Israel Objects To Shultz Pullout Plan For Lebanon

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israel radio report today quoted political sources as saying that Israel cannot agree to the Lebanon troop withdrawal plan worked out by Secretary of State George P. Shultz. The sources said there were problems over the role of Maj. Saad Haddad and limits on Israeli troops in joint patrols with Lebanese soldiers.

An Israeli official who briefed reporters at the Foreign Ministry said, "Nothing is final yet. There is a need for more work, more clarifications, more answers to questions." Both the official and political sources quoted by Israel radio requested anonymity.

But the Israeli newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth said the government "is leaning toward approving the Lebanon agreements." Another paper said Israel should accept the accord to place responsibility for the success or failure of the Shultz mission on Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Even if Israel accepts the plan, Syrian and PLO forces in Lebanon must also agree to leave before troop withdrawals can be carried out.

Shultz brought the plan to Israel on Wednesday after gaining Lebanese approval of a draft agreement. Shultz characterized the Lebanese position as "very forthcoming" on issues that had been blocking an accord.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens joined top aides at the Foreign Ministry to review the proposal. Shultz's two deputies, special envoys Philip C. Habib and Morris Draper, spent time with Israeli negotiators and returned to Shultz's hotel early in the afternoon.

Israel wants a major command role for Haddad, the former Lebanese army major who leads an Israeli-backed militia in southern Lebanon. It also wants Israel troops, in tandem with Lebanese soldiers, to patrol the border area to make sure the zone is free from Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist allies.

There has been no official word on the contents of the accord, but the leftist Beirut newspaper As-Safir said it would make Haddad a ceremonial deputy commander of Lebanese forces in the south, and let Israel have 50 troops to help oversee a withdrawal.

The paper said the draft also would allow Israel to maintain a liaison office in Lebanon and let U.N. troops patrol Palestinian refugee camps in the south. However, the Israelis are opposed to any security role for U.N. troops in southern Lebanon and insist on more than a ceremonial role for Haddad.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet is to meet Friday to decide whether to endorse the draft. Shamir said the Cabinet probably would be asked to take a yes-or-no vote, so there would be no opportunity for last-minute revisions.

Sweden Reports Fresh Signs Of A Sub Intruder

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Navy helicopters dropped two depth charges today off the north coast after an intensive hunt by Sweden turned up fresh signs of a suspected Soviet mini-submarine, military officials said.

"We had new indications of a submarine and dropped the charges — that's all I can say at this stage," artillery Maj. Karl-Erik Lundstrom told the national news agency.

One of the depth charges was dropped northeast of the Alno Island in the Sundsvall archipelago, 250 miles north of Stockholm. The second depth charge was dropped south of the island where military observers believe a mother submarine may be lurking.

A naval vessel anchored a mile south of that area early this morning but Defense Ministry officials refused to say if divers had been sent down. No other action was reported from the area.

During the night, helicopters shined spotlights on the waters and two seabottom mines were detonated in an attempt to force the suspected sub to the surface.

"It may be that the submarine is not able to come up to the surface," navy spokesman Cmdr. Bertil Daggfeldt said late Wednesday, suggesting the submarine may be crippled at the bottom of Sundsvall Bay.

He said the search, which began a week ago when periscopes were sighted by civilians, would continue today. More submarines were believed to be still in the area, he said.

Local residents gathered in the darkness on the shores of the bay to observe the naval operation.

Search command leaders told a late night news conference that mine station operators detonated two seabottom mines at 8:20 p.m. in the bay to the northeast of Alno Island but that the submarine could have eacaped.

"You cannot be completely sure until you get up the submarine," Daggfeldt said.

Hakan Nilsson, a Swedish television reporter who witnessed the explosions from his living room window on Alno, said "the whole building was shaking" and that he saw water shooting up into the air.

Nilsson said he may have seen an oil slick on the surface of the water, but the navy said nothing had been found so far by the helicopters combing the area.

The navy refused to give the force of the mines. During a futile hunt for Soviet submarines off a naval base in Stockholm's inner archipelago last October, four half-ton mines were set off.

Clashes Hit Beirut, Too

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem-Christian artillery battles in the hills overlooking Beirut engulfed the capital today, leaving five dead, 22 wounded and a helicopter carrying the U.S. Marine commander peppered with machine-gun fire in the fiercest action since Israel's invasion last summer.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said in addition to the five dead casualties reported by police, three other people were killed as the shelling spread in mid-afternoon to cover a cluster of Christian towns along a 12-mile stretch of coast from Beirut to the port of Jounieh.

A motorcade carrying President Amin Gemayel made it back safely to the presidential palace from west Beirut during the shelling, but three machine-gun rounds tore through a U.S. Marine helicopter sent aloft with the Leatherneck commander, Col. James Mead. Both Mead and the pilot were unharmed.

Marine spokesman Maj. Fred Lash said the chopper, which went aloft off after French peacekeeping positions were shelled, was hit in the underside, the crew door and the rotor blade over the Christian village of Souk al-Gharb, six miles southeast of Beirut. The Christians denied responsibility.

The French contingent said one French soldier was slightly wounded by shrapnel at the French military communications center next to French Ambassador Paul-Marc Henry's residence in suburban Baabda, five miles southeast of Beirut.

Gemayel, who was in west Beirut meeting with Moslem leaders when the shelling began, returned safely to the Baabda presidential palace. He was believed to have crossed to east Beirut along a road shelled in the early stages of the bombardment, but there was no indication he was a target of the attack.

The shelling began shortly before noon and continued toward sundown. Authorities said artillery and mortar rounds slammed into the area near the mid-city horse race track and in residential neighborhoods in Moslem and Christian sectors of the city.

Associated Press correspondent Terry A. Anderson said two shells hit the main road at Kas-Kas near a pine forest around the race track in mostly Moslem west Beirut that was burned during Israeli-Palestinian fighting last summer.

One shell sprayed a car with shrapnel and police at the scene said the driver was killed and two pedestrians were wounded. The car was covered with blood and shattered glass and the chassis was peppered with shrapnel.

Another fatality occurred in the Christian section of Ashrafiyeh, where a man died when a shell struck his sixth-floor apartment, police at the scene said. The shell knocked a three-foot wide hole in the side of the seven-story building and exploded inside. Neighbors told a reporter the man was in the shower room when the shell struck and was killed instantly.

Five shells landed in the Christian neighborhood of Doura, and a Lebanese army soldier at a checkpoint by a bridge said several people were injured. One shell fell on the roof of a two-story building, leaving a large hole and shattering windows in the building and neighboring structures.

The Christian Lebanese Forces militia, dominated by the Phalange Party, charged in a statement that Syrian forces in the central mountains were encouraging militiamen of the Druse sect, a mystical offshoot of Islam, to escalate the fighting.

The statement charged Syria wanted to sabotage Secretary of State George P. Shultz's current Middle East shuttle which is aimed at reaching a troop withdrawal accord between Israel and Lebanon.

A spokesman for the Progressive Socialist Party, standard bearer of the Druse sect, called the charge "a lie. It's absolutely baseless."

An Israeli military spokesman in suburban Yarze said the Israeli army, which controls the hills east and south of Beirut, "will do everything we can to stop the fighting and we will."

Jenkins Again Says Gubernatorial Bid Being 'Seriously Considered'

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Former East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins, whose name topped the speculation list several times previously as gubernatorial aspirants jockeyed for possible campaign bids, says he is giving serious consideration to entering the 1984 race.

"I'm going to continue talking to people and traveling around listening to what the issues are," Jenkins said here this morning in discussing his current plans.

Jenkins, who is now chancellor emeritus of ECU, said, "If I feel I can make a contribution at the end of the year, then I am definitely going to register" as a candidate in the spring primary.

"I want to get around the state and ask people what's on their minds," said Jenkins. "I have the personal energy and the time to do that."

Jenkins, who has remained active in Democrat Party activities since retiring from ECU in 1978, said he is not trying to set up a campaign organization now. "I just want to talk to people, to discuss the issues," he said.

While acknowledging that he has no campaign money, Jenkins contended he is not worried about funds. He said he wanted "to try to see if it can be done without being purchased."

"I don't think money is strictly the answer," the 69-year-old Democrat said, adding that he is "not going to nag my friends for a lot of money. I will be obligated to no one as far as money is concerned." He suggested the situation will take care of itself if he talks with the people and lets them "know what I believe."

Jenkins said he has no political aspirations beyond the governor's office and he would not view a successful bid for the seat now held by Jim Hunt as a stepping stone.

Since his retirement, Jenkins has handled special assignments for Hunt and hosted "Tarheel Portraits," a weekly television program. He said he has been working on a a military project now before the Legislature that would have dependents of military personnel considered citizens of North Carolina for tuitition purposes. Jenkins said he appeared before the Committee for Higher Education on behalf of the bill, which he said has Hunt's total backing.

According to the former chancellor, 43 states treat the military as residents for tuition purposes but North Carolina is one of seven that does not. He said the military is a multibillion dollar industry in the state, which has the fifth largest military population in the nation.

Jenkins said he remains busy with various speaking engagements and plans to address graduates at Mount Olive Junior College and Dixon High School in Onslow County this week and next. "They are not political speeches," he added. Jenkins also said he will make some remarks at the June 16 groundbreaking in Greenville for the Methodist retirement home.

"I feel great," said Jenkins, who said he is down to approximately the weight he carried while serving as a Marine Corps officer.

Others Get Special Mother's Day Cards

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Only half the Mother's Day line of greeting cards from one major publisher is designated for mothers.

The other 50 percent are directed to such relatives as aunts, sisters, grandmothers and mothers-in-law or to "someone who's been like a mother to me" or "someone special," says Diane Hazley, a planner for Hallmark Cards, of Kansas City, Mo.

About 7 percent of the company's more than 1,000 Mother's Day cards this year are for husbands to give their wives.

Because researchers found more than 43 percent of the births last year in the United States were a couple's first child, one 1983 card reads, "To my wife on her first Mother's Day."

Some things have not changed.

Ms. Hazley says the hues are soft, flowers are favorite designs and the messages are sentimental, loving and caring.

"No matter what a wife or modher does at work, her husband and children still perceive her as the most feminine person in their lives," Ms. Hazley says.

Dad may be the butt of many joking messages on Father's Day cards, but gags on Mother's Day cards are directed at the sender.

The cover message on one says, "Happy Mother's Day from the greatest kid in the world." Inside, "Whataya mean, who's this from?"

Another, from a Rockport, Maine publisher, is designated "to the most wonderful mother in the world!" Inside, the drawing depicts a broken vase on a table with a sock spilling out of an open drawer. The message, "from her most perfect child," has been crossed out and below it are the words, "the other one."

One of this year's cards was designed by a 10-year-old Filipino-American schoolgirl who won a $2,000 cash prize and other awards for her efforts.

Rhodora Ayuyang, of Glenshaw, Pa., took the grand prize in a greeting card contest conceived as an "All-American Salute to Mothers."

She placed first among almost 600,000 entries from 4th, 5th and 6th graders in more than 70,000 public, parochial and private elementary schools throughout the United States.

Rhodora's cover design shows a mother and daughter surrounded by flowers. The inscription says, "Mom, To Me You're Like A Garland of Sweet Flowers!"

The message inside says:

"My mother is the joy of my heart,

"Because she is so pleasant and smart,

"She always cares and gives me support.

"She's always with me to guide and comfort.

"My mother and I spend lots of time together

"Because we love each other.

"So, I say I'm very lucky

"To have a mother that's lovely!"

Rhodora is the third of four children. Her mother is a pathologist and her father is a claims examiner for the Veterans Administration.

Besides the cash award, Rhodora won trips to Hollywood, Disneyland and New York, where an exhibit of the top 60 cards was set up for the 10 days preceding Mother's Day.

She also had the thrill of seeing her card reproduced by Drawing Board Greeting Cards, a leading publisher in Dallas, for sale at about 1,000 stores across the country in time for Mother's Day.

The second and third place winners, also 10 year olds, are Sangita Chandra, of Norton, Mass., and Brandon Winkenwerder, of Shiner, Texas.

The contest was sponsored jointly by Good Housekeeping magazine and Kentucky Fried Chicken.

In North Hollywood, Calif., Papel, Inc., a giftware manufacturer, recently introduced The Forever Card. It is shaped like a 4-by-6-inch ceramic picture frame with a design and message on the front and a blank white cardboard on the back for the giver to write a personal message. Each prepackaged card comes with hanger, easel and mailer, for a suggested $5.50 retail.

The 60 different designs for every conceivable gift-giving occasion are by well-known greeting card artists, including Flavia, Gary Patterson and Hummer.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Knowing that I consider computers a fad like the hula hoop and pet rocks, a reader sent me the latest tracking on their flight through civilization.

There is now such a thing called talking computers that will teach five-year-olds how to write before they can read and how to type before they can spell.

Big deal! I did that when I was three and I'm still doing it. Frankly, I've always had misgivings about kids who achieve early and out of their time warp. Like the babies who can swim at six months, but have to have someone drop them into the pool. And what about the nursery school kids who can win chess tournaments but can't celebrate it with a can of gusto at the nearest bar? I tell you, it's unnatural.

Not only that, as an adult, I can tell you it's frustrating to possess skills you never use. I have a lot of them that I've never had a call for.

Last year, I finally learned how to pronounce Dom Perignon. Biggest waste of time in the world. At $46 a bottle, do you have any idea how many times I've used it?

As soon as the phones came out that had us dialing direct, I went crazy educating myself on how to dial international calls direct. I could dial Tokyo in 10 seconds flat. That's the good news. The bad news is I don't know anyone in Tokyo to call.

I'll tell you another talent that has always been dormant. I can find the end of the elastic that has broken around the band in underwear. My fingers are so small, I can attach a safety pin to it and thread it around until I catch it at the end and secure it. No one knows this. I can't even tell someone about it, let alone show them.

According to the story, children will spend about 15 minutes a day with a $3600 computer. They will perfect handwriting skills using workbooks that also emphasize writing because as someone observed, children are better at writing their thoughts than they are at understanding the written thoughts of others.

My husband said he wouldn't be surprised to see a three-year-old turn up on the Carson show touting her autobiography.

I told him my concern is that by the time they're old enough to talk they'll have nothing to say.

"That doesn't bother me," he said. "By then, they'll be adults and no one will notice."

Rituals Held By Chapter

Rituals were held for Carmon Bradley, Linda Creech, Candy Gunn and Paula Scholtens by Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. The meeting was held at the home of Ann Pfeifer.

President Pfeifer said officers for the new year will be installed at the next meeting.

The Founder's Day celebration was held Friday and Mrs. Pfeifer was named woman of the year and Mrs. Gunn was chosen pledge of the year. Pattie Weisenberger was recognized for the pledge training.

Bonnie Martin was honored for the best program of the year. A poem written by Barbara McMillion included events during the past year.

Chapter Has Speaker

Mrs. Everett Ballengee was keynote speaker at the meeting of the Susanna Coutanch Evans Chapter DAR held last week at the home of Dr. M.L. Staton.

Mrs. Ballengee organized the Greenville chapter and is presently serving as state chairman of DAR Schools. She told members about the National Headquarters buildings in Washington, D.C.

Ray Taft of Grimesland, a senior at D.H. Conley High School, winner of the N.C. State Society Scholarship, spoke about his present activities and plans to attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Staton gave the national defense report.

Chapter plans to present two flags to the city and a flea market planned for May 21 were discussed.

Mrs. Donald C. McLane Jr., regent, and Mrs. Ballengee reported on the Continental Congress they attended in Washington, D.C. in mid-April. Dorothy Tyson Stewart was listed as a new member.

Chapter officers will attend the District VIII workshop in Rocky Mount May 17.

TEX-MEX HOMINY

It has plenty of sauce, so add more hominy if you wish.

1 small onion, finely chopped
4 tablespoons olive oil
4-ounce can chopped green chilies
10¾-ounce can condensed tomato soup, undiluted
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 cup lightly packed grated (medium fine) sharp cheddar cheese
1-pound can white or yellow whole hominy

In a 10-inch skillet, over low heat, in 3 tablespoons hot oil, cook onion until golden brown. Stir in chilies; cook 5 minutes. Stir in tomato soup, chili powder, and cheese; bring to a boil; simmer, stirring often, until thick — about 5 minutes. In another 10-inch skillet, over medium heat, in 1 tablespoon hot oil, cook hominy until pale golden. Stir hominy into tomato sauce. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Son's Table Manners Can Upset Mom

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Henry (not his real name) and I have a fairly good marriage (14 years), but we don't always see eye to eye when it comes to disciplining our only child, Dougie, who is 8.

Example: At dinner last night Dougie started talking with his mouth full, so I corrected him. Then he belched (loudly), so I said, "You're supposed to say, 'Excuse me.'"

He ignored me. Then he turned to his father and asked, "Do I have to, Dad?" Henry replied, "No, you don't. You can eat any way you please at home as long as you remember your manners when you're eating in a restaurant or in someone else's home." Then Henry said to me, "I wish you'd lay off the kid. You're always picking on him for something."

I don't like to quarrel in front of our son, but I wish you'd comment on this in your column, and I'll serve it to my husband for breakfast.

SILENT BUT SEETHING

DEAR SILENT: It's possible to disagree with your husband without being disagreeable. It would have been appropriate to tell him that good manners should be practiced at home in order to be remembered elsewhere.

But there's something else going on in your "fairly good marriage" that's at least as important as manners. Your son is using the "divide and conquer" technique.

Don't let him get away with it. You and Henry could profit by a short course in parenting.

DEAR ABBY: My name is Sibyl and my friend's name is Myra. We've been friends for a long time, are both unmarried and in our late 20s. We both enjoy the company of men, but neither of us has anybody special right now.

This bugs me. Myra and I will make a date to have dinner and take in a movie one evening, and about 5 o'clock Myra calls to tell me "some man" just called and invited her out, so she won't be able to keep her date with me.

I pretend I don't care and tell her to go ahead and have a good time. Meanwhile, I'm left high and dry.

Am I wrong to feel hurt? And how should I handle it if it happens again?

SIBYL

DEAR SIBYL: You are not "wrong" to feel hurt, but you are wrong to pretend you don't care when you do.

Don't wait until it happens again. Tell Myra now that when you and she make a date, it is not subject to cancellation should a more appealing invitation (from a man or woman) come along.

DEAR ABBY: A very interesting point was raised in the letter signed "Virgo on the Cape." (Virgo wanted to keep her ex-mother-in-law's family silver that had been given to her and her husband when they were married.)

Since it had been in her husband's family for several generations, I hope she had the decency to return it.

I have some lovely silver, linen and antiques that I would like to give to my only child — a son — but I can't figure out how to prevent their being "lost" in case of a divorce. If they left the family, I'd be heartbroken. Any suggestion?

REALISTIC MOMMA

DEAR REALISTIC: As indelicate as it may seem, make it clear that these heirlooms are to remain in your son's family — and get it in writing. If you assume that your son's marriage will end in divorce, you have a 50 percent chance of being right.

* * *

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Local Funding Required

Greenville school Superintendent Delma Blinson and county Superintendent Eddie West made it clear at a County Commissioners meeting Monday that it is local funds which provide "flexibility and excellence" in the schools.

