City Approves 'Intervention' In Lawsuit

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council today adopted a resolution authorizing attorneys for Greenville Utilities Commission to intervene, together with several other municipalities, in an electric service area lawsuit pending before the state Supreme Court.

Phil Dixon, attorney for GUC, explained that the lawsuit involves the city of Fayetteville, the N.C. Public Works Commission and the Lumbie River Electric Membership Corp. and deals with the right of municipalities to service utility customers situated outside municipal limits who request electric service.

Dixon, who said that Greenville and other municipalities could be affected negatively by the Supreme Court decision, explained that in intervening Greenville would not become a party to the lawsuit but would file a legal brief expressing opinions relative to the case in support of Fayetteville's stand.

The attorney said the Lumbie River EMC sought an injunction against the Fayetteville Public Works Commission to prevent the municipal utility from serving a subdivision outside the corporate limits with electric power. The courts ruled in Fayetteville's favor but the N.C. Court of Appeals reversed the decision and ruled that the EMC should serve the subdivision.

Dixon said a petition of review has been filed with the Supreme Court and Greenville, along with Tarboro, Shelby, Gastonia, Newtown and Rocky Mount, among other cities, has been requested to intervene in the case by means of the legal brief in order to express to the Supreme Court the statewide interest in the matter.

The resolution supports "the right of a North Carolina municipality to service utility customers outside municipal limits requesting utility service 'within reasonable limitations.'"

Dixon said the bottom line in the issue is whether service can be provided more economically to a customer by a municipal utility or by a non-municipal corporation. He said Greenville will tell in its brief why it feels service to a particular area should be based on economics involved in individual circumstances.

The attorney said GUC feels it would be economically practical and feasible for Fayetteville to service the subdivision.

Electric service areas outside a corporate boundary are controlled by the 1965 Electric Act, according to GUC Director Charles Horne. He said GUC delivers electric service outside the city because it was asked to do so many years ago.

Dixon said that if a small electric cooperative is assigned a territory outside of Greenville, even if GUC could provide the service more economically, long-range service projects for

O. Max Gardner Award Goes To ECU Professor

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina University Professor Stanley R. Riggs and Dr. Frank E. Guthrie, an N.C. State University entomologist, received the coveted O. Max Gardner Award today from the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

The award is given to UNC-system faculty members in recognition of significant contributions to the welfare of the human race.

Dr. Riggs, 44, is a recognized authority on the origin and distribution of phosphates and is a world environmentalist.

Guthrie, 60, is internationally known for his studies of the harmful effects of pesticides and research on toxic chemicals. He is the founder of advanced toxic-

Illustrative Of Riggs' Interests

East Carolina University geologist Dr. Stan Riggs, co-winner of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors' O. Max Gardner Award, is recognized as a leading authority on the origins and distribution of phosphates and as a concerned world environmentalist.

Some of his concerns as expressed about North Carolina's dynamic and fragile coastal area:

In 1978, when he reported geological studies showed northeastern North Carolina's coastal area is sinking slowly, Riggs said: "It's like a big sag in the earth, a geologically weak part of the crust and it has been sinking for millions of years at the rate of a few millimeters a year."

On studies indicating that efforts to stabilize the fragile sand dunes of the Outer Banks are largely futile, Riggs noted that planting of beach grass and construction of sand fences began 50 years ago.

Now, he said, "these barrier islands are becoming very skinny in places."

On the matter of stabilizing inlets, Riggs said, "the history of every inlet in North Carolina is one of extreme change."

Inlets act as a natural release for floodwater during a storm and change according to the severity of the storm. Oregon Inlet, for example, has moved about two miles southward since the 1800s.

Construction of jetties to retain Oregon Inlet would "lock down the natural system that is capable of adjusting to the storm," Riggs said. "It (building jetties) will create pressure somewhere else."

On where to build beach houses in view of the constantly changing shoreline, Riggs said: "It might be best to build beach houses on tracks. This would enable the owners to move the houses backward as the sea digests the coastline."

And on aid to the world's poorest and most overpopulated countries:

Education in terms of farming and fertilizer-agriculture know-how is more important than dollars, according to Riggs.

"These countries don't need more aid in terms of tractors and farm equipment. What they need is to put their people to work developing their own resources..."

Wholesale Prices Decline As Production Sees Rise

By The Associated Press

Prices at the wholesale level fell by 0.1 percent in April, the third decline in four months, while industrial production rose a robust 2.1 percent last month, the government said today.

Prices were pulled down by a new drop in energy costs, but food prices climbed 1.2 percent, the biggest increase in a year, the Labor Department said.

For the first four months of 1983, wholesale prices as measured by the Labor Department's Producer Price Index were down 3.7 percent on an annual basis, offsetting the 3.7 percent increase for all of 1982.

Energy prices fell 2.8 percent, the fifth straight monthly decline. Those energy prices, however, were actually for March. Labor Department analysts say energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most current monthly measure.

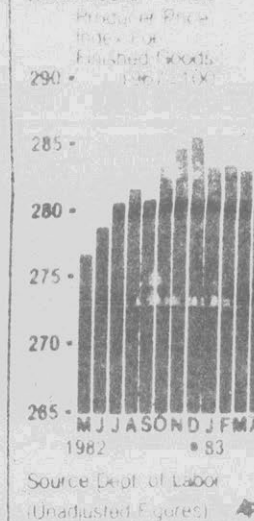

Economists have been saying inflation could pick up in the next few months, in part because energy prices have turned higher. But for all of 1983, some economists are forecasting wholesale prices to rise less than 1 percent, a rate not seen for a full year since the mid-1960s.

The increase in output by the nation's factories and mines in April was the biggest one-month rise since the 2.2 percent advance in August 1975. It followed revised increases of 1.2 percent in March, 0.4 percent in February and 1.6 percent in January, the Federal Reserve Board said.

Production of "durable goods, particularly appliances and carpeting and furniture, registered strong gains" in April, the Federal Reserve said.

Wholesale Prices

In addition, production of business equipment rose by 1.8 percent, "reflecting sizable gains in manufacturing, commercial and transit equipment," it said.

American businesses also enjoyed a surge in sales in March and managed to reduce sharply their stockpiles of unsold goods, the government said in a separate report Thursday.

Economists said the Commerce Department report was another sign that the economy was growing more rapidly than expected, following the recession that began in mid-1981.

Earlier reports had shown increases in sales by retailers and a drop in unemployment.

The Commerce Department said sales by manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers rose 1.8 percent in March after having dropped 1.1 percent in February.

The department also said businesses reduced inventories by 1.1 percent in March, to the lowest level in two years.

Robert Sinche, chief economist at the investment firm Bear Stearns & Co. in New York, said the economy's surprising strength in March had created a new wave of concern in the financial markets that inflation may revive as a problem.

In line with that fear, the bond market slumped

Thursday as interest rates on Treasury bills rose and the price of some long-term bonds tumbled. A significant pickup in the inflation rate, it is feared, would prompt the Federal Reserve Board to tighten credit conditions, which would push up interest rates.

In other economic developments:

—The House Ways and Means Committee voted to increase the national debt limit by nearly $100 billion to almost $1.4 trillion. The full House is scheduled to consider the proposal next week. Deputy Treasury Secretary R.T. McNamar told the panel that congressional "action on the debt limit bill this month is absolutely essential" so that the government can continue to meet its obligations.

—The five major American auto manufacturers said indefinite layoffs of U.S. workers fell this week to the lowest point since last summer. They said 217,650 workers were on layoff without recall dates this week. Separately, Ward's Automotive Reports said this week's scheduled car production was 7.3 percent higher than the previous week.

—The prestigious Business Council issued a forecast today warning that looming federal budget deficits pose a "significant threat" to the fragile economic recovery. The forecast, prepared for the spring meeting in Hot Springs, Va., of the 200 business and industry chiefs, was generally in line with the Reagan administration's prediction of modest growth and low inflation rates this year.

Syria Said To Reject Accord

NETANYA, Israel (AP) — Syria today was reported to have rejected the Israel-Lebanon withdrawal accord as a "grave danger" to its security, and Israeli, Lebanese and U.S. negotiators in Netanya failed to complete work on the texts of the pact.

But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Washington that Israel and Lebanon were moving toward a signing of the accord and "will continue to work through various channels with the Syrians in order to have them participate in the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon."

Meanwhile, 16 Israeli soldiers were wounded when a land mine blew up their military bus in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, 12 miles from Syria.

An Israeli spokesman said that Israeli, Lebanese and U.S. negotiators would meet again Sunday in Netanya to work on the texts. He said the problem was lack of time, not any unexpected difficulties.

The spokesman, Avi Pazner of the Foreign Ministry, refused to comment on Syria's reported rejection of the accord. Asked whether the development was brought to the attention of negotiators, Pazner said, "We are dealing today with an agreement with Lebanon, and that is all that was discussed."

Authoritative official sources in Damascus quoted President Hafez Assad as telling Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem during a three-hour meeting that the proposed pact "undermines Lebanon's sovereignty and independence, subjugates Lebanon to Israeli and imperialist dominance, and constitutes a grave danger to Syria's security." The sources requested anonymity.

Pazner told reporters in Netanya that it was necessary to study the texts very carefully "to avoid surprise in the future." He recalled an important difference in the texts of the U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 adopted in November 1967, in which the English version spoke of Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab "territories" in the West Bank while the French text spoke of "the territories."

Volpe And Lanier New ECU Vice Chancellors

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina

DR. ANGELO VOLPE

Board of Governors this morning approved the appointment of two vice chancellors at East Carolina University — Angelo A. Volpe as vice chancellor for academic affairs, and James L. Lanier Jr. as vice chancellor for institutional advancement.

Volpe has held the post on an acting basis since Jan. 14. Lanier, who will assume his duties at ECU this summer, is now director of development and alumni affairs at Louisburg College.

Both Volpe and Lanier were recommended by search committees and were approved by the ECU Board of Trustees in executive session on May 5.

Volpe, 44, is a native of Brooklyn, N.Y. He succeeds Dr. Robert H. Maier, who resigned in January to become professor of experimental surgery in the ECU School of Medicine.

Volpe, who came to East

Carolina in 1977 as professor and chairman of the chemistry department, has been dean of the college of arts and sciences for the past 2½ years.

Lanier, who attended Louisburg College, received his bachelor's degree in health, physical education and recreation administration from ECU in 1969 and a master's in education from East Carolina in 1971.

The 36-year-old Rocky Mount native will succeed Donald L. Lemish, who resigned in January 1982. The vice chancellorship has been filled on an acting basis by Dr. Douglas Moore, who is director of resource development.

Lanier has planned and coordinated Louisburg College's development and alumni programs since 1976, and has directed Louisburg's successful capital fund-raising campaign.

WHAT'S DISTINCTION?

I get confused about the distinction between the American Cancer Society and the Hospice Program here. Is the Hospice program part of the Cancer Society programming? If I give to the Cancer Society, am I automatically giving to further the Hospice program? V.B.

Though there is good cooperation between the two agencies, the Hospice program is in no way a part of the American Cancer Society. It is also not a part of the East Carolina University School of Medicine Oncology Program, though the oncology department was instrumental in setting up the Hospice program, Hospice Director Beverly Burnette said.

The Hospice program was set up in February 1982 as a seven-day-a-week service for advanced cancer patients and their families. It provides counseling, transportation, social interaction, respite care, coordination of existing services—resources, intermittent skilled nursing and equipment loan, ministerial support and bereavement followup. Hospice so far has served 113 persons and continuation is entirely dependent on community support, Ms. Burnette said.

The Cancer Society provides educational services for the general public and encourages support programs for persons with various forms of cancer, plus funds research.

Anyone wishing to know more about the Hospice program may call Beverly Burnette at 758-4622. Those wishing to know more about the American Cancer Society may call Rose Richards at 752-2574.

Parents Object To Letters' Lack Of Respect

By Abigail Van Buren

©1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We are an elderly married couple and lately have been receiving mail from our son addressed "The Johnsons" (name changed) instead of "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson."

We feel that this shows a lack of respect for his father and mother. He should address the letters "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson." "The Johnsons" may be all right for friends, but not for his mother and father.

Are we wrong for feeling this way? Thank you.

