Noise Ordinance Is Given Approval Of City Council

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council, in response to complaints from citizens, has given its approval to an ordinance that it hopes will enable authorities to regulate noise within the city limits through decibel level measurements.

Adoption of the new noise legislation, which culminated some nine months of staff work, did not completely satisfy all residents attending Thursday night's public hearing as objections were voiced to certain provisions.

The council vote was also one short of unanimous as Janice Buck expressed concern with an exemption provision relative to "sound emanating from scheduled outdoor athletic events." Mrs. Buck endorsed the idea of eliminating the athletic provision and studying it as a separate ordinance.

Generally, the ordinance sets sound levels, as measured by decibels, that will be permitted in use occupancy categories, including residential (60 decibels allowed from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., 55 decibels from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.); public space, commercial or business (65 from 7-11, 60 from 11-7); and manufacturing, industrial or agricultural areas (75 decibel limit allowed at all times).

Sound levels in excess of the general provisions will be allowed, with the exception of residential space, on Thursday (5 p.m. to 11 p.m.), Friday (5 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday), and Saturday (10 a.m. to 1 a.m. Sunday); as well as on defined holidays (noon to 1 a.m.).

Petitioners may apply for permits to exceed the established levels.

Mac McCauley, assistant city attorney, said the ordinance would be enforced by the police department who would answer noise complaints and take decibel readings from property lines to determine if levels are within the ordinance provisions. Police could issue civil citations resulting in a $50 fine.

Fraternities and sororities, the subject of intensive discussions during the drafting stages of the new ordinance, will be granted one "permit to exceed" stated noise levels during the fall and spring academic semesters. McCauley said the provision dealing with fraternities and sororities was an attempt to offer a compromise to the university organizations.

W.J. Simmons and W.M. Smith, both residents of East Wright Road, expressed objections to the noise levels in the Jaycee Park complex located behind their homes. Smith took exception to the proposed exemption of scheduled athletic events from the ordinance provisions and asked that, at the least, playground equipment at the park should be moved to another area where the noise would be less objectionable.

Simmons, saying he had objected to the park and ball field from the beginning, said laws give citizens the right to unrestricted enjoyment and use of their property. He asked that no exemptions be given from the ordinance

Commencement For Thousands

Gown billowing, former U.S. Sen. Robert B. Morgan raised his voice over the wind today to tell graduates and guests at the 75th commencement ceremonies at East Carolina University that he was "deeply moved" by the university's invitation to become a doctor of letters.

"This honor and tribute you give us today is not intended to honor Dr. Jenkins and me, but to symbolize the efforts and achievements of thousands of alumni, faculty and friends of this institution for more than 75 years," Morgan said.

Presentation of the first honorary degrees awarded in ECU's history, the doctor of letters, upon Chancellor-Emeritus Leo W. Jenkins and Morgan was only one of several firsts celebrated at ceremonies in Ficklen Stadium this morning.

Amid cheers, balloons and billowing flags, Chancellor John M. Howell presented

Shultz Plan Has Approval Of Israel

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet today approved in principle the agreement worked out by Secretary of State George P. Shultz for Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon. But it said it had reservations on "a number of security and political problems."

The Cabinet announced its decision following a daylong debate among Prime Minister Menachem Begin and his ministers on the accord worked out over nine days by Shultz, sent to the Middle East by President Reagan to break the stalemate in Israeli-Lebanese negotiations.

Shultz, who plans to go to Paris on Sunday after visits to Syria and Saudi Arabia, had been hoping Israel would give him unqualified endorsement of the agreement before he leaves.

But Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor read a statement to reporters saying the government "decided to approve in principle the proposed agreement between Israel and Lebanon. Regarding a number of security and political problems, the government will act to receive further clarifications."

Meridor did not elaborate on the statement.

In addition to the Cabinet's reservations, the Israelis have said they will not pull their troops out of Lebanon until the Syrian army withdraws.

An Israeli official who attended the meeting, and declined to be identified, said the vote was 17-2, with nega-

TRASH SOUNDOFF RESPONSE

In response to the Hotline article dated May 5, F.E. evidently does not realize that the Greenville Public Works Commission has our wonderful city divided into zones for trash and garbage pickup. Any citizen who does not know the designated day of pickup on their street can find out by calling the City Public Works Department, 7852-0307. Trash pickup is done once a week on a regularly scheduled basis.

The city requests that all trash be placed off the street so as not to hamper the flow of traffic. Anyone placing trash or garbage in the street may be cited by the Greenville Police Department and fined.

F.E., not everyone is able to or has the means in which to transport trash and garbage to the dump. Our taxes help pay for this service from the city. Mayo Allen and his staff are to be commended for the job they are doing and have done for as long as I can remember. H.K.

ECU Medical School Graduates Third Class

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

The East Carolina University School of Medicine graduated its third class of physicians Thursday and honored the first student to be awarded a doctorate degree by the university.

Thomas E. Curry Jr., ECU's first recipient of a doctor of philosophy degree, is the only student to complete requirements for doctoral study since the medical school initiated five doctoral programs in the sciences basic to medicine in 1979.

Speakers for the graduation included Dr. William E. Laupus, medical school vice chancellor and dean, and C. Ralph Kinsey, chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

The keynote speaker was A. Everette James Jr., professor and chairman of the department of radiology and radiological services at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. James addressed the 39 graduates about "The Responsibility of New Medical Imaging Technology," while giving a slide presentation. He emphasized that "in this profession you have a unique opportunity to make the world better."

Kinsey told the class of physicians, "We know that you gladly accept your obligation to minister to all who need your help, black, white, rich and poor. We are comforted by the knowledge that you will walk humbly in service to our people."

Kinsey added, "This class of physicians reaffirms our human commitment to human welfare in our state. These doctors, and those who follow, will fill needs which have been lacking in many communities in our state."

Awards were given to several graduates following the presentation of speeches: John Albert Dew Jr., Sandoz Award; Richard Lee Pippin, Upjohn Award and John Hunter Award; Joseph Stephen Babinski, Department of Anatomy Award and Philip G. Nelson Award; George Minson Bullard Jr., Family Practice Award; Jeffrey Scott Miller, Jacob Furth Research Prize; Jayne Elizabeth Holt, William E. Laupus Pediatric Award; Jeffrey Haskell Fair, Wilhelm R. Frisell Research Award; William Baxter Waddill III, Department of Radiology Award; William David Brown, Edgar T. Beddingfield Jr. M.D. Memorial Award and Charlotte Atkinson Sweeney, Faculty Award.

Department of Pathology Awards were given to John

Albert Dew Jr., Joseph Stephen Babinski, Paul Randall Bakerman, Jonathan Meigs Kurie, William David Brown, Richard Lee Pippin and Jeffrey Scott Miller.

American Medical Women's Association Awards were presented to Karen Pamela Davis, Charlotte Atkinson Sweeney and Mary Coleen Wassell.

Medical School Guild Awards (or the "Putting Him or Her Through" Awards) were presented to the 17 married members of the class.

Four awards were presented to faculty members of the medical school. Dr. Seymour Bakerman, professor and chairman of the department of pathology, received the Golden Caduceus Award for the third year in a row.

Other faculty awards were given to Dr. Billy E. Jones, professor of medicine; Dr. Paul S. Carnitz, clinical instructor of surgery, and Dr. Eugene Davis Day Jr., department of family medicine.

Following the awards, the Declaration of Geneva was said by Douglas DeWitt-Boyette, a member of the graduating class. A response was made by Joseph Stephen Babinski.

Marriage: Economic And Emotional Partnership

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Love and money are inseparable issues that often lead to separations and divorces.

That's the view of Carol Colman, a working wife, who adds, "We're just starting to view marriage as an economic partnership as well as an emotional one."

In hundreds of interviews for her book, "Love and Money" (Coward-McCann, $15.95), Ms. Colman found the same problems cropping up again and again.

"People are hopelessly romantic," she said in an interview.

And romanticism leads most couples to avoid premarital discussions of the very issues that would help them avoid financial or emotional trouble after the knot is tied, she said.

"Working out a realistic budget and taking emergency expenses into account" are high on her list. Emergency expenses might include car repairs, a surprise medical bill, even inviting someone to the wedding for which they would have to buy a new dress.

"Many people budget too tightly. It's like a diet — they'll forget the whole thing because they've blown it away on one occasion."

Ms. Colman said she wrote the book because "of a personal issue I had to resolve. My husband (a lawyer), really wanted to teach, write and lead an academic life."

"Then, he told me the salary. My jaw dropped. 'I consider myself a feminist. I work (as director of public affairs for a New York radio station.) It disturbed me that I was so disturbed.'"

Failing to find books on the subject, she began interviewing friends and, eventually, dozens of other people around the country about the role finances play in marriage and other personal relationships.

"Setting up a budget can wreck a relationship," she found. "It depends on how well a couple can talk to each other. They must be able to discuss their priorities and lifestyle without fighting over money."

She interviewed one wife who used money as a weapon.

"Her husband didn't talk to her or pay any attention to her."

To get his attention the wife ran up a $2,000 bill at a department store for linens and other items.

The husband exploded when the bill came.

"They went for marriage counseling and later divorced," Ms. Colman said.

She found another couple, suburbanites in their early 40s, who overspend together. They married young, had kids in rapid succession. The husband went to night school; the wife got a secretarial job while continuing to care for their three young children.

"Whenever one of them was depressed, they'd go to dinner, plan a vacation, buy each other ridiculously lavish presents."

They ended up with a budget counselor, then a marriage counselor, and now are trying to stop their destructive habits, Ms. Colman said.

"People have unrealistic expectations because of difficult economic times."

She found women no longer content to perform traditional roles, and men "want the power of the breadwinner but don't want the whole burden of supporting their family."

The main problem Ms. Colman found among two-paycheck couples was lack of time for each other and for planning and deciding who will run the household.

Household operation should be shared 50-50, she said, with responsibilities assigned as you would in an office.

Instead of complaining that your husband doesn't clean or shop as well as you do, "lower your standards, ladies. Take him to the store and show him how to shop."

And accept the reality: "He's not going to be your household clone."

"I think some women don't want to relinquish the enormous power of the household. They're the homemakers who shut their husband and often their children out of cooking and cleaning completely."

"There are women who can't let go, who criticize their husband every time he does something around the house."

"There are also men who buy soda and cookies and don't notice you need formula and diapers."

In both instances, gentle reminders are in order, she said.

Ms. Colman favors setting up a budget early in a relationship.

"Figure out what your incomes are going to be. Talk about your values, your lifestyle, your mutual goals."

"Do you want to be suburbanite with two cars and a kid or a free and easy lifestyle and no kids for a decade?"

"What happens if one of you loses your job?"

"If you have a child, who's going to work and assume responsibility (for the child)?"

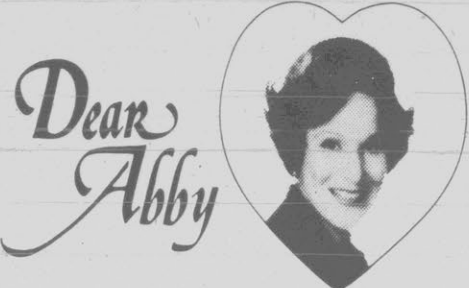

Good advice — but who's listening?

Ms. Colman said she failed to find, during all her research, any couples who said they had discussed financial matters before forming a relationship or marrying.

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Despite a difficult economy, American business is maintaining its support of charities, according to the chairman of one firm's contributions and grants committee.

More than 270 organizations in 13 states are sharing Emhart's 1983 outlay of $787,555, an increase of 3½ percent over grants made by the firm in 1982, says vice president John Budd. The monies will go to support cultural, civic, educational and health organizations nationwide.

Dear Abby

Cancel Dates In Interest Of Time

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm dating a wonderful woman. She's beautiful, kind, loving and intelligent. There's just one drawback — she's never on time! If I'm to pick her up at 7 p.m. I can always expect to wait for at least 30 minutes before she's ready to go.

I am always on time. I hate to be late for anything. If I'm going to be late I would just as soon not go at all.

How can I cure this lovely lady of this terrible habit?

JOHNNY-ON-THE-SPOT

DEAR JOHNNY: Easy. Make an announcement: "If you're not on time, the date is off!"

You may have to cancel a couple of dates, but I promise you, if you follow this advice you will either cure her or lose her.

DEAR ABBY: Just finished reading Mitzi Gaynor's letter to you. Yes, I agree, it's a beautiful letter. She says: "After being married to the same wonderful man for 28 years, we're still best friends as well as lovers. It hasn't always been easy, but I've worked at it. In order to get along with your guy, you have to play his game. If he likes watching sports, start off the game by sitting on his lap. If he likes to eat, learn to be a good cook. The song says, 'Woman needs man, and man must have his mate.' Well, girls, get more interested in parlor, bedroom and bath." End of quote.

It seems to me that in our culture, in order to make a marriage work, the burden is about 90 percent on the woman.

For example, what do the women read? Magazines telling them how to be a better wife, mother, lover. How to prepare his favorite foods, how to make yourself more attractive for him, how to nourish his ego and build him up. In short, make up, make over and make do!

In the meantime, what do the men read? Sports Illustrated, Field and Stream, Popular Mechanics and science fiction. And last, but not least, Playboy!

Here is what I wish Mitzi's husband would have written: "Dear Abby: Mitzi and I have been married for 28 years, and we're still best friends as well as lovers. It hasn't always been easy, but I've worked at it."

"All you men out there, in order to get along with your woman, you have to learn to play her game. If she's in the kitchen, cooking or cleaning up, give her a hand. If she likes to dance, take her dancing at least once a week. As the song says, 'A good man is hard to find.' But I say a good woman is hard to find, too, so 'hug her in the morning, kiss her in the night, give her lots of lovin' and treat her right, cause a good mate nowadays is hard to find."

"I say, men, turn off the TV and get interested in the parlor, bedroom, bath and kitchen! Sincerely, Jack"

Abby, why is it when you reverse the letters, Jack's sounds almost comical? Somehow women are expected to do nice things for their men! If a man does the same nice things for a woman, he's suspected of being weak and wimpy.

Baby, we've still got a long way to go. Sign me...
MARRIED 34 YEARS AND WE'RE BOTH STILL WORKING AT IT

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are planning our wedding for this fall.

I know it's customary for the bride to have her closest friend for her maid of honor, but, Abby, my closest and dearest friend happens to be a man. My fiance doesn't know him very well, but he understands how much this man means to me, and he agrees that he should be part of the wedding party.

He can't be best man because my fiance's brother is going to be best man, so where would it be appropriate to put my friend in the wedding party?

It will be a church wedding.

SINCERE

DEAR SINCERE: Your male friend could be an usher or a groomsman, or, instead of "maid" or "matron" of honor, he could be a "man of honor." A bit unconventional perhaps, but it's your wedding and it doesn't hurt to bend the rules a bit to show love and respect for your dearest friend.

Counselor's Help Kids Overcome Shock

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International
School guidance counselors not only are steering children toward higher education but helping ease the trauma faced by youngsters whose father or mother has been thrown out of work.

"We're finding with the present recession and unemployment, there is a bad effect, a frightening effect, especially on schoolage children," Dr. Marlene Pinten of Falls Church, Va., said in a telephone interview.

Dr. Pinten, a former Minneapolis, Minn., guidance counselor, is president of the American School Counselors Association, a division of the American Personnel and Guidance Association.

She recently reported to the Association after a series of conferences with fellow counselors in North Carolina, Georgia, Ohio, Florida, Missouri, the District of Columbia and South Dakota.

When dad loses his job and paycheck, elementary school children especially are traumatized with worry about shelter, food and the future, Dr. Pinten said.

"Parents are on edge. Counselors are finding verbal and physical abuse of children increasing. Where there are pockets of unemployment, child abuse is up."

To help the younger students cope, a counselor at Mann Elementary School in Detroit wrote a little book for children. Artie Morris-Vann titled it: "My Dad is Unemployed But It is Not the End of the World."

What do guidance counselors do? And, if they are in short supply, as Dr. Pinten contends, how many more are needed?

"Our interest is to help all students maximize their educational experience and reach their potential," she said, noting the job is complicated when students are involved in alcohol or drugs or or face social and emotional adjustments stemming from a divorce in the family, joblessness or other major assaults on a secure family life.

In high schools, the Association recommends that there be one guidance counselor for every 250 students, in junior high, one for every 250 to 350 students, and in elementary grades, one for every 300 to 400 students.

"Unfortunately, in high schools the number assigned is on the order of one counselor for every 450 to 500 students," Dr. Pinten said. In junior highs and elementary schools, the situation is no better and often is worse.

But the situation is better than it was. In 1963, for example, there were only about 500 guidance counselors in elementary schools. There were more than 13,000 by 1980.

"You would be inspired by their genuine concern for children and their commitment to continued professional growth regardless of the hard times in education," Dr. Pinten said.

The profession of counseling in the nation's schools was boosted soon after the Soviets launched Sputnik and the space exploration era in the late 1950s.

Congress passed the National Defense Education Act that provided funds to improve the teaching of science, math and foreign languages in the nation's schools.

The same act also funded programs for teachers wanting to be guidance counselors. Better school guidance programs were deemed vital if America was to be a serious contender in the space race launched by the Russians.

Dr. Pinten said more counselors were needed to help students with educational planning, such as prepping for Scholastic Aptitude Tests and American College Testing examinations.

Today, the Sputnik era seems to be repeating itself. The education establishment is focusing on deficiencies in the teaching of science and math once more.

The threat is not the Sputnik, per se, but the high-technology race that authorities say the United States America could lose to Japan, the Soviet Union and West Germany. Numerous proposals before Congress once more call for massive federal aid to education programs to close the high-tech education gap.

Ms. Odom Is Speaker

Mary Ann Odom, of Country Collectibles, gave a program of toile painting at the meeting of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club Tuesday evening.

The yard of the month award went to Tracy and Carolyn Medlin.

