Drive Seeks 'Jenkins Medical Center'

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Jaycees are spearheading a petition drive to have the Pitt County Commissioners name the medical complex that includes the East Carolina University School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital the Leo W. Jenkins Medical Center.

The aim of the drive, according to co-chairman Gary Danford, is to encourage and assist the people of Pitt County in voicing gratitude for the former East Carolina University chancellor's leadership in the establishment of the ECU School of Medicine, which serves eastern North Carolina. The Jaycees say they will begin this week to provide petitions in business places throughout the county to be signed by anyone who wishes. Civic organizations will also be asked for endorsements.

The area to be designated the Leo W. Jenkins Medical Center is the area bounded on the north by N.C. 43, on the east by Moye Boulevard, on the south by State Road 1200 (the Stantonsburg Road) and on the west by the property known as Doctors' Park. Now situated in this approximately 100-acre plot are Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Brody Medical Science Building, the Eastern Area Health Education Center and the Pitt County Mental Health Center. A radiation therapy facility is under construction.

"The names of the hospital and the medical science building and others would not be changed," Jaycee project co-chairman Joel Johnson said. "This would be a designation for the whole area."

The Jaycees hope to win recommendations from the hospital board of trustees, the ECU trustees and other official boards to the County Commissioners to effect the naming, the co-chairmen said.

Jenkins is a Greenville resident who served 18 years as president and chancellor of East Carolina University. He has recently announced that he is seriously considering running for governor of North Carolina in 1984.

Bill Dansey, a proponent of the effort said, "About two or three months ago the momentum really started building to do something for Dr. Jenkins to show him in some manner how much eastern North Carolina appreciates the way he gave of himself to provide a university and a medical school for our region. I am a believer in letting people know while they're living how much they're loved and appreciated.

"We want to complete this in the near future in the hopes that Dr. Jenkins will truly realize how much his contributions to eastern North Carolina are acknowledged by us all," Dansey said.

U.S. Prepares To Ease Stand On Missiles

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, heading into a new round of arms talks with the Soviet Union, is prepared to ease its stand on medium-range nuclear missiles. But the Kremlin has already predicted an impasse and U.S. officials say a breakthrough before the end of the year is unlikely.

The talks open Tuesday in Geneva, Switzerland, and will focus on an offer by President Reagan to drop his demand for the immediate scrapping of the 600 missiles the Soviets have targeted on western Europe.

Instead, Reagan has authorized U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze to seek an interim accord — one that would sharply reduce the Soviet arsenal but not eliminate it entirely.

In return, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies would deploy an equal number of U.S. missiles, instead of the 572 cruise and Pershing 2 rockets that are scheduled to be installed by early 1988.

Nitze will approach the Soviets with "an open portfolio," prepared to bargain over the number of allowable missiles if the Soviets accept the idea of an interim agreement, said a U.S. official who asked not to be identified.

Although the Reagan administration still wants to push for the elimination of all missiles — its "zero-option" — an interim agreement is being sought as a first step to scaling down missile strength.

Reagan also has pledged to give serious consideration to an offer by Yuri V. Andropov, the Soviet leader, to use warheads as well as the number of missile launchers as the basic accounting units.

But Pravda, in an editorial Friday, called the U.S. and Soviet positions incompatible and said the two sides had not drawn closer "even by a millimeter" in the year and a half of talks in Geneva.

Despite the sour signals from Moscow, officials here expect a change in attitude once the Soviets are up against the December deployment of 16 U.S. cruise missiles in Britain and nine in West Germany.

Barring an agreement, eventually 108 Pershing 2 rockets, capable of reaching Soviet territory in about 12 minutes, are scheduled to be installed in West Germany. The 464 slower-moving cruise missiles are to be deployed in West Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands.

The Soviets consider the Pershings the bigger threat, although they are incapable of reaching Moscow.

"They don't want the Pershing deployed," said another U.S. official, who agreed to be interviewed if his name was withheld. "The only way they are not going to be deployed is if the Soviets come to us with some reasonable solutions in Geneva."

Demo Sees Budget Deadlock

Higher Interest May Return

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Budget committee said Saturday that Congress is faced with paralysis over the federal budget that could lock the government into record high deficits and send interest rates "back up to the sky."

Speaking to a Democratic Party meeting, Rep. James Jones of Oklahoma said the economy is in a pereiod of recovery but that "it is not as vigorous, it is not as bold, it is not as strong as most had hoped or projected."

Referring to the current deadlock in the Republican-controlled Senate over the budget, Jones said, "What we're facing in Congress now to a great extent is paralysis, is a stalemate."

If that continues, Jones predicted the federal budget deficit would be $204 billion in October 1984 and more than $300 billion by 1988.

With those deficits, he said, "Interest rates are bound to go back up to the sky."

Jones was one of several Democratic Party leaders attending a meeting of the party's National Strategy Council who questioned the strength of the economic recovery.

The discussion of possible alternatives to Reagan administration policies centered on the need to develop an industrial policy to boost trade and industry, to toughen trade policies toward foreign competitors and to make the tax system more equitable and provide greater incentives for investment and plant modernization.

And one senator warned that Democrats may have to give bad news to their traditional constituents, particularly organized labor.

"We have to tell unions there is such a thing as quality control," Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts told the meeting.

"The reason Honda sells well is because it's a damned good car," added Tsongas.

Another speaker, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York, predicted that the American workforce of the 1990s would be "more female, more minority and less unionized."

It was the third meeting of the party's strategy council since it was established in 1981 when the Democrats still were reeling from the Republican landslide of 1980 that swept Ronald Reagan into the presidency and gave the GOP control of the Senate for the first time in 25 years.

The discussion of how the Democrats should approach issues concentrated on the economy. There were calls for development of a new industrial policy to revitalize heavy industry, as well as a degree of protectionism to force other countries to open their markets to U.S. products.

Rep. William Alexander of Arkansas said that some people had asked him whether "the Democrats are wasting their time" in light of recent evidence of economic recovery.

But the congressman argued that the administration was ignoring trade and budget deficits, and that its failure to develop an industrial policy would choke off the current recovery.

"After a few months of modest gains in some economic indicators, the president has proclaimed that the long night of the Reagan recession is over," said Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, Democratic leader of the Senate. "Tragically, millions of Americans in many devastated regions of the country will be bypassed by the so-called recovery."

Byrd urged the party to recognize that "economic nationalism does not have to be a dirty word. Economic nationalism does not have to mean blind protectionism or economic isolationism."

Chile Arrests Hundreds

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Soldiers brandishing submachine guns seized about 1,000 people in pre-dawn raids Saturday and carted them off to soccer stadiums and police stations in apparent retaliation for the first widespread protests against President Augusto Pinochet's military regime.

An estimated 300 soldiers in battle uniforms, backed up by an estimated 300 policemen and plainclothes agents, went two shantytowns in southern Santiago shortly after midnight.

"They surrounded the neighborhood before five in the morning and ordered through loudspeakers that all men over 14 years old go to the soccer field," said a 55-year-old man from one of the shantytowns, who said he feared reprisals if he were named.

"Two hours later they let me go, but my two sons are still being held," he told The Associated Press.

Witnesses estimated 1,000 residents of the Joao Goulart and La Victoria districts went into the streets and were marched to soccer fields for identity checks. They said some were let go and others bused to police stations from the stadiums.

At midday, reporters could see several hundred boys and

And These Little Piggies Went To College

FULTON, Mo. (AP) — Although most little piggies probably would rather stay home, the truth is that most go to market. But then there's the 10 who went to college — and graduated.

The parents of Pork Chop, Hamlet, Porky, Piggy, Wiggy, Ralph, Sam, Beau, Dudley and Sweet Meat would have been proud had they seen their 11-week-old offspring honored Friday after passing a four-week course at William Woods College in Fulton.

Dr. Julian Hertzog, an educational psychology professor at the central Missouri college, required each of the 10 students in his intellectual development course to adopt a pig donated by Callaway County farmers Lester and Larry Ausfahl and to study its learning habits.

The students' grades in the course hinged on their ability to teach the pigs to respond when their names were called, to wind their way through a maze to reach food, to obey commands while on a leash, to recognize a specific shape or design and to learn tricks.

"There's nothing pig-headed about them," Hertzog said of his class, noting that other experiments have documented the intelligence of pigs. "I believe a lot can be learned from our experiments."

Friday was test time. As Hertzog, students, the college's dean of students and a commencement speaker looked on, the pigs showed they and their trainers had learned well.

Each pig responded to its trainer's call. One piglet pulled a cart, another pushed a toy tractor, and one porker dived into a child's wading pool.

Then, as bystanders hummed "Pomp and Circumstance," each pig proudly stepped foreward when its name was called to accept a cookie while Nancy Werst, dean of students, presented diplomas to the student trainers.

Medicine Health Care Is Big Business In Pitt

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Medicine is big business in Pitt County.

Before the early 1920s there was no hospital and very few doctors. The sick or injured had to be carried over rough dirt roads, or wait for trains, to go to hospitals in Kinston, Rocky Mount, Washington, Norfolk, Richmond.

Then in 1923, Drs. Charles O'Hagan Laughinghouse, Karl B. Pace, E. T. Dickerson and W.I Wooten raised $85,000 to build a 42-bed hospital on Johnston Street. Anxious to begin their work, they rented space over H.L. Hodges' store on East Fifth Street and set up a temporary hospital — with five employees — while construction work on the new facility was underway.

Pitt Community Hospital (later Pitt General Hospital) opened in 1924, and was expanded to accomodate 20 children in 1933.

A bigger and more modern hospital became more of a reality when Pitt County voters, in 1947, approved issuing $311,900 in bonds to help fund a new, county-owned facility which would be known at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

That $1.41 million facility opened on 17 acres of land on West Fifth Street in February 1951, with a medical staff of 38 doctors.

Since that first hospital opened in the 1920s, the number of patients has continued to increase; the number of physicians, nurses and other health-care providers has grown to meet the needs; and facilities have expanded to include many times more private doctors' offices, a new Pitt County Memorial Hospital with 524 beds (which opened in 1977 and now has a medical staff of 236 physicians and 100 residents); and schools of medicine, nursing and allied health professions have developed in the county to train people to give the highest quality of health care.

That means big money and lots of people.

Take the new PCMH for example. The investment in the building and land now amounts to $26.4 million dollars, and a $6.4 million expansion program is in the planning stages at the present time.

Another $7.6 million is invested in equipment at the hospital.

It's a big business. The present annual operating budget for the facility totals $77.5 million, $34.2 million of which goes directly to the 2,248 part time and full-time employees (including 1,163 nursing service personnel). Most of those people pay for housing, food, clothes and other necessities in Pitt County.

The same is true of the 750 employees (including 100 physicians and 68 nurses) of the ECU School of Medicine, which has $26 million invested in building and land and $10 million worth of equipment. Some $16 million of the school's present annual budget of $32.5 million goes for salaries.

Add that up. It's 2,998 people earning some $50.2 million from just two employers.

There are other employers — more than 45 offices in Pitt County staffed by one or more physicians in private practice who hire nurses, receptionists, bookkeepers, and who purchase services locally.

A survey of just six of those private offices last week showed a total of 67 employees earning more than $1.02 million a year.

According to officials at ECU's Regional Development Institute, the $51.22 million payroll of the hospital, medical school and the six private offices alone has an impact of some $153.66 million on the community. RDI Director Janice Faulkner said, "Every dollar in basic income turns over three times."

But that's not all. Mrs. Faulkner said, "Every new job will generate three new service related jobs" in the community.

Do you want to figure the payroll of the other doctor's offices in the county; the salaries of teachers in medically related fields at ECU and Pitt Community College; the income of physicians engaged in private practice (about 136 of them in the county); the money paid to employees of uniform shops, medical supply businesses, health insurance companies, county health and mental health department workers?

Or, do you want to figure who benefits from the services and supplies the medically relate facilities have to buy? PCMH pays about $330,000 a year for telephone service, and last year paid $1.4 million for utility service, while the medical school's phone bill runs between $2,000 and $3,000 a month. The utility bill amounts to more than $1 million a year.

The county's vast medical complex also impacts on the quality of health care that is available. County residents can now receive treatment near their home for problems they once had to travel to other hospitals for.

All the department chairmen at the medical school are recognized as leaders in their fields. Other physicians have pioneered techniques in surgery, contributed much in the field of nerve pathway research, are noted for their work related to angina chest pain.

Dr. Charles Rob, for example, at one time Winston Churchill's private physician, developed all work on early techniques in vascular surgery.

Dr. Walter Pories is editor of "Operative Surgery," an 18-volume reference text for surgeons.

Mother Shoots Gunman Who Threatened Child

LAVONIA, Ga. (AP) — A gunman ordered a woman to come out of a motel bathroom or see her child killed, so she opened the door and shot him in the head, authorities said Saturday.

The man, who was critically injured, was one of two armed robbers who broke into the room Friday night hours after robbing another family at an Interstate 85 motel, Franklin County Sheriff Joe Foster said.

Carol Patterson of Enterprise, Ala., was not injured during the shooting but her husband, James Howard Patterson, suffered a fractured skull during a scuffle when the men broke in.

The second gunman got away.

Patterson jumped one of the men when they broke in and, while he scuffled with them, Mrs. Patterson grabbed one of their guns and ran to the bathroom, Foster said.

One robber went to the door and told her to come out or he would kill her sleeping child. Mrs. Patterson "came out, but she came out shooting and she got one of them," Foster said.

The other robber escaped, but Foster said authorities "think we know who he is."

The Patterson's 7-year-old daughter, Briana Patterson, slept soundly even though half a dozen gunshots were fired, Foster said.

"They emptied their other gun back at her, but she didn't get hurt at all," Foster said of Mrs. Patterson. "One of them ran out the door and ran back in and snapped his gun at her husband, but it was already empty."

The man shot by Mrs. Patterson was taken to Talmadge Memorial Hospital in Augusta, where he was in critical condition after head surgery, the sheriff said. Authorities said they were unable to identify him and would fingerprint him.

Patterson was taken to Athens General Hospital.

The Pattersons were traveling to Washington and had stopped to spend the night at the Lavonia motel.

Foster said the robbers left a briefcase in the Pattersons' room containing jewelry, watches and cash taken in a robbery of another family at a motel in Banks County at Interstate 85 and U.S. 441.

The sheriff said no one was seriously hurt in the Banks County robbery, although several members of the family were treated at a hospital for bruises.

MIGUEL ALEMAN

Ex-Mexican Leader Dies

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Former President Miguel Aleman, who in 1946 became the first non-military head of state of modern Mexico, died early Saturday at his Mexico City home after suffering a heart attack, a government spokesman said. He was 79.

Aleman died at 2:15 a.m., said a spokesman for the president's office, Manuel Alonso. Aleman's body was to lay in state at his home until a burial scheduled for 11 a.m. Sunday in the Spanish Cemetery here, Alonso said.

Aleman was hospitalized in January at Methodist Hosital in Houston for a checkup. He was believed to have been ill for some time, but he asked the hospital not to disclose his condition.

Before Aleman took office in 1946 for a six-year term, Mexico's presidents were drawn from the military.

His administration strengthened the position of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has dominated Mexican politics for more than 50 years, and advanced Mexico toward its goal of becoming a major Third World industrial producer.

After his term expired in 1952, Aleman became one of the giants of the tourist industry and remained highly influential in Mexican politics.

Senators Discuss Slain U.S. Women

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania said Saturday there is a "sound case" against five national guardsmen charged in the 1980 murders of four U.S. churchwomen.

Specter, visiting El Salvador with fellow Republican Sen. Steven Symms of Idaho, met with Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova Saturday to discuss the case. The United States has been pressuring the government to prosecute the guardsmen and also those accused of the 1981 slayings of two American land reform advisers.

Both trials have been delayed.

Bernardo Rauda Murcia, the judge in the case involving the 1980 murders, has said he expects the trial to begin soon. The senators met the judge on Friday.

"I have studied the trial and I think there is a sound case," Specter said after meeting with the defense minister. "The exact date of a trial cannot be determined, but the case is moving forward and I think there is going to be a trial."

The victims were Maryknoll sisters Ita Ford and Maura Clarke of New York, and Ursuline sister Dorothy Kazel and lay worker Jean Donovan, both of Cleveland.

Specter said the case is very important as Congress considers requests to help the Salvadoran government in its 43-month-old battle with left-wing guerrillas.

Critics of the Salvadoran government also complain about delays in the case of the murders of Mark D. Pearlman of Seattle and Michael P. Hammer of Potomac, Md. The two Americans and Rodolfo Viera, director of the El Salvador Land Institute, were shot to death in a hotel coffee shop in San Salvador.

A judge recently dropped charges against some of the people named in that case, saying Salvadoran law prohibits defendants from testifying against one another. The judge's decision has been appealed to the Supreme Court.

Two guardsmen confessed to the crime and are awaiting trial. They claimed national guard Lt. Rodolfo Lopez Sibrian ordered the killings and planned it with the help of two businessmen.

Barbara Luce Receives Scholarship

Barbara Luce of the East Carolina University special education faculty has received an annual scholarship to complete doctoral level studies.

BARBARA LUCE

The award was given by the N.C. unit of Alpha Delta Kappa sorority, an international sorority for women educators. It is presented each year to a North Carolinian whose planned doctoral research is likely to be of help to the development of education in North Carolina.

Ms. Luce plans to research the influence of educational administrators' attitudes upon teachers, and the resulting effect upon pupils. She will begin her studies in August at the University of South Carolina, taking a leave of absence from ECU.

A member of the faculty at ECU for nine years, Ms. Luce is director of the ECU Remedial Education Activity Program. She holds undergraduate and master's degrees from the ECU School of Education.

Municipal Clerks Hold Meeting

Municipal Clerks of Pitt County, meeting in observance of "Municipal Clerks Week," heard a discussion of current activities by the North Carolina Association of Municipal Clerks. The discussion was led by Greenville City Clerk Lois Worthington, president of the state association.

Ralph Ford of Ayden, association director, explained plans for a regional meeting of city clerks. The area group offered program suggestions that will be forwarded to the program and education committees of the state association.

Attending the meeting, in addition to Mrs. Worthington and Ford, were Martha Mewborn, Bethel; Margie Tripp, Farmville; Nan Smith, Grifton; Leslie Edwards, Simpson; and Elwood Nobles, Winterville. Patricia Thigpen, deputy clerk in Farmville, was a guest.

Alumni Meeting Is Scheduled

The Grenville Industrial/Eppes High Alumni officers, members and interested persons will hold a business meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Ms. Shelia Latham, 111-B Phillips Circle (adjacent to Colonial Trailer Park). Call 757-1729 for more information.

Eppes Parade Scheduled July 2

The Eppes Industrial High School of Greenville will hold its annual parade July 2 at 2:30 p.m. The proposed route will be from West Fifth Street to the Tom Foreman Park. This year's theme will be "Westward Bound, The Bulldogs."

Sponsors are asking participants and spectators to wear western style clothing.

Senior Art Award Presented

Leslie Wilmouth of Winston-Salem, a May graduate of the school of art at East Carolina University, was winner of the Most Outstanding Senior Award in the painting and drawing area of the fine arts department.

Ms. Wilmouth is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P.E. Wilmouth of Winston-Salem. Graduating with a bachelor of fine arts degree, she is the first student to reveive the award in the new administrative department of the school of art.

Revival Will Start Monday

Revival services will begin at Winterville Free Will Baptist Church Monday and continue through Friday. Services will begin at 7:30 nightly and a prayer room will be open at 7:15 p.m.

The Rev. Ray Williamson, pastor of Gum Swamp FWB Church, will be the evangelist for the services. He will be assisted by the Rev. Ed Taylor, pastor of Winterville FWB Church.

Last Sign

Kervin Conway (right) and Agrippa Moore erect the first sign on the proposed 100-acre site for Cypress Glen Retirement Community. The sign is also the last one to be painted by Conway, who has been painting such signs in Greenville for the past 45 years. Also shown is Conway's dog, Joe Clifton, who Conway says is his secretary. Dedication ceremonies for the retirement community's site at Fourth and Hickory streets will be held Monday at 6 p.m. (Reflector photo by Angela Lingerfelt)

Painter Puts On His Last Strokes

By ANGELA LINGERFELT

As Kervin Conway hammered the last nail into a sign for the proposed 100-acre Cypress Glen Retirement Community on Fourth Street, he may have been thinking about his own retirement. After 45 years of painting signs around Greenville, this sign may be his last.

Although Conway officially retired in 1976 when he was 62 years old, he has been painting on the side and serving as an adviser for his son, Robert Conway, and a young prospective sign-painter, Agrippa Moore.

Even though Conway says the sign business has been "mighty good" to him, he has now decided to stop painting signs, settle down and spend some time with his "wonderful woman and wife, Jessie."

"I've always been interested in signs," Conway explains, "I guess my earliest recollection is of a guy in Morehead City who was painting a sign of a hotel. I laid there all day watching him paint. I never really started painting myself until I moved from Morehead to Greenville."

Conway said when he came to Greenville, he moved across the street from sign-painter John VanWaganen. He enjoyed going over to his house at night to watch him letter signs.

At the beginning of his painting career, Conway didn't get a chance to letter signs as he had watched his neighbor do.

"At first, I painted doors and windows. I wasn't very good, but I thought I was," Conway commented.

When World War II came around, Conway landed a job in Cherry Point painting signs with "six of the best (sign painters) in the state." With the exception of the three years he worked in Cherry Point, he has spent the rest of his sign-painting years in Greenville.

After returning from Cherry Point, Conway went into business for himself out of his home. He said he worked from his car mostly.

Conway eventually became successful and has now painted signs "from Baltimore to Florida" for businesses such as Holiday Inn and Stuckey's.

When asked if he had a favorite sign he had painted, he replied, "My favorite sign I painted was sitting down. When I could sit down to paint a sign, it was my favorite."

Conway added that he didn't have a particularly favorite sign because he had never painted one he was satisfied with. "If I ever paint a sign I am satisfied with, it will be the last one I ever paint," emphasized Conway.

Even though Conway is going to stop painting, he says he will "keep on doing something. To stay young, you've got to act young and keep working. I'll age but I'll never get old."

From now on Conway says he is going to spend his time trying to make his wife happy. "We're just going to ride around and do whatever we want to. We're not independently wealthy, we're just independently healthy."

Death Sentence Set By Jurors

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Phillip Lee Young has been sentenced to death after his first-degree murder conviction in the death of a former taxi driver.

Young was convicted by a Watauga County jury Thursday of first-degree murder, burglary and armed robbery in the death of John Oscar Cook, 64, in February.

Friday the same jury recommended Young be put to death. Young will also serve a 29-year sentence on the burglary and robbery convictions.

Young's conviction hinged on the testimony of two alleged accomplices.

Dwight Dale Jackson, 22, and David Presnell, 19, said Young accompanied them to Cook's house Feb. 8 to buy liquor.

'Struttin' Southern' Offers Night Of Fun

Everyone had fun at Friday's opening performance of "Struttin' Southern." Everyone, perhaps, except a few nervous performers.

With sometimes less than four hours' rehearsal for most numbers, the actors were too busy counting to remember to smile. But the audience was grinning from ear to ear as friends and relatives danced or sang through this high-stepping musical review. The show was sponsored by the Greenville Service League to benefit the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund.

With some 30 numbers in two hours, the fast-paced show left little time for regrets or rejoicing. It had everything, including commercials sponsored by advertisers who made further donations to the fund.

Despite a weak opening, the show got off the ground with the second number as Teresa Moore and company, with the help of a rear view projection screen, gave us "City Lights" of New York.

How can you resist a bunch of kids singing "Food, Wonderful Food," while wearing T-shirts advertising a supermarket? Their grandmas and grandpas loved it. Cameras flashed everywhere.

Hazel Stapelton brought down the house with her off-hand rendition of "We're In The Money," backed by couples doing a near slow-motion Charleston.

When Janey Ferguson sang "Hard-Hearted Hannah" with her authentic Southern accent, it put Yankee renditions to shame.

No show of this kind is complete without guys in wigs and long dresses. For sheer bravery, these feather-boa'd boys deserve a mention: Gerry Anders, Ed Janosko, Wayne Kendrick, Herb Perry, Al Ferguson, Arch Manning, Bob Sheffield, Wayne Mercer, Jeff Smith, Jim Lewis, Jim Carter, James Hudson, Dick McKee, Leon Moore and Percy Cox. All "10's".

Norwin Pierce, with flawless timing, then sang to the real thing — "Girls, Girls, Girls."

Former Mayor Don McGlohon, his partner and others, one-two-three "Waltzed Away" in costumes that were less striking than those in the rest of the show.

Without a doubt the star of the evening was Carolyn Ipock. She all but walked off with the show giving a solidly professional performance of "Irma La Douce."

Comic relief was provided throughout by Mary Wesly "Izitmyturn" Harvey, whose patience was tried by director Don Imperator. Imperato managed to convince her, however, that she had a place somewhere in the show.

Act II again started on a low note, but by this time, the audience knew there was better stuff ahead. Sure enough, on came "Broadway Babies" to make up laughs with their creative bodyworks.

"They're Playing Our Song" with Bonnie Isaccson and Allan Jones, gave us a good taste of the musical by the same name that will be playing in July at the ECU Summer Theater. Jeff Krantz finally hit his stride in the simply-staged but beautifully sung number, "I Write The Songs."

In "The Big Finish," Tu Tu Queen, Mary Wesley Harvey, finally gets her big moment and whirls dizzily across the stage in front of the ballon-clad chorus, singing "It's not where you start, it's how you finish, and you're going to finish on top." And the cast of "Struttin' Southern" proved it. And all for a good cause.

River Marina Would Serve Boat Interests

As we've remarked in this space before, Pitt County is populated by thousands of people who enjoy boats.

A recent report from the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission showed 4,008 boats with gasoline engines registered in the county. There are also sailboats and canoes, rowboats and boats powered by electric motors.

With all this interest in boating — plus an old waterway (the Tar River) — it's pretty much a foregone conclusion that one day there'll be a commercial marina to serve the thousands of current boating enthusiasts and future enthusiasts.

Some years ago, local use of the Tar as a freight route carried with it enough interest to establish a Port Authority. The port's facility did see an infrequent barge tie up, but the idea died.

Still the river is there; people do cruise on to Washington and from there can make their way to any point on the Atlantic coast. Most, we'd assume, would be satisfied just cruising to fishing spots, or the sounds where regattas and races and skiing competition or just partying are seasonal highlights.

Any way you look at it, a good docking and storage facility would be welcome to a lot of people. So, too, would be a nearby outlet for supplies and fuel and equipment ... to say nothing of rentals and sales outlets.

Someday those things are going to be accepted as a matter of course. They are part of the scene in a multitude of large and small communities with easy access to water. It will happen here, too.

Increased Demand For Pitt Services Face Tight Budget

Pitt County is a growing and prosperous county, but with that comes new demands on county services.

The Pitt commissioners are hearing that now as they consider the budget for 1983-84.

One request for additional funds came from Sheriff Ralph Tyson who is asking for an appropriation of $971,609 for the coming fiscal year compared to $755,247 this year. The sheriff is asking for 10 additional people and he noted an 11 percent increase in crime this year. "Sometimes it's impossible to follow up on the cases that we have," he told the commissioners.

Most would agree that more sheriff's department staff is needed. Yet the commissioners are having to balance limited funds against the increased needs of the sheriff's department as well as other agencies of the county government.

The commissioners hope to keep total spending about the same next fiscal year as for this year at $23 million, and that means hard decisions will have to be made about any increases in county services.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

The Waffle House has a sign among many on the wall. It says that patrons not wearing shirts will not be served.

Late one recent night a young man ran across the highway from a nearby motel. He had on no shirt or shoes.

He took his place at a counter seat and the waitresses were soon in conference.

"I'm sorry," one told the potential customer as she pointed to the sign. "No shirt, no service."

The young man left without a fuss and ran back across the highway. Soon he was running back. This time he was dressed impeccably — coat, neatly tied tie ... and even shoes.

He got his order.

Mrs. Cora Streeper commented on the opossum column and wondered if it were her 'possum.

We didn't know, and she went on to explain that a white baby 'possum took up at her mother's house on Cotanche Street. She didn't know what to feed it and finally settled on Parker's barbecue, which the 'possum ate with relish.

Finally the 'possum disappeared.

No one else had seen the 'possum, and white ones are rare, so Mrs. Streeper settled on the name Harvey (after the imaginary rabbit of Broadway and movie fame).

Anyway her sister called one night to say the white 'possum, Harvey, was barring the way to the garage door and thus she was convinced it existed.

Where Harvey is now no one knows. Even though the newspaper office isn't far from the Redditt home, we can say the 'possum which occupied our back door tree wasn't Harvey. Our 'possum was the run of the mill variety.

The U.S. Air Force had its first flight to cross the Atlantic with an all-female crew last week. The huge C-141 had a seven-member flight crew and the plane's pilot described it as fairly routine, although she said she was "a little nervous about the attention."

That's not surprising. The news report said 11 journalists, two Air Force publicists and a five-member medical team made the trip with the crew.

With all those people looking over the pilot's shoulder it is a wonder the flight was routine.

Paul T. O'Connor — Spending Isn't Winning

RALEIGH — For all the hoopla last year about the amount of money spent on North Carolina congressional races, the state had only one of the 30 most expensive campaigns in the country.

A survey of Federal Elections Commission reports by The New York Times shows that Bill Cobey of Chapel Hill was 22nd in spending for the U.S. House races. Cobey spent $683,917, the Times reported, in his unsuccessful bid to take 4th District Rep. Ike Andrews' seat. Cobey's loss was one of the biggest shockers in recent state political memory because Andrews was convicted of drunken driving less than a month before Election Day.

Of the top 30, Cobey and seven other candidates lost. Adam K. Levin of New Jersey, a Democrat, was the top House candidate spender. He paid $1.65 million for the privilege of getting beat. The top spender in Senate races, Mark Dayton, a Minnesota Democrat, also lost. He spent $7.7 million.

Cobey was in the Legislative Building recently and he refused to ascribe his defeat to his large campaign treasury. Many political observers think he turned the electorate off with his high volume of TV ads. He said he lost because he failed to turn out the Republican vote.

Sen. Bill Reman, R-Iredell, ought to know better than to invest his money across party lines.

Redman likes to play the stock market and he's apparently pretty successful, usually. So, a couple months ago, when Rauch Industries of Gastonia went public, he bought 1,000 shares at $11. The firm is owned by Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gastonia.

The very day Redman bought the stock, it dropped $2 in price. Hence, a $2,000 loss for Redman, on paper, in just a few short hours.

A few days later, when the two senators were informally debating a legislative issue, Redman was overheard jokingly telling Rauch, to "go home and run your company, I mean, our company."

The stock market went up a short time later and his stock is now worth its original price.

The legislative staff is doing some bragging these days. One of their own has gone to glory.

Carl Franks, who was a part-time legislative security guard for three sessions, is burning up the new U.S. Football League as a running back for Tampa Bay. The youngster studied at Duke and impressed the staff during his working hours as "a fine Christian young man. Just the nicest fella," one staffer said.

James J. Kilpatrick — We Get What We Pay For

SCRABBLE, Va. — The National Commission on Excellence in Education released its report on April 26, and a week or so later the board of supervisors of Rappahannock County met to consider our local budget for the public schools. The board proceeded to cut the requested school budget by $116,000, which made the appropriation for 1983-84 about $28,000 less than the appropriation for the current year.

The figures are of little interest beyond the borders of our Blue Ridge Mountain county, but I suspect our local supervisors might well go by the name of legion, for they are many. Across the nation, with a few gratifying exceptions, our public school systems have squandered the legacy of community support they once enjoyed.

The commission's report already has faded from the news columns. For the record: The commission found that our schools are drowning in a rising tide of mediocrity. An estimated 23 million American adults today are functionally illiterate; they cannot pass the simplest tests of reading, writing and numbers. The average achievement of high school students is lower than it was at the time of Sputnik 26 years ago.

The commission made a series of recommendations: Course requirements in basic instruction, notably in mathematics and science, should be strengthened. Textbooks should be upgraded. School districts should strongly consider 7-hour days and a 200- to 220-day school year. Teachers should be required to meet high educational standards and should be paid accordingly.

Our county has a population of 6,093. we have only two schools — an elementary school with 644 pupils and 38 teachers, and a high school with 470 students and 26 teachers. Relatively speaking, ours is a poor county. Most of the lifelong Rappahannockers are small farmers, living off their cattle and their apple orchards. In recent years a substantial number of affluent outlanders have moved in, but most of the are retired couples with no children of school age. The younger newcomers tend to send their children to a private school near Flint Hill.

Our county supervisors are lifelong Rappahannockers. They identify with the small farmers and they accurately reflect the attitudes of their constituents. These constituents abhor higher taxes, and while they care for their public schools, they don't care for them very much. In point of fact, our taxes are embarrassingly low: A $400,000 property pays $800 a year in real estate taxes.

Here in Rappahannock, a teacher starts at $12,192; after nine years the salary goes to $14,548, and after 17 years to $17,594. Few of the teachers stay here for more than four or five years. We are blessed with several devoted teachers who love the county and love the children, but for the most part we get about the level of instruction we pay for.

Does all this sound familiar? My guess is that in hundreds of school districts the same condition exist. A general apathy is intensified by hostility to higher taxes. The legislators in charge of adopting a school budget are not passionately concerned about the findings and recommendations of national commissions. Our local school board had asked for an additional teaching position, so that another instructor in math could be employed. The idea was to require three units of math, instead of two, for graduation. Such an additional requirement had no appeal to our supervisors. They denied the request, and they saved the $12,000.

If the recommendations of the national commission are to be widely adopted, local governing bodies will have to appropriate more money for the schools. Teachers cannot reasonably be expected to teach for 200 days at the salaries now being paid for 180 days. But I venture the suggestion that more money isn't the whole of the answer. Over the past 10 years Americans have more than doubled their annual expenditures for the public schools, from $70 billion to about $182 billion, and the quality of education is no better. It is worse.

The pathetic — indeed, the dangerous — level of our public schools will not be lifted until parents and taxpayers rise up in wrath and voice a politicaly overwhelming demand for improvement. This has to be done locally, county by county, city by city. More money eventually will have to be provided, but bold leadership comes first. I don't see it in the Blue Ridge Mountains. I don't see it anywhere.

Nicholas Tatro — Syria

Even though Secretary of State George P. Shultz is confident that Syria eventually will withdraw its troops from Lebanon, President Hafez Assad's government has reasons to maintain the status quo at least for now.

By keeping 50,000 troops either inside Lebanon or poised on the border, Syria can in the short term pressure the fragile Lebanese government of President Amin Gemayel to grant Damascus similar security guarantees to the ones Israel obtained in the U.S.-mediated agreement.

In the long term, Syria also:

—Keeps in check Israeli forces in Lebanon. Ambushes are claiming Israeli casualties almost daily, and those losses are building impatience in Israel that Syrians believe could lead to a pullout even without a corresponding withdrawal by Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

—Prevents Lebanon from becoming a stable pro-Western country that could join with Jordan, Egypt and Saudi Arabia in forming a moderate alliance that would reduce Syria's influence in the region.

—Protects Syria's "soft underbelly" from a flanking attack by Israel that could sever the highway linking the capital of Damascus from industrial and agricultural centers in the north.

A more optimistic forecast has been made by some U.S. officials who argue that by agreeing to withdraw from Lebanon, Syria would get the Israelis out of artillery range of the Syrian capital. The nearest Israeli troops are now only 20 miles west of Damascus in the Bekaa Valley.

"I am confident in the end that will happen," Shultz told reporters in Washington of the prospects for a pullout of Syrian and Palestinian forces.

Shultz argued that the moderates in the Arab camp supported the Lebanese-Israeli terms for withdrawal and that Syria would find it hard to resist such pressure.

Syrian officials, who have criticized the U.S.-mediated withdrawal pact but not slammed the door on a pullout, say Syria's main condition is that Israel not be rewarded for its invasion last June with an agreement that paves the way for normalized relations between Israel and Lebanon.

They fear such relations would encourage King Hussein of Jordan and possibly other moderate leaders to join Egypt in making peace with Israel.

In this strategy, Syria appears to be encouraged by Moscow, which urged PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and Assad to reject Reagan's Sept. 1 peace plan for the Middle East. They seek to block the U.S. strategy of using a Lebanon agreement as a springboard for an American-brokered settlement of the overall Arab-Israeli conflict.

Many observers believe the Syrians, backed by the Soviet Union, will hold out until they are guaranteed that their influence in the area will be undiminished and until a role for the two countries is assured in any future peace negotiations.

Moscow, embarrassed by the beating Soviet hardware suffered at the hands of the Israelis in last summer's fighting, poured in millions of dollars worth of replacements and added Soviet advisers and advanced anti-aircraft missiles. The aim was to shore up Syrian confidence and prevent renewed warfare by increasing the stakes.

The risk is that if Israel attacks Syrian forces, even in Lebanon, they could kill Soviet advisers and trigger a direct Soviet involvement in the fighting. With U.S. Marines and other NATO troops stationed in Lebanon, such a conflict could bring Soviets and Americans into a direct confrontation.

Even though the threat of renewed warfare in the Middle East is real, observers believe that most of the recent Syrian and Soviet warnings are saber rattlings designed to insure that Syria gets what it wants in the bargaining that lies ahead.

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer — Bill

WASHINGTON — For some members of Congress, old wars never die.

Colorado's junior senator, William Armstrong, is one who feels that way about Vietnam. At the price of punishing Vietnamese civilians, he wants the United States to tighten its economic embargo on the Hanoi regime.

Armstrong has introduced legislation (Senate bill 747) that would prohibit cash transfers from anyone in the U.S. to friends and family in Vietnam. So far, hearings on the bill have been neither held nor scheduled. Despite private oppostion from the National Security Council, however, an Armstrong aide said that the bill could become a rider to the Export Administtion Act revision now in Senate committee.

In the minds of Armstrong and others, a currency restriction would force Hanoi to all but eliminate its steep import duties on care packages sent by Vietnamese exiles. (According to Richard Walden, whose Operation California is a major conduit of humanitarian aid to Vietnam, the package trade amount to about $60 million per year from the United States alone.) It would also, supporters believe, expedite Hanoi's action on remaining POWs and MIAs, alleged use of Vietnamese labor in Siberia and the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea (Cambodia).

Unfortunately, Armstrong's thinking is flawed. Hanoi's surcharges on selected goods — cosmetics and blue jeans, for example — are far surpassed by the black market prices for such items. As the Washington Post reported recently, many Vietnamese families simply arrange with black market merchants to underwrite the tariffs in return for a percentage of the goods. It's doubtful that a halt of cash transfers will put much of a dent into this Rube Goldberg manifestation of an economy.

More likely, a prohibition would endanger the lives of many Vietnamese who depend on cash from abroad to buy essentials on the black market. Despite free health care, for example, understocked Vietnamese hospitals often require patients to buy their medicines elsewhere.

This hazard, as well as a possible threat to the fragile-but-successful orderly departure program for Amer-Asian children, cannot be ignored in the name of playing rough with the commies.

Laos will soon allow U.S. officials to inspect selected areas where American military aircraft crashed during the Indochina war. In return, the U.S. is expected to upgrade diplomatic relations between the two countries to include an exchange of ambassadors.

Only coincidental? Just as the National Commission on Excellence in Education was calling recently for dramatic measures to improve the quality of American teachers and studsnts, a computer company was issuing press kits boasting the benefits of computer-aided learning.

Largely due to administrators' fears about potential legal and budget implications, approximately 40,000 public schools remain to be inspected for possible asbestos contamination, witnesses revealed to a House subcommittee recently. Unless Congress moves to beef up the Environmental Protection Agency's field staff, they said, many children will remain exposed to the once widely-used fire retardant. The EPA estimates that, to date, between 100 and 7,000 American school children have suffered excessive exposure to asbestos.

More taxes? This summer the Supreme Court will rule on the case of Prasynski vs. the United States, in which a federal district court in Wyoming decreed that the windfall profits tax on crude oil is illegal. Should the High Court uphold the ruling, the U.S. might have to repay American oil companies as much as $100 billion. American taxpayers would undoubtedly bear the expense, which may be one reason why the budget-conscious Reagan administration is actively defending the tax.

To the editor:

To Mr. Martin and other lawmakers who feel the death penalty law of our state should be debated in our State House of Representatives. We wholeheartedly agree it is past time to debate it. The state currently has 31 individuals on death row, put there after being judged guilty by due process of law, appeal after appeal, and expenditure of countless hours of work and thousands of dollars.

Until Dec. 23, 1982, we read the paper and listened to news reports of many of these heinous crimes. Our thoughts were, "how terrible. We really need to do something about all this crime," only to have forgotten about it five minutes later. It was happening somewhere else to someone else.

On Dec. 23, 1982, in the storage room of a business establishment in Winston-Salem, someone in cold blood took a 20-guage shotgun, put it to the head and neck of two young people and pulled the trigger — all for some $2,500 — much less than the cost of one cocktail party at the Governor's Mansion.

One of the victims was our only son.

Some 60 days later someone was charged.

We have been brought from unconcerned, uncaring darkness to light. What will it take to wake up our governor, our politicians, our lawmakers? Will it be necessary for their sons to be blown away, their daughters to be raped, judges' heads to be bashed in, lawyers to experience such pain and heartache, and our jurors to be subjected to such crimes. All of us are guilty. We allow a few people assisted by a civil activist group to govern us. They go their way robbing, murdering and raping. We work hard to catch them, sentence them, and then keep ourselves busy building plush holiday hotels for them to lounge in and watch color TV, since in our age of affluence it is inhuman treatment to have them bush the roadways. If we, the law-abiding citizens, don't wake up and wise up, the uninhibited, uncaring and undisciplined few will eliminate us.

To the editor:

How hard it is when you've already messed up so many times, especially when you don't feel good about yourself. I dropped out of high school in 1977 when I was a junior. I got married at age 16. At this date I'm no long married nor a high school dropout. I will soon be graduating from college — on May 26. The last three years of my life have been the greatest.

I started to Pitt Community College in June 1980, shortly after graduating from high school. I went into the human service curriculum, which relates to mental health. It provided me with growth and development and helped me to find myself.

I've lived alone for the past three years, meaning away from parents. Out of all the decision about my life I've made myself, I've not made one I've regretted yet! Now I've made mistakes, but there hasn't been one that I haven't learned from. Had it not been for mistakes, I might not be where I am today. During my three years of school, I've also had to work at a job full-time. Being a student and a worker is hard, but I've succeeded.

Sad! I applied for nursing at PCC last year, wasn't accepted. If you want something bad enough, you'll work for it. I've just received my letter saying I am accepted this year. Anyhow, when I didn't get accepted last year, it gave me a goal to work for. So to me, graduation is only a beginning. I am very proud of myself and all the p ple in my life who have supported me through it all — m parents, friends and teachers and administrators of programs at PCC.

Many older people say wistfully: "I wish I were your age again. I'd do thing differently." Would they rea Is this just another case of the greener grass elesewhere? It ems to me they must have set their courses knowledgeal and determinedly, at least on the basis of the standar that prevailed, standards they accepted. Does one ever really reach a point where he can no longer change his way? It would seem to me that the door is always open to higher goals, to a better life — unless one lacks the courage or the faith to make a change. Thanks to all for not letting me carry weights that weren't unnecessarily heavy.

To the editor:

Dr. Sarah Morrow, speaking at the migrant health conference on April 28, opposed House Bill 684 which establishes the crime of involuntary servitude. Briefly Dr. Morrow's reasons were: Suppose a farmer learns, at the time that the crops are ready for harvest, that his crew leader is holding someone against his/her will ..."; or "The fines are too severe on the firm or corporation convicted of involuntary servitude"; or "How could a farmer prove his innocence when his crew leader, trying to lessen his own guilt, accuses the farmer of also being responsible?" (When reminded that U.S. law holds that a person is innocent until proven guilty, She smiled, saying that we both know that this is not the way things really are.)

I was shocked that the secretary of the N.C. Department of Human Resources, an agency serving the marginated of our society, could and would diminish her own human dignity by denying or rationalizing away the human dignity of another who will fall victim of slavery. I hear Dr. Morrow (by opposing the bill) saying that slavery is permissible under certain conditions, namely: when the crops are ready to be harvested, or that the victim is one of the marginated of our society, and that as long as the person who ultimately has the power to stop slavery in this state is not held accountable for being KNOWINGLY and WILFULLY involved.

The proposed House bill reads in part: "Any person who KNOWINGLY and WILFULLY employs any person with the knowledge that the employee is holding others in involuntary servitude..." With this wording, I can't understand how anyone who considers slavery an evil can oppose this bill. Innocent farmers cannot be hurt by this bill; it can help restore their reputation. Only farmers who KNOWINGLY and WILFULLY hire a crew leader who enslaves people will have any cause for concern.

Budget Process May Be Buried

WASHINGTON — Even as Senate Republican leaders struggled to pass their budget resolution against solid Democratic opposition, word seeped out of the administration that President Reagan might well ignore the version finally enacted — effectively burying the congressional budget "process."

According to well-placed officials in the administration, a compromise congressional budget resolution embodying none of Reagan's goals would be the same as no budget resolution at all. Nor is there any current sign of last year's intense concern that a breakdown of the "process" would ruin financial markets. Thus, the 1982 chain of events that transformed tax-cutter Reagan into taxincreaser Reagan is not in sight for 1983.

The only genuine concern about the process comes from Senate and House members whose status in Congress depends upon the process. Consequently, the attempted systematic congressional control over spending begun with such high hopes in 1974 is bankrupt.

David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), appears unwilling to man the barricades to save the budget process. Stockman may well have played the last card of this year's budget hand during last month's well-publicized Cabinet session when he predicted economic recovery will be aborted by out-year budget deficits if the budget process derails.

That led indirectly to the Senate Budget Committee's Republican chairman, Sen. Pete Domenici, joining with the Democratic minority to send to the floor a resolution calling for a $15 billion tax increase this year. In that remarkable move, Senate GOP insiders saw Steve Bell, Domenici's staff director, working hand-in-glove with Stockman.

With this seeming to put the president's economic program in jeopardy, conservative business lobbyists came down on Domenici with a vengeance. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce targeted "key resource people" back home in New Mexico on the budget chairman. Robert Thompson, the Chamber's interim national chairman, engaged in a conversation with Domenici described as sizzling.

The result was an about-face by Domenici that took anti-tax House Republican leaders by surprise when they confronted his new attitude at a White House leadership session. He agreed to a two-year resolution calling for virtually no higher taxes that achieved none of Stockman's deficit-lowering goals but did not breach Reagan's anti-tax dike.

That put the burden on Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker to corral at least 51 of the 54 Republican senators for the new Republican version, but the entire exercise is viewed with something less than breathless anxiety inside the administration. Even if the Republican version passes the Senate, the Senate-House conference to resolve it with the House resolution (calling for a $30 billion tax increase in Fiscal Year '84) consists of budget committee members determined to save the "process." Any "compromise," therefore, is likely to couple a hefty immediate tax increase with no new spending reductions.

That culmination would be no more congenial to Stockman than to tax-cutting supply-siders who have become his arch-enemies. Since the out-year (Fiscal 1986) tax increase that was Stockman's last deficit-reducing hope is out of the question, the OMB director has seemed to retire from the game.

The talk from OMB as well as elsewhere in the administration is that the president might well ignore the end product of the laborious budget process, opposing any Fiscal 1984 tax increase mandated by budget resolution. To conservatives in Congress, that only confirms the bankruptcy of the process that in the past decade has coincided with massive increases in federal spending and deficits.

Last summer's insistent White House drumbeat that financial markets demanded a congressional budget resolution is sounded this year only by the pleaders for high taxes. "We will really have chaos out in the markets" without a resolution, insists Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, the Budget Committee's senior Democrat.

Domenici agrees with Chiles, but conservative Republicans on the Budget Committee — led by Sen. Bill Armstrong of Colorado — do not. They perceive an irrelevant choice between a meaningless resolution and one mandating recovery-killing tax increases. Unlike last year, the Reagan administration seems to agree.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although evidence of recovery from the recession dominates the economic headlines, unemployment continues to be perceived by Americans as the most urgent problem facing the nation.

In the latest (mid-April) Gallup survey, 54 percent cite unemployment as the nation's top problem, three times the 18 percent who name inflation or the high cost of living as most urgent. Other concerns in the forefront of voters' minds are fear of war, mentioned by 11 percent, the poor shape of the economy in general (8 percent), and excessive government spending (5 percent).

The proportion of the public who now feel unemployment is the greatest cause for national concern has slipped by eight percentage points since October, when 62 percent said joblessness was the most pressing problem.

As in past surveys, unemployment is cited more often by Easterners and Midwesterners than by persons living elsewhere in the nation. However, the percentages are lower now than in October in all geographic regions, as shown below:

Most Important Problem
(Percent naming unemployment)

	April	October
NATIONAL	54%	62%
East	56	62
Midwest	62	71
South	47	58
West	49	58

Blacks, unskilled workers, persons whose formal education ended at the high-school level and Democrats continue to regard unemployment as a more serious national problem than do persons from different backgrounds.

The proportion of voters citing the possibility of war as the greatest national problem, though still at a relatively low level, has grown significantly, from 3 percent in October to 11 percent in the current survey. Among 18-to-24-year-olds, fear of war is more acute, mentioned by 19 percent, making it second only to unemployment (58 percent) as the most pressing national problem.

Fear of war is not restricted to young men, many of whom would be eligible for a possible military draft. In fact, 21 percent of women 18 to 24, compared to 17 percent of men in this bracket, name the chance of war as the most important problem facing the U.S.

Democrats Better Able To Handle Problems

In the latest survey, 41 percent of all voters say they believe the Democratic Party is better able to deal with the problems they consider uppermost while 20 percent name the Republican Party. Another 39 percent perceive no difference between the parties or don't express an opinion. The 21-percentage-point advantage now held by the Democrats over the Republicans is the greatest difference between the parties recorded since October 1977. At that time, the Democratic Party enjoyed a 38-to-14 percent lead over the Republican Party, a 24-point advantage. As recently as October 1981, the Republicans held a small but significant 32-to-29 percent edge over the Democrats on this "issue barometer."

Debate On Babies

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Imagine a hospital nursery full of gurgling, bright-eyed newborns — except one.

That other baby was born handicapped, suffering from a physical deformity that will surely kill it unless doctors operate. But the mother is still repulsed by the sight of her abnormal child, and she doesn't want the baby.

She orders the doctors to cancel the operation and remove the intravenous tube feeding the child. The baby wastes away, and within days there is another crib open at the nursery.

This story was fiction, but a real child known to the world as "Baby Doe" suffered a similar fate in Indiana last year. Now two House members want to make sure North Carolina doesn't have its own Baby Does.

Reps. Sam Beam, D-Gaston, and Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, have introduced a bill forbidding hospitals receiving state aid from withholding nutritional sustenance or life-saving medical treatment to a handicapped child. The bill will be debated this Thursday in the House Human Resources Committee, which Mrs. Brennan chairs.

"There's nothing on our General Statutes that says an infant has a right to food and water," Beam explained recently. "The emotion reaction right after such a birth is that the parent might say 'I don't want that child.' We don't think that decision should be taken that early.

"So if it's a case where you have to have food and water, we think you ought to provide it," he added. "And then if the parent wants the child, OK. If not, then the state should take care of it."

Mrs. Brennan said she views the bill almost as a infant protection law.

"What I see happening is that we're allowing people to make life and death choices for infants where, if they were at home, they'd be charged for murder," she said. "...It scares me to think we care so much about humane treatment of animals and then have this attitude about children."

Beam and Mrs. Brennan make a relatively odd couple in the Legislature. Beam is a nurse and former rest home operator from Cherryville who is valued for his opinions on health care and the aging. Mrs. Brennan may be a grandmother, but she has distinguished herself as the Legislature's expert on day-care centers.

Beam believes in death with dignity for the elderly, but said handicapped infants are a different case. Mrs. Brennan supports abortion, but believes in infants' rights once a child has been born.

The Baby Doe case that inspired Beam to draft the bill started in Bloomington, Ind., when a baby was born with Down's Syndrome (a chromosonal disorder also known as mongolism). The parents told physicians to withhold feeding the infant.

An area prosecutor asked the Indiana Supreme Court to intervene, but the court said it didn't have the authority to order that feedings resume. The baby died shortly afterward.

Steve Morisette, lobbyist for the North Carolina Hospital Association, said his group considers the bill to be vague and wrong on principle.

Nation's Lawyers Are Feeling Growing Pains

NEW YORK (AP) — Ethically and financially, from sex discrimination to high technology, the nation's lawyers face new trials and tribulations in court, on campus and in their own offices.

Many of those problems are due to the growth of the legal profession, according to participants in a wide-ranging American Bar Association seminar here Thursday.

That growth prompted criticism last month from Harvard University President Derek Bok, himself a lawyer and former dean of the Harvard Law School. He said too many gifted students are going into law instead of other fields.

"Far too many of these rare individuals are becoming lawyers at a time when the country cries out for more talented business executives, more enlightened public servants, more inventive engineers, more able high school principals and teachers," Bok said.

There are 612,593 lawyers practicing in the United States at last count, up from 465,000 five years ago. American law schools turn out about 30,000 new lawyers every year.

"Are we supposed to say bright people are not supposed to come into the legal profession?" Harry J. Haynsworth IV, a University of South Carolina law professor, said. Other participants at the ABA seminar said society must pay higher salaries for those other professions.

"The problem is not the legal profession," Richard Allen of Chicago, the editor of the ABA Journal, said. "The problem is how society wants to reward and use the best and the brightest."

A new survey by the ABA Journal, the monthly for the association's 350,000 members, said their median income is about $57,000 a year.

William R. Hudson, whose 200-year-old Philadelphia firm of Rawle & Henderson is the oldest in the country, said inflation and increased reliance on computerization have raised the average lawyer's annual break-even point to $70,000 a year in legal fees.

He warned of ethical dangers as more lawyers use public relations and advertising to compete for business.

For instance, Hudson said, Pennsylvania's ethics code prohibits lawyers from claiming legal specialties. Yet in a news release, Rawle & Henderson's New York public relations firm described him as a specialist in corporate and securities law — a possible violation of the ethics code. "And I told them not to do that," he said.

Lawyer advertising was rare until six years ago, when the U.S. Supreme Court said states could not flatly ban it. Since then, legal ads have become common in newspapers and, in some states, on radio and television. Hyatt Legal Services alone spent more than $2 million on television commercials last year.

One of every seven lawyers in the ABA survey buys advertising, and a similar number said they use public relations firms.

