a full-time and one part-time employee just to screen requests to make sure they are not "offensive to good taste".

"It might have a legitimate meaning that's not offensive," said the head of the personalized plate division in Helena. "But some of these look suspicious."

No one knows if "GOD" travels the Iowa highways with "JESUS" but most everyone knows the driver with the "MENSA" plates is a proud genius.

The driver of an Alabama pickup truck proclaims her love for cats with her "PURRRR" license tags and a podiatrist got an advertising bargain when he paid $50 over Alabama's regular $13 fee for "FT FIXR."

"I'm a cat lover," said Diane Betts, "and also because when my truck turns on it sounds like a loud cat purring. I wanted to be kind of original."

Drivers of luxury cars often brag they are "IN-HOC" and "IOALOT."

A smitten couple shouts their affection with "LUV U" and "LUV U 2" license plates and band leader Lawrence Welk flashes his trademark — "A1ANA2."

"When 'E.T.' came out, we had all kinds of E.T. plates," said a Virginia official.

A very defensive driver uses "XKUS ME."

There is room for "NASTY," "EXTACY," "BABY," "HOT32" and an endless string of "SEXY" on one state's roads and each state has a tennis buff who can't resist asking, "10SNE1."

The medical profession has spawned its own brand of license plates. There is "BABY DR," "EYEDOC," "TOEPRO," "TOT DOC," "2THDOK," "RENAL," "FLOSSM" and "ICU."

West Virginia obstetrician Dr. Bruce Berry vows to never give up his "STORK" tags, which he got last year for his birthday.

"I've had more fun and laughs than you can imagine," he says. "People stop me at lights and make all kinds of comments about it."

Berry said one boy asked him if he lets the stork borrow his car to drop off babies.

Virginia officials say they were the first to market personalized plates, called "Communiplates," using the motto, "Drive your message home." Last year, the plates brought in $1.85 million for the state highway department.

California's Environmental License Plate program has contributed $54 million to environmental projects such as protecting the California condor.

Pennsylvania last September ran a promotional campaign to sell more vanity plates for $44 — a $20 one-time fee on top of the annual $24 tag fee.

"It gives a person another way to express himself," said Douglas Tobin, director of the state Bureau of Motor Vehicles in Harrisburg.

The computer printout of personalized tags and their owners in Arkansas runs 511 pages. The tags cost $25 each plus $25 to renew.

"It does make money for us," said Betty Stokes, supervisor in the Arkansas personalized plates office. "That's what the state needs."

The ego plates can cost up to $75 extra in Mississippi, said Corrine Woodward, head of the personalized license plates division of the state Tax Commission, and about 2,000 drivers have them.

"They're catching on more and more," Mrs. Woodward said.

"You see personalities come out in these tags... we get a lot of wealthy people who order these tags."

Some recreation fans suggest "GOCAMP" and "GOBOWL." One anti-social Iowa driver suggests merely "GOAWAY."

A Michigan man who innocently requested "KKK" plates was turned down — even though the his initials are KKK.

The cars parked at a church parsonage have "REV" and "MRSREV."

A politically aware Pennsylvania driver proclaims "NO NUKES" and a Michigan man with a positive attitude tells the world he's a "WINNER" while another says "WALRUS."

A feminist says "IM4ERA" with her vanity tag.

While most drivers request their initials, some will pay extra to exhort their college teams to victory with plates that read "HOGS," "HAWKS" and "HOYAS."

Hawaii, where 3,000 $100-a-set vanity tags have been issued since they came out in 1981, may be the only state that has personalized plates in Japanese. Pity the driver with "MONKU" — Japanese for "nag, nag, nag" — but all others respect "SHOGUN."

A contemporary driver has "SHAKA" on his car — it's Hawaiian for "right on" — and another uses "BRUDDA" — for "brother."

California has its share of celebrity vanity plates. Diet guru Richard Simmons scolds, "YRUFAT" and actor Ernest Borgnine made a logical choice — "BORG9"

About 13,000 Michigan drivers pay $25 extra each year for their ego plates, which are new every year. Unlike most drivers, vanity drivers get front and rear plates — and they have paid more than $2.7 million into the litter control fund since 1974.

While the extra money is a boon for state treasuries, the work involved with keeping track of vanity plates is now overwhelming.

Bud Schoen, chief of the registrar's bureau in the Motor Vehicle Division of the Montana Department of Justice, calls the plates "my nemesis."

New Bern Plans Two Pepsi Days

NEW BERN — A two-day celebration Friday and Saturday will mark the 85th anniversary of Pepsi Cola, the internationally known soft drink that was first concocted and sold in New Bern.

The celebration will get under way Friday afternoon when government and industry officials hold a 5 p.m. press conference to declare Saturday as Pepsi Cola Day in both North and South Carolina. Those scheduled to attend the conference are Gov. Jim Hunt, South Carolina Secretary of State John Campbell, PepsiCo Inc. chairman Donald M. Kendall, and Pepsi-Cola USA President Roger Enrico. The press conference will be held at Tryon Palace.

At nine Friday evening, the Friday portion of the anniversary celebration will conclude with a fireworks display over the Trent River.

Saturday's celebration will open at 10:45 a.m., with the unveiling of a historic marker at Hearne's Jewelers on the corner of Middle and Pollack streets, the site of Bradham's Pharmacy. It was there that a young New Bern pharmacist, Caleb Bradham, in the summer of 1898, concocted and first sold his cola drink known as CALEB BRADHAM ... a young New Bern pharmacist back in 1898 concocted and marketed the drink which was first named "Brad's Drink" and later was sold under the name of Pepsi Cola. On Friday and Saturday, the 85th anniversary of Pepsi's founding in New Bern will be celebrated by a number of events, including the placement of a historic marker at Hearne's Jewelers, the original site of Bradham's Drug Store on Pollock Street.

"Brad's Drink," soon changed to the name Pepsi.

Following the unveiling, a Pepsi parade will be held, beginning at the corner of Queen and New streets, proceeding down Pollock and ending up near Trent River on Craven Street.

Other Saturday events will include lunch at Union Park, afternoon walking tours of New Bern's historic district, and a 6 p.m. presentation of a major new Carolina Pepsi advertising campaign at the Sudan Temple.

No Help By The Looters

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A car that crashed into the wall of a loan company drew several passers-by who helped themselves to office equipment instead of assisting the driver, police said.

"They were carrying anything they could get their hands on," Sgt. Angelo Scitillo said after the incident early Tuesday.

The looters took a photocopier, computer printer, postage meter and coffee machine from the rubble-strewn Home Loan Counseling Center in southwest Los Angeles, officials said.

"They even tried to take the clock off the wall but they couldn't get the back of it off," said Officer Willie Wilson.

The looters then turned to the car, police said.

"When our helicopter arrived above the scene, one of the looters had removed a tire from the car and was trying to strip the rest of the vehicle," Scitillo said.