Brenda Whichard and Phyllis Caruso were honored with gifts of pewter as outstanding club women of the year. Laurie Charleton, outgoing president, was also presented a gift of pewter in appreciation of her work during the past year.

Barbara Hall, incoming president, introduced new officers. Projects for the upcoming year were discussed.

Joyce Sawyer, Linda Hanrahan and Glenda McLawhorn were meeting hostesses.

The next meeting will be held June 7.

Shower Given Bride-Elect

A floating bridal shower was given Barbara Jane Werdal, bride-elect of Dwayne Eric Tomlinson, at the home of Mrs. Ernest Stine Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. David Werdal and Lynda Werdal were co-hostesses.

The honoree was remembered with a corsage of pink roses. The mother of the bride, Mrs. Ted Werdal, and the mother of the bridegroom-elect, Mrs. Claudette Fonseca, were given corsages of pink rosebuds.

The refreshment table, in the dining room, was covered with a lace cloth over pink and decorated with a five branch candelabrum holding pink candles flanked by magnolia leaves and pink azaleas.

The house was decorated with spring flowers.

Williamston, were united in marriage in the Southern Pines United Methodist Church, April 24 at 3 p.m.

The Rev. A.T. Robertson of Troy officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and silk Venise lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke, drop shoulders, Juliet pouff sleeves and basque waist. Silk Venise lace motifs encircled the collar, outlined the illusion yoke and applied the bodice and sleeves. Seed pearls adorned the bodice. Garlands of scalloped lace bordered the hemline of the gown. She wore a white wide brim bridal hat layered with silk Venise lace motifs etched with seed pearls accented with silk flowers under the brim and illusion streamers with a cage veil. She wore an antique cameo brooch, a gift of her great-grandmother. Her cascade bouquet was of white tulips, white quince, stephanotis and gladioli accented with peach orchids and purple iris.

The bride's sister, Dona Haney, was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Carla Rose of Greenville, Marilyn Rowe and Josie Hardison of Williamston. The flower girl was Joy Brook Flanagan, cousin of the bride from Lafayette, La.

The ring bearer was Miles Patrick Flanagan, cousin of the bride, of Lafayette, La.

Honorary bridesmaids included Cathy Blevins, Cathy Yonnish, Kathy Chambers, Jayne Wicker, Louise Thompson and Jenny Lynn Peele.

Register attendants were Laurie Webb, cousin of the bride from Maryland, and Kristy Barber, cousin of the bridegroom of Williamston.

Bruce L. Peele Jr. of Williamston was best man while ushers included Dexter White of Greenville, Thomas Hardison, cousin of the bridegroom, and Jimmy Griffin, both of Williamston.

Recognition Is There

Dr. Leo Jenkins may or may not seek the office of governor as a Democratic candidate next year. It is clear, however that he is keeping busy now that he no longer administers the affairs of East Carolina University.

Jenkins has discussed running for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the past and his name was in the news in connection with the office again this week. He has many speaking engagements, which he terms non-political, and will speak at the groundbreaking for the Methodist retirement home here in June.

Currently he works on special assignments for Gov. Hunt and handles a television interview program. He is also interested in having military dependents declared in-state residents for tuition purposes.

Jenkins will be entering a crowded Democratic field if he decides to make a serious race for governor. He has the name recognition and the reputation for getting things done and as the in-fighting intensifies among other candidates he could emerge as a front runner.

Is Courthouse Safe?

Martin County's courthouse has been condemned as being unsafe and, according to the county building inspector, anyone goes in at his own risk. But, that same inspector says it is perfectly safe for the county to hold court or any other function in the courthouse.

Inspector Robert Godard says the condemnation only makes it impossible for the county to rent out the courthouse for any non-governmental purposes.

To use the vernacular, something there just doesn't make sense. If the courthouse is unsafe for some, it is unsafe for all.

Disregarding the obvious — the loss of life or personal injury — in the event of a structural collapse, one has no difficulty in foreseeing the suits that would follow if such a tragedy struck. The grounds already have been set: the building is unsafe.

You cannot tell an individual that he enters the building at his own risk and, at the same time, hand him a subpoena to appear in that same building for a trial. If the building is safe to use but has been condemned, then the building code is a mockery; if the building is unsafe, then Martin County is playing with luck.

Choice Is Cuomo

WASHINGTON — Close advisers of Sen. John Glenn, eager to win a presidential endorsement from Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, are boldly leaking Glenn-Cuomo as their dream ticket even though the governor has flatly ruled out being anybody's running mate in 1984.

Although Cuomo seems closer ideologically to frontrunner Walter F. Mondale than to the more conservative Glenn, he never really has forgiven the former vice president for not supporting him in the 1982 primary for governor. Consequently, Glenn's tacticians are hoping for a New York breakthrough engineered by a Cuomo endorsement.

A footnote: Gov. Richard Celeste of Ohio is boosting a different running mate for Glenn — Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey. The combination of the astronaut and basketball star, low on charisma but high on glamour, might devastate Republicans seeking the independent vote.

Presidential grief over the death of Robert Ames, the CIA's top Mideast analyst, in the Beirut embassy bomb blast played a role in Ronald Reagan's decision to send Secretary of State George Shultz to Jerusalem.

Not generally known is the close relationship that had built up since last fall between the president and Ames, the intelligence specialist who last summer became Reagan's personal briefer on the Arab-Israeli struggle. Although naturally devastated by the death of other Americans in the embassy, it was Ames' loss that, in the words of one official, "really got to Reagan."

The president told national security adviser William P. Clark to order Shultz to the Middle East at once to arrange an immediate withdrawal of foreign forces, starting with Israel's, from Lebanon. That suited Clark just fine. He had been suggesting Shultz's first mission to the Middle East for weeks, but the secretary did not want to go.

Presidential chief of staff James Baker's animosity toward veteran Reaganite Lyn Nofziger very nearly was barred admittance to a recent White House planning session on the 1984 presidential campaign.

When Reagan's 1980 regional political directors were invited to the White House for a briefing, Nofziger asked to sit in. A staff functionary started to routinely arrange it, but to his surprise received orders from Baker subordinates that Nofziger was definitely not welcome. Rebuffed, Nofziger put a "so what" face on it by telling friends there was not much to be learned from David Gergen and the other Baker subalterns in charge of the briefing.

Friends of Nofziger intervened to reverse the decision. Nevertheless, it was made clear he was not to become a fixture at campaign sessions. The lesson: Nofziger, whose service to Reagan goes back to 1966, will not be integrated into 1984 campaign planning so long as Jim Baker is in charge.

Soaring optimism among Iowa Democrats that liberal Rep. Tom Harkin will spearhead the party's recapture of the Senate next year by unseating conservative Sen. Roger Japsen has suddenly been transformed to gloomy apprehension.

The Des Moines Register poll showing a virtual Jepsen Harkin dead heat confirmed deepening fears among Democratic activists that Harkin might be just too liberal for Iowa. Party workers regard Harkin as well to the left of former senator John Culver, who carried the liberal label to defeat in 1980. What's more, no moderate Republican has emerged to threaten Jepsen in the GOP primary.

A footnote: The uphill Republican struggle to maintain Senate control is likely to get another boost with the expected re-election decision of Sen. Mark Hatfield, chairman of the Appropriations Committee. Although he is increasingly off the Reagan administration reservation on key votes, the liberal Hatfield is almost a certainty to keep the Oregon seat Republican. If he had stepped down, as seemed likely a few weeks ago, the Democrats would have been favored to fill the void.

In the legislative hallways, the rumor persists: The state's electric utilities will file a bill this session seeking the reinstatement of mandatory Construction Work in Progress (CWIP) and a change in the fuel adjustment clause.

But in interviews, lobbyists for the utilities say it is highly unlikely they'll put any bills in the hopper this session. Public sentiment against them is just too strong.

Last June, in a wave of anti-utility sentiment, the assembly repealed the state's mandatory CWIP law. The N.C. Utilities Commission is now empowered to allow CWIP at its discretion.

CWIP allows a utility to recover costs associated with construction of new plants before those plants start producing electricity. The utilities say CWIP is needed if they're to be able to afford to build the plants we'll need in the future.

Opponents say CWIP is unfair and that it breeds utility inefficiency.

For the past year, the utilities have lobbied strongly for a return to the old CWIP law and all indications were that such a bill would be introduced this year.

"We're not going to put a bill in," said Roy Wall, lobbyist for Duke Power. "As far as I can see, there is nothing planned and there will be nothing put forward." Other industry lobbyists agreed.

The big reason is public sentiment. "I don't sense any change in the public attitude about CWIP and the fuel clause since last June. And, I don't see any change among legislators," said one utility lobbyist who asked that he not be named.

The anti-utility sentiment remains strong enough that Wall expressed the concern that a new CWIP bill could actually end up hurting the utilities. Amendments to any such bill could end up doing them more harm than good. There is considerable feeling among some lawyer-legislators that Duke Power was instrumental in the demise of comparative fault legislation this year. Wall says he's afraid some of these lawyers would just love a chance to get even.

Hap Chalmers, VEPCO lobbyist, said the utilities don't have a good argument against the 1982 CWIP changes. The assembly left it up to the Utilities Commission to decide when CWIP will be granted. And, in last summer's rate cases, the utilities got pretty much all of what they sought.

"Until the commission goes through the process, it is hard for us to make our case that we've been mortally wounded by last year's change," Chalmers said.

The commission's rulings in 1982 do not necessarily indicate that the utilities will continue to fare well with CWIP this year. The commission might act differently, he said.

Bob Fischbach, director of the Public Staff, and Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, architect of the 1982 CWIP change, both said they had heard only rumors of utility-sponsored legislation. Elisa Wolper, coordinator of a group known as "Citizens United for Fair Utility Rates," said her group is optimistic that the utilities won't file any bills this year. But, "I think we have to be prepared. They spent all that time at the beginning of the year, meeting with every county's delegation."

The utilities have a core of supporters in the assembly who'd love to help them. But, at this time, it looks like the utilities don't plan to fight this year.

To the editor:

As parents of the late Danny Woods, we would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks to the Greenville Jaycees, the American Cancer Society, Rose Richards and all those wonderful people who went to jail and raised money to get out, the people who paid to have them sent to jail and the people who contributed to the Cancer Fund, along with the police and sheriff departments.

The Danny Woods Jail-A-Thon was a complete success and credit has to go to everyone who participated. Although we sincerely appreciate the honor of having the jail-a-thon named after our son, we both would like to state that all monies derived from the drive are in honor of all those people — young and old — who have succumbed to this dreaded disease, those who are now suffering, and to the families and friends of those afflicted with this killer of a disease.

Words seem so inadequate at this time to express our feelings for last week's efforts, so all we can say is thanks from all of us who have gone through the cancer experience with a loved one.

We hope that next year the cancer problem will be eased somewhat and it only can happen through monies gathered from efforts such as the jail-a-thon.

To the editor:

On this day, May 6, in 1862, Henry David Thoreau was "translated" out of this world into another. He died of tuberculosis, which he probably had suffered from as early as his student days at Harvard. Despite his illness, he remained suffused with a radiant calm: kind, humorous and happy.

Throughout his entire life he lived true to the words of the 13th century Persian poet favored by the Transcendentalists, Maseeh Hudeen Shiek Saadi of Shiraz, who wrote in The Gulistan (Rose Garden): "The clouds, wind, moon, sun and sky, act in cooperation, that thou mayest get thy daily bread, and not eat it with indifference."

According to Philip and Kathryn Whitford Thoreau's interest in 'habitat groups' of pond and stream documents Thoreau as a pioneer limnologist. He is considered one of the master of English prose. Thoreau described himself as a 'mystic, a Transcendentalist, and a natural philosopher.' When he felt it was clearly necessary, he committed civil disobedience. His father's grandparents were French Huguenots. On his mother's side were Scotch-English Quakers.

As he lay in his cane bed in the living room during the spring of 1862, a steady flow of visitors arrived at the door. Children brought him flowers and questions. Surrounded by the extravagant greenery of his sister's houseplants, he received the news of nature from the world outside. Thanking a friend who sent Thoreau a weekly chronicle of the birds as they arrived for spring, his sister wrote: "I feel as if he were being translated rather than dying."

Odds On War Replace Football Talk

It used to be if you went into a bar you could always find an argument over the merits of a pro football team. But now, thanks to Ronald Reagan's constant drumbeat concerning defense weapons, he's got the whole country talking about whether we can win a nuclear war or not.

I dropped by "Dumbarton's Bar & Grill" the other afternoon for a beer. The man on the next stool said, "How do you think we'll do against the Russians this year?"

"I couldn't tell which side he was on so I played it cool."

"It's too early to tell. It depends if we can harden our Minuteman silos in time to put our MX missiles in place."

"Exactly what I was thinking," he said. "Of course the commies could still crawl through our window of vulnerability."

"Yeh, but if we get the B-1 bomber built, set up our Pershing and cruise missiles in Europe, and develop a tricky 'star wars' defense, we can zap their land-based air attack before it gets off the ground," I said.

"How many nuclear warheads do you think we need to smash them back, if they launch a first strike attack?"

"We've got about 10,000 now. I'd say we could use another 5,000 just to be on the safe side. Even if they knock out 7,000 we could pulverize them with the other 8,000."

"You know where I think we're making our big mistake?" he said. "We're trying to match the Soviets missile for missile. What we should do is go ahead with single-warhead Midgetmen that the Russians couldn't hit because we'd spread them all over the country. There's something to be said for not putting all your MXs in one dense pack."

Dumbarton, who was washing glasses said, "A guy was in here yesterday, and he heard from a friend at the Pentagon that the Soviets were violating the SALT II treaty when it came to underground testing."

"I wouldn't put it past them," I said ordering another beer.

"You know what we have to do?" the guy on the next stool said. "We have to rethink MAD, the Mutual Assured Destruction strategy we've been using for the past 20 years. It's not working any more. I say we sit down with the Soviets in Geneva, offer them a zero option, and if they don't take it, tell them to buzz off."

"How do you feel about a limited nuclear war?" I asked him.

"I'm not against it, as long as we don't kill more than 40 or 50 million people on each side. What about you, Dumbarton?"

"It's an option," Dumbarton said. "And I don't want to take away our bargaining chips. The Soviets have got us outnumbered when it comes to conventional war" so if we up the ante and announce we're prepared to fight a limited nuclear war it will give them something to chew on."

I said, "What really gets me sore is that Congress is dragging its feet when it comes to spending money for a good defense. Reagan knows what the country needs better than anybody."

The guy on the next stool said, "You better believe it. I saw him in 'Hellcats of the Navy' the other night on TV, and the man really has the guts to stand up to the Russians."

Dumbarton refilled our glasses. "I think Reagan has what it takes. But I'm not too sure about 'Cap' Weinberger."

"Why not?"

"He's too tight. He could be knocked over by one SS 19 intermediate range missile. You want a big guy in that position who can take a lot of punishment when he gets hit by an ICBM."

A guy at the end of the bar said, "Anybody hear the Baltimore Orioles score?"

Dumbarton said to him angrily, "Watch your language, buddy. There are ladies in this bar, and if you want to talk dirty you can go drink somewhere else."

Strength For Today

Someone asked the philosopher Henry David Thoreau if he did not agree that the railroad, then in its infancy, was a significant improvement over the stagecoach. Thoreau's answer was significant:

"It is better if it carries better people. Otherwise, it is only meanness going faster."

This is a good answer to remember in assessing the improvements in our lives. Most of us continually look forward to some kind of change. We are going to have more money and more leisure. We will move to a new house, make new friends.

Important as these changes are, they make no alteration in the kind of person we are — and this is where improvement is most significant.

We live in a world which is rapidly being improved by science. But let us be sure, for ourselves at any rate, as we step from the railroad car onto the jet plane that it is not just "meanness going faster."

Dollar's Value Prompts Dogfight

NEW YORK (AP) — France has a bone to pick with the Reagan administration. And by the looks of it, the economic dispute could become a trans-Atlantic dogfight.

At issue is a U.S. government policy that has allowed the value of the dollar to reach unprecedented heights in relation to the French franc. That has meant lower prices for Americans buying imported French goods and more buying power for Americans in France.

But in France, the franc's decline has aggravated that country's economic crisis.

The dispute has intensified in recent days and could climax at a summit of the seven leading industrialized countries, scheduled for May 28-30 at Williamsburg, Va.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain the reasons for the rift:

Q. Is the dollar strong, or the franc weak?

A. Both. The dollar has been gaining value in relation to other major currencies for more than a year, mainly because interest rates in the United States are higher than elsewhere. Many investors, attracted by the higher rate of return earned on dollars, have shifted money out of other currencies. At the same time, the franc has been hurt by the economic problems that have dogged President Francois Mitterand since his Socialist government took office in 1981.

Q. Why does France care if the dollar is strong?

A. Earlier this week you could get 7.39 French francs for one U.S. dollar — the highest ratio on record. At the end of last year the ratio was 6.74 francs to the dollar, and two years before that it was 4.52 to the dollar. That trend is troublesome for France because it gives investors incentive to pull money out of France and put it in the United States, where earnings retain more of their value. That is good for the U.S. economy but bad for the French.

Q. Can't France control the value of its currency?

A. It can influence, but not control, the franc's value in relation to the dollar. The French central bank can buy francs and sell dollars, but that tactic has only limited effect since there are many other buyers and sellers in the market, acting independently of the French. A longer-range solution for France is to beef up its sagging economy. But that is a particularly difficult task since the economy grows weaker with each drop in the value of the franc.

Q. How can France's economy be hurt by exchange rates?

A. A good example is France's energy bill. Each time the franc loses ground to the dollar, France's oil import bill goes up. That is because oil is sold on the world market in dollars. In the first two months of this year, the amount of oil imported by France fell 22 percent from a year earlier, yet the bill was 9 percent higher. That's because it had to pay more francs for each dollar's worth of oil.

Q. What do the French want the Americans to do?

A. Not only the French but many other of the U.S. trade partners in Europe want the Reagan administration to intervene more frequently in the currency market. Their view is that the United States can help stabilize currency values by selling dollars. But the Reagan administration has refused to change its policy of not intervening in the market except in times of extraordinary imbalance.