MR. AND MRS. H. JOHNSON

DEAR MR. AND MRS. JOHNSON: Do you realize how lucky you are to have no bigger problems than this? Please let me tell you: In my mail today I heard from an elderly couple who are now raising four grandchildren, all under 10, because both parents were killed in a hotel fire away from home.

I heard from at least 20 Michigan family men who have not worked in over a year. I heard from a 24-year-old woman who after three miscarriages had an infant, healthy and happy until she suddenly became a victim of crib death. Another letter from a 12-year-old girl who just learned she was pregnant!

And you are worried about the lack of respect shown to you because of the way your son addresses your letters?

You ought to thank God you have a son who is able to write, and cares enough about you to do so.

DEAR ABBY: Last week my sister got married. I'd been looking forward to her wedding. When I got there I was shocked to discover that my sister and mother (who made all the plans for the wedding) had invited my ex-husband and his live-in girlfriend to the wedding and wedding dance!

I was miserable throughout the wedding and stayed only a few minutes at the wedding dance. I later heard that my ex stayed and partied all night. I knew he remained on fairly good terms with my family, which was fine with me, but they know how rotten he treated me.

Had I known he was going to be there I would not have gone. I expected a little more loyalty from my family. I feel as though I've been slapped in the face. Am I being overly sensitive to feel this way, or were my mother and sister insensitive to my feelings?

HURT

DEAR HURT: If the facts are as you stated them, your mother and sister were more than "insensitive to your feelings." They were both disloyal and devious.

DEAR ABBY: I work for a business that has been patronizing the same florist for several years. The owner of the florist shop (Mr. G.) was also a friend of my boss. Well, Mr. G. died recently.

My question: Would it have been proper to order flowers for Mr. G.'s funeral from his own florist shop? Or would it have been in better taste to order the arrangement from another florist, even though the profit from the flower order would benefit the family of the deceased?

LONG BEACH QUERY

DEAR QUERY: It most certainly would have been "proper" and in good taste to have ordered the flowers for Mr. G.'s funeral from Mr. G.'s florist shop.

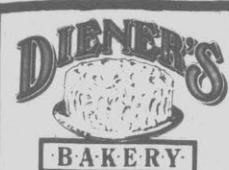

DEAR ABBY: This is important. Our newspaper never runs an address where we can write to you if we want a personal reply. Don't you have a private box number? Thank you.

NEEDS SOME INFO FAST

DEAR NEEDS: Yes. Address your letter to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal, unpublished reply, please enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

***

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

In 1912 Fannie Farmer used ginger ale in a jellied dish. Since then cooks have followed suit.

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 6-ounce can unsweetened pineapple juice (¾ cup)
- 7-ounce bottle ginger ale (1 scant cup without foam)
- 8-ounce can crushed unsweetened pineapple, undrained
- 2 tablespoons slivered ginger preserved in syrup

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over pineapple juice to soften — about 5 minutes. Heat ginger ale until it boils; add to gelatin and stir until dissolved. Stir in crushed pineapple. Chill until partly thickened; stir to distribute pineapple. Turn into for 6-ounce custard cups. Refrigerate to set. Unmold before serving. Makes 4 servings.

Opinion Is Forming

Opinion is still forming on that letter adopted last week by Roman Catholic bishops meeting in Chicago. The bishops' pastoral letter, adopted on a 238-9 vote, condemned as immoral first use of nuclear weapons, endorsed the concept of a nuclear weapons freeze opposed by President Reagan and urged a halt to production and deployment of new nuclear weapons.

News reports indicate that even Catholics are confused over the intent of the bishops who, despite the strongly worded barriers cited above, left the door open to the use of nuclear weapons with the choice of these words: "There must be no misunderstanding of our profound skepticism about the moral acceptability of any use of nuclear weapons."

Why the hedging? The Rev. J. Bryan Hehir, director of the office of international justice and peace of the U.S. Catholic Conference and the chief adviser to the committee which drafted the letter, called the loophole a "centimeter of ambiguity." But Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., a supporter of President Reagan's defense policies, says attorneys refer to such ambiguity as "weasel words." "That's one way we get out of contracts," the congressman said.

Even with the phrase in the letter, however, the bishops' statement is perhaps the most potent yet drafted against the use of nuclear weapons. It came as a surprise to the Reagan administration, which had depended on the traditional Catholic stance in support of national defense policies to hold the bishops in check.

Now that the statement is out, however, the assessments must begin: is the position espoused by the bishops truly that of the country as a whole? Are we really a country that is ready to abandon its major arm of defense? We don't think so, but it will be interesting to see the reaction as it develops to the bishops' intrusion into political affairs.

Rate Cut Is Good News

When energy costs drop these days it is good news. Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne reported to the commission last week that the cost of natural gas would drop 2.45 cents per hundred cubic feet beginning June 1. The rate reduction came from North Carolina Natural Gas and will be passed on to GUC customers.

Horne said the change will save the customers who use 700 ccf a year about $17.

Energy costs have soared in recent years and natural gas, once a good cheap source of large amounts of energy, has moved up accordingly. A decrease, even a small one, can be of great benefit to industrial and commercial users of natural gas. We hope the trend continues.

One For Clark

WASHINGTON — National security adviser William P. Clark scored an important but subtle point against his White House detractors when President Reagan overruled them by visiting the Vietnam Memorial May 1.

That reversed the president's earlier decision, at the time the black granite memorial was dedicated, not to make a personal appearance. His domestic aides, headed by chief of staff James Baker and deputy chief Michael Deaver, thought associating Reagan with Vietnam could hurt him politically.

Clark, who did not go to the mat with Baker and Deaver on that occasion, was privately appalled. When he recently suggested that the president should pay his respects, Reagan immediately agreed. Reagan's switch was an intentional signal that he is now listening to Clark on such matters more than his other advisers (even though the ubiquitous Baker was at Reagan's side at the memorial).

Senior presidential aides who never have given up hope that James Watt will be gone from the Interior Department by the time of the 1984 campaign still hope he will be eased out — by his own conscience.

Secretary Watt has said many times he would leave whenever he feels he has become a political liability to the president. Reagan aides believe polling evidence is so strong that watt may come to that decision within the next three months. Nevertheless, the secretary says he as yet sees no evidence that he is a net liability.

A footnote: Secretary of Labor Ray Donovan, on the other hand, seems a fixture through the four-year Reagan term. The attacks on him have eased, and he shows no desire to go home to New Jersey.

Liberal Democrats are counting on an unlikely ally against the MX missile: retired admiral Stansfield Turner, the former CIA director.

Turner was among former Carter administration officials who on May 3 briefed a select group of Democratic senators on the MX. But Turner, clearly pleasing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and other anti-MX senators present, argued forcefully and emotionally against the Reagan plan.

When he served as Jimmy Carter's CIA director, Turner backed the MX deployment scheme. Pro-defense and pro-MX Democrats trying to bolster Reagan's chances to get the 10warhead missile approved are surprised at Turner's vehemence in opposing the missile now, even though its deployment is very different from the Carter plan.

The reason the special Senate Republican task force on the budget finally came up with a budget calling for no new taxes was help from an unexpected source: Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Dole, architect of last year's massive $100 billion tax increase, usually cannot contain himself from sarcastic cracks about tax-cutting supply-siders. But on the task force, he allied himself with beleaguered supply-siders William Roth of Delaware and Mack Mattingly of Georgia. The result was acceptance by Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici of a two-year budget with virtually no tax boosts.

Dole also has flashed a red light on House Democratic plans to increase estate taxes. He has made clear any such boost will be a waste of time because it will die in the Senate.

RALEIGH — Political folk tend to view every campaign as a "Big Campaign," every election as a "watershed of history." So, it isn't surprising that some Republicans preparing for the May 21 election of a party chairman are saying that the man they choose to run the GOP for the next two years will make a big difference in the 1984 elections for governor, U.S. senator and even president.

The race for party chairman started out as a two-way clash between Dave Flaherty, current chairman, and Gilbert Lee Boger, a former Davie County state senator. Earlier this month, Moore County GOP chairman George Little entered the race, seeking to capitalize on dissatisfaction with the other two candidates.

In private discussions, Republicans from across the state said the election holds great potential for dividing the

Every Race Is A Big Race

GOP just one year before the party's leader, Sen. Jesse Helms, must run for re-election. Gov. Jim Hunt is expected to be his opponent.

Many moderate and long-time Republicans feel that Flaherty is a tool of Helms' National Congressional Club. They're angry with the club and they're backing Boger as a way of venting that anger. They complain that the club dominates the GOP's operations, that the club occasionally supports Democratic candidates and that the club plays dirty, negative politics.

Helms is criticized for opposing abortion and for handling federal patronage here, a job his critics say should go to the state party.

So, the Republican Party today finds itself with many of its moderates planning to express this bitterness by voting against Flaherty — who they once saw as one of their own — and for Boger, even though he's a diehard conservative. What happens if Flaherty still wins?

"Well, I'll still vote for President Reagan and I'm not going to vote for Jim Hunt, you know that. I'll vote for Sen. Helms," one Republican legislator said in an interview. "But, I'm not going to get out and organize my precinct. I'm not going to work for them."

That comment was repeated in interview after interview. The threat these modern Republicans made was that with Flaherty as chairman and the club actively running the party — at least as they perceive it — they wouldn't help organize the state's grassroots campaign.

Without organizational workers, they say, the party cannot hope to break Hunt's powerful Democratic machine. "Helms can't win this one with money alone," said a western Republican. "He needs to get organized at the precincts."

They point to the 1982 elections where the GOP did not get its voters to the polls.

You need grassroots supporters to turn out your vote. Without a big Republican turnout in 1984, the state's electoral votes might go to the Democratic presidential candidate, they fear.

But some of these same people were saying, before Little's entry, that Boger was not the man to replace Flaherty. One year before the biggest interparty face-off in state history, don't elect a chairman who has alienated the club. The party needs unity.

That's where Little comes in. He'll try to present himself as a unity candidate, someone capable of holding the party together and doing the grassroots work needed for 1984. But Little's candidacy holds the potential for splitting things up even more by reopening some old wounds between Helms and Little's former boss, ex-Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Don't you know that the Democrats are loving it.

When A Teacher Goes Moonlighting ...

"Okay, I'll take a shot at them."
 "You can't shoot Oysters Rockefeller. You can only eat them."
 "Come on, Mr. Peterson. Don't ruin my birthday."
 "I'm sorry, Michael. I forgot my place. As a waiter I shouldn't correct your."
 "Hey, Mr. Peterson. Is that Mr. Alfredo, our science teacher, in the white jacket carrying all those dirty dishes?"
 "That's correct. He's a busboy here, but as soon as he gets his master's degree in biophysics, I'm sure he'll become a waiter. The manager of this restaurant has had very good luck with the teaching staff of Warren Harding High School. As an alumnus, he tries to hire as many of us as he can. Miss Bellows, your math teacher, is the hat check girl, and Mr. Fallows, of the Phys. Ed. department, is the bouncer in the bar."

 "Is it degrading to work as a waiter at night and a school teacher in the daytime?" I asked Peterson.

"Oh, I don't ever tell anyone I moonlight in the daytime as a school teacher. If you let people know you're a teacher they tend to think you're wasting the taxpayer's money. But if you tell them you're a waiter they feel you're doing something worthwhile."
 "You teachers have a tough life." I said.

"It could be worse. Most of the staff at Herbert Hoover High School work the night shift at National Airport for Federal Express. They never get any tips."

We gave our order, and after Peterson left I said to Michael, "Is he a good teacher?"

"Better than most. You know John Hanrahan, the kid I play football with? Well, he and his parents discovered his French teacher, Mr. Dubois, was working in a gas station. Dubois forgot to put the gas cap back on their tank, and John's parents were so angry when they got home, they called the principal of the school and demanded Dubois be fired, because they said they didn't want their son to be taught French by someone who didn't even know how to pump gas."

"Was Dubois fired?"
 "No, because fortunately the principal had done the same thing as the gas station he was working at the night before."

We finished our dinner and asked Peterson if he could call us a cab.

He told us it would be no problem. "I'll call Mrs. Thompson, Michael's homeroom teacher. She hasn't had a fare all night long."

