Longer N. C. School Year Is Favored By Gov. Hunt

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is not facing the educational crisis described by a national commission but the state should lengthen its public school day and year, Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday.

"North Carolina's schools are getting better, not worse," Hunt said at his weekly news conference. "Our students are learning more, not less."

He pointed to recent achievement test scores showing North Carolina students with the highest and lowest abilities were improving while not all of their national counterparts showed progress.

Hunt also blasted a U.S. Senate proposal to abolish the federal tobacco program and said the state's senatorial delegation has "exacerbated" problems for leaf farmers.

The comments followed the release Tuesday of a critical report on education by the National Commission on Excellence in Education. It said that tougher standards, longer school days and higher teacher pay are needed to reverse a period of "educational disarmament." "I think this national report demonstrates that North Carolina is on the right track in education and has been on the right track for the past six years," he said.

Hunt said lengthening the school years and days is a matter for the state Board of Education to consider but said he had no specific suggestions for how much longer to make the two.

He agreed with the national report that tougher school courses and higher teacher pay are needed to improve education. More qualified teachers also must be found and some teachers must be employed year-round, Hunt said.

President Reagan's response to the educational crisis has been "sadly disappointing," Hunt said. Instead of trying to offer leadership, Reagan has proposed tax credits for private school tuition and dismantling the Department of Education, Hunt said.

"The main emphasis in Washington ought to be the productivity of our people.... In areas like math and science they ought to step in and help meet a pressing, critical national need," he said. Hunt said his 1983-85 budget would lift the freeze on state workers' and teachers' salaries, giving them the equivalent of a 5 percent salary increase. Hunt said that was the first time in years that the state has offered teachers a raise higher than inflation, which is expected to be 3 percent.

Seventh Gain In A Row For Indicators

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The government's main barometer of future economic strength rose 1.5 percent last month, officials reported today. It was the seventh gain in a row and an apparent new sign the young economic recovery will last.

The forecasting gauge, the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators, is a compilation of forward-pointing statistics covering manufacturing, employment, prices and other areas.

Based on past experience, the indicators forecast economic changes that will likely occur nine months in the future. So it now appears the recovery will last at least through the end of the year.

The March gain in the indicators was slightly greater than the 1.4 percent in February, but well below the 3.2 percent of January.

Seven of the 11 available indicators rose in March, with the biggest contribution coming from an increase in the prices of sensitive raw and semi-finished materials.

Although price increases are not good news in all ways, they can often be a sign of rising demand, and therefore an indicator of improving economic conditions.

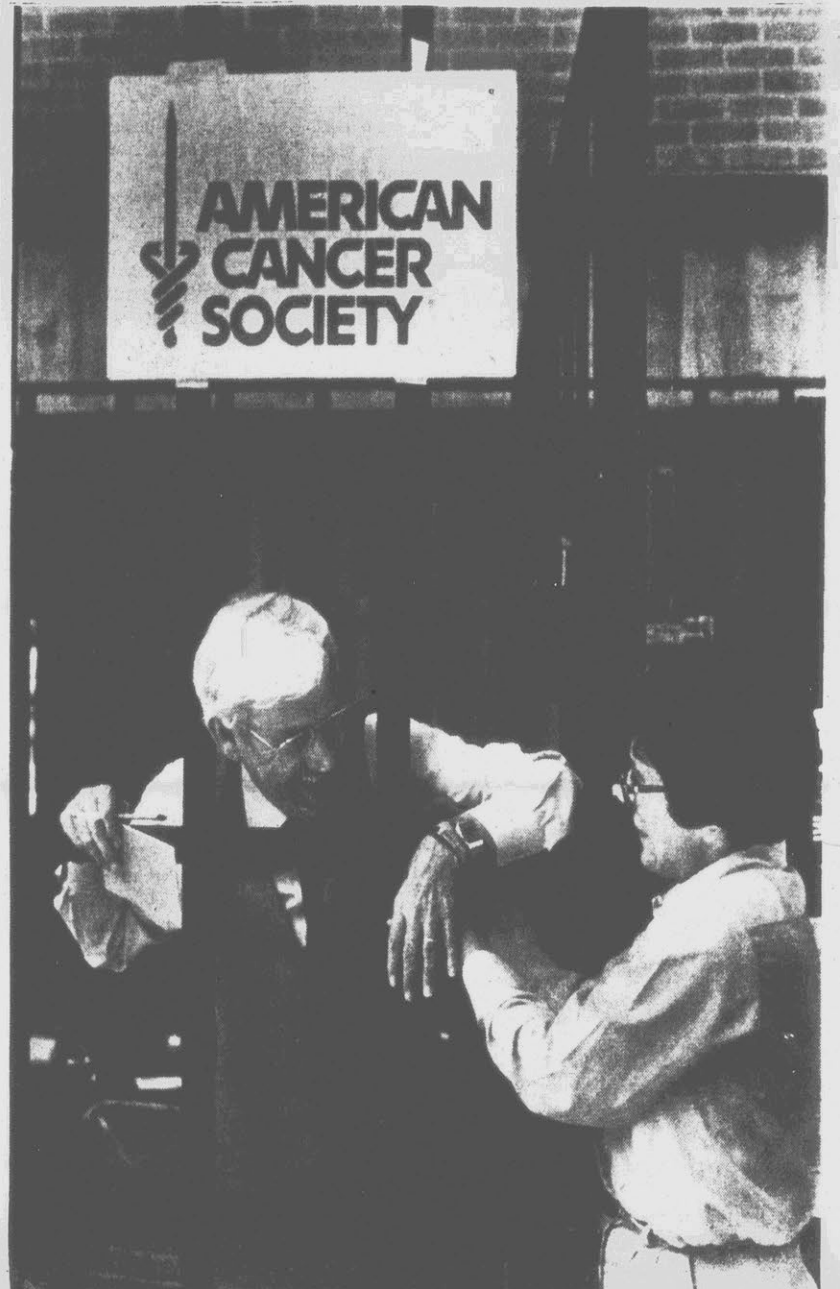

Also pushing the index upward were increases for the average workweek, formation of new businesses, contracts and orders for new plants and equipment, stock prices and the money supply. In addition, deliveries were slower than in February, indicating a greater volume of business.

Index components showing a worse performance in March than in February included an increase in initial claims for unemployment benefits, and decreases in building permits, outstanding credit and orders for consumer goods and materials.

The overall index rose in March to 149.8 percent of the 1967 base. The accompanying Index of Coincident Indicators, designed to measure current conditions rather than forecast those of the future, rose 0.7 percent to 134 percent of its base during March.

The coincident index had dropped 0.5 percent in February after rising 1.3 percent in January.

RESPONSE GRATIFYING

Jean Ellis of the Pitt County Department of Social Services says she is gratified by the response from Hotline readers to her appeal for someone to relate to a young man about to be released from Cherry Hospital. A young minister who plays basketball and practices karate has volunteered to work with him, she said, and a couple has agreed to begin steps toward being licensed as a foster home possibly suitable for him. "This was one of the hardest placements I've ever had to make," Mrs. Ellis said, "and it's great to know that there are people this willing to help."

Laupus Not Alarmed By Family Medicine Ranks

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University School of Medicine Dean William Laupus said today he is not alarmed by the percentage of this year's ECU medical school graduates who have indicated they will specialize in family medicine.

Fifteen percent of this year's class — six of 41 — say they plan to do their residency training in family medicine after graduation May 6. Nationally, the figure is 13 percent. Medical College of Virginia, which Dr. Laupus said he uses as a standard, is the top school in the United States in the production of family doctors. Its percentage is 25.

Next year, according to preferences already stated by members of ECU's upcoming senior class, the percentage will be 18 percent, he said, emphasizing that the percentage was based only on a statement of preference.

"We had an unusual first year," Laupus said of the 43 percent average in 1981 when 12 of 28 graduates said they would pursue residencies in family medicine.

"Our second year was about what we'd have expected — 11 percent or (Please turn to Page 12)

Jim Graham 'Positive' About N. C. Crop Year

By SUE HINSON

Heavy rains and unpredictable weather have kept most eastern North Carolina farmers away from their fields this spring, but N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said he felt fairly positive about the outcome of this year's crop inspite of the planting delay.

Graham, the featured speaker at the annual meeting of the Mid-East Commission Thursday night, warned that the tobacco program would be in dire straits if farmers do not unite. The Mid-East Commission is designated as the 'Same As Our Warmest Days In August'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

For Florent and Sylviane Coron the relatively cool April weather when they arrived in Greenville last Saturday "was very nice, warm to us. When we left Mont Joli there was still four and one-half feet of snow on the ground," Florent commented. "The warm day yesterday (Wednesday) was the same as our warmest days in July and August."