West said state funds are based on average daily membership. The funds are appropriated on a line-item basis and must be spent accordingly.

Blinson said little of the state funds are received in cash; rather, they are deposited in accounts on which the school systems write checks for the specified purposes.

State funds provide for the basic system, but flexibility and excellence — something more than the minimum — must come from local funds, Blinson indicated.

West noted that no capital improvements funds come from the state.

Accordingly, it appears that if innovation — at least that which requires the expendure of funds — is going to take place, the money will have to come from local sources, which usually means the county government.

It might be interesting to see what good administrators could do in building superior schools if their entire appropriation were made in a lump sum. That is not the situation at present, however, and if we want to have above average schools, local funding will be required.

Dollar Savings

The N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency has completed its purchase of ownership interest in seven generating units of Carolina Power & Light system.

The purchase means that agency will have more generating capacity to serve its customers, the municipalities which own the agency.

In the past muncipal uitlities such as Greenville, Farmville and Ayden have purchased power from CP&L or Virginia Electric and Power. All of their power is now coming from the N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency, which has been purchasing power from the private companies and also buying generating capacity from CP&L.

The changeover is not immediately obvious to the customer who still receives the same quality of service as he has in the past. In the future, however, the approach of buying power through NCEMPA should lead to more favorable electric rates and thus mean dollar savings for all of us.

Different Name, But Same Sound

WASHINGTON — The National Commission on Excellence in Education labored mightily to bring forth last week's report on "the rising tide of mediocrity in our public schools." It labored mightily and it brought forth, alas, one more rewriting of reports and recommendations we have heard for the past 30 years.

The whole business is profoundly discouraging. To glance at a shelf of books on American education is to be reminded that the more things stay the same, the more things stay the same. Have a look:

Albert Lynd ripped into "Quackery in the Public Schools" in 1950. Arthur E. Bestor wrote "Educational Wastelands" in 1953. Morimer Smith analyzed "The Diminished Mind" in 1954; his subtitle, incidentally, was "A study of planned mediocrity in our public schools." Bestor returned to the attack with "The Restoration of Learning" in 1955. James D. Koerner put forward a program for "Reform in Education" in 1962. That same year saw Hyman Rickover's blistering comparison of "Swiss Schools and Ours." In 1963 Koerner was back with "The Miseducation of American Teachers." Charles E. Silberman wrote "Crisis in the Classroom" in 1970' Paul Copperman gave us "The Literacy Hoax" in 1978. Richard Mitchell's polemical work "The Graves of Academe" appeared in 1981. Throughout this period, Russell Kirk was thundering away in National Review.

They all said the same things, and they all made basically the same recommendations. They said the quality of education in our public schools is shamefully low. They put the blame on the teachers' colleges, on the parsimony of the taxpayers, on the whims of state legislatures, on the edicts of the courts, on the apostles of permissiveness. They rued the decline of homework and memorization. They lamented the departure of courses in Latin and in modern foreign languages. They made invidious comparisons between American and European education. Having made all these findings, the critics recommended almost exactly what this latest commission recommended last week.

These recommendations are sound. They have been sound for the past 30 years. Of course we ought to get back to basics. Of course we should end the folly that sees most of our schools in operation for only six months of the year. Of course we should pay higher salaries to our teachers, and of course such salaries should be, as the commission urged, "professionally competitive, market-sensitive and performance-based."

Why hasn't anything been done about all these years of similar findings and recommendations? The cause, at bottom, is that the American people simply don't give a damn about their public schools. If the American people truly cared about the quality of public education, they long ago would have rebelled against the dominance of the teachers' colleges; they would have voted the taxes to pay decent salaries to well-qualified teachers; they would have taken a lively interest in textbooks that would challenge their children.

The people have done none of these things. School boards and Legislatures have surrendered to the teachers' unions on the matter of merit pay. The voters repeatedly have rejectcd even tiny tax increases to provide for better salaries. The textbook publishing houses, catering to their notions of educational chic, havc provided mostly pablum. Beset by legislative demands for driver education, sex education, drug education and courses in "personal development," the secondary schools have become "homogenized, diluted and diffused to the point that they no longer have a central purpose."

To be sure, one finds occasional bright spots. In such cities as Louisville, Ky., and Jacksonville, Fla., educational excellence has been vigorously pursued. Many school systems benefit from devoted and brilliant teachers who stick to the basics despite the distractions around them. The vandalism that was so pervasive five years ago appears to be diminishing. Tests of achievement recently have shown a small but encouraging improvement.

I hate to be pessimistic, but candor compels a sad prediction: After a flurry of editorial commendations, last week's report will gather dust. Here and there a few school boards and city councils will have the courage to do what they know should be done, but without a tidal wave of support from parents and the general public, nothing much will happen. As a people we are unwilling to make the sacrifices required for excellence in education. To say that is a pity, but pity 'tis, 'tis true.

One For Harley

WASHINGTON — April 16 was a day motorcyclists won't forget.

On that day, under presidential order large, foreign-made motorcycles entering the United States were slapped with a 50 percent import duty. Two weeks earlier, that ol' free-trader, Ron Reagan, had given in to a request by Harley-Davidson Motor, Inc., for protection from Japanese competitors. Now, imported bikes with engine displacements of 700 cubic centimeters (cc) and above carry surcharges of up to $1,500.

Harley-Davidson's managers realized last summer that Honda, Yamaha and Suzuki were intentionally boosting production and inventories of large bikes in the face of a depressed U.S. market. Fearful that mass liquidations would wipe out their measly 5 percent market share, Harley-Davidson applied for relief with the International Trade Commission in December. For the makers of the mythic machines favored by police departments and hippie-trashing Hell's Angels-types, the five-year tariff will keep creditors at bay.

According to Bob Klein, Harley-Davidson's spokesman, import protection will enable his company to underwrite the completion of a seven-year modernization program. To date, Harley-Davidson has incorporated Japanese-style assembly, redesigned its products, and introduced 16 new models.

Yet, while Harley-Davidson may have made a good case for tariff protection, the Milwaukee-based company's health was practically irrelevant to the Reagan administration. Facing pressure from import-plagued industry and labor groups, and looking to set a "tough" posture on trade for 1984, the administration decided to make the Japanese eat dust.

"It was an attempt to show the Japanese that we aren't going to lie down and let them blow our industries away," one source close to the U.S. trade representative's office told our reporter Michael Duffy.

Of course, the Reagan administration is rightfully annoyed by Japan's habit of targeting U.S. industries and then fashioning policies to corner the U.S. market. It's well aware of America's humiliation at the hands of Japanese steel, automobile, consumer electronics and even ceramics manufacturers. Indeed, since the late 1950s, the Japanese have gobbled up more than 90 percent of the U.S. market and helped to make Harley-Davidson the last of a domestic industry that was once 143 companies strong.

Unfortunately, Reagan's cycle tariff only reflects an inability to solve America's trade dilemma. The duty will do little to damage Japan's U.S. motorcycle sales. (It will just bring Japanese prices in line with Harley-Davidson's.) Moreover, this bit of protectionism gives the Japanese cause to seek similar relief under international trade agreements (and may make us look silly when seeking better access to Japan's citrus, beef and telephone markets).

Most ironically, the chief beneficiary of the cycle tariff may be Honda, not Harley-Davidson. At its three-year-old Marysville, Ohio, plant, Honda Motor's U.S. affiliate has been turning out 44,000 cycles annually, most above the 700 cc threshold. While Citicorp and other creditors undoubtedly regard the tariff as relieving, Harley-Davidson's market — touring enthusiasts, "hog" collectors and weekend outlaws who favor "chopped-down" models — is unlikely to expand. Both its 1,000 and 1,350 cc models are, by Harley-Davidson's own admission, geared more toward customer repair than replacement. "Ours is a premium-priced vehicle," explained Klein. "...the Mercedes-Benz of the market."

"I think the Japanese are probably sitting back on their haunches and laughing at us," said Rick Johnston, a lawyer who represents a number of Japanese companies in Washington. "If this is the strongest message that we can send, then they're in great shape."

While Japan's example of government-industrial cooperation could have useful applications in the U.S., that course is folly for settling trade disputes. To adopt it is only to practice protectionism by another name.

Family Squabble In Raleigh

RALEIGH — "You can choose your friends," the old saying goes. "But you're stuck with your family."

That's sort of the case for North Carolina governors. They choose their cabinets but they're stuck with an independently elected Council of State.

Traditionally, there's some friction between the governor and the members of the Council of State — the lieutenant governor, attorney general, secretary of state, auditor, treasurer, superintendent of schools, labor commissioner, insurance commissioner and agriculture commissioner. But, in recent memory, at least, that friction has been held to a minimum.

Now in his second term, Gov. Jim Hunt is having some trouble with the members of the Council of State. But, surprisingly, say some of his top aides, he's not having difficulty with the people he sparred with in his first term.

Hunt has had some highly publicised tiffs with Labor Commissioner John Brooks' control of elevator safety inspection. Then he got outraged over a proposed computer consolidation. Finally, Brooks called Hunt's Job Network a "publicity stunt."

At a press conference, Hunt was asked if he sometimes found Brooks to be a "pain in the neck." Surprisingly, Hunt didn't deny that Brooks is a pain. He just said, "Those are your words, not mine."

Auditor Ed Renfrow also complained about the computer plan. And, he really angered some of Hunt's favorite people when he took after the Council on the Status of Women last year. Now, Renfrow is pushing legislation that would recodify his job and Hunt's legal counsel has been trying to amend it heavily. The bill would remove some of Renfrows's obligations to the state personnel and budget offices.

Renfrow says, however, that he and Hunt have no more trouble than any auditor and a governor should have. His bill has nothing to do with he governor, he said.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram gives Hunt trouble. But then Ingram hasn't been able to get along with his own deputies, with other members of the council or with many legislators. So Hunt's problems with him are nothing out of the ordinary.

What is interesting to hear from Hunt insiders is that he and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green are getting along so well. "He's been great this year," one Hunt aid said of Green. "He's done evreything we've asked of him." Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten are apparently working well together, too, the sources said. Hunt's closest ally is Secretary of State Thad Eure and he has good relationships with all other members of the council.

During Hunt's first term, when Green and Edmisten were jockeying to run for governor in 1980, Hunt's push for a succession amendment to the Constitution put him at cross purposes with these two. Now that Hunt's political future no longer includes governorship, that friction has subsided. Also gone are the legislative fights created by Hunt's early ambitious program.

Hunt's people say Brooks and Renfrow often feel their independence is threatened by the governor. They're elected statewide and don't like answering to Hunt on budget and personal matters.

One Hunt aide offered another view however. "The problem is Jim Hunt. He wants all the glory for everything ... and it absolutely tears them off their frames. He's always stealing their glory."

Sounds like a family squabble.

Strength For Today

There is a legend that a noble in medieval times strung wires from the turret of his castle to another, hoping that the wind passing through them would make pleasant sounds, and even sweet music.

He waited in vain for several years and never heard anything more than a low humming, until one night there was a terrible storm. Then, as the heavens crashed with thunder and lightning flashed, and as the winds of a tornado swept across the castle, suddenly the wires burst into sweet melody.

Music of a stately and inspiring character such as he had never expected to hear came on that night of the storm. But it took the storm to produce the melody.

Even legends had in them some truth. It was not a Christian believer but the avowed atheist, Robert Ingersoll, who wrote: "In the night of death, hope sees a star and listening love can hear the rustle of a wing."

MX Support May Be Weakening

WASHINGTON — Less than one month after its upbeat reception, President Reagan's new MX missile plan is suffering a relapse that this week will bring private bipartisan advice from the Senate to the White House: Get the Pentagon to stop undercutting the plan, or it will join all its predecessors in an early grave.

Pentagon foot-dragging has been suspected all along by members of the blue-ribbon MX Commission headed by retired Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft. But those dragging feet sounded like screeching brakes when Gen. Bennie Davis, Strategic Air Commander, testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

His testimony was bad news for the Midgetman missile, the small, single-warhead missile thrown into the pot as a follow-on of the MX to attract votes from anti-MX legislators. Davis' bottom line was that the Midgetman did not look all that great to the Air Force. Even Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger talks similarly in private.

This attitude in the Defense Department breeds new trouble for the MX in Congress when read in tandem with demands by liberals that the sanctity of the unratified SALT II treaty rules out any U.S. effort to build more than one new ICBM. The result is congressional suspicion that the Pentagon will junk Midgetman once it gets MX.

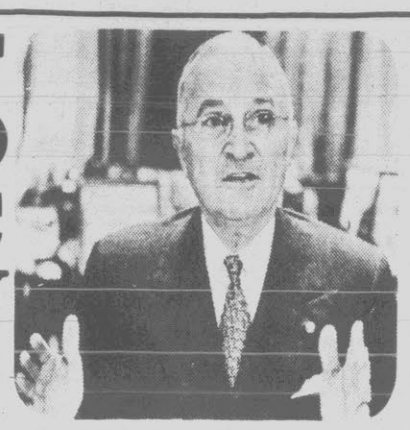

The warning to Ronald Reagan is expected this week from half a dozen influential senators of both parties, including Republicans William Cohen, John Warner and Charles Percy and Democrats Henry M. Jackson and Sam Nunn. Not all are publicly committed to the MX or the Scowfroft Commission plan, but each is thoroughly dedicated to the idea of a rational strategic nuclear defense policy and each wants the president's prestige protected.

But other senators, not so concerned about the integrity of either the Scowcroft proposals or the president, have mapped their tactics for opposing Reagan's last-ditch try for the MX. Sen. Gary Hart, a Democratic presidential contender, last December during debate over the MX won passage of an amendment whose significance was not generally understood. Its effect is to restrict the U.S. to development of a single "new" ICBM under terms of SALT II. Thus, when the Scowcroft plan comes up for floor debate in the next few weeks, the Hart Amendment can be used to oppose by MX arms control enthusiasts who support the Midgetman.

That poses a peculiar alliance of convenience. On one hand are Pentagon, particularly Air Force, interests who do not want to be committed to the follow-on Midgetman missile. On the other are anti-MX arms controllers, mainly liberal Democrats such as Hart, who do not want the MX ever built and are using SALT II as their wrecker.

A Presidential Award

Tomorrow Coretta Scott King and her late husband Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. will receive the 10th annual Harry S. Truman Award. The award was established in 1974 by the city of Independence, Missouri in honor of its most famous citizen. Each year the Truman Award Commission chooses a recipient whose life and work exemplify the fighting spirit and dedication to human service that President Truman admired. Past winners include Henry Kissinger, Leon Jaworski, Hubert Humphrey, and Jimmy Carter. This year's ceremonies come two days before the 99th anniversary of the birth of Harry Truman, the honest farmboy from Missouri who grew up to be the 33rd President of the United States.

The unwelcome visitors hang out on ledges of the building, and since a hot spell last week they've been able to wander into offices through open windows, sitting in on government meetings and generally leaving unwelcome souvenirs.

Literacy Test Upheld As A Diploma Requirement

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A state education official says students around the nation will be "the real winners" in a landmark court ruling that allows Florida to prevent high school students from graduating unless they pass a functional literacy test.

The decision Wednesday by U.S. District Judge George C. Carr means about 3,000 Florida seniors will be barred from receiving diplomas this year.

Black students challenged the basic skills test five years ago as being racially and culturally biased. Their attorneys said an appeal was planned.

Students get five chances to take the exam beginning in 10th grade, and those who fail their last attempt will receive certificates of completion instead of diplomas. Two-thirds of those who failed the test are black.

Education experts said the ruling would have far-reaching implications, particularly in about 15 states attempting to use standardized tests as diploma requirements.

"The students in Florida and the nation are the real winners through this court decision," said Florida Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington.

"The case commands national attention because of its effect on denial of diplomas," said Chris Pipho, an analyst at the Denver-based Education Commission of the States.

The multiple-choice Florida test covers math, reading and writing. Teachers say it isn't difficult but requires concentration.

Students are asked to figure discounts, compute sales tax, use graphs, tables and maps, do comparison shopping, separate fact from opinion, balance checks, complete forms, find references and pick out details.

Four years ago, Carr rejected claims that the test was biased. But in that ruling, ge said Florida couldn't use the exam as a diploma requirement until this year.

That way, he said, students would have had an opportunity to attend 12 years of integrated classes before the requirement took effect. A federal court ordered Florida to integrate schools in 1971.

A U.S. appeals court upheld Carr on the bias issue, but sent the case back for proof that material tested on the exam was indeed taught in classrooms. The court also ordered a review and clarification of whether any vestiges of segregation remained in Florida schools.

Carr found no faults and refused to lengthen the injunction.

"We profoundly disagree with the judge's opinion," said Steve Hanlon, who represented the black students. The attorney said he would ask Carr for a stay and appeal to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta if necessary.

In his 30-page ruling, Carr said Florida made great efforts to improve education after court-ordered desegregation in 1971.

"The (test) is an important part of those efforts," Carr said. "Its use can be enjoined only if it perpetuates the effects of school segregation or if it is not needed to remedy those effects."

Russ Vlaanderen of Denver, who retired last week from the Education Commission of the States, said 38 states have some type of high school competency testing with about 15 seeking to deny diplomas, but he didn't expect a testing fervor to result from Carr's ruling.

"That bandwagon has already passed through town," he said, noting the testing movement peaked in the late 1970s.

The Florida Legislature mandated the test in 1976; it was first administered the next year. Eleven black Hillsborough County high school students went to court to challenge the test in 1978.

Among the 11 was Huey Johnson, who took the test three times before receiving a diploma. Now a cook at a Tampa restaurant, Johnson, 23, said he thought the judge should "have asked the state to implement more remedial programs rather than to begin denying diplomas."

State Board of Education figures show 108,194 high school students — seniors now — took the test for the first time as 10th graders in April 1981. Of these, 74,833 were white; 21,226 were black.

As of October 1982, the latest complete figures available, 2,178 blacks (10.2 percent) were still failing, compared to 1,077 (1.4 percent) whites.

Meanwhile in Michigan, 22 percent of the students in kindergarten through fourth grade in Benton Harbor failed to meet minimum requirements in reading and mathematics and as many as 719 of the 3,190 students in those grades could be held back.

Test Comprised Basic Problems

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — These are sample questions that show the type of material covered on Florida's high school literacy test that was upheld in federal court:

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts precipitation for the northwestern quarter of the nation and most of California for Friday. A band of showers stretching from Missouri through Michigan is also expected. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

Clear skies, mild days and cool nights will characterize North Carolina weather for the next several days.

High pressure moving into the state tonight will be the dominant feature through the weekend, bring pleasant spring weather.

It was partly sunny to sunny across North Carolina Wednesday. A few showers occurred along the coast, and there was a wide range in afternoon temperatures. Across the mountains highs ranged from 46 at Boone to 66 at Brevard and Murphy. East of the mountains highs ranged from 64 at Greensboro to 76 at Fayetteville and Jacksonville.

It was mostly clear over the state last night. Temperatures cooled into the upper 30s and 40s for the most part.