The driver, meanwhile, abandoned his car and left the scene. Wilson said Layman Johnson, 47, was arrested later and booked for investigation of driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Stock Market Riding A Wave

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

The stock market is riding a wave of optimism flowing through the U.S. economy to historic highs, but at least one analyst thinks the best is yet to come.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 22.25 points Tuesday breaking the 1,200-mark for the first time ever. The average ended a hectic trading session at 1,209.46, surpassing the record 1,196.30 set last Friday.

"We're in a major bull market," said Charles Jensen at MKI Securities. "You can't argue with it — it's just too strong."

The market managed its big gains despite dismal earnings reports from industrial corporations. Some sectors of manufacturing are continuing to suffer from depressed product prices and weak demand. Airline and steel companies are reporting losses for the latest quarter, while oil companies are showing sizeable drops in profit.

U.S. Steel Corp. said Tuesday it lost $118 million compared with a profit of $80 million in the comparable three months last year. Bethlehem Steel Corp. reported a $175.2 million loss, more than double the loss it reported a year ago.

Donald Trautlein, Bethlehem chairman, said steel shipments and prices remained "very depressed."

"There are encouraging signs that an economic recovery in this country is under way, and we have seen some evidence of this in the steel business," he said. "Nevertheless, we believe it is too early to be very optimistic."

In New York, Eastern Airlines reported it lost $60.7 million in the first quarter.

Among oil companies, Gulf Oil Corp. reported a 36.8 percent profit drop; Phillips Petroleum Co. said its earnings fell 32.8 percent, and Atlantic Richfield Co. reported a 14.3 percent drop. An exception to the trend was Standard Oil Co. of California, which reported a 34.8 percent jump in net income.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—Robert S. Strauss, a former U.S. trade representative, told a Senate committee that creation of a Department of Trade would give the United States a single voice in international policies. He said that in the current structure divisions among several agencies produce confusion.

—Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker urged Congress to act quickly in deciding a future framework for the nation's financial system, saying rapid changes are creating confusion.

—The American Business Conference said the high cost of money in the United States is the chief reason this country is losing business to foreign competitors.

—The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said the nation's savings and loan associations lost about $1 billion in the second half of last year. But it added that the industry appears now to be breaking even.

—The nation's two largest timber workers' unions and representatives of seven timber companies said talks on a new contract will begin Thursday in Portland, Ore. A 3-year pact expires May 31.

Farm Bureau HQ Is Picketed

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A group of farmworkers and their supporters picketed the North Carolina Farm Bureau headquarters Tuesday to protest the agency's opposition to an anti-slavery bill now before the General Assembly.

Joseph "Chip" Hughes, a lobbyist for the North Carolina Farmworkers Network and a protest organizer, said his group believes the Farm Bureau's opposition stems from the fact its members fear it will "cut off the source of plentiful and cheap labor they have to produce their crops."

But Farm Bureau attorney Robert B. Broughton said the Farm Bureau would never condone slavery.

"The Farm Bureau feels at the outset that this bill is unnecessary in North Carolina," Broughton said. "The 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution following the war between the states outlawed peonage. And because of the investigative powers of the FBI to handle this type of matter, it's worked out very well."

Among the 40 protestors Tuesday were three people who said they had been kept in involuntary servitude. James Mack told of his escape at the age of 14 when he outran dogs through a cow pasture after throwing them off the scent by stepping on cow dung.

Mack, 64, of Winston-Salem said he was too young to remember how old he was when first enslaved at a farm near Fayetteville. He said he didn't remember too much about his treatment, but did remember being happy when he escaped.

"They made me plow," Mack said. "One day I just started to run, run, run."

Linwood Mulchi, 26, of Henderson, said he was taken from a Raleigh park to a farm "somewhere far from here." Mulchi, who said he had been in mental institutions four times, said the man who picked him up told him he'd buy him wine.

Mulchi worked for 1½ days, for which he received $8 after the cost of his food and wine were subtracted. He said he wasn't beaten, but he got sick and was deprived of medication. He said the man eventually drove him back to the park.

"The bottom line of why we are here today is because we want to begin to see the humane treatment of the workers who labor in agriculture in this state," Hughes said.

"They have been treated like slaves because they don't have the protection that other workers enjoy," he said. "We feel that this slavery bill could begin to lessen the levels of exploitation, as well as show a real commitment by the state to cleaning up its own backyard."

The anti-slavery bill was introduced by Rep. Malcolm Fulcher, D-Carteret. It adds a new statute making it a felony to knowingly and willfully hold a person in involuntary servitude or to kidnap, carry away, or entice away a person for that purpose.

The bill defines involuntary servitude as the unlawful holding of a person for any length of time to perform labor, whether compensated or not, against that person's will, not allowing the person to leave, by acts or threats of violence or other coercive means.

"The definition section is one of real concern to Farm Bureau people," said Farm Bureau Attorney Robert B. Broughton. "It doesn't specify any length of time. It could be 10 seconds or 10 years. While using terms such as 'hold against their will,' it also uses terms like 'or other coercive means.'"

Broughton also said proposed penalties were excessive, more so than in other states.

Broughton said the FBI had told him that there has never been a conviction of a farmer on slavery charges in the United States.

Safeguards By Parents

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents must protect their children against the potential dangers of medicines they themselves are taking, warns the Council on Family Health, a public service of the manufacturers of medicines, which offers these tips on poison prevention:

—Keep all medicine and household products out of sight and reach of children, locked away if possible. When in use, these items should never be out of sight of adults — even for the time it takes to answer the telephone.

—Whenever you give medicines, read label directions carefully, in good lighting.

—Discard in a safe way prescription drugs no longer being taken under a doctor's advice or non-prescription products with expired dating.

San Francisco's Recall Vote Count Fell Far Short

By THOMAS MURPHY
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor Dianne Feinstein, forced into a recall election by a fringe group opposed to gun control, says her landslide victory at the polls is a "mandate for courage" in her administration.

Appearing before a crowd of about 1,000 cheering supporters as the election results came in Tuesday night, Ms. Feinstein promised that she would be "a mayor that's not going to let the tail wag the dog."

"I see this... as a mandate for strength, as a mandate for courage, as a mandate for bringing the people of the city together," she said.

Ms. Feinstein, 49, had wept when she first learned that opponents had forced a recall election, the city's first since 1946. But the Democratic mayor raised about $400,000 and unleashed more than 2,000 volunteers who handed out absentee ballots in public places, using ironing boards as impromptu desks.

She won 45,343 of 51,033 absentee ballots counted before the polls closed at 8 p.m. With all 709 precincts reporting, the final total was 127,043 votes for Ms. Feinstein, 29,269 opposed. The margin was 80 percent against the recall, 18.4 percent in favor, 1.5 percent marked for neither choice, and .1 percent marked for both.