The Carons are among eight Canadians from Rimouski County in Quebec Province, about 70 miles northwest of the northern tip of Maine, who are visiting families in Greenville this week as Canadian ambassadors to eastern North Carolina. Their host family in Greenville is Jerry and Donna Flake.

The Carons were emphatic about being charmed by more than just the weather in Greenville. "The people we've met have been very friendly, very helpful in being sure that we get to see as much as possible," Sylviane said. "We have had a very good time. Maybe we have been a little too busy sometimes," she smiled.

"And the town of Greenville, with its many trees and nice houses, we find very beautiful," Florent noted. "The flowers in bloom here we will not see in Mont Joli until June."

Mont Joli, a town of about 6,000, is situated on the St. Lawrence River about 20 miles northwest of the county capital of Rimouski "in an area that is 95 percent French speaking with only about five percent who can speak English," Florent said. A veteran of four years service in Canadian Aviation, the equivalent to the Air Force in the United States, he is employed with an import-export firm "that deals mostly in fruits and vegetables. The produce we import comes in most part from California and Florida."

"My work is known in Canada as a notary," Sylviane said. "It is the same as a lawyer or attorney here.

My work is in the field of real estate, translations, deeds and trust funds. I do no work in the criminal field."

The Carons left their two children, 14-year old Martin and 11 year-old Nadine, in Canada. "They are in school and could not come," Sylviane explained.

Mentioning they have frequently visited New England, "and especially Maine, where we have relatives," Florent said "this is our first trip south of New England. We have before made a trip to Mexico and one to Cuba."

"After this visit in Greenville, we are already thinking about a return visit here in the summer months so we can bring the children. They would like very much the Greenville scenery, and also the ocean and beaches at Beaufort," Sylviane said. (A visit to Beaufort, Atlantic Beach and the Fort Macon area was one of several tours taken by the ambassadors during the week).

Her Business-Like Approach Is A Help When Time Is Limited

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) —

Leona Rocha believes in treating home sewing like a business.

"If your time is limited, ask yourself, 'How much time am I going to put in and how much am I going to get out of it?'"

A mother may sew children's clothes to save money instead of buying ready-to-wear that is quickly outgrown, she said.

"We talk about skill levels and time," said the host of The Sewing Show, which debuted recently on cable TV through Hearst-ABC Video Services.

She warns against fantasizing.

"You see a fabric you know will make a knock-out dress and you buy an 80-piece pattern," she said, ruefully recalling an early project of her own.

Well, not actually an 80 piece pattern, she added, but it was too complicated for her skill level at the time.

Ms. Rocha, who trained as a designer in the garment industry, calls DV a natural medium for home sewing instruction.

Among other things, she said, it allows women viewers to satisfy their curiosity about how easy it is to sew, and gives a host the chance to ask professionals to demonstrate industry techniques that save time and effort and give a professional look.

Her show is aired four times a week, twice during the day and twice during the evening, unlike two other cable TV sewing programs that are daytime only: a fashion and home sewing show with actress-dancer Carol Lawrence and guests, also on Hearst-ABC's Daytime, and CBN Cable's Sewing Etc., with Donna Salyers. Ms. Salyers is a monthly columnist for a sewing industry trade magazine and the home sewing expert of Cincinnati's Mid-Day news magazine show.

Ms. Rocha attributes renewed interest in home sewing to the state of the economy and changing fashions.

"We're out of jeans, into dresses. Young people are sewing. They're wearing skirts to school."

Women's reasons for sewing are as varied as the clothing and home furnishings they make.

Ms. Rocha's 13-week series includes a segment on sewing for profit, for people who want to do alterations for retailers and dry cleaners; one on lingerie, and others on such techniques as dart manipulation and other alterations of patterns and ready-to-wear.

"We realize many women viewers will use some of the information for ready-to-wear," she said. "There isn't a ready-to-wear garment that I put on without altering."

For those who start with a paper pattern, she emphasizes the importance of perfecting the pattern before cutting the garment, and shows how to do it.

"Many new sewers assume if they buy the pattern correctly they never have to check their measurements against it."

She recommends choosing simple patterns with as few pieces as possible for expensive, easily damaged fabrics such as silks and synthetic suedes.

The shawl segment in the series is designed to encourage beginners, "women looking to satisfy their curiosity about how easy it is to sew, getting women to think about how to make and wear shawls and scarves."

Other things viewers will learn from The Sewing Show:

—To fringe a fabric, slash the edges every 2 inches or so to the depth of the fringe. It's easier and faster to remove short lengths of thread than long.

—To adjust the bust point on a pattern, measure upward from the waist, which is marked on all patterns, not downward from the neckline or shoulder, which may vary.

—Buy patterns by bust size and make alterations elsewhere as necessary. Ms. Rocha's unorthodox method of determining bust size uses the tape measure not at bust point level but at the highest bust level, just under the arms. This compensates for differences in brassiere cup size, she said.

—Misses patterns are sized for B cup, and half sizes, for C cup. One show segment shows how to alter patterns for other cup sizes.

—A button at bust point level prevents gaping, and one show demonstrates how to measure patterns for that adjustment.

Dear Abby

Good News For Divorcee

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the lady who signed herself "Dallas." She was divorced after 28 years of marriage, and though her ex-husband had remarried, she never had. Now her ex-husband is deceased, and she wanted to know if she was considered a widow. Although society may not look at her as a widow, the Social Security Administration does!

To be eligible for widow's or widower's benefits, one must be at least 60 years of age, or between 50 and 60 and disabled, and have been married to the insured number holder for at least 10 years. He or she must also be unmarried or remarried after age 60.

Of course, as with any Social Security benefit, there is a limit on how much a beneficiary can earn per year, but I know there are many elderly men and women out there struggling along financially who are unaware of this resource available to them. Spouse's benefits are also available to people who are divorced after 10 or more years of marriage.

A SOCIAL SECURITY EMPLOYEE

DEAR EMPLOYEE: I am sure many readers are eligible for these benefits but are not aware of it. Your letter will not only make their day, but their week, their month and their year. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: What should be done about the following? A man drops his wife off in front of a well-known cafeteria that is filling up fast for the dinner crowd. He drives off to park the car while his wife gets in line.

The man comes back about 15 minutes later. By then the wife is already at the head of the line yelling, "Yoo hoo, Honey — I'm here!"

The husband squeezes in ahead of somebody to pick up a tray and silverware, then goes to the head of the line explaining to everybody, "Excuse me. We're together."

Abby, is it fair to people who have had to wait their turn in line? And is it worth making a stink about?

BATTLE-AX FROM BAYTOWN, TEXAS

DEAR BATTLE-AX: It's something like filing a joint tax return — a break for a married couple. It's not fair. But who said life was always fair? Forget it.

DEAR ABBY: How can I find the perfect guy? I'm 31, single, not bad-looking and I've dated loads of guys, but there's something wrong with every guy I go out with. They're either too short or I don't like the way they dress or look.

The one I'm going with now is French and Indian. He's real sweet and good to me, but he's short and I don't like short men. Most of my girlfriends go with tall guys, but for some reason I always wind up with the short ones. I'm 5 feet 5 myself. If I wore heels I'd be taller than some of the guys I date.

I'd like to marry again. I've been married twice to guys who were taller than me and it didn't work out. Am I too picky or what? I'm not looking for a real handsome man — just a tall one.

LIKE THEM TALL

DEAR LIKE: There are no perfect guys — or gals, either. Since "tall" is so important to you, don't waste your time on men who don't qualify. Do I think you're too picky? Yes. You struck out with two tall guys. Doesn't that tell you something?

DEAR ABBY: Are we ever on the spot? I will be married soon, and my fiancé and I are putting on the wedding. We are on a very tight budget so we had to keep the guest list down. In order to do so, we decided that we couldn't include any children.

We addressed our invitations to "Mr. and Mrs." Several relatives, and some close friends, have called and asked why their children were not invited, and we told them quite frankly that we had to keep the cost down.

Well, my fiancé's cousin asked if she could bring her two teen-aged daughters and her 9-year-old son if she picks up the tab for them! (They live in town.)

Now what should we do? We really don't want any children.

ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: Tell your fiancé's cousin that since no other children will be there, it would be better if she did not bring hers.

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Designers Show New Lines

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When people speak of "Oscar" and "Geoffrey" along Fashion Avenue, there's no mistaking who they mean. The latest collections from these designers show why.