Lumbees Found Precedent In Bandit

When a band of Lumbee Indians broke up a Ku Klux Klan rally near Maxton the evening of Jan. 18, 1958, some historians gave a lion's share of the credit to Henry Berry Lowry, leader of an outlaw group of Lumbees which kept Robeson County under a reign of terror during Reconstruction days.

Historian W. McKee Evans wrote that, after a group of about 100 well-armed Klansmen set up their microphone and an electric light bulb on a truck bed, the Indians surged forward shouting, "We want Cole!" (The Rev. James W. "Catfish" Cole, the Klan grand wizard). The Lumbees began firing their rifles in the air; a sharpshooter shot out the light bulb. Cole and the Klansmen fled, leaving the Indians in sole possession of the field.

Evans, a Robeson County native, who won his Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said the young Indians who routed the Klan "had been nurtured on the stories about the exploits of Henry Berry and his men."

"Some of them undoubtedly could have related what had once happened at Wire Grass Landing — when Henry Berry, alone, came swimming down the Lumber River, using his canoe as a shield, firing over the edge as he came, until at last a detachment of 18 militiamen, panic-stricken by his boldness and marksmanship, had fled from their position."

When Capt. Charles McRae and his men arrived at militia headquarters after their ignominous retreat, they found that other detachments in a series of raids had captured several prisoners, including Henry Berry Lowry's wife, as well as the wives of three other members of the Lowry outlaw gang. The four women and other prisoners were lodged in jail at Lumberton.

The Lowry gang bided its time for three days. As the authorities and armed citizens were continuing a feverish search to round up the outlaws, Henry Berry, his brother, Steve, and brothers-in-law, Andrew and Boss Strong, appeared at the plantation of John McNair and informed him they had come for breakfast which was promptly served.

After eating, Henry Berry told his host to go to Lumberton and tell the sheriff that if their wives were not released "by Monday morning (three days later) ... the bloodiest times will be here that ever was before — the life of every man will be in jeopardy." On the day set by Henry Berry, the sheriff and other civil authorities capitulated and freed the women without consulting Col. Eli Wishart, the militia commander who was later slain by the outlaws.

The Lowry's outlawry possibly could be traced back to 1835 when the North Carolina General Assembly had deprived the Indians along the Lumbee River of the rights to vote and bear arms. As a result of these and other discriminations, many of them tended to side with the North when the Civil War broke out. Their Northern sympathies were intensified during the war when the Confederate authorities conscripted many young Indians near Lumberton and packed them off to fever-devastated Wilmington.

Many of the young Indians, including Henry Berry, and his brothers began hiding out in the swampy woods near Lumberton to avoid such service. With so many Indians "lying out" in the woods, there was not enough growing corn. They got so hungry that the Lowrys shifted from a policy of subsisting on their poor kinfolk to one of living off the affluence of their white neighbors. In pursuit of this policy, the Lowrys raided the fields of a wealthy neighbor, James P. Barnes, and killed two of his finest hogs. Barnes' protests brought ill feelings that culminated in the Lowry band ambushing the white man.

The Lowry gang then turned its attention to a Confederate official they detested even more: James Brantley Harris, a white merchant and liquor dealer who served as the local Confederate conscription officer. After Harris had slain three of their cousins, the gang ambushed his buggy with a barrage of gunfire that killed him. Two weeks later they raided the Robeson County Courthouse, where they seized arms and ammunition intended for the local militia. For provisions, they began a series of raids on the more prosperous planters.

In retaliation for these raids and the deaths of Barnes and Harris, the local Home Guard company was reorganized

During the decade that followed, Henry Berry and his men terrorized the Robeson County countryside, robbing and killing. Twice Henry Berry was arrested and lodged in stout jails. Each time he escaped.

Although the other members of the Lowry gang were killed one by one — some in battle with the militia, some by bounty hunters and one by hanging — Henry Berry was never apprehended again: he simply disappeared. No one ever came forward to claim rewards totaling upwards of $18,000 which the state and county offered for his arrest — dead or alive.

Philadelphia Downplays Race In Mayor's Contest

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The battle for the Democratic mayoral nomination between a white former mayor and his favored black opponent dominates Philadelphia's primary election Tuesday, where race is visible but deliberately downplayed.

In the wings, however, looking toward November, are three men fighting for the Republican nod. Although outnumbered 5-to-1 in voter registration, Republican leaders here believe a splintered, possibly racially divided opposition gives the GOP its best chance since 1941 to recapture City Hall.

"Race will always be a factor, but as far as being the issue, I think we are beyond that in this campaign," said Democratic candidate W. Wilson Goode, who served three years as city managing director under retiring Mayor William Green and is seeking elective office for the first time.

Frank L. Rizzo, who served two terms as mayor in the 1970s but was barred by the city charter from seeking a third consecutive term, agreed that race hadn't created the divisiveness that afflicted Chicago in its mayoral campaign this spring.

"It's not happening here," said Rizzo, a law-and-order cop for 30 years before he became police commissioner and later mayor.

"We're two Americans trying for the highest office in this city, and you'll not hear me mention race," said Rizzo, struggling to catch Goode who is running as much as 20 points ahead in some of the published polls. "This is the City of Brotherly Love. Race and religion don't mean a thing. I wish we were both American Indians."

Goode, too, said Philadelphia's campaign didn't resemble Chicago's, in which a black mayor, Harold Washington, was elected for the first time.

"We are 1,000 miles apart and different in 1,000 ways," Goode said, insisting that the issues were leadership and who could best unify the city, bring in new businesses and provide a lot more jobs.

Already the campaign is the most expensive primary in city history, with Rizzo reporting having raised $2 million and Goode $1.5 million, and the three Republicans together more than $1 million.

Four minor candidates on the Democratic ticket are expected to spend less than $100,000.

Rizzo has launched a $200,000 television blitz in the primary's closing days aimed especially at undecided voters, estimated by pollsters at about 20 percent of the Democrats who planned to vote.

Goode will spend $100,000 for last-ditch TV spots, while spending nearly half of his remaining campaign time in white neighborhoods. Rizzo's campaign stops late last week included a nightclub in a black neighborhood, and his commercials included one that emphasized racial harmony.

Seeking the GOP mayoral nomination are former U.S. Rep. Charles Dougherty; former city controller, state legislator and professional basketball player Thomas Gola; and Philadelphia Stock Exchange President John Egan, the party-endorsed candidate who left the Democratic Party to enter the race.

The Democrats claim about 880,000 registered voters, their largest registration ever, according to city party chairman Joseph Smith, a former congressman and a Rizzo supporter.

Leaders of the city's registered Republicans, who number 177,000 or 16 percent of the city's 1.1 million registered voters, express little concern that they've fallen to their lowest level ever. They note instead that more than 25,000 of their number registered as Democrats to vote in the primary.

Blacks make up 45 percent of the Democratic registration, their largest signup in history, and Goode is counting on collecting at least 95 percent of their votes, plus a good portion of white voters in Rizzo's strongholds in the Jewish and Catholic northeast and among Italians in south Philadelphia.

Smith, however, said he believed Rizzo would win in a tight race.

"You can see the enthusiasm building throughout the northeast, the river wards, and South Philly," Smith said. "I also think there will be a good number of votes for Rizzo in the black communities."

"If we get out the vote there's no way we can lose," said the 62-year-old Rizzo. "I'll tell you why we're going to win. Compare my record with that of my opponent, who has no record."

Rizzo, never forgetting he spent most of his working life as a police officer, like his father before him, is also highly critical of the city's crime rate, and recent charges of police corruption.

He pointedly ignores that when he was mayor the federal government filed a lawsuit charging that the Philadelphia police were brutal and used excessive force in some arrests, violating the civil rights of citizens, which Rizzo denied. The lawsuit was dropped after Rizzo left office.

Goode, who supervised the police department as managing director, said he would not condone either corrupt or brutal officers and rejected Rizzo's efforts to saddle him with responsibility for the record of the Green administration.

"He is trying to make me into a public official that I was not," said Goode.

"You have to set a moral tone that says what's wrong is wrong, and anybody that sticks their finger in something illegal will be fired and prosecuted," he said. "I intend to set that tone as mayor."

Washington's Support Divided

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Washington thought 668,176 votes gave him the power to run the nation's second-largest city. But Chicago's first black mayor came up five votes short.

After a three-way primary and a general election — both of which were supposed to decide who would rule the "city that works" — the former congressman has found himself up against an Old Guard faction of the City Council that won't buy his reform program.

The result is what has been called "government by chaos," with shrill City Council meetings in which aldermen have accused Washington of trying to run Chicago as a "dictator" by sending police officers to their homes at midnight with messages from the mayor.

Although Washington has been in office for less than a month, the battle lines have already been clearly drawn. The Old Guard, led by Cook County Democratic Party Chairman Edward Vrdolyak, has the support of 29 of the council's 50 members, including some newcomers. The mayor has lined up only 21 — 16 blacks and five independent whites.

That leaves Washington five votes short of a majority — a shift of five aldermen would split the council 26-24 in his favor — and without a free hand to carry out his promises to dismantle Chicago's notorious patronage system and reform the city's Democratic politics.

But although the Old Guard has a majority, it, too, finds itself short in votes — without the 34 needed to override mayoral vetoes and absolutely control the city.

It is an old-fashioned political war in a city accustomed to such politics. The stalemate already has caused one council meeting to drag on for hours because the feuding factions could not muster the votes either to act or adjourn. At another meeting, two spectators nearly came to blows.

"It's a basic struggle for power, and the outcome of these decisions will affect the entire four years," says former independent Alderman Dick Simpson, who worked on Washington's transition team. "It's not just a matter of personality or those kinds of superficial issues."

Chicago is organized under a weak mayor form of government, with most power reserved for legislative oversight. But since the days of the late Mayor Richard J. "Boss" Daley, the council has been little more than a rubber stamp, and the mayor has held absolute sway over the city's 30,000 jobs and $2 billion budget.

Those days of iron rule are over, says the Old Guard, which struck three days after Washington took office last month. When Washington walked out after adjourning his first session with a quick gavel May 2, Vrdolyak's faction seized the opportunity to reorganize the council to its liking.

"We want the responsibility to organize our own body," says Vrdolyak, titular head of the city's political machine, which gave Washington only half-hearted support in his 48,520-vote victory over Republican Bernard Epton.

Washington's analysis: The reorganization plan is illegal, and the rebel uprising is a "nervous reaction to the prospects of reform."

Independent political strategist Don Rose concurs that resistance to reform is "the strongest ingredient" in Chicago's impasse. "People who have the power fear they're going to have it diluted...," he says. "They're afraid of losing their patronage, potential contracts."

Washington may have gotten himself into the predicament by dealing away the trump card past mayors have used to control recalcitrant alderman — patronage jobs.

In his inaugural address, Washington assailed former Mayor Jane Byrne for padding the payroll with 11th-hour appointees, expressed alarm about an "enormous" city financial crisis and pledged a job freeze and budget cuts.

The next day he said he would give up 20 percent of his $60,000 salary to help the city — and also move quickly to rid the payroll of as many as 540 patronage workers added in Mrs. Byrne's final weeks.

"He dealt away his most important bargaining chip when he said there'd be no patronage," said Alderman Roman Pucinski, a former congressman and a Vrdolyak supporter.

But Rose says there's another factor in the political war — race. The reorganization split the council along racial lines, stripping black aldermen of powerful committee assignments and naming 26 white chairmen out of 29. In turn, traditional black machine aldermen have switched allegiance to the mayor, with Simpson saying they're afraid of losing their power base.

Rose says the black-white council division continues to inflame the racial tensions that arose in the general election campaign.

In recent days, both factions have been trying to negotiate a settlement in private peace talks. Nevertheless, both sides have asked the courts to determine whether the council realignment was proper; a ruling is due Monday.

But most agree the clash will end only in a compromise.

Former D.A. Is Favored To Win In Denver's Race

DENVER (AP) — A former district attorney who has failed twice to oust the incumbent has emerged as the favorite in the six-way race for the job Mayor Bill McNichols has held for 14 years.

The latest polls show McNichols' long-standing opponent, Dale Tooley, with a substantial lead before Tuesday's non-partisan election.

The administration of McNichols, 73, a Democrat and son of an Irish immigrant, has been compared with that of Chicago's late Mayor Richard Daley, including charges of cronyism and ineptitude.

The slogan of Tooley, 49, is a pointed reference to criticism of McNichols: "No Special Favors — Just Good Government."

Tooley, a Democrat, has conducted a low-key campaign based on improving the job base and fighting crime, and said of his third try, "Everything just feels right this time."

David Fogel, the former Denver Democratic Party chairman, says that despite the polls, a defeat of McNichols would be quite an upset.

"You have to remember the city is in pretty decent shape. It is run pretty well, it's grown incredibly under McNichols," he said. "The problems ... are not earth-shattering.

"I guess there are people who would like a more dynamic leadership," Fogel said. "But this is the most powerful job in Colorado. You are talking about knocking off a king."

Also running is Federico Pena, 35, a lawyer and former state legislator, who is bidding for the Hispanic vote.

Four other candidates, all of them trailing substantially in the polls, are former state legislator Wellington Webb, two-term state Democratic Party Chairman Monte Pasco, independent Steve Schweitzberger and Socialist Workers Party member Harold Sudmeyer.

A runoff between the two top vote-getters will be held June 21, unless one candidate gets 50 percent of the vote plus one.

McNichols says of the criticism that his younger opponents expect to "step in there in the mayor's office and wave a wand and do all the things in the world."

Marijuana Ring Is Broken

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal agents arrested 13 people and were hunting for 12 more allegedly involved in a ring that distributed an estimated $100 million worth of marijuana annually in six states, the U.S. attorney says.

Twenty-five people were charged after a year-long inquiry in which authorities uncovered an "extremely sophisticated" effort involving pilots, bookkeepers, couriers, distributors and marijuana imported from Colombia, U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said.

The two alleged ringleaders, John M. Araneo and his brother, Kevin, whose hometowns were not disclosed, were charged with conducting a continuing criminal enterprise and could draw a life sentence if convicted, Webb said.

He said the 25 people charged are from Illinois, Florida, New Jersey, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kansas. Thirteen are in custody and the others are being sought.

Watergate Pardons Rejected For Hunt, Magruder

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan denied pardons to convicted Watergate figures E. Howard Hunt and Jeb Stuart Magruder at the same time he pardoned Watergate burglar Eugenio R. Martinez, administration officials said Saturday.

The officials said in each case Reagan followed the recommendation of the Justice Department's pardon attorney.

One official, who was involved in the decisions but declined to be identified by name, said Martinez was pardoned because "he truly was an ordinary burglar with no knowledge of broader crimes. The others were involved in wider activities."

Martinez, 60, was one of seven men originally charged in the Watergate break-in that triggered a scandal leading to President Richard Nixon's resignation two years later. Martinez pleaded guilty to conspiracy, burglary and wiretapping and served 15 months in prison before his parole in 1974.

Hunt, 64, was a member of the White House "plumbers" unit and served as lookout during the the break-in at the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate complex in Washington on June 17, 1972. Hunt had recruited Martinez and three other Cubans he had worked with previously during his career with the CIA.

Hunt pleaded guilty to conspiracy, burglary and wiretapping in the Watergate break-in and served 32 months in prison before his parole in 1977. He was granted immunity for testifying about his role in the 1971 break-in at the Los Angeles office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, psychiatrist to Daniel Ellsberg, the former Pentagon official who leaked the Pentagon Papers.

Magruder, 48, was deputy director Nixon's re-election committee and pleaded guilty to conspiracy, admitting that he had helped plan the Watergate burglary and lied both to the Watergate grand jury and at the original trial as part of the cover-up. He served seven months in prison before his release in 1975.

Reagan did not announce his decisions, which were made Wednesday. Acting Justice Department pardon attorney David C. Stephenson disclosed the Martinez pardon in response to questions Friday night. On Saturday, deputy Justice press secretary Arthur Brill disclosed the denial of pardons for Hunt and Magruder in response to questions.

Explaining the Martinez pardon, Justice press officer Judy Pond said, "Aside from the Watergate connection, there was nothing unusual about this. Martinez has been shown to be an excellent community member since his release."

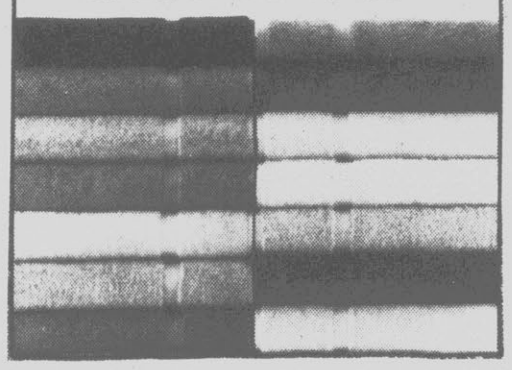

Martinez, now leasing manager of a Miami car dealership, thus became the first man convicted in the scandal to win a presidential pardon.

Of dozens convicted or involved in Watergate, Nixon has been the only other person to receive a pardon. President Gerald R. Ford pardoned Nixon shortly after he resigned although he had not been charged with any offenses.

Vandals Deface Stonehenge

SALISBURY, England — Vandals on Saturday sprayed soccer slogans in blue paint on five of the ancient monoliths at Stonehenge, a mysterious prehistoric circle of altar-like stones that is one of Britain's top tourist attractions.

Two men were being questioned by police in connection with the incident at the monuments on Salisbury plain in Wiltshire.

The slogans, in six-inch high letters, say "PFC," the initials of Portsmouth Football Club, "Pompey," the club's nickname, and "Kick to Kill Pompey."

A custodian at the monuments, which date back to 2,100 B.C. and which archeologists believe may have been built by ancient astronomers, said only time will tell whether the paint could be removed.

He noted that a slogan painted 15 years ago was still visible on wet days and that another painted four years ago saying "free the ponies" had also resisted chemical removers.

Veteran Celebrates Anniversary

EPHRATA, Pa. — In 1944, Bertha Brossman Blair promised her dying father that she would stay with his telephone company as long as she could.

Still keeping that promise, she celebrated her 70th year with the Denver and Ephrata Telephone Co. last week, saying she has no plans to retire.

"My mother and father taught me that whatever you do, you should do it well, and I've always tried to follow that," said Mrs. Blair, president and chairman of the board. She turns 92 in September.

Violence Breaks Out Again

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland — Youths hurled rocks, bottles and gasoline bombs at police early Saturday in a second day of street violence in the Roman Catholic Bogside district of Londonderry. Police said there were no injuries or arrests.

Early Friday, about 70 youths bombarded security patrols and set fire to several vehicles. Police fired plastic bullets to disperse the youths, but there also were no injuries or arrests reported.

Police said they did not know what sparked the latest violence. A spokesman said the Bogside had been tense since May 5, the second anniversary of the death of hunger-striker Bobby Sands.

Sands was the first of 10 Irish nationalist guerrillas to starve themselves in Belfast's Maze prison in 1981 in an unsuccessful bid for political prisoner status.

Blacks Told To Become Involved

RICHMOND, Va. — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, speaking at a conference sponsored by the National Black Leadership Roundtable, called on blacks Saturday to work toward getting more involved in the U.S. economy and the business sector.

Jackson, the founder of People United to Save Humanity, emphasized the importance of black involvement in the business sector in terms of running franchises, obtaining distributorships and owning businesses.

Jackson told the conference at Virginia Union University here he would kick off his southern crusade for voter registration and voter enforcement in Raleigh, N.C., on Sunday.

Astronauts Test Equipment

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Three of the astronauts chosen for next month's space mission joined specialists in an equipment test aboard shuttle Challenger, Kennedy Space Center officials said Saturday.

Spokesman Jim Ball said the test gave "crew members the opportunity to inspect crew equipment in the cabin and check out equipment to be used during the flight." Things went "just fine," he said.

Pilot Frederick Hauck and mission specialists Sally Ride and Norman Thagard flew in from Houston for the test. They returned to Johnson Space Center Saturday, Ball said.

Sharon's Son Is Injured

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon cut short a visit to the United States Saturday after his son Omri, a 19-year-old soldier, was injured in a car accident in Tel Aviv, Israel Television reported.

It said the car in which Omri was traveling collided with a taxi at 3 a.m. Saturday and the young man suffered hip fractures, but his life was not in danger.

The former defense minister spoke to the National Press Club in Washington on Friday.

Peace Conference Ends

BERLIN (AP) — Peace activists from around the world ended on Saturday a six-day conference called to oppose the deployment of U.S.-built nuclear missiles in Western Europe later this year. Conference organizers said the event was attended by 3,000 delegates from 25 countries.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to begin deploying 572 medium-range Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe unless the Soviet Union agrees to reduce the number of new missiles it has stationed in Eastern Europe.

New Veterans Cemetery To Open

WOODBRIDGE, Va. — The Veterans Administration, running out of burial space for the nation's veterans, will dedicate a new cemetery Sunday on what was once 725 wooded acres of the Quantico Marine Base.

Thirty-five miles south of the nation's capital, the property has the capacity for 353,000 grave sites.

N.C. State Awards Degrees To 3,300 Graduates

By The Associated Press

Bill Monroe, producer of NBC TV's "Meet the Press" offered hope during commencement exercises Saturday to some 3,300 North Carolina State University graduates who will soon enter the nation's job market.

"I would guess that in 100 years from now historians will look back and call it America's greatest century," Monroe told the graduates and about 10,000 others at Reynolds Coliseum.

The United States still is the most productive country in the world, he said, noting that the nation has survived Vietnam, Watergate and the stranglehold of the OPEC oil cartel.

Monroe told the graduates the country has its share of problems, but "a superpower is nothing if not a magnet for super trouble." He also said the national will have a "great, pluralistic future."

N.C. State officials, who granted a total of 3,536 degrees, said more degrees were awarded this year than before in the school's history.

In other commencement ceremonies across the state, the University of North Carolina at Wilmington awarded degrees to 808 students. Dr. Stephen J. Wright, former president of Fisk University and former president of the United Negro College Fund, was the speaker.

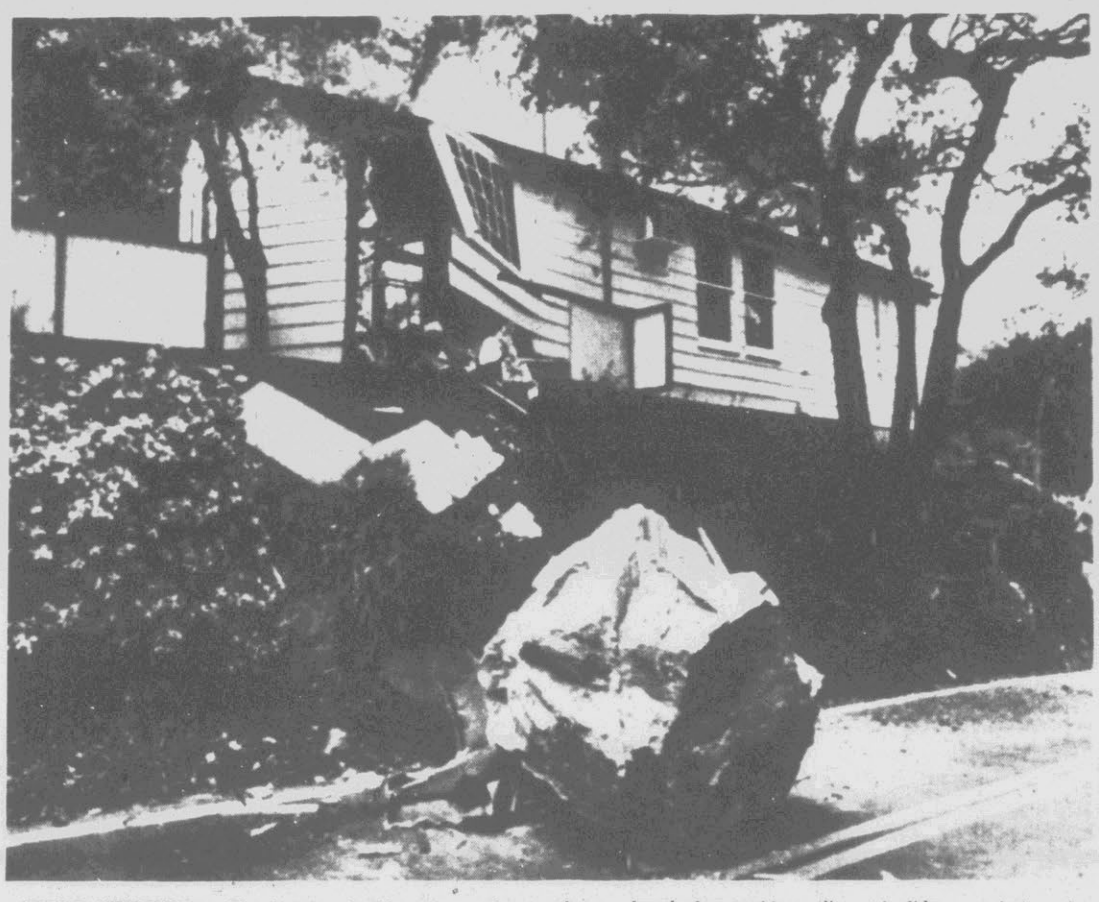

Peace College granted 197 associate degrees as Wendy Sue Cox, student body president, gave the commencement address.

Ninety-one associate degrees were awarded at St. Mary's College, where Judith von Seldeneck, president of Diversified Search Inc., addressed graduates.

Southeast Baptist Theological Seminary presented 195 degrees as Dean of Faculty Morris Ashcraft spoke to graduates.

About 1,850 degrees were awarded at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Dr. John Hope Franklin, James B. Duke, professor of history at Duke and Janet Hobbs, outgoing president of the student body delivered commencement addresses.

On Friday, commencement ceremonies for 171 students at the University of North Carolina at Asheville were moved indoors for the first time in 20 years because of rain. The guest speaker was John G. Coli, president and chief executive officer of Akzona Inc.

HOUSE WRECKER — The four-ton boulder shown above rumbled down a hillside and crashed into a $150,000 home near Silverado, Calif., after it was loosened by winter rains. The home, already damaged by earlier rock slides, was destroyed. Geologists started checking the hillside two weeks ago after one large boulder slid down the canyon. (AP Laserphoto) men still waiting in the stadiums for security agents to check their identity cards.

The Santiago military command called the army-led operation a search for "subversive and common delinquents" and for arms and explosives that it said had been used against the police. The written communique did not say what the soldiers found.

The two shantytowns were the scene of clashes Wednesday between police and demonstrators taking part in the first nationwide protests against the regime since it came to power nearly 10 years ago in a coup against the late Marxist President Salvador Allende.

Six labor unions that organized the "Day of National Protest" called the demonstrations a peaceful appeal for dialogue between an authoritarian regime and critics demanding greater political freedom. They vowed to repeat the protest once a month.

Responding to the protests with characteristic toughness, police shot two people to death and arrested 350 others during the street marches. Interior Minister Enrique Montero threatened legal action against further demonstrations.

Pinochet then signed a decree that banned news broadcasts and comment by Radio Cooperativa, an independent network, saying its reporting on the protests "created the sensation of an artificial climate of agitation."

Thousands of Chileans registered their discontent Wednesday by blowing car horns, banging pots together inside their homes and keeping their children out of school.

The nature of the protest made it hard to judge claims by Rodolfo Seguel, leader of the copper miners' union, that 70 percent of Chile's 11 million people took part. Absenteeism was at least 70 percent in some Santiago schools.

The din of horns and banging pots was heard for more than an hour Wednesday night in both rich and poor neighborhoods of this capital city, recalling the pot-banging demonstrations by housewives that preceded the 1973 coup against Allende.

After the coup, many Chileans were willing to overlook Pinochet's harsh campaign against leftists because he also brought relative prosperity through free-market policies that attracted foreign credits and consumer goods.

Riding the crest of an economic boom, the army general won 70 percent voter approval for a 1980 constitutional proposal to keep him in power until 1989 and possibly longer.

Pinochet's popularity slipped, however, when the world recession hit Chile's economy, cutting the national product by 14 percent in 1982 and pushing unemployment up to 25 percent. The results of government-sponsored Gallup polls that had given Pinochet high ratings became secret last year.

Former supporters who had hoped for greater participation in a transition to constitutional democracy have turned against Pinochet, saying only a broader-based government can solve the economic crisis.

Man Booked For Shooting Spree

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A man who barricaded himself in a house for 28 hours with an array of weapons and shot and wounded his mother and daughter while drinking heavily has been booked on two counts of aggravated assault.

Ohmer "Bobby" Cox, 52, was put in jail Friday night when he could not make the $100,091 bond.

Cox began shooting Thursday after an argument with his wife, police said, and kept the siege going as he drank more and more alcohol.

But after Cox surrendered Friday, "his wife and he came in here, arm and arm like two little love birds," Lt. Roy Tabor said.

The standoff ended when Cox's brother convinced him to give up. Another daughter and three grandchildren, ages 2, 6, and 10, hid in a closet for 2½ hours before they could dash to safety.

Up to 40 police officers surrounded the house at times and neighbors were evacuated.

Cox had moved furniture to the front door for a barricade, and had a high-powered rifle, a shotgun and a pistol, Police Chief Cliff Heap said.

Friends and neighbors said the trouble started when Cox, an unemployed mechanic and painter, argued with his wife, Janice. A neighbor said she persuaded Cox to free his wife and his mother, Odell, 69, before police showed up. His mother received a minor hip wound from a ricocheting shotgun pellet.

Cox also released his daughter, Debbie Williams, 29, who owns the one-story frame house. She was hit in the shoulder by a pellet.

Maj. Sam Burns, the chief of detectives, said a phone call by Cox's brother convinced him to surrender.

"He just talked to him like a brother," Burns said. "He told him he loved him."

Capt. Robert Merolla, head of the police department's Special Response Team, said Cox apparently began sobering up and "the alcoholic content of his body was coming down to normal. He was more rational; he had convinced himself that he didn't want to get himself hurt."

Heap said it was decided early not to rush the house or fire tear gas because Cox posed no public threat and time was on the side of police.

"We are apparently dealing with an alcoholic who is in an alcoholic state, and who has a large quantity to drink still with him," Heap said at one point during the standoff.

Several radio and television stations carried live broadcasts from the neighborhood but stopped after becoming concerned that Cox was using them.

"As we got deeper and deeper into the story we asked the question, 'Was what we were doing contributing to the situation?'" said Andrew Pontz, news director at television station KTBS.

'Spruce Goose' Goes On Display

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Thousands lined up Saturday to get the first gander in 36 years at the Spruce Goose, the wide wooden seaplane commissioned by late billionaire Howard Hughes during World War II that flew once, then was hidden away until now.

"They're calling it the oh-my-God plane because everybody, when they first see it, says, 'Oh my God!'" said Gerry Huckaby, spokesman for Wrather Port Properties which owns the plane and the adjacent Queen Mary yacht-hotel.

The Spruce Goose, 219 feet long with a 319-foot wingspan, was unveiled for public viewing inside its domed display hall. The building, 415 feet in diameter and 130 feet tall, is the world's largest free-standing dome, Huckaby said.

Between 8,000 to 10,000 people showed up for the grand opening of the exhibit, which cost some $12 million to prepare, Huckaby said. He predicted the day's total turnout would reach 20,000. Tickets cost $6 for adults.

"We were hoping we would be so successful in terms of the crowd that we'd regret it," he said. "There's so many people out there it's almost impossible to keep ticket lines straight ... They're just pouring in."

The festivities began with an airshow over the harbor featuring vintage aircraft from both world wars, and the release of 9,000 red, white and blue balloons. Actor James Stewart, Long Beach Mayor Tom Clark and Wrather Corp. Chairman Jack Wrather shared ribbon-cutting honors.

"It's quite an experience for me, and it looks like it's going to be a wonderful thing in years to come for people to see," said Stewart, who knew Hughes and remembers the seaplane's only flight.

The eccentric billionaire commissioned the Spruce Goose as a World War II troop and armor carrier, but the government didn't order it into production.

On Nov. 2, 1947, Hughes launched the seaplane on its only flight, a 60-second, 1,700-yard flight cruise 70 feet above Long Beach Harbor. Afterward it was locked in a heavily guarded hangar for decades until it was moved to the domed exhibit hall.

Huckaby said the eight-engine, 200-ton plane cost at least $25 million to build — $18 million from the government and some $7 million from Hughes.

The aircraft is mostly of birch and plywood, with scarcely any spruce.

Huckaby said it was dubbed the Spruce Goose in 1947, when a senator charged during a congressional hearing "that it was nothing but a spruce goose meant to funnel money into the Hughes Aircraft Co."

"Hughes then replied that if it didn't fly, he'd leave the country and never come back. Four weeks later he flew it," he said.

Recalling that day, Stewart said, "Nobody knew exactly what was going to happen, and that was one of the wonderful things about it. My bet was that he (Hughes) was going to take off, fly across the country, land in the Potomac and turn the plane over to the government."

But after the short flight, the Goose never flew again. Huckaby said any possible U.S. need for huge seaplanes was eliminated by construction of many airfields around the world during World War II.

In the ensuing years, 300 employees worked on the flying boat, adding an auxiliary hydraulic system, new throttles and engines. But in 1962 the Spruce Goose family was cut to 50 workers.

When Hughes died in 1976, the seaplane almost was chopped up for kindling. It escaped when Hughes Aircraft Co. officials donated it to the Aero Club of Southern California for loan to the Wrather Corp.

Wachovia BankLine℠

Now, a prearranged line of credit up to $25,000, at a preferred rate of interest based on the prime.

Wachovia BankLine is a way to increase your personal financial resources by $2,500 to $25,000, without making a special trip to the bank when you need money. You just write a BankLine check. And the interest you pay is tied to the Wachovia prime rate.*

If your line of credit is:	Your interest is:
$10,000 or over	Prime + 1%
$5,000 to $9,999	Prime + 1½%
$2,500 to $4,999	Prime + 2½%

*The BankLine prime rate for May, 1983 is 10%.

Right now BankLine is just about the least expensive loan source you'll find. Your interest rate is determined by the size of your credit line, so you pay the same low rate no matter how much you borrow.

You can save interest by repaying quickly, or choose from several repayment options.

Since it's all prearranged, you have absolute discretion and control over when and how you use the money. Just write a special BankLine check. And there are no fees, so it costs you nothing unless you use it.

Your Personal Banker can help you decide whether BankLine is right for you. Even if you're not a Wachovia customer, ask a Personal Banker about BankLine. It's a better way to borrow money.

Wachovia Bank & Trust

Under present North Carolina law, 17.99% is the maximum that can be charged for loans of this type. If the law should be changed, the 17.99% annual percentage rate ceiling of BankLine loans would be subject to change. There is a minimum annual percentage rate of 8%.

Shakers, Inventors Of Things That Endure, Face Extinction

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

CANTERBURY, N.H. (AP) — They created the clothespin, the flat broom and the slat back chair, simple things that worked and endured, like the people who made them.

But now the Shakers face extinction. They are down to eight people, two villages and one disagreement: whether to let their 200-year-old religion live or die.

At the Canterbury village in New Hampshire, the two ruling eldresses of Shakerism live in an acropolis of colonial American architecture surrounded by fragrant forest and farmland.

They have closed the Covenant, the Shaker membership book, and locked it in a safe. It was a reluctant decision, but a firm one.

"It does make me sad. I'd like to see every village just in full bloom," said 88-year-old Eldress Gertrude Soule, her blue eyes surveying the empty white buildings that once were home to 400 Shakers. The only Shakers living here now are the eldresses and Sister Ethel Hudson, 86.

"The physical aspects of Shakerism will die, but the spiritual things will never die," said Eldress Bertha Lindsay, 85.

The religion is trying to survive 100 miles northeast of here, where five surviving Shaker sisters also live in tidy white buildings on a hillside of farmland and forest at the Sabbathday Lake village in Maine.

These Shakers consider membership still open, and they have allowed four new believers to call themselves Shakers. One of the new Shakers is Theodore Johnson, a village resident for 24 years.

"Everyone has come to believe that it is best to let those in New Hampshire go their way and do their thing and we will go our way and do our thing," said Johnson, 51, a portly man with a full white beard.

The two groups stifled their dispute long enough to file a lawsuit recently in Albany, N.Y., to keep a $1.2 million minor-league baseball stadium from being built in Colonie, N.Y., next to the cemetery where Shaker founder Ann Lee, who died at the hands of a mob in 1784, is buried.

A state judge dismissed the case last week, but the Shakers said they would appeal. Construction continues on the stadium.

Ironically, the Shakers' internal disagreement comes as interest in their simple, elegant handicraft and devout, celibate life is resurging. Twelve Shaker museums in the eastern United States expect record numbers of visitors this summer.

"The world is beating a path to their door," said Charles Thompson, curator of the Shaker museum at Canterbury for 25 years. Last summer, 18,000 visitors from all 50 states and 30 foreign countries signed his guestbook.

The Shakers, formally the United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearing but nicknamed because they trembled with emotion while praying and singing, grew from a humble settlement in upstate New York in 1774 to 6,000 members and 21 communities from Florida to Maine in the 1850s.

But their numbers dwindled. Their vow of celibacy was partly responsible, but times were changing and fewer people were attracted to communal religious societies.

The Shaker membership had grown by taking in young orphans, many of whom joined the sect. But the states began operating schools and homes for orphans, and the Shakers' pool of new members evaporated.

In 1957, when the Shaker sister handling finances died, the sect discovered it was worth several million dollars, much of it from the sale of villages at Hancock, Mass., and Colonie.

About two dozen Shakers remained, none hardy enough to work the land at Canterbury or Sabbathday Lake.

"We were all getting older," Eldress Bertha said. "We hadn't had any applications in many years, but we wanted to keep our doors open so people could visit our homes."

So they hired attorneys and financial consultants, and set up a trust to protect their money and preserve the villages in Maine and New Hampshire. Then they closed the book on new members.

About that time Theodore Johnson came to Sabbathday Lake to write a book on the Shakers and soon decided he wanted to join.

The sisters in Maine were eager to have him; they wanted to keep the village alive. They opened the door, and today Sabbathday Lake is the only operating Shaker village in the world.

The younger members in Maine cull firewood and wood pulp from the 1,900 acres of pine, birch and maple trees. The land also produces apples, cherries, vegetables and herbs. The herbal teas are sold in specialty shops as far away as New York City.

Free Housing Offered Families

PACIFIC, Mo. (AP) — Government officials Saturday offered six months of free housing to 28 families being moved out of a trailer park where tests showed dioxin levels 1,100 times higher than considered safe.

But residents of Quail Run Mobile Manor — including three families who already fled dioxin-tainted Times Beach — listened with skepticism, saying shelter was only one of many needs that would arise from the evacuation.

Officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency told the families of the park, in Gray Summit in Franklin County, that they could be moved immediately into a hotel at government expense.

"We are prepared at this point in time for those of you who wish to to meet with our staff this afternoon to get into transient housing," said Bob Bouffard of the agency. "All of this is going to be free of charge."

Bouffard said the next step would be to find more permanent living quarters for the residents. He said his agency was able to offer the residents up to six months of free housing under federal emergency powers.

The action came after the Environmental Protection Agency announced Friday that the highly toxic chemical byproduct was found in about half of 150 soil samples taken at the scenic trailer park 40 miles southwest of St. Louis.

The highest level is about four times higher than any found in Times Beach, a town of 2,400 where the government has offered to buy out all homeowners and businesses.

"I got moved out of Times Beach, now you've moved me out of Quail Run," Steve Blair told the meeting Saturday. "I'm still waiting for my money for Times Beach and it's been a real long time."

Dioxin was originally found at the park in March, but new samples found the highest levels in soil under a paved road.

"It's most fortunate that the highest levels were found underneath a pavement seal," said Art Spratlin, deputy director of the EPA's Kansas City regional office.

But he also said that test results showed dioxin present at levels up to 150 parts per billion along the shoulders of the park's only road, 12 parts per billion in some yards and at low levels in some of the trailers themselves.

Federal officials have recommended cleanup at sites where dioxin was found at a level of only one part per billion.

Vandals Behead Church Statues

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Vandals beheaded statues of the Virgin Mary and built bonfires with stacks of hymnals and prayer books in three attacks on Catholic churches here last week.

Police believed the vandalism was the work of the same people — two young men and a girl wearing a parochial-school uniform — but authorities had not been able to trace the trio by Saturday.

In the first attack, a statue of the virgin was smashed and a fire set on the main altar last Sunday at Queen of Apostles Church in San Jose. A ring of devotional candles was left burning around the demolished statue.

"It kind of gave you the impression of a ritual," the church's pastor, the Rev. Richard Fry, said.

At mid-morning Wednesday, a church employee saw two men running from Santa Clare's Catholic Church with a length of pipe and a stick.

Inside, many fires were burning, fueled by prayer books and hymnals. The head had been knocked off a life-size statue of the Virgin Mary, and another religious statue had been smashed.

The Rev. Martin Rock said the fires caused about $10,000 in damage, while repairs to the statues would cost several hundred more.

Shortly after the attack at St. Clare's, the two men and the girl stood up in the middle of an afternoon service in Our Lady of Peace Church in Santa Clara and knocked the head off a statute of the virgin. About 30 parishioners sat stunned as the three fled.

Eastern To Offer Bonds

MIAMI (AP) — Virtually all of Eastern Airlines' 39,000 employees will be asked to accept part of their salaries in bonds that eventually can be converted into stock, company officials say.

The program could save Eastern hundreds of millions of dollars and help the ailing Miami-based carrier regain the favor of its lenders, officials said.

If the banks do not agree to release more funds from Eastern's credit line, the airline could run out of cash by the end of June, officials said.

Last week, the Air Line Pilots Association recommended that its 3,980 members at Eastern accept the stock-for-salary program.

In lieu of $54 million to $74 million in pay raises scheduled for this year and next year, the pilots would receive debentures that pay 5 percent interest and eventually could be converted to common stock.

One ALPA leader said the pilots might eventually own as much as 21 percent of Eastern's stock, but company and union officials say that can't be estimated.

As originally structured, the debentures could not be converted into common stock until 1986, and then only 25 percent of the total issue. Similar blocks could be converted in 1987 and 1989.

School Equipment Smashed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three children smashed equipment, broke windows with baseball bats and splattered walls with paint and glue during a $15,000 vandalism spree at their school, authorities said Saturday.

"I guess they didn't like going to clay class," police Sgt. Christopher West said.

An unidentified 11-year-old girl and two unidentified boys, ages 10 and 12, were under investigation of felony vandalism after the spree about 9:30 p.m. Friday inside the 93rd Street Elementary School, said Mel Brown, assistant chief of security for the Los Angeles Unified School District. They were released into their parents' custody.

Brown said damage was "pretty extensive" and estimated the cost at between $10,000 and $15,000.

The children apparently entered through a window and used baseball bats to break windows, televisions, typewriters, clocks, film projectors and other equipment, Brown said. File cabinets were toppled.

About nine of the school's 40 classrooms were damaged, said Tom Ward, a security watch commander for the district. Brown said the children spent 35 to 40 minutes in the building before a silent alarm was noticed by two security agents, and youngsters were captured as they tried to flee.

School district investigators plan to interview the children within the week and seek restitution from their parents, Brown said.

Attempt Fails To Divert Lava From Mount Etna

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Experts exploded a half-ton of dynamite on Mount Etna early Saturday in hopes of making a river of lava flow into a special canal. But nature rebelled, the molten rock just oozed and steamshovels may be brought in to finish the job.

The explosives experts tried to destroy a dam that was built to check the lava flow, and to divert enough of it to keep the main stream from mountain villages. After the explosion, parts of the dam were still standing and the lava appeared to be keeping to its course.

Etna, Europe's most active volcano, looked like a science fiction movie set Saturday. Spotlights flickered in the brilliant orange-red glow of steam hissing from the lava and helicopters circled overhead with blinking blue lights.

The final preparation for the blast was heralded by flares and a bugle call. Journalists, officials and dozens of vulcanologists from all around the world were herded into wooden bunkers with bulletproof glass about 300 yards from the dam.

Suddenly, at 4:09 a.m., there was a quick flash of red and white, then billowing smoke and then three low pops.

For minutes nothing was visible as the crowd waited in silence for the smoke to clear.

Slowly a thick red wave oozed though the swirling sulfurous cloud.

"It's an absolute success," said a beaming Civil Defense Minister Loris Fortuna.

But as time passed and the lava flow never picked up steam, the initial enthusiasm dwindled.

Professor Renato Cristofolini, a leading vulcanologist who helped plan the unique venture, walked closer to the canal with a glum look over his face.

"It's not exactly what we expected," he said. "The lava is not moving as fast as it should."

Cristofolini said the project was only "a partial success" because not enough lava had been diverted into the canal to slow down the main lava stream.

Ernesto Grossi, a spokesman for the local prefect's office which is coordinating the project, said experts were studying the possibility of using steamshovels and bulldozers to remove impediments to the lava flow in the specially dug canal.

Professor Amedeo Sbacchi, in charge of building the canal, told a news conference that more explosives also were being considered to eliminate remains of the dam between the lava stream and the canal.

"But it will first be necessary to study the results of what we have already done," he said.

The explosion was originally scheduled for early Friday afternoon but unexpected waves of molten lava poured over the dam throughout the day and postponed the effort.

Dozens of experts worked into the night under powerful spotlights to repair the damage so the dynamite could be installed in metal tubes in the dam.

However, the lava forced several last minute changes in plans, said Swedish explosives expert Rolf Lennart Abersten, brought in to supervise the project.

He said he could not place any charges on the bottom of the 50-foot-long dam because of the lava spills, which also caused the wall to double in thickness to 20 feet.

As a result, portions of the 15-foot-high dam remained intact to block the lava flow, said the Swede — who before the blast had been dubbed "the daredevil" and "the magician" by Italian newspapers.

The $4.9 million plan was designed to channel a major portion of the lava flow into the 1,650-foot canal and then to an uninhabited basin. The lava has been pouring down the southeastern slope of Etna since March 28 and has covered nearly five miles.

When the plan was first approved it was feared that the lava might reach several nearby villages, but scientists said the flow slowed down so much that the villages would not have been in any danger even if the canal had not been built.

Officials justified continuing work because they said it would provide invaluable experience for the future.

Brazil Denies It's Seeking Loan

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of the central bank of Brazil denies speculation that his country — already the third world's largest debtor — is seeking new loans to over come its financial problems.

"We have no desire and no need to ask the banks for any new medium- or long-term loans," Carlos Geraldo Langoni told The Associated Press.

Langoni, who arrive here Friday, described his objective in the United States as prodding banks "simply to accelerate receipt of already-committed funds."

He conceded that Brazil is suffering from what he called "a liquidity squeeze" and is about $550 million behind in its foreign payments.

Langoni said the average payment delay is 12 days, and described the situation as "a passing phase due to seasonal export problems." He predicted that by September Brazil would be up-to-date on the payments.

Langoni spoke against the background of published speculation in Brazil and the United States that Brazil would need extensive new loans to overcome its financial problems, and that the International Monetary Fund (IMF) may be having second thoughts about its role in a financial bailout program for Brazil.

Ice May Hold Clue To Sun's Heat

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Ancient ice from Greenland, stored in a frozen food warehouse in Buffalo, soon will help University of Rochester researchers probe the sun's heat.

David Elmore and two associates recently received a National Science Foundation grant to test chunks of the ice core — some of it an estimated 130,000 years old — for two rare radioactive isotopes.

The isotopes indicate sunspot activity. By measuring them, Elmore hopes to discover cycles of sunspots that could give clues to past climates — and perhaps a look at the future.

"It's amazing how little we know about changes in climate," Elmore said Saturday in a telephone interview.

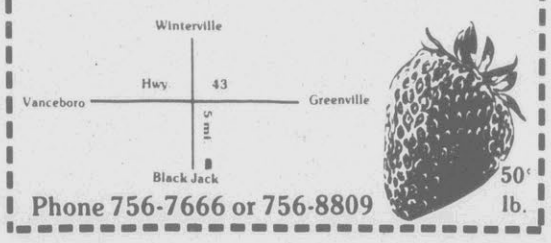

A Merchants Refrigerating Co. warehouse in Buffalo is the repository for the ice, which has also been used by other researchers in the United States, Denmark and Switzerland.

Soon Elmore and his colleagues will have segments of the 10-inch-round ice core placed in refrigerated boxes and sent to Rochester's Nuclear Structure Research Laboratory by bus.

There they will melt it and use an 80-foot-long accelerator to measure the number of radioactive chlorine-36 and beryllium-10 atoms.

Employment Becomes Issue For British

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party charged Saturday that unemployment would soar to 5 million if the Labor Party wins general elections next month. Labor countered by saying a Tory victory would lead to 6 million jobless.

On the second day of the four-week election campaign, unemployment — now near a post-World War II high at 3.17 million or 13.3 percent — joined defense as a key issue in the June 9 vote.

Mrs. Thatcher opened the campaign Friday with a speech in Perth, Scotland, in which she said Labor's policy of unilateral nuclear disarmament would leave Britain defenseless and ensure the Soviets don't negotiate seriously with the United States at missile talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

Lebanese Endorse Troop Withdrawal

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Cabinet on Saturday unanimously endorsed the draft troop withdrawal agreement with Israel, despite Syria's vigorous condemnation of the pact, and launched a diplomatic push to win support in the Arab world.

A statement issued after the emergency session said all 10 ministers voted for the agreement, which lays the groundwork for withdrawal of 25,000 Israeli troops in Lebanon.

Israel has approved the accord in principle but neither country has signed it, and it won't take effect until Syria and the PLO agreed to withdraw their forces. The Lebanese Cabinet empowered chief negotiator Antoine Fattal to sign the accord "in due time."

There was no immediate comment from Israeli officials on the Cabinet action.

In Damascus, sources said Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat paid an eight-hour visit late Friday to PLO units in the Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon. It was Arafat's first reported visit to Lebanon since PLO forces were evacuated from west Beirut last August during the Israeli siege.

The sources, who asked not to be named, provided no details on Arafat's trip.

After the Cabinet meeting in Beirut, President Amin Gemayel asked Economy Minister Ibrahim Halawi and Housing Minister Baheddine Bsat to visit various Arab capitals to muster support for the plan in the face of the strong Syrian opposition.

Syrian President Hafez Assad told visiting Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem on Friday the agreement with Israel weakens Lebanese sovereignty, threatens Syria's national security and constitutes "a reward to Israel for its invasion of Lebanon."

In another sign of Syrian displeasure, several leading political rivals of Gemayel's administration met Saturday in the Syrian-controlled town of Zghota and formed a "National Progressive Opposition Front" to oppose the agreement with Syrian backing.

They included former Christian President Suleiman Franjieh; former Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Moslem; Socialist Party and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, and Communist Party General Secretary George Haoui.

Despite Syria's objections, the Cabinet statement said Gemayel would appoint a "working group" to continue talks with Damascus on the troop withdrawal issue.

The independent newspaper An-Nahar said Moslem Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan probably would head the working group and that it would travel to Damascus "soon" for further talks.

Salem conferred Saturday with various Arab ambassadors, presumably to brief them on his talks with Assad. Syria and Lebanon do not have ambassadors in one another's capital.

Sources in Beirut said the withdrawal agreement was expected to be initialed Sunday by Israeli and Lebanese officials at a meeting in the Israeli town of Netanya, north of Tel Aviv. The agreement could be signed as early as Tuesday.

Beirut newspapers said Gemayel would seek endorsement for the pact in the Lebanese Parliament. Parliamentary approval is not legally required under emergency powers granted Gemayel last year, but government sources say he wants a strong endorsement to demonstrate widespread support for the accord.

Once Gemayel has an endorsement in hand, the sources say, he will formally ask the Syrians to withdraw their 40,000 troops from Lebanon. Syrian troops entered Lebanon in 1976 under an Arab League mandate to stop the Moslem-Christian civil war.

The Israelis have said they will sign the agreement, but will consider it suspended until Syria's estimated 35,000 soldiers and the Palestine Liberation Organization's 10,000 guerrillas agree to leave Lebanon, where they are stationed in the eastern Bekaa Valley and around the northern city of Tripoli.

U.S. officials claim the Palestinians and the Soviet-backed Syrians have been reinforcing their units in the Bekaa to strengthen their positions in advance of a possible Israeli pullout.

The moves have heightened tensions in the area and some officials fear renewed Syrian-Israeli fighting may develop.

In New York on Friday, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger warned the Soviet Union against trying to thwart the withdrawal agreement through what he called "belligerent words and provocative actions."

Weinberger said any Soviet-backed aggression from Syria would be "met with a retaliatory force." He did not elaborate on the statement — a departure from his prepared speech to the American Jewish Committee's annual meeting.

U.S. officials said last week the Soviets had moved 2,000 advisers into the Bekaa Valley to reinforce the Syrian stronghold.

Lebanon Faces Many Problems Still Unresolved

EDITOR'S NOTE — A formal agreement appears imminent between Israel and Lebanon on the withdrawal of Israeli troops. But once that hurdle is cleared, a host of others remain for a government trying to rebuild its country from the ashes of a civil war and an invasion.

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The troop withdrawal agreement being finalized with Israel is only the first of the difficult problems Lebanon must solve to end nearly a decade of violence and war.

The U.S-sponsored agreement will mean nothing unless Lebanon can persuade both Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization to accept it. The Syrians turned it down Friday, but the Lebanese Cabinet approved it Saturday and Israel has given its approval in principle.

Even if the Syrians and PLO eventually do agree, and the 80,000 or so foreign troops that occupy three-fourths of Lebanon leave, the government of President Amin Gemayel still will have to tackle the problem of establishing its authority over the rest of the country.

This would be necessary to halt the sectarian divisions, mistrust and open warfare that threaten to bring on a renewal of the 1975-76 civil war, which pitted leftist Moslems and Palestinians against rightist Christian Phalangists.

Gemayel's government also must face the question of what it will do with the estimated 400,000 Palestinian civilians that remain in Lebanon. Entwined with the way that problem is solved is the issue of relations with the rest of the Arab world.

Of major importance to the United States is the question of how long Lebanon will need to be propped up by the Western allies, and especially the multinational peacekeeping force, made up of American, French, Italian and British troops.

The tentative agreement by Israel to pull its 25,000 troops out of southern Lebanon has taken nearly six months of intensive effort, led by the United States. But the withdrawal won't begin until Syria and the PLO agree to remove their forces — an estimated 35,000 Syrians and about 10,000 Palestinian guerrillas — from northern Lebanon and the Bekaa Valley.

Gemayel and Foreign Minister Elie Salem have only just begun that effort, and Western diplomats here and in Damascus, the Syrian capital, say it could easily take weeks or months.

Syria has labelled the troop withdrawal agreement with Israel a "surrender" by Lebanon and claimed it threatens both Syrian security and Lebanese sovereignty, as well as rewarding Israel for invading Lebanon last June 6.