Fair skies will prevail tonight. Lows will be in the 40s to around 50. Skies will be sunny statewide Friday. Highs will be in the 70s to around 80.

A cold front curved from southeastern Ontario across western Lake Erie and western Kentucky today. The front continued stationary across eastern North Dakota before curving over southwestern Manitoba and extending across central Alberta.

A cold front curved over eastern New Brunswick and another cold front was approaching the Pacific coast. Highs were over the northwest Gulf of Mexico and northwestern Ontario.

Surgery For Dog Attack

CANTON, N.C. (AP) — A 13-month-old Canton girl underwent surgery Wednesday night after she was attacked and severely injured by a neighbor's dog, officials said.

Tammy McKnight underwent surgery in Asheville's Memorial Mission Hospital after treatment at Haywood County Hospital, where a spokesman said the child was in fair condition with several cuts to the face and head.

Haywood County Deputy Dean Henline said the incident occurred while the child's father, Timmy Williams, worked on the roof at a neighbor's home at about 3:30 p.m.

Henline said the the girl and her 2-year-old sister were playing in the yard when Williams heard screaming and saw the dog, a mixed breed, attacking the child. He told deputies he beat the dog off his daughter and left for the hospital.

The dog's owner, Kenneth Mills, refused to comment on the incident.

"The owners wanted to shoot the dog," Henline said, "but we have to confine it for 10 days to see if there is any evidence of rabies. If the owners request it, the dog will be put to sleep at the end of the 10 days."

The attack was the most serious in western North Carolina since a pair of pit bull dogs attacked and killed Ruby Smith, 79, of Murphy on March 22.

Lebanese Vow Report On Lagging Massacre Inquiry

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese inquiry into the September Palestinian massacre has been stalled for months, and although officials indicate no action will be taken until the withdrawal of foreign armies, authorities vow the perpetrators will be brought to trial.

"The government will not shy away from punishing any crime where the whole facts are established," Lebanon's defense minister, Issam Khoury, said recently. "All those responsible in this case who are proven connected will be tried."

It was the strongest public statement yet by a high-ranking Lebanese official even though the suspects could be rightist Christians allied with the political party of President Amin Gemayel.

Two months ago, Israel's Kahan Commission, set up to investigate the killings, put the blame for the Sept. 16-18 massacre in Beirut's Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps on rightist Christian Lebanese militiamen.

Despite the Israelis' conclusions, no progbess has been reported in the Lebanese investigation by military prosecutor Assad Germanos. In earlier interviews, Germanos had said his investigation would be completed and handed over to Gemayel by March or April. Now he refers all questions to Khoury.

Khoury said he could "understand" why Germanos had been unable to meet the deadlines he had set, explaining that the prosecutor "was counting on speedy withdrawals to help re-establish state authority."

He suggested Lebanese investigators were incapable of interrogating or arresting those responsible because they were outside the 30-square-mile greater Beirut area that is controlled by the government.

"The fact that a delay has occurred in completing the report is logical at a time the state has not recovered authority over its entire territory," said Khoury. "We all know that some of the people whose arrest or interrogation the investigation requires are present in areas beyond the control of the state."

The massacre in the Israeli-surrounded camps followed the assassination of President-elect Bashir Gemayel, who was killed before he could take office.

Germanos told a news conference Oct. 11 that 328 bodies had been recovered from the camps and hundreds of other people were missing and may also have been killed.

It remains an embarrassment for Amin Gemayel, who became president after his brother was slain. Militiamen of his Phalange Party, founded and still headed by his father, Pierre, were implicated by the Israeli inquiry and by camp survivors. Observers say the arrest of party members would prove politically difficult.

Rightest "Lebanese Forces" militiamen, dominated by the Phalange, control the Christian populated hinterland to the north and east of the capital.

Criticism by Moslems and Palestinians has been muted, and there has been no public outcry inside the country for quick results on the massacre inquiry.

But there have been increasing expressions of concern about continuing harassment of Palestinians in Beirut and southern Lebanon.

Following a spate of bombings against Palestinian-owned shops in Sabra in late April, Moslem clergymen issued a statement saying "the gravity of the bombing of Palestinians' stores is evident when we note that all these people are now unarmed and without any supporter. If some have done wrong, this should not apply to all of them."

Etienne Saqr, 45-year-old head of the pro-Israeli Guardians of the Cedars militia in the Lebanese Forces, said in a recent interview the Sabra and Chatilla killings were a "natural Lebanese reaction."

"For eight years the Palestine Liberation Organization used to kidnap Lebanese and bring them to the camps," said Saqr. "What do you expect after the assassination of Bashir? What do you want us to do?"

Like other rightist leaders, Saqr cited previous massacres carried out against Christians by the Palestinians or Syrians. "Five thousand people were killed in Damour (during the 1975-76 civil war) and there was not a word of protest," he said.

Although the government staged a public hanging last month of a man convicted of murder, few government investigations have assessed blame for major political crimes.

Most remain officially unsolved, including Bashir Gemayel's assassination, the 1981 car-bombing of the Iraqi Embassy, the May 1982 car-bombing of the French Embassy and the attempted assassination of leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt in December 1982.

In the Gemayel case, the Lebanese Forces on April 26 handed over to the Lebanese government the man they claim was the assassin. He was identified as Habib Chartouni, 25, a member of a pro-Syrian leftist group.

Lebanese observers say the government is too weak to publicly identify those it believes are guilty. Lebanese officials such as Khoury blame most such terrorist acts on outsiders.

Speaking of the April 18 truck bomb that shattered the U.S. Embassy as an example, Khoury said: "This is part of the wars of the others on Lebanese territory."

$4.6 Billion In Cash Is Seized

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Federal agents, acting on a tip, staked out a plane bound for Panama and seized an estimated $4.6 million in cash, officials say.

Authorities contended that five people tried to transport the money to Panama without reporting it to the government, but no charges were filed.

"We have to determine if the money is from a legitimate source," said Leon Guinn, special agent in charge of the U.S. Customs office in Miami. "It's suspicious in that there was so much money in one place.

"We're still counting the money," he said late Wednesday. "We think it's more than $4.6 million."

The five people were released after Customs and Internal Revenue Service officials questioned them following Wednesday's seizure at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport.

Authorities said they were considering a lawsuit to have the cash forfeited to the government. Forfeiture can be sought whenever someone takes more than $5,000 in cash out of the United States without filling out the proper forms, Guinn said.

He said agents staked out a Learjet at the airport after getting a tip that someone was going to smuggle a large amount of cash out of the country.

The agents watched as 20 cardboard boxes filled with the cash were loaded into a baggage compartment of the plane.

Guinn would not identify the five people — a pilot, co-pilot, two Panamanians and a Miami Beach man — because no formal charges were filed against them and the alleged currency violation was the only evidence of a crime.

Evaluation

The Pitt County Mental Health Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Center's 1981-82 annual evaluation report shows that, during the period cover, 3,375 individuals were served by Pitt County Mental Health Center, an increase of 17.5 percent in the active caseload over the previous year.

On a per-month basis, the center averaged 1,557 direct outpatient client contacts, 95 emergency contacts, 227 marriage and family counseling contacts, 190 group therapy contacts and about 100 DUI referrals.

For a detailed analysis of finances, utilization patterns and program highlights, copies of the evaluation report are available at the Pitt County Mental Health Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse, the Mental Health Center Annex (Community Services), the County Manager's Office, Sheppard Memorial Library, and the Mental Health Association.

Drums Hold At Least One Body

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — X-rays revealed today that two concrete-sealed 55-gallon drums found in Golden Gate Park contained parts of at least one human body, the coroner's office said.

The large metal drums, one of them oozing blood, were found Tuesday by a mounted park patrolman.

The drums were not immediately unsealed because police wanted to save valuable evidence on the outside, like fingerprints.

Dr. Boyd Stephens, San Francisco coroner, said X-rays showed that a forearm was in one drum and other bones were in the second drum. He said a ring and a chain were also visible in one of the drums.

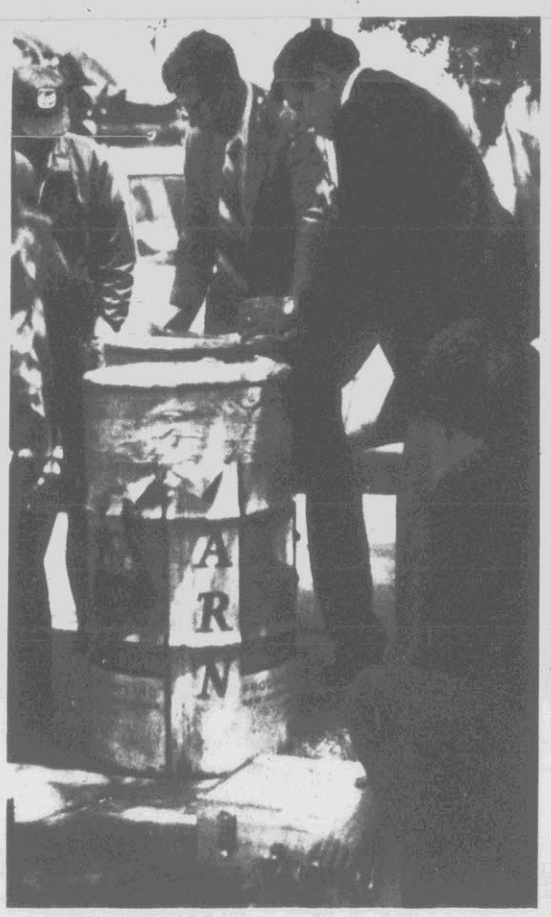

In addition to testing to see if blood from one of the drums was human, crime lab experts X-rayed the drums, each weighing more than 200 pounds, at least twice, and fingerprinted the plastic around them "strip by strip," said Administrative Coroner Joe Surdyka.

While the drums still were at the park, one cracked open during inspection by city Health Department officials and blood spilled out, according to officer Bruno Pezzulich.

He first spotted the drums, one red and blue, the other white and blue, on the grass during his mounted patrol and called the fire department because they looked like chemical waste. The name Varn Products was on each.

The fire department in turn called Dr. Richard Wade, a toxicologist from the city's health department, which sent investigators to the park.

"At this point, we don't know how they got there or how long they were there. It probably was not too long, because the blood was still fresh," Kowalski said.

Objects To Parole Plea

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Robeson County District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt has sent a letter to the state Parole Commission, objecting to consideration of parole for a man convicted of killing and decapitating a Fayetteville man.

Britt said Charles Beard Davis, who was convicted April 5, 1972 in Robeson County Superior Court on second-degree murder charges, is eligible for parole after 10 years in prison and is being considered for parole.

In a plea bargain, Davis pleaded guilty to killing Theodore Fisher Jr., about 18, who was shot in the head. Authorities said Fisher's head was cut off to make it appear he was killed in an accident instead of shot, and his hand was cut off because it was crippled. The body was then placed in a car and the car set on fire.

Davis was accused of planning and executing the murder to claim the benefits of a large insurance policy on himself by substituting a burned body, which authorities said were to have been identified by an accomplice as Davis.

Davis was sentenced to life in prison for his conviction of kidnapping the victim, and 30 years on the murder charges.

Britt filed a brief written notice of parole objection and said he will file a more complete objection after further research. Britt also mailed the parole board a photograph of the victim's head and hand to call to their attention the cruelty of the crime.

Incorporation Debate Spreads

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A dispute over the incorporation of the Currituck County town of Corolla continues to rage, this time in the Legislature.

Opponents and supporters of the measure debated for nearly three hours Wednesday without reaching a decision.

The county commissioners this week voted to oppose a bill in the Legislature that would incorporate 25 miles of Outer Banks beaches into the town. But the bill's two co-sponsors now disagree on whether to continue pressing for its passage. Another meeting has been scheduled for next week.

Claim Community Awards Help Attract Industry

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

State and local officials say North Carolina's Governor's Community of Excellence awards have helped bring new industry into the state, but they say the program hasn't substantially reduced unemployment in the towns that have received the awards.

The officials blame the recession for soaring unemployment figures during the program's first four years. North Carolina's average annual jobless rate almost doubled from 1979 to 1982, rising from 4.8 percent to 9 percent.

"The program was never meant to be a magic solution to unemployment," said Brent Hackney, press aide to Gov. Jim Hunt. "There are no guarantees that go along with the awards. They help, but they can't do it all.

"The program does what it was intended to do and that is bring industry into the state," he said.

In a survey of 10 communities that have received the awards since 1979, seven said they have attracted no new industries. Unemployment in the towns averaged from 4.5 percent to 14.7 percent last year.

The annual awards were set up in 1978 by Hunt to help recruit industry to North Carolina towns with populations of less than 15,000 residents.

Since the first awards were presented in 1979, a total of 147 communities from Burnsville in the western mountains to Elizabeth City on the coast have received certification along with signs to post proclaiming them a "Governor's Community of Excellence."

About 150 communities across the state are seeking membership in the program this year.

"The program works or we wouldn't have so many communities vying for the awards each year," said Priscilla Hartle Cantrell, assistant director of the Small Community Economic Development Program in Raleigh. More than $150 million in industrial development went to communities certified last year, she said.

The awards, administered by the state Department of Commerce, mean that potential industrial developers will be told that a town is prepared to handle industrial clients.

Requirements for admission into the program include gathering information on the availability of industrial sites, local utility and tax rates, governmental services, local planning and zoning procedures and a community profile of churches, schools and recreational facilities.

Communities competing for the awards also are required to prepare a brochure and slide show.

Profiles of towns accepted into the program are fed into a computer so industries seeking sites in North Carolina can have instant access to information about the towns.

Wadesboro planner Tom Kirby says collecting information and preparing a 15-minute slide show for the program was beneficial to that Anson County town. But he admits that neither Wadesboro nor Anson County, where unemployment averaged 10.8 percent in 1982, has attracted any new industry since receiving an excellence award in 1981.

"It (the award) forced us to gather much-needed date about our area, but I don't believe the award has helped us yet," Kirby said. "We haven't seen any results so far.

"I don't think being a community of excellence is any magic thing, that when you put the sign at the city limits you automatically get new industry," he said. "What you hope for is that it will help you in the long run. That's what we're hoping for."

However, one Anson County industrial recruiter, who asked not to be identified, called the award, "Mostly window dressing — a good show."

In the Cherokee County town of Murphy, Mayor Cloe Moore says no new industry has located in town since it was named a community of excellence in 1979. The county's jobless rate hit 18.4 percent in January.

"No, I can't say the award has gotten us any more industries," Moore said. "We've got some plants in the area, but they were here before we got the award. And most of them have had to lay off people because of the economy.

"I'm not really disappointed in the award because I didn't know what it would mean, but some more business here would help," he said. "We've had several inquiries (from industries) but none of them came here." He said the county doesn't have an industrial park.

Most of the town's 2,091 residents work in seasonal tourist-related businesses or in the area's several textile plants.

A spokeswoman in the Duplin County industrial development office, who asked not to be identified, said six towns in the county have received the excellence award but none have been successful in recruiting new industry.

"No, we haven't gotten anything," she said when asked about Kenansville, which received the award in 1979. "As a matter of fact, six towns (in Duplin) have participated in the program and not one of them has gotten any new industry yet.

"Does it work?" she said. "It hasn't here." Unemployment averaged 12.7 percent in Duplin last year.

In Cherryville, Gaston County officials also said industry has bypassed them despite the award.

"We haven't gotten any industry at all," said Sue Murdock of the Gaston County Economic Development Commission. The jobless rate in that county was 9.3 percent in 1982.

Officials in the towns of Fuquay-Varina in Wake County, Hamlet in Richmond County and Laurinburg in Scotland County, where unemployment last year was 4.5 percent, 14.7 percent and 12 percent respectively, said their towns' awards haven't brought in industry.

However, Claremont City Manager Robert Bernot said it's a different story in that Catawba County town where at least four companies have located since Claremont won an excellence award in 1979.

"The Community of Excellence Award has meant a lot to this town," Bernot said. "We have gotten quite a bit of new industry just in the last two years. And we're still growing."

Bernot said the town has attracted a Michigan glass-making firm that will eventually employ 500 workers, a company that produces satellite dishes and two furniture plants.

Officials in the coastal community of Whiteville also are enthusiastic about the effect of the award on their town.

"We've gotten at least two new industries that I know of since we got the award in 1979," said City Manager Jack Ervin. "And that's not all the award did for us. I think we benefitted from the fact that it got the town together and taught us a lot about the process of economic development.

"In all, four towns in Columbus County are in the program, and what that means is that they all have a good presentation available and ready when I have a prospective industrial client," he said. "That's worth a lot."

Despite the lack of results in some communities, towns like Mount Holly in Gaston County are eager to go after the awards. Mount Holly officials are in the process of compiling information for the state by the August deadline.

"We feel that we need all the help we can get," said Bill Gallman, coordinator of Mount Holly's program. "It has gotten very competitive trying to attract industry to your town. But we think we have a lot to offer and the program has a lot to offer, so we're optimistic it will help us."

Survived A Bridge Jump

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year-old Riegelwood man survived a 65-foot jump from the Cape Fear Memorial Bridge into the Cape Fear River Wednesday, afternoon police say.

Wilmington police and friends tried for about a hour to talk Kenneth Sutton out of jumping.

Sutton had crawled under the bridge's steel grate onto a 2½-foot-wide catwalk, swung his legs over the side, hung with his arms outstretched for about a minute and let go, said bridgetender Debbie Da San Martino.

Sutton fell into the choppy waters at about 3:45 p.m. A man used a boat hook to pull Sutton into his small runabout within five minutes after he hit the water, said Michael Overton, a Wilmington police officer.

Sutton, who was not seriously injured after the fall, was conscious when an unidentified man brought him to the east bank of the river where rescue workers wrapped him in a blanket.

"I don't think he wanted to drown," Ms. Da San Martino said.

Lt. W.W. Bradshaw said Sutton apparently was depressed when he decided to jump.

Sutton was listed in satisfactory condition in New Hanover Memorial Hospital Wednesday night where police said he will be admitted for psychiatric examination.

PROBABLY ON TOUR

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ten foreign relief workers abducted by rebels in Ethiopia two weeks ago are safe and probably being taken on a tour of famine-hit areas of Ethiopia by their captors, the Irish aid agency Concern says.

Say Comet Approaching

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An infrared telescope launched in January to search for undiscovered astronomical bodies has spotted a fast-moving comet that will pass near Earth early next week, scientists say.

The discovery marks the first time a comet has been found by an instrument that measures temperatures, rather than visible light, Jet Propulsion Laboratory spokesman Allen Wood said Wednesday.

It also is the first time a comet has been seen at far-infared wave lengths, where very cold objects emit most of their radiation.

JPL officials discovered the new comet in data relayed to Earth on April 25, at the same time two amateur astronomers sighted the distant object, Allen said.

The comet was named IRAS-Araki-Alcock after its discovers — Genichi Araki of Japan and and G.E.D. Alcock of England.

The comet, which will pass about 3.1 million miles from Earth on May 10, will not be visible to the naked eye unless the sky is very dark, Allen said. It will move the equivalent of four time the Moon's apparent diameter each hour, he said.