Oscar de la Renta proved himself a master of evening elegance with silk, velvet and lace, while Geoffrey Beene mixed sequins, tassels and braid for the interesting details for which he is so noted.

John Anthony, who also showed his designs Wednesday, is a lesser-known light but continues to demonstrate the master tailoring that has made him highly regarded in fashion circles.

The couture evening look is decidedly glamorous, with luxury fabrics in abundance.

There was a distinct Latin flavor in De la Renta's group of black and gold lace blouses over silk embroidered long skirts, and black velvet and gold lace dresses with lacy tiers and bodices.

Electrifying colors such as red, violet, turquoise, teal, fuchsia and peacock blue added more excitement for evening.

Softest cashmere appeared in dresses, jackets and jumpers in standout shades of teal and red.

Detail is important for this designer and was expertly used in a turquoise wool jacket with Bavarian embroidery over a challis blouse, red cashmere sweater and gray flannel pants.

In the sequin group, the brightest offerings were a collection of multi-colored argyle sweater tops over tulip-wrapped, silk skirts. The colors — blue, green and burgundy sequins — were eye-popping and so were the prices — $3,000.

No one said De la Renta was for the slender of purse. And his burgundy wedding gown, at $10,000, proved that. But it was a wonderful taffeta gown with red velvet back heavily accented with large fake jewels and gold embroidery topped with a gold lace mantilla.

At Beene's, there were earthy colors such as olive, slate blue and brown for day, and metallic granite, copper and gold with quilted orb patterns for evening.

Always one for surprises, Beene this year is showing a new ultra-short skirt length — inches above the knee.

Jackets were classic Beene, loose and comfortable-looking with softly rounded shoulders. A short navy jacket with three-quarter sleeves was especially nice over a huggy navy sweater dress with boat neck.

For evening, Beene featured sequined gowns in black, copper and plum with circular patterned orbs and silk gowns with quilted bolero jackets.

Black silk pajamas were trimmed in gold at the hem and waist and had a red quilted front and back yoke with gold dangling tassels.

John Anthony, on the other hand, does not go in for as many baubles and beads, although he offered sequined sweaters for evening.

His forte was in the tailored coats and suits that have made him so respected as a craftsman.

Coats were big and long in muted forest green, chocolate brown and bitter-sweet. Most were shown with big dolman sleeves and huge square shoulders that imparted an air of authority.

The big shoulders were restated in a forest green sweater dress that buttoned up the front or could be worn backwards buttoned up the back.

Anthony's collection was smaller than his better-known fellow designers, but his nuggets were pure mastery.

RHUBARB SHERBET
Adapted from "Feasts for All Seasons" by Roy Andries de Groot (McGraw-Hill).

1 1/2 pounds pink or red rhubarb, trimmed
1/2 cup maple syrup
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup orange juice

Cut rhubarb crosswise into 1/2-inch slices — there should be 3 to 4 cups. In a 3-quart saucepot bring rhubarb and 1 cup water to Place in freezer until cool. Beat eggs until foamy; gradually beat in sugar until thick and ivory color; stir into rhubarb mixture. Freeze in a 2-quart ice cream freezer, according to manufacturer's directions. Makes 2 quarts.

Study All Requests

The Pitt County Commissioners have begun a series of budget workshop sessions where various department heads are being heard on requests for next year's funding.

The requests are characterized by projected increases in spending. There are various reasons including loss of federal revenues and increased demands for services. Nevertheless the higher spending needs are reflected in the requested budgets.

It is a sure thing that there will be an increase in the overall county budget for 1983-84. Inflation is less of a factor than it has been in recent years, but picking up some revenues lost because of federal grants and revenues is. So, too, is the county's general growth, some of which will mean increased property tax revenues to offset the costs.

The commissioners should study all the requests carefully. We must provide for our needs but the funds are not available to greatly expand services.

Perspective Needed

It is not so unusual for world attention to be redirected to historical figures. This time, it's Adolf Hitler's turn.

Maybe it was triggered by the capture and return for trial of another Nazi who figured in the Holocaust. Or, perhaps we are simply witnessing another "turn of the wheel" to recapture memories of the past.

The trigger was discovery of so-called Hitler diaries, and subsequent publication by the Sunday Times of London.

Even The Times speculates suspicion and disbelief are the likely main reactions to the diaries. Still, they were going through with their publishing because fraud or not, the "diaries" pose interesting reading, and there is at least some grounds for belief in their authenticity.

Our own reaction is one of skepticism.

The world is full of con artists and forgers who inhabit the fields of art, literature, diplomacy and history. One cannot easily forget The Times once bought Benito Mussolini's "diaries" only to subsequently learn they were written by two old ladies who made it all up.

Beirut Bombing Hurt CIA Office

WASHINGTON — Although the Central Intelligence Agency is not talking about it, the April 18 bombing of the J.S. Embassy in Beirut wiped out almost the entire CIA station at one of the world's most vital points for collection of intelligence.

Precise names and numbers of CIA dead were not disclosed, beyond the death of the agency's authoritative Mideast analyst, the highly-esteemed Robert C. Ames. Word of the CIA wipeout was made available from Pentagon insiders who learned the facts from the embassy's defense attaches.

Ames, 49, had become indispensable to Ronald Reagan's Mideast peace plan, regularly briefing the president in the Oval Office on past history and future probabilities in the Arab-Israeli struggle. He had arrived in Beirut only the evening before the explosion. He apparently was visiting the office of the local CIA station chief when the bomb went off. It probably never will be known whether the attackers were targeting Ames and his fellow CIA men, but that possibility cannot be completely ruled out.

John Glenn's Muscle

After we reported a less-than-solid phalanx of support for Sen. John Glenn's presidential bid in his home state of Ohio, he pounced with uncharacteristic speed and muscle to pick up two important stragglers.

Glenn paid a personal visit to Rep. Ed Feighan of Cleveland, who had told us he could not come out against Walter F.

Mondale and would surely endorse nobody for the next several months. Glenn forcefully told Feighan he needed his endorsement immediately in answer to our column, not six months from now. The clincher that brought the congressman to submission was his reminder of support for Feighan's campaign for mayor in Cleveland in 1977.

After our column appeared, Glenn also contacted and won endorsement from State Attorney General Tony Celebrezze, who told us a few days earlier he had no intention of endorsing anybody. Mondale operatives claim they earlier had a commitment from Celebrezze to back the former vice president. His switch leaves Sen. Howard Metzenbaum as the biggest Ohio fish not in Glenn's net.

CIA Director William J. Casey is secretly but forcefully urging President Reagan to go public on Soviet violations of the SALT nuclear treaties and other U.S. Soviet arms control agreements.

Casey, who packs a wallop in Ronald Reagan's White House despite official silence on almost all political questions, has made his position on this issue known to the president. Even if allegations of Soviet cheating cannot be proved beyond the slightest doubt, the CIA chief believes the recent proliferation of major incidents that smack of outright treaty violations require public airing by the U.S. That includes Soviet testing of two apparently different new missiles in the past six months.

Robots Don't Buy Sneakers...Do They?

Widget was very excited and told me to come over to his sneaker factory right away. "I just hired my first robot system, and I want you to see it."

The gate to the factory was closed, but when I drove up to it a voice, almost human, said, "Can I help you?"

"I'm here to see Mr. Widget," and I gave my name.

In 10 seconds the voice responded, "You may drive to the main building and park in visitor's slot number two."

Widget was waiting at the door, all smiles. He put a plastic card into a slot, a door opened, and we walked into his factory. There wasn't a human being in sight, but sneakers were flying off the assembly line and being stuffed into boxes.

"It's pretty noisy," I said.

"Doesn't bother the robots," Widget yelled. "They don't know the difference between machine noise and Muzak."

We went up some stairs to a glass-enclosed booth.

When Widget shut the door he said, "I want you to meet my Master Robot, Turnbill. He is programmed to program the robots on the floor."

Turnbill gave me a steely look and reluctantly put out his arm which I shook.

"How many sneakers did we make today, Turnbill?" Widget asked.

Turnbill's lights blinked, and a deep voice said, "12,890."

Widget rubbed his hands. "I used to make that many in a week. And I had to pay overtime for three shifts. Now I can manufacture the same number in a day, and I don't even have to worry about the robots taking coffee breaks. No social security, no health care payments, no pensions," Widget said, patting Turnbill's back. "And every one of my robots is tax-depreciable, which is more than I could say for my ex-workers."

Turnbill started spitting out a readout. "Glitch on shoelace hole maker, third robot malfunctioning on line one."

Widget said, "It would have taken me a month to find out who was screwing up my shoelace holes if I had a human being on the line. Now I know in matter of seconds."