President Hafez Assad of Syria has not said he will never agree to pull out, but so far has not made clear what price he will exact if he decides to do so.

PLO officials, as well, say they will have some concessions to extract from the Lebanese before they agree to leave — mostly involving the security and treatment of the thousands of Palestinian civilians.

They claim Gemayel's government is refusing to grant work permits to Palestinians, and uses the security police and the army to harass them in the camps. They also blame the rightist Christian Phalange, Gemayel's political party and the PLO's bitter enemy, for a spate of attacks on Palestinians and Palestinian-owned businesses.

There is little question that the government would like to see the Palestinians leave. But it must be careful how the problem is handled, because of the danger of angering other Arab states on whom its economy depends — especially Saudi Arabia and Syria.

Top Lebanese officials have been suggesting recently that while Lebanon will remain in the Arab bloc, it will be a neutral country — meaning the government must elude the efforts of its Soviet-backed neighbor Syria to make sure Lebanon stays in the Syrian orbit.

If and when the withdrawal actually takes place, it will leave Gemayel with the immediate problem of extending control over the Lebanese territory now occupied by the Israelis, Syrians and Palestinians.

Gemayel has reportedly agreed in the pact with Israel to station at least two and possibly three brigades of the Lebanese army in the south to ensure Palestinian guerrillas will not return to the area. That will involve 9,000 to 12,000 men from his 22,000-man army.

While a national draft and major expansion program for the army was begun early this year, Western observers say, the army will be hard-pressed to stretch its presence over the rest of the country, even if the multinational peacekeeping force here backs it up.

No one is sure how long the United States, France, Italy and Britain will maintain their commitment.

Gemayel must also somehow end the periodic outbreaks of vicious factional fighting — between the rightist Christian and leftist Druse militias in the central mountains, and between Sunni Moslem and pro-Syrian Alawite Moslem militias in Tripoli.

Finally, the new Lebanese president must address demands by many Moslem and Druse leaders for a political restructuring of Lebanon — a reworking of the three-decade-old power-sharing agreements that allot posts and powers from the presidency on down to the various religious groupings, and leaves the Christians holding the largest share of power.

Under the system, the president is always a Maronite Christian, like Gemayel, and the prime minister is a Sunni Moslem. The speaker of Parliament is a Shiite.

U.S. Uses Stern Soviet Warning To Flag Concern

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's stern warning to the Soviet Union to exercise restraint in the Middle East is being viewed here as a reflection of American concern over Moscow's military and diplomatic strategy in the area.

Until Friday night, the administration had remained generally muted about Soviet military activities in Syria and thus Weinberger's unusually harsh remarks represented a departure from previous policy.

In an appearance before the American Jewish Committee in New York, Weinberger was asked what the United States would do if the Soviet Union converted Syria into a launching pad for military adventures.

"The simplest way to deal with a problem of that kind is to make it very clear to the Soviets or to any proxies they may have in Syria that any aggression by them would be met by a retaliatory force," Weinberger said.

The response would be strong enough, he added, that it would destroy "any kind of hope of gain to the aggressors."

An administration official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name, said Saturday that Weinberger was referring to Israel when he warned that "a retaliatory force" would respond to any Soviet-sponsored aggression in the Middle East.

"He basically was stating the obvious: that Israel would certainly respond were there any attack," the official said. "There would be a strong response by Israel."

Other officials, however, say they are doubtful the Soviet military buildup in Syria, including the installation of new SA-5 missiles, presages a new outbreak of armed conflict in the region.

These officials, who asked not to be identified, said Soviet strategy is more likely aimed at retaining its influence with Syria, Moscow's major ally in the Middle East.

In addition to the SA-5, there are an estimated 5,000 Soviet military personnel in Syria.

The officials also believe Syria, after suffering heavy losses at the hands of Israel last summer during the Lebanon war, is not eager to do battle with the Israelis again.

Weinberger's statement also may have reflected U.S. frustration over what officials here regard as the obstructionist role Moscow has played in U.S. efforts to achieve the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon.

The Soviets have launched a campaign to descredit the Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement — negotiated by Secretary of State George P. Shultz — calling it a gross violation of Lebanese sovreignty, claiming that it rewards "Israeli aggression."

U.S. officials believe Moscow is worried that agreement by Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization to undertake a joint withdrawal of forces with Israel would further undercut Soviet influence in the Middle East.

The Soviets have been on the defensive in the region, because of its continuing military occupation of Afghanistan and because of the expulsion of a number of Soviet personnel from Iran recently.

Study Projects Decline In Total Count Of Jews

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The world's Jewish population outside Israel will shrink by up to one-fourth by the year 2000 due to reduced fertility, intermarriage and cultural assimilation, according to a demographic survey published Saturday.

The Jewish population of Israel will rise 47-57 percent during the same period because of the relative youthfulness of the nation's population and the virtual absence of intermarriage, the survey added.

The projected rise in Israel's population, from less than 3 million in 1975 to 4.4 million to 4.7 million in 2000, won't counteract the expected decline in the Jewish population outside Israel, from 10 million to between 7.4 million and 8.2 million, the survey said.

By the end of the century, the total world Jewish population — estimated at close to 13 million in 1975 — will fall to between 11.8 million and 12.9 million, the survey said.

"If no fundamental alteration takes place in the demographic trends, the ... decreases will accelerate after the turn of the century," said Prof. Usiel Schmelz, director of the division of Jewish Demography and Statistics at Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Schmelz' projections were published in "Studies in Jewish Demography, Survey for 1972-80," a combined effort of the Institute of Contemporary Jewry at Hebrew University and the Institute of Jewish Affairs in London.

Israel represented only 23 percent of the world's Jews in 1975, but its share is projected to rise to 36 percent in 2000 "and it is likely to keep on growing thereafter," the study said.

The United States, with the world's largest Jewish population — at 5.6 million in 1975 — had 43 percent of the world's Jews in 1975 and was expected to maintain that percentage in the year 2000 with 5.32 million, the survey said.

American and Canadian Jews represented 60 percent of the Jews outside Israel but in 2000 they will represent 70 percent.

In most Jewish communities recently researched, Schmelz said, the fertility rate is lower than the general population "and the average number of children per woman is less than the minimum — now approximately 2.1 in the developed countries — which is needed for demographic replacement."

He said the proportion of Jews marrying non-Jews is over 20 percent in most populations outside Israel "and in some over 50 percent."

This has meant losses for Jewish communities in most regions "because less than half the children of mixed couples are Jews," he said. "There is, however, conflicting evidence on this matter from the United States."

Schmelz said Israel publishes satisfactory official statistics on its population "but the statistical evidence on the Disapora Jews is not only widely scattered but also markedly deficient in both quantity and quality."

Schmelz said the greatest change was a new 1975 estimate of Jews in the Soviet Union, which has the world's third largest Jewish community. It was revised downward from earlier forecasts of 2.68 million to 1.95 million, in keeping with Soviet census figures, he said.

Prince Casts Doubt On Peace Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jordanian Crown Prince Hassan Ibn Talal appeared Saturday to invite President Reagan to change his plans for a Middle East settlement, saying the United States "should not initiate a policy which it cannot implement."

Hassan, speaking for his brother, Jordan's King Hussein, gave no specific indication of any changes that he favored in the president's plan. His remarks were prepared for delivery here to the National Association of Arab Americans.

The crown prince is scheduled to meet with Reagan on Monday at the White House.

In his speech, Hassan said the "spirit" of Reagan's Mideast peace initiative "offers the broad delineations within which a just and lasting settlement must be found."

"My faith in the president's resolve and his unquestionable good intentions remains strong," Hassan said.

He added: "I believe the administration concurs that the United States should not initiate a policy which it cannot implement. The risks are too high and the repercussions are extremely dangerous; for what is at stake is American credibility, not just in the Middle East, but throughout the world.

"The recent visit by Secretary of State (George P.) Shultz to the area is a clear indication that the president intends to persevere in spite of the difficulties enountered so far," Hassan said. "Though our joint efforts have been thwarted for the time being, it should go without saying that our commitment to peace with dignity is paramount."

Last Sept. 1, Reagan offered self-rule "in association" with Jordan to the Palestinians now under Israeli control. He did not call for a Palestinian state, which the Palestine Liberation Organization has demanded with the virtually unanimous support of all Arab governments.

The participation of Jordan has been key to the plan, but it received a major setback when Hussein announced April 10 that talks with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat had broken down.

The prince, discussing the need for progress toward a solution of the Palestinian problem, said: "Time is running extremely short. The situation is growing ever more desperate."

He said that Israeli settlements and other changes introduced by Israel in the West Bank "threaten the very existence of the Palestinian people there."

Hassan urged America to "make an unequivocal commitment to a broader peace process."

"Our vital interests will have to be defended whereby extremists are unable to dictate the future course of events," Hassan said.

Without referring directly to Syria, the PLO or other specific forces, he warned that "our region is threatened by strident populist radicalism of various shades of political opinion."

Nicaragua Repels Attack By Rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Two task forces totaling some 500 rebels Saturday were repelled by Nicaraguan troops in a major battle in northern Zelaya province, an official communique said.

The communique, issued by the Defense Ministry, said the two rebel task forces, of about 250 men each, invaded Nicaragua early Saturday in the region known as "Llano Bawisa" in northern Zelaya province some 180 miles north of Managua.

"The advance has been contained in going any further into our territory," the communique said, claiming the rebels had been stopped, but providing no more details on casualties.

The communique also detailed fighting the past week on the southern border with Costa Rica, claiming 25 rebels killed in several clashes with guerrillas near the Rio Indio region of the Rio San Juan province, some 120 miles southeast of Managua.

Nicaraguan troops confiscated several AK automatic rifles, seven knapsacks and 12,000 Costa Rican colones, that country's currency, from the rebels, the communique said.

In other news, the pro-government newspaper Nuevo Diario published an account by members of Sandinista reservist units who survived a rebel attack last week on a Nicaraguan boat on the San Juan river that forms the border with Costa Rica.

In that incident, rebels under the command of renegade Sandinista war hero Eden Pastora attacked the boat Bremen, kidnapping four passengers, Nicaraguan authorities had said last week.

Pastora, who is known as Commander Zero, became disillusioned with the Sandinista government and went into self-imposed exile in Costa Rica. His rebel units claim to have invaded Nicaragua from Costa Rica last month.

Luis Enrique Gutierrez Cujdra, 22, the head of a column of Sandinista reservists, told how he and five companions who were guarding the Bremen survived the attack. The boat was donated by the West German city of the same name to transport peasants on Lake Nicaragua.

Gutierrez was quoted by Nuevo Diario as saying the guerrillas showered the boat with mortar fire believing Sandinista troops to be on board. He and the other five reservists hid in the nearby bushes.

Gutierrez claimed 12 rebels were killed in the fighting and the boat was destroyed.

Tests Planned

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The University of Rochester Medical Center will test the effectiveness of the drug interferon on genital and plantar warts.

"Venereal warts are thought to be the third most common sexually transmitted disease," with more than 800,000 new cases a year, and plantar warts, which grow on feet bottoms, are also a common ailment, said Dr. Richard Reichman, a member of the research team.

Interferon, which is a protein produced by white blood cells, is also being tested at the medical center for the treatment of two types of cancer.

Doctor Suggests Alcoholism May Be Inherited

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Alcoholism may be as inherited as heart disease and people with a family history of alcoholism have to watch what they drink, according to a Charlotte physician.

"Alcoholism runs in families," said Dr. James F. Alexander, an internist and gastroenterologist. "This fact has been recognized for many centuries. However, not until recently has any scientific study been done to determine if the cause is social, environmental, heredity or mixed."

Alexander said studies indicate that if parents are alcoholics, the chances are far greater that their children will be alcoholics. He cited one study that said 55 men with an alcoholic parent were compared to 78 men without an alcoholic parent. In that study, 10 of the 55 were alcoholics compared with four of the 78.

But, not all alcoholism is inherited, he said.

"There are people who get addicted to alcohol with no genetic predisposition at all," Alexander said.

But for those who to have a tendency toward alcoholism, "Early intervention leads to much more successful therapy," he said.

"There is a whole body of information that alcoholism is getting passed on in genes," said Irma Hoffman, associate director of the Charlotte Council on Alcoholism. "People who come from families where alcoholism is present are at a much higher risk, if they choose to drink, of developing alcoholism."

In a paper written for the Rutgers Summer School of Alcohol Studies, Alexander cited studies revealing the following:

— Of 174 sets of twins where at least one twin was an alcoholic, 54 percent of the identical twins were alcoholic, compared with 28 percent of fraternal twins.

— Children of an alcoholic parent are just as likely to become alcoholics whether brought up by natural or nonalcoholic adoptive parents. He cited a study which said 18 percent of both groups become alcoholics.

— Grandsons of alcoholics have a threefold higher chance of becoming alcoholics.

Alexander said one reason heredity increases the likelihood of alcoholism stems from biochemical evidence that people of some races metabolize alcohol differently than others.

"Physicians can better handle intervention knowing the genetic facts," he said. In people who have the tendency, "physicians, friends and family must all stop being enablers and intervene as soon as possible when alcoholism does appear."

State's Revenue Climbs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State leaders remain cautious despite a report in a Raleigh newspaper that the state's April revenue collections are 8.8 percent higher than in April 1982.

The News & Observer of Raleigh quoted legislative and administration sources as saying the growth in tax collections is an indicator of the economic recovery Gov. Jim Hunt has projected.

Hunt's budget proposal includes revenue projections about $80 million higher than projections of legislative analysts, creating talk among lawmakers about major tax increases which Hunt opposes.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, House Appropriations Committee co-chairman, said he and other budget leaders were unprepared to accept Hunt's optimistic projections.

"I don't think we're ready to come all the way to Hunt's projections, but I think we could come halfway," he said.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, Senate Appropriations Committee chairman, said the projected improvement could lessen the amount of tax increases needed.

Hunt hasn't said what April's revenue figures are, but he said Thursday he remained confident the state could lift a freeze on state salaries without a tax increase.

His budget proposals include reviving 5 percent automatic pay raises for teachers and similar merit raises for about two-thirds of the state's employees.

This year's fiscal budgets, which the Legislature approved last summer, had projected an 8.9 percent revenue growth. But the recession forced Hunt to cut state spending by 6 percent for state agencies and 2 percent for public schools.

Hunt has projected that revenue growth during 1983-84 should be 8.8 percent compared to the Legislature's forecasted revenue growth of 7.2 percent.

Farmer And Financiers Discuss Debt Problems Facing Growers

By MADELYN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Farmers, financiers and state officials have given each other some ideas on how to keep growers from being plowed under by mounting debts.

"We want agriculture financiers to give new hope to those people in agriculture," said Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner.

"It's easy to say that our farmers got overextended and the plight they got themselves in is their own doing," the commissioner said. But if farmers had anticipated the economic downturn, they wouldn't have gone out on a financial limb, he added.

Fifty-two percent of Florida growers who borrowed from the federal Farmers Home Administration are delinquent on their loans, state director Mitchell Drew said at a conference last week.

"Florida is the second-most delinquent state in the nation," Drew said. Georgia is first.

Despite the growing number of farmers behind in payments, Drew said, foreclosures have stayed the same for the last few years. The administration has adapted its lending policies "to the point where we'll stick with as many borrowers as possible," he said.

Florida is third in the nation in net farm income, Conner said, but farmers still face cash-flow problems.

In addition to raising crops like citrus, Conner urged farmers to turn to specialty items like pecans and honey for an untapped source of cash.

Rodney Roundtree, with the Federal Land Banks in Orlando, said many of the farmers' problems stem from overexpansion during the economic boom of the 1970s. Farmers weren't prepared for the hard times that followed, he said.

Compounding the dilemma, Roundtree said, is the reluctance of growers to take tough action, such as selling land. "Farmers love land and don't want to get rid of it. They are going down with the 'ship," Roundtree said.

"As lenders we share some of the guilt because we kind of went along with this," Roundtree added.

To help pull farmers out of debt, Roundtree urged the use of better management and accounting procedures, and increased reliance on computers.

Drew said that as interest rates and inflation fall, he sees some hope for farmers. But, he added, "It took a long time to get where we are at and it'll take a long time to get out of it."

Windmill May Remain

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The two highest bidders for a power-generating windmill overlooking Boone say they will leave the structure in place if the government agrees.

Boone area residents who want to keep the experimental windmill as an area landmark are trying to change the terms of sale for the structure, so it can be left in place.

McBess Industries Inc. of Bessemer City, a synthetic yarn manufacturer, won the rights to the windmill with a bid of $51,600 to the General Services Administration. However, the sale does not become final until 30 days have expired and it is approved by a congressional committee. Once the sale is approved, the owner has 45 days to remove the 600,000 pound windmill.

Both McBess Industries and Charlotte businessman John S. Proctor, the second-highest bidder, have offered to leave the tower in place if the GSA agrees. The expected $200,000 removal cost was one of the reasons the government auctioned off the windmill, which seldom functioned since its completion in 1979.

In The State

Horses Should Be Vaccinated

RALEIGH — North Carolina's horse owners should vaccinate their hoses before summer begins to protect them against sleeping sickness, the state Agriculture Department says.

Departmental animal health officials said Friday that the diseases known as eastern and western equine encephalitis can cause blindness, fever, depression, incoordination and walking in circles. The eastern type has a 90 percent fatality rate, while fewer than 50 percent of the horses with the western type die.

"Horses are infected by mosquito bites," said Dr. T.F. Zweigart, state veterinarian. "The mosquitoes pick up the virus from birds. However, the disease cannot be transmitted directly from bird to horse, from horse to horse, or horse to human."

Extended Benefits Cut Off

RALEIGH — Extended unemployment insurance benefits for an estimated 21,000 North Carolinians were cut off Saturday, the state Employment Security Commission announced.

The extra benefits were started 13 weeks ago under a program that automatically starts when North Carolina's rate of unemployed workers with insured benefits exceeds 5 percent. They are paid to people who have exhausted their eligibility for regular claims.

Because the rate at the end of the 13-week period dropped below 5 percent, the program has automatically stopped, commission officials said. An estimated $24 million in benefits were paid during the period.

North Carolinians who have lost their extra state benefits still might be eligible for up to 10 weeks' worth of extended federal benefits, the commission said. Those who would need the aid are advised to contact their local Employment Security Commission office.

Raleigh Man Is Charged

RALEIGH — A 27-year-old Raleigh man was in the Wake County jail Saturday without bond on a charge he stabbed a mother of two in a room where her children slept.

Frederick Leon Tuck, a carpenter at North Carolina State University, was arrested and charged with murder about five hours after Glinda Sanders, 26, of Raleigh died at Wake Medical Center from multiple stab wounds. Tuck lived in the same four-room boarding house where Mrs. Sanders resided.

Rest Home Seeks Injunction

RALEIGH — A Raleigh rest home whose license has been revoked by the state has gone to court in an attempt to keep the Wake County Department of Social Services from encouraging the home's residents to move.

Manson's Rest Home filed a request for a temporary restraining order Thursday in Wake County Superior Court. Manson's license was revoked May 1 by the state Division of Facility Services for violating state guidelines, including neglect of residents.

The home said in its request it is appealing the revocation and can operate until the appeal is decided.

Chase Ends In Theft Charge

RALEIGH — Cary police charged a Virginia man with bank robbery and auto theft Friday after they were led on a 10-mile car chase that ended in a three-vehicle collision just south of Raleigh.

Arthur Glenn Schechman, 51, of Richmond, Va., was being held in the Wake County Jail Friday night in lieu of $85,000 bond.

The incident began Friday morning when a man wearing a mask a carrying what appeared to be a handgun demanded money at the Cary Village Mall office of Southern National Bank.

Wake Forest Spending Approved

WINSTON-SALEM — The trustees of Wake Forest University have approved a report that recommends spending millions of dollars through the end of the century to improve university buildings and programs.

C.C. Hope Jr., chairman of the board of trustees, said the report would not immediately be made public, but said it includes recommendations to modernize the men's dormitories and build a student union.

The trustees also approved a record university budget of $113.8 million for fiscal year 1983-84.

Silver Medal Is Awarded

RALEIGH — Caron Ashby Geier was awarded the Royal Society of Arts Silver Medal at North Carolina State University's commencement Saturday.

Ms. Geier, a magna cum laude graduate in textiles, received the award for academic excellence, peer standing and talent in her chosen field.

In 1977 the society authorized the awarding of one of its medals at North Carolina State in recognition of the university's design program.

N.C. State Faculty Recognized

RALEIGH — Sixteen faculty members at North Carolina State University have been elected to the university's Academy of Outstanding Teachers.

The 16 teachers were selected by polling students, faculty members and alumni. They were recognized at commencement ceremonies Saturday in Reynolds Coliseum.

Director Kicked

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — A mob of angry miners kicked and punched the director of the National Coal Board in Scotland after he announced the closure of a depleted mine.

About 200 men surged forward to attack Albert Wheeler after he made the announcement Friday in a hall near Cardowan Colliery, on Glasgow's outskirts.

Only Tenant Is Leaving Seaford Industrial Park

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — Shallow waters in Oregon Inlet has forced the only tenant of the state's $7.1 million seafood industrial park to close its operation.

The announcement was the second of that type this week as Roanoke Island Steel and Boat Works, a ship-building firm and one of Dare County's largest employers, earlier announced plans to move to Beaufort because of hazardous conditions at Oregon Inlet.

In the latest closing, officials said Wanchese Ship Lift Inc. was designed to serve the new breed of 100-foot steel trawlers, which require 14 feet of water to operate. Oregon Inlet frequently is plagued with shoals that reduce the channel depth to less than 10 feet.

"It's kind of like a truck stop with no road," said Buddy Davis, company president. "I made a business decision based on Oregon Inlet and it was a bad one.

Davis said when his business began in 1981, the firm serviced 167 boats and ships compared to only 40 in the last 11 months.

"This was a ship lift built and designed for the commercial fishing industry," Davis said. "We have no business left, we have no boats left. Wanchese Ship Lift is for sale."

Because of problems keeping the inlet channel passable, commercial ships are going to other ports, Davis said.

"As far as we're concerned, it isn't a new development, just a culmination of something that was bound to happen," said Robert Williams, executive secretary of the state seafood industrial park. "We do see it as a catastrophe in that some very fine people went in and invested their good faith and good money."

State Fishermen Want Trawling Rule Changed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina will seek changes in federal plans that restrict trawling for bluefish and the sale of king mackerel, a state official said.

Commercial fishermen oppose the plans because bluefish and king mackerel are economically important to the state's fishing industry, and the plans could hinder sport fishing where the catch is sold to tournament sponsors to help cover the cost of the offshore trips.

The most controversial of the plans is the proposed restriction on trawling for bluefish, said Edward G. McCoy, assistant director of the state Division of Marine Fisheries.

That restriction is unnecessary because the bluefish population should be reduced, according to some commercial fishermen. Willie Etheridge of Wanchese said in a telephone interview that bluefish reduce populations of valuable small fish including spot, croaker and flounder.

"The best thing that could happen to the fishing industry would be for them to be wiped out," Etheridge said.

Dare County fish dealer Ron Tillet said there was no shortage of bluefish and, although they aren't the most valuable catch, "they are good commercial fish."

The bluefish proposal will be a topic at hearings Thursday and Friday by members of the South Atlantic Fisheries Council, a federal advisory group.

The National Marine Fisheries Service last week announced that hook and line commercial fishing for king mackerel would be banned because the regional quota of 3.9 million pounds had been reached in April. The ban will be in effect until June 30, the end of the fishing year.

The federal ban does not affect fishing within three miles of the coast, which is under the state's jurisdiction. McCoy said the action meant fishermen could catch fish by hook and line methods, but could not sell them.

Meets Bishops

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II met in separate audiences Saturday with five bishops from Nicaragua, where the pontiff received a turbulent reception two months ago while on a Central American tour.

The meetings were private and the Vatican did not disclose the subjects discussed. The bishops are in Rome on one of the trips that prelates are expected to make here every five years.

CITY OF GREENVILLE PUBLIC HEARING

The Greenville City Council is exploring the feasibility of additional sources of City revenues through the establishment of a refuse collection fee. A public hearing has been scheduled for Monday, May 23, 1983, at 7:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, third floor of the Municipal Building, to receive citizen comments on the proposed fee.

The proposal under review by the City Council is as follows:

	Monthly Fee
Residential Refuse Collection Fee	$3 per residential household
Business, Commercial, Institutional, Churches, & Charitable Organizations	$12 per container

All citizens of Greenville are encouraged to attend this public hearing at which time they will be afforded an opportunity to present written and oral comments on the feasibility of establishing a refuse collection fee.

House Considers Choice Of Benefits For State Workers

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An innovative "cafeteria-style" benefit system that's gaining popularity in the private sector may be just what's needed to boost state employee morale, lawmakers and lobbyists say.

Under the system, workers would be allowed to assemble their own package from a list of available benefits — as though they were choosing dishes in a cafeteria. Presently all state employees get the same benefits, including paid holidays, vacation and sick leave, retirement benefits, health insurance, a disability salary plan, overtime pay and other provisions.

Rep. Margaret Hayden, D-Alleghany, last week introduced a resolution calling for the Legislative Research Commission to study the feasibility of a cafeteria system for North Carolina workers.

Many private companies are using cafeteria-style benefit programs and a number of state governments are considering them, but thus far no state has embraced the idea, Ms. Hayden said in an interview Friday. The system might not work in North Carolina but it deserves a long look, she said.

"The system we have now really is obsolete," Ms. Hayden said. "It's designed to meet the needs of a family with one wage earner and another spouse who stays at home and cares for the children. That's not typical of state employees' families any more."

For example, she said, many workers have no need for maternity benefits but must pay for them under the existing health insurance plan. On the other hand, those workers would welcome dental insurance but the state hasn't been able to afford it.

Additionally, many female state employees are covered by their husbands' health insurance policies and willingly would forego their own health insurance in exchange for extra leave time or earlier retirement.

"The whole idea is tailoring the benefits to fit each employee's needs," said Ms. Hayden. "It would stop duplication and waste and make the people more appreciative of what they get."

It's unclear whether a cafeteria-style program would cost or save money, she said. Her resolution indicated that each employee's package would retain its current value regardless of how its contents change.

"The cost is one thing we'd have to study," said Ms. Hayden. "But (the cost of) employee benefits is increasing 32 per cent a year. We might realize savings eventually through better morale and increased productivity."

Leaders of two state employee organizations endorsed the proposed study but were cautious in their appraisal of the cafeteria system.

"I haven't heard enough to take a stand yet," said Emmett Burden, director of the 27,000-member N.C. State Employees Association. "But (the program) has some attractive features. A study's the proper way to go."

Burden said he wasn't worried that workers would lose benefits with the cafeteria plan. But he said many employees knew little about their benefits and might have problems assembling the best possible package.

"We'd need to have some seminars and prepare booklets to educate people," he said.

John Dornan, executive director of the 40,000-member N.C. Association of Educators, said the existing benefit program offers good variety but agreed that some benefits were of little use to certain employees.

"Some of the things they're offering in these cafeteria programs are really great," said Dornan. "I hope they do decide to do this study."

TERMINALLY ILL — Evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton of Fayetteville, sister of former President Carter, says she has an illness diagnosed as terminal cancer of the pancreas. Mrs. Stapleton, shown here on the dock of her lakefront cottage near Fayetteville, says she will depend on faith in God to heal her. Her mother, Lillian Carter, has experienced a total remission of breast and bone cancer, the 53-year-old Mrs. Stapleton said. (AP Laserphoto)

Delay May Kill Plan For Lottery

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has thrown his political weight behind an effort to scuttle the proposed statewide lottery, worrying supporters of a bill to let the state's voters decide the issue.

The Senate voted 38-4 Friday to postpone until Wednesday final action on the bill. Its sponsor, Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, sought the delay fearing key senators were absent or had changed their minds from the previous day, when they tentatively approved the bill 26-21.

Barnes attributed the sudden shift to a flurry of lobbying by Hunt and his lieutenants, including top legislative liaison Zeb Alley, and complained that it was interference. Visibly frustrated, he said the bill's prospects were uncertain.

"The vote Wednesday could go either way," said Barnes. "I'm very concerned at this point."

But Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, a leading opponent, said he believed the bill was doomed.

"I think the people would rather have their taxes raised than have North Carolina in the gambling business," Harris said.

Dix Workers Suspended

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dorothea Dix Hospital officials have suspended three employees as part of the hospital's investigation into complaints of patient abuse.

"A patient abuse incident has occurred," said Mabel Horney, hospital information director. "Our management is investigating."

Hospital Director A.G. Tolley has declined to comment on a statement by former patient William E. Faulkner of Fayetteville, who accused hospital employees of beating another mental patient, threatening him with a knife.

Mrs. Horney said three hospital employees were suspended as a result of the indicent, one of whom she identifed as Alton L. Artis, 26, who was arrested April 28 and charged with assaulting a handicapped person at the hospital.

E. Susan Edwards, assistant district attorney, said the alleged assault victim was too upset to testify so she presented no evidence. Charges were dismissed May 10.

She said the assault was the same incident witnessed by Faulkner.

Faulkner, who was being treated for severe depression, said he saw two employees knock a patient to the floor April 16 and kick him repeatedly.

The patient was attacked by the two employees and "they continued to strike him even after he began crying out that he had had enough," Faulkner said in a statement to the Wake County District Attorney's Office.

A third employee watched the beating but didn't take part, said Faulkner, who said he saw another patient being beaten by other hospital employees on several occasions.

Celia Mansaray, a paralegal assistant for Carolina Legal Services for the Mentally Handicapped, said Friday she had talked with other Dix patients who witnessed similar incidents.

"We've talked to several patients who have either seen abuse or been abused," she said. "They indicated people there (at Dix) are very much intimidated."

Ms. Edward said the District Attorney's Office is looking into other allegations of patient abuse and might call for an investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation.

House Approves Bill To Boost Employers' Tab For Jobs Fund

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Employers would pay $92 million more to the state's unemployment insurance fund while the jobless would receive $60 million less in benefits under a bill approved Friday by the state House.

North Carolina's unemployment benefit system is said to be the third most solvent in the nation but it has dipped to about $315 million compared with more than $500 million at the same time last year.

The bill aimed at raising the amount in the unemployment insurance fund to its original levels tentatively was approved 89-4 without debate. A final vote could be held Monday.

A companion bill that adjusts some of the rules affecting payment of benefits was approved 93-3 and sent to the Senate.

The unemployment insurance fund has run into trouble because the state is paying about $10 million a week in benefits and collecting about $15 million a month from employers.

The federal government has estimated that the state will have to borrow $146 million in 1984-85 unless some changes are made soon.

The first bill would put employers' contributions to the fund on a sliding scale tied to average yearly wages. There is an "emergency escalator" clause that would raise the contribution rate during times of high unemployment or whenever the fund dips to very low levels.

The change is expected to increase employers' contributions by 17% percent the first year and by lesser amounts in following years.

The bill also would reduce the existing benefit rate from 66 23 percent to 60 percent of the wage. But it includes a mechanism, similar to the emergency escalator, that would reinstate the current benefit formula when the fund is healthy and employers' assessments drop to normal levels.

In addition, the bill would change the way benefits are calculated to base them on the highest income paid during six months of the previous year instead of during three months of the previous year.

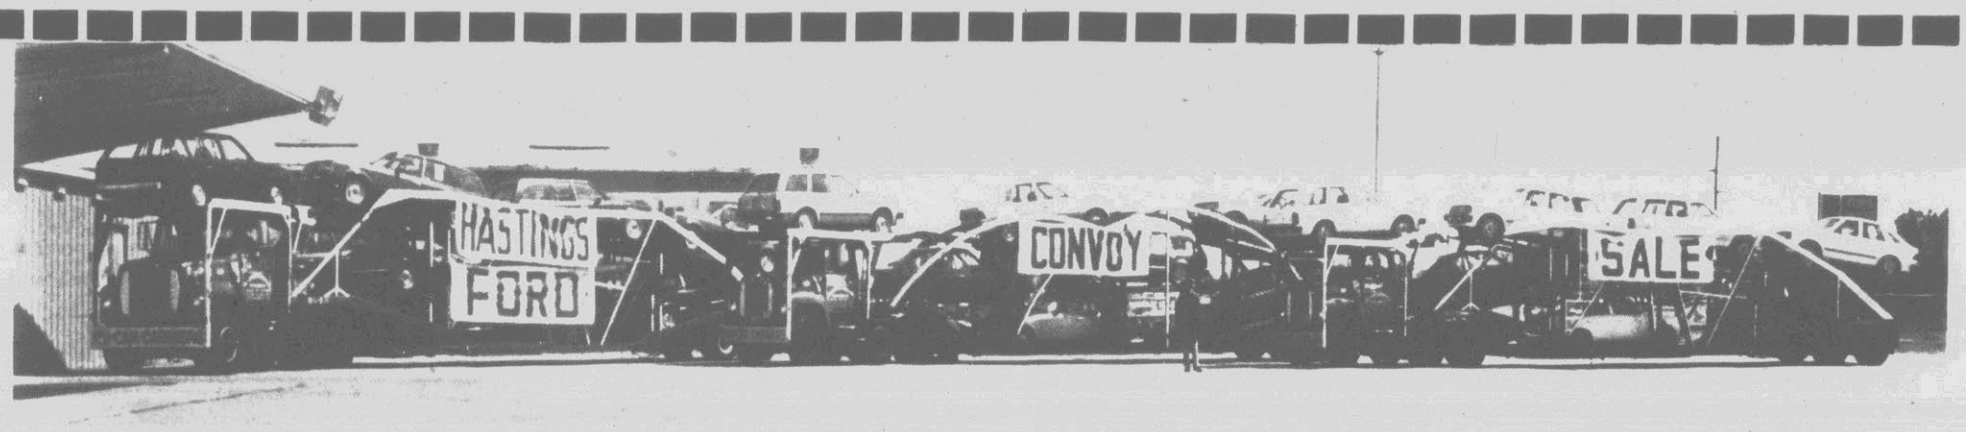

The second bill deals with regulations on payment of unemployment insurance claims.

Complaints Lead To Investigation

YORK, S.C. (UPI) — Complaints by some Catawba Nuclear Station workers who say their supervisors ordered them to falsify plant documents have prompted a Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigation, officials said.

The NRC's office of inspector and auditor has started looking into the complaints, spokesman John Kopeck said in reports published Saturday.

"That office is going to look into the matter," Kopeck told a Charlotte, N.C., newspaper. "They're looking into the Catawba matter and that's all they can say at this time."

The charges were made public last month by the Palmetto Alliance, a Columbia-based anti-nuclear group.

Palmetto Alliance obtained NRC the documents as part of its effort to prevent the Duke Power Co. plant near York from operating. The nuclear facility is under construction.

Kopeck said NRC officials would not comment on the scope of the investigation or when it began.

"In any undertaking that they have, you just don't discuss what it is you're doing," he told The Charlotte Observer.

Opening lead: Ace of ◇.

This famous hand comes from the 1963 World Team Championship. The Italian Blue Team, which had taken the title for five straight years, was finding unexpectedly strong opposition from the United States. Going into the second half of the match, it was still anybody's title, when this hand came up.

In one room, the U.S. team had bid the North-South cards to a slam in hearts, down one. In the other, South was Eugenio Chiardia of Italy. His two club opening bid showed a hand of no more than 16 points with a club suit and possibly a long major suit as well. The rest of the bidding was natural. To the delight of the Italian spectators, their team ended in four hearts redoubled, and it looked as if the match was over.

West led the ace of diamonds and continued the suit to dummy's king as declarer sluffed a club. Another club went on the ace of spades, and two spade ruffs in the closed hand provided the entries for two club ruffs on the table. Declarer returned to his hand with another spade ruff.

Declarer led another club and ruffed low in dummy. East overruffed with the nine and returned a diamond. West, who had passed originally, had shown up with the ace of diamonds and was marked with the ace-jack of clubs. Therefore, he could not hold the king-jack of hearts as well. All declarer had to do to make his contract was to ruff low and either cash the ace of trumps or ruff a club in dummy, which would force the king of trumps. Instead, he ruffed with the ace and then tried to ruff a club in dummy. East overruffed and returned another diamond, and West's jack of trumps was promoted to the setting trick.

At the end of the session, Chiardia was benched. The Italians showed great poise in recovering from this setback to go on to win the title. Chiaradia, however, had played his last hand for his country. He was dropped from the team.

REMAINS A TARGET

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq has warned Japan against repairing a war-damaged Iranian petrochemical complex near the northern tip of the Persian Gulf, saying the complex was a military target that would be bombed again if repaired.

ECU Cager Mary Denkler

Mary Denkler Is Top Female Athlete

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When one hears the term "student-athlete" a chuckle might be heard — in some cases outright laughter. Being a student and an athlete are not thought of as really going together these days.

But when one talks of student-athletes and the name of Mary Denkler is brought up, there's no laughter. Denkler truly embodies all that the term means.

Because of her achievements on the basketball court — and her honors in the classroom — she received a NCAA post-graduate scholarship, one of ten given nationwide to women basketball players. It marked the first time such an event — in any sport — has occurred at East Carolina.

For her achievements, Denkler has been named Daily Reflector Female Collegiate Athlete of the Year.

Jody Schulz, ECU all-American in football, was named last week as the Male Collegiate Athlete of the Year.

Denkler is the second to receive the award. Last year's honor also went to an ECU woman basketball player, Sam Jones.

The Alexandria, Va., native let people know early in her freshman year that she would be a star of the future. While she did not start a game that season, she played in 31, averaging 7.4 points and 5.2 rebounds.

Then, as a sophomore, she started in all but four games, averaging 14.4 points a game and 6.8 rebounds. As a junior she upped that to 20.1 point and 8.6 rebounds.

Her senior season saw her average 22.5 points and 7.8 rebounds. Her scoring average was 14th best in the country.

That all winds up to a 15.7 career average and a 7.0 rebound mark.

In her final game, she scored 31 points and pulled in 13 rebounds to cap a career with 1,789 points, second in school history.

Her 586 points this year was the fourth best for an ECU woman; her 22.5 average was the third best for a season. She stands sixth in career scoring average at 15.7 and fourth in career rebounding with 800, sixth in average with 7.0 per game.

She has the second best single season field goal accuracy mark with 54.8 in 1980-81, and third best with 54.6 this past year. She is first in career field goal accuracy, hitting 50.9 for her four years.

She is fourth and fifth in free throw accuracy for a season with 75.4 in 1981-82, and 74.4 in her senior year, respectively. She is second in career free throw accuracy with a 73.4 percentage.

And she stands eighth in career blocked shots with 20.

Only twice during her senior year did she score less than 10 points, in back-to-back games against Old Dominion and UNC Charlotte.

However, she held 6-8 Anne Donovan of Old Dominion to less than ten points in both meetings this year — and Denkler is only 6-0.

She concluded the year by making the first team of the Women's Basketball News Service All-America team, and gaining honorable mention on the National Sportswriters All-America team.

All this naturally led to her being named the team's Most Valuable Player as voted by her teammates at the end of the season.

Then, when she was chosen for the NCAA scholarship, that topped it all. That, Denkler said at the time, meant more than anything else.

"This is another great honor for Mary," ECU women's basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "And another great honor that she has brought to our basketball program. She certainly deserves it.

"She's been such a hard worker that words can't describe what she's been for our program."

Andruzzi had earlier said, when presenting Denkler with her MVP award at the team's awards program, "When people talk about East Carolina basketball in the future, the name of Mary Denkler will certainly come up. She will not be forgotten."

For this year's Female Collegiate Athlete of the Year, nothing could be closer to the truth.

Also considered for the award was Nan George, an outstanding swimmer and all-American at ECU.

Opening Indy Trials Hit By Rain

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rain Saturday washed away the first day of time trials for the 67th Indianapolis 500, although the track did dry out long enough to get in some practice time and allow seven drivers to get in laps over 200 mph.

More rain was predicted for Sunday, when the second of four days of qualifications for the May 29 race is scheduled. But Chief Steward Tom Binford told crews not to worry about the forecast, which called for a chance of rain and thunderstorms through Sunday.

"Six or seven hours of good weather will qualify everybody who wants to qualify. Hopefully, we'll get a good day tomorrow (Sunday) or a good weekend next week," he said.

Fourteen drivers hit speeds of more than 200 mph during a week of practice in preparation for the four-lap, 10-mile qualification runs, and seven of them led the way late Saturday afternoon after the $2\frac{1}{2}$-mile asphalt oval was opened to the open-wheel Indy-cars for an hour of practice.

The drivers over 200 Saturday included Indianapolis Motor Speedway qualifying record-holder Rick Mears, Don Whittington, former record-holder Tom Sneva, Mike Mosley, Al Unser, Bobby Rahal and Italian Teo Fabi.

Mosley was the fastest of the day in a March, hitting a lap average of 203.989 mph. Whittington's 205.198, turned in practice earlier in the week, remains the fastest lap so far this month.

The last time the first day of time trials was rained out was in 1979. That year, the second day was clear and 25 cars managed to qualify. The first two days of qualifying were washed away in 1978, but the second weekend of time trials was not marred by weather problems.

A complete washout of the first weekend could turn out to be a break for Johnny Rutherford, Gordon Johncock and Mario Andretti — six Indy 500 victories among them, who have been struggling just to reach the high 190s.

There is little doubt the struggling trio will make the 33-car starting lineup, but the problem for them is that starting back in the field will just make it that much more difficult to go for the victory, even over 500 miles.

Erving Leads 76ers To 3-0 Lead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — So much for the rumors that Julius Erving is slowed by bad knees.

Erving, playing like the vintage Doctor of yesteryear, fired in 18 of his 26 points in the second half Saturday.

Moses Malone added 25 points and 14 rebounds, leading Philadelphia to a 104-96 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks as the 76ers took a 3-0 lead in the National Basketball Association Eastern Conference playoff finals.

Malone scored five of his points in the final 2:50 for the 76ers, who can sweep the best-of-seven series and advance to the NBA championship series with a victory here Sunday afternoon.

"If there were any questions about Julius Erving, they were answered today," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said.

Erving left the Arena before reporters could question him, but others had plenty to say about the superstar forward.

"Doc is a 12- or 13-year veteran, and he's our leader," Malone said. "When it gets to be tight, we look for him. Doc was open because they were double- and triple-teaming me, and he took over the game."

"I thought Doc was superb," Bucks Coach Don Nelson said. "We've done a good job on him, but he got his openings today and took care of them."

The 76ers, now 7-0 in two playoff series this season, rallied behind Erving and Malone after the Bucks led by seven points early in the fourth quarter.

"I thought the fourth period was the best we've played in quite awhile," Cunningham said. "For the first time in seven games we were taking the ball and being aggressive offensively and defensively. And for the first time in this series we had the tempo the way we wanted in the last minutes.

"In the last nine minutes everyone played absolutely flawless basketball after we were down by seven," he said.

"They're awfully good, I'll say that," Nelson said. "I guess I need some help to come up with something new. They're just very solid defensively. They sure can put the clamps on you when they need it. They've done it every time."

Junior Bridgeman led the Bucks with 24 points.

Bridgeman connected from long range and rookie Paul Pressey scored on a bank jumper and a dunk as the Bucks opened a 78-71 lead with 10 minutes left to play as the 76ers went scoreless from the field for nearly $4\frac{1}{2}$ minutes.

But Maurice Cheeks responded with seven straight points, including a layup to tie the game at 78-78. After three more ties, a jump shot by Erving and a dunk by Bobby Jones on a feed from Clint Richardson put the 76ers ahead 92-88 with 3:55 to play.

Brian Winters countered with a long jumper for the Bucks, but Malone converted a three-point play and scored from inside to help the 76ers mount a 97-90 advantage with 1:48 left.

Bridgeman scored after a steal by Sidney Moncrief, but two free throws by Erving on the 76ers' next possession made it 99-92 with 43 seconds left.

The Bucks' Alton Lister scored from inside and was fouled three seconds later. However, Lister missed the free throw, and two free throws apiece by Malone and Andrew Toney gave Philadelphia a 103-94 spread with 30 seconds left.

The Bucks, clogging the middle on defense and dominating the boards in the early going, broke to a 9-1 lead.

Milwaukee defenders double- and triple-teaming Malone, twice stole the ball from the big center, and the Bucks converted at the other end both times to build their lead to 21-10.

Bridgeman scored eight points and Bob Lanier seven for the Bucks in the first quarter, which ended with Milwaukee ahead 28-23.

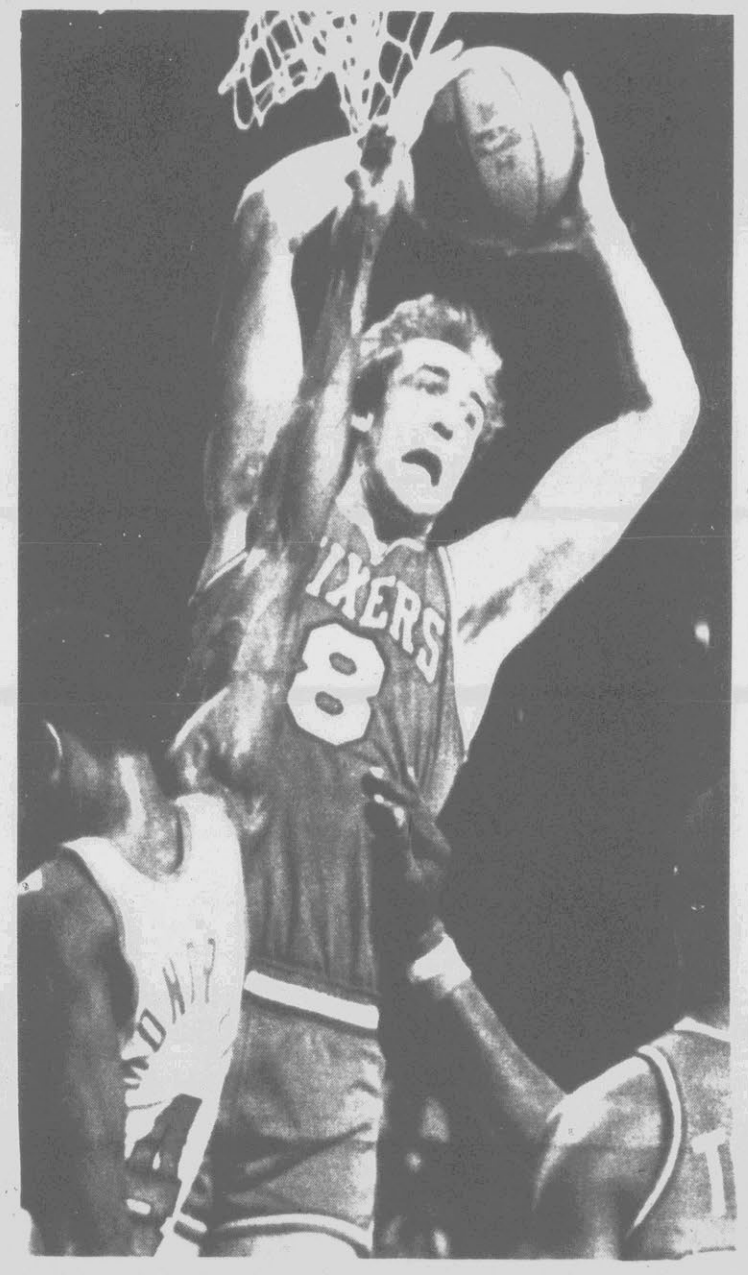

But with the Bucks' Marques Johnson and Winters shooting cold from outside, the 76ers rallied and took their first lead at 40-38 on a jump shot by Jones with 4:01 left in the first half.

But Winters hit his first basket seconds later and Moncrief added two free throws to help the Bucks regain the lead at halftime at 48-45.

Five Deadlocked In Colonial Golf

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Bobby Wadkins found some small consolation in the no-birdie, 4-over-par 74 he contrived in difficult conditions Saturday.

"It's one of the few times you can shoot a 74 and still be tied for the lead," Wadkins said Saturday after the long day's play in the third round of the $400,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament.

The round lasted almost six hours, including a lengthy delay while lightning flashed and heavy rain drenched the Colonial Country Club course.

"I'm just glad to be finished. It was a long, tough day," Wadkins said of the conditions that ranged from heat to cold, from dead calm to gusty wind, from dry to wet. As an illustration of the difference in the playing conditions, Wadkins said he hit a 7-iron on the par-3 16th Friday, and was short of the green with a 2-iron on Saturday.

"I was sweating when we started play, and you could see your breath on there on the 16th hole," Wadkins said.

Wadkins, younger brother of Lanny Wadkins, a two-time winner this season, was the leader alone entering the day's play. Even with a 4-over-par effort, he managed to retain a share of the top spot at 206, four strokes under par.

Going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize, he was tied for the lead with Jim Colbert, former Colonial winner Fuzzy Zoeller, Mike Reid and Peter Jacobsen.

"Kind of bunched up, isn't it?" Colbert said. "We ought to have us a real golf tournament tomorrow."

Colbert, a 42-year-old veteran who scored the last of his eight tour victories three years ago, birdied his last two holes for a round of par 70.

"I was two over par after nine holes, but I'd made up ground on the leader. Patience is a big thing on a day like today. I just thought, don't panic and try to scratch out a couple of birdies and you'll be right there," he said.

Jacobsen closed up with a 67 in the fickle, shifting, changing conditions. Zoeller, winner of the Heritage Classic earlier this season, shot 68. Reid matched par 70 on the course that was dubbed "Hogan's Alley" after the legendary Ben Hogan won this old event for the fifth time.

Play was held up for 1 hour and 12 minutes by lightning and heavy rains, which preceeded a cold front that dropped the temperature from 80 degrees to 59 in a matter of minutes.

"We were in a sauna bath on the fourth green and I was putting my windbreaker on in the very next fairway," Reid said.

The leaders played most of the round in a misty, drizzling rain, with shifting winds.

Joe Inman was alone at 207, a single shot off the pace, after a 69.

Bruce Lietzke, John Mahaffey, Gary Hallberg and Thomas Gray were at 208, two shots back. Mahaffey had a 69, Gray 71, Lietzke 72 and Hallberg 75.

Bobby Clampett, in the first group off the tee, played his round in calm, mild conditions before the bad weather hit. He romped around the course in 65, a score that lifted him from 13 shots off the pace to a position only four strokes back at 210.

Jack Nicklaus, the defending title-holder, continued to have his difficulties. He could do no better than a 74 and was at 215.

Colbert, who had an erratic effort that included six birdies, six bogeys and six pars, got his share of the top spot with birdie putts from the 10-12 foot range on the last two holes.

Zoeller got to four under par with a 20-footer on the 17th, then made a saving par from a bunker on the 18th.

Jacobsen joined the leaders with an excellent 5-iron shot, which he had to cut around a tree on the 17th. He got it within five feet of the flag and made birdie.

Sad Ruttman Takes M-D Pole

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Joe Ruttman won the pole position for the Mason-Dixon 500 Grand National stock car race in a record speed of 139.616 miles per hour Saturday, but his first ever pole proved bitter sweet.

Ruttman's father, who follows his son's racing career closely, died Friday of a heart attack suffered last week prior to the Marty Robbins 420 in Nashville, Tenn.

"After he had the heart attack, I wasn't sure about racing," said an emotional Ruttman. "But the last thing he told me was that he wanted me to race. He'd always been at all the races for me and he didn't want to see men give up."

Ruttman, who was the first driver to qualify for Sunday's 15th-annual Mason-Dixon 500, eclipsed Ricky Rudd's previous record of 139.385 miles per hour set before last fall's CRC Chemicals 500.

Three times this year, Ruttman, of Newell, N.C., has been second in qualifying — at the Richmond 400, Northwestern Bank 400 and the Winston 500.

"There's no question going first had to be a big advantage," said Ruttman. "In the past, I felt like I should have won some poles before, but I guess today was our day.

"In my mind, I was probably as confident as I've ever been to win a pole," he said. "We knew we were running good and after we drew the first position, we realized if we could get one of the two laps in good, we'd be hard to beat."

Alongside Ruttman in the first row will be Rudd, who had been the fastest qualifier in four grand national races this year. Rudd went 138.905 miles per hour in his qualifying session.

"I think our car ran extremely well for the time of day we ran," said Rudd. "The time when qualifying early in the day is an advantage are days like today. Later in the day, the track will heat up, so going early before it does is a real advantage."

Tim Richmond will start from the third position and Darrell Waltrip fourth in Sunday's race. Current Winston Cup point leader Harry Gant will start from the 16th position.

In addition to winning his first pole position, Ruttman is looking for his initial NASCAR Grand National victory. He won the Late Model Sportsman 200 at Dover last May, but has never finished higher than sixth place in three previous tries here.

Mason-Dixon Qualifying

The following are the results of the Mason-Dixon 500 qualifying round Saturday. The race NASCAR stockcar race will be held Sunday.

Sooner Cage Reserve Dies After Operation

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Bruce Lee, a reserve forward on the University of Oklahoma basketball team, died Saturday of complications following a routine tonsillectomy, hospital officials said.

Lee, 21, was pronounced dead at 11:14 a.m., said Margaret Barrett, a nursing supervisor at Deaconess Hospital. The woman said Lee's cause of death has not been determined.

The Edmond native had been admitted to the hospital for a tonsillectomy and apparently developed complications just after the surgery was completed, Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said.

"I went to the hospital this morning because I got word he was having problems," Tubbs said. "I got there about 11:15 or so. We went up hoping for the best, but when we got there, we learned the worst."

Lee was a 6-foot-8, 220-pound forward who saw limited action for the Sooners last season when the team finished 24-9 and went to the second round of the NCAA playoffs.

He was a three-year letterman at Edmond High School, where he received all-city and all-state honors as a center his senior year.

Lee would have had a chance for a starting job at one of the forward positions in the 1983-84 season, Tubbs said.

"I felt he had a chance to play a lot this year. Bruce made a great contribution. He was always a guy that worked hard in practice and always gave us 100 percent," Tubbs said.

"He pushed the guys and made the guys who were playing above him a better player ... he was just an outstanding guy, and a man I had a tremendous amount of respect for."

Barrett said Lee's cause of death had not been determined late Saturday. She said hospital reports indicated only that the death had come after, not during, the tonsillectomy.

Lady Tigers Top Vikes

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston pushed across five runs in the fifth inning to erase a 1-0 deficit and give the Tarboro Vikings their first loss of the 1983 Northeastern 3-A Conference softball campaign.

Hope Hopkins had a double and a pair of singles in three trips to the plate for Williamston, while winning pitcher Sharon Hopkins, Wanda Price and Shirley Godard each posted a pair of hits in three at bats. Jan Mills went 2-4 for the Lady Tigers.