Astronomers believe comets have a nucleus made up of frozen gases and water mixed with dust particles, sometimes compared to a dirty snowball. As comets approach the sun, heat causes the outer layers of the nucleus to evaporate, sending out a trail of dust and gases that make up the visible "tail."

Comets have been observed since ancient times. The best-known of all comets was named for Edmund Halley and has been observed every 75 to 76 years.

Halley's comet was sighted again last October by two California Institute of Technology astroners and will make its next pass by the sun in 1986.

The infrared satellite was launched Jan. 25 as a joint project of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Netherlands Space Agency and the British Science and Engineering Research Council. JPL is the U.S. management center.

Ohio Company Purchases Mall

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Cleveland, Ohio, company has purchased the Wilkes Mall for about $15 million after meeting in Charlotte to reach a settlement on the financially troubled shopping center.

First Union Real Estate and Equity Mortgage Investments bought the mall from GE Management and Development Corp. of Wilkesboro, which was facing foreclosure on its debt of more than $13 million to the mortgage company which financed the mall.

First Union Real Estate has no connection with First Union National Bank of North Carolina.

Spokesmen for First Union and G.E. Management said that as part of the sale, the companies have agreed to drop lawsuits against each other.

Wilkes County residents Maurice Elledge and Russell Gambill began promoting the idea for Wilkes Mall in 1977 or 1978. Elledge had been chief executive officer of Johnson Construction Co. in Monroe during the early 1970s before joining Gambill Brothers Construction Co. in Wilkesboro.

The developers' plan was to build the mall, lease its space, then profit by selling it to a pension fund, insurance company or investment trust with experience in operating malls.

But efforts to find a buyer were difficult. Major national insurance companies and banks, including First Union National Bank in Charlotte, declined to get involved.

Then a mortgage company executive told Elledge and Gambill about First Union Real Estate Equity and Mortgage Investments of Cleveland.

GE Management and Development Corp., Elledge's and Gambill's company, obtained a $12.5 million construction financing loan from First National Bank of Boston, payable upon completion of the mall.

The mall opened last October, with Belk, J.C. Penney and Woolco as anchor tenants.

Correction

According to Kenny Dews, president of the Pitt County Farmers Market Association, the Farmer's Market will be at Pitt Plaza again this year, not at a proposed new site near the bus garage.

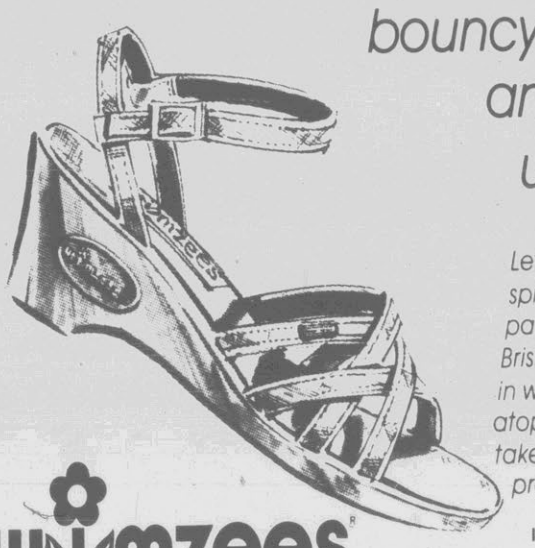

An article in Wednesday's Daily Reflector quoted another spokesman for the Farmer's Market as saying the market would open at the new site, leased from Pitt County Schools, in May.

According to Dews, the Farmers Market Association has considered the site near the bus garage but has not officially voted on it. "As far as we know now we'll be opening at the usual Pitt Plaza location," he said. The association will vote on the proposed location Monday, he added.

Soybean Growers Are Honored

Two soybean growers were honored recently by the North Carolina Soybean Producers Association for having winning entries in a state soybean-yield contest.

Thomas Hardy, a Greene County soybean grower, was honored for having three winning entries in a state soybean-yield contest. One of Hardy's 1982 entries in a state contest yielded 56.23 bushels per acre. A second contest entry yielded 56.02 bushels and a third produced 47.9 bushels.

Hardy, who farms near Farmville, was the only state grower to have three winning entries. He won the honors with two varieties of soybeans, Ransom and Coker 237.

Bill Harrell, a Wilson County soybean grower, was also honored by the association for an entry that yielded 57.48 bushels per acre. Harrell, who farms near Stantonsburg, won the honor with a Ransom soybean variety.

Govm't Dissolves Communist Party In Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran has dissolved the country's communist party, saying its members spied for foreign powers and gave arms to anti-government groups, the official IRNA news agency said today.

The announcement came a day after Iran expelled 18 Soviets accused of interfering with the coutnry's internal affairs and working with "treacherous and mercenary agents" in the country.

The prosecutor general of Iran, Hussein Musavi Tabrizi, ordered the dissolution of the pro-Moscow Tudeh Party on Wednesday and told all members and supporters of the party to report to prosecutors' officers, INRA said.

Those who agreed to fill out a form would be free, but those who failed to report by May 7 in Tehran or June 15 in the rest of the country would be prosecuted as a counter-revolutionary and prosecuted, INRA said.

The order said the dissolution was decided because the party had been indulging in "espionage for the benefit of foreign powers, misappropriation of arms and ammunition and storing them to counter the Islamic government of the Iranian republic, connection with armed groups, sabotage in factories and finally infiltration into government and revolutionary organizations as well as military and security centers."

The agency said Wednesday the expelled Soviets include 15 diplomats at the embassy in Tehran and Soviet offices elsewhere in Iran and three military attaches — two colonels and a major.

It quoted a Foreign Ministry statement as saying they "have been accused of interfering in the internal affairs of the Islamic Republic through establishing contacts and taking advantage of treacherous and mercenary agents."

"This blatant interference is an open violation of diplomatic regulations and of internationally recognized principles as well as being detrimental to the healthy relations of coexistence," the statement said.

Last Saturday, Iran ordered all Tudeh Party members to report to Revolutionary Guard centers immediately for identification.

It also said an unspecified number of Tudeh members had been arrested "on the basis of confessions" made by some of the 70 Tudeh members detained since February on charges of spying for the Soviet Union and conspiring to overthrow the Khomeini regime.

Iran, a Moslem fundamentalist state, denounces both the United States and the Soviet Union as godless and satanic. Relations with the Soviet Union have been deteriorating, with Iran condemning the Soviet war against anti-Marxist Moslem rebels in neighboring Afghanistan and protesting what it claims are new Soviet arms shipments to Iraq, which is at war with Iran.

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda last month charged that the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is persecuting Iranian communists at the instigation of "imperialist infiltrators."

Tiny Liver Transplant Patient's Life In Doubt

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Brandon Hall's lung deterioration has "stabilized," but the 13-month-old liver transplant patient still has only a small chance of surviving, officials say.

"Realistically, as far as the overall recovery, it's still very, very much in doubt," said Scott Kent, a spokesman for Le Bonheur Children's Medical Center. "That much (lung) damage is irreversible, and as long as he's requiring basic maximum respiratory support, it's not likely that it will heal."

Kent said the child still was on a respirator and lab tests showed his lungs were having problems passing oxygen to his blood. Brandon's lungs were damaged when his heart stopped twice during the first of two grueling liver transplants, cutting off oxygen to his vital organs.

Doctors reported Wednesday that Brandon's lung deterioration had "stabilized."

"In essence, it means that he's not getting worse. It means he's probably not in imminent danger of dying. If he's stable like this, he could go on for weeks," said Kent.

The first transplant, a 12-hour operation, was performed April 14, and the second one, which took nine hours, took place April 22.

The second transplant was prompted by a clogged artery to the first transplanted organ.

His new liver has worked properly, but doctors issued a statement Monday saying the child's lungs were failing and that he could die soon.

Kent said the child's mother, Billie Hall of Walnut, Miss., has been at her son's bedside almost constantly since his first operation.

Brandon was born March 12, 1982, and is the second-youngest liver transplant patient in the world. He is the youngest to undergo two transplants.

The boy weighs 18 pounds and was born without bile ducts in his liver.

Doctors said he was near death when he had the first transplant, 18 hours after he and his mother appeared before a congressional subcommittee in Washington, D.C., studying the plight of people needing organ transplants.

Mrs. Hall is unemployed, separated from her husband and without medical insurance.

Residents of her small town about 75 miles from Memphis have raised about $90,000 for Brandon's medical bill, which could total $300,000.

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 42.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is firm and the live supply is moderate for a good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,830,000, compared to 1,832,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices pushed ahead today amid hopes for further declines in interest rates.

Gainers led losers by almost 2 to 1 in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.00 to 1,215.65 by noontime. The average would have shown a greater gain had it not been for a selloff in one of its component stocks, Eastman Kodak.

Kodak shares led the active list and fell 2⅞ to 76⅞, following the company's report Wednesday of lower first-quarter earnings.

The NYSE's composite index rose .34 to 94.10. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.00 at 433.09.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 48.83 million shares at noontime, against 45.65 million at the same point Tuesday.

Biscayne Bay Is Blushing Today

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Biscayne Bay blushed hot pink today, most of its islands only partly dressed in mammoth plastic skirts after winds slowed the debut of Christo's avant-garde "Surrounded Islands" project.

The Bulgarian-born artists' 400 workers reported to the project's Pelican Harbor Yacht Club headquarters at 3 a.m., but winds kept them in port for seven hours. Finally, as the winds lessened and the sun began shining through hazy skies at about 10 a.m., Christo summoned double crews to two islands.

The northernmost island in the 11-island project was wrapped by sunset Wednesday, but workers still had to unfurl miles of bright plastic sheets from floating booms to transform 10 other pine-studded banks into a seven-mile chain of giant lily pads.

"It is an outdoor project. It can be done only in good weather," the 47-year-old artist said before heading into the bay ahead of his workers. "The weather is part of the art."

His wife, Jeanne-Claude Christo, said they were not worried about the delay. "What's the rush?" she said.

Azure waves lapped gently at the pink booms as the rosy polypropylene that had already been spread out shimmied with the tides and glistened in the sun.

"It's a historic moment," said Lynn Hicks, a University of Florida art student and one of the workers paid $28 a day to help realize Christo's unusual vision. "We read about a lot of art history. Now is a good time to take part in it."

Jack Kassewitz Jr. of the National Wildlife Rescue Team monitored the bay's wildlife from a boat, which Christo furnished as part of a court settlement. Kassewitz reported no problems Wednesday.

To stage the $3.1 million extravaganza at his own expense, Christo had to secure 10 environmental permits and settle Kassewitz's lawsuit.

Leaders of the project stopped the "blossoming" of the other islands Wednesday afternoon as high winds made the large pieces of woven plastic hard to control. A brief afternoon storm further complicated matters, but workers stayed out on the once-deserted islands, finishing up one and working on the support structure.

The islands are to sport their floating tutus for two weeks. The fabric will then be sliced up and given away to anyone who wants it.

Meanwhile, Miami residents debated whether the island wrapping was artful or awful.

"To tell you the truth, I thought the islands looked better the way they were ... but it's good to see all these people out here," said charter boat captain Kevin Rinker.

"The way I look at it, if somebody walks by a painting and says, 'That's nice,' and keeps on walking, that's not art," argued Robert Tilson, an artist from Tampa who joined the Christo crew. "But if a lot of people start talking about it and arguing over whether it's art ... then that's art because it arouses communication and stimulates the search for new ideas."

Observed a bemused Florida Marine Patrol Capt. Bill Saunderson: "I'm not an artiste, I'm a cop. But I don't think it looks bad at all."

Each of the man-made spoil islands had been outlined by the coral-colored booms, which were anchored 250 feet from shore. Nylon cables radiated from the pine groves like bicycle spokes, controlling the folds of plastic pocketed under the booms.

To unfurl the plastic and draw it up to the edge of the trees, the pink-shirted workers pulled on the cables, loosening the luminous fabric to billow in the waves and wind.

"Christo's genius is his ability to incite the public," said Burt Chernow, the artist's chief spokesman and a professor at Housatonic college in Connecticut. "When you see pink after this, you'll think of Christo."

Students Hear Visiting Artist

Two activities for students were held at Third Street School this week.

On Tuesday Christopher Deane, percussionist and visiting-artist at Pitt Community College, performed a variety of foreign songs for students in an assembly. An explanation of instruments was also given.

On Thursday, a member of the Bikeway Committee and a police officer talked to students about bicycle safety and called to the attention of students the Saturday Bike Rodeo. Additionally, a film on bike safety was shown.

Spurs Jab Nuggets, 145-105

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The crowd started yelling it during the Spurs National Basketball Association playoff semifinal clincher with Denver and even San Antonio guard George Gervin, known as "Ice" for his cool demeanor, admitted he was thinking it.

"We want LA," the fans said. "We want LA."

The Spurs got Los Angeles — by blowing out the Nuggets 145-105 Wednesday night to clinch their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series 4-1.

"I knew we had this game won after three quarters," said Gervin, who was the game's high scorer with 26 points.

San Antonio meets the Lakers in another best-of-seven series that begins Sunday in Los Angeles. The winner goes on to the NBA championship series.

"We feel very confident we can play with the Lakers," Spurs Coach Stan Albeck said. "Even in Los Angeles."

Johnny Moore, who scored 20 points Wednesday and wound up with an NBA playoff series record 71 assists, said the Spurs won by helping each other out.

"They had to score their points on the Spurs, not just individuals," Moore said. "It was a team effort."

That team effort added up to four playoff records for an NBA playoff five-game series — 181 total assists, 274 field goals made, 51.6 field goal percentage and 664 total points scored.

San Antonio set another playoff record, this one for a single game, with 51 assists Wednesday night.

Five other Spurs were in double figures besides Gervin and Moore and San Antonio outrebounded Denver 75-46.

"There was nothing we could do," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We really didn't want to get blown out as badly as we did."

"We got things going in the first quarter, but it wasn't enough," said Denver forward Kiki Vandeweghe, the league's No. 2 scorer in the regular season, who finished with only 13 points. "Once you start missing, it's contagious."

The Nuggets' only lead, 12-11, came early in the first quarter.

But San Antonio steadily pulled ahead and had Denver led 35-21 after the first period on nine straight points, including a three-pointer from Mike Dunleavy.

San Antonio scored 12 consecutive points in a two-minute stretch in the second quarter to build the margin to 67-38 with 3:12 left in the period. It was 72-46 at halftime.

San Antonio continued to dominate the Nuggets in the third quarter, leading 112-75 going into the final period.

Albeck emptied the bench in the last quarter — and his team still ended up hitting 54 percent of its field goals in the game, compared to 38 percent for the Nuggets.

Gene Banks scored 23 points for San Antonio. Edgar Jones 14, Mike Sanders 10 and Roger Phegley 12, including two three-pointers. Artis Gilmore had 17 points, 15 rebounds and blocked five shots.

Billy McKinney led the Nuggets with 20 points, while Alex English and Rob Williams added 18 apiece.

Lady Pirates Seeded Third

GRAHAM — East Carolina University's Lady Pirates have been seeded third in a field of 13 teams participating in the National Invitational Slow Pitch Softball Tournament, beginning today in Graham.

The tournament is sponsored by the American Softball Association since the NCAA does not recognize slow pitch softball, only fast pitch for championship purposes.

The University of Florida is top-seeded in the field, followed by Florida State. The Lady Pirates, who won the North Carolina state title last week, are followed by South Florida and UNC Charlotte in the top five.

Other seeded teams are Cleveland State at number six, Northern Kentucky at number seven and Western Carolina at number eight.

Unseeded teams are Georgia Southern, Capital University, North Carolina A&T, Mississippi University for Women, and the University of West Florida.

East Carolina begins play tonight at 7:30 p.m. against the winner of a game between Cleveland State and West Florida.

The tournament continues through Saturday and will be the final slow pitch activity for the Pirates, who switch to fast pitch next spring.

Pitt Tops Bladen, 6-3

DUBLIN — Pitt Community College gained a 6-3 tennis victory over Bladen Technical College yesterday.

Pitt carried only four players to the match, winning each of the four singles and the two doubles matches it participated in. Bladen's three wins came on two singles forfeits and one in the doubles.

Now 6-1, Pitt closes out the regular season on Monday at Coastal Carolina.

Summary:

Will Jones (P) d. Michael McLaurin, 6-0, 6-0.
Richard Harrison (P) d. Susan Allen, 6-0, 6-2.
Kent Perry (P) d. Russell Cromartie, 6-0, 6-1.
Arvin Williams (P) d. Cental McCoy, 6-2, 6-0.
Cindy Clark (B) won by forfeit.
Bobby Callahan (B) won by forfeit.
Jones-Harrison (P) d. McLaurin-Allen, 8-0.
Perry-Williams (P) d. Cromartie-Callahan, 8-0.
Clark-McCoy (B) won by forfeit.

Softball Change Coming Because Of NCAA Move

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

In the heart of softball country, several North Carolina schools have reached a crossroads on whether they'll continue to field women's slow-pitch teams, switch to fast-pitch for national recognition, or fold.

With the demise of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, women's softball teams had to look toward the NCAA for a chance to capture a sanctioned national title. But the NCAA announced that it would recognize only those teams that play faster style, something not even done at the high school level in this state.

Instead of switching or even retaining its program, North Carolina State recently announced that it was replacing women's softball with women's soccer, a sport in which cousin school North Carolina has captured two national championships.

North Carolina and East Carolina have chosen not only to retain their teams, but have made the move to fast-pitch.

At N.C. State, softball coach Rita Wiggs said the players were advised well in advance that this season would be their last.

"They were extremely disappointed as you can well imagine," Wiggs said. "The decision had been given some consideration for quite some time.

Wiggs said the move was taken after the athletic council weighed the good and the bad aspects of keeping the program or even upgrading it to fast-pitch status. Also taken into account was the absence of a national title in slow-pitch softball.

"The NCAA is not going to sanction slow pitch as far as the national tournament is concerned," Wiggs said. "It would have come down to competing in the state without any chance of national competition."

Another sticking point was the lack of fast-pitch competition on the high school level. To find such talent, Wiggs would have had to look out-of-state, which means spending money to travel.

Elsewhere, Wiggs said the University of Florida is dropping the sport, while Florida State is making the transition. Within North Carolina, she said, other schools are keeping their NCAA affiliation and adding an NAIA membership as well to keep title hopes alive.

"We had no other choice," Tar Heel coach Susan Clark said of her school's decision to switch. "We either had to make a transition or have a club type team."

Clark is currently running this weekend's Women's Intercollegiate National Invitational Softball Tournament at Graham, one of the few national championships for women's slow-pitch softball this season.

"The NCAA conducted a study and did not feel it was feasible to offer a slow-pitch championship," Clark said. "So that will be the end of it for quite some time."

As for finding the talent, Clark said she might have to do some recruiting, but she feels North Carolina's academic reputation will make it much easier to lure players to Chapel Hill.

"I don't expect to finish in the top 10 or anything, but I think we'll be able to compete with the Division II schools," Clark said.

East Carolina coach Sue Manahan said officials there also deliberated for some time before choosing to make the transition. As for recruiting, Manahan doesn't feel she'll have to look too far.