Strength For Today

We are sometimes told that science postulates a materialistic universe, and thereby leads the mind toward religious unbelief. An American scientist of the last century, Michael Pupin, who made some key discoveries in the field of electricity, has an interesting answer to this contention:

"The law of continuity and the general scientific view of the universe tend to strengthen our belief that the soul goes on existing and developing after dead ... Wherever science has explored the universe, it has found it to be a manifestation of a co-ordinating principle which leads from chaos to cosmos.

"In that great world within us, divinity resides. Our intelligence is part of something higher. We have not discovered in the material universe anything higher than the human soul.

"And the human soul is progressing more and more toward divinity in a universe of unbroken continuity."

Book Explores Lack Of Confidence

themselves, their families, their personal futures nor in the basic American system. Optimism on their own lives and trust in the basic strength of the American dream are strong, polls say.

It's this split between the lack of faith in the leaders and the institutions of the public sphere and the continuing strong optimism about the personal sphere that the two call "The Confidence Gap." That's also the name of their new book, which explores the reasons and the meaning of these changing and changing public and private attitudes.

"People are not questioning the legitimacy of the system. They are not saying the system should be replaced," Schneider said at a Washington lunch promoting the book.

What Americans are saying is that they feel their leaders in many areas have failed them. For example, one poll rating of confidence in the leaders of major companies fell from 55 percent in 1966 to 16 percent in the early 1980s. Leaders of organized labor started out much lower in the public's confidence — 22 percent — but they fell as well, reaching 15 percent over the same period.

Lipset and Schneider tie this unhappiness to a whole series of events and problems — some specific to a leader or institution, and some more general.

The Vietnam War was, of course, a key element in the public malaise for the military and the presidency. The Watergate scandals helped crush the faith and trust of many Americans. Then the oil crunches of the 1970s tarnished the image of the oil companies and business in general.

Soaring inflation and joblessness, plus the failure of leaders to deal decisively with economic troubles, have hurt as well.

"There is a lot of anger in people," Schneider said of the public reaction to these failures.

In the closing chapter, Lipset and Schneider tentatively blame some of the malaise on the news media, particularly television. They point to research that suggests television news viewers are more cynical than those who rely on the print media.

They say this lack of confidence in public matters makes it harder for leaders to lead, harder for the institutions to solve the problems that have helped create the gap to start with.

While not offering an apocalyptic vision, the authors are not hopeful either.

"The system is much more brittle now. The basic structure of confidence is much weaker now than it was in 1963," Schneider said.

The question is whether a new crisis will test just how brittle Americans' public confidence is.

Wilmington Bear Caught

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A yearling bear which apparently swam the Cape Fear River was captured Thursday as it inspected boats at a sporting goods store.

Wildlife officials say the small bear may have been hunting its mother. A much larger bear was chased through the downtown historic area Tuesday night and is still at large.

City, county and state officials cornered the smaller bruin about 6 a.m. Thursday.

Animal Control Officer George Houck stepped inside a fenced area at a sporting goods store and fired two darts loaded with a muscle relaxant into the 125-pound animal. The bear then walked about 30 feet and fell.

After the bear stopped moving, officers loaded it into Houck's truck, drove to Holly Shelter Gameland near Hampstead and set it free.

Tony Williams, inspector for the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, said he hopes the larger bear has left town.

"It's not the same bear," he said of Thursday's cub. "This one weighs about 100 or 125 pounds." Tuesday's bear weighed about 300 pounds, he estimated. "I'm hoping the first one went back to the river where he came across to town."

That bear was probably drawn from across the Cape Fear River by the scent of food in garbage cans, but may have been a male seeking a mate or staking out its territory, said Steve Thomas, district wildlife biologist from New Bern.

Aussies Investigate Soviet Spy Roles

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Bob Hawke has ordered an investigation of Australian intelligence agencies and of possible ties between an expelled Soviet diplomat and a former official of Hawke's Labor Party.

Hawke announced Thursday that a new judicial commission would focus first on alleged links between former Labor Party General Secretary David Combe and Valery Ivanov, a Soviet Embassy first secretary who was expelled from Australia on April 22 as a suspected KGB spy.

Combe, a friend of Hawke's who now is a lobbyist for the Russians, insisted today that there was nothing in his relations with Ivanov or any other member of the Soviet Embassy that was improper or threatened Australian security.

Hawke's announcement caused consternation in his Cabinet, which had not been consulted about the move.

Only two hours earlier, Deputy Prime Minister Lionel Bowen had rejected an opposition call in Parliament for a judicial inquiry into the Ivanov-Combe association. Bowen had said such an inquiry would not be helpful to Combe.

On Wednesday, Labor's Senate leader, John Button, called the suggestion of a judicial inquiry "bizarre."

Hawke has said Wednesday that Combe either had been, or appeared to have been, compromised by Ivanov. He gave this as one reason for barring Combe from dealing with ministers in his capacity as a professional lobbyist.

But Hawke, whose party took power after elections in March, said Combe had committed no criminal offense and was not suspected of espionage.

The inquiry commission is headed by a judge and has powers similar to a grand jury.

Ready To Try Remedial Step

* RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A new report by the N.C. Division of Environmental Management says enough is known about nutrient enrichment problems in the lower Neuse River to begin some short-term corrective action.

Summer levels of chlorophyll A, an indicator of the river's potential for algae blooms, have doubled since the early 1970s, according to the report. It says in 1980 the size of algae blooms increased dramatically and more of the algae was of the nuisance blue-green variety.

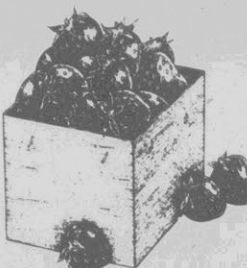

The report said one possible solution is a ban on phosphate detergents on the entire Neuse River watershed.

NEW TURN LANE ... Members of the State Department of Transportation work on a new double left turn lane at the intersection of Stantonsburg Road and Memorial Drive Thursday. The $15,000 lane is scheduled to be finished

Gardner Award ...

ogy research programs at N.C. State.

A geology professor at ECU, Riggs was unable to attend today's awards ceremony. He was conducting scientific research at sea aboard the UNC-Duke University Oceanographic Consortium research vessel Cape Hatteras.

The study involves research on the origins and extent of vast underwater deposits of phosphorites in the seabed off the North Carolina coast. The project is part of a worldwide exploration for food fertilizer ingredients that could help solve problems of world hunger.

sailed from Beaufort aboard the Cape Hatteras two weeks ago on an 18-day ship-time phase of a two-year, $316,500 research project on the mid-Atlantic continental shelf.

In a response to the Gardner award, read by his wife Ann, Riggs warned that man has the potential to "totally desecrate" the earth and must learn to "live harmoniously" with and learn to manage the world's ecosystems "with understanding and unselfish compassion."

He also said the pressures man exerts on the ecosystems are becoming "more threatening," and warned that as the earth environment deteriorates, "man will also die."

The earth and all its components, including man, "are part of an integral system of continuous interaction and change," according to Riggs. While "man can do little to improve the earth, he does have the potential to totally desecrate it."

Riggs suggested that man "must place top priority on the quality of the earth system and the life of its inhabitants rather than on profit margins and military domination."

"I am confident that the citizens of North Carolina will respond positively to their role as inhabitants of the earth community and will continue to be leaders in humanitarian concerns," he said.

Riggs' research on the genesis of phosphorite sediments has involved extensive work in China, Mongolia, India, Australia, Africa, the Pacific, Mexico and South America, as well as probing in the Rocky Mountains and offshore ocean depths.

His expertise in phosphate geology led to his appointment as a member of the U.S. committee (and recently co-director) of the International Geological Correlation Program on Phosphorites when the program, involving 30 countries, was organized in 1978, under the auspices of the United Nations, the International Union of Geological Sciences and the U.S. National Science Foundation.

The results of the work of the IGCP are being compiled into four books to be published by Cambridge University Press. Riggs is editing a volume, "Neogene and Recent Phosphorites," dealing with formations of recent geologic origin — the last 25 million years — which includes all phosphates of the Southeastern United States.

Riggs was named to the N.C. Mining Commission in 1979 by Gov. Jim Hunt.

The son of a Methodist minister in Wisconsin, Riggs acquired an early interest in outdoor activities such as boating, hiking and nature studies and a concern for the physical environment. He expanded his interest in geology as a student at Belmont College and at the University of Alaska at Fairbanks, and then received his master's degree in geology from Dartmouth College in 1962. He subsequently was employed as an exploration and research geologist and moved to Tallahassee, Fla., on a project to develop exploration models to use in finding major phosphate deposits anywhere in the world.

In Tallahassee he developed new ideas regarding the sedimentation and stratigraphy of phosphates which became the basis for his doctoral dissertation, which he undertook at the University of Montana at Missoula, in 1963 and 1964.

He moved to Raleigh in 1965 to establish a field office to carry out research and exploration in the southeastern United States. In 1965, Dr. Orrin Pilkey of Duke University had discovered phosphate in surface sediments on the ocean floor of Onslow Bay, and on the basis of this early work and the Florida models, Riggs put together his first oceanographic project — a geological exploration program based on scuba diving.

1984's Budget Again Stymied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate, deeply and perhaps irrevocably divided over whether to defy President Reagan and raise taxes next year, has temporarily set aside efforts to approve a budget plan for 1984.

Despite intensive efforts over two weeks to pull together a majority from among his own ranks, Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. failed Thursday to get a compromise budget blueprint through the Senate. Senators voted 52 to 48, to defeat a budget resolution supported by the president that called for a 7.5 percent defense increase next year, nominal tax increases and a $190 billion deficit.

The decision marked a significant legislative and political defeat for both Baker, R-Tenn., and the Reagan administration.

Seven Republicans voted against the plan, along with 45 Democrats, continuing a budget deadlock which has bedeviled GOP leaders determined to find a combination of spending, tax and military increases which can get through an increasingly-rebellious Senate.

One of the seven Republicans who voted no, Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, said the outcome showed, "The president is not going to get his way."

Only one Democrat, Howell Heflin of Alabama, supported the compromise drafted by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who planned to meet today for still one more try at compromise with Lawton Chiles of Florida, the senior Democrat on the panel.

At the White House, chief of staff James A. Baker III tried to cast a different light on the defeat.

"We got 98 percent of the votes we needed," he said. "We're disappointed we didn't get the other 2 percent, but we'll continue to work on it."

During a speech to a Republican fund-raiser Thursday night, Reagan attacked Democratic foes of his economic program, but did not mention the split in his own party or the Senate vote.

Search For 'Go-Between'

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Investigators today searched the shop and home of Konrad Kujau, the Nazi-souvenir dealer who allegedly was a go-between in the sale of the fake Hitler diaries to Stern magazine.

Police spokesman Peter Beck said Kujau's shop in Stuttgart and his home in nearby Bissingen were searched at the request of the Hamburg state prosecutor. Beck refused to elaborate.

The Hamburg prosecutor's office is investigating a fraud complaint filed by Stern against reporter Gerd Heidemann, who said he paid Kujau, alias Konrad Fischer, $3.75 million for a 62-volume set of diaries supposedly written by Adolf Hitler.

Beck said prosecutors decided to search Kujau's shop and home because they believe there is a link between Kujau and Heidemann, who was fired when the government said last week that the diaries were forged.

The reporter has said he was the victim, not the mastermind, of an elaborate swindle. Heidemann claimed he gave Kujau the money and that the shopowner then obtained the bogus diaries from a third person and passed them back to Stern "piece by piece."

According to neighbors, Kujau, who used the Fischer alias in his purported dealings with Heidemann, dropped out of sight two weeks ago.

Neither Heidemann nor his attorney, Egon Geis, could be reached for comment today. Gina Heidemann said her husband was with Geis, whose receptionist said neither man was in the office.

Language Is Not English

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)

— A state senator says the language of most Americans is so far from the Queen's English that Illinois, at least, should change its official tongue.

Democrat Robert Egan of Chicago told his colleagues Thursday he got the idea after a trip to London.

"I asked a fellow for directions to the airport, and do you know what he told me?" Egan said, pulling a slip of paper from his pocket and describing the Londoner's instructions:

"Take the dual carriageway to the first roundabout keeping a sharp eye out for the left coming signs."

"Take the way out just beyond the first flyover after you pass the car park next to the Ironmongers; beware of the loose chippings and the crown strollers."