Sharon Hopkins led off the fifth with a single, and after one out, Jan Mills singled and Lynn Mills walked to fill the bases. A single by Wanda Price drove in Hopkins and Jan Mills, and Valerie Smith's single scored Lynn Mills and Price.

Timberly Rodgers and Hope Hopkins singled to load the bases again, and Godard plated Rodgers with a single for the final Williamston run.

Williamston, now 12-2 in the conference, host the Washington Pam Pack Tuesday.

Williamston Takes 8-7 Win

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School stalled a rally by Tarboro just in time Saturday afternoon and held onto an 8-7 Northeastern Conference baseball victory.

The Tigers grabbed the lead in the first inning scoring twice. Williamston added one in the third before Tarboro got its first run in the fourth to trail, 3-1.

Then, in the bottom of the fourth, Williamston pushed over five big runs to run the lead out to 8-1. Tommy Wynne led off reaching on an error. Walter Willer then singled him in. James Ward singled and stole second, with both runners scoring when Les Keel reached on an error. Gray Thomas and Kevin Lee both singled, loading the bases. A single by Glenn Hardison brought in Ward, and Keel scored when Troy Raynor walked.

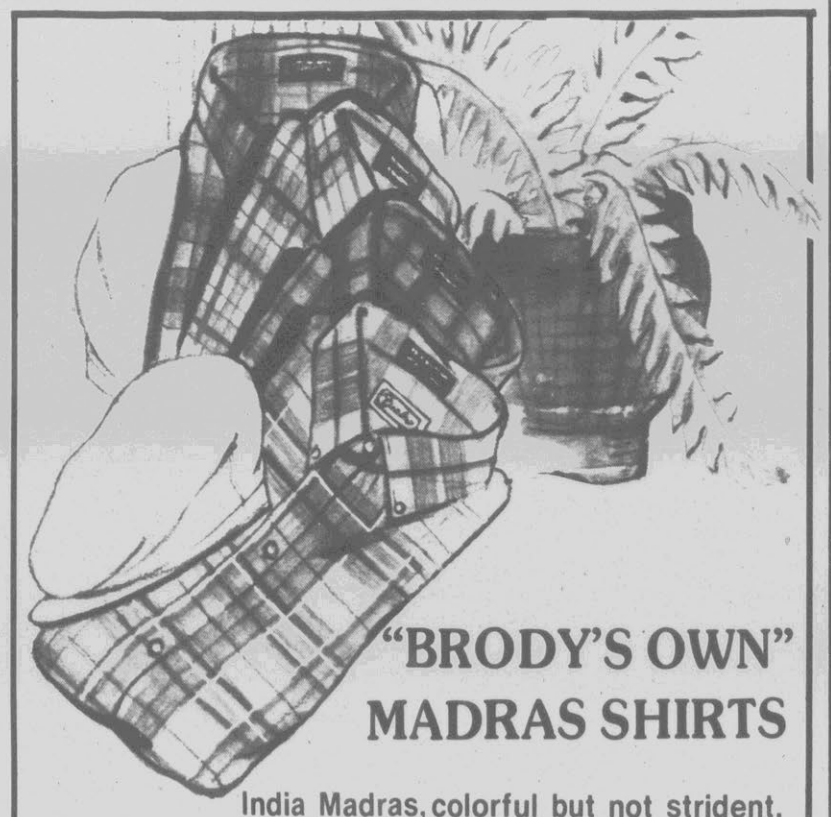

Williamston then had to scramble to put out a rally in the top of the seventh as Tarboro scored six times to pull within one run of tying it up before finally bowing.

Keith Perry had three hits to lead Williamston, while Thomas and Ward each had two. Leslie Boyd led Tarboro with a pair of hits.

Williamston is now 9-6 in Northeastern play and 10-7 overall. The Tigers play host to Washington on Tuesday.

Herr Finds Poetic Justice In Game's End

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For Tommy Herr, who thought he was cheated out of a base hit that was called foul, Saturday's ending for the St. Louis Cardinals was poetic justice.

"I like the way it ended up anyway," Herr said after his tie-breaking bases-loaded single with two out in the bottom of the 11th inning gave the Cardinals a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos. "That would have been a cheap hit, and the one I got wasn't cheap."

Herr, who had only a walk in four previous trips, fell behind on the count 0-2 with two out and the bases loaded.

After fouling off two pitches, he rapped a sharp grounder down the third-base bag which was ruled foul by umpire Lanny Harris. Two pitches later, Herr hit the ball much more decisively to the warning track in right field.

"I'm always looking for the fastball," Her said of the pitch on which he connected. "I was just trying t foul off the breaking ball and go for the fastball."

Cardinals third base coach Chuck Hiller concurred with Herr in disputing the foul call by Harris.

"I was right on top of the play, but I saw the bag under the ball," said Hiller. "I told Tommy he got two hits on one time at bat. That's no mean feat."

In addition, Herr got a second chance when Montreal first baseman Al Oliver slipped going after a pop foul that would have ended the inning.

Herr's hit came off Montreal relief ace Jeff Reardon, 1-1, and made a winner of St. Louis star Bruce Sutter, 4-1, who entered in the 10th.

Ken Oberkfell singled to start the 11th and went to third on Keith Hernandez's one-out double. Reardon intentionally walked Darrell Porter to load the bases and struck out pinch hitter Jamie Quirk. But Herr ripped his game-winning hit after Oliver slipped and fell on the rain-drenched warning track while chasing his pop foul.

St. Louis starter Dave LaPoint carried a five-hit shutout and a 2-0 lead into the ninth inning. However, with one out he walked Chris Speier and surrendered a pinch single to Oliver. Speier and Oliver advanced on Doug Flynn's grounder and both scored when pinch hitter Warren Cromartie singled.

Willie McGee walked to open the St. Louis first, stole second and continued to third when catcher Bobby Ramos bounced his throw into center field. Oberkfell then sliced a sinking line drive to left and when Tim Raines tried for a shoestring catch the ball went off his glove for a double as McGee scored.

Montreal starter Steve Rogers then checked the Cardinals until Porter belted his fifth homer of the year in the seventh for a 2-0 lead.

It was St. Louis' fourth straight victory, including three in a row over Montreal.

Germain Hopes For 2nd Win At Virginia Classic

SUFFOLK, Va. (AP) — Veteran Dot Germain, who has won only one tourney in nine years on the LPGA tour, fired an 8-under-par 64 Saturday for a 36-hole total of 137 and a 4-shot lead in the $150,000 United Virginia Bank Classic.

Five shots off the lead after Friday's opening round, Germain had two birdie runs of three holes in a row. The 35-year-old president of the LPGA Player Council finished her round over the 6,200-yard Sleepy Hole Golf Course with nine birdies and one bogey.

LeAnn Cassaday, who has made the cut in only one of eight tournaments this season, and Stephanie Farwig were tied for second at 141. Farwig shot a 68 Saturday and Cassaday, who said her best previous round this year was a 71, had a 69.

First-day leader Alice Miller, still looking for her first tour victory, soared to a 74 after her opening 68 and was tied for fourth at 142 with Debbie Massey, who added a 69 to her opening 73.

There was a four-way deadlock at 143, 1 under par going into Sunday's final round, among Betsy King and Leonore Muraoka, Myra Van Hoose and Mary Dwyer.

One of the pre-tournament favorites, Beth Daniel, shot her second 72 and was tied at 144 with Silvia Bertolaccini and Kathy Postlewait.

The only former winner of this tournament, Jan Stephenson — who holds the record with a 14-under-par 205 two years ago — shot a 77 for a 152 and barely made the cut, which was at 153.

Depending on how it's figured, Germain tied the tournament record for one round. Nancy Lopez had a 64 three years ago at Elizabeth Manor, but that was 9 under par. Last year's winner, Sally Little, shot a 65 at Sleepy Hole when the par was 73.

Reuss, Chicken Lift L.A.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Even the San Diego Chicken couldn't stop Jerry Reuss from pitching the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 4-1 victory over the Padres Saturday.

"The Chicken is there for fun, and I wish I could have sat there and watched him perform," said Reuss, who on several occasions continued his warm-up pitches while the Chicken went through his antics just a few feet away. "He sets those things up before the game and I told him it's fine with me but just don't come too close."

Padre hitters weren't coming too close to Reuss, either. Reuss, 5-1, allowed five hits and struck out six in pitching his first complete game of the season.

"I did everything a pitcher looks to do when he takes the mound," said Reuss. "I was able to get ahead of the hitters and then work them in and out. My location was excellent and I was able to maintain my intensity in the late innings."

Home runs by Mike Scioscia and Greg Brock backed Reuss' pitching as the Dodgers posted their eighth victory in the last 10 games.

Reuss, who ran his lifetime record against the Padres to 17-5, retired the first 10 batters he faced before Gene Richards beat out a high chopper to first base with one out in the fourth for the first San Diego hit. Juan Bonilla doubled Richards to third and he scored on a grounder by Steve Garvey.

San Diego's Eric Show, 4-2, gave up only five hits in seven innings, but two of them came in the second when Ron Roenicke singled and Scioscia belted his first home run of the season to give the Dodgers a 2-0 lead.

Los Angeles got only two more hits off Show, including Brock's seventh homer leading off the fourth.

The Dodgers' final run came in the eighth off Floyd Chiffer. Steve Sax extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a leadoff single, was balked to second, moved to third on a grounder and scored when Pedro Guerrero's grounder to short skipped off Mario Ramirez's glove for an error.

Shirley Struggles, Yanks Hold Off Sox

NEW YORK (AP) — For seven innings, Bob Shirley had coasted along with a two-hit shutout while the New York Yankees built a 7-0 lead over Chicago.

But that changed quickly as the White Sox faught back with five runs in the next two innings before reliever Rich Gossage stopped them.

"I just ran out of steam," said Shirley, 2-2, following the Yankees' 8-5 victory Saturday that extended Chicago's losing streak to five games. "Maybe I did lose some concentration. I'm mad about that."

Gossage, who struggled earlier in the season, came on with the bases loaded and none out. He retired two batters before pinch hitter Rudy Law poked a two-run opposite-field single but picked up his fourth save in his last four appearances.

"I'm beginning to get guys out now," Gossage said after the Yankees' 12 hits and eight runs broke them out of a three-game batting slump in which they scored only six runs while managing just 16 hits.

"It feels good to be back in the ballpark," said Manager Billy Martin, who had been suspended for those three games. "But it feels better to see those runs and hits on the board."

Jerry Mumphrey collected four hits, including a triple, boosting his average to .244.

"This is a big psychological lift for me," said the center fielder, whose four-hit effort was only the second of the season for the Yanks. "And it was a really big lift for the team."

Shirley blanked the White Sox on two hits until the eighth, when he lost his shutout bid and was nicked for three runs after issuing his only two walks. Shirley struck out five and left after Ron Kittle's leadoff single in the ninth.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Bert Campaneris walked with one out and Dave Winfield tripled off Britt Burns, 0-2, who lasted into the seventh inning and was charged with four runs. Last year, Burns posted a 2-0 record against New York and did not allow an earned run in 18 1-3 innings.

The Yankees added a run in the second inning when Mumphrey singled, stole second and scored on Andre Robertson's single.

New York put the game away with a five-run seventh, capped by Rick Cerone's two-run single. Mumphrey's leadoff triple and a walk to Robertson chased Burns. Willie Randolph and Campaneris laced RBI singles off Dennis Lamp and Don Baylor delivered a sacrifice fly. Campaneris doubled home the Yankees' final run in the eighth.

Seattle 4
Oakland 1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Another rookie left-hander assumed the stopper role Saturday when Seattle's Matt Young pitched the Mariners to a 4-1 victory over the Oakland A's.

Oakland's Bill Krueger had beaten Seattle 9-2 Friday night, but it was Young's turn Saturday as he scattered four hits in eight innings to improve his record to 4-3, the same as Krueger's. Both young hurlers lead their teams in victories.

"Him (Young) and Krueger — they're the best two young left-handers I've seen since (New York's Dave) Righetti," said Seattle Manager Rene Lachemann. "I think Matt right now throws a little harder. But they both are doing the things good pitchers do."

"We've kind of been chasing each other all year," said Young. "I was looking at his (Krueger's) stats before the game and we both had the same amount of innings, walks, and strikeouts. It was amazing."

Dave Henderson's three-run homer in the fourth inning gave Young the support he needed and made a loser out of Oakland's Rick Langford, 0-4. Since coming off the disabled list May 4, Langford has allowed 12 earned runs in less than seven innings and may be taken out of the rotation.

"I'm just not capable of telling you what the problem is," said Langford. "Against Henderson, I had him 0-2, but when I tried to bust him high and inside, I threw the ball right over the plate instead. That was the strategy involved. You know, the outcome."

The Mariners nicked Langford for a run in the first inning on a walk to Al Cowens and Pat Putnam's triple. With one out in the fourth, singles by Putnam and Ken Phelps preceded Henderson's fourth home run of the season.

Oakland scored an unearned run in the sixth. Bill Almon walked, went to third on a wild pickoff throw by Young and scored on Jeff Burroughs' single.

Young, 4-3, allowed all four Oakland hits, walked four and struck out six in eight innings before Bill Caudill came on to earn his seventh save.

Toronto 8
Cleveland 1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Luis Leal's flirt with immortality was dashed by something truly immortal — Mother Nature.

Leal pitched five hitless innings against Cleveland Saturday before a long rain delay forced his removal. Roy Lee Jackson came on and yielded one hit — Chris Bando's eighth-inning line single to left — as the Blue Jays defeated the Indians 8-1.

The 1-hour, 42-minute rain delay came with Toronto batting and leading 6-0 in the top of the sixth.

"I said to myself, 'Rain, oh well, I don't care.' I just wanted us to win anyway we could," Leal said after evening his record at 3-3. "(Manager) Bobby Cox and I talked during the delay and we figured a couple of hours was just too long to sit. He said he's bringing in Roy Lee and I said okay."

Leal, a 26-year-old right-hander, didn't strike out a batter while walking four. The effort was his third straight victory. Ironically, Leal was the losing pitcher May 15, 1981, when Len Barker of the Indians threw a perfect game at the Blue Jays in Cleveland Stadium.

Cox explained that the long rain delay wait made it "too long for him to continue. I talked to him a couple of times during the delay and he said it was up to me as to what we would do. He had a long way to go (for the no-hitter), too.

"His last two starts before this were outstanding with just super stuff," Cox said, adding, "You should have seen him his last time in Chicago if you want to talk about no-hit stuff."

The Blue Jays provided Leal and Jackson with more than enough support in a six-run fourth inning, putting together seven consecutive hits with two out to pin the loss on Bert Blyleven, 3-4.

Jackson retired the Indians in order in the sixth and seventh, but walked George Vukovich with one out in the eighth. Bando followed with his single and a walk to Mike Hargrove loaded the bases. Vukovich scored on Rick Manning's grounder.

Jackson issued another walk in the ninth, the seventh by the two Toronto pitchers. Neither Leal nor Jackson struck out a batter.

Leal came into Saturday's contest with a 4.07 earned run average having allowed 42 hits and 19 earned runs in 42 innings but with complete-game victories in his last two outings.

Leal walked two batters in the first inning, but retired Pat Tabler on a grounder to end the threat. He walked Rick Manning with two out in the third and picked him off first.

Manny Trillo drew a leadoff walk from Leal in the fifth. After Julio Franco flied out, Vukovich ripped a line drive slightly to the left of center field. Moseby, who was playing Vukovich to pull, made a running, diving catch and Bando lined sharply to first baseman Willie Upshaw for the third out.

Toronto started its fourth-inning uprising against Blyleven with two-out singles by Barry Bonnell and Hosken Powell. Bonnell scored on a passed ball by Bando, Alfredo Griffin's double made it 2-0 and Rance Mulliniks' RBI single produced the third run.

After a single by Garth Iorg, Upshaw's two-run triple made it 5-0 and chased Blyleven. Pinch hitter Cliff Johnson greeted Ed Glynn with an RBI single. The Blue Jays added a run in the sixth on another passed ball by Bando and Bonnell doubled a run across in the ninth.

There have been only four combined no-hitters in baseball history. The last came when Blue Moon Odom and Francisco Barrios of the Chicago White Sox teamed up to stop the Oakland A's 2-1 on July 28, 1976.

Akeem Still Cougs' Dream

HOUSTON (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon, the 7-foot center who led Phi Slama Jamma into the NCAA basketball final, said Saturday he'll return to the University of Houston rather than turn pro and forgo his junior year.

Olajuwon, who had been wavering all week, announced his decision just hours before the National Basketball Association's midnight Saturday deadline for underclassmen to notify the league of their intention to leave college.

"I'm definitely going to stay in school," he said in a CBS interview during halftime of the Philadelphia 76ers-Milwaukee Bucks NBA playoff game.

He said he had conferred with his family in Lagos, Nigeria, before making his decision "and they want me to stay in school, so I decided to stay in school."

Earlier this week, Memphis State's Keith Lee, Georgetown's Patrick Ewing and Earl Jones of the University of the District of Columbia, said they also would stay in school another season. Lee is a 6-10 junior forward, while Ewing and Jones are both 7-foot sophomore centers.

Olajuwon said Houston Coach Guy Lewis was out of town and did not aware of his final decision.

"He thought I was going to go," Olajuwon said.

Houston teammate Clyde Drexler, a junior forward, announced Friday that he would turn pro.

Other underclassmen who have decided to turn pro so far are center Russell Cross of Purdue and guards Ennis Whatley of Alabama, Byron Scott of Arizona State and Derek Harper of Illinois. Whatley is a sophomore while the others are juniors.

"It's my childhood dream and I was not going to let the opportunity pass me by," Drexler said Saturday.

Olajuwon said he had three goals: to be an All-American, to get his degree and to win the national championship. The Cougars almost did last month, losing 54-52 to North Carolina State in the final seconds on a dunk while Olajuwon was out of position.

Drexler was a second-team All-American and was the team's No. 2 leading scorer with a 16.3 average. Olajuwon led the Cougars with 67 dunks and was among the nation's leading rebounders with an 11.2 average last season.

Drexler said he advised Olajuwon he had to make his own decision and not follow Drexler's lead.

"Clyde told Akeem, 'Don't do anything just because I'm doing it,'" Houston attorney Jerry Bonney said. "I think that helped."

The Cougars advanced to the Final Four of the NCAA tournament two years straight with Drexler and Olajuwon as the backbone of the team.

Bolling Leads Gold Cup Golf

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Reigning South African Open champion Charlie Bolling turned in a 3-under-par 68 Saturday to take the lead after three rounds in the $150,000 Chattanooga Gold Cup Classic at Valleybrook Golf and Country Club.

Bolling holds a 2-shot edge over Gavin Levenson, who shot a 67 Saturday, with a three-round total of 201, 12 under.

Three strokes back at 204 are Tommy Aaron, Jeff Mitchell and Skeeter Heath.

Aaron moved into contention by tying the course record of 63 with a nine-birdie, one-bogey round.

Little league

Carroll & Assoc. 5
Pepsi-Cola. 3

Julius Smith hit a two run homer in the fourth inning and helped Carroll & Associates to a 5-3 victory over Pepsi-Cola yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.

Carroll & Associates took the lead in the second inning, scoring one, but Pepsi came back with two in the top of the third. Carroll came right back with two in the bottom of the frame, regaining the lead, 3-2.

Then, in the fourth, C&A got the winning runs. Travis Williamson walked and after two outs, Smith connected for his roundtripper, powering Carroll into a 5-2 lead.

Pepsi came back with one in the fifth, but could muster no more runs.

Smith led the C&A hitting with two, while Peter Rivera and Bill Blizzard each had two hits for Pepsi.

Wellcome 5
True Value 2

Chris Brown had two hits and scored two runs to lead Wellcome to a 5-2 Tar Heel Little League victory over True Value Hardware Saturday.

Wellcome scored once in the first inning as Brown's first hit brought in the run. True Value, however, moved ahead, 2-1, with a pair of runs in the third.

Wellcome came back with three in the third, however, to move ahead for good, 4-2. Blake Stallings reached on an error and Judd Crumpler singled, moving up on the throw. Brown reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Stallings. Adam Nobles then sacrificed in Crumpler, and after Brown took third on a passed ball, he scored on Jared Dancy's grounder.

The other run came in the fifth.

Brown was the only hitter with more than one for Wellcome, while no one had more than one for True Value.

Sportsworld 12
Union Carbide 4

Timmy Moore cracked two homers and drove in five runs in leading Sportsworld to a 12-4 North State Little League victory over Union Carbide yesterday.

Union Carbide scored first with one in the top of the first, but Sportsworld came up with four in the bottom of the inniing, two on Moore's first homer.

Sportsworld then added the two that counted most in the second, insuring the win with a 6-1 lead. Ledowick Johnson walked as did Moore. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Jamie Brewington singled both of them home.

Sportsworld added three more in the third, all on Moore's second homer. Three more scored in the fifth.

Union Carbide picked up two more in the third and one in the fifth.

Brewington led the Sportsworld hitting with three, while Moore had two. No one had more than one for Union Carbide, which got only three hits off the combined pitching of Moore and Brewington.

Coca-Cola 6
Jaycees 4

Coca-Cola pushed out into an early lead, then held off a Jaycee rally in the sixth inning to take a 6-4 North State Little League victory Saturday.

Coke gained the lead with three in the first inning and added one to it in the second.

What proved the difference scored in the fourth. Derrick Hines led off with a single and took second on an error on the play. Michael Smith reached on an error and Kevin Jordan walked, loading the bases. Bill Gorham singled in Hines, and Todd Taylor grounded out, driving in Smith for a 6-0 lead.

The Jaycees then rallied for four in the bottom of the sixth, two of them on a homer by David Gordon and a third on a solo shot by Carlester Crumpler, before Coke finally put out the fire.

Hines led the Coke hitting with three, while Gorham added two. Neal Creech and Gordon each had two hits for the Jaycees.

Babe Ruth League

Wachovia Bank 7
Brown & Wood 3

Wachovia Bank rallied for five runs in the sixth inning and gained a 7-3 victory over Brown & Wood in the opening game of the Greenville Babe Ruth League campaign Saturday.

Brown & Wood took the initial lead, scoring once in the first. They added a second run in the third inning.

But in the sixth, Wachovia rallied for five to charge ahead for good. Lee Eakes reached on an error and Larke Weatherington walked. Anthony Coward singled, scoring Eakes and Weatherington. Tim Bland walked with one away, and Mike Sasser singled in Coward. Mike Joyner singled to score Bland, and a hit by Steve Morris brought over Sasser.

Wachovia added two more in the seventh to wrap up its scoring, while Brown & Wood scored once in the bottom of the frame.

Sasser led the Wachovia hitting with two, while William Smith and Patrick Kanetzke each had two for Brown & Wood.

Pepsi-Cola. 18
Everette's 17

Pepsi-Cola outlasted Everette's Pest Control, 18-17, in the opening Babe Ruth League game of the year for the two teams.

Pepsi pushed over nine runs in the top of the second, three of them on a homer by Sterling Edwards, but Everette's came back with four in the bottom of the frame. Pepsi picked up three more in the third, while Everette's scored one in the inning. Pepsi scored two more runs in the fourth, with Everette's rallying for five, three on Curtis Perkins' home run.

That made it 14-9 in favor of Pepsi at that point.

Everette's scored once in the fifth, only to see Pepsi get what proved to be the difference in the sixth, scoring four times.

Maurice Wilson led off the sixth for Pepsi with a single and Kelly Parisher walked. Sterling Edwards was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Brian Walsh walked, forcing in Wilson, and Earl Wooten singled in Parisher. An error on the play let Edwards score, and another brought in Walsh for an 18-10 edge.

Everette's rallied for two in the sixth then scored four more in the seventh before finally falling one run short.

Parisher and Edwards each had two hits for Pepsi, while Axel Smith, George Saad, Robbie Erhman and Lee Lewis each had two for Everette's.

Planters Bank 14
Coca-Cola 9

Planters Bank downed Coca-Cola, 14-9, as the two teams opened the 1983 Babe Ruth League baseball season Saturday afternoon.

Planters jumped on Coke early, scoring seven times in the first inning. Coke rallied for three in the bottom of the frame, however.

Planters scored three more times in the second, sewing it up. Tom Taylor led off with a triple and Tyrone Jones walked. A wild pitch let Taylor score and moved Jones to second, and he came on to score on an error on the play. Jimmy Gillahan walked and stole second. He scored when Clark Stallings reached on an error.

Planters then added two in the third and two more in the sixth. Coke came back with one in the fourth, one in the fifth and four in the seventh.

Eric Jarman led the Planters' hitting with three, while Taylor and Monty Atkinson each had two. Ervin Best, Anthony Cobb and Van Alston each had two for Coke.

Prep League

Garris-Evans 14
Hendrix & Dail 0

M. Holloman tossed a three-hit shutout as Garris-Evans rolled to a 14-0 victory over Hendrix & Dail Saturday in Prep League action.

The win left both teams with 1-1 records on the young season.

Garris-Evans got all it needed in the first, scoring twice. With two away, C. Crandell singled and stole second. R. McDonald singled him in, and scored on an error on the play.

Garris-Evans added three in the third, five in the fifth, and four more in the sixth.

McDonald had two hits to led the G-E hitting, while no one had more than one for H&D.

Shop-Eze 10
1st State Bank. 9

Shop-Eze Foodland outlasted First State Bank to gain its first win of the Prep League season Saturday. The loss was the first for the Bankers.

Shop-Eze pushed over two runs in the first inning, but the Bankers came back with two of their own in the bottom of the frame. Shop-Eze added three more in the second, while the Bankers picked up a pair to trail, 5-4.

But one run by Shop-Eze in the third and three by First State Bank left the Bankers up, 7-6.

Shop-Eze then tied it up with one in the fourth, and added two more in the fifth before the Bankers knotted it still once more, with two in the bottom of the fifth, 9-9.

Then, in the sixth, Shop-Eze got the winning run. Morris Johnson reached on an error and scred on Jay Mattox' sacrifice.

Dallas McPherson and Johnson each had two hits for Shop-Eze, while Throckmorton, J. Groome and D. Tripp each had two for First State.

Laker 'Magic' Too Much For San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Los Angeles' Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 13 points on Friday the 13th.

Everything else went his way.

Johnson had a team-high 11 rebounds, game-high 13 assists and blocked three shots Friday night as the Lakers crushed the San Antonio Spurs 113-100 to take a 2-1 lead in the National Basketball Association Western Conference finals.

The fourth game of the best-of-seven series is here Sunday afternoon.

Spurs Coach Stan Albeck sounded close to superstitious about the "Magic" guard.

"I'm almost positive that since Magic has been in LA, the Lakers have won the first game on the visitors floor in every series," Albeck said. "He's uncanny."

The two teams split the opening games of the series played in California.

Forward Jamaal Wilkes was game-high Friday with 26 points for the Lakers, and center Kareem Adbul-Jabbar added 25.

Wilkes scored 12 of his points in the decisive third quarter, when the defending NBA champion Lakers outscored San Antonio 34-19 to nail down the lead for good.

Johnson did not score a single point in the third quarter — but it was his favorite part of the game.

"We got our lead up to 13 or 14 points in that quarter," he said. "Then I could start feeling more comfortable. I enjoyed the rest of the game."

Both teams have specific missions in this series, besides winning.

The Spurs want to atone for last year's Western Conference finals, in which Los Angeles humiliated them by sweeping four straight games.

The Lakers want to become the first team to repeat as NBA title winners since the Boston Celtics did it in 1968 and 1969.

San Antonio's hopes to save face were slapped Friday night when guard Johnny Moore, who has shone throughout the playoffs, suffered a deep bruise on his upper left calf.

Moore played most of the game and had an off-night, finishing with only nine points. Team doctors said they did not know if he would be able to play Sunday afternoon.

"Somebody just knocked into me," Moore said. "I don't know how it happened."

The Spurs went up 29-28 at the end of the first period, and led most of the first half.

San Antonio gained a 21-16 margin on a layup by George Gervin with 4:20 left in the first period, and stayed comfortably ahead until Bob McAdoo came in late in the quarter and scored six quick points to cut the deficit to 27-26.

The Lakers tied the score twice late in the second quarter at 49-49 and 51-51 and grabbed a one-point lead when Norm Nixon sank a free throw.

But Edgar Jones was fouled by McAdoo and hit both free throws with 14 seconds left to give San Antonio a 53-53 halftime edge.

After Los Angeles third-quarter streak, the Spurs never got closer than 10 points, which they managed at 96-86 with 7:46 left in the game.

Nixon finished with 22 points for the Lakers, followed by McAdoo with 12 and Michael Cooper with 10.

Evans Enjoying Early Hitting Streak

By The Associated Press

In his 12-year major league career, Darrell Evans has hit 239 home runs and sometime next season he should be closing in on 1,000 runs batted in. But he has rarely, if ever, been on a streak like the one he's on now.

Evans has hit safely in 12 consecutive games and a .577 streak over the last six games — 15-for-26 — has boosted his batting average to .330, a heady figure for a slugger who came into the year with a .251 career mark and has never hit higher than .281 over a full season.

"I don't know what I'm doing," said Evans, who ignited San Francisco's eighth-run fourth inning with a double and capped it with a two-run homer — he also had a single — as the Giants defeated the Cincinnati Reds 8-5 Friday night for their eighth victory in the last nine games.

"I don't think I've ever been in a better streak as far as hitting the ball hard. Even in batting practice I'm hitting the ball hard. Until it stops, I'm not even going to try to think about what I'm doing."

In other National League games, the Chicago Cubs hammered the Philadelphia Phillies 10-2, the San Diego Padres turned back the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-4, the Houston Astros downed the Atlanta Braves 5-2, the St. Louis Cardinals nipped the Montreal Expos 5-4 in 12 innings and the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the New York Mets 2-1.

With Cincinnati leading 1-0, Evans doubled to lead off the fourth inning against Rich Gale. Doubles by Chili Davis and Max Venable put the Giants in front 2-1 and Duane Kuiper and Johnnie LeMaster contributed two-run singles before Evans' seventh home run of the season completed the scoring.

Evans' hitting has drummed up memories of his 1973 season with Atlanta when he hit 41 homers and drove in 104 runs.

"Even in 1973 and '74 I don't remember being this consistent for this period of time," he said. "It's been two weeks, and I don't think I've had a bad game during that time."

"I think he's surprised everybody the way he's hitting the ball so consistently," said Manager Frank Robinson, a Hall of Fame slugger. "I think he's surprised himself a little, that's how hot he's been. I'm sure even he has to be somewhat surprised."

Cubs 10, Phillies 2

Keith Moreland's two-run homer capped a five-run fourth inning to lead the Chicago Cubs to their third straight victory and hand the Phillies their third loss in a row. With Chicago leading 3-2, winning pitcher Steve Trout singled for his first major league hit with one out in the fourth off loser Larry Christenson and one out later Larry Bowa walked.

Bill Buckner singled to score Trout and Bowa scored on a passed ball by Bo Diaz. Leon Durham singled to score Buckner and Moreland, who singled home two runs in the first, greeted Porfi Altamirano with his fourth homer. The Cubs broke a 2-2 tie in the third when Buckner doubled, took third on an infield out and scored on Ron Cey's sacrifice fly.

Padres 6, Dodgers 4

Gene Richards and Sixto Lezcano hit two-run homers in San Diego's four-run first and the Padres held on. Dave Dravecky, 6-1, the NL's first six-game winner, scattered 10 hits and was relieved by Luis DeLeon in the eighth.

After Alan Wiggins drew a leadoff walk in the bottom of the first, Richards homered off Burt Hooton. Two outs later, Terry Kennedy walked and Lezcano followed with his homer. Wiggins scored in the second on Steve Garvey's sacrifice fly and again in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Juan Bonilla after the Dodgers pulled within 5-4.

Astros 5, Braves 2

Houston's Dickie Thon ignited a four-run first inning with the first of two run-scoring doubles as the Braves lost a third consecutive game for the first time this season. With one out in the first, Terry Puhl singled and scored on Thon's double. Loser Rick Behenna balked Thon to third, Phil Garner walked and Jose Cruz made it 2-0 with an RBI single. The Astros added two more runs on Harry Spilman's run-scoring single and Alan Ashby's RBI grounder. Puhl singled with two out in the second and scored on Thon's double. Winner Mike LaCoss scattered seven hits, including Dale Murphy's solo homer in the fourth. The Astrodome was the only ballpark in which Murphy had not previously homered.

Cardinals 5, Expos 4

George Hendrick led off the bottom of the 12th against Bryn Smith, the fourth Montreal pitcher, with his seventh homer of the season and his first since April 27. The Cardinals tied it for the fourth time with a run in the bottom of the ninth on Darrell Porter's RBI double, taking starter Joaquin Andujar, who has lost five in a row, off the hook.

Warren Cromartie and Tim Wallach homered for the Expos and starter Chris Welsh, making his debut in a Montreal uniform, allowed nine hits and three runs in 7 1-3 innings.

Pirates 2, Mets 1

Mike Easler, who doubled home Pittsburgh's first run in the fifth inning for his first RBI of the season, singled home the winner with one out in the bottom of the ninth. Dave Parker opened the inning with a single and stole second.

Rose Locks Up Playoff Berth

Rose High School's Rampants, despite losing their first game of the season to Wilson Fike Thursday, found themselves back in the state 4-A playoffs Friday night.

Wilson Beddingfield rolled to a 12-0 victory over Wilson Hunt, eliminating the Warriors from the title picture. The Bruins are now 8-4 with two games left to play, while Rose is 11-1. Rocky Mount is now alone in second place with a 9-3 record, but lost both of its games with Rose.

That gives Rose the league's lone playoff berth regardless of the outcome of the next two games for the Rampants or Rocky Mount. A single Rose win in the final two contests — or a single Rocky Mount loss would clinch the Big East baseball title outright for the Rampants, who have now earned no worse than a tie for the crown.

Rose's softball team, meanwhile, remained tied with Hunt for first place in that race. Northern Nash dropped out of a tie with a loss Friday. Rose and Hunt meet Tuesday in a game that could very well decide the championship.

Rampants Win Fourth Straight

WILSON — Rose High School's Rampants won the Wilson Sectional Track and Field Championships for the fourth straight year Friday, easily capturing the title with 96 points.

Tarboro finished in second place with 75 points, while Wilson Fike, the host team — and co-champion with Rose of the Big East Conference, was third with 74.

Rose qualified for regional competition in ten events, while Roanoke advanced in three and Farmville Central in two.

Edward Frazier was the big gun for the Rampants, winning one event and finishing second in two others. Frazier took first place in the 400-meter dash with a time of 49.3 seconds, and added second place finishes in the 100 and 200-meter events.

Roanoke's Donnie Wallace won two events during the competition. He captured first place in the shot put with a heave of 58 feet, 8 inches, and added the discus title with a throw of 157 feet, 6 inches.

Rose claimed first place in five events. Roswell Streeter took first in the high jump with a leap of 6 feet, 7½ inches, a new Rampant school record. Tommy Sparkman also set a new school standard with a leap of 45 feet, 3½ inches, as he won the triple jump.

John Ormond added the title in the 1,600-meter run, finishing in the time of 4:25.8. He was also second in the 3,200-meter run in 10:09.

Rose's 880-yard relay team of Frankie Carr, Craig Dupree, Kevin Michaels and Roderick Harrell, also took first place, with a time of 1:28.3.

Other Rampants qualifying for the regionals included: William Waugh in the shot, second in 50-5¼; and John Byrd, third in the 800-meter run in 1:59.23.

Also qualifying from the area were Farmville Central's Wesley Carmon, third in the 100 and third in the 200; and Roanoke's Ricky Highsmith, third in the long jump.

The top three qualify in each event.

Non-qualifiers placing in the sectionals were: Rose's Donnell Lee, fourth in the high jump at 6-4; Conley's Steven King, fourth in the 100 and fourth in the 200; Conley's Chester Paramore, fifth in the 3200; Farmville's Faison, fourth in the discus; Conley's James Roach, fourth in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles; Conley's 3200 relay team of Roach, King, Rodney Speight and Gary Nichols, fourth; and Rose's 440-yard relay team of Carr, Dupree, Rodney Smith and Harrell, fourth in 42.9.

Rose missed out on another qualifier when Burney Carraway, one of only two pole vaulters entered in that event failed to clear the starting height. Carraway had broken his pole earlier in the week and had not gotten used to the new one.

Following the top three schools in the team standings were: Rocky Mount 44, Northeastern 29, Roanoke 28, Bertie 24, Washington 19, Conley 18, Northern Nash 18, Farmville Central 16, Hunt 14, Beddingfield 14, Roanoke Rapids 10, Warren County 10, Williamston 8, SouthWest Edgecombe 5, and Ahoskie 3.

Farmville Central Upsets Aycock, Conference Race

PIKEVILLE — Farmville Central continued its role of giant killer Friday night, outlasting Charles B. Aycock, 7-6, to throw the Eastern Carolina baseball race back into a virtual tie.

Aycock has now completed its league schedule with a 9-3 mark. Ayden-Grifton, 8-3, has a game remaining with North Pitt on Tuesday, and can pull into a tie for the title with a victory in that contest. A loss, however, would let Aycock take the title alone.

Aycock jumped into the lead in the game with two runs in the first inning. Farmville came back to score once in the second, and both teams scored single runs in the fourth to lead Aycock ahead, 3-2.

In the top of the fifth, Farmville put together a four-run rally, moving into a 6-3 lead. With one out, Randy Daniels walked and Wade Corbett reached on an error. Alvin Baker doubled, driving in Daniels. Bobby Carraway walked, loading the bases, and Gerald Wilson grounded out. Corbett scored on the play, and when the Falcon first baseman tried to pick off the runner at second, he threw the ball away, allowing both Baker and Carraway to score.

Aycock then rallied for three in the bottom of the fifth, tying it at 6-all.

But Farmville's Corbett cracked a solo homer in the sixth, giving the Jaguars a 7-6 lead and then held on for the rest of the game to pull out the win.

Baker led the Farmville hitting with three, two of them doubles, while Taylor Walston and Billy Godley each had two. Tyndall had a pair of hits to lead Aycock.

Farmville, which earlier dropped Ayden-Grifton out of first place in the league race, is now 10-8 overall and 6-5 in the league. The Jaguars finish up their season on Tuesday, hosting Southern Nash.

West Craven Tops D.H. Conley, 11-4

VANCEBORO — West Craven pounded the D.H. Conley Vikings for seven runs in the second inning and went on to take an 11-4 decision in the battle for the cellar of the Coastal 3-A Conference baseball race.

"It's kind of bad when you lose to a team that's lost 14 in a row," said Conley coach Gerald Garner. "But they really pounded the ball well."

Winning pitcher Ray Elks led the Eagles with a pair of hits in four at bats, while Calvin Phillips paced the Vikings with a double and a pair of singles in four trips to the plate.

It appeared early in the game that West Craven would have its 15th loss in as many outings, as Conley jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the top of the first.

Randy Mills opened the game with a single for the Vikings. Chris Via reached first on an error, allowing Mills to move to third. After Via stole second, Fred Bryant singled in the runners to give Conley the early edge.

But West Craven retaliated in the second with six of the seven Eagle hits of the night. Elks slapped a leadoff single, Jay McLawhorn was hit by a pitch and a sacrifice advanced the runners to second and third. A single by Roy Adams drove in both runners, and Willie White followed with another single.

Mark Gamble's single plated Adams and White. Roy Thomas reached first on an error and later stole second, and a single by catcher Chuck Daugherty pushed across two more runs. A single by Chuck Moore drove in Daugherty to end the scoring barrage.

Conley bounced back for a run in the top of the third. Phillips and catcher Stacy McCarter singled, advanced on a sacrifice and Phillips scored on a wild pitch.

After West Craven put the game out of reach with four more runs in the sixth, Conley added a lone run in the seventh, as Phillips doubled and later scored on a single by Richie Overton.

West Craven improved its record to 1-14 overall with a 1-8 mark in the conference. Conley holds an identical 1-8 conference record, while 7-13 overall.

The Vikings travel to league-leading Havelock Tuesday.

Rose Girls Win, 4-3; Set Up Battle With Hunt For Crown

WILSON — Rose High School's Rampettes downed Wilson Fike, 4-3, in a Big East softball game Friday, retaining a share of first place in the league standings.

The Rose win, coupled with a Hunt victory over Beddingfield, left the two tied for first place with 9-3 records. Northern Nash, which went into Friday's games also tied for first, lost to Kinston and drops to third.

Rose scored three times in the top of the first inning against the Golden Demons to take the lead for good, but it was a single run in the second that eventually made the difference.

That came when Lisa Leggett reached on a two-out single, moved up on a hit by Amanda Smith and scored on Karen Carraway's hit.

Fike rallied for one in the fourth and two more in the seventh before Rose finally got the door slammed shut.

Laura Vincent, Smith and Carraway each had two hits for Rose, one of Vincent's a triple. Tammy Keen had two hits to lead Fike.

Rose and Hunt could settle it all come Tuesday when the two meet in a 4 p.m. game at Guy Smith softball field. The winner of that game will move into first place, pending one more game that will wind up the year for each. Rose needs one victory to assure itself of one of the league's two playoff berths.

Williamston 14
Roanoke 2

ROBERSONVILLE — Williamston High School's girls' softball team remained in the race for the Northeastern Conference's two playoff berths with a 14-2 romp over Roanoke yesterday.

Williamston, now 11-2, was tied for second place with Plymouth going into a Saturday game with league leading Tarboro.

The Lady Tigers pushed over five runs in the first and added four more in the second for a 9-0 lead before Roanoke broke the ice with two in the bottom of the second.

Williamston added one more in the third and three in the fourth to cap the scoring.

Wanda Price had four hits and Timberly Rodgers had two to pace Williamston. Each had a homer and drove in four runs.

West Craven 11

VANCEBORO — Sometimes when you get something started, you just can't quit.

That was the case Friday when D.H. Conley's Valkyries romped to a 35-11 softball victory over West Craven.

The Valkyries scored a modest five runs in the first inning, then eased over one more in the second for a 6-0 lead. West Craven cut that in half with a three-run rally in the bottom of the frame.

Then, in the third, Conley exploded for 12 big runs, storming out to a 18-3 lead. And, after resting for the next two frames to catch their breath, the Valkyries came back in the sixth to score 17 more times for their 35-run total.

West Craven added six more in the fourth to cut the lead back to 18-9 at the time. The Lady Falcons closed out their scoring with two in the sixth.

Michelle Kittrell and Lori Kandrotas each had four hits to lead Conley, while Lisa Mills and Irish Barnhill each had three. Kandrotas, Karen Barrett and Darlene Cannon each homered for Conley.

T. Singleton had two hits to lead West Craven.

Conley travels to Havelock on Tuesday.

C.B. Aycock 7
Farmville C. 0

PIKEVILLE — Farmville Central's winless girls' softball team forfeited to league-leading Charles B. Aycock on Friday, thus giving Aycock the Eastern Carolina title.

Aycock finishes the year with a 9-3 league record, one game ahead of SouthWest Edgecombe.

Jamesville Tops Belhaven, 10-0

JAMESVILLE — A three-run error in the fourth inning helped the Jamesville Bullets take a 10-0 win over Belhaven in an abbreviated Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference baseball game.

Jamesville maintains its unblemished 14-0 conference mark with the win, while 16-2 overall.

Rex Bell and Whit Brown led Jamesville with two hits in three trips to the plate, while Toriste O'Neal and Barry Sadler slapped a pair of singles apiece for the only hits given up by winning pitcher Tim Norris.

Jamesville got on the board in the second inning when Kevin Perry drew a base-on-balls and moved to third by way of a sacrifice and a passed ball. Whit Brown squeezed him home for the first run of the contest.

Norris opened the fourth with a single for Jamesville, while Rusty Holliday followed with a walk and Brown a single to load the bases. A sacrifice fly by Matthew Moore drove in Norris before the important error was committed.

Greg Hardison singled to right, but the ball rolled to the fence allowing Hardison to race around the path for a 5-0 advantage. Richie Ange walked and scored on a single by Rex Bell, and Bell crossed the plate on a passed ball.

Belhaven slipped to 2-13 in the conference.

Jamesville travels to Mattamuskeet Tuesday.

Tigers Rip 'Skins, 8-1

ROBERSONVILLE — Williamston collected five runs over the first five innings to pave the way to an 8-1 victory over Roanoke in a Northeastern 3-A Conference baseball matchup Friday.

Tommy Wynne went the distance on the mound for Williamston.

The Tigers jumped on Roanoke for a run in the top of the first, as James Ward reached second on an error of a grounder and scored on a two-out single by Keith Perry.

Williamston made it 2-0 in the second frame. Kevin Lee opened with a single, stole second and scored on a single by Jeff Whitley.

Gray Thomas singled and Perry doubled to open the big third-inning rally for Williamston. Glenn Hardison's doubled in both runners, and a double by Lee drove in Hardison.

Lee and Thomas went 3-4 on the day, while Perry had a pair of singles in three at-bats for Williamston.

The loss leaves Roanoke with a 2-8 conference mark, while Williamston improved to 8-5 with a 9-7 overall tally. The Tigers host Washington Tuesday.

Optimsts 15
Kiwanis 4

The Optimists romped to a 15-4 North State Little League victory over the Kiwanis Friday, banging out 13 hits along the way.

The Optimists picked up four runs in the first inning, then added a pair in the second to up the lead to 6-0.

In the second, Terrance Smith led off with a single and stole second. Park Williams then singled, scoring Smith. Williams moved on to second on an error on the play. He took third on a passed ball and scored on an error.

The Optimists added two more in the fourth, on a Nelson Galloway homer, picked up three more int he fifth, and finished up with three in the sixth.

The Kiwanis got two in the second and two more in the fifth.

Williams, Galloway, Kevin Hardee and Dominick Daniels each ahd two hits to lead the Optimists. The Kiwanis were led by Jon Chambliss with two hits.

Exchange 6
Moose 4

The Exchange held off the Moose and gained a 6-4 victory Friday afternoon in the Tar Heel Little League.

Exchange scored first, getting three runs in the third inning. The Moose came back with one in the top of the fourth, but Exchange scored twice in the fourth to wrap it up.

Kevin Sugg opened the fourth, walking with two away. Daryl Moore singled and Maurice Battle got a hit, loading the bases. Duane Williams then singled to drive in both Sugg and Moore.

The Moose rallied for three in the fifth, all on a homer by Chris Christopher. The Exchange added an insurance run in the bottom of the inning.

Battle, Williams and Grant Harmon each had two hits for Exchange, while the Moose got only three off Moore's pitching.

Reggie Reaches The Wrong Plateau

By The Associated Press

Reggie Jackson did what he does the best — or at least the most. He struck out . . . again . . . and again . . . and again.

His three strikeouts Friday night in California's 11-inning 5-4 loss to the Minnesota Twins made him the first major leaguer to fan 2,000 times in a career.

"I don't look at it like a magic number or anything," said the Angels' slugger. "Two thousand is too many, I guess. But you can justify it because I hit home runs."

Well, not that many this season. He's got only four homers and 11 runs batted in so far and is in the throes of a slump that has dropped his batting average to .213.

"Right now," he said, "I can't hit a beachball. The only thing important to me is trying to get a hit."

Three Angels — Doug DeCinces, Bobby Grich and Tim Foli — did homer, but it was an 11th-inning double by Len Faedo which gave the Twins the victory.

Elsewhere in the AL it was Baltimore 8, Texas 1; Kansas City 5, Detroit 2; Cleveland 5, Toronto 1; New York 3, Chicago 1, and Oakland 9, Seattle 2. Boston's game at Milwaukee was rained out.

"If I'm hitting well, the strikeouts don't bother me," said Jackson, who has struck out 34 times in 89 at-bats this year. "But striking out does bother me now because I'm not swinging the bat well. I don't feel comfortable."

It is, of course, a tribute to Jackson that he's been around long enough to strike out 2,000 times. "You've got to be pretty good to for managers to keep putting your name in the lineup," he observed.

And what does this kind of record mean to him? "It means I did nothing but miss the ball for four full seasons," he once said.

Faedo, who sat out several games earlier this week, pounded a Mike Witt pitch into the gap in left-center field for the Twins' winning hit. "I'm just trying to stay on top of the ball," he said. "I've been hurt for four days and I just want to help the team out any way I can."

Orioles 8, Rangers 1

Storm Davis, the Mr. Everything of the Baltimore pitching staff, checked Texas on eight hits through seven innings and Ken Singleton and John Lowenstein provided the power that propelled the Orioles into first place in the East, one-half game ahead of Boston.

"What can you say about a guy as young as he is who pitches the way he does?" Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli said of Davis, who has been both a long and short reliever and, as the replacement for injured Jim Palmer, has moved into the starting rotation.

"He hasn't had a bad outing since the exhibition season, and he's done it the hard way — in relief, as a spot starter, whatever we needed," said Altobelli.

Singleton hit his fourth and fifth homers of the season and Lowenstein hit his fourth. They drove in three runs apiece.

Royals 5, Tigers 2

If luck is the residue of design, as baseball philosopher Branch Rickey once observed, Kansas City pitcher Dennis Leonard is an extraordinary designer.

He gave up 11 Detroit hits and four walks and left 12 Tigers on base in 7 2-3 innings — and still managed to be the winner.

"I'd call it a miracle," Leonard said. "My slider was awful. My curve was worse. I'll be the first to admit it — I was terrible. I was just awful lucky that when I needed a good pitch, they happened to hit it right at somebody."

Hal McRae and George Brett had two hits apiece and Willie Aikens drilled a two-run double to pace the Royals.

Indians 5, Blue Jays 1

Cleveland's Juan Eichelberger, obtained from San Diego in an offseason trade, pitched his second complete game in his second start for his first AL victory. Manny Trillo's two-run single helped the Indians win for the ninth time in 12 games.

Blue Jays pitcher Mike Morgan was literally knocked out of the game in the fourth inning, hit on the cheek by a Bake McBride line drive. Toronto Manager Bobby Cox said the injury was not serious.

Yankees 3, White Sox 1

Designated hitter Oscar Gamble, in his second start and 11th at-bat this season, hit a tie-breaking homer in the seventh inning to end the Yankees' three-game slide and extend Chicago's skid to four games.

Don Zimmer, the Yanks' third-base coach, managed his final game as the replacement for Billy Martin, suspended for three games after kicking dirt on an umpire. But it was Martin who suggested before the game that Gamble get a shot. Graig Nettles also homered for the Yanks while Ron Kittle hit one for the White Sox.

A's 9, Mariners 2

Mike Davis' homer highlighted a four-run third inning and Dwayne Murphy and Bob Kearney homered in a five-run sixth as Oakland routed the Mariners. Rickey Henderson had a two-run single for the A's.

Ex-Vike Johnson Seeks Help In Olympic Bid

Former D.H. Conley wrestler James Johnson, considered a strong contender for the 1984 Olympics, is seeking financial aid for his bid.

Johnson, a 1976 Conley graduate, would wrestle in the 198-pound class in the Greco-Roman event.

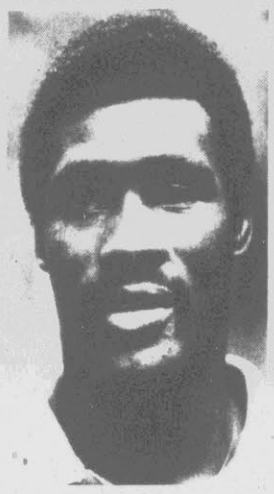

While a senior at Conley, Johnson won the state title, and placed third in the national high school championships. He signed a wrestling grant with the University of Kentucky, and after completing studies for a degree in social work and earning a graduate degree, he returned to the Charlotte area as a high school coach and now works in the Wilson area.

He resumed competition again in 1982 and finished fourth in two national tournaments. Later than year, he was invited to the U.S. Olympic Training Center to prepare for the World Games, but was sidelined with an injury while standing third among those in his class.

While Johnson has been paying his way to most events he competes in, he must travel to San Francisco later this month, and then to the trials for the National Sports Festival in June. A total of about $1,000 is needed to finance these trips.

Contributions may be made to "JJ's Trust Fund" and sent to USA Wrestling, 405 W. Hall of Fame Ave., Stillwater, Okla., 74074. Gifts are tax-deductable.

For further information, cotact Johnson at 243-3675, or 237-8886, or Milt Sherman, 756-3440, or 756-3080.

Colt Owner Is Reprimanded

DENVER (AP) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has reprimanded Baltimore Colts owner Robert Irsay for a vague threat he directed at John Elway, whom the Colts recently traded to the Denver Broncos.

Rozelle told Irsay on Friday he did not "condone those kinds of remarks" and demanded an explanation, said Dick Maxwell of the NFL public relations department.

Irsay had said in Chicago Thursday that the Colts would "get" Elway and that Elway would "never be any good."

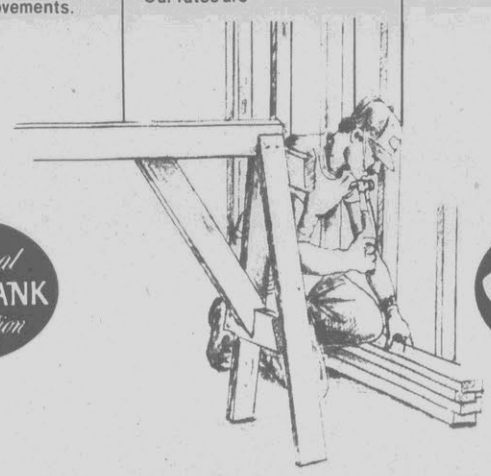

Elway was drafted No. 1 in the first round of the NFL college player draft by Baltimore, but said he would play professional baseball before he would play for the Colts.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

A Complex Situation — The following is an account of the problems that Florida biologists had recently in controlling a major natural wildlife disaster involving deer.

The problem that developed because of the interference by humane groups, such as the Fund For Animals, reveals the need for more public awareness into the complexities such a disaster brings with it.

There often comes a time when a reduction in the number of deer in an area will create better conditions for the remaining deer.

Hunting and the subsequent herd control by wildlife biologists will keep the herd in peak shape.

In North Carolina a problem of htis magnitude has not occurred. The possibilities are always there that a problem could arise. The one question we have to ask ourselves, when and where something like this begins in North Carolna is whether we will be ready to handle such a clomplex situation.

There were all the classic elements of a confrontation. On one hand, hunters with air-boats and half-tracked swamp buggies. On the other side was Cleveland Amory and his Fund for Animals. Highlighting the occasion was the national media. And the issue was the Florida Everglades deer herd.