"I have a couple of theories," Manahan said. "I think an athlete can play softball, whether it's slow pitch or fast pitch. You might have to go north to find the pitchers and catchers."

As for development of homegrown talent, the state's high school athletic directors decided several weeks ago to steer clear of the fast-pitch game.

"Several years ago the same thing came up and received the similar reaction from the coaches in the state," said Ken Tilley of the N.C. High School Athletic Association. "If it needs to be dealt with, they might be concerned enough to make some changes."

Hines Picked As All-Star

BETHEL — North Pitt's Greg Hines has been selected to play in the boys' All-Star Basketball Game, to be held in Greensboro this summer.

Hines is the second Pitt County athlete to be named to the all-star teams. D.H. Conley's Darlene Cannon has been selected to play in the girls' game.

Hines, who averaged 13.5 points a game this past season despite playing injured much of the time, is described by Coach Cobby Deans as "a coach's player."

"He has been one of the leading players on a team that has gone to the districts three times in a row," Deans said. "He's very coachable, and gives 110 percent. That's one of the reasons I pushed for him. He's a practice player as well as a game player and is excellent on defense."

Hines missed seven games following the Pitt County Holiday Tournament when he suffered an ankle injury.

Deans will serve as one of the assistant coaches for the East team, of which Hines will be a member.

In the Kentucky Derby, which is exclusively for 3-year-old horses, colts carry 126 pounds and fillies 121.

Ingemar Johansson was defeated in the final of the heavyweight division in the 1952 Olympics but went on to become the world champion.

Farmville, SouthWest In Tie For ECC Track Title

PINETOPS — Farmville Central captured first place in the final event of the day, the 1,600-meter relay, and finished in a tie for first place for the Eastern Carolina Conference track and field championships yesterday.

Hosting SouthWest Edgecombe knotted the Jaguars with 107 points each, giving the first ever tie for the ECC track title.

Greene Central finished a distance third with 34 points, while Charles B. Aycock had 12 points to finish fourth. No other teams sponsor track in the conference.

As a result of the tie, Arthur Jackson of SouthWest and Gil Carroll of Farmville shared Coach of the Year honors.

The meet produced two double winners. Farmville's Wesley Carmon won the 100 and 200-meter dashes, while SouthWest's Douglas Moses won the 1,600 and 3,200-meter runs.

Angels Batter Baltimore's Birds, 16-8

By The Associated Press

Doug DeCinces didn't have his own number — but he sure had Baltimore's. And so did the rest of the California Angels.

They battered the Birds 16-8 Wednesday night, two of the big shots homers by ex-Oriole DeCinces, wearing a numberless, nameless unform for the second night in a row. "My jerseys were either stolen or weren't packed," he said. "It doesn't make any difference."

It also didn't make any difference who was pitching for the Orioles or batting against them. The Angels pounded out 18 hits against Scott McGregor and three relievers. Rod Carew had four of them to raise his batting average to .489. Juan Beniquez also had four hits and Tim Foli three. Carew, Bob Boone, Brian Downing and Bobby Clark each drove in two runs.

Elsewhere in the American League it was Boston 7, Oakland 1; Toronto 7, Texas 1; Cleveland 11, Minnesota 7; Chicago 3, Milwaukee 2; Seattle 5, Detroit 1, and New York 8, Kansas City 1.

"It's a very potent offense we have here," said DeCinces, traded to the Angels by Baltimore for Dan Ford before the start of the 1982 season. "We have a lot of power in our lineup."

DeCinces, who hit one homer against his former teammates last year in Anaheim, said he was delighted to be able to tee off against the Orioles in Baltimore. "It felt good to come back in and be successful against a team you played for for all those years."

He admitted he was trying to slam a third one in his final two at-bats, when he struck out and drew a walk. "I might have been swinging a little hard," he said. "When you're cranking up, you don't see the ball. The key is to stay within yourself and see yourself make contact."

DeCinces' homers, his seventh and eighth of the season, tops in the majors, were a solo shot off McGregor in the first inning and a two-run blast off Sammy Stewart in the sixth. Ford, incidentally, drove in three runs for Baltimore. Ken Singleton had the Orioles' hot bat with four of their 13 hits, two runs scored and two RBI.

Red Sox 7, A's 1

Southpaw Bruce Hurst, who underwent surgery on his left elbow last winter and had to battle his way back onto Boston's pitching staff, stymied Oakland with a five-hitter, the first complete game for the Red Sox this season and his first in 36 starts since he first joined the team in 1980.

"I just wanted to go nine in the big leagues," he said. "It's been over a year, with Pawtucket in Triple-A, since my last complete game."

"It's good to see a pitcher go nine," said Manager Ralph Houk, "even though it isn't all that big of a deal because of our bullpen."

The Red Sox put the game away early, scoring four runs against Rick Langford in the second inning, two of them on Dwight Evans' single. Tony Armas homered for Boston in the seventh inning, his first hit in 21 at-bats in Fenway Park this year. Rick Miller had three hits for the Red Sox.

Blue Jays 7, Rangers 1

Like Hurst, Luis Leal of the Blue Jays pitched a five-hitter. And like Miller, Alfredo Griffin had three hits for Toronto in the romp against the Rangers. But unlike Hurst, who lost his shutout bid in the eighth inning, Leal took his string of goose-eggs into the ninth before being tagged for a run.

"I thought I would get the shutout, but in the end I was just happy with the win," said Leal. "I hope I can throw the same way the next time I go out." Damaso Garcia drove in two runs for the Blue Jays.

Indians 11, Twins 7

Mike Fischlin drove in three runs for Cleveland and Chris Bando hit a tie-breaking grounder to spark a four-run ninth inning that beat the Twins. Fischlin had a sacrifice fly and two RBI-singles and Pat Tabler added a two-run homer for the Indians.

White Sox 3, Brewers 2

Rookie Lorenzo Gray's first two major-league RBI capped Chicago's three-run burst in the second inning that sent winless Bob McClure down to his fifth loss of the season.

Tom Paciorek doubled, Carlton Fisk singled and Rusty Kuntz singled for the first run by the White Sox. An infield hit by Mike Squires loaded the bases before Gray singled up the middle.

Mariners 5, Tigers 1

Todd Cruz' two-run homer and Pat Putnam's solo shot boosted the Mariners past Detroit, which got a solo homer from Alan Trammell.

Jim Beattie scattered six hits in seven innings and Roy Thomas earned his first major-league save. Both of Seattle's homers came off Jack Morris, who has given up eight in 471-3 innings.

Yankees 8, Royals 1

Dave Winfield and Don Baylor slugged solo homers, Shane Rawley scattered nine hits and Kansas City catcher Don Slaught gave the Yanks three runs with a wild throw.

Winfield singled, Baylor was hit by a pitch and Steve Kemp walked to load the bases in the eighth inning, then Lou Piniella grounded to third baseman Greg Pryor. His throw home forced Winfield, but Slaught, trying for the double play, threw wildly past first and three runners sprinted home.

Show Puts On Show For Cardinals In 10-0 Win

By The Associated Press

For the second straight night, it was the Mike and Bo Show in Philadelphia...while in San Diego, it was strictly Show's show.

Mike Schmidt and Bo Diaz accounted for seven runs between them for the second straight game to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 9-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night.

Eric Show, meanwhile, blanked St. Louis on seven hits to pitch the San Diego Padres to a 10-0 decision over the Cardinals.

"They're knocking in runs when they're supposed to," said Phillies Manager Pat Corrales of his hottest hitters after Schmidt knocked in four runs and Diaz three.

"It's at the right time," Corrales added, "because we're going into a key series at Montreal, where they have good pitching."

Show, 4-1, struck out seven and walked three in his strong performance against the defending world champions. And he did it without one of his key pitches.

"I still don't have command of my slider," said Show. "I'm pleased with my won-lost record, but not with the way I am pitching."

In other NL action, it was Montreal 4, Atlanta 1; Houston 4, New York 3; San Francisco 7, Chicago 4 and Los Angeles 3, Pittsburgh 2.

Phillies 9, Reds 4

Diaz's three-run homer keyed a five-run, first inning while Schmidt had an RBI single in the first, a sacrifice fly in the second and a two-run single in the fourth.

Winner Steve Carlton, 4-2, also hit two doubles and scored two runs in his eight innings of work. Carlton allowed eight hits, walked one, and struck out nine to boost his NL strikeout lead to 63.

The only solace for Cincinnati was Johnny Bench's 2,000th career hit.

"I can't think of a better pitcher to get it off than Carlton. He's certainly one of the all-time greats," Bench said.

Padres 10, Cardinals 0

Mario Ramirez backed Show's fine performance by driving in four runs with a single and bases-loaded double.

The game was marred by two incidents. St. Louis right-hander Joaquin Andujar, 2-4, was ejected from the game by home plate umpire Bruce Froemming when the two exchanged words as Andujar walked from the mound at the end of the fourth inning. Andujar then became incensed and charged toward Froemming, but was restrained by several teammates and coaches as he tried to reach the umpire.

In the seventh, Cardinal catcher Darrell Porter went after the Padres' Steve Garvey after Garvey slid hard into Porter.

Ramirez, filling in for injured shortstop Garry Templeton, highlighted a four-run sixth with his bases-clearing double off reliever Eric Rasmussen, which extended the Padres' lead to 6-0.

Expos 4, Braves 1

Steve Rogers continued his mastery over Atlanta with a five-hitter and Brian Little hit a two-run triple to lead Montreal over the Braves.

Rogers, 4-1, has a 9-1 record against Atlanta since 1978 with 10 complete games in 12 starts. The Expos' right-hander completed his third game of the season, tops on the team. He struck out nine and walked four.

"If there was a magic formula, I'd bottle it and take it out there every day," said Rogers about his mastery of the Braves. "I know it sounds flippant, but really there's no set formula. We played solid baseball tonight."

Astros 4, Mets 3

Mike LaCoss pitched a six-hitter and Tony Scott drove in three runs with a homer and double, pacing Houston over New York. LaCoss, 1-2, struck out three and walked one in his route-going performance.

Met starter Rick Ownbey, 0-2, gave up a run in the first inning when Scott hit his second homer of the season.

The Mets went ahead 2-1 in their half on Ron Hodges' two-run double, but the Astros chased Ownbey in the second inning with a three-run rally, two of which came on Scott's double.

Giants 7, Cubs 4

Jack Clark's two-run single keyed the San Francisco attack as the Giants defeated Chicago behind left-hander Atlee Hammaker.

Hammaker, 3-1, lost his bid for a third shutout in the seventh inning when the Cubs scored all of their runs, two of them on a single by Jerry Morales. Only one of the runs was earned, though, and Hammaker kept his National League earned run average lead at 1.24.

It marked the first time this season that the Giants, last in the West, have won two games in a row.

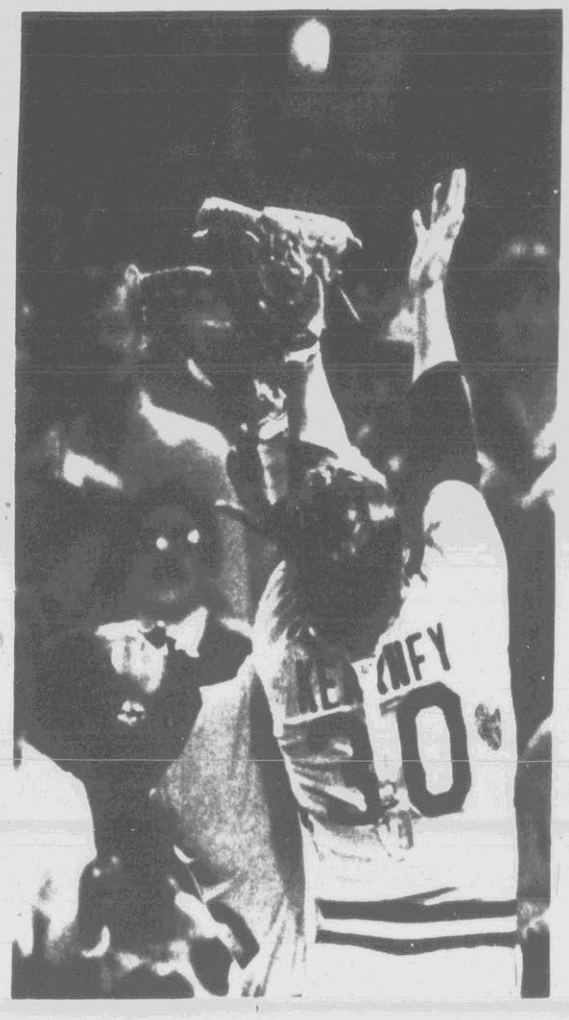

"That's what it takes to win consistently," said Manager Frank Robinson. "We've got to put everything together."

Dodgers 3, Pirates 2

Pedro Guerrero blasted his seventh home run of the season in the bottom of the ninth inning, leading Los Angeles over Pittsburgh. Guerrero picked on a 2-0 pitch from Pirate reliever Manny Sarmiento, 0-1, with one out and lofted it into the left field seats.

Tom Niedenfuer, 2-0, was the winning pitcher, retiring the side in order in the top of the ninth.

The Pirates had taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the eighth on a run-scoring grounder by Dave Parker. But the Dodgers tied it in their half of the inning when Mike Marshall scored from third as Jose Morales struck out on a wild pitch from Pittsburgh reliever Rod Scurry.

Competition

Oakland Athletics' first baseman Kelvin Moore (left) and catcher Bob Kearney (right) both go after a foul pop from the bat of Boston Red Sox' Jim Rice in the sixth inning Wednesday night in Boston. The two collided on the play and missed the catch. The Red Sox went on to win, 7-1. (AP Laserphoto)

Bullets In 6-0 Victory

CHOCOWINITY — Jamesville continued its march through the Tobacco Belt Conference softball race with a 6-0 victory over Chocowinity yesterday.

Jamesville got all it needed in the second inning, scoring once. The Lady Bullets, however, added two each in the fifth and sixth and got one last run in the seventh.

Crystal Perry, Kathy Williams and Robin Manning each had two hits to pace the Bullets. Williams and Kim Floyd each had triples.

No one had more than one hit for Chocowinity.

The Lady Bullets are now 10-0 against conference foes and 11-0 overall. They travel to Columbia today.

Oxford Hurdler Posts Best Times Of The Year

RALEIGH (AP) — Preston Thorpe, hurdler from Oxford Webb, is the big story in the fourth North Carolina prep track honor roll of the 1983 season.

Thorpe claimed first in both the 110-meter highs and the 300-meter intermediates with adjusted times of 14.74 and 39.24, respectively.

The honor roll, which consists of the top 10 boys performances in each event, features new leaders (or co-leaders) in six events, highlighted by Thorpe's marks.

Again this week, times will be adjusted to reflect fully automatic timing.

Other new leaders (or co-leaders) are Ricky McCaskill of Winston-Salem Parkland in the high jump (6-8), Alan Abernethy of Asheville A.C. Reynolds in the pole vault (14-0), Brian Ponder of Enka in the 800-meter run (1:57.6) and Kinston's 400-meter relay team (42.04).

Leaders who retained their top spots include Tommy Eckard of Hickory in the shot put (58-4), Reuben Davis of Greensboro Grimsley in the discus (168-5½), Danny Peebles of Raleigh Broughton in the long jump (24-3¼), John Tillman of Monroe Parkwood in the triple jump (49-5), Tim Harvey of Burlington Cummings and James Patterson of Fuquay-Varina in the high jump (6-8) and Tracy Fowler of Orange in the pole vault (14-0).

Also, Ollie Taylor of Greensboro Dudley in the 100-meter dash (10.54), Keith Chestnut of Durham Hillside, Delton Hall of Greensboro Grimsley and Tim Worley of Lumberton in the 200-meter dash (21.74), Hall in the 400-meter dash (48.54), Jim Farmer of Raleigh Broughton in both the 1600-meter run (4:16.2) and 3200-meter run (9:22.3), Durham Hillside in the 800-meter relay (1:27.97) and Wilson Fike in the 1600-meter relay (3:20.38).

The following is the second North Carolina prep track honor roll of the top 10 reported performances in boys' high school track. Additions and corrections should be made by calling Richard Walker or Bill Woodward at The News and Observer of Raleigh at (919) 829-4560 after 5 p.m. on weekdays.

NOTE: The times for running events that are hand-timed are adjusted using the following formula: for 100-meter dash, 200-meter dash and 110-meter high hurdles, .24 seconds is added after rounding up; for 400-meter dash, 300-intermediate hurdles and 400-meter relay, .14 seconds is added after rounding

Little League

Sportsworld 17
Lions 6

Sportsworld flexed its muscles on its first outing in the North State Little League yesterday, romping to a 17-6 victory over the Lions.

Sportsworld jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring six times. In the top of the fourth, the Lions came back to score three times to cut the lead in half.

But then, in the bottom of the fourth, Sportsworld sent 15 batters to the plate and scored 11 runs to put the game on ice, 17-3. Jay Kuykendall opened the frame with a walk and moved to second on a wild pitch, going on to third on an error. Galen Brinn walked and Tim Moore singled to score Kuykendall.

Jamie Brewington reached on a two-base error, scoring both Brinn and Moore. Dee Williams reached on a fielder's chocie and Kelvin Yarrell singled in Brewington, moving up on the throw. Tye Fickling doubled in both of those runners, and scored on a hit by Jeremy Mealister. An error on the play let Mealister come all the way around. Kuykendall, back up, was hit by a pitch and Jason Wing walked. Moore singled to score Kuykendall, and Brewington's single scored both Wing and Moore with the final runs.

The Lions came up with three more in the sixth, all on a homer by Josh Shepherd.

The Lions got only two hits off the pitching of Williams and Mealister.

Moore led the Sportworld hitting with three, while Yarrell and Mealister each had two.

1st Federal 14
Carroll & Assoc. 0

Frankie Pugh hurled a no-hitter for First Federal as the team opened its 1983 North State Little League season with a 14-0 romp over Carroll & Associates.

Pugh struck out eight and walked three in gaining the gem on opening day for his team.

First Federal got all it needed in the first inning, scoring three times. Pugh led off with a walk, but was cut down at second on a fielder's choice on Trey Dancey's grounder. A passed ball and a wild pitch moved Dancey to third. John Bolen then walked and stole second. Dancey scored on Maurice Dyer's ground out, and Bolen crossed on a passed ball. Lee Watson tripled, scoring on a wild pitch with the third run.

First Federal added one in the second, two in the third, four in the fourth, three in the fifth and one in the sixth for its 14-run total.

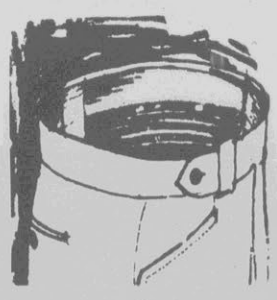

Pugh and Dyer each had two hits to pace the First Federal hitting.

Loftin Tops Putt Event

Jake Loftin cruised to an easy victory in the Wednesday Night Pro Tournament at Putt-Putt Golf and Games last night.

Loftin finished the three rounds of play with an 84, nine shots ahead of second place Allen Elder, who carded a 93. Loftin held an eight shot lead, 19-under-par, after 36 holes, while Elder was 11 under at that point.