"Follow the road diversion and make sure you pass the road up. If your car breaks down you can use the lay-by or any of the verges to look under your bonnet."

"Can you understand that?" Egan asked.

"We can't even recognize the language they speak over there, and it's supposed to be English just like ours," he said.

The lawmaker conceded, however, that the effect of switching the state's official language from English to American would be "zero, absolutely none."

Greenville Tennis Association Shows Determination Pays Off

Now in its sixth season, the Greenville Tennis Association (GTA) continues to grow and play a vital role in sportsmanship and the fun of playing tennis.

Initially formed in the summer of 1978, charter members of GTA first functioned as two separate groups. In those early days, things did not progress as quickly as had been hoped. There seemed to be not enough tennis opponents available to make being a member a challenging or satisfying situation. With the hope of eliminating this stalemate in activity, the two groups "get together" at regular times to play tennis and also to recruit other minorities in the community to attend sessions and play tennis.

This approach, too, did not produce desired results, so a decision was made to join forces formally.

Following that decision, a constitution was written. Howard Pearce was elected president and Tom Midgett vice president. Through publicity over radio and television and in newspapers, about 100 people took out membership in the association.

From that first slow-start summer, the Greenville Tennis Association has attracted new members and continues to expand its program of classes, matches and tournaments.

Six Months Season
The GTA season, or rather the most active part of year-long activities, centers on the time period of mid-March to early October. Even when not active in matches and tournaments, members meet on a regular basis to lay plans for the coming tennis year and a few dedicated players use the courts year-round.

Tennis classes for junior players and for adults are held each Saturday morning at the River Birch Tennis Center. The latest round of formal classes began Saturday. Juniors get the first crack in the class schedule, beginning at the cool morning hour of 9 a.m., with adult classes starting at 10 a.m.

These classes, which president Bobby Short says are very popular with novice and beginners as well as with more advanced players, are an opportunity for young and not so young to learn to play and to gain confidence needed on the court.

Area Competition
Every year during the peak playing time, tennis teams of the Greenville

Tennis Association compete in team matches and tournaments against teams from several eastern North Carolina cities — sometimes in home events, at other times away from home.

Area teams the GTA teams compete with include ones from Wilmington, Raleigh, Wilson, Rocky Mount, Goldsboro, Kinston and Washington — as well as local teams such as those of the Greenville Country Club and Burroughs Wellcome.

Matches played to date this year, Short indicates, have resulted in some very satisfying ratings for the Greenville Tennis Association. Of 10 games played, GTA has chalked nine wins and one loss to put it two games ahead of the two teams vying for second place — the Court Jesters and the Washington Netbirds, each with a 7-2 record.

Individual Ratings

Each year at GTA's annual awards banquet held last November after completion of the playing season, trophies are given to players in men's, women's, and junior's categories. This form of recognizing hard work and outstanding individual achievement, according to Short, is an important event for those honored as well as for their fellow-players.

At the fifth annual Tennis Classic Banquet held last November at Wellcome Middle School, individuals in the three categories receiving top awards were:

- Men's singles champion, Nelson Staton, runner-up, Bobby Short.
- Women's singles champion, Belinda Haselrig, runner-up, Tammy Newton.
- Junior's singles champion, Richard Haselrig, runner-up, Earl Hines.
- Men's double champions, Kris Cuello and Bobby Short.
- Women's doubles champions, Wandria Hines and Tammy Newton.
- Mixed doubles champions, Belinda Haselrig and Nelson Staton.

Awards were also given in the novice tournament category, with Carlton Floyd as singles champion and Derrick Hines, runner-up.

Membership Rules

The association's president, Bobby Short, an avid tennis player who was instrumental in carrying out the concept of an organization that would attract a significant number of minority players, is a veteran of more than 10 years on the staff of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. Currently, he is recreation director at the Thomas J. Foreman Recreation Center located in the gymnasium of the former Eppes High School compound.

Short informs that two forms of memberships are available to interested persons — membership in the GTA at a fee of $7 per year for individuals, and $12 for family membership; or U.S. Tennis Association membership with yearly dues of $16 for adults and $8 for juniors, which includes an annual subscription to World Tennis magazine.

"Now that we're in our sixth season, we can say we're very pleased with what has been achieved to date, and look forward to even greater things in the future," Short commented.

Park. Greenville Tennis Association won to give it a 9-1 standing.

Determined To Oppose Parole

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Robeson County District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt said Thursday he will continue to oppose parole for Gerald B. Hill, even though the Parole Commission has denied him immediate parole.

Luther Mitchell, director of the North Carolina Parole Commission, said the commission agreed to rehear the case Oct. 15 and "have tentatively approved him for release."

Hill is now serving a seven-to 10-year sentence on 19 felony convictions on charges stemming from alleged bribery conspiracy and kickback schemes.

Hill is currently being held at the Wake Advancement Center in Raleigh, and works on the inmate staff at the Governor's Mansion.

His sentence was commuted by Gov. Jim Hunt under an early Christmas release program, but because Britt objected, Hill was not released.

Sermons, Poetry At Swansboro

SWANSBORO — Old-fashioned sermons, poetry readings about the sea and a beach picnic are the principal attractions of two days of celebration in Swansboro on Saturday and Sunday as the community continues its 200th anniversary.

At 8 a.m. Saturday, the free ferry located a short distance outside town will begin making runs to Bear Beach on Hammock Beach State Park, with early arrival for the ferry advised. A program of music, poetry readings about the sea and maritime life, and a guided nature walk will get under way at 9 a.m., to be followed by a picnic lunch (bring your own food and non-alcoholic beverages).

At 3 p.m. Sunday, an old-fashioned brush arbor service will be sponsored by Swansboro churches in an outdoors setting behind the Swansboro Elementary School. The service will center around a program of 18th-century hymns, prayer and preaching. The Rev. Dr. William R. Cannon, the present Methodist bishop of the Raleigh area, will deliver the brush arbor sermon. Worshipers will sit in the shade and be invited to join in singing old hymns.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Thursday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 84. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 84 percent of your hot water needs.

Vote To Seek Dredging Funds

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — The Dare County Board of Commissioners voted Thursday to seek emergency federal funds to dredge an alternative channel at Oregon Inlet.

The proposed new channel would be south of the existing channel, which has been plagued this winter with severe sand drifting.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has said it is not committed to building an alternative channel and is studying several solutions. The Corps wants to build twin jetties at the inlet, but the project has been stalled by environmental concerns.

The county commissioners said they learned this week that Roanoke Island Steel and Boat Works, one of the county's largest employers, plans to relocate in Beaufort because of hazardous conditions at Oregon Inlet.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

KING SAUL'S WILLFULNESS!

THE ANCIENT ISRAELITES WERE STRICT ADHERENTS TO GOD'S LAW. ANY DEVIATION BROUGHT TRAGIC CONSEQUENCES. A STERN EXAMPLE LIES IN THE ACCOUNT OF KING SAUL'S DISASTROUS AND FINAL BATTLE WITH THE PHILISTINES. THE PROPHET SAMUEL HAD WARNED SAUL THAT HE COULD NO LONGER COUNT UPON THE STRENGTH OF GOD TO SUPPORT HIM IN HIS WILLFUL MISBEHAVIOR. SAUL HAD DEFIED SAMUEL'S INSTRUCTIONS TO DISPOSE OF AN ENEMY KING, TREATING HIM WITH RESPECT INSTEAD OF PUNISHMENT FOR DEFYING GOD. (I SAM.15:19-26) AS A RESULT THE ISRAELITES ARE NOW FACING DEFEAT FROM THEIR TRADITIONAL ENEMIES, THE PHILISTINES.....

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 45.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 59 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 43.83 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is light to moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 1,707,000, compared to 1,755,000 last Friday.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was steady. Supplies moderate. Demand light. Prices paid per pound for hens over 7 pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter was 13 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose broadly today, interrupting a two-day slide, following government reports of further progress in curbing inflation and reviving the economy. Nine stocks rose in price for every five that fell in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Automotive, aviation and steel issues were among the leaders.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 15.28 points over the previous two sessions, gained 2.90 points to 1,217.30 over the first two hours.

The market's advance came on the nine-month anniversary of the start of its explosive rally, which lifted the Dow Jones industrials from a two-year low of 776.92 to a record 1,232.59 at the end of last week.

Before the trading day began, the Labor Department said wholesale prices fell 0.1 percent in April, the third decline in four months. The Federal Reserve Board said industrial production surged 2.1 percent in April, the fifth straight monthly gain and the biggest surge since August 1975.

But the Business Council said huge federal deficits "loom ominously over financial markets" and pose a "significant threat" to the economy's recovery. The council, a group of leading executives, said the recovery has begun but remains fragile and has not reached all sectors of the economy.

The NYSE's composite index rose .29 to 94.94. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.27 at 450.20.

Big Board volume was 39.7 million shares a third of the way through the session, compared with 39.14 million in the same period Thursday.

College, University Fund Cuts Voted

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A joint legislative committee voted Thursday to cut about $16 million from the proposed 1983-85 budget for the University of North Carolina and the state community college system.

But the reductions, which amount to about 1 percent of each system's budget, were not approved without debate.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said that at the rate the Legislature was going, "It will not take long ... to undo what nearly 200 years of history have done to make our state university system one of the finest, if not the finest in the nation."

He said the freeze on state employees' and teachers' salaries has caused UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State University to lose several dozen professors each.

Budget cuts recommended earlier by a subcommittee would have eliminated 287 teaching jobs by raising the student-faculty ratio. But UNC officials said the reductions approved Thursday would give them flexibility to decide where to cut and would help avoid teacher layoffs.

The university cut amounts to $12.1 million for the two-year period and would affect university operations, area health education centers, agricultural programs and North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

The community colleges cutback amounts to $4.2 million over the next two years.

The Appropriations Committee may have to find as much as $80 million to overcome a shortfall of revenue predicted by legislative analysts. It already has trimmed $45.1 million from the budget.

Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, noted that even with the cuts the university budget would be $40 million higher in 1983-84 than in 1982-83.

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said it was only fair that the university budget be cut by 1 percent if the budgets for public schools and community colleges were being cut by 1 percent.

But Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, said too much money was going to the UNC system. He said the university budget grew by $54 million during the last biennium while the budget for community colleges grew by $19 million and the public schools budget grew by $6 million.

"As far as I'm concerned our priority should be in the public schools, not the university," Ballenger said.

The budget cuts approved Thursday also would affect state aid to North Carolina students attending private colleges and universities in the state. Legislative analysts said there is a surplus of money for state aid and the cutback would simply reduce that reserve by 1 percent.

Senate OKs $8 Million To Fill Furniture Needs

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Ever since the Senate's new $137 million Hart Office Building opened last fall, senators have complained about faulty elevators, loose windows, a lack of furniture and delays in reaching the Senate floor in the Capitol.

On Thursday, the Senate Rules Committee decided to do something about it.

"We have run out of what (furniture) is in stock," declared Sen. Charles McC Mathias, R-Md., the committee chairman.

"We need something, even if we use orange crates," he said.

The committee moved into action. It authorized the Senate Appropriations Committee to reprogram $8 million in unexpended funds for modular furniture for the building, which eventually will house the offices of 50 senators.

In the meantime, the committee voted tentatively to spend up to $550,000 for rehabilitation or surplus desks, tables and chairs.

That money won't be spent until Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, checks with the General Services Administration, the federal government's housekeeper, to see what furniture is available.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he didn't think money should be spent on more furniture if it is available from the GSA, even if the federal agency has a policy against lending furniture.

"I think we ought to use the furniture the government already owns," Helms declared. "Let's tell the GSA we want to borrow it. I don't care what the GSA says."

That done, the committee turned to the delays senators experience getting from the new Hart building to the Capitol, a distance of 1,587 feet. The commute is 1,074 feet from the older Dirksen building; only 621 feet from the Russell building.

The panel voted to experiment for one month, beginning Monday, by having the two Capitol subway lines operate as express over their four-city block route. Instead of stopping first at the Dirksen and then the Hart building, one line will go nonstop from the Capitol to the Hart office and back.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., whose offices are in the Hart building, even suggested that the committee should look into the possibility of replacing the subway lines with people-movers similar those in Disneyland.