"What will you do?"

"We'll dump him, and replace him with a robot who can do the job. The sneaker union would never allow me to fire anybody, no matter how bad the person was screwing up my shoes. Nice work, Turnbill. I'm going to make you a vice president."

"Thank you, sir," Turnbill's voice synthesizer said. "Any decision on an assistant microprocessor to help me in packaging?"

"I'm taking it up with the board next week, Turnbill. As I told you, the board has ordered me to put a freeze on buying new microprocessors."

"Why is that?" I asked.

"We're making more sneakers than we ever made before. But we can't seem to sell them."

"Maybe the reason is that robots don't wear sneakers."

"What does that mean?"

"Well, you've laid off your workers and now they don't have money to buy sneakers."

"There are lots of workers in other factories that need sneakers."

"Yes, but they're being replaced by robots as well. Robots are great for what they do, but they're lousy consumers."

Widget looked over at Turnbill nervously. "Don't talk so loud," he whispered to me.

"I don't care," I said.

"This country's success was based on the fact that the people who made our products could afford to buy them. You've replaced your workers with robots and you're saving a fortune in salaries, but you're now up to your ears in sneakers."

"But if I don't have robots making my sneakers, I can't afford to compete with the sneakers that are being imported from abroad," Widget said tearfully.

"What should I do?"

"Why don't you ask Turnbill?"

Widget hit several buttons on Turnbill's head.

Turnbill blinked several times and then said, "I'm sorry, I'm in production — not sales."

Strength For Today

President Woodrow Wilson once said, "Human freedom consists in perfect adjustments of human interests and human activities and human energies."

By this statement he meant that real freedom is not simply doing what we want when we want to — which, for most people, is very rarely possible — but instead in feeling no friction or conflict with the forces which inevitably must govern much of our lives.

In one sense, no one is really free. We are all subject to the limitations of our mortal nature. We are dependent upon food and warmth, subject to sickness and death, restricted in many ways by our feeble senses and slight powers.

Yet, once we we accept these boundaries to our freedom, we can be happy within them, if we will.

"Perfect adjustment" — it is an answer which will help more than will escape or rebellion along the road to freedom.

parallel. In the aftermath of Vietnam, Congress imposed new and stringent restrictions on the authority of any president to send American forces into areas in which they could face combat. Decisions that once could be made at the White House now must be affirmed — and can be undone — at the Capitol.

"The Congress shares both the power and the responsibility for our foreign policy," Reagan said. Now he needs to convince Congress that his Central American program is the right one.

Reagan Plants Seed For Major Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan may be planting the seed of a major issue in the 1984 presidential campaign as he crusades for U.S. military aid to shield El Salvador and all Central America from communists.

It is not a new topic, but he raised it to new heights with his address to the nation and a joint session of Congress. The forum assured the national television coverage that carried his case to the voters.

He has said repeatedly that he means to keep fighting in Congress for the aid program that so far has been slashed to $30 million, little more than a third of what he wanted.

That will take intensive lobbying and a public campaign likely to spill over into the election year ahead.

So far, the dominant political issue of the Reagan years has been the troubled economy, which now appears to be headed out of the long recession. The Democrats aren't going to relinquish that as an issue, nor is Reagan as he points to inflation curbed and recovery taking shape.

Now U.S. policy and military assistance to Central American allies could become a second front in the political debate. It will be a particularly divisive one for the parallel Reagan says is invalid: the comparison with U.S. aid in the early phases of the war in South Vietnam.

Reagan addressed that point directly in his Wednesday night address.

"Let me say to those who invoke the memory of Vietnam:

"There is no thought of sending American combat troops to Central America; they are not needed — indeed, they have not been requested there."

"There is no comparison whatsoever between this situation and Vietnam," Reagan said earlier in an interview with USA Today. "There is not and never has been any thought of sending troops anywhere here in the Americas — nor are they asked for or wanted."

"The whole thing was totally different ... to say nothing of being 10,000 miles away."

But the immediate Democratic response was centered on the comparison with Vietnam. Sen. Christopher Dodd of Connecticut, TV spokesman for the Democrats, said "the painful truth is that many of our highest officials seem to know as little about Central America in 1983 as we knew about Indochina in 1963."

Dodd said that increasing military assistance and training is a prescription for defeat. "The American people know that we have been down that road before — and that it only leads to a dark tunnel of endless intervention."

That debate is certain to continue. It already has had an impact on public opinion; a Louis Harris poll published in USA Today reports that 61 percent of the American people believe "sending military supplies and advisers to El Salvador could create a situation similar to Vietnam."

For all the differences Reagan cited, there are reminders of what happened 20 years ago, when a Democratic president was saying that American troops would not be sent to fight in Vietnam.

"I say to you tonight there can be no question," Reagan said, "the national security of all the Americas is at stake in Central America. If we cannot defend ourselves there, we cannot expect to prevail elsewhere. Our credibility would collapse, our alliances would crumble, and the safety of our homeland would be put at jeopardy."

With the exception of geography, those arguments were part of the debate over Vietnam.

But another legacy of that era supports Reagan's argument that there is no

Death By Any Means Raises Questions

it deters pre-meditated murders. The other is punishment: You took a life, your punishment is the loss of your own life.

Davis says the law specifically identifies punishment — vengeance — as the purpose behind a state-ordered execution and he doesn't personally think the death penalty serves as much of a deterrent.

Gov. Jim Hunt, on the other hand, says "you don't do it for vengeance. If the death penalty doesn't serve the purpose of deterrence ... I don't think you can justify it morally."

How does the injection method affect this debate. Some would say that death by injection reduces the deterrent effect of capital punishment. It removes the threat of a grotesque death in a gas chamber from the thoughts of a person who might be considering murder.

Similarly, the argument is made that we've already significantly reduced the deterrence factor by eliminating public executions. This school of thought holds that public hangings on the courthouse square would really set people to thinking before they murdered someone. An execution in a prison, far removed from public sight, doesn't have the impact of a public event. It would be even less of a deterrent if we simply "put people to sleep" permanently, this argument wages.

On the flip side, one Raleigh lawyer argued before the committee that the ease of death by injection might make juries more willing to execute. The grotesque nature of the gas chamber now helps assure that only our most heinous criminals get the death penalty, he argued.

Davis won't accept either of these arguments. He doesn't accept the deterrence theory and he thinks juries realize that putting someone to sleep means putting them to death.

That brings us to the second point: What constitutes the death penalty? When someone is sentenced to death, is his sentence just the loss of his life or does it also include some preliminary pain? In days of old, pain certainly accompanied the death. People were crucified, drawn and quartered, hung, guillotined and firing squads brought quicker death, less pain. For those who seek vengeance, the argument is often made that the criminal ought to suffer a little first — maybe as long as his victim suffered. A gas chamber certainly involves suffering. For those who seek to deter, it can be argued that the grotesqueness of a gas chamber death enhances the deterrence factor.

Davis says we ought not seek to impose pain with the punishment. The loss of one's life is sufficient punishment. "Their punishment is the loss of their life, not the pain of dying," he said.

Next to abortion, the death penalty may be the most difficult moral question currently in the public policy arena. As Davis learned, it's difficult to discuss any aspect of the death penalty question without bringing the whole debate back to the table.

N.C. Tenure Act Fails In House By Vote Of 49-56

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Mecklenburg County delegation hoped to revive a bill today that would exempt the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system from North Carolina's tenure act after the measure failed to pass the state House Thursday by a 49-56 vote.

The surprising setback came after only minor debate on the bill, which would let county schools wait up to five years before awarding tenure to teachers, instead of three years.

Rep. Phillip Berry, D-Mecklenburg, said the bill was a way of "keeping good teachers in the classroom," adding that half the county's teachers leave before they reach the age of retirement.

Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, said current policies are not working because low pay the lack of room for advancement often send teachers into administration or other fields.

Several lawmakers said the local bill might spark a statewide trend, but many said that might be to its credit.

"This is the first step of many trials to change the direction of education in this state," said Rep. Joe Mayretic, D-Edgecombe. "And change we must."

"It might be the best trend to happen to this state in a long, long time," added Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir.

Much of the opposition came from Republicans, with all present except Rep. Leroy Spoon, R-Mecklenburg, voting against the plan.

"I do think we should treat all of the teachers in the state the same, including Mecklenburg County," said Rep. Robert Brawley, R-Iredell.

Rep. Frank Redding, R-Randolph, said "it's just a chipping away of the tenure act. It might even be a part of a plan to do away with the tenure act."

After the vote, Helms and other members of the Mecklenburg delegation circulated among the members to see whether objections could be countered.