Q. What's the logic of the U.S. position?

A. The Reagan administration contends governments cannot estimate correctly what the appropriate value of a currency should be, and by trying to do so they would only generate more instability. That is in striking contrast to previous administrations, which had intervened frequently to buy and sell dollars.

Sanitation Devices For Floating Homes Face Agencies' Objection

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — The state health director and director of shellfish sanitation say they are opposed to a proposal that would allow floating homes to continue using marine sanitation devices to dispose of their sewage.

Bob Benton, director of shellfish sanitation, spoke against the proposal at a Coastal Resources Commission public hearing Thursday. He also read a letter from state Health Director Ronald H. Levine opposing the proposal.

A CRC committee that was scheduled to decide Thursday whether to recommend the proposal to the full commission ran out of time and adjourned without discussing the issue.

The CRC began discussing regulation of floating homes nearly a year ago. CRC members were concerned that the homes, which discharge sewage into the water around them, had the potential to cause serious pollution.

The commission discussed banning the homes or allowing only those floating homes connected to conventional sewer systems on shore. The committee abandoned both ideas because of heated opposition from floating home owners in New Hanover County.

Thursday, however, Benton and Levine asked the committee to restore the provision requiring onshore sewage disposal systems.

"A marine sanitation device is not designed to handle the total waste water from a home," Benton said. "We also have the problem of enforcement if we allow floating homes to use these."

There would be no enforcement. The Coast Guard will not enforce it, because it does not consider a floating home a boat, and no one else has the authority to board a floating home and inspect its marine sanitation device."

Generally, the CRC does not adopt regulations opposed by other state agencies. The committee is scheduled to meet this morning and make a recommendation on the proposal, which will be considered by the full CRC later in the day.

Palm Trees In Police Garage

NEW YORK (AP) — Police said a forest of 655 palm trees that suddenly sprouted outside a Brooklyn precinct garage wasn't a new undercover operation, just the haul from an unlicensed street vendor.

"It's like a petrified forest," Sgt. Kenneth Sloman of the 66th Precinct said of the plants, which range in height from 3½ feet to more than 7 feet tall.

"We have 655 house plants and 1 frog here," Sloman said, adding that the frog was found among the trees.

The forest sprang up Wednesday after the peddler was given a summons and police carted the trees from a public park to the station house.

Sloman said the vegetation takes up 4,000 square feet, and police have been getting calls from neighborhood women telling them to be sure to keep the trees watered.

The sergeant said the trees will remain until the police commissioner's office decides what to do with them.

No Deficit For Postal Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service, which had expected to end the fiscal year with a deficit, will have a surplus because of the reduction in inflation, Postmaster General William F. Bolger says.

There will be around $100 million in black ink in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, Bolger told the agency's governing board.

"We're going to have an operating surplus," Bolger said. That would make the second straight annual surplus after the $710 million gain in fiscal 1982.

ANCIENT SCALPES — L. Adrian Hannus, an archaeologist, underwent colon surgery Thursday in Omaha after persuading doctors to use volcanic glass replicas of ancient scalpels. Doctors called the surgery a success and said they were impressed with the performance of the blades. New Slight Dip For Nation's Unemployment Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate dipped slightly to 10.2 percent in April, matching the level of last September, as a burgeoning business recovery created some 360,000 jobs, the Labor Department said today.

It was the second decline in as many months and 0.6 percent below the post-Depression high of 10.8 percent set in December, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported.

Matching the decline in the overall rate was a decrease in the roster of those officially listed by the government as unemployed. That total fell from 11,381,000 to 11,328,000.

A separate unemployment rate, which includes a constant 1.7 million military personnel stationed in the United States, remained at 10.1 percent.

The civilian unemployment rate is based on a monthly Census Bureau survey of 60,000 U.S. households. The April survey showed that total civilian employment jumped sharply from 99.1 million, where it had stood essentially unchanged since October, to more than 99.4 million.

Recovery from previous recessions has been followed by a rapid expansion of the labor force as jobless Americans, believing hiring prospects were improved, renewed their search for work. Before April, however, there had been no such quick spurts in the number of job-seekers this time, even though signals have abounded that there is at least a moderate business turn-around underway.

A separate government survey of non-agricultural business payrolls last month showed that total employment in this category, which includes most workers, went up by 260,000 — from 88.9 million to nearly 89.2 million. The bulk of the 360,000 jobs created last month, the report showed, went to adult women, whose jobless rate fell from 8.8 percent to 8.4 percent.

The jobless rate for adult men, the traditional family breadwinners, rose by 0.2 percent to 9.3 percent, however.

One of the brightest spots in today's report was a statistic showing continued improvement in the number of hours put in by the nation's factory workers. The average workweek rose to 40.1 hours, the highest level since June 1981, before the recession set in.

Similarly, the number of workers forced to accept only part-time hours because full-time work was not available declined by roughly 120,000.

Within the various population groups, there were few sizable increases in joblessness from March to April. Jobless rates were:

—Teen-agers, 23.4 percent, down from 23.5 percent.

—Whites, 8.9, down from 9.0.

—Blacks, 20.8, up from 19.9 and matching the record joblessness for blacks set in December and January.

—Hispanics, 14.5, down from 16.2.

In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Commissioner of Labor Statistics Janet L. Norwood said: "The employment situation improved considerably in April. The number of jobs increased; hours of work were up; more people entered the labor force, and the unemployment rate held (relatively) steady."

She did note, however, that the labor force remains below the level of December. "As employment conditions improve, more people may be expected to enter the labor force," Mrs. Norwood said. "This is because many persons ... come into the labor force when jobs become more plentiful. For this reason, the unemployment rate tends to decline very slowly as labor market conditions begin to improve. The bureau's report said, "Jobless rates declined over the month for workers in trade and continued to edge down in manufacturing, two of the major industries that had been adversely affected by the recession." The average length of unemployment was 11.3

weeks in April, a slight rise over the previous month, and the number of people out of work for six months or longer remained at 2.7 million, accounting for nearly one in every four jobless Americans.

Swedes Hunting For At Least 2 'Minisubs'

By ROLF SODERLIND
Associated Press Writer
SUNDSVALL, Sweden (AP) — The navy is hunting for at least two foreign minisubmarines in Sundsvall Bay, including one possibly left crippled by powerful mine explosions, a defense staff spokesman said today.

Divers, operating from three navy ships just northeast of Alno Island near here, this morning resumed their search of the icy waters on the ninth day of Sweden's hunt for suspected Soviet submarines.

In Stockholm, Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme said today his government was "extremely displeased" with a negative Soviet reply to a sharp Swedish protest against submarine violations of its coastal waters.

The Soviets had denied

Swedish official charges that Soviet subs had committed violations and denounced an alleged "anti-Soviet propaganda" campaign in Swedish media.

The Swedish navy would not reveal what, if anything, divers had found Thursday evening in waters where two 880-pound mines were detonated Wednesday to stop an intruding minisub from escaping. But a spokesman said visibility on the seafloor is less than two feet.

Lt. Gen. Evert Dahlen, a defense staff spokesman, said two depth charges were dropped in south of Alno Island on Thursday after helicopters had sonar contact with presumed submarines.

He said the aim was to force them to the surface.

"We believe there are at least two minisubmarines in the Alno Island area," Dahlen told The Associated Press.

That belief suggested at least two conventional-size mother submarines were waiting outside the bay for the minisubs to escape and meet them.

The minisubs, perhaps 10 to 15 yards long and with a crew from two to five, are thought to have a limited range, Swedish military experts say.

Dahlen said a report of a submarine intrusion in Angerman River 30 miles north of here yielded no evidence. He said a helicopter was sent to the river but found no sign of any intruding vessels.

The Soviets' reply to the sharp Swedish protest on April 26 was delivered orally to Palme by ambassador Boris Pankin. Palme withheld the contents and his comments until a news conference today noon.

"The Soviets answered that the Swedish charges were totally groundless and considered as an unfriendly act," Palme said. "They said a careful investigation by Soviet authorities had shown no Soviet subs had violated Swedish territory at the dates mentioned. Their answer added that the Soviet Union always respects others territory and had no interest in entering Swedish waters..."

The Soviets rejected the findings of a Swedish parliamentary commission, which charged that six Soviet subs violated inner Swedish waters last October.

Moscow asked for a new investigation and complained of an anti-Soviet propaganda campaign in Swedish mass media.

Palme said he had not expected an admission of guilt and would "play it cool," taking appropriate action as developments demand.

In 1981, a Soviet submarine ran aground off a naval base at Karlskrona in southern Sweden.

Induct 10 Students Into Circle K Club

ECU News Bureau
Ten East Carolina University students have been inducted into the Circle K Club, a collegiate branch of the international Kiwanis Club.

They are Susan Anderson of Greensboro, Richard Barnes of Springfield, Va., Karen Boyden of Huntington, N.Y., Robin Cole of Jackson Springs, Stephanie Edwards of Myrtle Beach, S.C., Susan Hazelton of Murfreesboro, Nancy Homa of Pinehurst, Terri Morgan of Cary, Nancy Nicol of Vienna, Va., and Charles Snow of Wilmington.

The new members were formally inducted at the club's annual spring banquet, which also included formal retiring of the club's 1982-83 officers and installation of new officers for the academic year 1983-84.

Newly installed officers are Glenn Brock of Fayetteville, president; Susan Hazelton, vice president; Joyce Longwell of Tarboro, treasurer, and Charles Snow, secretary.

Highlighting the banquet ceremony were presentations of Carolina district and club level awards and scholarships. ECU staff member Owen Kingsbury, club adviser, was given the district award for most outstanding non-Circle K Club member.

Circle K-Andy Roos scholarships for members with records of outstanding service to the club were given to Tim Merch and Linda Jones, both of Wilmington. Each scholarship is worth $375.

Roos scholarships are sponsored by the Roos family of Cary, the IBM Corp. and the Greenville Kiwanis Club.

The ECU Circle K Club sponsors several projects each year on campus and in the local community.

His Own Pets Were Culprits

COBURG, Ore. (AP) — When a man complained about two large stray dogs in his garage, acting dog catcher Robert Rathasack showed up right away — to find his own pets were the culprits.

"We have a 5-foot fence in our yard, but one dog dug a hole and they both got out in the early morning," Rathasack explained after his embarrassing discovery Wednesday.

At least he got a friendlier reception than most officials of his breed. When the dogs saw Rathasack, they jumped into his truck and were quickly impounded — back home.

Sentence Was 'Worst Chapter'

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A live-in babysitter's conviction in the beating death of a 3-year-old girl was the "worst chapter" in a grim life of failed marriages and domestic violence, her lawyer says.

Elizabeth Hutchinson was convicted Thursday of murder, assault and battery for the October 1982 slaying of Brandy Blair Mallett and was sentenced to a mandatory life prison term.

The 31-year-old defendant accepted the verdict without emotion, wearing an eye patch and arm brace which she claimed were necessary treatments for old injuries.
"It's the worst chapter in a very bad, very sad life," said her attorney, Frank Mondano.

It took the jury of seven men and five women less than five hours to review more than three weeks of testimony from 29 witnesses, including neighbors who detailed the sounds of abuse and screams of "Don't hit me again, Mommy," heard from the Malletts' rented rowhouse in Everett.
"There's no celebration," said juror Mary Langill. "It's a very sad situation."

The prosecution said Brandy suffered months of abuse, then received fatal injuries in a beating that left her with a blood clot in the brain and a broken leg. Defense lawyers argued that the child was injured when she fell down stairs.
"I loved all three of those kids. I still do," Ms. Hutchinson shouted under cross examination, denying she harmed Brandy or the girl's brother and sister.

In 1981, Ms. Hutchinson had met Roy Mallett, a garage mechanic who offered her a room and instruction in electronics for $40 a week. Instead, she said, Mallett had sex with her on his living room couch while his wife and children slept upstairs.

Mallett faces a charge of manslaughter in Brandy's death.

Mallett's wife left two months later, leaving Ms. Hutchinson in charge of Brandy, brother Ray, 7, and sister Kimberly, 1½.

But Ms. Hutchinson testified Mallett beat her and the children. Ray Mallett said his new mother also beat him and his sisters.

The thin, nervous boy told the jury about what Mondano later called "a collage of horrors."

The boy said Ms. Hutchinson punched Brandy and dragged her by her hair, and said the woman struck him with a stick.

Ray testified that on the day Brandy died, Ms. Hutchinson hit the girl in the stomach. The boy said he went to the basement, where he heard "a lot of banging ... a lot of crying" coming from upstairs.

"It stopped when I heard the last bang," he said.

Ray also said his father held a knife to his throat while recounting how he killed "little guys and girls" in Vietnam. The youngster said Mallett made him eat hot peppers when he lied, slashed the tires of Ray's bike, and smashed the boy's watch with a hammer.

"I was really afraid of my dad," the youngster said.

Ray and Kimberly now live with an uncle in Tewkesbury.

In emotional testimony, Ms. Hutchinson said she spent her own adolescence in foster homes and married soon after graduating from high school.

But her first husband got into drugs and alcohol, she testified, adding that he also beat her severely enough to cause a miscarriage in her sixth month of pregnancy.

She said her second husband also beat her. That marriage ended when her husband drove away following an argument, accidentally dragging her 50 feet on the left side of her head, Ms. Hutchinson testified.

She said she has worn an eye patch since then. But during the trial, her doctor testified he could find nothing wrong with her eye, or her wrist, which Ms. Hutchinson wears in a brace.
Dr. Robert Singer said those complaints, and Ms. Hutchinson's continual claims that she was pregnant, are rooted in emotional problems.

The case stirred public criticism of the state Department of Social Services, which checked reports of child abuse in the Mallett home two months before Brandy's death.

A social worker testified he found the home in disorder and saw bruises on Brandy and Ray's faces. But the state took no further action.

Port's Tobacco Activity Rose

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Tobacco imports and exports through the port of Hampton Roads increased 7.7 percent, or 39.3 million pounds, in 1982 over 1981, the Virginia Port Authority reported Thursday.

Unmanufactured tobacco exports through the port increased by 21 million pounds and the import of manufactured tobacco products climbed nearly 30 million pounds, from 50.9 million pounds to 80.6 million pounds, the VPA said.

There were declines in imports of unmanufactured tobacco and exports of manufactured tobacco products, but VPA spokesman Chuck Nelson declined to release the figures.

J. Robert Bray, VPA executive director, attributed the overall increase to the authority's marketing emphasis on tobacco.

Agency Revokes Marina Permit

BATH — The Coastal Resources Commission, meeting at Nags Head Thursday, revoked a permit to build a large marina on the western shore of Bath Creek.

Ford S. Worthy Jr. of Raleigh received a permit from a local permit officer administering the Coastal Area Management Act to build the marina, with three large piers, in June 1982, after being told by Bath officials that the project complied with the town's zoning ordinance.

But two weeks later, the town board changed the zoning laws and notified Worthy the marina no longer complied with the zoning regulations as required for a CAMA permit.

"It'll be a sad day in the history of CAMA when permits are denied on the basis of opposition from local government instead of environmental considerations," Worthy's attorney, Lee E. Knott of Washington, told the commission.

Although commission member Arthur Cooper, who conducted a hearing in the case, concluded that the permit violated local zoning, the commission skirted the zoning issue, ruling instead that the permit was invalid because improper procedures were followed by the permit officer.

The permit officer, according to information presented Thursday, had delegated the responsibility for approval of fueling facilities at the marina to a member of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

The commission concluded that, because the permit officer delegated his responsibility for the fueling station to the Wildlife Commission member, the permit was invalid.

Book Illustrator Captures Riches Of Childhood

The lady with silver hair and a soft, musical, Georgia accent held half a hundred young children spellbound one recent Monday afternoon at Eastern Elementary School. The second graders sat and kneeled on the library floor, their faces rapt with obvious enjoyment as they listened to Susan Carlton Smith weave recollections of her childhood into the presentation of visual images she creates today in drawings and sculptures drawn from nature's treasures of left-overs and found objects which "I find everywhere I go, even in my own backyard."

It is her reputation in the unofficial capacity that has made her a much sought-after person to appear in classrooms across the state and entertain receptive young minds with her abiding love for nature and how she transforms that love into works of art to delight millions of young (and youthful-minded adult) readers.

At Eastern Elementary, she talked to students in grades kindergarten through the third grade in four sessions — two morning and two afternoon sessions on two separate days.

"I've always had a deep love of nature, a respect for life," Miss Smith told the children. "Spiderwebs, sticks, beetles, butterflies, grass and moss, all of these have always been for me things to look at, to study, to try to understand, and to love."

Referring to attitudes she has formulated in respect to the world about us, Miss Smith said that, "Early in life, at about your age, I discovered that everything around us, no matter where we are, is full of surprises, even the things which at first may seem most commonplace."

To illustrate surprises that can be seen in the commonplace, Miss Smith showed a series of slides depicting some of the innovative miniature sculptures she has fashioned "from lovely bits of nature I love to collect for their shape, structure, texture. This cathedral," she traced on the screen the objects used to make the sculpture, "is made from yellow jasmine seed pods, a small tendril, and an acorn cup. By the way," she added, "the watercolor at the bottom of the acorn cup is the smallest painting I've ever done. It's really very tiny, as you can see."

In language that 8-year olds easily understand, she encouraged the children to "look at things, not only for what they appear to be, but for all the things it could be or become in your imagination."

tion. If you do that, you will make endless discoveries.

"Another thing I want you to consider, another of my attitudes, is to be ready to acknowledge, to remember that there can be a real treasure hidden in what might first appear to be trash."

Miss Smith emphasized that she never destroys life to get bits and pieces for her sculptures or for samples to draw from. "I collect dead insects, seed pods, bits of branches, feathers. The radiator of my car after a trip furnishes me with lots of butterfly wings."