The flurry of publicity and lawsuits surrounding the Everglades deer hunt last summer put wildlife management on the evening news — in a very unflattering way. The proposal? An emergency hunt to thin deer herds in two flooded state wildlife-management areas in the Florida Everglades. The Fund for Animals, and other humane groups, quickly gained national media attention and sympathy by calling the hunt a "slaughter." It wasn't that simple.

Flooding is a fact of life in the Everglades, and periodic die-offs of deer occur when the animals are isolated on small islands of habitat and most of their food supply is underwater. This was the situation last summer. Two major tropical storms had water levels rising rapidly, and all vehicular traffic had been prohibited to reduce stress on the deer herds. Based on past studies, Florida wildlife officials knew they could expect a severe die-off and habitat damage if something wasn't done. A similar situation occurred in 1978-79, and a majority of the deer in the flooded area had died of starvation. Over-feeding had also caused severe damage to the vegetation.

Florida wildlife officials decided to hold an emergency hunt — 2,000 animals would be removed from the flooded areas. An adequate food supply would remain for the thinned herds, and the habitat would not be destroyed by over-feeding. The smaller herds would come through the flooding in good health, and high reproductive rates would allow the deer to recover rapidly. This was based on past experience. An emergency hunt in a similar flooded area a few years prior had removed 600 deer, and the remaining herd had shown no mortality.

However, a local humane organization quickly filed suit, charging that the hunt was a "slaughter." It would be a simple matter, the group argued, to feed the deer. An injunction was granted, and the hunt was stopped.

The humane group chose to ignore history. Wildlife officials had tried massive supplemental feeding programs for deer strandedby flooding in 1958, 1960, 1966, 1968 and 1970. The logistics of locating and feeding the deer had been impossible. Also, biologists found that the abrupt change in the diets of the animals didn't allow the deer enough time to develop the micro-organisms essential to their digestive process. By the time the deer had adapted to their artificial diets, most had died of starvation, disease or stress.

Enter Cleveland Amory and his Fund for Animals. Amory's lawyers filed a flurry of ill-fated suits (none of them held up in court) and gained national attention. The solution to the problem? Amory and his supporters claimed it would be a simple matter to rescue the deer and move them to better habitat. Once again, history was ignored. The Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission had attempted this in the past, and relocation efforts had been dismal failures. Many weakened and diseased deer died from the stress fo the capture. Often, deer that were relocated to higher ground returned to their flooded home ranges. However, a judge granted an injunction against the hunt while the rescue took place.

Amory had claimed that he would have 90 volunteers with airboats available the first day and confidently added that an average of 250 deer could be relocated per day. The 2,000 deer would be relocated in eight days — ending the problem. On the first day, seven volunteers with airboats showed up — and rescued a total of 14 deer. On the second day, only three volunteers with airboats were present — and four deer were moved.

The courts quickly allowed the emergency hunt to take place in one of the wildlife-management areas, and hunters removed 723 deer. Later, biologists monitored the herd and found that mortality in the remaining animals was 23 percent and little damage was done to the habitat, so the deer herd would soon recover. In the other flooded area, the hunt had to be cancelled because of legal delays. Mortality in this deer herd topped 65 percent, and habitat damage was severe. Because food was so scarce, biologists even noted cannibalism in wild dogs.

There were no winners in the confrontation in the Everglades except, perhaps, Cleveland Amory, who gained additional coverage from the national media. There were some clear-cut losers, though — the deer that slowly died of starvation in the flooded swamps of the Everglades.

Renew Your Boat Registration Locally — Are you itching to put your boat in the water? Don't forget to register it first with the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission. For greater convenience, boat registration renewals may be handled through local agents. Most marine dealers offer this service.

Boat registrations may also be renewed by mail through the Wildlife Commission's Moterboat Registration Section. However, the mails are always swamped with registrations and renewals in the spring and early summer and, processing these often takes several weeks. It's far more convenient for boaters to handle renewals through lacal boat registration agents.

The Wildlife Commission has a toll-free hotline which offers boaters information on the registration agents in their area. Simply call 1-800-662-7350 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Locally, you may renew boat registrations at Vann's Hardware on N. Greene Street in Greenville.

Allison Defends Mason-Dixon Title

DOVER, Del. (AP) — A record crowd of more than 41,000 is expected Sunday to watch Bobby Allison try to defend his Mason-Dixon 500 title at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Allison hopes to become the first driver in 11 years to win back-to-back spring races at Dover Downs.

Allison, currently second in the NASCAR Winston Cup Grand National point standings to Harry Gant, won last year's Mason-Dixon with an average speed of 120.136 miles per hour. It was the fastest winning time since Cale Yarborough's 1977 victory at a speed of 123.237 miles per hour.

Allison finished three laps ahead of runnerup Dave Marcis and led 486 of the 500 laps.

It was Allison's first Mason-Dixon victory since 1980, and it tied him with David Pearson for second on the all-time winners list at Dover, one behind Richard Petty, who leads with six victories.

Petty, meanwhile, hasn't won a Mason-Dixon 500 in 13 years, but a victory Sunday would mark a milestone for the veteran driver. He enters Sunday's race with a career total of 196 victories, 92 more than any other driver. A victory would give him earnings of $5 million, a level no other driver has reached.

Petty, who is only $9,190 from reaching the $5 million mark, did not win a NASCAR Winston Cup race in 1982. He entered the 1983 season with a 40-race losing streak.

But he ended the drought earlier this season by winning the Warner W. Hodgdon Carolina 500 at Rockingham, N.C., the third race of the year.

Two weeks ago, Petty won his second race of 1983 when he captured the Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala., to become the first driver to win all races that have been on the NASCAR scheduled for at least two seasons.

Qualifying for the Winston Cup event begins here at 10 a.m. Saturday, with the $240,000 race getting underway at noon Sunday.

Elkins May Play Again

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two weeks ago, quarterback Rod Elkins had gotten his life back to normal after a disappointing senior year at the University of North Carolina. However, Elkins has the itch again.

A painful knee injury cut short the Greensboro native's 1982 season and virtually ended any chance for a future in the sport. He had acccepted coach Dick Crum's offer to become a student-coach and had even delayed his graduation to December.

Now, Elkins is thinking differently.

"I want to play again," Elkins said. "What I want to do is get the operation and I want to strengthen the leg as much as possible and make it as strong as it ever was before and I want to try out for a team."

Rekindling his decision was last month's National Football League draft of college talent. He sat in front of a television with teammates David Drechsler and Greg Poole, watching the proceedings on cable television.

The Green Bay Packers took Drechsler, an offensive lineman, while defensive back Poole signed as a free agent with the Cincinnati Bengals. The Los Angeles Rams picked linebacker Mike Wilcher.

In the days prior to the draft, several teams had called Elkins and others had mailed him information about their organizations. When the final player was chosen, Elkins had heard from the Chicago Bears and the Denver Broncos, both of which are interested in Elkins as a free agent.

"It was real tough to watch the draft and sit in the room with Drechsler and Wilcher going in the second round," Elkins said. "It was real exciting for me to be in the same room with David when he got the call from Green Bay. And then to see Greg go to Cincinnati was exciting.

"But it was a real disappointment to me not to be able to do that. So, I've just made up my mind that I want to get that operation. I want to give it a shot," he added.

He said there are a couple of roadblocks, including his layoff from the game for almost two years. Pro teams also are leery of football players with knee problems.

"There's nothing that says my operation is going to be successful. I'll have to see how my knee does after the operation, and I'll have to see how my leg reacts to it and go from there," Elkins said.

When Poole returned from the Bengals' mini-camp two weeks ago, that was the clincher for Elkins.

Long-Term, Fixed-Rate Home Mortgage Returns

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It is rare that something pronounced dead a few years ago should arrive back among the living, quietly step into its old role, and go about its business as if nothing had happened.

But the rarity has occurred: The fixed-rate, long-term home mortgage is back among us. Just ask your local banker, or look in his newspaper ads.

That this should occur seems to amount to a considerable mystery, especially when you recall that many a lender said good riddance to the critter as if it were a despicable criminal of the most dastardly kind.

There was a reason for that. The long-term, fixed-rate mortgage got a lot of lenders in serious trouble. Here they were with 8 percent loans on their books when they, themselves, were paying more for money to keep alive.

As interest rates rose the situation worsened. Lenders were losing on those mortgages every day, and yet they couldn't get rid of them. No sane borrower would pay off such a mortgage in advance. No, not even the president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, who held a 6 percent home mortgage and who reacted in horror to the suggestion that he retire it early.

Many savings institutions went under or were forced to merge with others. It was understandable: They were paying 15 percent for their money and earning only 8 percent on their mortgages. Never again, they said.

Never didn't last, and among others, Saul Klaman, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, is deeply concerned. Some institutions, he says, have dangerously short memories.

To make such loans, and then hold them in the bank's own investment portfolio rather than reselling them, said Klaman, "amounts to playing Russian roulette with interest rates and the future of the institution."

An economist with a memory, a memory of savings institutions begging the federal government for help, Klaman told the annual meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Cincinnati a week or so ago that bank managers have "an overriding fiduciary responsibility not to 'bet the bank' in this way."

The penalty for being wrong on interest rates, he said, "is death." And the interest rate cycle, he reminded them, was far from dead.

It almost goes without saying that nobody can foresee where interest rates will be 30 years from now. Or in 20 or 10 or five or in one year. But some lenders are out there with 30-year commitments.

Why?

For a combination of reasons. One reason becomes obvious when you consider what would happen if interest rates fell to 8 percent or less. It would be the reverse of the situation that earlier had caused so much trouble.

A second reason is that fixed-rate, long-term mortgages are probably the easiest of all to sell. Customers are accustomed to them. They like them.

The third factor in the decision is revealed by any mortgage rate book.

One example will do. On a $24,500 loan at 13.75 percent for 30 years the monthly payment amounts to $285.46. How much of that do you think goes to build up equity, or ownership? About $5 a month, or $60 in the first year.

The rest, about $280 a month, is interest, because interest is concentrated "up front," particularly so as the term becomes longer.

Now consider this: Most people who take out a 30-year mortgage never keep it that long. Many of them will sell the house or remortgage — after having paid all that interest up front, or in advance.

And when they do that, the effective interest rate rises enormously.

Q. There is a foul-smelling seepage coming from a wound near the base of an elm tree in my yard. What is wrong? (L.F., Bessemer City)

A. The foul-smelling, unsightly seepage from wounds in the bark or wood of various shade trees is known as slime flux. It occurs most commonly on profusely bleeding trees such as birch, elm and maple, expecially those declining in vigor. Slime flux is more common in some years than in others. There are two types of slime flux: brown and alcoholic. Brown slime flux originates from the heartwood sap. Before reaching the wounded surface, the sap is a clear watery fluid containing several nutrients. On the surface, it changes to brown, slimy ooze. Alcoholic slime flux develops from the sap of bark and sapwood. It is white and frothy and usually forms near the base of the trunk. Both types of slime flux are attractive to insects. Because of this, some people think that insects have caused the problem when really they are only a secondary party. There are no preventive or corrective measures known for slime flux. Old methods of treatment probably did as much harm as good.

Q. Can you eat nasturtium leaves? My husband thinks I'm crazy, but I'm sure I've read that you could. (L.P., Greensboro)

A. Most people think of nasturtiums only as decorative flowers, but the young leaves have a delicate pungent flavor and are good in salads and sandwiches.

Q. What causes catfacing of strawberries? (L.R., Alexis)

A. Catfaced, or misshapen strawberries, may be caused by pollination problems, frost, insect damage or some combination of these factors. Low temperatures and rainfall this spring have not been conducive to honeybee and bumblebee activity. Bees are the major agent of pollen transfer for strawberries. Early fruit harvests this season are likely to have more misshapen berries than normal because of the poor weather and poor pollination conditions. If you notice small, sunken, green seeds on the surface of the fruit that are very close together, this is due to lack of pollination. ("Apollo" can be particularly affected.) Frosts can also cause misshapen berries as well as kill the flower parts and receptacle tissue outright.

Q. Can I grow cucumbers in a hanging basket? (C.C., Robersonville)

A. Bush-type cucumbers do well in hanging baskets. The plants are attractive and strong enough to support full-sized fruits. Keep them picked to promote more fruit productions and a continuous harvest. Other vegetables and herbs can be grown in hanging containers. Small-fruited tomatoes are colorful and productive additions to hanging vegetable garden. New Zealand spinach and Malabar spinach will stand summer heat and thrive in partial shade as well as full sun. Herbs such as lemon balm, chives, sweet marjoram, parsley and thyme are nice to grow in baskets. Proper watering is essential for success with hanging plants because they dry out much faster than those grown in the ground. Water the plants whenever the planting medium feels dry. This may be more than once a day in hot, sunny weather.

Wood Turning Is Useful, Versatile

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

What skill is it that can turn out anything from a bowl to a baseball bat, from a broom handle to an architectural element?

The answer is wood turning. And on lathes that have not changed in principle for more than a century, a growing number of individuals are producing wood objects that are both useful and beautiful.

Some are professional wood turners, but a surprisingly large number are amateurs who have turned to the lathe as a hobby, says Paul J. Smith, director of the American Craft Museum.

The museum recently sponsored an exhibition of wood turning that put the craft in its historical perspective and showed the state of the art at present.

Smith conceived of the exhibition after participating in an international seminar organized in England by John Makepeace in June 1980. Preparing a report of wood-turning activity in the United States which he delivered at the conference, Smith discovered how widespread the interest in the traditional craft had become here.

In the exhibition, which closes in May at the American Craft Museum, examples of current wood turnings run the gamut from architectural elements such as newel posts and balustrades produced by Gail Redman for restored Victorian homes to elegant wooden bowls in exotic woods by craftsmen such as Ed Moulthrop and Bob Stocksdale. Delicate decorative boxes by Frank Knox are juxtaposed against pieces created by artists such as David Ellsworth and Mark and Melvin Lindquist.

According to Christopher Wilk, guest curator for the exhibition, wood turning in its simplest form can be described as the shaping of a piece of wood with a gouge or chisel as the piece revolves between two fixed points. The use of a lathe keeps the piece stable and allows it to revolve.

Although a few innovations occurred in the 20th century, such as the use of steam engines to power large-scale wood turning, lathe technology remains largely the same today as it was in the early 19th century, says Wilk.

The most prolific use of turned elements in architecture in the United States occurred in the mid-19th century when Victorian "gingerbread" architecture was composed mainly of wood elements turned on lathes. Posts, columns and architectural screens as well as staircase posts and balusters are examples of wood turnings.

The current interest in renovation of these 19th-century houses — especially in San Francisco — has created a market for the skills of artisans like Gail Redman of San Francisco.

The popularity of Shaker furniture and other objects has also been a force in the revival of the craft. In the 18th and 19th centuries, the Shakers perfected simple but elegant turnings which they used as elements on ladder back chairs and other furniture, in toys and tools and to make bowls and mortars and pestles.

Wood turning in this country began with emigration of woodworkers from Holland and England in the 17th century. Everything from chairs to bookstands were made with elaborately turned parts beginning in the second half of the 17th century.

Hand turning continued to be important in the production of many objects of everyday use until the Industrial Revolution in the 19th century superseded it.

Today's hobbyist has his counterpart in Europe of the 16th through 19th centuries. Wood turning was adopted as a hobby by kings and gentlefolk from the 16th century. The Hapsburg emperors, beginning with Maximilian I were among the earliest to take to wood turning. But the most famous royal wood turner was undoutedly Louis XVI.

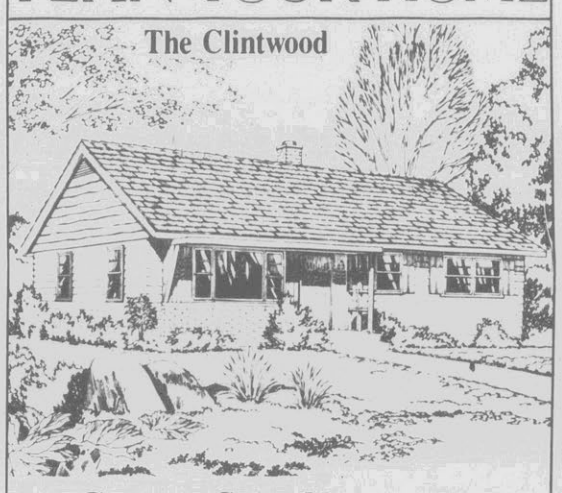

The demise of Louis in the French Revolution led to the transfer of the royal phase of the hobby to England, which became the center for both amateur and ornamental turning and for the transformation of wood turning from a craft into an industry in the 19th century.

In previous centuries, the lathe was viewed as a time- and work-saver. But today, those who choose to work on lathes do so with an eye on the past, says Christopher Wilk.

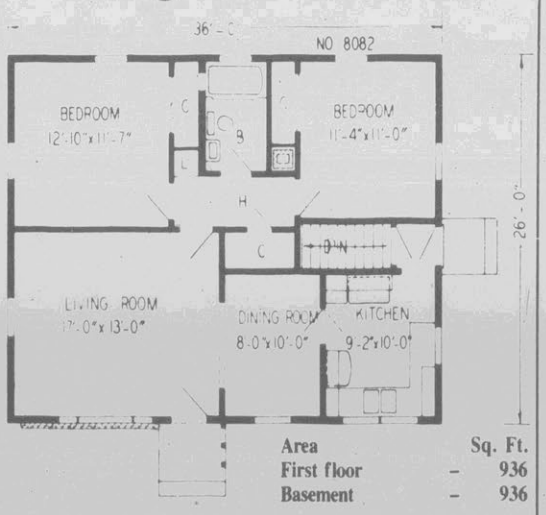

Working wood in a manner that can be achieved only by hand is an important aspect of the satisfaction derived from wood turning today, he said.

Q. — Could you please tell me something about mahogany? I am somewhat confused by the various statements I read about it. I have heard that it is a hardwood, yet a do-it-yourself book I have just finished said that it actually is soft. Also, what's the difference between regular mahogany and Philippine mahogany? I expect to be working with mahogany soon and would like to know whether it is difficult to work with? Thanks in advance.

A. — Regular mahogany is a hardwood, but is not as hard nor as difficult to work with tools as other hardwoods. It is a strong wood that comes in various tones of brown. Philippine mahogany is not a true mahogany in the strict meaning of the word, although there is some controversy about this. It is cheaper than the so-called real mahogany. It is also lighter in color.

Q. — A guest of mine recently set down a water glass on our hardwood floor next to his chair. After he and the company left, I discovered a white ring there. Some of it came off easily, but there is still a faint trace of the ring that will not disappear no matter how much I rub it. I am leary about using one of the commercial cleaners because I am afraid it might make the stain even worse. What is your advice?

A. — White spots of that kind — that is, caused by water — usually can be removed by rubbing with denatured alcohol or camphorated oil or lemon oil or a little oil with cigar ashes. If the mark resists all efforts to remove it, you then will have to rub with a fine grade of steel wool, again with a little oil. In the latter case, you may have to touch up the area.

Q. — We put up a metal mailbox a few years ago and now would like to take it down and replace it, but we can't seem to get loose one of the bolts that goes through the wooden post and comes out the other side. One end of the bolt has a square head and must be turned with a wrench, but when we do it the whole bolt turns and does not separate from the nut. Is there some knack to this that we don't know about?

A. — No. Saturate the nut and threads with a penetrating oil and don't do anything for an hour or two. You must then hold the nut in place (or have somebody else do it) while you turn the bolt head with a heavy-duty box wrench or socket wrench. You may have to give the nut three or four treatments before this method works.

Which is the most important tool in your workshop? The hammer? The screwdriver? The portable electric drill?

Actually, it's something you might not think of as a tool. But it really is. It's the workbench. Without it, you really don't have a workshop. When you have one of the proper height and equipped with vises and so-called bench dogs, you have a tool of inestimable value.

While some persons make their own workbenches, more and more woodworkers are choosing to purchase them from among the wide variety of styles and sizes now available. The key factors in selecting a workbench are sturdiness in terms of weight and construction; the ability of its fixtures to hold your work firmly and securely in various positions; a smooth, large bench top and an adequate tool tray.

Because a quality bench is a major investment, an authority on the subject, Garretson Chinn, president of Garrett Wade Co., was asked which three questions a prospective purchaser should get answers to before buying a workbench.

His reply: "How much can you comfortably spend? How much space do you have available? Will you need a small or large bench in terms of the work you are doing now and the work you will be doing in the future?"

Classic workbenches have two vises and a bench dog system, consisting of a shoulder vise on the front of the bench and a tail vise on the right end. Slots along the front of the bench accommodate steel bench dogs, which are simple mechanical devices for holding, gripping and fastening. The vises make it possible to hold the wood stock in vertical and horizontal positions for all types of filing, boring, sawing and planing.

Top quality workbenches have steel or wooden vises that are premounted to the bench. Better steel vises have built-in, quick-release mechanisms to adjust for the varying thicknesses of wood to be clamped. Many good benches often provide bench dog slots in the movable parts of vises for extra clamping efficiency.

Vises should be checked for precision handling. A good vise will hold a sheet of paper as easily as a 3-inch-thick piece of wood. It will not move under pressure from using any type of tool.

If you buy a quality workbench and maintain it over the years, it should last a lifetime.

Tips On Disease Control

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

There are are some commonsense practices to help keep diseases in check in our home vegetable garden.

Diseases vary in severity from year to year, depending on environmental conditions, susceptibility of plants and the abundance of certain organisms. The diseases may range from simple leaf spots that don't do extensive damage, to destructive wilts or rots that kill the plant before harvest time.

So we have some suggestions from plant pathologist David Schroeder at the University of Connecticut. He says careful selection of seeds and plants is extremely important. Plant only varieties recommended for your part of the country. More and more varieties are being bred for resistance to diseases. Check when you buy.

When buying plants, look for vigorous seedlings free of disease and insects. Infected transplants can introduce some persistent soil-borne diseases to gardens.

Don't plant the same or closely related crops in the same area of the garden for several years. Rotate the crops whenever possible. Planting the same vegetables in the same place constantly might result in a buildup of a serious fungus or nematodes, or cause diseases that may persist in the ground or crop wastes.

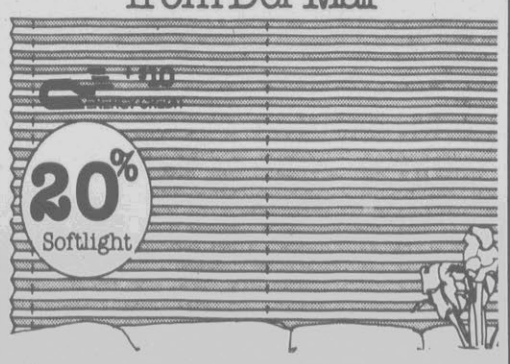

Practice sanitation. Weeds may harbor insect pests and disease-causing organisms. Insects and mites often spread disease to plants. All severely diseased plants or parts of plants should be destroyed as soon as the diseases are apparent.

Plants raised in well-prepared soil, in full sun, with proper soil moisture and space for good air circulation are less likely to suffer from disease problems.

If you apply fungicides or bactericides, remember that most of these chemicals are designed as protectants. They can't cure infected plants. The chemicals must be on the plant before the disease-causing organisms get there.

NEW BROKER

Cornelius J. Harris, president of C.J. Harris & Co. Inc., financial and marketing consultants of Greenville, announced the association of Martha N. Woodall of Raleigh as a business broker in the business and real estate brokerage division.

Harris said Mrs. Woodall, a North Carolina native, has been involved in the business brokerage business for several years in the Research Triangle and eastern North Carolina business markets.

Ms. Woodall received a bachelor's degree at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She is married to architect Charles Woodall, formerly of Greenville, and they have two sons.

SALES INCREASED

Tandy Corp. announced that consolidated sales for April were $196,203,000, an increase of 22 percent over sales of $160,759,000 reported a year earlier.

Tandy's U.S. Radio Shack division recorded a 23 percent gain to $155,311,000 during April from $126,183,000 in April 1982.

Sales of Radio Shack stores in existence more than a year rose 18 percent during April, the company said.

AGENT APPOINTED

Sunskins Southeast Inc., which represents Sun Systems Prefabricated Greenhouses of Commack, N.Y., announced the appointment of Harold Creech of Greenville as sales agent for the eastern Carolina region.

The firm said Creech will work with dealers, contractors and developers in the region and will maintain an office at 2723 E. 10th St. Creech also represents The Market Place, which specializes in commercial real estate.

Bill Wright of Greenville is vice president for sales for Sunskins Southeast.

FINISHED COURSE

Karen E. Kale of Greenville completed a two-week course recently at the Investors Diversified Services sales training center, Chaska, Minn. The company said Kale is now an accredited IDS sales representative in this area.

The school is designed to prepare new IDS sales representatives for careers in providing financial services for individuals and businesses, the Minneapolis based comany said.

QUARTERLY REPORT

Hampton Industries Inc. reported that sales volume for the quarter ended March 26 totaled $22,860,000, compared to $23,200,000 in 1982.

Net earnings increased to $297,000, or 12 cents per share, as compared to $267,000 of 11 cents per share the previous year.

Prepshirt of Greenville is a division of Hampton Industries, which is headquartered in Kinston.

JOINED FIRM

Century 21 B. Forbes Agency announced that Lem Wallace has joined the firm as a real estate broker.

Wallace, who retired from the Coast Guard after 22 years service, completed the instructors training course, A.J. Strickland advanced sales course, Century 21 2&1 training program, and the VIP referral/relocations program.

He and his wife, the former Annette Smith of Greenville, have two children and reside in Greenville.

OFFICE MANAGER

Steve Evans, president of Steve Evans & Associates Inc., announced that Sandra Baker is now serving the Greenville firm as office manager.

Evans said the company, founded in 1978, offers real estate, insurance and investment services.

Offices are at 130 E. Greenville Blvd.

TRAINING SESSION

John S. McGara, manager of the TRW Steering & Suspension Division's Staton Plant in Greenville, will attend a productivity college Tuesday through Thursday in Atlanta, Ga.

The program, sponsored by the Cleveland, Ohio, based TRW Inc., is aimed at training and developing a network of productivity coordinators and providing them with tools and techniques to measure and manage productivity programs in both factories and staff departments.

TRW managers from throughout the country will attend the conference.

BUSINESS EXPANDS

Mary Ann Stephenson, office manager of Aquasystems Inc., 1001 E. Fourth St., announced that in addition to offering the certified water quality laboratory for drinking water and wastewater analyses, as well as research and design of environmental pollution control equipment, the firm has added an environmental planning service.

Zachry Lee Nichols, a graduate of East Carolina University in urban and regional planning, has been appointed an associate of the firm in charge of the new service.

INVESTMENT OFFICER

Alexander B. (Lex) Howard Jr. has been named an investment officer by Wheat, First Securities in Greenville, which said the designation is awarded to Wheat brokers to recognize outstanding performance to their clients.

Howard, a graduate of Arendell Parrott Academy in Kinston and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, joined the firm in 1979. He and his wife, the former Mary Melinda Raymer of Statesville, attend Jarvis Memorial Church.

Wheat, First Securities has 16 offices in North Carolina.

DPMA MEETING

The Coastal Plains Chapter of the Data Processing Management Association will meet Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at Dondi's in Goldsboro.

Ed McGee of Carolina Telephone & Telelgraph Co. will discuss "DP Communication Changes."

SERVICE TECHNICIAN

Creech & Jones Business Machines announced that John Barkand, formerly with MetalCraft, is now associated with the Greenville firm as service technician. Barkand recently attended a two-week training school in Atlanta.

The firm said that Curtis King is now associated with Creech & Jones as service representative. He worked with Paul B. Williams Co. in Raleigh for several years before moving to the Greenville area.

EMPLOYEE CITED

Eileen Cowan, teller in the commerical and marketing department of Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co. in Greenville, received an emblem recently in recognition of 10 years service with the company.

A Pamlico County native, she resides in Greenville with her husband, Jesse, and their two children. They attend Pactolus Missionary Baptist Church.

TOP TEN AWARD

E.F. Craven Co. Inc., a Greensboro based construction equipment distributor, has been recognized by Fiatallis as one of the construction machinery manufacturer's top ten North American dealers for 1982.

The sales achievement award was presented at a recent meeting held in connection with the Associated Equipment Distributors convention in Atlanta.

E.F. Craven has a branch office in Greenville.

HIGHEST INCREASE

Food Lion Inc., Salisbury based supermarket chain, reported that it showed the highest sales increase among North Carolina's 20 largest public companies during 1982.

The company said it posted a 42 percent sales increase over the previous year, ranking seventh in the state in sales with $947 million.

Food Lion operates 192 stores in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia.

RELOCATED OFFICE

Utelcom Inc., a subsidiary of United Telecommunications Inc., announced the relocation of its mid-Atlantic regional office to Raleigh from Greenville.

The subsidiary specializes in the sale, installation and maintenance of business telephone systems.

CONSULTANT NAMED

Pope Says No To Politics

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II told a delegation of Swiss labor unionists Saturday that unions have to be independent of political power to be able to defend workers' interests.

The pope, speaking to 650 delegates of the Christian Labor Union from Valais, Switzerland, said: "You have to defend the interests of workers in all areas where their rights are in question.

"This supposes unions autonomous of political power, in which workers associate freely, seeking equitable solutions, without violence."

John Paul said union members should engage in "firm and mutual dialogue, with a keen sense of their responsibility without overlooking their country's economic conditions and the needs of the common good."

Reagan Predicts Small Business To Steer Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, praising entrepreneurs as the "forgotten heroes" of America, said Saturday that small businesses will help point the nation toward economic recovery.

In his weekly radio broadcast, the president said small firms "will provide most of the new jobs to bring down unemployment."

Noting that Saturday was the last day of Small Business Week, Reagan said: "Every week should be Small Business Week because America is small business.

"Small firms account for nearly half our jobs, they create some 60 percent of new jobs and they're on the cutting edge of innovation, providing products and ideas for the future."

Giving the Democratic response, Rep. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland said the ideas generated by small business "come from ... having a good basic education."

Urging more money be spent on schools and noting a congressional panel's approval last week of money for the MX missile, she said, "The Republicans want to spend money for bombs and the Democrats want to spend money for books."

"The president says we need that money to build weapons to make the Soviets think twice before they'll attack," she said. "But there is another enemy that threatens this country, that enemey is illitaracy....

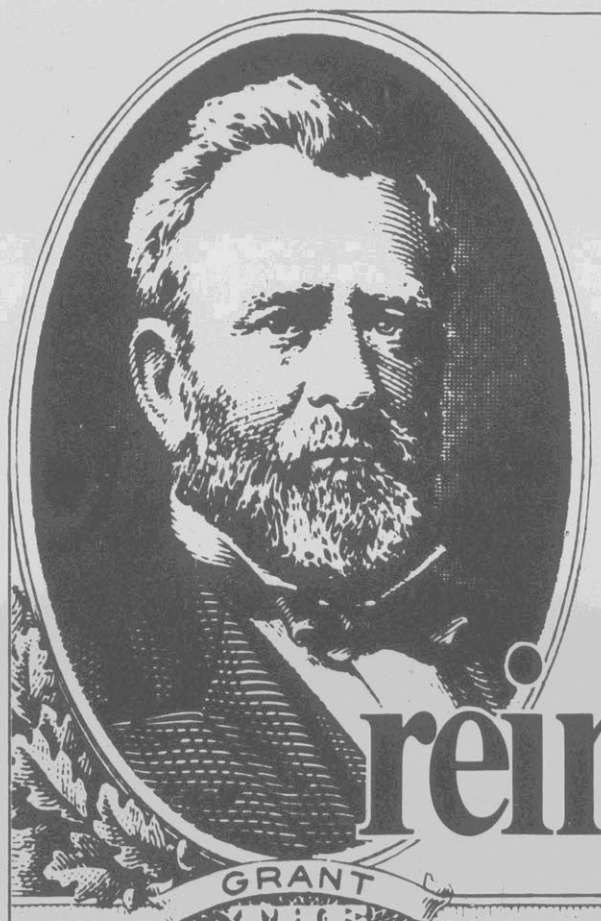

"If we have to chose between rockets and rulers, let's make the best choice. Let's teach basic values and old-fashioned skills," Ms. Mikulski said. "Our greatest defense against communism is with people who can read and write and make decisions for themselves."

Speaking from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Reagan said 85 percent of the nation's 13 million small firms pay taxes by personal rates, not corporate rates. He took the opportunity to remind Congress again that he will not tolerate repeal of the third year of the tax cut.

Major Bankruptcy Cases Approach Deadlines

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As corporate bankruptcy cases go, Braniff International Corp. and Manville Corp. scarcely could be more different. Yet their tribulations have stirred a similar sense of drama as each nears a critical deadline.

For an estimated 2,000 Braniff employees, the suspense hit a new peak this past week when the airline announced — one year to the day after it halted operations — tentative agreement on a plan that could get it airborne by October.

The agreement, with the Hyatt Corp. hotel chain, still faces sizable obstacles — including the need to win the approval of its creditors by June 18.

Manville's countdown is even shorter. By May 23 it must submit a plan of reorganization that satisfies its creditors plus representatives of the thousands of people suing Manville for illnesses blamed on asbestos produced by Manville.

The company itself has admitted it is far from agreement with the creditors and litigants. And to add to the drama, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland will not rule on Manville's request for extra time until the day of the deadline.

Corporate bankruptcy cases have soared in recent years as economic recession pushed more companies toward insolvency. Yet the Braniff and Manville cases stand out — and not just because they are among the biggest in bankruptcy court.

In the heady days after the airline industry was deregulated in 1978, Braniff became one of the fastest growing and most ambitious carriers in the world. So its nosedive into bankruptcy court on May 13, 1982, was especially spectacular.

Braniff was the first — and is still the only — major U.S. airline to file for bankruptcy court protection. By filing under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code, the company was freed of the obligation of paying off any debt.

On Thursday, Braniff's board of directors approved a Hyatt proposal that would ensure the reorganized Braniff as much as $70 million in cash contributions and loan guarantees. In return, Hyatt would get an 80 percent stake in the new Braniff and could use more than $300 million in Braniff tax credits.

For Manville, cash is not the problem. Its businesses were relatively healthy when it filed for court protection on Aug. 26, 1982. The company's chief executive, John A. McKinney, said the next day: "We have a tremendous amount of cash."

Manville's motive in filing was to win extra time to grapple with the asbestos litigation, particularly the problem of its obligation to asbestos workers in whom the asbestos-related diseases are expected to emerge in later years.

Manville says that about 16,500 asbestos lawsuits have been filed against it so far, and it predicts a total of 48,500 by the end of the century. By the time the cases are settled, it expects to have paid about $1.9 billion in damages.

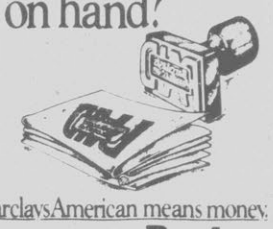

To cope with that future burden, Manville suggested on Thursday that it split the company in two. The new operation would take the company's non-asbestos businesses, including forest products and carton manufacturing. It also would contribute part of its profits to the old Manville company to help settle the asbestos cases.

Although the Braniff case appears to be nearing a climax, the Manville case may drag on for months, or even years. If Manville does not reach agreement with its creditors and litigants by the May 23 deadline, it may be given an extension. If no extra time is allowed, the other interested parties may submit a reorganization plan, or they may ask the court to force Manville to liquidate its assets.

In other business and economic developments this past week:

—Eastman Kodak Co. named a new chairman and a new president, and told its shareholders the company was making "fundamental changes" in its business approach. On July 1, Colby Chandler will take over as chairman and Kay R. Whitmore will become president. The current chairman, Walter Fallon, told shareholders the company was searching for new ways to cut costs, although it expected no more layoffs. Earlier this month it announced the layoffs of 1,600 workers.

Cattle Futures Poised To Renew Strength Soon

By KEITH GAVE
Associated Press Writer

Cattle futures prices are poised for a surge after closing lower in quiet trading Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The U.S. Agriculture Department's monthly cattle on feed report, released after Friday's close, showed larger-than-expected April marketings. That should provide impetus for futures prices to advance on Monday's opening, said Mary Schultz, a meat and livestock analyst in Chicago with Cargill Investor Services Inc.

The report showed that marketings in April were 104 percent of marketings a year earlier in the seven largest cattle states, compared to an average prerelease estimate of 101.2 percent, she said.

"Normally a seven-state report wouldn't have this kind of an effect," Ms. Schultz said. "But the market is looking for some direction, and I think this might give it the direction it's looking for."

Cattle placed on feed during April totaled 100 percent of a year ago, compared with the average pre-report estimate of 95.8 percent. She described the placement figure as "a little bearish," but said it probably would have little affect on prices.

Pork complex futures rallied early in the session on expectations that cash prices would rise next week. However, gains were offset by selling based on forecasts of rainy weather, which could limit fieldwork and allow farmers to increase their runs of hogs to market, Ms. Schultz said.

Trading otherwise was lack-luster Friday, closing a very quiet week, Ms. Schultz said.

Live cattle futures prices closed .40 cent to .62 cent low-er, with the contract for delivery in June at 66.27 cents a pound; feeder cattle prices were 1.15 cents lower to .03 cent higher, with the May contract at 66.62 cents a pound; live hogs were .68 cent lower to .28 cent higher, with the June contract at 50.37 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies, the raw material from which bacon is made, closed 1.45 cents lower to .50 cent higher, with the May contract at 68 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean prices closed mixed to slightly higher in very light trading after a week-long decline on the Chicago Board of Trade.

The heavy selling that knocked prices down in recent sessions may have been over-done, said Al London, a grains analyst with ContiCommodity Services Inc.

"We're due for a bounce, and maybe we saw part of it today," London said.

Nevertheless, buyers remained scarce. Forecasts of cold, wet weather that could delay planting this weekend helped push corn and soybean prices higher at the open, but it couldn't sustain the rally in the corn pit, London said.

Wheat futures prices settled 1 cent to 3½ cents higher, with the contract for delivery in May at $3.47 a bushel; corn prices were unchanged to ½ cent higher, with the May contract at $2.99¾ a bushel; oats were 1 cent lower to ¼ cent higher, with the May contract at $1.59½ a bushel; and soybeans were 1½ cent to 2½ cents higher, with the May con-tract at $6.18¼ a bushel.

Sliver prices rallied to close sharply higher and gold posted small advances in quiet pre-weekend trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Len Alpert, an analyst of precious metals in New York with ContiCommodity Services, said a short-covering rally pushed precious metals prices higher immediately following the open. Thereafter, trading was dull, except for the silver buying linked to advances in the stock market, he said.

Gold settled $2.40 to $2.50 an ounce higher, with the contract for delivery this month at $441.20; silver rose 19 cents to 21.5 cents, with the May contract at $13.155 an ounce.

Platinum was $3 to $4 higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange, with the May contract closing at $453.80 an ounce.

Rates Remain Driving Force Behind Stocks

By STEVEN ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The course of interest rates continues to be the driving force behind the stock market, even though nine months have passed since declining rates first turned Wall Street gloom into euphoria.

In August 1982, with the stock market at its lowest level in more than two years, the prospect of lasting relief from high interest rates and double-digit inflation triggered a rally that has sent the value of stocks soaring nearly $700 billion.

Some of the hopes that launched the rally have been realized.

Long-term interest rates have since fallen to their lowest levels in three years, lifting the housing and automobile industries from depressed levels.

But interest rates still remain high when inflation is taken into account. And analysts say consumer borrowing charges must fall further if the recovery is going to spread and strengthen.

"If interest rates don't come down further it is very questionable the economy could sustain its growth," said Greg A. Smith, director of research at the New York investment firm Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

"If people start questioning the sustainability of recovery, the game's over," Smith said. "We don't need dramatic progress, but we need continued progress on interest rates to keep the market going."

Julius Westheimer, a partner at Baker, Watts & Co. in Baltimore, said he has become wary about how much higher the market can go.

"If we get another upward spike in interest rates ... the market could topple 150 to 200 points," Westheimer said. "We've had a lot of fun, let's protect ourselves."

Concern over preserving profit and cashing in on the rally was apparent this past week as stock prices slipped from the record heights reached May 6.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed out the week with a net loss of 13.84 points at 1,218.75. Despite its dip from the all-time high of 1,232.59 at the end of the previous week, the blue-chip average was still up 441.83 points, or 56.9 percent, from the 776.92 level it had fallen to on Aug. 12, 1982.

The Wilshire Associates 5,000 Equity Index, the market value of 5,000 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange and over-the counter markets, stood at $1.741 trillion, down $2 billion from May 6 but up $690 billion from the start of the rally.

Georgia Poultry Growers Decry Foreign Subsidy

By WILLIAM E. SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

BALDWIN, Ga. (AP) — Georgia's poultry growers are among the world's most efficient farmers, but they are losing foreign markets to European growers who get government subsidies.

"The worst offenders are the European Common Market, France and Brazil," said Joe Hatfield, president of Fieldale, a major north Georgia chicken processing company.

"Growers in Europe can deliver their product to the Middle East for what it costs us to deliver to coastal ports," said Hatfield, noting that the Middle East is one of the world's growing poultry markets.

"They want to eat better and chicken is the most efficient way to do it," said Hatfield, who is past chairman of the board of the National Broiler Council. "It takes only two pounds of feed to produce one pound of chicken while it takes four pounds of feed grain to produce one pound of pork and eight pounds to produce one pound of beef."

Georgia is the nation's leading poultry state, ranking second in both chicken production and egg production, and its farmers need foreign markets for greater prosperity, according to Abit Massey of the Georgia Poultry Federation.

On any given day, 90 million or so chickens are growing up to frying size in Georgia. About 2.5 million of them are processed into 9.2 million pounds of broiler chickens or chicken parts during any business day.

The federation has joined the National Broiler Council and other poultry trade groups in petitioning the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, requesting help in combating subsidized European growers.

Those subsidized exports, for example, have cut the United States' share of the Middle East market for whole broilers from 30,000 tons in 1976 "to essentially zero," according to a letter to trade Ambassador William E. Brock signed by Georgia Sens. Sam Nunn and Mack Mattingly.

Georgia producers had exported 10 percent of their production. "Now it's probably down to 2 percent," Massey said.

"We want to see the subsidies eliminated," Massey said. "We feel like they violate the subsidies code and the tariff agreement. We'd like to all play by the same rules."

"We will probably have to link it up with other issues," said Hatfield. "The U.S. trade ambassador is working on it, but it may take a trade war to solve the problem."

Despite foreign competition, the U.S. broiler industry is growing at about 1 percent per year, Hatfield said.

That is due to mechanization and efficiency, which means Americans pay less for chicken today, despite inflation, than they did 30 years ago, Massey said.

A broiler chicken's life is regulated by the day, pound and ounce from its first hours as an egg. Its parents are specially selected for the qualities which will show up in their offspring.

Some 18,000 roosters and hens live in a henhouse. The eggs are collected several times a day and placed in incubators which precisely control temperatures and humidity. Egss are turned several times a day.

The day before the eggs are to hatch, they are taken off incubator racks and placed on trays in hatchers. Day-old chicks are vaccinated against disease as fast as workers can press the chickens' backsides against mechanical inoculating machines.

Then the chicks are boxed, 100 at a time, in cardboard crates and hauled to the growout houses, which usually are owned by a farmer who subcontracts to the processor to raise the chickens.

The average growout house is 400 feet long and 36 feet wide. Eighteen thousand chickens will spend the rest of their seven-week lives there.

Almost all broilers are grown by farmers or other subcontractors working for large poultry producers, Massey said. "There are few if any independent broiler growers. There were some a few years ago, but if you were to ask me to find one now, I don't know if I could."

In the growhouse, the chickens are fed mechanically and the temperature and light is controlled. Lights dim as the chickens grow older so they will be less inclined to move around and fight.

The less energy they use to move, the more they put on in meat.

When they are the right size — 3.6 pounds if they are to go to most chicken restaurants, 4.3 pounds if they are to go to a grocery — a catching crew arrives.

The house is opened, the mechanical feeders and watering troughs pulled to the ceiling and the roundup is on. A good catcher can catch and carry eight chickens at a time to waiting coops, each about the size of a milk crate. The house is emptied in 2½ to 3 hours.

In the most modern processing plants, the chickens are plucked and cleaned mechanically. The cleaned birds hang by their drumsticks, swinging down a disassembly line, with each worker slicing off one or two parts until all that's left is the drumsticks.

Then the meat is chilled and sent off to grocery stores. And, if Georgia growers have their way, more and more will be shipped overseas to feed a hungry world.

Testing A New Allergy Remedy

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Allergy researchers have an offer for hay fever sufferers that's nothing to sneeze at.

The University of Iowa's College of Medicine is looking for allergy sufferers willing to try out a new antihistamine called azelastine. The drug could eventually go on the market, depending on the results of tests here and at other medical research centers.

The university is recruiting 100 hay fever victims who will be paid $50 each to undergo tests on either June 4-5 or June 11-12, said Dr. Murali Sharath, one of the researchers.

STORYTIME...is a favorite with the children in Jane Dodge's Elmhurst After-School program.

After-School Programs Keyed For Protection, Fun & Learning

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville schools have made inroads into the ranks of the city's "latchkey children" by providing an after-school day care program for kindergarten and prmary-school-aged children whose parents work afternoons.

Placed in the Third Street and Elmhurst schools, the two programs now being offered serve children throughout the city. Those who need to be are bused to the assigned school.

Elmhurst's program is conducted by Jane Dodge; Third Street's by Ann Sayetta.

The kindergarteners start arriving about 1:30 p.m. each day and the first-through third-grade participants come in as they get out of school. The program stays open until 6 p.m. to accommodate the children of those parents who must work late or come from some distance.

The cost is $15 per week.

Both Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Sayetta have a wealth of classroom experience. Both say they love working with these younger children in such an informal, yet educational atmosphere.

"These children have been in school all day," Mrs. Sayetta said, "so we try to create an atmosphere of fun, not just study. But children this age find fun in learning. So many of our activities are educational. We have a lot of outings, a lot of outdoor playtime and some fun group and independent activities, too."

Some of the time at the after-school program is spent providing assistance with homework. This can vary from buckling down to learning math to lying down on a carpet and reading books from one's own school library or from the collection kept borrowed from Sheppard Memorial Public Library.

"Apparently the children don't dislike school too much," Mrs. Sayetta said with a smile. "Do you know what one of their favorite activities is? Playing school!"

Mrs. Dodge said she makes it a point to keep parents of her after-school children informed as to what's being read to their children during story time. She mimeographs a dated list of all books read and sends one home with each child.

Nutritious snacks are provided for the children. Regular trips to the library, to special children's movies, and outings like farm and industries and businesses and ECU facilities are planned at regular intervals.

"We make believe a lot during these trips," Mrs. Dodge said. "My children let their imaginations run wild when they visited the ECU stadium just a few blocks away. They were right out there on that playing field scoring for ECU."

Many games and toys are kept on hand and class projects like plays and puppet shows are carried out. Of course, the children love to sing.

Parents and other members of the community are urged to share their interests and enthusiasm with the children. "We've had everything from model plane enthusiasts to banjo pickers visit us," Mrs. Dodge said.

A favorite of Mrs. Sayetta's class is their weekly French lesson taught by East Carolina University foreign language major Jackie Thompson. Ms. Thompson began the French course for the children last semester as part of an internship program. She has continued it this semester on her own time out of love for the children, Mrs. Sayetta said.

Both Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Sayetta say they're gratified by the personal attention the school principals, Leslie Washburn and Esther Warren, have provided the children. And they're pleased that some of the parents find time to stop in and share themselves, not just with their own children, but with others in the program.

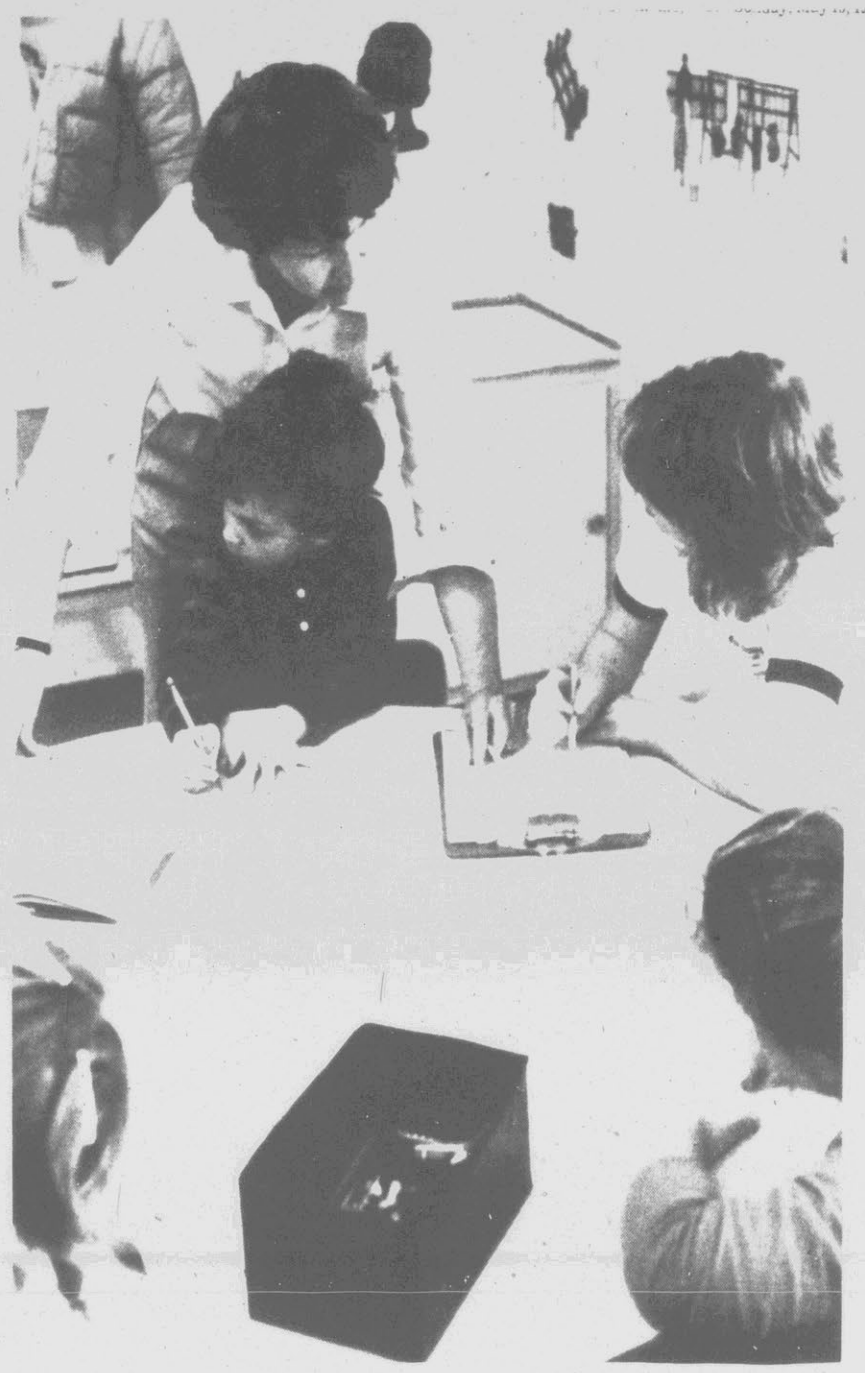

Plans for next year's program are under way. Further information and application forms are available at any kindergarten-through-sixth grade school in the city or from the City Schools Office, 431 W. Fifth St.

ASSISTANCE WITH HOMEWORK...is one of the ways Ann Sayetta (standing) assists the participants in the Third Street After-School program and their parents.

OUTDOOR PLAY...is always a part of both After-School programs in good weather. The children at Elmhurst enjoy running games like dodgeball.

MAKE-BELIEVE...is creative fun. James Ebron and Brook Dunn don costumes kept on hand for impromptu plays in the Third Street After-school classroom.

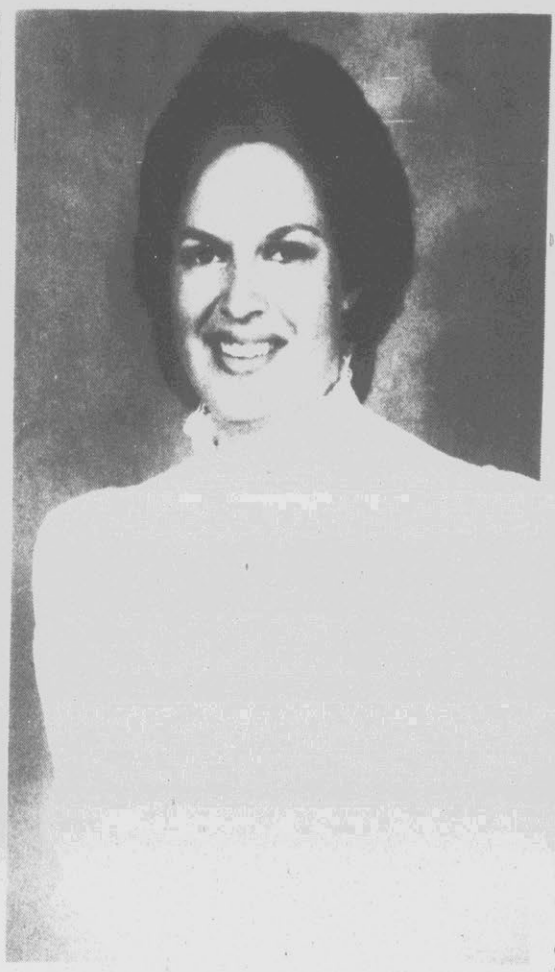

FRENCH LESSONS...have been an important part of each week all year at Third Street, with ECU student Jackie Thompson (top left) volunteering instruction.

Engagements Announced

JANICE ELIZABETH BYRD...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Lee Byrd of Route 2, Grifton, who announce her engagement to Richard Steven Harman, son of Mrs. Carol Jones of Kinston and Walter Steven Harman of Newport News, Va. A July 2 wedding is planned.

KATHRYN ANN SPIEGELBERG...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Spiegelberg of Cumberland, Md., who announce her engagement to Kenan Jackson Fleming, son of Mrs. Louise C. Fleming of Greenville and the late Burney M. Fleming Sr. A July 23 wedding is planned.

RIF Week To Be Observed

Reading Is Fundamental Week will be observed Monday through Friday at St. Gabriel's Catholic School. The program is sponsored by the Iota Kappa Omega Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority in connection with the nationwide federal R.I.F. program.

The sorority has raised month in order that each child at the school will be given three free books. Jean Carter, librarian at South Greenville Elementary School, is the local R.I.F. committee chairperson in charge of distributing the books.

The school has planned a week of motivational activities to encourage the children to read. A puppet show for the children and their parents will take place Monday afternoon. Darcey Sanderson of Sheppard Memorial Library will present a classic fairy tale for the program.