"I'm afraid that the fact that it was a local bill ... makes a real difference in a controversial piece of legislation," said Helms. "A lot of people thought it did away with tenure."

Helms said among options being considered is a suggestion by Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, that the county plan be made a pilot program in a statewide bill. In other legislative action:

Budget Debate
A proposal to cut $500,000 from the North Carolina Microelectronics Center budget and the methods some appropriations subcommittees used to find other cuts sparked debate in a legislative budget committee.

Sen. Jack Childers, D-Davidson, asked that the Joint Appropriations Base Budget Committee consider the center during discussion of the expansion budget.

Appropriations subcommittee recommended cutting $240,029 from the project in 1983-84 and $268,797 in 1984-85. About $17 million has been appropriated to the project.

But Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, explained that the center is considered part of the base budget because some of the money pays for "operation of a newly completed facility."

The committee, which earlier approved the cuts, agreed to hold the matter for another day but did not reverse the vote.

After the decision, several members questioned so-called "cuts" that were derived from "underestimates" of department revenues.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, co-chairman of the Base Budget Subcommittee on Justice and Public Safety, suggested the cuts were not proper.

"You said to reduce the appropriation and that's what we did," he said. "We didn't go guessing about the future or what would happen to some bill."

Jim Newlin, a legislative analyst for the subcommittee on general government, said there was nothing wrong with the seeming slight-of-hand. He said when previous department receipts were underestimated there was money left over that could be used to reduce the amount needed in the budget.

Rep. Charles Hughes, R-Henderson, suggested all committees should be given the opportunity to reconsider their budgets in that light.

"I was not attacking your committee at all," he said. "I was just jealous because we didn't do it."

Swain agreed, saying such manipulations could have helped his committee avoid cutting much-needed manpower in the Justice Department.

PAC Contributions
Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, filed a bill to let political action committees registered with the Federal Election Commission contribute to North Carolina campaigns provided they give no more than allowed under current state laws.

Civil Rights
Rep. Ken Spaulding, D-Durham, filed bills to fund a full-time civil rights coordinator in the Division of Social Services and to pay for monitoring civil rights compliance in nursing homes.

Helmet Law
The House Finance Committee sent to subcommittee a bill that would give people aged 70 and older with yearly incomes of $10,000 or less a $5,000 tax exemption.

The bill is similar to legislation approved by the House but killed by the Senate Ways and Means Committee last session, said its sponsor, Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance.

He said its effective date was delayed until 1984 to avoid reducing this year's revenues.

"The purpose of this bill is to give dignity to our senior citizens, who we haven't helped significantly (with a tax break) in 16 years," said Jordan. "The tax liability for this group is increasing at 25 percent a year."

The Finance Committee approved a bill changing the method of determining soft drink dispenser taxes, instituting a system of levying the tax based on the number of machines operated, maintained or placed on location on July 1.

Rep. Dan Lilley, said his bill would neither increase nor decrease state revenues from the dispenser tax.

Budget
A proposal to cut $500,000 from the North Carolina Microelectronics Center budget sparked debate for the second straight day as members of the Joint Appropriations Base Budget Committee questioned whether it should be an expansion item.

An appropriations subcommittee recommended cutting $240,029 from the project in 1983-84 and $268,797 in 1984-85. About $17 million has been appropriated to the project.

Sen. Jack Childers, D-Davidson, asked that the center be considered during discussion of the expansion budget, a request that opened lengthy debate on the way committees arrived at recommended cuts.

"If we don't have this on the expansion side, we shouldn't have anything on the expansion side," said Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, explained that the center is considered part of the base budget because some of the money pays for "operation of a newly completed facility."

The committee, which earlier approved the cuts, agreed to hold the matter for another day but did not reverse the vote.

Bankruptcy Exemptions
A bill to restore pre-1981 exemptions from creditors' claims was sent to a Senate Manufacturing, Labor and Commerce subcommittee.

The bill would allow debtors filing for bankruptcy $500 in personal property, $1,000 in real property, and their life insurance policies to be free from prospects of seizure by creditors.

Those were the exemptions provided for before 1981, when the Legislature raised them to $7,500 for a residence, $2,500 in property, $2,500 in household belongings plus an additional $500 for each dependent, $1,000 for one motor vehicle, and $500 in tools of trade.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said the bill was needed because the 1981 exemptions made collection of debts almost impossible in many cases.

"Some small businesses are getting to the point where they won't give credit anymore," added Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell.

But Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, said the bill would hurt low-income debtors while doing nothing to stop "abuse of the system by the rich boys."

Teacher Switch
The Senate Education Committee discussed but took no action on a bill to require pilot programs under which University of North Carolina professors and public school teachers occasionally would swap places.

R.V. McMillen, assistant to the president of the UNC system, said the university had no objection to teacher switching but said he didn't like the fact that the bill would mandate such programs.

McMillen distributed a resolution which he said had the blessings of the UNC Board of Governors calling for inclusion of teacher exchange programs in their Quality Assurance Program and promising to report to the General Assembly on the program's progress in 1985.

Auditor
The House Judiciary II Committee unanimously approved and sent to the full House a bill to rewrite laws governing the state auditor's office, despite continued opposition by several government representatives.

The committee adopted a substitute forged in a lengthy subcommittee meeting that attempted to incorporate suggestions made by Jack Cozart, legislative liaison for Gov. Jim Hunt, State Budget Officer Marvin Dorman and the Department of Administration.

"I think we've got a good bill," said state Auditor Ed Renfrow after the meeting. He said the measure, which tied up the House committee for more than three meetings, would fare better in the Senate.

Stephanie Bass, a DOA spokeswoman, told the committee her department still had objections.

"It is a better bill than it was in the beginning," she said. "We feel there is still some improvements to be done. We cannot endorse the bill as it now stands."

The biggest controversy surrounded an amendment that exempts the auditor's office from several provisions of the State Personnel Act. Renfrow said that would ensure his independence and help prevent the threat of "intimidation."

Ms. Bass said the personnel act should remain intact. She also questioned an amendment that leaves the auditor the option of determining "legislative intent" in performing some audits.

Porno Bill OK'd By Committee

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — At issue was Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's proposals to combat sexual exploitation of children, but the debate centered on the integrity of the Senate Judiciary I Committee.

The committee approved Green's program 5-3 Thursday, despite warnings that the bill might prove unconstitutional and vulnerable to rough treatment on the Senate floor.

Lawmakers roundly praised the bill's stated aims of wiping out child pornography and prostitution. However, while some said the bill should be passed quickly so it could be reconciled with similar legislation before the House, others said a close study was needed and urged that the vote be delayed.

The bill would make it illegal to use anyone under 18 years old in sexually explicit literature, films or other publications, although people as young as 14 could be convicted of producing child pornography. Adults responsible for children under 18 would be barred from having sex with them.

The bill also would make child prostitution a felony and eliminate ignorance of the child's age as a defense.

Child prostitutes under age 16 would be guilty of a misdemeanor but their punishment would be counseling. The youths' records would be sealed and expunged if they don't violate the law again for two years.

"We need to go over this bill line by line, section by section, or else we're going to get to the floor and they'll kick it back at us," said Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson.

Sens. William Staton, D-Lee, and Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, said the bill had several parts that were on shaky constitutional grounds.

"I haven't had a chance to study the bill thoroughly," he added. "We're a judiciary committee and we need to discuss and air this bill. We don't want to do anything that would reflect on the integrity of this committee."

Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, sponsor of the bill, said he welcomed any suggestions to solve possible constitutional problems. Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said the Legislature shouldn't worry about every minute point of conflict with the Constitution.

"I don't see any constitutional problems," added Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe.

The Senate recently approved a bill sponsored by Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, which would prohibit use of children under age 16 in pornography and ban promotion of such materials.

Senators who supported an immediate vote on the Edwards bill said it should be reconciled with the Warren bill and needed to go to the House without delay.

Again Cited For ABC Violation

JACKSON, N.C. (AP) — Four teen-agers told a state Alcoholic Board of Control hearing officer Thursday that they bought beer at a store run by an elementary school teacher without showing any proof of age.

Lafayette Majette, a teacher at Garysburg Elementary School, faces possible suspension or revocation of his beer license for the Northampton County grocery store he owns.

Majette has already been convicted of a criminal charge in connection with beer sales to a minor. He has previously been cited by the ABC board for violations at the store.

Ask Voiding Of Pricing Rule

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dairyman Inc., a Southeastern dairy cooperative, has asked a federal court to void two new milk pricing rules set by the N.C. Milk Commission.