One series of color slides depicted "a frog I needed to draw from. He appeared on my front porch right at the time I needed him. I kept him in a large glass bowl, fed him and he was happy with me. I perhaps overfed him because he became quite fat by the time I'd finished drawing my pictures and released him outdoors. I regret I never kissed him before I turned him loose," she laughed. "He might have been a handsome prince that I let get away."

Miss Smith said her childhood was a fortunate one. "As a child, I grew up in Athens, Georgia. Our house was right at the edge of a woods on one side, and on the edge of the university campus on the other side. Every year I could hardly wait for spring to come so that I could get back outdoors and explore and discover."

"There was a kind gentleman in the biology laboratory on the campus who always took time to help me identify whatever I had found. I was lucky too because my mother and father were understanding. They let me keep all my treasures even when after a time the boxes I'd stored things in filled and overflowed the garage."

"I had a good friend, a wonderful buddy too, a boy named Robert Sidbury who took me fishing a lot. Robert had nothing but a skinny stick to fish with, but he caught big fish and he loved being outdoors, so we became close friends."

When she grew up, Miss Smith attended the University of Georgia at Athens, where she majored, naturally, in biology. "I wanted to find answers. How a woodpecker pecked and didn't get a headache, for example."

"When I graduated, my first job was drawing lice, fleas, ticks for scientific studies. I couldn't resist adding features to tick heads to make them into people or cars. My boss was a bit puzzled and I think, a little put out with me. So I resigned that job and went back to Athens to study drama."

Miss Smith's drama studies led her to write "a play with everything taking place in one single drop of water. The main character is a cross-eyed flatworm. I even designed Spanish puppets to perform in the play, but it never got produced." Miss Smith noted that she has recently finished a book based on the play.

Once more in the work world, Miss Smith was employed for several summers as a scientific illustrator at the University of Virginia's biological field station. She worked, too, as an illustrator for the U.S. Public Health Service in Atlanta and did some freelance work.

It was after moving to Durham in the mid-1960s that she ventured into the field of illustrating children's books. The first was a Heritage Press book, "Ladybug, Ladybug," with a story by Kathleen M. Daly. In the intervening years, she has illustrated "The Child's Book of Flowers" and "Wildflowers of North Carolina." Her illustrations have also appeared in "Jack and Jill" and in many other magazines.

The passing years have silvered Susan Smith's thick hair, but these years have also provided a span of time for the maturing of her vibrant and ever-youthful imagination that has produced a whole gallery of delightful creatures drawn from nature.

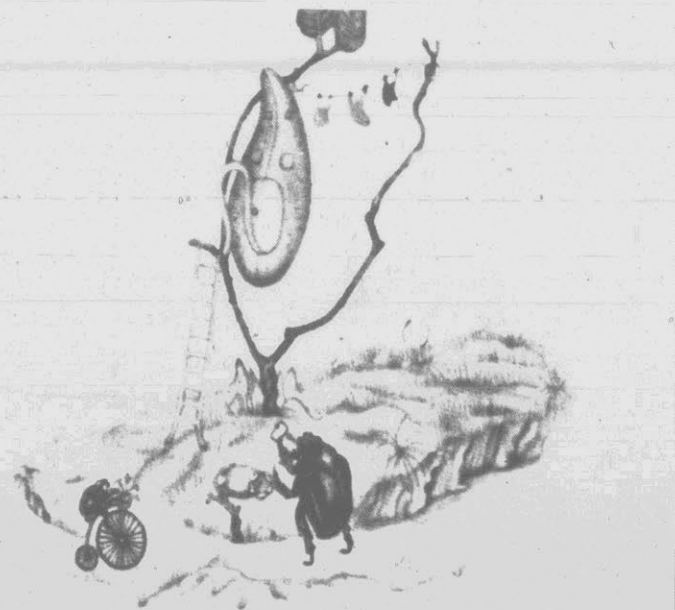

Whether it's a root transformed into sculpture as a ballet dancer, the skeleton of a devil's walking stick turned into a piano player, or the antenna of a moth that becomes a dancing lady's fan, Susan Smith's art confirms her conviction that "nothing is so small that it is not at the same time big."

Attentive Audience

AT EASTERN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL ... about 50 second graders recently gave Miss Smith (center background) their rapt attention for an hour as she told them about her love for nature and how it led to illustrating books and creating nature sculpture. At the end of her lecture/slide show, the youngsters bombarded her with questions and comments about things they had observed in nature.

Drawings From Ladybug Book

TWO PAGES FROM "LADYBUG, LADYBUG" ... show the accuracy and imagination Susan Smith puts into art work. "Most everything I draw is based on close observation of nature," says Miss Smith, who works in the rare book medical library at Duke University. Her drawings and small sculptures made of found objects in nature have been widely exhibited in a number of states.

American Popular Culture Displayed In Rochester Museum

By DEBBIE FREEDMAN Manning, Selva & Lee Consultants To

New York State Commerce The recently opened Margaret Woodbury Strong Museum in Rochester, N.Y., is just the kind of place that will appeal to people who say, "I don't like museums."

Those who aren't particularly captivated by ordered rows of paintings will find instead a huge and intriguing collection of memorabilia personifying American popular culture from 1820-1930.

Margaret Woodbury Strong, who died in 1969, began collecting as a child. Her parents were collectors and, being affluent, they encouraged a daughter who showed a precocious flair for acquiring typical trappings of her society. Little Margaret had no notion that her juvenile hobby would turn into a lifelong pursuit.

"People are amazed when they realize everything in the museum — some 30,000 exhibits and we're still counting — belonged to Margaret Woodbury Strong," says Karen Roger-Smith, tours and events coordinator. "Can you imagine an entire museum containing art acquired by one person? It took our staff months just to remove all these things from her 30-room home on the outskirts of Rochester. The museum itself is a result of more than 10 years of preparation."

Unusual Is Usual

What is unusual about the collection is how "usual" are its components. As a child, and as an adult, Margaret mostly assembled items that could be found in the average shop or in an average middle-class American home. With the exception of an Oriental collection and exotic pieces acquired during trips abroad, most items result from shopping forays to American cities. While today we are beguiled by the furnishings, dolls, costumes and objets-d'art that reflect the rich elegance of Victorian times and glossy art deco motif of the 1920s, these items were merely conventional to those who lived during those periods.

If the passage of time adds curiosity value to everyday things, everyone owns potential collector's items. Walking through the various exhibits in the museum we might be tickled by an old-fashioned calling card, a torn out recipe, a turn-of-the-century bicycle, an ironing board, but what would be the reaction decades from now to items that reflected the "strange" trends of the '60s and '70s? Bell bottom trousers, for example, a statement-making T-shirt, political bumper stickers, a moped or an Andy Warhol poster might be clucked and exclaimed over by 21-century museum-goers.

Remarkably Preserved

In the meantime, these "mundane" artifacts representing an entire earlier century are not only remarkably preserved, but absolutely staggering in their sheer number. When Mrs. Strong bought, she bought in quantity as well as quality.

The doll collection alone is unparalleled. Gaze into the 98 glass exhibit cases and 24,000 pairs of china, bone and fabric eyes gaze back. Doll lovers will easily be beside themselves, but even those with mildly interested in typical girls' playthings will find the collection fascinating and be somewhat startled at the number of anatomically correct boy dolls, currently thought to be an innovation of the 20th century.

Side by side the dolls stand, each one impeccably dressed in the height of the then current fashion. There are dolls in high-necked lace, velvet and satin gowns of the Victorian era to loose swinging sailor suits of the '20s. There are tall, elegantly groomed lady dolls and fat diapered baby dolls. And, dolls less than an inch high! There are gypsies and peddlers and milkmaids, and men dolls in tuxedos and tails, dolls representing many nations and races. And there are the "series" dolls, such as Shirley Temples, Kewpies, Ginnies and Superman.

A Room in Ivory

This astounding collection, over which the "doll-o-phile" will linger for hours, is augmented by 400 doll houses ranging from the modest to the palatial. They are outfitted with the tiniest and most intricate accoutrements imaginable. One room is furnished in ivory — complete with ivory cabinets and etageries, gazebos and grandfather clocks, chandeliers, bird cages and a full tea set. Truly mesmerizing is a country store with ceiling removed to allow maximum exposure of the interior. The realistic doll house is modeled after a store in Cumington, Mass., and is generously stocked with all manner of domestic items, medicines and candies.

Other specialty doll houses, all of which contain little dolls going about their daily chores, are a fabric store and spice shop, a room equipped with gadgets entitled — the inventor's living room — a butcher shop, and fully outfitted kitchens, bathrooms, studies and play rooms. And, inhabiting their own showcases are row upon row of houses resembling a middle-class block on "Any-Old-Street, U.S.A."

For a girl growing up in the late 1800s, it would have been unseemly to fancy

"masculine" toys, but as a young collector Margaret got to buy the slickest, newest toy train models in town. The brightly painted trains, fire engines, buses and buggies are on display next to the doll collection. And there are armies of toy soldiers, animals, marbles, board games, ferris wheels and wind-up carousels.

Decorative Arts

A fascinating array of decorative arts are also featured on the museum's second floor. The Oriental section contains exotic vases and figurines procured during the Woodbury family's trip to China. A seemingly endless array of blue and white "flow" china dishes monopolize several cabinets and there are quantities of Early American art glass and cut glass, salt and pepper shakers, bottles, silverware and heavy glass paperweights in deep, luscious colors.

On the first floor, Mrs. Strong's possession are showcased in an entirely different manner. They are divided into thematic exhibits which trace the evolution of decor, industry and fashion from the mid 1800s to the 1930s — the story of America's Industrial Revolution — and are titled "The Great Transformation," "Changing Patterns: Household Furnishings, 1820-1929" and "Light of the Home: Middle Class American Women, 1870-1910."

They are all entertaining history lessons. According to Ms. Roger-Smith, the exhibits are excellent for students and researchers looking for authenticity.

"Since we opened Oct. 12, we've had almost 50,000 visitors come through the museum, and many are here to examine interior design, women's fashion or even changing social attitudes,"

she says. "We've made it easy for them by numbering items which can be looked up in our file system. Each reference card has an explanation of the particular item, its date, its source, etc."

Feminine Behavior

These exhibits are subdivided into categories such as "Courtship," "Marriage," "The Home," "Leisure," "Health," "Religion," and "Death." Each setting is painstakingly arranged and supplemented with excerpts from popular magazines of the period in American history they are associated with. Since Mrs. Strong had been heavily influenced by woman's role in society at that time, the excerpts are mostly admonitions on "correct" feminine behavior.

For example, young ladies were to be paragons of virtue and discretion during courtship so that the husband-to-be could be assured of having made a wise choice. Once married, men were to sit in large comfortable chairs that had arm rests, while wives improved their posture in armless, straight-backed chairs. Some recreational activities deemed proper for ladies were croquet, tennis, swimming and bicycling, and the attire and athletic equipment for these are on display. Finally, when there was a death in the family, a woman was to be swathed in black for the mourning period, so that barely an inch of flesh was exposed.

Visitors Can Touch

This modern, spacious museum was constructed so that visitors can "touch" examples of typical items. The exhibits are off limits to touching, but partial replicas of certain furnishings are attached to the exterior so that the wood, horsehair, brocade and other period materials used in construction can be handled. They are all fairly low to the floor, accessible both to children and visitors in wheelchairs. Plates with descriptions in braille are available for the blind.

The museum has a reference library which now contains 20,000 books, plus trade catalogs and slides. And on the first floor is the Museum Shop where reproductions, books, miniatures, dolls, glassware and other items are on sale. The museum, located at One Manhattan Square in downtown Rochester, is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. The museum is closed on major holidays.

DOLLS, DOLLS, DOLLS ... some 24,000 of them altogether. The Margaret Woodbury Strong Museum in Rochester, New York, is heaven for the "doll-o-phile," as well as anyone interested in its astounding collection of memorabilia personifying American popular culture from 1820-1930.

Violent Unrest In France Grows; More To Come

VIOLENT CLASHES — A member of the small businessmen union strikes with a wooden stick the head of a helmeted riot police officer during clashes between Paris security forces and thousands of discontented businessmen in central Paris Thursday. Several people were taken to hospitals with serious injuries resulting in the scuffle. (AP Laserphoto)

By CAROLYN LESH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Chanting students warned of more violence to come as they and thousands of shopkeepers rioted in the streets against the Socialist government's policies. Dozens of demonstrators and about 50 riot police were injured.

The two main disturbances Thursday were followed by more fighting during the night, when small groups of extremist students engaged police in a series of running battles in the Latin Quarter of Paris. Two policemen were hospitalized with injuries and about 100 demonstrators were arrested, although police said only four would be held for possible prosecution.

The demonstrators, believed to be right-wing, wore crash helmets and some carried iron bars, witnesses said.

The clashes were the latest in a two-week outbreak of the worst domestic upheaval since President Francois Mitterrand took office in May 1981. The students, who hurled rocks and gasoline bombs at police, made clear their protests would continue.

"Hot! Hot! The springtime will be hot!" they shouted during a march across the city to protest proposed reforms in the university system.

In a separate clash, police fired tear gas at about 20,000 artisans and small businessmen who were looting garbage at them from overturned bins. Many of the demonstrators were seen on television with bloody faces and limbs.

Mitterrand's economic program, unveiled in March after the third devaluation of the franc in two years, has been the target of growing unrest over the last two weeks. The plan included higher taxes, a forced loan to the government by most taxpayers and restricted foreign travel.

"There's a limit of tolerance and we've gone past it," Rene Bernasconi, president of France's General Confederation of Small and Medium Businesses, said in a radio interview. "We're tired of being the scapegoats. We don't see why we should be held responsible for the errors of the economy."

Demonstrators demanded the resignation of Mitterrand, who was in China on an official visit.

About 50 farmers herded flocks of sheep through the capital to press for higher prices for their products, and students and businessmen demonstrated in at least eight other major cities.

About 20 or 30 students received minor injuries during a demonstration that attracted 8,000 opponents of a government proposal to reform the university system. Police arrested about 30 students.

The students are angry about plans to stiffen standards in university education and link the number of graduates from various schools more closely to future job openings.

The businessmen began their demonstration at L'Esplanade des Invalides, a large plaza in front of Napoleon's Tomb on the Left Bank of the Seine River. From there they headed west toward the Eiffel Tower.

Shortly before reaching the tower, police barricaded the demonstration route along a river front road and the clash began. It lasted for almost an hour before the crowd dispersed.

The students marched across the city in the opposite direction, beginning by the Eiffel Tower and heading east toward the Right Bank and the Place de la Bastille, the starting point of the French Revolution.

Violence broke out near a bridge leading to the Right Bank with students lobbing rocks and gasoline bombs at police. The young protesters tore up street pavement and hurriedly set up road barricades, sometimes setting them alight, to delay the advance of hundreds of helmeted officers.

The city was reported quiet Thursday night. Authorities said dozens of demonstrators and about 50 police were injured in the disturbances.

Other demonstrations by students and businessmen were held in cities throughout France, including Marseille, Strasbourg, Nice, Lille, Toulouse, Nancy and Caen. In Bordeaux, about 100 law students invaded the local television station and prevented it from broadcasting the evening news.

There were no disturbances involving farmers reported in Paris but farmers elsewhere in the country blocked roads and intercepted trucks carrying foreign products to express their fury over cheap agricultural imports.

Developers Oppose Expanding Of Oceanfront Buffer Plans

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Coastal developers continued to object Thursday to a proposal to double the oceanfront buffer for multifamily and commercial buildings.

The complaints dominated most of a meeting of the Coastal Resources Commission's Implementation and Standards Committee. Because such discussions have twice kept the committee from making a recommendation on the proposal, Chairman James Sykes asked the CRC staff to meet with opponents and supporters of the idea before the next CRC meeting, in June, and try to reach a compromise.

"We have put a lot of effort into this, but the comments we're getting here make a lot of sense," Sykes said after more than an hour of discussion. "Before the next meeting, let's put our heads together and try to work out some of these ideas."

Howard Claiborne, who is developing a large tract of land for a client in Nags Head, and Brian Newman, president of the Outer Banks Homebuilders Association, argued that establishing a minimum buffer of 120 feet would significantly reduce the value of many oceanfront tracts. Claiborne said the value of the tract he is working to develop would drop from $30 million to $6 million if the proposed change is adopted.

Currently, oceanfront development is required to leave a buffer area equal to 30 times the annual erosion rate on the property or a minimum of 60 feet. The buffer is a safety device designed to allow for normal erosion. Because of the proliferation of large condominium and motel projects along the coast, the commission is considering a proposal to require a larger buffer for buildings larger than a duplex.

The rationale behind the proposal is that single-family homes and duplexes can be moved if threatened by erosion, but larger buildings

Rates For Gas File To Reduce

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's three major natural gas companies have applied for a reduction in rates that would cut the average residential bill by about $18.60 a year.

The N.C. Utilities Commission will consider the proposal Monday. If the cuts are approved, they would apply to bills issued after May 1.

Public Service Co. of North Carolina, North Carolina Natural Gas Corp. and Piedmont Natural Gas Co. have applied for the rate cuts because of lower wholesale rates from their wholesale supplier.

probably cannot. Therefore, the CRC reasons, a large building needs a bigger buffer to delay the time when a decision must be made on how to protect it.

The commission staff has recommended that the buffer for large buildings be figured by multiplying the annual erosion rate on the property by 60 — twice the standard now required. Newman argued that the current buffer is working well and urged the commission not to change it.

Replica Had Long Flight

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A replica of a Wright Brothers military plane lifted off the Wright-Patterson Air Force Base runway and flew 22 miles in its longest test flight.

The Wright B. Military Flyer was flown Thursday to its new testing site at Dayton General Airport as its two pilots sat in front with no protection from the elements — just like pilots of the original 1911 plane.

"I expected it to be cold, so I dressed with three layers of clothes," said John H. Warlick, chairman of the board of the Wright B. Flyer project.

Warlick, an ex-Navy pilot, has been flying for 41 years. His co-pilot, W.A. Sloan, who is retired from the Air Force, is the chief flight instructor at Wright-Patterson Aero Club and has been flying 42 years.