The theme for the week is Famous Fabulous Fairy Tales. Also on the Monday, the children will be dressing as their favorite fairy tale character.

Nancy Bray will tell the children about the summer reading proram available here through the public library on Wednesday afternoon. On Friday afternoon, two plays will be given. The third grade students of Ginny McDonnell's reading resource class at the school will present "The Little Red Hen."

The Rose High Drama Club will present one of the famous fairy tales.

Students involved in Friday's performance will include Melvin McLawhorn, Keysha Wilkes, Donna Braxton, Martreece Tyson and Shane Rogers from St. Gabriel's. Participating from Rose will be Amy Van Scoy, Josie Wilhelm, Brenda Stanton, Kipper Hair, Brett Hursey, Josie Keller, Carol Ambert, Lisa Pories and John Pringle.

CROWNED MOTHER-OF-THE-YEAR

Mrs. Rosa Lee Bradley was crowned "Mother-of-the-Year" at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, Sunday in the regular morning worship service by Mrs. Launa Brewington, president of the Senior Ladies Auxiliary. Mrs. Brewington also performed the crowning ceremony.

Mrs. Bradley, the wife of the late Clarence Bradley, is the mother of five children. She is a member of the Deaconess Board and the Sunday School. She is owner and operator of the Rosa Bradley's Home for the Aged on Highway 11.

She enjoys fishing, working in her garden and flowers as well as cooking. "Let the work I do speak for me" is her motto.

Paid Announcement

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A child psychologist ventured a "new theory" to television viewers the other day. He said, "Modern-day parents don't discipline their children because they are afraid of them."

You bet your sweet whip and chair we are. Where has this guy been? Twirling around in a teacup at Disneyland?

Parenting isn't for sissies. Never has been. It's like playing poker with strangers. You never know if you've got a "bluffer," one with a "killer instinct" or one who changes rules in the middle of the game.

Children are born with natural weapons that would bring any foreign power to its knees. Ever try to ignore an angry baby and time how long it can hold its breath and turn blue between cries?

I am one of those parents who always had "visions" of headlines: "MOTHER WATCHES GENERAL HOSPITAL AS BABY BLACKS OUT FROM NOT BEING PICKED UP."

I was terrified of my kids from the moment they were born. I never trusted one of them with a mouthful of strained peas. Even after I stopped pinching their lips together and watching them swallow, I was afraid to take my eyes off them lest I get it all back in my face. "MOTHER DROWNS IN STRAINED PEAS: BABY PLEADS BRUTALITY!"

And what mother has not been terrorized by the biggest source of energy since Hoover Dam . . . a child's mouth? "Aunt Margaret, my mother says if you had a brain, you'd be dangerous."

Did you ever question why everyone believes a child who still believes the tooth fairy writes post-dated checks on his Dad's bank account?

I had children who were "eaters." They ate everything . . . chairs, turtles, blankets, hymnals, shoes and anything else that didn't fight back. I never slept behind a door that wasn't locked.

I watched my son play tennis at a nice club one day wearing cut-off jeans with boxer shorts hanging out of the legs and the top to his pajamas. I was horrified he would give his right name. "SEARCH CONTINUES FOR MOTHER OF ABANDONED DERELICT IN CENTER COURT."

Most parents admit to apprehension in disciplining their children because they fear they will run away from home and they will never see them again. We all dread that day when the U-Haul pulls up and empties our home of beds, linens, TV set, typewriter, bathroom heater, dishes and appliances. "UNARMED PARENTS CLEANED OUT BY SIBLINGS. SUPREME COURT RULING NEEDED ON SEARCH AND SEIZURE!"

Most kids raise their parents by intimidation. They say parents turn out better that way. Is that the phone? Let it ring.

Card Of Thanks

I would like to thank the Doctors, Nurses, Acting Interns and Residents, my many relatives and friends for their prayers, visits, flowers, cards, gifts and kindnesses shown while I was a patient. May God Bless You All.

Harris-Little Vows Said

Ella Mae Little and Ulysses Harris Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in a double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Clarence Gray at the home of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of Ms. Ella Langley Clark of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Virginia Harris Langley of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by Withe Pittman. Linda Little of Raleigh, daughter of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Ethel Gardner and Mary Stevenson of Greenville, cousins of the bride.

The flower girl was Tamika Little of Greenville, daughter of the bride. The ring bearer was Cedric Little of Raleigh, grandson of the bride.

James Earl Harris, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers included Marvin Harris, brother of the bridegroom, Kenneth Ray Langley, stepbrother of the bridegroom, all of Washington, D.C., Eddie Glast and Jesse Ray Hardy of Greenville.

The bride wore a blue gown with pearl designs at the neckline. She wore a blue hat and her bouquet consisted of white roses and baby's breath with with ribbon.

The maid of honor wore a formal gown of blue chiffon and her bouquet was of white roses and blue ribbon. The bridesmaids wore peach and pink spring colored gowns and carried bouquets of white roses with peach and pink colored ribbons.

The flower girl wore a white dress tied at the shoulders with a matching jacket. She carried a wicker basket of rose petals.

A reception followed the ceremony.

Actress Sarah Bernhardt refused to trust her money to a bank. She carried the gold coins she demanded for payment in a chamois bag. She died in 1923.

Presented By Sorority

The Delta Kappa Gamma Sorority recently honored two scholarship winners and a deceased member.

Mrs. Doris Rasberry presented grant-in-aid scholarships to Joyce Roberts, a business education major at ECU, and Paula Witzke, a special education major.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mims paid memorial tribute to the late Margaret Lewis Speight, a former member of the sorority. Mrs. Speight's daughter, granddaughter and two sisters were present.

Members Sue Branch and Bettie Sue Forrest discussed the future of public and private education in the state. Mrs. Branch, representing the public schools, discussed four major areas in which public schools will be affected: reduction in federal and state funds, antiicipated 37,000 teacher shortage by the end of the 1980's, stiffer graduation requirements for students, and strong trends toward high technology.

Mrs. Forrest, representing private schools, said that, as of 1982, there were 58,600 students enrolled in private schools in North Carolina. Of this number, 30,000 attend church schools. In Pitt County there are eight private schools, seven church-related. She spoke on the impact on public education that would result if suddenrly 58,600 students were added to the public school rolls.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

MOUNT OLIVE — Sharon Lou Gurley and Neal Owen Benton were united in marriage at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church here. The Rev. Jerry J. Juren and the Rev. Frank Turner conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Glenwood Gurley of Mount Olive and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Owen Benton of Fremont are parents of the bridegroom.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Mrs. Paul Garrison. Carolyn Gurley, sister of the bride, sang "We've Only Just Begun" and the father of the bride sang "I Love You Truly." Mrs. Barton Baldwin sang "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with scalloped silk Venise lace. A sheer yoke of illusion accented with silk Venise and beaded schiffli lace enhanced the fitted bodice. Scalloped silk Venise lace encircled the waistline and the sheer bishop sleeves were fashioned with matching lace appliques and finished in cuffs of organza overlaid in lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel train were accented with a flounced hemline of chantilly lace bordered in silk Venise lace. She wore a double tiered fingertip veil of illusion edged in silk Venise lace held in place by a Juliet cap overlaid in satin accented with floral silk Venise lace. Her only jewelry was an emerald ring and pearl earrings. She carried a bouquet of silk plum colored roses, stephanotis, lilies of the valley and gypsophilia.

Carolyn Gurley, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Laura Odom of Fremont, Mary Beth Herring and Laura Williams of Mount Olive, Doris Lane and Elaine Precythe of Faison and Gail Darden of Stantonsburg. Millicent Paige Mooring of Mount Olive was flower girl and Adam Webester of Selma was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Mike Benton of Hampton, Va. and Gary Benton of Fremont, brothers of the bridegroom, Ed Hester of Chadbourn, Pete Edmundson of Pikesville, John Turner of Fremont and David McKeever of Buffalo, N.Y.

Lou Crisp, aunt of the bride, presided at the guest register and the wedding was directed by Mrs. Joseph Ray Mooring Jr.

After a cruise to the Bahamas, the couple will live in Fremont.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of East Carolina University.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Reinhardt.

Mrs. Harold Ellis served wedding cake and punch was poured by Mrs. Frank Dowdy. Both are aunts of the bride.

Mrs. Lee Pittard presided at the guest register.

Good-byes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Dail and rice bags were distributed by Holly and Kristy Cotton, cousins of the bride.

A wedding brunch was held at the Goldsboro Country Club for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests. On Friday evening after the rehearsal, parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party at a dinner at the Steak Barn.

The bridesmaids luncheon was given by Mrs. Lee Pittard, Mrs. Joe Herring, Mrs. Vernon Whetsell and Mrs. Cletus Brock at the Goldsboro Country Club Thursday.

HAWAIIAN BUFFET
Coconut Chicken & Rice
Broiled Zucchini & Rolls
Island Parfait & Coffee

ISLAND PARFAIT

The pudding is very sweet, so we suggest small portions.

14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
20-ounce can crushed pineapple in pineapple syrup, drained
Salted macadamia nuts, whole or chopped

Into an 8-inch cake pan, pour the condensed milk; cover with foil; place in a 10-inch round cake pan of hot tap water (the water should come up as high as the milk). Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until thick and light caramel color — about 1 hour. Chill. Divide among 6 sherbet glasses, using 3 generous tablespoons for each. Top each with a generous $\frac{1}{4}$ cup crushed pineapple; sprinkle with macadamia nuts. Makes 6 servings.

STRAWBERRY TAPIOCA

Calorie-watchers are likely to enjoy this.

10-ounce package frozen strawberries halved in syrup, thawed but undrained
Orange juice
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
1 tablespoon sugar

Into a 2-cup glass measure, drain the juice from the strawberries; reserve berries. Add enough orange juice to strawberry juice to make $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups liquid; turn into a $1\frac{1}{2}$-quart saucepan with tapioca and sugar; let stand 5 minutes. Over medium heat, stirring occasionally, bring to a boil. Off heat, stir in reserved strawberries. Makes 2 cups. Turn into glass dessert dishes; chill overnight. (For non-carlorie-watchers, this is delicious topped with sweetened whipped cream.) Makes 4 servings.

Sharon L. Isenhour Marries On Saturday

HICKORY — Ascension Episcopal Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony Saturday afternoon at two o'clock of Sharon Leigh Isenhour and Jeffrey Paul Sarvey. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. J. Barney Hawkins IV.

Edward T. Ward presented a program of classical music.

Daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. William J. Isenhour of Route 5, Hickory, the bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Sarvey of St. Michaels, Md.

Michelle Isenhour of Greenville, sister of the bride, and Anastasia Isenhour of Silver Spring, Md., cousin of the bride, were honor attendants and bridesmaids included Mrs. Douglas Matson of Hickory and Mrs. Ross Miller of Greenville.

Ross Miller of Greenville was best man and ushers included John T. Annerson of Darlington, S.C., Joe Betthauser of Asheboro and Scott Luce of Greenville. Jeffrey Gustav Sarvey of Greenville, son of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

MRS. JEFFREY PAUL SARVEY

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a split V-neckline outlined in rochelle lace. The fitted bodice and cuffs were overlaid with matching lace. The full circle skirt fell from a fitted waistline encircled with rochelle lace. The attached chapel train was accented with matching lace at the edges. She wore a waltz length mantilla edged in matching lace and motifs of rochelle lace enhanced the illusion. She wore her great-grandmother's pearl necklace and earrings. The bride carried a cascade of white roses centered with butterfly iris accented with spider plants, English ivy and baby's breath.

The honor attendants wore formal gowns of teal chiffon over taffeta designed with an open neckline, rolled shoulder straps and a fitted bodice. The sleeveless gown was complimented with a chiffon jacket with a high neckline of gathered chiffon. Sheer bishop sleeves and a fitted cummerbund enhanced the jacket from which fell the gathered skirts. They carried cascades of daisies and button poms accented with myri claudis and yellow streamers.

The attendants were dressed identically.

A champagne reception was held after the ceremony at the Cedar Rock Country Club in Lenoir. Guests were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Isenhour, aunt and uncle of the bride.

Mrs. James Whitworth and Mrs. Bill Charlolee, aunts of the bride, served wedding cake. Mrs. Dolan Huffman, Mrs. Erwin Huffman and Mrs. L.C. Huffman, aunts of the bride, poured punch.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Williamsburg and Virginia Beach, Va.

The bride is a staff nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and graduated from East Carolina University School of Nursing. The bridegroom is director of operations, Expressway Foods in Rocky Mount. He graduated from ECU.

Miss Fuchs, Mr. Phelps Are Married

On Saturday afternoon at five o'clock, Nancy Elizabeth Fuchs became the bride of James Anthony Phelps in a candlelight ceremony at Salem United Methodist Church in Simpson.

The Rev. Edward M. Walker of Greenville and the Rev. Billy Cuthrell of Stokes officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond F. Fuchs of Stokes and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Phelps of Greenville.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Gail Crisp of Stokes, organist, David and Becky McGowan of Greenville, who sang "Endless Love." He sang "Ava Maria."

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk-ened organza over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in floral silk Venise lace. A miniature ruffle of organza edged in a silk Venise lace border accented the neckline and extended over the shoulders to a scallop in the gown back. A border of silk Venise lace enhanced the modified empire waistline and the full sheer bishop styled sleeves featured fitted cuffs trimmed in floral lace. Floral appliques of silk Venise lace centered the back of the gown with covered buttons extending below the waist. The full skirt extended to an attached chapel train. The bride wore a strand of pearls which was a gift to her mother from her father on their wedding day. She wore a fingertip illusion veil edged in Venise lace border with appliques of lace trimming the veil. It was attached to a Juliet headpiece appliqued in matching lace beaded with pearls. The bride carried a silk colonial bouquet of white roses, gardenias, stephanotis and baby's breath interspersed with white lace ribbon and satin streamers.

MRS. JAMES ANTHONY PHELPS

Judy Bazemore of Greenville was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of yellow organza over taffeta designed with a scalloped neckline. The full skirt had a double ruffled hemline flounce which extended into the back waistline to form a bustle. She carried a silk colonial nosegay of yellow roses, violets, yellow and white daisies and baby's breath with yellow satin streamers.

Amanda Phelps, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid and wore a dress identical to that of the honor attendant and carried similar flowers.

Honorary bridesmaids were Lisa Briley, Susan Spain, Patti Andrews and Joan Newberry, all cousins of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Steve Fuchs, brother of the bride, and Scott Buck of Greenville.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of sea spray green polyester with a matching fingertip coat. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of mauve chiffon. Both wore corsages of white silk roses. Grandmothers of the couple were remembered with similar corsages.

The wedding was directed by Shirley Russell of Greenville.

Immediately followlwing the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the Brook Valley Country Club. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Milton Spain, aunt and uncle of the bride. Luerain Buck presided at the register and Ann Margaret Haddock presented rice bags to the guests.

The bride's table was overlaid with a white lace cloth and centered with a silver epergne of silk roses and daisies with silver candelabra holding lighted tapers.

Cake was served by Rosemary Sperl and Erline Fuchs, aunts of the bride, poured punch.

Good-byes were said by the host and hostess.

After the rehearsal, the parents of the bridegroom entertained at a dinner party at the King and Queen Restaurant. A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Page Watson, who was assisted by Mrs. Frances Davis and Patti Andrews.

A pig picking was held for the wedding party and out-of-town guests Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Spain. Lisa Briley, Mrs. Charlie James Jr. and Susan Spain assisted. A dance followed at the Windy Ridge Clubhouse.

The couple will live in Simpson after a wedding trip to Atlantic Beach and Hilton Head, S.C.

The bride graduated from Peace College and East Carolina University. She is a staff accountant at North State Savings and Loan Corp. The bridegroom attended ECU and served in the U.S. Navy. He is now owner and operator of Professional Auto Beauty Service in Greenville.

Aitch-Too-Oh

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — One of the most widespread misconceptions is the use of H-2-0 as a term for water in the belief that all water is composed exclusively of hydrogen and oxygen.

Actually, almost none of it is, say researchers at Mountain Valley Spring Water Co. They point out that all the fresh water on earth is about 99.7 perfect H-2-0. The remainder is made up of some or all of 60 separate substances, mostly dissolved minerals.

Pure H-2-0 is used in chemistry, in industry for boilers and electric irons. While it may also be consumed by humans, it is usually not desirable for regular use unless medically prescribed.

Strawberry Cream Cake

GREEN BEAN SLAW

Old-time — and as good as ever.

4 strips bacon
1 small onion, chopped medium fine
3 tablespoons flour
1-pound can green beans, undrained
¼ cup cider vinegar
¾ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon sugar
4 cups shredded cabbage, lightly packed
6 radishes, sliced very thin

In a 10-inch skillet, over low heat, cook bacon until crisp; drain, leaving drippings in skillet; crumble bacon and reserve. Cook onion in hot drippings until wilted; stir in flour until blended. Drain liquid from beans into skillet; stir constantly over moderately low heat until thickened and boiling. Stir in vinegar, salt, mustard and sugar until smooth. Stir in beans; heat through. Into a large serving bowl turn cabbage, radishes and reserved bacon; add hot bean mixture; toss lightly. Serve warm. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Teapots with broken spouts and decorated mugs without handles make attractive plant holders.

Use cardboard tubes from giftwrap or paper towels as inserts for tall boots to keep them standing upright in the closet.

Couple Speaks Vows In Saturday Ceremony

AUTRYVILLE — Sheila Jane Faircloth, daughter of Mrs. Jane Horne of Autryville, and the late Capt. Donnie C. Faircloth, and Frederick Royce Frye were married here in the Long Branch Baptist Church by the Rev. Dennis Guy Saturday at 4 p.m.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Judith Nipper of Lillington and Royce Frye of Greensboro.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Randall Hall, the bride wore a long white flowing organza gown styled with a high neckline and bodice of lace and pearls. Lace appliques embellished the full bishop sleeves and the train was edged with lace. Her Venise cap headpiece was attached to a two tiered lace edged veil and she carried a bouquet of white and pink roses with baby's breath, accented with greenery.

Daphne Faircloth of Autryville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a pink pleated gown with spaghetti straps and cape of pink chiffon flowers. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses with baby's breath and greenery.

Tammy and Felicia Faircloth of Autryville, cousins of the bride, and Donna Green of Angier, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Lisa Steiner of Autryville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom and Jason Horne of Autryville, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Ushers were Stanley Frye of Fuquay-Varina, brother of the bridegroom, David Lasater of Lillington and Randy Hall of Fayetteville, cousin of the bride.

MRS. FREDERICK ROYCE FRYE

Amalie Williams, organist, and Gwen Williams, vocalist, presented music for the ceremony.

The attendants were dressed like the honor attendant.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to the coast.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Central Carolina Technical College and Fayetteville State University. He is a patrolman for the City of Greenville. The bride will graduate in December from East Carolina University and is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma and Gamma Beta Phi, honor societies.

A reception followed in the church fellowship hall.

A rehearal buffet dinner followed the rehearsal and was held in the church fellowship hall.

Tussie-mussies, small herbal bouquets, were carried in medieval times to ward off disease. Some English judges still carry them — for ceremony.

Couple Marries Saturday Morning

Gail Marie Stanfield and Donald Andrew Wallace were united in marriage in the First Christian Church here Saturday at 10 a.m. Dr. Will Wallace performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. E.M. Stanfield of Murfreesboro and M.H. Wallace of Rochester, Mich. and the late Dorothy Wallace.

Gigi Walter of Greenville was matron of honor and the best man was Rod Wallace of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom. Stephen Wallace of Kodiak, Alaska, brother of the bridegroom, was the usher.

A program of wedding music was presented by Diane Bridger, organist. Mrs. J.D. Wilson of Greenville sang "One Hand, One Heart'' and "Evergreen."

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress. It was a formal gown of ivory satin designed with a sweetheart neckline enhanced with a fitted bodice and long fitted satin sleeves with calla points. The satin skirt was accented with a flounce that extended to form a chapel length train. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion held in place by a tiara overlaid in chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The bride carried a bouquet of white daisies and baby's breath.

The attendant was dressed in a pastel pink dress with three-quarter sleeves, scooped neckline and bell skirt. In her hair she wore a matching pink bow and carried a bouquet of daisies and pink carnations.

The mother of the bride wore a peach dress with a square neckline. The mother and grandmothers wore corsages of white daisies.

A reception was given by the bride's parents and was held in the church parlor. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dill welcomed guests and presided at the bridal register. Mrs. Cleveland Moore served guests and Debbie Briley poured punch.

The father of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and friends with a rehearsal dinner at the King and Queen Restaurant.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to the Outer Banks.

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and East Carolina University. She is employed by Pitt County Schools. The bridegroom is associated with the M.H. Wallace Co. in Greenville. He graduated from Adrian College and Michigan Technological Institute in Michigan.

MRS. DONALD ANDREW WALLACE

The invention of iced tea is credited to Richard Blechynden, an Englishman. He served the beverage cold after finding visitors to the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair did not want a hot beverage.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ennis of Winterville announce the marriage of their daughter, Beverly Yvonne Person of Greenville, to Ricky Earl Willins, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Lester Smith of Greenville. The bride graduated from Bayshore High in Milwaukee, Wis. and the bridegroom is serving in the U.S. Navy and is stationed in San Diego, Calif. He graduated from J.H. Rose High School. The couple was married Thursday.

Crossword Puzzles Now Available On T-Shirts

By DAVE MEISTER
Reading Eagle

REINHOLDS, Pa. (AP) — Some people will go to great lengths to solve crossword puzzles. They may even ask for the shirt off your back.

Then again, you could just buy the addict his own T-shirt complete with a wash-and-wear crossword puzzle, the latest in word apparel.

Get fed up with this puzzle — no problem. Just toss it in the wash, run it through a couple of cycles, dry and get back to the acrosses and downs.

The avid crossword puzzle player can flash his shirt with pride with all the white boxes filled.

The man behind this novelty is Jack W. Winter of Lancaster County.

Winter, a crossword addict, decided about a year ago to silk-screen a puzzle onto a T-shirt so he could keep his favorite hobby close to his heart.

But no ordinary puzzle would do. For $300, Winter obtained exclusive rights to a puzzle created by Tap Osborn, a man who has created a number of puzzles for The New York Times' Sunday edition — known for printing some of the toughest of puzzles.

Getting the shirts silk-screened was a snap for Winter, who is a salesman for a manufacturer of printed apparel.

Thanks to some well-placed advertisements — including a plug in the national periodical "Games" magazine — Winter and his wife, Jean, began receiving hundreds of orders for the puzzling shirt.

Since April 1982, the Winters have received more than 700 orders for T-shirts, some of the orders coming from as far as Alaska and Hawaii.

True to Osborn's style, the T-shirt puzzle, "Fun and Games," is a toughie. Winter does not include the solution when shipping the T-shirt. Puzzled T-shirt wearers must send a request for the answers.

Jean Winter advises customers, "If you're not a puzzle buff, don't write on the shirt. But, if you're pretty sure of yourself, go ahead and give the shirt a try."

However, if you are the type who insists on completing the puzzle on the T-shirt every time before you wear it, you had better keep track of how many times you wash the shirt.

The clues start to fade after 50 launderings.

Riverspree '83

ELIZABETH CITY — RiverSpree '83, the annual celebration in Elizabeth City, the northeastern port town on the broad Pasquotank River, gets under way Friday night and continues through Sunday, with a number of activities scheduled to be held along the waterfront and in the streets of the old port town.

Festivities will kick-off Friday night with a street dance at Southgate Mall, with music by local country and western musicians.

On Saturday, stage performances by singers and dancers will take place at the mall, and on Sunday, the mall back lot will be the site of the lift-off for a hot air balloon.

Other attractions will include a strolling banjo player, a juggler and entertainment groups from two churches — the Blackwell Memorial Baptist Church Bell Ringers and the Cann Memorial Presbyterian Church Muppets.

Among bands to perform are Out in the Cold, C & W Unlimited and the Midnight Flyers. Local high school jazz and pep bands will play, and the Tidewater Pipes and Drums will add their own flavor of band music.

Dance performers will include The Tidewater Ballet, the Libby Allen Dancers members of the Elizabeth City School of Dance, and square dance groups.

One of the highlights in festivities planned is the water race — Anything That'll Float But A Boat race. Another contest will be a tug-of-war between teams vying for trophies.

Springtime Festival

WINDSOR — "Springtime on the Plantation," an entertainment and food event to welcome in the warm weather of mid-May springtime, will be held Saturday at Historic Hope Plantation near Windsor.

Scheduled events are to begin at 5:30 p.m., with a barbeque supper to be served following a concert of bluegrass music and a clogging exhibition. Guided tours of Hope House, the Federal-Georgian early 18th century mansion of Governor David Stone, will be available until 6:30. Music, dining and dancing will continue through 11 p.m.

A 12-man Cashie Cooking Club will be in charge of food preparation, with Windsor's Explore Scout Troop in charge of parking.

In the event of rain, "Springtime on the Plantation" will be held at the National Guard Armory, located one mile south of Windsor on U.S. 17.

Reservations are required for this subscription event. For more information and reservation details, call 794-3140 or write to: Historic Hope Plantation, P.O. Box 601, Windsor, N.C., 27894.

Tall Ships Ceremony

BEAUFORT — Two events, one of them covering portions of two days, are scheduled to take place this week at Hampton Mariners Museum, 120 Turner Street in Beaufort, downtown near the waterfront.

• On Wednesday, a field trip by ship to Shackleford will leave from the museum at 9:30 a.m., with return due at 4:30 p.m. Fee for the trip is $12, with reservations required in advance (call 728-7317).

• On Wednesday, International Museum Day, the role of Hampton Mariners Museum in attracting tall ships to the area will be noted, with the tall ships Appledore and Harvey Gamage due to arrive in the Beaufort Harbor for their semi-annual musuem visit. This will be followed on Thuesday by a 12 noon Welcome Tall-Ships Ceremony. The public is invited to be on hand for the tall-ship events.

WHITEWALL WHITEWASH — A sign painter paints over a Tireman advertisement on a billboard at Parker Field in Richmond recently. The painter had no trouble whitewashing the sign despite what seems to be objections on the part of the hero of the sign. (AP Laserphoto)

CRAFT DAY IN THE SUN — Arts and crafts festivals are very much a part of the American scene today, and eastern North Carolina has its ample share of these events during warm weather months. Here, at the recent festival that was part of Swansboro's 200th anniversary celebrtion, a young man tries on a handcrafted leather belt and a woman in colonial costume chats with a weaver at her loom. Sea And Land Battles To Be Fought In Bath

BATH — On Saturday and Sunday members of the Second North Carolina Regiment of Foot, men and women, fully costumed in the mode of two centuries and more from the past, will take over the historic village of Bath.

Playing the role of regiment members from several units — including the Third North Carolina Regiment, Guilford Militia, Kentucky Militia, Second South Carolina Regiment, and Fraiser's 71st Highlanders, the occupying contingents will be camping out colonial style at Bonner Point overlooking the junction of Bath and Back Creeks on Friday and Saturday nights.

While living the open air life on the high ground above the creeks, the men and women will live history as it was long ago, carrying on daily activities along the streets of Bath — which, incidentally, have remained unchanged since the town's earliest days in the 1700s.

Highlight of the colonial forces occupation will be a land and sea battle between American and British factions off Bonner Point. Actual cannons will be used, with two battles to be staged, one on Saturday afternoon, the second on Sunday afternoon.

Other events include a parade at 11 a.m. Saturday, complete with a flag ceremony, and on Sunday morning troops will attend worship services at St. Thomas Episcopal Church — the oldest church in North Carolina.

All during both days guided tours of historic buildings in Bath can be arranged. Free parking is available throughout town except at Bonner Point, site of the encampment, and picnic facilities are also available.

Crafts people specializing in colonial type crafts are invited to come with wares for sale and display tables. There is no fee for spaces which will be assigned on a first-come, first-served basis.

Persons wanting more information on any of the events are to call 923-3971.

High School Art At Gray Gallery

The annual North Carolina high school art competition exhibit is now on view at Gray Gallery, Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the East Carolina University.

Approximately 40 pieces by students from schools all over the state are being shown and will be on view through May 25.

Gallery hours are 10 to 5 weekdays, closed weekends.

Coastal Conference Scheduled

SWANSBORO — A Conference on Navigating Coastal Values, in conjunction with the first annual meeting of the North Carolina Coastal Federation, Inc., will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the Swansboro Town Hall.

Among topics to be discussed and examined at the event are coastal history, music, folklore, society and politics, important coastal issues, roles that citizens can play in coastal management, and success stories — where citizens have made a difference.

Open to any interested person, it is being held for an intended audience of coastal residents and visitors, students, members of public interest organizations, and public officials.

The conference begins at 7:30 p.m. Friday with a talk by Jim McGowan of UNC-Wilmington, followed at 8:30 p.m. by Maurice Ballance and Edgar Howard of Ocracoke on "Folk Songs of Caostal North Carolina"

At 9 a.m. Saturday a panel discussion on "Charting Community Change" will be held with Harry Watson of UNC-Chapel Hill; Tucker Littleton, Swansboro historian; and Jim Sabella of UNC-Wilmington.

At 11 a.m. Janice Faulkner, director of the East Carolina Regional Development Institute, Greenville, will talk, and a catered lunch will be served at noon. Afternoon sessions include a 1:30 p.m. lecture by Gene Purcell of Atlantic Christian College; a movie, "Carteret County" at 2:30 p.m., a talk by Jonathan Howes of UNC-Chapel Hill at 3 p.m., with Purcell speaking again at 3:30 p.m. The final discussions will be at 4:10 p.m. with Purcell, Todd Miller of the N.C. Coastal Federation; Ann Hooper, Carteret County Crossroads; and Ralph Cantral, N.C. Office of Coastal Management. There will be a conference evaluation at 4:40 p.m., adjournment will be at 5 p.m., and dinner served at 6 p.m.

The one event scheduled for Sunday is the board of directors meeting at 11 a.m. to which the public is invited.

Basic registration fee is $7, which includdes lunch and coffee breaks. (with a $3 surcharge for registrations received after Tuesday). Registration can be made by sending a check for $7 to: N.C. Coastal Federation, Rt. 5, Box 603 (OCEAN), Newport, N.C., 28570. More details, including motel or camping facilities can be made by calling 393-8185. Checks or money orders are to be made payable to: N.C. Coastal Federation.

Benefit Boat Race Set For Wilmington

WILMINGTON — Saturday is the date for a big southeastern North Carolina water event — the Augustus Charles Hobart Hampden Sailboat Race, which will benefit the New Hanover County Museum Foundation, Inc.

Hampden, known during his career as Captain Roberts, was commander of the twin-screw blockade runner Don, which successfully outmaneuvered the Yankee Blockade on many occasions. This Captain Roberts achieved by laying close to shore, blending into the coastline, and running for the port on moonless nights at high tide.

The Don was finally captured in the Cape Fear River after a noble career in support of the Southern states. The captain deftly eluded capture, surviving the Civil War as a respected Southern seaman.

Registration fee for those taking part in the race is $5 in advance, and $10 on the day of the race. Boat classes for the races will be Sunfish, Lasers, Hobie 16, and a handicapped class. Registration fees will be donated to the Foundation and are tax deductible.

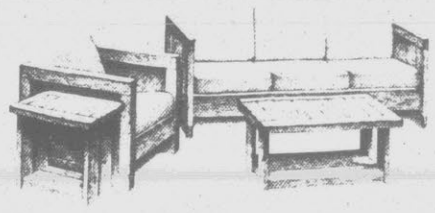

A skippers meeting will be held at noon. The races will get under way at 1 p.m.

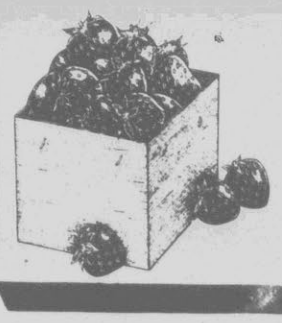

Persons wanting to register early for the $5 fee and to get more information may write: Race Committee, New Hanover County Museum Foundation, Inc., 814 Market Street, Wilmington, N.C., 28401. Anyone wanting to enter early can send a check for $5 made payable to the New Hanover County Museum Foundation.

THE SILHOUETTE ... of a girl against sea grass and sparkling ocean waters graces the cover of "The Girls of The Grand Strand" summer to summer calendar, which features photographs by Greenville wildlife photographer Joe Albea.

Summer To Summer Calendar

Joe Albea, an avid outdoorsman and photographer who writes a Sunday outdoors column for The Daily Reflector, has proven that he's equally adept at focusing his camera on subjects other than birds, fish and raccoons.

The subject for Albea's detour from his more usual photographic efforts remains outdoor creatures — only in this case they are creatures of a summer kind — young ladies viewed along the beaches of Myrtle Beach just a little bit south of North Carolina.

The 14-page publication contains a girl for each month of the year plus an additional one silhouetted on the cover of "The Girls of the Grand Strand" Beach Calendar, Myrtle Beach, S.C. This is not your familiar chronological calendar that begins in January — rather it starts off with the prime girl-viewing season of June and continues in full circle to May 1984.

Purists of a publication's context might take exception to these young ladies not getting into fall and winter attire for their photos — say from October thorugh March.

Women may find this calendar a handy reference to styles in bathing suits, and all users will find practical the abundant full page calendar space allotted beneath each brilliantly colored photograph.

"Most of the girls are college coeds and are students in five different universities in North and South Carolina," Albea explained.

In addition to producer and photographer Albea, those involved in producing the calendar are: George Wilkerson, associate producer; Diane Woodley, production assistant, and Karen Mills, choreographer. I've never before heard of a calendar choreographer — but it's an intriguing title, whatever it might mean.

The 8½ x 11 inch calendar is priced at $2.95 and is available now in four Greenville locations — University Book Exchange, Bond's Sporting Goods, Central Book News, and Eastern Office Supply.

Publisher Being Honored

WINSTON-SALEM — John Fries Blair, a Winston-Salem publisher, will soon join Paul Green, Gertrude Carraway, Albert Coates, Sam Ragan and Sam J. Ervin in the select list of North Carolinians who have been honored as recipients of the North Caroliniana Award.

At the North Caroliniana Society's banquet in Chapel Hill on Saturday, Blair will become the sixth Tar Heel to receive the award since its inception in 1975. The award is given to honor men and women who have contributed unusually distinguished service to the state over a period of years.

Blair, who established an independent publishing company in Winston-Salem more than 28 years ago, is being honored for his support and preservation of the historical, literary and cultural heritage of North Carolina.

A native of Winston-Salem, he still lives in the house in which he was born during the presidency of Teddy Roosevelt. After receiving an undergraduate degree from Haverford College, Pa., and a law degree from Harvard, and spending 12 years practicing law, Blair decied to pursue his literary inclinations and took an M.A. in English from Columbia University. He taught briefly at Moravian College, then moved to Chapel Hill where he was an assistant director and editor for the Institute of Government and an actor with the Carolina Playmakers.

It was later, while serving as an editor for the UNC Press, that Blair became "hooked on publishing." In 1954 he established a publishing house in Winston-Salem. Since then he has published more than 120 books, many of them either about North Carolina or penned by North Carolina writers.

Blair books have won numerous awards in state and regional competitions, and special efforts are made to keep the books in print. They include histories, novels, biographies, collections of short stories and verse, and cookbooks.

Archie K. Davis, president of the North Caroliniana Society, Dr. H.G. Jones, former director of the State Department of Archives and History, and Albert Coates, former head of the Institute of Government, will be among speakers at the reception and dinner. The main address will be given by a surprise "Friend of John Fries Blair."

Greenville Poet Has Work In New Book

Poems by Greenville poet Gerda Nischan as well as translations of poetry by other women born in Germany appear in the latest updated edition of "In Her Mother's Tongue."

The anthology, also titled "Reisegepaeck Sprache" in German, is a 395 page large format paperback edition published by Emerson Press, Inc. of Denver, Colorado.

Mrs. Nischan, who was born in Frankenthal (Palatinate), Germany in 1940, came to the U.S. in 1967 and has lived in Greenville for several years. She is the wife of Dr. Bodo Nischan, a faculty member at East Carolina University.

Editor's biographical notes for the anthology point out that she "distinguishes herself from all the other writers presented because she is the only one who has treated the experience of World War II in Germany in her poems as well as the problems which immigrants face."

It is further noted that she is the only one of the German-born women who has "used English as the primary means of expression, and later translated her poems into German.

Mrs. Nischan is the author of a volume of poems, "Red Sky in the Night," and currently is at work on a second volume, "The Immigrants."

In this edition of "In Her Mother's Tongue," four poems by Mrs. Nischan have been included — "I am a Number;" "Christmas Eve 1944;" "Dead Spring" and "Trainmates."

The two poets whose work she has translated for the volume are Margarethe Kollisch and Gertrud C. Schwebell.

HAMILTON PRIZE

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The 1982 Hamilton Prize was recently awarded to Anthropology Professor Sally Price of Johns Hopkins University for her book "Co-Wives and Calabashes: The Social and Artistic Life of Saramaka Women."

The book is to be published by the U-M Press.

A Review

New Tar Heel History Books Bring To Life Ordinary People

The Way We Lived in North Carolina. Chapel Hill. Published by the University of North Carolina Press for the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources. Sydney Nathans, General Editor. Illustrated. Each volume 8½ x 11, cloth, $11.95 per volume, paper, $6.95 per volume. (If not available locally, order from: The UNC Press, P.O. Box 2288, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27514).

(Volume One: "Natives and Newcomers," before 1770, by Elizabeth Penn and Peter Wood; Volume Two: "An Independent People," 1770-1820, by Harry Watson; Volume Three: "Close to the Land," 1820-1870, by Thomas Clayton; Volume Four: "The Quest for Progress," 1870-1920, by Sydney Nathans; Volume Five, "Express Lanes and Country Roads," 1920-1970, by Thomas Parramore.)

In time to join the T-shirts and beer mugs on sale during the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the settlement of North Carolina, the State Department of Cultural Resources has published a five-volume history of the state, "The Way We Lived in North Carolina." Long after the shirts are forgotten in the bottoms of drawers and the beer mugs lost in the sand, the history will be read and reread.

In general there are two kinds of histories. Professional histories delight scholars with extensive detail and exhaustive notation. Popular histories are full of pictures and people but are often short on substance. General editor Sydney Nathans and historians Elizabeth Fenn, Peter Wood, Harry Watson, Thomas Clayton, and Thomas Parramoor have combined the best features of both. "The Way We Lived in North Carolina" is both complete and entertaining.

The writers believe that "the past can be most fully comprehended through the combined impact of two experiences: reading history and visiting historic places." Throughout the five volumes photographs of historic sites open to the general public fill the wide margins and illustrate the text. These photographs and the assumption that readers should visit the sites make the series a true living history, one designed to be used as well as read.

Photographs and drawings used to illustrate life in North Carolina include plantations, taverns, mill villages, tobacco factories, farms, country stores, and the Biltmore House. Haunting in themselves, like Walker Evans' famous photographs in "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," they bring the past alive in a way no words can.

Even more than through the photographs, the state's long and colorful history comes alive through the people in the series. The writers of "The Way We Lived in North Carolina" avoided a trap for the historian — compiling a chronicle of the rich and famous. The statesmen, businessmen, soldiers, and pioneers are included, of course, but the series is rich in description of the lives of ordinary men and women, and it is their lives that make the most interesting reading.

Historical forces are often large and impersonal, but as the writers clearly show, it was individuals who were caught up in the conflicts.

One was the Reverend Charles Pettigrew (1774-1807). Elected the first Episcopal bishop of the Diocese of North Carolina, Pettigrew was also the owner of Bonarva Plantation in Washington County. He wished there were no slaves in the world, but his plantation needed them. The excerpts from his letters and diaries show him wrestling with his dilemma.

Ella May Wiggins was another person caught in history. A textile worker in Gastonia, she was killed in the famous Loray Mill strike of 1919, leaving behind a union ballad sung at her funeral.

Readers will meet other people throughout the five volumes. The people of North Carolina are its history, and the writers include as many as possible — white, black, and Indian, men and women. The cast of characters is wide-ranging; Washington Duke and R.J. Reynolds of tobacco fame; Thomas Wolfe the novelist, George Moses Horton, a slave who wrote poetry for the students of Chapel Hill; Billy Graham; and Pauli Murray, a black attorney and one of the first women ordained as an Episcopal priest.

North Carolina history is rich in diversity, diversity of people and diversity in geography. "The Way We Lived in North Carolina" illustrates this diversity clearly and invites readers to experience it. It is a collection for schools and libraries, and it is a collection for the home.

Book News

By WILLIE NELMS

There is a time in almost every young man's life when his imagination is captured by an automobile. A desire to own and operate the vehicle becomes the driving force in his life.

Stephen King's new book, "Christine," provides a courious and macabre twist on this no uncommon development. In the case of "Christine," the car comes to own and operate the young man.

King, the author of "Carrie," "The Stand," "The Shining" and other chilling horror tales, has the ability to exaggerate normal and fairly common fixations into stark stories of terror.

Set in Pennsylvania in 1978, "Christine" has three primary characters. Arnie Cunningham is the perennial high school loser, who is the constant subject of derision and ridicule by his classmates. Dennis Guilder is Arnie's closest friend and a high school athlete. Christine is a rusty 1958 Plymouth Fury which Arnie buys and plans to restore.

The history of the '58 Fury and its previous owner, a retired soldier, take Arnie and Dennis on a bizarre series of adventures that reach far beyond the normal boy-loves-car story. Christine's unique ability to repair herself and to wreak havoc on all who threaten her and Arnie dominate the book.

Mixed into this story are verses from a variety of rock 'n roll automobile songs of the past which add an interesting accent to the book. Anyone who has owned a car which seemed to require more time, money and attention than the people around it will find points of identification in "Christine."

In the early 1960s, certain T-shirts were popular. They featured the exaggerated caricature of a '58 Plymouth hot rod emblazened on them with the inscription "Hell Hath No Fury Like Plymouth" printed on the front. After reading "Christine," this expression carries new meaning.

Arts Council Dinner

The fourth annual arts awards dinner of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council will be held on Thursday at the Greenville Country Club. The reception will begin at 7 p.m. with dinner to be at 8 p.m.

Entertainment will be presented following the dinner — with performances by Edward Glenn, Antonia Dalapas and Brett Watson scheduled. Individuals and businesses will be honored at the dinner for their support of the Arts Council and its member groups. Those receiving awards will be a given a limited edition print by East Carolina University faculty artist Michael Ehlbeck.

Persons interested in attending the Pitt-Greenville Arts Couincil annual dinner and reception should call the Arts Council at 757-1785 for reservations no later than Monday.

Artist Has To Fight Off Beggars

By JOHN WINN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) - The hardest part of Kurt Wenner's job is fighting off the beggars trying to cash in on his work.

Wenner draws monumental icons and action scenes on sidewalks. The beggars like to take the credit and, coincidently, the tips from admiring passers-by.

The Santa Barbara, Calif., native is one of dozens of artists who literally scratch out a living by changing a piece of cold cement into warm, enchanting pictures.

They're called "Madonnari," loosely translated as painters of the Madonna — a tag that came about because most of the artists concentrate on religious subjects, particularly the Virgin Mary.

Wenner is a little different from the others because he uses original designs — and thinks big.

On a recent cloudy day on a busy corner in the heart of Rome, Wenner completed a massive 9-by-12-foot portrait of St. George on a charging steed doing battle with a twisting dragon. Few passed without dropping a coin or a bill into cups near the picture.

The 24-year-old artist studied at Pasadena, Calif., and the Rhode Island School of Design before setting out to live in Rome. But once in a city already swarming with artists he found it tough to make enough money to continue his studies or to find work.

"I saw a couple of Germans doing this about six months ago and at first wasn't interested at all because I didn't think I could use chalk. But then I decided to give it a try," he said.

"It normally takes three days to finish a picture, if I can finish it," he said with a woeful glance at the skies that threatened to burst open with a liquid eraser. "Few of them get done."

Because of the vicissitudes of weather and using a busy sidewalk for a canvas, Wenner's art form is necessarily brief.

Wenner's efforts have won him a first prize at last year's Madonnari contest in Verona, and he has been commissioned to do an altar piece for a local church and occasional scenery for theaters.

'83 Arts Fund Plan Announced

Under the leadership of chairman Jerry W. Powell the 1983 Arts Fund recently kicked-off its campaign at the East Carolina University School of Art's Gray Gallery.

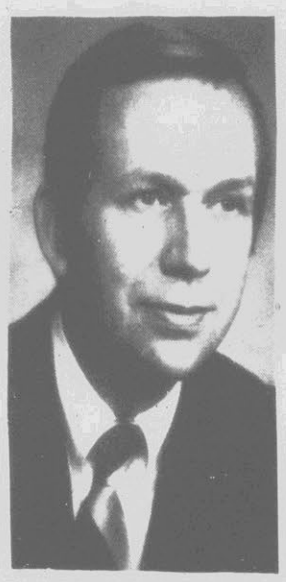

"Working for all the Arts" is the theme of the Arts Fund this year. Contributors to the fund are providing direct operating support for the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council and its funded member arts agencies.

These supported agencies include the Ayden Theater Workshop, the East Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association, Green Grass Cloggers, Greenville Boys Choral Assocication, Greenville Choral Society, and the Society for the Preservation of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America Association Inc., among a long list of member agencies.

A gift to the Arts Fund also supports many valuable programs which are offered to the public at no cost, events such as the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival; receipt of CIRCA, the journal of local arts; the annual Springfest celebration; Great Sounds Downtown; a Traditional Music and Dance Night; the Youth Art Competition; the Youth Creative Writing Forum; artists-in-schools program and the Pitt County Arts Directory.

Powell is city executive for Branch Banking and Trust Co. He has a history of active involvement in community, educational and professional groups. He has served as past chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the Pitt County United Fund and has worked with the Pitt County Development Commission, BB&T Center of Management Development at East Carolina University, the Salvation Army and East Carolina University Alumni Association.

Powell has recruited a team of division captains who will work with numerous other Arts Fund volunteers. Contributors supporting the 1983 Arts Fund will received the award-winning journal CIRCA and will be recognized publicly. Those contributing $1,000 or more will receive a limited edition of a print by Michael Elhbeck and will also be honored at the annual dinner on Thursday. All gifts to the fund are tax deductible. For membership information contact the council at 757-1785.

Rose Art Students Busy

Rose High students were busy during the month of April exhibiting examples of their work in various competitions and at diverse localities locally, in-state and out of state.

In the Southern Flu-Cured Tobacco Festival Art Competition, Rose students won first, second and third place ribbons. In this event they competed against art students from North Carolina and six other states.

The work of one student, Carolina Perea's mixed media piece titled "Cowless Cowtown," was selected by the city school superintendent to hang in the state Capitol building. Three other Rose students had pieces exhibited in New York in the Scholastic Arts Awards competition.

Additionally, three students from Rose won prizes for entries in the Doodle Art Contest, in which more than 400 students entered scribblings and sketches as part of the Rose Art Club's activities.

New Officers Are Elected

New officers have been elected for both the Greenville Art Society and the Greenville Museum of Art Guild.

At the recent annual meeting of the society hosted by Mr. and Mrs. James Cheatham, two new officers and four new board members were elected. These are: president, John Howard, and vice president, Yvonne Deyton.

The new directors are: Peg Hardee, Betty Tanzer, David Womack and Micheal Voors.

Two other directors were named to replace board members Grover Maxwell, Jr. and James Ficklin, who have resigned. The two replacements are James Black and Barbara Tucker.

The effective date of office for new officers and board members is July 1.

Officers elected for the Greenville Museum of Art Guild are: president, Eleanor Ruffin; vice president, Jill Camnitz; and secretary-treasurer, Mary Taylor Mosier.

CHILDREN'S TV

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Production of a children's television project has begun with the taping of programs in a new "Plaza Sesamo" series that will be aired later this year in 18 Central and South American countries.

The 130 half-hour-show series is a direct descendent of the earlier "Plaza Sesamo" progams seen in the early 1970s.

Like "Sesame Street," its American namesake, the series is aimed at young children and attempts to teach as well as entertain.

The adult male Savanna baboon has a thick mane like a lion to protect him from the sharp teeth of other males of the species. Females do not have manes and are much smaller than the males. The males may weigh as much as 50 pounds when fully grown.

TO PERFORM AT CAROWINDS — Kevin Rowland and Dexys Midnight Runners will be in concert from 5 to 11 p.m. Saturday at Carowinds in Charlotte. "Come On Eileen," the Runners' hit single, has recently been the top song on Billboard's pop charts. Tickets, good for the concert and admission to the park, are $10.95 in advance and $11.95 on the day of the concert.

N.C. Performing Groups Are Selected

RALEIGH — Thirteen performing arts groups and seven solo artists have been selected to tour statewide as part of the North Carolina Arts Council's Touring Program. Each will be available in 1983-84 for community performances on residencies sponsored by local groups with funding assistance from the council.

Announcement of the selections was made by Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

Chosen to take part in the program in various categories of entertainment are:

•Dance — The Easy Moving Company, Raleigh; the Green Grass Cloggers, Hendersonville; the Frank Holder Dance Company, Greensboro; the N.C. Dance Theater, Winston-Salem; and Marcia Pleven Productions, Winston-Salem.

• Folk music — David Holt, Asheville; Phil and Gaye Johnson, Tryon, and Paula Larke, Winston-Salem.

•Jazz — Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy, Asheville, and Loonis McGlohon Trio, Charlotte.

•Theater — The Curtain Call Company, Wilmington; the N.C. Shakespeare Festival, High Point, and Touch, The Mime Trio, Chapel Hill.

Artists selected for the program were evaluated on artistic excellence, strength of management, touring history and other criteria relating to professional achievement.

Community organizations interested in arranging performances and residencies by any of these artists will be able to make booking arrangements until June 1. For information, contact the N.C. Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N.C., 27611, or by telephone 733-21'..

Summer Theater Tickets On Sale

Are you old enough to remember when "Tea for Two" was a brand new song by Vincent Youmans for a big Broadway show, "No, No, Nanette" back in 1925? Or are you in the majority of those more familiar with something more recent — like "Send in the Clowns" from "A Little Night Music?"

Whatever the age group you may fall in, the four musicals coming to Greenville for the 1983 season of the East Carolina Summer Theater should have something to appeal to your own preference in musical entertainment.

During the month of July, four musicals will be on stage at Messick Theater Arts in the renovated theater which opened last year.

"Pippin" opens the season with a run from July 4 through July 9, to be followed by "A Little Night Music" July 11-26. On July 18, "No, No, Nanette," a 58-year-old hit recently revived, will be playing through July 23, and the season will conclude with a July 25-30 presentation of "They're Playing Our Song."

All seats are reserved, with both single and season tickets for Monday nights already sold out. Single and season tickets for Tuesday through Saturday night performances are still available — at $10 for a single seat and $34 for a season ticket for all four shows.

Tickets can be purchased by calling the box office at 757-6390, or by mail. Persons ordering by mail may send a check or money order made payable to East Carolina Summer Theater for the desired ticket or tickets to: General Manager, East Carolina Summer Theater, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834. Mail orders are to include 25 cents for return postage handling.

To Mark Museum Week

WILMINGTON — To mark National Museum Week being observed May 15-21, museums and other institutions in the Lower Cape Fear area of North Carolina will celebrate Wednesday as Museum Day at Independence Mall in Wilmington from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

The site of the celebration will be in a location at Independence Mall near Belk-Berry Department store. Participanting agencies will exhibit a sampling of their numerous and varied programs. Staff members will be on hand to give information on the services they provide.

The eight museums and institutions to have staff members on hand are:

•The New Hanover County Museum.
•Brunswick Town State Historic Site.
•Fort Fisher State Historic Site.
•Poplar Grove Plantation.
•Museum of Living History, Cape Fear Technical Institute.
•North Carolina Marine Resources Center.
•St. John's Museum of Art.
•The USS Battleship North Carolina.

"Dixie," a rallying song for the Confederacy during the Civil War, was written by a Northerner, Dan Emmett of Ohio.

Simon & Simon Steams Ahead After Slow Start

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — By all rights, the CBS series "Simon & Simon" shouldn't even be on the air, let alone be a hit.

"Simon & Simon," like the movie "Rocky," got off the canvas and came back a winner.

In the 1981-82 season, its first year on the air, it plummeted to the bottom of the ratings. All that remained was writing its obituary. Then someone at CBS put it on the schedule behind "Magnum, P.I." It reversed directions and shot to the top of the chart.

Philip DeGuere, the creator-producer, smiles and says, "It certainly has had an unusual history." DeGuere, with long dark hair, a drooping moustache and tinted glasses, adds, "My primary opinion is that it's a good show, a show that people will like. So its success is not all that surprising to me."

The decision by CBS to try to salvage the sebies is an example of what is happening at all three networks. The networks are sticking with shows that in the past would have been given the gate because of marginal ratings. Mostly, it's an economic decision. The networks can no longer afford to throw away the huge investment made in a series. And experience has shown the new shows rarely do any better.

Sometimes, as in the case of NBC's "Hill Street Blues" and "Simon & Simon," it pays off.

"Simon & Simon" stars Jameson Parker and Gerald McRaney as two detective-brothers who are at opposite extremes yet have a sort of mystical Corsican brothers relationship. Parker is a conformer who looks like an up-and-coming Wall Street stockbroker. McRaney is the outlaw-as-hero.

The series was set on a mythical island in the Florida Keys. But the logistics — for instance, U.S. 1 is the only highway in the Keys — and the high costs forced them to shoot on the mainland in Florida. The problems of running a production a long distance away from Los Angeles also became a factor.

CBS was looking for a "blue sky adventure," but it settled on Hawaii-based "Magnum, P.I.," and "Pirates Key" was dropped.

The show, as it turned out, was not dead. It became "Simon & Simon" and the locale was moved to San Diego.

Despite all these setbacks, why did the show succeed?

"I think it's a mix of four or five very interesting elements," says DeGuere. "There's the chemistry between the two leading characters, and there's the relationship we writers maintain toward them. I think when we made them brothers we tapped into a kind of relationship that's never been done on television before.

"I feel the series is unique because of the kinds of stories we do and the way we tell them. It's one of the few series where the audience doesn't know what it's going to get. Some episodes are funny, some serious, some melodramatic. We have no formulas. The writers write their own kind of show."

DeGuere also is working on two projected series. One, "Whiz Kids," for CBS is about kids who solve crimes with their computers. The other, "Nightingale," for NBC, is an adventure with a woman lead.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Guests on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" today will come from Mount Olive, Bath and Williamston. The program is broadcast each Sunday over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington, from noon until 12:30 p.m.