Johnny Carrow took third place with a 100, while Lavern Mayo took fourth with a 101.

Goals Set By Black Assembly

Willie Reddick, administrative assistant for Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., was the keynote speaker at a meeting of the Pitt County Black Assembly Wednesday.

Reddick spoke to the group about politics, voter registration and education and the mechanics of governemnt. He explained what the vote means and how it should be used.

Donavan Phillips, president, gave a speech about the priorities and goals of the assembly for the coming year. Phillips said the top priority was to have an ongoing voter registration and education program. The No. 2 priority, he said, was obtaining more employment for black people.

The Pitt County Black Assembly is a United Front Organization which consists of social clubs, businesses, fraternities, sororities, churches and civil organizations.

Antibodies Resulting In Diseases Breakthrough

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists say they have used gene-splicing techniques for the first time to mass-produce antibodies that can target cancer cells, and hope the advancement will eventually let them customize the disease-fighters.

"What it is right now is a potentially important research breakthrough, but for the long term ... it really has almost unlimited possibilities," a member of the team that produced the genetically engineered monoclonal antibodies said Wednesday.

Scientists at the non-profit City of Hope National Medical Center at Duarte near Los Angeles and at Genentech Inc., of South San Francisco, said they extracted a gene that produces a specific antibody, one that attacks colon cancer cells.

The new gene, along with instructions to turn it on, was then grafted among the bacteria's normal genes.

Now the bacteria, like living factories, churn out quantities of pure antibody, which has been shown to function normally, a City of Hope researcher said. The group also successfully altered the gene to produce a new version of the antibody, he said.

The scientists asked not to be identified.

Similar announcements in the past — the hospital and Genentech have collaborated in recent years to produce insulin and other human hormones by genetic engineering — produced dramatic headlines and some criticism that the research was not first described in detail to the scientific community.

Genentech's Herbert Heyneker outlined the work last week at a Keystone, Colo., symposium on molecular biology.

Monoclonal antibodies, first developed eight years ago using a costly and cumbersome process, have shown great promise for diagnosis and treatment of diseases, especially cancer, and are used constantly for research. Gene splicing should allow them to be produced more cheaply and potently, the scientists said.

Because they seek out and grip target cells, the monoclonal antibodies are already being used to diagnose the presence of germs and cancer cells and show promise for directly attacking some cancers.

Researchers are enthusiastic about efforts to use them as guided missiles that carry bits of anticancer drugs through the blood stream and deliver them directly into cancer cells without damaging healthy cells.

With genetic engineering, "I think now we can improve on existing monoclonal antibodies to make them work better and probably make them a little cheaper," said Heyneker.

The City of Hope researcher said the cancer antibody was chosen only because it was readily available and any medical applications are years away.

"In a sense, this is a marriage of the recombinant DNA technology and the monoclonal antibody technology," he said.

Antibodies, the body's natural defenders, seek out and attack disease-causing agents such as bacteria or some cancer cells. Each of the millions of antibody lines attacks only a specific target.

Monoclonal antibodies provided, for the first time, a way to artificially produce quantities of a specific type of antibody, such as one that destroys colon cancer cells.

Until now, they have been produced by fusing together cancer cells, which reproduce themselves forever, and cells that contain antibodies.

N.C. Researcher Seeks To Find Way Reduce Bone Loss In Space

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina researcher says gravity and stress apparently are crucial to proper bone development.

Dr. Gerald L. Mechanic, professor at UNC's Dental Research Center, is working on a way to reduce bone loss among astronauts who remain weightless for periods as short as 10 days.

"It's becoming more and more apparent that the normal physical stress of gravity and daily life is essential for normal bone growth and function," Mechanic said. "As a result, long trips in space will not be possible unless we can find a way to prevent or minimize bone loss."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is supporting his work with a three-year, $224,000 grant. Experiments designed by Mechanic will be carried into space by the space shuttle over the next three to five years.

X-rays have shown it took six months for American astronauts to recover their full bone mass after flights of only about three weeks, he said. Russian cosmonauts who spent a record 175 days in space in 1979 had difficulty in learning to walk again.

"They must have been weak as kittens," he said.

Mechanic studies collagen, the fibrous protein that is one of the chief components of bone, cartilage, tendons and skin. Collagen forms an organic framework that holds the minerals such as calcium and phosphate, which give bones their hardness and strength.

He and his colleagues have found in animal experiments that bones that have been immobilized for long periods contain more non-mineralized collagan and less mineralized collagen than normal.

In tendons and skin, which must remain pliable, the closeness of collagen molecules keeps too much mineral from accumulating and preventing movement. But Mechanic said it's still a mystery why this occurs in bone during weightlessness and becomes worse over time.

Exercises aboard the space shuttle have helped, but researchers may have to try to find a drug to reduce calcium loss, he said.

"If we could do that, then astronauts could go up for a long, long time," he said.

But first, NASA wants to understand the biochemical changes that occur in bone. Such information could help older people avoid painful hip fractures, Mechanic said.

Mechanic is evaluating experiments that wold involve taking radioactively treated rats and rabbits up in the space shuttle. When the animals have been returned to Earth, the molecular structure of their bone collagen will be analyzed and compared after various exposures to zero gravity.

Arrest Said Part Of FBI Operation

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — FBI officials say the arrest of the director of the Robeson County Department of Human Resources Wednesday is part of a larger operation.

Christian G. Antwi, 37, of Lumberton, was arrested at his office early Wednesday morning and charged with five counts of misapplication of federal funds and making false statements.

"The action today is somewhat premature, considering the scope and anticipated size of the operation," said Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina. "However, the FBI felt it urgent that action be taken prior to any indictments to arrest this person."

The investigation began last December with help from U.S. Department of Labor inspectors, Pence said. He said several more arrests were expected.

Pence said the first four counts against Antwi involve misapplication of federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act job-training funds and the fifth count involves making a false statement to obtain travel voucher money.

Antwi was taken to Raleigh for a first appearance hearing before a U.S. magistrate Wednesday afternoon.

Antwi is accused of misapplying $200,000 for a computer program without authorization from the Department of Labor or without any bids or contracts, hiring an ineligible applicant and filing for false travel voucher expenses, Pence said.

Antwi could be sentenced to two years and fined up to $10,000 on each of the four counts involving misapplication of funds and sentenced to five years and fined $10,000 on the count involving false statements, he said.

Addressed More Than War, Peace

By DAVID W. TABOLT
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Their topic was war and peace, but the epistle of America's Roman Catholic bishops also offered ministry to the hungry and the poor, the young and their parents, and even the unborn.

It was a message that spoke to many with many voices — harsh words for the world's arms merchants, understanding for those who make the engines of war and a challenge to the scientists who developed the weapons "that threaten the existence of our planet."

The 44,000-word pastoral letter, approved Tuesday by a 238-9 vote at the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, condemned the first use of nuclear weapons, called for a "halt" to nuclear arms stockpiling and all but ruled out the use of nuclear weapons for retaliation.

Children were urged to give special thought to their life's work, "for how you spend the rest of your lives will determine, in large part, whether there will any longer be a world as we know it."n

Educators were told that "to teach the ways of peace is not to weaken the nation's will, but to be concerned for the nation's soul."

And with a voice resounding from the Sermon on the Mount, parents were told to raise their offspring with respect for justice and nonviolence so their children would "grow up as peacemakers."

The bishops approached their examination of the intricacies of the world nuclear arms debate with special feeling for the poor and the helpless, "for they are usually the ones who have the least to gain and the most to lose when war's violence touches their lives."

Nuclear war exacts an extra toll on those who have no one to speak for them in a world "riveted on the big powers," they said.

With public attention focused on superpower rivalries, the plight of "scores of countries and millions of people simply trying to survive" is often overlooked, the letter said. It urged a shift of priorities to help the hungry in developing nations and argued that security considerations as well as moral imperatives cried for the change.

"The threats to the security and stability of an interdependent world are not all contained in missiles and bombers," the epistle declared.

At the same time, the bishops noted "unprecedented" conventional arms sales worldwide.

"It is a tragic fact that U.S. arms sales policies in the last decade have contributed significantly to the trend the Holy Father deplores," they said, urging that the nation reverse course.

They spoke to the men and women in defense industries, admitting that "We do not presume that clear answers exist to many of the personal, professional and financial choices facing you in your varying responsibilites."

And they urged scientists who "unlocked the secret of atomic power," to dedicate themselves "to pursue concepts as bold and adventuresome in favor of peace as those which in the past have magnified the risks of war, (which) could result in dramatic benefits for all of humanity."

Fundamental to the 155-page document, which took two years to prepare, was an assertion of human dignity and the value of life — the belief that "the human person is the clearest reflection of God's presence in the world."

As with the bishops' stand against the arms race, that belief underlies the church's strong opposition to abortion. The prelates linked the issues.

"We must ask how long a nation willing to extend a constitutional guarantee to the 'right' to kill defenseless human beings by abortion is likely to refrain from adopting strategic warfare policies deliberately designed to kill millions of defenseless human beings, if adopting them should come to seem 'expedient,'" they said.

Foreign Workers Put Arabs In A Minority

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Foreign workers have poured so heavily into the oil-rich Arabian Peninsula that they have made minorities of the local Arab populations.

Newspaper editorials in the Persian Gulf side of the peninsula speak constantly of the "danger" they say the non-Arab populations present to native culture and morals.

Crimes by non-Arab foreigners are highlighted in the press. In Kuwait, a recent conference on the problem of Asian labor focused on the impact of Asian nannies on Arab children.

While most of the public criticism is leveled at non-Arab workers, some officials say they are more concerned about the danger to their culture posed by Palestinians, Egyptians or Sudanese.

The foreign worker populations, however, have become the first casualty of the downturn in oil revenues. Many governments are cracking down on illegal aliens and tighdening the immigration regulations that 10 years ago seemed little more than obstacles to development.

But no one expects mass expulsions.

"We need these people, they are here because they are needed," said Kuwait's minister for Cabinet affairs, Abdel-Aziz Hussein. Sixty percent of Kuwait's 1.3 million people are foreigners.

Western diplomats say the nations of the Persian Gulf do not yet have the educated elite needed to develop themselves, and the newly rich native people of the area, who traditionally frown on manual labor, refuse to work on construction jobs for foreign managers.

Consequently, the importation of foreigners has risen sharply over the past decade as these nations used their oil wealth to build and run new cities, industries, hospitals, schools and housing projects in their desert lands.

The trend is most striking in this ultramodern capital that 15 years ago was a small settlement of a few hundred homes on a sandy island.

Today, a million foreigners live in the United Arab Emirates, a federation of seven sheikdoms, and the native population is estimated at only 200,000.

All companies in the federation must be headed by a national, but a visitor to Abu Dhabi, one of the Emirates, might encounter only a handful of natives in management posts.

By 1985, the native population of the United Arab Emirates will be only 15 percent of the total population; in neighboring Qatar it will be 17 percent, in Kuwait 36 percent, Bahrain 51 percent, Saudi Arabia 64 percent and Oman 79 percent, according to a study presented to the Kuwait conference.

The biggest foreign populations in the Emirates are Pakistanis and Indians. Officials attribute this to the nearness of India and Pakistan. Karachi, Pakistan, is about a 90-minute flight from here, while Cairo, Egypt, is almost four hours away.

But Dr. Shamlan Youssef al-Aissa, head of Kuwait University's political science department, said in an interview that while most countries talk of the danger of Asian labor, they are really more afraid of Palestinians or workers from poor Arab nations like Sudan, and Egypt.

"They talk about helping the Arabs when they attend these Arab League conferences, but unfortunately, they would rather have Asian labor," he said in an interview. "They fear the Arabs and Moslems because they assimilate. They marry and tend to settle down. And the Palestinians, they are a problem. None of the states wants Palestinians."

He said Israel's forced expulsion of 14,000 Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut, Lebanon, last year led to even tighter restrictions on Palestinians.

Dr. Mohammed el-Awad Galaleldin, deputy director of Kuwait's Arab Planning Institute, said it was unclear if Asians were being imported because of a shortage of skilled labor in Arab nations, because the private sector preferred them or for the reasons outlined by Al-Aissa.

"Even companies controlled by Arabs prefer non-Arab labor, maybe because they are more efficient, more productive, cheaper and easier to control," he said. "We don't know really. We are studying the problem."

At the Kuwait conference on Asian labor, a college student's paper about the danger foreign nannies pose to Arab children prompted the Kuwait Department of Social Affairs to launch what Hussein called a serious full-scale study of the subject.

Galaleldin said the main concern was that the children were learning the language and ways of their Asian nannies before they learned Arabic and the customs of their parents.

"You have these nannies in every house, irrespective of whether the mother is working or not," he said. "Sometimes you have three or four nannies in one house. It's become a status symbol."

Embassy Beyond Repair

WASHINGTON (AP) — The damaged U.S. Embassy in Beirut is unfit for further use, says a State Department team of experts that completed a survey of the complex.

Beirut city engineers have reached the same conclusion and will determine whether to demolish the building for public safety reasons, State Department deputy spokesman Alan Romberg said.

The embassy, which was leased by the U.S. government, was damaged in an April 18 bomb attack.

Plan Temporary Revision Of N.C. Jobless Benefits

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Unemployed North Carolinians would receive fewer benefits and employers would pay more to the state's jobless fund under legislation approved by a House committee.

The House Employment Security Committee passed Wednesday a bill designed to help the unemployment compensation fund stay healthy. It would increase temporarily the amount employers must pay into the fund and the system by which benefits are calculated, but only until the economy improves to the point that the system no longer appears in danger.

North Carolina's unemployment benefit system is said to be the nation's third most solvent. But state officials say it has fallen to about $315 million compared with over $500 million at a similar point last year. If the trend continues, the state will have to borrow up to $146 million from the federal government to bail out the fund.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Jeff Enloe, D-Macon, would change the way employers pay into the fund by putting the contributions on a sliding scale tied to average yearly wages. Employers now pay a percentage of a set taxable wage base.

The change is expected to increase contributions by 17 percent this year and les in subsequent years.

The committee agreed that instead of multiplying average wages the employer pays by 66.6 percent to obtain his contribution, as now is done, the multiple would be 60 percent. But if the economy improves, the figure would return to 66.6 percent.

Under an amendment the panel approved, a provision was deleted that would have doubled the amount of benefits for which a person would have to be eligible before he could qualify for any benefits.

Currently, the minimum weekly payment is $15 per week and the maximum is $166 per week — depending on the wages a person was earning before being laid off. The bill originally would have increased the minimum to $30 per week, thus eliminating from jobless benefits roles some 1,800 people who qualify for less than that amount.

"All the experts think this will do the job," committee chairman and bill sponsor Rep. Jeff Enloe, D-Macon, said in an interview. "These are things we need to do to avoid being so bad off that we have to turn to the feds for help."

In other legislative action:

Child Abuse

The Senate Finance Committee approved a bill creating a Children's Trust Fund to pay for local child abuse programs. It would be funded by increasing the marriage license tax from $10 to $15 and earmarking the proceeds for the program.

Representatives of the state's county deed registrars had objected to the bill's provision that they collect the money and turn it over to their superiors for transfer to the state.

However, bill sponsor Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he didn't think it would impose an undue burden on counties.

Shortened Sessions

A bill that would shorten legislative sessions and make other fundamental changes in General Assembly operations was debated by the Senate State Government Committee.

No vote was taken, as the panel adjourned after Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, moved that the bill be approved. However, Sen. Gerry Hancock, bill sponsor and committee chairman, said he expected approval when the committee meets again.

Lawmakers raised concerns about how they'd keep abreast of actions taken by committees that meet between sessions, which the bill would allow in an effort to cut down on session length.

Hancock said all legislators would be mailed information new bills, committee meetings and other business. He added that the bill would prohibit any final committee action on legislation.

"There are more than enough safeguards," he said. "What we must realize is that this bill is geared toward preserving the concept of a citizeen legislature as opposed to a professional legislature. We have to ask ourselves whether these changes would result in more or less time in Raleigh, and I think the answer is less."

DUI Insurance

Insurance industry officials warned a House committee that a bill requiring maximum coverage for people convicted of drunken driving could backfire and harm innocent people.

Robert Paschal, a Raleigh attorney for State Farm Insurance Co., said the bill could affect people who unwittingly lend vehicles to convicted drunken drivers.

"If I lend my car to a friend with a DUI conviction and he gets in a wreck, that higher premium he'd have to pay would fall on me," said Paschal.

Other industry representatives and lawmakers debated the bill, which was sent to a House Insurance Committee subcommittee. It would require that people convicted of drunken driving carry maximum insurance on bodily injury and property damage for three years.

Jim Stamey of the state Department of Motor Vehicles said violators of the law would be detected the same way as others who don't have sufficient liability insurance.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee of the Insurance Committee approved a bill that would raise from $200 to $500 the damages that must result from an accident before a separate surcharge can be assessed under the Safe Driver Insurance Plan.

House

For the second time, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, asked that the House delay debate on his bill that would repeal by 1985 all administrative rules adopted by state agencies and require their adoption by the General Assembly.

Watkins said in an interview Gov. Jim Hunt had requested the latest delay so the two could discuss the issue further.

"He basically supports the bill," said Watkins. "There are some procedural problems he has that he wants to talk over."

Zeb Alley, Hunt's legislative liaison, said the governor "agrees something needs to be done about the superfluous rules that are enacted by so many state agencies. He wants them weeded out."

Watkins said the bill would give the Legislature a chance to decide what government regulations it likes and which it wants to scrap. He acknowledged that the bill is his personal response to what he sees as excessive administrative regulation.

Government agencies "are supposed to set up procedures, but aren't supposed to pass laws," said Watkins. "That's what we're supposed to do, and yet they make so many rules they seem like a second legislature."

Waste Bill

The House Water and Air Resources Committee approved a bill to provide strict liability for damages resulting from hazardous wastes in North Carolina.

The bill, introduced by Rep. William Clark, D-Cumberland, was recommended by the Governor's Waste Management Board. It would hold those who store, transport or generate hazardous wastes liable for damages caused by them without regard to negligence or fault.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee voted to repeal a 1980 law barring North Carolina from enacting hazardous waste laws tougher than those imposed by the federal government.

The subcommittee took the action by attaching an amendment to a bill sponsored by Clark regulating hazardous waste dumps in North Carolina.

A vote on the entire bill was postponed when Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who also has a hazardous waste bill before the panel, complained that the committee had agreed only to discuss the subject and vote at its next meeting.

Computer Commission

The House voted 104-0 to adopt a bill setting up a commission to regulate state government computers.

The commission would be headed by the governor and include most of the council of state, although a House amendment excludes the attorney general and adds a Legal Services officer. The Justice Department, which the attorney general heads, doesn't have computers affected by the bill.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, said the bill was needed to ensure more efficient operation of the computer system and stem its rapidly rising costs. He said the system costs $25.5 million this year and would cost $93 million within a decade if nothing's done.

Separation of Powers

A bill eliminating the Advisory Budget Commission's policymaking power with regard to bond issuance was approved by the state House with one dissenting vote.