The aluminum and steel craft, built with donations over seven years, is modeled after the wood and canvas plane built by Orville and Wilbur Wright. That craft was the world's first military production airplane.

The flight Thursday was the first by the replica to a new destination. On Nov. 27, Warlick and Sloan flew the plane around the Wright-Patterson base on a 7½-minute test flight.

Construction of the plane began in 1976 as part of the nation's Bicentennial celebration, and the work has been done by volunteers at the base.

Sloan said dimensions of the new plane are identical to those of the original, but the materials are stronger. Instrumentation was installed to meet Federal Aviation Administration requirements.

Council 'Recognizes' More Psychiatric Care Need

A resolution recognizing "a need for additional psychiatric services in this region" but making no reference to the support of any one agency to provide those services gained the approval of the City Council Thursday night.

The council resolved that, "As a service to the citizens of eastern North Carolina, and to supplement the existing medical services already available in Greenville, we support the selection of Greenville as the site for construction of any new facilities to meet this need."

The resolution also stated, "Further, we support the provision of additional facilities in this region by private enterprise."

The council did not address in its resolution the application by Charter Medical Inc.

for a private psychiatric hospital in Greenville. The board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce went on record in April as favoring the private corporation's local bid.

Councilman Stuart Shinn moved to adopt the resolution and George Pugh provided the second for the motion. The vote on the motion was unanimous.

Mayor Percy Cox said following the meeting that the council supported the provision of needed additional psychiatric services for the area, whether it be by Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the medical school or by a private firm.

The governing board of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, following recommendations by an ECHSA project review committee, voted recently to deny Charter's application for a 65-bed private psychiatric hospital here. The state Department of Human Resources will make the ultimate decision on the matter.

In other business, the council:

- Approved a request by

Phil Carroll for satellite annexation of the Carolina Opry House, located on the southwestern side of State Road 1534 and northwesterly of the Abron Best and Norman Winslow property;

- Approved a petition by owners of sections one and two of Greenridge subdivision, located north of the Greenville Utilities Commission property on the eastern side of State Road 1204, for satellite annexation;

- Approved a request by Kenneth M. Buck, Charles H. McGowan Jr., and Janice M.

Barbee to rezone one acre, located south of Ninth Street, north of U.S. 264-10th Street, west of W.S. Pollard's property, and east of Clark Street, from unoffensive industry to downtown commercial fringe;

- Approved a request by the engineering department to adopt an ordinance for a 35-foot loading/unloading zone sign on the south side of West Third Street, 50 feet west of Evans Street;

- Approved a request by Tyson Bilbro of 100 E. Third St. to reinstate limited parking on the north side of Brookgreen Avenue at the intersection of Elm Street and Brookgreen;

- Approved a request by Ms. Janet Fischer of 202 Saint Andrews Drive to prohibit through truck traffic on the street;

- Scheduled a public hearing for June 9 on a petition by the owners of Colonial Mobile Home Park for satellite annexation;

- Approved an agreement with the state Department of Transportation for street and highway improvements, consisting of the improvement of N.C. 33 from the end of existing curb and gutter to the city limits;

- Scheduled a June 9 public hearing on an amendment to the thoroughfare plan relative to Brownlea Drive;

- Appointed Roscoe Norfleet to a five-year term which is scheduled to be dedicated in August.

As the center's director, Dawkins coordinated the development of a work adjustment program for the blind, deaf, mentally retarded and physically disabled and was instrumental in securing a federal grant to build housing and recreational facilities for clients from a number of eastern North Carolina counties served by the center.

As a pastor in Kinston, Dawkins conducted religious services for people at the Caswell Training Center for the Mentally Retarded.

Commencement

Thomas Edward Curry Jr. of Maitland, Fla., the first Ph.D. ever awarded at ECU. Curry was awarded a doctorate of philosophy in anatomy.

Degrees were also awarded to 2,650 graduates, including 39 new medical doctors graduating from the ECU School of Medicine.

Morgan addressed the graduation crowd on a number of topics during his commencement address, including education, democracy, poverty and nuclear weapons. He told the crowd that the best way to preserve peace is "through strength". That strength will come partially through education of our best resources: young people.

"This nation stands as a beacon to all the free world and to all those people in totalitarian countries who still hope and strive for freedom," Morgan said. "Our role is often obscured by our own self depreciation, and the continuing crises that cloud international affairs, but it is still there. Beset with such crises and our many problems, we tend to be too critical of ourselves. Economic and social problems are not unique to America, but are part of the times in which we live."

Leaning forward, Morgan told the students they must not let their liberties be chipped away — "a little here and a little there."

"But with faith in America, faith in our values, faith in our tradition of personal responsibilities, faith in our institutions and faith in ourselves, our hopes for continued freedom and a better America will prevail. You and your generation will help make it so," he said.

Morgan served as a university trustee for 15 years, being elected vice chairman or chairman for 13 years. He is a native of Harnett County and a resident of Buie's Creek and Lillington and served in the N.C. Senate for five terms, was the N.C. attorney general for six years and served as a U.S. senator for six years.

Jenkins, "a great leader and the principal architect for progress during East Carolina University's most dynamic period of growth," said Howell, served ECU for 18 years and was instrumental in bringing about the ECU School of Medicine.

"M" Is For...

Sunday is Mother's Day—a time to honor those wonderful women who made us what we are today. The nation is experiencing a "baby boomlet." The baby girls who were born during the post-World War Two baby boom have all grown up and are having babies of their own. But these moms are very different from their own mothers. On the average, they waited to marry and to have children of their own. Today, most babies are born to women age 25 to 29. Many mothers have careers. Fully 67 percent of women between 18 and 34 are in the labor force, and nearly one out of every two mothers has a job outside the home. And many of today's moms are independent. Mothers head more than 9 million American families.

Convict 5 Of Drug-Smuggling

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Five Colombians have received active prison sentences five months after they were arrested in what was called the second-largest cocaine seizure ever in North Carolina.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge Hiram H. Ward sentenced the men, four of whom pleaded guilty and one who was convicted.

Jose Luis Naranjo-Sierra, who was convicted by a jury on Feb. 17 of plotting to smuggle 11 pounds of cocaine through Regional Airport, was sentenced to 15 years in prison. The sentence is to be added to a current sentence Naranjo-Sierra is serving on other drug charges in a federal prison in New York.

Missing Engine Seals Caused Crisis For Airliner

By ANNES. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Teams of investigators began trying to learn why tiny rubber oil seals were missing from an Eastern Airlines jumbo jet that lost all power and glided within 2,800 feet of the ocean before limping back to land when one engine revived.

The three-engine Lockheed L-1011, carrying 172 people, dropped more than 16,000 feet in 10 minutes Thursday before pilot Dick Boddy managed to revive the tail jet and guide Flight 855 safely back to Miami International Airport.

Smoke spewed from the single working engine as the plane landed.

As many passengers — shaken but relieved, and toasting their good fortune — boarded another Eastern L-1011 to resume their journey to Nassau in the Bahamas, federal and airline officials began looking for the cause.

Eastern and National Transportation Safety Board officials said the engines stalled because of oil leakage, due to failure to install small rubber seals called "O-rings," which cost pennies.

during nightly maintenance.

"With the 'O ring' missing, the oil was able to leak out," NTSB spokesman Ira Furman said. "If oil leaks out, the engine will fail. Engines require lubrication."

Furman said the thumb-sized, ring-shaped seals, which cost "pennies," fit into a notch on a magnetized oil plug that is removed nightly from the engines to check for any wear that would show up in the oil. Each plug is supposed to carry two rings.

New oil plugs were apparently installed without the seals Wednesday night, he said, leaving space for oil to leak under pressure.

"We have yet to determine whether the plugs are supposed to come out of the stock room with the 'O ring' or whether the mechanics are supposed to put the 'O ring' on," he said, refusing to fix blame.

"Why they weren't there is the next phase of the investigation," said Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock. The airline said the other 27 L-1011s in its fleet were inspected and all had the seals.

After a brief dispute between the Miami-based carrier and the NTSB, Eastern gave the cockpit voice recorder and flight data recorder to safety board investigators, Furman said.

The recorders were being hand-carried to Washington today and will be transcribed as quickly as possible, he said.

Three investigations of the incident were under way by Eastern, the NTSB and the Federal Aviation Administration.

The engine failure occurred 88 miles east of Miami, said FAA spokesman Roger Myers.

"I was never so scared in all my life, never closer to death," said a passenger, Dr. Bruce Jacobs, a dentist from nearby Hollywood.

"They came down pretty fast," said Myers. Officials later determined the aircraft plunged from an altitude of about 19,000 feet to 2,800 feet in 10 minutes, he said.

A cockpit instrument first signaled trouble as the plane was beginning its descent to Nassau, Ashlock said. Following standard procedure, the engine was shut down and the plane turned back to Miami.

Quickly, however, oil pressure dropped in the other two engines and they shut down, leaving the aircraft without any power, he said.

As the plane lost altitude, the 162 passengers and 10 crew members prepared to ditch in the ocean, scrambling into inflatable life vests and grabbing seat-pocket cards to review evacuation instructions.

Air traffic was cleared away from the Miami airport and the Coast Guard was alerted.

But 10 miles from Miami, the tail engine coughed to life. It was smoking as the plane landed, but never caught fire, officials said.

Afterward, many passengers wore their life vests off the aircraft and asked to keep them as souvenirs, but Ashlock said the vests had to be given to federal investigators.

An Eastern maintenance employee, who asked not to be identified, said mechanics replace the O-rings at planeside during maintenance.

The jet must then pass an inspection in which the engines are run up to starting speed with air pressure to be sure the oil pressure is normal, he said.

"For three of them to be missing on the same plane at the same time, it had to be something that fell through the cracks," he said.

The leaks would have been small enough that the oil pressure loss might not have been noticeable during testing, he said.

Forty-eight passengers chose not to resume the flight to the Bahamas. As, the others waited to board, they consumed eight "kits" of liquor, or 384 one-shot bottles, courtesy of the airline, said Ashlock.

"We are the luckiest people alive," said one relieved passenger, Janet Jacobs of Hollywood, Fla.

Plan Borrowing Education Ideas

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Several governors attending an education conference at Research Triangle Park Thursday said their states planned to borrow educational programs from North Carolina.

Gov. Thomas Kean of New Jersey said his state planned to set up a governor's school "along the North Carolina model."

Seven of the 13 governors who served on the National Task Force on Education for Economic Growth, which called for drastic reforms in education Wednesday, said their programs could reflect what is needed in the schools.

"Our hope is that we can build on solid examples and make these small examples bigger examples and ultimately improve the quality of education for all children," said Delaware Gov. Pierre S. duPont IV.

DuPont is chairman-elect of the Education Commission of the States, whose steering committee met Thursday. Gov. Jim Hunt gave committee members and the governors a tour of the Research Triangle Park and the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics in Durham.

The ECS, chaired by Hunt, is a national association of state-level government and education officials.

Gov. Charles S. Robb of Virginia said his state gave teachers a 10 percent pay raise this year and was upgrading graduation requirements.

DuPont said his state opened "basics plus" schools with more emphasis on homework, discipline and the basics of reading, writing, math and science, where parents volunteer to send their children.

"That program is so successful we've watched regular schools pick up on it," he said.

Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich said his state was emphasizing math and science education in the schools, but not at the expense of the arts.

"We're not going to rob Peter to pay Paul," he said.

"We hope we don't have to be back here in 15 years saying, 'What happened to the arts?'"

OK Vote On Blue Laws

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A bill authorizing a non-binding referendum on Sunday closing laws in Cumberland County was passed Thursday by the state House of Representatives.

The bill calls for a county-wide referendum on whether Fayetteville and unincorporated parts of Cumberland County should have a Blue Law, an ordinance that restricts the sale of non-essential goods on Sundays. Currently, Fayetteville has such a law, but the county does not.

The county's Blue Law was ruled unconstitutional and struck down Feb. 17 by District Court Judge Joe Dupree.

The county commissioners have said they will abide by the results of the referendum, even though it would be non-binding. A majority of Fayetteville City Council members have also said they will follow results of the voting in city precincts, but they plan to consider the outcome of the entire vote before making a decision on whether to repeal the city's Blue Law.

The bill authorizing the vote must now be approved by the state Senate.

Air Force Asks Research Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force is asking Congress for more than half a billion dollars next year for research on a new small, single-warhead intercontinental ballistic missile for the 1990s.

The $600 million figure appeared in an announcement that the Air Force has opened a Small Missile Program Office at Norton Air Force Base, Calif., to manage development of the small missile.

President Reagan proposed the new missile to Congress, along with a plan to place 100 giant new MX missiles in launch silos now holding Minuteman ICBMs. Reagan's proposals are in line with the recommendations of a special presidential commission which sought a compromise solution to the politically tangled problem of how to base the MX.

N. C. Outpatient Commitment Bill Ready In House

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state House committee has approved a bill to make North Carolina the first state to allow involuntary outpatient commitment without showing a mental health patient is dangerous.

However, after passing the measure Thursday, the Judiciary III Committee failed to act on a bill that would let judges take past "dangerousness" into account in commitment hearings.

The committee agreed to remove provisions to let patients to be jailed or forcibly detained if they refused to comply with a judge's order — an action taken in response to questions about the bill's constitutionality.

"You can't pull in all these coercions," said Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, who chaired a subcommittee studying both bills. "You'd probably be violating the patients' rights to due process."

The subcommittee voted to kill the other bill, but members changed their mind before it was reported to the full committee. That measure would remove the word "recent" from current laws governing what actions by a patient may be considered in determining his dangerousness.

The outpatient bill is designed to let the courts intervene when patients outside institutions stop taking prescribed medication, helping to keep them out of hospitals. Under current law, judges are powerless to act until such patients regress to the point that they are dangerous to themselves or to others. Then they must commit them to a hospital.

Because the bill would provide a lesser infringement on freedom than the in-patient commitment ordered under current laws, supporters agreed not to require legal representation for patients in the commitment hearings. But opponents have argued that any infringement is enough to warrant legal aid.

Lynn Gunn, staff director for Mental Health Study Commission that recommended the bill, said removing the restrictions would weaken the bill.

"It may cut out another 10 percent to 15 percent (of mental patients) that we won't catch," she said. "But we're still going to get a lot more than we would before."

Deborah Greenblatt, an attorney representing Carolina Legal Assistance for the Mentally Handicapped, said it was a "reasonable compromise." But she said she did not support it.

"I'll always have problems with it because there's no way to predict dangerousness," she said.

Ms. Greenblatt has argued that the bill would create a new "revolving door" in which patients will continually be shuttled from their homes to courts to enforce their treatments.

In other legislative action: Lottery

The full Senate will consider next week a bill to set up a statewide lottery after a binding referendum after the measure was approved by the Senate Judiciary II Committee.

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, committee chairman, said he would have the bill put on Wednesday's calendar at the request of members who would not be present Friday and to avoid Tuesday's session at Camp Lejeune.

Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, who introduced the bill, said he was pleased with its progress and expected it to pass the Senate with few changes.

"The chances are improving every day," he said. "We are reminded every day of our fiscal shortfall in the state."

If approved by the General Assembly and the voters, the lottery is expected to generate up to $100 million a year for the state. The bill calls for a referendum in November to consider the lottery, but Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, has said he would introduce a floor amendment to postpone the date until November 1984.

The committee adopted amendments Thursday to have winnings by minors held in a trust fund until they reach the age of 18 and to let the state treasurer invest lottery funds in accordance with North Carolina law.

Day-Care

The House voted 83-12 to approve a compromise bill exempting church-operated day-care centers from state licensing requirements. Under the bill, church day-care facilities still would be required to obey state health and safety standards.

"The only difference is that they are not required to display a license on their wall," said Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus.

The measure now goes to the Senate for concurrence in a House amendment.

The bill is a compromise over a measure proposed during the last session that would not have forced church day-care centers to obey health and safety standards.

It is supported by fundamentalist churches, Gov. Jim Hunt and the state agencies that oversee day-care facilities.

Teacher Swap

The Senate Education Committee approved a bill to let university professors temporarily switch positions with public school teachers after removing a controversial provision that made the swaps mandatory.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, told the committee he favored the mandatory institution of the pilot program. He has said voluntary attempts to start such a program have not been effective.

Chapin said the program would improve teaching at all levels by keeping professors abreast of public school methods and by informing teachers on the latest teaching innovations.

University officials have fought the mandatory provision, saying they have used the program when it would do the most good.

Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, introduced the compromise bill, saying, "If we can train better teachers, that's the important thing."

The substitute bill encourages the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and the State Board of Education to set up exchanges among teachers and professors. It requires a report to the General Assembly next session.

"If we're not satisfied by next year, I'll work to support your bill," Sen. Ken Harris, R-Mecklenburg, told Chapin.

Video Tax

A House Finance subcommittee debated but took no action on two bills to impose taxes on video game machines. One bill, sponsored by Rep. Herman Gist, D-Guilford, would put a $200 tax on each machine. The other, sponsored by Rep. D.R. Mauney, D-Gaston, would apply the 3 percent state and 1 percent local sales tax to gross receipts from the games.

Chairman Rep. Chris Barker, D-Craven, said the two bills may be combined into a substitute package.

Mauney said he considered taxing the machines' receipts the best course because some might be taxed more than they produce. Others might be taxed only a tiny fraction of what they make, he said.

Gist said he based his bill on a South Carolina provision under which the machines are taxed up to $300 a year.

Rep. Murray Pool, D-Sampson, who said he distributes video games in southeastern counties, said he had evidence that "the (video game) fad is over."

Little-Known Laws Are On The Books In N. C.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — If you surf or water ski after dark in North Carolina, you could be in a lot of trouble.

And if your hog dies of natural causes and you don't bury it within 12 hours, you could face a fine of up to $10.

Water enthusiasts who pursue their recreation after dark can be fined $50, according to Joan C. Brannon and Susan Milnor of the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

They recently published a list of misdemeanors with punishments not exceeding a fine of $50 or imprisonment for 30 days.