An additional 5,000 absentee ballots are expected to be counted by Friday, and 800 ballots have been challenged. Turnout among the 354,000 registered voters was 44.9 percent.

The election was sparked by the White Panther Party, a tiny group angered by Ms. Feinstein's support of a handgun ban. Its 20 members circulated recall petitions even after a court nullified the ban.

VICTORY IS HERS — San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein happily raises her arms and claims victory after she easily survived a recall election. (AP Laserphoto)

The White Panthers were joined by a hodgepodge of other groups, including environmentalists concerned about urban sprawl, preservationists dismayed by the destruction of historical buildings and homosexuals angered by the mayor's veto of a "domestic partner" proposal that would have extended city benefits to the mates of unmarried city workers.

Panthers leader Tom Stevens blamed the failure of the recall on the absentee ballots, calling them illegal, and said the group's reaction would be "in court."

Two courts, including the state Supreme Court, have already thrown out the group's argument that absentee ballots violated a constitutional right to a secret ballot.

The mayor campaigned vigorously, making no apologies for her 4½-year record and gathering a momentum expected to carry her through November, when she seeks re-election to another four-year term.

The strong showing, coupled with her role as mayor of the host city for the Democratic National Convention next July, is expected to bring Ms. Feinstein more national attention.

Her administration of this city has generated a $150 million surplus. Unemployment is several points below the state average, downtown construction is booming and a $54 million renovation of the city's historic cable car system is rolling along smoothly while other cities are pressed for mass transit funds.

Ms. Feinstein, a San Francisco native, was first elected to the city's Board of Supervisors in 1969 and won re-election twice. She was appointed mayor after the November 1978 slaying of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, and won election on her own in November 1979.

Her administration made efforts to change neighborhood zoning, boost downtown growth and ban handguns like the one that killed Milk and Moscone.

It was the first attempt to recall a San Francisco mayor since 1946, when Mayor Roger Lapham survived a recall attempt sparked by a hike in streetcar fares from 7 cents to a dime.

Cannon said city, SBI and federal Drug Enforcement Administration funds were used to finance the investigation.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market swept ahead in heavy trading today amid enthusiasm over Tuesday's surge past the 1,200 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The closely watched average of 30 blue chips, up 22.25 Tuesday to record highs, climbed another 5.90 to 1,215.36 in the first half hour today.

Gainers took a 21 lead over losers in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The break through the 1,200 barrier — just two months after the Dow reached 1,100 for the first time — surprised and impressed many traders.

Analysts said spreading confidence about prospects for the economic recovery appeared to be fostering steady demand for stocks, even at their current lofty prices.

Since the market began its runaway rise more than eight months ago, numerous warnings have been sounded that it was vulnerable to a setback. But so far, no such "correction" has materialized.

Among today's early volume leaders, General Motors rose 1/8 to 65 1/2; Eastman Kodak 1/4 to 82 1/4, and Wendy's International 3/8 to 18 1/2.

In Tuesday's trading advances outpaced declines by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 97.25 million shares, against 90.15 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index climbed 1.54 to 92.83. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.37 at 418.76.

The Forecast For Thursday, April 28

Low Temperatures

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts fair skies for most of the nation on Thursday. Small areas of showers are indicated in the West and East. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Last week it was winter in springtime, but this week the temperatures are more like summer.

Fayetteville Tuesday was the warmest spot in the state with a reading of 81 degrees, but other stations across the state reported temperatures in the high 70s.

Temperatures again tomorrow should hit the high 70s and low 80s in most areas east of the mountains.

Clear skies and mild temperatures were the rule across the Tar Heel state Tuesday afternoon. A high pressure system centered over the northeastern Gulf of Mexico was responsible for the cloudless day.

The only areas not hitting the 70s Tuesday were the Outer Banks, where the mercury remained in the mid and upper 60s, and the mountains. Boone was the cool spot in the state with a high of 58.

The high pressure system will continue to dominate the state's weather for the next couple of days. Some cloudiness will move into the mountains tonight and there may be a few showers over the mountains by Thursday afternoon.

For the rest of the state, however, mostly sunny weather will continue at least until the last part of the week.

Lows tonight will range from near 50 in the mountains to near 60 along the coast. Tuesday will be partly cloudy with a chance of showers in the mountains and mostly sunny in the east. Springlike temperatures are going to continue with highs in the 70s and 80s.

Hazing Charges...

acquitted of hazing. His sentencing was postponed, pending the trial of the other cases.

One or two more arrests are pending, Mallory said. None of the ECU students involved have been expelled.

Mallory said, but all convicted of hazing or aiding and abetting in hazing will, he said.

State law forbids hazing and defines it as "to annoy any student by playing abusive or ridiculous tricks upon him, to frighten, scold, beat or harass him, or to subject him to personal indignity." A violation is punishable by up to six months in jail and a $500 fine. The law also requires that the student be expelled from school.

Not So Subtle

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Job-seekers are being urged to take a good look at themselves in state unemployment offices, where one has a full-length mirror with a sign asking, "Would you hire this person?"

In another office, the mirror sign asks, "Are you ready for a job?"

The idea came from employees at the two Arizona Department of Economic Security offices. "I don't think some people realize what they look like," said Alice Raizk, an employer-service representative.

She said that some thought was given to passing out a dress code to job-seekers, "but we substituted the mirror instead."

Glenn Kaufmann, the manager at one office, explained, "We're trying to get a subtle message out that a serious part of job hunting is appearance."

Message Took Surprise Trip

ANTIGO, Wis. (AP) — A boy who dropped a plastic cube with a message into Lake Huron thought his communique might travel down the lake. Instead it wound up 5,000 miles away, in Sweden.

Tim Vander Leest dropped the cube last summer while riding a ferry to Mackinac Island in Michigan.

On April 6, the cube was picked up by Claes Uresten on the west coast of Sweden at Tibro, said Tim's mother, Mary Vander Leest.

Uresten sent the 12-year-old a postcard telling him of the find.

"That's all we know, but we're going to write right away," Mrs. Vander Leest said Tuesday. "We were hoping someone down the lake would find it."

Edwards Fires Perfect Game For Vikes

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — Utter perfection!!!

What more can you say about the effort of D.H. Conley junior pitcher Daryl Edwards. He struck out 14 of the 21 batters West Craven sent to the plate and the rest fell victim to the Vikings' flawless defense, as Conley took a 13-0 victory over the Eagles in Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference action Tuesday night.

Edwards narrowly missed losing the no-hitter in the top of the sixth when West Craven pinch hitter Randy McLawhorn ripped a shot deep into left field.

"It was a fastball I just got up a little," said Edwards. "I thought it was gone."

But centerfielder Glenn Clemmons chased down the fly ball for the second out of the inning.

"I thought when the ball left the bat that it was a hit," said Conley coach Gerald Garner. "Glenn got a good jump on the ball and made a good catch reaching over his shoulder. He said he was about 10 feet from the fence when he caught it, so I guess it was hit about 340 feet."