The co-op's lawsuit opposes a rule allowing farmers to offer discounts to processing plants of up to 22 cents per 100 gallons of milk, and a new rule governing prices processors can pay for milk that will be sold to other states.

AMTRAK To Test Route In Carolinas

A test train sponsored by Amtrak in cooperation with the N.C. Department of Transportation will make an inspection run Tuesday from Raleigh to Charlotte and into South Carolina to examine the route for a possible Piedmont passenger train.

W.C. Cobb of Route 6, Greenville, president of the Carolina Association of Passenger Train Advocates, said the test train will check the condition of the track, particularly the segment between Raleigh and Greensboro since no passenger train service has utilized that section since 1962.

CAPTA, an organization of some 70 members, is supporting a move to improve and increase rail passenger service within the two Carolinas.

Cobb said CAPTA is working on securing an eastern segment of the test route from Washington, N.C., to Raleigh by way of Greenville and hopefully a test run will be scheduled soon.

The City Council adopted a resolution in February supporting CAPTA in requesting that the train begin in Greenville or Washington and proceed to Raleigh and Charlotte.

According to Cobb, the test train, pulled by an Amtrak locomotive, will leave Raleigh at 8 a.m. Tuesday and arrive at Charlotte later that day before departing for Greenville, S.C. Department of Transportation and Amtrak officials will be aboard the train.

Amtrak and the state will study the costs of an east-west train following the inspection run. The expense of a daily train would be shared by Amtrak and the state.

Police Check Collisions

An estimated $1,575 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated Thursday by Greenville police.

Officers said cars driven by Richard Henry Kidd of 202 N. Ash St. and Bessie Moore Sheppard of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 9 a.m. on Jarvis Street, 250 feet north of the Third Street intersection, causing an estimated $800 damage to the Kidd car and $75 damage to the Sheppard vehicle.

Cars driven by Constance Capps Cox of 2813 Jackson Drive and Michael Wannama Wier of Ayden collided about 12:55 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 25 feet east of the Hooker Road intersection, resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the Cox car and $500 damage to the Wier vehicle.

Two collisions Wednesday resulted in an estimated $2,750 property damage.

Police said a car driven by Joseph Ssemwogerere of 2605 E. 10th St. and a truck operated by Eric Stephen Vanoer of Winterville collided about 2:45 p.m. on 10th Street, 150 feet east of the Wright Road intersection.

Officers, who charged Vanoer with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, set damage at $1,000 to the Ssemwogerere car and $1,200 to the truck.

Cars driven by Donna Weatherington Stokes of Route 2, Winterville, and Jackie Cooper McCandless of Ayden collided about 5:45 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue, causing $425 damage to the Stokes car and $125 damage to the McCandless car.

Toxic Soil Test Is 'Acceptable'

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — State soil tests for mercury at a Lexington battery plant now show acceptable levels of the toxic metal, a state official said Thursday.

Kathy Neal of the state Solid and Hazardous Waste Branch said samples taken March 29 at the Battery Technology plant show mercury levels are now below allowable levels.

Duracell Battery International Inc., which owns the plant, was ordered to remove 71,000 pounds of tainted soil in December.

Chairman Of A Newly Created Dept. Named

ECU News Bureau
Dr. H. Thomas Norris has been named chairman of the newly established department of clinical pathology and diagnostic medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The new department will be responsible for lab services at Pitt County Memorial Hospital as well as all laboratory services at the school of medicine outpatient center and the Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center.

In addition to his academic appointments, Norris will serve as chief of pathology and director of laboratory services at the hospital. The new department will have more than 100 employees from both the hospital and the medical school and nine faculty members.

Prior to his appointment, Norris was professor of pathology at the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle and directed the University Hospital's anatomic pathology services there. He also held faculty appointments at Tufts University School of Medicine and Boston University School of Medicine prior to joining the University of Washington.

For many years, he was on the faculty of the International Academy of Pathology. His special area of research is gastrointestinal pathology and infectious diseases, especially cholera, and he is the author of numerous publications in professional journals.

Norris received his undergraduate degree from Washington State University and his medical degree from the University of Southern California, Los Angeles. He did postgraduate training at

Dr. H.T. NORRIS
Los Angeles County General Hospital, Boston City Hospital, Walter Reed Army Institute of Research and Harvard Medical School.

Jim Graham ...

"I am not an alarmist," Graham said, "but I think we should view what is happening to the tobacco program with a certain degree of alarm."

"The tobacco forces are divided and splintered off and don't have a united voice," Graham explained. "Because of this, we cannot be assured that tobacco will do well if legislation is brought up in the House or Senate."

Graham suggested that the Mid-East Commission let area farmers know that a unified voice is needed not only for the future of tobacco, but for support from Gov. Jim Hunt. "Hunt has pledged his support to farm groups but he will not support them until the industry gets together," he said.

"Without unity we will lose," Graham said. "Without unity other senators will introduce and push through legislation that will kill our program, that is essential to the growing of the crop. Not only will we lose tobacco, but look for peanuts to be next on the hit list," he added.

Graham said that while the future of the tobacco price support program is the primary issue, he and farmers are concerned with the delay in planting. "By this time last year, the tobacco was 10 to 15 percent planted. This year, we are barely started. The beds were wet, the plants too big. I think we'll see more importation of plants from Georgia due to the largeness of plants in this area," he said.

Similar problems have settled on the shoulders of corn growers as well, according to Graham. "Last year, 80 percent of the corn was planted at this time and this year only 15 percent is in. But we've had a super week and with mechanization most of the crops should be out soon. Soybeans and peanuts are not far behind," he said.

In fact, soybeans look good this year, according to Graham. "The price of soybeans is rising nearly as fast as corn. There should be a bumper crop of beans if early indications are true," he said.
"There is a positive attitude on agriculture in the Mideast and with a positive attitude you can accomplish anything," he told the commission in closing. "You have increasing industry in this area, are building better and better roads and have a great university. But never forget that agriculture and farming is the basis of all those good things," Graham said.

Following Graham's address, the 1983-84 officers were installed. Mary R. Andrews will continue as chairperson. Joseph H. Spruill will serve as first vice chairman and L.M. Brinkley as second vice chairman. Louis Clark will be secretary and Grace Bonner will serve as treasurer.

One Ph.D In ECU Class

East Carolina University will award its first doctorate to a student other than a new physician next week during graduation exercises at its school of medicine.

Thomas E. Curry Jr. will receive the doctor of philosophy (Ph.D) degree. He is the first student to complete the requirements for doctoral study since the medical school initiated five doctoral programs in the sciences basic to medicine in 1979. His research was carried out in the department of anatomy.

The medical school's Class of 1983 will be honored at a convocation Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in Hendrix Auditorium. Student and faculty awards will be presented during the ceremony.

Dr. A. Everette James Jr., professor and chairman of the department of radiology and radiological services at Vanderbilt University, will be the keynote speaker.

James holds a medical degree from Duke University, a legal degree from Blackstone Law School and a master's degree from Johns Hopkins. He is recognized for his contributions to nuclear magnetic resonance, digital radiography and ultrasonography, and he is an authority on the legal implications associated with new medical imaging technology. He is the author of more than 200 publications and 75 textbook chapters and the author or editor of 10 books.

in their part of Canada, which is hilly with some peaks higher than 4,000 feet, winter sports predominate. "Both of us and the children are good cross country skiers," Sylviane said. "Florent plays soccer and I play women's softball, too." Speaking about the Wednesday tour the ambassadors and hosts took to Raleigh on Wednesday, Florent said "We were pleased to meet your governor, Mr. Hunt, on the visit to Raleigh," Florent said. "It was courteous of him to find time to meet, to talk to us."

Greenville food, too, proved to be part of the excitement of being down South. "Donna made us hush puppies, the first time we have had these. They are excellent," Florent commented that "wines we have tasted here are quite good, though different from the wines we drink in Mont Joli."

On Saturday, the eight Canadian ambassadors will be leaving Greenville to move north 37 miles to spend a week with host families in Wilson. In addition to the Carons, the six other Canadian ambassadors visiting here are: Elzer Lecheffeur, Arthur Desroseyer, Francoise Ross, Sabine Chenard, Rita Levasseur and Lyne Cato.

"Don't forget to mention that in June Greenville families will be coming to Mont Joli and Rimouski to visit with us," Sylviane said. "We are happy to have them come to Canada to visit us, and are sure they will have a good time with us."