The committee then turned to — and approved — a request to provide a graphics service for senators and committees, at an initial cost of $175,000.

Hatfield questioned whether the Senate should provide the service with its own people or contract with an outside firm.

"I'm a believer in outside contracting," he said, stating as an example the problem with elevators.

"We've been having so much trouble with the elevators in the Hart building, that I looked into it. We don't have a contract with the company, but we have about a half dozen full-time elevator repairmen on the payroll," he said.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., replied: "It seems to me visual aids are very helpful. They present a clearer picture on such subjects as the MX missile and the budget. Many of us have trouble reading all that intellectual stuff."

The graphics service request was approved with the proviso that the sergeant-at-arms look into having the work performed by an outside contractor and into a fee system for its use.

Fike Surprises Rose With Strange Rally

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
WILSON — Friday the 13th came a day early for Rose High School's Rampants last night. With a chance to sew up not only the Big East's lone slot in the state playoffs — but the conference title itself, the Rampants bobbled it, allowing Fike to score a come-from-behind victory in the seventh inning, 4-3. "We didn't play all that bad," Coach Ronald Vincent said afterwards. "We hit a lot of hard shots — but it seemed like it was always right at

'em. That could have made a difference. They made all the big plays they needed to win." Rose took an early 2-0 lead in the game, only to see Fike come back on three doubles in the fourth to take a 3-2 lead. Then, after tying it in the sixth, Rose watched Fike push over the winning run in the bottom of the seventh on a freak hit.

With one out in the seventh, Joey Page ripped one back at the mound. The ball glanced off relief pitcher Mike Kinley's glove and rolled through shortstop for a base hit. Shortstop Kenny Kirkland had taken off toward second to make a play on the ball and could only watch it scoot past the position he had just left.

Pinchrunner Rick Vendetti was then sacrificed to second and Jerry Lamm banged a grounder just past the reach of second baseman Toby Fischer to easily score Vendetti with the game-winning run.

The loss was the first of the season for the Rampants after 15 straight triumphs. The loss left Rose with an 11-1 league record. Both Rocky Mount and Hunt are tied for second place in the league standings with 8-3 marks with two games left to play.

However, Rose and Hunt have met but once, and Rose must win one of its two final games — Tuesday's with Hunt in Greenville and Thursday's with Northeastern in Elizabeth City — to sew up both the playoff berth and the title.

"We've got to gear it up and go next week," Vincent said. "We're really not playing that sharp right now, but we're going to have to be sharp next week."

Rose had flirted with disaster for the last three games — since beating Rocky Mount two weeks ago. They had trailed Wilson Beddingfield, 3-0, before storming back for a 12-3 win last week, and then just gotten past Kinston, 5-3, prior to last night's contest.

Early on, it looked like it might be easy. Rudy Stalls picked up a freak double when his grounder to left took a crazy hop past the outfielder and the runner was able to race on to second. He then scored when Mike Jaboni doubled off the fence in left. Jaboni moved on to third on a long fly to right center by Randy Warren, then scored on Kirkland's ground out.

But after that, Rose had few chances. It saw one runner cut down trying to steal third in the fourth, and another was left standing on second in the fifth.

Meanwhile, Fike, after leaving a runner on second in the opening frame, loaded the bases on a walk, an infield hit and a single to left with two away in the third. But starter Bobby Buie struck out Page on a 3-2 pitch to end that threat.

However, in the fourth, the Golden Demons were able to put three runs on the scoreboard. With one down, Lamm hit a shot to third that took a weird bounce just beyond the bag and went into the corner in left for a double. Stalls fumbled the pickup and that gave Lamm an extra base. He then scored when Brooks Bissette grounded out.

A walk to Bill Davis kept the rally going and Mark Harris reached on a double to center that took another bad hop, with Davis scoring on the play. David Allen followed with a double to left — the first legitimate two-bagger for the Demons — scoring Harris with the go-ahead run.

A fine defensive play saved Rose from another run in the fifth. With one down, Fike had put runners on first and second with a single and a walk. Kinley then came on to get the first batter on a pop-up. But Bissette lofted the ball just into the outfield grass behind first, but Fischer was able to make a diving catch of the ball in the webbing of his glove, retiring the side.

Rose then came back with one in the sixth to tie it up. Warren walked and stole second, moving to third when the ball got past the base into center. He scored on Kinley's grounder. Eric Woodworth kept the rally going with a single, and pinchrunner Traye Fuqua stole second and gained third on a passed ball, only to die there with the potential go-ahead run.

Then, in the bottom of the seventh, Fike got the run that won it.

Stalls led the Rose hitting with two, while Page and Lamm each had two for Fike.

Fike is now 8-11 overall and 4-8 in conference play.

Rose plays host to Hunt in what has become a very important game on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

ACC Eyes Rule Changes

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — A 45-second basketball shot clock and a new site for the league baseball tournament are on the agenda during the week-long annual meeting of the Atlantic Coast Conference here.

ACC basketball coaches have approved a proposal to ask the National Collegiate Athletic Association for permission to use an experimental 45-second shot clock that would be turned off during the last four minutes of a game.

Only two conferences will be permitted by the NCAA to use such a clock. Two other leagues will be allowed to use a 45-second clock for the entire game.

"Our feeling is we'd like the committee to let anyone who wants to use them (shot-clocks) to use it," said league Commissioner Bob James as Thursday's session got under way.

Should the proposal be approved by the ACC athletic directors and school faculty representatives, the NCAA would still have to approve. That organization is expected to announce its decision in September.

The ACC coaches have also proposed a box to limit the movement of coaches along the sidelines but have not requested permission to again use a three-point-basket.

The ACC used a three-point last year, but league spokesman Marvin "Skeeter" Francis said that the NCAA option only allowed a 21-foot shot. The ACC used a 19-foot last season.

The conference also used a 30-second shot clock last season.

League baseball coaches have proposed that the ACC tournament be moved from Chapel Hill, N.C., to Durham, N.C., because of the feeling the Chapel Hill site gave North Carolina a home advantage.

ACC athletic directors and school faculty representatives will hear a variety of reports from league committees during the next several days, most of them "routine nuts and bolts matters", Francis said.

The shot clock recommendation was to have been discussed behind closed doors today.

Any formal action will come during a business meeting next Wednesday. After that, league officials will hold a news conference to announce any action that's been taken.

The meetings have been held behind closed doors in recent years to allow a freer discussion of the issues before the league, Francis said.

"They got a little unwieldy because there are so many people involved now," he said. "They felt there are a lot of things in discussions that shouldn't be discussed in the press."

Nevertheless, James wasn't expecting a lot of heated discussion.

"I hope there isn't anything controversial in this whole meeting," he said.

In a fight between Battling Nelson and Christy Williams in 1902, Nelson knocked his opponent down 42 times before scoring a knockout in the 17th round.

Confusion Over Court's TV Ruling

DENVER (AP) — The College Football Association says a federal appeals court decision breaking an NCAA monopoly over the televising of sports events may allow colleges to start working out their own television contracts by this coming season.

But the athletic director for the University of Georgia — one of two schools that challenged the grip of the National Collegiate Athletic Association on the TV contracts — said Thursday he hopes colleges will not be forced to hammer out their own contracts.

"I'm pleased with the decision," Georgia Athletic Director Vince Dooley said of Thursday's 2-1 decision against the NCAA in the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

But he added: "I hope the present (NCAA) TV contract will remain in effect through this year. Otherwise, I believe it would create a chaotic situation coming this late."

Georgia and the University of Oklahoma filed suit over rights to broadcast their games.

The appeals court upheld an U.S. District judge's finding that the NCAA's pacts with ABC-TV, CBS-TV and Turner Broadcasting Systems Inc., totaling more than $281 million, constituted an illegal restraint of trade. But there was confusion late Thursday as to whether the appeals court ruling meant the NCAA's existing contracts are void.

The contracts with ABC and CBS have three years left to run, and Turner has one year remaining.

"We affirm the district court's conclusion that the television plan is unreasonably restrictive of competitive conditions and therefore unlawful," the majority said in its decision.

But at the same time, the court said, "We agree with the NCAA that the trial court erred in holding that the television plan and network contracts constitute a group boycott."

The ruling upheld the decision of federal Judge Juan C. Burciaga last September giving Oklahoma and Georgia the right to negotiate their own television deals. But the appellate judges told the lower court to reconsider portions of the earlier ruling that the NCAA claimed were too vague and broad.

Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association (CFA), which earlier had challenged the NCAA's ironclad control over television rights, said it is not too late for his organization to assemble a television deal for its members for the coming season.

"We've developed certain contingency plans. I hope we would be able to develop something that would satisfy our members and be within the law," Neinas said.

The CFA's 60 members include teams in all major football conferences, except the Big Ten and Pac-10, and independents.

While Oklahoma and Georgia contended they should be free to negotiate individual contracts with television stations or networks, the NCAA argued that its television policy giving it exclusive rights to college football telecasts does not fit the definition of an illegal monopoly.

NCAA spokesman Dave Cawood said the association would have no comment on the appeals court decision until NCAA officials read the opinion, probably today. However, the association has said throughout the controversy that it would appeal any adverse ruling.

Spokesmen for the television networks said they would have no comment until the decision was read and digested, and an official at Turner Broadcasting in Atlanta said no one familiar with the case was available to comment.

Burciaga, who sits on the federal bench in New Mexico, presided over the case in Oklahoma City after federal judges there excused themselves.

Shortly after Burciaga's ruling, Oklahoma and Southern California sold telecast rights to a football game for $250,000, but the appeals court intervened with its stay, re-establishing the NCAA's control over college football television contracts.

The Justice Department filed a friend-of-the-court brief after Burciaga's ruling, saying it agreed with the judge's decision.

The NCAA had argued that its TV contract does not harm consumers and therefore doesn't violate federal antitrust laws.

"The networks only pay what is warranted by the number of viewers and advertisements sold," the NCAA said. "The attractiveness of the games depends in part on the controls at issue here — controls that create balance, competitiveness and product promotion."

But some colleges had complained that their games were not televised frequently enough under NCAA controls.

The NCAA includes about 500 member colleges and universities with football teams, and 187 schools with Division I, or major, teams.

In sending the case back to the lower court, the appeals court said: "While we hold that the NCAA cannot lawfully maintain exclusive control of the rights, how far such rights may be commonly regulated involves speculation that should not be made on the record of the instant case."

Circuit Judge James E. Barrett, in a dissenting opinion, said the district court erred "by subjugating the NCAA's educational goals (and, incidentally, those which Oklahoma and Georgia insist must be maintained in any event) to the purely competitive commercialism of 'every school for itself' approach to television contract bargaining."

At the University of Georgia, spokesman Barry Wood said the NCAA, in defending its position, is concerned about schools televising home games and the NCAA "wants to protect the live gate and protect nearby schools whose gate could be affected by the televising of a neighboring school."

Falcons Ice Softball Title

PIKEVILLE — Charles B. Aycock High School rallied for five runs in the bottom of the third inning and pulled out a 9-7 softball win over Greene Central yesterday.

The victory sewed up the 1983 Eastern Carolina Conference title for the Lady Falcons, who are now 9-2 in the league with one game left to play — that with winless Farmville Central.

Greene Central, now 7-4 in the league, still has a shot left at finishing second and gaining the league's other berth, but must win against SouthWest Edgecombe on Tuesday.

The Lady Rams took the initial lead in the game, scoring four times in the first inning. They added three more in the second, all on a homer by Sharon Croom.

Meanwhile, Aycock scored once in the first and again in the third to trail 7-2. The Lady Falcons added two more in the fifth, then rallied for five runs in the sixth. After knotting it at 7-7, Aycock got the win on a two-run homer by Montague.

Jags Top Rocky Mt.

ROCKY MOUNT — E.B. Aycock Junior High School rolled up a 14-3 baseball victory over Rocky Mount yesterday.

Anthony Cobb led the Aycock hitting with three, while Eric Jarman, Sterling Edwards, Rodney Harris and Ricky Outlaw each had two. Jarman and Harris each had triples, and Harris had four runs batted in.

Tyrone Jones was the winning pitcher for the Jaguars, now 9-2.

Aycock is scheduled to face Washington on Tuesday, but it is possible that the game may be cancelled in order to schedule Nash Central in a make-up game that would decide the title in the Big East Junior High conference.