Edwards fanned the first six Eagle batters before a bunt attempt leading off the third broke up the string. He went on to strike out the next five and got solid defense the rest of the way for the feat. He threw just 81 pitches in the game — an average of 3.7 per batter.

"After about the fourth inning the kids realized what was going on, but it wasn't until the sixth that they knew it was a perfect game," said Garner. "One of the keys was that he was able to get his breaking ball over the plate, and that made his fastball more effective."

The Vikings pushed across a pair of runs in the first inning and added three in the third before an eight-run rally in the sixth.

Gurkins posted three hits in as many at-bats and drove in four runs, while Todd Rouse and catcher Stacy McCarter had doubles for Conley, now 7-7 overall and 1-2 in the conference.

In the first inning, Edwards singled and scored from first when Eagles pitcher White threw the ball away for a three-base error on a grounder by Rouse. Rouse scored on a sacrifice squeeze by Mike Gurkins.

With one out in the third, Edwards drew a base-on-balls. Courtesy runner Jeff Hamill stole second and scored on a double down the line by Rouse. Gurkins followed with a single and the West Craven catcher threw the ball into centerfield to let Rouse score and Gurkins move to third. A sacrifice fly by Roberson scored Gurkins.

Conley sent 12 batters to the plate in the sixth, getting help from four West Craven errors. A two-out single by Gurkins drove in Steve Mills and Rouse, and McCarter later doubled to score Gurkins and Eddie Roberson.

"I had (Edwards) go down to the bullpen and soft toss to stay loose during that long inning," Garner said. "I knew he might be getting a little tight or restless sitting around."

"The last two games we lost really hurt us. The first one was on an error and the second on five hits in the last inning. Our sticks have been very quiet until tonight."

"We're a young team; we've had our problems this year. But I hope this will get us started on the right track."

Conley hosts West Carteret tonight at 7:30. The Patriots feature nine veteran seniors and have posted a 2-1 conference mark this season.

Schulz Happy With Eagles

Jody Schulz, East Carolina's 6-4, 242-pound defensive end, became the highest picked Pirate ever yesterday during the National Football League's collegiate draft of seniors.

A native of Chester, Maryland, Schulz was picked in the second round by the Philadelphia Eagles, 48th overall and 18th in the second round. That pick surpassed former Pirate Anthony Collins number 24 pick in the second round two years ago. Collins is now a starting running back for the New England Patriots.

Schulz will be the second member of the Pirates now on the Eagle team. Former Pittsburgh Steeler Zack Valentine was picked up on waivers from Baltimore after a trade prior to the start of last season.

"I'm real pleased," Schulz said of his draft by the Eagles. "Philadelphia is close to home and everything."

Schulz said that he will travel to Philadelphia today to talk with Eagle personnel and meet the coaching staff. "I haven't talked with them about when rookie camp is or where I'll be playing," he said.

While he played at Chowan Junior College and at East Carolina as a defensive end, Schulz is considered an inside linebacker candidate by most pro scouts.

Schulz said he had not expected to be that high a draft choice. "I think after the USFL draft (where he was picked quite low) I didn't think I would go that high. I was surprised."

Schulz also said he was not sure of what the linebacker situation is at Philadelphia, but he could be going up head to head with Valentine, since he is also an inside linebacker.

No other Pirate was chosen in the draft. Tom Carnes, a 6-5, 277-pound offensive lineman was drafted and signed by the Washington Redskins of the USFL earlier this year.

Aycock Takes Two From Pitt

PIKEVILLE — Charles B. Aycock High School's Paul Summerlin and John Thomas each threw shutouts at North Pitt's Panthers yesterday as the Falcons swept a double header from their Eastern Carolina Conference opponents, 10-9, and 6-0.

In the opening game, Aycock got all it needed in the second inning. Thomas singled and Tommy Tyndall cracked a home run.

The Falcons added two each in the third and fourth frames, then picked up four more in the top of the seventh.

Tyndall led the Aycock hitting with three, while Thomas had two. North Pitt got only three hits off Summerlin.

In the second game, Aycock took the lead in the second with a single run — again all it was to need. Thomas singled and moved up on an error. He then scored on Tyndall's single.

Aycock added one each in the third and fourth, two in the fifth, and one last run on a homer by Johnny Carr in the sixth.

No one had more than one hit for either team, and Thomas held North Pitt to only three again.

Now 8-8 overall and 2-5 in league play, the Panthers host Southern Nash on Friday.

Rose Plucks Eagles, 8-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Any hopes Northeastern High School might have had for an upset of Rose's unbeaten baseball Rampants was quickly dispelled yesterday afternoon when leadoff batter Rudy Stalls stepped to the plate.

Stalls lashed the first pitch in the bottom of the first out of the ball park in right field for a home run, setting up an 8-2 Big East win by the Rampants over the Eagles.

The victory boosted the Rose record to 11-0 overall and 7-0 in Big East play. They have now completed the first of the two round-robin meetings with the rest of the league.

Bill Johnson also homered for Rose, as the Rampants banged out nine hits in scoring the victory. Jeff Wilson and Curtis Evans led the hitting otherwise, each getting two.

Mike Kinley hurled the win, allowing six hits, and just one of the two runs was earned. Both came late in the game. "We played well," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "Kinley threw well most of the game. He's showing improvement in every game."

Vincent was also pleased with the leadership shown, noting that "seniors have really taken charge."

Vincent said he feels fortunate to have gone through the first half of the season unbeaten. "We're real fortunate to be sitting where we're sitting."

Rose got the scoring started in the first, scoring three times. After Stalls banged the first pitch out of the park, Warren got a one-out single to center. He scored on Kirkland's double to left center, who moved up on a passed ball, but was thrown out at home — one of three Rampants cut down at home — when Kinley reached on a grounder back to the mound. Courtesy runner Mike Iaboni then streaked home on a single by Wilson.

Rose picked up a fourth run in the third. Warren walked and stole second. He scored on a double by Kinley.

The Rampants added two more for a 6-0 lead in the fourth. Johnson opened with a homer to left. Stalls later reached on a fielder's choice that left two out, moving up on a balk and a wild pitch. He scored when Traye Fuqua reached on an error.

Northeastern got its first run in the fifth. Jeff Simpson reached on an error and Eddie Kitchen got a hit. Chris Sanders walked and with one away, Clint Williams' grounder scored Simpson.

Rose countered with two in the bottom of the fifth to close out the Rampant scoring. Kirkland walked and moved all the way to third on an infield out. He scored on a passed ball. Wilson singled and moved up on a balk and a passed ball, scoring on Johnson's fielder's choice.

The Eagles got their final run in the seventh. Simpson led off with a single and moved up on an out. He scored on Saunders' bad hop single to first.

Simpson led the Northeastern hitting with two. The Eagles fall to 4-5-1 overall and 2-5 in the league.