FOCUS

Labor Day

Sunday is May Day—a day to honor the world's workers. In 1889, an international congress of Socialist parties in Paris voted to support the American labor movement's demands for an eight-hour day. They chose May 1, 1890 as the day for worldwide demonstrations to call for shorter working hours. Since then, labor organizations in many countries have continued to celebrate May 1 as Labor Day. Leftist political parties in many countries hold demonstrations and rallies to mark the day. May Day is also a national holiday in the Soviet Union where the government stages elaborate parades. But curiously, the first of May is not Labor Day in the United States, where the tradition began.

DO YOU KNOW—When is Labor Day celebrated in the United States?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER—The World Trade Center Towers are taller than the Empire State Building.

Life As It's Lived

Some Just Not Suited To A Girl Scout Troop

By GAIL MICHAELS

For almost the entire school year I have listened to Meg's Brownie Scout leader, Cathy, complain about her troop.

I must say that I have commiserated with her. After all her girls are not exactly the eager, cooperative little sweethearts one usually expects to aspire to a brown felt beanie. Such innocents do exist, but the other first-grade Scout leader got them.

To be fair, Cathy was fortunate enough to be assigned a few who at least attempt to do credit to their overpriced uniforms. Four of them actually can sit still for short periods of time, and when around adults, speak in breathless semi-whispers. Naturally, the quietest move away in mid-year.

Then there are Meg and Cathy's own daughter, both of whom are far more like imps than Brownies. The two of them will tire a well-meaning adult in short order. Close friends, they quarrel over who will open the door for the others, who will take up dues, and who will pass out snacks, a duty for which neither one is exactly suited.

But compared to the remaining five in the troop, our two make a mother's heart beat in gratitude. It was these five who made me give thanks unto the Lord after field trips that I had not been the one implored to become leader of the pack. And it was these five who finally prompted Cathy to implore me to become a leader after all.

"I need an assistant," she said. "I've got to have someone there to keep me from locking those girls in the garage."

"But why me? You know as well as I do that I was not cut out from the same drab green as Juliette Low. I just don't work well with large groups."

"It's not that large," she said. "I don't work well with small groups either. According to Meg, I'm not even particularly good with one-on-one."

"All I need is someone to help with planning and discipline and to share a grimace with when things get really desperate."

I could hardly turn down such an appeal, but Cathy now probably wishes that I had. Without my help she decided to shorten the meeting time by half an hour, and she managed to offend four of the problem girls' mothers by asking two of them to stop dropping off their children an hour early and by asking two more to make their daughters skip a meeting for disciplinary reasons. All four promptly withdrew their darling daughters.

That left Cathy with only one problem child and me. My single real contribution to the group was to suggest during a planning session that we teach the girls to braid yarn.

When we announced our intention and handed out lengths of yarn tied to curtain rings, our small charges were all ecstatic with the exception of our one left-over from the exodus. "Oh, that's a cinch," she sniffed. "My baby brother could do that."

Within minutes she had her yarn so tangled that we had to toss it into a trash can and start over. Several girls were complaining that their would-be creations wouldn't stay still during the braiding process.

Meg was the only one who took a truly creative approach to this difficulty. She put the curtain ring in her mouth and anchored one strand of yarn between her foot and a chair seat as she attempted to weave the other two strands with her hands. Cathy and I were both on the floor combing through snarls with our fingers. Two little girls started crying in frustration. "Whose bright idea was this anyway," Meg asked. "Your mother's," Cathy snapped.

"This is the worst Brownie meeting ever," one child moaned. Meg looked at me. "Well, she means well, you know." I'm not sure that excuse will be enough to placate Cathy.

Seek A Way To Earlier Parole

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A mother who received a 25-year sentence for the murder of her five-year-old daughter could be paroled within six to 18 months under a plan being considered by the N.C. Paroles Commission.

Margaret C. Mapp has served four years of the sentence for second-degree murder. The parole consideration is opposed by the prosecutor who handled the case and Wake County District Attorney J. Randolph Riley.

Mrs. Mapp's daughter died in 1977 when she strangled on a blood clot that collected in her throat from a wound in her mouth. Evidence at Mrs. Mapp's trial showed the child was covered with new and old untreated wounds at the time of her death. She had two broken ribs and several breaks in the bones of her arms and legs.

Show Loses Perfect Game With Bowa Single

CHICAGO (AP) — Eric Show wasn't as disappointed that Larry Bowa broke up his perfect game with a bunt single as he was that he walked Bill Buckner.

Show retired the first 16 batters Thursday when Bowa spoiled his perfect game with a perfect bunt in what turned out to be a 3-1 victory for the San Diego Padres over the Chicago Cubs in the only National League game.

The only night game, the Detroit-California contest in Anaheim, was rained out in the fourth inning with Detroit ahead 2-0. The game will be made up during the Tigers' next trip to Anaheim July 21-24.

"No, I wasn't surprised by Bowa's bunt," said Show. "He's a pesky little hitter. But the bunt had to be perfect. I got off the mound pretty good. A foot longer or a foot shorter and we'd have had him."

Despite an error behind him after the bunt single, Show settled down and struck out the last two batters in the sixth to protect a 3-0 lead fashioned on a two-run single by Steve Garvey and a run-scoring single by Terry Kennedy in the top of the sixth.

But Buckner drew a walk leading off the Chicago seventh and scored on successive singles by Leon Durham and Ron Cey as Show headed for the showers.

"I was disappointed in walking Buckner," said Show, who upped his record to 3-1. "He's a good hitter and I didn't want to give him anything good to hit. But every pitch I made to him was good except the last one."

Luis DeLeon relieved and walked Keith Moreland to load the bases but he struck out Jody Davis and forced Bowa to hit into a double play to earn his third save of the season.

Until the sixth, Show and Cub starter Steve Trout, 1-4, were locked in a hectic pitching duel. Trout allowed only one hit through the first five innings and had the Padres beating the ball into the ground to such an extent that Buckner had the first 16 putouts at first base.

As it was, he ended with 21, one short of the major league record held by several with Ernie Banks of the Cubs last equalling the mark of 22 in 1963.

"Show was super until he walked Buckner," said Padre Manager Dick Williams. "It was a fine effort but he got a little unnerved after the walk."

I guess he's a little mad at me (for taking him out) but that's the way it goes."

Show wasn't mad or angry, but Cub Manager Lee Elia was upset over his team's inability to score more than once in the seventh.

"We had the bases loaded and none out with two of our hottest hitters coming up," said Elia. "All we had to do was make contact and we'd have had at least another run."

"Trout pitched very well and he made a good pitch to Garvey," added Elia. "What bothered me is the left-hander (Kennedy) got a hit for another run. That was left-hander against left-hander and he should have gotten him out." Garvey broke up the scoreless game with runners on second and third and two outs on a 3-1 pitch.

"I didn't think they'd give me anything good to hit," said Garvey, "and they didn't. It was a good pitch with good location that was tailing away."

Yarborough Breaks Record, Captures Pole

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Waddell Wilson manufactures horsepower and Cale Yarborough turns it into blazing, unadulterated speed.

Yarborough broke the closed-course, single-lap record for stock cars Thursday, averaging 202.650 mph around the Alabama International Motor Speedway's 2.66-mile, high-banked oval on the way to the pole position for Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National race.

The car, a Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS — the sheet metal converted from the Pontiac body that adorned the same chassis when Yarborough and the car won the Daytona 500 in February — twice broke the track qualifying record of 200.176 set a year ago by Benny Parsons and the closed-course mark of 201.104 established by the late Bobby Isaac in an unregulated run here in November of 1970.

The first of Yarborough's two qualifying laps was clocked at 202.628 and the second was completed .004-seconds faster.

In fact, the fastest four of Thursday's 20 qualifiers went faster than Isaac's mark, and the first six all were over 200.

Joe Ruttman took the outside spot on the front row at

Robinette Wins

Kelly Robinette won the amateur tournament Thursday night at the Putt-Putt Golf and Games.

Robinette captured the tournament with a 4-under-par 68 after two rounds of play.

Ronnie Pugh finished second with a three-under 69, while Curt Fulcher was third with a two-under 70.

Jimmy Silverthorne was fourth with a 71, while Mike Shane finished fifth with an even-par 72.

201.592 in a Monte Carlo SS, followed by Geoff Bodine in a Pontiac Grand Prix at 201.295, Ricky Rudd in a Chevrolet at 201.117, Neil Bonnett in a Monte Carlo SS at 200.932, and Bill Elliott at 200.318 in a Ford Thunderbird.

The slowest first-day qualifier in what is expected to be the fastest overall field in stock car history was Dick Brooks at 197.074 in a Thunderbird. Sterling Marlin's run of 196.105 — the 21st fastest of the day — failed to make the field, although it would have given him the pole in 10 of the previous 13 Winston 500s.