Cubs Pop Fike, 16-0

Rose High School's junior varsity rolled to a 16-0 baseball victory over Fike High School of Wilson yesterday.

Gary Scott tossed a three-hitter at the Baby Demons. He struck out eight and walked seven in throwing the shutout.

Tony Taylor led the Rampant Cubs with three hits, two of them homers. He drove in a total of seven runs.

Marc Nover also had three hits for Rose, while Scott, David Jester and Battle Emory had two each.

Rose is now 8-1 and plays at Hunt at Monday.

Computer Aids Boros' Decision

By The Associated Press

Steve Boros played "computer baseball" against the Detroit Tigers, and it paid off in big numbers for the Oakland A's.

The Oakland manager had been considering dropping Dwayne Murphy from fourth to fifth in the batting order due to a slump, but changed his mind when he saw a computer readout on Murphy's achievements last year against Detroit pitcher Dan Petry.

Staying with Murphy as his No. 4 hitter proved to be a wise decision for Boros — the Oakland center fielder slugged a tie-breaking grand slam home run off Petry and knocked in five runs altogether Thursday night as the A's routed the Tigers 11-4.

"We thought maybe the pressure of batting cleanup was getting to him," Boros said of Murphy. "However, I went back and looked at my computer readouts and saw that Murphy had gone 4-for-9 against Petry while fourth last year. So, I decided to leave him right there. I'm really glad I did."

Before the grand slam, Murphy had been fighting a 9-for-77 slump.

"When I saw that ball go out," said Murphy, "a whole lot of pressure went off. It was something we needed. We've been struggling so long."

With the game tied 4-4 in the fifth, Oakland's Tony Phillips opened with a double. Rickey Henderson singled and Mike Davis walked to load the bases with none out. One out later, Murphy hit Petry's first pitch into the upper right field seats in Tiger Stadium for his fourth homer of the season. Jerry Ujdr relieved and walked Mitchell Page before Kelvin Moore belted his second home run of the game and fifth of the season to make it 10-4.

In other American League action, it was Boston 5, Milwaukee 2 and Toronto 6, Cleveland 3.

Krukow Expected Hook

By The Associated Press

For the first time this season, Mike Krukow was pitching without pain. And for six innings, he was pitching without hits, too.

Then, suddenly, he was gone, given the hook by San Francisco Manager Frank Robinson. But Krukow minded not at all. He knew he'd gone as long as he was expected to against the Cincinnati Reds Thursday night.

Reliever Jim Barr lost the no-hitter in the eighth inning and the Giants had to settle for a two-hit, 4-2 victory.

"I knew before I went into the game that I was not going to go longer than six innings," said Krukow, who came to the Giants from Philadelphia last winter in the Joe Morgan trade. Krukow injured his right elbow in spring training and was making his first appearance since coming off the 21-day disabled list.

"I'm not going to second-guess," he said. "This is the first time since this spring that I've pitched in a game without pain. I enjoyed it."

But what about Robinson's decision to send up a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning? "It wasn't much of a decision to make," Krukow said. "I'll back Frank's decision 100 percent."

Robinson said he never hesitated in taking Krukow out. "He's too valuable to this ballclub," the Giants' manager said. "I was thinking about that and thinking about his future. He had just come off the disabled list, had had a bad arm . . . I know he wouldn't have wanted to stay out, there because one more pitch or one more inning could have blown his arm."

Krukow said Giants pitching coach Herm Starrette "told me earlier in the week they wanted five or six innings out of me . . . 'I had butterflies (at the start of the game). It had been a while since I'd been out there. You don't realize how much you miss this game until you sit out for 21 days."

"It's a lot of fun out there to throw without pain."

Barr gave up Ron Oester's leadoff triple in the eighth and Dave Concepcion's one-out single in the ninth, then Gary Lavelle got the last out and with it his third save.

The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the first off Bruce Berenyi, the first run coming on Darrell Evans' double that stretched his hitting streak to 11 games. Krukow had a sacrifice fly in the second inning and Berenyi wild-pitched a run home in the third. Grounders by Johnny Bench and Wayne Krenchicki accounted for the Reds' runs.

Pirates 6, Mets 2

Dave Parker, a macho man in his own mind, decided it was time to admit to his own shortcomings and, by doing so, broke out of one of the worst slumps of his career.

He switched from a 36-ounce bat to a 33-ounce model and came through with three hits, including a pair of doubles, two runs batted in and three runs scored in the Bucs' victory that dropped the Mets into last place in the East.

"It was a macho thing," he said of his reliance on heavy lumber. "I still feel macho, but I'm getting older and I'm not as young and not as strong

Shin Shot Lets Jack Share Lead

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Thanks to a lady's leg and a missed putt, defending champion Jack Nicklaus shares the lead in the $400,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

Nicklaus banked a 4-iron off a spectator's shin on the 14th hole of Thursday's opening round, sank the short birdie putt, and wound up with a 66. When the round ended, Nicklaus was tied with young Gary Hallberg and Joe Inman for first place in the 72-hole chase for a $72,000 top prize.

"A nice break," said Nicklaus, who recorded his 69th and last victory here a year ago.

His second shot at the par-4 14th sailed over the green, struck a woman on the shin and bounced back to within three feet of the cup.

"All she wanted was the ball," Nicklaus laughed later. "She wasn't concerned at all with being hit."

Nicklaus and Hallberg toured the majestic, 7,190-yard, par 70 Colonial course early, largely avoiding the tricky Texas breeze that haunted the late starters, including Inman.

But it was former champion Bruce Lietzke and a muffed putt at the par 3 16th that caused the biggest stir among the select field of 102, many of whom took almost unprecedented liberties with Colonial's Trinity River treachery.

Twenty-eight broke par. Lietzke, cruising into No. 15 5-under, a stroke ahead of Nicklaus, played the final four holes in 4-over-par, including a double bogey at the 16th where he cavalierly backhanded a 1-inch putt that went nowhere.

"I went up there and tried to backhand it — sort of waved at it," he said.

In the scorer's tent later, Lietzke told playing partner Tom Kite: "I'm going straight to the putting green and practice my backhand."

Yesterday's Cryptquip — THE FIRECRACKER MAKER'S SHORT FUSE IS FAMOUS.

Today's Cryptquip clue: E equals C.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

To Make Movie In Wilmington

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A group of local businessmen who recently formed their own movie company announced Thursday they are backing a "major motion picture" that will be filmed entirely in Wilmington.

The still-nameless film is the result of a two-year collaboration between Lance Smith Jr., an employee of Newirth Motors, and Esty Davis, an employee of Babcock and Wilcox who also operates a traveling wild west show.

Smith describes the movie as an "action drama" about drug trafficking that will involve car and boat chase scenes and filming around local landmarks and businesses.

Ervin Melton, a former North Carolina film maker and producer of the Reverie Films project, said he hopes to begin shooting the picture in June and to finish in 30 days. The film is scheduled for release in October.

The backers said they plan to contract with six or eight Hollywood actors for the lead roles, with regional talent filling out the cast. They also plan to hire local people to work on crews along with

Le Carre's Book Upsets Israeli Agents

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — John le Carre's latest thriller hasn't reached Israeli bookstores yet but it already has aroused resentment in the Israeli undercover world — a world the author draws on for much of his plot.

The Hebrew translation of "The Little Drummer Girl" will not appear until this summer, but the English-language version of the newest work by Britain's master spy novelist is circulating in the intelligence community.

Intelligence officials won't comment on the book, but former secret service figures and scholars of Israeli espionage complain that it is unkind to Israel and is not authentic. Some also say its tortuous plot pales in comparison with the real thing.

The international best seller is about an Israeli hunt for a Palestinian master terrorist. In months of research le Carre interviewed guerrilla leaders in Lebanon, former Israeli intelligence leaders and a German woman jailed in Israel for trying to shoot down an El Al airliner with a rocket.

The book is a radical departure from le Carre's established genre. He has shifted from the Cold War to the heat of the Arab-Israeli conflict, and he has gone to obvious lengths to balance the conflicting ideologies that keep the Middle East aflame.

The intricate plot of "The Little Drummer Girl" defies easy summary. On the surface it is the story of Charlie, an English actress with pro-Palestinian views who is recruited by the Israelis to lead them to Khalil, a Palestinian who is responsible for bomb attacks on Israeli and Jewish targets in Europe.

First the Israelis persuade Charlie that their cause is just, then set about priming her with the Palestinians' view of the rightness of their cause, in order to win her access to Khalil.

Thus le Carre puts both causes in the mouths of eloquent Israelis, rather than give the reader the impression that he himself is taking a position.

As "The Little Drummer Girl" raced to the top of the best-seller lists, two Israeli authors published a non-fiction book that closely resembles le Carre's fiction.

"The Quest for the Red Prince," by veteran intelligence and military writers Michael Bar-Zohar and Eitan Haber, describes how Israeli agents hunted down and assassinated Ali Hassan Salameh, the engineer of a series of terrorist outrages in the 1970s.

The book says Salameh was the top, and most elusive, man on the Israeli wanted list. At one point, it says, Israeli agents planted a bomb in his favorite Beirut sauna but were barred from detonating it by Golda Meir, then Israeli prime minister, because she feared it would kill many innocent people. Finally, the book says, a young woman calling herself Erica Mary Chambers from England moved into a house near Salameh's, posing as an eccentric painter. She told a fellow agent where to park a bomb-laden car, and in January 1979, as Salameh drove home, they set off the bomb and killed him. They escaped to sea by dinghy from Beirut, were picked up by a ship and disappeared, the book said.

"The real story is much more incredible than anything le Carre could invent, and I have been a fan of his since 'The Spy Who Came In From The Cold,'" Bar-Zohar said in an interview.

Bar-Zohar and several former intelligence men all pointed to what they considered an offensive flaw in the novel — the way the Israeli agents assassinate the brother of terrorist Khalil halfway through the book.

Although the brother is portrayed as a villain deserving of death, the Israelis insist their secret service would never take a human life except in extreme circumstances, and even then only with the approval of a secret committee headed by the prime minister. It functioned when Israeli agents were hunting terrorists in the 1970s.

Bar-Zohar also accused le

Carre of portraying Israeli attacks in Lebanon as a genocidal assault on the entire Palestinian people. "This simply isn't true," he said. "Our goal was never genocide, but to wipe out terrorist bases."

Yaacov Caroz, a former deputy head of the Mossad espionage service, said he found the book "generally positive to Israel," except for the ending which takes in Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon. "It struck me as an alien, artificial afterthought. Why did he suddenly get so venomous?"

Former Mossad chiefs Yitzhak Hofi and Isser Harel also called the book anti-Israel. Harel said le Carre showed little understanding of the Mossad's tactics and ethics.

Le Carre insists he is staunchly pro-Israel. He took his manuscript to Israeli friends — Yuval Elizur, an economics reporter, and his wife, Judith — to check it before publication.

Elizur says he confined himself to catching errors in fact and to fleshing out the Israeli characters, but did not try to change the book's message: that both sides have a strong case.

In the introduction to the novel, le Carre thanked the Elizurs for having "headed me off from several grave solecisms that I prefer to forget."

Mrs. Elizur says she enjoyed the book, but can understand why it is causing controversy. "It presents both sides of the conflict with equal strength, and that's something we Israelis aren't used to."

THE NEW AND THE OLD — The new Miss USA, Julie Hayek, from La Canada, Calif., is crowned by the 1982 Miss USA, Terri Utley, at the 1983 Miss USA Pageant in Knoxville last night. (AP Laserphoto)

Californian Is New Miss USA

By TOM MCCORD
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The new Miss USA, Julie Lynne Hayek, is a green-eyed Californian who wants to be a dentist and says her mom is the greatest person she ever met.

Her crowning Thursday night before a nationwide television audience means the 5-foot-10, part-time model will compete in the July 11 Miss Universe contest in St. Louis.

Miss Hayek, from La Canada, won more than $150,000, including about $90,000 in cash and scholarships and already has a use in mind for some of the loot.

"I'll probably set up an office with all the money when it's all over," she said, clutching a dozen red roses as she posed for photographers with her mother and grandmother moments after her win.

In addition to the cash, Miss Hayek will receive a new sports car, a mink coat and a screen test by Paramount Pictures in Hollywood.