Rose returns to action on Friday, hosting Northern Nash in a 7:30 p.m. contest at Guy Smith Stadium.

Relief pitcher Rich "Goose" Gossage was a forestry major in college at Colorado State.

Coley, Gay Pace Charger Win, 5-3

By ALAN WOOTEN
Reflector Sports Writer
LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton has long been noted for coming out with some good pitchers every year in baseball. Tuesday night was no exception.

Not only did the Chargers get another complete game from their starting pitcher, they added a homerun by another in sliding past SouthWest Edgecombe, 5-3, in Eastern Carolina Conference baseball action.

Doug Coley did the mound work, recording his seventh win in as many decisions. It was also Coley's seventh complete game in eight starts and the 14th in 16 games this year for Ayden-Grifton's hurlers.

Tyrone Gay provided the fire-power at the plate, connecting for a solo homerun to lead off the fifth inning and provide a Ayden-Grifton with a 5-2 lead.

The Chargers also came away with nine steals in the game, including three by Charles Mitchell.

"They played as well the first time," Charger coach Allan Wilson said afterward. "They gave us a fit for nine innings before we finally won. We just have to go out and win five more in a row now. Maybe we can get into at least a tie if we do that."

The Chargers, 5-2 in ECC play and 13-3 overall, have five games remaining in conference play, three on the road. A-G faces league-leader Greene Central in Snow Hill a week from Friday and C.B. Aycock, which is a half-game behind GC, on Friday of this week.

"Coley did a good job out there today," Wilson said. "He did a good job of getting out of that jam in the third. Our pitching has really carried us this year. I think any team around would be happy to get 14 of 16 complete games from their pitchers."

Ayden-Grifton picked up a run in the first inning. Jackie Conway slapped Eddie Naylor's first pitch into leftfield for a single and stole second. Gene Johnson grounded out and Doug Coley flew out to center to score Conway.

SouthWest Edgecombe threatened in the third. Barry Powell led off with a bloop single to right. One out later, Mark Pittman singled and Darryl Bess reached on an error. Hank Farmer then hit a liner to second that Leo Venders dived for and caught, stepping on second for a doubleplay to end the inning.

A-G picked up three more runs in the fourth. With one gone, Roger Moyer singled and stole second. Terry Garrett was struck out but Mike Varnell could not hold on to the third strike. Varnell tried to get Moyer stealing third but the throw was not in time. Farmer then threw to first to try and get Garrett but the throw bounced up from Allen Wilson and Garrett was safe. Moyer then took advantage of the miscue and raced home for a 2-0 lead.

A wild pitch allowed Garrett to reach third. Mitchell then laid down a bunt which Varnell fielded and threw past first, allowing Garrett to advance to second and Garrett to score. Mitchell stole second and scored when Wesly Hardy singled to centerfield. The Chargers loaded the bases but a doubleplay ended the inning, with A-G ahead, 4-0.

SWE cut it the lead to 4-2 with a couple of runs in the fifth. Ken Winstead started things off, reaching on an error by Johnson. Powell walked and Naylor ripped a shot into right-centerfield to score Winstead and move Powell to third. One out later, Bess lofted a fly ball to short rightfield which Powell scored on.

Gay upped the lead to 5-2 in the bottom of the fifth with his 335-foot blast to rightfield. It was his third homer of the season and second in as many games.

SouthWest picked up a run in the sixth. Wilson walked and went to third on a single by Winstead. He scored on a wild pitch.

"Naylor did a good job for us," SWE coach Link Page said. "We thought we had Coley a time or two but he got out of it. If we get the hit in the third with the bases loaded, it's a totally different game. But that's the breaks."

"We're just pleased to get the win," Wilson said. "All we have to do is win five in a row but it won't be easy."

The Chargers return to action on Friday night at Littlefield in an important conference game with Charles B. Aycock.

Driver Is Changed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — NASCAR's first major driver change of the year was announced Monday when Morgan Shepherd replaced Mark Martin for the J.D. Stacy stock car racing team.

"The reason, strictly, is Morgan's experience," said Stacy crew chief Robert "Boobie" Harrington. "Mark is a nice young man, and he'll make it in this sport."

"Our problem is we don't have time to wait," Harrington said. "We want to run up front and win some races this year, and we feel Morgan is the best man available affording us that chance."

Shepherd, 42, of Conover, was left without a ride following several driver changes last year and has been hitchhiking rides this year. His only Grand National victory was in the 1981 Virginia 500, and he was the 1980 NASCAR national sportsman champion.

Martin, 24, a former American Speed Association champion, folded his own operation to join Stacy, replacing Tim Richmond. His best showing was a third-place finish in the TransSouth 500 at Darlington, S.C.

"I'm surprised, but I shouldn't be," Martin said, referring to recent rumors of the shakeup. "Right now I have no conception of what I'm going to do."

Japan's Motorcycle Gangs A Problem For Police

By TODD CARREL
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — They roar past the tranquil moor of the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and zoom through fashionable neighborhoods by night. They smash car hoods with iron clubs, terrorize filling station attendants to get free gasoline; some commit rape, and rumble in gang wars.

They are Japan's motorcycle gangs, known as "bosozoku," — explosive marauders. Police call them criminals, and claim some of them form a "reserve army" for gangsters.

The police say that in 1982 more than 42,000 bosozoku belonged to 712 gangs across Japan and that of these, 76.4 percent were 19 years old and under.

The bikers are "probably the largest single juvenile delinquency problem here," Shozo Igarashi, head of the National Police Agency traffic section, said in an interview.

Both the authorities and the bosozoku see the biker lifestyle as a sort of teen-age rite of passage among Japan's lower class. Most abandon it around the age of 20, when the law provides harsher penalties for such activities as pummeling cars and engaging in gang fights.

"We all like motorcycles and hot rods — and we do anything that's bad," boasted Akihiko Hamanaka. "We take drugs and fight rival gangs."

Hamanaka, 21, interviewed along with three younger members of the "Musabi" (Flying Squirrels) gang, said his five-year career as a bosozoku ended last October when he was jailed for "smashing a police car."

Police said Hamanaka and about 200 members of his gang went on a post-midnight rampage in the working class neighborhood of Ome, 18 miles from downtown Tokyo. They battered the cars of four men they mistook for members of a rival gang. Ninety gang members — armed with fire bombs, pipes, bars and swords — were charged with assembly with dangerous weapons.

Hamanaka said he lost his job as an electrician because of the arrest, his third, and now drives a truck. He sat in a coffeshop as he spoke, wearing a thin black shirt, black V-neck sweater, striped black pants and white socks with girls' sandals, which bosozoku consider macho.

Hamanaka and his friends readily admitted that they fought other gangs, but he said they were "too ashamed to rape or steal." He also denied they were reservists for adult gangsters as the police contend.