Dr. Burkette Raper, president of Mount Olive College, will discuss the college's expansion to a four-year curriculum. Kay's second guest, Fran Critchfield, chairman of the Regiment of Foot, will give details on a historical re-enactment of revolutionary events in Bath, which will take play Saturday and Sunday.

Today's last guest is Lucia Peel of Williamston, organizer of Northstate Heritage Tours, who will given information on upcoming trips to various historic sites in eastern North Carolina.

BRONZE RELIEF

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Italian Baroque bronze relief "Triumph of Neptune and Europa" by the Florentine sculptor Antonio Montauti was recently acquired by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The museum says the work is "considered the finest Italian Baroque bronze relief in this country."

•Thursday — 6:40 a.m., Gerald Goodwin, the singing salesman, is the guest; 7:15 a.m., Dr. Barbara Vosh, coordinator of children's service, part of May as Mental Health month; 7:40 a.m., a home extension agent will be the guest.

• Friday — 6:40 a.m., Millie McGrath and Helen Parks give details on micro-computers; 7:15 a.m., Howard Dawkins, winner of a national Distinguished Service Award is the guest; 7:25 a.m., Cathy Jessen talks about the Epilepsy Association; 7:40 a.m., plant doctor Eddie Harrington.

BIG SING-OUT — Singer Irma Thomas asks the audience to join in a May 8 outdoor New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival. An estimated 220,000 attended the two-weekend affair in this Mississippi River city. (AP Laserphoto)

WOOW Classics

This year marks the 150th anniversary of the birth of Johannes Brahms, born in 1833, and Karen Hause, along with other music celebrants worldwide, is honoring the 19th century giant. She will air one of Brahms' major works on her WOOW Classics program today. The program will be heard over WOOW Radio, 1340 on the radio dial and may also be heard on channel 9, local cable television.

Selections chosen by Mrs. Hause for today's program are:

•"Concerto in D minor for Two Violins" by J.S. Bach, violinists Itzak Pearlman and Isaac Stern with the New York Philharmonic conducted by Zubin Mehta.

•The Brahms "German Requiem," with soloists Teresa Stich-Randall, soprano, James Pease, baritone and the orchestra and chorus of the Hamburg Symphony, Carl Bamburger, conducting.

•Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 4 (The Italian)," the Royal Philharmonia with Hans Vonk conducting.

•"Suite in A minor for Flute and Strings" by Teleman, James Galway, flutist with the I Solisti de Zagreb.

•The "Enigma Variations" by Elgar, Sir Adrian Boult conducting the London Symphony.

•Consort music from the English Renaissance performed by the Extempore String Ensemble.

BANCROFT PRIZES

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of witchcraft in early New England and a biography of labor leader Eugene V. Debs recently won the Bancroft Prizes at Columbia University.

The 1983 awards went to John P. Demos for "Entertaining Satan: Witchcraft and the Culture of Early New England" (Oxford University Press), and to Nick Salvatore for "Eugene V. Debs: Citizen and Socialist (University of Illinois Press).

Each winner received a prize of $4,000.

ENTRIES DATED

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Merriam-Webster Inc. says it will publish in June "the first American dictionary to date main entries, showing when words entered the English language."

Entries in "Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary" show a date when the first sense of the word entered written English. "Vaporize," for instance, dates to 1634, while "typewriter" goes back to 1868, and "waistband" to 1584.

Initiated Into Society

Thirteen students and one faculty member of the school of music, East Carolina University, were initiated into the Pi Kappa Lambda society in ceremonies held recently at Mendenhall Student Center. The society is considered the most prestigious of honor societies in music and recognizes both men and women in all fields of music.

Dr. Rosalie Ann Haritun, president of the Beta Zeta Chapter of Pi Kappa Lambda, presided over the ceremony and banquet.

Students initiated and their home towns are:

•Seniors — Richard Crane and Donald Stewart, both of Woodbridge, Va.; Elaine Godwin, Benson; Brenda Phelps, Rieglewood; and Michael Rogers, Camden, S.C.

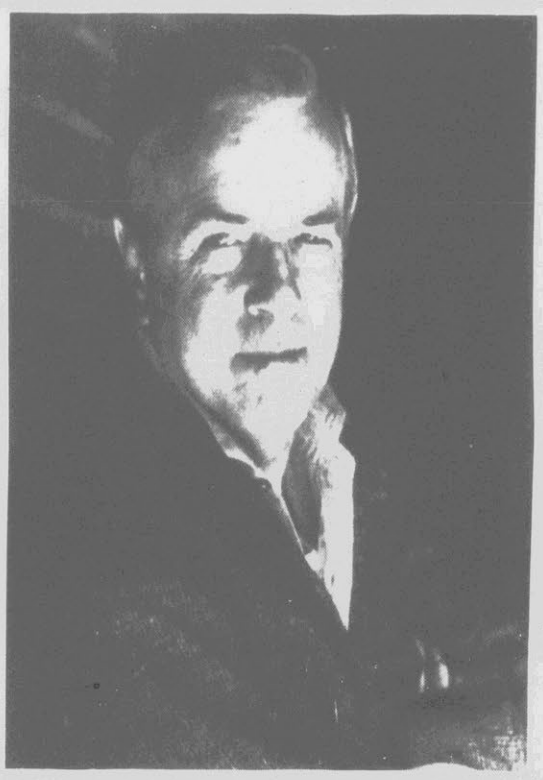

• Graduate students — Kay Belangia, Winterville; William Freeman, Heuvelton, N.Y.; and Melodie Jones, Greenville.

Dr. Robert Stine, a faculty member from Gastonia, was the single faculty member initiated this year.

Elly Ameling, a noted soprano from The Netherlands, was earlier this year initiated as an honorary member.

Each year, the society awards certificates of honor to outstanding students in the lower level classes who have distinguished themselves musically and scholastically. Two sophomores were awarded these certificates this year — Daphane Dunston and Laura Sabados.

Dr. Walter Pories, chairman of surgery at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was the guest speaker. Entertainment was provided by the Sweet Adelines, directed by Carolyn Green Ipock, a graduate of the ECU School of Music and a member of Pi Kappa Lambda.

TAKING A GAMBLE — Franco Zeffirlli, the Florence, Italy-born director, designer, writer and creative force called by some as a gambler of the arts, is offering audiences another work of art, a film version of the 150-year old Verdi opera, "La Traviata." (AP Laserphoto by Wally Fong)

HOLBEIN SHOW

NEW YORK (AP) — "Holbein and the Court of Henry VIII," an exhibition of 70 drawings and one painted miniature by Hans Holbein the Younger, is on view at the Pierpont Morgan Library through July 30.

The drawings from the Royal Library at Windsor Castle are being shown for the first time in the United States.

Georges Carpentier, the "Orchid Man" of France, fought in every boxing division, from the flyweight ranks to the heavyweight.

High Ratings Awarded

At the annual Solo and Ensemble Contest held May 7 at the school of music, East Carolina University, 14 band students from the Greenville schools received high ratings.

The students, their instruments, ratings, and schools they represent are:

•South Greenville — Tristin Jones, clarinet, superior; Meg Evans, clarinet, superior.

•Wahl-Coates School — Cindy Ross, alto saxophone, superior.

•Greenville Middle School — Ann Thornton, flute, superior; Robbie Barnes, alto saxophone, superior.

•E.B. Aycock School — David Kim, clarinet, excellent; Valerie Poust, flute, superior; Christy Garrison, flute, superior; David Kim, clarinet duet with Gavin Sunwald of A.G. Cox School, excellent.

'Dance A Little Closer' Is 13th For Lerner

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirteen generally is considered an unlucky number. But not for Alan Jay Lerner, whose "Dance a Little Closer" has come to town. It's his 13th Broadway musical.

"When 'Brigadoon' opened quite a while ago, some time before the Crimean war, I was told our opening night was March 13," recalls the 64-year-old lyricist-librettist.

"They asked, was I superstitious? I said no.

"I went home and suddenly realized there were 13 people in the cast, 13 songs, 13 sets and I had 13 letters in my name. The show opened and got unanimous good press. And from that day on 13 became my lucky number."

The year was 1947, the "Brigadoon" composer Frederick Loewe, with whom the short, dapper, Harvard-educated tunesmith went on to write "Paint Your Wagon," "Camelot" and that fairest of megahits, "My Fair Lady."

Lerner, whose last visit to Broadway was in 1979 with "Carmelina," which died fast despite a lush, romantic Burton Lane score, has written the book and lyrics for "Dance." He's also directing it.

His collaborator on this go is "Annie" composer Charles Strouse, and the leading lady is Lerner's wife, Liz Robertson, whom the oft-wed lyricist married in 1981 after her triumph in a London revival of "My Fair Lady."

"Dance," scheduled to premiere Wednesday, May 11, is based on Robert Sherwood's Pulitzer-winning 1936 comedy, "Idiot's Delight," which was set in a Swiss hotel on the eve of World War II.

"We've updated it to a day in the avoidable future," Lerner says, adding the plot now has a singer traveling with three female backup vocalists in Europe with the prospect of a major war still looming.

"It's kind of a 'Casablanca' love story. I tried to adhere to what Sherwood said when he wrote it — he tried to write a serious play and wound up writing an entertainment."

Lerner, born in New York, has two Tony awards, one for "My Fair Lady," the other for "Gigi," the Gallic delight that played Broadway in 1973 after first appearing in 1958 as a movie musical.

And, from Hollywood, three Oscars, one for the screenplay of "An American in Paris" and two for the screenplay and lyrics of "Gigi."

But he considers himself a theater man, first and foremost, having worked on Broadway for 40 years come November.

As with every other top name on Broadway, Lerner's had his share of downs as well as ups, the most recent downs being "Carmelina" and the 1976 Leonard Bernstein musical, "1600 Pennsylvania Avenue," dead after seven performances.

But he says he'll always keep trying. "There was a period after 'Paint Your Wagon' in '52 when people said I couldn't write any more. One critic said I should stop, I can't write musicals at all. And I went four years before I wrote a play.

"And then I did 'My Fair Lady.'"

Jimmy Celebrating 75th Birthday

By JOHN O'BRIEN

INDIANA, Pa. (UPI) — Jimmy Stewart's hometown will culminate its love affair with its most renowned native son with two days of festivities marking the superstar's 75th birthday on May 20.

Part of the May 20-21 hoopla, which includes a parade featuring the Academy Award-winning actor and his wife, Gloria, will be the unveiling of a 9-foot, bronze-colored fiberglass statue of Stewart outside the Indiana County courthouse.

There will be a film festival, square dance, antique car show, Boy Scout camporee, dinner dance and "re-enactment of the French and Indian War."

On Indiana's orderly main drag, Philadelphia Street — Stewart's Oscar coincidentally came for his 1940 performance in "The Philadelphia Story" — you see his face on a movie ptoster for "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" in a newsstand window.

A "Jimmy Stewart Devonshire" sandwich is featured at the nearby Classroom restaurant, appropriately named because 12,500 students attend Indiana University of Pennsylvania in the town, which has 16,000 other residents.

Two stone memorials mark his birthplace. The local Jimmy Stewart Airfield was named for the retired Air Force Reserve brigadier general.

The actor himself gave a typically Stewart reply when asked what made him one of filmdom's most popular and enduring figures.

"You'd have to ask somebody else," he said by phone from his Los Angeles office. "I haven't come up with any ironclad decision about that.

"That's one of the things that's always been one of the excitements about the picture business. Along with the glamour, there is sort of a mystery about the whole idea of picture making. And in this way it's an advantage: It keeps you looking to do something better."

Stewart said he was "flattered and grateful" for the coming events.

Linda Moore, who heads the Jimmy Stewart Statue Committee that is forking out more than $30,000 for the statue and related costs, said the idea came from her dad, Frank, a longtime political power in Indiana.

The money is being raised via donations and sale of commemorative medallions and booklets. One 18-inch replica of the statue by California sculptor Malcolm Alexander was sold for $4,875.

Miss Moore said the committee hopes to raise another $80,000 to cap the statue in bronze before it disbands. Stewart will get his first look at the statue May 1 in Santa Barbara, Calif., at a reception with more than 100 friends, including Miss Moore, her parents and committee secretary Nancy Otto.

Miss Moore explained she was watching the televised Rose Bowl Parade on Jan. 1, 1982, and Stewart, the grand marshal, mentioned Indiana.

"My father said, 'You know, there is nothing significant in downtown Indiana on display that people can know that this is the birthplace of Jimmy Stewart.' And he said, 'Linda, for your 1982 resolution why don't you do something to change that?'" she said.

Miss Moore, 29, the county's auditor, said the idea for a statue and 75th birthday celebration quickly caught on. Stewart enthusiastically agreed to attend and the 10 committee leaders have met once a week to iron out the details.

For 20 Years Community Colleges Have Been Serving Tomorrow's Needs Today

North Carolina's community college system will celebrate its 20th anniversary May 17 and Pitt Community College is joining the celebration.

On May 17, 1963, the North Carolina General Assembly created a system of two-year, post-high school education institutions offering vocational, technical, college-parallel and adult basic education.

Two years before, in March 1961, Pitt Community College College was chartered and designated by the North Carolina State Board of Education as an industrial education center. In 1964, the name of the school was changed to Pitt Technical Institute and in 1979 to Pitt Community College.

In 1963, 52,000 students were enrolled at the 24 community colleges across the state. Today, 600,000 adults attend classes at 58 campuses.

At PCC in 1964, nine curricula were offered to a total of 96 students. Today, 26 technical programs, 14 vocational programs, three certificate programs and three college transfer programs are available.

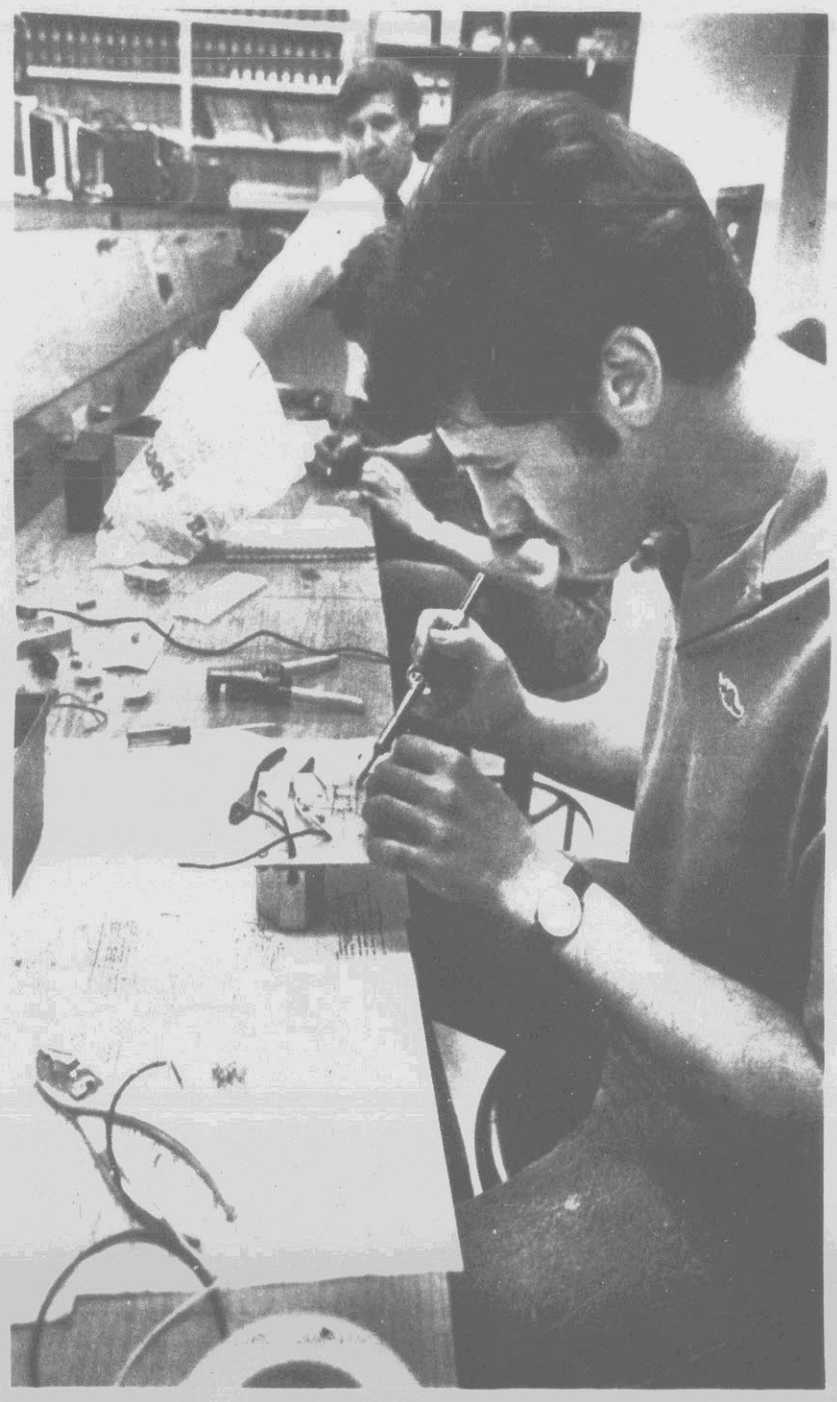

Welding Tomorrow In Place

Roy Lanier, head of the welding department at Pitt Community College, puts the finishing touches on a job as students watch. North Carolina's community colleges, PCC included, began as technical institutes and still stress technical training.

ELECTRICAL INSTRUCTION ... Greg White, (left) a student in PCC's electrical installation program, works on a hydraulic system with instructor Jarvis Tripp (right). The program has grown, say PCC officials, through the years to include electrical maintenance and industrial skills.

CONQUERING THE HOWS AND WHYS OF CIRCUITS ... Mike Lewis and Steve Tyburski work on a circuit in PCC's electronics lab as Jim Hoover, head of the department, looks on.

Text and Photos By Mary Schulken

ELECTRONIC DATA PROCESSING EXPANDS ... Because of large demand by the public, PCC is expanding its computer course offerings this summer to include labs geared to novice computer users. Up until now, said department chairman Millie McGrath, (extreme right) courses, because of need, have been designed primarily for professionals who choose data processing as a career.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 5-14

XWZWVQUG XQK CDV ZQOG: VHKAHA VD CHKHUQZWOH.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE NICE CIRCUS ACROBAT FLIPS FOR THE PLEASANT ROUSTABOUT.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Z equals L.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

I have often written about Meg's libertarian streak in this column. She simply does not feel that any adult has the right to interfere with her freedom. Of course, this attitude was bad enough when she was 2 and 3 and abolutely irrational about what she wanted. But now that she's older and supposedly more reasonable, her attitude is infinitely worse.

"Why should I clean my room?" she will ask me. "I don't care how it looks."

"That's painfully obvious. But I do care about how it looks."

"But it's my space," she argues.

"And it's my house."

"It's our house, or at least that's what you keep telling me. And besides, if it is your house, then why should I feel responsible for keeping it clean?"

If she were being deliberately disrespectful, I could punish her and let the matter rest. But she's merely trying to understand the logic behind my requests. Naturally, she has concluded that there is none.

And if she's having trouble understanding my logic, I'm finding that coping with her logic is absolutely impossible. "If people like me they'll forgive me," she says in defense of her table manners. "And if they don't like me, they'll find something else to criticize."

That observation applies to parents even when they do like her. "I try to improve one thing," she complains, "and you find something else to bug me about. You don't even like the way I wear my clothes."

She's right. Then again, I find it discouraging to send her to school dressed like a Madame Alexander doll only to have her return looking like Mickey Rooney in a Saturday afternoon TV matinee. Half her buttons are undone, her knees are invariably grass-stained, her shirt tail is always out, and if she's wearing jeans, her navel is usually showing.

"For goodness sake, Mother," she says when I lament her appearance. "I have to live in them, don't I?"

It goes without saying that her play clothes are in a worse state of disrepair than her so-called school clothes. So on those rare occasions when Phillip and I are courageous enough to venture out in public with the children, we insist that Meg wear one of her few dresses which have escaped the general condition of the rest of her wardrobe.

"I hate wearing dresses to restaurants," she told me the last time we went out. "My legs stick to the seats."

As usual, I tried to reason with her. "Sometimes it's necessary to do what we don't like. I'd rather wear pants, too, but you see that I'm wearing a dress tonight."

"Yes," she sighed. "But the difference is that you're in control, and I'm not."

If she only knew.

Fans Augment Energy Saving

NEW YORK (AP) — America's concern for energy conservation has brought attention to two new words in the industrial lexicon — stratification and destratification, according to Energy User News.

Stratification, explains the publication, is the normal tendency for warm air to rise to the ceiling where it is trapped and the heat lost through the roof. When this happens, the thermostats register colder ground temperatures and turn on additional heating to make up for the lost heat.

Destratification is accomplished by using long-bladed rotating fans that allow users to bring the ceiling-level warm air down to the ground where it is mixed with cooler air to provide more even temperatures.

Dear Abby

Poky Widows Aren't Up to Man's Speed

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The lonely widow — is she a myth?

The older women I know seem to think sex is messy, disagreeable and very tiring. Their indoor sports consist of cards, bingo and bragging about their grandchildren.

Outdoor sports? They have none. I have yet to see one walk 20 steps from her automobile.

Twenty years ago, as a happily married employee of a large retirement facility, I used to feel sorry for the many "brokenhearted widows." Now I'm beginning to wonder if perhaps they don't prefer it that way. As a 70-year-old widower, I have made several "moves," only to find myself facing a wall of indifference. Here is a sample of the responses I've had when I've called to invite a lady out:

1. "Sorry. I'm leaving for St. Paul to see my grandchildren and won't be back for a while."

2. "I have to work in the church kitchen all afternoon, and by evening I'll be exhausted."

3. "I can't go to the dance with you — I broke my leg yesterday." (I never did check that one out.)

I would enjoy going to a good restaurant, sitting across the table from a pleasant, good-humored lady and discussing all manner of things.

I would like friendly company at a lively square dance, for a bicycle ride or for a walk in the park.

Am I expecting too much? Or is it me?

LONESOME IN A SMALL TOWN

DEAR LONESOME: The first thing you mentioned was how these ladies feel about sex, which leads me to believe that for openers you come on too strong in that department. Think about it. That could be your problem.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago I read in your column that there were tours for non-smokers.

At the time my husband and I were not interested because we smoked. Since then, he has quit (doctor's orders) and so did I, so he wouldn't be tempted to start smoking again.

Now we're interested in taking a tour this summer with other non-smokers. Where do we write for information?

LOUISVILLE FANS

DEAR FANS: Write to: Non-Smokers' Travel Club, 8928 Broadmore, Bethesda, Md. 20034.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am a 39-year-old woman, and my mother is a very youthful-looking 61. When I introduce my mother, people invariably say, "You look just like sisters!"

I find this statement very uncomplimentary (to me), since my mother is 22 years older than I.

How should I handle this situation?

"YOUNGER SISTER"

DEAR "SISTER": Look "proud" (even if it kills you) because you should be proud of a 61-year-old mother who looks that great.

If it's a compliment you want, you must have been a very good daughter, or your mother would probably have looked her age.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ON THE FENCE IN WAUKEGAN": A woman who marries a widower who says, "Remember — my children come first," should expect the worst. And she's rarely disappointed.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old school teacher, living and working 1,500 miles from my hometown.

Last year I fell in love with a wonderful man, and we plan to marry this summer. My parents know of our plans, but they have never met him. (They have spoken on the phone.) He is 33, also in education, and, Abby, he's the kindest, sweetest, most wonderful man I've ever known!

I have put off introducing him to my parents because I know they would never accept him. You see, he is half-Indian and half-black. He's also a Southern Baptist. He looks like a cross between Wayne Newton and Sidney Poitier.

Should I wait until after we are married, then bring him to meet them? Or should I write and tell them so they won't be too shocked? I've been agonizing over this for the last three months. How should this be resolved?

WHITE AND CATHOLIC

DEAR WHITE: I suggest that you write and tell your parents that your fiance is half-Indian and half-black. Also, that he's a Southern Baptist. (Send a picture along.) But more important, tell them that he's the kindest, sweetest, most wonderful man you've ever met and you love each other.

Renews' Cheers Series

By Peter Meade

When Ted Danson was chosen to star as the ex-baseball pitcher and alcoholic turned barkeeper on NBC's "Cheers," his selection seemed more than slightly illogical.

His roles in the heavy-duty movies "The Onion Field" and "Body Heat" hardly featured a comedic talent, plus Danson admits he rarely drinks and is a terrible baseball player.

Although he may not have a major league arm, Danson has proven this year on "Cheers" that he has an all-star comedy delivery. He is the most valuable player on this season's top comedy, playing Sam Malone, the owner of "Cheers," the bar where "everybody knows your name."

Danson realizes everybody seems to know his name now. The first-year series has required more time than expected to gain a steady audience, and still hasn't found its way to the top echelon ratings-wise, but NBC recently announced the half-hour has been renewed for a full order of 22 episodes for next season.

"None of us were surprised," says Danson of the renewal. "NBC has been committed all along. They could have renewed us for six or 13 (shows), but they chose 22."

Danson thinks that winning the recent People's Choice award as the favorite new comedy has helped the show's popularity.

"We've always done well in the big cities," he explains. "But we've had trouble in the midwest. Familiarity has a lot to do with viewing habits and when we won the People's Choice it said, 'it's OK to watch the show.' It's fun to be involved in a word-of-mouth show."

Danson had no doubts he would succeed in the comedy series. He felt the role of Sam was his right from the start, although he later learned "they had interviewed everybody and their uncle." The main ingredient in the series, the relationship between bar owner Sam and his educated cocktail waitress, Diane (Shelley Long), seems to spark most of the show's witty dialogue. The pair originally auditioned together and the chemistry was excellent then and it continued all season long.

Ted Danson and Shelley Long star in NBC's Thursday night comedy "Cheers."

Rod Stewert Moves To Clean Image

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — He's putting the finishing touches to a new album, he's about to embark on a six month road tour, and rock superstar Rod Stewart is busily cleaning up his image.

It's not his act — onstage or off — that needs spit and polish, insists Rod — it's the public's perception of him, fueled by countless printed exposes portraying him as everything from a pervert to a loud-mouthed drunk.

But now, Rod Stewart is a happily-married man and a doting dad. He's 38, and he figures it's time to set the record straight.

He told me: "There was a time in my life when I really did believe that I was God's gift to women. I believed my own publicity, and there was an annoying arrogance about me, which I know for sure has gone now.

"My wife and kids are the most important things in my life now, and I am not having them exposed to the sort of things that people have been saying about me in print for years.

"There's always an element of truth in the stories, but the rest of it is always lies made up by someone who wants to make a bit of fast money."

Stewart has already filed suit against one mass-circulation daily in his native Britain, and he is now surrounded by tough-talking lawyers hired to zap lies with rolled-up briefs.

Said Rod: "Once, I didn't care: I'd read the stuff and laugh.

"Now, I've grown up, and it's not just me who is hurt."

SUNDAY

Celeste Holm guest stars on the Sunday, May 15 rebroadcast of CBS' "Trapper John, M.D." She portrays the opinionated ex-mother-in-law of the title character, played by Pernell Roberts.

Rx For Fear

Ed Begley Jr., who co-stars as Dr. Ehrlich in "St. Elsewhere," believes that the realistic depiction of the tremendous burdens faced by those in the medical profession will have a positive effect for them.

"I think in the long run it'll be helpful," said Begley. "We show doctors trying to do a real job. We combat the public's fear of the unknown. Despite their problems, 'St. Elsewhere' shows that doctors have a high batting average."

Carson In Movie

"Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson will appear in the film "The Eileen Ford Story." Carson will play the husband of model and cover girl Eileen Ford. Lauren Hutton will play the title role.

It's Carson's first feature film.

Jack Paar Guests

Jack Paar will make only his second appearance on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," since exiting NBC-TV's late-night show as host in 1962, when he appears with Carson Tuesday, May 17.

Paar's other appearance with Carson was on May 13, 1968, when the program was originating from New York.

Paar was host of the show from July 29, 1957, until March 30, 1962. From April 2, 1962, until September 28, 1962, various guest hosts took over the program. Carson became host October 1, 1962.

'Patton' Sequel

George C. Scott has agreed to star in a sequel to his Oscar-winning "Patton" movie. Filming will begin in Hungary as soon as he completes his role in "China Rose" with Ali MacGraw.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: Can you please settle an argument? I think that Ashley Abbott on "The Young and the Restless" and Trey Clegg on "Capitol" are married in real life, but my mother says they're not. Who's right? MISSY UMBERGER, HICKORY, N.C.

TO MISSY IN HICKORY: Your mama's right! Eileen Davidson (Ashley) and Nicholas Walker (Trey) are not married.

DEAR MICHELE: Could I please have some information on Dorothy Lyman, who plays Opal Gardner on "All My Children"? Is she married, and where do I write to her? PRISCILLA CARSON, RAEFORD, N.C.

TO PRISCILLA IN RAEFORD: Dorothy is a veteran of five daytime television shows — "Edge of Night," "A World Apart," "Search for Tomorrow," "Another World," and currently "All My Children." For her role of Opal Gardner in "AMC," Dorothy won the 1981 Emmy Award as Best Supporting Actress. Currently she is juggling two roles, her daytime role of Opal and in primetime she portrays Naomi in NBC's comedy series "Mama's Family." The Minneapolis, Minnesota, native attended Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, New York. Dorothy added to her theater skills when she directed the off-Broadway show "A Coupla White Chicks Sitting Around Talking," in 1980, and later, "Frugal Repast," at the Actors and Directors Theater. Dorothy is single, resides in New York, and is a member of the New York Theater Studio's board of directors. Write to Ms. Lyman in c o "Mama's Family," NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y., N.Y., 10020.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you give me some information on Heather Locklear? Where is she from? I heard she was from Pembroke, North Carolina. ROGER BAILEY, LUMBERTON, N.C.

TO ROGER IN LUMBERTON: Heather Locklear is the embodiment of the "California Girl." Slender, blonde and tanned, Heather is a native of Los Angeles, born September 25, who is as at home surfing at the beach or pursuing a racquet ball on court. Heather enrolled at UCLA, where her father is currently director of admissions, with an eye to majoring in psychology. Her college friends encouraged her to take a course in commercial acting. Her first commercial was for a hair rinse. With some commercial experience under her belt, Heather began to get offers from episodic television. She made her series debut as Sammy Jo Dean on "Dynasty," then landed the role of Stacy Sheridan on "T.J. Hooker." Heather admits to being undisciplined about exercise and nutrition. "I'd eat M&Ms for breakfast," she admits. She keeps in shape with sports and dancing, plays racquetball twice a week and once a week rides her bike from her home in West Los Angeles to the beach and back. She also loves to play softball with her younger sister's team on weekends. Fans should address correspondence to Heather Locklear in c o "T.J. Hooker," ABC-TV, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Ca., 90067.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

'Sons and Lovers'

Leonie Mellinger

Leonie Mellinger portrays a beautiful woman whose adolescent love for a sensitive son of a poor British mining family is pitted against his rare devotion to his mother in "Sons and Lovers." The seven-part dramatization of D.H. Lawrence's autobiographical novel, to premiere on "Mobil Masterpiece Theatre," Sunday, May 15 on PBS. (Air dates may vary; please check local listings.)

"Sons and Lovers" was published in 1913, some 15 years before the equally controversial "Lady Chatterley's Lover." The story is basically the author's real-life saga, of tensions within his family, the love-hate relationship of his parents, the intense mother-son situation and the traumatic effect this had on the son's dealings with other women.

Eileen Atkins portrays Gertrude Morel, the miner's wife who seeks from her sons what she did not realize from her husband (played by Tom Bell). Karl Johnson is Paul, Lawrence's fictional counterpart. Lynn Dearth plays Clara, who along with Miss Mellinger's character, Miriam, cannot break Paul's Oedipal-like tie to his mother.

"Sons and Lovers," filmed in Lawrence's own town of Nottinghamshire, England, is presented on PBS by WGBH, Boston.

Do TV's sci-fi writers really have it easy?

By Ruth Thompson

Science-fiction scripters may have the easiest slot on television today. They deal with the future, sending crews off on spaceships that haven't been invented yet to galaxies none of us has ventured toward. So how hard can you quibble?

What about the authenticity needs of other communicators? Well, blame or credit television. The world woes and wars come to us nightly from the scene. Right now it's all sides of Central America's traumas, on-the-spot interviews with guerillas, government spokesmen and the helpless civilians caught in the middle. We may not understand the issues, but the geography becomes clearer. Back when author James Hilton created his enchanted and enchanting "Shangri-La," a general knowledge of the Himalayan mountains from reading was all he needed to use them as backdrop for his mythical enclave. He had never traveled there. Setting the mood was enough. But now? Has sophisticated news coverage challenged other communicators to be accurate and specific? For instance, Dieter Plage spent months trailing rare Asian elephants for his last documentary and plans to spend two years putting together his next, zeroing in on rare rhinos. Other wildlife filmmakers are similarly zealous about authenticity.

Fiction writers, too, get factual when dealing with places.

Location shooting, easier now with improved small cameras, got its first big television promotion when producer Sheldon Leonard took his tennis-playing secret agents (Bill Cosby and Robert Culp) all over the globe for the "I Spy" series. Gary Collins, now host of the "Hour Magazine" syndicated series took his wife and daughter with him when he did a season of "Born Free" for television.

Gary Collins

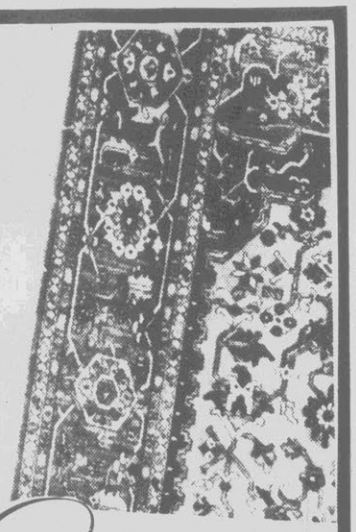

Now, for fiction, it's Ralph Waite, formerly the father of "The Waltons," who's not depending on guide books and studio back lot simulations for "The Mississipi" series he's been trying out this spring on CBS. No sir. He's been playing that big river for months getting the feel of what it's like to be on a tow-boat and capturing the varying flavors of cities and towns — the ones where the lawyer he plays comes out of retirement to tackle tough cases as they pop up. They seem to pop up everytime he takes shore leave. Unlike Collins, Ralph Waite's womenfolk — interior decorator wife and 12-year-old stepdaughter — haven't joined him in his adventuring except for flying in to meet him in New Orleans for an occasional weekend reunion.

The "ABC Friday Night Movie" for May 20 features "The Legend of the Lone Ranger." Klinton Spilsbury (l.) stars as the masked crusader with Michael Horse as his trusted companion, Tonto.

Texan Horsley finds a home in 'Houston'

By Peter Meade

He's wealthier than Magnum, dresses better than Columbo, has a prettier assistant than Mannix, a nicer car than Barnaby Jones, more money than Simon & Simon, but Lee Horsley's "Matt Houston" has just one problem — it's all these comparisons.

"I'm always being compared to somebody," says Horsley. "Tom Selleck's mustache, James Garner's voice... I feel like taking off my boots and saying compare these!"

Well, his feet are bigger than Remington Steele's. The copious comparisons didn't help when Horsley's Sunday evening series got off to a slow start in the ratings. "But at least if I've got to be compared," he adds, "it was to good people."

Lee Horsley

Compared to the early going, "Houston" has now climbed into ratings respectability, allowing ABC to win the time slot for the first time in seven years.

"I don't worry about the ratings," says Horsley. "I've got to keep punching out the product. The network says it usually takes nine shows to find an audience, it took us 14."

It certainly wasn't because Horsley hasn't worked hard. Being the star of his own hour-long series means 14-to-16-hour days, mostly on location. This also means that on most mornings he leaves home at 5 a.m.

"It's not all blondes and limousines," says Horsley, who became a father for the second time on St. Patrick's Day. "It always floors me when people ask what I do the rest of the week.

"I have fought so hard the first season," he says, "because it means so much. It's just that sometimes the ratings don't make any sense.

"I need to have input because the series has my name on it," says Horsley. "There are 60 guys in the crew and I'm their bread and butter. I've tried to interject what we now call 'Houston-isms.' Mostly they're memories of my boyhood in Mule Shoe, Texas."

But are there any big differences between Lee Horsley and Matt Houston?

"Matt's tailor is better than mine," says Horsley, laughing. "But these boots are mine. But I tell ya, running in these boots is a killer."

Not 'At Ease'

John Vargas, who stars as Cardinel, an enlisted man in the ABC "At Ease" comedy series, assumes a different kind of military title in a production of "Richard III" opening June 2 at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles. In addition to performing three roles in the play which stars fellow Carnegie Tech alumnus Rene Auberjonois, Vargas is assistant stage combat choreographer.

Sunny's Halo In Preakness

By Mark Nolan

The second jewel in horse racing's Triple Crown, the Preakness, will be televised live by CTV Sports on Saturday, May 21. CTV will transmit ABC's feed of the race from Pimlico in Baltimore, Md.

At least one Canadian horse is a definite candidate to be in the running for the '83 Preakness crown. Sunny's Halo won the Rebel Handicap and the Arkansas Derby in his two only starts this year and only a serious injury will keep Sunny's Halo out of contention for Saturday's race.

On April 16, the horse won the $293,000 Arkansas Derby in near record time. Before a crowd of almost 68,000 fans, the largest ever assembled for a sporting event in the state of Arkansas, the colt ran the 1-1 8 mile course in 1:49.25, just missing the track record by four-fifths of a second.

Two days prior to the Arkansas Derby, Sunny's Halo's trainer, David Cross, expressed some unhappiness with the No. 13 post position the horse had drawn for the race.

Merlin Olsen Is Host

By Debra Morgenstern Katz

"Most middle-aged husbands get to sleep at night by imagining they're striking out the entire batting order of the N.Y. Yankees."

That quote by James Thurber opens the program "Champions of American Sport," on HBO this week (May 19). It describes how strongly we believe in our heroes, how personally we clutch them to our lives.

Former football great Merlin Olsen hosts the show, which is created around the Smithsonian Institution's National Portrait Gallery's exhibition of America's greatest athletes.

Says Olsen, in a telephone interview: "One of the great releases from the drudgery, pain and frustration of ordinary existence is to take leave of our surroundings and launch into fantasy and dreams — very often in sports. We become the heroes."

If this documentary is any indication, we have a rich source of fantasy — from baseball to horse racing to basketball to figure skating to football to swimming. America's athletes have been "models of strength, of speed, of grace, courage and desire."

Many have overcome great odds: Babe Ruth, son of a saloonkeeper, in reform school at age 8; Bill Russell, cut from his high school basketball team; three-time gold medalist Wilma Rudolph, one of 19 children, rejected by her friends as a child.

They all pursued their dreams. If they had anything in common, says Olsen, it was an inner confidence that allowed them to meet all challenges.

"Even though they were told, 'Nobody's ever done this before,' they didn't believe it and they went out and did it," says Olsen.

Much of what it takes to be a champion is mundane, he says — the practice, the blisters, the bad shots.

"A lot of people have the talent to be great," he says, "but not a lot of people have the desire and opportunity to capitalize on it."

Those people did: Mark Spitz, with 23 world records for swimming and seven gold medals; Red Grange, who turned pro football into serious business; Arthur Ashe, the first black to win the U.S. Open.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Dynasty's Blake Carrington will be looking for a new major domo next year. LEE BERGERE, who has been starring in the role as Joseph, has decided to leave the cast. "It's a mutual agreement," he says. "I have done everything I can do with the part — I will miss the camaraderie with the cast and it is the most money I have ever made in my career, but I have not been satisfied with myself. I've got to do some more 'significant' roles." Could this be a clue as to whom was the villain that set the fire in the season's finale?

ROBERT HORTON, millionaire Whit McColl on "As the World Turns," may be starting to take his role too much to heart. For his wife's recent birthday, Robert presented her with a gorgeous new mink coat — and a week later, for their 22nd wedding anniversary, he gave her a full-length Canadian lynx coat — and that's how the 'world turns' for some people.

CHARLEY PRIDE, who takes great pride in his 21-year-old son, Dion, will be showing him off on this week's CBS special "Country Comes Home." The two will perform together (for the first time on television) when they sing "Tennessee Girl" — this you will not want to miss.

From those who know about such things comes the rumor that PRINCE RANIER has given his blessings (if not the church's) to PRINCESS CAROLINE and ROBERTO ROSSELINI'S planned September wedding.

DEAN MARTIN has extended his London appearance at the Apollo Victoria Theatre from one week to ten days. Having never performed on a London stage before, he was amazed when the tickets were sold out within 48 hours. His biggest fans are the Oxford and Cambridge University students who are purchasing blocks of tickets and traveling quite a distance to come in for his show. Dean should have known "everybody loves somebody sometime."

LEE MAJORS is adding a wing onto his Malibu home that neighbor BURGESS MEREDITH finds esthetically objectionable — in fact it is so objectionable he is having a huge wall constructed between the two properties. Upon its completion, artist Dong Kingman has been commissioned by Mr. Meredith, to cover the wall with a mural. (A man's home is his castle — no disputing that.)

JAMES DARREN has been signed for a starring role on "T.J. Hooker." He will become a regular on the series next fall as Officer Jim Corrigan.

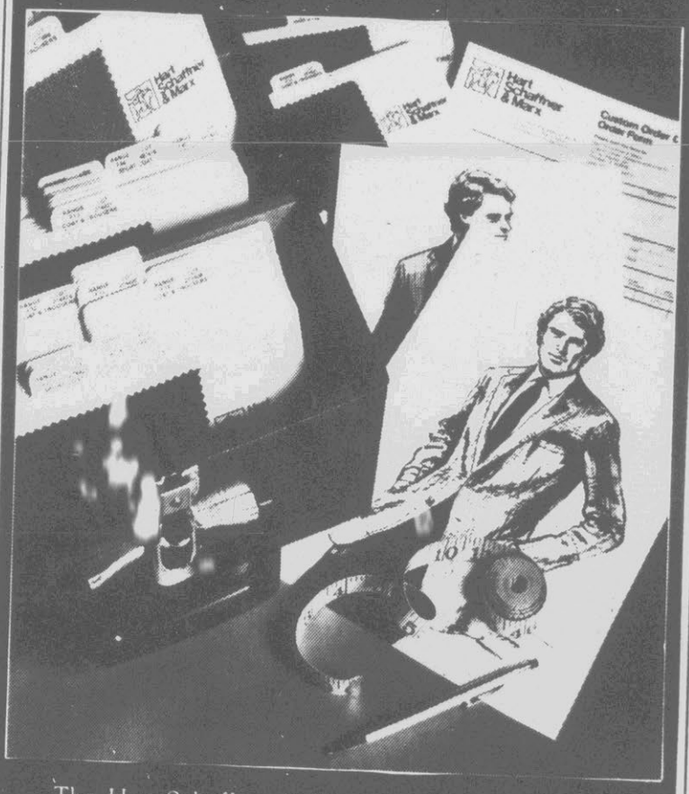

The smallest star on the daytime show "Another World" is B.B. Dano. LINDA DANO'S tiny toy spaniel. It is listed as B.B. Gallant, pet of her character Felicia. When asked how she keeps B.B. quiet during taping, Linda joked: "Comatose is a way of life for B.B., she's 17 years old.

Recreation and Parks

Summer 1983 Programs

Statement of Philosophy

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department believes that recreation serves as a catalyst within the commmunity to create a climate for developing leisure-time activities that enhance the quality of life and meet the basic needs shared by all human beings—to belong, to achieve, to be recognized, to have status, to acquire and use skills, and to have a creative outlet. Recreation develops sportsmanship, leadership, cultural arts and environment. Recreation creates opportunities to promote family unity and develops understanding and positive interaction among people.

RESERVATIONS

Picnic Shelter Reservations: can be made by calling ext. 202. Picnic shelters that can be reserved are located at Elm Street Park (3), Kiwanis Shelter (indoor grill, deck, picnic tables) behind Elm St. Gym, Greensprings Park, Peppermint Park, and Jaycee Park.

Tennis Court Reservations: The City tennis courts (6) at Elm Street can be reserved for 1 1/2 hours, 7 days a week. To reserve a court call the administrative offices, 752-4137, Ext. 202, at least one day in advance.
The River Birch Tennis Center (8 courts) is also open for free reservations 7 days a week, 756-9343. Courts may be reserved on a same day basis. Courts at the center may also be rented by groups for a nominal fee.
In addition, there are four courts at Evans Park, four courts at Jaycee Park and two courts at Thomas Foreman Park, not on a reservation system. All lighted courts have light timers/coin meters.

Rental Policy

The department maintains a facility and equipment rental policy. Details, prices, and agreements can be obtained from the Jaycee Park Office, Monday-Friday from 8:00-5:00 (752-4137 ext. 202)

There is an 11 PM curfew at all parks and facilities.

No Alcoholic Beverages are allowed in any facilities or in the Parks.

Dear Citizens of Greenville:

It is with great pride that the City of Greenville offers you a summer recreation program second to none. With the availability of more leisure hours and the need to keep fit, we have tried to plan something for everyone. We hope every citizen will take the opportunity to participate in at least one activity this summer.

The Recreation and Parks Commission and staff stand ready to make this your most enjoyable summer ever. Come out to the parks and recreate!!

Sincerely,

Boyd Lee, Director
Recreation & Parks Department

Summer Playground Information

Registration

Monday, June 20, is the official opening day for the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's Summer Program. Registration in most cases, will be June 13 through June 17 or at the first scheduled session. Individuals may only register for programs on assigned days (indicated in program description) and following days. Please notice carefully, program registration dates and places! No one will be allowed to register early or over the phone. Individuals may sign up for other people (maximum of 2), providing they have the proper information. This year registration will be from 5:30 PM until 8:30 PM, to aid working parents. Please realize this does not assure you a place in our programs as they are filled on a first come first served basis. If a fee is involved, it must be paid in full the day of registration. All programs are available to residents of Greenville. Non-residents who live in Pitt County must pay a non-resident participation fee to be able to participate. Most programs operate from June 20 to August 5.

For further information concerning any of the programs, or additional programs, please call the department at 752-4137, Ext. 202.

Day Camp

Jaycee Park Day Camps-This year there will be two Day Camps at Jaycee Park. One day camp will be for children having completed Kindergarten, 1 and 2 grades-a separate day camp will be held for youth finishing 3, 4, 5, 6, & 7 grades. From Astronaut's Wife to First Lady in Waiting

Annie Glenn Has the Right Stuff

By Kathleen Maxa

Annie Glenn Has the Right Stuff

By Kathleen Maxa

For any other political wife, the luncheon speech before the 300 women who gathered at the Skyland Pines Country Club in Canton, Ohio, would have been one of those routine command performances. You say a few words about what a great job your husband is doing, thank everyone for her support and fade back into the shadows of your husband's career until the next women's club luncheon invitation arrives.

But for Annie Glenn, the wife of Ohio's Senator John Glenn, that speech she gave three years ago was about as far from routine as her astronaut husband's space flight some 21 years ago. That speech marked the day that this diminutive, dark-haired woman with the warm, dark eyes showed the world she had The Right Stuff.

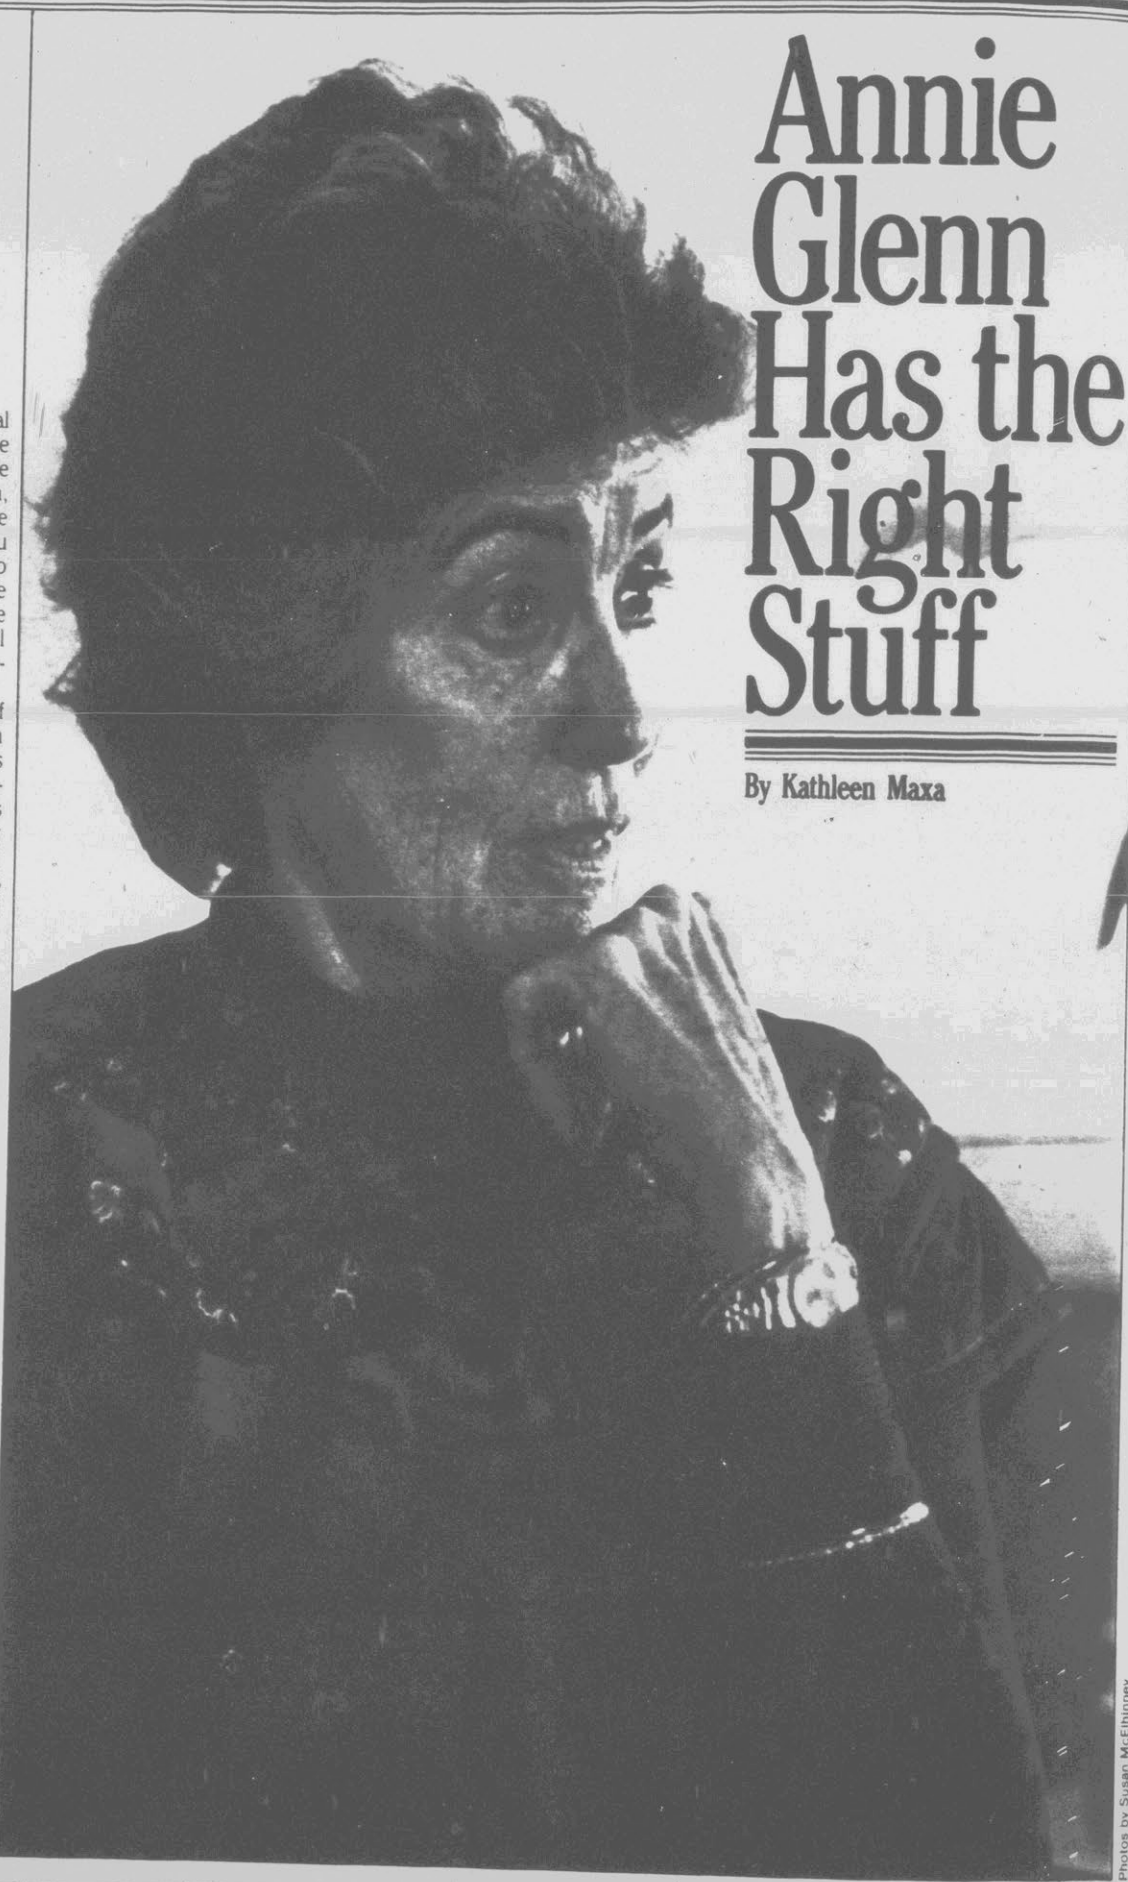

Her hands trembled ever so slightly as she stepped to the dais and, with a quavering voice, began slowly, tentatively: "As some of you know, I have been a stutterer all of my life, as was my father before me. It has taken many, many, many years for me to reach the point where I am able to stand here today and give a speech."

She continued for nearly 20 minutes, talking about the difficulties she had encountered throughout her life as a stutterer who stumbled over 85 percent of the words she spoke. To pronounce her own last name used to take what seemed like an interminable time as she struggled to get out the "g." She used to regard the telephone as "a monster."

And she told them about the revolutionary speech therapy she began in 1974 at Hollins College near Roanoke, Va., which had, she said, "made it possible for me to be here with all of you today and to do so many things I never thought I would be able to do."