She is 22, has light-brown hair and is a senior at the University of California-Los Angeles. The daughter of an airline pilot and a high school guidance counselor, Miss Hayek told master of ceremonies Bob Barker in her on-camera interview she most values education.

Fifty-one young women from all the states and the District of Columbia, ranging in age from 17 to 24, competed in the contest, which was staged for the first time in Knoxville.

A panel of 11 celebrity judges, using a scale of 1 to 9.99, chose Miss Texas, Lisa Gayle Allred, 21, of Fort Worth, as first runner-up.

Miss Allred, who was voted by press photographers as Miss Photogenic, won the evening gown competition. Miss Hayek placed first in swimsuit competition.

Miss South Carolina, Margaret Allison Grisso, 21, of Columbia, was chosen second runner-up, and Miss Louisiana, Pamela Jo Forrest, 20, of Baton Rouge, was third. Miss North Dakota, Elizabeth Jaeger, 22, of Fargo, was named fourth runner-up.

Miss Iowa — Dana Ruth Mintzer, 21, of Des Moines — was chosen "Miss Amity" by her fellow contestants.

Barker and actress Joan Van Ark of television's "Knot's Landing" were hosts of the two-hour show on CBS. Larry Gatlin & The Gatlin Brothers Band of Nashville also performed.

Paramount, a Gulf & Western Industries Inc. company, owns Miss Universe Inc., which has staged the Miss USA contest for more than 30 years. But Harold Glasser, Miss Universe Inc. president, said he doesn't know whether the contest will be back in Knoxville next year.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If Elizabeth Montgomery were still a witch, she would wiggle her nose and make "Missing Pieces" disappear.

CBS' Saturday night movie is an attempt at artsy filmmaking gone haywire, and its star, Miss Montgomery, who once played Samantha in "Bewitched," is miscast as the tough-talking private eye-narrator.

As Mickey Spillane, whose style is poorly imitated in the show, might say, "It takes more than pants to make a woman macho." When Miss Montgomery says things like, "Meet my closest friend, a gun," or, "The only case we had was tequila," it works as neither a parody nor a clever mystery.

With literary references to Sam Spade, Raymond Chandler, Phillip Marlowe and others, Miss Montgomery's attempt to satirize the narrative style of the classic detective genre turns stale. Her asides, insights and perceptions are just annoying.

"The phone went dead. I hope that didn't apply to Sam, as well," she says coolly about her lover.

And later, "I don't know how long I was out. I do know I was dumb enough to come around."

Miss Montgomery plays Sara Scott, who turns private detective after her husband, a political journalist, is murdered in a case that was never solved. We know a lot about that murder because the harrowing scene is played and replayed close to 20 times.

The shooting death, which Sara witnessed, haunts her night and day, and if you watch "Missing Pieces" for very long, it's bound to do the same for you. The frequent nightmare includes the husband's broad smile before he meets his maker, exploding glass, broken ketchup and mustard bottles, and puddles of rain.

These flashbacks are accompanied by comic-style red lips, a piercing chord of music and crashing noises. Director Mike Hodges, who wrote the teleplay, manages to combine two of the most grating forms of avant-garde culture — punk rock and pop art — into one bizarre, recurring memory.

Sara works for an overweight private detective who rarely shows up in the office, and doesn't have any cases when he does. Papazian — he doesn't seem to have a first name — is played by Ron Karabatsos, a former professional wrestler known as The Golden Greek and a one-time New Jersey cop who made his dramatic debut in "Prince of the City."

In his absence, Sara takes the one case that walks into the office. "That's when I saw the knee," Sara says in

Life As It's Lived

Disqualified Again By The Green Thumb Club

By GAIL MICHAELS
It's spring again, and the bitter battle between the green thumbs and the all-thumbs is in full swing.
The green thumbs have just cut their daffodils back, popped the heads off their tulips and cultivated the soil around their iris. They have hauled out their peatmoss, their pine bark and the bedding plants that they grew from seed while the winter wind was making its last-ditch efforts at destruction. With all this paraphernalia they are preparing to make an appallingly smooth and lovely transition from this season to the next.

The all-thumbs have either hired, as our next-door neighbors did, a landscape architect to give their yards a green thumb look to the tune of around $4,000, or they are standing at their windows staring balefully out at nature's boycott sandwiched between the verdant splendor of the lawns on either side.

Unfortunately, the green thumbs are staring, too. I'm sure that many of them, without much prodding, would advocate removing Phillip and me from the neighborhood by force. What they don't understand is that we really do try. We aren't lazy; we're simply inept.

For one thing we bought the only lot in the neighborhood with soil inimical to all forms of domesticated plant life. The developer seeded the yard with Kentucky Fescue 31 last spring. We seeded in the fall. To date we've managed to bring to life about 100 blades of real grass in the front yard and 14 in the back.

We also planted six azaleas. Within two days they shed their foliage. I don't dare plant seeds. The last time I planted seeds, I was helping Meg with what she had hoped would be a carrot garden. As soon as the baby carrots poked their little green necks out of the ground, we mistook them for weeds and decapitated them. We raised a bumper crop of crabgrass. As you have probably guessed, crabgrass has an affinity for me.

But to give myself all of the credit for the dreary brown expanse of our yard would be unfair. I simply cannot minimize the role Phillip has played in all this. I think Phillip secretly delights in our yard because he only has to mow the stubble once a month. When he gets a sudden yearning to see green, he figures he can always open a few containers at the back of the refrigerator. But on those few occasions when he needs something more, he goes completely overboard.

For instance, I had been badgering him for over a month to relieve the wild area behind our yard of a few of its smaller dogwoods in order that our one straggly maple might have some company.

He finally relented. The first dogwood he severed from its roots was over eight feet tall.

Brooke Working In Animal Care

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Actress Brooke Shields wants to be treated "like a private citizen," not a public figure, when she's feeding animals and cleaning up after them at the San Diego Zoo.

Miss Shields, who turns 18 at the end of the month, wears jeans and a work shirt while performing her chores as a student intern in a month-long high school class project.

The actress and her mother asked that Miss Shields be treated "like a private citizen," zoo spokeswoman Martha Baker said Thursday, and no interviews will be allowed.

Miss Shields worked Wednesday and Thursday at the Wild Animal Park, 30 miles north of San Diego. The outdoor park is operated by the San Diego Zoological Society, which also runs the zoo.

"She'll work the rest of the time at the zoo," Ms. Baker said.

Miss Shields had rejected three of the four ID photos that were taken of her when she arrived for work, the San Diego Union reported. But, the newspaper said, Miss Shields autographed the pictures for zoo workers who retrieved them from the trash.

"That's a little large to survive transplanting, don't you think?" I ventured.

"It's fine," he barked. "I'm going back for another one."

Several hours later, fearing that he had keeled over from overexertion, I tramped into the woods. I found Phillip grappling with a 17-foot tree. A description of how we got it out of the woods and into our front yard would require another column so let it suffice to say that when Phillip tottered back into the house to shower off the dirt and to bandage his wounds, he never wanted to see another tree.

"Don't ever ask me to do something like this again," he growled.

Believe me, I won't. Both trees died.

Hijacked Airliner Returns To Miami After A Flight To Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — A Capitol Airlines jet landed safely in Miami today after being hijacked to Cuba by an "exotic" woman wearing a turban who was armed with a flare pistol. It was the second time in two weeks the flight had been hijacked.

"She had a white turban," said passenger Camillo Delgado, a journalist for In Flight magazine. "She was wearing a wraparound sari. She was barefoot. She looked very exotic. She was very calm and collected the whole time. She was a pro."

The hijacker was taken off the DC-8 in Havana late Thursday and "no one knows what the Cubans have done with this woman," Capitol Air dispatcher Courtney Knox said in at the carrier's Smyrna, Tenn., dispatch center.

None of the 248 people on board was injured, he said.

On May 1, Flight 236 — scheduled to go from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Chicago, with a stop in Miami — had been hijacked to Cuba.

The woman "referred to herself as Sharon and said she was born in the United States and lived for the last seven months in San Juan and was unhappy with the U.S.," said Jim Freeman, an FBI agent who interviewed passengers. "She said she had never been to Cuba."

Pilot Vincent Briscuso said flight attendant Kathy Lardiere told him the woman stopped her, said she had a gun in her purse with a magazine over it, and "if we didn't go to Havana, she would use the weapon."

"When we determined that she did have a weapon, the decision was made to go to Havana," said the 26-year veteran pilot from New York City.

He said Ms. Lardiere, of Philadelphia, told him the hijacker's hand "appeared to be on a trigger in the purse. She said it was a 12-gauge and would 'do the job.'"

"There was no panic," Briscuso said.

Briscuso and Ms. Lardiere and several other crew members continued on with the flight to Chicago after being interviewed by FBI agents in Miami.

But Ms. Lardiere said, "Yes, I was scared." She said she was standing in the galley when the hijacker, seated at the front of the plane, told her she had a gun in her purse. "It was a flare gun," the senior flight attendant said.

A passenger, Tony Gutierrez, 28, of Frankfurt, West Germany, said the woman was sitting at the front of the plane.

"The pilot instructed us there was a passenger who had requested to land in Havana," Gutierrez said. "We thought we were just off the airport in Miami when we landed in Havana. It was a surprise. We didn't know we were landing in the wrong place."

The DC-8 was commandeered at 8:12 p.m., only minutes before it should have touched down in Miami, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker said in Atlanta. The plane landed at Jose Marti International Airport in Havana at 9:06 p.m. and the woman was taken from the plane by Cuban authorities, said Freeman. After a three-hour layover, the plane left Cuba at 12:14 a.m. today and arrived in Miami at 12:57 a.m., Knox said.

Freeman described the hijacker as a "black female, age 26 to 32 years old, about 5-foot-3, with a small build. Articulate. She was wearing a yellow dress and turban."

The FBI agent said Cuban authorities had the weapon, but it was believed to be a flare gun.

Capitol Air said the plane was carrying 220 paying passengers, 18 infants and a crew of 10.

At Miami International Airport, a crowd of about 50 friends and relatives waited around the Capitol Air ticket counter, some silent, some joking, others weeping.

"At first I was very scared, then I began to get calm because I thought everything is probably going to be OK," said Jenny Crosdale, who had been crying. She said she was waiting for her 53-year-old mother, who was coming to visit her from San Juan.

A passenger, Suzanne Fontaine, 43, of Fort Lauderdale, who was acclimating in Puerto Rico, said the passengers remained calm on the plane, and after they got off in Havana, "everybody was laughing. It was no problem."

On May 1 the same flight was hijacked by a gray-haired Spanish-speaking man.

The Plot to Kill the Pope

On May 13, 1981—two years ago today—the world was shocked to hear that Pope John Paul II had been shot while giving his blessings to the faithful in St. Peter's Square. A young man named Mehmet Ali Agca was arrested and convicted in an Italian court for the attempted assassination. But in the past two years, some observers have begun to wonder whether Agca acted on his own. Many questions are still unanswered. Agca is a professional killer, and he claims that a Turk named Bekir Celenk offered him $1.7 million to kill the Pope. Some believe that Agca was the tool of Bulgarian spies who, in turn, were backed by the Soviet secret police, the KGB. The mystery may never be solved.

DO YOU KNOW—What is the nationality of Mehmet Ali Agca?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER—Johannes Gutenberg invented the printing press in the 15th century.

The bidding:

North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

When this hand was dealt in a recent team match, one declarer went down in three no trump. The other demonstrated that the play was a relatively simple matter of technique.

South decided that his hand was not quite good enough for a two-over-one response. North's action was clear cut, despite the absence of a club stopper — his partner almost surely had something in that suit.

At both tables West led the top of his spade sequence. Both declarers won in dummy. One declarer then led a club to his queen and West made a good play when he allowed South to hold the trick. Declarer entered dummy with a heart and led another club, and it made no difference which card he elected to play from hand — there was no way to set up and enjoy the long clubs, for declarer was an entry short.

At the other table declarer found the extra entry to his hand — and in the club suit at that! At trick two he led a low club from dummy and ducked in his hand!

West won the ten of clubs and continued with a spade (nothing else was better). Declarer won in dummy and led a club to his queen. If West ducked now, it would not help, for declarer would be in hand to continue the suit. And if West won the club, declarer would still have the ace of spades as an entry to his hand to cash the king of clubs and run the suit.