In a 1980 study, police said 63.9 percent of all juvenile arrests for assembly with dangerous weapons were bosozoku, as were 24.7 percent of those arrested for rape, 23.3 percent of those arrested for robbery and 21 percent of those arrested in assault and battery cases.

Japan has very strict gun control laws and the arsenals of such bosozoku gangs as the Black Emperors, Killer Federation, or B-1 almost never include guns.

They ride 400cc Hondas or Kawasakis or Suzukis, but not the 1200cc Harley-Davidsons favored by American bikers, such as the Hell's Angels. "They're too powerful for our licenses," said Hamanaka.

"We go anywhere we want," he said, "especially to new towns or flashy places like Shinjuku (in central Tokyo) where lots of girls want to get on and ride with us or down Route 134 — the beach line."

"They don't like to study," said police official Igarashi. "They find work boring, and some in a way are on the outskirts of society. So they ride motorcycles and hot-rods and try to make themselves seem larger than they are."

"It's not kid stuff because we commit crimes," insisted Hamanaka. "We make the newspapers."

But he agreed that being a bosozoku is one way to attract attention in a society that he believes rejects people of working-class background.

"This is supposed to be a democratic society, but it isn't," he said. "We still have a hierarchy, like in the past. You know, samurai, peasants and other classes. Since we don't have any money, we're at the very bottom. Maybe that's why I have that machismo feeling."

He and his friends claim they are treated brutally by the police and call that another example of society trying to keep them down.

"The cops throw flashlights at us and hit us with night sticks," complained Hamanaka. "We go to jail if we hit cops but they get away with hitting us."

"If you get caught, they beat you and you get scars on your face that don't go away for weeks," said Hiroto Nagasawa, a hefty, 19-year-old six-footer wearing a red golf sweater with a Ben Hogan logo, blue slacks and girls' sandals.

The National Police Agency's Igarashi said police strictly enforce the laws to control the bosozoku, but admonish them "warmly" when they are arrested.

Those 20 and over are sent to jail as adults, younger ones are sent to juvenile centers, and police ask parents, teachers and neighbors to try to make the bosozoku into "useful members of society," he added.

"It's not out-and-out war, but we police want to find ways to channel their negative energy into constructive activities," Igarashi said. "That's the problem."

Hamanaka said that since retiring from the ranks of the bosozoku, he has new and more respectable ambitions.

"I want to be a father and raise a child," he said. "I want money too, so I can buy my own truck someday. After 20, people settle down. It's shameful if you don't."

Looks Improving

TARBORO — The appearance of eastern North Carolina is improving because property owners are demolishing dilapidated tenant houses and out-buildings that are no longer being used, according to Peter J. Long of Tarboro, chairman of community development for the Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce.

The Eastern Chamber, three years ago, launched an effort to encourage rural property owners to demolish dilapidated buildings, and Long said the appearance of the region is improving in direct proportion to the number of abandoned buildings that are being cleared.

An improved appearance, along with the region's abundant natural resources can serve as a magnet for more tourism, and the area will become more attractive to industrial site selectors, Long said.

However, Long suggested that property owners should take measures to protect and restore historic structures.

"The region does not need to let old and historic homes completely disappear because of non-use," Restored, he said "they are valuable as records of history and also for tourism."

Senator Zooms By Plain Commuters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most drivers must rise early and resort to carpools to beat frustrating rush-hour traffic around the nation's capital. Sen. Roger W. Jepsen, R-Iowa, uses congressional immunity instead.

The senator, who lives in suburban Alexandria, Va., avoided $35 in fines last Friday morning when he invoked immunity provided by the Constitution and told a police officer could not be arrested for driving alone in the restricted Shirley Highway carpool lanes because he was en route to Capitol Hill.

"The senator said, 'I understand I'm permitted to use these lanes,' and the policeman walked away and got back in her car," Jepsen's press secretary, James Lafferty, told The Washington Post on Monday. "This was no major constitutional crisis."

The officer wrote no ticket despite a rule that restricts traffic on the express lanes and portions of Route I-66 to vehicles with four persons during rush hours.

Until disclosure of Jepsen's commuting, the only other group of Washington workers who were known to be avoiding the carpool restrictions were diplomats who also have claimed immunity.

Arlington Police Chief William Stover said the officer who stopped Jepsen acted properly. Stover said that when a member of Congress is going to or from a congressional session he is exempt from enforcement of traffic laws, unless he is endangering public safety.

Lafferty said Jepsen has been using the carpool lanes although he commutes alone for the past four years. This is the first time he's been stopped, Lafferty said.

Translator Has Tackled 'Old French'

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press Writer
MIDDLETOWN, Conn.
(AP) — Translators, says
one practitioner of the art, have the best of the past and the present even though they have to maintain a delicate balance between the two worlds.

Norman Shapiro, who recently published a collection of Old French fables, says the dualistic situation stems from the strange relationship the translator enters into with the original author.

"I see translation not just as a literal rendering, but a collaboration between the original author and the translator, who enter into a strange symbiosis," the native of Boston said.

"What they produce is not a new work, but a work with kind of a life of its own.

"There's a balance between complete freedom and complete responsibility," Shapiro added. "You're bound to the original work...
The translation has to be not only contemporary, but also give some flavor of the original author's time."

But being a translator also means "no blank piece of paper that's been the bane of so many poets," the Wesleyan University professor of Romance languages and literature said in a recent interview.

His book — "Fables from Old French: Aesop's Beasts and Bumpkins," has been praised for its fresh approach to works that have been previously unavailable in English. Illustrated by 29 15th-century woodcut engravings and eight adapted drawings, the book has facing pages of Old French text and its translation.

Old French can be compared to the present French language as the English of Chaucer's period is to modern English.

Shapiro said he has "always been interested in languages" and began translating French fables for a collection of medieval literature several years ago.

"I eventually realized that I had the nucleus of a collection," he said.

A fable is a short poem or prose work in which, usually, an animal is given human traits to convey a universal moral. While Aesop is the best known fabulist, France became the most productive country in Europe in fables.
Marie de France, some of whose works are included in Shapiro's book, is the most important fabulist of the medieval period.

"Fables from Old French" also includes an informative introduction by another Wesleyan faculty member, Howard Needler, who traces the development of the individual fables.

"Any fabulist takes some liberties with the material he or she has, so that the medieval French fables, which used Latin translations of Aesop for their basis, are not the same as Aesop," Shapiro said.

"Details change. For example, the crow in Aesop's fable holds a chunk of meat, not cheese as it does in the French," he added.

That progressive change interests Shapiro, who also teaches a course in black French — that is, the patois spoken in former French colonies in Africa and the Caribbean — at Wesleyan.

"It's fascinating. Suddenly you'll come across a fable that is distinctly Old French in Caribbean folk tales. And, you have to remember, those are the antecedents of our 'Brer Rabbit' stories."

Shapiro, who last year brought out a collection of one-act plays by George Feydeau, a writer of French farces, said he was looking toward another book of French fables.