Under the bill, the ABC would be able to advise other officials on bonds but wouldn't make policy. The bill is part of a process underway this session to comply with a state Supreme Court ruling that the divisions between the executive and legislative branches had become blurred.

Drunken Driving

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, filed legislation to appropriate $5 million over two fiscal years to implement Gov. Jim Hunt's anti-drunken driving program.

Watkins said in an interview the sum was "just a starting point" for debate on the cost of the program, expected to result in increased courtroom activity that could necessitate more judges, prosecutors and court employees. However, it also imposes fees on convicted drunken drivers that could pay for some or all of the costs it creates.

New Bills

Sen. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, filed legislation proposing a constitutional amendment to allow a county to exempt property held by a business as part of its inventory from property tax.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, filed a bill to exempt newspaper advertising supplments from state sales taxation.

A bill that would require businesses issuing credit or debit charge cards to disclose to card users any fees they'll be charged was filed by Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford.

Prison Alternative

The Senate approved a bill that would let some inmates do community service instead of parole, despite objections that it would disrupt North Carolina's Fair Sentencing Act.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said the bill would apply to non-dangerous inmates given their first active sentence of more than one year. They would be allowed to do 50 hours of work per month until the balance of their jail term ran out.

Swain said the public would benefit by receiving free labor instead of paying $23,000 a year for keeping inmates in prison.

But Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said the program would undermine presumptive sentencing for crimes almost as serious as rape and murder.

Census Bureau Says Nation's Birthrate Rising; Not Much

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's birthrate is going up. But not by much.

And the birthrate is still below what it was 10 years ago.

The Census Bureau recorded 15.6 births per 1,000 people in the latest national headcount. That's up from the 14.6 figure in 1975. But it's below 1970's 18.4 births per 1,000 people and 1960's 23.7 births per 1,000 people.

"What we have today is not another baby boom but a plethora of parents," said Bryant Robey, editor of American Demographics magazine.

The recent increase in births is an echo of the baby boom with more children being born because there are so many women of childbearing age who were themselves born during the post-war jump in births.

The current surge of births is taking place with a birthrate remaining quite low, Robey noted. The 50 million women of childbearing age today are producing only about as many children as 36 million women in the 1950s, he said.

Utah has the highest birthrate, Massachusetts the lowest.

The Northeast is the only region with a birth rate below the national average. Figures for 1979 — collected in the 1980 Census — show 13.2 births per 1,000 people. The West had 17.2 births per 1,000 people and the South and North Central regions had 15.9 births per 1,000 people.

Utah tops the nation in births at 29 per 1,000 people, well ahead of second place Alaska, which had 22.5 births per 1,000 people.

Rounding out the top five states for birth rate were Wyoming, 21.6; Idaho, 21.5, and New Mexico, 20.0.

At the other end of the scale Massachusetts had the lowest birth rate in the nation at 12.3 per 1,000 people. The rest of the bottom five were Rhode Island, 12.4; Connecticut, 12.5; Florida, 12.8, and New Jersey, 13.1.

Here is a state-by-state rundown showing the birthrate per 1,000 residents as recorded in the 1980 Census:

1. Utah, 29.0; 2. Alaska, 22.5; 3. Wyoming, 21.6; 4. Idaho, 21.5; 5. New Mexico, 20.0; 6. Louisiana, 19.1; 7. South Dakota, 18.9; 8. Hawaii, 18.5; 9. Texas, 18.3; 10. Mississippi, 18.3;

11. North Dakota, 18.1; 12. Montana, 17.8; 13. Arizona, 17.7; 14. Nebraska, 16.8; 15. Kansas, 16.6; 16. Colorado, 16.6; 17. Oklahoma, 16.5; 18. South Carolina, 16.4; 19. Georgia, 16.3; 20. California, 16.3;

21. Alabama, 16.2; 22. Oregon, 16.2; 23. Kentucky, 16.2; 24. Minnesota, 16.2; 25. Nevada, 16.2; 26. Illinois, 16.1; 27. Iowa, 16.0; 28. Washington, 16.0; 29. Arkansas, 16.0; 30. Indiana, 16.0;

31. Wisconsin, 15.7; 32. Missouri, 15.6; 33. Michigan, 15.6; 34. Ohio, 15.5; 35. West Virginia, 15.4; 36. Tennessee, 15.1; 37. Delaware, 14.9; 38. Vermont, 14.9; 39. Maine, 14.5; 40. Virginia, 14.5;

41. North Carolina, 14.5; 42. New Hampshire, 14.1; 43. Maryland, 13.8; 44. New York, 13.4; 45. Pennsylvania, 13.3; 46. New Jersey, 13.1; 47. Florida, 12.8; 48. Connecticut, 12.5; 49. Rhode Island, 12.4; 50. Massachusetts, 12.3.

Environmentalists Oppose Dam

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An environmental group says cities and farms near the proposed Randleman Dam on Deep River could make the water from the dam too polluted to use safely.

Members of the Greensboro area chapter of the North Carolina Sierra Club said they are opposed to building the $150 million dam, which officials in Guilford and Randolph counties hope will meet their water supply needs into the next century.

Sierra Club member Kathy Galucci, who did a study of the project based on information from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, said the 4,000-acre lake the dam creates would be vulnerable to pollution because it would be downstream from Greensboro and other cities and bordered by farms.

She also said the project has "changed considerably since its authorization in 1968."

Population projections from the Corps' environmental impact study for the project turned out to be too high, the cost of the dam has multiplied 16-fold and its main purpose, originally flood control, now is water supply, she said.

The Sierra Club joins other environmental groups like the Conservation Council of North Carolina and the Deep River Citizens Coalition, an organization based in Randolph County with some Guilford County members, in opposing the dam.

Senior Citizens In College Dorm Change A Campus

NAZARETH, Mich. (AP) — A college turned an empty dormitory into apartments for senior citizens and changed the face of its campus.

At Nazareth College, young and old now live side by side.

"It's just like therapy to eat with a bunch of young people," said Mabel Gaudio, who spends each lunch hour in the cafeteria of Nazareth College, surrounded by people less than one-fourth her age.

"They're just as kind and sweet as they can be," she said.

Mrs. Gaudio, who will be 92 in July, lives in Dillon Hall at Nazareth, enjoying campus life with 79 other senior citizens whose ages range from 60 to 92. She says she may "stay here until I get my call" — the final call.

Mitch Wesolowski, Nazareth executive vice president, says senior citizens are living in the dorm because "ge didn't have the students to fill it."

In the mid-1970s, facing annual interest and principal payments on Dillon totaling $205,000, the college decided to try something different with the dorm, which was built in 1965 to house about 200 students.

With a $2.1 million loan backed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the college's sponsors, the Sisters of St. Joseph, converted the six-story building to 75 one-bedroom apartments for low-income elderly occupants.

When Dillon reopened in 1979, the college gained an on-campus source of subjects for gerontology and nursing students, a dormitory that began to break even financially and a group of retired people who began a new lifestyle that seems to agree with them.

"It's kind of like having surrogate grandparents," said Terri Baumgartner, a 21-year-old Nazareth nursing student who has befriended Dillon residents.

"I know someday I'll be that age too," said John LePre, a senior in social work who has spent time with the people of Dillon since he was a freshman. "You can gain insight into the future because they've lived through the past."

Dillon residents take Nazareth classes tuition-free, attend college cultural events, get occupational and physical therapy at the religious order's nearby home for retired nuns and can join campus life to any degree they desire.

They have their run of the campus, and access is easy to most areas because Nazareth's buildings are linked by underground tunnels. Still, many of the retirees have little contact with students beyond weekly blood-pressure clinics run by the nursing department.

Others seek out informal friendships with the young people.

"I think that's probably the most important type of contact for both groups," said Sister Betty Granger, Dillon's 45-year-old resident manager.

Either way, both students and seniors benefit, college officials say.

Roger Krahn, dean of student life at Nazareth, believes it's healthy for young people to communicate with old people — that it helps them to learn to live in the world.

"I suspect that if Dillon wasn't here, and an elderly adult were to walk into the cafeteria, heads would turn," said Krahn.

One Dillon resident who takes full advantage of the college setting is 63-year-old John McQuade, who with his wife, Ardith, tries to audit at least one course each semester.

"It's got our brains stirring again," he said. "They forced me to work. I hadn't been inside a classroom since 1938."

McQuade also is a fan of Nazareth sports teams, which use the nickname "Moles," because of the tunnels.

"There rarely is a campus event I go to that I don't see some people from Dillon," said Krahn. "Even rock music in 'The Tunnel Stop' (a snack bar in one of the underground passages)."

Is there friction from the generatation gap between Dillon's 80 old folks and Nazareth's 550 mostly young students?

"I can't think of any problems," said Sister Granger.

"Sometimes they (the senior citizens) might hold up a lunch line — but that's no big deal," said student John LePre.

"A bunch of people is like a bunch of apples," Mrs. Gaudio said. "They'll be one or two bad ones in there. But they've got a wonderful place here."

Some Hospitals Organize Groups To Reduce The Stress Of Illness

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Going beyond medical treatment, more and more hospitals are organizing groups in which both patient and family can learn to deal with the physical, psychological and practical aspects of the illness.

"Medical professionals have long recognized that it's not enough to care for the patient's physical needs," said Dr. Maurice Steinberg, psychiatrist on the staff of Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center in New Hyde Park, which sponsors a number of self-help groups.

"Self-help groups represent a major part of the spectrum of therapeutic services that should be available to patients with serious physical diseases," adds Steinberg, who has worked closely with LIJ-HMC's successful "Living With Cancer" group.

The meetings, he notes, offer realistic help and reduce stress for both patients and families, providing knowledge and the opportunity to express personal concerns.

"Many people are able to use the education and mutual interest that a group provides to help them deal with their problems, and don't require anything more than that," Steinberg says. "Even patients who receive individual counseling find participation in self-help groups useful."

Topics in the cancer group cover subjects such as nutrition and the cancer patient, the benefit of exercise, managing anxieties, talking to the doctor and home care therapies.

"And always there is the sharing that remains the single most important component," Steinberg adds.

At one of the "Living With Cancer" meetings held at LIJ-HMC, one participant said, "The hospital treated more than my cancer. Coming to these meetings has helped me to overcome terrible fears. It's really important that my husband and children come with me. They've been at every session and together we're learning more about the strains and stresses of cancer on family life, and how to cope. That means a lot."

"I wish I knew how to handle him," said another woman attending her first group meeting for spouses of patients who have had open heart surgery. "What can he eat? What if he's very depressed when he comes home?"

Responding to her questions were a social worker and a nurse practitioner. And sharing in the exchange were a half dozen other wives who had the same concerns.

This kind of "give and take" among patients, their families and professionals happens regularly at the LIJ-HMC, which has long been involved in planning and developing such self-help groups.

Oakland Seeks Brighter Image

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The other big city on San Francisco Bay is getting tired of living in a public relations shadow. So it plans to perk up its image with a new slogan: "Oakland — the bright side of the Bay."

Oakland has hired an advertising agency to promote "all the positive things" the city has to offer, including a climate that is usually sunnier and less foggy than San Francisco.

Glen Putnam, an executive with the advertising agency hired to lead the ad campaign, said Monday that "the word 'bright' means a lot more than just sunshine."

'Extremes' Debate Compromise Midwifery Measure

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill hailed by many as a compromise on regulating midwives drew heated debate Wednesday as one faction sought stiffer restrictions and another lobbied against any impingement on a family's freedom.

About 30 people spoke at a public hearing sponsored by the House State Government Committee. Many supported the measure, saying it would assure quality care for those who choose out-of-hospital deliveries.

But Arnie Katz, representing the Citizens Commission on Midwifery, said the legislation could "make home birth as unsafe as we can possible make it" because midwives would be unlikely to get the physician's supervision required under the bill.

"This bill in its present form cannot and will not carry out the goal," he told the House State Government Committee hearing. "Very few, midwives will practice home births. Midwives willing to help will be unable to do so legally."

At the other extreme, several mothers who had difficult deliveries said the bill didn't go far enough to stop home births.

"If I had not been in a hospital with IVs and blood on hand I would not be here today," said Susan Peek.

"People can talk about freedom of choice, but you never know whose life you're putting in danger," said Gwen Davis, a Rocky Mount mother of three who said she nearly lost the third child when it became entangled in the umbilical cord.

The bill, introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, was recommended by the Department of Human Resources after a study of midwives in the state. It would let certified midwives perform simple, uncomplicated deliveries under a physician's supervision.

Midwives would be required to apply to a new board for certification after completing 12 months of study under the American College of Nurse Midwives and showing they were supervised by an obstetrician or gynecologist. They would also have to pay a fee to get a state license.

"There is a trend for people to have births outside the traditional hospital setting," said Human Resources Secretary Sarah Morrow. "I believe we would be making a serious mistake if we abandon these women."

She said many people prefer more informal settings with attendants more "sensitive" to the woman's emotions. But she warned of "unexpected emergencies."

Linda Glenn, president of the N.C. Chapter of the ACN, also supported the bill, calling midwives "an option mothers should have access to."

Mary Edith Rogers, public health nursing director of Gaston County, said there was a large need for midwives and home deliveries, especially in rural areas. She said nearly a third of births in her counties came without prenatal care.

Susan Edelstein, a registered nurse from Raleigh, said home deliveries were "valid and safe for the majority of women." She assailed the "myth" that home deliveries were more dangerous than hospital births.

But while many speakers considered the legislation a workable compromise, others said any law would inhibit the rights of the family.

"The bill should include a clause to not limit the right of mothers to deliver where, when and with whomever they choose," said Helena Whitney of Charlotte. Such a clause, appearing in a Utah law, was backed by several other women.

Allan Konnell of the North Carolina chapter of the Alternative Birth Crisis Coalition, an organization that gives legal support to midwives, said many doctors and midwives who perform home births are harrassed by the conventional medical authorities.

He said many are threatened with the withdrawal of their hospital privileges if they practice the home deliveries.

"There are not enough medical people willing to attend home births," added Bonnie Blue, of Sylva, who said the proposed law endangered lives by reducing home birth options.

She urged that the bill require medical personnel to inform pregnant women of all the alternatives and "remove the man-made cloud of mystery that ... makes parents feel out of control."

Merger Made By North State

William Reagan, president of North State Savings & Loan Corp., and Ernest Hackney, president of Wilson Savings & Loan Association, jointly announced the merger of Wilson Savings with North State as of April 30.

The officials said the resulting organization will be named North State Savings & Loan Corp. and will have Wilson Savings facility on Nash Street in downtown Wilson.

With the addition of the Wilson offices, North State now has locations in Greenville (2), Windsor, Ahoskie and Wilson. North State Mortgage Corp. has additional offices in Virginia Beach and Richmond, Va.

North State has also enassets of over $130 million.

"Ours is a merger of strength, with each firm complementing the other," said Reagan. "Wilson Savings has the facilities, human resources and the experience in Wilson gained through over 90 years of service to the community."

The new North State offices will be in the present tered into agreements in principle to merge with Martin County Savings & Loan of Williamston and New Bern Savings & Loan of New Bern.

North State Savings & Loan and North State Mortgage are wholly owned subsidiaries of North State Financial Corp. of Greenville.

Bridge Schedule To Ease Traffic Jam

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — In an effort to relieve summer traffic jams along U.S. 158 — a main artery to the Outer Banks of North Carolina — the Coast Guard will test a new schedule for opening the swing bridge across the Intracoastal Waterway at Coinjock, N.C.

The 60-day trial will begin May 27, according to Coast Guard Capt. A.D. Super, chief of the Aids to Navigation division of the 5th District, headquartered here.

The bridge now opens on boaters' demand, no matter how heavy the automobile traffic.

Under the new schedule, between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. the bridge will open only on the hour for the passage of pleasure craft. From 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. it will operate as before.

The bridge still will open on signal for government, commercial and emergency vessels, according to the Coast Guard.

The changes were requested by the Wilmington District of the Army Corps of Engineers, which operates the bridge. The Coast Guard said it was considering a permanent change because of increased automobile traffic during the summer tourist season.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You need to be careful that you are not too fixed and determined in your viewpoints today and tonight or you could encounter more trouble than you had hoped for.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't be forceful with others who disagree with your views. Come to a better accord with co-workers. Be wise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Listening to suggestions of associates is wise now and be sure to cooperate more with them. Try to be helpful to others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Schedule your work activities wisely and then carry through with them in a positive manner. Don't waste time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may want to have a good time now, but it's to your best interest to save money now instead of spending it.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have to be diplomatic at home today to avoid trouble. Study a new project well since it is bound to have some flaws.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be tactful with others so that they don't take their ire out on you. Avoid a tendency to splurge when you can't afford it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have to be careful in the handling of investments and other financial matters to avoid trouble at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more thoughtful of others in going after your aims and avoid unpleasantness. Take steps to improve your health.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Keep personal worries to yourself since others have their own problems to think about. Think constructively.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take advantage of an opportunity coming your way that could give you added income. Strive for happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study new activities that interest you early in the day but don't make decisions until the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put off until tomorrow an activity that is concerned with improving your welfare. Take positive steps to gain your goals.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have the ability to solve problems that are difficult for others, so be sure to give as fine an education as you can afford and teach to be objective for best results. The latter years will be most self-satisfying.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Engineer Grads Face Job Hunt

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Engineering graduates, a group once showered with job opportunities, are now having to go out and beat the bushes for jobs just like other seniors, officials at North Carolina State University say.

Walter B. Jones, NCSU career planning and placement director, says opportunities in engineering are still good, but have been greatly reduced.

He says about two-thirds of graduates in electrical engineering and computer science already have job offers. That's better than the near-30-percent figure for other gradutes, but off from the 90 percent figure in 1980 and 1981.

Jones said the economic conditions have cut recruiting visits to the school by 32 percent this year.

NEW YORK STYLE — Julie Kavner and Leo Burmester star as two singles reluctantly thrown together at a New York party, in "A Fine Romance", a CBS-TV sitcom being prepared for airing next spring. The pilot is unusual because it is the only pilot from the 73 commissioned by three networks for next season to be produced and shot in New York. (AP Laserphoto)

Not Everybody Was Willing To Be Seen In TV Commercials

NEW YORK (AP) — The late James Dean once was a rebel with a cause.

Early in his career, the cult actor did a Pepsi-Cola commercial, but you won't see it Sunday night on NBC's "Bigger & Better: Television's Greatest Commercials 3."

That's because any plug on this commercial-scrapbook show must get approval from the sponsor, ad agency, actors, or their heirs. After an exhaustive search, the producers of "Greatest Commercials" found Dean's aunt, who said Dean's father wouldn't release the clip.

Some thespians are embarrassed that their careers began in deodorant, or something less fragrant. Producer Joie Albrecht wouldn't finger the recalcitrants "because we're hoping they'll change their minds," she said.

For anyone who remembers the toddler and teen-age years of television, "Greatest Commercials" is a delightful piece of nostalgia.

The segment on commercial starts for the stars is particularly involving. See if you recognize Sylvester Stallone in a Rapid Shave commercial, John Travolta singing in the shower for Safeguard, Loni Anderson, as a brunette, hawking Secret deodorant, and Lily Tomlin jumping into the rinse cycle to get her blouse clean with All.