When Annie Glenn finished, there wasn't a dry eye in the dining room of the Skyland Pines Country Club. Senator Glenn, who remained in Washington so as not to detract from his wife's special moment, also wept when she phoned him following the speech.

"Every one of the women in that room came by afterward to shake her hand and say a few words," recalls Sophie Usner, a Canton city employee who was in the audience. "They knew the courage it took for her to stand up before them, that getting up to give a speech — even without an impediment — takes a lot. She touched a lot of lives out there that day."

On a rare quiet afternoon at her suburban Maryland home, Annie Glenn, 63, reflects on how her life has changed since that day in Canton, as she curls up on an oversized sofa in the paneled family room.

"Being a stutterer, I guess I never even dreamed of having the possibility of being able to do the things I'm able to do now," she says, speaking slowly but clearly, as if carefully measuring each word. "I always thought I had a complete life. But now that I can talk, I realize how much I can help other people."

The person she is helping most these days is her husband, who has been closing in on Walter Mondale's lead in the race for the 1984 Democratic nomination for President.

As John Glenn's unpaid but full-time staffer, she can usually be found during working hours in his Senate office, sitting in on meetings with visitors and staff or answering the requests of constituents back in Ohio. Although she is included in everything on the Senator's schedule, Annie Glenn prefers to remain in the background.

Even before she overcame her speech impediment, Annie was a popular campaigner, known as John's "best weapon."

"I'm just there for my own education," she says. "And because it's extremely interesting to me to meet these people. I have an intense interest in what is going on for my own knowledge, not because I intend to play a role in writing out issues or putting my 'yes' or 'no' in the conversation."

But it is out on the campaign trail that she has contributed the most to her husband's political future. In contrast with John Glenn, who has had to work to overcome his stiffness with strangers, Annie Glenn is a natural at the meeting and greeting side of politics. "She doesn't just meet people," said an Ohio political acquaintance, "she warms to them. You can see it in her face."

Even before she overcame her speech impediment, Annie Glenn was recognized as an effective and popular campaigner who was known among her husband's Ohio political rivals as "John Glenn's best weapon."

Although John Glenn sometimes calls Annie his "co-pilot," she has no flights of fancy about being a tower controller.

"The key to her charm," says a former Glenn aide, "is that no person is too common to be approached. Night after night, day after day on the campaign trail, I would see her go up and grab a hand and initiate conversations. And people would be extremely patient and courteous and wait for her to finish what she had to say. You could see them moving their heads and struggling with her as she groped for the word."

Now, as her husband stumps before such diverse groups as the Wall Street investment banking firm Lehman Brothers and the Iowa Beef Council, she accompanies him, often working one side of the room shaking hands and making conversation, while he works the other. Though she refrains from discussing issues in public, aides say that she frequently engages in interesting dialogues with Glenn privately.

"While he tends to view issues on a national scale," says a Glenn insider, "she humanizes those issues by relating the individual experiences of the constituents she talks with to John and his staff. She may tell them, 'I met Mr. Jones during the party and he gave me some examples of what has happened to his natural-gas bill and the difficulty he's had in paying the bill.'"

Glenn, the former Marine Corps fighter pilot and Friendship 7 astronaut, sometimes refers to his wife as his "co-pilot." But unlike Rosalynn Carter, who sat in on Cabinet meetings when her husband was President, or Nancy Reagan, who is said to have strong opinions on her husband's White House staff appointments, Annie Glenn draws the line between co-pilot and tower controller.

"I don't think it's up to me to give him political advice," she says flatly.

At a time of public ambivalence about what a First Lady should be — a socially conscious Presidential helpmate or a glamorously gowned Presidential appendage — Annie Glenn is regarded as capable of striking a balance between the two extremes.

"Annie focuses John's attention on the human side of the issues," says a Glenn insider. "But she is not someone who is going to intrude and try to force her views on the nation through her husband."

Her style of dress is more cost- than label-conscious, although her preference for simple, tailored designs gives her an understated elegance. A trim size 6, she buys her clothes off the rack rather than from designer houses and says she doesn't care if people see her in the same outfit from year to year.

"She's small town but in a sophisticated way," says Suzanne Ruf, the director of development who organized the Cleveland Hearing and Speech Center's annual meeting at which Annie Glenn spoke last year. "I think women would be able to readily identify with her as First Lady."

Still, the cut of her clothes or the depth of her social consciousness is not nearly as important as what a Presidential candidate's wife conveys about her husband, observes Washington lawyer Harry McPherson.

"What the public wants to know is what kind of person is going to be counseling him and helping him carry that very substantial office," says McPherson, an informal adviser to Walter Mondale and behind-the-scenes figure in Democratic Party politics for nearly 30 years. "I believe Annie is the sort of person who conveys such an integrity of personality and that it will go down to the Senator's great benefit. She is true in the sense that a piece of wood, an axe handle is a true thing."

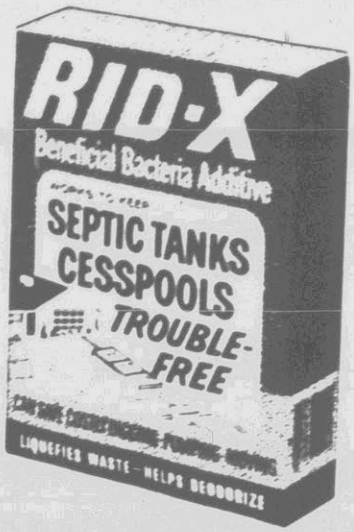

Annie Glenn's character has been forged from Presbyterian prudence, small-town values and the upending forces of fate. During 40 years of married life, childhood sweethearts John and Annie Glenn (they began dating in eighth grade) have gone through more together than most couples would experience in 20 lifetimes: two wars, outer space and the attendant fishbowl existence of the NASA astronaut program, and the rearing of two children. David, 37, is an anesthesiologist who resides with his wife and the Glenns' only grandchild in San Francisco. Lyn, 36, divides her time between Vail, where she lives with her physician husband, and campaigning for her father.

If not for World War II, today Annie Glenn might be the wife of John Glenn the plumbing supplier in tiny, rural New Concord, Ohio — a possibility neither of them seems to have lost sight of.

Instead of joining his father's business, John Glenn, swept up in the patriotic fervor of the times, joined the

In John's office: "The person she is helping most these days is her husband."

ANNIE GLENN

Marine Corps as a fighter pilot. And Anna Castor left the security of New Concord for the uprooted life of a military wife married to a combat flyer, test pilot and astronaut whose every mission was a potential rendezvous with death.

Annie Glenn has survived it all. And along the way she has managed to retain a clear sense of who she is and to derive strength and optimism from those enormous adjustments and uncertainties.

"She doesn't remember the negative side of anything — even stuttering," says daughter Lyn. "There is something in her that always makes her turn around with a smile and go on, even when people were cruel to her."

Although Annie Glenn stuttered from the time she began to speak, the first time she became conscious of it was during an incident in sixth grade. "Each of us was asked to get up in front of the class and recite a poem," she recalls. "When it was my turn and I began to recite, somebody in the class laughed at me."

But Annie Glenn never allowed her speech problem to deter her anymore than she allowed it to depress her. Instead she learned to adapt or "to tough it out" by speaking as best she could. When husband John suffered an ear injury from a fall in the bathtub shortly after he had announced his candidacy for the Senate in 1964, Annie Glenn bravely carried on her husband's first campaign.

Recognizing the problem her stuttering posed, she enlisted her best friend, Rene Carpenter, whose former husband, Scott, had also been one of the original Project Mercury astronauts. "I'll shake the hands," Glenn told Carpenter, "and you make the speeches."

During the early 60's when reporters followed astronaut John Glenn like a bodyguard patrol, his wife had managed to get through it by limiting her remarks to a repertoire of phrases — "Gee whiz," "I'll be darned," "The kids are wonderful" — and by smiling a lot.

Because of her seeming reluctance to speak, she often had been misunderstood and underestimated. During that ill-fated 1964 campaign — John Glenn eventually was forced to drop out of the race — reporters who didn't know she stuttered described Annie Glenn as shy. Finally she called a press conference to set the record straight.

She walked into that room full of reporters knowing that this was one speech she would have to make alone, but determined to have her say, Carpenter recalls.

"A l-l-l-lot of you," Glenn began haltingly, "... it hurt m-m-m-my f-f-f-feelings b-b-b-because a lot of p-p-p-people have called me shy. B-b-b-but I'm not shy. I st-st-st-stutter."

"When she finished," Carpenter says, "there were tears streaming down the faces of those reporters."

Despite periodic therapy sessions in the years after her marriage, it wasn't until 1974, when she enrolled in Hollins College's revolutionary program for stutterers, that her speech noticeably improved. The Precision Fluency Shaping Program, directed by Dr. Ronald Webster, teaches stutterers to control the more than 100 muscles involved in speech through rhythmic drills designed to slow down and help them to analyze their speech and breathing exercises.

As an 85 percent stutterer, Annie Glenn's speech problem was by far the most severe in her therapy group. Although she saw dramatic improvements immediately, it took another session at Hollins to reduce her disfluency to 13 percent and several more years of almost daily therapy.

Now, she boasts, the last time she saw her speech therapist was in October. But she still spends a half hour a day on her own practicing.

"I make three phone calls each morning to practice," she explains. "I'll call the airport and ask for a weather report or a friend to chat and then I'll tape my part of the conversation so I can hear if I make any errors. And I practice talking out loud while I'm driving, even though I know other drivers must think I'm a little strange."

Glenn's newfound garrulity has made her a popular speaker and subject for interviews. She says she welcomes the opportunity to demonstrate to other stutterers that if she can overcome it, they can, too.

Indeed, John's "best weapon" has her sights set firmly on the White House, currently the home of another Great Communicator. FW

SOME SOUND ADVICE ABOUT EAR CARE

By Randy Steele

Last year Americans spent between $1 billion and $2 billion for earache remedies. Earaches are not only painful and expensive, but also threatening to one's hearing.

When trouble-free, the ear works wonders. Its wide outer portion collects and funnels sounds into the middle ear. But problems can plague this intricate system. They fall roughly into two categories: those you can touch with your finger, and those you can't. Swimmer's ear is probably the most common kind of outer-ear infection (the type you can usually touch). As you dunk your head repeatedly in water, your ears lose their protective layer of wax. Once an infection sets in, your ears will hurt, itch, swell and can get worse. If you have water in your ear, do your best to shake it out. If you swim a lot, clean the outer ear with a diluted solution of rubbing alcohol.

Other causes of problems in the outer ear include: foreign objects (doctors are forever finding pencil erasers stuck in children's ears); insects; and over-vigorous cleaning. "Mothers of small children feel that wax is a dirty, harmful secretion and are hell-bent on getting it out," says Dr. Ralph Naunton, an ear specialist with the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke. "But ear wax should usually be left alone."

If you have a lot of problems with the outer ear — itching, swelling — you could be washing your ears too thoroughly. When an earache strikes, take aspirin and use a heating pad and ear drops. If your ear continues to pang after 48 hours, see a doctor immediately.

Earaches that you can't touch usually hide in the middle ear, the area behind the eardrum. According to a study by Dr. Charles Bluestone, director of the department of otolaryngology at the University of Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital, more than two-thirds of all children suffer with middle-ear ailments before age 3. Parents often dismiss the problem in infants as only a cold or teething pain. "That's a dangerous assumption to make," says Dr. Naunton. If left untreated, this could lead to hearing loss.

Doctors have labeled these middle-ear maladies — which also occasionally plague adults — otitis media. It comes in two forms. Acute otitis media is marked by pain and fever and often has spread from a cold or other upper respiratory ailment. If this acute infection persists, doctors may tackle it with antibiotics. Ironically, in one sense you're lucky if you can feel an earache: You're aware that something's wrong.

The other, more insidious form of otitis media is called O.M.E. (otitis media with effusion). Although doctors don't completely understand why, fluid sometimes builds up behind the eardrum. O.M.E. produces no obvious symptoms — no pain, no fever — except for hearing loss. Adults can readily detect their own hearing loss, but children, particularly infants, can't recognize any problem. (One clue for parents: Children suddenly seem less attentive.) Severe cases of O.M.E. can eventually cause deafness.

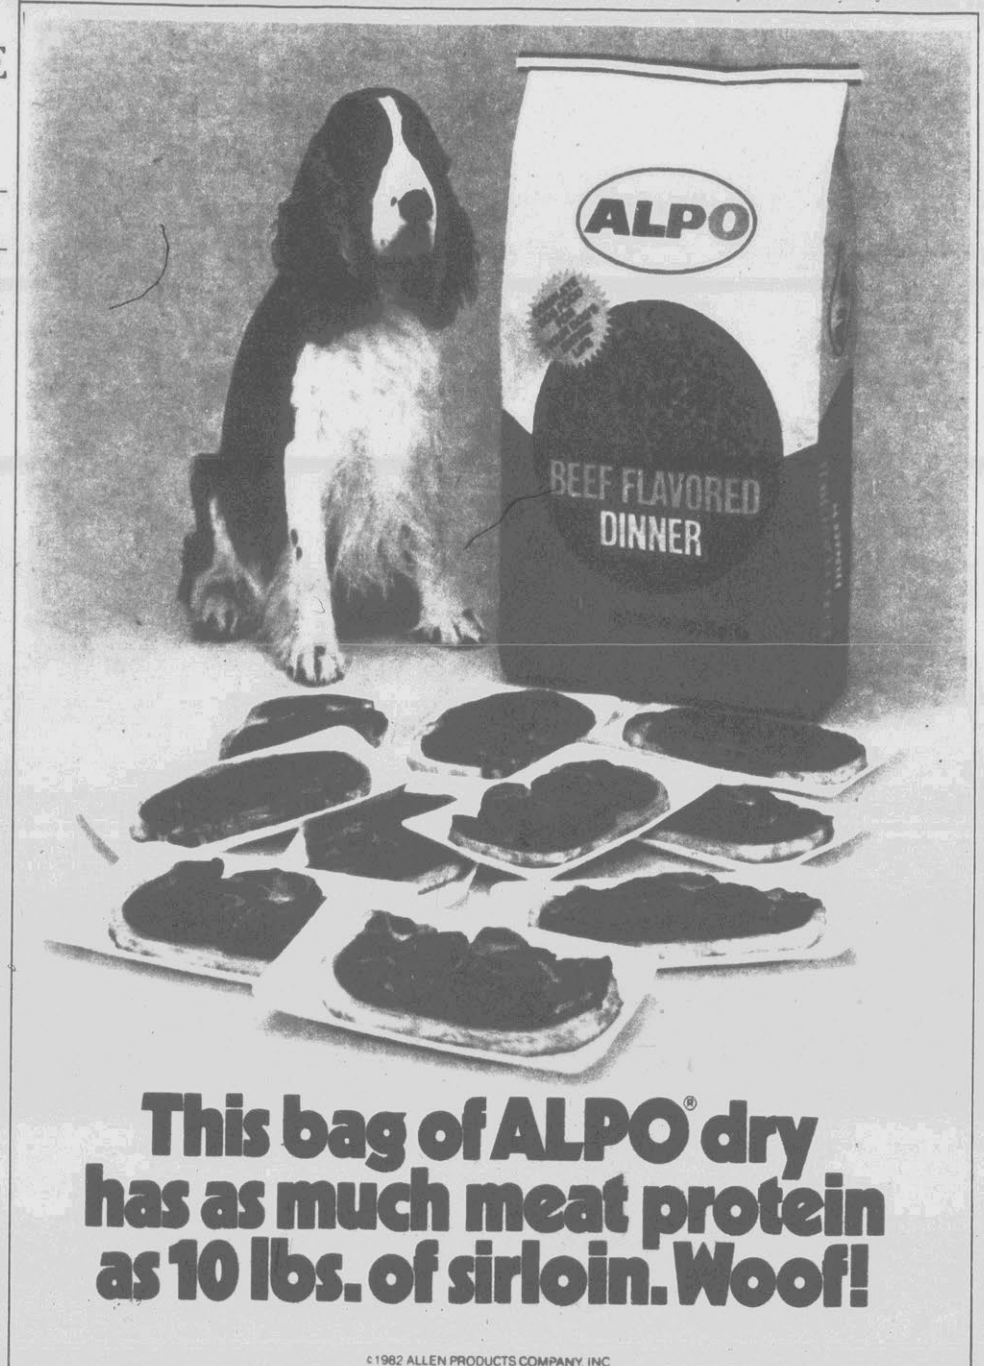

Mild cases of O.M.E. can often disappear without treatment. Ear specialists usually wait three to five weeks before treating a patient, in hope that the fluid will drain by itself. Until recently, nine out of 10 ear specialists prescribed decongestant-antihistamine drugs for O.M.E., but in another, three-year-long study by Dr. Bluestone's team, these drugs were found ineffective for children between the ages of 7 months and 12 years. (Dr. Bluestone stresses, however, that decongestants may help patients with nasal congestion.)

If you have problems with your ear, it could mean you're washing your ears too thoroughly.

Although antibiotics can ease other middle-ear infections, they don't have much success against O.M.E. Doctors usually opt for surgery. The surgeon pierces the eardrum and attaches a tube to drain the fluid from the middle ear. Hearing often returns immediately. Unfortunately, this procedure treats only a symptom, not the disease; fluid buildup recurs in nearly half the patients who undergo the surgery. However, most children tend to outgrow these problems.

The inner ear is also susceptible to problems. Ailments of the inner ear don't usually cause your ear to ache, but they can be critical. Nerve deafness is often rooted in the inner ear. Unfortunately, there's no cure for nerve deafness, whose symptoms range from mild to severe hearing loss to vertigo or tinnitus, which is a constant ringing sound inside the head or ear. If you suspect that you have any type of ear ailment, consult your doctor. FW

YOU CAN WRITE YOUR OWN SUCCESS STORY

By Dorothy Schoenfeld

With a few strokes of his pen, John Hancock made it perfectly clear that he had no doubts about the future independence of the 13 American colonies. You don't have to be a graphologist to see that the size and boldness of Hancock's name, now a synonym for "signature," indicated absolute conviction.

Not all strokes can be interpreted by the untrained eye as readily as those of Hancock's. To a graphologist, however, your p's and q's are fair game for dissecting your character. The way you close your a's (or fail to close them) or dot your i's (or fail to dot them) reveals plenty, though only when considered with other words, size, spacing, even pen pressure.

"Think of handwriting as gestures in print," says graphologist-psychologist Carlos Pedregal. "But it's a more accurate expression of a person than physical gestures, since it is unconscious; gestures can be forced."

A graphologist (who might be the personnel manager at the company where you're seeking a job or a banker you hope will O.K. a loan) studies all elements, rather than isolated letters because identical ways of forming letters and words can have different meanings, depending on the overall context. Pedregal cites signatures as an example: One with many extraneous loops can reflect either self-centeredness or romanticism; a dot at the end of a name can show meticulousness or distrust.

Although opinions differ as to how scientific graphology is, it's widely used to judge character. Having your handwriting analyzed (see offer at left for an analysis by Carlos Pedregal) can provide knowledge that's good to have before someone sees more in your signature than you intend to convey.

UP IN IDAHO

In which the movie star granddaughter of an enduring American novelist reflects on her lifelong love affair with the outdoors. Earnestly!

By Mariel Hemingway

My grandfather traveled from the plazas of Paris to the veldts of Africa, yet every year he returned to the quiet beauty of Idaho. I never met my grandfather. He died the year I was born. I know him only through the stories he wrote and the stories my father tells. Their stories share something I find within myself: a passion for the outdoors.

I have spent most of my 21 years in Sun Valley, Idaho. This is the second greatest gift my parents have given me. The first is themselves. My mother is a native Idahoan. She grew up in Pocatello, one of Idaho's first big railroad cities. Mining was still the state's big business and her people had pioneer souls. My maternal grandfather was the first druggist in Idaho. My mother's name, Puck, comes from the Indian puckinuck, or, "little one." She got her name from selling sodas to the Shoshone Indians at her father's drugstore fountain. She served one soda to a tall, good-looking fellow named Jack Hemingway.

My father, I believe, is the best fly fisherman in the

On the Crest

An original sculpture . . . handcrafted of the finest Venetian glass . . . hand-signed . . . issued in limited edition.

Available exclusively from Franklin Heirloom Glass, at the very attractive price of $150.
Reservation Deadline: May 31, 1983.

The royal palaces of 16th-century Europe held many treasures. Rare tapestries and ornately carved furniture. Lavishly embroidered robes of state. Rich ornaments of gold and silver. And, perhaps most treasured of all—cristallo, the wonderful glass of Venice.

Cristallo was the triumph of the Venetian glassmakers with an unmatched transparency and brilliance. It was the supreme achievement of these master craftsmen, reserved for their finest objets d'art.

Inspired by these beautiful works of antique cristallo, Franklin Heirloom Glass has commissioned a beautiful new work of Venetian glass. An original sculpture that has a clarity and brilliance reminiscent of the cristallo so coveted by the royal art patrons of Renaissance Europe. But that possesses the strength, the simplicity of line so appreciated by today's collectors.

On the Crest is an original and dramatic work portraying a magnificent seagull poised on the crest of an ocean wave . . . created entirely by hand by a master craftsman in the famed Venetian glass center of Murano. No two will be exactly alike. Each will be a true original, and each will be hand-signed and dated by the skilled master who created it.

A limited edition work of exceptional beauty

On the Crest is being issued in a single, firmly limited edition. The total edition will be limited forever to the exact number of individuals who order the sculpture by the close of the issuing year—1983.

The issue price is $150, a most attractive one for an original handcrafted work of this quality. And you may pay for your sculpture in 4 convenient monthly installments of $37.50 each.

To enhance your home with this superb work of art, you need only return the attached Reservation Application to Franklin Heirloom Glass, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania 19091, by May 31, 1983.

OUR PROMISE TO YOU We at Franklin Heirloom Glass take pride in the high quality of the works we produce. But we believe that our efforts should also be judged by the people we serve. Any work acquired from us may be returned for any reason within thirty days for your choice of replacement or a full refund.

world. He reads a stream or a sky the way most people read a road map. Thoughts of my father are peppered with images of nature. He never tells a story without describing the smell of the air, the season, the light. My best memories are of our times together in the wilds hunting or hiking, and he has passed on to me his insatiable love for the outdoors in true Hemingway tradition.

Interestingly, my father wasn't allowed to fish when he was a kid. He could only watch. His father thought that he should learn by watching. Then when he actually got to do it, he went crazy, and he hasn't gotten over this craziness yet. My mother, my older sisters, Muffet and Margaux, and I all know how to fish, but we're so spoiled by him. If he wants a fish, he can go out and get something in three minutes. When we don't catch a fish within two seconds, we're totally upset.

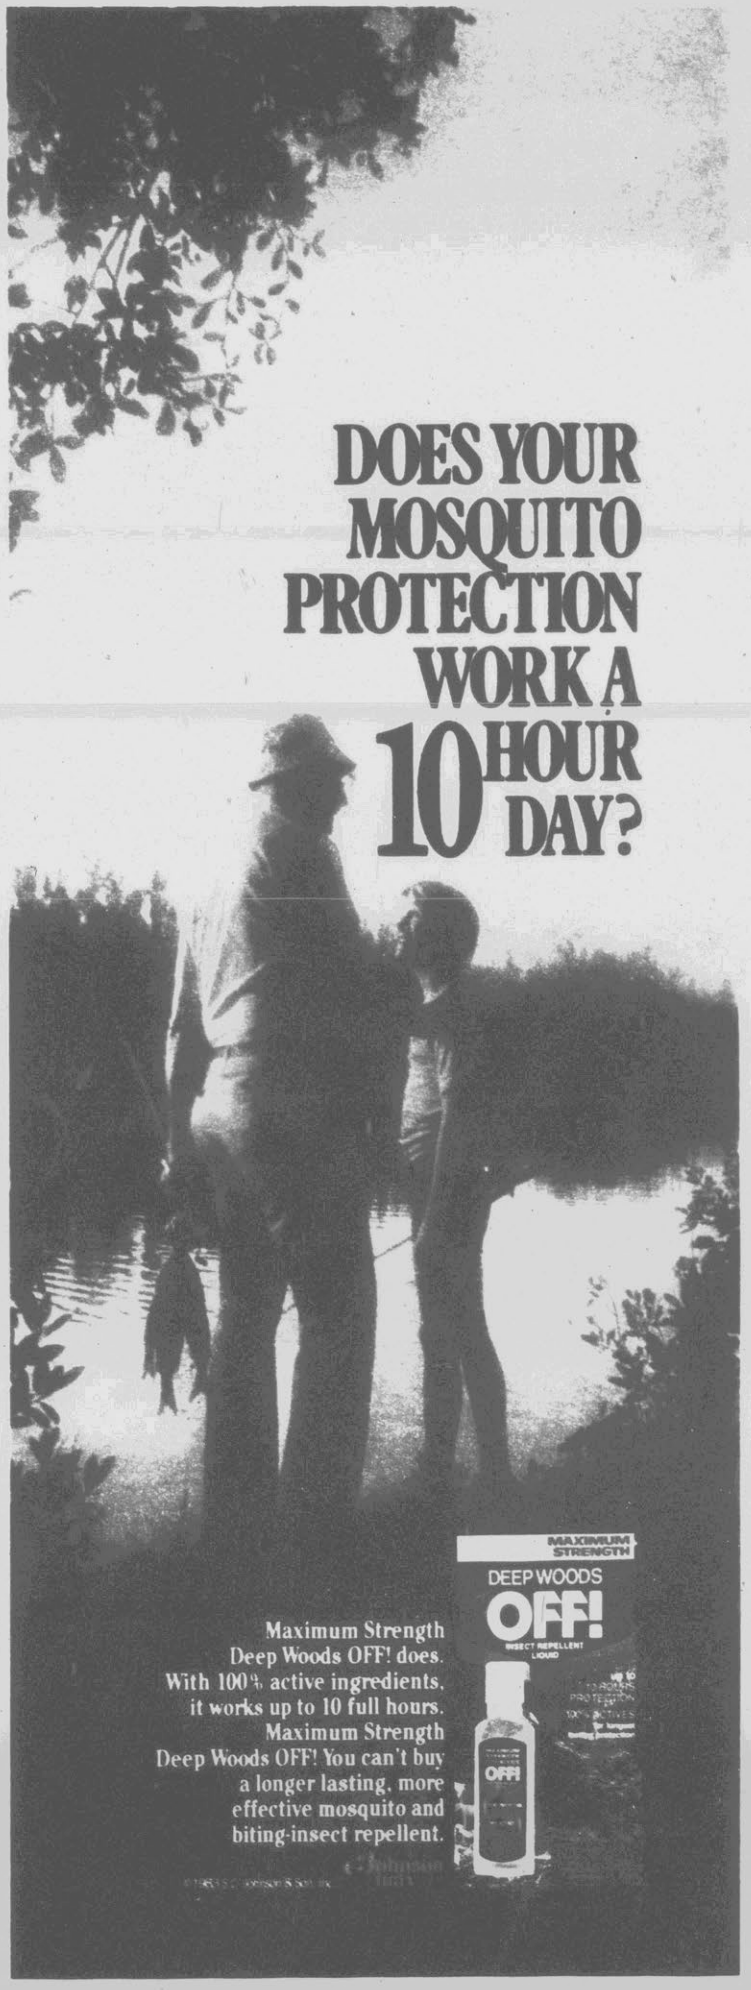

So usually when I went fishing with my dad, I ended up in an innertube, riding down the river, having to be very quiet so I wouldn't upset the fish. In fact, fishing was the only time our family was quiet. Otherwise we were yelling — happy yelling, though.

I go hunting, too; I'm not a bad hunter, either. I don't go hunting for big game, though, just birds. But I end up getting sympathy pains for them, so I can't do it for a long time. A couple of times when we accidentally stunned birds, like doves, I would take them home as pets, attempting to nurse them back to health.

Usually when I went fishing with my dad, I ended up in an innertube, riding down the river, having to be very quiet so I wouldn't upset the fish.

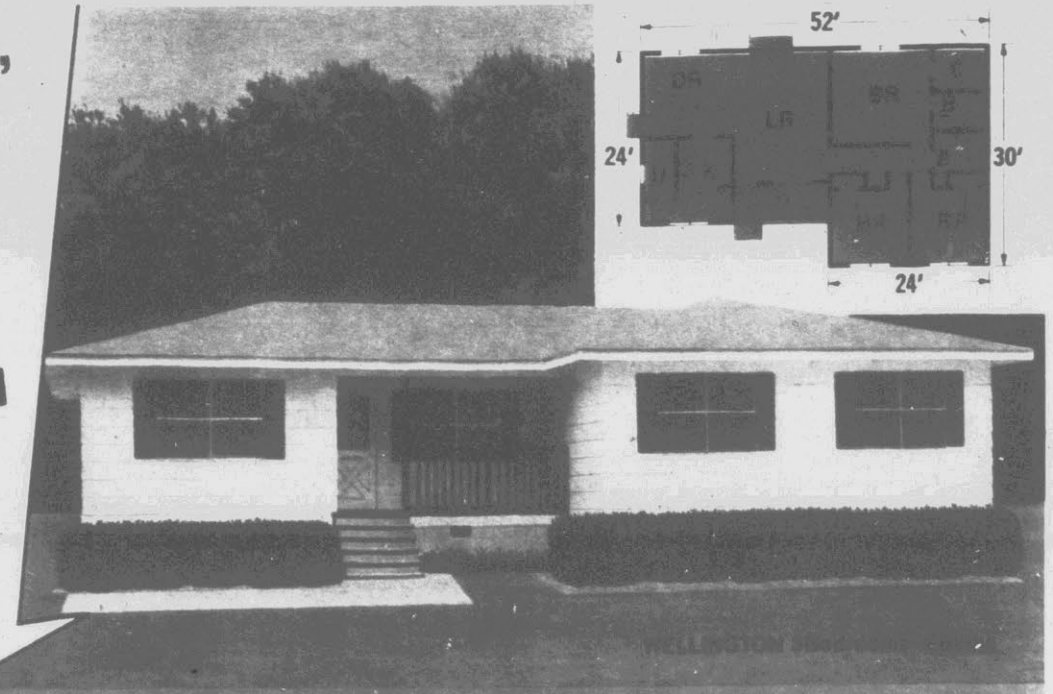

My perfect day in the woods is to put some apples and carrots in a backpack, swim the river, go for a run, swim the river again. Maybe go horseback riding. These are a few of my favorite things.

Like most kids, I was always outdoors. My mother would have to call me three times before I'd come in. Our house is five miles north of town, so I usually played alone. I hiked through the sage and overgrown grass of my backyard and into the woods and made friends with nature. I still walk and run everywhere, all terrains, all seasons. I think about work when I'm out walking. I think about a million things. Because I like what I do, I don't have to get away from thinking about it. It just makes it so much more pleasurable to think about it in that environment, and it helps me get my priorities straight.

You may not believe it, but . . .

It's a FACT!

. . . Jim Walter financing can save you as much as $58,000 on a $35,000 home . . . and WE CAN PROVE IT!

FINANCING EXAMPLE
	Other Financing (After Down Payment)	JIM WALTER (With No Down Payment)
CASH PRICE (Example)	$35,000.00	$35,000.00
Annual Percentage Rate	13%	10%
Number of Payments	360	240
Monthly Payment	$387.17	$337.70
Total Cost	$139,381.20	$81,048.00

(With Jim Walter, using this example, your monthly payment will be $49.47 LOWER, your home will be completely paid for in 20, not 30 years, and your TOTAL SAVINGS will be $58,333.20.)

Believe it or not, you CAN save as much as $58,000 on a new home, built on your property and financed by Jim Walter. What's more, your home will be paid for in 20, rather than 30 years, and your monthly payment to Jim Walter will be less . . . MUCH LESS! It sounds unbelievable, but it's TRUE! It's a FACT and we can prove it! While most other home financing is 13% or more, Jim Walter's annual percentage rate is still only 10%. For comparison, your monthly payment on a $35,000, 30-year mortgage at 13% would be $387.17. The monthly payment for a home with this cash price, built and financed by Jim Walter, would be only $337.70 . . . almost $50.00 less. That's fifty of your hard-earned dollars, and for only 240, not 360 monthly payments. Based on this comparison, the TOTAL SAVINGS on your mortgage will actually be MORE THAN $58,000. IT'S A FACT!!!

Jim Walter can build your choice of beautiful homes with two, three or four bedrooms and one or two baths, from a selection of more than 20 models. Financing can be arranged in a matter of days, rather than weeks, and there will be no "points" or closing costs to increase what you will pay.

NO DOWN PAYMENT FOR QUALIFIED PROPERTY OWNERS

Jim Walter can begin construction almost immediately, almost anywhere that you own property. We'll complete the outside and, if you like, stop right there so that you can finish the interior at enormous savings. Or, we'll finish the inside, up to 90% complete. You tell us how much or how little you want to do. Remember, however, the more inside work you do for yourself, or with friends, the more money you'll save at today's labor costs.

Call, send the coupon, or visit the display park nearest you to get all the facts. We want you to know exact costs and what your monthly payment will be before construction even begins. We want to explain the many money-saving methods you can use to keep costs within your budget. When you have all the facts, we truly believe you'll choose Jim Walter. Trekking through the silver-green plains, I am happy. Idaho is magnificent all year round. It's dusty in the early fall. The little creeks are dry and the air is sagey sweet. The golden aspens on the surrounding hills are a halo. You can smell an approaching thunderstorm. Rain at this time of year is straight and gentle, and the thunder is more musical than threatening. This rain is autumn's quiet farewell. The skies give no warning; snow might come any day.

The first snow embraces you like the first note of a symphony. Waking up to winter's first white thrills me. I'm out walking while morning is still beaming and the world sparkles. I used to take the shortcut: I'd jump out of my window. Of course, in Idaho any serious winter walking requires snowshoes. Snowshoeing is a wonderful way to get someplace. It's magic. Even somebody six feet tall can walk on top of the snow. There is a newness in early winter that even spring cannot equal. In the bright sun, the Sawtooth Mountains scratch a clean line across a violet sky. Their faces are bearded by the fuzzy green pines. Pacing across a blank field, my lone footprints match the mountain stillness.

After six months of winter, spring is most welcome. Green creeps over the landscape slowly. The first sign that it's coming is little patches of black pavement showing through the ice in the road. When I was little, I would try to crack the ice on the driveway, hoping to hurry the season along. I can't think of spring's advent without the "tac, tac, tac" of ice melting outside my bedroom window. Spring is a muddy affair in Sun Valley, and my dogs and I would bring the outside inside. The best thing about spring in Idaho is that suddenly I can remember, "Hey, there is such a thing as summer!"

Summer is my favorite Idaho season. June's green hills are splashed with yellow daisies, blue lupine and Indian paintbrushes. One small cloud floats across a wide sky. The days are so long and so bright. Gusty winds temper hot days. I liked to sing while walking alone in the woods. I remember one particular performance. I was about 10 and I was on the edge of our property. There was a hush . . . then suddenly wind filled my pine-tree orchestra with music. I conducted furiously and accompanied the trees with a very, very high soprano aria. When the music ended, I turned triumphantly to take my bows. My sister was standing behind me. I realized that my backyard was really too small for concerts of such magnitude.

Mountain summers are wonderful because the nights are always cool. The skies are magic — bristling with meteor showers just before a lavender dawn. Summer air pushes me up. I like to climb mountains. My climbs often take me past the green and into the gray rock faces. Dry air and the sight of an occasional wildflower impossibly rooted in rock keep me going. I find

As I reach solid rock, the wind slaps my face and the whole world lies spread out before me. It takes my breath away. It brings me to my knees — then quickly to my behind (pebbles make a lot of little dents in your knees).

I have my own house now, 200 miles from my parents and 20 miles from the nearest town. There are bears and snakes on my land. But they're really more scared of you than you are of them. Everybody knows his place. You stay off their territory; they stay off yours. I don't get

New York City the pleasures of the outdoors are not lost. On a nice day in Central Park, I can lie flat in the grass, stare up at the sky and listen to the clover bees buzz around me. But Idaho is so much a part of me, so much a part of my family. We've been terribly spoiled by living there. When I'm working in New York or Los Angeles, I can find places to escape to. But it's never the same. For me, as for anyone, there's no place like home. FW

GET AWAY FROM THE WILD LIFE AND INTO THE WILDERNESS.

A party in the Winnebago next door isn't the kind of wild life most campers are looking for.

But it's what you'll find at campgrounds that offer everything.

Everything except a little peace and quiet.

Nowadays, to really get away, you need the Honda CT110 and XL80. Trail bikes that can take you far from the maddening crowd.

The CT110 comes with an automatic clutch, swivel-lock handlebars and a luggage rack. The lightweight XL80 sports motocross styling and a rugged 80 cc four-stroke engine.

Both are street legal, easy to ride and even easier to transport.

So next time you're packing up the family, pack up a Honda CT110 and XL80.

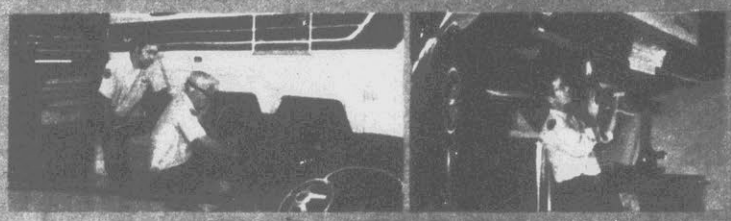

The perfect trail mix.

In his eight novels and more than 50 short stories, Ernest Hemingway*, Mariel's grandfather, put biceps on the English language and marched it off to war. He won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction in 1953 and the Nobel Prize for literature the following year. With his unique lean style, he expressed the beauty and power of nature in many of his works. In the following excerpt from the 1925 story "Big Two-Hearted River," young Nick Adams returns from World War I and attempts to find peace on a fishing trip.*

"For some time as he walked Nick had been in sight of one of the big islands of pine standing out above the rolling high ground he was crossing. He dipped down and then as he came slowly up to the crest of the bridge he turned and made toward the pine trees.

There was no underbrush in the island of pine trees. The trunks of the trees went straight up or slanted toward each other. The trunks were straight and brown without branches. The branches were high above. Some interlocked to make a solid shadow on the brown forest floor. Around the grove of trees was a bare space. It was brown and soft underfoot as Nick walked on it. This was the over-lapping of the pine needle floor, extending out beyond the width of the high branches. The trees had grown tall and the branches moved high, leaving in the sun this bare space they had once covered with shadow. Sharp at the edge of this extension of the forest floor commenced the sweet fern.

Nick slipped off his pack and lay down in the shade. He lay on his back and looked up into the pine trees. His neck and back and the small of his back rested as he stretched. The earth felt good against his back. He looked up at the sky, through the branches, and then shut his eyes. He opened them and looked up again. There was a wind high up in the branches. He shut his eyes again and went to sleep."

COOKING AND CAMPING SECRETS FROM DIAN THOMAS'S KNAPSACK

By Marilyn Hansen

If you wanted to give credit to one person who has given new life and vitality to the family camping experience, Dian Thomas would probably win hands down. Dian, author of Roughing It Easy, A Unique Ideabook for Camping and Cooking, has appeared regularly at the invitation of Tom Brokaw, himself an avid backpacker, on the NBC Today show to demonstrate many of her own tried-and-true camping hints and recipes.

As Dian says, "I look at camping like an artist looks at a painting: It's an opportunity to create memories for people to share, plus a fabulous way to break away from the tensions of everyday life."

MEAT LOAF IN AN ONION

1 lb. lean ground beef
1 egg
¼ cup cracker crumbs
¼ cup tomato sauce
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
½ teaspoon dry mustard
6 large onions, peeled

1. Cut six 12×14-inch pieces of heavy-duty foil; set aside. In a medium bowl, mix beef, egg, crumbs, tomato sauce, pepper, salt and dry mustard. Set aside.
2. Cut onions in half horizontally and remove centers, leaving ¼-inch shell. Chop onion centers. Mix 2 tablespoons into meat mixture. Spoon meat mixture into 6 onion halves, rounding on top. Place remaining onion halves on top of filled onion halves.
3. Place 1 filled onion on each piece of foil. Bring ends of foil up over onion. Fold foil down in small folds. Press sides of foil close to onion. Flatten ends and roll toward onion. Cook on coals 14 to 20 minutes on each side.

Makes 6 servings

UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE IN A DUTCH OVEN

1 can (16 oz.) pineapple slices and juice
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 jar (8 oz.) maraschino cherries
½ cup packed brown sugar
1 pkg. (18½ oz.) cake mix

1. Drain fruit, reserving pineapple juice. Line Dutch oven with foil. Grease foil. Arrange pineapple with cherries in center of each slice on top of foil. Sprinkle brown sugar and 3 tablespoons of reserved juice over fruit. Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Pour over fruit. Put cover on Dutch oven.
2. To bake, place in fireplace 1 inch above coals. Legs of oven should keep bottom of oven 1 inch above coals. If oven does not have legs, place on bricks. Use tongs or shovel to arrange coals on top of the Dutch oven. Bake 25 to 30 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted in center of cake comes out clean. Cool 8 minutes in pan, then invert onto platter. Carefully peel away foil.

Makes 8 servings

KOA GUARANTEES THE GOOD TIMES.

You can't have a good time at a bad campground. That's why Kampgrounds of America gives you this Good Times Guarantee: If, within one hour after check in, you're not 100% happy with our services or facilities, we'll give you a refund.

That's right. You get hot showers, clean restrooms, level campsites and the like, or you get your money back.

If that's not reason enough to camp KOA, here's one more. You could win one of $50,000 worth of prizes by playing KOA's Kamping Kaper Sweepstakes.

So the next time you're camping, turn in to KOA. We're the only campgrounds in North America where the good times are guaranteed.

Clean, friendly, KOA guaranteed.

ENCHILADA PIE

2 lbs. ground beef
1 teaspoon salt, or to taste
1 medium onion, chopped
1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed tomato soup
2 cans (10-oz. size) mild enchilada sauce
1 cup water
9 (8-inch) flour tortillas
2 cups shredded Cheddar or mozzarella cheese

1. Working over an open fire, brown ground beef with salt and onion in a Dutch oven; drain off drippings. Add condensed soup, enchilada sauce and water. Simmer 5 minutes. Spoon ¾ of the mixture into a medium bowl.
2. Arrange 2 to 3 tortillas over mixture remaining in pan. Alternate meat, cheese and tortillas in 3 layers. Replace lid on Dutch oven. Simmer 7 to 10 minutes, or until cheese melts and tortillas soften. Serve pie with remaining tortillas as side bread.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

CAMPING TIPS

1. If the wind blows too hard to start your fire, use a ½ × 10-inch strip of "oo" size or finer steel wool. Place two batteries on top of each other and make sure both are in an upright position. Place one end of the fine steel wool on the bottom of battery and brush the other end across the end of the top battery. Hold next to the tinder and blow sparks to start the fire.
2. Need to boil water? Fill a nonwaxed, non-Styrofoam cup with water and place into coals. The cup will not burn because the water inside keeps the paper below its combustion point.
3. Make a quick fire starter. Fill the cups of a cardboard egg carton with lint from your dryer and pour paraffin wax over it until cup is half-full. Break off one cup and place under fuel to start fire.
4. You can improvise a raincoat with a large garbage bag. Just cut a hole for your head and arms in the bottom of the bag and slip right into it.
5. Soap the outside of pans before placing over coals to cook. After cooking, just wipe the pan bottoms clean.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Marion Long

WE HEARD IT THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

Twenty-five years ago Berry Gordy put down his tools at the Ford assembly line and began manufacturing some of the best popular music ever made. From a bedroom office in Detroit, and with 750 borrowed dollars, he launched Motown Records.

Soon everyone was "dancing in the streets" to the Motown sound, and Gordy's "love child" became a corporate giant, producing the biggest soul acts around.

So get ready for NBC's two-hour special on Monday night celebrating Motown's 25th anniversary. Smokey Robinson once said that "working at Motown is like getting a Ph.D. in soul," and some of the great soul graduates who will be performing on the show include The Miracles, Stevie Wonder, Marvin Gaye, The Supremes, The Temptations, Mary Wells, The Four Tops, Ashford and Simpson, Martha Reeves and Michael Jackson.

To the uninitiated, how can one best describe the Motown sound? As Susann de Passe, president of Motown Productions, puts it, "Above all, it was, and is, a feeling."

UPI

Seeing The Temptations again should put soul fans on "Cloud 9."

MOMS ON MARRIAGE

The idea of mothers pushing their children to get married seems, well, rather outdated. Perhaps because Mom is out dating herself. And two University of Michigan researchers report a significant change in the way grown women regard single life.

Nearly 1,000 boys and girls age 18 and their mothers were asked if it would trouble them greatly if the girls never get married. Of the young people themselves, equal percentages say it would bother them a lot to stay single, and that it wouldn't bother them at all. But four times as many mothers say they don't care if their daughters never wed.

The researchers say that adult women find the idea of wedded bliss far less engaging than before because so many have gone through divorce or comforted relatives or friends who have.

FLUSHING OUT HOLEY SHIRKERS

If this is how Japanese businesses get top performance from their workers, no thanks! Or, to put it another way, no tanks.

Take the rather vigorous training program of Japan's Mister Donut franchise. Please. First, to develop "community spirit and a sense of service," new recruits must go door-to-door in a residential district and offer to scrub toilets. (Why you would want to buy doughnuts from these guys later on is an interesting question.)

Then the poor trainees — who, by this time, might well be wondering what all this has to do with the price of chocolate crullers in Tokyo — are sent off to (honest) Donut University for five weeks of intensive management training. There they subsist almost entirely on doughnuts and coffee. According to Chain Marketing & Management newsletter, Japanese executives believe that unless future franchises can live on doughnuts for five weeks, they won't be able to serve up their holey delights with the proper pride.

They must be doing something right: Mister Donut is the largest fast-food chain of its kind in Japan.

HOT AIR LUNCHES

It isn't all laughs, medallions of veal and a martini or three at those business lunches, you know. There's stress and strain and illness. No tears and sympathy are expected here, but one doctor says that business people have been literally making each other sick with all their wheeling and dealing over meals.

While corporate men and women are bursting the buttons on their blue suits trying to get a leg up on the competition, they are gulping down their food. And when that happens, explains Dr. James Roth, director of the Institute of Gastroenterology at Presbyterian-University of Pennsylvania Medical Center, "air is swallowed with it. In addition, human beings take in extra air subconsciously as a reaction to worry, hurry or tension."

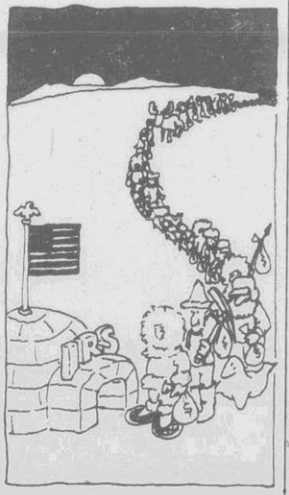

All this leads to severe gas pains and nervous indigestion, says Roth, who advises his patients to take leisurely, constructive lunches — away from your work associates.

IT'S TAXING TO BE AN ALASKAN

Maybe you had to take out a loan to pay the I.R.S. on April 15, but the Tax Foundation Inc. informs us that the average American actually paid about $105 less in Federal income taxes this year than last. (All together now, America: Thanks a million, Uncle Sam!)

U.S. citizens paid an average of $2,482 per person for 1982, a 4.1 percent decrease, caused largely by the lowering of income tax for individuals and by the recession's reduction of taxable corporate income.

Those who paid the most (based almost entirely on average income) were from Alaska ($3,832 per person), the District of Columbia ($3,334), Connecticut ($3,330), New Jersey ($3,115) and Illinois ($2,921). Meanwhile, Federal tax burdens were lightest for folks in Mississippi ($1,626), Arkansas ($1,746), South Carolina ($1,797), Vermont ($1,827) and Alabama ($1,871).

OR—IF YOU PREFER YOU MAY TAKE A SPECIAL TRIAL MEMBERSHIP AND RECEIVE

6 FOR 1 CENT

plus shipping/handling

If you are just an occasional record or tape buyer...if you prefer not to obligate yourself to purchase eight more selections...or if you cannot find 11 selections you want right now—here's a perfect opportunity to "try out" the Club on a special trial membership basis!

Just fill in the special "Trial Membership Application" at the right—and we'll send you ANY 6 records or tapes—ALL 6 for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you simply agree to buy as few as four selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years. Think of it—only four selections and you have three whole years in which to buy them! And that's all there is to it!

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the following page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll now under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ to cover shipping and handling). Read the advertisement for details on how the Club works.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 6 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 3 more selections (instead of 4) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number you want.

Here is the "Gold Box" you've seen on TV —fill it in to get an extra selection...

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Here's the "Gold Box" you've seen on TV—use it to get an extra selection

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Yes, here's a "juke box" that will play your favorite music for hours on end! Just "push the buttons" for the 11 albums you want and write in their numbers on the application. Then fill in the entire application and mail it, together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. And if you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So you risk absolutely nothing by acting now!

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 7 more selections (instead of 8) in the next three years. HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1 Neckline is different. 2 Duck's head is moved. 3 Towel bar is shorter. 4 Boat is different. 5 Horse's neck is shorter. 6 Ball is different.

- STRANGE WORD! There is an English word of more than two letters of which "Ia" is the middle, is the beginning, and is the end, although there is but one "a" and one "I" in its entirety. What is the word?

- ALL THUMBS! Using your thumbs and no other fingers, unbutton a button of your shirt. Then, if you succeed, try to rebutton it similarly.

- Sum Fun! There are five consecutive numbers that add up to exactly 50. What are they? Answer in one minute, without peeking below.

- Riddle Me This! What TV shows result from too many laugh tracks? Saturation comedies. What was Attila the Hun's favorite sweet? Horde candy. Why is it best not to scratch poison ivy? It's a rash action.

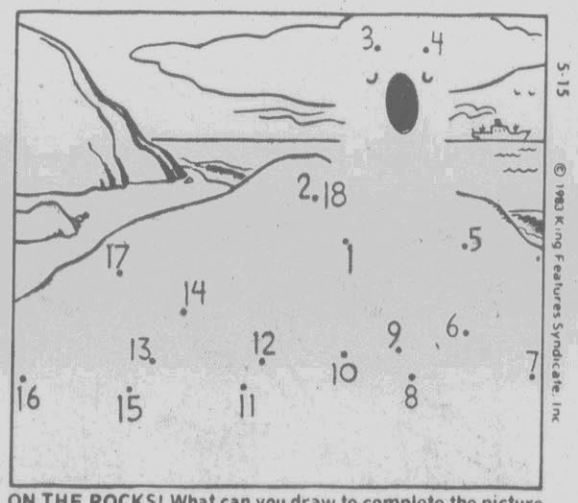

MYSTERY STORY

It all happened in a brightly lighted, elegantly appointed room. Dozens of eyes were on them as they flew together, kissed. But then, a man with the fire of victory in his eyes deliberately raised the stick he carried and sent the pale one spinning.

The other neither screamed nor fainted. There was no sign of heartbreak, resentment; not even a murmur was heard from the crowd, because ?

Can you "explain" this mystery?

It's just the story of two billiard balls.

ON THE ROCKS! What can you draw to complete the picture above? To find out, add lines from 1 to 2, 3, etc.

FLOWER SHOW! Apply the following colors neatly to the scene above: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh tones. 6—Lt. green. 7—Dk. brown 8—Dk. green 9—Pink.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

REMANDED

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagram: Dare, mend

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

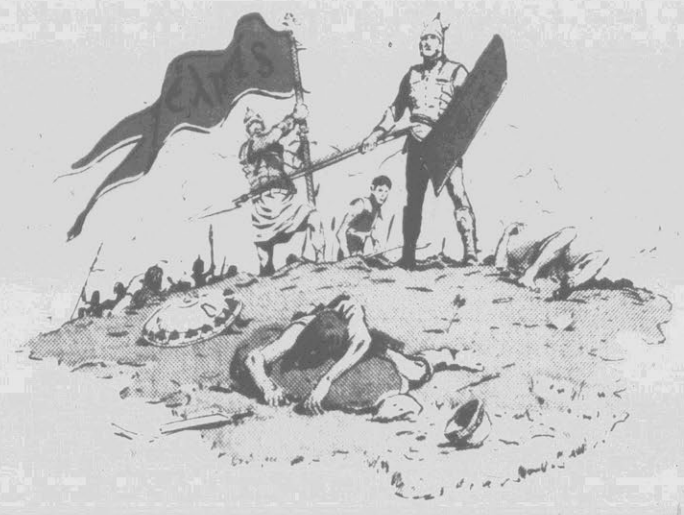

Our Story: VALETA IS GONE. SHE HAD SHAMELESSLY DOUBLE-CROSSED KAREN AND TOYED WITH ALP'S AFFECTIONS. SMITTEN WITH REMORSE, SHE SLIPS OUT OF SALONAE. HER ABSENCE IS NOTED AT DUSK. PRINCE VALIANT LEADS THE SEARCH AS VALETA, MILES AWAY, SLUMPS IN DESPAIR. "WHAT A WORM YOU HAVE BEEN!" SHE ACCUSES HERSELF.

LOST IN HER LOATHING, VALETA DOES NOT SEE THE SHADOW APPROACH. IT IS 'THE WANDERER.' "COME, COME," THE OLD WOMAN SAYS IMPATIENTLY.

SHE PULLS THE GIRL TO HER FEET. "MANY CENTURIES AGO," THE WANDERER RECALLS, "THERE WAS A WARRIOR NAMED SARGON. DAY AFTER DAY HIS LEGIONS HAD FOUGHT ONE ENEMY AND THEN THE NEXT UNTIL TIRED AND HUNGRY AND OUTNUMBERED THEY FACED THE FIERCEST FOE OF ALL.

"SARGON SPOKE TO HIS MEN. 'THE ENEMY'S BEST GENERAL IS CALLED DESPAIR. LET US SLAY HIM AND VICTORY IS OURS.' IN THEIR EAGERNESS TO FIND THE GREAT GENERAL, SARGON'S LEGIONS FELL UPON THE FOE. THEY WON MUCH GLORY THAT DAY, YET THE BODY OF GENERAL DESPAIR WAS NEVER FOUND.

"'YOU WILL NOT FIND HIM,' SARGON TOLD HIS TROOPS. 'I SAW HIM CHASED FROM THE BATTLEFIELD BY GENERAL HOPE.'" WITH THOSE WORDS THE WANDERER DEPARTS. AND FOR SOME REASON VALETA'S SPIRITS REVIVE. SHE PLODS HOMEWARD, AND AT CITY'S EDGE IS PLUCKED FROM THE ROAD BY AN ANXIOUS FATHER. THE HARDEST PART COMES LATER--WITH KAREN.