"I want to call it," he paused, with a smile creeping across his face, "Those Fabulist French."

("Fables From Old French" is published by Wesleyan University Press.)

UNLIKELY HOSTS
GENEVA, Switzerland
(AP) — An organization of Western psychiatrists has proposed sending a delegation to the Soviet Union to investigate reports that political dissidents are being held in mental hospitals. But one official says Monday she doubted the Soviets would permit the visit.

Condo Battle Taken To Court

FOLKSTONE, N.C. (AP) — A group of Onslow County residents say they will go to court today in an attempt to block development of Permuda Island.

Disgruntled residents in Stump Sound Township say they will challenge the Onslow County commissioners' decision last week rezoning the island for development.

The commissioners voted 3-2 April 18 to rezone Permuda, removing a major roadblock to Martin County developer Marshall Thomas' plan to build 383 condominiums, two six-story high-rises and a commercial complex on the 50-acre island.

The N.C. Office of Coastal Management and other state agencies also must approve Thomas' proposal to develop the island, which lies between Topsail Island and Thomas Landing on the mainland.

The appeal will ask the court to certify that Thomas complied with the county subdivision and zoning regulations before the commissioners acted, according to oystermen Bill Rice, Page Hansley and Graham and Lena Ritter. They four say they will sign the legal petition on behalf of other residents.

The oystermen backing the legal challenge have organized as a special project of a recently formed conservation group, the Onslow County Environmental Action Network.

MISSILE EXERCISE

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Taiwan will conduct an anti-aircraft missile firing exercise off its northern shores between June and July; and it has warned airplanes and ships to avoid the area.

SAVE ON A REAL BREAKTHROUGH IN FRESHNESS.

Try Maxwell House® in the new vacuum packed bag.

Look for the shiny blue bag at your grocer's. It's hard and wrinkled when you buy it, because we took the air out.

Listen closely when you open it. You'll hear the bag go "whoosh" and feel it become soft like an ordinary bag.

The coffee inside smells and tastes fresher than ever.

Then smell that aroma. It tells you that you've got the freshest, best tasting bag coffee that Maxwell House can give you.

With these coupons, you've got something more- real savings. Save up to 60¢ on your next two purchases of Maxwell House Coffee in the new vacuum packed bag.

Don't worry about buying two. Each bag will be fresh when you open it.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes between Apr. 18-22.

HOUSE

FREEZE By a vote of 221 for and 195 against, the House softened a White House-backed amendment dealing with the scheduled deployment of intermediate-range U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe next December.

The vote amended the nuclear freeze resolution (HJ Res 13) in a way that sanctions the new European missiles only "in the absence of a bilateral agreement embodying the (freeze) resolution's objectives."

Thus, if the freeze becomes law and is taken seriously by U.S. and Soviet negotiators, it could conceivably block the deployment of the new missiles, which the U.S. plans to install under an agreement with NATO allies.

The vote derailed an attempt to make the freeze makes irrelevant to the December deployment.

HJ Res 13 awaited a final vote, which could occur in late April.

Most members voting yes were pro-freezers who wanted the measure to influence the U.S. plan to install intermediate-range missiles in Western Europe next December.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Ike Andrews, D-4, Charles Britt, D-6, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Clarke, D-1.

Voting no: Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10.

Not voting: Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7.

PARITY By a vote of 204 for and 211 against, the House rejected an amendment to make the nuclear freeze measure (HJ Res 13) more palatable to President Reagan and others who oppose it.

Under the amendment, any freeze agreed to by the U.S. and Soviets would maintain far into the future the "essential equivalence" that now characterizes the superpowers' arsenals.

Supporters said the language would keep the freeze from locking the U.S. into inferiority, while opponents said it would permit modernization of arsenals and thus make a freeze unattainable.

Sponsor James Martin, R-N.C., said that "while we have that retaliatory, credible deterrent today, there is no guarantee that we will have it in the future, if a freeze imposes a look on present weapons and allows no way for us to modernize or no way to obtain offsetting reductions on the part of the Soviet Union."

Opponent Clement Zablocki, D-Wisc., said "the concept of obsolescence on which the amendment is based is simply too vague and elusive to be meaningful... For example, it could allow the Reagan Administration's entire nuclear arms buildup in an effort to correct obsolescence."

Members voting yes wanted to make the freeze resolution less distasteful to President Reagan and less injurious to their definition of national security.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Valentine, Whitley, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Ike Andrews, Britt, Rose, Clarke.

Not voting: Neal.

SENATE

BANKS By a vote of 55 for and 40 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to immediately repeal the new law requiring banks and other financial institutions to withhold, and sent to Uncle Sam, ten percent of the interest and dividends they pay to savers and investors.

The law, scheduled to take effect July 1, is not a tax hike but a collection device aimed at those who fail to report dividend and interest income.

Many of the 55 senators actually favored repeal, but voted to kill this amendment because they preferred using a separate, compromise vehicle to do away with the law.

The compromise succeeded (below) and the future of the withholding law now lies with the House. The Senate votes occurred during debate on a trade bill (S144) that awaited final action.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who voted to kill the amendment, said the Senate "is being stampeded into the delay of withholding by hundreds of thousands of pieces of mail instigated by the bankers' lobby. I believe the Senate has a responsibility not just to weigh the mail but to weigh the merits."

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., who sponsored the repeal amendment, said he preferred a clear-out vote on merits of repeal to a "vote for a so-called compromise."

Voting from North Carolina were John East, R, voted no. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

COMPROMISE The Senate then adopted, 90 for and five against, an amendment to delay the effective date of the withholding law for four years, until July 1, 1987.

The measure also stiffens voluntary reporting requirements and toughens penalties for those caught evading interest and dividend taxation. The delay will be even longer unless the government documents that less than 95 percent of interest and dividend tax liability is being unreported.

The compromise, a victory for the bankers' lobby because its effect is to repeal the law, was part of a trade bill (S 144) headed for final passage and the House.

Senators voting yes favored repealing or delaying the law calling for automatic withholding of ten percent of interest and dividends paid to savers and investors by financial institutions.

Voting no: Cranston of California, Danforth of Missouri, Kennedy of Massachusetts, Lautenberg of New Jersey, and Metzenbaum of Ohio.

Not voting: Weicker of Connecticut, Baker of Tennessee, Glenn of Ohio, and Hart of Colorado.

Voting yes: All other senators.

Lockheed Hopes Dimmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lockheed Corp. will make $566 million less than the contractor had anticipated in building 50 giant C-5B transport planes, an internal Air Force study indicates.

At the same time, the Air Force said that the $7.8 billion agreement with Lockheed signed last Dec. 31 will not be altered.

On March 30, the Air Force said, a memorandum signed by Leroy Baseman, associate director of its Aeronautical Systems Division, cautioned Air Force leaders against making any changes in the present contract that would require renegotiation.