"Lily's agent turned us down, but when we talked to her, she said we could do it," said Ms. Albrecht, who produced the program with her husband, Scott Garen.

There's a young Kermit the Frog from puppeteer Jim Henson's college days, and a young Frank Sinatra singing "Halo everybody Halo." "Ed McMahon asked him," said Ms. Albrecht. (McMahon, a friend of Sinatra's, and Mariette Hartley are the show's hosts.)

There's also an appearance from ol' Tootsie himself, Dustin Hoffman, not as a tomato but as a pitchman for Volkswagen in the early 1960s.

Some commercials aren't included because their messages are outdated or humiliating. You won't see the condescending spot from Geritol, the one in which a patronizing husband lists his wife's domestic traits like she was a pet and says: "My wife, I think I'll keep her."

A lot of the fun here is seeing commercials that are far more ingenious than the programs they sponsored. For example, the famous commercial for Alka-Seltzer involving the newlyweds' first home-cooked meal. Meteorite-sized dumplings put the husband down for the count, and tomorrow's menu of "stuffed oysters" has him scurrying back to the bathroom for more fizzy relief.

One segment salutes ad legend Stan Freberg, whose witty, irreverent commercials managed to break every rule on Madison Avenue. He once sold pitted prunes with the line: "Today the pits. Tomorrow the wrinkles."

Ms. Albrecht said Del Monte, which now owns Chun King Oriental foods, refused to release Freberg's commercial that said nine out of 10 people surveyed preferred Chun King, and then showed nine Orientals and one Caucasian in an elevator.

Two of the best commercials are foreign advertisements for audio tape.

One TV Pilot Film Is Assembled On The 'Other Coast': New York

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen's character in "Annie Hall" got nauseous as soon as he arrived in Los Angeles. Wherever he went, he faced the sun and was forced to squint in horror, like he had seen some sci-fi monster.

Allen, an inveterate New Yorker, was putting down both Hollywood's lifestyle and art. A similar viewpoint was expressed in "Tootsie," when Dustin Hoffman railed at his agent (Sidney Pollack) for treating the West Coast so reverentially. "New York's a coast, too," Hoffman shouted.

In television, the East-West split in culture and creative outlook is even more pronounced. Some feel that the bankruptcy of new ideas and formats on TV can be traced to the inbred community of writers, actors and producers who see the world from the same Hollywood perspective.

TV's overreliance on Hollywood is not changing, either. Although all three networks have program development departments in New York, only one pilot from the 74 commissioned for next season was produced and shot in New York — CBS' "A Fine Romance."

While New Yorkers are guilty of their own insularity, at least it's different. At last month's taping for "A Fine Romance," the warm-up announcer said "The Coast" always meant Coney Island to him.

"Although some shows are cast in New York, the actors move to California for the TV season," says Josh Kane, vice president of CBS' New York program-development office. "But there's a community of talent that stays in the East. We're trying to tap those sources. We're doing projects with writers who have never contributed to TV before."

"A Fine Romance" is one of 23 projects CBS is considering for next season, about half of which will become full-fledged series.

This gentle, funny sitcom focuses on the evolving relationship between two singles (Julie Kavner from "Rhoda" and Leo Burmester) who are fixed up at a party. Mike and Laura have not been particularly successful at the dating game, and they're definitely not TV's typical "beautiful people."

Don Taffner, executive producer of "A Fine Romance," says taping the pilot episode in New York was not more expensive than a Hollywood shooting would have been. But if it goes to series, it would have more financial and logistical problems than a Hollywood-based show.

"That's why there's so little production here," says Kane. "For New York to grow in productions, its studio facilities have to grow. The city itself is the greatest back lot in the world."

Kane, who used to work in NBC's program department, says that when "Love Sidney" was taped here, "much of the staff had to be transported from Los Angeles and housed."

For "A Fine Romance," veteran director Hal Cooper was brought in from California. For a weekly series, this coast-to-coast shuttling would become costly. Taffner is optimistic that quality writers and directors will be found here or will travel from California. He's willing to take the gamble "because being here will add freshness."

"A Fine Romance" is unusual in another way. It's based on a successful British series, an import process that worked for Taffner's hits "Three's Company" and "Too Close for Comfort."

"There's been some Americanization, what I call taking the "u" out of colour," says Taffner. "So instead of lorry, we now say truck. Instead of sausage, we say franks. The jokes are the same. It's very translatable because the subject is universal."

An American writer, Fred Barron, worked with the British creator-writer, Bob Larbey, "to ensure American sensibilities," says Kane.

Based on the pilot's taping, "A Fine Romance" is a first-rate sitcom. The humor is sophisticated, the main characters likable and their vulnerabilities real. Maybe that's what happens when a program skips "The Coast" for both sides of the Atlantic.

Formulate A Partnership On Improving Education

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Eight governors and 31 business and education leaders agreed Wednesday that one of the nation's most pressing school needs is a fair way to reward the most effective teachers.

"No public school system in America pays one teacher one penny more for doing a good job," said Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander. "They can make a little more for going back to school. They can make a little more for going into administration."

A draft report by the group, the National Task Force on Education for Economic Growth, recommends each state find ways to give "extraordinary rewards for extraordinary teachers."

The task force was meeting Wednesday to work on a plan for meeting an education emergency they believe is facing America. Its report will be issued early this summer.

The plan also calls for "drastically overhauling" methods to recruit, train and compensate teachers to reward effectiveness; extending the time students spend in school; examining tenure laws with a look at new methods to measure effectiveness; and raising entrance requirements in colleges and universities.

"The best people will not be attracted to a profession where competition does not pay off," said David Kearns, chairman and chief executive officer of the Xerox Corp.

"We must examine the base pay for teachers," said Glenn Watts, president of the Communication Workers of America. "We can't really do something about this problem until we are willing to pay more."

But Frank Cary, co-chairman of the task force and chairman of the board of International Business Machines Corp., said, "the system has deteriorated so much that there are some people in the system that may not deserve to be there."

Joan Parent, first vice president of the National School Boards Association, also warned that the task force was comparing the salaries of teachers, who do not work year-round, with the salaries of those who work 50 out of 52 weeks.

Virginia Gov. Charles Robb said he was concerned that states should reward academic knowledge in teachers as well as knowledge of teaching skills.

Defining the educational role of federal, state and local government also brought lively debate among task force members.

A task force recommendation is that each governor organize development of a plan setting specific goals and timetables for improving education in that state.

"A plan is nothing more than a sheaf of papers until it is implemented," said Robert Lundeen, chairman of the board of The Dow Chemical Co. "The plan should be developed by those who will implement it — the local boards. The role of the governor and the state should be to provide inspiration."

"What that really says is that the governor ought to arouse and get somebody else to do it," Watts said. "To do something, I think it will take more than that."

Cary said the task force draft report agrees, however, with a 29-page report released last week by the Commission on Excellence in Education that puts responsibility for improving education with local school boards and state officials.

"The state and local governments are the primary places where responsibility for (kindergarten through grade 12) lie and the state and local governments ... are the ones that have to really respond to this problem," he said.

He said other commission recommendations, including a call for tougher school standards and longer school days, resemble the task force suggestions.

The task force was formed about six months ago by North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt. It is under the auspices of the national Education Commission of the States, which Hunt leads. The commission consists of state-level government and education officials.

Hunt and Cary said they believe the task force has a better opportunity than its predecessors to bring change in education because it involves a partnership between leaders of business, government and education.

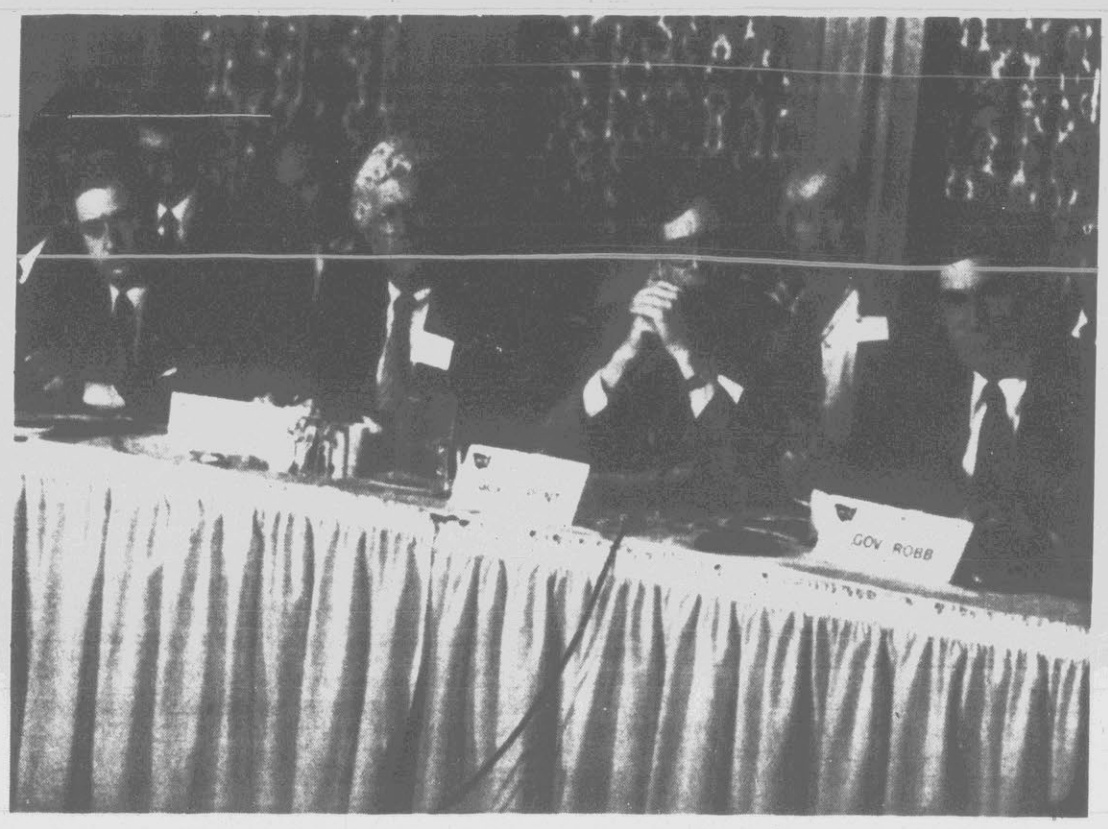

"The reason many of us feel we really have a chance to change things right now ... is because people now are really concerned about their jobs," Hunt said. "Education is economic growth and your job and your well being."

"An awful lot of school districts and states have waited around for the federal government to solve the problem ... and it's only until you get enough of a crisis in this country that you get the kind of leadership that solves it," Cary said.

Governors attending the meeting were Hunt, Alexander, Robb, co-chairman Gov. Pierre du Pont IV of Delaware, Gov. Thomas Kean of New Jersey, Gov. George Nigh of Oklahoma, Gov. Robert Orr of Indiana and Gov. Rudy Perpich of Minnesota.

The governors of Florida, Utah and Pennsylvania sent representatives.

Among the businessmen attending the meeting were James Campbell, president MISSCO Corp. and head of Education Employment and Training Committee of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and J. Richard Munro, president and chief exeuctive officer of Time, Inc.

Promotes A Beard Ploy

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Legend has it that a little girl once told Abraham Lincoln he'd look better if he grew a beard. He did, and ended up in the White House. But what about President Reagan?

Artist Joe King thinks the nation's chief executive should also put some hair on his face, and he's painted a huge before-and-after poster to prove it.

The poster is plastered on the side of Harold's Tavern in Winston-Salem.

It shows two faces of the president — one as he is, and the other with a full, dark beard.

"I painted it and enlarged it to let everyone see how much younger he looks," said King.

The poster carries the caption, "Keep America Beautiful — Grow It!"

Harold Cain, who runs the tavern and said he voted for Reagan in 1980, thinks a beard could help the president in the 1984 race if he decides to seek a second term. He said the beard makes the 72-year-old president look 20 years younger.

"People might worry about voting for somebody who looks so old," said Cain. "See, it covers up all those wrinkles on his neck and all."

Transplant Coordinator Avers Education Is The Biggest Need

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — When Ewing vonSchmittou's ever-present beeper sounds, it means a grieving family must be gently convinced to allow organs from a dying relative to be transplanted.

VonSchmittou, 38, is the coordinator of the 8-month-old organ procurement program at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, one of five such programs in North and South Carolina and about 120 in the United States.

In hospitals within a 50-mile sweep of Charlotte, vonSchmittou works to keep physicians and nurses alert for potential organ donors in their care. In addition, he performs the delicate task of approaching the donor's family.

"For the most part, physicians don't like to deal with death and dying," says vonSchmittou.

"They (the families) seem to respond in a way that I think I've helped them, 'cause I've given them a way that they can be helpful to somebody else," vonSchmittou says.

VonSchmittou has been on the job at Charlotte since September. Over nine years, he has held similar posts at Vanderbilt University in his native Nashville, and at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

"When I first started," he says, "they always asked was I a physician because it was assumed that physicians were the only people who could do this."

Dealing with grieving families is the most emotional and dramatic part of his job.

"What I try to do is make sure they understand the situation - that their loved one is not going to get well and go home," vonSchmittou says. "I reiterate what the physician has already told them. I never know if they understood it or not. We know we're talking about death and dying. We use those terms.

"I try to be as tactful and nice and reasonable with them - and approach them like I would like to be approached if I was in their position. I make sure they know they don't have to do this," he says. "I want to get on their wave length, so in order to do that you have to feel some of what they're feeling."

VonSchmittou estimates that 90 of the families he has approached have given consent.

"If I could feel as successful about everything else about the job as I do about talking to families, then I'd feel more successful about the whole thing."

The hard part is getting hospitals and staff to be alert for potential donors and willing to make the extra effort needed to retrieve organs.

"The biggest part is, and always will be, education," vonSchmittou says, "everything up to the point where you talk to the families."

Except for eyes, which can be removed up to six hours after death, organs for transplant must be taken from a brain-dead body maintained on life support systems.

"We're dealing with the issue of brain death, a kidney is procured from a heart-beating cadaver," explains Nancy Davison, executive director of the N.C. Kidney Council.

Don Lysell, 41, has been transplant coordinator at Bowman Gray-N.C. Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem for seven years.

"A lot of it is apathy," he says of some hospitals' reluctance to get involved. "It's going to take a little bit more effort to recover organs which a lot of people are just not willing to spend."

Last year, Lysell produced 44 kidneys, the record among the 122 retrieved in the state. In the same year, 132 kidney transplants were performed in North Carolina - 95 using cadaveric organs, 37 with organs from living relatives.

Kidneys without a tissue-and-antibodies match in the state go out of state, just as others come in. As of December 1982, 230 North Carolinians were awaiting kidney transplants.

Most organ procurement is directed at kidneys because the transplant is covered by Medicare, under a special 1972 provision for end-stage renal disease patients, and the procedure is established and generally successful. Medicare pays only for established procedures. Liver and heart transplants are considered experimental.

Organ donor cards do not necessarily produce organ donors.

"That's helped as far as educating the public," says Davison. "But our basic problem is that unless the public dies in a hospital that is up on procurement and prepared to deal with ...all the logistics involved, nothing ever happens."

Plans Building Printing Plant

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Wednesday that Thomas C. Lane Publishing Co. will build an $18 million printing plant near Durham that will employ 125 people.

The company, a subsidiary of George F. Valasis Co. of Levonia, Mich., will print four-color advertising inserts for newspapers.

Construction on the plant began in late April and company officials say they expect the plant to be operating by August.

Admit Plan To 'Skim' Casino

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Two former employees of a Las Vegas casino have admitted in federal court to conspiring to skim gambling proceeds.

Donald Joe Shepard, 45, former manager of the Tropicana, and Billy Clinton Caldwell, 51, a former assistant manager of the casino, pleaded guilty Wednesday to two counts before U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens Jr.

A presentence investigation was ordered for the men, who face a maximum of 10 years in prison.

The pleas leave seven defendants scheduled to be tried May 16 in the skimming case.

Originally 11 defendants, including the late Nick Civella, reputed Kansas City crime boss, were charged in a 17-count indictment with skimming $280,000 from the Tropicana. They were accused of transporting the money to Kansas City for distribution among mob members here and in Chicago between June 7, 1978, and Feb. 14, 1979.

Civella, who died of lung cancer at age 70 on March 12, had been removed from the trial because of failing health.

NOTICE OF FILING OF BRANCH OFFICE APPLICATION
This is to inform the public that under 545.14 of the Rules and Regulations for the Federal Savings and Loan System ("Federal Regulations"), Home Federal Savings and Loan Carolina, has filed an application with the Federal Home Loan Board for permission to establish a branch office to be located at, or in the immediate vicinity of, US 32 and US17 By Pass, Edenton, North Carolina.
Anyone may write in favor or protest of the application. Four copies must be sent to "Supervisory Agent, Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta, 260 Peachtree Street N.W., Atlanta, Georgia 30343," within ten (10) days of the publication of this notice. An additional seven (7) days to submit comments may be obtained if a written request is received by the Supervisory Agent within the 10 day period.
Anyone sending a protest deemed substantial by the Principal Supervisory Agent may request an oral argument on the application by submitting a written request to the Supervisory Agent during the 10 day period. For a protest to be considered substantial, it must be written and received on time, the reasons for the protest must be consistent with the regulatory basis for denial of the application, and the protest must be supported by the information specified in 543.2(e)(4) of the Federal Regulations.
You may look at the application and all comments filed at the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta, unless any such materials are exempt by law from disclosure. If you have any questions concerning these procedures, contact the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta at (404) 522-2450.

5-5

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 5-5

LNTU YSYQC - TJNAU YNEQSBI CNQUA YJNEQSBIL.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip – THE STUNTMAN'S IMAGE: THE FALL GUY IN ANY FILM.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals F.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Seven of ◇.

So much stress is laid on an eight-card fit that the power of the trump suit is frequently overlooked on hands with a lesser fit. This hand is from last year's Scandinavian championships and occurred in the match between the women's teams of Denmark and Sweden.

In one room the Danish women reached three no trump. That contract was hopeless after a heart lead, for declarer had only one entry to dummy, and the defenders held up the king of clubs. At the other table, the Swedes reached four spades on the auction shown. South's response to Stayman showed both major suits and North's jump to four hearts was a transfer to spades.

West led a diamond, declarer won the king and led a trump to the queen and ace. East shifted to a club and declarer wisely elected to rise with the ace. Declarer continued with the queen of clubs, and it was West's turn to shine—she ducked and East ruffed with the six.

East attacked dummy's entry by shifting to a heart. West took the ace and returned the suit to dummy's king. Declarer led a club from the table. East ruffed with the ten and declarer overruffed.

With dummy's clubs now established, declarer tried to sneak the seven of trumps through, but West was awake. She covered with the nine and declarer was in dummy, faced with a Hobson's choice. If she drew the last trump, there would be no way back to dummy and she would be stranded with a diamond loser. Yet if she did not draw the trump, there was no way to stop it from taking the setting trick.