If your hog dies a natural death, and you don't bury it at least 2 feet deep within 12 hours, you pay a fine of between $5 and $10.

If you keep swine within a radius of one-quarter mile of the administration building of any state educational or charitable institution, you can be fined $50 if you don't stop when a majority of the legal voters living within that radius ask you to.

Drinking Age Bill Is Expected To Die In Senate Committee

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Prospects are good that a bill to raise the minimum age for drinking beer and wine to 21 will die in the Senate Appropriations Committee, state legislators say.

"That may be what happens," Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, said Thursday after the bill he sponsored was removed from the Senate floor and referred to the Appropriations Committee on a 29-20 vote.

Meanwhile, a joint conference committee settled several differences between House and Senate versions of Gov. Jim Hunt's anti-drunken-driving program. However, they made no progress on the most controversial issues and postponed further discussions until next week.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, sponsor of Hunt's bill which would raise the drinking age from 18 to 19, moved that Warren's bill be sent to the Appropriations Committee after a half-hour debate of its merits.

Under Senate rules, any bill expected to decrease state revenues must go before the Appropriations Committee. Legislative leaders say raising the drinking age would deprive the state of tax revenues from alcoholic beverage sales.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said the bill would create no additional costs during the current fiscal year. That's because it would have phased in the drinking age increase over three years — raising the current minimum of 18 to 19 in 1984, to 20 in 1985 and to 21 in 1986 — so losses would be felt when another Legislature is in session.

Barnes said he wanted the bill to go to Appropriations to avoid setting a precedent for other bills circumventing the legislative process, but he acknowledged the move hurt the bill.

"Yes, I think it hurts the chances of this bill passing," he said.

"I think we should see how 19 (as a drinking age) is working. Then we could raise it (if necessary)."

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said the measure would be taken up after the committee finished considering the base budget, possibly by Wednesday.

Warren fought the move, saying the bill should be "voted up or down today. We could send the bill to committee ... and study it forever."

When the Senate debated Hunt's bill in March, an amendment raising the drinking age to 21 was attached. But Warren withdrew it the next day after legislative leaders warned it would force the bill to the Appropriations Committee and possibly kill it.

Warren then introduced his bill, which the Senate Judiciary III Committee passed last week.

Earlier Thursday, the House-Senate Conference Committee made further progress in its negotiations on Hunt's bill.

"We started out with 42 differences and we've got five left," said Barnes, committee co-chairman. "But from here the going gets tough."

For example, the General Statutes of North Carolina say that "willfully addressing or communicating orally with students of a school or college for women" is illegal "while the students are on school property or elsewhere when they are in the charge of a teacher, officer or other student of the school."

"The owner or keeper of a dog who permits it 'to pursue, worry or harass any squirrel or other wild animal kept on Capitol Square' in Raleigh can spend 30 days in jail or be fined $50.

The owner of a motor vehicle who displays "any emblem or insignia of a club, lodge, fraternity, organization, etc." that he doesn't belong to can be similarly punished, state law holds. So can the person who refuses to clean his license plates when a police officer requests it.

Failure to act as a drainage commissioner if a county surveyor requests it can attract a $50 fine or a 30-day jail sentence.

Perpetrators face a similar penalty if they:

- Catch fish with the hands in public mountain trout streams.
- Transport, buy, possess or stock in public waters any species of piranha, walking catfish or grass carp.
- Shoot raccoon during daylight hours west of U.S. 1 except in Richmond County, or carrying an ax or a saw while hunting opossum or raccoon.
- Allow a dog to "enter any bedroom or rooms used for sleeping in any hotel or inn."
- Use "indecent or profane language in a loud and boisterous manner on any public road or highway and in hearing of two or more persons" — except in Pitt or Swain counties.

and that the council take steps to end what he termed the violation of his rights.

McCarley said he was not sure how the council could regulate athletic events from a noise standpoint and he questioned who would be cited for violations.

Jean Lowery, an Eastern Street resident, cited problems in her area with noise and said she would like to hear a demonstration that would give her in indication of permissible levels.

George Shoe, who resides on Shady Lane, said his family had "endured and tolerated" fraternity house noise for 12 years and he offered "very strong support for some type of ordinance."

Jan Williams, a resident of Jackson Drive, said there have been problems recently with bands practicing at a nearby facility on 10th Street and she was concerned that the ordinance be as strict as possible regarding noise filtering from one zone to another. McCarley said the ordinance addresses property uses rather than zones.

John Anema, president of the Tar River Neighborhood Association, expressed support for the new ordinance on behalf of the TRNA. He said the organization feels most of the noise problems stem from chronic repeaters and the imposition of a $50 fine might tend to eliminate repeat offenders.

Charles Clark of Jefferson Drive said the East Wright Road residents owned their property before Jaycee Park was developed and he contended they deserve some consideration.

Councilman Stuart Shinn suggested that the city could increase enforcement at the park. Cox noted that the city had been trying for some time to have the playground equipment relocated.

Elmer Meyer, vice chancellor for student life at East Carolina University, said the cooperation and discussions between the city and university during the drafting of the ordinance was "wonderful" and enhanced the city-ECU relationship. Meyer offered support for the ordinance.

Mrs. Buck suggested that the council continue action on the ordinance until it could elaborate further on the athletic events exemption but her motion failed to gain a second.

Councilman George Pugh said the ordinance at least represented a start in addressing noise problems.

Cox said it is hoped the athletic events regulation can be addressed and researched further. He said the council will give continued consideration to the matter at future workshop sessions.

Tests Of 'Hitler Diary' Said To Prove Forgery

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The government said today its experts had scientifically tested three of the 62 volumes in the purported diaries of Adolf Hitler and concluded they were forged.

"Based on an analysis of the contents and the criminal-technical and scientific investigation, the archives have come to the conviction that the material handed them could not stem from Hitler's hand, but were made in the postwar period," Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann said in a statement issued in Bonn.

"We regret that this examination could not be done before publication," he said. In Frankfurt, Federal Archives President Hans Booms said experts from his agency, the Federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden and the Federal Bureau of Standards had examined three volumes provided by Stern, the magazine that said it found the documents in a farming village in East Germany.

MAGNET SCHOOLS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Magnet schools can not only desegregate educational programs, but also help to stabilize racially changing neighborhoods, says a University of Rochester faculty member.

"Magnet programs can be effective school desegregation tools when placed in so-called transitional neighborhoods," says Associate Professor Eugene C. Royster of the Graduate School of Education and Human Development. "In such areas neither black nor white students feel they will be greatly outnumbered."

Royster, who has studied magnet schools in school districts throughout the nation, says the stabilizing effect on schools in changing neighborhoods spills over to housing patterns as well.

"Parents both black and white see the improvements in the school and stop moving out."

MASS DROWNING

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — An overloaded river boat hit a sandbar and capsized in Borneo's Kapuas River, drowning 32 persons, the Daily Kompas reported today.

Scientific tests showed that the paper and ink used in the volumes was manufactured after World War II, Booms said. He provided no specific date of manufacture and did not describe the tests.

He said the experts who examined the documents believe they were forged with the use of historical material on Hitler that was published in 1962. Booms did not elaborate.

Stern Editor Henri Nannen said in a telex statement, "The magazine cannot ignore the statements from the federal archives, but will take them into consideration in further publication. A final explanation of the details is not possible at this moment."

The government study of the documents began last Tuesday, when Stern handed over three volumes of the purported Hitler diaries, Booms said, adding that his office had received four more volumes since then but had not tested them.

The seven volumes were said to cover the years 1934, 1937, 1939, 1941, 1942 and 1943. Booms said they included the two books describing the Nazi dictator's purported knowledge of his deputy Rudolf Hess' flight to Scotland in May 1941, but did not say whether they were among those tested.

Stern has been publishing excerpts from the documents, saying they are genuine and were traced by one of

Want Sums To Teach English

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government should use money earmarked for bilingual education to promote efficiency in English, not teach other subjects in a foreign language, says a group of educators.

In a report Thursday for the Twentieth Century Fund, a private research foundation, the educators also proposed several incentive programs for teachers and students that would require $6 billion more annually in federal funds.

Diane Ravitch, a member of the panel, said the federal government should support programs that teach children to speak, read and write English as quickly as possible by "immersing" them in the language.

its reporters to a hayloft where the magazine said a former officer in Hitler's army had hidden them for decades.

It said the volumes were in an airplane carrying Hitler's archives that crashed near the village of Boernersdorf on April 21, 1945, shortly before Hitler killed himself in his Berlin bunker. Stern has declined to reveal its source for the documents.

Hernia And Heart Save Pig

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A hernia and a kind heart saved this little piggy from the bacon pan.

Because of a hernia, the runt piglet had to struggle in vain with his siblings for a share of dinner, and Sheran Hesser's heart went out to him.

Now the 3-week-old pig, named Iggy the Piggy, has been given the run of the Hessers' farmhouse in nearby Graham. He's wearing a makeshift supporter and fed a mixture of baby food and molasses every three hours.

And someday he'll have an operation to correct his hernia.

He's even housebroken, according to Mrs. Hesser, a dental assistant, and her husband Bob, a battalion chief with the Tacoma fire department.

Mrs. Hesser said the piglet likes to nuzzle and kiss her on the nose.

"Some day my other pigs will be spareribs," she said. "But Iggy — we'll always keep him around the farm."

Wedge Of Lava Seen In Crater

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A 200-foot-long wedge of lava is edging onto the surface of the crater of Mount St. Helens, a product of eruptive activity that began three months ago, scientists say.

Five scientists spotted the lava wedge Wednesday when they took a helicopter trip inside the 8,363-foot volcano's crater to take routine measurements, said Steve Brantley of the U.S. Geological Survey's volcano observatory. The lava wedge was not apparent when the scientists made a previous measuring trip April 29.

The new lava is directly traceable to a non-explosive eruption at the mountain in southwest Washington, Brantley said Thursday.

Sutter Takes Over Duties

By The Associated Press

Bruce Sutter is supposed to save games for the rest of the St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff. So far into this young season, he's been taking things — like wins — into his own hands.

Dave LaPoint was trying to boost his record to 3-0 Thursday in San Diego, but going into the eighth inning the Cardinals were trailing the Padres 3-2, thanks in part to a Sixto Lezcano home run.

Lonnie Smith's home run for the Cards in the top of the eighth tied the score, and Sutter was sent in. And, after Ruppert Jones' double-play grounder off a split-fingered fastball in the bottom of the eighth and Ken Oberkfell's two-out, tie-breaking single in the top of the ninth, it was Sutter who strode off the mound with a 4-3 victory and a 3-0 record.

In the only other National League game, it was Atlanta 6, Houston 3 Thursday night. In the only American League game, Cleveland defeated Minnesota 7-5.

"I'm going to throw the split-fingered fastball and if they hit it, they hit it," said Sutter. "If they beat me, that's what they're gonna beat me with." With the go-ahead run on third, Jones jumped on Sutter's first serve and killed the threat with his grounder to first baseman Keith Hernandez, who started a 3-6-3 double-play.

"I'd rather have saves," Sutter deadpanned, "but as long as we win, I'm satisfied." The Cards' catcher Thursday, Jamie Quirk, said of Sutter's unique split-fingered delivery: "He lives or dies by one pitch and he'll keep throwing it. I was surprised that Jones went after the first pitch in that situation. He hit the ball well, but luckily he hit it into the ground and to the best first baseman in baseball."

The victory prevented the Padres from sweeping the three-game series. On Wednesday night they trounced the Cards 10-0.

"When I went out there," said LaPoint, "I just told myself to pitch a good game. We needed a win more than anything. It was our turn to go out and pitch a good game today."

He made only one really bad pitch — to Lezcano in the second inning. LaPoint said he was too concerned with keeping Steve Garvey from collecting his 2,000th career hit. (Garvey failed to get a hit in four at-bats). "I pumped myself so up for Garvey that I forgot what to do with the next guy," LaPoint said.

Oberkfell got four hits in five at-bats, drove in two runs and scored one. His game-winner followed Willie McGee's single and stolen base. "It's just nice to get a two-out hit and have it be the game-winning RBI," he said. "I consider myself a pretty good clutch hitter, but I didn't come up with many RBIs last year."

Braves 6, Astros 3

Rookie reliever Craig McMurtry yielded only four hits in six innings and Dale Murphy and Glenn Hubbard homered for Atlanta Braves.

McMurtry, 3-1, struck out two and walked just one before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the sixth. Steve Bedrosian, one of three Braves relievers, recorded his third save.

Murphy now leads the National League in home runs with eight and also had singles in the fourth and sixth and stole two bases as the Braves won their 11th home game in 12 tries.

"Who leads the league now is not important," he said. "If you're ahead at the end of the season, now, that's nice."

Indians 7, Twins 5

Rookie reliever Neal Heaton kept putting Twins on base — and then wiping them out by serving up double-play balls. The Indians turned three twin-kills in his three innings to record third save of the week.

"This is the toughest situation he's been in," Cleveland Manager Mike Ferraro said. "His feet keep getting wetter and wetter."

"We had the chance but we just couldn't get the big hit," said Twins Manager Billy Garnder.

Andre Thornton of the Indians drove in two runs and stretched his hitting streak to 10 games. He had a sacrifice fly in their three-run first inning against Brad Havens and an RBI single for the decisive run in the fifth inning.

All of Minnesota's runs against winner Rick Sutcliffe came in the fifth inning, three of them on Kent Hrbek's bases-loaded double.

Rose Golfers Victorious

Rose High School's golfers gained a seven stroke victory over strong Hunt High School yesterday in a three-way meet at Brook Valley Country Club.

The Rampants finished the day's play with a 334 total, while Hunt came in with a 341. Kinston took third in the event with a 350 total.

Rose's Craig Davies led all golfers with a 74. Other Rose scorers were John Jordan, 86; Chris Evans, 87; and Brian Hill, 87.

Hunt was paced by Kent Williams with a 76, while Jimmy Allen had 85, Richie Fulghum had 88 and Mike Kennedy, 92.

Tinsley Mitchell was low for Kinston with a 77. Frank Browlee added an 86, while Lee McGee had 93 and David Tolliver had 94.

The match was the final regular season contest for the Rampants who end the year at 13-6. The Big East Conference Tournament will be held on Monday at Rocky Mount's Northgreen Country Club.

Farmville C. 310
Eastern Wayne ... 335
Zebulon 385

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School rolled up a pair of golfing victories yesterday at the Farmville Golf and Country Club, downing Eastern Wayne and Zebulon.

The Jaguars carded a 310 for the afternoon, while Eastern Wayne was well back in second place with a 335. Zebulon finished third with a 385.

Farmville's Gary Hobgood took medalist honors with a 73, while other Jaguars scoring included Mel Williams, 77; Scott Lewis, 78; and Shawn Thompson, 82.

Zebulon's Art Robinson led his team with a 74, but got little help. Other Zebulon scores included: Lee Liles, 89; Patrick Williams, 103; and David Ellington, 109.

Kent Denton led Eastern Wayne with a 79. Other Warrior scores included Drew Nelson, 82; Greg McMillan, 87; and Randy Justice, 87.

Farmville Central is now 16-5 on the year, and plays host to Ayden-Grifton on Monday in the final regular season match of the year.

Rose JVs Win

STANTONSBURG — Gary Scott fired a two-hitter and recorded nine strikeouts and Battle Emory slammed a homer to help the Rose High School junior varsity trounce Wilson Beddingfield 13-2 Thursday in Big East 4-A baseball action.

David Jester rapped three hits in four trips to the plate for the Rampants, while Tony Taylor went 3-5.

The Rampants are now 6-1 on the season and travel to Kinston Monday.

Rose 'Slips' Into Tie

WILSON — A series of mistakes allowed Wilson Fike to deadlock Rose High School in the Big East Track and Field Championships yesterday at the Fike track.

Fike and Rose finished with 136 points each, while Northeastern was third with 74. Kinston finished fourth with 60, followed by Rocky Mount with 37, Hunt with 33, Northern Nash with 27 and Beddingfield with 19.

Rose, heavily favored in the meet, lost a number of points when Edward Frazier, their class sprinter, false started in both the 100 and 200-meter events, and thus failed to pick up points. Also in the 100, Roderick Harrell pulled a hamstring and was unable to finish that race or compete in the 200 — costing Rose more points.

The Rampants also lost points in the 440-yard relay, when the team was disqualified after finishing third. Donnell Lee was detected going out of his lane following his handoff.

But the Rampants got a break in another event, the 880-yard relay — which had to be run a second time. In the first running, Rose finished third, and that margin would have allowed Fike to win its first-ever Big East title in track all alone.

However, after the race was run, a meet official noted that half the field had started at the wrong spot — with Rose one of those teams which had farther to run. The race was then rerun, with Rose finishing second.

Rose captured first place in seven of the events: William Waugh won the shot put, Tommy Sparkman took the triple jump; Roswell Streeter captured the high jump; Burney Carraway was first in the pole vault; John Ormond won the 1,600; Frazier took the 400 and John Byrd won the 800.

There were no double winners in the meet.

Rose returns to action next Friday at Tarboro in the sectionals.

Summary:

Shot put: Waugh (R) 51-8½; Land (F) 48-6¼; Barnes (B) 48-3; Koch (NE) 47-1½; Barnes (K) 46-4¼; Johnson (NE) 46-3.

Bath Rallies Past Bear Grass, 13-12

BATH — Bath High School rallied for three runs in the bottom of the seventh to gain a 13-12 baseball victory over Bear Grass yesterday.

Bear Grass took the initial lead in the first inning, scoring twice. Phil Peele opened with a single and Tony Leggett walked. Billy Fulford then singled both of them in.

Bath came back with two in the bottom of the frame to tie it up, then both teams scored single runs in the third. The Bears got two more in the fourth, but Bath took the lead with three in the bottom of the frame. The Bears came back with five in the top of the fifth, and Bath countered with three, then tied it at 10-10 with one in the sixth.