"It is the position of the Baseman memo that the independent cost analysis ... indicates that the Air Force struck a good bargain in the $7.8 billion agreement, and that that agreement should not be altered," the Air Force said.

See Malaria As Making A Comeback

By JASPER BECKER
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland
(AP)—Since 1955, the World Health Organization has struggled against malaria, and for a time many experts believed the debilitating, and sometimes fatal disease, would become a forgotten danger.

But today, experts at WHO headquarters believe that 40 percent of mankind is still threatened by the disease — and that old solutions no longer work against new strains of mosquitos and malarial parasites.

"While past programs have not been a failure, we are still a long way from reaching our goal," said Ned Willard, a WHO spokesman. "Malaria is a problem most governments wish would just disappear, but instead it is worsening."

Many countries, which a few years ago were on the point of announcing the eradication of malaria, are struggling with an onslaught of pesticide-resistant mosquitos and drug-resistant parasites, the WHO says.

"Rumors that the disease has been eradicated in India are false," said Willard. "Nor are rumors that a new vaccine will soon solve the malaria problem entirely true."

WHO estimates new malaria cases at about 7.5 million per year, double the rate of 10 years ago, with most cases found in Southeast Asia, South America, Central America and the equatorial region of Africa. There is no accurate count of malaria deaths.

Although the United States is considered free of home-grown malaria, the number of cases doubled between 1978 and 1980, with 1,864 reported in 1980, said the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. But these cases involved travelers returning from outside the country or recent immigrants.

The agency expects between 700 and 800 cases in the United States during 1983, said Dr. Kent Campbell, the chief of the CDC's malaria branch.

The disease is caused by single-cell parasites, injected into the bloodstream by a mosquito. When the organisms enter the body, they become lodged in the liver and multiply. After several days, they travel into the bloodstream, causing high fevers and chills.

The parasites can attack different parts of the body. In the cerebral type of the disease, the onset is rapid with delirium and coma, and death can occur in several hours without return to consciousness.

And some strains of mosquitos are becoming more resistant to the pesticides used in eradication.

WHO researchers say that in 1968, 38 species of the Anopheles mosquitos, which carry the malaria parasite, were resistant to one or more types of commonly used pesticides. By 1975, however, the figure had risen to 42 species and by 1980, 51 species, including all the main malaria-carrying species, the researchers say.

"The intensive, and in many instances excessive and irrational, use of pesticides was responsible for the 'selection' of resistant mosquitos," Willard said. "Those which are resistant survive and go on to multiply."

Fortunately this has still to happen in most of South America, Africa and the Western Pacific but the problem is already serious in Asia, WHO experts say, adding they fear the disease will follow the same pattern it has taken in Southeast Asia and India.

Even more disturbing, the WHO says, has been the appearance of new strains of the most deadly form of the parasite, Plasmodium falciparum, which do not respond to the drugs commonly available.

These new parasite strains have spread rapidly, the WHO says. In the Americas, forms of falciparum resistant to chloroquine, the favorite medicine, are found in 10 countries as far north as Panama.

In Asia, they are found as far West as India and as far East as some of the Pacific Islands, the WHO says.

Liberty Ship Is The Last Of Its Breed

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The last of the Liberty ships that formed America's "Bridge to Victory" in World War II has been turned into a national memorial by a crew of volunteers, many of them veteran seamen who dodged torpedoes and bombs on harrowing wartime runs.

The SS Jeremiah O'Brien is the last unaltered example of the 2,751 cargo ships built between 1941 and 1945 in 18 U.S. shipyards.

The veteran of the Normandy invasion was pulled out of mothballs after 33 years in the reserve fleet. Following extensive work, the 441-foot vessel sailed out of nearby Vallejo under its own power in 1979.

Today the O'Brien is open to visitors and even takes cruises on San Francisco Bay, including big one in May when the ship sails out of the Golden Gate for ceremonies honoring those who died at sea.

"The ship's about 90 per cent restored," says Jim Paul, a retired merchant marine captain who works aboard the O'Brien as a boatswain.

"Among other things, we have the barrels for anti-aircraft guns but need other parts for them," said Paul, who survived the 1940 sinking of the Liberty ship Baton Rouge on one of his many World War II voyages.

It's hard to know where to begin in telling the story of the squat ships dubbed "ugly ducklings" by President Franklin D. Roosevelt when he was shown the first blueprints.

But if the story can be summed up in one word it would be "Murmansk," the Soviet destination for so many ships, and a word that never came back.

The voyage was a matter of submarine and air attacks in which 97 cargo ships went to the bottom. The convoys which got through carried vital armaments including more than 22,000 planes and millions of rifles.

"Some of these ships were built in five days," said Harry Morgan, the O'Brien's chief engineer who came under seven air attacks while aboard Liberties on runs to Egypt. "If they made one trip they paid for themselves."

"The ships' crews consisted of merchant marine sailors and Navy armed guard who manned the anti-aircraft guns and three-and-a-half inch guns at the bow and stern. At battle stations, civilian sailors served as ammunition handlers, passing shells to the Navy men."

"They killed some 100 in a barroom brawl in England and the British kept us in a 10-day detention camp. They were the best of us."

Men who sailed the Liberty ships in the war often told the O'Brien.

"We seem to go on of armed guard men because they were so much younger," Paul said. "They came right out of boot camp."

Paul says some veterans are surprised when they learn there's still a Liberty ship around.

"Several guys who sailed on Liberties found us just by chance," he said. "One saw us from a cruise ship and couldn't believe it. He thought the ships had all been broken up for scrap."

The O'Brien was saved from that fate thanks to those who remembered the vital part the Liberty ship played in America's wartime history.

Highest Ratings For N.C. Bonds

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Bonds issued by North Carolina have been awarded the highest rating possible by Moody's and Standard & Poor's, the two national rating agencies which rank debt issues, a state official said.

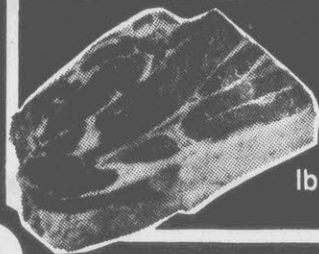

"We are indeed gratified that we have again merited the top rating for our issues of bonds," state Treasurer Harlan Boyles said. "North Carolina is one of only 12 states currently holding this top rank, testifying to the high regard in which our fiscal and financial practices are held in the nation."

Lowe's Sheds Some Light On Solar Homes

The "Hallmark" passive solar home has been carefully designed to insure more even temperatures in both winter and summer. This is achieved by utilizing the sun's energy to supplement heating requirements in the winter. An overhang & other features help reduce your cooling needs in the summer. The result is a lower yearly utility bill, which makes this house more affordable in the long run. And the method is simple. The home is heated through direct gain. Solar heat is stored in water modules and distributed throughout the house. Come in & we'll tell you more about it!