This is the third straight year that Wilson, team manager for Harry Ranier's Hardee's-sponsored unit, has built the engine and prepared the car on the pole position for the Winston 500. He came very close earlier this year to having his fifth straight pole car in the Daytona 500, too.

Yarborough admitted he had Daytona in mind as he started into the second lap Thursday. That's because he crashed a brand new Wilson-prepared Monte Carlo spectacularly on pole qualifying day at Daytona International Speedway moments after becoming the first driver to break the 200 mph barrier there. His first lap was 200.503 and he crashed while on his way to an apparent 202 or 203 lap, losing both the pole and what then would have been a NASCAR qualifying record.

"I knew the first lap was going to be a good one," the 43-year-old driver from Timmonsville, S.C., said smiling. "I had mixed emotions about taking the second lap. I thought hard about it. I wondered if it (the crash) could happen again.

"But the car was going so good, I decided to go for it.

"It wasn't easy, though. I used every bit of ability I have to run those two laps. There were times the car was just plain out of control."

Yarborough says gusty winds probably caused the crash at Daytona, but he also says the car was near its limit there and may have been close to its limit here.

Asked how fast the cars can go before the drivers lose control of them, Yarborough replied: "The only thing I know for sure is you can control one at 202.6.

Bells To Sound Call To Prayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Church bells in many communities are to sound a nationwide call to prayer Thursday at noon.

A slogan being spread for the National Day of Prayer proclaimed by President Reagan advises: "Take five at 12." It means five minutes of praying at noon.

The occasion is the 31st annual observance since Congress in 1952 asked the president to set aside a day each year for it, a custom started by early presidents.

A national committee is coordinating local plans.

The co-chairwoman, Mrs. Bill Bright, voiced hope "all Americans will take at least five minutes to thank God for our freedom and other blessings, and pray for his continued blessing upon our nation."

In setting the date, Reagan said, "Prayer unites people. This common expression of reverence heals and brings us together as a nation, and we pray it may one day bring renewed respect for God to all the peoples of the world."

NEW YORK (AP) — Aliens from outer space used to be ugly, menacing creatures intent on eating the Earth. In "V," NBC's four-hour science fiction miniseries, they look like blow-dried actors from central casting. But be warned. They're not what they appear to be.

"V," which will be broadcast Sunday and Monday night, chronicles what happens when earthling lookalikes arrive here on a supposed mission of peace.

Great anticipation is cleverly built about the appearance of these aliens. When their leader first arrives, he resembles some smoothie from an afternoon soap opera. "We're pleased to meet you," he tells the world in a voice that has a computerized ring to it.

The visitors say their planet is near environmental collapse and can be saved only by chemicals from the Earth's sewage.

"E.T.," the movie about amiable aliens, has already been done, so suffice it to say that these visitors don't stay friendly. In fact, they turn downright ugly. Also suffice it to say that executive producer Ken Johnson, who wrote and directed "V," is not Steven Spielberg.

If "V" were a satire on how Americans treat new arrivals, it would have worked better. One kid is disappointed that they don't look like E.T. or Dr. Spock.

In the suburbs, status-conscious society patrons organize teas and show off their visitors. Teen-age girls develop crushes on their favorite hunk alien. An entire line of V merchandising becomes available. In one welcoming parade, a school band plays the "Star Wars" theme.

But these are minor moments of fun. "V" soon takes on excruciatingly pretentious overtones. When the true, un-American intentions of the visitors become clear, parallels are drawn between the aliens and Nazi terror.

A uniformed Visitors Friend Group, with similarities to the Hitler Youth Movement, attracts malcontents susceptible to the power of power who frighten their parents with the fear of rattling to the authorities.

One character, Abraham Bernstein (Leonard Cimino), is leery of the visitors from the beginning, and when martial law is instituted, he says it brings back memories of Berlin in 1938. "It's them versus us," he says.

It's unclear, however, where the American military is during the siege. And where are the Russians when we need them most?

"V" is NBC's $23 million attempt to put some big Nielsen numbers on the board before the network's affiliates meet next month. It's bound to produce better ratings than NBC's normal programming. But it's vastly overpriced, considering ABC got 10 hours and four nights of "The Thorn Birds" for $21 million.

The special effects, however, are spectacular. The huge spaceships do appear to be hovering simultaneously over the world's major cities. And the battle scenes, including the one that looks like "Star Wars" at the end, are believable.

But the major flaws are a hokey comic-book adventure story, characters out of the Saturday cartoons and laughable dialogue.

After one battle, one freedom fighter says, "I hope there aren't any casualties. I'd hate to lose one of us." And, from left field, another character decides to quote the Revolutionary War patriot, Thomas Paine: "These are the times that try men's souls."

"V" traces the exploits of Mike Donovan (Marc Singer), a superhero television journalist who learns of the visitors' diabolical plan and tries to expose it. Another major force is Julie (Faye Grant), a young medical student who leads a cell of resistance fighters.

The "V" in "V" stands for the visitors and, later on, Winston Churchill's famous sign of optimism, which becomes the symbol of the resistance fighters.

Another way of looking at it is that in an alphabetical rating system, "V" deserves a lowly "V." Nonetheless, NBC is seriously thinking of turning "V" into a series next season.

'No Regrets' On Rejecting Role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer John Denver says he has no regrets about turning down the lead role in "An Officer and a Gentleman," even though the movie went on to win two Oscars.

"When I read the script, it seemed to me little more than a B-movie story with a lot of sex in it," Denver said in a recent interview. "I knew I wouldn't be comfortable in the role and so I said no."

He said he learned a valuable lesson. "It showed me I just didn't have the experience to see what could be made of a story by a good director (Taylor Hackford)."

The movie, starring Richard Gere, has taken in over $1.25 million at the box office.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Yes, this is the same hand we featured yesterday, but there can be more than one point of interest in a bridge hand. Besides presenting an interesting defense, it also permitted Britain's Martin Hoffman to bring off one of the rarest of all coups — the squeeze in one suit.

Hoffman's partner was not as optimistic as the North we featured yesterday. He elected to pass one no trump, and that became the final contract.

West led the king of clubs and, when declarer allowed it to win, West shifted to the nine of spades, forcing declarer's ace. The queen of diamonds was run to East's king. South ducked the jack of clubs return, and East exited with a diamond. Declarer cashed out his diamond tricks, and on the last diamond East got rid of the embarrassing queen of hearts. Declarer cashed his master hearts to bring about this position:

Now South cashed the ace of clubs and discarded dummy's heart. East was helpless. If he discarded a middle spade, declarer would lead a spade and cover West's eight with the queen. East could win, but at the end he would have to concede a trick to dummy's seven of spades. If East sluffed his low spade, declarer would duck a spade, and then East would have to win the spade lead and concede the last trick to dummy's queen.

Plans To Retire As Chancellor

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Dr. William E. Highsmith, chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Asheville since 1969, said Thursday he would retire that position but remain as a history professor.

"As I look at the needs of this institution in the next several years, one thing becomes abundantly clear to me," said Highsmith, who will step down after the 1983-84 school year. "This institution needs a chancellor who is younger, healthier and more energetic than I am.

"Also, I would like very much for the few working years that I have left to be spent at what I originally wanted to do many years ago — that is, be involved in teaching, research and writing in the field of history," he said.

Break Seven-State Ring In Burglaries

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Raleigh police say a handgun stolen in North Carolina and recovered in Nevada has uncovered a burglary ring operating in seven states.

Weapons that were stolen by the group from burglaries elsewhere have been traced to armed robberies and homicides in Illinois, Texas and California, police said.

The theft ring, operating in 16 cities out of St. Louis, Mo., is responsible for up to 500 home burglaries in Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Illinois and Missouri, and about 100 break-ins in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro and Winston-Salem, said police detective Dan C. Williams.

"These guys are extremely dangerous," detective Don

A. Weingarten said. "Our information has it that they were known to be armed during burglaries."

Police said the .38-calibre revolver stolen in Raleigh last summer was recovered in a shooting last December in Reno, Nev.

Weingarten said 15 or more people are associated with the burglary ring.

Two St. Louis men were arrested in Raleigh in February. William W. Nobe, 37, and James E. Thompson Jr., 35, were each charged with one count of breaking and entering, possession of burglary tools and conspiracy to commit burglary.

Authorities in St. Louis, at the request of Raleigh police, Wednesday arrested Gary G. Williams, 41, of St. Louis. He was charged with two counts of second-degree burglary and interstate flight to avoid prosecution.

Police said the burglary ring focused on affluent areas. The group rode around during the day and looked for houses where residents appeared to be away.