The Bears pushed back ahead in the seventh with a pair of runs, but then couldn't hold off Bath.

The Pirates opened things with a walk to D.R. Alligood in the seventh, and Brian Swain walked. Galen Braddy singled in Alligood, and Kevin Cutler walked, loading the bases. Rodney Braddy singled in Swain, and Hardin reached on an error, allowing Galen Braddy to score the winning run.

Jimmy chipman and Galen Braddy led the Bath hitting with three each, while Jeff Tuten and Rodney Braddy each had two hits.

Bear Grass was led by Lawrence Watson with two, while Mark Taylor and Craig Gardner each had doubles.

The Bears are idle until next Thursday when they travel to Jamesville.

Conley Third At Meet

HAVELOCK — Steven King broke the tape ahead of the pack in the 100- and 200-meter races Thursday at the Coastal 3-A Conference track meet, but D.H. Conley managed to place third in the overall standings behind White Oak and North Lenoir.

White Oak tallied 144 points on the day, while North Lenoir had 110½, Conley 107½, West Craven 58, Havelock and West Carteret 51.

King sprinted to first place in the 100-meters in a time of 10.8 — one tenth of a second ahead of T. Jones of White Oak. He won the 200-meters with a time of 22.3.

Chester Paramore took the only other first place finish for Conley with a time of 10:25 in the 3200-meters.

Conley, now 18-7, remains idle until the sectional meet next Friday at Tarboro.

Seniors Pace Lady Pirates

GRAHAM — Senior outfielders Yvonne Williams and Cynthia Shepard each slapped three hits with a double to lead the Lady Pirates of East Carolina University to a 6-5 victory over the University of West Florida in the National Invitational Slow Pitch Softball Tournament last night.

The Lady Pirates next opponent will be defending national champion Florida State University at 6 p.m. tonight. The Lady Seminoles hold a 2-1 edge against the Pirates in 1983, having claimed a 14-8 win at the Florida State Invitational Tournament and a 3-4 victory in a split of a doubleheader here in April. The Lady Pirates won the first game of the twinnbill, 2-0.

"Everyone hit the ball well," said ECU coach Sue Manahan. "West Florida had two super efforts in defeating Cleveland State and an excellent game against us."

Senior rightfielder Mitzi Davis ripped a triple and a single in three trips to the plate, while second sacker Ginger Rothermel and Melody Ham each had a pair of singles in three at-bats for the Lady Pirates.

Jennette Roth went the distance on the mound for East Carolina, now 30-8 on the season.

Karen Fleri went 2-3 and Amy Cubanis was 2-4 with a double for West Florida.

"Every win will be difficult," Manahan said. "No one is to be taken lightly."

Big Field, Marfa's Roving Derby Woes

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Worries of Marfa bothering other horses hover over Saturday's 109th Kentucky Derby, and, with the field at its 20-horse limit, there are fears of a traffic jam at the head of the stretch.

Wayne Lukas, who trains the sometimes wayward colt, plans no change of equipment to keep Marfa on the straight and narrow over 1 1/4 miles at Churchill Downs.

He is putting the task of guiding the stretch-running colt home first to Jorge Velasquez, the veteran jockey who had his hands full in the Blue Grass Stakes April 27 when Marfa was disqualified from second to fourth after interfering with Copelan and Desert Wine in the stretch.

"Training horses is like tuning a violin," Lukas said Thursday after he submitted his entry of Marfa, Balboa Native and Total Departure. "You want to do it right and at the right time. There's a lot of excitement in the air this morning and Marfa senses it."

On the strength of Marfa's impressive victories in the Jim Beam Spiral Stakes and Santa Anita Derby and the lack of a full-fledged 3-year-old standout, the Lukas entry was made the 5-2 early-line favorite.

But even Lukas can't be sure how Marfa will behave.

"I think Jorge learned something about him in the Blue Grass," Lukas said. "He (Marfa) needs to know who's in charge. He needs a driver and, for a while, Jorge became a passenger. In the Derby, Jorge needs to be a driver.

"He needs to stay after him. In the Blue Grass, Marfa was doing so well and running so strongly that Jorge didn't see any need to get after him. I think he caught Jorge by surprise."

Marfa, who has three wins and three seconds in nine starts this year, will go from the No. 18 post position. The son of 1975 Derby winner Foolish Pleasure is owned by Robert French, Barry Beal and Lukas.

It might be of some hope to Marfa's backers should he cause problems that a foul claim has never been upheld in the Derby.

Balboa Native, post No. 3, is the Louisiana Derby winner, while No. 9 Total Departure, was second in last Saturday's Derby Trial here. Sandy Hawley rides Balboa Native and Pat Valenzuela rides Total Departure.

Not since 1946 has there been a three-horse entry in the field.

Trainer Woody Stephens and Bwamazon Farm have two-horse entries for the Derby, which will draw more than 100,000 people.

Carl Lauer, Robert Victor and Nancy Vanier's Play Fellow, the 19-1 Blue Grass Stakes winner by a nose over Marfa, is the second early choice at 4-1, going from post No. 2 under Jean Cruguet. He became the oldest jockey ever to win the Derby when he rode home Seattle Slew at age 37 in 1977.

Stephens' entry of Caveat, the Derby Trial winner, and Chumming, fifth in the Trial after stumbling at the start, is listed at 5-1.

August Belmont's Caveat, with Laffit Pincay board, leaves from the outside post

No. 20, while Hickory Tree Farm's Chumming, with Eddie Maple up, starts from No. 4.

David Foster's Sunny's Halo, who beat Caveat by four lengths in the Arkansas Derby, also is rated at 5-1 and is in the 10th position. Eddie Delahoussaye, who rode Gato Del Sol to victory in last year's Derby, rides the Canadian-bred whose only other start this year was a three-length win in the Rebel Handicap.

Equisequity Stable's Slew O' Gold, son of 1977 Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew and winner of a division of the Wood Memorial, goes from No. 1 under Angel Cordero.

The rest of the starters in the crowded field are lightly regarded in the quest for the $426,000 first prize from a gross of $531,000 if all go.

Current Hope, 12-1, who hasn't raced since winning the Flamingo April 2, goes from the No. 12 post under 17-year-old Alexis Soltis. Trainer Roger Laurin's father, Lucien, won Derbies with Riva Ridge and Secretariat.

Desert Wine, the San Rafael and San Felipe winner who is the biggest money-winner in the group with $527,315, and Pax In Bello, third in the Derby Trial, are listed at 15-1 along with the Bwamazon entry of Freezing Rain and Highland Park.

Parfaitement and Country Pine are rated at 20-1 while five horses were placed in the field for betting purposes at 30-1.

They are Paris Prince, the California Derby winner; Law Talk, Explosive Wagon, My Mac and Luv A Libra.

Common Sense, a four-time winner from Suffolk Downs actually entered the Derby, but the owners withdrew when Churchill Downs officials advised that the entry of Country Pine would bump their horse because Country Pine had won more money — a requirement imposed to limit the field to 20 horses.

Instead, Common Sense will go in the $50,000-added Twin Spires Purse on Derby Day.

Jamesville's Unbeaten Streak Now 12 In Row

COLUMBIA — Jamesville High School's girls' softball team continued unbeaten yesterday with a 12-3 romp over Columbia.

The Lady Bullets pushed over one in the top of the first, and Columbia came back with one in the bottom of the first. Jamesville went ahead for good with two in the second, adding one in the third, two more in the fifth and another pair in the sixth. The Bullets closed it out with four in the seventh.

Columbia picked up one each in the second and sixth.

Selita Cross and Kim Hale each had three hits to lead Jamesville, while Cathy Williams had two. Both Williams and Kim Floyd had homers for Jamesville.

The Lady Bullets are now 11-0 in conference play and 12-0 overall.

Jamesville plays host to Creswell on Tuesday.

Greene C. 15
Ayden-Grifton 2

SNOW HILL — Greene Central overwhelmed Ayden-Grifton yesterday in a girls' softball game, holding onto second place in the Eastern Carolina Conference standings, 15-2.

Ayden-Grifton got both of its runs in the first inning, taking a brief lead. It didn't last long, however, as the Lady Rams pushed over three in the bottom of the inning to take the lead for good.

Greene Central then added two in the third, five in the fourth, two more in the fifth and three in the sixth for its 15-run total.

Pitcher Dalen Herring of Greene Central allowed only one hit by Ayden-Grifton, a single by Lyerly in the third inning.

Sharon Croom, Pat Woodard and Trynette Daniels each had three hits to lead Greene Central's hitting. Croom's total included two doubles, while Woodard had a double and a three-run homer.

Jackie Holmes, Denise Warren, Andra Dixon, Lisa Radford and Melody Brown each added two hits for the Lady Rams. Warren had a two-run homer as one of hers.

The win gives Greene Central a 13-5 overall record and a 6-2 ECC mark. The Lady Rams play host to league-leading Charles B. Aycock on Tuesday.

Union Carbide 6
Optimists 0

Paul Powers threw a no-hitter at the Optimists as his Union Carbide team rolled up a 6-0 North State Little League victory yesterday.

Powers struck out 11 and walked just two in getting the gem.

Union Carbide got all it needed in the second inning, scoring twice. Powers singled and Jeff Bennett walked. Andre Hopkins singled them up, and as wild pitch scored Powers. Jonathan Powers walked as did Billy Turcotte, forcing in Bennett with the second run.

Union Carbide added four more in the third.

No one had more than one hit for Union Carbide, which got only three off the pitching of Nelson Galloway and Heath Clark.

Pepsi-Cola 8
Moose 7

Pepsi-Cola opened its 1983 Tar Heel Little League season with an 8-7 victory over the Moose yesterday.

The Moose struck first, getting three runs in the top of the first, two of them on a homer by Darren bullock. Pepsi came back with four in the bottom of the frame for a 4-3 lead, then added another run in the second and a sixth in the third on a solo homer by Robert Jenkins.

The Moose rallied for four in the fourth for a 7-6 lead, however.

In the bottom of the fifth, Pepsi came back with two to win it. Jenkins opened with a single and moved up on an error. He took third on an out and Lance Goodman walked. Wes Mackenzie then singled in Jenkins moving up on David Allen's fielder's choice and Chris Fuqua's reaching on an error. A wild pitch then scored Mackenzie with what proved to be the winning run.

Jenkins led the Pepsi hitting with three, while Mackenzie had two. The Moose were led by Chris Christopher and Bullock, each with two.

First State Bank got three of its runs in the fourth on a home run by Moye.

Further details were not available.

Winterville League

Computerland 15
Sunshine GC 14

Computerland edged past Sunshine Garden Center, 15-14 yesterday as the Winterville Little League opened its season.

Sunshine moved ahead with three runs in the first, but Computerland got one in the bottom of the frame. Sunshine then scored nine times in the third for a 12-1 lead, each team scoring once in the fourth. Sunshine got its 14th run in the fifth.

Computerland then rallied for seven in the bottom of the fifth to cut the lead to 14-9. In the bottom of the seventh, they rallied for six more to win it. With the bases loaded Daryle Phelps doubled in Chris Lindsey and Tommy Baker. Then, after a walk by Adam Stocks, Michael Turner tripled to drive in three runs to win it.

Baker had three hits to lead Computerland, while Turner had two. John Whitehurst had two for Sunshine.

Aldridge-S'land ... 10
Pizza Inn 10

Aldridge and Sutherland rallied in the sixth to pull out a tie in a Winterville Little League baseball game against Pizza Inn, 10-10.

A&S scored twice in the first inning, but Pizza Inn came back with four in the third. A&S got five more in the bottom of the third, with Jim Faulkner hitting a three-run homer.

Pizza Inn tied it up with three in the fourth at 7-7, then moved ahead at 10-7 in the next frames.

A&S tied it up in the bottom of the sixth when Hal Conger scored on an error.

Jay Jones led A&S with three hits, while Faulkner and Conger each had two. No one had more than one for Pizza Inn.

Jr. High Baseball

E.B. Aycock Junior High School rolled up a 10-6 baseball victory over Kinston yesterday.

Eric Jarman got the win in relief for Aycock. The Jaguar hitting was paced by Dwight Smith with two, one of them a triple. He had two runs batted in. James Matthews added a double.

Mason and Davis each had two for Kinston, both getting doubles. Whitley and Manning also added doubles for Kinston.

Aycock, now 8-1, travels to Nash Central on Tuesday.

Whitfield 15
Chicoc 12

CHICOD — G.R. Whitfield outslugged Chicod, 15-12, yesterday in a junior high school baseball game.

James Boyd led the Whitfield hitting with three, while William Mizelle and Mark Hardy both had two. Hardy was the winning pitcher.

Chicod was led by Russ Pittman with four hits, two of them doubles. Mike Mills and Donald Murray each had two. Chicod is now 0-8 and Whitfield 6-2.

In the girls' softball game, Chicod gained a 16-5 win. Lisa Stancill led the way with three hits, while Rhonda Jackson, Glenda Horton, Donna Beacham and Teresa Stancill each had two. Jackson was the winning pitcher.

Linda Hardy and Juanita Moore each had two hits for Whitfield.

Chicod's girls are now 8-0.

Indy Testing Set Saturday

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Practice for the May 29 Indianapolis 500 begins on Saturday, but the testing and fine-tuning of the hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of racing equipment at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway has already gone into full swing.

Before a car turns a wheel onto the 2 1/2-mile track, the U.S. Auto Club must give its approval through a mandatory technical inspection. And drivers, crews and cars have begun a slow, steady trickle into the infield Gasoline Alley garages.

The first car to complete the inspection was the 1982 Chevrolet-powered Eagle racer to be driven by rookie Steve Chassey, a 38-year-old veteran of dirt, sprint and midjet-car competition seeking his first starting spot at Indy.

Chassey, a native of Indianapolis, is one of 22 rookie drivers who will try to qualify for the 33-car field. Six former winners, including defending champion Gordon Johncock and four-time winner A.J. Foyt, also are entered.

Foyt, who also owns a string of race horses, remained in Louisville for Saturday's Kentucky Derby, but his new Cosworth-powered March race car arrived at Gasoline Alley on Thursday.

Other cars which began the various phases of inspection included those of veterans Pancho Carter, third-place finisher last year behind Johncock and Rick Mears; Herm Johnson, who finished ninth; brothers Gary and Tony Bettenhausen, Dennis Firestone, Pete Halsmer, Sheldon Kinser, Roger Rager and Graham McRae.

Although Foyt was absent, his teammate George Snider arrived Thursday to set up shop in an adjoining garage.

Cars for former winners Johncock, Mears, Johnny Rutherford, Mario Andretti and Al Unser were expected to arrive at the Speedway later this weekend or early next week. Time trials are scheduled May 14-15 and May 21-22.

Johncock, who will be joined by Rutherford and Chip Ganassi on the Patrick Racing Team this year, opened the Indy-car series for 1983 with a

Bullets Romp Over Columbia

COLUMBIA — Jamesville High School ripped Columbia, 14-0, behind a three-pitcher one-hitter yesterday in Tobacco Belt baseball.

Rusty Holliday started the game, going the first three innings and allowing the only hit. He fanned four and walked one. Kevin Perry then went the fourth, walking two, while Tony Hale pitched the fifth frame, fanning one and walking one. The game was called after five on the ten-run lead rule.

Jamesville got all it needed in the first, scoring six times. Matthew Moore singled and stole second. He scored when Greg Hardison singled and was thrown out going to second. Richie Ange singled and Rex Bell walked. Terry Perry singled to score both runners.

Kevin Perry reached on an error. Rusty Holliday then singled in both Perrys, and scored when Whit Brown got a hit.

The Bullets added five in the second and three in the third.

Hardison, Ange, Bell, Tim Norris and Brown each had two hits for Jamesville.

Now 11-0 in the conference, the Bullets play host to Creswell on Tuesday.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

HIS WATCHMEN ARE BLIND!

"HIS WATCHMEN ARE BLIND; THEY ARE ALL IGNORANT, THEY ARE ALL DUMB DOGS, THEY CANNOT BARK, SLEEPING, LYING DOWN, LOVING TO SLUMBER." (ISA. 56:10) ISAIAH WROTE THIS ADMONITION TO WARN THE PEOPLE THAT THEY MUST BE VIGILANT IN DEALING WITH THEIR POWERFUL NEIGHBORS. THIS PROPHET KNEW IT WAS NOT THE STRENGTH OF ALLIES BUT RATHER THE SPIRIT OF GOD THAT WOULD KEEP THEM FROM ALL HARM. SO AS A WATCHFUL SENTRY IN THE NIGHT GUARDS A SLEEPING ARMY, THEY HAD TO BE ALERT TO THE DANGER OF A CRAFTY ENEMY. COUNTLESS BATTLES HAVE BEEN LOST, NOT THROUGH LACK OF MANPOWER OR ARMAMENT BUT, BECAUSE THE WATCHMAN WAS ASLEEP! ISAIAH KNEW THIS BUT, UNFORTUNATELY, THE KING AND HIS ADVISORS DID NOT SEEK GOD'S GUIDANCE.

Haiti's Handicapped Offered Hep, Hope

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The woman called Sister Joan offers hope to the physically handicapped who otherwise would be shoved aside in the general struggle to survive the Western Hemisphere's worst poverty. The 77-year-old Roman Catholic nun came here from Boston 38 years ago, intent on helping children who faced overwhelming odds. Roaming the mountains by horse and buggy in search of handicapped children and maintaining letter-writing campaigns to gain financial help from international agencies, she was able to build in 1950 what remains today Haiti's only school for the handicapped. In an impoverished nation where many women have children only for the future support they will provide, handicapped children face being "treated like a lap dog, or just pushed into a corner and forgotten about," Sister Joan says.

"The first thing we try to teach them is that these are children, too," says Sister Joan, who declined to relate anything about her pre-Haiti life, including her full name. Her St. Vincent School provides room and board for 250 handicapped students, as well as medical services that include facilities for plastic, orthopedic and eye surgery. Former students make artificial legs and other prosthetics and sell them from a nearby shop.