Note that declarer's play was not only perfectly safe, but it also stood to gain against some bad trump breaks. If the suit split 4-1 and either defender had a singleton ace, declarer would still prevail.

Cash Incentive Said Not to Divide

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Officials of a microelectronics company say they will base their decision for a research site more on local universities than on cash incentives.

Gov. Jim Hunt and other North Carolina leaders made a pitch Thursday to locate the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. laboratory at Research Triangle Park.

MCTC officials have already had made stops in San Diego, Austin, Texas, and Atlanta, and are expected to announce their decision next week.

MCTC, headed by former CIA deputy director Bobby Inman, plans a $100-million-a-year budget for the facility and expects to employ some 400 scientists and engineers.

San Diego and Austin have offered special incentives, such as free land for a plant site, low-interest mortgage loans and discount housing prices for employees.

However, the Research Triangle Park offered no cash incentives other than the limited amount of tax-free industrial revenue bond financing available to any company in the state, said J. Paul Essex, special assistant to Hunt.

The special offers probably would have little impact on the MCTC decision. Inman said, adding that the most important factor would likely be the strength of university research and education in computer science and electrical engineering at each location.

He said MCTC is looking for "a balance of computer science and microelectronics graduate programs that we can have to draw on. The hardest part is going to be getting the talent assembled" to conduct the company's research.

Presidents of North Carolina State, Duke University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill were among those who joined MCTC representatives to what Research Triangle Park and the surrounding area has to offer.

Hunt said he was happy Research Triangle Park was among the four cities being considered and said the state had much to offer, especially the $40 million, state-funded North Carolina Microelectronics Center, which is scheduled for completion in October.

Not Divided By Scandal

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham said Watergate didn't damage his friendship with former President Richard Nixon, although Nixon kept him at arm's length because he didn't want him "tarred" with the scandal.

"We're friends. I'm a clergyman. I don't give up my friendships when a man gets in trouble," the 64-year-old evangelist said Wednesday, preparing to begin an eight-day crusade Sunday in Tacoma's domed stadium.

During the Watergate scandal, Graham said, Nixon tried to keep him away so Graham's own reputation would not suffer from association with the controversial president, who resigned in 1974.

"Nixon said to the whole (White House) staff: 'Don't let Billy Graham near me. I don't want him tarred with Watergate.'"

In the last year of Nixon's presidency, Graham said, "I never got to see him. I tried to get to him the night before he resigned. I went to Washington just to have a prayer with him. I couldn't even get an answer from a secretary or anybody I knew at the White House."

Graham said he and Nixon have only discussed Watergate once.

UNFAIR DENIAL?

Propose Condemned Be Given Choice Of Execution

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state Senate subcommittee has proposed that condemned prison inmates be allowed to choose between the gas chamber and lethal injection.

The panel also suggested Thursday that doctors not be required to administer poison to prisoners who choose to forego asphyxiation in favor of the needle.

The compromise was proposed in a meeting of the Senate Judiciary III Committee, which delayed a vote until next week allow for public comment. The five-member subcommittee's proposal modified a bill sponsored by Sen. Robert Davis, D-Rowan, which would replace execution by asphyxiation with death by lethal injection.

"It really boils down to an issue of whether you make a person's last 15 minutes less painful," said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, subcommittee chairman. "This doesn't deal with the death penalty issue. The results are the same."

The original bill would have required that a physician administer the drug, which critics said would violate doctors' professional ethics. But under the substitute bill, doctors wouldn't have to be involved in the execution.

Tom Adams of the N.C. Medical Society said in an interview his organization had opposed the original bill but could support the committee substitute.

"As long as the Legislature doesn't require that doctors actually participate, we have no objections," said Adams.

Hipps wouldn't speculate on the amended bill's prospects on the Senate floor, saying it's difficult to predict reactions when the volatile issue of capital punishment is debated.

"Lots of people have said they don't want the death penalty to be made less of a barbaric act, because it might ease people's conscience," he said.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, another subcommittee member, foresaw success for the amended bill.

"It's the type of thing that many of us wish we didn't have to deal with," said Rand. "But I think this is the type of compromise most senators can live with."

In other legislative action: Franchise Bill

Representatives of national automobile manufacturers argued before the Senate Judiciary I Committee that a bill updating auto dealer franchise laws goes too far to protect the dealers.

"This bill asks the Legislature to write a franchise agreement," said Harold N. Bynum, a Greensboro attorney representing Volvo's truck manufacturing interests.

Jim H. Kilroy, manager of state relations for the Chrysler Corp. in Detroit, said North Carolina already has one of the most restrictive franchise laws in the nation. The bill would hinder Chrysler from making a comeback in North Carolina, he added.

"We are struggling to regain our place in the industry," Kilroy said. "Our continued resurgence in the market depends on our ability to expand our dealerships. All the bill would do is keep the big guy big and the little guy little."

Sam Johnson, a Raleigh attorney representing the state's automobile dealers, said the bill would not give dealers an exclusive territory but would require they give notice to dealers in their trade area that they are considering setting up a dealership.

Since 1955, the Legislature has regulated automobile dealer franchises. That law, which also affects truck and motorcycle dealers, was updated in 1971.

One part of the bill would define a franchise trade area as the area within 20 miles of an existing dealer. It would make an exception when a manufacturer wants to set up a new dealer.

Unlawful Arrest

The House Judiciary I Committee approved a bill to remove the defense of unlawful arrest in cases of resisting arrest using a deadly weapon — a watered-down version of a bill introduced in January.

The original bill filed by Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, would have provided that no force could be used to resist arrest by a known law-enforcement officer. The committee substitute adopted Thursday rules out use of deadly weapons unless an officer used "excessive force."

School Year

A bill that would have required public schools to open no earlier than the first Wednesday after Labor Day passed a House committee after it was amended to apply only to New Hanover, Pender and Brunswick counties.

Merchant Credit

A bill to let North Carolina merchants charge up to 21 percent interest on revolving charge accounts received Senate Banking Committee approval despite some objections.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said the bill was meant to help merchants compete with banks and other institutions who may charge up to 20 for credit cards under other recently approved legislation.

The bill would let department stores and other merchants charge 1 1/2 percent interest per month, instead of 1 1/2 percent, raising the annual percentage from 18 to 21.

Hardison said competition among retailers would keep them from using the higher limit.

"This will just give them the flexibility we've given to banks and other institutions," he said.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, disagreed, saying, "If they're not going to raise it, why fool with it?"

The bill would be effective Sept. 1.

Industrial Commission

The House Judiciary II Committee approved a bill to clarify the independence of the Industrial Commission from the Secretary of Commerce and to make clear that Industrial Commission deputy secretaries are covered by the State Personnel Act.

Clint Abernathy, assistant commerce secretary, said he had no objections to the bill. But he said William Stephenson, chairman of the commission, had reservations about the personnel act provision.

Education Reform

Several House members filed bills encompassing recommendations of the Select Committee on Education, including determining teacher pay on a differential system based on performance, location and other factors.

Other bills would require that State Board of Education members be elected instead of appointed and that the education finance system be revised.

Reps. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, and Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, joined Republican Rep. J. Reid Poovey of Catawba County in sponsoring the legislation. Mavretic said in an interview the sponsors wanted to make the initiative bipartisan. Similar bills were introduced in the Senate recently by Sen. Kenneth Harris, R-Mecklenburg.

Mavretic acknowledged that the pay differential system was the only proposal among the bills that hadn't been tried and defeated in earlier sessions.

"In the past these (proposals) have been identified as issues in and of themselves," he said. "But this time they're being offered in a package that takes a view of the total picture and the problems' interrelationships."

Video Games

A House subcommittee agreed to consider proposing a video game tax that would increase with the number of machines one owns.

The panel instructed a staff attorney to draft a bill that would levy a tax of $20 on the first four machines, $30 on the second four, $40 on the next eight and $50 for each machine over 16.

The proposal by subcommittee chairman Rep. Christopher Barker, D-Craven, came after several panel members supported the idea of a tax but said they were leery of two bills before the House. One would levy a tax of $200 on each video game machine while the other would tax the gross receipts from each machine.

"Some small operators might put just one or two machines in a country store, and they barely make enough to turn a profit," said Rep. Joe Roberts, D-Gaston.

The committee will study the proposed compromise further next week before submitting a bill to the House Finance Committee.

Loyalty Oath

The Senate Education committee delayed action on a bill that would bar local school boards from forcing teachers to sign oaths of loyalty and support of the local system's policies.

Sen. Julius Wright, R-New Hanover, said he sponsored the bill in response to a situation involving a Pender County high school teacher.

Wright said the family of the teacher, a registered Republican, campaigned against and helped defeat an incumbent Democrat chairman of the county education board. Afterward, the lame-duck chairman had the teacher transferred to another school 35 miles from his home, said Wright.

The teacher was returned to his old job only when he signed a letter saying he would support the school board and school system, said Wright. Later, when the teacher asked that the letter be removed from his personnel file, the board refused.

"I view this as a violation of the teacher's constitutional rights," Wright told the committee. "It's embarrassing to have to tell you this happened."

Auto Emission Failure Rate Surprisingly High

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A misunderstanding of test information led to reports that only a few automobiles failed required auto emissions tests in Mecklenburg County, state environmental officials said Thursday.

Last December, 10.9 percent of the 12,500 Mecklenburg County vehicles tested failed, not 2.3 percent as originally reported, said state environmental management assistant director Paul Welms.

Welms said the vehicles showed at a 65 percent emission reduction on the repeat of the tests, required by law after corrective work.

Test results were better in January. Of 18,000 vehicles tests, 8.3 percent failed. Originally, the state Department of Motor Vehicles reported that 3.1 percent failed. Repeat tests of those that failed showed a 68 percent reduction of polluting emissions.

"We're real pleased with that, especially since we expected it to be higher, a 15 to 20 percent average failure rate," Welms said.

"I know there was some confusion in the Department of Motor Vehicles about just how to read the figures they were getting and what they meant," he said. "A lot of that's because they aren't equipped for dealing with the volume of raw data and quality assurance on this."

Welms said the statistical work on the tests has been shifted to Environmental Management, which deals regularly with that type of information.

Figures are available only for December and January because of earlier snags in gathering and interpreting the statistics from Charlotte area mechanics, Welms said.

He said gathering and compiling information from hundreds of mechanics will involve a 30- to 45-day lag time before the figures are available.

Mecklenburg is the only county in the state where the tests are required because it is the only county with measured carbon monoxide levels higher than federal regulations allow.

All gasoline-powered vehicles of model years 1971 to 1982, except for motorcycles, are subject to the test this year. It is required at the same time as a vehicle's regular safety inspection.

Boy Sentenced For Stabbing Mother

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 12-year-old boy has been placed on probation after admitting he stabbed his mother to death after an argument over a bad report card.

Since the child was not tried as an adult, the strictest sentence he could have received would have been to attend a juvenile training center.

The unidentified seventh-grader at Coulwood Junior High School admitted before Mecklenburg Juvenile Court Judge William Jones on April 28 that he stabbed Patricia Rice Rustin in the family's home on Feb. 2. The boy pleaded guilty to a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Several of Mrs. Rustin's relatives testified before Jones in April that the child was abused and neglected by his mother.

Jones emphasized in the sentencing Thursday that the boy needs a tightly structured family setting while he gets intensive therapy and other rehabilitative measures.

The terms of his probation require the child to be enrolled by his attorney in a local "Willie M." class for emotionally disturbed children. The judge said he must attend school faithfully, make an effort at school work and live with and "completely cooperate" with his grandmother.

The boy was instructed to keep regular contact with his juvenile probation officer and any other community resources she refers him to, and that he adhere to a strict curfew of 6 p.m. on weeknights and 9 p.m. on weekends when unattended by an adult.

Trespass Count Is Dismissed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Wake County District Court judge Thursday dismissed a trespassing charge against the Rev. Leon White, who was arrested in March while protesting on the Capitol steps against the Warren County PCB landfill.

White, executive director of the United Church of Christ Commission for Racial Justice, was arrested shortly after he knelt on the state seal and began praying in the rain. White had led about 30 protestors to the Capitol after marching from the landfill to Raleigh.