Medical care in Haiti is very limited; the infant mortality rate is 130 deaths per 1,000. The Haitian government doesn't have statistics on the number of handicapped children in the country of nearly 6 million, but an official acknowledged that Sister Joan's is the only such school. The government provides support, including teachers and aides, to her.

"In the Haitian schools, there are just too many students per class. The handicapped children aren't able to get much special attention," says Sister Joan, sitting next to a giant playpen in which children, some blind, some deaf, some wobbling on artificial legs or crutches, play together happily. One of the first things Sister Joan stresses to mothers is that her school isn't a dumping ground. Students are kept here only until they are deemed able to cope in public schools. "We feel very strongly they should go outside the school; we send them out as soon as we think they're ready. We send them out in wheelchairs. It's important to get them into a 'real' environment," she says. Another rule is that parents must contribute something to the children's keep.

"If we tell the mother that Tommy needs shoes and leg braces and she says she can't afford them, then we tell her: 'Well, pay what you can for the shoes, and we will pay the rest and provide the leg braces.' We want to get them involved."

Parents must take their children home for Christmas and Easter. While she tries to keep the number of students to 250, the only true limit is "the elasticity of our walls. We can't say to a mother who brings in a polio patient, 'Sorry, there's no room.' We put cots out in the hall if necessary. But we try to keep as many as possible on an outpatient basis."

She follows the careers of her students, and says many find work in the foreign assembly plants here. Other alumni include a New York Hospital lab technician and a bank executive.

Issue Guidebook For Seminaries

NEW YORK (AP) — Termed the first step of its kind, the National Catholic Education Association has issued a guidebook for Christian seminary faculties and students on key issues of Christian-Jewish relations.

Msgr. William Baumgaertner of Washington, head of the the association's seminary education department, said the publication "marks a milestone" in the links between the faiths, and added:

"This is the first time in the history of the Catholic Church that a major guidebook has been designed to make available to Christian seminaries the rich spiritual resources emerging from the contemporary dialogue between the church and the Jewish people."

Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, interreligious affairs director for the American Jewish committee, which cooperated in producing the guidebook, said the project "seeks to bring about a revolution in esteem between Christians and Jews on the part of the next generation of religious leadership."

Book Explains Divorce Impact

WACO, Texas (AP) — Divorce is hard on children and it takes them three to four years to recover from the effects, says Archibald Hart, psychologist of the Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif.

In a new book, "Children and Divorce," published here by Word Books, he says 45 percent of all American children are subjected to broken homes before they are 18.

They say "pornography is debasing and degrading and a cancer to the human spirit," and ask Reagan to direct the

'Bye-Bye Birdie' Suited To A High School Cast

"Bye-Bye Birdie" is a musical that requires plenty of youthful voices, high-pitch energy and charismatic players. The D.H. Conley High School production, which opened Thursday night, amply fulfills these requirements. (The show can be seen for two more performances, tonight at 8 p.m. and Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. in the auditorium at D.H. Conley.)

The show has Conrad Birdie (Chun Duncan), a 1950s teen idol, about to be drafted into the army. His manager, Albert Peterson (Vandy Behr), and his secretary, Rosie (Lucretia West), devise a last public appearance in Sweetapple, Ohio. They arrange for Birdie (and TV's Ed Sullivan Show) to come to the home of Fan Club president Kim MacAfee (Stephanie Creech) for a televised farewell kiss. But the gimmick falls through when romance gets in the way.

The cast from Conley turns in good performances. Vandy Behr and Lucretia West both possess powerful stage presence. Mary Ellen Lyons as Peterson's mother and Ragan Spain as Mr. MacAfee played comedic roles which were especially appreciated by the audience. Michelle Deal as the sassy, swaggering Ursula also gave a nice comedic flair to her role.

Excellent vocal performances were delivered by Stephanie Creech and Paul Haddock as Kim and Randolph MacAfee, and Chun Duncan was visually if not vocally convincing as Conrad Birdie.

The production moved well with smooth scene changes and a well rehearsed stage crew, with the three-piece band providing competent accompaniment and musical interludes. There were times when the audience lost some of the lyrics of the faster songs or a cue was missed, but the flaws of these young performers were minimized by their enthusiasm.

It's easy for an audience to enjoy a show when the cast so obviously has fun putting it on. The opening night audience definitely enjoyed "Bye-Bye Birdie." The directors, Julie Moore and Greg Smith, and the students in the show should be pleased and proud of their fine production.

Jerry Lee Sees Property Sold

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jerry Lee Lewis' electric piano, a baby grand piano and other furniture from his home in Nesbit, Miss., are being sold by the federal government because of a tax lien.

Dianne Wallace, an Internal Revenue Service spokeswoman in Nashville, said Thursday that proceeds from the May 17 sale at OK Storage and Transfer Co. of Memphis will go toward retiring a $274,000 tax lien. She would not estimate the value of the goods.

The lien was filed in 1977 against the 47-year-old entertainer and his wife, Jaren, who drowned last June. She and Lewis were separated at the time and each had filed for divorce.

Ms. Wallace said the IRS has two other liens against Lewis, but would not disclose the amount.

In October 1980, the IRS raised $91,382 by auctioning 63 articles belonging to Lewis, including a 1979 Lincoln Continental, motorcycles, jewelry and a Thompson submachine gun.

First Adult Sitcom Has Debut

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest breakthrough on cable is that the Playboy Channel can make situation comedies that are even worse than the networks'. The low art of televised humor now has sunk from bad bathroom jokes to bad bedroom jokes.

"4Play," which debuts on the Playboy Channel tonight, is billed by the pay-TV network as the first adult sitcom. But it's scarcely for discretionary adults. This tasteless, boorish show is a case of profanity and nudity merely for profanity and nudity's sake.

In one scene in a dress designer's shop, a model keeps dropping her top to reveal her chest and the word "FRONT." "Men are getting dumber every day," she says.

Because the network censors aren't around, the characters in "4Play" are able to curse and parade around in states of undress designed to divert attention from a juvenile, loud and pointless script.

The story is about a fortyish husband who has an affair with a 19-year-old feminist. But she's the kind of feminist that only Playboy could dream up — a beautiful airhead who tells the wife about the cheating relationship because that's what it says to do in her favorite women's magazine.

This sex triangle also is destined to become more multisided, with the girlfriend's father making advances toward the wife.

"4Play" is going to make television history," says Madeline David, who wrote and produced the series. "It's the first sitcom to come to grips with the contemporary urban scene and its sexual angst."

Ms. David's partner in crime is Paul Klein, president of the Playboy Channel, who asked her to do the show. They once worked together at NBC when Klein was the network's top programmer and Ms. David was head of daytime TV.

"4Play" is the most exciting project I've ever seen bar none," says Klein. "The work is fresh, contemporary, honest, full of energy and hilarious."

The audience last March at the "4Play" taping — at the same studio where the soap opera scenes from "Tootsie" were shot — must be wondering what show Klein was watching. The studio crowd was barely tickled, even after it was warmed up by a hard-working Borscht-Belt comic named Mickey Freeman, who played Pvt. Zimmerman on "The Phil Silvers Show."

"We need your reaction," begged Freeman. "Otherwise, it will be an expensive home movie. ... Remember, you're not watching 'Little House on the Prairie.'"

Freeman's pleas fell on deaf ears, but you wouldn't know from tonight's finished program, since Playboy brings to cable TV that master fibber, the laugh track. In one of the best cases of artificial sweetening since the discovery of saccharin, the mechanical soft touch is in stitches, thoroughly enjoying a bedroom farce that should have kept its door closed.

Tonight's episode begins in bed — where else? — with Barbara (Sally Stark) giving her husband Leonard (Larry Pine) a morning back rub. The tone of the broadcast is set quickly. Barbara suggests some pre-breakfast togetherness, but their plans are interrupted by their children.

About the only teensy-weensy value from "4Play" is that it proves that network TV could actually be worse than it is.

Salisbury Plans 'Liddy Dole Day'

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Hanford Dole will be honored during a "Liddy Dole Day" when she and her husband, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., visit Salisbury on May 21.

Mrs. Dole will help dedicate the adult day-care center established by the Services for Older Adults of Rowan. The Hanford family donated the Cathey-Hanford House to a Presbyterian church and the house will be used as the site of the center.

After the Saturday ceremony, the city plans an appreciation event at the Salisbury Civic Center.

'Gandhi' Spurs India Tourism

NEW YORK (AP) — The movie "Gandhi" has been "the best promotional piece" ever for tourism in India, where tours are now packaged to capitalize on the life story of the non-violent leader, a government official says.

Kanta Thakur, regional director of the Indian Government Tourist Office, said tourism could soar as much as 30 percent as the result of a publicity campaign that features tours such as "The World of Gandhi" and "In the Footsteps of Gandhi."

The film, directed by Richard Attenborough and based on the life of Mohandas Gandhi, won eight Academy Awards, including best picture.

Additional Airport Gates

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Piedmont Airlines officials said Wednesday they plan to build additional gate space at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport.

Piedmont officials have expressed interest in adding six to eight gates at its 12-gate concourse, said airport manager Josh Birmingham.

The airlines offers 122 flights daily and has said it would add two more daily flights in Charlotte June 1.

Life As It's Lived

Mr. Rogers Has A New Admirer, No Listener

By GAIL MICHAELS
Zachary is the second child in our home to become entranced with Mr. Rogers, and I can no more understand it now than I could when Meg first fell under his spell.

I can only conclude that he has hypnotized them with his monotonous voice. Why else would they sit still and listen to him expound at length upon the proper way to hang up a sweater when they tune me out at the very moment that my lips begin to form the word "cancel."

Of course, I realize that I'm probably being unfair. There have got to be other reasons for Mr. Roger's appeal. Perhaps my children are so relieved by the chance to listen to an adult who never raises his voice that they forgive the content of his program.

But a more likely explanation for Mr. Rogers' popularity is that, to a small child who hasn't yet been exposed to a surfeit of "action" programs, Mr. Rogers may be a reassuring slowpoke in a world obsessed with speed. The only things even slightly suggestive of any kind of momentum on his show are a toy trolley and a stooped mailman with a swooping gray mustache who invariably croaks into the camera, "Speedy delivery, speedy delivery."

I really have nothing against Mr. Rogers aside from the shock his show gives my system. The mere sight of him makes me want to escape the onset of terror by scrubbing floors, jogging several miles, or doing pull-ups on the closet rods, all activities that my body has avoided assiduously for many years.

But I do think that his show is a case in point against those who would argue for the beneficial effects of television. Mr. Rogers is a good influence on the kids, mothers assure themselves after laughing at the enervating effect he has on parents. Baloney, I say. I know from their expressions when they watch him that my kids' brain waves are vacillating between the alpha waves, characteristic of television viewing, and death. Beta waves simply can't exist in such an environment.

Besides, I find that my children do not make any connection between his show and real life. To return to his emphasis on neatness, never once has Zachary been inspired after half an hour with the man to pick up a toy or a piece of clothing. Playthings still lie scattered throughout my house, the most effective deterrent to burglary since the guillotine.

Every room is carpeted in the excess of grandparental affection. Even my closet has been turned into a kennel for Digger the Dog.

I won't say that Mr. Rogers' influence on our household is nil, however. He came to mind just the other night when Phillip came to bed late, stepped into a dump truck, hurtled across the room, and luckily landed on the bed.

I immediately thought of the perfect phrase with which to comfort him, "Speedy delivery."

Lumber Fire Loss Heavy

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A fire that destroyed a wood-working building at the Ellis Lumber Company south of Shelby Thursday night caused several hundred thousand dollars in damage, company officials said.

No injuries were reported in the blaze, which began shortly after 9 p.m. Cleveland County Fire Marshal Delane Davis said the cause of the fire is under investigation.

Company President Yancey Ellis said the fire began in a small room in the wood-working building at the center of the lumber company complex. That building, one of several in the complex, is the primary facility.

Ellis said he attempted to put the fire out himself, but was driven back by the heat.

About a dozen people worked in the damaged building, he said, with about 25 other jobs also tied to operations there.

Heat from the fire could be felt two blocks away, with flames and smoke shooting up some 200 feet in the air.

Firefighters from six fire departments had the fire under control within a half hour but remained at the scene late Thursday night.

An unidentified employee, in the building at the time of the fire, had contacted Ellis.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAY 7, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to engage in activities that can give you the greatest satisfaction. Be sure to use your full mental and physical qualifications to gain your aims. Use common sense.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your appearance and take the right treatments to improve it. Seek the company of those who can make you feel happier.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't neglect to handle duties that are important to your future. Your intuition is accurate now, so be sure to follow it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make notes of new ideas that can bring a better set of conditions into your life. Try to please the one you love.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of small tasks first before handling larger ones. Study your environment and make plans for improvement.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make plans to cultivate one whose thinking is different from yours. Make sure you don't spend money foolishly now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Show close ties that you are deeply devoted to them. Make sure you arrive on time for appointments. Express your talents.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make plans for having greater abundance in the future. Take health treatments and improve your appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact friends and make mutual plans for the days ahead. You need to improve your health if you wish to accomplish more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make plans to engage in amusements with congenials. Loved one is now more willing to go along with your wishes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find out what condition is causing disharmony at home and get rid of it. Make any concessions that are necessary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your surroundings and make needed improvements. Be sure to take needed health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Ideal day to handle a monetary matter that is important to your future. Plan new ways to have greater abundance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have the right solution to problems and would do well in any field of importance, so be sure to give the finest education you can afford. Give ethical and religious training early in life. Sports are a must here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

IN RE: PITT COUNTY DRAINAGE DISTRICT NUMBER FOUR LATERAL 1
NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT ANTICIPATION
NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners of Pitt County Drainage District Number Four have levied an assessment for the amount of Eleven Thousand Six Hundred and Six (11,606) Dollars upon the lands within the watershed of Lateral 1 of the said Drainage District. The assessment has been made in accordance with the Certificate of Cost (showing the total costs of improvement) filed by the Board of Commissioners of the said Drainage District with the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County on the 27th day of April, 1983.
All persons owning land, or any interest in the land, within the boundaries of the watershed of Lateral 1 of Pitt County Drainage District Number Four are hereby notified that the Board of Commissioners of said Drainage District propose to issue an Assessment Anticipation Note, to provide money for the payment of the total cost of the renovations of Lateral 1 for the amount which the owners of the land have not paid in cash, which amount is not to exceed Eleven Thousand Six Hundred and Six (11,606) Dollars. The Assessment Anticipation Note is to bear interest at a rate not to exceed ten (10) percent per annum and the principal is to be paid in ten (10) equal annual installments, according to the following Schedule:

1. Commencing with the year 1983, the landowners owe, as the first year's payment, only interest on the assessment levied upon their land. The interest is due on the first Monday in September, 1983, and is past due as of 1 January 1984.
2. Commencing with the second year 1984, the landowners will owe a payment of one tenth (1/10) of their assessment principal together with interest on the unpaid balance for a twelve (12) month period. This payment is due on the first Monday in September, 1984, and is past due on 1 January 1985. The remaining nine (9) annual installments of principal and interest are due on the first Monday of September, and are past due on the first day of January for each of the succeeding nine (9) years.
The first annual payment of principal by the Drainage District on the Assessment Anticipation Note is to be paid on or about twenty four (24) months from the date of the issuance of said Notes, and is past due on the first day of January of the same day of the month for each of the succeeding nine (9) years.

PEANUTS

ALL RIGHT IF EVERYONE IN THIS HOUSE HATES ME SO MUCH I'LL JUST LEAVE!!
THAT'LL MAKE YOU ALL HAPPY WON'T IT?
WHY SHOULD I MAKE THEM ALL HAPPY?

DOES HUBBIN' PUT A GOOD GAME OF GOLF?
NO, HE'S PRETTY BAD.
BUT I'LL SAY HE'S A GOOD GOLF FOR HIM.
HE HITS 'EM WHERE THEY LIE.
FORE!

I WANT A FISH I WANT A FISH
I DIDN'T KNOW THEY PARROTS LIVED IN THE FISH
HE THINKS HE'S A PELICAN
WELL AT LEAST I KNOW WHAT I AM FOR ASKING

WHERE DOES OTTO GET ALL THOSE OUTFITS?
A LITTLE OLD LADY IN TOWN MAKES THEM
THAT'S NICE OF HER NICE HECK!
GEE SHE'S THERES BIG BUCKS IN MERCHANTIZING

SAME TIME ZONE WHY DOES YOUR LEADER PERSONALLY MEET THE PLANE AT THIS HOUR?
HE IS FURIOUS THAT SHE WOULD MAKE CHARGES AGAINST HIM BEFORE THE WORLD
UCHLAND'S ON THE
SEEN HER PHOTO ... HE KNOWS ... SHE IS YOUNG ... BEAUTIFUL

WAIT A MINUTE! YOU WOULDN'T HIT SOMEONE WEARING GLASSES WOULD YOU?
NO PROBLEM!
THEY USUALLY FLY OFF AFTER THE FIRST FEW PUNCHES!

YOU BETTER GET A JOB THIS SUMMER SKYLER... YOU'RE NOT GONNA HANG AROUND THE HOUSE ALL THE TIME WITH YOUR FACE GLOWED TO THE TUBE... IS THAT UNDERSTOOD?
YES SIR.
NON GO HOME AND FINISH YOUR HOMEWORK... WE'VE GOT WORK TO DO.

IF YOU'RE SO MUCH AT PEACE WITH THE UNIVERSE, HOW COME YOU GOT HIT BY THAT METEOR LAST WEEK?

SHOPLIFTING

makes you a criminal!

And criminals do get caught! Now the stores are wise to shoplifters, and have the manpower and sophisticated equipment to prove it. Closed circuit cameras, undercover people, specially treated tagging systems... are all used to successfully catch shoplifters. And the stores are even stiffer legal actions! Shoplifters face even stiffer fines... even jail when they're caught... a criminal record that could effect future schooling, jobs, credit rating and the respect and trust of family and friends. Shoplifting... like any other crime... just doesn't pay!
